

It's Only A Cube

MAKES YOU FEEL LIKE A — This picture is for all those people who have felt they were making a monkey out of themselves trying to solve the riddle of Rubik's cube. This rhesus monkey, a resident of the Great Adventure amusement park in southern New

Trillion-Dollar U.S. Debt Limit Pondered In Senate

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., today ended his marathon protest of a bill to raise the nation's debt limit over $1 trillion and at mid-morning yielded the Senate floor after 16 hours of virtually non-stop talking.

"At least I have made a record on what I think is a great watershed in our history," he said.

Proxmire, as he had promised he would, relinquished the floor at 10:27 a.m. EDT rather than delay consideration of the debt ceiling measure, which is needed to allow the government to pay its bills in the fiscal year that begins at 12:01 a.m. Thursday.

He said he would offer an amendment to hold the debt limit to $995 billion, requiring $60 billion to $70 billion in additional spending cuts or a tax increase.

Proxmire began his talkathon about 6:15 p.m. Monday, saying, "It is a clear responsibility that we go into painstaking detail" before pushing the debt limit over the trillion-dollar mark for the first time in history.

Through the night and into the morning, he railed to a near-empty chamber against the legislation sought by the Reagan administration.

But unlike filibusters in the past aimed at blocking or slowing action, Proxmire said he would not try to use the tactic to prevent an expected vote on the bill.

The debt limit bill, already approved by the House, must be sent to President Reagan's desk by Wednesday night to keep the government from losing its authority to borrow.

The new ceiling of $1.079 trillion would apply for the fiscal year that begins Thursday. The current debt limit is $985 billion.

Proxmire legislative assistant Ronald Tammen said Monday night that the senator wanted "to draw attention to the bill by discussing the economic consequences of going over a trillion dollars, without at the same time disrupting the federal government by holding up this bill."

Proxmire said he would relinquish the floor today, allowing the Senate to resume consideration of an amendment by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., that would give President Reagan the power to withhold appropriated funds, subject to a congressional veto.

A similar proposal to give the president such "impoundment" power, however, attracted no support in the House.

Administration supporters, however, hope to defeat all amendments so the Democratic-dominated House will not have another crack at the bill. It would have to go back to the House if any amendments were added.

"There is real doubt, at this late date, whether the House would again muster the votes to increase the debt limit," Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told the Senate.

Three amendments were rejected Monday. They would have:

—Required the president to consult with the Federal Reserve Board in an effort to reduce interest rates within 90 days;

—Trimmed tax deductions for business lunches by 30 percent, with the proceeds going for school lunch programs;

—Postponed individual income tax cuts until the federal budget is balanced.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said it might take "a very serious battle" to keep the bill clear of amendments. Another Republican source said the administration was worried most about politically appealing amendments to restore minimum Social Security benefits and approve interfund borrowing to strengthen the Social Security fund. It was uncertain, however, whether such amendments would be offered.

The Treasury Department, meanwhile, postponed a $9 million weekly auction of three- and six-month Treasury bills that would have pushed the federal debt over the existing limit.

The limit was increased by $50 billion in February, the 33rd time it had been raised since 1970. Republicans, who had criticized past debt limit increases as symbols of runaway government spending, found themselves getting the same criticism from Democrats despite administration pledges to rein in expenditures.

Baker said Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told him the government would have approximately $19 billion in cash as of Thursday morning and that obligations due that day would take $8 billion of it. Checks to be issued over the next three days would consume more than the remaining $11 billion, he said.

"On Monday, Oct. 5, the Treasury would exhaust its cash balances, and any outstanding checks would not be honored when they were presented for collection, for the first time in the history of the government of the United States," Baker told the Senate.

Baker said final Senate action is expected tonight. No votes were scheduled between 5 p.m. Monday and 7 p.m. Tuesday in deference to Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year.

Comparisons Shunned In Awaited Defense Booklet

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure to make further cuts in military spending, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger today released a well illustrated, 99-page booklet on Soviet military strength.

The report, however, adds little to existing knowledge of the Soviet Union's might.

While its figures on the growing Soviet arsenal for the most part mirror earlier assessments, Weinberger said in an introduction that an understanding of the Soviet Union's strength "is essential to the shaping and maintenance of effective U.S. and allied armed forces."

The booklet's message of a growing Soviet threat, echoing earlier administration statements, comes amid new sentiment from some congressmen for cuts in military spending beyond the $13 billion President Reagan has called for in the fiscal 1982-1984 budgets.

Weinberger, asked at a news conference that was broadcast live to Europe what he expected Europeans to gain from the report, said he hoped the booklet would show both them and Americans that "there is a very real and growing threat."

"It is not scare talk. It is not propaganda of any sort," he said. "It requires action on the part of all of us to meet this threat."

Weinberger also said the release of the report was not related to budget decisions in Congress or upcoming presidential decisions. "The timing does not have anything to do with anything except this is the time we finally finished it," he said.

He said the project was done because NATO defense ministers had asked to present to the public the "substance" of classified U.S. briefings on Soviet strength. He said it then took some time to work out what would be declassified, noting the report contained the first graphic depictions of several Soviet weapons.

"This is not designed to do anything other than its stated purpose ... to present as factually as possible the nature and extent of the Soviet buildup," Weinberger said.

Weinberger said last week that even the president's latest cuts hit "vital areas" and that congressmen calling for greater decreases "were wrong and tragically wrong."

The Defense Department booklet does not contain a specific comparison of U.S.-Soviet military strength. It does contain a profusion of charts, photographs of Soviet weaponry, and even dramatic color paintings showing huge Tupolev jets swooping across the skies, tanks grinding along, and missiles aloft with paths projected to the United States.

The charts and illustrations document a growing Soviet military machine — particularly in aircraft production and deployment of nuclear warheads — but most of the figures are from earlier U.S. assessments or from groups such as the International Institute for Strategic Studies in London.

The newest information seems to be that the Soviets now have 250 medium-range SS-20 missiles with 750 warheads deployed worldwide, including 175 missiles carrying 525 warheads opposite NATO countries in Europe. An assessment last January put the number of SS-20s at 180 worldwide, with 110 deployed toward NATO countries.

However, Richard N. Perle, an assistant defense secretary, had revealed the newer figures last week during a discussion of nuclear forces in Europe.

Perle said at the time that deployment of 572 cruise and Pershing II missiles by NATO countries is on schedule with the first deployment expected next year.

The booklet also says the Soviets are producing about 1,000 fighter aircraft yearly and have deployed an additional 1,000 long-range strategic nuclear warheads in the last year. Neither figure goes beyond assessments as of January.

Plans for U.S. defense production remain uncertain, meanwhile, awaiting presidential decisions on such key questions as deployment of the MX missile and resuming production of the B-1 bomber, which former President Carter halted in 1977. Announcements on these weapons systems are expected soon, perhaps later this week.

Following are assessments of Soviet strength from the new booklet and comparable figures for U.S. forces from various earlier reports.

—Manpower: Soviet ground forces total 1.8 million. The Institute for Strategic Studies uses this figure specifically for the Soviet army, noting it includes 1.4 million draftees, and puts total Soviet military manpower at about 3.7 million, not including internal security and construction troops. Defense Department figures list U.S. army strength at 773,000 and total military manpower as just over 2 million.

—Nuclear warheads: The Soviets have about 7,000 nuclear warheads in their intercontinental strategic arsenal. The comparable U.S. figure is about 9,200 warheads.

—Tanks and artillery: The Soviet Union has 50,000 tanks and 22,000 artillery pieces. U.S. strength is put at 11,000 tanks and 5,600 artillery pieces.

—Aircraft: The booklet says more than 3,500 Soviet and Warsaw pact technical bombers and fighters are in Eastern Europe. Earlier assessments put total Soviet conventional aircraft at almost 9,000 and U.S. craft at 6,400. However, the United States has the edge in helicopters, 7,800 to 5,200.

—Ships: Here the Soviets clearly win the numbers game, with the booklet listing about 1,700 ships and earlier reports putting the U.S. fleet at 450.

Labor Force Summary

Information released by the Employment Security Commission indicates the Greenville civilian labor force, estimated at 55,810 in July, grew by an estimated 5,420 from mid-May.

Total employment increased by 4,520, due primarily to a seasonal gain in agriculture of 3,550 people.

Total employment in Pitt and Green Counties was estimated at 3,430 in mid-July, up 910 from the mid-May figures.

The local unemployment rate in July was 6.1 percent, parallel with the state rate of 6.1 percent, but falling below the national unadjusted rate of 7.3 percent.

Pitt and Greene County breakdowns of the labor force for the month of July was as follows:

	Pitt County	Greene County
Civilian Labor Force	47,200	8,610
Employment, total	44,290	8,090
Unemployment, total	2,910	520
Unemployment rate	6.2	6.0

Caught In A Combine

FARMER KILLED IN ACCIDENT — A Winterville man died Monday afternoon from injuries he received after his leg became caught in the auger of a corn combine. According to Medical Examiner Stan Harris, Clyde M. Hines, of 214 Sylvania St., died of crushing injuries he received to his right leg about 4:30 p.m., when he tried to dislodge weeds caught in the auger. Harris said Hines died at the scene. The accident occurred off old N.C. 11 just outside the Winterville town limits. Haig Reports No Progress In Talks

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Despite nine hours of talks, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said today that he and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko failed to make any progress in reducing tensions between the two superpowers. But they agreed to try again early next year.

The two officials met for five hours Monday, following a four-hour session last Wednesday. The first meeting produced agreement to begin arms control talks Nov. 30 in Geneva. After the second meeting, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said they covered "the full range of international and bilateral issues" and "agreed to continue their discussions early next year."

The spokesman said the next meeting would probably be held in Geneva.

Asked if the talks had led to a reduction of tensions, Haig said, "No I don't think so. I think the period ahead will have to reflect whether or not these discussions will have made a substantial contribution."

During an appearance on NBC's "Today Show," Haig said there are still "a number of issues that divide us." He declined to single out any one issue as being more important than others in U.S.-Soviet relations, but he noted that the Soviets "have a profound interest in arms control."

The possibility of U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitations was discussed, Haig said, but he declined to speculate whether there might be possibility of formal SALT negotiations next year. A Defense Department official said last week that such talks were a possibility.

While he said little or no progress had been made in reducing specific U.S.-Soviet tensions, Haig said he thinks the talks served a useful purpose.

"We had a whole host of areas of intense disagreement between the two powers and we had an opportunity to explore the basis of all those issues," he said.

Haig also indicated that he made clear to Gromyko during both meetings that Soviet intervention in Poland would have "profound and long-lasting consequences."

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

TENT APPEAL

Edith Davenport of 217 Kendall Court has asked Hotline to appeal for camping tents that Pitt County Girl Scouts need to go on a Council-wide camping trip Oct. 16-18. "We need six or seven tents and would like to have the use of them about a week prior to the event," she said.

Anyone willing to loan a tent is asked to call 756-4730 or 752-2801.

BABY LASSITER FEEDBACK

Donnie Lassiter Jr., appealed for in Hotline recently, continues critically ill in Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. The two-month-old was to undergo heart surgery today to correct a heart valve malformation that is unrelated to the white blood cell disorder that threatens his life. Doctors in Boston still have hopes of using a bone marrow transplant at some time in the near future when he's strong enough. Hotline has been asked about how to contact the baby's parents, Donnie and Dot Lassiter, by mail in Boston. Because they're shuttling from Mass General to Children's Hospital, it seems best that mail for them be sent to Lassiter's sister, Ruth Umphlett's mailing address. She says she will forward it promptly. Her address is P.O. Box 1035, Winterville, N.C. 28590.

Foreign Markets Are Encouraged By Wall Street

By The Associated Press
Reassured by Wall Street's performance, the London and Tokyo stock markets made strong recoveries today from a worldwide nosedive that caused financial turmoil.

The Japanese market gained back most of its losses, recording its biggest one-day rise after its worst single-day decline in history Monday. The Nikkei Dow Jones index of 225 major stocks recovered 278.94 of the 302.84 points it lost Monday.

In London, brokers raised prices sharply as soon as the market opened. General Electric, one of the hardest hit stocks in a two-week slump, rose nearly 7 percent, from $11.52 to $12.31, in the first five minutes of hectic trading.

"After the panic rush to get out on Monday, it looks like a panic scramble to get back in today," said one London broker.

In Hong Kong, however, an attempted rally failed and the Hang Seng Index dropped 27.06 more points after falling 105.75 Monday to 1,245.26, its lowest level of the year.

The selling wave that hit Tokyo and London struck New York for the first 30 minutes of trading Monday, but the American market soon stabilized in heavy trading and surged to post substantial gains on the day.

Stock prices around the globe were under pressure in part because of concern over whether the United States budget deficit can be controlled to help ease interest rates, analysts said. There was also uncertainty over Britain's ailing economy, the threat of recession in several countries, and a dire prediction by American market analyst Joseph Granville.

In London, where stocks have been sliding for two weeks, prices plummeted Monday and about $6.4 billion in the value of stocks was wiped out of investors' accounts. The London Financial Times index of 30 industrials dropped 17.2 points Monday to close at 457.5 after being down nearly 30 points during the session.

Gavyn Davies, chief economist at Simon and Coates in London, likened the decline to a "free-fall without a parachute."

Prices also fell Monday in the Zurich, Paris, Singapore, Frankfurt and Sydney markets.

It appeared the debacle might include Toronto, but the 300 stocks in its composite index rallied and the measure closed up 42.96 points at 1855.44—recouping an early loss of 54.48 points.

In New York, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell more than 14 points at the opening, then overcame that loss and by the end of the day had gained 18.55 points to 842.56—its best daily gain since March 25, when it rose 19.09 points.

The market value index at the American Stock Exchange, off more than 7 points in early trading Monday, rose 9.03 points to 285.79. The New York Stock Exchange's composite index gained 1.47 to 66.43. NYSE volume was 61.32 million shares, compared with 54.39 million Friday.

President Reagan, whose latest spending cuts are projected to leave a $43.1 billion deficit in the fiscal year beginning Thursday, discounted any relation between his programs and the market's actions.

"Any attempt to tie the fluctuations of the market to anything we were doing is a little far-fetched," he said Monday.

Some investors gave Granville considerable credit for helping convince investors to sell. While touring in Europe last week, he predicted huge price declines on markets there and in the United States, forecasting a "blue Monday" this week and one of the worst sessions on record.

Granville, interviewed early today on the ABC news program "Nightline," conceded he was "absolutely dead wrong in New York" on Monday's trading but insisted the international financial markets were headed downward eventually.

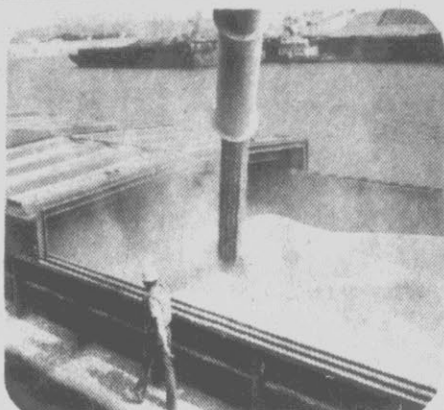

He said it doesn't matter "if one piece of furniture gets burned down on a Monday, and something else does not get burned down until the following Wednesday ... It doesn't change the fact that the house is burning down."

Granville became famous in January when his "sell everything" alarm triggered frenzied selling and contributed to a 23-point stock market tailspin.

Some of the morning selling in New York on Monday was believed to reflect margin calls to investors who had purchased stock with a down payment of 50 percent and a loan from their brokers to cover the rest. If the price of the stock purchased on the margin drops substantially, the lender asks the investor to put up additional money or collateral. Otherwise the stock must be sold.

Russians and Grain

The United States and the Soviet Union are extending their grain sales pact which was to have expired today. Ironically, the Soviet Union relies heavily on American grain imports even though it's the world's leading wheat producer. Although 74 percent of Russian land is unsuitable for farming, its arable land is still equivalent in area to the entire U.S. That is because Russia is more than double the size of our country. Despite their size advantage, the Soviets consume more than they produce. When their wheat crop failed in 1972, they were forced to purchase millions of extra tons of U.S. grain to avoid starving. They've been buying U.S. grain regularly ever since.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the third-leading producer of wheat after the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.? MONDAY'S ANSWER — Yom Kippur or the Day of Atonement is the day of fasting and prayer that end the 10-day Jewish observance of the New Year.

Reagan Avers Aid Not 'Key'

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank today that massive foreign aid isn't the key to prosperity for the poor nations of the world.

"Unless a nation puts its own financial and economic house in order, no amount of foreign aid will produce progress," Reagan said in prepared remarks.

Reagan spoke before an audience of finance ministers and central bank governors from 141 nations — many Socialist — at the official opening of the annual meeting of the Bank and the Fund.

About 2,000 delegates heard Reagan deliver the speech in the ballroom of the Sheraton Washington Hotel and gave him polite applause at its conclusion. About 13,000 delegates are attending the conference.

This year's meeting is taking place against a background of unusually bleak forecasts for the world economy, and Reagan made it clear he believes undisciplined economic policies by individual countries are to blame.

"The most important contribution any country can make to world development is to pursue sound economic policies at home," he said.

"Regrettably, many industrial countries, including my own, have not made this contribution in the recent past. We have overspent, overtaxed and overregulated, with the result being slow growth and soaring inflation."

Some delegates here predicted this year's annual Fund-Bank meeting would be stormier than usual because of the general unwillingness of industrialized countries, particularly the United States, to meet the demands of poorer nations.

Whitfield PTO Plans Sale

The Parent-Teacher Organization of G.R. Whitfield School of Grimesland will sponsor a yard sale Saturday from 8 a.m. "until" in front of McRoy's Insurance Agency on Highway 33.

Persons living in the Whitfield School District are urged to donate items for the sale. Contact Mrs. Betsy Wendling, 758-5472, or the school, 752-6614, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. through Thursday.

Representatives of 24 developing nations, meeting over the weekend, said they "deplored the apparent unwillingness of developed countries to pursue policies supportive of international development."

Before today's opening session, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan made it clear the United States planned to place new emphasis at this year's meeting on encouraging a more active private sector role in the developing countries. He also called for greater discipline in the lending operations of the Bank and the Fund.

In his prepared remarks today, Reagan delivered a ringing defense of free enterprise.

"The societies which have achieved the most spectacular, broad-based economic progress in the shortest period of time are not the most tightly controlled, nor necessarily the biggest in size, or the wealthiest in natural resources," he said.

S&L's Reporting Large Losses For 6 Months

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's savings and loan industry, battered by inflation and high interest rates, reported a record loss of $1.5 billion in the first six months of this year, federal regulators said.

That meant about seven of every 10 federally insured savings and loan associations recorded losses in the first six months of this year, according to a report released Monday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

That was about double the proportion suffering losses in the last half of 1980, it said. Savings and loans have been caught in an earnings squeeze by high interest rates and inflation. They have large portfolios of old home mortgages with relatively low interest rates. To attract money, they have had to pay interest on savings at higher rates than they earn on those old mortgages.

In its new report, the bank board, which regulates federally chartered S&Ls, said the average cost of money to savings and loans rose from 9.11 percent during the last six months of 1980 to 10.31

Chevron Is Asking N.C. Drilling Right

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Chevron USA Inc. of Louisiana is seeking federal permits to begin exploratory drilling for oil and gas off the North Carolina coast.

