Record One-Day Fall For London's Stock Exchange

By MARK S. SMITH Associated Press Writer LONDON (AP) - Share prices the London stock exchange plummeted today in selling described by brokers as "mass hysteria" for the worst one-day decline in the market's history.

index was 24 points on March 1, 1974 in the midst of a government crisis.

Today's first hour decline of 23.6 points translated into an actual cash loss of the equivalent of $6.73 billion, exchange officials estimated at mid-morning. They did not have a comparable figure for the noon drop of 29.4 points.

In Tokyo, Japanese dealers said predictions of a further sharp decline in the world's major stock exchanges by Joseph Granville, an independent American stock analyst, caused selling pressures throughout the day's session.

"It was as if the bottom of a bucket had fallen off," said a major securities house dealer of the 4 percent decline in the stock index.

Granville also had an affect on British prices. He added momentum to the slide last Thursday by predicting in a London radio interview that there soon would be huge drops in the London market, as well as the U.S. markets and those of other industrialized countries.

British brokers said the main cause for the drop was fear that interest rates, pushed up by the Bank of England to 14 percent earlier this month, would rise even further, perhaps as high as 19 percent.

In the past two weeks, the worst ever on the London exchange, stock prices have fallen by the equivalent of $25.67 billion.

Brokers have begun calling it the "Black Fortnight."

Brokers today said that a new worry had been added for British investors: the fate of the opposition Labor Party, whose moderate Deputy Leader Denis Healey narrowly turned back a challenge from radical left-wing former Energy Secretary Tony Benn.

Khomeini Forces Say Guerrillas Beaten Back

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime says its forces beat back leftist guerrillas in Tehran in what residents called the fiercest street fighting since the 1979 revolution that toppled the monarchy.

It also claimed Iranian troops have broken an 11-month-old Iraqi siege of the oil-refining city of Abadan in what it called "the greatest military victory in classical warfare since World War II."

Iraq said the alleged victory in the southwestern Iranian city was an "empty claim."

Tehran Radio said "several persons, including policemen, revolutionary guards and innocent people" were killed in the Tehran street battles Sunday. An earlier broadcast reported 40 wounded.

Residents said a pall of black smoke hung over many parts of the city. One said a gas station was blown up and a number of buildings set

No Compromise On AWACS By Saudis

By JIM ADAMS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - As the Reagan administration opened its formal Capitol Hill defense of the proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia today, the Saudis made it known in advance they would veto a compromise designed to win congressional approval of the deal.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told the Senate Armed Services Committee the planes would help protect the West's oil supply and would pose no threat to Israel.

"The destruction of the oil-gathering and loading facilities in Saudi Arabia, or their control by a hostile power, could tip the balance of power in the world," Weinberger testified.

"Saudi oil resources are vulnerable and threatened," he added. Saudi Arabia provides 30 percent of all oil used by the 21 countries of the International Energy Agency, which includes all the major western industrialized nations.

The proposed $8.5 billion sale, Weinberger said, would successfully balance "the imperative of Israeli security with the need to respond to threats to essential resources and regional stability," he said.

But administration sources said Sunday night that the Saudis had a "highly negative" reaction to the compromise worked out among the White House, key members and Congress and a top Saudi representative. Without that compromise, which would station Americans aboard the Saudi-owned planes, congressional approval of the sale appears a dim possibility.

But the sources, who asked not to be identified, said they hoped Prince Sultan, the Saudi defense minister, could be convinced that joint manning was the only way to get the sale through Congress or, failing that, would hear a personal appeal from an American delegation.

The Washington Post, however, reported today from Taif that Saudi Arabia's royal leadership would refuse to let Americans fly in the AWACS planes beyond a necessary training period. Quoting an unidentified official in the inner circle of the Arab kingdom's royal family, the Post also said the Saudis will refuse to negotiate with a congressional fact-finding delegation.

In his Capitol Hill appearance, Weinberger said the sale would stabilize the Persian Gulf by giving the Saudis adequate air forces to deter attacks on their oil fields from Iran, Iraq and South Yemen and would increase the Saudis' ability to defend against an attack from Soviet-backed forces or the Soviet Union itself.

Weinberger tried to allay opponents' fears that the planes in Saudi hands would be a threat to Israel.

"The simple fact is that this sale will not alter the Arab-Israeli balance of power materially nor jeopardize Israel's security," he said.

Market In U.S. Seen Struggling

By TOM BAINES and STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writers

The London stock exchange experienced a major decline today, but Greenville stock brokers said this morning that the U.S. market, which was about 15 points down shortly after it opened, showed signs of recovering by 11 o'clock.

"It looks more positive now," John Sherman at Wheat First Securities said. "The market is off 11 points right now. It has been off as much as 15 points... early in the market opening."

Sherman said, "There's a lot of negative feeling in the financial markets at this point. The London market was reacting to comments by Joseph Granville (an independent American stock analyst who last week predicted huge drops in both the London and U.S. markets)," and to action by the Bank of London which announced an increase in interest rates.

As for the drop in the U.S. market today, Sherman blamed a "focusing on budget deficits" and comments by analysts that "deficits might be worse than anticipated."

On the positive side, according to Sherman, "short term interest rates are dropping and have been for some time."

"But just today...the market opened very weak but is attempting to rally at this point. It's too early to tell what will happen during the remainder of the day."

Joe Thigpen at Interstate Securities said "everybody was expecting it (the market) to go plum to hell. But it hasn't," although it has "shown some ripple effect of Joe Granville's prediction."

Saying, "I don't think this is any pattern-making day," Thigpen noted that the volume late this morning was "not a great deal more" than on other times in the past few months.

"We've had similar days in volume and in downside this year, and over a longer period of time."

"Everybody was anticipating Granville's effect," Thigpen suggested. "I think, frankly, I'd be buying rather than selling at this particular time. Nothing else anywhere is near as reasonable as the price of stocks compared with earnings and dividends. I think it's a hell of a good time to be buying."

Of Granville, Thigpen noted, "everybody makes their reputation by predicting a crash... not on predicting a bull market."

At Carolina Securities, Carl Blackwood, calling the market this morning "bad," said at that time the market was off at 790 (Dow Jones Industrial average). Most of the selling seems to be attributed to Granville.

"If I was just gauging it now, I'd say the Dow would be down less at the close than it was about 10:30 when it was down 15 points."

I think we are still in a bearish market," he said, "but the trend is still down, no matter what happens today."

"When you look at stocks with seven and eight percent yields and money market funds averaging 16, 17 and 18 percent, people are not going to hold onto stocks when they

Polish Faction Disbands

GDANSK, Poland (AP) - Poland's most influential dissident group announced today it was disbanding and a spokesman accused Poland's Communist Party leaders of driving the country to economic ruin.

The announcement by the Committee for Social Self Defense, or KOR, came at a congress of the independent labor union Solidarity. The action apparently was designed to blunt criticism from the Polish leaders and the Soviet Union that KOR was spearheading "counter-revolution" in Poland.

KOR "served the idea of independent Poland as well as we could," spokesman Edward Lipinski said in a speech, adding that "the struggle to that end will be undertaken by the strong arm of Solidarity."

But the independent labor federation itself was torn by internal strife as it prepared on the third day of its congress here to vote on resolving an internal dispute over a compromise law on worker rights.

KOR, formed to aid workers punished during the 1976 riots, also helped Solidarity organize during nationwide strikes in 1980. KOR leader Jacek Kuron and other KOR members continued to advise Solidarity.

CIVIL JUDGMENTS?

I have seen in the Credit Bureau publication some civil court judgments - the Pitt County Social Services director against various individuals for amounts as high as $12,000-plus. This must be a new practice and I'd like to know what it's all about. J.W.

These judgments are the outcome of activity of the Child Support Enforcement Program of the Pitt County Social Services Department, according to John Jablonski, supervisor of the program. He said a 1979 court of appeal ruling made it legally possible to pursue civil action against absent parents whose children are receiving public assistance for whatever amount of public assistance the child has received. Now included is the use of liens against the property of these parents as a way of recovering what taxpayers have spent on their children's care through the Aid to Dependent Children program of Social Services.

Pitt County's Child Support Enforcement Program has been in effect since 1975 and since that time has collected $836,093.50, Jablonski reported.

Mrs. Terry In Mayor's Race

Mrs. Beatrice C. Terry, a recently retired school teacher, filed Monday morning as a candidate for mayor of Greenville.

A native of Pitt County, Mrs. Terry received the B.S. degree from Elizabeth City State University, and the master's degree from Atlanta University. She also studied at Wayne State University in Detroit and at East Carolina University.

This is Mrs. Terry's first venture into the political arena. "I decided to run because I believe in the progress of education and want to see advances in education continue," Mrs. Terry said. "I also believe in people, and I want to see the unemployment rate go down, to get more people employed."

Mrs. Terry taught in the Pitt County Schools at the time of her retirement in January this year. She has also taught in the Greenville City Schools and in Detroit schools.

She has one son, Mickey Terry, a graduate of ECU and former organist for Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, now doing doctoral studies at Georgetown University.

She is a member of Sycamore Hill Missionary Baptist Church and has served there as Sunday School teacher and as Sunday School superintendent. Mrs. Terry is chairman of Carver Branch Library board. She is also active in visiting elderly and shut-in people at their homes and in nursing homes.

Her hobbies include raising flowers and collecting coins and silver objects.

Dear Abby

Women With 'Everything' Needs More From Life

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Please help me. My laundry basket, piled high with unironed clothes, is staring me in the face. Dishes for the last two days are still unwashed and setting in my sink. My apartment needs a good cleaning. I am overweight, yet I continue to stuff myself with more ice cream, cookies and sweets than I really want. I'm so depressed I could cry! I'm 26, divorced and raising my 8-year-old son myself. I have a good secretarial job, a nice car and a nice apartment. So why do I lack motivation and feel like (bleep) most of the time?

My friends would never understand; they think I have everything I could possibly want. My parents stopped listening to me years ago. Why is it that the only guys I like are either committed to somebody else or they don't like me? Why do I just want to stay in bed all day when the weekend comes? Why do I go out and buy new clothes when I'm feeling down?

I'm a terrific friend. I'm always doing something for others, but never do anything for myself. Maybe it's because I was raised by a mother who found fault with everything I did and a father who told me I would never amount to anything. Abby, am I going crazy or what? I've considered getting professional help, but I can't afford it. I've even considered committing suicide, but my son needs me. Thanks for listening.

TIRED OF LIVING AT 26

DEAR TIRED: Your letter is a classic cry for help. First, please see your physician. Your lack of motivation, feelings of depression and frequent binging on sweets are symptoms of poor physical health. If you are physically fit, you should definitely seek psychotherapy. Don't say you can't afford it. You can't afford not to have it.

Your local mental health clinic exists for people who are "tired of living and feel like (bleep)." And it charges only what one can afford to pay. Please don't wait another day. You sound like a generous, warm-hearted, intelligent woman with some deep-rooted festering problems to resolve. Please get the help you need, then write again and tell me of your progress. I care.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, I read that pigs make good pets. They're supposed to be cleaner, smarter and more easily trained than dogs. I also heard they're gentle with children and make good watchdogs. (Watchpigs?)

Can you confirm this? Anything you can tell me about pigs as pets will be appreciated. We have a nice house with a large backyard.

ROB IN AURORA, ONTARIO

DEAR ROB: I am advised that pigs make wonderful pets. They are highly intelligent, easy to train and, believe it or not, among the cleanest animals around! They're gentle with children and quite lovable. ("Miss Piggy" has done a great deal for the pig's image.)

However, little pigs grow to be big hogs, so if you're considering acquiring one as a pet, first find out if it's kosher to keep one where you live.

DEAR ABBY: My husband had surgery recently, and while he was still out of it, some relatives he rarely sees came to the hospital to visit him.

Abby, please tell your readers that the last thing a person needs or wants when he's had surgery is company!

I've had surgery, and I know what it's like to have some idiot come in, sit by your bed and talk to you all afternoon because of the mistaken notion that you need "cheering up."

I have even seen rooms with "No Visitors" signs on the doors, but little groups of people "sneak in" for a few minutes because they think they are "special."

All a patient needs is to be left alone.

HAD MY SAY IN N.Y.

DEAR HAD: Your letter will do more for some post-surgical patients than a "No Visitors" sign. Thanks for writing.

Six Injured

Six persons were reported injured in a fiery three-car collision near Greenville early Sunday morning.

According to Trooper Douglas Britton, a car driven by Clinton Calvert Ward, of Rt. 5, Greenville, pulled from Mumford road onto N.C. 33 and was struck in the rear by a car driven by Johnny Ray Ross, of Greenville.

The trooper said the impact of the collision caused the Ward car to spin in the highway and slide into the path head-on of a westbound car driven by James Perry Morgan, of Rt. 3, Washington.

Britton said upon impact with the Morgan car, the rear of the Ward car burst into flames.

It was reported that Ross, and an unidentified motorist pulled the occupants of the Ward vehicle free before the auto became completely engulfed in flames.

Passengers in the Ward auto were listed as Barbara Ann Grimes, of Winterville, Andrew Ward, and Jackie Hardee of Greenville.

The investigator said all were injured, but the conditions were not known. Britton added that Morgan was in serious condition.

Members of the Greenville Rescue Squad and the Staton-House Fire Department responded to the 1 a.m. call.

No charges have been made pending further investigation of the accident.

Faces Charges Of Monkey Cruelties

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A research laboratory scientist is to appear before police here today to be formally charged with cruelty to monkeys following allegations of mistreatment and unsanitary conditions at the facility.

Montgomery County authorities said Sunday an arrest warrant had been issued for Edward Taub of the Institute Behavioral Research in nearby Silver Spring.

Taub, chief investigator for the facility, said he would present himself to be formally charged.

Seventeen monkeys used in medical research were seized from the institute Sept. 11 after Alex Pacheco, who heads an organization called People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, lodged the mistreatment allegations. Pacheco had worked at the laboratory as a volunteer.

Taub said Sunday he is innocent of the cruelty charge, claiming it was "based on distortions of facts and a total misunderstanding of the nature of the research we have been doing."

Conviction on the misdemeanor charge carries a fine of up to $1,000 or 90 days in jail or both.

Police officers who raided the lab in the Washington suburb said they found monkeys "who were in such physical and mental stress that they appeared to have bitten off their fingers and arms."

Taub said the monkeys were used in research to aid stroke victims and that his experiments called for the animals to lose sensation in their limbs. He said they "self-mutilate" after losing all sensation in their limbs, and that no effective way to prevent that has been discovered.

After mysteriously vanishing for five days last week, the monkeys were returned Saturday to a state humane officer's Rockville home, where they were being kept after police seized them.

Details were sketchy on what happened to the monkeys while they were missing, but they reportedly were taken as far south as Florida before being returned to Rockville.

Ex-Governor Is 'Nearly Broke'

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Ray Blanton, the former governor of Tennessee and a convicted felon, is nearly broke, according to his friends, and that is why he put many of his personal and political mementos on the auction block.

An embossed briefcase, state-seal cufflinks and personalized hard hats — used at groundbreaking — were sold as more than 200 people jammed a warehouse Saturday to bid on Blanton's goods. The total amount realized from the sale was not immediately available.

Blanton was convicted June 9 in federal court on conspiracy and mail fraud charges relating to issuing liquor licenses to friends. He is appealing his sentence of three years in prison and $11,000 in fines.

