Tobacco Supporters Are Shaken By Peanuts Vote

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said today it is unclear whether backers of the government's complex and restrictive tobacco price support program will be able to head off efforts to end it.

"It's close, too," Helms, a Republican from tobacco-rich North Carolina, said before the Senate resumed debate on the multi-billion dollar, four-year package of commodity price support programs.

His pessimism was prompted by the Senate's narrow vote just a day earlier for substantial changes in the peanut program.

Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., is pushing to effectively eliminate the tobacco price support program, which has been operated in much the same manner as the peanut program.

Helms claimed the peanut program revisions were carried by milk interests in retaliation for his backing of major cuts in dairy supports.

"They may have bought themselves a peck of trouble," Helms warned, adding that he has heard "rumors" that there could be an attempt to block passage of the entire farm bill through a filibuster.

The peanut program adopted by the Senate on Wednesday strips the acreage allotments that have given control of the 16-state peanut crop to just 59,100 allotment holders.

It still concentrates production of the most valuable peanuts in the hands of current growers, but it would open up production to everyone for the first time in 40 years. Under the current peanut program, those without allotments are subject to substantial government fines for growing peanuts.

"This is the result of a new wave, a new desire for a method of agriculture that will open the markets here at home and abroad," said Sen. Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., author of the peanut measure. "It will open up the freedom for people to grow crops in the United States."

The Senate action came despite the fact that Agriculture Secretary John Block had backed away from the changes even though he had proposed similar ones months ago. He was doing so, he said, because of commitments the administration made to some members of Congress for support on budget cuts.

Supporters of the current peanut program, led by Helms, contended that the production restrictions are necessary to ensure stability of price and supply. They also argued that traditional price support programs relying on loans while a crop is in storage won't work because of the semi-perishable nature of peanuts.

Mattingly's victory Wednesday on a close 51-47 vote on an amendment marked the second major setback for commodity interests since the Senate this week began its still-continuing debate on the new multi-billion dollar, four-year package of farm price support programs.

Further Slashes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is proposing $16 billion in further spending cuts for 1982 that include delaying cost-of-living increases in Social Security and other benefit programs and abolishing the departments of Education and Energy, government sources say.

The latest round of budget cuts was ordered by Reagan in response to new projections that the deficit for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is ballooning beyond initial estimates. Reagan is expected to announce the package early next week.

Sources said the new cuts would defer the annual, automatic cost-of-living increase in monthly payments for Social Security recipients from July 1, 1982, until Oct. 1, 1982.

This step was proposed by the administration earlier this year. On Tuesday, White House spokesman David Gergen said Reagan was planning no further Social Security reductions for 1982 beyond those already proposed.

The sources said that automatic cost-of-living increases also would be delayed for such programs as food stamps, veterans benefits and civilian and military pensions. The moves would save an estimated $5 billion in 1982.

Reagan appeared to confirm the cost-of-living delays during a brief question-and-answer session during a photo session today.

Asked if he were going to cut Social Security, the president said, "Well, this is a slippage... But we're going to cut all pensions." Reporters at the session understood him to be talking about the reported delays he would like in granting cost-of-living increases in various federal benefit programs that contain the escalation clauses.

Personal Income Climbs; People Are Spending It

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' personal income kept growing strongly in August — rising 1.1 percent — and they kept spending the extra money, the Commerce Department reported today.

The report appeared to show that most consumers — unlike home buyers, auto shoppers and others restrained by high interest rates — are still relatively unaffected by the slowdown in interest-sensitive areas of the economy.

As usual, much of the 1.1 percent income gain was eaten away by inflation during the month, but just how much won't be known until the government releases its August inflation figures next week.

Inflation has been rising again recently, but so far this year is still running well behind last year's 12.4 percent pace.

Personal income gained

$26.9 billion in August to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $2.45 trillion, while personal spending increased $27.1 billion — or 1.4 percent — to a rate of $1.94 trillion, the report said.

And the new income gain came without the big increases in Social Security payments that had pushed July's rate up 1.5 percent over June.

With the big increase in August spending, personal saving declined 5.3 percent to an annual rate of $108 billion.

Politburo Warns Union Of Bloodshed Danger

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The independent union Solidarity accused Poland's ruling Politburo of "lack of realism" today and said it will not be provoked by the Communist Party's strongest attack yet on the labor federation.

"Solidarity appeals to all working people, without regard to their membership in the party or union, for unity and peace," said the statement issued by national union spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz. "We do not accept the scenario of provocation."

The Politburo warned Wednesday of the possibility of "confrontation threatening bloodshed" and declared it would use all means to prevent Solidarity from seizing political power in Poland.

The Politburo said Solidarity had embarked on a course of "building an opposition political organization which openly set itself the goal of changing the political system of Poland."

In its first comment since the union's national congress adjourned last week, the Politburo said that Solidarity had "unilaterally broken" the agreements that launched it during widespread labor unrest last summer.

But Solidarity said resolutions adopted by the congress, including a call for a national referendum on the issue of worker self-management, was "in accordance with constitutional law."

"The last Politburo statement is a manifestation of the lack of realism," Solidarity said.

The labor federation said the "true subject of conflict which has been growing over the past few weeks have been the activities undertaken by our union in the face of progressing economic ruin."

Solidarity stressed that its drive for control over production and distribution of food and consumer goods and its push for worker reforms at the factory level were launched by concern "with removing the threat of hunger."

Du Pont Lawyers Walk Out At NLRB Hearing

By SKIP WOLLENBERG

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A

dispute over who should decide the terms of a certification election is halting National Labor Relations Board hearings on union organizing at 16 Du Pont Co. plants in eight states.

Peter Eide, a hearing officer from the NLRB's regional office, adjourned a hearing indefinitely Wednesday after Du Pont lawyers questioned the legitimacy of the proceeding and walked out.

At issue was a petition by the United Steelworkers of America, which wants to become the bargaining agent for about 15,000 workers at the Du Pont plants.

The steelworkers filed the petition July 31, asking that they be certified as the representative of all 16 plants either in a single bargaining unit or individually. The case was assigned to the Baltimore regional office.

On Monday, union lawyers asked that the multiplant bargaining unit proposal be dropped and that the hearing proceed on the second proposal.

Du Pont objected, saying that the multiplant petition was a ploy to obtain a single hearing in an NLRB region distant from many of the plants. The company asked that the entire petition be dismissed.

The dismissal petition is being reviewed by the NLRB regional director in Baltimore and it is uncertain when a decision will be reached.

In the meantime, Du Pont's lawyer, Peter D. Walther, asked Wednesday that any further action on the case be postponed until the dismissal request is decided.

He said NLRB procedures provide for separate hearings within each appropriate region on terms of a certification election, and said the Baltimore regional office should not be making decisions on possible elections outside its territory.

Eide refused to postpone the hearing, and asked lawyers for both sides to return after a lunch break to begin discussions on a plant-by-plant basis.

After the break, Walther said the company had "no intention to participate" in what it felt was an illegal proceeding.

He said the company, meanwhile, would file petitions with the appropriate NLRB regional offices for separate certification elections.

With that, he closed his briefcase and walked out of the room to the cheers of about 25 to 30 steelworkers' sympathizers.

Carl B. Frankel, the union's assistant general counsel, told Eide he felt the hearing should continue.

"Obviously, we are very unhappy and disappointed," he said.

But Eide called for an adjournment until the dismissal request is decided.

AWAC Sale Is Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig suggested to Congress today that if it vetoes the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia "our security, the security of Israel and peace itself" might be endangered.

Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that the sale is key to the U.S. strategy of forging defense cooperation with countries from Turkey to Pakistan to deter Soviet threats.

"And to deter major Soviet threats, for which the U.S. role is indispensable, we also need the help of our friends," Haig testified.

"That is the reason why we are pursuing intensified strategic cooperation with Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and many other concerned countries," he said.

"Unless we are able to work effectively with all of our friends in the region," he said later, "our security, the security of Israel and peace itself will be endangered."

And Haig said the sale of radar planes and jet-fighter weaponry to the Saudis is needed to gain their defense cooperation.

"Our proposals to enhance the security of Saudi Arabia are a key element in our Middle East policy."

Many Casualties Due Explosions In Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An explosion ripped through the regional headquarters of the Palestine Liberation Organization at Sidon today, killing at least 20 people and wounding 75 others, on-scene reports said.

Another blast killed 10 people at Chekka in northern Lebanon, it was reported.

Witnesses said the explosion at Sidon, a Mediterranean port city, was caused by two bomb-trapped cars and sent window glass flying 500 yards. But Lebanon's state radio reported the blast was caused by a truck rigged with 265 pounds of dynamite.

An anonymous telephone caller speaking in Arabic said a rightist group called the "Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Aliens" was responsible for both blasts, according to the Agence France-Presse news agency here. Little is known about the group, which has claimed responsibility for previous bombings against the PLO and leftist targets and says it seeks to drive out the PLO and Syrian peacekeeping forces.

The PLO and leftist Moslem militias issued a statement saying Israeli terrorists set off the Sidon blast and listed 300 killed or wounded without giving a breakdown.

Associated Press reporter

Edmond Shedid in Sidon said the explosion leveled the seven-story headquarters and damaged eight neighboring apartment buildings. He said the explosion occurred just 50 minutes before PLO officials and Lebanese leftist militia were to convene a meeting.

Shedid said he counted 20 bodies being taken out of the rubble. The privately owned Voice of Lebanon said 35 people died and 80 were wounded.

The state radio said at least 10 bodies were dug out from the rubble of the building which houses the military operations regional command of the PLO in southern Lebanon.

The broadcast said the wounded were rushed to hospitals in Sidon and to Beirut, about 30 miles to the north.

The rightist "Voice of Lebanon" radio station reported 10 workers killed and

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

A lot of mothers I know are downright meddling when it comes to their children's selection of a boyfriend or a girlfriend.

They want to know how old, how tall, what their father does, where they live, the scope of their education, what their plans are for the future, and how they feel about children.

I don't care about any of those things. All I want to know is, "Is he or she a local call or a toll?"

I don't remember names or faces of old flames. All I remember is their area code. One of my sons once dated an area code 513 for six months. It was marriage by Ma Bell. I figured we were spending $35 a month to share such insights as:

"What are you doing?"

"Nothing, what are you doing?"

"I don't want to interrupt you if you're doing something."

"I told you I wasn't doing anything."

"You sure?"

"I'm sure."

"So, what's new?"

Another one of my kids showed an interest in a lovely girl who lived just a few miles from us. It was great. I didn't have to worry about a deep involvement because they were never off the phone. He set his alarm to call her in the morning. At night I used to go in and remove the phone from his ear as he slept. It was like hanging up an umbilical cord. As soon as they left one another at school in the afternoon they would shout, "I'll call you when I get home."

I offered to feed him intravenously.

The suggestion by my husband to put a timer by the phone with sand running through was ridiculous. However, I did slip a calendar under his door and circle the month.

Panic didn't set in until one day when I was standing near and saw him dial "1."

"Who are you calling?" I asked.

"You know," he said, "The same person I've been talking with for the last month."

"But I thought she was a local call."

"Don't worry," he said. "It only costs about eight cents a minute. Besides, this isn't just some silly kid infatuation. This is a person I genuinely care for and want to spend the rest of my life with. She's important to me. She's special and there isn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

"I'm glad to hear you say that," I said, "because according to the phone bill you owed us $36.86 in long distance charges."

I learned something that day. When toll charges enter the room... love goes right out the window.

Dear Abby

Mother Spoiling for Fight With 'Devoted' Grandma

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of an adorable 2-year-old I'll call "Karla." Ever since her birth, the relationship between my mother-in-law and me has deteriorated until I can barely tolerate her.

"Gamma" bought Karla's entire layette, furnished her room, and has clothed her from diapers to christening dress to snowsuits and swimsuits. Before I can save the money to buy something special for Karla, it is purchased, gift-wrapped and delivered! If I resist, I get the old "What are grandmothers for?" Every weekend Gamma calls and asks if she can baby-sit. When I let her come, she changes Karla's clothes every two hours, combs her hair a different way, and when Gamma leaves she is in near tears because she will miss "her" baby.

When Gamma is around, whatever Karla wants, Karla gets. Naturally, Karla loves having Gamma around.

All this makes me feel so inadequate and unneeded. When I complain to my husband, he refuses to "take sides." Next year he will graduate from college. (His mother is paying for his education, too.) He will have a degree, enabling him to relocate anywhere he wants to go. Do I have the right to give him an ultimatum — either we move at least 10 hours away from his mother, or I take Karla and move without him?

He is blind to the way his mother manipulates us. She has bought her way into our lives and I am sick of it! Please help me.

SMOTHERED IN MAINE

DEAR SMOTHERED: Don't issue any ultimatums unless you are prepared to leave your husband. Some firm ground rules must be established concerning the limits of what Gamma may and may not do, but you can't do it alone. This is a family affair that will require professional family counseling. Please get it. All of you! Your marriage depends on it.

DEAR ABBY: I am 12 years old. My grandfather died before I was born and my grandmother lived alone for 13 years. She got married again four years ago. Here is my problem. What shall I call her husband? Should I call him "Grandpa," or should I call him "Harold," which is his name?

I haven't been calling him anything so far because I'm not sure what to call him.

NOT SURE IN GEORGIA

DEAR NOT: Ask your grandmother's husband what he wants you to call him. Or ask your grandmother what she thinks he'd like to be called.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any help for a mother who shampoos and cuts her 30-year-old son's hair, and asks her womer friends, all in their 50s, to take turns sitting on his patio so his neighbors will think there are "women" in his life?

