Resuming Talks On Palestinian Issue

By ARTHUR MAX Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) - Israel and Egypt decided today to renew ministerial-level talks on Palestinian autonomy and concentrate on mapping out elections for a self-governing council, Prime Minister Menachem Begin announced.

Negotiators would meet in Cairo Nov. 4, five days earlier than originally scheduled, Begin told reporters after a 90-minute meeting with Egyptian Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly and Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

Begin said the two sides had originally planned to resume talks on self-rule for the 1.2 Palestinian living on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza Strip on Nov. 9. The advancement of the date was an apparent show of the high priority the two countries are giving the negotiations.

If the talks succeed, "this will be a real breakthrough and a real change," Begin said.

Begin said that once the self-governing council is established, Israel would dismantle its 14-year-old military government in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip and withdraw its forces to "specified security locations" as stipulated in the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace accords.

The decision to resume talks signaled the two countries' resolve to push on with the peace process despite the Oct. 6 assassination of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. The United States has been calling for a speedy breakthrough to bolster the post-Sadat government of President Hosni Mubarak.

The last high-level autonomy negotiations were held seven weeks ago in Cairo, and low-level talks opened in Tel Aviv last week. Next month's negotiations will be between Aly and Israeli Interior Minister Yosef Burg.

Israel Radio said Begin came up with the idea of concentration on the council as a means of tightening the focus of negotiations, which so far have bogged down in disagreement over the broad principles of autonomy.

Begin said the idea "was not rejected by the Egyptian delegation. I have the impression that it was accepted as a basis for thought and discussion."

The size, powers and eligible members of the council are the chief matters waiting to be resolved, he said.

The prime minister said he and Aly deepened the normalization of relations between the two countries by signing a seven-clause agreement on tourism. He did not give details, but called it important for Egyptian and Israeli economies.

Aly said the meeting was meant "to push forward the negotiations and achieve our goals."

Although Egypt and Israel sharply differ in conceptions of autonomy, Aly and Sharon said they were confident of success.

"I'm sure the differences can be bridged," said Sharon.

Aly said no target date had been set for agreement, but Sharon said he was sure an accord was possible before next April. That is when Israel is to relinquish the last section of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt under terms of the two countries' peace treaty. Israel seized the peninsula during the 1967 Middle East War.

After delivering a courtesy message from President Mubarak to Israel's President Yitzhak Navon earlier today, Aly told reporters talks on normalization were "going very well."

Out-Of-Wedlock Births Soar In National Trend

By ANN BLACKMAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than half of all black babies in the United States now are born out of wedlock, and the trend is increasing sharply among whites, especially teen-agers, a new government report shows.

Overall, according to federal census and health statistics, out-of-wedlock births increased 50 percent in the last decade to at least one in every six American babies.

In 1979, the most recent year for which comprehensive national statistics were compiled, an estimated 597,800 out-of-wedlock babies were born in America, accounting for 17 percent of all births. In 1970, unwed mothers had 399,000 babies.

10.7 percent of all births.

The report shows that in 1979, 55 percent of all black babies were born to unwed mothers, up from 38 percent in 1970. The percentage of white babies born to unwed mothers rose even more sharply - to 9.4 in 1979 from 5.7 in 1970.

"Regardless of age, the increases were much greater for white women than black women," the report says.

Experts attributed the increases to women wanting to wait until they are older to marry, a diminishing social stigma for unwed motherhood, and economic disadvantages, particularly for blacks.

Also, most studies show there is more sexual activity among white teen-agers than there was a decade ago.

"It's clear that the propensity to keep out-of-wedlock children is rising," said Kristin A. Moore, a specialist in teen-age pregnancy and out-of-wedlock births at the Urban Institute in Washington. "This has always been true among blacks, but now it's true among whites. It's more acceptable."

The Urban Institute's analysis of the figures shows that 29 percent of births to white teens and 83 percent of births to black teens occurred outside of marriage.

Despite those figures, the report said, the percentage of all women giving birth out of wedlock increased among whites and decreased among blacks.

Although there are no figures available for 1980 or 1981, Stephanie Ventura, a statistician who helped compile the report for the National Center for Health Statistics, said the rate of birth to unwed mothers rose substantially between 1978 and 1979. "We have no reason to believe that this will decline in the next few years," she said.

The report was based on records in 39 states and the District of Columbia which require marital status on birth certificates. Nationwide figures are estimates based on the 39-state information.

The rate of childbearing by unwed mothers increased more sharply than the number of women of childbearing age, 6.1 percent to 4 percent, the report said.

Ms. Moore said many young women are careless about using contraceptives when they are sexually active, but once they are pregnant they make thoughtful decisions about whether to marry.

Pregnant women who don't marry also now are more likely to get emotional and financial support from their own parents, she said, and those who drop out of high school to marry are more likely to depend on welfare.

"A pregnant teen-ager who marries is more likely to drop out of school, have subsequent births soon and, in some instances, forfeits the assistance of her parents," Ms. Moore said. "If she doesn't marry, she is more likely to remain with her parents, stay in school and is less likely to have subsequent births."

Ms. Moore said one reason so many black babies are born out of wedlock is that a large number of black males have trouble getting jobs and many who do work have jobs which don't offer health benefits.

Forum Planned

Candidates in the upcoming Greenville election will present their views at a Candidates' Forum to be held Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church, corner of 14th and Elm street under the sponsorship of the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters.

Greenville voters are invited to attend and hear the candidates running for mayor and city council. Each candidate will have four minutes to present and the audience will have four minutes to question each. Following the panel session, there will be opportunity to meet candidates informally over coffee. League Pres. Patricia Dunn will chair the meeting and Voter Service chairperson Carolyn Bowyer will moderate the panel.

COIN COLLECTION LEFT

What may be of great value to someone, a coin collection, has been left at Home Builders Supply Company several months. Home Builders Credit Manager Frank Layne, who called Hotline, said a package containing the collection and some other items was left on the counter by a customer who paid cash, so the firm has no way of knowing who it was. Whoever can call and describe the collection and other items in the package may have it back, Layne said. His office phone number is 752-1151.

Man Held For Shooting; 2 Are Wounded

Averett Perry Hooker, 21 of Elon College, was arrested on two counts of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and one charge of assault with a deadly weapon following a shooting incident near the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets about 1 a.m. Sunday.

Police said Dennis Ray Stox, 19 of Route 1, Vanceboro was wounded in the right hand, while Kenneth Richard Averill, 28 of Laurinburg was hit in the chest with bullets from a .25 caliber pistol Hooker allegedly fired. Both were treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for their wounds and released.

Investigators said the incident allegedly started as a fight between Hooker and Stox's brother, Donnie Lee Stox, in a downtown night club.

Hooker left the building, officers reported, and when the Stox brothers left the night spot, they saw Hooker in the parking lot of the Stop-Shop at 213 East Fifth St. with a pistol.

As Hooker allegedly fired, one of the projectiles struck Stox in the hand. Another bullet ricocheted off the pavement, struck a button on Averill's shirt, then struck his chest. Averill allegedly pulled the bullet from his chest and gave it to investigators at the scene.

Hooker was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill Dennis Stox and Averill, while he was charged with assault with a deadly weapon for allegedly firing the weapon at Donnie Stox.

Others in the crowd of some 25 people standing in the parking lot at the time were not injured.

East Carolina University police officers, who witnessed the shooting, helped Greenville police apprehend Hooker near the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets, officers reported.

MIAMI (AP) - A 378-foot Coast Guard cutter has caught its first batch of Haitian refugees on the high seas as part of the Reagan administration's new interdiction program, authorities said.

The Coast Guard picked up the 57 would-be immigrants Sunday night after patrolling Haitian waters for two weeks in an effort to turn back illegal aliens. It is expected to deposit them in Port-au-Prince later today.

Petty Officer Sean Smith said he did not know whether the Haitians, who all appeared to be in good condition, would be turned over to authorities there or simply be allowed to leave.

The Reagan administration announced the interdiction policy last month to stem the flow of illegal Haitian immigrants. An estimated 50,000 Haitians have fled the impoverished Caribbean nation for south Florida in recent years.

Bodies Wash Ashore

By RANDALL HACKLEY Associated Press Writer HILLSBORO INLET, Fla.

(AP) - A wooden sailboat carrying 67 Haitian refugees "broke up" less than a half-mile from shore early today, and at least 31 people drowned, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

Petty Officer Daryl Gale said 31 bodies had been recovered and that three patrol boats and three helicopters were searching for the "five unaccounted for" in waters off this northeastern Broward County inlet, officials said.

Thirty-one of the refugees swam safely to shore, he said.

A command post was set up at Pompano Beach, the city neighboring the mostly upper-class town of Hillsboro Beach, to treat survivors for exposure, authorities said.

Gale said the Coast Guard was not sure exactly when and where the vessel broke up.

"It was probably overcrowded and unseaworthy, as most of the Haitian refugee vessels usually are," Gale said.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Dan Waldschmidt said bodies began washing up on a residential beach about a mile north of the inlet at 5:30 a.m.

Debris from the vessel also washed up on shore.

"The boat is swamped offshore. We can see it," said Lt. Robert Jones of the Hillsboro Beach police department.

Jones said the morning waters "aren't terrible, but they're rough enough."

Broward County law enforcement agencies, the Florida Marine Patrol and U.S. Customs all joined the search this morning.

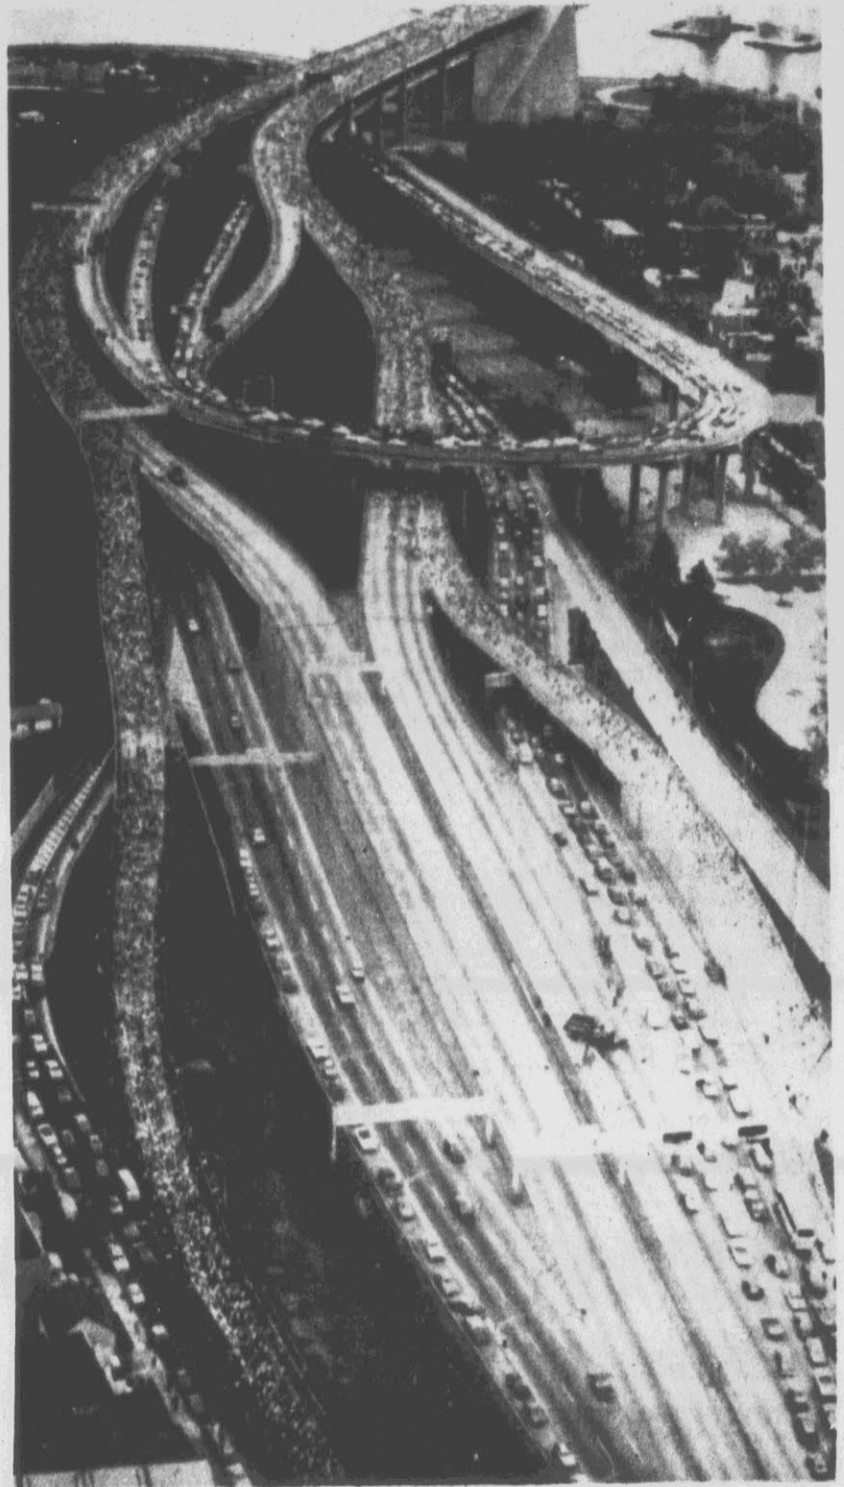

The accident occurred just a few hours after a 378-foot Coast Guard cutter caught its first batch of Haitian refugees on the high seas as part of the Reagan administration's tough new interdiction program.

Area Blessed By Over Inch Of Rain

By MARY SCHULKEN Reflector Staff Writer

Over an inch of cool fall rain pelted Pitt County Sunday, the largest rainfall recorded here in October.

A welcome 1.18 inches of precipitation was measured by Greenville Utilities' water plant in the 36-hour period beginning Saturday night and ending early this morning, bringing the total rainfall for the month to 1.94 inches.

Even with the weekend showers, the area is well below the amount of rainfall considered normal for this time of year based on National Weather Service figures. According to the NWS, the entire state lags 7-10 inches behind in annual rainfall for 1981, and according to GUC's water plant the county is three inches behind October 1980's 4.77 inches of rainfall - a month that was also considered very dry.

