City Council Authorizes Agency Buy-In

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council, following a public hearing last night, adopted an ordinance authorizing the City of Greenville to participate in a North Carolina Power Agency Number 3 proposal to purchase ownership in several Carolina Power & Light Co. generating units and become the city's prime wholesale supplier of electric energy.

Mayor Don McGlohon said, "Negotiations have been underway between the Power Agency and CP&L for over 2½ years," and pointed out that Greenville Utilities Commission director Charles Horne, "was a member of the negotiating team which represented the Power Agency throughout these discussions."

"The proposal is now before each of the Agency's 36-member municipalities to decide whether to participate in the Power Agency joint ownership project. As of this evening, 10 other cities have already signed and agreed to participate in this project, including Tarboro, Washington, Kinston and Wilson."

According to McGlohon, "The consulting engineers for the Power Agency have said that while it will require the issuance of $1.2 billion in revenue bonds to close the purchase with CP&L, savings in future power costs through the year 2003 are projected to be in excess of $1.75 billion — a savings in excess of 11 percent over what the same cost would be if the cities continue to purchase all their power from private utility companies at wholesale."

"The engineers have estimated," the mayor continued, "that the City of Greenville would save more than any other city in the Power Agency. Our savings are projected to be $517.6 million through the year 2003.

"It is estimated that by 1993 the Power Agency would have to issue slightly more than $4 billion in bonds to complete its purchase."

Of the agency's 36 members, according to McGlohon, "22 now purchase all their power from CP&L," while the other 14, including Greenville, are now served with power generated

Price Supports Tested Tobacco, Sugar Survive Votes

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

Tobacco and sugar price supports are surviving where dairy and peanut subsidies failed as the Senate finishes work on a new four-year blueprint for the nation's farm programs.

The Farm Belt coalition, badly battered earlier this week, regrouped Thursday to fight off further attacks against commodity price supports.

With Senate leaders expecting a final vote on the multibillion-dollar farm bill late today, coalition members were optimistic that they could sidestep an attempt to reduce the price levels that would trigger direct federal payments to farmers.

"I'm part of this loose coalition. In fact it's so loose, sometimes it's hard to find," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan. "If, in fact, we start to demolish any program, we won't have a farm bill."

The trigger levels now in the farm bill, while higher than Agriculture Secretary John R. Block says is acceptable, have been tacitly endorsed by the Reagan administration, senators say.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and other Republican leaders played key roles Thursday in turning back the attempts to eliminate or scale down the tobacco and sugar programs.

Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., lost his attempt to eliminate the 43-year-old tobacco program, 53-42.

An attempt by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., to scale down some tobacco price supports failed, 48-45.

Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., was turned back, 61-33, when he tried to strip a proposed 18-cent-a-pound sugar support program from the farm bill.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., lost a 64-20 vote to cut the proposed sugar support price to 16.5 cents a pound.

The government supports commodities through loans, direct payments or purchases in an effort to maintain adequate supplies of food and fiber and provide some income protection for producers in times when market prices are depressed.

Critics of those support programs scored two major victories earlier, winning Senate approval of substantial reductions in dairy price supports and major changes in the peanut program.

Block had threatened a presidential veto if dairy supports were not drastically cut. But he had refused to take a position on changes in the peanut program, just as he had on the proposals for tobacco and sugar.

Those cuts in the committee version of the bill came when the farm-state coalition was in disarray because, according to Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., supporters of the various commodities were scrambling for the limited price support funds available.

But by Thursday, farm-state senators were able to overcome claims by Quayle that the sugar price support program would cost consumers and taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars.

They also counteracted Hatfield's charges that the tobacco program provided farmers with unwarranted subsidies and shielded them with unnecessary production controls.

Sen. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., acknowledged that when sugar was last under government supports three years ago, the government acquired substantial stocks of sugar. But he indicated that because of wildly fluctuating world sugar prices, it was able to liquidate those stocks a year later at more than $100 million profit.

Quayle said each penny that the price support program adds to the cost of sugar increases consumer costs by $300 million. But Andrews countered that consumers would be protected by the market stability and new production incentives that would result from price supports.

On tobacco, Hatfield said it was a "moral and fiscal irresponsibility" to support prices for farmers growing a non-edible commodity while at the same time cutting money from programs like food stamps and child nutrition.

Only 16 percent of the more than 250,000 acreage allotment holders in 22 states actually own the tobacco allotments they farm, he said. The tobacco program prohibits those without allotments to grow tobacco.

But Republican Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, the nation's largest tobacco producing state, said ending the tobacco program would throw tens of thousands of families on small farms into financial trouble.

"If you want to see a lollapalooza of a welfare program, destroy the tobacco program," Helms told Hatfield. "Then you will see people on welfare who are now making a productive living."

Thousands Share Ford Museum's Dedication

By BRIAN TUCKER
Associated Press Writer
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A $7 million museum honoring Gerald Ford's presidency was dedicated before more than 250,000 people today, with President Reagan hailing Ford as the man who "healed America because he so thoroughly understood America."

In a speech prepared for delivery at the dedication of the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Museum, Reagan called his fellow Republican "a good president who led us well, a good man who sought to serve others."

"His was and is an unquestioning belief in the soundness of our way of governing and in the resiliency of our people," Reagan said.

"Gerald Ford healed America because he understood the adventure of America: her way of governing, her people, and the source of her strength as a nation," Reagan said.

Ford served 2½ years in the nation's highest office after being thrust into the job in 1974, when the Watergate scandal forced President Nixon to resign.

"Gerald Ford woke us from that nightmare" of Watergate, Reagan said. "And during our bicentennial, he reminded the American people of the collective wisdom of their ways and the remarkable achievements of their past."

"Today, many of us in public life — from this country and others — have come here to speak words of tribute to Gerald Ford," said Reagan, referring to the prominent politicians and international leaders on the dais along the Grand River.

"The millions of Americans who soon hear or read these words will not long remember them but can be sure that in their minds and

Terrorist Raids Are Sharply Up

WASHINGTON (AP) — Security at government installations overseas is being increased as a result of the latest of 40 terrorist attacks against U.S. interests over the past year, the Defense Department says.

The 40 incidents included seven in West Germany in the past month, five at military installations, one at a U.S. consulate in Frankfurt and another at a Dow Chemical facility in Dusseldorf.

Defense Department spokesman Benjamin Welles said Thursday that two incidents in West Germany this week — the attempted assassination of an Army general and the discovery of two bombs at a U.S. Air Force base — resulted in increased security at government installations overseas.

However, he declined to give details on the security measures "for obvious reasons."

Welles said the government is "concerned over Soviet inspiration behind worldwide terrorism," but that he could not directly link the Soviets to individual incidents.

A sketchy list of other terrorist incidents was later released by the Pentagon. In many cases, they were simply described "classified," with no date of occurrences.

A Pentagon official, who asked not to be identified, said that although there were 16 known terrorist groups in West Germany, the so-called Red Army Faction was considered the predominant group.

He said the groups are all small, with even the Red Army Faction having only about 15 hard-core members. He said the groups are loosely tied together, trading weapons and information and using the same safe houses, but emphasized that there was no "major conspiracy" directed at U.S. personnel.

Welles said the attacks were not all directed at government officials or installations.

Soviet Again Warning Poland To Crack Down

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Soviet Union, angry at Poland's Communist leaders for failing to crack down on Solidarity despite repeated warnings, told Poland to "immediately take determined and radical" action against the independent labor federation.

The Polish government responded today with a warning to the labor union that it was jeopardizing Poland's independence. In effect it was saying that Soviet troops might occupy the country if Solidarity's agitation for democratic political reforms continued.

The Soviet Communist Party and government, in a statement made public by the official Polish news agency PAP, accused the independent labor union of a campaign of anti-Sovietism aimed at liquidating communism in Poland and taking it out of the Soviet bloc.

"We expect the (Polish Communist) leadership and the Polish government to immediately take determined and radical steps to cut short the malicious anti-Soviet propaganda and actions hostile towards the Soviet Union," said the statement, which PAP said Soviet Ambassador Boris Arisov delivered to Polish Communist Party chief Stanislaw Kania and Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski.

It was the toughest warning from Moscow since the Soviets in June criticized Kania and Jaruzelski for not putting a stop to "anti-socialist and counter-revolutionary" activity.

Solidarity said today it probably would not issue a reply until Saturday after the union's leaders had a chance to "assess the general situation, not just the Soviet letter."

The Soviet warning and the Polish government's criticism of Solidarity were given prominent space in all Polish dailies today, including the Communist Party organ Trybuna Ludu and Warsaw's leading morning daily Zycie Warszawy.

Few Questions Posed In Utilities Rates Hearing

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Only a half-dozen persons had questions or comments at a public hearing held by the Greenville Utilities Commission last night on the cost-of-service electric rates now being used by the commission.

Commission chairman Tom Shea, in opening the session said the commission "called this special public hearing for the purpose of receiving questions and comments from any citizen/ratepayer concerning the ... recently adopted cost-of-service rates.

"The cost-of-service electric rates were adopted based on a thorough, year-long study and report prepared by R. W. Beck & Associates, engineering consultants. The report includes both a re-allocation of cost to serve various classes of users, plus a wholesale rate increase imposed on Greenville by Virginia Electric & Power Co., effective September 1."

Adoption of the rates, according to Shea, "is also in accordance with the requirements of

BABY LASSITER FEEDBACK

Two-month-old Donnie Lassiter Jr., whose illness and family's financial and emotional plight was written of in last Friday's Hotline column, will, if he survives through the weekend, be transferred Monday to Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, Mass. Doctors there have seen this infant's rare blood disorder only twice, the last time in 1973. He is a possible candidate for a bone marrow transplant there, and if it is deemed advisable, his five-year-old sister will be the donor.

His parents, Don and Dot Lassiter, this sister, as well as a doctor and a nurse from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, will accompany him to Boston. This trip and everything connected with the baby's critical illness, discovered when he was one week old, is frightfully expensive. Anyone who can help with donations is asked to channel these through the Lassiters' church, Gethsemane Pentecostal Holiness, P.O. Box 175, Grimesland 27837. The church has set up a tax-deductible Donnie Lassiter Jr. Fund.

Residency Of A Candidate Is Up To Challenger

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

What constitutes residency for a candidate for the office of mayor of Greenville? That question has been heard since former Greenville mayor Percy Cox filed as a candidate last week.

Cox, who was first appointed to the City Council to fill an unexpired term, then won election to six terms on the board before running successfully for mayor in 1975 and 1977, chose not to seek re-election in 1979 because he planned to move into a new house outside the city limits.

When he filled as a candidate last week, Cox said that although he still owns a house outside the city, he has made his residence in an apartment inside the city limits since January.

"I have the same situation now that I had before. I rented an apartment in Courtney Square and owned a home at the beach. I sold the home to buy a house in Pitt County."

"I lived in two houses, one apartment and two condominiums while I was mayor before and owned two houses at Atlantic Beach."

In order to file as a candidate for mayor or city council, a person must be a qualified registered voter within the city and must be 21 years of age, according to Margaret Register, supervisor of elections for the Pitt County Board of Elections. And in order to be a qualified registered voter, you must be a resident of the precinct in which you are registered for 30 days prior to the date of the election.

"If someone wanted to challenge his eligibility in the address he is located in," Miss Register noted, "it would be up to the challenger to prove he is not a resident of the city."

Cox, according to records at the Board of Elections office, changed his registration from Route 9, Greenville on August 7 to 1801A Cedar Lane in Greenville Precinct Number 7.

According to Jim Bullock of the N.C. Attorney General's office, "you have to establish residency 30 days prior to an election to vote," and a registered voter who is 21 years old may hold office.

However Bullock said residency, as it applies to the voting laws, means "domicile," defined by "Webster" as "the actual dwelling place that is one's permanent and principal home."

"Domicile ... the permanent place, permanent home. It's a matter of intent," Bullock explained.

"Is he physically present in a new domicile? We look at things he does, has done or is doing to support that intent ... his mailing address, the address on his drivers license, where he pays taxes, church affiliation, what clubs he's affiliated with ...," Bullock explained.

"A person may have three places of residence but only one domicile."

"It comes down to a matter of judgement," and if a voter or candidate is challenged, "the county Board of Elections has to make the determination."

Three Are Guests Of County's Demo Women

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Staff Writer

Three leading members of North Carolina Democratic Women were here yesterday afternoon for a wine and cheese party sponsored by the Pitt County Democratic Women.

Honored were Mrs. Angie Elkins of Durham, vice president of the National Federation of Democratic Women and Mrs. Ruth Starnes of Monroe, who is state president of Democratic Women. Also present was Mrs. Betty McCain of Wilson. She is a member of the Democratic National Committee.

Mrs. Elkins is serving in an elected position within the Democratic Women in 43 states. She is now serving her first year and will be traveling throughout the United States speaking, attending Democratic National Committee meetings and trying to help organize states that have no Democratic Women groups.

Her husband, Fred, is the chief counselor and administrator of the juvenile court in Durham County. Their son, Butch, is a lawyer and is serving in the U. S. Air Force in Germany. Daughter, Candy, is a recently sworn in magistrate in Durham and their youngest, Debbie, is a junior high student and also a cheerleader.

When asked what she foresees politically for women in politics, Mrs. Elkins said, "I do have to look at this question from a standpoint of Democratic women. The changes already are tremendous since the time I became active in the '60's. Women now days are involved in all levels of politics from being candidates themselves to chairing candidate campaigns and serving as party chairpersons. I guess the best way I can describe this is that women have come from the front office where they greeted people and served coffee to the back room where they make decisions. I think women in politics, regardless of the role they play, must prove themselves and unfortunately because of that there are just a few women that seem to be called on continuously to do the politicking. I wish there was some way to convince more women that it's really not hard to get into politics. We need more women."

Mrs. Starnes is the first to serve a second term as state president of Democratic Women which she is now doing. She is an accountant and has her own office. She is also the mother of two daughters, Joan, who is a minister and Carol is a program coordinator at Rowan Technical Institute.

In commenting on future plans of Democratic Women, Mrs. Starnes said, "... to help the Democratic Party elect Democrats."

"I'm pleased to have a woman appointee, Sandra Day O'Connor, to the Supreme Court but I sincerely hope that she is not an anachronism like Reagan, Helms and East," said Mrs. Starnes.

Wife of Dr. John McCain, Mrs. McCain is the first woman appointed to the North Carolina Advisory Budget Commission. She was appointed by Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. She was a former member of the Board of Governors of the University of North Carolina. She was also the first woman chairman of the N. C. Democratic Party.

As a member of the Commission on Presidential Nominations (Hunt Commission), she said, "Two major problems we are looking at are the length of the primary season and so few elected and party officials in the state delegations to the National Convention. There is third thing — whether or not to make the National Convention a real nominating convention. Of course, we are looking at the entire nominating process."

The wine and cheese party was held at the home of Mrs. Louis Evans.

Life As It's Lived

The World's A Stage And It Has A Director

By GAIL MICHAELS
Meg would agree with Shakespeare that "all the world's a stage and all the men and women merely players" — all, that is, except her. She is a director. When she plays with other children, she insists upon her conventions, her dialogue, and her costuming. Input from others sources is not tolerated whether it be from the other participants or from her irate mother whose nervous system doesn't exactly thrive on the bickering.

