Heavy Voter Turnout In Egypt: Security Is Tight

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Officials reported a heavy turnout today in balloting on a national referendum to name Hosni Mubarak, the only candidate, to succeed Anwar Sadat as president.

No incidents were reported by police, who were ordered to shoot anyone "disturbing stability and security."

Meanwhile, more details of Sadat's assassination last Tuesday became available, and official sou?ces reported 18 army officers were transferred to civilian posts because of "fanatic religious tendencies."

Also, the Interior Ministry said security forces had arrested two of the five Moslem fundamentalists accused of instigating two days of violence in the southern city of Assyut.

Official results from the referendum, in which the 12 million voters were asked to mark "yes" or "no" next to Mubarak's picture on their ballots, could be announced as early as Wednesday.

Mubarak, the air force commander chosen by Sadat in 1975 as his vice president and future successor, was nominated by Sadat's National Democratic Party and approved by the National Assembly.

Officials at three polling booths in the Cairo suburbs of Helipolis and Abbessia said more than half of the eligible voters had cast ballots in the first three hours of voting.

"Everyone in our country will say 'yes' for our new president, Mubarak," Sada't widow Jihan told CBS News' correspondent in Cairo after she and Sadat's four children cast ballots. "He is our hope now ... This is what my husband wanted."

Mubarak voted at a polling station near his home in Helipolis and was accompanied by Sudanese President Mohamed Gaafar Nimeiri, who also voted. Officials said the Sudanese leader was permitted to vote because he considers the ties between Egypt and Sudan so close that he is practically an Egyptian citizen.

Sudan was one of the few Arab nation to maintain diplomatic relations with Cairo after Sadat signed the U.S.-sponsored 1979 Camp David peace accords with Israel.

Also voting for Mubarak was Bishop Gregorius, one of the Coptic Christian leaders chosen by Sadat to administer the church after Sadat banished Coptic Pope Shenouda III to a desert monastery during a crackdown last month on religious extremists and political opponents.

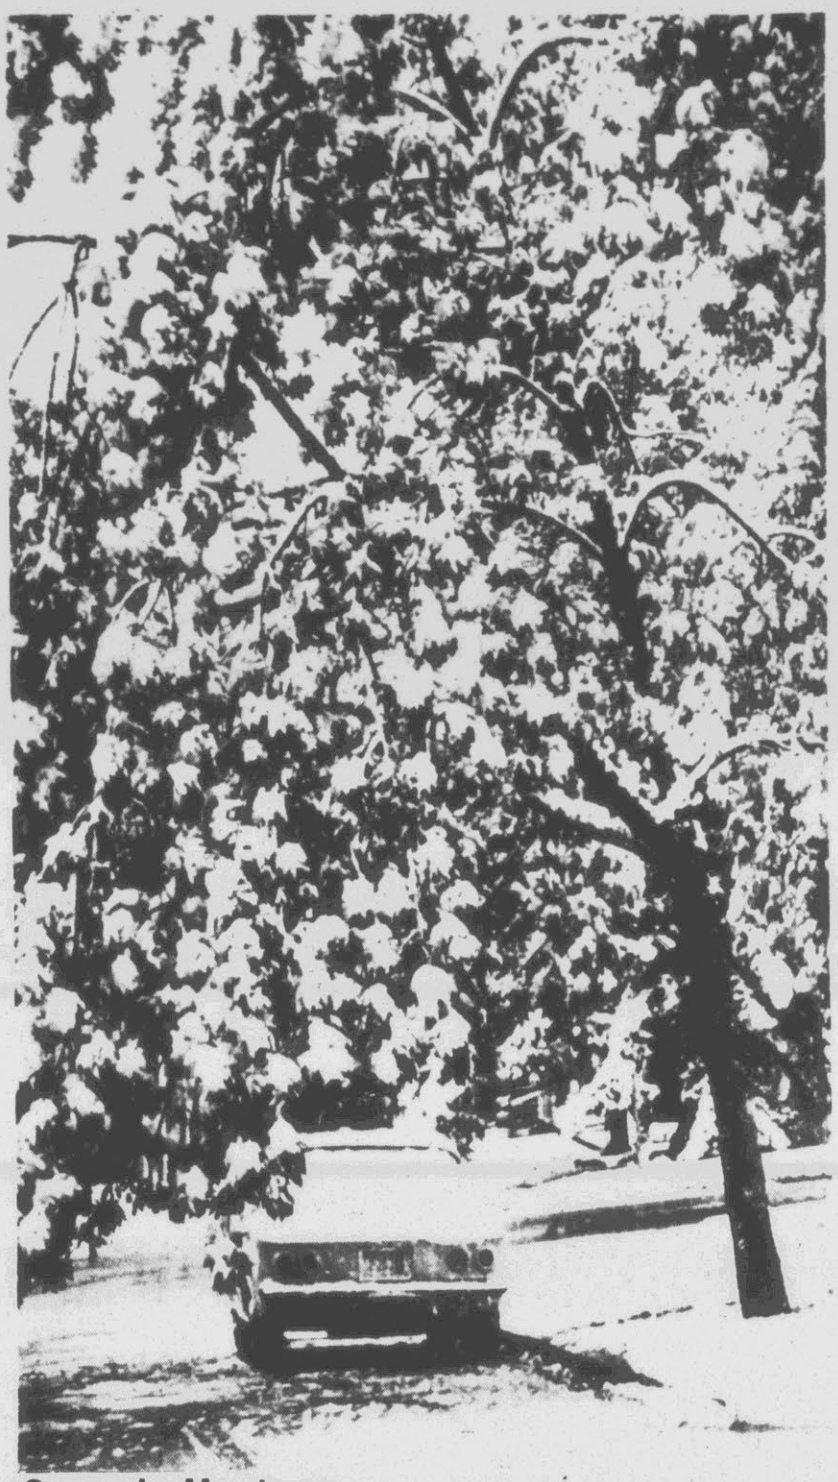
"Mubarak is the best choice." Gregorius said. "He has been with Sadat all the time, he knows our problems, and is prepared for the hard test."

The leader of the small pro-Soviet Progressive Unionist Party urged his followers to vote "no," but the leader of another small opposition party, the Socialist-Labor, supported Mubarak. He said he was ready to "give him a chance" to change Sadat's policies.

Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala said all four of Sadat's killers survived although previous government statements said one of them was killed. The four are reported to be members of a fanatic sect dedicated to killing Moslem leaders who do not live up to its standards of fundamentalism.

Abu Ghazala said in an interview with The Associated Press that the ringleader, 1st Lt. Khaled Ahmed Shawki el-Islambouly, had come out of a coma and "told the whole story."

He said he expected a court-martial in four or five days and death by hanging for el-Islambouly, and "I hope they will let me leave him hanging in the open air for a week or so."



Omen In Montana

MONTANA SNOW — The first major blizzard of the year moved east across Montana Monday causing problems for motorists and at least one death. Four inches of snow was reported in Great Falls (shown above) and the wet, sticky stuff weighted tree branches to the point where they were sometimes touching the hoods of passing cars. $428,164 For Streets

State Transportation Secretary W. R. Roberson Jr. announced that Greenville will receive $428,164 as its fiscal year 1982 allocation of state street aid or Powell Bill funds.

Roberson said Greenville's allocation is based on the city's estimated population of 36,969 and 131.38 milies of local streets.

The transportation official said Greenville is one of 461 municipalities in the state receiving checks totaling more than $31 million for local street construction and maintenance.

He said the $31,345,275 allocation is over $1 million less than the sum returned to North Carolina communities last year under the Powell Bill provisions. "This is a result of declining gas tax revenues over the last several years," Roberson observed.

He said the law requires that a sum equal to the amount produced by one cent tax of the state motor fuel tax during the preceding fiscal year be allocated to the active and qualifying muncipalities. Powell Bill funds are distributed on a legislative formula based 75 percent on population and 25 percent on non-state system local street mileage.

Allocations for other Pitt towns included: Ayden, $59,160; Bethel, $24,652; Falkland, $1,225; Farmville, $61,670; Fountain, $6,419; Grifton, $28,750; Grimesland, $5,936; Simpson, $4,910; and Winterville, $26,042.

Roberson said the largest single check of $3,711,526 from this year's funds went to Charlotte, while the smallest, $1,169, went to Caswell Beach.

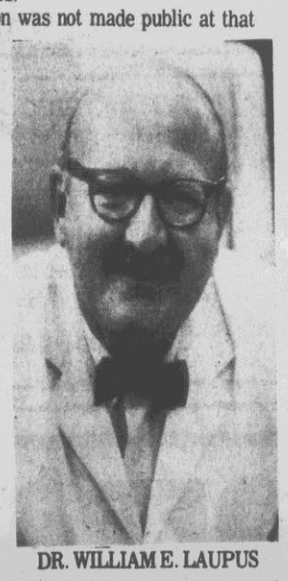
Vice Chancellor Post For Laupus Recommended

Dr. William E. Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University Medical School, has been recommended for the title of an ECU vice chancellor.

Laupus, who has been with the Medical School for six years, was proposed and endorsed by the ECU trustees and administration during an executive session of an August 24 meeting of the Board of Trustees.

Word of the recommendation was not made public at that time.

The proposal for the vice chancellor title, before becoming effective, must be approved by the UNC Board of Governors. To date, there has been no confirmation of action having been taken by the Board of Governors on the proposal.



DR. WILLIAM E. LAUPUS

If approved, the title will not affect the responsibilities assigned to Laupus nor would it affect his salary. Approval would mean he would be a vice chancellor in addition to being dean of the ECU Medical School.

Commenting on the proposal, Ashley B. Futrell, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustess said. "I would like to see Dr. Laupus get the vice chancellor title. He is a good man, one who plays things low-key. He has been a Godsend to the Medical School, coming at a time when we needed someone like him. When he came on the scene we'd been through a tremendous fight to get the Medical School, and Laupus, being quiet and hard working, fitted the role of what we needed perfectly. He's done a tremendous job, and I feel he should be a vice chancellor."

The question of whether Dr. Laupus had been appointed vice chancellor arose after his name was spotted on a recent football program in which he was listed as Dean of the School of Medicine and vice chancellor.

Nobel Prize In Economics Goes To Yale Prof

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Yale University Professor James Tobin was awarded the 1981 Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science today for his "creative and extensive" research into how families and businesses make financial decisions based on their debts and assets, the Central Bank of Sweden announced.

It was the 10th time in 13 years that the Swedish Academy of Sciences awarded the prize to an American. Tobin had for several years been mentioned among candidates for the prize set up and funded in 1968 by the Central Bank of Sweden.

The Academy of Sciences cited Tobin "for his analysis of financial markets and their relations to expenditure decisions, employment, production and prices."

The academy said the 63-year-old professor showed how the decisions of households and firms to hold different real and financial assets and simultaneously incur debts are governed by weighing risk and expected rate of return.

Tobin, a native of Champaign, Ill., was graduated from Harvard University in 1939 and received his doctorate there in 1947. He has been professor at Yale since 1955. He was a member of the Presidential Council of Economic Advisers in 1961-62 and was director of the Cowles Foundation for Economic Research during the years 1955-61 and 1964-65.

The academy said he was cited for only part of his achievements, "which cover a broad spectrum of economic research."

Tobin greatly contributed to the Portfolio Selection Theory, which explains how households and firms determine makeup of their assets, the academy said.

"Unlike many other theorists in the field, Tobin does not confine his analysis solely to money, but considers the entire range of assets and debts," the acadmemy said. "Tobin has aimed at providing a basis for understanding how subjects actually behave when they acquire different assets and incur debts.

Redevelopment Board Seeks Condemnations

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Redevelopment Commissioners, meeting last night, adopted a resolution recommending that the City Council pursue condemnation proceedings on six parcels needed for the realignment of Howell Street in the Southside area.

The resolution, it was pointed out, also recommended that five additional parcels slated for acquisition that are not needed for the Howell Street widening be changed to non-acquisition status and turned over to the city for code enforcement action.

The condemnation and code enforcement actions regarding the parcels, according to the resolution, will be initiated only after final offers are made to the owners.

Joe Laney, executive director, explained last night the commission and council had determined in January that the target date for completion of urban renewal activities, particularly in Southside, would be by Sept. 30. He said the commission is at a point where there are several parcels the agency has been unable to close through negotiations and it is felt that action must be taken by the city to wind up the activity.

The six parcels recommended for condemnation are located in the Howell Street section between S. Greenville School and the railroad.

Completion of action regarding the 11 Southside parcels will take care of the acquisition activity, he said, and leave only the disposition of remaining parcels in the Central Business District and Southside area. Disposal of the parcels will probably take some time due to high interest rates that discourage property development.

David Gordon, commission chairman, mentioned last week's meeting involving city officials and commission representatives where the abolishment of the agency was discussed. Gordon said that Jan. 11, 1982 was set as the date for abolishment.

Laney, pointing out that he was quoted following the Oct. 6 meeting as saying he reported that the Redevelopment staff had been transferred to the Housing Authority, said last night that a point of clarification was needed. Laney said that, in fact, no Redevelopment personnel were transferred to the Authority.

He said the commission had been planning to phase out for several years and during the past three to four years the commission staff was reduced through normal attrition. Two remaining staff members, Faye Brewington and Dorothy Daniels, took jobs with the city, he said.

Ben Shivar, the city's Community Development director, said today the overall goal had been to assure that no one would lose his or her job as a result of the phase out. Shivar, saying the hiring of Mrs. Brewington and Mrs. Daniels took place just prior to Oct. 1, said both applied for the city jobs and due to their experience, they were the best qualified for the positions.

Mrs. Brewington will serve as acquisition/relocation officer, heading up real estate acquisition and the displacement of families in South Evans. Mrs. Daniels will be a code enforcement technician and handle clerical work under the rehabilitation program and assist inspectors in the field, Shivar said.

Sen. East Says AWACS Sale In U.S. Interest

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Sen. John East, R-N.C., said today "his inclination at this point is to support" President Reagan's proposal to sell AWACS surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia, calling the plan one that would be in the best interests of the United States and its Mideast allies, including Israel.

"We need to wake up and acknowledge the threat of the Soviet Union and its proxies (in the Middle East)," the Greenville Republican said at a news conference.

East labeled Libyan strongman Muammor Khadafy as such a threat. "There is no doubt that Khadafy is a proxy of the Soviet Union," he said.

East, who said he has been invited to a private session with Reagan Wednesday morning to discuss the AWACS package, said he agreed with the administration that the United States "ought to have a broad sphere of influence in the Middle East."

"It has become reasonably clear to me ... that this AWACS sale is vital to the president's plan," he said.