Agricultural officials see only benefits from the much-needed moisture.

"It's going to make small grains a lot easier to grow," noted Pitt extension agent Sam Uzzell. "It will not hurt the soybeans and in addition it will be very beneficial to woodlands."

County peanut growers, he added, have stored all their 1981 crop, so the rain should not hamper the peanut harvest. "Peanut growers should check to see if there was any leakage in their storage buildings, and if there was, either remove the damp peanuts or run some air," Uzzell advised. "They should not, however," cautioned the farm agent, "let the peanuts get below eight percent moisture."

Uzzell noted that the weekend rain did not bring much-needed relief to farm ponds used for livestock. "Many of these ponds are getting very low and this inch of precipitation isn't going to do much to replenish them," he said.

Cooler temperatures accompanied the showers, with a high temperature Sunday of 56 degrees Fahrenheit, and lows Saturday and Sunday around 45 degrees F.

On Monday at 8 a.m. it was 58 degrees F. and the level of the Tar River stood at 3.3 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge.

Most American Pilots Hired By Libya 'Quit'

MIAMI (AP) - Two of about 20 high-priced south Florida commercial pilots who reportedly flew military supplies from Libyan airfields to a base in Chad say most of the fliers involved have decided not to return to Libya.

"You come back to the U.S. and you hear all the bad things about Libya. I guess it's just not a good thing to be doing (going to Libya)," Capt. Charles Girtman told The Miami Herald.

"We went for the same reason anyone goes to work - to pay the rent. That's all it was, a job," the pilot said, adding he was paid between $45 and $60 an hour for 26 flights he made between May 24 and early August.

About 20 pilots flew dozens of flights last summer from airfields in Libya to strife-torn Chad with full State Department knowledge, Girtman said.

He said the State Department indicated they didn't like the idea but "they never said it was wrong for us to go."

Other pilots involved in the Libyan flights could not be reached for comment, the Herald said.

Girtman, a furloughed pilot who lives in suburban Coral Gables, told the newspaper he and other Floridians flew Boeing 707s, including two sold to the Libyan government by Cargolux, a Luxembourg-based air cargo carrier with an office in Miami.

Libyan armed forces under the command of Col. Moammar Khadafy, who has been called an "international terrorist" by U.S. officials, invaded Chad earlier this year.

Libya's diplomats were expelled from the United States last May for what the State Department called a Libyan support for "terrorism abroad."

Aboard the planes the pilots flew from Libya to Chad were supplies that included canvas camouflage materials, army boots and fatigues and food, said Girtman and Miles Spund, a New York native who has been a free-lance pilot in Miami the past five years.

Both pilots told the Herald that no American flew planes carrying weapons.

The flights to Libya were arranged by Capt. Lawrence Grue, president of the Davie-based Air Crew International, the newspaper quoted Girtman as saying.

"The State Department knew we were there," said Girtman, who served two tours of duty as a Naval officer in Vietnam.

NEW YORK (AP) — Police believe they have identified at least one, and perhaps as many as five, of the bandits who fled from the scene of a bloody Brink's truck holdup that has been tied to the radical Weather Underground.

Investigators spent the weekend trying to follow the many trails the bandits left after last week's ambush in suburban Nanuet: in Washington, fingerprint experts tried to identify hundreds of samples from cars used during the holdup and from apartments that apparently were hideouts for the gang. Clarkstown Police Chief Robert Schnakenberg said authorities believed they had identified at least one of up to eight people thought to have fled after a Brink's guard and two policemen were killed in the incident. Four people, including three members of the Weather Underground, were arrested at the scene.

The New York Times said in today's editions that investigators had tentatively identified three new suspects in the case. Rockland County District Attorney Kenneth Gribetz said, however, that no further arrest warrants would be issued, and no identities revealed, until a grand jury had a chance to act in the case.

The Daily News said police believe they have identified as many as five of the fugitive suspects. Meanwhile, heavy security was being put in place at a Queens courthouse where an arraignment was to be held for a former member of the Black Panthers arrested in a Friday shootout with police.

Dear Abby

Couple's Name Game Takes a Tricky Turn

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have enjoyed many a chuckle from your column over the years. Yesterday I thought one letter was particularly funny, so I read it to my wife. She saw absolutely no humor in it. The letter was from a woman who said her best friend, Alice, suspected that her husband, Ray, was fooling around with the girls at the office. The friend said she knew Ray was fooling around but she didn't know whether to tell Alice.

Well, my wife's name is Alice and my name is Ray, and my wife thought it was too much of a coincidence.

I tried to tell her that your column is in over a thousand newspapers, and it could be any Alice and Ray.

My wife is very active in the symphony, Junior League and civic projects, and I am well-known in business circles, Chamber of Commerce, etc. I suppose we will both be in for a lot of good-natured ribbing.

I still think it's funny, but you would be doing me a big favor if you'd drop my wife a few lines and let her know that I'm not the Ray you wrote about.

RHODE ISLAND RAY

DEAR RAY: Will do. "Alice" and "Ray" were pseudonyms. Coincidentally, I heard from another Alice-and-Ray team. They live in Dallas. He's 79 and she's 81. They thought it was hilarious. In fact, Ray thanked me!

***

DEAR ABBY: For some time my husband and I have been seeing a family therapist, both separately and together. I have trouble trying to understand what our therapist hopes to accomplish by some of the things he does. For example, at the start of each session he spends about 10 minutes standing in front of the window, stretching and describing what he sees, talking in a singsong voice about the weather and things that have absolutely nothing to do with us or our problems. My husband can't understand this either. Is this usual in therapy?

We are afraid to ask him because we don't want to question his methods. What is family therapy, anyway?
MILWAUKEE SENTINEL READER

DEAR READER: Family therapy is counseling the family members individually, and also as a group. You have the right to ask your therapist any question that comes to your mind. And if you're not satisfied with the answers, there are other therapists.

***

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are about the same size. For years she raided my closets and took my jeans, shirts, sweaters, etc. When I complained, she'd tell me to buy more. This I did time and time again, but she continued to wear my clothes.

Finally I put on one of her dresses and paraded into the kitchen. She said I looked "cute" and went about her business. I tried this a few more times, then a funny thing happened. I started to like it.

She started to help me put outfits together — panty hose, heels, then makeup and a wig, and she'd wear the pants. We've done this only at home, but we're considering going out this way. We enjoy switching roles. (It's done wonders for our sagging sex lives.) Are we crazy? Or just caught up in the times? This isn't a prank letter. It's real. What do you think?

LIKING IT IN HARLEM, GA.

DEAR LIKING: You didn't invent anything. This has been going on for centuries. You are not crazy, but before you go out that way you'd better check with the local laws. It's against the law in some cities to "masquerade" in this manner.

On Sunday, the FBI ordered a nationwide alert for two other radical fugitives described as "extremely dangerous." They were identified as Silas Bissell, 39, a founding member of the Weatherman in 1969, and Katherine Ann Power, 32, wanted in connection with 1970 bank robberies in Boston and Philadelphia. Bissell is charged in connection with attempted bombings at the Air Force ROTC building at the University of Washington in 1970.

Authorities also were looking for Marilyn Buck, a fugitive convict who rented houses in Mt. Vernon, N.Y., South Orange, N.J. and the Bronx to the gang accused in the Brink's holdup.

On Friday, the joint task force raided a Bronx apartment using information seized after the robbery and arrested Jeffrey Jones and Eleanor Stein Raskin, both original members of the Weatherman. The pair, who are wanted in connection with a Hoboken bomb factory, were not linked to the Brink's robbery at their arraignment.

Dixon-Haddock Vows Solemnized Sunday

The Shelmerdine Pentecostal Holiness Church was the scene of the wedding of Tina Charlene Haddock and Jerry Glenn Dixon Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Roy Williams.

Parents of the couple are Mr. Harold Haddock and Mrs. Janie Buck of Clay Root and Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Dixon of Grimesland.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Alan Haddock. She wore a formal gown of white organza lavished with lace. The bodice featured a re-embroidered scalloped neckline. Lace and seed pearls adorned the bodice and sleeves. The floor-length skirt of organza was trimmed with lace and extended into a chapel train. She wore a walking-length veil of white illusion edged in seed pearls and lace held in place by a camelot cap overlaid with matching lace. She carried a cascade of mint green, peach, baby blue and yellow carnations with stephanotis, baby's breath and lace.

Her honor attendant was her sister, Kim Haddock of Clay Root. She wore a formal baby blue gown of silesta knit which featured a fitted bodice with a draped cape, and carried a wicker fan with bridal white roses and matching ribbon.

Donna Robinson, cousin of the bride, Martie Stocks and

MRS. JERRY GLENN DIXON

Hope Jones were bridesmaids. They wore yellow, peach and mint green dresses styled like that of the maid of honor.

April Whitehurst was the flower girl.

Kathy Joyner and Gene Lawrence sang "Endless Love," "I Pledge My Love" and "Wedding Prayer."

The mother of the bride wore an off-white gown of cotton organza with a victorian neckline edged in blue ribbon. The bridegroom's mother wore a light blue gown of silest knit with capped sleeves. Both wore corsages of silk roses. The grandmothers of the couple were remembered with corsages of white carnations.

The wedding director was Mrs. Patricia Cox, aunt of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Mark Dixon, brother of the bridegroom, Dean Wilson and Larry Hardee. The ring bearer was Mark Roach.

An after-rehearsal cake cutting was given by parents of the couples at the church Saturday night. Guests were greeted by Beth Baker. Mrs. Margie Spain, aunt of the bridegroom, served cake. Punch was poured by Mrs. Mary Ann Dixon, aunt of the bridegroom.

The bride is a senior at D.H. Conley High School. The bridegroom is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital and also is an owner of Vanceboro Seafood Market. He graduated from D.H. Conley High School.

SHRINERS ON CRUISE
Greenville Shriners and family members who have returned from the Virgin Islands are Amos Evans, Frank House, and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Whitehurst.

Their cruise on the Mardi Gras was sponsored by Sudan Temple of New Bern. Approximately 1,000 passengers were aboard.

Duplicate Winners

Duplicate winners Wednesday morning in a game played at Planters Bank included Mrs. Fred Adams and Mrs. Tom Lunney, first with .75 percent; Mrs. Clara Shackell, second; Mrs. Walter Harbin and Mrs. C. D. Elks, third; Mrs. Eloise Gabbert and Mrs. Beverly Maxon, fourth.

Mrs. Sol Schechter and Mrs. Max Chused were first place winners in the afternoon game also played at the bank. Their game percentage was .662 percent.

Mrs. J. M. Horton and Dave Proctor, second; Mrs. Stuart Page and Mrs. Eli Bloom, third; Mrs. Robert Exum and Emma B. Warren, fourth; Mrs. Fred Adams and Ms. Estelle Eastwood, fifth.

North-South winners in the game played Saturday afternoon included: Marilyn Bongard and Bill Bowden, first with .627 percent; Elizabeth Roque and Elizabeth Lewis, second; tied for third were Mrs. Barry Powers and Mrs. Wiley Corbett with Mrs. J. M. Horton and Dave Proctor.

East-West: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew deSherbinin, first; Emma B. Warren and Mrs. Mavis Smith, second; Mrs. Effie Williams and Mrs. Betsy Warren, third.

The Saturday game, Oct. 31, will be cancelled due to the Wilson Sectional Tournament.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Now's the time to plan ahead for a happy holiday season, by using your spare moments to make clever, appealing crochet and felt Christmas tree ornaments.

Snowmen, stockings, stars, candy canes and a whole menagerie of whimsical animals will create the most delightful tree you have ever seen. This special Christmas leaflet includes directions for making 14 crocheted ornaments and seven to be made from felt.

Each crocheted ornament requires no more than a fourth of an ounce of knitting worsted weight yarn plus a few yards of contrast color for trim, so many of them could be made from your supply of leftover yarns.

To obtain directions for making the Christmas ornaments, send your request for Leaflet 0-14 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector") P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. C-14 by sending a check or money order for $13.50 to Pat Trexler at the same address. Each kit contains the instruction leaflet plus yarn in 10 colors and felt in six colors and will be sufficient for making three to four dozen ornaments. Price includes shipping charges.

Dear Pat: With all of the emphasis on helping handicapped people, I have yet to find anything among craft items that can be used by a person with one crippled hand. Up until nine months ago, knitting, crochet, needlepoint and crewel were my favorite hobbies.

Now, because of a C.V.A., my left hand and fingers are totally useless. I have tried all of our local craft shops and they have nothing that I can do with the right hand only.

Do you know of any frame or hoop or of any type of handwork for a person handicapped as I am?

I realize that you have many letters from people who are interested in handwork and cannot answer them all, but perhaps you have the address of someone in my situation who has found a solution to this problem. — Norma Lancaster, 1576 Union Street, Bangor, Maine 04401

Dear Norma: I can imagine how shattering it must be to someone who is an avid needlecrafter to lose the use of one hand. I temporarily lost the use of my left hand due to a broken finger and found out then how addicted I was to needlecrafter — I nearly went bananas sitting around with idle hands.

While I do not have the address of anyone with a

Miss Gore Gives Talk

A program entitled "Speak Up Pitt County, What Can We Do For You?" was presented Thursday afternoon when the Sweet Gum Grove Extension Homemakers met at the community building. Addie Gore was speaker.

Two leader reports were given by Mrs. Eric Whichard, clothing, on "Latest in Style and Trends" and Mrs. Margaret Tetterton, housing, energy and environment, reported on "Heaters."

Miss Gore also showed a film on "How to Save Water."

