Reagan Pledges No Social Security Cut

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan says he will propose no further cuts in Social Security but will consider reductions in other benefit programs to balance the budget by 1984. Meanwhile, he is threatening to veto any "budget-busting bills" passed by Congress.

But Reagan and Republican congressional leaders still are undecided about where to trim the budget for fiscal 1982 to keep the federal deficit close to the president's target of $42.5 billion.

Reagan acknowledged Tuesday that current efforts to trim fiscal 1982 spending had caused "a great deal of confusion," but he pledged to continue his fight for a balanced budget.

"We'll continue to make budget adjustments as needed and we'll hold the line," he told a reception for private citizens who had lobbied for his tax cut and budget programs.

But Reagan said he would not balance the budget "at the expense of those dependent" on Social Security.

Republican congressional leaders asked Reagan on Tuesday to consider slashing Social Security, Medicaid and other benefit programs as well as increasing his planned reduction in defense spending.

"The president announced that he has no plans to propose additional cuts in Social Security programs beyond those he has already submitted to the Congress," White House spokesman David Gergen said after Reagan met with the Republicans. "This announcement is intended to dampen and end any speculation that the president is examining further cuts in Social Security ... as a means of balancing the budget."

Gergen said Reagan "took under advisement" the senators' proposal that he try to cut other entitlement programs, including food stamps, welfare, unemployment, veterans' pensions, Medicaid and Medicare.

Last spring, Reagan proposed cutting Social Security benefits by $53 billion over the next five years to save the system from bankruptcy. Among his proposals were a three-month delay in cost-of-living increases and stiffer penalties for early retirement.

According to a Senate document made available to reporters Tuesday, Baker and other senators suggested cuts that would trim $16 billion from the anticipated deficit in 1982, $38 billion next year and $60 billion in 1984.

Included in the 1982 plan was a $5 billion reduction in spending from entitlement programs.

The summary included a proposal to hold cost-of-living increases for Social Security and other programs to 3 percentage points below the government's cost-of-living index, at a savings estimated at $2 billion.

It also included a cap on Medicaid, a plan rejected by Congress earlier in the year and other, unspecified cuts in entitlement programs other than Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid. Together, these cuts would save an estimated $3 billion.

The list called for other 1982 cuts of $4 billion from defense and $3 billion elsewhere in the budget, in addition to $4 billion in increased revenues.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., and Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., a close Reagan friend, said after the meeting that it will be extraordinarily difficult to make the cuts Reagan wants if the only budget area cut is "discretionary spending," which funds the operations of Cabinet departments and scores of non-entitlement programs.

O'Connor Confirmation In Senate Seen Friday

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sandra Day O'Connor, passing the first test with no one against her, is just one vote away from taking her place among eight men on the Supreme Court. That should be out of the way by the end of the week.

Tuesday that the full Senate confirm the 51-year-old Arizona appeals court judge to succeed retired Justice Potter Stewart. The vote was 17-0, with one leading anti-abortion senator supporting Mrs. O'Connor and another abstaining.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., the committee chairman, said he would attempt to schedule the final vote in the Senate for Friday, allowing her to be sworn in Sept. 25 in time for the court's fall session starting Oct. 5.

not yet decided if he will cast an identical vote when the nomination comes to the Senate floor.

The only committee member who didn't vote for Mrs. O'Connor was Alabama Republican Jeremiah Denton. He voted "present," saying he did not know enough about her views on abortion or other "great legal issues of the day" to either support or oppose her.

If Denton votes yes, Mrs. O'Connor's confirmation could be unanimous. Tuesday's committee vote reflected Mrs. O'Connor's support from conservatives and liberals alike.

"I appreciate his point of view," Mrs. O'Connor said afterward.

Thurmond said she showed during three days of hearings last week that she has "all of the good qualities" needed to make a good Supreme Court justice.

Aides to Denton said he has

Sen. John East, R-N.C., said he was satisfied Mrs. O'Connor is "a conservative woman of conservative instincts."

Ed Carter In Council Race

Edward (Ed) Carter, for eight years a member of the Greenville City Board of Education, filed Tuesday as a candidate for the Greenville City Council.

A native of Havelock, Carter was educated at Virginia State College and served for one year as a research assistant in physics at Columbia University.

Development Plats Okayed

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Approval was given last night by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission to two preliminary development plats and a request to close a portion of a street was recommended to the City Council for action.

Commissioners gave their approval to a preliminary plat submitted for Section Three of Fairlane Farms, located on the west side of Hooker Road across from Cambridge Subdivision.

The section, according to Bobby Roberson, planning director, contains 9.4 acres and 32 lots. He said the subdivision was initiated in September of 1979.

Col. Harvey Bradshaw, developer, said that due to the number of preliminary plats submitted for Fairlane Farms since 1979, there had been some confusion as to which plat was the document of record. The current plat makes minor cul-de-sac and lot arrangement changes a part of the record, it was noted.

Approval was also given to a preliminary plat for revision three of Tree Hill Subdivision, located west of Brownlea Drive, off of Eric Court. The proposed section involves 3.7 acres and the design shows approximately 10 duplex units.

Roberson said that a question has remained since the development was proposed as to who holds responsibility for improving Eric Court, which has not been accepted by the city. The developers have attempted to take Eric Court out of dedication and make it a private drive but neighboring property owners have balked at consenting to have the street withdrawn from dedication.

Phil Dickerson, engineer for the developers, said there does not seem to be a reasonable way to withdraw the street from dedication and he added that "circumstances have us locked into the situation."

Commissioner Bill Mitchum, noting proposed cul-de-sac development on Eric Court, said he hated to see the cul-de-sac included. He stated that the cul-de-sac "serves absolutely no purpose."

Roberson acknowledged that the developers have a design problem.

Dickerson said it has been mentioned that since the street was never accepted by the city, the original owners still own it and could grant an easement for building a private drive.

Commissioners endorsed a request by Donald Gorham and others to close a portion of Pearl Drive, located west of Allendale Road adjoining Peoples Baptist Temple Church.

Skip Browder, planner, said a section of Pearl Drive in Red Oak was left undeveloped and the church later purchased the property. Browder noted that if the street were extended it would go through the church sanctuary and he said there is no need for the section to remain in dedication.

Approval was given subject to the retention of electric and gas easements needed by Greenville Utilities Commission.

Board members voted to table action on a possible amendment to Section 32-62 of the Zoning Ordinance to include an "other activities" clause in the special use section of the Neighborhood Commercial (CN) District.

Roberson said the clause would serve as a general "catch all" section in the CN district. He said the amendment involves a technical change.

Single-Issues Warned

WASHINGTON (AP) - Anti-abortion and Moral Majority leaders say they will not be deterred by Sen. Barry Goldwater's charge that they endanger America by "injecting religious issues into the affairs of state."

The Arizona senator, a long-time conservative who was the 1964 Republican candidate for president, told the Senate on Tuesday that "single-issue religious groups ... could tear apart the very spirit of our representative system."

Goldwater specifically mentioned the religious fundamentalist and politically conservative organization Moral Majority and the anti-abortion group Pro-Life, also known as March for Life.

"I am warning them today: I will fight them every step of the way if they try to dictate their moral convictions to all Americans in the name of 'conservatism,'" he said.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, head of Moral Majority, responded, "I have been a strong supporter of Senator Goldwater, but his warning to me and to other conservatives will not deter us from our constitutional right and duty to speak out on the great moral issues of the day."

Nellie Gray, national chairman of March for Life, said her organization would make abortion "the single issue for every candidate for any office at any level, whether elected or appointed."

Goldwater asked, "Can anyone look at the carnage in Iran, the bloodshed in Northern Ireland or the bombs bursting in Lebanon and yet question the dangers of injecting religious issues into the affairs of state?"

Falwell said this was "either a deliberate misrepresentation or it betrays a total lack of comprehension of the real problems in those countries, problems that are fundamentally political and not religious."

Said Goldwater: "The uncompromising position of these groups is a divisive element that could tear apart the very spirit of our representative system, if they gain sufficient strength."

"Just who do they think they are? And from where do they presume to claim the right to dictate their moral beliefs to me?"

Another Bomb Attempt Fails

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) - Terrorists made an unsuccessful attempt Wednesday to bomb the U.S. Rhein-Main military air base at Frankfurt, one day after the commander of the U.S. Army in Europe was wounded slightly in an ambush, West German police reported.

attack on U.S. personnel in West Germany in just over two weeks.

On Tuesday, Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen and his wife were slightly injured when terrorists attacked their armor-plated sedan with grenades and small arms fire on the outskirts of Heidelberg, the Army's European headquarters.

A police spokesman said two fire extinguishers rigged as a bomb were found at the base adjoining Frankfurt's Rhein-Main airport, one of Europe's busiest.

On Aug. 31, a car bomb in the parking lot at the U.S. Air Force headquarters in Ramstein blew up, injuring 18 Americans including a brigadier general and two West Germans.

The cylinders were filled with an unidentified explosive, tied with cable and equipped with a timer, the spokesman reported. He said police experts defused the bombs on a stretch of railroad near the base.

Several days later American cars in a U.S. housing area near Wiesbaden were set afire, and last Sunday the home of the U.S. consul in Frankfurt was firebombed. No one was hurt in either of those attacks.

Eleven Are Listed As Scholarship Semifinalists

By JERRY RAYNOR

Reflector Staff Writer
Eleven Pitt County seniors, one from D. H. Conley High School and ten from Rose High School, have been named semifinalists in the annual scholarship competition coordinated by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

As juniors in the 1980-81 school year, these students were among more than one million American youths enrolled in over 18,000 secondary schools across the nation who took the PSAT/NMSQT tests given as the preliminary step in determining selection of semifinalists.

Semifinalists are named from each state, from American commonwealths and territories, and from American schools overseas in foreign countries. Seniors qualifying as semifinalists represent the top half of one percent of each state's high school senior classes.

Later, in the spring of 1982, about 90 percent of the semifinalists are expected to advance to finalists. Those selected as finalists will become recipients of one of the various categories of National Merit Scholarships.

Pitt County seniors announced as semifinalists are:

D. H. Conley High School
- Leo J. Cormier, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo J. Cormier, in addition to his high school studies, is currently taking a machine shop course at Pitt Community college. A former member of the French Club, Leo is a trumpet player. He is a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses Church of Greenville.

J. H. Rose High School
- William S. Bost, III. The son of Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Bost, Jr., William has for three years been a member of the Key Club and on the SGA, serving as a representative, a class president and sergeant-at-arms. In his junior year he lettered in basketball. A member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, he is active as a regular acolyte and in Episcopal Young Churchmen. He likes golf, fishing, hunting, sailing and reading.

- James W. Bright is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Bright. James' is president of the Medieval Club, which promotes fantasy role-playing games, notably Dungeons and Dragons. He is a member of the Sierra Club and last year was in the "L'il Abner" cast. Other than Dungeons and Dragons, James' primary interest is to amass a fortune and retire young.

- Andrew J. Harris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Harris. An active member of the Rose Drama Club and the International Thesbian Society, Andrew performed in school musicals in 1980 and 1981. He was a reporter on "Rampant Lines" in his junior year. His interests include guitar, mysticism, and rugby.

- Alayna Keller is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman

Keller. Active in many school affairs, Alayna is a member of the Spanish and Health Career Clubs, the Medieval Society, president of the International Club and president of Girl Scouts Troop 534. She attended Governor's School in Spanish, was an alternate for the Quiz Bowl Team, a math contest winner and is member of a church committee. Alayna likes writing, particularly poetry, studying Spanish, knitting and reading.

- Catrina Logan, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Logan, has been active in fund raising for the American Cancer Society, Operation Santa Claus and in volunteer work at the Greenville Villa. A marshal, she is also a member of the Thesbian Society, the Medieval Society, Health Careers Club, and the National Honor Society. She attended Governor's School in dance, and her major interests are dancing and writing.

- Elizabeth Longino is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Longino. She is active in Episcopal Young Churchmen work and is an acolyte at St. Paul's. She is head varsity cheerleader, an SGA representative, a member of the Juniors, the Keywanettes and the National Honor Society. Elizabeth has also been bat girl for baseball, performed in "L'il Abner," was a marshal and homecoming Junior

Scoutmaster Handbook Is Published

A new Official Scoutmaster Handbook has been published by the Boy Scouts of America to provide basic information for men who lead Boy Scout troops.

With the publication of the Scoutmaster Handbook, a three-part series has been completed. The Official Boy Scout Handbook was published in 1979 and The Official Patrol Leader Handbook in 1980.

"This new handbook makes it possible for a Scoutmaster to learn about being a leader of a Boy Scout troop," Jack Farrior, Vice President of Boy Scouting for the East Carolina Council, Boy Scouts of America, said. "Then, it helps him understand boys and follows with many methods to use to operate the troop."

Farrior pointed out that while the handbook is related specifically to Boy Scout troops it is a useful reference for other youth leaders and parents.

One part of the handbook is devoted to "Helping the Boy," Farrior said. Chapters include "Aims and Methods," "Leadership," "Understanding the Boy," and "Counseling."

The last Scoutmaster's handbook was published in 1972.

"Much of the information in the handbook continues the basic concepts of the Boy Scout program which have proven successful since Scouting began in 1910," Farrior said. "However, completely new material has been included to keep the Boy Scout program up to date."

The handbook is available from the East Carolina Council or from stores that have been licensed as Scouting distributors.

Observing Constitution Week

Tomorrow, September 17, marks the 194th anniversary of the signing of the Constitution of the United States, the oldest constitution still in active use.

Each year, joint resolutions of Congress authorize the President of the United States to issue a proclamation calling for observing September 17 through September 23 as Constitution Week.

Locally, the Susanna Coutanch Evans Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, urges all citizens to observe and help preserve the Constitution.

Mrs. Renetta Smith, chairman of the local Constitution Week Committee, said "The observance of the week is to revitalize appreciation for the Constitution and our country. It is a time to pause, reflect and appreciate our American freedoms."

"This year, the chapter is particularly encouraging the participation of children in observances of Constitution Week," Mrs. Smith added. "It is imperative that our children have a better understanding of the Constitution and of its rights and privileges protected therein."

One of the principal observances of Constitution Week has been that planned and undertaken by students at St. Peter's School as one of their special activities.

Mrs. Billie Lennon's eighth grade social studies class has made a bulletin board showing historical symbols, relics and facts connected with drawing up the American Constitution. North Carolina leaders of the time who helped shape the Constitution are also featured.

Another local way of marking Constitution Week has been the signing of a proclamation by Greenville Mayor Don McGlohon. The mayor has called on area citizens to consider the role of America's Constitution in the nearly two centuries that have passed since it was first put into use.

Committee chairman Mrs. Smith urges area residents to "get out your American flags and display them with pride this week."

BPW Club Has Meet

"Alive With BPW" was the theme of Thursday night's meeting of the local Business and Professional Women's Club.

Doris Marlowe, chairperson of the membership committee, spoke about what it means to be in BPW.

Pam Davis illustrated what a professional woman should be. The Policies and By-Laws Committee, chaired by Irma Worthington, proposed policy suggestions regarding the scholarship candidate and membership requirements.

The meeting was hosted by the Yearbook Committee which is chaired by Lucille Moore. Several members attended the Coastal Area meeting during the weekend at Nags Head.

Joanne Verburg, who recently joined the group, is serving on the new Women's Seminar Advisory Council for Pitt Community College which will be conducting its first seminar on Horizons for Women in the 80's to be held Sept. 29. TRAPPED FEELING CAN BE AVOIDED

It's no fun to feel "trapped" by your home and family, so when you get that trapped feeling, do something about it.

The first step is to honestly admit your dissatisfaction or frustrations — without feeling guilty about it. Talk to your husband, a friend, or a neighbor, but don't become a nag or a bore on the subject. After all, everyone has trapped feelings some of the time.

How can you keep from becoming a victim of trapped feelings and boredom? By keeping busy, by sharing yourself with others, by coming out of emotional hiding.

Try to rediscover and develop the natural ability to relax that you had as a child. And develop the courage to show your natural feelings. Also, use your inner resources, such as imagination, contemplation and perception.

Use external resources only to supplement your inner resources — don't demand to be entertained. And respect your true self; not some image of yourself.

There's no way you can avoid boredom completely. So don't try. The trick is to not let boredom or a trapped feeling get you down.

Moore also attended the convention and gave reports.

President Parker reported the International ADK has voted to sponsor St. Jude's Childrens Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., with a $60,000 grant to support research in pediatric brain tumor.

It was decided to increase the group's scholarship grant to $200. An unanimous vote of confidence was given Ann Byrd, who has been asked to serve as secretary of the Southeast Regional Alpha Delta Kappa Convention in 1982.

A devotion entitled "If Only..." was given by Chaplain Perkins. Barbara Wilson will be serving as co-chaplain. Handmade driftwood favors, made by Lee Brickhouse, were given to members.

The next meeting of Alpha Nu will be held Oct. 1 at the Ramada Inn. Members of Alpha Iota will be guests for the Founder's Day program.

A Goal Is Being Met

It has to be pleasing to local officials and citizens that the $996,200 first year grant application for the South Evans Community Development program has been approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The grant is the first of a three-year program which will total $3 million for the South Evans project.

Myaor Don McGlohn expressed pleasure that the grant had been approved. The project has a high priority for the city, but also federal funds for such projects are steadily being reduced. The South Evans project will involve the acquisition of delapidated housing and the relocation of families in standard housing. Some housing in the area will be rehabilitated where that is possible.

Greenville many years ago began an effort to eliminate substandard housing within the city with the Shore Drive project. That project converted what was some of the city's worst slums to an area where a city park now flourishes and a number of new office and institutional buildings are now located.

Subsequent projects eliminated most of the worst housing in the city, and the South Evans Community Development program can virtually complete an effort begun over two decades ago.

Thus the approval of this project has great meaning to the city of Greenville. Its completion will mean a goal of changing the face of Greenville will have been met.

Parking Lot Helpful To ECU

The Redevelopment Commission this week approved the temporary leasing of a vacant lot at the corner of Ninth and Evans Streets as parking for East Carolina University.

The lot is being leased for $1 per year and the lease will end immediately if the commission finds a buyer for it to utilize its office and institutional zoning.

Earlier this year property on Reade Circle was leased to the Farmer's Market, although that property, too, can be sold for permanent use.

It is wise to put the vacant property to the best use that can be made of it until permanent building plans are made. The Ninth and Evans Street property will be helpful to the university as parking, at least temporarily.

The Commuter Lines

As more and more major airlines eliminate cities and towns from their schedules, the slack is being taken up by tiny, struggling commuter lines.

What makes this exciting is that the new airlines are flying everything from World War II DC-3's to little planes that carry no more than six passengers at one time. The planes have none of the frills of a Boeing or a Lockheed jetliner, but there is a sense of adventure about flying one that makes you think you're in a time warp, and part of the early days of flight, before they had stewardesses and in-flight movies.

We have such an airline on Martha's Vineyard which provides service between the Vineyard, Boston and New York. Every trip off and on the island is an experience that none of the major airlines can provide.

My friend Peter Stone took me to the airport for a flight to Boston. Since we both had flown the route before, we discussed it as if he were Spencer Tracy and I was Clark Gable.

"I'll take the flight, and you marry Jane," he said.

"No," I told him. "I'll take the flight and you marry Jane. She really loves you."

"How do you know?" he asked.

"Because she begged me not to let you take the flight."

"Why didn't she say something to me?"

"Because she was afraid you'd do something stupid like knock me out, and then take the flight so we could get married."

"Okay, you take the flight and I'll marry Jane. If the marriage doesn't work out,

As flight time approached I stood outside with Stone. Suddenly Jane drove up. "I've changed my mind," she said, throwing her arms around me. "I want Peter to take the flight and I want to marry you."

We went back inside but the pilot said it was too late. He had to load the luggage on the plane. He picked up his microphone and said, "Cumulus Airlines' Flight 1786 is now boarding for Boston with intermediate stops in Hyannisport, Provincetown and Woods Hole."

"But," I protested, "there are eight of us already, and with two pilots that makes 10. Why do we have to stop?"

"Who said anything about two pilots?" he replied. "We have room for one more passenger in the co-pilot's seat, and we may get lucky and pick up one at an intermediate stop."

"Look," I said to Peter, "you take my place and I'll marry Jane."

"Are you crazy?" Peter said. "If you make it to Boston you can marry anybody you want."

The passengers walked towards the tiny plane and before climbing the two steps, the pilot took our boarding passes. Then he crawled in behind us, closed the door and crawled down to his seat.

"Welcome to Cumulus Airlines," he said. "On behalf of the entire crew we hope you have an enjoyable flight. Government regulations require me to tell you in the unlikely event of any trouble your seat is your flotation

"I'll take the next flight and you marry her if I don't make it."

When we got to the airport, I checked in my luggage. The man behind the counter was wearing a sharp blue uniform with four stripes on it.

"You counter people have snappy uniforms," I said.

"What do you mean counter people?" he said.

"I'm the pilot." He weighed my baggage and then he asked me how much I weighed.

I lied and said 190. He wrote down 200.

"People always lie by 10 pounds," he said. Then he gave me a boarding card.

Reagan Coup In New York

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK
NEW YORK — As big labor's high command was mobilizing members for next Saturday's anti-Reagan rally in Washington, what Mayor Edward Koch calls the president's "brilliant upmanship" in New York capitalized on the split in the labor movement.

Koch referred to President Reagan's Labor Day coup in the nation's largest city, to which the Democratic mayor contributed significantly. While AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland led a Labor Day parade backing the unpopular air traffic controllers, Reagan was cheered by building trades union chiefs a few blocks away at the mayor's residence as he presented Koch with a ceremonial $85 million check for New York City's Westy road-building project.

for his membership — building projects such as the Westway.

The Reagan-Koch upstaging of New York City's first Labor Day parade in 13 years began Aug. 27 with a telephone call from Secretary of Labor Ray Donovan to Koch. Would the mayor host a ceremonial presentation of the Westway check before some 1,000 guests? Koch immediately agreed, whistlesuggesting Central Park might be more suitable for that many people.

But they were all crammed in, deflecting attention from the parade to which Reagan was not invited. "I think they made the dumbest error possible in insulting the president," Koch told us in his City Hall office four days later. The mayor later joined the parade but was still burning about the "crude" decision to put a truckload of hecklers next to him in the line of march.

The presence of these labor leaders confirmed political division in the labor movement. Kirkland has declared war on Reagan, and New York City labor chief Harry VanArsdale endorsed Koch's token liberal opponent for the Democratic mayoral nomination. But anti-Reagan, anti-Koch sentiment is concentrated among public employees; each has leadership and rank-and-file backing among blue-collar workers, as demonstrated Labor Day at Gracie Mansion.

That this is not merely a local phenomenon was shown by the presence at Gracie Mansion of one of labor's brightest stars nationally: Robert Georgine, head of the building trades unions. Indeed, Georgine accompanied Reagan to New York on Air Force One (staying aboard the plane during a New Jersey stop where the president plugged the Republican candidate for governor).

"The labor movement won't like this," Georgine told a friend at the Gracie Mansion ceremony. Dissenting from Kirkland's ideological warfare against Reagan, the dynamic young labor leader has maintained relations with the White House on grounds that his first priority is jobs

Democratic politicians not nearly so friendly to Reagan as Koch agree with the mayor's use of "brilliant" in describing the coup. "You can never again charge that Ronald Reagan has done nothing for New York," said one Democratic insider who called Kirkland's identification with the air controllers a political blunder.

The inevitable pickets at Gracie Mansion included environmentalists protesting the westway, explaining why the project was yet to be approved when Reagan became president. "Jimmy Carter could have won over Koch and the building trades," a New York Democratic politician told us, "if he had been willing to stand the heat from a few hundred pickets. He wouldn't."

But Reagan's coup would have been impossible had it not been for Koch's quick agreement to the request from Donovan, currently getting a cold shoulder from Kirkland and the AFL-CIO high command. The mayor's cooperation was the Reagan administration's harvest reaped after planting seeds of more help than Koch ever

Preventive Policy

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It has long been apparent that the traditional health insurance program's insistence upon hospitalization before benefits are paid proved overly expensive and encouraged physicians to put their patients into hospitals. Just as apparently, this practice was a big factor in sky-rocketing health care costs, and contributed to the overbuilding of hospital rooms and equipment inventories.

But there are some drawbacks which will keep some otherwise eligible people from signing up for the new plan. No more doctor shopping or doctor hopping. And some people will be inclined to think they are being given less than the best medical care by a doctor who can get a bonus at the end of the year if he keeps people out of that expensive hospital room.

BILL NOBLITT

To reverse that direction is a critical element in the new health care plan announced by Blue Cross-Blue Shield.

Just as with any other group health insurance plan, members or their employers will pay a monthly amount to the insurance company. Instead of there being deductibles and claims forms and certifications and hospitalization, however, members will be encouraged to visit their physician regularly. It is hoped that routine examinations, consultations, early checking in with some minor problem will help prevent later major problems and help catch bigger problems in their early stages, trouble which would develop into major problems if neglected long enough.

What of the physicians? What's in it for them? A new practitioner can contract to work for the health group and avoid the costly process of building a practice from scratch. There is a guaranteed income with a bonus if costs are kept down. There are more regular hours and less pressure than in private enterprise practice. And there is considerably less hassle with forms, bills, collection agencies and other clerical and administrative aspects of the business.

Higher
This insurance plan will actually cost more at the beginning. As much as 10 percent more which can mean more than $100 monthly for the average family. What does the group member get for that increased insurance payment? Few if any deductibles; no limits on service from the health care providers; and no bills for non-covered service or the percentage of the balance not covered by insurance.

The doctor will get a set amount per year from each patient in the group on his list. He agrees to give those people full service. Additionally, specialists would be available when the primary care physician needs such help.

John Sharp, chief of the new plan for Blue Cross-Blue Shield, says this approach "combines a broad set of benefits...does not create any new medical delivery systems, but rather modifies and takes advantage of the existing health care system to maximize the potential for success and satisfaction."

Savings
While the cost will be higher at the beginning of this new plan than present health insurance rates, those involved believe that savings will eventually take place and the new approach will come in at lower cost as standard programs escalate in cost.

The North Carolina General Assembly has flirted, at the behest of the study commissions, with several steps in connection with health maintenance organizations in the state. It has been variously proposed that the state underwrite a pilot program with $10 million; that a law be passed requiring all major employers to provide such an alternative plan to their insured

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the editor:

This weekend I had the opportunity to take my son and his friends (ages 5, 7, 8) to see a movie at the Plitt Theater titled "Raiders of the Lost Ark," which was rated PG.

I was disgusted to have to sit through previews of "Friday the 13th" and "Endless Love" before the movie began. Both these movies were rated "R." I cannot know the adverse influences that these shockingly violent and suggestive scenes had upon these children. It certainly upset me!

The poor discretion that the movie house displayed in showing these "R" previews before a "PG" rated audience was appalling. In the dark while these previews are going on is not the right time to scramble around and gather up the children and rush out to the lobby, only to miss the beginning of "Raiders," which started simultaneously with the end of the 2nd preview. That would have further stirred up the children.

There is a principle at stake here. Just what does the PG mean to you as compared to an R? I surely don't know, because there was an audience of small children who were not brought in to see R-rated movies.

We, as parents, were given the movie rating system to aid in screening movies for our children. A PG movie was advertised and explicit scenes from R movies were forced upon us. This is not truth in advertising. I feel that my rights have been violated and my children manipulated for the sole reason of the theater's making money. What are their standards?

In talking to other mothers during the past few days I have found that this practice is not unique to this theater, but occurs regularly during PG-rated movies throughout Greenville.

