

Legislators Gather For Redistricting Try

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly meets again today for an extraordinary session called to improve House and Senate redistricting plans before they face legal tests.

Both the House and Senate planned to take up new reapportionment plans recommended by committees immediately after convening. But opponents of the plans, particularly legislators whose districts would be seriously altered, stood ready for what could be a long floor fight.

"There's going to be a heavy debate on the Senate floor," said Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Stanly, who hopes to defeat the plan proposed by the Senate Legislative Redistricting Committee.

"There's a lot of unhappy people in there," said Rep. Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, who opposes the House plan.

The session is the third meeting of the Legislature this year. A six-month session ended July 10 after new reapportionment plans were approved, and legislators held a six-day special session earlier this month to make budget revisions.

The second special session is by all accounts unprecedented. It was called after state Justice Department lawyers advised legislative leaders that the House and Senate maps they approved in June couldn't stand up in court. The session is to be confined to considering new legislative district plans.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green were scheduled to gavel the session to order at noon. Before the official start, the House Legislative Redistricting Committee scheduled a meeting to consider a last-minute amendment delaying the filing period for state legislative and congressional races next year.

Ramsey said it would make the filing period run from noon, Monday, Feb. 15, to noon, Monday, March 1, of next year. Currently the filing period is to run from Jan. 4 to Feb. 1. The change would not affect races for county offices.

He said the delay was needed because of the uncertainty over where district boundaries will fall. Whatever district maps are finally approved by lawmakers, they must undergo review by the U.S. Justice Department under provisions of the 1965 voting rights act and face a challenge in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

A suit filed by the NAACP Legal and Education Defense Fund claims the state plans dilute black voting strength and violate the one-man one-vote, equal-population rule of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ramsey said he hoped to end the session Friday but that it could extend into Saturday. If plans are not approved by then, Ramsey said the session could continue Monday.

The session was called after state Justice Department lawyers told legislators they couldn't successfully defend the plans adopted in June.

The earlier plans were far out of balance, with 23 percent and 24 percent differences in population per legislator between the smallest and largest districts.

That was far above the 10 percent maximum range recommended by state attorneys. Above that number, they said, and the federal courts would view the plans with

Reagan Says Peace Bolstered

By JIM ADAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, exulting in a victory that even his opponents called awesome, says the "cause of peace is on the march again in the Middle East" with Senate approval of his AWACS arms sale to Saudi Arabia.

With his first major foreign policy test behind him, Reagan said only a radical takeover in the Mideast now could thwart delivery of the Airborne Warning and Control System planes, the world's most advanced, in 1985. The $8.5 billion sale is the largest arms deal to a foreign nation in U.S. history.

Reagan also reaffirmed the United States'

"unshakable commitment" to Israel, which had argued that the sale would threaten its security, as his administration worked on compensating arms aid to the Jewish state.

The Senate approved the sale 52-48 Wednesday after Reagan converted seven opponents and won over all seven undecided senators in the final two days of an extraordinary lobbying blitz. It was a performance that moved House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. to say, "He is showing awesome power."

In Moscow, the Soviet news agency Tass said today that the sale will signal "a fresh round of the arms race in the Middle East." Tass said that "under unprecedented pressure of the White House, the Senate supported by a minimum majority of votes the administration's decision on the sale of AWACS."

Meanwhile, in a surprise move, the United States decided to remove the two AWACS jets sent to Egypt two weeks ago, it was reported today. A State Department official, who asked not to be identified, said they clearly were intended as a show of support for Egypt following the assassination of President Anwar Sadat.

The Israeli Cabinet said today that the approval of the sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia posed "a new, serious danger" that Israel would do everything necessary to overcome.

Saudi Arabia's government-controlled newspapers hailed Reagan as one of the greatest American leaders in history.

Egypt's Foreign Minister Kamal Hassan Aly lauded the vote, calling it a "positive turning point in relations between the United States and the Arab nations" that will enable "Arab countries to defend themselves against any foreign intervention."

