New Reagan Cuts Face Perilous Passage

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, leading a "crusade to save our economy," is asking Congress to reduce next year's budget deficit by $16 billion with spending cuts and tax increases that even his allies admit face a perilous path.

Reagan had barely outlined his plan Thursday night for $13 billion in program reductions and $3 billion in higher tax revenues for 1982 when Senate Republican Whip Ted Stevens of Alaska said, "I don't believe we can get the cuts" in the form proposed. "It would be very difficult to do."

House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, like Stevens a strong backer of the president, predicted in advance that Congress would probably trim defense spending by more than the $2 billion the president requested.

Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee agreed, saying Congress "almost certainly" will try to increase defense spending cuts, "and I would not rule out the possibility they will be increased."

Aware that a group of moderate and liberal Republicans already has indicated dissatisfaction with parts of Reagan's plan, Michel said, "I can't have more than token sippage on my side to make a credible showing out there."

Reagan mentioned none of those problems in a nationally broadcast speech from the Oval Office that backed away from cuts in Social Security, including elimination of the minimum benefit, and rejected delays in the three-year personal income tax cut Congress approved earlier this year.

"We are just starting down a road I believe will lead us out of the economic swamp we've been in for so long," he declared. "The important thing now is to hold to a firm, steady course."

He recommended across-the-board reductions of 12 percent in non-defense and non-benefit programs, slashing the federal work force by 75,000 jobs, cutting back on federal loan guarantees and abolishing the departments of Education and Energy. On tax revenues, he said unspecified "abuses and obsolete incentives" should be eliminated.

The White House said the reductions were necessary to help hold the deficit to $43.1 billion for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1 — $600 million higher than Reagan had been aiming for.

Reagan pledged they also would help put the economy on a path toward a balanced budget in 1984. Meeting that target depends on further unspecified cuts of $34.7 billion in 1983 and 1984.

Predictably, many Democrats were critical of the president's recommendations.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said the new proposals represent "an unbelievable meanness of spirit. I don't believe the public will stand for it."

House Democratic leader James Wright of Texas said, "You simply cannot have the largest peacetime buildup in the history of our country and the largest tax cut and a balanced budget. You simply can't have all three at the same time."

Reagan, in effect, said he could.

"Let there be no mistake: we have no choice but to continue down the road toward a balanced budget — a budget that will keep us strong at home and secure overseas," he said.

To encourage Congress to act, Reagan appealed to "all of you who joined in this crusade to save our economy to help again."

"I know that we are asking for sacrifices from virtually all of you," he said. "But there is no choice."

Everett Reelected PCC Bd. Chairman O'Connor To Be Sworn

Clifton W. Everett Sr., of Bethel was re-elected to his third term as chairman of the Pitt Community College Board of Trustees yesterday at the board's first meeting of the 1981-82 school year.

Other board officers re-elected at the meeting include Mrs. Kay Whichard to her third term as vice-chairman, and Mrs. Mary Langston to her second term as secretary.

Prior to the election of officers, Everett, reappointed by the Pitt County and Greenville Boards of Education to an eight-year term on the board, and Henry C. Oglesby of Grifton, re-appointed by the Board of County Commissioners, took the oath of office as trustees as did Douglas Wofford, president of the PCC Student Government Association who will serve a one-year term.

Mrs. Whichard, chairman of the board's personnel committee reported on the new instructors employed by PCC since the last board meeting. The new instructors include Kay Elizabeth White and Kathryn Watson Pacha in English, Chester Kent Lilley in Air and Water Technology, Julia Dixon Craft in Nursing and Helen M. Parks in Data Processing.

Two other instructors approved to be employed on October 1 include Jack Robinson in Industrial Cooperative Skills Training and Lanny Joe Brittain in Electro-Mechanical Industrial Maintenance.

Building Committee chairman A. B. Whitley Jr. reported that the low bidder for the paving project south of the White Building is Barrus Construction Co. and that the project should be completed in the near future.

Program Committee chairman Corey Stokes reported details of the new Industrial Maintenance

Electro/Mechanical program and the Cooperative Skills Training program recently approved by the State Board of Community Colleges for PCC. Funds for these programs, Stokes noted, were made available to the State Board by the 1981 General Assembly.

He also reported that the Early Childhood Pre-School Laboratory at the Moyewood Center, started July 1, is working well and that 50 children are enrolled.

The Board also adopted a unified budget resolution containing the state, county, federal and institutional funds, totaling $5.57 million, that have been appropriated to PCC for 1981-82.

Two gifts, a used Massey Ferguson 1100 tractor from Massey Ferguson Inc. for the Farm Machinery Mechanics Program and a $200 scholarship from the Tar Heel Chapter of RESE, Greenville, for students in the Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning program were formally accepted.

In his remarks to the board, PCC president William E. Fulford Jr. said the college has the highest fall quarter curriculum enrollment in its history at 2,578 students, an increase of 5 percent over the fall quarter 1980.

He also emphasized the need for additional classroom and lab space for Nursing, Data Processing, Energy Technology and the new Electro-Mechanical and Cooperative Skills programs, and requested the special committee on facilities to continue to look at these needs and assist with planning for additional facilities.

Fulford also reported that PCC will have an energy exhibit in the Department of Community Colleges' building at the N.C. State Fair in October.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sandra Day O'Connor, swearing an oath son by 101 men before her, is taking her place as the first woman on the Supreme Court, promising to "do equal right to the poor and to the rich."

Mrs. O'Connor, an Arizona appeals court judge, was to be sworn in during a brief ceremony today as an associate justice of the nation's highest court.

President Reagan, who broke a 191-year, all-male tradition when he appointed Mrs. O'Connor to the lifetime job, was among some 500 guests invited to watch as Chief Justice Warren E. Burger administered her oath of office.

Also invited was retired Justice Potter Stewart, the man Mrs. O'Connor was picked to succeed.

Following a court tradition, Mrs. O'Connor had to take two oaths, one during a private meeting of the justices and the other in the marble and mahogany courtroom.

The first is a constitutional oath in which Mrs. O'Connor must state:

"I do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."

In the subsequent judicial oath, Mrs. O'Connor must state:

"I do solemnly swear that I will administer justice without respect to persons, and do equal right to the poor and to the rich, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God."

Mrs. O'Connor, 51, sailed through Senate confirmation hearings despite opposition from groups who perceived her voting record in the Arizona Legislature as pro-abortion.

Mrs. O'Connor made it plain, however, that she shares the views of many conservatives.

'Close Up' Shows Students Govm't Functions

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Today, a number of Pitt County students heard and saw firsthand what it's like to be a sheriff's deputy, a parole officer, a tax supervisor, and a county manager. Tomorrow they'll learn the basics of being a mayor, a town advisor and a county commissioner.

Pitt County Close Up, for the second year, is teaching county high school students about the function of Pitt County government. The two day seminar began today at the Willis Building in Greenville with a keynote address by Dr. Jerome Melton, deputy state superintendent of public instruction.

"I cannot say enough about the type of encounter that Close Up provides students with," Melton told the group of around 100 young people. "It is invaluable to anyone who is interested in learning more about how our government works at the local level because it shows them how it works rather than merely telling them."

Melton urged students to be active in local government. "You have to be a part of it," he stressed. "To be angry about it — about what we've done to our streams or about the price of living — is not enough. You have to do something about it."

The speaker noted that Close Up "gives students a chance to discover how they can be involved — where to go for help."

D.H. Conley graduate Kirk Shelly, who participated in Pitt County's 1980 Close Up as well as the North Carolina and National close ups, encouraged this year's participants to continue their education about government through the other close ups.

"Be involved," he stressed. "Find out what you can do at the county level; about the things that concern you — nuclear wastes, OPEC, the decrease in education funds."

"Learn who to call to resolve a problem. This is the type of information you will get here today," he added. "What you will learn are basics."

After the morning keynote address, the students visited the Sheriff's Department to hear Keith Knox explain a deputy's responsibilities, and toured the Pitt County jail. Ray Joyner, state parole and probation officer, spoke to the group along with Elvira Allred, Pitt County Register of Deeds.

During the afternoon, John Jablonski, supervisor of child support enforcement for the social service department, met with the participants along with Mark Owens, chairman of the board of education, tax supervisor Jimmy Hardee and Donald Davenport, administrative assistant to the county manager.

On Saturday the group will hear the mayors of Ayden, Bethel, Farmville, Grifton, Grimesland, along with Winterville-Fountain Town Advisor Carl Dean discuss the various functions of municipalities.

Later, they will meet with the county commissioners and hear a concluding address by Janice Faulkner, executive director of the Democratic party of North Carolina.

The Close Up program is a part of the state and national Close Up Foundation. The 1980 seminar was the first county-level close up in the United States. According to Gigi Walter of North Pitt High School, one of the local coordinators of the project, Pitt County's program is being used by schools from other counties and other states as a model for local level government studies.

Reagan Record Backs A Claim Don McGlohon Files As Mayor

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan points to his record as governor of California as evidence that the federal government can save money by cutting fraud and abuse in welfare programs, while still taking care of the people he calls the "truly needy."

A look at that record shows that benefits did indeed rise while the trend toward a sharp growth in the welfare rolls was reversed.

In his nationally televised speech Thursday night, Reagan said that a welfare reform program he initiated as governor "saved the taxpayer some $2 billion."

That 84-point program is still viewed as his major accomplishment.

His savings estimate was based on projections that the rate of increase in caseloads would have continued upward for the last three years of his second term. Critics dispute that figure, saying that the base period he picked was abnormally high because of a recession at the time.

When Reagan took office in January 1967, there were 752,199 Californians receiving assistance under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

By March 1971, the number had grown to 1,663,564 recipients.

That was when Reagan launched his reforms and the caseloads immediately started to decline. By July 1974 there were 351,649 fewer AFDC recipients.

From that low mark, the caseload began rising again, but the rate only paralleled the increase in the popula-

ROME (AP) — The jury that convicted Mehmet Ali Agca of trying to murder Pope John Paul II wants state prosecutors to search for accomplices because it is convinced he did not act alone.

"The attack against John Paul II was not the work of a delirious ideologue or a criminal who did everything by himself," the Court of Assize wrote in a 50-page report published Thursday. "He was the fruit of a complex plot orchestrated by hidden minds interested in destabilization."

However, the court conceded it had no evidence about who might be behind such a conspiracy.

Don McGlohon, mayor of Greenville since 1979, filed as a candidate for re-election this morning.

A 1954 graduate of East Carolina University who served as a pilot in the U.S. Air Force from 1954 to 1957, McGlohon is president of Hines Agency Inc., an independent insurance firm in Greenville.

McGlohon is the second person to file as a candidate for mayor in the November 3 election. Percy Cox, a member of the Greenville City Council for 11 years before serving as mayor from 1977 to 1979, filed as a candidate earlier this month. Cox chose not to run for re-election in 1979.

Commenting on his decision to run for re-election, McGlohon said, "It has been a very pleasant two years because of the cooperation and support of this particular city council and staff and employees of the city. This has enabled us to do things that we are proud of, such as begin a comprehensive plan for the future land use of our city."

"This plan," he continued, "will be completed within the next 30 to 60 days and will be a document this council and future councils can use to determine future growth."

"We have also encouraged and emphasized citizen involvement through the task force, volunteer programs, and improved public information to enable citizens to know as much about the government process as possible. The number and quality of volunteers has been amazing and we want to continue our emphasis on having them involved in government."

McGlohon also placed emphasis on employee training, "giving our employees the opportunity to grow and develop and become better managers and employees," during his two years as mayor.

"I believe the primary responsibility of an elected body is to be involved in planning and citizen involvement and I would like to continue to emphasize those areas for a couple of more years," he concluded.

McGlohon has been active in the Immanuel Baptist Church where he has served as a deacon and Sunday School superintendent, in the Chamber of Commerce where he has been an officer and a director, in the Boys Club of Pitt County where he has served as a director, in the citywide PTA Council where he served as president, and the Greenville Jaycees where he served as chairman of the Boys Home All Star Game.