The company wants to work at five sites in the Atlantic Ocean from Carteret to Currituck counties.

The applications, filed with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Wilmington, are the first to be filed by 10 companies that received leases to 47 offshore tracts during a lease sale by the U.S. Interior Department in August.

Warren Wingerter, Chevron's manager of public relations in New Orleans, said in a telephone interview with the News and Observer of Raleigh that the earliest exploration could be scheduled would be February.

State and federal officials said Monday that additional permits would be required and the review process could take several months.

Wingerter said it would take about 140 days of drilling to determine whether a site justified further work and a decision would be made later about commercial production.

The first well in the offshore water, which ranges in depth from 600 to 3,000 feet, is expected to cost about $20 million.

Long-range plants call for a semisubmersible drilling rig — called a "floating" offshore station — with related facilities for exploration, production, storage and transportation.

The company must also receive permits from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Coast Guard. It must also submit detailed reports to the U.S. Geological Survey. North Carolina agencies will be allowed to comment on the projects before approval is final.

Eye Strings On Norwegian Aid

By ERIKA WOLD
Associated Press Writer
OSLO, Norway (AP) — Norway's outgoing Labor government has suggested new rules that would deny Norwegian development aid for projects that could harm the recipient country's environment.

Premier Gro Harlem Brundtland's Cabinet, which yields power to a non-socialist government in early October, did not spell out exactly what sorts of projects it had in mind.

"The initiative ... aims at curbing the general effects of global foreign aid-supported projects in less-developed countries," said an Environment Ministry official.

Such problems, he added, are the concentration of new industry and businesses around cities, luring poor to urban slums and away from the countryside, thus taking peasants from the farms and accelerating rural poverty.

The recommendation, taken after a review of the Labor government's foreign-aid policies, is not binding on the new minority government headed by Kaare Willoch, the Conservative Party's parliamentary leader for 11 years.

It was not known how the Willoch government would view the proposed changes, but a ministry official said there has been "general agreement about these problems" in the Storting, Norway's parliament.

"It is of course up to the countries seeking development aid to give priority to their own development projects," said Inger Pedersen, the Environment Ministry's state secretary. "But Norway should during the 1980s contribute actively to see that these important questions will get the required attention and priority."

She said the recommendation covers bilateral, joint Nordic and larger international aid projects.

Norway's development and international humanitarian aid amounted to almost $526.3 million in 1980. The figure is slightly less than 1 percent of Norway's gross national product, making Oslo one of the world's leading aid-givers in percentage of GNP.

"In the future Norway should not participate in projects which could cause comprehensive or long-lasting damage to the environment and natural resources of developing countries," Miss Pedersen said.

She said the policy recommendation also called for the government to "see to it that state-supported private establishments or investments in such countries are not causing such damage."

Norway and other industrialized countries should seek better international understanding and coordination of the problems in the 1980s, she said.

Thorstein Dreyer, the ministry's information officer, said the policy recommendation was meant to solve social and economic problems caused by increasing environmental and resources problems in developing countries.

"Considerable damage (has been) caused, for instance, to tropical forest areas and grassland, and there has been a fast spread of desert areas, earth erosion and pollution," Dreyer said.

"The social consequences are also extensive," he said. "Damage to the environment and natural resources will only reduce the basis of life for the population, and often the poorest population groups will be hardest hit."

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Add a winter wonderland look to your Christmas tree with these crocheted golden bells, silvery angels and frosty white snowflakes, all designed to be made from cotton crochet thread.

To obtain directions for making the crocheted ornaments, send your request for Leaflet No. C-1079 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

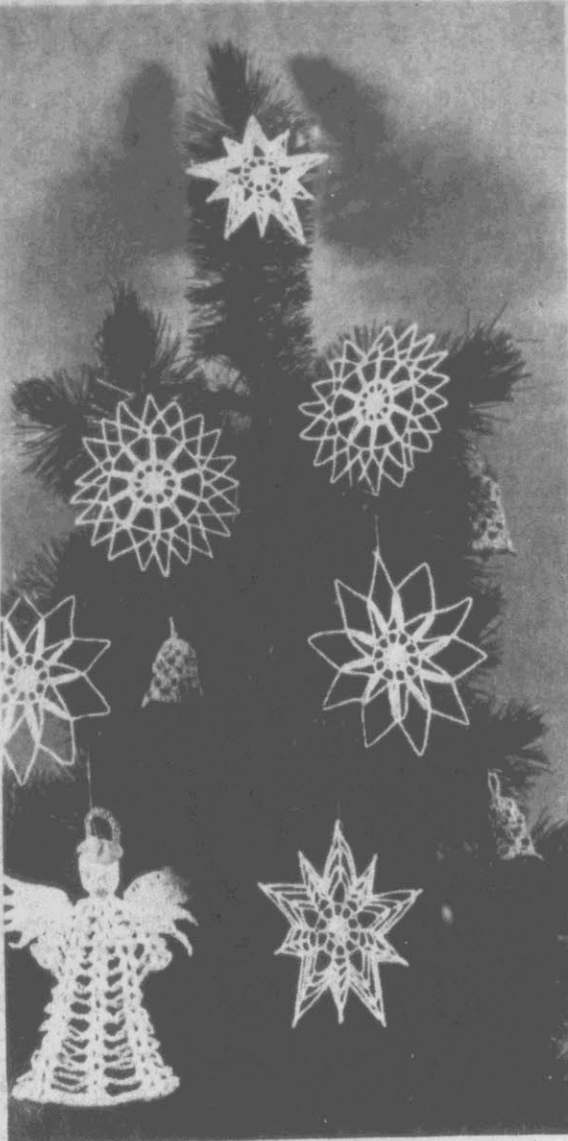

Or you may order Kit No. K-1079 by sending a check or money order for $12.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains sufficient yarn in white, gold and silver to make three to four dozen ornaments. The instruction leaflet is included, as well as postage and handling charges.

Dear Readers: Your crochet hooks and knitting needles can be a big help in winning the battle with inflation. Christmas gifts and decorations can often be made from leftover yarns. Even if you hold a full-time job as an office worker or busy mother, you might be surprised at how much you can accomplish with an hour or two each evening and an occasional weekend afternoon.

Crocheted stars are pretty on a Christmas tree or as decorations on packages. You can make them from fine baby yarns or cotton crochet thread, using a steel crochet hook. I would suggest a size five or six hook for these.

To begin, chain five stitches and join with a slip stitch to form a ring. Next, chain two and work 14 half-double crochets in the ring, joining with a slip stitch in the top of the chain made at the beginning of this round.

For the next round, work as follows: chain seven, slip stitch in second chain from hook, work a single crochet in next chain, a half-double crochet in next chain, a double crochet in each of the next two chains and a treble crochet in the last chain; skip two half-doubles of the previous round and slip stitch in the next half-double crochet. Repeat the steps of this round four times more and you will have a five-pointed star.

For those of you who only know how to work single and double crochet, here are the instructions for working the other two stitches used.

To make a half-double crochet, wrap the yarn once around the hook (yarnover), draw up a loop through the stitch, yarnover and draw the hook through all three loops on the hook at one time.

To make a treble crochet, wrap the yarn twice around the hook before inserting it into the next stitch. Yarnover and draw the yarn through the stitch. There are now four loops on the hook. Yarnover and draw through two loops. Repeat this last step twice more and the treble crochet is complete.

While snowy white stars are exquisite on a green tree, you can make them in any color. Try some in metallic yarn for a special touch of glitter.

If you make them from crochet cotton, you may want to starch them. You can use spray starch, but they will have more body if you use a heavy solution of boiled starch.

In the coming weeks, I will share with you many ideas to save money on your holiday preparations.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a wonderful guy, but he is very unreasonable when someone is late. Abby, I don't mean really late like 45 minutes or an hour; I am talking five to 10 minutes.

Both our kids are married and they are responsible adults, but they sometimes run a little late.

Well, yesterday we were going out for dinner with our kids, and we had a 7 p.m. reservation at a place about a 10 minutes' drive from here. Our daughter and her husband weren't here at 6:30 like they were supposed to be, so my husband insisted that we leave at 6:45 on the dot! I begged him to wait another five minutes, but he wouldn't do it. My husband is the kind who has to be at the airport an hour early, and he has absolutely no patience with anyone who is even five minutes late for anything.

Is there any way to cure him?

MR. PUNCTUALITY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Don't look for a cure where there's no disease. Mr. Punctuality will probably train his family before they "cure" him.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Flat in Front" was all wet. "Flat" wanted to surprise her husband and have her breasts surgically enlarged because he always ogled big-busted women. You said, "Don't surprise him. Ask him. He may like you just the way you are."

Abby, I went through this kind of surgery 10 years ago because, like "Flat," my husband ogled big-busted women. When we'd go to a party, he'd wander off, and I'd always find him next to a woman who was well-endowed.

Finally I went to a plastic surgeon to ask about silicone implants and was told it would cost $2,000 (this was in 1970). I asked my husband for the money. He refused, so I sold my car and paid for the operation myself, and it was the best investment I ever made.

I got a gorgeous figure out of it (37-26-38), but my husband couldn't take the whistles and compliments, and the confidence I had acquired. I realized then what a loser he was, and I divorced him.

Now I'm married to a real winner who loves me the way I am.

BUILT AND LOVING IT

DEAR BUILT: Hubby No. 1 was a loser for sure. But Hubby No. 2 is a winner only if he also would have loved you the way you were.

DEAR ABBY: My husband died a year ago. My neighbors were very considerate at the time of the funeral, bringing in food, etc. But after that, I never heard a word from any of them. (I'm not complaining. I'm a working woman and not the type to socialize a great deal with my neighbors.)

Three weeks ago I quietly married a fine gentleman I had known for years. I had intended to have a little wine-and-cheese party and invite my neighbors in to meet my husband, but I guess I wasn't quick enough, because I just got a call from a friend telling me I had better hurry and announce my marriage because my gossipy neighbors were talking. It seems they just found out I have a man living with me, and they think I've got a live-in boyfriend! I think it's rather funny.

What should I do?

LEGALLY HITCHED

DEAR HITCHED: Don't do anything. Let your gossipy neighbors find out you're married just like they found out you had a man living with you.

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

We know one young man whose wife doesn't have to urge him to help at dinnertime. That's because he's enjoyed cooking since he was a teen-ager. His sisters remember his high-school repertoire included spaghetti with various sauces, pizza and all kinds of cookies. His wife recalls the paper-thin Swedish pancakes he surprised her with one weekend morning shortly after they were married.

But he had never tried his hand at making the all-American apple pie. Recently when he did, the result was a sweet version with a nut topping rather than the usual pastry. Here's his recipe.

STEVE'S SWEET APPLE PIE

- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup firmly packed light brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons butter, melted
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 1 teaspoon lemon juice
- 4 1/2 cups pared sliced apples
- 1 unbaked 9-inch pastry shell

In a small bowl, stir together the flour, sugar and ginger; with a pastry cutter or 2 knives cut in the 1/2 cup butter until coarse crumbs form; stir in the walnuts. Reserve to use as a topping.

In a large bowl, stir together the cornstarch and salt. Stir in until smooth the 2 tablespoons melted butter

Ms. Hargett Committee Chairmen Give Reports

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 7032 held its meeting Thursday. Katrina Hargett, of Pitt Memorial Hospital, was guest speaker for the evening.

She talked and showed slides on cancer.

President Rosa Lee Boyd said the Fall Council meeting will be held in Raleigh at the Royal Villa Motel Oct. 34. President Margaret Rogers' homecoming will be Oct. 17 in Hendersonville.

Poppy Chairman Alice Moseley said plans are being made to have the poppy sale Nov. 6-7. Cancer Aid and Research Chairman Raye Brewer reported a total of $229.55 had been received for September for the Cancer Fund.

Americanism Chairman Carrie West said three flags had been ordered and one would be presented to University Towers Oct. 12 at 7 p.m.

A report was also given by Myrtle Meeks, Goldstar chairman. Plans are being made to visit O'Berry Center near Halloween said Verna Mizzelle.

Mrs. Moseley, Doris Harris, Marjorie Harris and Peggy Heath were meeting hostesses.

and the honey; stir in the lemon rind and lemon juice. Add the apple slices and toss until well coated. Spoon into the pastry shell. Sprinkle the reserved topping over the apples. Bake on the rack below the center of a preheated 400-degree oven for 15 minutes; reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake until apples are tender and crust is browned — about 30 minutes. Cool on a rack.

The Women of the Moose Chapter 1306 held its business meeting at the Moose Lodge Thursday. Development committee chairmen gave progress reports on the activities of committees.

Mooseheart Chairman Marjorie Jackson will be sponsoring Christmas in October to help provide Christmas presents for the inhabitants at Mooseheart and Moosehaven. Membership Chairman Jane Bell will be holding a hobo party in October for members and guests. Academy of Friendship Chairman Nettie Williams will be in charge of the bake sale to be held Oct. 10 at Carolina East Mall.

Winifred Nelson was installed as chairman of the Hospital Committee with College of Regents member Dorothy Anderson serving as the installing officer.

The chapter will also be selling Benson fruitcakes as its fund raising project for its charities this year.

It was announced a reception honoring North Carolina Deputy Grand Regent Jimmie Hargett will be held during the convocation weekend in Monroe Oct. 24-25.

Ann Wilson and Melba Hargett were honored with a special event during the social hour. Margaret Speight and Carole Tolar were meeting hostesses.

Travel Along with Janet Stoughton

An important thing to remember when traveling abroad is tipping. Waitresses, waiters, barbers, hair dressers and porters are usually tipped at least fifteen percent everywhere. However, it is advisable to check with the hotel you are staying at or with the local information Bureau to make sure. Hotels and hair salons in the city often expect larger tips than do the out-of-the-way places. If on a tour where gratuities are included, it is a good idea to reward for extra services.

The agent at QUIXOTE TRAVELS are always willing to give out travel tips, whether you are traveling to NYC on business or Switzerland for a ski vacation. You can depend on us also for accurate and fast service. Our computers are directly connected to all major carriers throughout the country. See us at 319 Cotanche St. (756-3456) where we have a staff of seven full time agents waiting to serve you.

TRAVEL TIP: Carry sufficient change and small bills with you for tipping.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know how in the world you can expect nations to reason together when you cannot get five people to agree on one breakfast cereal.

At the moment, we have 37 boxes of cereal on our shelves — all open. Some snap. Some explode on impact with milk. Some puff up. Some die from the humidity. All attract ants.

I have a dream. A dream that before I go to that big utility room in the sky, every box of cereal on the shelf will be emptied.

I've tried it before with little success.

"Hey gang, how about polishing off the Chock Full of Pimples?"

"They're stale."

"How about the Cavity Flakes?"

"They get caught in your teeth."

"Anyone for Shredded Natural Bran Harvest Nuggets with no preservatives?"

"That's for old people who have nothing to lose by eating sensibly."

What this world needs is a one-size-fits-all cereal. A cereal that would fight sog, fortify you with vitamins, talk back to you from the bowl, contain a 194-piece plastic replica of a Civil War battle and keep you regular.

For some unexplained reason, a box of cereal is something a woman cannot throw away. I can throw away a box of baking soda that has been in the refrigerator for three years, a box of raisins that has entered the Twilight Zone, or a clove of fresh garlic that has gone to live with Jesus. I cannot evict a 32-ounce box containing two tablespoons of Captain Clown Krinkles.

Yesterday, I decided to do something about the 37 boxes. I crumbled the stale Bran Brittles and sprinkled them over a casserole. I baked a cookie out of the leftover cup of Fruit Lips. The puffed Crunchies I made into a necklace. The two remaining bite-sized Pun Wheats I made into earrings. I was down to 33 boxes when my husband came in with a box of Early Morning Chewies. I'm losing the battle.

Find New Headliners?

Weeks of preparation went into the big gathering of organized labor in Washington last weekend to protest administration policies. Thousands, we guess, showed up from the West Coast, the southwest, the middle west, the northeast and southeast.

Sources with expertise in such things estimated a shade under a quarter million people were on hand...a really impressive turnout until one pauses to consider that if organized labor has all the clout it claims, there could have been an even larger assemblage drawn from a radius of just 250 miles from Washington.

Another inflatable factor: the demonstration also drew on the ranks of many "rights" organizations representing women, blacks, Hispanics, as well as members of other minorities; and the elderly and disabled were invited, too. Much more than a turnout of union membership was involved. It is even conceivable that union participation may have been less than a majority.

Meanwhile —

In New York City's Central Park two minstrels (Art Garfunkel and Paul Simon) were giving a free concert that attracted somewhere around 400,000 people (who could count them?). The contrasting attendance figures offer a broad spectrum of conclusions...none wholly flattering to the Washington magnet for crowd turnouts.

Next year the AFL-CIO should bring in Simon and Garfunkle to headline their sequel to September 19, 1981. It would be one sure way to top their earlier eye-catching attendance.

Lunch Is Spread Thin

Budget-cutting has really begun to hit home. President Reagan warned sacrifices would be expected from all, and that all would feel the pinch. But, really, now... were we prepared for this: One of the daily menu items for Pitt County school lunchrooms next week includes the notations — one-half meat sandwich... and one-half peanut butter and jelly sandwich.

Let's hope the peanut butter and the jelly are spread evenly.

Education Policy?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — On some things, most North Carolinians can agree: — There is a high technology world coming in which intimate knowledge of computers and physics and electronics will be needed for the workplace; — Getting those high technology industries will be a major step ahead; — Today's young people need training, education, encouragement, and hands-on experience to be ready for that high technology future.

years ago challenged the established order of things in Raleigh by proclaiming publicly that industrial growth does not necessarily equate to economic growth; that bringing into North Carolina businesses which import their top management and hire Tar Heels for low percent. There is, Brooks is quick to concede, no quick or simple remedy. "The surest remedy is for North Carolina governmental units, at both the state and local levels, to join with private enterprise in a long-term partnership to provide extensive career counseling and beginning vocational training opportunities..." Brooks feels.

BILL NOBLITT

And there, it seems, is where North Carolinians stop agreeing. Vocational exploration and education in the high schools has been either cut or kept at the same rockbottom place it has been for years. There is still something less than desirable about a "technical" education despite the obvious lure of high technology for the future.

Community colleges across the state have pressed ahead in changing their names to "college" rather than "technical institute," and budgets for the essential high technology equipment remain skimpy and dependent upon using the goodwill of private industries willing to donate time or gear to the training programs.

Debates continue on the state's three policy-making educational boards about where the state's priorities lie. Simply put by intimates to that running argument: Will it be Shakespeare, or Space Age for North Carolina? Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks put forth some thoughts on the dilemma. It was Brooks, you may recall, who several paying assembly line work does not lead to improvement in the state's deplorable per capita and wage state.

"Today, North Carolina not only continues its perennial position on the bottom rung of the wage ladder, in comparison to the wages paid in other states and in the nation as a whole for manufacturing or production work, but we also continue to employ a higher percentage of our workers in such positions than any other state," Brooks reminded us earlier this month.

