City Council Endorses Planning Policy

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

City Council members last night gave their enthusiastic endorsement to a long-range planning document that is projected to guide the physical growth of Greenville and its extraterritorial area for years to come.

Adoption of the city's Comprehensive Plan, a pet project of the Council as part of its management by objectives policy, followed some 14 months of preparation by Planning Department staff members and an appointed sub-committee.

The weight and projected impact of the document as a planning tool was evident last night as a number of interested people from various agencies, including at least two mayors from neighboring municipalities, were on hand for the presentation of the plan.

Staff planner Skip Browder, who was instrumental in putting the planning package together, pointed out that the plan is intended to be a work document that must remain current through revisions.

A statement in the forward section of the document indicated that while the plan is "not legislation because of its general nature," it "will serve as a reference when dealing with changes to precise legislative tools such as the zoning ordinance, zoning map, subdivision regulations, capital improvements program," and other areas.

"The plan," it was stated, "is a reflection of many other planning reports, elements, and studies done in past years. These efforts have dealt with specific topics such as population growth, recreation, housing, transportation, economy, employment, and development trends. The Comprehensive Plan attempts to combine these various components into a broad overall view of Greenville's present and future environment."

The forward section also mentioned that "it should be understood that adoption of the plan is the beginning, not the end of the comprehensive planning process. The document should be the foundation on which future plans are built..."

Browder pointed out that the Council, recognizing a need for planned, orderly growth here, adopted a resolution in December of 1980 endorsing the formulation of the plan. The stated purpose, he said, "was to establish goals and policies regarding physical growth issues which include water and sewer improvements, transportation, annexation and future land use for developing areas." The Council was adamant in directing that citizen input be sought, he said.

Browder explained that the plan encompasses several basic goals and objectives and discusses proposed actions aimed at meeting needs in those particular areas. The goals and objectives involve: public utilities and intergovernmental relations; institutional development (East Carolina University, Pitt Memorial Hospital — ECU Medical School complex, public education); residential development; commercial development; industrial development; agriculture and open space; transportation; recreation; cultural; energy conservation; and annexation.

He said the plan also includes a section on the land use element, dealing specifically with a land use study (reflecting residential, commercial, manufacturing and wholesale-warehouse, and social and cultural land use, as well as undeveloped areas), and a broad land development plan (discussing development trends, projections, standards-policies, planning district analysis, and problems, need assessment and recommendations).

Browder, noting the section on undeveloped areas, said that an estimated 14,279 acres of undeveloped area, including about 270 acres of water surface, remains in the Greenville planning area. Undeveloped areas characterize 60 percent of the total planning area, he reported.

The document specifies 28 planning districts, he said, each with a general development plan.

Browder, who said that "Greenville has been involved in comprehensive planning for a long time," noted that the document provides a historical sketch of the city as well as a regional perspective and a look at the physical features of the area. In addition, some 60 pages of mapping will be included in the overall document.

Councilman Louis Clark, who served on the planning committee, expressed "an awful lot of pride in this document." He said he viewed the Comprehensive Plan as "an answer to planning and orderly growth."

Clark commended Bobby Roberson, the city's planning director, and also Browder and Wade Pitt, who has moved from Greenville, for their work on the planning guide.

Assembly Adjournment Threatened

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Chances of adjourning a special legislative budget session could be jeopardized by a state Justice Department plea for another revision of North Carolina's redistricting plans.

Department officials informed legislative leaders on Thursday that they did not believe new redistricting plans for state House and Senate seats could be successfully defended in federal court.

The plans were drawn up in the regular session earlier this year.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green both said they were leaning toward recessing the current session late today and setting a new date — perhaps later this month — for legislators to return to draw up new district plans.

The latest developments came as legislators pressed to wrap up the current session in one week.

A $300 million water bond issue proposed by Gov. Jim Hunt won tentative Senate approval and neared final legislative action today. But the stage was set for a possible House-Senate confrontation over state spending when the two chambers approved different versions of amendments to the state budget.

The Senate wanted to allow school principals and superintendents an additional grade for merit increases in salary while the House opposed it, and the issue was back before the House today.

The reapportionment issue arose again after Senior Deputy Attorney General James Bullock said he believed the legislative district plans would be in serious jeopardy when a lawsuit, filed Sept. 16 by the NAACP Legal and Education Defense Fund, reached court.

"We're just recommending to them, on the basis of the present plan, we feel it would be wise to reconsider it," Bullock said.

Although some legislators suggested the current session be held over to deal with the district plans, Ramsey said he favored having another session later in October. That way, he said, the House and Senate legislative reapportionment committees could work on new plans in the interim.

"I would hope the legislature would deal with this rather than the federal courts," Ramsey said.

The suit challenged House and Senate redistricting plans on grounds they were so out of balance that they violated the Supreme Court's one-man one-vote rule.

The suit also challenged the congressional district plans on grounds that blacks were discriminated against because Durham County was placed in the 4th rather than 2nd

HURT DOG FOUND

The Pitt County Humane Society has been trying with radio ads and personal contacts since Saturday to find the owner of a golden retriever dog found injured in the Cherry Oaks area that day. "It's a nice purebred dog, not too badly injured," Humane Society Vice President Barbara Haddock said. The owner may claim it by calling and accurately describing it and paying its veterinarian's bill. It's is being boarded at Bateman's Animal Clinic, 752-3148.

WHEELCHAIRS PROVIDED BY STORES?

1981 has been officially designated by the United Nations as "The International Year of Disabled Persons." Oct. 11-17 is this year's Awareness Week.

What a great convenience it would be if large department and supermarket stores, malls, and perhaps other public facilities would rent wheelchairs, so that handicapped people would not have to transport their own. Some people who walk with a cane with much difficulty would appreciate this service, also.

I hope this observation will create some positive action as an experiment. I personally realize how beneficial it would be for me and some of my handicapped friends. — Lou Cavendish.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The United States and Israel vowed to continue the peace process with Egypt today as high-ranking delegations arrived in Cairo amid tight security for the funeral of assassinated President Anwar Sadat.

As the declarations were made, the official Middle East News Agency reported that Egypt's new leader, Hosni Mubarak, accepted President Reagan's invitation to visit the United States and "review all aspects of bilateral relations, and discuss in detail the situation in the Middle East." The trip is tentatively set for early next year.

Meanwhile, unrest continued to simmer in a Moslem fundamentalist hotbed south of Cairo, and exiled opposition leader Gen. Saadedin Shazli warned that Egypt was "unsafe" for foreign dignitaries attending Sadat's funeral. But Egypt's undersecretary for foreign affairs, Ossama El-Baz, said Egypt was safe and that the foreign dignitaries "will be protected."

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told reporters at Cairo airport that the United States would continue the search for a "full and comprehensive peace" with the new Egyptian government.

"Presidents Carter, Ford and Nixon worked close with President Sadat to build friendship and cooperation between our two countries. President Reagan has resolved to continue this cooperation," Haig said. "There would be no finer memorial to Anwar Sadat than to complete the task of bringing to the Middle East a full and comprehensive peace and to Egypt the better life he sought for his people. If we allow our grief to stay the task that Anwar Sadat began, we will do an injustice far greater than the assassins who took his life."

Haig was accompanied by former Presidents Jimmy Carter, Gerald R. Ford and Richard M. Nixon, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and others.

Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, in a separate arrival statement, said that his government and people took "great satisfaction" in the news that the Mideast peace process undertaken by Sadat will continue.

"The people of Israel, together with the government, received with great satisfaction (the news) that all the commitments taken by President Sadat will be undertaken" by Mubarak's government, Begin said. "At this time of sadness, to Mrs. Sadat, to the children, the president-elect, the government and the people of Egypt: we mortals cannot find words to console you. May God almighty console all of you."

Mubarak, who will meet separately with Begin and Haig later today, pledged in an interview with CBS-TV's Walter Cronkite Thursday to continue the Camp David peace process begun by Sadat. The Egyptian president will be buried Saturday.

Sadat was killed Tuesday, and within hours troops on both sides of the Libyan-Egyptian border went on a higher state of alert, U.S. intelligence sources in Washington said. They said there were increased troop movements on both sides of the frontier, but so far there has been no shooting.

Egyptian officials said "some" policemen and one Moslem extremist were killed in fighting Thursday in the city of Assyut, a hotbed of Moslem fundamentalism 240 miles south of Cairo. However, security sources in the capital said at least two police officers and 10 other people died in the clashes that apparently stemmed from anger over Sadat's crackdown on Moslem extremists.

Armed troops blocked the highway to Assyut. But villagers along the way said there had been "lots of killings." They also reported heavy troop movements toward Assyut.

The Middle East News Agency reported that a carload of Moslem zealots attacked two police posts, but the police repulsed them. The agency said the police captured the gunmen and found three rifles, a pistol and ammunition. The police were seeking other suspects, the report said.

Evaluation Plan Is Discussed By Educators

Difficulties with the Pitt County teacher evaluation plan were discussed yesterday as members of the Pitt County Chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators met at First Pentecostal Holiness Church in Greenville.

Specifically discussed were objections to policy changes approved at Tuesday's board of education meeting.

"There are some indicators included that are new to us," said Annette McRae, professional rights and responsibilities chairman for Pitt County NCAE. "In some cases teachers didn't receive a copy of the changes until the afternoon before they were approved and we simply haven't had time to look them over carefully."

The meeting also included a workshop led by Peggy Mills of East Carolina University on strategies for dealing with evaluation problems.

"This workshop reviewed the changes made in the policy and reviewed problems from last year," reported McRae. "We have encountered some teachers — good teachers — who were fired unfairly because of the evaluation system. We're trying to develop strategies to prevent this from happening."

The teachers' major objection to the evaluation policy, noted McRae, is the possible subjectivity of the core indicators, those indicators used to rate the teachers.

"The core indicators are purported to give objectivity," said McRae, "when in fact they are in many instances vague enough that they can be applied subjectively. Part of what we are doing is suggesting strategies for protecting teachers against these subjective evaluations."

"Good teaching has never been satisfactorily defined," she added, "and therefore it is impossible to evaluate good teachers."

N.C. House, Senate Split On Budget Amendments

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A confrontation over proposed amendments to the 1981-83 state budget appeared likely to slow state legislators' rush to adjournment, but without extending their special session another day.

The conflict centers around whether public school principals and superintendents should be given an additional merit salary increase. The Senate has approved the salary step while the House has deleted the provision.

The House and Senate on Thursday adopted different versions of amendments to the budget, which was approved earlier this year during the regular legislative session.

The House was scheduled to vote today on the Senate version and, unless lawmakers change their minds and approve the Senate package, the matter will go before a conference committee to iron out the differences.

Both House and Senate versions of the amendments provide a 5 percent pay raise for teachers and other state employees. They also offer increases for state workers' hospital and medical insurance and salary scale adjustments for Alcohol Law Enforcement and state Highway Patrol officers and nurses.

Also contained in the amendments are special provisions for spending money. The provisions include a lengthy rewrite of state Medicaid regulations that sets limits for the first time on the number of doctor visits and prescriptions that participants may receive at state expense.

Other provisions forbid the transfer of additional money within the Department of Human Resources to pay for abortions for poor women, set up a 12-member legislative panel to review federal block grants and set aside more than $2.2 million for emotionally handicapped children with violent tendencies.

Both the House and Senate approved a change Thursday adding two salary steps to the pay scale of Division of Motor Vehicles' workers at weigh stations. The change was expected to cost about $161,000.

After more than two hours of debate, the House voted 106-3 to approve a version of the amendments that would deny principals and superintendents a ninth salary step.

The Senate then voted 47-0 to approve a set of amendments giving the school administrators the extra salary step.

Teachers groups have lobbied against administrators getting an additional merit salary increment without the same increase being given to them. But opponents charge the teachers already have more merit salary steps than administrators.

Republicans in both the House and Senate proposed amendments aimed at deleting almost $4.1 million earmarked earlier this year to build horse show arenas in Asheville and Raleigh. The House voted 75-37 and the Senate voted 31-15 to table the motion.

Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford, repeated his attempts earlier this year to try to remove $24 million from the budget for the North Carolina Microelectronics Center, one of Gov. Jim Hunt's pet projects. Coble's amendment was tabled on an 82-30 vote.

Democrats in both the House and Senate unsuccessfully tried to change the Medicaid provisions in the set of budget amendments to allow reimbursement for six rather than four drug prescriptions.

But budget leaders argued against the change, which they said would cost $2.3 million.

Victims Are Reported Unwilling To Testify

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Migrant workers freed from suspected forced-labor camps are often unwilling to testify against those charged with enslaving them, North Carolina and federal authorities said Thursday.

Some workers do not want to stay around to press charges, while others are not willing to testify against the people who hired them, said Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina.

In the light of a recent increase in reports of such camps, Pence added that his office lacks the manpower to keep up with the problem.

On Wednesday, a federal grand jury charged a migrant labor crew leader and three assistants with kidnapping and enslaving workers at Rainbow Farm, located in rural Nash County, after 13 workers were liberated. Authorities said one person died at the camp, possibly as a result of heat exhaustion.

On Sept. 13, worker Robert

Anderson collapsed and died in the field shortly after Dennis Warren had ordered him to continue digging potatoes despite the fact that Anderson was spitting blood, the grand jury charged.

Dr. Robert E. Zipf, Nash County medical examiner, said the preliminary cause of death was heat exhaustion, and the death has tentatively been ruled accidental.

He said he is still running tests on the victim, who was about 40, to determine if he ingested anything toxic.

The grand jury charged that the defendants used false promises about job terms and conditions to recruit and transport the workers to Nash County, where they were compelled to work under threats of force and intimidation.

They are ill-equipped to monitor conditions in migrant labor camps such as one that resulted in the death of a worker earlier this month.

Cecil Williams Jr., owner of the farm, said Thursday he was unaware of conditions of the camp. He declined further comment, saying the matter is still under investigation.

Pence said the Nash County case was the second this year involving migrant workers being held in slavery in North Carolina. He said 12 people were freed when agents went to a tobacco farm in Caswell County last August.

Pence said living conditions at the Caswell County camp were poor.

"There was no heat, no windows or sanitary facilities, and no adequate food," he said. "They were fed beans, corn and occasionally a chicken neck."

Those charged in Thursday's indictments with conspiring to violate the constitutional rights of six workers by keeping them in involuntary servitude and slavery were Dennis Warren, 19, of Orlando, Fla.; John L. Harris, 39, who was born in Bullock, Ala.; Richard Warren, 22, brother of Dennis Warren; and Halsey Norwood, who is reportedly in his mid-20s.

The Warrens were being held in the Wake County Jail in Raleigh. Pence said the other two men are still being sought.

Excuses That Work In AllWeather Are Needed

By GAIL MICHAELS

When it comes to excuses, Meg is more inventive than Benjamin Franklin. Just a sampling from her amazing repertoire includes:

I can't clean up my room; it's too dirty.

I really didn't mean to push Zachary, Mommy, but my arms jumped out before I could stop them.

I have to talk a lot. My tongue gets a headache when it has to lie still.

But Mommy, I didn't mean to drop your perfume; it's just that your lotion made my hands too slippery.

Phillip especially has tried to teach her that excuses are not acceptable. His favorite lecture begins with, "No matter what you say, it's still an excuse." But his and my efforts are to no avail. She still drops her food because "the wind blew it off the fork." She still wets her pants occasionally because "the bathroom was too far away."

Phillip says that her propensity for excusing herself from uncomfortable situations is a genetic defect from her mother's side of the family. I object. Yes, I do use excuses, but they never seem to work for me. I don't know why but people are always ready for me. The only time in the recent past that I managed to get out of some unpleasant duty was when a lady from our church asked me to teach Vacation Bible School.

It was a narrow escape. I protested that I had a baby. She mentioned that they had a nursery. I said that I worked part time. She answered that she only wanted me for a week, and for such a worthy cause.

"But I get nervous around large groups of children," I finally admitted.

She smiled. "That's no problem. Each class will only have 15 children."

The thought of 15 kids in one room made me feel faint. "I was thinking more along the lines of two or three."

I'm still not sure why that particular excuse worked. Perhaps it was because women don't generally admit that they are terrified of having to cope with more children than there is hands to strangle them. Unfortunately, this excuse doesn't hold water at home. It's the irony of my life that Meg is my sternest taskmaster.

"I want a large birthday party," she insisted as soon as she realized that we had little more than a month in which to plan. "I want lots and lots of children."

"How about a spend-the-night party with two favorite friends?" I asked hopefully.

"No, ma'am, not unless you want to give me both."

"But Meg, I'm too tired to have that kind of party. I don't get enough sleep."