This son of hers has never had a date in his life. She takes him on bus trips with her Farm Women's groups. He has no social life at all with people his age because his mother is always lining him up to chauffeur elderly, wealthy couples on trips to nearby points of interest.

He teaches school and is obedient to his mother, who keeps reminding him that she won't be around forever. Yes, he has a father, but he is spineless.

This young man is my nephew, a gentle, pleasant soul who is totally victimized by his neurotic mother. I have never interfered and do not intend to. I am just interested in knowing your thoughts.

PUZZLED IN VERMONT

DEAR PUZZLED: My thoughts: The mother appears to be loving, well-intentioned, though somewhat overprotective. The son appears to be obedient and content with his life. And as long as they're happy, the only puzzle I see is why you want my thoughts.

DEAR ABBY: I would like your opinion of something my fiance said last night. I asked him if he had ever changed a baby's diaper, and he replied, "Absolutely not; the thought of it repulses me!"

Abby, I am not saying that this particular task should be shared equally between us, but I would like to think that if we had a child and I happened to be away for a few hours, my husband would change our baby's diaper if necessary. What do you think?

DECEMBER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: I think there should be some changes made before you have children. And for openers, one should be your fiance's attitude.

Someone told me at a party awhile back that there was a man there who was not writing a book.

I didn't believe it at first. Everyone in the world is writing a book. Then I saw a small quiet man literally held captive by a group of people around him and figured it just might be true.

When the crowd had thinned out, I tested him. "Ever have a writer's block?" "Only a local anesthetic," he shouted back. "What's an agent?" I asked. "Someone who works for the FBI." "Ever heard of McGraw-Hill?" "Are they sex therapists?" he asked.

The man was obviously as clean as an 8 1/2-by-11 sheet of manuscript paper.

I could hardly wait to talk to him.

"What made you decide not to write a book?" I asked.

"When I realized I had nothing to say."

"How long have you been working at not writing?"

"Well," he said, "I got the idea about three years ago. All my friends talked about not writing a book, but noone ever really did it. They all warned me it would take a lot of discipline not to come home and sit down at a typewriter, but I was determined not to do it.

"They warned me when I would go out I'd have nothing to talk about with anyone. For a couple of years, they were right. People would sav. 'How's your book coming?" and I'd say 'I'm not writing one,' and they'd ask, 'You stuck on the title?' and I'd reply, 'I don't have a title' and they'd move away."

I had to admire the sheer guts of the man.

"Isn't it a great temptation to write a book?"

"I fight it all the time," he said. "Especially when I run across a diet that works for me or I remember things from my childhood that I want to share."

I had to admit I had never known a man like him. In a world of cab drivers who had a manuscript in the glove compartment, 12-year-old children writing their memoirs, and Miss Piggy who was sitting comfortably on the N.Y. Times best-seller list, he was a breath of fresh air.

I hadn't thought about him at all until last week when I passed a row of paperbacks and saw, "I Am Not Writing a Book," by who else but my hero.

That devil. He had a title all the time.

O'Connor Is Qualified

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor ... It has a nice ring.

Mrs. O'Connor, in years past, would have been marked as a "token" as she apparently will be the first woman to sit on the U.S. Supreme Court. But her confirmation hearings have shown that her qualifications go far beyond her sex.

Senate confirmation hearings—a tradition that has proved wise but often has been subjected to abuse—have brought out a fairness and a sense of discipline that should be welcomed by all. Mrs. O'Connor repeatedly has given personal opinions, but has refused to "rule" on hypothetical court cases or to second-guess previous court decisions. Rightfully so, she has maintained such matters should be reserved for actual judicial deliberation.

Example: she told the senators that she abhors abortion, but she refused to say how she might vote on an abortion case should one come before the court. She also declined to comment on her views of the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that legalized abortion.

A child should consult with her parents before she has an abortion, Mrs. O'Connor said, but she said parental permission should not be mandatory.

And in a cheery note to conservatives, Mrs. O'Connor said she opposes forced busing to achieve school desegregation, favors the death penalty and thinks it is "inappropriate" for women to participate in combat.

Mrs. O'Connor said she sees her job on the court as "one of interpreting and applying the law, not making it."

With such justices this country again can return to its historical separation of powers.

National Merit Semi-Finalists

Eleven high school seniors from Pitt County were announced Wednesday as semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholarship competition.

The list included ten from Rose High and one from D. H. Conley High School.

In the spring of next year about 90 percent of the semi-finalist will advance to the finalists ranks and they will receive National Merit Scholarships.

It is encouraging that this number of Pitt County students are in the running for National Merit Scholarships. They represent the top half of one percent of the state's high school senior classes.

We are pleased to see this indication of the caliber of scholars in our area schools.

Agencies Eye Cuts

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—Suppose you were the chief of a welfare department. A woman with a lap baby, a hand-holder, and another on the way comes in for help.

The federal government has just chopped at social-welfare programs which have been the foundation of supporting the poor since the mid-1960s.

You have a choice. Tell the poor woman with hungry kids there isn't enough money; or, leave some jobs on the agency payroll unfilled, cut back on staff travel and seminar-going, and get hopping on the long neglected task of nailing any applicants who don't need help so that waste and fraud will be cut and the truly needy can get the money.

In reality, that is the choice which now faces the line agencies across North Carolina who exist to serve the poor.

Easy Choice
The choice is obviously quite easy. It is clear that the federal government budget cuts which have been denounced so bitterly by a chorus of state and local officials as cutting to the bone the efforts to help poor people don't really cut that deeply at all.

Indeed, if you pick carefully through the laundry list of federal aid programs which have proliferated for years and brought the nation to the brink of bankruptcy, you will find that those severely cut were those which have borderline impact on poverty. Much-criticized employment training programs which resulted in little success putting people in real-world jobs and fell back on made-work employment in low-level government jobs are hard hit. Eligibility rules are tightened up for food stamps, medical care and such. Several planning and administrative functions are entirely eliminated.

Free meals at school for the poor are not touched. In fact, there is an increase. The loss in that category is that the subsidy money underwriting food for those who pay is cut so that paying students will have to put up 10 or 20 cents more.

The screaming was loud and the predictions of people dying in the streets were hysterical when the cutting started. It turns out that North Carolina is not losing the $300 million a year in federal funds which critics predicted. The state is losing $120 million the first fiscal year, and the projected loss the second year is $172 million. But bear in mind that the second-year loss figure is based on a level of federal funding which planners had hoped would continue to go ever upward; not a more realistic one based on cutting.

Not Disastrous
The bottom line is that North Carolina is losing less than 10 percent of the federal money it is used to. Only $120 million of the $1.5 billion in

To the editor:

Your report of the September 14 city school board meeting used quotations which may cause a misunderstanding of the issue which I raised concerning the grouping at Greenville Middle School.

The issue about about which I am concerned is the procedure instituted this year at the middle school of grouping together in the same class students with heterogeneous achievement levels. This is evidenced by groups in which student CAT scores range from percentile scores in the 40's to the 99th percentile.

Whether or not CAT scores should be used in grouping may be an important question, but it was not the one I raised. My reference to the CAT scores was made only because they were the academic measure used for placement.

Charles E. Garrison

To the editor:

September has been designated as Sickle Cell Anemia Month. Sickle cell anemia is an inherited disease that strikes one out of every 500 black Americans. It currently affects more than 50,000 Americans and more than 2.5 million have the trait.

Sickle cell has been around for thousands of years. It developed in Africa and India. The trait helped protect people against malaria. It is only since the civil rights movement of the 1960's that national attention has been given to this killer disease that has crippled so many Americans.

In an egalitarian society, such as ours with its religious origins, the notion that one life is worth more than another seems abhorrent, yet this is precisely what a society says when life-saving medical research and resources have been denied certain people because of who they are in society. Sickle cell is a disease that mainly strikes blacks, but it is every bit as real as cancer or tuberculosis. Millions of dollars are spent yearly for the cure and eradication of these diseases, and that's marvelous, but just as much attention should be placed on sickle cell anemia. So far, there is no cure for this disease. Congress has voted to spend $105 million for research, education and testing, but thus far, this money has not been spent.

Sickle cell anemia is not contagious and can be controlled by proper prescription drugs, surgery and varied medications. Sickle cell victims should take good care of their health with proper diet, rest, and hygiene, moderate exercise, and avoidance of stress like colds and fatigue.

What can you do? Spread the word about sickle cell—how it's inherited and treatable.

Be tested and make sure your loved ones are tested.

Know where to go for help, if needed, especially your local health department. Potential parents with the trait may need counseling.

Support research and education to solve this enemy of mankind.

British Royal Rations

NEW YORK (AP)—The menu cover at the posh and overpriced upper Broadway beanyery boasted "meals fit for a king."

And sure enough there was a portrait of jowly old Henry VIII jamming his jaws with the brisket of beef he allegedly (meaning Hampton Court press agents dreamed this one up) tapped with his sword and knighted with the command, "Arise Sir Loin."

One gets inured to the hyperbole of restaurateurs exaggerating their accomplishments beyond the findings of the last Board of Health inspection, but for once truth in advertising may have coincided with the hype.

Meals fit for a king would have to include roast bustard, braised swan, lark pie and seagull stew, all favorites of the aforementioned Henry VIII, who like many sovereign trenchermen was more of a glutton than a gourmet.

Let's face it, royal rations have seldom been anything to write home about. And certainly not at today's post-age prices.

I don't want to seem ungrateful, but I speak as one who was a guest at the queen's most recent garden party on the lawn of Buckingham Palace.

According to Debrett's "Etiquette and Modern Manner," the bible of raised pinkies and place-card protocol in the mother country, the "traditional garden party is essentially a buffet tea with alcoholic refreshments." The only exception is a royal garden party. No booze is served in the backyard bash at Buckingham. Not a drop. No one even gets a cup of tea or crumpet or a watercress sandwich the size of a tube ticket until her royal majesty and her retinue head toward the royal tea tent.

And the minute the band of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers (so help me) strikes up "God Save the Queen," a minion in a moth-eaten frock coat bawls out, "All food off the table, no service after the queen." The party's over. It never was much to begin with, unless you happened to be in the right place to shake the hand of a prince or princess royal or bask in the sovereign's wintry blue smile. The food, such as it is, is trucked in by a catering firm that runs a chain of coffee shops and cafeterias throughout the kingdom. On the whole, the culinary standards are perhaps a notch or two above Brixton Prison and Wormwood Scrubs, but the experience palls a trifle when one catches a glimpse of the royal swan keeper feeding fat juicy prawns to the flamingoes in the Buckingham Palace pond to keep their pecks pink.

One wonders where royalty ever got its reputation for haute cuisine.

History definitely is not on the culinary side of the island kingdom that has installed bubble and squeak, Cornish pasties, beans on toast, fish and chips and whelks and whitebait as national delicacies.

Henry I died from eating stewed lampreys. George I died of indigestion, after gorging himself with melons. George II presided over the stingiest court in Europe. Musicians playing at palace functions had to bring their own food. It's no wonder the sandwich was invented during his reign. He had a passion for cold mutton, plovers eggs and stewed peas, and his madness was diagnosed as gout of the brain induced by complications in the digestive tract. After an all-day hunt, the parsimonious George served the royal guests a goblet of barley water. Nothing else. The king feared getting fat.

But his son, the prince regent and later George IV, stuffed himself to such a royal size, thanks to the pastry concoctions of Careme, his French chef at the Brighton pavilion who quit in disgust, he had to be lifted onto his horse from a rolling chair on a specially designed hoist.

Mary Queen of Scots, who never got to the throne of England, had the decency to ban the export of haggis from Scotland. Haggis, a favorite of James I and all the Stuarts except Mary who was raised abroad, is a

Hobby Faces Real Fight

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Just inside the hotel where the AFL-CIO is holding its state convention this week, hawkers offer yellow T-shirts that read, "Defend Labor; Defend Wilbur Hobby."

And just down the hall, a wall is filled with Hobby memorabilia—headlines clipped from old newspapers, letters from politicians who once courted his support, and photographs signed "To Wilbur" from John F. Kennedy, Hubert H. Humphrey and others.

Both the shirts and the mementos are testimony that Hobby—and his familiar jowly, overweight figure—has come to visibly represent organized labor in North Carolina in the minds of many.

For 12 years Hobby has led organized labor in North Carolina, the least unionized of all the states. He won election as president of the state AFL-CIO in 1969, after running and losing three times during the 1950s. And he has kept the job, which pays $28,500 a year, against two challenges from other union members.

But now Hobby, 55, under indictment by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and fraud in the handling of a federal job-training contract, is facing the toughest battle of his 35-year union career.

Opposing him for president is E.A. Britt, 51, a paperworker who was elected to a union office with Hobby's blessing two years ago and who has teamed up with another Hobby challenger, 36-year-old Christopher Scott, in a bid to wrestle away the AFL-CIO reins.

"It looks like it's going to be pretty close," Hobby, wearing one of the T-shirts, said in an interview Wednesday. "The opposition is trying to make it look like a bandwagon, that they have one, and they're putting badges on everyone, even if they don't vote."

Even if he wins, Hobby's future rests largely in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, where he faces trial Dec. 7. The charges stem from the handling of Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds by Precision Graphics, a Hobby-owned company.