East scheduled the news conference primarily to discuss the troubled tobacco price support plan, which faces another crisis in the coming days when the proposed 1981 farm bill goes before the House. He also discussed other areas, including the abortion dispute — which he has intensified through his Senate subcommittee hearings — and budgetary cutbacks.

In response to a question, East indicated that communication from his constituents has included complaints, but said much of it urged further consideration rather than reinstatment of deleted items.

But, he said, "The general public, we find, is generally supportive of the goal in the Congress to get the (federal) budget under control."

The senator also observed that, "It's a more difficult time to serve in Congress than a few years ago," when social programs were being implemented that offered much to many.

"Now we are in a period of retrenchment," the freshman senator said. "It's always easier to say 'yes' than 'no.'"

East declined to predict how the farm bill and, especially, the tobacco program, will fare in the House. Nor would he predict what course the Senate would take if the farm bill ends up in a conference committee because of changes approved by the House.

He said Democrats and Republicans from the tobacco-interest states have been contacting other members of their respective parties trying to line up support among congressmen for the farm package.

Noting that the tobacco program, although altered, survived a "wrecker ball" amendment in the Senate that would have deleted its current structure, East said "unity" among all who support the program is a necessity to maintain it.

He noted that agriculture in general has

New Stamps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Buy now and avoid the holiday rush, says the U.S. Postal Service, which is putting 5.3 billion 20-cent stamps on sale today.

The two-cent increase in current first-class postal rates doesn't take effect until Nov. 1, but the Postal Service asked consumers Monday to go ahead and buy the new stamps now to avoid long lines next month.

Instead of being designated as 20-cent stamps, the new ones bear the letter "C." This is the third time the Postal Service has issued a stamp without a denomination because they were printed before it was known how much rates would increase.

The brown-and-white stamps specify they are only for domestic mail. Foreign postal agencies have complained about mail from the United States with stamps that don't have prices marked.

A commemorative stamp without a denomination printed on it also is being issued. The stamp honoring James Hoban, an Irish immigrant who designed the White House, will go on sale Wednesday, also for 20 cents.

Thatcher Plans Retain Policies

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher faced the opening of her Conservative Party's annual conference today apparently determined to maintain her tight money policies despite mounting criticism inside and outside the party.

Mrs. Thatcher, celebrating her 56th birthday today, appeared in confident mood when she arrived in this northwest seaside resort amid tight security following Saturday's fatal bomb blast in London by the Irish Republican Army.

"All is well, all is very well," she told reporters.

"We have to hang on to the course we are following," her treasury chief, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe, said in a TV interview Sunday.

An opinion poll in this morning's Daily Mail reported that only 44 percent of 574 Conservative voters questioned nationwide want Mrs. Thatcher to continue as party leader and prime minister. But the No. 2 choice, former Prime Minister Edward Heath, one of her chief critics whom she ousted as party leader in 1975, was favored by only 24 percent.

Other recent polls have put public support for the Conservatives at 30 percent, 8 percentage points below the Laborites. The Times of London said that was less than the support for any government since World War II, except for a brief period in 1968 after a Labor government devalued the pound.

The opinion polls show the slump in the Conservatives' fortunes is due mainly to unemployment, which totals 2.99 million, or one in every eight British workers.

It is Britain's highest jobless rate since the 1930s depression, and it is blamed on Mrs. Thatcher's rigorous adherence to her policy of reduced money supply, reduced public spending and high interest rates to curb the inflation rate, now at 11.5 percent.

Four Conservative members of the House of Commons warned in a letter published in The Times this morning that Mrs. Thatcher's policies could ensure a Labor victory at the next election. They demanded policies which would be "benevolent and not hostile" to private industry.

Another Conservative member of Commons, David Knox, urged Mrs. Thatcher to revert to a "more traditional" Conservative policy of higher spending and expansionism.

But Britain's first woman prime minister, in an interview with a woman's magazine published today, compared managing the country to running a family and said: "You've got to do the things you believe to be right and try and explain them.

Department Gives Awards

The Cooperative Education Department of Pitt Community College held an awards presentation on the campus Wednesday, highlighted by recognition of the highest student participation during 1980-81.

Four departments and their representatives received gifts for being top achievers. They were: Mildred McGrath, electronic data processing; Barbara Wilson, business education; Elaine Denton, business administration; JoAnn Leith, business education, and Edward Martin, architectural drafting.

Dr. Lionel D. Kendrick, director of the East Carolina University Regional Training Program was the speaker and used as his topic "Mastering Motivation."

Dr. Kendrick explained to the group how people can motivate others in the work community, saying, "Some people can be motivated more than others, so we must recognize their capability of being motivated at the onset.

"We, as educators," he continued, "can make an impact on our students by positive motivation."

Dr. Kendrick advised that thoughts and actions can ignite a spark in dealing with other people. "Think positive and there will be no room for the negative," he explained.

Terry Shank, director of the co-op program, served as moderator for the meeting.

Sand Sold To Arabian Sheik

CHARDON, Ohio (AP) — A sand-and-gravel company in this northeast Ohio city is preparing nine tons of Ohio sand for shipment to — of all places — Saudi Arabia.

Workers at Walter C. Best Inc., which gets sand from a quarry on its property, plan to load 100-pound bags of specialty sand Wednesday onto a truck bound for Baltimore.

From there, it will be shipped to the Saudi Arabian city of Jidda for eventual use in a sheik's swimming pool filter.

In announcing the shipment, the company quipped Monday that sending the sand will save the sheik from "a lot of fussing around in the desert."

"I was just amazed," said Wayne C. Johnson, vice president of marketing for Best. "It's wild to ship sand all the way across the world to the desert."

The pool filter was ordered through another Chardon firm, Structural Fibers Inc., according to Gerald C. Hornick, that company's vice president.

Hordnick said Monday night that he was not sure of the identity of the sheik who ordered the sand because it came through a distributor in Jidda.

"We have had orders from many parts of the world," Hornick said. "What makes this unique was that the order also included the sand."

He said pool-filter customers normally use a local source of sand, and that some desert sand may be unfit for water filtration.

Johnson said the nine tons of sand, about a three-year supply, is not much compared with the company's annual shipments of a half-million tons of sand a year, much of it to foundries or golf courses.

"At $50 a ton, the sand is pretty cheap," he said. But the shipment to Saudi Arabia, the longest the firm has ever had, will add considerably to the cost.

Dear Abby

Gum Addict Must Go Cold Turkey To Quit

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I am writing about an unusual problem I acquired about six years ago. I am a chain gum-chewer. I chew about 15 to 20 packs of gum every day (after I get off work, that is). I usually chew one piece about five minutes, then I will put another piece in my mouth. I became addicted to chewing gum when I was 17 and trying to lose weight. I chewed gum instead of eating, which was a very unhealthy thing to do. Now that I am slim I can't break the habit of chewing gum. When I try to quit I get dizzy, sick, weak, and my teeth get sore!

I must quit chewing gum because the guy I'm in love with says it will give me diabetes. Is that true? I really hate the habit. It's dirtier than smoking, it's also more expensive, and it's embarrassing for a woman my age to go into a store and buy $3 worth of gum. The other day I put $4 in dimes into a gumball machine and some onlookers stared at me like I was crazy. Also, disposing of chewed gum is gross!

Can you help me, Abby? Sign me...

THE SIOUX CITY CHEW-CHEW GIRL

DEAR CHEW-CHEW: First, diabetes is not caused by eating too many sweets. (Get "The Diabetic's Book — All Your Questions Answered" by Biermann and Toohey.)

You are wise to recognize your gum-chewing habit as an "addiction" because that's exactly what it is.

Try to quit cold turkey — it's by far the best method. If that fails, find a therapist who specializes in behavior modification.

DEAR ABBY: I've heard of students having crushes on their teachers, but have you ever heard of a teacher having a crush on a student?

There's this 15-year-old girl in one of my classes who is a rare beauty. I can't keep my eyes off her. I wonder if other teachers have problems like this. What's to be done? I'm twice her age, and my class is her favorite class. I don't believe in anonymous letters so I will sign my name, but please don't use it.

GOT A CRUSH

DEAR GOT: Teachers have crushes on students for the same reason students have crushes on teachers: immaturity. What's to be done? Admire her from afar, and keep your eyes, your thoughts (and everything else) off her. Small wonder your class is her "favorite." You've telegraphed your feelings to her, and she got the message.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Does my husband have a problem? He has 83 (I counted them) shirts in his closet and claims he needs them all. He has several sets of "twin" shirts, and several that would pass for triplets.

I took an inventory yesterday, and he has 44 shirts with short sleeves, 21 with long sleeves (lightweight), 15 flannel and three wool! There is no room in the closet for his pants, and I dare not give (or throw) away even one shirt. Any ideas on what to do?

JEAN IN ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR JEAN: Why do anything? Let him live like the pack rat that he is, and when he's sufficiently crowded or inconvenienced, he'll remedy the situation.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Sometimes in the morning when I look in the mirror and discover the souffle of my youth has fallen, I think about a face lift.

When this happens I say, "Mirror, mirror, on the wall, who is the most cowardly of all?" and the mirror answers, "You are, chicken neck!"

Face lifts are not a matter of vanity anymore. They're simply a matter of something that has bothered some individuals about themselves for a long time . . . and very likely something that no one else has ever noticed about them.

The American Nasal and Facial Surgery Institute published a rundown recently on the "parts" of celebrities that were requested the most. They may surprise you.

I would have been willing to bet that when someone looked at Dolly Parton, it would take them weeks to get to her nose. Yet, that is the nose most sought after by those wanting theirs changed.

And how about this? For ears, they wanted replicas of those worn by Bo Derek. There are five million Americans walking the streets today who do not know Bo Derek has ears.

Let's talk philtrum. Never been crazy about yours? Never knew where you left it? It's that area between the lower part of the nose and the lips. And according to the face arrangers, Lena Horne and Alexander Haig have the bestlooking philtrums around

I have to confess, I haven't thought about spare parts since high school when we used to put together a composite of the most desirable characteristics for the school yearbook.

Eyes: Ginger Easy.
Mouth: Iris Rosebud.
Teeth: Maria Capps.
Hair: Wella Cascade.
Nose: Suzie Pert.
Sense of Humor: Erma you-know-who.

I saw all of those people a few years ago at the class reunion and you wanta know something? Ginger's eyes looked empty and bored. The sparkle was gone. Iris' mouth never stopped and she had language like a sewer. Maria's teeth had shifted; Wella'a hair was grey; Suzie's nose was in-everybody's business.

Erma's you-know-what was the only thing that saved her. It was still intact.

YOUTH AND ALCOHOL

Alcohol abuse is still a big problem for today's young people says Dr. Leo Hawkins, extension human development specialist at N. C. State University.

"A recent study at the Research Triangle Institute shows that more than 5 0 percent of 10-12th graders are users of alcohol, 30 percent are misusers and 17-18 percent are abstainers," Dr. Hawkins says.

A misuser was classified as someone who became drunk at least six times in the past year or suffered negative consequences after drinking at least twice in the past year.

Keep Up Maintenance

At G.R. Whitfield School there is a problem. A sewage drain field is located some 12 yards from a classroom building. A septic system dumps two times a day.

As that occurs the gas odor drifts into the nearby classrooms and "hangs there," Principal Raymond Reddrick says.

The drain system could be relocated but the cost will be $35,000.

If a permit for the new drain field cannot be obtained, the cost of a different system could be $70,000.

Certainly a foul odor is not conductive to good study habits and everyone would be in favor of correcting the situation as best as possible.

The problem will be allotting the funds for this particular project in priority with all the other school capital improvement and maintenance needs.

In these times of budget and tax cutting, the temptation is to fund ongoing expenses and hope for better times to handle major construction and improvements.

Both the city and county schools have property that is valued at millions of dollars, however. It is only makes sense to provide necessary funds to keep that property in good condition so we can get optimum use of it.

Planning Document Valuable

A long range planning document was adopted by the Greenville City Council last week.

The council and city officials exhibited pride in the document and they have reason to.

The document will provide a guide to growth of Greenville and its extra-territorial area for many years in the future. It is not a carved-in-stone thing. Rather it is a living document which will be constantly revised to provide for future needs of the city.

Many hours of work have gone into the project by city workers and citizens. It can be extremely helpful in charting the city's future and it should be consulted often.

PLO Story At A Glance

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - On January 17, 1964, Arab heads of state met in Cairo and agreed to set up a Palestine Liberation Organization for the purpose of "organizing the Palestinian people to enable them to fulfill their role in liberating their homeland and determining their destiny."

Today the PLO is an umbrella organization for eight separate guerrilla factions. Here is a brief look at each of them:

FATAH — the largest and most moderate group, founded in 1959 by Yasser Arafat and seven other Palestinians at a secret meeting in Kuwait. The name is a reverse acronym of Harakat al-Tahrir al-Watani al-Filastini, Arabic for Palestinian National Liberation Movement.

Financed by Saudi Arabia, Libya and Kuwait, Fatah reportedly controls about three-fifths of the 301 seats in the Palestine National Council, has 10 of the 15 members on the policy-making executive committee, controls 90 percent of the posts in the political department and contributes about 70 percent of the military strength.

It considers itself a purely nationalist movement, and welcomes Marxists, Moslem fundamentalists and Western-oriented liberals.

Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) — founded by George Habash in 1967, it hit the headlines with a series of airplane hijackings in 1968-73. The hijackers included Leila Khaled, who became the PLO's best known woman guerrilla, but today she is rarely seen in public. rances at international women's conferences. Habash, a Greek Orthodox medical graduate of the American University of Beirut, is believed to be partially incapacitated because of a stroke in 1980. His deputies are Abu Ali Mustafa and Bassam Abu Sharif. The PFLP is bankrolled by Libya and other radical Arab states.

Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command (PFLP-GC) — split with the PFLP in early 1968 because of the PFLP's increasingly Marxist slant. The PFLP-GC, funded by Libya, is headed by a former captain in the Syrian Army, Ahmed Jebril.

Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine (DFLP) — split from the PFLP in 1969. It takes the most pro-Moscow line of the eight factions and receives money from Libya and the Soviet Union. Its leader is Nayef Hawatmeh, the son of a Greek Catholic family.

Palestine Popular Struggle Front — split from the PFLP in 1968, founded by Bahjat Abu Gharbiyah, a former member of the Arab Socialist Baath Party. Funded by Libya, its current leader is Samir Ghoshi.

Palestine Liberation Front (PFL) — split from the PFLP-GC in 1976. Headed by Abul Abbas and funded by Iraq, it is considered the weakest but most violent of the factions.

Arab Liberation Front (ALF) — founded in 1969 by Baathists based in Iraqi and financed by Iraq's Baathist government. Itsleader is Abdul Rahim Mohammed.

