

President In N.Y., Uninvited To Parade

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan, visiting New York to deliver a $85 million check for a highway project, was not invited to participate in today's Labor Day parade.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, who has severely attacked the economic, social, and labor policies of the Reagan administration, was to act as grand marshal of the first Labor Day parade in the city in 13 years.

President Reagan was to be in town to present the check to Mayor Edward Koch for the start of the multi-billion dollar Westway highway project.

An estimated 200,000 people are expected to march up Fifth Avenue from 26th to 52nd Street in the Labor Day parade "celebrating a century of labor progress." About 2,500 striking air traffic controllers are planning to be among the marchers.

Mayor Koch is supposed to walk with the Uniformed Fire Officers' contingent and Terence Cardinal Cooke is planning to watch the festivities from the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral between 50th and 51st Street. The reviewing stand will be at the central public library at 42nd Street.

Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization President Robert Poli was to meet with members of the controllers union before the parade.

Kirkland attacked the way Reagan has dealt with the PATCO strike on a television program Sunday.

"Where's the heart? And where's the understanding of these people's problems that will make it possible to have a decent resolution" of the strike, Kirkland said on the CBS program

"Face the Nation."

But Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan defended the handling of the strike, saying, "The most important message that could be given on Labor Day...is that this is a nation of law and that we cannot pick and choose those laws that we will keep and those that we will break."

Donovan was referring to the fact that the administration dismissed the striking controllers because it is against the law for the controllers to strike.

In a Labor Day message Sunday, Reagan said the goal of his administration is "jobs, jobs, jobs, and more jobs."

But labor leaders were not convinced.

In his Labor Day message, Douglas A. Fraser, the president of the United Automobile Workers, said, "There is little for workers to celebrate on this Labor Day. This is indeed the worst year for labor in over five decades."

But Reagan was expected to make a few points with labor today. The Westway project has been pushed by some labor unions who anticipate more jobs if the long-delayed project is begun.

But in his support of Westway, too, the president has opponents: a group of Westway opponents plan to demonstrate outside Gracie Mansion to protest Reagan's presentation of the symbolic Westway check. The opponents are against Westway because Interstate Highway funds used in the project could possibly be traded in for money for mass transit.

Planning Role By Solidarity Sought

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Solidarity's secretary says the independent labor movement must take the lead in planning to solve Poland's economic crisis.

But he said the independent labor federation must continue negotiations with the communist government to avoid a "tragic confrontation."

Polish workers "have to take into our own hands the decisions of reconstructing the economy, to present active constructive solutions," Andrzej Celinski said in a policy statement Sunday to the union's first national congress.

He pledged that union leaders would seek continued communications with the government "as the only way of avoiding a tragic confrontation with the authorities which would destroy our great historical chance."

The government, which has balked at Solidarity's demands for a greater voice in management and access to the state media, accused the union in a report Sunday of failing to maintain social peace and thus breaking its part of the agreement that brought it into existence a year ago.

The government said it fulfilled its part of last summer's Gdansk agreement by raising wages and shortening the work week. The year-old accord settled a nationwide wave of strikes and paved the way for legalization of Solidarity, the first Soviet bloc union independent of Communist Party control.

Celinski rejected government accusations that strikes called by Solidarity were largely responsible for Poland's deepening economic crisis.

"In the most critical moments, we showed patience and accepted compromises," Celinski said. "We did this despite the fact that during all the peaceful moments, the peaceful time was used (by the government) to attack Solidarity."

He accused the government-controlled media of "slandering" the union and "deepening or creating social tensions, causing real danger for the country."

Celinski said the union would continue to press its demand for its own regular TV and radio time and regular columns in the leading newspapers.

"We want access to the media to speak with our own voice on our problems," Celinski said. "We will not give up this demand."

Hurricane Said On Course To Blow Bermuda

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Floyd charted a course toward Bermuda today with winds of 95 mph, while Hurricane Emily drifted erratically off Newfoundland and a new tropical depression was building in the southern Caribbean.

Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said Floyd, was expected to strengthen rapidly and could pose a threat to Bermuda in the next day or so if it follows its projected path.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Floyd was located at latitude 28.0 north, longitude 69.0 west, or about 375 miles southwest of Bermuda. Gales extended outward from the center 100 miles to the east and 50 miles to the west.

Floyd, which formed late Thursday north of the Virgin Islands and became the sixth storm of the season Friday, was moving northward at 10 mph, and was expected to gradually turn toward the northeast later today.

"Conditions favor rapid strengthening," Floyd said.

Begin Will Push AWACs Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin arrived here armed with maps and documents to back up his case against the proposed AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia when he talks with President Reagan this week.

"This problem endangers very seriously the security of Israel," Begin said of the Reagan administration's plan to sell Airborne Warning and Control System surveillance planes and other sophisticated military equipment to Saudi Arabia.

But Begin said he looked for "a new era of relationship between our two nations," noting that "we have a newly elected administration in Washington and a newly-elected government in Israel."

The prime minister, who arrived at Kennedy International Airport Sunday to begin his 12th visit to the United States since he became prime minister in 1977, brought a much larger entourage than on previous visits.

It included his daughter, Chassia Milo, and three top members of the new government's cabinet — Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Defense Minister Ariel Sharon and Interior Minister Yosef Burg.

Burg heads the Israeli negotiating team for new talks on Palestinian self-government in Israeli-occupied areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. The talks are to get under way on Sept. 23 in Cairo.

"My colleagues and I have come to the hospitable shores of the United States to discuss international problems and bilateral issues," Begin said as he was greeted at the airport by Mayor Edward Koch and a group of Jewish leaders and Israeli diplomats.

Security was tight, and a police bomb-sniffing dog poked its nose around the cluster of dignitaries.

The 68-year-old Begin, who was treated recently for water on the knee, made the 100-yard trip from the plane to the speaker's stand in a limousine. He was driven to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where his party is occupying four floors of the Waldorf Towers.

Part of Begin's schedule in New York will be filled up with private meetings. On Tuesday he will go to Washington to meet with the president and other government officials on Wednesday and Thursday.

The New York Times reported Sunday that Begin and Reagan will discuss ways their countries can strengthen strategic ties. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig said in an interview that the two countries may make arrangements to share information from spy satellites. The Times said the nations may also agree to use Israeli territory as a base for U.S. operations in a military emergency.

He is scheduled to return to New York Friday for a round of receptions, banquets and other meetings.

Begin plans to go to Plains, Ga., on Sept. 15 to talk to former President Jimmy Carter before flying home.

Winter To Be Real Test Of Aerial Safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — During his presidential campaign, Ronald Reagan charged that too few controllers "working unreasonable hours with obsolete equipment has placed the nation's air travelers in unwarranted danger."

Today, five weeks into the air traffic controllers' strike, there are about half as many controllers.

They are working longer hours. And their equipment isn't getting any less obsolete. Federal aviation officials have been back-pedaling furiously from Reagan's campaign rhetoric, but still the question: Is it safe to fly?

There is no conclusive answer, but at least this much is true:

Since the strike began Aug. 3, there has been no commercial air accident; the relationship between working controllers and pilots, once verging on animosity, is unusually cordial; and all sides agree the government's decision to cut flights by one-fourth has provided a new margin of safety.

The Reagan administration insists the airways are safer because fewer planes are flying farther apart under a new computerized "flow control" system. The government reports a sharp drop in near-misses since the strike began.

The striking Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization concedes that fewer flights reduce the risk of an accident, but the union says that the added safety buffer is wiped out by undermanning the traffic control system.

Moreover, some experts on advanced technology contend the government might be underestimating the impact of firing half the controller workforce. They say the true test is not far off: winter weather creates significantly more problems for air traffic than summer.

"If you have a series of unpredictable events, a computer malfunction, bad weather, and an unexpected increase in general aviation, you could have problems," said Harley Shaiken, an expert on the use of computers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"And on top of that you have the intangible factors of fatigue and overconfidence" as controllers become accustomed to the system that on the surface appears to be working, he added.

With nearly 12,000 PATCO members fired after launching an illegal strike, the union charges that the government is minimizing the problem of fatigue and inexperience among the working controllers. And the union says the administration is understating the number of recent safety violations.

"How far are they going to go with a system that is unsafe, how far are they going to go in their continued efforts to try to convince the people that it is safe?" PATCO president Robert E. Poli complained recently.

The strike has posed a number of safety questions: —Can the diminished force of supervisors and non-striking controllers, currently working six-day weeks, remain alert over the many months, perhaps even several years, it will take to rebuild the system?

—Are all the working controllers qualified to deal with such emergency situations as serious computer failures or unexpected bad weather? Neither hazard has posed a serious problem to date.

—Will the government be able to withstand increasing pressure from commercial and private aviation to allow additional planes into the skies?

—Does the increased use of "see-and-avoid" techniques by

Up To Sadat?

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's peace treaty with Egypt rests "on one man alone," Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, and could collapse if he is overthrown, Israel's military chief of staff was quoted today as saying.

"We shouldn't have any illusions," the daily Maariv quoted Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan as saying in a lecture to high school students Sunday.

"Indeed there is peace with Egypt, but it is dangerous. There are disturbances in Egypt. Sadat could go, and the whole thing would be finished."

"In Egypt, it depends on one man alone," Eytan was quoted as saying.

Israel has been closely watching Sadat's crackdown on opponents of his regime in case it affects the peace treaty. Sadat's moves, including the arrest of more than 1,500 people, have been praised here as a sign of the Egyptian leader's determination to maintain the peace process.

Cairo informed Jerusalem that the "national unity" crackdown in Egypt, aimed at halting religious between Moslem fundamentalists and Coptic Christians, would not delay the talks on normalized relations scheduled for later this month, the Jerusalem Post reported.

A 50-member Egyptian delegation was to arrive here next Sunday to discuss land and air links and telecommunications between the two countries, it said.

The Post said Israeli officials were especially pleased to receive assurances that the talks would be unaffected by Sadat's internal problems.

Eytan also called for increasing Israel's settlements in territory occupied in the 1967 Mideast war. "We have to settle in all of Eretz Israel (the biblical land of Israel), and after the (1967) Six Day war, all of Eretz Israel is ours," he was quoted as saying.

Israel has been sharply criticized by the United States, Egypt and many other countries for its practice of settling Jews on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip, territories captured in 1967.

We live in a residential area of Greenville where the squirrel population seems to be increasing rapidly. What dangers do they present. What can be done to reduce or eliminate dangers. B.G.

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon said the police animal control department does have cages that are used to catch squirrels when overpopulation becomes a problem. "We try to catch them and transfer them someplace else," Cannon said. He urged parents to discourage children from playing with squirrels because if bitten the children could contract rabies. He pointed out that there is an ordinance prohibiting the killing of squirrels and birds within the city limits so no action other than moving the animals may be taken.

Money Is The Question For Tar Pit Excavation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The fossil-rich La Brea tar pits, a paleontologist's heaven in the middle of Los Angeles County, are bubbling into a sticky controversy over financial and scientific priorities.

Excavations at Pit 91 — amid office buildings and stores on Wilshire Boulevard — have yielded hundreds of relics from North America's Ice Age. But digging has been halted since January, when the county's Natural History Museum Foundation decided it couldn't afford the $72,000 annual price tag.

But former museum staffers and volunteers who had worked the site since 1969, when digging resumed after a 40-year hiatus, insist the pits are too valuable to lie dormant. They accuse museum administrators of frustrating their efforts for outside fundraising.

The tar pits have yielded remains of such creatures as giant woolly mammoths, camels, bison and saber-toothed tigers more than 30,000 years old. The prehistoric animals became trapped in the pits and were preserved.