On those rare occasions when Meg confronts someone just as bossy as herself, the result is like rubbing two sticks together in parched underbrush. During a recent visit from a particularly stubborn playmate, the shrill exchange of unheeded directions scorched the air. My inquiry into the source of the problem elicited an exaggerated frown from Meg and the statement, "That seven-year-old thinks she knows more than me just because she's older."

"Well, how about this? You can ride your raft in three more times; then we'll go in."

"No."
"Meg, I'm going in, and you can't stay in the ocean without me."

"That's not fair," she said. "You promised you'd play with me."

"I finally found a word that Meg doesn't know the meaning of," he told me after he had dragged her into shore. "Compromise."

Meg had to stop her sniffing long enough to answer that aspersions upon her intellect. "I do too know the meaning of that word. But right now I'm just trying to forget it."

City Council...

by Virginia Electric & Power Co. "The cities that vote to participate in the Agency's proposed project would, at the time the purchase is closed with CP&L, receive all their electric power from the Power Agency."

Under the proposal Power Agency Number 3 would begin delivering power to its participating members soon after the closing in December and the projected savings in power costs would begin the first year of Agency operation, the mayor continued. "The projected savings result primarily from the municipal agency's ability to issue tax exempt revenue bonds, which carry a lower interest rate than bonds issued by the private company."

"All bonds used to finance the purchase would be electric revenue bonds issued by the Power Agency. Neither Greenville nor any other city would issue bonds for the project," and the agency's bonds "would be secured by long-term power sales contracts between the cities and the Agency, under which the cities would provide funds from their electric revenues for the Agency's operating costs and to retire the bonds."

"I want to emphasize again that no tax money would be used in this project."

Responding to questions and comments from seven individuals, Ralph Shaw, general manager of the Power Agency, explained that the agency would own portions of nine generating units at four CP&L plants, including coal and nuclear units, and in turn, sell power to member municipalities. The bonds issued by the power agency to make the purchase would be secured by power sales agreements with the various municipalities and the revenue from the sale of power to the various cities would be used to retire the bonds and operate the agency.

Shaw said approval by 51 percent of the potential participants and 65 percent of the potential load is required for successful completion of the proposed buy-in.

"Yes, there are disadvantages," Shaw noted. "Just like owning a house, there are advantages of ownership and there are disadvantages. There are certain risks."

"If you are renting and a tree falls on a house, it's up to the owner to fix it," but the rent will go up. "If you own the house, you fix the roof. You are going to pay for that whether you own or rent." Shaw said, suggesting that the Power Agency would be able to face such ownership costs at less expense because it is a governmental body able to issue tax exempt bonds at a cheaper interest rate than a private utility company.

McGlohon emphasized, "We're going to pay for it either way."

Shaw noted that nationwide there are some 50 agencies similar to Power Agency Number 3 which are operating successfully. The same firm which did the engineering study and negotiating for the North Carolina project — R. W. Beck and Associates — was the consultant for 45 of the other agencies.

The only alternative to the Power Agency, Shaw noted, is for Greenville and the other municipalities involved to remain customers of private utilities such as CP&L and Veeco.

The total cost to Greenville as a power agency participant, Shaw explained, is "just pay your utility bill. The City of Greenville does not invest any money."

Following the hearing, the council voted unanimously to approve the project power sales agreement assuring Greenville's participation in the Power Agency buy-in and city and utilities commission officials signed the necessary documents.

the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act of the U.S. Department of Energy."

The information gained from the meeting, Shea said, "will be considered by the Commission as it continually evaluates electric rates as cost and conditions of service change."

Veeco's rate for wholesale power to Greenville increased 21.7 percent the first of September.

In using the cost-of-service study to pass the increase along to customers, rates for residential service were increased an average of 2.3 percent while rates for small general service customers were increased an average of 15.87 percent. Rates for large general service customers were increased an average of 13.42 percent, while rates for county, municipal and other governmental all-electric building service went up an average of 35.26 percent.

Under the cost-of-service study, rates for seasonal general service customers were reduced an average of 22.62 percent.

Representatives from the Beck firm explained how the percent increase for the various classes of customers was determined, using a number of criteria.

The representative also noted that it would be "very useful" if GUC customers would make an effort to use more electricity during non-peak hours. Peak hours are roughly from 5 to 7 p.m. during summer months and from about 6:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. during the winter.

Such a move, he suggested, would spread the use of electricity more evenly over the entire day and tend to reduce the peak demand for service, which in turn, would ultimately save money for all customers.

"The intricacies of rate-setting are very complex," Shea said. "That's the reason," the Beck firm was hired to conduct the study.

'Burnout' Is Product Of Long-Term Chronic Stress

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

In a hospital, office or classroom, behind a department store counter, and even in the squadcars and buses of America this day, a few souls are "burning out."

It may even be happening in a convent or law or church office.

A burnout victim doesn't sizzle or emit smoke the way a shorted electrical circuit does.

No pop. No crackle. No sparks.

As a matter of fact, says Dr. Pamela Patrick, a "burnout" expert from St. Petersburg, Fla., the symptoms often are subtle. And they don't come on suddenly. They build up.

Dr. Patrick, a formerly burned-out nurse, said signs include fatigue, a dead-tired feeling, a lack of enthusiasm for work that once captivated, crabbiness settling in where delight once reigned.

"Burnout is the end product of long-term chronic stress brought about by work-related problems rather than by personal difficulties," she said.

"People in the 'helping professions' — social work, teaching and law as well as health care — are especially vulnerable to burnout. Their work revolves around the problems of other people.

"Burnout is a special hazard in the health care field, particularly in hospitals.

"This is due to the emotional environment, stressful situations, and erratic hours characteristic of this field."

But burnout can happen to anyone serving the public, even bus drivers and sales clerks who must operate by the dictum that the customer is always right, burnout experts claim. Charm disappears; motions become mechanical, devoid of any genuine feeling.

Other fields with potential for "burnout," experts claim, are highly stressful ones such as air traffic controlling or those full of deadlines and shifts around the clock, seven days a week. Journalism, for example.

Dr. Patrick, the nation's newest authority on "burnout" in the healthcare field, has just written a book for Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association — "Health Care Worker Burnout" (Inquiry).

Dr. Pamela Patrick

In it she tells how to prevent burnout, how to recognize the signs when it starts to happen, how to defuse them, and, if victimized by the stress-induced malady, how to aid recovery.

The Rx, believe it or not, for both prevention and recovery include taking mini-vacations and even doing something silly once a week.

"Learning how to say no is a very important part of an individual's attack on burnout," Dr. Patrick said. Some burnout victims can't say no. They overload their circuits.

And some can't get away from the job — even at lunchtime. They eat at their desks or on the run or in the machine-city lunchrooms in the places they work.

Dr. Patrick's reports on burnout in the health care field have been published in Hospitals, journal of the American Hospital Association, and nursing journals.

Her previous books include "Nursing Care of the Alcoholic and Drug Abuser." She also wrote a chapter on burnout strategies for nurses, "Cancer Nursing."

The consultant to hospitals has worked as a nurse and as a professor of nursing. For three years she was clinical psychologist with the North Mississippi Medical Center, a 600-bed complex in Tupelo, Miss.

She said her "burnout" clients there came from the ranks of patients, their families, hospital staff.

Walter J. McMerney, president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield Association, estimates the cost of burnout in the health care field in the "billions of dollars."

Of equal concern, McMerney says, is the extent to which "burnout" threatens patient care.

Dr. Patrick, whose Ph.D. is from the University of Hawaii, said a patient served by staffers suffering from "burnout" gets shots and other medications, as scheduled.

But the patient is cheated of tender, loving care — a key ingredient in the medical, emotional and spiritual mix served patients to ease their anxieties and sorrows, as she sees it.

A nurse or other hospital worker who is drained and functioning like a robot can't find the words anymore to comfort a patient who has just been told he has cancer, for example.

A "burned out" hospital executive in charge of patient relations only goes through the automatic motions when trying to console parents who just lost a child.

Burnout experts such as Dr. Patrick claim the potential for burnout is high among:

—People in medical frontlines. Doctors and nurses, especially the latter. Seeing patients not make it, seeing little children die. Knowing a right or a wrong choice may mean the difference between life and death. Or not having time to give tender loving care, be it at the bedside, in the x-ray suite or during a surgical prep. "Probably the most vulnerable are nurses who, in addition to enduring erratic hours and unending crises with their typical overload of patients, have little opportunity for professional advancement."

—People exposed to the public in service roles, even some bus drivers, for example, who have to take it from the customers day after day, becoming less and less human with each dose of insults.

—People such as social workers who are expected to function as a crying towel for the troubled, be they physically or emotionally ill, in bad with the law, sad or mournful, or suffering from overindulgences — alcoholics, workaholics, foodaholics.

—People who in their normal line of work land in the middle of other people's arguments, like police on domestic squabble calls, or lawyers in divorce skirmishes.

—Those who must be all things good and perfect to all people — especially those in need. Men and women in religious ministries.

—Working mothers, especially those who are single parents.

Dr. Patrick, the mother of an 18-month-old son, said she is protecting herself from burnout that can develop in working mothers. How?

She and her husband, also a clinical psychologist, share — "about 50-50" — housekeeping and childrearing chores.

Stress is much a part of the burnout syndrome, she said.

"And, believe me, there's nothing to compare with the stress I felt when first left on my own with the baby," she

Dear Abby

Woman Afraid Of Open Spaces

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My sister's son is being married at this very moment in a church less than a mile from here. My whole family is there having a wonderful time with all of the out-of-town relatives and here I sit. I am physically well, have a beautiful outfit I could have worn, and of course I was invited, so why am I not there enjoying myself with the rest of them? I am ashamed to tell you. I didn't go because I am terrified of leaving this house and going out-of-doors! I know it doesn't make any sense, but this terrible fear hits me as soon as I walk out the door.

Please don't tell me to see a psychiatrist. I am not "crazy." This is the only thing that is the matter with my thinking. I can't explain it, and I can't seem to talk myself out of it.

Maybe if one of your readers who has had the same problem would write in, it would help me. Sometimes just knowing how someone else has been able to overcome a problem is much more helpful than any head doctor.

Thank you, Abby.

ASHAMED BUT HELPLESS IN OMAHA

DEAR ABBY: No need to be ashamed. You have a condition known as "agoraphobia" — a fear of open spaces. It is much more common than you think. Please consult a psychiatrist for this condition. There is a new form of drug treatment for agoraphobia that helps a large percentage of sufferers within a relatively short time. Any competent psychiatrist will know about this treatment. Good luck.

***

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married only three weeks, and we just had our first really serious argument. The two of us were having dinner at a very nice steak house where the tables are quite close together.

Two couples were sitting at the next table, just finishing their steaks, so I leaned over and very politely said, "When you're finished, may we have your steak bones for our dog?"

One of the women said in a very snotty tone, "Sorry, but we happen to have a dog of our own!" Then they all laughed. My husband gave me a tongue-lashing all the way home. He said he had never been so embarrassed in his life.

Now, tell me, Dear Abby, what was so terrible about asking for their bones?

LOVES MY DOG

DEAR ABBY: Nothing. But in the future, perhaps you should first ask your steak-eating neighbors if they have a dog; then your husband will have no bones to pick with you.

***

DEAR ABBY: Now that "back-to-school" clothes are on everyone's shopping list, it might do well to caution mothers, especially grandmothers, that sweaters, mittens, caps and schoolbags with children's first names on them are not just "cute," they are dangerous. It gives strangers an opportunity to address the child by name and claim a family or friendly relationship, thus disarming an otherwise wary youngster.

Department stores should be discouraged from "personalizing" children's clothes.

NO NAMES PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Ten years ago I would have said, "Oh, don't be so paranoid!" Today, I say, "Thanks for pointing out yet another danger in these troubled times."

THE STARS OF THE GEM SCENE
Gemstones, like people, have unique personalities. Some are dull and listless; others are bright and exciting. Some remain in the background; other are stars. And by stars, I mean, literally, stars!

Some gem materials have an internal structure that causes a star to appear on the surface. Star ruby and star sapphire are the best known of these. They contain numerous, needle-like inclusions which intersect at specific angles. Light reflects off these inclusions in such a way that a star seems to float over the gemstone when the light source, the stone, or the beholder moves.

In order for this phenomenon to occur, however, the stone must be cut in a coccobion (in a dome shape) rather than be faceted. The laws of physics are the governing factors here.

Stars also occur in a number of other gems such as quartz and garnet. Sometimes the stars are strong, sometimes not; sometimes they hobble on a weak leg or two; sometimes there's more than one star visible in a single stone! It all depends on the unique internal characteristics of the gem and the nature and power of the light source with which it is interacting. As American Gem Society jewelers, we have studied the science of gemology and try to keep up on the latest trends and developments in the industry. We hope you'll come to us for guidance when a gem purchase is in your stars.

The Tax cuts — Don't Spend Your Money Yet!

After the strike of major league baseball players, probably the biggest topic of conversation this past summer has been the federal tax bill enacted by Congress and signed by the President early in August. This act, the Economic Recovery Act of 1981, has many features and will affect every American in some way. It provides for changes in federal income taxes rates and deductions, and makes some big changes in the federal estate tax laws.

Dr. Justine Rozier, Extension Family Resource Management specialist, feels that probably the most important feature of the tax act is the three-year cut in income tax rates. You should feel this first in October when the first phase, a five percent reduction in current income tax withholding, goes into effect. To find out how much your tax will change, multiply the amount taken out of your last paycheck for federal taxes by .05. The result is the amount of extra money you will have to take home each time you make as much money as you did in the last paycheck. This 5 percent reduction in withholding will continue until next July, when an additional 10 percent reduction in taxes will be made. A 10 percent cut will also be made in July of 1983.

Most individuals will appreciate having a little more money to take home, and some have already made plans for spending the extra money. Economists in Washington hope that most individuals will invest the money rather than spending it and have provided some incentives to savings in the bill.

As with most increases in pay, many individuals seem to believe that extra take-home pay can be used to buy extras or upgrade their level of consumption. Some even take on new credit obligations that will eventually cost them more than the increase in pay. The best use of the money for some individuals might be paying off old debts. For some, the amount may be too small to even worry about.

"One reason for some people to be cautious about spending the increase in take-home pay," said Dr. Rozier, "is that it might soon be erased by an increase in Social Security payments. Effective January 1, 1982, employer and employee contributions to Social Security will change to 6.70 percent of income from the current rate of 6.65 percent. And, the maximum annual wage subject to Social Security withholding will increase from $29,700 to $31,800. So, the net effect for some people with the income tax cut and the Social Security increase may be negative. This is, they may have less take-home pay after January than they have now."