This practice must stop! It is unfair and morally wrong to blatantly use us as a "practice" audience when "inviting" us, the public, to patronize a theater, then, in a manipulative and destructive way, compromise the emotions and sensitivities of children. They should be ashamed. I am disgusted.

I wish all parents who have had to put up with this "practice" (not wanting to use a stronger word) would express themselves vocally and say, "No more!"

Savers Reaping Big Profit

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — While politicians and businessmen deplore high interest rates, millions of American savers are getting the highest returns ever on their money.

less than 6 percent, are still in wide use. But more and more savers are earning much higher interest by other means, such as investing in money-market funds, which have created a whole new world for ordinary savers.

With inflation easing and interest rates at record levels, savers are the clear winners from an economic situation that has produced a long list of losers — from the housing industry to the Reagan administration.

The interest-rate boon for people who are lucky enough to have savings and no need to borrow money reverses the economic trend of the 1970s, when double-digit inflation decimated savings that were receiving single-digit interest.

"Millions of Americans, particularly in the older age brackets, are enjoying — perhaps for the first time in their lives — a high market rate of return on their savings," notes President Reagan's chief economic adviser, Murray L. Weidenbaum.

"There are winners and losers from high interest rates," observes Alan Greenspan, a New York investment consultant who was chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers during the Ford administration. "However, there are many more losers than winners."

For the first time in years, smart savers can obtain a rate of return that far exceeds the rate of inflation. Consumer prices are rising at about a 10 percent annual pace, but interest rates available to savers are running above 17 percent. The difference is a better than 7 percent "real" rate of return — the highest margin in U.S. history, economists say.

The biggest losers include homebuilders, realtors, home sellers and home buyers — all of whom are suffering because of mortgage interest rates approaching 18 percent. Savings and loans are another group of major losers because they are stuck holding so many low-interest mortgages while being forced to pay top rates for new funds.

Strength For Today

EDUCATION & WISDOM
We live in a time when most people think highly of education; and well they may, for more new truths have been discovered in the last two centuries than in the whole previous history of the human race.

Yet it is amazing how often the course of history has been changed by men who had very little education. Our Lord himself scarcely had the equivalent of a gradeschool education. All of his disciples appear to have been unlearned men. The Emperor Charlemagne could not write his name. Washington had a few years in school and a period of study under home tutors.

Someone has spoken of the luminous faith and the marvelous outlook of common men. There is a place for the educated in every generation. They make a contribution without which the human race would remain stationary. But somehow or other, the men who turn the course of history seem to have unique capabilities which they never learned from books. — Elisha Douglass

How Tar Heel House Members Cast Votes

By Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area house members were recorded on major roll call votes immediately after the summer recess. There were no Senate votes.
 Housing The House rejected, 188 for and 202 against, an amendment to prevent the Justice Department from requiring communities to build federally-subsidized housing for the poor in keeping with the goals of the 1968 Fair Housing Act. The measure was proposed to a FY 1982 appropriations bill for Justice and other agencies. The bill (HR 4169) was passed and sent to the Senate.

 received from (and following Democrat Carter on issues ranging from the subway to sludge disposal to extracting methane gas.

One such seed was planted by Interior Secretary James Watt when he came here this summer to consider Koch's long-time request, ignored by Carter, to recover methane gas generated as a byproduct of the city sanitation dump ("It's our garbage!" Koch exclaimed). Koch was ready to give Watt a helicopter ride to inspect the dump, but Watt told him it was not necessary. The White House had instructed him to give Ed Koch anything he wanted.

So, on Labor Day at Gracie Mansion, Koch praised union chiefs from "Samuel Gompers, George Meany to the leaders gathered here today," without mentioning Lane Kirkland. He then introduced Reagan as "a man who has had the courage to bring our country a fresh approach to government." As an bring our country a fresh approach to government." As an advocate of enforcing New York's seldom-enforced Taylor Law against public employee strikes, he applauds Reagan for firing the striking air controllers.

But Reagan's remarkable infiltration of Democrats, organized labor and even the New York mayor's office is menaced by the economy. Like his fellow New Yorkers who work in Wall Street, Koch eyes the high interest rates and sees them ruining Reagan's plan. Reagan's revolution is menaced not by the labor leaders who marched in New York Labor Day and will march in Washington Saturday but by that unexpected economic poison that transcends any number of political coups engineered by the White House.

To Present New Vessel

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — The $3 million research vessel Cape Hatteras will be presented to the Duke University of North Carolina Oceanographic Consortium on Oct. 2, replacing a ship sold last spring after 17 years of service.

John Slaughter, director of the National Science Foundation, which funded the building of the vessel, will officially present it to UNC President William C. Friday and Duke President Terry Sanford during ceremonies at the Duke University Marine Laboratory in Beaufort.

A crew of nine operates the ship, which can carry a scientific party of up to 12. It has two diesel engines with a total of 1,090 horsepower and can steam at a maximum speed of 12.5 knots.

The consortium's policy board will operate the vessel. The schools expected to use the ship most are Duke, UNC-Chapel Hill, North Carolina State, East Carolina, UNC-Wilmington and Cape Fear Technical Institute.

Jay Langfelder of N.C. State, head of the consortium's policy board, said the ship "will bring North Carolina into the mainstream of oceanographic research" and help improve marine fisheries and developing offshore mineral resources.

in deciding what kind of community they wish to have."

Opponent Don Edwards, D-Calif., said, "There is federal money to assist low-income people in providing housing. All Americans are entitled to have somewhere decent to live."

Members voting "yea" wanted to prevent the Justice Department from requiring communities to build limited amounts of housing for the poor.

Reps. Charles Whitley, D-3, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11 voted "yea."

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2 and James Martin, R-9, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1,

Ike Andrews, D-4, and Eugene Johnston, R-6, did not vote.

Prayer By a vote of 333 for and 54 against, the House adopted an amendment blocking any future Justice Department action to prevent voluntary prayer in public schools. The vote came during a debate on HR 4169 (see preceding vote).

Sponsor Robert Walker, R-Pa., said his amendment would remove any "chilling effect" that possible Justice Department action might have on schools planning to implement voluntary prayer programs.

No opponents spoke during debate on the amendment. Members voting "yea" opposed Justice Department interference with schools allowing prayers to be said on a voluntary basis.

Fountain, Whitley, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Jones, Andrews and Johnston did not vote.

Legal Services The House rejected, 122 for and 272 against, an amendment to eliminate funding for the Legal Services Corporation in FY 1982. The quasi-governmental corporation is a law office for the poor, elderly and others who can't afford private attorneys. The vote occurred during debate on HR 4169 (see preceding votes).

Supporter James Sensenbrenner, R-Wisc., said his amendment is not an attempt at "denying the use of federal funds to provide legal services to the poor because other federal funding — primarily block grants to the states — will be available for that purpose under Reagan Administration proposals.

Opponent Peter Rodino, D-N.J., said the aged poor make frequent use of the Legal Services Corporation in dealing with the Social Security Administration. "They get one of these notices that is so legalistic, they do not understand it."

Members voting "yea" wanted to eliminate the Legal Services Corporation. Fountain, Rose, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Whitley, Neal, Hefner and Martin voted "nay."

Jones, Andrews and Johnston did not vote.

 employees; that the state itself set up and operate a health maintenance organization which would buy and operate a clinic or even a hospital and hire the health providers therein; and that the state pay for health care services for the poor, elderly, and state employees placed in a privately operated health maintenance organization as a way to get one going. So far, no such approach has gained widespread legislative support.

The question now becomes whether a private plan can gain enough members to operate successfully and withstand the critics bound to surface soon.

Production In Decline

By ROBERT FURLLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The nation's industrial production fell 0.4 percent in August, the biggest decline in more than a year, with decreases in auto production leading the way, the Federal Reserve Board reported today.

The report was in line with other recent government statistics showing that the economy was lagging, or even declining, as summer neared an end.

The Commerce Department had reported on Monday that business inventories had begun piling up faster in July, an indication that factory operators would soon cut back production and perhaps lay off some workers.

The new Federal Reserve report on production said "most of the August decline was due to a reduction in the output of autos, trucks and parts."

"Declines also occurred in the output of home goods, construction supplies and materials," although equipment production continued to advance, it said.

Overall production had fallen a bare 0.1 percent in February and April of this year — the only two months to register a decline until August — and the latest decline was the largest since the 0.8 percent decrease in July 1980, at the end of last year's recession.

Output had risen 0.3 percent in July of this year. The new report said, "Production of consumer goods declined 1 percent in August, reflecting a large reduction in output of consumer durable goods" — those expected to last three years or more.

"Autos were assembled at an annual rate of 6.5 million units — more than 10 percent below the rate in July; production of small trucks for consumer use was reduced even more sharply," it said.

"In addition, the output of home goods declined 1.8 percent, mainly because of a sharp cutback in appliance production," the report said. Those specifics were included in the general area of product output, which declined 0.3 percent in August, the report said.

In the other main category, "output of materials declined 0.5 percent, reflecting a reduction in output of metals such as steel and of parts for consumer durable goods," it said.

"A large decline occurred in energy materials due to a decrease in coal output, following its sharp post-strike rebound, and to some reduction in electricity generation and use."

All of the figures in the report were adjusted for normal seasonal variations in output.

Overall production in the nation's factories and mines in August was about 7.5 percent higher than in August 1980.

September Car Sales Are Up

DETROIT (AP) — Sales by domestic carmakers were up 8.7 percent in the first part of September, thanks in part to rebates and other sales incentives. But analysts say the figures were still a disappointment.

Domestic manufacturers said they sold 152,381 cars in the Sept. 1-10 period, compared with 140,155 cars sold in the same period last year. "Sales are still poor," Arvid Jouppe, an independent Detroit-based analyst, said Tuesday. He said interest rates higher than last year's levels continue to restrict new-car sales.

Ford Motor Co. showed the strongest improvement for the period, increasing its sales 27 percent, to 33,081 cars from last year's 26,133. General Motors Corp.'s sales were up 6 percent, to 94,505 from 89,134, and Chrysler Corp. sold 18,321 cars, up 2 percent from last year's 17,961.

Volkswagen of America said it sold 2,974 cars in early September, down 9.2 percent from the 3,275 cars it sold last year, while American Motors Corp. sold an estimated 3,500 cars, down 3.9 percent from 3,652. AMC figures are estimated because the company reports its sales on a monthly basis only.

Each of the automakers except VW had some kind of sales incentive program in effect during the period. GM extended its offer of 13.8 percent interest rates on new-car loans through Sept. 23 and Chrysler did the same with its $300-$1,000 rebates.

Ford extended its program of dealer incentives and added rebates on certain models. Like GM and Chrysler, Ford's incentive plan runs through Sept. 23.

AMC is offering $100-$1,000 dealer incentives on certain models and $500 customer rebates on its Concord models.

While calling current sales "poor," Jouppe said he believes the introduction of 1982 models next month and accompanying deals on leftover 1981 models will spur a major sales surge in October.

"They call this a feast or famine business," Jouppe said. "We've had 50 months of feast followed by 30 months of famine. I think the famine will be over at the end of this month."

For the year, domestic automakers have sold 4,559,302 cars, up 0.3 percent from the 4,568,092 cars sold by the same time last year. Because there was one more selling day in the Jan. 1-Sept. 10 period last year, the percentage comparison is based on the rate of sales per day.

Demand Steady At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Demand for good quality tobacco remained steady from Monday on the Farmville Tobacco Market and deliveries to the Stabilization Corporation continued to account for only a small percentage of the total sales.

With two sets of buyers on the market yesterday, volume of sales was heavy compared to Monday's total. The top price paid by a company was $1.94, with mostly leaf grades being offered for sale.

The Farmville Market sold 699,104 pounds yesterday for $1,257,084.05, an average of $179.81 per hundred pounds. To date the market sold 17,675,762 pounds for $30,401,173.95, a season average of $171.99. The season average for the same day last year was $148.19.

Latin Taught To A.G. Cox Students

WINTERVILLE — At A.G. Cox School, Latin, said by some to be a dead language, is being taught to 40 students.

The students, sixth and seventh graders, are learning the language to develop English verbal skills. The program began from a similar one used in the Philadelphia public school system. A.G. Cox is the only school in North Carolina involved in the Latin teaching experiment.

The class is instructed by Mrs. Lorraine Shinn, a senior psychology major from East Carolina University. Dr. Michael Bassman, ECU foreign language instructor and Dr. Marsha Ironsmith, psychology instructor at ECU, are supervising the Latin instruction program. The instructors will determine the effect of

2nd Rescue For Terrier

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A bull terrier that survived a shipwreck at sea has been rescued again after a wave of emotion swept Philadelphia dog lovers, who offered to pay for the pooch's trip to Britain.

Bosun's first rescue came Aug. 28 when she and her owners, Peter Johnson and Letitia Hughes, were rescued from their foundering yacht after it hit a whale in a North Atlantic storm.

The trio arrived in Philadelphia on Saturday aboard a Dutch freighter. But the shipwreck shattered their dreams of completing the 13,500-mile sea journey from Australia to Portsmouth, England.

The British government offered to pay airfare to England for Johnson, 52, and Ms. Hughes, 54, but declined to pick up the bill for Bosun. The couple, who lost everything in the wreck, couldn't afford Bosun's flight and the six-month quarantine required by English law.

Dog lovers who read of their plight Tuesday in newspapers contacted the British consulate in New York and offered to pay Bosun's fare.

"I've never seen anything quite like it," said Jan Hopkins, the vice consul.

"Everything is going sweet. We're so excited. Cracky Moses! Philadelphia is tops on my list," Johnson said upon hearing about the fund for Bosun.

One Philadelphia resident, Roberta vonCantz, offered to pay Bosun's fare, estimated at $250, because "I'm just a sucker for anything on four legs. The dog was so ugly that I wasn't sure anyone else would do anything."

'Sold' Deeds On A Planet

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The days are long and sunny, the nights are cool and there's plenty of privacy on the 56,000-acre homesites for sale. What's better, the prices are hardly astronomical at $50.

But the homesites on the planet Mercury come with a few problems — such heat intense enough to melt lead, an absence of air and the fact that the real estate brokers don't have any rights to sell.

More than 200 people have purchased mock deeds for property on Mercury this summer as part of a fundraising effort by the Astronomical Society of the Pacific.

"We give all the rights we have — which is none," said Andrew Fraknoi, the society's executive officer.

On Mercury, the planet nearest the sun, about 57 million miles from Earth, it gets hot enough "to French-fry interplanetary speculators," he said. Daytime temperatures reach 700 degrees Fahrenheit. For nighttime temperatures of 200 below, "you should at least bring gloves," he advised.

One Mercurial day equals 59 Earth days, so if you're an impatient romancer eager for nightfall, "you'll have a long wait," Fraknoi said.

The donations help finance the 92-year-old society's information services for astronomy buffs, teachers and students.

Iraqi New President Of UN

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Ismat Kittani, an Iraqi diplomat associated with the United Nations for more than a quarter of a century, has won the presidency of the 36th session of the U.N. General Assembly by lot after a draw.

Kittani, 52, is the first Middle Eastern Arab to hold the top General Assembly post since Lebanon's Charles Malik in 1958. He was chosen Tuesday in the first contested election for the assembly presidency in 19 years.

This year it was Asia's turn to preside over the 155-nation assembly under a system of rotation among regions.

The outgoing president, Baron Ruediger von Wechmar of West Germany, drew Kittani's name out of a box to break a 73-73 tie between the Iraqi and Ambassador Kwaja Mohammed Kaiser of Bangladesh.

The last contested election for the assembly presidency was in 1962, when Sir Muhammad Zafrulla Khan of Pakistan defeated S.S. Gunewardene of Ceylon, now Sri Lanka.

Although the two rounds of balloting were secret, the United States and its Western allies were believed to have supported Kaiser because of Iraq's year-old war with Iran and its hardline stance against Israel.

But after the vote, U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick called Kittani "a man of extremely high reputation" and said the Reagan administration has "high expectations for him."

Iran's representative, Jamal Shemirani, told a reporter Kittani's selection was "blind luck," and added, "We would have preferred one of the other candidates."

Israeli Ambassador Yehuda Z. Blum said it was "a measure of the regrettable decline of the United Nations' standards" that an Iraqi diplomat was chosen while his country "as a result of multiple and ongoing acts of aggression, is in a state of war with a number of countries in the Middle East."

Iraqi diplomats said Kittani would yield the president's chair temporarily if the Arabs challenged Israel's right to sit in the assembly.

Kittani graduated in 1951 from Knox College in Galesburg, Ill., where he majored in English and political science. The next year he joined the Iraqi Foreign Ministry and after three years in the Cairo embassy was assigned to Iraq's permanent U.N. delegation in 1957.

After seven years with Iraq's U.N. missions in New York and Geneva, Kittani joined the U.N. Secretariat in 1964. He was an assistant secretary-general from 1973 to 1975, when he returned to Iraq to head the Foreign Ministry's department of international organizations and conferences. Last year he became foreign undersecretary.

In addition to the presidential election, the assembly at the opening meeting of the session admitted by acclamation the 155th member of the United Nations. It is Vanuatu, the island group in the South Pacific that was called the New Hebrides until it got its independence from Britain and France.

East Spokesman Denies Gifts Factor In Voting

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Oil industry contributions to the campaign of Sen. John East, R-N.C., were not given in an effort to influence future votes, an East spokesman said Tuesday.

"Actually it's usually the other way around," said Jerry Woodruff. "Contributions tend to depend on the voting record."

Woodruff also said that the majority of some $900,000 that came to the East campaign was from thousands of individuals who contributed less than $200 each.

According to The Boston Globe, East, a member of the Senate's Energy and Natural Resources Committee, ranks 10th among senators in contributions during the last campaign from oil industry political action committees.

The Globe study said that East received $40,262 from several of 94 political action committees the paper identified as being closely tied to the oil industry.

And campaign financing reports show East raised $1.45 million last year to upset Democratic incumbent Robert Morgan, who raised $926,000.

East's campaign was run by the Congressional Club, a Raleigh-based political organization built around Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

East is a member of three subcommittees on the Energy Committee, which deal closely with issues directly affecting the oil industry, including the subcommittee on energy conservation and supply, the subcommittee on energy regulation and the subcommittee on energy research and development.

Leading the Globe's list was first-term Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who received $144,639, while Republican newcomer Sen. Stephen Symms of Idaho was second with $142,330.

Both Grassley and Symms are members of the Senate Finance Committee, which handles tax matters.

The study said oil industry PACs more than doubled their contributions from the previous campaign in 1978. The oil company PACs used their money to support challengers rather than incumbents far more than any other industry.

Although individuals can give only up to $1,000 to a candidate for each primary and general election, PACs may contribute up to $5,000 in each case.

Overwhelming Win By Detroit Mayor

DETROIT (AP) — Mayor Coleman Young breezed to an overwhelming victory in a non-partisan primary, and says he will take his general election opponent seriously, even though he has never met either of the top two contenders for the slot.

Young, the first black mayor in the nation's sixth-largest city, had 81,619 votes, or 70 percent, with more than 75 percent of the votes tabulated from Tuesday's primary, according to Detroit Elections Commission figures.

The 63-year-old mayor's nearest opponent was Perry Koslowski, 31, a city accountant, with 11,650 votes, or 10 percent, followed by Patrick O'Hara, 38, another accountant, with 11,151 votes, or 9.58 percent. None of the eight other mayoral candidates received more than 4 percent of the tally.

"I will take any opponent seriously," Young said following his victory. "I don't know either gentlemen (Koslowski or O'Hara). I'm not disappointed in the caliber of my opponents."

The general election will be Nov. 3, and the mayor is expected easily to win his third four-year term.

O'Hara and Koslowski both have been critical of Young's handling of the city's budget.

Two Charged

TARBORO — Two Route 1, Bethel men injured in a traffic collision Friday night that took the life of Rayfield Williams, also of Route 1, Bethel, have been charged with armed robbery in connection with an incident at Braswell's Grocery near Mayo Crossroads in Edgecombe County.

Edgecombe Sheriff's spokesman said the robbery occurred about 6 p.m. when three men entered J. R. Braswell's store, struck the owner on the head with a bottle, and took an undetermined amount of money.

Further investigation by the sheriff's department revealed that a car answering the description of the vehicle used in the robbery had overturned on rural unpaved road 1502 about 2.6 miles southeast of Bethel about 6:20 p.m., killing Williams, the driver, and injuring the two passengers.

Subsequent investigation led to the arrest of the passengers, Arnold Razor and Christopher Grimes, on armed robbery charges. They were placed in the Edgecombe County Jail under $10,000 bonds pending a preliminary hearing in the case.

Haig-Gromyko Parleys Shape Up As Chilly Affair

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Next week's meeting between Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is shaping up as one of the chilliest superpower encounters since the bleakest days of the Cold War.

There was never much expectation that the meeting would go smoothly but two developments, both in the first half of August, ensured that the session would take place against a background of mutual hostility almost without parallel. The first development was the American decision to go ahead with production of neutron weapons. The Soviets, in one of their sharpest attacks on the Reagan administration, said the action was "designed to bring the world closer to nuclear catastrophe."

A few days later, the Reagan administration received information which officials said indicated that Laos, Cambodia and Afghanistan — all closely allied with the Soviets — have been using chemical poisons against armed resistance movements.

U.S. officials said that conclusion, described as "100 percent foolproof," went a long way toward explaining the gruesome deaths of perhaps thousands of people in recent years, particularly in the two Indochina countries.

The administration long has suspected Soviet-supplied chemical poisons, sprayed from aircraft, were being used in the three countries. Now it claims to have incontrovertible evidence, based on tests carried out in Minnesota on plant samples from Cambodia.

A decision was made to go public with the information. The administration could have delegated a spokesman to release it, but Haig felt a high-level disclosure was necessary. He decided to do the job himself.

And as his forum, he chose West Berlin, long a symbol of East-West conflict and a hotbed of opposition to the administration's neutron weapon decision.

In his speech last Sunday, Haig outlined the administration's findings but did not directly accuse the Soviets. Nonetheless, U.S. scientists briefing reporters at the State Department on Monday left the clear impression that Moscow was responsible.

The Kremlin, through the official news agency Tass, denounced Haig's accusations as slander and, citing

U.S. use of chemical agents during the Vietnam War, said, "No country in the history of international relations has used chemical weapons as extensively as the United States."

U.S. officials say there is not much they can do about the alleged Soviet activity, even though use of chemical poisons is barred under international agreement. The officials acknowledge that enforcement provisions are weak.

The administration is sharing its information with other nations that have signed the agreement. The most the United States can do, one official said, is lodge a complaint with the U.N. Security Council.

It will be at the U.N. General Assembly next week that Haig will have the first of two meetings with Gromyko. September meetings between the American and Soviet foreign secretaries have been held in that forum for years.

Some officials had assumed that the Reagan administration by now would have backed away from its anti-Soviet assertiveness under pressure from external sources and would be in a less confrontational mood as the Gromyko meeting approached.

"The Soviets probably assumed the same thing," said one official, who asked not to be identified.

But the neutron weapon decision and the chemical poison disclosures appear to have ruled that out. Beyond those factors, the administration seems convinced that the generally conciliatory posture toward the Soviets of former President Carter did not work. It was during the Carter era, officials say, that Cuban troops were sent to Ethiopia, that Vietnam invaded Cambodia, that the Soviets occupied Afghanistan and that Soviet allies began assisting rebel forces in El Salvador.

If the Reagan administration is indignant about Moscow's behavior, the Soviets are no less perturbed about the evolution of Republican rule in Washington.

Soviet Defense Minister Dimitri Ustinov, for example, has assailed the United States for "unconcealed anti-Sovietism," "monstrous deception and massive disinformation," and for engaging in a calculated attempt to undermine the national economies of the Soviet Union and other socialist countries by launching "an unprecedented arms race."

The Kremlin also has indicated its displeasure in other ways. There have been reports that the Soviets will try to persuade the International Olympics Committee to have the 1984 Olympic games shifted from Los Angeles. The alleged reason is U.S. sporting ties with South Africa. The Soviets reportedly will raise the proposal at an Olympics Congress meeting starting in West Germany on Sept. 22, a day before Haig and Gromyko are due to have their first meeting.

Orchestra Recipient Of Grant

Dr. Charles W. Moore, president of the Eastern Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association, has announced that the Eastern Carolina Youth Orchestra has again been named the recipient of a $2,000 grant from the A. J. Fletcher Opera and Educational Foundation.

The Youth Orchestra will begin its second season with auditions for strings, woodwinds, brasses and percussion at 7:30 p.m. Monday, September 21 at the A. J. Fletcher Music Center of the School of Music, ECU.

Robert Hause, of the ECU School of Music faculty and conductor of the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra, will again be the conductor for the Youth Orchestra.

The orchestra is available to students from throughout eastern North Carolina who are 12 years old or older.

For further information concerning either the Youth Orchestra or the Eastern Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association, contact Charles Moore, 756-0562 or Robert Hause, 756-5793.

Sadat Orders More Than 1500 Russians To Leave

By LISETTE BALOUNY
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Anwar Sadat has ordered more than 1,500 Soviet officials and advisers out of Egypt, claiming Moscow incited the recent Moslem-Christian strife in Cairo.

It is the most serious rift in Soviet-Egyptian relations since Sadat expelled 17,000 Soviet military advisers from Egypt in 1972.

The Cabinet on Tuesday gave Soviet Ambassador Vladimir Polyakov and six members of his staff 48 hours to leave the country. It also ordered a Hungarian diplomat expelled on grounds that he, too, was "involved" in the conflict between Moslem fundamentalists and the Coptic Christian minority.

The Cabinet also terminated the contracts of an estimated 1,500 Soviet technical advisers, expelled two Soviet journalists, including the Cairo correspondent of Tass, the Soviet news agency, and closed the Soviet military liaison bureau in Cairo and its Egyptian counterpart in Moscow.

Reliable sources said most of the Soviet advisers were working at an aluminum plant, a steel mill, a shipyard, on land reclamation projects and at the Aswan Dam. They were given a week to leave the country.

"We have no comment," said a Soviet Embassy employee, reached by telephone. But Tass, in a dispatch from Moscow, said the

It was the fourth reduction of the Kremlin's diplomatic representation in Egypt in five years. But it stopped short of a total break in relations.

A Cabinet statement accused the Soviets of "recruiting agents in Egypt...exploiting religious strife, and influencing the spread and escalation of the sectarian conflict" in which at least 70 people have died this year.

The statement said Polyakov was summoned to the Foreign Ministry, informed of the expulsion orders and told the "suspicious activities of the Soviet diplomats was tantamount to intervention in Egypt's internal affairs."

More than 1,500 religious leaders, politicians, lawyers and journalists have been arrested in the past two weeks in a crackdown on Sadat's opponents as a result of the Christian-Moslem fighting. The president said in a speech Monday that 12 of those arrested were "Soviet-inspired."

"The Soviets discovered that none of the political parties, the socialists or the leftists, were strong enough (to overthrow the government) and that the Moslem fundamentalists were the strongest element," Sadat said.

"So they figured that if they could get them and the government into a confrontation, through religious strife, the scene would be free for them to take over."

The expulsion of the Soviet ambassador and six members of his staff reduced the embassy to the same size — 10 diplomats — as Egypt's embassy in Moscow. Egypt's ambassador to the Soviet Union, Samih Anwar, was appointed in late 1978 but has never gone to Moscow.

Ayden Resident Is State Officer

Ivan Hill of Ayden was elected vice president of the North Carolina State Employees Association during its 35th annual convention Friday and Saturday in Winston-Salem.

Hill, a 17-year state employee, is a personnel analyst (institution representative) for the N.C. Department of Human Resources. He works in a service and consultation role with the staffs of Cherry Hospital, O'Berry Center, Caswell Center, the Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, the N.C. Special Care Center, and the Eastern N.C. School for the Deaf.