Saiqa — founded in 1967, it is backed by Syria. Its headquarters were transferred from Damascus to Beirut in 1981 and Salaheddin al-Maani is its leader.

Today In History

By The Associated Press

Today is Tuesday, Oct. 13, the 286th day of 1981. There are 79 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On October 13th, 1978, Roman Catholic cardinals went into a conclave to elect a successor to Pope John Paul I, who died after a 34-day reign.

Also On this date:

—In 1889, in South Africa, the Boers rebeled against the British.

—In 1937, Germany guaranteed the inviolability of Belgium.

—In 1967, Chinese Communists stepped up a campaign of terrorism in Hong Kong.

And in 1969, the Soviet Union sent a third spacecraft into orbit in as many days. There were seven Soviet Cosmonauts in space.

Ten years ago: Enemy forces in South Vietnam slipped into an allied base near Saigon and destroyed five helicopters.

Five years ago: A United Nations study questioned the long-held theory that the Earth could not sustain advancing economic growth.

One year ago: The Nobel Peace Prize was awarded to Argentine human rights advocate Adolfo Perez Esquivel, who was cited for having "shown light in the darkness" of Argentine military rule.

Today's birthdays: Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain is 56. San Francisco Giants pitcher Randy Moffitt, is 33.

Cause To Worry

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — For a couple of years it has looked as though North Carolina had reversed the alarming trend downward in annual scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

That examination is taken each year by high school students planning to enter college, and is widely used as a guage of the general ability level of student bodies at various collegs and universities. Educators and concerned citizens have kept a careful watch on the test scores as a measure of how well the schools are doing the job of preparing for higher education.

In the mid-70s there was concern both in North Carolina and across the nation as the test scores protrayed an increasingly less well educated and competent crop of young people.

The test itself is divided into two catagories: one verbal and one mathematics. A perfect score is 800 in each group for a total score possible of 1,600.

In 1978 and 1979 there was general improvement on the test score on the test scores in North Carolina, holding the promise that perhaps the slide was stopping.

Still Low

Latest compilations of test scores recorded in the fall of 1980 by this year's college freshmen give reason to worry that the heralded academic improvement among North Carolina students is not quite as strong as some had hoped.

Ten of the colleges in the 16-campus state university system reported a decline in test scores again this past time around. The previous year, ten of the colleges had reported improvement over the scores from 1978.

A low point came in the mid-70s, and almost all the schools have since improved somewhat. But not one of the state's colleges or universities can report that this year's freshmen scored as high as the students did back in the 60s and early 70s.

The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill continues to lead the scholastic sweepstakes with an average score of 1,064. Nearly 90 percent of the Chapel Hill freshmen graduated in the top 20 percent of their high school classes. N.C. State University is the only other campus where scores top 1,000. Students there had scores averaging 1,004. UNC-Greensboro students scored 949; Charlotte scored 920; and the School of the Arts scored 912. Lowest is Elizabeth City State University at 560; then Fayetteville at 587; then Central at 624; Winston-Salem at 643; A & T scoring 667; Pembroke at 784; Western Carolina at 821; Wilmington at 848; East Carolina at 874; Appalachian at 894; and Asheville at 896.

Student scores showed improvement at Applachian, East Carolina, Chapel Hill, Charlotte, Western Carolina and Winston-Salem.

Private

Freshmen test scores at private colleges and universities across North Carolina show a similar distribution and range except that three private schools far outstrip any of the public schools. Duke University, the strongest in test results, showed an average of 1,252. At Davidson the average is 1,215; and at Wake Forest the average is 1,111.

At Duke, 71 percent of the freshmen were in the top fifth of their graduating class. At Davidson, that category is 81 percent; and at Wake Forest it is 77 percent.

As it was in the public sector, test scores at the predominately black private colleges fell at the bottom of the list, with Barber-Scotia, Johnson C. Smith, Shaw, and Bennett falling below 600.

Vintage Mountain Year

SCRABBLE, Va. — The Professional Wine Tasters of October concluded their annual meeting here a few days ago, and emerged with a unanimous opinion. We have a vintage year in the mountains. This autumn of '81 will rank with the finest autumns ever produced.

The winemaker's art provides a useful metaphor. Some of our autumns are thin, and some are pale and dusty-good enough for the ordinary table, but nothing to put out for company. This year the hillsides are magnificent. We have a season of rich and robust color, crisp and sparkling, an autumn for sipping, an autumn for toasting.

These are the days we long for, all the way from New England to North Carolina. Ours are comfortable mountains. Meaning no offense to the Sierras and the Rockies, which have an awesome majesty all their own, the Adirondacks and Catskills, the Blue Ridge and the Great

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Smokies are easier to live with. There is nothing awesome about them.

Such mountains do not brood or overpower. In autumn they are mountains to embrace.

The leaves began turning a little earlier than usual this year. By the end of September the dogwoods had gone to oxblood and cordovan, their leaves as curled as a sultan's slippers. The gums went next, mottled in black and red. Along our roadsides, the sumac sent up flames of scarlet fire. Now the maples are going, as crimson as pigment squeezed straight from the artist's tube.

It is a familiar image, but an apt one: Our hills are Persian carpets, tapestries made by master weavers. The old women of Tabriz, tying one knot at a time, could not contrive more brilliant rugs — threads of gold willow on a ground of deep green pines. This year the poplars are butter yellow, the oaks as brown as old leather. Some of the wildflowers, nipped by frost, are Bible black. The rug merchant has tumbled his wares as far as the eye can see.

With the sights of autumn come the sounds and scents of autumn. The corn that was green a month ago is brown and brittle now. Like prehistoric beasts, the giant harvesters growl and snuffle through the fields, digestingstalks, disgorging silage. Now and then we hear the far-off pop and bam of guns; it is dove-hunting time in our hills. The night hunters have been out, casting their lean and eager hounds in search of 'coon and possum. The hounds revel in their freedom like so many trumpet players practicing their scales.

We had the first open fire of the season in our kitchen on October 3, and marveled again at the pleasure of its cheerful warmth. Something in the smell of woodsmoke stirs the memory. The flames hypnotize, linking eons past to kitchens present, oak and acorn, tree to firewood. Whence came the first seed of the hickory log? What comes after the embers fade to ashes?

The somnolence of summer is past us now. Nothing remains of the vegetable garden save a few bedraggled tomato plants, their sleeves in tatters and their blossoms gone. Now we are raking leaves, grinding them for mulch. There are still ap-

Victims Of Fraud

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

When the graduates of nursing programs in the same colleges consistently trail the pack in licensing board examinations, then close examination is demanded to determine the reason.

At N.C. A&T State University, 33.3 percent of the nursing school graduates passed the state board exam. Records at N.C. Central and Winston-Salem State were 56.5 and 63.6 percent respectively.

All three are predominantly black institutions.

Four institutions had 100 percent success records. At Wayne Community College, 89 percent passed licensing board exams.

It was interesting — and important — to note especially the success record of black students in the WCC program.

While WCC graduates have consistently enjoyed a high rate of success, its black graduates since 1976 have had a 100 percent record in passing licensing board requirements.

If the problem at some institutions rests with the students, then those schools are doing a poor job of screening candidates.

If those entering the nursing programs in the various schools all meet the same standards at the outset, then the problem obviously rests within the programs offered in some of the institutions.

It is not fair to students to successfully complete a course of study in an institution and then have only one out of three licensed to put their learning to practical and profitable use.

The heads of the institutions where the failure rate is high have a responsbility to look closely at their programs. They should compare the quality of their instructors to the quality of those in other institutions. They should study teaching techniques.

In short, they must determine wherein their programs are failing the students.

The state of North Carolina cannot sit idly by and permit a continuation of what amounts to moral fraud being perpetrated on students giving years of their lives and paying their money only to be short-changed on their education.

Strength For Today

BE PREPARED

Human achievements, for better or for worse, appear to come in bunches. Some ages are characterized primarily by artistic, literary, scientific, or religious advances. World history also reveals that there have been ages marked by devastating wars which swept hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of people from the earth.

Everyone would admit that the 18th century was one of revolution. First the Americans won their independence, then the people of France destroyed the monarchy and spread the revolutionary spirit throughout Europe.

There is a way in which we appear now to be in another age of revolution. War has taken a greater toll since 1900 than ever before in history. We may well expect that the next fifty years will bring some of the most stupendous changes the human race has ever passed through. This is a time of danger, of decision, of desperate resolution. Danger signals are on every horizon. So let us be prepared. — Elisha Douglass

Securities Industry Changing

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Any time four major firms from a single industry are snapped up in mergers within a few months, it's safe to conclude that big changes are afoot in that business.

That's exactly what has happened since last spring in the securities industry.

The nation's largest retailer, the largest insurance company, the biggest credit-card company and a giant international commodities firm all have gone to Wall Street wooing brokerage firms. And each has come away with what it considers a prize catch.

Prudential Insurance paid $385 million for Bache Group, American Express about $1 billion for Shearson Loeb Rhoades, Phibro about $500 million for Salomon Brothers. And last week Sears Roebuck struck a $607 million deal for Dean Witter Reynolds.

Sears' announcement came only three days after it reached agreement to buy a large real estate and mortgage broker, Coldwell Banker, for about $175 million.

The recent barrage of deals has been heralded as the opening salvo in a revolution in the financial-services business — potentially opening the way to an era of money supermarkets catering to just about every conceivable financial need.

Bankers, who have been effectively kept out of the action until now by laws that restrict their operations, may soon charge into the fray themselves. Donald Regan, the longtime Wall Street executive who is now Treasury secretary, has called for a sweeping review of those laws.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, introduced a bill a few days ago to change or remove some of the existing regulations covering banks and savings institutions.

It would, for example, let savings institutions move into banks' territory to make commercial loans and at the same time permit banks to invade brokers' turf to underwrite municipal revenue bonds.

At the moment, the various, segmented parts of the financial-services business are in sharply contrasting states of health. Savings and loans are suffering from an interest-rate squeeze, while brokers are coming off their best year ever in 1980.

So it's no surprise that brokerage firms are the prime target for acquisitions right now. Some observers, in fact, are at least casually wondering if the buyers aren't committing a classic Wall Street error — buying at the top.

Bache stock, bought for $32 a share, traded as low as $8 a year and a half ago. Dean Witter, to be acquired for $50 a share in cash and stock, sold in the open market for $8.37 in early 1980.

The brokerage business is notoriously cyclical. When things go well, they tend to go very, very well. When times are bad, they can be terrible.

Perrin Long, a securities-industry analyst at the firm of Lipper Analytical Services, notes that 1981 is not shaping up as quite as good a year for brokers as last year was, and that 1982 is a big question mark in many minds.

Still, some observers believe the stocks-and-bonds business may have a much brighter long-term future than its ups and downs of the past decade might suggest.

The Value Line Investment Survey, an investment advisory service, points out that brokers stand to benefit in spades from the many provisions in this summer's tax bill aimed at stimulating investment.

Edward Telling, Sears' chairman, apparently shares that view. "I'm hopeful that the government's program is going to work, and if it does people are goir g to be in a mood to save and invest," he said.

Such comments underscore the point that, like so many other things these days, the outcome of the battle to buy up Wall Street will depend heavily on the success or failure of Reaganomics.

FOCUS

Airborne Radar

The AWACS airplanes, whose proposed sale to the Saudis has aroused such furor, are strategically important because they contain the most sophisticated radar equipment ever devised. "Radar" stands for *ra*dio *d*etection *a*nd *r*anging. A transmitter sends out radio waves which bounce back if they hit a solid object. Radar was first developed as a military weapon during World War II. The first airborne radar enabled British warplanes to cripple the German U-boat fleet and permitted night bombing of German cities. Radar innovations helped tip the balance in winning World War II. Part of the present debate is that AWACS may be an important factor in determining the Middle East balance of power.

Cannot Tell If Planes Friend Or Foe

By CARL HARTMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In "one of the most serious operation problems in air defense," U.S. and NATO pilots sometimes can't tell if other warplanes are friend or foe, the General Accounting Office says.

The same identification problem also exists on land and sea, the GAO said in a seven-page summary of a classified report.

Tank officers are concerned about distinguishing a friendly vehicle from an enemy in the dust and smoke of battle. Ship captains in combat usually face an enemy concealed by night, fog, distance or all three.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, urged Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger to keep a close watch on efforts by NATO to get equipment that would make the air defense systems of all member countries "interoperable."

There is no agreement yet among the 14 air forces on a coordinated system, but Pentagon officials say they hope the necessary equipment to establish one can be in use by the late 1980s. The 15th NATO member, Iceland, has no armed forces.

Several different systems now are being used by the air forces of alliance members. "Therefore," the GAO said, "all friendly planes cannot be interrogated."

In its summary, dated Sept. 18, the GAO called the identification problem "one of the most serious and long-standing operational problems in air defense."

The GAO said the Pentagon agreed with "the general thrust and content" of the report and suggested only technical changes.

As the identification system now works, a pilot who sees another plane on radar will send out a special signal to determine if it is from a friendly nation. If the right reply is sent back, a tail will appear on the blip that represents the other plane on the pilot's radar screen.

But a wrong answer or no reply does not necessarily mean that the plane is an enemy aircraft. The plane could belong to a neutral country; its equipment may not be operating; the pilot may have made a mistake in the code; or the plane could be on incompatible equipment.

The GAO said the alliance is making introduction of a new NATO-wide identification system a high priority. "Nevertheless," it added, "current systems are expected to be the mainstay of cooperative capability into the 1990s."

The unclassified summary did not identify the countries that can recognize each other's planes. The air forces of the United States, West Germany, the Netherlands and Canada use an identification system called the Mark 12. Great Britain does not.

The Soviet Union, by comparison, makes certain that all of its allies use the same equipment.

The GAO also found that the Pentagon has not made an overall assessment of the air threat from the Soviets and the alliance's ability to respond. Each U.S. service has done its own studies, however.

The agency urged Weinberger to ensure that enough is spent on air defenses to meet both immediate and future needs. Specifically, it asks him to:

—Make a coordinated, long range plane for air defense.

—Assess the overall air threat to Central Europe from the east.

—Put more emphasis on combining forces in air defense training.

—Work toward a revised airspace control plan and "actively pursue needed revisions with our NATO allies, if appropriate"

—Evaluate the cost-effectiveness of all possible weapons systems.

—Consider keeping F-4 aircraft in Europe because they can fire medium-range missiles and look into the possibility of speeding up deployment of F-15s and F-16s to Europe.