But more immediate is the vote of the convention's delegates. The vote is scheduled for Friday following today's nominations, and although Britt and Scott maintain they have enough votes to win the union's two top offices, Hobby insists he is still in the race and will remain until the last vote is cast.

"I think the chance is 50-50 right now," he said. "I previously thought it was a little better than that. But hell no, I'm not withdrawing. I don't run away from nothing."

Hobby has been a highly visible, highly colorful figure in his years of union leadership.

Born and raised in Durham, Hobby got his start in union activity when he went to work at 17 as an oiler in an American Tobacco Co. plant there. A job dispute over how much machinery he had to oil was settled in his favor, he recalls, and gained him attention that led to his election as local chairman a year later.

Hobby quit school after the 9th grade, but later earned his high-school diploma by mail after serving in the Navy during the Korean War. He also studied at Duke University but did not graduate.

Through the 1950s and 1960s, Hobby became involved in both union activity and the Democratic Party. He was active in a coalition of blacks, organized labor and academics that emerged in Durham politics. He worked as regional political director for two union organizations before finally winning the state job.

He's still a member of the Durham tobacco workers' local, and has been on a leave of absence from his factory job for 23 years, he said.

He ran for governor in the 1972 Democratic primary, finishing fourth with just 8 percent of the vote. It was an embarrassment to Hobby and the union, some said, but Hobby calls it "one of the best things I ever did."

"A lot of people didn't even know we had a state AFL-CIO until then," he said.

He ran with the slogan, "Keep the Big Boys Honest," and opponents were quick to turn the slogan on him.

Hobby has built outside interests during that time.

Strength For Today

NATURE OF PRAYER
Prayer is real. It works.

Jesus, the Son of God and the only perfect human being who ever lived, found prayer necessary. How much more, therefore, do we need prayer.

Prayer was one of the chief themes of our Lord's teaching. He seemed to regard prayer as even more essential to his spiritual life than food was to his physical life. The harder he worked, the more he prayed. Before he chose his twelve disciples he spent the entire night in prayer.

He tried to pass on to his disciples a sense of the importance and privilege of prayer. He made it plain that prayer must always be sincere, and that it must be uttered with all the trust and conviction of which one is capable. It must be unselfish, continuous, and passionate.

Prayer has certain unyielding requirements. When these are met, things begin to happen. — Elisha Douglass

Beating For Municipal Bonds

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—Many

types of investments have taken a beating this summer, but few have been as badly battered as tax-free municipal bonds.

Their prices are generally at or near record lows. Some large investing institutions have sworn off buying them. And talk has been heard that the market for long-term municipals might just disappear altogether before long.

It may sound like the classic description of a truly terrible investment. But some venturesome advisers lately have begun to suggest that amid the carnage there may be some great opportunities for investors, even those of modest means.

For months now, municipal bonds have had just about everything going against them. Each rise in interest rates has made existing bonds less attractive, thus depressing their prices.

President Reagan's tax bill, which had something for almost everybody, contained nothing but bad news for municipal bonds.

Tax cuts, first of all, promised to reduce the appeal of municipals' chief distinguishing feature—the exemption from federal income taxes on the interest they pay.

Not only were income taxes generally reduced, but the top tax rate on investment income was lowered from 70 to 50 percent.

At the same time, the bill created the tax-exempt "All Savers" accounts which many banks and savings and loans can offer starting Oct. 1, and extended the option of opening a tax-deferred individual retirement account (IRA) to anyone who collects a paycheck. Both shape up as new competition for the municipal bond market.

With all-savers accounts, unlike municipals, there is no risk of price declines.

And while many types of investments may be added by an influx of money into IRAs, municipals aren't likely to be. In fact, personal-finance experts point out that municipals are unsuitable for IRAs because the benefits of the bonds' tax exemption are lost in such plans.

As if all that weren't enough, Reagan's budget-cutters reduced federal aid to state and local governments—the main issuers of municipal bonds—by $13 billion for the fiscal year beginning next month.

That presumably means that states, cities and towns will have to increase their borrowing, depressing the municipal market with new supplies of securities.

Small wonder, then, that many of the banks and insurance companies which have traditionally been big buyers of municipals are leery of them now. But as the market has fallen to new lows, municipal bond yields have reached unprecedented highs—12, 13, even 15 percent.

Investors desiring long-term instruments to hold until maturity will find extraordinary yields in the tax-free sector," the current issue of the Merrill Lynch Market Letter observes.

Standard & Poor's Corp.'s "The Outlook," an advisory publication with a reputation for caution, issued a study this month that concluded, "we sense that the market for these tax-exempts has by now largely discounted the negatives, is approaching bottom, and presents an opportunity."

"While there is probably no urgency to buy municipals and it would not be prudent to commit all your funds in a sizable one-time purchase, it is our view that initiating a program of periodic bond purchases over the next few months should prove to be a rewarding strategy."

Municipals are most attractive to those with the highest incomes, but even people in the 25 percent tax bracket—making $20,200 to $24,600 a year—can begin to consider them, S&P says.

For those with only a few thousand dollars to invest, brokers, bond dealers and fund groups offer a variety of mutual funds and unit investment trusts specializing in municipals. Minimum initial investments of as little as $1,000

He is an officer and major stockholder in the printing company and another data processing company, and has been involved in other interests, including an investment company and Raleigh office building.

He attracted nearly $1 million in federal contracts for the union, the two corporations he heads and a union-related company. Hobby vigorously defends those contracts, saying it is entirely proper for unions and union leaders to be involved in job-training.

He attributes his legal problems, and the union leadership struggle, to "half-truths and innuendo" by the press, and to "a smear campaign" by political enemies.

The state AFL-CIO supported Gov. Jim Hunt, Labor Commissioner John Brooks and others in the 1976 Democratic primary. One other with Hobby's support was state auditor candidate Lillian Woo, who lost to then-incumbent Henry Bridges, who has since retired.

Hobby contends that Bridges' office, picked over that endorsement, "doctored up" an audit of CETA contracts "and made me look bad."

"I have a signed contract for everything I did," he says of the job-training contracts.

Hobby has also been a frequent target of Republicans, particularly the conservative Congressional Club organization, which flashed his photograph on television ads opposing Hunt last year.

Hobby's union opponents have argued that Hobby doesn't offer the positive image the union organization needs as it seeks to organize amid North Carolina's growing industrialization. But Hobby says they ignore what he considers his accomplishments — gaining increases in maximum workers' compensation insurance benefits and advocating equal union and job opportunities for blacks and women.

But what if he loses? "I don't know," he said. "I could get a job with a lot of different unions. I might just go back to the tobacco factory and work a while. I just don't know."

Federal dollars in the state budget are being trimmed. That's below the amount which the nation's governors said they could live with.

But the moaning continues, this time gaining strength at the local level as line social agencies and service organizations get a close look at just how the cuts will affect them.

Insiders at the State Department of Human Resources say privately that there is enough money to support those who really need welfare aid. When top officials moan that hundreds of thousands face "cuts in services" due to the federal budget action, what they really mean is that state and local bureaucracies are going to have to eliminate some of the jobs in planning, administering, rules-writing, lecturing and such so that the money can go where it is truly needed for the truly needy.

Canterbury, chairman of the Department of Roentgenology of Palmer College of Chiropractic, will conduct seminars for license renewal.

Descendants Hold Reunion

Members of the family of the late Rev. W. H. Laughinghouse, who held a reunion, met for morning worship service on Sunday, September 13 at the Rose Hill Free Will Baptist Church. The sermon was delivered by the Rev. Roger Dixon, a great grandson of Rev. Laughinghouse, pastor of Rose Hill at the time of his death.

Rev. Dixon and his wife, Janice, are missionaries in Indonesia, now home on leave before returning to their post. Also taking part in the service were Rev. Robert Hensley and his wife, Betty Jo Carroll, a granddaughter of Rev. Laughinghouse. The two are missionaries who have just returned from Panama. Another descendant following in the footsteps of Rev. Laughinghouse is Rev. Leon Harris of Ayden, a great grandson.

Following church services, 55 descendants of Rev. Laughinghouse gathered for lunch. With the exception of Mrs. Malissa Rouse, 91, of Winterville, all of Rev.

Laughinghouse's surviving children were present. They included: Mrs. J. J. (Daisy) Carroll, Mrs. L. E. (Wesley) Turnage, Mrs. Lloyd (Lela) Williams, Jesse Laughinghouse and Furney Laughinghouse.

In addition to the role of a family gathering, one item of business was discussed — that of establishing a scholarship fund at Mount Olive College to honor the memory of Rev. Laughinghouse, who spent over 50 years in the ministry. A contribution to the fund was collected at the luncheon.

How to Study? This Seminar Will Help You

Pitt Community College, in cooperation with the Emory University Reading Center, Atlanta, Ga., will sponsor a seminar entitled "College Study Skills." The event will be held at the Willis Building in Greenville on September 23 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dr. Wood Smethurst, director of the Emory Center, will be the instructor.

The seminar is targeted at junior and senior high school and college students. The general public is also invited to participate.

Dr. Smethurst and his colleagues at Emory University have done extensive research in the area of reading and learning. A practical application of this research will be addressed by Dr. Smethurst during this seminar.

Note taking will be one of the topics covered.

The art of listening will be examined with the Emory research showing that sharp improvements in academic performance can often be made by improving the quality of a student's classroom listening and concentration.

Dr. Smethurst will also explore significant distinctions between understanding, learning and memory.

Other important items to be covered in the seminar will be study reading, test taking, writing themes and papers, and time management and planning.

The registration fee for the seminar will be $8 and those who wish to register should call PCC, 756-3130, ext. 238. Registration will also be held at the Willis Building on Sept. 23 at 9 a.m.

Ingram Visits Massachusetts

BOSTON, Mass. — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram, here Tuesday to speak before the National Building Code Conference, also spoke to the Massachusetts Senate before leaving Boston.

Dan Foley, Massachusetts Senate Majority Leader, introduced Ingram to the President of the Senate on Tuesday, who in turn recognized the Commissioner for remarks to the body of lawmakers.

Ingram pointed out North Carolina's pioneering efforts of the Insurance Department's office for the handicapped, and discussed energy conservation techniques of the department's Engineering Division that came shortly after the oil embargo of 1973.

Ingram also met with Massachusetts Gov. Edward J. King, who asked Ingram to send him detailed information on North Carolina's energy saving program.

organizer for the steelworkers, said the walkout "demonstrates that the company's real objective is to thwart and delay in a cynical attempt to deny its employees a vote to choose their collective bargaining representative."

He said the company requests for certification hearings in each region was "just another attempt to delay these elections."

Walther had argued at the hearing, however, that the elections would be near had the union filed for certification at each plant separately in July.

The plants involved are Willow Bank, Germay Industrial Park and Newport in Delaware; Repauno, Newark and Grasselli Works in Linden, N.J.; Cleveland, Ohio; Kingston and Cape Fear-Wilmington, N.C.; Florence, S.C.; Chattanooga, New Johnsonville and Old Hickory-Nashville, Tenn.; Spruance-Richmond, Va.; and Belle and Potomac River, W. Skeleton Is Found, Mystery Remains CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix (AP) — Linemen fixing electric wires damaged by tropical storm Gert found a skeleton of a New Jersey oil executive who mysteriously disappeared four years ago, the medical examiner has announced.

Virgin Islands medical examiner James Glenn said Wednesday that a skeleton found on a steep slope here last Friday is the remains of Mobil Oil Corp. executive Benjamin Pierce Hamilton Jr.

Hamilton, 60, who owned a cottage on the east end of this Caribbean island, had left for a midafternoon walk Aug. 5, 1977, when he disappeared. His wife called for a search after he failed to return, but nothing was discovered.

Hamilton's remains were found beneath high voltage wires slung near the ground at the gap of a craggy sloping hill, 150 feet from his vacation home, Glenn said.

Although the medical examiner did not release an autopsy report, a local realtor who led the three-day search after Hamilton vanished and other former neighbors speculated the death was linked to the high-voltage wires.

The realtor, Robert Bidelspacher, said more than 100 volunteers used hounds brought from the U.S. mainland and Puerto Rico, never thinking to look near the wires.

Hamilton resided in Ramsey, N.J. No details were released on turning the remains over to relatives.

NAACP Suit Challenges N. C. Redistricting Map

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund filed suit Wednesday on behalf of four North Carolina residents challenging the state's congressional and legislative redistricting plans.

The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, challenges the constitutionality of the plans on the grounds they discriminate against blacks and other minorities. It also says the legislative districts fail to conform to the U.S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote principle.

According to a statement from the NAACP, the suit names as defendants state Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, House Speaker Liston Ramsey, the state Board of Elections and its five individual members and Secretary of State Thad Eure.

The plaintiffs — Ralph Gingles, Sippio Burton, Fred Belfield and Joseph Moody — claim the legislators redrew the legislative districts in a way that intentionally dilutes the voting strength of black and other minority voters.

Spokesmen for the Board of Elections and Edmisten said late Wednesday that they had not received copies of the suit.

"I always expect challenges," said Alex Brock, director of the board. "But that doesn't necessarily mean the suit will be successful or that it won't be successful."

By federal mandate, legislative districts must be redrawn every 10 years. State legislators were required to redraw legislative and congressional districts this year to bring them in line with the 1980 census figures.

If successful, the suit would require the state Legislature to revise the districts it drew during the 1981 session to conform to the census.

