'No Decisions' Reached In Brewer Controversy

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Chancellor Thomas Brewer's status with the East Carolina University trustees remained unsettled Saturday after a telephone conference between trustee chairman Ashley Futrell and William C. Friday, president of the state university system.

"We talked, and we are going to talk again next week. No decisions were made today," Futrell said.

Futrell, a Washington publisher, and some other ECU trustees have expressed strong concern over Brewer's conduct in submitting an application to West Virginia University, which is looking for a new president.

Brewer, who has said he is not actively seeking the WVU job, reportedly did not tell the ECU trustees about his correspondence with the West Virginia school until it was disclosed in state newspapers.

It was the second time in the last two years that Brewer's name has been mentioned for other posts. He withdrew his name from consideration last year for the top administrative job at the University of Louisville after reports were published that he was among a group of prospects.

Brewer has issued a statement saying he remained "dedicated" to East Carolina, which he has headed for three years.

The trustee concern over Brewer's action in returning an application to West Virginia is not unanimous.

Kinston attorney Harvey E. Beech, an ECU trustee since 1979, said he believed Brewer "has done a darned good job ... in trying to enhance, to embellish the university."

Beech compared Brewer's application to WVU with that of some seeking an appraisal of his performance.

"I think this is a good way to learn your own value," Beech said. "I'm positive Dr. Brewer would have told the board "my name is in the pot.'"

Futrell said no definite time was set for his next conference with Friday, who returned from a vacation Saturday.

Futrell said he spent most of Saturday's conference "filling in" Friday on what had occurred in the Brewer controversy during Friday's absence.

"Our most pressing concern is that we do nothing to hurt the university and, of course, we don't want to hurt Dr. Brewer," Futrell said.

Sadat Tightens Rules On Sectarian Strife

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat, taking stiff measures against sectarian strife, said Saturday he will withdraw state recognition of Egypt's top Christian leader and disband groups that threaten national unity.

In a three-hour speech to a joint legislative session, the 61-year-old president said his government had arrested 1,500 people in the past week on charges of contributing to the Christian-Moslem violence. He said most of those detained were "misguided youth" following a 25-year-old Moslem fundamentalist leader.

Sadat, who is a Moslem, said the measures he announced would be put before a referendum, which must be carried out within 60 days under the constitution.

To the applause of the 532 members of the People's Assembly and the Consultative Council, Sadat announced the cancellation of the 1971 presidential decree that recognized Pope Shenouda III as the 117th patriarch of the Coptic Church of Egypt in a line said to reach back to the church's founding in 42 A.D. by St. Mark.

The Coptic church is estimated to have 22 million followers around the world, including 30,000 in the United States and 6 million in Egypt. Egypt's population of 42 million is predominantly Moslem.

Sadat said he would name a five-man caretaker council to replace the 58-year-old Shenouda "to end the spirit of hatred, bitterness, and bring back to the church the spirit of tolerance, patience and love." By church codes, however, the pope is elected by his congregation. Shenouda was elected to his post in 1978.

There was no immediate reaction from the patriarch, who was said to be meditating at the St. Bishoy monastery 60 miles north of Cairo. Officials at the patriarchate in Cairo declined to comment.

The secretary general of Sadat's National Democratic Party, Fikri Makram Eibid, who is a Copt, predicted the president's actions would not bring an angry response.

"There will be no reaction," Eibid said. "We are all Egyptians, not Christians and Moslems."

The president vowed he would show "no mercy" to those he accused of whipping up religious strife that has taken some 70 lives in the past year.

He said among the people arrested were 200 common criminals, 30 members of opposition parties and 20 "agitators."

Sadat said most of the others were followers of a man who calls himself the "amir," or prince. He apparently referred to Hlemi el-Gazzar, the 25-year-old leader of Egypt's "Islamic Groupings," which have many adherents on university campuses. News reports have said el-Gazzar was among those arrested.

Sadat did not name the groups he said would be disbanded, but he accused the Islamic Groupings of seeking to take power by force.

White House Aides Hold Up Defense Report

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Pentagon report on possible cuts in defense spending intended for President Reagan was held up Saturday by White House aides who reportedly were displeased by military resistance to demands for a tighter budget.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan's top aides didn't forward the Defense Department's latest list of options to the president as scheduled because they wanted more details from the Pentagon on the impact of possible spending cuts.

But another aide said privately the White House had asked the Pentagon for recommendations of possible cuts and received instead "a damage assessment" designed to show that any serious spending limits would cripple the nation's ability to fight a war.

Speakes denied that Reagan himself was dissatisfied by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger's spirited public defense of his growing budget.

Asked if Reagan was upset by the obvious dispute going on between Weinberger and Budget Director David Stockman over the need to cut defense spending as well as other government programs, Speakes said: "This is the kind of discussion and debate the president wants within the Cabinet."

However, Speakes, who said on Friday that Reagan would study the proposed defense cuts over the weekend, told reporters Saturday the president would spend the weekend reading up on Middle Eastern affairs in preparation for his visit this week from Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel.

Speakes said the latest defense proposals were "still being ronsidered at the staff level" and won't go to the president before Monday. Reagan, who is seeking a $20 to $30 billion reduction in defense spending as part of his drive to balance the budget in 1984, plans to meet later in the week with Weinberger and budget director David Stockman.

Bahamas In Path Of Storm

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Floyd whipped itself up into the season's third hurricane Saturday and posed a potential threat to the Bahamas. Forecasters said Floyd's movement could be governed by Hurricane Emily, wallowing in the Atlantic 1,300 miles north.

At 6 p.m. EDT, Floyd was centered at latitude 22.2 north and longitude 67.6 west, about 220 miles northeast of Grand Turk Island and 260 miles north of Puerto Rico.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami said Floyd was packing 75 mph winds and moving toward the northwest at 10 mph. It was expected to continue along that course Saturday night.

The projected track takes the center of Floyd parallel to and well east of the Bahamas, an advisory said.

However, since the steering currents are weak, even a small turn toward the west could cause hurricane conditions over or near some of the islands Sunday afternoon.

The Bahamian government has issued hurricane warnings for the Turks and Caicos Islands chain and a hurricane watch for portions of the southeastern Bahamas. Small craft in the Bahamas were advised not to venture into the open waters east of the islands.

Greenville Sees 'New Day' On The Rails...As Some Say Goodbye

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Those twin ribbons of blackened steel honed to a lusty glow by the wheels of a mechanical dragon have long been a part of eastern North Carolina's life — a life that matured with the railroad in the 19th century.

The shimmering tracks are still with us ... but the picture is changing.

Greenville has seen a spurt in railroad activity in the last few years, an upward swing that followed a period in which passenger trains disappeared altogether and freights were for some a once-in-a-while occasion.

That's not the case for the communities just north, where towns such as Hobgood — a Halifax County village that grew up around the train tracks — are losing their final touch with railroading.

Seaboard Coast Line completed removal of 24 miles of track last month between Tarboro and Kelford, leaving a barren strip through the middle of Hobgood.

Another SCL track linking Hobgood with Parmele and Halifax may be in danger of abandonment, according to Hobgood Mayor R.G. Anthony. SCL also has under consideration abandonment of its line connecting Plymouth with Tarboro, and its link passing through Stokes, Pactolus and Whitchard — an act that would shut off service between Parmele and Washington.

But in Greenville, SCL agent Hudson Sumrell says life has never been better. Industrial expansion in Pitt County and agricultural shipments from the Aurora area have brought "a new day in Greenville," Sumrell said.

Southern Railway is enjoying the same perk for its business, spurred on by growing activity at the state ports.

For both railraods, trains in the Greenville area are growing longer.

SCL is "handling more tonnage than ever before" and the amount appears to be increasing steadily, Sumrell said.

August normally is a sluggish month, Sumrell said, but the Greenville station handled about 2,500 cars this year. That's more than 100 cars handled locally for each working day.

"This was just a one-man agency a few years ago, but now its a four- or five-man outfit," he said.

Sumrell said SCL added a 40-car siding two years ago, but more are needed. He said plans for two additional sidings are being considered to provide the trackage needed for local shipments.

Owen Pride, a spokesman for SCL in Jacksonville, Fla., said the line has more than 16,000 miles of track in 13 states.

Pride said the proposed abandonment of the Tarboro-Plymouth branch is only one of several that SCL has filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. He pointed out that such notices must be filed three years in advance, leaving time for reconsideration.

As for the removal of SCL tracks through Hobgood, Pride said it was a matter of economics. He said the last regular service was in 1977. Since then, he said, freight shipped on the branch consisted of four cars filled with grain.

Seaboard acquired the Tarboro-Kelford branch when it consolidated with the old Atlantic Coast Line. In its recent history, the branch was used by Southern, which rerouted its traffic to Washington and then north after acquiring Norfolk and Southern in the 1970s.

I.H. Hinton, director of transportation for the state Utilities Commission, said the Hobgood area "is the only place" in North Carolina losing its rail service at this point.

Elsewhere in eastern North Carolina, Hinton said, the roads "are upgrading their tracks and making money."

Mayor Anthony said he finds it ironic that Hobgood is among the communities losing train service.

"History buffs tell me they once were considering putting the railroad shops here although, of course, they later put them in Rocky Mount," Anthony said.

Anthony, who served as an SCL conductor for 10 years, said he and other community representatives opposed the abandonment of the branch in Hobgood. "But you can't fight the big boys forever," he said.

"It's a little bit sad. We used to run eight passenger trains a day through here (Hobgood)," Anthony said, plus several freight trains.

"But we'll still be here. We've had worst things happen."

Tennessee Guards End Prison Work Stoppage

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Guards walked off their jobs Saturday at the Tennessee State Prison in protest of working conditions, but an agreement with state officials was reached by the end of the day.

Correction Commissioner Harold Bradley told guards outside the main state prison that they could subtract work hours missed from annual leave time if they returned on their next regularly scheduled shifts, beginning Saturday night.

Some guards also remained off the job at the medium-security Turney Center in Only, 60 miles southwest of Nashville, but Warden Seth Garrington was optimistic they would return by Sunday. The Turney walkout Friday was prompted by the stabbing death of a guard a week ago.

The commissioner told Turney guards earlier they faced dismissal if they remained off the job three days.

John Parish, spokesman for Gov. Lamar Alexander, said Alexander met with Bradley and wanted to ensure that guards knew that "any employee who continues to strike can't continue to work for the state."

At the Nashville facility, approximately 35 of the 70 guards stayed off the afternoon shift to protest what they called unsafe conditions, officials said. They asked for authority to carry blackjacks and requested improved security procedures and hazardous duty pay.

At the Only facility, about a dozen guards abandoned their walkout Saturday after being told their "absent without leave" days would be counted as vacation time or annual leave if they reported at the scheduled time. About 20 guards remained off the job.

In Nashville, James Vandever, associate warden for security, said the atmosphere was quiet inside the walls, where the most famous prisoner among the approximately 2,600 inmates is James Earl Ray, the assassin of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Last Saturday, guard Ronald W. Moore, 21, of Linden was stabbed to death at the 650-inmate Only facility.

Prison officials said Moore died of stab wounds inflicted by an imnate wielding a homemade knife. Like all guards, Moore was armed only with a can of Mace, a paralyzing chemical.

Garrington said late Saturday that officials promised to look at realigning staff, providing better security, filling guard vacancies and allowing guards to work overtime to provide additional protection until vacancies were filled.

State troopers and Corrections personnel supplemented the guard detail at both prisons, officials said.

Justice Opposes Busing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department plans to switch its position and oppose busing to desegregate schools in three cities in the state of Washington, the Washington Post reports.

It would be the latest in a series of retreats under the Reagan administration from federal support for busing. In Houston, the department decided not to argue in court for a busing between city and suburban schools. In Chicago, the department gave an interim endorsement to a desegregation plan it had called "incomplete" only two weeks earlier.

School boards in Seattle, Tacoma and Pasco adopted busing plans on their own. Parental opposition led to a state law, passed by ballot initiative in 1978, banning busing for desegregation, and the school boards challeneged it in court. The Justice Department entered the case on the side of the boards the following year and argued that the state law was unconstitutional.

The 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the boards.

The Post said the department now plans to support the state position before the U.S. Supreme Court.

An unidentified department official was quoted as saying the department had decided the state should be upheld since there had been no finding of a violation of constitutional rights in any of the three districts and no evidence that busing was required to ensure equal opportunity.

Robert Reinstein, an attorney for the school boards, said he found the administration switch "incredible" because, "I always thought it was like motherhood and apple pie to support a school district which voluntarily wants to desegregate its schools."

Camden M. Hall, attorney for the Seattle board, was quoted as saying he was "disappointed but not surprised." Though he said he still considered the state law unconstitutional, "I think busing is an issue whose time has gone."

The Four Corners Country is so named because one point of it is common to four states — Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah. The region is home to the Hopi, Ute and Navajo Indians.

Five People Killed In Wreck

STURGEON BAY, Wis. (AP) — Five people died Saturday in a two-car crash on Wisconsin's rural Door County peninsula, authorities said.

In addition to Ms. Severin, authorities identified the victims as Joseph Wierer, 23, Gerald Tidler, 28, Patrick Kuehl, 25, and Dale Schlies, 30, all of Kewaunee.

New Electric Schedules Now In Effect

Greenville Utilities Commission moved in a new direction Tuesday in approving a cost of services schedule for passing along a 21.7 percent wholesale power increase from Virginia Electric and Power Co.

Under the new schedule residential customers will see their bills increased by only 2.3 percent. Small general services customers rates will increase 15.8 percent, large general services by 13.4 percent and rates for county, municipal and Housing Authority all-electric buildings will go up by 35.26 percent. The last category will see a large increase, but it reflects the fact that the cost of service has not been fully taken into account in the past.

If the wholesale rate had been "tracked" as in the past, the increase for residential customers would have been 7 percent.

The new rates are based on a study done by consulting engineers R. W. Beck and Associates. The study is new and a public hearing is to be held on it Sept. 15.

The commission moved more rapidly than we anticipated in implementing the study. However the cost-of-services basis is sound and the new schedules might as well be put to use now as later.

Reagan Support Will Be Needed In Tobacco Fight

Both Sen Jesse A. Helms and Sen. John East are saying the tobacco program is "safe," at least for now.

"I did not go to Washington to preside over the demise of the tobacco program," Sen. Helms said in a tobacco market appearance here.

The tobacco program is going to be preserved as it is, the senator said.

We hope that is correct. It can never be forgotten that the tobacco program always has its enemies and in Congress there are both liberals and conservatives willing to join forces to end the program. Thus saving it will take everything that both Republicans and Democrats can do to stave off efforts to end or drastically change the program.

We suspect, also, that White House support will be needed if we are to avoid Congressional action that might adversely affect the program. Through party affiliation, both Sen. Helms and Sen. East have influence with the administration, and we hope they are telling us the Reagan administration will be with the tobacco farmer in any fight over the program.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

An old friend came by the other day to say that he was getting married.

It was to be a very small ceremony, only him and his bride, the preacher and two witnesses.

In fact, that very day he had been by to pick up the marriage license.

The thought of paying for it struck him as humorous.

"Isn't that something?" he commented. "It's sort of like picking your own switch for a whipping."

Charles S. Edwards, a former mayor of Farmville, tobacco market supervisor and Chamber manager, wrote to say he is putting together "sort of a fun manuscript."

A thousand numbered copies of the book will be printed.

"The workmanship and material will be first quality and hoefully the content will relax and generate fun for those to whom they go."

The book will be published by Edwards under the name of Old Sparta Press, Box 6363, Raleigh, N. C. 27628.

The book entitled "The Hell You Say" carries an introduction by Attorney General Rufus Edmisten who said, "In reading 'The Hell You Say' ... you will reaffirm, as I did, that we in North Carolina have many lasting bonds connecting East, West and Piedmont. We share the same sorrows and joys; we work hard and play hard; we take our aims in life seriously, but not ourselves; and most of all, we love our State."

The book ought to be interesting. It is about Miss Ellen, who lived in the Governor's Mansion, the third party on the honeymoon and the cake that Charlie made for the Daughters of the American Revolution.

It's about Charlie's father, a racing motorist in a Model T, and Robert Lee Humber, Leon Meadows, Charlie Justice, Edmund Harding, Gene Penland and more.

It sounds like a book that anyone in these parts can enjoy.

Edwards has been working with state and federal agencies since leaving Farmville, including the Economic Development Administration and the Departments of Labor, Justice and Natural and Economic Resources. He is also a card-carrying undertaker, has been a judge of Recorder's Court, attended what is now East Carolina University, was a master sergeant in the Army and a first sargeant in the Air Force.

Helen Thomas Talk

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan is standing firm on his decision to fire 11,400 air traffic controllers for going on strike in defiance of federal law. He refuses to have any further dealings with them or their union.

"As far as President Reagan is concerned, the strike is over and we're rebuilding the (air traffic control) system," said James Baker, the White House's chief of staff.

Baker said Reagan is satisfied he made the right decision in discharging the controllers and rejects complaints that he was out to bust their union, the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization.

At a recent fund-raising reception in Orange County, Calif., Reagan — responding to the union-busting charge — noted that he had been a six-term president of the Screen Actor Guild.

Simultaneously in Washington, the federal government was proceeding with efforts to decertify PATCO on the grounds that it ordered the unlawful strike, on Aug. 3 after contract talks broke down.

From time to time, there has been speculation negotiations between PATCO and the government might be reopened. But each time the White House has been quick to deflate such talk, saying there is no way it would resume negotiations.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes has been questioned by reporters about the controllers situation in comparison with other recent events.

One reporter asked Speakes how Reagan could hail the Polish workers solidarity movement, which has included strikes, and at the same time fire the American traffic controllers.

He was also asked how Reagan could pardon two FBI officials convicted of felonies and yet offer no breaks for fired controllers.

Speakes declined comment on both counts.

But Baker explained Reagan is "concerned that the message might be lost on other unions" if he permitted the strikers to return to their jobs.

He also said that if it had not been for the strike, the government would not have learned it had 6,000 more controllers than it needed. When the walkout began, there were 17,400 controllers.

As a result of the strike, commercial domestic air travel has been reduced by about 25 percent. Control towers are manned by about 10,000 persons — including non-strikers, supervisory personnel and military controllers.

Baker said his own first-hand study — cockpit interviews with pilots when he flies — has found agreement among those at the controls that the "skies are safe."

He also said pilots have shown no sympathy for the controllers.

As to whether Reagan will eventually, somewhere down the road, change his mind, Baker said before that happens, "a lot more time would have to go by."

"He is extremely firm on this and frankly he feels he has done the right thing."

He said that White House polls indicate the sentiment of the American People is some 75 percent in favor of Reagan's stand.

Other public polls show support for reagan, but not to that extent and they also indicate that the public would like Reagan to start to talking to the controllers again.

Tar Heels Might Take Closer Look At Home

Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Out-of-staters probably know more about the special attractions which North Carolina has to offer, and how to go about finding them, than do native Tar Heels.

The advertisements put out by the travel and tourism people at the state Department of Commerce naturally are pitched to people elsewhere who might be influenced to visit this state.

But with travel restricted by gasoline prices and other rising costs, North Carolinians might want to take a closer look at the things to do and see closer to home.

There are two sources of this information — by mail from the Travel and Tourism Division in Raleigh, and from the welcome centers.

Those welcome centers are not just for "foreigners." Anybody can drop by and browse among the racks of brochures and maps. The centers are located at five Interstate highway entrances to North Carolina — I-95 north and south; I-85 north and south, and I-40 west.

Starting with a state map, a variety of points of interest for sightseeing, recreation and historic exploration is identified.

There is a state accommodations directory which lists hotels and motels, alphabetically, by location. A separate listing of country inns is provided. The address, telephone number, reservation information, rates and size of facility are listed.

There is a camping and outdoor directory describing state and national parks, forests, camping, boating, hiking, climbing, swimming, picknicking, nature study, canoeing and other activities including over 300 private campgrounds with more than 15,000 campsites.

A statewide review of "Variety Vacationland" highlights is presented in a colorful booklet called "Down Home in High Style."

Fishermen, whether seeking offshore excitement, surf or pier fishing, good eating from the sounds or lake and river game will find a wealth of information in a booklet on that subject.

Also there is a regular claendar of events listing festivals, fairs, celebrations, art and cultural events and some sports activities. Even if it's hollerin' or eating ramps you crave, this booklet gives the inside information.

For the true "Carolinaphile," there are big, full-color posters suitable for framing and displaying on home or office walls. Those aren't free, however. But for 50 cents each (10 or more views are available) you can do a lot of decorating.

Reagan's Economy Draws Skepticism

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

CINNAMINSON, N.J. — Despite the extraordingary approval rate of just under 80 percent given Ronald Reagan by 66 registered voters in this blue-collar Democratic suburb of Philadelphia, the president's economic policies are getting skeptical reactions that could spell trouble ahead,

"I'll give him six more months," a 51-year-old registered Democrat and small-business man said when asked if he approved of the way Reagan was handling the presidency. He "approved" as of today, he said, but inflation and high interest rates were wearing that approval thin.

A 52-year-old nurse, also a 1980 Reagan voter and a registered Democrat, expressed similar skepticism. "I'm for him, but if his programs don't work I'm going to ask muyself why I wasn't smarter. But something had to be done."

Therein lies the Reagan political dilemma: to convert to reality the aspirations of voters who turned to him in desperation after four years of inflation and burgeoning big government under Jimmy Carter. The grace period for Reagan to feed off the rancid memories of Carter is running out.

The two precincts in Cinnamminson township where we interviewed with Patrick Caddell of Cambridge Survey Research and three of his interviewers have a 2-to-1 Democratic registration. Yet, in the 1980 election they voted decisively for reagan over Carter. Here are typical lower-middle-income precincts, sprinkled with blue-collar union members small-business men and professionals whose swing to the Republican ticket last year gave Reagan his electoral landslide.

Of our voters, 35 were registered Democratic, 15 Republicans and 16 independent. Reagan won a total of 28 votes, Carter only 25 (with the balance voting for Rep. John Anderson or not voting).

On the face, the president's economic program of radical tax cuts and a massive reduction in government spending won heavy backing; 43 approved, 15 disapproved and eight were uncertain. But behind that solid support we found disquieting symptoms indicating that many of those who approve the president's effort to turn the economy around are preparing fallback political positions that could boomerang on Reagan.

Evidence of this is the fact that only half the voters we interviewed believe that they personally will benefit from Reagan's programs, even if they work as planned. More foreboding, 45 voters — many of them Democrats who backed Reagan in 1980 — said the rich would benefit at the expense of the middle class and poor.

The contradiction between Reagan's high approval rating and voter skepticism as to whether his radical economic cureswill help them personally lies in the positive attributes of Reagan's character and personality as president. "I like his firm stand on everything," said a Democrat who works in a spare-parts plant voted for Carter. The words "steadfast," "courageous," "straightforward," "tenacious," "tough" and "forceful" were repeatedly used in one way or another by 36 different voters, unusually strong evidence of positive personal attributes. The Libyan shoot-out was praised by 50 voters for "restoring respect for America."

The other side of that coin was specific linkage of negative attributes to economic issues. Even his strongest supporters raised negative questions about Social Security revision, the impact of budget cuts or the high cost of defense spending. A 31-year-old Democrat, a plant manager who voted for Reagan and approves of his presidency, was asked what if anything he disliked about Reagan. "He's pulling the rug out from under the old people," he shot back.

This suggests the force of future anti-Reaganism among traditional blue-collar Democrats who switched to Reagan last year, who extol his virtues as a forceful leader but who are now expressing doubts about where his economic revolution may leave them personally.

The Social Security dilemma inherited by the president is a key part of this. Pledged to cut runaway costs of government, Reagan faces 2-to-1 disapproval of Social Security changes among the voters we interviewed. On reducing benefits to retired workers, 54opposed and only nine favored any cuts in basic benefits. Opposition to higher Social Security taxes ran better than 2-to-1. The bright spot for the president was in cutting benefits for early retirement, favored by slightly more than half.

Reagan's political problem is to convince his 1980 blue-collar Democratic supporters that his economic program is going to help them in time to prevent defections.

A retired engineer who is a registered Democrat and voted for Reagan told us he was no longer sure he approves of Reagan's job performance. "He's trying and he's a fighter but there's too much favoritism for the rich."

Bell Could Be Reagan's Toughest Cookie

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — He looks like Father Mulcahy in M*A*S*H and he sits at a luncheon table as mildly as the doormouse at the tea party, but I have a hunch about Dr. Terrel Bell. My hunch is that he will yet prove to be the toughest cookie in the Reagan administration — tougher than Watt in Interior, tougher than Haig at State.

Dr. Bell is secretary of education. It takes a tough man to make sense of the mess he is managing down on Maryland Avenue.

The soft-spoken gentleman from Utah is the least militant of men, but he seems to be fighting on half a dozen fronts at once. His assignment from the president is to preside over the dissolution of a small empire — or if not the dissolution, at least the deliberate downgrading of his department. In that struggle he is warring with the teachers' unions, the women's libbers, the blacks, the Hispanics and super-liberals of high and low degree. In common with other Cabinet members he is combating Mr. Reagan's own department of Justice. The gentleman has his hands full.

During the course of his campaign, Mr. Reagan made no secret of his hostility toward the born-again Department of Education. The president's view is that public education is primarily a responsibility of the states and localities, as the act creating the department makes clear, and the president intends to exercise all his powers toward restoring that responsibility. Thus the Reagan budget has slashed federal aid to local school systems everywhere. The resultant howls of pain are crashing upon the ears of Dr. Bell.

The president campaigned against another perceived evil: too many damfool federal regulations. Such regulations have flourished within the Department of Education like weeds in an August garden. Ted Bell's assignment is to pluck them out.

Toward these ends, Dr. Bell has set out as purposefully as Christian on his path to the Celestial City, and he is encountering as many perils as that Pilgrim in his Progress. he first undertook to suspend the proposed regulations on bilingual instruction that had been propounded by his predecessor, Shirley Hufstedler. On sound grounds of federalism, the administration wants to see not one approach, but many approaches to this vexatious problem. The regulations are now on hold.

In the same fashion, Dr. Bell proposed local schools, on pain of losing federal aid, from discriminating "against any person in the application of any rules of appearance." This is the dress-code rule, and in its application and enforcement it has proved to be a remarkable silly rule. In one memorable instance, a full-blown due process hearing developed over a high school principal's decree that girls, but not boys, must under certain circumstances wear brassieres. Federal regulations in this area, says Dr. Bell, "are likely to be overly intrusive."

On a third matter, the secretary is battling the Department of Justice to get its help in revoking a rule that affects such small and independent institutions as Hillsdale College in Hillsdale, Mich. As a matter of principle, Hillsdale accepts not one penny in direct federal aid. But the rule provides that if even one Hillsdale student gets GI benefits, or obtains a federally guaranteed loan, the entire institution is fatally tainted. It must thereafter comply with all the monstrous burdens of federal control over the hiring and promotion of teachers, the admission of students and the reporting of the most minute details of college administration.

In a less combative venture, Dr. Bell recently named a blue-ribbon commission to recommend ways for enhancing opportunities for truly talented children. His conviction is that in our obsession with the slow learners we have neglected the bright pupils. It is all too true. But 18 months hence, to whom will the commission report? By that time the secretary and the president hope to have the Department of Education more a matter of form than of substance.

We live in a city of bureaucratic empire-builders, not empire-dissolvers. Ted Bell is thus a kind of lonesome George in a field full of dragons. On the record of the past eight months, he wields a skillful sword.

During 10 Weeks of Major Developments
Reagan's Popularity Rating
Remains Remarkable Stable
By George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Ronald Reagan's popularity trend line has remained remarkably stable over the last 10 weeks, a period marked by major developments on the world and national scenes. In the latest survey, six in 10 Americans continue to express approval of his performance in office.

Little change is noted not only in the president's overall performance rating, but also in the percentage of Americans who approve of his handling of specific problems.

In the latest survey, 53 percent approve of his handling of economic conditions, while 35 percent disapprove and 12 percent are undecided. These are the same percentages accorded the president for his dealing with inflation. These figures parallel those recorded in a late-June survey.

President Reagan scores less well on his dealing with the problem of unemployment, with 39 percent approving and 38 percent disapproving. These are again a virtual carbon copy of the previous survey results.

Here is the question asked to determine approval or disapproval of the way Reagan is handing his job:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Reagan is handling his job as president?"

Here is the trend:

In the lastest survey, respondents were also asked about the president's handling of domestic versus foreign affairs. This question was asked first:

"President Reagan has two main jobs. One concersn problems outside this country, the other concerns problems here in the United States. Do you approve or disapprove of the way Reagan is handling our domestic problems — that is, our problems here at home?"

The results are based on in-person interviews with 1,534 adults, 18 and older, conducted in scientificallyselected localities across the nation during the period Aug. 14-17.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Day Of The Professional 'Pol' Is Returning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "pol" is making a comeback.

After Watergate and Abscam and two decades of power-to-the-people party reforms, the professional politician is back in vogue.

North Carolina Gov. James Hunt, chairman of the Democrats' latest rule-changing commission, says he has a dream of every Democratic member of Congress sitting at the party's next presidential convention.

Hunt says the party is not turning its back on years of reform, but his dream would reverse one major trend of that era — the widening rift between the national party organization and the politiciaho hold office in its name.

In 1956, 90 percent of the Democrats in the U.S. Senate attended the party's national convention. A third of the more numerous House Democrats were delegates. In 1976, whenJimmy Carter was nominated, only 18 percent of the party's senators and 15 percent of its representatives were present.

This reflected a determined effort by some elements of the part, with the acquiescence of others, to take party business out of the smoke-filled rooms.

Under rules adopted for the 1972 convention, if a congressman, governor or party official wanted to be a delegate, he had to get out and run for it like anybody else.

That sounded so fair that the Republicans adopted the same rule. No more free rides for politicians was supposed to mean more democracy and that was supposed to make a happier party and better nominees.

The rule never bothered the Republicans much because of less restrictive delegate selection procedures and their tradition of reverence for establishment.

But Democratic officials began staying away roves. In 1972 many who tried to win election as delegates defeated. And after that raucus convention, many said it was just as well to be somewhere else at convention time.

As a result, the party has continued to splinter. Platforms are totally irrelevant to the people who run on them. Presidential Democrats don't speak to congressional Democrats. Individual members of Congress defy their own party leadership on Capitol Hill.

Former Democratic National Chairman Robert Strauss first began to worry about this trend and labored to bring elected Democrats back into the fold, but the rules remained a problem.

Before the last convention, the rules were changed to require each state to expand its delegation by 10 percent and award the extra seats to ranking party or public officials.

However, officials gaining seats this way were still bound by primary or caucus results when it came to voting forpresidential candidate. If the official preferred some other candidate, he probably would opt to pass up the offer of a free ride to the convention.

The move obviously didn't work. Senate participation dropped fro 18 percent to 14 percent while House members hung at a low 15 percent.

There apears to b3determination this time to get the Democratic lawmakers in on terms they will accept. Both Hunt and Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt have hinted strongly that they want all congressmen and maybe governors admitted free. But this time they would not be bound in advance to a presidential canidate unless they chose to be.

The reasoning is that the addition of a large block of uncommitted delegates of national stature — there currently are 291 Democrats in the House and Senate — would go far toward making conventions deliberative bodies instead of the rubber stamps they now are for primary winners.

A contender for the presidency would have to earn approval of his peers, winning over established politicians who have been around long enough to judge presidential qualities knowledgeably. Publicity-oriented campaigns would lose some of their importance.

Facing South: Education

MOBILE, Ala. — "I'm nobody in particular," says Cheryl McCombs, 28, the mother of three public school children, "but I think our schools need more money to educate our children, and all I can do as a conscientious citizen and taxpayer is to let my legislators know about it."

Late last spring, Ms. McCombs began a letter-writing campaign to "make sure the legislators know I'm asking."

As a result, she and other Mobilians who joined her delivered more than 1,000 letters to the Mobile legislative delegation. In August, they organized a group of 50 men and women to attend a special session of the Alabama Legislature to decide the state's education budget.

Ms. McCombs wants the Mobile County school system and other elementary and secondary schools in Alabama to receive a larger piece of the education budget pie. Although Alabama ranks 14th in the nation for the amount of money appropriated for each college and unviersity student, the state ranks 47th in the amount appropriated for children in elementary and secondary schools. A high student-teacher ratio, rundown school buildings and a shortage of basic classroom supplies are chronic problems that students, teachers and parents face each school year.

"I'm not an organization. I don't represent anybody. I'm just a concerned parent as I think everybody should be," Ms. McCombs says. She began last spring by contacting the principals and/or PTA presidents of all 81 schools in the Mobile County school system, urging them to organize letter-writing campaigns to the Mobile legislative delegation.

McCombs conducted her campaign at Mertz School, where her children are enrolled. Of the more than 1,000 letters to Mobile legislators, 303 were from Mertz parents.

The reaction of two legislators to the campaign underlined Ms. McCombs' feelings on the importance of speaking out.

"When I spoke to Representatives Mary Zoghby and Ann Bedsole, they told me that they seldom heard from people, they seldom got letters and that if they didn't hear from anybody on a particular bill, they figured citizenss didn't care," she said.

The Legislature met in Aujgust and acted quickly on basic appropriations in the education budget, appropriating less for elementary and secondary schools than she had hoped. The quick action caused Ms. McCombs' group to cancel their planned trip to Montgomery, but they had anticipated this by sending another batch of letters.

"A lobbyist there told me that legislatures sure knew about the people in Mobile," Ms. McCombs said. She plans to continue her efforts during the general session which starts in February.

In her campaign last spring, Ms. McCombs urged not only parents but "anybody" to let their legislators know their opinion.

"A lot of people in my neighborhood don't have children in public schools and they don't consider this their concern. Well, I'd tell those people to keep in mind that Mobile's public school children of today will be reading gas meters, working in banks and in hospital emergency rooms in the future. The quality of education in this state affects everyone's life," she said.

Ms. McCombs emphasized that she is not trying to cut off the funding of Alabama's post-secondary institutions. But she does feel that the state-supported colleges and universities aren't doing enough belt-tightening.

"Some Alabama colleges don't charge out-of-state fees. I think they should," she said. "It doesn't seem fair to me that a student can get a good elementary and secondary education in another state and then come to a state-supported college in Alabama without paying an extra fee, while school children in this state don't have what they need for the basics."

She continued, "I want my kids to go to college, too. But what good will it do if they don't get the basics? Give my daughter nine more years and she'll be eligible to vote. She'll have my fate in her hands, and I want her educated."

John Cunniff

Untaxed

NEW YORK (AP) — Challenge produces change, often for the better, or so it is claimed by those who write history books. Are Americans as innovative as they used to be? They seem to be, in small ways at least.

Millions of Americans have met the challenge of high income taxes by earning income off the books — that is, untaxed — according to Prof. Peter Gutmann, who makes frequent studies of the subterranean economy.

Some people who have lost their jobs are working again, but off the books, says Gutmanome, also collect unemployment insurance. "Put bluntly," he says, "plenty of respondents (to job surveys) lie; they lie consistently, and they lie with good reason."

Savings institutions have devised at least a dozen creative ways in which to present the interest they offer, some of which have gotten them into a hassle with the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasury.

"Nineteen percent simple interest, payable after four years," the bank ads declare. Sure looks better than a 15.18 percent annual rate for four years. It isn't. It's adds up to the very same thing.

Carmakers and their dealers have been innovative. With sales down to an annual rate of 8 million or so, compared with expectations of double digit numbers, they have offered sizeable rebates to buyers.

There's a good chance those rebates will continue, because they're a good marketing tool, especially after you've pushed up prices another few hundred dollars, as most carmakers have for the 1982 models.

Does a sharp price increase followed by a rebate amount to any great benefit for the buyer? Psychologically, perhaps, but maybe not in a financial sense. It depends upon the size of both increase and rebate.

Crushed by high interest rates, housing people have been especially innovative. Owners seeking to convert apartment houses to cooperatives or condominiums are frequently "buying down" the purchaser's mortgage rate by three percentage points for the first three years. After that, the buyer must be prepared for a sharp rise in monthly payment.

An amazing number of mortgage variations are available, a direct consequence of high interest rates and the inability of lenders and borrowers to predict with any confidence where rates are headed.

Such mortgages — the variables, graduated, rollovers and the like — have been well publicized. But ingenious variations of them are also developing. And, in view of market conditions, they'll probably spread.

Advance Mortgage Corp., which regularly surveys this country's many housing markets, find "silent seconds" active in the California coop and condo conversion market.

Silent seconds are second mortgages, silent because nothing is due until the unit is sold. One assumption made by borrower and lender is that the unit's value will appreciate, enabling the occupant to repay.

There's Always Punishment For The Wicked

I recently received a phone call at 8 a.m. and the caller said, "I'm sorry I called so early, but I had to catch you at home. I hope I didn't wake you."

I had to laugh. There is no such thing as waking the mother of two any later than 7 a.m. And that's under favorable conditions.

Unforunately, our household seems to pass from one unfavorable condition to another. Just a sample from recent months include:

A teething baby.

A baby who is not teething but who wants company and knows that a surefire way to get it is to put his finger down his throat in order to upset the contents of his stomach.

A young lady who on Christmas, Easter, brithdays and beach weekends bounds onto the middle of her parent's stomach every half hour on the half hour from 3 a.m. on with the inquiry, "Is it time yet?"

A husband who from sheer force of habit cannot remember to leave the alarm clock well enough alone on Friday night.

A daughter who, upon an expected visit by a minute house spider, shrieks with such abandon that the shock waves continue to pulse through her mother's medulla oblongata long after the little one has drifted back to dreamland.

These predawn interruptions don't appear to phase Phillip, and it's no wonder. He can sleep through the squealing of tires on "The Dukes of Hazzard," his own snoring, the police sirens in Durham on a typical Saturday night and the penetrating stare of a 5 year old perched over him like a bird of prey ready at the slightest flicker of an eyelash to relate the awful details of her latest nightmare.

I, driven by guilt at the mere hint of child neglect, am condemned to wake at the plop of a teddy bear falling from a crib, the click of a digital clock, the flushing of a toilet, a cough, the sudden recall of a poorly played hand of bridge (my guilt is not restricted to my children), and the flick of a page in a Dr. Seuss book.

I did manage to sleep late one morning not too long ago.

I had been up until 2 a.m. steaming down wallpaper, then had responded twice to Zachary's summons. When I crawled back into bed at 5 a.m., I resolved with full awareness of the sinfulness of my decision to forget that I had little ones and to give myself over completely to exhaustion, and for the next four hours I did.

As 9 the muted conversation of Phillip and the children drifted into my consciousness, and I realized that for the first time in months I was luxuriating in the comfort of a soft bed with nothing pressing to pull me out of it. This was pure sloth; yet, lightning had not struck, and I doubted that St. Peter had permanently crossed my name off his guest list.

Of course, this reverie did not last long. Meg, sensing with her unfailing radar that one of my eyes had opened momentarily, came running into the bedroom squealing that "Daddy made pancades!"

I found Phillip, beaming like an angel, in the midst of a kitchen obviously struck by divine wrath. I should have anticipated it. Ultimately, there is always punishment for the wicked.

Legislator Turned Into Champion Of Forgotten

Back in 1945, John W. Umstead served as chairman of a legislative subcommittee charged with investigating conditions at Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh.

He and his group went on from there to investigate all of the state's mental institutions, and the Chapel Hill legislator became a lifelong battler for the forgotten people in the neglected wards of those asylums. He led the fight in the Legislature that found money to transform those institutions from human warehouses into genuine hospitals that strive to treat the ailments of patients and to return them to society.

Among the recommendations made by Umstead's subcommittee was a complete overhaul of the State Hospital Board of Control, which runs the hospitals.

A few months after the subcommittee had made its report. Gov. R. Gregg Cherry called Umstead into his office and informed him that he was appointing Umstead to the revamped board.

"I don't want it," Umstead told the governor. He said he preferred to serve on the Medical Care Commission because of his interest in getting a four-year medical school and teaching hospital at the University of North Carolina.

"Naw, I'm going to put you on this one," Cherry told him, handing Umstead a list of his other choices as board members. After looking over the list, Umstead turned to the governor, "This is nothing in the world but politics. You're just paying political debts, and I'm not going to serve on it."

Cherry sighed and handed Umstead a blank sheet of paper. "See what you can do," the governor said. Umstead did, and Cherry accepted 10 of the 11 persons he recommended.

From then until ill health forced him to step down from the Legislature, in 1963, Umstead battled in the General Assembly to improve the lot of the state's mentally ill. During that time, $64.5 million was spent on new, modern mental facilities, and the operating budgets of the state's mental hospitals increased from $3 million to $17 million.

"I saw things in 1945 that I wouldn't tell you because you wouldn't believe them," he told a reporter.

But getting the advances he advocated through the Legislature was not easy. One of those Umstead had to convince was his own brother, William B. Umstead. But after two Sunday afternoon sessions on the Umstead front porch at Chapel Hill, the legislator persuaded the brother — then the Democratic nominee for governor — to — handed the legislator a blank piece of paper.

"All right, John," he said, "write down everything you want. We know you've got the votes."

When Umstead moved over to the House after serving two terms in the Senate, he chose seat 97, a backrow station that did not seem to jibe with his status as a legislative leader. But Umstead would have no other. From his backrow vantage point, he could see what was going on better than anyone else, including the speaker. And from there he carried on his battles for better schools, better mental hospitals and for a host of other causes.

Although he always had a warm heart and ready smile when not in the heat of battle, Umstead was excitable — completely different from his younger brother, William, and had been known to lose his temper. This prompted some of his legislative colleagues to engage at times in a pastime known as "Umstead baiting." When Umstead was speaking to the House, another lawmaker would rise to ask a loaded question or to make an acid comment. He and the other members would ten sit back and watch Umstead explode.

When Umstead's old friend and college roommate, Frank P. Graham, was running for the U.S. Senate, Umstead declared enthusiastically that nobody could beat Graham in a "decent" race. Umstead stuck to his statement even when his brother, William, was mentioned as a possible candidate. Some admirers interpreted this as an example of John Umstead's objectivity. Others saw it as a device to keep his brother from running.

When Umstead announced in 1963 that the inroads of Parkins Disease would force him to step down from the House, those paying tribute included Gov. Terry Sanford who said, "I know of no one who has served the people of North Carolina longer or better."

Court Considers Visits To Prison

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Supreme Court is considering a convict's plea that he be allowed overnight sexual visits from his girlfriend.

Convict Ray Cummings, 46, who is serving a life term for murder, asked the state, which allows visits by prisoners' wives and children, to extend the privilege.

The issue is confused because Cummings, who is married, wants a visit from his girlfriend — not his wife — and his girl friend is married to another man.

But, said Cummings, he lived with his girlfriend, now 28, for seven years before he was sent to San Quentin.

"The state is imposing its own morality on prisoners when it restricts such visits only to married couples," Cummings attorney, Donald Spector, said Friday during arguments.

The issue brought a flurry of questions from the bench. Chief Justice Rose Bird asked whether the court should sanction "adultery" in prison. Justice Stanley Mosk inquired "how about visits for hire" and Justice Frank Richardson wondered "how about multiple partners?"

Spector said the only real issue was prison security. Problems of adultery and prostitution are already covered by state law, he said.

Justice Mathew Tobriner speculated that overnight visits might promote a calmer atmosphere because inmates are "mostly young men who are at the height of their sexual needs."

But Deputy Attorney General Karl Mayer said the state law is clear. It specifically makes wives, blood relatives and adopted children eligible for 42-hour visits in private apartments and trailers inside the prison.

Last year 12,000 such visits occurred. Mayer said extension of the privilege would jeopardize the whole program, intended to strengthen family ties, because appropriate housing is limited.

But Spector said the case involves common-law relationships in which two people live together and "hold themselves out as a couple."

Mayer said the state should not be forced pick and choose in deciding which relationships meet that standard. California law does not recognize common-law marriage.

The court will rule on the case at a later date.

Mercury Poisoning Claims Are Filed

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Former employees of Battery Technology Company have filed two more claims of mercury poisoning against the company.

Retha Hill, 35, of Welcome, and Judy Kern, 38, of Linwood, filed the claims for worker's compensation, said W.A. Stephenson, chairman of the state Industrial Commission in Raleigh.

The women say they have been poisoned as a result of exposure to high mercury levels at the battery plant, formerly the Mallory Battery Company facility. Battery Technology Company is a subsidiary of Duracell International Incorporated.

Ruth Hale, 51, of Lexington, previously filed a claim and currently is involved in proceedings with the Industrial Commission to determine whether she should be compensated.

Mrs. Hale claims her eight years of working at the plant resulted in irreparable nerve damage. She says she left the company after she began having nerve problems, numbness, skin rashes and headaches.

Mrs. Hale says a Lexington doctor told her that a urine analysis showed her mercury level was three times higher than normal.

An industrial hygienist for the company testified at a hearing for Mrs. Hale in June that most of the 800 workers are tested monthly for high mercury levels.

Mrs. Hill says she was tested twice in 13 years, the last time in February at her request. Mrs. Kern says doctors have told her the mercury level in her urine is 10 times normal.

John Bergman, vice president of public relations for Duracell's corporate headquarters in Bethel, Conn., said the worker's claims would have to be settled through hearings.

"We haven't had anyone to quit because of alleged mercury poisoning, and we aren't having any trouble hiring," Bergman said. "I have no further comment."

An investigation of the situation by the state Department of Human Resources and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development began in April. That was after the Teamsters Union released results of private tests it said showed that the plant was releasing toxic wastes into the environment.

Wayerhaeuser Offers Contract

NEW BERN, N.C. (UPI) — Negotiators for Weyerhaeuser Corp. offered a contract Saturday to striking United Paperworkers Union members who walked off their jobs six months ago.

Union negotiator Mayhew Wallace said members of Local 1167 will decide Thursday whether to accept the contract.

Weyerhaeuser spokesman Carl Tyer would not comment on details of the proposal.

At the request of federal mediator Leonard Duggins, the two sides opened talks on the contract this week. Local 1167 has been on strike for better working conditions and more liberal benefits since Feb. 16.

Evangelist Says Vandals Posed 'Warning, Threat'

By SUE FERNALD
Reflector Staff Writer

Television evangelist Ray Whittington said Saturday he believes vandalism at the Fountain of Life Inc. offices in Greenville was caused by someone "who wanted us to know, like it was a warning or a threat."

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said the association's offices were "ransacked" Friday morning but declined to comment otherwise on his investigation. He said entry apparently was gained through a window and that most of the damage was confined to two offices.

Whittington, one of three brothers who run the organization and participate in a television ministry, said he did not "feel like this was vandalism."

"It was like they wanted us to know, like it was a warning or a threat," he said.

"I really don't feel like this was vandalism. I feel like it's more than just robbery. There were vindictive motives ... We have had several threats and disturbances during meetings in the past... And, I feel like it's intimidation or someone with an ax to grind. But, I don't know why."

The Fountain of Life was begun in Greenville 10 years ago by the three brothers — Ray, Larry and Jim Whittington. Ray and Jim are ordained ministers and both work actively with the television ministry, with Larry serving as a music minister. The three are orignally from Dillon County, S.C., where their father was a minister.

Their program is aired in 25 states on some 20 television stations.

The break-in was discovered Friday morning by Thomas Rouse, the organization's office manager.

Whittington said computer materials normally stored in a small wall safe and the contents of several desk drawers were scattered about a lobby area, but most of the vandalism occurred in an office used by Larry Whittington.

The desk and a brief case were pried open and all the drawers in the desk were emptied, he said, "but nothing of any value was taken."

"The only thing missing was a little box full of personal affects and some legal papers," he said.

The box contained an expired driver's license, extra house keys, a few old coins, military identification and three or four silver certificates, Whittington said. Underneath the box were some rolled coins which were left behind.

Fetal Surgery Successful

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Doctors did such a good job operating on Emily Pinion that she was born screaming, rather than gasping for breath.

Britton Christopher Glaser had a blocked kidney that resulted in a fluid-filled cyst bigger than his head. Five months into his fetal development, the cyst was drained, and now he's three months old.

The two babies are the latest success stories in the new field of fetal surgery, made possible by ultrasound, which uses sound waves to produce images of the fetus.

"This is all brand new," said Dr. Fay Redwine, who helped conduct both operations at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital. "This has come up since we realized that we can put needles into babies with the help of ultrasound."

The first successful surgery on an unborn child was conducted in April at California's Moffitt Hospital Prenatal Diagnosis Clinic on a twin who had a potentially fatal buildup of fluid caused by a blockage in his urinary tract.

In both the Pinion and Glaser cases, family obstetricians detected a problem with the pregnancies when the mothers' wombs suddenly became uncomfortably large.

In both cases, ultrasound pictures on a television screen enabled doctors at MCV to guide a long, thin needle into the fetus and drain an accumulation of fluid.

Emily, who was born Thursday to Mr. and Mrs. Michael Pinion of Richmond, had a collapsed lung that was drained successfully as her mother went into labor.

Without ultrasound, she would have been rushed into surgery within minutes of birth if the problem had been detected beforehand. But the baby could have died in the delivery room before doctors determined why she wasn't breathing.

In the case of Britton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Glaser of Cartersville, pressure from the cyst apparently had made the fetus stop swallowing amniotic fluid. Therefore, the amniotic fluid, which normally is replaced daily, was increasing rapidly.

Because of the excess fluid, a condition known as polyhydramnios, the mother was being pushed into premature labor.