"Oh Mommy," she sighed, "you've been saying that for years. I'm getting tired of hearing it."

I knew that she probably shared that feeling with at least a dozen other people. A woman can blame one thing for her dimwitted behavior only so long before her friends begin to doubt, and I had been blaming Zachary's persistent refusal to sleep through the night for two months longer than he'd been living. That was why I had determined before my conversation with Meg ever took place to let him cry himself to sleep as Dr. Spock advised. According to this venerable physician, Zachary was supposed to cry for 45 minutes the first night, 15 minutes the second night, and so on.

But the first night Zachary had cried an hour, the second two hours, and we went downhill from there. Thus stood before Meg begging once more to be understood in the light of her baby brother's erratic sleep pattern. "I've tried and tried but no matter what I do, he still wakes me up so much that I'm not fresh enough for the day."

She was unyielding. "No matter what you say, it's still an excuse."

Yes, but darn it, it's a good one.

Starving To Stop Hunger
Through a hunger strike, black activist Dick Gregory called attention to the scourge of world hunger. By most estimates, more than 500 million people — roughly one out of every nine — suffer from serious malnutrition today. This is more than double the estimated number of malnourished people as recently as the 1950s. And 90 percent of world population growth comes in the poorest nations, where hunger and starvation are already worst. Currently, Africa is the hungriest continent. The U.N. lists 29 nations as suffering from widespread famine. Twenty-three of those are in Africa.

DO YOU KNOW — Next to Africa, which continent has the largest percentage of hungry and starving people?

Resort Owners Tired Of Role

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago my husband and I bought a motel and restaurant in a resort area 300 miles north of our hometown. We are both from large families. Our problem is our relatives who come to visit us all summer long.

We give them half-price on rooms and food, but they come when our tourist business is at its peak, and they take up all the rooms that could be rented to tourists for full rate.

Ours is a small but prospering business, and my husband and I run it together. Abby, our parents are welcome anytime, but carloads of aunts, uncles, cousins and their children pile in on us, taking up most of the rooms. Also, after driving so far to see us, they stay for several days expecting us to entertain them in the evenings after we have put in an exhausting 14-hour day!

Is there a nice way to ask them not to come at the height of the season? We just can't find the words. We do love them and don't want them to be mad at us.

A Hearty Thank You

It is altogether fitting that governing bodies use every available opportunity to call public attention to those citizens who give their time and labors to the service of others.

Volunteers are the life-blood of every community and it would be a pretty drab world without them.

This time it was the Pitt County Board of Commissioners who honored 22 individuals and four community volunteer organizations for being nominated for the 1981 Governor's Volunteer Awards program.

Governor James B. Hunt Jr. has strong feelings about the value of volunteerism in a multitude of fields. We hope and trust succeeding governors will make the annual tribute a North Carolina tradition.

Pitt Countians nominated for the 1981 award are Linda B. Asbell, Randie Reinerth, Catherine A. Bolton, Mark Blahove, Ina and Mildred Venters, Ann Stalls, W.J. Evans, Lorraine McGowan, Janice Sawyer, Rita Ayscue, Mary Jane Sisk, Mavis A. Butts, Judy E. Warren, Joy Grubbs, Diane Pickett, Adele Moos, Howard N. Wilson, Peter Anderson, Eleanor Coleman and Edythe Price. Organizations: The Kiwanis Club of Ayden-Grifton, Circle K Club of East Carolina University, the Greenville Service League and the Greenville Jaycees.

To all of you, and the scores who gave and gave, but were not nominated, a heartfelt thank you.

Competitive Disadvantage?

The governor's proposed tax increase on liquor and beer seems dead for this special session of the Legislature.

It is probably just as well. Extra tax on beer and booze seems an easy way to raise additional revenues, but the extra tax could put North Carolina at a disadvantage along its borders with other states.

There is no reason why alcoholic beverages shouldn't carry a substantial tax load but if the North Carolina tax should make the product carry a higher price than in neighboring states the customers will simply cross the state lines to obtain the product.

THIS AFTERNOON

Vital Disposal Site Where's Safety Net?

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Since the memory of Tar Heel mind can recall, the question has been, "What did the Governor of South Carolina say to the Governor of North Carolina?"

When it comes to disposal of hazardous waste, what he said was "You burn it, we'll bury it."

South Carolina has the Barnwell disposal site which, despite a sharp reduction in size and volume of waste handled, remains the closest, best place to get rid of low-level radioactive waste.

The reduction in volume at Barnwell still leaves plenty of room to handle the ashes.

North Carolina seems well on the track to becoming a major waste disposal site, especially in the incineration of hazardous materials.

Two important factors are shaping this development:

Two Reasons

—This state ranks fourth in the nation; first in the southeast in the production of low-level radioactive wastes. This results for the concentration of so many medical research facilities in the state plus the numerous industries which use radioactive materials in their manufacturing or research and development processes.

—North Carolina has a big jump on other states in developing hazardous waste incineration since state government and the Research Triangle Institute between Raleigh and Durham have jointly worked on a breakthrough in the methods for safely burning dangerous materials.

Developments have been pushed forward with the recent action of southern states in forming a waste disposal compact. That is nothing more than an agreement to work together — each state doing what it can best do — to put together a regional program for hazardous waste disposal. Each of the eight member states will have to get special legislation through the various legislatures and, under federal guidance, arrive at a formal program by 1986.

The biggest fear of some knowledgeable North Carolinians is that if the state does get out front on waste incineration, then hazardous materials from other southern states would be shipped here for burning. There is no way currently available even to bar shipment to the incinerator from states elsewhere in the nation outside of the south.

Gov. Jim Hunt is careful not to designate North Carolina as the major burning site for the southern compact, but he does point out some logical reasons why such a facility should be located here.

Scattered

Generation of so much radioactive waste here gives the state "a responsibility to help dispose of it," Gov. Hunt feels. Besides there are firms in the state which already have the permits to move ahead on building incineration plants.

While development of the southern plan is still years away, the governor does hope that North Carolina will not be the only state with burning facilities. It would, he says, seem best to have a number of incinerator sites handling smaller volumes of material and reducing the travel required which, in turn, recedes both the expense and the potential for disaster in a spill or wreck.

In the course of developing the southern plan, each participating state is expected to provide its share of the various disposal techniques currently available, or to be created as research moves ahead on such exotic methods as recycling for use in other products, or destruction by microbiological means.

WORSE--THESE OPERATE IN BROAD DAYLIGHT!

BY ART BUCHWALD

The budget cutters were working late into the night in the OMB office. As they sat around the table, weary from lack of sleep, one of them said:

"That's it, Dave, we can't find one more thing to cut."

"I can't tell that to the boss. There must be something else we've overlooked."

"I have an idea, Dave, though I hate to suggest it."

"Go ahead. It won't leave this room."

"What about the safety net?"

"I'm not following you."

"If we took away the safety net we could save 10 more billion dollars."

"But the president promised he'd provide a safety net for the truly needy. If he took it away he'd look as if he were renegeing on his word."

"We don't have to tell anyone we've removed the safety net. It will be our dirty little secret."

people walking the tightrope are in condition. The ones we're providing the safety net for are old and sick and have no shoes."

"If we go into the recession before our supply side economics bear fruit, we're go-those who are going to start jumping out of windows."

"You're all heart, Dave. But if the president goes on television and explains to the American people that this country can't afford a safety net until it gets its economic house in order, they'll go along with him."

"Where does it say in the Constitution, Dave, that the president of the United States has to provide a safety net for people who can't hack it on their own in this country?"

"I'm still not sure I can sell it to the boss."

"Put in personal terms, he was poor and no one ever put a safety net under him."

"I need more ammunition than that."

"Okay, here's a memo I drew up showing every budget cut we've made. The only choice the president now has is either to cancel the safety net, or hold off on building the B-1 bomber."

"Holy smokes, why didn't you show me that in the first place?"

Our original figures indicated our safety net could take care of all the people who are on a tightrope now. But we didn't take into account the ones who are going to be walking on it after all our budget cuts go in effect."

He's right, Dave. Also, you have to remember, in our last cuts we made the tightrope a lot thinner and weaker to save money. It's not going to be able to hold all the new people we're putting on it."

TV-Viewer Has Dreams

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — This TV set is on the blink again, lighting up the screen and my life with all sorts of weird and at times welcome messages.

Workmen have been laying some cable around here, and maybe it got fouled up in my antenna or something and shorted out the whole reception system.

Anyhow, I thought sure I heard one of the sportscasters say during the pro football game the other evening, "Howard, we haven't heard a word from you all night, would you care to analyze that last play for us?"

And the sitcom immediately after that was preceded with the warning: "The following program may be unsuitable for adults: it contains violence, nudity, coarse language, a stupid plot and dumb jokes, but sub-normal adolescents may find it mildly amusing."

All week long this sort of thing has been going on.

There was this boxer in a bathrobe at the televised weight-in whining, "I'm gonna get the tar whaled out of me. This is the worst rematch my idiot manager ever got me involved in. I don't expect the fight to go past the first round, unless I lose my marbles as well as my mouthpiece with the first big one he throws."

And here was this dude in the laundromat saying to the housewife, "Don't take our word for it about Zilche's Soapy Suds. We're under a federal indictment right now for faking these washing machine tests."

During the break in a cartoon show, I could have sworn I heard the toy salesman say, "Kiddies, before asking your parents to buy you this miniature flame throwing tank, which is really a hunk of junk, shop around and see if you can find something constructive and a lot more fun, like a set of building blocks or a magic kit."

There seems to be some tongue twisting in the talk shows, too, with people saying things like:

"Our panel this afternoon on the side-effects of halitosis in public transport features three of the biggest bores and bunglers in our nation's capital."

"As a seven-term congressman, I am convinced that one sure way of saving taxpayers' money would be to cut the size of the Congress and all state legislatures in half. With today's media reaching into every home, the people don't need that many representatives. It was different in the days when you had to ride a horse to get to the state capital."

"Today's guest is not really talented in any field, but she's the producer: live-in girlfriend."

"If I were managing the Yankees, I'd want George Steinbrenner sitting right there on the bench next to me. He knows more about the game and handling players than any dugout martinet."

Lately, even the news shows don't seem to have the right ring to them:

"At the United Nations today Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko unveiled a policy of unilateral disarmament and the removal of all Russian troops from Afghanistan, Angola and the Polish border. 'Borscht Before Bullets,' he called the new Five-Year Plan."

"OPEC ministers meeting in Vienna have slashed the price of oil to $4 a barrel, effective immediately. Said Sheik Yamani, who led the fight to roll back prices, 'I just got tired of blowing 20 bucks every time I pulled my Caddy up to the pump.'"

"The Secretary of Education today announced the recall of more than a quarter of a million 1981 high school graduates for defects in reading and writing. College consumers complained that the late models were plagued with dangling participles, misplaced modifiers, split infinitives and unreliable vocabularies."

"Four New York City detectives have quit in disgust over the anti-crime wave that has been sweeping the city. For the fourth day in a row, no felonies were reported in any of the five boroughs, and charges were dropped against two teenagers who turned themselves in for playing a radio too loud in a remote corner of Central Park."

"The stock market recorded huge gains again today, sending the Dow Jones average to an all time high, as the dollar continued to climb on all money markets."

"The undefeated New York Jets and New Orleans Saints today completed final

BEARING WITNESS

Churches have to stand as moral witnesses against the world. They bear witness to the love, wisdom, and high purpose of God. They must testify to the fact that life is essentially of a spiritual nature, and that every circumstance in life must be brought into proper relationship with the most high God, else we are never happy, peaceful, or creative.

The church also has to witness against mammon, which is the feverish desire of men to accumulate more than they can use. The church has to witness against Caesar, who has a domination complex. The church has to witness against demons, or the crowd, which sometimes pushes us around in a most outrageous fashion.

Probably the most important of all is the witness which the church must make against Mars, the god of war.

Christ came to bring peace. Let us hope and pray that the witness of Christ will prevail over the witness of all of his opponents, especially Mars. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:

On Oct. 7 a group of young people associated with the East Carolina University chapter of the Campus Crusade for Christ presented a program for the Brookhaven Seventh-Day Adventist Pathfinders. These young people shared their love and deep devotion for their Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ.

It was a deep pleasure having them at our club meeting. We need to really back our young people as they seek to lead others to Jesus. In this day and time, finding young people who will openly support their Saviour in the public eye is a terrific revelation.

To the editor:

I read with great interest the article on proposed energy management equipment for the city schools. There is no need to go anywhere outside the City of Greenville for expertise on any equipment the city schools have now or are likely to purchase.

We have had so much expertise from out of town already, we can barely stand it. There is a lot of truth in the old axiom, "An expert is a man from 12 miles out of town with a brief case." We better learn we're better off to deal with someone who loves us. We'll start saving money on energy, construction, maintenance and who knows? — we might even help the local economy. If anyone else says you can't measure savings — of any kind — give them the gate.

Stuart M. Shinn

To the editor:

I was certainly impressed with the orderly concern and well-disciplined students at the J.H. Rose High School as several of us adults served as proctors with the administering of the Competency Test to Juniors, mainly Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The concern for students who were not taking the test was shown specifically, as they changed classes so quietly and orderly deserves commendation, not only on the part of students, but also the administration and faculty likewise. Even students stationed in the lobby or the gym displayed their concern with lowered voices while many others were reading or studying.

Congratulations, parents, too, for the major role you are playing in the education of your children. Please make the effort to get to know your child's teachers, the principal and the superintendent of schools. They want parental contact and will usually welcome your suggestions and input. Teachers are people, too.

Why An Eye On Productivity?

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) —

If you wonder why so much is made of the productivity problem just remember Otto Eckstein's rule of thumb: each percentage point drop in productivity adds two points to the inflation rate.

Between 1948 and 1966 the average annual growth rate of productivity, or output per manhour of work, was 3.5 percent. Between 1973 and 1978 the growth rate was only 1.1 percent. In 1979, shrinkage set in.

So did inflation. Since the late 1960s its roots have been sinking deeper into the economy's hide, and in the past two years it has been named in almost all surveys as the No. 1 economic problem.

The rule of thumb devised by Eckstein, the Harvard professor and former government economic advisor who founded Data Resources, Inc., an analysis and forecasting service, doesn't offer the solution to inflation, but it does point the way: make productivity grow again.

But how? Volumes of studies have been made. Scores of proposals have been offered. Institutions have been created to deal with it. In fact, it seems that all that could be done was done — except to implement.

For years, that is, the country has been talking about robots to run production lines, tax cuts to encourage investments, incentives to spur workers, elimination of red tape to release bottlenecks.

So, if so much is known about the problem, why hasn't more been done to correct it? Could management, once an area of American expertise, be at the root? Some recent thinking seems to focus in this area. Consider these comments:

"I don't think it's labor productivity that's a problem. I think it's management, and I speak as a former manager." Malcolm Baldrige, Commerce Secretary, at a meeting of exporters Sept. 30.

"I can think of no instance in which a product has been recalled because of shoddy workmanship attributable to American labor... American labor in productivity or quality achievements is the equal of any labor force in the world." John J. Nevin, chairman of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Oct. 6, University of Maryland.

"Management (in the 1960s and 1970s) thought productivity was a matter of capital investment and not of organizational competency." Eugene Jennings, management professor, in an interview Oct. 5.

"...there are other contributors to the productivity slowdown, including current American management practices. Too many of today's managers place a premium on short-term benefits, often at the expense of long-term planning; pursue imitative rather than innovative product development and eschew manufacturing process development by focusing only on changes in the final product itself." Mark Shepherd, Jr., chairman of Texas Instruments Inc., appearing in "Outlook," a publication of Booz Allen & Hamilton, a management and technology consulting firm.

Managers or management advisers all. And all focusing critically on American management, once tops in the industrial world.

State Dept. Itemizes Soviet Efforts To Discredit The U.S.

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
The State Department says the Soviet Union is using forgery, blackmail, disinformation and political influence operations in an elaborate effort to discredit and weaken the United States.

The allegations are contained in a four-page document which the department said was prepared in response to requests from private groups and individuals and foreign governments.

The activities are a "major, if little understood, element of Soviet foreign policy," the report says, and while the United States is the primary target, the Kremlin is devoting increased resources against other governments as well.

"The approaches used by Moscow include control of the press in foreign countries; outright and partial forgery of documents; use of rumors, insinuation, altered facts and lies; use of international and local front organizations; clandestine operation of radio stations; exploitation of a nation's academic, political, economic and media figures as collaborators to influence policies of the nation," according to the report.

The report says the operations include:

—Frequently inserting falsely attributed press material into the media of foreign countries. In one developing country, the paper says, the Soviets used more than two dozen local journalists to plant items favorable to the U.S.S.R.