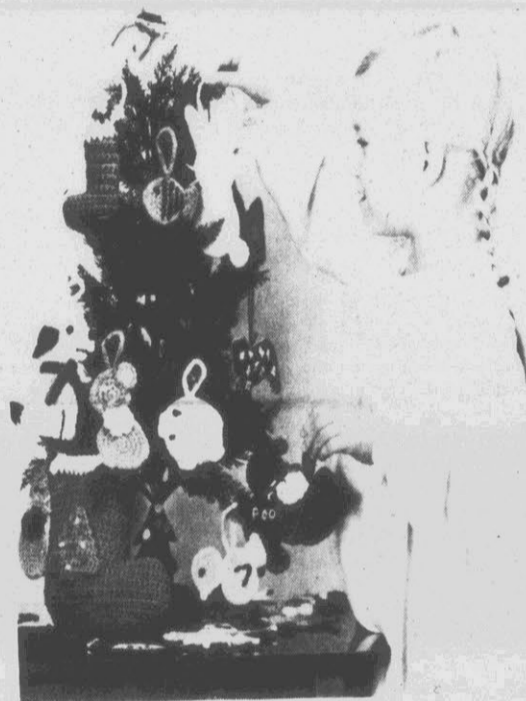

The business session was conducted by Mrs. Howard Briley, president. The devotion was given by Mrs. Whichard.

Meeting hostesses were Mrs. Mae Fleming and Miss Annie Turner.

Lynndale Club To Meet

The meeting of the Lynndale Garden Club will be held Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Karen Flickenger at 9:30 a.m.

Mrs. Lucille Hill and Mrs. Martha Wilkerson will serve as co-hostesses. Mrs. Lynda Harrington of Sunshine Garden Center will demonstrate bulb planting.

CROCHET AND FELT. Christmas tree ornaments.

A Halloween party for the children of Lynndale will be held Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

The yard of the month award for November was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Larery Vacek of 115 Jamestown.

similar problem, I am printing your letter with your full address in hopes that someone who has overcome such a handicap will write to you. Knowing the sharing, giving nature of most of my readers, I feel certain that you will find the answer somewhere.

There are standing frames and hoops available, but because they are rather expensive, many shops do not carry them in stock. Perhaps someone in or near your hometown will read this and will be able to advise you where to find such an item locally.

While knitting and crocheting are very much two-handed endeavors, crewel and needlepoint can be relatively easy with a standing frame. Threading the needle can be the most frustrating aspect of these, however. There are some good needle threaders on the market and I am sending you one in the mail that I hope you will be able to use.

Here's hoping that you will receive some better answers to your problem and that you can once again experience the joys of needlework!

An Important Move

A Rural Education Institute was announced by Dr. Richard W. Warner, Jr., dean of the School of Education at ECU, last week.

Dr. Warner will also serve as the first director of the institute.

He described the institute as a "cooperative research program development and public service organization" which will meet the special needs of rural educators.

The institute might be the only one of its kind in the nation.

"We would like to become experts in preparing teachers to go into rural schools," Dr. Warner said.

Chancellor Thomas Brewer said, "This area is predominantly rural and the problems confronting educators in such setting are in need of more focused attention."

Some 30 school systems and two regional centers are expected to participate in the institute's activities.

We can foresee the Rural Education Institute fulfilling a great need and one which is unique to North Carolina and other rural states.

The institute is beginning with little money and a lot of enthusiasm. We think the enthusiasm can be continued and certainly the money should come if the proposed functions of the institute are as important as we think they are.

National Debt Does Matter

How does $1,000,000,000,000 read? That is one trillion dollars and it is what the national debt reached last week.

Despite heavy budget cuts in Washington this year the end of the rise in the national debt is nowhere near in sight. Tax cuts, also instituted this year, assured that.

The national debt is looked at in various ways. Some believe it doesn't matter because we owe it to ourselves. Some maintain that the country is worth so much more than the debt that it really is not significant. The debt in fact has actually fallen in relation to the Gross National Product since World War II.

The national debt is important, however in that the federal government borrows the money in competition with all other borrowers. That in itself tends to keep interest rates high and that should concern us all.

SPORTS USED TO BE FUN AND RECREATION!

Thatcherism Is Beckoning

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON - When President Reagan's economic policymakers met Oct. 19 to compare secret budget estimates, the may-day alarm was sounded by the Treasury's Dr. Beryl Sprinkel with this mind-boggling prediction: A $164 billion deficit for fiscal year 1984.

Sprinkel, under secretary of the Treasury for monetary affairs, mitigated the shock by adding that Reagan's unspecified future budget cuts would trim the deficit to a mere $129 billion. Three other confidential estimates at the meeting were all well over $100 billion for a year in which the president has been promising a balanced budget.

All this anticipated red ink could poison the historic Reagan tax cut, the heart of his economic program. "Once the word gets out," one administration official told us, "of how big the deficit really is, the tax cut is doomed." Indeed, Lawrence Kudlow, chief economist at the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), on the very next day conceded in congressional testimony that the tax cut might prove too big.

statements by administration officials pledging that not a dime will be removed from those tax cuts are undercut by what they say privately. OMB director David Stockman has confided to congressional Republicans he would delay the cuts, if there are enough spending cut-backs to go along with it.

This seemed confirmed by Oct. 20 testimony to the Senate Budget Committee by Kudlow, Stockman's principal deputy and adviser. He pleaded time and again not to reduce or delay the tax cut. But all such promises were stripped of credibility after he was pressed by Democratic senator Lawton Chiles whether the tax cut was too large. "Well," Kudlow replied, in words chilling to supply-siders, "it might be possible that the tax cut would be too large..."

Unintentionally or not, Kudlow was fueling the notion that the tax cuts are causing Dr. Sprinkel's runaway deficit. Actually, say the supply-siders, it is Dr. Sprinkel's own tight-money policy. By escalating interest rates, it has swollen debt service by tens of billions. By reducing the inflation rate, it has — as a price of success — cut back future estimated revenue by additional tens of billions.

In truth, while revealing his $164 billion deficit estimate, Sprinkel's eyes were dry and his brow unfurrowed. Monetarists view deficits, as all fiscal policy, with Olympian detachment. The $164 billion shows that monetary policy is working. By monetarist standards, controlling inflation requires economic pain.

By the same token, there is muted sentiment in the administration that mammoth deficits call for some modification in monetary policy. The political consensus does not yet seem ready for the classical remedy of gold standard, which historically has reduced interest rates and, therefore, the costs of government. But a slight, unannounced loosening of money might relieve the economy and, by retarding the decline in inflation, reduce estimated budget deficits.

When we asked Sen. Pete Domenici, the conscientious chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, how much of role monetary policy had played in building the budget deficits, he replied: "Substantial." But in the next breath, he opposed any change in monetary policy, preferring to pursue will-o-the-wisp spending cuts and quixotic tax increases that point straight to an assault on the big Reagan tax cut. Thatcherization beckons.

Relaxing His Grip

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH - Some of those who take glee in pondering matters of state politics are latching onto recent comments and actions by Gov. Jim Hunt which, they speculate, point toward a relaxation of his grip on the machinery of government.

Hunt is, it begins to appear, ready to embrace the traditional role of lame duck governor which is visited upon all chief political leaders sooner or later.

In the case of Jim Hunt, it is both sooner and later. It is sooner in this term of office as governor than would normally happen when the officeholder serves one four-year term. It is later than has occurred before because Hunt kept tight grip for a full four-year first term and never suffered the mid-term letdown because he made it plain he would indeed seek reelection.

This is the first time a North Carolina governor in modern days has been able to go for a second four years in office.

On The Way
But just as the prospect of Hunt's becoming governor for another four years kept governmental powers under his control throughout his first term, the fact that he cannot now seek reelection means attention is turning increasingly toward who his successor might be. That condition is exacerbated by the fact that the governor has already used up essentially all of his so-called green stamps: the various appointments to important state jobs, boards and commissions.

And so his power diminishes almost daily. The biggest remaining hammer he holds is his control over the well-lubricated political machine which put him into office. Statewide "keys" can still rally to a cause, raise money and mount an effective vote-delivery machine at Hunt's behest. But can that machine be turned on for another candidate? Can Hunt pick his successor, deliver the organization, and thereby quietly maintain power?

Even more critical is the question of whether the machine will respond to Hunt in his next bid for higher elective office. The U.S. Senate provides few paybacks for the officeholder — hardly any jobs, perquisites, appointments. Especially so for a freshman Democrat in a Republican capital. Organizations rarely respond to ideology, but rather to the real-world promise of reward.

Then the question is whether Hunt should seek nomination as a vice presidential running mate on the Democratic Party ticket in 1984, recognizing that defeat is almost assured, but gaining important party loyalties and national exposure therefrom. And another nagging question is whether even as effective and popular a governor as Hunt has proven to be could win in a nose-to-nose fight with Republican Senator Jesse

Helms.

Big Fight

Helms has his National Congressional Club and an apparently unlimited supply of campaign funds. He is, despite media deprecation, considerably more popular nationally and in North Carolina than many would like to believe. And, Helms has a growing reputation as one of the key leaders in the national march to the right.

Can, then, Gov. Hunt beat Helms? Or, should he await 1986 when chances of unseating freshman Republican Senator John East would be more likely. Some of Hunt's advisors say one way; some another.

Perhaps closest to the situation at present is the observation that one aide provided: even though a Hunt-Helms battle leaves the

How To Pay For MX

I don't want to second guess President Reagan's decision to bypass the Air Force's version of an MX system in favor of his modified plan, which is to put MX missiles in already-built Titan holes.

What the Pentagon wanted was an underground train system by which we could move our missiles around a 20-square mile area, so that the Soviets couldn't pinpoint where they were.

The Air Force described it as a giant "shell" game.

Before President Reagan's announcement that he was abandoning the idea for a cheaper, less sophisticated system, someone in the Pentagon had leaked the story that the MX complex would be built in the state of Nevada.

When it turned out this information was wrong, everyone from the Joint Chiefs of Staff to the Hawks in the Senate was infuriated with the White House decision.

I was, too. I always felt Nevada was the best place to put the MX system and I even had a good idea of how it could pay for itself.

As anyone who has been to Las Vegas knows, the main attraction of the state is gambling. High rollers from every part of the country, as well as those from Hong Kong on top of it, they would construct a huge gambling casino, four times the size of Caesar's Palace. There would be hotel rooms, bars and an enormous dinner theater featuring the greatest nightclub acts in America.

No expense would be spared to make it the most magnificent pleasure dome in the country.

The entire ground floor of the casino would be devoted to a new gambling game called "MX."

Large tables would be constructed in the same shape as the MX missile system, and on the green felt would be numbered every underground hole where a missile could go.

Players would stand around the table, placing their chips on where they thought a live MX missile would wind up. (The minimum bet would be $100 to keep the riffraff out.)

Once all the bets were made, an Air Force colonel would push a button and start the missiles moving around on their tracks.

In 30 seconds, a board over the table would light up, indicating where the live missiles were and those gamblers who put their chips on the winning holes would be paid five chips for every one they bet.

As an added attraction, the Air Force could shoot off one of the missiles as a test. If you bet on that missile, you would get back a jackpot of 100-to-1.

The beauty of the new gambling game is that it would attract not only high rollers from the Free World, but the Soviets would send over KGB gamblers to bet huge sums of hard currency and Abu Dhabi, fly in to throw their money away on slot machines, roulette, dice tables and any card game the plush casinos offer.

People will bet on anything in Nevada, as long as it moves, lights up or has green felt on it.

This was my idea.

The Air Force would be permitted to build its underground train system in the desert of Nevada as planned. There would be 100 live missiles, which could be moved around to a thousand stations, making it impossible for the Russians to know their locations.

After everything was in place, the whole thing would be covered with sand. Then,

Other Editors Say Slipping Away

(Washington Daily News)

Over a period of many years the Southern Albemarle Association has played a brilliant role in the matter of getting bridges and highway improvements in far Eastern North Carolina.

The organization deserves great credit for its tenacity and for its determination over these many years.

The idea in years gone by has been to apply cooperative strength in the slogan of "one for all and all for one" into physical improvements. The efforts have been successful.

But what is happening today? Has the Southern Albemarle Association come to an impasse?

Today its number one goal is a bridge across the Pamlico River. The desire is to have such a bridge built somewhere between Bath and a point where the ferry now plies across the Pamlico River. Such a bridge would be a great and wonderful asset and facility for our county and area. In no manner do we minimize its value.

Yet, in the back of our minds comes that feeling that somehow the state is putting other projects for our own area ahead of such a bridge. We do not know how much such a bridge across the Pamlico here would cost, but we would guess somewhere between $50 to $75 million.

Looking at the map as it is right now, the values inherent in four-laning highways 264 and 64 to Manteo or in four-laning Highway 17 from New Bern to the Virginia line are so very evident and impressive.

Do we who live in Beaufort County willingly give up on the bridge across the Pamlico as our number one project, and thereby causing the SAA also to give up on it as the number one project?

The way things look now, we can see and understand so very well why so many of the Southern Albemarle Association are discouraged. They have a right to be. After all, for some 15 to 20 years the fight has been continued; and year by year now, instead of such a realization coming closer, it appears to be ever more removed from our grasp.

Labels Can Tell A Buyer Much

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

The names on the labels of the cans, boxes and bottles you buy at the supermarket can tell you a lot about the food you're getting — if you know what they mean.

There's a big difference, for example, between "beef a la mode" and "beef a la king." By law, at least 50 percent of the "beef a la mode" has to be beef. The "a la king" product can contain as little as 20 percent beef.

The Food Safety and Inspection Service of the Department of Agriculture has authority over all products containing more than 3 percent fresh meat or 2 percent cooked poultry meat.

It sets what are known as "standards of composition" for most processed food items.

These standards define the minimum amount of meat or poultry that must be included if a manufacturer wants to call a product by a particular name; they do not prevent the manufacturer from including more than the required amount.

(A few items are covered by "standards of identity" which set very specific content requirements. "Chopped ham," for example, must be prepared from fresh, cured or smoked ham, plus certain kinds of curing agents and seasonings. It may also contain dehydrated onions and garlic, corn syrups and a maximum of 3 percent water.)

The USDA has published an explanation of the standards for more than 250 products. It is available, at no charge, from the Food Safety and Inspection Service, Room 2957-S, Washington, D.C., 20250, or from regional offices of the Department of Agriculture.

Ask for the booklet called, "Meat and Poultry Products: A Consumer Guide to Content and Labeling Requirements."

The standards are designed to reflect product contents, truthfully and simply, and you can learn a lot by looking at the order in which ingredients appear in a name. A product identified as "poultry with gravy" has to include more than twice as much poultry as something which is called "gravy with poultry."

You may be surprised, however, to find out how much — or how little — of a product is what you expected. A poultry burrito, for example, must contain a minimum of only 10 percent poultry. A poultry burger, however, must be 100 percent poultry.