McGlohon has taught insurance courses at Pitt Community College and the Institute of Insurance at Chapel Hill, is past president of the Eastern Carolina Chapter of Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriters, and has been a

Explosions Hit Rugby Offices

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Two explosions and a fire early today gutted the headquarters of Evansville's rugby team, which has sought a match with South Africa's controversial Springboks, authorities said. There were no injuries.

Only the walls of the two-story brick building remained standing after the blast. The explosions also caused serious damage to an unoccupied home next door and minor damage to a house across the street, said Fire Chief John Boehme.

Boehme said the building was engulfed in flame when fire trucks arrived.

The first explosion at the headquarters of the All-Whites amateur rugby team occurred at 4:58 a.m. Another was reported at 5:14 a.m., Vanderburgh County fire officials said.

The fire was brought under control shortly after 6 a.m.

Damage estimates were not immediately available.

Jim Cantor of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said arson definitely was involved. "When you've got people waking up with a big boom, you know it's arson," Cantor said.

The building was vacant at the time of the blasts. Bernie Bartholome, president of the team, said he had cautioned team members against staying in the building and one member who had been staying there moved out Tuesday because a demonstration or protest was feared.

"We read about the bombing in New York," he said. "We didn't expect anything like this, we just thought there might be some protest."

Last Friday, Roy Stiver, a member of Evansville's All-Whites team, so named because of the color of their uniforms, submitted a bid to the Midwest Rugby Football Union at Chicago to have the South African team play one of their U.S. games at Evansville.

The All-Whites, which has three black members, voted unanimously last week in support of hosting the South African team at one of two undisclosed locations at Evansville.

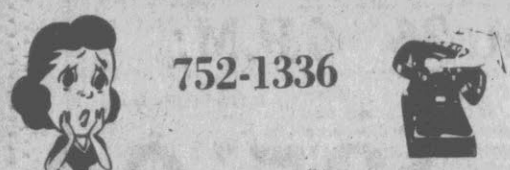

Stiver at the time said he felt Evansville stood a "50-50" chance of getting to host the South Africans, which he called "the best rugby team in the world."

Local black leaders have urged officials and civic leaders to condemn the possible game. The Springboks tour has sparked protest from those opposed to South Africa's policy of racial separation.

On Tuesday, hours before the Springboks played an American all-star team in Albany, N.Y., a bomb exploded near the offices of the Eastern Rugby Union in nearby Schenectady. The blast caused $50,000 damage to the building, but the ERU offices were only lightly damaged and there were no injuries.

Dear Abby

Baby's Death Is Their Loss

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently lost a premature baby boy. He was our first child and the first grandchild on both sides. My husband and I were both very grateful to our family and friends for their support during such a difficult time. However, all the flowers, gifts and condolence letters were addressed to me. My husband hardly left my side during my stay at the hospital. That dear man stood on his feet for 12 hours beside me while I was in labor. When the baby was born we both held him and wept together, knowing he would live only a few hours. It was our loss and we both grieved.

Abby, why do people consider the loss of a child only the mother's loss? It's the father's loss, too. Please remind your readers that men need just as much support as women when their children are ill or dying.

I was given time off from work to recuperate emotionally, but my husband had to go back to work the day after our baby died. Thank you for letting me get this off my chest. E.W.

DEAR E.W.: Thank you for a valuable addition to this column. You also inadvertently gave a boost to the Equal Rights Amendment, which would make discrimination between the sexes illegal under our Constitution. In other words, if a job provided time off to recuperate emotionally after the death of a child, fathers as well as mothers would receive it.

DEAR ABBY: I am an attractive bachelor who would really like to get married, but it seems the only women I find appealing are married! Being a romantic, I get involved with them anyway, which leaves me very little time to court single women, should I happen to meet one I like.

I can't figure out why married women hold such a fascination for me. They were all single before they were married, and many of them were available, but I had no interest in them. Why, oh why, Fair Oracle?

LIKES 'EM MARRIED

DEAR LIKES: Elementary. You really don't want to get married, because you aren't prepared to make a commitment. The married ones are "safe" — and so are you. Grow up!

DEAR ABBY: I am writing this in hopes that some of the older generation moms will read it and be more understanding of young mothers who work.

I have a beautiful 3-month-old baby. She is my second child. I plan to go back to work next month. I've always worked part time to help support our family. My working outside the home is not a matter of luxury, it's a necessity. You would think people would realize how expensive it is to raise a family today, but I guess they don't.

Abby, I am sick of hearing older moms, including my own, say, "How can you leave that beautiful baby all day?"

Now I just reply, "This beautiful baby likes to eat!" Sign me.

I'D RATHER BE HOME

DEAR RATHER: That's food for thought. Well said.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and my best friend are having a disagreement. My friend says that a girl can't get pregnant the first time she has sex. My mother says that is a lot of hogwash. Who is right?

I'm sure many girls are wondering the same thing. Sign me.

HAS NO IDEA

DEAR HAS: Your mother is right!

DEAR ABBY: In response to the girl who thinks her boyfriend is ashamed of her because he has never introduced her to his parents:

Maybe he is in the same situation I was in when I was growing up. I never brought anyone home to meet my parents because I was ashamed of my parents. They were always drunk, and I grew up as "poor white trash."

Now that I am on my own, I've worked my way up from white trash to a successful businessman and a sound citizen.

Please give the guy a break if he deserves one. No one wants to take a girl home to a filthy, smelly, run-down pigpen. It's just too much shame to bear.

BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Thanks for revealing the other side of the coin.

ABWA Film Shown Group

The American Business Women's Association Pirate Chapter held its meeting Tuesday night at the First Christian Church. The program was based on the theme "Focus on ABWA."

A film "ABWA Ahead of its Time" was shown. Members of the membership committee answered questions about the Pirate Chapter and ABWA.

During the business session, programs to be presented this fall and winter were discussed.

The October meeting will be at Abrams Barbecue with a report on the national convention in St. Louis as the program.

Miss Pamela Fulford Says Vows Saturday

WASHINGTON — Peace Chapel Free Will Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday afternoon at three o'clock of Pamela Faye Fulford and Darrell Lane Boyd. The officiating minister was Edwin Hill.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Fulford and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Boyd, all of Washington.

A program of organ music was rendered by Phil Corey. Vocal selections included "Longer" and "We've Only Just Begun" by Terri Carriker. Mary Mazingo of Farmville, aunt of the bride, presided at the register.

The church altar was decorated with baskets of pink, lilac and white flowers and twin candelabra holding lighted tapers. Family pews were marked with standing brass hurricane lamps with satin ribbon.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza styled with an empire waist encircled with chantilly lace and pearls. The bodice of point d'espirit and lace was fronted with pearls and high collar of chantilly rosettes with pearls. Point d'espirit bishop sleeves encircled with lace and sheer organza had fitted cuffs of lace and pearls. Rows of lace on the hemline flowed into a chapel train. She wore a wide brim hat of white chantilly lace accented with flowers and tulle. The bride carried a nosegay of white, pink and lilac silk daisies with baby's breath tied with streamers.

The maid of honor was Allison Edwards and bridesmaids were Pam Boyd, sister of the bridegroom, Terrie Lamm, cousin of the bride and Susan Carawan, all of Washington and Donna Edwards of Chocowinity. Maria Mazingo of Farmville, cousin of the bride, served as junior bridesmaid.

The honor attendant wore an orchid dress of organza overlay. The bodice had drop flounce shoulders and a fitted waist. The full skirt had a double flounce hemline and gathered on one side. She wore pink daisies in her hair and carried a stem of pink daisies with pink streamers.

Bridesmaids were each dressed in a gown with a white background of organza with a sheer overlay of pink and lilac floral print styled similar to that of the honor attendant. They wore lavender daisies in their hair and carried a stem of lavender daisies with streamers. The junior bridesmaid was dressed identically. Laurie Russell of Charlotte, cousin of the bride, wore a dress of white lilac and carried a wicker basket of yellow and lavender daisy petals.

Stacy Goins of Greenville, cousin of the bride, was ring bearer and the best man was the father of the bridegroom. Ushers included Ricky Boyd, brother of the bridegroom, Stan Fulford, brother of the bride, both of Washington, Donnie Lamm, cousin of the bride of New Bern and Jim Lamm of Greenville. The junior usher was Jeffrey Boyd of Washington, brother of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mauve qiana with a V-neckline. The mother of the bridegroom selected a champagne crepe gown featuring a matching jacket. Both wore corsages of white daisies.

The wedding director was Iris Lilley of Washington and Ellen Russell of Charlotte.

The bride is the granddaughter of Mrs. Adell Holloman of Greenville and the late Mr. Oscar Holloman and Mr. and Mrs. Gid Fulford of Farmville.

The couple will be living in Pinetown after a Florida wedding trip.

The bride graduated from Washington High School and is employed with Taylor Oil and Gas Co., Washington. The bridegroom graduated

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Richard E. Cannon Jr. of Ayden.

Honorary attendants were Kimberley Harrison of Kinston, Olga Herring of Goldsboro and Susan Hosmer of Wellesley, Mass.

The matron of honor was Faye Taylor of Rocky Mount, sister of the bride. Bridesmaids included Rocio Munoz of San Jose, Costa Rica, Martha Hosmer of Wellesley, Mass., Jackie Pollock of Boone and Anne Davis of Rocky Mount.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Richie Cannon of Greenville, Rex Carraway of Ayden, Don Hudson of Greenville and Gary Langley of Rocky Mount. Ray Langley of Rocky Mount and Mike Langley of Kernersville assisted.

Bryan Langley, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and Deidre Taylor, niece of the bride, served as flower girl.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Peggy Lyon.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of satin over white peau de soie designed with a princess style neckline accented by lace across the top of the bodice. The dress had a natural waistline with a full skirt and chapel train. She wore a semi Juliet cap with a veil which matched her dress lace. The cap was made of satin and accented with pearls. She carried a formal bouquet of rubrum lilies, white spider lilies, pixie carnations and baby's breath.

The couple are living at Rt. 2, Ayden after a wedding trip to Nags Head.

A reception was given in the yard following the ceremony. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Carol Cannon, Mrs. Wilhelmine Askew and Miss Heidi Taylor. Miss Mitzi Taylor presided at the register.

Mrs. Thomas Woolard Cannon

A rehearsal dinner pig picklin' was given by the bridegroom's parents and was held at the Doviches Community Building.

United Way Is Critical

The Pitt County United Way fund drive is formally underway with a goal of $431,000.

Campaign Chairman Reid Hooper sees this year's campaign as a "critical" one.

He said the 1981 goal exceeds that of 1980 by ten percent but that "needs are greater this year."

Many of the United Way participating agencies are involved in work with the poor. Since federal social spending is being cut by the Reagan administration it is logical to believe that demands on the charitable organizations are going to be greater than ever during the months ahead.

Thus it becomes clear that community money which goes to United Way is going to be desperately needed by the agencies — and that, indeed makes this a critical year for United Way.

Last year was an outstanding one for United Way in that the drive was completed in record time. Executive Director Lou Folger said it is hoped that that can be duplicated this year and the drive completed by Nov. 4.

It should be clear to all of us that community needs exist and they can be met to some extent by the United Way participating agencies. Thus everyone should give willingly. And by giving promptly we can reach the goal by Nov. 4 so that the community can turn its attention to other things.

Brinkley Still Star Newsmen

David Brinkley has long been a favorite of North Carolinians, no doubt due to his Tar Heel heritage as a Wilmington native as much as his acknowledged ability as a television newsmen.

During most of his career he has been associated with NBC where he gained fame as a member of the Huntley-Brinkley evening news team.

The team eventually broke up but Brinkley stayed on as a star in the stable of NBC news personnel.