—Forged U.S. military manuals and fabricated war plans designed to create tensions between the United States and other countries.

—Planting false rumors, such as a report in late 1979 that the United States was behind the seizure of the Grand Mosque of Mecca and a Soviet news agency Tass report last August that the United States was responsible for the death of Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos.

—Using front organizations such as the World Peace Council, the World Federation of Trade Unions, the World Federation of Democratic Youth and the Women's International Democratic Federation to support Soviet goals and oppose policies and leaders whose activities do not serve Soviet interests.

—Operating clandestine radio stations from the Soviet Union, such as the National Voice of Iran, which consistently urged during 1979 and 1980 that the American hostages not be released despite the official Soviet position that they were entitled to diplomatic immunity.

—Manipulating local economies. A Soviet ambassador to a Western European country warned a local businessman that his sales to the U.S.S.R. would suffer if he went ahead with plans to provide technical assistance to China, the State Department says.

—Exploiting contacts with political, economic and media figures in target countries to secure active collaboration with Moscow. An example was Pierre-Charles Pathe, a French journalist convicted last year of acting as a Soviet agent of influence since 1959.

The report says the Soviets have been particularly active in efforts to undermine the Camp David peace process for the Middle East and U.S. relations with Egypt.

It alleges that the Soviets produced a series of bogus documents toward this end, including a purported 1976 speech by an American official which called for "a total change of the government and governmental system of Egypt."

Another forged document, purportedly written for former President Carter by the State Department, used language "insulting and offensive" to then-President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, the report says. The document was alleged to have been delivered anonymously to the Egyptian Embassy in Rome in April 1977.

Redevelopment Commission To Expire January 11

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The Redevelopment Commission, which has played a prominent role in changing the face of Greenville through a series of ambitious, sometimes controversial projects, will function no longer after Jan. 11, 1982.

The date of the commission's abolishment was contained in a resolution adopted last night by the City Council.

The Council action followed a meeting earlier this week involving city officials and representatives from the commission who discussed the possible dissolution. With the commission winding up its urban renewal activities, abolishment had been anticipated.

It was pointed out following that meeting, that the city and commission entered into agreements in January providing for the close-out of the redevelopment urban renewal projects here by Sept. 30. Joe Laney, executive director of both the commission and Housing Authority, informed the city officials that the redevelopment staff had been transferred to the authority.

Mayor Don McGlohn said after the joint meeting that the commission's urban renewal efforts have been closed out with the Department of Housing and Urban Development, although some work remains in those areas. The Council, he said, has expressed a desire to have Laney complete the work through a contractual arrangement with the city's Community Development Department.

The resolution adopted last night said that the commission, created by the Council "for the redevelopment of blighted areas" here, "undertook an ambitious program of urban renewal projects in the Shore Drive, Newtown, Central Business District, and Southside project areas."

The resolution stated, "the City Council...expresses its deep gratitude for the years of tireless work provided by the Redevelopment Commission...in eliminating blighted areas and making Greenville a better place in which to live and work."

It was also noted that "in the opinion of the...Council...the purposes and goals of the Redevelopment Commission can best be served by the Department of Community Development of the city...rather than as an independent commission."

Greenville first became involved in urban renewal in 1959 and the city's first efforts, through the newly created Redevelopment Commission, involved the Shore Drive program.

Council members made no comments last night as they adopted the resolution of abolishment.

In other business, the Council approved a petition submitted by Fred Mattox, attorney, for the annexation of Lots 12-22, Block B, of the Professional Center, located on the west side of Medical Drive. The lots involve some 8.5 acres, it was pointed out.

Amendments were approved to the Zoning Ordinance, involving a deletion of the section stating that the zoning map be recorded in the Register of Deeds office at the courthouse, and adding a new section to include family care homes in all residential districts. The ordinance was also amended to change the "Penalties for Violation" section to reflect civil rather than criminal penalties.

Acting on the recommendation of the Planning and Zoning Commission, the Council voted to disapprove a request by Steve Evans to have some 10,000 square feet of property, located on the east side of Memorial Drive in Hillsdale Subdivision, rezoned from R-6 (residential) to office and institutional.

A recommendation by the planning commission that 34 acres at the southwest corner of Ninth and Washington Streets be rezoned from Unoffensive Industry to Downtown Commercial Fringe, was approved by the board.

The Subdivision Ordinance was amended by deleting the city manager and substituting the director of utilities and by adding "their designated appointee." The ordinance was also amended to reflect the change in penalties as a result of violations.

A request by Ed Smith of 701 E. Fourth Street to establish a residential controlled parking area on the north side of E. Fourth Street from Summit to Student Street and on the east side of Jarvis from E. Third to E. Fourth was approved. It was pointed out that the request was the first submitted to the city under the new program of controlled parking.

Residents living in an area approved and designated by signs as a controlled parking section will be able to buy stickers permitting them to park. Vehicles parking in the area that do not display a sticker will be towed.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said his department will work with violators during the first week but regular towing practices will be observed thereafter.

Other action included:
— Approval (with Councilwoman Judy Greene opposing) of a request by residents of St. Andrews Drive and adjacent areas to prohibit parking on the west side of St. Andrews Drive from Dexter Street southerly to Greenville Boulevard; — Appointment of William H. Taft Jr. to the Greenville Utilities Commission to fill the unexpired term of Gene Prescott (March of 1983), who resigned;

— Appointment of Mrs. Jacqueline Hawkins and Rufus Huggins to three-year terms on the Human Relations Council;

— Appointment of Michele Darden and Greg Fidler as Rose High School student representatives on the Human Relations Council;

— Reappointment of Dr. Louis Zincone to a second three-year term on the Sheppard Memorial Library Board and appointment of John C. Williams to his first term on the board;

— Approval of a resolution adopting an official traffic control map for the city and adoption of an ordinance amending the City Code relative to traffic regulations;

— Adoption of a resolution approving the sale of a disposal parcel in the Southside Project on the east side of Garland Street north of Howell to the Bachelor Benedict Club for $1,463;

— Adoption of a resolution accepting the grant agreement from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the South Evans Community Development Project, involving $96,200; and — Adoption of an ordinance establishing the 1981-82 Small Cities South Evans Grant project budget.

Local Home Builders Join In National Campaign

Local home builders today announced their participation in a nation-wide "Unlock the Economy Day" campaign calling on the President and Congress to adopt an economic policy that will lead to lower interest rates and accommodate economic growth and stability in housing and other credit sensitive industries.

Dillon Watson, president of the Greenville Homebuilders Association, said "high interest rates for home mortgages and construction loans have plunged the nation's industry into the deepest and most prolonged recession since World War II."

To bring interest rates down as rapidly as possible, Watson has urged a three-pronged approach in which the federal deficit would be held to $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982 and the budget balanced by fiscal 1984; the Federal Reserve Board would allow the money supply to increase at the high end of its monetary targets; and the next vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board would be filled by a representative from small business.

Watson, referring to an annual need for an estimated two million new housing units annually throughout the 1980s and an influx during this decade of more than 41 million "baby boom" children into the home-buying age group, said "the housing market had an underlying strength that is being artificially killed off by today's high interest rates."

The present danger, Watson warned, "is that continued strong borrowing in the credit markets by the federal government to finance a deficit approaching $1 trillion will deprive millions of young Americans of the credit they need to buy homes." The federal government, Watson said, "is already heading toward an estimated 30 percent share of the nation's available credit."

All indications are, Watson added, "that the current housing slump, now in its 35th month and the longest on record, will deepen over the next six months unless there is a significant reduction in interest rates."

The seasonally adjusted 937,000 annual rate of housing starts in August was the third worst monthly production level for housing in 20 years, but the rate of single-family production was the lowest ever for the postwar era. Housing starts could dip below the 900,000 mark soon.

Watson also pointed out that "unemployment in the construction trades stood at 16.7 percent in August, more than double the rate of joblessness for the labor force as a whole. So far the current downturn in housing has cost the economy $49.2 billion in wages and $15.66 billion in total tax revenues. The overall economic impact is pegged at more than $233 billion.

Another factor mentioned by Watson is that during the first seven and one-half months of 1981, 1,992 construction firms failed — up 40.8 percent from the same period a year earlier.

Congressional District. But Bullock said he believed the congressional plan could be successfully defended, and that the major problems were in the House and Senate maps.

Under Supreme Court rulings, new district lines must be drawn every 10 years in order to conform with population shifts.

Bullock said the problem with the legislative maps was that they had too large a deviation between the district with the most people per legislator to the district with the smallest number of people per legislator.

Under the new North Carolina plans, the House districts would have a deviation range of 23.6 percent and the Senate would have a deviation of 22.7 percent.

The numbers reflect, for example, that in the new House map, one district has 12.9 percent more people than the numerical ideal — the average number of people each House member should represent — and that another district has 10.7 percent too few people.

Bullock said recent court rulings in other states have found that reapportionment plans with deviations greater than 10 percentage points were too high to conform to the one-man, one-vote ruling.

"We felt from the standpoint of the suit it would be best if they considered redistricting and came up with a plan with a closer deviation," Bullock said.

"When you start getting above 10 percent, you start getting in suspect areas," he added.

In other legislative action:

Bonds
Hunt's water bond proposal won Senate approval on a 37-10 tentative vote, overcoming a small but vocal group of opponents after Hunt renewed his call for the bond issue in a news conference.

If approved again today, it would be subject to a public referendum next year. The referendum could be held either during the May primary elections or the November general elections.

Jockey's Ridge
The state House approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would authorize the state and Virginia Electric & Power Co. to negotiate the placement of a power line through a portion of Jockey's Ridge State Park.

Senate approval by a three-fifths vote is needed during the current special session of the General Assembly if the negotiations are to be allowed.

The House approved the bill on a 95-8 vote, after a compromise amendment was added. The amendment deleted a reference to a specific easement through the state park at Nags Head on the Outer Banks and replaced it with the authorization that negotiations be held.

Samuel Thomasson, deputy director of the state parks and recreation division, said even if the Senate approves the bill as well, there still are a number of hurdles Vepco must clear before the powerline could be installed — including gaining necessary approval from the National Park Service.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is refusing to permit a top Libyan diplomat to address an Arab-American conference here on grounds that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy mocked "civilized standards" by applauding the slaying of President Anwar Sadat of Egypt.

"We do not think official Libyan spokesmen for Khadafy are entitled to a public forum here at a time when Khadafy has cheered the assassination of President Sadat," said State Department press officer David Nall.

Libyan Foreign Secretary Abdel-Ati Al-Obeidi, in New York City for the fall session of the United Nations General Assembly, had been invited to address a meeting of Arab-American organizations from 18 nations throughout the Western hemisphere on Saturday.

The United States has told Libya it will act to improve relations with Libya "at such time that Libya begins to behave in accordance with generally accepted terms of international behavior," Nall said.

Dr. Peter Tanous, chairman of the board of the National Association of Arab Americans, said that the congress had invited all Arab foreign ministers to attend its sessions, including the foreign minister of Egypt.

"It's within the right of the State Department to deny visas to anyone they see fit," Tanous said.

Khadafy's applauding an assassination demonstrates yet again that Libya is not ready to observe such civilized standards," he added.

"Our obligation to U.N. delegates is to allow their entry into New York for the purpose stated, not necessarily to travel throughout the United States at will," Nall said.

Dr. Peter Tanous, chairman of the board of the National Association of Arab Americans, said that the congress had invited all Arab foreign ministers to attend its sessions, including the foreign minister of Egypt.

"It's within the right of the State Department to deny visas to anyone they see fit," Tanous said.

Speaker Underlines Pride, Honesty And Education

PRINCIPAL SPEAKER . . . at the State NAACP Convention in Greenville Thursday was the Right Rev. Alfred Dunston, center. With him are D.D. Garrett, left, president of the Pitt County chapter of the NAACP, and Kelly Alexander, president of the N.C. Conference of NAACP. Kelly delivered an address to the gathering today.

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Right Rev. Alfred G. Dunston said yesterday that the church should foster pride, honesty and education among young blacks if total desegregation is to be achieved in America.

"I consider myself the guest of the number one organization in the world . . . the foremost civil rights organization in the world," Dunston told delegates attending a Ministers and Church Emphasis Day luncheon in connection with the N.C. State NAACP convention here yesterday.

Dunston, Presiding Prelate of the Second Episcopal District of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, with offices in Philadelphia, Pa., said "people are more dependent on what the association can do today than they were 10 years ago."

Saying the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People "makes its presence felt for us," Dunston suggested that the title of his talk should be "Shepherding Black People In A Day Like This."

According to Dunston, a Currituck County native who grew up in Elizabeth City, "there are some disturbing features in the world today. I think that our American society has improved a great deal . . . more than is apparent."

Suggesting that there seems to be a "roll-back of progress" in the Civil Rights movement at present, the speaker noted that "life is like a spiral. Give the spiral an opportunity to make a complete circle and the progress is still there."

Many people, Dunston suggested, are being "don't careish," and thereby "undermining the liberties," that civil rights supporters worked hard to gain in the 1950s and 1960s. "They've never understood" the struggle and the gains, Dunston said.

"I don't know all the reasons why the Civil Rights Act isn't giving us all we expected," Dunston said. But he suggested that focusing attention on "fancy houses, more money, stocks and bonds," and other pleasures might be one cause. "Affluence does not bring the kingdom of God," Dunston said. In fact, "many times new affluence will move people away from the kingdom of God."

Dunston said people who view freedom as the ability to exercise their rights and define for themselves what is wrong, are mistaken. "We've got to have standards."

And according to Dunston, the church "has to set standards for our children. Young people have no idea what our great struggle is all about. That which they see has not always been. We have stopped drilling qualities into our young people," Dunston charged.

The NAACP and the black church has always "followed the principle of non-violence. We haven't taken the time to instill this in the young people of today."

Dunston noted that "pride is something else we need to stress . . . good manners, respect . . . and honesty," suggesting that many young blacks "mistake common, everyday manners for meek and submissive behavior."

By working together for the common good, Dunston said, "black folks can move up freedom road."

A talk by the Rev. Julius C. Hope, of Detroit, director of the NAACP Religious Affairs Department, at a public meeting last night reinforced Dunston's concern for honesty and pride among the black community.

"We are living in trying times . . . always lived in trying times. Our way has always been cloudy."

"If we as a people are to make it to the promised land, we must use what we have. We must stop expecting white folks and other folks to do for us what we must do for ourselves."

"I'm not saying we don't need the help of white folks," Hope said, "but we must recognize our problems and work on them ourselves. The Lord helps folks that help themselves."

"Too often we concentrate on our fears, rather than ways to solve our problems," Hope said.

"We must use against the forces of racism what we have."

Hope said, "We must use our ability to strengthen our family life. We must build strong families . . . and provide for our family. The Lord has been good to us, but we must use our ability and respect ourselves and one another."

"We can't blame white folks for killing black folks. Black folks kill black folks."

"We must use our money wisely . . . learn to support each other . . . use our right to register and vote," and "use our common sense and support the NAACP," Hope emphasized.

"It's time for black America and all Americans of good will to get together and tear down the walls of segregation," Hope said.

Hope, too, said, "The NAACP cannot effectively survive without the support of the black church. The biggest thing we own and operate and control in this country today is the black church."

In welcoming the delegates last night, the Rev. Arlee Griffin, pastor of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church where yesterday's convention sessions were held, said "black people are a people of hope," and expressed pleasure that the NAACP and black churches have "joined hands" to "work for the common good of all."

The Rev. Solomon Jones of Rocky Mount, and Bishop Florence Griffin of Elizabeth City were named to receive the Minister of the Year Award at last night's session. Kelly M. Alexander, Sr., president of the N.C. Conference of the NAACP Branches was scheduled to address the convention today.

Head Of Owner Almost Swallowed By Pet Snake

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Monty the python was great at parties and had been a friend to Bennett Boggess for years until it opened its jaws and tried to swallow his head, leaving him in shock and with teeth stuck in his forehead.

Rosemary Russell heard an "agonizing scream" and rushed out into the living room where she saw the 14-foot-long snake wrapped tightly around her boyfriend's head.

The python was digging its teeth into Boggess' forehead, Ms. Russell said, and as she watched, it widened its jaw to take in Boggess' entire head.

Ms. Russell and Richard Frank, one of Boggess' roommates, said they were convinced they would have to kill Monty to free Boggess. But after a bloody struggle that lasted a few minutes, the snake relaxed its grip and Boggess got free.

Boggess, 23, now says the next time he feeds his snake he'll make sure two people are on hand.

Monty was still living at home today, but in a cage with 30 pounds of barbells stacked on top for security.