Here are the figures: factory production workers in North Carolina are making about $231 per week. That is 26 percent below the national average of $319. One year ago, the gap was also 28

Retraining and upgrading of those currently in the nearly 900,000 manufacturing work force should be included, along with emphasis on high school youth and those just out of high school, Brooks says. "We must stimulate more private-sector commitment to skills training and match that private commitment

SPEAKING OF AIR TRAFFIC CONTROLLERS--

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Surrendered To Mob

WASHINGTON — This weekend marks the end of the Springboks' brief tour of the United States. It has proved a shameful experience — shameful for us, not for the Springboks.

The Springboks, as everyone must know by now, are members of a South African rugby team. They are in the United States quite legally. They are not official representatives of the South African government, but it would make no difference if they were. Their purpose is to play rugby, an entirely legal sport, and also to entertain the relatively few American fans of this historically English game.

The Springboks have every right to engage in these contests. Rugby fans have every right to watch them. Those who despise South Africa's racial policies of apartheid have every right to engage in peaceful protest of those policies. Governments are instituted among men to keep such rights secure.

But in the matter of the Springboks, we have witnessed the virtual abdication of that primary obligation of government in a free society. The spineless performance of New York's Gov. Hugh Carey will stand for some time as a wretched monument to the ascendancy of lick-spittle politics in our nation. Given a choice between standing by people's money than in the preservation of the people's liberties.

Out in Chicago, one of the leaders of the mob attempted piously to suggest that they were engaged in civil disobedience "in the fashion of Martin Luther King." Balderdash! The courageous blacks who 30 years ago sought equal access to buses, parks, hotels, theaters and restaurants were not seeking to deny rights to others, but to establish them for themselves.

JAS. J. KILPATRICK

principle and surrendering to a mob, Mr. Carey surrendered to the mob. He capitulated without a fight. He undertook to cancel a match in Albany. His excuse? So many demonstrators might attempt to disrupt the match that the public safety would be endangered.

Fortunately, a federal judge with a better understanding of the Constitution intervened. It never should have been necessary to test the issue in court. Governor Carey's clear duty was to protect the civil and constitutional rights of the people — all the people — and if this meant calling 5,000 cops and a hundred thousand members of the National Guard, so what? It is impossible to imagine a more justifiable expenditure of the

By contrast, members of the "Stop the Springboks" mob were engaged not in the expansion of rights, but in the suppression of rights. They cast themselves not in the righteous mold of Martin Luther King, but in the contemptible mold of the Free Speech Association of the 1960s — a gaggle of hot-eyed little fascists who believed in free speech for themselves, but for no one else.

Forgive me if I do not now insert a ritualistic denunciation of South Africa's racial policies. By our contemporary standards the policies are odious. All the same, there is something revoltingly hypocritical in the blubbery we lately have heard about South Africa. Our own history embraces a history of slavery. Our Constitution treated Negroes as "three-fifths of all other persons." Congress maintained racial segregation in the public schools of our capital as recently as 1954. By what right do we gaze down our national nose at a South African rugby player and say, "We are holier than thou"? Little by painfully little, South Africa has been relaxing its policies of apartheid. Changes come there with great difficulty — but changes came here with great difficulty also.

This, too: It is passing (Please Turn To Page 5)

Travels On Carter Road

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan last Thursday night was trapped in the green-eyeshade economics that yielded the Republican Party a half-century of defeat when he urged Congress to "eliminate abuses and obsolete incentives in the tax code" to raise a supposed $22 billion in revenue.

Consciously or not, President Reagan had started down the "loophole-closing" road traveled by Jimmy Carter, spreading melancholy among champions of supply-side economics. "You can call him Jimmy Reagan now," cracked a sometime adviser. "Disaster" and "fiasco" were words used by supply-siders within the administration to describe the president's speech. "Supply-side is dead now," one of them told us.

All that might seem verbal overkill to describe tax promises much worse to come in retreat from Reagan's economic program. In fact, Office of Management and Budget (OMB) and Treasury officials do see it as the forerunner of more revenue-raising measures.

Such retreats are newly possible because Reagan has been forced into looking at the economy through the green eyeshade of a book-keeper. Whereas his campaign speeches stressed growth and hope, his Thursday night address to the nation demanded austerity and sacrifice.

Even his economic officials who have authored the present policy were disappointed that the Thursday speech did not escape from bookkeeping considerations and explain why spending cuts are intended to lower interest rates and permit economic growth to be generated by lower tax rates. The lack of any economic grand design in the speech and its disjointed character can be attributed to drafts from a variety of sources floating around the White House last week in 11th hour chaos.

Reagan the great communicator was remarkably effective using the shoddy tools given him. His call for pain and suffering by Americans through budgetary rigor was raw meat for Republican regulars who have been practicing political sadomasochism since Herbert Hoover's day.

But the bipartisan reception in Capitol Hill was predictably hostile. Refusing to back deeper domestic spending cuts, even senior Republicans joined the firestorm against defense spending to return the Pentagon's budget to its Carter level. Anticipating precisely that, OMB Director David Stockman shortly before the speech pondered trimming his $16 billion cut for fiscal year 1982 to $13 billion but was dissuaded by associates.

Even worse for Reagan's revolution than the havoc wrought in defense plans is his retreat on tax policy. The proposed $3 billion in "loophole closers" for fiscal 1982 mainly affects cash flow, which means that much less capital for business and that much more for government.

What is most significant is that the civil servants at the Treasury, who silently agonized as Reagan cut tax rates, have their feet back in the door. They have been telling Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan that they could raise $130 billion in recovered "tax expenditures" if given the green light.

As Stockman's new proposals failed to significantly reduce the budget deficit, the Treasury taxers will unveil an end to tax deductions for consumer loans and certain mortgage payments. That very proposal was drafted by Treasury and OMB this time but turned down at the White House.

What really would mark the death of supply-side economics in the Reagan administration would be a postponement of the big tax rate cuts beginning next year, which remain the hope for budget-balancing growth instead of deficit-enlarging austerity. Incredibly, a three-month postponement was actually studied last week by Reagan's senior advisers. In contrast, supply-siders in the administration believe the tax cuts are coming too late, not too early, as a result of green-eyeshade economics invoked earlier this year.

The attempt to force down interest rates by fiscal policy — that is, lower spending and higher taxes — is scoffed at by most economic schools and apparently by Wall mentioned monetary policy — what the government does about the money supply — as the key to lower interest rates.

OMB sent Reagan a paragraph that would have had him urging the U.S. Gold Commission to come up with monetary recommendations; but those words wound up on the White House cutting room floor. If, as now seems probable, the end product of Thursday's speech is a savaged defense budget and demands for higher taxes, Ronald Reagan by year's end will have to consider a bolder monetary policy than merely making suggestions to a study commission.

To the editor:
For several weeks now, a former editor of The Washington Post and his wife, now retired and living in Wilmington, have driven the 50 miles to my house to see their Washington Redskins play on TV, provided by Greenville's Channel 9.

This week, without any warning, the Redskins' game was unceremoniously replaced with another game. My visitor, Bernice Jenkins, who edited the East Carolina student newspaper for two years (the only person to do so in ECU's history), had methodically called Channel 9 at the beginning of the season and had been assured that all 14 games would be televised by its station.

So Sunday Mr. Jenkins got on the phone here in a hurry to call the Greenville TV station and ask, "How Come?" He was advised that within the 15 minutes since the substitute game came on, he was the 200th person to call and vent his feelings!

Redskins fans and non-fans alike will admit that the performance of the Redskins to date has been less than enchanting. But that should have little to do with interrupting people's plans that were based on promised commitments...For instance, the Purdue vs. Notre Dame game yesterday was probably a bigger game than UNC vs. Boston College. But do you fluff off loyal, if sometimes misguided, fans who plan their Sunday afternoon with friends 50 miles away to watch the game listed for the day?

Channel 9's "phone answerer" says the fault is with the network, and all irate letters will be forwarded to CBS, which has trouble enough with its image already!

Strength For Today

THINKING FIRST OF OTHERS
In his Epistle to the Philippians, Paul urges his followers to be of the same mind, "having the same love, being of one accord; doing nothing through faction or vain-glory, but in lowliness of mind each count the other better than himself; not looking each of you to his own things but each of us also to the things of others."

Nothing cramps, damages and embitters the soul of man so much as to get to the place where he can think of nothing but his own advantage. "What do I get out of this?" Some people ask themselves that question every time they confront a duty or a new situation.

And such people are doomed to unhappiness. For the universe in which we live is a spiritual universe, and the soul of that universe is love. Happiness comes when each of us looks not just to his own interests but each of us also to the interests of others.

The Golden Rule expresses it perfectly: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even unto them." — Elisha Douglass.

Makes Predictions A Reality

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Watch out, world. Joseph Granville has gone international.

The controversial market forecaster, who stood Wall Street on its ear last January with a "sell everything" recommendation, dropped a similar bombshell over Britain last week.

Granville, interviewed on a radio program broadcast in London on Wednesday, forecast a steep drop in British share prices, catching the ear of many traders just before they headed for their offices in the City.

That day prices on the London Stock Exchange posted their second largest decline on record, and Thursday they lost more ground. Within 48 hours, the market dropped by some $10 billion.

As with Granville's U.S. sell recommendation early this year, there seemed to be an element of self-fulfilling prophecy in the whole affair.

The moment he predicted a decline, the hordes of his followers known as "Granville groupies" apparently made it a reality by inundating the market with sell orders.

"I report fires, I don't set them," Granville maintained in an interview with Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency. But he also acknowledged, "I added a bit of fuel to the flames."

At the same time, Granville made his views clear on the bear market in U.S. securities by predicting that the Dow Jones industrial average, now in the 800s, could fall to between 550 and 650 by the end of next year.

In a few hours of trading on the day he said that, the average tumbled more than 15 points, before recovering to finish the session with a loss of 4.76.

For several months early this year, Granville appeared to be very far out on a tenuous limb with his January prediction of a market decline. Although the Dow Jones industrials fell 23.80 on Jan. 7, the day after he switched from bullish to bearish, they were back up by late April to an eight-year high.

Since then, however, they have taken a precipitous drop, bearing out the substance of his forecast if not its timing. Granville, at least, is chalking it up as another correct call.

"True to the documentation of my theory, the news is fast catching up with the sell signal of eight months ago," he declared in his Sept. 19 market letter.

And Granville's "shows and appearances" seem to be as flamboyant as ever. A recent gathering in Memphis, Tenn., opened with a performance by a belly dancer to dramatize the fact that, in Granville's words, "this market in 1981 went belly up."

The more conventional Wall Street community still shudders at such showmanship. After the Granville selloff in London, analyst Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co. — a firm where Granville once worked — remarked:

"In merry old England they used to behead people for lesser offenses."

But in their view of the outlook, many other market seers these days share Granville's pessimism. The latest tabulation of dozens of market letters by Investors Intelligence of Larchmont, N.Y., found 55 percent bearish and only 24 percent qualifying as out-and-out bullish.

Current letters are filled with such advice as "study the next decline for a clue to the future" and "the worst is yet to come."

So whether Granville is eventually proved right or wrong in his latest prognostications, he'll have plenty of company.

Price Of Natural Gas Will Rise This Winter

F. MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — People who heat with natural gas will pay an average of 25 percent more for the fuel this winter, a consumer group predicts.

The Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition said the typical residential customer will pay $98 in fuel bills for the five months from November through March. That compares to $331 during the same period last winter.

"Home heating costs continue to rise at a terrifying rate, far outstripping inflation," said William R. Hutton, an official of the coalition, which represents 200 labor, elderly and consumer groups.

And if President Reagan gets approval of a plan to quicken the decontrol timetable, said Hutton, the price hikes will be even more "cruel and unrealistic."

Under the accelerated timetable being considered by the president, the study predicted homeowners in the winter of 1982-83 will be paying $627 for gas, 58 percent above this winter's projected bill.

However, the Natural Gas Supply Association, the main industry group campaigning for faster decontrol, disputed those findings. It said its own analysis showed prices will rise only about 12 percent this year under current law and would go up 20 percent in the first year of an accelerated decontrol program.

Both consumer and industry groups have been fighting for months over what impact faster decontrol of natural gas would have.

The latest Citizen-Labor Energy Coalition study found that the current law is allowing wide pricing differences among regions. That, comes about, because not all gas is treated the same. Gas which began flowing after April 1977 is classified as "new" gas and is being escalated upward in price each month until Jan. 1, 1985, when all controls will be removed. "Old" gas flowing before that date is kept at much lower rates and will under current law never be removed from controls. Thus, pipeline companies with access to large amounts of old gas can offer their customers much lower rates.

The study predicted that the average residential cost of 1,000 cubic feet of gas could vary this winter from a low of $3.88 in the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas to a high of $6.57 in the New England states. It predicted the national average would be $4.80 with the average consumer using 83,000 cubic feet.

When the larger amount of gas needed in colder climates is also taken into consideration, New England residents are projected to have fuel bills of $618 for the five months — the highest in the country — as compared to $210 in Texas and its bordering states.

Reagan had been expected to forward an accelerated decontrol plan to Congress in September, but Energy Secretary James Edwards said last week that timetable had been pushed back by the latest round of budget cuts. Energy Department aides now predict the proposal will go to Congress in December.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teams of American and Soviet scientists are launching a joint expedition through the winter ices of Antarctica to find a giant, ice-free "lake" never before seen by man. The lake, an unusual hole spotted by space satellites, is locked in an ice sheet in a south Atlantic area off Antarctica called the Weddell Sea. It can only be reached by icebreaker.

with one by the public sector. . . . Industry and government working together to train skilled workers to continue producing their products and continue making a profit may be considered selfish.

"It is good to be selfish for North Carolina. A joint venture in training by our private and public sectors means that employees learn higher skills and thereby produce products more profitably, which also helps our state," Brooks observed.

But until technical education can be considered just as desirable as college preparatory, and until people begin to realize that skilled workmen today can earn more, advance as rapidly, and live as well as college graduates in many fields, the commitment will be slow in coming.

The Soviet vessel "Mikhail Somov" will carry 13 American and 13 Soviet scientists in search of the ice-free area during the treacherous Antarctic winter now nearing its end, the National Science Foundation announced Monday.

The object of the search is an ice-free area in the frozen wasteland that has appeared during most winters since satellite pictures revealed it in 1973. The pictures indicate the area is an unusual hole in the ice that can grow to the size of Lake Superior.

Scientists believe the ice-free lake may be caused by warm water from an unknown source rising under the area and displacing colder water. The region is called a "polynya," from a Russian word meaning "unfrozen water surrounded by ice."

The science foundation, which is paying most of the U.S. costs of the mission, said this will be the first winter scientific journey into the Weddell Sea pack ice since a German research ship was trapped there in 1912.

The American team, lead by Columbia University scientists, will join its Soviet counterpart in Montevideo, Uruguay, in early October and set out on the two-month expedition aboard the 450-foot icebreaker.

Along with the nine from Columbia, there will be four U.S. scientists from Oregon State University and the U.S. Army Cold Regions Research and Engineering Laboratory in Hanover, N.H.

Dr. Arnold L. Gordon, of Columbia's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory in Palisades, N.Y., is co-leader of the expedition with Dr. Ed Saruchanhan of the Soviet Arctic and Antarctic Research Institute in Leningrad.

Gordon said in a telephone interview that the United States did not have a large icebreaker available for the mission, so discussions on a joint venture began with the Russians in 1977.

"The Russians, who have an active arctic research program, were interested and had a ship available that could do the job," Gordon said.

Gordon estimated that the U.S. project costs, which include long-term data analysis, will be about $1.2 million over a three-year period. Soviet costs, including ship operation, will be about the same, he said.

As the ship crunches through the icepack, it will be guided to the polynya by pictures received on board from American weather satellites.

If the scientists find the hole — pictures indicate it doesn't form every winter — they will sample water and air temperatures, check currents and test the biology of the area.

"If none does appear this austral winter," Gordon said, "we will study environmental conditions within the ice pack. Such a study has never been done before near the period of maximum (ice) extent."

If the ice hole does open, scientists want to know how it may contribute to climate changes and how it affects distribution of ocean nutrients for lifeforms around Antarctica, Gordon said.

RAQUEL SUES — Actress Raquel Welch is suing the National Enquirer for $12 million, according to a suit filed last week in Los Angeles Superior Court. She claims four articles printed by the tabloid caused her and her husband "shame, mortification and hurt feelings". The articles reported, among other things, that she had been shunned by the movie industry, the suit alleges. (AP Laserphoto) strange, is it not, that the protesters who are so vociferous about South Africa are so mum about the Soviet Union. No one tried to shut down the hockey games between a Soviet team and an American team. Yet the denial of fundamental freedoms in the Soviet Union is at least as gross as the denial in South Africa. What double standard have we here?

Our responsibility, it seems to me, is so to protect human liberties here at home that we provide an example for all the world to see. In the matter of the Springboks, we set a sorry example indeed.

N.C. S&L League Heads Hail All-Savers Program

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The head of the North Carolina Savings & Loan League says he knows of "no better investment opportunity" than the new All Savers Certificate (ASC) that will be available at savings and loans, banks and other depository institutions on Oct. 1.

Thad Woodard, League president, said the certificate represents the first time there has been "any incentive to save program" available and he suggested that with the introduction of the account the "historic anti-savings bias in our income tax structure has been altered."

Woodard, who made a stop in Greenville as part of an effort to publicize the merits of the certificate in the state's major markets, said "there has never been anything like this before."

Woodard explained that a "very special feature" of the one-year, high rate certificate of deposit is that up to $2,000 of interest earned on the account is tax-exempt for married persons filing joint tax returns. Individuals, he said, can exclude from taxes as much as $1,000 in interest earnings. The minimum deposit for an ASC is $500.

The S&L spokesman said savers can open one of the new accounts with a low minimum deposit which assures that the tax break will be available to the greatest number of savers, including those with only small sums to deposit.

Woodard said the certificate is geared toward the millions of Americans who fall in the middle income category. He said the certificate represents the "first tax-free savings account ever and it's been long overdue."

The interest rate on the certificate, he explained, is 70 percent of the one-year treasury bill yield. A new rate will be announced by the government every four weeks, but once a certificate is purchased, the rate is guaranteed for the 12-month term of the deposit.

Woodard pointed out that for all certificates purchased between Oct. 1 and Oct. 4, the interest rate will be 12.61 percent. A new rate will become effective Oct. 5.

Woodard, citing a possible situation, noted that a married couple, filing a joint tax return, would purchase a certificate at the current 12.61 rate. If the couple's annual taxable income falls between $25,000 and $30,000, the equivalent taxable yield realized on the certificate is 18.5 percent. If income is higher, he said, the equivalent taxable yield will be higher.

Even if income is less, amounting to taxable earnings for a couple of between $16,000 and $20,000, the yield on the ASC is still 16.5 percent, guaranteed for a year, he explained.

The S&L spokesman said that if any portion of the certificate is withdrawn prematurely, the saver loses the exemption on all interest earned on the ASC. The penalty on a one-year certificate is loss of three months interest on the amount withdrawn.

Woodard said the "only thing wrong" with the new certificate is its short life span. Congress approved issuance of the ASC for a 15-month period, between Oct. 1, 1981 and Dec. 31, 1982. Noting that the 15 months amounts to a trial period, Woodard said it is hopeful Congress will act to make the certificate permanent.

He added that federal regulators have waived the early withdrawal penalty for savers wishing to transfer or roll over funds from six-month certificates into all savers certificates.

