Funds And Study Delay Four-Laning

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Right-of-way acquisition for scheduled improvements to U.S. 264 east of Wilson - the first link of a planned four-lane program linking Greenville to Raleigh and the western half of the state - has been delayed by highway funding problems and the entire project is being reviewed.

Transportation Secretary W.R. Roberson, who has given the 264 project his blessings, said in an interview that it is included in other state highway proposals that are being subjected to an intensive study by Department of Transportation planners.

Roberson said one of the alternatives being considered is dropping two of the proposed four lanes for the new highway, which has been actively backed for nearly a decade by private citizens, businessmen and others in eastern North Carolina as a needed transportation artery to Interstate 95 at Wilson and on to the state capital and points west.

Roberson, whose home is in Washington, said no decision had been reached on what projects, if any, would be changed as a result by the study being carried by his department's programming committee.

But he said U.S. 264 is "part of the overall plan" being considered.

The scheduled improvements "are very much in the works," Roberson said, but may be altered to fit available funding. "We have enough funds to pave about 40 two-lane miles, for highways such as this, for (each of) the next seven years," he said. "It's a matter of stretching the money."

Roberson confirmed earlier reports that the department was considering the possible deletion of two lanes on scheduled four-lane roads, such as U.S. 264. "That is one of the alternatives," he said. He noted, however, that the existing four-lane section of U.S. 264 between Wilson and the Zebulon area was designed initially as a two-lane road "and the other two lanes were quickly added."

Other possibilities include the replacement of cloverleaf intersections with graded crossings, which provide less safety for converging traffic.

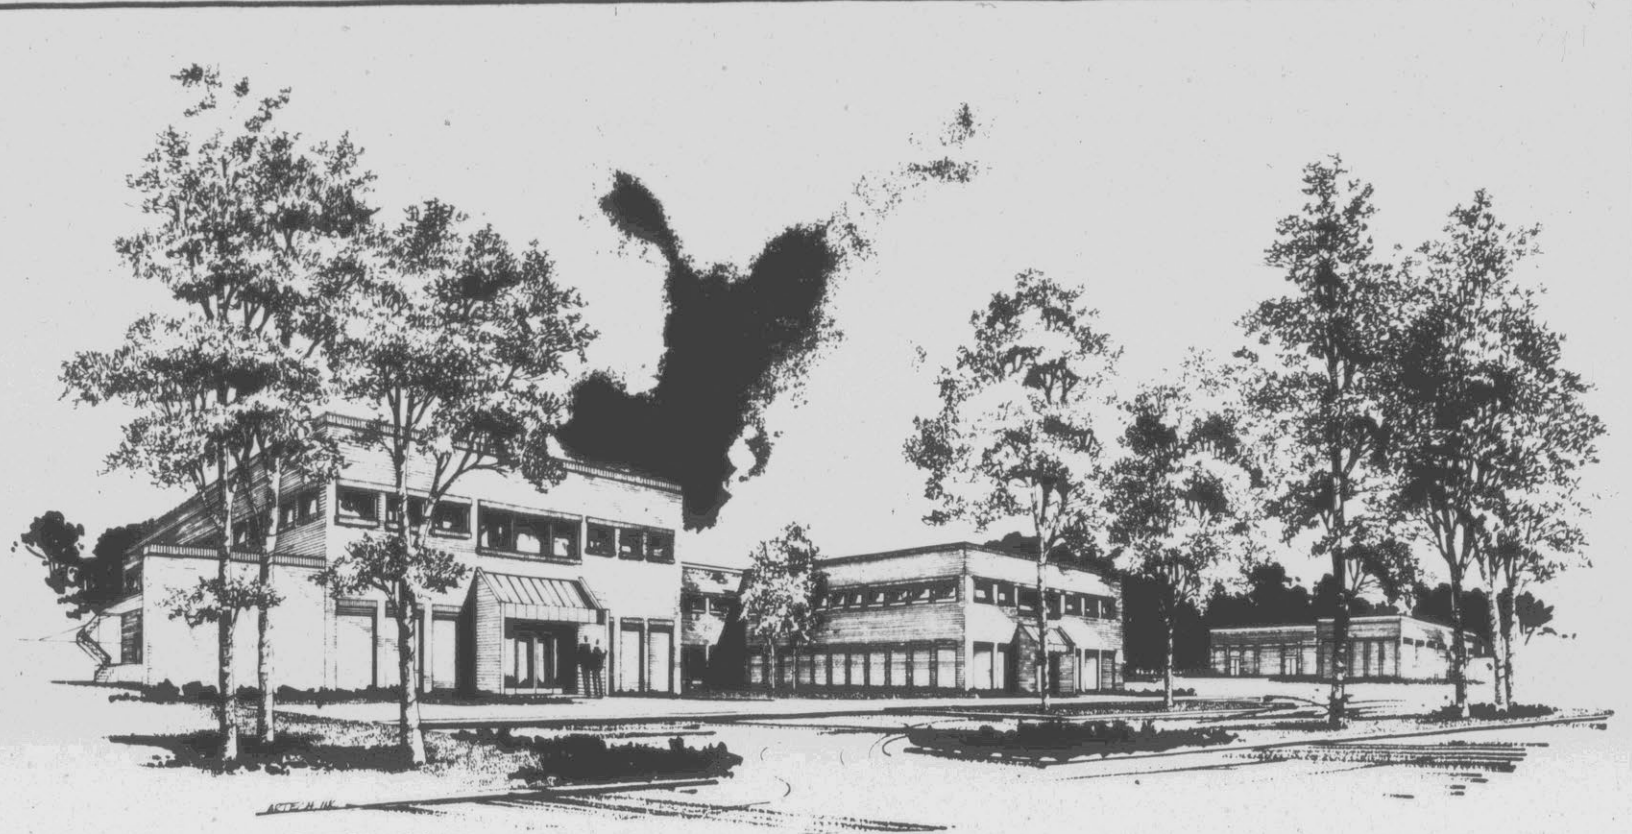

Roberson said plans for right-of-way acquisition would continue for the 264 project. However, a spokesman for the department's right-of-way branch said Tuesday afternoon that appraisals for the first segment of the highway improvement, in Wilson County, had been delayed indefinitely.

"We had tentative authorization to go on with the appraisals," said the spokesman, who asked that he not be identified, "and we were holding up on that. Just recently, I understood that something would be coming down to give us more authorization, but we don't know for what."

The Legislature, responding to alarm from the Transportation Department and the governor's office, approved an increase of 3 cents a gallon in the gasoline tax this year. That increase and higher fees for other items provided an additional $121 million for the state's Highway Fund.

However, Gov. Jim Hunt wrote legislators earlier this month that no funds for matching federal construction grants will be available after June 30, 1983, unless more state funds are provided.

Most of the new money raised through the increased tax has been earmarked for maintenance of existing highways.

RENDERING PRESENTED AT MEETING . . . treatment facility now under construction, was presented at the meeting Tuesday night of the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Policy Step Mubarak Pledges Honor By Utilities Camp David Agreements

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission last night approved an amendment to the water/sewer policy affecting service outside the extraterritorial jurisdiction areas of the city and elected commission member Margaret Wirth vice-chairman of the board.

The change in the water/sewer policy provides that "requests for water and sewer extensions to serve areas lying completely or partially outside of the City's extraterritorial limits shall not be considered by the Commission until the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission has reviewed and made written comments to the Commission concerning the proposed area or development plans, as they relate to the future growth and development of the City of Greenville."

A number of requests in the past few months for service outside the city's extraterritorial planning area prompted the policy rules amendment.

The election of Mrs. Wirth as vice-chairman resulted from the resignation last month of Eugene Prescott who served as vice-chairman. The City Council has appointed William H. Taft Jr. to serve Prescott's unexpired term, until March 1983.

Two presentations were made at the meeting. L. C. Cheek, vice president and secretary of Olsen Associates, the engineering firm that designed the city's new water treatment plant now under construction and the firm hired to do final design work on the proposed new sewage treatment plant, presented the commission with a large pen and ink rendering of the new water treatment facility.

Also presented at the meeting were two safety award plaques from the National Safety Council to GUC's Water and Sewer Department. The first of the awards was an "Award of Commendation" given for participation in the NSC competition to participants who had no lost-time accidents during 1980.

The second award was the "First Place Award" in the competition, given to GUC's Water and Sewer Department in recognition of the department's 427,170 employee hours - from February 20, 1978 through December 31, 1980 - without a lost-time accident.

A number of bids were awarded by the commission. They included: $1.21 million for 36-inch and 24-inch water transmission lines to run from the new water treatment plant to the distribution system at several points, to Bryant Utilities Construction of High Point; $97,879 for the Westside Sewer Outfall line to serve the area west of the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center to State Road 1204, to So-Par Utilities; $47,580 for 100 transformers to Westinghouse Electric Supply Co.; $40,536 for 36,000 feet of aluminum wire to Westinghouse Electric Supply Co.; $42,874 for 52,000 pounds of aluminum wire to Eastern Electric Supply Co.; $9,847 for an air compressor to N.C. Equipment Co.; $14,900 for an electric meter test board to Westinghouse Electric Supply Co.; and $72,676 for a line truck to Altec Industries, Inc.

The commission also awarded bids for 2,000 load management switches to Regency Electronics, Inc. for $119,000.

Commissioners were told that from June, 1978 when the load management program was started, to May 1982, the commission should realize net savings of $965,227, after giving customer credits totaling $465,227 and paying for the capital costs, operation and maintenance of the system.

In other business, commissioners heard a brief review of the fiscal 1980-81 audit report but took no action on accepting the report until further study.

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - President Hosni Mubarak declared today that Egypt will honor the Camp David accords with Israel and all other foreign commitments, and that the Reagan administration will continue as a "full partner" in the search for peace.

Mubarak also called for national unity, urging all Egyptians, whether Moslem or Christian, to "rise above bitterness and trifles."

Mubarak was sworn in as Egypt's fourth president eight days after the assassination of President Anwar Sadat. The government said he won more than 98 percent of the votes in a Tuesday referendum to succeed Sadat, who was assassinated Oct. 6.

A group called Al Aqsa claimed responsibility for the murder today and in a statement from Cyprus warned Mubarak would be killed if he followed Sadat's policies. It was the fourth group to claim responsibility for the assassination, but its authenticity was not immediately known.

Mubarak said Egypt would honor all its international treaties and asked other nations to honor their commitments to Egypt.

"Camp David, and the peace with Israel, will continue in all its letter and commitment," he said. "We shall continue the autonomy negotiations to put the Palestinians on the beginning of the road to get their lawful rights."

"And we, as Sadat our hero said before, we do not speak in the name of the Palestinians, and we do not claim to set the final settlement. The Palestinian people must also shoulder their responsibility. We shall not refrain from

Vice Chancellor Don Lemish Is Departing Post

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

Vice Chancellor Don Lemish, citing anonymous telephone threats and the uncertainty of work under a new chancellor, has become the second high-level administrator at East Carolina University to resign in the past five weeks.

Lemish announced his resignation, effective Jan. 5, in a letter to outgoing ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer. Lemish said he would become vice president for institutional advancement at Longwood College in Farmville, Va.

Brewer resigned Sept. 7 during a highly publicized dispute with ECU trustees after it became known that he was an applicant for the presidency of West Virginia University. Trustee critics said they had not been aware of his interest in the WVU job until they read published reports about it.

Trustees contacted today also said they had not been informed of Lemish's resignation by Brewer, although a news release issued by the university said Brewer has named F. Douglas Moore to serve as acting vice chancellor effective Jan. 5. Moore currently is director of research development.

Lemish, like Brewer, has had a controversial tour in his 2 1/2 years at East Carolina. Criticism became especially vocal last summer when Thomas Willis resigned as director of the East Carolina Regional Development Institute. Willis, who had headed the institute for 17 years, contended Lemish had harassed him.

Lemish said today he decided to leave East Carolina Tuesday, but acknowledged that he had been considering the move in recent weeks. He said telephone threats to his job

Views Outlined By Candidates

Five City Council candidates and two mayoral aspirants who took part in last night's "issues forum" agreed that city leaders must take a close look at Greenville's fiscal situation in light of expected revenue pinches.

Expressing their views at the forum, held by the Pitt County Republican Party, were Council candidates Janice Buck, Ed Carter, incumbent William Hadden Jr., George Pugh, and Stuart Shinn, and mayoral candidates Percy Cox and Beatrice Terry. Eleven Council and three mayoral candidates have filed for the Nov. 3 elections here.

Ms. Buck, president and manager of Buck Supply Co., said many principles that apply to managing a company also apply to managing the city and she said services of the city and county must not be duplicated. She suggested a study to "see if services can be combined to cut the cost of government" and she cited a need for better city-county communications.

She said the city must look at ways to cut costs to continue services that the federal government may not continue to fund. She said the city must look at "where the money will come from" and all areas must be considered. Ms. Buck said some areas want to be annexed and Greenville Utilities Commission "maybe can share some more funds with us."

Citing a need for "better quality services with less income," she said the city will have to increase its tax base. She said the federal government is handing responsibility back to city and state government and that situation "will

Peace Prize For Office Of U.N.

OSLO, Norway (AP) - The Nobel Peace Prize for 1981 was awarded today to the office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

The Norwegian Nobel committee announced the award to the office of the high commissioner, which was established by the United Nations to provide international protection for refugees and to seek solutions to refugee problems.

The office, headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland, also received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1954.

Professor John Sanness, chairman of the five-member Norwegian Nobel committee, said the office was awarded this year's peace prize of $180,000 "because it has carried out work of major importance to assist refugees, despite many political difficulties with which it has had to contend."

HATTERAS LIGHTHOUSE FUND

The Rev. James Mann of Kinston began a 100-mile hike Tuesday in an effort to raise funds for preservation of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse. Carrying a 30-pound pack, Mann left Springer Mountain, Ga. and will hike the Appalachian Trail to the North Carolina border. He is seeking pledges for the fund he established at East Federal Savings and Loan Association in the name of the historic lighthouse. Checks may be made to "Save Cape Hatteras Lighthouse" and sent c/o Felix Harvey, 114 N. Queen St., Kinston, N.C. 28501. Persons interested in helping rescue the structure from erosion are urged to make their contribution.

Selected 3 Morehead Scholarship Candidates

Three Pitt County seniors, one from D.H. Conley High School and two from Rose High, were selected Tuesday, October 13 from 19 candidates as nominees for the prestigious Morehead Scholarships.

The three nominees are Robert Richard (Rob) Ehinger, a student at Conley, and two Rose students, William Stuart (Bill) Bost III and Elizabeth Ann Longino. The field of candidates included four from Ayden-Grifton High; two from D.H. Conley; two from Farmville Central High; two from North Pitt High; and nine from Rose High.

- Rob Ehinger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frederick Ehinger of Greenville. He transferred to Conley during his sophomore year from West Seneca, New York. Rob is a member of the National Honor Society, the Math Club and is president of the Science and French Clubs. He has been a student government representative and took part in the N.C. Science Olympiad. He is also active in church work and has served with a Youth Group. Rob attended Governor's school, and while there was selected to the All-Star Softball Team. In school sports at Conley, he has been active in tennis, swimming and soccer. His hobbies and interests include stamp collecting and music.

- Bill Bost, son of Dr. and Mrs. William S. Bost, Jr. is a National Merit Scholarship semi-finalist and is a member of the National Honor Society. He was a marshal, president of his junior class and holds membership in the Key and Monogram Clubs. Bill is an Explorer Scout, and participates in church and Sunday School activities. In community activities, he regularly visits elderly people in nursing homes, and has helped in fund raising events for various public service programs. He was nominated for, but declined attendance at Governor's School. Bill's hobbies and interests cover several sports, music - piano, flute and guitar, and traveling.

- Elizabeth Ann Longino is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Longino. She is a member of the National Honor Society, the Student Council and Honor Committee, and belongs to the Beta, Key, Monogram, Anchor Clubs and the Juniorettes. Elizabeth is also an Explorer Scout and has worked as Leader-in-Training in summer camp work. In church work, she is active as a church and Sunday School member, and serves as an acolyte. Community activities in which she has been involved include fund raising projects for charitable functions. Elizabeth studies dancing, is a cheerleader and performed in a school play. Her hobbies include all types of water sports and sewing. The three member selection committee was comprised of Robert Michaels, acting chairman, Dianne Warren of Farmville and John Whichard. The three Pitt County nominees will compete with other district winners in a district selection to be held in December.

The Morehead Awards program was established in 1945 by the late John Motley Morehead, a native of North Carolina and an 1891 graduate of UNC-Chapel Hill.

security had caused some concern as well as the scheduled departure of Brewer, who headed a search committee that chose him for the ECU post.

He said the telephone calls began in mid-September after Brewer's resignation was accepted.

"When Dr. Brewer resigned," Lemish said, "I was contacted by a number of other institutions, everything from UCLA to Longwood... I have received some threatening calls."

"It was very extensive for one weekend," Lemish said, adding that the calls appeared to be "orchestrated." He said the callers eventually stopped.

But, Lemish said, "It's that kind of thing that has made me re-examine my commitment to higher education. I just felt there were other opportunities."

Asked about the controversial nature of his role at East Carolina, Lemish said he was at a loss to explain why it had developed in that manner.

"I came here making sure we were doing the kind of things we were hired to do. I think we've done all of those things," Lemish said.

"You have a job to do as far as trying to work for quality in an institution. That's what we tried to do here. I obviously was accused of some things in the Willis thing that were not true. For whatever reason, I don't know. They were not true."

Lemish said he and his family came to East Carolina with the "feeling this was home... It will be difficult to leave. I'm going to an opportunity that will be very exciting and hope to make another mark in education."

At Longwood Lemish will be responsible for fund raising, alumni affairs, public relations and publications. Those duties are similar to his functions at ECU, but he said they were not as extensive as his current responsibilities.

Three trustees contacted today said they had not known about Lemish's resignation until after it was announced publicly. Each, however, wished Lemish well in his new job.

Troy Pate of Goldsboro, a former trustee chairman, said he "was disappointed that I found out about it (Lemish's resignation) in the newspaper. I felt like the board of trustees should have been informed."

"I also was disappointed that a name has been advanced as acting chancellor without consultation with the board. I feel that... a senior administrative position like that would have called (for consultation). A conference at least with the executive committee would have been in order," Pate said.

Ashley Futrell of Washington, who became trustee chairman just before Brewer submitted his resignation, said he and the other trustees "appreciate Mr. Lemish's work and contribution to East Carolina University."

"I did not know about it (the resignation), but he's got a right to resign and, if he feels a question of his dedication about East Carolina, he's probably doing the right thing," Futrell said.

"What we are looking for at East Carolina is people who bleed purple and sweat gold."

Trustee Clifton Moore, a Currituck County businessman, was not aware that Lemish had resigned until he was contacted by The Daily Reflector.

Futrell, who heads a search committee responsible for recommending a new chancellor, confirmed today that former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan plus "a dozen to 15 people" have "been nominated" by various sources as a potential candidate.

But Futrell cautioned, "There is a distinct difference between a nomination and an application. If there has been any application received, I'm not aware of it."

The Associated Press reported today that Morgan declined to say whether he was interested in the job.

"I'm not ruling it out, but by that, I'm not saying I'm interested," Morgan said. Morgan, a lawyer in Harnett County and former state attorney general, is a former chairman of the ECU trustees.

Brewer's resignation is effective June 30, but he has requested leave at a date convenient to the university. William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system, has given no indication when he will grant the leave and appoint an acting chancellor.

Futrell has said he believes the next chancellor should be from the region or should be willing to remain in the area.

"My opinion is that the committee will look a little closer to home," Futrell said.

The search committee has encouraged the public to submit written statements expressing their views on the chancellorship and who should fill it. Futrell has scheduled a public meeting at ECU next Tuesday for oral presentations by the public.

force us to start doing things for one another, be more considerate...show more concern for one another."

Carter, mentioning the "financial situation we are in," said he was "aware we were in trouble" but after looking at local financial reports and expected federal cuts, "I realized we are in a desperate situation."

Carter, former member and chairman of the Greenville Board of Education, stated, "We have to tighten up." He also pointed to a need for eliminating duplicated services and consolidating city and county services. He said city and county government officials should meet on a regular basis to discuss common problems.

Observing that 20 percent of the use of local recreational facilities involves citizens from outside the city and 29 percent of local emergency medical treatment services are utilized by citizens who are not paying for them, Carter said "we must put the accountability on people who are using the facilities."

He told the small gathering that, "I love Greenville. I'm concerned." He noted that he is the only black to have served as school board chairman.

Hadden, who is seeking his third term on the Council, said the "big issue is how to do with less."

Hadden said it is "almost frightening" how much local income and budget figures are affected by the federal government, with most programs funded on a 75 to 80 percent federal basis.

He said general revenue sharing, where the city received $650,000 last year, faces cuts and the future of the funds, which are used for the library, transit operations, and airport, among other areas, are threatened. Transit grants are also being questioned by the Reagan administration, he said, and funding beyond the present year Community Development grant is in question. In addition, funding for the waste water treatment facility is in jeopardy.

"We have to find a way of meeting service needs for our citizens without these funds," he said, citing the possibility of "more and more user fees" for users of local facilities. He cited a need for city-county cooperation.

Pugh, who said he has operated Pugh's Tire and Service Center at the same Greene Street location for 35 years, said he has "seen a lot of things grow and I would like to have a part in helping to manage the city. I feel I could do a good job."

Pugh said he was astounded to see the mayor's advisory report and noted that "we can't keep going the way we are going." Every taxpayer, he said, should read the report. He said that "things have got to be cut."

Mentioning the GUCO fund turnover to the city, Pugh said that he did not "know whether getting more money...would cause our bills to go up."

He said running the city will "take a lot of hard work...doing things together." He added, "If the (advisory) report is true, we are in trouble."

Shinn, an electrical and plumbing contractor, said a "series of minor irritations prompted me to run" for the Council. He said he has gained expertise to offer in city management through his business experience. He added that businessmen who have survived here through the years "are probably pretty good managers."

Shinn, saying he is a conservative, contended that "we have to take a bath and get this thing back on the road to fiscal responsibility." He said that residential areas need to be annexed but he said he did not want to jeopardize any industry that might come to Greenville "or change anyone's mind about coming to Greenville."

He observed that the city should not "jump out there and grab the industrial park. Let them sit there and expand."

Shinn said, "There are some things in city government that we could conceivably do without." He said he is a "question asker."

Cox, who served over six terms as a councilman and as mayor from 1975 to 1979, said he would oppose the annexation of the industrial park as recommended by the feasibility study here. Cox said annexation of the area would be "like killing the goose that lays the golden eggs."

The former mayor said the city should do everything it can to promote industrial development here. Expansion of current industry will take place, he said, if annexation is not pursued. He said annexation "would cost money" since at least one industry has indicated it might relocate its inventory if taken into the city.

Cox said it will take hard work to get funding for local projects, such as the waste water treatment facility but he said the money is there. He said if city leaders had waited for funds in order to undertake the central business district project, "we wouldn't have had it."

The city must build its tax base, he asserted. Cox said revenue sharing will be cut 12 percent next year and more over the next two years and county residents should pay for using local recreational services.