Now, however, all that is changed. David Brinkley has moved from NBC to ABC, and Tar Heels who want to follow their famous native son will have to shift to other channels.

It could only be compared to Babe Ruth leaving the New York Yankees or Ted Williams departing the Boston Red Sox during their playing days.

It happens, though, that David Brinkley is now at ABC and we will wager there are still some home runs yet to be hit by him.

Our Crime Watch

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Loss of federal funds for law enforcement demonstration programs should not affect North Carolina's community watch effort.

Law Enforcement Assistance Administration money to the amount of more than $10 million per year has been bankrolling the state's crime watch program, among some smaller projects in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety for a number of years. Local police departments and sheriffs have also been capturing LEAA money.

Now that federal program is being eliminated. But Gov. Jim Hunt and Crime Control Secretary Burley Mitchell agree that this should not cause a cutback in state or local community watch efforts.

Actually, the LEAA funding program has been in trouble in the U.S. Congress for several years, long before the Reagan Administration took office. Despite the millions of dollars being pumped into crime fighting, the crime rates continue to spiral.

Excess

Much of the problem can be traced directly to the local law enforcement agencies who viewed the money as a quick and easy way to buy equipment. Some even diverted the dollars to Mickey Mouse radio setups and sophisticated riot gear which only antagonized some citizens.

At the start, the crime-fighting money was supposed to be used for innovative approaches to helping bring the crime rate under control; programs which, having demonstrated their usefulness, going — was valuable, says Gov. Jim Hunt.

BILL NOBLITT

But now the local people "must take it into their own hands ... the program can now move ahead with local resources", the governor said.

There was some reluctance, at the beginning, among local law enforcement agency heads to commit scarce dollars or personnel to crime prevention. It took federal dollars to convince some sheriffs and chiefs of police; demonstrated success makes continuation of the effort critical.

And it has been successful, says the governor; and the main issue is not money but, people working together.

Credit

Checking across the statistics, Hunt credits the community watch effort with reversing the trend toward higher crime rates in rural areas, and with helping to cap the overall crime rate which is up only one percent statewide. There has been a three percent increase in urban areas; down two percent in rural.

Why Johnny Can't Eat

"The class will please come to order. Today, children, we will talk about American agriculture. The United States produces more meat, grain, corn, dairy products, vegetables and fruit than any country on earth. Thanks to our farmers, food is one of our largest exports and we are able to feed people all over the world.

"Now, Johnny, can you name a meat that comes from an American farm?"

"Tofu."

"No, Johnny. Tofu is not a meat. It looks like meat, but it is made from soybean curd."

"Lady in the cafeteria said it was meat."

"I'm sure she didn't say it was meat. What she must have said was that you are now entitled under Department of Agriculture regulations to have a delicious tofu instead of a hamburger."

"It tasted lousy."

"Now, Johnny, you must understand tofu is an acquired taste. Does anyone know what an acquired taste is?"

"Something that tastes lousy?"

"Now, I'll have no more of that kind of talk in this sixth-grade class. An acquired taste is something you have someone your age."

"Lady in the cafeteria said that's all I could have."

"She was just following federal regulations concerning school lunches."

"What's the federal regulations?"

"Those are the rules the President and his advisers decide the people must live by. He had to cut down on your milk allowance to save money for the country."

"What does he do with all the milk we ain't allowed to drink?"

"It's made into butter and cheese and stored in warehouses all over America, until it gets rotten and then they throw it away."

"You got to be kidding."

"No, Johnny. That's the only way we can encourage farmers to produce milk. By buying up their surplus they're guaranteed a profit on their milk. Shall we move on to vegetables? What kind of vegetables do our American farmers raise?"

"I know the answer to that one. Catsup."

"Catsup is not a vegetable, Johnny."

"Lady in the cafeteria said it was a vegetable. She said I was entitled to two vegetables: potatoes and catsup."

"Well, it's true that the Department of Agriculture declared the other day that catsup was a vegetable, but farmers don't raise it. They raise tomatoes and afterwards they're squashed up and put into bottles as catsup. Then people like yourselves put the catsup on your hamburgers to make them taste better."

"Lady in the cafeteria wouldn't give me no hamburger."

"Well, then, you can put

to get used to. When I was a little girl I didn't like spinach. But as I grew up I acquired a taste for it, and now I eat it once a week."

"You ever acquire a taste for tofu?"

"We didn't have tofu when I was a little girl."

"You're lucky. It really tastes lousy."

"Now let's talk about other things farmers raise. Edna, name something a farmer produces."

"Milk."

"Very good. Milk and other dairy products are some of the most important foods for young growing bodies because they contain calcium which your bones need to make you strong. How many glasses of milk should a young person drink a day?"

"A half a cup."

"No, Johnny. A half a cup is certainly not enough milk for

State Dept. Axe Poised

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — One of the non-conservative appointments to the State Department pushed through by Secretary of State Alexander Haig against the wishes of Sen. Jesse Helms is about to be sacked: Myer Rashish, under secretary of state for economic affairs and one of the few Democrats at so high a level in the Reagan administration.

Rashish, a Kennedy administration official two decades ago who crossed party lines to support Ronald Reagan last year, has been accused of bad-mouthing the president in private. "I don't think there was any big ideological problem with Mike," one presidential aide told us. "It's just he never was a member of the team."

His likely successor is scarcely more of a Reaganaut than Rashish: Assistant Secretary Robert Hormats, a career government functionary who was a high-ranking trade official in the Carter administration. But Hormats could be succeeded by Richard McCormick, a conservative foreign policy specialist who is currently an aide to Helms.

Reagan On Terrorism

In a private Oval Office meeting, President Reagan recalled his own problems as governor of California in dealing with anti-vietnam war demonstrators when told by a visiting German leader of recent violence in West Berlin during the visit of Secretary of State Alexander Haig.

West Berlin's conservative Mayor Richard von Weizsaecker told Reagan some 500 "violence-prone" West German militants infiltrated West Berlin from West Germany to promote violence. That violence was nipped in the bud by West German security agents. As for the future, Weizsaecker told Reagan that forthcoming U.S.-Soviet talks on nuclear arms in Europe should reduce anti-American demonstrations in West Germany.

Reagan listened with skepticism. Recalling his own California experience, he said government authorities cannot show indecision in dealing with violence but must clamp down hard. That view is not shared in West Germany, either by the socialist government or the conservative opposition.

Koch's Controller Plan

While publicly praising President Reagan's hard line against the illegal air traffic controller strike, Mayor Edward Koch of New York privately — but without success-offered the Reagan administration a plan to end the walkout on a conciliatory note.

Koch's plan: Give the striking controllers exactly 24 hours to come back to work, with the understanding they will start on the bottom of the seniority ladder. That would close the book for all time on "those who do not return. Koch urged Reagan Cabinet members to accept his scheme so that the president could hand this concession to the union movement during his Labor Day visit to New York.

Koch got nowhere. The reason is put bluntly by one Transportation Department official: "As far as we're concerned, they (the controllers) are no longer government employees. There's no way they can be asked to return, and that's it."

Gold Is 'Crazy'

Although the notion of returning to a gold standard has been getting increasing attention, it is still considered "crazy" by ex-Nixon administration officials who severed the last connection between gold and the dollar in 1971.

"That's nonsense, it's crazy," said California industrialist George Shultz when Professor Arthur Laffer started pushing for gold at a recent meeting of President Reagan's outside economic advisers. As budget director in 1971, Shultz was one of the architects in closing the gold window.

A footnote: Reagan has grown non-committal about gold. Although earlier in the year he talked in private about the historical role of the gold standard in curbing inflation, he was much more cautious when the issue came up recently at a meeting with Republican congressional leaders. He would say only that the issue is under study by the Federal Gold Commission.

Strength For Today

WAITING FOR YOU

Most people think that if they had certain things they would be happy. More money or a distinguished position would give them happiness. If they could only win their dream girl or glamor boy, happiness would ensue.

One of the most disappointing experiences of life is getting what we want and then finding to our infinite disappointment that we don't want it so much after all.

Happiness is not having something but finding something. You have happiness in your heart right now. It is waiting to be discovered. A million dollars will not give you happiness nor will success in the century's most glamorous romance. Many couples who have wanted nothing in the world so much as to marry each other have done so — been disappointed, disillusioned, and spent the rest of their lives bedeviling each other.

Happiness does not depend upon the possession of anything. It is just waiting to be discovered. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:

Tonight I swam a mile — 72 laps in 75 minutes. On January 1, I could not tread water. I was afraid.

In November of 1980, my husband suggested swimming lessons. He wanted to improve his stroke and learn new techniques. I wanted the exercise.

We took three 35-minute lessons a week for five sessions — 15 weeks during which I learned the back stroke, the crawl, and the side stroke. In June, we enrolled in one session of nine 35-minute lessons at the Tar River Estates, where I learned the elementary back stroke. With practice, Clayton and I were breaking improper habits and gaining confidence.

In July we joined a local swimming club and swam as often as possible. In the meantime, we swam in Orlando, Fla. in Ann Arbor, Michigan at the University and at every YMCA or YWCA who would allow us the privilege. Unfortunately, we were handicapped by not having membership in a "Y," a requirement in most instances. We wish that Greenville had one. ECU can barely provide for its own enrollment. The lanes are crowded.

I write, nevertheless, to acknowledge the industrious, challenging, enthusiastic instruction of two marvelous ladies — Mrs. Ron (Gail) Lancaster of Greenville and her graduate assistant, Ms. Cindy Hardee of Graham. It was they who encouraged me to tread water, swim the basic strokes, dive and enter the water at any time with no hesitation.

We are now enrolled for a semester at ECU under another friendly instructor, Ms. Julie Malcolm, for a six-hour-a-week conditioning class. The lanes are crowded, but we swim steadily.

Clayton and I hope that this letter encourages ONE person over 50 to learn to swim. Trust us! With one effort at the time, a relaxed mind and body, and capable instructors, TOTAL SATISFACTION IS INEVITABLE.

To the editor:

After reading Dr. Todd's letter, which appeared in the September 22 issue of the Reflector, I feel compelled to respond. I, too, have watched ECU grow over the past years, not as a faculty member, but as a Greenville citizen.

I also watched her grow as a student, both in undergraduate and later in graduate school. I am extremely proud of ECU's growth and feel that she deserves a chancellor who is completely committed to her growth in all phases of university life. I know many individuals who are presently associated with ECU who feel it is in the best interest of the school to find a person who will make that commitment wholeheartedly, not half-heartedly. How can one serve his best while his eyes wander across the nation for, what he must consider, "Greener Pastures"?

The alternative of the "long agonizing search" for a totally committed chancellor is a small price to pay; rather than settling for less.

Battle Of Buffalo To Repeat?

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Will the Battle of Buffalo spread to other areas and bring even more chaos to the housing situation?

It could happen. The same financial formula that produced the borrower-lender confrontation in New York's second-largest city exists in other areas.

Ironically, that formula was supposed to have eased tensions.

The problems in Buffalo go back to late 1975 and 1976 when state usury laws, since rescinded, prohibited lenders from charging more than 8.5 percent on home mortgages. Since rates in other states were into the double digits and rising, some New York institutions stopped lending.

Buffalo Savings Bank didn't pull out of the market. Instead, it sought to reduce its commitment by limiting its 8.5 percent mortgages to five years only, although repayment would be on a 25-or 30-year schedule.

At the end of 5 years, that is, the borrower would have a "balloon" repayment of whatever remained on the loan. The loan would be retired, and the borrower would be offered a new loan at a new interest rate.

This month, with home mortgage rates averaging between 17 percent and 18 percent across the country, and with many institutions charging more, Buffalo Savings sought to call in its mortgages, per agreement.

Under the plan, the bank would have allowed three options: Pay off the balance owed, negotiate mortgages with other banks, or accept a new interest rate of 14 percent.

Some angry borrowers maintained that the bank told them when they signed their notes that it never had called in a mortgage like that.