"I've been awake three nights watching the snake cage to make sure it doesn't get out," said Frank, adding that he would love to give the snake away and is trying to talk Boggess out of getting another snake when he eventually gets rid of Monty.

Although Boggess said after the Sept. 30 attack that the snake had just become ornery, a Gainesville expert said the python's behavior was characteristic.

"Snakes cannot be domesticated," Walter Aufenberg, curator of herpetology at the Florida State Museum, said Wednesday. "They are completely untrustworthy in that they can get some cue from you that you're the food."

Boggess' other roommate, Dave King, said Monty was "fun at parties" when it crawled around, but he said he'd rather not have another snake in the house.

Boggess, a billing clerk at Shands Teaching Hospital, was about to feed the python a live rabbit and had the snake draped around his neck when it tried to swallow his head.

Frank said he saw Boggess fall back and grab the snake's mouth, but as the snake wrapped itself more tightly around his head, "all you could see was one eye and a nostril. You could see the blood going down over his eyes."

Frank and Ms. Russell tried to pull the snake away, but it tightened its grip. Frank went to the kitchen for a knife and Ms. Russell went to look for an ax. Suddenly, after being poked in the eyes and mouth by Boggess, Monty relaxed its grip.

Boggess was treated at a hospital for shock, and was given tetanus shots and local anesthetic. Several snake teeth were removed from his forehead.

Boggess said he bought Monty for $60 when the snake was a baby five years ago and "it grew and grew and grew." He said the serpent "seemed friendly then," but admitted he'd like to sell it or give it to the Jacksonville Zoo. He said he still wants to buy a smaller snake.

"You get used to it," he said. "It's sort of like a small dog. You have it and you're not afraid of it, but everyone else is and you don't know why," he said.

Baby Boom For Sullivan Family

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Virginia Sullivan's family had a baby boom all its own, and it all happened in two rooms of Butterworth Hospital.

Mrs. Sullivan went to visit her daughter, Janas Corner, who had just given birth to a baby girl, but the new grandma wasn't quite ready for what she saw when she got to the hospital.

In the bed next to Mrs. Corner was Mrs. Corner's sister, Jayne Bodbyl, who had given birth to a baby girl less than two hours before her sister.

"My mother didn't know I was in the hospital," Mrs. Bodbyl said. "She was really surprised."

"Her mouth was hanging open," was Mrs. Corner's description.

Judge Bars Publication Of Turin Shroud Book

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — An upcoming book on the Shroud of Turin could jeopardize a scientific test to determine if the shroud is the burial cloth of Jesus Christ, according to a Michigan judge who halted its publication and sale.

Washtenaw County Circuit Judge Ross W. Campbell ordered Servant Publications Inc. of Ann Arbor to stop publication of "Verdict on the Shroud," due to be released Oct. 15.

The restraining order came Thursday in a lawsuit filed by the Shroud of Turin Research Project, a nonprofit, Connecticut-based group of scientists and scholars, and several of its current and former members.

Campbell said negotiations are under way with officials of the Roman Catholic Church to allow a carbon 14 dating test of the shroud, the final phase of the investigation which began in 1978. He said the test — which uses radioactive isotopes to determine the age of objects — is crucial to the project, and the public interest would suffer if the book jeopardizes the test.

The disputed book concludes the shroud is that used to wrap the body of Jesus after his crucifixion. An image similar to a photographic negative appears on the linen.

Campbell also said he would not allow publication of the book unless the publisher changes the cover, which implies it is a final report of the research team. Members of the team claim their names were used without authorization on the book's cover.

According to the suit, the book claims to be the official report of the research project, although neither of the authors is associated with the project.

Attorney Robert F. Magill Jr., representing the publisher and authors, contended the order borders on a First Amendment violation, and said he would consider an appeal.

Scientists and others involved in the research project were to release some of the findings from their research at a news conference today before the opening of Shroud of Turin Conference at Connecticut College in New London, Conn.

More than 1,000 researchers, religious pilgrims and others were expected to attend the three-day event.

The shroud itself never leaves Italy and is displayed only two or three times every century. Its official guardian is the archbishop of Turin, currently Cardinal Anastasio Alberto Ballestro.

Dr. Dan Jordan Is Recognized

Dr. Dan Jordan, of the ECU Infirmary, has maintained a quarter century of membership and service in the American Academy of Family Physicians (AAFP) — the nation's largest medical specialty organization.

In a letter to the local family doctor, the then AAFP President Sam A. Nixon wrote, "Because of the activities of the Academy and busy individual physicians like you, family practice has made incredible strides. In fact, this growth has been unparalleled in the history of medicine."

More than 7,000 family physicians have maintained membership in the 50,000-member AAFP continuously since February 1954 or before.

Carter Threatens Libel Action

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Carter is considering a libel suit against The Washington Post over a gossip item suggesting that someone "bugged" the government guest house where Ronald and Nancy Reagan stayed before the inauguration.

Carter's attorney, Terrence B. Adamson, said in a letter to Post board chairman Katharine Graham that the item in last Monday's "Ear" column "is false, defamatory, libelous per se, injurious to the reputation of President and Mrs. Carter and published with actual malice."

Jody Powell, who was Carter's White House press secretary, said Thursday that the former president is prepared to sue the Post "for seven figures" — at least $1 million.

Adamson's letter demanded a retraction and a public apology, but Post executive editor Benjamin C. Bradlee said, "It will be perfectly obvious that there is no retraction in the paper" today.

Bradlee said the newspaper's lawyers were studying the matter and refused further comment.

The New York Times, however, quoted Bradlee in today's editions as saying "there is no doubt in the world that the item as written doesn't say anything about anybody bugging anybody. ... How do you make a public apology — run up and down Pennsylvania Avenue bare bottom, shouting, 'I'm sorry!'"

Bradlee told The Associated Press that he thought his remarks to the Times reporter were off the record.

The "Ear," picked up by the Post after The Washington Star folded last summer, quoted "close pals" of Rosalynn Carter as citing a reason why the Carters thought the Reagans might have wanted to move into the White House before the Jan. 20 inauguration.

"They're saying that Blair House, where Nancy was lodging — and chatting up First Decorator Ted Graber — was bugged," the item said. "And a least one little tattler in the Carter tribe has described listening in to the Tape itself."

The Reagans denied last January that Mrs. Reagan had expressed the wish the Carters would move out early so she would have time to redecorate the family quarters before her husband was inaugurated.

Blair House, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, is the government guest quarters where the Reagans stayed before he became president. It also is used by visiting foreign dignitaries.

Nixon Library Foes Organize

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A committee formed Thursday is attempting to undermine recent faculty support for a proposed Richard Nixon presidential library at Duke University, organizers said.

"The administration has maintained all along that most people are in favor," said Ruffin Slater, a Duke alumnus and organizer of the anti-library committee. "We want to show that the opposition is not only there, but now it is documented."

On Tuesday, three professors announced at a news conference that they had a petition with 75 signatures of faculty members in favor of the library.

But public policy professor Dr. Bruce Kuniholm and Dr. Carol B. Stack criticized the announcement as not being representative of the entire faculty.

"We're concerned to the extent this group held a press conference and said it was representative of the faculty," Kuniholm said. "The Academic Council is the only body that is elected by the faculty, and those people represented themselves."

A group of students, faculty and alumni formed the Committee Against the Nixon-Duke Library, and signed up 265 members Thursday, said committee spokesman Dr. Norman Guttman.

Guttman, a psychology professor and the group's treasurer, said, "This seems like an appropriate time to coordinate all people opposed to this thing."

The committee so far has purchased a full-page advertisement in the school newspaper, which was signed by 14 faculty members, 15 students and six alumni.

Guttman said money raised would be used to pay for more advertisement and possibly letters to the alumni.

Duke president Terry Sanford has said if most professors are opposed to the library, he would abandon the negotiations.

In a resolution approved by the student legislature 35-28 on Tuesday night, Sanford was criticized for his handling of the library affair.

The resolution accused Sanford of "proceeding without student input" and "misrepresentation of the issue."

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Teen-agers obsessed with playing video games have broken into hundreds of parking meters to get the quarters to feed their habit, Providence police say.

Lt. James Higgins of the juvenile division estimated Thursday that 200 meters were jimmied last month by youngsters searching for money to play the games.

Police said about 20 juveniles have been arrested and $200 in change confiscated in the past three weeks.

"They're killing us," traffic division Lt. William V. Devine said, adding that one meter maid found 49 jimmied parking meters one day downtown.

Higgins said police would favor legislation to prohibit youngsters from playing video games.

"A good kid can go bad if he's under pressure," said Higgins.

Detective Richard Gardner said that one 13-year-old youth arrested recently told police he was forced to rob parking meters by the leader of a neighborhood gang who demanded half the take.

"The word is spreading," said Gardner. "If you want to make some quick, easy change, hit the meters. It's an epidemic."

City officials said they could not estimate how much money has been lost to the wave of thefts, since they did not have reports on total collections for the last month.

Fence Post Art Unique

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Willie Baucom-Grimes is one artist who can claim her work stops traffic.

Ms. Grimes has discovered an art form so unique that passers-by pull over to see her work.

During the past year she has painted a series of fence posts — not on canvas but cedar ones in cow pastures.

Instead of putting the rhythm of fence posts into a painting as many artists have done, she adds color and design to the natural visual rhythm that fence posts provide the countryside.

The new Visiting Artist at Cleveland Technical College got the inspiration for her unusual art form while helping her husband put up fence posts at their home in Charlotte.

She was looking for a direction to her career at that time and a way to use all the techniques she had learned.

"I told myself I was at a point I could paint whatever I wanted," she recalls.

Finding something unique — something that no one else could copy — was her dilemma, as it is with all artists.

She believes she has found something of her heritage that combines rhythms and designs in painting fence posts and also has a series of mobile units to use in demonstrating her work.

Ms. Grimes, 33, has indoor and outdoor studios at Cleveland Tech. She enjoys painting outdoors because it enables people to see her working conditions and how an artist functions.

"It takes the mystery out of it," she says.

Painted fence posts make people reconsider all the rules and preconceived notions they have about art, she says.

"Art has been on flat surfaces for so long," she says. "Somewhere along the line we decided that art must be on flat walls. It'll take a while to change that."

Once the basics of art are learned, people can begin appreciating it.

Minerals In Ocean Said Easy To Get

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A huge Pacific Ocean source of valuable minerals, including scarce ones the United States now must import, can be mined easily, government scientists say.

The immense ore deposit, loaded with billions of dollars worth of copper, silver and other minerals, lies on the surface of the ocean floor under international waters, the scientists said Tuesday.

Scientists of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said the deposits they discovered on submarine dives last month were carried from deep within the Earth by past volcanic activity.

"The ores are incredibly rich and they are on the surface around old volcanic vents," said Dr. Alexander Malahoff, chief scientist on the dives. "You don't have to dig out millions of pounds of rock to get to them."

"Even though the minerals are 8,500 feet below the ocean surface, Malahoff said, most of the technology to get to them already exists. There are no international treaties restricting recovery of the minerals, NOAA officials added.

"It's up to industry to start looking at it as an economic resource," Malahoff told a briefing at the U.S. Commerce Department, NOAA's parent agency.

U.S. officials have expressed concern about the nation's dependence upon foreign countries for such strategic minerals as molybdenum, and the nation's low stockpiles of some of them. New sources of these minerals, such as the recent find, could lessen this dependence, they say.

Malahoff said the undersea ore deposit, estimated to exceed 25 million tons, is in a lifeless area because of its depth and coldness. It therefore could be mined with virtually no damaging environmental effects, he added.

Using the deep-diving submersible Alvin, scientists found the mineral cache in an area 350 miles west of Ecuador, some 220 miles east of the Galapagos Islands.

It was in this area four years ago that other scientists discovered active volcanic vents spewing mineral-laden hot water. Around the vents flourished unusual lifeforms — including giant sea worms — supported by heat and nutrients from the fissures.

Malahoff said the NOAA scientists went to nearby, inactive areas of the same rift region to see whether volcanic activity had formed concentrations of large mineral deposits.

"They found a huge metallic sulfide deposit almost three-quarters of a mile long dotted with dead volcanic vents up to 60 feet tall. This ore mass is about 650 feet wide and 130 feet thick.

"The deposit is about 10 percent copper, estimated to be worth $2 billion by itself, and 10 percent iron. Other minerals in rich supply include molybdenum, vanadium, zinc, cadmium, tin and lead.

SEND CONGRESS ONE OF THESE. IT COULD BE ONE OF THE KEYS TO LOWERING INTEREST RATES AND UNLOCKING THE ECONOMY.

Why send a key to Congress?
To dramatize your frustration with an economic policy that keeps interest rates high.

These three proposals, we feel, could be the latchkey that opens the way to a healthy economy.

1. The President and the Congress hold the budget deficit to under $42.5 billion in fiscal 1982. Balance the budget in fiscal 1984.

2. The Federal Reserve Board to allow the money supply to increase at the higher end of its monetary targets to accommodate economic growth and stability.

3. The president to appoint a non-banking, small-business representative to fill the first vacancy on the Federal Reserve Board.

The Administration, the Congress, the Federal Reserve Board can no longer ask the public to accept the economic hardships resulting from the devastating cost of money.

It stifles economic growth. It increases the deficit. It reduces employment. It prevents expansion. And it depresses national spirit.

You can show how you feel about high interest rates by sending a key to your people in Congress. Any key will do. A house key. A car or a truck key. An office key.

These keys signify the ravages of tight money and high interest rates. Your key would be symbolic of the home you couldn't buy. The new car or truck you needed but had to put off buying. The bankrupt business whose doors you were forced to close.

So send Congress your tired, your battered, your worn-out keys. Attach yours to the coupon below and send it to Congress today. Your cooperation may be the key to lower interest rates.

IF YOU WANTED BREAD, YOU HAD TO MAKE IT—FROM START TO FINISH!

IN BIBLICAL TIMES, THE MISTRESS OF THE HOUSE, FIRST THING ON ARISING, WOULD ATTEND HER FAMILY'S DAILY NEED FOR BREAD. FIRST, THE GRAIN (USUALLY BARLEY OR RYE) HAD TO BE GROUND INTO MEAL, SIFTED TO FLOUR, THEN MIXED INTO A PASTE WITH WATER... NOW IT WAS KNEADED INTO DOUGH AND LEAVEN ADDED, LEFT STANDING LONG ENOUGH FOR IT TO RISE, THEN THE DOUGH WAS DIVIDED AND SHAPED INTO CAKES FOR BAKING. A FAMILY HAD ITS OWN PORTABLE OVEN OF STONE, WHICH STOOD ABOUT THREE FEET HIGH AND WAS HEATED ON THE INSIDE BY WOOD OR DRY GRASS FIRE, THE CAKES OF DOUGH BEING PLASTERED ON THE OUTSIDE TO BE BAKED....

...USUALLY, IT WAS ONE OF THE YOUNGER DAUGHTERS OF THE HOUSEHOLD WHO SUPERVISED THE BAKING OF THE CAKES, FOR THEY HAD TO BE CAREFULLY TURNED DURING THE PROCESS LEST ONE SIDE BE BURNT.

Nobel Prize In Medicine Goes To Two Americans And A Swede

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Nobel Prize for medicine was awarded to two Americans and a Swede today for research on the human brain.

The prize went to Dr. Roger W. Sperry of California Institute of Technology and Harvard professors David Hubel and Torsten N. Wiesel of Sweden. Sperry received one half of the prize — this year worth a record 1 million kronor, the equivalent of $180,000 — for discoveries concerning "the functional specialization of the cerebral hemispheres (brain halves)," the Karolinska Institute of Medicine announced.

Hubel and Wiesel shared the other half for discoveries concerning "information processing in the visual system." The Nobel committee said he showed how a lack of visual stimulation in infancy "for example through errors in the lens system of the eye ... may lead to a permanent impairment of the ability of the brain to analyze visual impressions."

Reached in Boston, Wiesel's reaction to the announcement was "Oh no, I was afraid of that. Maybe I should go and hide."

The prize for medicine was the first to be announced in this year's Nobel series. For the eighth consecutive year Americans won a share of the coveted medicine award.

Sperry, born in Hartford, Conn., in 1913 is a Harvard alumnus who worked at the University of Chicago from 1946-53, at the National Institutes of Health and, from 1954, as professor of psychology at Cal Tech.

Through his studies, Sperry has "brilliantly succeeded in extracting the secrets from both hemispheres of the brain and in demonstrating that they are highly specialized and also that many higher functions are centered in the right hemisphere," the awards committee said.