If you get a pay raise in the meantime, the whole situation will change according to Dr. Rozier. You will owe more taxes after the pay increase, especially if the extra income puts you into a higher tax bracket. After 1984, the problem of "bracket creep" will be relieved by another feature of this year's tax bill. Income tax rates will be indexed to inflation. This will mean that if your income in a particular year increases the same amount as the annual rate of inflation for that year, the increase will not put you into a higher tax rate bracket. With a fixed income you might drop into lower tax rate brackets.

Important Test Passed

North Carolina farmers have apparently won one and lost one in the U.S. Senate debates over farm programs.

A first test of the agricultural programs came in a crucial vote over the peanut allotment program. That one was lost by a 56-42 vote. The senators were voting to eliminate the acreage allotments, although a compromise was pulled off to save the remainder of the program.

The Senate action, of course, does not bind the House which might vote the full program in, but if the Senate action stands it will be disastrous for North Carolina peanut farmers. Non-peanut producing areas are likely to get into peanut production and the result could be a market glut.

The peanut action was seen as a disintegration of the farm coalition, partially because Midwestern grain and dairy farmers were unhappy with the level of farm subsidies they are to receive. The action caused major concern for the tobacco program, which was considered even more vulnerable.

Later Friday, however, the Senate took up the tobacco program and a plan to resume supports for sugar. Attempts to drop the sugar supports program were defeated 61-33. The tobacco program had a somewhat more difficult time but after considerable debate attempts to dismantle it were defeated 53-42.

Clearly sentiments are changing day-by-day in the Senate in regard to agricultural programs. We have long contended that the farm programs bring stability to the farm economy that are of immeasurable benefit to the country and, in fact, the world.

We hope that further efforts will be made to restore the peanut program. At the same time we are immensely pleased that the tobacco program has survived this Senate test. The program's continuation is of tremendous importance to North Carolina.

Jelly Bean Economics

My young nephew John came over to the house the other night and said his teacher had given him an assignment of doing a paper on Reaganomics.

I decided to explain it in terms he would understand: "I have here," I said, "a jar of jelly beans." "May I have one?" he asked. "No, you may not. You see, these jelly beans belong to the government and for years people have been eating more jelly beans than they put back in the jar. We have a deficit in jelly beans. Now what President Reagan hopes to do by 1984 is have as many jelly beans in the jar as we consume."

"How is he going to do that?" "By cutting down on the people who can have jelly beans. The fewer people who get jelly beans the less chance there will be of the jar getting empty." "That makes sense," John said.

"Now I'm going to give you 10 jelly beans." "What for?" "It's a tax cut which you're entitled to under the Kemp-Roth Jelly Bean Bill." "I thought you just said President Reagan was going to see that less people got jelly beans."

"He's just taking jelly beans away from people who don't deserve them but if you're working and putting jelly beans in the jar, you don't have to give back as many as you did before." "Then how does Mr. Reagan ever hope to get the jar filled?" John asked.

"In several ways," I explained patiently. "He's hoping that you will take the jelly beans he gave you and put them in a jelly bean savings account. Then the banks can loan them out to companies, who will make more jelly beans, and provide jobs for people." "What good will that do?"

"The more people who have jobs, the more jelly beans they will be able to put into the jar, and pretty soon the government will have a surplus of jelly beans." "How much will the banks charge to loan the jelly beans?"

"At the moment, for every 100 jelly beans they give, the borrower has to pay back 121 jelly beans plus an extra jelly bean for the paperwork." "That's a lot of jelly beans," John said. "It seems like a lot, but President Reagan believes that as soon as more and more people get their jelly bean tax cut, the banks will charge less to loan them out. The problem at the moment is that the government still has to borrow a large amount of jelly beans to take care of its obligations, so it is paying

Pressler In 'Image' Hunt

By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Larry Pressler got a brushoff from the Reagan administration after his warning about high interest rates, but his statements got a good ride in the news media.

And that about sums up the South Dakota Republican's image: that of a lawmaker better at making headlines than shaping policies. Pressler desperately wants a new image, but he still is dogged by a 1977 Wall Street Journal story which described him as "the kind of legislator who is bored by the serious work of the House and who finds that there are easier and faster ways to get the attention of the voters back home."

"Something like this does stay with you," Pressler says now. As though to confirm his words, the Almanac of American Politics cites the Journal article as "the definitive work on Pressler's service in the House," adding that his "contributions to the legislative process were nonexistent."

And just this month, columnist Jack Anderson listed Pressler as one of the nine least effective members of the Senate.

Pressler agrees that he "did spend a lot of time on activities relating to getting re-elected," but he argues that his image as a do-nothing showboater is unwarranted. "Suppose people eat their jelly bean tax cut instead of investing it?" John asked. "Then the jar will be empty by 1984 and nobody will have a bean to his name." "And that's all there is to Reaganomics?" John asked. "That's it in a nutshell," I said. "If it works, we're going to be in jelly beans up to our hips — and if it doesn't we're all going to be selling apples."

John left to write his paper. A few days later I saw him and inquired what kind of grade he got on his paper. He said he didn't know. "Why not?" I asked. "My teacher was fired because the school ran out of jelly beans."

"We have made changes in many areas" in recent years, he says. "We never issue a press release unless we accomplish something."

A former associate of Pressler, speaking anonymously, said Pressler's attention to legislative duties has improved since he came to the Senate. As chairman of a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on arms limitations, for example, Pressler has urged President Reagan to take the initiative in negotiating a treaty limiting nuclear weapons.

Pressler most recently broke into the news when he announced Aug. 20 that he was writing to Reagan and GOP National Chairman Richard Richards warning them that Republicans might suffer at the polls if the president didn't pay more attention to high interest rates.

During an interview held just after returning from a trip to the Middle East, Pressler was handed a reply from Max Friedersdorf, the president's chief lobbyist, thanking him for his comments and saying they would be considered.

"This is a nothing letter," Pressler said. "We won't settle for that."

Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker was only slightly more forthcoming, writing that high interest rates were the "inevitable result" of measures needed to combat inflation. Volcker did, however, offer to discuss the matter with Pressler over breakfast.

"I'm sure I will take him up on that," Pressler said. Despite the tepid response from the administration, Pressler said the reaction in South Dakota to his announcement was "quite favorable."

If Congress had been in session, reporters already would have had their hands full and the announcement might have attracted little notice. By calling his press conference during a recess, however, Pressler secured good attendance and some well played stories.

Pressler began his political life with a relatively liberal voting record, once earning a rating of 85 percent from the Americans for Democratic Action. He has moved steadily to the right and his 1980

N.C. Saw Growth

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Preliminary returns from the 1980 Census show that North Carolina got some surprises and some of the things the state wanted. But it didn't get others.

This state now ranks 10th in the nation in population, edging Massachusetts from that position. Total population: 5,843,665.

Hopes that North Carolina would gain another member to the 11-member delegation to the House of Representatives in the U.S. Congress failed to materialize, however.

Despite the healthy growth in population for the state, North Carolina was far from the leader in the South. Southern states as a group showed a 20 percent gain, while this state grew by 15.5 percent since 1970. The average gain across the nation was 11.4 percent.

Florida's population explosion caused that state to gain four new seats in the U.S. House and Tennessee added one. Ten other states gained a seat.

Urbanization A landmark which some experts had predicted would take place with the 1980 Census failed to materialize. Indeed, an important trend which would have had major impact on things political has reversed, if only for the time being. The state did not swing from predominately rural to predominately urban.

Census figures show that 41.6 percent of the population is "non-municipal" as of 1980. Ten years ago that percentage was 42.8.

Some planners had foreseen that more than half the state's population would be city dwellers by now, and that would give to the General Assembly and to other policy-making organizations in the state a considerably different approach to problem-solving.

Through the years, the state's big cities, concentrated in the Piedmont, have complained that they lacked either power, or sympathetic allies, in the General Assembly; that rural lawmakers from east and west outnumbered and outvoted them with regularity.

Growing urbanization of communities within those otherwise rural areas would have created pressures to cause the ranks of legislators with urban interests to grow and eventually dominate.

But there have actually been two migrations in North Carolina: one of people either coming to the state for the first time, or returning after leaving to hunt work elsewhere; and another of people moving to the small towns and countryside while remaining within commuting but right at the bottom. Four cities claim more than 100,000 population: Charlotte with 310,794; Greensboro with 154,884; Raleigh at 148,429; and Winston-Salem with 132,397. Durham missed the mark by 275 residents.

Four North Carolina counties joined those of having 100,000-plus population in 1980: Davidson, Catawba, New Hanover, and Robeson. The others in that category are Mecklenburg, Guilford, Forsyth, Wake, Cumberland, Gaston, Buncombe, Durham, Onslow.

Eight counties have fewer than 10,000 residents: Tyrrell, Hyde, Camden, Clay, Graham, Gates, Perquimans, and Jones.

distance of the cities.

Desirable The dispersed population pattern is now considered a plus for the state when talking with industrial prospects, and is promoted by the policy of balanced growth.

North Carolina now has seven regions designated as standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA) by the U.S. Census Bureau: Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point is largest, followed by Charlotte-Gastonia, Raleigh-Durham, Fayetteville, Asheville, Wilmington, and Burlington. The two top rank in the top 50 SMSA regions in the nation,

Other Editors Say Hollow Complaints

(The Durham Sun)

The world is full of contradictions. A good example in North Carolina is how people complain about the dangers of driving under the influence of alcohol, yet oddly refuse to insist on simple steps to help curb the mayhem.

Too many people treat drinking and driving while drinking as a joke. Too many judges pass out slaps on the wrist to persons convicted of driving under the influence — even persons with long records of prior convictions for drunk driving.

And as Chapel Hill Mayor Joe Nassif tried to point out recently, too many merchants apparently are too lazy or greedy to refuse to sell alcohol to minors or to persons who appear already intoxicated.

"It's hard to spot a fake ID, but it's not hard to ask to see an ID", Nassif said, or not to serve people who "clearly — had enough to drink".

Last year, according to Nassif, 13 teenagers either 16 or 17 years old were charged in Chapel Hill with driving under the influence. During just one month this summer, he said, eight people under 18 (the legal drinking age) were arrested for possessing alcohol. And of 19 traffic deaths in Orange County last year, 18 were directly attributed to drinking drivers, according to Nassif.

That's horrible. Yet many people in Orange, Durham and the state's other 98 counties continue to accept such alcohol-related deaths as one of life's sad facts rather than as something that concern and outrage can help alleviate.

Image the uproar in Orange County today if the 18 deaths had been caused by, say, improperly handled chemical or nuclear wastes.

Familiarity is supposed to breed contempt. But in the case of driving under the influence, familiarity apparently has bred nothing but apathy, resignation and continued tragedy.

Strength For Today

IN THE NAME OF RELIGION

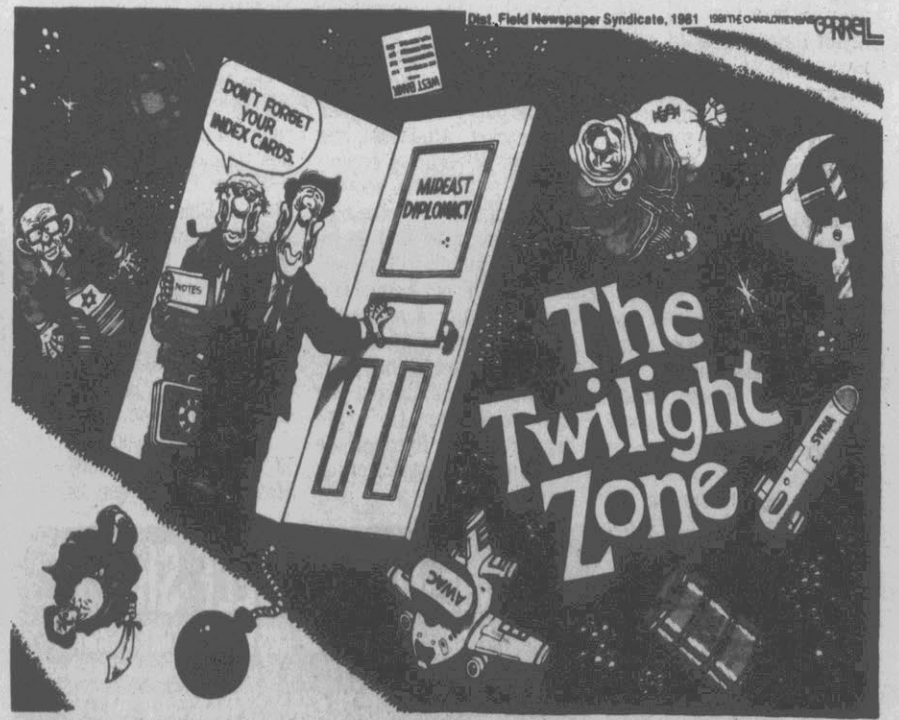

Students of history have often been shocked by the extent to which, in the annals of humanity, crime has frequently been committed in the name of religion.

On one of the Crusades, for example, the European knights who aspired to wrest the Holy Sepulcher from the Saracens allowed the Venetians to pillage several cities — one of them Constantinople — in return for transporting these crusaders from Italy to the Holy Land.

Thousands of innocent victims were killed.

To cite another of many similar examples, John Calvin consented to the burning of Servetus, the Unitarian. Centuries before, the followers of Athanasius and Arius, arguing among other things the nature of the Trinity, had spread conflict across the Roman world.

And all this violence came from people who considered themselves devoted followers of the one who said, "A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another." — Elisha Douglass

Changes Face Social Security

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — You may be excused if you think financial problems are the only concern about Social Security, since they are discussed daily, observed in the paycheck weekly, and seem to grow worse each year.

Concerned as he is about the immediate and future financial defects of the nation's retirement plan, A. Haeworth Robinson has a list of more subtle and intangible concerns that draw relatively little attention.

A concern, for example, about Social Security being a mechanism that neatly divides Americans into two groups or classes: those who produce and those who are "inactive but still share in such production."

Concern also about Social Security's role in discouraging personal savings and the formation of private pension plans, thus retarding capital formation needed for a strong economy, and reducing growth that would improve living standards for all-active and retired alike. Who is this man with such strong opinions about Social Security? He is a man with unique knowledge and understanding of the system, having been chief actuary of the Social Security Administration in the 1970s.

Robinson, now vice president of William M. Mercer, Inc., an employee benefit and compensation consultant, expresses his concerns in a new book, "The Coming Revolution in Social Security," some of which he excerpted for The Mercer Bulletin, a small monthly publication.

Among other things, he contends that very few people comprehend the pervasive impact that Social Security is having. It isn't just responding to needs, he says, "it is shaping and even creating" them.

To Robinson, it is the influences being wrought by the system on our present and future lives, "not the obvious money costs, with which we should be most concerned."

Considering that 30 years ago Social Security cost a mere one percent of the taxable payroll of those covered, now costs 14 percent, and 50 years from now is projected to cost 20 percent to 40 percent, that observation assumes enormous proportions. What influences does he see?

Consider this: "Social Security trespasses upon almost every aspect of our personal lives by imposing an unnecessary straight-jacket of behavioral standards: when to retire, how much to earn between ages 62 and 72, when to divorce, whether to remarry (as well as when and to whom). It destroys the flexibility needed for us to manage our lives as we see fit."