Buffalo Savings backed off. "We didn't realize the economic impact of the recall on the small homeowner," said Ross Kenzie, president. "We just listened to people. We made a mistake and we fixed a mistake."

A mistake? Perhaps. Holders of 900 mortgages that would have been recalled made plans to picket the bank and urge the public to withdraw money. The publicity would have been bad, especially for a bank that depends on the business of small savers and borrowers.

But if it was a mistake, what are we to make of the many thousands of similar and related loans that have been made by thousands of lenders in the past few years, supposedly as the answer to today's problems?

Weren't rollover mortgages and renegotiable mortgages (the Buffalo loans were, in effect, in these categories) and the like devised as a response to high interest rates and the uncertainty about where those rates might be three or five years or 10 years from now?

You may recall the evolution of the flexible-rate mortgages over the past five years or so. With interest rates fluctuating lenders said they could not take the risk of offering 30-year, fixed-rate loans. Already they had the experience of carrying 7 percent mortgages on their books while being forced to pay more than that for deposits.

Out of this challenge arose the variable-rate mortgage and all its relatives, devised as ways to permit the adjusting of interest so they never would get very far out of whack with current rates.

Then, when some professional lenders remained reluctant to lend, sellers themselves entered the market, offering two- or three-year mortgages until buyers could qualify for permanent financing.

Millions of these short-term loans are coming due the next few years.

What happens then? Do people who signed these short-term notes recognize their obligations? Will they be able to pay the higher interest rates that will ensue? Will they rebel against the new terms?

New Reagan Cuts.. Dr. Thomas Is Elected To Position

He proposed:
—A 12 percent across-the-board cut, not counting defense and so-called entitlement benefits such as Social Security. Certain veterans, law enforcement and immigration programs also were exempted. The cuts would reduce spending by $17.5 billion over the next three years. The defense reduction would be $2 billion next year and $13 billion through 1984.
—Eliminating 75,000 federal jobs over three years. Reagan said he would set an example by reducing the White House staff but gave no specifics.
—Dismantling the departments of Energy and Education, thus fulfilling a campaign promise. He also said he planned elimination of an unspecified number of smaller agencies, boards and commissions.
—Reducing federal loan guarantees by $20 billion in a move designed to help bring down interest rates.
—Saving $27 billion over three years by overhauling benefit programs, not counting Social Security. He said this proposal would be sent to Congress later this fall.
—Eliminating unspecified "abuses and obsolete incentives" in the tax code, saving $3 billion this year and $20 billion through 1984.
—Enacting user fees for waterway and other services provided by the government, a proposal sent to Congress last spring but not enacted.
—A bipartisan task force to study Social Security and recommend solutions to the pension program's funds. Reagan also would appoint five members. In the meantime, he said he would recommend permitting the three Social Security funds to borrow from one another as a means of keeping the endangered retirement fund healthy.
—Restoring the minimum Social Security benefit for most recipients, a step the House and Senate appeared almost certain to take without his recommendation. The benefit was eliminated, effective next February, at Reagan's request earlier this year.

Testing Ban On Paraphernalia

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A new state law barring the sale of items commonly associated with the use of illegal drugs is being challenged by a Durham novelty company.
Attorney Daniel R. Flebotte filed a complaint Thursday on behalf of Rainbow Distributing Co. seeking a preliminary injunction blocking enforcement of the law scheduled to take effect Oct. 1.
In the complaint filed in Superior Court Flebotte said that the law was too broad and vague, and asked the court to stay enforcement until a ruling could be made on the statute's constitutionality.
Flebotte said his clients believed the law would penalize their business "when they have no intention of violating the law."
"They are legitimate business people who want to comply with any valid laws," he added.
Rainbow operates two stores that sell motorcycle parts, comic books, tobacco and posters, as well as pipes and cigarette papers.
But purchasing the latter two items could be in violation of the drug paraphernalia law.
Under the law, items including pipes, cocaine spoons, hypodermic needles and such household items as blenders and sifters are outlawed — if it can be proven the purchaser intended to use them with a controlled substance.
The law provides a penalty of $500, a year in prison, or both for anyone possessing such items with the intention of using them with illegal drugs.
For selling any of the items, "knowing that it will be used" for illegal purposes, a merchant can be fined up to $1,000 and sentenced to two years in prison.
According to Flebotte's complaint, the definition of paraphernalia is so broad that items sold for legitimate purposes could be called illegal. He also charges that a section prohibiting the advertisement of items deemed to be drug paraphernalia infringes on constitutional guarantees of free speech.

In addition, Flebotte said, the law restricts interstate commerce by barring shipment of some items that might be legal in states other than North Carolina.

Owe Tomatoes To Hot Water

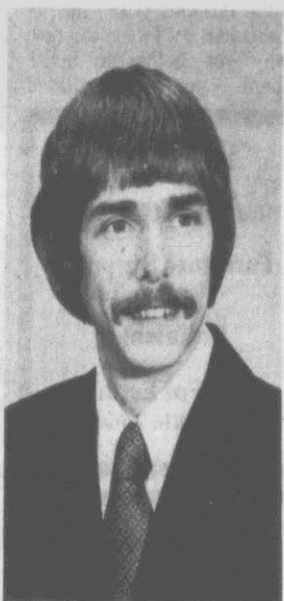

NEW YORK (AP) — Hot water is helping the British grow tomatoes.
The largest tomato factory in the world, according to its owners, is growing its crop under glass using waste heat from a coal-burning power station in Yorkshire, England, says an environmental newsletter.
The hot water from the power station is piped off before reaching its giant cooling towers. The water then passes through fan-assisted heat exchange units, emerging as warm air, according to World Environment Report.
The English, hard hit by rising energy costs, hope this recycling technology will make their products more competitive with European growers, who are subsidized by their governments.

Believes A Fetus Hears Center Has Graduation

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina at Greensboro professor Anthony DeCasper says he believes fetuses can hear what is going on outside the womb.

"Do human infants eavesdrop in the womb?" he asked people gathered around him Wednesday at a psychology colloquium at Wake Forest University. He concluded that they do.

James Larkin Pearson, North Carolina's late poet laureate, was convinced that his pregnant mother's continual reading of an old hymn book turned him into a poet. DeCasper thinks Pearson may have been correct.

And DeCasper says six years of research on the question may have lent veracity to the poet's assertions.

DeCasper has found through research with new borns at Moses Cone Hospital in Greensboro that infants prefer the sound of their mother's voice to that of any other woman. And he says the preference has less to do with postnatal influences than with prenatal ones.

A similar experiment DeCasper conducted with the father's voice showed that infants not only had no preference for the father's voice, but did not find any man's voice all that pleasing.

DeCasper's experiments utilized rubber nipples that recorded the infant's sucking patterns in relation to surrounding vocal stimuli. Subsequent experiments, done to filter out various postnatal influences, showed that those influences do not seem to play a large part in determining the child's preference.

Dr. Harold W. Deitch, pastor of Red Oak Christian Church, hosted a graduation program and luncheon September 23 honoring 20 graduates of the Greenville Pre-Release and Atercare Center (PRAC).

Members of the church who planned and prepared the luncheon were coordinated by Mrs. Marge

Harrington. Matt Brewington, Training Coordinator of PRAC, introduced the guest speaker, Johann Bleicher, principal of Agnes Fullilove Community School. Bleicher emphasized that graduates must make an effort to maintain their high level of motivation by individual effort and good family and community support. He added it would be easy to lose sight of their goals if they did not seek out others for assistance.

Mrs. Paula Haigler, assistant training coordinator, made the presentation of graduation certificates.

The Pre-Release training is a four week educational program for prisoners who have been identified as requiring socialization skills before being released. The sessions are conducted by Brewington and Mrs. Haigler and by community volunteers who have special knowledge in their subject areas.

Senate Votes Tax Break For Members

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, as Congress is being urged by President Reagan to approve deeper cuts in federal spending, is proposing tax breaks that could be worth several thousand dollars a year for members of Congress.

Only hours before Reagan unveiled his new cost-cutting plans, the Senate voted 50-48 Thursday to repeal the $3,000 limit on tax deductions lawmakers can claim for living expenses in the Washington area.

Congress' Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated this step could cost the Treasury $3 million a year and give the average lawmaker an annual tax writeoff of $13,500. The congressional salary is $60,062 a year.

The Senate also came up with another present for itself when it endorsed removal of the present $25,000-a-year limit on the amount of honoraria senators can receive. The ceiling for representatives is $9,700 a year.

The Senate also voted to lift the pay cap imposed on several thousand top-level federal bureaucrats earning more than $50,000 a year. This could pave the way for some of them to get their first pay raises in four years.

The proposals were attached to an interim funding bill to keep the government running after fiscal 1981 ends Wednesday. The House has passed its version of the stopgap funding bill without the benefits.

Meanwhile Thursday, the Senate Finance Committee voted unanimously to restore the minimum Social Security benefit for most current recipients but cut the amount paid to people receiving government pensions of more than $300 monthly.

The panel's recommendation would allow all but 350,000 of the 3 million minimum benefit recipients to continue receiving $122 a month. The committee also voted to allow Social Security's strapped retirement fund to borrow from the system's healthier disability and medical insurance funds.

In other congressional business Thursday:

—In a rebuff of Reagan's foreign policy and a defeat for El Salvador President Jose Napoleon Duarte, the Senate voted to condition future U.S. military aid on reforms and human rights improvements in the troubled Central American nation.

Rejected 51-47 was an administration-backed amendment that sought to make the specific requirements goals, not conditions. In a letter to the Senate, Duarte called the conditions "unwarranted" and "unacceptable."

The conditions were placed in the foreign aid bill, which also opened the way for the administration's planned $3 billion aid program for Pakistan and removed a ban on U.S. aid to Argentina, Angola or "any individual group, organization or movement" in Angola.

—A limited extension of federal aid for interstate highway construction was approved by the House and sent to the Senate. The measure also authorizes the federal government to withhold highway funds from states that have weakened penalties for violating the 55 mph speed limit.

—CIA Director William J. Casey requested an exemption for all U.S. intelligence agencies from the Freedom of Information Act.

—Homebuilders, auto dealers, farmers and union officers told the Senate Small Business Committee that Congress, the administration and the Federal Reserve Board should to act to bring down interest rates.

—The Reagan administration's decision to stop going to court to force quotas, goals and timetables on employers convicted of discrimination was criticized by witnesses before a House Education and Labor subcommittee.

—A group of Democratic senators ate the type of school lunch they said will result from budget reductions. The menu: a 1.5-ounce meat and soybean patty, six french fries, a slice of white bread, six ounces of milk, two ounces of ketchup and two ounces of relish. Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., called the classification of ketchup as a vegetable "absolutely obscene."

Mr. and Mrs. Moore reside in Brook Valley and have one son, Jack, in Eden, and a daughter, Mrs. D.L. LeRoux, a Chicod School teacher.

Several Good Roles In Large Theater Cast Stand Out

A Review

The award winning Ayden Theater Workshop opened its 1981-82 season last night with "You Can't Take It With You," the comedy by Kaufman and Hart which was presented the Pulitzer Prize nearly 50 years ago.

The play will be presented again at 8 p.m. Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday and is good entertainment for any member of the family of about age ten or older.

The convoluted plot involves a seemingly wacky family, the Sycamores, whose daughter (Kathryn Dixon) falls in love with a boy (Allen Sumrell) from a "normal" family (Wall Street, Bar Harbor), the Kirby's. In the course of the classic entanglements, the characters find that the happy way seems indeed to be the best way to live, and that wacky is healthy and "normal" gives indigestion. Allen Trader as Grandpa Vanderhof gives a strong performance as the benign patriarch who quit work 35 years ago and has been happy ever since. "Life is really beautiful if you just let it come to you," he assures. Anita Brehm as Grandpa's daughter Penelope Sycamore excels in her sense of timing, so essential to good comedy. Her breathless "Well!"s drew laughs without fail, as did Bill Tyson's hilarious romps through the set to the A&P.