He said recreation is needed for senior citizens and young people, noting that "if we keep them competing and off the streets, we are money ahead."

Cox said if he is elected, there will again be a mayor's office on the first floor at city hall where "people can come in and see me."

Ms. Terry, a recently retired school teacher, said budgets will have to be cut and people should be educated "that they will have to cut a little shorter."

She mentioned the city's recent move to purchase a share in municipal power agency facilities and said the move "is a start."

Ms. Terry expressed a desire for the continuation of a progressive educational system and she said a standard of excellence must be maintained to "train people to be leaders of tomorrow."

Noting increases in municipal costs, she said that "we must devise strategies for adjustment." Work must be done, she added, to improve the quality of streets and sidewalks in the city and better lighting is needed. A review of the Blue Law is also needed, she said.

Community services should also receive emphasis, Ms. Terry said, mentioning the need for lower income housing to be made available to those in need. She also expressed a concern for the elderly, historical preservation, and maintaining the recreation system.

Slide Lecture Given By Norwood Barnes

FARMVILLE — A slide lecture highlighted the Saturday meeting of the Major Benjamin May Chapter Daughters of the American Revolution held at the chapter house here.

Norwood Barnes, president of Rackley-Barnes Antiques, Inc., Wilson, spoke on "Cantonware—its many forms and usage in the early 1800's." Cantonware is one of the china patterns handpainted in porcelain and from China. Mrs. Tony Holland, program chairman, introduced the speaker.

The state regent's project was announced as "Updating the NCDAR Genealogical Register" and the president general's project is "A Legacy Preserved."

Mrs. R.T. Williams, regent, welcomed members and guests. Miss Elizabeth Lang, chaplain, held a candlelight memorial service for Novella Horton Murray. Mrs. Annie W. Scribner of Bethel was introduced as a guest by Mrs. Arch Flanagan.

Members were invited to the 207th anniversary celebration of the Edenton Tea Party Oct. 24 in Edenton and on Sunday, Oct. 25.

The mayor's proclamation will be printed in the "Farmville Enterprise" and it was suggested that a bell ringing be held at noon Oct. 19 in celebration of the Yorktown Bicentennial. The calendar of events will include: Oct. 16, Festival Day; Oct. 17, Armed Forces Day; Oct. 18, Day of Prayer and Thanksgiving; Oct. 19, Victory Day, band concert, presidential review, high noon bell ringing, surrender ceremony, dedication and presentation of DAR marker to the Honorable James Watt, secretary of interior and Yorktown Day Association ceremony.

Meeting hostesses included Mrs. Arch Flanagan, Mrs. W. Leroy Bass, Mrs. Joe Kue and Miss Lang. November hostesses will be Mrs. Ernest Hardee, Mrs. Edward Lee Hill, Mrs. Thomas E. Hales, Mrs. F. McCoy Tripp and Mrs. Carl Betts Jr.

Mooseheart Establishment Is Program

Past Deputy Grand Regent Ada Jones spoke on the founding and establishment of Mooseheart, the child city of the Moose, at the chapter night meeting of Chapter 1308 Women of the Moose.

The theme for the evening was Christmas in October. The purpose was to raise money to provide Christmas presents for the children at Mooseheart and the aged at Moosehaven.

Mooseheart Committee Chairman Marjorie Jackson was in charge of the program.

New members enrolled were Anita Lyles and Arlene Dowd.

Leona Givens and Hazel Barnes were honored during the meeting. Senior Regent Melba Hargett presided at the meeting. The next meeting date is Oct. 22.

Dear Abby Timely Advice Comes From Concerned Agent

By Abigail Van Buren
 © 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been an independent insurance agent for 22 years, but this past year has been one for the books — burglary claims left and right!

Last week one of my clients had her home burglarized. The place was a mess, and when I asked her to itemize what was stolen, she didn't know where to begin. She had no written inventory, no photos, no receipts, no cancelled checks — nothing to substantiate her claim.

I asked if she had received a letter I had sent to clients explaining how and why to keep property records. She said she had, but she lived in a "good" neighborhood, and besides, she didn't have time to bother making lists or keeping records.

Abby, please tell people know important it is to list and document their property! If you have a fire or robbery, the burden of proof of loss is yours.

Go through your home and photograph every room from various angles. Take pictures of all your furs, jewelry, silverware, TVs, stereo and appliances. And while you're at it, engrave everything you can with your license number or some kind of identification. (Utensils for engraving are available at most hardware stores.) Start today to keep receipts, invoices, cancelled checks — anything to prove ownership. If you have valuable gifts, list the name and addresses of the givers. Keep your records current, and store them at a location away from your home. Inventory forms are available from most insurance companies.

If you act on the above suggestions and have a loss, it will speed up the claims settlement. Remember, it could happen to you!

CONCERNED AGENT, SEATTLE

DEAR AGENT: Thanks for a timely column piece. And to those who have already been ripped off, just place a sign in your window: "WE GAVE."

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of four children, two of whom were adopted. Several years ago our infant son awoke almost comatose and was rushed to the hospital, where it was discovered that he had diabetes! Because we had absolutely no indication that he was diabetic, we almost lost him.

Abby, I think it is essential that parents who have given up a child for adoption give a complete medical history of both birth parents and grandparents if possible.

K.C.S., SAN MATEO, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. S.: I agree. I hope that this vital information will become a routine part of all official adoptions.

DEAR ABBY: I need help with a problem I can't discuss with anyone I know. I'm a 70-year-old widow, in good health and living in my own home, which is paid for. A man about my age has asked me to marry him, and I've said yes. He lives in another state in an apartment building he owns. He's willing to move to my town and even to my home.

My problem: Shouldn't we have a financial arrangement beforehand? He has grown children and so do I. I don't want his money, but I think he should assume my financial support when I marry him. How do I bring this up?

Should we get a lawyer? I'm afraid that would look like I didn't trust him. I do, but I want my children's inheritance left intact.

Thanks for any advice you can offer.
 SECOND TIME AROUND

DEAR SECOND: You most certainly should have a lawyer draw up a prenuptial agreement beforehand stating clearly who pays for what after you marry as well as what kind of settlement there will be should the marriage end in divorce.

You should bring it up, in plain English, unless you can communicate better in another language.

He's no doubt just as eager to have his financial responsibility (and yours) clearly defined before he says, "I do."

Although some people consider brown eggs superior to white, there is no difference in quality.

City Is Better Place

Greenville's Redevelopment Commission, after nearly 25 years of changing the face of Greenville, will officially come to an end on Jan. 11.

The conclusion date was set by the City Council last week. Some of the functions of the commission will be taken over by the Department of Community Development of the city, and some of the closing out work on urban renewal projects will be completed by Redevelopment Executive Director Joe Laney under contract.

It is virtually impossible to envision what Greenville would be like today if the Redevelopment Commission had not been created. Through urban renewal the commission has removed slum housing in the Shore Drive area and developed in its place a splendid Town Common. New office and institutional buildings now stand where delapidated housing once was located.

The commission also administered the Central Business District project which rehabilitated the city's downtown business area.

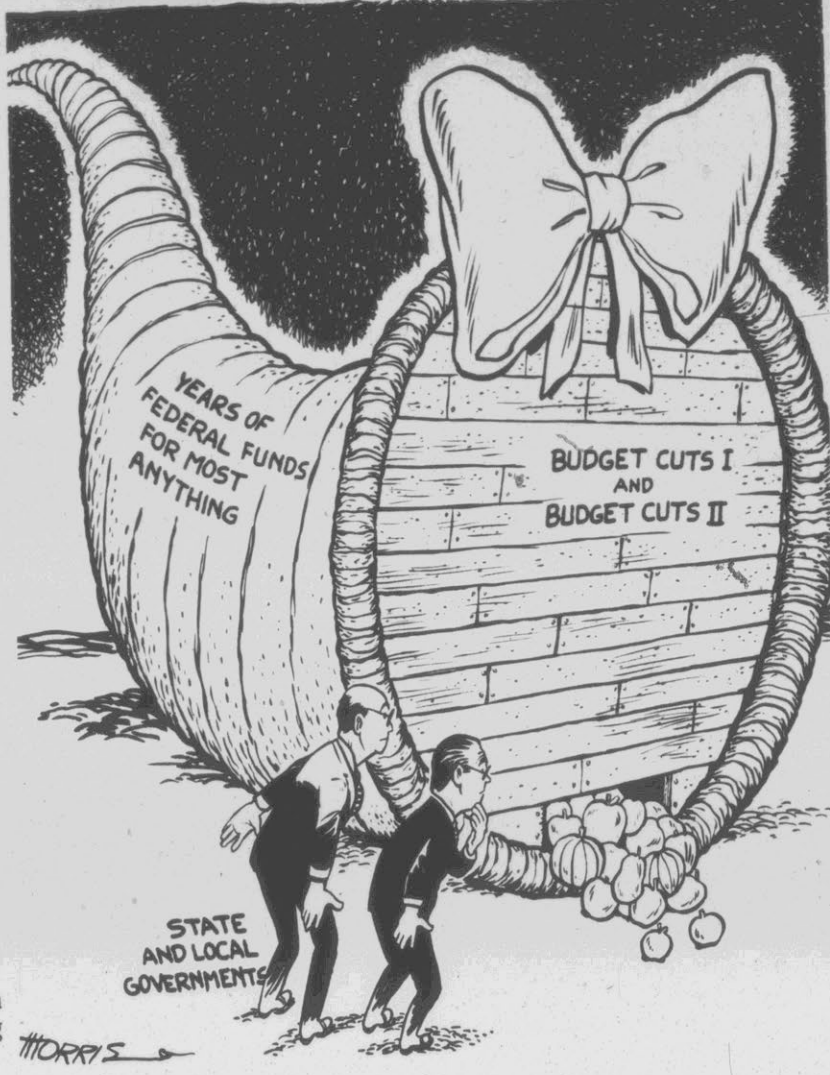

This was followed by other projects which virtually eliminated slum housing in Greenville, either through clearance or rehabilitation.

The result of the years of work has been to create a city that is pleasant to live and work in, and to provide far better housing for a large segment of our population.

The City Council in its resolution expressed its "deep gratitude for the years of tireless work provided by the Redevelopment Commission ... in eliminating blighted areas and making Greenville a better place in which to live and work."

Many people deserve a lot of credit for the years of service they gave to the Redevelopment Commission. The projects have been carried out efficiently and Greenville is an immeasurably better place because of it all.

CHANGES THE WHOLE LOOK OF THINGS!

Scruffy Ones Prevail

I pride myself on having a very open mind on things, such as nuclear energy, as long as they don't build a plant near my home. So when I saw the Diablo Canyon demonstration in California last month I watched them with the calm impartiality which I reserve for all things that don't affect me personally.

On one side were scruffy, unshaven, unshod protestors. On the other side, were well-dressed state troopers, and clean, good-looking spokesmen for the power company. The dispute, as I understood it, was the scruffy unshaven people claimed the people in the white hats didn't know what they were doing. They had built a billion-dollar nuclear plant on the San Andreas fault, which everyone says is going to cause an earthquake in California sooner or later.

My wife, who doesn't know the first thing about nuclear energy, asked me one evening as we watched the scruffies being hauled off in sheriff's vans, "Why would they build a nuclear plant next to an earthquake center?"

"Because it obviously makes sense. The people who construct those plants know what they're doing. If you've been listening to the nice, clean-cut men in white shirts, ties, and dark suits, you would know that the power company has done exhaustive tests, and the nuclear plant can withstand any earthquake shock known to man. Besides, we have a

"A few years ago you would have been on the side of the unwashed."

"I guess age does that to you. At some point in time you have to say that just because a person needs a shave doesn't make him right — and just because a person has short hair and dresses properly doesn't make him wrong."

"That's a stupid reason for taking one side over the other."

"There is more to it than that. The people who build nuclear plants are scientists, trained in our finest technical institutions. They work with computers and consult with famous experts who have an answer for every problem. The engineers and designers take extraordinary steps to see that not one bolt is put in wrong. If they say a nuclear plant can survive an earthquake, I have to accept their word for it."

"This is not to say I am unsympathetic with the poor souls who are willing to go to jail because they lack faith in our great scientific establishment. But in this case, I believe they're making a mountain out of a molehill. I would bet my All Savers Bank Account that they are wrong."

Well, you can imagine my surprise when a week later, the evening news announced that the Diablo Canyon nuclear reactor could not go into service because someone had gotten the drawings all mixed up, and the wrong pipes had been installed in the wrong sections of the plant.

It meant that every pipe had to be personally inspected and replaced if it was discovered that it didn't belong there.

A man in a nice white shirt, tie and blue suit from the power company explained it wasn't a very serious mistake Nuclear Regulatory Commission that has the last word on whether a plant is safe or not. They would never have given their okay to open one, if there was the slightest question that building a nuke plant next to an earthquake fault could hurt the environment."

"Then why are the people in the scruffy clothes willing to be arrested to close down the plant?" she asked.

"Because they have an unrealistic fear of nuclear power. They don't understand it, and therefore, they're against it. Many of them are students who enjoy getting involved in civil disobedience. But they're willing to go to jail for their beliefs."

"Whose side are you on?"

"I'm afraid I have to be on the side of those wearing the ties and coats. After all they've been dealing with nuclear power all their lives and they should know if it's safe or not."

Has Signal For Israel

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Reagan subtly signaled a tougher policy toward Israel by seating Zbigniew Brzezinski, Jimmy Carter's national security chief, at his right for the VIP luncheon Reagan gave for former national security aides and secretaries of state and defense on Oct. 5.

The president's personal selection of Brzezinski, a hairshirt to Israel during his four White House years, for the honored seat at the pro-AWACS luncheon was also perceived by some of those present as a downgrading of Henry Kissinger. Kissinger, the most powerful occupant ever in the National Security Council office, was placed across the table next to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

But the most active participant at the VIP lunch was tough-talking former defense secretary Melvin Laird. Laird told Reagan: Pick out half a dozen senators you need on the AWACS vote and use plain old presidential muscle to convert them.

Not Gov. Kemp

Whatever hope remained that Rep. Jack Kemp might yet run for governor of New York next year all but vanished when he gave a nationally prominent conservative leader a green light to support New York City businessman Lewis Lehrman.

The conservative had written Kemp saying that he was about to back Lehrman for governor unless Kemp himself ran. Kemp's reply: Go ahead and endorse Lehrman. "I'd say that makes it about 96 or 97 percent sure that Jack won't run," one friend of Kemp told us.

If the friend is right, Republican county chairmen who have been kept on hold by Kemp for months are about to get some very unpleasant news. They consider Kemp the best chance to elect a Republican governor of New York for the first time since 1970, with the rest of the GOP field consisting of dubious prospects. Former state Republican chairman Richard Rosenbaum is probably the frontrunner, but Lehrman has been picking up support in conservative quarters.

Nixon-Allen Thinkalikes
Richard Nixon's attack on Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin and "parts of the American-Jewish community" for trying to defeat President Reagan's AWACS deal was not cleared by the White House despite Reagan's own veiled warning to Israel in his Oct. 1 press conference.

Nixon wrote his blunt statement himself without any prompting from Washington. One high official told us he felt the former president may have gone too far in his attack and worried that it might boomerang.

That scotches speculation that the past and present chief executives were in cahoots to warn Begin — "hands off." The Reagan warning, which singled out but did not actually name Israel, was written by national security assistant Richard V. Allen, a key administration leader in the battle to prevent a congressional veto of Reagan's plan to sell AWACS radar planes

Committee Ready To Work

The committee to choose a new chancellor for East Carolina University has been formed and is ready to begin its work.

Among its first acts was an announcement by Chairman Ashley Futrell that a public meeting will be held in the Willis building Oct. 20 so "people can tell us what kind of chancellor they want ... voice their gripes ... say whatever they want to say about East Carolina University."

The committee has also set a deadline of Dec. 15 for taking nominations.

The committee appears ready to do its work thoroughly in searching for a new chancellor. It is composed of members with varied backgrounds who should offer many views on what a chancellor's qualifications should be, and it is calling for public input. All that is positive.

Carrot, Not Stick

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Farsighted county governments which have at their fingertips some modern money management techniques could give Tar Heel taxpayers a break on their local property taxes while actually making money in the process.

One county has already taken a strong move in that direction, and others are considering similar plans. Transylvania County commissioners offered a seven percent discount to local citizens who paid their local property taxes in a timely way.

The results were encouraging: county revenue coffers filled early as people took advantage of the financial break, and the county not only invested the money and made more from interest than they paid out in early payment discounts, but avoided a financial crisis which seemed to be building due to chronic late payment of taxes in that county.

Most North Carolina Counties offer a negligible half percent discount for early payment, but depend upon vigorous policing of the tax records and the threat of action to encourage payment. Late payment penalties also are common.

Problems
But to discard the stick in favor of the carrot raises some procedural problems for any county government. Consider Burke County, where commissioners have under advisement a five-percent early payment bonus. Editors of the Morganton News Herald point out that commissioners would have to set the tax rate earlier rather than waiting until the legal deadline at the end of June, and that would mean adopting the county budget earlier, which means holding budget hearings earlier, and taking departmental requests earlier. None of which, the editors add, poses a major problem...it just calls for better planning and readjusting the routine.

Then comes Ed Reading of Morganton, one of the more outspoken and forward looking leaders of the North Carolina Consumers Council to take the early payment notion another step ahead.

Why not make money management pay off even better for government while giving taxpayers an even better break. One problem with property taxes, Reading stresses, is that it is a major lump sum payment coming due all at one time. That puts many people into a financial bind and just automatically leads to procrastination. Quarterly installments could be set up to spread local tax payment through the year which would break up the burden on the taxpayer, give government a more timely flow of dollars which could be invested to earn interest and meet current obligations, and still allow for an early-payment discount of a couple of percentage points.

Benefits
Here is Reading's detailed explanation:

Public Forum

Letters submitted for Public Forum should be limited to 300 words. The editor reserves the right to edit longer letters.

To the Editor:

I noted with great interest a recent letter in this column regarding the experience of a lady who had been subpoenaed to appear in court as a state witness.

The letter stated that on days notice was given, the witness was not allowed by the District Attorney to be on-call or standing so as not to lose a day's pay. She was denied a witness fee, she did lose a day's pay and she was not required to testify.

Having observed a recent court case, these statements only served to reinforce my impressions. The judicial system often seems totally unconcerned that witnesses present could possibly have jobs unrelated to the court's business. If the court used more courtesy in their dealings with these witnesses, we would see an improved judicial system in this country.

I noted extended breaks or lunches by court officials. I consider this an exhibition of a lack of respect for those people who have jobs unrelated to court officials as their means of livelihood. One could easily get the impression that arrogance is a prevailing attitude not to be infringed upon by the common citizen.

We are extremely lucky to enjoy the Democracy we have in this country. Courtesy at all levels in our interactions is something we should all be cognizant of. This does not exclude the judicial system. "Why many people think twice about stopping after witnessing an accident" is a sad commentary on the judicial process.

Strength For Today

OUR RELIGION AMONG OTHERS

Our age gives a great deal of attention to comparative religion. Writers bid us to remember that Christianity is not the only religion in the world. There are about a half-dozen great world religions, thirty or forty quite important religions, and probably a couple of hundred sects and cults.

How does Jesus compare with the other religious teachers of the ages?

mired by the leaders of many religions other than Christianity. Why does he occupy this position of outstanding prominence? First, because of his wisdom. Again, by his goodness, which appears never to have been matched by any human life. Last of all, there are millions of us who call ourselves Christians and who believe that he is a Savior and that his spirit has never departed from the world. He is with us even to the end of time. —

Can Buy Stocks On Shoestring

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Although brokerage fees have risen, you can still buy stocks on a shoestring. In some instances you can buy and sell without paying any commission at all, and with barely a nod to your broker.

That's what 3,500 thrifty investors have been doing through the low-cost investment plan of the National Association of Investors, which permits them to accumulate shares for a few dollars at a time.

In the three years since the plan was founded, those investors have done well even without the advice of brokers, since the stocks in the plan have risen 25.6 percent on average, and dividends have added more.

This is how it works: An individual wishing to accumulate shares in small, even fractional amounts, joins the NAIC as an individual member, paying an annual fee of $15.00, for which he or she also receives a monthly magazine, "Better Investing," and a stock investment manual.

After that, the member purchases through the NAIC one and a fraction shares in any of 20 companies on its list, paying an initial commission to NAIC of $5 (versus $25-$30 through a broker). NAIC buys the shares, then transfers ownership and shares to the individual.

Thereafter, the owner is entitled to reinvest dividends automatically and add to holdings on a quarterly basis, working directly with the companies, at but two of which charge no fee for buying or selling.

Individuals can also invest directly, without involving the NAIC, in any of the 20 companies — and, in fact, in about 1,100 corporations in all — but to do so they must first purchase at least one share through a broker, generally having the broker at least $25 for his services.

The NAIC, based in Royal Oak, Mich. (P.O. Box 220) avoids that initial brokerage cost, and also says it puts the plan into action much more quickly. In addition, it offers considerable information on investing.

The NAIC has so far limited its plan to just 20 corporations because of mammoth bookkeeping chores which can be handled only by the addition of advanced electronic equipment, but it intends to expand its list.

The 20 companies so far listed were carefully selected because, in keeping with NAIC philosophy, studies indicate they have very good prospects for appreciation over a five-year period.

The list so far is made up of Aetna Life & Casualty, American Natural Resources, Ashland Oil, Brown-Forman, Central Illinois Public Service, Chesebrough-Pond's, Dana, Dayco, Detroit Edison, Dillon Companies, Dow Chemical, Esmark, Federal-Mogul, Foxboro, Gerber, Gould, W.R. Grace, International Bank-A, NDB Bankcorp, and St. Paul Companies.

NAIC members, both individuals and clubs, believe in buying for the long-term, which meshes neatly with the concept of investing a few dollars at a time, almost in the manner of a Christmas Club.

Using its philosophy, an investor buys shares or fractions of shares regularly over a long period of time in quality companies, regardless of market fluctuations, and just as regularly reinvests dividends.

Using that guide, the small investor doesn't worry about what the Joe Granvilles say about short-term fluctuations. Thomas O'Hara, chairman of the NAIC trustees, says flatly that nobody can foretell such moves.

N.C. High Court Rejects Death Penalty Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court turned away a constitutional challenge to North Carolina's death penalty law Tuesday and left intact Thurman Martin's death sentence for the 1979 murder of his wife.

In another decision, the court agreed to decide whether a Goldsboro religious school that practices racial discrimination can get federal tax breaks. Ruling on the constitutionality of North Carolina's death penalty law, the justices left intact Martin's death sentence for the July 4, 1979 murder of his wife, Peggy Lupo Martin, in Laurinburg, N.C.

The decision means that Martin's case now must go back to Superior Court in Scotland County, where a new date for execution must be set, a spokesman for Central Prison said Tuesday. The spokesman said he did not know when that might take place.

Martin argued that after his conviction jurors who were to sentence him should not have been told they could impose the death penalty if finding his crime was committed in an "especially heinous, atrocious or cruel" manner.

Court documents indicate that Martin and his wife had been separated for nearly a year at the time of the killing, and that Martin was jealous about her dating other men.