When doctors drained 6 ounces of fluid from the cyst, the fetus apparently began to swallow again, the amount of amniotic fluid began to decrease, the remaining kidney continued to function properly and conditions gradually returned to normal.

"This is one of the first times this (procedure) ever has been done," Ms. Redwine said. "It's the first time it's been completely successful."

She had a similar assessment of the operation on the collapsed lung.

Clay Kirkman
Belk Tyler Horticulturalist

Clay Kirkman Says . . .

September is the beginning of a busy season of garden activity. It is still a hot, summer month, so you may want to do more planning than actual work.

You should be able to enjoy your summer bedding plants throughout the month. With proper care, marigolds will last until frost. September roses will also be beautiful if they have had an adequate spray program, along with water and a good fertilizer during the growing season.

Mid September is a good time to establish and fertilize cool season grasses, such as fescue and annual rye. A cool season grass stays green in winter, but usually turns brown in summer. Tall fescue should be seeded at the rate of 5 to 10 pounds per 1000 sq. feet. Annual rye grass should be seeded at the rate of 4 to 5 pounds per 1000 sq. feet. Fertilizer should be applied at the rate of 12 to 25 pounds per 1000 sq. feet. Be sure to use a complete fertilizer such as 8-8-8. It would be a good idea to have your soil tested before you do any planting. You can obtain the soil sample boxes at any Belk Tyler Garden Shop.

As soon as bulbs become available, it is a good idea to go ahead and buy them while the selection is good. You will not want to plant them until October or November. Until then, keep them in the refrigerator.

Be sure to come by Belk Tyler Garden Shops for all your fall gardening needs. Also, check out our selection of beautiful tropical plants for your home or office.

Horse Meat In Beef

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Federal officials investigating a report of suspicious meat here have discovered horse meat in a shipment of ground beef from Australia.

None of the meat reached consumers, said John L. Shinn, president of Top of Indiana Beef Co., which received the shipment.

Shinn would not say when the discovery was made, but the federal government has been investigating for weeks the problem of adulterated meat shipped to the United States from Australia.

Investigators also have impounded kangaroo meat in purported Australian beef shipments received on New Jersey docks.

Horse meat was found in a few boxes of a shipment of about 500 received by Top of Indiana, Shinn said. He notified the U.S. Department of Agriculture because the meat "didn't look right," he said.

The horse meat is now stored in a Fort Wayne warehouse, Dr. Dale Richardson of the meat and poultry division of the state Board of Health said Friday.

The batch of horse meat found in Fort Wayne is the only one so far in Indiana, Richardson said, but he added that inspections are continuing.

He noted that a national embargo has been imposed on further beef shipments from Australia.

Top of Indiana does not process meat, but distributes to wholesalers within about a 150-mile radius of Fort Wayne, Shinn said.

Horse meat and kangaroo meat are not necessarily unfit for human consumption, but the USDA has to assume the shipments are unfit because the meat came from uninspected animals, federal officials say.

be present and will challange 25 persons at once.

Saturday, traditionally the busiest day of the festival, begins at 8 a.m. with tennis and golf tournaments at Ayden Golf and Country Club and the local tennis courts.

A parachutist from the 82nd Airborne Division will demonstrate skydiving at 10:30 a.m. on the Ayden Middle School athletic field. Arts and crafts will be displayed on the corner of West Avenue and Second Street at 10 a.m. Wild West shows will begin at 10 a.m. and continue at intervals throughout the day and into Sunday.

Opening activities in downtown Ayden will begin at 11 a.m., followed by the 1981 Collard Festival Parade. Persons wishing to enter the parade should call Marvin Baldree Jr. at 746-3761. Baldree is parade chairman.

Speaker for the opening will be Joseph Grimsley, state secretary of natural and economic resources.

The midway booths, featuring a variety of games, will open at noon. The Collard Eating Contest starts at 1 p.m. following the parade. The Collard Cooking Contest is slated for 1:30 p.m. During the afternoon there will be entertainment by the Sourmash-Bluegrass Band, and a pet show. To cap the evening, a street dance will be held in the town hall parking lot featuring Bill Deal and the Rhondells.

On Sunday the tennis and golf tournaments will conclude, as well as the men's softball tournament. A 4-H Horse Show is scheduled at Hayfield Farm at 1 p.m. with a gospel sing at Ayden Middle School at 2 p.m. Foot races wil be held on West Avenue at 4 p.m. and will conclude the 1981 event.

Medfly Checks Stalling Travelers

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Thousands of Labor Day weekend motorists were stalled by Mediterranean fruit fly checkpoints Saturday, as officials said quarantines may continue into next year on some of California's rich farmlands.

In the face of heavy holiday traffic, extra state agriculture inspectors and highway patrolmen were looking for contraband produce at checkpoints along major routes from medfly-infested areas.

Despite pesticide spraying from the air and ground, an adult fruit fly and fly pupae were found late last week in the San Joaquin Valley.

"We're almost positive now that the quarantine will be in effect next spring when cherries and the fresh-market apricot pick comes off," said Walt Heimgartner, deputy agriculture commissioner for Stanislaus County, where 264 square miles are quarantined.

Officials say the quarantine must last at least three lifecycles beyond the last discovery of flies in an area — about 140 days. That would push the quarantine at least into January.

But Marc Faye, California deputy director of agriculture, said it's too soon to predict that future fly finds will extend the quarantine into the April harvest season.

He said the quarantine probably will be lifted as it was applied, in 81-square-mile sections, and the 3,249-square-mile quarantine zone may shrink before 1982.

Medfly project officials say they won't know until next spring or summer, when the medflies normally emerge from their winter dormancy, if they have conquered the pest, which ravages more than 200 types of fruit and vegetables.

The fly, first discovered in San Jose in June 1980, has spread to seven counties, forcing aerial spraying over 1,265 square miles of the quarantined area.

Agriculture officials in Los Angeles County said Saturday no more medflies had been found in a quarantined Baldwin Park neighborhood since 22 flies were found Wednesday and another four on Thursday. The area has been sprayed with pesticide in recent days.

Airliner Hijacked

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — A man with a jackknife and a box that he said was a bomb hijacked a jetliner on a domestic flight Saturday, but then released the passengers and surrendered, police reported.

They identified the man as Paulo Manoel de Lima, 26, and said the box that he claimed was a bomb contained a Bible.

Sao Paulo lies between Curitiba and Brasilia. Varig said the crew persuaded the man to allow the airliner to land at the Viracopos Airport 60 miles outside Sao Paulo and he freed the other passengers there.

After the passengers left the plane the man agreed to give himself up, the statement said.

Rescue Try Fails For Boy

LAKE PARK, Iowa (AP) — More than 3,000 volunteers poked through cornfields and wells Saturday in a search for a 2½-year-old boy missing for three days.

Justin Stahly disappeared about noon Thursday at the farm home of his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Stahly. The boy's mother said she hasn't seen the boy since she let him go outdoors to play with his dog, Sandy.

"It's come to the point that we have not been able to turn anything up. We haven't turned anything up since the beginning," a tearful Stahly told reporters Saturday night.

Stahly said officers would make more efforts to find his son Sunday, but, "If we do not come up with anything, the decision has been made that Justin will no longer be with us.

"I want to thank all you people for all the money and support ... you've given us," he said. "I don't know a tenth of you people who have been here. You've done everything that can possibly be done, but I'm afraid it's too late for my son. We don't know what happened to him, but thank you ...."

The search has been going on almost around the clock since Justin was discovered missing.

Thousands of volunteers on foot and on horseback have combed the corn and soybean fields row by row numerous times since the search began. They dismantled farm machinery the boy might have been trapped in, probed all wells and cisterns in the area and scanned all the buildings around without finding a trace of Justin.

Two airplanes and a helicopter equipped with a heat-sensing device were called in, and two psychics have been consulted. One, Greta Alexander, suggested a search of a neighbor's farm and said the boy would be found near some sheep and other animals.

Station KICD in Spencer broadcast an appeal for donations to help pay the cost of bringing a tracker dog from St. Louis to help in the search. The station reported pledges totaled nearly $16,000 by early Saturday.

Sir Joe, a dog with a national reputation for trailing ability, was brought in Saturday.

Dickinson County Civil Defense Director Lynn Wallace, who is coordinating the search effort, said he was almost certain the boy is somewhere on the Stahly farm or that of a neighbor.

He said officials have discussed the possibility the boy met with foul play. No such evidence has been found, he said, but officials haven't ruled it out.

Raccoon's 'Bum Rap' Ends

EAGLE RIVER, Wis. (AP) — Rocky the raccoon, "the little guy gettng a bum rap," was sprung from custody in Wisconsin in time to spend the Labor Day weekend with the Illinois family that raised him from infancy.

Rocky was reunited with the Thomas Turner family Friday on the steps of the Vilas County Courthouse, handed over by state officials to end a loud protest over the raccoon's rights.

With a contingent of reporters on hand, Attorney General Bronson La Follette promised Rocky trouble-free passage home, calling the raccoon, "a symbol of the little guy getting a bum rap from big government."

Rocky was taken into custody by Wisconsin game wardens last month when the Turner family brought him along on a camping trip.

"The whole thing has been, at times, ridiculous," said Turner, 43, whose two chidren wore "Return Rocky" T-shirts at Friday's reunion.

Turner said he found the stray raccoon inside the walls of his home in Schaumburg, Ill., and nursed it from infancy. He said the family would continue to care for the animal until it is old enough to be set free in the wild.

Congress passed the Volstead Prohibition Enforcement Act in 1919 over President Woodrow Wilson's veto.

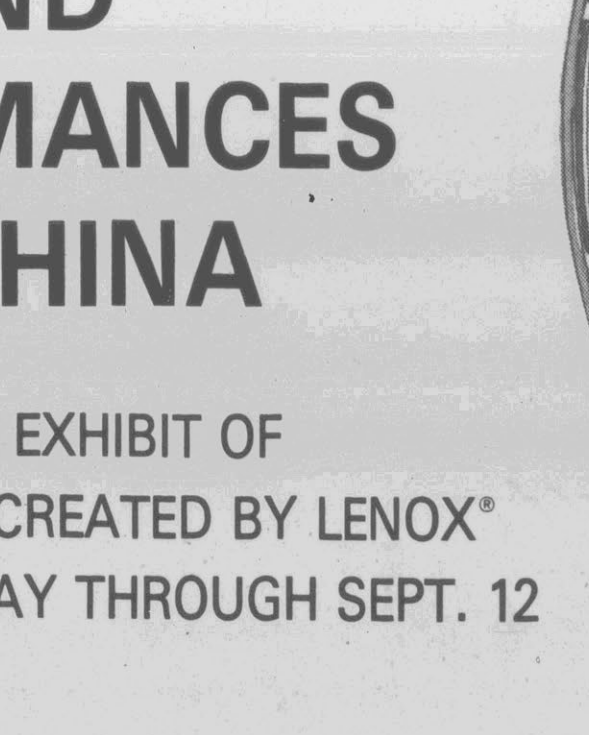
BELK TYLER PRESENTS
COMMAND PERFORMANCES IN FINE CHINA

AN OUTSTANDING EXHIBIT OF FAMOUS SERVICE CREATED BY LENOX®
WILL BE ON DISPLAY THROUGH SEPT. 12

The Official White House China Commissioned by F.D. Roosevelt



To replace the Lenox dinner service ordered by President Woodrow Wilson in 1917, President F.D. Roosevelt ordered a 2,000-piece set in 1935. The design of this service, the dinner plate of which is shown to the right with a cream soup and stand, is a departure from the rather severe lines of the Wilson service, which had an etched gold rim and shoulder in line with the President's seal on an ivory border. It appears to indicate to some extent the difference in personalities of the two presidents, Wilson the scholar and Roosevelt the colorful extrovert. The dark blue band on Roosevelt's plate is a deep cobalt blue decorated with 48 gold stars. The roses and plumes in the circling gold design were taken from the Roosevelt family coat of arms. The President's Seal on each plate is in subdued colors and stands out against the creamy background of the ware.

For many years, presidents, kings, diplomats and other famous people throughout the world have commissioned Lenox to create their fine china services. Now, you are most cordially invited to attend an outstanding exhibit of some of these celebrated services. Included in this exhibit will be famous pieces from the White House, North Carolina Governor's Mansion, museum plates and U.S. Embassy services. And while you're browsing about, you're sure to see the Lenox China pattern you want for your home . . . each featuring that same lustrous, translucent china as in these world-famous 'Command Performances'! See this Lenox exhibit now at Belk Tyler!

Winter Will Provide Better Test Of Nation's Air Traffic Safety

By ROBERT PARRY
and H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — During his presidential campaign, Ronald Reagan charged that too few controllers "working unreasonable hours with obsolete equipment has placed the nation's air travelers in unwarranted danger."

Today, five weeks into the air traffic controllers' strike, there are about half as many controllers.

They are working longer hours.

And their equipment isn't getting any less obsolete.

Federal aviation officials have been back-pedaling furiously from Reagan's campaign rhetoric, but still the question: Is it safe to fly?

There is no conclusive answer, but at least this much is true:

Since the strike began Aug. 3, there has been no commercial air accident; the relationship between working controllers and pilots, once verging on animosity, is unusually cordial; and all sides agree the government's decision to cut flights by one-fourth has provided a new margin of safety.

The Reagan administration insists the airways are safer because fewer planes are flying farther apart under a new computerized "flow control" system. The government reports a sharp drop in near-misses since the strike began.

The striking Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization concedes that fewer flights reduce the risk of an accident, but the union says that the added safety buffer is wiped out by undermanning the traffic control system.

Moreover, some experts on advanced technology contend the government might be underestimating the impact of firing half the controller workforce. They say the true test is not far off: winter weather creates significantly more problems for air traffic than summer.

"If you have a series of unpredictable events, a computer malfunction, bad weather, and an unexpected increase in general aviation, you could have problems," said Harley Shaiken, an expert on the use of computers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"And on top of that you have the intangible factors of fatigue and overconfidence" as controllers become accustomed to the system that on the surface appears to be working, he added.

With nearly 12,000 PATCO members fired after launching an illegal strike, the union charges that the government is minimizing the problem of fatigue and inexperience among the working controllers. And the union says the administration is understating the number of recent safety violations.

"How far are they going to go with a system that is unsafe, how far are they going to go in their continued efforts to try to convince the people that it is safe?" PATCO president Robert E. Poli complained recently.

The strike has posed a number of safety questions:

—Can the diminished force of supervisors and non-striking controllers, currently working six-day weeks, remain alert over the many months, perhaps even several years, it will take to rebuild the system?

—Are all the working controllers qualified to deal with such emergency situations as serious computer failures or unexpected bad weather? Neither hazard has posed a serious problem to date.

—Will the government be able to withstand increasing pressure from commercial and private aviation to allow additional planes into the skies?

—Does the increased use of "see-and-avoid" techniques by military and private pilots, whose flights have been dropped from the air traffic control system, endanger commercial aircraft?

The government's plan to maintain air safety is keyed to reducing air traffic to whatever level the working controllers can handle.

"We absolutely will not allow airplanes to take off if there is a question of safety," declares Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis.

The Federal Aviation Administration cut flights at the 22 busiest airports by 50 percent and reduced the nation's commercial flights overall by about 25 percent. Those ceilings are expected to continue through April.

The FAA also instituted a computerized "flow control" system that keeps commercial aircraft on the ground until direct flights to their destinations are assured. That eliminates the need for aircraft to be diverted or circle near airports until permission to land is granted.

In defending the current air traffic system, FAA officials have disputed Reagan's campaign rhetoric.

Ray Van Vuren, FAA's director of air traffic operations, said Reagan was "not properly informed" when he said "too few people (were) working unreasonable hours" in the air traffic system. Reagan's statement was contained in an Oct. 20 letter to secure PATCO's endorsement.

Van Vuren said management studies and the strike itself have shown "you had a lot of people you really didn't need."

During an eight-hour day, he said, the average controller worked only about four hours in pressure positions directing aircraft. Since the strike, he said fill-in controllers are having no trouble working 6½ hours a day in those spots.

"The only problems that they've got ... is the stress (of) the ... picket line that's out there and the harassment that they get after work," he said in an interview.

Before the strike, 16,000 controllers manned the system. Now, there are 5,200 non-striking controllers and 3,000 supervisors qualified for controller duty, Van Vuren said.

The FAA has also called in several hundred recently retired controllers and 1,250 military controllers, many of whom have yet to be cleared for work directing civilian aircraft.

Van Vuren said the replacements are at least as qualified as the strikers. And he said medically disqualified controllers who have been brought back are only allowed to handle support functions and are not directing traffic.

But Van Vuren acknowledged that fatigue from the six-day, 48-hour weeks could pose a safety problem if continued indefinitely. He said the FAA hopes to reduce the controllers' workload to the normal five-day, 40-hour week by Christmas as newly trained controllers begin to enter the system.

PATCO controllers contend that many of the substitute controllers are too old, inexperienced, medically unqualified or unfamiliar with air traffic in their areas.

"As soon as the bad weather comes, these people who haven't worked for years can't handle it," said PATCO spokesman Patrick Doyle.

In the meantime, much of the verbal sparring over whether the skies are safe is centering on conflicting figures of near-misses and "system errors," the failure of controllers to maintain proper distances between aircraft.

The FAA says reports of near-misses are down by more than half, 28 last month compared with 60 in August 1980. It listed 33 "system errors" in August compared with 80 in the same month last year.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says the number of hazardous incidents received under its reporting system has dropped by about 50 percent.

Yet NASA official Al Chambers says, "The question that one can raise is how long can these people continue to keep the effort up."

PATCO figures show more problems, but hardly an epidemic. The union cites 44 "confirmed near-misses" from Aug. 1 to Aug. 25. PATCO also claims to have confirmed 76 cases of planes being allowed to fly to close together.

A private group, the Air Safety Institute, said it has confirmed 39 near-misses since the strike began — more than double the normal number, according to the organization — and 60 system errors.

John Galipault, who heads the institute, said it is not unusual that it would receive more reports than the FAA — it always has.

As a group, pilots — whose lives are at stake — seem unperturbed.

"The overwhelming message that we receive from our members is that the skies are safe," said John Mazor of the Air Line Pilots Association. "They feel even more comfortable flying than they did before the strike."

A week ago, a Canadian fact-finding team blamed U.S. controllers for 48 of 61 breaches of safety regulations that the team had investigated.

In one case, the Canadian report said a Tokyo-bound flight strayed into a Canadian rocket-firing range near Victoria, British Columbia. The report blamed substitute controllers in Seattle for delayed reaction and lack of knowledge of the area.

Van Vuren said an FAA review showed that the plane never entered the restricted zone.

PATCO has also issued a list of incidents that the union claims endangered air passengers because of alleged errors by controllers.

Van Vuren said striking controllers are sitting on the ground with radios second-guessing the workers in the tower and he dismissed their complaints as "harassment."

"They know you end up chasing your tail," Van Vuren said, adding that such investigations take working controllers away from their tower duties.

A few compalints have also come from air control technicians who say preventive maintenance on the computers has been cut back during the strike, increasing the risk of serious computer failures.

The FAA insists that maintenance delays occurred only during the first days of the strike and that computers now receive normal care.

The computer radar system enables controllers to track planes while automatically receiving information on the planes' identities and altitudes.

Federal Judge Clears Way For AT&T To Move Toward Expansion

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision by a federal judge may speed the restructuring of the U.S. communications industry by opening new paths of expansion for the giant American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

The ruling by U.S. District Judge Vincent P. Biunno of New Jersey removes a bar to AT&T's plans to follow guidelines approved by the Federal Communications Commission and offer "enhanced services" starting next March 1.

By enhanced services, the FCC refers to the sale of switchboards, phones, other advanced equipment and the provision of data processing and information services via telephone lines, without regulating rates.

The ruling's implications are complicated.

There has been speculation that the FCC plan for introducing competition in the telephone industry, outlined last year in what is known as the Computer 2 decision, would be tied up in the courts so long Congress would have to set the guidelines.

That may yet happen. But Biunno's Friday ruling, coupled with the fact that no court has yet blocked the Computer 2 decision, means AT&T may enter the new fields before Congress acts.

"This was probably the major stumbling block to Computer 2 becoming effective," said Thomas J. Casey, a private attorney who was deputy chief of the FCC's common carrier bureau when the decision was adopted. "With this out of the way, I think it takes pressure off Congress. And AT&T will also lose some of its impetus for compromising on the Hill to get some type of deregulation."

In his ruling, Biunno said the FCC hadn't exceeded the bounds of a 1956 consent decree when it ruled in Computer 2 that AT&T could enter new communication markets where it would be regulated by competition and not directly by the FCC.

The Justice Department argued that the 1956 decree, which it signed with AT&T to settle an antitrust suit, barred AT&T from entering any unregulated market.

Biunno accepted the FCC's conclusion in Computer 2 that technological advances had so blurred the definition of "communications" that the 1956 decree could not be used to limit FCC flexibility.

The major premise underlying Computer 2 is that the dividing line between communications — which are regulated — and computer activities like data processing — which aren't — can no longer be precisely drawn.

The FCC said only that basic phone service should be regulated and said it would completely deregulate terminal equipment and seek to spur long-distance competition for AT&T. It also said AT&T could join its competitors and sell terminal equipment and enhanced services without regulation, as long as it established a new, separate subsidiary to do so.

The theory behind the latter restriction was that revenues from basic service should not be used by AT&T to finance its entry into competitive arenas.

Congress, meanwhile, is still grappling with the issue. There are major differences between Computer 2 and the latest legislative version, which has passed the Senate Commerce Committee and is now before the full Senate.

For example, the bill — backed by the newspaper industry — would bar AT&T from offering its own information services through its new subsidiary. In other words, AT&T could not offer its own electronic news, advertising and information service via its computers and telephone lines to home computers.

The FCC's Computer 2 decision contains no such bar.

The bill would also bar AT&T from providing burglar and fire alarm services through its phone network, a ban not part of Computer 2.

Strong Interest Found In 'All Savers' Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Government officials and financial institutions report a strong interest in the new "All Savers" certificate, a sign it may funnel more money than expected through ailing savings and loan associations.

The interest rate for the tax-exempt certificates will be 12.61 percent when they go on sale Oct. 1. By itself, the rate would be mediocre compared to an average of about a 17 percent yield for money market mutual funds.

But for savers with taxable incomes of more than $24,000, the combination of the tax exemption and the interest rate could make them better deals than any other low denomination deposit with or without federal guarantees.

And the higher the tax bracket, the greater the return. For families with taxable incomes of around $50,000, the "All Savers" certificates would return yields equivalent to about 24 percent or more.

The one-year certificates can be offered by banks, savings and loans and credit unions in denominations of any size, although the law specifies institutions must include in their offering denominations of $500 and multiples of $500.

Treasury Department officials report they have received what appears to be an unprecedented number of inquiries about the new investment, not only from the public, but also from banks and savings and loan associations who themselves have been deluged with questions.

Most questions involve the interest rate, the denomination and the tax exemption.

Although estimates have varied on the amount of new deposits the tax exemption is expected to lure into bank and savings and loan vaults, a figure frequently mentioned during congressional debate was $120 billion.

The unique feature of the "All Savers" certificate is its exclusion from income tax of the first $1,000 in interest earned by an individual, or the first $2,000 in interest earned by a couple who file a joint tax return. A couple can earn the exclusion even if all certificates owned are in the name of one spouse.

The Internal Revenue Service ruled Thursday financial institutions can offer short-term, high-interest bonus payments to attract "All Savers" customers as long as there is an opportunity for the customer to withdraw his money without penalty before purchasing the certificates on Oct. 1.

Many institutions had been offering high interest this month, in some cases up to 50 percent, to savers who agreed to "roll over" their account into "All Savers" certificates on Oct. 1.

In the face of the new IRS rule, many institutions switched their advertisements offering extraordinarily high interest to lesser bonuses, down to the level of a toaster or other kitchen appliance.

Under the new IRS rule, the institution could stand to lose the bonus if the customer decided at the last minute to take it and run, rather than convert the new deposit into a tax-exempt certificate.

Congress created the new certificate as an experiment available only for a limited time — Oct. 1, 1981, to Dec. 31, 1982. It is intended to make available high interest rates to small savers, pump new deposits into hard-pressed savings and loans and therefore to rejuvenate mortgage lending for housing.

The 12.61 percent average annual investment yield for the "All Savers" certificate will be effective only for the first few days of October. Every month a new interest rate will be posted, tied to the rate determined by the monthly auction of comparable government securities.

However, the certificate locks in until maturity to the rate at which it was purchased.

Survival Improving For Cancer Victims

CHICAGO (UPI) — The American College of Surgeons Saturday announced dramatic increases in the number of cancer victims who survive at least five years after they undergo treatment.

Between 1969 and 1979 survival rates from the 10 most common cancers — lung, breast, colon, prostate, uterine, bladder, rectal, stomach, cervical and pancreatic — have improved as much as 11 percent.

And improvements in the survival rate for less common cancers like Hodgkin's disease showed as much as an 18 percent increase, the group said.

"This is good news," said Dr. Charles R. Smart, director of research for the organization. "I think it's encouraging."

Smart, a clinical professor of surgery at the University of Utah, said improved forms of therapy and earlier diagnosis are the main reasons for the improvement.

"Survival rates are more sensitive than mortality rates in gauging improvements," he said. "I think that what we are seeing is that better treatment means better survival.

"We are making good strides against the common cancers and excellent progress against the rarer ones."

Iran's Prosecutor Is Killed By Firebomb Explosion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran's general revolutionary prosecutor was assassinated in his Tehran office Saturday by a firebomb explosion so powerful it knocked the balcony off the building, officials said. He was the fourth senior official in Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime slain in a week.

Tehran Radio also said a gunman was wounded in a shootout in front of Iran's parliament and a spokesman for the Iranian revolutionary police command said an investigation into a suspected coup plot was under way.

The official news agency Pars said the revolutionary prosecutor, Hojatoleslam Ali Qodussi, died in Tehran's Martyrs Hospital 5½ hours after he was rushed there from his bombed-out office. Tehran Radio said Qodussi's funeral would be Sunday morning.

A spokesman for the hospital, reached by telephone from The Associated Press office in Beirut, said Qodussi's legs were burned, "but he died from brain damage he suffered" in the blast. The spokesman declined to be named.

The explosion rocked Qodussi's office near north Tehran's Qasr Prison at 8:40 a.m. — 1:10 a.m. EDT.

Tehran Radio, monitored in Beirut, said the bomb appeared to have been planted in the library room directly below Qodussi's second-floor office. The broadcast said the blast injured another man at the prosecutor's office.

Pars quoted the head of the military's Islamic revolutionary courts, Hojatoleslam Mohammad Reyshahri, as saying he was 20 yards from the building when the bomb exploded. "I saw the terrace of the second floor collapse," Reyshahri said.

The state radio in its evening broadcast said the Supreme Judicial Council appointed Hojatoleslam Hussein Musavi Tabrizi, head of the revolutionary court in northern Iran's East Azerbaijan Province, to succeed Qodussi.

The council accused the United States of complicity in the latest assassination. The radio quoted a council statement as saying, "Once more the hands of American fifth column has come out of the sleeves of the hypocrites," which is the term used to describe the underground Mujahedeen Khalq.

Tehran Radio said the shootout outside the parliament building started when guards opened fire on a speeding taxi whose driver failed to heed orders to stop.

"One passenger returned fire and he was wounded. The cab driver and the rest of the passengers were arrested. None of the guards was injured," the state-run radio said.

Parliament is in recess until Sept. 20, and it was not known if the shootout and the assassination of Qodussi were connected.

However, a police spokesman, who requested anonymity, told The AP in Beirut the suspected plot was hatched by the Mujahedeen Khalq, the main underground leftist organization involved in a 10-week-old anti-government campaign of bombings and assassinations.

"This particular plot followed a series of recent clashes we have had with armed political organizations such as the Mujahedeen, the Peykar and the Fedayeen Khalq," the spokesman said.

He was answering a question about a report that the Islamic fundamentalist regime had broken a coup attempt and arrested 30 people, most of them army officers purged for alleged loyalties to the monarchy which was overthrown in 1979 by Khomeini's revolution.

The spokesman said arrests were made in connection with the suspected leftist plot, but he refused to disclose how many.

The latest explosion came two days after interim Prime Minister Ayatollah Mohammad Reza Kani pledged to try to bring an early end to anti-government assassinations.

Qodussi's assassination again demonstrated the ability of anti-government urban guerrillas to strike at Khomeini's top governmental and judicial aides despite an intensified security dragnet.

President Mohammad Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Javad Bahonar were burned to death in a firebomb blast at the prime ministry in downtown Tehran last Sunday. Iran's chief of police, Col. Hooshang Dastgerdi, who was injured in the prime ministry bombing, died in a hospital early Saturday, Pars reported.

On June 28, a bomb blast at the Islamic Republican Party's headquarters in Tehran killed more than 70 leaders, including Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti, considered the second-most powerful figure in Iran next to Khomeini.

Khomeini Appears Safe Despite Violence

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Bomb and assassination squads have shaken the foundations of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution in Iran, but the revolutionary godfather appears to remain firmly entrenched and seemingly unconcerned about being overthrown.

The 82-year-old Shiite Moslem clergyman captured the nation's imagination when he aroused the populace to overthrow the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's dynasty in February 1979.

For many Iranians, he remains a symbol of nationalism and patriotism and the underground opposition has made no known attempt to assassinate him.

The target of the anti-regime terror campaign has been the clergy-led Islamic Republican Party and allied groups such as the fanatic Hezbollahis, whose black-shirted, anti-sin squads patrol the streets of the capital on motorcycles.

IRP founder Ayatollah Mohammad Beheshti and 71 other party leaders and supporters were killed in a bomb blast that wrecked the party headquarters in Tehran on June 28.

President Mohammad Ali Rajai and Prime Minister Javad Bahonar died in a similar blast in the prime ministry one week ago, and a firebomb Saturday killed Hojatoleslam Ali Qodussi, the nation's general revolutionary prosecutor.

Hit-and-run machine gun attacks have picked off lower-ranking clergymen, provincial officials and politicians.

Iran-watchers believe the campaign has disrupted the IRP's ability to govern and to formulate domestic and foreign policy. But the party has moved quickly to fill the vacant posts with new faces.

Led by clergymen who fervently seek to establish a theocracy that will serve as a pan-Islamic model, the party remains basically homogeneous and Khomeini officials have insisted changes in personalities will not alter their course.

Travelers from Iran say that the population of 36 million remains largely apathetic, unwilling to risk involvement in the bloody war of attrition that has claimed the lives of about 200 clergymen and pro-Khomeini officials and about 800 dissidents since the ouster of ex-President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr on June 22.

"The people are relatively unsophisticated politically and worry most about living day to day," said one young Iranian professional who arrived here recently.

Led by the leftist Mujahedeen Khalq which has allied with Bani-Sadr in exile in Paris, the underground guerrillas have burned food harvests, planted bombs in railway stations and fought gun battles with pro-Khomeini revolutionary guards in the streets.

The government forces have responded with late-night stop-and-search roadblocks in the capital and an increase in the numbers of arrests, summary trials by revolutionary guards and executions by firing squads.

Flocks of bodyguards surround prominent figures and the new prime minister, Ayatollah Mohammad Reza Mahdavi Kani, has made security his government's No. 1 priority.

The daily life of most Iranians has been largely unaffected by all this, say the travelers. Many Iranians instead grapple with the long-term effects of upheaval — double-digit inflation and unemployment that now includes an estimated 5 million Iranians.

The opposition in Iran remains fragmented despite the alliance of the Mujahedeen Khalq with Bani-Sadr. Efforts to mount massive street demonstrations last June when Bani-Sadr was impeached withered in the face of larger crowds turned out by the IRP's organizers.

Opposition groups are varied, running the spectrum from monarchists to Marxists. Some parties, such as those of the autonomy-seeking Kurds in northwestern Iran, are limited to one geographic area and have avoided ties with other anti-government movements.

"Unless there is a cohesive alliance of opposition forces, then it is unlikely that the masses can be mobilized or Khomeini's regime brought down soon," said one Western diplomat who declined to be identified.

The army is preoccupied with its attempt to regain territory lost to Iraqi forces in their almost one-year-old war. It also has been weakened by repeated purges.

Khomeini forces have organized their own palace guard — a well-equipped and battle-hardened corps of revolutionary guards numbering 75,000 who could be used to counter any moves by the regular army.

The terror strikes have nonetheless preoccupied Khomeini's clergy and their focus has been increasingly inward-looking, costing the Islamic republic support from abroad.

Carter Labels Khomeini 'Weak'

OSAKA, Japan (UPI) — Former President Jimmy Carter, in an interview made available Saturday, spoke his mind about Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, calling him a weak and unpredictable man who betrayed Islam.

Carter also called production of the B-1 bomber — which he scrapped and President Reagan is considering reviving — a "complete waste of money."

Carter was interviewed by the Kansai Television station which is hosting his six-day trip to Japan.

The 1-hour and 20-minute interview was conducted Friday but will not be aired until Wednesday. A videotape was made available to UPI.

The interview was entitled, "The Crucial Decisions" and the questions focused on the hard choices Carter had to make as president. That brought the talk around quickly to Iran and the hostage crisis that haunted the last year of his presidency and was resolved only hours after he left office.

Asked about Khomeini, Carter said, "he is unpredictable, weak at the time of crisis...

"He has no loyalty to his subordinates... and I think he also betrayed the basic elements of the Islamic religion."

The 444-day hostage crisis, Carter said, was the most painful experience of his presidency. He said it was "torturous to see American hostages seized."

Despite the humilitation of the failed rescue mission and the frustrating setbacks in the long negotiations to free the 52 hostages, Carter said there was "one point people seem to have forgotten" — the safe return of 40,000 other Americans in Iran when the late Shah was overthrown.

Throughout the interview, Carter appeared serious. The broad smile that has been almost a permanent feature of his face since he arrived in Osaka Thursday rarely appeared as he looked back over his days in the White House.

Asked about the B-1 bomber, Carter said its production "is a complete waste of money" that would be better spent on the cheaper Cruise missiles.

"The best way to threaten the Soviets is through the land-based cruise missles," Carter said.

The neutron bomb, he said, is not as formidable as Soviet propaganda says it is and not as powerful as the SS-2 missles the Soviets are deploying.

He said no European nation was willing to deploy the neutron bomb and that was why he decided it would be unwise to spend large amounts of money on it.

Two Injured In Train Derailment

HATFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Ten cars of the Amtrak Montrealer passenger train jumped the tracks here early Saturday, slightly injuring two passengers, and officials blamed a faulty switch.

Police said 328 passengers were aboard the train bound from Montreal to Washington when it derailed at 2:30 a.m. in this small western Massachusetts community about 20 miles north of Springfield.

Two people were treated for minor injuries and released at Cooley-Dickinson Hospital in nearby Northampton. They were identified as Mildred Belsey, 72, of Pompano Beach, Fla., and Rolland Lemieux, 53, of Montreal.

The other passengers, who groped through the darkness into the 40-degree morning air, waited about three hours before they were transported by seven buses to Springfield to catch another train.

"Thankfully, in terms of injuries, it's going to be a relatively minor incident," said Jim Stiner, a spokesman for Amtrak in Washington.

Stiner said the train apparently was traveling at a slow rate of speed when it derailed.

William Furey, a supervisor for B&M Railroad, which manages the track, said a faulty switch at the intersection of Dwight and Bridge streets was tentativeley listed as the cause of the accident.

'Angels' Charged In Auto Theft

RICHMOND, R.I. (AP) — Three members of the Rhode Island Guardian Angels have been charged with a New York City car theft, police said.

The men, all from Providence, were wearing the group's uniform of red berets and black T-shirts when they were arrested Friday following a chase on Interstate 95 in southern Rhode Island.

The men belong to a 45-member Providence street patrol group, authorities said. But Guardian Angels founder Curtis Sliwa of New York said the Rhode Island group was never authorized as a chapter of his crime-fighting organization and had no right to use the name.

Saulio A. Reyes, 24, and Polivio Vega, 23, were charged with conspiracy to steal a car. Felipe A. Estrado, 18, was charged with receiving stolen goods worth more than $500.

U.S. Public Schools Report Sharp Decline In Student Enrollment

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government reported Saturday that America's classrooms will hold 870,000 fewer children this fall, and a teachers group predicts that tight budgets and the skid in enrollment will cost 55,000 teachers their jobs.

From kindergarten through college, the nation's school bill for 1981-82 will reach $198.3 billion, up about 10 percent from the 1980-81 tab of $181 billion, according to estimates from the National Center for Education Statistics.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell said total enrollment will slip from 58.4 million to 57.6 million, a 1.5 percent drop. Elementary and secondary schools will lose 870,000 pupils, declining to 45.4 million, while colleges and other post-secondary schools will gain 20,000 to 12.1 million.

The center estimated the number of elementary and secondary school teachers will drop by 23,000, to 2.4 million. But the two major teacher unions foresee far sharper retrenchments.

The 1.7 million-member National Education Association estimates 55,000 teachers are being laid off, "the largest one-year drop in history." Its rival, the American Federation of Teachers, estimates the layoffs at 44,000, with Massachusetts the hardest hit.

"The 1981-82 school year is going to be substantially different in America than any in recent decades," NEA President William McGuire said in an interview.

He said cuts in federal and state aid will mean fewer teachers and larger class sizes in many places.

McGuire also predicted cuts in special school programs for the poor, the handicapped and non-English speaking students as well as in music, art and other programs outside the core curriculum.

Parents also will find their children asking for more money to pay for school lunches and milk because ofReagan administration cuts, McGuire said.

Bell noted that school enrollment is down 6 percent from the record of 61.3 million reached in 1975.

He said that counting the 3.3 million classroom teachers — including 840,000 at the college level — and 300,000 superintendents and other staff, "Education in the fall of 1981 will be the primary activity of 61 million Americans," or 27 percent of the entire population.

The center, in its annual "back-to-school" forecast, said the federal government will pay $20 billion, or 10 percent, of the nation's school bill; states $77 billion, or 39 percent; local governments $50 billion or 25 percent; and the rest, $51 million or 26 percent, from tuition, fees, endowments, grants and private gifts.

The NEA's McGuire said the actual number of teachers laid off will not be known until later this year.

The AFT estimated that 7,500 teachers will lose their posts in Massachusetts, where voters last year passed a cap on local spending, Proposition 2½. The AFT said its survey found other major layoffs totaling 4,000 in Pennsylvania, 3,000 in Ohio, 2,700 in Illinois, 2,500 in Wisconsin and in Louisiana, 2,000 in Michigan, 1,100 in New York, and 1,000 in Indiana. It found teacher vacancies in three Sunbelt states: Florida, Georgia and Texas.

The NEA said job prospects for teachers are good only in Georgia and Louisiana. It also reported that public school teacher salaries averaged $17,264 last year.

Other statistics from the government include:

—Elementary school enrollment will drop from 31.4 million to 31 million, continuing a slide that began in 1969, five years after the baby boom ended. But elementary enrollment is expected to pick up again in the mid-1980s.

—High school enrollment will fall to 14.4 million from 14.9 million. It peaked in 1976 and is expected to drop throughout the 1980s.

—Post-secondary enrollment will exceed last fall's record of 12.1 million by 20,000, but is expected to start dropping next year and for the rest of the decade due to the dwindling number of 18-to-24-year-olds.

—The school bill will be divided into $127 billion for elementary and secondary schools and $71 billion for colleges and universities. Public schools and colleges will spend $161 billion and private institutions $37 billion in 1981-82.

—Enrollment in private and parochial elementary and high schools is expected to dip by 20,000, to 5.3 million, while the public schools lose 850,000, dropping to 40.1 million.

Panama Bans Weapons Fair

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — President Aristides Royo says he won't let a U.S. promoter hold an arms fair for Latin American military and police officers here because "Panama is a peaceful country."

The Cahners Exhibition Firm of Chicago planned to fill Panama's Atlapa Convention Center with guns, communications gear, jets, patrol boats, tanks and jeeps exhibited by 300 arms dealers from 20 nations Nov. 10-13.

"We are not in agreement with this exposition because it doesn't give the correct image our country should present in its window to the world," Royo declared Friday in a message read over National Radio.

Military and police chiefs from all Latin American countries had been invited to the fair to shop for hardware exhibited by manufacturers from the United States, Britain, France, Italy, the Philippines and other countries, a Cahners spokesman said.

In 1967, surgeons at a hospital in Cape Town, South Africa, reported a successful human heart transplant, believed to be the first of its kind.

Boston Faces Strike By Teachers

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — As classes begin this week, the nation's oldest public school system faces another year of crises — budget problems, layoffs and the threat of a teachers' strike.

The 5,000 members of the Boston Teachers Union meet Monday — two days before classes are to resume — to vote on their leaders' recommendation that they strike.

The strike call is a response to layoffs of nearly 1,000 teachers and the decision — provoked by Proposition 2½, the state's property tax cutting law — that a 7.5 percent salary hike will not be paid.

The teachers staged a six-day strike in 1975 over contract negotiations. A strike call in 1978 was rejected by the membership.

"My gut feeling is there won't be a strike," says School Committee President John O'Bryant. "The issue they're striking on is not an issue they can win. We simply have no money to hire back the teachers."

Superintendent Robert Spillane came to Boston a month ago after serving as New York's assistant education commissioner. The threatened strike leads a list of troubles he faces.

Even if the strike is averted, the school system that serves 62,000 students must learn to live with a shrinking budget, fewer schools and a public attitude unsympathetic to public education.

"Public education in Boston does not have a great amount of support," says Ed Doherty, a vice president of the teachers union. "The public doesn't understand the consequences if public education fails."

Sporadic violence in the schools began six years ago with the start of court-ordered busing. Last year, problems between white and black students were overshadowed by a school bus drivers' strike at the start of the academic year and the threat of bankruptcy and a school shutdown at the end of the year.

The year also saw two members of the city's school committee indicted on extortion charges. Gerald O'Leary pleaded guilty to charges of trying to extort $650,000 from a school bus company; the other committee member, John J. McDonough, is awaiting trial.

The schools still face financial woes that threatened to shut down classes last April. It took a state judge's order to keep the schools open after Mayor Kevin H. White refused a request for a $20 million supplemental budget.

The schools will operate with a $210 million budget this year, $18 million less than last year. Tight money has meant layoffs of 960 teachers and 500 other staff members and the closing of 27 schools.

The union believes school officials "are laying off far more people than they have to," says Doherty. "We are saying the schools, in order to implement the contract and keep the comprehensive programs going, are going to need more money from the mayor."

White, a consistent critic of school overspending, has not responded to a school committee request for an additional $8 million.

The mayor's view that the schools are poorly run is backed by a Boston Municipal Research Bureau study. The bureau, a private foundation supported by businessmen, said education costs in Boston were "excessive by virtually every comparative measure."

The report cited a 51 percent increase in administrative costs and a 58 percent rise in instructional costs over the past decade and noted that this occurred despite a decline in enrollment by 33,000 during the period.

"You compare Boston with other school systems ... and find $210 million should be sufficent to do the job," says Samuel Tyler of the bureau.

BEAR'S HOME ... A big "Welcome Home Bear!" sign greeted White House Press Secretary James Brady at his Arlington, Va., home Saturday. Vatican Denies Reports Of Conspiracy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican on Saturday denied reports that it suspects the Soviet secret police, the KGB, was involved in the shooting of Pope John Paul II.

"The Holy See has never made any declarations or advanced any hypotheses regarding any group or country as possible culprits in the attack," the Rev. Pierfranco Pastore, a Vatican spokesman, said in a statement.

Other Vatican officials also rejected as "fantastic," "absurd" and "in poor taste" a British television report that the Vatican and Italian security services believe the Soviet KGB encouraged the assassination attempt because of the Polish-born pontiff's support for Poland's independent labor movement.

The report was broadcast Thursday on the "TV Eye" program on Thames Television Ltd.

At least two British newspapers, including the London Times, also said Western intelligence experts believe there are "reasonable grounds" for suspecting KGB involvement in the shooting in St. Peter"s Square May 13.

Pastore and a top Vatican prelate said the Holy See has no intelligence apparatus or anyone assigned to intelligence work.

"There have been a lot of rumors — the CIA, KGB and what have you — and I guess some people are just surmising," the prelate, who asked not to be identified, said in a telephone interview. "I was reading about it this morning, and I just laughed."

He added that he knows of no one in Vatican circles who harbors such suspicions.

Italian police have been unable to determine where Mehmet Ali Agca, a Turkish terrorist convicted of shooting the pope on May 13 in St. Peter's Square, got his gun and false passport.

The police believe, however, he had to have help from individuals or groups. They are convinced that the 23-year-old Agca, now serving a life sentence, received help to finance his trips through Europe and North Africa after he escaped from a Turkish prison in November 1979.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano and Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli also have said they suspect Agca may have had accomplices, but they have not pointed a finger to any particular group or individuals.

Italian police said the Vatican has not interfered with their investigations or suggested any possible lead to follow.

Dozens of theories have surfaced since the pontiff was shot. Among the groups and individuals blamed for possible involvement were the CIA, the KGB, a neofascist Turkish group and Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy.

The U.S. Embassy in Rome formally protested last month affter a Soviet magazine distributed in Italy, USSR Oggi (Today), suggested CIA interest in removing the pope. The article said the motive would have been alleged disagreement over U.S. policy on El Salvador.

Brady Makes First Visit To Home Since Shooting

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady went home Saturday for the first time since he was gravely wounded during the attempted assassination of President Reagan more than five months ago.

Several friends and neighbors gathered at Brady's home in the suburb of Arlington, Va., to welcome him during his brief furlough from the hospital. A banner stretched over the front door said, "Welcome Home, Bear."

"Bear" is the nickname given the portly press secretary by his wife Sarah and adopted by Brady himself and virtually all his friends and colleagues. Even the president refers to him as "the Bear."

Cards placed on the front lawn by his neighbors spelled out, "Jim Brady lives here."

Brady's deputy, Larry Speakes, said the press secretary was released from George Washington University Hospital to spend the day with his wife and 2-year-old son, Scott, before returning to the hospital Saturday night.

Brady, who has undergone four operations since he was shot in head March 30, left the hospital shortly before noon, riding in a wheelchair and wearing an orange cap. He waved and gave an optimistic "thumbs-up" to passersby before heading for home in a van with a friend.

"He seemed to be in pretty good spirits," said Doug Durcanin, an American University student who watched Brady's departure. He said there was little fanfare as Brady left.

"I gave him a 'thumbs-up' sign, you know, and he gave me one back. He seemed real optimistic," Durcanin said.

Saturday's trip was Brady's first excursion outside the hospital since his most recent surgery Aug. 20, when doctors patched a persistent leak of spinal fluid that had complicated his recovery for several weeks.

Previously, Brady left the hospital to go to a French-Vietnamese restaurant with his wife to celebrate their eighth wedding anniversary, and he later spent an evening at the home of friends. He also went to the White House during the capital's Fourth of July celebration.

Begin To Try Fence-Mending During U.S. Visit

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin will try to repair his U.S. image, while arguing his case against sophisticated armaments for Saudi Arabia, during a visit to the United States this week.

Begin will go to New York on Sunday, then travel to Washington Tuesday for meetings with President Reagan on Wednesday and Thursday, the first ever between the two leaders.

"We hope there will be some chemistry between them. It will help resolve some of their problems if there is," said an Israeli Embassy official, who did not want to be identified.

In addition to the Saudi arms controversy, those problems include plans for renewal of the Palestinian autonomy talks between Israel and Egypt, Syrian missiles in Lebanon that Israel wants removed and Israel's use of U.S.-supplied weapons for military operations outside its borders.

Senior U.S. officials are known to believe there must be progress toward Palestinian autonomy by next April, the date for Israel's final withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula. If progress isn't achieved, a new approach probably will be necessary, they believe.

Begin's image suffered a black eye in Washington after he dispatched U.S.-supplied warplanes to bomb an Iraqi nuclear reactor in June and a Palestinian section of Beirut in July. As many as 300 persons, mostly civilians, were killed in the Beirut raid.

The administration showed its displeasure by suspending delivery of 16 jet aircraft for a six-week period.

But U.S. officials have made clear they consider the slate clean on those incidents, and they say the emphasis during the Begin visit will be on the strong ties between the two countries.

"We obviously will be reaffirming the special relationship that exists between the two countries and reaffirming in this context our commitment to Israel's security and well-being," a senior administration official who did not want to be identified told reporters Friday.

Besides Reagan, Begin will meet with Vice President Bush, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and other administration officials, including Philip C. Habib, who recently helped negotiate a cease-fire along the Lebanese border in his role as President Reagan's special peace envoy to the region.

Begin also will pay a visit to former President Carter at Plains, Ga. before leaving the United States on Sept. 15. Egyptian President Anwar Sadat also visited Carter on his recent trip to the United States.

Begin will meet with prominent Jewish and other religious leaders, including Jerry Falwell, the leader of the Moral Majority, on Friday. Members of Congress and other prominent political, labor and business leaders also are on his schedule.

Reagan will host an official state dinner in Begin's honor at the White House Wednesday evening.

The Begin visit is seen as the essential next step toward achieving progress in the Palestinian autonomy talks under the Camp David peace process.

Begin and Sadat recently agreed to resume their talks in Cairo on Sept. 23, but their different views of what constitutes Palestinian autonomy still needs to be reconciled. A U.S. official cautioned reporters against expecting a breakthrough during the Begin visit.

