

ECU Chancellor Submits Resignation

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer
Dr. Thomas B. Brewer resigned today as chancellor of East Carolina University, ending a three-year administration marked by turbulence among faculty and athletic leaders and controversies stemming from his interest in other jobs.
Brewer, who pledged "a path of excellence" when he became chancellor at East Carolina in July 1978, currently is being considered for a similar job at West Virginia University. His agreement to be considered for the West Virginia post put him at odds with some of his own trustees two weeks ago.
Brewer has been identified by West Virginia officials as being among five finalists for that job. He reportedly will be interviewed in Morgantown, W. Va., this weekend.
In a statement released by the ECU news bureau, Brewer said:

"I have requested that President (William C.) Friday (of the University of North Carolina system) and the Board of Governors accept my resignation as chancellor of East Carolina University effective June 30, 1982."
Brewer was reported out of town today and could not be reached for comment.
In the statement, Brewer said he also has requested that he be placed on leave from ECU — with pay — at a time to be chosen by Friday. "This will allow me time to prepare for other professional activities," he said.
"This action was not requested by President Friday or the Board of Trustees. I have decided that this is in the best interests of East Carolina University."
"I believe that in the last three years the university has made much progress toward greater quality.

This has been accomplished by the hard work and dedication of the fine faculty and staff, the students, the alumni, friends and trustees. It has been a privilege to serve East Carolina and Betty and I are thankful and appreciative for the support and friendship of so many."
Friday said today he and Brewer had not met personally since the controversy over the West Virginia University job developed but added, "We have had about a dozen telephone calls about it."
Friday said "the action Dr. Brewer has taken was entirely his own. He took this action out of his conviction it was in the best interest of the university that he take it. That is always an act of courage."
"I shall help him in any way possible as he seeks to get relocated and I appreciate the effort he has put forth at East Carolina," Friday said.

"I did not know him until the (ECU) selection committee had determined that he was one of the finalists. I got acquainted with him after that. I know the amount of energy and effort he has put in the job. He has given it his best. I certainly wish him well."
Brewer apparently made his decision to leave East Carolina earlier in the week after talking with Friday, who was on vacation until last weekend. Friday discussed the West Virginia situation last Saturday with ECU Trustee Chairman Ashley Futrell of Washington.
Futrell said today he attended a reception at the chancellor's home in Greenville Tuesday night for new faculty members but did not discuss the controversy with Brewer. "I knew what the situation was, but he didn't talk about it to me," Futrell said.
Futrell, one of the trustees who expressed concern when Brewer agreed to be considered for the West Virginia post and did not tell the ECU board, said today he wishes Brewer "a lot of success in whatever undertaking he goes into."

"I think he's done a lot of good things and deserves credit for what he's done ... He came in a difficult situation, succeeding Dr. (Leo) Jenkins. He's tried to put a business-like administration through, something that we didn't have before."
Futrell said he was keeping "constant contact" with Friday and would be "meeting with him shortly" to discuss plans for handling Brewer's resignation and finding a new chancellor.
Another ECU trustee, Thomas Bennett of Greenville, also expressed good wishes for Brewer's future and noted, "Now we start over again and work for the very best for the school."
The resignation, although not totally unexpected, caught most of the ECU trustees by surprise this morning.

Former board chairman Troy Pate of Goldsboro learned about the resignation only after it was announced by the news bureau.
Brewer had caused some discontent last year by allowing his name to be considered as a finalist for the top administrative job at the University of Louisville. He eventually withdrew from consideration, but only after members of the Louisville screening committee had interviewed him in Greenville.
He came to East Carolina as the school's second chancellor, succeeding Dr. Jenkins, who had seen the school switch from a college to the third largest university in the 16-campus state system.

Utilities Okay Agency Buy-In Background Of Brewer's ECU Role

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission, in two major steps last night, adopted a resolution approving the N.C. Power Agency Number 3 buy-in agreement with Carolina Power & Light Co. which will make the agency the city's prime source of wholesale electric energy, and voted to move ahead with local funding on the final design phase for the proposed new wastewater treatment plant.
Greenville is one of a number of municipalities across the state that must approve the Power Agency agreement in order for the project to become a reality. And although the Utilities Commission gave their approval to the project last night, the City Council must still act on the agreement to finalize local participation.
The resolution adopted last night — and which the council must act on — approves the power agency purchase of portions of CP&L's Roxboro Unit 4 and Brunswick Units 1 and 2 which are in commercial operation, and portions of Mayo Units 1 and 2 and Harris Units 1, 2, 3 and 4 which are currently under construction or planned by CP&L.
The resolution also approves the settlement agreement with Virginia Electric & Power Co. which allows Veeco's wholesale customers such as Greenville to get off the Veeco system, and approves a power sales agreement between the agency and Greenville which makes Greenville a wholesale customer of the Power Agency.

City Manager Ed Wyatt, a member of the utilities commission, told commission members that the city council "would like to hold a joint public hearing on this matter," in order to provide Greenville residents "an opportunity to express their various views on this important issue," before taking action on the resolution. "The council is not negative at all," Wyatt emphasized.
Commission member Gene Prescott, in explaining the power agency concept for several area residents attending the meeting, said, "The consuming public is going to pay ... one way or other ... for these plants," the Power Agency is purchasing.
Pointing out that the Power Agency will purchase ownership in the CP&L plants by issuing tax-exempt revenue bonds, Prescott indicated that Greenville's only commitment will be to purchase power from the agency, rather than from a private power company such as Veeco or CP&L.

"The difference in that interest rate" between tax-exempt bonds and bonds issued by a private power company to fund construction of facilities — a cheaper ownership cost — "is where we save," Prescott explained.
In voting to move ahead with the final design phase of the proposed new sewage treatment plant, commission members approved Utilities Director Charles Horne's recommendation that the detail design of the plant be financed with local funds, and that the engineering firm of Olsen Associates handle the design work under a $505,000 "fixed fee" contract.

Dr. Thomas Brewer, who this morning announced his resignation as chancellor of East Carolina University effective June 30, 1982, came to the Greenville campus in July, 1978 from Fort Worth, Texas, where he had been vice chancellor and dean of Texas Christian University.
Brewer was appointed chancellor of East Carolina by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors on March 10, 1978, following a selection process that began a year earlier and saw a search committee review more than 200 possible candidates for the post to be vacated by then chancellor Dr. Leo Jenkins who retired June 30, 1978.
A Fort Worth native, Brewer received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Texas — Austin, then taught at Southwest Texas State University and North Texas State University. After receiving his Ph.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1962, Brewer taught at NTSU, the University of Kentucky, and Iowa State University before going to the University of Toledo in 1968 as professor and chairman of the History Department.
He returned to his home town in 1971 as Dean of Arts and Sciences at Texas Christian. The following year, he was named vice chancellor and dean of the university, with responsibility for all academic programs, admissions, and organized research.

Lengthy Agenda Prepared For City Council Thursday Night

Back-To-Work

Charles Horne, director of the Greenville Utilities Commission returned to work full-time this morning.
Horne, hospitalized June 12, had been working part-time for the past several weeks.
The Utilities Commission last night adopted a resolution commending Malcolm Green, named acting director during Horne's absence, for assuming the "highly demanding and responsible position in addition to his regular duties," and providing "competent leadership and the knowledge to sustain the day-to-day operations of the Utilities."
The resolution also commended Green for providing "detailed information and accurate guidance to the Commissioners enabling them to act on several major and essential matters relative to the proper function of the Commission," during Horne's absence.

A lengthy agenda, including consideration of an ordinance relative to the city's participation in the Municipal Power Agency's purchase of an ownership interest in several CP&L generating facilities, has been prepared for the City Council's 8 p.m. meeting Thursday at city hall.
Business on the five-page agenda includes: appointments to boards and commissions; public hearings on several amendments to the Zoning Ordinance; public hearing on a change in the membership composition of the Board of Adjustments; application for a special use permit renewal for the operation of a private nightclub at 1311 W. Fifth Street;

Three applications for renewal of mobile home permits; scheduling of public hearings on annexation, amendments to the Zoning and Subdivision Ordinances, and on property rezoning; consideration of recommendations by the Traffic Commission; three applications for privilege licenses; tax releases and refunds;
Request by Greenville Utilities for Council approval of resolutions authorizing the execution of agreements with Seaboard Coast Line Railroad for 24-inch water transmission mains which will run from the new water treatment plant to the existing facility; resolution authorizing the filing of an application for mass transit assistance grants;
Consideration of bids on a refuse truck, trash truck, police vehicles, fire-rescue vehicle, and recreation pick-up truck; consideration of a lease purchase agreement for the refuse and trash trucks; consideration of a contract and budget amendment relative to the Fleming-Winstead house; budget amendments; consideration of the acceptance of Luci Drive, from Greenville Boulevard to Eastbrook Drive, for permanent maintenance;
Consideration of the plan document, trust agreement, plan supervisor agreement, and resolutions designating trustees and plan administrator for the city's self-insurance program; and adoption of a resolution declaring certain equipment surplus to the city's needs.

Tenant Occupancy Rate High In City Projects

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer
All but seven of the Housing Authority's 702 dwelling units were occupied at the end of August, according to the tenant occupancy report discussed at Monday night's meeting.
Sallye Streeter, the Authority's director of tenant affairs, said the temporary unit vacancies included one in the Meadowbrook development, two in Kearney Park, three in Moyewood, and one in Hopkins Park.
Average rents in the individual project areas, Mrs. Streeter said, included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $75.79; NC 22-2 (Kearney Park), $79.96; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $84.98; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $90.78; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $77.04; and NC 22-6 (Newtown), $82.46. Overall average in the six housing areas was $81.48, it was reported.
In other business on a brief agenda, commissioners adopted a resolution approving the Authority's participation in the city's newly organized group health insurance plan.
Ken Noland, director of operations for the Authority, said that in the past the agency has had satellite participation in the city's Blue Cross and Blue Shield health insurance package. The city is leaving Blue Cross and Blue Shield in favor of a self-insured program, Noland said, and it is felt that the best course of action for the Housing Authority to take is to participate in the new city plan.

Commissioners endorsed a recommendation by the staff to begin turning over difficult tenant rent collection accounts to the local collection agency. Joe Laney, executive director of the Authority, said collection attempts will still be made although the Authority has had poor results in efforts to collect some of the outstanding tenant debts.
In a related matter, tenant accounts receivable for the year involving some $6,762 in uncollected rents were charged off. Noland said that the uncollected accounts amount to less than one percent of the overall rent total.
Bids for the replacement of roofs on 72 units in Kearney Park and Meadowbrook will be opened Sept. 15, it was reported. Kearney Park and Meadowbrook are the two oldest housing developments in the city.
Commissioners approved a revision in the agency's travel policy, increasing mileage paid for private vehicles from 17 cents to 25 cents per mile.
Laney said that Faye Brewington, who has served as real estate officer and has been involved in Community Development business for the Redevelopment Commission, has resigned to take a position with the city.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax increases could be proposed to help President Reagan reach his economic goal of a balanced budget by 1984, but they would include "no big revenue producers," an administration official says.
The official said Tuesday that while Reagan is unlikely to seek boosts this year in excise levies on products such as tobacco and alcohol, other increases are "not entirely out of the pale of possibility."
The official, asking not to be identified, added that any tax-raising plan proposed by the administration "would not alter the imperative of making more cuts" in the federal budget.
Reagan today was continuing a round of meetings with key economic advisers and Cabinet members as they reviewed the economy with the aim of reaching decisions by next week on budget targets for 1983 and 1984.
David R. Gergen, Reagan's assistant for communications, said the advisers were unanimous Tuesday "in urging that he hold the line on federal spending; that he stick to his course in holding the deficit to $42.5 billion in 1982; and that he bring the budget into balance by 1984."
Those goals "certainly" remain possible, said Gergen, adding that "the president has not abandoned his desire" to hold the deficit for the year beginning Oct. 1 to $42.5 billion, although some experts have said it is more likely to be $60 billion without additional spending cuts.
Gergen also said Reagan told the advisers he would stick by his campaign statement that if faced with a choice between balancing the budget and spending what was necessary to maintain national security, the balanced budget would take second place.
The New York Times today quoted administration sources as saying that Reagan told his advisers he wanted additional spending cuts of from $10 billion to $15 billion for fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1.
One avenue explored by Reagan and three congressional allies Tuesday was enacting a law permitting the president to defer spending authorized by Congress, according to a participant, House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.
"The president could make, himself, a 10 percent reduction in any one line item, no more than that, or eliminate any programs," Michel said, suggesting that such impoundment authority could be limited to one year.
Senate Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., added: "I think there is a fair possibility that we might adopt some sort of temporary impoundment or deferral authority that the president could exercise in case of budget overruns. That would put the burden squarely on the president to do that, but I think the president is willing to accept that responsibility."
Before meeting with his economic advisers Tuesday, Reagan said his proposal to cut "somewhere in the neighborhood of $70 billion" from the fiscal 1983 and 1984 budgets "hasn't changed at all."
Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said no decisions were likely to result from Reagan's scheduled meeting today with a defense budget planning group.
The president is considering three options for trimming Defense Department spending, according to Speakes.
The Washington Post reported today that one of the options is to raise the defense budget less than has been proposed through 1984 and then increase it to higher-than-proposed levels.

HANDICAPPED ACCESS FEEDBACK

I was impressed with the Hotline item a while back about how important designated handicapped parking is to someone permanently or temporarily handicapped. Thus, I was acutely conscious of and indignant about seeing a young man in a wheelchair at Pitt Plaza have to wheel himself considerable distance out of his way because a ramp from parking lot to walkway was blocked by the rear end of a delivery truck. The truck driver may not have even noticed that ramp, but its being available for his use was vitally important to that young man. All of us a.b.'s (able-bodieds) should train ourselves to be more aware of these ramps and other needs of our fellow man. C.H.

Dear Abby

Grandma Reuniter Meant Well But Used Poor Judgment

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have two fine grandsons, 20 and 22. Their mother (my daughter) divorced their father (I'll call him George) when the boys were 2 and 4. She married a wonderful man who raised the boys like they were his own flesh and blood. The boys loved him, but they always knew that he was their stepfather. There was no contact between the boys and their real father after the divorce.

Anyway, the boys were curious about their "real" father, so about a month ago I found out where he was living and I went to his house.

I rang the bell and a young woman came to the door. She said she was his wife, and when I told her who I was, she said George wasn't home but she would have him call me.

Well, he never called, so last Sunday when the boys were over I asked them how they would like to meet their real father. They were very excited about it, so we drove over. The boys sat in the car and I rang the bell. George came to the door, and when I tried to tell him that his sons were in the car and wanted to meet him, all he said was, "Please get off my property!" Then he shut the door.

Abby, how could a father do this to his own sons after not seeing them for 18 years?

Now I feel guilty because the boys were hurt. Their mother doesn't know anything about this visit. Please give your opinion of this matter.

GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: If the "boys" (who, by the way are men at 20 and 22) wanted to meet their real father, they should have had a third party contact him to find out whether he wanted to meet them. I agree, it's hard to understand how a father would have no interest in meeting his own sons, but for them to have gone unannounced and uninvited to his home was an invasion of his privacy. Even though you meant well, Grandma, you used poor judgment.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago you advised GEORGE FROM GEORGIA to offer his collection of interesting old letters to family or friends instead of torching them. But what if there still are no takers?

Many universities as well as local and state historical societies collect personal and business letters, snapshots, scrapbooks, postcards, memorabilia, diaries, etc. The lives of ordinary people are attracting more genealogists, social historians and other researchers than ever before. Many of our best stories lie forgotten in attic boxes. Most will be destroyed.

So please tell people to call a librarian or archivist before deciding what's not worth saving. They'd love to be snowed with telephone inquiries.

All that clutter is not mold.

DAVE REDMON,

DEAR DAVE: Pity you'll never know how much history will be preserved as a result of your letter. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: My sister died last week. Now the question: Is the husband of my deceased sister still my brother-in-law? I say that he is no longer any relation to me, but I seem to have some opposition to this. What do you say? Thanks a lot.

NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: The husband of your deceased sister is now your former brother-in-law.

America's Waking Up To Seafood Pleasures

By TOM HOGE

AP Wine and Food Writer
On the worldwide scale of seafood consumers, America ranks near the bottom. But that may change.

For example, there is a small seafood cannery which for four decades was little known outside the Connecticut village where it operates. Today the plant is doing business nationwide.

When the late Ernest Abbott ran this plant in Noank, Conn., his additive-free chowders and chopped clams had an enthusiastic audience in Connecticut and Rhode Island. But that was about it.

Then, in November 1979, John Laundon mortgaged his house to raise a down payment on the cannery and began looking for clients outside Abbott's area. Armed with a vacuum bottle full of clam fritter batter or seafood chowder, he soon won attention by showing among other things that clam hors d'oeuvres could be made in minutes at a cost of about 5 cents per fritter.

Today Laundon's fritter mix, chowders, bisques, seafood sauces and other concentrates are selling to restaurants, race tracks, schools, hotels and other institutions on a wide scale. Customers are attracted, he believes, by the time-saving factor and the fact that his products contain no artificial flavors or preservatives.

Laundon, who is 40, has surrounded himself with a youthful team of helpers. One of the most enthusiastic is 24-year-old Nick Greenfield, director of marketing, who believes there is "an incredible growth potential" for seafood.

"In the 1940s," he points out, Americans averaged only 3 to 4 pounds of chicken a year. Today the average domestic consumption is 48 pounds per person. This should also work with seafood, which now averages only 13 pounds per person annually.

I tried an 8-ounce can of clam chowder concentrate that Greenfield brought to my house. Adding a small can of tomatoes, a diced potato, a little white wine and some water, we made more than one quart of tasty Manhattan chowder in less than half an hour.

Here's the recipe for clam fritters based on Abbott's clam fritter concentrate,

Boot Choices In Fall Fashion

NEW YORK (AP) — Choices — that's what boots are about this fall, according to Andrea Rosen, fashion director for the Footwear Council. Bright rubber galoshes and deluxe dress-up boots are featured side by side with sleek, clean classics, detailed for drama with fringes, metallic decorations and embroidery touches.

"Fall boot fashions offer a wide variety of styles and textures to suit every taste and budget," says Ms. Rosen. "When properly fitted and cared for, your boots will wear well and feel great all season long."

This season there's a boot to complete every look in your wardrobe, she notes. Detailing is all-important for fashion boots; they feature such ornamentation as metallic studs and underlays, fancy lacing and intricate embroidery.

All-weather boots in quilted nylon, rubber or suede faced with lush fleece linings are rugged and comfortable, and come in a kaleidoscope of primary colors from traffic light reds, greens, and yellows to shiny neon blues.

Other favorite fall colors are deep lodens and olive greens, rich paprika, eggplant and russet — newcomers to the traditional neutrals family of browns, blacks and wines. Newest of all are the metallics — bronze, gunmetal and pewter, fashionable for day and evening.

Pancake-flat boots with cavalier cuffs that show off textured legwear are new for business and casual wear. For classic country fashion, riding boots are handsomely styled in deep burnished leathers with straight knee-high shafts and low, practical heels.

"Comparison shopping is the best way to select the right boots," Ms. Rosen advises. "There are good choices in all price ranges; how much you spend depends on your personal tastes and priorities as well as your budget."

Durability is an advantage of "inexpensive" ($50 and under) boots, she says. Machine-made with uppers of vinyl, polyurethane and side leather, these boots are easy to clean and will not scuff or scratch; sturdy bottoms and heels of synthetic materials or rubber ensure good wear in stormy weather.

Moderately priced boots ($50-$90) offer a wider range of colors and sizes than less expensive boots and styling similar to the more expensive designer names. Uppers are made of better-quality cowhide, kidskin or nappa leather, and lined with synthetic materials or fleece look-alikes. Boots in the moderate price range are usually machine-made and wear well with proper care.

Handcrafted with fine stitching and detailing, expensive ($100 and over) boots are featured in the latest colors, textures and designer styles; soft, lightweight uppers in delicate calfskin, kidskin and suede combine with quality leather soles and heels to create exclusive looks in dry-weather fashion.

Once you've narrowed down the choices, take time to test out the boots in the store to be sure they fit properly, Ms. Rosen urges. Try on both boots wearing socks or stockings of the same thickness you intend to wear with the boots. Wiggle your toes and check to see that there is about a half-inch of space from your longest toe to the front of the foot.

Walk around in the store for a while to make sure the boots are comfortable. Heels should fit with a minimum of slippage; if the boots are too loose, your feet will slip and slide, causing fatigue, blisters and skin irritation.

Parents' Home Wedding Scene

Rachel Ann Jensen of Greenville and Ralph Saunders Harrison of Stokes were married on the lawn of the bride's parents Friday, Aug. 28, at 7:00 p.m.