A Johnston County native, he has a political science degree from the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and has done some graduate work. He has done previous Area 5 work in the state employees' association. A resident of Ayden since 1974, he is chairman of the Ayden-Gritton High School Advisory Council, is a member of the board of directors of the Coastal Plain Horse Show Association, a former director of the International Personnel Management Association, North Carolina Chapter, and a former member of the Pitt Community College Advisory Committee for Human Services/Mental Health Associate Program.

He and his wife, Peggie, a member of the Ayden-Gritton High School faculty, have two daughters, Meg, who attends UNC-Chapel Hill and Susan, who attends at Ayden Middle School. He is a member of the Ayden United Methodist Church and the Ayden Golf and Country Club. A Kiwanian, he was last year the recipient of the Distinguished Club President Award for the Carolinas

District in Kiwanis International, composed of 201 clubs in North and South Carolina.

Also attending the convention from Pitt County were Pete Carraway, Carlton Hardee, Garland Beddard, Joyce Killingsworth, Linda Langley, Carl Gilchrist, R.B.

IVAN HILL

Miller, Louise Hearne, Dixie Souther, Kay Dunn and Gene Collier.

Issues covered during the convention included a dues increase, rejection of continued affiliation with the Association of Government Employees, and postponing until the next convention consideration of expanding the Employee Action Movement, which would allow contributions to political candidates for state office.

Delegates unanimously approved a resolution asking that "the 1982 General Assembly be petitioned to grant a just and adequate salary increase to the employees of the State of North Carolina taking into consideration the inequities of the past."

Cites Big Savings Funding Own Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina could save $48.4 million in the next two years by funding its own medical insurance plan for state employees, a Boston consulting firm spokesman said Tuesday.

John A. Norton, vice president of William N. Mercer Inc. said the state should consider hiring an insurance company only to process the claims, without receiving the premiums or taking the risks.

Officials of the company appeared before the legislative Committee on Employee Hospital and Medical Benefits, which was formed earlier this year to redesign the state's medical plan in the face of rapid cost increases.

The state now has a conventional health policy plan carried by Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina under a contract that expires next June 30.

But Norton said the state would have a one-time, $22.3 million savings in switching from the carrier to the self-funded plan through conversion of a premium reserve now held by the carrier.

Another $26.1 million would be saved over the next two years because the state would stop paying a carrier to assume the risks and would be able to hold its money longer, allowing it to collect more interest.

The revised plan suggested by Mercer officials includes mandatory second opinions before major surgery and a $50 deductible on hospitalization and emergency room care.

German Commands 1st Division Units

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer
RINGINGEN, West Germany (AP) — Part of the first American division to capture a major German city in World War II is back for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's annual fall war games. This time it's under the command of a German general.

Lt. Gen. Meinhard Glanz was a private in Hitler's army in 1944 when the 1st Infantry Division captured Aachen, near the Belgian border. Now he is directing a major test of how well the troops of the North Atlantic allies can overcome their differences in language, tactics and equipment.

A brigade of the 1st Division, airlifted to West Germany from Fort Riley, Kan., was in the thick of simulated battle Tuesday as a unit of the 4th German Panzer Division.

"So far no problems," Glanz told a group of reporters. "We've been very pleased with the way it has worked out."

The purpose of the exercise is to prove that in case of war, an American unit could be flown to Western Europe, pick up stockpiled U.S. tanks and ammunition, and go into battle with NATO armies already in the field.

During World War II, allied armies fought side by side but usually under the command of their own generals. In the past decade, to improve efficiency and save money, NATO has tried to improve the interchangeability of armies of the 13 nations in the military wing of the alliance.

For this week's maneuvers, German-speaking American soldiers were put in liaison positions to insure that orders and reports got through correctly.

Among them was M.Sgt. Dieter Thurman, a reservist who in civilian life is with the Miami, Fla., police department's felony squad. He was manning the telephones at a division command post in the basement of a discotheque in this South German village.

About 15 miles away, the 1st Brigade of the 1st Division was trading blank tank and artillery fire with an attacking unit that had crossed the Neckar River and was trying to push the Americans back into the West German heartland.

The brigade commander, Col. Moses D. Smalls of Charleston, S.C., speaks no German but said most of the orders were given in English, NATO's official language.

For German conversations he relied on the interpreting of subordinates who took a crash course in German when they found out their unit was going to take part in the exercise.

Different armies also have different tactical habits, often based on historical experience. For example, West German tank commanders like to move more quickly than their allies.

"Sometimes they think they are another Rommel," said Glanz, referring to Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, Germany's famous World War II tank commander.

The Americans take more time, stressing thoroughness over speed, he said.

Each unit takes care of its own meals so there is no conflict between national tastes.

Glanz said the American troops are less familiar with the ins and outs of reducing damage to farms and roads they travel over in the maneuvers. He estimated such damage will cost the West German government nearly a million dollars during just one of the major exercises underway.

Payments range from $10 for a broken fence to an estimated $10,000 for a pregnant sheep killed last Friday.

Smalls said his troops had been given extensive briefings on the need to keep damage to a minimum.

"I think we're doing a...good job," he asserted.

Allows Suit By Silver Trader

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has ruled that a Manhattan silver trader suing the Hunt brothers of Dallas may press antitrust claims against Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith Inc., and other brokerage houses.

U.S. District Judge Morris Lasker refused Monday to dismiss the antitrust claims in a civil suit charging Nelson Bunker Hunt, his brother, Herbert, and others with a conspiracy to monopolize the silver market in 1979 and 1980.

The suit, filed by Selig Strax, seeks to collect damages for alleged losses in the silver market due to a buying spree by the Hunts.

Anti-Nuke Protestors Undaunted By 500 Arrests

By BRIAN BLAND
Associated Press Writer
SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Undaunted by the arrests of more than 500 of their comrades, anti-nuclear protesters regrouped to reinforce their blockade of the Diablo Canyon atomic power plant. About 300 protesters used homemade wooden siege ladders Tuesday to scale six-foot barbed-wire-topped fences around the outside of the plant site, with one man carried over in a wheelchair. Others landed at the station's beachfront in rubber rafts. More than 700 construction workers, their exit blocked by the demonstrators, had to be taken away from the plant by helicopter.

Police estimated that about 2,000 people took part in the protest altogether, including some who stayed off plant property to avoid arrest. Demonstrators vowed to return to the $2.3 billion Pacific Gas & Electric complex today with more people as police promised to keep arresting the trespassers. "Our action will continue tomorrow," Jeff Kalbach of the Abalone Alliance said Tuesday night after the demonstrators were arrested. The alliance is a coalition of anti-nuclear groups participating in the demonstration.

"The whole world is watching," chanted many of the protesters as they were arrested for trespassing by an army of law officers. The demonstrators went peacefully, some allowing police to lead them away, others forcing officers to drag them. The demonstrators consider the plant unsafe because it is three miles from an offshore earthquake fault. PG&E is awaiting approval from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Monday to start low-power testing at the plant, located about halfway between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Those arrested were taken from a holding facility inside the plant's outer fence to a nearby men's prison, where they were booked and released on their own recognizance or on bail of up to $630.

The main wave of protesters, several hundred strong, marched 1½ miles from Avila Beach to the plant's locked main gate early in the afternoon.

After scaling the fence, nearly 200 of them planted themselves inside the property.

As quickly as the ladders went up, authorities began to dismantle them with chain saws.

Cheerfully singing anti-nuclear songs, other demonstrators began their sit-in on plant property outside the gate. Still others shouted encouragement from just off the PG&E property where they could not be arrested as more than 200 newsmen recorded the event.

About 100 other demonstrators at different sites around the 735-acre property also used ladders to cross the perimeter fence and were arrested, said California Highway Patrol spokesman Ron Henn.

Earlier, a half-dozen small seagoing craft landed about 30 people — including actor Robert Blake — on a beach about four miles south of the reactor complex.

"They said we couldn't do it, but we did," one of the arrivals yelled to reporters after landing the group in rubber rafts. Some of the group began a trek onto the PG&E property and several were arrested there. Blake and two companions were given permission by officers to hike back to Avila Beach.

About 60 police and sheriff's deputies who had been stationed just inside the main gate since early morning were sent elsewhere about an hour before the protesters arrived, giving protesters the opportunity to hop the fence with their ladders.

The first person to climb ladders over the main gate in the afternoon was Craig Rasmussen, 26, of Huntington Beach, who carried a sign reading "No Nukes." A few minutes later inside the gate he said, "I feel very special and very lucky to be the first one."

Four Accidents Cause Damage

An estimated $9,650 property damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 1:25 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 150 feet north of the Pine Street intersection, involving cars driven by Freddie Foster Bryant of Ayden and Roxie Weathington Evans of Winterville.

Investigators, who said Bryant was injured in the collision, charged Evans with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Damage from the collision was set at $2,500 to the Bryant car and $3,000 to the Evans auto.

Cars driven by Wyatt Richardson Highsmith of 2306 East Fourth St., and Sarah Floyd Allen of 202 North Ashe St., collided about 6:20 p.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Ashe Streets, causing $800 damage to the Highsmith car and $1,800 to the Allen vehicle.

Officers reported a car owned by Michael Kevin Anderson of Route 1, Winterville, ran off Mumford Road about 8:10 p.m., struck a mail box and newspaper box in the yard of 703 Mumford Road, then crashed into a fire hydrant. The driver then jumped from the car and ran, police said.

Investigators, who are still searching for the driver, estimated damage at $500 to the car, $300 to the hydrant, and $254 each to the mail box and newspaper box.

Cars driven by Terry Wayne Humphrey of Greenville and James Henry Green of Route 1, Grimesland, collided about 3:25 p.m. at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Memorial Drive, causing an estimated $400 damage to the Humphrey car and $300 damage to the Green vehicle.

Prof. Wants Resignation

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Saying Duke University President Terry Sanford publicly criticized faculty members who opposed the establishment of a Richard Nixon presidential library on campus, zoology professor Peter H. Klopfer has called for Sanford's resignation.

Klopfer was among seven faculty members who met with students Monday to tell students returning to school after the library controversy began about the proposal.

He said Sanford, in a letter sent to thousands of alumni and students, attacked the motives of faculty members who opposed the library. Later, Klopfer added that he would like to see a petition circulated seeking Sanford's resignation.

Klopfer criticized Sanford for approaching the library issue like a "courageous, effective governor of a state and leader of a political party" rather than as a university president. He said a university president should operate with more "thoughtful consensus."

Sanford, a former North Carolina governor and two-time candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Earlier this month, the executive committee of the Duke Board of Trustees voted to continue negotiations with Nixon's attorneys for the library and a presidential museum despite a resolution by the Academic Council, a forum of faculty members, opposing the plan.

After the trustee committee's decision, the Academic Council repeated its objection to a museum honoring Nixon.

Maureen Reagan Dodges Queries

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — It was strictly business and no politics for Maureen Reagan, who took her "Sell Overseas America" campaign to a trade seminar here but had to dodge questions about her rumored political plans.

President Reagan's daughter, attending Chemical Bank's international trade seminar, was the keynote speaker at a luncheon to encourage medium-size businesses to export.

But reporters wanted to know about her political aspirations — whether she would seek to unseat incumbent Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif.

"I am chief executive officer of Sell Overseas America and that's why I'm here," said Ms. Reagan.

She hasn't announced plans to seek the seat and her early hints that she might were met publicly with an "I hope not" from her father.

Hospital Board Votes Extend Leasing Space

BY CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees voted last night to extend leases on supplementary space for the hospital six months.

Space for business offices in the Hawkins Building will cost $2,200 a month; space in the Holiday Inn motel for ambulatory surgery patient care rooms, $6,750 a month.

Approval was given for the paving of the doctors' parking lot and the addition of one lane to the emergency department entrance by Barrus Construction Company at a cost of $62,800 for parking lot and $6,700 to widen the road. Also approved was the purchase of draperies for the new bed tower from Northeast Drapery Contractor of New York at a cost of $13,221.

Finance Committeeman Warren McRoy reported that, as the end of this fiscal year nears, hospital revenue is 4.5 percent over what was projected; expenses 1.3 percent under, so the hospital is in good fiscal shape. Hospital Director Jack Richardson said payroll is now running $62,162, as compared with $45,447 a day last year this time. This 27 percent increase reflects growth in the size of the staff and salary increases, he said.

Richardson said trustees are invited during the next meeting to tour the new bed tower that will be opened soon. The contractor says the inspection for the facility is set for Sept. 22.

Reporting for the personnel director search committee, Dave McRae said that Charles Fennesay has been picked from a field of 95 applicants and will come to work Sept. 28. Fennesay has a wealth of experience in personnel management of large organizations, he said.

Richardson reported consideration is being given to construction of a two-story metal building on the grounds that would provide business office, education and other space for parts of the hospital program that do not directly relate to patient care. Thus, he said, the more expensive hospital space itself can be used for patient care.

Budgeted items approved include four $6,800 each neonatal heart rate and respirator monitors (subject to attorney's go-ahead) for the neonatal intensive care unit, a $4,000 corometric antepartum monitor for the obstetrics-gynecology department; 44 19-inch remote control television sets at $16,341 for the new bed tower; a $10,000 film processor for the radiology department, and a $2,000 exhaust hood for the pharmacy.

A non-budgeted item approved was a $5,600 maxi-driver for the operating room. Approval was given for $61,734.98 for pediatrics intensive care unit monitors.

Some $30,220 of this amount was previously budgeted, the remainder added at this time.

The board okayed a resolution to cooperate with other North Carolina hospitals in a voluntary cost containment effort. The medical staff passed the same resolution the previous night.

Approval was given for provisional active staff privileges for Dr. James L. Hughes in pediatrics, Dr. Sudhakar Madakasira in psychiatry, Dr. Robert R. Sloss in pathology, Dr. Steven H. Grossman in internal medicine/nephrology, and Dr. John E. Wimmer Jr. in pediatrics/nephrology. Dr. Thomas G. Irons was accorded provisional consulting staff privileges.

East Carolina University Medical School Dean Dr. William Laupus said the library and administrative offices of the Brody Building may be occupied by early in 1982 and that the medical school should be "all on this campus" by July 1.

The education program prior to the meeting was presented by Sara Krantz, R.N., hospital epidemiologist, on how her department works to control infection in the hospital.

Football Traffic Routings Given By State Patrol

RALEIGH — Capt. R. A. Clark, commander of Highway Patrol Troop C in Raleigh listed several suggestions today for Greenville area residents planning to attend the East Carolina University-N.C. State football game in Carter Stadium Saturday night.

"To ensure that you will be in your seat for the 7 p.m. kickoff," Clark said, "you should plan to be in the general vicinity of Carter-Finley stadium no later than 6 p.m."

Suggesting, "allow yourselves plenty of time to make your trip," the Highway Patrol officer said persons coming from the east, north, south and southeast should travel into Raleigh following the bellline "and exit onto I-40, get in the left lane and proceed west on I-40 past the Blue Ridge Road exit until you see the new access road adjacent to Carter-Finley Stadium." Pointing out that there will be a sign saying "Carter-Finley Stadium" Clark said "exit at that point. Officers will be there to direct you to the parking area."

Persons traveling to the game from the west should enter I-40 east of Durham and travel east until they reach the stadium, while persons living in the Raleigh area should utilize Hillsborough Street and Western Boulevard. Cary area residents should travel N.C. 54 and utilize Trinity Road and the Nowell Road entrance.

"All buses should travel the beltline and exit onto Hillsborough Street, travel west on Hillsborough until reaching Blue Ridge Road, then turn right onto Blue Ridge Road," Clark said. "There will be troopers there to direct buses to Gates A or B at the stadium."

All traffic should exit by the same route that they enter the stadium," the Captain noted.

Crossed Channel

DOVER, England (AP)

— Two kilted Scotsmen landed in Calais, France, to a swirl of bagpipes today, completing the first two-man hang glider crossing of the English Channel, organizers of the flight reported.

They launched their craft with a 38-foot canopy on the white cliffs of Dover, near the spot where Louis Bleriot landed in the first channel flight in 1909.

The hang glider took 50 minutes for the 21-mile flight.

Brody's Plans Men's Store Opening Thurs.

After some 45 years in ladies fashions, Brody's is venturing into the men's clothing business with the grand opening Thursday of a new store at Pitt Plaza.

The president of the firm, Morris Brody, said the men's 5,200 square foot facility incorporates a "concept not like any other store," featuring architectural detail "that is unique, not like the trite, conventional home-cooked store."

Brody said the new store, located in the structure that formerly housed the Three Sisters women's apparel store adjacent to the present Brody's facility, will carry men's clothing selections including suits, sport coats, sweaters, shirts, pants, accessories and shoes, as well as rugged wear items found in a large "outdoor shop." A complete gift department is also featured, he said.

Grand opening activities will begin at 11 a.m. tomorrow and continue for ten business days, the spokesman said. Operating hours after the initial opening will be from 10 a.m. until 9 p.m. each day.

Brody said the facility, which underwent complete refurbishing, employs a unique architectural plan and physical layout accented by a color scheme of hunter green and soft fawn trimmed in ivory. Other aspects of the interior theme include wine colored ceilings, southern columns throughout the store, gabled roof, brass details throughout, and "dental work" molding throughout the facility. The outdoor section is highlighted by shellacked redwood trimmed in forest green.

He said the exterior of the men's store is stucco, accented by "dental work" molding trimmed in contrasting colors.

The new store, which will be managed by Rodney Brantley, shares common access with the adjoining ladies' facility, Brody explained, adding that major remodeling continues at the main Pitt Plaza store with completion scheduled by Oct. 1.

J. H. Hudson Inc. had the major contract for the new store work and Brody's handled the planning and design in conjunction with a Washington, D.C. architectural firm.

The owner said that opening of the men's store brings total employment at Brody's Inc. of Greenville to over 100 people. In addition to the two Pitt Plaza stores, the firm operates a store on Evans Mall in the downtown section here and also has facilities in Kinston and Jacksonville.

Tape Reveals Plot To Acquire Guns

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A tape recording of what the government claims is a plan to raid Fort Gordon for guns was played to the jury hearing evidence against 12 persons in a drug case on Tuesday.

The weapons were to be traded for illegal drugs.

Gary Peacock, a special employee of the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, spent a second day on the stand clarifying specific points of taped face-to-face conversations he claimed he and another agent had with four of the defendants, including Anthony T. Mulherin.

On the tape, the man identified as Mulherin says he would find a desolate place at the fort to haul the stolen weapons and he could use an unidentified source at the fort to drug the soldiers' food so they would sleep while the weapons were being loaded into a truck.

"It's a one shot deal at Fort Gordon," the man said.

The weapons then would be driven to a nearby airstrip, the man continues on the tape, where they would be loaded on a plane and flown away.

He also mentioned he has another "in" at Fort Stewart near Jesup, who he can tap for grenades and other items to trade for drugs.

The 12 defendants, 11 from the Augusta area and one from Stone Mountain, were arrested in early April after a two-month investigation.

Peacock's credibility was called into question during a non-jury session Tuesday afternoon, when a representative from the Internal Revenue Service told the court Peacock had not filed a tax return with her agency since 1970.

Peacock had testified at a pre-trial hearing last month that he had filed his earnings for each year with the IRS.

U.S. District Judge Dudley H. Bowen said he would permit the use of the testimony from the IRS representative to impeach Peacock's testimony during the trial.

Test New Way To Cure Leaf

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A type of curing that may reduce tar in tobacco and make it safer to smoke is being tested.

Abner Schepartz, a U.S. Department of Agriculture chemist in Athens, Ga., said tests at two Tobacco Research Laboratories show that ozonization significantly reduces components that form possible tumor-causing hydrocarbons in cigarette-smoke tar.

Ozonization treats ground-up tobacco leaves in a watery suspension with ozone — a byproduct formed by sending an electrical charge through oxygen.

At the Tobacco Safety Research Unit in Athens, Schepartz said he was able to use the process to reduce hydrocarbons 36 percent to 70 percent under laboratory conditions.

He said ozone oxidizes and destroys unsaturated tobacco leaf components or lipids, such as solanesol, fatty acids and sterols, which lead to the formation of some hydrocarbons in cigarette tar.

But Jesse Lam, an agricultural engineer working on the project in Oxford, said the Athens test was performed with hastily assembled equipment and may not have yielded accurate results.

Results at a unit lab in Oxford showed reductions of 18 to 36 percent. Both tests were conducted by Schepartz.

Since then, he said researchers have made adjustments although it may be six months before they have results on current tests.

Tobacco used in the tests did not go to a regular curing barn. Instead, it was ground up in a water slurry — 10 pounds of tobacco to 100 pounds of water — then dried.

Lam warned that the initial encouraging results should not prompt farmers to begin changing their curing methods.

He said more research is needed to be sure that while eliminating some undesirable components, the method is not changing other tobacco components into undesirable compounds.

"There are a lot of unknowns we are still working on," Lam said. He could not say whether the process changes the taste of cigarettes because only machines have smoked the tobacco. "It does lose some of its tobacco odor," he said.

Ozonification is not new. It often is used to remove components from industrial waste water similar to those the researchers are removing from tobacco.

The Airborne Tries Taking Dogs Along

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP)
— Having excelled in such jobs as patrolling, tracking and bomb detection, the Army's canine corps soon may be assigned loftier tasks.

Thanks to the ingenuity of a soldier from Pennsylvania, the Army is considering the feasibility of parachuting dogs with the crack 82nd Airborne Division.

A special harness devised by Sergeant First Class Robert D. Meade, the Military Police kennelmaster here, allows a dog to be attached to its handler just beneath the reserve parachute. In a jump, the dog would rest against the handler's legs in its harness, leaving the soldier's hands free to manipulate the chute.

While about 200 feet from the ground, the handler would lower the dog on an 18-foot line. This would give the dog and handler more room to maneuver in landing, reducing the chance of a collision.
So far, Meade has trained

12 dogs from the 118th Military Police Company (Airborne) on a 34-foot jump tower here, and now the Army is considering whether to approve actual jumps from aircraft.
"The dog accepts the jumps just as a soldier does," says Meade. "The handler leads the dog and helps him through it. We've never had an adverse reaction; never had a training accident."
Before coming to Fort Bragg, the Folsom, Pa., native studied dog training methods in Germany and did a stint as a recruiter. Since starting his canine airborne training more than a year ago, Meade has received nationwide attention.
A parachutist himself and Vietnam veteran, Meade believes dogs could play an important role in airborne operations.

"We can make the dog an asset to the commander by making him fit into any situation," Meade says. "Everything we do, the dogs go along with. There isn't anything we, the military policemen, can't use the dogs on."
The sergeant says he doubts the dogs would ever be given their own parachutes, although there once was a proposal to fit them with modified canopies.
"Without the lowering line, the handler would lose control," he says. "If the handler were injured, the dog would be running lose. This way we're guaranteed the dog and handler would stay together."
As the kennelmaster here, Meade is responsible for 42 dogs assigned to four different MP companies, including the 118th, which supports the 82nd.

All Army dogs are at least part German Shepherd because of the species' ability to adjust quickly to various climates. They attend a 10-week basic training course at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. Canine recruits lacking an aggressive nature are rejected.
After the dogs report for duty, some are sent back to school for advanced training in such subjects as bomb and narcotics detection.
"We capitalize on all their senses and make them more efficient dogs," Meade says. "They're not just doing one thing, they're doing a variety of things."

Some of Meade's dogs participated in amphibious training this spring in Little Creek, Va. The dogs and their handlers jumped from the fantail of a Navy destroyer and took part in beach assaults.
Meade's dogs also are rappelled from helicopters, and fine tune their noses in tracking operations.
In one such exercise, the dogs captured all but 10 members of a 30-man team that had been dropped miles from Fort Bragg and attempted to return without being detected.

Besides routine patrol duties, the dogs run one to four miles a day, along with their handlers, and scurry over an obstacle course with eight-foot jumps.
Meade believes the dogs' rigorous daily routine has contributed to their success so far in airborne training.
What do the dogs think of the new challenge?
"I hate to say dogs are people, too, but that's the way I feel about it," Meade says. "They can't tell me if they enjoy jumping, but I can tell because I know them."

Angered By Defacing A Monument To Heroic Dead

By LILLIAN SWANSON
Associated Press Writer
HERMITAGE, Pa. (AP) — Just last winter, a little cemetery here captured the world's attention by raising a fresh flag each day of the American hostages were held in Iran. Today, many of the remaining banners are tattered and faded, and vandals have left their signatures in spray paint.

When no one was looking last month, somebody painted swastikas and death threats on the monument erected to honor the eight U.S. commandos killed in the aborted rescue mission.

The intruders sprayed black paint on the eagle-topped monument, a nearby bronze marker and the cemetery's stone office building. In neat, large letters they wrote "Death to Flynn" and "Flynn is a Crook."

"I think it was a cowardly act by an individual or group who didn't have the guts to say things to my face," said Tom Flynn, owner of Hillcrest Memorial Park. "It doesn't have anything to do with the hostages."

The graffiti has since been removed by machine and two bronze plaques await refinishing. But the anger and hurt haven't been erased.

"It devastated us," cemetery publicist Cay Mack said. "Swastikas on the monument to the eight American men who died!"

Flynn said he believes the damage was the work of "someone upset at me or who wants to make me look bad."

The 42-year-old cemetery owner basked in international limelight when he raised a flag each day of the hostage crisis.

He was not alone. Hermitage officials, who had long been looking for a way to put their community of 16,500 on the map, were as surprised as anyone at the attention lavished on Flynn's flags.

"That is the ultimate irony," said Hermitage Manager Terry Fedorchak. "They were trying to get more recognition. All of a sudden out of the clear blue sky pops Tom Flynn, fresh from Chicago, buys a cemetery, and turns it for 444 days into a national monument."

But Flynn knows he's ruffled feathers in Hermitage and the rest of the Shenango Valley. "There are a lot of people locally who would like to get me," he claimed in an interview.

Flynn links the defacing indirectly to a news report that he had defaulted on $42,000 in land payments and that 12 acres of cemetery property were being put up for sheriff's sale. It became a local controversy that "stirred up a lot of people," he said.

Flynn paid the debt and the property was withdrawn from sale Sept. 3.

Tall and lean with prematurely white hair, Flynn travels between Hermitage and his home in Chicago, where he also owns a cemetery. Although Flynn has owned Hillcrest for a few years, he's still considered "an outsider" here. And he is alternately staunchly defended or bitterly attacked for his "Avenue of Flags."

"There appears to be no middle of the road," said Hermitage Commission President Al Kuti. "He's either done wonders or, on the other side, people say he's done this for promotional recognition."

However they feel about Flynn, however, residents are embarrassed and angry that the monument was defaced.

"They take it very personally that someone could do this," Flynn said.

"My blood began to boil," Edward Hoagland, Mercer County director of veterans affairs, said after he saw the damage.

Hermitage Police Chief John Marriott said investigation of the vandalism case is difficult because Hillcrest is now a minor tourist attraction. "It's not a normal cemetery. People are in and out of there day and night," he said.

It has not been a normal cemetery since Flynn and his staff raised their first flags on the 100th day of the hostages' captivity.

Throughout the crisis they held candlelight vigils and special ceremonies.

The family of hostage Michael Metrinko of Olyphant, Pa., was involved from the start and reporters jumped on the story. Photos of the flags were seen around the world.

"From the beginning, when the Metrinkos walked in, the networks walked in with them. What was happening obviously was important," Flynn said.

But local residents commented that the horde of photographers and reporters at the ceremonies rivaled the size of the crowds.

James Dunlap, editor of The Herald in neighboring Sharon, called the story a "media event."

"The national publications, wire services and networks seized on it because there was no other way in the United States to illustrate the hostage situation," he said, noting that public participation blossomed locally only after the cemetery got national attention.