TWO INJURED IN ACCIDENT - Two persons received minor injuries Monday afternoon in an accident on N.C. 43 about five miles south of Greenville. According to trooper Fred Davis a car driven by Ida Tatum Venters, of Rt. 1, Grimesland, was headed south and made a left turn into the path of a car driven by Betty Easley of New Bern. Monarch Butterflies Starting Annual Trek

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

High on the Blue Ridge Parkway, it's time for one of nature's most spectacular shows — the migration of millions of brightly colored monarch butterflies through the mountains on their way to Mexico.

The date of the annual migration of the large orange and black butterflies varies from year to year, but usually comes in the third or last week of September. It lasts about three or four days.

"It's really unbelievable when they come through," said Ann Hill, a ranger at the Cradle of Forestry in Pisgah Forest. "There's just a cloud of them floating and fluttering along — and not a sound."

Already observers have spotted a few monarchs as far east as Hendersonville. Ms. Hill said she has seen 40 or 50 flutter by in the past few days, which means millions of butterflies will be coming through soon.

This year, the monarchs are a little later than usual. People interested in viewing the migration have been calling the ranger stations to see if any monarchs have been spotted.

"It's amazing but some people are willing to drive great distances to see the migration," Ms. Hill said. "But I can see why. It really is beautiful."

At the Tunnel Gap overlook on the parkway, the forest service has set up a glass-enclosed display giving the history of the monarch and its migration for visitors who come to see the monarch flyover.

One of the biggest migrations was about five years ago, Ms. Hill said. Monarchs clustered on every tree and branch and "looked like orange and black flowers from a distance."

Last year, only a few of the butterflies came over the parkway. Instead, they were concentrated in the Lake Toxaway area, about 40 miles away.

The monarchs spend late spring and summer in the Berkshire and Catskill mountains and meadows of New England and eastern Canada. Sometime in midsummer, the young butterflies get the urge to move southwestward.

According to monarch observers, the butterflies drift about 50 miles a day until they reach Mexico. In mid-March, the generations born to these migrants will begin their trek northeastward, back to New England and Canada.

Henry K. A Train Buff

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who travels the world by jet as a lecturer on foreign policy, got a thrill out of a ride on a much slower form of transportation — the world's largest operating steam locomotive.

"It was great," Kissinger said, beaming. "I'm a buff of toy trains. Now I get a chance to play with the real ones."

Kissinger and members of the Union Pacific Corp.'s board of directors were aboard a 17-car special train that stopped here Monday to see the steam locomotive.

With the engine belching black coal smoke and snorting steam, Kissinger climbed into the cab of Union Pacific No. 3985 and waved as the 121-foot engine and tender eased along.

"My security people told me the hot place where the coal burns — that's where I will go when I die," he joked.

Kissinger and his wife Nancy are guests of UP Chairman James Evans on a rail tour from Seattle to Mexico City on the tracks of the merged Union Pacific and Missouri Pacific railroads.

The former secretary posed for pictures wearing a white Union Pacific jacket. But he didn't get a chance to blow the whistle.

Symposium On Retarded Set

Attitudes, language and standards of education and care regarding retarded persons will be the topics explored in a symposium sponsored by the East Carolina University School of Medicine and the North Carolina Humanities Committee. The symposium, entitled

"Natural Abilities and Perceived Worth: Rights, Values and Retarded Persons," will be held Oct. 1-3 at Greenville's Ramada Inn

Guest speakers include philosophers, physicians, lawyers, theologians and educators from throughout the United States. Two of the lecturers, Michael Kindred and David Rothman, were members of the President's Committee on Mental Retardation.

Participating ECU faculty members include: Dr. Arthur E. Kopelman, professor of pediatrics; Dr. Lorette M. Kopelman, associate professor of pediatrics and humanities; Dr. Theodore Kushnick, professor of pediatrics and genetics; Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the medical school; Dr. James L. Mathis, professor and chair of psychiatric medicine; Dr. John C. Moskop, assistant professor of pediatrics and humanities; Dr. Spencer O. Raab, professor of medicine; Dr. Eugene Ryan, professor and chair of philosophy; and Dr. Jon B. Tinglestad, professor and chair of pediatrics.

Leadership for the conference has been provided by L. Kopelman and Moskop, members of the medical school's humanities section faculty.

Council On Status Of Women Meets

Mrs. Ellen Webb, of Laura's Florist and Gifts, Ayden, was speaker at the dinner meeting of the Pitt County Council on the Status of Women Wednesday.

Her program topic was "Seasonal Decorations." She displayed several arrangements suitable for Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas. Mrs. Webb also gave tips on care of dried flowers and green potted plants. She was assisted by her sister, Mrs. Grace Mitchell of Goldsboro.

Final plans for the fall seminar "The Feminine Side" were announced by Mrs. Rosalie Trotman, a member of the three-county planning committee. The seminar was held Sept. 26 at Martin County College, Williamston. It was sponsored by the Councils on the Status of Women in Hertford, Martin and Pitt Counties.

Mrs. Sue May, retired Pitt County home economics extension agent, was an honored guest and was presented a gift by Council Chairman Willie Carney. She served on the Pitt County board as an advisor for several years. The gift was created by council members Jane Little and Rebecca Davenport.

Mrs. Helen Simpson of Robersonville, field coordinator for the N. C. Council on the Status of Women, told of several upcoming programs.

It was announced Charles McLawhorn Jr., Greenville attorney, will be speaking at the October meeting of the group on "Estate Planning." The November and December meetings will be combined as a Christmas dinner and will be held at the Stokes Town and Country Restaurant.

The group met in Farmville at the Southern Sportsman Restaurant.

Heart Group Elects Officers

Sharon Lewis, president of the Pitt County Heart Association, has announced its new officers for 1981-82.

In addition to Lewis, the officers chosen are Dr. Jim Jones, fund-raising chairman; Ken Noland, publicity-information chairman; Libby Swinson, secretary; Nancy Warren, treasurer; Sam Jones, corporation, industry and employees chairman; Dr. John Yeager, college chairman; Bill Lewis, schools chairman; W.M. "Booger" Scales, special gifts chairman; and Ginger Hackett, special event chairman.

Lewis said, "These officers will lead the way during the next year in efforts to better acquaint Pitt County residents with the need for high blood pressure checks, the importance of those under treatment adhering to their medication program, and how to react to cardiac emergencies."

"The Heart Association programs are aimed at reducing premature death and disability from heart disease and we are going to keep the people of Pitt County informed."

Demand Up At Farmville

FARMVILLE — Compared to Thursday of last week, conditions improved as the Farmville Tobacco Market opened for the 11th week of sales, Farmville Tobacco Board of Trade Sales Supervisor Georgia Willoughby said.

Demand was up slightly from last year and volume purchases by buying companies allowed only light deliveries to the Stabilization Corporation. The top price paid by a buying company was $1.90 a pound, with most grades ranging between $1.70 and $1.90 a pound. The market sold 349,505 pounds for $628,002.29, for an average of $179.68 per hundred pounds. To date, the market has sold 21,129,071 pounds for $36,499,544.39, for a season average of $172.75. The season average for the same day last year was $150.26.

The U.S. AWACS—What It Can And Cannot Do

U.S. AWACS ON RUNWAY — One of four U.S. AWACS radar planes stands on the runway at the Riyadh airport in Saudi Arabia this past weekend. Discounting Saudi resistance, the Reagan administration has sent a new compromise proposal to Saudi Arabia in an effort to win Congress' approval for selling the planes to that country. (AP Laserphoto)

By G.G. LABELLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The debate over whether to sell the sophisticated AWACS spy plane to Saudi Arabia has put the Air Force and the craft's manufacturer in an unaccustomed position: arguing what their electronic marvel cannot do.

The argument goes that while the AWACS can provide early warning of an attack on the Saudi oilfields and direct fighter planes against such an attack, it would be of no use in spying on Israeli aircraft and, if used that way, would be vulnerable to being blown out of the sky by fighter jets.

While this argument is being made to overcome opposition to the $3.5 billion sale by members of Congress — and by Israel — questions also have been raised over the effectiveness of the AWACS radar. This is likely to be brought up when Congress begins hearings this week on whether to allow sale of five of the AWACS to the Saudis.

Here are some of the issues that have been raised about the AWACS and answers based on conversations with officials of the Air Force and the Boeing Corp., prime contractor for the craft.

Q: What is an AWACS?
A: The letters stand for Airborne Warning and Control System and the plane is officially known as an E-3A. Basically it's a Boeing 707 topped by a 30-foot revolving "rotodome," or scope, and packed full of electronic equipment.

Under optimum conditions, flying at about 30,000 feet, the plane can use its radar to see planes approaching in any direction for about 225 miles or — in the case of high-flying craft — about 350 miles.

Q: The Israelis are against selling AWACS to the Saudis, maintaining its radar and its ability to guide interceptor fighters would wipe out Israel's military superiority over the Saudis and the rest of the Arab world. Is this so?
A: In looking from Saudi Arabia toward Israel, the AWACS would have blind spots in its view created by the mountains of Jordan. To be in a position to watch for Israeli aircraft, the AWACS would have to fly right up to the Saudi-Jordanian border, either near Iraq or near the Sinai Peninsula. In either place, it would be vulnerable to Israeli fighter jets attacking from behind the mountains.

The AWACS could be watched, too, by the Israelis, who have their own American-supplied spy planes — the E-2C, a Navy craft with some of the same capabilities as AWACS — and mountaintop radar installations.

Also, AWACS' radar is designed only to see aircraft and ships, not to monitor movements of troops or tanks.

On the other hand, opponents of the sale point out that addition of the AWACS can't help but strengthen overall Saudi air power and provide a new advantage in any future Mideast war.

And they note that the arms deal that includes the AWACS planes also includes 60 F-15 interceptors for the Saudi air force.

Q: With its limitations, how can the AWACS protect those oilfields?
A: Back to "optimum conditions." The area of Saudi Arabia along the Persian Gulf is flat. With this open view, the AWACS would be able to see across the gulf and into Iran.

The AWACS radar works by looking down, so it is able to see low-flying aircraft not visible by conventional radar until they are near. Boeing estimates an AWACS would see a plane approaching at 675 mph about 24 minutes before it reached the oilfields, while conventional radar would see such an approaching plane only 4.5 minutes ahead of time.

Q: What about the reports that the AWACS radar is easily jammed, meaning the plane can't perform its primary function?
A: One newspaper report said in a test of the AWACS conducted near Seattle in the late 1970s, an EA-6B radar-jamming plane was able to jam the AWACS radar and direct two F-106 fighters within 150 feet of the craft without the AWACS seeing either the radar jammer or the two fighters. The Air Force refuses to comment on the accuracy of that report, saying all such tests are classified. However, Air Force spokesman Maj. Robert Nicholson says the service was "extremely pleased" with the results of that test as it was by all such tests of the craft's radar.

Both Nicholson and Boeing officials say the AWACS radar is very resistant to jamming. They note, however, that there is no radar that cannot be jammed. George Weiss, a Boeing spokesman, said the AWACS radar is "probably the most jam-resistant radar ever designed."

Legislative Meetings Are Planned

Representative Ed Warren is making preparations for the mini-session of the North Carolina General Assembly this week by attending two legislative meetings.

Warren will attend a meeting of the Joint Appropriations Committee on Thursday, Oct. 1. This meeting will be an orientation and review of the 1981-82 budget and to make preparations for the extra session which starts at 10 a.m. Monday, Oct. 5.

A special meeting of the Council On Educational Services For Exceptional Children is also on Warren's agenda this week. The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 29 at 1 p.m. in the third floor board room of the Education Building in Raleigh. The purpose of the meeting is for legislators and staff members of the Department of Public Instruction, Division for Exceptional Children to review and revise the Rules Governing Programs and Services for Children with Special Needs, the Headcount Audit Summary, and discussing a study of exceptional children programs.

Questions concerning these activities should be forwarded to Warren's office in Raleigh, Room 1305, Legislative Office Building.

About 3,000 Students Stage Protest March

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Protesting the Reagan administration and the federal desegregation agreement with the University of North Carolina, about 3,000 black students marched through downtown Raleigh Monday.

The students came from across the state to chant, sing and carry signs from Memorial Auditorium to the Capitol, where they attended a two-hour rally in support of black colleges.

Organized by the North Carolina Association of Black Student Governments, the students said black colleges are in danger because they are not receiving as much financial backing as other colleges.

They also said federal budget cuts would hurt black colleges more than predominantly white colleges.

"We are here today to educate black students and people in the state of North Carolina to the economic, political and social strategies that are used to undermine, circumvent and destroy black colleges," said Curtis Massey, chairman of the NCABSG and a senior at North Carolina Central University.

Massey said federal cuts in aid to public and private education would be felt more strongly in black institutions because they were already behind other schools.

The UNC desegregation agreement with the Education Department is vague and does not go far enough to help predominantly black institutions, Massey said.

He also criticized the consent decree because it required the "good faith" of UNC in implementing the new programs to equalize the schools.

"I find it difficult to have any faith in UNC, much less good faith," Massey said. "I'd like to ask (UNC) president (William C.) Friday where was the good faith when the vet school was placed on the campus of North Carolina State University instead of North Carolina A&T."

In a telephone interview from Chapel Hill, Friday said: "I have no desire to engage in any response. He has a right to criticize the consent decree and any other issue as he wishes."

In the keynote speech, Benjamin S. Ruffin, special assistant to the governor in minority affairs and a graduate of NCCU, criticized the Reagan administration for cutting welfare programs while spending money on personal needs.

"We read in the newspaper last week that Nancy Reagan is going to buy china costing $2,000," he said.

Student Kirk, student government president at North Carolina A&T, said students are "tired of voices telling us to be cool."

"We want all rights and privileges afforded to our white counterparts," he said. "We won't wait 100 years... We want them now."

Other students in the rally were from Shaw, Winston-Salem State, Fayetteville State, Elizabeth City State and Johnson C. Smith universities, and St. Augustine's, Livingstone.

Say War Report Is Exaggerated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although there are indications Cuba has ordered a partial callup of military reserves, the State Department says reports from Havana about Cuban preparations for "total war" with the United States appear exaggerated.

The reserve callup probably is to fill manpower needs in Angola, deputy State Department spokesman Alan Romberg, said Monday. He added that the U.S. diplomatic mission in Cuba has not reported any signs of preparation for total war, adding that recent Cuban statements "seem to be an effort to influence American public and congressional opinion on our policy."

Cheerleading Salt Miners Jobless But Much Else The Same Contest

Contest Is Planned

A high school cheerleading contest will kick off festivities for the fourth annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival on October 3 at 2 p.m.

The annual event, sponsored by the festival and Carolina East Mall, will be staged at the mall's convenience center parking lot.

Squads from throughout eastern North Carolina will be present to compete for prizes to be awarded to six winners, three in the senior varsity group and three in the junior varsity classification.

The cheerleaders will be judged on creativity, coordination, spirit and enthusiasm. Each squad will furnish a recording of their selected music for the routines and it is suggested that entrants bring their pep and booster clubs.

Each squad will be allowed two cheers, one chant and one routine. In the absence of routines, the squad will be allowed to do another cheer in its place.

Twelve high schools (17 cheerleading squads) have registered to participate this year.

Energy Survey Is Underway

A door-to-door energy project designed to identify practical improvements for public housing structures and educate tenants on energy conservation was begun recently.

By working together, Greenville Utilities, Pitt Community College and the Greenville Housing Authority were able to cover 514 units in five of Greenville's public housing facilities.

Twenty-six PCC students checked levels of insulation, condition of caulking and weather stripping around doors and windows, and operational condition of major appliances (furnaces, water heaters and refrigerators), said Phil Morin, Greenville Utilities Energy Projects Coordinator.

According to Joe Laney, director of the Greenville Housing Authority, information furnished by the audits will be used as a guide for additional maintenance work on the housing units.

Low-cost actions, such as caulking, are already being taken, while those costing more will be studied further.

Morin noted that similar audits are available without charge to any Greenville Utilities customer. To have a trained technician check your home call, 752-7166 and ask for the Energy Office.

Mattamuskeet Race October 3

SWAN QUARTER — The Mattamuskeet Jaycees have announced that this year's Farm Day festivities will include a five-mile and a two-mile road race. The event will be held at the Mattamuskeet Refuge starting at 10 a.m., Saturday, October 3.

Race entrants will be placed in one of two categories — senior division (men and women) will include individuals 19 and older; the junior division will include boys and girls 18 and under. Prizes will be awarded to top finishers (male and female) in both races.

Pre-registration will take place Friday, October 2 on the opening of Farm Day, which runs from noon to 6 p.m. Registration will also be held Saturday between 9 and 10 a.m. at the refuge headquarters. Entry fees are $2 for the senior division and $1 for the junior division.

4-H CLUB MEETING
Youth ages 9-19 in Fountain and surrounding communities are invited to attend a 4-H club meeting Oct. 13 at 7:30 p.m. at the Fountain Community Building. Persons interested in the Pitt County 4-H youth program and wanting more information on getting involved should call the 4-H office at 752-2934, ext. 362.

DEL CAMBRE, La. (AP) — A tall man could wade across Lake Piegneur before the bottom fell out; now the water is 1,300 feet deep. Once, the area produced 1.5 million tons of salt a year; now it yields 60,000 tons.

The courts are considering who's to blame, who should pay. But for most folks hereabouts, the geography changed Nov. 20, 1980, but not much else.

On that day, 1 1/2-square-mile Lake Piegneur drained away in a powerful whirlpool. It was like pulling the plug in a bathtub, except that this drain rapidly enlarged. The bottom fell out when an 80-foot-high shaft of the Diamond Crystal Salt Company mine beneath it collapsed. A Texaco oil drilling rig was in the lake, and either drilled into the shaft 1,300 feet below the surface or drilled near it and the shaft fell in.

Astonishingly, there were no deaths. Crewmen left the rigs when it became clear something serious had happened below. And 60 miners rode slow elevators to safety from the 1,200-foot level. Sea water rushed in along the Delcambre Canal from the Gulf of Mexico, refilling the lake. The adjacent fresh water marsh got saltier, and folks worried Jefferson Island — a mountain of salt in the marsh honeycombed by salt mine shafts — would fall in. It didn't.

There were some casualties: A nearby botanical garden closed because 70 acres of it was under water; two oil rigs and some barges were lost; Diamond Crystal can't get as much salt from the ground.

Two-hundred or so former salt miners are still out of work, and lawyer Ted Haik says many of them are likely to remain so. Chester Archangel is one. He says he's lucky to be alive, and accepts that he's retired, ready or not, because he's 63. "Hardly a day passes that I don't think about the accident, because I think about how easily we could have been drowned," he said. "We just dropped everything. We had a long way to go to get out."

Pete Juneau of the state Department of Wildlife and Fisheries says people overreacted to the collapse. "It locally and temporarily affected the area. The only difference now is that you have a big hole in the lake, in less than a month, those fish that were sucked into the hole were replenished by other fish in the marsh."

He says the added salt from seawater may cause problems in the fresh-water marsh. But he says salt levels are up all along the coast because of lack of rain.

Live Oak Gardens, the botanical attraction, is suing Diamond Crystal and Texaco, and now requires any visitors to release it from responsibility for injuries.

Delcambre residents vividly remember the day the bottom fell in. "Oh man, it was something," said resident Priscilla Miguez. "Everybody in town wanted to move away. They thought the hole was going to come this way."