Conducting the double-ring ceremony was A.E. Brown.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Earl Jensen of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Mamie Harrison of Washington, N.C. and Mr. Earl Harrison of Suffolk, Va.

Gail Susan Jones of Lumberton was maid of honor and William Earl Harrison, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Miss Jones wore a floor-length gown dotted gold and white. She carried a miniature of the bridal bouquet.

The bride wore an ivory floor-length garden dress made of chanting linen with bodice trimmed with seed pearls. She wore a crown of baby's breath in her hair and carried a bouquet of purple and yellow pansies and baby's breath.

A reception was given at the wedding site by the bride's parents. Guests were greeted by Mrs. Alma Odum of Raleigh, Mrs. Suzie Smith of Washington, Mrs. Peggy

Goode of Rocky Mount, and Mr. and Mrs. Reid Odum of Greenville. Music was provided by Leonard Lesterson of Ludington, Mich. The couple will live in Stokes. The bride is an employee of the Pitt County Board of Education; the bridegroom, a student in radiologic technology at Pityt Community College.

How many uses are there for baking soda? Literally, dozens! For each traditional use you can think of—as a leavening agent in baked goods, a deodorizer in your refrigerator, etc.—there are probably at least two more that are "news". Here are a few:

- During the summer when your fireplace is not in use, place an opened box of baking soda in the corner to help eliminate the "smokey" odors. Camouflage the box behind logs, a plant or a bouquet of dried flowers.
- While its main purpose is to eliminate odors, the opened box in your refrigerator and freezer can serve another purpose—extinguish grease fires. Keep the box on the door of the unit for easy access. Even in your freezer, the baking soda is just as effective when placed on the door rather than on the inside in keeping foods, ice cubes, and ice cream fresh tasting.
- To extinguish an electrical or grease fire, first turn the heat off. Then grab the already opened box and toss handfuls of baking soda into the base of the flames. When heated, baking soda releases carbon dioxide, which quickly smothers flames. Do not use baking soda on deep fat fires. The grease could splatter, spreading the fire. Instead, cover the pan with a lid, cutting board, or wet towel.
- While you're cooking on the outdoor grill keep an open box of baking soda within easy reach to quickly extinguish grease fires and flare-ups. And after cooking, sprinkle it over coals to safely and cleanly put out the fire.

—Save energy and water by operating your automatic dishwasher only when it's completely full. Between washings, toss several handfuls of baking soda into the bottom of the machine to eliminate odors.

—Add a sprinkling (several tablespoons) of baking soda to your dishwasher. It will boost the power of the detergent and help to cut grease. For stubborn spots, sprinkle baking soda on a damp sponge; scrub, rinse and dry.

—When there's no time for a bath, dry-clean your dog. Rub dry baking soda into your pet's fur, then brush it through. Baking soda cleans and deodorizes your pet naturally. It's a natural food product itself, so is safe to use around pets. If you do bathe your pet, add a ½ cup baking soda to the water to neutralize odors, removing the "doggy smell".

—To clean and remove stale, stubborn odors from ice buckets, vacuum bottles and coolers, whip the inside with a baking soda solution (4 tablespoons mixed with 1 qt. warm water). For extra hard-to-remove odors, let the baking soda solution stay overnight.

—Get straight to the source of many kitchen odors—clean and deodorize the sink drain. Sprinkle baking soda on a damp sponge and scrub the outside of the drain, rim and safety screen as well. A weekly dose (about 1 cup) poured down the drain will keep it clean and fresh smelling. In addition, it will help to prevent septic tank problems. Baking soda creates a favorable pH environment for better sewage digestion, helping to prevent corrosion, odors, clogging and backing up.

—To help relieve the pain from insect bites and stings apply a baking soda paste (3 parts baking soda to 1 part water) to the affected area. Baking soda neutralizes irritating acids that cause itching, too.

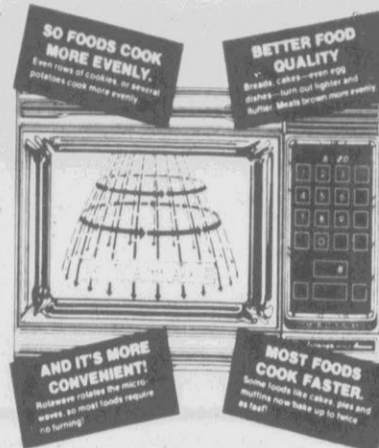

—Deodorize after stomach upsets. Immediately after an accident occurs, sprinkle the baking soda, completely covering the accident area. Baking soda eliminates strong odors making clean-up more pleasant. After cleaning the area with warm soapy water, rinse it with a baking soda solution (4 tablespoons dissolved in 1 qt. of warm water). For dried stubborn spots, sprinkle baking soda on a damp sponge; scrub, rinse and dry.

Needs A Barnum Touch

The concept of enticing North Carolinians to tour their own scenic and historical treasures is a good one; and the N.C. Dept. of Commerce is wholly correct in targeting Tar Heels who, because of travel costs, are cutting down on annual trip mileage. The idea is not new, but deserves new emphasis.

It brings to mind related thoughts. Just two-score miles from where we sit is the renovated colonial palace and colonial homes in New Bern.

One cannot imagine the mind-expanding impact of that tour unless they have themselves shared it. And yet, as the people at the office there will tell you, there are thousands of Craven Countians who have not visited that labor of love (like New Yorkers who never see the Statue of Liberty?); and, of course, a host of Pitt Countians who have occasionally promised themselves "someday" they'd visit Tryon Palace, but never got around to it.

Truly, the tour should be part and parcel of teaching history to every child within 200 miles of New Bern, and a required pilgrimage for adults.

P.T. Barnum would have drawn the world if Tryon Palace had been among his exhibits. "See for yourself," he would boom, "absolute proof the people of the 18th century were much smaller than we of today.

"Marvel at the practicalities of life in colonial America ... entwined with the beauty and cultural riches of a civilization long gone. Best of all, see for yourself their way of life recreated as you would never know unless you had been there!"

Old P.T. would have a field day. There are other spectacular historic exhibits in western Carolina (Winston-Salem comes to mind), which erase old mental images of crudities in early American life, replacing them with an appreciation of their crafts and adaptation of beauty with obvious links to the culture of families who chose to stay in the east.

Of course, there are other locales that have recaptured and preserved fragments of our heritage ... but, have you seen them? Have you co-related them in your mind's eye into the marvelous whole?

In-state tourism is a mini-goldmine, not only for communities playing show-and-tell, but for those who pause to see and hear.

This autumn, will we see you in the mountains gaping at the fall colors?

Not worth the time and effort? Don't knock it if you haven't tried it!

SO MUCH DEPENDS ON THE POINT OF VIEW!

The Briefing Of Watts

Secretary of Interior Watt's press person was briefing him for a news conference. "So what do you think they'll ask me?" Watt wanted to know.

"Here is one question you may get. 'If a tree falls in the forest and nobody hears it, did it really make a sound?'"

"One of our trees, or one of theirs?" the secretary wanted to know.

"Let's assume it was a tree on government property."

"What's a tree doing on government property?"

"For the sake of argument, let's say it was located in a national park."

"Why are we allowing trees to grow in our national parks? How are we ever going to find oil and coal if we have foliage all over the area?"

"I don't think that's the question," the press person said.

"I beg to differ with you," Secretary Watt replied. "My job as secretary of the Interior is to see we don't have too many trees cluttering up our forests. It discourages private investors from exploiting our natural resources. I don't have anything against trees personally, but I don't like to see them romanticized and used by the environmentalists as a lobbying weapon against private industry."

"Mr. Secretary, I couldn't agree with you more; but besides the environ-mentalist's point of view, they don't have to pay to keep them up. It comes out of my budget, not theirs. Now if we could lease the park lands to oil companies and mining consortiums, the royalties would pay for the trees, and the burden wouldn't be on the taxpayer."

"That's true. But some people are afraid that once you start leasing public land to the private sector they'll cut down every tree in sight."

"I never heard of anything so ridiculous. I just came back from Appalachia, and I saw trees there."

"That's so. But we still haven't answered the question as to whether the fallen tree made a sound or not."

"Why don't we turn the question to our advantage?" the secretary said. We could point out if the land was leased to a paper company, then there would be somebody there to hear if the tree fell or not — and he wouldn't even be on our payroll."

"That's not a bad idea. The environmentalists couldn't attack us for that. After all it wasn't the Interior Department's fault that the tree fell."

"At the same time I think I should make it clear that if someone pushed it over I'm not going to make a big deal of it."

"Of course not. A secretary of the Interior never should." (c) 1981, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

Grumble At A Bad Image

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Senior officials in the administration grumble that coast-to-coast commuting during President Reagan's August vacation constituted blatantly wasteful government spending, reflecting a general lack of interest in setting an example at top levels of the Reagan team.

The worst case came when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and budget director David Stockman traveled west in an Air Force courier jet for a meeting on defense spending. Weinberger, a Californian, went to his San Francisco home after the meetings in Southern California. While the plane stayed in California to await Weinberger's return, another Air Force jet was deadheaded west to pick up Stockman and return him.

Cost of a courier roundtrip: $15,000 in fuel alone. To some insiders, the profligate expenditure on such flights shows a mindset in the White House oblivious to personal cost-cutting.

No Mercy From Reagan President Reagan's resistance to advice that he rehire some striking air traffic controllers is being buttressed by the 6,000 controllers who refused to walk off the job.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, in personal checks with more than 200 key air traffic control stations around the country, was told with brutal candor by controllers who did not walk off the job: There will be "real trouble" if any strikers are rehired. Those who stayed will refuse to work beside the erstwhile strikers.

The only exception to that ban are some 200 strikers who wrote letters to the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) soon after the strike began saying that they had been coerced or harassed by the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) into walking off the job. Their cases are being examined, and many will be rehired.

A Wheeler-Dealer's Return Dwayne O. Andreas, a famed wheeler-dealer from bygone days, reappeared unexpectedly to confront budget director David Stockman at a closed-door political reception in Springfield, Ill., with a series of proposals to help gasoline production by his Archer Daniel Midland grain trading firm.

Andreas has been out of the limelight since getting in hot water over political contributions to both Hubert H. Humphrey and Richard M. Nixon. But he came down from his home in Minneapolis and paid $500 to attend a Sept. 1 political fund-raiser for a gasohol enthusiast, Republican Rep. Paul Findley of Illinois, with Stockman as the star attraction. Unlike most other events on Stockman's tour, the Springfield reception was closed to the press.

Andreas, an intense and articulate political veteran, pleaded for restrictions on competing ethanol and sugar imports. But Stockman said no, arguing that the Reagan economic program was based on general recovery rather than "parochial" help for individual industries.

Reagan's Coattail Test Ronald Reagan will test his presidential coattails for the first time in two fund-raising events in Richmond Sept. 24 for State Attorney General Marshall Coleman, the Republican nominee for governor against Democratic lieutenant governor Chuck Robb.

Reagan has hinted at a second appearance for Coleman later in the campaign before the Nov. 3 election if needed.

He is, therefore, putting his prestige squarely on the line in a close race.

The Richmond engagement will feature Reagan at a $100-a-head "rally" for 1,200 of the party faithful, followed by a cozy dinner party for 100 couples that evening — at a high-rise $2,500 per couple. If Reagan's further help is needed, it might be linked to his scheduled appearance at the Yorktown, Va., bicentennial Oct. 24 to celebrate the British surrender in the Revolutionary war.

Teddy's Dog Days

Blue-collar Democrats have lost their love of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, at least for now, but find former vice president Walter F. Mondale still to their liking.

The decline of Kennedy showed up starkly in our interviews in blue-collar New Jersey suburbs of Philadelphia last week. Kennedy seems sure of re-election next year in Massachusetts, but our interviews point to trouble on the national front if he again should seek the Democratic presidential nomination.

Asked the routine question whether they have a "favorable" or "unfavorable" opinion of Kennedy, more than half of the voters who voted the Democratic ticket in 1980 said unfavorable. In contrast, Mondale was given a 3-to-1 favorable rating.

Crossings Planning Needed

Railroads are changing rather than disappearing in our nation.

A Sunday article told of the taking up of Seaboard Coastline tracks through Hobgood, once a bustling rail center.

At the same time train traffic is heavier through Greenville and Pitt County and the tracks here have been re-built.

Rail service is essential to economic development of any county or municipality. Consequently the longer trains which travel through Greenville can be as much a blessing as an inconvenience.

Nevertheless it is essential that we begin planning for better ways to handle both train and vehicular traffic. We need more crossings guarded by gates and flashing lights. We need to plan for overpasses on certain busy thoroughfares. These things are expensive, but they are going to be necessary in the years ahead.

Political Changes?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There may be just a wind rustling the leaves at this time, but that breeze could blow in a storm of political change for North Carolina in coming years.

The question pivots around separation of powers in government, and accountability for actions of those in elective, appointive, and employed positions.

Evidence is strong that the courts (judicial) are too much involved in making law rather than settling disputes; that lawmakers (legislative) allow governmental bureaucracies and special interest groups to determine directions; and that the governor (executive) builds an overpowering political machine to control as much as possible.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles thinks North Carolinians need to take notice of several winds of change currently blowing so that informed decisions can be made as the situation matures.

Concerns
In a review of those impending changes in direction, Boyles touched on the matter of succession in the state's two highest offices, power struggles within and without

We may be just on the verge of seeing some definite changes in our present way of operating — with the central issue falling squarely on the question of separation of powers," Boyles commented in a speech to a Raleigh civic club the other day.

To the editor:

It really is fortunate that the incoming students to ECU evidently do not have any parking or traffic problems in and around the areas from which they come, so traffic safety has not been a problem or hazard for them in the past. But, with an influx of 8,000-12,000 people and 5,000 to 8,000 automobiles, motorcycles, bicycles, etc. into East Greenville and all of them converging on the ECU campus and a five-six block radius of the campus in three-five days (both ECU and Greenville City School beginning 1981-82 school year), the students need to converge on the planning committee of ECU and their own state representatives to provide high-rise on-campus parking decks at ECU. Too much time, concern and effort has gone into traffic regulations and traffic safety for the Police Department and city of Greenville to be "raked over the coals." Many of these "ticketed" and "towed" park on lawns, in driveways, block driveways — I could go on and on.

And last but not least, it is a shame these persons having their vehicles "towed away" can't read. Entering a university of advanced learning, these students can't read "NO PARKING."

We of East Greenville welcome the students and families of ECU school year people, but we as permanent residents deserve consideration for driving and walking safety and for our property.

Let each of us help avoid traffic accidents.
Ed Smith

To the editor:

I read in Hotline the other evening about the students' cars being towed away. Well, I haven't had one towed yet, but it may come to that. Most of the time I can't drive into my own driveway without driving in my neighbor's yard. You guessed it — I live near a fraternity.

The article stated the students did not have the money to pay to get their cars back. Well, it's funny to me they have plenty to buy barrels and barrels of beer to have their all-night parties.

I think it's time the officials of the City of Greenville realize that the homeowners are permanent residents and the students are here and gone tomorrow. A lot of my friends are moving to other cities or states. No, I don't mean to mistreat the students, for the college is great for our city. I just feel the police and officials should not give in and let the students take over the city.

I admire the police and officials that help us out when needed. All we ask is to live in a normal, peaceful community.

The Gap Between Young, Old

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The United States has enough problems to worry about without bringing up still another.

But to observe that an economic gap grows wider between young and old is not to bring up a problem but to recognize one that has been festering for years, tolerated in part because of familial civilities.

The pattern emerges in several ways; just two of them make the point:

The older generation receives regular annual increases in Social Security benefits; the younger generation is compelled to pay a rising Social Security tax to support the payments.

Older property owners, no matter what has been said about the adverse effects of inflation, have benefitted from seeing market values rise; younger people often cannot afford to buy because of those high prices. If age and economic patterns were stable, the problem might continue to be tolerated with little criticism and little prospect of a rebellion, but the gap grows in two ways:

First, Social Security benefits are indexed. That is, they rise with the consumer price index. Some critics say the benefits rise faster than increases in beneficiaries' costs of living.

Next, the ratio of workers to retirees is changing, in part because life expectancy has increased nearly 10 years since 1940. In 1940, only 7 percent of the population was 65 or over. By 1980 the percentage was 11. By 2030 it seems destined to reach 18 percent of population.

Another factor, inflation, is involved as cause and effect.

By some estimates, one additional percentage point of inflation adds at least $1.5 billion to indexed programs, making it more difficult to balance the budget, and therefore reduce upward pressure on prices.

The converging pressures seem destined to produce a break in the good relations that have existed between young and old. Increasingly, the young sense they are being deprived. How long will they tolerate it?

The deprivation is most glaringly illustrated by the inability of young people to purchase homes — not just homes such as those in which their parents reared them, but smaller, less commodious models.

The dilemma is well known: The young couple saves to make the downpayment on a house; the house, meanwhile, rises in value beyond their means. Moreover, high interest rates rule out further borrowing.

How long will the situation be tolerated? President Reagan might have to come to grips with it before long. In fact, it can be said he has already begun by improving tax advantages for those who invest in their own retirement, thus relieving some pressure on Social Security.

A select group of housing and finance officials already is studying the housing problem and is expected to report to the President early next year, perhaps recommending some new financing techniques.

permitted in North Carolina as Gov. Jim Hunt serving as the first two-term governor and Jimmy Green as the first two-term lieutenant governor, the "Novelty of having a new man in the governor's chair is gone, and the power struggle is on" not just involving the Governor's Office, but lieutenant governor and speaker of the house as well.

Till now, the different personalities involved have pretty much remained on the same track despite minor conflicts and differences. "But it will not surprise me if we see some fairly radical changes in a number of our established patterns of thinking within the next few years. The idea of succession itself may be in for serious re-analysis. There are those who want to repeal it and substitute a single six-year term. The idea of a four-year term for legislators seems to be gaining support, and this may also be the established pattern for the future."

Boyles sees much confusion down the road in what he terms the very dangerous precedent of splitting a county into two districts in congressional redistricting.

Leaders

Then, there is the matter of character and accountability among government leaders. "In the past, we have depended upon the unique characteristics of strong political leaders. Now, however, I think we see the picture changing. Political scandals and defaults in performance are now more evident than they have been for many years. In many cases, we have been failing to attract the people of the greatest character and ability to careers in public office... we need to devote more attention to attracting more top-flight people to careers in politics and government," Boyles observed.

As for the 1981 General Assembly, Boyles summed it up this way: "I found it a most difficult group to get a handle on... there were many new faces... the power structure appeared to be more concentrated... a greater tendency to operate in isolation. There emerged a new group called "the leadership" and in the minds of some people their relationships and attitude toward the rank-and-file membership raises some very interesting questions."

Above all, though, Boyles thinks it critical that each branch of government play its proper role.

When your hand contains an unpleasant surprise for declarer, it is shrewd tactics to make any strategic move before he finds out the bad news. Consider this hand from a recent national team championship.

South became slam minded as soon as North made a jump rebid. When North later supported spades, the partners cue-bid their red aces before South settled in the small slam.

West gave considerable thought to the opening lead. He knew that declarer was not expecting to lose a trump trick, but that expectation was in for a rude jolt. However, declarer's trump loser would be more than offset by the favorable location of the king of clubs. Poised as it was in front of dummy's long suit, declarer would be able to pick up the king with the help of a finesse and use dummy's clubs for all the discards he might need. In an effort to convince declarer that a club finesse would be hazardous, West selected the eight of clubs as his opening salvo!

Consider the hand from declarer's point of view. It seemed that he had no loser anywhere except for clubs. To take the finesse at trick one would result in immediate defeat if the opening lead were a singleton—East would win the king and give his partner a ruff. So declarer went up with the ace of clubs and led a spade. When East showed out, declarer had no way to avoid losing a trick in each black suit.

To appreciate the subtlety of the opening lead, consider what would have happened had West chosen to lead a red suit. Declarer would have won and led a high spade to learn that he had a sure trump loser. He would have been forced to take the club finesse for his contract, and the slam would have rolled home.

Millionaires Like Prosperity

By RICK HAMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They gather once a year in places like the Rainbow Room or Tavern-on-the-Green to compare investments, complain about taxes and recall the days when they used to worry about bills, rents and jobs — the days before they became instant millionaires.

The Millionaires Club's weighty tab for food, drink and entertainment is picked up by the state of New York, because each of its 51 members has won at least $1 million in the state lottery.

In their annual attempt to show that the average citizen can hit the jackpot — and to discredit the notion that instant wealth brings trouble — lottery officials showed off 28 members of the exclusive club to reporters Tuesday evening at Tavern-on-the-Green, a posh restaurant in Central Park.