Sperry's studies involving epilepsy patients "achieved something considered almost unattainable. He has provided us with an insight into the inner world of the brain, which had hitherto been almost completely hidden from us. With his discoveries of the specialization of both cerebral hemispheres he has given us an entirely new dimension in our comprehension of the higher functions of the brain," the panel said.

Sperry demonstrated that the left hemisphere of the brain is computer-like in its functions — logical analysis of details and symbolic relationships, mathematical calculations, speaking and writing. It is considered the more aggressive and "executive" hemisphere.

His research showed the right hemisphere as a "passive, silent passenger who leaves the driving of behavior mainly to the left hemisphere," able to perform simple additions up to 20 to comprehend the meaning of one-syllable nouns but not adjectives or verbs. However, it is superior to the left hemisphere in terms of concrete thinking, spatial consciousness and comprehension of complex relationships.

The Nobel awarding professors noted: "Almost 50 years ago, the great Russian physiologist Ivan Pavlov concluded that 'mankind can be divided into thinkers and artists.' Perhaps the left hemisphere is the dominant one in thinkers and the right hemisphere in artists."

David H. Hubel, 55, a naturalized American, was born in Windsor, Ont. and graduated from McGill University. In 1954, he joined Johns Hopkins University, and went on to the Harvard Medical School in 1959. He became professor of neurophysiology at Harvard in 1965. He has served as the George Packer Berry professor of neurobiology at Harvard since 1968. He won the Albert Lasker Medical award in 1979.

Torsten N. Wiesel, born in Uppsala in 1924 and still a Swedish citizen, has also worked as a professor at Harvard Medical School since 1960 and succeeded Hubel as chairman of its department of neurobiology in 1973. Since 1974 he served as the Robert Winthrop professor in that specialty. He is an alumnus from the Karolinska institute where he graduated in 1954, and was a member of the Nobel awarding body.

Hubel and Wiesel have studied the visual cortex of the brain showing how it analyzes the coded messages from the retina of the eye. "One of the things we have been into is this old question of what is the importance of visual experience for the development of the visual system, and that of course is related to how experience is important for the development of the nervous system in general," Wiesel said in Boston today. He said he hoped their 20 years of research has helped doctors understand the importance of early treatment of children with vision problems.

Certain cells read the simple letters in the message and compile them into syllables that are subsequently read by other brain cells which in turn compile the syllables into words. These, finally are read by other cells which compile words into sentences that are sent to the higher centers of the brain, where the visual impression originates and the memory of the image is stored, Karolinska professors explained.

Of all sensory impressions sent to the brain, the visual experiences are the dominant ones. The discoveries of Hubel and Wiesel threw new light on the complicated process behind the origin of visual perception in the brain, the Nobel panel said.

"By following the visual impulses along their path to the various cell layers of the optical cortex, Hubel and Wiesel were able to demonstrate that the message about the image falling upon the eye's retina undergoes a step-wise analysis in a system of nerve cells stored in columns. In this system each cell has its specific function and is responsible for a specific detail in the pattern of the retinal image," the Karolinska professors said.

Cites Lack Of Required Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying there isn't enough money to build both the B-1 and the radar-evading Stealth bombers, the chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee wants the Reagan administration to scrap the B-1.

"I am absolutely convinced that the B-1 should stay buried," Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., said Thursday in a statement. "Resurrecting it will deprive the United States of the timely introduction of a new-technology Stealth bomber."

President Reagan announced a week ago that he wants to spend more than $20 billion for 100 updated models of the B-1 while it develops the Stealth. The B-1 was shelved by former President Carter in 1977 in favor of developing the Stealth.

Pirates Face Tough Spiders, Redden

By WOODY PEELE
 Reflector Sports Editor
 East Carolina's Pirates, still smarting from a 24-14 defeat at the hands of the Duke University Blue Devils will be out to do something Saturday they haven't been able to do so far in the 1981 football season — win on the road.

The Pirates have lost all three of their road games and won both of their home starts. Against the University of Richmond in City Stadium in Richmond, Va., Saturday, the Bucs will seek to extend their domination over the Spiders.

The game is a featured part of the annual Tobacco Bowl celebration in Richmond with kickoff set at 1:30 p.m.

"This is not the Richmond team of old," East Carolina coach Ed Emory proclaimed.

"(Barry) Redden is one of the top backs in the country. I'm not going to try to compare him with (UNC's Kelvin) Bryant, but I will say that he's among the top ten backs in the country. He's high on the pro list and was held out of last week's game to make sure he is ready for us."

Redden, who has rushed for over 600 yards in four outings, is being touted for the Heisman Trophy by the University of Richmond.

Helping the Spiders along is an outstanding quarterback Steve Krainock, Emory adds. Krainock, who suffered a shoulder separation against Southern Mississippi two weeks ago, is listed as available by Richmond for the ECU game, although there are some sources who say he will not be ready.

Redden, who hurt his knee against Southern Miss, reportedly could have played last week if needed.

In the meanwhile, second stringer Napoleon DuBois will be waiting in the wings at quarterback, as he was last week when he guided the Spiders to victory over James Madison.

The Spiders, too, remember last year's contest, when Richmond, under a sunny sky, pushed out to a 22-7 lead. But in the fourth quarter, the skies suddenly clouded over, and a heavy rainstorm pelted City Stadium. Under those clouds, the Pirates — apparently used to more seafaring weather — rallied and pulled out a 24-22 victory in the closing seconds of the game.

That's something the Spiders haven't forgotten.

However, it has been six years — back in 1975 — since the Spiders have beaten an ECU team. That came in Pat Dye's second year when he, too, got off to a 2-3 start.

"If you look at this game through Richmond's eyes," Emory said, "you feel that the worst is behind you and that the toughest part of the schedule is over. They have to feel that they can win the rest of their games."

"They are playing in the Tobacco Bowl, in their own stadium, on Astro-Turf (something the Pirates haven't seen this year). They have a lot of momentum and a lot of things on their side."

But, Emory said, the view through the eyes of the Pirates could be a factor too. "This has to be the beginning of a new season for us. We have a chance to (even up our record), win our first road game, and do us some good in our recruiting in Virginia."

One of the things that worries Emory the most, however, is the wide splits taken by Richmond. "They try to get you in a situation where they can go four on three or five on four," he said. "If you spread out with them, they like to go up the middle, and if you stay in, then they go outside. They are a finesse football team, and a well-coached one."

Emory noted that the situation which faced Dal Shealy at Richmond a year ago — and even now — is just the opposite of what he faced when he came to East Carolina.

"They had a history of being a losing team," Emory said. "They had some good players around, but just weren't able to put things together. Our tradition is just the opposite, of having a winning program, but we didn't have a great deal of talent left from the previous staff."

Emory is hopeful that the Pirates will be able to get their offense on track for this game. "I've been very disappointed that we haven't moved the football like we expected to. But just because you have a line that averages 250 pounds doesn't mean you're going to move the football. It takes technique, ability, desire and good coaching to move the football."

The Pirates will be missing at least two regulars from the game, running back Earnest Byner, out with a knee injury, and nose guard Fee Griffin, out with a sprained ankle.

Jimmy Walden will continue to sub for Byner, while Mark Ervin has been moved from tackle to nose guard to replace Griffin, with Tony Smith, a freshman, working as his backup.

"We're really going to miss Fee. He was playing the best of all our defensive linemen when he went down," Emory said.

The coach added that not knowing which quarterback would be in the game made it tough to prepare for the Spiders. "They used a different game plan with DuBois in there last week," Emory said.

"So we've got to get ready to face both Knainock and DuBois, not knowing which one will be playing most of the time. It's a lot like the situation with Duke last week, although they didn't change their game that much."

The series between the two teams is tied at 11 wins each. There have been no ties.

East Carolina finishes off its current road trip next Saturday night at Northwestern Louisiana, while Richmond travels to Cincinnati.

Lou, Reggie Key Yank Win

MILWAUKEE (AP) — If it's any consolation to the Milwaukee Brewers, on the brink of playoff elimination, they aren't likely to have to face the amazing Rich Gossage in New York tonight.

Gossage, setting up his 97 mph fastball with a hard slider, earned a save for a second successive day Thursday. Gossage pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out jam in the seventh inning, then stopped the Brewers the rest of the way as the New York Yankees won 3-0.

Lou Piniella lined a bases-empty homer in the fourth and Reggie Jackson slammed a two-run shot in the ninth for the Yankees, who lead the American League East Division championship series 2-0. They can clinch the best-of-five series by winning in New York tonight.

Yankees Manager Bob Lemon said Gossage probably will take tonight off, along with Ron Davis, the other half of what probably is baseball's best bullpen.

"We can afford to give them a day off," Lemon said. "We're going with our complete game pitcher, Tommy John."

The Brewers weren't sure of their starting pitcher tonight. Pete Vuckovich, scheduled to start Thursday, came down with a 102-degree fever and was treated for laryngitis and tonsillitis at Mount Sinai Hospital.

Club physicians were to decide today whether Vuckovich could fly to New York. If Vuckovich cannot pitch, Brewer Manager Buck Rodgers planned to start Randy Lerch.

Piniella broke a scoreless tie with his homer in the fourth off loser Mike Caldwell, who had been told slightly more than an hour before game time that he would be the starting pitcher.

Yankee rookie Dave Righetti protected the lead with four-hit, 10-strikeout pitching through six innings, but Lemon called on Davis to start the seventh.

"In a one-run game it only takes one pitch," Lemon said. "The way he (Righetti) pitched, I sure didn't want him to lose it, especially with our gold dust twins in the bullpen."

The Brewers filled the bases with one out in the seventh on a walk to Roy Howell, a single by Jim Gantner, a wild pitch by Davis and a walk to Paul Molitor.

But Gossage relieved and ended the inning by retiring Robin Yount on a popup and striking out Cecil Cooper.

"Rich only threw one breaking ball yesterday, so today he threw five sliders and got ahead with it. That set up his fast ball, and it was curtains," catcher Rick Cerone said.

"I had the advantage today because they were looking for fastballs, and they're great fastball hitters," Gossage said. "But I thrive when it's strength against strength."

Gossage fell behind 2-0 to Cooper, then came back to strike him out on a slider, which he said was his best pitch of the game.

"I was swinging a little defensively," Cooper said. "Probably the 2-0 pitch was the pitch I should have driven, but then I told myself, 'Make him throw a strike.' We're just going to have to try to relax and play our game."

Yankee pitchers struck out 26 Brewers in two games, 14 Thursday when shadows from the County Stadium upper deck blanketed the batting area from mid-game on.

"I think when you face a Dave Righetti, a Ron Davis and a Goose Gossage, all throwing 90 miles an hour or better with shadows in a difficult time of day, it's easy to look not aggressive at the plate," said Jackson.

"It looked like the ball was discolored a lot, even though it was white. It looked very dark," he said.

Righetti said he threw only 10 breaking balls at most.

"I went right after them," he said. "I saw just one finger — for the fast ball. That's all I was going to do. There were no surprises."

"The shadows were very bad," he said. "I was glad I was pitching in the daytime when the ball was tough to pick up. If the ball was down, they hit it pretty good on the ground, so I aimed the ball for the belt and let it take off. I didn't spot the ball very much at all."

"In the seventh when we didn't score was critical," Rodgers said. "You can't let a team with pitching like the Yankees off the hook.

"But Righetti, Davis and Gossage are three of the hardest throwing pitchers in the American League," he said. "They're three of the top five and maybe the top three. They pitched a tremendous ball game."

Jackson indicated the Yankees would have been satisfied with a split of the two games here.

"Even I didn't think we could hold Milwaukee down this well," he said.

"I guess as a professional I was kind of embarrassed when we didn't play well the second half of the season because we already were in the playoffs," he said. "But we knew we were playing a good ball club and that we better get with it when we got here. We did."

"I like our chances a lot better than when I came in here," Lemon said. "And going home will be a little advantage."

"We've won three in a row before," Rodgers said, bravely.

"We've come back, especially the last month of the second half," he said. "We're going to New York with the idea of winning tomorrow. Then Saturday will come. We're going with the idea of turning it around."

Tar Heels Facing First ACC Competition

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina will try to continue its climb up The Associated Press college football poll Saturday when it opens its Atlantic Coast Conference season against Wake Forest.

The only other league game on tap is Virginia's visit to Clemson while three other teams step outside the league. Duke will play host to Virginia Tech, Maryland is at Florida and Georgia Tech plays at Tennessee.

North Carolina State has a week off to rest for its Oct. 17 battle in Raleigh against the arch-rival Tar Heels.

North Carolina, 4-0, has climbed steadily in the rankings and is now rated fifth. But if that climb is to continue, coach Dick Crum's team is going to show its depth and versatility.

A knee injury has left running back Kelvin Bryant out indefinitely. Bryant was leading the nation in scoring with 15 touchdowns when he was cut down in Saturday's 28-7 win over Georgia Tech. In his place, Crum will use Tyrone Anthony and Bob Ratliff.

But quarterback Rod Elkins, who tops the league's statistical charts, will have an opportunity to throw more with Bryant out of the lineup. And that could be dangerous.

Wake Forest also likes the overhead attack, but the North Carolina defense leads the league against the pass and that may create problems for the 2-3 Demon Deacons.

Clemson has also been climbing in the polls and is now in ninth place. The Tigers will take a 4-0 record against Virginia, which is winless in four outings.

While that sounds bad for the Cavaliers, the fact that in 20 meetings Virginia has never managed as much as tie with the Tigers sounds worse.

Duke quarterback Ron Sally has led the Blue Devils to victories each of the past two weeks and earned ACC player of the week honors for one of those performances. He may need a similar performance if the 2-2 Blue Devils are to sidetrack Virginia Tech.

Tech, which lost to Miami of Florida in last year's Peach Bowl, may be headed for another bowl performance. Now 4-0, Tech features a balanced attack and a stingy defense.

Maryland takes a 1-2-1 record to Florida, a team the Terrapins haven't beaten since 1975. Most likely, the Terps will have to shore up its passing defense to hold the Gators off this time.

Florida has been up and down in a 3-2 season, but knocked off LSU 24-10 in its last start. Last year the Gators racked up a 35-20 decision over coach Jerry Claiborne's Terps.

Georgia Tech has lost three straight since a season-opening upset over Alabama. The Engineers battled North Carolina tooth and nail in the first half last Saturday before falling 28-7.

Tennessee enters with a 2-2 ledger, including a 10-7 win over Auburn in its last start two weeks ago.

Woody Peele

The pack spread out a little after last week's results were in, but Tom Baines continued to make his move toward the top.

Tom moved into a tie for second place last week with a 9-2 record, and is hot on the heels of leader Rick Scoppe.

Scoppe holds down the top with a 44-15 mark, while Baines and our guests are tied at 43-16. This writer comes next at 42-17, followed by Vickie Spivey with a 41-18 mark. Joe Jenkins — as usual — trails, but had a good week to come up to 32-27.

Last week's guest, ECU Sports Information Assistant Mark Brand came up with an 8-3 record, but lost two games due to his job and his alma mater, Purdue, losing.

This week, our guest is Greenville City Manager Ed Wyatt, who admits that he's getting a little help from his son.

Turning first to our high school picks, a fine 5-1 mark last week brought us to 28-11 on the season. We're still looking for a perfect week, however.

There is one cross-county game this week in Pitt, first a couple of key conference matches.

First, Farmville Central will be entertaining North Pitt. The Panthers have been the hard-luck kids so far, coming close but they have only one win to their credit. Farmville, after opening against one of the tougher teams in the East, Clinton, have played up and down. Right now, however, they appear to be headed up, and we'll

Conley Clinches Coastal Crown

JACKSONVILLE — D.H. Conley concluded its 1981 volleyball season the way it began the year: winning.

The Valkyries extended their unbeaten string to 18 straight matches with a two-match sweep of White Oak Thursday in their final regular season outing. D.H. Conley won the first match, 16-14, 15-2, and then captured the second, 11-15, 15-3, 15-7.

Conley, which finished up 10-0 in the Coastal Conference, will play the winner of the Coastal Plains Conference in the opening round of the state high school playoffs. The site and time of the match has not been decided yet.

In the opening match Jackie Daniels had eight points and Karen Barrett and Sherri Waters six for DHC. In the second match Daniels had nine points and Darlene Cannon three.

Karen Barrett had six hits in the first match and 13 in the second. Daniels had five in the first and four in the second.

In a junior varsity play, White Oak won the first match, 15-12, while D.H. Conley came back to win the second, 15-10. Lisa Mills had four points for the Valkyries.

Knights Rip Bethel, 7-0

Chris Harris scored three goals and assisted in another as Greenville Christian Academy romped to a 7-0 soccer victory over Bethel Christian Academy yesterday.