Nixon Mum In AWACs Talks

JIDDA, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Former President Nixon apparently discussed the proposed sale of U.S. AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia with the oil kingdom's rulers, but his spokesman gave no indication that he got any concessions that might sell the deal to the U.S. Senate.

Asked whether Nixon discussed the controversial deal during his meetings with King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd Saturday and Sunday, spokesman Nicholas Rue replied, "Well, they didn't talk about Piper Cubs."

But he refused to give any details, saying: "It is the president's custom not to comment on his talks during foreign trips before his return home."

Nixon recently issued a statement supporting the AWACS sale and criticizing Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Israeli supporters in Washington for trying to block it.

Nixon completed a three-day visit to Saudi Arabia today and preapred to leave for Jordan. The Qatar news agency, quoting "well-informed Jordanian sources," said he would deliver a message to King Hussein from President Reagan. But the White House press office said, "To our knowledge, it is a private visit. We know nothing of the report from Qatar."

Nixon flew to Saudi Arabia on what has been called a private visit after attending the funeral of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in Cairo. After a one-day stop in Jordan, he is expected to visit Tunisia and Morocco en route back to the United States.

ples to be picked, cider to be pressed. Our roadside stands have sprung to life; pyramids of pumpkins, stacked like gilded cannon balls, await conversion into pies and jack-o'-lanterns. Brisk winds of autumn keep the pennant-trees in motion. The butterflies of fall are fluttering too; we see the cutting garden through the leaded stained-glass window of a monarch's wing.

So we sip this burgundy fall, when the cold nights are crisp as apples and the afternoons are lit by shafts of leaf-blown light. Pick your metaphor — the glass of wine, the palette of the artist, the masterwork of the weaver's art. In the exhilaration of a vintage fall, the summer doldrums disappear. Winter will come, we know, but not until we have savored these days of pure delight.

Magic Show Is Presented

The children in the Pediatrics unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital attended a magic show given by Malcolm Beard last Wednesday.

Beard gave the show free of charge at the request of Benita Harrison, a practicum student from East Carolina University. His show was the main event of her project for a therapeutic recreation class.

Parents and staff, as well as children, attended. Beard, originally from LaGrange, has been performing magic since 1962 and is a member of the International Brotherhood of Magicians. He is now working on a program that promotes drug and poison safety for young children.

Statues Are Given A Needed Cleanup

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt grabbed a brush Monday and helped as members of the Junior Women's Club tried to improve the public image of some of North Carolina's long-standing heroes.

Since the 1890s, when many of the statues around the state Capitol were installed, the heroes have turned from a shiny bronze to a sickly green.

After the women and Hunt had scrubbed the statues, they were just as green as ever, thanks to modern-day chemical pollutants.

Lou Mitchell, former club member and current advisor, said the club is competing for a $10,000 national community improvement grant from the Sears Foundation to preserve the statues.

"It's almost like they are melting," she said, adding that pollution buildup and natural weathering are obliterating facial wrinkles, moustache hairs and clothing folds on the statues.

Curtis E. Peterson, curator of exhibits for the state Museum of History, said the statues are hollow and wear from the inside as well as the outside. One horse's head, he said, is full of water.

In general, he added, the statues are in good shape and can be restored.

"They probably haven't been subjected to these conditions (chemical pollutants) for more than 25 years," he said. "Roman and Greek bronze lasted a millenium,"

Mrs. Mitchell said restoration, including blasting the statues with glass pellets and coating them with polyurethane, would cost between $15,000 and $20,000. She said the club is seeking donations from private sources, including the descendants of those immortalized in the monuments, in addition to the Sears grant.

His Idea To Save Money

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Lillington man has come up with an idea that will save the Army almost $3 million a year.

Fred T. Darroch says he was only doing his job. But Fort Bragg officials say the suggestion is the biggest money-saver of all time on the post.

In return for his suggestion, the Army will heap honors on Darroch in a ceremony Thursday at Fort Bragg. The 44-year-old federal worker will be given $4,025.

Darroch's suggestion cuts the amount of time it takes for Army computers to perform certain tasks.

Darroch says he is "delighted that his idea worked, but a little nervous about all the publicity."

In the ceremony, Darroch will be honored for making Fort Bragg's outstanding civilian suggestion of the year.

In addition to the money, Darroch will be given a certificate of achievement by Gen. Jack V. Mackmull, commander of Fort Bragg and the 18th Airborne Corps.

He also will be awarded a Department of the Army certificate of commendation. The certificate will be presented by Gen. R.M. Shoemaker, commander of the Army Forces Command, which includes Fort Bragg.

"I'm a laid-back person," Darroch said. "I'd just as soon they put the money in an envelope and mail it to me."

FBI Suspends Fingerprint Checks For Agencies

By SKIP WOLLENBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks and government licensing agencies, denied access to FBI fingerprint files, say it's going to be more difficult ensuring that people applying for jobs as tellers, teachers and casino workers don't have criminal records.

The fingerprint service was suspended for non-law enforcement agencies for a year starting Oct. 1 to give the FBI a chance to reduce a backlog of requests and respond more quickly to police agencies.

Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., chairman of a House subcommittee on crime, is calling for an immediate resumption of the service and is collecting signatures on a letter to Reagan.

"There really is no alternative means for banks and state and local governments to learn whether applicants for these sensitive licenses, permits and jobs have a criminal background," he said in the letter.

Hughes asks that the budget priorities be revised so the service can be resumed and pledges support for eventual implementation of a user fee system.

The suspension of fingerprint affects such industries as banking, which is prohibited by law from hiring certain felons, and licensing agencies, such as those which accredit teachers or security guards.

The American Bankers Association says suspension of the service would "undoubtedly increase the incidence of fraud and embezzlement."

A California official who oversees teacher certifications says, "We'll have people in classrooms who shouldn't be there."

"What we're having to look forward to," says a Florida licensing director, "is issuing badges and guns to people who may have a heavy criminal record somewhere else."

In New Jersey, officials say they will have to spend more time and money on background checks for people seeking jobs with the Atlantic City casinos.

G. Michael Brown, director of the state's division of gaming enforcement, said the FBI fingerprint checks have proven invaluable in the past.

"We've had people give us one name, and gotten back a report that they have had an arrest and conviction under another," he said.

In other cases, he said, the FBI fingerprint check has indicated an applicant was wanted for crimes in other states.

The FBI fingerprint files contain samples from about 66 million people nationwide.

The FBI said it hopes to use the next 12 months to reduce its backlog of 400,000 cases and cut its response time to 15 days from the current 27-day average. It said the service would be resumed in October 1982 with an $11 or $12 charge for each fingerprint check.

Wiley Thompson, an FBI spokesman, said the suspension was due to the growing backlog, not budget cuts.

"We found, painfully in some instances, that people being held by law enforcement agencies were being released before we could get back to them," Thompson said.

Licensing officials are generally sympathetic about the need to reduce the backlog and to serve police agencies first.

"We appreciate the bureau's position," said Edwin Taylor, executive director of the Ohio State Lottery. "We are willing to pay for the service."

But Thompson says new clerical workers will be needed when the service is resumed for regulatory agencies, and it will take at least six weeks to train them.

No Lever In Halting Libya Oil-Buying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States would gain nothing if it stopped buying Libyan oil to demonstrate its opposition to Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy, President Reagan says.

"Someone else would buy the oil and finance his activities, so we wouldn't be gaining anything there," Reagan told reporters Monday as he returned to the White House from a weekend at Camp David, Md.

As the shock of last week's assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat continued reverberating through the Mideast, Reagan also reiterated that the United States would not negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization unless it recognized Israel's right to exist.

Asked whether U.S. troops would see combat in Sudan, which is threatened by Libya, Reagan said, "We have no intention of any Americans engaging in combat."

SUNA, the Sudanese news agency, said Monday that the United States has agreed to supply military equipment "very urgently" to Sudan, one of Egypt's closest allies.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman said there is a possibility that some U.S. military advisers could be sent to Sudan, depending on what type of equipment is sent. "Some equipment could possibly require training," she said. "This is not unusual."

SUNA said some equipment would be delivered immediately to this North African desert nation, which has accused Libya — its hard-line Arab neighbor to the northwest — of planning to invade it.

Reagan's comments on the PLO were made in response to statements by former Presidents Ford and Carter that the United States eventually must negotiate with the PLO to find a lasting peace in the Mideast.

"There would be a condition, always has been," Reagan said of the possibility of talks with the PLO. "There's never been any refusal, only until they (the PLO) will recognize Israel's right to exist as a nation, which they still have never done."

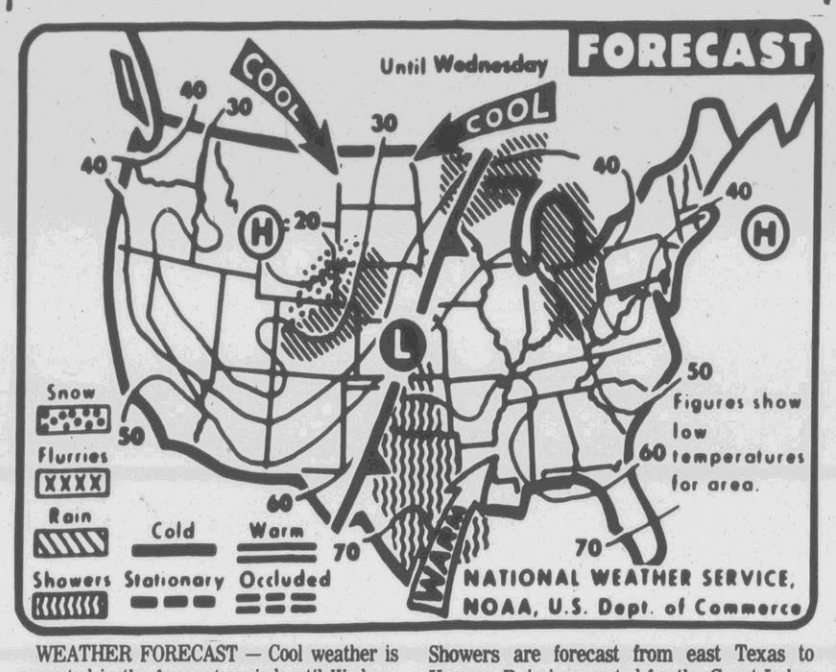
Ford and Carter both were extremely critical of Libya's Khadafy, but Reagan said it would do no good to stop buying Libyan oil. "I don't think that it would make any difference on that," Reagan said. "We might be cutting of our own nose to spite our face."

Carter, arriving for a two-day stay in Washington, said Monday that the administration has not been aggressive enough in promoting talks between Egypt and Israel. He suggested "a very strong and aggressive role with the secretary of state or some high-level designee present to keep the talks moving forward more aggressively."

Meanwhile, a senior State Department official said Monday that Reagan's special Mideast peace envoy, Philip C. Habib, may return to the Middle East next month to seek an expansion of the Lebanese cease-fire that went into effect in July.

The official, who spoke on the condition that he not be identified, also disclosed that a deputy assistant secretary of state, Morris Draper, is visiting Israel, Jordan, Lebanon and Syria to determine prospects for expanding the cease-fire.

How's The Weather?



WEATHER FORECAST — Cool weather is expected in the forecast period until Wednesday for the northern half of the nation. Warm weather is expected for the southern half. Showers are forecast from east Texas to Kansas. Rain is expected for the Great Lakes and Midwest. Snow and rain are due for the western Plains. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Cool and dry autumn weather will continue over North Carolina through the middle of the week with a warming trend expected by the weekend, the National Weather Service reported today.

High pressure centered over New York State extends southward through the region and will remain relatively stationary. This will keep a northeast wind flow across the area for the next two to four days.

Temperatures will be kept below normal by this cool wind flow, but as the high moves off the coast by the weeks end, a warming trend is expected.

No rain is expected across the state through the remainder of the week.

Highs today will be in the 60s. Lows tonight will be in the 40s and highs on Wednesday through Friday will be in the upper 60s to mid-70s across the state.

The strong northeast wind flow across the middle Atlantic has resulted in a fairly heavy surf buildup off the Outer Banks. This surf, in combination with the high astronomical tides this week, may result in some beach erosion on the Outer Banks. Some shallow coastal flooding at times of high tides may be expected also.

Small craft advisories remained in effect this morning for the coastal waters of North Carolina and for Albemarle and Pamlico sounds for brisk northeast winds and increasing surf.

On Monday, some afternoon cloudiness developed over the west and central while cloudiness lingered over the northeast. Elsewhere, considerable sunshine was the rule.

Temperatures were generally in the 60s across the state with readings around 70 in the southeast and in the lower 70s in the extreme southwest. Bryson City with 76 degrees was the warmest and at Murphy the high was 74. By contrast, the mercury reached only 50 at Spruce Pine.

During the night, cloudiness lingered over the Outer Banks and over the mountains with low temperatures in the 40s ranging to the 50s on the coast.

Two Wrecks Investigated

An estimated $2,475 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 2:15 p.m. mishap on Tenth Street, 100 feet east of the Riverbluff Road intersection involving cars driven by Henry Herbert Smith Jr. of Route 1, Stokes, and Donna Jo Elks of Azalea Gardens.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $75 to the Smith car and $1,500 to the Elks vehicle.

Cars driven by Julie Marie McMillen of Hickory and Paul Davis Nagy of Swansboro, collided about 1:50 p.m. on Evans Street, 300 feet north of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, causing an estimated $500 damage to the McMillen car and $400 damage to the Nagy vehicle.

Liberal, Conservative Forces 'Using' Helms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Liberal and conservative forces are both using U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., as a focus of national fund-raising drives.

The Campaign to Defend the Constitution, begun by Common Cause on Sunday, portrays Helms as a radical conservative determined to undermine the Constitution.

Meanwhile, the National Congressional Club, Helms' political organization, depicts Helms as a crusader against government waste in its direct mail campaign to generate public support for further cuts in food stamps.

In a full-page ad in the New York Times Sunday, Common Cause warned: "Sen. Helms, Rev. (Jerry) Falwell and other leaders of the New Right apparently believe that it is time to turn our backs on the Constitution. If they have their way, they will radically change our constitutional system that has served to protect our most precious rights and liberties for more than 200 years."

The ad urges readers to contribute money to help defeat bills sponsored by Helms that would reduce the federal courts' authority on abortion, school busing and school prayer.

The ad features a photograph of a grim, unsmiling Helms with a 5 o'clock shadow.

Fred M. Wertheimer, president of Common Cause, said the photo "was not intended to look menacing. We used the picture we had."

The National Congressional Club has sent out four-page, single-spaced letters signed by Helms in which he promises to do his "dead-level best" to fight bureaucrats and special interests he says are obstructing his efforts to eliminate waste, fraud and abuse in the food stamp program.