"You are walking, living proof of the kind of luck that can come to any man or woman," lottery spokesman George Yamin told the 28. "You are the best evidence of the success of the New York State lottery."

As cameras rolled and pens scratched, the new millionaires used virtually the same phrases and expressions to describe their contented post-jackpot lives: "a feeling of security," "life is the same, but more comfortable," and so forth.

Many bought new cars, many went South during the winter. No one invested in swamps or the Brooklyn Bridge. No one gave it all away, no one blew it all. No one's brother-in-law came begging for a loan.

In fact, the main impression was that coming into a million was a little boring.

"The news media expects you to be some kind of wild-eyed idiot," said Aaron "Dixie" Bellen, a 52-year-old used-car buyer from Queens.

"I thought the guy from Channel 4 was going to cry when I said I hadn't run out and bought a 180-foot yacht."

Bellen did buy a Kentucky race horse, but he explained that he did not buy a yacht because he could not afford to.

Since his million comes in monthly installments over a period of years, he explained, there's no windfall and no opportunity to go hog-wild: "I look on it as a very fine raise, and a very fine retirement income."

CARS COLLIDE AT INTERSECTION — Four persons received minor injuries Tuesday afternoon in a collision outside Winterville. Trooper Kenneth Ross reported a car driven by Jimmy Lee McCotter, of Rt. 1, Ayden was crossing N.C. 11 when it pulled into the path of a car driven by Louise Gay May, of Maury. Two passengers in the McCotter vehicle identified as Willie Davis and Mary Davis were also reported injured. The investigator said the McCotter auto spun in the highway and struck a truck stopped at the intersection. The truck was reportedly driven by Billy Ray Harrellson, of Rt. 13, Greenville. Damage was placed at $600 to the McCotter vehicle, $1,000 to the May auto and $1,500 to the Harrellson truck. McCotter was charged with failure to see his intended move could be made in safety. Members of the Winterville Rescue squad responded to the 4:15 p.m. call. (Reflector Photo by Larry Zicherman)

Study Assembly TV Broadcasts

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina is studying the feasibility of broadcast coverage of state government, headed by a task force to be named by Gov. Jim Hunt.

"The new electronic era of satellites, cable television and computers provides an opportunity to make government activities and services available to every citizen," Hunt said in a prepared statement.

"This task force will include people with a variety of backgrounds and philosophies," Hunt said. "Among them will be legislators, journalists and educators. Their job will be to suggest how telecommunications technology can bring government closer to the people."

To kick off the study, the state Agency for Public Telecommunications has received a $10,500 grant from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation.

The task force will be examining coverage options, perhaps involving a cable television network or radio broadcasts.

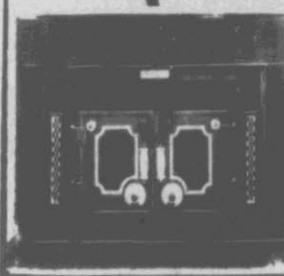

"We have an excellent open meetings law in North Carolina," Hunt said. "But if you don't live near Raleigh, the activities of state government, like the meetings of the Utilities Commission, the Arts Council or Ports Authority, are not always available to you."

Nursing Scores Still Fall Short

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Improved passing rates on July's state nursing licensing exam by graduates of three black University of North Carolina campuses still fall short of a mandate set by the UNC Board of Governors in 1977.

In a resolution issued then, the board said it would close the nursing programs at the three schools if at least two-thirds or 66.6 percent of the graduates in each program did not pass the exam on their first try.

Only eight of the 24 graduates of North Carolina A&T State University who took the test for the first time in July passed it, according to a report mailed to the schools by the state Board of Nursing.

The 33.3 percent pass rate is higher than the 19.3 percent passing rate on the July 1980 exam.

At Winston-Salem State University, seven of the 11 graduates who took the test passed. The 63.6 percent passing rate is higher than July 1980's 38.7 percent rate.

At North Carolina Central University, 13 of 23 graduates — 56.5 percent — passed in July, compared with 17.9 percent in July.

A&T and NCCU also face closing by the Board of Nursing if they do not upgrade their programs. The board has scheduled a December meeting to discuss the A&T problems.

UNC board chairman John R. Jordan Jr. of Raleigh said he was pleased all three schools had improved their passing rates, but was disappointed in A&T's low level.

Jordan said the UNC board does not want to close any nursing program.

City's Cleanup To Begin On Sept. 12

IN THE ANNUAL SPRING CLEANUP... A group of volunteers are shown here collecting litter along the streets and highways of North Carolina. The clean up week will continue until Saturday, September 19 with volunteers, local governments and state highway crews all joining in a concentrated effort.

Saturday, September 12 is the beginning date for the annual fall program of clean up litter along the streets and highways of North Carolina. The clean up week will continue until Saturday, September 19 with volunteers, local governments and state highway crews all joining in a concentrated effort.

Cleanup and Litter Control Committee is heading efforts inside the city limits.

Volunteers - individuals and groups, are being sought to take part in this widespread effort. Those interested, young or old, are asked to call 752-4137, extension 242 - the Public Works Department, for instructions on obtaining bags and having locations designated for them.

It was in 1971 that North Carolina began its fight against litter. In that year, a law was passed by the General Assembly in an effort to deter littering on North Carolina highways.

During the past decade, approximately 1,200 anti-litter signs were posted across the state by the Department of Transportation. Each year, over $1.5 million is spent annually in North Carolina on roadside litter control.

Boston Paper Going Tabloid

BOSTON (AP) - The Boston Herald American is switching from a broadsheet to a tabloid format beginning with Sunday's editions.

Publisher James T. Doris said in announcement in today's edition the newspaper spent months asking readers what kind of newspaper they wanted, and "they want to see this one."

Doris said the newspaper would have more graphics, more photographs, more color, will be easy to read and easy to handle.

No Sale, Yet

CINCINNATI (AP) - No agreement has been reached with any organization or individual on the possible sale of United Press International, according to the E. W. Scripps Co.

"We have had exploratory discussions with several media organizations, and these are continuing," Edward W. Estlow, president of the E. W. Scripps Co., said Tuesday.

The news agency's parent company made the statement in response to persistent rumors and speculation that UPI was about to be sold.

Reuters, the London-based news agency, has said it is actively considering buying UPI. Negotiations have been reported also between UPI and other organizations.

Scripps has been seeking a buyer for UPI or investors to provide new money. The news agency's deficit for 1980 was reported at $10 million.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you can express goodwill and are able to get together and work out personal problems with others. Make a point to maintain self-control and understanding of others.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You may feel sluggish early in the day but later can make up for lost time and accomplish a great deal. Be sensible.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) New projects appeal to you but they need more study before you jump into them. New contacts yield fine benefits now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make sure you carry through with promises made and you reap fine benefits from them. Show more affection for loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may not agree with the ideas of an associate, but think them over carefully for a better appraisal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Improving your surroundings now can add to your comfort and pleasure. Take time to improve your appearance. Be logical.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Express your finest talents and gain the support of higher-ups. Don't waste time with persons who have selfish interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study home conditions and clarify any problems there in a friendly fashion. Make your life as you want it to be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make it a point to contact persons who can give the advice you need to make greater progress in career matters.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Ideal day to handle monetary affairs and increase your security in the future. Give more attention to close ties.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can easily make an excellent impression on others at this time. Accept social invitations and dress in good taste.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Think over your ideas for the future and make plans to profit by them. Consult an expert for advice you need.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Good time to get together with friends and make mutual plans for the future. Take no chances with one who opposes you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she could be easily spoiled, so teach your progeny to stand on own two feet and make the most of the God-given talents. Would do well in the field of entertainment. Teach to set a goal and then to follow through.

France Moving To Nationalization

PARIS (AP) — Trading in shares of French firms on the new Socialist government's nationalization list was suspended on all French stock markets today at the government's request, the Paris Stockbrokers Association announced.

The association said the Finance Ministry requested the suspension until final details of the nationalization bill are worked out and it is approved by the Cabinet and sent to Parliament.

The action, affecting stock exchanges in Paris, Lyon, Bordeaux, Lille, Nancy and Nantes, apparently was taken to prevent speculation on the markets before the government's final plan for the takeovers is approved.

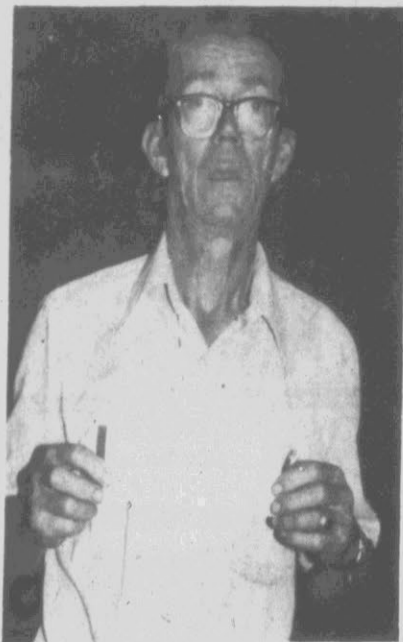

A draft measure for the eventual takeover of 11 major French firms and most of the remaining private banks was worked out during a Cabinet meeting last week. No details of how the nationalizations will be implemented or how the stockholders will be reimbursed has been revealed, however.

The Cabinet was putting the finishing touches on the bill today before sending it for review to the Council of State, the ultimate authority on constitutional issues.

After final Cabinet approval — set for next week — the bill will be introduced into the Parliament, where debate is expected to begin in October.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip - HOLIDAY PLEASURES EN-DURE IN HAPPY MEMORIES.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: H equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

Tough Bargainer

In meetings today, President Reagan hopes to persuade Israeli Prime Minister Begin to be flexible during upcoming Mideast peace talks. But Mr. Begin may be difficult to convince because his personal history has taught him that determination pays off. Begin fought against the British, Arabs, and even moderate Jews to establish Israel's independence. For 29 years he led conservative opposition to Israeli Labor governments. Finally, in 1977 after eight tries, he became Prime Minister. Earlier this year, he overcame strong opposition and ill health to win the right to form a new government. Many believe Begin interprets this victory as a mandate for his conservative policies - policies in which determination is a decided asset.

HAS RARE BLOOD — Factory worker Alvin Kress has a rare, sought-after commodity in his blood — a rare antibody that is used to determine other people's blood types. Because the antibody is in such short supply, for 23 years Kress has made twice-weekly trips to donate pints of blood plasma. He can donate that often because the red blood cells are reinfused in his bloodstream and plasma can be replaced within a day. (AP Laserphoto)

Community And Charity Gifts

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Greensboro Jaycees last year spent $57,774 — about a fourth of their budget — on community and charitable projects, Jaycee officials said.

The club's financial report for the fiscal year ending April 30 indicates that the Jaycees' money went for projects ranging from a destitute woman's $86 electrical bill to almost $16,000 spent to sponsor a Drum Majorettes of America contest.

The report shows that the Greensboro Jaycees, the largest chapter in the state with almost 600 members, had revenues of $235,260 last year and spent $202,870.

Freak Crash Kills Top Thunderbird

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP) — Stunned members of the U.S. Air Force Thunderbird precision flying team canceled a show and prepared to return to their base in Nevada after a freak jet crash killed their commander.

The T-38A Talon trainer jet piloted by Lt. Col. David L.

Smith hit a flock of birds Tuesday at Burke Lakefront Airport, causing the engines to "flame out" before the plane plunged to the runway and skidded into Lake Erie while leaving for a show in Texas, officials said.

Smith, 40, a native of Rossville, Ga., and decorated former Vietnam pilot who had flown more than 350 combat missions, was killed when his ejector-seat parachute failed to open. His crew chief, Staff Sgt. Dwight Roberts, 31, a native of Lexington, N.C., was injured slightly upon parachuting to the runway.

Air Force officials said an investigation of the crash would begin in several days and could take weeks to complete.

Capt. Jim Jannette, a spokesman for the Thunderbirds, said the precision flying team's eight jets, nine officers and 41-member crew planned to return to Nellis Air Force Base in Nevada to map out future air shows.

"We are professional. We have a job to do and we're going to do that job. That's what Colonel Smith would have wanted," Jannette said.

They had performed aerial acrobatics at the Cleveland Air Show over the weekend without incident. Smith's lead jet had taken off for a planned show in Texas today when the incident happened. The Texas exhibition has been canceled.

Officials said the supersonic aircraft was traveling at about 210 mph 50 feet off the airport's 6,200-foot main runway when it collided with the birds.

That caused the plane's engines to fall, said Gen. Wilbur L. Creech, commander in chief of the U.S. Tactical Air Command.

"It could have happened on any flight," Creech said by telephone from Langley Air Force Base, Va. "There's no indication of human error involved."

"He (Smith) reacted very quickly or he wouldn't have saved the life of the backseater. The backseater goes out first and Smith didn't have time," Creech said.

Smith ejected moments after Roberts. When his parachute did not open, Smith fell to the airport's rocky perimeter. Efforts to resuscitate him failed and he was dead on arrival at a local hospital.

Smith was the 14th fatality for the Thunderbird group since it began performing its popular air shows in 1953.

Smith, a 17-year Air Force veteran, had commanded the group since April 1979 and was scheduled for rotation to a new post next February. Smith's replacement, Maj.

Norm Lowry, had already been selected and will assume the leader's position soon, Jannette said.

Duke Students Argue Library

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Some 100 Duke University students met informally Tuesday to discuss the proposal to build a Richard M. Nixon presidential library on campus.

Although no vote was taken on the issue, the consensus of the 100 students attending the discussion was against the library, and many students voiced the same concerns aired by faculty members opposing the plan earlier this month.

"My concern is that, as people who have our names associated with Duke University, we need to educate ourselves about what has gone on," said Allison Porter, a senior from Washington.

Mary Margaret Graham, a senior from Houston, Texas, said she objected to the fact that some other presidential libraries had "turned into museums. Ninety-nine percent of the people are tourists who come to look at the president's gifts and pictures."

Representatives of the Duke faculty last week rejected the proposal by a one-vote margin, but their decision was later overruled by the executive committee of the Board of Trustees.

Those opposed to the proposal said they were afraid that the library would serve as a memorial to Nixon, who was not deserving of the tribute because he resigned from office in the wake of the Watergate revelations.

Those in favor said the library would provide a valuable repository for Nixon's papers, helping researchers in several fields. And they pointed out the added value of increased tourism attracted by the library.

Cliff Hendricks, however, a Duke freshman, said he thought the proposed library's value as a tourist attraction might have been overestimated.

"On the surface, tourism may seem to be good for Durham," he said. "But if you look more closely, you see it provides jobs like window washers and scrubbers — dead-end jobs."

The students who met Tuesday formed committees to spread discussion of the library throughout the student body and scheduled another meeting for tonight.

Extradition For Chief 'Pagan'

MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (AP) — The leader of the Pagans motorcycle gang is awaiting extradition to Pennsylvania after having his probation revoked, Surry County deputies said Tuesday.

Michael James Grayson, 36, has lived in Pilot Mountain for about a year. He was arrested Friday when he went to check with his probation officer about traveling out of the state.

Grayson is accused of violating probation by possessing a firearm, deputies said. He was convicted in Pennsylvania on charges of assaulting an off-duty police officer.

Fewer Visitors To Nat'l Park

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Great Smoky Mountains National Park recreational visits declined 3 percent in August from last August, park acting superintendent Jerry Eubanks said.

There were 1,367,600 visits this August compared to 1,410,200 last August, Eubanks said.

Job Agency Had Little Success

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Of 65 clients who paid a Charlotte-based employment agency $75 in hopes of getting a job, only four were placed, a state Labor Department survey revealed Tuesday.

The National Employer-Employee Directory, known as NEED, surrendered its license voluntarily following the survey, said Labor Department spokesman Ginny Lawler. That prompted the department to cancel a news conference scheduled for today in which the results of the survey would have been announced, she added.

The department began the survey "because we had received written complaints about the operation," said Ms. Lawler.

NEED had indicated a 98 percent placement rate in its application for license renewal in April, she said. The survey placed that rate at 6.15 percent.

The labor department also found that the bond the company must have to operate in North Carolina had expired, Ms. Lawler said.

School Strikes Affect Students Of Four States

By The Associated Press
School openings were delayed or threatened for thousands of students after public school teachers in Philadelphia, New Jersey and Michigan and parochial school teachers in New York went on strike.

Teachers in Boston's public schools have voted to strike, throwing today's start of school, already chaotic from budget-cutting layoffs and a decrease in enrollment, into more confusion.

San Francisco teachers reached a tentative agreement and said they would be in their classrooms when school opens Thursday if the membership approves the contract.

Fewer than 3 percent of the 21,000 member Philadelphia Federation of Teachers reported for work Tuesday, a day of preparation for the beginning of classes Thursday. The union represents 18,000 teachers.

The teachers walked off the job because the school board claims a $223 million deficit prohibits it from honoring a contract that ended last year's 22-day strike. The board said it must cut 3,500 jobs and withhold a 10 percent pay increase called for in the contract.

School district spokesman

Elliot Alexander said the district would decide today whether to open its schools on schedule for 213,000 public-school students.

A state mediator said there was little progress in talks between the teachers' union and the district.

"I don't want to imply any hint of progress. There was not," said Mayor William Green. "My reading of the situation, I can sum up, is grim." Green scheduled a meeting today to discuss school financing.

"We didn't want this strike, but the school board broke our contract and our members are irate," said PFT president John Murray. The school district has gone to court to prove its deficit claims, but the teachers, for whom the average salary is $24,443, refused to budge.

Seven school districts in Michigan, five of them in suburban Detroit, face strikes by teachers, the Michigan Education Association said.

MEA spokesman Harry Boyes said about 27,000 students were affected by the strikes in the Chippewa Valley, Fraser, Huron Valley and Madison Heights school districts, where classes were scheduled to begin Tuesday, and in Decatur and Sanilac County intermediate school districts, where teachers stuck last week.

Key issues are salaries and teacher layoff policies. Michigan teachers earned a statewide average salary in 1980 of $12,257 minimum and $20,065 maximum, the MEA says. All the striking teachers are affiliated with the MEA.

Boston schools open today, faced with a strike deadline of Sept. 21 set by teachers unhappy with layoffs and a wage freeze.

Boston officials fear enrollment will drop as parents choose parochial schools over public schools for their children. About 1,000 full-time teachers have been laid off because of budget cuts, and 27 of 160 schools were closed.

In New York, lay teachers at six parochial high schools went on strike Tuesday. Negotiators said 45 issues were unresolved, but salaries and workloads were the key points. Classes at one high school were delayed for 2,300 students while officials at the others, where 8,700 students were enrolled, said classes would begin today as scheduled.

More than 100 teachers walked off the job Tuesday in Penn Grove, N.J., over a dispute on a salary renegotiation. No new talks were scheduled, a mediator said.

Classes for 3,000 students were scheduled to begin Thursday.

Meat Probe

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The government says it will set up a royal commission to investigate the Australian meat industry.

The decision follows discovery of horsemeat in cartons labeled as containing beef intended for U.S. markets.

Primary Industry Minister Peter Nixon said the government was determined to clear the Australian meat industry's severely tarnished reputation.

Nixon also announced the government had decided to hire an independent consultant to conduct comprehensive review of new measures to control meat exports. He said the government will introduce legislation this week to increase penalties for illegal export of meat and false labeling.

Rep. Pepper Is Now 81

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., celebrated his 81st birthday by doing his job, something he believes too many people his age are forced away from by unfair laws.

Pepper chaired a three-hour hearing Tuesday in which people over 60 testified how working is important to them.

Pepper is the oldest member of the House and chairman of the Aging Committee. He used his birthday to announce he is beginning a new campaign "to once and for all wipe out the last destructive vestige" of age discrimination in the workplace.

"If we were to say who is to stop working, we would have to start right at the top. President Reagan is 70, you know," she said.

Pepper says he wants to pass a law making it illegal for employers to retire anyone solely because of age.

Three years ago, Pepper pushed through Congress a law which abolished mandatory retirement in the federal government and generally raise the allowable retirement age in private business to 70.

Know This ; It's Square Root Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — Today — 9-9-81 — is the final square root day of the 20th Century.

A holiday for no one and apparently lacking any organization to get it a red mark on the calendar, a square root day occurs when the number of the day and month multiply out to the last two digits of the year.

The last square root day came on Aug. 8, 1964. The next one will not occur until Jan. 1, 2001.

handled the preliminary design work for the plant — the 201 Sewer Facilities Plan — under a grant program which involved 75 percent federal funds, a 12½ percent State grant and a 12½ percent local match.