A suggestion by Sadat on his recent visit that Israel and the Palestine Liberation Organization should engage in a "mutual and simultaneous" recognition of one another as a prelude to peace has attracted some interest as a long-term possibility, U.S. officials say, although no one says so publicly.

The proposed $8.5 billion U.S. arms sale to Saudi Arabia, including five sophisticated radar planes known as AWACS, has the potential of becoming a highly divisive issue, although both sides say they want to prevent it from becoming the major focus of the Begin visit.

Israel considers the AWACS a potential threat to its own airspace and security. An official Israeli source said Begin's starting point in the talks will be "total opposition" but suggested Begin would be open to persuasion to soften his opposition if Reagan can be persuasive.

Nelson, Blue Lift Pirates By Catamounts, 42-6

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Quarterback Carlton Nelson dispelled any doubts about his health last night as he and Harold Blue led the East Carolina Pirates to a 42-6 shellacking of Western Carolina in the 1981 season opener.

Nelson, accounting for 229 total yards, rushed for one touchdown, a 24 yard scamper, and threw for another. That pass hit freshman Ricky Nichols from 34 yards out.

Blue, rushing 18 times for 88 yards, went into the end zone twice, on runs of 13 and 6 yards, while Leon Lawson and Stefon Adams each scored once, on runs of 3 and 4 yards, respectively.

And kicker Chuck Bushbeck lived up to his credentials, kicking all six of his extra point attempts.

Bushbeck's performance was only slightly overshadowed by the kicking of Western's Dean Biasucci, who booted field goals of 31 and 45 yards to account for all of the Catamount scoring.

"It's a great, great thrill to win," a delighted Ed Emory said in the dressing room. But it's not how you start, but how you finish."

Emory expressed great pleasure with the Pirate offense, which ground out 499 yards in total offense, 321 on the ground and 178 through the air. "We stopped ourselves a couple of times, but overall I was pleased. I was very happy with the play of the offensive line. They controlled the line of scrimmage and their protection was excellent.

"Nelson did a beautiful job coming off (a neck) operation. (Greg) Stewart did a good job, too, and (Kevin) Ingram will be okay when he learns all the new system," the coach added.

Stewart hit on both of his pass attempts, and ran for 17 yards on three carries. Ingram, who guided the Pirates to their final score, hit one pass for 36 yards.

Emory also liked the running of Blue, Earnest Byner, who had 47 yards on just five carries, and Lawson, who picked up 10 yards on four lugs.

But he wasn't pleased with the fullback play. There, Roy Wiley carried eight times for 29 yards, but fumbled three times, and two of them were recovered by Western. Except for one Nelson interception, they were the only turnovers.

"I thought out quickness on defense was the difference. We would bend, but we would not break," the coach said.

For example, on Western's first seven possessions, the Catamounts pushed across midfield, but had to settle twice for field goals, and three times had passes intercepted.

Gerald Sykes picked off all three, tieing the school record, and returned the ball a total of 55 yards.

"I think I was just in the right place at the right time," Sykes said. "This is my first year in the secondary, and I think they were trying to find our weak spot. They tried for a mismatch and it didn't work."

"Our pass rush was better in the second half, and that made a big difference," Emory said.

Meanwhile, Coach Bob Waters was very disappointed.

"We were just awful," he said. "I really can't think of much good to say about it. All the way, everything we did was bad, particularily the defense. The offense had a spark of life early, but we couldn't capitalize on anything. The defense couldn't help at all, and all of a sudden no one was playing. It was a total loss."

East Carolina, led mostly by Nelson, scored on its first three possessions, moving 97 yards the first time, and 80 each of the next two. Overall, ECU scored on six of 11 possessions.

Western, stopped just over midfield on its first drive of the game, got a break — it appeared — when Eddie McGill punted out of bounds on the three yards line.

But no. The Pirates took that and marched down the field in 14 plays for the first score of the night. Stewart, in briefly, made a key play hitting Larry O'Roark for 14 yards and a first down at the Western 44 six plays into the drive. Nelson, back in, ripped off ten yards two plays later to the 29, and six more plays saw Blue go behind the blocking of Tootie Robbins and Bud LaCock for 13 yards and the score. Bushbeck's kick, with 2:10 left, made it 7-0.

Western drove back for its first field goal after that, but not before bringing the 24,873 fans to their feet on the kickoff. Receiver Dwayne Norman broke through the wedge and raced down to the ECU 31 before Bushbeck drove him from his feet, saving a sure touchdown.

"I just waited for him to come to me," Bushbeck said. "I knew there was going to be a hit, so I just waited."

Western got down to the nine before getting hurled back as Melvin Dorsey — the only real Catamount running threat — was dropped for a four-yard loss on third and five. Biasucci then booted the 31 yard field goal with 14:14 left in the half to cut the lead to 7-3.

Dorsey ended the game with 105 yards on 20 carries.

It took ECU only seven plays to march 80 yards for the next score. Nelson picked up 32 yards on second down on a keeper around the left side. Then, after the Pirates reached the 24, he again kept around the left side, and used a Nichols block to go the distance. That made it 14-3 with 10:44 left.

Western again came back to threaten, driving from the 20 to the ECU 22 before the defense again stiffened and a 45-yard field goal by Biasucci cut the lead to 14-6 with 5:03 remaining.

Again, however, the ECU offense showed its dominance, driving 80 yards again, in 13 plays for the score. Nelson hit Norwood Vann for 21 yards on the second play, then two plays later hit Nichols for 14 yards. Stewart reached Vann for 17 more, and then raced 10 more yards two plays later.

Finally, Lawson capped the drive with his first ECU score, a three-yarder, with 41 seconds left. That gave the Pirates a 21-6 halftime advantage.

Not that that was all the first half action. Sykes came up with his two interceptions right after that. First, he picked off Ronnie Mixon at the 50 and returned it to the WCU 42. Then, after Wiley turned it right back with a fumble on first down, Sykes again stepped into a Mixon pass to return it 24 yards as the half ran out.

Another fumble ended a Pirate threat in the second half's opening drive, as the Bucs turned it over on the 19.

After forcing a punt, the Pirates took over on their 10 and promptly drove 90 yards in eight plays for the fourth ECU touchdown. Byner ripped off 16 yards on first down, the longest play except for the final one, when Nelson hit Nichols on a 34-yard bomb and Bushbeck added the PAT to make ti 28-6 with 5:46 left in the period.

The next ECU drive stalled at the 35 when Nelson had a pass picked off.

Early in the final period, however, the Pirates took over at their 46 after a short punt. McGill, back to receive the snap, fumbled the ball, dashed to his right to avoid a potential tackler, then kicked out of bounds only 11 yards downfield.

Nelson got the drive going on third down, hitting Byner for 20 yards. Seven plays later, Blue got his second touchdown, going in from six yards away. With 7:46 left, the Pirates now held a 35-6 advantage.

'Dogs Blast Vols, 44-0

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Defending national champion Georgia opened its season Saturday with a crushing 44-0 victory over Tennessee, but Coach Vince Dooley wasn't especially pleased.

"We had some individuals who played good games but we're a long way from playing as a team consistently," Dooley said.

The Bulldogs were never in trouble throughout the day as Buck Belue fired two touchdown passes to Lindsay Scott and All-American Herschel Walker rambled for 161 yards and one touchdown.

It was the worst defeat administered to Tennessee since 1923 when the Vols dropped a 51-7 decision to Vanderbilt.

"We got whipped about every way you can from the kicking game throughout," said Coach Johnny Majors of Tennessee. "I thought entering the game Georgia had a chance to be a better football team at this time of year than they were when we played them a year ago. They showed that was right."

Dooley, who fretted all week that his team wasn't ready to play, said he thought they were ready at game time.

"We played well and I think it's a great start to the season, but I also see how much we have to improve," Dooley said.

Walker said Georgia "proved today we're more than a one-man team. If they key on me, we can pass the ball."

Walker scored his touchdown on a 1-yard plunge at the end of a 92-yard drive with which the 10th-ranked Bulldogs opened the game en route to their 14th straight victory, longest streak in the nation.

Belue, who connected on 10 of 15 passes for 140 yards, hit Scott with a 15-yard scoring shot in the second quarter and came back with a 23-yarder in the third quarter.

Freshman kicker Kevin Butler boomed three field goals for the Bulldogs, covering 36, 44 and 45 yards.

Georgia reserves added two fourth quarter touchdowns, one on an 8-yard run by Matt Simon with 6:34 remaining and the other by Jeff Paulk on a 1-yard keeper only 18 seconds from the end.

Gamecocks Roll Past Deacs; Wolfpack Rallies By Richmond

(Stats on page B-9)

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) Quarterback Terry Bishop ran and passed for 165 yards to lead South Carolina over Wake Forest, 23-6, in a non-conference college football game Saturday night.

Even without Heisman Trophy winner George Rogers, it was the Gamecock ground game that wore the Deacons down. South Carolina piled up 271 yards, using a variety of running backs.

The South Carolina defense shut down the Deacon offense, which came alive only once late in the game. And the Gamecock offense consistently took advantage of the Wake Forest defense, which spent a lot of time on the field.

South Carolina drew first blood, driving 79 yards to score on its first possession. Although not able to sustain another touchdown drive in the first half, the Gamecocks managed two field goals.

South Carolina's backup quarterback, Gordon Beckham, threw a 49-yard scoring strike to Dewayne Chivers to make the score 20-0 in the third quarter, then added another field goal before the period ended.

The only Deacon score came in the fourth quarter when tailback Wayne McMillan went over from two yards out to cap a 47-yard drive, the only bright spot for the Deacon passing game all night.

The Deacons only managed to rush for 47 yards.

It was the season opener for both teams.

Wake Forest did pass for 220 yards, while South Carolina managed only 155 yards. But South Carolina's passes were more timely and better mixed with their running game.

The Gamecocks' domination was apparent in the first half, as they established a strong ground game (115 yards) and kept the Deacons off balance with occasional passes to grab a 13-0 lead.

The Gamecocks drove 79 yards on their first possession for the first score of the game. Bishop took it in from three yards out at 9:24 of the first quarter.

The Deacons could not sustain a offense. On their first possession, starting quarterback Gary Schofield threw a 33-yard pass to split end Wayne Baumgardner, but fullback Dan Dougherty then fumbled the ball away after taking a seven-yard pass.

RALEIGH — Joe McIntosh warned his friends in Lexington, N.C., not to expect too much of him in his freshman year at North Carolina State. But after his performance in the Wolfpack's 27-21 victory over Richmond Saturday night, the whole state may sit up and take notice.

N.C. State Coach Monte Kiffin praised his freshman, who was named last year as the Associated Press North Carolina High School Player of the Year.

"McIntosh had an outstanding game for a freshman," Kiffin said. "He's got something called balance. It's a knack. All great backs have it. Joe's certainly got some of it."

Richmond Coach Dal Shealy credited N.C. State's defense with doing a good job of diagnosing the Spider offense. But he also lauded his players for a tremendous effort.

"I think our guys are winners. They put their hearts into the game," Shealy said. "They believed they were going to win and they thought they were going to win. Time just ran out before we got the ball back."

Richmond had taken a 14-10 halftime lead on a 14-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Steve Krainock to wide receiver Clayton White and a 1-yard Krainock run. Both tallies came in the second period.

But the Wolfpack defense stiffened in the second half and kept the Spiders out of the end zone until late, when a Krainock-to-White pass of 15 yards provided the final margin.

McIntosh, The Associated Press North Carolina High School Player of the Year in 1980, keyed a decisive drive when he broke two tackles and rambled into the end zone from 18 yards out. Todd Auten's conversion gave the Wolfpack a 17-14 lead with 11:18 left in the period.

McIntosh finished with 131 yards in 19 carries.

Junior quarterback Tol Avery ran in from 1 yard out late in the period and extended the margin to 24-14 to put the game out of reach.

Auten added a 36-yard field goal with 6:55 to play to widen the gap to 27-14.

McEnroe, Lloyd Advance At U.S. Open

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe and Chris Evert Lloyd, the defending champions and No. 1 seeds, advanced easily Saturday into the fourth round of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

McEnroe, who has won here the last two years, stopped Pat DuPre 6-3, 6-2, 6-3, while Lloyd, going for her sixth title in seven years, crushed Alycia Moulton 6-3, 6-0.

Two of the top men's seeds, No. 3 Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia and No. 5 Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina, struggled in their third-round matches at the National Tennis Center in Flushing Meadow, while No. 11 Peter McNamara of Australia was upset by Bruce Manson, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Lendl beat back an upset bid by little-known Mark Vines 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, while Clerc needed five sets to eliminate Mel Purcell 6-3, 0-6, 0-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Duk Hee Lee of South Korea upset No. 9 Virginia Ruzici of Romania 6-1, 4-6, 7-5, staving off five match points. Ruzici had led 5-3 in the third set when a line call caused her to lose her concentration and, eventually, the match.

In other matches, third-seeded Tracy Austin eliminated Pam Casale 6-3, 6-0; No. 5 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia stopped Britain's Glynis Coles 6-2, 6-1; No. 12 Bettina Bunge of West Germany defeated Leigh Ann Thompson 2-6, 7-6, 6-3, and No. 14 Kathy Jordan beat Corinne Vanier of France 6-2, 6-1.

In men's singles, No. 7 Gene Mayer defeated Dick Stockton 6-4, 6-4, 6-1 and No. 15 Vitas Gerulaitis ousted Harold Solomon 6-3, 6-2, 6-1.

McEnroe lost his serve only once, in the seventh game of the first set, as he cruised to victory. The brash left-hander served five aces in the third set, three of them coming on second serves as he dominated his foe.

Lloyd also had an easy time posting her third consecutive victory. She was bothered by Moulton's big serve in the first set, but her steady baseline game with infrequent forays to the net were too much for her opponent.

Clerc and Purcell battled for 2 hours, 22 minutes in the nationally televised match on CBS. The right-hander from Murray, Ky., who looks smaller than his listed height of 5-foot-10, caught a tired Clerc, who had played a five-setter Friday in the second round.

"I think he was physically tired from yesterday," Purcell said afterwards. But the experienced Clerc, who won four straight tournaments and 24 matches — all on clay — earlier this year, battled back after losing the second and third sets without winning a game.

"I tried to go to the net because I felt so tired," Clerc said in explaining how Purcell captured two love sets with passing shots.

"I still haven't learned how to play the big point," said Purcell. "I tried to run him, but he made some tremendous passing shots.

"He mentally overtook me. He's had the expeience."

Vines, a 23-year-old left-hander from Richmond, Va., won three matches, losing only one set, to qualify for the tournament. He then beat Russell Simpson of New Zealand and Eddie Edwards of South Africa to gain his third-round meeting with Lendl.

If Lendl thought he would have an easy time with the unknown Vines, the former Southern Methodist University star quickly changed his mind.

Vines' groundstrokes were a match for Lendl, who preferred to play from the baseline. The Virginian, who isn't even ranked among the top 40 on the Penn satellite circuit, also was aggressive at the net.

Vines broke Lendl's serve in the seventh game of the opening set, and the Czechoslovakianlreturned the favor in the sixth game of the second set. Those were the only breaks in the first two games.

But, like Clerc, Lendl's experience paid off as he boomed his first serve in, ran Vines around the court and took charge after losing his serve in the opening game of the third set.

Lendl, down 0-2 in the third set, won the next seven games to take a 1-0 lead in the final set.

The third set was delayed 19 minutes when smoke from an incinerator wafted onto the grandstand court.

Clemson Whips Woffard

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Wofford, a small college football power, was not expected to give Clemson much trouble Saturday. But the Terriers from nearby Spartanburg, S.C., refused to roll over and play dead in the teams' season opener.

Clemson, an Atlantic Coast Conference member, and Wofford of the NAIA played on even terms for two quarters before Clemson's more powerful offense ground out a 45-10 victory.

"Wofford had the best game plan to go against us of any team since I've been at Clemson," said head coach Danny Ford, who is beginning his third full season.

"They ran us ragged in the first half with their misdirection plays," Ford said. "They did a super job. That's a tribute to coach (Buddy) Sasser and his staff and the boys who are playing for him."

Clemson trailed 3-0 at early in the game and at halftime led by only 17-3.

Ford said his offense and kickers performed well. But, he added, "We've got to get our pass defense a little better because I know that Tulane is going to throw the ball."

Clemson plays at Tulane next Saturday.

Sasser said, "We played awfully hard but we got very tired at the end."

The Wofford coach said he did not think the game was as lopsided as the score indicated.

"The loss doesn't help us, but I don't think it hurt us. We lost to a class outfit and it was a good experience," Sasser added.

In Saturday's contest, Clemson quarterback Homer Jordan ran for two touchdowns and threw for two others to dominate scoring for the Tigers.

Five Clemson players scored touchdowns and sophomore place kicker Donald Igwebuike began his college career in grand fashion, kicking a 52-yard field goal on his first attempt.

Penalties, fumbles and interceptions plagued both teams. Wofford's only touchdown, on a 15-yard pass from quarterback Barry Thompson to tight end Dirk Derrick, was set up by a Clemson fumble.

Wofford scored on the opening series of the game, driving from its 20-yard line to the Clemson 7 before Don Hairston kicked a 24-yard field goal.

Clemson tied the game less than two minutes later on the field goal by Igwebuike, a Nigerian who was recruited to play on the Clemson soccer team.

The Tigers, of the Atlantic Coast Conference, then scored five touchdowns before Wofford, 13th ranked in the NAIA, could score again.

Clemson split end Perry Tuttle scored in the second period on an 80-yard pass play from Jordan.

Jordan increased the score to 16-3 late in the first half by running 14 yards for a touchdown. Bob Paulling kicked the first of five extra points.

In the third quarter, Clemson wide receiver Frank Magwood caught an 11-yard touchdown pass from Jordan, and the junior quarterback ran 3 yards for another score.

Tailback Chuck McSwain and fullback Jeff McCall scored on runs of 5 and 10 yards, respectively, to close out the scoring for Clemson.

Tuttle was the game's leading pass receiver with 4 receptions for 180 yards. But Magwood became the first Clemson player other than Tuttle to catch a touchdown pass since 1978.

Leading the Clemson ground attack, which netted 285 yards, was tailback Clifford Austin. He picked up 95 yards and a number of important first downs.

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Jay Haas strung together four birdies on the last nine holes to break out of a tie with Tom Kite and Denis Watson and take a three-stroke lead after three rounds of the $275,000 B.C. Open golf tournament Saturday.

Haas shot a third round 2-under-par 69 to go into Sunday's final round with a 12-under-par 201 total for the first 54 holes. He shot a 65 Friday to take the lead after opening the tournament at the En-Joie Country Club course with a 67.

First-round leader Calvin Peete, who opened the tournament with a 6-under-par 64, ballooned to a 2-over-par 73 in the third round and fell six strokes behind the leader.

Kite looked strong early Saturday, making birdies on four of the first five holes to briefly lead the field by a stroke before making a bogey on the sixth hole. Kite finished the day with a 69, making him the closest challenger at three strokes behind Haas.

Watson, a newcomer to the tour from South Africa, bogeyed three holes on the back nine and finished with a 70, putting him four strokes behind Haas, along with Bobby Clampett.

Gary McCord moved to within one stroke of the leaders after the first nine holes Saturday, but faltered on the back nine, making a double bogey on No. 17 that left him seven strokes off the pace.

Three days of rain have drenched the upstate New York course.

"The course is long past being saturated. It is really wet out there," said Kite. "Certainly the wet grass has something to do with how close you hit the ball and I just wasn't hitting the ball as close as I wanted."

Despite his three-stroke lead, Haas picked Kite as the man to beat Sunday.

"He's the guy to beat. He's been playing so well. I kind of have to watch him. I thought he was going to run away with it today," Haas said.

Kite came into the tournament as the fourth-leading money-winner on the tour this year. He won this tournament in 1978 and was not conceding the 1981 title to Haas.

"I still feel like I have an excellent chance," Kite said.

Dye Wins Opener At Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — It was billed as Pat Dye's debut at Auburn. But the Tigers 24-16 victory Saturday over Texas Christian also rated as a remarkable debut for freshman fullback Ron O'Neal.

A 245-pounder out of Atlanta, Ga., O'Neal ran for two scores and set up a third with a 32-yard fourth-down ramble that helped make Auburn's season opener a success.

"It wasn't very pretty, but it was win," said Dye. "We seemed to start out slowly, but we came on and won. It was late in the first quarter before we really got rolling on offense."

That was when O'Neal, after a few middling rushes for little yardage, shouldered over from a yard out to put Auburn ahead 7-3. Then he electrified the crowd with a 25-yard scoring run up the middle and later bolted 32 yards to set up a third score, all in the first half.

Leg cramps sidelined O'Neal for the rest of the day, but 75 yards on 11 rushes in the first half staked Auburn to a margin it was able to hold.

"We didn't tackle in the first half and that's what settled it," said TCU Coach F.A. Dry. "We had opportunities but didn't capitalize."

TCU's junior halfback, Marcus Gilbert, scored on runs of 80 and 13 yards to keep the Horned Frogs close. And TCU quarterback Steve Stamp teamed with flanker Stanley Washington in a brilliant aerial display throughout the game.

But Stamp was unable to push TCU across for a possible tie late in the fourth quarter, and its Southeastern Conference opponent ran out the clock on the Southwest Conference visitors.

O'Neal, who decided to go to Auburn after initially signing with Florida State University, shouldered across from one yard out to give Auburn a 7-3 lead in the first quarter. Then he shed tacklers at the line and burst up the middle for 25 yards to make it 14-3 early in the second quarter. His 32-yard run set up a Charles Thomas to Chris Woods touchdown pass for Auburn's third score in the first half.

Auburn's Al Del Greco was good on all three points after and kicked a 24-yard field goal in the fourth quarter to round out the Tigers' scoring.

TCU's Greg Porter kicked a 29-yard field goal to open the scoring in the first quarter.

ASU 48
Lenoir-Rhyne 9

BOONE, N.C., (AP) — Sophomore fullback Alvin Parker scored four touchdowns to spark Appalachian State to an easy 48-9 victory over Lenoir-Rhyne in non-conference college football action Saturday.

Parker, a 210-pounder from Norfolk, Va., carried the ball 29 times for 110 yards and caught 6 passes for 45 yards. He scored on a 12-yard pass reception from Stan Goodson and runs of 29, 1 and 3 yards.

The Mountaineers dominated Lenoir-Rhyne, racking up 240 yards rushing and 288 passing. Goodson completed 8 of 15 passes for 101 yards before being shaken up late in first half. Sophomore substitute Randy Joyce stepped in to hit on 16 of 23 passes for 187 yards.

N.C. Central 7
Livingstone 3

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Michael Worthy ran nine yards around the left side with 3:49 remaining to lift North Carolina Central to a 7-3 victory over Livingstone in a Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association college football game Saturday.

Andrew Riddick's kickoff return following a Livingstone field goal moved the ball from the Eagles 21-yard line to the Bears' 47. Seven plays later Worthy put his club on top to stay. Joel Massey added the conversion attempt.

Livingstone had broken a scoreless tie with 7:21 remaining on Vincent Gore's 36-yard field goal.

Both clubs were hampered by the rain. North Carolina Central fumbled nine times and Livingston five, each club losing a pair.

Reserve quarterback Gregory Grayson led the final charge with 4 of 6 passing for 45 yards after taking over for injured starter Daniel Smith.

Mississippi 19
Tulane 18

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Kelly Powell hit senior flanker Breck Tyler with a 39-yard scoring toss with 1:01 left in the game to rally Mississippi to a 19-18 victory over Tulane after the Rebels had frittered away a 12-0 lead in the college football game.

Providing Mississippi's only real offensive spark of the second half, Powell marched the Rebels 86 yards in the final three minutes of the game for the winning touchdown.

Junior kicker Todd Gatlin booted the extra point to give Mississippi its narrow margin of victory.

Mississippi opened a 12-0 lead on a two-yard run by Buford McGee in the first quarter and on field goals of 22 yards and 27 yards by Gatlin in the first half.

Seeing his first varsity action ever, sophomore quarterback Wade Elmore hit 14 of 25 passes and had apparently rallied Tulane to victory after a lethargic first half.

Elmore capped a 59-yard drive with a 1-yard sneak to get Tulane on the boards midway through the third quarter, and hit tight end Rodney Holman with 7-yard fourth-quarter pass to put Tulane ahead after Vince Manalla hit a 48-yard third-quarter field goal.

Britz Leads LPGA Classic

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Jerilyn Britz, absent from the tour the past two weeks, fired a 67 Saturday to take the lead after the first round of the $125,000 LPGA Rail Charity Golf Classic.

The eight-year tour veteran, who has only two victories in her pro career, was alone atop a field of 101 in the 54-hole event.

She played what she called an "uneventful round" on the 6,281-yard Rail Golf Club course, with three birdies on the front nine and three on the back side en route to her total of 67, 5 under par.

Two strokes back at 69 were Dale Lundquist, Vicki Fergon, Patty Sheehan and Patty Hayes.

Another five golfers were tied at 70, including veterans JoAnne Carner and Pat Bradley, ranked second and third this year on the LPGA money list.

The leading money winner this year, Donna Caponi, passed up the tournament.

Defending champion Nancy Lopez-Melton, rejoining the tour after a shoulder injury, was among nine golfers at 71, 1 under par.

Lopez-Melton double-bogeyed the first hole, but birdied two of the last three to put herself back in the running.

With only three rounds on the par-72 course instead of the usual four, the golfers were wary of falling too far behind on the first day.

"If you mess up one day, you don't have time to recover," remarked Britz after finishing one of her best rounds of the year.

The Luverne, Minn., resident made headlines in 1979 when she won the LPGA Open, but admits she's fallen on hard times this season.

"It's been a little more of a struggle this year than it has been the past couple of years," Britz said.

She was using a new set of irons that arrived in Springfield by airplane Saturday night, and she said they helped.

"The irons kept me in the game," she said. "When the ball is going where you're looking, it makes it a lot easier."

Miami Upsets Florida

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger faced a difficult decision Saturday with his team trailing 17th-ranked Florida 20-18 and only 45 seconds to play.

Miami faced a fourth-and-14 situation at the Florida 38 and Schnellenberger said he had trouble deciding whether to go for a first down or send Danny Miller in to try a 55-yard field goal.

Miller made the choice easy.

"I knew I could do it. I was just hoping to get the chance to try," said Miller, whose kick hit the left upright and bounced through to lift the Hurricanes to a 21-20 upset victory in the college football opener for both clubs.

"The coach didn't know if I could kick it that far. He asked me and I said, 'Yeah, if it's only 55.'"

Miller, who created a stir last November when he kicked a field goal as time expired in a 31-7 Miami rout of the Gators, was mobbed at midfield by teammates as a crowd of 73,817 went wild.

"What's so great about it is that he told me he could make it. That's the reason we sent him out there," said Schnellenberger. "If he'd said he couldn't kick it that far, we would've tried something else."

Florida Coach Charley Pell said Miami's decision to kick a field goal was "great."

"That youngster made a great kick. We thought it was out of his range," Pell said.

Junior quarterback Mark Richt, who replaced injured starter Jim Kelly in the third quarter, directed the game-winning drive, which began at the Miami 36-yard line with 2:48 remaining.

A key play in the march which reached the Florida 34 was a 20-yard completion to reserve tight end Glenn Dennison. Three plays later, Miller came on in a fourth-and-14 situation and kicked the winning three-pointer.

Florida took the ensuing kickoff and drove to the Miami 42-yard line, but Brian Clark's 59-yard field goal attempt fell short as time ran out.

Fullback James Jones ran 7 yards for a touchdown and a 7-3 Florida lead after senior defensive tackle David Galloway picked off a Kelly pass at the Miami 25 and rambled 18 yards.

Florida's second touchdown — a 37-yard scoring pass from Wayne Peace to wide receiver Spencer Jackson — came after an interception by sophomore safety Tony Lilly.

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Quarterback Jim McMahon, the nation's leading passer last season, threw for 403 yards Saturday to pace 16th-ranked Brigham Young to a 31-6 non-conference football victory over Long Beach State in the 1981 opener for both teams.

McMahon completed 28 of his 45 passes and had two throws intercepted. He did not connect for any scores, however, as the BYU defense provided two touchdowns and the others came on runs.

The Cougars clinched the game with 14 points in the third quarter after leading 17-0 at halftime. Running back Waymon Hamilton scored BYU's third touchdown of the game on a 2-yard burst midway through the third period. Safety Tom Holmoe provided the next Cougar touchdown when he blocked a punt by the 49ers' Mike Horan and recovered the ball in the Long Beach end zone late in the third quarter.

Texas A&M 29
California 28

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Texas A&M shut out California in the second half and David Hardy's third field goal of the day capped a 29-28 comeback victory for the Aggies in a non-conference college football opener Saturday.

The Aggies erased a 12-point deficit with a six-yard touchdown run by Johnny Hector and field goals of 40 and 30 yards by Hardy. The latter gave Texas A&M its winning margin with 6:15 to play.

California had taken a 28-16 lead in the first half, when speedster Floyd Eddings caught three touchdown passes, the last a 62-yarder from junior quarterback Jay Torchio.

Torchio, who entered the game in the first quarter after starter Gale Gilbert suffered a knee injury, also threw an 11-yard scoring pass to Eddings and ran four yards for a touchdown.

Mississippi 19
Tulane 18

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Sophomore quarterback Kelly Powell hit senior flanker Breck Tyler with a 39-yard scoring toss with 1:01 left in the game to rally Mississippi to a 19-18 victory over Tulane after the Rebels had frittered away a 12-0 lead in the college football game.

Providing Mississippi's only real offensive spark of the second half, Powell marched the Rebels 86 yards in the final three minutes of the game for the winning touchdown.

Junior kicker Todd Gatlin booted the extra point to give Mississippi its narrow margin of victory.

Mississippi opened a 12-0 lead on a two-yard run by Buford McGee in the first quarter and on field goals of 22 yards and 27 yards by Gatlin in the first half.

Seeing his first varsity action ever, sophomore quarterback Wade Elmore hit 14 of 25 passes and had apparently rallied Tulane to victory after a lethargic first half.

Pitt Romps Past Illinois

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Junior quarterback Dan Marino, unruffled by a shaky start, threw two touchdown passes to lead eighth-ranked Pittsburgh to a 26-6 victory over Illinois Saturday in their college football opener.

Marino hit only two of 14 passes the first half, but one of them was a 19-yard touchdown toss to flanker Dwight Collins that gave Pitt a 14-0 lead with 1:20 left in the first quarter.

The score came one play after Illinois' Chris Sigourney shanked a 16-yard punt out of bounds.

Earlier in the first quarter, Pitt's Wayne DiBartola ran four yards for a touchdown, set up by a fumble by Illinois running back Darrell Smith at his own 11.

Illinois' Mike Bass kicked a 46-yard field goal with 32 seconds left before halftime. The visitors got possession again with one second left when Pitt punter Dave Heppler was tackled at his own 16, and Bass added a 33-yard field goal as the half ended to cut the lead to 14-6.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Fullback Donald Ray King scored one touchdown and helped set up a field goal before leaving with an injury as 14th-ranked Mississippi State rolled to a 20-3 football victory over the Memphis State Tigers Saturday afternoon.

Sophomore quarterback John Bond led the Bulldogs to a field goal and two touchdowns on three straight possessions in the first half to seal the victory against the inexperienced but pesky Tigers in the opener for both teams.

King, a 210-pound senior, raced 27 yards to the Memphis State 38 in the first quarter as the Bulldogs scored on Dana Moore's 39-yard field goal and then blasted three yards for a touchdown early in the second period.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Freshmen Mike Rendina, Billy Allen and Jesse Hester scored all the points Saturday night as 19th-ranked Florida State blew by Louisville 17-0 in a season-opening college football game.

Tailback Allen, discovered at a European coaching clinic playing Air Force football, broke away on a late 50-yard scoring jaunt to put the contest out of the Cardinals' reach. His touchdown with 4:56 to play ended a defensive struggle that began after Florida State posted a 10-point lead in the first quarter.

Rendina, a kicker from Pompano Beach, Fla., put his first points on the scoreboard just 5:45 into his college football career when he made a 14-yard field goal. Later, he added two extra points.

FSU defensive back Larry Harris set up the scoring opportunity when he recovered a fumbled punt return by Louisville's Mark Clayton on the Cardinals' 14-yard line.

Tampa Bay Edges Minnesota, 21-13

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Quarterback Doug Williams hurled a 55-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Kevin House and scrambled 10 yards up the middle for another touchdown Saturday night to lead the Tampa Bay Buccaneers to a 21-13 victory over the Minnesota Vikings in the National Football League's season opener.

Tampa safety Neal Colzie guaranteed the victory when he picked off a Steve Dils pass at the Bucs' 18 yard-line and returned it 82 yards for a touchdown to put the game out of the Vikings reach with 21 second left.

Although he completed only 8 of 22 passes for 108 yards, Williams came up with the big plays as the Bucs outpaced the defending National Football Conference Central Division champions and broke Minnesota's four-game winning streak at Tampa Stadium.

Williams' bomb to House gave Tampa a 7-0 lead in the first quarter and the Bucs clung to that advantage until Minnesota's Rick Danmeier kicked third period field goals of 45 and 25 yards as the Vikings closed the deficit to 7-6.

Williams took charge in the fourth period, however, scrambling 15 yards on a rollout to keep a 76-yard scoring drive alive. The fourth-year pro from Grambling scrambled again on a second-and-seven situation from the Vikings 10 and broke several tackles as he made his way to the end zone

Slaton's No-Hit Bid Ends In 9th

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Milwaukee veteran Jim Slaton hurled no-hit ball against Minnesota for eight innings, but saw hit bid for baseball immortality dashed in the ninth when he allowed three hits, including Hosken Powell's three-run homer.

The Brewers, with another save from Rollie Fingers, held on for a 5-3 triumph, but Slaton was visibly discouraged with the way the game ended.

"It was very much a disappointment when that hit fell in," said Slaton, referring to Sal Butera's soft line single to left field to lead off the ninth. "It was a looping line drive that no one could have caught and I lost my concentration after that hit."

Pinch-hitter Kent Hrbek followed with a clean single to right and then Powell, a .240 hitter, belted his first homer of the year over the right center field fence.

"He was getting tired," said Powell. "He was using his breaking ball most of the game, but then he got a fastball up over the plate."

"He might have been fatigued," said Butera, who also broke up a no-hit bid by New York's Dave Righetti in the fifth inning on Monday night. "I didn't feel any pressure. If I had been the last player up in the inning with a no-hitter then I might have."

Slaton, 5-6, had faced just one batter over the minimum entering the ninth. He walked Powell in the first inning, but he was thrown out trying to steal.

"I started thinking about the no-hitter in the fifth inning," said the 31-year old Slaton, who tossed a no-hitter in the minor leagues in 1972 at Evansville. "That's when I started getting my breaking ball over the plate. Ted Simmons calld a great game. He told me to pitch outside early and then I could come inside later."

"He had an excellent breaking ball and super control," said Simmons, who caught two no-hitters while with St. Louis. "That second slider he threw to Butera was a good pitch. Butera didn't hit it very hard."

Slaton retired 12 consecutive batters between the second and sixth innings and then seven straight after the walk to Butera.

"I thought he was going to get the no-hitter," said Brewers' manager Bob Rodgers. "After the fifth inning nobody said a word in the dugout."

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dave Righetti retired the first 11 Kansas City hitters and Graig Nettles scored both runs Saturday as the New York Yankees slipped past Kansas City 2-1.

Righetti, 5-2, faced the minimum number of batters until George Brett doubled with two out in the fourth. Brett had singled in the first but was cut down trying for second on a throw from right fielder Reggie Jackson.

The Yankees managed only four hits off Larry Gura, 9-6, who had won five straight decisions in the second half.

Nettles walked leading off the fifth and scored two outs later when Willie Randolph doubled into left field.

The Royals, snapping a scoreless string of 19 innnings, tied it in the sixth. Willie Wilson singled leading off, then was awarded second base when Umpire Ken Kaiser charged Righetti with a balk. Wilson stole third and scored when Amos Otis rifled an 0-2 pitch into center field for a single.

Montreal Ends Astros' Win Streak At 9 Games

NATIONAL LEAGUE

MONTREAL (AP) — Andre Dawson cracked a two-run homer and Tim Raines added a solo blast to support the eight-hit pitching of Ray Burris as the Montreal Expos snapped a nine-game Houston winning streak with a 5-2 victory over the Astros Saturday.

Burris, 7-5, undefeated in four decisions since the baseball strike, struck out four and walked one in recording his first victory over the Astros since July 31, 1977, while with the Chicago Cubs. Burris allowed only two RBI singles to Alan Ashby, one in the second inning and another in the ninth.

Dawson staked Burris to a 2-0 lead in the first inning with his home run off from Don Sutton, 7-8, after Rodney Scott singled. It was Dawson's 20th homer of the year and came at a time when Montreal had been held to one run in their last 29 innings.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bill Buckner drove in four runs, three with a homer in the first inning, and collected three hits to lead Chicago to an 8-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday, snapping a five-game losing streak for the Cubs.

Mike Krukow, 5-8, benefited from the Cubs' 13-hit attack against four Giant pitchers and four errors in pitching his first complete game of the season. He struck out a career high 11 batters, while scattering 11 singles.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Rose's two-run single climaxed a two-out rally by Philadelphia in the eighth inning Saturday night and gave the Phillies a 5-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Mario Soto, 8-8, had two outs and none on in the eighth before Greg Gross walked and Manny Trillo singled. Tom Hume replaced Soto and walked Lonnie Smith to load the bases before Rose lined a single to left field.

George Foster's leadoff home run in the top of the eighth had given the Reds a 4-3 lead.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Terry Crowley hit a three-run home run in the sixth inning and John Lowenstein followed with the first of his two solo homers to rally the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-3 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday night.

Crowley, who was 0-for-16 at the plate, smacked a 2-1 pitch from Rick Langford, 8-9, into the right field bleachers for his third homer of the season. The blast came with Ken Singleton and Eddie Murray, both of whom had singled, on base and wiped out a 3-0 Oakland lead.

Lowenstein then walloped a 1-0 pitch over the right field fence for his fifth homer of the season and a 4-3 Baltimore lead. Lowenstein hit his second homer off Langford in the eighth.

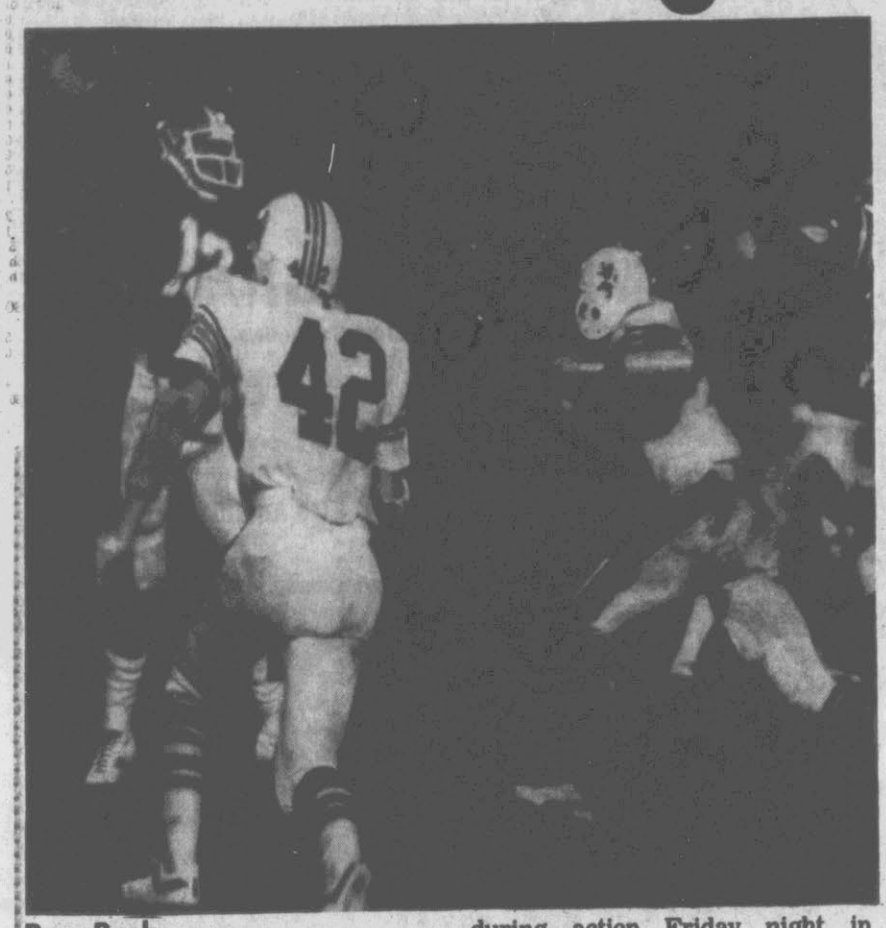
Rose's Magic Act Makes Win Appear



Pass Rush
Rose High School's Jeff Porter (42) is joined by another unidentified teammate as they rush Jacksonville quarterback Elliott Johnson (13) during action Friday night in Jacksonville. By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School used a little "magic" to produce a 15-14 victory over Jacksonville Friday night in the opening game of the season for the Rampants.

Part of the magic was the pass catching ability of Chris "Magic" McLawhorn, who hauled in four passes for 88 yards, two of them for touchdowns, and another helping to set up a first-half ending field goal.

The other magic was an "appearing" act. Rose High School, after presenting a non-existant defense in the first half, made a defense appear in the second, shutting Jacksonville down completely.

Compare: in the first half, Jacksonville ran and passed its way to 239 yards. The only thing that stopped the Cardinals was their own mistakes. The highly undiciplined Cards posted eight penalties for 83 yards during the half.

In the second half, however, Rose held the Cards completely in check. They allowed only one first down — on the first series of the half — and gave up a total of just 30 yards in offense.

McLawhorn, with touchdown receptions of 29 and 31 yards on Barry Smith passes, also had a 92-yard punt return for a score negated by a clip behind the play. It marked the third time in the last two years that McLawhorn has had a touchdown off a punt return wiped out by a clip that did not really affect the gain.

The field goal of 26 yards, by Ernest Reeves, capped a 56-yard drive at the end of the first half which saw Rose miss out on two touchdown chances in the final seconds before electing to go with the kick.

Jacksonville's two touchdowns were scored by Tyrone Currence on a three yard run, and by Darryl Thompson on a seven-yard pass from quarterback Elliot Johnson.

In the first half of the game, it appeared Rose was trying to stop Jacksonville with a defense patterned after a broken sieve. Jacksonville was able to move the ball better through the air, accounting for 94 yards in the first half, coming back late to pick up 145 on the ground with a couple of late long gains.

But in the second half, Rose was up to the task. "They were using some unusual splits in the game, and it took us a while to get our feet on the ground," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "We finally were able to make an adjustment at halftime, and it did the trick."

Vincent acknowledged that the Rampants made a number of mistakes in their opening game, but he was generally pleased. "We had a few things that could have been critical for us: the clip on Chris' punt return, when we were off-sides when they fumbled that punt, things like that. It could have hurt us, but I think our kids showed a great deal of character by fighting back."

Down 14-6 late in the first half, Vincent pointed out, it would have been easy for Rose to have folded. "But we took the ball with what, under a minute left and took it down for that field goal. That won the game for us. They had their backs to the wall and they did it."

And Vincent had some things to say about McLawhorn too. "Can you believe the catches he made. They were just super. How people are overlooking him as one of the best receivers in the state, I just don't know. But many more nights like tonight, and they'll know."

Three of the four McLawhorn catches were super — there is no other way to describe them.

On his first touchdown pass, he went up between two defenders, making the leaping catch and holding on as he crashed to the turf in the end zone. The second scoring catch was almost a carbon copy, but this time with just single coverage.

And the catch that set up the field goal came at the sidelines, as he again had to leap for the ball, and still get his feet down inside before going out of bounds.

Jacksonville, however, had the first threat of the game. Taking over at their own 44 following the initial kickoff, the Cards moved down to the Rose 13 before a deadball foul for unsportsmanlike conduct put them into a second and 24 situation at the 27. They failed to come up with another first down there, as Buddy Halbert dropped a pass in his hands in the end zone.

Rose then took over and marched 82 yards for its opening score. One of the key plays was an inside reverse by Donnell Lee that moved it 16 yards to the Jacksonville 47. A few plays later, Lee pulled in a Smith pass for 24 yards to the 24. Then, on third and 15 from the 29, Smith hit McLawhorn on the leaping catch in the end zone for the score. Reeves' kick, however, was just wide, and Rose led, 6-0, with 4:44 left in the quarter.

The Cards, however, came roaring back and scored in just seven plays, marching 42 yards after Rose picked up a 15-yard penalty for piling on on the runback of the kickoff.

Lovelle Currence made the key gain, a 15-yard burst, for a first down just inside the ten.

Conley Snaps Loss Skid With 19-6 Win Over SWE

HOLLYWOOD — "The monkey is gone now," one assistant coach observed as the D.H. Conley Vikings snapped a 14-game losing skid Friday night, beating Southwest Edgecombe, 19-6.

"How sweet it is," Coach Gerald Garner, in his first year at the helm of the Viking ship said.

The upset victory came as the Vikings took advantage of Cougar mistakes in the first quarter to set up two scores, then drove 82 yards in the closing minutes of the second period to sew it up with their third touchdown.

Tommy Joyner put the Vikings on the scoreboard with only about four minutes gone in the game when he went over from the three. The Vikings had gotten the ball at the 30 after Southwest fumbled a punt.

About five minutes later, the Vikings again pounced on a loose ball, at the Southwest 25, and turned that into their second score. Jeff Manning hit Greg Toler on a 20-yard pass for that score and Conley held a 12-0 lead as the quarter ended.

In the second period, Conley took over late on its own 18 and drove 82 yards to pay dirt again. This time, Steven King raced the final 19 yards, with Doug McRoy adding the extra point for a 19-0 lead at halftime.

Southwest, which had ripped North Edgecombe, 55-0, last week, scored early in the second half, after Conley fumbled at its own ten yard line. Wayne Mayo went in from a yard away for the score.

Just after the kickoff, Conley fumbled again, but held at the 15. Southwest had one other opportunity, getting to the 18 before giving up the ball.

Conley had one other apparent touchdown called back, when Jesse Maye raced 98 yards only to have the play called back by a clip well behind the play.

Maye led the Conley offense with 101 yards in 15 carries. The defense was led by James Boyd and Michael Long, while Alfred Ross recovered two fumbles and had an interception.

The Vikings, now 1-1, travel to North Pitt on Friday.

Clinton Rallies To Top Jaguars, 29-6

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central coach Gilbert Carroll knew Clinton was good, but just how good? The first-year coach found out Friday night.

After falling behind early, Clinton surged back behind a defense that allowed Farmville just 49 yards total offense in the final three periods and an offense that saw John Richardson rush for 151 yards and two touchdowns.

When the final results were tallied the Dark Horses had won, 29-6, spoiling Carroll's first home game as the Jaguars' head coach.

"They just whipped our butts," Carroll said afterwards as his team silently filed into the lockerroom. "We couldn't stop them — that was the big thing. Their offense just beat us."

With a little help from the Dark Horse defense. While the Clinton offense was rolling up 351 yards total offense — 312 on the ground — the Clinton defense, a 5-2 with a monster man, was holding the Jaguars to three first downs and 49 yards total offense in the final three periods.

Had it not been for an 85-yard touchdown run in the first period by Farmville halfback Wesley Carmon, Farmville Central's offensive production would have been nil. Carmon finished the night with 121 yard on 13 carries.

"We had some good spots, but as you can see we had (receivers) open but we couldn't get a quarterback to hit them," Carroll said. "And we dropped a few also."

Going into the game Carroll knew the Dark Horses would be bigger and stronger than the Jaguars. What he hoped to do was run around the ends. Early on the strategy worked.

Fullback James Moore sliced ahead for 13 yards on the Jaguars' first play from scrimmage. Carmon then carried three straight times for a second first down before the drive stalled at midfield.

Clinton managed two first downs on its initial series — one an 18-yard run by Richardson — before being forced to punt from its own 45. Two plays later the Jaguars crossed the goalline.

On first down from the 17 Carmon was thrown for a two-yard loss. On the next play the 5-10, 156-pound junior halfback took the handoff, avoided a would-be tackler along the line and then raced down the left sideline untouched for an 85-yard touchdown.

James Streeter's kick was blocked but the Jaguars led, 6-0, with 4:50 left in the period.

"For the first two or three series we did what we wanted," Carroll said. "But then they shut down the outside game and I don't know what happened on the inside. I don't know if we got tired or what.

"But at that point I thought we'd get one or two more runs like that, but I knew they had been moving the ball and if we couldn't stop them they'd come back."

Clinton did just that. Taking the ball on their 20 late in the first period, the Dark Horse put together a 12-play, 80-yard scoring drive.

With third and five from the 25, Richardson twisted up the middle for 15 yards and a first down. Six plays later Ray Bolton drove up the middle for 15 yards down to the Farmville 29.

After a run netted a yard, Dwayne Parker worked himself free behind the Farmville secondary and quarterback Joel Coleman hit him for a 23-yard gain to the six.

Bolton, a 5-8, 155-pound junior halfback, then ran the final six yards on the next play to tie the game with 9:33 left in the second period. Kenny Stafford's kick gave the Dark Horses a 7-6 lead, a lead they never lost.