The only thing both factions appear to agree on is that time for resolving the dispute is running out: the pit must either be reopened or protected from erosion by shoring its walls with concrete and covering it with asphalt and sand.

David Fortsch, who once directed the digs and is now an Idaho State University paleontology professor, says the shutdown will do irreparable harm.

"Once you lose this continuity, you're regressing," he said. "Physically you've lost the state of the art, the sense of continuity people (working the site) have, and with them goes knowledge."

Natural History Museum officials and some at the George C. Page Museum next to the pit, where the finds are displayed, counter that more fossils than can be thoroughly studied already have been unearthed.

There are more worthy projects than resuming the digs, they argue, such as readying three exhibition halls for the crowds expected for the 1984 Olympic games.

"The project has been operating for so many years, and there are millions of unprocessed fossils in the collection at the moment," said William B. Lee, director of the Natural History Museum.

Museum officials say they need at least $500,000 to make renewed excavations "cost effective."

Atlantic Richfield Corp. offered some support in February, said spokesman Al Greenstein, but "there seemed to be a general feeling that the dig was no longer productive. ... We decided that since there was no urging by the museum for support, we saw no reason for us to intervene." That's not what the museum told volunteer fundraisers, said Paul Shallenberger, a Los Angeles advertising executive who had spent years of weekends excavating for free.

"All of us had been led to believe this was such a big concerted effort of the foundation (to raise funds)," he added.

The only possible end to the stalemate may lie in a new slate of antagonists, said George Jefferson, a Page Museum assistant curator who wants excavation resumed.

New members will be appointed this month to the history museum foundation and the boards of trustees and governors.

Jefferson called that "one of the lights at the end of the tunnel."

Surgery Costs Vary Widely

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The cost of major operations varies widely in North Carolina hospitals, but the charges are generally less than those charged in New York City, a survey by the Health Insurance Institute reveals.

For surgery to repair heart arteries, a Winston-Salem patient paid an average of $4,119 while the patient in Raleigh paid an average of $2,496 for the same operation, the survey showed.

In other categories, the gap between fees charged in different North Carolina cities is smaller. For example the average charge for vasectomy varies by only $11 — ranging from $166 in Fayetteville to $177 in central North Carolina.

But, while the survey shows that a New York patient paid an average of $1,216 for a gallbladder operation, that was more than double the average of $607 paid in Charlotte during the year ending Aug. 31, 1980.

And a New York patient would have paid an average $1,287 for a hysterectomy while a Fayetteville patient would have paid $609.

Physicians say they used to discuss fees at meetings of specialty societies, a practice which meant more consistency.

But the Federal Trade Commission intervened on antitrust grounds, saying that if doctors discussed fees that amounted to collusion.

Although surgeons across the nation set their fees in much the same way, Charlotte surgeon Dr. Henry Nicholson said, "It's very difficult to estimate the going rate for anything." Doctors agree there are still some common elements to setting fees.

For one thing, all operations are assigned a number according to the time and technical skill required. For instance, tonsillectomy and vasectomy are both rated a 15 while an appendectomy is a 40 and a mastectomy is a 90.

In addition, there is a base rate of how much the surgeon charges for the operation requiring the least time and skill. If the base rate, or multiplier, is $10, then an appendectomy is $400.

These relative value scales used to be prepared by medical societies but after the FTC ruling, the scales were withdrawn.

What remains are similar scales developed by insurance companies. Dr. John Foust of Charlotte, first vice president of the N.C. Medical Society, said that in North Carolina, there is the Blue Shield Index. He said the scale was developed with the help of the Blue Shield Committee of the N.C. Medical Society.

"We frequently have no idea of what something is worth in value," Foust said. "The relative value scale is very helpful to physicians." But he said he feels free to depart from the scale.

'Neutrality' View Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is urging colleagues to remain neutral on the Reagan administration's plan to sell AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia until "all the facts are known."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., issued a statement Sunday saying the administration "should be given the opportunity to explain all the elements of the proposed sale. At this point, senators have not yet seen the full details and terms of the proposal."

"I believe it is premature for senators to commit themselves before all the facts are known," Percy said.

The sale of military hardware, including the AWACS, is expected to be among the controversial issues facing Congress when it returns Wednesday from its August recess. It would take majority votes in both the House and Senate to block the deal with Saudi Arabia.

Last June, a majority of both houses indicated opposition to the proposed $8.5 billion arms sales, the largest in U.S. history. Foes say the weapons would pose a serious offensive threat to Israel and could jeopardize U.S. technological secrets if an AWACS plane fell into unfriendly hands.

'Surrogate' Misses Boy

PEKIN, Ill. (AP) — "Elizabeth Kane," who last November bore a child for another couple, says she'd gladly do it again.

But the surrogate mother says she misses the boy she gave away last year to a childless couple who paid her $10,000.

"He is their baby and I have never felt otherwise," said Mrs. Kane, not her real name. She is keeping her real name a secret.

"His mother was nice enough to send me a picture last month. I felt a little sad I couldn't hold him just once ... But if I had the opportunity, I would have to turn it down because I couldn't trust myself."

Mrs. Kane, 39, a housewife with three children of her own, gave birth after being impregnated with the Kentucky man's sperm.

"If I were younger, I wouldn't hesitate to have another surrogate baby," she says. "But the publicity has been really difficult for my family and myself ... If I did it again, I wouldn't charge the parents a nickel."

No One Showed For Benefit Dance

ADDISON, Ill. (AP) — A dance marathon to raise funds for muscular dystrophy research only succeeded in lowering Robert Calusinski's opinion of his neighbors.

When no one showed up for the dance, Calusinski was left holding the bag, as well as a bunch of donated prizes.

"It kind of hurt me," Calusinski said Saturday, the day after the dance flopped. "What kind of a town do I live in? Almost 30,000 people and nobody wants to come."

His idea for the benefit stemmed from a childhood accident that forced him to spend years in casts and a body brace. The experience, he said, gave him the urge to help the handicapped.

"I raised $50 for muscular dystrophy in my neighborhood last year," Calusinski said. "And this year I wanted to do something bigger and better."

He obtained a permit from town officials last month to use the village gymnasium for a dance marathon. A local muscular dystrophy group supplied posters, T-shirts and sent letters to businesses.

About a dozen businesses donated prizes for the event, including free meals, dance lessons and car tuneups.

Calusinski, who works for a local janitorial service, invited a 24-year-old muscular dystrophy victim from a local home for the handicapped to be the guest of honor.

"He was real excited I had picked him to come," Calusinski said. On the night of the dance, Calusinski brought his own stereo system to the gym, along with records by Chubby Checker, Glenn Miller, the Beatles and others.

Calusinski, his wife and the handicapped man waited for the dancers to start showing up. They waited for 5½ hours before giving up.

"My mom and a neighbor across the street came by to see how things were going,"

Calusinski recalled. "That was all."

He brought the leftover beverages to the Addison police station where sympathetic officers chipped in $50 for the charity. That was the only money he raised.

Ernest Klepmeier, program coordinator for the Muscular Dystrophy Association in suburban Lombard, said Calusinski's fund-raiser apparently was doomed by a lack of advance planning.

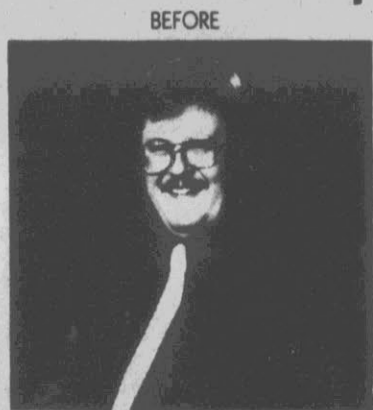

"It's just a shame that it ended that way," Klepmeier said. "Normally, when someone wants to do a fund-raising event, it takes two to three months of planning."

"A lot of things blew up in my face," Calusinski admitted. "I tried everything I could, but it was like running into a brick wall."

Despite the outcome, Calusinski said he will try again.

"But I'm going to do it differently next time," he said. "It'll be two or three months in advance, and I'll have two bands."

A program of wedding music was presented by Deborah Riggs of Pollocksville.

The bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by parents. The bride's gown of white chantilly over taffeta was designed with a sweetheart neckline bodice and lace sleeves extending to a ruffled edge cuff. The bouffant skirt was enhanced at the hemline with tiers of chantilly cascading in the back to a chapel length train. She wore a single length veil of bridal illusion attached to a cap of chantilly and seeded pearls. She wore an heirloom diamond heart shaped pendant, a gift of the bridegroom's maternal grandmother and she carried a colonial nosegay of red roses, baby's breath and white cushion poms tied with a white satin bow and streamers.

Gay Barwick of Greenville was maid of honor and wore a sleeveless formal gown of cranberry polyester designed with a shirred V-neckline bodice and flowing gathered skirt. It was accented by a matching cardigan jacket with extended shoulders. She carried a hand bouquet of burgundy, pink and white cushion poms accented with burgundy and white streamers.

Bridal attendants included Nancy Tripp, sister-in-law of the bride and Connie Brantley of Greenville. Their gowns were identical to that of the honor attendant as were their flowers which were tied with burgundy streamers.

Yvonne Barrow, cousin of the bride of Virginia Beach, Va. was junior bridesmaid. She wore a floor length dress of cranberry styled with a ruffled neckline and hemline. Pink satin ribbon accented the waistline. She carried a long-stemmed red rose with greenery, tied with a pink bow and streamers.

C., Jim Tripp, brother of the bride and Mike Stevenson of Greenville. Neill Barrow, cousin of the bride of Greenville was ring bearer and carried a white linen over satin lace pillow, which was made by the bridegroom's mother.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of apricot polyester featuring a cascade of ruffles at the neckline. Jordan. Cousins of the bride distributed rice bags. Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Travis Purser.

The refreshment table was covered with a pink cloth overlaid with white lace accented by mixed silk flowers and pink tapers.

An after-rehearsal buffet dinner was held Saturday for the wedding party given by the mother of the bridegroom and assisted by friends of the couple.

The bride attended Rose High School and Pitt Community College. She is employed by Great Southern Finance as manager in the New Bern office. The bridegroom attended Trident Academy and Trident Tech, Charleston, S. C. He is employed by T. A. Loving Co., New Bern.

Dear Abby

Formal Dress In Army Doesn't Include Earring

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am in the U.S. Air Force and have a good friend (I'll call him Duke), also in the same branch of the service. Duke decided to wear an earring in his left ear. Duke was in line for an honorable discharge shortly. Anyway, he got his ear pierced. About a week later he came to work in uniform wearing the earring (stud type) in his left ear. He was ordered by his supervisor to remove it as it was not in accordance with military dress code. He refused. Administrative action was taken, and after a long battle, Duke was sent up for court-martial and found guilty of disobeying a lawful order. Duke was reduced in grade, fined and sentenced to six months' hard labor. He will be returned to active duty when his time is up.

Abby, why would a man want to wear an earring? I think it looks feminine. What do you think of this whole business of Duke and the earring?

P. AT YOKATO AIR BASE, JAPAN

DEAR P.: I am informed that some men wear an earring as a signal to other men, but not all men agree on what the "signal" is. If a male civilian wants to wear an earring, it's all right with me. But when a man enters the military, he is expected to conform to the rules and dress code, and if he doesn't conform, he should expect to be penalized.

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter and her three children (ages 4, 3, and 1½) are living with us while she is going through a very trying divorce. After a difficult search for someone to help with the children a few days a week, we were fortunate to find "Lucy." (My daughter works full time.)

Lucy had been with us for three weeks when a neighbor, who is also a friend of mine and a fellow Women's Club member, visited my home in my absence one afternoon and asked Lucy if she had a "friend" who would be interested in doing housework for her one day a week.