You also have to read carefully and pay attention to all the words — even the little ones which are easy to overlook. Consider the difference between "lasagna with meat and sauce," and "lasagna with meat sauce." The former has at least 12 percent meat; the latter, only 6 percent.

Unless otherwise stated, the percentage of meat listed in the standards refers to the fresh, uncooked weight. There may be shrinkage due to loss of fat and water during cooking.

Some of the definitions used in setting standards — words like "binders" and "byproducts" — may be confusing. Here is an explanation of the key terms:

— Binders or extenders: Items used to help hold a product together and retain moisture. Extenders also may be used to supplement the required minimum amount of meat or poultry. Meatballs, for example, may contain up to 12 percent extenders.

— Meat: Products which come from the muscles of cattle, sheep, swine and goats. "Skeletal" meat refers to muscular cuts which were attached to an animal's bone structure. The USDA requires that all meats be identified according to the type of animal they come from. If muscle meat from the tongue or heart is used, it must be named in the list of ingredients.

— Meat byproducts: Edible and wholesome parts of animals other than the muscle meat. Byproducts like kidneys, tripe, etc. are sometimes known as "variety meats." When these items are included in a meat product, the specific byproducts which are used must be named.

— Vegetable or plant protein: Soybean derivatives used as binders or extenders in meat and poultry items, or as main ingredients in meat substitutes. Whenever soy protein is added to a product, it must be identified in the ingredient statement on the label.

Strength For Today

MORE THAN INSURANCE

Some people regard their religion in the same way as they would a life insurance policy. It is something to be kept under lock and key. It has small immediate value, but it will have great value when they die.

With one hand these people lay hold on religion and with the other they do their daily work. They do not recognize an immediate relationship between what they profess on Sunday and what they do on Monday. These people would be aggrieved and insulted if you called their attention to the fact that they did not, in business and social life, put any of their religious beliefs into practice. They would remind you tartly that spiritual laws work in spiritual situations, but that when one is dealing with dollars and cents he has to be realistic and do what the situation demands.

The life insurance concept of religion is no religion at all. For religion to be meaningful it must be both a matter of belief and action. The two can never be separated. — Elisha Douglas

Tax Increases Must Be Weighed In Future Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tax increases are unlikely next year but will have to be considered in 1983 and 1984 to rein in the runaway federal deficit, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. says.

And unless there is a "fierce upturn" in the economy, Baker says, Congress will have to find even more than the $115 billion in budget savings that President Reagan wants over the next three years.

Reagan, struggling to balance the budget by 1984, has called for $3 billion in tax increases and $13 billion in additional spending cuts in fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1.

He has yet to send specific proposals to Congress, and administration officials have said they are considering higher excise taxes on gasoline, alcohol and cigarettes.

But Baker said Sunday that he would not expect "excise taxes or anything else in '82."

Questioned on CBS' "Face the Nation," Baker said House and Senate Republican leaders reached a general consensus last week "that we had to address the question of increased tax revenues, also a consensus that it should not be done in 1982."

Citing President Reagan's recent statement that the nation is now in a recession, Baker said, "That would be the world's worst time to add to the tax burden."

But the Tennessee Republican added: "I do think we have to realistically look at the prospects in '83 and '84."

Baker said he planned to outline the Republicans' general plan for whittling the deficit at a White House meeting with Reagan later this week.

Baker said he hasn't given up hope of a balanced budget but conceded: "It may take draconian measures... if we're ever going to convince the Fed that those (interest) rates got to come down. But if you take a look at what it would take to balance the budget in '83 or '84, it will make what we've done so far fade into insignificance by comparison."

As interest rates drive up the cost of government borrowing and the slumping economy drains revenues, most economic forecasters, including the Senate Budget Committee, are projecting budget deficits far larger than the administration anticipated for the next three years.

To counter that, Baker said, "we're going to have to save, in my judgment, unless we get a fierce upturn," more than the $115 billion Reagan has proposed.

"I support a general plan to reduce some of that in appropriated funds and some of it in other funds," Baker said, "and I'm willing to consider revenue enhancement," the administration's term for selected tax increases, in 1983 and 1984.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski says one thing the administration probably won't support because of the revenue crunch is extension of the popular tax-exempt All-Savers Certificates.

"In a sudden reversal of tax philosophy," the Illinois Democrat said, "the administration now is seeking to increase revenues — which hardly suggests their support for a multibillion-dollar extension" of All-Savers.

Rostenkowski's remarks were in a speech prepared for delivery in Chicago today to the Federal Savings and Loan Council of Illinois.

Rostenkowski said Congress approved the certificates "despite deep doubts about its curative powers (to) stem the flood of savings into high-interest money market funds."

"Much of our skepticism remains," Rostenkowski said. "We still have no proof that All-Savers is having much effect on aggregate savings. We may well have only encouraged the shift of deposits from one account to another — from one financial institution to another."

The certificates are aimed at helping the ailing savings and loan industry and will allow savers over the next 15 months to earn up to $1,000 in tax-free interest for individuals and $2,000 for couples filing joint returns.

Since the odds of guessing the right number would be 10-to-1, and the Air Force would only be paying off at 5-to-1, the MX system would pay for itself in three years. From then on, everything they made on the MX, which many people believe is the greatest crap game of them all, would be gravy.

The 1981 corn harvest is almost completed for Pitt County. The corn has either been sold or stored in bins for future sales. The corn harvest was a large one, but planning must now begin for a successful 1982 corn crop.

It's time to designate your rotations for the 1982 crops. Corn can be effectively used in rotation with tobacco, peanuts and soybeans to reduce certain weeds and diseases. Rotation can be a valuable tool in prevention of buildup of weed problems, diseases and the chemicals that control them.

Weeds need to be considered at this time also. Hopefully you have made a map of weeds in your fields. This will allow you to plan your weed program for the upcoming year. It's very important to know the weeds you are trying to control so that you can choose the herbicide or herbicides that you will need to control them.

This is also a good time to look back and try to determine why you had a weed problem. If you used herbicides dependent on rainfall for incorporation, chances are they did not work as well this year as they have in the past. We had a lot of dry weather around corn planting time so rainfall-dependent herbicides may not have worked as well as they are capable of working.

If your soil incorporated herbicides did not work properly, you need to look back and determine what went wrong. Did you incorporate the herbicide soon enough? Did you use the right piece of equipment to incorporate? Did you make the right number of passes over the land? These are just a few of the questions you need to ask yourself when you try to determine why your soil incorporated herbicide did not work.

It's time once again to take soil and nematode samples. These samples will give you a good idea of what is going on in your soil.

If the sample calls for lime you will have to get the lime applied in time for it to react with the soil. The soil sample will also indicate what plant nutrients will be needed for the next two crops. It's very important to apply the needed nutrients, and also important to keep from adding too many nutrients which will raise your fertilizer bill.

You should also begin to choose the varieties that you will be planting next year. The official variety tests are a very good source of information about yields, disease resistance and stalk strength. Your neighbors can also provide you with important information on corn varieties that they had last year.

We can't control the weather, but we can do a lot to insure that we have a good corn crop. If we do our part then we have done what we can do to insure that we have a successful corn year in 1982.

Collisions Investigated

An estimated $4,600 property damage resulted from two collisions investigated by Greenville Police Saturday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a collision involving cars driven by Jimmy Dwayne Hines of Winterville and Steven Edward Stroud of Route 11, Goldsboro at the intersection of Memorial Drive and N.C. 33.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,500 to the Hines car and $1,600 to the Stroud auto.

Police said cars driven by Emma Edwards Carmon of River Bluff Apts., and Belinda Gail Tripp of 101C Eastbrook Apts. and a parked car owned by Kevin Anthony Medetros of Havelock, were involved in an 11:20 p.m. mishap on River Bluff Road 220 feet north of the Tenth Street intersection.

Damage was set at $800 to the Carmon car and $600 to the Medetros vehicle by officers who said Ms. Carmon was injured in the collision. No damage resulted to the Tripp vehicle, according to Police.

Four Wrecks Cause Damage

An estimated $16,700 damage resulted from four traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police Sunday.

Heaviest damage resulted from a 2:35 a.m. mishap on Greenville Boulevard, 28 feet east of the St. Andrews Drive intersection.

Police reported a car driven by Christopher McNeil Fountain of Greenville Apts. collided with a fire hydrant, causing an estimated $9,000 damage to the Fountain car and $600 damage to the hydrant.

Fountain was charged with driving under the influence in connection with the mishap.

Officers said an estimated $2,500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in a 6 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, involving a car driven by Ruby Lee Reddick of 502B West Roundtree Dr. and a parked vehicle owned by James Mack Walston of 406 Elizabeth St.

Officers, who made no charges, said two passengers in the Reddick auto were injured.

Both drivers involved in a 3:25 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Stantonsburg Road and Moye Boulevard were charged with failing to stop for a red light, investigators reported.

The drivers were identified as Gregory Kent Moore of 3313 Evans St. and Janise Armstrong Brewington of 132 Fletcher Pl.

Damage was estimated at $800 to the Moore car and $700 to the Brewington vehicle.

Cars driven by Ricky Earl Clemons of 604B West 14th St. and Danny Lee Nelson of Simpson, collided about 3 a.m. on Greene Street, south

Tetterton Is Candidate

BETHEL — C. F. (Frederick) Tetterton announced his candidacy for one of the five seats on the Bethel Town Council in the Nov. 3 municipal elections.

A Bethel native, Tetterton attended Bethel High School and is a part-time student at Pitt Community College.

Tetterton, who is employed at Burroughs Wellcome Co. as a detail scheduler, is also a part-time employee of the ambulance department at Pitt Memorial Hospital. He has been a member of the Bethel Fire and Rescue Squad for the past 14 years.

The candidate is married to the former Janet Batchelor of Scotland Neck and they have two daughters, Jan and Tami.

"I believe that what is needed in making decisions for town government is being straight forward, honest and having a good, common sense approach," he said.

outcome less than certain, it is clear that Hunt is the only Democrat with at least an even chance. The party's appeal to him to take up the banner against Helms may win over the hardnosed reality that defeat is a real possibility.

Meanwhile, in recent days, the governor has said several things that openly signal that he feels his programs are in place, his job now is to see them run smoothly, and new initiatives and bloody fights must be taken up by others....for the next three years.

Newspapers' Future Is Studied By Publishers

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — A Louisiana publisher speaking to a convention of Southern newspaper editors, told an audience Sunday there's no reason for newspaper executives to worry about cable television.

"The newspaper business has problems, but cable isn't one of them," said Douglas Manship, publisher of the Baton Rouge (La.) State Times and Morning Advocate.

Manship, who is attending this week's convention of the Southern Newspapers Association at the Greenbrier Resort, said, "The cost of newsprint and the cost of operating a newspaper are bigger threats. Cable news is no more a threat to the newspaper business than radio and TV."

Rhea Eskew, president of Multimedia Newspapers and the publisher of the Greenville (S.C.) News and Piedmont, says newspaper publishers should look at cable television a money-making opportunity.

"We're heavily involved in cable," said Eskew, who also is president of Multimedia Cable Co., with operations in parts of Oklahoma, Kansas and Illinois. "We recently leased a channel in Asheville, N.C., where we hold two newspapers. Cable is a comfortable adjunct to newspapers."

"If you spent all that time and money gathering news for a newspaper, why not find a secondary use for it?" Eskew said.

He said many newspaper executives traditionally have been conservative and slow to make technological changes in their businesses.

"There is a dichotomy of views about what newspaper publishers see in cable. I feel some are concerned needlessly. I feel strong about newspaper's future," he said.

Primary reasons cable news channels won't run newspapers out of business is that newspapers will remain cheaper and more readily available, Manship said.

"A newspaper is the simplest system of information for its ultimate consumer that's ever been devised," he said. "A video screen has a limited capacity for characters and words, and a stovepipe ability to scan.

"It's a business tool, not a consumer tool. A newspaper is easier to read and more convenient. You just pick it up, lick your fingers and turn the pages," he said.

At the same time, Manship acknowledges that he has leased a cable station.

"I think a lot of publishers feel they're hedging their bets" by buying or leasing cable channels," he said. "But I don't think you need to."

David Whichard, publisher of the Daily Reflector in Greenville, N.C., believes that "People will continue to rely on newspaper for their primary source of news."

"If a community newspaper is doing its job as it should, it can't be an endangered species," he said.

See Slums As Common Factor

WASHINGTON (AP) — Slums will be a vital part of urban life until the public is willing to subsidize adequate housing for the poor, according to a book being published today by the Brookings Institute.

"Few people realize that a certain amount of neighborhood deterioration is an essential part of urban development in almost every metropolitan area," author Anthony Downs says.

The urban economist maintains in his book, "Neighborhoods and Urban Development," that if it were not for slums poor people would not have a place to live.

The poor cannot afford to buy or rent better housing, especially at today's high interest rates, and create a demand for housing deteriorated enough to fall to a price they can afford, Downs says.

If you already know Janice Buck, you know how lucky we are that she's running for City Council. If you don't know her, read this:

All of Janice Buck's life has been an individual testimony to her outstanding leadership qualities. Since the tragic death of her husband in 1966 she has successfully built the wholesale supply business he founded. Determination, courage, perseverance and cool-headed decision-making have all helped Janice to be successful in a business that is overwhelmingly dominated by men. And through it all, Janice has remained a lady.

Janice Braxton Buck is also civic-minded. Many people know her for the outstanding work she did as director of Greenville's Bicentennial Celebration. Others know her for her more recent work on the Redevelopment Commission. And many know she received Greenville's Citizen of the Year Award for her outstanding community service in 1974.

Janice Buck wants to bring her aptitude for managing business to bear on the workings of City Government. She wants to fulfil her civic responsibility. And we feel the people of Greenville should give Janice Buck an opportunity to do just that.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market posted another broad loss today amid concern over inflation, high interest rates and the slumping economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 13.70 last week, fell 7.89 to 830.10 by noon.

Losers held a 3-1 lead over gainers in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

General Motors led the active list, down 1 3/4 at 37 3/4. Last week the company reported a $468 million loss for the third quarter.

Exxon, which came in with lower third-quarter earnings, dropped 3/8 to 29 1/4 in active trading.