Clinton's strength and size — on both offense and defense — began to show soon after.

On defense, the Dark Horses threw quarterback Jeff for an 11-yard loss, forcing Cutler out of the game with a knee injury and forcing the Jaguars to punt from the 19.

On offense, the Dark Horses began a seven-play drive from the Jaguar 44 following the punt for their second score on the game. Nelson Johnson, a 5-10, 148-pound senior, ran for 16 yards, the final three giving Clinton the ball on the 16.

From there, Coleman faked into the line and then lofted the ball to tight end Daren Lucas, who made an over-the-shoulder catch in the end zone for the touchdown. Bolton, after two consecutive Farmville Central penalities, ran for the two points to give the Dark Horses a 15-6 lead with 4:04 left until intermission.

Farmville was held to a minus 10 yards rushing and minus four yards total offense in the second half. It got worse in the third period.

Clinton, going more and more to the misdirection plays and traps that worked so effectively in the first half, took the opening kickoff in the second half and drove 59 yards in eight plays for its third score of the evening.

With first and 10 from the Farmville 48, Richardson carried three straight times for 24 yards. Parker then ripped off a 15-yard run to the 9. On the next play Richardson took the handoff and slanted in off tackle for the score. With Stafford's kick Clinton led, 22-6, with 8:36 to go in the quarter.

Farmville could not manage a first down on its next three series and was forced to punt after three plays on each. For the night, Jaguar punter Alan Wooten punted seven times for a 39.6 average.

The Dark Horses did not do much better the rest of the third period. But early in the fourth they were back again.

With the ball on the 40 following a five-yard run by Nelson Johnson, Richardson started to the left then cut back across field and outraced the Jaguars for a 55-yard scoring run with 10:59 left. Stafford's kick made it 29-6.

If that score did not seal the victory, the Clinton defense did. The Dark Horses did not allow Farmville inside their 40 in the second half and the Jaguars managed just three first downs — two in the final five minutes when both teams were substituting freely.

"Clinton has a super team," Carroll said. "We just couldn't stop them on offense."

Still, the loss did not discourage Carroll. "I think it was a case of the kids had won a game (20-7 over West Craven a week earlier), school had started and maybe the concentration was not what it should have been.

"But I think they're settled in now and we've got some good players. If we can get the good players and get them to play we'll be all right."

Farmville plays host to Ayden-Grifton Friday.

Farmville Central halfback Wesley Carmon (33) turns the corner en route to an 85-yard scoring run in the opening quarter against Clinton Friday night. Rampants Seek Titles In Four Sports

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's four non-revenue sports for the fall are all looking for banner years, with the hopes of conference championships in all four.

The Rampants field teams in cross-country, for both boys and girls, in girls' tennis and girls' volleyball.

Girls' Cross Country

Coach Butch Wahl's Rampettes are only into their second season with cross-country, but he feels that they could have a shot at the Big East title this year.

"We've got only one girl back, but we have more girls with track experience this year," Wahl said. The lone returning runner is senior Bobbie Holloway, who was the top runner for Rose last season.

Overall, eight girls are out for the team, an improvement over last year.

"If we can keep everyone out, I think we can have a real good year," Wahl said. "We have to stay healthy, and we have to show some improvement, too," he added.

The other members of the team include Angie Michel, who set the school record in the mile last spring; Cissy Taft, Carole Moore, Hope Streeter, Michelle Connolly, Teresa Greene and Kristine Ambert.

Only Kinston does not field a team in the conference, although some schools may not have a full compliment of runners.

"I think we have a good chance. Right now, we have three or four running where our best time was at the end of the season last year. So we're way ahead and we have some depth, too," Wahl said.

Volleyball

Another program only in its second year is volleyball, and coach Delores Bunting is hopeful that a championship can be brought home here.

"We have seven back from last year's team, so we have a good base of experience. So far we've looked real good in practice."

Rose, since there are no teams in the Big East, will compete in a conference with the three Wilmington schools, Hoggard, New Hanover and Laney. Home and home matches will be played with each. In addition, Rose will face Farmville Central, North Pitt and Conley in non-conference matches.

The veterans back on the team are Linda Winstead, Lisa Mills, Val White, Arlene valentine, Kathryn Yorke, Latonya Streeter and Frances Barnhill.

Those seven are joined by seven newcomers, Becky Dunn, Margaret Barnes, Jackie Grene, Suzanne Wille, Wendy Jones, Angie Atkinson and Susan Winstead.

"I think we're going to have a pretty good chance to win," Bunting said. "Wilmington started its program last year, so we should be about on the same level. So I'm hopeful that we can get into the playoffs. We'll get a pretty good idea of how well we will do when we play the non-conference matches. Those schools have all been in volleyball longer and should be good tests."

Tennis

Gwen Deyton's tennis team is another looking for a championship. Her Rampettes return five of the six regular from last season, and she feels she has more good depth that at any time in the past.

"Rocky Mount, Hunt and Fike are still going to be tough," she said, "but I think we really have a chance to challenge this year." Rose opened up strong, at any rate, downing New Bern, 9-0, in two straight matches.

Rounding out the top six is sophomore Louise Evans.

The five returning players include Lou Taft and Belinda Haselrig, both seniors, and juniors Paulene Bearden, Janet Mizelle, and Marsha Tart.

They are joined by two more juniors Barbara Little and Kristi Logue, who have teamed up as the number three doubles unit, and four other sophomores, Marjorie Jones, Jessica Perry, Mary Kathryn Clark and Hayes Warren.

"If we can get by Fike and Hunt, I think we have a real shot at winning the title," Deyton said. "We really have a balanced team. The first seven are all real close, so things have looked good to this point."

Boys' Cross-Country

Coming off the 1980 Big East championship, Rose went on to finish first in the sectionals and sixth in the state. This year, Rose is out to do it all again, and with everyone back, there should be no problem there.

Leading the parade will be outstanding seniors Harry Williams and Kenny Smith, who finished fourth and eighth, respectively in the state last year. They also finished first and second in the league and sectional matches. They hold most of the Eastern North Carolina records.

Joining them are veterans Chip Little, recovering from a broken toe; and John Byrd and John Ormond from the top five. David Steffensen also returns.

Newcomers include Tom Michaelson, Jeremiah Brown, Joe Norcutt, Greg Fidler, Matthew Clark, Paul Bowen, Will Hester, Jon Whichard, Frank Rabey, and Joel Rayle.

Coach Ron Hochmuth is looking for another banner year. "We're directing a lot of our action toward major invitationals. We will be going to the Wake Forest, Campbell, Richmond County and William & Mary invitations, plus running against our regular conference foes. Our ultimate goal is to improve upon our standing in the state."

Hochmuth said that Rose could be pushed if it gets complaisant. "We should be favored," he said. "Only complaisancy could hurt us."

Cox Paces Panthers To 29-8 Victory Over North Edgecombe

BETHEL — Led by Mitchell Cox's 106 yards rushing, North Pitt rolled up 267 yards on the ground to defeat North Edgecombe, 29-8, Friday night in a nonconference high school football game.

Cox went over the 100-yard mark for the second straight week in helping the Panthers win their first game in two outings under the guidance of new head coach B.T. Chappell. North Edgecombe is now 0-2.

After a scoreless first period, the Panthers took the lead with two touchdowns in the second quarter. Taking the ball at their 45, the Panthers put together a six-play drive for the go-ahead score.

On the first play, Tommy Harris bulled ahead for 11 yards. Five plays later William Rollins raced into the end zone from 15 yards out. Cox ran for the two points and North Pitt led, 8-0, with 9:34 left.

Three minutes later the Panthers were back for more. With the ball at the North Edgecombe 33, Greg Cobb ripped off a 13-yard run. Quarterback Ken Whitehurst then went over from five yards out moments later and with Dennis Bradley's kick North Pitt led, 15-0, with 6:05 to go.

North Pitt increased its lead to 21-0 midway through the third period. Bradley intercepted a pass at the North Edgecombe 28 and six plays later Harris ran it in from the three. The pass for two failed.

The Warriors, who lost a 55-0 decision to Southwest Edgecombe in their season opener last week, finally got on the board in 1981 moments later.

Tony Richardson took the ensing kickoff at the 10 and returned it to the North Pitt 30 where he lateralled to teammate Greg Battle. Battle ran the remaining 30 yards for the touchdown. Ken Hopkins hit Oliver Washington for the two points to make it 21-8 with 6:49 left in the period.

It stayed that way until early in the fourth period when Cobb intercepted a pass at the North Edgecombe seven. Cox subsequently ran it in from the one and with Harris' run for the two points, North Pitt led, 29-8, with 9:20 left in the game.

In going over the 100-yard mark again Cox now has 206 yards rushing in 42 carries this season. Harris had 65 yards on the ground in 12 carriers while Rollins gained 63 in eight rushes.

North Pitt plays host to county and Eastern Carolina Conference foe D.H. Conley Friday.

Ballesteros Leads European Open

HOYLAKE, England (AP) — Severiano Ballesteros of Spain shot a five-under-par 67 Saturday to open a four-stroke lead after the third round of the $200,000 European Open golf championship at Royal Liverpool.

Ballesteros, playing his first tournament in a month, had a three-round total of 203, 13-under-par, after sinking the last of his eight birdies on the final green.

The former British Open champion, left off the European Ryder Cup team that will meet the United States aggregation at Walton Heath later this month, said: "It is looking very good for me. I have been resting for the last few weeks and that has obviously done me good."

Graham Marsh of Australia and Irishman Des Smyth shared second place at 207. Marsh had a 68 Saturday, while 1smyth carded a 69.

Another back were Australian Greg Norman, who had a 71, and British club pro Brian Waites, who shattered the course record with a brilliant 64.

Tom McGinnis, at 216 after carding a par 72, was the leading American.

'Skins Slip By Chargers

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke took advantage of six Ayden-Grifton turnovers including two pass interceptions in the Redskin end zone in the final period to defeat the Chargers, 20-14, Friday night in a nonconference high school football game.

Roanoke used a fumble recovery and a 24-yard interception return by Joey Ross to jump out to a 14-0 lead. It was a lead the Redskins, now 2-0-0, never relinquished. Ayden-Grifton is now 0-1-0.

"We feel our own mistakes led to our downfall," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said. "We just made too many mistakes."

Indeed. In the final period the Chargers saw two passes into the end zone intercepted (Roanoke intercepted four passes in all). But the killing blow came when, with 1:04 left in the game, the Chargers fumbled on the Roanoke four-yard line.

Roanoke's first score of the game came after the Redskins recovered an A-G fumble on the 30.

A 28-yard pass from Angelo Spruill to Kenny Wilson put the ball on the two. Moments later Calvin Andrews, who had 75 yards rushing on 11 carriers, went over from the one. The run for two failed, but Roanoke led, 6-0, with 6:20 left in the opening period.

Ross then intercepted a Bernard Ricciarelli pass on the 24 and raced into the end zone for the Redskins' second TD of the night. John Jackson ran for the two points and Roanoke led, 14-0, with 9:36 left in the second quarter.

Ayden-Grifton, which had seven more first downs than the Redskins, finally got on the board midway through the period, driving 92 yards in 11 plays for their first TD of the 1981 season.

In the march, Cleveland Coley, who had 69 yards rushing on 12 carries, ripped off a 31 yard run to the Roanoke 49 and Greg Jackson followed that with a 19 yard run. Jackson, who finished the night with 66 yards on 13 attempts, got the TD on a one-yard run. The run for two failed, but A-G had cut the deficit to 14-6 with 7:47 left.

Neither team scored again until late in the period when the Redskins drove nearly the length of the field with less than a minute to go to pad their lead.

With two and 15 from the 26, Andrews unleashed a 49 yard run to give the Redskins the ball on the A-G 25. On the next play, quarterback Angelo Spruill hit Ricky Hines for the TD with 13 seconds left in the half. The run failed, but Roanoke led, 20-6.

Ayden-Grifton threatened throughout much of the second half but could not score until there was just 6:36 remaining in the game. Following a fake punt that the Chargers snuffed out at the Roanoke 26, Jackson capped a six-play drive with a one-yard run. Ricciarelli then hit Chris Strickland for the two points and A-G had closed to within six at 20-14.

The Chargers, however, could get no closer. "We threatened the entire second half," Sauls said. "But turnovers killed us."

Ayden-Grifton travels to Farmville Friday, while Roanoke entertains Washington.

James' Overtime Score Wins For Jamesville

COLUMBIA — Onwood James scored from four yards out in Jamesville's first possession in overtime to lift the Bullets to a 12-6 victory over Columbia Friday night in a Beaufort-Hyde-Martin Conference football game.

Columbia tied the game with less than four minutes to go in the final period when David Liverman ran it in from two yards out. The kick failed and minutes later the teams went into overtime.

In overtime both teams are given the ball at the 10 and get four plays to try to score. Columbia failed to score on its possession but the Bullets faired better.

After being penalized back to the 15 for illegal motion on first down, the Bullets moved to the four on an 11-yard run by Matthew Moore. James then sliced off tackle the final four yards and the Bullets had evened their record at 1-1-0 overall. Jamesville is 1-0 in the league while Columbia drops to 0-2-0 0-2 and 0-1.

The game included 15 fumbles, eight by Jamesville, seven of which the Bullets lost. Along with its seven fumbles, Columbia was also penalized 85 yards.

The game was scoreless after the first half but the Bullets took the lead midway through the third period when quarterback David Hardison went in from one yard out. The run failed for two failed.

It stayed that way until the fourth period when Columbia tied it up on Liverman's run.

James led the Bullets in rushing with 55 yards. Liverman had 78 yards on the ground for Columbia.

Jamesville plays host to Chocowinity Friday.

Daniels' Scores Let Williamston Top Gaston

WILLIAMSTON — In a game in which neither team gained over 100 yards total offense, Williamston's Randall Daniels scored two second-half touchdowns to lead the Tigers to an 18-6 victory over Gaston Friday night.

Williamston, now 1-1-0, had just 69 yards total offense — 42 rushing and 27 passing. Gaston did even worse, managing but 46 yards total offense — 16 rushing and 30 passing.

Much of Gaston's offense came on one play late in the first period after Gaston recovered a Tiger fumble on the Williamston 23. Two plays later quarterback Tyrone Hargrove hit Danny Roberts with a 21-yard pass for the touchdown and Gaston led, 6-0, with 42 seconds leftin the period.

Gaston threatened near the end of the half when it drove to the Williamston 30. But an 18-yard sack by Brian Purvis put the ball at the 48 before Vincent Washington ended the threat by intercepting a pass and returning it 61 yards with six seconds left in the half.

A bad snap from center forced the Gaston punter to fall on the ball at the 18 early in the third period, giving the Tigers the break they needed to take the lead.

Williamston's Roosevelt Everett ran the ball three straight times, the last a four-yard run for the tying score at the 8:07 mark. The kick failed.

Williamston took the lead midway through the final period when Daniels capped an eight-play drive which started from the Gaston 39 with a two-yard plunge with 7:45 left. The run failed, but Williamston led, 12-6.

Then, following an 18-yard interception return by Ronnell Horner, the Tigers scored their final TD. Horner's return left the ball at the six and on the next play Daniels raced into the end zone and Williamston led, 18-6.

On the night, Daniels gained 57 yards rushing. Washington led the Tigers in return yards with 77. He also caught two passes for 18 yards.

Williamston plays host to Plymouth Friday.

Rose's Magic...

The score came on second down from the seven, as Johnson hit Thompson for the score. Walter Giese added the kick, and the Cards moved ahead, 7-6, with 2:02 left in the period.

After recovering a fumble at the Rose 48, Jacksonville overcame several mistakes and penalties and pushed in its second touchdown. Currence raced 16 yars on one play, while Tyrone Currence picked up 10 on another. An illegial proceedure call erased a 13-yard pass, but Johnson then hit Dale Kerns for 31 on the next, down to the three, and Tyrone Currance popped over from there and Jacksonville took a 14-6 lead with 9:05 left.

The Cards, on their next series, moved down to the Rose 34 before an offensive pass interference call and an offsides call killed that drive.

Rose finally got the ball with about a minute left at its own 35 after a punt. Smith hit Lee on passes of 9 and 8 yards, then went to Marty Barnes for 21 to the Card 27. He then got McLawhorn along the sidelines at the nine, and after two passes fell incomplete in the end zone, Reeves came on with four seconds left to kick.

His boot struck the left upright and bounced through for the score, cutting it to 14-9 at intermission.

It took Rose little time to get the lead after that, scoring on its first play in the second half. Jacksonville, back to punt, saw the snap fumbled, and the kicker forced to run. He fell short of the first down, and Rose took over on the Card 31.

On the first play, Smith hit McLawhorn with another leaping catch of 31 yards, and Rose moved ahead, 15-14. A two-point try failed with 8:41 left.

A short time late, Rose missed another chance, when the clip cancelled McLawhorn's 92-yard punt return for a score.

Jacksonville had one other threat in the game, after a short punt gave it the ball on the Rose 38, but they failed to pick up a first down.

Early in the fourth quarter, Rose missed a chance when it suffered a penalty on a punt which Jacksonville fumbled and Rose recovered.

The Cards had one more chance, after a fumble recovery at the Rose 33. But with third and one, Rose held, and on fourth down, Jacksonville went into motion too soon, and the five-yard penalty killed their hopes.

Rose got it back with 2:31 left and ran out the clock, insuring Vincent's first victory as a head coach. "It's a sweet victory too," Vincent said. "But now we've got to line up next Friday night and do it all over again."

That comes in Ficklen Stadium as the Rampants open their home schedule against New Bern.

Gant On Darlington Pole

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Three-time Indianapolis 500 winner Johnny Rutherford paced the final day of qualifying Saturday for the Labor Day Southern 500 stock car race.

Rutherford qualified for the race with a speed of 149.463 mph to win 25th position in the annual classic.

He will race just ahead of Tim Richmond, rookie of the year at Indianapolis in 1980.

Taking the pole position for the 500 mile race will be Harry Gant. Gant set the pace for qualifying with a speed of 152.693 during Thursday's qualifying. In second place will be Cale Yarborough, a four-time Southern 500 winner, who qualified with a speed of 152.135.

Coming up behind will be newcomers Neil Bonnett, who posted a 152.074, and Ricky Rudd with 150.875.

Saturday's qualifying filled the final 16 positions in the starting field of 40.

Gant, Bonnett and Rudd earned membership into the exclusive Union 76Darlington Record Club. They are the first new entrants in the club in two years.

The club was set up in 1959 to honor drivers of varied makes of cars. Most of the Stock Car Hall of Fame members are listed in the club.

Darlington Raceway President Barney Wallace said tickets for 5,000 unreserved grandstand seats will go on sale at 6 a.m. Monday.

Sneva Wins 200-Miler

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tom Sneva took advantage of a long pit stop by Bobby Unser to win the Tony Bettenhausen 200-mile championship car race at State Fair Park Saturday.

Sneva, who battled Unser and Rick Mears for the lead most of the day, was leading Unser by one second when he rolled in for his last pit stop under the green flag on lap 166 on the one-mile paved oval. Sneva's crews changed tires and re-fueled his Bignotti-Cosworth in 18 seconds.

Unser, who had taken the lead while Sneva was in the pits, didn't fare as well when he came in for his final stop under the green seven laps later. For 45 seconds, Unser sat in his car, while the Penske crew changed tires and tried to re-start his engine.

"I ran out of fuel as I came into turn four," Unser said. "We just went one lap too long. Then when we went out again a header broke on the engine."

Unser's troubles were enough to assure Sneva, of Spokane, Wash., his first championship car victory of the season. Sneva, who averaged 118.218 mph, received the $23,265 winner's share of the record $179,655 purse.

There was to be one more score. Late in the game, Chuck Bishop forced a fumble on reserve quarterback Jeff Gilbert of Western, and Chris Skeeter recovered for the Pirates. On first down, a penalty moved the ball back to the 40, however, and Ingram followed with a 36-yard aerial to Carlton Frazier, down to the four. On the next play, Adams, on his first collegiate play, took it in. With 2:05 left, that made it 42-6, the final margin.

"I still have several areas of concern," Emory said afterwards. "We must stop giving up big third down plays. Our defense must get tougher and more aggressive."

The victory marked the 110th scoring game for the Pirates, who place that streak on the line next Saturday when they help the University of North Carolina open its season in Chapel Hill. That game will have a special meaning for the Pirates, as the series will end after this year's game. UNC has announced that it will no longer play non-ACC in-state rivals after this season.

Kentucky.....28
N. Texas St. 6

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Greg Long galloped 91 yards for a touchdown with his third pass interception of the game Saturday as Kentucky defeated North Texas State 28-6 in a college football season opener.

Quarterback Randy Jenkins came off the Kentucky bench to throw touchdown passes of 13 and nine yards, and Henry Parks bolted two yards for another score.

Long killed a North Texas threat early in the fourth quarter by picking off a Greg Carter pass at the Kentucky two and returning the ball 65 yards.

North Texas again challenged in the fading moments, but Long stepped in front of a Carter pass at the Wildcat nine and streaked untouched into the end zone with 12 seconds remaining.

Beddingfield Slips Past Rams By 13-0

STANTONSBURG — Beddingfield took advantage of six turnovers to gain a 13-0 victory over Greene Central High School Saturday night.

The Rams, heavily outweighed by the larger Bruins, were never able to get things going offensively.

"I really thought we did a pretty good job against them defensively," Coach Spence Grantham said. "But we just couldn't move the ball against them on offense."

The Rams did threaten, dropping one pass in the end zone, and then losing a fumble at the 15.

Beddingfield broke the scoring ice with just six seconds left in the half when quarterback Mark Davis went over from five yards out. That score had been set up on a fake reverse when Ricky Bynum raced 40 yards to the five. Davis kicked the PAT for a 7-0 halftime lead.

The other score came midway through the third period with Bynum scoring on a one-yard plunge.

The Rams, now 1-1 overall, travel to North Lenoir on Friday for their next outing.

Dawson Spoils Ryan's No-Hitter Bid

By The Associated Press

Andre Dawson seems to have Nolan Ryan's number. As a result, Ryan is still looking for No. 5.

For the second time in two seasons, the Montreal outfielder spoiled Ryan's bid for a no-hitter in the late innings and the hard-throwing Houston right-hander had to "settle" for a 5-0 triumph, allowing two hits before leaving in the eighth inning.

"I hung a curve ball to him," Ryan said of his pitch to Dawson with one out in the seventh inning. "I remember last year he got his hit on a fastball out over the plate."

Dawson also broke up a no-hit bid by Ryan on July 20, 1980, with a one-out single in the seventh.

Ryan missed a chance to break the mark of fourhno-hitters he shares with Sandy Koufax, the retired Los Angeles Dodgers left-hander.

"I'd love to get five," admitted Ryan. "Right now I'm the only one with an opportunity to do it. If I get close, I like to take advantage of it, if at all possible."

Astros Manager Bill Virdon thought he was sitting in on baseball history for a while.

"I thought he had a shot at the no-hitter," he said. "It wasn't a real bad pitch he threw to Dawson. He just got it a little inside."

After Ryan gave up a single to Larry Parrish and walked Chris Speier at the start of the eighth, Joe Sambito came on to record his eighth save.

Ryan, who struck out seven and walked three, has pitched seven one-hitters in his major league career along with his four no-hit efforts.

Cesar Cedeno collected four hits and drove in three runs for the Astros. Cedeno singled home runs in the third and seventh and doubled home another in a two-run ninth as the Astros won their ninth straight. Bill Gullickson, 4-7, was the loser.

Phillies 7, Reds 6

Pinch-hitter Dick Davis doubled home two runs in a three-run seventh inning as Philadelphia rallied to beat Cincinnati. The Reds had come from a 4-0 deficit in the sixth with a six-hit, five-run inning capped by pinch-hitter Larry Biittner's go-ahead RBI single.

George Vukovich singled home the first run of the Phillies' game-breaking seventh before Davis lined his two-run double to send the Phillies ahead 7-5.

Sparky Lyle, the third of four Phillies pitchers, was credited with his seventh victory in 11 decisions, while Tug McGraw recorded his ninth save after giving up Cincinnati's sixth run on Paul Householder's RBI single in the ninth.

Doug Bair, 2-2, the third of five Cincinnati pitchers, took the loss.

Mets 4, Braves 1

Greg Harris limited Atlanta to four hits through seven innings and touched off a New York rally with a double as the Mets came from behind to beat the Braves.

Phil Niekro, 6-5, was working on a one-hitter when Harris doubled with one out in the sixth. Mookie Wilson followed with a single to center and when Dale Murphy's throw to the plate sailed to the backstop, Harris scored and Wilson moved to third. Lee Mazzilli followed with a sacrifice fly, giving the Mets a 2-1 lead and their eventual winning run.

Ellis Valentine hit a solo home run in the seventh to help back Harris, 3-4. Neil Allen pitched the last two innings for New York, posting his 14th save.

Padres 5, Pirates 4

Gene Richards tripled in a pair of runs with two outs in the seventh inning to highlight a three-run San Diego rally and lead the Padres over Pittsburgh.

With the Padres trailing 4-2, Tim Flannery pinch-hit for reliever John Littlefield, 2-3, and singled off Pirate reliever Don Robinson, 0-3. Ozzie Smith followed with a single and Juan Bonilla drove in Flannery with another base hit. Rod Scurry replaced Robinson but Richards greeted him with a triple to put the Padres on top.

Eric Show pitched the last two innings in relief for San Diego and recorded his first major league save.

"I am still only playing a little above 80 percent right now," said Richards, who is coming back from injury. "I'm hustling as much as I can within my limits."

Cardinals 7, Dodgers 2

Darrell Porter knocked in three runs with two singles and Keith Hernandez collected four hits to lead St. Louis over Los Angeles behind the five-hit pitching of John Martin.

Martin, 5-2, walked one and struck out one in hurling his third complete game. The Cardinal left-hander allowed an unearned run in the third and a homer to Derrel Thomas in the seventh.

"I know we can win this thing," said Porter. "We've got fairly good defense and fairly good pitching and good people coming off the bench. And as the season goes along everybody seems to be level-headed, not too high and not too low. This team has talent."

Giants 3, Cubs 2

Jack Clark's two-out homer in the bottom of the 10th lifted San Francisco over Chicago. Clark's game-winning blast was his 13th homer of the season and came on a 1-0 pitch from loser Dick Tidrow, 2-8.

Both teams stranded a pair of runners in the ninth and the Cubs loaded the bases with no outs in the 10th before reliever Al Holland, 5-4, worked out of a jam.

The victory was the seventh in eight games for the Giants.

ACC Joins In Asking For NCAA Convention

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Bob James asked Friday that the NCAA hold a special meeting to discuss the possible reorganization of Division I.

The call for a meeting follows a similar request by the presidents of the Big Eight Conference.

The presidents asked Wednesday for a special NCAA convention by Nov. 15 and said they were withholding a decision on whether to adopt an NCAA football television package or one the College Football Association has reached with NBC.

At the Wednesday meeting, the NCAA issued a proposal for reorganization of Division I.

"As a result of a conference telephone call on Friday, Sept. 4, the Atlantic Coast Conference unanimously requested the NCAA to convene a special meeting of the Association no later than Dec. 7 to act upon the critical issues regarding the reogranization of Division I," James said in a prepared statement.

"The conference agreed that until further notice the eight member institutions would not establish a position on either the College Football Association or NCAA football television plans," the statement said.

The request would require a response from the NCAA before Sept. 9, James said.

"I have always felt there was an opportunity to resolve the issue," he said in a telephone interview from Greensboro. "I think the action the conference is taking places the action at the disposal of the NCAA."

James suggested that any action taken by the NCAA could have an affact on the decision by the CFA, which is scheduled to meet one day after the requested response date.

"What we are seeking is not a forum to hear our case, but to hear the NCAA proposal," James said.

During the meeting with Big Eight presidents, NCAA executive director Walter Byers briefed officers on a plan to reorganize Division I. The plan, first reported in an Oklahoma newspaper, would attempt to divide the 137-member division into separate divisions, separating the major schools from the lesser programs.

Such a reorganization plan has been in the works for several years. The most recent effort failed in 1978 during an NCAA convention.

Fishing Report

Nags Head to Ocracoke — Small croaker and spots are abundant in the surf with a few pan size grey trout and blues on the piers. Oregon Inlet has grey trout; favorite baits are squid and small spots. Small puppy drum are showing up in the surf at Hatteras.

Wahoo are plentiful offshore, with a few billfish. The best is yet to come on blues, whites and sailfish.

Drum Inlet to Bogue Inlet — In the surf around Cap Lookout some of the best catches on spots, croakers, and pompano in years. Snapper blues are plentiful on the Lookout shoals. The piers report good catches of spot, small croaker, and occasional flounder. Offshore bottom fishing has been good for red and silver snapper, with sea bass heading up the catches.

Trolling for kings and spanish has dropped off, but watch for the end of September.

Local notes

August was a good month for three local anglers. Pete West landed a 56-pound tarpon after a lengthy battle; Dick Clark boated a 37½-pound sailfish; and Don Fidler of Greenville hooked and boated a 93-pound blue marlin, and two white marlin off Oregon Inlet.

Oakland Opens Title Defense

By The Associated Press

A year ago, the Oakland Raiders were being written off as a loser. They would finish last in the American Football Conference's West Division, the experts said. Their pride and poise would be no more.

Today, the Raiders open the defense of the Super Bowl title they won last January.

And, as more than one coach has pointed out, staying on top can be tougher than getting there.

The Denver Broncos would like to be the first team to knock off the National Football League's maverick champions. The Broncos are operating under new leadership, from the owners on down. That includes Dan Reeves, the head coach imported from Dallas, where he had a hand in molding the complex multiple-set offenses of the Cowboys.

"I think it will take Denver some time to get it going, hopefully a lot longer than this week," said Coach Tom Flores of the Raiders. "But it doesn't matter what offense they're using, Denver is always tough. Defensively, they haven't changed a bit. They always give us all kinds of problems."

Today's other games are Baltimore at New England, Dallas at Washington, Kansas City at Pittsburgh, Miami at St. Louis, New Orleans at Atlanta, Philadelphia at the New York Giants, San Francisco at Detroit, Seattle at Cincinnati, Green Bay at Chicago, Houston at Los Angeles and the New York Jets at Buffalo. Monday night's game is San Diego at Cleveland.

Oakland has virtually the same team which so soundly beat Philadelphia 27-10 in the Super Bowl after chalking up an 11-5 record, good enough for an AFC wild-card.

"We haven't changed much in our approach from last year," said Flores. "We're basically the same type of team. We like to strike from anywhere on the field and we feel we have the speed to do it. Defensively, we like to challenge the offense, keep them off balance."

Oakland, Milwaukee Smack Homer To Bring Home Wins

By The Associated Press

Remember the television show "Home Run Derby?" Apparently the Oakland A's and Milwaukee Brewers do.

Both the A's and Brewers have been belting baseballs out of ballparks with regularity and they each used the long ball to produce victories Friday night. Oakland edged Baltimore 5-4 in 11 innings after trailing 4-0 through one inning, while Milwaukee used four homers to blast Minnesota 16-5.

"Home Run Derby" featured a pitcher lobbing gopher balls to the top major league home run hitters of the early 1960s The player who hit the most homers would return the next week against another slugger.

In Baltimore, Tony Armas and Cliff Johnson led the Oakland assault, Armas' league-leading 21st homer tying the game leading off the ninth, then Johnson's 15th winning it in the 11th. Those clouts gave the A's 16 homers in nine games.

"That's 'Billy Ball,'" joked A's Manager Billy Martin, who knows that term really describes the A's speed and aggressiveness. "We worked on that."

"That's not 'Billy Ball,'" countered Johnson. "That's good old hard country baseball."

Armas, who was hit by a pitch following Johnson's homer, also had a two-run double and leads the league with 62 RBI. His sixth homer in the last five games against Baltimore came after a long delay as Baltimore catcher Rick Dempsey and Manager Earl Weaver were ejected for disputing a 1-2 pitch to Armas.

A three-run homer by Doug DeCinces capped a four-run Baltimore first inning. Baltimore got only four hits the rest of the way.

Brewers 16, Twins 5

Milwaukee, with 79 home runs in 82 games, got homers from Gorman Thomas, Jim Gantner, Roy Howell and Robin Yount to record a team season-high 16 runs and 18 hits. Thomas and Gantner ripped solo homers off losing pitcher Fernando Arroyo, 5-7, in the second inning. Howell hit a three-run shot in the third and Yount added a two-run blast in the seventh. Thomas' homer was his first in 20 games and 18th of the season.

"They can hit homers like the 1961 Yankees," said Twins Manager Billy Gardner. "Everybody in the lineup is capable of hitting a home run. I can't see them going into a long losing streak. If a couple of their hitters get hot, they will be awfully tough."

"I didn't punch any buttons," admitted Brewers Manager Buck Rodgers. "I just kept my hands in my pockets."

Mike Caldwell, 10-7 and 7-3 in his last 11 starts, got relief help from Donnie Moore and Dwight Bernard.

Yankees 4, Royals 0

Rudy May and Ron Davis combined on a three-hitter and a three-run eighth inning boosted the Yankees. Dave Winfield's single, Graig Nettles' sacrifice fly and an error by Kansas City first baseman Willie Aikens accounted for the eighth-inning tallies.

May gave up just two singles to Willie Wilson before yielding to Davis, who picked up his sixth save with 2 1-3 innings of one-hit hurling. The Yankees are now 4 1-2 in games where they've taken a lead into the seventh inning.

"We know our chances are good if we can get it into the seventh," said Yankees Manager Gene Michael. "Let's put it this way — we'll take our chances."

Rangers 3, Tigers 2

Bump Wills' two-run homer lifted Texas over Detroit, snapping the Tigers' five-game winning streak. Texas' Jim Sundberg stretched his hitting streak to 17 games with a fourth-inning single and Detroit's Lance Parrish bashed a two-run homer.

"It was great, a great feeling," said Wills, who hit his second homer of the season and first ever batting left-handed. "When I came back to the dugout, the troops were cheering. It was like it was the seventh game of the World Series."

Blue Jays 6, White Sox 2

Lloyd Moseby, Garth Iorg and George Bell each drove in a run in the first inning and the Blue Jays added three unearned runs in the eighth. Toronto's Dave Stieb went all the way with an eight-hitter.

Jesse Barfield, a native of nearby Joliet, Ill., playing in only his second major league game, doubled in two runs in a three-run Toronto eighth at Chicago. That pleased a number of fans at Comiskey Park.

"Psychologically it's a big help. You always want to give 100 percent but having your friends and folks in the stands helps a lot," said Barfield, whose father was sat in the 21-year-old outfielder's personal rooting section.

Angels 3, Indians 1

Geoff Zahn outdueled Len Barker in a game called in the sixth inning. Zahn gave up two hits and Fred Lynn and Larry Harlow each knocked in a run and scored one. Barker threw a six-hitter.

Mariners 8-5, Red Sox 7-2

In the longest game in Fenway Park history, Seattle edged Boston 8-7 on a single by Dave Henderson and Joe Simpson's triple in the 20th inning. The game had been suspended by curfew after 19 innings, the last 10 scoreless, early Friday morning.

"It took 20 innings but I'll take it," said Mariners Manager Rene Lachemann. "I've been on the other end of it. It was definitely a lift for us. That was really a needed victory. It was an emotional victory."

Seattle followed with a victory in the regularly scheduled contest as Julio Cruz homered for three runs, singled twice and stole two bases, and AL batting leader Richie Zisk upped his average to .350 with two hits, including a solo homer.

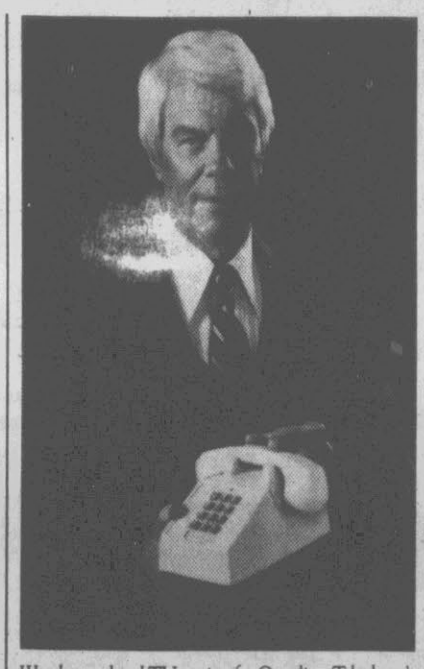
Federal Deregulation. The Cost Is Coming Home.

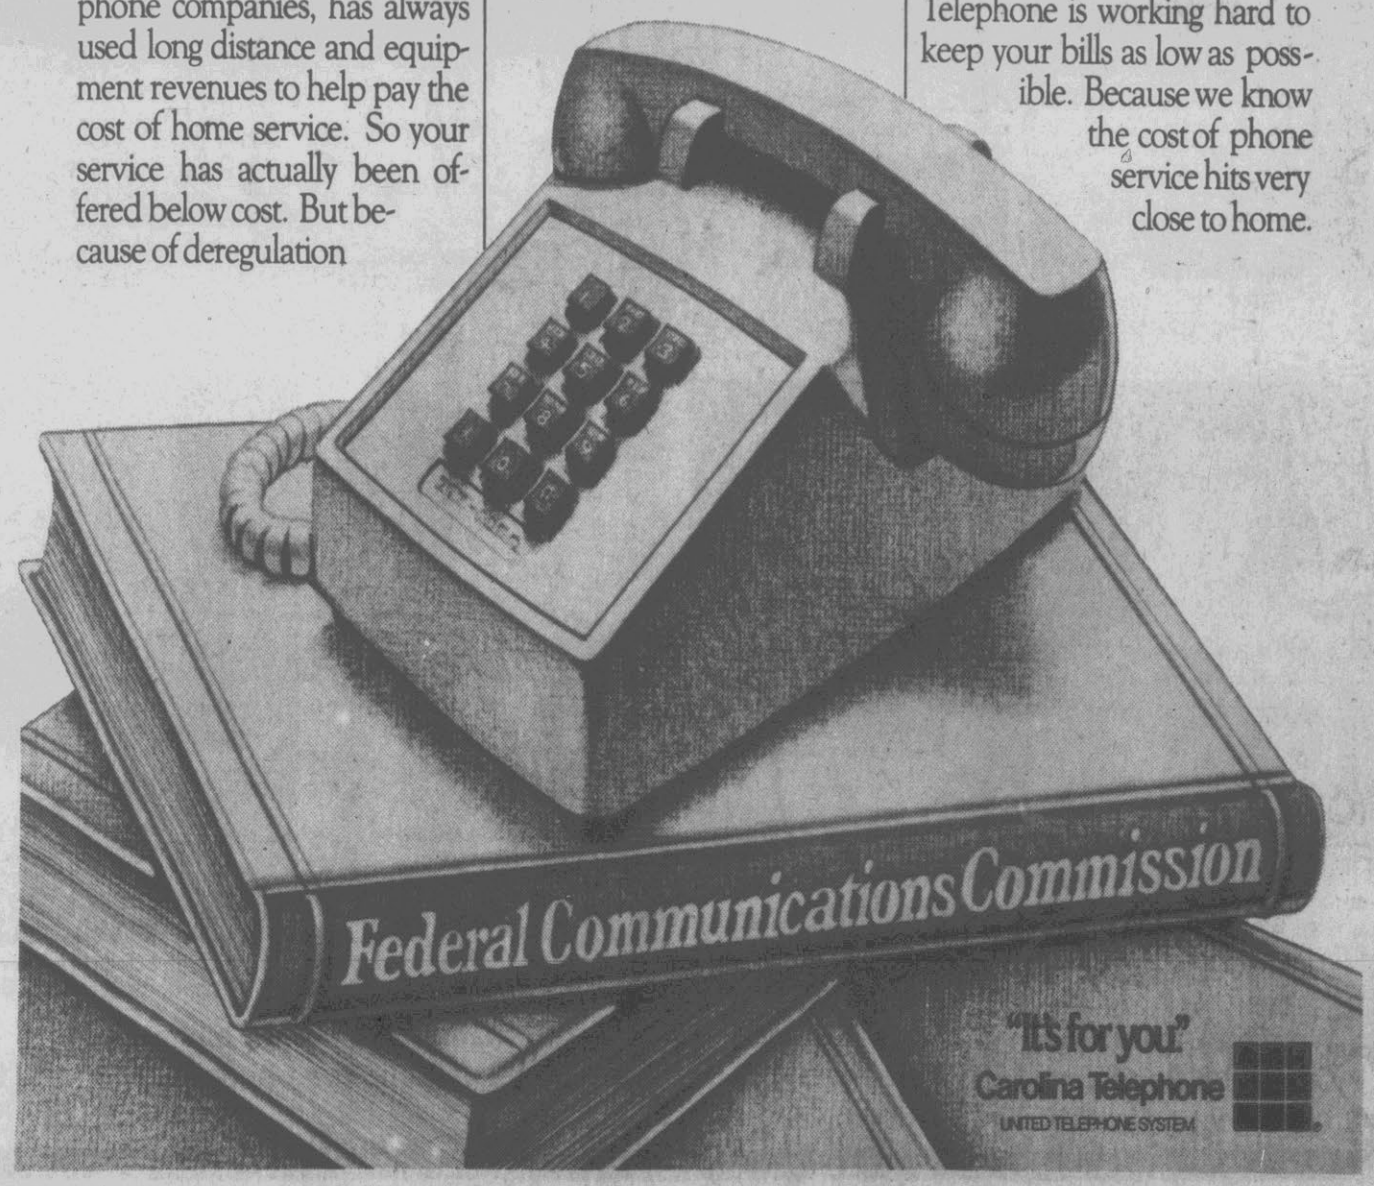


Watch your local TV station for Carolina Telephone's commercial series "Questions & Answers on Federal Deregulation", featuring Peter Graves

Question: How does federal deregulation and competition affect the cost of home phone service?

Answer: Carolina Telephone, like all investor-owned telephone companies, has always used long distance and equipment revenues to help pay the cost of home service. So your service has actually been offered below cost. But because of deregulation and competition, Carolina Telephone can no longer count on this money to help pay for home phone service. And that's going to affect your phone bill.

Yet, through it all, Carolina Telephone is working hard to keep your bills as low as possible. Because we know the cost of phone service hits very close to home.



"It's for you."

Investigator Says Food Stamp Fraud Is Common

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A federal investigator says his agents in North Carolina have purchased weapons and "everything from a refrigerator to a 2-ton truck" using food stamps, a Greensboro newspaper reports.

Richard Benton, chief of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Office of Inspector General in Raleigh, also told the Greensboro Daily News in an interview published Saturday, that abuses of the food-stamp program are more widespread than the public realizes. Benton said efforts to curb the abuses are hampered by a severe lack of manpower.

Rep. Charles G. Rose, D-N.C., called Thursday for a congressional investigation of the food-stamp program. He issued the statement after ABC-TV broadcast an interview with Rose on Thursday evening on the news-magazine program "2020," in a story on food-stamp fraud and abuse.

Although most North Carolina storekeepers abide by the food-stamp regulations, Benton said "some make a handsome profit by trafficking in them."

"They buy stamps for less than the cash value and then cash them in at full value," he said. "The going rate ranges from 50 cents on a dollar to 65 cents on a dollar."

But Benton said his office has only six investigators, including himself, to check on alleged violations of all USDA programs — food stamps, federal farm programs and Farmers Home Administration programs.

"In my opinion, abuse of the food-stamp program is very widespread," Benton said. "With food stamps you can get almost anything you want. We have bought everything from a refrigerator to a 2-ton truck with food stamps."

His agents also have bought a number of weapons — including a Thompson submachine gun, a .357 magnum revolver and several smaller handguns — with food stamps.

The Greensboro newspaper reported that the submachine gun and magnum pistol were obtained from a Henderson storekeeper who, according to a federal grand jury, offered them for sale to undercover agents posing as food stamp recipients.

The storekeeper was indicted this summer on six counts of selling weapons for food stamps valued at $3,540.

In July, a federal grand jury in Charlotte also indicted three employees of a Monroe grocery on charges of trading four revolvers and $595 in cash for $1,875 in food stamps.

Benton's office concentrates its efforts on individuals and businesses illegally buying food stamps. But when time permits, they also investigate individuals who receive stamps when they are not eligible for the program.

Recipient fraud investigation usually is left to state and county agencies which are responsible for issuing the stamps.

"We'd like to break up the recipient fraud, but there's just no way," Benton said. "We don't have the manpower."

John H. Kerr, director of the food-stamp program for the state Department of Human Resources, said his data does not indicate that abuse among recipients is a severe problem.

Kerr said there are about 600,000 recipients in North Carolina who get $260 million in food stamps each year. He said fraud convictions involve about 1 percent of the recipients but he acknowledged that abuses aren't always detected.

The state Department of Human Resources has a management evaluation team that reviews county social services departments' procedures for handling the food-stamp program and a Quality Control Force that visits individual counties seeking errors or fraudulent cases.

Massachusetts Family Says Demons Chased Them Out Of Home

LEE, Mass. (AP) — Lui Passetto Jr. says he decided the demons had the upper hand after he was chased by a stuffed dog, his wife was clawed by a hump-backed apparition and furniture started flying all over the place.

The 29-year-old paper factory worker and his wife and two children, ages 11 and 14, have abandoned their two-story yellow frame house for the fourth time in six months.

This time they say they're not going back until an exorcist gets rid of its present spooky tenants.

Passetto, reached Friday night at his parents home where he has taken refuge, described attacks on his 36-year-old wife, Dale, by a "demonic spirit" and told of decapitated religious statues, smashed furniture, levitating beds, and a butcher knife stuck ominously in a kitchen table.

Until last Friday, the Catholic family had lived for two years in the house Passetto's grandparents built 58 years ago in this quiet little town. Then, on March 19, Passetto says, the "white image" showed up.

It appeared to be a boy about 8 years old dressed in white, he said.

"We saw it many times," he said. "My wife and I."

So, on June 3, he called in a priest, a friend who performed a Mass in the house to exorcise the unwanted guest.

"After that, things started to happen in the house," Passetto said. "They got a lot worse."

That's when the "black image" came calling, a shadowy hooded figure Passetto describes as 5½-to-6-feet tall, hunched over, with what appears to be a big bubble on its back.

The apparition also has very big feet, Passetto says.

"Since that time, my wife's been thrown out of bed, thrown across the room," he said. "The bed was levitated two feet off the floor ... It threw a thousand-pound bookcase with books and all across the room."

A china closet was knocked to the floor four times, smashing the dishes, he said.

A butcher's knife was stuck in the middle of the kitchen table, the refrigerator moved three feet, heads were cut off religious statues, a crucifix was hurled down a staircase and Passetto was conked on the head by a levitating coffee pot.

"My wife's been clawed on the face many times, on the back, on the breast," he said.

"My daughter had a big stuffed dog that chased both my wife and I through my daughter's bedroom."

About a month ago, psychic researchers Edward and Lorraine Warren of Monroe, Conn., began investigating the goings-on at the Passetto home. They're the couple who wrote "The Amityville Horror," about a supposed haunted house in Long Island.

Warren said "all hell broke loose" at the Passetto house last Tuesday when he and his wife confronted the "spirit" with holy water, high church incense and a relic of a saint.

Scientists To Study Heater Emissions

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — University of North Carolina researchers have begun a two-year study on emissions from residential wood heaters, which some scientists fear may increase the risk of lung cancer.

Richard M. Kamens, research associate with the Department of Environmental Sciences and Engineering, is directing the $260,000 project, which is funded by the Environmental Protection Agency and the North Carolina Energy Institute.

Kamens noted there have been estimates residential wood heaters will be the greatest source of polyaromatic hydrocarbons (PAHs) by 1985. Laboratory tests have shown mutations increase when certain PAHs react with pollutants found in smog.

"The extent to which this happens in the real atmosphere, where wood smoke PAHs are absorbed in the smoke particles, is unknown," Kamens said. "Hence there is a great need to understand the processes which affect the transformation of wood PAHs on soot particles.

"Ultimately, it is hoped that this study will help scientists assess if there is an increased risk of lung cancer in communities which shift to wood as an alternate energy source."

Part of the study will be conducted at the university's outdoor smog chambers in Chatahm County. Combustion products from commercially available wood stoves will be injected into two of the chambers, permitting the PAHs on soot particles to be exposed and transformed under natural light and winter conditions and humidities.

"One chamber will be used as a control containing only wood emissions in unpolluted air," Kamens said. "In the other, soot will be exposed to light and dark and to ambient levels of ozone, nitrogen dioxide and dilute smog."

The study also will involve the effects of burning peat, which is abundant in the eastern part of the state.

"The state of North Carolina has a particular interest in the study of peat emissions, an industrial source of PAHs and the Energy Institute asked us to expand our studies to include the testing of peat emissions," Kamens said.

Death Blamed On Yellow Jacket

HIGH POINT, N.C. (UPI) — Guilford County Medical Examiner Gordon Arnold says a yellow jacket sting caused the death of High Point resident David L. Chatman, 31.

Arnold said Chatman died Thursday of respiratory failure and anaphylaxis — a severe reaction to insect venom — within minutes of being stung.

The death is the third attributed to insect stings in North Carolina this year.

Pathology professor Donald Hoffman of East Carolina University in Greenville said an average of two to four deaths annually from insect stings are reported, but the mortality rate may actually be twice that high.

The prevalence of honey bees, yellow jackets, wasps and hornets appears to be the key reason for the deaths, Hoffman said.

