U.S. Radar Planes Patrol Over Egypt

By SAMI RIZKALLAH Associated Press Writer CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - America's sophisticated AWACS radar planes began patrolling Egyptian airspace today as President Hosni Mubarak swore in his Cabinet and ordered the death penalty for anyone using unlicensed weapons. Gen. Ahmed Nasser, commander of the Cairo West military base, told reporters the Airborne Warning and Control Systems planes entered Egyptian airspace at noon - 6 a.m. EDT - and began patrolling.

The United States dispatched the two AWACS jets to Egypt to demonstrate confidence in Mubarak, who replaced assassinated President Anwar Sadat. Nasser did not say exactly where the jets were patrolling.

The state information service director, Mohammed Hakki, said the decision to send the AWACS planes to Egypt was made in Washington under an agreement between the two countries.

no change in foreign policy, no change in the basic work of the various ministries."

Since taking the oath of office before Parliament on Wednesday, Mubarak has named himself prime minister and extended the death penalty to anyone using unlicensed weapons to break the peace.

Mubarak, Sadat's handpicked heir, was given a landslide endorsement by Egyptian voters Tuesday in a referendum in which he was the only candidate.

His televised inaugural address to the People's Assembly included a tearful testimonial to Sadat and a pledge to "continue in all its letter and commitment" the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace program with Israel.

Syria said today there is "no room for Egypt's return to the Arab fold" if Sadat's policies remain in effect. Most Arab nations broke off relations with Egypt after Sadat signed a separate peace treaty with Israel in 1979.

In his inaugural address, Mubarak took aim at the Moslem extremists blamed for killing Sadat and for subsequent anti-government attacks in Cairo and the Moslem fundamentalist stronghold of Assiut, a city 250 miles south of the capital.

"The sword of the law will be used against any lawbreaker, no matter his rank, wealth or privilege," he declared.

"I say from here, I say to all those who exploit the freedom of the people and their safety... they shall not escape fierce punishment."

He warned that he will not tolerate a resumption of the summer's strife between Moslem fundamentalists and the Coptic Christian minority.

"We are all Egyptians with our souls and blood," he said. "There is no difference between Moslems and Christians."

The religious violence, in which at least 70 people were killed, prompted Sadat's roundup last month of more than 1,500 Moslem fundamentalists, Copts and political opponents.

The assembly, responding to Mubarak's call for law and order, adopted legislation prescribing the death penalty for anyone using an unlicensed weapon to breach the peace or national unity.

The new president broke down when he spoke of Sadat, his mentor and friend.

Proud As To Foreign Aid

By TERENCE HUNT Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - President Reagan today said a "propaganda campaign" has been launched "that would have the world believe the capitalist U.S. is the cause of world hunger and poverty." But he rejected that idea and said the best way for poor countries to achieve prosperity is through free nations boosting their private investment and international trade.

Reagan, in a speech setting the stage for next week's international conference in Cancun, Mexico, said the United States has done its part when it comes to foreign aid.

"Far from lagging behind and refusing to do our part, the United States is leading the way in helping to better the lives of citizens in developing countries," he said.

"Free people build free markets that ignite dynamic development for everyone," the president said, citing the United States as an example.

He added that "no matter where you look today, you will see that development depends on economic freedom."

"Stimulating international trade by opening up markets is absolutely essential," he told the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia. Later, he was traveling to Whippany, N.J., for a state Republican fund-raiser and a campaign appearance on behalf of Thomas Kean, the Republican candidate for governor.

In his prepared speech, Reagan told his Philadelphia audience: "To listen to some shrill voices, you'd think our policies were as stingy as your Philadelphia Eagles defense."

"There is a propaganda campaign in wide circulation that would have the world believe the capitalist U.S. is the cause of world hunger and poverty."

"Yet each year the United States provides more food assistance to developing nations than all other nations combined," he asserted.

The president also said the United States helps developing countries by providing open and growing U.S. markets for their products. Americans buy about one-half of all

Hundreds Join Annual Tar River Fellowship

By JERRY RAYNOR Reflector Staff Writer

An estimated 350 people, including a number of prominent state officials, gathered on the grounds of the Blount Ranch on Old River Road late Wednesday afternoon for the fifth annual Tar River Fellowship Club get-together. Early arrivals were watched by a herd of about 100 Holstein cows in a pasture across the dirt path that led to the spacious tree-filled meeting site.

N.C. Representative Ed Warren, current president of the Club, welcomed visitors and mentioned that the primary interest of club members is in better roads, good industry, and better health care in eastern North Carolina.

Among state officials attending as special guests were Secretaries of various state departments - Thad Eure, State; Jim Graham, Agriculture; John Brooks, Labor; Bill Roberson, Transportation; Joe Grimsley, Natural Resources and Community Development; Marvin Speight, Alcoholic Beverage Control; and Tom Gilmore, Assistant Secretary of Human Resources.

Also, Rufus Edmisten, Attorney General; Harlan Boyles, State Treasurer; John Ingram, Insurance Commissioner; and Ed Renfrow, State Auditor.

Other guests included several state legislators - Senators Kenneth Royall, Harold Hardison, Vernon White, Joe Thomas; and representatives Vernon James, Gerald Anderson, Chris Baker, Sam Bundy, Howard Chapin, Jean Fenner, A.D. Guy, Bill Harrison and Ron Taylor. Also present were county commissioners and mayors from Pitt and several area counties.

Several women prominent in Democratic circles were on hand to give a feminine touch to the mostly male gathering - Janice Faulkner, director of the N.C. Democratic Party; Ann Evans, president Pitt County

Name Winner In Literature

ELIAS CANETTI

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - The Swedish Academy awarded Bulgarian-born writer Elias Canetti the 1981 Nobel Prize in literature today "for writings marked by a broad outlook, a wealth of ideas and artistic power."

The 76-year-old Nobelist, who writes in German, has produced novels, plays and memoirs since the 1930s.

One of his most well-known works is the memoir book from his youth "Die Gerettete Zunge" (The Saved Tongue), published in 1977.

Canetti has lived in London since 1938. For a time he lived in Austria and Switzerland, where he learned German, the language in which he writes. He carries a British passport.

Academy sources said Canetti has long been in line for the prize.

Canetti got his literary breakthrough in 1935 with the novel "Die Blendung" (Auto da Fe). He has published numerous works through the 1960s and 1970s, including travel notes, plays and essays.

Translated into English are "Die Blendung" (Autodafe - or The Tower of Babel), "Masse und Macht" (Crowds and Power), "Die Befristeten" (The Numbered or The Deadlined) and the travel book "Voices from Marrakesh."

This year's Nobel Prize in literature carries a $180,000 award.

The 18-member academy, which keeps its nominees, deliberations and votes secret, reportedly was split on this year's decision.

The 1980 prize went to expatriate Polish-American poet Czeslaw Milosz. The year before that Greek poet Odysseus Elytis was honored and in 1979 another Polish expatriate, New Yorker Isaac Bashevis Singer who writes in Yiddish.

Brainwashing Is Urged By Khomeini To Erase Western Ideas In Iran

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI

Associated Press Writer BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini called for brainwashing today to erase Western thinking in Iran. Meanwhile, his regime said U.S. involvement in Egypt will "strengthen the will of 1 billion Moslems throughout the world to campaign against the oppressors."

Tehran Radio said Khomeini told Education Minister Ali-Akbar Parvaresh and other officials at the ayatollah's residence in northern Tehran:

"Brains must be washed and a self-reliant one should replace them" in order for the Iranian people "to understand we are everything and are no less than others," Khomeini said.

"We have to begin with children, and our aim should be to transform a Western human being into an Islamic one. You will be assured that no one can then strike a blow at us. If we have an independent mode of thinking, how can they strike at us? They can only do so from within ourselves, as they have done..."

Khomeini was referring to the more than three-month-old campaign of bombings and assassinations that leftist underground opposition groups have been waging against the clergy-led Islamic regime.

"Our cultural deviance has historical roots. There have been many attacks on the clergy. They wanted to change the foundations of the clergy and were able to take many of them away."

He apparently was referring to some clergymen who have taken sides with the largest opposition group, the Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas.

Some 1,370 leftists have been executed in Iran since late June when President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr was ousted. He later fled to France with the Mujahedeen leader, Massoud Rajavi.

Meanwhile, Iran's Foreign Ministry accused the United States of meddling in Egyptian affairs and said "Islam has taught and will teach Moslems that with their blood and clenched fists they can overcome the sword." The statement spoke of 1 billion Moslems in the world, but most reference sources put the number at less than 600 million.

The ministry charged the Reagan administration with "moving to shatter an overall Islamic movement," after the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat Oct. 6. Egypt blamed Moslem extremists for killing Sadat, who broke with the Arab world by signing the Camp David accords that made peace with Israel.

"The United States should realize that those who have compromised and are running after the Camp David agreements, although covering their faces with Islamic masks, would await no fate other than Sadat's," the statement said.

More Texas Floods

By The Associated Press

Thunderstorms today brought more flash flooding to Texas, where 18 inches of rain over the past few days have caused at least seven deaths, while overflowing rivers in southern Oklahoma were lapping at their highest levels in history.

A flash flood warning was posted in three counties in the Texas Panhandle where more than 2 inches of rain fell during the night.

Flooding was reported before dawn at Pampa, where a police spokesman said several streets were under water in the downtown area.

The flash flood warning covered Randall, Armstrong and Gray counties.

The National Weather Service said nearly 2.25 inches of rain fell at Lake Tanglewood, near Canyon, by 4 a.m. today and more was forecast for the area.

The latest victim of the Texas flooding was a 15-month-old boy who drowned Wednesday when he was swept away by floodwaters after heavy rains at Bryan in south-central Texas. The body of Brandon Russell Gustavus was found in a drainage ditch outside his family's mobile home, police said.

As much as five inches fell at Bryan on Wednesday and Police Chief Charles Phelps said the flood was one of the worst in 20 years.

Five people drowned in Tarrant County on Tuesday and one man drowned in Bowie on Monday.

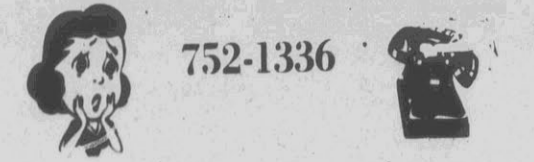

Oklahomans living along the swollen Red River and its tributaries on the Texas border were told the streams would not be back in their banks before Saturday.

The Weather Service said the Red River at the Interstate 35 bridge north of Gainesville, Texas, crested at 29.5 feet on Wednesday, breaking a record of 26 1/2 feet set on May 21, 1951. Flood stage is 25 feet.

The Blue River at Blue, Okla., crested at an estimated 43 feet Wednesday, far above the previous record of 32 feet on May 17, 1968. Flood stage is 21 feet.

The Oklahoma floods washed out at least 30 bridges and destroyed several homes.

ORGAN REPAIR FEEDBACK

In response to the Oct. 8 Hotline item requesting a reference for having an old-fashioned treble organ repaired, Hotline reader, Howard Shearin, suggested we contact Donald Melvin of Rocky Mount. Melvin, a minister, says he rebuilds, repairs, and refinishes old bellows type organs like yours as a sideline to his ministry. In fact he, with the help of his wife, has redone more than 400 in the past 20 years. His work is very good, Shearin said.

Melvin's shop is located at 1352 Benvenue Road, Rocky Mount, N.C. 27801. You may call him easiest on a Monday or Friday night, 442-8448.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

AYDEN — The Community Baptist Church here was the scene of the Saturday afternoon wedding ceremony of Marie Annette Matthews and Charles T. Strickland Jr. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Roy E. Wood at 2:30.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Matthews of South Hill, Va. The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Strickland Sr. of Ayden.

The bride's sister, Mildred Smith of South Hill Va. was her matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Charlene Strickland, sister of the bridegroom, Sabrina Jones of Ayden and a junior bridesmaid, Angie Smith, niece of the bride from South Hill, Va. Her nephew, Chad Matthews of Virginia was ring bearer.

The father of the bridegroom was best man and ushers included Stephen Strickland, brother of the bridegroom and Robert Beacham, both of Ayden.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silk fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline accented with lace that extended to the empire waistline and full length sleeves. The A-line skirt and attached chapel train were accented with embroidered lace edging. She wore a fingertip veil with a lace caplet and carried a white silk bouquet of azaleas.

Attendants wore formal gowns of yellow designed with scoop necklines, puffed sleeves and gathered at the waistline accented at the bottom with a full ruffle and tied with a sash at the waistline. The junior bridesmaid wore a white formal gown and carried a basket of yellow daisies. The other attendants carried bouquets of yellow carnations.

The bride's mother wore a short medium blue floral dress with long sleeves. The bridegroom's mother wore a rose pink dress with long sleeves. Both wore white carnation corsages.

Organist Wendi Jones and soloist, Mrs. Pat Wood provided nuptial music. Selections included "Whither Thou Goest," "Let It Be Me" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The couple will reside in Ayden after a wedding trip to the mountains.

GREENSBORO — Martha S. Ferrell of Greenville attended the McIver Conference V, a leadership seminar for alumni held here recently at the University of North Carolina.

A former trustee of the Alumni Association, Mrs. Ferrell has served also as first vice president.

The conference, designed for alumni who are active in leadership roles with UNC-G alumni programs and university affairs, was held as a part of the university's 89th annual Founder's Day observance.

Dear Abby

Short Stature Looms Large In Romance

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've been a big fan of yours for a long time, but I've never written to you before.

I am 27, white, male, and I'm 4 feet, 6 inches tall and weigh 95 pounds. I have never had a date with a girl because all the girls I know are bigger than I am and they don't want to go with a runt.

Abby, I don't want to live the rest of my life single. I'd like to find a nice little lady and get married.

I've been told that there is a club somewhere in the U.S.A. for small people. Do you know anything about it? Please help me if you can. Thank you.

YOUR FAN IN ORANGE, TEXAS

DEAR FAN: The club you've heard about is "Little People of America." It was organized in 1957 to bring together people of smaller stature to help them meet others like themselves and to share valuable information, such as how to get the right kind of jobs, where to buy clothing in sizes for adults, not children, etc.

There are chapters of this organization all over the U.S.A.; they hold district and national conventions and publish an informative newsletter. They even have a teen membership. For information about the chapter nearest you, write to: Little People of America, Inc., National Headquarters, Box 126, Owatonna, Minn. 55060. Please enclose a S.A.S.E. as it is a non-profit organization. I recommend it highly.

DEAR ABBY: I have five daughters. My only son was killed when he was 16. How do I answer people when they ask me how many children I have? I feel bad saying I have only five, because my son is still in my heart. Also, if I say "I have five girls," I have to listen to jokes about having no boys. Then I have to tell them of my only son's death, and that and I feel bad.

So what is the correct answer? My head tells me to answer five, but my heart says six.

MRS. H.