Carter Wrenn, director of the Raleigh-based Congressional Club, said he did not know how many of the letters were being mailed out. He said they were written by club staffers and approved by Helms.

"It probably ain't going to make any money," Wrenn said of the letters. "The purpose is to generate petitions and post cards in support of the cuts."

The Congressional Club sends out 15 to 20 different mailings annually, Wrenn said. The food-stamp mailing was not sent to the club's list of normal contributors, but instead was sent to non-contributors in an effort to generate wider support for Helms' position on food stamps, he said.

Ayden Board Hears Results Of Annual Audit

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — An audit report showing a fund balance of $290,355 on June 30, 1981 was presented to the town board last night. This end-of-the-year figure represents a decrease in overall fund balance over 1980, according to Farley, Prescott, Mizelle & Co., auditors for the town.

The report showed total expenditures for the fiscal year from July 1, 1980 through June 30, 1981 were $819,769, with $171,505 spent on general government; $175,955 on public safety; $341,635 on public works; $41,331 on recreation; $21,112 on cemeteries and $48,467 on the garage. The remainder was spent on administration, rehabilitation, capital projects and debt service.

Revenues for the year totaled $720,692, with $241,393 coming from ad valorem taxes; $22,866 from other taxes; $90,122 from unrestricted intergovernmental revenues; $87,991 from restricted intergovernmental revenues; $4,538 from licenses and permits; $73,348 from sales and services; $74,713 from investment earnings and $125,721 from other revenues, including the sales tax refund from the state.

Two public hearings were held at the monthly meeting of the board, one on rezoning and one on annexation. The Strawberry Banks no. two subdivision was annexed into the town, effective Dec. 31, 1981. Property at 102 East Avenue belonging to James Tripp was rezoned from B-2 highway commercial to RA-20 residential.

A bid of $9,097 from Leo Venters Motors for a 1982 police vehicle was accepted, along with a bid of $5,953 from Twin City Insurance Co. for housing aurthority insurance.

Town manager Don Russell reported that figures from the revenue department set Ayden's population at 4,361. "We have had no word from the U.S. Census Bureau on the revised figure," he said, "but evidently they have notified revenue sharing with this information."

Fire Chief Calvin Hardee requested that the board allow the fire department to sponsor a bingo parlor in the town run by a firm from Greenville. Under the law, all profit would go to the fire department. The board tabled the request until a study on what Mayor Ross Persinger called "the legalities of the matter and the town's responsibilities" is made by the town attorney.

Recreation director Gil Davis reported his department is experiencing difficulties with use of the tennis courts. "We are having problems with people using the courts and not turning the lights off when they leave," he explained. The lights on the courts are on a timer switch that allows players to set them for any increment of time up to 60 minutes. The switch can also be cut off at any time.

"We have had folks not locking the doors when they leave, too, and we would just like to ask everyone to cut off those lights and use their keys to secure the gates after they're through playing," added the recreation director.

Winterville Town Board Presented Audit Data

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — Winterville town board members were presented with an audit report of the year ending June 30 last night.

Cecil Mizelle, of Farley, Prescott & Mizelle, made the presentation explaining the new format is a standard format complying with the Local Government Commission and is a new accounting concept.

The report listed the total revenues for the year at $324,209, with total expenditures of $301,890. The year ending balance was listed as $139,369.

In furthur business heard by the board, paving contracts for Baines Street, Walter and Ola Circle were awarded to Barrus Construction Co. for a total cost of $16,978.

Mayor Walter Dail reported stop signs are needed on streets in Weathington Heights, Ola and Walter Circle. Also signs are in need of replacement in Robinson Heights. According to town ordinance, the mayor reported, a public hearing is needed before the new signs can be erected. The hearing was set for the next regular board meeting.

Mayor Dail reported a court ruling had been made on the Person Street matter. Dail said a permanent injunction had been issued barring the defendants (adjoining landowners) from obstruction to the general public or from obstructing city employees from maintaining the street.

At the May board meeting town attorney David Duffus reported when the town received the property about 20 years ago, the area residents had two years to ask the town for compensation for the land.

Duffus continued in his May report that no such action had been taken and the statute of limitations had expired.

Citizens along the street contend the town should pay them for the property, and in the past tried to prevent the town from working on the street until payment was met. Town officials to date have refused payment saying the land should rightfully be maintained by the town as a dedicated street.

In final action taken by the board, approval was given by the board for a $30 ad to be placed in the Ruritan birthday calender.

Iran Installs A New President

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Amid cries of "death to America," Iran's first clergyman-president, Hojatoleslam Ali Khamenei, was sworn in by parliament today. The Tehran government also reported 22 more leftists executed by firing squads on charges of armed insurgency, street violence and armed robbery.

The anti-American shouts rang out on the air waves of Tehran Radio as the newly elected president took the constitutional oath of office, vowing to defend Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's Islamic revolution against "deviance, liberalism and American-influenced leftists."

Khamenei portrayed his 16-million ballot victory in Iran's third presidential election in 21 months as a "vote of trust for the clergy, a vote for Islam, a vote for independence..."

Cries of "God is Great" and "Death to America" reverberated in the Majlis, Irans' parliament, which was packed with leading figures of the judiciary, government, legislature and the armed forces, according to the broadcast.

Majlis Speaker Hojatoleslam Ali-Akbar Rafsanjani called on the new president to check the wave of anti-government assassinations that has plagued the nation in the past three months.

In his inaugural address, Khamenei said he took pride in the fact that the victims of anti-government assassins in Iran included presidents, prime ministers, parliament members and mullahs.

"This shows that in our society the sense of mission and commitment is not narrowed to only one segment of the people," Khamenei said.

"I swear as president in the name of God to be a custodian of the state religion, the system of government of the Islamic republic and the constitutional law," Khameini recited, "to devote myself to the service of the people, the grandeur of my country, promotion of religion and morality and supporting furtherrance of justice."

His right hand on the Koran, Islam's holy book, the 42-year-old president also swore to "respect individual liberty and safeguard the constitutional rights of the people and make every endeavor to maintain the frontiers and the political, economic and cultural independence of the country."

Khameini is a protege of Iran's supreme leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who masterminded the February 1979 Islamic revolution that overthrew Shah Reza Mohammad Pahlavi and ended 25 centuries of monarchial rule.

The government withheld prior announcement of the swearing-in program apparently as a security precaution, and sources in Tehran said photographers were required to deposit their cameras with the Majlis public relations office 24 hours in advance.

Khameini's swearing-in came one day after the human rights group Amnesty International said the Iranian government had executed more than 1,800 people in the last four months, exceeding the totcl number put to death by all the other governments in the world in the past year. The group said it requested permission to send delegates to Tehran for talks on ending the killings.

Pet Plant's Bloom Draws Fly Swarm

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Phillipe Falkenberg isn't likely to send flowers from his Steaplia Macroflora plant to anyone he likes.

When the plant blooms, it smells like raw meat. About the only living beings in Falkenberg's office that like the plant are flies.

"It looked like a cactus without spines," said the Wake Forest University psychology professor. "It's pale green with purple hairs and fleshy stems."

No one minded the plant, a member of the milkweed family, until it bloomed last week.

"My office is next to (Falkenberg's)," said psychology Professor Jerry Burger. "And it becomes full of flies, also."

Burger said he smelled the plant from afar.

"I've never gotten close to it," he said. "It's kind of a joke around the office."

Psychology Professor Cecilia Solano, whose office neighbors Falkenberg's, is more appreciative of the plant because the flies that had been in her office migrated to Falkenberg's plant. "They didn't leave too soon," she said.

The insects are drawn to the blooms of the plant because of a meat-like smell, says a botanist friend of Falkenberg's. "He says he can smell it," Falkenberg said. "I can't smell it. But as soon as the bloom popped, all these flies swarmed in."

Soon thereafter, baby flies laid eggs all over the blooms, he said.

The blooms lasted only about 48 hours and won't appear for another year. And already, the flies are departing — after starring in a videotape Falkenberg made for his animal behavior classes.

Hiring Judge Is Criticized

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Calling it "a step backward to the days when litigants paid for the judge who heard their cases," a state justice criticized a system allowing judges to be hired for civil lawsuits.

California Chief Justice Rose Bird told the state bar Sunday that the "rent-a-judge" plan is a "judicial system for the wealthy."

The plan allows litigants to rent the services of retired judges at up to $200 an hour for lawsuits. It is authorized under state law.

'Superchicken' Balloon Is Gone

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Salvage operations were to resume today to bring the battered gondola of the balloon Super Chicken III back to the mainland it set a record by crossing.

Pilot John Shoecraft and co-pilot Fred Correll, two Arizona businessmen, jettisoned their helium-filled balloon and came to a jarring landing on Blackbeard Island off the Georgia coast south of here Sunday, 55 hours and 18 minutes and 2,515 miles after takeoff at Costa Mesa, Calif.

It was the first non-stop, cross-country balloon flight.

After spending the night at a Savannah motel, they returned to the sand dunes Monday but the ocean was too rough to attempt to bring the 4,000-pound gondola back to Savannah, a spokesman said. The 10-story balloon, made of plastic the thickness of a standard trash bag, was gone, apparently blown into the ocean, where it "is chicken in the sea now," quipped Shoecraft.

The plan was to lift the gondola by helicopter to a shrimp boat and then haul it to a dock here, a spokesman said.

The landing was a jolt that wrinkled the gondola, but the worst parts of the flight were sub-zero temperatures and sleepless nights, the pilots said Monday.

"It was an adventure," Shoecraft told reporters during a news conference. "It was just very thrilling to us."

Shoecraft said the landing was difficult because they had to land on the sand, between the ocean and coastal swamp.

"When we got to the coast it was foggy and socked in" with clouds, he said.

"It makes you think about your flying abilities and experiences," added Gorrell.

Their first landing attempt was aborted over a swamp. On the second try they dropped the egg-shaped gondola, from which the craft got its name, onto the beach by cutting loose from the helium balloon.

"If you can imagine dropping a car from three feet high, it creates quite a commotion," Shoecraft said. "Fortunately, there weren't any ducks under us."

They flew as high as 28,000 feet at speeds that at times exceeded 50 mph on their trip that ended at 11:07 a.m. EDT Sunday.

Gorrell said he and Shoecraft dressed in five layers of clothing and electric socks to keep warm as temperatures in the upper atmosphere dropped to 40 degrees below zero.

"I think the cold was the thing that surprised me the most," he said. "Of course, we were on oxygen all the time. You can't eat, sleep, drink or do anything else without oxygen. Have you ever tried to spread honey at 40 below?"

He said the men had a small stove to heat tea and dehydrated soup, but ate mostly peanut butter and honey sandwiches.

"You've got to eat by taking your oxygen mask off, grabbing a bite and then putting it back on," said Shoecraft.

Two earlier versions of the Super Chicken failed in attempts to float across the country. One made it to Columbus, Ohio, the other ran into storms over the Rocky Mountins that damaged the balloon.

Giant Sunbelt Expo Opening

MOULTRIE, Ga. (AP) — The annual Sunbelt Agricultural Exposition, which opens today, has become the third largest farm show in the country because it "covers all aspects of agriculture," says coordinator Joe Burnside.

About 200,000 are expected to attend the Southeast's premiere farm show through Thursday.

"The exhibit area features ag machinery, irrigation, seeds, chemicals, livestock production, farm buildings, grain drying and storage facilities," Burnside said. "Here the agricultural professional can learn all about the most recent developments."

The Expo emphasizes continuous harvesting and tillage demonstrations, he said. About 600 acres are planted in corn, cotton, soybeans, peanuts and callie bermudagrass to allow Sunbelt visitors to see how today's farm equipment compares in the field.

"This show is primarily to exhibit and demonstrate the latest advances in farm power, machinery and related equipment," said Burnside.

"We think the Sunbelt Ag Expo gives the farmer a competitive advantage," he added. "The Expo offers a unique opportunity to see what's new in agriculture, what's most efficient and what's the best buy."

The crop demonstration area includes 10 acres of field test plot demonstrations and a 5-acre fruit and vegetable production area irrigated with three drip-trickle systems.

The Consumer-Family Living Show — two large tents housing amost 100 exhibitors — features daily stage shows on topics such as "Quick Tricks for the Gourmet."

Singers, stand-up comedians, bluegrass bands, puppets and cloggers will perform at various times during the Expo. Among those scheduled to attend is country comedian Jerry Clower.

Exo sponsors include the University of Georgia's College of Agriculture, the city of Moultrie, Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College, Progressive Farmer Magazine and the Georgia Department of Agriculture, in cooperation agricultural officials of Alabama, Florida, Mississippi, South Carolina, North Carolina and Tennessee.

Some N.C. Fishermen Consider Turn To Sails

GLOUCESTER, N.C. (AP) — Rising fuel costs are leading some commercial fishermen in North Carolina to consider an ancient and inexpensive source of power — the wind.

A few years ago, people laughed when Bryan Blake said he planned to put sails on his fishing boats, Blake said.

"Now people are listening and saying, 'I can remember my grandfather taking me fishing on a sailing boat," he said.

But nostalgia plays a small role in the prediction that sail power could power a large part of the nation's maritime fleet. Industry observers point out that world commerce depended on sails in the days before engine-powered vessels.

The state is interested in sail power as a way to help fishermen in financial trouble, said Connell E. Purvis, director of the state Division of Marine Fisheries.

The typical fisherman burns four to 20 gallons of fuel an hour at a price of up to $1.30 a gallon, he said. Some large trawlers use 1,200 to 1,500 gallons of fuel a week.

U.S. Sens. John W. Warner, R-Va., and Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, have sponsored bills that would extend a 15 percent tax credit for sail-equipped vessels built or refitted in the United States. The bill is currently in committee.

The U.S. House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee is studying proposed legislation that would encourage the development of sail-powered workboats, sais Lamar Gudger, special counsel for the committee.

Sails have bloomed on ocean-going schooners on the West Coast and on tugboats in Virginia. North Carolina Marine Resources officials say they know of no full-time commercial fishing vessels in North Carolina powered by sail.

But Blake, a boatbuilder in Carteret County for about five years, moved in that direction by building a 20-foot boat for pleasure sailing and passive fishing. Two Beaufort couples bought the boat, the Core Sound Sharpie, and use it for net fishing and oyster harvesting.

A major problem adapting sails to workboats would be to assure the masts and sails did not interfere with machinery used for hauling and unloading catches, Blake said.

To solve that problem with the Core Sound Sharpie, Blake rigged a sprit sail with no boom, which makes it easy to set and haul nets over the stern.