That plan, which was started seven years ago, was given final approval by State and Federal environmental agencies earlier this Summer after repeated delays caused by changes in federal guidelines and other government red tape. The plan was also approved for Step II (final design) funding at the same 75-12½-12½ percent rate. However, due to a recession of funds from the 1980 and 1981 fiscal years and an anticipated reduction in fiscal 1982, federal funds are unavailable.

In a memo to commissioners, Horne explained, "The steps taken to date have all been in accordance with Environmental Protection Agency and Division of Environmental Management requirements such that should grant funds become available during the Design Phase we would be eligible for partial funding considerations. However, it appears that if we wish to proceed with the final design phase now, it will most likely end up as 100 percent local funding."

Horne noted that if the commission wished to wait for federal and state participation for the design of the plant, it would be 1984 or 1985 before the final design could be completed. Moving ahead with local funding of the design phase, plans for the facility should be completed by 1983 and possibly place the project in a better position for grant assistance for construction.

In other business last night, the commission approved extensions of the Westside sewer outfall from the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center on N.C. 43 to secondary road 1204 at an estimated cost of $111,200, and an extension of the Fork Swamp sewer outfall from Evans Street to the White Road at an estimated cost of $209,000.

The commission also approved the purchase of public officials and employees liability insurance (errors and omissions) with a $3 million limit from Fickling Insurance Associates for an annual premium of $6,556.

As vice chancellor and dean, Brewer also chaired the University Council, was an ex officio member of the Faculty Senate, and was institutional representative for the Interuniversity Council. He also served on the Priorities Committee, which planned the TCU goals and objectives and as a member of the University Court, an internal court of last resort for student and faculty grievances.

Brewer's academic concentration and research activities have centered on U.S. Business History, particularly in the field of transportation history.

At the time of his appointment, TCU Chancellor J. M. Moudy, who nominated Brewer for the ECU post in August 1977, said "without a doubt, Dr. Brewer is a leader. He takes good initiatives and has good follow-through," and has shown, "vigor and imagination in creating and allowing participatory decision-making in ways that represent distinct advances over anything previously in effect at this university."

Moudy, who was dean of Atlantic Christian College in Wilson 20 years ago, added that Brewer's "goals are high and there is no doubt that he sees excellence as the ideal," and said Brewer "relates honestly and openly with others."

In announcing Brewer's appointment, UNC President William Friday said, "I believe he will provide East Carolina University the kind of quality leadership we shall need during the years immediately ahead."

And at the time of his appointment, Brewer said "to be named chancellor-elect of East Carolina University is indeed an honor, and I accept with a deep sense of humility."

"Universities are not buildings and grounds — they are people, and East Carolina is what it is today because of the dedication and accomplishments of faculty, staff, and students. Another important ingredient in that success is the spirited population of Greenville and Eastern Carolina, which loyally supports the university and its commitment to excellence."

Continuing, Brewer pledged his commitment for "new levels of excellence" in all areas of university life, and "to all the people who comprise the East Carolina community, I promise my every effort in our mutual quest for a continued dynamic, exciting, quality East Carolina University."

Seven months later, on October 28 when Brewer was formally installed as ECU Chancellor, he again pledged to pursue a "path of excellence" for the school. "But we want to do this with realism," he emphasized, adding "I ask all who will to join hands with us as we strive to create a university worthy of our heritage and consonant with our responsibilities. I ask that we together begin our journey toward full personhood for all those whom our influence touches."

"If we can do this, we can act with the spirit of one who is to lie down to pleasant dreams, for each of us can rest well, knowing that those who meet our students can say, in Shakespeare's words: 'there stands a man.'"

Two years after Brewer was installed as chancellor — in November, 1980 — it was learned that he had been interviewed for the presidency of the University of Louisville in Louisville, Ky.

And a week after Brewer's interview in Louisville, members of the UK search committee visited Greenville to interview more than 30 local area residents — including ECU faculty, staff, students, trustees and community leaders — in their effort to learn more about Brewer who was considered one of the top candidates for the post.

Brewer, who later withdrew his name from consideration, said at the time, "there have been no offers or negotiations ... and I need more information before I can determine my interest in the position. Meanwhile, my work for East Carolina continues without interruption."

"East Carolina is an excellent school which commands the loyalty of its many constituencies. It is an honor and privilege to serve as chancellor of this fine university."

Brewer's resignation, which he said is in the best interest of the university, resulted from a controversy over his application for the vacant president's job at West Virginia University in Morgantown, which came to light two weeks ago.

Seek To Prevent Baby's Surgery

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The parents of a 15-month old girl suffering from hydrocephalus say they will try to reverse an Oregon Court of Appeals decision that the baby must undergo brain surgery.

Arnold and Donna Jensen of Brownsville, both members of the Church of the First Born, believe in the healing power of prayer and do not see doctors or use medication.

The appellate court upheld a lower court's decision ordering the brain surgery for Sara Jensen. The three-judge panel decided to postpone the operation until Sept. 15 to allow the child's parents time to appeal.

Hydrocephalus is an accumulation of fluid on the brain.

making changes at East Carolina — eliminating some administrative positions and creating others that caused discontent on campus. He placed more emphasis on research and faculty writing, although he stressed in an interview earlier this year that he was not trying to turn ECU into a research school as such. But, he said, education — even for faculty — must not come to an end.

Brewer, 49, a historian who came to Greenville after serving as vice chancellor at Texas Christian University, created a large planning committee that has been in the process of developing long-range goals for ECU. Under his lead, alumni giving and other donations have increased and enrollment has maintained its steady growth.

But the administration has been plagued by controversy. In addition to the administrative-faculty changes, his role in ECU's athletic program gained national attention two years ago when football coach Pat Dye resigned after stating his objections to the Brewer administration in public interviews.

That was followed by the resignation of ECU athletic director Bill Cain and, more recently, the public fussing continued with the resignation of Thomas Willis as director of the East Carolina Regional Development Institute, which Willis founded and had led since its creation.

NCNB Gives To Symphony

CHARLOTTE — North Carolina National Bank has announced it will contribute $10,000 to the North Carolina Symphony to match a portion of a $50,000 challenge grant. The terms of the grant require that the Symphony match the gift on a two-for-one basis.

Announcement of the gift was made by Hugh McColl, vice chairman of the board and president of NCNB. "We very much hope that this commitment will prompt other banks and corporations to respond similarly, and to do so before the September 30 deadline of the challenge grant," McColl said.

In a letter to Nancy Faircloth, chairman of the N.C. Symphony, McColl offered his congratulations to her on having successfully resolved the problems of budget, the conductor and a union contract that appeared to have threatened the 1981-82 season of the Symphony.

Oil Cartel Is Shaken By Its Dwindling Influence

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The oil cartel once powerful enough to wreck the economies of the world's richest nations is sounding alarms about its fading influence on world oil markets. Saudi Arabia, the most powerful member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, warns that the higher prices of other member states are weakening the cartel and leading it to eventual destruction.

In an interview published Tuesday in two Saudi newspapers, Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani said unless OPEC halts the decline in its share of the world oil market, the organization would "collapse." Industry analysts interpreted Yamani's remarks as indicating a growing concern that Saudi Arabia may be forced to cut its price below its current $32 a barrel. Other members of the 13-nation oil cartel are charging as much as $40 a barrel. Those high prices, particularly among African producers, have persuaded oil-importing nations to improve conservation methods, boost domestic production and seek oil from such non-OPEC sources as Mexico and operators in the North Sea. As a result, production by OPEC has dropped to an estimated 20 million barrels a day from a 1979 peak of 31 million barrels a day. Yamani said some analysts believe OPEC output could fall as low as 15 million barrels daily in the early 1990s. "This would mean a collapse of the organization and a lot of economic hardships for Saudi Arabia which basically relies on its oil revenue," Yamani said. Yamani was not the first OPEC oil minister to express alarm at the cartel's sagging production. After the organization failed last month to achieve a uniform pricing policy in a meeting at Geneva, Switzerland, Libya Oil Minister Abdussalam Mohammed Zagaar declared, "OPEC is facing a crisis."

At that meeting, Saudi Arabia had offered to raise its price by $2, to $34 a barrel, if the others agreed to reduce their base prices to $34 a barrel. After the meeting broke up in disarray, Nigeria cut its prices $4 a barrel, to $36.

Since then, however, no other members have reduced prices, although industry executives say they expect Algeria and Libya — the only countries still charging $40 a barrel — to follow Nigeria's lead.

Yamani said he had learned Nigeria was planning further price reductions in the form of reduced royalties and income taxes on companies operating in that country.

Panel Takes Sounding Of Air Safety

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid continued reductions in flight schedules, a congressional panel is taking testimony on the status of the nation's air traffic control system in the wake of the firing of nearly 12,000 striking controllers.

Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis and Federal Aviation Administration chief J. Lynn Helms were among witnesses called to testify today at the opening of hearings by the House Government Operations subcommittee on transportation.

The FAA has kept the air traffic system going with about 8,000 non-union controllers, supervisors and military personnel — many of them working six-day weeks — while expanding its training of new recruits to replace many of the fired workers.

Although the controller force now is less than half the pre-strike level, airlines have been permitted to fly an average of 75 percent of their normal service, and many regional carriers are operating at levels exceeding 90 percent.

The airlines have been told to count on the 75 percent average for at least the next six months. Lewis has said it may take another year or more to complete the rebuilding of the control system.

The subcommittee was seeking details from Lewis and other government and industry officials on how the system is being monitored, how the rebuilding program will be accomplished and what the economic impact will be.

But not invited to appear during the two days of hearings were representatives of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, which began the illegal walkout Aug. 3, a few hours after contract talks with Lewis broke down.

The subcommittee's chairman, Rep. John L. Burton, D-Calif., said the panel wanted to examine the air traffic system "without reference to collective bargaining disputes."

And a subcommittee staff aide, David Caney, said: "We didn't see anything to be had from another replay of charge and countercharge."

Caney also noted that the striking controllers would be unable to give an up-to-date, first-hand account of the system's operation because they have been away from their radar screens and control towers for more than a month.

PATCO spokesman Patrick Doyle said the union had been consulted by the subcommittee and was not upset about being excluded from the witness list.

Pledge Probe Overseas Bribes

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's No. 3 official says the Reagan administration will prosecute executives who pay overseas bribes despite a decision to drop similar charges against four McDonnell Douglas Corp. officials.

Associate Attorney General Rudolph Giuliani said the charges against the McDonnell Douglas executives were dropped solely because the actions they were accused of taking occurred before a 1977 law prohibited overseas bribe payments.

The criminal charges were dropped Tuesday in exchange for the corporation's plea of guilty to 10 counts of an 11-count indictment and its agreement to pay more than $1.2 million in civil and criminal penalties.

The corporation and the four executives were indicted in November 1979 and accused of authorizing secret commissions to promote the sale of DC-10 jetliners to Pakistan and other countries.

The plea-bargain agreement was approved Tuesday by U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green after the arrangement was outlined to her by attorneys for the Justice Department and the aircraft manufacturer.

Giuliani was asked in an interview Tuesday if other corporate officials might escape prosecution as did the McDonnell Douglas officials. "No," he replied.

"If the violation occurred after the 1977 Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, we will prosecute the corporations plus the individuals who violated," he said. "There isn't the slightest bit of doubt about it."

"These actions (by McDonnell Douglas officials) were prior to the change in the law and a change in morality. Those changes have now occurred and anyone who violates the law does it at his own peril."

He said that because the actions that the four McDonnell Douglas officials were accused of taking occurred in 1973, "you cannot say with certitude they knew they committed a crime."

Giuliani became a controversial figure in the case last June when two department trial attorneys accused him of meeting improperly with the general counsel of McDonnell Douglas to discuss the case. Giuliani said he did nothing wrong and was cleared by an internal department investigation.

Sanford McDonnell, the St. Louis-based company's chairman and chief executive officer, pleaded guilty on behalf of the company Tuesday. He appeared in court because the judge asked in advance that a high official of McDonnell Douglas speak for the corporation.

After the court proceeding, he said the company agreed to the guilty plea because fighting the charges would have cost too much.

"Going ahead with the litigation could well have taken two to five years," he said in a statement said. "This would have been very costly and it would have disrupted our work seriously. Under these circumstances, it was clearly not advisable to proceed with this litigation."

Outside the courtroom, McDonnell and company attorney Veryl L. Riddle contended the government would not have been able to prove its allegations if the case had gone to trial.

The indictment charged that the corporation and the four individuals committed conspiracy, made false statements, mail fraud and wire fraud. The individuals named were John C. Brizendine, executive vice president and president of Douglas Aircraft Co., a McDonnell Douglas division; Charles M. Forsyth, vice president for marketing and executive vice president of Douglas Aircraft; James S. McDonnell III, vice president for marketing; and Sherman Pruitt Jr., a sales manager of Douglas aircraft.

The indictment alleged that they authorized $1.6 million in secret commissions to promote the sale of DC-10s to Pakistan. There were additional charges that the company concealed $6 million paid to airline personnel and government officials in South Korea, the Philippines, Venezuela and Zaire.

Examination In Reagan Threat

RICHMOND (AP) — A Kalamazoo, Mich., man accused of threatening President Reagan was ordered Tuesday to undergo a psychiatric examination.

John Allen Wright was ordered to undergo the examination by U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. of Richmond at the request of a prosecutor and a court-appointed defense lawyer.

Wright, appearing in Stafford County General District Court last week on charges of reckless driving and driving without a license, allegedly said: "Hinckley had a job to do and he didn't do it. I've got a job to do and I'm going to do it. I've got to go to the White House because I've got to see Reagan."

John Warnock Hinckley Jr. is accused of trying to kill Reagan and two others March 30.

Museum Offers Education, Too

MYSTIC, Conn. (AP) — Mystic Seaport Museum, the nation's largest maritime museum, offers a variety of educational programs from preschool to postgraduate level.
 Museum teachers visit school classrooms to give lectures on such topics as whaling, 19th-century life at sea or ashore and shipbuilding, tailored to the age level of the students.
 In the seaport's Children's Museum, visiting youngsters are invited into a re-created "captain's day cabin" aboard a ship, where they may play with replicas of antique toys, clothing and books and learn about children who went to sea a century ago.

Enrollments Up In Synod Schools

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Enrollments in is the country's laigest Protestant system of elementary and high schools are continuing to increase, reports the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod.
 It says statistics for 1980-81 show 166,845 children in church elementary schools, up 4.3 percent, and 15,839 students in church high schools, up 1.1 percent. The denomination's congregations run 1,401 elementary schools and 59 high schools.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened mixed today, with some blue-chip issues posting early gains, as investors sorted out the heavy losses of the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 2.10 to 853.22 after falling 10.56 points Tuesday to a 15-month low of 851.12 amid continued fears over high interest rates and the federal budget deficit.

Advances were ahead of declines by a 3-2 margin in New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In early trading, McDonnell Douglas rose 1/4 to 28 1/2. The aircraft builder said today it intends to begin buying up to 1 million shares of its common stock.

Other gainers included Texas Instruments, up 1/4 to 85, and Motorola, up 1/2 to 63 1/4.

On the American Stock Exchange, Dome Petroleum was up 1/4 at 15 1/2. The company said it planned a joint venture plant in Alberta to extract liquids from natural gas.

Tuesday's decline in the Dow industrial average brought the measure's decline to nearly 173 points from its eight-year high of 1024.05 on April 27.

Losers led by the oil stocks outnumbered gainers by a 7-1 margin in NYSE-listed issues.

Big Board volume totaled 47.34 million shares compared with 42.76 on Friday.

The NYSE's composite index Tuesday was down 1.31 to 68.24 and at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 14.22 at 323.06.

Gun Charge Is Brought

Greenville Police last night arrested Jessie Lee Ruffin of 623 Albemarle Ave. on charges of discharging a firearm into an occupied dwelling and two counts of assault following an incident at the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity house at 500 Elizabeth Street.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the events that led to the charges began about 11 p.m. when Ruffin allegedly went to the fraternity house and began talking with several persons in the yard of the dwelling.

Ruffin first allegedly offered a knife for sale, then said he had two shotguns and a .38 caliber pistol he would sell, according to Cannon. Ruffin then left the area and returned a short time later with a .22 caliber rifle.

Following a discussion outside the house, during which Ruffin allegedly pointed the rifle at two of the fraternity brothers, members of the fraternity said they heard a "ping" against the dwelling, allegedly from a shot fired by Ruffin.

Surrenders To Lawmen

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — As convicted spy Christopher Boyce ended his 19-day hunger strike here, a woman accused of harboring him when he was a fugitive surrendered to Oregon authorities.

Gloria White, 42, appeared Tuesday before federal Magistrate George Juba in Portland. Mrs. White posted $1,000 of the $10,000 bail after the hearing and was released.

Juba set hearings Thursday and Sept. 17 on whether bond should be reduced and whether she would be extradited to Idaho, where the warrant for her arrest was issued.

Mrs. White, charged with harboring Boyce on her property near Bonners Ferry, Idaho, also has a home in Newport on the Oregon Coast.

Authorities said Boyce spent at least two months in the Bonners Ferry area last year and Sheriff Mike LeBroth of Boundary County, Idaho, said Boyce dated Mrs. White's 17-year-old daughter, Marla.

The family will receive friends Friday from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Baker Funeral Home, Tarboro.

ASSOCIATION MEET
The Higgs Neighborhood Association will meet Saturday at 5:30 p.m. at the Community Center corner of Skinner and Chestnut streets.

A covered dish supper will be held at 5:30 and Greenville Police Department Crime Prevention Officer Doug Jackson will present a program at 6 p.m. on Community Watch. Community residents are urged to attend.

Reception, Short Story Reading At Museum Tonight
A reception, open to the public, is being held at the Greenville Museum of Art, 802 South Evans Street, from 7 to 9 p.m. tonight.

The reception honors the inauguration of an exhibition featuring the textiles of Grace K. Jenkins and paintings by two Greenville artists, Marcy Boyd and Marion Crouse. At 8 p.m., a reading of short stories by Pitt County writer Ida Wooten Tripp will be presented. Mrs. Tripp is a frequent contributor to the syndicated newspaper column "Facing South" and has also had stories published recently in other publications.

Gene Prescott Leaves Board

C. Eugene Prescott has submitted his resignation as a member of the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Prescott, in a letter to Mayor Don McGlohon, noted that he had "found it necessary to terminate" his current appointment as a commissioner.

"I consider it a privilege to have been afforded the opportunity to serve our city in this capacity for the past eight and one-half years and regret that time constraints preclude my continuing," Prescott said.

He added in the letter, "I am confident that the historic decisions that will soon be made regarding our utility future will place Greenville in a sound position through the end of this century."

Prescott informed McGlohon that he "reluctantly" submitted the resignation, effective with the last meeting of the commission this month.

LONDON (AP) — The British Defense Ministry is putting at least 20 of the Royal Navy's battle fleet of 70 warships on the market to help pay rising defense costs.

The ships, including frigates and the 28,500-ton aircraft carrier Hermes, are anchored for inspection at an armaments trade show at Havant near Portsmouth.

Defense Ministry officials are in Canberra to try to sell the 19,500-ton carrier Invincible to Australia, the Daily Telegraph reports.

Peanut Meeting

LEWISTON — The North Carolina Peanut Growers Association will hold its annual membership meeting Thursday beginning at 10 a.m.

N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham will open the event with remarks concerning this year's peanut crop in the state. The membership meeting will be followed by a sponsored lunch.

After lunch research highlights will be reviewed and a tour of the research station will be conducted. Included in the research review will be the results of various tests such as studies on leaf spot advisory test, effects and response from irrigation, subsoiling, the use of wild peanuts for disease control, causes and magnitude of losses from black root rot, interaction of pesticides on plant growth, management of peanut insects, weed control and the economics of herbicide use, breeding for improved variety, and energy conservation and peanut drying.

The field meeting will end at 3:45 p.m. Pitt County peanut growers are invited to attend this annual meeting, according to Sam Uzzell, Pitt extension agent.

Crum Impressed With East Carolina, Nelson

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina coach Dick Crum says talking about the East Carolina football team and coaching against it are two totally different matters.

Crum said the media and general public may have conceded the game to the 13th-ranked Tar Heels, but he is not that confident about his team's season opener Saturday.

"From their (East Carolina's) viewpoint, this is always a big game," Crum said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "For us, though, it is difficult to get ready for them because many people publicly say, 'East Carolina? What kind of football team are they?' That's until you coach against them. You come up here and coach against them and you find out they're a pretty good football team."

Western Carolina found that out last Saturday as the Pirates opened their season by piling up 499 total yards and routing the Catamounts, 42-6.

"They've had a trial run," Crum said. "They've had a chance to see how they perform against an opponent. And believe me, that's different than playing against that guy you eat lunch with."