Lucy took the job herself. But the day she works for this neighbor is the day I need her most. She continues to work for us, but don't you think this neighbor should have discussed the matter with me before approaching Lucy?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Quit wondering. The answer is yes.

The afghan is worked with double strands of yarn on extra large (size 17) knitting needles while the pillows are knitted with single strands and smaller needles. Giant "wishbone cables" stand out against a Trinity Stitch background on the afghan while three variations of cables are used for the pillows.

To obtain instructions for making Irish Afghan and Cable Pillows, send your request for Leaflet No. T-687 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, "The Daily Reflector," P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-687 by sending check or money order for $27 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains instructions and yarn sufficient for making one afghan and two pillows. The price includes shipping charges. Designer's choice of Fisherman White will be sent unless you specify one of these alternate color choices: medium blue, light gold, rust or beige.

Dear Pat: I thank you for the many tips I have picked up from your column and in return would like to pass along my idea for keeping track of rows on intricate pattern stitches. Instead of separate index cards, which you have suggested, I write directions for each row on a separate page of a small spiral-bound notebook. As I complete each row, I simply flip the page to keep the proper sequence. Since the notebook lies flat, it can be put away while open to the following row, ready for the next work session. Best wishes. — Theresa S., Bristol, Conn.

Thanks, Theresa — I am sure that many readers will appreciate your suggestion.

While on the subject of pattern stitchery, I hope that many of you will broaden your knitting horizons with wider use of pattern stitches. When you learn to insert panels or borders of pattern on a basic design or to substitute an all-over pattern stitch for stockinette, you are on your way to creating an original every time you pick up needles and yarn.

There are dozens of varieties of cable stitches, for instance, and often you can substitute one cable for another without having to alter the number of stitches used.

With some pattern stitches, your gauge may be quite different from a stockinette version so that you may have to do some refiguring, find a different basic pattern or change to another yarn and needle size.

For example, you may have a basic pattern that has a five-stitch-per-inch gauge using knitting worsted weight yarn and you would like to substitute a lacy pattern stitch for the basic stockinette. You find, however, that you are getting four stitches per inch with the lace stitch pattern.

You have a couple of choices. You can either find a different pattern calling for four stitches per inch or you can substitute a finer yarn and smaller needles that might give you the right gauge for the pattern you already have.

The primary point to remember is the unbreakable rule: You must match your knitted gauge — or tension — to that of the pattern you are using. You can use different yarns, different needles, different pattern stitches if the gauge is right.

Crimes Not Forgotten

Time is removing the remaining members of Adolph Hitler's inner circle from the earth.

Last week Albert Speer died at the age of 76. He was Hitler's production minister and was responsible for Germany's turning out the war goods which made its armies so awesome in the early years of World War II.

Speer was with the Nazis from the early years of the 1930s and he rose to a powerful position, although he claimed that he turned away from Hitler and softened Hitler's cruel policies toward the end of World War II.

Speer acknowledged his guilt when the war crimes trials got underway after the end of the war and served ten years in Spandau Prison.

He gained later fame and fortune with books about the Nazi years in Germany.

Speer is now dead at age 76. His books gave us great insight into the regime of Adolph Hitler and to some extent rehabilitated his standing.

It can never be written off, however, that he was a prime participant in a movement which brought great suffering and horrors to the entire world. It is in the Christian spirit to forgive but the heinous crimes of the Nazis can never be forgotten.

Political Fights Are Ahead

North Carolina Republicans have made major gains in national elections recently. The party currently holds both U. S. senatorial seats.

On the state level, however, the GOP is still far behind. It has not controlled either House of the Legislature in this century.

In the changing political climate the Republicans are making plans to correct that. They have targeted five N. C. Senate seats which they hope to gain in the next election.

The competition will be healthy, and the Democrats should recognize, if they haven't already, that nothing can be taken for granted in this era. The Democratic Party can have a good future in North Carolina, but its leaders will have to recognize they must work and fight for everything they get.

THIS AFTERNOON

Last-Place Start

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — When you start dead last in the pack, and somewhat further back than the next nearest runners, you have to work hard just to keep from getting left further and further behind.

That's North Carolina's position. And that of the other Southern states.

For years, this state has raced Mississippi for the dubious distinction of being the lowest paying place for manufacturing wages.

Now comes U.S. Commerce Department figures which show that another key measurement of relative prosperity — per capita income — also continues to lag badly.

Ten years ago, this state ranked 38th in the nation in per capita income. In 1980, billions of dollars of investment, accelerated chamber of commerce and industry-hunting by state officials, and dozens of gubernatorial announcements on major economic growth coups, this state ranked 39th in per capita income nationally — down one notch.

expansion are on the skirts. So are education funds. So far, it seems, state and local officials think the cuts can be accommodated without handicap. Hunt warns, though, that further reductions jeopardize the future.

Starting behind was one of the main themes Gov. Hunt approached in talking to legislators from Southern states at a recent gathering in Charlotte.

Further reductions in federal spending are a danger to North Carolina and other Southern states because, says Hunt "This is still the poorest region of the country. Twice as many of our people live below the poverty level. We have 32 percent of the nation's children, but 40 percent of all the nation's poor children.

"The high school dropout rate is 50 percent higher in the South. And per capita income in the South is only 91 percent of the national average.

Poorest

When it comes to running in place — or even backing up — the South has the most to lose "because we're the poorest region," Hunt said.

Despite past problems, though, the South is now the nation's fastest-growing region. "We're beginning to catch up ... partly an accident of climate and location ... but only partly. It is also the result of our people — hardworking, honest, productive people," the governor noted.

Investments made in "the muscles and bones that support economic growth" undegird the progress, but the future will not be bright if the resources and flexibility to continue are halted.

"The South and the people who live here will suffer, because we are the farthest behind and we have the farthest to go," the governor said.

When you're already at the bottom and barely maintaining the position, any dropping back seems much further than it would look from up front.

Rufus Edmisten comes on strong against crime and illegal drugs.

—Stop mollycoddling criminals and pay back crime victims for what they lost.

—Blockade America's ports against drug traffickers and even sail out to meet vessels on the high seas to search for dope.

The state's attorney general wants to be governor in 1984 and he correctly has determined the public is fed up with crime and the damage it does to innocent victims. He also knows many Tar Heels don't cotton to drug smuggling and dope pushers.

During a day he spent in Catawba County recently, Edmisten hit long and hard on the problems of crime and use of illicit drugs. But he was short on answers.

Oh, he had some. Court officials ought to inform those ready to testify against a defendant when and where to go to appear. Well, they do this already. Maybe they could do a better job, but Edmisten didn't specify how.

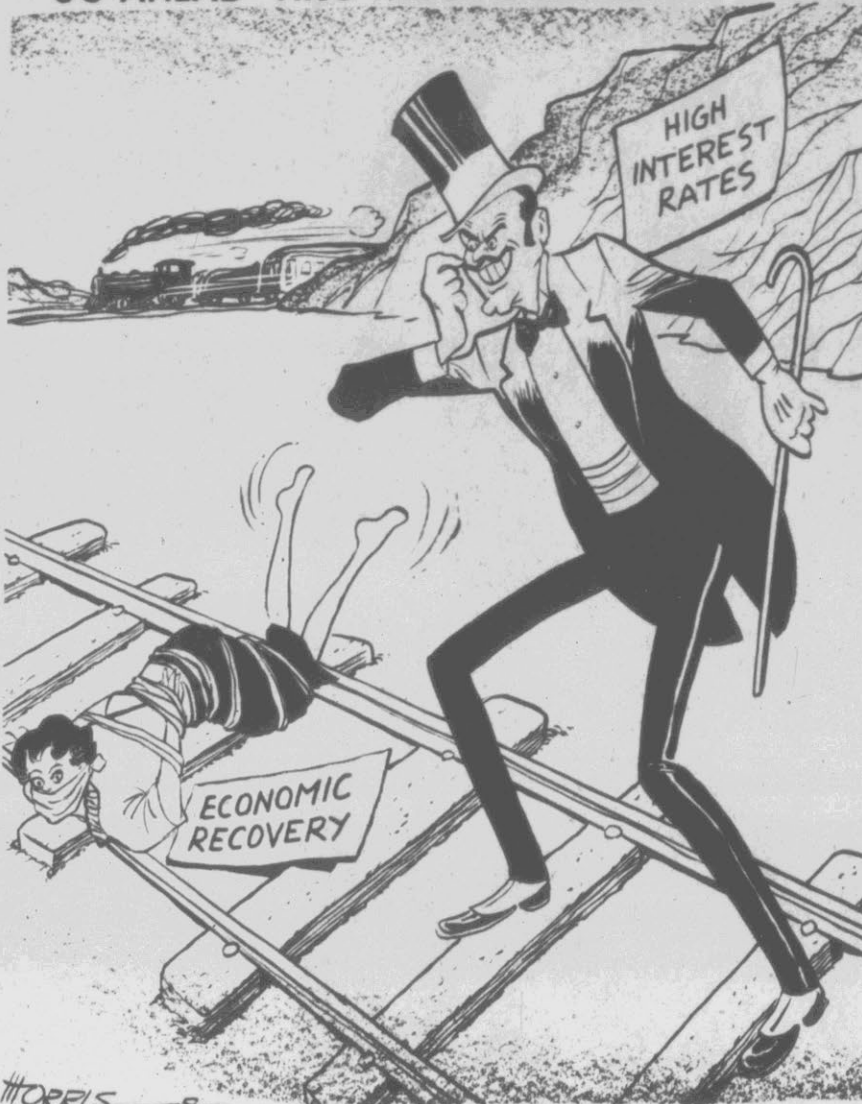

The state ought to pay hospital costs, work hours lost and otherwise compensate victims of crime, he said. What he didn't say is where the money could be found. Many judges already order those convicted to make restitution to the victims. But many found guilty have no funds and no way to obtain large amounts of money. If the state assumed responsibility for compensating crime victims, the money would have to come from somewhere. Taxes?

Then there was this talk of meeting boats off the North Carolina coast and searching their cargo for dope. And there was the port blockade idea. The former would be an enormous undertaking and the latter seems impossible. Maybe Edmisten knows how to accomplish both, but he didn't elaborate.

Edmisten might make a good governor. There are many who feel he would. He might well be the frontrunner for the Democratic nomination right now.

The attorney general would serve his cause well if he would think and talk about how he proposes to accomplish what he espouses.

The Decision Process

I know most people are having difficulty deciding whether we should give AWACs to the Saudis or not. It's one of those military decisions no one likes to make.

Air Force sergeant said. "I've never known a weapon the U.S. made that wasn't for sale. If we don't get our AWACs, we're upping the price of our oil two dollars a barrel, and taking all our deposits out of the Chase Manhattan Christmas fund.

The Air Force sergeant passed on the conversation to the U.S. ambassador in Saudi Arabia during a crap game, who passed it on to Washington who bucked it up to the White House.

The National Security Council debated the issue. One member said, "If we sell the Saudis the AWACs we can recycle most of the money we're paying for Saudi Arabian crude."

"But if something happens to the Royal Family," another member of the NSC warned, "then the AWACs could fall into unfriendly hands and the Soviets would know all our secrets."

A third member said, "And let's not forget the Israelis.

ART BUCHWALD

"What are those?" a member of the Saudi Royal Family asked a U.S. Air Force sergeant in Riyadh.

The Air Force sergeant said proudly, "Those are U.S. AWACs, which happen to be the latest thing in aerial warfare. You can fight an entire war and watch an in-flight movie at the same time.