DEAR MRS. H.: Listen to your heart, and say "I have five daughters; I lost my only son when he was 16." That will eliminate any "jokes," and you will feel better.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I received a phone call from the 35-year-old illegitimate child of my deceased husband. The girl said she was anxious to know something about her father, thus she had traced her lineage and found me.

She knew before contacting me that she had been conceived within six months after my marriage and that the affair with her mother, of which I had no knowledge, was an ongoing thing from before our marriage. She also knew that her father had died some years ago. She has substantiated to me the truth of her claim.

This has brought me only heartache. I don't want to know this woman. I have two daughters and a son whom I love dearly, and I have no need for this woman to enter my life as a constant reminder of my husband's infidelity.

Abby, don't adoptees seeking natural parents know when to stop? Why do they continue their search at the risk of bringing unhappiness to innocent people?

In this case, the innocent people who could be hurt, in addition to me, are her adoptive parents, her biological mother's husband and children, and my children.

I beg you to ask those who seek their natural parents to please consider the heartaches they can bring to others in order to satisfy their own curiosity.

SUE IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR SUE: Consider it done.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

One of the first concerns of new mothers is the eating habits of children.

I can make you an authority in 400 words or less.

The more teeth a child has, the less he chews.

He or she will never eat anything that is good for him/gives him strong bones or teeth/makes him feel better.

He will never eat anything that is green.

His first words will be "a la carte."

He will never eat the same cereal twice.

A child inherently feels that the dog gets better food than he does.

When a mother pretends to love the white lumpy stuff in the spoon that smells, a child has absolutely no reason to trust her.

A child will never eat anything in a sack with his name on it.

Knowing this, I cannot imagine why there is flak every year somewhere regarding school lunches. The school lunch has always been designed to give children the nutritional balance and vitamins necessary for growth and development that a child is put to bed early for not eating at home.

Some children have been known to enter high school believing in their hearts that broccoli is something you plant on Arbor Day for shade.

Yet every year someone insists upon converting them to nutrition despite the fact that nutrition is what gets thrown out.

This year, at a school in New York, a realistic administrator has declared, "Let 'em eat pizza" . . .

phrase that ranks right up there with "Don't turn your back on a two-year-old."

He has rationalized that pizza has all the basic standards to get students through the day and wants it on the menu every day. I say, let the man speak. He obviously knows children. Once pizza has the sanction of school and parents, I fully expect a rebellion among them to protest they are being fed junk food and will demand string beans, lunch will go up to $1.35 this year.

If exorbitant prices don't get children flocking to the cafeteria, then I've been a mother 25 years for nothing.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Cold weather is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning for most of the country. Warm weather is expected for the Southeast. Show-

By The Associated Press
Fair weather will continue across North Carolina until Friday, when there is a chance of rain in the mountains, the National Weather Service reports.

Highs will be in the 70s today and Friday with 60s over the mountains. By tonight, the low will drop into the cool 40s with some 50s near the coast.

The persistent high pressure area along the Atlantic Seaboard is drifting slowly offshore. This will diminish the brisk wind from the northeast, especially along the coast later today.

A frontal system through the midsection of the country will move across the Great Lakes and the mid-Atlantic states during the next 48 hours, possibly hitting North Carolina by late Friday.

It is weak and is not expected to provide much rain, except a chance of scattered rain in the mountains by late Friday.

Along the coast, a persistent strong northeast wind and high tides are resulting in heavy surf, some beach erosion and shallow flooding.

Beach forecast for the weekend shows partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the 70s by afternoon dropping into the 50s by dawn. Wind should favor the north or northwest at light speeds.

The heavy surf and high tides caused considerable erosion and other damage along the beaches of Onslow, Pender and New Hanover counties Tuesday night and Wednesday morning.

Continued erosion is possible today, but the wind is abating so that by tonight and into Friday the wind should not be a factor.

Wednesday's temperatures went well into the 60s and through the mid-70s. The 76 at Jacksonville and Cherry Point was one of the warmest in the state while Greensboro reached 65.

Mountain locations had a wider range from a chilly 49 at Grandfather Mountain to a mild 74 at Bryson City.

Overnight temperatures were in the 40s and 50s statewide with cloudiness moving in from the west.

'Nothing Wrong' Two Wrecks In New China Cause Damage

CLEVELAND (AP) — Betty Ford says there's nothing wrong with Nancy Reagan replacing the White House china, even if Rosalyn Carter doesn't think it's such a good idea.

"I commend her (Mrs. Reagan) for bringing it up to good condition," Mrs. Ford said Wednesday about the expenditure of $210,000 on a new 220-piece china service for the White House.

On Tuesday, Mrs. Carter, wife of former President Jimmy Carter said in Washington that the china purchase was unnecessary.

Mrs. Ford said the china was a gift. The Reagans received $1 million in contributions to redecorate the White House, she said.

Mrs. Ford, wife of former President Gerald Ford, was in Cleveland to speak about alcoholism at a luncheon to benefit the Woodruff Hospital, a psychiatric and alcohol treatment center.

An estimated $1,450 property damage resulted from two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police yesterday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 10 a.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Sixth Street, involving cars driven by Edward Franklin House of Greenville and Frances Whitehurst Hardy of Bethel, and a truck driven by David Hilton Goins of Route 1, Greenville.

Officers, who set damage to the House car at $100 and damage to the Hardy auto at $800, said no damage resulted to the Goins truck. Cars vehicles by Clinton

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Thursday, October 15, 1981—3
Arthur Williford III of Roxobel and Sherrill Leigh Brantley of Route 2, Spring Hope, collided about 1:10 p.m. on Tenth Street, 60 feet west of the Evans Street intersection.
Damage was estimated at $300 to the Williford truck and $250 to the Brantley car.

Increase Was Needed

Legislation raising wages of some 2.1 million military personnel is long overdue. If there is any facet to the Administration's spending plans deserving of general support, this is it.

We have no doubts in our mind but that retention of the trained, skilled and experienced servicemen and women was a prime factor in the decision to push this measure through Congress. Also in the background must have been intent to make military service a less unpleasant alternative to our young people.

In other years, for many other years, the huge sums of scarce money required to meet even minimum need weighed against the step. Today the prevalent feeling appears to be the needs outweigh the budgetary consideration.

By civilian standards, the pay raise which involves a host of variable factors, is very modest; coming in far below individual losses of income by military personnel over the years of inflationary cost trends.

Our country has a host of veterans, and parents, brothers, sisters and spouses of servicemen and women. We can be sure all are aware of the needs still unmet that confront service people. Their pay raise is bound to help, but more remains to be done if Uncle Sam is going to attract and keep the quality of personnel today's defense establishment requires.

Load Management Helpful

As energy costs soared American industry and individuals made a concerted effort to conserve and use energy more efficiently.

Greenville Utilities instituted a load management program which a report shows has paid handsome dividends.

The program was begun in June, 1978. Through May the net savings should be $965,227. This was after customer credits of $465,227 and paying the capital costs, operation and maintenance.

It is a good record and it means that nearly $1 million has been put back in the system — ultimately benefitting customers — that would have been paid out for purchase of power. We anticipate there will be further savings in the future.

THIS AFTERNOON

Job Problem Now

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The almost frantic hustling by North Carolina's top political leadership to beef up job training efforts and to snare an increased share of expanding high technology industrial growth may look, at first, casual glance, like pie in the sky for some distant future day.

This is not the case. The problem is current, and it doesn't hold implications just for the coming generation, but for today's Tar Heels.

The newspaper stories continue to startle as they filter in from locations across the state: a hundred or so jobs lost here; a thousand there. Those are not temporary layoffs, but signs of a basic change in North Carolina's economy.

Whatever the reason — foreign competition, changing consumer demands, rapidly expanding automation — the backbone of this state's industrial economy is inevitably weakening.

Warning
The warnings have long been available for the careful observer. But when announcements of the change dribble in from all over, spread over a year, the impact is easily lost.

Buried deep within a review of North Carolina today and what the future might hold for the state is a blunt assessment of what can be expected.

"While total manufacturing employment will have a net increase, a net loss of jobs is expected in our traditional industries," state analysts predict in a workbook to prepare the state for the Year 2000.

A statewide study committee, headed by University of North Carolina President Bill Friday, is now going into operation to hold public hearings and fully explore what is, what is likely to be, and what ought to be done about that.

Redirected in the economic growth section of the preliminary workbook is the devastating picture of decline in textiles by 27,000 jobs; in tobacco employment by 3,000 jobs; and in food processing by 2,900 jobs. That is not to mention the inevitable decline in the family-owned and operated farm, particularly in tobacco, which will mean thousands more jobs.

Overall, jobs created in the coming 20 years are expected to far exceed the losses recorded. The future, analysts believe, "is most promising". North Carolina should add 834,000 non-manufacturing jobs, and 114,000 manufacturing jobs.

But a single sentence contained in the workbook analysis tells the story. "A large number of displaced workers is likely as skills required in the declining industries are not transferable to new industries."

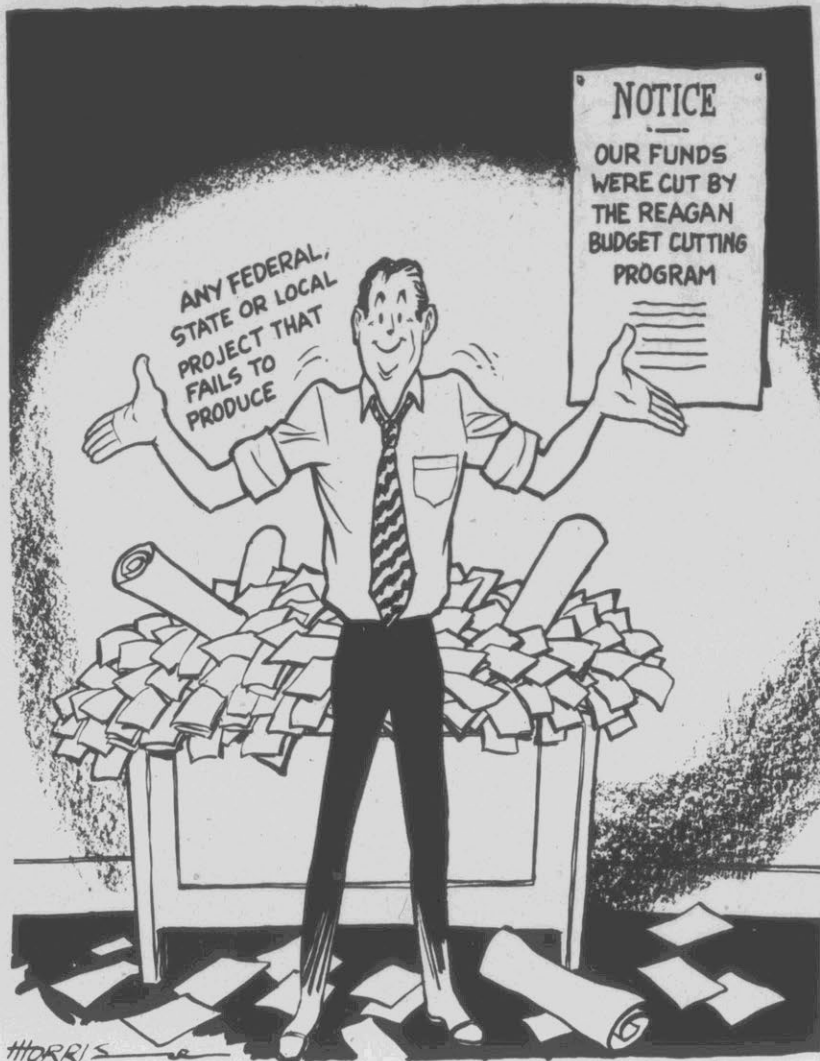

Extinct?
The big growth of the future, based on current planning and recruitment efforts, will be in high technology fields such as electronics, microbiology, research and development, medicine.

This rapidly changing profile of industry — with other exotic changes as yet unknown — holds a clear and dangerous implication for North Carolina. Bluntly put: how can a former mill hand or tobacco chopper make a

Morals In Washington

WASHINGTON — Late on the afternoon of October 1 an angry and resentful House voted 281-119 to nullify an ordinance that had been adopted in July by the District of Columbia. The vote set off a roaring hullabaloo in the local press, but the story attracted little attention elsewhere. It merits a moment of your time.

In common with most of the stories from our town, the House debate involved questions of law and politics. The story also involved hypocrisy, of which we have more than our fair per capita share, and it provided an example of Victor Hugo's truism in reverse. It may be true that no army can stop an idea whose time has come, but neither can an army impose an idea whose time has not come.

As an ordinance governing sexual conduct in the capital of our nation, the time for Ordinance 4-69 plainly had not solutely unequivocal clause in our basic law. Nowhere else does one find such a phrase as "all cases whatsoever." By the Home Rule Act of 1973, Congress delegated much local authority to the district's city council, but Congress could not possibly surrender the power and responsibility that constitutionally it holds.

There is thus no question, it seems to me, that Congress had the power to revoke the D.C. ordinance. Was the power wisely exercised?

The ordinance in question was not radically different from the sex codes that have been adopted in recent years by almost half the states. Without attempting a line-by-line analysis, it may suffice to say that the ordinance was intended to decriminalize most sexual conduct between consenting adults. Had the ordinance stopped there, the hullabaloo might not have developed, but the ordinance went further in reducing maximum penalties for forcible rape and in repealing certain criminal sanctions against sexual activity on the part of persons as young as 16. Moreover, the ordinance could be read — as opponents loudly read it — as approving homosexual sodomy and tolerating public lewdness.

All this was too much for many conservatives, loosely identified with the Moral Majority, on both sides of the aisle. Here was an opportunity to stand up for virtue and to vote against sin. The opportunity was not to be lost. Virtue triumphed, but hypocrisy trampled principle underfoot.

come. So the House killed it. Curiously, the long and contentious debate scarcely touched upon the paramount law in this matter. This is the provision toward the end of Article I, Section 8, of the Constitution, by which Congress is vested with the specific power "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over such district as may become the seat of government of the United States." It is among the most interesting clauses in the Constitution for this reason: It is the most ab-

To the Editor:

The dancing and singing performance of the Chinese Youth Goodwill Mission from Taiwan, the Republic of China, at Mingos Coliseum on Oct. 7 provided a delightful as well as educational experience. The interaction between the Chinese college students and the audience afterwards certainly was evidence of a successful exchange of goodwill between the people of these two countries.

I would like to publically express my personal gratitude to the administration and the student government association of East Carolina University. Also, to the Ministry of Education in China for making such an opportunity possible for those of us who live in Greenville.

Many who saw the performance felt this was a wonderful event and others who could not make it have told me they wish they could have been there.

In order to enhance the chances for another such visit, I urge all of you who support this type of event to write letters to the following two people who are in charge of such programs in the Republic of China, expressing your appreciation for their successful mission and urging them to consider sending a similar group to us annually or biannually.