Civilians File Suit On Office At Fort Bragg

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A class-action lawsuit filed by five civilian employees at Fort Bragg charges the Civilian Personnel Office with discrimination in salaries, placement and promotion against blacks.

The suit names as defendants the Department of the Army and Army Secretary John O. Marsh, and attorneys for the plaintiffs contend it is filed on behalf of more than 400 black civilian workers.

The suit contends that black employees are paid lower salaries than white workers with the same qualifications and time in grade and contends that merit salary increases are given on a racially discriminatory basis.

The suit further contends that blacks are limited and restricted in job placement as well as in promotion and transfers, adding that evaluations and reviews of applications for promotion are based on subjective judgments by management personnel, most of whom are white.

The suit, which has been forwarded to U.S. Judge Franklin Dupree of Raleigh, asks that the court declare the policies and practices of Fort Bragg illegal and unconstitutional.

The workers also ask the court to issue an injunction enjoining the government from engaging in such practices, to direct the Army to take such steps as may be necessary to give blacks equal opportunity, and to award the plaintiffs and members of the class back pay with costs of living adjustments, interest and other compensation.

The suit names five employees — Mattie Belle C. Harris, Samuel P. Sheppard, Sandra L. Blue, Edward R. Humphrey and Robert L. Evans — as principals in the action, but their attorneys ask the court to consider the complaints on behalf of 400 or more blacks.

The documents filed in the deputy clerk's office in Fayetteville specifically cite the complaints of the defendants, but also alleges a number of general complaints the attorneys say apply to 400 other workers.

According to the suit: — Ms. Harris claimed she had been limited in employment and promotional opportunities as an editorial assistant at the U.S. Army Institute for Military Assistance because of her race.

— Sheppard, a former aircraft mechanic in the office of the Director of Industrial Operations, claims he was denied promotion to aircraft equipment repair inspector foreman because of his race.

— Evans contends he has been passed over by white workers in the Fort Bragg Fire Department.

— Ms. Blue said discrimination has prevented her from advancement in her job as a dental assistant.

— Humphrey contends that his race has prevented him from promotion in his job as a pest controller in the Directorate of Facilities & Engineering.

Restitution Is Again Pushed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Society should renew its concern for the victims of crime, Gov. Jim Hunt told those attending a National Restitution Conference in Raleigh on Wednesday.

He said North Carolina now collects about $250,000 a year in restitution from inmates on work release. He added that in 1980, the state took in more than $3.5 million from inmates and probationers.

"I believe restitution can be used as a rehabilitative tool, because it can instill in the offender a sense of responsibility for his actions. I also believe that the greater the certainty of being required to make restitution, the greater the deterrent effect," Hunt said.

Advise Adopting Self-Insurance

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Boston-based consulting firm has advised legislators the state should adopt a self-insurance plan for providing hospital and medical coverage to state workers and teachers.

William M. Mercer Inc. also recommended a series of cost-saving steps, including mandatory second opinions before major surgery and a $50 deductible on hospitalization and emergency room care.

The legislative Committee on Employee Hospital and Medical Benefits scheduled a meeting for Sept. 25 to consider the proposals.

The state now has a conventional health policy plan with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

John A. Norton, vice president of the Boston consulting firm, said the state could save $48.4 million in the next two years if it funded the insurance plan itself and hired an insurance company only to process the claims.

Soviet Ships Seen Leaving The Baltic

AARHUS, Denmark (AP) — The Soviet Union pulled out a second aircraft carrier from the Baltic Sea today, further diminishing the largest fleet ever assembled there, the Danish navy said.

The 18,000-ton helicopter carrier Leningrad, escorted by a Danish patrol boat, was to exit the Great Belt of the Danish Straits by nightfall, said Cmdr. Freddie Mueller of the Danes' Naval Operations Center.

Another carrier, the 38,000-ton Kiev, passed through the Great Belt on Sunday. The Kiev had been brought from the Black Sea Fleet.

Danish officers expect it will take two months to dissolve the reinforced armada, about the same amount of time that was required to build it up.

Mueller said the ships are leaving the Baltic in a steady stream, although international regulations forbid any navy from moving more than three units through the Danish Straits on a single day.

THE ALAN PAINE STORY

The picturesque old town of Godalming, home of Alan Paine knitwear, is only 33 miles from London, but it is in the midst of some of the most beautiful countryside in Southern England. A compact little town with a church built a thousand years ago and with twisting streets of medieval origin, it is charmingly set in a narrow valley enclosed by steep, wooded hills. Through the valley winds the River Wey which in ancient times supplied the good, clean water so necessary to a woolen centre.

Exactly when Godalming's woolen industry came into being no one knows — probably it was early in the thirteenth century. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth I (1558-1603), the importance of Godalming as a woolen centre was recognized by the inclusion of a wool sack in the town's coat-of-arms; part of this same coat-of-arms is embodied in the Alan Paine crest.

Early in the twentieth century, the old genius for specialization which runs like a fine thread through the history of knitting in this town, again came to the surface. For at that time William Paine, the founder of the firm where the first true cable patterned sweater was developed, was already employing men to produce the white cable pullover on the hand knitting frames.

Basic shetland sweater has crew neck and of 100% wool, $46.00, by Alan Paine; yellow, lt. blue, melon, lilac, oatmeal, emerald, red, brick heather, lt. oxford, charcoal. Cable shetland sweater with crew neck and of 100% wool, $49.00, from Alan Paine; med. oxford, off-white, lt. blue, yellow. Argyle socks from Byford, $7.50, in assorted dark and pastel colors.

New Approach To MX Policy

NEW YORK (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger has suggested to President Reagan a gradual approach to the deployment of the MX missile and other new arms to enlarge the country's strategic arms stockpile, The New York Times reported today.

Quoting administration officials, The Times said Weinberger had recommended the government remain flexible rather than commit itself to long-range plans for new weapons. Officials quoted in the newspaper said the suggestion was made for political and technical reasons rather than fiscal ones, in the wake of the struggle in the administration over the military budget.

However, the officials said the administration still planned a weapons package that would include the MX intercontinental ballistic missile, a new bomber capable of eluding Soviet defenses, advanced missiles to be launched from submarines and a modernized and protected communications network to control nuclear arms. According to officials, Weinberger presented a step-by-step approach that would retain the support of advocates of a stronger defense and, at the same time, blunt the efforts of those trying to cut military spending, the Times said.

Weinberger's approach, according to the officials, also would enable advances in technology to be incorporated into the defense system.

Officials said that Weinberger's plan would allow the development of new weapons to proceed as planned, thus not reducing the amount of money that has been budgeted for the program. The Times said officials revealed that Weinberger presented options to the president but no decision has been made. Reagan has said he hopes to make public is decision in about two weeks.

French And British Relations See Another Era Of Warmth

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — Relations between Britain and France have moved into a new era of warmth despite the fact that Britain is governed by a staunch Conservative and France by a Socialist who has four Communists in his government.

It may be too soon to say new life has been given to the historic but often-soured Entente Cordiale. But on both sides of the English Channel, diplomats and commentators say Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and President Francois Mitterrand have started their relationship in an excellent atmosphere and the portents are significant.

Mitterrand's appointment of Communist cabinet ministers caused concern among the conservative administrations in London and Washington that they did little to hide. But a flurry of statements by the president and Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson soon made clear that the new Socialist regime was linking itself more firmly than conservative President Valery Giscard d'Estaing had done to the main Western foreign and defense policy stands.

This more than anything else made Mitterrand palatable to Mrs. Thatcher. British officials say they are now comfortable with the new French government, and that any security problems have been effectively dealt with.

On such domestic issues as management of the economy, the two leaders are poles apart. He is busy nationalizing banks and industries; she is trying to get government out of business. He is out to reflate the French economy by more spending; she is determinedly letting her monetarist policy cut the British economy back.

Mrs. Thatcher and Mitterrand held their first bilateral meeting last week and ordered a new look at oft-mooted projects for a tunnel under the channel connecting their countries. The tunnel plan may remain more symbolic than real, but symbolism can be important, say officials on both sides.

They also charted a wide range of new joint projects in aeronautics, space, telecommunications and computerization. The influential French newspaper Le Monde commented: "In many ways this summit appears to be one of rediscovery between two old nations."

At a joint news conference, Mrs. Thatcher and Mitterrand stressed the same themes in East-West relations — a firm attitude toward the Soviet Union, no Soviet intervention in Poland and reinforcement of Western Europe's nuclear missile arsenal.

Each refused to comment on potentially embarrassing domestic issues. Cheysson all but scoffed at arguments by British Socialists that Britain should disarm unilaterally and pull out of the European Common Market.

"I couldn't imagine this," he told a reporter.

But the proof of the London-Paris pudding will probably be in attempts to resolve nagging problems within the 10-nation Common Market, including what Britain feels to be an unfair financial assessment. While Mitterrand made no promises toward meeting Mrs. Thatcher's demands, he agreed to serious discussion and a "new impulsion for Europe, through increased bilateral cooperation" between France and Britain.

Giscard d'Estaing laid major stress on France's relationship with West Germany and established close personal ties with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt like those President Charles de Gaulle had with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

With Schmidt in increasing economic and political trouble and the lessening of emphasis on the Paris-Bonn axis, the leadership of Western Europe will now be broader based, meeting the objections of smaller nations that felt squeezed out by the Giscard-Schmidt club, British officials feel.

Field Day Events Held

KINSTON — Field Day competition involving the fire brigades at the Du Pont Plant here was held Tuesday and Wednesday.

Eight plant brigades, involving 18 members and four officers per unit, took part in the competition and were judged and timed in various events involving hose laying, self-contained breathing apparatus, portable fire extinguishers, and fire truck equipment.

All of the fire brigade members are Du Pont employees and serve on a volunteer basis, a plant spokesman said, and some of the personnel are members of volunteer fire departments and rescue squads in their communities.

The spokesman said Du Pont feels that field day competition increases brigade efficiency and builds pride in brigade performance.

Local Police Offer Session At Burlington

BURLINGTON — Ten members of the Greenville Police Department Monday and Tuesday conducted two "Shoot — Don't Shoot" training sessions for the Burlington Police Department.

"Shoot — Don't Shoot" is a special stress-firearms training exercise designed to provide a realistic means of preparing law enforcement officers for possible dangerous and high-risk crime incidents.

The Greenville Police Department was the first law enforcement agency in the state to receive the "Shoot — Don't Shoot" training, and has since trained over 750 law enforcement officers for other departments such as Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Ahoskie, and Roanoke Rapids police, the Wake County Sheriff's Department, members of the U. S. Marine Corps, and state Alcohol Law Enforcement agents.

Officers serving as instructors for the Burlington training session included Sgt. Doug Thurston, Sgt. Roger Benton, Cpl. John Ennis, patrolmen Cecil Hardy, Corey Duber, Lee Garrish, Jeff Nobles, Randy Edwards, Nelson Staton and Detective Pete Lavin.

Chief Glenn Cannon emphasized that the majority of the officers participating as instructors donated their off-duty time to conduct the training program for the City of Burlington.

Guilty Plea In Body-Snatching

GRAFTON, W.Va. (AP) — Two of three men charged in a body-snatching case have pleaded guilty and a Friday court appearance is set for the third man, an auto dealer who police say tried to fake his death.

John Molisee, 24, and Ronald Johnson, 20, pleaded guilty Wednesday to stealing the corpse of a motorcycle-crash victim from a cemetery. The body was found in a burning automobile Aug. 17.

The body was identified and the car dealer, Jerry Miller, was found hiding in the rafters of a tavern, his hair dyed. A court document indicated he had said he was having marital and business problems and wanted authorities to believe the body in the car was his.

Grave robbing carries a two-to-five year sentence.

Try Innovations On Workforce

NEW YORK (AP) — Innovations in work schedules, including a shorter week, are being made "not on humanitarian grounds, but because they're good management," the president of the Work in America Institute says.

A report released Tuesday by the institute says the American workforce will be on a 36-hour week by the end of the decade.

Jerome M. Rosow, president of the non-profit group, said 9 1/2 million Americans now have flexible schedules or plans that compress the week's work hours into fewer than five days.

The institute was established in 1975 to "advance productivity and the quality of working life." The report was the work of a 25-member committee consisting of representatives of business, labor and government.

Cost Of Death Twice Survival

BOSTON (AP) — A study of the high price of intensive care shows that on the average the most expensive patients are those who do the unexpected: the hopelessly ill who get better, or the strong who die.

The study, conducted at Massachusetts General Hospital, also found that patients who eventually died of the ailments they were being treated for incurred medical costs twice as high as those for patients who survived.

The study was performed to test a theory that doctors could cut costs by withholding all-out treatment from patients considered certain to die of their ailments.

Doctors were asked to assess their patients' chances of getting better. After examining 1,831 cases, the researchers concluded: "Simple cost-saving solutions, such as withholding resources from the hopelessly ill or earlier transfer of those requiring only anticipatory care, are difficult to apply to an individual patient because prognosis is always uncertain."

The study, directed by Dr. Allan S. Detsky, was published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Total hospital bills and related charges for intensive care patients who died averaged $15,874 per person, while the cost for survivors averaged $7,012.

The daily hospital cost for patients who had the worst outlook but survived averaged $536. The cost for survivors with the best prognosis was $376 on the average.

Among those who died, the daily charge was $697 for those with the worst outlook and $782 for people given the best chances.