State Medical Examiner Page Hudson said comparatively, in the past 13 years, the state has averaged only two to three deaths from snake bites.

Last week at High Point Memorial Hospital, doctors treated people bitten by a black widow spider and a copperhead. The reactions were severe, Arnold said, but neither person died.

Chatman's mother, Veta Chatman, said she was surprised how quickly her son died after being stung on his upper right arm.

"He sat down. He looked up at me kind of funny and then he broke out in sweat and said he was going to have to wash his face," she said. "He got up and started staggering and then he just collapsed."

Arnold said people sensitive to insect stings could take some preventive measures. Initials stings, especially bee stings, usually are not fatal, he said.

Allergic individuals should carry an adrenalin kit with them. A rapid injection of adrenalin will stop or retard the severe allergic reaction.

Aside from venom desensitization shots, often used by bee handlers and their families, Hoffman said the adrenalin shot is the only sure way to treat most serious reactions.

Waves Pound Outer Banks

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (UPI) — North Carolina's Outer Banks were packed Saturday in a traditional end-of-summer ritual but authorities warned against swimming because of high waves and strong currents caused by retreating Hurricane Emily.

"We are advising people not to swim," said George Richardson, who heads a lifeguard service in Nags Head. "They can wade and do stuff like that but, as far as swimming, we are advising them not to swim."

A small craft advisory was in effect north of Cape Lookout.

Hurricane Emily was far out to sea and heading away from the mainland Saturday but waves continued to be high. Seas were 10 to 12 feet Friday but Richardson said the waves had subsided some by midday Saturday,

"It's not near as bad as it was yesterday," he said.

Ricardson said he had received no reports of any injuries caused by the waves and strong currents.

The Labor Day crowds found no vacancy signs at nearly every campground and motel.

Demand Outlook Causes Futures To Fall

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

Grain and soybean futures prices turned back downward Friday, still plagued by a poor supply and demand outlook. Sugar prices, which have been pressured by similar factors, set new lows in subdued trading.

Corn prices fell as much as 6¼ cents with the September delivery contract on the Chicago Board of Trade settling at $2.91½ a bushel, and soybeans lost as much as 10 cents, settling at $6.72½ a bushel for Septembr.

Prices had edged upward somewhat in recent sessions on the thinking that an early frost could cut crop yields. Maturation of the corn and soybean crops this year is lagging behind normal because of cool wet weather, and that could leave plants more susceptible to frost damage.

But anaylsts said Friday the rally couldn't be sustained because the outlook for prices still remains poor — large crops are projected and demand is weak.

"About the only buyer that is showing up is the Soviet Union," said Mike Hinebaugh, analyst in Chicago with ContiCommodity Services. "You have got huge supplies staring you in the face with a lack of demand showing up."

He said prices probably can be expected to continue their recent see-saw action because there is still a chance that a damaging frost could alter the supply outcome. "The market can get to be very choppy in times like this — rally one day and be down the next," Hinebaugh said. "The crops are not safe from frost yet and it is easy for the market to just hop around for a couple of weeks."

He said a lot of traders were selling Friday rather than going home holding long contract positions over the three day Labor Day holiday. "If the weather turns warm you would be walking in on Tuesday looking at lower prices," he said.

On the Coffee Sugar Cocoa Exchange in New York, world sugar prices have set new life of contract lows several times in recent weeks. They did so across the board again Friday, with the contract for delivery in October falling .32 cent to 11.16 cents a pound.

Demand for sugar has been light while the industry is projecting bumper crops, particularly in Europe. "There just is no reason anyone should buy sugar now," one analyst said.

Pork futures were mostly higher, and cattle fell back on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

After the close of trading, the U.S. Agriculture Department was reported releasing most of the Australian beef that had been impounded during testing for possible adulteration. Prices climbed last week on news that shipments of beef from Australia were being withheld from the market after horse meat was found in some supplies.

On Friday, cattle were .15 cent to .57 cent lower, with the October contract settling at 67.15 cents a pound.

Cotton fell as much as 1.35 cents with October settling at 65.30 cents a pound as new contract lows were set in some contracts for nearby delivery.

U.S. Treasury bonds closed just about where they had settled Thursday and precious metals lost ground.

In economic news, the Labor Department reported that slowly rising food prices kept inflation at the wholesale level last month at a rate of about 3.6 percent.

On the Commodity Exchange in New York, gold for delivery in September fell to $437.50 a troy ounce and silver to $10 an ounce.

Money Market Funds Growing

NEW YORK (AP) — Assets of the nation's money market funds continue to grow at a stunning pace, setting a record virtually each week. They've thrown havoc at banks, savings and loans, the stock market and other institutions that can't match the funds' yields of 17 percent or more.

But the other institutions, which have watched their deposits and assets evaporate in recent months, are fighting back.

There's the much-touted "all savers" certificate being offered by banks and S&Ls that provide tax-exempt characteristics. MasterCard International and Fidelity Management Group have joined forces to develop a plan aimed at helping banks battle the money funds. And Sears, Roebuck & Co. plans a type of money market fund that will concentrate on investing in U.S. government securities.

Still, the money funds represent a substantial challenge to any competitor. In the week ended this past Wednesday, the assets of the 132 funds followed by the Investment Company Institute, a mutual fund trade group based in Washington, D.C., rose $2.15 billion to $150.3 billion, more than double the Jan. 1 level of $74.6 billion.

It was the 14th straight week that the funds had set a record.

The money funds' popularity includes their relatively low risk, non-penalized withdrawals and mainly their lofty returns compared with other financial instruments. The funds are like mutual funds, which pool the investments of about 9 million shareholders and invest them in such short-term securities as Treasury bills, bank certificates of deposit and commercial paper, a sort of corporate IOU.

The average maturity of money fund portfolios has been about 30 days. William E. Donoghue, publisher of the industry newsletter Donoghue's Money Fund Report, said the average return on money funds was 17.2 percent for the most recent 30-day period.

Duke Trustees Override Foes Of Nixon Library

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University will go ahead with talks aimed at establishing a Richard M. Nixon presidential library, overriding opposition from faculty members and fears of some trustees.

"I think a strong university can stand controversy and ought to have some once in a while," Duke President Terry Sanford said Friday.

University officials got the go-ahead to continue negotiations with Nixon, a 1937 Duke Law School graduate, on a 9-2 vote of the executive committee of the university's Board of Trustees on Friday.

Acting despite a resolution opposing the library narrowly passed by the faculty's Academic Council, the trustees also set a list of conditions that Nixon must meet before the university will give land for the library and clear the way for its construction.

According to the trustees' resolution, Nixon must relinquish all rights to the documents, which must include the papers of his pre-presidential career as well as all the papers, tapes and other documents of his presidential terms.

The trustees' resolution also said a Nixon library on the Duke campus would have to "emphasize the archival and scholarly function," but it did not rule out location of a Nixon museum in the same building.

Opposition among the faculty, trustees and alumni has focused on whether the library and museum would become a memorial to Nixon, honoring his presidency without fully measuring the Watergate scandals that drove him from office in 1974.

"I've got a gut feeling the best interests of Duke University would be to go back to Mr. Nixon and say, 'thanks but no thanks,'" said John Forlines, a Duke trustee from Granite Falls who cast one of the dissenting votes.

"I find it impossible to fly in the face of widespread opposition," said the other dissenter, Isobel Lewis of Lexington.

But other trustees warned that the university would face as much or more opposition if it turned its back on Nixon's offer.

"I'm concerned about the long-range danger to the reputation of Duke University if we do not proceed," said Wilson Weldon, trustee emeritus.

University council Eugene McDonald said he believed negotiations could be settled and the building completed in three to five years.

It will be 1986, he said, before the National Archives and Records Service finishes its processing of the Nixon presidential documents. Legal questions over the ownership of the materials must be settled — perhaps by congressional action — before the library can receive them.

The library will cost an estimated $25 million, and Sanford said all of it will be raised by a foundation of Nixon's friends. The university would put up only the land and would have little financial risk, he said.

But some faculty members said the university was risking serious problems with its faculty by proceeding.

James David Barber, a political science professor who in a 1972 book characterized Nixon as having an "active-negative" personality bent on tragedy, told several trustees, "We may have a revolution on our hands among the faculty."

Brooks Balks At State's Industry-Hunting Tactics

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Labor Commissioner John Brooks has written Gov. Jim Hunt a letter chiding his industrial recruiters for publicizing the state's low wages and unionization rate to encourage new industry.

Brooks, who sent editors of the state's larger newspapers a copy of his letter to Hunt, told the governor the information on North Carolina wages and unionization was being used "as an incentive for industries to locate here" and said "the fair inference is that North Carolina state government supports a policy of low wages."

North Carolina's average manufacturing wage is $5.84 per hour. The average weekly industrial earning of state workers comes to about $231, Brooks said, or about 28 percent below the national average of $319 per week.

Secretary of Commerce D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth, who handles much of the state's industrial recruitment, was out of town Friday and could not be reached for comment.

Hunt spokesman Gary Pearce said the materials that Brooks was objecting to were type-written fact sheets sent to industrial prospects only upon request.

"When companies want to know what is our union rate or our wages, we send it," Pearce said. "It is not an advertisement or an enticement, but it is a fact and when they want to know what the situation is, these are the facts and we have to give them to them.

"The governor's policy is that sort of thing is not to be used as a selling point for North Carolina. There are plenty of other good things you can sell North Carolina on — location, climate...," he said.

Since receiving Brooks' letter, Pearce said Hunt has reminded Commerce Department employees of his policy "not to use low wages or low unionization as a selling point" and told industrial recruiters to be certain that any information they send out reflects that policy.

But Brooks said he had received copies of the information from two different sources and in both cases the information was unsolicited. He said the material was turned over to him because the recipients thought the material was not in the best interests of the state.

Brooks wrote Hunt that the materials were "not in the interests of the people of this state" and said he believed they violated Hunt's commitment to high-wage industrial recuriting.

Meanwhile, Brooks, in his annual Labor Day message issued Sunday, called for increased cooperation between government and private industry to provide the skills training needed to raise wages in North Carolina.

"North Carolina not only continues its perennial position on the bottom rung of the wage ladder in comparison to the wages paid in other states and in the nation as a whole for manufacturing-production work but we also continue to employ a higher percentage of our workers in such positions than any other state," Brooks said in a prepared statement.

Brooks said the gap between wages in North Carolina and the rest of the nation is not narrowing. In June, he said, preliminary figures show that factory production workers were making an average of $231.26 per week, or 28 percent less than the national average of $319.99 a week for such work.

Last year at the same time, production workers in North Carolina were earning an average of $204.34 a week, also 28 percent below the national average at that time.

Figures released by Brooks show that in the Southeast, North Carolina's weekly wages were followed by Mississippi's wages where the average was $237.21 a week, South Carolina with $248.88, Georgia with $256.41, Florida with $266.09, Tennessee with $268.92, Alabama with $284.31 and Kentucky $314.81.

New Drug May Aide Brown Lung Victims

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Some doctors are beginning to think a new drug developed for asthma patients — albuterol — also may help victims of brown lung, or byssinosis.

The drug has been used in Europe for decades but the federal Food and Drug Administration held up its release in this country because of questions about safety and long-term effectiveness.

But four months ago, the FDA released the drug for use primarily with asthma victims. Doctors wasted little time applying the drug to lung patients with acute byssinosis, chronic byssinosis and chronic bronchitis, though not for emphysema.

East Carolina University professor Dr. Stephen Porter, a pharmacist who is an assistant professor of medicine, said albuterol has longer action and better precision than other drugs currently available.

"The drug clearly has the added advantage of working without systemic side effects like increased heart rate," Porter said.

"Handled sensibly, it's amazing what this drug will do to eradicate the signs of symptons of byssinosis," said Dr. Leo Heaphy, a Winston-Salem lung specialist.

The federal government estimates that 18,000 people in North Carolina and South Carolina have been disabled by byssinosis. The illness often has been linked to cotton dust.

Dr. Fred Owens of Hickory said he has found the drug works better and lasts longer than others he has tried with byssinosis patients.

Albuterol quickly has become the number one inhaler in sales, surpassing other standard drugs such as epinephrine, isoproterenol, isoetharine and metaproterenol.

If the drug has a drawback, it is price. Because it is twice as expensive as similar drugs, Owens said he ordinarily tries a substitute drug first. If the other drug isn't effective, he uses albuterol which he says, "seems to be very effective."

Inflation Hurting Church Programs

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina religious leaders say they're finding it increasingly difficult to financially support human service agencies because of rising inflation and budget cutbacks.

For example, some churches now contribute to the support of elderly or widowed members and also assist divorced members struggling to support children on one income.

"I think a church has the responsibility of meeting (a member's financial) emergency need," said the Rev. Oliver Dongell of Faith Wesleyan Church in Greensboro. "By the nature of their purpose, churches can and should do it, but I question whether they are prepared to."

Daughter of Mayor and Mrs. Donald Cleo McGlohon of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dallas Teague of Seven Lakes.

A program of wedding music was presented by the Rev. Christopher Turner Jenkins of Youngsville, organist and the Rev. Charles Michael Smith of Roxboro, soloist.

Margaret Ellen McGlohon of Greenville, sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids included Lori Janine Anderson, Marjorie Lee Snell, Cynthia Elizabeth Talbert and Selene Wheless Gwaltney, all of Greenville, Leslie Broadhurst Davis of Myrtle Beach, S. MRS. JACK STANLEY TEAGUE

The bride wore an ivory floor length gown with a cathedral train of chiffon over taffeta and re-embroidered alencon lace on imported English illusion. The fitted bodice of re-embroidered alencon lace over English illusion featured a Queen Anne neckline, chiffon long tapered sleeves and a natural waist. Scalloped alencon lace outlined the neckline and appliqued the chiffon sleeves. The full length chiffon over taffeta skirt extended into a cathedral train. Alencon lace motifs appliqued the skirt and train. She chose an ivory cathedral length mantilla of imported illusion bordered with scalloped alencon lace and accented with lace motifs flowing from an alencon lace caplet etched with seed pearls. She carried a silk cascade bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids, lilies, foliage and variegated agloenema, ivy and baby's breath. She wore a strand of pearls, a gift of her parents.

Should this recipe for an old-fashioned pudding-cake made with fresh prune plums appeal to you, I suggest you plan to serve it soon after it comes out of the oven. In my opinion, it is at its best when it is fresh and hot. However, my sister — who snagged a couple of pieces to take home — insists it's also delicious reheated.

It's no great task to make this dessert at the last minute for brunch or afternoon or evening refreshment for family and guests. You can easily assemble the ingredients ahead and the pudding-cake part takes only four minutes of mixing with an electric beater.

PRUNE-PLUM PUDDING CAKE

Streusel, recipe follows
1 cup all-purpose flour
1¼ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
1-3rd cup butter, soft
½ cup milk
1 large egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
10 (about 1 pound) medium-size purple prune plums, halved and pitted

Make the Streusel and reserve. Grease and flour a 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch cake pan. In the large bowl of an electric mixer stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add the butter, milk, egg and vanilla; beat at medium speed for 4 minutes — batter will be smooth. Pour into the prepared pan. Dip the cut sides of the plums in a little extra all-purpose flour and arrange in rows, cut side down, over the batter. Sprinkle the Streusel around the fruit. Bake on the rack below the center in a preheated 350-degree oven until browned — a cake tester will not come out clean because there will be a creamy layer under the prune plums. Serve hot. Makes 9 servings.

Streusel: Stir together 1-3rd cup all-purpose flour and ¼ cup firmly packed light brown sugar; with a fork or your fingers, work in ¼ cup butter (½ of a ¼-pound stick) until crumbly; stir in ¼ cup finely chopped walnuts.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Be honest now. Do any of you understand one word of what your doctor tells you?

Ever since I told a crowded room I had a Bavarian cyst and not only did no one laugh, but two others in the room had the same thing, I've been convinced doctor and patient do not speak the same language.

They speak Latin. We speak Reader's Digest.

I suspect I am like most people who are intimidated by anyone who wears white all winter and washes his 137 times a day.

It's not that I don't pay attention. It's just that I have a feeling something more important awaits him in the next treatment room.

Somehow, I cannot see me having this conversation with my doctor.

"You say this problem is in my Humorous bone? Humorous as in Woody Allen?"

"No, that's humerus."

"Would you spell that, please?"

"Of course. Give me a piece of scrap paper and I'll make a diagram and label it for you."

"Here, take the gown you gave me."

There is probably nothing more humiliating than to have a husband who always wants to know what the doctor said.

"It has something to do with my nose," I say.

"What part of your nose?" he asks.

"You know. The rect..."

"Try septum. What's wrong with it?"

"It's perverted."

"Deviated."

"Same thing."

I've talked with people who told me they had a Cather inserted in them for a week. (Not to be confused with novelist Willa Catheter who wrote, "Death comes for the Archbishop."

Another friend I know could never remember his blood pressure numbers, but said if his diabolic reading was under his golf score, he was happy.

All of us who go to doctore suffer the same disease, timidity of the tongue. We don't open our mouths and ask questions. I don't know why. I only know alot is lost in the translation.

When my grandmother once anounced she had a prostate deficiency and was told it wasn't possible, she snapped, "The way I eat, anything is possible."

MRS. TYMAN MACK WALLACE

Candlelight Wedding Held

The Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Church was the scene of the candlelight wedding ceremony of Glinda Faye Moore and Tyman Mack Wallace of Fort Bragg Saturday at 2 p.m. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Steven Jones.

A program of wedding music was presented by Ms. Angela Morris, organist and Mrs. Ella Harris, who sang "O Promise Me," "One Hand, One Heart," "The Lord's Prayer" and "We've Only Just Begun."

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Willie Ray Moore of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Murylen Wallace Broome of Spartanburg, S. C. and the late Mr. McKinley Wallace Jr.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace over white peau de soie designed with a high neckline with a sheer yoke of illusion encircled with silk Venise lace. The fitted bodice featured a ruffled collar of chantilly lace and long fitted sleeves. The skirt was fashioned with an inserted panel of pleated chantilly and the attached train was accented by cascading tiers of lace. She wore a waltz length veil of illusion edged in matching lace and attached to a Camelot cap overlaid and beaded with pearls. She carried a classic bouquet of white cushioned pom pons, pixie pink carnations, baby's breath tied with white satin.

Ms. Mary Wilkes, sister of the bride of Goldsboro, was maid of honor and wore a formal gown of daphne rose tinesta Italian silk designed with an open scooped neckline, gathered empire bodice and flared accordian pleated skirt. A lace ivory capelet that extended to a point in back accented the gown. She carried a nosegay of dusty rose carnations, baby's breath and lilies tied with dusty rose satin.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Carrie Moore Sutton of Fayetteville, Ms. Valerie Lynette Wilkes, cousin of the bride of Baltimore, Md., Ms. Sherell Wallace, sister of the bridegroom of Spartanburg, S. C., Ms. Valerie Hill of Greenville and Ms. Debra Garner of Fayetteville. Their gowns and nosegays were identical to that of the honor attendant.

The flower girls were Lubinka Meshann Wallace, niece of the bridegroom of Spartanburg, S. C. and Latrieveyet Nicol Walston of Greenville. They wore formal gowns of white eyelet embroidery styled with a fitted waist, Peter Pan collar and ruffled front. They each carried a white wicker basket filled with pink and white flowers tied with pink satin.

Tony Lee Collins of Moore, S.C. served as best man. Ushers included Anthony Kenneth Tolbert, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Charleston, S.C. Terry Ray Wilkes, brother of the bride of Greenville, Thomas Wayne Chambers ofBuckingham,Va., Ronald Terry Dodd and Robert Keith McLuney, cousin of the bridegroom, both of Spartanburg, S.C. The ring bearer was Derrick Tyrone Wilkes, nephew of the bride of Greenville. He carried a white satin pillow with a spray of pink flowers.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. W. Jasper Harris of Greenville.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will live in Fayetteville.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School and Fayetteville State University. She is now a reading teacher at Hope Mills Junior High School. The bridegroom graduated from Dorman High School and attended Spartanburg Community College. He is now serving in the U. S. Army, stationed at Fort Bragg.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the fellowship hall given by the parents of the bride.

Guests were greeted by Ms. Armental Moore and Mrs. Janice Rodgers, aunt of the bride, presided at the guest register. Mrs. Gail Tolbert introduced the receiving line.

After the first slice of cake was cut, it was served by Mrs. Shirley Adams. Mrs. Erma Daniels, Mrs. Geneva McComson and Mrs. Ruby McClooney assisted.

Good-byes were said by the parents of the bridal couple.

A wedding breakfast was given by the mother of the bridegroom at Abram's Restaurant for the bridal party and out-of-town guests. On Saturday, the parents of the bridegroom will have a drop-in party for the bridal couple in Spartanburg, S.C.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

As the first few days of school gradually slip by and students adjust themselves to a life of tests and term papers, the usual yearly activities also begin to get underway.

FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America) recently elected new officers. Heading the list is Sandra Hudson, president, followed by Donna Akin, vice president, Chris Joyner, secretary, Tammy Jenkins and Lynn Sutton, co-treasurers, Lisa Hardee and Leigh King, co-reporters and John Ormond, sergeant-at-arms. They will be installed Sept. 14.

After having lost two of its members to schools elsewhere, the varsity cheerleading squad made Alice Dawkins its newest addition.

Not only did the cheerleaders give support to the Rampants at the opening game Sept. 4, but so did the new Rose mascots, Kenny Smith and Martha West. The two were selected during the first few days of school through an election.

The Rose High Band received two new members this summer, Ben Ferguson, director and Dawn Morgan, head of the flag squad (color guard). Songs slated for this year are "Pictures of Spain" as opener, "God Bless the Child," "Rock-n-Roll Band," (drum solo) and "Let It Be Me."

School pictures are scheduled to be taken Sept. 16-17.

Padding Wins Approval In Miss America Show

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Miss Alaska worked aboard a salmon boat, Miss Connecticut was employed on a factory assembly line and Miss South Carolina wants to ice skate across stage.

Miss Alabama is representing "the dear Lord." Misses New Hampshire and Maryland are black and Miss Wisconsin was born in South Korea.

Misses Kansas and Texas are weightlifters, Miss Minnesota hunts deer, Miss Maryland practices karate and Miss New Mexico rapels down mountains.

And, following the hoopla over falsies at the recent Miss U.S.A. Pageant, keen-eyed observers are forewarned that Miss America 1982 may utilize any kind of padding anywhere she pleases.

There she is, Miss America.

A Boardwalk institution for 60 years, the Miss America Pageant is gearing up this week to crown its 55th queen of American beauty, talent and wisdom after three nights of preliminaries and two televised hours of Cinderella fantasy and Ted Mack entertainment on Saturday night.

With perennial emcee Bert Parks gone in favor of former television Tarzan Ron Ely, this Miss America Pageant offers the fewest new wrinkles since New York's Bess Myerson donned a too-tight swimsuit to capture its first scholarship in 1945.

Instead, the pageant is hoping to ease back into wide popularity with its well-honed image of All-American, can-do women — an ideal that has long sustained it in the rural South, Midwest and West.

"We're in a new era of escapism and the Miss America Pageant is pure escapism," says chairman Albert A. Marks Jr. "You know how it goes: 'I was nobody yesterday and today I'm Miss America.' What is more escapist than that?"

Ely, 43, a virtual television unknown until Marks tapped him to replace Parks amid a national furor, will be back to croon "There She Is" as the new Miss America strolls down the long runway.

Ely's smiling performance last year satisfied shell-shocked pageant officials and won him a 20 percent raise to return. Marks won't disclose how much Ely makes, but it is estimated at more than Parks' last salary of $18,000.

"That was a tough spot to step into," Marks says.

Marks, an Atlantic City investment banker, says his pageant will have no replay of May's controversy over New York's entry into the Miss U.S.A. Pageant.

Deborah Ann Fountain claimed she was disqualified from the Miss U.S.A. contest in Biloxi, Miss., when she revealed that curious officials had discovered padding in her swimsuit. Her cries of foul have been thrown out of two courts.

Marks says Miss America contestants may make those kinds of representations with no questions asked.

"We encourage our contestants to present themselves in the best possible manner," Marks said. "Anything else by me is an invasion of privacy."

The bubbling contestants, most in brand-new fall fashions and at their polished peak of talent and sophistication, now are arriving in Atlantic City for a grueling week of interviews, photographs, rehearsals and competition.

This time, however, one of the interviewers is likely to overshadow the contestants.

Pageant officials have granted press credentials to Rita Jenrette, celebrated ex-wife of former South Carolina congressman John Jenrette, to follow Miss Texas for a small news service.

Officials say they will treat Mrs. Jenrette like any other journalist — that is, guard their contestants as if reporters are wolves loose in a chicken coop.

Miss America contestants always insist their goal is just "fun." But don't let them kid you, big bucks are at stake this week.

The new Miss America is guaranteed a $20,000 scholarship, at least $50,000 in personal appearance bookings during her reign, television commercials and magazine ads, interviews galore and, most likely, only fleeting fame.

Few will remember Miss America after the pageant is over. For example, who is the present Miss America?

Susan Powell, 22, of Elk City, Okla., will retire from pageantry with her scholarship and about $83,000 in personal appearance fees, officials say, the most money since Colorado's Marilyn Van Derbur raked in about $125,000 as Miss America 1959.

Miss Powell, like recent predecessors, knows that working hard, staying out of controversy and showing some religious fervor are the keys to financial success as Miss America. So, predictably, there were no reports of strong opinions on abortion, marijuana, premarital sex or the Equal Rights Amendment.

"She's too smart for that," Marks says. "Her talent, her sense of humor and the way she handles people are outstanding."

Dear Abby

Broken Engagement Better Than Broken Marriage

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: NO NAMES wrote, "My fiancee and I fight and argue every time we see each other, but whenever I suggest calling off our Christmas wedding, she cries and carries on, saying she'll be humiliated before her friends."

You said, "Call it off anyway!" You are absolutely right. I know. I learned the hard way.

My fiance and I were both 21. We fought constantly. Several times he suggested we call off the wedding, or at least postpone it for a while, but I insisted on going through with it because I didn't want to face the embarrassment of having to tell people that I wasn't getting married after all.

Today, after two years of a miserable marriage, I am five months' pregnant and in the process of getting a divorce. Obviously, we never should have gone through with the marriage in the first place. I hope NO NAMES takes your advice.

TOLD YOU SO IN DALLAS

DEAR TOLD YOU: Thanks for the reaffirmation. A broken engagement is usually embarrassing, sometimes humiliating and always painful. It can also be costly. But it's not nearly as painful and costly as divorce — especially if there are children to consider.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: After moving our seats three times at the movies last night, my wife and I decided to write to you. Our problem is people who sit there and constantly pop and crack their gum in public!

Please print something about this rude and obnoxious practice. I want to make photocopies to hand to those insensitive, inconsiderate klutzes who do it.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN IN L.A.

DEAR SILENCE: I agree, it is a rude and obnoxious practice. Make your photocopies if you wish, but be careful where you distribute them, or you might get another kind of "crack" and "pop."

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am the younger of two sons in a family business. My father, who runs the business, is a very impatient man. I can never do anything to please him. He finds fault with everything I do. When I try to defend myself, he just throws up his hands in disgust and walks away.

There's not a day that passes in my life that he doesn't find fault with me. I am losing confidence in myself. I do my very best, and all I get is verbal abuse. I just can't tolerate it anymore.

What should I do?

M. IN BALTIMORE

DEAR M.: Get another job. Or find a doctor who treats ulcers.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: You were asked, "Why don't light bulbs last as long as they used to?" I think I can answer that. Nothing lasts as long as it used to. Including me.

FIGHTING 50 IN FRESNO

* * *

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (35 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: In all my 63 years, I've never written to an editor, nor have I ever written to an advice column, but I recently read an item in the newspaper that I think deserves national publicity, and I can think of no better way to get it than through your column. I hope you print it.

RICHARD P., EAST PALATKA, FLA.

DEAR RICHARD: I, too, found the item very inspiring, and here is my edited version:

"Officials at Forest Hills High School in Ocala, Fla., said they had never seen anything like it. Miss Houng Le, 18-year-old valedictorian of her graduating class, drew tears and a standing ovation from her audience when she said:

"'My family and I fled Southeast Asia six years ago because we were pro-U.S.A., and had we remained, we would have been executed.

"'I owe my very presence on this stage tonight to you and this wonderful country. When we could no longer prevail against our enemies, you accepted over 100,000 of us to your shores, gave us freedom, a new start and a new nation.

"'There are some things worth dying for. The freedom you have here is one of those things. I have come to appreciate the United States as the greatest nation on earth. She is worthy of your fullest loyalty and greatest sacrifice.

"'Treasure her. Love her. Defend her!'"

Mates That Batter Need Help In Changing Lives

By JENNIFER PARMELEE
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Bob Duran stretched his arm across the table and flashed a thin, white scar running across his wrist. It was the only obvious sign of a time, three years past, when he abused his wife.

Abuse comes in many forms, from an occasional slap to the man who sends his wife to the hospital with a broken jaw.

For Duran, it ran from verbal and physical abuse to a more subtle form of psychological warfare he used to call his "knife trick" — slashing his wrists to punish her when other ways failed.

"I'm lucky I never put her in the hospital," he says softly.

Duran says the battering stopped when he started going to AMEND, a program to help men stop physically abusing the women they live with. Today, Duran considers himself a model graduate of the program, although joining AMEND did not prevent a painful divorce.

AMEND — Abusive Men Exploring New Directions — is a Denver version of a handful of organizations around the country to help men stop physically abusing women. It provides them other men with whom to share anger, grief or laughter in surroundings other than the neighborhood bar.

"Dealing with the men is almost like an asterisk to domestic violence programs," says Tim Peterson, who coordinates AMEND'S programs. Founded three years ago, the program grew out of a movement that has created safe houses for battered women. It has served nearly 400 men since its inception.

"Nobody was talking about the men," says Chaer Robert, who helped found the non-profit program. "The idea was to rescue the women. And if they couldn't get the women to leave their men, it was equivalent with failure.

"You can't just work with the women," she said. "The relationship has to change. And a lot of women think that if they stop 'irritating' the men, then they'll stop battering. That's not true either. The men have got to change."

According to AMEND organizers, more than 85 percent of the men who stay in the program for four or more of the bi-weekly, two-to three-hour sessions stop physically hurting women. But AMEND isn't a panacea for every abusive male. It won't accept court-referred cases. Its counseling offers only a fresh start. It can't prevent divorce, and many men require outside psychiatric help or couples counseling with their wives.

Its goal is to teach physically abusive men to deal with the stress and anger that leads to violence. Domestic violence is cyclical, psychologists say, with tension building to a breaking point where violence occurs, followed by a "hearts and flowers" period when the man feels guilty and wants the woman to forgive him.

AMEND participants teach each other how to recognize signs — the prickling of the hair on the back of their necks, the sweaty palms — that usually precede violence. That's when to call what counselors term a "time-out," when either the man or the woman will leave the tense domestic situation, to return later and talk it over.

Its foundation is a twice-a-week group session with a psychologist. But the group members themselves make the program successful.

Meetings are informal, free-ranging conversations on subjects from sex and diapers to "women's lib" and the male image.

Boe Egan, a psychologist, says much talk is directed toward redefining that traditional male image from what he calls the "strong, silent Clint Eastwood or John Wayne, macho image," where physical domination of women is accepted to a gentler, more emotive male who treats women as equals.

Brian, a young construction worker, says at one of the meetings that he admires Eastwood.

"He's OK. He's big, strong, handsome, doesn't take any ..."

"... yeah, and he kills people, right?" interrupts Richard. Brian shrugs, looks defeated. "Yeah, well ..."

"We once had a guy who came in and kept up this act for months that he'd stopped beating his wife, but he hadn't," says Sam Padilla, a member of AMEND since 1979. "Finally, we confronted him and said, 'Listen, you're lying and you've been lying for five months. You've got to come clean with us, or you've got to leave.'

"And this guy, he was a 31-year-old, started crying and confessed, just poured out his guts."

Peterson says that most of the men are with AMEND because their wives or girlfriends presented it as a last resort and admitting that they used violence is the first and hardest step. "Ninety-nine out of 100 are there to save the relationship," he says.

Padilla, 39, joined AMEND after he and his wife, Sherry, 28, had been separated for four months. They wanted to get back together, but, says Sherry, who had been in the hospital with a broken jaw, "We were afraid we'd kill each other."

Late one night, she saw a television advertisement for AMEND. She phoned Sam and they tried it. They have been together ever since.

Sam, a warehouse worker, is a typical AMEND member. Most are married, between 25 and 40, and hold blue-collar jobs. Peterson says violence strikes in families of all races and economic situations, but that social pressures make men from higher-income brackets more reluctant to admit their problem publicly.

Egan describes the men in his group as "nice, regular guys." Specialists say these nice guys are often violent to the women in their lives because a large percentage experienced or witnessed some form of violence in their families when they were growing up.

Reports Enjoys IRS Fight

By MARK SHENEFELT

CALDWELL, Idaho (UPI) — Sports reporter Bob Hooker's fascination for statistics has helped him bat at least .500 in a series of skirmishes with state and federal officials over his income taxes.

Hooker, 50, spends many weekend mornings slurping coffee and compiling records, schedules and other lists on high school and college teams and athletes. That's in addition to his regular duties of covering the Idaho Press-Tribune's sports beat.

A lot of his remaining spare time is devoted to memorizing court cases dealing with income tax laws. He's spent many hours in court and hearing rooms fighting for small tax refunds that tax agencies decided to contest.

Hooker claims he shot down one government argument a few years ago by quoting a dust-covered 1927 court ruling on which official lawyers, taken by surprise, weren't able to find any retaliatory ground.

But his crowning moment was winning a dispute with the Idaho Tax Commission in which he had claimed a deduction for the fat, green cigars he puffs much of the time. He had obtained a doctor's prescription saying the cigars had a medicinal purpose — they kept his weight down. As Hooker tells it, the commission gave up early in that battle.

Also in his win column are claims for depreciation on his watch — because he used it to time games he covered — and for the sneakers he wore while pounding the field covering local teams.

He did lose his bid to get a deduction on expenses stemming from his trips to tax offices at Boise for previous audits. The state Tax Commission and Internal Revenue Service also won several other rounds.

Once-Strict Amana Colonies Join In Chase For 'Almighty Dollar'

By ALICE NOBLE

AMANA, Iowa (UPI) — Lena Schuerer welcomed yet another visitor to the Amana Society museum, then threw a wrinkled arm over the back of a wooden chair and talked of the good old days of communal living in the Amana Colonies.

Surrounded by old documents, photographs and memorabilia, Mrs. Schuerer told of rising every day around 5 or 6 a.m. and working in the community kitchen with several other women until early afternoon.

"I was always used to getting up around six o'clock," she said. "I still do. I never wanted to steal God's time away. I get a lot of things done in the morning.

"We were self-sustaining," she said. "We had our big vegetable gardens, our own chickens, cows and pigs, and plenty of eggs. After World War I, people from the outside would come here and say they wish they had something to eat."

Community labor was a way of life for nearly 100 years in the Amana Colonies, a circle of seven villages nestled among the rolling hillsides of east central Iowa. Until 1932, all Amana property was held in common.

Mrs. Schuerer proudly told how each family member was provided shelter, food and clothing in exchange for doing their share in the community kitchens, manufacturing plants or farm fields.

"Now we chase the almighty dollar like you do," the woman said, sadly shaking her graying head. "We have to work to eat these days."

Although the colonies have been forced to adapt to modern times for survival, there remains a strong religious and community heritage among the Amana people that has weathered time and economic evolution.

The colonies were first formed near Buffalo, N.Y., in 1842 by a band of German immigrants who fled their homeland because of religious persecution.

Community members, led by inspired prophets Christian Metz and Barbara Heinemann, had protested the formality of the Lutheran Church in Germany and thus formed "The Community of True Inspiration."

In 1854, when the city of Buffalo encroached upon the isolation and serenity of the New York villages, Metz founded a new settlement in Iowa where an abundance of natural resources encouraged their self-sustaining lifestyle.

The 25,000-acre tract of Iowa land offered sandstone, limestone and clay for the huge colony houses, while hard timber was available for the furniture works and the Iowa River provided water power for the manufacturing plants.

The seven villages, which each served as the nucleus of the surrounding farmland, were set up "an hour apart by oxen," or 2 to 5 miles away from each other.

Woolen mills, a furniture factory, meat smoking plants, wineries, bakeries and other industries were established to provide the villages with the basic necessities of life. The colonies gained a reputation for their quality products, which is still evident today.

One business, the Amana refrigeration plant, became a household name through its refrigerators and freezers. The company later merged with the Raytheon Corp. and has since become a multi-million dollar kitchen appliance business.

There are a lot of things that aren't the way they used to be, Mrs. Schuerer complained.

"The houses back then are not like the ones built today," she said, looking around the walls of the museum. "This one is over 100 years old and it will last another 100 years. It's all the German influence.

"We used to go to church 11 times a week. But now even a lot of outside preachers complain they can't have church services twice on Sunday because nobody comes. That's because they're all chasing the almighty dollar."

Talking about her parents, grandparents and six siblings, Mrs. Schuerer said: "We had a wonderful way of living. I think there's nothing nicer than a large family. Years ago the family stayed together. Now the 16-year-old can't wait to get a driver's license so he can take the car.

"And we children had a good education. We get letters here from college students and it's a shame — the misspellings and terrible penmanship. If we had one word wrong on a list of 100 spelling words, we were ashamed.

"Now I'm not ashamed of my eighth grade education."

The Amana way of living has often been confused with that of the Amish, who shun modern conveniences and much contact with the outside world. But, as a Scottish tourist remarked to Mrs. Schuerer, "They're way, way different."

Don Shoup, secretary-treasurer of the Amana Society, said the days of communal living ended in 1932 when he was almost 4 years old.

"I can remember the old community kitchen, just barely," he said. "And I can remember the kinder schedule of which the modern day parallel would be the day care school."

Shoup said several factors — economics, absence of spiritual leadership and modernization — led to abandonment of the communal lifestyle and adoption of a more capitalistic form of living in a move called "The Great Change."

"It was during the Great Depression and the society was teetering on the brink of bankruptcy," he said. "And the charismatic leadership was not available at that time.

"Also, some of our people discovered under the communal form of existence, they got fed and clothed no matter how hard they worked. There was no incentive to work."

"In the mid '20s, Highways 6 and 149 came through," Shoup said. "Isolationism had been a necessary ingredient of the society. When the world came to our doorstep, the younger generation saw what it was like and wanted to be a part of it."

To cure these ills, the society voted to incorporate. Each working adult was given a share of common stock in the corporation and received a share of "preferred stock" for each year of service prior to 1932.

About 900 shares of common stock were issued, each worth about $80 at the time. The same stock is worth about $65,000 a share today, Shoup said.

In addition, each family was granted ownership of its home and began to manage its own finances.

"One of the biggest changes was they had to put kitchens in each house because the community kitchens were no longer used," Shoup said. "There was a brisk business in kerosene ranges and cooking stoves.

"It also necessitated the conversion of recipes from bushels and pecks to smaller portions."

Budgeting became a major concern, he said, because "people hadn't been accustomed to handling money. Some of these people had been in the society for the first 30-40 years and all of sudden they were faced with finances."

Although the society is no longer strictly communal, many community aspects still remain. About 95 percent of the land in the area is owned by the Amana Society, including most of the major businesses in the towns.

"We act as the employer and hire people to work for us on our farms and other shops," Shoup said, explaining there are more than 4,000 jobs in the colonies but only about 1,600 residents.

"I don't think there are too many small communities that have that kind of employment rate."

The society owns the utilities and sells the services to residents at a fee comparable to surrounding communities. But a number of governmental functions, such as street lights and sidewalks, are provided to residents tax free.

Aside from its corporate duties, the society also acts as a government body with 13 elected members of the board of directors.

One of the major components of the 1932 incorporation was to separate the church and business functions. The Amana Church Society provides leadership in religion and is headed by a board of elders.

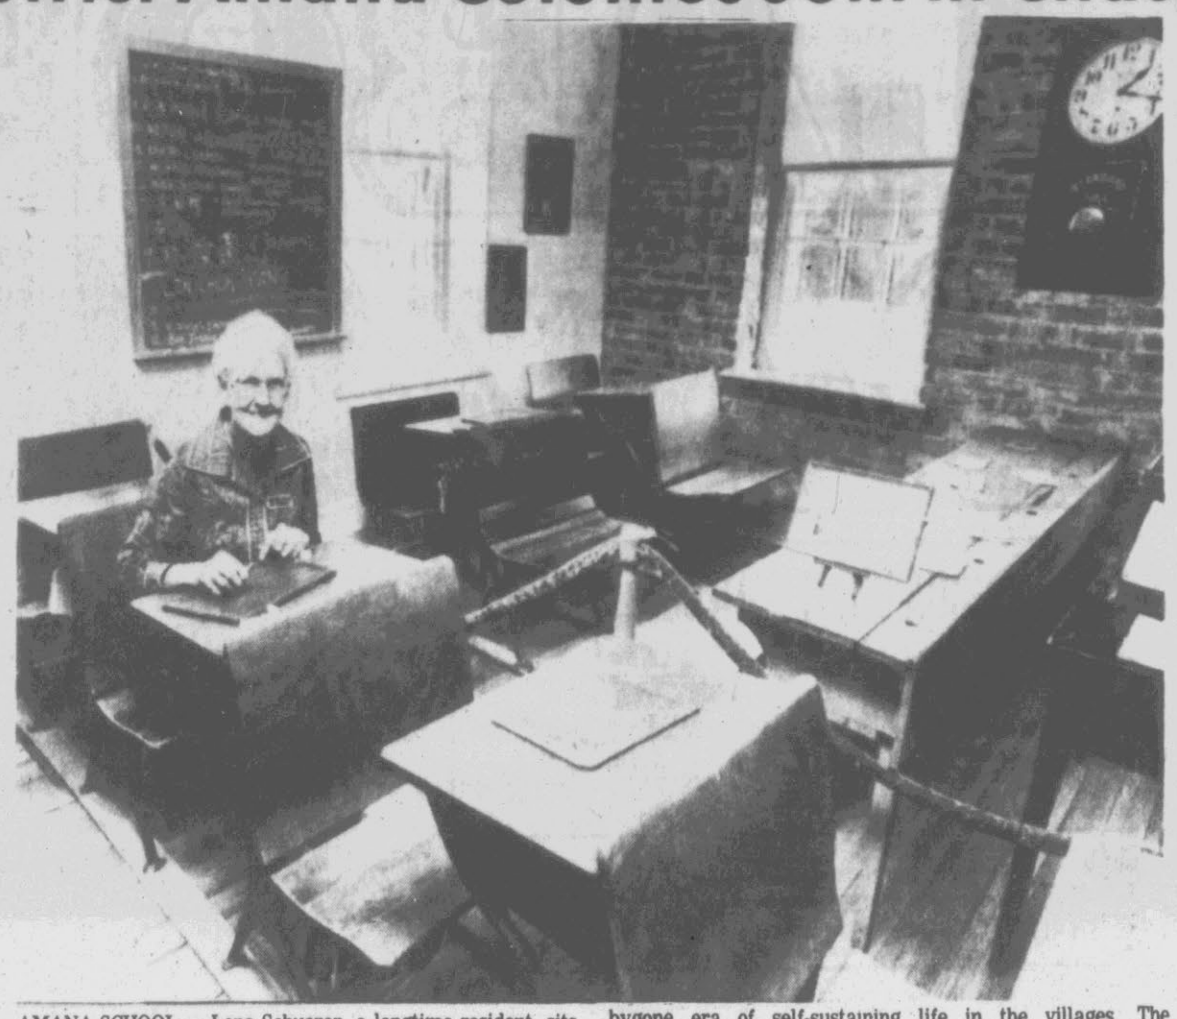
While there are no inspirational leaders to follow in the footsteps of Christian Metz, the elders — church laymen — conduct the services on a rotating schedule, Shoup said.

The historic two-story colony houses still adorn the main thoroughfares of the villages, but they are flanked on the secondary streets by comfortable ranch-style homes with swimming pools and speedboats in the yard.

However, some things are still done the old way. Visitors enjoy watching artisans at work in the wineries, bakeries, furniture factory and candle shop.

The community kitchens are now privately-owned restaurants. But mouth-watering German food is still cooked there and served family style to colony visitors, generally for less than $8 per person.

On the eastern edge of Amana, huge wooden looms manned by non-union laborers noisily weave a popular design at the Amana Woolen Mill. In the fading whitewash building nearby, Taugenichts the cat is testimony to the laid-back atmosphere of the business.



AMANA SCHOOL — Lena Schuerer, a longtime resident, sits in a school room at Amana, Iowa, where she discussed early communal life in the seven Amana Colonies. The preserved school and nearby museum give visitors a glimpse into a bygone era of self-sustaining life in the villages. The blackboard in the rear displays names of foreign visitors to the school. Ted Turner Maps Plans For Cable News Battle

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

ATLANTA (UPI) — Ted Turner isn't the sort who would confess himself bewildered in most situations, but he said he is at least bemused at the prospect of a cable news service in which the main newsgathering arm refuses to report major stories.

That, he charged, is what his newest competitor is about to produce.

The latest target of the man who created the Cable News Network with its 24-hour, all-news format and the sea of red ink in which it has sailed for the past 15 months, is Satellite NewsChannels — the offspring of ABC and Westinghouse's Group W.

"It's a joke," Turner said. And he added, "conflict of interest" as well.

ABC and Westinghouse's Group W, which just acquired the Teleprompter system with its 1.4 million cable hookups, will launch its own 24-hour, all-news cable operation next spring.

With Turner's operation losing in the neighborhood of $1 million a month, the competition might be deemed fatal, but all Turner heard in the Aug. 12 announcement was the voice of ABC News President Roone Arledge.

"Arledge said, and I quote, 'If Barbara Walters were to interview the Ayatollah Khomeini, obviously we would consider that an exclusive for ABC's 'World News Tonight,'" he said.

"For the first time in the history of journalism, a journalistic effort has been started where the news producing partner has a conflict of interest with his established business and announced at the onset that major stories will be withheld because of a conflict of interest situation.

"It's never been done before. How can you accept a news service that's deliberately withholding important stories, and it's supposed to be on 24 hours a day? All this is going to be is a promotion for the ABC evening news. They're going to say, 'the big stories come on at 7...'"

CNN's losses, and the burden of a recent loan of $50 million, might have the average businessman in a state of shock, but "Captain Outrageous," as the Cutty Sark ads call Turner, is no ordinary businessman.

He only paced the floor of his spacious office as he discussed the effrontery of ABC, which he said would love nothing better than to put him out of business, because he is incapable of sitting still for more than 10 minutes under any circumstances.

"It's going to come back and haunt them," he said of Arledge's announcement that "proprietary" news stories will not be offered to the new ABC-Westinghouse cable system. "They've lost all their credibility. It's got to be a total disaster. The cable industry's not going to accept a service like this."

Turner's answer to the ABC-Westinghouse move was the announcement that on Jan. 1 he will launch a similar "short form" news service to be called CNN-2. But Turner denied his proposed new operation was prompted strictly by the competition.

"We had a budget worked up for it a year ago," he said. "It's nothing new."

As if to back the contention, bulldozers — in action the day he announced CNN-2 — roared over emerging foundations for the new facility behind the converted country club he uses for his CNN and WTBS Super Station operation.

Even with CNN-2, Turner will be bucking financial odds. Satellite NewsChannels proposes to give its service to cable system operators. Turner will supply CNN-2 free, but only to operators who also buy CNN. If they do not buy CNN, at 15 cents a subscriber, CNN-2 will cost them 5 cents a subscriber.

"They've got to undercut us because we're established in the market," he said of the competition's give-away. "There is no reason for us to match them because we don't want people taking CNN-2 unless they're taking CNN-1."

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—You have mentioned often, in your columns a "weak two-bid," especially in your reports on tournament bridge. What exactly is a "weak" two-bid and how is partner supposed to distinguish one from the "strong" two-bids that I have been using for some 30 years?—R. Logan, Atlanta, Ga.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—This bid is nothing new; it has been around bridge for some 40 years. Among its most ardent supporters was the late, great Howard Schenken.

Like an opening three-bid, an opening bid of two in any suit except clubs is preemptive. It shows a slightly shorter suit than does a three-bid, but it usually also has a slightly better hand, though still not strong enough for an opening bid of one in a suit.

The requirements are as follows:

1) A good six-card suit, headed by at least Q-J-9;
2) about 6-10 points if not vulnerable, 8-12 points if vulnerable;
3) no more than 1½ to 2 defensive tricks.

While most other preemptive bids are designed purely for obstructive purposes—to interfere with the opponents' auction at as high a level as possible—the weak two-bid is a two-edged sword: its purpose is as much offensive as defensive. Since it describes opener's hand so accurately, it is possible for partner to judge finely whether to bid on for game, to increase the preemption by raising opener's suit, or to pass and see what the opponents elect to do. That is why Schenken demanded strict adherence to the requirements for opening with a weak two-bid. If you depart from them, you make it difficult for partner to accurately assess the potential of the hand.

Like all preemptive bids, a weak two-bid denies holding two aces. Also, it should seldom, if ever, be made on a hand that contains a void. And as a general rule, the bid denies holding a four-card major as a side suit.