Tyson's character, Donald, must have been funnier 50 years ago when he complained of having to waste time waiting in line for his check.

Betty Cannon gives a convincing performance as Rheba, the Sycamore's maid. Jim Shay (as son-in-law Ed Carmichael) uses facial expressions and xylophone playing to help move along the sometimes sluggish stage business. Carmichael's wife Essie (Julie Smith) is somehow missing the intensity we'd expect for a character who's been studying ballet for eight years unsuccessfully; maybe if she'd try harder and stumble more.

Don Watson really looks like a firecracker manufacturer-erector set nut (Paul Sycamore), with the exception of an understandably concerned expression while he holds the flaming pan at the end of the first act. Albert Evans as Mr. DePinna, Paul's assistant, gives a good supporting performance.

To anyone who's never heard Boris and Natasha on Rocky the Flying Squirrel (or any other Russian accent), Marcus Carraway manages a Slavic imitation. His physical gestures are more convincing, however, though the spark of passion in the vibrant character of Kolenkhov is absent.

Several well-executed supporting roles completed the large cast; Ron Payne, Doug Mitchell, Elva Smith, Carolyn Creech, Diantha Muzikar, Chris Phillips, Ty Taylor, and Elizabeth Phillips.

To young people raised on sitcoms and cartoons, the idea that comedy is a difficult exercise in time-related complications may seem avoidable. But it isn't. The off-beat characters which make "You Can't Take It With You" as written such a success are off-beat not for fun. They, like all idiosyncratic personalities, are driven with a desperate need to make sense, to cope. Unless these sources of behavior are somehow exhibited, comedy becomes side show.

Director Joey Pollock has chosen an ambitious project in the Hart-Kaufman play. A too-small stage cramps the plentiful action. The extremely difficult climax scene, with government agents, hysteria, and fireworks worked well. The entire production, on the whole, was well received by the audience, and that, after all, is what counts at Ayden Theater Workshop. Awards and prizes are bestowed according to criteria. The play won because it is well constructed. Ayden Theater Workshop won its national award because it involves its community in theater, and does it with a spirit and dedication only hoped for in many other community theaters.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

ALTHOUGH THE ISRAELITES MAY HAVE ESCAPED FROM EGYPT AS A MOB OF STRAGGLING REFUGEES, MOSES KNEW THIS CONDITION MUST BE CHANGED! AND HE WAS RIGHT—THE PEOPLES THEY RAN INTO DURING THEIR DESERT WANDERINGS WERE UNFRIENDLY AT BEST, WHEN THEY WEREN'T DOWN-RIGHT WARLIKE! TO SURVIVE, IT WAS NECESSARY FOR THE ISRAELITES TO DEVELOP INTO A STRONGLY-ARMED FORCE, CAPABLE OF WITHSTANDING THOSE WHO WOULD DESTROY THEM. SO IT BECAME THE DUTY OF ALL MEN, AGES TWENTY TO FIFTY, TO BEAR ARMS, TO BE READY FOR BATTLE AT A MOMENT'S NOTICE! THE BIBLE TELLS US THAT THESE MEN NUMBERED 603,550 WARRIORS FROM ALL THE TRIBES WITH AN EXCEPTION TO THE TRIBE OF LEVI, WHO WERE EXEMPT AS THE PRIESTHOOD. EVEN THEIR ENCAMPMENT WAS LAID OUT WITH MILITARY STRATEGY, THE TABERNACLE OF GOD BEING PROTECTED IN THE CENTER OF AN AREA WHICH COVERED SOME TWELVE SQUARE MILES.

BY THE TIME JOSHUA FINALLY LED THEM INTO CAANAN TO CONQUER THE PROMISED LAND, THE ISRAELITES MARCHED AS BATTLE-TESTED VETERANS, SKILLED IN THE ARTS OF WAR FROM MANY DESERT CAMPAIGNS!

NEXT WEEK: THE WEAK-WILLED MAN WHO COULD HAVE SAVED JESUS!

Churches Moving On A Broad Scale Into Television Field

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Major Christian denominations, which for years have left television preaching up to individual evangelists, are now turning strongly to that media themselves to convey their message.

Their entry into the field, on a large scale and on denomination-wide bases in several cases, marks distinct policy shifts, embracing TV as a powerful instrument and aiming to enrich its content.

"A new opportunity," says the Rev. Jimmy R. Allen, president of the Southern Baptist Radio and Television Commission, which has taken steps to launch a new, 105-station denominational network.

The Rev. Michael Dempsey, consultant for a planned, new National Catholic Telecommunications Network, says "we're adding another dimension to the church's work...to reach out more effectively."

Besides the Roman Catholic and Southern Baptist ventures, involving multi-million-dollar projects, the United Methodist Church last weekend publicly launched a $25 million "TV Presence and Ministry" campaign.

An hour-long, kickoff program, originating at the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville and featuring entertainers and church leaders, was telecast via satellite to about 140 sites around the country.

The Roman Catholic Church and Southern Baptists, the country's two biggest Christian bodies, are moving to establish their own cross-country TV networks, using the latest satellite technology, but with a difference.

The Baptists plan a string of new low-power local stations for direct transmission via satellite to home TV sets. The Catholic network is to link up dioceses nationwide, both for internal church communications and also general programs to supply existing local TV or cable systems.

U.S. Catholic bishops, who approved the plan last spring, have allocated $4.5 million for start-up costs, and about 85 of the church's 171 dioceses in the country have indicated they will participate.

Scheduled to become operational in the fall of 1982, the network is to broadcast five hours daily, five days a week, the material going by satellite to diocesan "receiving dishes." Each diocese also will pay a $5,000 annual fee.

Richard Hirsch, secretary for Catholic communications, says the output will include general interest programs to offer cable TV systems or other local outlets, and a variety of church informational services and educational programs.

The system aims to facilitate overall church communications, such as training programs for specialized church personnel, telephotos for church newspapers, closed circuit televised conferences among institutional officials, thus saving huge amounts in travel and telephone bills.

In a different approach, Southern Baptists have applied for licenses for 105 low-power TV stations in cities across the country and have signed a $2.1 million annual lease on a satellite to supply programs 24 hours a day, beginning in 1984.

Local Baptist associations are expected to put up the approximately $100,000 for each new low-power station, with a telecasting radius of 10 to 15 miles.

The $25 million United Methodist campaign, authorized by the denomination's 1980 governing conference, is to purchase a major commercial TV station, and use it as a springboard to a national audience.

According to the plan, the station's production facilities and income would be used to turn out a wide variety of programs for network usage or relay to various other satellite and cable systems.

Meanwhile, the church's communication commission has asked a $930,000 allocation for current TV productions, including an hour-long, prime-time church musical for which to seek commercial network sponsorship.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices skidded across the board today as the market indicated that President Reagan's latest budget proposals had not quelled its fears of continuing high budget deficits and interest rates.

Declines held a commanding 11-1 lead over advances on the New York Stock Exchange, with nearly 1,200 issues posting losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which slumped 5.80 points to a 16-month low Thursday, fell another 9.32 points to 825.82 in the first two hours of trading today.

Big Board volume totaled 20.72 million shares compared with 18.54 million in the same period Thursday.

The market value index at the American Stock Exchange — which reached a 15-month low Thursday — dropped another 9.44 points to 282.68.

The NYSE's composite index was off 1.00 to 65.42. Oils were among the active NYSE stocks declining, including Mobil 1/4 to 25, Exxon 1/4 to 30 1/2 and Standard Oil of California 1/4 to 37 1/2.

Texaco was off 1/2 to 32 1/2. It said two wells drilled in its field in the British section of the North Sea had been successfully tested.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of an Interstate 40 link from Benson to Wilmington won an important victory Thursday when the House passed legislation including $15 million to $20 million in 1982 for the project's construction.

Gov. Jim Hunt praised the version of the Surface Transportation Act approved by the House of Representatives, saying it would provide $175 million for a special account from which the I-40 project has been financed.

"Without this special account, this vitally important project would be in grave danger," Hunt said in a prepared statement.

The Senate, however, is expected to pass a smaller highway aid bill without the discretionary fund. If that occurred, a House-Senate conference committee would meet to work out a compromise.

The state has already begun construction of a portion of the I-40 link, but the project remains several years from completion. Earlier this month Hunt warned that federal budget cuts had placed in jeopardy several major highway projects in the state, including the I-40 links between Wilmington to Benson and Benson to Hillsborough.

State Department of Transportation officials said the department would need $449 million to finish 19 highway projects, including the I-40 segment to Wilmington.

ECU Hosts Toledo In 2nd Home Game

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Saturday night at 7 p.m., when the Pirates of East Carolina host the University of Toledo, it will mark the first experience Ed Emory has ever had against a Mid-American Conference team.

But that doesn't mean he's not familiar with the school or the conference. "I can look back at the record book and see that they've beaten us two out of three games. And in those three games, they've scored 89 points and we've scored 24."

"And I know that the Mid-American Conference has a fine tradition, and feel that they play an outstanding brand of midwestern football," Emory said.

"I know that it's hard for our people and the media to take Toledo seriously, but they have an outstanding team."

Emory noted that in 1980, the Rockets were picked to win the MAC title, but went through a year with many, many injuries, finishing only 4-7 on the season.

"But they return nine offensive starters and eight defensive starters off that team, so they are experienced and strong. They held Louisville to only 59 yards rushing and 202 yards in total offense. The only reason they lost (31-6) was that they had a lot of interceptions and fumbles. Last week, they were two touchdown underdogs to Ball State, and they won 40-0. That has to tell you something."

Emory said that Toledo has as much or more speed in the skill positions as any team the Pirates have played. Jim Kelso is fast, and Emory says he looks more like a running back than a quarterback. "(Fullback Mel) Tucker and (tailback John) Walker are very fast, and their best receiver (Rod) Achter has 4.4 speed."

"Their line is not as impressive as N.C. State's as far as height is concerned, but they are very experienced, all of them but one starting three and four years. The other is a transfer from Michigan," Emory said.

"This will certainly be a challenge to our defense. We have to punish and hit like we did at State, except that we have to wrap 'em up and not let them get away."

Defensively, Emory feels that the Rockets are not as big as the Pirates, but are very strong and quick. "Toledo has one of the best weight programs in the country, and it shows on their players. Really, I hope that they'll be looking forward to their conference game (with Ohio) next weekend."

Emory said that the Pirates have worked hard this week on keeping the intensity they had against State. "This is a must win for us," he said. "I just hope our fans realize how good a team Toledo is."

The Pirates will be missing several players due to injuries.

Tim Mitchell, who missed the second half of the State game is slated for duty at center. The 6-0, 260-pound freshman, was a third-stringer when the season began, and has moved up due to injuries. John Floyd, a converted guard, is the principal backup, with guard Norman Quick behind him.

Harold Blue is questionable for the game at running back, and the Pirates have announced that freshman Jimmy Walden will start in his place. Several others are still hobbled, including defensive tackles Hal Stephens and Steve Hamilton, nose guards Wally Myers and Fee Griffin, and defensive back Jeff Pegues.

The contest is only the second home game for the Pirates, and the last until October 24, when the Pirates face Miami of Florida. In the meantime, they have road dates with Duke, Richmond and Southwestern Louisiana coming up.

Streaks On Line In Kenan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ninth-ranked North Carolina and unranked Boston College will put six-game winning streaks on the line in Saturday's regionally televised college football matchup at the Tar Heels' Kenan Stadium in Chapel Hill.

Other games on tap include two Atlantic Coast Conference battles — Maryland at North Carolina State and Duke at Virginia — and Memphis State at Georgia Tech and Wake Forest at Virginia Tech.

The only ACC team not in action is unbeaten and 19th-ranked Clemson, which will take a week off before going for victory No. 4 at Kentucky Oct. 3.