Eye witnesses testified at Martin's trial that after storming into his wife's apartment, he beat her and shot her six times while she begged for her life. The presiding judge in Martin's case told jurors the crime was considered heinous, atrocious or cruel if it had been "a conscienceless or pitiless crime which is unnecessarily torturous to the victim."

Suppose the county gives a two percent bonus for payment of a $400 tax bill on the staggered plan (payments in July, September, December and March). Investing the money at 10 percent — low by current standards — the county collects $26 in interest by the end of the year. The taxpayer gets a discount of a little over $8; so the county profits to the tune of $16 over what they now receive. The one late payment in February or March gives taxpayers an even bigger break, and shouldn't bother government a great deal since the other payments have come in early.

A side benefit would be that local governments which now must put in their budgets sizable contingency funds to cover bills which come due during the lean-picking times when taxpayers don't pay up in a timely way could use that money for other purposes.

"Counties are going to need more and more flexibility in the way they assess taxes because inevitably a greater tax load is going to be dumped on counties and municipalities by the federal and state governments. This would be one way to get started on an updated method of collecting ad valorem taxes. In all probability this will be a major tax issue on the Consumers Council agenda for the coming year," Reading says.

sentence, the North Carolina Supreme Court said earlier this year that the evidence "tends to show that the brutality of the manner in which (Martin) murdered his wife exceeded that which is normally present in any killing in that it was unnecessarily torturous to her."

Martin's appeal said the state law's reference to such crimes is too vague.

The court also agreed to decide whether religious schools that practice racial discrimination can get federal tax breaks.

An eventual decision, not expected for months, presumably could affect the tax status of other religious activities as well.

The court agreed to review two rulings — involving Bob Jones University in Greenville, S.C., and the Goldsboro, N.C., Christian Schools — that such schools are ineligible for tax exemptions.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled in both cases that although a private school's racial policies based on sincere religious beliefs are constitutionally protected, the Internal Revenue Service could cut off the tax exemptions.

The appeals court said both schools "violated the clearly defined public policy, rooted in our Constitution, condemning racial discrimination and, more specifically, the government policy against subsidizing racial discrimination, public or private."

Goldsboro Christian Schools, offering classes from kindergarten through grade 12, bases its refusal to admit black students on its interpretation of the Bible.

It never has received recognition as a tax-exempt entity under federal law. A federal trial judge, upheld by the 2-1 vote of the 4th Circuit court last Feb. 24, ruled that the Christian Schools were not entitled to any exemption because of its racial policy.

In seeking Supreme Court review, lawyers for the Christian Schools argued that the school is being forced "either to cease practicing its sincere religious beliefs because they are contrary to the federal public policy as announced by the IRS or to incur a huge tax burden."

"Such coercion is an unconstitutional infringement of the school's rights under the free-exercise clause of the First Amendment," the appeal said.

The First Amendment, in part, bars the government from "prohibiting the free exercise" of religion.

Bob Jones University, founded in 1927, has a student enrollment of about 5,000, from kindergarten through college and graduate school.

As part of its religious doctrine, the school forbids interacial dating and interracial marriage.

Prior to 1971, the school refused admission to blacks. From 1971 until 1975, the school excluded unmarried blacks.

Since 1975, the school has enrolled unmarried blacks as students but will expel students who date or marry "outside their own race" or "espouse, promote or encourage others" to violate those rules.

The IRS stripped Bob Jones University of its tax-exempt status in 1970. The school sued the IRS, and a federal trial judge ruled for the school. But the 4th Circuit Court, by a 2-1 vote, reversed that ruling. The government was trying to collect $490,000 in back taxes from the school, but the appeals court ruling last Dec. 30 did not say how much the school would have to pay.

Sen. George Will?

Prominent Maryland Republicans, fearful that chances of beating Democratic Sen. Paul Sarbanes for re-election next year are slipping away, are privately asking syndicated columnist George Will to make the race.

Will, 40, who was a Senate Republican aide before entering journalism, lives in the Washington suburb of Chevy Chase, Md. He is not expected to say yes. But efforts to convince him will intensify now that Rep. Marjorie Holt, the best Republican bet to beat Sarbanes, has announced she will stay in the House.

National Republican strategists had considered Sarbanes one of the two most vulnerable Democratic incumbent senators (the other is Sen. George Mitchell of Maine) but only if Holt ran. Republicans now shudder at the thought of a personally-vicious Senate primary between two candidates considered unlikely to defeat Sarbanes: Prince Georges County Executive Lawrence Hogan and former Sen. Glenn Beall (who lost to Sarbanes in 1976). Hence, the call to George Will becomes a distress signal.

Senate House Warns Of CIA Proposals Conflict

By ROBERT PARRY and MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN Associated Press Writers WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate Intelligence Committee analysis says proposed new CIA guidelines appear to offer "completely open-ended authority for the intelligence community" and may conflict with federal law.

The staff analysis, obtained Tuesday by The Associated Press, urges committee members to seek "a full explanation of the practical need for these broad authorities."

Several congressional Democrats already have assailed the proposed order as a threat to civil liberties.

But CIA spokesman Dale Peterson argues that the criticisms are based on "worst-case scenarios" and that "protection of civil liberties is given great weight."

The proposed order, a copy of which was obtained Tuesday by The AP, would give the CIA its first authority to secretly infiltrate and influence domestic groups, as long as it was approved by the attorney general and constitutional rights aren't violated. If signed by President Reagan, it would replace restrictions imposed on the intelligence community by the Carter administration in 1978.

Although the draft

specifies that "nothing in this order shall be construed to authorize any activity in violation of the Constitution or statutes of the United States," the committee analysis said some of the new powers appear to contradict current law.

The analysis noted, for instance, that the proposed order would involve the CIA in developing procedures to govern criminal narcotics intelligence activities abroad.

"Such authority for CIA seems to be unprecedented involvement in the exercise of police and law enforcement powers, prohibited by the National Security Act of 1947," the analysis said.

The staff analysis also noted that Carter's order prohibited opening U.S. mail except in accordance with laws which require a court warrant based on probable cause that the mail contains evidence of a crime.

This restriction is deleted in the Reagan draft, and the analysis said another section of the Reagan order "clearly delegates authority to the attorney general to approve the warrantless use of techniques such as mail opening that otherwise require a warrant."

Also, the analysis said several provisions of the order read together "could allow CIA and other agencies to use clandestine means within the United States to collect purely domestic intelligence concerning U.S. persons."

When seeking foreign intelligence in the United States, the analysis said, the CIA could use undercover agents inside domestic organizations and have "access to bank, medical, telephone and other private records."

The staff analysis suggested that the committee obtain a full explanation of "the practical need for these broad authorities (and) their relationship to the ban on CIA internal security functions under the National Security Act of 1947."

The Reagan administration refused last week to give the panel an on-the-record, legal explanation of the proposed order, but Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Tuesday he believed the department had since agreed to provide some form of on-the-record answers later this week.

In another section cited by the analysis, the draft would give the intelligence community the authority to conduct "such other intelligence activities as the president may from time to time direct."

The draft defines "intelligence activities" as "all activities that agencies within the intelligence community are authorized to conduct pursuant to this order."

The committee staff contended that appears to result in "completely open-ended authority for the intelligence community."

The draft order also would:

- Grant the CIA the authority to conduct "special activities," or covert actions, inside the United States if they are not intended to influence U.S. policies or politics.
- Permit physical surveillance of Americans abroad without the requirement that they first be thought to be agents of a foreign power.

—Add a new qualifying phrase on restrictions on use of electronic surveillance and warrantless break-ins against U.S. citizens. The Reagan order would add language stating that the restrictions do "not constitute any limitation on the powers and authorities of the president under the Constitution and laws of the United States."

Citing this language, the staff analysis said, "The implication is that the president might authorize electronic surveillance, physical searches including break-ins, and mail openings against U.S. persons who are not foreign agents."

State Moving Against Auto Odometer Fraud

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — In an effort to combat odometer fraud by used-car dealers, North Carolina motor vehicle officials say they plan to require odometer listings on the titles of used cars.

Officials will also notify about 150 North Carolina car buyers and about 4,500 from other states that they were cheated by dealers who turned back the odometers on their cars before selling them, said A.A. "Butch" Justice Jr. of the license and theft section of the Division of Motor Vehicles.

The DMV will require odometer listings on the titles of used cars sold after Jan. 1, said DMV commissioner Elbert L. Peters Jr. The change will be ordered administratively without action by the General Assembly.

Some North Carolina dealers have "laundered" titles of cars sold in South Carolina with false odometer readings, Justice said.

He said the problem worsened this year when a new South Carolina law took effect requiring the odometer readings on titles of cars sold in that state.

Dealers got around the requirement by using paper transactions to route the cars through North Carolina, where a title could be obtained showing no mileage reading.

That way, the odometer on a car could be rolled back and the eventual purchaser would never know. "It's been going on for years," said Justice.

Twelve wholesale car dealers have been convicted so far in an investigation by the license and theft section, Justice said. Charges against three more are pending, and as many as 30 other dealers are under investigation.

Justice said as many as 5,000 cars may have been sold through North Carolina dealers with altered mileage readings. Most were sold outside the state, although about 150 were sold to North Carolina buyers, he said.

Altering the odometers allows a dealer to raise the resale price by 3 1/2 cents for every mile reduced from the car's odometer. If a car is rolled back 50,000 miles, a dealer could make $1,750, Justice said.

The dealers convicted so far include several concentrated in the Forest City and Mount Airy areas, Justice said.

All have been prosecuted under the state's misdemeanor odometer rollback statute, which carries a maximum penalty of 60 days in jail and $100 fine per vehicle.

Justice said no one convicted so far has been given an active sentence and that the fines are so light they amount to only a business expense for some dealers.

Federal law sets penalties of a year in prison and $50,000 fine per vehicle. But because federal courts are so crowded, prosecutors have discouraged prosecution, Justice said.

He said the division would ask that the General Assembly provide for tougher penalties against mileage rollbacks.

Mrs. Spilman Honorary Head

Mrs. John B. Spilman has been named honorary chairperson of this year's Mental Health Association in Pitt County Operation Santa Claus campaign.

The announcement was made by Zula Rouse, MHA campaign chairperson, during a kickoff tea given by former campaign chairman Betty Brewer. The campaign enables citizens from throughout Pitt County to give gifts to patients at Cherry Hospital and Caswell Center.

Mrs. Spilman retired several years ago after careers involving positions at the local, state and national levels, including 12 years as executive director of the N.C. Mental Health Association. During her mental health career, she saw the organization grow from four local chapters in 1957 to a total of 46 chapters in 1968.

Operation Santa Claus is one of the association's largest projects and was launched while Mrs. Spilman was serving as director of the state association.

Mrs. Spilman was appointed by then-governor Bob Scott to organize the Governor's Council on Aging in Pitt County. Under her leadership, 23 senior citizens' clubs were formed and have become the basis for ongoing activities associated with the senior citizens of the county.

As a member of Memorial Baptist Church, she has served as a deacon and a Sunday school teacher and on the state board of the Baptist Convention.

She is a member of the Gifts Committee for Pitt County Memorial Hospital, and has honorary memberships in the Pilot Club of Greenville, Delta Kappa Gamma and Alpha Delta Kappa sororities.

Major Questions Remain In Sadat Assassination

By TOM BALDWIN
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Information about the assassination of President Anwar Sadat is emerging slowly from the tight-lipped Egyptian government, but a week after the killing major questions remain.

For one thing, why didn't Sadat's security men cut down the killers before they covered the 50 yards from their truck to the reviewing stand?

And how extensive was the conspiracy? How thoroughly have Moslem extremists infiltrated the Egyptian armed forces?

The United States reportedly spent $25 million to help improve Sadat's personal security force, and they were painstakingly thorough about such things as searching guests and "cleansing" neighborhoods the president was to visit.

But when the four assassins started throwing grenades and firing machine guns, the bodyguards failed completely. They appeared confused, outgunned, poorly placed and slow to react, three former American presidential guards told The New York Times after studying photographs of the attack.

American and Egyptian military sources minimize the impact of the Islamic fundamentalist movement on the army. But many diplomats from Western Europe and the Third World regard the fundamentalists as an enduring threat.

A veteran of Egypt's military police told The Associated Press before Sadat's death: "The Moslem fundamentalists represent Sadat's biggest threat. They are in the army."

Officials announced Monday that 18 officers were dismissed from the army and given civilian jobs "because of their fanatic religious tendencies."

This increased speculation that a purge is under way in the army, the police and other internal security departments. The government has said nothing about this. And the defense minister, Lt. Gen. Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala, said the fact that three of the four assassins were civilians proved the loyalty of the army.

"If the armed forces were infiltrated, el-Islambouly (the lieutenant of the government) would not have had to bring in outsiders," he said in an interview this week.

Foreign Undersecretary Ossama el-Baz told reporters two nights after the assassination that four killers were at the scene. Later, government sources reported two more men with ties to the four were being sought.

The government has reported the arrests of only nine men, including the four alleged assassins and five others accused of a fundamentalist attack in which 118 people were reported killed in the southern city of Assiut.

Two others are sought in connection with the Assiut attack.

But Interior Minister Nabawy Ismail in a TV interview Monday indicated the conspiracy was widespread. He said: "The fanatics planned to carry out terrorist acts in a number of cities following the death of Sadat... but they changed their plans and settled for large-scale operations in Assiut."

The government said initially that one of the assassins was killed and three were wounded. On Monday, Abu Ghazala said all four were alive. He did not explain the earlier report.

The official version of the assassination, as told by the defense minister, is that 1st Lt. Khaled Ahmed Shawk el-Islambouly, a known religious fanatic, gave three men in his artillery battery leave and substituted his three conspirators — a former officer discharged for "extremist tendencies," a reserve officer no longer on active duty and an ex-corporal.

A longtime Egyptian observer of the military said the men given leave would never have thought to question the order.

"Our army is made up of little country people," he said. "The officer is the boss." The three civilians were uniformed and carried hidden ammunition and hand grenades bought from "fugitives and criminals" in southern Egypt because those in the parade were not issued ammunition, Abu Ghazala said.

El-Islambouly had his three accomplices report the day before the parade after the other troops assembled. He berated them for being late and ordered them to sleep separately from the rest of the unit, ostensibly as punishment but actually to keep them from giving themselves away inadvertently.

When the truck on which the four conspirators were riding reached the reviewing stand, el-Islambouly ordered the driver, who was not in the plot, to stop. He refused.

Oil Issue Facing Canada's Parliament Claim Efforts Halt Erosion Has Backfired

OTTAWA (AP) — The Canadian Parliament, opening its fall session today, plunges into debate on a national energy policy that has angered American oilmen and strained relations with the Reagan administration.

The first legislation up for debate — and likely passage by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's Liberal majority — would give the government firm Petro-Canada a retroactive 25 percent interest in all oil and natural gas discoveries in the Arctic and other federal lands not already in production.

Although some compensation is proposed, spokesmen for the U.S.-dominated Canadian oil industry denounce the move as expropriation.

The Trudeau energy plan, which includes incentives for Canadian-dominated firms, is designed to raise petroleum industry in Canada from about 30 percent now to 50 percent by 1990.

The latest step in that direction was taken Tuesday, when the Ontario provincial government announced agreement with the Sun Co. to buy 25 percent of the American oil company's Canadian subsidiary, Suncor, for $650 million.

Sun, which owns 99.8 percent of Suncor, said it would seek additional Canadian investors to make Suncor more than 50 percent Canadian.

Suncor is the fifth-largest oil company in Canada. It produces and distributes petroleum products under the Sunoco and Sunchem brand names.

Since the Trudeau energy program was unveiled last October, nearly a dozen foreign petroleum interests have been bought out by private or public Canadian interests in deals totaling more than $6 billion.

American oil executives complain they are being forced to pare down their Canadian holdings because Trudeau's program puts them at a competitive disadvantage by tying government subsidies for petroleum exploration and development to the proportion of Canadian ownership.

These government grants are covered by legislation expected to be introduced in final form later this fall.

The Reagan administration has reacted sharply to much of the Canadian program, and some members of Congress have been pushing for retaliation against Canadian business interests in the United States.

In a speech earlier this month, Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger said the Reagan administration does not oppose the concept of "Canadianizing" the oil and gas industry here. But he complained that the 25 percent government "back-in" proposal offers insufficient compensation, and the program as a whole violates international agreements to treat foreign and domestic investors on the same basis.

Energy Minister Marc

Lalonde and other members of Trudeau's cabinet have said repeatedly, however, that the government does not intend to back down in the face of what some regard as American threats.

The chief opposition party, the center-right Progressive Conservatives, opposes most of the energy proposals. But the Liberals are expected to have no trouble pushing the legislation through. The socialist New Democrats, Canada's third party, favor even greater Canadianization of the petroleum industry than the Trudeau plan provides.

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Government efforts to protect the nation's coastline are futile and in some cases speed up erosion, says a group of more than 100 coastal geologists.

All stabilization projects should be stopped and beach development should be limited, the geologists said in a report that is the result of a conference in March on America's shoreline. The conference was convened by Orrin Pilkey of Duke University in Durham and James Howard of Skidaway Institute of Oceanography in Savannah, Ga.

"The report is very timely in the Reaganomics era," Pilkey said Tuesday in a telephone interview. "We are destroying a beautiful natural resource with large expenditures of tax money."

Copies of the report were mailed Friday to President Reagan, various state agencies, environmental groups and news organizations.

Pilkey and Howard said in a letter to Reagan that although current stabilization efforts temporarily save some property, "the long-range cost to the American taxpayer is inordinately high and it results in the ultimate destruction of the public's recreational beach."

The group includes university professors, state environmental officials, marine laboratory scientists and employees of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

The geologists urge that alternative methods for protecting the nation's coastline be explored immediately and that citizens be educated about the cost of current projects.

The geologists conclude that people are responsible for current shoreline erosion problems because they construct buildings too near the water. As a result, alternative methods for protecting the shore "may even involve drastic and unpopular measures such as assuming that buildings adjacent to the beach are temporary or expendable."

The report says Americans have used engineering means — such as replacing beach sand and construction of seawalls — to halt erosion. But it says both are costly and harm recreational beach areas.

"American taxpayers are paying huge sums of money to temporarily protect the private property of a relative few," the report concludes. "Furthermore, this practice commonly leads to the ultimate destruction of a highly valued public recreational area."

The report also says shoreline defense structures often enhance erosion by reducing the width of beaches, steepening the offshore grade and increasing wave heights.

It recommends that all stabilization projects be stopped and the money be used instead to move threatened buildings.

Two Elders Missionaries

Elder Lew Bodkin has joined Elder Todd Henson in Greenville as missionaries on behalf of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

Bodkin, from Salt Lake City, Utah, and Henson, who is from Alpine, Utah, will do volunteer missionary work during their stay in Greenville. Henson has been here for several weeks.

The men, who pay their own expenses, will serve in Greenville for three to six months as part of a two-year commitment in the eastern part of the state. They said some 33,000 church missionaries volunteer their services throughout the world.

Bodkin, a graduate of high school in Traver City, Mich., said he plans to attend Michigan State University upon completion of his missionary work. He has already completed one year at the university. Bodkins worked at an airport to earn money for his mission.

Henson, a graduate of American Fork High School, plans to attend college following his volunteer tenure. He worked in construction to earn money for his Greenville mission.

Bike Rider Is Injured

James Roland Price of 215H Stancill Dr. was reported injured yesterday when the bicycle he was riding collided with a car about 12:09 p.m. at the intersection of Ninth and Cotanche Streets.

Police Department investigators, who made no charges, identified the driver of the car involved as Charla Sizemore Davis of 3003 Briarcliff Dr.

Damage to the bicycle was estimated at $50, while no damage resulted to the car, officers said.

Price was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital where he was treated for a minor leg injury and released.

Sees Threat To Bill Of Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Civil Liberties Union is mounting a campaign its leaders say is aimed at threats posed by New Right conservative organizations to individual freedoms.

ACLU executive director Ira Glasser announced Tuesday that conferences will be held in eight cities on issues such as abortion, voting rights, court-ordered busing and school prayer.

"The Bill of Rights has not been under such a political attack as it is now in the last three or four decades," Glasser said.

At a news conference, Glasser said the ACLU believes that Congress is under intense pressure to undermine basic rights on those and other constitutional issues.

Lunch Talk To Feature Dr. Mathis

The first of four "Spotlights On Stress," will be held Oct. 15 featuring Dr. James Mathis, M.D. as the speaker.

"Spotlights On Stress" is a series of Thursday lunch-time talks and discussions sponsored by the Mental Health Association in the Pitt County. The seminar will begin at 12 noon at the Jaycee Park administrative building, 200 Cedar Lane.

Mathis, associated with the ECU School of Medicine, is chairman and professor of the department of psychiatric medicine. He will speak on "Stress or Distress."

Mathis attended the Citadel, the University of Missouri, and received his M.D. degree from the St. Louis School of Medicine. He has served as chief resident in psychiatry at the University of Oklahoma Medical Center; surgical assistant, Community Hospital-Clinic, Elk City, Okla.; staff physician, Crossett Health Center, Crossett, Ark. He is the author of numerous medical articles that have appeared in both journals and books.

There is no charge for this series of programs. For more information call the Mental Health Association in Pitt County, 752-7448. Future seminars will be held on Oct. 22, 29 and Nov. 5.

Drew Big Smile From Stockman

EATONTOWN, N.J. (AP) — The newly crowned Miss America got a big grin out of federal Budget Director David Stockman.

Elizabeth Ward, a 20-year-old accounting major from Arkansas Tech University, said Monday she was impressed with the way Stockman, 34, rose from congressman to budget director.

And, said Miss Ward, Stockman is single.

In Washington, Edwin Dale, a spokesman for Stockman, confirmed his boss' eligibility and said he interrupted Stockman during the day to tell him about Miss Ward's interest.

Stockman "smiled broadly and said he was greatly flattered and that he hoped chance might enable them to meet one day," Dale said.

AWACS Sale Defeat Is Expected In Vote Today

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, facing virtually certain defeat today in the House, is offering written assurances of security safeguards on the AWACS arms sale to Saudi Arabia in a new bid to save the deal in the Senate.

And one opponent says Reagan's letter may include "something new" aimed at reversing a majority lined up or leaning against him.

Reagan picked up one Senate vote Tuesday from Rhode Island Republican

John H. Chaffee and was to add another today with the formal endorsement of Illinois Republican Charles H. Percy, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman. Both had been listed as leaning for the sale.

A congressional veto requires majority votes by both the House and the Senate, where the key showdown is set for next Tuesday.

White House officials anticipated defeat today in the House.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. predicted the House would vote 3-to-1 against Reagan and House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois conceded the sale is "going to be a loser here."

Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., who spearheaded the House veto effort, said as many as 300 of the 434 members would vote to block the $8.5 billion deal, the largest U.S. arms sale in history.

The sale includes five Airborne Warning and Control System planes plus 1,177 Sidewinder missiles and fuel pods and fuel tankers to extend the range and firepower of 62 Saudi F-15 jet fighters.

Reagan says the Saudis need the AWACS to defend their oil fields, but opponents say the planes will be a threat to Israel and could be compromised if the Saudi monarchy falls.

The White House said Tuesday that Reagan is drafting a letter to the Senate requested in a resolution by Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John Warner, R-Va., who both support the sale.