Thank you for the coverage of the ERA Countdown Workshop held in Greenville on Sept. 19, 1981. There was an error in the article. The North Carolina Association of Educators has a definite position on the Equal Rights Amendment. The association has included the Equal Rights Amendment in the NCAE legislative program for many years. NCAE has always promoted human rights and will continue to work for ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment by June 30, 1982.

Strength For Today

SENTIMENT IN BALANCE

Sentiment is an element which gives balance to a wholesome, satisfying life. The act of walking upright involves a vast, nervous mechanism the function of which is to give us the power to balance ourselves. All through life we have to strike a balance between situations and between our critical faculties and our sentiments. If we are wholly critical, the world comes to hate us, and with reason. If, on the other hand, we give ourselves wholly to our sentiments, we come first to distrust ourselves, and at last to despise ourselves because of our inability to act upon rational analysis. We become driving nobodies going about weeping over everything and doing nothing to make wrong situations right. Sentiment is a sacred trust conferred upon us by God. We can make a proper or an improper use of it. If we use our sentiment aright, we glorify God, serve our fellow men, and enrich our own natures. Balance — this is the vital factor. — Elisha Douglass

MX May Be Left To Die

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Hidden in the thousands of words from President Reagan and his civilian defense chiefs trumpeting the new strategic defense plan lies the disturbing fact that the vaunted MX missile may never find a home of its own.

That conclusion is inescapable when Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's clear preference for an airborne MX missile comes up against overwhelming opposition to an airborne system in the heart of the congressional defense establishment.

With the Jerry Ford-Jimmy Carter mobile land system dead in its crib, it took the Reagan administration almost the full nine-month term to deliver an emaciated offspring in its place. The Reagan-Weinberger MX "decision" was a decision not to decide, leading the deeply troubled Air Force and its allies among defense-oriented congressional leaders to predict that the MX itself may yet prove to be stillborn.

Underlying that possibility is the coming great debate on an airborne MX that started Aug. 6. On that day Sen. John Tower of Texas, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, warned Reagan point-blank that Congress would never buy an air-mobile system. For two uncertain months, Weinberger seemed to be heeding Tower's warning, strongly reinforced by Rep. Melvin Price of Illinois and Rep. William L. Dickinson of Alabama — chairman and senior Republican of the House Armed Services Committee.

But the clear priority Weinberger now accords the airborne system in voluminous congressional testimony and public speeches betrays an airborne mindset by the determined defense chief. Confidential evidence supporting that mindset is found in strategic spending plans in the secretary's office that have not yet been sent to the Air Force or Congress.

In announcing his plan Oct. 3 to ditch MX mobility on the land, Reagan said he would "pursue three promising longterm options": putting the missile in rebuilt, undesignated "continuous airborne patrol" (CAP) planes; protecting them in ground silos with futuristic anti-missile defenses; or implanting them in very deep underground holes.

Spending plans now under secret study in Weinberger's office show where the secretary's real interest lies, and it is not in missile-defense or in deep underground holes: It is in CAP.

They show a rapid growth in research and development on CAP from $200 million in fiscal year 1983 to $4 billion in fiscal '87, totaling $8.4 billion over the next five years. By contrast, the working paper allocates a mere $200 million to deep underground basing and raises present anti-missile research only marginally.

The Air Force is dead against putting the MX in the air. That is partly because of doubts about the system, partly because the costs of running it, if the plane can actually be built, would be huge.

Some White House aides, disturbed at both the president's cancellation of the Ford-Carter plan and at Weinberger's preference for an airborne system, predict months of bitter Pentagon warfare. "If Cap moves toward airborne as it now looks, the Air Force will pump up the costs to astronomical levels in hopes of killing it," one aide told us.

Mel Price confides to colleagues that Reagan's "nodedcision" decision is "a holding action" for the airborne system. He and Dickinson, who control the armed services powerful research and development subcommittee, doubt it would underwrite any crash research program for the new CAP plan. A majority of the panel's 16 members, including such dovish democrats as Reps. Ron Dellums of California and Pat Schroeder of Colorado, ideologically opposed to the MX, would probably vote it down.

As for the advertised plan to put the MX into hardened holes now occupied by the ancient Titan missile, insiders see it as symbolic. It has scant congressional support, even as a stop-gap providing a small measure of credibility for the president's decision to build the missile.

Snared In Catch 22 Situation

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. economy is snared in a world of Catch-22 situations, "a sort of paradox wherein one set of events is contradicted by another," says Henry Kaufman, Wall Street economist.

"Escapes, if any, are few and hold real problems," he told a meeting of financial executives. "The chances of going wrong in anything we do are many." Solutions create problems; to fill a hole you dig another.

Said the man "the street" considers an economic seer: "The best-intended decisions may produce the wrong results; measures of relief for some may produce unanticipated pain for others."

Corporations and banks are strapped for credit. Liquidity, or the availability of assets quickly convertible to cash, in some cases may be a myth, dependent on further short-term borrowing, he suggested.

"Indeed, a noose is tightening around the credit markets," and interest rates — now falling — will rise again, he said.

He expressed displeasure with President Reagan's approach to economic problems. It would have been preferable, he said, to have had "a sharp thrust to a balanced budget in fiscal 1982," plus tax cuts limited to spurring investments, and a monetary policy underscored with measures to "foster a greater perception of risk by financial intermediaries."

But the problems run deeper, said Kaufman. At the beginning of his address — to a meeting here of the Financial Executives Institute — he laid it on the line in unmistakably clear observation.

"For the moment," he said, "it is sufficient to say that in the past few decades, our consumption and life style have overwhelmed our industrial and innovative zeal."

Kaufman's influence — on securities prices, corporate decisions, and government policy — can be vast. His speech made poor entertainment.

"... the high level of interest rates, combined with the rapid growth of the variable interest rate costs structure of business, is taking its toll on corporate profits."

"The interest expense of nonfinancial corporations accounted for 30 percent of profits before taxes in the first half of 1981. This ratio averaged 25 percent in the 1970s and only 19 percent in the 1960s."

—Faced with huge long term financing costs, a result of high rates in bond markets and a soft stock market, many corporations have been "toughing it out" with short-term financing, which has been rising "at an alarming rate." The ratio of new bond and stock issues — long term financing — to total corporate external financing was 94 percent in 1975. Last year it was 44 percent. This year it will be near 27.

"Banks are now more akin to a lender of last resort rather than just another financing source. Banks are financing corporate permanent working capital and capital outlays with short-dated liabilities."

—In this current fiscal year — October to October — the Treasury must finance a deficit of $90 billion to $85 billion.

"The magnitude and scope of the U.S. Treasury cash needs alone are awesome for a sputter and spurt economy. For the next six months alone the U.S. Treasury will borrow about $60 billion—$65-billion net — a record takedown for this period."

Kaufman's conclusion was as coldly realistic as his preceding remarks.

"Unfortunately," he told the financial executives, "some pain will continue to be inflicted on the economy and credit markets. We have backed ourselves into a difficult corner."

It would have been better, he said again, if among other things the administration had made a "sharp thrust to a balanced budget in fiscal 1982" and limited tax cuts to spurring investments.

But now, he said, the economy has a clash of fiscal stimulus and monetary restraint that encourages clashes in the markets, resulting in economic sputter and spurt and even running the risk of more dangerous economic and financial consequences.

Kaufman doesn't seek to encourage. He seeks to be realistic. If his speech was not entertaining it was because the economy isn't encouraging.

To seek entertainment from today's economy, he seemed to say, was to kid yourself and laugh at yourself.

In principle, most of the members profess dedication to democracy and majority rule. In principle, both liberals and conservatives subscribe to the view that the state should not intrude into the sexual lives of adults. These are good principles, but here they could not prevail. Politics rose above them.

The Constitution treats residents of the District of Columbia as its bastard children, whose civil rights gained nothing from their ancestors and offer nothing to posterity. To deny D.C. residents the power to govern themselves in matters of local criminal law is to deny fundamental principle. And when the House collectively rolls its eyes and deplores the repeal of a statute making adultery and fornication criminal offenses, honest men must hold their noses.

For my own part, I think the D.C. ordinance was an unfortunate act on the City Council's part. It went farther than national mores will now permit. But in surrendering so abjectly to the moral mob, the House fell short of statesmanship. This was not its finest hour.

The MX is no longer the core of this country's strategic planning. The new plan features other means of deterrence: new bombers, nearly 1,000 cruise missiles for launching from conventional submarines, the new D-5 Trident submarine missile and long-overdue modernization of communications to protect war-time command and control.

With both the right and the left in Congress so opposed to Weinberger's airborne preference, the emaciated MX missile given birth by Reagan may be left to die by Congress. If not, it will be a long time finding a place, any place, to live.

Grand Jury Indicts Company, President, For Bid-Rigging

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A Lillington paving company and its president were indicted Wednesday on federal charges of conspiring to rig bids on state paving contracts.

U.S. Attorney General William French Smith said a federal grand jury indicted Johnson Brothers Utility and Paving Co. Inc. and its president, McDuffie Johnson.

Johnson and the company each were charged with three counts of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act in paving contracts awarded by the state from September 1977 to November 1978, Smith said.

Johnson faces a maximum penalty of a $100,000 fine and three years in prison on each count and the company faces a maximum penalty of a $1 million fine on each count if convicted.

The indictments stem from a continuing probe of alleged bid-rigging on North Carolina highway projects, said Assistant Attorney General William F. Baxter, head of the antitrust division.

Grand juries are currently reviewing cases in 11 other states as part of the largest antitrust probe in American history, the Justice Department said.

In the first count of the indictment handed down Wednesday, Johnson and the company are charged with conspiring on a contract awarded in December 1978.

In the alleged conspiracy, low-bidder Crowell Constructors Inc. would pay Johnson Brothers $1 for each ton of asphalt used on the project, if Johnson submitted an intentionally high bid or didn't bid on the project.

The grand jury charged that Crowell paid $32,051 to the defendants as part of the alleged conspiracy.

In the second count, the grand jury charged that in October 1978 the defendants conspired to rig bids on a contract awarded Nov. 28, 1978. That contract also allegedly involved a payment by Crowell Constructors to Johnson Brothers of $1 per ton of asphalt, or $25,025.

On the third project, the grand jury charged Crowell Constructors with paying $11,365 to Johnson as part of a project awarded Oct. 25, 1977.

Crowell already has admitted collusion on 28 of 44 state projects it had been awarded since June 1975, and acknowledged increasing one bid for $167,000 after illegally obtaining confidential bid information.

The company was restored to the list of the state's prequalified bidders in August after agreeing to pay the state $859,504. The company also paid a $300,000 federal fine.

Wilbur E. Dees, vice president of Crowell Constructors of Fayetteville, was sentenced to 60 days in prison, and William W. Crowell, president of the company, was sentenced to 90 days after both pleaded guilty to rigging bids on state highway paving projects.

living in that new world?

The general attitude of Tar Heels toward industrial recruitment and toward expanded technical education in the public schools and community colleges has been one of casual disinterest, or at best, one of lukewarm support for something seen only as an aid to some future generation.

The headlines out of Laurinburg, Shelby, Salisbury and elsewhere as long-established textile firms change plans and methods are not about the future. They tell of today's North Carolinians who are finding their lives disrupted by change they are not prepared to cope with.

Artificial Seaweed Is Said Building Up Reef

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
The inventor of artificial seaweed implanted in front of the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse says his "Seascape" is building up a sand reef at the base of the lighthouse that may save the 110-year-old structure.

But William L. Garrett says he will know how well his invention is working after the winter storm season is over.

"The real proof will be how it withstands the winter storms," he said. "We'll expect to lose some of the sand in the reef in the winter, of course."

Garrett, a Dupont researcher in Wilmington, Del., installed 500 units of Seascape in May at the base of the endangered lighthouse to try to keep the sea at bay. At high tide, the sea is only 70 feet from the base of the 208-foot tower — the tallest lighthouse in the nation.

State and federal officials are working to come up with a plan to save the national landmark. Plans range from a $65 million beach rebuilding effort to moving the lighthouse.

Garrett's plan involves placing 3,000 units of Seascape in the ocean at the foot of the lighthouse at a cost of $211 per unit. The total cost of his plan figures out to about $64,000, considerably less than any of the other proposed solutions.

The Seascape consists of a sand-filled anchor tube and a series of 4-foot fronds. The fronds catch sand as waves roll in and filter the sand to the bottom of the water, building up reefs.

All expenses involved in placing the Seascape have come out of Garrett's own pocket.

Garrett went on an inspection visit to the lighthouse last month, where he found a sand reef already formed.

"I'm just real excited with what I saw," he said. "When we put those units in last May, the water was 6 to 8 feet deep at low tide. Now there's a pretty little reef out there." In some places, the sand has built up 46 inches deep on the beach.

Meanwhile, the National Park Service and state and federal officials are taking a wait-and-see attitude toward Garrett's invention. Garrett monitors the Seascape and the park service, which has an office on the lighthouse property, has refused to comment.

"Maybe it's just too simple. Maybe they feel like it just can't possibly work if it's that simple," Garrett said. "But it is working, and I think it may be the answer to saving the lighthouse."

Fellowship . . .

Democratic Women: Betty Speir, vice chairman of the Democratic Party.

Commenting on the noticeable increase in attendance at this fifth meeting, Mrs. Evans said "what impresses me so much is not just the larger numbers, but the wider mix of people here this year. There's really a representative cross section from many occupations and areas of eastern North Carolina."

Mrs. Speir remarked "We are all gratified to see this gathering of distinguished guests sharing in this fellowship in our county."

Although the gathering is basically a sharing of fellowship, several leaders agreed to make brief observations.

Secretary of Transportation Roberson noted that "money is still tight in our department. It now costs a million dollars a mile to build roads, and we have just enough money to build 40 miles of two lane highways per year state wide."

Roberson said he did not foresee additional sources of revenue "any time soon," and added that some means of providing road improvements was essential. "Rhetoric won't do the job," he commented. Touching on the 264 road project, Roberson noted it "will cost $125 million to complete four laning the section between Wilson and Greenville. Compare that to $40 million available, and you can see the problem."

Agriculture Secretary Graham, referring to the recent and ongoing federal hearings on the peanut and tobacco bills, said he believes "the House fight will be close. Our representatives are doing a good job, but it's going to be a close call at best."

"I want to say that in North Carolina that anything, any agricultural product with a feather or a hair is just a money loser at this time. Today, farmers are making money only on tobacco and peanuts."

Attorney General Edmisten expressed high hopes for "making some progress in the state's anti-crime program. In drug traffic, we have some of the toughest laws in the nation. I hope judges will take the new law and enforce it because there's no doubt about it, we are getting the reputation as being one of the prime drug havens in America."

Marvin Blount, Sr., host for the Fellowship, said "I am happy to see our local people and our leaders in government get together for this time of friendship. It's good to see so many old friends here today."

East's Busing Views Invited

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina Republican Sen. Jesse Helms has been invited by the state's other Republican senator, John East, to testify about his views on busing before the Senate Judiciary's subcommittee on the separation of powers.