"This will be one of the biggest football teams we will see all year," said North Carolina coach Dick Crum of opponent Boston College. "Anybody who beats Texas A&M must be a pretty good team."

Boston College opened its season last week with a 13-12 win over the Aggies. North Carolina, ranked ninth in The Associated Press weekly poll, breezed past East Carolina, 56-0, and Miami of Ohio, 49-7.

The Eagles average 264 pounds across the front line, but size won't mean much if Tar Heel tailback Kelvin Bryant gets loose on the outside.

In two games, Bryant has scored 11 touchdowns and stands eighth on the school's career scoring list with 144 points. He leads the nation in scoring and is the third-leading rusher with 173.5 yards per game. Boston College will again be playing without top rusher Shelby Gamble. Coach Jack Bicknell suspended Gamble for two games for missing five pre-season practices.

ABC will televise the game, with kickoff slated for 12:20 p.m. EDT.

Rookie Steve Johnson Learned Much In His First Varsity Start

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Not too long ago a friend asked East Carolina freshman defensive tackle Steve Johnson if he was scared as he prepared for his first collegiate start last week against N.C. State.

"I told them scared was not the word," Johnson said. "It was anticipation. I couldn't wait to put on the pads and get out there. Things have come along awfully fast, but I'm one of those people who like pressure."

Johnson faced all the pressure he might like last Saturday night. Called on to start when Hal Stephens and Steve Hamilton were injured earlier in the week, Johnson went face mask-to-face mask with Wolfpack offensive tackle Chris Koehne.

Koehne, a 6-6, 268-pound senior who has started 30 straight games for NCSU, was all-Atlantic Coast Conference team a year ago when 14 of NCSU's 19 rushing touchdowns were scored behind him.

The odds appeared tilted heavily in Koehne's favor, but Johnson refused to back down. "Nobody should dominate in college ball, or they had better not," Johnson said. "If they do, something is wrong. If you get beat more than thirty percent of the time on defense you're not doing your job."

Did Johnson meet his own criteria Saturday night? "It's hard to say. I made quit a few mistakes, but I made them at 100 miles per hour. I'm definitely going to fix the mental mistakes, it's just a case of not having enough experience."

"Certain influence blocks got me that guys who have played six or seven games would have recognized a lot quicker than I did. I got trapped a few times, too. The trap is one of the hardest blocks for me to recognize, but I'm working on it religiously."

The work may be paying off. While both Hamilton and Stephens are back this week, Johnson will start his second straight game tomorrow when the Pirates play host to Toledo at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Saturday's game — the Pirates fourth of the season — is called a must-win by ECU coach Ed Emory. Johnson, who spurned offers from Clemson, North Carolina and Alabama to play for Emory, agrees with his coach.

"We need a win real bad, just to gain the respect of the community," Johnson said. "It seems a classic college ballgame to me. We've had three ballgames and everybody has the tension off them. We know what we need to do, now we just need to go out there and do it."

What the Pirates need to do mainly is win, something they have not done since the opening game of the season against Western Carolina. And, to hear Johnson tell it, a victory this week is only the beginning.

"The team's attitude is 300 to 500 percent better than it was when we played Chapel Hill," Johnson said. "A lot of good things are going to come from this team. Everybody has the right attitude now or if they don't they'd better leave."

Just about everybody — fans, alumni in particular — probably felt like leaving after the 56-0 shellacking two weeks ago against North Carolina. However, when the season is over, that game may prove to have been the wake up call ECU needed.

"I believe a great deal that no man likes to be embarrassed and that is exactly what happened to this team against Chapel Hill," Johnson said. "Maybe we were a little gun shy going up there, I don't know. But went into the game with the wrong attitude and came out of it losers."

"But when a prize fighter gets knocked down he gets back up if he's a good one and he'll usually get back up and win."

First, however, he has to get back up. The Pirates — like Johnson's prize fighter — arose from their 56-0 beating to play what Emory called "57 minutes of football" against N.C. State.

It was, however, those other three minutes that did ECU in as NCSU scored 21 points to score its third straight victory of the season. Despite the loss, Johnson feels the Pirates are a better team now than two weeks ago or even last week.

"After the (loss to UNC) coach Emory didn't bless us out," Johnson said. "He didn't punish us in any way. He wanted us to act as men and to come back and act like men."

"We're all more intense now. Everybody's getting it together mentally. It's definitely down to blocking and tackling now," he said. "We're going to come back strong. I honestly feel East Carolina has a shot at winning every (remaining) ballgame."

"The way I see it, if the fans want to come and see us win they can come on out. If they don't, they can stay at home. We're going to win with them or without them, though it's a heck of a lot more fun with them."

The race continues close during these early weeks of the football season, as our panel battles it out for the lead. Only two games separate first from fifth place in the standings after three weeks.

Although there were a few differences last week, splits helped to keep things close.

Our guest, Richard Dupree, executive director of the Pirate Club, turned in a 7-5 record, and fell back into a tie with sports assistant Rick Scoppe for first. Rick, along with most of the rest, finished with an 8-4 week.

The guests and Scoppe currently are 26-10, while this writer is 25-11, and Tom Baines and Vickie Spivey are knotted at 24-12. Joe Jenkins brings up the rear with a 19-17 mark.

The guest panelist for this week is Nancy Emory, wife of East Carolina head coach Ed Emory. (And Ed said he didn't do her picks for her, but did agree with most of them.)

"There are a couple of picks I have to go with, to avoid a divorce and to keep two of my sons from running away from home," Nancy said. In addition to her husband being the ECU coach, one of her sons is a quarterback for Rose, and the other is a team manager.

Our high school mark last week was only a so-so 4-3, which brings our seasonal record to 18-8.

This week, there are a couple of interesting high school games which we'll start out with.

The lone cross-county game sends D.H. Conley to Ayden-Grifton. It's the first home game for the Chargers, who seem to have things going there way right now. D.H. Conley is still struggling, after winning just one of four starts, and we don't really see any relief this weekend. Ayden-Grifton is the solid choice.

BEAR GRASS — Roanoke High School romped to an 8-1 tennis victory over Bear Grass yesterday in a Northeastern Conference match.

The lone match captured by the Lady Bears was the #3 singles match, won by Mary Rodgeron.

Roanoke is now 2-5 on the year and travels to Williamston on Tuesday. The Bears, yet to win, play host to Edenton on Tuesday.

Summary:
Deanna Morris (R) d. Robin Knox 8-0
Mary Bland (R) d. Ann Bullock 8-0
Mary Rodgeron (BG) d. Janet Hoskins 8-2

Farmville Central plays host to Havelock in a non-conference affair. The Rams got off to a slow start, but have come on strong recently. Farmville is still searching around to try and find the proper combination. We must go with Havelock to win this one.

North Pitt entertains Southern Nash in an Eastern Carolina Conference game. The Panthers have won twice, and maybe should have done so once or twice more. Southern Nash hasn't won to date, but all of its losses came against 4-A teams. The question is have the Firebirds learned their lessons. We think so, and pick Southern Nash.

In other area games, we see Roanoke beating Plymouth; Bath dropping Jamesville; Greene Central beating Southwest Edgecombe; and Bertie downing Williamston.

Turning to our panel's picks, we find the two local games up first. Rose plays host to Northern Nash in a key Big East Conference game, and East Carolina is at home to Toledo in a big game for both teams.

Rose going into the game with a 3-0 record and #3 ranking in the state. Northern, after an opening loss to strong 3-A Tarboro, has won its last two. The Firebirds will also be looking for revenge for a loss last year after they had taken a 21-6 early lead. Rose, however, remains the choice of the panel, getting five of six nods — Jenkins the lone holdout.

The Pirates will be trying to get back on the winning track after dropping games to N.C. State and North Carolina. The Rockets bring in a strong defense and a mobile offense. Could be quite a game. The panel is divided on this one, 4-2, with Spivey and Jenkins going with the Rockets.

Our other consensus picks: Duke over Virginia; State over Maryland; Virginia Tech over Wake Forest; Auburn and Tennessee, a toss-up; Southern Cal over Oklahoma; Georgia Tech over Memphis State; North Carolina over Boston College; Texas over Miami, Fla.; Nebraska over Penn State; and Georgia over South Carolina.

The second and final day of the tournament is scheduled for today.

Waltrip Takes Another Step In Quest For Pole Sitter Prizes

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip has another goal besides beating out Bobby Allison for the Winston Cup Grand National stock car point championship.

He's after the $25,000 bonus money to the driver who wins the most pole positions, and he took another step in that direction Thursday by winning the No. 1 spot for Sunday's $175,085 Old Dominion 500.

Not only did Waltrip set an Old Dominion 500 qualifying record for the .525-mile Martinsville Speedway track with a speed of 89.014 mph in his Buick, but he came close to the track record of 89.094 mph set last spring by rookie Mike Alexander for the Virginia 500.

The outside pole went to Ricky Rudd with a speed of 88.713 mph in a Chevrolet, while Harry Gant was third at 88.693 mph in a Pontiac and Benny Parsons fourth at 88.527 mph in a Ford.

"Man, I was worried about Rudd. But this got us out of hot water," said Waltrip, who earned $3,000. "Ricky has won three poles and if he had won it, it would have put some pressure on us. But this has taken a lot of pressure off the team."

Rudd earned $2,000, while Gant got $1,000 and Parsons $500.

The first 10 spots for Sunday's race, the richest short-track event on the tour, were decided Thursday.

Mark Martin was fifth, followed by Joe Millikan, defending Old Dominion 500 champion Dale Earnhardt, Allison, Joe Ruttman and Neil Bonnett, winner of last week's race at Dover, Del.

The last 20 spots for the race, which starts at 12:30 p.m. EDT, were up for grabs today.

Among those who failed to qualify Thursday were 13-time

Martinsville Speedway winner Richard Petty and rookies Morgan Shepherd and Tim Richmond, who stand first and third in the battle for rookie-of-the-year honors.

The No. 2 rookie is Ron Bouchard, whose car did not arrive in time for Thursday's qualifying runs.

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — The qualifiers Friday for Sunday's Old Dominion 500 Grand National stock car race at Martinsville Speedway with driver, make of car and qualifying speed in miles per hour:
1. Darrell Waltrip, Buick, 89.014
2. Ricky Rudd, Chevrolet, 88.713
3. Harry Gant, Pontiac, 88.693
4. Benny Parsons, Ford, 88.527
5. Mark Martin, Pontiac, 88.374
6. Joe Millikan, Pontiac, 88.295
7. Dale Earnhardt, Pontiac, 88.287
8. Bobby Allison, Buick, 88.242
9. Joe Ruttman, Buick, 88.094
10. Neil Bonnett, Ford, 88.069.

Baby Bucs Fall

Chowan Junior College used two interceptions in the fourth quarter to roll to a 26-13 victory over East Carolina's junior varsity last night.

The loss was the second in as many games, both to Chowan, for the Baby Pirates. Chowan is now 3-1.

Chowan started the scoring in the second period, getting two field goals from Keith Myers within a minute and a half. The first of 23 yards was followed by a 30-yarder after East Carolina lost a fumble. That made it 6-0 at the half.

Chowan scored early in the third period on a two-yard pass from Fred Banks to Lennie Ortiz, and a two-point try failed, leaving it at 12-0.

East Carolina then got on the scoreboard with a two-yard run by Scott Lewis and a Todd Moore kick, making it 12-7 at the end of the third period.

In the fourth quarter, David Wood returned a pass interception two yards for a Chowan touchdown that put it out of reach. Myers booted the PAT.

Then, on the first play following the kickoff, Stefan Adams raced 80 yards with a pass from Billy Whitten to cut the lead to 19-13.

But, an interception by Jeff Ritenour, returned 58 yards for the final touchdown put the game away for the Chowan 11.

Tailback James Cole sparked Chowan's offense with 145 yards in 39 carries, while Bubba Bunn led ECU with 89 yards on 16 trips.