Those scouting reports have left Crum impressed, especially with Pirate quarterback Carlton Nelson, who rushed for 118 yards, passed 111 yards and directed the wishbone offense through a number of long drives.

"The most impressive part of their game was the quarterback," he said. "The other backs played well but he ignited them."

Pirate Play-of-the-Week, Page 18

Crum knows East Carolina will be "highly motivated" for the game since this is the last game of the eight-year old rivalry, and the Pirates were humbled 31-3 in last year's game.

Other than his concerns about the Pirates, Crum also has some concerns about his own team. The Tar Heels went 11-1 last season, but Crum is quick to point out that this is a different team. His major concerns are the young defensive line and the depth in the offensive backfield.

North Carolina graduated a number of top defensive stars, including Atlantic Coast Conference Player-of-the-Year Lawrence Taylor.

"I'm not disappointed in the defense but you can't compare them to the kids lining up there last year," Crum said. "In some cases they had four years experience and these have zero years experience."

Junior Mike Wilcher, 6-foot-3 and 238 pounds, is replacing Taylor. After two years of backing Taylor up at linebacker, "... it'll take a series or two to realize I'm starting."

But he is not concerned about the inexperience of the defense. "We'll get the job done," Wilcher said.

On offense, junior Rod Elkins is back at quarterback which should open up the offense while sharing time with Amos Lawrence.

"We have more experience with the guy that makes it go and that's the quarterback," Crum said. "He had an impressive sophomore year. I think he'll be able to perform at a higher level immediately."

Asked if that meant more passing, Crum answered, "I expect so."

Also returning to the backfield is tailback Kelvin Bryant, the 195-pound speedster who rushed for more than 1,000 yards last season while sharing time with Amos Lawrence.

"We know he can run the football," Crum said of Bryant. "We need to see how Tyrone Anthony and Bobby Ratliff will do."

Anthony and Ratliff are backing up Bryant.

The biggest surprise on offense is freshman Larry Griffin who won the starting spot at flanker over sophomore Mark Smith.

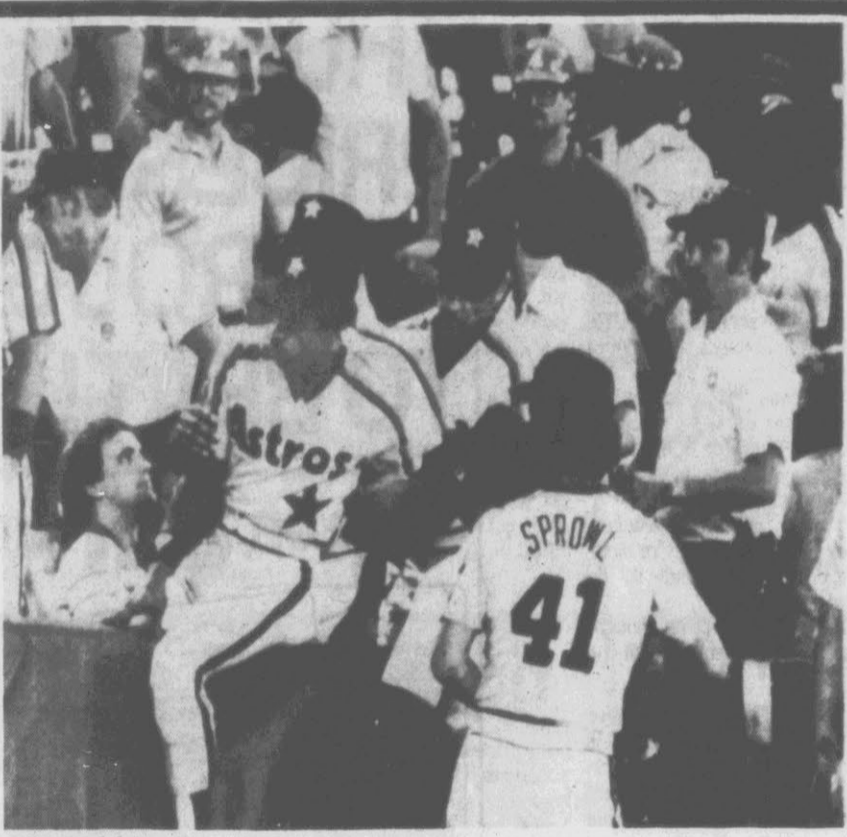

The series with East Carolina stands at 5-1-1 in favor of the Tar Heels.

Cedeno Ejected After Climbing Into Stands

ATLANTA (AP) — Houston first baseman Cesar Cedeno was ejected from the Astros' game with the Atlanta Braves after going into the stands and engaging in a scuffle with a fan who Cedeno said called him a "killer."

Several other Houston players rushed into the stands behind Cedeno to restrain him and the umpires ejected Cedeno after conferring with a uniformed policeman on the scene.

The fan's remark was in reference to Cedeno's guilty verdict on involuntary manslaughter charges and the fined $100 levied on him in January 1974 following the shooting death of a month earlier of a 19-year-old woman in Santa Domingo, Dominican Republic.

Vikings Out For Second Win

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

D.H. Conley, still riding high after bringing its 14-game losing streak to a stunning end last week, will try for an encore performance Friday night when the Vikings travel to North Pitt.

The Vikings (1-1-0) have not beaten the Panthers in three seasons and have not won games two in a row since 1979. But the Vikings are fresh off a 19-6 upset of Southwest Edgecombe, a team picked to be among the leaders in the Eastern Carolina Conference, and DHC first-year coach Gerald Garner would like nothing more than to beat the Panthers.

"If we were 2-0 and North Pitt was 0-2 it would make no difference," Garner said. "It's like the Hatfields and McCoy's. If we have a real arch-rival it's them."

North Pitt (1-1-0) defeated the Vikings, 32-6, in the season finale last year and, like the Vikings, the Panthers are coming off their first victory of the season under new head coach B.T. Chappell, a 29-8 win over North Edgecombe.

"I still think they should be favored," Garner said. "We're both in almost a similar situation, it's a must-win for us and, I'd say, for them. A loss is gonna hurt either ballclub."

North Pitt first-year coach B.T. Chappell disagrees. "I don't look at it as a do-or-die situation," he said. "We just want to start improving in each game."

While D.H. Conley and North Pitt do battle in Bethel, Ayden-Grifton will travel to Farmville Central for the opening Eastern Carolina Conference game for both teams.

Ayden-Grifton (0-1-0) opened its season Friday with a 20-14 loss to Roanoke, a game in which the Chargers had six turnovers. Farmville Central (1-1-0) will be trying to rebound after dropping a 29-6 decision to Clinton (2-0-0).

In other games this week, Greene Central (1-1-0) travels to North Lenoir (1-1-0), Roanoke (2-0-0) plays host to Washington (1-0-0), Williamston (1-1-0) entertains Plymouth (1-1-0) and Jamesville (1-1-0) plays host to Chocowinity (1-1-0).

In results from last week, Wilson Beddingfield (1-0-0) defeated Greene Central, 13-0, Williamston beat Gaston (0-1-0), 13-6, and Jamesville nipped Columbia (0-2-0), 12-6, in overtime.

D.H. Conley
D.H. Conley entered its game with Southwest Edgecombe Friday night in the trough of a 14-game losing streak and having not defeated the Cougars since 1979.

No more. Complete with a sense of deja vu, the Vikings defeated Southwest Edgecombe, 19-6 — the same score of DHC's last win over the Cougars. And oddly enough that was the last time Conley won until last Friday night.

"We're still on cloud nine," D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner said. "It gives our program a real shot in the arm. We needed to win one early."

The win came one week after DHC opened the season with a 33-3 loss to Washington. On practice Monday Garner talked to his team about the game and about themselves.

"It was more of a mental session than a physical one," Garner said. "I told the kids I felt we could have a good team and that the problems we had were more mental than physical."

The Vikings must have listened. Now, however, the Deadline Near For CFA Vote On NBC TV Pact

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Most of the nation's top football powers face a major decision the next two days, with barely time to digest three new developments that seemed to further confuse the battle between the NCAA and the College Football Association.

Thursday is the CFA's self-imposed deadline for changing ballots cast in an Aug. 21 meeting that adopted by a 3-vote margin a separate television contract. The deal with NBC, which the NCAA had said could lead to sanctions, conflicts with a contract for the same period, 1982-85, the NCAA has reached with ABC and CBS.

Indications were strong that most of the 33 schools which voted for the separate deal with NBC would switch their ballot if assured by the NCAA that it would seek to trim about 50 lesser schools from the top football division.

Late Tuesday afternoon, the NCAA did just that, calling a special convention for the week of Dec. 6. But at the same time, three of the CFA's most militant members, Texas, Oklahoma and Georgia, filed suit in state and federal courts over the touchy issue of property rights.

If a significant number of CFA schools do switch their ballots, NBC could invoke an escape clause in the contract and the NCAA presumably would sign its agreement with ABC and CBS. But no one on either side would speculate on what effect Tuesday's developments might have.

"We can't comment on the lawsuits," said David Cawood, an NCAA spokesman. "And what happens at the special convention, of course, will be up to the voting delegates."

CFA executive director Charles M. Neinas, asked if the calling of the special convention would persuade most CFA schools to change their ballot, said, "I don't think we should talk about that."

"Obviously, it's encouraging the (NCAA) Council would recognize the interests expressed by the CFA members relative to a special convention to consider reorganization," Neinas said from his office in suburban Kansas City.

Asked if the property rights issue could be settled through reorganization, Neinas said, "I think the action involving the three universities taking class action suits to have that legal question answered becomes perhaps the more proper forum to discuss that particular issue."

The University of Texas obtained a temporary restraining order in a state court in Austin prohibiting the NCAA from taking or threatening sanctions against Texas or any other CFA member because of its

Interception By Sykes ECU Play-Of-Week

Gerald Sykes' second interception of the night against Western Carolina has been picked as the "Play of the Week" for East Carolina University.

Pirate coaches made the selection.

Trailing 21-6 with time running out near the half, Western Carolina got the football on the ECU 31 after Roy Wiley fumbled. On the prior series, Sykes had stepped in front of a WCU receiver to get an interception. On the first play of the next series, Western quarterback Ronnie Mixon again went to Sykes' zone. Sykes broke up a post-pattern pass, almost intercepting.

On second and ten at the 31, Mixon sent his wide receiver to the right side and his flanker left. ECU defensive coordinator Norm Parker had his defense in pass prevent, with three deep men.

"We were in a five-rush, three-deep defense," Parker said. "We knew they'd probably go long. Gerald had the deep outside third of the field on the right side to protect."

"Mixon tried to pump fake him and sent the wide out out and then long. Gerald turned with him, went deep ahead of him and made the interception," Parker continued.

"It was a big play. They had just gotten the ball back and could have gotten back into the game at halftime. It was a real crusher."

"In that defense, we cover the wide out man-to-man in the short zone, then a deep back will pick up long patterns."

Sykes returned the interception 24 yards as time ran out.

On the night, Sykes picked off three passes to tie the ECU single game record. As a matter of fact, the converted wide receiver caught more passes than anyone on the Pirate team. He returned the steals for 55 yards, again tops on the team.

Was he thinking touchdown on the pickoffs? "I used to be a running back in high school, but believe me, I was just trying to hold onto the football!"

Sykes, a junior from Fayetteville who was redshirted in 1980, was voted defensive player of the week for his efforts.

Fanning New Montreal Manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies beat the Montreal Expos manager and replaced by Jim Fanning Tuesday because of the way he was running the club, said John McHale, president of the National League team.

It was not, McHale emphasized, because of rumors that he was heading for the New York Yankees.

"It had nothing to do with it. It has come up two or three times since he has been with us. But we were never able to find out if there was any fire under that smoke, or if it was negotiations-type talk," he said.

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner denied that he had Williams in mind when he fired Gene Michael as manager Sunday. Michael was replaced from within the Yankees' organization with Bob Lemon.

McHale cited his disappointment with the Expos' performance. "I saw this year too many instances where there was not a soundness in our play. We were ragged, not crisp, often late with a relief pitcher, a pinch-hitter or a pinch-runner."

There were other things, McHale said.

"I don't think Dick wanted to get involved in closeness with his players. He was a very detached sort of guy. He doesn't hold hands with a lot of people."

"He was sarcastic, biting. Sometimes he was clever, humorous. But these things found their way to the public, and the players didn't like it."

"When they were younger, they took it. Now they're older and don't want to handle it," he said.

He was asked if he thought Fanning would solve all of the problems.

"I think Fanning will remove the tension, the tightness. He's a communicator, a teacher. His experience in knowing most of our players from his job as farm director has to help," McHale said.

The new Expos' boss made it clear that in his first chance at directing a major league team, his main theme was to "win."

He didn't in his debut Tuesday night when the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Expos 10-5.

McHale said.

"I said to him 'this is a tough Johnny.' He was a total pro thing I've got to say," McHale said. "He said 'That's okay fessional.'"

Fanning has worked his way up baseball's ladder. He was a major league backup catcher, minor league manager, scout, assistant general manager and general manager.

About Fanning's future as manager, McHale said, "Next year is open. I've given no thoughts to next year's manager and won't until this season is over."

"We have three or four of the best players in the league, and I don't feel they should lose their sense of direction."

Chicago (14-15) 2 1/2 Games Out

By The Associated Press

A 15-37 start in a normal season would effectively ruin a team's chances of playing important games in September. But the players' strike and the split season have changed everything, so here are the Chicago Cubs 2 1/2 games out of first place.

After beating the St. Louis Cardinals, the second-season leader in the National League East, for the second straight time Tuesday night, Manager Joey Amalfitano was asked if it seems strange to be in a pennant race after the Cubs' terrible start.

"It does to me, when I wake up in the morning and look at the standings," he said.

"That's the funny thing about this game," added Amalfitano after Chicago beat the Cardinals 4-3 in 12 innings. "It's peaks and valleys. You don't want to stay in the valleys too long. We're just going to come here and play tomorrow."

The Cubs, who won only 10 of their first 46 games during the season's first half, boosted their second half mark to 14-15 with the victory.

Amalfitano said the intradivisional games during the final month of the season should be more significant than when the Cubs were playing West Division teams.

"We're in our own division and we play the teams that are in front of us," Amalfitano said. "We're in the hunt. That sums it up."

Third baseman Ken Reitz said the week before the strike started June 12 was the key to the Cubs' relative success in the second half.

"Before the strike we won five of our last six so we knew we could play some ball," Reitz said. "Everythings' been just a little bit better. When you start winning everything falls into place."

Steve Henderson's sacrifice fly in the 12th scored Jerry Morales with the winning run, handing St. Louis its fourth loss in a row, its worst streak of the season.

Morales opened the 12th with a double to center field off loser Jim Kaat, 6-4. Tim Lincecum then walked and Reitz advanced the runners with a sacrifice. After Mike Tyson drew an intentional walk, Henderson's fly brought home Morales.

Phillies 10, Expos 5
Garry Maddox knocked in five runs with a two-run single and a three-run homer and Dan Larson pitched a five-hit complete game, despite giving up three homers, as Philadelphia spoiled Jim Fanning's debut as Montreal manager.

Two-runs singles by Larry Bowa and Maddox helped the Phillies take a 5-2 lead after two innings. Bake McBride made it 6-2 with a fourth-inning homer and Matthews and Maddox homered in the eighth for four more runs.

Braves 3, Astros 2
Chris Chambliss doubled up the left-center field gap to knock in two Atlanta runs in the bottom of the ninth inning, handing Houston only its second loss in its last 13 games.

The Astros had been held to one hit by Larry McWilliams, making his first start of the season, for 71-3 innings before Gary Woods doubled home a run and scored on Kiko Garcia's single.

Mets 3, Pirates 1

Ed Lynch, 3-3, yielded only four hits in seven innings, including a solo homer by Jason Thompson, and Neil Allen finished the six-hitter and earned his 16th save for New York, snapping Pittsburgh's four-game winning streak.

Rusty Staub played a part in all three of the Mets' run-scoring innings. He homered in the second, drew a walk before Lee Mazzilli singled home a run in the fourth and singled in the eighth before pinch-runner Ron Gardenhire went to second on a groundout and scored on a triple by Mike Jorgensen.

Padres 6, Reds 1

Broderick Perkins knocked in three runs with a double and two singles and Juan Eichelberger scattered six hits as San Diego broke a three-game losing streak.

Perkins doubled home a run and scored on Joe Lefebvre's double in the second inning and added RBI singles in the sixth and seventh.

Dodgers 4, Giants 0
Dusty Baker and Ron Cey both hit two-run homers in the sixth inning and three Los Angeles pitchers held San Francisco to three hits as the Dodgers won their fourth straight game.

Loser Doyle Alexander, 8-6, who did not give up a hit until the fifth, gave up a walk to Dave Lopes before Baker's eighth homer gave the Dodgers a 2-0 lead. Steve Garvey then followed with a single before Cey blasted his 13th homer.

Evert Lloyd Handles 'Test;' Borg Defeats Noah

NEW YORK (AP) — It was supposed to be the big test for Chris Evert Lloyd going into the last rounds. But Hana Mandlikova was overrated as a sparring partner.

Lloyd, the defending champion, took just 56 minutes Tuesday to breeze past Mandlikova 6-1, 6-2 and into the semifinals of the U.S. Open tennis championships.

It was a surprisingly easy win. Mandlikova was runner-up to Lloyd here last year and in the Wimbledon final this year.

Next, Lloyd will play the winner of a quarterfinal match between fourth-seeded Martina Navratilova and Anne Smith. That match was to have been played Tuesday night, but heavy rains canceled the night program.

A fourth-round match between No. 8 Elliot Teltscher and No. 16 Brian Gottfried also was pushed back to today.

In Tuesday's other matches, second-seeded Bjorn Borg struggled briefly then drove on to defeat No. 13 Yannick Noah of France, 6-7, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

No. 9 Roscoe Tanner ousted sixth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-4, 6-2, 7-6, winning 15-13 in the tiebreaker on his fifth match point.

Fourth-seeded Jimmy Connors glided past Mike Cahill 6-3, 6-3, 6-1. He will play the winner of the Teltscher-Gottfried match in the quarters.

Borg and Tanner will meet in the quarterfinals, which is getting to be a habit. It's the third year in a row they have played in that round.

Also scheduled for today was a quarterfinal between third-seeded Tracy Austin and No. 6 Sylvia Hanika of West Germany, a fourth-round match between defending champion John McEnroe and Ramesh Krishnan of India, and a quarterfinal between 15th-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis and Bruce Manson.

Lloyd had been concerned going into the Mandlikova match that she had not had a thorough workout in matches here. And Mandlikova offered little resistance.

In five matches, Lloyd has not dropped a set and she has lost only 11 games. Tuesday she said she was not as worried as she might have been by her unchallenging advance.

"If I'm not getting tough matches, I'm putting in time on the practice courts with John (Lloyd, her husband) and with Dennis Ralston (a former pro circuit player)," said the 26-year-old, five-time Open champion.

Mandlikova made 36 unforced errors, 21 of the forehand. She held serve only twice and seemed troubled by the wind currents which whipped through the National Tennis Center.

"It was very difficult to serve," the 19-year-old said. She was angry. "When I threw the ball up I never knew where it would come down."

"I was hungry enough before the match. I wanted to beat Chris today, but she just played better."

Mandlikova unquestionably is one of the best players in the world, and she has beaten Lloyd twice in their nine meetings. But she does not seem to have the instinct for beating the best in a championship tournament. She was lackluster against Lloyd in the Wimbledon final and disappointing here last year.

"She can hit the ball three different ways," Lloyd said. "But, maybe in a split second she has trouble making up her mind."

The quarterfinal-match-against-Tanner habit, is a rather unpleasant one for Borg. In 1979, after extending Borg to five dramatic sets at Wimbledon, Tanner upset him in the quarters at the Open. That was a night match, and Borg doesn't like to play at night.

Last year, Borg eked past Tanner in the quarters after being down two sets to love. That match was in the day time.

"I'm looking forward to it," said Tanner, a 29-year-old renowned for his big serve. "I don't care whether we play day or night. Actually, I would prefer to play in the day. But he's a tough player and he must be playing really well since he's been beating people pretty badly."

Noah has been Borg's only real challenge here, and the Frenchman was a threat only in the early stages. It was Borg's first set loss.

"It's all going to depend on his (Tanner's) serve," said Borg, who has won Wimbledon five times but never the U.S. Open. "If he hits that big serve in all the time, it's going to be hard to break his serve."

Waltrip Cuts Pt. Deficit

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip has cut Bobby Allison's lead in the NASCAR Winston Cup race to 18 points following a second-place finish in the Darlington, S.C., Southern 500, NASCAR officials said Tuesday.