Flynn says he misses the network camera crews tramping up the cemetery driveway, the reporters huddling over phones in the office, the constant swarm of visitors.

He has taken down all but 53 flags because they were getting weather-worn. But on anniversary dates of the hostages' capture — November 4 — and release — January 20 — he plans to put up the full 444.

Flynn leaned back in his chair, put his hands on his head and said he believes his flags made a difference to the country.

"It was our hit record," he said. "... Nobody can take it away from us. They can say whatever they want about me. But they can't take it away from us," he said.

Prices Disappoint On Quality Apples

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — When last summer's hot, dry weather stunted North Carolina apples and brought farmers low prices for their crops, growers hoped this year's harvest would make up for the losses.

But farmers say prices are even lower than before, in spite of top quality offerings.

"The quality is the best we've seen in a long time, but sales are slow, very slow," said Gerald Griffin, manager of Sugarloaf Apple Growers Coop in Henderson County. "It's going to be a disastrous year if prices don't pick up."

Griffin blamed lagging apple sales on loads of Washington state apples that arrive in North Carolina just as this state's apple harvest began.

"They just dumped 'em in her all at once. It sent prices down from $8 a bushel to $5 a bushel in the first week," Griffin said. "The first two weeks' sales were zilch, nothing."

In North Carolina, the nation's seventh largest apple-producing state, apple harvesting begins in mid-August and continues into October. Last year the state had a record harvest of about 8.5 million bushels. Apple sales alone brought in more than $24 million.

Most of North Carolina's apples are raised in the western and Piedmont counties. Henderson County is the state's top apple-growing area with about 400 apple farmers producing seven million bushels of fruit, or 70 percent of the state's apple crop.

This year's apple crop, with its rich color that usually brings top prices, was down slightly from last year because of a late frost.

"Overall this crop was better than the last one and could have been good news for farmers if sales were better," said Ray Hill, a Henderson County agricultural extension agent. "But maybe sales will improve as the harvesting goes along."

Asia Abandoning Coats, Ties

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Call it abandonment of the old colonial ties, or simply escape from torture in the tropical climes. In parts of Asia, men are shedding their coats and neckties and turning to less formal, more comfortable, native clothing.

The Japanese, clinging to Western-style business suits, haven't quite got there yet, nor have the British bankers of Hong Kong. But the sartorial revolution under way in this part of the world for some years appears to be gaining strength.

Such items as the airy Philippine "barong tagalog" shirt, Thailand's "choot prarachathan" and the colorful batik designs of Indonesia are seen with increasing frequency in the throbbing business world of Asia.

The phenomenon was recognized recently by the regional magazine Asiaweek, which hailed the wardrobe rebellion in a headline saying: "Let's ban the tie! Time to cut the last colonial knot!"

The Hong Kong-based magazine described the coat and tie as a continuing symbol of wealth and status among certain Western-oriented elitists, and a ridiculous graft onto Asian cultures by British and other colonials who, despite Asia's heat and humidity, regard their own clothes as civilized and "native dress" as downright primitive.

The tale of the tie in Asia undoubtedly has deep political and psychological implications. But for many Asians, liberation from years of choking, starched collars and rivers of perspiration under their suit jackets boils down simply to one thing: comfort.

Southeast Asia, where the climate is punishing the year around, has naturally spearheaded the trend.

The region's last major bastion of the coat and tie is the upper strata of the business world. In some places, junior and midlevel executives have taken off their coats while keeping their neckties on.

Only a handful of hotel restaurants retain coat-and-tie rules. And even some Western diplomats have taken advantage of protocol which allows the wearing of comfortable "national dress" at official functions.

President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines seldom appears without a "barong tagalog," the embroidered, pocketless shirt of natural or synthetic fibers that in the past decade has all but wiped out the coat and tie in that country.

In Manila, fewer than 10 percent of guests at most formal parties and ceremonies these days show up in Western attire. Those who do often know that a particular function room has air conditioning too cool for the flimsy, see-through barongs, which are worn outside the trousers.

Indonesians, Malaysians and many foreigners favor the so-called "safari suit," and the batik shirt. The open-necked safari, with its military cut and epaulets, has a macho dash and in more extreme versions is sometimes scorned as "combat chic." But it is utterly practical — cheap, whether custom or ready-made, easy to keep clean and equipped with many convenient pockets.

More a design style than a particular cut, the batik shirt is usually of cotton and comes in an infinite variety of colorful patterns, created with the traditional art of dyeing with wax stencils. As with the barong, the short-sleeved batik is for casual wear, the long-sleeved version for more formal events.

The Singapore government last year launched a campaign to find a "typical" national costume for its polyglot population of 2.3 million. The idea fizzled, but the unofficial favorites are batiks and safaris. Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, like many other Asian leaders, still wears coat and tie when traveling abroad, but at home he favors open-necked sports shirts for political appearances and other public occasions.

Thailand is making Southeast Asia's latest attempt to do away with Western wear. Designed by the royal palace, the "choot prarachathan" — which, literally translated, means "jacket given by the king" — was popularized by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanonda, who has seldom appeared without one during 18 months in office.

Dr. Suwit Yoadmanee, an official in the prime minister's office, describes the creation of the elegant, high-collared silk jacket as "a very mild form of nationalism, a nostalgia for tradition and old times."

"We were never a colony so we don't have any chips on our shoulders," says Suwit.

"But for us it is still a matter of national identity, feeling that we need to wear something that is special and also comfortable."

Thailand formerly was known as Siam.

Plain Western-style shirts remain common attire for men in the perpetually steamy climate of Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, in Vietnam, and other cities of Indochina. More formal wear is rarely seen except when officials meet foreign visitors. Even then, white shirts, dark pants and no ties are the rule.

Chapter Begins Its New Year

The Eta Delta Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi began its new year with two recent functions.

The first regular meeting was held at the home of Georgia Potter, with Carol Bishton serving as co-hostess. A program on various wines was presented by Charles Harrison of the Wine and Cheese Shop. Members discussed the planned participation in the craft fair scheduled to be held at Carolina East Mall on October 10. Individual groups presented projects completed during summer workshops which will be displayed at this bazaar.

Members and guests also met informally for a beginning day rush social at the home of chapter president, Linda McGehee. This "make your own" pizza party started the rush.

Paternity Rulings By Appeals Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Court of Appeals upheld the 1980 murder conviction of Tyrone Smith on Tuesday, and handed down two rulings bearing on the issue of paternity.

The court ruled that poor men sued in paternity cases have a constitutional right to a court-appointed attorney, and found that in a separate case that the Industrial Commission has the authority to determine paternity in assigning benefits.

In the Smith case, the court rejected Smith's contention that he had not received a fair trial in the death of Avery Ferris.

Ferris was killed during a strike at the Halsted Industries plant in Rockingham County on Oct. 26, 1979. Smith was a striker and Ferris was not.

Smith contended that the original court should have sustained objections to hearsay testimony in the trial. The testimony concerned "threats made to the deceased by unnamed persons, and these threats were never linked to the defendant," the appeals court said.

The appeals court also ruled that testimony showed Smith had not killed Ferris in self-defense or unintentionally.

The court's ruling in Evelyn Carrington vs. Daniel Townes means that paternity suits will be one of only a few types of civil cases in which a defendant may request a court-appointed attorney.

State law allows mothers to sue indigent men accused of fathering illegitimate children in a civil proceeding. The man could be required to pay child support if the court rules he is the father.

Court-appointed attorneys normally are assigned only to cases in which indigent defendants are accused of criminal offenses. But the Court of Appeals ruled that the possibility of child support is an indirect threat to the liberty of the father because men who fail to pay it can be imprisoned.

The court cited a study that shows nearly 95 percent of the men accused of fathering children are found by the courts to be the fathers. But it also cited another study of 1,000 such cases, using blood tests, showed that 40 percent of the men could not have been the fathers.

Townes was accused of fathering Ms. Carrington's child and Townes denied the accusation. He had asked Judge Stafford G. Bullock of Raleigh for a court-appointed attorney, but Bullock had denied the request.

In the Industrial Commission case, the court upheld the commission in awarding full workers' compensation benefits to the illegitimate 15-year-old daughter of Robert F. Kenan, who was killed in a December 1978 accident.

Kenan's elder daughter, now 20, contended that she should receive some of the benefits, saying that the commission did not have the authority to decide whether the 15-year-old girl was really Kenan's daughter.

But the appeals court said the commission could rule on paternity, saying it had done so since 1929. The court also said the elder daughter should not get benefits because she was no longer a child.

In another case involving allegations of wrongful death, the appeals court rejected William W. Turner's contention that he should not have to pay $225,000 in damages to the children of his wife, Martha B. Turner.

Turner and three other men pleaded guilty in the January 1974 slaying of Mrs. Turner.

In the appeal, Turner alleged that the testimony of a State Bureau of Investigation agent in the wrongful death suit should not have been admitted because it concerned incidents taking place after the conspiracy. The court agreed, but said the outcome of the case would not have been different since Turner had already pleaded guilty.

The court also said there was no evidence to support Turner's contention that the other three men may have acted independently in killing Mrs. Turner.

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Greenville City Council will hold a special meeting on Thursday, September 17, 1981, at 8 p.m., in the Council Chambers of the Municipal Building, for the purpose of considering the adoption of an ordinance approving the City's participation in the Municipal Power Agency No. 3 purchase of ownership interest in several CP&L generating facilities.

The public is encourage to attend this meeting at which time they will be afforded the opportunity to present their comments to the Council.

Newest Legislator Sworn In Tuesday

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Winston-Salem Republican Frank E. Rhodes finally obtained the seat that eluded him in the 1980 GOP primary Tuesday as he was sworn in as North Carolina's newest state legislator.

Rhodes, a retired real estate broker, was named to the seat of Rep. Mary Pegg, R-Forsyth, who resigned in the middle of her second term. He had run for the seat in the 1980 GOP primary, finishing sixth in the race for five seats.

Rhodes, 67, sought to avoid commenting on the circumstances surrounding Mrs. Pegg's resignation, which came with the announcement of her intentions to move to Goldsboro and marry Democratic Rep. Richard Grady. But Rhodes said that like Mrs. Pegg, he brought a conservative political philosophy to the job.

"I just know I'm very proud to be here and to succeed her," he said. "I would say she was probably ultraconservative, and I would call myself conservative."

Mrs. Pegg, who had campaigned and served in the Legislature as a self-described pro-family advocate and Equal Rights Amendment opponent, said she was leaving with few regrets. Her only real disappointment, she said, was that she did not succeed in several issues on her agenda of social issues — such as eliminating the state's $1 million-a-year appropriation for abortions for poor women and passing a bill de-regulating church-run day-care centers.

She added that while the ERA has not been ratified in North Carolina, she wished the issue had come to a vote this year so that it could have been defeated outright.

Volcanic Chunks Being Analyzed

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — Government scientists began today to analyze metal-bearing chunks spewed out of an undersea volcano, which they said was the first of its type found off the U.S. coast.

"New earth crust is actually being made" by the volcano, 270 miles west of Oregon, said H. Edward Clifton, chief of the U.S. Geological Survey's Pacific-Arctic Branch of Marine Geology.

After the USGS ship S.P. Lee docked Tuesday, members of the vessel's scientific team displayed photographs of the 8,000-foot-deep discovery site and materials spewed by the volcano.

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION PUBLIC NOTICE

The following information has been prepared to answer questions concerning Greenville's proposed participation in the N.C. Municipal Power Agency No. 3. The Purpose of considering this participation is to provide the lowest overall cost of electric power to Greenville for years to come. Other questions and comments will be heard and answered at the Public Hearing to be conducted by the City Council at 8:00 P.M. on Thursday night, September 17, 1981, in the Council Chambers, City Hall Building.

BACKGROUND

A 1975 legislative act authorized the creation, by two or more municipal electric systems, of Municipal Power Agencies whose purpose is to acquire (build or buy) generation and transmission facilities that would jointly serve the participating cities. A 1977 amendment to the North Carolina Constitution (which, like the 1975 Act, was sponsored by Electricities of North Carolina) authorized the Power Agencies to own such generation and transmission facilities jointly with the private utility companies and/or the rural electric co-ops.

In 1976, groups of "electric cities" chartered three North Carolina Municipal Power Agencies (NCMPA's). The Agencies are municipal corporations with authority to issue electric revenue bonds for the purpose of financing the purchase or construction of electric generation facilities. NCMPA Number 1 is composed of a group of 20 municipalities that now buy electric power at wholesale from Duke Power Company. That Agency has negotiated and closed on the purchase of a 75 percent ownership interest in Duke's Catawba Unit 2, now under construction at the Catawba Nuclear Station on Lake Wylie, S.C. Agency 1 may begin receiving power under the Catawba arrangement as early as mid-1982. NCMPA Number 2 is made up of the 15 municipalities that now receive power generated by Virginia Electric and Power Company. NCMPA Number 3 is composed of a group of 22 cities that are all-requirements wholesale customers of Carolina Power & Light Company and 14 of the cities that now receive power generated by Veeco.

The members of Agency 3 are Apex, Ayden, Benson, Clayton, Farmville, Fremont, Hookerton, Kinston, La Grange, Laurinburg, Louisburg, Lumberton, New Bern, Pikeville, Red Springs, Rocky Mount, Selma, Smithfield, Southport, Wake Forest, Waynesville, and Wilson (CP&L-served cities), and Belhaven, Edenton, Elizabeth City, Enfield, Greenville, Hamilton, Hertford, Hobgood, Roberstonville, Scotland Neck, Tarboro, Washington, Windsor and Winterville (Veeco-power cities).

Each power Agency is governed by a Board of Commissioners, one member of which is appointed by each member municipality. Each municipality also appoints an alternate commissioner, who represents the city at Board meetings when the regular commissioner cannot. The Board elects its own officers.

The officers of Agency 3 are: Chairman — Kinston Mayor Simon C. Sitterson Jr., Vice Chairman — Laurinburg City Manager Peter G. Vandenberg, and Secretary-Treasurer — Tarboro Town Manager David R. Taylor.

In addition, Agency 3 has a seven-member Executive Committee, which is authorized to act on behalf of the Board on routine matters that require action between the times of the Board's regularly scheduled quarterly meetings. The Executive Committee is made up of the Agency's three officers and representatives of four member cities elected at-large: Rocky Mount Mayor Frederick E. Tur-nage, Farmville Utilities Director J.A. Wooten Jr., Greenville Utilities Director Charles Horne Jr., and Wilson City Manager T. Bruce Boyette.

Agency 3 has no employees, nor do the two other Power Agencies. Instead, each has contracted with Electricities for the full range of professional management services required to operate the Agencies' business. All such services are provided by the Electricities staff at cost. Electricities Executive Director Ralph W. Shaw also serves as General Manager of each of the three Power Agencies.

1. QUESTION: Why does it save money for the Agency to own generation facilities?

Answer: There are three primary reasons. (1) The Agency's capital costs are lower. Since its bonds are tax exempt, the Agency's long-term debt costs can be as much as three to five percentage points lower than those of a private, investor-owned utility. (2) The Agency, as a non-profit municipal corporation, does not pay income taxes. Nor does it have to pay stockholder dividends. (3) When an Agency acquires generation facilities, it hails inflation on the capital cost of constructing those facilities. It is a situation that is somewhat comparable to buying a home, rather than renting one. A renter (like a wholesale power purchaser) has nothing to show for his money at the end of the year except his monthly rent receipts.

2. QUESTION: Why would CP&L want to sell any of its generation facilities to the Agency?

Answer: Because there are distinct advantages to CP&L, its stockholders, and its retail customers. The chief ones are: (1) The sale would lessen the pressure of financing for the company, and capital costs are now a major expense for private utilities. (2) CP&L would receive capital from the sale itself. And (3) the company would be able to buy back from the Agency certain limited amounts of power from the Agency's project on a "split the savings" basis. That would be lower-cost power than CP&L could produce itself from the same units, even though the Agency would make a profit on the sell-back.

3. QUESTION: You mean that joint-ownership saves money for BOTH the cities and the company?

Answer: Yes, it does. That's why it works. Because of its lower capital costs and the fact that, as a municipal, non-profit corporation, it does not pay income taxes and does not pay dividends to stockholders, the Agency can produce power from the Agency-owned portion of a generating unit operated by CP&L at a lower cost than if CP&L were to own the entire unit itself. That is why the Agency can sell back power to the company on a "split the savings" basis and both parties benefit.

4. QUESTION: What exactly is Agency 3 proposing to purchase?

Answer: On June 17, 1981, Power Agency Number 3 and Carolina Power & Light Company announced that they had reached a preliminary agreement under which the Power Agency would acquire undivided ownership interests in four CP&L generating plants. Negotiated over a two-year period, the proposed transaction would involve the purchase by the Power Agency of an undivided ownership interest ranging from about 13 to 18 percent in nine CP&L generating units. The nine generating facilities include both nuclear and coal-fired units, some of which are now operating and others of which are in varying stages of construction and are designed to meet future demands on the CP&L system for electric power.

5. QUESTION: What types of plants are these, how large are they, and where are they located?

Answer: The units involved in the proposed joint-ownership arrangement are: Brunswick 1 and 2, a two-unit operating nuclear plant near Southport. Assuming 100 percent participation, the Agency is proposing to acquire an 18.7 percent undivided ownership interest in each of the two 790-megawatt units, which would amount to a total purchase of 295.5 megawatts of power. Roxboro Unit 4, an operating 650-megawatt coal-fired generating unit at Roxboro. The Agency is proposing to acquire a 13.2 percent interest in the unit, which would amount to a total purchase of 85 megawatts of power. Mayo 1 and 2, a two-unit coal-fired plant under construction in Person County. Mayo 1 is scheduled to begin operating in 1983 and Mayo 2 in 1990. The Agency proposes to acquire a 16.5 percent ownership interest in each of the two 720-megawatt units, which would amount to a total purchase of 237.5 megawatts of power. Harris Nuclear Plant under construction near Raleigh. Harris Unit 1 was about 37 percent complete at the end of 1980 and is scheduled to begin operation in 1985; Harris Unit 2 is scheduled for operation in 1988; Harris Unit 4, 1992, and Harris Unit 3, 1994. The Agency is proposing to acquire a 16.5 percent ownership interest in each of the four 900-megawatt units, which would amount to a total purchase of 594 megawatts of power. The Agency's total buy-in would involve an aggregate purchase of 1222 megawatts of power.

6. QUESTION: What will the Agency's payment to CP&L be to close the purchase of its ownership interests in the nine CP&L generating units?

Answer: The Agency's payment to CP&L to complete closing of the purchase will total about $800 million, including fuel costs and initial capital additions.

7. QUESTION: What is the size of the bond issue required to close the purchase?

Answer: The Power Agency plans to have three separate closings over a period of about 12 months. Under the shorter schedule, those closings would occur on approximately January 1, July 1 and December 1, 1982. Each bond sale would be in an amount equal to about one-third of the total amount of bonds that will need to be issued to complete closing. That total is about $1.2 billion. The actual timing and size of each sale will depend to a significant degree on existing bond market conditions.

8. QUESTION: What is the total amount of bonds Agency 3 expects to issue to complete its obligations for the entire project?

Answer: Assuming 100 percent participation and the completion of all units as currently scheduled, the total estimated principal bond amount (through 1993), which includes estimated capital costs and the Agency's share of construction costs for those still under construction is $4.034 billion.

9. QUESTION: If the Agency buys interest in these nine CP&L generating units, what are the estimated savings in future electric costs to the municipalities that presented buy power at wholesale from the private-utility companies?

Answer: Depending on the cost of capital (the amount of interest the Agency has to pay on its bonds), it is estimated that the savings in power costs will average in excess of 11 percent per year through the year 2003, which is the period of the engineering feasibility study. In terms of dollars through 2003, those cumulative savings for the Agency's member cities are estimated to be in excess of $1.75 billion.

10. QUESTION: How would the purchase be financed?

Answer: Through the issuance, over a period of years, of electric revenue bonds.

11. Who would issue the bonds?

Answer: They would all be issued by the Power Agency, through the North Carolina Local Government Commission. No individual municipality would issue any of the bonds required to finance such a purchase.

12. QUESTION: Would any tax funds of the participating municipalities be involved?

Answer: No, absolutely not. The state law expressly forbids the pledging of the full faith and credit of the municipalities, or of the state, in such a financing.

13. QUESTION: What would be the security for the bonds the Agency sells?

Answer: The bonds would be secured by electric revenues from the participating members. A "project power sales contract" would be executed between the Agency and each participating municipality. Under that contract, the city would pledge to set its own retail rates at a level sufficient to meet its obligations for its share of the output from the project — meaning the generating units in which the Agency acquires an undivided ownership interest. Those contracts would be "take or pay" commitments, which means the municipalities would pledge to meet its obligations to the Agency whether or not the output from individual units making up the Agency's project is reduced, suspended or terminated for any reason. "Take or pay" is the customary commitment nationally in joint-action power projects. That firm commitment is necessary to make the bonds marketable. However, since Agency 3 is negotiating for an ownership interest in a group of generating units, the risk is negligible that project power would not be available. One unit — or even two units — might be off line at various times, but it is extremely improbable that a mixed group of units would all be down at the same time.

14. QUESTION: What are the details of the Agency 3 arrangement with Veeco?

Answer: For more than a year, Agency 3 has been negotiating with Veeco to arrange the transfer of the electric load of the Agency's member cities served by Veeco-generated power to the Power Agency. Under that agreement, Veeco will provide transmission services to deliver Agency 3 power to cities presently served by Veeco power.

15. If the proposed CP&L purchase is closed, when will Agency 3 begin delivering power to its participating cities?

Answer: Agency 3 will begin delivering power to its participating cities that are presently all-requirements wholesale customers of CP&L immediately after initial closing of the purchase is held, at which time those cities would purchase all their power from Agency 3. The Agency would provide power from the generating units in which it had an ownership interest and, in addition, it would purchase under contract all the supplemental power its participants need (above the amount provided from the project's units).

Agency 3's participating cities that are presently served by Veeco-generated power would begin to receive all their power requirements from Agency 3 in December 1981, under the agreement reached between Agency 3 and Veeco that will allow the transfer of the Agency's Veeco-served member cities to the Power Agency. Under that agreement, the Agency would initially buy supplemental power from Veeco over a two-year transition period. This would supplement project power. By December 31, 1983, all the Agency's participating member cities, including those formerly served by Veeco, would be supplied their total power requirements from Agency-owned capacity and with supplemental power purchased from CP&L.

16. QUESTION: Would the Agency's participating cities then realize an immediate reduction in wholesale power costs?

Answer: Yes. The projected savings in future power costs would begin the first year the Agency becomes the power supplier for the participating cities.

17. QUESTION: How much will Agency 3 pay Veeco in exchange for the immediate termination of its municipal wholesale contracts in North Carolina?

Answer: To bring about the transfer of Agency 3's cities now served by Veeco-generated power to the status of full-requirements customers of Agency 3, the Agency negotiated with Veeco for termination of the company's wholesale power contracts with those 14 municipalities. The final terms of that agreement require the Agency's payment to Veeco of a one-time sum of up to $16.5 million as settlement compensation for the company's termination in December 1981 of the Veeco-served cities' municipal wholesale contracts.

18. QUESTION: How will the Agency deliver power to the cities presently served by Veeco?

Answer: Veeco would transmit Agency 3 power over its transmission lines for a transmission use charge. That transmission rate, which has been agreed to by the Agency and Veeco, will be filed with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. Future changes in that rate will be regulated by the Commission, just as wholesale rates are now regulated. The transmission rate will be a "postage stamp" rate. That is to say, it will be the same rate for all of Agency 3's cities now served by Veeco, regardless of the distance Veeco must transmit Agency power over its lines to the individual cities. However, after the two-year "transition period," each city will be individually responsible for delivery point substation ("step-down") costs.

19. QUESTION: Will the cities that are presently served by Veeco pay the Agency a rate that is different from that paid by the Agency's members that are presently served by CP&L?

Answer: The bulk power rates paid by the Agency's participants formerly served by Veeco-generated power can be expected to differ from the rates paid by the Agency's CP&L-served participants, especially in the first two years of the joint-ownership arrangement, as the Agency phases out its purchase of Veeco power. During the "transition phase," the Agency would be supplying its Veeco-served participants with a blend of supplemental power purchased from Veeco and Agency 3 project power. In addition, Agency 3's Veeco-powered cities will pay a rate for Agency power that would be slightly higher because it will be set at a level to recover the Agency's compensation payment to Veeco. Finally, the power rates that the Agency's participants connected to the Veeco system will pay will include a transmission charge over the Veeco system that will not be an element of the Agency's rates to its participants that are now wholesale customers of CP&L.

20. QUESTION: If the Agency does become the all-requirements power supplier for its participating cities, will that end our wholesale rate cases at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) as we now know them?

Answer: It will as far as the participating cities are concerned. Those municipalities that do not participate in the Agency's joint-ownership project will continue to pay wholesale power rates that are set by FERC.

21. QUESTION: What will happen to the municipalities' power supply if the Agency does not acquire generating facilities?

Answer: The individual municipalities would continue to be supplied, as all-requirements wholesale customers, by the private power companies. The situation, in short, would continue to be exactly what it is now: Wholesale rates would continue their escalation, there would be a never-ending series of wholesale rate battles at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the cities would lose out on the very substantial potential savings in power costs a joint-ownership arrangement would bring, and they would continue to operate without any control over their future power supply.

22. QUESTION: Who will make the final decision on the joint-ownership proposal — Agency 3's Board of Commissioners?

Answer: No, although approval by both the Agency 3 Board of Commissioners and CP&L's Board of Directors is an important, preliminary step in the decision-making process. Following Agency Board approval, the proposal will then go to each of the Agency's member cities, which must individually vote on whether to participate in the project and to become an all-requirements customer of the Agency. To take that step, a city must execute two power sales contracts with the Agency. One is a project power sales contract, under which a participating municipality agrees to pay its proportionate share of the project costs. It is a "take or pay" contract, essential to secure the Agency's bonds, and commits a city to pay its proportionate share of the project costs whether or not it receives the expected project power. The other is a supplemental power sales contract, (a "take and pay" contract) under which a city agrees to pay for such supplemental power as it purchases from the Agency. The project will become a reality only after the Agency's member cities have contracted to purchase the minimum amount (65 percent) of project capacity agreed to between CP&L and the Agency.

23. QUESTION: How long do Agency 3's member municipalities have to decide whether or not to participate in the project?

Answer: The documents they must execute are expected to be delivered to the cities on or about August 12. The deadline for municipal action is October 21, according to the power sales contracts, but the Agency hopes that all its members will act prior to October 1, so that it can meet its target of closing the purchase before the end of December 1981.

24. QUESTION: Do all the Agency's member cities have to participate in the proposed joint-ownership project with CP&L?

Answer: No. It is only necessary that the municipalities that DO vote to participate in the project execute project power sales agreements with the Agency to purchase a combined, total amount of project power equal to 85 percent of the power that would be produced by the Agency's ownership interest in CP&L's generation facilities if all 36 Agency member cities were to participate. No specific number of cities is required to participate. In addition, in this Agency 3 arrangement, if there is less than a 100 percent sign-up, the projected savings for the individual cities are not expected to change, since the size of the project would be scaled down proportionately.

25. QUESTION: How will the Agency decide how much project power each participating city will contract for?

Answer: Each of the Agency's member cities will be assigned a load-ratio share of the total power the project would produce if there were 100 percent participation by the Agency's members.

26. QUESTION: What if a municipality contracts with the Agency (under the project owner, "take or pay" contract) for more power than it turns out it needs?