William H. Hall Jr., an engineer for a yacht-building company in Holly Ridge, said the addition of sails could reduce fuel costs by as much as 50 percent — depending on the amount of wind and the type of fishing.

But engines will still be needed on calm days and for docking and inlet maneuvering, Hall said.

Stops Runaway With His Car

ATLANTA (AP) — Saving a helpless woman from death means far more than a crumpled fender, said Richard Wray, who used his car as a roadblock to stop a runaway vehicle.

The woman, a victim of multiple sclerosis who can't walk without her cane, had been rolling on the street to escape the circling car, "positive," she said later, that she was going to die.

The woman, who didn't want to be identified, had gotten into her car one day last week, and in her hurry to get to school left the cane on the roof. It fell off as she pulled into the street. She said she made a U-turn in the seven-lane road, parked her car in the center, turn-only lane and started to walk toward the cane.

But the car "must not have been entirely in park," she said, because the vehicle, its wheels still turned to the left, began backing up, knocking her down.

"I couldn't get up because I must pull up by something," said the woman, adding that she managed to roll out of the path of the circling mid-size vehicle three times.

Then along came Wray, a 33-year-old Atlanta computer programmer, who was driving a compact car.

"I had stopped and realized the situation," he said. "I stepped on the gas ... and rolled into position (between the woman and the circling car) where it hit me."

"I considered there was extreme danger to the woman," Wray said in an interview Monday night. "Of course, anybody who was in such a situation, they're afraid to wreck their car or damage their car at all. But the danger just overrode everything else."

"It banged in my front fender, that's about it," he said, adding that "she's going to take care of" the $260 repair bill.

Thousands Begin To Feel Budget Cutback Effects

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Thousands of North Carolinians are feeling the first effects of federal budget cuts this month, from the welfare checks some poor mothers will miss to new limits on the fees doctors can charge poor patients.

President Reagan's budget cuts, as enacted by Congress, will reduce by an estimated $121 million the federal money spread through a variety of assistance programs run by state government in North Carolina, said Harvey Lincoln of the state budget office.

And more money will be cut through cuts in food stamps, which do not go through state government, he said.

Lincoln and other state officials, who are still assessing the impact of the cuts and new Medicaid limits enacted Saturday by the General Assembly in response to them, say the human effects will be considerable:

— More than 30(000 people, perhaps as many as 37,000 people, will lose monthly benefits through the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, the chief welfare program. The cuts will be felt with the checks mailed at the end of this month.

— About 10,500 families will lose all food stamp benefits and 70,900 more households will see a reduction in their food stamps.

— Reductions in Medicaid services will affect thousands of people through limits on prescriptions and doctors' visits and through other changes.

— Fewer specialized services, such as "meals on wheels" and in-home services for the elderly and child day-care for the poor, will be available through reductions in programs under the umbrella of Title 20 of the Social Security Act.

The cuts were described Monday by the Southern Regional Council as amounting to "a war on the poor." The Atlanta-based research group said the South will be hard hit by the changes because a third of the nation's poor and one-half of the nation's black poor live in the region.

State officials also describe the impact as severe. And in the case of the Medicaid cuts passed by the General Assembly, they are quick to point to the Reagan administration as forcing the action.

"All these are pretty drastic, but we don't have any choice because this is what the Reagan administration handed down," said Charlotte Ashcraft, fiscal analyst for the General Assembly staff.

"It's going to mean extreme hardships," she added. "I'm sure it's going to have long term effects, in health and in other ways."

Bob Daughtry, also an analyst for the legislature's Fiscal Research Staff, said the effects also will be to shift costs to county governments — or at least shift pressure to county governments.

Limits on Medicaid, for instance, may require county-run hospitals to absorb the costs of treating some patients and in turn raise their rates to general customers as a way to recover the debts.

"You'll see your hospitalization insurance rates go up," Daughtry said.

Gov. Jim Hunt and Democratic legislators decided to pass along the federal budget cuts as they were passed by Congress, without attempting to supplement them with more state aid or to shift money from one program to another.

Republican state legislators pointed out that the cuts were absorbed while the Democratic majority was passing a $122 million supplemental budget that included other new state spending, such as a pay raise for state workers and pork-barrel projects for Democratic legislators' districts.

"If you took a poll of the people in this state, they'd tell you they want to see more cuts," said Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, House minority leader.

Here is a look at how the cuts will be made in some of the major programs:

— AFDC. A change in eligibity formulas by the General Assembly offset a portion of the federal cuts and allows some poor mothers to continue to collect AFDC payments while working. But the number of people who will be cut out range from the 37,240 estimated by the legislature staff to the 30,000 estimated by June Milby, spokesman for the state Department of Human Resources.

For a mother with three dependent children, the monthly payment is $210, said Ms. Ashcraft. With the state formula change, the mother could also earn up to $629 for four months and still receive some benefits. But after four months, she would lose all benefits if she earned more than $209, Ms. Ashcraft said.

"It's going to be devastating," she said. "How many people do you know that can live on $210 a month and support three children?"

— Medicaid, which pays medical expensese for the poor. The General Assembly limited benefits to compensate for the $25.6 million federal cut this year. The cuts limit each recipient to 18 paid doctors' and mental health visits a year and to no more than four paid drug prescriptions per month.

If in effect last year, Ms. Ashcraft said, 12,161 people would have been effected by the physicians' limitation; 2,250 people would have been effected by the mental health limit and 21,442 people would have been effected by the drugs limit.

The legislature cut $12 million in payments to hospitals by setting new limits on the rates Medicaid will pay to hospitals. The limits are to be set by Dec. 1. And the legislature froze — at their June 30, 1981 level — the fees doctors may charge their Medicaid patients.

— Title 20 programs, providing day care for the poor and a variety of services for the elderly, will be cut by $15 million this year. The cuts will be spread among the 100 counties with a formula yet to set, said Ms. Milby.

Carter Says No Bugging

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter says he has no fears that the man who ousted him from the White House might try to eavesdrop on his conversations during his two-day visit in Washington.

The former president threatened last week to sue The Washington Post because a Post gossip column said there have been allegations tapes were made of conversations Reagan and his wife Nancy had last January when they stayed at the government's Blair House before Carter left office.

On arrival at an official residence for former presidents at 716 Jackson Place, around the corner from Blair House, Carter was asked Monday whether he actually will file suit.

"I don't know yet. I think those questions can best be answered by my attorneys," Carter said.

Asked whether he thought the Jackson Place house might be bugged, Carter replied: "I think the Jackson house is about as thoroughly bugged as Blair House," Carter said, adding: "That is, with no surveillance equipment."

HELD ON SUSPICION

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Seventeen people, mostly students have been jailed on suspicion of spying for communist North Korea and inciting anti-government demonstrations, authorities say.

Annual Meeting

Approximately 750 people, including 250 to 300 shareholders, attended the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association's annual dinner meeting Saturday night at Minges Coliseum.

Nominations were made to fill two board terms that have expired. The election of the two directors to new three-year tenures will be conducted by mail. James E. Manning was nominated for re-election to the board and L. A. Moye Jr. was also nominated for Manning's expired seat. Wayne Stokes was nominated for re-election and W. W. Jefferson was also nominated for Stokes' expired board position.

Nomination procedures were handled by M. E. Cavendish, association trustee, who read the report of the nominating committee for next year.

Arnold B. Parris, president, presented the association's financial report for the period ending July 31. Parris said the report reflected total assets in excess of $55,900,000, with a net worth of $9,277,000. He added that net worth represented an increase of $750,000 over last year.

Final net earnings for the year totaled $380,000, Parris reported, and loans were made to some 950 shareholders during the period.

More Spraying For Fruit Pest

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Concern over last week's discovery oy a Mediterranean fruit fly in the city of Hayward has prompted officials to order aerial pesticide spraying for another 50 square miles in the San Francisco Bay area.

Southern California, meanwhile, also will get more spraying after a fertile medfly was found Sunday in an orange tree in West Covina.

Medfly project spokesman Bill Pope said Monday that helicopters would start "protective" malathion spraying in southwestern Alameda County "because of the flies that have been found."

Included in that new spray zone are San Lorenzo, Castro Valley, San Leandro and Hayward, where the last fly was found Oct. 8, Pope said.

The medfly discovered in West Covina was less than a mile east of an area that has been sprayed for the past seven weeks. Late last week, five medflies and several maggots were found in La Puente.

From Sept. 3 to Oct. 8 no fertile flies were found in Southern California, and officials had hoped their tree-stripping and pesticide spraying efforts had eliminated the fly from that region.

A 27-square-mile area of West Covina and Baldwin Park will get additional spraying starting Wednesday, Pope said.

More than 800 square miles are now being sprayed throughout California.

In another development, a Fresno County entomologist told a Fresno State University symposium that the crop-destroying pest remains a threat to the agricultural rich San Joaquin Valley, heart of the state's $14 billion farm industry.

But Norman Smith added that Fresno County might be able to avoid a lasting infestation because of its cold winters and hot summers.

The medfly plants its eggs in more than 250 varieties of fruit and vegetables. Millions of dollars have been spent by the state and federal governments to fight the insect during the past 16 months.

Dolphins Flunk Test By Buffalo, 31-21

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Don Shula had admitted before the game that the Buffalo Bills would be Miami's first big test of the season.

The Dolphins flunked it.

"We hadn't played a team as good with or without the ball all year," Shula said of Buffalo's offense and defense. "We knew this was going to be a pretty good indication of how good we were."

If that's the case, the Dolphins weren't anywhere as good as the 4-0-1 record they took into Monday night's game. The 31-21 victory by the Bills — and it was a lot easier than the score indicates — proved it.

The outcome not only left the Dolphins with their first loss of the season (Philadelphia remains the National Football League's only unbeaten team), it also left their record against American Conference East teams at 1-1-1. And Buffalo, 4-2 overall, is 4-0 against the rest of the division.

By halftime the score was a near-runaway 31-7 with Miami's only touchdown coming on Fulton Walker's 90-yard kickoff return. It wasn't until the final 18 minutes that the Buffalo defense relented and gave up Tony Nathan's 12-yard scoring sweep — the first rushing TD against the Bills this year — and Don Strock's four-yard touchdown pass to Joe Rose.

"This was about as bad as you can get beaten — the way we were handled in the first half," said Shula. "This was as sad a first half as we've had in a long, long time...we couldn't get anything going from the opening kickoff. I was very upset about the way we played defense. The defense didn't make a play all night."

It couldn't, the way Joe Ferguson was throwing the ball. The Buffalo quarterback, given all the time he needed, completed 20 of 29 passes for 338 yards. And that was after he'd hit on 11 of 15 for 221 in the first half, when the outcome was all but decided.

"Ferguson had a great night and his receivers played super," Shula said. "Down and in, down and up, down the middle — balls were being caught all over the place. You must be able to stop people. We just aren't playing good pass defense. This was a continuation of what happened to us in the last two ballgames, when we gave up over a thousand yards."

In all, they gave up 454 this time. Wide receiver Jerry Butler got 28 of them on one touchdown pass and 25 of them on another and running back Joe Cribbs, who rushed for a game-high 60 yards, got another 65 on a touchdown pass.

Ferguson, who has thrown for at least three TDs three times this season, now has 14 and is tied with San Diego's Dan Fouts for the league lead. Another of his passes, a 29-yarder to Frank Lewis, fell one yard short of a touchdown. So Roosevelt Leaks ran it in from there.

"We had the right plays called at the right time," Ferguson said, shrugging off the praise directed his way. "Several times we were lucky. We put in formations to try and spread the Miami defense wide. We spread them out pretty wide and if the linebackers don't get back, it gives them real trouble."

As much trouble as the Miami defense had with Ferguson, that's how much trouble the Buffalo defense gave Strock, starting in place of injured David Woodley.

Strock was intercepted four times, two of them coming on the Buffalo one-yard line and the other two setting up touchdowns by the Bills. He also was sacked twice and was under intense pressure most of the night.

"They had to pass," said Bills linebacker Jim Haslett. "In fact, they weren't running from the very beginning and when we got ahead, it became kind of predictable."

"I think they more or less wanted to run," added defensive end Ben Williams, who shared in one of the sacks. "But when they got behind by 24 points, they had to pass."

And Strock observed succinctly: "We were desperate all night."

"You've got to give Miami credit," said Bills Coach Chuck Knox. "They came back strong and made a heck of a run at us. We didn't try to be ula was more realistic about that second half, particularly Rose's touchdown's catch with just 10 seconds to play. "We never really got back in the game," Shula said. "Those points at the end, well, they could be important in the tie-breaking system."

Cajuns Have Rough Year So Far

Life hasn't been easy for the Ragin' Cajuns of Southwestern Louisiana this year. In their five appearances on the football field this fall, the Big Red has managed but one victory, 34-11, over North Texas State. North Texas, by the way, won its first start in six games this past weekend.

Southwestern, which will entertain East Carolina on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. (Eastern time), lost its opener to strong Southern Mississippi, 33-7, then fell to Southeastern Louisiana, 7-0. Northeastern followed with a 20-17 win, and the Ragin' Cajuns finally won the fourth week of the season.

But last week, Southwestern was again the victim, falling to Arkansas State, 14-3, in the opening Southland Conference game for both.

Arkansas State fell earlier in the year, 24-20, to Richmond, a team East Carolina topped 17-13, this past weekend.

The Arkansas State game, too, could have been a preliminary to this week's contest, since the Indians run the wishbone offense, as do the Pirates.

The Indians, too, like East Carolina, try to do a lot off the wishbone, running what they sometimes refer to as the wingbone — what ECU calls breaking the bone.

The leading rusher for the Ragin' Cajuns is Greg Davis, a sophomore running back who was sidelined last week with a twisted knee and was questionable for the Arkansas State contest. Prior to that game, he has rushed 53 times for 284 yards, and was the lone Cajun with over 100 yards rushing in the first four games.

Quarterback Curt Caldarea also was hampered by injuries, having suffered a couple of broken fingers a few weeks back. Prior to Arkansas State, he had thrown 50 times, hit 23 and had four intercepted for 403 yards and three touchdowns. His backup, Dwight Prudhomme, has hit on 13 of 40 with 124 yards with two intercepted. He's thrown for one touchdown.

Top receivers include wide receiver Greg Hobbs, with eight catches for 139 yards and one touchdown, wide receiver Claude Charles, with six catches for 178 yards and three scores, and tight end Brent Anderson with six catches for 67 yards.

Charles and running back David Foret are the leading scorers with 18 points each, while kicker Oscar Speer had hit on seven of seven extra points and three of five field goals prior to Saturday, the longest being 48 yards.

As a team, the Ragin' Cajuns have rushed for an average of 145.5 yards a game, while passing for 143.0 — a well-balanced attack.