Allison leads Waltrip with 3,488 points to 3,470. Harry Gant is third with 3,198, followed by Ricky Rudd, 3,098; Retty Labonte, 3,029; defending national champion Dale Earnhardt, 2,978; Jody Ridley, 2,928; Richard Petty, 2,916; Benny Parsons, 2,703; and Dave Marcis, 2,659.

Allison also leads in winnings with a season total of $430,775. Waltrip is second with $369,865, followed by Richard Petty, $316,640; Rudd, $281,375; Earnhardt $279,835; Parsons $212,895; Labonte, $212,440; Gant, $181,595; Ridley, $175,020; and Cale Yarborough, $135,755.

Morgan Shepherd of Concord, N.C., maintains his lead in the Champion Spark Plug Rookie-of-the-Year competition with 220 points. Tim Richmond of Ashland, Ohio, is second with 187, and Ron Bouchard of Fitchburg, Mass., is third with 174.

The Winston Cup competitors continue their fall schedule in Richmond, Va., Sept. 13.

ECU Defeats ACC In Soccer Opener

East Carolina University opened its 1981 soccer season with a 4-2 victory over highly regarded Atlantic Christian College yesterday.

It was the opener for the Bulldogs, also. East Carolina jumped out early, building up a 3-0 lead in the first half. The Bulldogs came back to outscore the Pirates, 2-1, in the second half, but the Pirates closed them out after that to take the victory.

Freshman Mark Hardy, playing his first collegiate game, scored two goals for the Pirates and added one assist. Brad Winchell added the other two goals and also had an assist.

Other assists were handed out by freshman Tom Lawrence and Brian Winchell.

Overall, East Carolina had 14 shots on goal, while Atlantic Christian had 13. ECU goalie Steve Brown was credited with 10 saves, while the ACC goalie was given two.

"The first half we played as well as we have ever played," Coach Brad Smith said. "We had a letdown in the second half on defense which let them score and got them fired up for their second goal."

Smith praised the play of Hardy, and noted that "Brown had some exceptional saves."

East Carolina, now 1-0, plays host to nationally ranked George Mason Saturday at 1 p.m. at Minges Field.

Yaz Lifts Red Sox Past Tigers

By The Associated Press
Carl Yastrzemski has played more than 3,000 games in the major leagues, but it's still a joy for him — especially with his team in a pennant race.

"I love it — I love being involved in a race," says Boston's 42-year-old wonder. "There's nothing like it. It's something you'll always remember. It's something special. Every play means something. There's no pressure. It's fun."

"When you're losing, that's when there's pressure." Hardly acting his age, the veteran Red Sox' first baseman collected three hits, including a two-run homer and an RBI single, to lead the Red Sox to a 5-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers Tuesday night.

The victory moved the Red Sox within 3 1/2 games of the front-running Tigers in the American League East. Playing his 3,034th major league game, Yastrzemski had the RBI single in the fifth inning, then hit his homer in the seventh. It was his sixth of the year, and provided the Red Sox with their eventual winning run.

Orioles 14, Indians 5
Eddie Murray hit a three-run homer and drove in four runs for the second straight game as Baltimore routed Cleveland. Dan Graham and Doug DeCinces combined to drive in five runs while ending extended batting slumps.

Graham, hitless in 24 previous at-bats, had two doubles and two RBIs. DeCinces had three hits, including a two-run homer in the third, and three RBIs, after entering the game in a 3-2 slide.

Royals 5, Angels 3
Willie Aikens hit his second home run in two games and singled to ignite a four-run rally in the fifth inning, powering Kansas City past California.

Dennis Leonard, who was 1-8 in Royals Stadium this year, scattered nine hits before needing Dan Quisenberry's help in the eighth inning. Quisenberry gained his 15th save.

"Everything was bad tonight," Leonard said. "My curve wasn't working at all. I threw one changeup and it went for a home run. I really didn't have good stuff, but fortunately they only scored three runs."

Twins 1, Blue Jays 0
Rob Wilfong's ninth-inning double scored pinch-runner Chuck Baker from second base as Brad Haven pitched his first major league shutout in Minnesota's victory over Toronto.

Glen Adams led off the ninth against Dave Stieb with a pinch-hit single. Baker ran for Adams and moved to second when Stieb walked Hosken Powell on four pitches. Wilfong then doubled to score Baker with the winning run.

Haven, 2-4, gave up just four hits while striking out six and walking three. Stieb, 8-10, allowed just five hits and struck out six.
White Sox 5, Mariners 3
Wayne Nordhagen hit a game-tying RBI single and went on to score the go-ahead run in the fifth inning to lead Chicago past Seattle. The Mariners put runners on base in each of the first five innings, but were unable to score until the fifth when Lenny Randle's RBI single gave them a 1-0 lead.

A's 3, Rangers 0
Rickey Henderson slugged a leadoff homer in the first inning and an RBI single in the eighth and right-hander Steve McCatty hurled a three-hitter as Oakland beat Texas. McCatty, pitching his second consecutive shutout and fourth of the season, was never in trouble. He struck out seven, walked none and allowed no runner to reach second base.

Knights Boot Vikings, 3-0

Greenville Christian Academy opened its soccer season with a 3-0 victory over the Conley ROTC Club team yesterday.

Sasser followed with the third at 5:10. Sasser also added an assist. "He played quite well before leaving the game with an injury," Coach Dale Thatcher said. Sasser, an inside forward, is expected to miss a week to ten days with his injury.

GCA took 26 shots on goal, while Chris Chappell was credited with 21 saves for Conley.

Ford Worried About 'Air War'

CLEMSON (AP) — Clemson Head Football Coach Danny Ford says he's concerned about the sophisticated air attack of the Green Wave of Tulane, the Tigers' battle scheduled for Saturday night in New Orleans, La.

"It will be like watching Monday Night Football," Ford said Tuesday at his weekly news conference. "Tulane has one of the best passing attacks we will see all year. We have not had to face an air attack like it since Wake Forest was hot with Jay Venuto in 1979."

"This will cause problems because we are not used to stopping this type of attack," Ford said the Clemson secondary will need to be "smart and quick" in reading the opponent's different patterns.

"Tulane has so many different routes that we can't fit them all on our normal scouting sheet. They are like Purdue and Stanford in that they love to put the backs out on the pattern. I don't know how they remember them all," he said.

The Tigers, who will enter the game in good physical shape with no players injured during last weekend's 45-10 victory over Wofford, will spend the week honing their pass rush, the coach said.

"They have a sophomore quarterback named Wade Elmore who put 18 points on the board in the second half for Tulane against Mississippi last week, so you know they can be explosive," Ford said. "And they have some excellent receivers. Their tight end, Rodney Holman, is going to be a pro some day and they have three (Perry) Tuttlees at the wide outs."

In addition, intangibles add to the pressure of the Tigers' upcoming game.

"Playing on the road for the first time causes some problems, because it is the first game in a hostile environment for a lot of players," the coach said.

"Playing in the Superdome will be great for our players, but I hope they are not in awe of the place and lose concentration on the game."

Birthday Of First UNC Enrollee

By DR. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)
— Sept. 10 is the 205th birthday of Hinton James, the first student to enroll in the University of North Carolina.

The son of John and Alice James of New Hanover County, the youngster grew up on land that had been set aside by the Lords Proprietors for Welsh settlers. It is now in Pender County.

The initial opening of the university was quite unlike the occasion today when thousands of highly mobile young people suddenly appear each fall from their homes all over the world. As a matter of fact, not even Hinton James was there for the official opening or for several weeks thereafter.

R.D.W. Connor, in his history of the University of North Carolina, relates that the winter of 1795 when the university opened was "severe and the roads were impassable." Gov. Richard Dobbs Spaight, several legislators, and other state officials, however, for the event on Jan. 15 braved the discomfort of 28 miles of red mud and jagged rocks between Chapel Hill and Raleigh.

It is recorded that the morning of the opening day dawned with a cold, drizzling rain.

The Connor description of the scene continues, "As the sighing of the watery wind whistled through the leafless branches of tall oaks and hickories and the Davie Poplar then in vigorous youth, all that met the eyes of the distinguished visitors were a two-storied brick building, the unpainted wooden house of the presiding professor, the avenue between them filled with stumps of recently felled trees, a pile of red clay dug out for the foundation of the chapel ... and not one student."

It was not until nearly a month later, on Feb. 12, that "the precursor of a long line of seekers after knowledge," as Hinton James has been called, arrived. According to one account, he walked most of the way from Wilmington; another says he rode a horse but sold it when he neared Chapel Hill, and walked the last few miles. In any event, such a trip in 1795 was not a casual undertaking.

James was not only the first student to enroll at the university; he also constituted the entire student body for a period of two weeks. By the end of the second term it is said that about 100 students had enrolled, and although the young institution was accused of being "aristocratic," tuition fees were low and living conditions almost primitive.

Very few newspapers or letters made their way to Chapel Hill, and travel remained very difficult. The boys rented feather beds for $24 per year or else slept on hard boards. Meals were available for an entire year for the price of $40.

Fortunately for those readers who prefer stories with happy endings, Hinton James was an outstanding student and was one of seven young men in the university's first graduating class on July 4, 1798.

He became a civil engineer "of usefulness in his section of the state" and was instrumental in making several of the state's rivers more navigable. His work particularly on the Cape Fear below Wilmington still was in evidence long after his death. He was a colleague of William Watts Jones, "a lawyer of great reputation in the old days," and beginning in 1807 he served three consecutive terms in the General Assembly.

Hinton James, having earned "a high rank in the esteem of his fellowmen," died on Aug. 22, 1847, and is buried in the old churchyard of Hopewell Presbyterian Church about five miles north of Burgaw. A highway historical marker in his honor was erected near that spot in Pender County on Nov. 7, 1939, with Dr. Frank P. Graham, then president of the university, making the principal address.

Area People In Competition

Several area people are among 55 auctioneers representing most of the country's tobacco states who will gather in Danville, Va. on Sept. 12 to compete in the first World Tobacco Auctioneering Championship.

Auctioneers taking part from this area will be Fate Worthington, Greenville; Harry F. Crisp, Pinetops; James M. Creech, Snow Hill; Evan Griffin, Williamston; Marvin Moore, Kinston; Glenn Sherwood Stewart, Walstonburg; Ralph Tyndall, Kinston; and John C. Tripp and Dennis Bailey, both of Vanceboro.

Competition in the event, which is sponsored by R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. as part of its "Pride in Tobacco" program, will be in the form of a mock tobacco sale, with a panel of seven judges rating the auctioneers on the basis of their chants, ability to catch bids, pace and salesmanship.

The contest winner will receive a $2,500 cash prize, a trophy and merchandise. The runner-up will receive $1,500, and the third place winner will get $1,000.

CIVILIAN VICTIMS
KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — At least 1,000 civilians have been killed in fighting between government troops and guerrillas in the past 10 weeks in northwest Uganda, missionaries in the area estimate; and more than 120,000 Ugandans have fled into neighboring Zaire.

Ancient Indians Lived High On Nevada Mountain

By BRENDAN RILEY
Associated Press Writer
MOUNT JEFFERSON, Nev. (AP) — High on this 11,807-foot Nevada mountain, where summer lasts only seven weeks and moaning winds keep you awake nights, scientists have uncovered — apparently untouched — the highest known Indian village in North America.

The village, known as Alta Toquima, was used as a male-only hunting camp 7,000 years ago, then occupied seven centuries ago by entire families who toiled up the steep slopes of Mount Jefferson — for reasons that may forever remain a mystery.

It is "the most unusual and spectacularly isolated archaeological site" discovered by Dr. David Hurst Thomas of the American Museum of Natural History in New York says he has ever found.

And because it is such a bleak place to live, he says, the village has added to archaeologists' understanding of the ability of early native Americans to adapt to harsh conditions.

There's little protection from the elements on the three peaks that comprise Mount Jefferson in the Toquima Mountains. The summits and the high meadows between them are barren of trees. There's little more than wind-bent wild grasses and low bushes — and lots of rock.

On summer nights, water freezes in bowls and hail and lightning hit without warning. Members of the team that spent 5½ weeks excavating the village this summer suffered bouts of altitude sickness.

The village, about 140 miles east of Carson City, is the highest known seasonally permanent village ever found in North America, Thomas says.

It was reoccupied a century before the Incas built the 8,000-foot-high city of Machu Picchu in the Andes of South America.

But Machu Picchu was a fortress; there's no evidence yet that the much cruder Alta Toquima village found here was built for defensive purpose — even though its location on the lee side of a rocky bluff gives it natural protection on three sides.

Archaeologists who excavated Alta Toquima found evidence of a peaceful — albeit rough — existence for Western Shoshoni Indians who lived here off and on for several hundred years. The Indians left the area sometime before the first white man passed through in the early 1800s.

Thomas discovered and named the site in 1978 and led the expedition, which was funded and organized by the Museum of Natural History, National Geographic and the Nevada Desert Research Institute.

Alta Toquima yielded a treasure trove of ancient Indian artifacts, including thousands of arrowheads, spear points, grinding stones, broken pottery bowls that looked something like flower pots, pipes, bone beads, hide scrapers and other crude tools.

"It's the most spectacular site I ever walked up on," said Thomas. "The whole structure of a community was still there." And because many artifacts were found lying on the ground, Thomas thinks he may have been the first non-Indian ever to see Alta Toquima.

Thomas says the discovery has shed new light on the ability of Great Basin Indians, who faced a tough life in lower valleys of arid central Nevada, to adapt to an even harsher environment.

"In terms of its sit-up-and-take-notice value, this find is right up there," he said. "This is a new dimension. I think it opens up a whole new area of physical research."

Thomas says there is evidence that some Plains Indians stayed briefly at high elevations in the Rockies, and there are other high-elevation sites in South America, Tibet and Pakistan — "but this is the only area I'm aware of where Indians were living and supporting themselves off the land, without any domestic plants or animals."

The artifacts suggest Alta Toquima dwellers — probably no more than a few dozen at any time — hunted wild bighorn sheep that once roamed the rugged area.

That's what the earlier hunters, probably unrelated to the later Shoshoni, did, too — but for shorter periods of time, only using Alta Toquima as a camp.

But Thomas said the later Indians, believed to have migrated from Southern California to parts of Nevada, Idaho and Oregon, lived for entire seasons at Alta Toquima, getting water from a nearby creek, and supplementing their meat supply with edible grasses and nuts from limber pines that studded a steep canyon just below the summit zone.

The trees hauled up a short distance to the village also provided material for tepee-like roofs on rock-walled pit houses, carved into the side of the mountain slope in one of the few areas protected from the icy, howling winds.

"What we're seeing here is a pretty sophisticated adaptation," he says, adding that at times the Indians would have faced "arctic" conditions — without the benefit of down parkas and sleeping bags, nylon tents and other mountaineering gear that he and other expedition members relied on for warmth.

It's believed the Indians had rabbit skin blankets, used sagebrush to make leggings — and generally were able to withstand cold.

Thomas thinks Indians may have used Alta Toquima as a back-up living site, when lower-elevation pinon pines failed to produce nuts. He says it's possible that over a period of several hundred years the site was used only periodically — with gaps as much as 15 or 20 years in between.

"I think we can see it as another piece in the puzzle of how these Indians made a living," he said.

Thomas isn't speculating on whether some religious motivation drew the Indians to the location. However, experts on Indian culture note that most mountaintops were considered sacred by Great Basin Indians, because they provided both food and places for religious experiences.

"There almost certainly was some religious value to this site," he says. "We can't discount the possibility. But the archaeological record is silent on that point."

Now that the Alta Toquima site has been excavated, Thomas hopes the U.S. Forest Service, which controls the area, will be able to protect it. But just in case the site proves too remote to be watched closely, he's taking care not to give too many people directions to Alta Toquima.

The village is not easy to spot. The first known white explorer in Nevada, Jedediah Smith, came within 10 miles of the site in 1826. Naturalist John Muir came within a few miles of it in about 1877. And shepherds camped only a few hundred yards away — and apparently never spotted the ruins.

Because of the arid Nevada climate, there was little erosion. After the passage of hundreds of years, only the trees used to roof the pit houses had rotted away. Three-to-four-foot-high rock rolls had shifted only slightly despite a 15-to-30 percent slope.

Thomas brought a core crew of 13 scientists and excavators up the mountain, along with other specialists who made short visits. From the base, it's a two-day climb — a distance of less than 10 miles, but a jump of several thousand feet in elevation, requiring a one-night stop-over.

training for the expedition, crew members at first suffered from altitude sickness, a combination of headaches and flu-like symptoms and general lethargy.

While adjustments to altitude came after a week or so, they still had to fight the cold — midsummer temperatures low enough at night to freeze water in a pan left out for Thomas' dog.

In the final week of the dig, in mid-August with daytime temperatures in the high 90s in valleys below, the archaeologists were hit by hail and snow — and an awesome display of lightning.

Team members even took to wearing earplugs so the moaning winds that rushed over their campsite wouldn't keep them awake at night. They had to pitch tents in the open because the only nearby protected site was the Indian village they were excavating.

The expedition members' only contact with the outside was a two-way radio used to check in with a Forest Service office in Tonopah. Occasional drop-in visitors, Forest Service pack mules bringing supplies and a rare helicopter stop provided the only breaks in day-to-day routine of digging and sifting through earth at the village site.

Wachovia Contributions Are Made

RALEIGH — Wachovia Bank and Trust Company has announced it is giving $50,000 for historic preservation in North Carolina.

A contribution of $25,000 is being made to the Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina to increase its statewide revolving fund. The other $25,000 is earmarked for the National Trust for Historic Preservation in support of its program and education and assistance in North Carolina.

"We applaud the good work done by the fund in the past and look forward to even greater things in the future," said John F. McNair III, Vice Chairman of Wachovia. On the gift to the National Trust, McNair cited the valuable services it has provided throughout the U.S. and especially in North Carolina.

The Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina was the first independent, statewide revolving fund established in the United States. It has saved over 25 endangered buildings and attracted over $3,500,000 in private investments since it began operating two years ago.

The National Trust is the only national private, non-profit organization chartered by Congress with the responsibility for encouraging public participation in historic preservation.

Black Advances Will Be Documentary Topic

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's 90-minute documentary, "America — Black and White," examines the progress blacks have made since the civil rights legislation of the 1960s and the fears that much of it will unravel because of poor economic conditions and new federal policies in Washington.

The documentary unfolds through a half-dozen profiles of blacks and their situations: ghetto youths in Los Angeles and Detroit, an impoverished rural family in Mississippi, suburbanites in New York, Harvard students and a wealthy businessman whose magazine caters to the emerging black middle class.

One danger in tackling an issue of this magnitude is letting a handful of people stories lead to conclusions that may be too broad-based. The subjects selected all seemed angry and disillusioned, leaving the impression that black-white relations are not working in America.

Blacks in Rosedale, a formerly all-white New York suburb, is the show's most effective segment. Executive producer Anthony Potter calls Rosedale "symbolic" of the new suburban battleground over education and housing.

In the past, when blacks settled in a community, one white response was to seek whiter suburbs. "But with today's housing costs and higher mortgage rates, they can't afford to," said Garrick Utley, the show's anchor. "Since they cannot escape blacks, they have to face them."

Rosedale's white-controlled school board, concerned that its classrooms were too black, established a branch school. Blacks filed a complaint with the federal government, charging that the existing school had become segregated.

When blacks won their case, a school board member presented a rezoning plan that would have reduced the number of blacks in the local school by sending them elsewhere. After a heated hearing, the plan was voted down, but the black-white tensions evidently remained.

While the struggle may be over education in the suburbs, it's over jobs in the cities, where affirmative action programs are endangered by unemployment and a faltering economy. The construction industry, one area of great black progress, is being hit hard by unemployment. "So black progress here would have to come at the expense of whites," said correspondent Emory King.

Much attention is given to the new conservatism in America, which is perceptually tied to the economic and political policies of the Reagan administration.

In Mississippi, blacks fear that health care funds being received directly from Washington will dry up because of President Reagan's plan to let state governments use the money as they see fit.

"Our health care center would without a doubt not receive funding from the state," said Dr. Aaron Shirley, who is responsible for two of the federally funded health clinics in Mississippi.

This may be the case but NBC should have sought the position of the political leadership in Mississippi.

NBC also raises the possibility of changes in the voting rights and affirmative action laws because conservative Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina has replaced liberal Democrat Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Although Potter said the broadcast would steer clear of politicians, to raise the specter of Thurmond without sounding him out on his plans and philosophies seems like a journalistic oversight.

All in all, "America — Black and White" is a provocative 90 minutes. Black and whites are seen on opposite sides of issues today, maybe for reasons different from the pre-civil rights era, but the separation is still there.