Answer: That situation is not likely to occur. Keep in mind that the project will supply only a portion of a participant's total requirements purchased from the Power Agency. The municipal load forecasts, which form the basis for determining each city's share of the project output, are based on conservative growth projections. In addition, during the early years of the arrangement, each city would receive only a portion of its total power requirements from the Agency-owned generation facilities, with the balance of the power it needs supplied under the supplemental power contract. Projections indicate that project power will not exceed about 62 percent of the total power requirements in any year.

27. QUESTION: Will the Agency have to hire a technical, operating staff to run the generation facilities it acquires from CP&L?

Answer: No. Under the proposed arrangement, CP&L would contract with the Agency to operate the units with its own employees. In that contract, the company would agree to make no material adverse distinction between the operation of the generating units in which the Agency had an ownership and any other units in the CP&L system.

28. QUESTION: What recourse would the Agency have if it does not agree with the costs billed to the Agency by CP&L for construction, operation and fueling of the plants in which the Agency has an ownership interest?

Answer: Under the project agreements, in addition the company's commitment to make no adverse distinction in its operation of the units in which the Agency would have an ownership interest, the Agency could raise formal protests over specific complaints and take those matters to arbitration. The best control the Agency would have, however, would be through the activities of those members of Electricities' management services staff who would be responsible for direct oversight of the Agency's interests. That staff would include on-site representatives at the plants in which the Agency had an ownership interest.

29. QUESTION: How will the Agency set the wholesale rates it will charge the participating cities?

Answer: Rates will be set for all-requirements service so as to recover Agency costs, including the cost of ownership, operation and maintenance, financing, certain reserve accounts, administrative and general costs, supplemental power costs, and so on. Those rates would be adjusted at least annually to reflect changes in the Agency's costs. The rates would have to be approved by the Agency's Board of Commissioners, on which board every member city is represented. The participants' bills will show the rates and total bill for all-requirements service. They will also show the billing for project power, which will be deducted from the total, and the balance will be the charge for supplemental power. In addition, the bills will show special charges for any delivery facilities costs and other special obligations, such as Veeco transmission charges.

30. QUESTION: Will the Agency have authority to regulate the electric rates the participating municipalities charge their own retail customers?

Answer: No. The project power sales agreements which would be executed between the Agency and the cities would require the cities to set their individual retail rates at a level sufficient to run their systems and to pay their obligations under those contracts to the Agency. But the contracts would not specify any particular retail rate.

31. QUESTION: Will the Agency have the authority to tell the participating municipalities how to run their electric utility systems on a day-to-day basis?

Answer: No. Day-to-day operations can continue just as they do now. However, in its contract with the Agency, each participating city will agree, under certain broad terms, not to alter its system or its operation in any major way that would have a material adverse effect on the revenues of that system. This agreement is essential to the security of the electric revenue bonds the Agency will issue.

32. QUESTION: Would having the Agency as a city's power supplier mean that any additional city employees would have to be hired, or that any major accounting or billing changes would have to be made by the city?

Answer: No. The only significant change would be that power costs can be expected to be less than they otherwise would be.

33. QUESTION: Has North Carolina Municipal Power Agency Number 1 already acquired generating facilities?

Answer: Yes, it has. Agency 1 marketed a $400 million bond issue in November 1978 and closed on the purchase of a 75 percent undivided ownership interest in one of the two 1145-megawatt generating units at Duke's Catawba Nuclear Station, which is now under construction on Lake Wylie, South Carolina, just south of Charlotte. The Agency has since sold $150 million in bonds in May 1979 to finance its share of the continuing construction costs, another $100 million in bonds in April 1980, and another $125 million in April 1981.

34. QUESTION: Is the Agency 3 proposal to CP&L identical to the Agency 1 Catawba arrangement?

Answer: No, although there are many similarities in the details of the two arrangements. The major differences are that Agency 3 is proposing to purchase interests in more than one unit, in units fueled by both coal and nuclear, and in some units that are already operating and others that are under construction. An important difference is that if the Agency 3 project is successfully implemented, the Agency's participating municipalities will begin receiving power through the Agency at the time of closing.

35. QUESTION: What regulatory approvals would be involved in the Agency's proposed joint-ownership project?

Answer: The full range of state and federal regulatory agencies is involved and would have to approve the proposed joint-ownership arrangement. Included are: the North Carolina Local Government Commission (which would have to approve and sell the Agency's bonds), the North Carolina Utilities Commission, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (since some nuclear units are involved in the proposal).

36. QUESTION: Would the Agency's purchase of an ownership interest in CP&L's generation units remove that property that the tax rolls?

Answer: No. The law requires that the Agency make full payments in lieu of ad valorem (property) taxes, and also that it make full payments in lieu of the six percent gross receipts tax on the output of its generation facilities, just as if those facilities were owned by a private corporation. The tax base is in no way eroded by a joint-ownership project.

37. QUESTION: Aren't there any risks in this proposal as there would be in any other proposal?

Answer: Certainly. In entering into the proposed joint-ownership arrangement, the participating municipalities would make long-term commitments over the life of the bonds, under their "take or pay" contracts with the Agency, to purchase a stated percentage of project power. Although such a commitment is central to the financing of the project, that is a more restrictive contract than their present ones as all-requirements wholesale power customers of CP&L and Veeco. Further, the Agency would assume its share of the risks of ownership, including the potential for natural and manmade disasters, unanticipated regulatory changes that could increase costs dramatically, unexpected changes in fuel supplies or costs, and so on. However, the project agreements with CP&L reflect extensive efforts to mitigate the impacts of such potential risks on the Power Agency and its participants. In addition, CP&L will still own 80 percent of each of the generating units, so its self-interest is on a form of protection that will act to minimize the costs and risks of those units.

38. QUESTION: What is the ultimate liability of each participant in the event of a nuclear accident of major proportions?

Answer: Any judgments or claims against the Agency arising from a nuclear plant accident would be satisfied so far as possible from insurance coverage. The Agency is required to carry coverage in the amount of $560,000 which is the limit of liability under the Price-Anderson Act. The first $140,000 of coverage will be purchased and the Agency will enter into a governmental indemnity agreement on a deferred premium basis for the balance of the $560,000 coverage. Under the Price-Anderson Act, that amount would be the limit of liability arising from any accident, and CP&L and the Agency would share any uninsured liability in proportion to their ownership interests. The obligations of each participating municipality would be limited solely to its electric revenues and in no event can the property, taxing power, or faith and credit of the participating municipality be called upon to satisfy and claim against the Agency.

39. QUESTION: What direct benefit will Greenville receive by being a "participant" in the N.C. Power Agency No. 3 arrangement?

Answer: The Preliminary Engineering Report prepared for the Agency indicates a yearly savings to Greenville of approximately $4,300,000 beginning in 1982 and continuing at about 15% below Veeco's projected wholesale rates. Being a participant in the Agency, including the agreements between CP&L, Veeco and GUC for sale and purchase of certain transmission and substation facilities, will provide additional savings to Greenville by obtaining direct service from CP&L transmission lines. The net effect of the total arrangements will be to put Greenville in a competitive retail rates position with CP&L customers across North Carolina.

CONCLUSION

In summation, the goal of Power Agency 3 is to secure for its member municipalities an adequate supply of electric power at the lowest cost possible. Today, there are more than 100 joint-action (Agency-type) projects operating or planned in the nation, and public power officials agree that this trend provides the best present hope of helping to hold down future power costs.

Uncertainty As To Brewer's Future

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer has returned to his work at East Carolina University as uncertainty swirls about his future at ECU and elsewhere.

Brewer, who has resigned as ECU chancellor effective June 30, 1982, has been mentioned prominently as a candidate for the presidency of West Virginia University.

That move, however, suffered an apparent setback Tuesday when WVU officials announced the names of four applicants who were being invited to the Morgantown, W. Va., campus for extensive interviews. Brewer was not among the four, but a WVU spokesman said he had not been ruled out.

Brewer, who could not be reached at East Carolina today, submitted his resignation Sept. 7 and requested a leave with pay to allow him time to relocate. Until action is taken on his request for leave, Brewer remains in charge at East Carolina.

"Dr. Brewer is the chancellor. We expect Dr. Brewer to function pending a decision on his leave," the university said through its news bureau director, William Shires.

William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system, said today he has not decided when he will act on Brewer's leave status. An interim chancellor will be named if Brewer is granted leave.

Friday has scheduled a meeting Sept. 25 with ECU trustees. The West Virginia post precipitated Brewer's resignation, which came amid public statements of concern by members of the ECU Board of Trustees. Brewer's inclusion in the list of candidates for the job was not disclosed until after his name appeared in a published list of those being considered for the job.

Trustee Chairman Ashley Futrell of Washington described the Brewer-WVU incident as the "straw that broke the camel's back" in his relations with the ECU board.

Brewer, who maintained prior to his resignation that he was not actively seeking the new job, reportedly was in Morgantown last weekend for an interview. He was listed among the final nine candidates considered by the WVU screening committee from a field of more than 120 applicants.

The tentative list of four finalists was chosen by secret ballot of the screening committee members, a WVU spokesman said today.

Brewer, or one of the other five candidates left off the final list, could be moved back into active consideration if the committee or West Virginia's Board of Regents rejects one or more of the finalists.

The committee has indicated it will submit four names to the regents.

Dr. J. Reginald Dietz, chairman of the WVU search and screening committee, said those invited to visit the campus were Francis T. Borkowski, University of South Carolina provost; E. Gordon Gee, dean of WVU's College of Law; Donald C. Glower, dean of engineering at Ohio State University, and Thomas M. Stauffer, director of external relations for the American Council on Education.

The president's position was left vacant earlier this summer when Gene Budig accepted the chancellor's seat at the University of Kansas.

During their two-day visits to the campus later this month and in early October, the candidates will be asked to meet with WVU administrators, faculty, students and staff, Dietz said.

Following the visits, the screening committee will decide whether to invite other candidates to the campus, Dietz said.

Members of the search committee have refused to publicly discuss their work. But, in addition to Brewer, WVU sources have also identified as candidates Richard Haas, a WVU vice president; Robert Hayes, president of Marshall University at Huntington, and Richard Bond, president of Northern Colorado University.

Card Of Thanks

Burke

AYDEN - Mrs. Elizabeth Kathleen Burke, 65, died this morning.

A funeral mass will be held Thursday at 10 a.m. at St. Gabriel's Roman Catholic Church, Greenville, by Father Elbert Tittler. Burial will be held at St. Gertrude's Cemetery in Colonia, N.J.

Mrs. Burke was a native of New Jersey who had resided in Pitt County for the past two years.

Surviving her are three sons, William and Joseph Burke, both of Ayden, and John Burke of Elizabeth, N.J.; a daughter, Miss Geraldine Burke of Washington, D.C.; a sister, Mrs. Julia Gluck of Elizabeth, N.J.; 15 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

A rosary will be held tonight at 8 p.m. at Farmer Funeral Chapel in Ayden.

Mayo

Mr. Lee Mayo, 61, retired employee of National Spinning Company, died Tuesday morning at Beaufort County Hospital in Washington. He was a resident of Chocowinity.

The funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Thursday in Paul Funeral Home Chapel, Washington, by the Rev. Flemon Ard Jr., his pastor, and the Rev. Allen Strickland, a former pastor. Burial will be in the Wesley Cemetery at Chocowinity.

Mr. Mayo was born and reared in Pitt County. He served in the United States Army during World War II with the 91st Infantry in Africa and Italy. He had made his home in Chocowinity since 1945. He farmed for some years and was later employed with National Spinning Company in Washington for 13 years prior to his retirement in 1978. He attended the Chocowinity Church of God and was a member of Tau Tribe No. 18 Loyal Order of Red Men of Washington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Pauline Anderson Mayo; a son, LaVern Mayo Development . .

Broder explained that some development uses have surfaced in the past that the staff felt were compatible with the district but were not included in the zoning definition. He said the amendment is not an attempt to open up the CN zone but the staff feels that by having the "other activities" clause, the district would not have to be amended each time a compatible use is proposed.

Mitchum expressed reservations about the clause, saying he would like to see "other activities" have a "little better definition." He said it was "just a wide open phrase."

A request by David Nichols, agent, to rezone .94 acres on the west side of Evans Street Extension (Tar Road) from R-20 to R-6 was continued until the October meeting since there was some question as to notification of adjoining property owners.

A workshop was scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 23 at city hall to discuss the draft of the proposed Land Development Plan.

Commissioners welcomed Dr. Wiley Hines as a new member and also Herb Norman and Rufus Keel as city alternates one and two, respectively.

'Sugar' To Battle The 'Hit Man' Tonight

Sugar Ray Leonard

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — One sports a boyish, toothpaste-ad smile and is nicknamed "Sugar." The other appears broodingly sinister with his piercing stare and is known as "Hit Man." When Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns enter the outdoor ring at Caesars Palace around 7:30 p.m. PDT tonight, the awe of the fight will be greatly enhanced by their contrasts — some real, some illusory.

When I find it, I will put him out, whether it's the first round, the third or the 15th." Leonard said, "I'll beat Thomas Hearns. I've had this vision of the fight where he gets frustrated because he can't hit me and he starts coming in and I knock him out." "What I have to do," said Leonard, who also holds the World Boxing Association junior middleweight title, "is dictate the pace of the fight and dominate every round." The contrasts between the two fighters, their undeniable talent, and the fact the bout will unify the 147-pound title have helped make it the most lucrative fight ever. The only undisputed title currently belongs to Marvin Hagler, middleweight. Promoters are talking about gross revenues of about $40 million and a net income of almost $30 million. Leonard will get at least $8 million and perhaps as much as $13 million. Hearns will get about $5 million. Most of the 24,382 seats in the temporary stands outside the casino have been sold, with top ticket prices of $500.

Microphone in hand, he turned crowd-pleasing showman during his workouts, and he paid special attention to the kids who attended his training sessions. "I've always taken time with kids," he said. "I want to put something back into the country." Hearns, a 22-year-old from Detroit, would appear to have some distinct physical advantages over Leonard, 25, from Palmer Park, Md. The 6-foot-1 Hearns is three inches taller, and has a four-inch reach advantage. "I am confident," said Hearns. "This is the big chance for me to make my mark in the world. "I know he's a good fighter, but I know my capabilities. I'll start out boxing him, looking for some way to put him out.

The fight was scheduled to be televised to 298 closed circuit locations, and will be aired in some 50 nations. Most noteworthy perhaps, is that the event marks a new progression in the megabucks mating of sport and home pay TV. An audience of as many as one million households in 24 cities across the country will shell out $15 apiece to watch the event in the comfort of their living room. The delayed rights for network television in the United States are believed to have gone to ABC for a reported price tag of as much as $3 million. No official announcement has been made and it is not known when the fight might be shown. Referee for the bout will be Davey Pearl, a veteran of several world title bouts including Larry Holmes' WBC heavyweight title defense against Scott LeDoux in July 1980. He also has worked title defenses of Ayub Kalule, WBA junior middleweight, and Salvador Sanchez, WBC featherweight.

By The Associated Press Burlington Williams has picked up where it off last season. No. 1 in North Carolina. Williams is atop the 3A ratings this week in 1981's first Associated Press poll of North Carolina high school football teams. The poll's other class leaders in voting by a statewide panel of sportswriters are Fayetteville Terry Sanford (4A) and Southwest Guilford (2A-1A). Burlington Williams finished last season second in the final Associated Press poll, but it defeated the team ranked No. 1 in that poll, Lexington, in the state championship game. This season, Williams has won its opening two games. It gathered six of the 15 first-place votes and had 114 points - well ahead of runnerup Boone Watauga's 81 points. Lincolnton was third, Dunn fourth and Clinton fifth. Lexington, incidentally, was ranked sixth. Terry Sanford also made its mark in the poll last season, finishing in a tie for seventh in the final poll and reaching the quarterfinals of the state 4A playoffs. This week, it had seven first-place votes and 119 points. Second-place South Mecklenburg of the Charlotte

Vikes Host Jags Friday

By RICK SCOPPE Reflector Sports Writer The 1981 high school football season is only three weeks old but already it has been a strange and unusual season for D.H. Conley. The Vikings entered the season buoyed by the hopes a new head coach brings and yet burdened by the stigma of having lost 13 straight games. A season-opening 33-3 loss to Washington tempered the hopes and extended the burden. The burden became noticeably lighter one week later when the Vikings ended their losing streak with a stunning 19-6 win over Eastern Carolina Conference favorite Southwest Edgecombe. It was a long-awaited victory and there were more than a few congratulations in order. The congratulations, however, may have proved too much. With thoughts of the win over the Cougars still fresh, the Vikings stumbled to a disappointing 13-6 loss to North Pitt. "I'm upset with my kids and they know it," Garner said. "We are not a team of superstars but we had some kids let us down. I was upset, but I got over it Sunday at about 4 p.m. when I started preparing for Farmville." The Vikings, now 1-2-0 overall, play host to Farmville Central Friday evening in a game that could indicate what the remainder of the season holds for D.H. Conley. "We'll find out how good a ballclub we are Friday night," Garner said. "We've had an emotional win and we've had a letdown. We've had the yo-yo effect. "But this is the fourth game of the season and it's showtime. This game might be a true indication of what we're going to be able to do and not do the rest of the season."

In other games this week, Jamesville (2-1-0, 1-0-0) is at Belhaven (2-1-0, 1-0-0). In other games last week, Ayden-Grifton beat Farmville Central, 14-0; Greene Central downed North Lenoir, 18-8; Roanoke nipped Washington, 12-7; Williamston beat Plymouth, 18-8; and (Please turn to page 24)

Leonard-Hearns Fight Richest Ever In Boxing

LAS VEGAS (AP) — When Sugar Ray Leonard and Thomas Hearns climb into the ring tonight to unify the welterweight championship of the world, it will be the richest event in boxing history, a fight with a revenue potential of more than $50 million.

Realistically, the gross should be between $35 and $40 million depending on walkup sales at some 300 closed circuit television locations tonight. But why quibble? What's a few million between friends?

This is the latest and largest big money fight in an era when the dollars seem to be flowing free and easy in boxing. And the remarkable part is that Don King and Bob Arum, the men who helped turn on the big buck faucets for fighters, are out of sight.

Arum is in town because he's in charge of the foreign television rights. But that's a small piece of the pie, and he's keeping an unusually low profile. King's not even around. You'd know it soon enough, if he were.

King and Arum have just about ruled important fight promotions for the better part of the past decade. But they were frozen out in this one by some new kids on the boxing block, an outfit called Main Event Productions.

The company is headed by 29-year-old attorney Dan Duva, whose father, Lou, is an ex-welterweight who now manages a number of young boxers. The younger Duva has been promoting small scale, club fights for about five years and captured the promotion brass ring with Leonard-Hearns.

It was not a simple matter.

Before the package was put together, it included a college basketball coach and a rock concert promoter. The coach is Dan Doyle, president of Connecticut Sports Promotions, who taught layups and jump shots at Trinity College (22-4) last season. The concert man is Shelly Finkel, president of Championship Events, which is involved with music and muscles.

Doyle promoted about a half dozen of Leonard's early fights in Sugar Ray's post-Olympic period. Finkel was involved in boxing in a peripheral way, managing some young fighters. Duva brought them together to complete the Leonard-Hearns package.

Essentially, the new team grabbed this juicy promotion because Mike Trainer, Leonard's attorney, had falling outs with both Arum and King.

He clashed with King in arrangements for the two Leonard-Roberto Duran fights, and he'd had his fill of Arum, too. That's when the new guys got involved.

The package was put together in an airport in Syracuse, N.Y., the night before Leonard fought Larry Bonds. Duva and Finkel met with Trainer and Emanuel Steward, Hearns' manager-trainer. Numbers were agreed upon and presto, Main Event Productions was in the big time.

Fake Punt Play Of Week

While East Carolina had little to revel in during its game against North Carolina last Saturday, the Pirates did keep one of their late possessions alive by running a fake-punt for a first down.

On the play, Chuck Bishop received the snap from the center, instead of it going to kicker Tommy Barnhardt.

"Coach (Norm) Parker called the play from the sidelines," Bishop related of how the play was run. "They'd been leaving the gap to the outside and dropping back four on the punt returns. I had four plays I could have run off the formation — to either side myself, or on the option to either side.

"I got good blocks from Mike Grant and

Grant and Twitty played just behind the line and broke to the left, leading the interference as the linemen blocked down. Grant blocked out the man at the corner, with Twitty there to add additional blocking as the deep backs came up.

The play picked up 12 yards and a first down and marked the second time in two years that Bishop has run the fake punt. Last year, he raced 27 yards on the play.

Bishop has also been moved into the first string slot at right cornerback, replacing Freddie Jones, for Saturday's game against N.C. State.

'Faust Fever' Hits Notre Dame

By The Associated Press
The Notre Dame football guide calls it "The Gerry Faust Era." A better term might be "Faust Fever."

It has swept the Notre Dame campus since Gerry Faust showed up last winter, fresh from 18 years at Moeller High School in Cincinnati, to succeed Dan Devine as head football coach. It reached a peak last weekend when the Fighting Irish made Faust's debut a smashing success by trouncing Louisiana State 27-9.

Faust has the campus so fired up that a pep rally last Friday night had to be moved outdoors to accommodate the 10,000 or so who showed up. It was the first outdoor pep rally since Ara Parseghian's days.

They cheered Faust's every breath. They cheered when he said, "I hope you can hear me out there." They cheered when he said it was the first Notre Dame pep rally he'd ever attended. They cheered and chanted, "Gerry, Gerry, Gerry," when he said his wife and children and his parents were on hand.

"Notre Dame stands for many things," Faust cried, his high-pitched voice becoming almost a croak. "It stands for excellent academics, great alumni, subway alumni, a far as he's concerned," says one member of the athletic department.

"We are...ND! We are...ND!" the crowd shouted, then changed to "We're No.1! We're No.1!" And they were right, at least for the time being, when the Irish moved to the top of The Associated Press rankings this week.

"The team is doing it all for the university and for you students out there," Faust said. His voice became almost incoherent when he noted that "LSU played Alabama last week but Alabama was not the important game as far as they were concerned. The important game is tomorrow.

"I'm asking each and every one of you who will be in that stadium to rock that stadium the whole game. We need each and every one of you to give us 120 percent. If you do that, we'll get our first victory on the way to 12 and the national championship."

Faust apparently has a limitless supply of energy, and his emotions are real. It is dangerous to ask him a question. The reply might go hand-in-hand with a friendly punch in the arm.

"He's a very emotional person," says defensive coordinator Jim Johnson. "When he meets you, he might grab you by the neck or hug you or wrestle you to the ground. During a scrimmage one day, the scout team was moving on the defense and he dug an elbow into my ribs and yelled, 'Stop'em!'"

That sounds like something from the Woody Hayes school of coaching, but Woody would never end a telephone conversation with a writer by saying, as Faust does, "God bless you." Woody, in fact, probably wouldn't even pick up the phone.

Faust is a sincere man, a deeply religious man, a family man.

"Unless you're married and have kids and a station wagon, you haven't hit the big time as overburdened for the past three or four weeks. We have great secretaries."

The campus? "When I see the statue of the Blessed Mother on top of the Golden Dome I get goosepimples. And when I hear the Victory March, I get tears in my eyes every time. I've never seen anything like I've seen here at Notre Dame. Whether you're a graduate, a subway alumnus or a fan, Notre Dame represents the American way of life."

Faust would like the NCAA to permit a team to have a preseason scrimmage against another school, without spectators. "In three weeks, we'd have three scrimmages at Moeller," he says. "It makes a big difference, and it would make college football better.

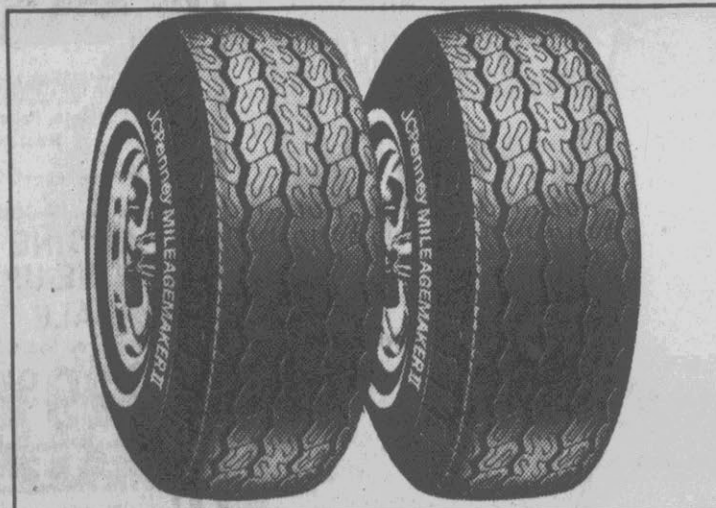

They play an exhibition game in college basketball and the NFL has four preseason games. Most colleges are located pretty close to a college they don't play. We could scrimmage Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio State, schools like secretaries have just been that."

"The Quarterback Club? The financial and moral support from the Quarterback Club has been tremendous."

The secretaries? "Our fine secretaries have just been that."

Paschal In For Knee Surgery

Doug Paschal, a Greenville native on the Minnesota Vikings football team, has undergone surgery in North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Paschal, a former Rose High School and University of North Carolina star running back, was starting his second year with the Vikings when he suffered a knee injury that led to the surgery.

He has been placed on the injured reserve list for this season for the Vikings after being hurt in the late stages of the exhibition season.

Vikings Entertain Farmville Central.....

DHC's James Boyd

FC's Charles Sutton

AG's Gregory Jackson

D.H. Conley, D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner said he had blamed himself for the Vikings' 13-6 loss to North Pitt last week.

"I thought the players were ready but evidently they left it in the locker room," Garner said. "Our kids just were not prepared for the game. I think we got too many pats on the back from the alumni and students."

"I take the blame for that. We played terrible. I don't think North Pitt played that well, but they played well enough to win. They wanted the game, they wanted it bad. They had a total commitment to beat Conley and they did."

Garner indicated the Vikings will need a similar commitment this week if they hope to defeat Farmville Central.

"We'll have to play a near-flawless game to win," he said. "They are smarting after two losses and they'll be fired up. They're supposed to beat Conley."

And going into this year's game the Jaguars have done just that. In 10 previous games between the two schools, D.H. Conley has never (yes, never) beaten Farmville Central.

Garner's #1 concern going into the game is Farmville junior halfback Wesley Carmon. Carmon has gained 225 yards in three games this season but is coming off a game against Ayden-Grifton in which he gained only 18 yards in 15 carries.

"Carmon is awfully quick. Ayden-Grifton was able to control," Garner said. "He's the key for them."

Is this the year the Vikings end Farmville's 10-year dominance? Garner would not say. He did say, however, this: "Farmville is a good football team but not an overpowering football team and we should get a true indication of just what kind of team we're going to have (the rest of the season) Friday night."

North Pitt
It is getting to where North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell worries almost as much about getting on the bus for a road trip as he does about the Panthers' opponent.

North Pitt travels to Vanceboro Friday night to face West Craven, and if playing the defending Coastal Conference champ is not enough to think about, Chappell must also worry about how his team will play when they step off the bus.

"It's an away game and that concerns me," Chappell said. "Everytime we've loaded up the bus we've played terrible to begin with. When we went to North Edgecombe we started off bad and even in our scrimmage at Chocowinity we started off not playing well."

"I've told the kids about it and I hope they have listened. Some of them are young and they've got to learn things the hard way. But if we play as hard against Conley I wouldn't worry."

The Panthers enter Friday night's game following a 13-6 victory over D.H. Conley. The victory was the fourth straight for North Pitt over the Vikings and left the Panthers 2-1-0 overall and 1-0-0 in the ECC.

After seeing the Vikings take a 7-6 lead early in the final period, the Panthers drove 55 yards for the winning score with 1:12 left. Mitchell Cox, who went over 100 yards rushing for the third straight game, capped the drive on a three-yard run.