"Thank God!" Reagan exclaimed when told of the victory by aides who had been monitoring the roll call, via a phone line, in the office of chief of staff James A. Baker III. Keeping tally were Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., national security adviser Richard Allen and deputy chief of staff Michael K. Deaver.

Farmville Wins Another Award

RALEIGH — For the third year in a row, the Pitt County town of Farmville has been recognized as an outstanding community by Gov. Jim Hunt at the Governor's Conference on Economic Development.

Farmville has won the Community of Excellence Award each year it was given, reports Anne McGaughey, executive director of the town's economic council. "The award has been presented for three years and we've won it all three," she noted. "I think that says a great deal."

Mayor Linwood Mercer accepted the award Wednesday night at the third annual Governor's Council on Economic Development. Also attending were McGaughey, Mayor-elect Rusty Duke, town Administrator Robert Morgan and community coordinator John Downs.

The Community of Excellence Award signals that the cities and towns receiving it have established an economic development program and are prepared to recruit new industry.

The town of Ayden received the award this year for the first time.

Second Sub Lurks Near Stranded Ship

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — An unidentified submarine was detected today inside Swedish waters not far from a Soviet sub grounded off the southeast coast, and sub-hunting helicopters equipped with depth charges were sent out to the intruder, the Swedish Defense Staff announced.

The unidentified sub was about six miles inside the 12-mile territorial limit, a defense official said.

Naval staff press spokesman Sven Carlsson said a helicopter sighted a periscope at 10:45 a.m. local time.

"Renewed contact with an unidentified sub was taken at 12 noon and a sub-hunting helicopter unit equipped with depth charges was dispatched," Carlsson said.

It was believed that the helicopters would use their depth charges to try to force the sub to the surface for identification and interrogation of its crew or to drive it back into the Baltic outside Swedish waters.

Meanwhile, Swedish tugs and salvage ships were preparing to refloat the grounded sub and tow it to the Karlskrona naval base nearby.

Chief Prosecutor Magnus Sjöberg said the government was considering bringing charges against the sub's skipper "but there are many juridical and practical aspects to be taken into consideration."

The professor of international law at Lund's University, Goran Melander, likened the case to the Soviet downing of a U.S. U-2 spy plane over Siberia in May 1960. The Soviet government convicted the pilot, Francis Gary Powers, of espionage and held him for two years.

Defense Minister Torsten Gustafsson accused the sub of "the most flagrant violation of Swedish territorial water since World War II." He said the captain and his crew would be interrogated.

The government announced that the commander of the armed forces, Gen. Lennart Ljung, has canceled an official visit to the Soviet Union scheduled for Nov. 19-21.

The diesel-powered Whiskey-class submarine, carrying a crew of 54, ran aground Tuesday night in 40 feet of water four miles off the southeast coast in the Karlskrona archipelago. It was inside a restricted security area 12 miles south of the Karlskrona base.

Swedish navy spokesman Bertil Lagerwall said 10 Warsaw Pact vessels, including salvage craft and two warships, massed just outside Sweden's 12-mile territorial limit as the Kremlin tried to get permission to rescue the sub. But the Swedish government rejected the request.

He said Swedish helicopters, torpedo boats and coast guard craft were watching the sub and the Soviet-led flotilla. More Swedish vessels were en route to the area from Stockholm, Lagerwall said.

"Our most important task now is to keep watch on the sub to make sure that no other Soviet vessels try to get through to the grounded sub," Cmdr. Lennart Forsman said.

Capt. Karl Gunnar Andersson of the Karlskrona naval base went aboard the Soviet craft late Wednesday.

The Russian captain "had been aware of the fact that he had entered Swedish territorial waters but could not explain how his vessel had come so far inside the archipelago," Andersson was quoted as telling the newspaper Svenska Dagbladet.

"The captain, who was absolutely shattered by the incident, would only say he was on 'a mission' and that his home base was Kaliningrad," in the southern Baltic, Andersson was quoted as saying.

The commander of the Soviet sub, identified as Capt. Gushin, claimed the vessel ran aground because of a "navigational error due to a faulty gyro compass and bad weather."