Rose Wins

RED OAK — Rose High School's junior varsity scored late in the fourth period to pull out a 14-7 victory over Northern Nash.

The win was the third in three starts for the Rampant Cubs, and the first loss in four games for the Knights. Rose is now 1-0 in Big East play.

Rose scored first, breaking the ice in the third period as Dwayne Speight scooped up a Knight fumble and returned it 40 yards for a 6-0 lead.

Northern, however, fought back and scored on a 40-yard pass play and took a 7-6 lead.

Then, with about five minutes left in the game, Reggie Smith scored on a three-yard run, and Cyrus Blackwell ran over the PAT to give Rose the 14-7 margin that held.

Rose plays host to Rocky Mount next Thursday.

Conley Wins 10th In Row

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley opened its quest for the 1981 Coastal Conference volleyball crown with a 2-0 win over North Lenoir yesterday.

Conley won the opening game, 15-4, 15-6, then came back to take a 15-2, 15-9 win in the second match.

Amy Gibbs served up seven straight in the first match for Conley, while Jackie Daniels added five straight in the second match. North Lenoir's Beverly Smith was tops for the Lady Hawks with four straight.

"We had 16 hits for the day, with Karen Barrett leading the way with six," Coach Martha McCaskill said. Others with hits were Sherri Waters with five, Laurie Kandrotas with two, and Daniels, Lisa Mills and Ona Credle each had one. Darlene Cannon led in assists with five.

Conley is now 2-0 in the conference and 10-0 overall. The Valkyries host West Craven on Tuesday.

Rose.....1

Farmville.....1

Rose High School and Farmville Central split a pair of volleyball matches yesterday. Rose took the opening match in three games, while Farmville came back to take the second, also in a three games.

In the first match, Farmville won the opening game, 15-9, but Rose came back to take consecutive 16-14, 16-14 wins to gain the victory. Linda Winstead paced the Rampettes with six serves at one point.

In the second match, Farmville, after winning the opener, 15-0, lost the second, 16-14, before coming back for a 15-13 win in the rubber game. Toni Streeter led Rose with six serves during this match.

Farmville Central's Gail Lang had five points in the opening game.

Rose is now 2-4, and travels to Wilmington Laney on Thursday. Farmville, now 1-4, travels to Ayden-Grifton on Monday.

Hatafsky Tops Pinehurst Field

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — The performance, while better than normal, was not all that unusual for Morris Hatafsky.

"Somehow," observed the career struggler, "you get accustomed to missing greens, needing to get it up and in."

And Hatafsky, who has yet to win in six years on the pro golf tour, was at his scrambling best when he one-putted 12 times and chipped in once on the way to a 6-under-par 65 and a 1-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Hall of Fame Classic.

"Maybe it will continue all week," said Hatafsky, who used only 21 strokes on the bumpy, sandy greens at the No. 2 course at Pinehurst Country Club, "but if I'm to do well this week, I'd think I'd need to hit more fairways and greens."

He managed to hit only six fairways and half the greens, but saved it all with his scrambling through the pines and sand dunes, capping it off with a birdie-birdie finish — one of those on a 90-foot chip-in.

That fast close left him a stroke in front of Jerry Pate, who fought back with eight birdies after making a double bogey off a bad drive on the first hole. He had a 66.

And mighty Jack Nicklaus, closing his American season and seeking his first title of the year, was one more back after a very solid, no-bogey 67 in the cool, sunny weather.

"I played a pretty good round of golf," said Nicklaus, who hasn't won since extending his record to 17 major professional titles with a victory in the 1980 PGA. "I missed only two greens, hit the ball well, made a couple of putts."

He was tied with Bill Kratzert, Bob Gilder and Gary Trivisono, also 4 under par.

Tied at 68 were Allen Miller, Jim Booros, Scott Watkins and Tim Simpson.

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Now it's "NBC Magazine Without David Brinkley," the latest alteration for this victimized series, which had planned to structure broadcasts around the longtime newscaster before he suddenly jumped to ABC.

Blame NBC for the show's previous low ratings because it juggled the talent, time and approach so many times, while the content was hardly compelling. But now there seems to be another villain: You.

Last Friday night, Brinkley's farewell appearance, "NBC Magazine" had four interesting, diversified segments. These stories were new, plus there was the ferocity of seeing Brinkley bow out. But no, you, the public, preferred reruns of "Benson" and "Incredible Hulk," relegating "Magazine" to No. 54 out of 58 shows on the Nielsen list.

Here's what you missed: —Garrick Utley's look inside the controversial AWACS plane, which through a series of interviews and graphics, made it clear why the Israelis consider this a major threat to their security.

—Betsy Aaron's touching piece on the thousands of Amerasian children living in poverty in Thailand who were left behind by their American servicemen fathers. It focused on one soldier who found his daughter and brought her back to America.

—The Rubik's Cube, a fascinating cultural phenomenon, which Jack Perkins brought to life by talking to the Hungarian inventor, who hasn't gotten rich. Perkins also found a blind woman, who solved the braille version on-air, and a Rubik's tournament, in which some kid worked it out in 48 seconds.

—The final segment was the irascible Brinkley's look at the irascible Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who was a presidential candidate before his time.

Thomas Wolzien, the new executive producer of "Magazine," has brightened and sharpened the product. He's brought in five new producers and excised some deadwood. He looks for stories that relate to people's lives and, through some creative technology — split screens and overlay visuals — is effectively communicating the message.

He wants to do one story a week spinning off the news. Last Friday, it was AWACS. Tonight, it will be Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, involved in new defense budget manipulations and watched closely all week by Utley.

Another story will be Douglas Kiker's report on pit bull terrier fighting, a sordid activity that leaves one animal the so-called winner and the other close to death. There is undercover footage definitely not for weak stomachs. In one scene, Kiker holds up a cute pup and asks if he would be in the ring someday. The answer is yes.

It takes time to build recognizable personalities like Mike, Morley and Harry. "60 Minutes" and ABC's "20-20" were failures right out of the box. Without Brinkley as the main cog, NBC asked Chris Wallace to be host. He turned it down, and the four reporters will introduce their own pieces.

If the recent "Magazine" stories were on Sunday evening at 7, following pro football, everybody would be saying what a great job "60 Minutes" did. But for one week at least, "60 Minutes" didn't do as good a job as "Magazine," yet "60 Minutes" was No. 1 on the Nielsen hit list.

CBS had just one new segment, a somewhat superficial look at why television is so mediocre. Harry Reasoner raised two theories: the public wants and pays for mediocrity, or the TV industry can't do any better.

Another Shattered Mirror Of Real Life Planned

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI/Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —

"Falcon Crest" is the title of a prime time weekly dramatic series which makes its debut this fall joining a plethora of soap opera-like shows that hold a shattered mirror to real life.

"Dallas," the first and most popular of the current crop of nighttime dramas, has stimulated the copycat syndrome in Hollywood's TV factories, which had abandoned p.m. soap operas after "Peyton Place" died years ago.

"Dynasty," "Flamingo Road" and "Knot's Landing" are continuing sagas of families, extended families and neighbors, that challenge Harold Robbins for kinky plot twists and rampant sexual diodes.

If the average American family committed as many infidelities and felonies or suffered as many accidents and exotic diseases, lawyers and doctors would rule the world.

The contents of these squalid nighttime potboilers could encourage Soviet bloc nations to screen the lot of them as a massive indictment of the capitalist system, Christianity and Western morality.

Jane Wyman, former wife of President Ronald Reagan, is the star of the new family saga, "Falcon Crest."

She portrays a matriarch in Napa, Calif., owner of an entire valley which includes vineyards as far as the eye can see and a prospering winery.

Among others in the cast are Abby Dalton, Robert Foxworth, Lorenzo Lamas and Susan Sullivan.

Miss Dalton is keeping a low profile and has eschewed facing the press until after "Falcon Crest" makes its debut in October.

Miss Dalton, a veteran of such other series as "Hennessey," "The Jonathan Winters Show" and "The Joey Bishop Show," is less self-conscious about discussing the new series.

Her first and most important consideration about "Falcon Crest" is that it is being written and produced by Earl Hamner, the self-same quiet Virginia gentleman who produced "The Waltons" for the past decade or so.

Hamner has established himself as a decorous man of infinite taste and sensitivity who religiously depicted the depression era farm family — based on his own family — in honest terms.

"I think Earl will do the same thing with 'Falcon Crest,'" Abby said.

"I go back a few years with Earl. I was originally tested for the role of Olivia Walton. I was one of the final three actresses considered for the part. He wrote a couple of guest shots for me in the show too. Earl was instrumental in casting me as Julia Channing in the new series.

"Julia has been skipped over as an heir to the vineyards and the winery. She wants to make sure that her son (played by Lamas) doesn't lose out. She's a very strong and determined woman.

"I've had the first script for only a few days, so none of us is sure where the stories and characters will be going. I do know that there are two branches of the central family, and there will be many conflicts."

Abby hasn't attempted to analyze the success of nighttime soap operas and, for that matter, hasn't watched many of them except "Dallas."

"I like 'Dallas' because I love Larry Hagman as J.R. Ewing," she said, "He's so rotten. The cast is excellent and the characters charming and interesting.

"I think Earl will write our characters with as much care and attention to detail.

"Earl doesn't want a lot of bed-hopping in 'Falcon Crest.' He hopes to achieve a Lillian Hellman-type study of people, their relationships with one another and the emotional and psychological undercurrents that motivate them.

"He's right. The novelty of bed-hopping has worn off on television. This show should be different than the other continuing stories on the air because it will be more sophisticated and done in good taste."

"Falcon Crest" has yet to film its first episode. The pilot film was made earlier this year with Samantha Eggar and Clu Gullager as regulars in the cast. Both were uncoupled during the writer's strike.

For Abby, the series is a godsend. Six years ago she spent half of each year on the road touring in plays.

She and businessman-husband Jack Smith are the parents of three teenage children. Family pressures forced Abby to abandon her traveling theatrical career.

"It got so it was physically impossible for me to pack another suitcase," she said. "But I need to work to express myself.

"But you can only take so much. Six weeks in Buffalo or Lubbock can seem like a life sentence instead of a way of life.

"A long-running television series is the perfect answer for me now. With luck, 'Falcon Crest,' with Earl Hamner running things, is just what I've been looking for."

Comedian Patsy Kelly Dies; 71

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Former comedian and film actress Patsy Kelly has died of bronchial pneumonia at the age of 71.

Miss Kelly entered the Motion Picture and Television County Home Hospital in August and died Thursday, said Jack E. Staggs, executive director of the Motion Picture and Television Fund.

Born in Brooklyn on Jan. 12, 1910, Miss Kelly became a tap-dance teacher at the age of 12, which eventually led to work in vaudeville and as a Ziegfeld girl.

After a series of movies in the 1930s and 1940s that included "Going Hollywood," "The Girl From Missouri," "Go Into Your Dance" and a series of 35 comedy shorts with Thelma Todd, Miss Kelly was out of films until 1960 when she appeared in "Please Don't Eat the Daisies." One of her last appearances was in the 1968 hit "Rosemary's Baby."

During her 16-year absence from films, Miss Kelly did a radio show, a Broadway play and TV show with Tallulah Bankhead, and played in summer stock and night clubs. But she admitted there were some lean years.

"When you're hungry, it doesn't matter how big the part is," she said in an interview after getting back into movies. "You just want to go back to work."

PATSY KELLY

A Mass was set for Monday at St. Malachi's Catholic Church in New York. Miss Kelly will be buried at Calvary Cemetery in Woodside, N.Y.

BEST FOOT FORWARD — Actor Burt Reynolds receives some assistance from unidentified officials Thursday as he firmly plants his foot in the forecourt of Mann's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood, thus becoming the 162nd person to cement relations with the theater's roster of reknown. Reynolds finalized his signature and prints during a ceremony preceding the premiere of "Paternity", in which he stars with actress Beverly D'Angelo. (AP Laserphoto)

 Opening lead: Three of ♠.