"We'll take five," the Saudi Arabian prince said, taking out his Gucci wallet.

"They're not for sale," the They'll feel threatened by the AWACs and we'll have to give them 12 Stealth Bombers that aren't off the drawing boards yet."

"I think the president is going to have to decide this one."

Someone put in a call to President Reagan.

"Mr. President, how do you feel about selling the Saudi Arabians AWACs?"

"Gosh, it sounds great to me."

"Don't you want to know the options, Mr. President?"

"Heck, I'll go along with whatever you people think is best. What's an AWAC?"

"It's an airborne radar system that could affect the balance of power in the Middle East."

"Will it send a message to the Russians?" the president asked.

"In 12 different languages."

"Then let's do it. We haven't sent them a message all week."

D. Stockman Versus Fear

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

JOLIET, Ill. — Encountering anguish among Midwestern Republican faithful beyond all expectations, David Stockman after three days of barnstorming was denouncing high interest rates as "oppressive," predicting higher revenues from lower tax rates and promising a gold standard somewhere over the economic rainbow.

"Sooner or later," said the director of Office of Management and Budget (OMB) at private fund-raisers, the nation must return to gold convertibility for the dollar. But before that, he emphasized, a new round of budget cuts is essential to cut federal borrowing and slice record-high interest rates. President Reagan's tax rate cuts will yield more, not less, revenue to lessen that borrowing, he added, reaffirming the Laffer Curve.

Facing the fear of the faithful, Stockman responded in his old role as Reagan's revolutionary. Although he styles himself a practical politician not chained by visionary dogma, he met faltering faith at the Reagan grass roots with pure supply-side credo.

Stockman's frenetic tour (26 performances in four days) confronted anti-Reagan social activists, peace demonstrators, striking air traffic controllers and ERA enthusiasts chanting and picketing at nearly every stop. If such a demonstration could be launched at Mankato, Minn., a month before his budget cuts begin to bite, Stockman pondered what will take place later in big cities.

But what jarred him more than pickets outside were fat cats inside. Second only to Ronald Reagan as a Republican drawing card, Stockman generated a gold rush for tickets (ranging from $35 to $500) for fundraising events on his tour. They paid to shake hands with the party's newest glamor figure — and to complain.

"I think he's got the right cure," a home builder who had just paid $500 for a Stockman reception in South Bend, Ind., told us. "But I wonder if it's going to kill us first." Everywhere, party loyalists, fear in their eyes, told Stockman that retailers, farmers and small manufacturers simply cannot stand high interest rates much longer.

Midway through the second day, Stockman inserted this disclaimer into his basic speech: "High interest rates won't solve any problem." By the end of the third day at a dinner in Joliet, he said, "The Reagan revolution is being jeopardized by these oppressive interest rates."

But the only way to reduce them is reduced federal borrowing, which he guaranteed with the new fiscal year starting Oct. 1. On his feet at a Springfield, Ill., luncheon, he coined a fiscal metaphor: "The Treasury has the sharpest elbows in the market." When its borrowing needs are reduced, he contended, money will be available for private credit and interest rates will go down.

To reduce those needs, the Defense Department "will not be a sacred cow." Applauding conservative Republicans were nearly as adamant about cutting military spending as they were terrified of high interest rates. That was the position of all the congressmen Stockman campaigned for on this tour — including freshman Rep. Cooper Evans of Iowa, a 19-year Army veteran who ran last year on a pro-defense program.

At the Midwestern governors conference in Milwaukee, Republican Gov. Albert Quie of Minnesota — himself at political death's door because of unmet fiscal goals — implored Stockman not to surpass the $42.5 billion projected deficit for the coming fiscal year and called it "absolutely necessary to cut defense spending," Stockman agreed.

Stockman spent nearly as much time defending the Reagan tax cuts as promising further budget cuts, but he did not mention gold except when asked. His private answer: The 1971 separation of gold and the dollar created

Strength For Today

UNDER THE RUG

A little girl asked her mother one day, "Is it true that we come from the dust and that when we die, we go back to dust again?" "Yes," answered the mother, "but why do you ask?" "Because," said the youngster, "I lifted the corner of our living room rug yesterday and I think that someone here is either coming or going."

The little girl's discovery represents symbolically the variety of people who are trying to sidestep problems. Bring up an issue and they race for cover. Or, more often, they try to persuade themselves and others that the issue does not exist. This, in effect, is sweeping the dust under the rug.

Another example of this easy way out is exhibited by office seekers and those who want to stay in office by evading the compelling moral issues inherent in the nation's political and economic problems.

But there's always a solution. Throw back the rug, entirely and clean out the dust and dirt that lies underneath. — Elisha Douglass

A High-Stakes Numbers Game

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With the General Assembly planning another session next month, legislative leaders are now engaged in a high-stakes numbers game.

And the eventual outcome will have much to do with what kind of pay raise teachers and state employees get from the session and with other projects on legislators' lists.

The lawmakers are planning to return to session Oct. 5, for what they hope will be a short, perhaps week-long meeting devoted solely to patching up the state's budget.

The new budget year began in July, but faced with uncertainty about federal budget cuts and economic conditions, lawmakers postponed decisions on some $140 million in spending proposals.

But before they can make those decisions, legislative leaders must make their predictions on how they think the state's economy will fare through the rest of this fiscal year. Only then will they know how much they can spend during their week in October.

"It all depends on whose figures we use," said Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, chairman of the House Base Budget Committee. "I'm not looking forward to it."

On its surface, the budget issue seems simple. Legislators are by law and constitution required to pass a budget that is balanced. They cannot engage in deficit spending.

But the budget isn't based on how much cash is on hand. It's based on how much money it is estimated that the state will receive during the year through tax collections, university tuitions, investments and other sources.

And who makes the estimate? Ultimately, legislators do. But they get advice from their own Fiscal Research Staff and from the Hunt administration. And the various sides are presently at odds over what the estimate should be.

The estimate is calculated as a growth figure. When Gov. Jim Hunt proposed his 1981-1982 budget back in January, he told legislators they ought to assume that North Carolina's income will grow 12 percent over the previous year. Legislative leaders balked, however, and scaled it down to 10 percent growth.

Now with their unusual budget session, legislators have to decide whether to stick with that figure. If they do, Adams says, they will have $84 million to spend — on pay raises, delayed education projects, cut federal programs and legislators' own special projects back home.

But if they go with Hunt's figure, they will have $140 million.

Hunt, in a budget briefing last week, made it clear he is sticking by his 12 percent figure.

"We have a responsibility," he said pointedly, "not to intentionally underestimate."

And, he noted out, there won't be enough money to give teachers and state workers the 4 percent to 5 percent pay raise he has proposed if lawmakers stick by their smaller projection.

"Obviously, you'd have to make a lot of cuts (elsewhere) in the budget if you did that," he said. "Legislators will have to decide that."

The full pay raise would cost some $106 million. al though the figure can be scaled down by delaying it a few more months.

Adams, House Speaker; Liston Ramsey, Senate Majority Leader; Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, and other top legislative powers spent much of last week going over those choices with Hunt and his budget experts.

No one would say what they planned to do, but suggestions quickly circulated that a middle ground between 12 percent and 10 percent could be found — perhaps at the 10.7 percent level, which is the level of growth that state collections ran last month.

That would require both sides to give a little in order to ease their budget woes. But Hunt sought to dispel suggestions that the final number would be based on anything but valid economic data.

"It shouldn't be a compromise," he said. But he also added, "It's not an either-or thing."

When legislators figure that one out, they can appropriate the state's money, declare their budget balanced and, perhaps, fully adjourn their 1981 session.

Suggests Civil War A Clash Of 2 Heritages

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — The South may have lost the Civil War because its soldiers displayed ancient tendencies of their ancestors — the wild Celts of Ireland, Scotland and Wales, two professors say.

University of Alabama history professors Grady

McWhiney and Dr. Forrest McDonald recently published papers suggesting the Civil War was a renewing of the age-old battles between the English and the Celts.

McWhiney says important parallels can be drawn between the people of America in 1860 and their earlier ancestors. The North was settled mostly by Anglo-Saxons and the South by people of Celtic origins, he said.

"The South was almost an Arcadia for these people — vast rich lands for grazing, savannahs and canebrakes, which were good for cattle," he explained.

"It was the preferred lifestyle for most Southerners in 1860. Livestock was worth more than all staples (mostly cotton) combined," McWhiney said.

That was how their ancestors in the highlands of Scotland, Ireland and Wales lived, he said.

In "The American Historical Review," McWhiney and McDonald wrote that the Southern society on the eve of the Civil War represented the culmination of many centuries of Celtic traditions.

However, in the North, the Industrial Revolution spawned in England was carried over in the building of factories and plants.

The professors also contend that there was a bit of cultural snobbery, a carryover from Britain.

"The Northerners regarded the South like the English did the Celts. They didn't know if the Southerners could be civilized. Most Northerners still have some doubts if we Southerners can be civilized," McWhiney said.

"The basic difference we see is in the lifestyle or values. It was a work ethic in the North," he said. "The leisure ethic of Southerners typified their Celtic ancestors."

McWhiney claims that this cultural split was not only the major cause of the Civil War, but it explains why the war was fought the way it was.

He said the Confederates displayed traditional Celtic battle strategy, attacking in eight of the first 12 major battles of the war and suffering much greater casualties than the Union troops.

"The war was lost by the South because they attacked the Federal troops too often," McWhiney said. "It was part of their heritage — the Celtic charge, the furious, courageous frontal attack hundreds of years before Gettysburg."

"The Confederates bled themselves to death in the first two and one-half years of the war."

Still Hoping For Library Defeat

"a flood of U.S. dollars ... eroding fundamental confidence" in the economic system. "Sooner or later," he said, "if you're going to complete the cycle of re-establishing economic order, you're going to have to get to that stage at some point at which we re-establish convertibility and put a permanent anchor on the system," but that would be "the final stage at some point down the road" of re-establishing "sound fiscal policy."

Stockman worries that public talk of gold might be interpreted as desperate gimmickry by an administration that has failed to restore fiscal order. So, after four days of subsisting on coffee and barbecued potato chips, Stockman came home to spend Labor Day weekend at OMB cutting the budget.

He left those worried Midwestern Republicans feeling better but not wholly reassured. After Stockman promised in South Bend that the prime rate would drop to 8 or 9 percent by the mid-1980s, a manufacturer told us: "That's a 2 percent drop a year. By that time, I'll be ruined." In truth, Stockman believes the progress will be swifter. If not, he knows the chanting pickets outside and the frightened Republicans inside on his Midwestern tour are the foretaste of much worse to come.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some Duke University faculty members were still hoping for a reversal of Friday's decision to continue negotiations for a Richard M. Nixon presidential library on campus.

But others only hoped their input into the decision would head off what has been seen as an attempt to glorify the only president to resign from office.

Faculty members have reason to wonder, as their Academic Council vote Thursday to reject the library 35-34, was reversed by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees by a 9-2 vote.

"Serious and important mistakes have been made, said political science professor James D. Barber. "The committee overruled the faculty on the question of the intellectual life of the university. That's very much in contradiction to our usual traditions."

"These are people who have, for better or worse, committed their lives to being professors," he added. "And here we have professors being steam-rolled by nine members of the board of trustees."

Barber said he hoped the committee's decision would be reversed by the entire board.

Others, including economics professor Martin Bronfenbrenner, said comments expressed during the debate on the proposal might make the library better.

"We made it perfectly clear, as Nixon used to say, that we were trying to cut down on the amount of memorial in the project," Bronfenbrenner said, referring to faculty members who expressed fear that the library might tend to glorify Nixon.