Weak two-bids are conventional opening bids. So you have to have an agreement with partner if you are going to play them. That means that you can no longer use an opening two-bid to show a strong hand. How then do you tell partner that you have a hand that requires little or no help to make game?

If you go back to the start of this reply, you will see that weak two-bids are played in three suits only. The fourth two-bid, two clubs, is used to show a forcing bid in an undisclosed suit. The bid does not promise a club suit, but merely a hand with which you would have opened two of your suit if you had been playing forcing two-bids. The negative response is two diamonds. Any bid by opener shows the suit in which he would have opened with a strong two-bid, while two no trump shows a strong balanced hand.

Q.—Do you enjoy having a woman as your partner?

A.—I presume you are referring to bridge. While I know many fine women players, I must admit that I prefer playing with men. This might get the ERA group up in arms, but there is no denying the superiority of men at the bridge table. Since I like the strongest competition possible, that means that I prefer playing with men as my partners and my opponents.

Mrs. Harris, now a resident of Jacksonville, has won numerous awards for her paintings. A native of Buffalo, N.Y., she taught school in North Carolina for many years, and now teaches and paints in her home studio.

Guatemala Suffers Drop In Tourism

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (UPI) — Guatemalan tourism was down between $10 million and $15 million in the first half of this year compared with the same period in 1980, partly because of spiraling political violence, officials said recently.

Economics Minister Valentin Solorzano said the government, private businessmen and the state-airline Aviateca are launching a promotion campaign, offering greatly reduced airplane fares and hotel rates to attract tourists.

At least two hotels have closed this year in Antiqua, a Spanish colonial city 30 miles west of Guatemala City long popular with American and European tourists.

Scores of shops selling handcrafted goods by Indian artesans also have shut down and businessmen, hotel owners, taxi drivers and shoeshine boys report earnings down this year by as much as 70 percent.

Guatemalan Tourism Director Alvaro Arzu blamed the slump on international economic factors such as high inflation and expensive energy and what he called "negative information" about Guatemala from abroad.

The London-based human rights group Amnesty International has estimated Guatemala recorded at least 3,000 political assassinations last year, when it earned $80 million from more than 500,000 foreign tourists.

The Tennessee-sized Central American nation has been torn by growing political strife between leftist guerrillas, government security forces and rightist "death squads" allegedly composed of retired and off-duty policemen.

Shakespeare Festival Lists Fall Plans

HIGH POINT — The North Carolina Shakespeare Festival's company of actors, directors and designers are readying the stage for the forthcoming fall season of the festival, following a successful fifth summer season.

Beginning Thursday, Sept. 10, the N.C. Shakespeare Festival will feature three plays to be performed in rotating repertory through Oct. 10.

The first play to be presented, opening Sept. 10, is "Just A Song At Twilight," a collection of famous American vaudeville sketches, British music hall songs and original pieces developed by the NCSF acting company. Among the vaudeville sketches are "Slowly I Turned," "Tongue and Cheese" and an original spoof of Hamlet. Favorite popular songs of past years incorporated in the sketches include ones such as "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now" and "For Me and My Gal."

Sept. 19 is the opening date for "Wait Until Dark," Frederick Knott's chilling melodrama about a young blind woman who is terrorized in her New York apartment by a ruthless killer and his accomplices as they attempt to recover a musical doll filled with heroin she unknowingly posseses.

The third of the trio, Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors," is one of the bard's earlier plays and his first comedy. The play was written as a farce and is full of slapstick buffoonery with its characters entangled in absurd predicaments.

Tickets are now on sale by mail through the High Point Theater Box Office, P. O. Box 6066, 305 North Main Street, High Point, N.C., 27262. Prices are $6.50 for adults and $5 for students for evening performances on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday and for Sunday matinees; and $7.50 for adults and $6 for students for performances on Friday and Saturday. For more information on these plays, call 887-3001.

To Stage Plays At Greenville Museum

Something new is being added to the autumn '81 season at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 Evans St. The new attraction is a lunchtime theater showcasing the work of local writers, actors and directors.

The initial season will include "Potato Girl," a one-act play by Greenville playwright Christine Rusch, selected by the Ensemble Studio Theater in New York as part of their Octoberfest of new plays; another play by Mrs. Rusch, "Beyond the Blues," a tribute to North Carolina's own John Coltrane, and other short plays by local artists.

The lunchtime theater will open at noon on Wednesday, Sept. 16, with a production of "Aging Swiftly," also by Mrs. Rusch. It will be directed by Ayden's Joey Pollock and will feature Joel and Judy McLawhorn.

Adult members of the public are welcome to attend, and there is no admission to be charged. Those attending are encouraged to bring a sack lunch. Beverage will be provided by the Museum.

Shows begin at 12:15 p.m. promptly and will be designed to fit a lunch hour although audiences will be encouraged to linger and to comment on the production.

The 110 watercolors and drawings in ink, graphite, charcoal, chalks and gouache survey French draftsmanship from the end of the 16th through the mid-19th century.

Chrysler Museum Gets Warhol Painting

NORFOLK, Va. — The Chrysler Museum has announced its most recent acquisition, a portrait of Jack Tanzer by Andy Warhol. The addition of the painting marks a total of four works by Warhol now in the museum's contemporary collection.

Tanzer is a vice president with M. Knoedler and Co., a prominent New York art gallery, and continues to be an important patron of the Chrysler Museum. His earlier gifts of over 100 Pre-Columbian works make that collection one of the most representative in the Southeast. The Andy Warhol portrait is Tanze's first contribution of contemporary art to Chrysler Museum.

The Chrysler Museum is located at Olney Road and Mowbray Arch, Norfolk. Hours are 10 to 4 Tuesdays through Saturdays and 1 to 5 on Sundays. Admission is free.

Green Gallery Show

GREENSBORO — An exhibition opening Thursday, Sept. 10, at Green Hill Art Gallery, Greensboro, honors the work of four artists chosen in 1980 as the recipients of four North Carolina Artist Fellowships. The exhibition will be on view through Oct. 18.

The four whose work is being shown are: Victor Faccinto of Winston-Salem, paintings and film; Maude Gatewood, Yanceyville, paintings; Robert Levin, Burnsville, glass art; and Elizabeth Matheson, Chapel Hill, photography.

The four were chosen from 127 artist applicants from across North Carolina in 1980, the first year of the program for visual arts developed by the North Carolina Arts Council.

The exhibition of their work is jointly sponsored by the North Carolina Arts Council and the National Endowment for the Arts, Washington, D.C. Green Hill Art Gallery is a non-profit art gallery and educational facility featuring the visual arts of North Carolina. The gallery is located at 200 North Davie St. in the downtown Greensboro Arts Center.

During the course of the exhibition, a special audio/slide presentation with taped interviews of the four artists will be presented each Wednesday at noon in the gallery.

Gallery hours are 10-5 Tuesdays through Fridays, and 2-5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays. Admission is free.

Restored Washington Portrait On View

By PEGGY HOWE
N.C. Department Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — ". . . Now in its finest condition since it left Sully's studio in the fall of 1818," according to the conservators.

Next week, beginning Thursday, Sept. 10, Thomas Sully's copy of Gilbert Stuart's "Lansdowne" portrait of George Washington, recently restored by the conservation staff of the N. C. Museum of Art, begins a three-week temporary exhibit at the museum before returning to its permanent place in the State Capitol.

The 162-year old Lansdowne, on display through Sept. 30, is one of two portraits of Washington commissioned by the N. C. Legislature. The other one never got to Raleigh.

In 1815 the lawmakers empowered the governor to order two portraits of the late president for the House and Senate chambers of the first State House (site of the present 1840 Capitol).

In correspondence with Baltimore artist Rembrandt Peale, Gov. William Miller found his $3,000 price tag too steep. Sully's $1,300 quotation for both portraits, complete with frame, was more reasonable.

Due to a communications breakdown between the governor and Sully, the second portrait, entitled "Washington at the Passage of the Delaware," was too large. The artist had misunderstood the dimension of the proposed canvas, and upon completion, it measured 17 feet, 3 inches by 12 feet, 5 inches, far larger than the 10- by 8-feet wall space in the Senate Chamber.

Sully agreed to keep the painting without obligation to the state and it remained his property for many years, eventually passing into possession of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts where it is presently in storage.

The 8- by 5-feet copy of the "Lansdowne" was delivered to the State House in November 1818 and hung in the House Chamber. Thirteen years later on June 21, 1831, the State House burned. Valiant efforts of several Raleigh citizens saved the Sully portrait from the flames.

At the completion of the present Capitol in 1849 the portrait was rehung on the wall behind the speaker's desk in the House Chamber. For 140 years sunlight and improper handling took their toll on the frame and canvas, and by early 1980 the portrait was in critical condition.

However, no funds were available for restoration. After various appeals, the Council of State allocated $10,000 from the contingency and emergency fund for restortion, which begin in April 1980. The canvas was relined, cleaned, retouched and varnished. During the cleaning, conservators found scorch marks on the canvas from the 1831 fire, and the artist's signature in the lower left corner.

The historic frame, made by Philadelphia carver and gilder Marinus W. Pike, was also heavily damaged. Called by the Winterthur Museum "a fine example of Federal-style carving and the only known example of Pike's artistry," it had lost nearly all its original gold leaf.

Funds for the frame's preservation were provided by generous grants to the State Capitol Foundation from the N.C. Art Society and the N.C. Society of the Cincinnati.

Following the temporary exhibit at the N.C. Museum of Art, the Sully copy of the "Lansdowne" portrait of Washington will be returned to its permanent location in the House Chamber.

Admission is free and everyone is invited to view the portrait during its exhibition between Sept. 10-30. The N.C. Museum of Art is located at 107 East Morgan St., downtown Raleigh. Museum hours are 10 to 5 Tuesdays through Saturdays, and from 2 to 6 on Sundays. Admission is free.

ECU Lecture Series Slated

ECU News Bureau

The 1981-82 East Carolina University Lecture Series has been announced by Mendenhall Student Center. The series will consist of five internationally recognized personalities. Each lecture will be held in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center, and will begin at 8 p.m.

Season tickets are now on sale in the Central Ticket Office, located in Mendenhall Student Center. Tickets are priced at $15 and will be available until Oct. 23. For additional information call 757-6611, extension 266.

The lecture series begins on Monday, Oct. 23, when England's former Prime Minister James Callaghan will speak. Callaghan will discuss England's current state.

Buckminster Fuller, called by Marshall McLuhan "the Leonardi da Vinci of our times," will speak on Tuesday, Nov. 17. Fuller has become famous for architectural designs featuring houses that fly, bathrooms without water and the geodesic dome. He is widely known as a pioneer, unafraid to think in new ways.

The lectures continue on Thursday, Feb.4, when Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York will give a lecture. One of the most independent members of Congress and the Congressional Black Caucus, she has become a of the rights of the downtrodden. She currently is preparing to challenge the administration's position of relaxing Title IX regulations.

James J. Kilpatrick, one of the leading spokesmen for the conservative view, will speak on Wednesday, March 17. His column appears in more than 400 newspapers. In addition to the column, Kilpatrick has been and is active in television as a critic and commentator. He appeared for nine years on "60 Minutes" as the conservative spokesman for Point-Counterpoint. He is also a member of Agronsky and Company, a widely snydicated program of political analysis.

Negotiations are under way for a fifth speaker for the series. Information regarding this lecture will be announced at a later date.

Passion For Farm Life Leads To Art Career

EDITOR'S NOTE — Lowell Davis' return to his roots has been an unqualified success. Tired of the swinging life of a Dallas advertising executive, he returned to his homeground in southwestern Missouri, restored an old farm and started painting. Seven years later, he's selling paintings of farm life by the hundreds.

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

CARTHAGE, Mo. (AP) — When Lowell Davis strides to the barnyard and bellows "soo-EE" to slop his hogs, the slang he sings is the sound of success.

Davis is lord and master of Foxfire Farm, a five-acre, vintage 1930s homestead, where he has parlayed his passion for pigs and picket fences into a career earning big bucks painting farm scenes of yesteryear.

He bought the spread in 1974 for $12,500 with a house that was uninhabitable, a barn that had fallen in, a pond choked with weeds and every fence in need of mending. But after 14 years as a Dallas advertising executive, Davis thought Foxfire looked like heaven.

"I was in the country club set in Texas," recalls Davis, a soft-spoken, 44-year-old given to wearing clean overalls and white muslin shirts. "I had new cars, a big home, the whole bit. Then I lost it all and decided none of it was worth the price.

"Material things aren't the answer in life. As soon as you get a new Lincoln, you'll be looking at a Mercedes. That realization hit me right between the eyes. So I came home."

He was born in nearby Red Oak, a bumpy stop in the road. Growing up above his pappy's general store, Davis learned to whittle before he could read.

'The oldtimers would come in and sit by the stove and show me how to work the wood," he says. "All my other ancestors were farmers except one grandfather, who was something of a court jester. I must have gotten my wanderlust from him. I was always too small to help them farm, so I was the water boy. When I was hauling buckets, I used to pick up pieces of clay and sculpt things. I was always doodling, carving wood or drawing. And nobody discouraged me, so I kept at it."

He wandered to Texas in the 1950s and got a job sweeping floors in a printing company and painted at night.

"I began doing wildlife pictures and western scenes, and looking back on it I guess I was almost a pioneer in the wildlife field," says Davis, who has three grown children by a previous marriage and two toddlers at Foxfire. "Soon I was making more money with my nighttime art than my daytime sweeping. So I went to an advertising agency and they hired me as their art director."

Davis, a slight, gray-haired man, is self-taught. A decade ago, his marriage had broken up and he was bored and stifled at his job.

When he and Charlie returned to southwestern Missouri, they had just enough to buy the farm. "But we're gamblers and optimists," said his wife, who grew up in Africa and knew little of American farming. "We just took it one day and one layer of dirt at a time."

Gradually their vision — "a cross between Old McDonald's and a rural Disneyland" — took shape. The big square two-story white house was restored and revealed precious hardwood floors and molding. Davis scoured the countryside for antique tools and implements. An abandoned shack became a spacious studio with room for guests.

They built corncribs, split-rail fences and sheep shed and spruced up an outhouse with quarter-moon decorations on its door. They bought goats, sheep, pigs, chickens, cows, ducks, geese, guinea hens, a mule and a horse. He planted a few crops and a huge vegetable garden.

He also started painting the raccoons, deer and rabbits that nibbled in his field and "gradually began learning the animals' habitat, and the paintings became very realistic and life-like."

Davis paints between 6 p.m. and 2 a.m. every day he's home. "One day it dawned on me that nobody was painting farm animals and farm scenes. I had a really good instinct about the potential, and started doing the scenes I saw around me every day in my own yard. That's when, after all those years, I became an 'overnight success.'"

When he and Charlie weren't pruning Foxfire, they were traveling to art shows. The farm scenes sold faster than Davis could paint them, and he realized the nostalgic nerve his paintings were touching. He signed with Schmid, a distributor of collectibles, for lithographs, plates and porcelain barnyard scenes for 300 gift shops.

"Four years ago I was straining to get $500 for a painting, barely keeping my head above water with my art," says Davis, sipping sun tea from an old fruit jar. "Now I get paid just to create and go on tour a few times a year to promote my work. My paintings are going for upwards of $4,000, and I get a royalty on all the things I create for Schmid. I don't have to do any of that selling."

His financial success has enabled Davis to open The Flatlander Gallery in the county seat, Carthage. He has recruited friends to sell their work in the shop across from the old courthouse.

"I'm trying to educate folks in the Midwest to buy good, original art for pleasure and investment. There's just as much money and just as many people in mid-America as there are in Texas or Arizona or the West Coast. I think art is really starting to catch on here."

Davis paints grinning pigs and pigment cows with huge limpid eyes.

"When I paint, I think of Remington and Russell when they went out West and didn't actually live there, but painted the remnants of that long-gone life.

"Ten years from now much of America's rural world could be gone too, so I'm hurrying to paint what I remember as a favorite time in my life — a threshing crew on an old-time harvester, a calf being born on a snowy night, a tabby mother trying to get her newborn kitten out of an old tin milk can — and this makes me happy."

JAPANESE ART

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles County Museum of Art has an exhibition of 153 Japanese netsuke — miniature ivory and wood sculptures which adorned costumes — on view through Oct. 25.

The objects were selected from private collections in Southern California to present a historical survey of the medium. The works date from the 18th to the 20th centuries.

FRANKENTHALER SHOW

BOSTON (AP) — The exhibition, "The Prints of Helen Frankenthaler," is being shown at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts Sept. 16-Nov. 8.

The show of some 100 working proofs and finished prints spans almost 20 years of the works in this medium by Frankenthaler.

TOKYO FESTIVAL

TOKYO (AP) — A festival bringing together video tape producers from around the world will be held in Tokyo Nov. 17.

The festival, sponsored by Victor Co. of Japan, will judge documentaries, dramas and creative productions, such as computer use with video tape.

Last year's festival attracted 669 professional and amateur video entries from Japan, Europe, Canada and the United States.

Variety Of Films Selected By Cinema Sociaty Of Greenville

Six especially chosen movies, dating from an early 1926 Hitchcock thriller to recent European and Australian films and including a grand prize winner at the Cannes Film Festival of 1975 make up the offerings planned by the Cinema Society of Greenville.

Bill Stephenson, spokesman for the program, notes "the series is a good mixture of the international, the classic and the offbeat in films — well designed for the Greenville area filmgoer who wants more than is otherwise available locally."

Foreign films included in the series will have either English soundtracks or be dubbed. Series tickets for the six films are priced at $10, or an average of $1.67 per film.

The ticket price also includes free coffee and refreshments to be served from 6:30 to 7 p.m. in the multi-purpose room at Mendenhall Student Center. (This service is not possible on Sept. 13 due to prior committment of the area).

The program continues through Dec. 13. All film screenings will be at 7 p.m. on Sundays in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University campus.

A minimum of 120 subscribers are needed, so those who are interested in having this series available are asked to subscribe early so that minimum costs can be fulfilled and the series made possible.

Series tickets can be subscribed to by sending a check to: Karen Blansfield or Glen Brewster, Department of English, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834. Tickets will also be available at the door on the evening of the first showing on Sept. 13 if the series is not sold out ahead of time. Admission will be by season series tickets only. There will be no tickets sold for individual films.

The movies to be shown and dates scheduled are:

— Sept. 13 — A French comedy, "Get Out Your Handkerchiefs," a young husband who sets out to cure his wife's blues by providing her with a boyfriend. Every sentimental cliche of four-handkerchiefs romantic dramas is kidded before the trio arrive at a happy ending.

— Sept. 20 — "Despair," a film by the noted German moviemaker, Rainer Werner Fassbinder, has a screenplay by Tom Stoppard and is based on a novel by Vladimir Nabokov. British actor Dirk Bogarde stars in this deeply emotional story.

— Oct. 4 — A film with an intriguing title, "Cars That Eat People" is the first feature film by Australian director Peter Weir, who has gone on to gain international fame for "Picnic at Hanging Rock" and "The Last Wave."

— Nov. 15 — A postwar French classic, Marcel Ophuls' "Lola Montez," deals with the legendary dancer and courtesan who captivated the royalty of 19th century Europe. Many critics have called this one of the most lushly beautiful films ever made.

— Dec. 6 — Two early classic films will be shown on this date. One is an Alfred Hitchcock movie made in 1926. The other is a 1932 W.C. Fields film, "The Dentist," directed by Leslie Pearce.

— Dec. 13 — The sixth and final screening in the series is an Italian comedy, "Down and Dirty." Nino Manfredi, remembered for his performance in the well-known film "Bread and Chocolate," is the star of "Down and Dirty," which won the Grand Prize at the Cannes Film Festival in 1975.

THE FIRST OF SIX FILMS . . . to be shown in the Cinema Society of Greenville series is "Get Out Your Handkerchiefs," a French comedy starring Gerard Depardieu, Patrick Dewaere and Carol Laure. The new season opens on Nov. 2 with a performance by the only North Carolina group of the six, the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra. Tickets are now on sale at $20 for the six performances at the Central Ticket Office. All performances will be held at 8 p.m. on in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center.

Travel Films For ECU Listed

ECU News Bureau

"See the world and never leave your seat" is the motto of this season's Travel-Adventure Film Subscription Series at East Carolina.

Five feature films in the series, each scheduled for 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater in Mendenhall Student Center, will take viewers to interesting places in both hemispheres.

Tickets for the 1981-82 ECU Travel-Adventure Film series are $9 each and are available at the ECU Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center. Mail order for tickets may be charged to the user's bank card.

Each film is narrated by its producer.

"The French Riveria," produced by Robin Williams, will open the travel film series on Oct. 14. Highlights of the film include visits to Nice and the Bay of Angels, the home of Picasso, and the tiny, beautiful principality of Monaco.

"The Great Train Trip Across Siberia and Around the World," narrated by producer William Stockdale, is set for Nov. 23. The film takes viewers across the 5,800 mile train trek through the heartland of the Soviet Empire. In addition, the Trans-Siberian Express will tour around the world, with stopovers in Paris, Prague, Warsaw, Tokyo and Banff.

"Two Tickets to Timbuctoo," with producer Kenneth Richter, features the 11,000-mile adventure of two people traveling from Algiers into the Congo and back aboard a station wageon. This feature is scheduled for Jan. 26.

"Bewitching Brazil," produced by Karl E. Stein, is the film being shown on Feb. 25. Highlights of this film tour, across the sprawling nation which borders all but two countries of the entire continent of South America, are visits to Rio de Janeiro and Salvador.

Don Cooper's "Hawaii" concludes the series on March 22. Even though Hawaii is our 50th state, this group of islands lying 2,000 miles beyond the western coast of the mainland is so different that their attachment to the United States seems almost inconsistent. The film portrays the Hawaii known as a tourist haven of eternal spring and also as a land steeped in ancient Polynesian tradition.

ECU Artists Series Announced

ECU News Bureau

The East Carolina University 1981-82 Artist Series offers performances by six of the nation's most talented musicians and music ensembles.

Public season tickets for all six concerts are priced at $20 each and are now available at the ECU Central Ticket Office. All concerts are scheduled for 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater in the ECU Mendenhall Student Center.

The series opens Nov. 2 with the Piedmont Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Nicholas Harsanyi. Established in 1968 by the Rockefeller and N. C. School of the Arts foundations, the orchestra has toured widely throughout the eastern United States.

The orchestra's performances have included concerts at Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., at Lincoln Center in New York and in major concert series from Detroit south to Miami. In addition, the ensemble has also appeared with soloists such as Claude Frank, Lili Krauss and Jorge Bolet and has a new Vox recording of rare works for small orchestra by Haydn.

— Second on the series is the Norman Luboff Choir, a choral ensemble whose range is extensive. Its program, set for Nov. 19, will include works by masters such as Bach and Mozart, contemporary compositions and Luboff's own arrangements of popular show tunes and folk songs.

The choir generally performs as many as 100 concerts per season, and has been heard on more than 75 recordings during the past two decades.

— The six-year old Manhattan Woodwind Quintet will appear at ECU on Jan. 19. Winner of the 1978 Artists International Competition, the group is recognized for its musical integrity.

Members of the quintet, all graduates of the Juilliard and Manhattan schools of music are, Susan Deaver, flute; Jessica Murrow, oboe; Richard Shapiro, clarinet; David Granger, bassoon, and William Barnewitz, horn. Their repertoire ranges from Renaissance through contemporary chamber works.

— Dutch soprano Elly Ameling, who will be performing at ECU on Feb. 23, is recognized as a foremost female singer of German lieder. Since her American debut at Lincoln Center in 1968, she has performed with many leading symphonies and appeared as guest artist at several major music festivals.

Her current season will include performances with the Cincinnati and San Francisco Orchestras and three appearances with The Hague Philharmonic during its American tour. The Philharmonc concerts are sponsored by Queen Beatrix of The Netherlands.

— Guitarist Michael Lorimer, a protege of Andres Segovia, will perform March 18 at ECU. He is the first American guitarist invited to perform in the Soviet Union, which he toured in 1975 and again in 1977.

Lorimer has presented the American premieres of several guitar concerti and solo guitar works, including compositions by Andre Previn and William Bolcom. He is featured in a PBS special, "The Artistry of Michael Lorimer" and writes a classical guitar column in "Guitar Player Magazine."

— Pianist Shura Cherkassky will conclude the ECU Artists Series on April 13. A pianist of the grand Romantic tradition, Cherkassky began his performing career with a 1923 debut tour and a command performance at the White House for President Harding.

A native of Russia who emigrated to the U.S. as a young man, he has performed at numerous prestigious musical festivals in Europe, and has toured in the Far East, Australia, Africa and India. His interpretations of 19th century piano music have been recorded by six major record companies.

Carolina Theater Offers Touring Program

CHAPEL HILL — Carolina Regional Theater (CRT) has announced details of its September 1981 — June 1982 Touring Program Season. Four diverse theatrical productions are being offered on the tour program, which is available for presentation throughout North Carolina for community, school or other organizations.

The four productions, and the fee charged for a single performance are:

— "Tennessee's Waltz," fee $1,000. This combination of dramatic poetry and original music in a Southern setting becomes a cabaret of Williams' little-known poetic characerizations and reminiscences. The material is drawn from two of the author's anthologies — "In the Winter of Cities" and "Androgyne, Mon Amor." The work reveals many of the characters and situations more familiar to audiences through his best known stage works.

Earlier this year, after seeing a production, Tennessee Williams said "CRT's production of 'Tennessee'w Waltz' has given me one of the most pleasurable experiences of my professional life."

— Billed as a new kind of musical, "Jacques Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris," for which the fee is $900, 'covers an evening of songs by Jacques Brel, songs well known for their wide range of emotional experience.

A Neil Simon comedy, "The Good Doctor," is another CRT offering. This play is a fanciful adaptation of Chekhov's witty tales and reveals affectionate portraits of people. The fee for "The Good Doctor" is $800.

— A one-woman entertainment completes the quartet of CRT touring productions. Martha Nell Hardy is the actress featured in "Tamsen Donner, a Woman's Journey." Through the eyes of Tamsen Donner audiences see the unfolding of a daring westward caravan of wagons as they cross the continent from Illinois to California in 1846. The fee for this show is $750.

CRT productions are designed for maximum efficiency in touring and can play in almost any type of facility, including theaters, gymnasiums and meeting halls. Technical requirements are few, as all the shows are readily adaptable and can be tailored to meet different needs. A savings of 25 to 50 percent is available on the booking of a second performance in the same season.

CRT receives grant assistance from North Carolina Theater Arts, N. C. Department of Cultural Resources.

Clubs, groups or organizations interested in complete details are to write to: CRT, P.O. Drawer 1169, Chapel Hill, N.C., 27514.

Tar Heel Book List From N.C. Presses

North Carolina's two major presses, John F. Blair Publishers of Winston-Salem and the University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill, each have substantial catalogues of books of especial interest to readers looking for material relating to North Carolina.

With summer activities drawing to a close, and with more reading time coming up for most people, a few suggestions — some previously published, some forthcoming — from the current catalogues of the two publishers are offered for the interest of readers looking for Tar Heel material.

John F. Blair Publishers

With photographs, 288 pages. (Tentative price for this forthcoming book is $14.95).

— Company Shops: The Town Built By A Railroad. By Durward T. Stokes. Before it became Burlington in 1887, the town called Company Shops was so named because of its location of the maintenance shops and headquarters of the N.C. Railroad Company. Railroad buffs will find pleasure in details of freight and passenger engines, and there's intrigue in accounts of unrecovered fortunes in gold buried along the railroad at the close of the Civil War. With photographs, 160 pages, $14.95.

— In Some Foreign Field — The Story of Four British Graves on the Outer Banks. By L. VanLoan Naisawald. During World War II, a German U-boat sank a British trawler, H.M.S. Bedfordshire, off the North Carolina coast. Paperback, 96 pages, with photographs, $3.95.

— Papa Wore No Halo. By Susan H. Jeffries. A biography of the four turbulent decades spent in China by missionary David Wells Herring. — An Artist's Catch. Watercolors of Frank Stick. Introduction by David Stick. Frustrated by static drawings in available fish guides, Frank Stick has produced a "better fish book" to show the full and dazzling colors of live fish. Stick (1884-1966) was instrumental in setting up both the Cape Hatteras and Virgin Islands National Park. David Stick, the late author's son who provides the introduction, lives on the Outer Banks and is the author of two Outer Banks books. (Due in October) Approximately 300 pages with 285 color illustrations, boxed, $24.95.

— "Poor Carolina" Politics and Society in Colonial North Carolina, 1729-1776. By A. Roger Ekrich. A historical narrative offering details and insights into the colony's political life. The author examines North Carolina's 18th century political factionalism, social violence and governmental paralysis. Key episodes covered include the Granville District turmoil of the 1750s, and the Regulator riots. Material is drawn from local, provincial and British records in addition to previously untapped private manuscripts. (Due in October) 340 pages, maps, $23.50.

— Amphibians and Reptiles of the Carolinas and Virginia. By Bernard S. Martof, William R. Palmer, Joseph R. Bailey, and Julian R. Harrison III, photographs by Jack Dermid. The first comprehensive illustrated guide to the amphibions and reptiles of the Carolinas and Virginias, including salamanders, frogs, turtles, lizards, snakes and one lone alligator — all 159 of the region's species in brilliant color photographs with up to date accounts on the life habits of each species, plus range maps showing the location of each. A listing of endangered species, an index, a glossary and a list of useful references are also included. 230 pages, color photoraphs, $14.95.

— Birds of the Carolinas. By Eloise F. Potter, Robert P. Telings, and James F. Parnell. A completely up to date guide to the remarkably diverse bird life of the Carolinas based on field studies made during the past 20 years. Most of the 330 photographs are by members of the Carolina Bird Club. Tips on bird identification, habitats, annual cycle of bird behavior, migration and reproduction details are all provided. More than 400 species accounts describe all birds reliably recorded in the Carolinas during the past century. 432 pages, color photographs, $14.95.

— Wildflowers of the Outer Banks, Kitty Hawk to Hatteras. By the Dunes of Dare Garden Club, Jane Sutton, illustrator. A handy guide, the first to explore the flora of the Outer Banks, features 122 drawings of the most noticeable and most inquired-about plants. Flowers are grouped by color for quick reference in the field, with a brief text describing each plant, when it blooms, and where it may be found. In addition, interesting uses and lores are given for some plants. The special environmental conditions of the Outer Banks have produced a flora that is unique in its variety. Paper. 165 pages, illustrated. $6.95.

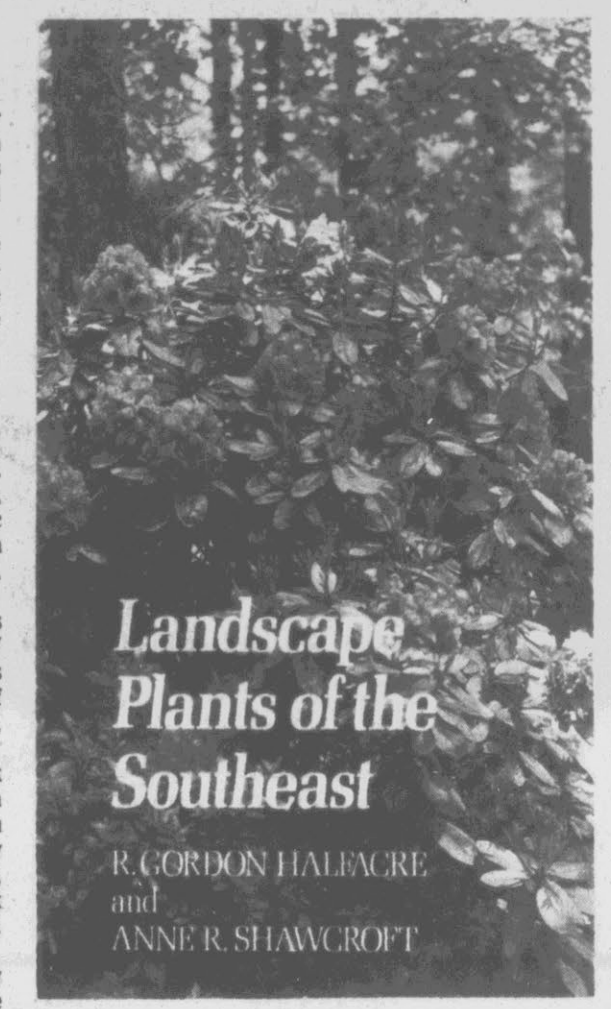
For The Greening Of My Thumb—And Yours



Landscape Plants of the Southeast. Raleigh. Sparks Press. 1980. Hardback, 325 plus xvi pps. Illustrated, $30.

Who doesn't admire a beautiful yard? Who doesn't wish they had some way of checking on whether they are buying the right plant for the right place, without playing Russian roulette with their limited landscape funds?

For those who've tried and failed, for those who are planning to try, and for those who are afraid to try, there is hope yet. Sure, the bumper stickers tell us farming is everybody's bread and butter, but landscaping must be everyone's soul food. And for landowners, landscapers, nurserymen, and just plain amateurs like me, "Landscape Plants of the Southeast" is a feast.

The book, although it covers other states, seems written just for us North Carolinians. Authored by Gordon Halfacre, professor at Clemson University, and Anne Rogers Shawcroft, a former student of Halfacre's at N.C. State who is now a landscape designer in Raleigh, this book is an expanded, full-color version of their earlier "Carolina Landscape Plants," and its emphasis remains on our state.

Over 300 plants and several hundred varieties are covered, grouped for landscaping convenience by type and height, beginning with groundcovers and ending up with large trees. Each plant is allotted a separate page, most of them illustrated with a color photograph and a line drawing of a typical branch.

Each plant is identified by its scientific and common name — thank goodness — and which of three zones (6,7,8) the plant best grows in. Further information covers plant size at maturity; its form and texture; color of leaves, bark, berries, and flowers; culture; landscape notes on fuction and aesthetic uses; and varieties.

In addition to this treasure trove of information, the book includes a zone map, several lists group plants as to suggested use (such as for beach places or city conditions), an index cross-referenced with both Latin and common names, and several blank pages for the reader's own notes. The introduction contains a helpful brief review of effective landscaping principles.

As beautiful and informative as the book is, it does seem slanted toward professionals in the landscaping industry. For a wider and more popular market (amateurs like me), a glossary defining unfamiliar terms would have been helpful. For those with young children, a list of hazardous plants would have been a definite plus. For example, the only mention of the oleander's poisonous nature is buried in its paragraph of landscape notes.

In addition, although the authors do point out that some of the yuccas have sharp pointed leaves and are not suitable for play areas, the page on one of the most common yuccas in our area, the Spanish bayonet, has no mention of this hazard at all. This type of information should be emphasized, perhaps with italics or in all capital letters. At the very least, the inclusion of a hazardous plant list would alert the home gardener and possibly prevent unnecessary accidents.

Some of the plants recommended for their flowering qualities have no illustrations for the plant in bloom. This is un unfortunate oversight. For the more experienced gardener, some tips on propogation would also have been helpful.

Oh well, one can't have everything. But for almost everything, this is a valuable reference book for the home landscaper, for those with new homes, for those who've just moved to our area and are unfamiliar with our native plants, as well as for the professional.

More than that — if an inspirational book is one which makes you get off your duff and do something, I would have to say this books also falls into that category. If you'll excuse me, I'm off to the nearest nursery. Maybe there's hope for my brown thumb yet.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By JULIE HICKS

New at the library are several novels of suspense and intrigue.

"The Defector" by Evelyn Anthony is a fast-paced thriller about Col. Ivan Sasanov, a Russian in England, who reveals Soviet plans to encircle Middle East oil countries and to attach the Saudi royal family. In exchange for this information he wants the British to get his wife and daughter out of Russia.

Ms. Anthony's heroine, Davina Graham, whose job it is to debrief Sasanov, meets with conflict and dilemma when she falls in love with him. Nonetheless, she is on the team of those who embark on the rescue mission knowing it will be the end of the affair.

Ms. Anthony's latest spy-intrigue book is action-filled and sure to please her fans

"Still Missing" by Beth Gutcheon is a frighteningly realistic portrayal of how a mother endures the kidanpping of her only child. Alex Selky, a bright, appealing 6 year old, disappears one morning on his way to school, and his mother Susan's life stops while the year-long search continues.

Ms. Gutcheon sharply draws every moment of the mother's terror and her attempt to pursue a normal existence while the tragedy looms unresolved. It also reveals an awareness of the parent societies that exist to ease pain or arouse action and a sense of media response to kidnapping. Throughout, the novelist manages to sustain interest in the seemingly futile torch-bearing of a typical yet special mother.

"Still Missing" is powerful material which may just be cinema-bound.

"The Scent of Fear" by Margaret Yorke is a psychological, suspenseful novel of rising terror in the midst of the mundane.

The characters are quite vivid. Aged Mrs. Anderson, frail but ruggedly independent, lives alone in a few rooms of the Gables, a huge Victorian pile isolated from the nearest village. Kevin Timms, a young pyschopath who's been thrown out by his newly married aunt, has found a secret home in one of the Gables' unused rooms. So, when in a fit or rage and frustration, he kills a village girl, the Gables becomes his refuge and Mrs. Anderson his prisoner. Interlaced with their lives is that of Muriel Dean, a warmhearted do-gooder whose placid marriage is due for a shock and who becomes Mrs. Anderson's deliverance.

"Masques" by Bill Pronzine is a novel of suspense and terror from a master of the genre.

Mardi Gras, strange sights and revelry of near-pagan abandon carry Steve Giroux through the streets of New Orleans, away from the marriage he is there to forget, into an intoxicating, frightening underworld of accusing strangers and damning circumstances that make him suspect himself of crimes that were apparently never committed. His only ally is a remarkable woman who promises to help him ... except her method is even more frightening than the bizarre nightmare that has taken him over.

"Masques" has a climatic and shocking final unveiling.

10,000 Years Of N.C. History Is The Topic Of September Lecture

RALEIGH — Approximately 10,000 years of North Carolina history and prehistory will be the subject of the September archaeology and historic preservation lecture.

"Historic and Prehistoric Archaeology of the New River Valley of Northwestern North Carolina" is the title of the lecture to be presented at 7 p.m. Wednesday, September 9 by Mark A. Mathis, archaeologist with the Department of Cultural Resources and Dr. L. Jill Loucks, archaeologist, Appalachian State University. The presentation will be held in the Archives and History/State Library Building, 109 East Jones Street in Raleigh.

Covering the period from about 8,000 B.C. to the present, the discussion will focus on some historic settlements and prehistoric Indian archaeology in Ashe and Allegheny counties, according to Mathis. Along with the lecture, visitors will see a slide presentation and artifacts from the period, he said.

The September presentation is one of a series of lectures by the Archaeology and Historic Preservation Section of the Department of Cultural Resources.

The public is invited to attend. Admission is free.

Roses Of A Life's Journey

Journey Into Morning. By Sam Ragan. Laurinburg, N.C., St. Andrews Press, St. Andrews Presbyterian College. 1981. Paper, 50 pages, $4.95.

Sam Ragan sees the poet as a man on a journey. The journey is life, and the poet moves forward into the future and backward into the realms of memory. Ragan records and reports what he sees on his travels through the days and nights of his existence with stunning sensitivity, and gives us a marvelous sense of the meaning behind the image.

Everyday sights and happenings assume a special significance and subtlety in this well-known North Carolina poet's work. He is "marking the moment of no consequence, Stapling it down for keeps."

He is "Hammering down the fog," preserving the precious ordinary for us and illuminating it with his insight to reveal its beauty.

Ragan's style is a magnificantly tender one. Consider the understated sadness in the following lines:

"On this October afternoon
I watch the turn of leaves.
The fall of a yellow leaf
Is a shadow in your eyes."

What agonized screaming about death, what effusive bubbling about love could compare in grace to the above lines?

Thunder, butterflies, "a curious rain," "the scent of pines," lilies and wisteria, "the night's silences;" of it all Ragan says "I feel it burning."

And in the quiet intensity of his verse we too feel the special significance of the superficially unimportant. Life is woven of "a squirrel's scamper" and "a meal half-eaten" as much as it is of the death of kings, and in the end, which mean more to us?

"I have collected mornings,
Sunsets and stars,
Roses and wind's whisper,
Sounds and silences
Of days and nights,
The fragrance of lilacs,
Your smile, the shadows of moonlight
Warm shadows in which to hide, and . . .
Yes.

It is our good fortune that Ragan has collected these roses on his personal journey through life, because, in the words of Willa Cather, "the only roses that last are the roses of memory and the roses of art."

A Fond Look

BEST SELLER. By Geoffrey Bocca. Wyndham Books. 235 Pages. $12.95.

"...almost all best-selling authors are totally and, perhaps, mercifully forgotten," Geoffrey Bocca writes in the introduction to his "Best Seller."

Forgotten? Not really. Not so long as writers such as Bocca are around to recall books which were greatly popular in their time and to tell about them in a witty "romp through the outskirts of the classics of the English language."

So, readers of Bocca's book, prepare to return to those thrilling days of yesteryear when people, by the score, were reading such now dimly remembered — if at all — books as "King Solomon's Mines," by H. Rider Haggard; "Beau Geste," by P. C. Wren; "Forever Amber," by Kathleen Winsor; "The Green Hat," by Michael Arlen, and "The Virginian," by Owen Wister.

These are just a few of 15 titles Bocca has unearthed from the literary past and dusted off, but they give an idea of just what can be expected in this well-researched and most entertaining volume.

A most amiable writer, Bocca, however, is not above poking fun at the authors and their books that he discusses, but there is nothing mean about his humor. All of these books meant something to Bocca years ago and they still do. He is witty, but he remembers fondly.

His retelling, for example, of the plot of "Forever Amber" is hilarious. But when Bocca has done he pauses to pay deep respect to author Winsor who wrote a modern book Bocca thinks unequaled in catching "the atmosphere of a period with such clarity."

Bocca himself is to be congratulated for capturing the atmosphere of several periods and for doing it very well.

Religious Fundamentalism, Inflation Woes Trouble Sadat's Egypt

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat's Egypt is enjoying a stability unmatched among poor Middle East nations. But a current of Moslem fundamentalism, opposition to the peace with Israel and inflation have made this an uneasy summer.

Western diplomats do not see any serious threat to Sadat, in power now for 11 years. Egypt's economic distress pales beside that of neighboring Sudan, for example, and Sadat, a devout Moslem, still commands broad popular support.

But Islamic fundamentalism, which swept Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to power in Iran, also has brought visible change to Egypt: workers in the halls of downtown Cairo office buildings kneel on grass mats and pray to Mecca as prescribed by the Koran, and casette tapes of a fiery fundamentalist preacher, Sheik Kishk, circulate all over the country.

Loosely organized "Islamic groupings" regularly meet and hold mass rallies. The fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood, officially banned, is nevertheless allowed to publish a newspaper that often attacks Sadat's government.

Perhaps sensing the current, Sadat's National Democratic Party has proposed a law that would make Egyptian law confirm more closely to Islamic law.

The Islamic movement, linked with a half-dozen Christian church bombings and burnings in 1978-79, several club-swinging melees involving Moslem and Christian students and two violent sectarian incidents this summer, has instilled fear among Egypt's officially estimated 4.5 million Coptic Christians, who trace their origin to St. Mark in 45 A.D.

On June 17, an argument between a Moslem and a Christian in Cairo's Zawiya al-Hamra slum flared into three nights of fighting with clubs and guns that left 14 people dead by official accounts and five times as many according to Western diplomats.

On Aug. 2, a bomb tossed into a wedding ceremony at St. Mary's Church in the predominately Coptic Christian Shubra neighborhood killed two Moslems and three Christians.

The Rev. Arsonias Zaki, pastor of St. Mary's, claimed in an interview that Zawiya al-Hamra's problem was exploited by local criminals — an opinion shared by several Western diplomats.

But he maintained that the bomb-throwing incident at his church was likely instigated by Libya, Syria or Palestinians trying to embarass Sadat on the eve of his visit to the United States and talks with President Reagan.

"This is not a Moslem-Christian problem — it is a problem for all of Egypt, a problem for Sadat," Zaki said in the interview with The Associated Press.

A longtime friend of Sadat, the priest expressed confidence the president will curb extremists.

Fundamentalists and other Sadat critics often take aim at the president's Camp David project. Police dispersed a group listening to an anti-Camp David tirade at an Alexandria mosque during Sadat's meeting there with Prime Minister Menachem Begin on Aug. 26. Residents said fundamentalists distributed pictures of Begin standing on a burning mosque.

The day before, security forces confiscated the weekly newspaper of the Socialist Labor Party after it published articles critical of Sadat and Begin. Party leader Ibrahim Shoukry claimed in an interview that because of pressure from Sadat his party's 34 seats in the People's Assembly, the nation's parliament, had dwindled to 13 in the past two years.

Shoukrey and fundamentalist publications often criticize Camp David, alleging that Israel refuses to budge on the Palestinian issue despite the agreements achieved there by Sadat, Begin and President Jimmy Carter in 1979.

They also assail Sadat on economic questions, which Western diplomats maintain is the key to the success of Sadat's government. The diplomats say the economy is improving largely because of the windfall oil revenues resulting from Israel's return of Sinai Peninsula oil fields to Egypt.

Suez Canal receipts are also up, an army of expatriate Egyptian workers is sending paychecks home, and American, Arab, European and Israeli tourists are bringing in more money.

Last year's budget deficit of 600 million pounds ($732 million) was the lowest since the 1973 Middle East war.

Government subsidies for basic foods, such as bread, meat and vegetables,have kept down the cost of living for Egypt's poor.

Some Egyptians, however, complain the quality of subsidized food is not what it used to be, and there are some shortages.

Western diplomats specializing in economic affairs estimate inflation may be as high as 30 percent for middle and upper income Egyptians, who have a taste for unsubsidized, imported goods.

These diplomats said the gap between the cost and price of a commodity poses two serious long-term problems.

First: the rising costs of imports like wheat, flour, sugar tea and butane gas mean subsidies must rise to maintain low prices. Second: the low price of gasoline discourages conservation and compounds Egypt's nightmarish traffic jams.

U.S. diplomats say Egypt is "disappointed" with the level of foreign and particularly U.S. investment in Egypt. The government still accounts for three-quarters of the investment in the country, despite Sadat's announcement eight years ago of an "open door policy" toward private investors.

The diplomats say many U.S. and West European businessmen still view Egypt and other Third World too risky for investment. The diplomats also contend that Egyptian bureaucracy scares away many potential investors.

CRYPTOQUIP

WSNI DKSDVIA, DKONVIA KOJ DIKJA JRO'Q BROAQUQSQI BWUB

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — CALM TURTLES MAY CATCH CLUMSY HARES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: N equals G

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Literacy Program Shows Success

Tanzania (AP) — For housewife Shera Rashid, learning to read and do basic math has broadened her world. She keeps up with events through newspapers and isn't shortchanged any more by shopkeepers.

For Mrs. Rashid and millions of other adult graduates of Tanzania's mass literacy campaign — considered the best in black Africa — it has also meant escape from a life in which they could not read a street sign, write a letter or help their children with homework.

"I never went to school as a child," said Mrs. Rashid, about 50, who passed the national literacy exam in 1975 and still attends classes to improve her reading and arithmetic skills.

"Now, because of my age, it is difficult to learn. But even though I forget things quickly I can read the newspaper, which I never thought I'd know how to do, and I can tell if I'm cheated when I get change from the shop."

Last month about 3.5 million Tanzanians took the national adult education exam at more than 10,000 centers throughout this East African nation.

Results are being compiled but those who pass these tests are considered functionally literate — able to read, write and do mathematics at a third or fourth grade level.

Regardless of the outcome, Tanzania's 11-year-old literacy program has already made big strides. In 1960 only about 10 percent of the population was literate. Now, according to the World Bank, Tanzania has the highest literacy rate in Africa — about 79 percent of the country's 18 million people.

In the two decades since most of Africa gained independence, virtually all the new governments have undertaken literacy programs. But today even African countries cited for substantial economic progress lag behind Tanzania in literacy.

According to World Bank statistics for 1975 — the latest available — Kenya, for example, had 40-percent literacy, the Ivory Coast 20 percent and Senegal 10 percent.

"At a time when Tanzania is being subjected to some harsh internal and external criticism," commented one Western diplomat, "the literacy program is something they can be proud of."

While Tanzania's socialist policies have been largely unsuccessful in increasing agricultural production and raising living standards, the government of President Julius Nyerere boasts of its social services.

Besides the literacy campaign, Tanzania's health care is considered among the best in black Africa. Nearly 40 percent of the villages now have running water and all children receive at least seven years of free public education.

When the mass adult education program started in 1970, after several years of pilot projects, literacy stood at 31 percent. It had risen to 61 percent when the first exams were given in 1975 and to 73 percent after the second round of exams in 1977.

Exams scheduled for 1979 were postponed until this year because Tanzania was involved in a war in Uganda, helping Ugandan guerrillas topple dictator Idi Amin in April of that year.

UNGLAMOROUS ROLE OF CARBON BLACK

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Carbon black is an unglamorous commodity that makes rubber tires perform better, helps print the news and is essential to hundreds of other products, from mascara to microprocessors.

According to Morris Speck of Phillips Chemical, "Carbon black also goes into plastics, flashlight batteries, carbon paper, polishes, greases, paints, fertilizers, propellants, deodorizers, leather finishes, chemical catalysts and a seemingly endless list of other applications.

"The rubber industry consumes 94 percent of all carbon black, mostly in tires and other automotive applications," he said.