The NYSE's composite index lost 45 to 68.38. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 1.71 at 305.64.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 16.05 million shares at noon, against 18.91 million at the same point Friday.

Stabbing Brings Charge

A Rt. 5, Greenville woman has been charged with first degree murder in the Friday night stabbing death of a 39-year-old man.

Sheriff Tyson said that deputies charged Lizzie Harris, 56, of Rt. 5, Box 171, with the murder of William Henry Ward, also of Rt. 5, Box 171.

He said Ward suffered a stab wound in the right thigh and apparently bled to death. The incident took place around 9:20 p.m. at the Rt. 5, Greenville residence of Lizzie Harris.

Sheriff Tyson said a butcher knife was allegedly used in the stabbing.

Lizzie Harris was placed in Pitt County Jail without privilege of bond, he said, with a hearing scheduled for today.

TARBORO — The Edgecombe-Martin Electric Membership Corp., local rural electric cooperative headquartered here, will conduct a consumer survey beginning today and continuing through Nov. 6.

Jet Taylor, the EMC's energy management advisor, said the survey provides needed information that will enable the cooperative to predict and plan for the growth in demand for electrical power.

He said the survey information will be combined with data obtained from all 28 electric cooperatives in the state to form a large data base from which projections will be made.

Edgecombe-Martin, Taylor noted, will be mailing 730 consumer surveys, reaching less than ten percent of the cooperative's membership. He asked that the surveys be completed and returned to the headquarters office here.

Steinbrenner Attacked By 2 After Loss

Steinbrenner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees suffered a possible broken left hand and other injuries in what he said was an altercation with two young men whom he said cursed him and attacked him with a beer bottle.

Steinbrenner, wearing a plaster cast on his left hand, also had cuts on his right hand, a swollen upper lip, and a severe lump on his head. He said he received the injuries in a fight in an elevator Sunday night, several hours after his team had dropped the fifth game of the World Series to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Steinbrenner, who called a press conference at 11:30 p.m. PST, said he entered the elevator on the 11th floor of the Hyatt Wilshire at about 8:10 p.m. on his way to meet his wife and others for dinner. Steinbrenner, who was to be x-rayed when the Yankees returned to New York today, said he was alone at the time of the incident.

"I don't know exactly what floor it was," he said, "but one guy got on the elevator and the other guy stood in the door holding it open as if he was waiting for someone. The first guy, who had a beer bottle in his hand, said 'Steinbrenner, right?' I said, 'Yes.'"

Steinbrenner said the men, who were not apprehended, made derogatory remarks about New York fans and insinuated that the Yankees, who dropped three straight games after beating the Dodgers in the first two games of the best-of-seven series, were choking under pressure.

"I guess that did it. I hit him and he hit me on the side of my head with the bottle," said Steinbrenner. "I know he's missing three teeth and he's probably still looking for them. I hit him with the right hand and he went down."

"I guess the other guy then hit me, which probably accounts me for my lip," Steinbrenner said. "But I hit him with a right and a left and pushed them both out the door."

"When I left them one was laying down and one was sitting down. I then went to the bathroom to wash the blood off me and told security officials, but I guess they can't find the guys."

According to Steinbrenner, both men, in their early 20s, seemed to have been drinking quite a bit.

The Yankees owner then went to dinner, but started feeling pain in his left hand. He said he called Yankee team physician Dr. John Bonamo. The doctor taped his right hand, placed the cast on his left hand and indicated it was possibly broken, said Steinbrenner.

"It's not like an old man like me to do this," Steinbrenner said. "It's OK for me to criticize my players because I pay the checks."

Dodgers Win, On Threshold Of Title

(Related story page 11)

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The good book of baseball strategy says starting pitchers need four days off between assignments for maximum efficiency. Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, a traditionalist, is not one to ignore age-old advice like that.

That as much as anything is why the Dodgers stand today on the threshold of the world championship. They will send Burt Hooton out to nail it down in Game 6 of the World Series Tuesday night in New York with the suddenly-floundering Yankees hoping to stay alive with Tommy John.

Hooton will have full five days of rest, just as Jerry Reuss did when he fired a brilliant five-hitter to beat Ron Guidry and the Yankees 2-1 Sunday, giving Los Angeles its third straight victory and a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven series.

Consecutive home runs by Pedro Guerrero and Steve Yeager in the seventh inning delivered the victory to Los Angeles. But it was a brilliant pitching job by Reuss following a courageous managerial decision by Lasorda which set the stage for it.

When the Dodgers went into the postseason playoffs, Lasorda like so many other managers do, decided on a three-man pitching rotation, permitting Reuss, Hooton and Fernando Valenzuela only three days off between starts. They responded well at first, but eventually that system leads to arm weariness and wear and tear.

So, in the middle of nothing more vital than the World Series, Lasorda decided to give his pitchers a bonus. Each would have an extra day of rest, courtesy of Bob Welch, who started Game 4.

"I've got an ego like everyone else," he said. "But I can see the manager's viewpoint. With Welch pitching, everybody gets that extra day."

Welch never retired a batter but the Dodger bullpen delivered an 8-7 victory in an endurance test Saturday. And you only had to see Reuss pitch in the final innings Sunday to know Lasorda had made the right decision about his pitchers.

"No question, I felt stronger," the left-hander said. "When I got to the ninth and reached back for something extra, I had it."

Reuss had been knocked out early in Game 1 of the Series, working on the short rest rotation. He blamed himself because he had relied on the scouting report instead of his own abilities.

The Dodger scouts viewed the Yankees as a team of fastball hitters and advised a diet of curves and changeups.

"Today, I pitched my kind of game," Reuss said. "I decided, if I'm going to win, I'm going to win with what made me successful. I'm predominantly a fastball pitcher."

He said he was more embarrassed than angry about his first game performance. He was determined not to repeat that embarrassment.

"I figured that I'm in my own park and that mound out there is my valley," he said. "No one treads on my valley."

The Yankees tried. Oh, how they tried. New York left six runners on base from the second through the fourth innings. Reuss survived a record-tying three errors by Dodger second baseman Dave Lopes, two of them on one play. The Yankees had runners at second and third with none out and the bases loaded with one out in the third and came away with nothing.

"What can you say?" wondered Yankee Manager Bob Lemon. "He got us out when we had opportunities to score."

The Yankees nicked Reuss for a run in the second when Reggie Jackson opened with a double and Lopes made his first error on a grounder by Bob Watson. Lou Piniella followed with an RBI-single to left and New York seemed poised to do some real damage. But Reuss shut the door, getting Rick Cerone to bang into a double play and Aurelio Rodriguez to roll out.

In the third, Willie Randolph walked with one out and Larry Milbourne singled. But Reuss wasn't budging. He got Dave Winfield on a force play grounder and struck out the dangerous Jackson, ending the inning.

The next crisis was in the fourth inning. Watson, leading off, walked. Piniella grounded to Lopes, who first bobbled the ball and then threw it away for a double error. Now New York had runners at second and third with none out. Big trouble.

But Reuss would not be rattled. He got Cerone on a grounder ball, then walked Rodriguez intentionally, loading the bases. Guidry bunted and Reuss made the play.

Then Randolph grounded out and the inning was over.

It was to be New York's last gasp. Reuss permitted only two more baserunners the rest of the way. But the way Guidry was merely mowing down the Dodgers, retiring 10 in a row and 15 of 16 over one stretch.

Now, with one out in the seventh, it was getting toward Goose Gossage time and the last person the Dodgers wanted to see was the ace of the Yankee bullpen.

"If he had looked shaky at all, he wouldn't have pitched the seventh," Lemon said. "He was coming out after seven, no matter what."

The Dodgers sensed the same thing. On the bench, Lasorda urged Guerrero to take it easy on his swing.

"You saw Guerrero the first time up," he said. "He looked like he was swinging too hard."

So swinging softly, Guerrero smashed a home run to left center field. "A fairly decent slider," decided Guidry. "A slider," agreed Guerrero, "a good pitch, over the plate."

The next batter was Yeager and on the bench, Lasorda was still supplying managerial advice. "Yeager on his first swing put his weight on his back side," Lasorda said. "We yelled out to him to try and take it easy."

"I didn't hear Tommy," the catcher confessed. "I was too excited."

He then hit a 1-2 pitch for another home run and the lead. "A fastball," said Guidry. "Maybe I put that in a little bit of a sweet spot."

It couldn't have been sweeter for the Dodgers. Lemon got Gossage in the game in the eighth — "I didn't want to disappoint everybody," he said — and the flame thrower hit Ron Cey in the helmet with a 94 mph fastball.

Cey never lost consciousness and suffered a slight concussion. He was taken to Centinela Hospital for X rays and was scheduled to fly to New York today to join his teammates.

The Dodgers flew East immediately after the game, leaving the park from buses which loaded right in front of their dugout.

Steelers, Oilers Battle Tonight

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Steelers and Houston Oilers clash tonight for a share of first place in pro football's tightest division.

Last week, the Steelers and Oilers both fell to 4-3 with resounding defeats. That tied them for second-place in the American Conference Central Division, a game behind the high-riding Cincinnati Bengals.

But the Bengals were upset 17-7 Sunday by the New Orleans Saints of Coach Bum Phillips, former Oiler field boss.

So tonight's Houston-Pittsburgh winner moves back into a tie with Cincinnati. The loser drops into a tie with the defending division champion Cleveland Browns at 4-4.

"We need to get on a streak and ride that rascal for seven or eight weeks," says Steeler quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

"Last week we went downstairs," says Oiler wide receiver Ken Burrough. "Hopefully this week we'll go back upstairs."

Last week, the Steelers were beaten 34-7 in Cincinnati. The Bengals piled up 494 total yards, and Cincinnati's defense yielded just 210 yards to a Steeler team that had been leading the NFL in offense.

Linebacker Jack Lambert said the Steelers "stunk." Joe Greene called it a "humbling, humiliating defeat."

"They just knocked our tails all over the place," said Bradshaw.

The Oilers were beaten 38-10 last week by New England. The Patriots blunted Earl Campbell's running early in the game, took the lead and forced the Oilers to throw. Then New England intercepted four of Ken Stabler's passes.

"It's going to take a lot of character to come back from a loss like that," said Oiler Coach Ed Biles.

Meanwhile, both Pittsburgh and Houston apparently are trying to find happy mediums on offense.

Teams have been dropping their linebackers deep in passing situations against Pittsburgh.

After the Cincinnati game, Bradshaw suggested he had lost some of his aggressiveness by following's Coach Chuck Noll guidelines to throw short to his running backs against such defense.

Noll and Bradshaw hashed the matter out this week. Apparently, they agreed they want an effective mix of downfield passes and tosses to the backs.

"It's all worked out," said Bradshaw, who also shaved off his latest beard last week, leaving a moustache.

The Oilers are looking for the right blend of Earl Campbell's running and Ken Stabler's passing. There is a notion that they waited too long to go to the pass against New England.

Hipple Puts Roar Back In Lions

By The Associated Press
 Eric Hipple, just a few weeks removed from the third-string quarterback job, is putting the roar back into the Detroit Lions.

Hipple, given the starting signal-caller's role when Gary Danielson was injured and backup Jeff Komlo was ineffective, has helped put 79 Detroit points on the scoreboard in the two National Football League games he has started in six days.

In the Monday night victory over Chicago and Sunday's thrilling, 31-27 triumph over the Green Bay Packers, Hipple has passed for 607 yards and five touchdowns and run for four more scores.

"I had more confidence in my ability to read the defensive coverage today," Hipple said of his second start. "I was thinking all game that we had to win today to stay in the race. Winning this tight game will help our momentum. After losing the close games early in the season, this shows we can win them, too."

The Lions, who improved their record to 4-4 with the victory, didn't take the lead for good until there was 1:54 remaining in the game.

Ellis and quarterback David Whitehurst, who came off the bench when Green Bay starter Lynn Dickey hurt his back in the second quarter, teamed for a 46-yard touchdown pass in the third quarter. Before he was injured, Dickey connected with James Lofton for a 75-yard TD pass in the first period and place-kicker Jan Stenerud booted field goals of 27 and 39 yards for the Packers, 2-6.

Bears 20, Chargers 17
 John Roveto kicked a 26 yard-field goal with 5:30 left in overtime to give Chicago a surprising victory over pass-happy San Diego.

The Bears, beaten by an average of 11 points in losing six of eight games this season, retained possession for 48 minutes to 21 for the Chargers by keeping the ball on the ground.

An interception by Gary Fencik set up Roveto's winning field goal. The Chargers had tied the game on a 39-yard touchdown pass from Dan Fouts to Wes Chandler with 1:40 left in regulation time.

Saints 17, Bengals 7
 George Rogers, the top pick in the 1981 draft, broke a scoreless tie with a 19-yard touchdown run to lead New Orleans, 1-15 last year, to its upset victory over Cincinnati, the first-place team in the American Conference Central Division.

Rogers carried 31 times for 113 yards, his third straight 100-yard rushing game and fifth of the season.

Benny Ricardo kicked a 38-yard field goal in the fourth quarter and Archie Manning hit reserve running back Wayne Wilson on a 19-yard scoring toss with 6:38 left for the Saints' other TD.

Giants 27, Falcons 24
 New York won its third in a row after a 2-3 start when Joe Danelo kicked a 40-yard field goal with 5:40 remaining in overtime to cap a comeback victory against Atlanta.

Danelo's field goal came after Brad Van Pelt fell on a William Andrews fumble at the Atlanta 31.

The Giants, whose only points in the first half came on a blocked punt recovery by Mike Dennis, fell behind 17-7 in

Rain Postpones American 500

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP) — Sunday's American 500 NASCAR Grand National stock race at the North Carolina Motor Speedway was less than expected — 500 miles less to be exact.

Rain throughout the weekend forced postponement of the event until next Sunday. At noon on that day, pole-sitter Darrell Waltrip will lead 36 other entries in the chase for the $196,400 purse.

Track officials postponed the race 20 minutes before its scheduled start, the third time in the race's 17-year history it has been delayed by rain.

NASCAR officials impounded the cars and would not allow drivers and mechanics to get back to their rides until Saturday's 1 p.m. practice session.