The resolution asked Reagan to certify in advance that the Saudis have agreed to limitations on where the planes can be flown — implying they would not be turned against Israel — and security safeguards for secret AWACS technology.

Emerging from a meeting with Reagan on Tuesday, Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., indicated the president's letter would cover areas such as joint U.S.-Saudi manning and control of the aircraft.

"It may have something new in it," said Pressler, an opponent of the deal.

Reagan's letter also may address concerns of five Republican opponents who asked the White House last week for similar security assurances as well as a promise that Reagan would work over the next four years to gain Saudi cooperation in Middle East peace negotiations.

Rich Galen, spokesman for Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana, one of the five, said Tuesday night that there have been further discussions with the White House in an effort to work out compromise language.

Pressler told reporters after his meeting with Reagan that "I'm still in the 'no' column" but said he might switch if Reagan satisfies his concerns about the threat to Israel and the possibility of AWACS technology falling into hostile hands. Pressler proposed Monday that the administration provide Israel with new radar and jamming equipment.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. described the Reagan letter as a statement of presidential commitments to secure and safeguard Israeli interests.

The Tennessee Republican, who has said all along that the AWACS fight was not impossible, said after meeting with the president Tuesday: "I think momentum is with us. I think things have begun to break our way. I think there's a chance we can win this thing."

He said opponents now can count on only about 45 votes, although 50 senators are committed against the sale and seven more are leaning that way. And, Baker added, it is "not beyond the realm of possibility" that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will approve it Thursday.

At least 10 of the committee's 17 members are on record against the sale: Republicans Pressler and Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota and all eight Democrats.

Former President Carter, lobbying for the sale Tuesday on Capitol Hill, said he would not have agreed to give the Saudis ownership and control of the AWACS planes but said blocking the deal now would jeopardize U.S.-Saudi relations.

"It's a close call on the AWACS sale," Carter said.

Fellowship

The fifth annual meeting of the North Tar River Fellowship will take place today beginning at 5 p.m. The meeting will be at its customary site, the Blount Ranch on the Old River Road.

The organization, one with political orientation, basically serves Pitt, Beaufort, Edgecombe, Greene and Martin Counties. Ed Warren, president of the Fellowship, said, "The thrust of the Fellowship is to bring to the attention of state leaders the needs and goals of our area of eastern North Carolina."

"State leaders representing a broad cross section of state government have indicated they would attend the Fellowship," Warren stated.

Among those who have indicated plans to be here are Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green, Senators Kenneth Royal and Harold Hardison, Secretary of Transportation Bill Roberson, secretaries of several departments, including Labor, Agriculture, and State, and other state officials.

Last year, the annual Fellowship drew more than 250 interested people. The attendance this year is expected to be even larger, Warren stated.

CRUSHING WATCHES — Alain Perrin, right, chairman of Cartier International, examines $1 million worth of fake Cartier watches squashed by U.S. Customs officials Tuesday in Los Angeles. ## See No Danger In Spilled Acid AURORA, N.C. (AP) — A sulphuric acid spill from a Texasgulf Chemical Co. fertilizer facility into the Pamlico River this weekend poses no immediate danger, state environmental officials said Monday.

"I do not have evidence that suggests there is an imminent danger," said James H. Mulligan, regional supervisor for the Division of Environmental Management in the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

The spill, which originated at the Texasgulf No. 1 sulphuric acid facility, was discovered during routine drainage monitoring Sunday, and the plant was immediately shut down. The size of the spill has not been determined.

The chemical spill was the second within two months for Texasgulf. An Aug. 22 spill, which poured 80 tons of phosphoric acid into the Pamlico, sparked a continuing investigation.

A brief statement by Texasgulf said the firm's own investigation of the recent spill "indicated no environmental damage to the river."

"The effluent discharged did not exceed the limits established by a discharge permit issued to Texasgulf by the state of North Carolina," the company said in the statement.

A spokesman for the state said the sulphuric acid, which leaked from a cooling system coil into a 50-foot-wide effluent canal, might have been diluted before it entered the river.

Texasgulf, whose chemical and fertilizer manufacturing operation covers 700 acres, was under a court order in May to clean up a 10-acre section of the Pamlico where the company illegally dumped dredge material.

Sam Winchester New President

Samuel C. Winchester, Sr. was installed at president of Golden K at the club's recent installation service. Winchester had served as vice president the past year.

Robert Snyder of Wilson, lieutenant governor of Division 7-N, Carolina's District, Kiwanis International, conducted the installation service. Mrs. Winchester placed the president's pin on her husband's lapel.

Other officers installed were: Robert L. Martin, immediate past president; Noah G. Raynor, vice president; Amos J. Evans, secretary-treasurer; and Dr. Lawrence F. Brewster, assistant secretary.

Two new directors, Robert P. McGinty and Simon J. Waters, were installed along with the incumbents, Oren E. Dowd Sr., Richard D. Turner, George B. Fleming and Wilbur C. Murphy. Past president Claude J. Goodman was installed as presidential advisor.

The club's outgoing president Robert L. Martin, secretary-treasurer Edwin M. Andrews, directors Linda F. Stokes and Dr. Richard C. Todd, and presidential advisor Henry C. Oglesby were recognized for outstanding service.

Special recognition was given to Henry V. Lofquist, chairman of the special projects committee, and committee members, Roland H. Stocks and Lee G. Williams, for raising $1,500 from member contributions to furnishing a room in the new West Bed Tower of Pitt County Memorial Hospital in honor of the Kiwanis Club of Golden K.

Kiwanis Club of Golden K, Greenville, was organized in 1975 and is the first Kiwanis Club in the world organized for retirees. It is composed of community retired agricultural, business and professional men. It is a non-profit organization which stresses fellowship and contributes to various local programs and charities.

There are now more than 100 Golden K Clubs in the United States.

Golden K maintains a membership of 70 and meets each Tuesday morning at the Masonic Temple on Charles Street. For further information, contact Winchester at 756-4869 or Noah G. Raynor at 756-6202.

Supreme Court Entering Censorship Controversy

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, agreeing to consider a Long Island, N.Y., public school book-banning case, is stepping into the thick of a growing censorship movement.

The high court said Tuesday that it will review the Island Trees school board's removal of nine books from its school libraries over the objections of five students who later filed suit.

Among the books barred for their allegedly offensive content: Kurt Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse Five" and "The Fixer" by Bernard Malamud.

The justices' eventual ruling could determine not only students' rights to have the books in school libraries, but also local control of schools and federal courts' power to intervene, the school board's lawyer says.

According to several reports, disputes over controversial books have been growing nationwide.

Robert Doyle of the American Library Association said Tuesday that after last November's elections, when conservatives won sweeping victories, there was a five-fold increase in reported instances of community efforts to get rid of various books.

Doyle said there "most definitely" are other cases from both public school and municipal libraries that have not been forwarded to the association.

The National Law Journal, in a report last May, said there have been new efforts by both parents and school board members to keep controversial books and other material out of high school libraries and classrooms across the country.

The weekly legal newspaper said nearly 20 censorship cases had been heard by federal judges in the last few years, and more were expected to wind up in court.

One of the censorship instances cited involved Warsaw, Ind., where students no longer use the textbook "Values Clarification." All 40 school copies of the book were burned.

Alan Azzara, a New York Civil Liberties Union lawyer representing the Island Trees students who filed the suit, said he assumed the Supreme Court agreed to hear the dispute in part because of the growing number of conflicting federal court decisions in similar cases.

George W. Lipp Jr., the school board lawyer who is taking his first case to the Supreme Court, said he believed the justices agreed to hear the dispute partly because of the nationwide "renaissance of conservatism."

The dispute arose in July 1976 when the Island Trees Union Free School District banned the books because of what it considered to be their offensive nature.

In addition to the Vonnegut and Malamud books, other banned titles included "A Hero Ain't Nothing But a Sandwich" by Alice Childress, Eldridge Cleaver's "Soul on Ice," and "Best Short Stories by Negro Writers."

Also banned were "The Naked Ape" by Desmond Morris, "Down These Mean Streets" by Piri Thomas, and the anonymously authored "Go Ask Alice."

The board also removed a ninth book, this one from the junior high school library, apparently because of a satirical essay by the 18th century Irish author Jonathan Swift. The essay, aimed at England's treatment of Ireland, says Irish children should be eaten to help relieve problems there.

The school board took the action after some of its members attended a conservative education conference.

In October 1980, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the five students who brought the suit had established, on the surface at least, a case that their First Amendment rights of free expression were violated. The appeals court ordered a trial to determine whether the board had any valid justification for removing the books — or whether the board's social and moral concerns about the books were simply a pretext for stifling free speech rights. The case has not gone to trial. In other action Tuesday, the Supreme Court: —Agreed to judge the validity of voter-passed state laws curbing public school busing.

—Refused to bar five Southern states from imposing special quarantines due to California's Mediterranean fruit fly outbreak.

Hearing On Districting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly has scheduled a public hearing next week on reapportionment of state House and Senate districts, legislative staff attorney Bill Hale said Tuesday.

The hearing will be held Tuesday, Oct. 20, at 11 a.m. in the auditorium of the state Legislative Building.

The hearing will be conducted by the House and Senate legislative redistricting committees. After the hearing, the two committees will hold separate meetings to begin work drawing up new House and Senate district maps.

The committees are to recommend new redistricting plans to the full General Assembly when it meets in an extraordinary second special session beginning Thursday, Oct. 29.

The special session was scheduled by legislative leaders after state Justice Department attorneys advised them that the reapportionment plans enacted during the regular session were unlikely to stand up in federal court.

How Tar Heels Voted In U.S. Senate And House

By ROLL CALL REPORT SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 1-7.

House
SOCIAL SPENDING By a vote of 168 for and 249 against, the House refused to inflict deeper cuts in a bill appropriating $87.3 billion in FY 1982 for education, welfare, jobs, health and other social programs. The vote was yet another major test of the president's economy plan. Rejection of this motion to return the bill (HR 4560) to committee for further cuts invites a presidential veto. The White House considers the price tag at least $763 million too high. The bill is to fund the departments of Education, Labor and Health and Human Services and, next to the defense bill, is the largest appropriations bill.

Rep. Ralph Regula, R-Ohio, a supporter of deeper cuts, said "clearly the bill before us is a candidate for a veto. It is over the president's budget and our own budget targets."

Opponent Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said the bill "is America's investment in humanity..."

Members voting "yea" agreed with President Reagan that the social spending bill was too costly.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."

Reps. Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, and W.C. Hefner, D-8, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, and Eugene Johnston, R-6, did not vote.

VOTING RIGHTS The House rejected, 132 for and 277 against, an amendment removing D.C. federal courts as the only place where states and subdivisions can seek exemption from the Voting Rights Act. The amendment sought to allow three-judge federal court panels around the country to handle such cases. The amendment was offered to HR 3112, an extension of the Voting Rights Act that, in part, exempts jurisdictions that can prove at least ten years of nondiscriminatory treatment of minority voters. The bill was sent to the senate.

Sponsor Coldwell Butler, R-Va., said "there are many better uses of local dollars than this sort of long-range litigation...To argue that these cases be heard in Washington is to argue for delayed justice. And to delay justice is to deny justice."

Opponent Don Edwards, D-Calif., said that hearing voting rights litigation in D.C. courts is necessary "to insure impartial decision-making free from local bias and political pressures."

Members voting "nay" wanted D.C. federal courts to continue as the sole jurisdiction for determining whether a state or subdivision should be exempted from the Voting Rights Act.

Johnston, Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Hendon voted "nay."

Jones did not vote.

MILK SUPPORTS The House rejected, 153 for and 243 against, a dairy price support plan favored by Administration budget cutters but opposed by the dairy industry. A key feature was to set milk price supports at 70 percent of parity. Left intact by the vote was legislation letting supports rise to 72.5 percent of parity in FY 1983 and to 75 percent or higher in 1984 and 1985 if production is held down sufficiently. Parity is defined by the government as theoretically a fair market price for farm commodities. The vote came during debate on the new four-year farm bill (HR 3603) that was headed for final passage and conference with the Senate.

Supporter Barney Frank, D-Mass., said: "The dairy price support program has become a very serious national problem...a classic case of a problem which brought forth a solution which has in turn eclipsed the problem and become the problem itself."

Members voting "yea" supported a less costly dairy price support program.

Martin and Broyhill voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner and Hendon voted "nay."

Jones did not vote.

House
CABLE TV The Senate adopted, 59 for and 34 against, an amendment preserving the authority of municipalities to regulate rates that cable television companies charge subscribers. The vote occurred during debate on a bill (S 898) deregulating the telecommunications industry but keeping AT&T's telephone operations under federal regulation. The amendment sought to require that 10 percent of the stock of any AT&T unregulated subsidiary — such as a data processing company — be independently owned, so as to guard against AT&T using its telephone profits from subsidizing the subsidiary. Sponsor Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., said independent ownership of the AT&T subsidiary would insure fairer competition.

Opponent Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said watchdog agencies such as the FCC and SEC would "guarantee that there will be no nefarious self-dealing between the (AT&T) affiliate and the parent."

Senators voting "yea" favored 10 percent independent ownership of any unregulated AT&T subsidiary operation in the telecommunications field.

East and Helms voted "nay."

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

AT&T By a vote of 26 for and 68 against, the senate rejected an amendment affecting AT&T's ability to

Johnson Seeks Re-Election

BETHEL — Richard B. Johnson, a present member of the Bethel Town Board of Commissioners, filed for re-election to the position.

Johnson is now completing his first term of office and said he is running for a second term in order that he may be a part of the new philosophy that is rapidly becoming a part of the town's management policies.

He is active in senior citizen activities in the town and on the county level. He is a member of the Mid-East Commission, the Bethel Recreation Committee and is a consultant for the town. Johnson is also a member of the recently organized Bethel Chamber of Commerce, a youth leader in the Old Eastern Missionary Baptist Association and the Middle District Union. He is a member of the Deacon Board of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church and is active in churches throughout the Bethel area.

compete with other telecommunications companies. At issue was a bill (S 898, see preceding vote) deregulating the telecommunications industry but keeping AT&T's telephone operations under federal regulation. The amendment sought to require that 10 percent of the stock of any AT&T unregulated subsidiary — such as a data processing company — be independently owned, so as to guard against AT&T using Senators voting "yea" favored 10 percent independent ownership of any unregulated AT&T subsidiary operation in the telecommunications field.

HOW TO TURN BEANS INTO BUCKS.

In the next few weeks, you're going to be trading in that bean crop of yours for some hard-earned cash. You'll want to put that money away of course, but you'll also want to put it to work. Your best bet? CONSIDER A SIX-MONTH MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATE FROM PLANTERS NATIONAL BANK.

With a Planters six-month Money Market Certificate, your money earns the highest interest possible over a limited period,* and it matures right when you need it most — at the start of your next planting season. So the soybeans you turned into bucks have made even more bucks, and you've got the extra cash you need to keep your farm growing strong throughout the year.

IN ADDITION, WHEN THE TIME COMES TO MAKE A LONGER INVESTMENT, PLANTERS NATIONAL BANK OFFERS A 2½-YEAR MONEY MARKET CERTIFICATE.

And for interest on your checking account, there's Planters Interest Checking. That's three worthwhile ways to make those hard-earned bucks work hard for you, no matter what kind of crop you grow.

Sure, you can find other banks with accounts like these, but you'll be hard-pressed to find a bank with the kind of investment know-how for farmers that Planters National Bank has. Why do you think they call it Planters? Stop by one of our convenient locations soon. Our experienced staff is ready to help put your money to work.

Educational Incentives Are Sought For Military

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon's civilian leaders, the armed services and many in Congress agree that major new educational incentives are essential to make the all-volunteer force work over the long haul.

Their common goal is to improve quality and assure adequate numbers in the services, especially with the Reagan administration preparing to ask for a bigger force at a time when the military-age population is shrinking.

But there are strong differences over the focus of such non-contributory educational benefits, how generous they should be, and the timing of legislation to put them into effect.

Pentagon decision-makers want to focus incentives on the combat arms — infantry, armor and artillery — where recruiting has been most difficult. Congress and the services would spread the benefits more evenly.

Congress and the services believe educational credits should be transferable from service men or women to their children. Civilian manpower officials doubt this feature, something entirely new, would be worth the money.

Congress appears ready to move quickly with legislation. So do the services. But Pentagon leaders have asked Congress to wait until next year, after certain options are tested. These officials also have appealed to Congress to await the findings of a Military Manpower Task Force, created by President Reagan.

Whatever plan is adopted eventually, the new program will not be a revival of the GI Bill of Rights that expired at the end of 1976. That old program, enacted in the wartime-draft era, was intended to reward men for compulsory military service and to help them readjust to civilian life.

The new purpose, in the absence of conscription, is to use educational benefits to entice high-quality young men and women to enlist and to persuade the best of them to remain in uniform after their first enlistments run out.

Pentagon manpower chief Lawrence J. Korb says this presents a dilemma:

"How can we encourage our young persons to perform military service to earn special educational benefits and then, only a few years later, discourage them from leaving the service in order to use these benefits?"

Army Secretary John O. Marsh and Gen. Edward C. Meyer, the Army's chief of staff, are urging that educational benefits be made transferable to children.

But Defense Department civilian officials contend that "transferability" should be weighed against other approaches, such as increased enlistment and re-enlistment bonuses, in deciding whether it is worth the extra expense.

"It seems to me that it's not a cost-effective way to attract and retain the necessary people," says Korb.

The old GI Bill was replaced with a program called the Veteran's Educational Assistance Program (VEAP), under which a man or woman in the service receives $2 in benefits for each $1 they contribute.

A new, non-contributory education aid package appears to be about the only major tool left to try after more than eight years of experimenting with all sorts of blandishments in efforts by a series of administrations to avoid returning to the draft.

There are enlistment bonuses of up to $5,000 and re-enlistment bonuses of up to $16,000 for military persons with vital skills. Congress has jacked up allowances for sea duty and other special service, and has provided "variable housing allowances" to help service men and women beat the high cost of renting in many areas of the country.

The services have rebounded from their worst recruiting year, 1979, when none of them met their goals.

Credit for this is given by Pentagon civilian officials and service leaders alike to the variety of improved bonuses and benefits and, most particularly, to an 11.7 percent pay increase enacted by Congress last year after it was reluctantly accepted by the Carter administration. The tough economic condition also is a factor, officials say.

The Reagan administration is pressing hard for an across-the-board 14.3 percent additional pay raise to become effective next Oct. 1, something which Korb and other senior officials say should finally restore reasonable comparability of military pay with salaries in the private sector.

In its most recent quarterly report, the Pentagon said that all the services "essentially achieved or exceeded their strength objectives" in the first nine months of this fiscal year.

Partly under the prodding of Congress, the services also have reported significant gains in various quality indices, particularly the percentage of high school graduates entering the forces.

Although there is debate in some quarters about how to measure quality, the standard most widely accepted in the Defense Department is geared to the degree to which the services can attract and retain high school graduates.

The Pentagon's latest manpower report showed that 74 percent of the male recruits taken into the services between last October and June held high school diplomas while 90 percent of the women recruits were high school graduates.

The Army chronically has suffered problems in signing up high school grads and has endured criticism stemming from those problems. But the recent manpower report reflected a dramatic rise in the Army's performance, with 69 percent of its fiscal 1981 male recruits holding high school diplomas compared to 40 percent in the comparable nine months last year.

Some critics of the all-volunteer concept have voiced concern that the services would become heavily black and poor.

Korb says that, from his standpoint, the services as a whole "are as representative as we have ever been all through conscription," in both racial content and economic background.

A Pentagon study finished last March indicated that 20 percent of the more than 2 million men and women in uniform were black. Blacks make up about 13 percent of the total national population of military age, between 17 and 24, the study said.

Say Arthritis, Stress Linked

ATLANTA (AP) — Is there an arthritis personality?

No, say the experts. But if you already have rheumatoid arthritis, your ability to cope with stress can affect how you feel.

"Many patients first notice their symptoms following a disturbing event such as a death in the family, divorce or some other emotional strain," says Dr. Frederic C. McDuffie of the Arthritis Foundation.

"Stress doesn't cause the disease, but people often improve when their stress is relieved," he says.

If there are some common personality features in arthritis features in arthritis patients, they result from having a chronic disease. It's hard to face the constant physical demands of arthritis without some depression or other psychological problems, according to McDuffie.

'PADDED' BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — A stout woman stabbed 28 times by her husband with a kitchen knife was expected to recover in a hospital, the newspaper Politika reports. Due to her corpulence, none of her vital organs were pierced.

Atlanta Churches 'Cluster' To Assist The Needy

By STEELE HOLMAN
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Drawn together by the slayings of 28 young blacks and the poverty those victims represent, more than 100 churches and synagogues have formed clusters to minister to residents of city housing projects.

The Help the Children Project was originated to provide safe summer recreation for inner-city children in 23 neighborhoods, but is now providing tutoring in schools and job opportunities for youths and their parents, says the project's administrator, the Rev. Bob Bevis.

Last spring about 115 congregations, including mainline Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and predominantly black denominations, agreed to provide safe recreation for children following the slayings of 28 young blacks in the Atlanta area over a two-year period.

Clusters ranging from four to eight congregations, in most cases working hand-in-hand with local tenant associations, each adopted a neighborhood in cooperation with the city school system and business community, Bevis said in an interview at his First Presbyterian Church office.

Each cluster consists of at least one inner-city church and at least one suburban church, at least one predominantly black congregation and one predominantly white congregation.

"You have the interesting dynamics of blacks and whites, rich and poor sitting down together to talk about a common concern," he said.

In addition to providing supervised recreation at the housing projects and local schools, the churches organized the Summer Employment Corp. to provide jobs for 10- to 16-year-olds. Their activities included flea markets, farmers markets, car washes and neighborhood cleanups.

"The long-range value is to start instilling good attitudes about work in young people who have been living and growing up with a welfare attitude," he said. "We are bringing hope into a situation where hopelessness is the norm."

In one public housing complex, a cluster has provided home-based day-care centers which employ parents and free others to seek job training and work. "The bottom line of the plan is to provide an alternate to the welfare system and the dependency it spawns," Bevis said.

The clusters are modeled on a group which First Presbyterian formed with another Presbyterian, an Episcopal and a United Methodist congregation in 1976 to minister at the Carver Homes public housing complex in southwest Atlanta, Bevis said.

"For a long time, I have had a belief that there are a lot of people in our congregations that wanted to have some hands-on ministry, sharing what was important to them with other people," he said, "and we haven't really given them concrete ways of doing that."

"In Help the Children, we have given some people some handles to grab hold of."

The four congregations in the original cluster are very different, Bevis said, but there have been no arguments about church doctrine or government because "it has taken all our energy and effort to make this program work."

The minister said that even though churches long have had social ministries on the denominational level, local congregations also must involve themselves with needy people.

"I am convinced that congregations will become changed, dramatically changed, by getting involved in the needs of others," he said. "What we are doing is setting a context where one's faith can be shared in a legitimate, wholesome way. What we are doing is very biblical."

"We can tackle every problem that is afflicting poor people in the city in bite-sized pieces," Bevis said, "and I think that is the only way the problems can be solved."