The hearing is scheduled Friday and concerns a bill to

Stern Edict On Hoarding Food

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — An anti-hoarding edict that threatens greedy shoppers with five years in prison is restoring calm to markets plagued by shortages and bad food, the government says.

Many shoppers in the capital said Wednesday they agreed supplies were better since the edict was announced by the Communist authorities six days earlier.

end federal court-ordered busing to achieve racial balance.

East said William B. Reynolds, President Reagan's recently appointed head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights division, also will testify.

Several said they approved the action.

"What was going on until a few days ago was revolting me," factory worker Nicolae Ciocan was quoted by one Bucharest newspaper as saying. "Some people, out of greed or lack of responsibility, were buying by the sackful and others couldn't find sugar, oil and other produce."

The government restricted sales of sugar, cooking oil and butter last Friday, and warned that anyone caught with more than a month's supply of basic foodstuffs could be jailed for five years.

"Compared with the old situation, it's a real change," said one older Bucharest woman who said the anti-hoarding decree had im-

Analyst Says OPEC Price Accord Seems Nearer

Dr. Jacobson To Conduct Seminar

ECU News Bureau
The East Carolina University School of Home Economics will hold The Dean's Research Seminar conducted by Howard Jacobson, M.D., on Monday, Oct. 19 at 4 p.m. in the Vanlandingham Room located in the School of Home Economics.

Dr. Jacobson will speak on "Current Methods of Measuring Food Patterns and Nutrient Intake."

Dr. HOWARD JACOBSON

Jacobson was appointed director of the Institute of Nutrition in Chapel Hill in September 1978. He was originally trained in medicine at Northwestern University and he obtained his post-doctoral experience at Harvard Medical School. His major concentration over the years has been maternal and child health and nutrition. His recent concerns and studies have included nearly all phases of nutrition in the life cycle.

Dr. Jacobson has served on the faculties of Harvard University, the University of California-San Francisco and Berkeley, and CMDNJ-Rutgers Medical School. He has been involved in studies on nutrition evaluation for the past ten years, both as consultant to the U.S. General Accounting Office and as principal investigator of the Multiple Risk Factor Intervention Trial program in New Brunswick, N.J.

NEW YORK (AP) — With several OPEC members quietly reducing their oil prices under economic pressure, the oil cartel appears closer than at any recent time to achieving a long-sought price agreement, industry analysts believe.

A uniform price structure in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries could erase the current

Saudis Storing Oil In Caverns

HOUSTON (AP) — Saudi Arabia's plans to store as much as 1.5 billion barrels of oil in caverns near the Red Sea show how concerned that nation is for oil operations near its border, a weekly oil trade newsletter reports.

Petroleum Information International says the plan to dig the huge, war-proof caverns demonstrates the Saudis' "depth of concern for the security of their Eastern province oil installations in the wake of the Iran-Iraq war."

The strategic storage facility would "permit Saudi Arabia to ride out severe and destructive attacks on oil facilities in the Eastern province," the newsletter quoted Saudi officials as saying.

It said the project, Red Sea Structure, will cost $7 billion and will be built in two phases. The first phase, designed to accommodate 50 million barrels of light crude, is planned for completion in 1986, with the much bigger caverns expected to be operational by the end of the decade, the publication said.

The newsletter said the bombproof caverns will be excavated in mountains 24 miles from Yanbu, near the Red Sea.

It said Riofinex Ltd., a subsidiary of Rio Tinto-Zinc Group of Great Britain, was responsible for selecting the site for the project, but said a Eldress Hattie M. Cobb invites the public.

Weekend Services

Holy Mission Church, 905 Dickinson Avenue, has scheduled the following services for the weekend:

Friday, Holy Ghost rally beginning at 7:30 p.m. with the Rev. James Corbett of Greenville; Sunday, Sunday school at 10 a.m.; singing and praise service at 7 p.m. featuring the Gospel Consolators and several other groups; Monday, 7 p.m. bible study.

The public is invited to attend, according to pastor Shirley Atkinson.

oversupply of oil on world markets, analysts said Wednesday. But it would have little immediate effect on U.S. gasoline prices.

Political considerations blocked a proposed OPEC agreement in August, but those concerns have given way to the pressures of sharply lower export earnings, analysts said.

For all OPEC members except Saudi Arabia, the drop in world oil prices and in exports has slowed or halted the rises in oil income OPEC had come to depend on.

These forces have intensified in recent weeks, producing a flurry of speculation that OPEC will hold a special meeting later this month to affirm a formal pricing agreement. The cartel's next scheduled meeting is Dec. 10 in Abu Dhabi.

Despite the oil cartel's failure over the last two years to agree on a base price for their oil, a growing number of analysts say an agreement is likely by the end of the year.

"I'd bet my oil analyst license that this matter will be settled on or before" the December meeting, said William Randol, an energy specialist at Salomon Brothers, an investment banking firm based in New York.

An OPEC price agreement, which analysts presume would raise Saudi Arabia's price by $2 a barrel to $34 and prompt a reduction in Saudi output, would lead to similar price increases in non-OPEC oil. But it is believed such developments would have little immediate consequences for American motorists.

Humberto Calderon Berti, the energy minister of Venezuela, said in Caracas on Wednesday that OPEC "almost certainly" will hold a special meeting this month and agree on a base price of $34 a barrel. He said informal negotiations were under way.

Oil industry sources cautioned, however, that such predictions made in the past had proven wrong. They noted that Saudi Arabia, by far the most influential OPEC member, has not indicated it would accept an early meeting.

"Lots of times in the past people have said what the Saudis will do, but it hasn't worked out that way," said Halsey Peckworth, editorial director of Platt's Oilgram Price Report, a New York-based industry newsletter.

Saudi Arabia, which produces nearly half of OPEC's estimated output of 20 million barrels a day, has kept its production high in an effort to force the higher-priced members to lower their prices. Saudi Arabia charges $32 a barrel, while official prices of other members range up to $40 a barrel.

The Saudi strategy is beginning to succeed. Just last week the Brazilian state-owned oil company Petrobras disclosed that Iraq had cut its offering price by $1.50 a barrel, leaving its prices in a range of between $32.50 and about $35 a barrel.

Iraq reportedly was one of the OPEC members that blocked a proposal at the cartel's last meeting in August to unify prices at $34 a barrel. Venezuela was another.

Carlos Sant Anna, the commercial director of Petrobras, was quoted by Platt's Oilgram News as saying, "Informally, OPEC is increasingly approaching the unification of prices at the $34-a-barrel (level) the prime contractor had not yet been chosen.

The projected capacity of 1.5 billion barrels amounts to six months of production at Saudi Arabia's current ceiling of 8.5 million barrels a day and would be much larger than a similar U.S. strategic oil storage program already in operation.

The U.S. stores 200 million barrels in natural underground caverns, with an ultimate goal of 750 million barrels.

Saudis Push Own Alternative To Camp David Pact

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Saudi Arabia is stepping up its campaign on behalf of an alternative to the Camp David peace process following the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. But Israel says it will make no concessions.

The oil-rich kingdom is expected to present Crown Prince Fahd's eight-point blueprint for Mideast peace to the Arab summit scheduled Nov. 25-27 in Fez, Morocco.

Habib Chatti, secretary-general of the Jidda-based Islamic Conference Organization, which comprises 41 Moslem countries and the Palestine Liberation Organization, asked the summit to adopt Fahd's formula as the "Arab plan."

"There is no better framework for negotiations than the Fahd plan," Chatti was quoted by the Saudi news agency as saying.

Three Saudi state-supported newspapers also campaigned for the Fahd plan Wednesday.

The prince, who runs Saudi Arabia's day-to-day affairs, unveiled his plan Aug. 8 after private contacts with Arab states. It calls for Israeli withdrawal from lands seized during the 1967 Middle East War and creation of a Palestinian state with Arab Jerusalem as its capital. In turn, the plan asserts, Arabs will recognize all states in the area. It implies, but does not state, Israel's right to exist.

Israel rejected the Saudi plan as dangerous and nothing new; hardline Palestinian factions have also opposed it, and Syria, a principal PLO supporter, has remained silent. But the Saudis are supported by Persian Gulf states and other moderates, and Arab observers here forecast a showdown in Fez.

"All indications have shown the process of peace in the Mideast will take a new practical turn by the unanimous recognition of Prince Fahd's plan as a basis for realizing peace and security in the region," the conservative daily Al Nadwa in Mecca said. Al Bilad and Al Yom had similar editorials.

PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat said during a visit to Japan Wednesday that the Saudi plan is a "positive first step" toward Middle East peace. The PLO is an umbrella organization of guerrilla groups fighting for a Palestinian state on Israeli occupied lands.

Israel sent a strong message to new Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak Wednesday that it would reject more concessions on Palestinian autonomy than it made in talks with Sadat, who was assassinated Oct. 6.

Those talks, part of the U.S.-sponsored Camp David accords, deadlocked before Sadat's death but are scheduled to resume next Wednesday.

Israel rejects self-determination for the 1.2 million Palestinians living under Israeli occupation, calling it a code word for an independent Palestinian state. Israel also vows never to redive Jerusalem, holy to Moslems and Jews. The Arab sector of Jerusalem was annexed by Israel after it was captured in the 1967 war.

Most Arab nations and the PLO broke with Egypt when Sadat signed the Camp David accords in 1978, paving the way for the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty the following year. Mubarak has pledged to uphold the treaty.

Diplomatic observers here say the Saudis, who have avoided antagonizing Egypt in the wake of Sadat's assassination, are pushing the Fahd plan to lure the United States into a broader process and reconcile Egypt with the rest of the Arab world.

"I hope all that caused Egypt to move away from the Arab nation will disappear and that Egypt will again find a place where it belongs, inshallah (God willing)," Saudi Interior Minister Prince Nayef Bin Abdul Aziz was quoted as Wednesday saying by the Okaz newspaper in Jidda.

New Model Car Year Is Off To Poorest Start; Sales Lag

By STEPHEN JONES
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — The American auto industry's shiny new models are stuck in neutral on the showroom floor, registering one of the poorest sales starts ever.

Reports released Wednesday by the five major companies show that sales in the first 10 days of October were down more than 34 percent compared with last year — the worst showing for the period since the heyday of fins and chrome in 1958, a big recession year.

The companies introduced their 1982 models at different times, so an exact comparison by model year is impossible. But the new model year is in full swing now and "the sales, measured against the oasis of a good introduction period last year, are a disaster."

said Arvid Jouppi, an analyst with Rooney, Pace Inc.

The five manufacturers said they sold 147,066 cars from Oct. 1 to Oct. 10, compared with 223,233 last year. The selling rate per day came to 16,341, the worst since the 9,806 a day for 1958.

Analysts blamed the plunge on higher prices for new 1982 models and lack of that concentrated new-model introductory period. Jouppi cited consumer confusion over whether interest rates would continue going down and whether automakers would continue to cut their prices through rebates and incentives to their dealers.

David Healy, an analyst with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., said the "pretty awful" results came from higher 1982 prices and a drawn-out introduction period. Some 1982s will not debut until after Jan. 1.

"Increasing the price simply has not worked for the manufacturer," Jouppi said, and he predicted rebates would be brought back soon.

Ford Motor Co. took the biggest sales plunge, dropping 43.3 percent to 34,618 cars from 61,029 in the period last year.

General Motors Corp. sales of 86,887 cars were down 31.9 percent from 127,573.

Chrysler Corp. sold 19,932, down 28.5 percent from 27,860 last year.

Volkswagen of America had sales of 2,529 Rabbits, down 7.6 percent from last year's 2,740 and American Motors Corp. sold an estimated 3,100 cars in the early October period, 23.2 percent fewer than the 4,031 it sold in 1980. AMC's figures are estimated because it reports only on a monthly basis.

So far this year, domestic automakers have sold 5,072,943 cars, down 0.8 percent from the 5,136,934 cars sold by the same time last year. Because there was one more selling day in the period last year, the percentage comparison is based on the rate of sales per day.

By percentages, Chrysler was up nearly 20 percent; Ford was down less than 1 percent; GM was down 3.5 percent; VW was down 11.3 percent; and AMC was down an estimated 4 percent.

Faked Evidence To Induce Statement

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh policeman testified Wednesday that he lied and other officers faked evidence to get a statement from a suspect in the stabbing death of a 23-year-old Raleigh woman.

similar to the knife that killed Ms. Hall-Kennedy, Mack and Williams testified.

Mack said the duplicate knife and photographs of the bloody fingerprints were brought into the interrogation room by De. W.M. Parker Jr.

On April 9 — the same day James Wallace Jackson signed the statement — Jackson was charged with first-degree murder in the March 13 slaying of Leslie Hall-Kennedy, a North Carolina State University student.

Parker left the room after 20 to 30 minutes and said Jackson was willing to make additional statements, Mack said. Jackson finished a handwritten statement and was charged, he said.

Det. G.L. Mack testified Wednesday that officers investigating the case realized that if they failed to obtain a statement, "then we didn't have a case."

Mack admitted that in questioning Jackson before Parker did, he lied and played on Jackson's emotions. He said he told Jackson that a witness had seen him fleeing Ms. Hall-Kennedy's apartment after the slaying. There was no such witness, he admitted in court.

Mack said Jackson had denied participation in the slaying in interviews with officers March 26 and 27. On April 8, members of the Major Crimes Task Force devised a plan, Mack said.

Jackson's attorney, Gerald L. Bass of Raleigh, moved that any statements by Jackson be suppressed as evidence.

As part of the plan, Det. D.C. Williams put his own bloody fingerprint on a knife

PCA Office Will Open In Farmville

Arnold B. Parris, president of the Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, said the association will open a branch office in Farmville on Nov. 1.

The office, which Parris said is being opened for the convenience of farmers in the Farmville, Fountain and Walstonburg areas, will be located on Highway 264 Bypass beside Worthington's Warehouse.

He said the Farmville branch will be staffed by J. R. Dilda, vice president, and Mrs. Mary B. Turnage, office assistant.

The branch, he pointed out, will serve farmers for short and intermediate-term loans and also make and service long-term loans to Pitt County farmers for the Federal Land Bank.

The spokesman said that during the past year, loans in excess of $50 million were made in Pitt and Greene counties by the association, and the Federal Land Bank had loans in excess of $27 million in Pitt County. The associations are farmer-owned cooperatives.

The Pitt-Greene PCA's home office is in Greenville and a branch office is located in Snow Hill.

Vow 'Close Down City' With A Sympathy Strike For Teachers

By ERICH SMITH
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The leaders of some 250,000 workers belonging to AFL-CIO-affiliated unions say they'll "close down the city" with a one-day general strike Oct. 28 in support of striking teachers.

Council was unanimous in answering the sympathy strike request by John Murray, who as president of the Philadelphia Federation of Teachers has led a strike by 13,000 instructors and 9,000 other public-school employees for 38 days.

The council last proposed a citywide strike in February 1973 in the midst of a teachers' strike. But the Nixon administration asked the unions not to do anything to disrupt negotiations, and the unions eventually canceled the sympathy strike.