As the negotiations stand, Duke will give the federal government land for the library if an agreement can be reached on its nature and content.

Second Mailing Is Sent Out

The North Carolina Department of Community Colleges has recently initiated a survey of all community and technical college graduates during the 1979-80 period.

The results of the first mailing, according to department officials, have been disappointing. Only 14.5 percent of the surveyed graduates returned their questionnaires.

Therefore, a second mailing has just been sent off, and all graduates are asked to fill out these questionnaires and return them to Raleigh.

Dr. Charles E. Russell, assistant to the president of Pitt Community College, reminds the 1979-80 graduates of PCC of the importance of this request from community college headquarters and urges all graduates to complete and return the survey immediately.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — HUGE BAUBLES, BANGLES AND BEADS DON'T CONSTITUTE CHIC.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Helms Suggests A Sharing Of Blame

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — In letters to two North Carolina newspapers, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has suggested both he and the media share the blame for recent remarks about tobacco rival Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y.

Helms' comments, made in response to editorials critical of references Helms made to Richmond's "curious lifestyle," were published in the Sunday edition of the Greensboro News & Record, and in Monday's editions of the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Richmond was arrested on a morals charge three months ago, which was dropped when the congressman agreed to undergo rehabilitation.

The editors of the Greensboro newspaper criticized Helms for "dragging out skeletons from rivals' closets" and resorting to "smear tactics." They noted that Richmond has charged that Helms' aggressiveness in the Senate may be harming tobacco interests.

"I confess that I was peeved with Congressman Richmond at the time," Helms wrote. "He had been strongly critical of me in a rather personal way — but that did not justify my responding in kind."

"In retrospect, I see now that I should have endured the congressman's criticism in silence. After all, criticism is no novelty to me," Helms continued.

But he charged that it was the media that took the comment and linked it to the morals charge. Helms con-

Sunbird Airline's Growth Slowed, But Continuing

By ELISSA McCRARY Associated Press Writer DENVER, N.C. (AP) — In spite of Sunbird Airlines' rapid growth since its inception two years ago, founder Ralph Quinlan says things could be better.

"I'm pleased with our progress but even so, I thought we would be further along by now," he said. "The economy and the controllers' strike has put us about six months behind. It has cost us about $1.5 million more than it should have to get this far."

Less than two years ago the fledgling airline had just a few twin-engine planes and jumbo-jet ambitions.

This year, Sunbird became the largest and fastest-growing commuter airline in the Southeast, serving 13 cities in five states. And its staff has grown to 110 employees, including 56 full-time pilots.

Quinlan said Sunbird has no plans to lay off any of its workers or do any cutting back on flights even with the scheduling difficulties encountered since the controllers went on strike. In fact, Sunbird will begin flying to Norfolk, Va., on Oct. 1.

The airline this year is adding 10 15-passenger Beechcraft turboprops to its fleet of 10 new twin-engine Cessnas and currently offers 95 daily flights to cities in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida.

Quinlan always has an eye on small cities in the Southeast where major airlines have pulled out. "If a major pulls out of a city, we're right there to get the business," he said.

Sunbird expansion plans for the next few years include adding more cities in the Southeast to its schedule. In the immediate future, Quinlan plans to add service to five more cities in Florida, three more in Tennessee, two in South Carolina and three in Virginia.

Before Quinlan took to the air, he made his splash by training dolphins for marine shows. He bought the Little Mountain Airport in Denver, N.C., in 1972 in order to provide a place to hangar his plane while he oversaw his interests in Quinlan Marine Attractions.

Quinlan improved the 3,200-foot runway at the scenic airport and in 1975, he founded Mountain Air Cargo, an air-freight service. That company now has 17 Beech aircraft flying more than 3.5 million miles a year from Florida to Illinois.

But Quinlan's biggest project was getting Sunbird Airlines off the ground. Quinlan has poured millions of dollars into the airline, which he expects to make a profit for the first time this month.

"Running an airline is an expensive business. It's a calculated risk," Quinlan said. "The new planes we're getting in cost $1.5 million apiece. We've spent $100,000 this year on advertising. Growth costs money."

And a lot of that money comes from smaller airports not serviced by major airlines.

"No jet can go into some of these small towns where they get five passengers on a flight. They'll lose too much money," Quinlan said. "But we can go in there and make money on five passengers. With 10 passengers, we're making money like crazy."

To introduce its expanded service between Charlotte and Raleigh in March, Sunbird cut its one-way fare from $48 to $39 — a figure Quinlan said is $1 less than the cost of driving the 145 mile distance.

"We're counting on our reputation as a professional, accident-free airline and our hard work and skills to keep Sunbird going strong," Quinlan said. "As I've said before, we don't want to be the biggest, we just want to be the best."

Chemical War Proof Claimed

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government has gathered proof that chemical poisons provided by the Soviet Union were used in military operations in Cambodia, Time magazine reported Sunday.

Military patrols from Thailand took samples of foliage, soil and water from Cambodia and sent them to the United States for analysis, the magazine reported. Scientists found that the samples contained the chemical agent trichothecene toxin, known as T-2.

Soviet scientists have published articles on how to produce vast quantities of T-2, which occurs naturally in grain molds common in the Soviet Union.

U.S. intelligence officials have long suspected that the Soviet Union was providing chemical weapons for use in Southeast Asia, in violation of an international agreement banning chemical warfare that was reached after the end of World War I.

In 1979, Army investigators said they believed two and possibly three chemicals were being used against Laotian tribesmen who were resisting communist Pathet Lao and Vietnamese forces. One of these was a nerve agent, another caused massive bleeding and the third was thought to be a riot-control gas.

In 1980, Defense Secretary Harold Brown said there was "mounting evidence" that the Soviets were using incapacitating gas in Afghanistan and that there were "some reports that they may be using lethal gas."

Eyewitnesses in Cambodia, Afghanistan and Laos have reported seeing chemical-laced "yellow rain" fall from the skies. Afterward, people on the ground suffered burning sensations, convulsions and massive internal bleeding. Many died painful deaths.

However, the United States never had evidence that proved the Soviet Union was the source of the poison.

Time, in this week's editions, said the State Department is reluctant to publicly accuse the Soviets of using chemical warfare, although some officials argue that doing so might prevent further use of the chemical agents.

Other officials want to await proof that the chemical has been used in Laos and Afghanistan. The magazine said more chemical samples are under analysis in U.S. labs.

military and private pilots, whose flights have been dropped from the air traffic control system, endanger commercial aircraft?

The government's plan to maintain air safety is keyed to reducing air traffic to whatever level the working controllers can handle.

"We absolutely will not allow airplanes to take off if there is a question of safety," declares Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis.

The Federal Aviation Administration cut flights at the 22 busiest airports by 50 percent and reduced the nation's commercial flights overall by about 25 percent. Those ceilings are expected to continue through April.

The FAA also instituted a computerized "flow control" system that keeps commercial aircraft on the ground until direct flights to their destinations are assured. That eliminates the need for aircraft to be diverted or circle near airports until permission to land is granted.

In defending the current air traffic system, FAA officials have disputed Reagan's campaign rhetoric.

Ray Van Vuren, FAA's director of air traffic operations, said Reagan was "not properly informed" when he said "too few people (were) working unreasonable hours" in the air traffic system. Reagan's statement was contained in an Oct. 20 letter to secure PATCO's endorsement.

Van Vuren said management studies and the strike itself have shown "you had a lot of people you really didn't need."

During an eight-hour day, he said, the average controller worked only about four hours in pressure positions directing aircraft. Since the strike, he said fill-in controllers are having no trouble working 6½ hours a day in those spots.

"The only problems that they've got... is the stress (of) the... picket line that's out there and the harassment that they get after work," he said in an interview.

Before the strike, 16,000 controllers manned the system. Now, there are 5,200 non-striking controllers and 3,000 supervisors qualified for controller duty, Van Vuren said.

The FAA has also called in several hundred recently retired controllers and 1,250 military controllers, many of whom have yet to be cleared for work directing civilian aircraft.

Van Vuren said the replacements are at least as qualified as the strikers. And he said medically disqualified controllers who have been brought back are only allowed to handle support functions and are not directing traffic.

But Van Vuren acknowledged that fatigue from the six-day, 48-hour weeks could pose a safety problem if continued indefinitely. He said the FAA hopes to reduce the controllers' workload to the normal five-day, 40-hour week by Christmas as newly trained controllers begin to enter the system.

PATCO controllers contend that many of the substitute controllers are too old, inexperienced, medically unqualified or unfamiliar with air traffic in their areas.

"As soon as the bad weather comes, these people who haven't worked for years can't handle it," said PATCO spokesman Patrick Doyle.

In the meantime, much of the verbal sparring over whether the skies are safe is centering on conflicting figures of near-misses and "system errors," the failure of controllers to maintain proper distances between aircraft.

The FAA says reports of near-misses are down by more than half, 28 last month compared with 60 in August 1980. It listed 33 "system errors" in August compared with 80 in the same month last year.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration says the number of hazardous incidents received under its reporting system has dropped by about 50 percent.

Yet NASA official Al Chambers says, "The question that one can raise is how long can these people continue to keep the effort up."

PATCO figures show more problems, but hardly an epidemic. The union cites 44 "confirmed near-misses" from Aug. 1 to Aug. 25. PATCO also claims to have confirmed 76 cases of planes being allowed to fly too close together.

A private group, the Air Safety Institute, said it has confirmed 39 near-misses since the strike began — more than double the normal number, according to the organization — and 60 system errors.

John Galipault, who heads the institute, said it is not unusual that it would receive more reports than the FAA — it always has.

As a group, pilots — whose lives are at stake — seem unperturbed.

"The overwhelming message that we receive from our members is that the skies are safe," said John Mazor of the

Former Hostage Is Suing For Divorce

DETROIT (AP) — Charles Jones, one of the Americans held hostage in Iran for 444 days, sued his wife for divorce five months after returning home, the Detroit Free Press said today.

Mattie Jones told the newspaper that the divorce, filed in late June, cited "irreconcilable differences." She said it was the culmination of many years of marital stress and had nothing to do with Jones' captivity in Iran.

Jones, the only black held for the entire hostage ordeal, was a communications officer for the International Communications Agency when the U.S. Embassy was seized on Nov. 4, 1979.

Jones is vacationing in Canada and unavailable for comment.

Mrs. Jones said the couple had considered separating as early as 1978, when she took their four daughters and returned to their Detroit home from Paris.

"We just hadn't been getting along... since about 1972," Mrs. Jones said.

After Mrs. Jones, 37, and the couple's four daughters — Carla, 18; Kathryn, 15; Candice, 11; and Kari, 8 — returned to Detroit in April 1978, Jones began divorce proceedings, she said.

Jones had moved to Iran by then, and before the divorce proceedings could be completed, the embassy was seized.

After Jones' return on Jan. 21, they decided to give the marriage another try but were unable to work things out, Mrs. Jones said.

To Propose Social Security 'Panel'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The senator normally in charge of Social Security legislation on his side of the capitol will propose a special bi-partisan panel of both Houses to draft changes this fall, an aide said Sunday.

Bob Potts, spokesman for Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said "the senator's basic thought is that this is the best chance for getting something done, with a bi-partisan group including the House side."

Congress is supposed to consider changes in Social Security after it returns from vacation Sept. 9 to ensure the financial soundness of the system.

Administration officials have said something has to be done to keep Social Security from running out of money in the mid-1980s, but that projection depends on assumptions about the economy that are not unanimously accepted in Congress.

Armstrong is chairman of the Social Security subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee.