SUNDAY SERVICES

The following services will be held Sunday at English Chapel Free Will Baptist Church: 11 a.m., Bishop W. L. CARD OF THANKS

In appreciation to our many friends & relatives during the illness & death of our beloved husband & father, the late Mr. Roy Williams.

In our hours of sorrow your prayers, words of sympathy, flowers and other deeds of kindness too numerous to mention, have been a pillow upon which our strength has been built, for this, we shall be eternally grateful.

May God bestow his richest benedictions upon each of you.

Mrs. R.J. Williams & daughter, Julia Williams Hunter

IN MEMORY

In loving memory of our dear husband, granddaddy and dad, It has caused our hearts to be very sad, Oh how we miss you sitting in your favorite chair, Though we know you are in His loving care.

It has been a year ago today, That God called you away, We loved you then, we love you still, We have tried to accept your passing and not question God's will, There's no more suffering, no more sorrow, No more pain to bear, We can only hope and pray to Meet you there.

Rose Puts Ranking On Line At Hoggard

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Third? Why?
That was the reaction of Vincent after he learned yesterday that his Rampants were highly regarded in the

Receiver Marty Barnes

Associated Press' High School Poll. "Well, I'm pleased that we're third, but I don't know whether we deserve it. I don't think we're of that caliber right now."

"Anyway, I'd rather be third at the end of the season. It's more important then than now."

Rose's opponent for this weekend, Wilmington Hoggard is ranked 12th by the panel of sportswriters from across the state, but like Rose goes into the game with a 2-0 record.

Rose opened the year with a 15-14 upset of Jacksonville High School, and followed that up with a 34-14 victory over New Bern last weekend. Rose jumped out to a 20-0 lead in the first half, only to see the Bears, sparked by a 68-yard kickoff return at the start of the second half, rally to within 20-14 before Rose closed them out.

Hoggard, which took a 7-0 victory over Durham on the opening week of the season, took a week off before beating Durham Hillside on the Hoggard field last weekend, 23-3. Kickoff at Legion Stadium is set for 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Wilmington.

Vincent admits that the contest will be a true test for the Rampants. "They are a very, very big team," he noted.

Vincent pointed out that the offensive line of the Vikings is anchored by 6-2, 252-pound tackle David Pritchett, 6-3, 250-pound guard Tim Morrison, 6-4, 277-pound tackle Kenny Milligan, and 6-1, 231-pound center Don Perdue, who also plays linebacker on defense.

Chief among their ball carriers is 220-pound fullback Norman Bullard, running from the two-tight end I-formation backfield. "He's supposed to be a real tough runner," Vincent said.

The coach said that in pre-season outlooks, Hoggard was expecting to pass a good deal, but in the two games so far, has gone to the air seldom. "They haven't had to. They've been able to ram it down everyone's throat. Basically, they're a ground-oriented team."

The Hoggard defense, using a 4-4 lineup, is also big up front, with "very active linebackers," according to Vincent.

"We have to stop their fullback, and we have to be able to throw the ball well ourselves and get outside with our running game."

The aerial game and the outside attack have worked fairly well for the Rampants so far.

"After reviewing the films of last week's game, I think we played pretty well against New Bern, although we were inconsistent on both offense and defense. Actually, the defense didn't play that bad except for one series in the third period. For the most part they played extremely well." The defense, after being stung for two touchdowns in the third quarter, held the Bears to minus 22 yards in total offense in the final period.

"Our offense needs to get more consistency. We need to be able to control the ball better," the coach said. "Our passing game is doing a pretty good job overall, though. We threw well against New Bern, especially in the first half."

"(Marty) Barnes showed a little of what he can do in the game. Heck, let 'em double-team (Chris) McLawhorn all they want," Vincent added in reference to Barnes' receiving ability.

Barnes caught two passes last week for 103 yards. For the year, he has three catches for 124 yards, a 41.3 yard average. Meanwhile, McLawhorn has seven receptions for 143 yards and two touchdowns. Flanker Donnell Lee has caught three for 41 yards.

Tailback Roderick Harrell is the leading rusher with 117 yards on 27 carries, while Lee and punts (8 for 4.5 average) has rushed eight times for 105 yards. They are the only two over 100 yards after two games.

Barry Smith, slated to start Friday at quarterback, has hit on nine of 18 passes for 224 yards and two scores, while Tom Buie has connected on four of ten for 84 yards.

As a team, Rose is collecting 301 yards a game, and holding its opponents to 206 per game.

McLawhorn is the leading scorer with 20 points, two touchdowns receiving and one by carrying back a punt return for a score. Fullback Roger Williams is next with 12 points.

But while Vincent is fairly well pleased with most aspects of the game, he is still upset over the play of the kickoff coverage unit. Last week's long run at the start of the second half, the 68-yarder, hurt Rose, setting up the first Bear touchdown.

"I think we're doing a pretty good job of punt coverage (three returns for minus six yards), and we're punting pretty well (7 kicks for 31.0 yard net average). We're returning kickoffs (5 for 17.2 average) yards on 27 carries, while Lee and punts (8 for 4.5 average) well, but we're not covering yards. They are the only two returns for a 24.2 average."

"We seem to stop them close

Emory, Pirates Are Still Smarting Over 56-0 Loss

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It hurts! And Ed Emory isn't hiding it. That 56-0 shellacking by the University of North Carolina last Saturday afternoon still has him tossing and turning throughout the night.

"It's a nightmare you don't forget," he said yesterday. "I waited 20 years for the opportunity to go up there and win, and it's not going to stop hurting anytime soon."

Meanwhile, he and his Pirates, who are also still smarting from the licking, must prepare for N.C. State, and try to rebuild their crumbling hopes.

"We just got our butts beat. That's all I can say," he said in reference to the Carolina contest. "No blow could have hurt our program like Saturday did. We dug a deep hole for ourselves. It's up to me, my staff, the team, and everyone concerned with our program to dig ourselves out of that hole."

Emory said he feels the Pirates have the character to do just that. "I believe we have a commitment to improve. I will not allow our players not to have a commitment to improve, to be intense and to win," he continued.

Emory said he would do what he had to do to get the job done, but he noted that catching teams like North Carolina and N.C. State can't be done in 18 to 20 months.

The coach said that when East Carolina trailed 14-0 and Chuck Bushbeck missed a short field goal attempt, the wind went out of the Pirate sails last Saturday.

"We didn't get the intensity from the players we had gotten to that point. From there on, we had players playing individually. They were not using the techniques we had taught them. If we had followed through with the assignments we had been given, I don't think it would have happened like it did. But we started street fighting after that."

Offensively, Emory noted, the Pirates never got started. "We gave up penetration at the guard-center gap on both sides. You are supposed to learn not to give up penetration in a wishbone offense." Emory said an early neck injury to center Tony Hensley caused some problems. "Our second stringer, Billy Clark, still isn't full strength following leg surgery in the late summer, and we had to play a walk-on freshman a lot of the time."

Emory said he still feels that the Pirates had a good game plan. "We wanted them to get out of all the fancy stuff and go to blocking and tackling. They blocked, but we just didn't tackle."

The coach said that historically, the East Carolina teams have bounced back from adversity. "It takes four things to win: loyalty, discipline, attitude and talent. We didn't have the discipline on Saturday. We didn't look well-prepared, nor well-coached. But I still feel we were well-prepared and well-coached. We just lacked the discipline to go through with what we wanted to do."

Sugar Ray Rallies For TKO Of Hearn

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Fighting half-blind and trailing on all three judges' cards, Sugar Ray Leonard reached into his reservoir of boxing know-how for the knockout of Thomas Hearn that made him the undisputed welterweight champion of the world.

"I brought this up from the bottom of my heart," said Leonard after Wednesday night's 14th-round victory. "There were many people around the world who didn't want me to win, who wanted me to lose. I had to do this for Ray Leonard."

Leonard's left eye had been damaged in his training camp when a sparring partner's elbow bruised it. Hearn knew about the injury and beat a steady tattoo on Leonard's eye, swelling it closed.

"I would say between half and three-quarters of my vision was impaired," Leonard said. "Once the eye swelled, he had a better chance to land right hands."

Hearn, who had been rocked early by Leonard and was rolling on the ropes in the sixth round, seemed to get his second wind around the 10th.

When he heard the fans in the capacity crowd of 24,382 who packed the temporary stadium outside Caesars Palace chanting his name, he responded with a brilliant rally that seemed to turn the fight around.

"I had the fight completely under control until his left hand and right jabs began getting through," Leonard said. "I was conscious of my eye injury and he started throwing bombs."

Not only was Hearn throwing bombs, but plenty of them were landing. The fight, which seemed to be going his way, was suddenly moving away from Leonard. Hearn, almost out of the war earlier, was back in business and launching rockets.

"I definitely knew I was ahead," Hearn said.

The judges agreed. Going into the 13th round all three had Hearn in front. It was 116-112 on Judge Duane Ford's card. Judge Chuck Minker had it 117-111 and Judge Lou Tabat had it 117-112.

Now, in Round 13, Leonard turned into a tiger. He tore into Hearn, bullying his opponent into the ropes. Twice, Hearn was driven through the strands. The first time, Referee Davey Pearl ruled no knockdown. The second time, however, there was no question about it. Hearn had hit the ring apron for the mandatory eight count. When the bell rang, Hearn was rocky and Leonard in charge once more.

Now it was Round 14. Even with his big 13th round — he won it by two points on the cards of all three officials — Leonard was still trailing. He could have won both the 14th and 15th rounds and still not captured the fight. He needed a knockout to win and he went out and got it.

"I didn't think I was behind, not really," Leonard said. "But I always felt the end result is what counts."

When the 14th round began, most ringside observers had Leonard ahead on their cards but the judges did not and Leonard fought as if he knew the real score.

Once again, he tore after Hearn, blasting away with haymakers. Hearn, still groggy from the going-over he had absorbed in the 13th, rolled on the ropes again. Leonard swarmed in after him, much like a lion stalking a wounded prey. At 1:45 of the round, Referee Pearl stepped in and stopped the bout. Leonard had won the only way he could — by a knockout.

"I wasn't hurt," Hearn said. "I was pretty much in control. I definitely knew I was ahead. I got hit a good shot and I was trying to get myself together. I thought I was under control."

Referee Pearl, however, did not. And his opinion was the one that mattered at that point.

"He took a lot of blows to the head and couldn't defend himself anymore," the referee said. "Points have nothing to do with it. If I think he's going to get seriously hurt, I'm going to stop the fight."

That's exactly what he did. Hearn was unhappy with the sudden turn of events. "Those are the breaks," he said. "Things like that happen."

Pearl said Hearn's reaction was predictable.

"I've never seen a fighter who lost who didn't think the fight should have gone on," he said.

Leonard's camp was stunned when it learned that their fighter was trailing on the official cards.

"I'm really disgusted at the way the judges saw the fight," said trainer Janks Morton.

Attorney Mike Trainer, who helped put together this spectacular with its record gross of some $35 million and paydays of $8 million for Leonard and $5 million for Hearn, shook his head in disbelief when he heard the official cards.

"If he had lost, I would have been sick about it. If Sugar Ray Leonard took the 13th, 14th and 15th rounds and still lost the fight, you'd be looking at a sick man."

Leonard, however, was more understanding.

"I was conscious of my injury and aware that each punch he landed was creating more swelling," in desert heat under television lights that pushed the ring temperature well over 100 degrees, Leonard tried to pace himself.

"I took breathers every chance I had," he said. "I had to. The lights and the heat were a factor."

Apparently, the breathers helped sway the judges' opinions and put Leonard in a hole from which he climbed with a two-fisted attack.

The victory gave Leonard the World Boxing Association welterweight crown to go with his World Boxing Council title. He also owns the WBA junior middleweight title.

I was the first loss in 33 professional bouts for Hearn, a clear disappointment in this showdown he had sought for so long.

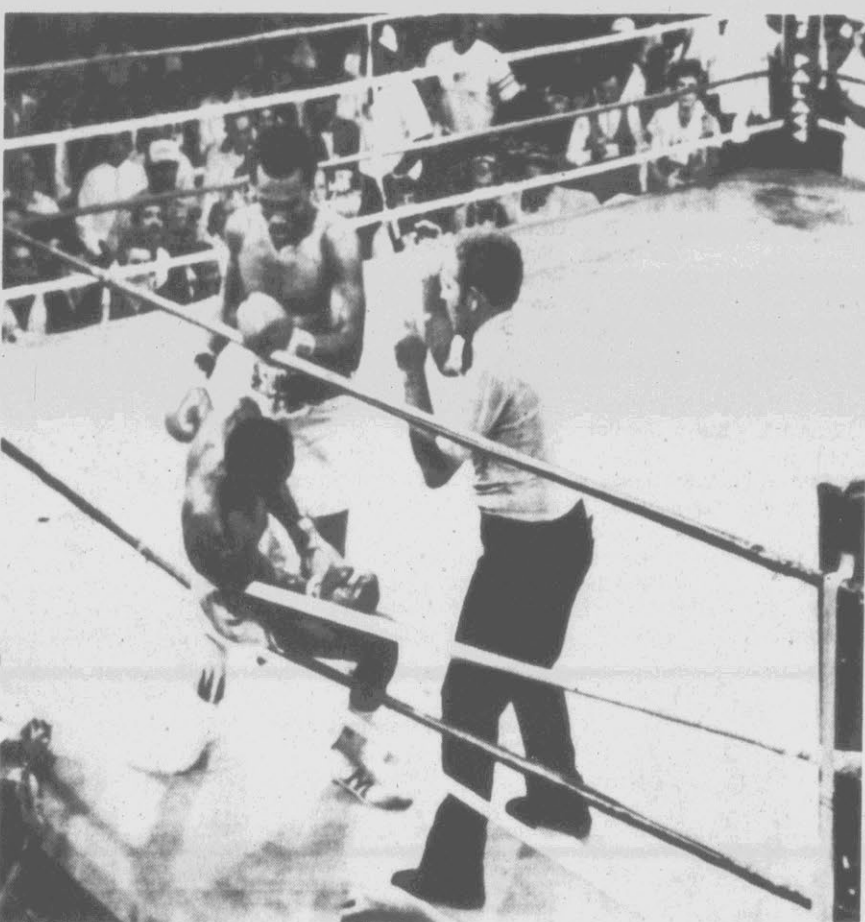

But he wants more of Leonard. The talk about a rematch started almost immediately.