Headmaster To Be Speaker

The Rev. Frank Eberhardt will speak at Trinity Free Will Baptist Church here Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The services Friday and Saturday will begin at 7:30 p.m. and on Sunday, he will speak at 10 and 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

REV. FRANK EBERHARDT

The Rev. Eberhardt is now headmaster of Victory Baptist Academy, Fayetteville. He is former priest and founder of Gospel Outreach based in Philadelphia, Pa. Along with his conversion testimony he will give visual demonstrations and have question and answer sessions. He has written a booklet "I Want to Serve God as a Priest."

The public is invited according to Pastor Van Dale Hudson.

Found Cognac 305 Years Old

OLAND ISLAND, Sweden (AP) — What may be the world's oldest cognac was recovered from the Baltic Sea near here recently.

A team of Swedish archeologists recovered 16 bottles of cognac that had spent 305 years in the sea aboard a sunken warship, according to the Bureau National du Cognac.

The find was made when divers came upon the wreck of the "Kronan" (Crown), flagship of the Swedish fleet. The "Kronan" which was launched in 1672, was sunk during a sea battle with the Danish and German fleets in 1676.

Divers, who found the warship in 20 meters of water in a remarkable state of conservation, brought up a chest containing the 16 bottles. The exteriors were scarcely marred by the three centuries underwater. When one of the bottles was opened, it was discovered the cognac was of high quality.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.04 to 860.54 in the first half hour. Losers took a 5-3 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Most of the nation's large banks lowered their prime lending rates Tuesday from 19 to 18 percent. But interest rates in the bond and short-term money markets rose, raising questions about prospects for any sustained decline in rates generally.

Analysts said the market was also weighed down by weakness in many of the third-quarter earnings reports issued to date. Among those posting profit declines have been International Business Machines, Honeywell and NCR. Today's early prices included Exxon, up 1/4 at 30 3/4; Texas Eastern, unchanged at 48 3/4; and Monsanto, down 1/4 at 67 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 3.90 to 865.58. Advances and declines ran neck-and-neck on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 43.07 million shares, against 30.03 million Monday. The NYSE's composite index lost .14 to 70.07. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 1.25 to 312.17.

giving and helping them on." The president said Egypt's position on the U.S.-sponsored Camp David process would be the same after Israel withdraw from the last third of the occupied Sinai Peninsula next April. He said Israel had assured him the land would be returned.

He also said the Reagan administration would continue as a "full partner" in the search for peace.

"The decisions of Egypt, the sovereignty of Egypt, the determination of its people does not go back on its decisions even if they were disliked by bigger powers," said Mubarak, his voice choked with emotion as he eulogized Sadat.

The reference to "bigger powers" appeared to be a slap at the Soviet Union, whose top diplomats Sadat expelled last month, accusing them of inciting Soviet-Moslem strife. The Soviet Union has also strongly criticized Sadat's peace with Israel.

Breaking into tears, Mubarak said: "But such is my fate that I should stand in front of you, in his place, the order has been given by the people of Egypt to choose me to follow him and to continue his march and in this responsibility that is great and heavy for me, I shall always continue in his principles..."

"Today we stand together and say we shall continue this march, we shall continue on in his principles and for the line he set, and we have to rise above our grief, above our loss, and continue the solid institutions that he set and established..."

Cey Back, Keys Los Angeles To Opening Win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ron Cey returned to the Los Angeles lineup after more than a month of inactivity, showed nary a trace of rust in his swing and played a key role as the Dodgers won the first game of the National League Championship Series.

Cey's performance Tuesday made Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda's decision to reactivate the third baseman look good. Lasorda activated and started Cey, who had been idle since sustaining a broken bone in his left forearm when hit by a pitch Sept. 8.

Cey doubled home a run and scored another in the second inning and started a three-run, two-out rally in the eighth with a single. The Dodgers scored a 5-1 victory over the Montreal Expos in the opener of the best-of-five series.

Lasorda now tests his conviction that sensational rookie pitcher Fernando Valenzuela will be able to pitch well again after only three days' rest. The 20-year-old Mexican will start tonight's second game.

Valenzuela, who beat Houston on three days rest last Saturday night, said he was ready. The left-hander also discounted reports of an injured middle finger on his throwing hand, showed the small cut and shrugged to indicate it was nothing.

Valenzuela doesn't speak much English, but gets his points across nevertheless. He does the same with his screwball, fastball and curveball.

"He's the best thing that has happened to the Dodgers in years," said Lasorda of the bulky youngster, who led the NL in strikeouts, shutouts, innings pitched and complete games.

Lasorda's decision on Cey was one of two moves that paid off. With Cey back, the manager had to decide whether to move Pedro Guerrero, who had been brought in from the outfield when Cey was injured, back to right field or stay with Rick Monday, who had hit well as a replacement in right field for Guerrero.

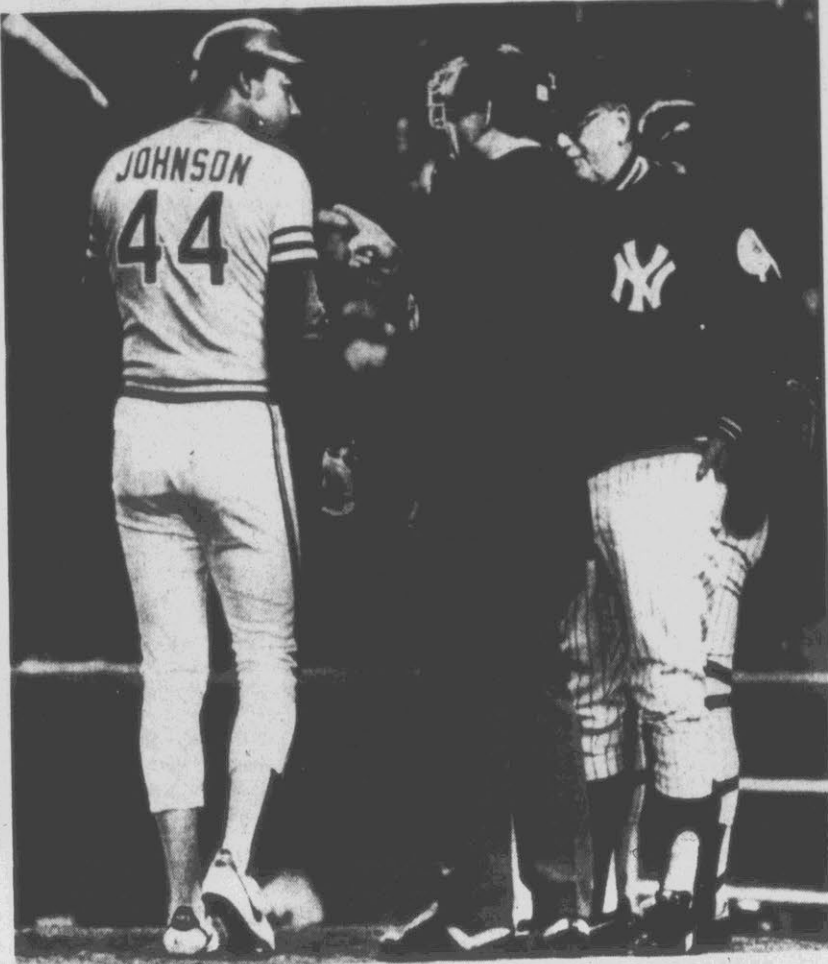

Lasorda went with Guerrero, who started a double play by making a fine catch of a sinking liner hit by Chris Speier in the seventh, and blasted a two-run homer in the eighth.

Expos Manager Jim Fanning, who nominated right-hander Ray Burris to face Valenzuela tonight, said he thought his team was in the first game until the eighth inning, which he termed the turning point.

Burris was 9-7 during the regular season and the loser to Philadelphia in the third game of the NL East playoffs. Valenzuela was 13-7 and 1-0 against the Astros as the Dodgers won three straight games after losing the first two.

Burt Hooton, the winning pitcher Tuesday, said he didn't pitch well from the first inning. "But I made some bad pitches that didn't hurt me and I threw some good ones when we needed them."

He was particularly proud of double play balls thrown to Andre Dawson in the first and Warren Cromartie in the second, each ending the inning.

Delay Of Game??

New York manager Bob Lemon (right) points a finger at Oakland batter Cliff Johnson as he tells homeplate umpire Nick Bremigan that Johnson is delaying the game to disturb the concentration of Yankee pitcher Ron Davis. Davis subsequently walked Johnson and was replaced by Goose Gossage, but the Yankees won anyway, 3-1. (AP Laserphoto)

Hooton was relieved in the eighth after Tim Raines singled. The veteran right-hander had blanked the Expos on six hits before leaving.

The Expos finally scored in the ninth on consecutive doubles by Gary Carter and Larry Parrish off Bob Welch, who was relieved by Steve Howe.

Cey, who started a first-inning double play in the field, said the play "got the little boy jitters out of me. I felt better as the game went on."

Steve Garvey singled and Cey doubled down the right field line in the second to drive in the game's first run. Mike Scioscia's single sent Cey to third, and he scored on Bill Russell's perfect suicide-squeeze bunt. With two outs in the eighth, Cey singled to center. Then Guerrero and Scioscia hit consecutive home runs off Jeff Reardon, who had taken over for Bill Gullickson. The Montreal starter allowed two runs and five hits in seven innings.

The successive homers marked the seventh time the feat has been accomplished in league championship games and the third in the NL. The Cincinnati Reds did it first in 1970 with Tony Perez and Johnny Bench and again in 1976 with George Foster and Bench.

In the American League, the 1970 Baltimore Orioles and Minnesota Twins turned the trick and so did the 1973 Oakland A's and 1980 New York Yankees.

"The double plays in the first and second innings were critical," said Fanning. "Those two cost us a chance of scoring."

Martin Wins Battle, But Not War, 3-1

NEW YORK (AP) — With Billy Martin in the visitor's dugout and George Steinbrenner in the owner's box, controversy in the American League Championship Series between the Oakland A's and New York Yankees was a near-certainty sooner or later.

It turned out to be sooner, not later. For seven innings Tuesday night, Yankee Stadium was a sea of serenity. Then, with New York moving toward a 3-1 victory, the light touch of Martin's hand seemed to surface.

At issue was a 10-minute at-bat for Oakland designated hitter Cliff Johnson, who toured the area around home plate while Yankee reliever Ron Davis stewed on the mound. When Johnson got around to batting, Davis, obviously rattled by the delay, walked him. That forced Yankee Manager Bob Lemon to reach into his bullpen for relief ace Rich Gossage, who might not otherwise have been used.

"Billy won the battle, but we won the war," seethed Steinbrenner. "He made us use Gossage. The umpires lost control of this game."

Martin, of course, was the picture of innocence. He said he is not beneath the use of delaying tactics, but denied he had ordered Johnson to stall.

Plate umpire Nick Bremigan pleaded innocent to involvement in the plot which seemed designed to distract Davis. And it worked perfectly.

First Johnson found a chip in his bat and had to return to the dugout for a replacement. Then he dilly-dallied around home plate when he returned. But Bremigan said his hands were tied.

"The rule book says the umpire can order the pitcher to pitch if the batter refuses to get into the batter's box," Bremigan said. "Johnson didn't refuse to get in. He just took his sweet time about doing it."

When the umpire tried to hurry him up, Johnson said, "I can take my time, can't I?" Then he did exactly that.

Davis had struck out three straight batters and was cruising along until the pace slowed, courtesy of Johnson. The pitcher was obviously distracted and seemed to lose his concentration during the episode.

"Johnson has a right to get out all he wants," Davis said. "Who cares? It's the umpire's right to let him. But he has to allow me to throw when I want to. If it's gonna take Johnson five to eight minutes to get ready, then I should be allowed to throw."

Yankee Manager Bob Lemon thought so, too.

"The A's were taking too much time," said Lemon. "All he has to do is tell him to get in and hit. I think the umpire wasn't in control."

That, according to Steinbrenner, was because the league's best umpires are not working this series.

"The American League knows it is not going with its best umpires," he said. "We are playing for the championship. We should have the best umpires."

Umpires for the playoffs and World Series are assigned on a rotation basis. Besides Bremigan, the ump for the ALCS are Russ Goetz, Jerry Neudecker, Marty Springstead, Durwood Merrill and Vic Vottaggio.

"One member of that crew is excellent," said Steinbrenner. "But the others..."

Steinbrenner said the league should increase the payment to umpires and force the best officials to be assigned in exchange for the higher revenue. The six-man umpiring crew is paid $39,000 for the ALCS, a drop in the bucket compared to the revenues generated by the series.

"I just thought (catcher Rick) Cerone and Lemon did a good job getting Goose ready," Martin said when asked for his assessment of the controversy. Gossage, however, suspected some surreptitious behavior on the part of the Oakland manager.

"I know Billy has got tactics to try and upset the pitcher," he said. "I just made up my

Jags Face C.B. Aycock ; A-G To Battle Panthers

By RICK SCOPEE
Reflector Sports Writer
Farmville Central will be looking for upset No. 2 of the 1981 season Friday evening when the Jaguars entertain Eastern Carolina Conference foe Charles B. Aycock.

The Jaguars, fresh off a 33-7 victory over North Pitt, have won three of their last four games, including a stunning 34-29 victory over Havelock two weeks ago in Farmville.

The Falcons, the preseason pick to win the ECC title, are ranked sixth in the state by the AP and enter the game with a 5-0-0 record (14-0 in the ECC) and have yet to be severely tested.

"We get a chance at the big one," Farmville Central coach Gilbert Carroll said. "But I'm excited. The kids know they don't have much of a chance to make the playoffs, but they know if we beat them we've still got a slim chance. If we don't, we don't have any chance."

In other games this week, Ayden-Grifton (4-2-0, 2-1-0) travels to North Pitt (2-5-0, 0-3-0), D.H. Conley (1-5-0, 0-1-0) journeys to White Oak (4-2-0, 1-0-0), Roanoke (5-2-0, 3-2-0) goes to Tarboro (5-1-0, 4-0-0), Williamston (3-3-0, 2-2-0) plays host to Roanoke Rapids (4-2-0, 3-2-0) and Jamesville (3-4-0, 2-3-0) entertains Midway (2-4-0). Greene Central (4-3-0, 1-2-0) is open.

In games last week, Ayden-Grifton defeated Greene Central, 15-7. West Carteret bombed D.H. Conley, 40-7. Bertie defeated Roanoke, 21-6, and Jamesville routed Matamoras, 58-16. Williamston had an open date last week.

Farmville Central Come Friday night Farmville Central coach Gilbert Carroll hopes his Jaguars can provide Charles B. Aycock with an experience the Falcons have yet to face this season.

"You know they haven't had to play from behind all year," Carroll said. "I'm sure coach (Dave) Thomas would like to see how his team reacts to being behind."

Carroll hopes Aycock is afforded that opportunity two nights from now. He realizes, however, it will take a superior effort by his club for it to have a chance against the unbeaten Falcons.

"I feel like we can beat 'em but whether we go out and do it on the field I don't know," Carroll said. "It will take our best ball game of the year for us to win."

"I mean we've got to play our best on offense, on defense and on the special teams for four quarters. We haven't done that this year. But I don't think anybody has."

The Falcons are led by Ken Grantham, the league's leading rusher with 938 yards and 15 touchdowns. Grantham is coming off a 212-yard, four-touchdown performance against Southern Nash.

Aycock, which leads the league in nearly all offensive categories, runs out of the straight-T but will occasionally use a wing or slot back. On defense, the Falcons run a six-man front with the linebackers at times turning it into an eight-man front.

"They're equally balanced on both sides (with the T)," Carroll said. "They will use a wingback, a slot back or a flanker. They'll run the power play right at you and the inside trap also."

Two weeks ago Ayden-Grifton used a 6-3-2 defense at times to try to slow down the Falcon attack. It worked, but the Falcons went to the air for two second-half touchdowns.

"We may use a little of that (the 6-3-2), but that won't be our only defense," Carroll said. "We're a whole lot more of a multiple defensive team than offensive team. It's just the nature of our team."

Ayden-Grifton It will be a wary Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls who leads his Chargers onto the field Friday night against North Pitt for the third and final leg of the unofficial Pitt County Championship.

The Chargers have already beaten Pitt County foes Farmville Central (14-0) and D.H. Conley (14-6). Now, only North Pitt remains to be beaten.

"We'd like to be able to look back when our season ends and say we beat all three of our county rivals," Sauls said. "That's certainly a motivating factor for our players."

The Chargers, who are coming off a 15-7 victory over a tough Greene Central team, are favored going into the game, but Sauls said his team won't take the Panthers lightly.

"We've got to guard against that (being overconfident). We can't afford a letdown," Sauls said. "We've tried to instill into our players that we have to have maximum effort on every play."

"It's a very key point: we need to be prepared and ready to play when we go over there. They're at home and they've played much better at home than on the road and that let's us know we have to be alert to that fact."

Ayden-Grifton enters the game with one of the quickest and most aggressive defenses in the conference. In six games this season the Charger defense has shut out two opponents, allowed two others only six points and earlier this season put together a string of 11 straight scoreless quarters.

In North Pitt, the Chargers face a defense that might not be as quick or as good but may be more confusing in its alignments.

"They play a multiple-eight front. They try to confuse your blocking schemes," Sauls said. "We haven't played anyone quite like that this year and it's a challenge in that respect."

North Pitt Pardon North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell if he feels more like a medic than a football coach, it's just that lately the Panthers have had more than their share of injuries.

Going into Friday's night Homecoming game with Ayden-Grifton, Chappell said the Panthers have at least eight starters — most of whom play both offensive and defense — who are injured.

"We're banged up a lot right now," Chappell said. "Our whole backfield is hurting."

The most devastating loss is that of tailback Mitchell Cox, the Panthers' leading rusher this season. Cox, a junior tailback, hurt his thigh two weeks ago against Southern Nash. He played against Greene Central last week but managed just 26 yards.

"He's out for the time being," Chappell said. "And he may not play anymore this season."

Others hurting are quarterback Ken Whitehurst and fullbacks Donnie Whitehurst and Tommie Harris and center Barry Gurkins. Tight end Dennis Bradley has the chicken pox.

"Our biggest problem this year has been that we've been worn down," Chappell said. "We've played everybody tough in the first half but we don't have enough people to substitute and give the starters a breather."

"And now that we've got people hurt and having to sit out we're just more short-handed than ever. We've been able to stay with the teams we've played in the first half but if we keep losing people I don't know how long we can continue to do that."

The Chargers are not (pardon the pun) the medicine the Panthers need. Ayden-Grifton is in the midst of one its better seasons in recent times and has its eyes on a seven- or eight-win season.

"I think they're the best team we've played this year so far," Chappell said. "I know their defense is real aggressive. I'm just trying to compare them to Greene Central and I'd say they're a little more physical than Greene Central."

"Right now, though, I'm just worried about trying to move the ball on them with a new backfield."

D.H. Conley D.H. Conley coach Gerald Garner still cannot fathom what happened in his Vikings embarrassing loss to West Carteret.

"We broke down in every phase of football," Garner said. "We were the most prepared as a coaching staff as we've been all year but I just don't know what happened."

"We reverted to what was happening here two years ago (when Jimbo Walker was coach). We had four players thrown out of the game (for fighting). I was totally embarrassed."

"I just don't know what happened. Right now I can't be definite about anything. The Viking ship is not sailing very smoothly right now."

The ship received an added jolt after the game when Garner suspended two players — both seniors — indefinitely. Garner would not reveal who the players were.

"I need a Rolaids," Garner said. "Our problem is from the neck up. We've got some talent, but we're eleven individuals. We worked on (the head Monday) but it was a flat practice."

"I've been patting them on the back all season but (Monday) I layed the blame where it belonged — on them. And I think that kind of surprised them. How we'll react Friday night I have no earthly idea."

The Vikings face White Oak Friday in their second Coastal Conference game. White Oak is 4-2-0 this season, having lost to Southwest Onslow (21-15) and Jacksonville (27-6).

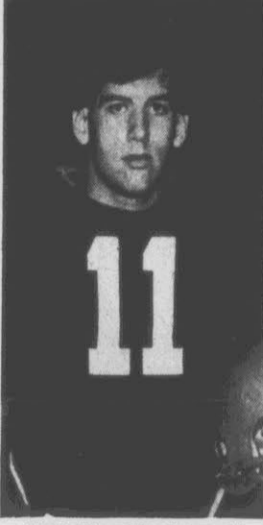

"We need a prayer," Garner said. "We'll have to play extremely well to have a chance. There is one flicker of hope: they've lost to 2-A Southwest Onslow and 4-A Jacksonville."

White Oak runs a stacked 4-4 much of the time on defense and an pro-I on offense. Quarterback Charlie Soos leads the attack with 31 completions in 57 attempts for 550 yards and five touchdowns. Soos has also run for 140 yards and three scores.

Tailback Ivory Meadows (5-6, 204 pounds) leads White Oak in rushing with 781 yards in 133 carries and 10 touchdowns. Fullback Jason Crist has rushed for 178 yards in 30 carries.

Foster Worketh While He Waiteth

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Bill Foster, coach of the University of South Carolina basketball team, hinted that a future date with East Carolina might be played in Greensboro or Charlotte, and said he would like to see some changes made in the game of basketball.

Foster spoke yesterday to the Greenville Sports Club. The former Duke University coach hit out at those who would be impatient in the building of a program. "A great example of patience is the Dallas Cowboys," he said. "That group has been together 22 years," he said in reference to the management and the head coach. "They didn't win the Super Bowl the first year, but the difficult takes a while. It's hard to win every game every Saturday — ask Bear Bryant."

He pointed out that the Top Twenty isn't the same group it always used to be. "It's good to see other teams up there for a change. I think the most predictable thing about college football now is that it is unpredictable."

"I like to think of an old saying, 'Good things cometh to he who waiteth, if he worketh like heck while he waiteth.' Patience is a virtue for coaches and players."

Foster added that everyone expects its team to go undefeated. "We have to deal with this. Sure everyone wants to win, but you are dealing with a group of 18, 19 and 20-year olds. They are young. You make mistakes, and they will make a few more because of their age. All you can do is try to build a solid foundation. In building a program, you have to be patient and have good, solid players."

Foster said that he is asked about independent status a lot. "I'm not an expert at this yet, but I feel you have to be able to do some things. You have to recruit, you have to win, you have to be able to schedule well, you must have fan interest, student interest and national exposure."

As far as the schedule is concerned, South Carolina will be playing such teams as DePaul, San Francisco, Nevada-Las Vegas and Iowa, all teams Foster says will be in the top twenty this year.

Asked if South Carolina is sorry it is not in the Atlantic Coast Conference, Foster said it would depend on who you asked at the school. "There are a group of people who would like to see South Carolina in the ACC. There is another group who would like to see the school in the Southeastern Conference. And there is another group who don't want to be in any conference. I really don't think it's a big deal either way."

Foster was asked about future dates with East Carolina and said that South Carolina owed a road date to the Pirates. (That game originally was scheduled for last year, but Foster declined to play at that time.) "We may play that next year (1982-83), but I don't know if we'll play it here. We might play it in Greensboro or Charlotte instead."