Blanton recently sold his house for $170,000 to help pay legal fees, and auctioneer Denny Coarsey said Saturday's auction was arranged merely to get rid of items that won't fit in a smaller house, an opinion his friends dispute.

New Post Office

MACCLESFIELD — The U.S. Postal Service is asking for offers to lease space in an existing building at ground level for a new main post office in Macclesfield.

Postmaster Joe Hurdle said prospective bidders are asked to offer building and maneuver area as a single package.

Bid packages are to be submitted no later than October 2 to Wallace R. Nelms, realty management and acquisition specialist, Field Real Estate and Buildings Office, U.S. Postal Service, 2245 Perimeter Park Drive, Suite 17, Atlanta, Ga. 30341.

The building should have 1,800 square feet of interior floor space at ground level, with approximately 6,000 square feet of parking and maneuvering area available for postal use.

The preferred location is within the town limits of Macclesfield.

The proposed new space will be leased to the Postal Service for a period of five years with renewal options for five additional years.

Ship Dedication

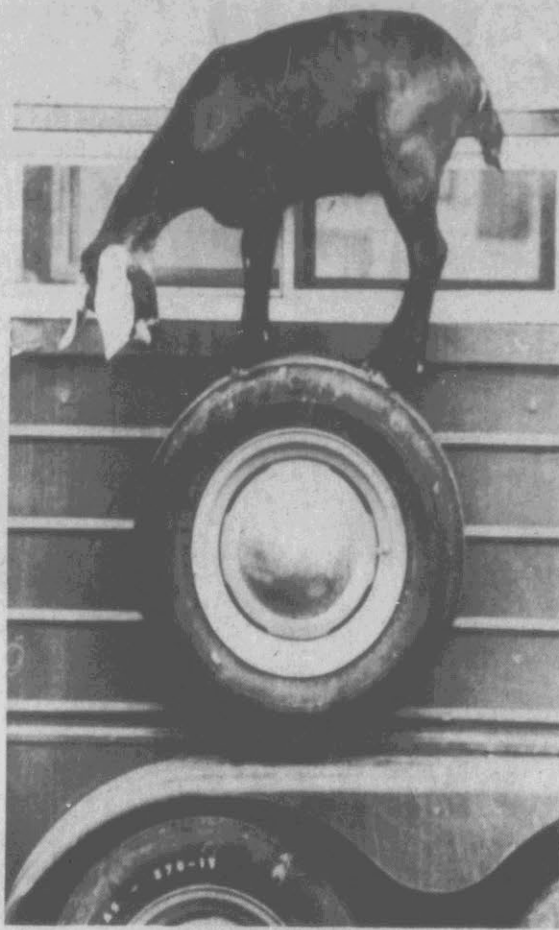

BEAUFORT — First District Congressman Walter Jones, chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, is scheduled to speak Friday at the dedication ceremonies for the R/V Cape Hatteras, North Carolina's newest and largest research vessel.

The program is set to begin at 4 p.m. at the Duke University Marine Laboratory between Beaufort and Morehead City.

The 135-foot research ship will be operated by the Duke-University of North Carolina Oceanographic Consortium. Schools which will make use of the ship include Duke, UNC-CH, N.C. State University, East Carolina University, UNC-Wilmington, and Cape Fear Technical Institute.

The Cape Hatteras, built as a replacement for the R/V Eastward, displaces 374 tons and is powered by two diesel engines with a total of 1,090 horsepower. The ship has a crew of nine and can carry scientific parties of up to 12.

The vessel will be presented to the consortium by Dr. John B. Slaughter, director of the National Science Foundation, which funded construction of the ship, and will be accepted by Duke President Terry Sanford and UNC President William C. Friday.

Murder Charge

FOUNTAIN — A 45-year-old Rt. 1, Fountain man is in Pitt County Jail today without privilege of bond after being charged with the Friday night murder of Douglas Ray Joyner of Rt. 1, Greenville.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said that William Robert Staton was arrested following the incident at the Tee Top Club here that also resulted in injuries to two other people.

Sheriff Tyson said that Joyner received a shotgun blast in the chest after being cut during an argument at the club. He said that Glenda Johnson, 39, of Main Street, Farmville, was also cut and Arthur Melton of Rt. 4, Greenville was injured when he was struck in the chest by shotgun pellets as he apparently tried to intervene.

In addition to the murder charge, Staton was charged with two counts of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious bodily injury in connection with the other injuries, the sheriff said.

Staton was scheduled for a first appearance hearing today.

Living Costs Found To Be Up All Over

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo residents pay five times more for beef than do New Yorkers but a medium-size car costs only about three-fourths as much in Japan, according to a Japanese trading company's survey of living costs in 23 major cities.

Kiichiro Ayano, spokesman for Mitsubishi Corp., said the survey showed that Tokyo residents were paying $31 for a kilogram — 2.2 pounds — of beef. The same amount costs $5.70 in New York, $13.50 in London and $6.80 in Sydney.

The survey, made in August, indicated that beef prices in other cities were: $11 a kilo in Mexico City, $4.90 in Buenos Aires, $14.60 in Milan, $5.50 in Cairo and $6.80 in Hong Kong.

Japanese drivers can buy a sedan with a 2,000cc engine for the equivalent of $5,800, while a New Yorker would have to spend $8,000 for a comparable car, the survey said. People in Sydney would need about $9,120 for the same car, and those in Dusseldorf, West Germany, $8,040.

Car prices in other cities covered included: $11,150 in Mexico City, $21,000 in Buenos Aires, $10,750 in Milan, $19,580 in Cairo and $9,140 in Hong Kong.

Figures cited for a ready-made suit were $259 in Tokyo, $242 in New York, $301 in London, $254 in Brussels, $692 in Buenos Aires, $321 in Mexico City and $772 in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Scotch whisky was found selling for $14.30 a bottle in Tokyo, $12 in New York, $13.50 in London, $14.46 in Mexico City, $35 in Buenos Aires, $9.40 in Dusseldorf, $21.80 in Cairo, $7.70 in Hong Kong and $16 in Sydney.

Officers Named Couple Weds In Recent Ceremony

The final session of the North Carolina Branch of the International Order of The King's Daughters and Sons was held here Saturday at the Ramada Inn.

Mrs. Astrid O. Doughty of Greensboro brought greetings to the convention and Mrs. Jo Utter of Raleigh reported 37 new members have been added to circles. Endeavor Circle of Southport is in the process of organizing a circle for young people.

A report was given by Mrs. Clara Shackell on resolutions. Members voted to contribute toward the repair of the Chautauqua chapel.

Dr. James Bailey installed the following 1982 officers: Mrs. Marvin D. Highfill, Greensboro, president; Mrs. C. D. Scott, Durham, first vice president, spiritual life; Mrs. Mabel Lyon, Raleigh, second vice president, Chautauqua; Mrs. Ila Mae Poe, Durham, recording secretary; Mrs. Jack Preddy, Durham, health career chairman; and Dr. Lois Staton, Greenville, student ministry chairman.

Mrs. Martha Ross of Durham presented the following awards: Eunice Cherry cup, greatest increase in new subscriptions to "The Silver Cross," Sheltering Home, Durham; J. C. Angier cup, attendance at convention, Guilford Circle of Greensboro; Nell Young cup, greatest increase in membership, Sara Barker Circle, Durham; and the Hortense F. Moye cup, outstanding achievement, Patient Circle, Greenville.

Miss Rebekah Page, St. Luke's Circle, Raleigh, extended an invitation for the 1982 convention. Appreciation was expressed by Mrs. R. L. Brame for the success of this year's convention. Dr. Staton, presiding at the luncheon session, gave the invocation.

Vocal selections were rendered by ECU Students, Janice Noyes, soloist, Ron McClohorn, pianist, Jeffrey Brendle of Drexel, recipient of a ministerial student scholarship, expressed his appreciation to the group. Mrs. Nancy Nahouse of Greenville, a former nursing scholarship recipient, introduced the current scholarship recipient, Edith Edwards. Miss Annie Turner, branch chairman of the American Indian Department, introduced Darlene Graham of Hallsboro, the current American Indian Scholarship recipient. She is studying law at Campbell University.

Jimmy Doughty of Greensboro was the scholarship recipient to attend Chautauqua this summer. He showed slides which were taken there of the grounds and buildings. Chautauqua, N. Y. is the headquarters of the International Order of The King's Daughters and Sons.

Mrs. T. O. Talton of Durham gave the benediction.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Humbles of Rt. 2, Ayden and Mrs. Dorothy Moye Sumrell of Rt. 1, Ayden and the late Mr. Barrett Hughes Sumrell.

The bride's gown was of candlelight qiana with an attached capelet bordered with chantilly lace extending in a V-back. Her jewelry was a birthstone pearl necklace and earrings and she carried a nosegay of silk mixed summer flowers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Serving the wedding cake was Mrs. Mary Harrell, aunt of the bride. Mrs. Margaret Benson poured punch. Attending the guest registry with the Pathology Department of the CU School of Medicine.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Ayden-Gritton High School and works at Procter and Gamble, Greenville.

The couple lives at Rt. 1, Ayden after a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee.

Branch, organist, Mrs. Alda Dunn, pianist and Gail Rutledge, soloist.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her uncle, William Edward Lyon. She wore a formal gown of white chantilly lace fashioned with a split V-neckline trimmed with iridescents and pearls. A lace ruffle formed a circular yoke. The fitted waistline extended into a peaked front and the long fitted sleeves were ruffled at the wrist. The gathered skirt flowed into a chapel length train. She carried a bouquet of white daisies and yellow sweetheart roses with baby's breath and greenery. She wore baby's breath in her hair.

The maid of honor was Linda Carol Shoemaker of Bath, who wore a formal gown of lavender voile styled with a fitted bodice and three tiered skirt of lavender and white voile over a white taffeta underdress.

Bridesmaids included Judy Myers of Wilmington, cousin of the bride, and Harriet Jarvis of Ayden. They were attired in gowns with fitted bodices of lavender and white voile with lavender over white taffeta tiered skirts. The necklines were sweetheart. Each carried white daisies tied with white satin bows and they wore baby's breath in their hair.

The bride's mother wore a formal gown of aqua knit polyester with a corsage of yellow roses and carnations. The mother of the bridegroom selected a beige gown and a corsage of red roses and carnations.

Bobby Wayne Birdsong of Raleigh, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was best man and groomsmen were Michael Rabil of Smithfield and Richard Hinnat of Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Bath High School. The bridegroom graduated from Smithfield High School and served in the U.S. Navy. He is attending Pitt Community College.

A reception in the held in the church fellowship hall and hostesses were Mrs. Mae Gaylor, Mrs. Hannah Gaylor, Mrs. Melba Stroh and Mrs. Audrey Steed.

Welcoming guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lyon, aunt of the bride. Mrs. Dale Lewis and Miss Terry Walker presided over the registers. Mrs. Joe Quinberry and Mrs. Bill Shoemaker assisted in serving. Mrs. Patricia Myers and Mrs. Susan Thompson served the tiered wedding cake.

Miss Lynn Wingate presented rice bags to guests and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Grant said good-byes.

The couple will live in Greenville.

The bridegroom's parents entertained in the fellowship hall after the rehearsal Friday evening. A bridesmaids breakfast was held at the Ramada Inn Saturday morning given by Patricia Myers, Evelyn Ferrell and Judy Myers, aunt and cousins of the bride.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. H.W. Gooding of Ayden.

Ten students out of North Carolina's National Merit Scholarship Semifinalists for this year are seniors at Rose High. They represent the top half of one percent of all this state's high school seniors.

Based on their PSAT/NMSQT test scores received in their junior year, they were chosen by the National Merit Scholarship Corp. and will now advance to be considered as finalists. By the spring of next year, those chosen as finalists will be notified and will receive one of the many scholarships offered by the corporation.

The semifinalists are Bill Bost, James Bright, Andrew Harris, Alayna Keller, Catrina Logan, Elizabeth Longino, Kevin O'Neal, Jeffrey Prescott, George Stevens and Mary Vick.

Friday marked the date of the Art Club covered-dish supper, an occasion which allowed old and new members to become acquainted. Billy Stinson, art teacher, provided entertainment.

"Punk Rock/New Wave" was chosen as this year's homecoming theme after a school-wide vote was taken Tuesday. Classes and clubs will now be busy building floats and preparing for the week of activities scheduled for Oct. 12-16.

Those milling through Carolina East Mall may have noticed oddly dressed characters between the hours of four and six Sept. 17. They were seeing the formal initiation of new members into the Rose High Drama Club.

Try-outs for the club were held Sept. 9-11 and anything from monologues to song or dance routines were carefully audited by Mrs. Betty Topper, advisor and the club officers.

To be initiated, the 32 who made the club were required to assume the role of a well known person or character by dressing up and memorizing a famous line or passage. Then they went to the mall and greeted shoppers and passersby with such sayings as "Why you're not my grandmother, you're the wolf! (Little Red Riding Hood) and "Oh Romeo, Romeo! Wherefore art thou Romeo?" (Juliet). A few others present were Minnie Mouse, Eliza Doolittle, Howard Cosell and Little Bo Peep.

Initiated were Brian Berryman, Jennifer Berryman,

Marcia Berryman, Paul Bolen, Lisa Carraway, Phillip Colcord, Michael Davis, Jeff Ferris, Judy Flower, Kipper Hair, Butch Haskins, Virginia Haskins, Jim Hickman, Louise Hindmarsh, Brett Hursey, Clarence Jenkins; Josie Keller, Beth Kopelman, Leslie Lazzo, Kermit Leggett, Leanne Licko, Kim Lingerfelt, Rena Meteye, Robbie Michaelson, Keith Morris, Yvonne Nadeau, Kevin O'Neal, Jenny Randolph, Stacy Sewall, Marc Shannon, Branda Stanton and Kandy Waters.

Bride-Elect Entertained

Patsy Lynn McLawhorn, bride-elect of Winifred Lawrence Manning, was honored at a floating miscellaneous bridal shower Thursday.

The shower was held at the Evangelistic Tabernacle Church fellowship hall.

Hostesses included Barbara Dellano, Vickie Manning and Jennifer Manning.

Children In Candy Store

President Reagan assumed the office promising a new economic day for citizens of our nation.

There was a whirlwind of activity slashing social spending and other budgetary items and, most important, legislation to reduce taxes.

There was a euphoria in the nation, the bloat was being cut from government and government was getting off our backs insofar as taxes are concerned.

The euphoria disappeared very quickly, however. Interest rates didn't respond to the New Day, nor did the nation's financial markets.

The reason is that upon analysis we are finding tax cuts passed on to middle class citizens are small indeed, compared to the breaks the oil interests and super rich are getting. Furthermore we are finding the tax cuts, coupled with high interest and possible recession, will be driving the federal deficit ever higher, an inflationary situation.

What is the administration's answer? Why the president goes on television to demand more sacrifices from Americans. There is a 12 percent cut in the 1982 budgets of most government agencies proposed and the elimination of the Departments of Energy and Education.

Far from eliminating bloat, it appears the administration wants to eliminate just about anything to salvage an ill-thought out economic program.

Instead of thoughtfully eliminating waste in government and working toward a balanced budget the Reagan people raced about like children in the candy store. Now they all have the stomach ache, and who is supposed to feel the pain? Why middle class America, of course.