And this: "Social Security is structured to reward traditional life patterns (that is, male breadwinner and female homemaker, and life-long marriages) that are becoming much less representative of modern life. "Social Security is not flexible enough to accommodate the changing role of the family unit; and, in particular, of women as they move toward independence and equality."

As the system exists, Robinson believes, it is so complex that the average person will never know what benefits to expect "and will never know how much responsibility to assume for himself and his family."

This, he argues, "will lead to the individual's looking blindly to government for whatever benefits are being dispensed at the time," the inevitable consequence being an "erosion of initiative, individuality and self respect, as well as the loss of any sense of freedom of choice and control regarding a vital aspect of our lives."

Robinson's conclusion: "It is not a question of whether Social Security can be changed, it is only a question of how and when it will be changed." Change, he says, "is inevitable."

Pay Differential Study Reported

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)—A faculty committee at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro reported Thursday that during a year-long study it found no evidence of systematic salary discrimination against female faculty at the school. But the report, presented to the UNC-G Board of Trustees, said there was evidence of some individual salary differences that warrants further study. UNC-G Chancellor William E. Moran appointed the study committee in response to concerns raised by the UNC-G Task Force to Study and Promote Women's Leadership Skills about salary averages of men and women faculty.

The task force reported that in June 1980, female faculty members earned a median salary of $18,767 while their male counterparts earned $21,800. In other business, the trustees elected Greensboro Mayor Jim Melvin as their chairman and Gladys Bullard of Raleigh as vice chairman.

At 39, he is the seventh youngest member of the Senate and one of a handful of members who are unmarried. Pressler was an early entry in last year's race for the Republican presidential nomination, announcing his candidacy in September 1979 and withdrawing it in January 1980.

Does he have any plans to run again?

"No, I don't. My little campaign was directed at interests in my state ranging from senior citizens to agriculture to some of the problems the smaller towns had. There is no money there to finance a campaign. And we have a Republican president."

Tapes made by the FBI's Abscam agents show Pressler being offered a $50,000 campaign contribution to help get bogus Arabs into the United States and replying, "It would not be proper for me to do anything in return for a campaign contribution."

U.S. District Judge George Pratt, in an Abscam opinion, said Pressler "acted as citizens have a right to expect their elected representatives to act."

Burnout . . .

said, "And I'm a nurse!" Dr. Patrick said there are established ways to defuse inputs that set the scene for "burnout." Having been through the newtime malady as a nurse, she knows the signs.

After it happened to her, she went back to the University of Hawaii for a Ph.D. in psychology, a step on the road to becoming an expert on burnout.

First symptoms of burnout include:

- Emotional exhaustion, feelings of failure or frustration, a decline in self-esteem, trapped feelings, and boredom.

- Increasing levels of fatigue, sleep disturbances, changes in appetite, lowered resistance to infection and headache.

- Skipping rest and food breaks.
- Delaying or canceling a vacation because of an unwarranted feeling of indispensability.

In a chapter on self-assessment, there's a 78-item questionnaire. It helps those subject to burnout identify aspects of his or her life that may cause burnout.

Dr. Patrick says the questionnaire even helps people without potential burnout problems to learn quite a lot about themselves.

Sample questions:

- What are your life goals?
- When did you last wanted to cry but stopped yourself?
- Do you tend to hold grudges?

- Do you allow role or status differences to become barriers between you and others?

Dr. Patrick's Rx for those on the verge of burnout or already victimized by it:

- Try setting realistic goals; better communication with colleagues, patients, family and friends; improved physical fitness, relaxation and recreation; mini-vacations.

For the period between leaving work and arriving home, she also recommends as "decompression periods" such activities as taking a leisurely walk in the park, attending a physical fitness class, or visiting a friend or family member.

The Rx for coping includes "doing something silly once a week."

Payoff To Customers In Beat-The-Peak Program

"Beat-the-Peak" customers of the Greenville Utilities Commission have helped lower the community's energy cost and have received $5 to $10 credit on each summer utility bill.

Through the program, special switches were attached to electric water heaters and central air conditioning units — two of the biggest energy users in the home. On days when high demand for electricity occurs, radio signal codes are sent out from a central station to shut off the electricity to the water heater or air conditioner compressor for a short period of time. By cycling the 9,052 units on and off at carefully-planned intervals, the amount of electricity being used by all customers at the same time, the "peak" can be reduced.

Control engineer Mike Waters said, "The system was used more hours this summer than last. The July peak of 140.9 megawatts far surpassed the 1980 peak of 135 megawatts and would have probably been nearly 150 megawatts if 'Beat-the-Peak' had not been used."

There were 30 days during June and July when temperatures went higher than 90 degrees. August temperatures were generally lower, and only four days went over the 90 degree mark, Waters noted.

Reese Helms, manager of the Energy Conservation Office said customer reaction to the program has changed from skepticism to enthusiastic acceptance during the four summers of operation.

"When we started the program in 1978, people were very hesitant to have the switches," he said. "Now we have a list of several hundred customers who are waiting for the next order of switches to arrive so they can get into the program."

Both Waters and Helms suggested that thermostats on air conditioners be set at the highest temperature comfortable — 78 to 80 degrees — if possible. Helms also suggested that a portable electric fan be used to improve air circulation even more.

GUC business manager Curtis Howell said the $913,000 investment in equipment for the program has resulted in a total power savings of over $1.2 million during the first three summers. Even after $332,980 has been paid out through customer credits, and after the cost of operation and depreciation are taken out, a savings of $591,000 has been realized.

Savings from the reduced costs to purchase power are passed along to "Beat-the-Peak" customers through customer credits of $5 for one switch or $10 for two or more switches on June, July, August and September utility bills, and customers continue to receive the credits every summer as long as they live at the same residence and remain in the program.

Participating customers, before moving to another home, should call to see if the house or apartment already has a switch, or to get on the waiting list if it does not.

At present, servicemen are in the process of checking the switches that have been installed to be sure they are in place and working properly, and customers already on the program are reminded to call the utilities commission (752-7166) first if they have any problems with air conditioners or water heaters that have the switches attached.

Although no new switches are being installed right now, additional switches will be purchased and installed before the summer of 1982.

Customers wishing to participate in the program were encouraged to call now to assure their receiving switches before next summer.

Alcohol Plays Damaging Role

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alcohol and hangover effects were involved in 15 to 20 percent of the Navy's major aircraft accidents in 1979, investigators for the House defense appropriations subcommittee reportedly have found.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., chairman of that panel, made the disclosure Thursday in a statement at a hearing on military drug problems by the House Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

The Navy said two separate reports it has compiled indicate that between five and 22 of the 128 crashes in 1979 may have had some connection with drinking. Regulations require that air crews not consume alcohol for at least 12 hours before a flight.

Addabbo said his investigative staff is not expected to complete its probe of drug abuse in the armed forces until November, but he said that besides the Navy crash-alcohol connection, it has made the following findings:

— "The U.S. European Command estimates that the equivalent of about four U.S. combat infantry battalions (600 to 1,000 troops) assigned to Europe are lost because of drug abuse."

— There have been "a surprisingly high number of drug infractions and arrests at sensitive military locations. Included in the offenders were a number of military police on physical security assignments.

— Drugs are being sent to ships at sea and shore installations in first-class letters or packages. Although postal regulations forbid military personnel to examine such mail, "two ship captains — when implying that mail accepted by the crew would be checked — found that almost 50 percent of the packages were returned to sender."

STANDING OVATION — The Gerald Fords and Ronald Reagans are applauded by guests at the Bob Hope Gala last night in Grand Rapids. The gala was telecast as part of the events surrounding dedication of the Gerald R. Ford Presidential Museum. (AP Laserphoto)

Dedication Of Ford Museum ...

(Continued from Page 1) hearts there will be a flash of recognition and a swell of gratitude ... that if put into words would result in a simple statement by his countrymen about Gerald Ford: 'He was a good president who led us well — a good man who sought to serve others.'"

Reagan was od his fany of Ford's old friends and political foes who joined his former hometown neighbors to toast and roast him at the opening of the three-sided chrome, glass and steel building.

At midmorning, Police Chief Francis Pierce estimated at 250,000 the number of people lining the parade route and camped in front of the museum.

Reagan took advantage of the gathering to confer with the leaders of Canada and Mexico, who were also attending the ceremonies in this western Michigan city of 182,000.

"We haven't changed the course of the world," Reagan said Thursday. "But we've had a good time."

Reagan was to have breakfast with President Jose Lopez Portillo of Mexico and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau of Canada, who he met with separately Thursday night. Reagan also met with former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Grand Rapids has been celebrating the dedication all week, timing it to coincide with the formal unveiling of its refurbished downtown.

Today's activities were to begin with a parade through downtown with former first lady Betty Ford as grand marshal. Ford and Reagan were to tour the museum before the dedication.

Thousands of people were expected to line the banks of the Grand River to hear Reagan and other leaders speak at the ceremony.

The museum contains the only full-scale replica of the White House Oval Office and among the exhibits is the original letter in which Ford pardoned his predecessor, Richard Nixon, an event thought to figure in Ford's failure to win election in his own right in 1976.

Reagan and Ford fought a bitterly contested race for the 1976 Republican presidential nomination, which Ford won after a late primary charge by Reagan. In 1980, Ford was the strong party supporter, campaigning for Reagan against the man who beat Ford in the 1976 election, Jimmy Carter.

On Thursday night, about 2,500 guests watched the taping of a Bob Hope television show to be broadcast later.

"Jerry Ford was in Congress a long time. The only way to get rid of him was to make him president," Hope quipped. He often plays golf with Ford, 68, in Palm Springs, Calif., where the former president now lives.

"I loved it and I don't usually even like Bob Hope," said Norma Brink, 52, an elementary school principal.

"I've lived here all my life and I've never been so proud of Grand Rapids. I can't wait for all my snobbish friends in California to see this."

Earlier, at a $1,000-a-plate dinner, the dignitaries and

Grand Rapids residents filled an enormous tent pitched inside the city's new convention center. At each placemaking was a gold-plated coin bearing Ford's likeness and the presidential seal.

Among those at the head table were the Fords, Reagan and first lady Nancy Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Lopez Portillo, Trudeau, Japanese Foreign Minister Sunao Sonoda and Giscard d'Estaing.

Du Pont Officials File For A Regional Solution

KINSTON — Du Pont here said it filed a petition Wednesday with the Winston-Salem regional office of the National Labor Relations Board for an election to "expedite resolution of the question of representation" relative to union organization activities by the United Steelworkers of America.

A spokesman said Du Pont believes the petition action is "necessary to protect the rights of our employees and is in the best interests of the plant."

The petition filing followed a dispute yesterday in Washington, D.C. where the NLRB is conducting hearings on union organizing at 16 Du Pont Co. plants, including Kinston, in eight states. Du Pont lawyers walked out of the proceedings over a dispute relative to who should decide the terms of a certification election.

The steelworkers union, which is seeking to become the bargaining agent for some 15,000 workers at the Du Pont plants, filed a petition in July seeking certification as the representative of all 16 plants, either in a single bargaining unit or on an individual plant basis. The Baltimore regional NLRB office was assigned the case.

Lawyers representing the steelworkers asked on Monday that the multi-plant bargaining unit proposal be dropped and that the NLRB consider the union's proposal for individual representation. Du Pont objected to the request and asked that the entire petition be dismissed.

The NLRB regional director in Baltimore is reviewing the dismissal petition.

Du Pont contended that NLRB procedures provide for separate hearings within each region on terms of a certification election.

The Kinston spokesman here said filing of the petition in Winston-Salem is "consistent with NLRB procedures to determine employee representation, and is consistent with our determination not to be involved in legal maneuvering or delay tactics."

He said Du Pont withdrew from the hearing because the steelworkers withdrew the portion of the petition calling for a multi-plant bargaining unit, which "was the only reason for having the hearing."

He explained, "When they (steelworkers) started to discuss having individual plant elections with one NLRB regional office doing the coordination, we objected because Du Pont feels each individual NLRB region where a plant is located can best do this."

"We are submitting our petition to the Winston-Salem office because they have jurisdiction over us and can best make decisions relative to the Kinston plant," he added.

Gov. Hunt Blames Republicans For A 'Disaster'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Senate's vote to change the federal peanut program marked "one of the darkest days for North Carolina farmers in my memory," Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday. Hunt blamed President Reagan, North Carolina's two Republican senators and the GOP in general for Wednesday's "disastrous" vote. Hunt said the defeat for federal peanut allotments showed that the traditional alliance of interests that had protected tobacco, peanut and other farm commodity programs had fallen apart. But late Thursday, the Senate voted 53-42 not to end tobacco price supports.

Peanut supporters suffered a 56-42 defeat on an amendment to protect the peanut program. But Hunt said it was "ridiculous" to call the outcome a compromise.

State GOP chairman David Flaherty said Hunt was "playing at partisan politics" and termed his statements "very dangerous indeed."

Flaherty said Hunt should "refrain from armchair partisan sniping during a volatile time when the outcome of the debate on tobacco and other important commodities has yet to be determined. Protecting tobacco and peanuts has always been a bipartisan effort."

The change allows price supports for peanuts to continue, but eliminates allotments for non-farmers who lease their allotments to others. Meanwhile, farm and political observers said the Senate's move, if affirmed

Government Loses, Consumers Save As Oil Prices Going Down

By JIM LUTHER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Declining oil prices, a break for drivers and homeowners, are likely to cost the government $6 billion in tax money and create a new bulge in the federal deficit. The loss in revenue from the "windfall profits" tax on the oil industry will have to be made up by raising other taxes or by cutting spending if the administration has any chance at all of holding the 1982 deficit to the $42.5 billion projected by President Reagan.

The $6 billion shortfall is larger than any single budget cut now being proposed by Reagan for the 1982 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. The latest estimate from the administration is that the windfall tax will produce $28.6 billion in 1982. When Congress completed preliminary work on the budget earlier this year, the oil tax was expected to bring in $34.7 billion. Similarly, the tax is producing about $1.5 billion less revenue in the current year than the $25 billion that had been forecast.

The reason is clear: The tax takes a share of each increase in the price of U.S.-produced crude oil. The Arab-dominated Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries sets the world price of oil; since government controls on U.S. oil have ended, oil pumped from wells in this country is priced at or near the world-market level. Thus, falling prices bring in less tax. The Energy Department estimates that world oil prices are averaging a little more than $34 per 42-gallon barrel — down 4 percent from January. Exxon is paying about $35 for low-sulfur oil from fields in south Louisiana, compared with $38 in January. West Texas producers are selling high-sulfur oil to Arco for about $34, down $2 from earlier in the year. When Congress enacted the windfall tax early last year at the request of the Carter administration, staff members estimated it would produce $227.7 billion over the decade. That figure was based on the assumption that the price of U.S. oil would climb by the rate of inflation plus an extra 2 percent a year.