The administration's trial balloon earlier this year for reductions in benefits was overwhelmingly denounced in a congressional resolution. As a result, the only substantial change made in the budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 was elimination of the $122 minimum monthly payment to retirees

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A 72-year-old man was stomped to death by someone wearing high-heeled shoes like those belonging to his daughter and granddaughter, a county medical examiner has concluded.

Nicholas Rupp's daughter and son-in-law, Pearl and Edwin Tolmie, and his 19-year-old granddaughter, Melodie Tolmie, are charged with second-degree murder in his July 1980 death.

The trial, originally scheduled for this week, was delayed after Melodie Tolmie's attorney filed a motion claiming the shoes were seized with an improper search warrant. Arguments on that are scheduled Oct. 7.

Palm Beach County Medical examiner Dr. Gabino Cuevas originally concluded that the Boynton Beach man was beaten with the shoes, but he theorized in a recent deposition that he was instead stomped to death.

"I believe the shoes were on," Cuevas said. "The severity of trauma indicated to me that someone hitting with the shoe would not cause that type of injury."

Lemon Back As Steinbrenner Shuffles Managers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bob Lemon and his players have passed this way before, so everybody seemed to take a "so-what" approach when owner George Steinbrenner made yet another change of managers for his New York Yankees.

After more than a week of speculation, Steinbrenner announced Sunday that Gene "Stick" Michael was out and Lemon, for the second time, was in. Lemon replaced Billy Martin in July 1978, with the Yankees in fourth place, 9 1/2 games out of first place.

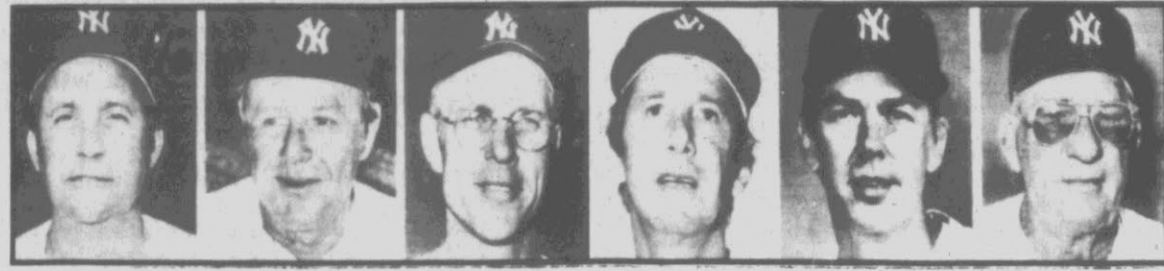

Under his easy-going direction, the Yankees caught Boston the final week of that regular season and beat the Red Sox in a one-game playoff for the American League East title. They went on to beat the Royals, three games to one, in the American League playoffs and conquered the Los Angeles Dodgers in the World Series.

The next year, after the death of his son in an automobile accident, Lemon was released during the season and replaced by Martin. "I've never been accused of being very bright," Lemon deadpanned in the Yankee clubhouse Sunday prior to the Yankees-Royals game, which New York won 6-1. "He's (Steinbrenner) been awfully good to me. The last time he replaced me it probably was for my own good. Some of my incentive was lost. I've had a chance to get my thoughts back."

Michael, who replaced Dick Howser as Yankee manager after the Royals swept the Yankees in the AL playoffs last year, had been feuding with his boss for more than a week. Howser, who guided the Yankees to the AL East title and a major-league high of 103 victories, became the Royals' manager last Monday.

"This guy (Michael) is like family," Steinbrenner said in a telephone interview with the New York Times. "I feel like a father scorned. I feel like I have a son who has done something wrong and isn't mature enough to admit it."

Who's On First?

right), the sixth Yankee manager since 1978. Other managers Dick Howser, Ralph Houk, Bill Virdon and Billy Martin. (AP Laserphoto)

This is the worst thing to happen to me since I got the Yankees."

The Yankees themselves didn't seem surprised by Steinbrenner's move.

"I've been through 13 managers in 14 seasons," said Reggie Jackson. "You'd have to go a ways to shock me. Someday I'm going to write a book about this. It'll make the towering inferno look like a wiener roast."

many times," said second baseman Willie Randolph. "The man knew what he was getting into... sooner or later."

"No matter what you do, you're going to get fired someday," said Howser. "I don't want to sound like a fatalist. You don't learn to live with it, but you learn to accept it because it's part of the game. You'd have to be very naive to take a job managing and think you won't get fired."

Lemon is working on what's left of his old contract with the Yankees, which runs through next season.

Before becoming field manager in November 1980, Michael, 43, had been the Yankees' general manager for about a year after managing the team's Columbus farm club in 1979. The Yankees won the AL East title in the first half of this strike-interrupted season and had won seven of their last nine games when Michael was fired.

The scene was set before a night game in Chicago on Aug. 28 when Michael told writers he had told Steinbrenner "to quit threatening me."

"If he wants me to go, make the move — don't wait," Michael said then. "I can't take it any longer."

Steinbrenner reportedly cut off all contact with Michael until Michael called him Friday night. Ironically, Lemon was in California getting a haircut Friday night when Steinbrenner appeared on television and said Michael "has not been a good soldier."

Lemon recalled that his barber told him at the time, "You may be going back to work sooner than you think."

"You can't say those things about your boss and expect to get away with them," Steinbrenner told one reporter. "How long do you think you would be working if you said those things about your editor? I consider it the maximum double-cross. I'm so disappointed in him."

"I was shocked at his remarks," Steinbrenner added. "Nobody ever pressured him. Nobody ever interfered with him. The only thing I ever ordered him to do was have a practice (last month) and that's because he forced me to do it."

Lemon said Steinbrenner called him in California Friday night and expressed concern for Michael.

Stick," Lemon said of Steinbrenner. "This has been very difficult for him. The atmosphere was gloom. He really had a feeling for Stick."

Yankee first baseman Bob Watson said he hated to see Michael lose his job.

"But he was quite aware of what he was getting into," Watson added. "He didn't give anyone any hassle. On this club, you just put the players out there and let 'em play. This is a veteran club, and we have, what, four or five coaches who were managers."

"You can only worry about yourself," said catcher Rick Cerone. "There weren't any problems with Stick anyway. You just let this team play."

Stabler Rallies Oilers To Upset Of Los Angeles

By The Associated Press The Los Angeles Rams wish Ken Stabler had stayed retired.

The 35-year-old left-handed quarterback announced in July that he was quitting football. Late last month, after Oilers starting quarterback Gifford Nielsen was hurt, Stabler decided to come back.

Sunday, he played like he never had been away.

Going the distance — after having thrown only five passes during the exhibition season — Stabler guided Houston to a 27-20 upset over the Los Angeles Rams.

Even a child-support suit and reports that he had associated with a gambler did not bother Stabler against the Rams.

"Now that we have all that behind, I think it will be a great year for Houston and for me," said Stabler. "I am responsible for the other 44 guys. The way I go, so goes the team."

Stabler connected on 13 of 20 passes — including 7-for-7 in the second half — for 192 yards and two third-quarter touchdowns as the Oilers rallied from a 17-6 deficit and gave Ed Biles a victory in his first game as head coach.

"I knew we had to go with our best," Biles said in explaining his decision to start Stabler ahead of John Reeves.

There were several other shockers on the first Sunday of the National Football League season. The biggest upset was the Denver Broncos' 9-7 victory over the Oakland Raiders, last season's Super Bowl champions.

Other surprises were the Kansas City Chiefs' 37-33 triumph over the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Baltimore Colts' 29-28 victory over the New England Patriots.

Stabler, whose scoring strikes went 33 yards to Rob Carpenter and 20 yards to Ken Burrough, had a lot of help in the Oilers' victory at Los Angeles. Earl Campbell, the NFL's rushing leader each of the past three years, gained 122 yards on 27 carries, and rookie Willie Tullis scored the winning touchdown with 57 seconds left on a 95-yard kickoff return.

"The victory was a tribute to a team that has been shot with personal and emotional problems and injuries," said Biles.

Broncos 9, Raiders 7

"It's hard to believe you can win a football game against the defending world champions like that," said Dan Reeves, Denver's new head coach, after the error-plagued Broncos had struggled to their upset over Oakland.

Denver's defense stymied the Raiders after Oakland scored on its opening possession. "There's no question that the key was our defense," said Reeves.

Offensively, the Broncos got a 44-yard TD pass from Craig Morton to Rick Upchurch and a 29-yard field goal by Fred Steinfort.

Chiefs 37, Steelers 33

"I saw the ball, picked it up and ran," explained Kansas City linebacker Thomas Howard after scooping up a Terry Bradshaw fumble and racing 65 yards for the winning touchdown with 1:59 left against the error-plagued Steelers.

Pittsburgh fumbled eight times, losing five, suffered two interceptions and missed two extra points.

"Without question, it was a team effort," deadpanned Steelers' Coach Chuck Noll.

"What could have been a great win, even with all the mistakes, ended up being a lousy loss with a lot of mistakes," said Bradshaw.

Colts 29, Patriots 28

Rookie Randy McMillan showed quickly why he was a first-round draft pick. The Colts' running back from Pittsburgh rushed for 146 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns as Baltimore, winless in four exhibition games, stunned New England.

"He's an outstanding back," Baltimore Coach Mike McCormack said of McMillan. "That's why we took him in the first round when a lot of people thought we should go for a defensive back."

Eagles 24, Giants 10

Philadelphia continued its mastery over the Giants, beating them for the 12th straight time, with the help of Rm Jaworski's 55-yard scoring pass to Rodney Parker and a punishing defense.

The Eagles limited the Giants to 55 yards rushing and sacked quarterback Phil Simms six times for 66 yards in losses.

Cowboys 26, Redskins 10

Dallas played well in all phases of the game in spoiling the head coaching debut of Washington's Joe Gibbs.

Danny White threw TD passes of 33 yards to Billy Joe DuPree and 42 yards to Drew Pearson. Tony Dorsett carried 21 times for 132 yards. Rafael Septien kicked four field goals, and the Cowboys' defense intercepted four Joe Theismann passes.

"We got beat by a good football team," said Gibbs. "We couldn't make the play...give the credit to Dallas."

Falcons 27, Saints 0

Bum Phillips, making his debut as New Orleans' head coach, also lost to a team — Atlanta — which was outstanding both offensively and defensively.

Steve Bartkowski, who spent Saturday night sweating out a fever, fired three TD passes — two to Wallace Francis — while the Falcons' defense produced its first shutout in three years.

"I didn't like it," Phillips said. "I'm aggravated, but not embarrassed."

Fouts, Sipe Square Off In Cleveland

CLEVELAND (AP) — Most football coaches agree: The quarterbacks get the ink, but the game is won in the trenches.

The adage holds true for tonight's nationally televised battle between the San Diego Chargers and the Cleveland Browns.

Quarterbacks Dan Fouts and Brian Sipe, who together passed for more than five miles in 1980, are the obvious focus of the game. But the most significant struggle is likely to occur between the Chargers' defensive front four and Cleveland's offensive line.

San Diego, led by defensive tackle Gary Johnson, sacked opposing quarterbacks 60 times to lead the National Football League in that category a year ago.

The Browns' offensive line, bolstered by the acquisition of Joe DeLamielleure from Buffalo, allowed opponents to knock Sipe to the ground just 23 times, the second-best performance in the league.

"People will talk about Fouts versus Sipe and (tight end) Kellen Winslow versus Ozzie Newsome or (back) Mike Pruitt versus Chuck Muncie, but the best matchup will be our offensive line against their front four," said Browns Coach Sam Rutigliano.

"The strength of their defense is their front four. However, I believe we're one of the best at protecting the quarterback," he said.