"Of course, I'd like a rematch," he said. "I deserve one."

Leonard didn't say yes, but he didn't say no. "I proved myself," he said. "I proved I'm the best welterweight in the world. In my book, we're both still champions."

To which Hearn added, "Better luck to me next time...and there will be another time."

At these prices, why not?

Leonard Is Apologetic In Aftermath Of Fight

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Although he declared justifiably that there could be no argument now that he is the best welterweight in the world, Sugar Ray Leonard seemed humble.

"I apologize for my saying he had no brains," Leonard said of Thomas Hearn Wednesday night after winning the undisputed welterweight championship. "He's truly a talented athlete."

"We both happen to be in the same profession and there was only room for one of us."

Leonard won the showdown at Caesars Palace, knocking Hearn out in the 14th round to add the World Boxing Association title to his World Boxing Council crown.

The fighters had taunted each other early in the fight.

but by the middle rounds, it was obvious they had great respect for each other. Each quit baiting the other and instead touched gloves and nodded at the end of each round.

"I take my hat off to Thomas Hearn," said Leonard. "I felt I had the bout under control, but I felt that it was getting too close for comfort."

"He rocked me with a couple of punches, but he never hurt me."

The 25-year-old Leonard, whose only loss in 32 fights came in his first meeting with then-WBC champion Roberto Duran, would give no clue to his future plans.

Asked about a rematch with Hearn, he replied, "It's up to them to say." Asked if he planned to fight undisputed middleweight champion Marvin Hagler, Leonard did not respond.

Both Leonard and Hearn, who suffered his first loss in 33 fights, had predicted the showdown for the title would be a rugged fight. It was.

"I had hurt my eye in training and he was getting some jabs in on it," said Leonard, whose left eye was nearly swollen shut by the end of the fight. "I couldn't see some of his punches coming."

Top Money Winners Are On Hand For Henredon

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — Money may be the root of all evil, but it also is the object of some fierce competition in the first round of the inaugural Henredon Classic golf tournament.

Nine of the top 10 money winners in women's golf have arrived at the 6,106-yard Willow Creek Golf Course north of High Point to compete for the $65,000 purse, which includes $24,750 to the winner. The only member of that elite group not in the hunt this week is Nancy Lopez-Melton.

Lopez-Melton aggravated torn ligaments in her left hand during the Rail Charity Classic in Springfield, Ill., several weeks ago. She is currently sixth on the money list with more than $258,000 in winnings.

JoAnne Carner, who topped the $1 million mark in career earnings this year, is the 1981 leader at $196,733. If she can finish in the top 10 in this tournament, she will top the $200,000 mark. Beth Daniel was the first to break that barrier when she won $231,000 last year.

But Carner said Wednesday that she would not pursue the money title. "I did it in '74 and I just drove myself too hard," she said. "I decided I wasn't going to work that hard. Second or third ain't bad."

Jan Stephenson has climbed to fifth on the money list on the strength of her recent performances. Shaking off poor putting earlier in the year, she has compiled six top-five finishes in the last six events. The Fort Worth, Texas, resident also had eight top-10 finishes in eight of her last 10 tournaments.

Stephenson apparently has been able to make up for her financial losses on the course with a series of endorsements off the course. She has cut down on the engagements to get her game on track.

"I used to be able to triple what I made off the golf course, but I won't do it this year," she said Wednesday. "But I've also made a lot more on the golf course this year."

No. 3 money winner Donna Caponi has been on a two-week layoff, brought on by the recent death of her mother. Her first practice since that time came Wednesday in the pro-am tournament.

"I've still got three more official tournaments left," she said. "Hopefully, I can get on top of that money list. I'm gonna have to work awful hard."

Though eight games remain, East Carolina's 1981 football season is already at a critical point.

The Pirates are still hurting from an embarrassing 56-0 loss to the UNC-Chapel Hill and face another Atlantic Coast Conference foe, North Carolina State, Saturday evening.

ECU needs a victory. Anything less and it could be a long season for the Pirates and their fans.

"It's a must-win for us," ECU running back Leon Lawson said Wednesday at the Pirates weekly press conference. "I think — in fact, I know — if we beat them the team will be turned around."

"If we don't beat 'em, it could hurt us a lot. We need a big win. If we lose, I think a lot of people are going to be down on us and aren't going to think much of us."

Lawson, a reserve running back who is expected to see a lot of action against the Wolfpack, believes if the Pirates are to defeat NCSU it will be the offensive line that leads the way.

"Personally, I think the offensive line will determine how the football game turns out," said Lawson, whose brother is NCSU tailback Larmount Lawson. "If the offensive line does well the backs will do well."

Neither the offense nor the defense did much of anything for the Pirates last week against UNC. Both, however, did a lot for the Tar Heels.

"We've been one hell of a sister institute the last 10 days," ECU coach Ed Emory said. "We gave (UNC) a national player of the week, we helped make them a top 10 team and we made them have confidence in their defense."

"But I just wish it had never happened. It was a total embarrassment for us," he added. "No blow, nothing could have hurt this team more than what happened Saturday."

"We dug the hole very deep and it's up to me, my staff (and) the football players to dig out of the hole."

The Pirates began their climb out of the hole Sunday afternoon when the team met with Emory and his coaches to talk about the game and review the films. It was the start of what has been a long week for the Pirates. The initial numbness following the game has worn off, but the pain and embarrassment remain.

"It's been a long week, a very long week," Lawson said. "You walk down through campus and hear people communicating about the game and you don't like to hear it."

Asked if he and the team learned anything from the loss, Lawson, after a long pause, answered in a slow, measured voice: "I've learned a lot personally," he said.

Then, after another long pause, he continued: "One thing I've learned that as a team going out there we've got to keep our poise, we got to keep our heads. We can't get too excited, we can't get too uptight."

"I wouldn't say we were sky-high. We were up, but certain things didn't work for us and we lost control of the tempo of the game."

"I think it's really effected the players a lot," he added. "But it's not something we can't overcome."

Or, as Emory put it: "This is a great gut check week for our players, a great gut check week for our coaches. When you get beat 56-0 it's time for a gut check of your philosophy, of your commitment to the wishbone, to the detergent you use to wash your football pants and what you eat at the training table."

"Someone asked me if I'd rather not play a team like North Carolina State after a loss like this. I told them as a coach I'd rather have an open date, but as a player I'd like to bite into North Carolina State to re-establish ourselves as a football team."

Manager Ralph Houk didn't set his sights too high before Boston took the field for a four-game series against the first-place Detroit Tigers, but so far the Red Sox have scored a direct hit.

"I certainly would have been happy to win three (out of four)," said Houk, whose team has beaten the Tigers in the first three games of the series to pull to within 1½ games of the lead in the American League East. "You sure couldn't have complained because they were hot when they came in. They had just won three over Cleveland."

Even two victories would have been okay with the former Marine.

"I figured even if we split with them they have a tough schedule and so do we. Any team that can win four or five in a row can win it," said Houk. "I think it's going to go right down to the wire. When you're playing each other like that things can change awfully fast."

The Red Sox swept a doubleheader Wednesday night, 2-1 in 10 innings and 5-4. The series opened Tuesday with a 5-2 Boston triumph and ends tonight.

In other AL games, Milwaukee edged New York 3-2, Oakland nipped Texas 2-1, Minnesota beat Toronto 5-2, Kansas City tripped California 3-1 and Chicago beat Seattle

3-1. Baltimore at Cleveland was postponed because of rain.

Detroit now leads the East by one game over the Brewers, 1½ over Boston and two over Baltimore and the Yankees, and Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson predicted the race would involve four or five teams and go down to the final games.

"It looks like it now. It looks like we made it that way," Anderson said. "The Red Sox are playing good ball, getting the big hit when they need it."

The big hit in the first game Wednesday was Carney Lansford's 10th-inning RBI single, and in the second game it was Dave Stapleton's two-run single in the seventh that put the Red Sox ahead 5-4.

The Red Sox were also pleased by the strong pitching performances of Dennis Eckersley, 8-6, who went the distance and scattered seven hits in the first game, and Tom Burgmeier, 4-5, who blanked the Tigers over the final 21-3 innings in the nightcap.

"Pitching is the whole thing down the stretch and they both did great jobs," said Stapleton. "We needed a game like that from Eckersley."

Detroit had gone ahead 4-3 in the second game on Kirk Gibson's two-run single off Mark Clear in the top of the seventh. Burgmeier then came in and struck out Steve Kemp. Boston had taken a 1-0 lead in the first on Carl Yastrzemski's RBI single and made it 3-0 in the third on Lansford's bases-loaded double.

But the Tigers cut the margin when John Wockenfuss led off the fifth with his fifth homer and Ron Jackson doubled in another run in the sixth.

In the opener, Remy walked to lead off the 10th inning and went to second on Dwight Evans' deep fly to center. After Jim Rice flied out, Yastrzemski was walked intentionally and Lansford ripped a single to left off Detroit starter and loser Jack Morris, 12-5.

Brewers 3, Yankees 2
Gorman Thomas hit his 19th homer and doubled home the winning run in the sixth inning, while Rollie Fingers continued his spectacular relief pitching for Milwaukee.

After Thomas' double gave the Brewers a 3-1 lead, Rick Cerone cut the margin to one in the seventh with a sacrifice fly for New York, but Fingers shackled the Yankees the final two innings for his 26th save. He has 14 saves and two victories in Milwaukee's 22 triumphs in the second half.

Twins 5, Blue Jays 2
Minnesota won its eighth game in nine decisions as Hosken Powell hit a three-run double and John Castino slugged a two-run homer.

Winner Al Williams, 5-8, had an eight-hitter through eighth innings, but he failed to register his first major-league shut-out after he gave up two more hits in the ninth. Reliever Doug Corbett gave up a sacrifice fly to Otto Velez and a run-scoring single to George Wells to account for Toronto's runs.

Royals 3, Angels 1
Dennis Leonard beat

California for the ninth consecutive time to lead Kansas City to its fifth straight triumph.

Leonard, 10-10, pitched an eight-hitter to hand the Angels their 11th loss in the last 12 games.

The game was tied 1-1 in the eighth inning as California's Darryl Motley and the Angels' Brian Downing homered, before a throwing error by shortstop Rick Burleson on Hal McRae's infield hit sent George Brett home with the winning run.

A's 2, Rangers 1
Dwayne Murphy hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning to support Mike Norris' five-hitter for Oakland.

Four of Texas' hits off Norris, 11-7, were by Mickey Rivers and the fifth was a double by Jim Sundberg that led to Mark Wagner's successful suicide squeeze in the third inning.

Loser Danny Darwin, 8-8, had a four-hit shutout through seven innings, but a single by Rickey Henderson and Murphy's homer ruined the outing.

Darwin left the game in the eighth inning after a bench-clearing fight that started when Oakland's Cliff Johnson charged the mound. Johnson, who was ejected for starting the fight, had been hit on the hip with a Darwin fastball two innings earlier.

White Sox 3, Mariners 1

Britt Burns pitched a three-hitter and Chet Lemon played a part in all of Chicago's runs in the victory over Seattle.

Burns, 9-4, making only his second start since his father's funeral Sept. 9, struck out nine.

Lemon, who had knocked in Chicago's first run with an RBI groundout in the sixth, broke a 1-1 tie in the ninth with a run-scoring double and came home on Lamar Johnson's single.

CFA Withholds Final Decision

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) —

Most members of the College Football Association apparently will withhold final declaration on a CFA or NCAA television plan until after the NCAA's special convention, the Associated Press has learned.

The NCAA announced Wednesday the special convention to try to reorganize the top football and basketball divisions will be Dec. 3-4 in St. Louis.

Three of the major conferences in the CFA, the Big Eight, Southeastern Conference and Atlantic Coast Conference, had indicated they would not make a final determination on the conflicting television packages until the NCAA had "addressed" the problem of restructuring.

In the meantime, a hearing was scheduled to begin today in federal court in Oklahoma City on a suit two CFA schools, Oklahoma and Georgia, have filed against the NCAA over the issue of property rights to football telecasts.

The 61 CFA schools include 17 independents and five conferences, the Big Eight, SEC, ACC, Southwest, and Western Athletic.

On Aug. 21, the CFA voted 33-20, with eight schools not voting, to adopt a four-year television contract with NBC. The NCAA has negotiated an agreement for the same period, 1982-85, with ABC and CBS. The CFA originally said its members would have until Sept. 10 to make their final declaration. On Sept. 9, that was changed to Thursday.