Appropriation Badly Needed

The House of Representatives has approved legislation that includes $15 to $20 million in the 1982 budget for the Interstate 40 link from Benson to Wilmington.

This highway, and the U.S. 64, U.S. 264 and U.S. 70 improvements, are absolutely essential to allowing Eastern North Carolina to reach its full economic potential.

It is not certain whether the funds will be included in the Senate version of the appropriations bill. However, if North Carolina's senators have any understanding of the economic value of the I-40 freeway they will do all in their power to see that the Senate version conforms with that approved by the House.

My friend Walter VanderBeek is a lifelong Republican. This year he contributed five dollars to the 1981 GOP Victory Fund. He thought nothing more about his donation, until he received a large "Certificate of Recognition," suitable for framing. The certificate had two gold seals on it. He was also given a plastic card he could carry in his wallet, identifying him as a "1981 GOP Victory Fund Sponsor."

Our Drunk Drivers

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Top state officials and private citizens are nervously casting about for some remedy to the harm caused by drunk drivers in North Carolina.

spend money without reservation, and promise the court anything.

Still, drunk driving continues to climb in numbers and to figure in more than half of all fatal accidents on the highways.

kill, maim, and destroy, but they are not seen as criminals, and are not treated as such.

Crime Control Secretary Burley Mitchell says State Highway Patrol troopers have been running a statewide crackdown, with resulting increases in arrests. But law officers are frustrated because so many drunk driving cases are lost in court; through reduction of charges or not guilty finding by jurors.

Those intimate to what Gov. Hunt and Secretary Mitchell are trying to accomplish admit that there seems to be little hope of success for a sure or quick remedy. Hunt says he is hoping to have some new measures ready for consideration in the 1983 session of the General Assembly.

North Carolina's law requires a suspected drunk driver to take a test — blood, breath or urine. If the blood alcohol level is over .10 percent, you are automatically "supposed" to be drunk. Refusal to take the test results in loss of driving licenses for six months.

Gov. Jim Hunt says he and chief aides are looking at what other states are doing, including those which are putting mandatory jail terms for drunk drivers into effect.

"There is nothing whatsoever wrong with the Driving Under the Influence law as now written," says Ben F. Loeb Jr., vehicle law specialist with the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill.

Good Law

"It is clear, concise, and as simple to enforce as a speed limit law. The North Carolina General Assembly had done its part. Now it is up to the criminal justice system," Loeb reports.

North Carolina has tried that route. Members of the General Assembly have come face to face with the question of whether those convicted of drunk driving should have to spend more time in jail; and backed down every time. Last time around, the proposal would have required a 30-day sentence.

BILL NOBLITT

Most judges will admit privately that they had rather preside over a murder trial than a calendar full of drunk driving cases.

A variety of factors are at work in the failure of what such an expert considers a workable law. Most of those factors are in the criminal justice system...in the courts. District attorneys take reduced pleas rather than face the calendar of cases and push for convictions. Judges allow this because they know trying out the drunk driving cases would take considerable time and effort. Citizens stand by and let this happen because a cousin, a neighbor, a friend — or themselves — may be next.

Loeb continues to track by computer the arrest and conviction data across North Carolina. Conviction of those who "blew Point-Ten" or more is on the skids in almost every county of the state, and until the courts get serious about drunk drivers, that decline is likely to continue.

In North Carolina the primary punishment is loss of your driving privileges for some months or a year. To protect that cherished heritage which many citizens consider an absolute right, not a privilege, individuals facing drunk driving charges will hire the best lawyers,

But before new law can be written and change made on the highways, it seems certain that a change in public attitudes must take place. Court officials complain that juries are reluctant to convict; taking the private stance that, but for the grace of God, they would be in the defendant's chair rather than the jury box. "personal" letter from Congressman Guy Vander Jagt, Chairman of the Fund, telling Mr. VanderBeek the decision to award him his certificate was by unanimous vote of the National Republican Executive Committee, in appreciation for all Walter had done for the party.

Vander Jagt continued in his letter, "I wish I could deliver this certificate to you personally in Palmyra, New York. This would give me an opportunity to tell you in detail how your financial support etc., etc..."

The letter also spelled out how the Democrats, who were to blame for the most serious crisis since World War II, were now sabotaging President Reagan's plans to resolve it.

How do I know all this? Walter came into my office the other day and showed me the documents. He looked slightly crestfallen, and I asked him why.

Other Editors Say It's O. Henry

(Greensboro Record)

One of our pet-peeves is the seeming nonchalance with which the city of Greensboro regards one of its most famous sons. Possibly its most famous son.

The man of whom we speak is William Sydney Porter (1862-1910).

Porter, should you not be aware, was better known simply as O. Henry. Under the pseudonym, Porter, writing in the latter part of the 19th century and the early 20th century, forged a place for himself as one of the great writers of the century, possibly the greatest of the short-story writers.

He was a master technician of short-story writing, was famous for his experiments in plots and for the surprise endings of his stories. No writer has surpassed him in these arts. Three of the best examples are "Gift of the Magi," "Jimmy Valentine," and "The Last Leaf."

Yet, for some reason, O. Henry's place of birth finds it difficult to spell his name correctly.

The telephone directory, for example lists such variations as O'Henry, O Henry, OHenry, O'henny — not a single reference to O. Henry. Dropping the period seems to be the publication's style.

Classified ads in the newspapers are full of O'Henry. It seems that more and more frequently this spelling finds its way into the news columns, too.

Even the City Directory, which should have it right, spells it O'Henry Boulevard. The same spelling has crept onto some city maps.

Those who work and live in his hometown should be able to spell his pen name correctly, at least most of the time. William Sydney Porter's accomplishments, and his place in American literature, deserve at least that much local recognition.

Used Car Sales Grow Steadily

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer

Rising prices for new automobiles in recent years have boosted the used-car business, and the government is trying — for the third time — to regulate the market.

The latest FTC attempt at regulation calls for a "Buyers Guide" label on every used car sold by an independent or franchised dealer. The label would have to include information of warranty coverage. Dealers would have to list major defects which they know about. And consumers would be encouraged to ask about potential problems with things like the suspension system or the brakes.

The rule was published Aug. 14 in the Federal Register. Congress has 90 days to veto the plan. If there is no veto, the regulation is expected to take effect in about six months.

The National Independent Automobile Dealers Association has promised to fight the FTC — in Congress and in the courts. The trade group already has spent over $100,000 to delay the regulatory effort — an investment which it says has saved dealers millions of dollars.

Sales of used cars, meanwhile, have been growing steadily. Figures from the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association show that in 1970, about one-fifth of the money Americans spent to buy cars went for used vehicles. By 1980, used-car sales accounted for one-fourth of the market; total spending on used cars last year was over $15.5 billion.

The majority of the sales are between individuals, but the FTC says more than 10 million used cars are sold by dealers every year. And it says consumers simply do not get enough information about the condition of the cars they are buying.

There are a look at some of the arguments involved: BACKGROUND: The first proposed rule came in 1978 when the FTC staff called for mandatory inspection of vehicles by used-car dealers, with the results posted on window stickers. The full commission rejected the staff plan, but suggested voluntary inspections instead. Dealers would have been required to post, on each car, a list of 14 mechanical items, ranging from engine to tires. The dealers would have had to describe each item: "OK," meaning it had been inspected and passed; "Not OK," meaning it had been inspected and failed; or "We don't know," meaning there had been no inspection. That plan was put forward in 1980. There were more arguments, more hearings, more lobbying in Congress, all leading to the rule which was issued on Aug. 14.

THE PROPOSAL: The "Used Car Buyers Guide" would start with a warning: "Spoken promises are difficult to enforce. Ask the dealer to put all promises in writing." It would list the major mechanical and safety systems of the car: frame and body, engine, transmission and drive shaft, differential, cooling system, electrical system, fuel system, brake system, steering system, suspension system, tires, wheels, exhaust system and accessories. There would be space for dealers to list

Leftwingers Inside Labor

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland, angry that he had been "red-baited" over communist participation in Solidarity Day, exploded when he next learned that leftwing labor leader William Winpisinger was taking his machinists union jet to Russia to accept a long-standing Soviet invitation.

"Bleeping outrageous," Kirkland stormed, a few days before the Sept. 19 Solidarity demonstration against Reaganomics. Winpisinger, an AFL-CIO vice president as leader of the machinists, shelved the trip after pleas from AFL-CIO brass. But he did not accept Kirkland's reasoning that no American free labor leader has business consorting with the Soviet regime's synthetic trade unionists.

"I've been called a hawk and a cold warrior. That's the first time I've been red-baited."

Then came the unwelcome news for Kirkland that Winpisinger, who had accepted Cuba's invitation last year, was off to Moscow. Donahue remonstrated with him. How could he visit Russia when the AFL-CIO just expressed "outrage" over the sentencing Sept. 3 to penal labor of courageous trade union organizer Anatoli Marchenko?

Nobody can question the anti-communist credentials of Lane Kirkland, an unrepentant Vietnam hawk to the end. But Winpisinger's aborted journey to Moscow reflects pressure from the left on Kirkland. His hesitation in flatly reading the communists out of Solidarity Day shows he does not yet enjoy the security of his predecessor and mentor, George Meany.

When we talked to Winpisinger three days after Solidarity Day, he told us he would not visit Russia if Kirkland were not given a visa to enter Poland for the second half of the Solidarity union congress. Kirkland did not leave Washington Sept. 22 as scheduled, when the Polish Embassy granted no visa. Besides, said Winpisinger, he could not fly from the U.S. because of the air traffic controllers strike.

The rising influence of Winpisinger and his friends on the left in labor is shown by the AFL-CIO Executive Council's endorsement of SALT II last year and its statement this year of "no blank check" for the Pentagon, both running against the grain of Kirkland's record. But beyond that, the Communist Party's old dream of getting its nose under organized labor's tent is rekindled by the new AFL-CIO president's vulnerability to attacks from the left.

But Winpisinger did not cite Marchenko's brutal treatment as cause for postponing his trip. Rather, he promised to bring up Marchenko "and anybody else I'm briefed about" when he gets to Russia. "I am terrifically concerned about the peace issue," he told us, adding he wanted to talk peace with Russians. His aim: end the old Meany-Kirkland policy of no truck with Soviet puppet "labor leaders."

That's one reason why Winpisinger, though infrequently mentioned in the regular press, is lionized in issue after issue of the Daily World, the New York-based communist newspaper. It applauds such positions as opposing U.S. aid for El Salvador, in direct opposition to Kirkland's AFL-CIO approval. Winpisinger's trial balloons for a new leftist party are headlined in the Daily World.

The tactic is put plainly by Al Evanoff, head of a communist-dominated hospital workers union in New York. He has written that while Kirkland is no better than Meany, people to shut up when they protested the Vietnam War," Evanoff added, "Kirkland doesn't have that kind of power base... by keeping the pressure for a policy of confrontation and struggle in defense of our rights, we will make Kirkland change."

So, on Sept. 16, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer Thomas Donahue told a National Press Club audience that the communists were neither invited nor wanted. On Sept. 17, on the Braden-Buchanan program over Washington's WRC Radio, Kirkland gingerly disassociated himself from the communists' participation by saying: "We have not invited them."

Kirkland's friends admit the communists have a point. In these early years of his presidency, Kirkland treads softly in facing the intruders from the left, never issuing an unequivocal disavowal of communist participation in Solidarity Day. If and when "Winky" Winpisinger visits Moscow, Kirkland will have to choose between disturbing labor's superficial harmony and dishonoring the martyrdom of Anatoli Marchenko.

But on that same program, Kirkland erred when he denied that the communist-controlled U.S. Peace Council was a listed Solidarity Day endorser; its name in fact had been accepted at AFL-CIO headquarters. Furthermore, Kirkland seemed less upset about communist participation than the fact he was being asked about it:

Strength For Today

BE NOT DECEIVED

People often declare that because they are so sensitive they cannot bear certain situations in life.

There can be no doubt that there is a difference in sensitivity. Certainly there are sensitive people who are badly hurt by unpleasant situations with which they come in contact and by people with whom they have to deal.

But very often people who believe themselves very sensitive are in reality merely selfish. They agonize not because they feel themselves forced to do something wrong or because their esthetic taste is outraged, but simply because some set of circumstances or persons are demanding that something unselfish and perhaps uncomfortable be done. A sacrifice has to be made, a cherished plan put aside, an unchangeable situation endured.

It will be most disconcerting if what we think is sensitivity turns out to be selfishness. But it will be worse if we go on being deceived. — Elisha Douglass

Bathtub Hiding Place

Greenville Police yesterday arrested Gene Sherrod Evans of 702 West 14th St. on charges of breaking, entering and larceny after finding him in a bathtub in the Cobra Motors building at 705 Memorial Dr.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers, checking the building about 2:45 a.m., found a rear door open and several items, including a television set, adding machine and radio stacked near the door.

Further investigation turned up a window that had been pried open, and Evans, who was taken into custody.

Farm Scene

Determining the optimum level of peanut maturity is a difficult task for a peanut farmer. The problems a farmer faces in choosing the best day to dig are determined by many factors. The grower must take into account the percentage of peanut hulks that show maturity versus those that do not; the condition of the vines in the field; the weather conditions, especially the situation with tropical storms; the "lateness" of the season and temperature of the soil, and the possibility of marketing problems at the buying station.

This year's peanut crop in Pitt County has enjoyed excellent growing conditions except for the latter part of August and most of September. Cool temperatures have slowed down the rate of maturity. Also, some fields have experienced a great deal of leaf drop due to various disease problems.

In a peanut maturity test in Pitt County, peanuts have shown an increase in yield and quality despite cool temperatures and loss of leaves. Such tests as this one indicate that soil temperatures are still warm enough to continue maturation for a while longer. Of course where disease or leaf drop is severe, digging peanuts should proceed.

A new technique of determining maturity has come about recently. Many growers have traditionally shelled the peanuts collected from plants throughout a field and shelled them into three piles. One pile contains mature peanuts, another pile contains immature peanuts and the third pile contains peanuts somewhere in between the mature and immature. When the percentage of mature peanuts is 70-80 percent, then digging usually begins. The new technique involves scraping the outside of the hull to look at the color of the layer just beneath the skin of the hull. As peanuts mature, the inner hull changes from white to yellow, then shades into orange and later brown, and when full maturity is reached, a black color is evident. This is a quick and apparently accurate method of determining maturity.

Peanuts do not mature uniformly on the vine. There is a narrow range of time where optimum maturity is reached before overmature peanuts begin to be shed off the plants. Experienced growers can recognize this period of time and can obtain optimum grade by digging at that time.

Investing Course Set

"Fundamentals of Investing," an eight-week introductory course designed to aid both the beginning and intermediate investor, will be offered by Pitt Community College beginning Oct. 1. The class will meet on Thursday from 7-10 p.m. and will end Nov. 19.

Bill Bedsole, account executive with Wheat First Securities, will be the instructor. Total cost is $8 per person, with registration beginning at 6:45 p.m. on Oct. 1 in room 113, Humber Building, PCC campus.

Anybody Out There? If So, Time Running Out

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — If there are any outer space civilizations trying to contact Earthlings, they have until midnight Wednesday to get their message through.