Public employee walkouts are legal in Pennsylvania if the strikers have no contract. The teachers strike has been ruled illegal because a teachers' contract is in force. At issue is the school district's elimination of 3,511 jobs and retraction of a 10 percent pay raise, moves made by the school board since the contract was signed.

Ecologist Joins Faculty

ECU News Bureau
A microbial ecologist whose research specialty deals with problems of algae bloom in rivers and microbial populations in salt marshes and pocosins has joined the ECU biology faculty.

"We will close down this city on Oct. 28," Murray shouted at the council meeting. "I want you to be with us and I want you to march with us."

The contract was violated, Murray said, adding: "This fight is over one item and one item only."

School started Tuesday for all fourth grades and some other grades at the city's 180 grammar schools and 53 other schools were added Wednesday. Fifty-six more

An effective citywide walkout would idle hospital workers, store clerks and city employees, along with industries.

School lawyer Vincent Salandria, who originally asked for a $500,000 contempt fine, said he would ask Bradley to increase the fines substantially.

Contempt fines for defying a back-to-work injunction climbed to $30,000 Wednesday — at $10,000 a day — and Common Pleas Court Judge Edward Bradley said he would "seriously consider" increasing the fines if the contempt continued.

Ed Toohey, president of the council, said the vote did not mean that every union would back the teachers, because each local would be making its own decision whether to join.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh said Wednesday night that he hoped a resumption of talks would reach a successful conclusion because "only the children are being hurt now."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today, leveling off after Wednesday's sharp drop.
 Losers held a 6-5 lead over gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.
 The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 14.93 Wednesday, recovered .19 to 850.54 by noontime.

 Interest rates bounced up and down erratically Wednesday, and at least two banks raised their broker loan rates just a day after the prime lending rate dropped from 19 to 18 percent at most banks.
 The NYSE's composite index rose .09 to 69.06. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .07 at 305.88.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 18.81 million shares at noontime, against 16.68 million at the same point Wednesday.

Nixon Tapes Run A Gamut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tapes from the White House of Richard Nixon would reflect "noble moments, locker room talk, dirty remarks, dirty jokes, wisecracks, serious reflections — the whole range of human experience," said former Nixon aide Charles Colson.
 Colson told the National Press Club Wednesday that published transcripts of the tapes can distort the context under which some conversations were held.
 He said there were lots of conversations like the one recently disclosed in which Nixon, angered by May, 1971, antiwar demonstrations, agreed with chief of staff H.R. Haldeman suggested that Colson hire Teamsters to beat up protesters.
 Colson said he was not present at that conversation and did not hire Teamsters members.
 "Your words in cold type do not necessarily reflect what is going on in your head, nor can they give tone, dredge up feeling or take out exaggeration," Colson said.
 As an example which might show up on tape if it is ever made public, Colson cited a time he walked into the president's office.
 "He said 'What have you done for your country today, boy?'" Colson recalled. "I said, 'I've finally had it, Mr. President. I called the Army Department and said send in the army to take over the presses of the Washington Post.' And he said, 'Good, it's about time we did something.'"

Core Creek Bridge Closed

Structural maintenance and repairs of Core Creek Bridge located on the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway in Carteret County are scheduled to begin Oct. 19 and continue for one week.
 During that week, Oct. 19-23, the bridge will be closed completely to both water and road traffic from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. each of the five days. It will be open for traffic at other times during the day.

Pay Raise Is Now Signed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 2.1 million men and women in the armed forces are getting pay increases of up to 17 percent, which President Reagan says will attract "well-motivated, high-quality" people to the military.
 Reagan signed the $4.5 billion measure Wednesday, making the raises retroactive to Oct. 1.
 "Attracting and retaining well-motivated, high-quality military personnel is a critical element of my commitment to strengthen America's defenses," the president said in a statement. "This bill will enable us to do that."
 "For too long," he added, "our dedicated military personnel have been undercompensated for the sacrifices and family disruptions they have had to endure in protecting the freedom of all of us."
 Enlisted personnel will receive increases ranging from 10 percent to 17 percent, depending upon experience. Officers will receive a 14.3 percent raise.
 New recruits, for example, will get a 10 percent pay boost from $501 to $551 a month, while a sergeant first class or chief petty officer with 14 years service will get a 17 percent raise, going from $1,138 a month to $1,331.
 The bill also raises from $5,000 to $8,000 the maximum bonus paid for four-year enlistments in certain critical skills.

Not Joining

WINDSOR — Windsor mayor L. T. Loverman said today "I don't feel like the commissioners have any other way to go," than to vote not to join other municipalities in a N.C. Power Agency Number 3 proposal to purchase Carolina Power and Light Co. generating facilities and supply electric power to the communities at wholesale.
 At a public hearing, Loverman explained, all but two of the citizens present voted against going along with the agency. "I don't feel like the commission had any other way to go. The commissioners represent the people, not themselves."
 "I personally was against it," Loverman said, "from attending the power agency meeting in Hertford" last month.
 "We didn't think it was economically feasible for a town our size ... with the economic situation of today."
 Windsor was the first of the 36 municipalities eligible to participate in the Power Agency project to reject the proposal, although the Winterville town board voted to remain wholesale customers of the Greenville Utilities Commission.
 In Greenville GUC director Charles Horne, a member of the negotiating team which worked out the details of the Power Agency project with CP&L and Virginia Electric and Power Co., said so far, 92 percent of the eligible municipalities have approved the project. Only New Bern, Waynesville and Enfield have not voted on their participation.
 "We should have 98 percent of the potential load committed to the agency by October 20," Horne noted.

Foreign Aid ...

 manufactured goods exported by non-OPEC developing countries, Reagan said, and U.S. trade barriers are among the lowest in the world.
 "And the way we can do that job best, the way we can provide the most opportunity for even the poorest of nations, is to follow through with our own economic recovery program to ensure strong, sustained noninflationary growth."
 It was not clear what specific criticism of U.S. foreign aid policies Reagan was referring to.
 In recent years, there has been an undercurrent of criticism from industrial and Third World nations alike that the United States has not been doing its share in aiding poor nations.
 Robert S. McNamara, the former president of the World Bank, has frequently complained that the United States was giving less in aid in proportion to its wealth than any of the major industrial democracies, and, if anything, the level of aid has continued to decline.

Baker
 Mr. Herman Baker died at his home Wednesday. He was the husband of Mrs. Lillie Mae Tyson Baker and the father of Mrs. Annie Barnes.

Powell
 Mr. William Allen (Bill) Powell, 52, Union Carbide mechanic, died Wednesday morning at Duke University Medical Center in Durham. His residence was Route 1, Greenville.
 The funeral service will be conducted at 4 p.m. Friday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Linwood Kilpatrick, Pentecostal Holiness minister of Winterville. Burial will be in Hollywood Cemetery in Farmville.

Hope Cash In On Inventions
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University officials are hoping to compensate for dwindling federal support by cashing in on inventions originating at the Durham campus.
 Duke is already receiving $40,000 a year for developing a medical device which uses laser-produced infrared light to measure oxygenation in the brain. And officials expect the invention by Frans F. Jobsis, a physiology professor, to bring in as much as $1 million a year after it goes on the market several years from now.

In a recent report to university trustees, Duke president Terry Sanford said the fledgling patents office handling such developments is one of "some new approaches" the university is trying to bolster flagging funds.
 Mr. Powell was a native of Wilson County and a graduate of Lucama High School. He was a former employee of Allen Implement Company in Farmville and for the past 20 years he had been employed with Union Carbide. He was a member of the Bell Arthur Christian Church.
 Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ardeen McLawhorn Powell; a son, William Allen Powell Jr. of Greenville; a daughter, Mrs. Georgia Powell White of Greenville; a brother, Haywood Powell of Lucama; and three sisters: Mrs. Jean Mercer of Lucama, Mrs. Jenette Tenney of Rome, Ga., and Mrs. Beatrice Jones of Eden.
 The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. Thursday.

Rose Faces Kinston At Homecoming

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Rose High School, ranked eighth in the state this week by the Associated Press, begins the dash down the stretch to the finish line this week, hosting Kinston's Vikings — the newest member of the Big East Conference.

Quarterback Barry Smith

Kinston moved into the league this year, replacing Bertie, which became a member of the 3-A Northeastern Conference. The Vikings had been a member of the 4-A Midwestern Conference. The Rampants go in hot on the heels of a 34-7 thrashing of Beddingfield High School, a game that saw quarterback Barry Smith come off the bench to hit on eight of 14 passes for 249 yards and four touchdowns. Three of those strikes were to split end Chris McLawhorn and the other to tight end Marty Barnes. McLawhorn also scored one other touchdown on a nine-yard reverse.

The Rampants are 5-1 overall and 2-1 in conference games.

Kinston brings in only a 1-4-1 record, having beaten only Wilson Fike, 13-0, and tied New Bern, 13-13. Rose, incidentally, beat New Bern the following week, 34-14, in a game closer than the score would show.

Kinston's losses have been to Goldsboro, 7-6, Jacksonville, 20-0 (Rose beat Jacksonville, 15-14), Wilson Hunt, 6-0, and Northeastern, 6-0.

In Big East games, Kinston is 1-2.

Rose High coach Ronald Vincent was extremely pleased with the play of the Rampants in their victory over Beddingfield. "I thought we played extremely well," he said. "Our pass blocking was very good, and our quarterback play was the best it's been this year."

"I thought Roderick Harrell ran very hard, too. He didn't get a lot of yardage, but he got all there was to get when he did run, and that's all you can ask of anyone."

Andre Wooten

Vincent was also pleased with the defensive play of the Rampants. "I think five interceptions is a pretty good night," he laughed. "Beddingfield played pretty good defense too, especially against the run, but I didn't think that they'd continue to let us get free deep like they did. That was open all night."

Vincent also expressed surprise at Northern Nash's 21-16 upset of Rocky Mount, throwing the Big East lead into a tie between Rose, Rocky Mount, Northeastern and Fike, each 2-1. "It could help us, or it could hurt us," Vincent said.

"It could help to fire up some of the other teams, something we really need to watch out for."

"But if we play like we should, it shouldn't hurt us. It does show that anything can happen in a football game, and you have to be ready all the time."

Vincent said it could serve as a warning to the Rampants, and he has tried to stress this to the team this week. "You remember what happened to us last year after beating Rocky Mount. We went down hill after that." Rose beat Beddingfield the next week, 7-6, on a late score, then lost three of the next four to finish out of the running for the league crown.

"The guys remember Bertie last year, and I think that will help us get ready for Kinston and the rest of them. If it can happen to Rocky Mount, it can happen to us too, so we've got to be ready to play. Last year's Bertie game is still vivid to us."

Vincent feels that Kinston will bring in a very good defensive ball club. "They've had trouble scoring themselves, but nobody has scored a lot of points against them." Only three of the six teams have scored as many as two touchdowns on the Vikings, and just one, Jacksonville, scored as many as three.

Overall, Kinston has allowed just 63 points in six games, while scoring just 32 of their own.

"Offensively, they've had more success throwing the ball than they have running it," Vincent said. Quarterbacking the Vikings is Bo Kintz, and his chief target has been wide receiver Mike Pittman, who has done a 9.7 in the 100-yard dash.

Darryl Suggs is the leading rusher on the tailback position, but he has less than 500 yards.

The defense, which uses a 4-4 alignment, is led by several strong players, including tackles Jeff Jenkins and Roy

Valvano Likes The Experience

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano says this year's returning lineup will have some experience behind it.

"This year is particularly exciting because we were 14-13 last year and we have mainly sophomores and juniors back," Valvano said in a preview of the Atlantic Coast Conference team.

"We have Chuck Nevitt and Scott Parzych, a couple of seniors who have never had to start before," he said. "Then we have five freshmen."

Valvano, speaking to reporters on the team's photo day, also predicted big things from a new recruit.

"Dinky Proctor (6-8, from Somerset, N.J.) could play a lot of positions for us," Valvano said. "He's not just the 'big guard player' which I recruited. He's a little bigger than that now, about 6-7 or 6-8 and 220 pounds. He could play the big forward position or the small forward position."

But Valvano said much of the Wolfpack's success in the upcoming season may depend on the position of center.

"If we get better statistics from that spot with senior Chuck Nevitt and freshman Cozell McQueen than we got last year, I believe that we can finish in the first division in the league," he said.

Valvano said Wednesday, before the first day of practice for his squad, that a starting lineup could feature the 7-5, 217-pound Nevitt at center, with two 6-foot juniors — Sidney Lowe and Derek Whittenburg at guard. He said Scott Parzych, a 6-7 senior, and Thurl Bailey, a 6-11 junior, would probably play forward.

Lowe, a second-team All-ACC selection last season, led the league in assists with a 7.6 average to rank fifth nationally. But Bailey proved to be the Wolfpack's big surprise on the way to a lackluster 14-13 season. He vaulted from the ranks of the reserves as a freshman to become the team leader in scoring with a 12.3-point average as a sophomore.

But Valvano said Lowe was suffering from an injury to his left foot that came in the World University Games this summer.

"He may be developing a chronic foot problem," he said. "And if so, we're just going to have to say to him, 'take it easy in practice. Don't push yourself too hard.'"

Lowe said the injury was not too serious.

"My foot feels pretty good right now," he said. "I've been working on a program with it. It's not 100 percent but it's coming along well."

Lady Pirates Open Practice With Number Of New Faces On Scene

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

For the first time in her four years at East Carolina, Lady Pirate basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi faces what has to be called a rebuilding year. Gone are four top players from last year's team, and only two with great experience remain.

But — and the but is a big one. The Pirates are bringing in their most talented group of newcomers, and if they come through and jell early, the Lady Bucs could again become one of the top teams in the country.

"You can't compare this year's team to last year's," Andruzzi said. "They are two entirely different teams. Our goal is not to be 23-7 (last year's record), but to do the best we can."

"We have a whole group of new players and we expect difficulties. A year ago, we had lost only one or two players.

This year, we're young. We have talent, and we should be a lot more balanced. A lot of our freshmen are going to see a lot of playing time, and it entices me to see a lot of the younger kids playing. I don't know what type of team we're going to be yet, but we'll know by our first game. They haven't seen any defensive situations to test their abilities yet."

That first test could come in a Varsity-Alumni game planned for early November. The regular season opens on November 29, when the Lady Bucs host Appalachian State.

Only two starters return from last year's team. 6-0 forward Mary Denkler (14.4 points, 6.8 rebounds), and 5-8 guard-forward Sam Jones (14.7, 5.3). "Both of them have had good pre-seasons and are experienced clutch players. Both have improved a lot and I expect both of them to start this winter."

"Mary has become an all-around player now and will probably play some on the wing, too," Andruzzi added.

She expects the team to be much more flexible, as far as where people can play. "I don't think we are confined to playing one particular position, and this could be real good for us. We will try and get the best combination and see what the girls can do in the various positions."