From the driver's standpoint, the delay might be a blessing in disguise. It gives race officials another week to solve the slick-track conditions which made navigation treacherous. Track officials said they plan to drag tires over the 1.017-mile high-banked oval in hopes the additional rubber on the surface will help provide better traction.

Second-day qualifier Joe Ruttman posted the fastest speed in time trials as he cruised to a 139.151 mph average in cool, cloudy weather. Waltrip, who qualified during Thursday's opening session under hot, sunny conditions, averaged 138.164.

The heat cooked oil to the track surface, making it slick. After Friday's session, Waltrip predicted that he could have run 140 mph under better conditions.

"The track is a lot faster than it was yesterday," Waltrip said at the time.

Cale Yarborough, the 1980 American 500 winner, agreed with Waltrip that the heat did the first-day qualifiers no favor.

"I guess the overcast skies helped more than anything," Yarborough said. "If nothing else, it took the glare off the track."

Practice and qualifying sessions this past week were marred by several accidents and spins.

After his qualifying run, Waltrip predicted that his speed would not be fast enough to keep the pole. He was wrong, but summed up what most of the drivers will be thinking this week.

"It won't matter Sunday, anyway," Waltrip said. "It'll be a whole new story then."

Heafner-Holland Cop Title

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — "We're relative unknowns — but not as unknown as we used to be," said Vance Heafner shortly after he and Mike Holland won the National Team Golf Championship with a record-shattering total of 42 strokes under par.

The second-year touring pros led from wire to wire in an overwhelming 126 two-men teams entered in the 72-hole event played over three Disney World golf courses.

Their closest challengers, Chip Beck and Rex Caldwell, were five strokes back.

The Heafner-Holland duo shot a closing 63 on Sunday for a four-round total of 246, six strokes better than the previous record set in 1975.

Beck-Caldwell also broke the record with a final round 66, giving them a 37-under-par total of 251.

Over the four days, Heafner canned 21 birdies, an eagle and a lone bogey in this unusual competition, which counts the best score of the two players on each hole. Holland holed 16 birds and two eagles.

The victory was worth $36,000 apiece, but far more important to Holland was what went with it — a qualifying exemption for all of next year's events sponsored by the Tournament Players Association.

Heafner earned his exemption on the final week of the TPA season in Pensacola by finishing 60th on the money list with $73,961.01.

"There can't be any better feeling," said Holland about gaining his exemption. "Nobody in the field played better than my partner, who is really responsible for it. He's the greatest."

Heafner said, "We came in here real positive. We felt there was no way they could beat us coming in... we made so many putts — I some gobblers from across the green."

Beck and Caldwell's second place finish was worth $23,200 apiece.

In third place with a closing 62 were brothers Danny and David Edwards, last year's champions.

Next came Scott Hoch and Calvin Peete, followed by Jim Dent-Claire-Rose.

As in past years, this unusual format proved beneficial for the lightly regarded also-rans on the professional golf tour — for, as Heafner put it, the "relative unknowns."

The younger Salazar — and division, was first on the balance beam and second on the vault and floor exercise to finish second all around with a 56.4 total, four-tenths of a point more than she needed to qualify for the state meet.

Grimsley, competing in the Class 4 division in the 9-11 age group, finished second on the balance beam, third in the vault and fourth on the uneven bars and floor exercise for her first place finish overall.

Moreno, competing in the 12-14 age group of the Class 3 compulsory and option

Class 4 — (12-14) Danielle Adams, (5) vault; (3) floor exercise, (4) vault, (5) uneven bars and (2) all around; Betsy Barnhill, (4) uneven bars, (6) floor exercise.

Grimsley First Overall; Moreno Reaches State

RALEIGH — Susan Grimsley finished first all-around and Kerrl Moreno qualified for the state Class 3 & 4 meet at the Eastern Sectional Gymnastics concluded here last night.

Grimsley, competing in the Class 4 division in the 9-11 age group, finished second on the balance beam, third in the vault and fourth on the uneven bars and floor exercise for her first place finish overall.

Moreno, competing in the 12-14 age group of the Class 3 compulsory and option

ECU Golfers Finish 18th

East Carolina moved up two places with a final day 389 to finish 18th in the Duke Invitational golf tournament this past weekend.

N.C. State won the 20-team tournament with a 1,099 score. Wake Forest was second at 1,113. ECU, 20th after the second day of play, finished with a 1,173 score.

Georgia Southern's Jodie Mudd won individual honors with a 205.

The Pirates were led by Don Gafner and Don Sweeting, both of whom shot a 229. Gafner shot rounds of 77, 74 and 78 while Sweeting shot rounds of 77, 78 and 74.

Other Pirate results: Chris Czaja had a 231 (73-82-76), Jerry Lee a 239 (79-73-81), Dan Lawruk a 251 (88-81-82) and

Salazar's Record Run Erases Any Doubts

NEW YORK (AP) — Alberto Salazar has ended all the controversy about the world marathon record.

The quietly, confident Salazar had said prior to Sunday's New York City Marathon that "my goal is to break 2:08:33, so there's no doubt in my mind or anybody else's mind that I've got the record."

Salazar left no doubts. Running smoothly and strongly through New York City's five boroughs, Salazar covered the grueling 26 miles, 385 yards in 2 hours, 8 minutes, 13 seconds.

His time bettered the disputed world record of 2:08:33.6, by Australian Derek Clayton at Antwerp, Belgium, May 30, 1969, on a course that never was officially certified. And it was faster than the recently accepted mark of 2:09:01, set by Gerard Nijboer of The Netherlands April 26, 1980 at Amsterdam.

"A lot of people would have been disappointed if I had not done it," explained Salazar, who had predicted he would run 2:08, possibly 2:07.

Salazar, a native of Havana, Cuba, was not the only record-setter Sunday.

Allison Roe of New Zealand smashed the women's marathon record, clocking 2:25:29, some 12 seconds quicker than the mark of 2:25:41.3, set last year by Norway's Grete Waitz, when she won the New York City Marathon for the third straight time.

The bitterly disappointed Waitz, suffering from shin splints in her left leg, was forced to drop out Sunday, between the 14- and 15-mile marks.

Salazar also was not the only one who thought he could break the world record in just his second marathon; he won his debut last year in the New York City Marathon in 2:09:41.

"There was no question that he would break the world record," said his father, Jose Salazar, a civil engineer in Wayland, Mass., who brought his family to the United States in 1960. "We knew he felt fine."

"We don't talk lightly. We don't say things that we don't do. We don't exaggerate. We have a great faith in God. Our family is very religion-oriented. We're full of joy."

"I wonder what if he didn't have Alberto," added the elder Salazar. "What a joy he has been to all of us."

The younger Salazar — and

Roe — were both joys to race director Fred Lebow.

"I dreamed of a world record, but not of two," said the excited Lebow. "It was a fantastic day. It was incredible. It was staggering."

It also was a sad day for Lebow. "I am saddened that Grete had to drop out and that Billy (Rodgers, a four-time winner of the New York City and Boston marathons, plus the American record holder before Salazar's sensational victory) never started," said Lebow.

Rodgers had withdrawn about 10-11 hours before the race, after failing to complete some deals with sponsors which he thought were finalized when he decided to enter the race Thursday.

Lebow said he had seen Rodgers' girlfriend, Gail Swain, running by herself in Central Park Saturday night, "and she looked distraught."

"She told me that Billy was still negotiating," said Lebow. "I told her to tell Billy to try and forget about it, and call me if it's not resolved. I thought it was demeaning to him to be negotiating at that hour."

Lebow said he still was looking for Rodgers at the start of the race, and even when he didn't see him, still didn't realize he had decided not to run.

While Rodgers surprisingly dropped out, Frank Shorter surprisingly dropped in. Shorter, considered to be most responsible for the long-distance running boom in the United States, after winning the Olympic gold medal in 1972 — the first American in 64 years to do it — didn't enter the 12th New York City race until Saturday night. He finished in 2:25:45, 117th overall and four places behind Roe.

Roe also was a late entrant. The 24-year-old secretary from Auckland had been suspended for accepting $4,000 for finishing second in a professional race, the Cascade Run-Off, June 28 at Portland, Ore. But after agreeing to deposit her winnings in a trust fund supervised by the New Zealand Federation, she was given approval to run in New York.

"I was just very happy I could run," said Roe, winner of the women's section of the 1981 Boston Marathon. "I wasn't shooting for a world record. I was just trying to win — in 2:30 or 2:40. It didn't matter."

It did make quite a difference when she crossed the finish line in record time. Being a record holder as opposed to just a winner can make a big difference... as Salazar duly noted.

"Winning — and winning in record time — can open a lot of doors for me," said the men's champion. "It can make me a rich man."

Salazar earned a reported $14,000 for his victory, while Roe collected an estimated $10,000. Countless endorsements also lie ahead for the two record holders.

The New York Road Runners Club, organizer of the event, said 13,360 people finished the race, under cloudy skies, with the temperature in the 50s and north-northeast winds of 10 mph. The total who started was 14,496.

The men's runnerup was Finland's Jukka Toivola, in 2:10:52. He was followed by Britain's Hugh Jones in 2:10:59, Britain's Nick Braun in 2:11:09; Poland's Ryszard Marczak in 2:11:35, and Tony Sandoval, winner of the 1980 U.S. Olympic Marathon Trials, in 2:12:12.

Norway's Ingrid Kristiansen finished second among the women in 2:30:08. She came in 2:30:11, Italy's Laura Fogli in 2:34:48, and American Jan Yerkas in 2:35:39.

Woody Peele

Hey, sports fans! I've got a great idea.

I believe we ought to tear down the north side of the Ficklen Stadium, peel back the wings on the south side and sell the steel and concrete for scrap.

Then, let's power down the ECU athletic program, say to about ten years, no, say 15 years ago. Let's go right on back to Division II football while we're at it.

I can remember back in 1963 when East Carolina dedicated Ficklen. Then, it was just a part of one side of the stadium, with wooden bleachers on the other side. Back then, that was considered really somethin' for the folks down east. They had it made. They had reached the "Big Time."

They had the Deacons from Wake Forest in. Really big stuff, that. 'Course the Deacs only won one game that year, and probably only one or two the year or two before that, but it was the "Big Time" for ol' ECTC.

Back then, folks were crying for the big name teams. Bring 'em on. Maybe we won't beat 'em, but we'll have a good time trying.

But it seems like a little success has become something that has turned sour.

Or maybe it's just that people in eastern North Carolina can't see past the Triangle. Maybe ECU folk don't know that there are other schools in the country that play football besides Duke, Carolina and State.

Now, you take Saturday afternoon. Saturday afternoon, East Carolina had the University of Miami in Ficklen Stadium. All week long, the promotions people from ECU had been out scouring the east from the coast all the way to Raleigh. About all you could read about on the sports pages was ECU-Miami.

Miami was a team that had just been dropped out of the Top Twenty for losing a close game to another ranked team. The Hurricanes had lost only twice, both times to ranked teams, and both times by close scores. And both times, Miami had lost touchdowns to penalties. Give 'em those scores and they're unbeaten and in the top five.

So what happened. Only slightly over 20,000 folks showed up. Now maybe a few of them can complain about the weather, but it didn't rain at all.

I have to ask, what do the people of eastern Carolina want? Do they want to come and see East Carolina? If so, why haven't the crowds been there before. There haven't been great crowds even when the Pirates were winning 'em big.

Do they want quality opponents for ECU? Well, you're not going to get 'em much better than the Hurricanes.

And the Pirates played a fairly good game against the Hurricanes. Only a little offense could have made a different game out of it. But the defense, on the field most of the game, finally wore out in the late stages when Miami broke it open with two late touchdowns.

So, we might as well start tearing down the stadium. The people of the east don't want what they claim they want.

And we'd like some reaction! Who do you want to see East Carolina play? Drop us a list — a reasonable list — of opponents you'd like to see ECU try to attract to Ficklen Stadium. List your top five and we'll put them all together in a couple of weeks and see just who these teams are.

Maybe ECU can't get them here, but at least we might get an idea of who the fans WILL support.

Knights Win Title

GOLDSBORO — Greenville Christian Academy captured the East Carolina Christian Conference soccer tournament championship yesterday, downing Goldsboro Christian, 3-1.

The title was added to the regular season title already held by the Knights, who finished the season with a 10-3 record.

Phil Bird and Chris Harris both scored goals in the first period, the latter on an assist by Troy Hudson.

In the second half, Mike Bragg added the final Knight goal before John Rivenak broke the ice for Goldsboro late in the contest.

Goldsboro took 12 shots on goal, and Greenville goalie John Parnell recorded ten saves. Greenville had 26 shots, with Goldsboro goalie Joel Rivenak having nine saves.

"We played a pretty good game," Coach Dale Thatcher said. "The guys worked hard to get things going for the season and this was a fitting climax for that."

The tournament wound up play for the Knight team this year.

Shealy To Speak Tuesday

Richmond football coach Dal Shealy will be the featured speaker at the Greenville Sports Club's regular meeting Tuesday at noon at the Ramada Inn.

Shealy was named the state of Virginia's Coach-of-the-Year last season after taking the Spiders from a winless record in 1979 to a 5-6 mark last year.

The 42-year-old South Carolina native played football at Carson-Newman (Tenn.) College and then was an assistant at Auburn, Baylor and Tennessee before becoming head coach at Richmond.

The Greenville Sports Club meets for lunches during football and basketball seasons and features sports personalities from all sports. Membership dues are $30 a year. Guests are welcome.

The Club's next meeting is Nov. 10, when N.C. State basketball coach Jim Valvano will speak.

Nick Mike-Mayer drilled his third field goal of the day with one second remaining to give Buffalo its victory in a defensive struggle with Denver.

Joe Cribbs, who rushed 24 times for 123 yards, set up Mike-Mayer's 36-yard kick with 21 yards on four carries in the final drive.

49ers 20, Rams 17
San Francisco beat Los Angeles at home for the first time since 1966 as Joe Montana threw a pair of first-period touchdown passes and later set up two field goals.

Montana hit Freddie Solomon with a 14-yard TD pass and connected with Dwight Clark on a 41-yarder to give the 49ers a 14-0 lead.

Cowboys 28, Dolphins 27
Danny White completed two touchdown passes in a 31-second span late in the fourth quarter to rally Dallas over Miami.