That's when the government disconnects the switchboard that has been listening for cosmic radio signals in an ambitious attempt to determine if intelligent beings exist out there.

It is just one of scores of federal programs getting the ax under President Reagan's fiscal 1982 budget.

Like many government projects, it has an acronym — SETI, for Search for Extra Terrestrial Intelligence. It is a six-year-old effort to develop antennae and computer programs that could distinguish meaningful signals from the flood of microwaves that constantly flow toward Earth from stars, galaxies, quasars, pulsars and other deep-space sources.

Under the plan, laid out by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, giant dish receivers have been scanning the universe for radio transmissions. The soon-to-be completed computer would separate routine background noise from signals that might possibly come from an intelligent source.

"The project officials are greatly disappointed because they have nearly completed the computer programs and were within six months of giving them a major test," said Charles Redmond, a spokesman for NASA's Office of Space Science.

He said the machine being developed for the project will be wrapped in plastic and put on a shelf at Stanford University, where it is being built, and a SETI committee will write a report on what has been done to date.

"It means we will have to stop looking at our space shore for a message-in-a-bottle cast out by another civilization," Redmond said. "Sadly, if you don't look for anything, you never find anything."

Actually, SETI has been living on borrowed time for three years, ever since it won one of the government's least favorite distinctions, the "Golden Fleece" award made periodically by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis.

Proxmire argued that the project was a waste of money because intelligent life might be extinct by the time Earth received and replied to a message, a roundtrip that could take millions of years.

"It's hard enough to find intelligent life in Washington, let alone outer space," he contended. Congress went along and cut SETI's budget in 1978. But NASA, displaying some budget wizardry of its own, quietly transferred SETI to its exobiology program and continued to fund the search. So far, $3.6 million has been spent on the project.

Proxmire struck again last summer and won congressional approval of an amendment stopping the use of exobiology funds for SETI. A budget-conscious administration went along.

Auto Break-Ins Are Charged

Timothy Grant, 20 of Route 4, Greenville, was arrested by Greenville Police about 10:10 p.m. Saturday on two counts of breaking and entering autos at B29 Glendale Ct.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Ronald Joseph Freach called police when he found Grant asleep in one of his two cars parked at his home. Still asleep when police arrived, officers woke Grant up and arrested him for breaking into the auto.

They also charged him with breaking into another car owned by Freach which had been entered also.

Trapp Lodge Is Being Rebuilt

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — It's only a matter of time before the hills again are alive with the sound of tourists arriving at the new Trapp Family Lodge.

Nine months ago, a fire destroyed the famous hotel and one guest perished in the blaze. The family matriarch, Maria von Trapp, who inspired the musical and film

"The Sound of Music," pledged to rebuild at the site, where her family built its first home in this country after fleeing Nazi-occupied Austria more than 40 years ago.

Ground has been broken for a new $5 million hotel, and Saturday the cornerstone of the new 73-room lodge — nearly three times as big as the old one — was dedicated. The ceremony was attended by thousands of townspeople and tourists.

The Trapp family also plans to build 20 vacation time-sharing guest homes in an expansion of the resort.

CHARGE MADE

Greenville Police arrested Kenneth Earl Mozingo of Route 1, Ayden on charges of possession of methaqualone in connection with a 11:10 p.m. incident Friday in a parking lot near the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche Streets.

Police said Mozingo was charged after 10 methaqualone tablets, valued at $30, allegedly were found in his possession.

place?" "Well, I heard the Executive Committee of the National Republican Party was holding a meeting, and I thought they might be looking for an ambassador for the Court of St. James. I wanted to be there in case they had any questions to ask me."

"Did they interview you?" "I didn't get into the meeting. I showed my plastic 'victory' card to the guard at the Republican National headquarters, and he escorted me to the door. He thought I was some kind of nut."

"I'll bet when Congressman Vander Jagt hears about it, that guard will have egg on his face," I said.

"I'm not too sure. I went up on the Hill to see Vander Jagt to complain about the treatment I had received since arriving in Washington, and even when I produced his letter they said he couldn't see me."

"You would think the congressman's staff would know who you were, after what you've done to defeat the Democrats."

"They were too busy stuffing 'Certificates of Recognition' into envelopes to notice I was even there."

"So what did you do next?" "I heard there was a big dinner for Menachem Begin at the White House, so I called up Nancy Reagan's social secretary and told her I was free that night."

"Did she invite you to the dinner?"

"Not exactly. She told me to hold the line, and the next thing I knew I was talking to the Secret Service, who wanted to know where I was calling from."

"Well," I said, "for a guy who has been unanimously recognized as a Victory Fund sponsor by the Republican Party, I would say they were more interested in your five bucks, than they were in you."

"I'm starting to come to the same conclusion. And you know something else? I don't believe Congressman Vander Jagt ever did want to come to Palmyra, New York, to give me my certificate personally."

Introducing the BB&T simplified loan form.

You're right, it does look like a check. That's because it is a check. But if you have BB&T's Constant Credit, it's something else as well. It's a way to get a loan. A loan you can grant yourself anytime, anywhere, for any amount up to your credit limit in the length of time it takes you to write a personal check. Because with Constant Credit, that's all you have to do. Say an emergency arises. Or you need to pay some bills. Or you spot a great bargain but haven't enough in your checking account to take advantage of it. You simply write a check for more than your balance, and we automatically advance the amount required to cover it in units of $100. Until you need Constant Credit there's no charge at all. And when you use it, you pay interest for only the number of days you owe the money. Visit your nearest BB&T office soon and apply for Constant Credit. Then the next time you need a loan, all you'll have to do is put it in writing.

Nobody works harder for your money.

Rich And Poor Countries Are At Odds At Monetary Fund Session

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A committee of the International Monetary Fund, rejecting a bid by poor countries for a massive increase in global reserve assets, is raising the prospect of an angry confrontation between rich and poor nations at the IMF's annual meeting this week.

A group of 24 countries from Latin America, Asia and Africa had sought an additional $14 billion a year in special drawing rights for five years, starting in 1982. The SDRs are a reserve asset created by the IMF.

But the 22-nation Interim Committee — an IMF policy-making body — recommended Sunday that the issuance of new SDRs be limited to $4.6 billion a year, approximately the same rate which has existed since 1978.

In adopting that recommendation, which now goes to the IMF executive board, the committee rejected a call by U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan for a moratorium on issuing new SDRs in the interest of combating inflation.

The committee decision represented a compromise, but IMF officials, who asked not to be identified, predicted that this week's meeting of the fund and its sister organization, the World Bank, would be one of the stormiest in years.

One IMF official said there was "pandemonium" at the fund last week when Regan suggested that the austere economic policies of the United States should be adopted worldwide.

Normally, the official said, American treasury secretaries withhold comment about the U.S. position at IMF-World Bank meetings until they have consulted with their counterparts from other countries.

Specifically, Regan said last week he wanted the IMF to impose stricter austerity demands on borrowing countries as a means of fighting inflation. On Sunday, Regan, meeting with reporters, seemed to back off somewhat when he said the IMF had been following a stricter policy in recent months and should stick to it.

The U.S. push for greater global austerity seemed to be supported by most other industrialized countries, but representatives of poorer countries pledged forceful opposition.

The chairman of the 24-nation developing country group, Philippine Finance Minister Cesar Virata, said some poor nations might even withdraw from the 141-nation organization if the demands for more austerity continue.

These nations have been seeking an SDR expansion on grounds that it will help them pay off their foreign debt. The collective balance of payments deficit of non-oil developing countries rose from $38 billion in 1978 to $83 billion in 1980, largely because of oil price increases, according to IMF figures.

Regan said Sunday he is sympathetic to the problems of these countries but added that the private sector should do more to help resolve their problems.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices recovered some of their deep opening losses in heavy trading today but still were off over a broad range following one of the worst one-day price drops on London and Tokyo markets.

Blue-chip issues reversed their declines almost as quickly as they fell. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which immediately dropped more than 14 points after the opening bell, was off only 3.99 points at 820.02 after two hours of trading.

Although declines led advances 5 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, the margin narrowed substantially from the 23-1 edge earlier in the session.

Big Board volume was 28.67 million shares compared with 20.72 million in the same period Friday.

Prices were under pressure at the opening from several fronts. Investors are concerned the federal budget deficit will not soon be brought under control, allowing interest rates to fall. A high level of margin, or credit calls, has helped push prices lower because as stock prices fall, traders who bought shares on credit either must provide more cash or sell their shares.

In addition, predictions by market analyst Joseph Granville that markets worldwide this week would suffer extreme losses was credited with helping the price slide overseas, which carried into New York trading.

But prices began to stabilize amid some bargain hunting and a reduction of Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co.'s prime lending rate to 19 percent from 19.5 percent, analysts noted.

Cite Trend Of Changes In Tobacco Operations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The N.C. Center for Public Policy Research released a lengthy study of the tobacco industry today that suggests governments should review and adapt its farm and industry programs in light of changes in the tobacco industry.

The center's study is a 335-page book called "The Tobacco Industry in Transition." It includes articles written by officials throughout the industry, tobacco researchers, economists and journalists.

The study avoids recommending specific changes in the federal tobacco program. But it points out long-term trends and says government has not reacted as rapidly as have farmers and manufacturers to developments in farm mechanization, world-wide markets, health issues and other developments.

"Our political leaders in Washington and Raleigh need to learn from tobacco farmers and tobacco companies because they are changing their mode of operations rapidly," said William R. Finger, editor of the book.

"In an environment of federal budget cuts, political leaders in a tobacco state have to develop new policies for the 1980s," he added.

Among the study's findings were:

- The size of tobacco farms is increasing while the number of farms is decreasing.
- The amount of flue-cured tobacco crops harvested mechanically jumped from just 2 percent in 1972 to 32 percent in 1979.
- There are other crops, such as tomatoes, strawberries, apples and peaches that yield as much income per acre as flue-cured tobacco.
- The quality of foreign-grown tobacco is improving while their prices remain below domestic levels.
- Cigarettes continue to be the major profit item for the big tobacco companies, but the percent of total revenue from cigarettes is on the decline for those companies.
- Restrictions on cigarette smoking and advertising have been levied by governments in 35 countries.

Cash Pours On Reggie

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball star Reggie Jackson is used to fans' adulation. And he's used to having money thrown at him — by the Yankees management at contract time.

But he's not used to what's turning into the latest fad at Yankee Stadium: Fans in the right field stands have been tossing cold cash at him.

The money really starts flying after Jackson hits home runs like his 450-foot game-winning shot Sunday.

What does Jackson do when the coins and bills start falling around him?

"I pick them up," he said. Sunday's collections came to $82.50 and one slug, pushing his total for the last few weeks to more than $200. It would have been more, Jackson said, but he was chased off the field by security officers.

Jackson, in the final year of a five-year, $3 million contract, said, "This might have been my last regular-season game here. Why not take their appreciation? It was phenomenal. There was so much there, I couldn't pick it up," he said, his cap filled with silver and green.

Jackson, who takes the whole thing "as a compliment," said he would put the money to good use. "I'm going to put it together in a trophy — maybe in a big apple."

News Council Names Officers

EMERALD ISLE — Alvin Taylor, managing editor of The Daily Reflector, was one of four persons elected a director of the Associated Press News Council Sunday at the annual meeting of the group.

Other directors named included Henry Coble of the Greensboro Daily News, Harry Hollingsworth of the Durham Morning Herald, and the immediate past president of the council, Juanita Weekley of the Greensboro Daily News-Record.

No Restricting Use Of Names

EMERALD ISLE, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge told a gathering of news media representatives Sunday that any law restricting the use of names associated with crime would be unconstitutional.

Judge James H. Pou Bailey told the annual meeting of the North Carolina Associated Press News Council that juvenile offenders and rape victims were fair game for news reports, and should be left to the discretion of the news media.

A panel discussion revolving around a General Assembly resolution discouraging the use of names in such cases resulted in divided opinions by editors.

A majority said they would name the victims at some stage in a rape trial, but most were less likely to name juveniles charged with a crime.

But Bailey was less tentative about the matter of rape.

U.S. Market ...

can slide right into these high yielding CDs.

"Until something is done to correct that inconsistency, I look for the market to stay in a downward trend."

Ken Hutcherson at E. F. Hutton & Co. here said activity at his office reflected a 13 to one ratio of declines over advances with 1,393 stocks down compared with 69 going up.

Hutcherson said that while "Dow (Jones) stocks are coming back," the overall market was down this morning and he pointed to "some panic now" on the part of share holders. He said the market was "running strong on the sale side now."

"It's a very bad day to be in the broker business," the spokesman said, mentioning that "there has been so much sell off in the last week or so the market has plunged."

GAUGING INFLATION
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Auto tires with too much or too little inflation can cost money in wasted gasoline and unnecessary tire wear.

Experts here suggest the best inflation control for tires is to check them with good quality pressure gauges which are said to be more accurate than service station air-hose meters or low-cost imported devices. Having the right amount of air in auto tires, Scovill's Schrader Group people say, can add thousands of safe miles to tire life.

Tigers Back On Top, But Five Rivals Close Behind

By The Associated Press
"We haven't quit all year and we're not going to quit now."

That was Boston's Carl Yastrzemski's promise, but it probably was offered with variations in at least five American League East dressing rooms Sunday.

As baseball enters its final week of this unique season, Detroit leads the AL East, Milwaukee is in second by one-half game; Boston is third, one game behind; Baltimore is fourth, 2½ back; New York is fifth, three games off the pace, and Cleveland is sixth, 4½ games out.

The Tigers moved out front by edging Milwaukee 2-1 Sunday. In other AL East games, Cleveland nipped Boston 8-7 in 11 innings and New York stopped Baltimore 5-2.

In the AL West, Minnesota defeated Texas 5-2, Kansas City shelled Seattle 15-3 and Chicago took a doubleheader from Oakland, 9-5 and 10-3. Toronto slipped by California 4-3 in an interdivisional clash.

"Now we have to go on the road and win five out of our last six games," Yastrzemski said. "It won't be easy to do that with three games in Milwaukee and three in Cleveland, but we can do it."

With an almost perfect script, the exciting second season ending finds the top six teams in the AL East battling each other this week.

"We can't think about this game anymore — we've got to think about our next six," Boston Manager Ralph Houk said before the Red Sox flew to Milwaukee for a series opener tonight. "We're still in great position. All we've got to do is win some games. Of course, we've got to beat Milwaukee."

On Sunday, Jorge Orta doubled and scored on a double by Bo Diaz in the 11th inning as the Indians squeezed by Boston. The Indians pulled out the victory after the Red Sox battled back from a five-run deficit, knotting the score 7-7 on Dwight Evans' two-out, two-run, ninth-inning homer.

Orta had a solo homer in the first inning, while Boston's Jim Rice slammed his 16th home run of the year in the bottom of the first.

Tigers 2, Brewers 1
First baseman Ron Jackson made two excellent defensive plays and accounted for both Detroit runs as the Tigers knocked off Milwaukee.

Jackson led off the fourth inning with a double, moved to third on a foul pop-up and scored on a wild pitch.

Then, with the score tied 1-1 in the bottom of the eighth, Jackson singled home Kirk Gibson with the winning run.

"You've got to win these one-run games," Jackson said. "We didn't roll over and die."

Yankees 5, Orioles 2
Reggie Jackson's massive three-run homer powered New York over Baltimore. Dave Righetti, 7-4, survived a shaky start and pitched a four-hitter for the victory. Dennis Martinez, 14-5, was the loser.