What makes a great defender? High on the list of priorities is the ability to see how the play will develop and to take the necessary countermeasures. Watch West's defense on this hand from a U.S.-France match.

North-South were a trifle pushy to get to game after West had opened the bidding. South's aggressive action was based on the belief that the hand would play well since his partner's strong hand was poised over the opening bidder.

West hit on a good attack when he opted to start with a spade. Declarer finessed the ten, East won and continued the suit to dummy's queen. Declarer led a low heart and misguessed by inserting the nine, which lost to West's ten.

The automatic play would seem to be another spade, clearing the suit and setting up a trick for the defense with the ace of hearts as a sure entry. But as so often happens, the automatic play would be wrong. Declarer could then make the contract by winning the ace of spades, leading a diamond to the king and taking the diamond finesse. When both missing diamonds fall under the ace, declarer then puts West in with the ace of hearts. After cashing his long spade, West will have to lead a club away from the king, giving declarer two tricks in the suit and nine altogether.

Fortunately for the defense, West was aware of this possibility and thwarted it with a simple but far-sighted maneuver. After winning the ten of hearts, he first cashed the ace of that suit before exiting with a spade. Now there was no way he could be forced to lead away from his king of clubs. All he had to do was sit back and wait to collect two more tricks for down one.

Fewer Bank Heists Is 'Too Many' For FBI

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An FBI crackdown on bank robberies in North Carolina has reduced the number of robberies so far this year, but an FBI agent says there are still too many bank thefts and too much money lost.

"We've made a lot of arrests and there have been a lot of convictions," said agent Cecil Moses. "But they just keep coming. We can't slack off our efforts for a minute."

So far this year, there have been 64 bank robberies in the state. At the end of September 1980, the FBI recorded 77 bank robberies.

About 12 of the state's 80 FBI agents are assigned to solve bank robberies.

Even though there have been fewer robberies, bank losses to the thefts are up. "We're already up over half a million (dollars) in losses this year. That's considerably more than we had in all of last year," Moses said.

He attributed some of the heavy losses to several bank-robbery gangs operating in North Carolina. One gang, called the Chattanooga Gang by the FBI, was broken up earlier this year when agents arrested its four members. They were convicted of robbing a bank in Cashiers.

Moses described the average bank robber as a man aged 22 to 26, single and unemployed. He said most bank robbers are not motivated by the economy.

"Robbery is a crime of opportunity. And these men — most of them — are opportunists," Moses said. "I don't subscribe to the theory that the economy plays a big role in causing bank robberies. You don't see a poor father robbing banks to get money for food his wife and kids."

One way the government is cracking down on bank robbers is through harsher sentences when a thief is convicted.

"Federal judges are aggressive, U.S. attorneys are aggressive, they want to get these people," he said. "Federal judges in North Carolina are handing out stiffer sentences than the national average."

A person convicted of robbing a bank can be sentenced to up to 25 years in prison. Moses said the average sentence is 12½ years while North Carolina's average is 15½ years. "But a lot of them are drawing 20 to 25 years," he said.

Moses said armed robbery is on the increase, which accounts for some of the tougher sentences. He said in 95 percent of bank robberies this year the thief had a weapon. FBI agents shot and killed a robber at a bank in Fayetteville earlier this year when he fired at them.

"What we try to get across is that robbing a bank is a losing proposition," Moses said. "Kur apprehension rate is very high and we don't give up after a month or two. We don't close our files until the crime is solved."

Scholarship Being Awarded

WINSTON-SALEM — Ronnie Locust of Greenville, is receiving an academic scholarship at Winston-Salem State University through the R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc. Scholarship Program for Academic Excellence.

Locust is one of 27 freshmen awarded the scholarship this fall. Recipients were chosen on the basis of academic achievement.

The scholarship program is funded by a $50,000 grant announced by R.J. Reynolds Industries in 1979. The award extends an earlier commitment of nearly $1 million to assist the growth and expansion of education programs at Winston-Salem State, said Marshall Bass, RJR's corporate director of personnel development.

The RJR grant provided assistance to 26 students in 1980.

The R.J. Reynolds Industries, with headquarters in Winston-Salem, is the parent company of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co.

New Direction For Solar Energy: Research First

By NANCY TRAVER
Associated Press Writer
GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — With its budget slashed by more than half, its staff cut almost a third and its activist director dismissed, the Solar Energy Research Institute would seem to be just a shadow of its former self.

That's just the way Dr. Harold Hubbard, the acting director, wants it.

The new emphasis for the federally funded SERI is on lab work, not public advocacy of solar energy.

"We're going to produce a yeasty research and development environment here — one that won't be confused with an advocacy group or a special interest group," Hubbard said.

"We believe national energy policies should be set — we just don't think that a laboratory is the place for that kind of work."

Under Hubbard's direction, SERI better reflects the policies of the Reagan administration, which wants to end direct federal subsidies for the solar energy industry.

Congress founded the institute in 1974 in an effort to spur solar energy research. But it was not until 1977 that the Kansas City-based Midwest Research Institute formed SERI and actually began work here, under contract to the Department of Energy.

A good way to illustrate the differences between the "old" SERI and the new is to look at the difference in philosophy between Hubbard, the scientist, and ex-director Denis Hayes, the lobbyist.

Hubbard, in a recent interview in his office overlooking the Rocky Mountain foothills, declined to comment on the Reagan administration's emphasis on nuclear energy and its cutbacks in spending for solar power.

"That's all politics, and I don't feel qualified to weigh the relative merits of one philosophy over another," said Hubbard, who has a doctorate in analytical chemistry from the University of Kansas.

"There are many ways to encourage the development of solar energy without direct subsidies. We will do the best here with what we have. My job is to make effective use of our resources and do useful things. I think SERI should cease to be a political animal."

Hayes, on the other hand, has made a career of being a political animal. A history graduate of Stanford University, he helped organize Earth Day in 1970, headed the Solar Lobby and the Center for Renewable Resources and worked as a senior researcher with the Worldwatch Institute in Washington, D.C.

In 1978, he planned Sun Day to increase the nation's awareness of solar energy. The following year brought him to the $60,000-a-year post at SERI.

Wearing blue jeans and cowboy boots, Hayes sat crosslegged on the floor of his unfurnished office not far from SERI and described himself to a reporter as "a Ralph Nader-type of guy."

Under Hayes, who was asked to resign from SERI in June, and his predecessor, Paul Rappaport, SERI did solar research but also spent much time and money producing demonstration projects and voluminous studies of the social and economic impacts of solar energy.

"We thought it was in the national interest to push the country into solar energy at a faster rate, and that's what we tried to do," Hayes said. "Our goal was to get someone on the producer side to make solar technology, and then get someone on the consumption side to use it."

For instance, Hayes said, the institute paid a glass company to make a sort of heat-resistant glass for contractors and greenhouse operators, who in turn had tested it and reported the results to SERI, said Hayes.

SERI also spent $100,000 to build 12 solar homes in the Denver area that 100,000 people visited in a single open-house weekend. The homes were sold and SERI now monitors their dual solar and conventional power systems.

But all that was before the election of November 1980.

Secretary of Energy James Edwards has made it plain he has no use for SERI's demonstration projects, objecting to the "pressure" put on contractors to build solar homes. "This administration is not going to distort the marketplace with demonstration projects," he told Hayes this spring.

Hayes began running into trouble with the Reagan administration early on. One major source of friction was a SERI study he commissioned on future federal energy policies. Its conclusions were vastly different than those of the administration, and the Department of Energy criticized its methodology.

"After that I said in a speech that having the DOE criticize our methodology was like being called ugly by a frog," he said. "In retrospect, I realize that might not have been a wise thing to say."

Hayes was forced out soon after the speech. Since then the budget has been cut from $120 million to $50 million and staff reduced from 950 to 650, eliminating a department that was studying alternatives to fossil fuel.

Hubbard said SERI will concentrate on the development of photovoltaics, banks of silicon cells that convert radiation in the sun's rays to electricity. The institute will also work with windpower and to develop wood and liquid fuels from vegetation and animal wastes.

"What we hope to have here is a relatively elitist, small group of high-powered scientists and engineers concentrating on some long-range problems," Hubbard said. "We'll produce the technology and lay it down for the politicians so they can decide how to allocate the resources."

Drought-Resistant Gene Offers Hope For Hardier Crops Strain

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The isolation of a gene that protects plants from drought and salt may speed the development of hardy strains of crops that thrive on inhospitable land and increase the world's food supply, scientists say.

Scientists at the University of California at Davis discovered the gene and used the tools of genetic engineering to transfer it to another organism. If the work continues as they hope, tough, new plants should be available for farmers within 10 years.

Dr. Raymond C. Valentine outlined the work Wednesday in a speech at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

His team discovered a gene that keeps plants and bacteria from drying out when there is too little water or too much salt in the soil. So far, this gene has been implanted only into the genetic material of a form of bacteria. But plants will be the next step.

All plants and bacteria have such genes, although some are much more powerful than others. The goal will be to pair up valuable plants with potent genes.

The gene triggers the plant's production of proline, or what Valentine calls "water stress antifreeze." This material keeps moisture from flowing out of the plant's cells through osmosis.

Proline is a building block for protein and is an essential element of plant life. However, it serves a dual role, and when conditions are dry or salty, it helps keep them from drying out.

"All microbes and plants have some form of this gene," Valentine said in an interview. "In some, it produces a weak response, while in others it is very efficient. We are trying to get plants with poor systems to have better systems."

The California scientists have discovered there are three different drought genes, and each produces a different level of response. So far, they have isolated the gene in E. coli, a common bacterium often used in genetic experiments, and transferred it to klebsiella, a bacterium that affects nitrogen-fixing plants.

The E. coli gene produces the middle level of proline production. Valentine said plants may need more than one of these genes to thrive under different conditions.

Some plants already have genes which give them a high level of resistance to drought and salt. Among these are plants that live in saltwater marshes.

Plants that can withstand drought would be valuable sources of food in arid parts of the world. Salt buildup in the soil is also a common problem, especially in areas that have been under irrigation for many years.

Valentine said the drought genes may also be useful in programming more efficient varieties of industrial bacteria, such as those used in fermentation.

He said other areas of genetic engineering may also allow scientists someday to create plants tolerant of freezing, heat and acid or alkaline soil.

Two Residents Are On Board

Two Greenville residents, Paula Blumenfeld and Roz Fuchs, are serving on the board of the North Carolina-Israel Visiting Scholar Program. The program was established in 1978 by Governor Jim Hunt to promote the sharing of scientific research and technical knowledge between North Carolina and Israel. Funding for the program is raised from private sources.

This year, the visiting scholar from Israel is Dr. Raphael Goren of Israel, who is in Raleigh studying abscission at N.C. State University. Goren is working with Dr. Edward C. Sisler of the NCSU biochemistry department.

Abscission is the process of control by plant hormones which either induce or prevent the action of certain enzymes, which in turn, are responsible for weakening of cell walls.

Dr. Goren explained that "In Israel, we are particularly interested in the separation of fruit and leaves from the tree, as our orange crop is by far our largest agricultural money-maker."

Society Meet Is Planned

The Pitt County Historical Society will hold its first meeting of the 1981-82 year on Thursday, Oct. 1, at 6:30 p.m. at Friendly Hall of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

A short business meeting will be held after the dinner and Professor Gordon Watts of the East Carolina University History Department will present a slide show on the subject of "Underwater Archaeology in North Carolina." Watts will also discuss his plans for research in Chicod Creek in Pitt County.

The cost per person for attending the dinner meeting is $4.50. Reservations must be made with Miss Annie Turner, corresponding secretary, Pitt County Historical Society, 1701 E. Fourth St. no later than 5 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 25. Checks should be made out to the Pitt County Historical Society and should be mailed to Miss Turner in advance of the meeting.

The meeting is open to the public.