While East Carolina also return three other letterwinners, 5-6 guard Lillian Barnes, 5-8 guard-forward Fran Hooks, and 5-6 guard Caren Truske, along with 6-2 center Darlene Hedges, who saw some action last year after becoming eligible at the end of the first semester.

"I'm not going to say that they have the inside track at starting," Andruzzi said. "Our newcomers are talented, and the only thing holding them back is experience."

The newcomers include 6-2 center Darlene Chaney, 5-7 point guard Loraine Foster, 6-0 forward Laura Regal — all freshmen; and juniors Loletha Harrison, a 5-8 forward transferring from Louisville, and 5-9 forward Ginger Noce, a transfer from Randolph-Macon.

"This is the best talented group of recruits that we've ever had, and it could be the best talented team in the future, but it's not as talented as last year's team right now. It could be in the future, especially if we have another good recruiting year this spring," Andruzzi said.

The Lady Pirates face a demanding schedule. "If we played an 'easy' team, they'd be up for us, so we might as well play a good team. There are no breathers on the schedule," she said. Only three teams on this year's slate had losing records last season.

East Carolina will also declare itself under the NCAA post-season tournament fold this year. Most of the area teams will also be going this route, and the NCAA nationals will be held at Old Dominion. East Carolina would move into the tournament field as an independent. Seven conferences, including the ACC, have declared their intention to compete in the tournament and have received automatic berths. Two other conferences are also expected to qualify for automatic entry. A 32-team field is being planned.

Whether East Carolina will have a shot at the tournament will depend a lot on how things come together. "It would take a lot to equal last year's record," Andruzzi said.

Burris Sparks Expos To 3-0 Victory

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Montreal Expos, bolstered by a masterful pitching performance by Ray Burris, return home on even terms in the National League Championship Series after beating rookie sensation Fernando Valenzuela and breaking the Dodger Stadium jinx in the process.

And patience was the key to Wednesday night's 3-0 victory as far as rookie outfielder Tim Lincecum is concerned. Raines, Valenzuela's only serious challenger for the NL Rookie-of-the-Year award, collected three hits because he refused to chase the 20-year-old left-hander's out pitch — the low screwball.

"I was just thinking about laying off those screwballs down and away and waiting for a fast ball I could handle and he came with those pitches I could hit," Raines said after the Expos evened the best-of-five playoffs with the Dodgers at one victory each.

The five-hit shutout by Burris not only tied the series, but enabled the Expos to break a 10-game Dodger Stadium losing streak. They had lost 19 or their last 20 games in Los Angeles.

Now the series shifts to chilly Montreal, where the nighttime low temperature for the week was recorded at 28 degrees on Monday night. The teams square off Friday night and Saturday afternoon. A fifth game, if necessary, would be played Sunday afternoon.

"I don't think cold weather in Montreal will make any difference to us," said Raines when asked about the shift from balmy Los Angeles. "I feel we have an advantage going back to our home stadium."

Left-hander Jerry Reuss will pitch Friday for the Dodgers against Montreal ace Steve Rogers.

Reuss was 10-4 during the regular season and blanked Houston 4-0 when the Dodgers clinched the NL West title. Rogers, 12-8, beat Philadelphia twice in the East playoffs.

"We always seem to play a good game against the better pitchers in the National League," said Montreal first baseman Warren Cromartie, whose second-inning double drove in what proved to be the winning run.

Manager Jim Fanning was happy taking his team back to Olympic with the series tied.

"If we had been going back with anything less, our backs would really have been against the wall," he said.

The Expos scored twice in the second inning. With one out, third baseman Larry Parrish singled off what he said was a poorly thrown screwball and went to second on a single by Jerry White.

Then Cromartie lined a hanging screwball to right and only a great fielding play by Pedro Guerrero kept White from scoring. Shortstop Chris Speier walked and Burris struck out.

Raines singled to score White, but Guerrero threw out Cromartie at home plate to end the inning.

Montreal scored again in the sixth, the last inning for Valenzuela, when center fielder Andre Dawson singled with one out and scored after catcher Gary Carter singled and Dodger left fielder Dusty Baker made an errand throw to second base.

"You can't win every game, nobody can," said Valenzuela, who gave up seven hits, walked two and struck out four.

"Burris pitched a great game."

Burris, signed last winter as a free agent, finished with three strikeouts and walked two.

Movies and television may have helped the Expos, many of whom watched Valenzuela pitch on television against Houston last Saturday.

"Maybe they learned something," said Fanning.

And Burris said he watched movies of his two losing efforts against the Dodgers during the regular season.

"I tried to combine those things which had worked best for me," he explained.

"This was my most rewarding experience in 8½ years," said Burris, who could not remember his last shutout. For the record, the 31-year-old right-hander's last whitewash came against Houston May 3, 1977, when pitching for the Chicago Cubs.

Known in the past a sinkerball hurler, Burris said he threw "off-speed sliders and change-ups and spotted the fast balls. You never saw me throw such a variety of off-speed pitches."

He ran into some trouble in the sixth when Ken Landreaux drew a walk and Baker singled him to third with one out. But Burris got cleanup hitter Steve Garvey to hit into an inning-ending double play.

"He was moving his pitches around," said Garvey. "I think the only fastball I saw was the one I singled on in the last inning. His game plan was to change speeds as much as possible. He just kept us off balance all night."

Parrish said the Expos learned more about Valenzuela as the season progressed.

"A lot of guys around the league have picked up things about him," he said. "Our approach was to wait for the good pitch and try to drive it and lay off the good screwballs."

The Dodgers, despite the threat of cold weather in Montreal, seemed unconcerned with the change of location. The Expos finished with the league's best home record, 38-18.5.

"We've played in cold weather before," said Baker. "It's never a plus, we just have to put it out of our minds and be like football players."

Jockey's Race-Fixing Conviction Just Tip Of Iceberg In The Sport

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — New Orleans District Attorney Harry Connick says jockey Angelo Trosclair's race-fixing conviction is "just the tip of the iceberg," and said his probe of the sport is far from ended.

"Racing, at least in the New Orleans area, stinks," Connick said. "I think it is corrupt and a lot of work has to be done."

"We are going to do a number of things, and it is possible — if the evidence is there, of course — there may be indictments."

Trosclair, 24, is one of the nation's leading winners. He was convicted in a non-jury trial Wednesday of bribing two other jockeys in a big-payoff exacta race last Feb. 14 at the New Orleans Fair Grounds.

"I'm an innocent person. That's all I have to say," Trosclair said after the verdict was handed down. He has maintained his innocence since he was indicted, and his lawyer said the case will be appealed.

Judge Matthew Braniff ordered a pre-sentence investigation after Wednesday's verdict. Trosclair faces up to 10 years in prison and a fine of $20,000 on the two-count conviction.

Connick said his investigators encountered stiff resistance from people connected with racing during a seven-month probe.

"I'm talking about some jockeys, some owners, some trainers and even some people higher up in racing who are lacking in courage as far as I am concerned, regarding this very serious problem," Connick said.

Win Over Spiders Badly Needed Shot In Arm

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

"It was a shot in the arm when we really needed it."

That's the way East Carolina coach Ed Emory characterized last week's 17-13 victory over the University of Richmond. "We needed the game to get back to 3-3 and you have to get even before you have a chance to climb above .500. Now we have a chance to make something bigger happen."

Emory said the game was a tough one both physically and mentally. "Richmond is a lot like East Carolina. They are fighting for identity and a place in the sun. They've played a tough schedule with teams in North Carolina State, Virginia Tech and Southern Mississippi, and they had a chance to beat both State and Southern Miss. They're a good football team, and they have a chance to win the rest of their games."

The coach said that it was an outstanding defensive effort that allowed the Pirates to pull even with the victory. "It was the best defensive game since I've been here. We played with intensity and character."

Emory said that the Pirates made a few changes on the defensive side of the slate and they seemed to pay off. One of the moves was to bring defensive coordinator Norm Parker down to the field from the spotter's box.

"I was pleased with the play of Gerald Sykes (named defensive player of the week by the Pirates), Jody Schulz, Mike Grant, Glenn Morris, Steve Hamilton, George Crump and Marvin Elliott. They all played well. I think our bench played a big role in the game, too, cheering the defense on each time they came off the field."

He was also happy with the play of a couple of freshmen. "Steve Johnson played the whole second half after Hal Stephens got hurt. And Maury Banks did a fine job in coming in after Johnson got hurt late in the game. Tony Smith, a redshirt freshman, was another surprise. After Mark Ervin (middle guard) got hurt, he came on and also played the second half, coming up with two big sacks on the quarterback when we needed them."

And it was Schulz that drew special praise from the coach after intercepting one pass that set up a Pirate touchdown, then running back the field goal Sykes blocked to set up the second and winning touchdown. "It amazes me to see him come up with the big play time and again," Emory said. "He's got to be one of

of having some people permanently barred from Louisiana racing for failure to cooperate with the investigation and for activities that are not in the best interests of racing."

Connick raised the possibility of permanent sanctions against people who refuse to cooperate.

"What I'm talking about more directly is the possibility the finest defensive ends in college football today."

Emory said that there was some criticism of the special teams after the game, which saw Richmond run back two late kickoffs into good field position. "They made some mistakes, no doubt about it, and they were critical and could have been costly."

"But we won on special teams, too. That blocked field goal was a special team play. And it wasn't just luck. We work on that very play every day in practice, where Sykes overloads and comes dashing in."

Offensively, however, Emory admitted that he was very disappointed in the way the team played. "We had 68 snaps and averaged only 2.9 yards a play. You have to be disappointed with something like that. I think we had intensity, but we also had 25 missed assignments. You expect to have more in the wishbone than other formations, but not like this. The defense moves around a lot to try and mess you up, so you expect some problems. But we had nine missed assignments by tight ends, nine in the line, five by backs, one by the quarterback and a couple by the receivers. You can't do much with mistakes like that."

Emory blamed that on coaching, lack of concentration and inexperience. "I hope that we've solved some of those problems. Right now we're stopping ourselves."

He added that when the Pirates used the I-formation, they averaged 4.5 yards. The I was used eight times during the game, he said. "We'll continue to work some I plays. I don't know how many, but we'll continue to evaluate the situation."

Emory also was disappointed with the passing game of the Pirates.

"(Tootie) Robbins was the best of our linemen, grading out at 89 percent. We are getting better play from our freshman centers, and (Jimmy) Walden is making progress (at running back). We will be playing (Milt) Corsey more, and (Bubba) Bunn and (Stefon) Adams. Scott Lewis, a freshman fullback, has made a lot of progress and may start Saturday. Our fullback play has caused us more problems than any other part of our offense. Losing Theodore Sutton has been a lot tougher than we expected it to be."

The Pirates return to action on Saturday night at 8:30 p.m., Eastern time, when they travel to Lafayette, La., to take on Southwest Louisiana.

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Junior Girls' tennis team gained Wilson, 9-1, yesterday at River Birch Tennis Center.

Greenville is now 6-0 and closes out the season on October 26 against Greenfield of Wilson.

Summary:
Marcie Geiger (W) d. Susan Taylor, 8-6.
Kelly Wall (G) d. Jensen Lund, 8-1.

Mary Helen Allen (G) d. Angie Pruitt, 8-0.

Sutton, end David Chapman, and linebackers Jeff Hendricks and Mike Fields. Fields is said by Vincent to be the mainstay of the defense.

"It's hard to convince the guys that Kinston is a better club than their record shows. But with the scores they've had, a couple of plays in four of their games could make them 5-1 on the season. They're that close to having a winning record."

"We need to get ahead early in the game. That's going to be the key to this one, and in fact, the key to the rest of the season," Vincent said.

Rose's rushing is led by Harrell, who has 420 yards on 103 carries, while fullback Roger Williams has rushed 36 times for 162 yards. Slotback Donnell Lee has carried 14 times for 134 yards, but has missed the last two games with a broken hand. He is expected to be back for this game.

Smith, after his fine game last week, will get the starting call for Rose against the Vikings. He's hit on 20 of 52 passes for 511 yards, with five interceptions. He's thrown for six touchdowns. Tom Buie, who had started last week's game, has hit on 17 of 45 tries with five interceptions for 268 yards. Buie left last week's game at halftime with a bruised hip, but is expected to be able to play this weekend if needed.

Oddly enough, the starting quarterback in each of the last five games has not been the one to do the job for the Rampants, while the backup has come on to bring the team to victory.

Kickoff is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, as the Rampants celebrate Homecoming during the evening.

Split Unexpected Bonus For Montreal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ray Burris could not think of a more gratifying moment in his 8½ years in major league baseball, and it came just in time for the Montreal Expos.

Burris, a journeyman right-hander, pitched a five-hit shutout Wednesday night to beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-0 and even their National League Championship Series after two games in Los Angeles.

down two. The Dodgers are too good a club to try to beat three straight, even though we're going home to Montreal."

In and out of trouble and trying to protect his lead, Burris yielded a single to Steve Garvey with one out in the final inning. Ron Cey then hit what looked like a perfect double-play grounder to Speier who booted the ball for an error.

"I was thinking double play all the way on the ground ball by Cey. It took a bad hop and hit me in the chest," Speier said. "I didn't even get leather on it. I catch that ball and make that play nine times out of ten."

Speier made up for it on the next play, though, when Pedro Guerrero hit a sinking line drive to Speier's right. Speier made the stab and tossed to the second baseman Rodney Scott, doubling off Garvey to end the game.

"I'm just happy I got the chance to redeem myself on Pedro's ball," Speier said. "I got an excellent jump on the ball. I don't know what happened with Garvey. His run didn't matter that much. He has to wait for the ball to go through. Maybe his angle wasn't good. He must've thought it was through."

Burris, who had not pitched a shutout since May of 1977 when he was with the Chicago Cubs, was signed in February as a free-agent. Before the mid-season players strike, his record was 3-5, but in the second half, he had a 6-2 mark, best on the club.

modesty.

"I'm sure everybody came out to see Valenzuela tonight," he said. "But they saw a new star tonight, maybe."

Rick Scoppe

"I've played for a number of managers throughout my career," Burris said. "And this has to be my most gratifying experience."

"I had to perform extremely well to win. This club struggled to get here, and pitching is one of the reasons we made it," Burris said.

The split was a luxury that few expected from the Expos, who had lost 10 straight and 19 of 20 at Dodger Stadium before Wednesday night.

"After losing the first game, we could feel the pressure," said Expos' shortstop Chris Speier, whose ninth-inning error nearly let it slip away.

Speier said he was certain that with left-handed rookie Fernando Valenzuela on the mound, the Dodgers were confident in Game Two.

"We couldn't go to Montreal

Notes...

East Carolina coach Ed Emory has faced his share of criticism this year over the Pirates' ineffectual offense attack. And, as is usually the case when a team's offense falters, there has been an outcry for more passing as the answer.

Emory showed that even a coach is prone to the same belief — at least when it comes to a junior high football game.