After consecutive singles by Willie Randolph, Larry Milbourne and Dave Winfield scored one run, Jackson smashed his 14th homer of the season some 450 feet into the right-center field bleachers. It was only the third time a ball has been hit in that area since Yankee Stadium was re-modeled.

White Sox 9-10, A's 5-3
Harold Baines, Chet Lemon and Carlton Fisk slammed two home runs each to lead an eight-homer attack as the White Sox swept Oakland.

Lemon, Baines and Tony Bernazard connected in the first game as the White Sox overcame a 5-0 first-inning deficit after the A's smacked eight straight singles to tie an American League record set Aug. 7, 1951, by the Washington Senators against Cleveland.

Lamar Hoyt came on after the first five A's hit safely, gave up three more hits before settling down and hurling a two-hitter the rest of the way.

A three-run homer by Baines and a solo shot by Wayne Nordhagen enabled Chicago to jump to a 4-0 lead in the first inning of the second game.

Fisk's two homers, his first since May 15, helped the White Sox drop Oakland out of first place in the AL West.

Twins 5, Rangers 2
Pete Redfern, with final-out help from Doug Aorbett, hurled a six-hitter as Minnesota stopped Texas to stay in the thick of the AL West pennant chase.

Redfern, 8-8, gave up singles to Pat Putnam and Jim Sundberg in the fifth and a bloop single to Bump Wills in the sixth.

ut in the ninth, he lost his shutout as Al Oliver singled with two outs and scored when Buddy Bell blooped a double down the right field line. Putnam doubled home Bell before Corbett came on to get the final out and gain his 16th save.

Minnesota picked up an un-earned run in the first inning, scored three times in the seventh to lock the game away the eighth. Dave Engle's single in the first extended his hitting streak to 13 games, the longest last three games.

Royals 15, Mariners 3
Amos Otis drove in four runs with two of Kansas City's seven doubles as the Royals buried Seattle. Every Kansas City starter except Frank White hit safely in the 22-hit barrage against five Mariner pitchers as the Royals snapped Seattle's five-game winning streak, its longest of the year.

Tom Paciorek hit his 13th home run in the seventh, a solo shot, for the Mariners.

Blue Jays 4, Angels 3
A two-run homer by John Mayberry in the eighth powered Toronto over California.

Dave Stieb, 10-10, limited the Angels to four hits before Joey McLaughlin came on in the eighth to earn his seventh save.

Garth Iorg singled with one out in the eighth off California starter Angel Moreno, 1-2, and Mayberry followed with his 15th homer of the season to put the Jays ahead.

Daryl Scottiers hit a two-run homer, giving the 22-year-old first baseman six RBI in his last three games.

Chargers Drop First; Detroit Blanks Oakland

By The Associated Press
While some of his big-name counterparts spent much of the day in a horizontal position, Craig Morton was staying upright and giving the San Diego Chargers the treatment they usually dish out.

The 38-year-old quarterback threw four touchdown passes for the second week in a row Sunday as the Denver Broncos raced to a 35-0 lead and then coasted to a 42-24 victory over the previously unbeaten Chargers. Morton completed a club-record 17 of 18 passes for 308 yards and engineered the Broncos to a whopping 453 yards in total offense.

Meanwhile, San Diego's National Football League-leading attack, led by Dan Fouts, gained 349 yards, but Denver's Orange Crush defense sacked him five times and intercepted three of his passes.

In fact, Sunday was a rough afternoon for several NFL quarterbacks.

Detroit compiled six sacks in a 16-0 victory over Super Bowl champion Oakland and Jim Plunkett; the New York Jets got their first victory, 33-17, over the Houston Oilers with the seven sacks of Ken Stabler (eight overall), and the Minnesota Vikings dumped Green Bay QBs Lynn Dickey and David Whitehurst eight times in a 30-13 romp.

In other games, Cleveland beat Atlanta 28-17, Cincinnati outlasted Buffalo 27-24 in overtime, Pittsburgh beat New England 27-21 in overtime, Philadelphia blasted Washington 36-13, Miami outscored Baltimore 31-28, Kansas City edged Seattle 20-14, San Francisco shaded New Orleans 21-14, Dallas stopped the New York Giants 18-10 and Tampa Bay beat St. Louis 20-10.

Los Angeles visits Chicago tonight.

"This is one of the best games I've ever played," said Morton. "We had a couple of long drives, and we were lucky enough to get a couple of breaks. You have to be happy any time you score 42 points on San Diego."

"Craig did a good job, and he also had great protection," said Denver Coach Dan Reeves. "If you give him enough time, he can do a super job."

While Reeves was pleased with the protection given

Morton, who is not known for his mobility, San Diego Coach Don Coryell said the Denver defense "played very, very well. I have the utmost respect for (Denver defensive coordinator) Joe Collier."

Morton threw TD passes of 93 and 21 yards to wide receiver Steve Watson, a 19-yarder to tight end Riley Odoms and a 2-yarder to reserve tight end Jim Wright. When Morton left the game with 8:52 left in the third quarter, the Broncos had a 35-0 lead.

Fouts then came alive and flipped two touchdown passes to John Cappelletti and scored another TD himself.

The victories by Denver and Kansas City left them tied with San Diego in the AFC West, all with 3-1 records.

Lions 16, Raiders
Oakland was shut out for the first time since 1966 and Detroit got three field goals from Eddie Murray and a key turnover on a kickoff.

Murray gave the Lions a 6-0 lead with a 39-yard field goal with 7:21 left in the game and Luther Bradley recovered a fumble on Oakland's 3 on the ensuing kickoff. On the first play, Billy Sims clinched the victory with a 3-yard TD.

The Lions' Silver Rush defense, in addition to its six sacks for 57 yards, held the defending champion Raiders to 131 total yards.

"I thought it was an outstanding defensive performance and the players and coaches deserve a lot of credit," said Detroit Coach Monte Clark. "We had as good a special teams performance as I've ever seen here or anywhere. And we did it against the world champions, which makes it all the more meaningful."

Jets 33, Oilers 17
New York won its first game as Richard Todd completed 25 of 39 passes for 312 yards and three touchdowns, while Stabler spent a frustrating day on the Shea Stadium turf.

Todd hit Wesley Walker on 28 and 39-yard TD passes, the second on a flea flicker, and Kevin Long scored on two short

'Skinny Jewish Boy' Wins Tourney

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — It was a career high for Morris Hatalsky, and a season-ending low for Jack Nicklaus and Ray Floyd.

"Who would have thought," Hatalsky shouted, "that a skinny little Jewish boy from San Diego would win the golf tournament?"

His front-running, two-stroke victory — his first on the tour after five long years of frustration — in the Hall of Fame Classic left Hatalsky, 29, counting up the things that will be, while Nicklaus and Floyd had time to consider what might have been.

"This is all of it," said Hatalsky.

Hatalsky led by at least two shots all the way and won it by that margin with a 275 total, 9-under-par on the famed No. 2 course at the Pinehurst

Country Club. He started counting off the pluses.

"Most of all, there's no more qualifying," said Hatalsky, who had faced the trauma of the Monday morning qualifying rounds throughout his career.

"And I get to play in the Masters. And I get to play in the Tournament of Champions back near my hometown, San Diego."

"I guess all the work and faith finally paid off. This is very nice, very, very sweet."

"What a great world it is!" Nicklaus and Floyd were not quite so pleased, however.

Nicklaus, who had hoped to break a year-long winless string in his final start of the season, took himself out of it almost immediately. From a position five shots back and very much in the hunt, he bogeyed two of the first three holes, played the first in 40 and finished with a 75 that left him at 284. It marked only the second time in his career that he'd gone through the season without a title.

The deeply frustrated Floyd, who had hoped to make some important gains on absent rivals in the chase for leading money-winner and Player of the Year honors, fell short of his goals, too.

 In the day's other overtime game, Terry Bradshaw threw a 24-yard scoring pass to Lynn Swann 3:19 after regulation time ended.
 Winless New England tied the score at 21 with 24 seconds left when Matt Cavanaugh threw a 12-yard touchdown pass to Stanley Oorgan.
 Browns 26, Falcons 17
 Cleveland knocked Atlanta from the unbeaten ranks as Brian Sipe ran for a touchdown and passed for two more in the first half to erase a 10-0 deficit.
 Sipe hit 21 of 34 passes for 215 yards while Mike Pruitt rushed

Bengals 27, Bills 24
 Surprising Cincinnati won its third game as Ken Anderson fired three touchdown passes and Jim Breech booted the game-winning 28-yard field goal with 5:27 to play in overtime.
 Anderson rallied the Bengals from a 21-10 deficit to a 24-21 lead, but Buffalo's Nick Mike-Mayer kicked a 40-yard field goal with one second left in regulation play to force the extra period.

Dolphins 31, Colts 28
 Baltimore outgained Miami 514 yards to 428, but the Dolphins improved their record to 4-0 when Uwe von Schamann kicked a 28-yard field goal with 1:02 remaining.
 David Woodley passed for two touchdowns and rookie Andra Franklin ran for two more for the Dolphins.
 Bert Jones, booed before the game by the hometown fans, turned the jeers to cheers with 353 yards passing and three TD tosses.
 Eagles 36, Redskins 13
 Running back Louie Giammona, Coach Dick Vermeil's nephew, replaced injured starter Wilbert Montgomery in style, catching a touchdown pass and running for another score as Philadelphia also stayed unbeaten, scoring 22 points in the final quarter against Washington.
 "I'm very proud of Louie as a player and a nephew," said Vermeil. "And anybody who wants to say it's nepotism can forget it."

Chiefs 20, Seahawks 14
 Bill Kenney directed Kansas City to a 20-0 lead in the second quarter and the Chiefs held on to beat the Seahawks.
 Kenne9 completed 16 of 25 passes for 239 yards and ran for one touchdown, while Seattle quarterback Jim Zorn hit 31 of 47 passes for 308 yards, including a string of 14 completions in a row.
 49ers 21, Saints 14
 San Francisco took the lead 14-7 on Joe Montana's 60-yard TD pass to Freddie Solomon in the third period and held on to beat New Orleans.

 The Saints moved inside San Francisco's 30-yard line six times without collecting any points. A 26-yard pass interception return for a touchdown by Ronnie Lott gave the 49ers a 21-7 lead in the fourth quarter.
 Buccaneers 20, Colts 10
 James Owens broke four tackles as he raced 2 yards around right end for the go-ahead touchdown with 2:41 left as Tampa Bay came from behind to defeat St. Louis.
 Jerry Eckwood iced the victory when he sprinted 31 yards for another Buc's score less than a minute later.

'Lucky' Waltrip Wins OD 500, Boosts Cup Lead

Darrell Waltrip

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip was quick to admit that if luck had been equal, Harry Gant would have won the Old Dominion 500 Grand National stock car race instead of him.
 "I'd rather be lucky than good any day. It just seems that the longer I race, the luckier I get," Waltrip said Sunday after he breezed to a 7.8-second victory over Gant that boosted his lead in the Winston Cup point standings to 43 over Bobby Allison.
 Gant, meanwhile, is puzzled. His string of 10 runner-up finishes without a victory in his two-year Grand National career and minor bad luck are things he can't figure out.
 "This has really got me down. I cut a tire on pit road. It looks like I'm never going to win," Gant said.
 Driving the Junior Johnson-prepared Buick, Waltrip averaged only 70.089 mph in a race slowed 11 times for 72 laps by caution flags but earned a $29,275 paycheck. Gant's Buick was the only car in the same lap with Waltrip's Buick.
 While Gant has been having just enough tough luck to keep him winless, it has been just the opposite for Waltrip.

 In the last nine races he has four firsts, four seconds and a third. That streak has also carried him from a 340-point deficit in the point race to the 43-point advantage over Allison, who finished 10th on Sunday.
 Following the top two were youngster Mark Martin in a Pontiac, Neil Bonnett in a Thunderbird and Joe Millikan in a Pontiac. They were all three laps off the pace.
 For most of the race, it looked like Gant's day. In the early stages, he could run high or low — just about anywhere he wanted to. By the 400th lap around this .525-mile oval, Gant had built a 6.9 second lead over Waltrip.
 Ten laps later the record crowd of 37,000 watched as Gant scooted by Martin down the backstretch to leave only Waltrip in the same lap.
 Then Gant made what he thought would be his last stop on lap 465 to take on gas only and his 12.4-second advantage over Waltrip turned into a two-second deficit.
 Gant was forced back to the pits on 470 to replace a right

Woody Peele

Sitting in the press box Saturday night, someone brought up a vision of deja vu as the University of Toledo was making a big comeback against East Carolina University.

You may remember that last year, in the second game of the season, the Pirates took a 7-3 lead into the dressing room, only to see Southwestern Louisiana rally for 21 points in the third period, mostly on ECU mistakes, for a 27-21 victory.

Saturday night, the Pirates were up 28-7 at halftime, and appeared headed for a lopsided victory. But not one point went up on the ECU side of the board in the second half, while the Rockets recorded 17 and nearly pulled off the victory.

Why did it happen? That has to be the question. One player, asked about it after the game, said that the Pirates would be better off if they didn't have halftime; if they could just keep playing. Perhaps this is true.

We went to the history books to see if there is a pattern there. And it seems that there just might be. It's a small one, to be sure, but some conclusions could be gained from it.

First of all, East Carolina has played well in each of its opening games the past two years. In both the Pirates have played as well in the second half as in the first, or better. Too, we've also discounted last year's Florida State game and this year's North Carolina game as having been too much of a rout to be considered.

But in the remaining games, there is a definite trend. Of the nine other games last year, and the two this year (discounting the openers and the two routs), the Pirates have generally been a first half club.

Of those 11 games, the offense has outscored or equaled the first half's production only five times. In only two of those five did the Pirates come away with a victory, and in only one of the wins did they outscore their opponent in the half, rallying for the win.

The defense, meanwhile, fell down in the second half in nine of those 11 games, allowing the opponent to outscore its first half production. In seven of those nine, the opponent outscored the Pirates, and three times, the Pirates were ahead at halftime and lost.

All this would tend to show that the Pirates performed better in the first half on the whole. Naturally, there are exceptions.

Why this loss of intensity? We don't know, but it is a facet of the ECU game that needs to be examined by those in charge toward turning it around. The second half is as important as the first, if not more so.

East Carolina's defense will get a stiffer test this coming weekend. While Toledo was able to spring its receivers open for receptions quite easily, the Rocket passing game isn't nearly as dangerous as that of the Blue Devils.

Duke, regardless of which quarterback plays, will be putting the ball into the air with greater frequency, to better receivers. It will test the Pirate secondary, and the pass rush, to the fullest. Probably no other team ECU plays passes the ball as well as Duke.

Duke, too, will be remembering last year's rout in the opener. In that game, the Blue Devils were heavy favorites but were pounded by the Pirates. They want revenge.

It will take an outstanding game from start to finish to win this one.

Meanwhile, Friday night, Rose High School will place its unbeaten string on the line against another unbeaten in Rocky Mount. Just having to go to Rocky Mount is a tough assignment, but this is a game that probably will go a long way toward deciding the conference championship.