Sipe and Fouts both had plenty of time to throw the ball in 1980, Sipe earning MVP honors in the league while throwing for 4,132 yards, second only to Fouts' 4,741 yards.

The man most responsible for those statistics is Don Coryell, the Charger coach who tutored Sipe at San Diego State University in the early 1970s.

"I like the man," Sipe says of Coryell. "He taught me as much about life as he taught me about football, and he taught me a lot about football. I thought he might be too nice of a guy to succeed in the pros, but he's certainly proved me wrong."

Gant, Allison, Waltrip Set For Today's Southern 500

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Bobby Allison and Darrell Waltrip were keeping a low profile going into today's running of the Southern 500 at Darlington International Raceway. It was not done on purpose, though.

Both would have much preferred being square in the limelight, which would have meant starting positions in the first few rows of the 40-car field.

The two combatants are locked in a dramatic battle for the Winston Cup, symbolic of victory in the Grand National stock car point standings.

But, in qualifying for the 23rd of 31 races this season, neither was able to muster much of a charge to get the adrenalin flowing.

While Harry Gant was piloting his Buick Regal to the pole at 152.693 mph, Waltrip managed to slide his Buick around the 1.366-mile Darlington layout at just 150.106. That was good for the inside spot on the sixth, two-car row.

The slumping Allison, whose one-time lead of more than 200 points has been cut by Waltrip to just 50, has switched from a Buick to a newly-built Chevrolet Monte Carlo.

The 43-year-old Allison, three times the runnerup, but never the Winston Cup champion, is hoping to get back on the right track at a track where he has won four times, three of them coming in the Southern 500.

However, Allison wound up starting in the middle of the fast pack, qualifying for the 17th position.

"We're not where we want to be, obviously," Allison said. "But, this is a new car and there are things to be worked out. We expect it will be ready to race when the flag drops."

As for Waltrip, Allison says, "I'm not looking over my shoulder. I just have to drive my car and he has to drive his."

But, despite his poor qualifying effort, Waltrip feels he's going to catch Allison.

"We still have time and, the way we've been going, I think we can do it," he noted.

Waltrip, 34, is another of the top NASCAR stars still seeking a first Winston Cup title. He came close two years ago, losing out to seven-time winner Richard Petty on the last weekend of the season.

"I'm with a different team now," said Waltrip, who took over the wheel of Junior Johnson's Buicks this season. "And maybe I learned something from that (1979) experience."

"I was in pretty much the same position that Allison is now. I was the hunted and Petty was the hunter. I'd like to be leading now, but my position isn't that bad with eight races left."

Yanks, Boston, O's Roll Sixes

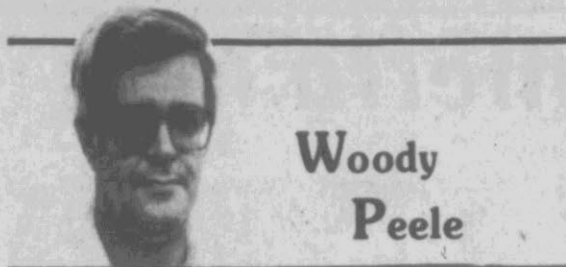

By The Associated Press
New York, Boston and Baltimore each rolled a six on Sept. 6 and the number was a winner all three times.

The Yankees welcomed back Bob Lemon as their manager, replacing the fired Gene Michael, with a six-run outburst in the first inning Sunday and that was all the runs needed in a 6-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

The Red Sox also won 6-1, beating the Seattle Mariners, and also scored all six of their runs in one inning, the sixth, keyed by a two-run single by Carl Yastrzemski and a two-run triple by Rick Miller.

The Orioles, trailing 4-2, scored six runs in the seventh on a two-run, pinch-hit single by Jose Morales and a grand slam homer by Lenn Sakata to beat the Oakland A's 8-4.

In other American League games, Cleveland blanked California 2-0, Toronto edged Chicago 3-2, Milwaukee outlasted Minnesota 8-7 in 10 innings and Detroit nipped Texas 4-3. AL East Division teams won all 15 games with the West over the weekend, leaving Oakland and Kansas City in first place in the West with sub-.500 records.

As openings go, it was a smash. Now, Coach Ed Emory and his Pirates will have to see whether the show can be taken on the road.

Saturday night, the Pirates systematically destroyed Western Carolina. Carlton Nelson showed that he is no worse for wear, coming off neck surgery last season to turn in an outstanding performance. Greg Stewart proved that he can come in and fill in for Nelson at any time, and Kevin Ingram, the Villanova transfer, showed moments of brilliance. His pass to set up the final ECU score was a thing of beauty to see.

Chuck Bushbeck lived up to his expectations, although he didn't kick the ball out of the end zone. ECU officials, however, said they wanted the ball kept in play, to try and hold the Catamounts inside the 20. That nearly backfired on the first return, however, as Dwayne Norman nearly broke away for a score. Only Bushbeck's saving body block stopped his rush to the goal line.

The ex-Villanova kicked booted all six of his extra points. Twice the Pirates were in field goal position on fourth down, but both times elected to go for it, making the first downs each time.

The Pirates offense worked almost flawlessly. There were, however, three turnovers. Nelson had one pass intercepted in the fourth period, and Roy Wiley fumbled three times, losing two to WCU defenders.

That didn't make Emory happy, and there could be some heavy work ahead for the fullback position.

East Carolina's passing attack, for the first three quarters, was near-perfect. The Pirate quarterbacks, working behind solid protection, hit on seven of their first eight attempts. Oddly enough, Nelson, after hitting five of his first six, missed on the next five, among which was the interception. He did finish up with a 20-yard completion his last throw.

The offensive line, led by All-America candidate Tootie Robbins, opened hole after hole against the young Catamount defense. Time after time, ECU used the "belly" to go to Harold Blue, who ran right behind Robbins and right guard Bud LaCock all night long.

The defense, however, proved to be still suspect. Although the defense did play better in the second half, they did give ground, although they did stiffen when the ball got into scoring territory.

There does remain some work, however, as Western was able to complete 12 of 31 passes, and probably could have had more as several others were dropped.

The real test will come this Saturday, when the Pirates travel to Chapel Hill to face the North Carolina Tar Heels.

This will be a special trip. It's the final game in the series, which sees the Heels leading by a 5-1-1 mark. Of the seven games, three of them have been blowouts — the first and the last, won by Carolina, and the lone ECU win.

The other four have been very, very close. The Tar Heels elected to end the series shortly after ECU won its lone game. They didn't want to have to be forced to play non-ACC in-state foes. Too much pressure to play Appalachian State, too, and these non-ACC foes were too fired up when the Heels had to concentrate on other games.

Well, be that as it may, the series will end next Saturday.

East Carolina would like nothing better than to end it with a victory. That would take a lot of living down by the Heels, to close out the series with a loss.

It will be no easy pickings for the Pirates however. They do have the advantage of having played a game now, while the Heels will be opening up.

One thing for sure: Carolina will be much more of a test of how far the Pirates have come since last year.

Haas Wins B.C. Open

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Jay Haas proved his game was in good shape by doing little wrong on the En-Joie Country Club course and winning the $275,000 B.C. Open golf tournament.

Haas shot a final-round 69 Sunday to beat Tom Kite by three strokes.

Haas entered the final round with that 3-shot cushion over Kite and said he expected Kite to close with a strong finish.

But Haas maintained his lead as both golfers completed the final 18 holes at 2-under-par over the soggy upstate New York course.

Haas bogeyed once and came up with three birdies while Kite failed to make a move the last day of the Tournament Players Association event. The victory was worth $49,500 to the former national collegiate champion from Wake Forest.

"Every time he had a chance to make a move, I'd make a putt or he'd just lip it out," Haas said of Kite.

"The trend was going my way. They just couldn't do anything right and I couldn't do anything wrong," Haas said of his challengers.

"The proudest moment for me was knowing I beat the best player of the year. It's been his year. But it was my week," Haas said.

Haas trailed Calvin Peete by three strokes after his opening-round, 4-under-par 67, but he took the lead for good with a 65 in the second round and carded a third-round 69. He finished the 72-hole event with a 14-under-par 270.

The victory was worth $49,500 for the 27-year-old golfer from Charlotte, N.C.

Haas, the 1975 collegiate national champion, won the Greater Milwaukee Open earlier this year and was No. 20 on the tour's money list this week with $124,967 in earnings this year.

It was the second straight week Kite has finished second. Last Sunday Kite finished one stroke behind Bill Rogers in the World Series of Golf.

Kite is playing one of the most consistent games on the tour this year, finishing in the top eight in 14 of the last 15 tournaments. But he has won only the Inverrary Classic.

He entered the B.C. Open, the tournament he won in 1978, as the fourth-leading money-winner this year with $305,624. He added $29,700 to his total with Sunday's second-place finish.

Barry Jaeckel and Bobby Clampett finished tied for third, five strokes behind the winner. Howard Twitty was fourth, six strokes back. Dan Pohl, Chip Beck and Peete were tied at seven strokes off the pace.

Stabler Leads Houston Past Rams...

Jets. Cribbs, who caught 52 passes and gained 1,185 yards rushing as a rookie last year, ran 14 yards for one TD and caught a 28-yard pass from Joe Ferguson for another score against New York.

"The Jets did a super job of shutting down the run, but when you do that, you leave yourself open for the pass," said Cribbs.

Ferguson passed for 255 yards and two TDs.

Lions 24, 49ers 17

Detroit's Billy Sims, last season's Rookie of the Year, picked up where he left off in 1980. Sims gained 59 yards on 21 carries, caught five passes for 66 yards and scored the winning touchdown — his second TD of the game — on a 1-yard dash with 18 seconds left.

"Sims should get a game ball every week," said Detroit Coach Monte Clark.

Dolphins 20, Cardinals 7
Catching passes in St. Louis' secondary proved easier for Miami's Jimmy Cefalo than working against his teammates in training camp.

"We worked on those all day in practice, and they never seem to work," Cefalo said after catching TD tosses of 22 and 47 yards from David Woodley.

The setback was the fifth straight in an opener for St. Louis. The Cards' offense suffered after quarterback Jim Hart went out with a knee injury with 10 minutes gone.

Packers 16, Bears 9
"It got down to where we were hoping for a miracle to happen like the one that did," Green Bay Coach Bart Starr said after Johnnie Gray had recovered a fumble by Chicago's Matt Suhey on the Packers' goal line with 23 seconds to play.

The running of Gerry Ellis and Eddie Lee Ivey, each of whom scored once, and the passing of Lynn Dickey triggered the Packers' offense. Walter Payton scored Chicago's only TD on an 11-yard run.

Bengals 27, Seahawks 21
The Bengals, booed by their home fans after falling behind 21-0 in the first period, rallied to hand Seattle its sixth straight loss in a season opener since the Seahawks joined the league in 1976.

Fullback Pete Johnson and third-string quarterback Turk Schonert sparked the Cincinnati comeback. Johnson slammed for two touchdowns, while Schonert, pressed into action after starter Ken Anderson failed to move the offense, passed for 130 yards and ran for 41.

"When...you hear fans booing, it gets you charged up," said Johnson. "We showed that we can come back, but I hope we don't have to do it that way again."

Bucs 21, Vikings 13
Doug Williams scrambled 10 yards for a TD and tossed a 55-yard scoring pass to Kevin House, while Neal Colzie raced 82 yards for a touchdown with a pass interception off Steve Dils with 21 seconds left, keying Tampa Bay's victory.

"Artistically it wasn't a triumph it was," said Bucs' Coach John McKay, whose team was outgained 446-219.

Dils completed 37 of 62 passes for 361 yards and one TD.