Charles M. Neinas, CFA executive director, refused comment when asked what affect the special convention would have on the Thursday deadline. However, several sources said the CFA would ask its members to wait until after the December meeting.

Joyce Artis, Cora Faison and Linda Brown each served up five straight points for Ayden-Grifton during the match.

In the second match, however, Ayden-Grifton, after taking a 16-14 in the first game, went down two straight to North Lenoir, 15-7, 15-3. Sharon Edwards served up nine straight for A-G in the first game, and later added four straight.

The split left Ayden-Grifton with a 1-3 mark. The Chargeettes return to action on September 29, hosting Farmville Central in their first Eastern Carolina Conference match.

Rose 1
North Pitt 1

Rose High School and North Pitt split a pair of volleyball matches yesterday.

North Pitt took the opening match, winning the first game, 16-14, before Rose won the second game, 16-14. North Pitt then came back to claim the match with a 15-10 win in the final game.

Angie Atkinson led Rose in the first game with five straight serves, while Val White had four in the second game and Lisa Mills had five in the third.

In the second match, Rose took it in straight games, 15-7, 15-5. Arlene Valentine had six straight in the first game, while Frances Barnhill had five and Linda Winstead had four in the second.

The split left Rose with a 1-3 record on the year. The next Rampette match is next Thursday against Farmville Central. North Pitt is 1-1 and plays host to D.H. Conley today.

Prof Reveals Double Agents' Stories

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina political scientist has identified two American Communist Party informants as possibly the most successful double agents in American history.

In his book, "The FBI and Martin Luther King Jr.," Dr. David J. Garrow says the brothers Morris and Jack Childs — code named "Solo" — provided the bureau with information that indirectly led to its relentless six-year surveillance of King.

The book is being published this week by W.W. Norton & Co. of New York.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill professor says the book is an attempt to explain why the bureau developed its negative and sometimes vicious attitude toward the civil rights leader.

Garrow traced that attitude to the FBI's 1962 discovery that Stanley Levison, a New York City lawyer linked by Solo to the Communist Party, was a close friend and adviser to King.

Acting on the theory that subversives might be controlling the civil rights movement, Garrow said, the FBI began tapping King's telephones and bugging his hotel rooms. Later, the bureau tried to ruin his marriage by sending an anonymous letter and an embarrassing tape recording to his wife, Coretta, Garrow said.

The flip side of the Solo disclosures contained information about Soviet backing of American Communists, Garrow said.

The FBI recruited the two brothers after Morris Childs had been ousted in 1947 as editor of the Communist party newspaper "Daily Worker."

"The bureau representative broached the idea of the brothers reactivating themselves within the party network, passing along to the FBI all the information they could acquire," Garrow writes. "The brothers accepted the idea eagerly, and immediately began to renew their activities within the upper reaches of the American CP."

Sometime between 1951 and 1954, Solo became the crucial link through which the Soviet government secretly channeled approximately $1 million a year to party officials in the United States, Garrow revealed.

"As such the brothers not only came to know the most confidential details of the Soviet-CP connection, details of course passed on to the FBI, but also to have substantial contacts with those in Moscow who supplied this cash," Garrow reports.

"Most of the 'business' was transacted in New York, with Jack Childs receiving the Soviet money in American bills," he adds. "But at least once a year one of the brothers, usually Morris, who spoke Russian, would travel to Moscow."

Among Morris Childs' acquaintances in Moscow, Garrow said, were party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and Boris Ponomarev, now a candidate member of the Soviet Politburo. He is also said to have met with the late Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung and to have briefed President Nixon on some of his foreign travels and contacts.

Both brothers became extremely close to American party leader Gus Hall, according to the book.

"Thus the FBI and the U.S. executive branch w the full activity of the American Communist Party and witnessed firsthand the contacts of the domestic party with foreign powers," Garrow writes. "In fact, as one American official remarked, for years the FBI practically had been paying Gus Hall's salary, and with Soviet money."

At 79, Morris Childs is in ill health and under 24-hour FBI protection, Garrow writes. Jack Childs died Aug. 12, 1980, in Hampton Bays, N.Y. Neither ever retired as an active informant to the FBI, Garrow says.

Garrow based his book on documents secured through the Freedom of Information Act and interviews with civil rights leaders, former government officials and other sources.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Sunny but cooler weather is expected in the forecast period into Friday, for most of the nation. Warm temperatures are predicted in the South. Showers are forecast for Florida and New England. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A slow-moving cold front that drifted across North Carolina Wednesday has triggered northerly winds and cooler air across the state.

The National Weather Service predicted the cooling trend accompanying the front would become more pronounced today and Friday as a Canadian high pressure system drifts into the state. Unseasonably cool temperatures were forecast for most of North Carolina by Friday.

A weak upper level disturbance was moving across the state today, and was expected to bring variable cloudiness and the chance of showers to eastern counties.

Fairly mild readings prevailed Wednesday afternoon. Highs were in the 80s in most areas, but several stations had readings in the 70s. This morning the mercury dipped into the 50s in the mountains while 60s were common across the Piedmont and into the coastal plain.

Rainfall Wednesday ranged from a trace at Charlotte to 2.02 inches at New Bern, all of which fell in the 24-hour period ending at 2 a.m. this morning.

The recreational weather outlook called for variable cloudiness and scattered showers mainly in the east. Highs were expected to be in the 60s at higher elevations, reaching the 80s on the southern coast.

Fair and cool weather should dominate the state Friday, with overnight lows in the 40s in the mountains, with 60s on the coast. Highs Friday were expected to range from the 50s to the 70s.

Scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecasts for the coast today, with the chance of precipitation diminishing Friday. Coastal winds will be northerly at 10 to occasionally 20 mph today and tonight then become northwest at 10 to 20 mph and gusty Friday.

Wake Forest Gifts A Record

WINSTON-SALEM — A record $9,414,820 was raised for Wake Forest University during the 1980-81 fiscal year, according to Dr. James Ralph Scales, president of the university.

Scales said total giving for the Reynolda campus was $5,970,016 and that the Bowman Gray School of Medicine received $3,444,805. The previous year total giving was $8.8 million.

Wake Forest recently was ranked second among major American colleges and universities for sustained performance in alumni giving. The University of Pennsylvania was first. The percentage of alumni giving is 40. Jerry B. Attkisson, a 1965 graduate from Atlanta, was the national chairman.

Black Priests Rallying Behind Cardinal Cody

CHICAGO (AP) — Black priests in the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago plan to hold a rally honoring their spiritual leader, Cardinal John Cody, who is under federal investigation for alleged misuse of $1 million in tax-exempt church money.

"We, the Black Catholic Clergy of Chicago, do not intend to stand by mute in the midst of the raging controversy," the Rev. Dominic Carmon, leader of the group, said at a Wednesday news conference attended by 15 black priests.

The tribute will be at the 12,500-seat International Amphitheater on Friday morning. The group said it will present Cody with a plaque and honor him with music and speeches for his work over the years in the city's black community.

"There certainly is a crisis in the archdiocese, and we want everyone to know where we stand," said another member, the Rev. George Clements. "We all agree that a man is innocent until proven guilty."

Clements said Cody, leader of the nation's largest Roman Catholic diocese, was invited. But a spokesman for the archdiocese said the rally was a "spontaneous gesture" and was not on the cardinal's agenda. The spokesman declined to say whether Cody might alter his schedule to attend.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported last week that a federal grand jury is investigating whether Cody used two unaudited bank accounts to bankroll a life-long friend, Helen Dolan Wilson. The acting U.S. attorney in Chicago, Dan Webb, has declined to comment except to say he has received allegations concerning Cody and he will investigate.

Meanwhile, the National Catholic Reporter, an independent, liberal religious newspaper published in Kansas City, Mo., criticized Cody for what it called a lack of openness about the financial affairs of the Chicago Archdiocese.

In an editorial, it said the probe may be "the tip of an iceberg — the bulk of which may always remain hidden."

The editorial warned there is danger of government overstepping legal boundaries in investigating the actions of the church, but added that "the conduct of the archbishop and his clerks in handling money has simply gone unmonitored ... we suggest Cody immediately give the appropriate information to an impartial group of respected citizens and through them make the information available to all interested parties."

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Virginia Electric and Power Co. President William W. Berry said Wednesday that improvements made by the utility in the last two years will make its rates more competitive with its competitors.

"The bottom line is we have gone through a period where we've changed our mix," he told the General Assembly's Utility Review Committee. "We expect our prices of electricity to grow no greater than the rate of inflation."

Berry said he expects Vepco's retail rates to keep pace with the rate of inflation in the next ten years, a contention borne out by two other utility specialists heard by the committee.

"Vepco has changed its direction as well as its attitude towards its North Carolina operations," said Robert Fischbach, executive director of the state Utilities Commission Public Staff.

Fischbach attributed the improvement to changes in Vepco's top management and to "intense scrutiny" by North Carolina officials and the Utilities Commission.

Fischbach added, however, that Vepco's rates charged to residential and industrial customers continue to be higher than those charged by Duke Power Co. and Carolina Power & Light Co.

The Richmond-based utility provides service to northeastern North Carolina, and it has come under heavy attack in recent years — particularly by Gov. Jim Hunt — for its relatively high rates and use of expensive, oil-fired generating plants.

Brian Flattery, a North Carolina State University professor hired as consultant to the legislative panel, added his comments in a report to the joint House-Senate oversight committee.

"Nearly everyone on the commission and the Public Staff feels that the recent changes in management have brought about a new attitude toward North Carolina," Flattery said.

He said the changes included the elevation of Berry to president of the company last year and the hiring of Jack Ferguson as vice president for power supply.

Berry told the panel the gap between Vepco and CP&L rates should narrow by December, because CP&L is expected to have higher fuel costs reflected in its rates.

Berry came under repeated questioning from Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, about the utility's future rate plans. Berry told Miller Vepco expects its growth in rates to remain in line with the consumer price index "over the decade."

Miller complained following the meeting that he believed Vepco's 14 percent return in dividends to stockholders, as stated by Berry to the panel, was excessive. He also said the panel should consider proposing legislation that would authorize the Utilities Commission in the future to force a utility company to withdraw service from an area and turn it over to another company.

Death To The Guillotine

During the French Revolution, Paris became accustomed to the sound of carts carrying hundreds of people to the dreaded guillotine. Joseph Guillotin, a member of the Revolutionary Assembly, designed the beheading machine as a merciful means of execution. When the executioner cut the guillotine's rope, a heavy steel blade dropped, killing its victim instantly. Since the Revolution, the guillotine has been the official means of execution in France, although it hasn't been used since 1977. President Mitterrand believes France should abolish capital punishment. Today the French legislature begins debate on Mitterrand's proposal to put the guillotine to death forever.

No Early Wealth For Hughes' Heirs

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers say it could be years before any heirs of Howard Hughes get a penny of the reclusive billionaire's massive estate, even though the final claims by relatives have been settled in Texas.

Harris County Probate Judge Pat Gregory approved the last Texas claims Wednesday, awarding 9.5 percent of the fortune to two stepchildren of Hughes' paternal uncle, Rupert Hughes.

The ruling marked an end to five years of litigation on the probate level in this state, but about 500 distant relatives whose claims were denied have vowed to appeal here. The other stumbling block to handing out awards is the feud between Texas and California: both states claim Hughes as a resident at the time of his death on April 5, 1976 and want to tax the heirs.

Should California be declared Hughes' legal residence, the claims to the estate would have to go through courts there, bringing a replay of the complex and conflicting claims of hundreds of people who claim to be descended from the tycoon's family.

The state versus state battle comes later this year in the U.S. Supreme Court when they square off to see which has the right to collect hefty inheritance taxes.

"There are still several appeals and the tax suits. But we're now down to dealing with very specific, narrow issues," said lawyer Wayne Fisher, who represents Rupert Hughes' two stepchildren. "When you think of what's left compared with the number of claims that have been ruled on, we've just taken one giant step."

Estimates of the size of the estate have ranged from $180 million to $2 billion.

Gregory earlier said 17 maternal relatives of Hughes were entitled to share the estate and a six-member jury decided that three paternal first cousins of the late tycoon also were legitimate heirs.

The judge's ruling meant all 22 Hughes relatives who signed a family settlement just months after Hughes' death have been declared heirs to the fortune here.

The Texas agreement designates 25 percent of the estate to be donated to charity. The maternal heirs will split 71.5 percent of the remainder, and the five paternal first cousins will divide 28.5 percent.

Lawyers for 400 of the distant relatives whose claims were denied showed up at Wednesday's hearing to challenge the claims of Avis Hughes McIntyre of Montgomery, Ala. and the estate of her brother, the late Rush Hughes, but Gregory ruled they had no standing and he did not allow them to argue their case.

Gregory ruled that although Rupert never formally adopted Mrs. McIntyre, 81, and her brother, they were entitled to share in his estate because Rupert gave them his name and provided for their care and education.

The judge ordered the hearings to determine the maternal and paternal heirs when he declared earlier that Hughes left no valid will or immediate survivors when he died at age 70 aboard an emergency medical flight from Acapulco, Mexico to Houston.

The maternal heirs were unchallenged in an August hearing and a six-member jury upheld the claims of Rupert Hughes' three granddaughters Sept. 4.

N.C. School Ranked 2nd

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Statistics released Wednesday show the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics in Durham ranked second nationally in the number of semifinalists in the 1982 National Merit Scholarship competition.