That would produce an average U.S. price next January in the $38 range. Although current conditions are making those projections look overly optimistic, there is no assurance the current oil glut and stable prices will last more than a few months. The "windfall profits" tax, deeply resented by oil producers and owners of oil lands, actually has nothing to do with profits. It simply takes up to 70 percent of increases in the price of oil since March 1, 1980. The tax was enacted to prevent the oil industry from reaping too big a profit from the relaxation and eventual elimination of federal controls on oil prices. The government estimates decontrol will raise consumer oil prices by about $1 trillion in the 1980s. After other federal and state taxes are taken into account, the windfall tax will leave the oil industry with about $221 billion that it would not have had under continued controls. With the support of the Reagan administration, Congress already has begun scaling back the tax. The tax cut signed by Reagan last month includes $11.8 billion in special relief for oil producers and royalty-owners over the next five years.

Cooperative Month Will Be Noted

Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corporation, one of the nation's 50,000 cooperatives serving 60 million consumers, will participate in the national observance of Cooperative Month during October, Co-op Manager Rudolph Sexton announced today. "Cooperatives have played an important role in this country," Sexton said. Twenty-eight rural electric systems serve 1.5 million consumers in North Carolina. "This year's Cooperative Month theme, 'Building a Better America,' is especially meaningful to rural electric cooperatives because of business, industries and community development activities have grown and prospered in rural areas and small communities because of electricity," Sexton said. The year marks the 17th annual observance of Cooperative Month. The observance is marked by special events, awards and other activities during the entire month of October.

Deny Discrimination In Redistricting Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's 1981 redistricting plans do not discriminate against blacks, say state legislators who pushed the plans through the General Assembly. The lawmakers said the plans probably would survive a discrimination suit filed Wednesday by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund on behalf of four North Carolina residents. But they said the suit could affect next spring's primaries. "Naturally, I'm distressed," said state Sen. Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston, who was chairman of the Senate Redistricting Committee. "But it was not our intention and I don't think we did discriminate against blacks or anyone else. I will note that we never heard one word from these people in our public hearings, our committee meetings or in any way." "I think it will stand up," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Kinston, chairman of the House Legislative Redistricting Committee. "I felt like we did a thorough job. I would hope the courts would not tear up the system." "The litigation could drag on until the election time, which is just next spring," said Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, chairman of the House Congressional Redistricting Committee. The suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, claims the new apportionment plans for U.S. House and state House and Senate districts are unconstitutional because they discriminate against blacks. It also challenges the legislative district plans on grounds they fail to conform to the U.S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote principle. The suit also challenges a provision in the state Constitution prohibiting the division of counties in shaping state House and Senate seats, saying that the provision was added in 1967 but was never submitted to the U.S. Justice Department for approval under the 1965 Voting Rights Act. The plaintiffs — Ralph Gingles of Gaston County, Sippio Burton of Cumberland County, Fred Belfield of Nash County and Joseph Moody of Halifax County — claim the legislators redrew the legislative districts in a way that intentionally dilutes the voting strength of black and other minority voters. Lilley said the redistricting plan "did not jeopardize the Republican Party or ethnic groups. We did not want to draw up a district to blatantly harm the Republican Party or minority groups. They were treated fairly." If successful, the suit could require the Legislature to revise the districts it drew during the 1981 session. The lawmakers also realigned all 11 congressional districts in North Carolina, but the suit challenges only the fish-hook shaped 2nd District represented by L.H. Fountain of Tarboro. The suit alleges that the 2nd District was drawn with "the effect and purpose" of diluting black voting strength in Durham County by keeping it out of the 2nd. Huskins, however, said that that Durham County was left in the 4th District, where it had been previously. He said the black voting representation in the new 2nd District was only 1 percent less than it was previously.

School Plans Book Review

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — For the first time in two years, a Durham County schools' media review committee will review a book after complaints by a junior high school parent that it is vulgar and prejudiced. The Chewing Junior High School parent objected to the use of "A Patch of Blue," by Elizabeth Kata. The book, assigned as supplemental reading for a ninth-grade English class, is about a blind girl living among prejudiced people, who is befriended by a black man she meets. Chewing principal Don Barry said he received two complaints about the book. Donald and Linda Teasley asked their child be given an alternate reading assignment and then filed a formal complaint asking the school system to review the book. Another parent, called to complain, but never followed up with a formal letter, Barry said. There are 12 educators and two parents on the media review committee. It will be the third time the committee has been asked by a parent to review a book since the state Board of Education mandated the procedure in 1971.

Group Pushing For Return To The Gold Standard

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Mainstream analysts may sputter or laugh, but a small and increasingly influential group of conservative economists is pressing for a return to a national gold standard. It's the best way, they say, to stop inflation's erosion of the dollar. Heavy gold coins wearing out your pants pockets? A bag of yellow dust to pay your mortgage? Don't snort too soon. Some of these economists are the folks who brought you President Reagan's big three-year tax-rate cut — another idea once widely scorned. With the Reagan economic plan ready to go into effect Oct. 1, some of the president's most ardent

"supply-side" supporters are now arguing that a gold-based monetary system is absolutely essential to bring down the inflation and high interest rates that are stifling the economy. The new U.S. Gold Commission, which meets Friday, contains enough skeptics to ensure that its final report will be no full-scale recommendation for the gold standard. But it could conceivably go part way. And the "gold bugs" are assured of getting more public attention.

Their theory has it that U.S. economic problems are largely due to the Federal Reserve Board's inability or unwillingness to control the supply of currency and credit, or to investors' unwillingness to believe that the Federal Reserve and the administration will keep trying to do the same, no matter what.

When the money supply grows too quickly — with money printed to finance the burgeoning national debt, for example — inflation must result, they contend.

So take the reins out of the Fed's hands, they say. Set a specific dollar price for an ounce of gold and agree to redeem anyone's dollars for a specific amount of the shiny metal. And require the government to keep enough gold to support the paper dollars and coins in circulation.

Imported Measles Not To Affect CDD Effort

ATLANTA (AP) — The national Centers for Disease Control receive almost two reports per week of measles cases imported from other countries, but the imported cases will not hamper efforts to eliminate measles in this country, CDC officials said today. The CDC said 146 cases of imported measles were reported from Dec. 30, 1979, to July 4, 1981, an average of 1.8 per week. About two-thirds of the imported cases reported in the first six months of this year involved U.S. citizens who had traveled to other countries, some of them without proper immunization, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report. The rest were foreign nationals visiting the United States. In 1980, U.S. residents accounted for only about a third of the imported cases. Dr. Robert Ambler of the CDC's immunizations branch said the imported cases do not pose a threat to the agency's goal of eliminating measles in this country by October 1982. "The goal is to eliminate indigenous measles, or measles which originate in the United States," Ambler said in a telephone interview. "Even after that goal date, we expect that importations of measles cases will continue to occur." But he said the number of imported cases can be reduced through increased immunization of U.S. citizens before they travel. The CDC's study of imported measles found that, of 91 patients whose immunity status was known, 30 were not immunized and could have avoided the disease if they had been vaccinated. The report said U.S. communities can prevent imported cases from spreading by making sure their citizens are properly immunized. "Communities can protect themselves from these importations," said Ambler. "Even if large numbers of people came into the United States with measles, we should not have a large spread if our immunization levels are high." Ambler said imported measles will account for an increasingly higher percentage of U.S. measles cases as indigenous cases are eliminated over the next year. But he said health officials have "no reason to expect any sudden increase" in the actual number of imported cases. "The risk of measles from foreign sources appears to be low and relatively constant throughout the year," the CDC report said.

Offer Reward Of Up To $5,000

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt announced Thursday the state is offering a reward of up to $5,000 for information leading to an arrest and conviction in the slaying of Mavis Thorne of Sanford. Ms. Thorne's body was found almost 12 miles east of Sanford on Aug. 29. She was last seen alive on Aug. 28, at a bank in the Kendale Shopping Center.

Backers of a new gold standard say the technical problems can be solved by fine-tuning and that foreign powers simply wouldn't have the clout some people fear. And they say people wouldn't really carry gold coins to buy cheeseburgers for lunch and bus rides home. More likely, few people would want to bother with gold if they knew their dollars were strongly supported. The commission is supposed to have its recommendations in by next month, but it will probably ask for and receive an extension. The 17-member group ap-

Washington Gloom Over Doomed Departments

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In this government town it's called a RIF, a reduction in force. Other places, it's known as being fired, laid off, canned.

Here, they've even written a song about it — The Battle Hymn of the Department: "Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the RIF. It has trampled out the spirit of the common working stiff. We are summarily dismissed without so much as a what if. The RIF goes marching on."

For workers at the departments of Energy and Education, it may well be their swan song. Administration sources are saying President Reagan could reveal plans as early as next week to abolish both agencies.

Workers for the most part are taking the latest news calmly. Reagan has been saying since the campaign that he wanted to get rid of the two Cabinet agencies created during the Carter administration.

For weeks, T-shirts emblazoned "RIFed by Reagan and Proud of It" have been sold by sidewalk vendors outside both departments. But the gallows humor does not hide the deep resentment among many workers.

"Just because you abolish the Energy Department doesn't mean the energy problem will go away," said one official in the conservation program, who asked not to be identified. "The average American may not miss us at first, but he will notice in the first energy emergency."

Critics of the four-year-old agency maintain the opposite. They say government red tape worsened rather than alleviated gasoline lines in 1973-74 and 1979.

The Education Department, created only 16 months ago, is attacked as a needless agency fostering a big-brother role for the federal government in local school policies.

But Reagan aides concede that abolishing the agencies as part of a round of budget cuts would be largely symbolic. Many of the functions will remain and the employees working in the programs simply transferred to other government agencies.

On Capitol Hill, reaction was mixed.

Rep. Richard L. Ottinger, D-N.Y., citing internal Energy Department documents that call for shutting down a variety of programs while funds for nuclear energy are increased in 1983, called plans to close the department "a blatant deception."

"The real purpose of this so-called plan appears to be to close out all non-nuclear programs and create a new Atomic Energy Commission to replace DOE," Ottinger, chairman of a House subcommittee on energy conservation and power, said Thursday.

But Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, will look at the proposal with an open mind, according to aide Tod Nuenschwander. "He wants to see what kinds of savings are involved," he said.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., chairman of a Senate subcommittee on education, arts and humanities, believes the Education Department "ought to have a chance," at least through December 1982, his office said.

However, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, was described as "very happy" about the reported dissolution of the Education Department.

Education Secretary T.H. Bell reportedly wants to turn his $14 billion agency into a non-regulatory foundation concentrating on research and statistics. The department's $5 billion student subsidy loan program would be transferred to the Treasury Department while the $8 billion aid program for local schools would be turned into block grants sent directly to the states.

At the Energy Department, one plan being considered would shuffle various functions to the departments of Defense, Interior and Commerce. Thirty percent of the agency's $13 billion budget already goes to make nuclear weapons for the Pentagon and has escaped unscathed in the budget cuts.

However, government efforts to promote solar power and other renewable energy sources and spur conservation have suffered as has the part of the agency set up to handle energy emergencies. One proposal under study would completely eliminate these functions in the reshuffling.

Since Energy Secretary James Edwards took office, 1,200 of the agency's 20,123 employees have been fired. Bell has lopped off 807 jobs and he expects to trim 200 more by year's end, cutting the agency to 5,400 workers.

Workers at both agencies say morale has suffered as employees sweat out the RIF notices.

"If you were being taken away from your job, how would you feel about it?" asked one veteran Energy Department employee who is being fired. "We have had six months of paralysis and panic."

But one group of workers at both agencies is happy about the changes — the political appointees who came in with the Reagan administration committed to carrying out the president's campaign pledge of less government.

"If I am out of a job on Christmas Day, it will be the best Christmas present I could possibly get," said Anne Graham, assistant secretary of education for legislation and public affairs.

Attorney Sues To Free Jailed Florida Fathers

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — A Dade County judge cleaning out a huge backlog of child-support cases swept more than 42 men into jail and told hundreds of others they'd be going there soon if they didn't pay up.

"I've heard the same story all week," acting Dade Circuit Judge James Rainwater told one man's attorney, "that putting someone in jail won't work. Well, you see how some of them come up with the money."

They came up with it by the thousands of dollars: One man found $25,000 when told he would be in jail by nightfall; a lawyer was being taken to jail when his partner came up with $5,000, officials said.

But the tactic has prompted a class-action lawsuit on behalf of the 400 men threatened with jail. The suit is being handled by a legal services lawyer, who concedes that state attorneys have found an effective way to get some people to pay up.

"We don't contest that putting people in jail is a great way to collect money," said Elizabeth Baker of Legal Services of Miami. "It's just illegal."

The lawsuit says the more than 42 fathers in two Dade County jails should be freed and asks that judicial orders holding the men in contempt of court for failing to make child- and wife-support payments be lifted. Some of those jailed had been released after paying.

Ms. Baker planned to go to Miami's 3rd District Court today to appeal the judicial orders.

Rainwater attacked a huge backlog of delinquent-payment cases — some went back 6 years — earlier this month, calling as many as 100 men a day in front of the bench.

"Tell me, sir," the judge asked each man, "just what should we do about your children?" Few had anything to say.

But court records show an unprecedented $135,000 in delinquent payments were collected since the hearings started Sept. 8. Assistant State Attorney Steven Grossbard says most fathers have found a way to pay when confronted with a jail order.

Ms. Baker's argument is that fathers who earn low wages have been thrown in jail indiscriminately along with the others, with the result that many lost the jobs that provided their small incomes.

"This is crazy," she said. "They get sentences of up to six months, they still owe the money when they get out, and in the meantime they've lost all that earning time."

One of the men has a heart condition, she said, and "putting him in jail is going to kill him and not get you a dime. It's the old blood-from-the-turnip problem."

The suit charges that Grossbard and Dade County State Attorney Janet Reno illegally collected the money and that Rainwater and Chief Dade Circuit Judge Gerald Wetherington improperly ordered the men to jail without legal representation.

There was no immediate comment from the judges or the attorneys on the charge that the jailings are illegal.

Ordinarily, Grossbard said, a few hours a week are set aside in judge's schedule to hear child-support delinquency cases. "Quite a backlog has been created. Some of the cases of non-payment date back as many as half a dozen years."

Inmates Sue Jail Service

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Eleven current or former inmates of the Union County jail are suing Sheriff Frank McGuirt and four others for 12 alleged instances of improper care or inadequate facilities.

The eight former inmates and three inmates awaiting trial filed the suit Sept. 10 in U.S. District Court in Charlotte. They charge they were denied medical care, access to an attorney, outside exercise, law books and toiletries.

They also contend female jailers may watch male inmates showering on a closed-circuit television and telephone conversations are tape recorded.

McGuirt said the prisoners are not allowed outdoor exercise or access to law books because the county has no facilities for exercises or a legal library. He also denied the other charges.

The plaintiffs ask for law books, access to a telephone, a canteen service to buy writing supplies, suspension of the jail's physician, a television set in each 12-man cell block, a mobile library, longer visits by families and a year-round temperature of 68 degrees.

DID JESUS REALLY CURSE THE FIG TREE ?