Even though the black middle class has grown and black college attendance has doubled, NBC presents strong evidence that blacks and whites still live in, basically, segregated societies.

New Contract For Barbara Walters

NEW YORK (AP) — Barbara Walters says she feels "very good" after signing a new five-year contract with ABC after turning down offers from NBC and CBS.

ABC would not disclose terms of the new contract, but it was learned it is worth more than the $5 million that drew her away from NBC five years ago.

"I feel very good about today. I'm very happy to be able to stay at ABC," Miss Walters said in an interview. "I know the people and like the people here."

A source at CBS said Miss Walters was offered the first female spot on "60 Minutes" and the host role on CBS News' new afternoon show, "Up To The Minute."

Miss Walters began her career as a writer with CBS. She became one of the anchors of the "Today" show on NBC before being lured away by ABC.

"In my mind, I don't feel I need to be the 'first this' or the 'first that' anymore," Miss Walters said. "In the last five years, I've become more comfortable with myself. I'm in a different period of life and I didn't want to climb any more mountains."

Her chief concern, she said, had become a more defined work schedule so she could spend more time with her 13-year-old daughter, Jacqueline. She said she no longer would do work for

"World News Tonight," "Nightline" and "Issues and Answers," concentrating almost exclusively on ABC's weekly magazine show, "20-20."

Jenner Filling Estrada's Role

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bruce Jenner has acted in his second episode as a special guest star on NBC's "CHIPS" with no indication whether Erik Estrada will return to the series, a spokesman for MGM Television says.

And the 1976 Olympic gold medalist is targeted for a third episode starting this week, MGM spokesman Bill Barron said Tuesday.

"They'll start the new episode on Thursday," said Barron, "and as of now there's no rewrite that would put Erik into the show."

MGM hired Jenner after the studio became embroiled in a legal dispute with Estrada.

Larry Wilcox and Robert Pine also star in the series about motorcycle officers of the California Highway Patrol.

Negotiations continued between representatives of the actor and MGM.

Pointer Sisters On Television

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A concert performance by the Pointer Sisters, videotaped at the Attic night club in downtown Greenville on January 27, will be showing over several television stations this weekend on late Saturday, September 12 night time spots.

Janet Gains, production manager for the Greenville based Preston Productions, commented that "the Pointer Sisters played the Attic specifically for this TV production. It's not often the group will perform in a town the size of Greenville, so we were pleased that they agreed to come here for the concert and the TV production."

Sam Swett is the artistic director of Preston Productions, which was formed a couple of years ago. A native of Wake Forest, Swett attended the Royal Academy of Performing Arts in London, England and is a graduate of UNC-Wilmington. Janet Gains, from Edenton, is a Magna Cum Laude graduate of East Carolina University.

"The TV production we did on the Pointer Sisters was purchased by the Blue Jeans Network, an independent syndicated TV distributor," Ms. Gains explained. "It's being shown on CBS, WNCT-TV, Channel 9 at about midnight Saturday or shortly after that time, following the 'Saturday Night Live' show." It will also be aired at about the same time over Channel 5, Washington, D.C. on the Cable Super Service.

In addition to the Pointer Sisters concert, Preston Productions has also videotaped two other Attic concerts. "We did a television production on both the Carolyne Mas and the Le Roux concerts," Ms. Gains said. "We're still negotiating on selling these two. PBS has expressed an interest and an overseas network is considering the Le Roux group

'Harper Valley' Revamped

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barbara Eden's weekly situation comedy, "Harper Valley PTA," is undergoing a complete revamp with a new production team at NBC and a shortened title for the new season, "Harper Valley."

Bill Dial, former producer of "WKRP in Cincinnati" and co-producer of "Lobo," will take over as executive producer. Jerry Davis, former executive producer of "House Calls," will become co-executive producer.

Brandan Tartikoff, president of NBC entertainment, said, "Barbara's character will retain her underdog spunkiness and good humor and edge into romantic involvements where social issues come into play."

An Atlanta based public relations firm has recently listed Attic as the number one night club in North Carolina. This listing, Ms. Gains remarked, is "based on the number of bands playing in concert plus the number of people attending concerts. Attic is also currently rated as the number six club in the south."

Nurse Faces Death Trial

TO STAND TRIAL — Nurse Ann Capute of Plympton, Mass. is scheduled to stand trial today on charges in connection with the 1980 death of a cancer patient. (AP Laserphoto)

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP)

The pain for cancer patient Norma Leanues was so severe the night of May 18, 1980, that hospital workers heard her cries echo down the hallways. As the patient's husband kept vigil, a nurse eased her suffering with an injection.

The 54-year-old mother of four died sometime during the night — a victim, the death certificate said, of runaway cancer.

But Wednesday, Anne Capute, a 44-year-old licensed practical nurse, is to go on trial on charges of murdering Mrs. Leanues.

The cause of death, according to Bristol County District Attorney Ronald Pina, was morphine sulfate, the powerful drug used to quench the fire of terminal pain.

Mrs. Capute, a nurse with three years' experience, has said she was following the doctor's orders when she injected Mrs. Leanues with what she claimed was less medication than was contained in previous doses.

Two other nurses who were on duty with Mrs. Capute are also charged. Registered nurses Nancy Robbins, 26, of Taunton and Judith Foley, 30, of Foxboro were indicted with Mrs. Capute last August on charges of murder and illegally distributing and administering a controlled substance.

Both have pleaded innocent and face separate trials in the case that Pina, a former state legislator, says could set needed standards in the way doctors and hospitals care for terminally ill patients.

Mrs. Capute's trial is expected to be a long one with the likelihood that jury selection will take a week.

Defense attorney Pat Piscitelli said the long-delayed trial comes as a relief to his client, who was suspended from Morton Hospital in Taunton after the investigation. Mrs. Capute, a mother of seven, has been unable to find another nursing job.

Piscitelli — a Brockton attorney who once represented Albert DeSalvo, the reputed Boston Strangler — disagrees with Pina's assessment that the case could set a national precedent.

"It's significant for what he's trying to make it," said Piscitelli. "From my estimate the woman did what any nurse does: comply with a doctor's order to make the patient comfortable."

The trial is at least the third case in recent years in which hospital personnel were accused of the "mercy killings" of their patients.

In 1979 Mary Rose Robaczynski, a 24-year-old nurse at Maryland General Hospital in Baltimore was charged with murder for allegedly stopping a patient's respirator. A mistrial was declared and the state dropped the charges after Ms. Robaczynski agreed to surrender her nursing license.

Last year, Jani Adams, a nurse at a Las Vegas hospital, was charged with disconnecting a patient's life support system in a case dubbed "the Angel of Death." The charges against the 32-year-old nurse were thrown out because of lack of evidence.

This year, state and local officials began investigating 25 mysterious deaths of elderly patients at Community Hospital of the Valleys in Perris, Calif. The investigation, expanded to several other hospitals, found that at least nine deaths may have been caused by lethal doses of lidocaine, a drug commonly used to regulate erratic heart beats.

No one has been charged so far in that case.

An irony in the Massachusetts case is that some medical experts believe Mrs. Leanues was not terminally ill.

Mrs. Leanues discovered she had cancer after undergoing hip surgery in 1979. Medical evidence gathered after her death showed the cancer had spread from an undiagnosed tumor in her breast.

She received radiation treatment in Rhode Island but returned to Morton — a 200-bed facility in the southeastern corner of the state — for an operation to remove a malignant tumor from her spine.

She died two weeks after the operation. The cause of death was listed as lung and bone cancer.

But four days after she died, hospital officials began an internal investigation, stating publicly that they had discovered the "possible intentional overdose sedation of a terminally ill patient."

Pina had the body exhumed six weeks later and state pathologist Ambrose Keeley found no evidence of cancer in the woman's vital organs. Keeley, an important witness in the case, died this summer, forcing a three-month delay in the trial.

When a grand jury was convened, witnesses included cancer specialist Dr. Robert Green of Boston's New England Deaconess Hospital. After appearing before the panel, Green told reporters Mrs. Leanues might have lived for several years with the proper treatment.

While the grand jury was considering the information, The Brockton Enterprise published a copyright story quoting transcripts from hospital interviews with nurses involved in the case.

One nurse was quoted as saying she was only trying to help the patient — not kill her. But the transcripts also quoted her as saying "I just wanted to stop her suffering...she had enough MS (morphine sulfate) to kill an elephant...I knew I killed her the next morning."

The nurse was not identified. Mrs. Capute has denied the statements were hers.

Makeup By

Age Fourteen

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Most girls have started wearing makeup by age 14, a survey of 1,500 teens between the ages of 12 and 20 indicates.

The poll, conducted by Teen magazine's Teen Research Gang, found that 93 percent of all teen-age girls use lip makeup, more than half using it daily, and 85 percent had started by age 14. Other statistics show that the overwhelming majority also were using eye and face makeup by that age.

Flower Oil Is Used To Run Tractor

FARGO, N.D. (UPI) — It's been quite a while since North Dakota farmers found out sunflowers were good for something besides chewing seeds.

Now, there's sunflower cooking oil, sunflower candy and even sunflower cookies.

But the use of sunflower oil to power tractors could overshadow all the other uses found for the tall, pretty, brown and yellow plant of which 3 to 4 million acres were harvested nationally last year.

To see how well a dozen tractors run on a mix of sunflower oil and diesel fuel, agricultural engineers in North Dakota State University's extension service are working with a group in Grand Forks, N.D., called Flower Power.

The extension officials also are testing a variety of vegetable oils on a combine engine at Allis Chalmers in Harvey, Ill.

NDSU agricultural engineer Ken Kaufman says the results of the $200,000 Allis Chalmers project will not be known for another 18 months.

A series of 15 tests — including one test each for soybean and peanut oils — is underway, Kaufman said.

The sunflower oil will be tested at various mixes with diesel to learn "which percentage looks most promising," Kaufman said.

Allis Chalmers is renting NDSU time on a number of its machines to test the four-cylinder, 3.3 liter engine because, he said, "You couldn't even start to set up a laboratory like we need for $200,000."

Six of 12 spanking new Allis Chalmers, John Deere and J.I. Case tractors have been powered with 25 percent sunflower oil this year with the rest fueled by a 50 percent mix.

So far, about 440 hours have been put on the tractor engines, said Flower Power President Tweeten, who farms near Grand Forks. Most tractors do not develop any engine problems until at least 4,000 hours, he said.

The farmers are operating the tractors just as they would any other farm machinery, Tweeten said. "We prefer that they run them as hard or soft as they would normally."

"We are quite impressed with the lack of problems," Tweeten said.

A faulty injector, not fuel, may have caused problems with one tractor, he said.

The weather has been warm this summer, but cooler temperatures could mean a difference in operational quality. "Cool weather just might thicken it up," Tweeten said.

Oil is extracted by a screw expeller, which squeezes about 3½ gallons of oil from about 95 pounds of seed.

In North Dakota, about 5 to 6 gallons of fuel are required to produce an acre of sunflower or small grain. That means an acre of sunflowers could produce enough fuel to grow eight to 10 acres of sunflowers or small grain.

American farmers used about 3.4 billion gallons of diesel fuel in 1979. Given sunflower oil's lower rate of efficiency, 3.6 billion gallons would be needed if diesel were to be replaced completely.

That would require harvesting nearly 68 million acres of sunflowers yearly.

But unless diesel prices increase dramatically from the current $1.25 per gallon, switching to a sunflower mix will not be feasible.

"Sunflowers bring less money for fuel than they would on the market," Tweeten said. "Until it is economically feasible, we're not getting excited yet."

"It's a recipe on the shelf, so to speak, for the future," he said.

But the mix could mean fuel security to farmers in light of another energy crunch.

"Two years ago, some of the farmers here couldn't get fuel," Tweeten said. "We said then, 'Well, whatever we have to pay for it, we need it.'"

See Divorce Rate Linked To Boredom

By ELLEN DEBENPORT LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Arkansas is a quiet rural state, cabins nestled in the Ozarks and church steeples rising above the delta, poor but proud, a Norman Rockwell painting come to life. Right? Right. And for just those reasons, it's a breeding ground for divorce, say sociologists and counselors.

According to government figures, Arkansas' divorce rate is higher than any state but Nevada, where quickie divorces skew the statistics. For each 1,000 people, Arkansas had 8.9 divorces in 1979 — the latest year available — compared to 5.3 divorces nationwide.

Arkansas' divorce laws are fairly liberal, but more important is the fact that Arkansas is rural and poor, say sociologists. Its largest city is Little Rock, with a metropolitan area of about 300,000, and its per capita income falls near the bottom of the national scale.

"In a rural state, marriages occur at very early ages," said Mark Krain, an associate professor of sociology at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. "That's the single highest predictor of divorce. Marriages that occur when both partners are younger than 18 are three to five times as likely to break up."

Low incomes also put stress on a marriage, said Rebecca Ward, a social worker at Psychotherapist Associates in Ferndale, Ark. "More women are working now, and it's not just because they want to identify themselves. They're working for necessity," Ms. Ward said. "If it's a stressful marriage anyway, that kind of stress can be devastating."

But another therapist said couples are under relatively little stress in Arkansas, where towns are small and the major pastime is looking at the scenery. "I find that as many people get a divorce out of boredom as out of stress," said Bob Edwards, a pastor who directs the Counseling Centers of Arkansas.

The lowest divorce rate is in Massachusetts — 3.0 per 1,000 in 1979 — and the rate is generally low in the Northeast. Marriage rates are also lower there. Krain attributed this to an older, wealthier and more settled population.

Krain and the counselors said increased acceptance of divorce makes breaking up not so hard to do. But Arkansas' laws make it easier, too.

Once a person has lived in Arkansas 60 days, he may file for a divorce and expect it to be granted in another 30 days if it is uncontested. Neighboring states of Texas, Tennessee and Louisiana require six months of residency, and in Louisiana, the couple must be separated for one year before the divorce is granted.

The only catch in Arkansas is the lack of a no-fault divorce law. Spouses must accuse each other of something, although that could be "general indignities."

It's also easy to get married in Arkansas. The Legislature this year abolished the three-day waiting period between the time a marriage license is issued and the wedding. Now a couple can be married immediately.

The 1981 Legislature also lowered the legal marriage age for men from 21 to 18. It was already 18 for women.

Not all couples wait until age 18. "The 'Coal Miner's Daughter' situation is still extremely common," said Krain, a reference to singer Loretta Lynn's marriage at age 13.

"I have students here who are divorced with two kids at the age of 23, have been divorced several years. There are women here at 30 with their kids away at school," he said. "There are women who marry spectacularly early. They've lived a whole life stage by the time they're in their middle 20s."

Taste-Test The Chicken

FOOD CRITIC — Pei-Wen Novak concentrates on her evaluation of a fried chicken morsel. The 10-year-old of State College, Pa., was one of the consumers of all ages who took part in a recent taste test of a popular new fast food: breaded, seasoned and fried chicken patties and fillets.

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — Dressed with casual elegance, the young woman in the back row daintily licked three manicured fingers and concentrated on a yellow questionnaire.

Ahead, ramrod straight, silver hair peeking from a white yachting cap, a professorial-looking man broke a chicken morsel in half. Popping a piece into his mouth and chewing slowly, he seemed oblivious to the giggling youngsters nearby.

"Your piece was great," one of them announced to a friend. "But mine doesn't taste like chicken."

"Why do you think they want our opinions?" asked another muncher, who admitted that, while the chicken tidbits weren't bad, he'd really come for the free ice cream cone.

Dr. Joseph H. MacNeil, professor of food science at The Pennsylvania State University, regarded with satisfaction the dwindling pile of questionnaires being handed to newcomers by a student.

"A successful trial," he said of the tasting by hundreds of consumers of a selection of a popular new fast food — the breaded, seasoned and fried chicken patties and fillets, sold by major fast-food chains and increasingly by supermarkets.

When it comes to food, MacNeil believes, the most sophisticated testing procedures must be supplemented by the human factor. So from time to time, he offers free ice cream cones to volunteers who will taste, and rate, foods he is testing at his Penn State lab.

Their comments are crucial to MacNeil, who specializes in analyzing food quality and characteristics. His aim: to improve the palatability and nutritional value of many processed foods, especially meats.

An expert on chicken hot dogs and other types of mechanically deboned poultry meat, MacNeil got interested about two years ago in the new types of chicken products.

"The existing products vary greatly in composition, quality and taste," he explains. "Moreover, thanks to the growing popularity of what could be called a 'fast food chicken burger,' many more companies are making or planning to introduce similar products."

"While the fillets are basically similar, consisting of a chunk of chicken breast, there's some differences in tenderness and seasoning. The real diversity, however, is found among chicken patties. These are made of flaked or fragmented chicken, and some have a protein binder, such as egg white, soy or textured vegetable protein."

A lot of experimentation as well as research is going on in the industry, MacNeil says, but many of the studies are by corporations reluctant to share their findings.

"Because we've done related studies, we've had many requests for information and have secured some industrial grants to continue our research," he says. "We're trying to determine the characteristics of a highly acceptable fast food chicken product."

How? By getting tasters to rate chicken samples on one of two scales — "very tender to very tough" and "not acceptable to highly acceptable," by analyzing how long different types of patties can be kept and what changes may occur; and by using instruments to objectively measure such difficult-to-define qualities as "cohesiveness," "chewability" and "toughness."

"Thanks to a one-of-a-kind machine we had designed and built for us about a year ago," says MacNeil, "we've been getting some good data on cohesiveness. We measure the force needed to pull the product apart."

"With some modification, the machine also measures 'sheer' or toughness — the force needed to cut through the substance. And while we haven't figured out how to measure chewability, we're working on it."

"For a manufactured food like chicken patties," he adds, "many variables go into deciding public acceptance. We're seeking to understand these factors, to aid the overall effort to produce a tasty, nutritious and storable fast-food chicken product."

Students Design Prison Items

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — Industrial-design students from four universities recently built working prototypes of prison furniture and equipment as part of a student design program.

Students from Georgia Tech, Arizona State, Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan and Carnegie-Mellon in Pennsylvania participated in the Armo Inc. program called, "Cost Effective Products For Prisons."

The designs included a portable food-transport system with temperature control, a space-efficient cell-furniture unit, a portable-computer law library, and an environmental-control system.

SUBS FOR TAIWAN ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — A Dutch shipbuilding firm has announced signing a contract to build two submarines for the Taiwan navy.

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE — Madame Huang Xiu Hua works with her sewing machine in her tiny mud-brick house in Peking. She quit her job at a state-owned laundry to start her own private laundry business and now has more washing and mending than she can handle.

Enterprise In China Survives In A Laundry

By VICTORIA GRAHAM Associated Press Writer PEKING (AP) — The Chinese laundry has returned to China. The private laundry, which once symbolized Chinese family enterprise abroad, has made a comeback in the socialist motherland which once panned all private business as wicked "capitalist tails."

workers. Soon, 17 more families will be trying to get rich with the blessings of the state. Just down the street workmen are putting the finishing touches on a stove for a new Shanghai noodle shop.

This capital city's first reported private laundry — once a contradiction in terms — is run by an industrious middle-aged woman in a mud-brick house with a white Lotus brand washing machine.

Peking now has 4,015 licensed private businesses, according to government statistics. They include restaurants, bicycle repair shops, barbers, hairdressers and pedicab drivers.

Huang Xiu Hua, 47, quit her job at a state-owned laundry two years ago to start her own business with personalized service. In less than one year she has more washing and mending than she can handle and wants to hire assistants.

The capitalist spirit, however, still has a long way to go. In 1956 Peking had 42,000 households engaged in individual business. In 1960 individual economy was wiped out in a "communization" campaign. The returning "capitalist tails" were lopped off during the cultural revolution.

People come from miles around to have Madame Huang stitch and launder their clothes. She now makes more than 100 yuan, about $66 in U.S. currency, a month — 30 yuan more than her state laundry wages.

Because of unemployment and the need for more services, however, China again is encouraging entrepreneurs. Business applications in general are approved, red tape is being eliminated and the city tax bureau has reduced the profits tax from 5 percent to 3 percent.

"And I'm my own boss now and set my own hours," the tiny woman said, puffing a cigarette which she'd rolled with expertise. "Young people wouldn't like this kind of work, but I would like to hire more middle-aged women to help me out." She figured she could pay them about 50 yuan a month.

Last year Madame Huang paid less than $2 in taxes. She bought a sewing machine and the tiny Lotus washing machine, which stands in the bedroom shared by her three children.

Hiring per se is still forbidden as exploitation of labor, but relatives can work in a private business and apprentices can be taken on for pay.

The machine is so small she can wash only one padded jacket at a time. She can wash four of the heavy garments in a day. She charges the equivalent of $4 for each winter jacket and $1.50 for light garments.