Rose will have to play better than it did on Friday night against Northern Nash to win. Over the past few weeks, the Rampants have knocked on the door of the end zone time after time, but have only four touchdowns to their credit in the last two games. Those opportunities, when they arrive this Friday, must be taken advantage of and not allowed to escape.

Too, Rocky Mount has an outstanding passing game, the the Rose secondary will be tested as never before this year.

But it should prove to be an outstanding high school football game.

Houston's Sutton Hurls Two-Hitter

By The Associated Press

After watching Nolan Ryan pitch a no-hitter on Saturday, Don Sutton said he was "stupid enough to think about back-to-back no-hitters."

For a while there Sunday, it almost happened. Sutton held Los Angeles hitless for six innings before finishing with a more-than-respectable two-hitter as the Houston Astros defeated the Dodgers 4-1.

"I felt strong and under complete control and I probably had the best fastball of the year," Sutton said. "It felt quick and alive."

Asked if the enthusiasm of the near-capacity crowd at the Astrodome helped him, Sutton replied, "No, they probably made me make a stupid pitch to (Steve) Sax. I thought I was quicker than I was."

Sax homered in the ninth inning for the only Dodger run and their second hit. Ken Landreaux had singled leading off the seventh to break Sutton's no-hit spell and snap a hitless Dodger drought that lasted 161-3 innings.

Sutton, 31, said he should have known better than to offer Sax a fastball, but was still thinking about a no-hitter.

"I even thought about it last night and when I came to the park today," Sutton said. "Then, when things started off right, I thought maybe this would be my day."

Ryan's 5-0 no-hitter Saturday, incidentally, was a record fifth for his career, breaking a tie with Sandy Koufax.

Sutton struck out nine, while pitching his ninth career two-hitter.

The victory allowed the Astros to maintain their 1 1/2-game lead over Cincinnati in the NL West.

The Astros scored their first run in 262-3 innings off Dodger ace Fernando Valenzuela, 13-6, on Terry Puhl's sacrifice fly in the third. They pelted Valenzuela for five hits and three more runs in the seventh. The Dodger left-hander walked Jose Cruz to start the inning and Cesar Cedeño doubled before Art Howe and Luis Pujols delivered RBI singles. Dickie Thon later scored the third run on Puhl's single.

Reds 4, Braves 2

Tom Seaver allowed only two hits in five innings and Ken Griffey drove in three runs with a second-inning double, leading Cincinnati over Atlanta. After yielding his only two hits and Atlanta's first run in the first inning, Seaver, 14-2, left the game after straining his right thigh beating out an infield hit in the sixth. He retired 13 straight batters before he was replaced by Mike LaCoss, who earned his first save.

Atlanta's Gaylord Perry, 7-9, failed in a bid for his 297th career victory, allowing eight hits, five of them doubles, in six innings.

Mets 2, Expos 1

Rusty Staub and Ellis Valentine hit run-scoring doubles and Mike Scott tossed a three-hitter over six innings to help New York stop Montreal's seven-game winning streak.

The defeat, combined with the Cardinals' victory, cut the Expos' first place margin to 1 1/2 games in the NL East.

Scott, 5-10, left the game with tightness in his right elbow in the seventh. He was replaced by Neil Allen, who gave up a run-scoring bounce in the ninth to Terry Francona before gaining his 18th save.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead against Steve Rogers, 11-8, in the second when Dave Kingman tripled and scored on Staub's double. Rogers allowed the Mets' second run in the seventh when Lee Mazzilli singled, took second on Alex Trevino's sacrifice bunt and scored on Valentine's double.

Cardinals 7, Pirates 5

Tommy Herr broke out of a 1-for-21 slump with a bases-loaded triple in the fourth inning, leading St. Louis over Pittsburgh. The loss officially eliminated Pittsburgh from the second-half title race in the NL East.

Herr's triple, one of only two Cardinal hits off Pascual Perez, 2-7, followed two walks and an error. Herr then stole home, capping a four-run uprising in support of pitcher Dave LaPoint, making his first NL start. Bruce Sutter gained his 25th save for the Cardinals.

Dave Parker hit a three-run homer for Pittsburgh in the sixth and a two-run double in the eighth.

Phillies 5-0, Cubs 2-14

Bake McBride slugged a three-run homer and a double Steve Carlton pitched a six-hitter as Philadelphia beat Chicago in the first game of their doubleheader. Carlton, 13-4, struck out 11 and turned in his 10th complete game of the season while surrendering solo homers to rookie Ty Waller and Bill Buckner.

Pat Tabler blasted a three-run homer and Ty Waller's bases-loaded triple keyed a seven-run fourth inning to lead the Cubs to victory in the second game. Buckner had two homers for the Cubs in the second game, giving him 10 for the season.

Giants 7, Padres 3

Jack Clark homered and pitcher Doyle Alexander stroked a three-run double to key a six-run fourth inning as San Francisco beat San Diego. Alexander, 10-7, scattered 10 hits in 62-3 innings to help the Padres conclude their 1981 home season with a five-game losing streak.

The game was tied 1-1 when the Giants staged their fourth-inning rally, sending 11 men to the plate against Chris Welsh, 6-7, and reliever Dan Boone.

"I drove in as many runs as I gave up and I even scored an extra one — so it worked out all right," said Alexander.

Chicago Faces Rams Tonight

CHICAGO (AP) — Coach Neill Armstrong admits he may be wrong, but he doesn't believe his Bears will have to worry about Dan Pastorini when Chicago plays host to the Los Angeles Rams tonight in the National Football League.

The Rams and Bears, both with 1-2 records, are expected to meet before 64,000 in addition to a national television audience.

Both teams finally made the win column last week when the Rams came from behind for a 35-23 victory over Green Bay and the Bears rallied for a 28-17 triumph against Tampa Bay.

Quarterback Pat Haden left the Green Bay game in the second quarter with a rib cage injury and was relieved by Jeff Rutledge, whose 30-yard touchdown pass to Drew Hill finally put the Rams ahead 21-16.

Haden has been working out since Wednesday but if he is unable to play, Rutledge will be his backup despite the fact the Rams signed Pastorini, veteran quarterback formerly with Oakland and Houston, on Friday.

Armstrong does not expect Pastorini to play for various reasons.

"It would be awful hard to play him unless they just put him in and tell the receivers to run go-patterns," Armstrong said. "I may live to eat my words, but I don't think he's our concern."

Some veteran Bears wouldn't mind seeing Rutledge again. He started for the Rams in 1978 when Haden and Vince Ferragamo both were injured. Ferragamo has since left the team to play in Canada.

Rutledge helped the Rams to leads of 16-0 and 23-14 before the Bears rallied for a 27-23 victory after picking off two of his passes.

But Rutledge and an aroused defense were instrumental in Los Angeles' victory over Green Bay following losses to Houston and New Orleans.

"We played with intensity, that's the important thing," Rams Coach Ray Malavasi said. "We still turned the ball over, and it put a little bit more pressure on our defense, but I still thought we played an outstanding game."

The Bears also had been seeking an emotional lift after initial losses to Green Bay and San Francisco.

Prior to the Tampa Bay game, the players held a meeting among themselves, and later in the week, they requested and received a meeting with owner George Halas, the pro football pioneer who coached the team to its last championship in 1963.

It paid off. An intercepted pass by Gary Gencik led to one touchdown. Jeff Fisher's 88-yard punt return resulted in another. Quarterback Vince Evans ran for another score and hit Dave Williams with 18-yard scoring strike.

The Bears lost the services of tackle Dennis Lick, who is out for the rest of the season following knee surgery. He will be replaced by Dan Jiggetts or rookie Keith Van Horne.

Five Arraigned After Anti-Apartheid Protest

NEW YORK (AP) — Four women and one man have been arraigned on assault charges for allegedly throwing bottles containing a mace substance at police during an anti-apartheid protest of the South African Springboks rugby team.

The controversial team arrived here from Albany Sunday where they had played an American team. For security reasons, airport and police officials declined to say when the Springboks planned to leave the country but it was believed to be sometime today.

Thomas Selfridge, president of the Eastern Rugby Union, sponsor of the three-game tour, said that when the Springboks left their Albany hotel they were "on their way home."

Twenty-six people — 24 policemen and two airport security guards — were slightly injured during the Saturday melee with some 60 demonstrators at Kennedy International Airport, according to Tom McCarthy, spokesman for Queens District Attorney John Santucci.

Port Authority Policeman Evan Goostein was blinded when protesters hurled bottles containing a mixture of battery acid, mace, ammonia and vinegar at a jetliner believed to be carrying the rugby team, Santucci's spokesman said.

The demonstrators arrived at the airport after police erroneously said the team was expected to depart on a South African airliner.

The five charged with assault Sunday were identified as Timothy A. Blunk, 24, of Martinsville, N.J., Donna Bourup, 29, of Brooklyn, Eva Rosahn, 30, of Chicago, Ill., Mary Patten, 30, of Chalmersport, Mass., and Margot Pelletier, 29, of Brooklyn.

Queens Criminal Court Judge Cornelius O'Brien ordered them remanded without bail, and set a preliminary hearing for Wednesday.

Sayetta Wins Singles Title

Tom Sayetta defeated Jim Bailey 6-4, 6-0 to win the Men's Over 35 singles championship of the Greenville Tennis Club Tournament.

In the mixed doubles finals, Jim and Karen Akers downed Wes Hankins and Frances Cain 6-3, 6-3.

Sayetta advanced to the finals with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Steve Creech while Bailey moved into the championship match follow a 6-2, 6-4 win over Nelson Staton.

In the mixed doubles semifinals, the Akers defeated Don Ball and Hannah Adams 6-0, 6-3 and Hankins and Cain defeated Creech and Barbara Close 6-3, 6-2.

In a related matter, players interested in competing in the club doubles tournament to be played this weekend should contact Ed Rhem (756-1939) before 9 o'clock tonight.

Joins The CBS Morning Show

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Diane Sawyer joined the expanded CBS News "Morning" show today, adding her name to a long list of song-and-dance types, hillbillies, misplaced night people and journalists who have filled the set over more than a quarter century.

"The Morning Show" began in early 1954. To this generation of viewers, it would seem strange to be awakened by Walter Cronkite, but he was the show's first host. Dave Garroway had the chimpanzee J. Fred Muggs on NBC's "Today," until Fred was fired for biting a guest; Cronkite had the Baird Puppets. The real star was Charlemagne the Lion.

This wasn't Cronkite's best side, and Jack Paar took over that summer. His cast included Charles Collingwood to read the news and Pupi Campo and his Orchestra to do other things. On the staff was an eager young writer named Barbara Walters and a summer substitute named Johnny Carson.

Paar seemed blinded by the light and left for "Tonight." In came Dick Van Dyke in 1955. His regulars included Merv Griffin, who sang more and talked less back then. Will Rogers Jr. came through the revolving door in 1956. He was an aw-shucks type who's doing apple commercials today. Country-and-western singer Jimmy Dean replaced Rogers for a brief time in 1957.

Corporne didn't go over big in the ratings, and the variety-show concept was scrapped for the "CBS Morning News" in 1957. It was anchored for a year by Richard C. Hottelet, who now finds peace and serenity as CBS' United Nations correspondent.

CBS got out of the wake-up business for five years, although a midmorning "Calendar" show arrived in 1961 with Harry Reasoner as part of CBS' first co-ed team. Since CBS News correspondents don't read commercials, Mary Fickett, now a soap opera regular on "All My Children," became Reasoner's Ed McMahon. Miss Fickett did the interviews Reasoner refused, like the guy who caught Roger Maris' 61st home run.

In 1963, CBS re-entered the morning market. This time the tact was to tackle "Today" with hard news. Over the next 10 years came: the "CBS Morning News ... With Mike Wallace," which he called "the worst three years of my life" ... "With Joseph Benti," who left — or was pushed out — to write a novel in Denmark, and ...

"With John Hart," now at NBC.

CBS' biggest morning fiasco came in 1973, when Washington Post style writer Sally Quinn joined correspondent Hughes Rudd. CBS, looking for an answer to Miss Walters at "Today," wanted some sweet to Rudd's sour. But Miss Quinn knew nothing about television.

Fans at sporting events wave at the camera's red light; Miss Quinn said she didn't know that red meant go. After four months, Rudd went solo and she had ammunition for her book: "We're Going to Make You a Star."

In 1975, CBS returned to tandems: Rudd and Bruce Morton for two years and Rudd and Lesley Stahl for one month before Rudd defected to ABC. Miss Stahl and Richard Threlkeld worked together in 1979, until Bob Schieffer replaced them on the newly titled "Morning."

A new era began in late 1980. Charles Kuralt stopped looking for hitchhikers and checked into the studio. It didn't help. "Morning" still gets badly beaten by the new "Good Morning America" on ABC and the reliable "Today" show, which has only had four male anchor changes in 30 years.

Now it's up to Kuralt-Sawyer to uphold two decades of tradition. They seem capable as journalists, but can they sing and dance?

Presley Doctor Going On Trial

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jury selection begins Tuesday in the state Criminal Court trial of Dr. George Nichopoulos, who is accused of illegally prescribing drugs for the late rock idol Elvis Presley and 10 other patients.

Nichopoulos was a close friend of Presley and served as the entertainer's personal physician for 11 years, often traveling with him on tours.

Presley's death in 1977 was blamed on heart disease, but reports the 42-year-old singer was addicted to drugs including amphetamines, barbiturates and painkillers sparked an investigation of Nichopoulos' medical practice.

Nichopoulos, 53, faces 14 counts of illegally prescribing drugs to the 11 patients.

The state Board of Medical Examiners suspended Nichopoulos' license to practice medicine for 90 days after a week-long hearing in January 1980 on professional misconduct charges resulting from investigations into the drug allegations.

The internist is accused of writing hundreds of prescriptions so Presley could obtain drugs such as codeine in huge amounts.

Nichopoulos also is accused of providing similar prescriptions for other patients, including entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis.

During the 1980 medical board hearing, witnesses testified Presley took pills constantly — to wake up, for energy during the day and to sleep at night.

Dr. Jerry Francisco, the state medical examiner, ruled that Presley died of heart trouble.

The autopsy, however, never has been made public, and attempts to introduce testimony from the pathologist who performed the autopsy were blocked by legal technicalities during the professional hearing.

The dinners, sponsored by Mendenhall Student Center and the ECU School of Music, feature the food, music, revelry, dance and traditions of early 17th century England.

Period Christmas music is performed by the ECU Madrigal Singers, directed by Dr. Charles W. Moore of the ECU music faculty, along with the Collegium Musicum, a Renaissance music ensemble.

Guests are served roast beef dinners by costumed "servants," while strolling minstrels, poets, tumblers and magicians provide entertainment of the Elizabethan period.

Each evening's festivities begin at 7 p.m. as guests enter and are introduced by the Lord Chamberlain.

Guest tickets are $12 each and are available from the ECU Central Ticket Office, telephone: 757-6611. Since tickets are generally sold in large numbers as early as August, persons who wish to attend one of the dinners are advised to reserve their tickets as soon as possible.

Hungarian Communism Has Striking Differences

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer
EDITORS NOTE — The writer was chief of the AP Moscow bureau for more than four years.

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — Pointing to a long line outside a building in central Budapest, a Hungarian friend said: "I want you to know that is not a line for food. They're waiting to get into a pop concert."

In fact, visits to Budapest markets showed food almost going begging for customers. The only voracious buyers appeared to be Polish tourists who had come to stock up.