"We played very hard," Chappell said. "The kids showed me they had a little guts coming back like they did."

This week the Panthers face a West Craven team that lost to Farmville Central, 20-7, but a team that boasts the running of Norman Becton. Becton, a 6-1, 210 fullback, has rushed for 298 yards in three games, having run out of both a broken wishbone and a pro-I.

"We concerned about Becton and we'll prepare for both (the broken wishbone and the pro-I)," Chappell said. "But our defense has done pretty well all season and the boys are starting to take a little pride in it."

West Craven has yet to win a game this season, but Chappell said his Panthers won't take the Eagles lightly.

"They're a young team, but they look real good," he said. "Farmville beat them the first game, but they'll be much improved. They look to be strong and they'll be all we can handle."

Ayden-Grifton
Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls knows the early-game difficulties the Chargers have had thus far this season must be corrected. And he knows the correction process needs to begin Friday night against North Lenoir.

"It's a typical North Lenoir team, they're very big and very strong," Sauls said. "And we certainly need to take the play to them early and play well both offensively and defensively."

"We've established a trend so far this season of starting off slowly and getting better as the game goes on, which is surprising with our small numbers," he said. "But it's very important that we get off to a good start against North Lenoir."

Ayden-Grifton (1-1-0, 1-0-0) goes into the nonconference game — its third straight on the road — coming off a 14-0 win over Farmville Central. The shutout pleased Sauls, his team's lack of aggressiveness did not.

"I was very disappointed last week with our aggressiveness," Sauls said. "I don't know if we were too containment-conscious or if the coaches didn't prepare them well. There's no particular reason for it that I can think of."

"But we're going to have to be more aggressive this week. That could be the real key. That's our game plan: to be more aggressive."

On offense as well as defense. Against Farmville the Chargers' offense started off conservative and became more so as the game progressed.

"We may have been over-conservative. We probably over-reacted to what happened the first week," said Sauls, whose team started the season with six turnovers en route to a 20-14 loss to Roanoke. "It was a unique situation last week."

Even now, however, Sauls is not saying the Charger offense will fill the air with passes. But, then, neither is he saying it will remain buried underground either.

"You can't ever predict that going into a game," he said. "But again, with a small team and a senior quarterback we may have to."

"Every game is crucial now. I know it's a coaching cliché, but we need some momentum and we need to learn from winning. When you win you're more willing to learn and more willing to listen."

The Chargers enter the game with two players — Greg Jackson and Doug Coley — still mending.

Jackson, the team's fullback and linebacker, is still recovering from an injured neck and ankle and is expected to be near full-strength Friday. Coley, an end and linebacker, suffered a slight concussion last week but is also expected to be near full-strength Friday.

Farmville Central

Farmville Central first-year coach Gilbert Carroll has seen enough. After two straight defeats, the latest a 14-0 loss to Ayden-Grifton in which the Jaguars managed a mere 82 yards in total offense, Carroll is shuffling his lineup in hopes of producing more scoring punch.

"Our whole backfield will be different this week," said Carroll, who would not divulge the changes. "We're just gonna try to execute."

"We were helter-skelter on offense (against Ayden-Grifton). It's a combination of things: young players on the offensive line, quarterback problems — we don't have a good leader at quarterback whose producing — and the tailback problems that arose

Hopewell Stretches P-P Lead

Hopewell Pentecostal continued its winning ways and stretched its lead to three full games over Salem Methodist in Church League action last night at the Putt-Putt Golf Course.

Hopewell (9-0) was led by medalist Danny Pollard with a 62 and Engene Joyner with a 73. Salem (6-3), which came in second, was topped by Jeff Taft, 66, and Tim Brinson with a 69.

Lanny Morris and Jeff Flake shot 77s for third place Bell Arthur (2-7), and Angie Hardee led Faith Pentecostal with a 76.

Friday night.

"We've got to get back to basics and execute. We just ain't got it together and we're gonna try to get it together this week."

The Jaguars (1-2-0, 0-1-0) desperately need a win this week when they travel to D.H. Conley. Said Carroll: "This is a big game, a very big game for us. We need to show we can move the ball and score."

Something the Jaguars have failed to do the last two weeks after an opening the season with a 20-7 victory over West Craven. The offense has suffered from a lack of passing (five completions in 30 attempts) and an inconsistent running attack, particularly between the tackles.

"It's transition time," Carroll said. "When (Former Farmville coach) Gene Brewer left this program he knew what was coming up. He had seen the writing on the wall.

"Now, we're just trying to play some kids who haven't played much and trying to get them some experience."

Inexperienced though they may be, the Jaguars, Carroll acknowledges, need a win — soon.

"I'm pleased that the kids I haven't quit. They deserve a win, but they've got to earn it."

Will it come this week? "I'm optimistic. I think we'll play a good game. Neither one of us has what you'd call a good football program right now. (DHC coach) Gerald (Garner) is trying to build one and so am

Templeton Back As Cardinals Win

By The Associated Press
For the second time in three weeks, Garry Templeton heard boos on the field. Fortunately, his second response was quite different.

On the first occasion Aug. 26, Templeton made obscene gestures toward the St. Louis crowd, was pulled into the dugout by Manager Whitey Herzog and suspended. But he reacted Tuesday night in the most appropriate manner — with a base hit — in his first appearance since the suspension.

The crowd at Olympic Stadium in Montreal did not heckle him again, and he came back to get three more singles and contributed to all the St. Louis runs as the Cardinals beat the Expos 3-2 in the first game of a doubleheader. He did not start the second game, won by Montreal 4-3.

"I'm happy I could come back and contribute," said Templeton, who entered a psychiatric hospital shortly after his suspension. "That's what I came back for."

"All I've got my mind on now is baseball. I've got my head straight again and I'm just here to play baseball."

Reporters persisted with their questioning until the shortstop retreated to the training room, saying: "If you don't mind, I'd just like to be left alone right now."

Some of Templeton's teammates had said the Cardinals would be better off without him after he was suspended, but his triumphant return gave them a big lift.

"I think all the players felt a sense of happiness because it was so important for Garry personally," said Dane Iorg. "We hate to have him come back and see him struggling."

The intervening weeks have changed the views of many Cardinals, Iorg believes.

"When it happened, maybe there was a lack of understanding on our part of the consequences involved," he said. "Some people said things they are now ashamed of. The man didn't do harm to anyone. He didn't steal anything or murder someone. He brought condemnation on himself for his actions.

"...It's important for us to accept him and befriend him, to help him overcome his problem. He's asked for our help."

A single by Keith Hernandez knocked in Templeton in the first inning of the opener after he singled and stole second. He beat out an infield single to start the sixth and later scored on a single by Iorg.

Templeton singled home the eventual winning run in the seventh.

Rookie John Martin, 6-3, had a four-hit shutout until the ninth, but Bruce Sutter relieved him after Gary Carter's leadoff homer. Sutter notched his 22nd save despite allowing the Expos' second run on a sacrifice fly by Warren Cromartie.

In the second game, Bobby Ramos singled off Mark Littell, 1-2, making his first start since April 19, 1978, to give the Expos a 2-1 lead in the fourth.

Montreal added two runs in the fifth on Andre Dawson's RBI single and errors by left fielder Gene Roof and shortstop Mike Ramsey.

Starter Bill Lee, 3-4, left after scattering eight hits over the first seven innings. Jeff Reardon worked the next 12-3 innings and Woodie Fryman got the last out after the Cardinals loaded the bases.

George Hendrick's 16th homer and an RBI single by Iorg closed the gap to 4-3 in the eighth.

Reds 4, Astros 0
Charlie Liebrandt, called up from the minors Sept. 1, pitched a five-hitter as Cincinnati beat Houston for the second night in a row at the Astrodome after the Astros had won 12 straight at home.

"They know now we're not the type of team to roll over and die; until it's over we won't quit," said George Foster, who had run-scoring singles for the Reds off Nolan Ryan, 8-5, in the first and sixth innings.

Cincinnati now trails first-place Houston by 2½ games in the West.

Pirates 8, Cubs 2
Luis Tiant was one out away from his 43rd career shutout before Leon Durham hit a two-run homer for Chicago, but Pittsburgh had the game under control long before that.

Tiant, 2-4, finished with a four-hitter and also contributed a three-run double in the Pirates' five-run sixth inning.

Dave Parker knocked in two runs with a solo homer and a single and Omar Moreno homered on the second pitch of the game.

Padres 8, Dodgers 2
Terry Kennedy keyed San Diego's four-run fifth inning with a three-run double and Joe Lefebvre went 4 for 4 and knocked in two runs to support the strong pitching of Juan Eichelberger.

Kennedy, who went 4 for 4 Monday and now has five doubles in the last two games, hit safely in his first three at-bats to give him seven consecutive hits, one short of the Padres' record.

Eichelberger, 8-6, allowed seven Los Angeles hits in the eighth innings and struck out a personal major-league high of 10.

Giants 6, Braves 5
San Francisco trailed 5-3 going into the ninth but scored three runs off reliever Gene Garber to win it, climaxed by pinch-hitter Dave Bergman's bases-loaded squeeze bunt.

Enos Cabell reached first on a throwing error by shortstop Luis Gomez. Larry Herndon got an infield hit and Darrell Evans singled in a run to make the score 5-4. Jeff Leonard tied the game with a double, Milt

May was intentionally walked and Garber, 4-4, struck out Jerry Martin before Bergman bunted on the first pitch, with pinch-runner Joe Pettini scoring ahead of Garber's throw to the plate.

Claudell Washington had four hits and two RBI for the Braves.

G. Christian Defeated, 3-1

RALEIGH — Unbeaten Friendship Christian used two first-half goals and added a third in the second half to take a 3-1 victory over Greenville Christian Tuesday afternoon.

Friendship, now 4-0, took the lead at the 4:20 mark of the first half on a goal by Mark Armsmen and then upped its lead to 2-0 at 9:47 on a goal by Ray Pettey.

Down 2-0 at the half, the Knights cut the deficit to one goal when Phil Byrd scored at the 5:10 mark. But Friendship countered that with a goal by Don Creech later in the half.

"I knew they would be one of the better teams we played this year, but I didn't think they'd be this good," Greenville Christian coach Dale Thatcher said. "They got the jump on us early and that helped them."

"We really played well, though, even with losing. We controlled the ball well."

Friendship had 21 shots on goal compared to Greenville's 13. Friendship goalie John Barwick was credited with 10 saves and the Knights' John Parnell with nine.

Greenville Christian returns to action Friday when the Knights play host to conference foe Goldsboro Christian Academy.

In the 520-meter speed-skating race in the 1988 Winter Olympics, three American women, Jenny Fish, Dianne Holm and Mary Meyers, finished in a dead-heat for second place. Each received a silver medal.

Recently, there's been a lot of confusion about the new "All-Savers" Certificates.

But now the Federal Reserve Board and the IRS have ruled that:

- 1) When you invest $10,000 in a Six Month Money Market Certificate now, or
- 2) If you already have one, you can come in and move the money to an All-Saver Certificate on or after October 1 without any penalty.

At NCNB, we call this a Tax-Saver Certificate, and, if some plans worry you about trouble with the IRS, don't worry about this one. It's within the current guidelines. And NCNB's plan offers maximum Money Market rates until October 1, when it can offer all the tax advantages the current laws allow.

The NCNB Plan: Big Interest Right Now.

Deposit $10,000 and get this week's rate on Six Month Money Market Certificates until October 1, 1981.

Up To $2,000 Tax-Free* Interest Starting Oct. 1.

Up to $2,000 Tax-Free Interest for Couples filing a Federal Joint Return; up to $1,000 Federal Individual Returns. 1-Year Term. NCNB Tax-Saver Certificate will pay 70% of the average annual investment yield of the most recently auctioned 52-Week T-Bill.

*Exempt from Federal Income Tax

What's more, your money's safe, because unlike some of the plans being offered, your deposits are insured from the beginning by FDIC.

Frankly, this plan isn't for everyone. It works best for people in the 30%-and-up tax bracket.

Still, on October 1, we can sign you up for a Tax-Saver Certificate for as little as $500.

But, if you have $10,000 or more to invest now, why wait? Come by today. As good as this plan is, you don't have to leave your neighborhood to get it.

NCNB

Substantial Interest Penalty for Early Withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

Fingers Pitches Milwaukee Past New York

By The Associated Press
When Reggie Jackson played with Rollie Fingers on those irrepressible Oakland A's teams of the early 1970s, he thought the mustachioed right-hander was quite a pitcher.

Nothing's changed. "He's still good, awfully good," said Jackson, one of Fingers' strikeout victims in Milwaukee's 2-1 victory over the New York Yankees Tuesday night. "He can throw any of his pitches for strikes. He didn't have an overpowering fastball, but he threw the forkball and he was great with it."

The save was the 25th this season for Fingers, who once played with Jackson on Oakland's world championship teams of the early 1970s. Since the second season started after the baseball strike, he has had a hand in 15 of the Brewers' 21 victories with 13 saves and two victories.

"It was a typical outstanding job by Rollie," said Brewer Manager Buck Rodgers. "You almost start taking the guy for granted. He's done the job every time in the second half of the season, I think, and there weren't too many in the first half that he didn't."

Cecil Cooper singled home the go-ahead run in a two-run third inning to help the Brewers beat New York. Fingers pitched the final two innings in relief of winner Moose Haas, 9-6.

Sal Bando led off the Brewer third with a double off loser Rudy May, 6-10, and took third on a sacrifice. Paul Molitor walked and Robin Yount hit a sacrifice fly. Molitor, running with the pitch, scored all the way from first on Cooper's single to left center. The Yankees closed to within 2-1 in the fifth when Larry Milbourne tripled and scored on a groundout by Willie Randolph. "They (the Yankees) have all those left-handed hitters — Graig Nettles, Reggie Jackson, Bobby Murcer, Oscar Gamble — and they all can hit it out," Fingers said. "I pitched them down and away and let them hit it to left-center. I wanted to keep it in the park. If they want to go the opposite way, let them hit it."

Rangers 12, A's 2
Bump Wills and Al Oliver each had four hits with Oliver driving in four runs and Mickey Rivers three as Texas routed Oakland. Winner Charlie Hough, 1-1, allowed five hits, walked five and struck out seven in eight innings. The Rangers battered four Oakland pitchers, including loser Brian Kingman, 3-6, for 18 hits, equalling their best-hit production of the season.

Dave McKay drove in both Oakland runs, the first with a single in the seventh and the other with a homer in the ninth.

"I felt good," said Oliver. "I'm just glad to be able to help a team that needs my bat, and glad to be the one who helped keep the rallies alive. But that was a total team effort."

Orioles 7, Indians 6
Benny Ayala's three-run homer capped a four-run rally in the ninth inning, leading Baltimore over Cleveland. Ayala's blast off reliever Sid Monge made a loser of reliever

N.C.'s Beecher Say's It's VPI

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech announced Tuesday it has recruited 6-foot-10 Bobby Beecher of Danbury, N.C., a whole year in advance for its 1982 basketball team.

Tech coach Charlie Moir said Beecher made "a verbal commitment" at a meeting Monday to enroll at Tech next fall and to call off scheduled visits to Maryland, Wake Forest, Clemson and Furman.

"He's a tremendous prospect," said Moir. "He may not have finished growing. He's got the potential to be one of the best we've ever had."

Beecher, a senior this year at North Stokes High School, averaged 21 points, 12 rebounds and six blocked shots a game last season. His family's farm is only five miles from the site of Moir's boyhood home in Stokes County, N.C.

"I didn't expect his decision so early," Moir said. "He just called me Sunday night, told me he'd done some thinking and wanted to see me. After that, I was very hopeful."

Moir has had scant success in recruiting big men in the last three seasons. He did much of the recruiting of Beecher in person, with help from assistant Tom Abatemarco, added to the Tech staff in late May.

Mike Stanton, 3-3.

Winner Dennis Martinez, 13-4, scattered seven hits, struck out five and walked two in pitching his seventh complete game.

Terry Crowley's leadoff single in the ninth knocked Cleveland starter Tom Brennan from the mound. Stanton came on and gave up a single to John Lowenstein and an RBI double to Doug DeCinces that tied the game 4-4. Ayala then homered for a 7-4 Baltimore lead.

The Indians came back with two runs in the bottom of the ninth on a two-run homer by rookie Karl Pagan.

Blue Jays 4, Twins 2
Luis Leal won his third straight game with relief help from Joey McLaughlin and Toronto took advantage of three Minnesota errors to beat the Twins.

Leal, 7-10, scattered eight hits over seven innings, struck out five and walked one as the Blue Jays snapped Minnesota's seven-game winning streak. McLaughlin pitched the final two innings to gain his seventh save.

The Blue Jays took a 2-0 lead in the second with the help of a Minnesota error, then scored their eventual winning runs in a two-run fourth with the help of two more miscues.

"I threw a good change tonight to keep the hitters off balance," said Leal. "I also had a good curve and slider. When the hitter was digging in for a fastball, I threw the slider, and other times I threw the change."

Mariners 8, White Sox 4
Bruce Bochte's leadoff home run snapped a 1-1 tie in the seventh and Seattle added two more runs in the inning and then four more in the eighth to beat Chicago.

After Bochte's fourth homer of the season chased Jerry Koonsman, 3-12, Seattle picked up two more runs in the seventh off Lamarr Hoyt, on RBI singles by Lenny Randle and Jeff Burroughs.

Randle had a two-run triple as the Mariners added four more in the eighth. Chicago countered with three runs in the ninth, two on a double by Harold Baines, before reliever Dick Drago shut the door on the White Sox.

Royals 3, Angels 2
Rookie Atlee Hammaker earned his first major league victory by pitching five-hit ball over seven innings to lead Kansas City over California. Hammaker, 1-2, was making his fifth start since his August 8 recall from Omaha and decided Angel Moreno, 0-1, another rookie left-hander making his first big league start.

Dan Quisenberry came on in the eighth inning after a leadoff single by Bert Campaneris. The reliever's error on a ground ball by Don Baylor allowed a run to score before Quisenberry earned his 16th save.

Difference!

If you can do better, We'll Triple the Difference

GUARANTEE

Kroger Sav-on promises to pay you triple the difference in cash if you can do your normal weekly shopping for less at any other supermarket in town. Kroger Sav-on can make this commitment because we have low Cost Cutter grocery prices plus thousands of discounts on non-food items in department after department. See for yourself after you've shopped Kroger Sav-on. Compare the same items with any other store in town. If the total amount for the same items is less at the other store, we'll refund triple the difference in cash. Just purchase at least 25 different items totalling $20 or more (excluding meat products). Only one of each item purchased may be included in the comparison. If you can find any other store in town with the same items for less, bring your Kroger Sav-on register tape plus the other store's prices to your one stop food and drug store. We'll pay you triple the difference in cash. Kroger Sav-on knows what's important to you - that's why we're making this exciting triple the difference promise. In one easy stop, cut your costs at Kroger Sav-on!

GOOD NUTRITION PRESERVES YOUR HEALTH

For the past several months, KROGER customers have been the first supermarket shoppers in the nation to receive comprehensive nutritional information on meats and fresh fruits and vegetables in the store while they shop.

This unique new program has proved so popular that we are now expanding it to cover additional items. Information such as calorie count, protein, fat, cholesterol or sodium per serving and how good a source it is of vitamins and minerals will now be provided on 50 meat and poultry and 105 produce items. It's part of KROGER'S continuing commitment to inform customers about the foods they buy to help them make a shopping decision, and it supplements the nutritional labeling found on some 600 KROGER private label items.

Many of you have told us how interested you are in eating right for health. This program is designed to respond to that interest by letting you see what's in the foods you buy each time you shop. We'll continue to provide tasty recipes with nutritional data for you to carry home and we're expanding the program to offer free informational pamphlets-all planned to help shoppers know more about ways to shop for and to prepare food to get the most nutrition for their food dollar.

Look for the information signs by individual products, read this column in your KROGER ad for nutritional tips and watch for the Nutrition News rack of free informational materials in your KROGER food store. And enjoy KROGER variety . . . the taste of good nutrition.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — FRISKY SKY-DIVER FAVORED SOFT SEATS.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals R

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Don't be surprised if the Bols Brillancy Prize at the recent European Championship is won by Erik Stabell of Norway, who played this hand in his country's match against Israel. After reaching a good six club slam, Stabell found an entryless dummy but managed to make his opponents work for him.

The club slam was reached at both tables. The Israeli declarer won the opening spade lead, cashed the ace of trumps to fell the queen, then played off the ace and king of hearts. He tried to reach dummy with a spade ruff, but East overruffed, cashed the ace of diamonds and returned a trump. Declarer ended up down two.

Against Stabell's slam, West also led a spade, but his three-spot was a most reveal-

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, SEPT. 17, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime gives you a good chance to put your practical affairs in better order. Tact and poise on your part are required to avoid an unpleasant situation from arising.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning is the best time for clearing up monetary problems. Make sure to follow advice you get from a business expert.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Taking the treatments that will improve your appearance is wise. Make new friends that are worthwhile.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study just where you are headed and find more workable methods to gain success. Come to a better accord with loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't rely on friends who are busy with own affairs at this time. Make plans to have more abundance in the future.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be sure to handle an important duty well since you could be observed by higher-ups now. Take needed health treatments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Put those creative ideas to work now and gain the respect of associates. Strive for increased happiness. Sidestep an opponent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You have to use diplomacy if you wish to have the harmony at home you desire. Try not to offend others at this time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Contact persons who can assist you with routines and you get better results in the future. Avoid a troublemaker.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Anything of a monetary matter should be talked over with experts today. Show more devotion to loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If properly tuned astrologically, this should be a fine day for sociability. Take steps to improve your appearance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A good day to have discussions with close ties and come to a better accord. Make plans to have greater income in the future.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Consult business experts who can give you the right advice at this time. Steer clear of one who has an eye on your assets.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will need much spiritual and ethical training early in life for your progeny to be successful. Anything that concerns big money matters is fine here. Give cultural advantages and the best education you can afford.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Mt. Olive Head To Speak

Mount Olive College President W. Burkette Raper will be the guest speaker at Bethany FWB Church on September 27 at 11 a.m. At 10 a.m. he will also teach a combined session of the adult Sunday school classes.

During his visit President Raper will review plans for developing Mount Olive into a four-year college.

The Rev. C.L. Patrick is the pastor.

4-H Group Has Meeting

The Greenfield Terrace Superstars held their monthly 4-H meeting recently at the home of John Ward III, president, at 308 Greenfield Boulevard. Angela Dixon and Dee Dee Teel were accepted as new members.

The 4-H'ers made plans to attend the county council meeting and worship together at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church on October 11. On October 24, the Superstars will sponsor a dance to raise money for the group. The president encouraged the members to continue working on their projects to achieve 100 percent participation.

The president also presented a game called "Moments In History" at each meeting a game will be played and a prize will be given to the winner. Seventeen members were present along with their leader, Ella Harris. The meeting was adjourned and refreshments were served. The next meeting will be held at the home of member Edward Moore, 100 Aston Drive.

NOT SLOWED BY DISEASE — Mickey Hayes, age 9, straddles a large motorcycle at his parents' Longview, Texas home. Mickey has a disease that has prematurely aged his body to the equivalent of a 65-year-old man. His parents readily admit to spoiling the youngster, pointing out he might not be able to enjoy things next year. Mickey's life expectancy is 14 years, due to the rare illness. (AP Laserphoto)

Mayor Still An Outsider 6 Months After Election

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer
BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP) — Mayor Bernard Sanders left City Hall a few days ago and found a ticket on the windshield of his battered, rust-flecked Dasher.

His offense? Parking in the mayor's parking spot.

Six months after the avowed socialist scored a surprise victory to become mayor of Vermont's largest city, he's discovering that having an office inside City Hall doesn't make him an insider.

"I'm not in the clique," says the 39-year-old Sanders, who forged a coalition of students, union activists, neighborhood organizers, college professors and low-income people to win election as an independent by 10 votes.

"Not exactly a landslide," he concedes, running his hands through his tousled, graying hair. "But we hit a nerve. We sent a message to the people who run this city."

The election of a man who had denounced the capitalist ethic and called for the rise of the working class set some Burlington merchants quaking. One waggish state lawmaker had "People's Republic of Burlington" T-shirts printed up and gave them to the local legislative delegation.

And the national publicity that came with toppling the five-term Democratic incumbent led Sanders to dub himself sardonically "the freak mayor."

"I was treated as a novelty," says the Brooklyn, N.Y. native, who has been active in Vermont leftist politics for a decade and mounted four losing campaigns for statewide office before winning the head job in this city of 40,000. "There are people who will see this administration that way, no matter what we accomplish."

Sanders can point to some successes during his short tenure, but also to some painful batterings at the hands of the conservative coalition that has retained control of the board of aldermen.

"Oh, he rubs me the wrong way sometimes. He just really does," says William Blanchard, president of the board.

"My ideas are radical," Sanders admits. "But I know I can't be on a soapbox all the time. I have to work with all kinds of people, or I'll be totally isolated."

Being mayor is the first steady job in years for Sanders, who eked out a living as a filmmaker and writer after coming to Vermont. For a time, he lived in a converted sugarhouse with no plumbing or electricity.

"It's so strange, just having money, things like that," he says. "For years I could never afford the rent, and now I'm looking over these budgets of thousands of dollars."

What kind of a job is he doing?

"That depends who you ask," he says. "If you're a senior citizen and just got back from a free concert, you might think things aren't too bad. If you're a bank president, you might think this is the worst thing to hit the city."

Herluf Olsen is president of the Medical Center Hospital. Sanders has opposed a hospital expansion program, and Olsen does seem to think he is the worst thing to hit Burlington: "When I heard on my car radio that he'd been elected, I almost drove off the road."

Sanders won a big battle within weeks of his election when he persuaded voters to adopt a tax increase they had spurned only two months before, averting layoffs of police and firefighters and deep cuts into city services.

But voters buried a housing reform initiative Sanders had backed, after landlords threatened huge rent increases if it passed.

In another major defeat, aldermen rejected all of Sanders' appointees for top City Hall jobs without even a hearing on their qualifications. The jobs are still held by people left over from the last administration.

Alderman Joyce Desautels said the current city workers "are good people, loyal people, and they've served this city well. There's no reason to replace them. I hope the one who's replaced is Mr. Sanders."

Sanders called the board's action an "insult" and took it to court, but a judge refused to hear the case. The mayor said he may appeal to the state Supreme Court.

In spite of the roadblock, Sanders' supporters have immersed themselves in city affairs on an unofficial basis. His nominee for city treasurer, economics professor

Jenny Stoler, spent hours of unpaid time poring over city books and advising Sanders. He concedes he could have avoided some of his clashes with the board. "I can be abrasive," he says, tugging reflectively at the open collar of his work shirt. "But it hurts me to not speak out on things."

There have been occasional blunders, too. Sanders winces when he mentions his nominee for a minor city post, a city constable who had been a familiar figure in Burlington for years — and who had been dead about a month. "It was silly, just dumb," he says.

But Sanders believes he had strength through his ties with community groups, people he contends were ignored by the previous administration.

Members of an advisory task force include a police detective, an active feminist and a youth counselor. They meet regularly with Sanders, discussing everything from politics in El Salvador to whether the bushes should be trimmed at a local ball field.