Madame Huang is another symbol of emerging and officially encouraged private enterprise in China. She has one of 13 family-run enterprises in the eastern city district. They include watch and pen repair shops and a home repair service started by six retired construction workers who are tired of long waits and indifferent and sometimes rude service at state-run enterprises.

"I cater to people's personal needs," Madame Huang said. "If someone wants his garment soon, I can rush it" — for a price, of course.

Crocodile Babies Bred In Florida

By RANDALL HACKLEY Associated Press Writer MIAMI (AP) — The 17 baby Siamese crocodiles may be ugly, but to Dade County Metrozoo officials, the 3-inch-long reptiles' looks are secondary.

ty where the broad-snouted cousins of the American crocodile are harbored.

What matters is that for the third time since 1978, Miami has successfully bred in captivity the rarely seen Southeast Asian crocodile. "They're not pretty," Metrozoo reptile keeper Ron Magill said of the newly hatched babies, "but these may now be extinct in the wild."

The Siamese crocodiles come in greens, browns and blacks. They rarely reach 9 feet in length, while America's crocodiles grow up to 14 feet long, said Magill.

The curator of the Western Hemisphere's only successful Siamese crocodile breeding facility finds no fault with the creature's looks.

Professional poachers in Southeast Asia make a handsome living selling the Siamese crocodiles' hides, which are made into expensive luggage, shoes and cases much prized by Europeans, he said.

"Crocodile-wise, they're so ugly that people want to look at them," said Metrozoo general curator Bill Ziegler. Only Thailand has a facility

The poaching and habitat destruction through intensive field irrigation have made Siamese crocodiles nearly extinct in the wild, Magill said.

The freshwater crocodiles in the Metrozoo facility have bred three times since 1978, including the 17 hatchlings over the weekend.

Five Students On Horseback To Emulate Fictitious Don Quixote

By CAROLYN ANDERSON
The Prescott Courier

PRESCOTT, Ariz. (AP) — They plan to travel light, these five Prescott College students and their instructor, who will heed the call of that fictitious 16th-century knight errant, Don Quixote.

With them will go just the basic supplies — bedroll, change of clothes, jacket, canteen and a little food.

Perhaps more important will be the horses — six fine horses and six good saddles bought in Argamasilla de Alba before the six begin their journey through the arid countryside of La Mancha, Spain.

Since the intent is to live in the spirit of Miguel de Cervantes' famous knight, little else is required, says Pedro Aisa, the instructor, who has taught in a number of colleges in both countries.

The trek, starting in September, culminates a year's study for the students — Liz Friedman, Peggy Millet, Julia Patrick, Andrew Thompson and graduate student Scott Hecker.

It also caps a 20-year dream for Aisa, who says these students' willingness, like Cervantes' hero, to mix dreams and reality make it possible.

Tourist agencies spread Don Quixote's purported trail across colorful travel brochures, but Aisa says he believes his group will be the first to make the trip in its original mode — on horseback.

"We will ride into the villages, six people on six beautiful horses, and everyone will come out to see us," he says.

And just as Don Quixote paid no attention to schedules, neither will this group. "We will choose our direction each day, going and stopping as we please," says Aisa.

Aisa, who was born in Spain, where he completed his formal studies, says the students will learn about the customs and character of La Mancha through their adventures in the region where Cervantes lived and wrote.

When they are invited, they will spend the night with villagers. When there are no invitations, there are the bedrolls.

They have been preparing for the trip for some time. The students have studied Don Quixote in both Spanish and English, and Aisa has taught them to speak Spanish.

They also have touched base with the politics, history and geography of Spain.

And they have spent considerable time during the past few months learning about horses. Only two — Aisa and Ms. Millet — are accomplished riders.

So, says Aisa, "they learn from the beginning, how to clean stables, to clean the hoofs, to know if their horse is well or not."

They already knew how to live outside and make do with very little, he says, adding: "I have warned them over and over not to expect comfort on this trip."

"What I want is for us to travel like Don Quixote, to be thirsty and hot at times, to sit under the trees and speak of our ideas," he says.

For all but Hecker, the trek represents a portion of fall studies at Prescott College. Although they hope to live in Don Quixote spirit, they also have set goals in keeping with their majors.

But for them all, says Aisa, "It is the process and not the end result that counts. The end will take care of itself."

Dedicated Life To Beautifying Hawaii

KAILUA-KONA, Hawaii (UPI) — When L.W. "Bill" Bryan retired two decades ago after 40 years as chief forester, everyone hailed his life-long dedication to making Hawaii's Big Island more beautiful.

Before retirement he did a lot. He supervised planting of more than 10 million trees island-wide, preservation of scores of endangered plants, introduction of hundreds of exotic plant species, establishment of arboreta. He helped develop the island's network of weather stations, its parks. He spearheaded the Civilian Conservation Corps programs during the Depression.

The only difference now, the still-spry 86-year-old Bryan said, while tending his cacti and succulent collection, is that he does not get paid for his work and advice.

"I still get a lot of calls on plants and forestry matters, but I don't charge," he said.

Then, eyes twinkling, he laughed and added, "When I reached 80, I decided I wouldn't work for money. I decided that all I was doing was enriching Uncle Sam."

"If anybody wants to call me up and ask a question, I'll tell them what I know, but no more money — and no more taxes."

A native of Boston, Mass.,

Bryan reached Hawaii's shores shortly after World War I.

"I arrived on May 1, 1921 on the SS Lurline after a seven-day voyage with a deck-load of cattle," he said. "All I had was my bedroll and $90."

In his years as forester, he said, "I've covered every inch of this island either on foot or horseback."

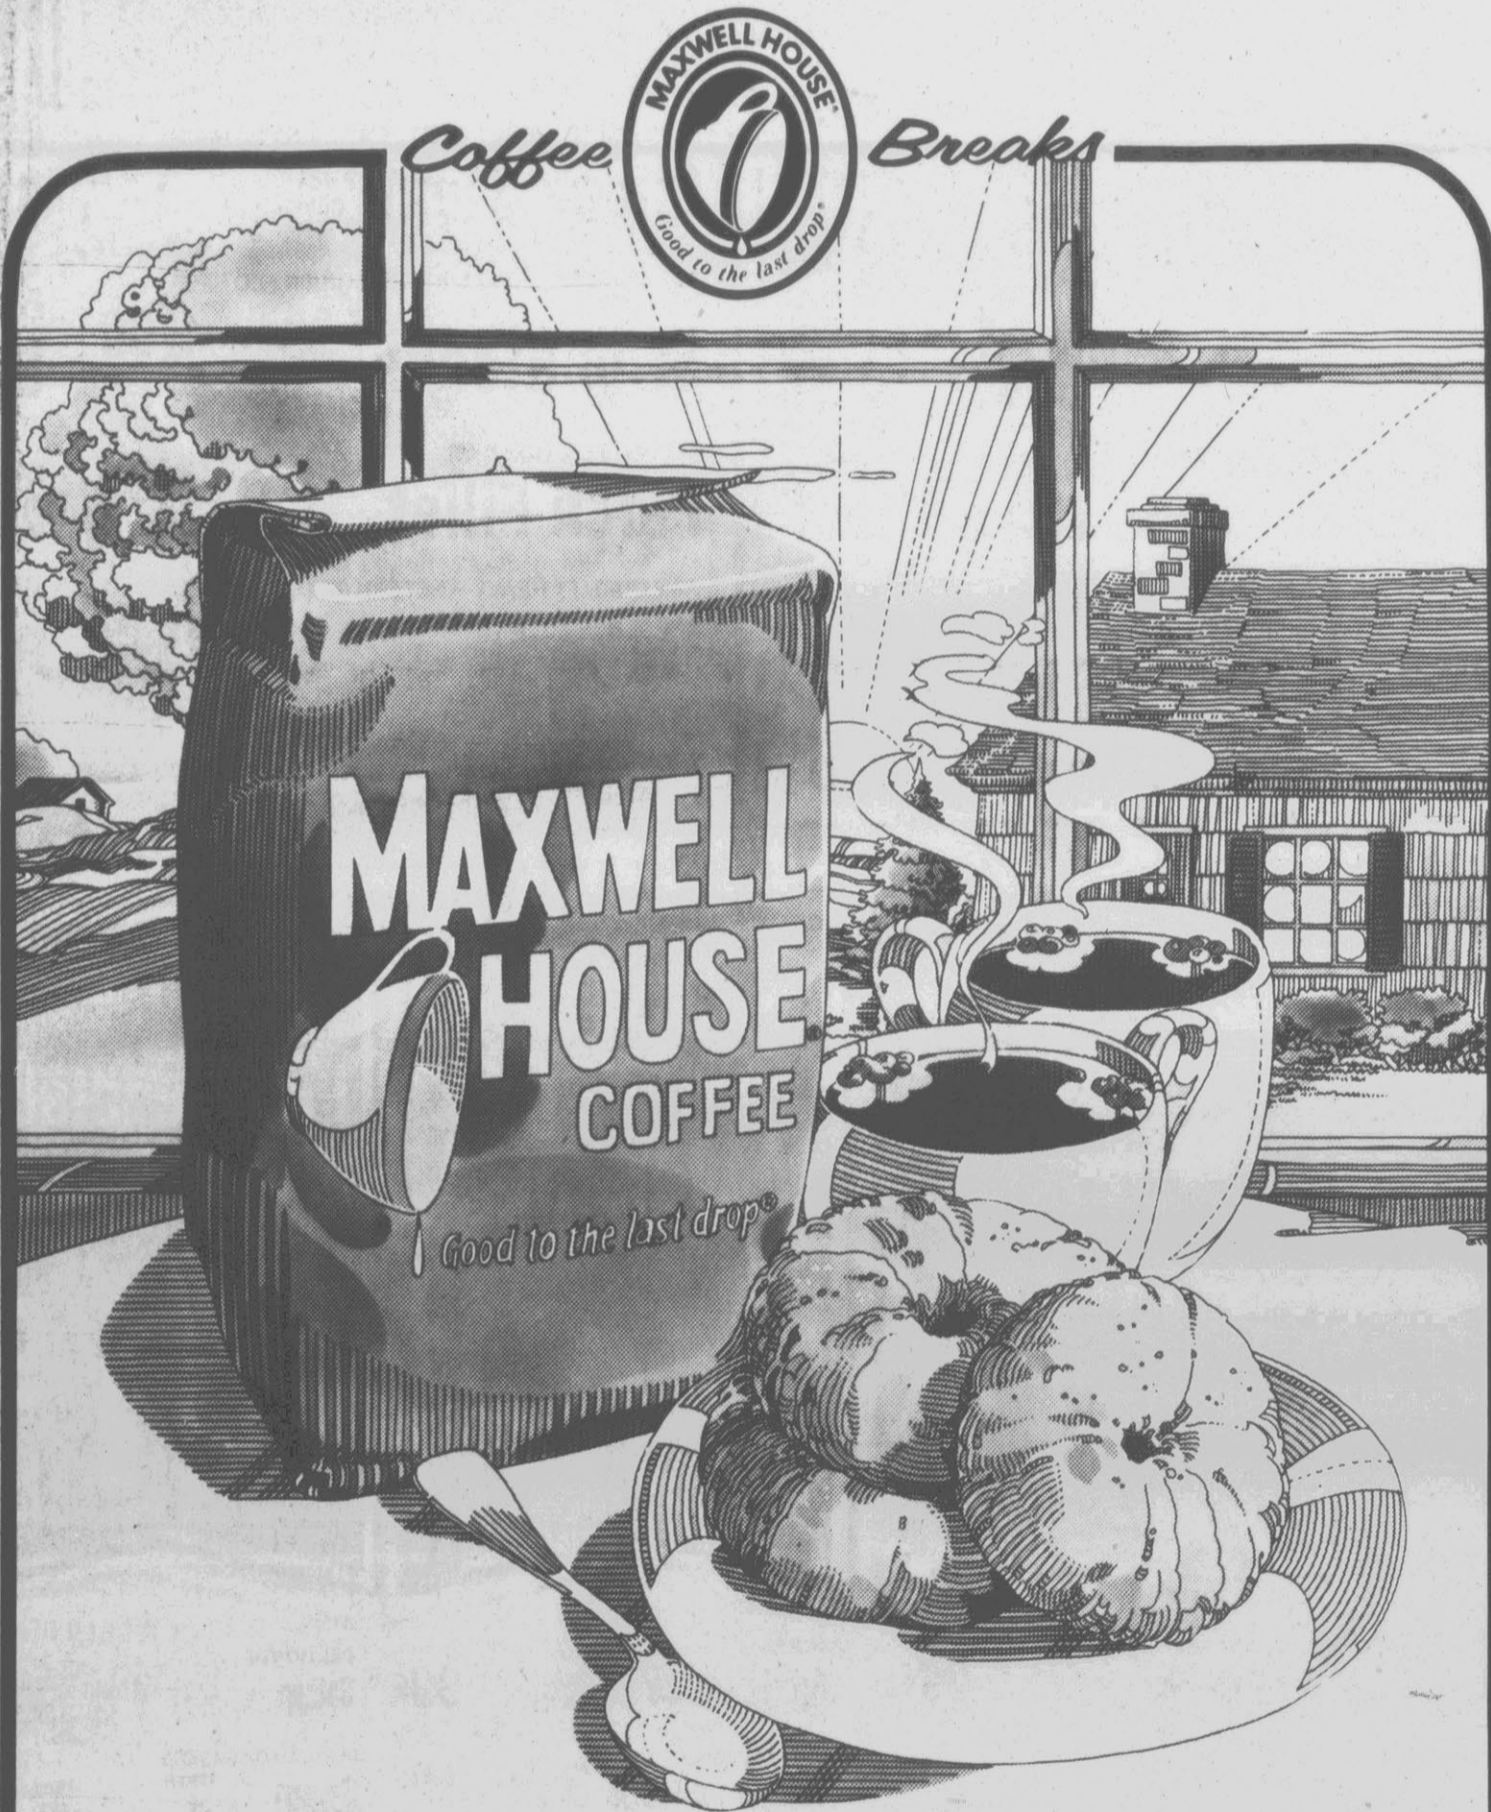

Of the trees he helped successfully plant, the Forestry Department said they "are now being harvested and manufactured into useful products and in this way aiding our economy."

One of the plants introduced to the island by Bryan is the Agnes Joaquin vanda orchid, which has become one of the state's leading floral exports.

Through his careful charting and patience, Bryan today is able to quickly advise people interested in growing a specific plant whether it will flourish or not.

"I've pretty much tried 'em all," he said.

Although Bryan concedes he no longer can move about the state's biggest island as he did in his younger days, he continues to dabble in the propagation of new plant species, and watch the products of his life-long efforts grow.

Experiences Shared By The Victims

By MARIA VIGIL
The Tucson Citizen
GREEN VALLEY, Ariz. (AP) — The man was talking to the group about his experiences when he stopped abruptly in mid-sentence.

"This is one of the things that happens," he said when he could continue. "My mind just goes blank on me."

The people to whom he spoke were not shocked or scared by what had taken place. They waited him out patiently and continued the meeting with business as usual.

For this group, such interruptions are part of its business. What brings this group together is Parkinson's disease, illness that afflicts its members and an estimated 1½ million others nationwide, most of them 60 or older.

Parkinson's has no known cause or cure. Often it starts with mild body tremors and ensuing listlessness. It can progress rapidly to advanced stages or remain at one level for years on end, but it is not fatal.

Victims suffer to some degree some or all of the following symptoms: slowness of movement and difficulty in starting movement; stiffness, rigidity and "freezing"; shaking or tremors that usually begin on one side of the body; loss of facial expression; difficulty in speaking and remembering, and restlessness.

These symptoms result from a disorder of certain brain cells that help to regulate body movements by releasing a chemical known as dopamine. Persons with Parkinson's disease lack the necessary amount of dopamine. Many take drugs that partly replace the chemical and help relieve symptoms.

But other problems often accompany the physical symptoms of the illness. Victims sometimes feel they have become a burden to family and friends. Some become impatient with themselves and feel worthless and depressed. Others may become inactive or apathetic.

Such reactions can put a strain on not only the victims of the disease, but their families and acquaintances as well. It is for this reason that more than 60 Parkinson's disease support groups across the nation — including three in Arizona — recently have formed. One such group is in Green Valley, the others are in Phoenix and Sun City.

"Some Parkinsonians tend to become closet cases because they shake or are in such poor physical shape. The group is one means we have to encourage them to live more useful lives," said Jean Bartling, wife of a sufferer and chairman of the local group.

Mrs. Bartling's husband, Melvin, started with symptoms of the disease some 12 years ago. As superintendent of construction for the California Water Co., Bartling's job required that he travel extensively.

"But it got to the point where I would have to drive for a couple of hours and then pull over to the side of the road to sleep," he said. "Some people in the office were asking me why I was shaking, and I wasn't even aware I was doing it."

It's not unusual for Parkinson's disease sufferers, their families and even their doctors to be unaware they have the disease, for it is among the hardest to diagnose, said Mrs. Bartling.

Research on drugs to treat the disease is continuing, but some of the prescribed drugs, while alleviating the serious symptoms of the disease, can cause other side effects. Nausea, dizziness, loss of appetite, involuntary bodily movements, mild swelling of the feet, blurred vision, dry mouth and constipation are a few.

Still, most patients agree the side effects of such drugs are more acceptable than the more severe symptoms of the disease.

The 20 local members and their spouses or friends exchange experiences and helpful information, have guest speaker and arrange recreational activities.

Thailand To Celebrate 200 Years

By DENIS D. GRAY
 Associated Press Writer
 BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thailand is preparing itself for a yearlong birthday party it hopes will shore up traditional strengths, such as religion and national unity, which helped keep it independent for 800 years.

The year 1822 will mark the 200th anniversary of both the founding of the capital city, Bangkok, and the beginning of a remarkable royal dynasty whose monarchs modernized the country, kept colonial power at bay and today are mainstays of an often troubled society.

Although the government will be all too happy to collect tourist revenue the celebrations are expected to generate and promises "pomp and splendor the likes of which are rarely seen in today's grim and gray world," the bicentennial is largely conceived as an inward-looking event.

Sandwiched among elaborate masked plays, royal processions and centuries-old religious ceremonies on the bicentennial calendar will be the provision of safe drinking water to up-country schools, village development projects and a tree-planting campaign in Bangkok, a once-ravishing capital now in the running for the title of Asia's ugliest city.

"We have not gone out of our way to commercialize the celebrations simply to attract more tourists," Lieut. Gen. Chan Anschutz, a key organizer, told foreign correspondents.

Some of the official objectives of the bicentennial have the ring of campaign slogans: "to promote Thailand's national identity," "to revive and promote Thailand's culture and national heritage," "to reinforce the national unity and solidarity of Thai people."

But some organizers appear genuinely concerned about the abandonment of traditions in a haphazard dash toward modernization; a social fabric rent by violence and disparities between the rural poor and urban elite; about threats from the outside, specifically communist Indochina.

They hope the bicentennial year will help get people pulling together again and focus special attention on two major unifying factors in Thailand — Buddhism and the monarchy.

Unlike the founders of his Chakri dynasty, who held absolute power, the current king, Bhumipol Adulyadej, is a constitutional monarch. But through his popularity, an almost obsessive dedication to development work and the mystique of his position, the 54-year-old monarch exercises considerable influence over Thailand's course.

Chan said that about $15 million had already been committed by the government for the bicentennial and that with anticipated contributions from foreign governments and the Thai and foreign private sector, some $50 million will be spent. The celebrations will stretch out through the year but climax April 6-21.

Discrimination By Clubs Cited

NEW YORK (AP) — Social club discrimination barring certain people from membership for reasons of race, sex, religion or national origin remains "one of the last vestiges of institutional bigotry in America," says the American Jewish Committee.

It issued a study booklet saying such clubs, while called "private," actually are made up of members who "often scarcely know each other" but which nevertheless serve for informal business and professional contacts, so that denial of access "can be a severe handicap."

EMERGENCY'S END?
 DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Deputy Prime Minister Abdul Bari says emergency rule may end Sept. 21 and the government has also agreed to release most political prisoners.

All Sears water heaters come equipped with safety relief valves.

*In accordance with U.S. Dept. of Energy Test Procedures, the operating cost was calculated on the basis of 64.3 gallons per day of hot water usage by a family of 4 with 90°F temp. rise, with gas rate of 36.7¢ per therm and electricity rate of 4.97¢ per kilowatt hour (U.S. government national average cost figures). Savings were calculated by subtracting the operating cost of our Power Miser™ 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric models from the cost of operating our standard 40-gal. gas and 52-gal. electric water heaters. Savings may be more or less depending on your hot water usage and local utility rates.