Texaco and Diamond Crystal, meanwhile, are locked in a legal fight over their losses. The multimillion-dollar damage suits are expected to reach the courtroom in late 1982.

Diamond Crystal now produces about 60,000 tons of salt a year with an evaporating pan technique, and a rock salt factory will yield another 100,000 tons. Once, annual output was 1.5 million tons.

"It's been forgotten," said Dale Vinet, owner of Southwest Pass Seafood Inc. "I don't believe it had any effect on the shrimping industry. The only thing it did was clear up the bayou a little bit. Guess all the sludge went down the hole."

Tight Security Prevailed For Biological Warfare Evidence

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A University of Minnesota professor who analyzed plant samples for suspected Soviet biological warfare chemicals says he did not inform university officials because he was not aware of the tests' purpose, a published report says.

"I think I would owe it to my government" to conduct the study, said Chester Mirocha, a professor of plant pathology.

Mirocha's work was guarded so closely that lab workers were not aware until recently they were analyzing plant samples collected by intelligence agents from sites in Southeast Asia, according to a copyright story Monday in the St. Paul Dispatch.

The newspaper said the research began under tight security about two months ago in the plant pathology laboratory at the university's campus here.

The report said leaf and stem samples were analyzed for mycotoxin, a chemical poison the U.S. government suspects the Soviet Union developed into a potential biological weapon.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., said in a recent speech in West Germany that he had positive evidence chemical warfare had been used in Indochina. The State Department later called the evidence preliminary.

Mirocha said he received two leaf and stem samples in late July from a private pharmacist in Philadelphia and that the samples were to be analyzed for mycotoxin.

The Philadelphia pharmacist forwarded results of the analyses to the State Department.

State Department spokesmen said the test results eventually would be released, but that details including the potency of the chemicals remained classified.

"We'll release it when the time is right," State Department spokesman Dred Selick told the newspaper.

Lab workers said analysis of the plant samples revealed high levels of three kinds of mycotoxins: tricothecene, or T2 toxin; nivalenol, and deoxynivalenol.

One experiment showed one toxin reached 130 parts per million, which is nearly 10 times the amount in animal feed containing mold. The levels were far in excess of what were needed to make animals ill, the tests reportedly showed.

University officials say they had no inkling of the project, although university policies forbid classified or secret research.

Stan Kegler, vice president of institutional relations for the university, said he was "totally unaware of this." He said the department chairman and the college dean should have been informed.

Robert Hexter, chairman of the university research committee, said the university would be reluctant to get involved in work relating to biological warfare. "Universities don't wage war," he said.

University of Minnesota President C. Peter Magrath was unavailable for comment.

Cite Time Lag On Processing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government auditors say far too much time is being taken in processing workman's compensation claims by federal employees with job-related injuries or illnesses.

Benefit payments under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act "are not being made on time as measured by the Department of Labor's criteria," the General Accounting Office said in a report to Congress Monday.

Performance records of Labor Department regional workman's compensation offices in Cleveland, Denver, Jacksonville, Fla., and Washington, D.C., during the first six months of fiscal 1980 were the basis of the report.

The average processing time from the date workers filed claims until the date of payment was 129 days for worksite injuries. For job-related illnesses, the GAO said, the average length of processing was 270 days.

In most cases criteria established by the Labor Department specified that five to 10 days should be allowed for the filing of claims and that the government should make payment on legitimate claims within five days, said the GAO.

The GAO reviewed a sample of 564 workman's compensation claims at the regional offices and found that under the agency's own standards for processing, "about 98 percent of the payments for wage loss were not timely."

Labor Department spokesman Don Smyth said the agency had not yet reviewed the GAO report and that it would have no immediate comment.

In the report, however, the congressional investigative agency said the Labor Department wasn't solely responsible for the delays.

It said that in many cases, injured workers did not file their claims in a timely fashion and that federal agencies employing such people often did not process the claims fast enough.

At a Capitol Hill news conference, Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., said he considers the situation "virtually criminal" and said he is asking House labor and civil service panels to conduct a separate investigation.

"People are losing their homes, being evicted from their apartments, losing their cars and being called into court by hospitals and medical practitioners for non-payment of debts because of the deplorable conduct in the processing of claims by the Labor Department," Hoyer said. Money Raised For Equipment

CLARKS NECK — The Clarks Neck Volunteer Fire Department held its fourth annual barbeque and fund raiser Sept. 26 at the substation.

According to members, the fire department cleared around $5,500, and this money will go toward the purchase of a new pumper and equipment. Members served approximately 650 plates.

"The fire department is pleased to announce that the event was very successful," said fireman Noel Lee III. "We would like to thank everyone for their support, particularly the businesses that helped us out."

Local Woman On Commission

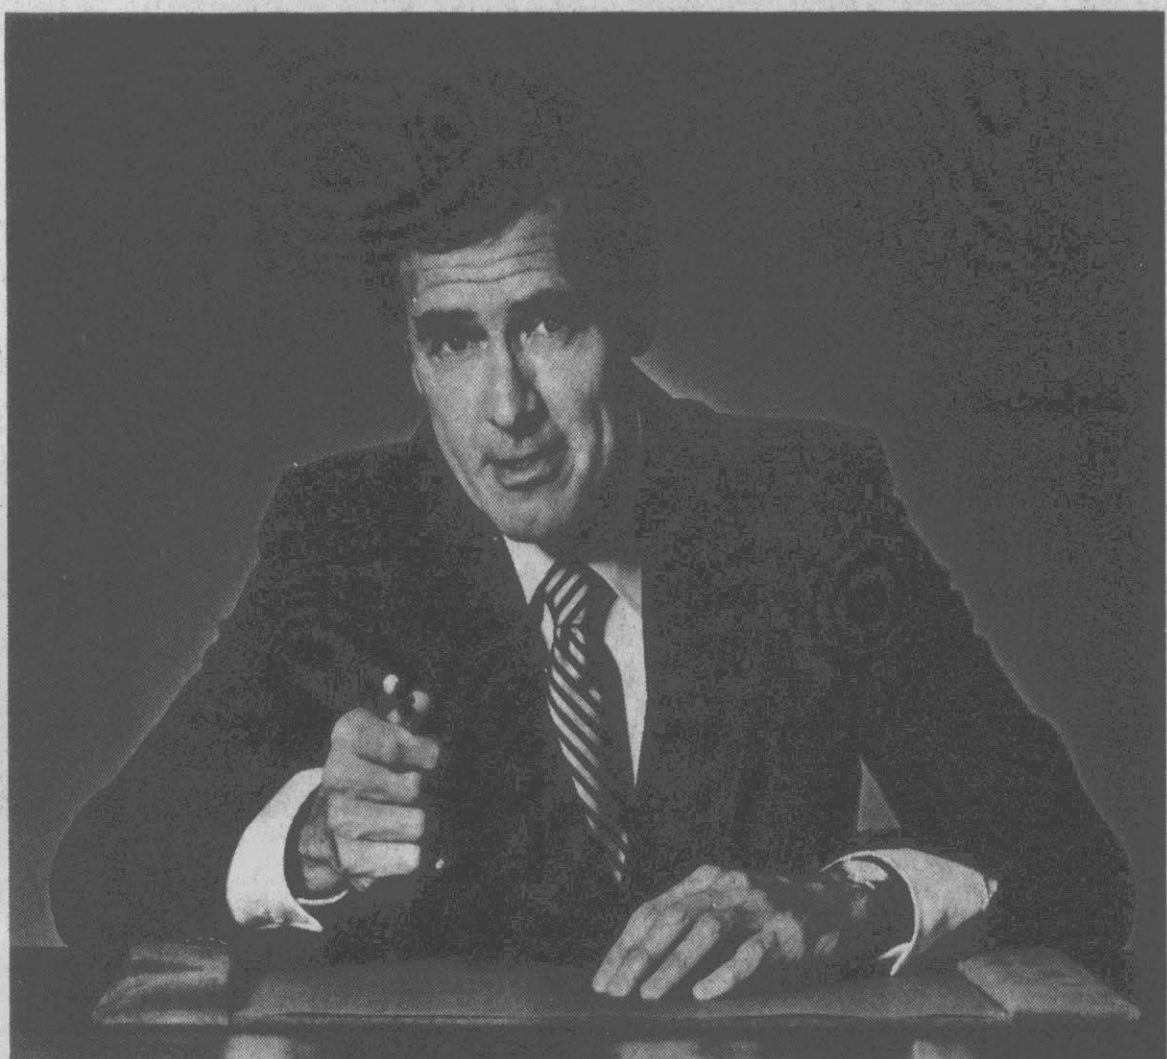

A Greenville woman was named to the Governor's Commission for Recognition of State Employees along with seven other North Carolina citizens.

Jean Warren, secretary-treasurer of Ed Warren Associates, will serve a two year term.

The seven commissioners will recommend dates for "North Carolina Employee Appreciation Week" and will choose state employees to receive the "Governor's Award for Excellence."

A task force will assist the commission in developing guidelines for recognizing deserving state employees.

MARKET REBOUNDS — Paper litters floor of New York Stock Exchange Monday afternoon as the depressed market staged a dramatic rally. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which began the week at its lowest level in more than a year, tumbled almost 15 points in early trading, but then climbed — gathering momentum. By the close, it stood at 842.56, up 18.55 on the day. (AP Laserphoto)

Roller-Coaster Day On Wall St.

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There was shouting. There was joking. There was fuming. And there was general chaos. But then, that's the way it always is in one of Wall Street's trading rooms.

One of Wall Street's wilder days was greeted on Monday with the usual controlled anxiety on the 11th floor of a sleek skyscraper at the tip of Manhattan island.

For most investors, Monday was a day when predictions of a massive selloff and fears of a panic didn't materialize. In fact, the day ended with the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials posting its best daily gain in six months.

But for traders of institutional accounts, which amount to an estimated 70 percent of stock volume, the day was yet another high-finance roller-coaster ride that saw the index swing 32 points.

At E.F. Hutton, about 50 of those traders were at work in a large room with a panoramic view of New York Harbor and the Statue of Liberty. But no one had time to look. They were punching buttons on a dashboard of phone lines, tapping onto video display terminal keyboards and gazing at the tall green letters and digits that streamed across an electronic ticker attached to the ceiling.

"When I heard about the sharp drops on markets in Tokyo and London, I was worried about our position," said John A. Conlon Jr., a Hutton first vice president in charge of the institutional division.

"Then it (the Dow average) was 15 down and looked like it could go down 100 — and we were buying. It looked like it (the fear of a panic) might be a self-fulfilling prophesy," he added.

"When you've got $100 million of your firm's money flying around the room, as we do on any given day, you get a bit worried."

One man who handles $3 million to $15 million of that money is Frank Kelly, a risk trader in Hutton's institutional division. His trades range from 25,000 shares on up and he is Hutton's institutional account expert in stocks involving food, beverages and tobacco.

On Friday, Kelly pulled off a 400,000-share transaction, earning a tidy $65,000 commission for Hutton. But by the closing bell Monday, Kelly felt fortunate to escape with a $40,000 loss for the day.

"You never like to lose money, but on a day like today that isn't too bad," said Kelly, 34, who has a "Help" sign pasted to a piece of cardboard. "It could've been worse. And I'm in the market every day; I'll make it up."

Kelly and other block stock traders are not fair-weather investors. They're in the market on rainy days and sunny days, sellers' days and buyers' days.

"The name of this game is turning over your capital — gain or loss — and going on to the next trade," Conlon said. "If you're doing business, you're going to get more business."

But coming out ahead is the ultimate aim. And predicting the market, even with a team of researchers and a pocketful of market savvy, is an uncertain business. Another sign in the room reads: "If only I had known sooner."

"The current stock market has been far and away the most treacherous I've ever seen," said Conlon, a 20-year veteran of the business. "The way the professional traders have been whipsawed both ways is unprecedented."

Stock prices on exchanges around the world had taken a beating before the New York stock markets even opened Monday. Added to that was the dour prediction of Joseph Granville, an investment adviser and former Wall Street analyst. Last week, he forecast a steep drop in British stock prices and later forecast a "blue Monday" for the New York Stock Exchange this week.

Early trading on the New York and American stock exchanges threatened to fulfill that prediction. The Dow Jones index fell more than 14 points in the first half hour, rallied, retreated and rallied again to wind up with a gain of 18.55.

At midday the mood became more buoyant in the Hutton trading room. One trader picked up the phone to place an order. Another stock sale? Hardly.

"Pea soup, crackers and a strawberry yogurt, please," he said. "And make sure it's strawberry."

Dixon Named As Chairman Of Division

Phillip R. Dixon has been selected to serve as chairman of the professional division for the Pitt County United Way for the second consecutive year.

A native of Wake Forest, Dixon graduated from the East Carolina University School of Business with honors in 1971. As an undergraduate he was a member of Phi Sigma Pi National Honor Fraternity and vice president of the ECU Student Government Association. He also was listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

Dixon later attended the School of Law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he served as associate justice of the UNC Honor Court and was editor-in-chief of the North Carolina Law Record.

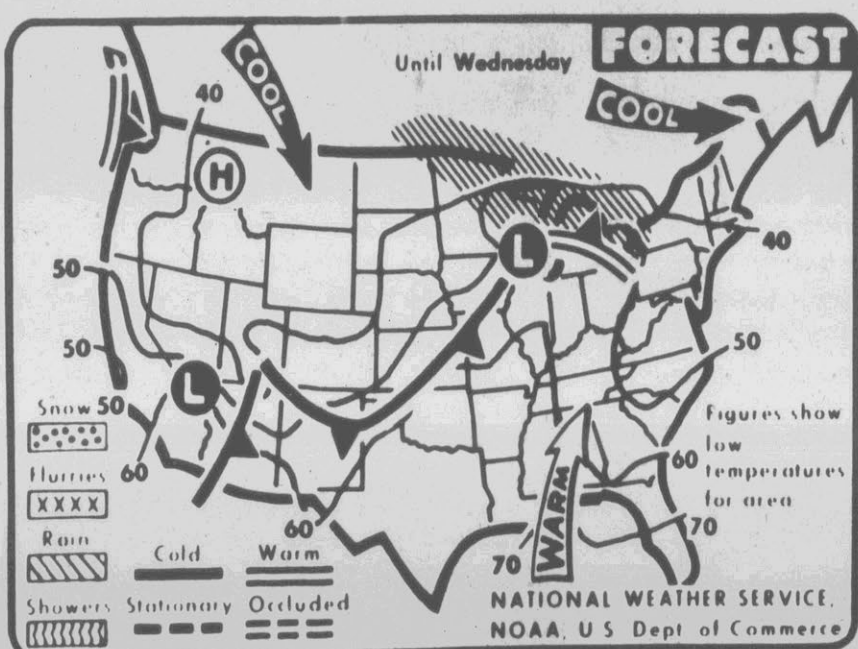

Dixon has served as an intern with the North Carolina Institute of Government, the North Carolina Supreme Court Library, the North Carolina Attorney General's Office and the North Carolina State Bureau of Investigation. Following his graduation from UNC in 1974 with a Juris Doctor degree, Dixon served as a law clerk and research assistant to the honorable Naomi Morris, chief judge of the North Carolina Court of Appeals before entering private practice. He is now a partner in the law firm of Dixon, Horne & Duffus.

Dixon serves as a member of the local board of directors of People Bank and Trust Company and has previously served both as president and secretary-treasurer of the Greenville Sports Club. Dixon is active in the ECU Pirate Club and currently serves as president of the ECU Alumni Association. He is a member of the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council and is vice chairman of the board at First Christian Church. Dixon and his wife, Candace, have two sons, Phil Jr. and Joseph David.

Serving with Dixon in the professional division are Dr. James Carter, physicians; Bill Brewer, attorneys; Don Hardee, dentists; Joanne VerBurg, ministers; Mike Joyner, C.P.A.'s; Randy Doub, architects, engineers and surveyors, and Colleen White, allied health.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cool weather is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning for most of the nation. Warm weather is forecast for the Southeast, rain is expected over the Great Lakes. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
North Carolina will have sunny, cool weather through Wednesday, the National Weather Service reported today.

Light, mostly northeast breezes will keep temperatures in the 70s this afternoon. As high pressure drifts across the state tonight, winds will be nearly calm once again and another cool night is on tap.

Southwest breezes will return to the area on Wednesday as the area of high pressure drifts slowly off the southeast coast. This will start a gradually warming trend for the latter half of the week.

Under sunny skies Monday, temperatures rose into the low and mid-80s over much of the state east of the mountains. Across the mountains, temperatures ranged from the mid-60s in the north to near 80 in the far southwest.

The warmest area Monday was over the southeast portion of the state. Jacksonville and Fayetteville both reported a warm 87.

It remained clear all across the state during the night and winds were either light out of the northeast or at near calm. Pre-dawn temperatures were generally in the 40s in the west and low to mid-50s in the east.

Innocent Pleas To Assault On Inmate

WARTBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Three black inmates have pleaded innocent to charges in connection with the June stabbing of James Earl Ray and have selected a Chicago attorney to represent them.

Ray, 53, serving 99 years in the 1968 death of civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., suffered 22 stab wounds from a homemade knife in the June 4 attack in the law library at Brushy Mountain Penitentiary in Petros.

He was transferred June 17 to the Tennessee State Prison in Nashville.

The three inmates, charged with assault to commit murder, entered their pleas Monday at a hearing in Morgan County Circuit Court. A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Nov. 23.

They will be represented by Illinois attorney Isaiah Gant, one of a team of lawyers who represented 10 inmates convicted in May of killing three guards during a 1978 riot at the Pontiac Correctional Center in north central Illinois.

Gant said in August that he had received several letters from the three inmates.

The three accused in Ray's stabbing are John W. Partee of Nashville, sentenced to 99 years on a 1977 first-degree murder conviction; Jerome N. Ransom of Chattanooga, sentenced to 15 years on 1979 convictions of second-degree murder and larceny of an automobile, and Doc Walker of Memphis, sentenced to 100 years on a 1970 conviction of robbery with a deadly weapon.

Ray pleaded guilty to killing King on a Memphis motel balcony April 4, 1968, but has since recanted and says others killed the civil-rights leader who was in the west Tennessee city to mediate a

NEW YORK (AP) — A broad range of stock prices rose today in moderate trading, continuing a late rally in the previous session and following sharp gains in share prices on London and Tokyo markets.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which posted its best daily gain in six months Monday, was up another 9.99 points to 852.55.

Advances led declines 5 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume was 24.24 million shares after two hours of trading compared with 28.67 million shares in the same period Monday.

Reassured by Wall Street's performance, the London and Tokyo stock markets made strong recoveries today.

The Nikkei-Dow Jones index in Japan, which had scored its worst daily decline on Monday, came back today to post its best single-day rise. By midday in London, a key index had more than

Solidarity Announces Draft Program Terms

By THOMAS W. NETTER
 Associated Press Writer
GDANSK, Poland (AP) — The independent union Solidarity released a draft program today calling its own TV and radio stations, an end to censorship, more access to the state media and control over the courts and state enterprises.

The document will be discussed later in the congress. Most union officials expect it to undergo major changes during debate.