The Dolphins had a 27-14 lead before White hit tight end Doug Cosbie with a 5-yard touchdown pass with 3:48 to go. Then, after Dennis Thurman intercepted a Dave Woodley pass, White connected with fullback Ron Springs on a 31-yard scoring toss with 3:17 left.

Chiefs 28, Raiders 17
Kansas City trailed 17-0 in the third quarter, but Billy Jackson rushed for three second-half touchdowns and linebacker Gary Spani turned back a final Oakland rally by streaking 91 yards to score with a recovered fumble.

The come-from-behind victory was keyed by quarterback Steve Fuller, who took over for Bill Kenney in the third period. The victory gave the Chiefs a 6-2 record, one game ahead of Denver and San Diego in the AFC West.

Cardinals 30, Vikings 17
Jim Hart tossed his 199th and 200th career touchdown passes and Neil O'Donoghue booted three field goals to lead St. Louis over the Vikings, breaking a five-game winning streak.

Hart hit Pat Tilley with a 37-yard pass in the first quarter and connected with Mel Gray for an 8-yard score in the final period.

Eagles 20, Buccaneers 10
Tony Franklin's 32-yard field goal with 4:18 left broke a 10-10 tie and Philadelphia went on to beat Tampa Bay.

The Eagles, who have the NFL's best record at 7-1, added a touchdown with 1:30 remaining after Richard Blackmore intercepted a pass and returned it 18 yards to the 4. On second down, Montgomery scored from the 3.

Seahawks 19, Jets 3
Steve Largent ran 10 yards for one touchdown and caught Jim Zorn's 27-yard pass for another as Seattle broke New York's four-game unbeaten string.

Theotis Brown rushed for 104 yards on 14 carries to set up the first two Seattle touchdowns, and Sherman Smith ran 4 yards for the third.

Redskins 24, Patriots 22
Quarterback Joe Theismann's 1-yard touchdown run in the third period was the difference as Washington edged New England.

Mike Nelms had a 75-yard punt return for a touchdown for Washington, which won its first game at home in four outings.

Yankees Have Won Last 6 At Home

L.A. Out To Break String

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's been a long dry spell for the Los Angeles Dodgers at Yankee Stadium. They've lost their last six World Series contests there. Now, they're faced with needing to win only one of two games in the Bronx to become the champions of baseball.

"We're going there up a game, hopefully we'll have enough to beat them," said Los Angeles second baseman Davey Lopes. "I don't care how it looks, just so we beat them once. That's when I'll be excited."

"The important thing is how you do, if you get knocked down six times and win in the 15th round, you win, and that's the important thing."

"I didn't know that," said left fielder Dusty Baker when informed of New York's Yankee Stadium winning streak over the Dodgers. "A guy in his home territory is tough. Nothing's easy for us. But there's the law of averages."

"Game 6. Six is the lucky number for a lot of people," said first baseman Steve Garvey, who happens to wear that number on his uniform. "We're due. The smell is in the air. I think we can do it."

One thing the Dodgers have on their side is history — since the present 2-3-2 scheduled system was instituted in 1924, no team has won all of its home games while losing all road games.

So something's got to give. The Dodgers saw to that by completing a three-game Series sweep of the Yankees at Dodger Stadium Sunday, capturing a 2-1 decision behind the five-hit pitching of Jerry Reuss and successive home runs by Pedro Guerrero and Steve Yeager in the seventh inning.

The latest Los Angeles victory, their third straight by one run, gave the Dodgers the 3-2 Series advantage they take to Yankee Stadium for Game Six Tuesday night. A seventh game, if needed, is scheduled Wednesday night.

While he might not have been one of the happiest Dodgers after Sunday's game, Lopes certainly was the most relieved. He tied a Series record by committing three errors in a game, and now has five, tying a standard for second basemen.

One of the errors came in the second inning, when the Yankees scored their only run. The other two came on the same play in the fourth that put New York baserunners at second and third and nobody out. But Reuss was able to escape the jam.

"Sure, I feel good we won the game," said Lopes. "I probably would have blown my brains out if we had lost it."

Right-hander Burt Hooton will pitch for the Dodgers in Game 6 against left-hander Tommy John. Hooton was the winning pitcher in the last Los Angeles victory at Yankee Stadium, hurling his club to a 6-1 triumph in the second game of the 1977 Series.

"I remember it very well," said Hooton. "I'm really happy to be going out to try to help us win the championship rather than trying to keep us in. That'll be fun. But we'll have our work cut out for us."

Hooton referred to his being the winning pitcher in the third game of the National League West playoffs and the fourth game of the NL Championship Series. Had the Dodgers lost either game, they'd be watching the World Series on television.

Yeager was in the lineup Sunday only because losing pitcher Ron Guidry is a left-hander.

"I've started more World Series games than I did all year long," said Yeager, exaggerating slightly. "I haven't started three in a row all year."

Yeager appeared in 42 games during the regular season and saw action in only three of his club's 10 playoff games against Houston and Montreal, but he's played in all five Series games and has a double and two homers in nine at-bats.

"I looked so bad on two breaking balls, I guessed he might try a fastball and he did," said Yeager of the 1-2 pitch he hit for his game-winning homer.

Yeager praised the work of Reuss, who was the losing pitcher in Game 1 of the Series, allowing five hits and four runs in 22-3 innings. Reuss had made his three previous starts on three days rest but had four this time.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠A876 ♡J10952 ♦954 ♣3. The bidding has proceeded: South West North East Pass 1 ♦ 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ 3 ♣ Dble Pass ?

What action do you take? A.—We are as keen as anyone about collecting penalties from the opponents, but that doesn't seem to be in the offing on this hand. You have little, if anything, to contribute to the defense; indeed, your only trick may be one that partner is already counting in his hand. It seems improbable that partner, who only made an overcall at his first turn, could produce enough tricks to set the hand. Discretion suggests a timely retreat to three spades.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠AK10 ♡AQ873 ♣963 ♦Q7. The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—Although you have somewhat better than a minimum opening bid, you can do no more than bid two hearts at this turn. Don't even consider two no trump with no stopper in one of the minor suits. You can always bid no trump should partner show a diamond stopper, or raise to game in no trump or hearts should partner try for either of those contracts at his next turn. Even five clubs might turn out to be your best contract.

Q.3—East West vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠K93 ♡7 ♣KJ9842 ♦AQ6. The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass 1 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—With an opening bid facing an opening bid, you should be in game, but which game? Don't raise to three no trump—you know the opponents have at least nine hearts between them and, unless partner has solid stoppers, you may be down before you can collect your tricks. A jump to three clubs seems best. This will create a forcing auction and give partner a chance to show heart values if he has them.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold: ♠A87 ♡J952 ♦AKQJ5 ♣A. The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♦ Dble Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now? A.—You have a powerful hand that suggests some strong action. We recommend a jump to three diamonds. Even though this isn't 100 percent forcing, partner will strain to keep the bidding open. If he rebids his spades, showing a five-card suit, we would venture to game in that suit.

Q.5—East West vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠J72 ♡6 ♣KQ87 ♣K9652. The bidding has proceeded: North East South West 4 ♣ Pass Pass 4 NT Pass 5 ♣ ?

What action do you take? A.—If you chose to double, you have overlooked something—where have all the hearts gone? Any action by you will almost certainly drive the opponents to a better spot. While there is still the possibility that diamonds won't be the final contract, you should pass in the hopes that the opponents will rest there. If they correct to five hearts, you can then decide whether or not you want to sacrifice at five spades.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠J9 ♡AQJ10 ♣Q8 ♦J10932. The bidding has proceeded: South West North East Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take? A.—You have 11 points in high cards and good intermediates, so your hand is worth another bid. It is a close decision between a raise to three spades and two no trump. We slightly favor the latter. If partner opened light in third seat with little but long spades, he can always rebid three spades.

'Splendor In The Grass' Has Quality

By FRED ROTHENBERG AP Television Writer NEW YORK (AP) — A whole generation has come and gone since Warren Beatty and Natalie Wood starred in "Splendor in the Grass." William Inge's poignant story about the struggle of two teen-agers in pre-Depression Kansas to stifle their sexual stirrings in the face of parental manipulation and period morals. Inge's compelling drama raises conflicts that are everlasting, and the remake is a valuable vehicle with Melissa Gilbert, a full-blown TV persona, cast in the starring role on NBC tonight.

For the last eight years, Miss Gilbert has grown up in our homes, only her notches in the door have been the new seasons of "Little House on the Prairie." Although little Laura Ingalls got married on the Prairie, "Splendor in the Grass" marks Miss Gilbert's real emergence as a woman.

With a cascading waterfall as backdrop, Deanie Loomis (Miss Gilbert) and Bud Stamper (Cyril O'Reilly) are engaging in upright, front-seat kissing. Their simmering sexuality comes to the fore, and Deanie parries Bud's advances.

"Maybe we've had enough kissing for tonight," Bud says out of frustration and anger, with a large measure of understanding coming across. Their relationship seems a lot more than just passionate first love. Bud kisses her good night anyway, and their obvious friendship — for now, at least — washes away the tension.

We're then taken into Deanie's unpretentious home. Deanie's mother (Eva Marie Saint) wants the better life for her daughter that marriage to the wealthy Stamper family would bring. But she's also concerned about Deanie's sexual purity. Asked if good girls can experience urges, Mrs. Loomis says: "Your father never laid a hand on me until after we were married. Then

I gave in. A wife has to, but women don't enjoy these things the way a man does."

Bud gets home to find his nouveau riche father (Ned Beatty) has brought in another oil well. Ace Stamper is clearly living vicariously through Bud, whose older sister, a classic "bad girl" has been a disappointment.

"It's what I want," Bud says. "A boy your age doesn't know what he wants."

Ace's final advice is that Bud find a different kind of girl for now. This is a particularly impressive cast. Miss Gilbert and O'Reilly capture beautifully the eternal dilemma when nature is running faster than the emotional capabilities of adolescents and the expectations of their parents.

As the controlling parents, Beatty and Miss Saint are terrific. Beatty brings the same powerful bluster he did to "Network" but this time it's real, not satire.

The title "Splendor in the Grass" comes from William

Wordsworth's poem about the idealism of youth: "splendor in the grass, glory in the flower," and dealing with its inevitable end: "We shall grieve not, rather find strength in what remains behind."

This lesson is worth re-learning; the story is worth retelling.

Ten Failed Mt. Everest

PEKING (AP) — Ten members of a San Francisco expedition failed in their attempt to climb Mount Everest for the first time by the east face and were to leave China Monday for home, foreign mountaineering sources said.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said the 10 men reached the 22,000-foot level on the 29,000-foot mountain but turned back because of avalanches and other dangers.

They said five other members of the expedition remained in Tibet to attempt an assault on 26,000-foot Mount Xixabangma.

The 15-man expedition began the assault on the world's highest mountain from the Chinese side in August. Sir Edmund Hillary, the first man to conquer Everest from the south face in Nepal, started up with the Americans but quit at 20,000 feet last month.

"It's a much more difficult climb than the one we did 28 years ago," said Hillary.

He said the east face has many glaciers and is more hazardous because of its steepness and the possibility of landslides and avalanches.

Meanwhile, three members of the American Medical Research Expedition reached the summit of Everest last week from the Nepalese side.

Climate Watchers Keep Eye On Globe Effects

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When drought threatens crops in Africa, typhoons cause flooding in Asia or frost damages coffee beans in Brazil, a team of American weather experts charts and analyzes the damage and its potential threat.

Keeping watch on the effects of weather in the United States and around the world is the Center for Environmental Assessment Services, headed by an enthusiastic meteorologist named Malcolm Reid.

The group collects weather information from ground stations, satellites and foreign nations and feeds it into computers in Columbia, Mo., which compare the data with models of the atmosphere and relate the numbers to such things as crop yields and consumption of electricity and natural gas.

The information then comes back to Washington, where Reid's team analyzes it and issues regular reports on how the climate is affecting the world and what are the likely consequences of unusual weather.

Douglas LaCompte, for example, who is Reid's expert on Africa, noted that every year since the late 1960s there has been drought in parts of the western Sahel, the region along the southern edge of the Sahara Desert.

And again this year, according to his latest analysis, there are problems, with the potential for abnormal food shortages in Niger and Chad and continuing food shortages expected in Cape Verde and Mauritania.

Local weather services generally provide information to the Americans, but they have to depend on satellites for data on such places as war-torn Chad, which meteorologists haven't heard from for years.

In some cases, Reid said, "it's kind of a strange situation in that we're telling countries in these less-developed areas what's going on in their own country."

The center's reports are, in fact, sought by foreign officials and U.S. embassies overseas as well as U.S. government officials.

"The basic idea being that using weather and weather-type data you can get a better feel, perhaps, for what's going on in some of these countries than they know in the country," Reid said.

He said the Agency for International Development is an important user of these reports in its planning for dealing with potential disasters.

"They've found that often the host country itself doesn't know there's a problem until it's almost too late, until the farmers start pouring into the cities because of the drought ... and then it's so late by the time AID can react that you have a first-class disaster on your hands," Reid said.

So, he added, "we advise AID as soon as we spot a potential problem in an area so AID can start pre-stocking food, they can make the contracts for shipping food and that sort of thing, and have it all ready to go by the time they actually receive the request from the country itself."

Reid said his group also assists countries in deciding which crops may be preferable to plant. "In some of these countries they just plant what their father planted, there's no scientific basis at all," he said.

Assistance can be provided in suggesting alternative crops or procedures if rainfall is late, such as from a delayed monsoon.