GOT A MATCH?

CLOQUET, Minn. (AP) — In the 1800s matches had to be made by hand, before machines were developed for making them.

Usually, wooden matches are made from aspen logs, and then dipped into chemicals to form the heads. Such matches are known as "strike anywhere" matches.

One factory here can produce 10 million such matches an hour.

Georgia Group Building Low-Cost Houses, Then Selling To Poor

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Working under the creed that the poor need capital, not charity, groups in 10 U.S. cities are building low-cost homes and selling them at cost to people who otherwise might be living in shacks.

Habitat for Humanity Inc., an umbrella organization for the 10 U.S. groups as well as projects in Zaire and Guatemala, is an outgrowth of Koinonia Farm, a Christian community begun near here in 1942 by Southern Baptist minister Clarence Jordan.

The thrust of Habitat is simple — use capital donated by churches and individuals to build homes, then sell the homes at cost to needy people through the use of no-interest mortgages.

"The main criteria is that they (buyers) have to be economically in a condition that they can't go to a lending institution to get financing for adequate housing," said Habitat Director Millard Fuller. "If they can go in and get financing, they don't need us."

Fuller and Jordan developed the idea in 1968 as a response to the squalid housing in which millions are forced to live. They felt it was a biblical approach to stewardship of possessions.

Jordan died of a heart attack about a year after the new enterprise, Koinonia Partners, was established. After about four years at Koinonia and three years of building housing in Zaire, Fuller returned to Georgia in 1976 and established Habitat for Humanity.

The philosophy behind Habitat is drawn from biblical teachings about economic relationships, Fuller said.

"In the old testament, the Jews were taught very plainly, when you lend money to poor people, you shouldn't charge interest," he said. "You don't take advantage of someone just because he is having a tough time."

Cities with Habitat groups include Denver; Paducah, Ky.; San Antonio, Texas; Kansas City, Mo.; Tucson, Ariz.; Robbins, Tenn.; John's Island, S.C., and Fort Myers and Immokalee, Fla. Projects are under way in Zaire and Guatemala, and others are planned in Uganda and Haiti as well as 10 other U.S. locales.

Koinonia Partners, a Habitat affiliate, has built about 100 homes in Americus, rural Sumter County and Plains, home of former President Jimmy Carter. Fuller said he did not know the total number of homes built by all Habitat groups.

The well built, sturdy homes in Sumter County cost from $9,000 to more than $20,000, but on the commercial market they would cost from $25,000 to $35,000 or more, Fuller said. Since no interest is charged, monthly payments run from $35 to $90 or $100, Fuller said.

On a quick tour through Americus, Fuller showed new, trim homes built by Habitat or Koinonia Partners in black neighborhoods which also contained unpainted, leaning, dilapidated homes.

"The affluent sector of society should realize its responsibility to the poor," he said. "Habitat is a prophetic ministry in that we enco the affluent to share with the needy."

Citing a Habitat slogan, Fuller added, "What the poor need is not charity but capital and not caseworkers but co-workers."

Agency Helps Control Panic

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — A leaking tank car filled with a flammable, explosive or poisonous chemical can strike panic in any community but such emergencies are dealt with swiftly by CHEMTREC.

An emergency monitoring agency set up by the Chemical Manufacturers Association, CHEMTREC is celebrating its tenth anniversary and Director John Zercher says it has been a decade filled with incidents of tense excitement — some comedy.

"People call us about all sorts of chemical seepages as well as tank car leaks," Zercher said. "Once we got a frantic call from the fire chief in a university town in Colorado that 'arsenic gas' was leaking from the chemistry lab. There's no such thing as arsenic gas. There is a highly toxic gas called arsene but it isn't arsenic. However, we put machinery in motion to find out what the escaping gas was and who made it. Then the fire chief called back sheepishly, saying 'Forget it, it was just a skunk that got in the lab somehow.'"

Speaking of skunks, CHEMTREC had to deal with a carload of synthetic skunk essence that began leaking on a sidetrack in a Pennsylvania village. The railroad moved the car but the horrible odor still sptread over the countryside. The only sign on the tank car said "for mercaptans only." Mercaptans are chemicals added to natural gas by utilities to make it smell bad so leaks will be detected quickly. In raw form, mercaptans smell like concentrated skunk spray.

CHEMTREC found the maker of the mercaptans and also learned the builder of the tank car had a repair plant nearby. The car was removed to the plant and the leak stopped within two hours. CHEMTREC advised the local folk they could get rid of noxious odors with Clorox.

Then there was the boxcar whose cargo of 54,000 bags labeled "fural residue" began smoldering at Santa Rosa, Calif. The firemen were afraid to attack the stuff. The railroad said the car came from somewhere in Tennessee. After dozens of telephone calls, CHEMTREC got the shipper out of his bed in Memphis and asked him what the smoldering cargo was and if it was dangerous.

"It's only ground corncobs," was the answer.

But most calls to CHEMTREC involve much more serious matters like the derailment of a freight train at Fort Wayne, Ind., that left four tank cars of vinyl chloride overturned.

This time, Zercher said, it was necessary to instruct the police and fire chiefs to evacuate a large area because it was almost a cinch at least one of the cars would blow up. Two did, destroying a nearby house, but no one was hurt.

CHEMTREC also gets calls from ships at sea about leaking chemical cargoes. The London fire department has called several times for help in dealing with chemical cargoes at Heathrow Airport.

In its ten years, CHEMTREC has handled around 19,500 separate emergencies, received 135,000 incoming calls and made about as many itself.

But much of its work is dogged effort to get manufacturers and carriers to make safer tanks for hauling chemicals on the railways, the seas, the highways and in the air and to mark them completely so the first emergency steps taken locally will be correct and prompt.

It has devoted a lot of attention to getting better couplings on tank cars and getting them equipped with heavy steel head shields and stronger undercarriage cradles.

But the first thing fire and police chiefs, transport people and factory people do when chemicals start leaking is to call 800-424-9300. That's CHEMTREC.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Eveningsong

Classic Farmhouse Offers Many Extras

By Jerry Bishop

This house says "home" to everyone who remembers a bygone era, but thinks ahead for comfort and values. A properly planned home needs only the imagination of its occupants to create an appealing and livable design. Prospective builders will have very few complaints about this home as the floor plan is excellent and more than adequate provisions have been made to provide all the necessities required to create an exceptional design and comfortable living. Nothing insures the workability and livability of a home quite so much as a well thought out floor plan.

Nostalgia is only one of the more charming features that makes Eveningsong an ideal choice in a family home.

In keeping with the more traditional look this home comes complete with a big wrap around porch, perfect for those lazy summer evenings. Upon entering the Eveningsong there is a vestibule large enough and with closet space enough for an abundance of coats and boots. A main hall provides access to the rooms on the main floor. The kitchen is large enough for a breakfast set and is well designed so as to be a pleasure for working, adjacent to the kitchen is the utility room with the washer and dryer, in this room also are spacious closets. A woodburning built-in fireplace in the living room adds to the nostalgic charm of the Eveningsong. Sliding glass doors open onto the porch. The main level also boasts a den, lavatory, and separate dining room overlooking the porch. The den can be used for a variety of purposes, a sewing room, hobby room or even a spare bedroom. The split landing stairway in the hall leads to the upper floor which houses the master suite. This is the epitomy of luxury! Huge double closets hold the most extensive wardrobe and the private bath afford even more privacy and comfort. The three smaller bedrooms share a centrally located bath and all have spacious closets. Additional storage space is provided by the closet at the end of the hall. An enclosed breezeway links the house to the double garage. The Eveningsong is indeed a good home to raise a family.

You can replace a broken window pane even if you have neither the skill nor the inclination to cut a piece of glass to size.

Many places, including most hardware stores, will cut the glass to your measurements, but you must be extra careful to give the correct dimensions. Once you get the size of the window opening, including the channels into which the glass rests, substract ⅛th inch from each side.

Don't tell the dealer what the measurements are; give him a piece of paper on which the sizes are written. If you don't, there is always the chance — and it does happen — that there will be some kind of misunderstanding on what you told him.

Should the old pane be only cracked, remove the putty and then the glass. Be extra careful not to dig into the wooden channel as you chip out the putty. Remember that the glass is held in place with glazier's points, small pieces of metal imbedded in the wood. Take these out with pliers.

They usually can be used again, but consider the possibility of getting a box of new points, some of which are easier to install than the old types.

Putting linseed oil or thinned paint on the channels will prevent the wood from soaking up the oil from the new putty or compound too quickly.

Should the old pane be shattered rather than just cracked, you will have to take out the broken pieces by hand. Be sure to use heavy work gloves for this chore. Even with the gloves, you must work very carefully to avoid being cut.

The next step is to line the window channels with putty about 1-16th inch thick, using a putty knife to press it down and spread it. Place the pane of glass into the putty gently but firmly so that it rests solidly in place. When you are sure it is neatly in place, put back the glazier's points. Use one every few inches, pressing it down with great care and leaving half the metal above the wood.

At this point, take some more putty and knead it between the palms of your hands in strips about the size of a long pencil. Press each strip against the glass and the frame, smoothing it out with the putty knife. Take your time. Work carefully. If you spot an area the putty hasn't covered completely, take a small piece, patch it and smooth it. You won't always get a perfect result with this portion of the operation, but after you have replaced a few window panes, you'll find you have the hang of it.

Some persons color the putty before they start by adding paint to it and then mixing it thoroughly.

Q. How can I get rid of mushrooms in my lawn? (W.C., Bessemer City)

A. You can't. You can mow them, but this will not prevent them from returning after the next rain. With our weather conditions most mushrooms last only two to three days before decaying.

Q. Do aerial rootlets on grape vines serve any useful purpose? (B.U., Roseboro)

A. Yes. They are indications that the vine is under some type of stress. In other words, something is interfering with the flow of water and nutrients from the regular roots to the stems and leaves. The problem may be the grape root borer, an insect which tunnels into the roots. It may be a split trunk, which was caused by winter injury. Sometimes a vine will "choke" itself by wrapping itself around the supporting wire or another vine.

Q. How much damage can we expect from fall webworms? They are about the worst I have ever seen. (H.S., Moncure)

A. Very little. While noticeable, fall webworms actually do little damage. Trees can stand a lot of defoliation at this time of year because they will soon be losing their leaves anyway. The silken webs that you see are unsightly. They will hang on into the winter and the wind will whip leaves into them, making them even more of an eyesore. You can punch them out with a pole if they are low enough or you can treat with Sevin.

Q. How can I get grass (fescue) to grow under trees? (H.W., Hillsborough)

A. You can't always. If you have more than 50 percent shade, consider using a ground cover other than grass. The shade problem can be reduced by fertilizing grass under trees at one and one-half to two times the normal rate, fertilizing the trees deeply, watering deeply and infrequently, maintaining a favorable pH for the grass, removing low limbs to let more light reach the grass, mowing slightly higher than normal, and removing leaves and other debris promptly. A favorable pH for fescue and all turfgrasses in North Carolina except centipede is 6.5 to 7.0. Centipede does best when the pH is kept about 5.5.

Here's The Answer

Q. — We have a marble-topped table in our living room. A few weeks ago there were stains on it that we removed with lacquer thinner. The thinner did a good job of taking out the stains, but also took off the shine in the same area. We never have done anything about it because we didn't want to spoil the top, but now we would like to restore the shine. Is there anything special we should use?

A. — While there are some special marble polishing compounds, you usually can restore the shine in a case of this kind by rubbing the area vigorously with paste wax.

Q. — Our water has been tasting peculiar lately. We have had several men in to look at the situation, including one from the utility company and an independent plumber. Neither can find out what is causing the trouble, but both say the water is safe. The latest theory I have heard has something to do with electrolysis, but I don't know anything about the details. Can you give me any advice?

A. — Contact your local water authority. The American Water Works Association has been able to get many state legislatures to pass laws preventing electric service from being grounded to water service piping. Under certain circumstances, this can cause chemical reactions and an unpleasant taste in water coming from the tap. Your local water authority can advise you whether this is the case in your community and what to do about it.

Q. — I have begun to use plywood lately after years of working with solid lumber. When it has been necessary to treat the edges, I have sanded them very smooth and then covered them with paint. This time I would like to use wood veneer strips. Are they any good?

A. — Yes. These strips come in a rolled-up form, somewhat like transparent tape. You can get them in various kinds of wood and in different thicknesses. Their big advantage is that they can be finished with anything — stain, varnish, paint, etc. The strips are held in place with regular wood glue or contact cement and can be cut to size. I assume you know that most lumber yards, home service centers and the like also carry a wide variety of moldings that can be applied to the edges of plywood. You also can buy metal moldings for use on plywood edges of kitchen tables.

Q. — At the beginning of the summer, I put some stain on our outdoor redwood furniture. Now I would like to cover it with clear varnish. Can I put it on right over the stain, which by this time is well into the wood and not rubbing off?

A. — Yes, but clean the furniture first so you don't seal in dirt and stains.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, stain, remover, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents AND a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Reed Furniture Moving Indoors

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

A close reading of design magazines makes it clear that reed furniture — rattan, willow and bamboo — is very much in style in home interiors nowadays.

In recent years, rattan and the other types have moved off the porch and out of the sunroom into the more formal areas of the home. And it is not too farfetched to conclude that reed furniture is now available for every room in the house.

Pieces such as convertible sofas, desks, dining tables, storage cabinets and bars are now almost as widely available as the more common chairs and side tables.

Just to prove there is nothing new under the sun, Henry Olko recalls that rattan furniture had its vogues in earlier eras.

Olko is president of Willow & Reed, a manufacturer of rattan furniture. The firm was started by Olko's father in 1923 in the Brooklyn borough of New York City.

"In those days, rattan furniture wasn't designed; it was produced," Olko said. According to Olko, New York City was a center for the production of reed furniture during the early part of the 20th century. A large contingent of Eastern European workers skilled in the weaving of the material found employment with numerous manufacturers in lower Manhattan during the 1920s.

"In fact, there were over 2,000 workers in New York at one time producing mainly porch and sunroom furniture and baby carriages," Olko said.

The manufacturers sold their products to large mail order retailers and to department stores. Olko remembers accompanying his father to a department store "where the seventh floor was almost completely filled with rattan and wicker furniture. In those days, a chair might cost $4 or $5," he added.

New York's rattan furniture industry was a casualty of the Depression. As one manufacturer after another closed his doors, the old skills dwindled and the demand for woven reed furniture diminished. Olko traces a revival of interest to the influence of modern architects who appreciated natural material.

One result of the increasing use of reed furniture is there are far more items and designs to choose from than there used to be, said Bebe Winkler, a designer who frequently uses rattan pieces. The variety of designs and price ranges of the material makes it possible to select rattan regardless of budget.

"Rattan adds a wonderful texture to any room, but especially to formal rooms. The trick is to blend it with other materials to get the effect you want," she said.

If you are considering a piece of rattan furiture for the living room, it helps to

Environmentalist Finds Wilderness Life

By SCOTT FARRIS

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (UPI) — If people are enriched by their surroundings, then Margaret Murie is a wealthy woman.

The 78-year-old conservationist and author needs only to look out her bedroom window each morning to remind herself of her commitment to preserving America's natural beauty. She lives in a rustic log home near Moose, Wyo., with a magnificent view of northwest Wyoming's spectacular Grand Tetons.

"I only knew that I loved the outdoors," Mrs. Murie says, reflecting on her childhood in turn-of-the-century Alaska. "My family taught me what a wonderful thing curiosity is, and how curiosity would carry you when all else failed. You find things to occupy yourself and stop thinking about life passing you by."

But Mrs. Murie is aware that most people don't approach the wilds of America with the same fervor she does.

"We're dealing with minorities. There is always the minority which rules. In a lump in the middle are those who are too lazy or too indifferent to become involved," she says. "The balance is shifted by the preponderance of the minority on one side or the other — and the minority which is for taking care of the planet is getting stronger."

Mrs. Murie, known as Mardy to her friends, is winning her share of converts.

"Revered is how we feel about Mardy these days," says Phil Hocker of the Sierra Club in Jackson, Wyo. "When we want to expose someone to what the wilderness experience means, we send them to Mardy.

"She's very clear and thoughtful, a passionate speaker. What she says comes straight from her heart."

Mrs. Murie pooh-poohs the idea that she is an environmental evangelist. In a telephone interview, she says, "I'm just here in my log house in the woods and when visitors come by I give them tea and cookies."

But said she does enjoy talking with young people.

"Thirty or 40 years ago we had a very few people who saw ahead and were devoted to protecting our wilderness," she said. "Today, I deal a great deal with young people and I'm very encouraged with their attitudes. You hear such terrible things about young people today, but that's certainly not the whole story."

Mrs. Murie was one of those people who had the vision to work to protect the natural environment. She spent much of her life participating in the work of her now-deceased husband, Olaus Murie.

Murie was one of the U.S. Biological Survey's leading scientists and was, like his wife is today, a member of the board of directors of the Wilderness Society.

The couple moved from Alaska to Wyoming and in the 1940s led the successful campaign to enlarge the boundaries of Grand Teton National Park.

Mrs. Murie is currently working to republish her husband's studies of the large Jackson Hole elk population accompanied by his wildlife sketches and drawings.

Mrs. Murie has also authored three books on her experienes in Alaska where she worked and lived in the wilderness. She is now working on her fourth book and is keeping active in the political arena to prevent oil and gas exploration in the scenic areas of Alaska and Wyoming.

(UPI Photo)

"Alaska has been one of my main concerns lately," she said. "It's the last chance we have to preserve a whole ecosystem. There's no place else where the habitat is as it was before man set foot on it — birds, wildlife, waters."

Mrs. Murie disapproves of Interior Secretary James Watt.

"I only hope President Reagan has the courage to dismiss Mr. Watt," she said. "What he has threatened to do would be disastrous."

Mrs. Murie is particularly disturbed by Watt's suggestion that some wilderness areas be opened up to oil and gas development, and that no new national park land be acquired until the current park system is upgraded.

"I think it is certainly indicated we need more wilderness areas, not less; more national parks, not less."

Mrs. Murie said the key to the environmental movement of the 1980s is to involve as many interests as possible in preserving the wilderness heritage. She believes the best way to impress upon people the need to preserve the wilderness is to bring them to the wilderness.

"I've traveled all over the world to know that this valley is a very special valley," she said. "When people come here, they have something akin to what we would call a spiritual experience.

"The wildlife experience has a great effect on people — people are really thrilled at the sight of a deer, a porcupine or a marten. And the hiking or climbing or canoeing is pretty good for them physically, too."

ONCE MARBLES WERE THE PITS

PADEN CITY, W. Va. (AP) — People have been playing with marbles for hundreds of years. The first marbles were fruit pits, nuts and round pebbles.

In the 1700s, people began making small, hard balls from stone called marble. This is how the name "marble" originated.

Today, marbles made in the U.S. are usually of glass.

Gun Laws Help Reduce Murder

By RICHARD DOYON

OTTAWA (UPI) — Shaken by the assassination attempt on President Reagan and a climbing murder rate, Americans are again questioning their "right to bear arms" in the gun control debate that Canada largely settled a century ago.

"Canada did not have a wild west because every Canadian schoolboy knows the law preceded development," said Martin Friedland, a University of Toronto law professor and an acknowledged expert on gun laws.

"The establishment in 1873 of the Northwest Mounted Police (now the Royal Canadian Mounted Police) helped ensure peaceful settlement. The six-gun mystique in the egalitarian American west permeated society and has left a long unfortunate legacy, a legacy not found in Canada."

In 1892, when the "Colt .45" was the chief law enforcer in the American West, Canada passed its first handgun law requiring those wanting a pistol to obtain a certificate from a justice of the peace.

Twenty years later, Canada tightened laws on the purchase of handguns. In the 1930s Canadians first began registering their weapons. Canada clamped down again in 1978, adopting a minimum one-year jail sentence for anyone using a gun to commit a crime.

Officials believe the gradual evolution of strict gun laws in Canada has been a strong factor in a significantly lower murder rate than in the United States.

Since the most recent gun legislation was passed four years ago, murders in Canada committed by handguns, rifles and shotguns have declined by about 25 percent — from 292 in 1975 to 207 in 1979.

Compared to the United States, where about half the 20,591 murders in 1979 were committed with handguns, Canada's murder rate with pistols was less than 10 percent: only 52 of the 631 murders that year.

Since Canadian laws have often mirrored social change in the United States, historians argue over why Canada has been more successful in curbing crime with guns than Americans.

Azores See Slow Progress In Rebuilding After 1980 Earthquake

By FENTON WHEELER
Associated Press Writer

ANGRA DO HEROISMO, Azores (AP) — The first tremor came at 3:40 p.m. on New Year's Day, shaking the stone house of Jose Henrique Mendes to pieces on top of him, his wife and three children.

It rolled from its epicenter in the sea across the hills of this Atlantic island, knocking down dairy cows, destroying 80 percent of the churches and tumbling from pharmacy shelves the medicines that would be needed later.

As natural disasters go, the Jan. 1, 1980, earthquake in the Portuguese Azores Islands was not an exceptional killer. Fifty people perished on Terceira Island and 21 on neighboring Sao Jorge.

On Graciosa, the only other island in the nine-island archepelago 1,110 miles west of Portugal to suffer damage, there were no fatalities but a number of people were injured.

The tremors residents still remember as "15 seconds of horror" seemed to find every weak or loose stone in the walls of Terceira, and sent tens of thousands of other rocks tumbling after them.

Of the island's 19,082 dwellings, 4,726 were destroyed and 7,173 damaged.

In Mendes' hometown of Doze Ribeiras (Twelve Little Rivers) the quake crumbled or damaged 261 of the 265 houses. Two one-ton church bells crashed to the street with the rubble, the power lines and belfry.

The Mendes family, like most of island's 58,000 inhabitants, survived.

Nineteen months after the quake, their five-room house has been rebuilt with cement, sand and other materials supplied by the local and Portuguese governments, the help of 20 volunteer enlisted men from a Portuguese army engineer unit and the family itself.

But 22 families have moved from Doze Ribeiras to be with relatives in the United States and the population, counting the town's 10 deaths, has dropped from 675 to 300.

Mendes, 29, decided to stay, even though it cost him the equivalent of $8,000 in personal loans to get started again.

"We find the earthquake sad to remember but hard work helps you forget," he says.

But even with the outside help — $16.9 million from the Portuguese Finance Ministry, $4.1 million from the U.S. Agency for International Development, $1.6 million from the Portuguese Green Cross and private donations of $177,000 from the United States — the comeback often seems painfully slow and primitive.

It is not uncommon to see elderly women struggling with 50-pound stones, water for cement being carried by hand or on the back of a donkey or the island's roads partially blocked by new piles of construction sand and old piles of rubble waiting for heavy equipment to move them.

Scores of buildings in Angra do Heroismo are propped up with fresh cut timbers while awaiting reconstruction. Tons of rocks and stones remain in the Roman Catholic churches. The wheelbarrow and old-fashioned cement mixer have become a way of life.

Vitor Manuel Pessanha, an engineer who coordinates the rebuilding under the Azores autonomous government's Cabinet of Help and Reconstruction, says skilled construction workers are badly needed. Terceira has less than 2 percent unemployment, compared to more than 20 percent in Lisbon, he says.

Pessanha forecasts two-thirds of Terceira and Sao Jorge will be rebuilt by the end of the year and 77 percent restored on Graciosa.

It is hoped that all the rebuilding will be finished sometime in 1982.

But it has not been easy for the people of the island, accustomed to the tranquility of their green pastures, rock fences and chrysanthemum-lined roads, to recover from the quake. The 15 seconds that shook the island hangs on.

The mayor of Angra do Heroismo, Rui Mesquita, remembers Terceira as "completely prostrate for 12 days" after the quake. Now he thinks people are recovering.

"We have had very few of our normal holidays since the earthquake. That means everybody was working."

He notes, however, it may be some time before his cracked city hall is repaired and the town spruced up for island's occasional tourists.

"Tourism is good and we have a beautiful geography to offer, but the best thing we can show now is our human landscape, our way of life."

One part of the landscape is a lack of crime, according to police Commander Qualter Carvalho.

Angra's 33,000 residents never were much afoul of the law but Carvalho says there was absolutely no looting after the quake when several jewelry-store windows were smashed, appliance stores were gaping open and houses were abandoned as families slept in cars or tents for fear of another tremor.

The last of the quake refugees moved out of tents six months ago.

The Lisbon Meteorological and Geophysical Center measured the quake at 7 on the Richter scale, a system where each step up the scale means a magnitude 10 times greater than the preceding step. It located the epicenter between Terceira and Sao Jorge.

This made it the worst quake in recorded Azores history, the center says, and the 7 reading was most likely near the town of Doze Ribeiras on the eastern part of the island looking toward Sao Jorge.

A Richter scale reading of 7 is a "major" earthquake. The San Francisco earthquake of 1906 had an estimated reading of 8.3.

The U.S. Air Force base at Lajes in northwest Terceira escaped unscathed. Its servicemen turned out immediately for rescue work.

The Cabinet of Aid and Reconstruction says without doubt Doze Ribeiras was the worst hit, suffering destruction or damage of 91 percent of its dwellings compared to 17 percent in Angra do Heroismo on the southern part of the island.

Mayor Jose Gabriel Nunes of Doze Ribeiras recalls he was enjoying New Year's ice cream in an Angra cafe with his wife and three children when the roof literally fell in.

"We weren't hurt and hurried home as fast as we could to find our house damaged and the two bells in the road."

Border Disputes Posing Threats

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Border disputes simmer across Latin America nearly 200 years after the area became independent of foreign colonial powers.

The disputes retain the constant threat of exploding into armed conflicts — as one did earlier this year between Peru and Ecuador — despite the efforts of neutral mediators whose ranks include Pope John Paul II and Queen Elizabeth II of Britain.

Peru and Ecuador resorted to arms last January and February, leaving 10 people dead. The United States, under a 40-year-old treaty, became a mediator in the conflict in complicated negotiations held in Brazil.

Some of the differences stem from arbitrary or ill-defined borders that were drawn when most Latin American republics became independent in the early 1800s. Others are results of intracontinental wars that occurred later. And a few even go back to claims staked by the early Spaniards.

Some of the borders in question are close to oil and valuable natural resources, while others are in some of the most remote and inaccessible spots on earth.

These are the principal disputes:

—ECUADOR-PERU: These two nations have a disputed 1,050-mile frontier which led to the January-February battles. At issue is Ecuador's insistence that it should have access to the resource-rich Amazon region of Peru. Ecuador lost 70,000 square miles of territory to Peru during a 1942 war that killed 500 and ended with the signing of the Rio de Janeiro Protocol, guaranteed by the United States, Brazil, Argentina and Chile. The four mediators successfully arranged a truce after this year's fighting. But issue remains in dispute because while Peru accepts the terms of the 1942 protocol, Ecuador no longer does.

—ARGENTINA-CHILE: Argentina abruptly closed its border with Chile earlier this year in a continuing confrontation over three small islands in the Beagle Channel, at the southernmost tip of South America. The two nations came close to war in 1978 over the same issue. The dispute over the wording of an 1881 treaty took on additional significance in recent years when test drillings in the area raised hopes of significant offshore oil deposits.

Queen Elizabeth II was asked to mediate, and awarded the islands to Chile in 1977, but Argentina rejected the decision. The Vatican was then called in, and Pope John Paul II sent his decision to the two governments last December. Chile accepted the terms, which remain a secret, but Argentina has asked for "substantial modifications."

The border closing has now eased, but the situation remains tense, with Argentina insisting that it is an "Atlantic Ocean power" while Chile's influence is in the Pacific.

—VENEZUELA-GUYANA: Venezuela claims five-eighths of neighboring Guyana's territory, arguing it was forced by Great Britain to give up the land in 1899, when Guyana was British Guiana. After independence from Britain in 1966, Guyana got an agreement from Venezuela for a 12-year cooling-off period to work out a solution. That period is up next year, and no agreement has been reached. Venezuela has also refused to extend the freeze on its claims.

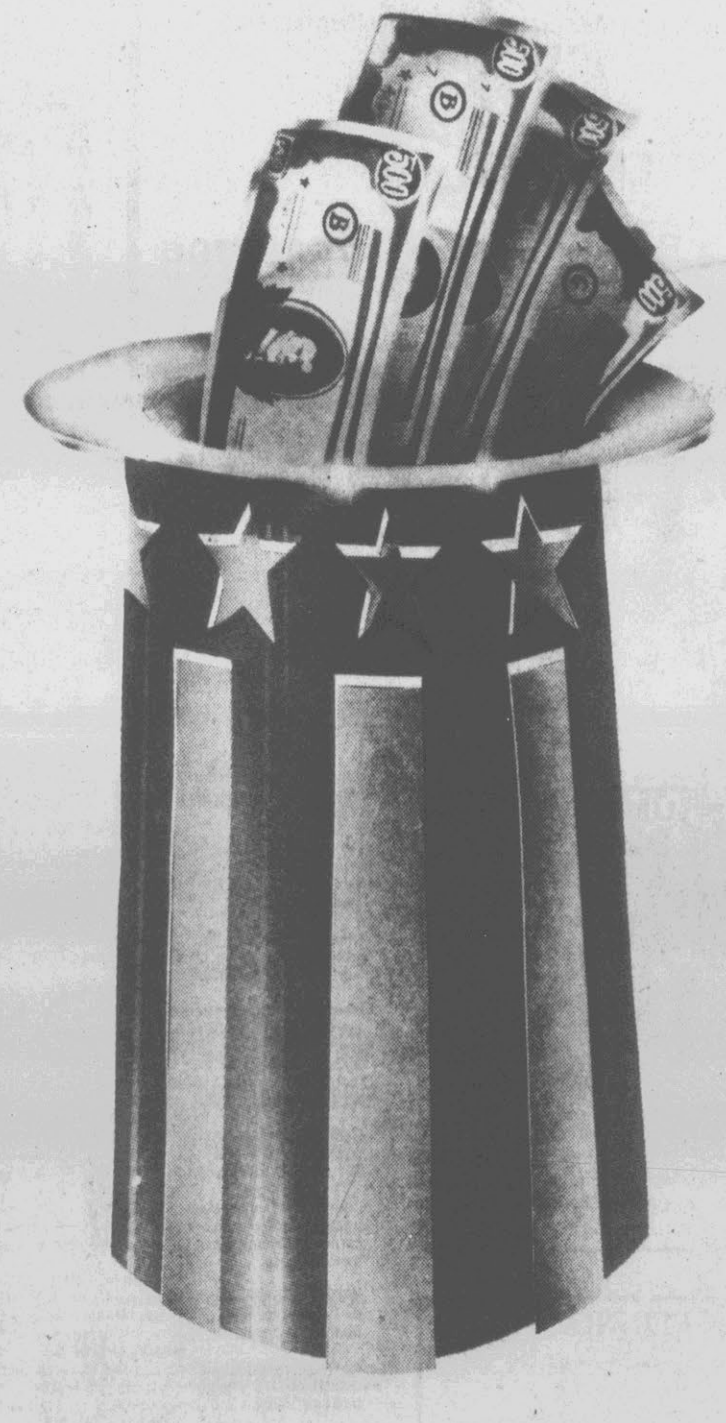
Guess who's going to give you $2000* in tax free income with First Federal's All-Savers Certificate?

Convert your 6-month money markets without penalty!



What do you do when someone offers you as much as $2000, tax free?

Take it, of course!

And beginning October 1, 1981, that's just exactly what First Federal is going to do. Because the interest is completely tax-free on our new 1 year All-Savers Certificates.

First Federal's All-Savers account is twice as good as a money market certificate.

Because first, there's the $500 minimum. And your net income will probably be greater because the interest is tax-free, unlike money markets.

Fact is, First Federal's new All-Savers Certificate is just about the best thing we've ever been able to offer our savers.

So come on in and take advantage of this opportunity.

TV SHOWTIME

For Week Of September 6 - September 12, 1981

Here She Comes . . . Miss America

The Miss America Pageant, the longest-running and most widely viewed event of its kind, which has been a major television event for the past 27 years, will be broadcast live on NBC on Saturday, Sept. 12 (10 p.m. to midnight).

Ron Ely, who made his debut with the Pageant last year, returns as host and master of ceremonies. As it has in the past, the show will originate from Convention Hall in Atlantic City, N.J.

Albert Marks, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the Pageant, said this year's theme will be "Action." "We will salute the dynamic 'do it' generation of young adults who are shaping a new era for America as they begin to take their places in business, the professions and the arts. All of the entertainment sections of the Pageant will reflect the energy and enthusiasm which mark the contemporary trends in America's lifestyle," Marks said.

Marks added that the scholarship programs, the judging procedures and the other processes in the selection of a new Miss America will also remain unchanged.

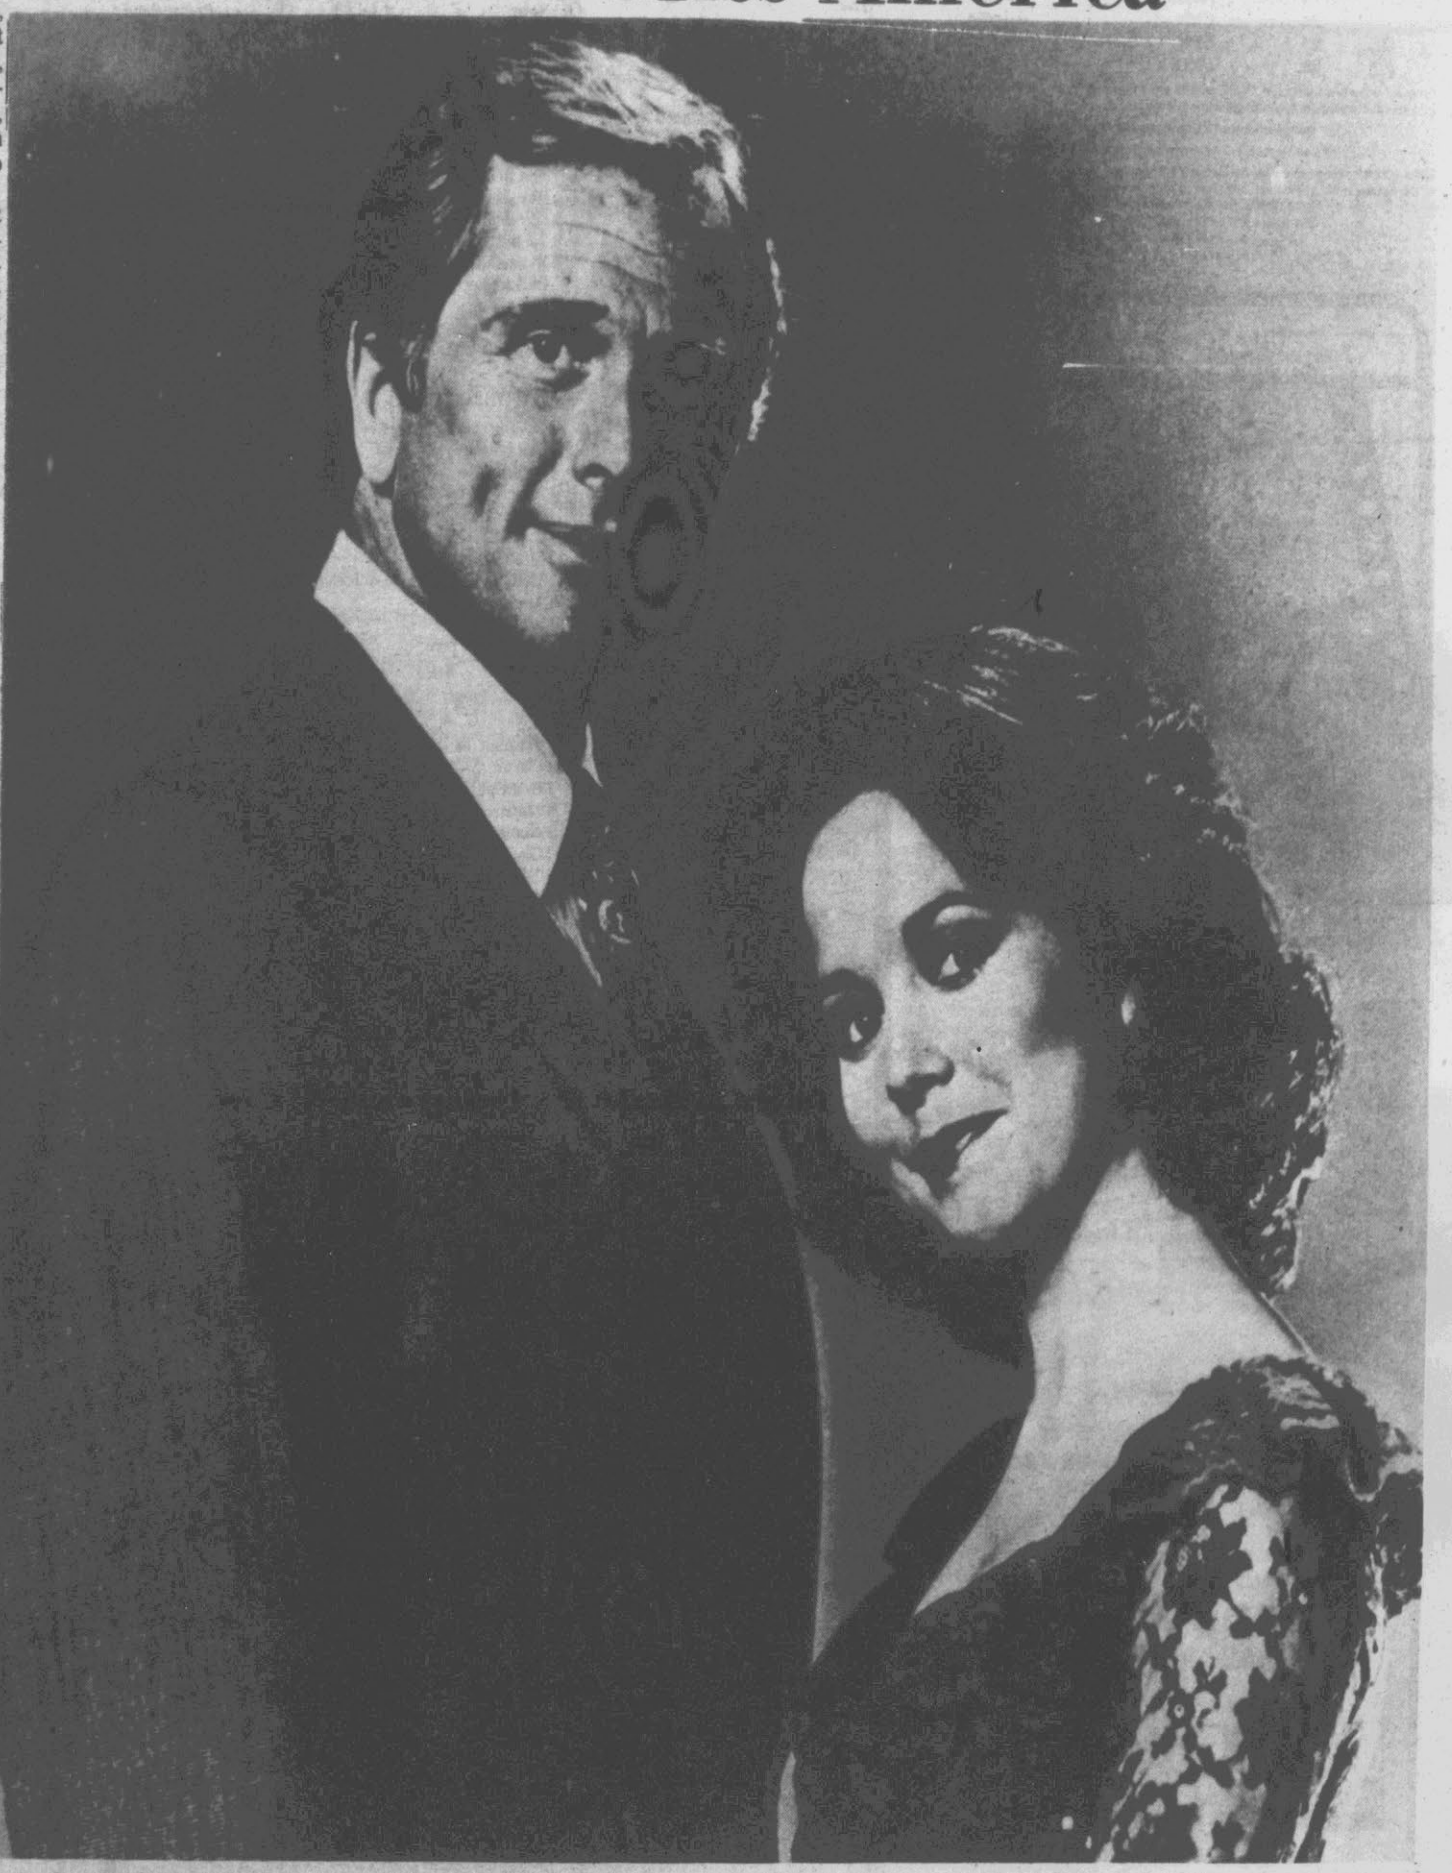
For the second year in a row, Ely's co-host will be singer Dorothy Benham (Miss America 1977). Dorothy will sing and dance during the entertainment portions of the Pageant.

Miss America 1981, Susan Powell of Elk City, Okla., will crown her successor in the final minutes of the event.

Reflecting upon her 12 months of touring the United States as the reigning Miss America, Susan said, "This continues to be a nation of thinking individuals, which is what made America great, I feel. We are united but we remain individuals. And people in this country still care — about each other and about their country."

Susan feels infinite opportunities are available to the girl lucky enough to be crowned Miss America. Through her travels, she said she learned not to worry about the future of the nation. "And I don't listen to those who spout negative things about America," she added. She claims to be "a hundred times more optimistic" about America than she was before she won the pageant last year.

The principal guest star of the pageant will be singer B.J. Thomas, who for the last four years has won Grammy Awards for his renditions of both popular and gospel music.



RON ELY WILL RETURN as host and Oklahoma's Susan Powell, the reigning Miss America, will crown her successor during "The Miss America Pageant," to be presented live Saturday, Sept. 12 (10 p.m. to midnight) on NBC-TV.

Gunn Is Bugged

Moses Gunn says the world is bugging him. Gunn, who just arrived in Los Angeles, from his home in Connecticut to begin production of the "Father Murphy" series, says that the trees in his home state have been stripped bare by gypsy moths — "and out here everyone's going goofy about medflies!"

'Desperate Women' Airs

Dan Haggerty stars as a laconic ex-hired gun in the Old West who rescues three beautiful but scrappy female prisoners abandoned in the desert in "Desperate Women," a comedy-adventure to be rebroadcast on NBC's The Sunday Big Event on Sept. 6 (9-11 p.m.).

Ben Ward (Haggerty) stumbles upon three forsaken convicts (Susan Saint James, Ronee Blakley and Ann Dusenberry) and agrees to lead them out of the barren wilderness in their prison transport wagon. As they proceed, Ward adopts other misfits including two orphaned children, a shaky Army deserter and a group of cantankerous animals.

The rag-tag group shoots, claws and bluffs it's way through marauding Indians, lecherous miners and misdirected cavalrymen, as it is pursued by desperado "Black Jack" Ketchman (Michael Delano) and his ratty gang, who are intent upon retrieving the badman's girlfriend (Blakley) — and capturing Ward's secret, but valuable, cargo.

Haggerty, who starred in "The Life and Times of Grizzly Adams," is an avid outdoorsman and former professional animal trainer, definite attributes for his portrayal of the rugged Ben Ward's trek through the wilderness.

Born and brought up in Hollywood, Calif., the broad-shouldered, muscular Haggerty says whatever success he has known as an entertainer can be traced back to his love of animals.

SINGER-SONGWRITER Ronee Blakley (l) co-stars with Ann Dusenberry as feisty, feuding prison escapees in the Old West in "Desperate Women," the rowdy "Sunday Big Event," Sept. 6 (9-11 p.m.) on NBC-TV.

"I love 'em all," he says with a wide grin. "Because of them, I've traveled the world, made some money, raised a family and have known the kind of fulfillment that can only come to a man doing what he wants and likes to do."

Among the animals Dan has trained are wolverines, eagles, elephants, chimpanzees, hawks, bears, wild boar and Siberian tigers.

He has also been a trainer for several movies — "Tarzan" films, and Walt Disney's "Lt. Robin Crusoe" and "Monkeys, Go Home!"

Susan Saint James starred in two television series, "The Name of the Game" and "McMillian & Wife." Ronee Blakley, who received an Academy Award nomination for her performance in "Nashville" and appeared in "The Driver," makes her TV movie debut in "Desperate Women." Dusenberry appeared in "Jaws II." "Captain and the Kings" and "Little Women."

Angie Comes Back

"The Angie Dickinson Show" stars the popular movie and television personality as a Los Angeles private detective involved in action-packed adventures. Produced by Johnny Carson Productions the series will air on NBC.

Bitter Mother

BETTE DAVIS and Gena Rowlands star in "Strangers: The Story of a Mother and Daughter," the Tuesday Night Movie, Sept. 8 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV, focusing on a mother and daughter who reunite after an estrangement of 20 years.

"You have to wonder why I'm so cruel to my own daughter. She's trying hard to make up an old quarrel but I'm terrible to her. You tell yourself you don't care. But you wait to see what happens — whether I get what I deserve. Then, bit by bit, you learn more. You realize why I behave that way. And soon you come to understand."

That, in her own words, is the story of Bette Davis' portrayal of a bitter mother in "Strangers: The Story of a Mother and Daughter," to be rebroadcast on "The CBS Tuesday Night Movies" on Sept. 8 (9-11 p.m.).

The film concerns Abigail Mason (Gena Rowlands), who returns to the home of her widowed mother, Lucy (Davis), after an absence of more than 20 years, during which time neither woman has communicated with each other.

Feeling there is a price to pay for the past, Lucy, isolated and bitter in old age, browbeats, belittles and attacks her daughter. Abigail, employing humor, patience and a childhood habit of pestering, defends herself. Ultimately, however, the daughter lashes out in anger.

Eventually, peace is achieved, a summer is shared, and Lucy grows in Abigail's presence. But a crisis arises, and their bond, so painfully achieved, is again threatened.

"So much of the character reflects my own New England background," said Davis.

Mysterious Woman

Joan Collins joins "Dynasty" in the new season as John Forsythe's ex-wife. In the 22 segments to come, Joan's character will do her best to destroy everything sacred.

A Winner

"Hill Street Blues," a realistic detective series on NBC which earned critical praise but meager ratings last season, dominated the 33rd annual prime-time Emmy Awards nominations with a record 21, the most any series has received in the history of the Academy.

Michelle Will Tell

Q: Is "Magnum P.I." filmed in Hawaii or Hollywood? Where does Tom Selleck live? Is he as kind in real life as he is on the show? Please tell me his interest and hobbies? A SELLECK FAN IN KINSTON, N.C.

A: CBS' hit series, "Magnum, P.I." is filmed entirely on location in Hawaii. You can ask the cast and crew members of the series about Selleck and they'll all tell you he's a great guy! Tom, a dedicated beach enthusiast and water athlete, now lives in Hawaii. You can write to him in c/o Universal City Studios, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, Calif. 91608.

Q: What has Lynda Carter been doing since "Wonder Woman" was taken off the air, and is she going to make a new film for a new series of the "Wonder Woman" show? Is Lynda Carter a singer in real life. L.T. McNEILL, SHANNON, N.C.

A: The only way you'll see Lynda Carter as "Wonder Woman" again will be in re-runs of that show. Married to her manager, Ron Samuels, Lynda's career has headed in new directions. Along with a made-for-TV movie, she has appeared on her own variety specials, wowing everyone with her singing and dancing. Lynda has also hit the night club circuit in Las Vegas with shows in the Circus Maximus room at Caesar's Palace as well as Reno, Nevada.

Q: Who played Mary Ann on "Gilligan's Island," and was she a Miss America at one time? And what kind of motorcycle did Michael Parks ride in the movie and series "Then Came Bronson"? T. TATUM, HOPE MILLS, N.C.

A: Mary Ann Summers, the pretty general story clerk from Kansas on "Gilligan's Island" was played by Dawn Wells. You may be thinking of another actress, Mary Ann Mobley — who was a former Miss America. We can't be certain what type of motorcycle 'Bronson' inherited from his friend who committed suicide. We do know, that like the character he portrayed, Michael could hardly be kept off the bike even for dangerous scenes. The show's producer was even dumbfounded to discover that Parks was riding in hill-climbing contest sequences.

Q: Is Nancy McKeon who plays on "The Facts of Life" related to Phillip McKeon in any way? KATHY SELLECK, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: She sure is! Fourteen-year-old Nancy is Phillip's younger sister. They both live at home with their parents in Burbank, Calif.

Q: Are they taking "The Incredible Hulk," and "B.J. and the Bear" off the air? If so, why? K. MOSS, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Both "The Incredible Hulk" and "B.J. and the Bear," enjoyed good ratings at first. Somewhere along the line, they lost a lot of viewers so the networks decided to cancel.

No Substitute For Love

Scott Baio is a family man.

That is, the multitalented young television and film star believes in a close and loving family relationship, such as he shares with his parents and his older brother and sister, who are twins.

Baio's home life is the antithesis of the role he portrays as teen-aged Buff Saunders in "The Boy Who Drank Too Much," to be rebroadcast on Wednesday, Sept. 9 (9-11 p.m.) on CBS-TV. The poignant drama is about friendship and loyalty played against the stark fact of teen-age alcoholism.