"One of my sons (Battle Emory) is a quarterback at (E.B. Aycock Junior High). They were behind last week, 16-8, and I'm the worst fan in the world," Emory said. "I yelled, 'Throw the g-d-- ball, Emory.'"

"Then someone next to me said, 'Coach, they've been telling you to do that for weeks.'"

The loss of Theodore Sutton, who gained 2,730 yards in his four-year career at ECU, is proving to be more than Emory bargained for this year.

"Fullback has caused us more problems and has been less effective than we had thought it would at the beginning of the year," Emory said. "Losing Theodore Sutton has been much, much tougher than we expected."

"Our fullbacks are a step or two steps behind what Sutton was. Sutton had that acceleration we need at fullback."

Sutton, who ranks second behind Carlester Crumpler on the Pirates' all-time rushing list, was cut earlier this year by the Dallas Cowboys and is back in school pursuing a masters degree. Reports are, however, that the Cowboys are still interested in him and are staying in touch.

Former East Carolina running back Anthony Collins now has run for 371 yards in 90 carries (a 4.1 average) and four touchdowns this season for the New England Patriots, ranking him seventh in the AFC...He also has caught 17 passes for 162 yards...Collins has also returned 19 kickoffs for 399 yards, (a 21.0 average)...

Last week in the Patriots loss to the New York Jets Collins gained 49 yards rushing in 14 carries and scored one touchdown...He also caught three passes for 27 yards...

While it's still early there has been talk about the Patriots pushing Collins for rookie of the year in the American Football Conference...Asked about that last week, Collins said: "There has been a little talk about it but right now that's in the back of my mind. The first thing I want is for the team to win."

Something the Patriots are not doing much of this year, witness their 1-5-0 start despite having some of the best talent in the NFL.

Noted Without Comment: At times this season Collins has run in the backfield with Don Calhoun. When that happens the Patriots like to call it their AC-DC backfield...

And for all those who believe statistics tell it all, Cleveland Brown assistant coach John Petercuskie: "Statistics are like a bikini — they show a lot, but not everything."

Kickers In Deadlock

PEMBROKE — East Carolina and Pembroke State battled through two scoreless overtime periods and had to settle for a 1-1 tie in a soccer match yesterday.

Bill Merwin scored the only East Carolina goal in the second half off a penalty kick, while Gonzalo Suarez got the Pembroke goal on a breakaway, also in the second half.

East Carolina took 28 shots on goal, as compared to just eight for Pembroke. The Braves' goalie, Eric Burks, had 16 saves, while ECU's Dave Curtis, subbing for the injured Steve Brown, had six saves.

East Carolina is now 3-7-1, while Pembroke falls to 3-7-2.

The Pirates travel to Virginia this weekend, facing Richmond on Saturday and Virginia Wesleyan on Sunday.

Top Golfers Advancing

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Most of the favored golfers won opening-round matches in the 30th annual North and South Senior Amateur tournament to set up key matches in the second round.

Among the first-round winners Wednesday were qualifying medalist Billy Napier of Orlando, Fla., 1978 champion Ed Ervasti of London, Ontario; former USGA Senior titlist K.K. Compton of San Antonio, Texas; and 1981 USGA Senior semifinalist Roger McManus of Hartsville, Ohio.

In today's second round, Napier met Vince Cirigliano of Birmingham, Mich., Ervasti faced Neal Croonquist of Edina, Minn., Compton played Henry McCoy of Aberdeen and McManus squared off against Glenn Johnson of Detroit.

"It's kind of a shame that we have to play so early in the tournament," Ervasti said of his match with Croonquist. "But we should have a good match. I beat him here on the 19th hole when I won the tournament in 1978."

Ervasti was 3-over-par in his 1-up, first-round victory over Lee Brown of Turtle Creek, Pa. Napier, 59, a retired Air Force colonel, was a 2-and-1 winner over Jack Busby of Southern Pines, N.C.

Compton built up a big early lead and won 2-and-1 over Matthew Ellison of Pinehurst. McManus had the toughest opening match, a 1-up victory on the 21st hole against Richard Massuch of Chaska, Minn.

Martin Determined A's To Fight Back

NEW YORK (AP) — Down two games to none with no margin left for error, Oakland Manager Billy Martin took his team home today determined to prolong the American League Championship Series against the New York Yankees.

"We are fighters," said Martin. "We are a battling ballclub. We'll win Thursday and we'll win the next day and then we'll see who's singing that song."

"That song" was Frank Sinatra's recording of "New York, New York" which blared over the public address system at Yankee Stadium as the A's ran for cover after Wednesday's 13-3 shelling. But Martin may be whistling past the graveyard. The Yankees buried his A's under a barrage of a record 19 hits — the 13 runs were a record, too — including three-run homers by Graig Nettles and Lou Piniella. Now, New York goes for the kill tonight with rookie left-hander Dave Righetti pitching against Matt Keough for the A's.

New York wants to finish Martin's A's fast. The Yankees well recall last week's scare against Milwaukee when they won the first two games of the AL East Division playoffs before the Brewers bounced back to win the next two and take the early lead in the decisive fifth game.

"We've got to come out and go right after them Thursday night," said Piniella, who came into Wednesday's game in the fourth inning after Reggie Jackson strained a calf muscle. "We've got to show them we're going to put them away."

When the Yankees staggered against the Brewers, owner George Steinbrenner threatened a wholesale housecleaning of his ballclub. Piniella, 38, coined a slogan after that, saying, "Win One for the Veterans," and "Veteran Power." It has caught on in the clubhouse and the irony of it is that the vets did most of the damage in Game Two.

Piniella's homer capped a seven-run Yankee fourth inning that wiped out a 3-1 Oakland lead. Nettles, who had four hits in the game, started that rally with a booming single off the right field wall that just missed home run territory. The third baseman got his homer in the seventh, wrapping up another four-run rally.

"He threw me a breaking ball and it hung out over the plate," said Piniella. "I haven't hit that many in New York, but I pulled it enough to get it into the corner." Nettles' shot was more majestic, soaring deep into the right field seats. It looked very much like the ball he hit in the fourth inning for a tape-measure single.

When Nettles got no further than first base after that shot, Steinbrenner grimaced. The owner's disenchantment with careless Yankee baserunning led to last weekend's locker-room explosion. But Nettles had a ready answer for any criticism which might evolve from the owner's box.

"When you're a couple of runs down, you don't try to stretch it into a double," he said.

Nettles was still on first when Rick Cerone was hit by a pitch by A's starter Steve McCatty. Martin wasn't so sure about that. "I think," said the A's manager, "Cerone won an Academy Award."

Willie Randolph followed with an RBI-single and when Jerry Mumphrey, who also had four hits, walked, loading the bases, Dave Beard relieved for the A's.

Larry Milbourne singled for one run and Dave Winfield's double delivered two more. Then Piniella homered and, just like that, the Yankees had seven runs and an 8-3 lead.

With the big lead, there was little room for the kind of controversy which spiced New York's 3-1 opening game victory. Billyball, the A's razzle-dazzle style of play, was absent. There wasn't even a single spitball controversy.

"They didn't throw me any spitters," said Nettles. "But spitters don't bother me. I'd rather see them outlaw the slider."

Martin wasn't amused at the serenity with which the game was played. Asked what he thought of the work of home plate umpire Russ Goetz, the manager snapped, "What umpire? I didn't see any umpire out there."

At one point, Martin walked to the mound to talk to his pitcher and wound up jawing with Goetz and rubbing the ball on his pants leg, as if he might be drying off a wet baseball.

"How are they going to call a spitball? They don't know what one looks like," he said. "All I know is that Lee MacPhail doesn't have to bother sending me a rating form (on umpire performance) next year, because I won't fill it out."

The Yankees moved in front in the first inning on hits by Mumphrey and Milbourne and a force out. Left fielder Winfield protected the lead in the second with a leaping catch that robbed Tony Armas of a home run. But the A's nicked New York starter Rudy May for the tying run in the third when Rick Bosetti doubled and scored on a triple by Rickey Henderson. May stranded Henderson at third, striking out Dwayne Murphy and Kelvin Moore to end the inning.

But the A's were back in business in the fourth, scoring two runs on singles by Mickey Klutts, Mike Heath, Dave McKay and Fred Stanley. It was too early for Ron Davis or Goose Gossage, the twin ter-

Officers Chosen

Officers and directors of the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors have been elected for 1982, the board announced. Officers are Mac Harris, president; Richard Lane, vice president; and Doris Mills, secretary-treasurer. Directors are Jack Duffus, David Nichols, Ed Meyer, Louise Moseley and Les Turnage. The new officers and directors will be installed in December and will take office beginning in January.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, OCT. 16, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You may want to make some startling changes now but take a few moments out to think deeply and decide whether or not the changes will be beneficial in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study every angle of a new project you have in mind and then act carefully. Take no risks where your reputation is concerned.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get busy at those chores ahead of you early in the day so you'll have more time for pleasant activities later. Be wise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Steer clear of an overly dynamic acquaintance and seek company of persons who have more poise. Use common sense.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Take it easy if confronted with an annoying situation and use diplomacy instead of forcefulness for best results.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You may want to run off to new interests, but it's best to complete current tasks. Be more encouraging to others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It's to your interest to keep promises you have made. Avoid a co-worker who is confused and could get you in trouble.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan how to have greater income in the days ahead. Concentrate on how you can be more productive in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get busy at regular routines and complete what you have started. Make practical plans for the days ahead.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Others could be pressuring you to do things you don't like, so be more resolute in carrying out your wishes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do nothing that could upset conditions at home. Not a good day to start a new project. Be logical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Know your true position in a financial matter before going ahead with future plans. Use care in motion.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Make constructive plans that could give you added income in the days ahead. Take steps to improve your health.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be very ambitious, so give the best education you can afford in preparation for a most successful life. Religious training is important early in life. Teach to work with hands. One who will be fine in sports.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter is still upset at The Washington Post and may yet file a libel suit, despite the newspaper's acknowledgement that it is "utterly impossible to believe" an item in its gossip column last week about eavesdropping on his successor.

After an editorial in the Post's Wednesday editions, Carter criticized the paper for failing to apologize for the item, which reported rumors that Blair House, an official government guest house, "was bugged" while Ronald and Nancy Reagan were staying there before last January's inauguration. "It's clear The Washington Post has decided not to retract its original story and not apologize for it," Carter told reporters Wednesday before leaving Washington for a fishing trip in Pennsylvania.

The Post's chatty "Ear" column reported Oct. 5 that there was "a hot new twist" to the story that Mrs. Reagan had wanted the Carters to move out of the White House early so she could start redecorating.

"They're saying," the column said, "that Blair House where Nancy was lodging... was bugged. And at least one tattler in the Carter tribe has described listening in to the tape itself."

Although Carter last week requested a retraction and public apology, the Post editorial did not use the word "apology."

"We weren't there," said the editorial. "But everything we know about the presidency of Jimmy Carter suggests otherwise, that it was false."

The editorial said the point of the item was simply that a story was circulating. "It said there was a rumor around. There was," the editorial said. "Based on everything we know of the Carter instinct and record on this subject, we find that rumor utterly impossible to believe."

That didn't mollify Carter. "He finds it incredible," said Terrence Adamson, the former president's attorney. "They said they published a rumor knowing it was false."

Adamson said Carter "has not been dissuaded from pressing suit. But he has not made a final decision."

Carter's former press secretary, Jody Powell, said, "This (editorial) says to me that 'we didn't believe it was true when we published it, that we don't believe it now, but we defend our right to publish it."

Powell said Carter plans to sit down with his lawyers and family this week to decide on the libel suit.

"He has to figure out how much money he has to see if he can afford to go ahead with it," Powell said. "It will be long and drawn out and very expensive."

Post publisher Donald E. Graham said: "The editorial speaks for itself. I have no further comment."

Pennsylvania Congress Member Changes Label

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Eugene Atkinson of Pennsylvania left the Democratic Party to become a Republican today, saying that the "modern Democratic Party bears no resemblance" to what it was when he joined it 20 years ago.

President Reagan welcomed Atkinson to the Republican Party at a news conference at the White House Rose Garden. Reagan said Atkinson is deserting the Democrats because they no longer represent the interests of ordinary people.

"Congressman Atkinson is showing the outstanding political courage that symbolizes a new era of politics in America," Reagan said, noting that he too, switched parties in 1962.

"Gene and I both came to the realization that the party we belonged to had grown away from the concerns of the common man," Reagan said.

Atkinson is the second congressman in recent weeks to announce he is switching parties. Rep. Bob Stump, D-Ariz., announced last month that he will run as a Republican in the 1982 election.

Atkinson, who has supported most of Reagan's budget and tax cut plan in the House, said today he doesn't believe his constituents will resent his change.

"I don't put party labels on the president or on programs, that's meaningless. What counts is purpose and performance," said Atkinson, who is in his second term as a congressman.

"It's encouraging to me that a true effort is being made to reduce federal spending and curb runaway inflation. That's why I voted down the line to support the budget programs and the tax cuts," he added.

Atkinson said he joined the Democratic Party because he believed in the political philosophy of former President Kennedy, "but those ideals are now best expressed by the Republican Party."

When asked three weeks ago whether he would switch to the GOP, Atkinson told a reporter "I'm a lifelong Democrat. I have no intention of changing."

But speculation that Atkinson would bolt from the Democrats increased when he and his administrative assistant, Robb Austin, met last week with presidential political advisor Lyn Nofziger and House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois.

Atkinson, 54, is a member of the Public Works and Transportation and Government Operations committees.

'Nickels' Drive Formally Begun

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Agriculture officials launched a statewide campaign Wednesday to extend the Nickels for Know-How program for another six years.

Under the program, purchasers of feed and fertilizer agree to assess themselves five cents per ton, which is given to North Carolina State University for agricultural research and education.

The law requires that purchasers be given a chance every six years to decide whether they want to continue the program. The next referendum will be held Tuesday, Nov. 24.

POPULARITY DIP

OTTAWA (AP) — The Liberals' popularity has dropped below that of the Progressive Conservatives for the first time since the 1980 elections that brought the Liberals back to power, a Gallup Poll asserts.

Movie Is Full Of Inevitables

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Everything in "Margin for Murder" is inevitable — the girlfriend named Velda, the friendly cop who can get tough when he has to, the floozy called Daisy, even the hard-as-nails dialogue: "Man has a friend," Mike tells Velda, "they go through life together, good and bad, thick and thin. The friend gets killed, you do something about it."

Kevin Dobson is Mike Hammer, the latest reincarnation of Mickey Spillane's tough-guy private eye. Despite its flaws — besides the inevitables, "Margin for Murder" is too long, as most two-hour shows are — there is a certain charm to CBS' made-for-TV movie, to be broadcast tonight, 9-11 EDT.

The good guys win, and that's appealing. But no small amount of credit is due Dobson himself, one of TV's rising young stars. "You know," Velda says early on, "inside that tough exterior, you're quite a guy."

And she's right.