The Knights jumped out to a 3-0 lead in the first half of the match as Harris, Phil Bird and Troy Hudson scored goals. Mike Bragg gained an assist on the last goal.

Harris came back to score two of the four second half goals, while David Hollingsworth and Chris Stox each added single goals. Harris and Brian House each had assists.

Greenville took 54 shots on the Bethel goal, while Bethel goalie Mark Farmer was credited with 30 saves. In contrast, Bethel got off only seven shots, with John Parnell getting three saves for the Knights.

"I was pretty pleased with the victory," coach Dale Thatcher said. "I wanted to see if we had improved from the last time we played them, and I think we have."

Now 8-2, the Knights play host to Faith Academy on Tuesday.

Southern Nash . . . . . 2

Farmville C. . . . . 0

STANHOPE — Southern Nash was carried to three games in each match but managed to win both as the Lady Firebirds defeated Farmville Central in two Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball matches.

Southern Nash won the first match, 15-3, 5-15, 15-11, and then captured the second, 15-12, 6-15, 15-9.

In the second game of the first match FC's Gail Lang had eight points. In the first game of the second match Angela White had five points for the Lady Jaguars.

Farmville plays host to Southwest Edgecombe Tuesday in its final regular season match.

Rose . . . . . 1

New Hanover . . . . . 1

Rose High School split a pair of volleyball matches with New Hanover High School of Wilmington yesterday.

New Hanover captured the opening match of the series, 15-11, 13-15, 15-2. In the Rose victory, Linda Winstead served up five straight points.

Rose came back to win the second match, 15-7, 9-15, 15-9. In the opening game, Winstead had five in a row for points, while Frances Barnhill served up five, including three aces.

The split left Rose with a 2-2 conference standings and a 4-6

go with the Jaguars to win this one.

Conley will be hosting West Carteret in the first Coastal Conference game for the Vikings. The Vikes will be seeking only their second win of the year, while West Carteret also is after its second. The Patriots lone win, however, came over one of the teams that beat Conley. So — what choice? West Carteret to win.

Greene Central visits Ayden-Grifton in a key Eastern Carolina game. While both have one conference loss, they are still in the race for one of the two league playoff berths. A lot could be decided in this one, and we'll go with the home field advantage here, picking Ayden-Grifton.

Elsewhere, we like Bertie over Roanoke and Jamesville over Mattamuskeet. Our other area team, Williamston, has an open date.

Turning to the top games on the panel's list, we find Rose in a key Big East game, and East Carolina facing a strong Richmond unit. Both teams are coming off losing efforts last week.

Rose will be hosting Beddingfield, a team that, like Rose, has lost only once this year. The outcome will come close to eliminating the loser from playoff hopes, despite the fact that a lot is left to play. The panel likes the Rampants in this one by a solid 6-0 vote.

East Carolina travels to Spiderland for the Tobacco Bowl game. This could be a crucial game for East Carolina, while Richmond will be looking for revenge for last year's loss. The panel likes the Spiders, by a 4-2 margin — Wyatt and this writer sticking with ECU.

Our other consensus picks: Clemson over Virginia; Tennessee over Georgia Tech; North Carolina over Wake Forest; Purdue over Illinois; Auburn over LSU; Virginia Tech over Duke; Florida over Maryland; Ohio State over Wisconsin; Texas over Oklahoma; and VMI over The Citadel.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central allowed Ayden-Grifton a close 16-14 win in the first game of the opening volleyball match between the two schools yesterday, then stormed back to take the remaining games for a 2-0 sweep of the series.

Greene Central won the second game of the opening match, 15-13, and took the third, 15-11. Then, in the second match, the Lady Rams won 15-13, 15-11.

Lisa Ward led Ayden-Grifton in the opening game, scoring six straight points, while Pam Shackleford led the Lady Rams with six. In the second game, Josie Braxton dished up four in a row for the Lady Chargers, while Letha Lane had five for Greene. Ward added five more for A-G in the third game, while Shackleford had seven.

Linda Brown sparked the A-G effort in the first game of the second match with six, while Allison Battle led GC with seven. Ward finished up for AG with six while Shackleford had five.

Ayden-Grifton is now 2-10 overall and 1-7 in ECC play.

The Chargers host North Pitt on Tuesday, while Greene Central travels to Southern Nash.

STANHOPE — Southwest Edgecombe received excellent net play from Delphine Mabry and Alpha Jenkins to sweep a pair of Eastern Carolina Conference volleyball matches from North Pitt Thursday afternoon.

The Lady Cougars, now 8-0 in the ECC, won the first match, 15-3, 16-4, as Kim Edmundson scored six points. SWE then won the second match, 15-8, 15-17, 15-5, to conclude the sweep.

Bridget Jenkins had seven points in the first game of the second match for the Lady Cougars. Jackie Daniels had five points for North Pitt in the second game. Shelia Station had seven points for SWE in the third game.

North Pitt, now 2-6 in the league and 3-9 overall, had 29 hits, led by Gladys Roberson who had nine.

Detroit, Denver Challenge Each Others Defense In Top Contest

By The Associated Press

First the Detroit Lions shut out the Oakland Raiders. Then the Denver Broncos shot out the Oakland Raiders. Now the Denver Broncos take on the Detroit Lions. Could the game be pointless?

Possible, but not likely, even though the Broncos do have the No. 1 total defense and No. 1 passing defense in the National Football League, while the Lions' defense is No. 1 against the rush.

Countering that is the fact that Denver has the league's No. 1 passer, Craig Morton, and the Lions have Billy Sims, rated fourth in rushing and tied for the league lead in rushing touchdowns with five.

"I don't see any weaknesses in the Denver defense," said Monte Clark, coach of the Lions. "They're always tough. And Morton is throwing the eyes out of the ball. They have a Dallas concept to their offense (because the Broncos' head coach is former Cowboys assistant Dan Reeves) and they're doing a great job. Denver is as hot a team as we've played all year."

Sunday's other games are Philadelphia at New Orleans, Washington at Chicago, Los Angeles at Atlanta, Dallas at San Francisco, Cleveland at Pittsburgh, New England at the New York Jets, Cincinnati at Baltimore, Oakland at Kansas City, Seattle at Houston, Tampa Bay at Green Bay, Minnesota at San Diego and St. Louis at the New York Giants. Monday night's game is Miami at Buffalo.

The Broncos, 4-1 and tied with San Diego atop the American Conference West, are off to their best start since 1977, when they won their first six games and wound up playing Dallas for the Super Bowl.

"We can't afford to be overconfident. That's something we have to guard against, especially after our last two big victories," Reeves said of the Broncos' triumphs over San Diego (42-24) and the Raiders (17-0).

"I think we're handling the overconfidence problem pretty well, and the loss to Seattle (13-10 on the season's second Sunday) helped that. You just hate to look back at the end of your season and see one game which cost you making the playoffs or earning the home site in the playoffs. This could be one of those games if we're not careful."

The Lions will be without quarterback Gary Danielson, out with a dislocated wrist. Jeff Komo will start. He completed 14 of 25 passes for 153 yards and a touchdown against Tampa Bay last Sunday, but he was also intercepted twice in the Lion's 22-10 loss to the Bucs.

Philadelphia, with the league's only perfect record, is off to its best start ever and leads Dallas by one game in the NFC East following the Cowboys' surprising loss to St. Louis. Like the Broncos, the Eagles are guarding against complacency as they head toward New Orleans, where the Saints own a 1-4 record. "We are not the kind of team to become complacent," said quarterback Ron Jaworski. "Coach (Dick) Vermeil won't allow that."

While the Eagles are 5-0, the Redskins are 0-5, the only team still without a victory. New England got its first of the season last Sunday, beating Kansas City.

A share of the NFC West lead is up for grabs in Atlanta, where the Falcons and Rams hold two-thirds of it, along with San Francisco. The 49ers, with Joe Montana, and the Cowboys, with Danny White, come together in a matchup of the NFC's two top passers.

Cleveland is seeking to end a victory drought in Pittsburgh which dates back to 1969, before the opening of Three Rivers Stadium, while the Raiders are trying to put their first points on the scoreboard in three games. Not since the 1961 American Football League season had Oakland been blanked twice in a row.

Gamble Pays Off For Montreal, 3-1

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal Manager Jim Fanning appears to the conservative type not prone to gambling under most circumstances. But Fanning, who last month replaced the fired Dick Williams, gambled Thursday night and won. It left the 13-year-old Expos one victory shy of their first National League title of any kind and prompted Philadelphia Manager Dallas Green to say his club was "somewhere between a rock and hard place."

Catcher Gary Carter's two-run, third-inning home run before 45,896 at Olympic Stadium powered the Expos to a 3-1 victory over the Phillies and a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five series for the NL East crown.

Chris Speier's run-scoring, second-inning single and Carter's homer supplied the offense. Winner Bill Gullickson pitched 7 2-3 innings and the Expos got another 1 1-3 of game-saving relief by Jeff Reardon to put the defending World Series champions on the brink of elimination.

Fanning's eighth-inning gamble, putting the potential winning run on base, choked off Philadelphia's only major threat of the game. Gullickson, staked to a 3-0 lead, had allowed just three hits and had retired the first two batters of the inning.

Then, Lonnie Smith, who singled earlier to extend his hitting streak to 25 games (including the last 23 of the regular season) doubled. Pete Rose blooped a single to left and Smith scored. Bake McBride followed with a double to the right field corner and Rose stopped at third base.

In came Reardon, who has allowed just four earned runs in his last 35 2-3 innings, to face Mike Schmidt, the major league home run king with 31. Schmidt, hitless in the series, fouled off Reardon's first pitch and then took two breaking balls to work the count to 2-1.

Fanning then ordered an intentional walk that forced Reardon to pitch to 300 hitter Gary Matthews with the bases loaded. The drama built as the count went full before Reardon retired Matthews on a shot foul fly to first baseman Warren Cromartie.

"Well, it's time to turn it on," said Green when asked if the Phillies could sweep the Expos at Veterans Stadium for the first time since 1979.

Green said he realized prior to the series that Montreal had the edge in pitching.

"We know we're between a rock and a hard place. It's going to be tough," he explained. "Our guys haven't done what they're paid to do, and that young fellow (Reardon) came in and did what he's paid to do."

Problems Continue For Bobby Allison Thursday

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Allison was still trying to solve the mysteries of his car Thursday, while Darrell Waltrip was able to spend the day working on his race day setup for the National 500.

That is indicative of the way things have gone in recent months for these two stars of Grand National stock car racing.

Earlier this season, Allison led Waltrip by 340 points in the race for the Winston Cup championship. Now, Waltrip leads Allison by 53 points with just three races remaining after Sunday's $359,000 show at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

The pole position that Waltrip won Wednesday, with a fast lap of 162.744 mph, was his ninth of the season. And the 34-year-old driver from Franklin, Tenn., also has won 10 races, including the last two.

Meanwhile, Allison has been struggling mightily. He's had mechanical problems, bad luck, and the red-hot Waltrip to contend with. And he wasn't even able to break into the top 15 for Sunday's race, having to qualify during Thursday's session, which determined positions 16-30 in the 40-car lineup.

Allison finally placed his his Chevrolet Monte Carlo 17th in the field, touring the high-banked, 1.5-mile oval at 160.142 mph, trailing only Bill Elliott in the second-day time trials.

Elliott's Ford was clocked at 161.170, while Allison's fast lap didn't even equal his first-day time of 160.247.

"We ran about identical to yesterday (Wednesday). That's not bad for a beginner," the frustrated Allison said facetiously. "As soon as I get some experience driving we'll be all right."

Despite the onslaught of setbacks, Allison hasn't given up.

"I'd say there is momentum in the points race," he said. "But it can change with a flick of the finger. I consider myself very much in it (the points race). It just means I have to work harder."

Meanwhile, Waltrip took part in Thursday's practice sessions and reflected on his escape from what he felt was a bad situation in 1980.

The veteran driver had a tumultuous relationship with the Gardner brothers, whose cars he drove for several years. The constant battling took its toll, and Waltrip finally convinced the Gardners to let him buy his way out of the last two years of his contract with them for a reported $400,000.

Waltrip won five races and more than $381,000 in 1980, but has done far better this season with Junior Johnson furnishing his race cars and Tim Brewer running the crew.

"Everyone thinks I've had a great year, but you look at last year," he noted. "It cost me a lot of money to get to this point. That's why I'm so proud of what I've done. I've undergone a helluva change to get to the position I'm in this year."

Waltrip already has won $451,390 this season. But Allison still leads the money list with 1981 race earnings of $469,775.

Here are the top 30 qualifiers for Sunday's $359,000 National 500 NASCAR Grand National Race at Charlotte Motor Speedway. The final 10 positions in the field will be filled in Friday's qualifications.

After Four And A Half Months Unser Finally Indy's Winner

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Four and a half months after he was waved across the finish line with the checkered victory flag, Bobby Unser is ready to celebrate his third triumph in the Indianapolis 500-mile race.

A special U.S. Auto Club appeal panel announced Thursday that a one-lap penalty against Unser, which vaulted runner-up Mario Andretti into first place a day after the May 24 race, was improperly assessed.

The dispute, now settled as far as USAC is concerned, still may not be over, though, depending on Andretti's next move.

"I'm just too sick to even think about it," Andretti said. "I'm sick at the decision, the way it was carried out. I want to make that clear."

Andretti could appeal the USAC ruling to a higher body within auto racing — to the Automobile Competition Committee for the United States (ACCUS), the domestic arm of the Federation Internationale de L'Automobile (FIA), the international governing body. If he is rebuffed by ACCUS or the FIA, he could take the matter to civil court, which Unser previously said he would do if necessary.

Andretti, who won the Indy race in 1969, said, "I'll never be able to swallow this. It's totally unjust, it really is."

Unser, understandably, was elated over Thursday's ruling, which came on a 2-1 vote by the special USAC panel. Ironically, when the decision was announced at USAC headquarters, Unser was hunting elk in northern New Mexico mountains with his brother, Al, and with Pat Patrick, Andretti's car owner.

Patrick had said all along he thought Unser should have been declared the winner.

Marcia Unser, Bobby's wife, said she radioed the news to the group.

"We'll be doing something to celebrate tonight. The last celebration the night of the race wasn't much," Mrs. Unser said. "Bobby was astounded and ecstatic. They're crazy up there now. Pat Patrick went out and shot a bull elk."

"Bobby has been very bitter and miserable because of this (penalty). He justly deserves this decision. I know Bobby grew five feet taller when he heard."

Unser later told his car owner, Roger Penske, he was "extremely happy to become the sixth three-time winner of the race. This has been a goal for me since I began competing at Indianapolis in 1963."

The panel ruled Unser illegally passed cars during a yellow caution period on the 150th lap of the 500, but two of the three panel members said the one-lap penalty a day after the race was improper.

The penalty "should have been called during the race. If any other conclusion were reached, the officiating of an event such as this would be nothing short of chaotic," panel chairman Edwin Render wrote in a 23-page opinion.

Render, a University of Louisville law professor, and former USAC president Reynolds MacDonald signed the majority opinion that made Unser, at age 47, the oldest Indy champion in history.

Another panel member, former USAC president Charlie Brockman, dissented, saying if the penalty was imposed during the race, Chief Steward Tom Binford would have been "acting on incomplete and inconclusive information, an act that would seem irresponsible."

Dallas Green Leaving Phillies For Post With Chicago Cubs

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies Manager Dallas Green has accepted a lucrative, five-year contract to become vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs, according to a published report.

The agreement was reached last Sunday and will be formally announced as soon as the Phillies — now 0-2 in the National League East playoffs — complete post-season competition, says a copyright story in today's editions of the Wilmington News Journal.

They Phillies were trying to avoid elimination today against the Montreal Expos.

Lee Elia, Green's third base coach in Philadelphia, would replace Joey Amalfitano as manager of the Cubs, the report said.

The paper quotes what it calls an "unimpeachable source" as saying that the 47-year-old Green, a Delaware native, accepted the offer only after he and his wife Sylvia, were wined and dined in Chicago recently.

Mrs. Green was picked up at Greater Wilmington Airport in a private jet owned by the Chicago Tribune Co., owner of the Cubs, the report said.

Exact terms of the contract were not disclosed, but the News Journal said Green, who is paid $96,000 a year by the Phillies, at first balked at making the move, partly because the difference in salary would not have been worth it. A new offer, including generous fringe benefits, was impossible to refuse, the paper said.

Green, who last season led the Phillies to their only World Series championship ever, refused Thursday night to confirm or deny the report.

He conceded that he had talked with the Cubs, "but it would be out of place to comment any further at this point," he said from Montreal, where the Phillies fell two games behind the Expos in the best-of-five division series with a 3-1 loss.