The coach was also asked about the shot clock in college basketball, and said he feels that it's coming. "How quickly will depend on how many games you have in the next year or two where teams hold the ball. I was involved in one a few years back, and it seemed the first half didn't last 20 minutes, it lasted a lifetime."

"I'd also like to see the halves add a minute, play 21 minute halves. I'd like to see less timeouts in TV games. Nobody takes a time out during the first 35 minutes of play. They wait for the TV timeouts. Then, they take the rest during the final two minutes of the game. It seems more like three and a half days than two minutes. What I'd like to see is a reduction of time outs, say three, when you are playing on TV."

Foster also pointed out that the jump ball is a thing of the past, except for the opening of the game. "After that, possession will alternate instead. Really, I don't know whether this rule is the solution, but you try throwing a ball straight up between two guys who are going to be jumping up in the air. Try and get it higher than either one of them can jump. It's not hard, it's just about impossible."

The Sports Club's next meeting will be October 27, when University of Richmond football coach Dal Shely will be the speaker.

Rampants Ranked Eighth In Latest AP Prep Poll

By The Associated Press
If you thought Marshville Forest Hills and Whiteville were close competitors for the 2A-1A division lead last week in the Associated Press poll of North Carolina high school football teams, this week should be no surprise.

For the second straight week, Forest Hills edged Whiteville by one point in the balloting by a statewide panel of sportswriters. Forest Hills, a Union County school east of Charlotte, earned 10 of 21 first-place votes and 174 points. Whiteville, from Columbus County east of Fayetteville, had eight first-place votes and 173 points.

Last week, Forest Hills out-pointed Whiteville 138-137. Meanwhile, 4A leader Fayetteville Terry Sanford and 3A pacesetter Burlington Williams retained their fairly comfortable margins.

Terry Sanford got 15 first-place votes and 196 points, to six first-place votes and 168 points for runnerup South Mecklenburg.

Moving into third was Scotland County, which hosts fourth-ranked Fayetteville Reid Ross on Friday. Jacksonville moved into fifth after defeating Wilmington New Hanover, third-rated last week but down to No. 9 this week.

In 3A, Williams had 13 first-place votes and 183 points. Boone Watauga had two first-place votes and 170 points. Lincolnton, Clinton and Kannapolis rounded out the top five.

The 2A-1A race is strictly a two-team affair, as third-ranked Randleman is 48 points out of first place. Fourth is Clayton, which traded places this week with Randleman, and fifth is Cherokee, the highest-ranked 1A team.

Forest Hills and Whiteville took opposite routes Friday night. Forest Hills crushed North Stanly, then ranked 23rd, 40-0. Whiteville outfought Tabor City, then rated No. 5, 28-20.

Here is how a statewide panel of sportswriters rates North Carolina high school football teams this week for The Associated Press. First-place votes are in parentheses, followed by records and point totals. Points are assigned on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, then nine for second, eight for third, etc.

ECU's Odom Adds Two Assistants

A graduate assistant coach and a volunteer coach have been added to East Carolina University's basketball staff for the 1981-82 season.

Don Carter, former head coach at Frederick Military Academy in Portsmouth, Va., has been named graduate assistant coach. Herb Krusen, former East Carolina star player, has been named volunteer coach.

Carter served at Frederick Military from 1979-81 as head coach, sending 20 of his players of the collegiate ranks on scholarship. The team recorded a 23-3 record last year, best single season record in the school's history. Prior to Frederick, Carter was coaching at Northern Nash in Rocky Mount.

"Don Carter brings to our program proven coaching abilities," said head coach Dave Odom. "Don will work closely with me in on-the-floor coaching in practice sessions and will be in charge of scouting."

Krusen started for three seasons at ECU, including Odom's first as head coach. As an all-South Independent team honoree, Krusen set single season and career free throw records at ECU. Following college, Krusen played in West Germany in the European professional league, averaging 31 points a game.

"It is nice to have one of your own back with you," noted Odom. "Herb has a feel for East Carolina that outsiders could not have. It is a thrill to have him back. Herb will coach the academic progress of our players and aid with on-campus recruiting and on-the-floor coaching in practice."

Carter is a native of Nash County with a B.A. degree from UNC-Wilmington. Krusen is a native of Silver Spring, Md.

ECU JV Roundball Back

For the first time in nearly a decade, East Carolina University will play a junior varsity basketball schedule.

"Having 14 players on scholarship, several of those being young players with good potential, I felt it would be good to provide these players an opportunity of on-the-floor playing experience on a regular basis," head coach Dave Odom said in explaining the return of JV basketball to ECU.

"It would be practically impossible to get these young players the playing time they so desperately need without a JV team. This is being done with minimal expense to the athletic department. This will certainly give our players and our program a chance to continue to build the type program that everyone connected with our university would like to see."

The JV team will play a schedule of six games: Dec. 2 at Chowan; Jan. 11 vs. Frederick Military; Feb. 8 at Louisburg; Feb. 10 vs. Chowan; Feb. 15 vs. Louisburg; and Feb. 17 vs. Mt. Olive. All home games will start at 5 p.m.

Odom noted that student body participation is also encouraged for this club.

"There has been a great deal of interest in our basketball program from the student body at large. Non-scholarship players will be welcomed, as I am sure we have good hidden talent without our student ranks."

Coaching the JV team will be assistants Don Carter and Herb Krusen.

Alamance Pro Leads Open

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Alamance Country Club golf pro Richard Lee says the first round of the 54-hole North Carolina Open Golf Tournament Tuesday was "an up-and-down round."

"But I think a lot of good things happened to me out there today," said Lee, who shot a 2-under-par 68 to take a three-shot lead. "I made a lot of putts and it seemed like every time I made a bogey, I'd come right back with a birdie."

Rutherfordton's Tony Jackson held second place with 71, while Whispering Pine's Stuart Taylor was at third place after a two-over-par 72.

Dale Morey of High Point, who reached the finals of the U.S. Senior Amateur at Pinehurst, heads a group of five players tied at 73.

Montreal Sends Burris Against Valenzeula

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It could be said that Ray Burris is on the spot. But the 31-year-old Montreal right-hander doesn't see it that way. "It's a game and I'll be Ray Burris, that's all," said the 6-foot-5, 200-pounder, referring to tonight's second game of the National League Championship Series, which will start for the Expos. "All we can do is go out and do our best, play the game the way we played it to get here. I'll just try to throw strikes, like usual."

Burris, 9-7 with a 3.05 earned run average during the regular season, will oppose Los Angeles rookie sensation Fernando Valenzeula, 13-7 with a 2.48 ERA. The game begins at 8:20 p.m., EDT.

Burris made his comments moments after the Dodgers whipped the Expos 5-1 Tuesday to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-five series.

The victory was Los Angeles' 19th over Montreal in the last 20 games between the teams at Dodger Stadium, and the Dodgers' 17th in their last 20 games against the Expos since the beginning of the 1980 season.

"I feel good about getting this chance," said Burris. "I've waited 8½ years for this opportunity. I feel very confident. If I didn't, I wouldn't be here. The key will be keeping the Dodgers, especially their first two hitters, off base. They're an aggressive club and they can hurt you so many ways."

They hurt the Expos Tuesday with excellent pitching by Burt Hooton, key hits by Steve Garvey, Ron Cey and Mike Scioscia and a squeeze bunt by Bill Russell in the second inning, and successive homers by Pedro Guerrero and Scioscia in the eighth.

"It's only one game, we've got to forget about this game now, it's over," said losing pitcher Bill Gullickson, who gave up five hits and two runs in seven innings. "They played good ball, we played good ball."

"Everyone knows we haven't won a lot here, but I think we're a different ball club now then when we lost all those games."

The key hit of the second inning, when the Dodgers took a 2-0 lead that stood up until they got their final three runs in the eighth, was a run-scoring double by Cey, who later scored on Russell's bunt. Cey's hit came on a 3-2 pitch with Garvey off and running from first base.

"I wanted to run the pitch in on him but I got it out over the plate and he went to right with it," said Gullickson. "If I get it inside, I jam him."

"That one inning, I fell behind guys. I didn't go right at them. I tried to nibble a little bit."

"What can I say? The Dodgers have some magic going here at Dodger Stadium, but I happen to think we have a similar thing in Montreal," said Carter. "I thought we played good, sound baseball today."

"Gullickson pitched well today, and he's been exceptional for us all year. For some reason, we just don't seem to get him many runs. Reardon didn't seem to have that pop in his fastball today."

Blocked FG Pirate Play Of The Week

It was the defensive play of a defensive game.

Corner back Gerald Sykes, who had earlier intercepted a pass and broken up three other attempts, lined up on the right side of the defense as Richmond's Scott Schramme set up for a 41-yard field goal attempt. Earlier, Sykes had been feet short of blocking a Schramme field goal attempt which was wide right.

The score was 10-7, and Richmond had gained the momentum after defensive end Jody Schulz had set up the Pirates' first touchdown with a 24-yard interception return to the Spider eight yard line. Richmond had marched to the ECU 24 and was now threatening to take the lead in the fourth period.

Schulz, a standout all game, was lined up on the left side of the defense as the Pirates prepared for an all-out rush.

The snap was clean, the set good. Schramme strided forward, but Sykes had sprinted untouched to the ball from the right side and blocked the ball cleanly. The ball bounced three times toward the left side of the defense and Schulz scooped it up and raced 26 yards to the Richmond 32.

Three plays later, quarterback Carlton Nelson turned an aborted option into a magician's dance through the center of the Spider defense for a 29-yard touchdown run and eventually a 17-13 Pirate win.

"I wasn't touched on the blocked kick," Sykes said. "The key to the whole thing was Mike Davis."

Davis, a senior defensive end, lined up inside Sykes and made a hard charge to the inside on the snap. He drew two men with him, allowing Sykes to have an open shot at the ball.

Deacons Rout Pirate Women

Wake Forest University thoroughly dominated East Carolina's women yesterday in gaining a 9-0 tennis victory.

The Deaconesses so dominated play that East Carolina won as many as three games in a set only twice during the afternoon, and both of those came in the same match, the number two doubles.

The loss dropped the Lady Pirates to 2-3. They return to action on October 25, hosting the Duke Racquet Club.

HRs Bring Relief For Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was like a burden lifted from the shoulders of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"It's awfully nice to put the pressure on the other side for a change by winning the first game," said right fielder Pedro Guerrero.

Guerrero and Mike Scioscia hit consecutive home runs in the eighth inning Tuesday to help the Dodgers beat Montreal 5-1 in the first game of their National League Championship Series. It was a feat accomplished only twice before in the NL playoffs. Cincinnati had consecutive homers in 1970 from Tony Perez and Johnny Bench, and George Foster and Bench did it for the Reds again in 1976.

"I do believe this was one of the best games we've played recently," Guerrero said. "But really I think we played well in all the games against Houston (in the NL West Division playoff) and we could just as easily have won that in three games."

The Dodgers became the first team in baseball to return from a 2-0 deficit in a five-game series by beating Houston three straight in that series. Both Dodger losses were by one run.

Ron Cey, who hadn't played since September 8 because of a broken left forearm, got the eighth inning uprising started with a two-out single. Guerrero, who had moved from third to right field to accommodate Cey's return, then ripped a Jeff Reardon pitch down the left field line. The ball landed about two rows back over Dodger Stadium's short left field wall.

"When I first hit it, I didn't think it would go out because it was only a line drive," Guerrero said. "But I stopped and watched it for a second, and I realized it was hit hard enough."

Scioscia's homer made it 5-0 and put the lid on the Dodgers victory.

"It was important to get a jump on the Expos today," said Cey, whose arm was broken when he was hit by a pitch from San Francisco's Tom Griffin.

Cey's first trip to the plate Tuesday followed a leadoff single by Steve Garvey in the second inning. Cey was greeted by a rousing ovation from the crowd of 51,273, and he responded by hitting a 3-2 Bill Gullickson delivery down the right field line for a double. Scoring Garvey. Cey went to third on a single to center by Scioscia and scored on a suicide-squeeze bunt by Bill Russell.

Rose Netters Win 13th

KINSTON — Greenville Rose's girls' tennis team extended its unbeaten string to 13 straight with a hard-fought 6-3 victory over Kinston Tuesday afternoon in a Big East Conference match.

Rose, now 13-0 overall and 11-0 in the league, won four of six singles matches to take a lead it never lost.

Howard Fired As Padres' Manager

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Frank Howard, despite being fired as manager after the San Diego Padres finished last in the National League West for the second straight year, believes he helped stabilize the young club.

"I do think I got the team going in the right direction," Howard said by telephone from his Green Bay, Wis., home after learning Tuesday of his dismissal. "We had two position players when I got there, now there are six."

But Howard said the announcement did not come as a surprise.

"When you've been in this business as long as I have, you can sense what's coming," said Howard, who coached four years with Milwaukee and played 15 years with the Los Angeles Dodgers and Washington Senators.

"Nobody feels good about it, but that's baseball," he continued. "I don't feel sorry for myself. We didn't win enough ball games."

"It was a difficult decision, but it had to be made in the best interest of the club," said Jack McKeon, Padre vice president and director of baseball operations. "Frank is a good baseball man and a hard worker, and we wish him nothing but the best."

Club President Ballard Smith said the Padres are looking for a replacement to manage a team that finished the 1981 season with a cumulative 41-69 record and ended both halves of the strike-split season in last place.

McKeon denied a published report in the San Diego Tribune that he would replace Howard on the field. He didn't rule out that possibility, however.

"No way, it won't be McKeon," he said. "I never considered myself a candidate for the job, although I've got the experience and I'm probably as qualified as anyone going."

'No-Name' Offensive Line Key To UNC Attack

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Take the nation's leading scorer and one of the top rushers from a team and there should be a noticeable difference.

Not so for fourth-ranked North Carolina, thanks to its "No-Name" offensive line. The line was so dubbed by Tar Heel coach Dick Crum during his Tuesday news conference in the aftermath of North Carolina's 48-10 victory over Wake Forest during which tailback Tyrone Anthony shook off his backup status to Kelvin Bryant with 224 yards.

That, together with Anthony's backup gaining 158 yards, has made the Tar Heels the No. 1 rushing team in the country.

"They've toiled long and hard in the trenches," Crum said of the offensive line. "I call them the no-name offensive line. They play together as a team. Their style of play is similar. They have very few missed assignments."

"They are all very, very similar. There is not one outstanding player but there is not one weak one either."

Right tackle Mike Marr said balance has been the key to their success.

"There is not one strong spot or one weak spot the defense can pick out," the 6-foot-4, 262-pound senior said. "Anytime you have balance, it helps the offense."

Marr doesn't believe the newly acquired attention will affect the offensive line's performance any more than the team's high national ranking affects any member of the team.

"There is no one with an inflated ego on this team. And that's the way he (Crum) wants it," Marr said, referring to Crum's philosophy of maintaining the same emotional level each week.

Defensive tackle Jack Parry said without the even-keel approach the Tar Heels could be in trouble.

"When you get too high, it can come crashing down on you if things go wrong," he said.

But both agreed it would be more difficult to keep on that same emotional plateau this week because the Tar Heels travel to Raleigh to take on arch-rival North Carolina State, 4-1, in a big Atlantic Coast Conference game.

Crum believes the rivalry is more interesting than many of the big-name matchups in the nation "because the schools are so close together and many of the kids went to high school together."

And the Tar Heel mentor knows what's in store for his team Saturday.

"Someone told me that coach (Monte) Kiffin had looked at all five game films," Crum said. "I said I only thought we could trade three, so you know they're going to be ready."

"I expect a tough football game. If I were a fan, I'd like to see it."

Crum said the N.C. State defense will be the best the Tar Heels have played to date. And the North Carolina defense will have to contend with the No. 3 rusher in the country in freshman Joe McIntosh (161 yards a game). Game time is 1 p.m. Saturday in Carter-Finley Stadium.

SWE Whips Jaguars In ECC Volleyball

FARMVILLE — Southwest Edgecombe's volleyball team easily defeated Farmville Central in two matches yesterday as the two teams finished up the regular season. The Lady Cougars won the first match, 15-4, 15-9 and the second, 15-7, 15-3.

The victory gave Southwest the conference championship for the Eastern Carolina Conference.

Teresa Mayo had five points in the first win for SWE while Bridget Jenkins had five in the second. Shelia Staton had 11 points in the second two games for the Lady Cougars.

Pant-HERS 15-5, 9-15, 15-6 in the first match and then took the second, 15-12, 15-7 to conclude their season with two victories. A-G ends the season at 3-7 in the league and 4-10 overall. North Pitt finishes up 3-7 in the league.

Josie Braxton and Lisa Ward had five points for A-G in the first game of the first match while Sherry Bradley had eight points in the second game for North Pitt. Ward had 10 points in the third game for North Pitt.

Angela Griffin led Ayden-Griffon with four points in the first game of the second match and Cora Faison had six points and Pam Dunn four in the second game.

WILMINGTON — Wilmington Hoggard High School rolled to a pair of easy volleyball victories over Rose High School yesterday.

Hoggard won the first match, 15-1, 15-6, then came back with 15-6 and 15-8 victories in the second to sweep the day's action.

GCA Blanks Faith, 5-0

Phil Bird and Joseph Sasser both scored two goals to lead Greenville Christian to a 5-0 victory over Faith Christian Academy and a share of the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference soccer regular season championship.

The Knights, now 9-2 this season, ended up the league schedule tied with Goldsboro Christian School. GCA drew a first-round bye for next weekend's league tournament. Before then, however, the Knights will play at nonconference foe Ridgeway Tuesday.

Bird and Sasser both scored two goals in the opening half and Troy Hudson added a fifth GCA goal to give the Knights a 5-0 lead at intermission. Bird had one assist and Mike Bragg two.

GCA had 41 shots to Faith's nine. GCA goalie John Parnell had nine saves while Faith's Greg Bridges had 20 saves.

STANHOPE — Southern Nash gained a pair of volleyball victories over Greene Central High School's girls yesterday in the final match of the regular season.

Southern Nash won the opening match, 15-8, 15-12, then took the second 10-15, 15-12, 15-12.

"We had an outstanding game from Amy Kearney and Letha Taylor and outstanding service from Cindy Hicks," coach Tim Corbett said.

Greene Central finished with a 4-6 Eastern Carolina Conference mark and a 6-8 overall record.

Controversy Swirls As AL Playoffs Open

NEW YORK (AP) — As often happens where Billy Martin is concerned, the game came out second-best.

The outcome of Tuesday night's opener in the best-of-five American League Championship Series was second-best as far as Martin and the Oakland A's were concerned. They dropped a 3-1 decision to the New York Yankees in a game overshadowed by some unruly New York fans.

"You know, we didn't exactly get blown away tonight," Martin said. "I thought we had them on the ropes just as much as they had us."

The one rope Martin would like to forget came off the bat of New York's Graig Nettles in the first inning with two out and the bases loaded. It was a line drive to left-center field, clearing the bases and giving the Yankees all the runs they needed.

Nettles, a left-handed batter who rarely hits to the opposite field, connected on an 0-2 pitch from Oakland ace Mike Norris.

"Any time a pitcher gets two strikes on a hitter he shouldn't give in," Martin said.

Norris didn't really. He just got a screwball higher than he intended.

"I don't feel they whipped me," the A's right-hander said. "I hope I get a chance to get them again. I respect them, but they didn't whip me. I felt good, had my adrenalin going, the ball was moving like I wanted and I didn't walk anyone after the first inning."

But the first inning was the game. New York's Larry Milbourne singled with one out and Dave Winfield walked.

After Reggie Jackson forced Winfield at second, Jackson stole second and Oscar Gamble walked on a 3-2 pitch before Nettles delivered his double.

"I did everything I wanted to do, except for that one pitch," Norris said. "I just didn't get it down. After that, I pitched as well as I could. I was around the plate all evening. The only lapse I had was when Reggie stole second."

Martin was more upset with the umpires and the fans — so were Bob Lemon and the Yankees — than with Norris.

With the Yankees at bat in the bottom of the seventh, fans in the upper right field stands set off some fireworks and one of them threw a baseball that hit A's right fielder Tony Armas.

"Some stupid fan threw it," said Martin, who added that he planned to talk with AL President Lee MacPhail about the way the umpires handled the situation. "It hit him in the back. Some idiot threw it."

"I asked the umpires to make an announcement, but they said it might incite the fans more. They should have been forced to make an announcement. If it happens again it should be an automatic forfeit. They (the umpires) think they can control the crowd, but they can't. It's got to stop or someone's gonna get hurt. I'll have a lot more to say to Lee MacPhail."

Marty Springstead, the crew chief, said: "In my judgment, although the fans were unruly, they were not out of control. I thought anything I did might incite it more. I thought it might mushroom. I didn't feel that one isolated incident should warrant a warning. If it had broken out again I probably would have made an announcement.

bases were loaded. Graig Nettles then drilled a double up the alley in left-center field, chasing all three runners home. That was all starter Tommy John and relievers Davis and Gossage needed.

Nettles, who battled a slump throughout the divisional playoffs against Milwaukee, glowed over his opposite-field double.

"I don't often hit to left field," he said. "That's a stroke Billy taught me a long time ago."

The A's had John in trouble in the third when they loaded the bases with two out. But cleanup hitter Tony Armas bounced into an inning-ending force out. They got their only run in the fifth on a single by Rob Picciolo, Rickey Henderson's second double of the game and an infield out. But the Yankees held them off after that.

"They had great pitching," said Martin. "We just didn't get the key hits."

Yanks Wondering Why Umpires Not The Best

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees went to bat against the Oakland A's and the umpires.

Relief pitcher Ron Davis and Manager Bob Lemon didn't particularly care for the way Nick Bremmigan handled things around home plate and owner George Steinbrenner claimed the umpiring crew wasn't the best available for the American League Championship Series.

Despite a 3-1 victory over the Oakland A's in the opener of the playoffs at Yankee Stadium Tuesday night, many of the Yankees were especially upset about Cliff Johnson's stalling tactics in the Oakland eighth.

The Oakland slugger stepped out of the box three times while Davis was pitching in an apparent attempt to unnerve him, delaying the game for 10 minutes.

Eventually Johnson drew a walk and the pitcher was removed from the game by Lemon. Davis said Johnson's in-again, out-again act didn't annoy him as much as Bremmigan's refusal to allow any warm-up pitches during the delay.

"Johnson has the right to get out all he wants," Davis said. "Who cares? But the ump has to allow me to throw when I want to. If it takes him (Johnson) five to eight minutes to get ready, then I should be allowed to get my arm loose again."

"It wasn't 'Billy Ball' or any of that stuff," he added, referring to Oakland Manager Billy Martin. "The ump wouldn't allow me to throw. I should have the right to throw the ball but he said 'no.'"

Rich Gossage, who relieved Davis at that point, said he was determined not to be victimized by the situation.

"I just figured I'd go out and not let myself get bothered or upset by anything," said Gossage, who retired five straight batters to secure the victory.

"I know Billy Martin has got tactics to try and upset pitchers. I thought about it last night and I wouldn't put anything past Billy. I thought he'd try something and if he did, I wasn't going to let it upset me."

Martin later admitted to using such tactics in the past, but insisted that Johnson was strictly on his own Tuesday night.

Lemon, meanwhile, said he was unhappy with the way Bremmigan had handled the situation.