STILL AN OUTSIDER — Six months after avowed socialist Bernard Sanders became mayor of Burlington, Vermont, he has become acutely aware that having an office inside City Hall doesn't make him an "insider". (AP Laserphoto)

GREENVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

The Greenville Utilities Commission will hold a Public Hearing on Thursday night, September 17, 1981, at 7:30 P.M., in the City Council Chambers, 3rd Floor City Hall Building, to receive comments from citizen/ratepayers on the Commission's electric rates adjusted on September 1, 1981, to reflect (a) higher cost of power from its supplier Vepco, and (b) allocation to each customer class (residential, commercial, industrial, etc.) the proper cost responsibility. The allocation of costs has been determined through a "Cost-of-Service" Study performed by R. W. Beck & Associates, Engineers and Consultants. Copies of the R. W. Beck 1981 Electric Rate Study will be available in the office of the Business Manager, Greenville Utilities Building; the City Clerk's Office, City Hall Building; the Sheppard Memorial Library, Evans Street; the East Branch Library, Cedar Lane; and the Carver Library, 14th Street.

A summary extract from Beck's Cost-of-Service Study is as follows:

Customer Class	Existing Rate Revenues	Additional Proposed Rate Revenues	Total Rate Revenues	Percent Increase Proposed Rates to Existing Rates
Residential Service	$14,978,322	$ 343,907	$15,322,229	2.30%
Small General Service	6,124,688	972,217	7,096,905	15.87
Large General Service	9,752,698	1,308,349	11,061,047	13.42
County, Municipal, or Housing Authority All-Electric Building Service	101,047	35,627	136,674	35.26
Seasonal General Service	805,620	(182,226)	623,394	(22.62)
Outdoor Lighting Service	283,124	0	283,124	—
County, Municipal, or Housing Authority Outdoor Lighting Service	273,245	0	273,245	—
Total	$32,318,744	$2,477,874	$34,796,618	7.67%

It must be recognized that even with prompt adoption, the resultant rates will be applicable during only the last 10 months of the Test Year. Thus, the Commission cannot expect to recover the annual amount of the additional retail rate revenue from each of the customer classes. Historical customer consumption characteristics indicate that approximately 81% of the sales of electricity to the retail customers and 81% of the base rate revenues are billed during the last ten months of the fiscal year. Therefore, of the $2,485,363 annualized rate increase, the Commission can expect to recover approximately $2,016,848 during the Test Year.

Further, it should be noted that effective December, 1981, the Electric System will initiate the purchase of its power requirements from North Carolina Power Agency No. 3 rather than from Virginia Electric Power Company ("VEPCO"), its current purchased power supplier. This conversion of power suppliers will necessitate a further adjustment to rates and, thus, revenues.

The proposed rate levels and rate structures submitted herein for consideration and adoption by the Commission will, in our opinion, meet the following electric utility rate criteria for service provided by municipally owned electric utilities.

- Electric rates should be based on a rate policy that establishes rates and charges at the lowest possible prices consistent with customer requirements and high quality, efficient service.
- Electric rates should be simple and understandable.
- Electric rates should be equitable between classes of customers and individuals within classes, taking into consideration the available cost responsibility data.
- Electric rates should be designed to encourage the most efficient use of the Commission's power purchases and discourage unnecessary or wasteful use of service.

The Commission will take comments from citizen/ratepayers for the purpose of continued evaluation of the rates adjusted on September 1, 1981, and for future rate adjustments.

A Glossy Documentary On Fashion Mode Field

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Tonight's 2½-hour documentary on PBS, "Model," is the mirror image of its subject, commercial modeling. It is a beautiful portrait that too often is superficial and spends too much time in retakes.

The best way to watch "Model" is to pick the two most convenient half hours since the other 90 minutes would mostly be repetitious. That's the style of award-winning filmmaker Frederick Wiseman, who produced, directed and edited (certainly not strenuously) "Model."

That's not to say that Wiseman doesn't capture the glamour and grind of being a top fashion model; he does that very well. But 2½ hours of TV time is a near eternity, and it's a shame that Wiseman doesn't offer more than meets the eye by providing some glimpses of models beneath their makeup.

Filming in black and white, Wiseman shows models at work, and it is certainly hard work creating the right look and image for the public to buy. Models, male and female, are seen painstakingly painting their faces and arranging their hair, then shooting and re-shooting hours of film for mere seconds on TV or one picture on a page.

tures this beautifully. One model spends hours getting her leg in the right photographic positions for a five-second section of a panty hose commercial.

He also captures the subtlety in which commercials match tone and style with the product and target buying group. Two models, who ignore each other off-camera, magically connect for a commercial, in which his stoic indifference (read that sexy) and her suggestive posturing (read that sexy) create sparks.

But except for one brief segment with Andy Warhol and two male models, we are never told about the people behind the profiles. What motivates them? Do sacrifices do they make? What are their lifestyles like away

COLIFORM BACTERIA FOUND IN DRINKING WATER

During August 1981 coliform bacteria was found in drinking water samples from the Woodland Hills Mobile Home Park water system above the limit as it appears in the "Rules," Governing Public Water Supplies.

Coliform bacteria is an environmental bacteria which is found in the soil and intestinal tract of warm blooded animals. The presence of coliform bacteria in drinking water indicates that some contamination has occurred.

In an attempt to correct the cause of the contamination we have done the following:
(Check the appropriate examples)
X We have disinfected the water system.
X We have flushed the water lines.
X We have installed continuous disinfection equipment.
X Check samples submitted on 9-2-81 show the water to be free of coliform bacteria.

from the office? What is needed to keep their bodies and faces in shape? What are their diets like? Is it really life in the fast lane?

Wiseman is not paid by the hour, so there should be a good reason to go 2½ hours on a documentary, rather than the conventional 60 minutes, including commercials. His style of no background music, no narration and no color does not mean he cannot dig beneath the surface.

Symptomatic of the program's repetitiveness is the numerous intercuts between the beautiful models filming on the streets of New York and the city's cast of zanies, push-cart vendors and common folk hanging out.

This contrast between reality and packaged "reality" is fine, but it's overdone.

The repetition makes staying with "Model" for 2½ hours difficult, but so does the fact that there are no commercials on PBS. That's a long time between breaks, but there's another reason why commercials are missed. Because of the subject matter, watching the finished advertisements would have been interesting after seeing the process of how they're made.

Some of the show's best segments are agency interviews with prospective models.

"You have the basic structure we need," a 6-foot-1 man is told. He's then advised to get other looks into his portfolio: "more active, energy kind of shots, more casual, more outdoor and more formal."

A woman, 5-6½, is told: "That's your problem. You're too short for what we do. You'll have a very hard time in New York. They won't bother with you. You won't fit into the clothes. You'll be too short next to the other models. Maybe you should pursue acting."

Charity Trio In October Show

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Frank Sinatra, Merv Griffin and Art Buchwald will get together Oct. 24 to benefit the Children's Diabetes Foundation at Denver.

Griffin and humorist-columnist Buchwald will act as masters of ceremonies for the Fourth Annual Carousel Ball at the foundation dinner. Sinatra will headline the entertainment in Denver's Currihan Hall.

The Children's Diabetes Foundation is dedicated to finding a cure for juvenile diabetes as well as educating the public about the incurable disease.

Some of the show's best segments are agency interviews with prospective models.

"You have the basic structure we need," a 6-foot-1 man is told. He's then advised to get other looks into his portfolio: "more active, energy kind of shots, more casual, more outdoor and more formal."

Arness Back In Weekly Series

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — James Arness, who starred as Marshal Matt Dillon for 20 years in TV's longest-running prime time drama, "Gunsmoke!," will return to a weekly series this season in "McClain's Law."

The show marks Arness' first contemporary TV role, a policeman in the sprawling San Pedro harbor area of Los Angeles where much of the series will be filmed on locations.

Co-starring as Arness' partner on the streets will be newcomer Marshall Colt.

William Friday Asks Film Clips

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina president William C. Friday asked CBS-TV Tuesday for film clips on the UNC desegregation case shot for this week's "Sunday Morning" show.

But a network spokesman said it was unlikely CBS would honor the request because it has policies against such releases.

Friday and Gov. Jim Hunt have said the story was unfair and inaccurate. It showed scenes of UNC-Chapel Hill and North Carolina Central University in Durham, and featured a brief interview with Friday and longer talks with students at the two schools.

NEW CAR FINANCING.

That's right! For a limited time, you can buy a new AMC car... a new Jeep... or a new Renault at Bob Barbour AMC/Jeep/Renault in Greenville and take advantage of a 12% APR finance rate!

This is the best interest rate on new car financing you'll find anywhere—and it's a great reason to buy you new car or jeep TODAY and Bob Barbour's.

You already know about AMC and Jeep... but we'd like to tell you some interesting things about the great cars from Renault... the cars that outsell VW in Germany... in fact, they are the best selling cars in all of Europe!

Stop by and let us show you (and tell you about) all the great AMC, Jeep and Renault vehicles. There couldn't be a better time than now... while 12% financing is available.

All financing is, of course, subject to credit approval.

Tar Heel Goes Down To The Sea: Ships In Bottles

By JANICE GASTON
The Winston-Salem Journal
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — "I like to let my mind wander," said Rich Long, glancing at the map of the world that hangs on the wall of his apartment.

"I pick out little islands nobody ever heard of and fantasize cruising out to them in one of my ships."

Long isn't Winston-Salem's answer to Aristotle Onassis. He doesn't own a fleet of tankers — not even one leaky rowboat. He's got plenty of ships, but they're tiny ones — and they're all in bottles.

"This is our happy little ship shop," Long proclaimed as he welcomed a visitor into the kitchen-table enterprise that supports him and his wife, Martha.

The Longs have been in the shipbuilding business for seven or eight years now. Long is the primary craftsman; his wife cuts the sails.

The ships he builds in wine and liquor bottles and cider jugs aren't just your run-of-the-mill boats — there's a gimmick. The paper ships are made from business cards, making each one a custom job.

Prices for Long's standard line of ships run from $20 for ships built in cider jugs to $45 for those constructed in Haig and Haig Scotch pinch bottles. The cost is determined by the price of the bottles and the difficulty of putting ships in them.

Long buys the empty cider jugs at bulk rates and picks up the liquor bottles at garage sales. But he has to buy the wine bottles, contents and all, at the grocery store. "I don't drink the doggone stuff," he said, so he pours it out or gives it to neighbors.

He sees his ships as nifty surprises for the people who receive them. "A ship in a bottle is a surprise anyway, especially when they find they've got their name on it."

One business card forms the deck of each ship; another, the hull. The sails are made from blank business cards. Long uses nail clippers to cut a little snippet of wood to form the transom of a ship, then glues the pieces together, using a hairpin to keep the pieces in place while the glue dries.

BOTTLED SHIPS — Rich Long, of Winston-Salem, uses forceps to maneuver pieces into place as he builds a ship in a bottle. Long says "I can make a ship in any bottle in the world, but I just don't have the time." — (AP Laserphoto)

The bowsprit is a toothpick; the masts are barbecue skewers darkened with shoe dye. "When we go in a buy skewers, they must think we're having the biggest barbecue there ever was," Mrs. Long said.

The ship's aren't built with hinges so that they collapse when it's time to slip them into the bottles. Long slides the hull into the bottle, then attaches the masts, using a bent coat hanger to drip glue in the proper spots and forceps to maneuver the masts into place.

Although it once took him six months to build a single ship, Long now can build one in less than an hour. "I've kind of got it down to a science now," he said.

But it's painstaking, tedious work. When a fellow came along who offered to make Long rich with his ships, Long asked him, "How many could I sell?" When he was told 100,000 in the next month, Long yelled to his wife, "Martha, get to washing those bottles."

Round-faced, graying and impish, he chortled when he told that story, explaining that building ships in a bottle is probably the worst possible scheme for getting rich in a hurry.

"It's fun, it's artsy-craftsy and everything, but it just can't be hurried up. You can't rush the ship-in-a-bottle business. You have to have peace and quiet."

It was peace and quiet, lots of it, that propelled Long into the ship-in-a-bottle business.

He had spent 15 years as a financial analyst with Dunn and Bradstreet "before I dropped out and came to my senses," he said. He made a radical change in lifestyle, signing on as a caretaker for a 2,000-acre mountain estate in Rutherford County.

The place was isolated — 20 miles from the closest town — and frequently snowbound. Long took up shipbuilding to occupy his mind and perfected his technique during long days of solitude.

He got into business by first building ships for seafood restaurants. "The first thing I knew I was building ships out of all kinds of things — matchbooks, letterheads, canceled checks."

When a fellow gave him a business card to work with, he knew he'd hit upon something.

Although most of the cards he works with are paper, he's received business cards made from metal, plastic and wood. One card was made from fine wire mesh screening. "People try to trick me," he said.

But, boasted Long, "Nobody ever sent me anything I couldn't build a ship out of." He guarantees his work.

"If you don't like it, you get a complete refund. To this day, nobody has ever wanted their money back," he said.

Long takes considerable pride in his craft, although it's become pretty much routine through constant repetition. "When you do something a couple of thousand times, it gets to be pretty automatic. But I still consider it art work."

He and his wife work at home, often in earshot of the television set. There's a little mirror on Mrs. Long's work table, angled so that she can see the reflection of the television screen. "She's a soap-opera nut," her husband explained.

They do their selling mostly through telephone and mail orders. When he has time and wants to take a break from shipbuilding, Long calls on companies to try to drum up business.

They used to go to craft shows, but no more. "I'm kind of proud that we don't have to," Long said. "Those craft shows are hard work."

Long sees his ships as lasting treasures and speaks frequently of how they'll be around long after he's gone. He showed off one of his latest creations, a gift for a six-year-old boy.

The ship is named after the child, the U.S.S. Jason, and written on the bottom is such pertinent information as its launch date, which is the boy's birthday, and tonnage, the child's birth weight. As he gently placed the bottle back on the table, Long said, "In 100 years, this Jason could leave it to his grandchild."

"If you don't drop and brak the bottle, it should be in it for many a year." Long speaks of the uniqueness of his business. "I don't think anybody else in the United States does it on a professional level," he said, adding that there might be some hobbyists who do it. "I might be the only one in the universe."

It tickles his fancy to know that he can do something most people can't. "I can make a ship in any bottle in the world, I'm convinced, but I just don't have time to."

There's a lot of the little boy left in Long, and it comes out in the stories he tells. When he wanted to deliver one of his ships, a surprise gift, he grabbed one of his demonstration models by mistake. Once he got inside with the wrong ship and realized his error, he decided to pull a gag.

He showed his model ship to the man slated to receive the gift and explained that he could build him one like it, using the man's own business cards, in about three minutes.

"Just let me have some of your cards," he told the dumbfounded man, who warned him, "I'm going to time you."

Long went out to the car, waited a minute or two, then went back inside, wiping off the bottle with the man's custom-made ship in it.

"That guy almost had a coronary," Long said.

The amazed businessman went around the office, showing the ship off and asking everybody how long they thought it took Long to build it.

"I was doing OK," Long said, "until this guy said, 'I think I'll get him to build me one,' and there I was with egg on my face."

He wriggled out of that one by claiming that he'd run out of rigging. "I really enjoyed that," Long said. "I'm going to set somebody else up like that sometime."

"Isn't this something for a grown man to be doing?" Long asked as he described his work. He answered his own question with a laugh.

"Ah, we enjoy our little business."

Skunks High On Unwanted List

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Skunks, foxes, raccoons, ringtails, bobcats, coyotes and martens can join the medfly on North Carolina's least-wanted list.

The North Carolina Agriculture Board moved Monday to stop the importation of those wild animals in an effort to stem the influx of contagious diseases into the state.

"We are particularly vulnerable to the threat of rabies from skunks," said board chairman Jim Graham, commissioner of agriculture. "We have had some close calls from skunks brought in from other states, particularly Minnesota."

"The regulation does not affect any animals caught or kept in the state of North Carolina, but wildlife specialists and health officials have long warned against the domestication of these wild carnivores," Graham said.

Plans Upset By Oil Glut

By SUSAN LINNIE
Associated Press Writer
ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — The world oil glut is casting a pall over Nigeria's plans to foment a "green revolution" in agriculture and lay a solid industrial base for the future.

Knowledgeable sources in West Africa say the announcement last month of a $4-a-barrel discount on the price of Nigerian crude oil confirms the extent to which the country is suffering from the combined effects of worldwide recession and Saudi Arabia's policy of forcing down oil prices by stepping up its own output.

The office of President Shehu Shagari of Nigeria said the $4 decrease to $36 a barrel for Nigeria's Bonny Light crude was made in the best interest of the country.

Nigeria counts on its oil, which produces 90 percent of foreign currency earnings and 75 percent of government revenues, to secure self-sufficiency in food production as well as to develop local industry.

The country now spends $2.4 billion a year to import food, while manufacturing accounts for less than 10 percent of the gross domestic product, the sum of all goods and services.

Petroleum sources in Lagos, Nigeria's capital, say that output has dropped drastically since January when production was reported at around 2.1 million barrels a day. According to the Middle East Economic Survey, production figures for August were around 600,000 barrels a day.

With an estimated population of about 85 million, Nigeria consumes about 200,000 barrels a day, leaving 400,000 for export. About half the oil goes to the United States. Nigeria's proven oil reserves are estimated at 20 billion barrels.

July foreign exchange reserves were reported to be $8 billion, but Nigerian presidential advisers have warned that the country's $140 billion, five-year development plan would suffer if oil exports did not pick up. Earnings lost through cutbacks this year are estimated at $3.5 billion.

Agriculture is the weak link in the Nigerian economy. In 1962 it contributed 61.2 percent of Nigeria's gross domestic product (GDP) and 80 percent of export earnings. In 1979 it accounted for only 18.4 percent of the GDP and 6.6 percent of exports. But agriculture still employs over half the country's labor force.

The 1967-70 Biafra civil war disrupted the rural populations in the eastern and mid-western regions. The subsequent oil boom created an exodus to urban centers that removes producers from the land while producing a greater demand for food.

This year food imports consumed more than a quarter of the country's foreign exchange. Falling oil revenues also mean there is less money to carry out the $13.5 billion green revolution. Until now Nigeria has managed to avoid heavy borrowing on the international money market, but it may have to seek loans at the going rate to meet commitments to a number of joint agricultural development projects.

The 1981-85 development plan allocates nearly half its roughly $12.5 billion for the manufacturing sector to the iron and steel industry.

A German-built steel plant at Warri, near the Niger River Delta in the east, is expected to begin production late this year. But Nigeria has had to borrow to finance the project because the cash originally counted on is no longer available.

Two hundred miles upriver at Ajaokuta, work on an integrated steel complex to be built by a Soviet firm is stalled because of bureaucratic disputes.

Because Nigeria has the largest population in Africa, its domestic-market potential attracts foreign salesmen seeking to sell their products. However, like many African countries, Nigeria is looking for investors willing to produce locally for sale, rather than spending foreign exchange on more and more imports.

The shortage of funds also will probably cause another delay in the realization of Abuja, the new federal capital to take shape in the center of the country. The showcase project, conceived in 1976 during the last military government, was supposed to be partly functional by the end of next year. Serious construction has yet to begin, however.

Lenoir Honors Are Announced

KINSTON — Sixty-four curriculum students and 21 special students earned a place on the President's List at Lenoir Community College during the summer session, president Jesse L. McDaniel announced. To be included on the list a student must maintain a grade point average of 3.00 or better with no failures, withdrawals or incomplete courses on his or her record.

Included were:
Technical Division: Paula J. Labelle of Grifton.
Vocational Division: Melvin R. Warren of Snow Hill.

College Transfer: Tanya R. Hart of Ayden, Janice M. Wiggins and Robert H. Westbrook both of Grifton, and Terry Adams of Pink Hill.

Special Students: Catherine L. Emory of Greenville, Craven W. Mitchell of Grifton, and Alice F. Baker of Snow Hill.

Life Is Unpleasant In China Labor Reform Camp

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
PEKING (AP) — Liu Qing huddled in his tiny cell, rigid with cold, his 35-year-old body shriveled and covered with bruises. He closed his eyes against the glaring lights and tried to shut out the ravings of other inmates in solitary confinement.

One thing, he said, kept him from madness: "I want the people to know the truth."

In the West, Liu would be known as a political prisoner.

In China, he is called a counter-revolutionary.

With the help of friends, he was able to smuggle an account of his experiences out of a labor reform camp. The Associated Press obtained a copy of it.

The 200-page manuscript, titled "A Dispirited Recollection and Observations — I lodge my complaint before the court of society," provides a rare glimpse into the shadowy world of Chinese prisons and labor camps for dissidents.

It is a report of abusive interrogators who proclaim the law doesn't matter, of torture and of back-breaking labor.

Liu says he wants the story told because "I am just a weak person. I have no way to bring my voice to society and get support and sympathy."

"Within this judicial system there is no way to discuss things reasonably," he writes. "I want the people to know the truth. Thus social forces will be mobilized to stop unlawful acts."

Liu, a mechanic by trade, says he was not imprisoned because he was editor of the mildly critical, unofficial magazine "April 5th Forum," nor for committing a violent crime. His offense was publishing a transcript of a public trial. For that he was sentenced to three years in prison — called a labor reform camp — without a trial and without being officially charged.

Liu in October 1979 arranged the tape recording of the "public" trial of dissident Wei Jingsheng, attended by a hand-picked audience, and then sold transcripts of the tapes.

Several friends selling the transcripts at Peking's now-defunct Democracy Wall were arrested Nov. 11. Liu went to the Public Security Bureau to demand their release. He was arrested and questioned for hours about who made the tapes and why.

When Liu asked what crime he had committed, he was told that selling pamphlets about the dissident Wei was "making counter-revolutionary propaganda."

Liu replied that it was a word-for-word account of a public trial.

"If you think the contents are counter-revolutionary propaganda," he said, "then the trial itself must be a counter-revolutionary activity."

Enraged and red-faced, his interrogator pounded the table.

"You must answer these questions," he declared. "We have all kinds of ways of dealing with an insignificant person like you. This is an organ of dictatorship."

"Legal action is not an inflexible thing," said another interrogator. "There always are exceptions. Anyone can be imprisoned without proceedings."

The next day he protested that detention without legal proceedings was tantamount to kidnapping and went on a hunger strike to demand a public trial.

For the next five months, Liu remained in solitary confinement in a Peking prison, with only a thin cotton blanket to protect him from cold so severe that it made his joints ache.

FISH SEARCH
TOKYO (AP) — Twenty scientists from around the world will visit the Comoros islands north of Mozambique next month to search for a species of fish thought to be extinct until 1938, a Japanese ichthyologist says.

Chamber Is Planning Seminar

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a seminar Sept. 24 at the Casablanca. The topic for the seminar is "Planning Your Way to Successful Living."

Registration will begin at 8 a.m. and the program will follow at 8:30.

Speakers will include David Cooper and Don Hutson, past president of the National Speakers Association. After lunch Michael Broome will present "Be the Success You Always Dreamed of Being." The concluding speaker will be Kirk Kirpatrick.

The seminar cost will be $45 per person for Chamber of Commerce members of any eastern North Carolina Chamber and their employees and $60 for non members. For additional information and advance registration call the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, 752-4101.

Pizzazz For Bills Sought

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) — While economists fret over the size of the nation's money supply, the Farmers' Almanac is concerned about the color of the bills.

Departing from its customary role as a champion of tradition, the venerable publication wants to add pizzazz to paper money by switching to a different color for each denomination.

"Colored money is happier money. It makes people feel better," almanac editor Ray Geiger said in an interview. "You'll be able to give it out more cheerfully, and, of course, more happily take it in."

Geiger said the United States is the only major country that prints all its bills in a single color. The almanac's 1982 edition, just off the presses, says a change would have practical benefits.

"It offers instant and positive identification of a bill's value to merchants, cashiers, bank tellers and other money handlers," the almanac says.

But a Treasury Department spokeswoman, who did not wish to be identified, said, "People are familiar with it the way it is. Also, people can lose faith if you start changing things around a lot."

The 165-year-old almanac, which has a circulation of just under 6 million copies, is distinct from the 188-year-old Old Farmers Almanac in New Hampshire.

Occupational Nurses' Meeting

The Coastal Plains Occupational Health Nurses Association will hold a business meeting Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Burroughs Wellcome Company.

Programs and workshops for the coming year will be discussed and the beginning of the association five years ago will be commemorated. Since it was begun on Sept. 24, 1976, the association has provided continuing education opportunities with 46 programs and workshops directed toward professional growth for the occupational health nurse.

COLOR BARGAIN — Prints, slides and a replacement roll of film, for one low price. A color bargain? Maybe, but there are drawbacks in time and restrictions on where it can be developed and printed.

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures
Sandy Colton is on special assignment this week, and John Dingman is filling in as guest columnist.

For a long time, advertisements for Kodak 5427 color film have promised all sorts of good things at great savings.

You can get prints, slides and negatives all on the one roll of film. There is a choice of 100 ASA all the way to 400 ASA on the film. It can be used indoors under tungsten lights, or outdoors, or with strobe, with any variety of filters.

The cost is below what you would pay for normal color films, so finally I gave in and ordered a roll.

First, you have to understand what the film is.

Kodak produces a very high-quality film for the Hollywood studios and other professional movie makers. To insure control over quality for the film they are shooting, the studio will order thousands of feet of film from the same production batch or emulsion number.

Color film differs by a microscopic amount from one batch to another. It does not matter to most of us because the difference is tiny and overall quality is high.

But to Hollywood it is very important that all the film produce exactly the same color gradations when the various scenes are matched up.

Pro still photographers insist on the same quality and will buy enough color film of the same emulsion number if they are shooting a large number of stills on Kodachrome or whatever.

Hollywood may buy a large amount of film to make a movie, and wind up with a few thousand feet left. This is where a number of amateur packaging companies step into the picture. They buy the leftover film, spool it into 36 exposure cartridges, and sell it at reduced prices.

For just under $15, I got a roll of the film, and processing — including 36 prints, 36 slides, negatives and a fresh roll of film.

It sounds like a bargain, when you consider that processing for a 36-exposure roll with just prints costs nearly $13 in the New York area.

For testing purposes, I exposed the 5427 and a roll of Kodacolor II on the same scenes. Kodak processed the Kodacolor and I sent the movie film to the lab which sold it.

Both rolls were exposed in daylight at ASA 100 with no filtration.

No question about it, the 5427 won on the question of price. The Kodacolor cost $12.90, with prints, no slides, and no replacement roll of film.

I mixed up the prints and had several people go through them to pick out the better quality. It came out about even, with the 5427 prints and the Kodacolor prints about equal in color saturation and approval. They were good, and most of my observers could not tell the difference.

The 5427 slides were another matter. They tended to be washed out, with color intensity well below the prints. In no way could they compare with some Kodachrome slides taken on the same trip. Not bad, but not good enough to make up for the saving.

Two other major problems cropped up with the 5427 film.

The Kodacolor II prints were back in four days, using a Kodak mail envelope. If I had wanted to use one of the many speed processors in New York, I could have had the film in five hours. Quality does suffer, however.

The 5427 was another matter. It took five weeks to get the results. I mailed it to the nearest address on Long Island. But, when the material returned, it came from Seattle. Obviously, the nearby address is just a mail drop.

You can't speed it up by sending the 5427 to a regular processor. They can't handle it. The movie film has a special backing that requires removal, and the average amateur processing plant just does not have the necessary equipment.

Another problem: most home-town labs cannot make prints from this film. The masking differs from that in regular Kodacolor, and the automatic print machines will not tolerate it. So, if you want extra prints, you must go back to the original seller. How long that would take, I have no idea.

Boiled down, you can get decent color from 5427, but you have to balance the dollar saving against the drawbacks — slow processing and limitations on the ability to get reprints.

I will use my replacement roll, and odds are I will be satisfied with the prints. But, I will pay a price in time and inconvenience that will outweigh the savings in dollars.

Buggy Man Fascinated By The Past

By RICH KIRKPATRICK
Associated Press Writer
INTERCOURSE, Pa. (AP)
— Stephen Scott is into horse-drawn buggies the way many Americans are into cars.