Green, who has spent 26 years in the Philadelphia organization, has reportedly informed Phillies owner Ruly Carpenter and player personnel director Paul Owens had advised him not to turn down the Chicago offer too quickly, according to the News Journal.

The paper added that Bill Giles, who heads a group that is negotiating to buy the Phillies from Carpenter, offered to match the Cubs' offer to Green.

Green, who moved from the front office to the dugout when Manager Danny Ozark was fired in 1979, led the team to a World Series triumph over Kansas City. He is to start his new job in Chicago by Oct. 31, according to the report.

Lasorda Goes To Plan B As L.A. Seeks Ways To Score Runs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, with his club on the brink of extinction, has gone to Plan B, but it won't mean a thing if the Dodgers don't start scoring some runs.

At the outset of the National League West Division's best-of-five playoffs against the Houston Astros, Lasorda announced that after Fernando Valenzuela and Jerry Reuss took their turns, Bob Welch would pitch the third game, Burt Hooton would go in Game Four and Valenzuela would start if a fifth game was needed.

But the Astros, the division's second-half winners, caused the Los Angeles skipper to change his plans by winning 3-1 and 1-0 decisions at the Astrodome earlier this week in the first two games of the series.

The teams were idle Thursday, with Game Three scheduled at 4:15 p.m. EDT today at Dodger Stadium. During a workout on the day off, Lasorda announced that Hooton, 11-6 with a 2.28 earned run average during the regular season, would open the third game for his club with Welch moving to the bullpen.

"Hooton will start and everyone else will be in the bullpen except Valenzuela and Reuss," said Lasorda. "Hooton has had a great deal of success against the Astros and Welch can come in from the bullpen and throw hard. Also, Bob's had experience out of the bullpen."

The move really wasn't too surprising, considering the fact that Welch is 9-5 with a 3.44 ERA and by making such a move, Valenzuela and Reuss will get another start each if the Dodgers get that far.

"We were all a little surprised when they announced Welch over Hooton," said Houston outfielder Terry Puhl. "If you would have told me last week we won't have to face Hooton in the series, I'd have said great."

Hooton was scheduled to oppose left-hander Bob Knepper, 9-5 with a 2.22 ERA. If there is a Game 4, it would be played Saturday night, with right-hander Vern Ruhle pitching against Valenzuela. If a fifth game is needed, Nolan Ryan, who won Game One, would hurl against Reuss Sunday.

Ryan throttled the Dodgers Tuesday, with Steve Garvey's seventh-inning homer producing the only Los Angeles run. On Wednesday, Joe Niekro, Dave Smith and Joe Sambito combined to blank the Dodgers in Houston's 11-inning triumph.

Despite being down 2-0, the Dodgers can take heart in the knowledge that they've beaten the Astros 11 times in the last 13 games between the teams at Dodger Stadium.

They can also hope that history will repeat itself — Los Angeles, winner of the pre-strike half, swept the Astros in three straight last October at Dodger Stadium to force a one-game playoff for the division title, which Houston won 7-1.

"They raised us to another plateau by their actions," said Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey, referring to the screaming throng at Dodger Stadium last year. "I've got a feeling they'll remember."

"Our crowds have been a little subdued lately, basically because there was no race," commented Dodger outfielder Rick Monday. "I'm not in charge of their emotions, but whatever the people who come out there are thinking, we by no means have given up the ship."

Oakland Seeks Series Sweep

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Before the American League West playoffs began, Oakland A's Manager Billy Martin said the Kansas City Royals owned "a lot of tools and we're going to have to play our best to beat them."

The A's lead 2-0 over the Royals and could end the best-of-five series with a victory tonight. The pitching, so important to the A's success, has been at its best, but Rickey Henderson's hitting has not been.

Henderson was 0-for-9 in the playoff games Tuesday and Wednesday at Kansas City, the AL West second-half winner, but he didn't sound as though the hitless postseason start had him down.

"They've kept me off the bases but what they don't realize is, hey, Henderson has some people behind him," said the young A's leadoff hitter.

Wayne Gross and Dwayne Murphy slugged home runs as the A's won the opener 4-0 behind Mike Norris' four-hit pitching, and Tony Armas' four hits and two RBI supported pitcher Steve McCatty in Wednesday's 2-1 victory.

Tonight, Rick Langford is scheduled to face Larry Gura, the Kansas City left-hander

Johnson, Burns Share The Lead

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — George Johnson, a self-proclaimed golf hustler once bumped off the pro tour for poor play, is turning his game around before a hometown crowd at the $200,000 Southern Open.

Johnson, who grew up in Columbus, shared the lead with defending champion Mike Sullivan and veteran George Burns at 4-under-par 66 after Thursday's first round.

A total of 47 players equalled or bettered par on a cool, cloudy day that began with rain falling for the first four hours. There were 75 of the 156 players entered at 71 or better over the par-70, 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course.

One stroke back in the chase for the $36,000 first prize were Peter Oosterhuis, Peter Jacobsen, J.C. Snead and unknowns Payne Stewart and Mike Holland.

Calvin Peete and John Cook were among seven at 68, while Andy Bean, returning after more than five months with a hand injury, headed 15 golfers at 69.

Jerry Pate, the seventh-leading money winner, was at 70 and Johnny Miller had a 71. Arnold Palmer was in danger of missing the cut today after a 74.

Johnson, 42, who learned to play while caddying at a local club, said he makes about $20,000 to $25,000 on the mini-tour and used to earn money as a hustler.

"I used to go to the golf courses where the money was, in Atlanta, St. Louis, anywhere. That's the only thing that kept me going," said the ever-smiling Johnson.

Cincinnati To Host Davis Cup

CINCINNATI (AP) — Riverfront Coliseum and the city of Cincinnati have won the bidding for the Dec. 11-13 Davis Cup finals between the United States and Argentina after promising the U.S. Tennis Association financial and fan support of the matches.

Coliseum spokesman John Tafaro said Thursday that the USTA asked "a substantial guarantee" to bring the finals to the 15,700-seat auditorium on Cincinnati's riverfront, but he refused to confirm the amount pledged.

Tafaro said that Cincinnati had won out over New York in pursuit of the matches, and that Coliseum officials hoped to surpass the Davis Cup attendance record of 42,000 who saw the quarter-final matches in Madison Square Garden this year.

"We have also made a commitment that some of the dollars that we have allocated for tourism activities will be expended to support the presence of the Davis Cup finals in our community," said Mayor David Mann.

Business Contributions Fail Make Up For Cutback

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's businesses aren't planning substantial increases in contributions to social service and cultural groups despite President Reagan's call for private efforts to make up for government budget cuts.

"It's unrealistic to expect that private corporations and foundations by themselves can replace the total funds groups formerly received from the federal government," said Carl Meyerdirk, director of media relations for Standard Oil Co. (Indiana).

William M. DuVall, president of the Borg-Warner Foundation Inc., said he is convinced business will take up some of the slack, "but no way is private philanthropy going to come up with the amount of federal cutbacks."

Their comments were echoed at other big businesses and private foundations responsible for tens of millions of dollars in donations each year to the arts, humanities and other charities.

Reagan wants the private sector to make up for some of the money being slashed from federal programs and grants. Earlier this week, he announced formation of a task force to "promote private sector leadership and responsibility for solving public needs and to recommend ways of fostering greater public-private partnerships."

The president personally donated $1,000 Thursday to a fund-raising drive supporting 237 charitable causes and used the Oval Office occasion to say: "I think this is part of the whole voluntarism thing we're stressing."

Many business spokesmen interviewed said their companies plan slight increases in contributions to community groups, but most said the increases will not be directly tied to the federal cutbacks.

Others said their firms' giving is linked to earnings; if profits go up, so do contributions. And still others noted that businesses, like the federal government, are trying to tighten their budgets.

Some fear the federal cuts will pit social service organizations against those supporting cultural activities in a new quest for private funds. And some see smaller groups losing out to larger, well-established organizations.

"These groups are going to have to scramble," said a Ford Foundation spokesman who asked not to be identified. "They're going to have to train their sights away from Washington and toward their own community."

The Ford Foundation, which expects to give about $120 million next year, does not "seek to bail out organizations dependent on government funds." But he added, "We are alert to the situation."

Standard Oil and its foundation, Amoco Foundation Inc., expect contributions to reach about $11 million this year and rise to a proposed $14.5 million in next year's budget. "The anticipated decrease in federal funds is certainly ... one of the factors being taken into consideration" in the 1982 budget, Meyerdirk said.

At Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago, officials have started giving smaller amounts of money to more groups in order "to offer hope out there to keep going," said Eugene Croissant, an executive vice president.

Giving by the nation's seventh largest bank is based on a formula tied to the average contributions were about $2.9 million this year and are expected to rise to more than $3 million next year.

"I tend to think what we're going to be seeing in the future is a very strong conflict between the needs of the social service organizations and cultural groups," Croissant said.

U.S. Steel Corp. plans to raise its corporate and foundation contributions to an estimated $9 million to $9.5 million next year, from about $8.5 million in 1981, said James Hosey, executive director of United States Steel Foundation Inc.

But he said the increase is primarily to match inflation, not specifically in response to Reagan's budget cuts.

Coca-Cola Co., responding to Reagan's programs, announced in August it would increase its investments to help create capital and jobs among minorities, said spokesman Carlton Curtis.

An estimated $30 million is expected to be channeled through the minority community over the next five years as a result of the program, he said.

But he said plans to boost contributions in 1982 are "not directly tied to the (federal) cutbacks."

Contributions by the McDonald's restaurant chain, which gave away about $2.5 million in 1980, are generally tied to a percentage of pre-tax net income, said Steve Leroy, manager of corporate communications. "Our operation is really independent of what the national mood may be," Leroy said.

Gov. Hunt Behind Grimsley's Attack

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt said Thursday that he was behind Cabinet Secretary Joseph Grimsley's attack on Coastal Area Management Act foes, but would not comment on whether the matter was handled appropriately.

Hunt said in a news conference that he did not know who was involved in a rumored effort to gut the controversial 1974 act, but suggested to the Natural Resources and Community Development secretary that he do what he could to stop the move.

Grimsley said Wednesday that three Democratic leaders, Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and state Sens. Ken Royall, D-Durham, and Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, were planning to slip a provision into a state budget amendment bill that would repeal the act.

Grimsley also told reporters that he believed Green and Royall were acting out of "personal interests," because both own beach property in areas where new regulations issued under the act have banned development. The act gives local governments authority to limit development in fragile beach areas.

Hunt said he was informed by Grimsley of the move. "I told him we wanted to do everything we could to stop that," Hunt said.

But, asked if he felt Grimsley had acted appropriately, Hunt said, "I'm not going to get into that. Secretary Grimsley has been back to talk to those gentlemen, and I'm just not going to comment on that."

Green, Royall and Hardison all denied they had planned to try to repeal the act, but Green and Royall added that they were angry about new limitations placed on their property.

Pennsylvania Divorces Dive

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG (AP) — Pennsylvanians waited 195 years for major changes in a restrictive divorce law, then stopped splitting up as soon as the changes were made.

At least that's the picture painted by Health Department statistics that show a plummeting 1980 divorce rate — the first decline in 20 years.

A new trend towards togetherness?

Family law experts say no, and predict a jump in divorces this year as lawyers become more familiar with the sweeping changes that took effect on July 1, 1980.

"The figures are artificial," said Chris Gillotti, a Pittsburgh attorney who heads the state bar association's family law section.

"If the number of divorces is down, I haven't seen the number of happy marriages go up."

Bonnie Menaker, a Harrisburg attorney who helped frame the new law, said people are taking advantage of its provisions.

"Frankly, I think 1981 will show a tremendous increase," Mrs. Menaker said Thursday.

The new law allows no-fault divorces that can be finalized 90 days after filing, and unilateral divorces if the couple has lived apart for three years. It also adds alimony and equitable distribution of property provisions to the divorce code.

Mrs. Menaker, who teaches courses on the changes, said many lawyers were waiting for instructions and for local rules to be written.

"They stopped filing divorces for several months while they became familiar with the process," she said.

"Lawyers are reluctant to commit themselves to what it means ... if they don't have direction from the appellate courts," said Gillotti.

"More cases are being tried instead of settled," he said.

Before, a husband had to give in to his wife's economic demands because he needed her consent for a divorce, Gillotti said.

"Now, if the husband doesn't want to pay as much as his wife wants, he sits back for three years (and waits for a unilateral divorce) or goes to court," he said.

In many counties, according to Gillotti, divorce decrees are not entered until the economic issues are settled — resulting in backlogs and delays.

Two-Part 'Family Reunion' Will Start Sunday; Frankly, It Bores

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In one way, "Family Reunion" accurately reflects what can happen when a large group of relatives gets together. The four-hour television movie on NBC Sunday and Monday is dreadfully boring and a waste of two evenings.

Bette Davis, two-time Academy Award winner, makes a rare TV appearance as Elizabeth Winfield, a single, self-righteous, self-appointed family matriarch whose fanaticism for family is matched by her relatives' incredible tolerance of her.

Aunt Elizabeth's credo is that "it's better to lose on your terms than to win on anybody else's." She rubs a lot of people the wrong way. Miss Davis does too, giving the role a haughty, I'm-a-star tone, totally devoid of warmth.

Aunt Elizabeth, the only Winfield who has remained in the town that bears the family name, has been retired, kicking and screaming, after 50 years as a New England school teacher. She is given a farewell party and a bus ticket that allows unlimited use. Many of the townfolk want her to use it quickly.

But it turns out that there's another reason for the town's benevolence. Some town fathers, and some family members, want her out of town so they can turn the 105-acre homestead into a shopping mall. Elizabeth finally decides to take the bus trip, arriving unannounced at the homes of several relatives.

LONDON (AP) — Despite a cool reception by critics, the debut of Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show" in Britain was seen in twice as many homes as two competing shows, London's commercial TV station says.

"The ratings proved that Mr. Carson is doing a significantly effective job for us, despite the carping of some critics," said Michael Grade, programming director for London Weekend Television. LWT is a regional affiliate of Independent Television which has bought a 13-week run of the American talk show.

LWT said "advanced" ratings showed the program Saturday night — an edited version of his 19th anniversary program shown by NBC in the United States on Sept. 27 — reached 11 percent of all London households with television sets. That compared with 6 percent for the movie "The Producers" and 4 percent for the American comedy series "House Calls," on the two networks of British Broadcasting Corp.

The advanced ratings give no indication of the total number of viewers, only what fraction of TV households had sets on at the time. The one-hour version of the "Tonight" show began at 11:25 p.m. London time. At that hour, based on LWT's calculations, 79 percent of the homes with television sets did not have them on.

The Broadcasters Audience Research Board, which compiles the British equivalent of the Nielsen ratings, said it could not confirm LWT's ratings estimates.

That makes sense. Why spend two hours on a bus when you could go four?

The fact is the Winfields we meet spend their time discussing what it's like to be a Winfield, as if they were a minority group. We never learn much about them, and their relationships to each other never illustrate the real value of family and its support structure.

It's hard to sort out all the characters, and there's little reason for having so many around, besides the need for filler and the desire to have something for everybody: an interracial couple, a bickering couple, a non-married, co-habiting couple, an all-American family, a single woman and a retarded man.

Sounds more like a small city than an extended family.

When Elizabeth returns to Winfield, she learns that her nephew, a United States senator, has initiated the mall project. She enlists the support of a former student, a disenchanted Washington lawyer named James Cookman, to battle the mall.

The court fight does raise an interesting issue: whether progress is defined by jobs and economic growth, or in maintaining the family heritage. If this were a shorter show, it would have been possible to get caught up in this.

Perhaps because he isn't a Winfield, Cookman (John Shea) is believable as the lawyer-turned-activist. Another worthy performance is offered by J. Ashley Hyman, Miss Davis' real grandson, in his screen debut. He plays one of Miss Winfield's students who somehow ropes her into taking him on the road.

The mall battle coincides with a big family reunion at Miss Winfield's house, which turns out to be pretty convivial affair, more like a convention of shoe salesmen than any family gathering we've seen. Maybe it was the ponderous plot or just the time of the year, but we spent the last two hours hoping the most famous Winfield would show up, Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees.

A DOCTORATE FOR GUTHRIE — Folksinger Arlo Guthrie at the piano sings Amazing Grace shortly after he received an honorary doctorate degree from Siena College in Albany, N.Y. Thursday afternoon. (AP Laserphoto)

Doctorate Goes To Folk Singer

LOUDONVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Folk singer Arlo Guthrie says being given an honorary doctorate from Siena College, a Catholic school, is "another sign" that reaffirms his decision to "be who I am."