Solidarity delegates also were asked to support a proposal calling for the ouster of Polish media chief Stanislaw Loranc. The proposal was introduced by Krzysztof Turowski, a delegate from the central city of Lodz.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, who celebrated his 38th birthday today, was lifted into the air by delegates after an opening Roman Catholic Mass.

He also came under fire again from several delegates for his role as head of the Solidarity presidium which made a compromise with the Communist regime on a new law giving workers a share in naming managers of some factories.

Despite the criticism, most observers expect Walesa to retain his post as chief of the union.

The 800 delegates applauded 93-year-old economist Edward Lipinski Monday when he told them the Polish Communist Party's brand of socialism "has been destroying us for 30 years."

"I consider myself a socialist and have been a socialist since 1906," said Lipinski. "But the socialism created was a socialism of mismanagement unequalled in 200 years — a socialism of prisons, censorship and police."

"It is this socialism that is anti-socialist and anti-revolutionary," said Lipinski, a founder of the dissident group KOR who announced its dissolution to the congress.

KOR — the Committee for Social Defense — was founded in 1976 to help workers who were punished for participating in riots over food-price increases. Its leaders have been among the chief advisers of Lech Walesa and other leaders of Solidarity.

KOR's chairman, Jacek Kuron, told the congress the committee is ceasing to exist because it "has fulfilled its function. ... Now, with Solidarity, it has become superfluous."

Some union theorists believed the disbanding of KOR would remove a major target of Soviet and Polish leaders, who accuse it of manipulating the union. But the response of the official

School Bus, Transit Bus In Collision

No injuries and minor damages resulted from three accidents, one of them involving a city school bus and a local transit system vehicle, investigated Monday by Greenville Police.

Officers said that an 8:03 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Golden Road and Greenville Boulevard involved a school bus operated by Jeffrey Tyrone Heath of 415 Ash Street and a Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) system bus driven by Melvin Douglas Harrison of 1203-B Murtle Avenue.

Police reported that none of the 29 passengers on the school bus were injured and a single passenger on the transit vehicle was not hurt.

Damage was estimated at $50 to each vehicle and Heath was charged by police with a safe movement violation.

Willie James Best of Rt. 2, Nashville was charged with a safe movement violation following investigation of a 3:15 p.m. accident on Grande Avenue at Dickinson Avenue.

Officers said the accident involved vehicles operated by Best and Richard Caswell Carney of 1809 E. Fifth Street. Damages were estimated at $200 to the Carney vehicle and $100 to the vehicle operated by Best.

No charges were preferred following investigation of a 1 p.m. mishap on Greene Street 500 feet north from First Street involving a vehicle driven by William Alton Langley of Rt. 5, Greenville.

Police reported that a trailer being pulled by the Langley vehicle sustained damages estimated at $200 when it struck the Greene Street bridge. Damage to the bridge was estimated at $100.

New Contract For Conductor
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Andre Previn, the conductor whose name is linked with Pittsburgh as closely as that of U.S. Steel, will remain in the Steel City for at least another two years.

Previn has signed a two-year contract to remain music director of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

"There is no orchestra that has given me greater pleasure and satisfaction than the Pittsburgh Symphony," Previn said Monday. "I am grateful to be invited to remain at its helm, and look forward to a long and productive relationship."

Terms of Previn's contract for the 1982-83 season were not disclosed.

Previn, music director of the London Symphony for 11 years and now conductor emeritus there, has been Pittsburgh's music director since 1976. He also had been music director of the Houston Symphony for one year.

Epilepsy Meet To Be Held
 The 1981 Epilepsy Foundation of America national conference will be held Oct. 9-11 in Washington, D.C. at the Washington Marriott Hotel.

The theme for this year's meeting is "Working Towards Independence for People with Epilepsy."

The purpose of the conference is to provide a forum for interested professionals and lay-persons to exchange ideas and information on every aspect of the disorder and treatment.

For more information, contact Scott Luce at 752-3769 before Oct. 5.

Report Seventh Interception
WASHINGTON (AP) — An incident in which two Air Force jets were ordered into a "scramble" off the Virginia coast was the seventh time this year such action has been necessary after two Soviet aircraft crossed into this nation's air defense identification zone, officials report.

The Soviet Tu-95 Bears flew into the zone about 225 miles east of Norfolk just before 8 a.m. Monday, said Air Force spokesman Maj. Robert Nicholson. The Soviet planes flew eastward before the pilots of the two F-106 fighters sent from Langley Air Force Base could identify them as reconnaissance or bomber versions of the turboprop-powered Tu-95.

Nicholson described the incident as routine.

Drop Charges
SAN DIEGO (AP) — Charges against three petty officers of assault, violating orders and mistreating men aboard the carrier USS Ranger have been dropped for lack of evidence.

Rear Adm. Paul T. Gillerist, commanding officer of Naval Base San Diego, took the action Monday after a prosecutor said there was too little evidence to proceed with the scheduled courts-martial.

Roy Innis In Hot Water

NEW YORK (AP) — The legal problems of Roy Innis, leader of the Congress of Racial Equality, continued to grow as he faced not only assault and contempt charges but also eviction from his apartment.

Innis, 47, was ordered to appear Thursday in Manhattan Supreme Court to explain why he should not be held in contempt of court for failing to appear in a police line-up. He has contended it would be humiliating to him and his organization.

The line-up order came in connection with charges that last month he assaulted Amstead Rice, 31, who allegedly was caught stealing Innis' car radio.

Innis, who has been chairman of CORE since 1968, also lost an attempt Monday to block eviction from his Manhattan apartment.

Acting state Supreme Court Justice Shirley Fingerhood upheld a judgment issued April 23 when Innis failed to appear for a civil eviction trial. He had been sued for alleged failure to pay 22 months rent, totaling $6,072.

Innis said he was unable to show up for the trial because he was out of town. His attorney, Raymond Leffler, said Innis has resumed paying rent and had witheld it because of a broken stove and refrigerator, leaks, and defective front door and living room ceiling.

Ultimately To Return Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — The generals who seized control of Turkey a year ago ultimately will return the country to civilian rule, predict three former U.S. ambassadors to that nation.

Former ambassadors Robert Komer, George C. McGhee and William B. Macomber took part in a day-long discussion of Turkish foreign and economic policy Monday. Former CIA director William Colby also participated in the conference, sponsored by the Center for Strategic Studies at Georgetown University and the International Bank.

Colby said the Turkish armed forces intervened to "restore discipline" after a rising tide of terrorism and violence. He said he believes they will step aside once they succeed in "putting the house back together again."

Colby's view was supported by the three former envoys.

Would Protect Treaty Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twenty-one Pacific Northwest Indian tribes would be denied treaty-protected fishing rights if the proposed Steelhead Trout Protection Act is approved, and therefore it is opposed strongly by the Reagan administration, an Interior Department official says.

Deputy Assistant Interior Secretary Roy H. Sampsel told the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs Monday the legislation would deny the Indians' fishing rights "in order to transfer the right to sportsmen."

The act would bar commercial fishing of the trout by Indians.

The steelhead, a freshwater-born, sea-going version of the rainbow trout, has a reputation as a fighter that makes it highly sought by anglers.

Porter
TARBORO — Mrs. Mary Flossie Porter, 76, died Saturday in Edgecombe General Hospital. She was the wife of Joe Nathan Porter and the mother of Mrs. Susie Moore of Bethel. Funeral arrangements are incomplete at the Hemby-Willoughby Mortuary here.

Williams
Mrs. Bessie Lewis Tripp Williams, 68, died Monday at Pitt Memorial Hospital. Her residence was 121 Blount St. in Winterville.

The funeral service will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Ariel S. Yorkman, pastor of the Greenville Church of God. Burial will be in the Winterville Cemetery.

Mrs. Williams was born in Beaufort County and lived most of her life in the Winterville Community. She had been employed as a reeler at Fieldcrest Mills for 28 years. She was first married to Wiley J. "Jack" Tripp and he died in 1973. She later married George Williams.

She is survived by her husband, George Williams; two sons: Bernice Tripp of Greenville, Jasper Tripp of Winterville; a step-son, Steve Williams of Greenville; a step-daughter, Mrs. Pat Ellis of Lansing, Mich.; a brother, Willie Ray Lewis of Rt. 2, Greenville; six sisters: Mrs. Lena Mae Joyner of Winterville, Mrs. Fronnie Lee Manning of Kinston, Mrs. Letha Belle Jukes of Tampa, Fla., Mrs. Lola Gray Douglas of Frost Proof, Fla., Mrs. Nell Gray of Tampa, Fla., Mrs. Velma Herring of Oak Ridge, Tenn.; and four grandchildren and nine step-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday and at other times will be at the home of a son, Jasper Tripp, 227 Railroad St., Winterville.

Bears Not Getting It Done; Fall 24-7

CHICAGO (AP) — Even the towels thrown in the Chicago locker room fell short of their intended mark, strewn sloppily about the carpeting like a reminder of the soggy performance most of the Bears thought they'd left behind on the playing field.

"It looks like we can't do anything right," defensive tackle Alan Page said after the Los Angeles Rams had dismantled Chicago 24-7 before a national television audience Monday night. "I think everybody on this team has done enough soul-searching and trying to do things right — but we're just not getting it done."

How bad were the Bears? So bad that the only thing that prevented Bob Parsons from punting following each of the Bears' first 12 possessions were a pair of fumbles by Chicago's Walter Payton and an interception by Los Angeles' Joe Harris.

So bad that three Chicago quarterbacks managed to complete just one pass to a wide receiver, and that one went to Brian Baschnagel for all of three yards. "I really don't have a whole lot to say," said Bears Coach Neill Armstrong. "We got beat and we looked bad getting beat. Sometimes you can lose and play tough, but the Rams made us look bad tonight." The Rams started the game by moving 71 yards in just five plays, capping the brief — 1:42 elapsed time — drive when Wendell Tyler powered over from the 2-yard line for the first of his two scores.

And Los Angeles quarterback Pat Haden, who finished 13 of 29 for 210 yards gave Chicago an idea of what the night would be like by completing his first three passes in the drive, the big play coming on a 44-yard hookup with Billy Waddy to the Chicago 2. "That's the first chance I've had to get it together," said Haden, architect of the Rams' second victory in four outings. "It seems that in every game something happens. Yes, it was a big game for me."

The Rams' lead was extended to 10-0 by the intermission after placekicker Frank Corral connected from 24 yards late in the second quarter. The Bears, already beat up heading into the locker room, had to leave starting quarterback Vince Evans and wide receiver Rickey Watts behind because of injuries.

LeRoy Irvin then put the game on ice with an electrifying 55-yard punt return for a touchdown. It marked the first time a Ram had returned a punt for a score in 20 years, the last being Dick Bass, who went 90 yards against Green Bay back in 1961. "Sure, I was aware of it," said Irvin. "The coaches keep reminding us it's been 20 years every time we go into a punt drill. I had some good blocking. That's what it takes to return a punt."

Early Indication

Chicago Bears' Matt Suhey (26) waits for a pass from quarterback Vince Evans during the first quarter of last night's game in Chicago. Los Angeles Ram defender Carl Ekers (55) looks on. Suhey failed to catch the ball and it was only one of the frustrations for the Bears as the Rams went on to record a lopsided victory. (AP Laserphoto)

Wilson Has A Problem: Which QB Does He Start Against ECU

From Wire and Staff Reports DURHAM, N.C. — Duke has quarterback problems.

But the problem is not what most would expect. The Blue Devils have two "starting" quarterbacks, leaving coach Red Wilson with a choice to make before Saturday's game with East Carolina.

Should he start the quarterback who played in Duke's only win this year? Or should he start last season's ACC Rookie of the Year, considered one of the finest passers in the nation?

Decisions like that could make a coach say just about anything.

"We're going to do what's right for the team," Wilson said Monday at his weekly news conference. "When you do what's right, you certainly aren't going to do what's wrong."

Duke starting quarterback Ben Bennett was knocked out of action when he hurt his shoulder in the loss to Ohio State. Backup Ron Sally took over in the South Carolina game, but played poorly.

But in the 29-24 victory over Virginia, Sally proved himself. He hit 18 of 26 passes for 336 yards and two touchdowns.

Wilson refuses to say who the starter will be against the Pirates this early in the week.

"I can't say today but he certainly has proved he is a starting quarterback," Wilson said of Sally. "He's earned a chance to be the number one quarterback. But a lot will depend on practice this week."

Wilson said Bennett's shoulder is improving, but he added, "Until he can play, he won't."

Wilson is not disconcerted by the situation that confronts him.

"I'm just delighted that we have two fine quarterbacks," he said. "We feel now that we have two quarterbacks that can move the football. If one can't, the other can." The East Carolina game is something special for Wilson and the team.

They would like to even the series record between the two schools, which stands 2-1 in East Carolina's favor. And Wilson is happy to be playing on real grass again after three straight away games on artificial surfaces.

Also, it is the Blue Devils' first game in the newly renovated Wallace Wade Stadium. Wilson especially would like his team to do well because of a feature in the new press box — instant replay.

Wilson's major concern about the Pirates is the wishbone offense.

"You have to change your whole concept of defense to defend against it," he said.

He also is concerned because East Carolina has "more team speed than any team we'll face this year."

EC Women Host Heels

East Carolina University's women's volleyball team opens its home season tonight, hosting the University of North Carolina. Tipoff in Minges Coliseum is set for 7 p.m.

East Carolina comes into the match with a 2-6 record, having lost four of five matches Friday and Saturday in the N.C. State Invitational. Several starters were missing with injuries at the time, however. Lita Lamas, the top rated Lady Pirate player, who missed the tournament, is not expected back for this match.

Dream Finally Comes True As Booters Host State In Ficklen

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer When Brad Smith was playing soccer at East Carolina in the early 1970s he dreamed of a time when the Pirates might display their talents in Ficklen Stadium.

The years passed and Smith graduated, his dream unfulfilled. But Smith did not give up. His playing days over, Smith became ECU's head coach and continued to press for an opportunity to showcase in Ficklen Stadium what is football to all the world except American.

The work has finally paid off. Come Wednesday night at 7:30 Smith's dream will be fulfilled when the Pirates play host to highly-regarded North Carolina State in Ficklen Stadium.

"When I first got here we used to sit and look at Ficklen Stadium and say how it'd be great to play there," Smith said. "Then, when I became coach I kept asking every year and fortunately this year everything fell into place for us."

In the past Smith's requests have been turned down for any number of reasons, the main one, however, being the football team was playing the next weekend and officials were concerned about the field.

This year, however, that is not a problem. The Pirates do not return home for three weeks. That, coupled with the Pirates having NCSU on their schedule at the same time, opened the stadium gates to Smith and his team.

N.C. State, which beat ECU, 3-0, last season, enters the match with a 6-1 record, having lost only to then fifth-ranked Clemson, 5-3. The Tigers are now ranked third nationally while the Wolfpack fell out of the top 20 after being ranked 16th last week.

"State is loaded," Smith said. "They have the best team we'll play this year, although they are not ranked the highest."

"We're taking a risk," he added. "We're expecting a big crowd and we could be embarrassed, but I don't think so. I just hope the people realize we don't have the talent they have."

"But we're not moaning and groaning. We're saying to hell with all that stuff and let's just go play the game."

Earlier this week, however, after seeing his Pirates lose two straight matches — to Campbell and to Guilford — Smith was moaning and groaning.

"I was not pleased with our last week, in fact I was very upset," Smith said. "We were just going through motion. We got outstuffed at Campbell and at Guilford."

Smith realizes a similar performance Wednesday night could be devastating to not only his team but to the ECU soccer program itself. "If we lay down and die I'll kill them," Smith said. "I don't want that to happen to this team or to this program."

"I don't know how much this game could mean for the team, but if it is a big thing for the program to be playing in Ficklen. We're trying to build our program and I feel like this is the key first step."

It will not, however, be an easy step. The Wolfpack, one of the most offensive-minded teams on ECU's schedule, are led by three foreign players: freshman striker Sam Okpodu, sophomore striker Prince Ofejuku and sophomore midfielder Chris Ogu.

Okpodu leads the team with 10 goals and one assist. Ogu has seven goals and nine assists while Afejuku, the Atlantic Coast Conference player-of-the-year last year, has five goals and five assists.

Others the Wolfpack rely on are senior strikers Jerry McKeown (one goal, nine assists) and Steve Green (four goals, three assists). NCSU's top defender is fullback Joey Elsmore (one goal, three assists).

Sophomore Chris Hutson will be in goal for NCSU. Hutson, who has recorded four shut outs, has 37 saves in seven games, a 1.0 goals-against-average per contest.

East Carolina counters with freshman forward Mark Hardy, who leads the Pirates in scoring with five goals and two assists, and senior forward/midfielder Brad Winchell, who has two goals and two assists.

Senior Steve Brown, who had 34 saves against the Wolfpack last year, will be in goal. Brown, who enters the game with a broken finger and stitches over his eye, has recorded 62 saves and a 2.0 goals-against-average and could easily be the most important player on the field for the Pirates.

"He's got to play well, he's got to have a tremendous game for us to play well and have a chance," Smith said. "If their players come down and miss two or three shots they should have made because Steve makes some great saves, they could start pressing and that could be the difference."

Just as important, however, could be whether the Pirates are able to control the tempo of the match. "Ideally, we want to make it a shorter game. If we can figure out how to do it. There are two sides to it: we try to score early and defend it or we can wait and try to score near the end of the game."

"I feel like the first 15 minutes are the most crucial point of the game," Smith said. "You can set the tone at that time. What we're really looking at is to try to contain them first of all."

"I think it will be a physical game. It has to be for us to do well. I think you'll have your share of collisions and your share of tackles and good aggressive play."

"I think it'll be exciting, not in terms of score but in terms of what big time soccer is about."

Notes...N.C. State has 11 full-ride scholarships in soccer while East Carolina has none...The Pirates do have two tuition waivers...NCSU's Jerry McKeown was drafted in the first round of the NASL coming out of junior college two years ago...Okpodu was a member of the Nigerian World Cup Team...

ECU's Steve Brown compiled a 1.75 goals-against average last year and was invited to the Macabee tryouts...Earlier this season Brown broke his own record when he recorded the sixth shutout of his career...

Tickets are $1 for adults while children and ECU students will be admitted free...

WEEKLY PRIZES

1st PRIZE $25.00

2nd Prize $15.00

CONTEST RULES

1. Thirty-two football games are placed on these pages. Pick the winner of each game (not the score) and write the team name opposite the advertiser's name on the entry blank. The entrant picking the most correct winners each week will be awarded $25.00. Second place $15.00
2. Pick a number which you think will be the most number of points scored by both teams in any one of the week's games listed and write your answer in the space provided on the entry blank. This will be used to break ties. In the event of a further tie the money will be equally divided between the winning entrants.
3. Only one entry per person per week. The contest is open to all except employees of The Daily Reflector and their immediate families.
4. Entries must be in The Daily Reflector office not later than 5:00 p.m. Friday or post marked not later than Friday p.m. Address entries to: FOOTBALL CONTEST, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. (Reasonable facsimile also accepted.)

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

HUNTER ORIGINAL OLDE TYME CEILING FANS

This was the fan that went 'round the world. These Hunter ceiling fans, the 1903 originals, swirled away heat in the steamy jungles of Africa, in the deserts of Morocco, on the shores of India and in the plantation homes of the South. A lot of people who remember those days still refer to all ceiling fans as "Hunter Fans". Johnny-come-lately's can't fool them—they know Hunter is the original.