IT IS RECORDED THAT JESUS, ON HIS WAY FROM BETHANY TO JERUSALEM, AND BEING HUNGRY, STOPPED TO PICK FRUIT FROM A FIG TREE (MARK 11:12-14). BUT, ALTHOUGH THE TREE WAS IN LEAF, THERE WERE NO FIGS AND JESUS SAID, HEREAFTER, NO MAN WOULD EVER EAT FRUIT FROM THAT TREE!

SOME AUTHORITIES SAY JESUS, FOLLOWING THE ORIENTAL CUSTOM OF HOLY MEN, PUT A CURSE ON THE TREE, FROM DISAPPOINTMENT AT NOT FINDING FRUIT. OTHER AUTHORITIES STATE THAT, BECAUSE THE TREE WAS IN LEAF AND THEREFORE SHOULD HAVE HAD FIGS, JESUS WAS POINTING OUT THAT, WHEN ONE OUTWARDLY SHOWS A GOOD CHARACTER WITHOUT THE FRUITS THEREOF, HE IS A HYPOCRITE, OF NO VALUE TO THE KINGDOM OF GOD, BUT....

...STILL FURTHER AUTHORITIES MAINTAIN THAT, FOR JESUS TO CONDEMN A TREE, FOR NOT GIVING FRUIT, DOES NOT SEEM COMPATIBLE WITH HIS GENTLE LOVING NATURE AND, SINCE JESUS WAS AT JERUSALEM FOR THE PASSOVER, THIS PLACES THE TIME OF YEAR AT EARLY APRIL WHEN THE FIG TREE HAS JUST BEGUN TO LEAF AND GROW FIGS, WHICH THEN MATURE IN LATE JUNE... THUS, ALL JESUS MERELY DID, WAS REMARK THAT, BECAUSE THE TREE HAD ALREADY BEGUN GROWING LEAVES, BUT NO FRUIT, IT WAS BARREN, AND NO ONE WOULD HARVEST FIGS FROM IT WHEN THE FRUIT SEASON ARRIVED!

EACH OF THESE THEORIES SEEM TO HAVE VALID POINTS, SO IT REMAINS FOR THE STUDENT TO MAKE HIS OWN CHOICE —WHICH DO YOU THINK ?

Sue To Recover Bribery Money

NEW YORK (AP) — The government has filed lawsuits against seven Abscam defendants in an effort to get back $186,000 in bribes the FBI paid out during the undercover sting operation. One of the suits, filed Thursday in U.S. District Court here, seeks $96,000 from former Reps. John Murphy, D-N.Y., Frank Thompson Jr., D-N.J.; former Mayor Angelo Errichetti of Camden, N.J.; former City Councilman Louis Johanson of Philadelphia, and lawyer Howard Criden of Philadelphia.

Two other suits each seek $45,500, naming as defendants Errichetti, Johanson, Criden and two other former U.S. congressmen, Michael Meyers and Raymond Lederer, both Democrats of Pennsylvania. The suits seek the money plus interest "in whole or in part." Federal officials said it would make no difference to the government whether one defendant pays the whole amount or if it is broken down among them.

Cyril Hyman of U.S. Attorney Edward Korman's office said that if the suits result in judgments in the government's favor, they would be executed "against real or personal property or as a garnishment" against the defendants' incomes. All seven were convicted of bribery conspiracy here on evidence from an FBI agent, who posed as an Arab sheik, and his associates. They were paid bribes in return for promises that they would use their influence to further the interests of the phony sheik.

All were out on bail while appealing their sentences. All got three-year prison terms except Errichetti, who got six years, and Thompson, whose sentencing was postponed pending a medical examination. The $186,000 is part of $500,000 paid out in bribes during Abscam. Only about $50,000 of that has been recovered.

Bucs Try To Get Respect Against State

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Football, according to the scholarly observers, is supposed to build character. Saturday night at 7 p.m. in N.C. State's Carter-Finley Stadium, fans will find out how much character East Carolina's Pirates have.

"It's gut check time for our players, our coaches, our philosophy, our commitment to the wishbone, for everything and everyone connected with our program," Coach Ed Emory said of the upcoming contest between the two rivals.

East Carolina enters the game with a 1-1 record, having ripped Western Carolina, 42-6, in its opener, and then getting ripped apart itself by North Carolina, 56-0.

State comes in with a 2-0 mark, downing a stubborn Richmond team in the opener, 27-21, and then holding off Wake Forest, 28-23.

Emory calls the State game a great challenge for the Pirates. "State is as big a rivalry as we have," he noted.

Emory credits State with having outstanding talent. "They have experience in almost every position on both offense and defense. Mike Quick is a great prospect at wide receiver. Tol Avery (quarterback) started every game as a sophomore and led the team to a 6-5 record.

"State's offensive line is outstanding and very big. They have seasoned juniors and seniors throughout the depth chart. We are small defensively, so their size is a real concern," the coach added.

While Larmount Lawson opened the season at tailback, freshman Joe McIntosh has quickly come on to push Lawson out of the starting lineup. Lawson, however, is expected to play, setting up somewhat of a brother-vs.-brother contest. Larmount's brother, Leon, is a member of the ECU team. While not a starter, Leon, like Larmount, is expected to see a lot of action in the game.

McIntosh is the team's leading scorer, having scored three touchdowns for 18 points. He's by far the leading rusher, with 351 yards. Lawson is next with 159. McIntosh is averaging 8.0 yards a lug.

Avery has hit 12 of his 24 passing attempts, with one interception for 150 yards and one touchdown. Quick is the leading receiver with six catches for 90 yards. No one else has more than two grabs.

"Defensively," Emory continued, "State is in the same class with North Carolina. They've got depth at every slot. They've got a great secondary with six returning lettermen—four from last year and two redshirts. Linebackers Robert Abraham and Sam Key lead the team in tackles with 29 each. Emory also feels nose guard Al DellaPorter is an outstanding player.

East Carolina's offense is led by quarterback Carlton Nelson, who has 143 yards rushing and has hit on seven of 16 passes for 129 yards. He's had one pass picked off. Halfback Harold Blue is the only other Pirate over 100 yards with 137 on the ground.

Leading the defense have been ends Mike Davis and Jody Schulz, each with 22 tackles.

East Carolina will have a few lineup changes, also. Center Tony Hensley missed much of the Carolina game after suffering a neck injury, and now has been declared out for the rest of the season. Tim Mitchell, a freshman, is slated to start in Hensley's place. Backup Billy Parker is also questionable with a knee injury.

Defensive tackle Steve

Hamilton is another who is listed as uncertain with a knee injury, while Hal Stephens, the regular starter at that spot, hurt against Western, is also on the questionable list.

Chuck Bishop has been moved up to a starting job at cornerback, while Oscar Tyson is being pressured by Terry Long at offensive guard and Mindell Tyson is pushing John Robertson at offensive tackle.

The status of kicker Chuck Bushbeck is also unknown right now. Bushbeck, suffering from Hodgkin's Disease, began radiation therapy on Tuesday. He is scheduled to undergo five days of treatment, Monday through Friday, a week for the next five weeks. His ability to kick for the remainder of the season depends on his reaction to the treatment.

Emory noted that if Bushbeck is unable to continue, he can be redshirted until next season. That decision need not be made right away, however.

Under NCAA rules, Bushbeck can play in three of the first six games and still retain hardship eligibility for the 1982 season.

The State-ECU series has seen 11 games in the past, only three of them won by the Pirates. ECU's last win came in 1977, 28-23, with State winning last year, 36-14, after trailing at the half.

State hosts Maryland in a key Atlantic Coast Conference game next Saturday, while the Pirates entertain Toledo.

Valenzuela Ties Shutout Record With His Eighth Of Short Season

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

Tommy Lasorda is never at a loss for words, but sensational rookie pitcher Fernando Valenzuela has even the volatile manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers searching for new superlatives for his young left-hander.

"Amazing, amazing, he's some pitcher, what games," Lasorda spluttered after Valenzuela pitched a record-tying three-hit shutout Thursday night as the Dodgers beat the Atlanta Braves 2-0. "He's simply unbelievable. He just makes that big pitch when he Phas to have it."

It was the eighth shutout of the season for Valenzuela, equaling the major league record set by Ewell Russell of the Chicago White Sox in 1913. Three National Leaguers — Irving Young of Boston in 1905, Grover Cleveland Alexander of Philadelphia in 1911 and Jerry Koonsman of the New York Mets in 1968 — had seven shutouts in their rookie season.

The 20-year-old Mexican pitcher didn't seem all that impressed by the accomplishment, though.

"It's another win for the team, that's what it means," said Valenzuela through an interpreter when asked what the eighth shutout meant. "It pleases me to get records, but the main thing is I am win-ing." Valenzuela, 13-4 with a 2.37 earned run average, leads the National League in victories, complete games (11), shutouts and strikeouts (162). He walked two and struck out six against the Braves.

The husky pitcher, now hitting .259, also drove in his seventh run of the year with an infield single in the sixth inning. That gave him 15 hits in 58 times at bat.

The Dodgers took the lead in the second inning on a bloop double by Steve Garvey, an error by Atlanta shortstop Rafael Ramirez, an infield out and a sacrifice fly by rookie Gary Weiss. It was the first major league run-batted-in for Weiss.

Valenzuela's RBI single, a grounder up the middle knocked down by Atlanta second baseman Jerry Royster, followed a walk to Mike Pisciaccia, a sacrifice bunt and an infield out.

Valenzuela held the Braves hitless until Bruce Benedict bounced a single between third and short with two outs in the fifth. The only Atlanta runner to get as far as second base was Royster, who singled with one out in the sixth and advanced on an infield out. But he was picked off by catcher Scioscia to end the inning.

Cardinals 7, Expos 4

The Cardinals pounded the Expos as catcher Darrell Porter drove in five runs with a double and his fourth career grand slam homer to support the eight-hit pitching of Joaquin Andujar, 6-4. The victory extended St. Louis' lead over the second-place Expos in the NL East to 3½ games.

Andujar now has a 9-0 record against Montreal in 10 career starts. The Cardinals took a 1-0 lead against Steve Rogers, 10-7, in the second inning on Porter's run-scoring, ground-rule double. Porter then capped a five-run third with his fourth homer of the year, a shot into the right-field bleachers.

Phillies 3, Mets 2

The Phillies beat the Mets behind the pitching of starter Dickie Noles, who threw a three-hit shutout over seven innings. Larry Bowa provided the key hit, a two-run, bases-loaded double in the second.

The 24-year-old Noles, 1-2, retired 11 straight batters before Hubie Brooks singled in the fourth. Noles tied his career high of six strikeouts and did not issue a walk.

Philadelphia scored again in the fourth on Brooks' two-base throwing error on a grounder by Garry Maddox, who took third on a groundout and scored on Manny Trillo's sacrifice fly.

Reds 1, Giants 0

Dave Concepcion's single drove in Paul Householder to give Tom Seaver the victory after the veteran right-hander worked his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth. Householder led off the 11th with a double, went to third on Ken Griffey's single and scored on Concepcion's hit.

Seaver, 12-2, allowed five hits before getting relief help from Joe Price and Tom Hume, who picked up his ninth save. Al Holland, 6-5, who came on in the ninth for starter Ed Whitson, took the loss.

Astros 9, Padres 0

Craig Reynolds ripped a bases-loaded triple and Danny Heep drove in four runs to help Joe Niekro to his ninth victory of the year against seven losses. Niekro scattered five hits en route to his second shutout of the season, striking out two and walking none as he raised his lifetime mark against San Diego to 18-6.

Houston scored five runs in the first off Padres starter Steve Mura, 5-13. The Astros loaded the bases on a single by Phil Garner, a double by Tony Scott and a walk. Heep then singled in Ptwo runs and Art Howe singled again loading the bases and setting the stage for Reynolds' bases-clearing triple to center.

The Padres added four runs in the fourth, including Heep's Psecond two-run hit.

The Astros now have beaten the Padres in 10 of their 12 meetings this season, and San Diego has gone 44 consecutive innings without an earned run against Houston.

Jaworski Has All The Friends He Needs In Line As Eagles Fly High

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — The hostile crowd was fine with quarterback Ron Jaworski, a hometown boy in enemy colors, when his Philadelphia Eagles met the Buffalo Bills Thursday.

Jaworski had all the friends he needed in his own offensive line, supplier of stand-up protection on all but one play while the Lackawanna, N.Y., native threw for 240 yards and two touchdowns in Philadelphia's 20-14 National Football League triumph over the Bills. The game left the Eagles with a 3-0 record and marked Buffalo's first loss in three contests.

"I'm a Bills fan," said Jaworski, who completed 20 of 32 passes in his first regular-season appearance in Rich Stadium a few miles from his home. "I hope they win the next 13 games. I held a season ticket in the Rock Pile (Buffalo's old War Memorial Stadium) for years, sitting by myself. I feel for them."

Jaworski, however, exhibited little pity for the team he idolized as a boy, lofting a 1-yard pass to tight end Keith Kreplie for the first points of the game and sending the Eagles ahead 17-14 with a 15-yard toss to wide receiver Harold Carmichael early in the third period.

The crowd of 78,331 also showed little affection for Jaworski, booing so loudly he had to step away from the line of scrimmage after a roughing-the-passer penalty on defensive end Sherman White with about five minutes to play kept alive a drive to Philadelphia's second field goal.

Bare-footed kicker Tony Franklin, who earlier booted one 29 yards, kicked a 46-yarder to round out scoring. Buffalo tallied twice in the second quarter, leading 14-10 at halftime on a 4-yard run by Joe Cribbs and Joe Ferguson's 20-yard pass to Frank Lewis.

Ferguson hit just 14 of 30 passes for 187 yards and had two picked off by Eagles free safety Brenard Wilson.

Jaworski threw for the first touchdowns this year against Buffalo, which won two previous games by scores of 31-0 and 35-3, and the Eagles rolled up 396 yards against a team that had given up just 378 in two previous contests.

Wilbert Montgomery, Philadelphia's all-purpose halfback, played with a bruised left hand but still rushed for 125 yards in 27 carries.

"We feel we can move the ball on anybody. We had 178 yards and 220 yards (rushing) in the first two games, remember?" he said.

Montgomery enjoyed yards of elbow room on sweeps on most of his runs — all courtesy of linemen Stan Walters, Steve Kenney, Guy Morriss, Ron Baker and Jerry Sisemore. Asked whether the Eagles used any tricks to open up running lanes for Montgomery and backfield mate Perry Harrington, Buffalo linebacker Isiah Robertson responded, "Yea, about 1,000 pounds of very good blockers."

The reunion was as unpleasant for Buffalo placekicker Nick Mike-Mayer as it was nice for Jaworski. Cut by the Eagles after they acquired Franklin in 1979, Mike-Mayer is one-for-four in field goals in his third year with the Bills. He missed a 20-yarder that would have tied the game in the fourth quarter.

"A lot of things happened to us in the game that could be called keys," Coach Chuck Knox said. "It would have been nice to have had those three points at that time, certainly." Twelve game are on tap Sunday with the key matchups featuring San Diego, 2-0, at Kansas City to meet the surprising Chiefs, 2-0, while Miami visits Houston, in another pairing of undefeated teams.