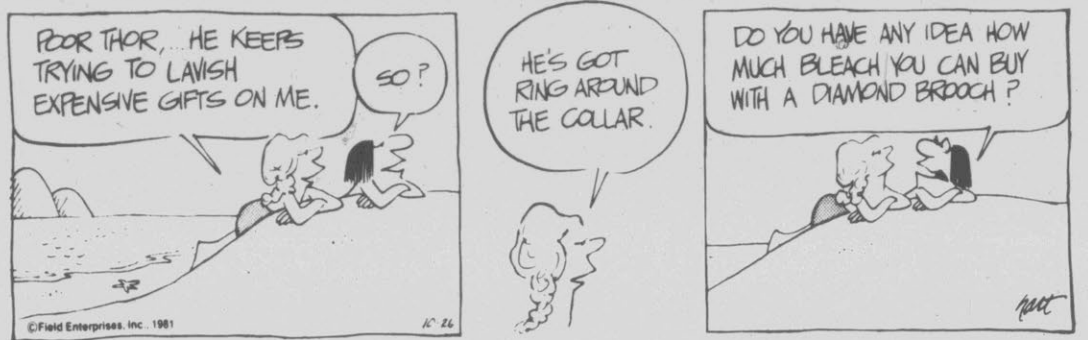

The assessment service is working with the University of Delaware to measure the impact of climate on death rates.

The heat wave in the summer of 1980, for example, was blamed for thousands of deaths. But even those estimates may have been low, Reid said, with new studies indicating that many heat-related deaths were classified as heart attacks or other causes.

Atheist Group Seeks Prevent Prayer At Congress Sessions

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of atheists is arguing that it is unconstitutional for Congress to pay chaplains to open its daily sessions with prayer.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia scheduled arguments today on the appeal of the Society of Separationists, also known as American Atheists, from a decision that taxpayers lack legal standing to challenge the internal workings of Congress.

The court could uphold the decision by U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer, send the case back to him for trial on the merits of the atheists' argument or decide the matter itself.

Although this is the third time taxpayer-supported congressional chaplains have been challenged in court, there has never been a decision on whether the practice is an unconstitutional entanglement of church and state.

Both the previous challenges were dismissed on grounds that the Constitution gives Congress the sole power to regulate its internal affairs.

The plaintiffs in the current case — including atheist Madalyn Murray O'Hair and her son, Jon Garth Murray, as well as their organization — are attempting to overcome this roadblock.

Their attorney, Ronald A. Lindsay, told the court in a written brief that Congress does not have "the judicially non-reviewable power to compensate its officers out of public funds when, because of the religious duties and functions of these officers, this use of public funds violates the First Amendment."

Lindsay argued that laws providing for payment of the two chaplains, who receive $50,750 per year, "excessively entangle government with religion by placing the power, prestige and financial support of the government behind the matter itself."

Seminar Set At Center

A child development and family relations specialist will present a seminar on infant stimulation, development and positive parent/infant interaction at Lovin' and Learnin' Day Care Center, 2310 E. 10th St. Oct. 28 at 7:30 p.m.

Jean Moore will give hints regarding parental attitudes, coping mechanisms, baby massage and how to improve the quality of the time spent with an infant. The program is free of charge.

particular religious beliefs."

Stanley Brand, general counsel of the clerk of the House, argued in his brief that payment of the chaplains is "directly and immediately" related to the legislative aims of Congress.

Named as defendants in the lawsuit are officers of the House and Senate, Treasury officials and the two chaplains, the Rev. James David Ford in the House and the Rev. Harold C. Halvorsen in the Senate.

In an interview, Ford said, "I don't take a side on that at all. That's something outside my job."

The question of congressional prayers never has reached the Supreme Court. In a 1963 decision striking down required Bible reading in schools, however, Justice William J. Brennan wrote that the chaplains' prayers might well be permissible because members of Congress are "mature adults who may presumably absent themselves from such public and ceremonial exercises."

There are two conflicting rulings on the question of paid chaplains in state legislatures.

In 1979, the Supreme

Judicial Court of Massachusetts upheld payments to chaplains in the Bay State Legislature on grounds the practice was "unlikely to advance religious belief among the legislators or their constituency, even if it does give recognition to the traditional place that prayer has occupied in such a ritual for two centuries."

Last year, however, U.S. District Judge Warren K. Urbom of Lincoln, Neb., ruled that the employment of a chaplain by Nebraska's unicameral legislature violated the Constitution by establishing "a firm and continuing relationship with a particular cleric of one denomination to the virtual exclusion of all others." His decision has been appealed to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The First Amendment to the Constitution prohibits Congress from making any "law respecting an establishment of religion." The atheists contend that the laws appropriating money to pay the chaplains violate this provision.

Halloween At Library

Sheppard Library and its branches will hold their annual "Halloween Flings" on Wednesday and Friday. Stories, games, crafts and a puppet show will be some of the treats available free for children. Kids are encouraged to wear their Halloween costumes.

East Branch Library invites kids, grades K-6, to enjoy ghost stories, games and crafts on Wednesday from 3:30-5 p.m. Guest storyteller Jane Maier will entertain with a spooky tale. The program will be held in the auditorium of the East Branch Library/ Recreation and Parks Building, located on Cedar Lane.

A puppet show, "Winnie the Witch and the Frightened Ghost," will be the big event at the children's room of the main library. The show will be held Friday at 4 p.m. for children of all ages. Special guests will be a singing pumpkin and a dancing skeleton.

Also on Friday at 4 p.m. the Carver Branch's Halloween party will include a spooky film, games, costume judging and prizes. Students and staff from the ECU Occupational Therapy Department will be on hand to assist with games and activities.

Defense Attorney Giving Devil His Day In Court

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — The devil gets his day in court this week in a case authorities call "a routine murder" and the defense attorney calls a clear-cut case of demonic possession.

The case involves a husband-wife team of nationally known "demonologists," a 13-year-old boy some say is possessed by the devil, the efforts of Roman Catholic priests to rid the boy of the spirits and a curly haired teen-ager named Arne Cheyenne Johnson who challenged the demons to take him on.

That teen-ager, Arne Cheyenne Johnson, stands accused of murder and Martin Minnella, the defense attorney, plans to argue that the devil made him do it, literally.

The trial begins Wednesday in a tiny, second-floor courtroom here, and attorneys predict it could take up to two months to seat a jury because of detailed questions about spiritual beliefs Minnella is expected to ask prospective jurors.

Johnson, 19, has been in a Bridgeport jail in lieu of $125,000 bond since his arrest on charges in the Feb. 16 stabbing death of Alan Bono, 40-year-old manager of the Brookfield Kennel.

Minnella's defense is straightforward: the devil possessed Johnson's body several times in the months before Bono's death and then again at the moment of the attack.

Minnella will first have to convince the jury there is such a thing as the devil and demonic possession. Secondly, he will have to convince jurors that, in his words, "this vile force or spirit manipulated my client's body and caused the ultimate demise" of Bono.

If allowed into court and if successful, the defense would be a landmark in U.S. law, legal experts say. But the decision to admit Minnella's evidence rests with Superior Court Judge Robert Callahan.

Minnella says he's confident Callahan will see things his way.

"The state must prove he had specific intent to murder Bono, and the defense is allowed to show any evidence that indicates he didn't have intent," Minnella said in an interview last week.

To Walter Flanagan, the state's attorney who will be prosecuting, the case is "a routine murder, insofar as homicide can be classified routine."

John Anderson, chief of police in Brookfield, a quiet town of 12,000 north of Danbury, said, "There's nothing in the crime itself to indicate it had anything to do with demons."

The stabbing occurred while Johnson and Bono were arguing over Johnson's girlfriend, Deborah Glatzel, 26, police said. Johnson and Miss Glatzel were living in an apartment next door to the kennel, and Miss Glatzel groomed dogs for Bono.

Acquaintances have described Johnson and Bono as "the best of friends."

Five months before the stabbing, Johnson was involved in efforts to rid Miss Glatzel's brother, David, then 11, of 42 demons, according to Ed and Lorraine Warren, self-styled experts on demons, who are expected to testify for the defense.

In tape recordings the Warrens say were made in the home, a voice identified as Johnson's can be heard challenging David's demons to "take me on. Control me. Leave this boy alone."

The Warrens claim the demons did just that.

Efforts to rid the boy of demons last fall included three minor exorcism rites performed by five Connecticut priests. The Diocese of Bridgeport acknowledges some involvement with David's problem but says it knows nothing of Johnson, said the Rev. Nicholas Grieco, a diocese spokesman. Bishop Walter Curtis has ordered the priests not to talk to reporters or attorneys about the case, Grieco said.

David now attends a special school for emotionally disturbed children. The Warrens say he is still possessed by demons. Minnella says Johnson has been "under attack" by demons while in jail but doesn't remember the attack on Bono.

Minnella said he plans to subpoena all five priests, including the Rev. Francis Virgulak, whom the bishop sent to investigate the Glatzel case last fall. "They'll have to talk to us in court," Minnella said.

Other Catholic priests are also on Minnella's witness list. He said he may even subpoena an exorcism expert, whom he declines to name, from the Vatican.

Minnella said one "benefit" of the trial could be that "people will realize there is a demonic spirit and will gravitate closer to the church and closer to God."

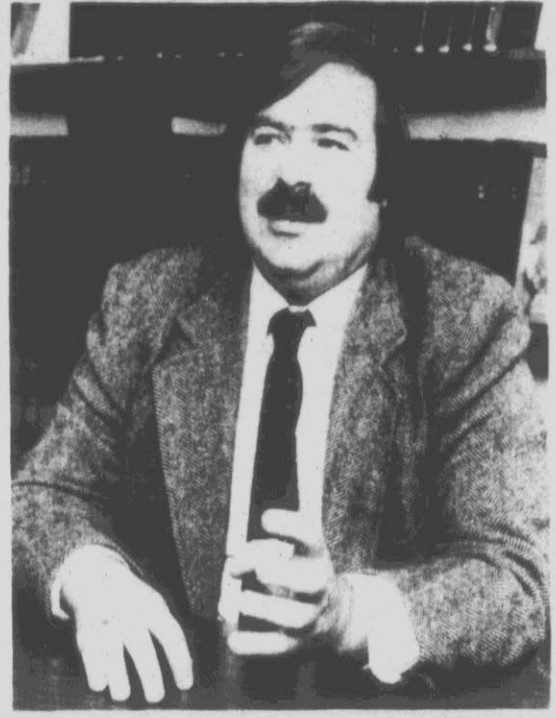

"It certainly has brought me closer to God." With testimony still weeks away, Minnella has concentrated on developing a profile of the ideal juror — Catholic, female, between 40 and 65 years old, a mother who has a child Johnson's age, a believer in both the existence of God and the devil.

"Our research has shown that a woman is more likely than a man to believe in demonic possession and to express those views," Minnella said.

Since the case and the unusual planned defense were first reported by The Associated Press, hundreds of newspapers and radio and television stations around the world have sent reporters to Connecticut. About 50 spectators can fit on the four oak benches in the 82-year-old courtroom, and Callahan has said seats will be first-come-first-served.

Police Chief Anderson, like others involved in the case, has received hundreds of letters and phone calls. A crucifix which arrived in the mail now hangs on the wall of his office.

"The day I levitate five feet off the floor is the day I'll believe," Anderson told a reporter. "But I figure, why push your luck?"

Tells How To Bake A Snake

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP) — In case you need to bake a snake or boil an owl for survival, Gerald R. "Bob" Hunter of Thomasville and Peggy Hoffman of Raleigh, N.C., can tell you how to do it.

Baked snake with berries, boiled owl, moose marrow and swamp cabbage are some of the recipes in the book "Bake A Snake" or "How To Survive By Your Own Cooking," co-authored by Hunter and Mrs. Hoffman.

"Some survival foods may seem repulsive to civilized stomachs, but every meat is made up of the same chemicals," the authors say. "When we haven't eaten for two or three days, we begin to realize that anything that is safe, nourishing and obtainable can be called food."

Hunter says much of the book is first-hand experience gained when he was adviser of a Boy Scout Explorer post.

The book, basically a survival manual, also discusses how to build fires, reflecting ovens or an outdoor stove to cook the bounty from the land.

"If you do not want people to know where you are, burn only dry wood on a very small fire," the book says. "If you are lost and WANT people to find you, add green leaves and green pine needles or pitchy softwood to your fire. This will make a very dense smoke that will bring rescuers."

"Bake A Snake" lists emergency meats and how to cook them — alligators, small fer-bearing animals, birds, clams, crayfish, eels, fish, frogs, lizards, rodents, snakes, tadpoles, toads and turtles.

It also lists plants, fruits and vegetables such as bear grass, berries, cattails, grapes, honey palms, peanuts, small grains and watercress.

Readers are also advised what not to eat — toadstools, pokeberries and vetch.

Catching the meat supply is left up to your ingenuity.

Hunter, an experienced outdoor writer, has for several years compiled "Fins and Feathers," a column in the Thomasville Times-Enterprise.

HALLOWEEN CARNIVAL

Third Street School will hold its annual Halloween carnival Oct. 28 from 6-8 p.m. at the school.

Food items such as hot dogs and baked goods will be sold and games for all ages will be available.

The public is invited to attend.

He has also served as managing editor of the Tifton Gazette, Cordele Dispatch, Sylvester Local and farm editor of the Moultrie Observer.

Hunter has a bachelor's degree in forestry from the University of Georgia and a master's in journalism and philosophy from Florida State University.

He is now field editor of Game and Fish Publications and does freelance writing for several regional and national publications.

Hunter is author or shares authorship in three other books — Southern Trapping Methods, The Florida Wild Turkey, and Miss B's First Cookbook, the latter also written with Mrs. Hoffman.

Prize Going To Advocate

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Argentine journalist and human rights advocate Jacobo Timerman, who says he was tortured by Argentine authorities, will receive a Columbia University journalism prize.

But the university's decision has brought criticism from some past recipients of the Maria Moors Cabot Prize, given for "distinguished contributions to the advancement of inter-American understanding."

Timerman was publisher of the Buenos Aires daily La Opinion until his arrest in 1977 by Argentine security forces.

In a book published this year, "Prisoner Without Name, Cell Without Number," he described being imprisoned for 2½ years and tortured during that period because his paper had defended human rights. His book also examined anti-Semitism in Argentina.

Diana Julio de Massot, conservative publisher of La Nueva Provincia of Bahia Blanca, Argentina, and a former recipient of the prize, said in a telegram to Dean Osborn Elliott of the Columbia School of Journalism that she was "astonished" by Timerman's selection.

She called Timerman a political opportunist and "spokesman for Marxist terrorism," adding, "Evidently, there are ideological motives for his selection."

Juan Carlos Colombes, a cartoonist and another past winner, expressed his "profound disgust" over the selection in a telegram to Elliott, saying he would remove his medal from display in his home.