Others cast in starring roles are Lance Kerwin, Ed Lauter and Mariclare Costello.

Buff is a 16-year-old high school ice-hockey student, who lives an isolated existence with his alcoholic father. Lacking a strong self-image fostered by the feelings of self-consciousness and his father's failure to provide guidance, the teen-ager finds temporary solace in alcohol. He begins to drink so heavily that his very life is threatened.

His teammate and best friend, Billy Carpenter (Kerwin), becomes aware of the boy's tragic and self-destructive habit and actively commits himself to saving his friend. But the adults in his life fail to help and voice sharp disapproval of his friendship with Buff. Then Billy puts himself on the line, endangering his own health, his grades and his social relationships.

"Buff's alcoholic father is played by Don Murray," said Scott. "They have moved around a lot, and Buff has a hard time making friends. There isn't anyone he can talk to about his problems. Alcohol is a substitute for what he's lacking."

23 The Story

A Star Is Born

While taping special segments aboard the Queen Elizabeth 2, "Search For Tomorrow" needed an actor to play a minor role, and elicited the help of ship's doctor Nigel Roberts, who was quite effective in his three scenes as Hemmings, a gambler on the ship. Weeks later, back in New York City, the serial's writers decided to bring back the character — but how to bring back the actor, off at sea on the luxury liner? Fortunately, the QE 2 was docked in New York for one day during August — and that day, the serial brought Roberts in to tape a series of scenes to be used in three later episodes. Roberts' return engagements will air Monday, Aug. 31 through Wednesday, Sept. 2.

Nothing Unusual

Charles Haid, who co-stars as Officer Andy "Cowboy" Renko in "Hill Street Blues," sees nothing unusual about his character's adopted cowboy affections — even though Renko has never been west of the Mississippi River.

"Look at it this way," said Haid. "Waylon Jennings comes from New Jersey, like Renko, and he's taken on that persona, just like millions of others on assembly lines in Detroit. The cowboy represents the last of the individuals, and that's what they like to think of themselves as being."

No Laughing Matter

George Lindsey, star of "Hee Haw," presented a check for $102,975.73 to the Alabama Special Olympics, proceeds from the recent George Lindsey Celebrity Weekend.

Another Underwater Monster Surfaces

John Huston, Shelley Winters, Bo Hopkins and Henry Fonda star in "Tentacles," a suspense drama about an 80-foot octopus that terrorizes a California beach community after it is maddened by the illegal activity of two oceanographers. The 1977 American International Pictures release will be rebroadcast on NBC's Friday Night at the Movies on Sept. 11 (9-11 p.m.).

In this spin-off in the wake of "Jaws," the townspeople of a small beach community are shocked when the bodies of an infant and a sailor are found near the water. The local sheriff (Claude Akins) and a veteran journalist, Ned Turner (Huston), are stymied in their efforts to find a clue.

Mr. Whitehead (Fonda), president of a company drilling an underwater tunnel in the bay, however, is using radio sound waves which are a potential hazard to the ecological balance of the sea.

The mysterious deaths attract the attention of Will Gleason (Hopkins), a famed young marine scientist who has developed close communication with two killer whales he has trained.

When his wife disappears, Will suspects that an octopus may be the culprit and vows to find the giant. He also determines that the research by Whitehead has triggered a furious reaction from the octopus. When he places his killer whales in an area where he believes the octopus may have a cave, he sets the stage for a major undersea confrontation.

Although the film boasts a first-place marquee, the stellar participation is held to a minimum (Fonda literally phones his part in), and it's up to the eight-legged creature to grab the audience's attention.

Shelley Winters gets a few minutes of screen time as a doting mother whose son and his best friend are about to enter a sailing regatta, inadvisedly using two-way radios during the race.

Series To Begin

"Behind the Screen," a new half-hour series that follows the on- and off-camera lives and relationships of the people involved in a successful daytime soap opera, will be produced for broadcast during the 1981-82 season on CBS. The series will premiere with a one-hour episode on Friday, Oct. 9 (11:30 p.m.), followed by half-hour episodes on consecutive Fridays.

This is an innovative type of programming for the late-night time period in that it is an original dramatic program. "Behind the Screen" focuses on the people involved directly and indirectly with a successful television soap opera. In other words, it is a soap within a soap.

Woodcliff Productions, Inc., will produce the program which stars Mel Ferrer, Joanne Linville, Josh Bryant, Loyita Chapel, Bruce Fairbairn, Debbi Morgan, Lew Palter, Catherine Parks, Michael Sabatino and Janine Turner.

Kansas Attacks Steel Curtain

On Sunday, Sept. 6 (1-4 p.m.), the Kansas City Chiefs will tackle the tough Pittsburgh Steelers on NBC-TV. Kansas City has improved their won-loss record yearly for the past 4 seasons and recorded an 8-8 talley during their 1980 campaign. The Steelers are coming off of a season of malcontent, which saw numerous injuries to key personnel and a dismal 9-7 record.

K.C. Coach Marv Levy came to the Chiefs in 1977, and took control of a team who registered a 2-12 won loss record. His first chore, upon his arrival from Canada was to build a defense that could contain the running and aerial attack of much more polished opponents. He successfully completed his task by using the college draft system to put together a squad which gave up 336 points last season. This is a marked improvement over the past few seasons.

WIDE RECEIVER HENRY MARSHALL of the Kansas City Chiefs will help quarterback Steve Fuller execute a more balanced offense as the Chiefs take on the Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday, Sept. 6 (1-4 p.m.) on NBC Sports.

Levy feels safe enough now with a defense that stars a pair of first round draft picks, Art Still (1978) and Mike Bell (1979). His primary concern then became to bolster the offensive crew.

Levy did this by drafting Clemson star Steve Fuller. Fuller has had two years of fulltime duty to learn the ropes of pro ball and has proved that he can rifle passes with pinpoint accuracy and throw the long ball.

Fuller's favorite target last season was wide receiver Henry Marshall who received 47 passes for 655 yards and recorded six touch downs. Marshall is a pass receiver who has silky smooth moves and if given the opportunity to break away from the opposing defense he can go all the way. Marshall demonstrated this twice last year as he caught two passes for 75 yard gains.

To bolster this already admirable passing attack, Levy drafted Willie Scott of South Carolina for their number one choice. According to Levy, "Scott was the best at his position coming out of the college ranks and he has a great shot at being a starter."

Pittsburgh, on the other hand, is a team whose roster is filled with veteran players. Barring injuries, the Pittsburgh Steelers may be the most competent team in the league.

The return of Terry Bradshaw has delighted Pittsburgh fans as Terry will rely upon the consistency of teammates Franco Harris, Lynn Swann and Joe Stallworth.

Pittsburgh's defense will again be spearheaded by the awesome Jack Lambert. Jack Hamm and Joe Greene will also be on hand to give Fuller some valuable education.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — The JACKSON'S soul group has been presented with Atlanta's Gold Medal Award! They raised $100,000 for the Atlanta Children's Foundation at a recent concert.

JAMES GARNER is not only returning to television as "Maverick" in a new series for NBC this fall — but after a two-year split from wife LOIS he has returned home. The reconciliation is now official and love blooms again in their posh hilltop home in Bel Air.

GENIE FRANCES, Laura in "General Hospital," is out of that hospital and in Century City Hospital for a tonsillectomy.

MGM-TV means business in its battle with "CHiPs" star ERIK ESTRADA; besides filing a $20,000,000 suit against him for breach of contract, BRUCE JENNER, called "The World's Greatest Athlete," has been signed as principal performer in a number of episodes for the new season. JENNER will portray Officer Steve McLeish.

When LAWRENCE WELK gives the downbeat to his musical family this fall, it will signal the breaking of an all-time television record. The start of his 27th consecutive year of nationwide telecasting. And THEY said it wouldn't last.

ROLLING STONES star MICK JAGGER is wearing the brightest smile in town. The small emerald that had been implanted on his front tooth (friends thought it was a bit of parsley caught between his teeth) has been replaced with a brilliant diamond. That's one stone we hope won't roll anymore.

STEVE KANALY took time off the "Dallas" Texas location to wing home to L.A. for the arrival of new daughter EVAN ELIZABETH. However, he had to return to Ewing country the very next day.

Those karats—they're so good for you.

FOR BAY BUCHANAN, Treasurer of the United States

Considering inflation, what are the Bicentennial coins now worth, especially the hundred-dollar gold piece? —M.K., Port Saint Joe, Fla.

● Commercial coin dealers who are in the market each day and well informed about collectors' value are the best sources for quotations on individual pieces. The Mint is still selling the three-coin Bicentennial proof sets for $20 and the uncirculated sets for $15. No gold coins were produced by the Mint for the Bicentennial. However, the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission offered a national series of five medals, three of varying sizes in gold. The gold content of its $100 medal at the July 1, 1981, gold price of $410 an ounce, was worth $155; the $400 medal, $485, and the $4,000 medal, $5,450.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

● John Denver caused ancient Japanese tradition to be put aside during his recent tour of Japan. Crown Prince Akihito and his wife, Crown Princess Michiko, attended Denver's Tokyo concert, making them the first royalty ever to attend such an entertainment event...Mariana and tennis star Bjorn Borg have been married more than a year, and Mrs. Borg reports that one of the things she, a Romanian, has learned, is how to make Swedish meatballs ("from Bjorn's mother, who lives near us in Cap Ferrat"). Mariana insisted on painting their apartment herself, even the doors ("which are difficult"), although she could have had professional help. "Doing it myself made it seem more a part of me, and I now have a very special feeling about the place, which I would not have had otherwise."

Wide World

The Borg set: off-court, love-all.

FOR JULIE ANDREWS, co-star of S.O.B.

Is it the film's intention to put down Hollywood? —D.F., Lafayette, La.

● No. But it does reflect a certain part of the community. We are taking a swipe at a small segment of that group. Our aim was not to put down Hollywood. It is hard to do that to people who live there and who lead ordinary lives. We are concerned with the people with power and money. A social group. Everywhere you will find people who make it rough for others.

FOR DEAN KRAFT, author of Portrait of a Psychic Healer

Is it true you treated Yoko Ono for depression long before John Lennon was shot, and what do you remember most about meeting her? —B.I., Bristol, Tenn.

● Yes, but it was long before their son was born and was for severe fatigue, not depression. Within a few minutes I was aware of her learning and sophistication. She was smaller than I expected, with hair reaching beyond her thighs. She was quite impressive.

FOR MADGE SINCLAIR of TV's Trapper John, M.D.

What do you remember most about your childhood in Jamaica? —B.G., Easton, Pa.

● The tranquility. The way people walked the streets late at night, without fear. The entertainment — there wasn't much theater, so people made their own fun at home or at festivals. And the strict way in which my father raised my sister and me. He was strict about the company we kept, strict about homework and quite strict about spending money.

FOR HARRY HAUN, author of Movie Quote Book

Why didn't you include quotes from the new crop of actors, such as Brooke Shields or John Travolta? —S.T., Evansdale, Iowa

● It's very simple. Movies today are not put into dialogue; they are more visual, since the object is primarily TV audiences. Those who grew up in the age of TV are more interested in the visual than the vocal. But this is not the fault of the stars. They seem to have found the art of communicating without dialogue.

FOR LINDA FRATIANNE, skating star

How does your skating compare, say, with that of Sonja Henie? —V.K., Columbia, Mo.

● There is practically no comparison. Take jumping, for instance. She did half a revolution in the air. Today's skaters do three. The art of skating has expanded, technically, just the way air flight has become more complicated over the years. And the training, too, is different. I put in eight hours a day. I believe Sonja Henie trained for three. In short, it was easier to be a skater then.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

● Robert Klein complains his role as a double schizoid in Columbia's Nobody's Perfekt (he alternates between Jimmy Cagney and Bette Davis, due to being born during a double bill of Public Enemy and The Petrified Forest) has caused him lots of embarrassment, especially when garbed for the Bette Davis scenes. For instance, he answered a call from his wife (opera singer Brenda Boozer) and cooed: "Hold on honey, I just can't hear you with this earring on."

PRO AND CON

Does the Federal Government Have the Right to Determine When Human Life Begins?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Senator John East (R.-N.C.)

The 14th Amendment gives Congress authority to enforce protection of the right to life. It is, therefore, appropriate to determine at what point in an individual's life government protection becomes operative. Generally, the question of when to protect life was left to the states until the Supreme Court's decision that states may not protect unborn children. That decision can be corrected by Congressional action, under the enforcement power of the 14th Amendment, by designating when in human growth the right to life is protected.

CON Senator Bob Packwood (R.-Ore.)

It is unwise and impossible for one group of individuals to make that determination. No one, not religious leaders, scientists, doctors or scholars can agree on when human life begins. Every generation brings a new group of people that believes its view of the origin of life to be the correct view. They seem to believe God speaks directly to them. From my personal perspective as a U.S. Senator who represents a broad cross section of Americans, I hope we will always remember that passion can obscure judgment.

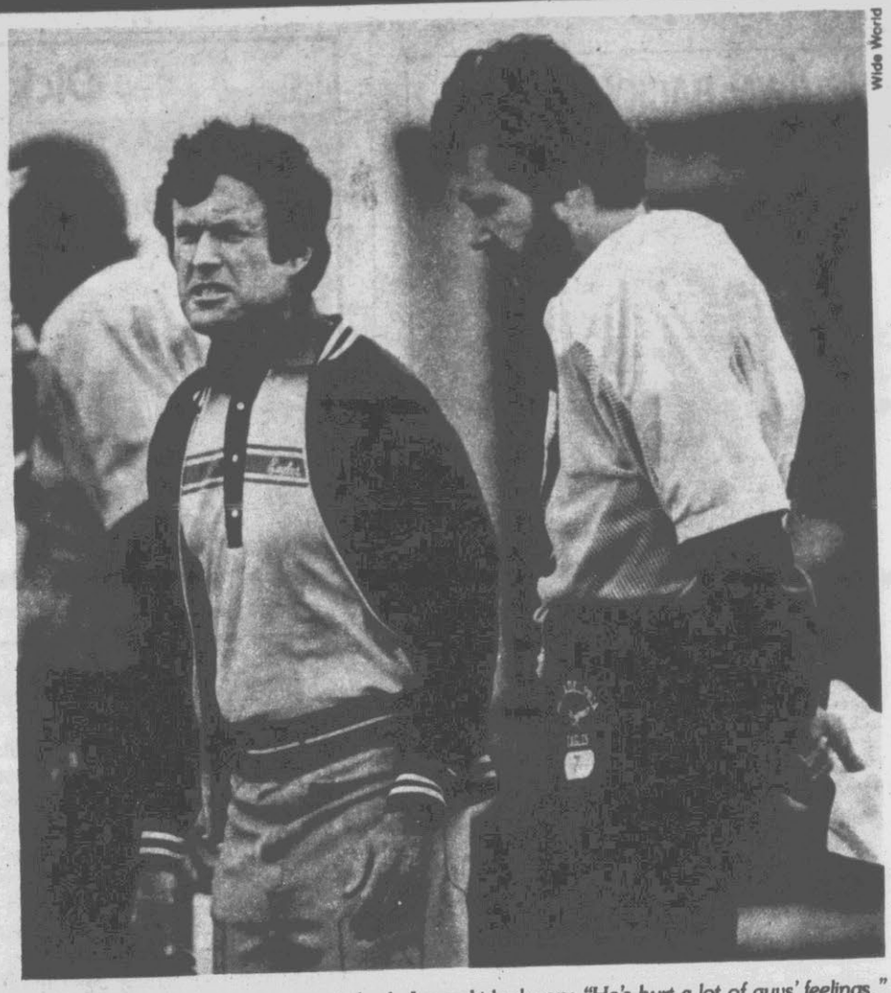
Is Dick Vermeil A Lombardi for the 80's?

With his authoritarian hand, flair for inspiration and penchant for 17-hour days, Philadelphia's head man evokes memories of Green Bay's legendary leader.

By Mark Goodman



Wide World

Expressing his displeasure as quarterback Jaworski looks on: "He's hurt a lot of guys' feelings."

Imagine leaving for the office on Monday morning and telling your wife that you'll be working late and won't be home until Friday. And on the off-chance that you get away with it once, try pulling the same stunt again and again for the next four months.

Fat chance, right? But that's how things work in the Vermeil home out on Philadelphia's Main Line, for the simple reason that Carol Vermeil knows it's the certifiable truth.

Her husband, Dick, has been devoted to her since their romance blossomed at California's Calistoga High School back in the early 1950's. Vermeil, 44, certainly loves his wife a lot...almost as much, in fact, as he loves his Philadelphia Eagles. And Carol Vermeil understands. "When I met him," she says, "he was the same as he is now." That means hard-driving, disciplined and utterly devoted to winning football games. He's been that way since his first coaching job back at Hillsdale High in California's San Mateo County, through his brilliant two years at U.C.L.A. to the job with the N.F.L. Eagles he took on six seasons ago.

As a Packer once said of Lombardi: "He treats us all the same — like dogs."

Wide World

When Vermeil arrived in Philadelphia in 1976, he inherited a woeful franchise, a team that had won its last championship in 1960 and hadn't reached the playoffs since. His only player of note was All-Pro linebacker Bill Bergey, and he did not even have a first-round draft choice available until 1979. The outlook was grim. General manager Jim Murray told Vermeil, "If you can win the opening coin toss, they'll fall in love with you here."

It took five seasons of four nights a week at his office at Veterans Stadium, watching reel after reel of football footage, but in 1981 Vermeil's Eagles (or "Iggles," as Philadelphia natives call them) reached professional football's penultimate goal — the Super Bowl. The eventual victors, of course, were the Oakland Raiders, who completed their own odyssey of a year with a thorough-going 27-10 triumph.

It was a bitter loss, but Vermeil took it with his well-chiseled chin thrust forward. "At halftime," he remembers, "I told the guys that it just didn't seem to me like it was our football team out there. And after the game I thanked them for bringing me here and for playing as hard as they did and that I felt sorry for them because we lost."

Still, there's no place in the Vermeil orthodoxy for self-pity. After he and Carol took a brief vacation with Eagles' owner Leonard Tose and his wife, it was back to the film room and the drawing board. Last year the Eagles made it to the Super Bowl; this year it's time to win it. And, of course, the only way for Dick Vermeil to do that is to work and work and work.

"Everybody's different," Vermeil says. "In college I had two kids and had to get up and go to school. Hard work is relative to what you're used to. There are times I've had some doubts and said to myself, 'Hey, better back off there.'

"But you see," he explains, "I'm just not oriented to time the way some people are. I can go to bed at 5 A.M. and get up and go to work. I don't need a watch to tell me it's time to quit coaching; I want the performances to tell me when to quit. This year I'm going to try harder than I've ever tried. I realize you can get to a point of no return, start losing enthusiasm and get a little drained. But you also mature and learn to handle more hours. I'm at maximum capacity now."

Maximum capacity for Vermeil means sleeping on the roll-away bed in his office more often than not. It's even been reported that when Vermeil heard that four hours of sleep on a water bed supposedly feels like six, he suggested all his coaches get them so they could get by on fewer hours.

At 44, Vermeil is the third-youngest head coach in the N.F.L. (Denver's Dan Reeves is 37; Ray Perkins of the Giants, 39), and thus can stand his self-imposed abuse. But as he is quick to point out, "It's tough to get an edge in this game. Everybody's working harder, if only because the talent is so spread around." True. Vermeil has no corner on the compulsion market in pro football. It has long been realized around the N.F.L. that drive and organization can often make winners out of whatever talent is available. Don Shula proved that with the Miami Dolphins in the early 1970's. Shrewd drafting and a patient, tutorial philosophy took Chuck Noll and his Pittsburgh Steelers to four Super Bowl victories. Down in Dallas, Tom Landry's intense drive and the game's soundest corporate structure have made the Cowboys perennial contenders. Under the iron hand of Vermeil's former mentor, Chuck Knox, the Buffalo Bills have reestablished themselves as one of the N.F.L.'s most formidable outfits. Ditto the Cleveland Browns, who have been recalling their glory days ever

WATER FROM OUR OWN BACKYARD WELL

Opelika, Alabama—What can you buy for a nickel and still get some change back? 500 gallons of water, that's what! As a matter of fact, the electricity to pump 500 gallons from your own backyard well costs only four cents!

With this reliable, convenient source of water you can supply your home, your garden, and with a water well heat pump you can even heat and cool your home for a fraction of the cost of conventional systems!

In the past, the cost of drilling a well made it uneconomical for anyone who could hook on to city water mains. However, as city water becomes much more expensive, backyard wells have become more and more popular. To hold the cost of drilling a well to an affordable level, an easy-to-use low-cost machine has been developed for the homeowner who wants to drill his own. Called the HYDRA-DRILL, it is already in use around the world, and an estimated 60,000 Hydra-Drill wells have been drilled to date.

The Hydra-Drill can drill to depths of 200 feet, which puts you within reach of 90% of all the good fresh ground water in the world. The typical Hydra-Drill well can produce over 4,000 gallons of water each day—just compare that with the average U.S. family consumption of 500 gallons of water per day!

The Hydra-Drill is remarkably simple to operate. It is completely portable, and can be operated anywhere. . .even in places a truck-mounted drilling rig can't get. Yet it can drill most anything the big, truck-mounted rigs can drill, and drilling speeds range up to 40 feet per hour.

To find out more about the Hydra-Drill and how you can drill your own water well, send your name and address to:

Dick Vermeil

Consoled by Oakland's victorious Tom Flores: "That wasn't our team out there."

since the arrival of coach Sam Rutigliano four years ago.

Yet Vermeil is something special, and the men who work and sweat under his Lombardian lash are well aware of it. "I probably have better relations with my players than anyone coaching," Vermeil says proudly. "I've gotten to the point where I only discipline things that make a difference. At U.C.L.A., for example, the long hair used to drive me crazy, but I never made any of my players cut it."

Mainly, his players endure his brutal training camps and imperious ways because he has made them winners. Beyond that, they appreciate Vermeil's blunt honesty. Says quarterback Ron Jaworski, for whom Vermeil shrewdly traded in 1977, "He's the first guy to say you messed up. A lot of coaches tell you anything. He tells you stuff you may not like to hear, but it's true. He's hurt a lot of guys' feelings. He'll walk right up to them in training camp and say, 'You better get your butt in gear or you're gonna get cut.'"

For all his authoritarian ways, Vermeil is smart enough to surround himself with the league's largest (11) and most experienced coaching staff. Unlike some ego-sensitive coaches, Vermeil wants name-brand assistants working for him. One is defensive coordinator Marion Campbell, former Atlanta head coach. "When Dick hired me," says Campbell, "he said he'd let me coach. That's the only way I can coach. Dick is a lot of things most coaches aren't. He's an organizer, he's a fine technical coach and he's a leader. And he isn't afraid of having competent people around him."

Vermeil's stamina and obsession with perfection derive from the long hours he spent working as a youngster in the Owl Garage beside his father, Louis Vermeil (the last name comes from the metalsmith's process of gilding silver). "There," Dick recalls. "I learned what it was like to work, eat lunch, work, eat dinner, then go back to work." His sister, Laura, who is also mom to one of Vermeil's tough little running backs, Louie Giammona, remembers what life was like for Dick and brother Stan in those days (a third brother, Al, played for Dick at Napa Valley Junior College). "Dick and Stan would play a football game on Friday night and be dead-tired on Saturday morning," she says. "My father would be in the shop 15 minutes, then he'd storm into the house and holler, 'Get up! What do you think this is, a holiday?'"

It didn't hurt, though, that even in his work clothes, Dick looked like one of those modern Mr. Goodwrench ads. He was also the best athlete in the high school, and his girl, Carolyn Drake, was the prettiest cheerleader. Dick went on to play football at Napa Valley Junior College before transferring to San Jose State, where he quarterbacked the team while married and the father of two boys. (His sons, David and Rick, recently were graduated from Villanova, while his daughter, Nancy, is a student at Penn State).

But Vermeil wasn't big enough or, truthfully, good enough for pro football, so he went straight to coaching instead. His crowning achievement — the one that made desperate Eagles' owner, Leonard Tose, sit up and take notice — was U.C.L.A.'s stunning 23-10 Rose Bowl victory over Woody Hayes' Ohio State Buckeyes in 1976.

Vermeil has spent five seasons calling his own plays, working 17 hours a day and running his players and staff ragged. But to a man they all know that for every hour's work he demands of them, he'll be putting in two. It takes more than an authoritarian whip to win in the N.F.L. The list of ex-coaches is strewn with tough guys who didn't have what it takes who wound up hopeless martinets.

Says assistant Lynn Stiles, who followed Vermeil from U.C.L.A. to Philadelphia, "Dick really is like good wine — the longer he's at it, the more he ferments, the better he gets. He has the ability to reach out and touch people, to understand what motivates them. Some people call him a little dictator, but I call that leadership."

In a moment you will learn how a new discovery by a National Science Award Winner literally stops calories from entering your body.

According to research, this remarkable discovery makes it possible to lose up to 25 pounds or more in the very first week and more than 40 pounds in less than a month. This amazing scientific breakthrough was discovered by Dr. Ronald R. Romano who is the former Director of Cedars Institute and Polyclinic in Florida.

As you may or may not know, overweight people tend to absorb more calories from the food they eat than thin people. What Doctor Romano has discovered is a safe, non-prescription product that dramatically reduces the number of calories absorbed from every meal you eat.

This product is so safe it is available without prescription from any drugstore — It is so common it is available under 7 different brand names. In fact, you may even have some of this product in your medicine cabinet or purse at this very moment.

Strangely enough, this commonplace product wasn't even originally designed for dieting purposes. However, Doctor Romano says that if you use this product correctly it will work in 2 ways to reduce the number of calories you absorb.

First, this product reduces stomach acidity and inactivates the prime digestive enzyme. Second, it neutralizes gastric contents and causes your stomach to empty sooner than usual. This gives your body less time to act on the food you eat and thereby reduces the number of calories you absorb.

What this means is that it is now possible to lose weight and inches faster than ever before. One woman lost 43 pounds in 30 days and now, 18 months later, she is still maintaining her desirable weight. She says, "I don't think I'll ever be fat again." Another woman lost 37 pounds on Dr. Romano's 30-day program. However, since she was extremely overweight, she had to stay on the program a second month during which she lost an additional 35 pounds. That's a total weight loss of 72 pounds in just two months!

There are many more examples. Madeline M. was 28 years old and 187 pounds. She lost 43 pounds during her 30-day program and at exactly the same time she gained so much new energy, she painted and redecorated her apartment all by herself. Doris Mac P., a 25 year old secretary, was 5'¼" and 154 pounds. At the end of her 30-day program she looked so much better that one of the men she worked for asked her to marry him. She told Dr. Romano, "Without you and your diet program I'd probably still be working in that back room."

Incredible? Yes! But true nonetheless. Not only will all those excess pounds melt away but so will the inches. During the 30-day program you may have to buy at least one new wardrobe and probably two. The fat will disappear so quickly that after one week, your present clothing will hang on you like so much burlap.

But let's face it — the rapid and enormous reduction in weight and size is only part of the benefits of this program. More importantly, you will be able to maintain your new slenderness for life with only minimum effort.

The product that makes all this possible is available to everyone without a prescription. It is also perfectly safe when used as directed by Dr. Romano.

This product will help you get down to your ideal weight fast even if you are more than 50 pounds overweight. Dr. Romano has designed the world's most unusual (and effective!) weight-loss plan around this discovery. He calls his 30-Day program "MEGA II".

Mega II is a triple-powered program that consists of (1) consuming less, (2) absorbing less, and (3) burning up more. That's why the Mega II Rapid Weight Reduction Program has such remarkable power.

Dr. Romano has explained everything about his amazing program in a new book called: "Dr. Romano's Mega II Rapid Weight Reduction Program." This book is written in plain English. It tells everything you need to know and exactly what to ask for in any drugstore that makes this program possible and precisely how to use it!

Here's how you can read this book and try this plan without any financial risk at all. Go ahead and order the book by mail. Keep it 30 days and read it and check it out. Then if you are not 100% happy with the program, send the book back and the company will return your payment to you quietly and without question.

If you want to be extra-safe you can post-date your check or money order by 30 days. If you do that the publisher promises and guarantees not to deposit it for at least that amount of time. Then, if you decide to return the book, the company will send back your uncashed check or money order with no questions asked.

To order, write your name and address and the word "MEGA II" on a piece of paper and send it with $9.95 to:

Millburn Book Corporation
Dept. ME5 P.O. Box 1021
343 Millburn Ave.
Millburn, New Jersey 07041

Of if you prefer, you can order without sending any money. All you have to do is pick up your phone and dial 1-800-523-7635, or if you live in Pennsylvania call 1-800-662-5180. (These are toll free numbers and won't cost you a penny.) When the girl answers tell her you want to order from Dept. ME5. Then give her your name and address and the number of either your Master Charge or Visa credit card and expiration date.

That's all there is to it. Your book will be sent out to you quite promptly. If you have any questions, you can telephone (201) 744-3777.

Of course, you should always consult your own doctor before using this or any other diet program.

FOOD

The Great Zucchini Masters Menu Combinations

By Marilyn Hansen

About 30 years ago, my Uncle Eddie introduced my family and me to zucchini, the green Italian squash that he grew in his Falls Village, Ct., vegetable garden — using organic growing methods, of course. Little did we know then that this versatile, easy-to-grow squash would become universally grown and loved. Always on the lookout for new ideas, I have selected several dishes for you to try.

SUMMER SQUASH SOUP

2 cans (13¾-oz. size) beef broth (3½ cups)
2 medium-size zucchini or yellow squash, sliced
2 medium-size onions, sliced (1 cup)
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup plain yogurt
Fresh alfalfa sprouts or shredded carrot

1. In a large saucepan, bring broth to a boil. Add squash and onion; simmer until tender, about 15 minutes. Season with pepper.

2. In container of electric blender, combine broth, vegetables and yogurt. Process until smooth. Serve hot or cold.

3. Serve garnished with fresh alfalfa sprouts or shredded carrots, if desired.

ZUCCHINI-SPINACH FRITTATA

6 eggs
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
Dash Tabasco sauce
4 small zucchini, sliced
1 large onion, sliced
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 cups fresh spinach or Swiss chard, chopped
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ teaspoon oregano leaves or 1 teaspoon snipped fresh oregano leaves
½ teaspoon basil leaves or 1 tablespoon snipped basil leaves
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup grated Parmesan, Romano, Swiss or Jarlsberg cheese

1. Beat eggs with salt, pepper and Tabasco.

2. Prepare vegetables and herbs.

3. In medium-size ovenproof skillet, melt 3 tablespoons butter. Add zucchini, onion and garlic and sauté until limp.

4. Add spinach, parsley, oregano and basil. Heat; stir until just wilted.

5. Combine vegetable-herb mixture with eggs in bowl.

6. Add remaining 3 tablespoons butter to skillet and heat until hot and a drop of water bounces in pan. Add vegetable-egg mixture, all at once. Turn heat down. Cook without stirring until set and top is just moist.

7. Sprinkle with cheese and place under broiler about 4 inches from source of heat and broil until top is golden brown.

8. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes delightful lunch or supper dish.

Makes 4 to 6 servings

SPAGHETTI WITH ZUCCHINI SAUCE

8 ozs. thin spaghetti
1 medium-size zucchini, shredded (1½ to 2 cups)
2 scallions, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
⅛ teaspoon oregano leaves, crushed
Dash cayenne pepper
Grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

1. Cook spaghetti as package label directs.

2. In large serving bowl, combine zucchini, scallions, parsley, oil and seasonings.

3. After spaghetti has cooked, drain in colander.

4. Add hot spaghetti to zucchini mixture; toss lightly. Serve immediately. Pass grated Parmesan cheese separately.

Makes 3 or 4 servings

How to Thrive On Less Sleep

By Lesly Berger

Have you ever wished there were more hours in a day for you to accomplish all you've set out to do? Well, you can't extend those 24 hours, but you may be able to increase the amount of time you spend awake.

Many of us have always assumed that a minimum of eight hours of sleep each night was a prerequisite to good health, but according to Dr. Robert Van de Castle, clinical psychologist and head of the Sleep and Dream Laboratory at the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville, most of us can probably get along on less sleep than that. "Six and a half or seven hours of sleep a night is average for most people, and studies have shown that this can often be reduced by about half an hour with no ill effects," Dr. Van de Castle says.

Joanne Kaplan

In the recent book Sleep Less, Live More (Ballantine, $2.50), author Everett Mattlin points out that throughout history, dynamic people have found that sleeping less has enabled them to accomplish more. Napoleon, the Duke of Wellington, George Bernard Shaw, and such modern-day figures as writer Isaac Asimov and former President Jimmy Carter have all been short sleepers, Mattlin says.

Cutting down on your sleeping time shouldn't interfere with your body's needs, according to Van de Castle. "Sleep is divided into stages," he explains, "and when you shorten your sleep you'll still get adequate time in the two stages which research has found to be the most important: 'stage one,' the R.E.M. or 'rapid eye movement' stage (when dreaming occurs) and 'stage four' or 'slow wave sleep' (when the deepest sleep takes place)."

Van de Castle stresses, however, that there are bound to be individual differences in the amount of sleep one may need. "In some ways, the amount of sleep a person gets may be similar to his waking style," he says. "Try to think of it in terms of the tortoise and the hare. The active, kinetic, quick-talking and fast-moving 'hares' seem to need less sleep, while the more phlegmatic, slower-talking and less-active 'tortoises' may need a bit more."

If you are not getting enough sleep, it's likely that your body will let you know. Lack of sufficient sleep will cause you to feel tired and nervous. In this case, Van de Castle recommends taking one day a week, perhaps during the weekend or on your day off, to indulge yourself and sleep later. But try not to go overboard and sleep more than nine and a half hours, he cautions, or you may wake up groggy or with a slight headache and find that it's even harder for you to get going.

Before you begin a sleep-reduction program, Van de Castle emphasizes, make sure that you have not chosen a hectic or difficult time in your life or a period when you are feeling run-down. Also recognize that in order to derive the maximum benefit from sleep reduction, you must take a gradual approach.

Dr. Van de Castle recommends that rather than trying to stay up later than you're accustomed to, you start by going to bed at your normal time and setting your alarm clock so that you wake up earlier. You might begin by waking up only 10 minutes earlier than usual for the first few days, then 15 minutes earlier for several days, then 20, and so on. Thus it could take you up to a month to shorten your sleep by half an hour, but your body would be ready for it.

How should you use this bonus time? Maybe you could start reading that book you've been meaning to, writing some letters or exercising.

Author Everett Mattlin, who himself sleeps six hours a night, points out: "When you've got things to do that you're excited about, the loss of sleep doesn't seem critical. But if you don't have any special reason for getting up earlier, sleep reduction probably won't work for you." FW

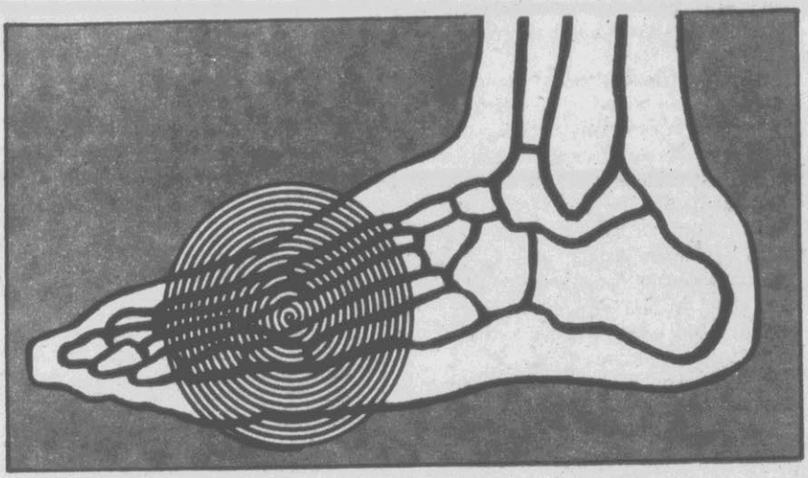
My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Found Relief in Germany!



IT was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted —see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Germany with my own countrymen.

In the last nine years over a quarter million Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

MADE FOR YOUR FEET ALONE

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom formed and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

NO RISK OFFER

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, pain in the balls of your feet, burning nerve ends, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you relief with every step you take or your money back.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Germany can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. No salesman will call. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

WHAT PEOPLE SAY ABOUT THE MIRACLE:

Received my wife's Featherspring two days ago. They are super–neither of us can believe the results. She has had terrible feet for years; already no pain. Incidentally, her sore knee is much better . . . As a retired physician, this result is amazing. Dr.-C.O.C./Tucson, Arizona

"Since I've been wearing Featherspring I have been able to wear shoes I wasn't able to wear before. Mainly because of my corns and calluses. Thanks a hundred times over."
A.H./East Orange, New Jersey

"My husband felt a great relief and no more pain. They are truly an answer to our prayers. Only wish that he had heard of them twenty years ago."
Mrs. F.J.S./Metairie, Louisiana

After wearing Featherspring for 3 months. I would never want to be without them. It's so wonderful to walk without every step hurting. They have helped my corns, ingrown toe nails, and my legs and back are so much better.
Mrs. C.F.E., Sarasota, Fla.

FAMILY REPORT

News From the Home Front

By Norman Lobsenz

Don't Call It Child's Play

"Child's play" is more than just fun and games, says recreation expert Sherrill E. Brakmeier of the University of Louisville. She says that games and exercises can help a child to build self-respect. "Physical activity also allows a youngster to release otherwise potentially destructive emotions," says Brakmeier. "That's why the restless child should not have recreational privileges withdrawn."

It is important, the expert says, for parents and teachers to set a good example by taking part in the activities themselves, and by placing less emphasis on the idea of "winning" than on the healthful values of competing with oneself to measure self-improvement.

In Marriage, Likes Attract

"They've been married so long that they're starting to think and act the same way." That's what people usually say about older couples. But new research indicates that instead of growing to be alike over the years, most husbands and wives share many similar traits right from the start. Indeed, their common backgrounds and preferences seem to be a strong influence in attracting them to each other to begin with.

Researcher Maria Watkins compared the results of her survey of 215 newlyweds with studies previously made on long-married couples. She found nothing to suggest that partners become more similar in their attitudes with age. Rather, she discovered that newlyweds have similar communication and reasoning skills, similar educational backgrounds, and even similar physiques — large, tall women marry large, tall men, and "good-looking people marry other good-looking people."

Kids Learn What It Means to Be Old

High-school students in Nassau County, N.Y., are learning what it means to be old and how Americans can provide a better quality of life for future generations of older men and women.

"Young people need to feel comfortable with old age — for aging and death are part of the life cycle," says school district commissioner Adelaide Attard.

To help youngsters gain insight into aging, a booklet, Teaching About Aging, is being distributed throughout the entire school system. It covers such topics as myths and stereotypes associated with older persons, the kinds of experiences senior citizens can share with young people and how seniors cope with problems of aging. Teachers are being encouraged to discuss aspects of aging in classes on art, literature, biology, social studies and consumer affairs.

Women, Jobs and Family

With more than half of all wives and mothers holding full- or part-time jobs, researchers have been busy discovering what effect a woman's work has on her family relationships. The Journal of Family Issues recently devoted an entire issue to this topic Here are some of its findings:

- A woman's satisfaction — or lack of it — with her job has more effect on her family adjustment than it has on her marital adjustment. A woman's good or bad feeling about work is more likely to "spill over" into her home life than into her marriage.
- The more a woman is paid, the fewer hours she works; a middle-class white husband tends to work less as his wife works more; the more money a woman earns, the more hours a husband works, presumably to maintain his relative contribution to the family income.
- Both husbands and wives say their marriage is more "solid" when the woman works.
- Working wives continue to do most of the household chores and when a woman earns less than her spouse, he is likely to do less around the home. According to sociologist Suzanne Model, low-income working wives unknowingly reinforce their second-class status at home because they have a low "bargaining position" with respect to their husbands. SNEAK PREVIEW

Early scuttlebutt on TV's fall season says that of the networks' 23 new shows, only four to six have a shot at success. According to a survey by advertising's Dancer Fitzgerald Sample, Inc., the four potential hits are NBC's Father Murphy, a Little House on the Prairie spinoff starring Merlin Olsen; ABC's The Fall Guy, with Lee Majors as a stunt man; CBS's Close-Up: Jessica Novak, about a female TV reporter, and CBS's Falcon Crest, another nighttime soap by the folks who gave us Dallas. It stars President Reagan's ex-wife, Jane Wyman, and has the good fortune to follow Dallas on Friday nights. Two other shows have a fighting chance — ABC's Today's FBI with Mike Connors, and Shannon, a CBS cop tale starring Kevin (Kojak) Dobson.

Of the 17 shows seemingly headed for disaster, NBC has eight of them, including The Rock Hudson Show, The James Arness Show, The Mickey Rooney Show and most likely the promising return of Bret Maverick, starring James Garner, which, unfortunately, could sink on Saturday up against ABC's The Love Boat.

HE'S ADOPTED A CAUSE

E. James Pitrone

Arty Elgart knew there had to be a better way. Unable to have a child, he and his wife, Louise, searched six years for a baby to adopt. He remembers condescending social workers telling him that he was too old or the wrong religion or that there were no white babies — call back in a year. He remembers one lawyer who said, "Meet me at the airport with $10,000 in cash. I'll have a baby."

Finally, in October 1979, a home for unwed mothers in Texas found them a son, whom they named Josh. (Ironically, six weeks later, Louise learned she was pregnant.)

Ever since, Elgart, 38, a successful Philadelphia auto supply dealer, has tried to help other couples desperately looking to adopt. Through his unique Golden Cradle, Inc., he acts as an altruistic intermediary. He does it completely for free — his only request is an 8 × 10 photo of each family he helps create.

It's all legal, and so far he's arranged roughly 50 adoptions. "Admittedly, I'm no professional," he says. "I'm just a professional human being. I care." When a pregnant girl contacts him, he finds her housing with one of the couples on his waiting list. (For reasons of confidentiality, that couple will not get her baby.) The couple that does gets a surprise phone call from Elgart that begins, "Hi, this is the stork. I have a present for you." That couple then pays the girl's medical expenses and any legal fees required.

Elgart hopes to phase out his service gradually; he'd like to spend more time at home with Louise, Josh and infant daughter Abby. But first he wants to raise $600,000 to build a combined adoption center and home for unwed mothers.

He stresses that his prospective parent list is closed, but urges any pregnant girl considering giving up her baby to call him collect at (215) 289-BABY.

THE JAPANESE 'SECRET'

What tricks can American business learn this Labor Day from supersuccessful Japanese management? "It's no secret formula," points out William Fulmer, associate management professor at the University of Alabama. "Most importantly, American businesses, like the steel and auto industries, have simply been reluctant to take long-term risks."

Yasuko Shimizu

Japanese for "labor."

Part of the reason, he notes, is that the compensation system for many top management posts features huge year-end bonuses based on annual profits. This leads to decisions, he says, "that bring short-term profits, sure, but are disastrous in the long run."

Moreover, adds Fulmer, we accept a certain level of defects in our products, figuring that the cost of eliminating them is too high. "Again, this is an example of narrow, short-term thinking," he says. "The image is important, and soon we get the reputation for making shoddy goods."

BIRTHDAYS

HOT ROD RENTERS

If the Unser brothers want to race their own cars around like maniacs, that's their business. But as rental car customers, they're the pits. Bobby Unser recently told the Wall Street Journal that for a while some years back, Hertz wouldn't rent him cars. Small wonder. He once took a rented Chevrolet station wagon and pushed a friend in a Datsun up a California highway — at 90 miles per hour! And just recently, brother Al rented a four-cylinder Ford and took a friend for a spin on the Michigan International Speedway. Legend also has it that, on a dare, one of the Unsers drove a rental car into a swimming pool. Both deny it, though. Says each, "It was my brother."

Eileen Rosenfeld

GRAZING IN THE GRASS

Sick and tired of having mowed the lawn all summer, aren't you? You should have called Louis Valente, of Oak Hill, N.Y. For $50 a summer, he'll rent you one of the 125 sheep he and his family raise, and the little lamb will eat your ivy and the rest of the backyard.

Honest. We're not trying to pull the wool over your eyes. More than 70 people have flocked to him since April, mostly those who have several acres or more that need cutting. "You can say we cater to the upper upper class," notes Valente, a former New York City policeman. "It's sort of a status symbol for them."

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Hood ornament is different. 2. Grille is smaller. 3. Boot is shorter. 4. Tray is smaller. 5. Sleeve is shorter. 6. Menu is missing.

● NOES HAVE IT! Four words are missing from this poem of obscure origin: "No ___, no ___; no ___, no ___." The words are money, work, honey, bees—but not in that order. How long will it take you to insert them correctly? Time limit: One minute.

No bees, no honey, no work, no money

● Flower Bin! How many of these flowers can you name? 1. The flower that has a black eye. 2. The shrinking flower. 3. The flower that's a parent. 4. The flower that's seldom asked to dance.

1 Black eyed Susan 2 Violet 3 Poppy 4 Wallflower

● Sum Fun! An antique collector bought an item that cost $30 more than one-quarter of its price. How much was it?

It was forty dollars

● Riddle-Me-This! Why did Sir Lancelot refuse to wear pajamas? He was a nightie knight. What do you call an 80-year old physician? A doctor-genarian. Which fish is part donkey? The burro-cuda.

MATH-MAGIC FIGURING

It seems very strange, but if you select any number at random from 10 through 999 and do the following, the answer is always 9 or 18:

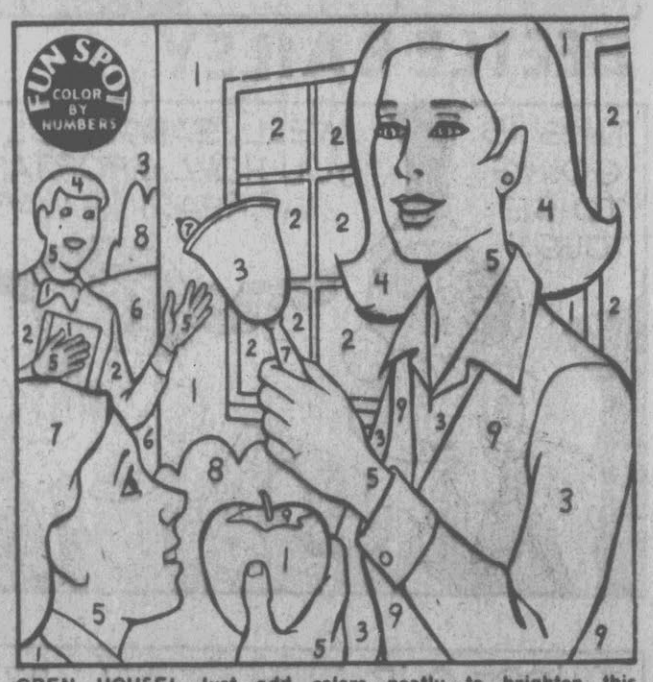
Add the digits in the number and subtract the result from the number itself.

Then, add the digits in the new number.

For example: Let's say the number 721 is chosen. Add the digits and the answer is 10. Subtract 10 from 721 and the answer is 711. Add these digits and the answer is 9.

Now, you try one.

RIDE 'EM! What can you draw to complete the dot picture above? To find out, insert lines 1 to 2 to 3, etc.



OPEN HOUSE! Just add colors neatly to brighten this timely scene: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Lt. green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Dk. green. 9—Maroon.

SPELLBINDER

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT AND HIS FAMILY STAY THE NIGHT WITH THE JEALOUS BROTHERS, GUNTHER AND GRENDL. "THEY DIVIDED THEIR FATHER'S PROPERTY BETWEEN THEM," AN OLD SERVANT CONFIDES. "THEY ARE RICH AS CROESUS BUT THEY ROB EACH OTHER BLIND."

EVEN AS THEY TALK VAL SPIES ONE OF THE BROTHERS BY THE CATTLE PEN. THE MAN SHOVES SOMETHING DOWN A CALF'S THROAT, THEN FLEES.

"MY PRIZE SAPPHIRE IS GONE!" GRENDL EXCLAIMS AT BREAKFAST. "YOU TOOK IT."
"SEARCH MY ROOMS," GUNTHER REPLIES ANGRILY. PRINCE VALIANT INTERRUPTS: "WE WILL NEED PROVISIONS FOR OUR JOURNEY. FOR THIRTEEN 'SOLIDI' I WILL BUY YOUR CALF."

"DONE," SAYS GRENDL GREEDILY, FOR THE BEAST IS NOT WORTH HALF THAT SUM. NERVOUSLY GUNTHER OBJECTS, BUT HIS BROTHER SILENCES HIM. "WE HAVE VAST HERDS. WHAT IS ONE CALF?" TRIUMPHANTLY VAL LEADS THE ANIMAL ABOARD HIS SHIP.

NOW PRINCE VALIANT COUNTS OUT THE MONEY. "SIX 'SOLIDI' FOR GRENDL," HE SAYS, "AND SIX FOR GUNTHER. I OWE YOU EACH A HALF 'SOLIDUS' BUT I CANNOT MAKE CHANGE." SLYLY HE PLACES A COIN ON THE WHITE LINE THAT DIVIDES THE BROTHERS' PROPERTY. "SETTLE IT YOURSELVES." THE ARGUMENT RAGES AS VAL CASTS OFF.