Elsewhere, it's Cleveland at Cincinnati, Detroit at Minnesota, the New York Jets at Pittsburgh, San Francisco at Atlanta, Washington at St. Louis, Tampa Bay at Chicago, Baltimore at Denver, Green Bay at Los Angeles, New Orleans at the New York Giants and Seattle at Oakland.

The Monday night game features Dallas at New England.

Sunday will be a very pivotal game for three teams who have been mainstays on the NFL playoff scene, but who have gotten off on the wrong foot in 1981.

The slumping Pittsburgh Steelers, 0-2, will try to get untracked against the also winless Jets.

Whoa there!

Our guests have pushed into sole possession of the lead in the panel of experts. Thanks to a 9-3 week by Don Southerland, of Aldridge & Southerland Realty, the guests have taken a one-game lead with a 19-5 mark.

Sports assistant Rick Scappe is next with an 18-6 week, and our 9-3 mark, tying Southerland for the best of the week, brings us to 17-7.

Tom Baines and Vickie Spivey are tied for fourth with 16-8 marks, well ahead of Joe Jenkins, already trailing by seven games with a 12-12 record.

Hang in there, Joe!

There may not be a lot of changes this week, however, since most everyone has opted for the same teams.

Turning to our high school picks, we find a nice 5-1 record from last week that brings the seasonal mark to 14-5. We're still looking for that perfect week, however.

This week has several good matchups, led by D.H. Conley's hosting of Farmville Central. The Vikings were again stopped by North Pitt last time out, while Farmville struggled and fell before Ayden-Grifton. Both teams are looking for their second wins of the year. The game could be quite close, but we'll go with Farmville here.

North Pitt travels to West Craven. The Eagles, after winning the Coastal Conference last year, have had some problems this year. North Pitt is off to one of its better years with a 2-1 mark so far. The Panthers, we understand, got angry last week when we picked them to lose. This week, we pick them to win. Now, can we get angry if they don't.

Finally among the county teams, Ayden-Grifton travels to North Lenoir. The Chargers won their first in two starts last week, and will be anxious to get a shot at North Lenoir — now a non-conference foe. We look for the Chargers to come out on top once more.

Elsewhere locally, it should be Roanoke over Edenton, Belhaven over Jamesville, James Kenan over Greene Central and Williamston over Ahsokie.

Turning to our poll, our guest this week is the new executive director of the Pirate Club, Richard Dupree. In a way, he's got a little bit of a handicap, having to pick the Pirates no matter what. But then, who knows, maybe they'll bounce back from last week's embarrassment to do a little embarrassing of their own.

The Pirates, however, don't get the nod from the rest of our panel. The remaining five members are all picking the Wolfpack to come away with the victory.

Rose, surprisingly ranked third in the state by the Associated Press, goes up against 12th ranked Wilmington Hoggard in a road contest tonight. The Rampants and Vikings are both after their third straight wins of the young season, and both can impress some folks with a win. It's that kind of a game too. The panel cannot call it. Three pick Rose and three pick Hoggard — a toss-up.

Our other consensus picks: South Carolina over Duke; Maryland over West Virginia; Auburn over Wake Forest; UCLA over Wisconsin; Georgia over Clemson; Florida over Georgia Tech; North Carolina over Miami of Ohio; Rutgers over Virginia; Notre Dame over Michigan; and Miami of Florida over Houston.

Bosox Finish Sweep Of Tigers; Move Within Half Of Lead

BOSTON (AP) — Bring on the "Damn Yankees." The Boston Red Sox, playing with an "all-for-one-and-one-for-all" attitude, are ready for the New York Yankees after sweeping the Detroit Tigers.

With Jim Rice driving in four runs with his 15th homer, a double and two singles, the Red Sox made it four in a row over Detroit in a 6-1 victory that moved Boston to within one-half game of the Tigers in the American League East.

In the only other AL action, the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Cleveland Indians 6-2 as Scott McGregor boosted his record to 11-3 while tightening the division race even more.

The idle Milwaukee Brewers moved to within one-half game of the lead, just .004 points behind Boston. Baltimore closed to within one game and the Yankees, marking time in Boston while off, remained fifth, but now just 1½ games back.

"Before, we had a ball club with a lot of talent and didn't win" Rice said after the sweep of Detroit. "Now we've got a ball club that's joined together."

"Now we can taste it, we can feel it," said Dwight Evans, who had a single and two walks in the regular season finale with the Tigers.

"This is a different ball club than the ones I've been on since I came here five years ago," said reliever Bill Campbell after earning his sixth save while protecting rookie Bobby Ojeda's sixth victory in eight decisions, all since the strike.

"This team has jelled and Ralph has got people moving in and out of the lineup at the right times," Campbell said in praising Manager Ralph Houk.

"Believe me, they're playing for real," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "Never in my wildest dreams did I think they'd beat us four straight here. But we'll regroup. I don't know what we'll do, but we'll regroup."

"This series was important for us to get back into it (race), but I was hoping for three wins that would leave us 2½ games

Cubs Take 22-0 Win

Rose High School's junior varsity football team gained a 22-0 victory over Wilmington Hoggard yesterday.

The Rampant Cubs got things started in the first period when quarterback Roswell Streeter plunged over from the one for a 6-0 lead. In the second period, Rose picked up two points on a safety when Frankie Carr tackled the Hoggard quarterback in the end zone.

Later in the second period, Ed Farley scored on a 10-yard run for a 14-0 halftime lead.

The final score came in the last period when Cyrus Blackwell broke away for a 25-yard scoring run. He also caught a two-point conversion pass from Streeter to wind up the scoring.

Rose, now 2-1, travels to Northern Nash next Thursday.

Volleyball Roundup

North Pitt.....0

BETHEL — D.H. Conley's volleyball team extended its unbeaten string to six straight Thursday with a two-match sweep of North Pitt. The Valkyries won the first match, 15-9, 15-6, and the second, 15-8, 15-5.

D.H. Conley was led by Sherri Waters, who had 23 points on her serve, and Darlene Cannon, who had 20.

The Valkyries had 22 hits, 12 of which went untouched by the Pant-HERS. Karen Barrett led Conley in that department with seven followed by Mary Mitchell with three. Waters and Jackie Daniels had one each.

Conley travels to Farmville Central Tuesday and then opens its 1981 Coastal Conference schedule Thursday against North Lenoir.

Farmville C. ....1
North Lenoir.....1

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central and North Lenoir split a pair of nonconference volleyball matches Thursday afternoon.

The Jaguars, now 1-3, won the first match 15-8, 11-15, 14-12. Time ran out in the final game. The Hawks won the second match 15-8, 8-15, 15-10.

Further details were not available. Farmville plays host to D.H. Conley Tuesday.

back," Houk said. "It would have been crazy to think of a sweep. We just got great pitching in this series."

As for the series with the Yankees starting tonight, while Detroit invades Cleveland, Houk said:

"I'm not thinking of the Yankees' series as much as I am of the 16 games we have left. That's the way I have my pitching lined up. However, I like our club's attitude. I'm an optimist, always have been, and I think the players have to be, too."

Ojeda, a southpaw called up from the minors Aug. 9, struggled against the Tigers, giving up six singles and five walks while throwing 134 pitches, but allowed just one run in seven innings. Then Campbell checked the Tigers on one hit the rest of the way.

"Holding that team to just eight runs in four games is really something" Houk said in saluting his pitchers.

In the Baltimore game, Rich Dauer and Eddie Murray each drove in two runs to back

Elon Kicks ECU, 1-0

Elon College gained a 1-0 soccer victory over East Carolina University's booters yesterday. It was the second straight 1-0 loss for the Pirates.

After playing to a scoreless tie through the first half, the Fighting Christians got the lone goal of the game in the second half. That came on a shot by Calloway, assisted by Shields.

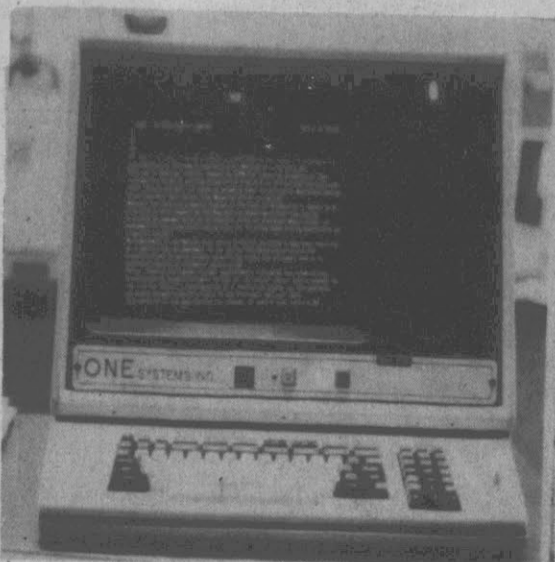

East Carolina managed 11 shots on the goal, as did Elon. East Carolina goalie Steve Brown was credited with eight saves, while the Elon goalie had five.

"We got beat by a better team," Coach Brad Smith said. "They played harder than we did."

The loss dropped the ECU mark to 1-2 on the year. Elon is also 1-2.

East Carolina returns to action on Sunday, hosting Coker College at 2 p.m.

WHY MORE UP-TO-DATE NEWSPAPER WITH THE MACHINE ON THE RIGHT THAN WITH THE MACHINE ON THE LEFT.

The machine on the left allows a news reporter to type a story. The machine on the right is a visual display terminal (VDT) used at THE DAILY REFLECTOR. The VDT is a reporter's pencil, paper, eraser, typewriter, file cabinet, wastebasket and notebook all rolled into one highly technological newswriting system.

As a reporter types a story on the keyboard, the words appear on the video screen. An editor can then call the story into his own VDT to make any needed corrections and give the story a headline. The edited story is then transmitted to a storage unit that can hold 48 million characters at one time. This storage capacity allows a reporter or editor to call back a story within seconds to add last minute updates. This insures that you are reading the most recent news report available to you.

Some of the things the terminals can't replace are the news judgement, common sense, integrity and intelligence of the reporters at THE DAILY REFLECTOR. Experienced people plus new technology working together to make your newspaper the best it can be — so you can be the most informed citizen, the most value-conscious consumer and the most secure individual possible.

That's why THE DAILY REFLECTOR puts advanced news reporting first.

Atlantic Coast Conference champion North Carolina plans to unleash Kelvin Bryant — the nation's top rusher — when Miami of Ohio visits this Saturday.

Bryant has scored 211 yards and six touchdowns so far this season — all in 10th-ranked North Carolina's 56-0 opener over East Carolina last weekend.

The Tar Heels square off against Miami at 1 p.m. Saturday at Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Meanwhile, North Carolina State, 2-0, has East Carolina, 1-1, visiting. Coach Monte Kiffin and company hope the Pirates will not be trying to make up for their big loss to North Carolina.

The 7 p.m. game in Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh, N.C., features the first start for freshman tailback Joe McIntosh. McIntosh is the third leading rusher in the nation this year with 351 yards.

Duke, which fell to Ohio State last week, will try to bounce back against South Carolina, 1-1, Saturday. Quarterback Ben Bennett injured his shoulder in the game last week and will be available for "limited duty," said a Duke spokesman.

The starting quarterback will be sophomore Ron Sully, who has played during only two games at Duke. Game time is 7 p.m. at Williams-Brice Stadium in Columbia, S.C.

Wake Forest, winless in two games this season, travels to Auburn for an 8 p.m. game in Jordan-Hare Stadium. The Deacons won the last meeting between the two schools, 42-38, in 1979.

Meanwhile, Clemson coach Danny Ford says last year's game with Georgia will inspire the Tigers, who ran 42 more plays than the eventual national champions and still lost 20-16.

"Last year's game will motivate us because we have bad memories of it," Ford said. "A victory would get that loss out of our minds. But, it will obviously be difficult to do. Our coaching staff and players feel Georgia is still the national champion."

Herschel Walker and his fourth-ranked company will be trying for their 16th straight win and third this season.

Clemson also is after its third win this season.

Game time is 1 p.m. Saturday at Frank Howard Field in Clemson, S.C.

Virginia will get a head start on the rest of the Atlantic Coast Conference when it travels to East Rutherford, N.J., tonight to take on Rutgers. The Cavaliers, who lost their season-opener to West Virginia last week, will try to even their record against the Scarlet Knights at 7:30 p.m. Rutgers is 2-0.

Georgia Tech, which shocked the football world last week by upsetting Alabama, tries to make it two in a row against Florida Saturday. The Gators, 1-1, beat Furman last week. The game is set for 1:30 p.m. at Florida Field in Gainesville, Fla.

Maryland tries to get its first win of the season against West Virginia, 1-0. The Terps fell victim to Vanderbilt a week ago.

David Brinkley Has Firm Offer From ABC News

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP)—David Brinkley is leaving NBC today after 38 years with the network, but it looks as though his political savvy and wry commentary will be back on the air before long. Brinkley has received a firm offer from ABC News, which is close to being closed, according to network sources. "I'm going somewhere," Brinkley said Thursday before he was guest of honor at a farewell party thrown by NBC News President Bill Small. "I've talked to a dozen people, and I will decide in the next few days." ABC is certainly on the list. "I've been talking to them," he said. "I do not have a deal."

But sources at both networks say a deal is almost completed, although they point out that it could fall apart, as did Tom Brokaw's near agreement with ABC earlier this summer. "This is always the sticky stage," said one network source who has worked with Brinkley. "Things like money, who reports to whom and freedom." Alan Raymond, ABC News' director of information, said Tuesday: "We've had discussions. We'd very much like to have him at ABC." On Thursday, Raymond and other officials would not comment on the situation.

An ABC source said Brinkley, a longtime political observer, would also contribute heavily to "our political coverage, especially going into a big election year in '82. He would assist in our special events coverage, especially the political side, which would allow him to be in Washington and make the most of his contacts and strengths." Although the 61-year-old Brinkley isn't Brokaw or Dan Rather, the dashing anchorman type wooed but not won by ABC News President Rooney Arledge, he is a well-known news personality —something ABC is missing. Brinkley won national recognition on the "Huntley-Brinkley Report," which first went on the air on Oct. 29, 1956. His work over the past 30 years will be the subject of a retrospective on NBC's "Nightly News" tonight. "I'll say something at the end," said anchorman John Chancellor. "It will probably be irreverently sentimental." Then later tonight, Brinkley will appear for a final time on "NBC Magazine With David Brinkley," closing the show with some personal commentary. So, as usual, it will be David Brinkley who has the last word.

Another 'Return' Eyed By Smothers Brothers

By LIDIA WASOWICZ
STATELINE, Nev. (UPI)—Like Mohammed Ali, each time the Smothers Brothers call it quits, they don't quite mean it. In their most recent change of heart, the popular and once-controversial comedy-singing stars ended their four-year retirement as a team to regroup, recoup and renew their act starting with summer engagements at Caesars-Tahoe and Las Vegas.

At the same time, the brothers, whose irreverent political satire got them thrown off the air in 1969, were preparing for two one-hour NBC variety specials and a new fall sitcom series, "Fitz and Bones," that will cast them as a couple of adventuresome TV newsmen.