Valenzuela's Seventh Shut Out Ties Record

By The Associated Press

Fernando Valenzuela has had his ups and downs in his first full major league season. But now he's up again.

"I'm pitching now the way I was pitching at the beginning of the season," he says. "I think I'm back at the top of my game."

The highly-acclaimed Los Angeles Dodger left-hander made the comments Sunday after hurling a four-hit, 5-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals and tying the National League record for most shutouts by a rookie with his seventh.

The victory was Valenzuela's third straight, after a relatively ineffective mid-season period during which he gained only one victory in five decisions. He started out by winning his first eight starts.

The Cardinals have been especially soft touches for Valenzuela. He has given them only four earned runs in three starts covering 242-3 innings.

"It's a very good hitting club but I've been able to keep the ball down and that's the secret of my success," Valenzuela said.

A crowd of 46,780 — there were more than 5,000 no-shows — marked the ninth time in 10 starts that Valenzuela has pitched before a home sellout. "I feel great about that," said Valenzuela. "The fans have been great and I'm ready for the next time."

Valenzuela not only pitched well, but also knocked in three of the Dodgers' five runs with a triple in the seventh inning.

Giants 3, Cubs 0
Vida Blue pitched a no-hitter for 61-3 innings and settled for a one-hitter before leaving in the eighth as San Francisco defeated Chicago. Bill Buckner spoiled Blue's no-hit bid with a one-out single in the seventh.

Blue, 8-5, was lifted after walking leadoff batter Jody Davis in the eighth. Greg Minton finished the game for his 15th save, giving up two more Chicago hits.

"It's his decision — what I think doesn't matter," said Blue, in reference to Giants Manager Frank Robinson not letting him finish the game. "We won, and that's the main thing. I guess he (Robinson) felt I was losing something. I guess the velocity I had in walking that batter didn't impress him."

Astros 4, Expos 3
Phil Garner's run-scoring single in the 12th inning lifted Houston over Montreal. Dickie Thon singled after reliever Elias Sosa, 1-2, had retired the first batter in the 12th. Tony Scott moved Thon to second with an infield single before Garner, acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates a few days earlier, drilled his game-winning hit.

The blow made a winner of reliever Frank LaCorte, 4-2, who worked two innings and escaped from a jam in the 11th when the Expos had the potential winning run at third base with one out.

Reds 5, Phillies 4
Ray Knight socked a two-run double with two out in the ninth inning to lead Cincinnati past Philadelphia.

With the score tied 3-3, Dave Concepcion singled with one out off Philadelphia reliever Sparky Lyle, 7-5, and moved to second on George Foster's groundout. After Dan Driessen was hit by a pitch, Knight lined his game-winning hit.

Pirates 9, Padres 5
Jason Thompson drove in four runs and collected four hits, including a first-inning two-run homer, and Steve Nicosia had three RBI to power Pittsburgh over San Diego. Thanks to Thompson's hitting, Pirate starter Eddie Solomon was staked to an early 4-0 lead en route to his sixth victory in 10 decisions. Don Robinson pitched the last three innings for the Pirates, recording his second save.

Rick Wise, 3-6, was the loser. Braves 5, Mets 2
Dale Murphy walloped a three-run homer in the first inning as Atlanta beat New York behind the combined seven-hit pitching of Rick Mahler and Gene Garber.

Murphy's homer was his eighth of the year and came after Rufino Linares reached first on a fielder's choice and Chris Chambliss walked. Murphy collected three hits in the game.

Autobiography Can Be Entertaining

By LORILINENBERGER
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)

Few things are worse than being stuck at a party with a bore who wants to share every detail of his life story.

Even worse, says Kansas City author Lois Daniel, is delving into what looks to be a fascinating autobiography and nodding off shortly after "I was born in a two-room sod shack."

But even the mildest of life histories can be made reasonably entertaining to at least some people if enough colorful memories can be resurrected, says Ms. Daniel, author of "How to Write Your Own Life Story" (Chicago Review Press, $7.95).

"A lot of people actually daydream about writing their life stories, but are afraid they've led dull lives," she says.

"What they don't realize is the mundane events that seem ordinary to them often are fascinating to someone else, even if that someone else is only a family member or a neighbor."

The most successful life stories naturally are carved from a wealth of personal and profound events, so the older a prospective author is, the more memories he will have to draw on, Ms. Daniel says.

An autobiographer who's seen fewer than 30 years is bordering on presumptuousness.

Step one is buying two loose-leaf notebooks, says Ms. Daniel. One notebook will serve as the beginning of your book, the other will become your "assignment book."

Each page of the assignment book should be titled with relatively significant milestones in your life. Those events can be as seemingly trivial as the pets and toys you owned as a child, or as monumental as the proudest moment of your life.

The idea, says Ms. Daniel, is to jot a few key words into your assignment book whenever a memory comes to mind. Many writers work under the mistaken impression they should start at the beginning of their lives and chronologically jog their memories. That route takes too long and usually results in the "I was born" type introduction.

"You'll start noticing that one memory will jog another and before long a stream of memories will return," Ms. Daniel says.

A prospective author should spend at least one half hour each day working on his life story, she says. In time, writing should become just another routine in an average day.

Another guideline the would-be author should heed: Don't worry about what your writing sounds like. Your writing reflects your lifestyle, your behavior and your background. Write the way you speak. Don't try to be pretentious.

The famous Russian immigrant, George Papashvily, wrote an autobiography whose charm and warmth came in large part from his broken English and clumsy word structuring. An example from his book "Anything Can Happen" follows:

"Work 14 hours in every day and the master's wife had a pleasure to wash, always to wash. In suds and out of, rubbing and scrubbing, even the walls and window and street before the door knew her brush and mop."

Be honest in your writing, Ms. Daniel says. Don't write events as you wish they would have happened, but as they really did happen.

Above all, try to include humor. Every life has a little comic relief in it, Ms. Daniel says. Every great story should have some of the same.

After about 30 or 40 weeks of daily writing, the autobiographer should be ready to start researching and refining, Ms. Daniel says.

Research involves making sure everything in your book is factually correct. If the invasion of Pearl Harbor changed the course of your life, be certain you know when it happened. Don't misinform.

Revising and refining includes making sure you have fully identified everyone in your story. This is especially important to writers who are penning their life stories for the benefit of their descendants. Don't mention an Uncle George unless you intend to identify him fully.

Even the most talented, adept writers have to refine and revise. They ask themselves: Is each sentence as clear as I can write it? Have I used too many clichés? Are my stories too long? Do I use narrative when I could be using dialogue?

Selling your autobiography is difficult, unless you or some facet of your life has gained a measure of notoriety.

A particularly inspiring, humorous or well-written autobiography will sell itself, but if those adjectives apply to your story only in part, you may have to consider selling just portions of your book—that is, single episodes in your life that have been especially interesting.

Once you've chosen which story you will try to sell, go to a public library and check out a magazine called "Writer's Market," says Ms. Daniel. The reference book lists hundreds of magazines and periodicals willing to buy stories.

Ms. Daniel teaches writing courses at Penn Valley Community College, works part-time as editor of a community magazine, has worked in the advertising and publishing, has been a writer for several magazines and has free-lanced for others.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—Both, vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠872 ♥9653 ♦AQ82 ♣J6
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's rebid of a lower-ranking suit is not forcing. Even though you have four-card support for partner's second suit, you do have a near-minimum responding hand. There is no reason for you to want to encourage partner with your miserable holding. Pass.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A1076 ♥J105 ♦AQJ542
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand is not quite good enough for a jump rebid of three diamonds, even though it is too strong for a simple two diamond rebid. But even if it were not, you should show a four-card major before rebidding a six-card minor. And there is no reason to raise partner with only three-card support when you have a better bid available. Bid one spade.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ872 ♦K7 ♣AQ9652
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
3 ♣ Pass 4 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—You have already described most of the distributional features of your hand, and you have nothing extra in the way of high cards. You have no reason to take any further action. Had North been interested in slam, he could have jumped or cue-bid at his last turn. Pass. You must expect that a considerable part of North's assets will be wasted.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠10762 ♥AK83 ♦7 ♣8742
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble Pass 1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand has suddenly become very valuable. Partner's decision to double and then bid a new suit shows a hand that is stronger than a minimum opening bid, and in support of spades your hand is worth 10-11 points. A simple raise does not do it justice. We would not fault you greatly for jumping to three spades, but a leap to game gets the top spot in our rating.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKJ872 ♥KJ542 ♦A ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—We are sure that the scientists can come up with some convoluted auction which consumes a lot of time and space, but all we are really concerned about is: How many aces does partner hold? If his response to our Blackwood inquiry shows two aces, we would gamble on a grand slam; one ace is all we need to essay six hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A872 ♥K1063 ♦K853 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Dble 3 ♣ ?

What do you bid now?
A.—In support of either major, your hand is worth 13 points, and the equivalent of an opening bid facing another rates to make game. However, rather than pick a suit yourself and run the risk of selecting a suit in which partner has only three-card support, you should pass the choice to him. The way to do that is to cue-bid four clubs, and partner will make the selection.

Rita Jenrette Now Reporter

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP)—Rita Jenrette, who knows something about making headlines, is attending the Miss America Pageant—as a reporter.

Mrs. Jenrette, ex-wife of a former House member convicted in the undercover Abscam inquiry, is in Atlantic City to cover Miss Texas for a small news syndicate.

The blonde who once revealed she and John Jenrette of South Carolina made love on the steps of the U.S. Capitol says she thinks the pageant, which winds up Saturday with the crowning of a new beauty queen, is "wholesome."

Dudley Moore Likes 'em Tall

NEW YORK (AP)—Dudley Moore and Susan Anton joke that their theme song is "I've Got You Under My Chin."

"I'm attracted to tall women, but I have no choice," Moore, the 5-foot-2 star of "10" and "Arthur," says in an interview in this week's People magazine.

Moore, who has been married to actresses Suzy Kendall and Tuesday Weld, has now hooked up with the 6-foot Miss Anton, who says she is attracted to Moore because he is "very secure and positive about his life."

Holiday For Workers

Millions of American workers are staying home today, enjoying a well-earned rest from their jobs. Most nations observe an annual Labor Day, but it occurs on the first Monday in September only in Canada and the United States. In Japan, it's November 23. In New Zealand, October 22. In Spain, July 18. Most other countries celebrate Labor Day on May 1. The first state to declare a Labor Day holiday was Oregon in 1887. It set aside the first Saturday in June. But other states, passing Labor Day laws later that year, chose the first Monday in September. Congress established that day as a national legal holiday in 1894.

DO YOU KNOW: Who is the Secretary of Labor?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Tom Bradley is the mayor of Los Angeles.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Plans to construct a new hospital in Mecklenburg County are expected to be announced Thursday by a private corporation that operates 350 hospitals.

The Charlotte Observer reported today that the company, Hospital Corporation of America, has called a press conference for Thursday to announce its "plans for the future in the Charlotte area."

A company spokesman would not elaborate on what will be announced. "We're not ready to say anything," said David Ford, HCA's director of domestic development.

The corporation has expressed interest in constructing a hospital in southern Mecklenburg County. But Tom Ray, chairman of county commissioners, said Thursday's announcement probably would deal with plans for a hospital in the northeastern corner of the county near the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

The hospital would then tie in with the UNCC school of nursing and a metro center that university and county officials are working to create, Ray said.

Plans for the metro center also call for residential and commercial development.

Any HCA hospital proposal might face rough going in Mecklenburg County. Officials of the Southern Piedmont Health Systems Agency, which would have to approve a new hospital, have said the area doesn't need another hospital.