"That was my complaint, the A's were taking too much time," said the Yankee manager. "The umpire was not in control. All he has to do is just tell him to get in and hit."

Bremmigan said that he had done exactly that with Johnson.

"I can order him to get up there and I did," the umpire said. "But I can't make him do it faster. He said, 'I can take my time, can't I?' I told him I'm not going to protect you if you step out. But there's no rule that the umpire can use in that situation."

"I can order the pitcher to pitch if he refuses to step into the box. He didn't refuse, he just took his sweet time. There's nothing I can do about that."

After the game, an angered Steinbrenner claimed "We're not going with our best" umpires. "One member of that crew is excellent. But the others...the AL knows it's not going with its best umpires. These are the two best teams playing for the league championship. We should have our best out there. If (AL president) Lee MacPhail tells me they're the best, then fine. You go ask him. I don't think he'll say that."

Assassins Follow Old Tradition

By ALY MAHMOUD
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The assassins who cut down President Anwar Sadat confessed that they belong to a fanatic Moslem sect whose leaders Sadat released from prison a decade ago, official sources report.

The Defense Ministry reported that the three gunmen who were wounded and captured are members of Takfir Wal Hegira, or Atonement and Flight from Sin, a 30-year-old offshoot of the outlawed Moslem Brotherhood that is dedicated to the murder of Moslem leaders they regard as heretics.

The ministry said the leader of the plot, 1st Lt. Khaled Ahmed Shawk el-Istambouly, was among those captured. The ministry said his brother was arrested last month in the roundup of Sadat's opponents, and security officials said the brother was one of the leaders of the sect.

The group follows in the ancient tradition of the Hashashin sect which in the 11th century preached murder to eliminate political foes. The word hashashin, meaning users of hashish, later was corrupted to assassin.

Takfir Wal Hegira was founded by Sayyed Kotob, an Islamic scholar who was hanged in 1966 for plotting to assassinate President Gamal Abdel Nasser. Some 200 of the sect's members were rounded up and jailed in the Toureh Detention Camp 15 miles south of Cairo, where this correspondent shared a cell block with them for a year and a half.

Kotob's successor, Shukri Ahmed Mustafa, boasted that the sect had 4,000 members all over Egypt who were rebuilding it with funds from fanatic Moslems in Egypt and the Arab oil countries. He told me they were determined to "dismantle all Islamic regimes and then reassemble them as part of an all-Islamic caliphate under a Koranic constitution."

Mustafa said their ideology was based on "sacred hatred" of modern Islamic societies.

"Spilling the blood of heretics is the sacred duty of all Moslems," Mustafa once told me. "But we are prepared to give the ignorant a chance to dismantle their Islamic belief and restructure and verify them before accepting them as true Moslems."

He denounced all modern Moslem leaders as heretics and declared that all Moslems who failed to regard them as such automatically became heretics themselves.

The imprisoned members of the sect grew beards and dressed in knee-length shirts and sandals. They carried the Koran and prayer beads at all times and continuously preached the cleansing of Islamic societies, by force if necessary, to the other inmates.

Mustafa said members of the sect were forbidden to serve in Egypt's "national, heretical armed forces" but were encouraged to engage in secret military training on their own. Prayer in official mosques was regarded as sinful, and members were urged to marry only among themselves.

Deserters from the sect were sentenced to death in secret trials, he said, but he would not say whether any such death sentences were ever carried out.

One of the most eminent Islamic scholars at Cairo University was reported to have told Nasser that the members of the sect "are like pests. If you don't kill them, they will kill you."

Nasser kept them in detention until his death in 1970. Sadat, his successor, released them, terming their arrest illegal and saying he sought "peace and reconciliation" among all the people of Egypt.

Prophetic As To Fast Growth Area

By KEN KLEIN
Associated Press Writer
FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — "There is only one Fort Myers and 90 million people are going to find it out." — Thomas Alva Edison, inventor.

In 1914, Edison's prediction about this area, then a sleepy farming outpost, probably seemed far-fetched. But after a decade-long growth explosion, his remark seems prophetic.

The pace of migration to this resort-retirement haven that Edison claimed as a winter home has outstripped the rate of growth in Las Vegas, Houston, Tucson or any other U.S.-boom area in the last 10 years, census records show.

"We've been discovered," says farmer-turned-politician Sal Geraci. "This is one of the finer places to live. Because it is, there is no stopping its growth."

During the 1970s, when Northern cities were shrinking, the population of the Fort Myers metropolitan area grew by 94.2 percent, from 105,216 in 1970 to 204,277 in 1980, the U.S. Census Bureau says.

Those who wonder what happened to people who left cities like Cleveland and Buffalo can find answers in the mobile home parks and sprawling subdivisions here and throughout the Sunbelt.

Ten of the nation's fastest-growing metropolitan areas are in Florida, the government's latest head count revealed.

Most residents of the Fort Myers area were born somewhere else, mainly in the Midwest.

"The person who was up North fighting the cold and the slush and smog and misery considers this to be heaven on earth," says Geraci, who moved here in 1934 from Pittsburgh.

If this is paradise, growth has taken its toll, critics of the rampant expansion say.

"We're seeing the things we moved here for being degraded," says Bill Hammond, who came here in 1961 from New York and is director of Environmental Education for Lee County schools.

A $77 million jet airport is under construction, scheduled for completion next year. Other work crews are finishing Interstate 75, to connect southwest Florida to Tampa and make it easier for more Northerners to get here.

"Within a 55-mile radius of the new jetport, there are close to 1 million residential lots that haven't been built on," says Mal Schroeder, president of Lee County Bank. "Over half a million of those lots already have been sold."

In nearby Cape Coral, where the population tripled during the 1970s, only 15 percent of the homesites have been developed, says Jim Conway, executive director of the local Chamber of Commerce.

"We're expecting a growth rate of 15 percent a year," he says.

By any reckoning, Cape Coral is a phenomenon. A generation ago, the 104-square-mile city was mangrove swamps, virgin marsh and farmland.

In the late 1950s, a visiting cosmetics merchandiser named Leonard Rosen began transforming the vast area into an installment-lot sales bonanza.

His creation has been called everything from waterfront wonderland to land rape. Dredging on a grand scale, Rosen's crews dug hundreds of miles of canals and filled in swamp with the fill dirt.

Rosen, who sold out here and moved to Nevada, says he cleared more than $100 million from sales in Cape Coral.

"If, by raping the land, they mean taking land that was absolutely useless and raising it above sea level, then that's what we did," he told The Fort Myers News-Press three years ago. "If they mean we got the highest price for the land we could, then, yes, we did."

A recent opinion survey showed the primary complaints here are about traffic jams, drug smuggling and the cost of living. Public schools also received poor marks.

But overall, people are pleased about life here, the poll showed.

Full Story Of Corrupt Cop Is Not For Television

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter
NEW YORK (UPI) — For all the Moral Majority's gloomy assurances that network television has gone to hell in an X-rated porno basket, Bob Leuci's story will never be seen there — at least not in its present form.

Television is positively prissy when it comes to such fare as "Prince of the City," which opens in theaters nationwide on Oct. 23, but if the Mea Culpa of a corrupt cop can't make it in prime time, at least the cop can.

In weeks past, Leuci has been all over the tube, explaining again and again why he stopped being a crooked cop in 1971 and turned state's evidence — a move that left the New York Police Department wrapped in a tattered shroud of indictments.

But the grilling he took during the investigation was nothing compared with appearances on ABC's "Good Morning America," "20/20," and 15 to 20 individual television stations nationwide.

"It's been very much like going through the investigation in the first place," he said in an interview last week. "Journalists don't have to work in the same parameters attorneys do. They can ask any questions they want to ask. They can get personal."

Leuci, whose role in "Prince of the City" is played by Treat Williams, said most of interviewers have been fair — "which is the most I can expect." But some, he said, have shown little mercy.

"It's been rough on me," he said. "There are some journalists that came to this story with a mindset that they're against this sort of person — good or bad, honest or dishonest. The old Lillian Hellman idea (during her grilling by the Unamerican Activities Committee in the McCarthy era) seems to go around in their heads."

"Good Morning America," he said, was worst of all.

"The fellow who interviewed me hadn't read the book or seen the film," he said. "I walked on and we had exactly three minutes. He showed a clip from the film describing a specific incident in which large amount of money was taken, and he turned to me and said, 'You really stole $20,000?'"

"I had 90 seconds to respond. I just wanted to hide. I did a terrible, terrible job. I sounded like I was brain damaged."

The story of Leuci's life as a cop on the take, then as one risking his life by going undercover to help expose the very corruption in which he once participated, is told in dark and brutal terms in "Prince of the City."

It is not a pretty movie. It is violent and vile — 3½ hours of watching a human soul run through a meat grinder.

But, like much that is dark, brutal, violent and vile, it is true, and Leuci will be rebuilding his life for the rest of his life for having lived it.

"My mother and father grew up in a time of depression," he said, "and they're so much stronger than we are. We war babies of the '40s, '50s and '60s never had that kind of pressure. We've never had to deal with life or live it in a kind of negative way. We had it much easier."

The result, he said, has been a permissiveness that has blurred lines of distinction between right and wrong, making it easy for grownup children of the permissive age to justify almost anything.

"The big problem with the police is that most of the younger policemen were products of that age," he said. "The older policemen ... were a tough bunch ... Life was very simple and very clear cut for them. You could never have a Bob Leuci from those ranks. They were not concerned in any way with gray areas. It was good and evil — period. And evil was on the other side. The cops were always right."

Because of that mentality, even honest policemen turned on Leuci when he turned on his crooked comrades. He had become "a rat" in their eyes, and even today — three months after his retirement from the force — he is shunned.

Before he became a pariah, however, Leuci was one of 70 cops comprising New York's elite Special Investigating Unit — dubbed "Princes of the City" by one judge because they reported to no one, drew no assignments or paper work and seemingly could do no wrong.

But they could, and did, do a great deal of wrong, as the Knapp Commission that ultimately sent so many of them to prison proved. They used stolen drugs to keep their junkie "stoolies" in line and they took sizeable commissions for themselves from suitcases full of money seized in narcotics raids.

When Leuci — driven, he says, by conscience — went against them, two committed suicide and scores of others, many of them his closest comrades, went to prison. He escaped prosecution by cooperating.

Would he do it again in light of the results?

"There were people who died as a result of this — good people," he said.

'Just Another Missing Kid' A Lesson In Strange Priorities

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Eric Wilson disappeared July 14, 1978, four days after leaving his home in Canada to attend a summer course at Boulder, Colo. Barely months ago, Raymond Hatch and a young accomplice were sentenced to prison for killing the 19-year-old traveler in cold blood, to steal his camper.

Hatch probably will be back on the streets within 10 years, his companion much sooner.

The story of Eric Wilson, and of his family's maddening search first for their son, then for justice, through a maze of official indifference and administrative bungling is a sad lesson in the priorities of law and order.

"The system failed Eric Wilson. The system failed my brother. It killed him," Peter Wilson declares at one point in "Just Another Missing Kid," a 90-minute documentary from the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., to be broadcast on public TV in this country tonight at 8 EDT.

"Just Another Missing Kid" is as dramatic as any made-for-TV murder mystery, perhaps more so for its real-life characters. But the plot line ultimately dissatisfies, and documentary veers sharply away from slick drama.

"It's not like television, where they do it an hour, with four commercials," says Jim Conway a one-time cop from the Bronx hired by the Wilsons to pursue their son's murderers.

"Just Another Missing Kid" was produced for "The Fifth Estate," a CBC series, and Ian Parker is the correspondent for the show.

Eric Wilson called his home in Rockcliffe Park, near Ottawa, four days after leaving for Colorado to report he was having trouble with his Volkswagen van. He promised to call at 5 the next evening, and never was heard from again.

His mother and brother, Peter, go first to the Ontario Provincial Police, who refuse to enter an information about the missing youth in their international crime computer, which would alert police forces throughout North America.

Later, Peter and his father, who was living in California at the time, take their search to Nebraska, and are met with similar lack of concern.

Almost coincidentally, Hatch and his companion, Bertram Davis, are arrested in Maine, driving Eric Wilson's camper and carrying his personal belongings.

Incredibly, and despite the family's pleadings, authorities there refuse to charge either man in the case.

Asked later about his refusal to prosecute, an assistant district attorney talks lamely of "fiscal responsibility" and the rights of the accused. "Where were the Wilsons' rights?" he is asked. "That's an irony I have lived with for three years," he responds.

The FBI is brought into the case, but the federal prosecutor in Maine also declines to take the case.

Conway, now a private eye, is hired by the Wilsons, who are convinced Hatch is the killer. He approaches the suspect as an insurance investigator, and comes away with the same feeling. "I had very bad vibes from Mr. Hatch," he says later.

Conway follows a trail of canceled traveler's checks and gasoline credit card receipts through the Midwest, "like a bloodhound on an endlessly cold trail," and finally lines up several witnesses who can identify Hatch and Davis.

Harmony Prevailing In Symphony Drive

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The resounding cymbal crashes of musician-management dispute in the North Carolina Symphony have given way to harmony as the symphony works to raise badly needed funds.

Symphony ticket sales are lagging about $24,000 behind the same time last year and the symphony may run in to serious financial problems by November, symphony finance committee chairman Dr. Banks C. Talley Jr. said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the 1981-82 season has begun in relative calm, in stark contrast to the discords of the past 16 months.

The orchestra's 65 musicians want to cooperate with management to overcome the symphony's financial woes, said musicians' representative and principal oboist Ron Weddle.

"What happened between the board and the orchestra last spring and later was unfortunate, very bad for the organization," said Weddle. "But hopefully we've passed that and can get on with the business of building our support."

Board chairman Nancy Faircloth said, "After all the bloodletting, there's finally a very positive feeling about it all."

The turmoil began in June 1980, when longtime conductor John Gosling resigned, citing "lack of financial growth" of the orchestra. Three months later, musicians struck for a week in a contract dispute.

In April, the board of trustees canceled the last 24 concerts of the 1980-81 season for lack of funds, sparking another labor dispute and threats of another strike.

Musicians scoffed at the trustees' decision to cancel their newly-won contract and make large budget cuts, including the shortening of the season and reduction in number of players.

The dispute reached fortissimo level when the board hired Patrick Flynn as Gosling's replacement while musicians objected for "artistic reasons."

In late August, negotiators reached a compromise. Flynn has been retained as principal guest conductor while the search for a permanent conductor and music director continues with Flynn among the candidates.

Players and management also agreed on a new contract reflecting a scaled-down budget.

Mrs. Faircloth said fundraising efforts have been "rather successful" so far.

Flights Are Delayed By Controllers

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Promptly at 8:30 a.m., American Airlines Flight 65 eased back from the terminal gate at LaGuardia Airport on schedule and took its place behind a dozen other planes waiting to spring into the clear sky over New York.

Flight 65 was in for an unscheduled 35-minute wait. Passengers on the Detroit-bound flight Tuesday — the 72nd day of the air traffic controllers strike — weren't the only ones fidgeting in their seats and looking anxiously at their watches. Every day this month, an average of 592 flights have been delayed for a half-hour or more, the Federal Aviation Administration says.

That's nearly 10 times the average of 60 for the same period last year and means one in every 20 flights has departed at least 30 minutes late, compared with one in every 200 flights the year before.

Delays are a legacy of the strike and have been worsening recently due to growing air traffic, efforts to cut controllers' working hours and the onset of autumn weather.

Alice Magdol, partner in a New York marketing and management firm, knows the frustration.

Last week, her shuttle flight from New York to Boston was delayed an hour and 15 minutes — "longer than the flight takes," she said.

Later in the week, her flight from New York to St. Louis was 32nd in line for takeoff at LaGuardia. She arrived two hours late and missed a morning appointment.

Then, from St. Louis to Chicago on another sunny day, her plane was held two hours on the ground before takeoff.

"Things that used to be easy now are next to impossible," Ms. Magdol says. "You call to say you're going to be an hour late, and you end up two hours late. Then you go to your meeting seething mad."

The problem is most severe in the corridor from Boston to Washington, where there are more travelers and where more controllers and government officials say. But delays in the Northeast often create a ripple, with late departures here turning into late arrivals elsewhere.

The FAA says it is taking steps to reduce delays, including a cutback in flights. Meanwhile, most airlines report travelers are still being patient.

"We never said this was going to be a cakewalk," Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis said last week. "The problem is the next six months" and the situation should ease by spring, he said.

When President Reagan fired 11,500 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization shortly after the Aug. 3 walkout, the FAA's control tower manpower nationwide was trimmed from 17,000 to 10,000 controllers — including supervisors and military personnel.

With fewer controllers on the job, the intervals between planes in flight were stretched from five miles before the strike to as much as 30 miles to add an extra margin of safety.

Control towers were ordered not to clear a plane for takeoff until the flight had been assigned a spot in the landing schedule at its destination. That cut down long holding patterns and saved fuel, but made departure delays more likely.

At the same time, airlines were ordered to cut their estimated 14,000 daily flights by 25 percent and controllers were put on 48-hour weeks.

Later the number of flights was permitted to rise to 80 percent or more of pre-strike levels. But the FAA, which recently began cutting controller schedules to 40 hours a week, says that is too much traffic to handle efficiently.

Lewis has directed carriers to cut back to 77 percent to 78 percent of their pre-strike flights by Oct. 25. The cutback will be more severe at the nation's 22 busiest airports, the FAA says.

Let's go Krogering

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY
Each of these advertised items is required to be readily available for sale in each Kroger Sav-on, except as specifically noted in this ad. If we do run out of an item we will offer you your choice of a comparable item when available, reflecting the same savings or a raincheck which will enable you to purchase the advertised item at the advertised price within 30 days.

KROGER GARDEN

Our Kroger gardener tends her garden with care, so you can pick the best quality fruits and vegetables available.

FRESH SEAFOOD

Where else but Kroger can you find such a catch? Honestly fresh! The best is rushed fresh, never frozen, to us for you.

PICK ONE OR MORE

Because our produce isn't prewrapped, you can select as much or as little as you need.

PHARMACY

Getting the best value for your good health has never been more convenient. Just drop off your prescription with our registered pharmacist.

PHOTO PROCESSING

The Kroger camera and film department carries a wide variety of film, flashbulbs and other camera supplies. Plus you can leave your film with us for developing.

RESTAURANT

For ready-to-eat meals or snacks, visit the Kroger restaurant. We have a wide selection of entrees and all the trimmings like salads, vegetables and hot rolls.

DELICATESSEN

For the very best, visit the Kroger Deli. All sorts of meats and cheeses for hearty sandwiches. If you're entertaining, we'll design beautiful party trays to your order.

NUTRITION NEWS

Kroger knows you care about your family's nutritional needs and we want you to know that we care too. We have easy-to-understand facts and answers for you.

UNIT PRICING

The Kroger unit price shelf tags can help you cut your costs by showing you the price of each product by unit. Compare the cost of products of unequal sizes, so you can find the best buy.

SAY CHEESE

Kroger says cheese in many ways. In our Dairy Dept. you'll find over 200 varieties of cheese and processed cheese products.

THE CHOICE IS YOURS

At Kroger, you can choose from thousands of different grocery items, including national and Kroger brands, as well as your favorite local brands. Kroger has tremendous variety so you can get just what you need.

FRESH DAIRY

The Kroger dairy case is a showcase of fresh goodness. You'll find just about every dairy product imaginable at Kroger.

BETTER MEAT

Depend on the Kroger meat department for the best of everything. Over 200 kinds and cuts. U.S. choice beef that cooks up tender and delicious every time. Top quality pork, U.S. choice American lamb, prime veal, and grade A poultry.

FRESH PIZZA

You can get fresh, made-to-order pizza right at Kroger. Zesty sauce, lots of cheese and your choice of toppings. Pick it up hot or ready for your own oven.

BAKERY

You'll know you're near our bakery when you smell fresh baked breads, pastries and pies. And for those special occasions, ask our bakers to decorate your cake just the way you want.

GREETING CARDS

In the Kroger card shop, you'll find greeting cards for every occasion, as well as gift wrap, color coordinated ribbon and bows, and small gift items.

COSMETICS

The top name brands in make-up and fragrances. That's what you'll find at Kroger Sav-on along with a high selection of health aids, too.

OPEN DATING

To ensure that the foods you buy are really fresh, Kroger puts a freshness date on perishable items such as meat, dairy and bakery products.

Inner City Students Find Math Can Be Fun—Course

By STEPHEN C. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)

His eyes widening in amazement, Brett Moore smiled as the bank teller's terminal buzzed, beeped and flashed numbers as he made a "withdrawal" from a savings account.

At a nearby table, Johnny Simmons pulled $1 and $5 bills from a stack of money on a table and waited for his change as a young girl added up his "food bill" on an adding machine.

In the quiet, dignified atmosphere of the Connecticut Savings Bank and nine other financial institutions around the city students from New Haven's inner-city schools are learning math can be fun.

"I like it very much, I like getting involved in the bank," said Brett, a 10-year-old fifth grader from Helene Grant School. "It's as if I went to a store. It's the same thing. I like using the adding machine. I also like using the money and being the merchant."

Added Johnny, a classmate at Grant: "I like it a lot because I learn a lot of things about the bank. Math is my favorite subject because it's not that hard."

In what sponsors say is one of the only programs of its kind in the country, some 1,000 students from 12 inner-city schools are learning about banking and other industries from some 30 different private businesses and public agencies.

According to Yale University research, the bank program, which concentrates on improving a pupil's math skills, seems to be working.

Thomas Berndt, an associate professor of psychology, said his research indicated students in the program showed a 47 percent gain in achievement scores compared with students who did not participate.

"The improvements were concentrated mainly in the area of mathematics, which is most stressed in the program," Berndt said. "There was improvement in their ability to do word problems, where the information is given in words and figures, and there also were large gains in computation skills."

"I think it also is important to stress the program has a demonstrable, significant effect because it is a long-term relationship between the school and a resource," the Yale psychologist said.

"It is carried out through personal relationships between people in the bank and people in the schools, teachers and bank personnel who work together to set up a program and adapt it to what the situation requires at the time."

Sammolene Patton, the children's fifth-grade teacher, said students who have completed the program are "highly motivated as far as math is concerned," and also have increased language skills.

"When they talk about money, they talk about crediting an account, not adding," Mrs. Patton said. "They talk about debit and know that's the same as subtraction. ... When they use money they use those terms."

The classes at the bank are taught by three bank employees — Nancy Ronne, Helen Conaty and Liz Vaught — to three groups of six to eight children each. Each group from Grant goes to the bank once every three weeks for about an hour.

This week, they learned how supermarket checkers operate adding machines. As one girl punched prices for various groceries, Johnny counted his money. The bill came to $6.55 and he handed over $7. With a little coaching from Ms. Vaught, the girl counted back four dimes and a nickel in change.

On the teller terminal, the computations were a little more complicated. Ms. Conaty handed Brett a savings passbook with $500 in an account and asked him for a $225 withdrawal. He went through the motions smoothly, entering numbers

Early Signals Of Depression

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers say they may be on the verge of being able to predict a person is about to develop serious depression, the nation's most prevalent mental illness.

Dr. Herbert Y. Meltzer, director of the University of Chicago's Laboratory of Biological Psychiatry, said in an interview with the Chicago Tribune Monday that some researchers believe severe depression is caused by a chemical imbalance in the brain.