The physical and ideological differences between the Soviet Union and its relatively prosperous and liberal satellite are stunning.

Hungary is still not the West by far, but neither is it communism as practiced in Moscow.

The differences start at the border with Austria. Toward the end of the tourist season, the wait was only a few minutes. There was a friendly greeting as the border guard took the passports.

A request to open the car's trunk, but only a light pat on one of the suitcases. No search under the hood, behind the back seat or under the car as is usual at Soviet border crossings. No currency or gold jewelry declaration, no car documents demanded.

The highway to Budapest, with nary a pothole, was dotted with gasoline stations, several selling Western brands like Shell or British Petroleum. There was no worry of running out of fuel as in the Soviet Union.

Many Hungarian-owned cars are little Ladas, the trim Soviet-made vehicles which come from a factory set up in the Soviet Union with the help of Italy's Fiat company. Also numerous are East German-made Trants, a small but lively car with a fiberglass body and a two-stroke engine that runs on a mixture of oil and gasoline.

Budapest, with its gracious bridges over the mud-colored Danube, is bulging at its historic seams. While high-rise apartments are constructed around the city's edge, many of the older buildings repaired or rebuilt after World War II are neglected, with stucco falling away to expose bare red brick.

The whole city seems to need a coat of paint, but priorities are elsewhere, for instance in developing agriculture.

The results are impressive. Meat, mostly pork but some beef and fowl, hangs in long rows in public markets. Stalls piled with seasonal vegetables, such as red paprika peppers which find a place in most Hungarian dishes.

Peaches and pears gorge other stalls, although apricots, another Hungarian favorite, were in short supply this year.

No queues as in the Soviet Union for vastly inferior produce.

In the country are state cooperatives with large fields of corn, other cereal grains and sunflowers. But many farmers have small private plots, working 10 percent of the land and harvesting about a third of all Hungarian crops.

Uniformed policemen on the beat or in blue and white cars were hardly to be seen, in sharp contrast to the omnipresent "militiamen" in Moscow.

Western estimates say there are four Soviet armored divisions in Hungary, plus some air force units — more than 60,000 men. Soviet camps near outlying villages are mostly behind walls.

The most visible reminder of the Soviet Union is a massive monument of a woman holding a laurel branch on Citadel Hill overlooking a wide stretch of the Danube in Budapest. An inscription says the monument attests to the gratitude of the Hungarian people for the liberation of Budapest by Soviet forces at the end of the war.

The array of ideological reminders so evident in the Soviet Union are scarce in Hungary. It takes a sharp eye to find a hammer and sickle or a portrait of Lenin.

No giant portraits of the Communist leaders line strategic intersections as in Moscow. Other than a small red star on the Parliament building, that Communist symbol is neglected in Hungary. There is an occasional red flag, but usually hung prominently nearby are the red, white and green Hungarian colors.

Most shops are well supplied with smart dresses, shoes and appliances, but those from the West are out of reach of many Hungarians. Souvenir shops do a brisk business for hard currency.

An elegant pre-war coffee shop, the place to be seen among the elite, caters to well-dressed Hungarians sipping strong coffee and eating calorie-loaded cakes.

One can dine in the splendor of aristocratic times, with black-tailed waiters and Herend porcelain, although most of the Hungarian aristocrats are gone, stripped summarily of their vast land holdings after the war.

Luxury is beyond most Hungarians, many living in cramped apartments and wanting for social services. "But we have food, and that is above all important," they say.

Westerners familiar with the Soviet Union are often startled at the relative well-being evident in this Soviet-bloc country and wonder as they bounce over the black cobblestones on the acacia-lined Budapest streets if it is an illusion.

"It isn't and it's your fault," said a Hungarian journalist. "You listen to your own propaganda too much." Since their revolt was crushed in 1956, Hungarians have peacefully chipped away to liberalize their regime. They are generally free to come and go, and enjoy a growing measure of private ownership and free enterprise.

Will the Polish troubles spill into Hungary? Not a chance, according to several Western diplomats with close contacts with Hungarians in all walks of life.

One Hungarian professional man reflected this feeling when he said: "We think it's time the Poles go back to work, like we do."

Heavy Damage In Accident

A 1:50 a.m. collision Saturday on Darden Drive, 200 feet north of the Fifth Street intersection caused an estimated $5,300 property damage, Police Department investigators reported.

Officers said a car driven by David Lee Langley Jr. of 502B Watauga Ave. collided with a parked car owned by Joyce Claudette Reddick of 505B Darden Dr., causing a chain reaction involving three other parked vehicles.

Owners of the other cars were listed as Dorothy Marie Barnes of 507A Darden Dr. and James Edward Ash of 1308 South Greene St.

Police, who charged Langley with driving under the influence and hit and run driving, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Langley and Barnes cars, $3,000 to the Reddick vehicle, and $300 to one of the Ash vehicles. The other Ash car, officers said, was not damaged.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Sunny weather is expected in the forecast period (until Tuesday) for most of the country. Snow and showers are forecast for the northern Plains. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
High pressure building into North Carolina from the midsection of the nation will continue the trend of dry, cool weather through Tuesday, the National Weather Service reported.

Sunshine and southwest breezes pushed temperatures into the low and mid 80s Sunday with the exception of some 60s and 70s in the mountains. The high of 86 was reported at Cherry Point, Fayetteville and Rocky Mount-Wilson.

Early morning temperatures today were mostly in the 50s in the west and 60s in the east.

The recreational weather outlook called for sunny skies today and Tuesday, with fair weather expected to continue most of the week. Northwest winds were expected to increase today as a new dry air mass begins feeding into the region. Afternoon temperatures will range into the upper 70s and low 80s east of the mountains with 60s and 70s more common in the higher country.

It will be cooler tonight with temperatures dipping into the 40s and low 50s, and it will be slightly cooler on Tuesday with high readings mostly in the 70s.

Nicaragua's Left Still Bitter

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer
MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — One month after a fence-mending visit by the Reagan administration's top Latin American expert, Nicaragua's leftist regime has renewed its bitter criticism of the United States.

U.S. officials believe the latest volley of anti-American rhetoric results from Nicaragua's severe economic crisis and the refusal of the United States to help out.

Officials on both sides agree relations are at an all-time low.

"Apparently there is no effort on their part to improve the situation," said a U.S. official who declined to be identified. He cited the barrage of charges against U.S. "imperialists" trumpeted almost daily by newspapers and radio and TV stations controlled by the ruling Sandinista National Liberation Front.

"The United States does not appear to want relations with us," countered Manuel Espinoza, spokesman for Nicaragua's governing junta.

Moderates on both sides fear total estrangement could drive the Marxist-oriented Sandinista commanders completely into the Soviet-Cuban camp.

Official suspicion of Washington is rooted in the support by U.S. administrations for the Somoza family dictatorship that ruled Nicaragua for 42 years, until Sandinista guerrillas ousted Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

The Carter administration turned against Somoza late in the civil war, The United States became the Sandinista regime's biggest postwar financial backer, delivering $122 million in aid in 18 months. But the rapprochement was short-lived.

The Reagan administration accused Nicaragua of helping funnel Soviet-bloc arms to Marxist guerrillas fighting the U.S.-backed junta in nearby El Salvador. In March, it cut off the $15 million remaining of a $75 million aid package for 1980 and halted additional food assistance and all aid proposed for 1981.

Thomas Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, visited Managua last month and reportedly offered resumption of aid if the Sandinistas would do four things: stop the arms traffic to El Salvador, slow the buildup of their own army, which is double that of any other in Central America, temper their close ties with the Soviet bloc and comply with pledges to give Nicaragua political and economic pluralism.

The Sandinista officials who met with Enders reportedly expressed fear of U.S. intervention. Officials on both sides said the talk was blunt but produced an agreement to refrain from public criticism of each other and meet again in a few months.

That agreement broke down two weeks ago. Junta coordinator Daniel Ortega accused the United States of military adventurism after it was announced that 130 U.S. Marines and five small amphibious craft would join Honduran units in maneuvers off the coast of Honduras near the Nicaraguan border. U.S. officials said the exercises were routine and Ortega had been informed privately about them 10 days earlier.

Last week Ortega denounced the withdrawal of a $7 million U.S. credit, calling it "a new aggression." U.S. officials said the action was a formality covering part of the aid that was suspended in March.

U.S. officials say they believe the renewed attacks reflect the Sandinistas' frustration over their own difficulties at home. Last week they decreed a state of economic emergency, cut government spending, raised taxes on imported goods and imposed stiff penalties for strikes.

Private businessmen, who control 60 percent of the economy, expressed some support for the measures. But they appealed for a resumption of U.S. aid as the best way to head off increasing state control and to encourage production.

The departure last month of U.S. Ambassador

Lawrence Pezzullo, at his own request, added to the Sandinistas' uncertainty about the Reagan administration. He was a Carter appointee they respected, and they credited him with keeping open a dialogue between them and Washington. The administration has not announced a replacement.

FUTURE ASSURED — Miguel de la Madrid Hurtado, Mexico's minister of budget and planning, was named 1982 presidential candidate of the governing Revolutionary Institutional Party Friday. The selection virtually assures his election next July for a six-year term as president. (AP Laserphoto)

Thirty Nations

ECU News Bureau
Thirty nations are represented among the 13,264 students enrolled at East Carolina University during the fall semester. ECU's foreign students represent other nations from five continents.

According to the registrar's office, ECU has a total of 58 countries who list their home addresses in these foreign countries:

Belgium, Bolivia, Canada, China (Taiwan), Costa Rica, El Salvador, Ethiopia, France, Germany, Greece, India, Indonesia, Iran, Ireland, Japan, Kenya, Korea, Kuwait, Lebanon, Nigeria, Norway, South Africa, Thailand, Turkey, Uganda, United Kingdom, British Hong Kong and Singapore, Bangladesh and Guyana.

The registrar's list does not include those students born in other nations who have become citizens or permanent residents of the U.S.

Unions Concerned Over Pricing Selves Jobless

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — American union members, worried about pricing their bosses out of business and themselves out of jobs, increasingly are swallowing pay cuts or wage freezes.

Wayne Horvitz, former director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, says the combination of increasing business woes and the desire for job security is causing the unusual round of wage concessions.

"I think there's probably more of a long-term trend here than we give it credit for," he said.

The latest to accept a wage cut was the 20,000-person workforce of Pan American World Airways, which is struggling to stay solvent. Autoworkers and Teamsters are likely to accept lesser contracts in order to help their industries stay competitive.

"We call it the Chrysler syndrome, and we view it as a very serious threat," says Thomas Russow of the United Food and Commercial Workers. "There's got to be some assurances that if these concessions are made, we have some kind of job security."

"Unfortunately," he says, "everyone seems to be jumping on the bandwagon."

The trend is sure to please the Reagan administration, which believes that big wage settlements hinder the fight to tame inflation.

Since the auto and trucking contracts are the largest to be negotiated in 1982, wage concessions are sure to dominate the year's labor contracts.

Auto companies want the United Auto Workers to moderate its wage demands to help the Big Three manufacturers compete with the Japanese, which enjoy lower labor costs.

Nearly 120,000 truckers have been laid off because of rising non-union competition among freight haulers arising from deregulation of the industry.

The national trucking contracts do not expire until March 31, but Teamsters leaders have agreed to early negotiations on a new pact which is drawn to avoid further competitive erosion among the unionized firms.

No one expects the large auto and trucking contracts to cut as deeply as the new agreement Pan Am forged with its employees — a 10 percent pay cut. Airline spokesman James A. Arey said the wage concessions, which run through 1982, are expected to save Pan Am $200 million. Employees hope this will help Pan Am stay afloat.

The Pan Am situation is far from unique.

Members of more than a dozen unionized employees of Consolidated Rail Corp. have approved wage concessions in the range of $200 million to save the federally subsidized Conrail.

Leaders of the United Rubber Workers approved a concession in a contract involving employees at Goodyear Tire & Rubber's

Topeka, Kan., plant, in which union members will work weekends without premium pay.

Several unions at the Philadelphia Bulletin accepted major contract concessions with management to pump new revenue into the afternoon newspaper, which is striving to remain afloat.

And a new pact between Pulitzer Publishing Co. and 11 production and editorial unions at the St. Louis Post Dispatch includes an 18-month wage freeze.

Douglas Fraser, president of the UAW, expects his union "will seek a guaranteed right of employment" in its new contract with General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., which have said they expect concessions similar to those the union granted to Chrysler Corp.

"I don't see it as being widespread," said John Zalusky of the AFL-CIO's economic research department. "If employees are sincerely convinced that a firm is in trouble... workers will do that to protect their jobs." He said "management militancy" is responsible for part of the trend.

Ed Snyder, a spokesman for Ford, said, "I think the general consensus at Ford, if not the total auto industry, is that as profitability fell, wages did not fall. I think everyone realizes that this is not a cyclical thing we're going through."

Building Became Pile Of Rubble

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The 14-story Independence Building in Charlotte vanished Sunday into a 25-foot pile of rubble seconds after demolition experts sounded sirens announcing the destruction.

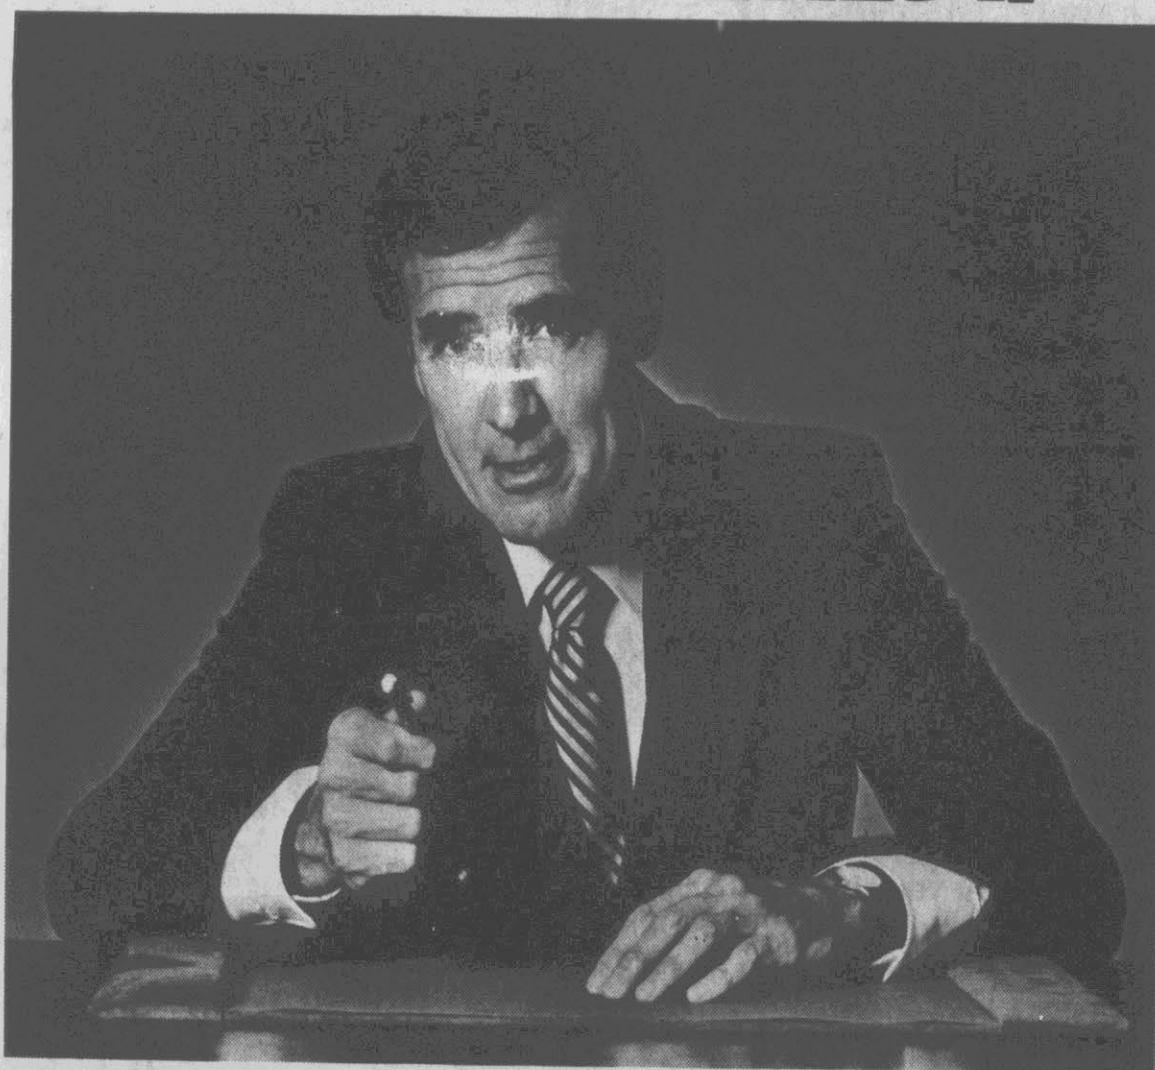

North Carolina's first steel-framed skyscraper will be replaced by Independence Center, an office, retail and hotel complex.