For the past 15 years, he has visited Old Order Amish and Mennonite communities around the country, talked with buggy-shop owners, and taken pictures of their products.

"As a boy, I was always sort of old-fashioned," says Scott, 33. "I never cared for sports cars or transistor radios like my peers. I was more interested in covered wagons and log cabins."

His fascination has borne a book, "Plain Buggies," which may soon be a hit with Amish and other Old Order sects around the country.

Publisher Merle Good says it is the first definitive study on what has been the trademark of the Amish and other plain people.

Entranced by the plain way of life, Scott converted from Baptist and, at age 21, joined the Old Order River Brethren. He has a full beard, wears round, frameless spectacles, and dresses in black and white.

Although they share a way of life, the various Old Order sects have sprouted across the country, isolated from one another. Each has developed its own dress customs, church practices, and, in some cases, buggies, Scott says.

He has identified four main buggy styles: the Pennsylvania, with straight sides, two sets of seats, and top of black, gray, white or yellow; Ohio, with angled sides, one seat, and black top; Indiana, with the top built around the base of the seat backrest, one seat and black top, and Swiss, with no top and painted black.

Other variations are used by Old Order Mennonites, Old Colony Mennonites in Mexico, and Brethern groups.

The plain people cling to horse-drawn transportation for what they feel is a practical reason — survival in a modern world, Scott says in his book. The automobile is seen as a threat to close-knit family, church and community structure, he says.

"With fast, easy transportation readily available, family members are apt to be away from home more often than not and the church community is likely to become very scattered," he writes.

Even the strictest of the plain people, the Amish, have had trouble keeping their teen-agers from behind the wheels of the fast, mirror-polished cars so familiar to America's youth. But, once they mature, join the church and start raising families, the one-time drivers trade their machines for buggies.

Scott says there is a huge demand for buggies in the 170 or so Old Order communities in Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska.

There are about 70 to 100 shops in the communities that manufacture either the buggies or buggy parts. Prices range from $350 for a simple two-wheeled cart, to $2,975 for a two-seat buggy with a top.

Scott's favorite is the Reno Black Box, which has roll-up side curtains instead of doors. Priced at $1,750, the Black Box is common to the Amish in Mifflin County, Pa.

Buggies rarely are traded in. When they become too worn for Sunday duty, they are used for week-day errands.

Increasingly, Amish and other Old Order buggy shop owners are finding a growing business catering to carriage and buggy collectors. One Amish shop here now exclusively works on such outside trade, Scott says.

Scott says his conversion to the plain life was gradual, starting as a boy near Dayton. He was fascinated by the area's Old Order people and once convinced his parents to take a vacation in Lancaster County, home of the second largest Amish community in the country.

Indochinese Train For U.S. Life

By PAUL WEDEL
 GALANG ISLAND, Indonesia (UPI) — On a small island east of Singapore, thousands of Indochinese refugees are learning how to call the fire department, go on a date and cope with the U.S. welfare system.

More than 8,000 of the refugees at the newly completed refugee processing center on Galang island have been accepted for resettlement in the United States, France, Canada or Australia. Another 5,000 refugees are waiting.

The "processing" the refugees go through before they leave for the West is a unique program of language and cultural orientation designed to make resettlement a bit easier — for both refugee and host.

Funded by the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, the approximately $1.5 million per year program is run by an international staff with experience in Asia, in refugee adjustment problems and in teaching English as a second language. Many are former Peace Corps volunteers.

Program manager Joan Seeler of Boston, worked previously with refugees in the United States.

"I saw refugees dropped straight into American cities and psychologically it wasn't good," she said.

Lack of English-language ability and misunderstanding of American ways created difficulties for refugees that some of them never overcame, she said.

"But with this pre-arrival learning, the refugees can have some basic English, get a job, make some friends and continue learning on their own."

"If they adjust better and quicker, this saves welfare and other expenses for the resettlement country," she said.

In newly built classrooms the U.N.H.C.R. has supplemented its regular language programs with a 12-week course aimed at key refugees.

"We single out the breadwinner from each family," program supervisor Douglas Pilbrow said, "for what is really survival English."

Dialogues focus on such things as explaining symptoms to a doctor, making an emergency call to the fire department, filling out a form and going through a job interview.

Developed by the Vermont-based organization, Experiment in International Living, the program teaches refugees about dangerous household appliances, not to freeze meat and how to use a modern bathroom and kitchen.

Pilbrow said the program also teaches what the U.S. welfare program is, how to handle it and why they should get off it quick.

"We tell them welfare is a trap... We explain it in terms of something very important to them — their families."

"We tell them their children will never learn to work hard and be successful if they see their parents on welfare. This has an impact."

One of the biggest handicaps the refugees face is unrealistic expectations.

Le Trung Nguyen speaks almost no English and hasn't flown for six years since he was a South Vietnamese air force lieutenant. But he says through an interpreter, "Oh, I'll fly a big jet for the airlines. No problem."

Pilbrow said the refugees are encouraged to be more realistic and overcome fears that if they accept a menial job to start out, it means they will be stuck with that job for the rest of their lives.

"We try," he said, "to show how a bad job can lead to a better one."

Limited funds means the program depends heavily on Asian teachers. When fully staffed, Galang should have about 18 American "master teachers" to supervise about 60 Indonesian and about 50 Vietnamese and Cambodian refugee teachers.

But as one of the Indonesian teachers said, "The cultural part is difficult because I have never been to the United States either and some things are strange to me, too."

The DA Is In Need Of Optimism

By SID MOODY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The raised bronze letters above the entrance neither praise famous men nor salute glorious truths. As stark and plainly wrapped as a 12-to-25 in Sing Sing they read:

"District Attorney
"New York County."
Fair enough. Neither fear nor favor.

For through these portals — two revolving, one hinged — comes a ceaseless column of humanity in quest of what no high words graven in marble can define for all men in all times: justice.

Justice for the slayer of John Lennon, of the Metropolitan Opera violinist, of the woman upstairs. Justice for the rapist, the pusher, the whore, the cutpurse, the retiree on Social Security palming an extra tin of tuna, the Wall Street programmer rigging a computer, the stranger accused in a language he knows not.

Justice for them. Justice for their victims. Justice for those for whom the district attorney of New York County speaks: the people.

The district attorney's office is not a temple of justice. It is a field hospital for society's maimed and maimers. It prescribes nuance, uncommon sense, law, perseverance.

The boss, 61-year-old Robert Morgenthau, is fighting a losing battle to keep alive the terminal inch of his first of three cigars for the day. For clarity he removes the sodden stump:

"Our role is to protect the public, to see that justice is done in every case."
Every case?

"I'm an optimist. This is no place to wear a belt and suspenders."

New York County is Manhattan, where 80,000 people were arrested last year for unauthorized nibbles and gouges ranging from a machine gun attack on gays in Greenwich Village to shoplifting at Macy's. The district attorney's office sifted them out, brought 6,073 indictments, tried 626 cases and won conviction in 71.5 percent of them, about the national average.

But statistics are not justice.

Nor, at first, second or third look is the Criminal Courts Building near Chinatown, Little Italy and the Brooklyn Bridge where Morgenthau and his 260 lawyers work and would see justice done. Mothers and lovers weep as their men are led away. Cops in uniform, narcs in street garb, judges in robes, assistant district attorneys pushing grocery carts of trial files, arthritic courtroom buffs, loved ones, hated ones all mingle, stride, shuffle, loiter, glower, sit, squirm, read newspapers, doze in jury boxes in this 15-story hive, this art deco warren of courtrooms, prisoner "pens," offices and corridors.

"It's like being an intern in a big city hospital," says Jessica de Grazia up on the eighth floor. "The suffering is bad, but you're doing something about it."

And somehow things get done. How? Begin a typical day with Jessica. She's in charge of hiring the junior assistants out of law school. Thirty were taken from the class of '80 out of 2,000 applicants. Most come for the trial experience, not the pay of $21,000 to start, half what name firms offer. But after a year of training, they'll be trying small cases, after five homicides. A rookie with a name firm may still be confined to the library by then.

If trial work is the cutting edge of the law, here is where it is honed.

Morgenthau wants bright young lawyers who can also relate to people, someone who can develop judgment, compassion, and that unteachable quality, street smarts.

Bill Hoyt has had the duty today as supervisor in the complaint room. Crime here is as fresh as country sausage, no more than 18 hours old. It is delivered by arresting policemen along with witnesses or corroborating affidavits. There are about 200 complaints on an average day, less when there's been a blizzard or Monday Night Football or on Christmas when vigilance or felonious intent may be on the downside.

Hoyt, 38, has convicted a man named Bobby Negrón for two cold-blooded murders despite Negrón's disclaimer that he had "never killed a woman, child or anyone who worked 9 to 5." Today's complaints are more mundane: 21 felonies, 10 or 15 prostitutes, 50 misdemeanors.

Hoyt and his crew of 10 or so assistants assess the cases: will a beaten wife stay mad long enough at her husband to make it to trial (usually not); will a witness be too embarrassed about involvement in a drug case to testify; will he simply drop from sight; does a case need more police work, or should it be dropped right now for insufficient evidence?

A cop, particularly if he's been slugged by an accused, may think he has a stronger case than Hoyt's crew does. Voices may rise. Plea bargaining at an elemental level. This day 15 of the 21 felonies are sent right to the grand jury. Three are dismissed outright, the rest downgraded to misdemeanors. It is a quasi-judicial judgment by the junior assistant. The cases they decide to prosecute will be the responsibility of the assistant who first took it off the top of the incoming pile until it completes its journey through the Cuisinart of justice, a Morgenthau reform which has cut the time from crime to disposition from as long as two years to six months.

"You need a sense of judgment," says Hoyt. "We don't want to convict a wrong man or let a criminal go free. When I find someone falsely accused, I'm in a position to do something about it, and I have. If I take a case to trial, it's because I think the person is guilty. A defense lawyer may ask acquittal for someone he thinks is guilty. That would trouble me as a way of life."

Eleven floors above, there is much shuffling of people and papers. This is Acting Supreme Court Judge Irving Lang's courtroom, where things start to get sorted out after the grand jury has acted. Lang sets hearing dates, bail, takes pleas, passes sentence.

A surly Hispanic is escorted in from the pens. Lang consults his computer list of 57 cases for the day. "Who's this? Mr. Rodriguez?" Rodriguez is there for an arraignment hearing, but his lawyer is at another trial or at the dentist. Absent, anyway. Lang sets a new date two weeks hence. Rodriguez is ushered back to the pens to await the bus-ferry ride to the prison on Riker's Island. He'd been in court all of 75 seconds. Next case.

Across the corridor, spectators are scanned with a metal detector before being allowed into the courtroom where Rachel Gordon is prosecuting Ronald Crumpley, accused of killing two men in a machine gun attack on two gay bars. A parade of witnesses initials a chart of the scene. The defense lawyer, Steve Cooper, had been willing to stipulate that the eyewitnesses were where they said they were. But Rachel Gordon wants the weight of witnesses, one of them with an arm crippled in the shooting, to impress the jury.

"She wants to build a case, appeal to the jurors' emotions," says Cooper, himself once a junior assistant. "A young prosecutor comes in on a white horse. He'd kill again. But I want him treated. Crumpley shouldn't have gone to trial. But there are pressures from the gay community."

Justice for Crumpley. Justice for them. A judgment call how to prosecute.

The Creator Of Scrabble Dead-Ended

By CYNTHIA BENJAMIN
 Associated Press Writer

STANFORDVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Fifty years ago, 32-year-old Alfred M. Butts invented a game that has made minding one's p's and q's an international rage.

Butts was never to create another game. Looking back, he says, "I had Scrabble, and I knew I couldn't do anything better. So why bother?" Scrabble is an eight-letter word for an adult board game that requires a good vocabulary, some tactical skill, and a fair amount of luck.

To millions who play in the English, German, Italian, Spanish, French, Russian, Hebrew and even Braille editions, Scrabble eclipses the crossword puzzle, dims the anagram and excels the cryptogram. Butts put it all together from lumberyard molding, blueprints and some Yankee inventiveness.

"I was an architect in New York City when the Depression hit," says this dapper, 82-year-old native of Poughkeepsie, N.Y. "I had been doing country houses for rich people, but suddenly no one had any money and I had no work. So I thought I would make a game to make money."

With architectural precision, Butts began to analyze three basic types of games: board games, number games and word games.

"I didn't think I could make any improvements on chess, and there were already enough number games like dice, cards and bridge. But in word games, anagrams was about it."

After settling on a word game, Butts painstakingly undertook to determine how frequently letters recurred in words. From counting letters in articles in The New York Times, he determined which letters should appear most frequently in his game.

"Lexico" appeared in 1931. The 100-tile game sold for $1.50 and was played by discarding and picking up, as in cards, until a word was formed. Tiles were worth one point and there was no board.

Anyone who wanted to own a set of Lexico called Butts. He built the sets from tiny blocks of wood, blueprints (for the blue numbers printed on the tiles) and wood moldings. Butts says he took the idea of small tiles held by "racks" from the Chinese game of mah-jongg.

Business was minimal at first — mostly among relatives, friends and neighbors.

In the next two years, Scrabble continued to evolve under the name of Lexico, but the game was rejected by a succession of toy companies.

"They weren't interested at all," he says. "I suspect they were only interested in games for the kids at Christmas. Make them and forget them."

"I knew the important games were for adults. But they weren't interested," he recalls.

He changed the game again, added the board and tried to sell it as "Cris Cross Words" in 1938, but the toy industry said, in Butts' words, "nothing doing."

While Criss Cross Words languished, the building business began to boom. Butts abandoned games to return to architecture, designing housing developments in New York City.

After making the rounds of Butts' family and acquaintances, the game eventually came to the attention of a Danbury, Conn., bookseller. Butts says he was so disenchanted by this time that he agreed to have the game marketed in the bookstore on condition that the owner would produce the sets himself, with a small royalty to Butts.

It was in that bookstore that James Brunot, a New York City businessman, saw the game and decided he wanted it for what Butts called "his little business in the country."

Brunot tossed around a number of names for the game but the evolution of the word "Scrabble" is a mystery to Butts.

"At the time, it seemed strange. But now when we say Scrabble, we think of, well, Scrabble," Butts says.

Brunot built Scrabble sets from his home at the rate of about 200 a year for two years.

Butts says "word of mouth" led to a Scrabble boom, and Brunot opened a small plant. He also spruced up the looks of the game, switching from the block-style tiles to the smooth German-produced tiles that are used today.

In 1949, Brunot and Butts sold the game, for an undisclosed sum, to the Selchow & Righter Co.

Showdown At Hand For Saloon Owner

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A timeworn Irish saloon with an owner who won't sell it to make way for a $300 million downtown renewal project now faces condemnation by the city council, Mayor Richard Carver says.

But Matthew Ryan, owner of Gorman's Twin Tower Tap, says he'll fight in court to keep his working class bar where he wants it. The City Council meets tonight to consider the issue.

Developer Raymond Becker, who wants to build a twin-tower high-rise on the block, last week sent a letter to Carver saying he can't reach agreement with Ryan over a selling price. Becker wants the city to vote to condemn the property.

Carver says he's convinced the builder and saloonkeeper have reached an "irreversible impasse" and that the city is likely to vote to condemn Ryan's tavern.

"I hate to have to see this resolved by the City Council," said Carver. "I had hoped for long time that this could be resolved by the private parties."

The saloon stands alone in the heart of Peoria's downtown urban renewal. The remainder of the block where Becker wants to build his $30 million high-rise has been leveled and cleared.

It also stands in the shadow of City Hall and across the street from the nearly completed $60 million civic center.

Ryan contends the city has right to condemn his property for a private development and has vowed to take the issue to court if the council decides Tuesday to take his saloon.

"Neither Mayor Carver, Gen. Becker nor their huge platoon of hired guns will be sitting on the jury," said Ryan.

That statement prompted 42 residents of New Dundee to erect a billboard outside this town of about 1,000 that reads: "Welcome to Dire Straits."

The group, plus one dog, then assembled to have their picture taken and sent it to Ottawa, the nation's capital.

"The other 960 people couldn't afford gas to get out here," quipped one resident who declined to be identified. "If we're not in Dire Straits now, I don't know who is."

Dire Straits Tests Trudeau

NEW DUNDEE, Ontario (AP) — Residents of this community say they want to find out whether Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau keeps his word.

Trudeau said last week that because of record high interest rates and rising energy costs, federal economic assistance "would be very narrowly directed to those in absolute dire straits."

That statement prompted 42 residents of New Dundee to erect a billboard outside this town of about 1,000 that reads: "Welcome to Dire Straits."

The group, plus one dog, then assembled to have their picture taken and sent it to Ottawa, the nation's capital.

"The other 960 people couldn't afford gas to get out here," quipped one resident who declined to be identified. "If we're not in Dire Straits now, I don't know who is."

Techniques See Change In Dentistry

CHICAGO (AP) — Improving your smile no longer automatically means extensive dental treatment with crowns or caps placed on your front teeth. Instead, there are other dental techniques which offer affordable and practical alternatives, an American Dental Association scientist suggests.

Modern aesthetic procedures may be the answer if your problem is teeth that are seriously stained, or gaps or chipped areas, or defects in the tooth's enamel, according to Dr. John Stanford of Chicago, secretary of the ADA's council on dental material, instruments and equipment.

When teeth are badly discolored, perhaps as the result of childhood use of certain antibiotics for high fever treatment, bleaching may be an effective therapy. Lightening teeth darkened by age or hereditary factors can also be accomplished through bleaching, and in many cases even dark-yellow or orange-brown teeth can be improved, he said.

If imperfections of your front teeth such as cracks or chips bother you, a technique called "bonding" is gaining increasing popularity. In this process, color-matched composite resin plastics are used to fill in or paint over imperfections to the point of totally reshaping the tooth. It's a relatively quick and inexpensive procedure, Stanford said.

Although bonding, also known by its scientific name as "acid etch technique," has been in use for about 10 years, its value was formally recognized in 1972 when the ADA first granted provisional acceptance of plastic resin materials. These materials, known as pit and fissure sealants, were used on children's back teeth to seal them off against cavities, he explained.

When bonding is used to improve the aesthetics in certain patients, it offers three key advantages over the conventional crowning technique, Stanford points out.

First, the average fee for bonding generally runs about one-third to one-half the price of a crown. Second, with bonding, four of a patient's front teeth could probably be treated in a single visit, compared with three or four visits for just one crown. Third, bonding may not involve drilling and therefore would not cause any discomfort.

On the other hand, the resin material may wear off or discolor and the process may need to be repeated in a few years, Stanford said. It is also sometimes difficult to achieve the right color match.

While more expensive and requiring more visits to the dental office, crowns are more permanent and may still be the recommended treatment in many cases.

For very badly misshapen front teeth, still another technique using thin acrylic shells or veneers may hold promise in certain cases, Stanford notes.

The tooth-shaped acrylic shells are shaded to match adjoining teeth or to blend with the patient's complexion. The shells are attached to the front surface of the tooth using the bonding technique and a composite resin material, Stanford explains.

More Than Half Use Cable TV

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — A survey of households with television says more than half of the homes with cable television available in their area took advantage of the service.

Opinion Research Corp., a private market research company, said its representatives surveyed 975 households nationwide with working televisions and found that 573, or 59 percent, had cable TV available to them. More than half of the respondents without access to cable said they would be likely to subscribe if it became available.

'Managed' Time Seen Best Path

By JAMES V. HEALION WESTPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Some achievers attain satisfaction in their personal life for the same reason they are successful in their work. They set clear goals and organize to meet them. It sounds like common sense, yet it isn't common practice.

Dr. James Steffen, a time management consultant to several Fortune 500 companies, first pinpointed the incongruity, then developed a system so that people could try to strike the right balance. It is aimed at making them more valuable to their companies and to their families. At the same time, he almost guarantees that people who use his method will enjoy worry-free leisure. They won't feel guilty about having a good time, which he says figures in many a lost weekend because people's thoughts are back at their place of employment. Or because they failed to plan their leisure time as they have their work.

If a person's business and personal life aren't in balance, Steffen says, a marriage breakup will be the likely consequence over the long haul. "When it comes time and the home life starts to decay that, in turn, has an effect on business life and sometimes it can be very detrimental," Steffen said.

Or if a person totally shuts down his or her personal life and becomes a "workaholic" at the expense of the family, it can become a profit for the business. But "workaholics" drive themselves and there's no satisfaction. They can't relax. They die an early death. "We're not only talking about a tragic thing, we're talking about something that I think costs companies enormous amounts of money when people don't have the right balance in their lives.

"The use of some very simple principles can bring this whole thing back into balance. I maintain there are some simple time management tools that once you understand them, they become common sense," he said. He suggests people start with clear goals and then write them down to clarify them. The next step is to keep the goals in mind and review them regularly. An important thing is to keep track of them, and Steffen provides pocket notebooks for the purpose. "Write it down" is his motto.

The key in his program is to "Do The Most Important Now," most of the time — not just in business, but across the board. "It can have a tremendous impact on your personal life."

As an illustration, he told of interrupting his business day to have lunch with his wife and three children, which he first considered a "horrendous" imposition. But then he realized that was the most important thing he had to do, did it, and felt better for it.

He said most people understand the concept behind "getting the job done first," but what takes a little time is for some to understand it is how "doing the most important now" can fit into their personal lives.

It fits just fine into Steffen's. "On Saturday afternoon when I sit down to watch the television — I graduated from Notre Dame with a degree in football and mathematics in that order — I want to do the most important now," Steffen, 49, said.

"If it's time to have a beer, I have a beer. If it's time to take a nap, I take a nap. I want to do it freely. When I wake up I don't want to feel guilty about it.

"This demands that I have my life lined up pretty clear. That demands I have my values pretty clear. That's why I call my system, 'The Ultimate Time Organizer.'"

Steffen lays out his program during one-day seminars, which are coordinated by his staff in a converted barn that serves both as his office and his home in this commuting suburb near New York City.

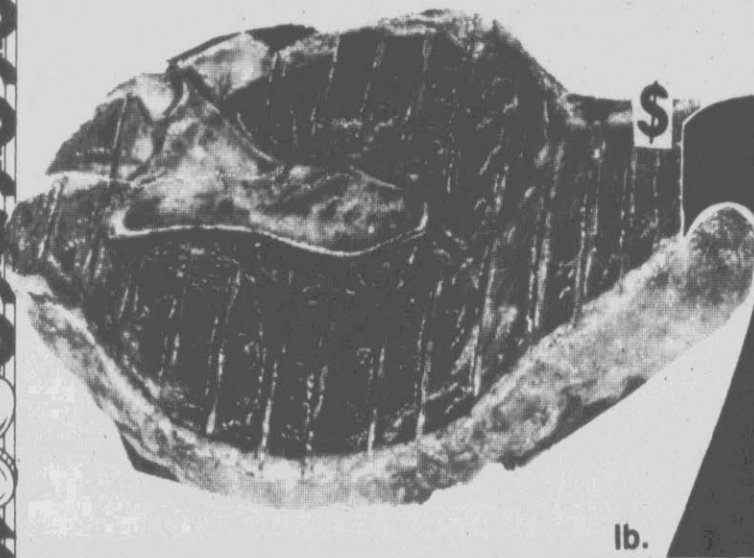

He said some people run into trouble with his program because they don't clearly understand it.

Ahead: New Horizons Theme Of 1981 Fair

The American Legion posts which own the Pitt County Fair have watched the annual event blossom and develop into a major attraction, and the officials have every reason to believe that their 1981 production will be the finest ever.

Realizing that a fair should mirror the life of the area it represents, the Posts have been putting profits of the fall event back into the fair. On the new fairgrounds, they have watched the development of a center that is used more than just one week as a fair—more and more organizations are utilizing the facilities for their activities.

And that's the way the fair officials want it to be. They would like nothing more than to see the facility used every week, used in a way that benefits the entire area.

Under the leadership of Connor Eagles and due to his work with the help of Lester Turnage and others, the fair has constructed a farm community that goes back more than a century. In it are artifacts and old farm tools and equipment of yesteryear, and a reconstructed log cabin home, school and church. The museum is the center of attraction.

Special days have been scheduled, with consideration given to the senior citizens and handicapped children. Wednesday has been designated as Senior Citizens' Day, and all of that special group will be admitted free up to 11:30 a.m. A special program is planned, and refreshments will be served.

On Thursday, handicapped children will be guests. There will be special demonstrations, rides, and refreshments.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

PITT COUNTY AGRICULTURAL FAIR
Greenville, N. C.

Leroy James, Director of Exhibits, Men's Division

Ms. Addie Gore, Director of Exhibits, Women's Division

1. The Pitt County American Legion Agricultural Fair, Inc., is not responsible for loss, injury, theft or damage by fire, lightning, wind, or any agency, for any exhibit made. All exhibits in all Departments, and otherwise, are accepted only with that understanding.
2. Exhibitors in all departments must have their products entered and ready for exhibition in building by 5 p.m., Monday, Sept. 28, except in the Floral Department and Home Cooked Products as provided for.
3. No livestock or poultry exhibits can be taken from grounds until after 9 a.m., Saturday, October 3, except as is necessary to meet the Hog Cholera Eradication Program. This rule will be rigidly enforced.
4. No exhibits in Exhibit Building can be taken out until after Saturday night. Exhibit Building will be open Sunday, October 4, from 2:00-5:00 p.m. for this purpose.
5. Only products listed in the Department will receive premiums.
6. Produce or exhibits, except in the Livestock Department, that were exhibited at any previous Pitt County Fair will not be accepted.
7. No unworthy article will be awarded a premium. Where there is only one entry in a class, only second premium will be awarded.
8. All protests made by exhibitors will be considered by the Management, and its decision will be final.
9. All exhibits must be produced in Eastern North Carolina.
10. Only one entry per class will be accepted—except as provided in the Livestock and Poultry Departments.
11. No unworthy booth or exhibit will be awarded a premium.
12. Exhibitors will not be allowed in Exhibit Hall during judging.
13. All exhibits must be picked up by Monday afternoon, Oct-5, by 5 p.m. Anything not picked up will be disposed of at the discretion of the Fair Manager.

EXTENSION HOMEMAKERS CLUBS

Miss Addie R. Gore, Home Economics Extension Agent

Mrs. Evelyn L. Spangler, Home Economics Extension Agent

Directors

The Home Economics Division of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, North Carolina State University at Raleigh, has grown from the original canning clubs to a broader adult education program for the homemaker. It reflects the needs of contemporary living, with emphasis on consumer education, management, and family economics. Included are all phases of homemaking: Foods and Nutrition, Clothing and Textiles, Housing and House Furnishings, Home Finances, and Human Development. Each is equally important in developing a well-balanced home in which happy, healthy people are to live. Emphasis is also being placed on Community Service, Safety, Citizenship, Education, Health, and Cultural Arts. The newest research findings in Home Economics apply to both rural and urban homemakers. Educational Exhibits this year are planned in an effort to promote the total Home Economics Extension Program.

Organizations connected with the Extension Homemaker Programs in Pitt County are eligible to have nine exhibits, each 8x8 feet.

IMPORTANT: Entries must be made by 3 p.m., Monday, of Fair Week.

Lowe's Pricing Policy:

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

ALL Sears made-to-measure draperies

Select from a huge variety of sale-priced fabrics including sheers, open-weaves, antique satins and textured weaves! Solids or patterns, lined or unlined, we'll make draperies to fit your exact measurements.

HERE'S HOW TO MEASURE FOR YOUR DRAPERIES

When standard drapery rods are used, measure rod width from bracket to bracket. Add number of inches rod projects multiplied by 2. Add 4 inches for center overlap. For length, measure from the top of rod to desired length. Drapery should extend 1/2-inch above rod. For decorative traverse rod, measure from eye of carrier ring to desired length.