Meltzer said there is now strong evidence that a blood test for the chemical imbalance is reliable, which means doctors would have a relatively simple test for biologically caused depressions.

into the terminal and placing the passbook correctly in the machine so the new balance could be printed.

"It's a pleasure to see this much excitement in children," said Mrs. Ronne, the personnel director. "They love the computer and these are things the school system can't afford to provide them. And the testing results have made it all worthwhile."

When the trip to the bank is over, Mrs. Patton conducts follow-up lessons during math classes, reviewing the skills the students learned and preparing them for the next visit.

"I think the major reason for success last year was the teacher went back and worked on much of what we did on this," Mrs. Ronne said. "They also ran a book fair using the skills they learned in the class."

The students, meanwhile, are using their new skills for more practical — and immediate — endeavors.

Said Brett: "I go to the store a lot now for my mother."

Chimed in Johnny: "So do I — and I buy a lot of gum."

NICKNAMED NEW DELHI (AP) — Afghan opponents of pro-Moscow President Babrak Karmal have nicknamed him "Shah Shuja" after a puppet ruler installed in Afghanistan by British troops in the 19th century, a Western diplomat reports.

Television Cable Channel Is Run Entirely By Kids

By ELLEN PORATH
Associated Press Writer
SUN PRAIRIE, Wis. (AP) — Chris Kerwin, a two-year veteran of the TV news business, is the perfect professional at the scene of a story — barking orders, setting up sound equipment, focusing a portable color camera for a tight closeup. He is 12 years old.

A slender towhead with dimples and an infectious smile, Chris delivers his commentary with polish, ignoring the crowds that invariably gather when he and the rest of his pint-sized news team show up.

Chris and 39 other Sun Prairie youngsters aged 9 to 14 are beginning the third year of a unique broadcasting project — KIDS-4, a cable television channel run completely by children.

"It's totally dedicated to children. They decide what goes on and when," said Nancy McMahon, president of Erin Broadcasting and executive director of KIDS-4.

"Just think of a typical television operation and reduce the height of the participants." The project has an operating budget of about $20,000 a year, provided in part by the city and the Sun Prairie Cable Commission. Parents are forming a "Friends of KIDS-4" to support the channel.

The staff includes a 20-child production crew picked through auditions, a 12-child programming committee selected by Ms. McMahon and eight cadets being trained for next year. Although the project is not directly affiliated with the Sun Prairie School District, all participants must be students in the district.

A few adult volunteers are on hand for safety reasons and to give technical advice if the kids request it. But there have been no accidents in two years of operation, and once the training period is over the youngsters need little help with the equipment.

"I'm only the adult producer. It isn't important what I think they want to talk about (on the shows). It's what they want to talk about," Ms. McMahon commented. "In so many situations with children, adults do the talking, not the listening."

"They try to give as little advice as possible," said 11-year-old Jon Garrett, beginning his second year with KIDS-4. "We do everything. We make it, we produce it, we write it, we film it."

"I usually do film. I'm not usually talent. I'm a technician," he added with no small pride.

Adults on the project have been surprised that jobs behind the camera are far more popular than on-camera spots. But the reason is obvious to the kids.

"I get to see how it works,"

Chris explained.

There are no child stars on KIDS-4, which is available in about 4,000 Sun Prairie households. "No one child gets singled out," Ms. McMahon said. "They're simply too young to cope with that kind of attention. And blame."

The children's channel is on every day and features about two hours a week of locally produced programs. Last year, KIDS-4 produced a weekly news show and special programs such as call-in shows and coverage of Sun Prairie High School hockey games.

This Oct. 15, the crew will take part in a special presentation at an American Council for Better Broadcasts conference in Washington, D.C. The Sun Prairie youngsters will talk with children in Australia through a live satellite hook-up.

The purpose of KIDS-4 is not to turn out miniature journalists, Ms. McMahon said.

"We hope to teach them to be literate consumers of the media," she said. "We didn't set out to produce little David Brinkleys and Howard Cosells — although we may have had them."

"The main thing is not a television thing," said Ms. McMahon's assistant, Pat O'Brien, whose 10-year-old daughter, Anne, is beginning her second year with KIDS-4. "It gives them a sense of responsibility. It gives them a sense of accomplishment."

It gives them an awareness of the community they didn't have before."

It also teaches the children spelling, writing, mathematics, history, teamwork and leadership, Ms. McMahon added.

Besides what it's taught the children, the project has shown the adults what children can do, given the chance.

MANY MORE BODIES

Emergent Africa Suffers Bleak Starting Record

By MORT ROSENBLUM
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — "Slowly, slowly," goes an Ethiopian proverb, "an egg will walk by its own feet." Optimists who see Africa as a symbolic egg say it will hatch into prosperity by the year 2000. Others expect it, if not to crack, to simply rot away.

So far, the record is bleak: 50 coups d'etat, a dozen wars, 5 million refugees, growing starvation among a population expected to double in 20 years. Each year, African problems affect the world with greater impact.

A significant number of optimists acknowledge that emergent Africa started off tragically but say this has produced a new realistic approach.

"We had to see for ourselves, like a kid who was told not to play with matches," says Elebe Ma Ekono, a Zairian Cabinet minister and writer. "We were burned, and now we know."

The pessimists say it may be too late. Most indicators, they say, point to more and more suffering for individuals and nations, until drastic, immediate changes are made.

Vast mineral deposits, fertile lands and rich human resources lend weight to optimism. But, at the same time, Africa's immense diversity stimulates internal conflict and outside interference.

From the Strait of Gibraltar to the Cape of Good Hope, 400 million Africans speak 2,500 languages, and 10 percent of them also speak English, French, Arabic, Portuguese or Spanish.

Africans in 1981 eat grub under leaf shelters, and they split atoms. They squat in open-air markets and casbahs, trading old silver coins for battered teapots, and they stroll down block-long supermarket aisles in Pierre Cardin pullovers.

Despite the diversity, common threads weave the 52 states tightly together. Black nations, if not by choice, are linked inextricably to South Africa. Arab North Africa, increasingly, is part of the whole.

Their future depends not only on economic development of the richest but also on the simple survival of the poorest.

Encroaching desert is turning good African land to sand at a rate of five acres a minute, and nearly an acre of forest is lost with every passing second.

Since 1960, the number of mouths to feed has doubled, but food production has hardly grown. Nearly half the people on the continent face possibly critical food shortages. An African born today, on average, will not live to 45. One in five will die within a year.

Total economic aid of $6 billion a year does not even cover food imports.

Old ways of life, like the herds of game, are going fast, but the tradition of large families remains. Political turmoil, scanty communication with rural areas and religious taboos hinder family planning.

In Kenya, the average mother has eight children, and the population grows 4 percent a year, the world's highest rate. Kenya's economy, growing 1.5 percent a year, slips ever farther behind.

Gulfers are widening between rich and poor. In cities, top officials and businessmen can make more in two months than peasants earn in a lifetime.

Of the world's 31 poorest countries, 21 are in Africa. Their inhabitants earn 75 cents a day on average. But most use no money at all, living on subsistence plots as they did when outsiders first explored African coasts.

"Africa is dying," Edem Kodjo, secretary general of the Organization of African Unity, said last year. Without change, he added, Africa might become "a perfect model for counterdevelopment."

There are bright spots, but crises threaten to dim them. Tanzania raised its literacy rate from 10 to 75 percent since independence 20 years ago, but it cannot pay its teachers. Zambia built hospitals but patients must bring their own food and medicine and sometimes sleep three to a bed.

African nations started out with the odds against them, odds that grew worse over the years.

Most borders were drawn at a conference of European powers in Berlin, in 1884, with little regard for the tribes that were split, the resources that were separated from badlands, and the ancient enemies made compatriots overnight.

In the mid-20th century, independence came suddenly. Few countries had more than a handful of college graduates, and overall literacy was 10 percent. Traditional cultures, after long contact with Europeans, had lost their cohesion.

Foreign powers and businesses began what Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere called "the second scramble for Africa." Former colonizers and newcomers elbowed each other aside for opportunities.

Inexperienced nations loaded up on overpriced technology that created new dependence and disappointment. Former sergeants, suddenly commanding armies, played East against West to stock arsenals.

Since then, world crises have hurt. Africans must now produce four times more than they did 30 years ago to buy the same things. The cost of importing oil is especially ruinous, taking 30 percent of what Africans earn through their own exports. In 1972, two pounds of copper bought a barrel of oil. Now it takes 45 pounds.

Droughts and floods cripple fragile economies, and often governments cannot aid victims, much less repair damage.

At the same time, mismanagement, corruption and tribalism have taken a calamitous toll. Some Africans grew rich, and a few amassed huge fortunes.

Millions of youths left their villages hoping for office jobs that would propel them into a new middle class. The more successful studied in Europe, where many stayed. But most did little more than swell the cities, where unemployment rose to over 50 percent. Few would stay down on the farm after they had seen Ouagadougou, let alone Paris.

New power elites formed, and leaders in almost every nation dismantled democratic institutions to ensure that the opposition could not unseat them. Still, half of the leaders who brought their nations to independence were deposed later in military coups.

Governments, confusing buildings with development, wasted resources on prestige projects. Agriculture was neglected as demeaning.

Today, many states can now barely afford the most basic public services.

"Between 70 and 90 percent of our rural and periurban zones don't yet have essential health care compatible with human dignity," Dr. Comlan Quenum, regional director for the World Health Organization, wrote recently.

The new realism, cited by the optimists, has begun to make an impact.

Nearly half the emerging nations espouse a form of state socialism, much of it tinged with Marxist-Leninist ideology, but most now see a role for private enterprise if it aids development.

Many who relied on Soviet aid came away disillusioned — in Egypt, in Ghana, in Mali, in Guinea, in Somalia.

Moscow grants massive military aid, and its Cuban and East German partners maintain tens of thousands of troops in Africa. But the Soviets' African allies tend to keep their options open. Officials in Soviet-backed Angola, the only black African nation with which the United States has no diplomatic ties, say they are prepared to normalize relations with Washington.

In Madagascar, a Marxist nation in the Indian Ocean, the minister for information and ideological animation, Georges Ruphin, told The Associated Press: "We are in the anti-imperialist camp, but anyone can see our relations with the West are getting better and better."

Each year, OAU leaders meet in a different capital, and host governments have spent up to $300 million for just one of these conferences. The summit extravaganza symbolizes future hope and present futility.

This June in Nairobi, heads of state assembled in starched tunics, somber business suits and colorful gowns, with an assortment of canes, fly whisks, swagger sticks and pebble-grained briefcases.

There was The Guide, The Teacher, The Old Man, The Helmsman, His Majesty, The Boy Hero of the Revolution and Comrade Prime Minister. Some stared with hostility at enemies, often neighbors. Others joked easily, old friends meeting for a palaver.

Detractors found it apt when Kodjo said the summit's main achievement was that the grouping did not disintegrate.

But in the back rooms, energetic young specialists spoke a common language of tons and meters and yields per acre. They spoke frankly about what was wrong and what must be done to fix it.

The winds of change were unleashed when Ghana won independence from Britain in 1957. Its brief history shows tragically, if in the extreme, the troubles suffered by many of those that followed.

At independence, with $1 billion in exchange reserves, high cocoa prices, good roads and an effective civil service, Kwame Nkrumah said:

"We have a duty to prove to the world that Africans can conduct their own affairs with efficiency and tolerance and through the exercise of democracy."

He dropped democracy for a single party, with his personality as its ideology. He set up 50 state corporations to run every sector of the economy. Millions of dollars went to conferences aimed at creating a single African state. Corruption drained away huge amounts.

When the military deposed Nkrumah in 1966, Ghana was badly undermined. The corporations, collapsing, had run up huge deficits. Soviet hardware lay rusting. Cocoa prices had dropped, and the economy had little diversity.

Civilian rule was returned, followed by three more coups. Desperate officers tried drastic solutions.

Remind Hunger

Basic Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford and several other former federal officials and church leaders say the nation's security must be linked to resolving world problems of hunger and poverty.

The group endorsed a statement of Bread for the World, a Christian citizens movement, saying concepts of security must be "broad enough" to include hunger-poverty issues and not focused on arms alone.

Besides Ford, other signers included former Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, evangelist Billy Graham, Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York and the Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, former general secretary of the World Council of Churches.

"A narrow focus on the military aspect of global security will lead to less, not more security," says the Rev. Arthur Simon, executive director of the Christian organization. "A dollar spent on development assistance for the poor countries may bring far more security ... than a dollar spent on armaments."

In 1979, Flight Lt. Jerry Rawlings traced illegal trading to the market mummies in Accra. So he dynamited the market. Today, a new civilian government is in power, and the market mummies are wheeling and dealing in the rubble left by the blast.

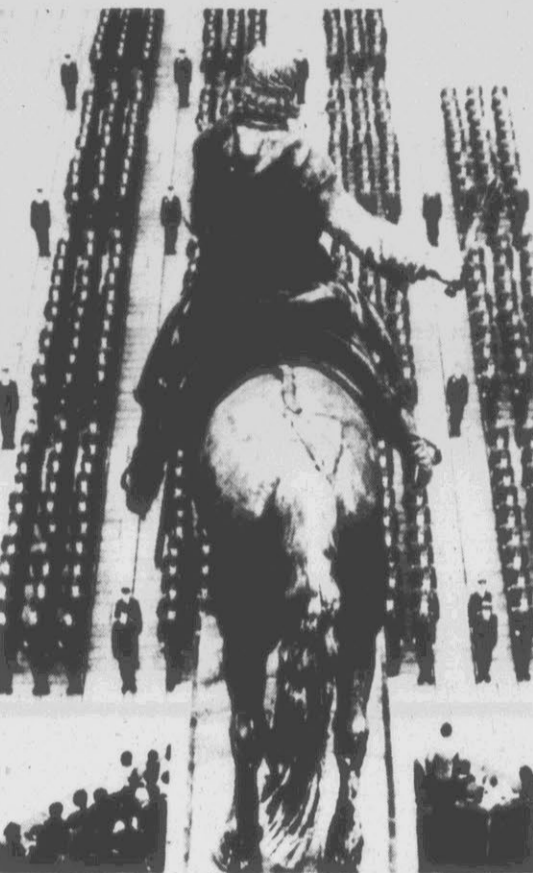

The daily minimum wage in Ghana buys a loaf of bread. Cocoa is smuggled to the Ivory Coast. Corruption is rampant. Good humor and ebullience have soured to apathy and despair.

This summer, after 1,500 villagers were killed in a tribal clash triggered by a barroom brawl, a provincial official told West Africa magazine: "We are in a difficult transitional period. The traditional ways are breaking down, and the new ones are not yet efficient."

One Ghanaian agronomist put it simply: "Life is absolute hell."

Few expected the early years of the new Africa to be easy, and there has been progress, some of it dramatic.

But if the African egg has made it a generation without breaking, it shows no immediate signs of hatching.

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE — Czech Military College grads are sworn in upon graduation in front of the statue of Jan Zizka, a 15th century Czech hero, on Prague's Vitkov Hill in August, 1981. The memorial, the world's largest mounted statue, according to UNESCO statistics, 27 feet high, 33 feet long and 15 feet wide — weighing 16.5 tons, is currently undergoing restoration. ## How to spend without worry.

Buying the things you want makes you feel good.

But spending that "little extra" you should be saving makes you feel guilty. And you worry.

One answer is to buy U.S. Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan. They'll take out that "little extra" from each paycheck for Bonds.

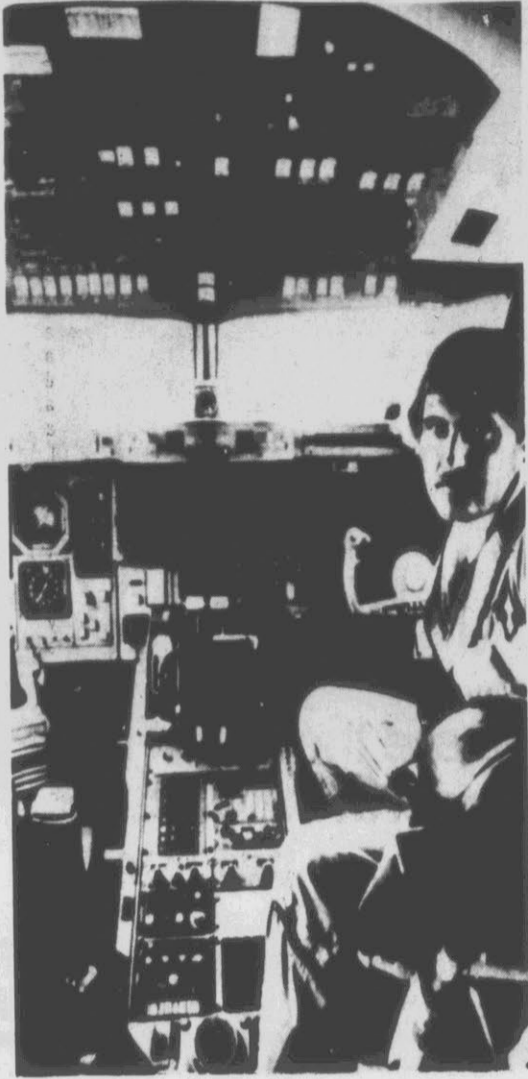

You're automatically saving the amount you want to save, without ever seeing it. So you can't spend it. You won't even miss it. But you can spend what's left of your pay (after bills) without feeling guilty.

Without worry.

Take stock in America.

When you put part of your savings into U.S. Savings Bonds you're helping to build a brighter future for your country and for yourself.

Train Pilots For Shuttle

CLASSROOM IN THE SKY — Roger Zweig sits among the instruments and controls in the cockpit of the Shuttle Training Aircraft at El Paso International Airport. Zweig trains shuttle astronauts to land the shuttle by taking them aloft in a simulator. (AP Laserphoto)

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — When the space shuttle Columbia nears the end of its second mission early next month, the 200,000-pound craft will be dropping toward Earth at a rate of 12,000 to 15,000 feet per minute.

Landing the behemoth is a delicate task. Roger Zweig knows.

Zweig is one of three National Aeronautics and Space Administration research pilots who train astronauts to fly the shuttle during descent.

"The shuttle is kind of a cross between the Concorde and a Mack truck," Zweig said. "Some parts of it are very streamlined and others are very bulky."

"We're trying to provide realistic training for the orbiter. In the spacecraft, there is no second attempt."

Zweig, 39, spends several days a week with shuttle astronauts and backup crews, flying with them in the Shuttle Training Aircraft, which is designed to handle and feel like the shuttle.

The airplane is a Grumman Gulfstream II jet modified with a computer system that can simulate operations of the shuttle.

"We've tried to make it as close to flying the real thing as we can make it," Zweig said. "We try to make it handle and feel as much like the real spacecraft in real weather conditions at real times of the day."

Astronauts prepare for the tricky landing by training first in a ground simulator, then in small T-38 jets then in the shuttle simulator.

Zweig believes the flying simulator is the best training. "There are advocates of ground-based simulators who say, 'Couldn't you do it better some other way?' We don't think so. It's just not the same."

"The problem with training in a room on the ground is that your hide is not really on the line. But if you're in the air and you fall apart at the seams, it's your tail."

The astronauts fly the simulator for a couple of hours a week, getting more than a dozen chances to "land" in each session, Zweig said. The simulator's cockpit has been designed so the left side is similar to the cockpit in the real shuttle, with a stick instead of a steering wheel and various dials and switches. The right side, where the instructor sits, is basically unchanged.

"We fly them up to 35,000 feet and then let them take it down," Zweig said. "We take it up and then switch on the computer."

The computer operates on a pattern from a magnetic tape and is controlled by commands from the astronaut's stick.

Because the shuttle is bulkier than the training plane, the computer throws on the plane's reverse thrusters and lowers the main landing gear to get more resistance.

"It's like a skier with a parachute," Zweig said. "If we cut the engines off, we would glide too well. Reverse thrust gives us an even poorer glide."

In striving for realism, NASA researchers even designed "window blinds" that reduce the pilots' vision.

"If the field of vision in the simulator was larger, then you would get negative training," he said. "We don't want it to be easier to fly. In fact, we wish it were harder to fly."

Zweig said the simulator is so "high fidelity" that pilots virtually can't tell the difference between landing it and landing the real thing.

"Sitting in the cockpit, we wouldn't know the difference," he said.

Child-Proof Containers Vs. Adults

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — One customer, disgusted at a hard-to-open drug container, told her pharmacist, "If that is the best you can do for a cap, let me have my medicine in a paper sack."

Another, after a battle with a drug container, said, "I finally resorted to a can opener."

Others, once they have pill bottles open, deliberately leave the caps off even though that can hurt drug effectiveness.

Amid the complaints, the Consumer Product Safety Commission is taking another look at a 1970 law designed to keep small children from getting into containers whose contents could be hazardous.

The problem is that adults, especially elderly people with arthritis, have trouble getting into the child-proof containers.

A dramatic decline in accidental poisonings of youngsters is attributed to child-resistant containers. For example, the number of children taking an overdose of aspirin dropped from 8,146 in 1974, when the regulations under the law took effect, to 3,332 five years later.

However, the CPSC staff says a new type of container, though praised by some elderly Americans, could undermine the purpose of the law.

The new vial is a "dual-purpose" container. Although it complies with the law by being child-resistant, its top can be reversed to make it easy to open.

The commission staff suspects that many adults will recap the vials in the manner that allows even children to get them open. This could lead to a new increase in child poisonings, the staff says.

The staff members urged the five-member commission to declare that the dual-purpose containers do not comply with the 1970 law. The commission is expected to decide the issue Wednesday.

If the commission does not move against the two-way containers, the staff fears manufacturers will start using them for almost all drugs and perhaps even for toxic household chemicals.

The staff position was taken before Reagan named as head of the agency Nancy Harvey Steorts, who has pledged to reduce regulation.

The dual-purpose containers now are used for no more than 10 percent of drug prescriptions, but a second company has entered the market and others are believed to be considering whether to do likewise.

CPSC staff member Robert G. Poth said the commission is likely to permit use of the two-way container only for such toxic household chemicals as lye, paint remover and lighter fluid.

"Congress has decided that the general population should bear the inconvenience of special packaging to ensure a certain level of protection to young children," the staff said in its recommendation to the commission.

Donald Lofty, an attorney for M&M Plastics, a Chattanooga, Tenn., firm which manufactures dual-purpose containers, told the commissioners at a hearing that CPSC "should not attempt to become a 'national nanny,' protecting children against presumed bad judgment of parents."

The law allows consumers to ask druggists for easy-open containers, but few do.

Fun On Beef Island

BEEF ISLAND, British Virgin Islands (UPI) — Tourists who visit the tranquil British Virgin Islands usually know they can expect little more entertainment than a few quiet bars.

But if they're willing to travel a few hundred yards by dinghy from Beef Island, they can go to Tony Snell's Last Resort — a small hotel on a speck of an island — and hear Snell's nightly one-man shows in which he sings and pokes hilarious fun at everything from the local plumbing and his pet donkey to the yacht charter crowd that composes most of his clientele. Drinks run about $2.25 and dinner $10.

Your Household Word

Lowe's Pricing Policy:

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