"I don't think that anybody on his own ever really does anything," said Guthrie, a convert to Catholicism. "At some point you have to align yourself with an ideal, with God, with whatever you want to call it."

Guthrie, 33, the son of Depression-era balladeer Woody Guthrie, donned a black academic robe Thursday to receive the doctorate.

Under his robe, Guthrie, 33, appeared to be the same blue-jeaned troubadour who created the 1960s protest ballad "Alice's Restaurant." But he was singing the praises of Francis of Assisi, the Catholic saint whose 800th birthday anniversary was being celebrated by the Franciscan college. Guthrie, born a Jew in Brooklyn, said he became interested in the Franciscans after meeting some Franciscan brothers in the 1970s. He has since become a Catholic and a member of the Third Order of St. Francis, a secular arm of the brotherhood.

After receiving his degree, he sat down at a piano and led the assembled academics and students in singing "Amazing Grace."

Body In Pool Poses Dallas Questions

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — J.R. Ewing of "Dallas" lands in the middle of a fix again tonight, but whether his latest woes can carry the CBS series back to its glory days in the ratings is another mystery.

The popular series, which broke all viewing records with its "Who shot J.R.?" episode, was the No. 1 show all last season. It went into a tailspin as reruns began, but climbed steadily in the ratings during the summer, and finished in 12th place last week.

The program begins its fourth season tonight with another cliffhanger set up with the end of the season in April. It's one that could cause the shiftiest oil man, played by Larry Hagman, more trouble than the two bullets fired by Kristin Shepard. Who is the dead woman in the swimming pool at South Fork Ranch and did J.R. kill her?

The body is found by J.R.'s archrival, Cliff Barnes, who accuses him of her death. J.R. is taken to police headquarters for questioning. Tonight's episode reveals the identity of the victim, but it will take some time to completely clear up the death.

This year's mystery has created up some interest, but nothing like the fervor created when J.R. was shot in the spring 1980 final episode and resolved last fall. It was a sensation not only here but in England, and the solution broke all viewing records with a 76 percent share of the audience.

Like last year, there were a few contests in this country and in England, but the new mystery generally caused hardly a stir. Winners of a British contest visited the "Dallas" set last week.

J.R. threatened four women in the episodes immediately prior to the woman being discovered in the pool. Here are the prime possible "victims":

— Sue Ellen, J.R.'s wife, played by Linda Gray, who has taken away their son, John Ross.

— Pamela Ewing, J.R.'s

Police Booked Tanya's Father

SPARKS, Nev. (AP) — The father of country singer Tanya Tucker was arrested after he allegedly threatened Miss Tucker's road manager with a pocket knife.

Police said they booked Jessie Tucker, 54, of McEwen, Tenn. Wednesday on misdemeanor charges of brandishing a deadly weapon and assault and battery.

He allegedly pulled the knife on Steven Wallach, 28, of Nashville, Tenn. after Wallach took an advance of $6,550 to pay salaries and petty cash expenses to the cast of Miss Tucker's show, which was appearing at a local casino.

Police said Tucker apparently believed Wallach was taking the money for himself. They said he later admitted he had been wrong about the money, but denied having threatened Wallach with the knife.

CONCERT
BELVOIR — The Vines Sisters of Farmville will be in concert at Holly Hill Free Will Baptist Church Saturday at 7 p.m.

The public is invited, says Pastor R.E. Worrell.

Martin Settles Out Of Court

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — An out-of-court settlement has been reached in a suit against comedian Steve Martin filed by an Omaha woman who said she was injured when pushed from a stage during a Martin performance.

Joyce Graves alleged that she was shoved from a stage in the Bob Devaney Sports Center in Lincoln.

She said Martin enticed her onto the stage, and as she walked toward him, a Martin employee threw her off the stage. She said the incident caused "permanent" injuries. The nature of her injuries was not specified.

One-Winged Bald Eagles Find A Home In N.C.

BEAR MEETS EAGLE — One of two bald eagles at Grandfather Mountain gets acquainted with one of the resort area's bears. The eagles, obtained by the Audubon Society, are in a natural habitat at Grandfather Mountain. (AP Laserphoto)

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — Two bald eagles rescued from hunters by the National Audubon Society are making themselves at home in Grandfather Mountain's new eagle habitat.

The eagles, a male and a female, will never fly. Both suffered gunshot wounds and were saved from death by the Audubon Society's Eagle Propagation Program. Each of the eagles is missing a wing.

The fact that the rare birds are injured doesn't bother Grandfather Mountain's owner, Hugh Morton, who worked for a year to get the eagles. The eagles arrived at their new home from St. Louis about three weeks ago.

"What we're hoping is that the two will nest, that they will raise young birds and that these in turn will raise more eagles," Morton said. "That way, we can restore an eagle population to the western North Carolina mountains."

The eagles are dark brown with white heads and are about 7 or 8 years old. A bald eagle's wingspan is about 4 1/2 or 5 feet.

Bald eagles were virtually wiped out in the past 20 years by the pesticide DDT and hunters who sold eagle feathers and claws as souvenirs. The United States' emblem bird is now protected by federal law and there are severe penalties for harming or killing an eagle.

The natural habitat at Grandfather Mountain, a 5,000-acre tourist attraction high in the Blue Ridge Mountains, features native trees, low shrubs, a huge outcropping of rock for the eagles to use as a perch and a small trout pond. The entire area is fenced to keep visitors at a distance from the birds.

"But visitors can get close enough to really get a good look at the eagles and close enough to take some really good pictures," Morton said.

Getting the eagles was a time-consuming and frustrating effort for Morton, a naturalist and an award-winning nature photographer. He first heard about the Eagle Propagation Program last winter, when he went to the state of Washington to photograph eagles in the wild.

"I saw injured eagles in the Tacoma zoo, and I got interested in maybe bringing some of the eagles here," he said. "There were government rules governing the eagles and who would get them. I applied for a permit from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and got turned down because we were a private concern."

When Morton found out that Disney World and Busch Gardens in Florida, both private theme parks, had been given permission to shelter eagles, Morton called his congressmen.

"It really made me mad. Here we had successful natural habitats for bear, deer and cougars, and they were telling me we didn't qualify to care for eagles," he said.

His complaint changed the wildlife officials' minds, and he got his eagles. The director of the propagation program has called the Grandfather Mountain eagle habitat "the most beautiful open-air exhibit of flightless bald eagles to be found anywhere in the world."

Steve Miller, a former biologist with the state Wildlife Resources Commission, is in charge of the eagle pair. Six days a week, the birds are fed whole chickens, feathers and all, and small furry animals, such as rabbits and squirrels. They fast one day a week.

"That's to clean out their crops and give them a chance to really digest their food," Miller said. "We've tried to get them to eat fish, which they should like, but they turn up their noses."

Morton and Miller are already making plans for the eagles' nesting season, which begins in late winter. They plan to build a platform for the large nest and provide lots of sticks and twigs for building the nest. They say they'll even build a ladder to help the flightless eagles get up to the nest.

"We've been told not to be too disappointed if nothing happens the first year," Morton said. "The first year they may just play at housekeeping. Then the second year, lay eggs and raise young eagles. We'll just have to see."

Meanwhile, Morton is making tentative plans to acquire two more bald eagles. He would put them on an island in a small lake at the base of the mountain. The area is completely surrounded by wilderness.

"We're proud to have the eagles here, and we're proud that everything we have in our habitats is native to the area," Morton said. "For most of the people who come up here, it's their first opportunity to see a real live eagle. It's a really great experience for everybody."

Empty Liquor Bottles A Large Sales Problem

By TEX O'NEILL
The Charlotte Observer
HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP)

— Despite appearances, Tom Crumpler doesn't have a drinking problem.

He did have a king-sized merchandising problem, though.

The 38-year-old High Point entrepreneur, who surrounds himself in bottles, mostly of the types that held booze, once bought 2 million of them to resell.

Gin-clear, lead crystal, acid-etched seltzer bottles from England. Delicate flasks of blistered glass — light and cobalt blues, greens, ambers, and browns — dredged from the Savannah River. Cinnamon and white stoneware of the English beer bottle.

"We all thought he was nuts," said his wife, Beth.

Today, the pair are still selling these multihued flasks at Crumpler's Antiques and Pottery, a sprawling business beside I-85 in Thomasville, 67 miles north of downtown Charlotte.

How many they've sold is anyone's guess, although brisk sales indicate Crumpler was anything but nuts.

A big man — 6 foot 3 — with an obvious flare for doing things in a big way, Crumpler bought most of his stock from a bottle buff in England.

The Englishman, Thomas Gunn of Rayleigh, County Essex, had picked up the bottle bug from his father. Whenever a brewery in Britain folded, they bought the stoneware.

The wares range from huge jugs, jars and crocks made to hold 6 imperial gallons (equal to 7.2 U.S. gallons), to the pint bottles for "cyder," ginger beer and mineral water, wine bottles and whiskey flasks, even the original pop bottle.

All stand, phalanx after phalanx, within Crumpler's bottle house and barn or about the grounds, a sort of Flanders fields for these dead soldiers.

Early in 1970, Crumpler was importing antique furniture from England to sell in his Greensboro antique shop when the notion struck. Because he was paying for the ocean shipping anyway, why not stuff the empty furniture drawers with English stoneware?

Back then it was plentiful, and probably would find a ready market in America, he reasoned.

Eventually he began buying Gunn's bottles through an English wholesaler. When Gunn took ill, he offered his acres of bottles for sale.

Crumpler went on something of a bottle binge, and bought the entire 2 million over a three-year period beginning in 1972.

The cost of transatlantic shipping alone was considerable. The bottles were shipped in 60 40-foot containers at $2,000 a container, or $120,000.

Although Crumpler wouldn't disclose the cost, he did say the tab for the shipping was about the same as for the bottles.

Today, the jugs and crocks sell for $10 apiece, regardless of size. The seltzer bottles go for $5, the pint bottles, $4.

Mrs. Crumpler says they're quite a bargain, with crocks and jugs going for $45 in other antique stores.

Apparently the customers think so, too.

"The large stone jugs won't be here but another three years," Mrs. Crumpler said. "We sell an awful lot of them to people making lamps."

Because costs have risen sharply, the Crumplers don't anticipate buying any more English stoneware. Ocean shipping, for example, has tripled since the oil embargo.

Five years ago, they priced the 2-gallon English jugs that sell for $10 in Thomasville.

The English manufacturer wanted $15 each. Add a 50 duty tax, and the costs of ocean and overland shipping, and the Crumplers would have had to pay $25 to $30 a jug, Mrs. Crumpler said.

When the supply of jugs, bottles, jars and crocks gives out, Mrs. Crumpler said, they'll simply have to move on to something else.

Research Helping Find Better Crops For N.C.

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
MILLS RIVER, N.C. (AP) — In the heart of fertile farming country in Henderson County agricultural experts are experimenting with everything from broccoli to ginseng to help state farmers grow better crops.

In the process the researchers are discovering new ways to help feed the world's population.

The innovative research is going on at the Mountain Horticultural Crops Research Station amid the center's acres of apple orchards, vineyards and vegetable crops. Center superintendent Harley Blackwell says the center aims to help farmers and solve agricultural problems all over the world.

"We're looking for agricultural opportunities associated with horticultural crops that will benefit farmers in Western North Carolina but also serve the state, the nation and the world," Blackwell said.

The center's work is funded by North Carolina State University's Land Grant Program, located on 213 acres of farmland. The center was established by N.C. State in 1949 to solve agricultural problems of all types. Faculty members from the university's horticultural department conduct the center's many research projects.

Research currently going on at the center includes crop breeding programs such as a tomato project that recently produced two new varieties of tomatoes, plant disease studies, experiments with possible new crops and an innovative potato studies program that may help feed hungry people in underdeveloped nations.

"What we do here is so varied that it's hard to keep track of it all," said Blackwell, who has headed the center since 1963. "Our researchers are busy here 12 months a year and some of these studies take years to conduct. But the results are well worth the effort."

Pointing to row upon row of healthy ripe tomatoes, Blackwell explained why it's important to constantly improve strains of vegetables.

"What people don't realize is that a vegetable such as a tomato must be a lot more than good tasting and nice to look at to be a viable crop. They must also be disease resistant, firm enough to withstand shipping and large enough to appeal to the buyer."

The two new varieties of tomatoes introduced by the center, Cherokee and Melton Pride, meet these standards.

"It's really unbelievable that in five years we have produced these two new varieties," Blackwell said. "It's just unheard of to accomplish something of this type in such a short time. It just proves what fine scientists we have here and the type of work they do."

One of the most innovative experiments the center is conducting involves ginseng, a mysterious plant that has been used for thousands of years as a medicinal herb. Researchers believe Western North Carolina farmers can successfully cultivate the wild plant as a crop.

The root of the five-leaved plant is prized by collectors and brings about $130 a pound. The plant grows wild in the North Carolina mountains and each fall, old time "sang" diggers head to secret sites all over the mountains to dig up the valuable roots.

Dr. Tom Konsler, an N.C. State horticultural specialist has about one-tenth of an acre of ginseng plant under a small shelter. The plants have been growing for about four years, which is considered to be the perfect age for harvesting.

"We started this particular experiment when we got so many questions about growing ginseng and found out we didn't have any answers," said Konsler, considered one of the world's foremost experts on ginseng culture. "We hope when we're through we'll know what type of soil is best for growing it, where the plants grow the best and how farmers can successfully cultivate it. I'm certain this can be a money-making crop for farmers in this area."

Blackwell believes that agricultural research like the type the center is conducting is the basis for economic growth in any country.

"Agriculture is the lifeblood of economic development in any nation in the world," he said. "And you can't have agricultural development without research until you free people from the drudgery of earning and gathering their food there can be no industrial development. Agriculture and the ability to grow food efficiently is the key to any country's success."

would, if successful, land the slam. Technically, there is a good reason why the ruffing finesse in diamonds should be taken. If it loses, declarer cuts his losses because he has two winners set up and so he won't go down more than one trick. As the cards lie, the ruffing finesse succeeds and the slam rolls home.

However, that is only the second best line, as was demonstrated by Zia Mahmood of Pakistan, who will represent his country in the 1981 World Team Championship in Port Chester, N.Y. later this month. He won the ace of spades and forced out the ace of trumps. He ruffed the spade continuation, drew the last trump and then took his extra chance—he cashed the ace and king of hearts.

Mahmood was "lucky" — the queen of hearts dropped. Now he didn't care who held the king of diamonds. With no heart loser to worry about, he could simply ruff his diamond losers on the table and claim his slam.

Bridge is really a simple game, isn't it?

We have frequently stressed that it is important to give yourself every chance in the play. Here's another hand from the Cino Del Duca event in Paris to highlight this point.

We are not sure that we approve of the way South bid his hand—a reverse should guarantee that the first suit is longer than the second. However, the only alternative—two no trump—was equally unappealing. Wedding At The Hospital TEMPLE, Texas (AP) — A 76-year-old hospital patient didn't have any trouble getting to the church on time for his grandson's wedding. The wedding came to him, on his birthday, even though the nurses didn't think much of the idea at first.

"We knew they were planning a birthday party because we had ordered the cake," said nurse Carol Burson. "Then we saw another cake and then another cake with a bride and groom on top. That's when they said they were having a wedding and we said, 'You are not!'"

But the nurses at Scott and White Hospital provided coffee and soft drinks for the 20 wedding guests, and even helped find a minister for 18-year-old Darrell O'Neal and his 15-year-old bride, Daintrei, Wednesday night.

The Rev. Alfred Martin was in the hospital lobby when Mrs. E.B. O'Neal, the groom's mother, came searching for a minister.

"We had asked the lady at the reception desk if she knew where we could find a preacher and she said, 'There's mine over there,'" said Mrs. O'Neal.

Ernest O'Neal, who turned 76 Wednesday, said his grandson "told me long ago he was going to get married on my birthday, but they thought they had talked him out of it until he showed up," he said.

It Takes Time To Ship A Hog

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — The prime breeding hog that Iowa Episcopalians gave to the Archbishop of Canterbury on his visit last May finally is being shipped to him.

It took the intervening four months to complete the complicated procedures to comply with government regulations for shipping the Berkshire gilt, a young female, to England, which has stringent animal import laws.

Archbishop Robert Runcie, primate of the Church of England and spiritual leader of 70 million Anglicans worldwide, raises prize Berkshires as an avocation at his home.

Iowa's Episcopal Bishop Walter C. Righter said the gift gilt was a token for a worldwide food chain, with resulting purebreds raised by Runcie to be given to Anglican bishops in other countries, where first litters would be given to other bishops and so on in a continuing chain.