Brewers Nip Bosox, Up By Half Game

By The Associated Press
Mark Brouhard hadn't hit a home run since May 10 — but he sure picked a good time to hit another.

Reaching the fences for only the second time this season, the Milwaukee outfielder drove in the game's only run Monday night to help the Brewers take a 1-0 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

"I just wanted to hit the ball hard," Brouhard said after leading the Brewers into first place in the American League East. "I hadn't hit a home run for four months and 90 times at bat, or something. I'm just happy I hit it for (Pete) Vuckovich because he wanted this one badly. With the stuff he had, I knew he was going to pitch a shutout."

Vuckovich pitched a three-hitter as the Brewers climbed over Detroit by a half-game after the Tigers lost 7-3 to Baltimore. The Red Sox dropped 1½ games back in third.

Frank Tanana had a three-hitter after six innings until Brouhard lined one of his pitches into the left center field seats at County Stadium.

"Roy Howell told me in the dugout to look for the fastball because Tanana had started me out with fastballs my first couple of times up," Brouhard said. "He gave me a fastball out over the plate. It was a good pitch to hit. I was fortunate that it hit my bat."

Of his gopher ball, Tanana said he threw a fastball on the outside part of the plate because he thought Brouhard "would be expecting one inside."

"I'd given him fastballs inside, yet he wasn't smart enough to change, to look for it again," Tanana said. "That's the problem with pitching to the young guys. They don't know enough to get set up for a pitch."

Tempers flared after Jim Gantner, the next hitter after Brouhard, pushed a drag bunt which Tanana fielded along the first base line. The two collided as Tanana tagged Gantner near the bag, and Tanana tumbled to the ground.

Tanana jumped up and started toward Gantner, shouting angrily as players from both sides streamed onto the field. There was some pushing and shoving, but no punches were thrown and no players were ejected.

Vuckovich improved his record to 14-4 while Tanana dropped to 3-10.

Orioles 7, Tigers 3
Eddie Murray drove in four runs with a double and a home run and Benny Ayala had a two-run homer as Baltimore defeated Detroit. The Orioles trailed 3-0 when they rallied for four runs in the third, with Murray's two-run homer capping the rally off George Capuzzello, 1-1.

Baltimore reliever Sammy Stewart, 4-7, who came on after Jim Palmer had retired only two Detroit batters, checked the Tigers on seven hits the rest of the way to pick up the victory.

"The difference tonight was that I'm seeing the ball pretty good of late," Murray said. "There's still a shot at the championship, but we really seem to have started late."

The Orioles are in fourth place, two games off the pace, with six days left in the regular season.

Royals 6, Twins 1
Willie Aikens and Hal McRae each clubbed two-run homers and Dennis Leonard pitched a five-hitter to lead Kansas City over Minnesota. The victory put the first-place Royals 3½ games ahead of the Twins in the AL West.

Aikens' blast, his 27th of the season, came in the second off loser Brad Havens, 3-8. McRae connected for his seventh homer in the ninth off reliever Dan Cooper.

Leonard, who has won five of his last six starts, struck out eight and improved his record to 12-11.

Indians 6, Yankees 2
Jorge Orta drove in three runs and Miguel Dilone scored three to support the six-hit pitching of Tom Brennan and spark Cleveland over New York. Brennan, 2-1, struck out three and walked two as he hurled his first complete game in the majors.

Orta slugged a two-run single to knock out Yankee starter Rick Reuschel, 4-3, and give the Indians a 3-0 lead. Orta then singled home another run as the Indians put the game away with a three-run seventh.

Reggie Jackson had a solo homer for the Yankees, his third in three days and his 15th for the season.

Iowa Vaults Onto List After Second Upset Win

By The Associated Press
A stranger has joined the nation's college football powers.

Occupying the No. 18 spot in this week's Associated Press poll, released Monday, was the University of Iowa, which has gone without a winning season longer than any other major school in the country.

The top 20 appearance ends a 19-year drought for the Hawkeyes, 2-1, who vaulted into prominence this season with upsets of Nebraska and UCLA. The last time Iowa was ranked was October 1962 after the Hawkeyes beat Oregon State in their season opener. An Iowa team hasn't finished above .500 since 1961.

A much more familiar name, Southern California, remained the No. 1 team. The Trojans pulled out a last-second, 28-24 victory over Oklahoma to become the first team this season to hold the No. 1 ranking for more than one week.

Iowa earned its Top 20 berth with a 20-7 victory over UCLA, sixth last week. That came two weeks after the Hawkeyes jolted Nebraska 10-7 when the Cornhuskers were seventh.

"Super, that's great!" Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said when told of his team's ranking. "I guess it is anyway. I'm not sure how authoritative the polls are."

Fry added, "It's nice to get some recognition." He said he was pleased that Iowa State, No. 20, also was rated. It was the first time both schools had appeared together in the AP rankings.

"I was hoping both of the Iowa universities would be ranked," said Fry, whose team plays at winless Northwestern Saturday. "That's good for the state."

11th to 10th with a 41-20 victory over Colorado.

Alabama was 11th, followed by Washington, Georgia, Clemson, Southern Methodist, UCLA, Miami, Fla., Iowa, Arkansas and Iowa State.

The major casualties from last week's list were Notre Dame, which was 13th when it lost to Purdue 15-14, and Nebraska, which had been 15th. This is only the second time since the 1969 season that Nebraska has not appeared in the weekly rankings.

Four Divisional Races Still Hot With Just Six Days Of Play Left

By The Associated Press
With just six days remaining in the baseball's second season, the four divisional races are wide open.

The four first-half division winners — the New York Yankees, Oakland A's, Philadelphia Phillies and Los Angeles Dodgers — have all qualified for the divisional playoffs. If any one of those teams finishes first in the second half of the season — the Dodgers will not — then the team that finishes second during that half will qualify to meet the repeat winner in the divisional playoffs.

The American League East has the biggest logjam at the top with five teams within four games of the first-place Milwaukee Brewers.

The Brewers hold a half-game advantage over the Detroit Tigers with the Boston Red Sox 1½ games back and a half-game ahead of the Baltimore Orioles.

New York and Cleveland are playoffs. If any one of those teams finishes first in the second half of the season — the Dodgers will not — then the team that finishes second during that half will qualify to meet the repeat winner in the divisional playoffs.

The American League East Milwaukee, Detroit, Boston and Baltimore all have five games left.

The Brewers, who will play 53 games in the second half of the season — one more than both Detroit and Boston and two more than Baltimore — will have a home crowd behind them for all five games. They are scheduled to meet Boston tonight and Wednesday and conclude the season with a three-game weekend series with runnerup Detroit.

The Tigers finish their home season tonight and Wednesday with games against Baltimore, which returns home for a three-game weekend series with the Yankees.

The Kansas City Royals hold a 1½-game lead over the Oakland A's in the AL West with seven games remaining. The Minnesota Twins are 3½ games out and meet the Royals in two must-win games tonight and Wednesday. If the Royals sweep those games, they will qualify for the divisional playoffs because Minnesota cannot finish ahead of them in the standings for the second season.

The Royals must also play three games with Oakland and two with Cleveland. The Twins finish the season with three games at Chicago.

The Montreal Expos hold a half-game lead over St. Louis in the National League East with both teams having six games left.

The Expos and Cards will play each other just one more time — in St. Louis tonight. The Expos also have two games with Pittsburgh and three with the New York Mets, all on the road. The Cards will play two at Philadelphia and close with three games at Pittsburgh.

Chicago and Philadelphia are 3½ games out, and any combination of three Expos wins and Philadelphia or Chicago losses will eliminate them. The Mets will be eliminated by two Expo victories or Met losses.

The Houston Astros hold a 2½-game lead over the Cincinnati Reds in the NL West.

Phillips Asks Better Security

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The San Francisco Hat Caper illustrates the need for tighter security at sports events, said Coach Bum Phillips of the New Orleans Saints.

"It's just poor security when they can run down there and do something like that," said Phillips, who never goes anywhere without a cowboy hat of the sort that was snatched from his head Sunday in Candlestick Park. "He could have run down there and stabbed me."

"We need better security everywhere — all of us."

And although the hat was grungy when he got it back, Phillips declined to press charges when police finally caught the man who snatched it as the Saints' coach was heading toward the locker room at halftime.

"They finally got it back to me — in used condition," he said Monday. "It was so bad, I just left it."

Phillips also made light of what some television viewers interpreted as an obscene gesture — pointing what appeared to be his middle finger in the stands. He said he was pointing out the fleeing culprit.

"There he is. Yonder he goes," was how Phillips interpreted the gesture.

He finished the game in a Saints coaching cap, which clashed with his customary Western garb.

"I guess I'll have to get me one of those old Tom Mix chin straps," he said. Then he reconsidered. "No, I guess a hat would be cheaper than my neck."

By The Associated Press
Will the real St. Louis Cardinals please stand up? Perhaps tonight will tell the story.

The Redbirds have spent most of the second half of the season trading hot and cold streaks, going from hope to happiness to despair and back again.

Darrell Porter hit a two-run double in St. Louis' five-run fourth inning and the Cardinals beat first-place Montreal 6-2 Monday night, bringing them to within one-half game of the lead.

Another victory over the Expos tonight will put the Cardinals back in the National League East lead with five days left in the season.

“That was a big one tonight and tomorrow's just as big,” said third baseman Ken Oberkell after Monday night's game. “We're getting good pitching and starting to get the big hits. All we've got to do is play our game. Hopefully we've got the momentum right now.”

Momentum has been a sometime thing with the Cardinals since the season resumed Aug. 10 after the players' strike. They won seven of nine from Aug. 26-Sept. 4 to take a 3 1/2-game lead, lost five in a row from Sept. 5-9, won seven of eight from Sept. 11-17, then lost seven of eight the next eight days. Now they have won three in a row again.

“We've been playing pretty good,” said Cards Manager Whitey Herzog. “Last week we messed up a few plays. They're going to do that when it's their first time in a pennant race.”

Tommy Herr's infield hit ignited the Cards in the fourth after the Expos grabbed a 1-0 lead in the top of the inning on Gary Carter's RBI double.

fly gave St. Louis a 2-1 lead off starter Scott Sanderson, 9-7. Then Porter's double off Grant Jackson brought in two more runs and pitcher John Martin capped the rally with an RBI single.

“I've been pressing, especially at home,” said Porter, who started the night with a .226 batting average. “I feel better. I know that we've got a good ballclub. If we can run off a little streak, we can win this whole thing.”

Martin, 7-5, was relieved by Jim Kaat with one out in the seventh after Larry Parrish's solo homer. Kaat earned his fourth save.

Montreal Manager Jim Fanning was not discouraged by the loss.

“I told the players that we're still a half game in first place,” he said. “I have confidence in (tonight's starter) Bill Lee. I have great confidence in my players. I think there's a great confidence among them. It's kind of nice to have a half-game lead at this time of the year.”

Astros 2, Padres 1
Art Howe slapped a two-out, bases-loaded single on a checked swing in the ninth inning to give Houston its victory over San Diego and give the Astros a 2 1/2-game lead over the Reds in the NL West.

Juan Eichelberger, 8-8, had allowed only four hits in the first eight innings, but he allowed a single to Tony Scott and two walks in the ninth before Howe connected for the game-winner.

San Diego scored in the seventh on Terry Kennedy's homer.

Giants 4, Reds 0
San Francisco stayed 3 1/2 games behind the Astros and dropped Cincinnati to 2 1/2 games back as little-used Al Hargeseimer and Greg Minton combined for a four-hit shutout.

Hargeseimer, 1-1, scattered four hits, struck four and walked four in seven innings before Minton relieved in the eighth.

Jerry Martin hit a two-run homer and scored twice for the Giants, who handed the Reds only their third loss in 14 games.

Phillies 12, Mets 4
Lonnie Smith increased his consecutive-game hitting streak to 17 with two singles and a triple to lead Philadelphia's 12-hit attack against New York.

Athletes Still Not Helping Run Olympics But Foot Is In The Door

BADEN-BADEN, Germany (AP) — The athletes are not helping to run the Olympic Games yet, but they have one foot in the door.

During the five days of the 11th Olympic Congress, which ended Monday, the invited athletes stole the spotlight. Even Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), said so.

“Their speeches were among the very best of the whole congress,” Samaranch said at a news conference.

“After the wonderful speech made by Sebastian Coe, it was clear the athletes are ready to work with the IOC.”

Coe was the elected chairman of 30 athletes who spent six days in their own room discussing Olympic problems and composing speeches on various aspects of the movement. He was the last speaker on the congress' agenda Monday.

And he won instant success. He called for a tightening of doping regulations and stricter penalties for athletes who use drugs. The congress endorsed his views.

The British track star, who won the 1,500 meters gold medal in Moscow last year and currently holds three world records, asked that the group of athletes in Baden-Baden be recognized as a consulting body and be called to another meeting next year.

Samaranch indicated he was sympathetic to continuing links between the athletes and the IOC. He said he wanted to nominate one IOC member to live in the Olympic Village during the Games to maintain that contact.

Samaranch said he thought Peter Tallberg, 44-year-old Finnish member of the IOC, was the ideal man to live in the village. Tallberg competed in the sailing events at Tallinn last year and was the contact man between the IOC and the athletes at the Baden-Baden congress.

In the past, athletes have not been allowed to participate in discussion of Olympic affairs. A small group was invited to the last congress at Varna, Bulgaria, in 1973 but were not asked to speak.

Philip O. Krumm, former president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, made a direct appeal to Samaranch to bring the athletes into permanent consultation.

Krumm was USOC president when the American Athletes' Advisory Council was formed. It consists of 40 members and is allowed 11 votes at USOC meetings.

“The athletes have been a big success at Baden-Baden, and the IOC ought to keep in permanent touch with them,” said Krumm, who helped to plan the congress as a member of the IOC's tripartite commission. The commission incorporates representatives of the IOC, the 149 National Olympic Committees and the 26 international sports federations.

Mario Vazquez Rana, Mexican president of the Association of National Olympic Committees, also made a strong plea for an athletes' advisory panel to be set up on a permanent basis.

The final declaration of the congress, read by IOC director Monique Berlioux, said the IOC's notorious rule 26, governing the eligibility of athletes for the Games, should be maintained. But many speakers, including Coe, wanted the international federations to have power to interpret the rule in their own way.

The by-laws of the rule are expected to be revised at the IOC's session this week. Athletes, supported by other speakers, wanted some recompense for the growing time competitors sacrifice to attain the increasingly high Olympic standards.

The athletes and the congress agreed that Olympic ceremonies, including national flags and anthems, should be maintained.

Today, the candidate cities for the 1988 Games were making their bids. Nagoya in Japan and Seoul, capital of South Korea, were applying for the Summer Games. Three cities — Calgary in Canada, Cortina D'Ampezzo in Italy and Falun in Sweden — want to stage the Winter Games.

The IOC will vote on the 1988 venues Wednesday.

Brown, Shaffer Top Players

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Maryland tackle Gurnest Brown and North Carolina linebacker Lee Shaffer have been named Atlantic Coast Conference defensive players of the week.

Brown, a 256-pound, 6-foot-5 senior from Rocky Mount, was instrumental in helping Maryland take its first victory of the season — a 34-9 win over North Carolina State.

Brown had seven important tackles against the Wolfpack, including two quarterback sacks and another tackle that caused losses of 16 yards. He also caused a fumble, forced an interception, and broke up a pass. Against Maryland's wide-tackle-six defense, the Wolfpack managed only 260 yards overall.

Shaffer, a 6-foot-1, 213-pound senior from Durham, had 15 tackles in North Carolina's 56-14 romp over Boston College as the Tar Heels rolled to their third lopsided victory in as many weeks. Shaffer had 10 solo tackles and broke up a pass.

Earlier, Duke University quarterback Ron Sally and Maryland wingback Mike Lewis were named ACC offensive players of the week.

Sally, playing for the second straight week in place of injured starter Ben Bennett, completed 18 of 26 passes for 336 yards as the Blue Devils picked up their first win of the season, a 29-24 decision over Virginia.

The 6-foot-3, 200-pound Sally's passing yardage was the second highest for a single game in Duke history.

Former Army Officer Faces Espionage Sentence

SPY SUSPECT GUILTY — Joseph G. Helmich, Jacksonville where he pleaded guilty to a spy conspiracy charge. (AP Laserphoto)

By MATT BOKOR
Associated Press Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Joseph G. Helmich Jr., a former Army officer who admitted he sold military secrets to the Soviet Union, could get 10 years to life in prison for his guilty plea to a charge of conspiracy.

U.S. District Judge Susan Black ordered Helmich back to court Nov. 5 for sentencing on the charge. Helmich at first pleaded innocent, but switched to guilty Monday in a plea bargain.

The 44-year-old Jacksonville Beach man had been charged with four counts — three of espionage and one of conspiracy. Under the agreement, prosecutors dropped the espionage charges.

"This defendant was an absolute traitor to this country," U.S. Attorney Gary Betz told reporters. "The information he gave out caused serious harm to this country at a time when we had some of our countrymen serving in Vietnam."

Helmich was charged with contacting the Soviet Embassy in January 1963 while working with the U.S. Signal Corps in Paris. By July 1964, he allegedly was paid $131,000 for selling communications secrets.

Helmich's relationship with the Soviet spy network KGB spanned 17 years, the charges said.

Helmich told Mrs. Black the information he sold — code keys and maintenance instructions for a coding machine — wasn't as crucial to the nation's security in 1963 as the government contended.

"It was really getting limited use," he said.

He told the judge that "while I knew it was to the advantage of a foreign nation, it wasn't done with the intent to injure the United States of America." He enlisted in the Army in 1954 and quit as a chief warrant officer in 1966.

Peter Dearing, court-appointed defense attorney, said Helmich entered the plea agreement because a conviction on all four counts would have meant at least 40 years in prison before parole. One count means a 10-year minimum, he said.

Helmich also was concerned about the trial's effect on his family, Dearing said. The trial began Wednesday.

Helmich, a Fort Lauderdale native, was indicted by a federal grand jury July 14 and arrested the next morning. He pleaded innocent to the four counts July 16.

The plea change came early Monday afternoon. On Friday, an FBI agent testified before the jury that Helmich had confessed.

Special Agent James K. Murphy said Helmich said he had contacted the Russians because he would have been court-martialed for passing bad checks if he didn't come up with the money in 24 hours.

Murphy interviewed Helmich on Feb. 4, 1981 at a Niagara Falls, N.Y., hotel. At the time, Helmich was working as a tile-setter in Niagara Falls. He later moved to Jacksonville Beach.

A Soviet general from Moscow once gave Helmich a medal of heroism and told him was being promoted to a full colonel in the Soviet army," Murphy told the jury.

Urges Opposition To Greater Share

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says Southern governors should oppose efforts to force the states to take a greater share of Medicaid costs.

Hunt, chairman of the Southern Governors' Association committee on human resources, made the remarks during a meeting with other southern governors in Dorado, Puerto Rico.

A congressional proposal to limit federal payments would shift a greater financial burden to all states, and to southern states in particular, Hunt said.

"Once again we will need to stand up and fight this as vigorously as we did before, and hope that again we will succeed in persuading Congress that Medicaid funding is a federal responsibility that states simply cannot afford to assume," Hunt said.