"It came down better than I thought," said Loizeaux, vice president of Controlled Demolitions Inc. "I'm really happy."

The remains, about 15,000 cubic yards of debris, will be hauled to City Salvage 1, a scrap metal yard. Some 500 tons of steel is salvagable. The rest will be buried.

REFORESTATION
PEKING (AP) — China is calling on its 1 billion citizens to plant and nurture three to five trees each year for five years in a major reforestation campaign.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, SEPT. 29, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day to avoid getting into disputes with associates since long-term alienations could take place. Go to the right sources to obtain facts and figures regarding a new project.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sure you do nothing that could harm your reputation today. A higher-up is upset now so steer clear of this person.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The work at hand could be boring and you wish to go to new sites, but it's best to finish your duties first. Be logical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't try to avoid your responsibilities at this time. Show more understanding for loved one now and maintain harmony.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Don't try to renege on a promise you've made with an associate. Sidelstep one who opposes you. Be poised.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Do your work efficiently and don't try to overburden a co-worker with tasks that you should do. Become a more friendly person.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't give into a temptation to overspend where amusement is concerned. Discuss important matters with higher-ups.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The situation could be tense at home, but if you relax and pretend all is okay, you find it soon rights itself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Instead of berating co-workers for their mistakes, show them how they can be rectified and all works out fine.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Know exactly what your personal aims are and pursue them in a positive manner. Show that you have character.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day to advance in career activities. Steer clear of the social where arguments could erupt. Use common sense.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't delay doing important work early in the day. Later try to assist a friend who needs your help. Be more generous.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Don't show your ire to a friend who you feel has been working against you since this is not the case. Express happiness.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she should be taught to be more considerate of less fortunate persons, otherwise your progeny could go through life alienating others. Direct the education along trouble-shooting lines for best results.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

ROSH HASHANAH

The Jewish New Year

Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, begins at dusk tonight. Unlike the Gregorian calendar we use, Jews follow a Hebrew calendar which has remained unchanged since 900 A.D. Their beginning year is 3761 B.C., the estimated date of Creation described in the Old Testament. Ancient Jews calculated months by counting the number of days between two full moons and alternating between 29 and 30 days per month. An extra month was tossed in every three years on the basis of a 19-year cycle. But the additional month still left the lunar year 11 days short of the solar year which is 365 days. Rosh Hashanah doesn't always occur on the same day each year because of fluctuating moon patterns. DO YOU KNOW — What is the name of the day of fasting and prayer that concludes the 10-day Jewish observance of the New Year?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The first Amendment to the Constitution guarantees press freedom.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♥6 ♦AKJ5 ♣AKJ8752
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♣ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 3 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—This is no time to dilly-dally. You can assume that partner has the queen of diamonds, so all you are interested in is how many aces he has. Bid four no trump and end in either five, six or seven diamonds, depending on whether partner has no ace, one or two.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q109874 ♥6 ♦KQ10762
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What action do you take?

A.—This may seem unorthodox, but we suggest that you overcall with two diamonds. With such a distributional freak, there should be a lot more bidding on this hand, and you should try to get in your two suits as cheaply as possible. By first overcalling in diamonds and then competing in spades at whatever level the bidding is at when it comes round to you again, you will actually save a level, although your partner may not realize that your suits are equal in length.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK872 ♥KJ ♦73 ♣9872
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's heart rebid in this sequence almost always promises a six-card suit, so you really have pretty good support. We like three hearts. The only alternative is a bid of three clubs in an attempt to reach three no trump. But if partner takes a preference to three spades, you won't know what to do—to correct to four hearts now will suggest a much stronger hand and possibly a singleton diamond.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KJ82 ♥K976 ♦K ♣AKJ9
Your partner opens the bid-

Probe Slaying Of Two Men

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are investigating the slayings of two men whose bodies were found stuffed in a car in rural Randolph County Saturday.

Lt. Don Andrews of the Randolph County Sheriff's Department said the bodies, which still have not been identified, were found with single gunshot wounds in the back of the head.

Both of the victims were white. One appeared to be about 30 years old and the other about 40, Andrews said.

Andrews said there was no evidence of robbery, although he said neither victim had a wallet. He said no motive or suspect had been established.

ding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—In our experience, the best way to describe this type of hand is to flash the slam signal at once. A jump shift is called for, and the obvious suit in which to jump is clubs. We can't think of any bid other than three clubs.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J8 ♥AKQ62 ♦K63 ♣A83
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Now that partner has responded freely at the three-level, you want to be in game. A raise to three diamonds doesn't do your hand justice, and a jump rebid in hearts on a five-card suit is against our religion. The most viable option is to make a waiting bid of three clubs—partner's next bid should clear up his holding.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A83 ♥J65 ♦AQ107 ♣1092
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 1 ♠ 2 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—To be sure, you hold a very fine supporting hand and slam could easily be in the cards. But you have already shown a decent hand by bidding freely at the two-level, and your square distribution is a liability. Raise to four hearts. For slam to be a good bet, partner must make the next move. What we dislike about a spade cue-bid is that it suggests a more unbalanced hand.

Lawsuit Seeks $101.5 Million

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A Savannah longshoreman whose feet were torn off in a dockside accident, then reattached only to be amputated, has filed suit seeking $101.5 million in damages.

Johnny Ward, 32, lost his feet in May when a steel cable snapped off a winch and whipped around his legs just above the ankles.

The suit, filed Friday in Superior Court, seeks $75 million in punitive damages, in addition to reimbursement for lost wages and medical expenses. Among the defendants named are the Georgia Ports Authority and the International Longshoremen's Association.

Bennington College Still Sails Against The Wind

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer
BENNINGTON, Vt. (AP) — When Bennington College publications director Tyler Resch was asked how the school would celebrate its 50th anniversary this year, he looked almost bewildered, as if any poor soul who could ask such a thing didn't understand what this experimental, avant garde college is all about.

"Part of the Bennington thing," he explained patiently, "is we don't have pep songs, school colors, football teams, no prizes, no grades. To mark that occasion would be, well..."

Not the Bennington thing. What Bennington is, and is not, continues after 50 years to bemuse even insiders.

It is probably best known these days as "the most expensive college in the country" — with total costs at $12,030 a year.

But caricatures also have portrayed it as a far-out, unruly school where "easy" women and gay men gather in a sheltered Vermont paradise to study art and immortality, and come out with an "easy B.A."

"I've heard all those stories," said President Joseph S. Murphy, who plans to leave in June after six years as the school's head. "My hunch is there's probably as much deviance at Bennington as there is in the U.S. Congress, the American Civil Liberties Union and the Moral Majority."

Avant garde Bennington certainly is — from course offerings in black music to lunch offerings consisting of fare like Tofu loaf and eggplant casserole.

But frivolous it most certainly is not. Two freshman women were spotted joking and giggling on the way to their first classes of the new school year. They stood out like sore thumbs. Bennington is, above all, deadly, deadly serious.

"We have very intense people here," says Alice T. Miller, head of the Office of Student Affairs. "Boy, I mean it's tough stuff. They're really expected to perform."

"Bennington women are very neurotic," James Offenhardt, a senior studying literature and printmaking was telling friends one recent evening. "Very aggressive, very assertive, very intelligent, very wonderful. The kind of girl you'd love to have as a daughter."

"But not as a wife!" joked sophomore Bridg Capra, and everyone laughed.

What do the 630 students get for $12,030? Why is Bennington so expensive?

"It's very simple," said Murphy. "We have an 8½-to-1 student-to-faculty ratio here. That is virtually twice as rich as at other schools."

Bennington students also have full-time, free psychological counseling.

The floorboards in the $6 million performing arts complex have just thm right spring for dancing — the artistic endeavor Bennington has been most noted for since Martha Hill and Martha Graham revolutionized modern dance here in the 1930s.

Individual attention, both time consuming and expensive, is the school's hallmark; it is apparent from the moment a student applies.

"More personal letters go out of this office, I would guarantee, than any other private college," said Thelma Bullock, an assistant admissions director. "If a kid asks something about our dance program or whatever, we sit down and write a letter."

Even acceptance letters are meticulous and unusually personalized — like this one to a New Jersey woman who entered this Jfall as a freshman:

"Though your song has not yet formed, as you say in one of your poems, it is surely developing; Bennington seems a fine setting in which to continue listening for it, encouraging it, and revising it as it begins to be heard..."

Still, the high cost of a Bennington education means 45 percent of students receive financial aid.

Said Rhea Nowak, an entering freshman from Lexington, Mass.: "A lot of people are very well off, but a lot of people are working their butts off to stay. It's expensive, but it's worth it. Still, it freaks me out the amount of debt I'll be in when I get out of here."

From January through mid-March each year, students spend a "non-resident term" working at jobs related to their studies and career aims. It gives students a taste of working life and four job entries on their resumes.

And sometimes, it leads to irresistible opportunities. In 1942, student Carol Channing left for a "non-resident term" job in a Broadway theater. It proved to be the end of her academic career, and the beginning of stardom.

Playwright and producer-director Elizabeth Swados and socialite Yasmin Aga Khan, both from the class of '73, dancer Kathryn Rosin, class of '65, abstract expressionist painter Helen Frankenthaler, '49, and poet Julia Randall, '45, are among other prominent Bennington alumnae.

The school was all-women until 1969. Men now make up a third of the enrollment.

The lack of formal grades has not kept Bennington grads from finding a welcome at top graduate schools. Recent alumnae are studying medicine at the University of Pennsylvania, law at Johns Hopkins and the University of Chicago and theology at the Harvard divinity school.

Even after graduation, the school sends newsletters to former students about available jobs in their field.

"I think you will not find a place where students are attended to so closely along the way by their mentors as is the case here," said R. Arnold Ricks, dean of studies. "Teachers are supposed to get right down to IT with the student. There is no distance between student and faculty."

That closeness apparently

Ex-VA Chief Expects Worst

CLARKSTON, Ga. (AP) — Former Veterans Administration chief Max Cleland says the Reagan administration's proposed budget cuts will result in "sick veterans being turned away from VA hospitals."

The proposed cut in veterans' medical services "doesn't excite me," Cleland said Sunday before a speech at a suburban Atlanta church. "I'm afraid what we have here is the situation where we are asking the defenders to pay for the increased cost of defense."

The VA proposed last week that a veteran's word no longer be accepted as proof he could not afford hospital care.

The plan, subject to approval by the budget office, would require veterans to reveal their financial status, and would deny free care to patients with family incomes more than $15,000.

Cleland said older veterans would be hit hardest.

"There's more demand for medical care now, particularly from World War II veterans, than there has ever been," he said.

Safety Devices Put On Rides

DALLAS (AP) — The manufacturer of an amusement park gondola that crashed here in 1979, killing one man and injuring 17 others, has agreed to place wind-monitoring devices on the rides so they can be shut off in gusty weather.

Von Roll Ltd. agreed to the measure during a $3.81 million out-of-court settlement with a woman who was paralyzed in the accident.

The incident occurred when one gondola became stuck on a tower and three others plowed into it, sending two of them crashing down. Witnesses said the ride operated in dangerously high winds on the day of the crash, that a safety switch had been purposely deactivated and that the operator did not use the emergency stop button.

CUTTING BACK
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Xerox Corp., which once dominated the plain-paper copying industry, is planning to eliminate a "significant" number of jobs during a restructuring of the company, officials say.

repels as many students as it attracts. Most of the students here think getting conventional grades would be a far easier way to pass through college than at Bennington, where they are expected largely to plan their own education.

"A lot of people who don't understand our grading system think we're getting off easy, but here you not only have an academic responsibility to succeed, but you also have to make an impression on your instructor," said Capra, who designed her own program in speech and social science. "You set your own standards, and that can be a very scary thing," said Sallie Stadler, a junior studying biology and literature.

Half the entering freshmen won't make it through four years at Bennington, an exceptionally high attrition rate that has held relatively constant since the school's founding in 1931.

Students can and do flunk out, said Ms. Miller. Other frequent reasons for leaving include inability to perform academically without being told what to do, a desire to attend a larger university, and an inability to deal with the physical isolation.

If you weren't looking for Bennington College, you'd drive right by it. The campus cannot be seen from Route 67a just north of Bennington town. The entrance is marked only by a small black sign.

Physical isolation goes hand-in-hand with the school's seriousness. At one end of campus a lawn seems to drop off into nothingness and then rises again into the grandeur of the surrounding Green Mountain range.

The students call that juncture "the end of the world."

Bennington has held fast to its experimental image throughout its 50 years, and plans no concessions to changes in the job market that have made engineers more in demand than musicians or dancers, or to the conservatism that has sent some other experimental schools of more recent vintage retreating to "basics."

If anything, Bennington's philosophy has grown purer in its radicalism in the last three years.

In 1978, the school ended the option of "shadow grades," which allowed students to receive traditional letter grade equivalents along with the written evaluations Bennington uses.

The reasoning, said Ricks, was that while there were fears that the lack of grades might hurt students' chances of being accepted at graduate schools, "we thought having a dual system of evaluation cheapened both."

The atmosphere is radical for teachers as well. There are no titles here — no assistant professors, no full professors, just people referred to by first names. Current faculty members include novelists Bernard Malamud and Nicholas Delbanco, poet Ben Bellitt and composer Vivian Fine. Along with dancers Hill and Graham, past teachers include poet W.H. Auden and philosopher Eric Fromm.

"It really is funny how those titles can create domination and submission," said Murphy. "When you do away with those it contributes to an egalitarianism that you can't have with them."