Defensively, they have allowed 146.5 on the ground and 190.0 through the air.

The leading tackler on the team is defensive back Cooter Mansur with 32, while defensive end Andy Martin has 28. Close behind is linebacker Mark Malkemus with 26, while linebackers Bruce Jackson and Rob Falivene and back David Pingston each have 22 tackles.

Back Michael Dupre is theleading interceptor with three.

The game will be the fourth between the two schools, with Southwestern currently holding a 2-1 advantage in the series. Southwestern won both games in Greenville, while the Pirates won the one game played to date in Lafayette.

Last year, East Carolina carried a 7-3 lead into halftime, only to see fumbles and poor third quarter play allow the Cajuns to score 21 third period points as Southwestern pulled out a 27-21 win.

Southwestern won the opening game of the series, 9-7, on three field goals back in 1977, in Greenville, and ECU romped, 38-9, in Lafayette the next year.

Texas Takes Over Lead; Heels Are Ranked 4th

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas, leapfrogging into the No.1 spot in college football with a 20-point victory over Oklahoma, now faces an even more important game, says Coach Fred Akers.

Texas defeated Oklahoma 34-14 in a nationally televised game at Dallas on Saturday and next travels to Fayetteville, Ark., for a regionally televised Southwest Conference contest with Arkansas.

Akers said the Oklahoma victory was "fun, great the way it turned out for us" and important nationally, "but it's not as important as the Arkansas game. It's a conference game, and Arkansas is a quality football team."

"Arkansas is as talented as anyone we're going to see," said Akers, a former Arkansas quarterback.

Asked if he preferred being No.1 or No.2 going into the Arkansas game, Akers replied, "Not since there's nothing I can do about it, no."

He noted, however, "The choices are getting more limited as we go along."

Texas, with the help of a loss by top-ranked Southern California, moved up from the from No.3 spot Monday, leaving Penn State No.2 in The Associated Press poll.

"Nothing I say or do will make us No.1 or No.2," Akers said of the rankings. "They (opponents) shoot at us, regardless, and that's why it doesn't bother us to be ranked high."

Texas received 35 first place votes for 1,274 points to 24 first place ballots and 1,262 points for Penn State in voting by a nationwide panel of 66 sports writers and sportscasters. Pittsburgh was third with three first place ballots and 1,192 points, followed by North Carolina (4) and 1,126, Michigan, Clemson, Southern Cal, Missouri, Georgia and SMU.

The Second Ten consists of Florida State, Iowa, Miami of Florida, Wisconsin, Alabama, Mississippi State, Brigham Young, Washington State, Nebraska and Arizona State.

The loss to Texas dropped Oklahoma, which was 10th last week, out of the Top Twenty for the first time since Nov. 25, 1970. The Sooners had been in the rankings for 147 consecutive weeks during the regular season, two shy of Michigan's all-time mark of 149 weeks, which ended on Sept. 23, 1980.

Texas is the fourth team this season to hold the No.1 spot in the AP poll. Michigan, the preseason and first-week leader, gave way to Notre Dame for one week, before Southern Cal pushed them off the top rung.

Asked if he was worried about a letdown after the emotional victory over the Sooners, Akers said, "You have to be concerned with something like that."

But he said if "you stop and analyze the importance" of the Arkansas game, "I wouldn't think we've have much trouble getting their (the players') attention."

The Top Twenty teams in The Associated Press college football poll, with first-place votes in parentheses, season's record and total points. Points based on 20-19-18-17-16-15-14-13-12-11-10-9-8-7-6-5-4-3-2-1:

Rose Captures Final Meet

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School's boys' cross-country team closed out the 1981 regular season yesterday with a 20-39 victory over Northeastern of Elizabeth City.

Running without four of its top runners, the Rampants still had little trouble in gaining their seven straight victory without a defeat. Coach Ron Hockmuth said his number three through six runners stayed home to work out for this week's Big East Conference meet.

Harry Williams and Kenny Smith again ran in tandem, crossing the finish line together in 15:04, a new course record.

Northeastern's Cliff Shaw was third in 16:40, followed by Jeremiah Brown of Rose in 16:55 and Paul Bolen of Rose in 17:05.

Other Rose finishers included Tom Michaelson, eighth in 17:44; Jon Whichard, ninth in 17:55, and Will Hester, tenth in 18:03.

Rose travels to Wilson Beddingfield on Thursday, seeking to win its third straight Big East Conference championship in the league meeting.

DUNKEL COLLEGE FOOTBALL INDEX

EXPLANATION - The Dunkel system provides a continuous index to the relative strength of all teams. It reflects average scoring margin combined with average opposition rating, weighted in favor of recent performance. Example: a 50.0 team has been 10 scoring points stronger, per game, than a 40.0 team against opposition of identical strength. Originated in 1929 by Dick Dunkel.

HUNTER ORIGINAL OLDE TYME CEILING FANS

This was the fan that went 'round the world. These Hunter ceiling fans, the 1903 originals, swirled away heat in the steamy jungles of Africa, in the deserts of Morocco, on the shores of India and in the plantation homes of the South. A lot of people who remember those days still refer to all ceiling fans as "Hunter Fans". Johnny-come-lately's can't fool them—they know Hunter is the original.

Dodgers Get Cey Back For Playoffs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ron Cey stood in the batting cage with what looked like a catcher's shin guard on his left forearm. There was a dull pain gnawing at his confidence. Several swings resulted in several foul balls.

Then, he sent an offering into center field on a line. It seemed to indicate he was ready to return to the starting lineup of the Los Angeles Dodgers — and none too soon.

The Dodgers — fresh from an historic comeback over the Houston Astros in the division series — will represent the West Division in the National League championship series against the East Division champion Montreal Expos beginning today at Dodger Stadium.

Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda announced at a workout Monday that he would start Cey at third for the first time since he broke a bone in his right forearm when he was hit with a pitch by San Francisco's Tom Griffin on Sept. 8 at Dodger Stadium. Reactivating Cey will move Pedro Guerrero back to right field, and Rick Monday will take a seat in the dugout, Lasorda said.

"There's still a bit of pain, but it's dull and nothing I can't handle," said Cey, who hit .288 with 15 homers and 50 RBI before he was sidelined.

"I wouldn't put myself or my teammates in this position if I didn't think I could handle it," Cey said.

The Dodgers became the first team in the history of baseball to recover from a 2-0 deficit to win a five-game series when Jerry Reuss blanked the Houston Astros 4-0 Sunday. Right-hander Burt Hooton, who won Los Angeles' first game of the series last Friday, 6-1, was named to start today's game. Hooton was 11-6 during the season with a 2.28 earned run average.

Manager Jim Fanning, who took the Expos helm when Dick Williams was fired on Sept. 8 and guided the team to its first postseason berth, will counter with 22-year-old right-hander Bill Gullickson, 7-9 during the season with a 2.80 ERA.

Like Lasorda, Fanning had an addition to his lineup Monday. After watching rookie basestealing sensation Tim Raines take a few batting practice swings, he named Raines to start in left field. Raines broke his hand on Sept. 13 in Chicago while attempting to steal second base. Raines stole 71 bases and hit .304 before he was sidelined by the fracture.

Rodney Scott, out with a sore shoulder, also may return to the lineup, Fanning said.

"When Raines got hurt a month ago, I didn't hear a single coach bemoaning the fact that we had lost the top basestealer in the league," Fanning said. "When Scott got hurt, we knew we had a professional second baseman in Jerry Manuel. We've had a lot of guys all along that could come in and pick up the slack."

Raines will start after only three days of batting practice. He said there still was a little soreness in the hand, and he admitted his timing was off a little.

"I really need to get in there and get a few more cuts," Raines said. "But I can't change my style of hitting. I just have to do what got me here."

The two division series these teams played were pitchers' series, with Reuss winning that crucial duel with Houston's Nolan Ryan in the final game of the West half and Montreal ace Steve Rogers outgunning Philadelphia's Steve Carlton twice.

But Dodgers first baseman Steve Garvey said offensive power could enter into this series as well.

"We never lost our desire, and there was no resignation or negativism," Garvey said of the Astros series. "We had to stay within ourselves, and each man had to play his position.

"It'll be a very tough series. Montreal's a tough team with some good power hitters. We've both had good pitching," Garvey said.

Devil, Heel Share ACC Honors

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Duke linebacker Emmett Tilley and North Carolina defensive back Greg Poole have been named defensive players of the week in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

The 6-foot-1, 235-pound Tilley made 23 tackles in Duke's 14-7 victory over previously unbeaten Virginia Tech, including 11 solo hitts and three tackles for minus yardage.

Tilley, a Durham native, also recovered a fumble to snuff out a Virginia Tech drive near the end of the first half. The Blue Devils limited Virginia Tech to 114 yards passing and 182 yards rushing in the game.

Poole, a 6-foot-1, 199-pound junior from China Grove, had two interceptions from his cornerback position in the Tar Heels' 48-10 win over Wake Forest. He returned on for 68 yards and a touchdown in the second quarter, and returned another for 14 yards.

Poole also made nine tackles, including six solo stops, and returned three punts for 102 yards against the Deacons. A 34-yard return set up a field goal and a 56-yard return set up a Tar Heel touchdown.

Poole also stopped a Wake Forest drive by throwing Kenney Duckett for a three-yard loss when the Deacons were threatening on the North Carolina 8-yard line in the second quarter.

It was the first time that either player had been selected player of the week by a special committee of the Atlantic Coast Conference Sports Writers Association.

Earlier, the committee named North Carolina running back Tyrone Anthony and Clemson tight end Bubba Diggs as ACC offensive players of the week.

Anthony, a 6-1, 200-pound sophomore, rushed for 224 yards on 26 carries and two touchdowns as the fourth-ranked Tar Heels eased to a 48-10 win over Wake Forest.

The Pfafftown native, starting for the first time in his career after an injury to tailback Kelvin Bryant, had the most rushing yards by a back in the conference this season.

Winfield Glad To Be Playing

NEW YORK (AP) — It's October and for the first time in his life, Dave Winfield is playing baseball games in the autumn. He loves the feeling.

"This is what I wanted when I went into the market," said Winfield, who signed baseball's richest free agent contract with the New York Yankees last winter.

Winfield said one of the major reasons he left San Diego was the constant losing he had to endure with the Padres.

"Important games?" he said. "Yeah, I played in important games there. The All-Star Game and Opening Day. That was about it."

When the losing became habitual, Winfield knew he had to get out of San Diego.

"You play with a raggedy team, you play raggedy," he said. "That's why I had to leave. I couldn't take it anymore. I got tired of listening to the rhetoric. They kept saying they were going to build around me. Well, I'm from Missouri. Show me."

When the Padres didn't show Winfield enough, he showed them something by packing up and leaving town, accepting George Steinbrenner's megabucks offer to put on Yankee pinstripes.

"You are a different player with a different lineup around you," he said. "I'm worthy of playing on a team like this."

So far, his first taste of postseason action has agreed with the slugging outfielder. In five games against Milwaukee, he batted .350 with seven hits in 20 swings including three doubles.

He was in the Yankees dugout Sunday night when consecutive homers by Reggie Jackson and Oscar Gamble turned the decisive fifth game around. He shared the electricity of the moment with the fans and his teammates and for him, it was a brand new feeling, something he had never experienced in San Diego.

"It was wild," said Winfield. "You could see it in the Brewers' faces. You'd be scared, too. It was like they were saying, 'Oh, no, we got them excited.'"

Winfield laughed at the suggestion that kind of drama would ever have been possible in San Diego. For one thing, the Padres don't have a Jackson, whose sense of the dramatic borders on the awesome.

"Put Reggie Jackson on a team like that," said Winfield, "and that's his exit out of baseball.

"It's a demanding order to deliver in that situation," he said. "But there are a lot more games and there will be a lot more contributors before this is all over. You'll see a lot of different faces. And maybe some of the same faces. But you can't rely on one or two guys to do the job all the time. The other team's not going to let you do that."

Baseball is no simple business. "What goes into this game, it's not easy," said Winfield. But winning makes the tough part less difficult, and so does playing in October.

Andretti Is Appealing Appeal In 'Final' Decision Of Indy 500

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A ruling that Bobby Unser did not cheat would have been easier to accept than the one that acknowledged his guilt but altered the prescribed penalty, says Mario Andretti, who is appealing last week's reversal of the Indianapolis 500.

A special USAC appeal board fined Unser $40,000 for illegally passing cars under the yellow caution light, but the panel voted 2-1 to overturn a one-lap penalty that earlier had dropped him to second place behind Andretti.

The one-lap penalty was imposed a day after the May 24 race, but the panel said it should have been assessed at the time of the infraction to give Unser a chance to make up the lost lap.

"That's the part that really turned me around," Andretti said Monday in a telephone interview from his home at Nazareth, Pa. "It will make any future behavior (by a driver in a race) tough to control. That's the danger of this precedent, I can tell you that.

"How would you know how far you can go, taking advantage of every situation, knowing if you take advantage of it and cross the finish line first, the race will never be taken away from you regardless of what the rule book says if you have a good enough counsel working for you?"

Andretti said he decided to appeal Unser's victory "because I think I would have much easier accepted a verdict of 'no guilt' (on Unser's part) than a verdict of tampering with the penalty that violation definitely carries."

Andretti's attorney, Forrest Bowman, said the protest by Andretti — sent to USAC over the weekend — was based on the contention that "the court of appeals conducted the procedure in violation of the USAC rules book in that they did not give adequate notice of the hearing to all concerned parties."

"We had a right to receive notice of the proceedings," said Forrest. "The same notice that Penske Cars Ltd. (Unser's racing team) received or the Indy 500 stewards received, in order to participate in all of the pre-trial procedures in time to make objections to the constitution of the panel, to participate in pre-trial agreements and prepare for the hearing."

Although the scheduled hearing was well publicized before it was convened in June, Bowman said "the actual notice (to Andretti) was a telegram the morning the hearing started."

"We set out our contentions (to USAC President Dick King) what we believe to be his authority to expunge the decision of the court of appeals for failing to follow the rules."

King said on Monday that Bowman "calls it a protest, but it's not really a formal protest. It's a three-page letter that talks about a lot of things. Our attorney will contact Mr. Bowman and ask for a clarification of what he is trying to say."

King said the letter from Bowman is "asking us to go into Article 22 of our bylaws and set aside the decision of the appeal board, that it was not lawfully conducted."

As to whether Andretti's complaint is valid, King said, "I don't think so, but I'd rather wait to get all the facts before us before I comment whether it's meaningful. I think it was a hurry-up effort to get something to us. Maybe they thought the checks were in the mail this morning."