The residential high school had 43 semifinalists and ranked second to Stuyvesant High School in New York City, which had 53 semifinalists. Stuyvesant has ranked first in the country for five years.

The semifinalists, determined by scores on the 1980 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test, represent the top half of 1 percent of each state's high school senior class.

The National Merit program is the largest independently financed competition for college undergraduate scholarships in the nation.

Charles R. Eilber, the Science and Math school's director, said he was pleased by the students' performance but was not surprised, given their level of ability.

The school, which just began its second year of operation, has 303 students — 138 seniors and 165 juniors. A total of 142 students took the qualifying test for the scholarship.

British troops captured Fort Niagara from the Americans in 1813 during the War of 1812. The fort had been built in 1687 by the French at the mouth of the Niagara River. It was captured by the British in 1759 and then turned over to the United States in 1796.

None Of The 'Old Guard' Will Be Giving TV News

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If Walter Cronkite was the most trusted man in America, David Brinkley our moral conscience and John Chancellor a pillar of integrity, what happens when they're not around to read dinner-time news stories anymore?

The networks' lust for ratings and younger talent will soon create a situation in which none of the old guard will be telling us what we need to know. Even though the networks ostensibly are rejecting the wisdom of these sages for the fresher perspective of whippersnappers like Dan Rather, Roger Mudd and Tom Brokaw, we'll certainly survive.

It's all happened before. "These things go in cycles," said Chancellor, 54. "I was 43 when I took over for Chet Huntley, and he was in his 60s."

Chancellor is being replaced by the boyish Brokaw, 41, who will join the youthful-looking Mudd, 53, on NBC's "Nightly News" April 5.

Brinkley announced his retirement two weeks ago because, he said, the job he wanted, anchoring the news, was "locked up" by Mudd and Brokaw.

CBS won a three-network bidding war for the 49-year-old Rather by letting him replace Cronkite a little sooner than Cronkite had planned. Cronkite was 64 when he retired but only 45 when he began his stint on the evening news in 1962.

When ABC News President Rooney Arledge brought in the "World News Tonight" triumvirate of Peter Jennings, 43, Max Robinson, 42, and Frank Reynolds, 57, he swept out the old — Harry Reasoner as anchorman and Howard K. Smith as commentator.

"I don't see the changes as a problem at all," said Chancellor. "Generally, people in their 40s are ready for these jobs. It takes about 20 years of experience."

In truth, a 30-minute newscast doesn't fully call on an anchorman's journalistic talent, sources or background. Chancellor, an old hand at covering political conventions, election nights and space shots, will probably get to use his reportorial experience and contacts more in his new job as senior analyst on the "Nightly News."

Without downplaying the importance of being an anchorman, Chancellor says the program's time constraints and format demand tightly structured writing that introduces the news but rarely explains it. He calls this "anchorese."

"With my commentaries, I hope to do the kind of journalism that I haven't been able to do because I've stuck to the discipline of being an anchorman," he said.

Network newscasts generally tell viewers what happened, not so much why and rarely what it all means. A wider perspective is what Chancellor will bring to the broadcast three or four times a week.

"I'm often asked: 'What's really going on?' or 'What does it all mean?' A great deal of that kind of information is lost in details. One function of my new job is to explain what's happening."

When religious leaders in Egypt were arrested recently, NBC's Cairo bureau was consumed with tracking down details and pictures of the unfolding story.

"Cairo didn't have time to do backgrounding, but the audience deserved some explanation and reflection," Chancellor said. Next spring, you can expect Mudd or Brokaw to introduce Chancellor for some answers.

Spectators at the World Team Championship in Port Chester, N.Y. next month will have the pleasure of watching Britain's John Collings in action. A mercurial bidder, he is one of the world's fastest and most accurate card players. This hand is from Britain's match against Hungary during the recent European Championships.

The contract of six spades was reached at both tables. The Hungarian declarer won the club lead in dummy, cashed the ace and queen of trumps and then laid down the king of diamonds. That protected against a 5-1 diamond break. Unfortunately, diamonds were 6-0. West ruffed and cashed the ace of hearts for a one-trick set.

Unlucky! To find a 6-0 break is a rare occurrence. But Collings found the superior — and successful — line in less than 10 seconds!

He won the ace of clubs, cashed the ace of spades and led a low heart from dummy. When East followed with a low heart, Collings claimed the rest of the tricks!

Assume that West returns a trump. Declarer wins in hand, ruffs a heart with the king of trumps and gets back to his hand with a club ruff. He draws the last trump and can then overtake the king of diamonds in dummy and cash three high diamonds to discard all of his remaining hearts.

Teammate Irving Rose confessed that he had a moment of worry as he watched Collings play the hand. Not that he ever doubted that Collings would make the contract. "I was simply wondering whether he (Collings) would find the winning play in less than 15 seconds!"

Certain Sales Need Action

City Clerk Lois Worthington reminded local merchants that state general statutes require that any business conducting sales billed as going out of business, liquidation, lost our lease, or smoke, fire, or water damaged goods, must make application to the city clerk at least seven days prior to the sale's opening date.

Mrs. Worthington said applications must be made in person by the owner, manager, or person legally responsible for the business. She said that under state law failure to comply with this requirement is subject to a misdemeanor.

Merchants desiring more information may call Mrs. Worthington at 752-4137, extension 216, or visit her office on the first floor at city hall.

Arrests Top 800 In Diablo Canyon N-Plant Siege

By STEVE FOX
Associated Press Writer

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Deputies drew their batons sweeping aside demonstrators blockading the Diablo Canyon atomic power plant and arrests topped 800, but protesters said they would persevere until there is no one left to arrest.

Hundreds of demonstrators were gathered in the hills around the plant early today, preparing to lay siege to the plant for a third day, protest organizers said. But their ranks were thinned as many of their colleagues remained in jail and the others were released on the condition that they stay away from the blockade.

The first 200 protesters arrested were to be arraigned today on charges of trespassing and failure to disperse.

More than 1,000 people took part in the protest Wednesday and demonstrators succeeded in delaying 14 busloads of workers at the front gate of the facility for almost five hours Wednesday before being swept aside in a stepped-up show of force by deputies with batons drawn for the first time.

Activists clad in wetsuits penetrated the two-mile-long safety zone set up by the Coast Guard on the plant's coastal side, with six-man motorized rubber rafts leading a Coast Guard cutter on a chase for 10 miles through the Pacific Ocean at speeds up to 30 knots. Swimmers clambered ashore from the rafts and were arrested.

Six people, one a reporter, were arrested on shore after being chased into Avila Beach, a small port about 12 miles from the plant.

Members of the Abalone Alliance, the umbrella group organizing the protest, said they were encouraged by the two-day blockade attempt and would persevere until there was no one left to arrest. The protesters oppose nuclear power in general and claim the plant, halfway between San Francisco and Los Angeles, is unsafe because it lies just three miles from an offshore earthquake fault.

"It's going to continue as long as we can hold out....Every person committed to this blockade is going to be arrested and in jail before this is over," said Larry Goldberg of Humboldt County, Calif.

On Tuesday, 563 protesters were arrested and 244 were booked on Wednesday, according to Lt. Jerry Dooley of the San Luis Obispo County Sheriff's Department.

Robert Thornberry, manager of the $2.3 billion Pacific Gas & Electric facility 12 miles south of San Luis Obispo, said delaying the workers would not affect plans to load uranium and begin low-power testing scheduled to start if a federal license is issued as expected Monday.

"I commend the Abalone Alliance," Thornberry said, saying the group "has been non-violent and there has been no significant destruction of property." He said the only damage was cause by some 200 news reporters who used the roof of a storage building as a vantage point and broke roofing tiles.

The main gate of the 735-acre facility is seven miles from the seaside reactor. It remained the focal point of action Wednesday.

At dawn, 16 women climbed over the gate and others gathered outside in the driveway. A tense confrontation began when buses full of workers drove up, scattering reporters and blockaders who massed again as the first bus stopped in front of the gate. No police were present, but PG&E workers cut chains put on the fence by demonstrators and forced it open, shoving protesters aside.

As the lead bus began to move forward, Itara Katherine O'Connell, 31, of Granada Hills, sat down in front of it. The bus edged forward as onlookers shouted warnings to the driver, and it stopped with most of the woman's body under the left bumper. She was not injured. The buses backed off, moving into the plant nearly five hours later after deputies swept into the crowd and arrested 57 people.

The sea portion of the blockade pitted the engineless Stone Witch, a 70-foot schooner owned by Greenpeace Foundation of San Francisco, and inflatable rafts against the Coast Guard cutter. The schooner remained outside a restricted zone while the cutter, her blue light flashing, went after the rubber rafts the Stone Witch had discharged.

Hester Steps Down As Chairman

ECU NEWS BUREAU
Dr. W. Erwin Hester, chairman of the department of English at East Carolina University for the past 14 years, has announced he will resign his chairmanship next year to return to full-time teaching and research as a tenured professor.

Hester said he would continue to serve until the end of the summer session of 1982.

"I have served as chairman of the English department since 1968 and feel that 14 years is long enough for a person to chair a major department," Hester said. "The English department should, I believe, continue its progress under new leadership."

Hester, 50, has served as president of the South Atlantic Association of Departments of English and as president of the North Carolina-Virginia College English Association. He is vice president of the North Carolina Folklore Society.

In his letter of resignation, Hester said the English department at ECU "has grown to one of the most productive at East Carolina, both in quantity and, more importantly, in quality. The active enrollment in our graduate program has at least tripled. During a time when virtually all English departments have experienced a serious decline in the number of undergraduate majors, we have maintained a large and vigorous program."

Activities begun under Hester's direction included the East Carolina Folklore Archive, the East Carolina Language Arts Conference, now in its 10th year, and the Children's Literature Conference, now in its sixth year.

OTTAWA, (AP) — The government lost a court bid to try to discipline Canadian air traffic controllers, but Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said they may still be punished for disrupting international flights last month.

Federal Judge James Jerome on Wednesday dismissed a government request to rule more than 100 controllers in contempt of court for refusing to clear flights to and from the United States in August.

The maximum penalty for contempt of court is a fine of $5,000 or one year in prison.

Pepin told reporters the government will now take regular disciplinary measures against the controllers such as suspensions or pay deductions.

Egypt, Israel Work On Normalization Details

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli and Egyptian officials are working out hundreds of details to put life into general agreements to normalize communications, civil aviation, tourism and transportation between their once warring countries.

Four days of talks, ending Friday, are aimed at wearing down the hostile barriers built by a generation of wars and the distrust that remained after the March 1979 peace treaty.

A normal relationship with an Arab country was the prize for which the Israelis agreed to evacuate the Sinai Peninsula, occupied since the six-day Arab-Israeli War of 1967.

The framework for normal relations was built into the Camp David peace treaty, but Israel complained that the Egyptians refused to fill in all the open spaces. The normalization talks were scheduled after Prime Minister Menachem Begin took the complaints to his meeting last month with President Anwar Sadat in Alexandria, Egypt.

Both Egyptians and Israelis want to complete the normalization issues by next April to ensure a smooth Israeli evacuation of the final quarter of Sinai, completing a phased pullback to the 1967 border.

Among the details agreed on in the current talks, cited by the Israelis as indications of progress, are:

— Israeli trucks will travel through Sinai to Egypt after changing their license plates at the border checkpoint. Now goods have to be transferred to Egyptian trucks.

— Israeli truck drivers and tourist guides will be given multiple entry visas.

— Flights from Tel Aviv to Cairo will be increased from four to five weekly, and small aircraft will have landing rights at airstrips near Sinai tourist spots.

The complicated negotiations encompass only a few facets of normalization. Commercial ties and the details of Israel's withdrawal are to be discussed separately.

Sinai looms large in the talks. The Israelis are loath to lose access to the tropical wonderland on the Red Sea coast where they built flourishing tourist resorts during 14 years of occupation. On Jewish holidays a 50-mile stretch of coast becomes a flap-to-flap tent camp.

"We tried to explain what it was like on the Passover or Shavuot. They were amazed," said Israeli negotiator Oded Eran.

Israel is asking Egypt to go beyond the normal arrangements for tourism in the Sinai. For example, Egypt is being asked to exempt Israelis going to the southern coast from a requirement that arriving tourists change $150 into Egyptian currency because campers might not carry that much.

There are political problems as well as bureaucratic obstacles in resolving Israel's requests for easier

Three Wrecks Investigated By Police

An estimated $7,350 damage resulted from three traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from an 8:15 a.m. collision at the intersection of Greene and Fourth Streets, involving a car driven by Linda Adele Jones of 1104 West Fourth St., and a truck operated by Joyce Weaver Wright of 113 Cooper Ln.

Officers, who charged Ms. Jones with failing to stop for a red light, reported both drivers received minor injuries in the mishap.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $1,500 to the Jones car and $3,000 to the truck.

Cars driven by Carver McLean McGarry of 207 Pinewood Dr. and Patsy Sutton Spain of Route 1, Winterville, collided about 5:11 p.m. at the intersection of Evans and Ninth Streets, causing $1,500 damage to the McGarry car and $150 damage to the Spain vehicle.

McGarry was charged by officers with following too close in connection with the incident.

A 12:05 p.m. collision at the intersection of Wilson and Chestnut Streets involved cars driven by Annie Harrell Morris of Route 6, Greenville, and Johnny Ree Moore of 1806 Myrtle Ave.

Damage was estimated at $200 to the Morris car and $1,000 to the Moore vehicle.