The brothers last retired their act at the end of 1976, making their final appearance Dec. 30 at the Aladdin Hotel in Las Vegas. Tommy took time out to "think, relax" and buy a vineyard in wine-rich Sonoma; Dick to race cars, sail, ski and buy a winery in picturesque Santa Cruz.

Since entertainment is their "No. 1 love," both brothers kept some ties with showbiz, making separate appearances on TV specials and variety shows, in films and, together again in 1979-80, in the Broadway musical "I Love My Wife."

"Now, we've taken our act off the shelf for the first time since 1977," says Dick, cast in the show as straightman to dum-witted, guitar-playing Tommy.

"We had said 'Never again,' but things have changed," chimed in Tommy, at 44 more mature and calmer since his bitter feud with CBS a decade ago.

"That's because we're going through a midlife crisis," quips youthful-looking Dick, 42, his shapely, shorts-clad legs propped up on a coffee table.

"At times like this you feel like reminiscing, and that's what this show is all about. We're using some of our oldest material. You could call it the Smothers Brothers historical comedy hour" — minus all the biting political satire that got them into trouble.

Is it a serious comeback? "We have no specific goal for the future," Dick said. "It's not like building a fast-food chain or a law practice where you have to work every minute ... especially if you have another main source of income."

Although they won't disclose their revenues, the boys say their wine businesses free them from the financial insecurities commonly experienced by people in show business.

"Actors as a lot are an insecure bunch, and most of them are out of work. They're ready to kill for a part on shows like 'Loveboat,' but that's only $50,000 to $60,000 a year. Then, they panic," said Tommy. "Since we've got another business, we can do our act just for fun. We've done this several times now — quit and come back."

The New York natives — whose first booking at San Francisco's popular Purple Onion lasted 36 weeks and resulted in the first of 10 comedy albums, five of them gold — reached their prime during the three seasons as stars of "The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" on CBS.

The show, initiated as a mid-season replacement, quickly evolved into the most controversial series on television and was abruptly canceled in 1969. The brothers sued for breach of contract, demanding $10 million. They were awarded $776,000.

Except for an abortive summer replacement show on ABC in 1970, they all but disappeared from public view.

"...You could say we just treaded water, although I did a couple of pictures," said Tommy.

They teamed up again in 1973 to make another run at the nightclub world, and they were signed for "The Smothers Brothers Hour" on NBC.

But the brothers felt stifled by NBC's tight controls over program content. Now, Tommy said, "We just don't feel the passions of old about any current events. All we want to do is entertain."

A SECOND TERM
ROME (AP)—Communist Mayor Luigi Petroselli was re-elected to a second term by the City Council on Thursday. He will head a minority government, however.

DAVID BRINKLEY

Brinkley has been working on "NBC Magazine with David Brinkley" and reportedly resigned from NBC because he was not covering the news. He has been offered the host role on ABC's Sunday information program, "Issues and Answers," which will be expanded and revamped this fall, sources said.

"Sunday morning TV is more important in Washington," said a source close to Brinkley. "It would give him good entry into what's happening there, and David would be comfortable with that."

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS' popular "60 Minutes" has corruption and chicanery locked up on Sunday nights, so ABC counter-programmed with arson and pyromania in its new series about a family of firefighters, "Code Red."

The 90-minute movie pilot is Sunday night, but no premiere date has been set for the weekly series that will open ABC's Sunday night lineup.

Based on the pilot, "Code Red" accomplishes what it sets out to do. It isn't sophisticated drama by any means. But it is family entertainment, geared to kids, women and fire-chasers who prefer high-wire action to Mike Wallace reality.

It will even tug a few heartstrings, and it's good to see public servants other than police officers get their due.

The key word definitely is warmth — in both the family relationships and the authentic blazes created by producer Irwin Allen, the disaster king whose credits include "Towering Inferno" and "Earthquake."

OUR CLASSIFIED STAFF knows it's important to please you. And we receive hundreds of testimonials every year.

Whether Allen can continue his full-scale pyrotechnics for the lower-budgeted weekly programs will be interesting.

Lorne Greene, a fixture on Sunday nights as head of the Cartwright clan on "Bonanza," has been rescued from "Battlestar Galactica" to play Capt. Joe Rorche, a veteran of the Los Angeles fire department who traded his uniform for a tie and jacket on the arson squad.

That leaves the real fire fighting to his two sons, played by Andrew Stevens and Sam J. Jones.

The Joe Cartwright character is heartthrob Stevens, who's known for his swashbuckler roles and a marriage to former Charlie's Angel Kate Jackson. As Ted Korche, he strums guitars with beautiful women in bikinis and rides tailboard on a sleek fire engine, battling blazing infernos from the inside.

Jones, who played Flash Gordon on TV and Bo Derek's unnoticed husband in the movie "10," is the sensible, more serious Adam Cartwright type, who fights fires from helicopters. More ambitious than his younger brother, he's studying to join the arson squad.

ALAVISH START TOKYO (AP) — Couples in Japanese cities spend an average of $29,000 to get married and set up housekeeping, according to the Sanwa Bank.

There is an emerging woman of the house (Julie Adams), a proud wife who's going to college for self-improvement and companionship since hubby and sons spend some nights sleeping at the firehouse. Capt. Joe hasn't quite come to grips with the modern woman. When school keeps Ann from the laundry room, he solves the crisis by buying a clean shirt.

Capt. Joe is much more liberal about Los Angeles' first woman firefighter. "We need every man and woman we can get through the academy," he tells a but-tinsky TV reporter. Haley Green (Martina Deignan) also sleeps in the firehouse, but she's really one of the boys — remember the kiddies are watching at 7 p.m. There is one Victorian fireman who thinks a woman's place is not by the hose.

There's really something for everybody here — a black former athlete and an Indian on the arson squad, Johnny Raincloud, whom Capt. Joe actually calls "a native North American."

Children will find more for them in the series than in the movie pilot, ABC advises. The Federal Communication Commission requires an hour of news or children's programming on Sunday nights. An abandoned teen-ager, not in the movie, will be adopted by the Rorche family. Woven into the stories will be Smokey-The-Bear type fire prevention and safety tips.

It's hoped that "Code Red" won't frighten kids with grotesque burn victims. Close-ups of a toasted arsonist in Sunday's movie could give anybody nightmares.

All in all, "Code Red" is good Sunday family fare, just like the Rorcheks who have a traditional Sunday gathering, complete with horseshoe pitching, mom's cooking and pre-dinner grace. This one should get the Moral Majority's seal of approval.

Political Friends and Foes

Just five years ago these two men were involved in a dispute that threatened to split the Republican Party. Incumbent President Gerald Ford had barely survived a strong challenge by Ronald Reagan to win the Republican Party's presidential nomination. At the 1980 convention four years later Reagan gave Ford a 19th century peace pipe and asked him to be his running mate. However, after 48 tense hours of negotiation, they realized their plan would require a major restructuring of the executive branch, and the former President rejected the idea. Today the two will meet in Grand Rapids, Michigan, where Reagan is scheduled to dedicate the Ford presidential museum.

DO YOU KNOW — Who did Gerald Ford replace as Vice President in 1973?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — King Louis XVI was leading France when the Revolution began.

Sunken Ship's Gold Regained

LONDON (AP) — Divers working at record depths of 800 feet have recovered the first seven gold bars from a torpedoed World War II British warship carrying as much as $83 million in Soviet gold, the Defense Ministry said.

The 10,000-ton cruiser Edinburgh was carrying Soviet gold to pay for U.S. weapons when it was heavily damaged by German destroyers in the icy Barents Sea on May 2, 1942.

The British sank the ship

170 miles north of the Soviet port of Murmansk to keep the estimated five to ten tons of gold from the Germans.

Word of the find Thursday came from a Defense Ministry observer aboard the divers' mother ship, the 1,400-ton Stephaniturm. Two Soviet officials also are on board monitoring the salvage operation.

Twelve divers in heated suits are working in two-man teams from a diving bell suspended from the Stephaniturm.

British, Soviet and Norwegian companies made several abortive attempts to find the wreck before Jessop Marine Recoveries of Manchester located it last September with sophisticated electronic equipment.

Under terms of the recovery negotiated with Britain's Department of Trade, Jessop will get 45 percent of the total value if the company salvages all the bullion. The British government will get about a third of the remainder and the Soviets two-thirds.

The London Times reports the shipment's worth at about $83 million based on the current price of gold. But Deak-Perera, the oldest and largest gold retailer in the United States, estimates its value at $70 million.

Homecoming

BETHEL — Annual homecoming will be observed at Hickory Grove Free Will Baptist Church near here Sunday.

Sunday School will begin at 10 a.m. followed by worship services at 11 o'clock. Dinner will be served on the church grounds followed by a singspiration at 2 p.m. featuring the Oak Grove Boys and local talent.

Revival services will start Monday and continue through Friday with services nightly at 7:45 p.m. There will be special music each evening and the Rev. Bruce James of Ayden will be the guest speaker.

The Rev. Leon Harris is church pastor. The public is invited.

Oldest Mammal Fossil Unearthed In Arizona Dig

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the oldest fossils of a North American mammal, a previously unknown type from the age of dinosaurs, has been unearthed in Arizona, scientists announced today.

The fossilized jawbone and teeth, estimated to be 180 million years old, belonged to an animal the size of a small mouse or shrew. It may represent one of the earliest stages of mammalian development, said the National Geographic Society, which sponsored the work.

Dr. Farish A. Jenkins Jr., a biology professor at Harvard University, said the discovery joins a few teeth found in the same area last fall as the oldest mammalian fossils ever recovered on the continent.

The expedition led by Jenkins found the tiny fossil, half as long as a human fingernail, on the next-to-last day of a six-week dig this summer at an Indian reservation in northeastern Arizona.

Jenkins had been searching the area, a quarry called the Kayenta Formation, for four years for the remains of the earliest mammals on Earth. Although he and colleagues found other fossils, the remains of these small mammals eluded him until now.

The jaw fossil, embedded in a rock, was found by Kathleen Smith, an assistant professor of anatomy at Duke University.

Jenkins said similar fossils were found previously in southwest England, Wales and China. But with the teeth and jaw found in Arizona, he said, "we have evidence that these earliest mammals existed in the New World, too."

No one knows what the animal looked like or how it lived during a time when dinosaurs, large and small, dominated the world.

Mammals are believed to have originated from extinct reptiles called therapsids more than 230 million years ago. The earliest ones are all thought to have been small creatures that probably were insect eaters.

Warm-blooded animals that nurse their young, mammals exist today as more than 4,000 species, including man. But thousands of other species have evolved and died out since mammals first appeared.

The teeth found last year at the discovery site, by Will Downs of the Museum of Northern Arizona, belonged to a Morganucodontid, one of two known varieties of very early mammals. The other is called Kuehneotheriid.

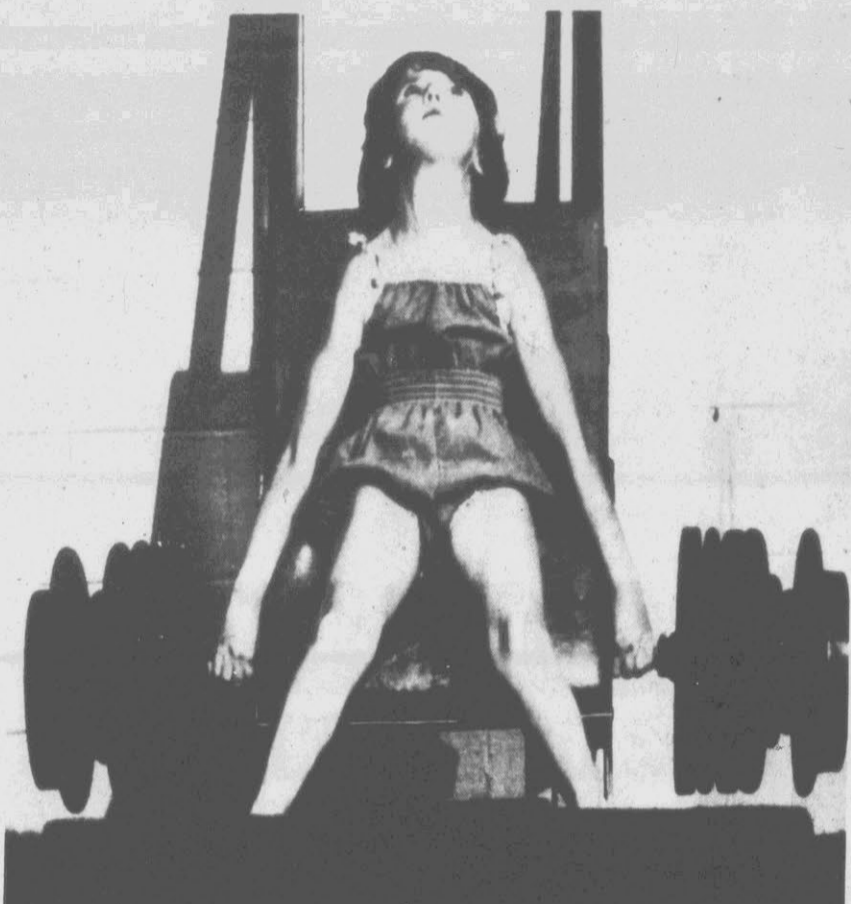

Jenkins said the new find has similarities to both those types, but is definitely different.

"The Morganucodontids are ancestral to the platypus and the other egg-laying mammals of Australia," he said. "Scientists have always thought the Kuehneotheriids were ancestral to everything else — bats, whales, man, rodents, primates, horses, dogs."

Jenkins continued: "This jaw shows us that mammals were more diverse than we had thought, at the very beginning of mammalian evolution."

Third State To Accept Verdict Of Guilty, But

By WILLIAM C. STRONG
Associated Press Writer
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Juries in Illinois now have the option of finding a defendant who uses an insanity defense in a criminal case "guilty but mentally ill."

Gov. James Thompson said in signing the legislation Thursday that it recognizes the criminal has some responsibility for the crime even if mentally ill when it occurred.

The measure represents a compromise between conviction and a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity.

Illinois joins Michigan and Indiana as the only states allowing judges to offer the verdict as an option to juries, according to Gary Starkman of the governor's criminal justice staff.

The law also would allow defendants to plead guilty but mentally ill, provided they undergo a psychological exam.

"This law will ensure that those people who have mental problems and are responsible for crimes are punished as well as treated," Thompson said. "It responds to a problem in our society, that of violence by those with mental ailments who have slipped through loopholes in our criminal justice system."

Law enforcement authorities complain defendants found innocent by reason of insanity frequently are released from mental institutions after brief periods of treatment.

If a criminal is found guilty but mentally ill — and not legally insane — he would receive the same sentence as if there had been a guilty verdict. But he would serve as much of the sentence as necessary being treated for mental illness, and the rest in prison.

If the defendant is sentenced to other than a prison term, he must submit to court-ordered treatment.

The law defines "guilty but mentally ill" as "a substantial disorder of thought, mood, or behavior which afflicted a person at the time of the commission of the offense and which impaired that person's judgment, but not to the extent that he is unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of his behavior or is unable to conform his conduct to the requirement of laws."