Earlier Monday, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway announced a revised prize list which would award $299,124 to Unser and a second-place prize of $128,974 to Andretti.

The Speedway said, however, no money would be paid until official word was received from USAC that all appeal procedures had been completed.

King said Andretti had 30 days to appeal last week's ruling to the Automobile Competition Committee for the United States (ACCUS), which is the domestic arm of the Federation Internationale de L'Automobile (FIA), the international governing body for auto racing.

Andretti said the protest went to USAC first "just to get the ball rolling. Then the procedure, I guess, would be to ACCUS."

The Speedway's revised first prize for Unser would be some $37,000 more than that which originally was to have gone to Andretti. The bulk of the difference is in accessory prize money by sponsoring companies and in lap prizes.

After the race, the original first prize of $262,424 for Andretti and second prize of $168,674 for Unser were kept in escrow by the Speedway. Unser's revised total includes $173,191 from the Speedway, $17,800 for leading 89 of the 200 laps, $107,800 in accessory prizes and $333 for riding in the annual Indy 500 Festival parade.

Andretti would receive $85,491 from the Speedway, $2,400 for leading 12 laps, $40,750 in accessory prizes and $333 for appearing in the parade.

The total purse of $1,609,375 was a record.

Billy—George Show Starts Day Early

NEW YORK (AP) — The American League Championship Series between the Oakland A's and New York Yankees gets under way tonight. The Billy & George Show, which both sides said would be put on hold, began Monday.

Martin, the A's headline-making manager, had barely finished telling the media that "it's not Billy against George, it's my team against his team," when Steinbrenner, the Yankees' headline-making owner, fired the first salvo.

Steinbrenner disclosed that he had met with AL President Lee MacPhail and asked that the league support the umpires in upholding the rules on spitballs during the best-of-five series. Opposing teams charged all season that several of the A's pitchers were not adverse to wetting the baseball now and then.

The Yankees were one of them. In May, the umpires examined the ball time and again in a game at Yankee Stadium pitched by Mike Norris, Martin's starter for tonight against New York's Tommy John.

"George intimidated the umpires and the American League," Martin said angrily. "It bothered Mike so bad that he couldn't pitch a good game. All the money in the world couldn't get it to happen now. I know how George works. I know the Yankees have a CIA on the club. But his power and money and influence stops right there.

"I guarantee you I won't allow it to happen again. I'll go out there and stop it." Martin's wrath abruptly subsided. "Otherwise," he said with a grin, "I'll have to run for commissioner and get rid of him."

"If it's upsetting, it's because the pitcher is suspect," Steinbrenner said.

The Yankee owner said there had been widespread allegations that Oakland pitchers were "loading up."

"They probably think ours are, too," he said. "The meeting with Lee was to get assurance that the umpires would totally enforce the rules of the game for both sides. I'm not out to harrass Billy's pitchers. Let the best man and the best team win. Lee assured me of the backing of the league office for the umpires.

"It's a championship series and we should decide who's best within the rules. I want to protect the batters on both sides. It's got to be that way in this game. Their guys and our guys will be under strict and scrupulous surveillance. The hitters should have a real shot at a legally thrown pitch. I want this for both teams."

The Billy & George Show, of course, has had several runs on and off Broadway in years past. It drew rave reviews in places like Chicago — it was at the airport that Martin made his ill-fated "one's a born liar and the other's convicted" crack about Reggie Jackson and Steinbrenner — and Kansas City, where Martin tearfully resigned under pressure as manager of the Yankees, and Bloomington, Minn., where Battling Billy decked a marshmallow salesman and was dismissed from his second go-round as Yankee pilot.

The die for this renewal was cast when the A's won the AL West title in a three-game sweep of the Kansas City Royals in the division playoff, while the Yankees won the East playoff by ending a two-game skid and beating the Milwaukee Brewers in the decisive fifth game.

Jackson, another of Martin's former sparring partners, also made news Monday when he disclosed that he will go into the free agent re-entry draft for a second time next month. Jackson said he would not sign with the Yankees before the draft.

Asked if he knew where he would be next season, Jackson said, "That depends on who drafts me."

Jackson, 35, batted .237 with 15 home runs and 54 runs batted in this season. He joined the Yankees in 1977 after declaring himself a free agent from the Baltimore Orioles and signed a $2.9 million contract, the richest in basebwll at the time.

Steinbrenner met with Jackson regarding a new contract during spring training but there have been no negotiations since. Relations between the two have often been strained.

How about another Billy & Reggie Show?

"If you have to do what I have to do as a ballplayer and get involved in a one-man battle, I'm a fool," said Jackson, who is not a fool. 'You make a lot of Billy and Reggie. I don't care to be used that way and I don't think he does. Reggie and Billy, antagonistic comments and negatives. It's degrading to me. I don't want that. Billy and I have been good since 1979."

Of course, Billy hasn't the managed the Yankees since 1979.

But Martin was hanging around a TV set Sunday night when Jackson hit a tremendous home run to rally the Yankees in the final game of their East Division playoff against Milwaukee.

"He's a great hitter," he said. "He's Mr. October, isn't he? But we're not gonna pitch around him. We're going right after him. We're not afraid of him."

Martin paused. "If you could draw the script of your lives, have your ups and downs, and all of a sudden you're back where you left ... It seems like I've been here before," he said.

Stay tuned. The Billy & George Show ... or the Billy & Reggie Show ... otherwise known as the American League Championship Series is about to begin.

Jackson Heads For The Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Where will Reggie Jackson be at the end of the season, when he becomes a free agent? "That depends on who drafts me," says the New York Yankee outfielder.

At any rate, he's not sure he'll be wearing Yankee pinstripes in 1982.

After a workout at Yankee Stadium Monday prior to the American League playoffs here with the Oakland A's, Jackson said he will go into the free agent re-entry draft for a second time next month. Jackson said he would not sign with the Yankees before the free-agent draft in November.

Once baseball's highest paid free agent, Jackson left the Baltimore Orioles to sign a five-year contract with the Yankees in 1977 for $2.9 million. The 35-year-old Jackson batted .237 with 15 home runs and 54 runs batted in this season.

Relations between Yankee owner George Steinbrenner and Jackson have often been strained. They met during spring training to discuss contract terms but there apparently have been no negotiations since.

Steinbrenner refused to discuss the situation on the eve of the playoffs.

"This is not the time to discuss that," the owner said after Jackson hit a two-run homer Sunday night to start the Yankees to a 7-3 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers in the final game of the AL East playoffs.

If Jackson signs with another team, he would be exempt from the compensation regulations of the draft because he would be a free agent repeater.

Luzinski Staying In Chicago

CHICAGO (AP) — Dropping his earlier plan to enter the free-agent draft, slugger Greg Luzinski will stay with the Chicago White Sox for at least the next three years at a reported $750,000 a year.

A new three-year contract signed by Luzinski also will allow him to stay with the White Sox organization in an unspecified position for the next decade, the American League club announced Monday.

The contract calls for Luzinski to spend at least the next three years as a player and makes the 30-year-old power hitter one of the five or six highest-paid players in the American League, said his agent, Jack Sands.

When he completes his playing career, Luzinski has the option of remaining with the White Sox, probably as a radio or television commentator. However, the contract does not specify what role he will play in the organization.

This season, Luzinski batted .265 with 21 home runs, 65 RBIs and 11 game-winning hits, leading the White Sox in the last three categories.

A native of suburban Mount Prospect, Luzinski was purchased from the Philadelphia Phillies last spring after spending nine seasons with the National League team.

In other White Sox developments, officials said Jim Leyland, manager of the Evansville, Ind., Triplets, has signed a contract to coach third base for the White Sox during the 1982 season.

Leyland, 36, will replace Bobby Winkles, who has been named Chicago's director of player development.

B. Mandrell Again Is CMA Entertainer Of Year

TEARY WINNER — Barbara Mandrell is in tears moments after she won entertainer of the year honors from the Country Music Association last night. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Barbara Mandrell, the only country music star with a prime-time television show, triumphed at the Country Music Association's awards gala by becoming the first person ever named entertainer of the year twice.

The 32-year-old singer also was named for a second time as top female vocalist during the nationally televised ceremony Monday night at the Grand Ole Opry House.

"God's good; I'm proud," Miss Mandrell said. "This means the people like the TV show. The work is worth it."

The top male vocalist award went to 50-year-old George Jones, a veteran who won the same award last year and who sang with Miss Mandrell on her biggest hit this year, "I Was Country (When Country Wasn't Cool)."

Miss Mandrell's victory cost her $20.

She had bet country music disc jockey Ralph Emery of Nashville that she wouldn't win. After the show, she was clutching a $20 bill and searching the backstage area for Emery.

"It's unbelievable," said Miss Mandrell, who also was a co-host of the program along with Mac Davis.

Alabama, a fast-rising four-piece band that was playing for tips just 15 months ago, joined Miss Mandrell as a double winner. The Fort Payne, Ala., group was named vocal group of the year and instrumental group of the year. The honor for top vocal group had gone to the Statler Brothers eight of the last nine years.

Until Miss Mandrell won entertainer of the year for the second straight year, the Country Music Association had never given the award twice to the same person in its 15-year history. Miss Mandrell was named top female vocalist in 1979.

"Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters" is broadcast Saturday nights on NBC. The variety show, starring Miss Mandrell and younger sisters Louise and Irlene, had just gone on the air last year when Miss Mandrell was first picked entertainer of the year.

Jones is a former house painter whose off-stage battles with booze and bankruptcy have nearly overshadowed a successful singing career.

His seven-year marriage to country queen Tammy Wynette ended in divorce in 1975, he received hospital treatment for alcoholism about two years ago and he filed for bankruptcy in 1978, citing alcoholism for much or his financial trouble.

Pioneer singer Vernon Dalhart and veteran Grand Ole Opry announcer Grant Turner were chosen for induction into the Country Music Hall of Fame. Dalhart, who died in 1948, recorded country music's first million seller, "The Prisoner's Song." Turner, 69, who has been an Opry announcer for more than 30 years, said, "I want to be a guide at the hall of fame when I'm 92."

Other winners were "Elvira," by the Oak Ridge Boys, single of the year; "I Believe in You," by Don Williams, album of the year; "He Stopped Loving Her Today," song of the year, honoring songwriters Bobby Braddock and Curly Putman; David Frizzell and Shelly West, vocal duo of the year; Chet Atkins, top instrumentalist; and Terri Gibbs, horizon award for a promising newcomer.

Miss Gibbs, who is blind, quipped, "This time last year I was sitting home watching this on television."

With two pianos onstage, Mickey Gilley and Ronnie Milsap performed a piano tribute to rock 'n' roll pioneer Jerry Lee Lewis, who was hospitalized with a severe stomach ailment this summer. Lewis later received a long standing ovation when he walked onstage from the audience.

About 5,200 singers, musicians, songwriters and other professionals in country music were eligible to vote.

Silverman Joins MGM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former television executive Fred Silverman will head a new entertainment company affiliated with United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, UA officials have announced.

Although the exact nature and name of the new concern was not disclosed, it was described Monday as an independent company "that will embrace all facets of the entertainment industry."

"My association with UA and MGM is the fulfillment of my 22 years in the business," Silverman said.

Silverman, 44, resigned in June as president and chief executive of NBC after failing to lift the network out of the TV ratings doldrums. Before that, he was president of ABC Entertainment and head of programming at the CBS television network.

David Begelman, UA chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said Silverman "brings a guaranteed quotient of creative dynamism to UA and MGM."

Silverman's partner in the new venture is to be George Reeves, who worked with Silverman when both were at ABC, UA officials said.

Hope Pinned On Comedy Lineup

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC rose to the top of the ratings in 1976 on the strength of its situation comedies. Its ability to wrest the No. 1 spot from CBS this year rests again on how well ABC makes America laugh.

Tonight's lineup is intact from last year, when "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley," "Three's Company" and "Too Close for Comfort," won the night for ABC. They may be popular, but they aren't very funny.

"Three's Company" is the night's headliner. It's the kind of show that proves the Moral Majority's point about titillating TV. In last week's season premiere episode, cameras were situated at angles so they could pan and pander Jenilee Harrison's chest and Joyce DeWitt's rear end.

It's really a shame since Miss DeWitt and John Ritter are really good comic actors with deft touch and timing. If they had better dialogue, this show could be more than a popular success. But it's obvious that ABC prefers the low road and some of the stupidest characters in TV.

Don Knotts, landlord Ralph Furley, plays a buffoon and Richard Kline is Larry, a one-track sexist. They may be the most irritating characters around.

At least the new roommate, Terri (Priscilla Barnes), is a big improvement over the scatterbrained Cindy Snow (Jenilee Harrison). Miss Barnes plays a nurse and gives the show some sophistication. She says she doesn't plan to wear the skimpy outfits of her predecessor Suzanne Somers, the original dumb blond.

For sophisticated comedy, we'll take ABC's less successful Thursday night schedule: "Mork and Mindy," "Best of the West," "Barney Miller" and "Taxi." But the best part of that lineup now is a program filling in until "Barney Miller" is ready — "Bosom Buddies."

The dialogue on "Buddies" is some of the funniest and most topical on TV. Main characters Kip and Henry have the wittiest, warmest relationship this side of Hawkeye and B.J of "M-A-S-H."

"Buddies" has been hurt by its silly premise, two men dressing as women to get cheap housing in a female-only apartment. ABC should forget the disguises and concentrate on the friendship.

Tom Hanks, who plays Kip, is a marvelous comedy talent, who would seem equally at home in a repertory company like "Saturday Night Live." His wise-guy character works nicely with the vulnerability of Henry (Peter Scolari.)

"Buddies" was 43rd in the ratings last year. If it develops a following, ABC will probably find another place for it, possibly Saturday night because "King's Crossing" isn't ready to be broadcast.

Although "Mork and Mindy" is not high-brow humor, Robin Williams is very gifted. The show, once top-rated, could benefit from the comic eccentricity of Jonathan Winters, who will arrive as the baby Mork — that's right, Mork — delivers. Since this is family entertainment, Mindy marries him first.

"Barney Miller" and "Taxi" have excellent ensemble casts with rich, vibrant characters. At one time "Taxi" was first rate but last year's second-half shows slipped a bit.

Dan Rather Has A Problem

EASTON, Conn. (AP) — You might say that veteran reporter Dan Rather is having a slight problem doing a little muckraking.

The anchorman of the CBS "Evening News" recently bought a new home on the line between the Fairfield County towns of Easton and Weston. He wants to dredge a pond that is on the Easton side of his property and deposit the muck and silt on the Weston side.

But Weston's Conservation Commission has balked at the idea. The commission says it wants more information on the project before allowing the dumping.