Hammer is summoned to the scene of a car wreck by his cop-friend, played by Charles Hallahan, and he's convinced right off that Joey DeFellita's death was no accident. He shoves all of his other cases aside to pursue Joey's killers, though New York's kinky disco scene, past the crooked pol to head-on confrontation with a mob boss named Marchetti.

There's a noble effort to maintain the side-of-the-mouth Spillane style, and that's not easy these days. It hasn't really worked since Bogart played Raymond Chandler's Philip Marlowe in the '40s.

"Want a drink?" Hammer is asked. "No," he replies, "just some answers." They talk like that a lot in "Margin for Murder."

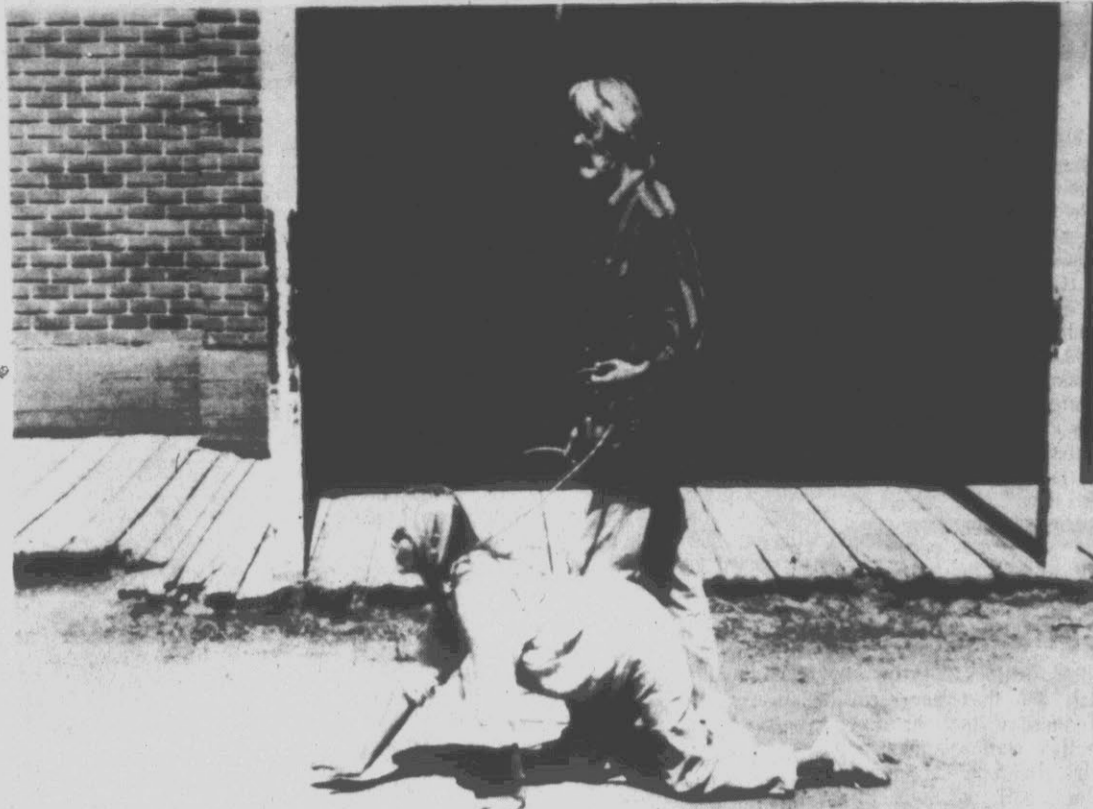

Through it all, Hammer is pursued by Velda, who has marriage on her mind, enjoys a too-brief fling with Daisy, the disco groupie and aspiring actress who says things like, "I believe in nudity, if it's important to the story, of course," and manages to comfort Mama DeFellita, who dreams of spending her declining years at home in Italy.

"Thanks for helping me with funeral," Mama says. "You're a good boy, Mike. Grazie." Another of those inevitables.

While on the subject, there is the inevitable red herring. The coroner tells Hammer that Joey may have been beaten to death by a woman. The detective's next stop? Grundy's gym, to meet with Joey's girlfriend, who's just finished a workout on the heavy bag.

Cindy Pickett, once a regular on CBS' daytime series, "Guiding Light," plays Velda, Donna Dixon, from ABC's "Bosom Buddies," is Daisy, and Renata Vanni is featured as Mama DeFellita.

In fact, the TV networks have enjoyed little success in transporting the classic American detective from the novel to the small screen. NBC's "Archer," with Brian Keith as the private cop created by Ross MacDonald, lasted barely three months in 1975. The same network tried again last season with William Conrad as Rex Stout's "Nero Wolfe," with a similar result.

What's more, Spillane's private eye has been tried in the past — Darren McGavin played the lead in 78 episodes of a series called "Mike Hammer," syndicated in 1958.

There's nothing to indicate CBS has more than the immediate production in mind, though most movies for television are considered pilots for prospective series. One problem here is that Dobson, who played Detective Bobby Crocker in CBS' "Kojak," a big hit in the '70s, has another series on the network schedule this fall, a cop show called "Shannon."

Peter, Paul Mary Mark Anniversary

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Peter, Paul and Mary, warm and welcoming as always, gave a concert Wednesday night at the Savoy, 20 years after their first concert, at the Bitter End in Greenwich Village.

They haven't gone fat or flat, haven't lost their harmony or their idealism. Mary still flips hair that is long, straight and shiny blond. The men's hair is still dark but receding hairlines have intruded.

Parents, spouses and offspring were present, plus old friends like John Denver, Judy Collins, Paul Winter, David Bushkin, Lucy Simon.

Those not in that inner circle also felt included, and not by a phony statement that the trio loved everybody. A listener could feel his better self, inspired, cleansed and uplifted, being brought out, caring and optimistic. Childhood love of fun and fantasy popped up, too.

They started the concert, the first of four at the Savoy, with "The Power Song," which includes the line, "Take all of your atomic poisoned power away," and ended with "Blowin' in the Wind," the audience singing the choruses. In that one, Mary sang a final line, "The answer, my friend, is peace and love and all of us working for it together." They effectively answered the question whether they're still interested in causes and songs about making a better world.

"If I Had a Hammer" was the first rousing encore, followed by the "American national folk anthem" — "This Land Is Your Land." Then the trio blew out 20 candles on a cake wheeled onstage and invited anybody who'd like a piece of cake to stay.

They sang "The Unicorn Song," celebrating individuality. After Paul said a comforting, "Hang in there, little hearts," they sang Peter's new, scary song for children, "Don't Go Down to the Quarry." Later, they sang his "Puff the Magic Dragon."

Songs with a religious theme also were among the evening's most strongly harmonized and effective, "Wild Places," "The Water Is Wide," "Jesus Met the Women at the Well."

All three talked a good deal, in an old-friends vein. In a more formal moment, Mary commented on their folk music roots, "I used to listen to the Weavers' records. They were an inspiration, musically and ethically."

Paraphernalia Law Is Upheld

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Attorney General Rufus Edmisten reacted with "delight" to a Superior Court judge's ruling Wednesday that North Carolina's new drug paraphernalia law is constitutional.

Wake County Superior Court Judge Edwin S. Preston denied a motion for a preliminary injunction and dissolved a temporary restraining order issued in late September against the law, which bans the sale, possession and advertising of drug-related items.

"We've always contended that the law taken as a whole was constitutional," Edmisten said in an interview after the ruling. "We're very delighted that Judge Preston has upheld the law as it now stands on its face."

Preston ruled in a suit brought by two distributors of "Job" cigarette rolling papers, Adams Apple Distributing Co. of Illinois and Atlantic Tobacco Co. of Raleigh.

The plaintiffs said the law was unconstitutionally vague, overbroad and was in violation of the due process clause of the 14th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution.

Preston's ruling dissolved a temporary order by Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey. Bailey's order had blocked the state from filing any criminal charges against distributors and retailers selling rolling papers.

Attorneys for the companies said they had not challenged the entire law, but only the sections dealing with rolling papers distributed by their clients.

Attorney William W. Webb argued that while the rolling papers may be used to smoke illegal substances, such as marijuana, their predominant purpose was for use with tobacco.

"It's too vague. It's too broad. It has too much of a chilling effect on various areas of business enterprise," he said of the law.

Edmisten said the state would have to prove that the person who sold the papers knew that it was going to be used for an illegal purpose. The state would also have to prove that the buyer bought it with the intention of smoking marijuana.

"One can sell cigarette paper and one can buy cigarette paper," he said. "That itself is not a violation of the law."

But Webb said it was impossible for those selling the papers to know how those purchasing the papers intend to use them.

Webb said he was disappointed with the ruling and did not know what the companies' next step would be. Options include asking for a full trial in the suit or appealing Preston's decision to the state Court of Appeals.

The companies sold $600,000 worth of Job rolling papers in North Carolina last year and could lose that business under the new law, Webb said.

Webb said there was "nothing suggestive of drugs" in the packaging or advertising of the rolling papers.

Job papers are sold in more than 1,000 convenience stores in North Carolina and are even sold in the newsstand located in the Wake County Courthouse building and run by the blind, he said.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd. and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you—well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Expert Question Panther-Sighting

GATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Some people in Gates County say they have seen a panther in the area and heard its bloodcurdling screams, but wildlife officials are skeptical.

Sightings of a panther-like animal have been reported in and around wooded areas between Gatesville and Hobbsville, southwest of Merchants Millpond State Park.

Gates County Sheriff William H. Eure said Wednesday he had heard reports of panther sightings over the past few years, but several residents said the animal had been spotted more recently in the past two months.

"I'd heard so much about it from others who had seen it that, when I saw it, it shocked me," said Kathryn H. Ward of Gatesville. She said she and her husband, Melvin Ward, saw the big cat crossing a narrow logging road three weeks ago.

"He had a short face and jowls, and his tail was long," she said. "I would say he was a young one."

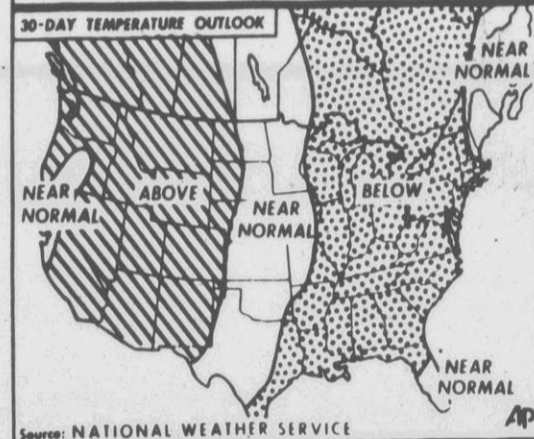

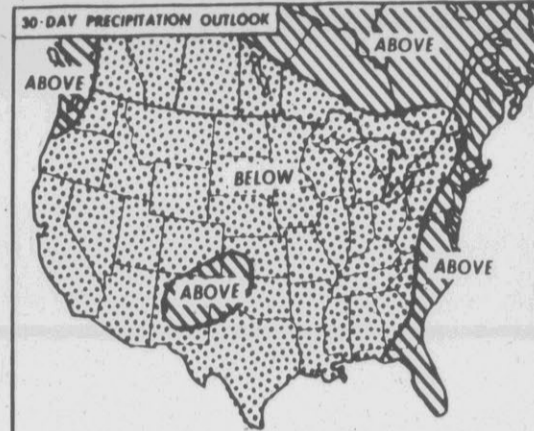

Other Gates County residents said they had been awakened at night by cat-like screams that one woman called "the most bloodcurdling sound I've ever heard."

But state wildlife experts note that panthers are hard to find almost anywhere, although they are the world's most widely ranging land mammals.

"As shy and retiring as they are, (an increase in reported sightings) sounds strange to me," said Ted Dossett, an educational representative for the state Wildlife Resources Commission. "There's a (panther) population in the Everglades, but they still have a hard time spotting them down there."

David S. Lee, mammals curator for the state Museum of Natural History, said many people reporting panthers have really seen something else — a big dog, an otter or even a house cat.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 10-15

MATMDAZAL AZASGEHXA VXWHLK
SWUUGEAT KMAHVD

Yesterday's Cryptiquip - RAGGED RAG DOLL ADORED BY BABY.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: K equals S

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Thought Gang Was Just College Kids

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) - A woman who lives near the Hell's Angels motorcycle gang in Union County says she thought her new neighbors were college students at first.

The Hell's Angels apparently have rented a second house in Union County, local law-enforcement officials say.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, said the tenants rented the house in mid-August.

"At first I just thought they were college kids," she said, "until the day before the funeral (for two slain Hell's Angels) in Marshville."

On that day - Sept. 30 - she said Hell's Angels motorcycle gang members, wearing their identifying vests, began arriving at the house.

This past month, club members and their associates began staying in the small, white-shingled house on U.S. 74 at the eastern edge of Wingate, said Sheriff Frank McGuirt.

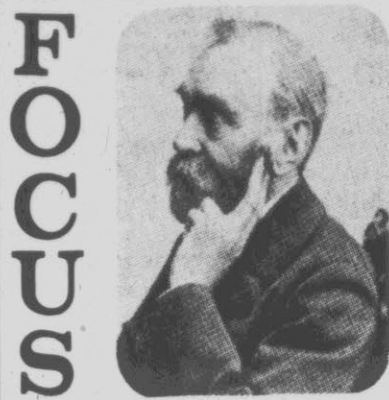

He said police knew the occupants were members of the club because of information obtained through checks of vehicle license plates.

The Charlotte chapter of the Hell's Angels continues to maintain a clubhouse on White Street in Marshville, a town of 3,000 four miles east of Wingate.

The Wingate house, which is surrounded by a chain-link fence and guarded by dogs, is owned by a Matthews resident, who bought it in February 1980. The owner declined comment Tuesday night.

Both Sheriff McGuirt and Wingate Police Chief Harold Smith emphasized Wednesday that they had no trouble from any of the new tenants or visitors.

FOCUS

Merchant of Death

Each fall the Nobel Peace Prize is awarded in Oslo, Norway. This prestigious honor, named after its donor, Alfred Nobel, includes a stipend of more than $200,000. The award itself is ironic, because in his lifetime Nobel was called the "Merchant of Death." As a young man he worked in the U.S. with the man who designed the ironclad ship "Monitor." Later he assisted his father in developing submarine mines and torpedoes. His experiments with nitroglycerine resulted in the death of his own brother. When he finally invented a safer form of this explosive, he became immensely wealthy. Some believe a guilty conscience may have prompted his bequest of $9 million to reward humanitarian achievements.

DO YOU KNOW - Which two American presidents won the Nobel Prize for Peace?

Record Soybean Harvest Seen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Record high soybean production is being forecast by the N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, with better-than-expected production predicted for tobacco.

Soybean production will reach 46.3 million bushels, the service said, which is 33 percent higher than last year's production of 34.7 million bushels.

Flue-cured tobacco production was predicted to reach 733 million, up 2.5 percent from an earlier forecast.