Hunt offered a resolution that would put the governors on record "vigorously" opposing "any attempt to shift a greater portion of Medicaid burden to the states."

Congress also plans to study a proposal to change the formula used to figure Medicaid payments to the states in a way that would be unfavorable to southern states, Hunt warned.

The current system is based on a state's per capita income, with poorer states getting more federal money. The congressional study is to consider adding other factors to the formula, including the relative cost of living, state unemployment rates and per capita taxes.

"If there is any redistribution of these federal funds, there is only one way for them to go, and that is out of the hands of the states that need them most," Hunt said.

Hunt returns to North Carolina on Wednesday.

Investing Course Planned

"Fundamentals of Investing," an eight-week introductory course designed to aid both the beginning and intermediate investor, will be offered by Pitt Community College beginning Oct. 1. The class will meet on Thursday evenings from 7-10 p.m. and will end November 19.

Among the areas to be covered are basic investment strategy, how to analyze and buy stocks, planning for a financial future, tax-saving investments designed to minimize taxes and fixed income investments to provide a guaranteed income. Students will be taught how to read the "Wall Street Journal" and other financial press. Designing, developing and managing a mock portfolio will also be taught.

Bill Bedsole, account executive with Wheat First Securities will be the instructor. Total cost is $8 per person. Registration will begin at 6:45 p.m. on Oct. 1 in room 113, Humber Building, PCC campus.

For further information contact the Continuing Education Division at PCC, 756-3130, ext. 238 or 266.

Growth Hormone Trials Seen As Side Effects Eliminated

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The side-effects that delayed the testing of genetically engineered human growth hormone have been overcome, and the first tests of the drug could begin as early as Wednesday, researchers say.

Ten medical centers across the country will try the drug on a total of about two dozen children whose growth has been limited by a lack of the hormone, Stanford University pediatrician Raymond Hintz said Monday.

Dr. Selma Kaplan, a pediatrician at the University of California at San Francisco and the director of the study, said she understands the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has given its approval for the tests to begin.

The FDA said it could not comment.

Researchers had hoped to begin trials earlier this year, but the first preparation of the new hormone contained several impurities that caused fever, local swelling and other discomfort in adult males who volunteered for tests of the drug's side-effects.

"Basically, what that meant was back to the drawing board," said Hintz, who led the initial tests. A new preparation of the drug was made, and it was tested again this summer on a group of 15 adult males. "This time, everything looked clean," he said.

About one in 10,000 children is unable to produce enough of the hormone to grow at a normal rate, Ms. Kaplan said.

Other children lose the ability to produce the hormone because of tumors on the pituitary or elsewhere, or as the result of radiation treatments for cancer, she said.

Human growth hormone is conventionally obtained from the pituitary gland of cadavers. The new hormone, made by Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco, Calif., eventually could be much easier and cheaper to make. Hintz estimated that a year's supply of the conventionally prepared drug costs $4,000 when obtained from a commercial distributor.

Genentech declined comment on the study.

Genentech scientists made the hormone by splicing the human gene for growth hormone into the genetic material of bacteria, and tricking the bacteria into making the hormone as a natural by-product of their growth and development.

The hormone will be given to the children three times a week for a year, and their growth will be carefully measured, Ms. Kaplan said. Preliminary results from the study are not expected for at least six months, she said.

The hormone is one of the first products of genetic engineering to be tested in humans. Hoffman-La Roche has asked the FDA for approval to test genetically engineered interferon, and Eli Lilly and Co. has applied for permission to test insulin.

The institutions participating in the study of human growth hormone, in addition to Stanford and the University of California, are Washington University of St. Louis, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the University of Michigan, the University of Virginia, Yale University, the University of Pittsburgh, Baylor University in Waco, Texas, and the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

Few New Jobs From Business Tax Breaks

By DON WATERS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study done for an affiliate of the National Governors' Association challenges the popular assumption that tax breaks for business translate into new plants and jobs.

Business interests routinely trek to state legislatures each year and "promise that this or that special tax cut will pay for itself through the stimulus it provides to private taxable activity," said Michael Barker, policy-studies director for the Council of State Planning Agencies.

In actuality, however, "in enacting these pieces of tax gimmickry, (politicians) have done little if anything to improve the performance of their jurisdictions' economies," he said.

Barker commented in a statement Monday accompanying release of a study called "Taxes and Growth: Business Incentives and Economic Development." The study was done for the council by a private economist, Michael Kieschnick of San Francisco.

The 128-page study, which drew upon surveys of businesses and examined tax-incentive figures, said:

— Most firms that made new investments never considered any state but the one they chose, seldom were aware that incentives were available or where they were and rarely attributed any importance to them.

— Among most industries, the level of state business taxes had little or no discernible effect on investment decisions.

— General reductions in state business taxes, even if targeted to benefit industries thought to be especially in need of tax relief, were unlikely to stimulate new investment.

— The tax breaks were administered by the executive branch of state government with little oversight by the legislature or the public.

The incentives had their biggest growth during the 1970s, spurred by the 1974-75 recession, the effectiveness of business lobbyists and a series of industry-backed studies purporting to show the positive effects of tax breaks, the report said.

In 1969, 21 states exempted purchases of new equipment from sales taxes and only one state offered an income-tax credit for investment and employment development, it said. By 1980, the number had jumped to 31 and 15 states, respectively.

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPT. 30, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A tendency to look on the dark side of life should be replaced now by an awareness that you are able to make progress by keeping your nose to the grindstone. Maintain self-control.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A higher-up up may think you are not handling your duties wisely, so you have to prove that this is not the case.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Finish important work at hand before looking into new outlets. Don't take advice from one who is not qualified to give it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get facts and figures straight before discussing future with higher-ups. Avoid any arguments with associates. Relax tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) If you are in a bad mood today and may want to annoy an associate, it is wise to town down, or you could regret it.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't make any changes where your work is concerned, or you could spoil the plans of co-workers. Control your temper.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) This could be a strange day where work is concerned, so be alert at all times. Show others you can be relied upon.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Give more time at home to a situation that requires a practical solution. The evening is ideal for the social. Show that you have poise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Use courtesy in dealing with others and avoid arguments, or you could get into trouble. Show more devotion to loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to spend less and save more for the future, or you could regret it later. Consult business expert for advice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Take the treatments that eliminate any flaws you may have and make a better impression on others. Be more cheerful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Take care of all those small tasks that have been accumulating and steer clear of the social for now. Be wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Try not to be too critical of associates at this time. New ideas should be accepted so you can advance more quickly in your career.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she may want to take on the problems of others but teach to do so only when the cause is right. Direct the education along investigative lines for best results. A fine sportsman or sportswoman in this chart.

IRS Cashes Winning Card In Elk Club Bingo

By JIM LUTHER
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — There'll be no federal tax refund for the folks who run the weekly bingo game down at the Elks lodge in Waco, Texas. Even though the collectors and cashiers are paid off in drinks, Uncle Sam says the game's really a business.

In a decision made public Monday, the U.S. Tax Court held the lodge liable for $648 in taxes on the bingo and bar sales for the 1975 tax year. However, the court rejected a move by the Internal Revenue Service to add a $162 penalty to the bill.

The IRS did not dispute that the club's usual income — such as membership dues — is exempt from federal income taxes.

The question was whether fees paid by bingo players was taxable as income that had no direct relation to the club's reason for being tax-exempt in the first place.

The lodge was created to "promote the principle of charity, justice, brotherly love and fidelity, to promote welfare and enhance the happiness of its members." The court, in effect, held that running a bingo game had nothing to do with those goals and thus was an unrelated business subject to tax.

According to court files, the lodge was open four nights a week and ran a 3½-hour bingo game once a week for members and their wives. An average of 35 persons played each week.

The bingo game can't be a business, the lodge argued, because most of the workers performed without compensation. The bartender, located down the hall from the game, worked even on nights when there was no bingo; the Lady Elks provided sandwiches for the players and were reimbursed only for expenses; the collectors and cashiers were rewarded only with 25-cent soda pop, 35-cent beer and 75-cent whisky.

The court agreed the Lady Elks were not working for pay, but didn't buy the other arguments.

It's true the bar was outside the bingo room, wrote Judge Sheldon Ekman. But the collectors and cashiers "considered the bar close enough to consume $435.50 in drinks during the year." He calculated that would average 6.3 beers or three mixed drinks or 8.9 bottles of soda per worker each bingo night.

"However, even if we were to disregard the liquid compensation received by the collectors and cashiers we would still be unable to conclude that substantially all the work was performed without compensation," the judge wrote.

The facts "indicate that the free drinks were more than a mere gratuity provided at no extra cost to ... (the lodge), but were intended as compensation, however little, for the workers' services," Ekman wrote.

The lodge noted that federal law exempts from taxation certain non-commercial bingo games operated by charitable organizations.

The judge wasn't impressed. At the time, he noted, bingo was illegal in Texas.

A Review

Two Movies Good Examples Of Extremes In Human Disposal

Two movies, one still playing and one that was here for a one-showing spot only, are interesting examples of extremes in contrast on the theme of the cruel art of human disposal.

"Body Heat," now playing at Buccaneer movies, is an excellent clinical study of murder with no attempt to insert more than a few threads of mystery central to the story development. The film has a clearly outlined beginning, builds steadily to the foreplanned climatic act of murder and continues to sustain interest to the end despite a strong element of predictability.

The chilling power of this movie lies in a tough, honest script dealing with a fundamental human emotion as old as time — the wiles of a ruthless woman who will use any means to reap riches for her own selfish purpose.

Kathleen Turner as the greedy, restless wife and William Hurt as the attorney who is fatally entrapped in her web give superb performances as the story consistently builds to its ultimate conclusion. The body heat of the title refers both to the enervating heat of Florida in summer — the locale of the action, and as the symbol of the woman's seemingly insatiable carnal desires.

Like a spider, the rich woman, a weekday widow while her husband works elsewhere, cunningly lures the attorney into her scheme. At first feigning reluctance to be involved in an affair, once it begins, she uses her body and her avowals of love to keep the willing victim mesmerized. His own conscience, the good advice of friends that he is headed for danger are of no avail. And he is the one who proposes the husband's murder and carries it out, with the technical assistance of a criminal indebted to him.

Once the gruesome deed is accomplished, the attorney is believably beset with misgivings and we sense he is doomed to be accused. Soon too it becomes apparent that the murder is but the major step of the woman's overall scheme. She has resorted, and continues to resort to actions weaving a tighter web of evidence against her lover.

The movie ends with Hurt in prison, having figured out the design of her total scheme. Understandably, it's all too complex for his friends to believe. The fade out shot is of the triumphant conspirator, calmly vacationing in an exotic place, accompanied by a handsome young man lolling by her side.

Few movies today have the compelling, relentless clarity found in "Body Heat."

I was a little late arriving at the screening of "The Bloody Avengers," the late show at Park Theater last Friday night. However, I have been informed it's one of those potboilers filmed in Hong Kong, and that assumption is borne out by the fact that the English sound track is about ten degrees off synchronization in matching lip movements of the actors. Some snippets of Chinese have been retained, and a considerable portion of the dialogue is in German in scenes featuring immaculately clad Kaiser troops in white, baby blue, scarlet and gold braid that any Gilbert-Sullivan producer would surely envy.

The plot vaguely has something to do with the presence of foreign devils on Chinese soil during the Boxer Rebellion. The Japanese are the primary villains, but there's neat ranks of white devils too — vividly indicated at one point by two American flags (with all 50 stars despite the fact the Boxer Rebellion took place in 1900) bracketing an array of colorful banners not attributable to any known country, kingdom, or territory — but it makes a gorgeous festive display anyway.

To combat the intolerable presence of undesirables on their sacred soil, a rag-tag collection of Chinese set out to destroy the intruders. These are members of a secret society, Righteous and Harmonious Fists who hold a belief that certain athletic rituals endows them with supernatural powers, including that of being impervious to bullets.

Obviously, every ingredient that occurs to the makers of this film are thrown in willy-nilly. The brilliant tinsel glory of Chinese opera with the fighters sporting thick eye and facial make-up; blithe borrowings from Karmayoga tenets; sub-plots of black market merchants and the appearance of inscrutable mandarins are but part of the proceedings.

The result of this haphazard potpourri turns out to be a fast-paced boisterous bedlam of sheer entertainment, with excitement coming as fast and furious as the explosion of firecrackers on a Chinese holiday. The Boxers swagger off to battle, some armed with bare fists, others with shining broadswords, all happily convinced of their invincibility against firearms.

Naturally, they fall like popcorn, at the same time giving good account of themselves in the incredible number of fallen foes.

Their spirited romp through battle after battle triggers any number of amazing choreographic feats. Surely no other film ever made has been as richly gifted in the number of actors capable of such turbulent acrobatics. The film can also claim the distinction of presenting a marveously varied chorus of dying grunts, and perhaps no other movie can match the gallons of red paste (too thick for ketchup) smeared lavishly on foe and friend alike.

Paradoxically, the wholesale body count of victims, friend and foe, does not convey a true sense of violence. And maybe with American audiences in mind, the movie ends with one remaining hero strutting off all alone in the sunset. Be on the look-out in case "The Bloody Avengers" should return. It's the most fun movie since "Yellow Submarine."

The Ruitenboer Tournament in Holland produced a number of interesting hands. We want to thank "Bridge," the official magazine of the Dutch Bridge Federation, for their excellent report on the event, from which these hands were taken.

Because of the possibility of a misfit, South should do no more than bid two spades at his second turn. North has enough in reserve to raise to three spades (Queen-x is more than adequate support for a suit that has been rebid), and South's continuation to game is automatic.

Assume the neutral lead of a trump. If declarer gets careless and banks all on the heart suit, he will go down. After drawing trumps and cashing the top hearts, he will end up losing three diamond tricks and a club (or four diamond tricks), unless the defenders err.

It does not take a great knowledge of the probabilities to be aware that six missing cards are likely to break 4-2. If the hearts aren't going to run, declarer must cast about for some other means to fulfill his contract.

The club suit offers such a possibility. See what happens if declarer wins the opening lead in his hand and immediately leads a low club, while carefully retaining a trump in dummy to prevent the defenders from collecting three diamond tricks after winning the ace of clubs. Even if East has the ace and wins it, declarer will be able to get two diamond discards, one on the hearts and one on the high club, after drawing trumps.

The situation is at least as good if West has the ace of clubs. If he rises with the ace, the defenders will have to cash their diamond tricks at once to prevent declarer from scoring an overtrick. And if West ducks the ace to prevent setting up two good clubs in dummy, declarer has no trouble holding his losses in diamonds to three tricks. Simple but effective.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07648. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

Folk Arts Fair Presented

Pitt Community College, the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission and the Pitt County Home Economics Office presented the "Folk Arts Fair" on Sept. 26 at the Greenville Community Center.

The festival included crafts, music, dance, painting and other art forms.

Crafts exhibited inside the Community Building were examples of various facets of crafts education offered by the sponsors. The home demonstration clubs and others had persons demonstrating spinning, stitching, macrame, crochet, knitting, weaving, quilting, Christmas crafts, hand-tied fringe, silk flowers, rug hooking, baskets, lamp shade decoration and chair bot-toming.

Performers and artists included Elliot Frank, current visiting artist at PCC; Frank Proffitt, visiting artist at Nash Technical College; Beverly Cotton, former PCC visiting artist; the Curtain Players; Greenville's Clown Alley; The Tar River Twirlers; and the Wallace Family.

The Pilot Club of Greenville provided refreshments.

Prospective Adelines In Workshop

Twenty prospective Sweet Adelines and their director, Carolyn Green Ippock, took part recently in an all-day workshop and coaching session conducted in Greenville by Ozzie Mask, director of music activities for Blue Ridge Region No. 14 of Sweet Adelines, Inc. and of the Potomac Harmony Chapter in Falls Church, Va. She was accompanied by Carolyn Davis, choreographer for the Potomac Harmony Chapter.

After observing a regular rehearsal led by Mrs. Ippock, Ms. Mask worked on sound and vocal production. She also spoke on the visuals of a show and ended the session with an introduction to basic choreography.

The Greenville area prospective chapter has applied for and been granted the name Eastern Carolina Chapter. Until such time as it is granted a charter, the group will be designated as Prospective Eastern Carolina Chapter of Sweet Adelines, Inc.

Women interested in singing four-part harmony, barbershop style, are welcome to attend rehearsals held each Monday night at 7:30 at Memorial Baptist Church on Greenville Boulevard.

Audit Indicates Ceiling Topped

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's campaign committee is being asked to repay the government $238,167 after a Federal Election Commission final audit report of his 1980 presidential primary race.

According to the audit Kennedy overspent the allowable ceilings by $91,451 in the New Hampshire primary and by $146,575 in Iowa, where the first delegate selection caucuses were held.

The audit said the Kennedy committee also used campaign funds to pay $141 in traffic fines, which is not allowed.

Federal law sets spending limits for presidential nomination campaigning in each state. Expenditures above the limit must be repaid to the Treasury if the candidate received federal money for his campaign.

N.C. Festivals

RALEIGH — Early October is a busy time in North Carolina for fairs, music celebrations and other festive occasions, with dozens of events scheduled for the latter part of the week and during the weekend.

Highlights of some of the festive events are:

- Wilmington — Oct. 24 — The U.S.S. North Carolina Battleship Memorial celebrates the 20th anniversary of its arrival in Wilmington. Free admission will be granted to persons displaying their ten cents student ticket from 1961, when students from across the state contributed money to help save the battleship. Coinciding with the celebration will be Wilmington's second annual Riverfest.
- Southport — October 1-3 — Third annual U.S. Open King Mackerel Fishing Tournament.
- Winston-Salem — October 2-10 — Dixie Classic Fair.
- Red Springs — October 3-4 — Flora McDonald Highland Games.
- Hampstead — October 2-4 — N.C. Spot Festival.
- Granite Quarry — October 3 — 5th Annual N.C. Civitan Fiddler's Convention.
- North Wilkesboro — October 3 — Brushy Mountain Apple Festival.
- Brasstown — October 3-4 — The John C. Campbell Folk School Fall Festival.
- Spring Hope — October 2-3 — The annual Pumpkin Festival
- Ashe County — October 3-4 — North Carolina High Country Host will conduct its first annual tour of mountain churches, including two in Ashe County where Ben Long's four frescoes are on view.
- Asheville — October 3 — Open house, Thomas Wolfe Memorial.
- Durham — October 4 — Mock tobacco auction, Duke Homestead.

Don't pay the government a red cent on the interest income on First Federal's All-Savers Certificate.

Convert your 6-month money markets without penalty!

The first $1000 ($2000—joint account) in interest income on First Federal's All-Savers Certificate is absolutely tax-free.

Beginning October 1, 1981, First Federal will offer this one year, $500 minimum deposit certificate. And for the first time in our history, you won't have to pay taxes on the interest income we pay you.

Twice as good as a money market.

Because, first, there's the $500 minimum deposit. A money market requires 20 times that much. And second, even though our All-Savers Certificate pays you 70% of the Treasury Bill rate, your net income will most likely be greater because the interest is tax-free.

Fact is, First Federal's new All-Savers Certificate is just about the best thing we've ever been able to offer most of our savers.

So put yourself first. Come into First Federal and take advantage of this opportunity.

Put yourself first at First Federal.