"You have only to look at the nautical charts to realize that this is virtually impossible," said a spokesman for the Swedish naval staff, Jan-Ake Berg. "To get that far inside the archipelago requires very careful navigation."

Swedish Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten also termed the Soviet captain's story "unacceptable" and demanded an explanation from the Soviet government in a sharply-worded protest note. He said Sweden "looks very seriously" on the intrusion.

Gushin asked for Soviet tugs to tow his vessel free. The Foreign Ministry refused and said Swedish salvage ships were ordered to the area.

Soviet Ambassador Michail Jakovlev made similar appeals when he was called to the Foreign Ministry twice Wednesday to hear Swedish protests. He went back a third time on his own but apparently had no success.

The submarine, a 1950s vessel, is believed to be the same type of craft that played hide and seek with the Swedish navy off Stockholm 13 months ago. Although four of the Whiskey-class subs are reported to have been modified to carry cruise missiles with nuclear warheads, newphotos of the grounded ship showed no missile-launching cylinders atop the hull.

The grounding came a week after the Kremlin protested a visit to neutral Sweden by Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger. Moscow accused the United States of trying to compromise Sweden's neutrality. It also accused the North Atlantic Treaty Organization of "militarizing the Sea of Peace," a Kremlin term for the Baltic.

Leading Indicators Fall Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — A broad gauge of future U.S. economic strength fell by the biggest amount in 17 months in September, all but ending any hopes the national economy might rebound before next year, Commerce Department officials said today.

The department's Index of Leading Indicators dropped 2.7 percent during the month, a fall characterized as "an especially steep plunge" by Robert Dederick, an assistant Commerce secretary.

"The report strongly suggests that industrial production will be sliding into the autumn and that real gross national product will be down for the third successive quarter," Dederick said in a prepared statement released by the department.

"Any upturn is unlikely before early 1982," he said. President Reagan and numerous private analysts have already labeled the economy's current state a slight recession. And worse times apparently lie ahead, according to the leading indicators index, which fell in September for the fourth time in five months.

The September decline was the biggest since a 4 percent fall in April 1980 at the heart of last year's recession.

Of 10 economic indicators designed to forecast future trends, only one improved in September, the report said.

Figures worsened from August to September for Americans' average workweek, the labor layoff rate, stock prices, the money supply, factory orders for manufactured goods, delivery performance, contracts and orders for new plants and equipment and building permits for future construction.

The decline in the average workweek and the increase in the layoff rate were major contributors.

Prices for certain raw materials, considered a positive indicator of future demand, increased slightly.

Growth For Chancellor's Soc.

ECU Alumni Association president Phillip R. Dixon engages in conversation with Chancellor

Thomas B. Brewer at the Chancellor's Society Dinner honoring major gift donors to ECU.

The second annual Chancellor's Society Dinner recognized major gift donors to East Carolina University Saturday.

The black tie event began with a 7 p.m. reception. Guests were greeted by Chancellor and Mrs. Thomas B. Brewer and Vice Chancellor and Mrs. Donald Lemish.

Each lady was presented with a rose upon a pillow as a dinner favor. More than 100 guests attended.

The 43 new members of the Chancellor's Society for 1980-81 were welcomed and a presentation of Chancellor's Society clocks was made. The quartz wall clocks, especially designed for the society, feature the university seal in gold on a glass face overlaying purple velvet. Each is inscribed with the member's name.

Chancellor's Society members have enhanced the annual giving program at ECU by encouraging major contributions and pledges. It was established in September 1979, within the Order of Wright Circle, to recognize major benefactors who have demonstrated a concern for the quality of ECU and its constituencies.

There were 78 charter members of the Chancellor's Society recognized at the charter dinner in October 1980. The society's membership now totals 121.

"The Chancellor's Society Dinner provides the institution a visible means and way of saying 'Thank you' to all those individuals who have made major gifts to the university, foundation, Alumni Association and Medical Foundation," Lemish said.

"We are deeply appreciative to their group and all of those who have made a gift to provide a 'margin of excellence' at ECU."

Craftsmen were on hand to demonstrate basketweaving, chair caning, spinning and natural dye making. The Hemlock Bluff Kicking Cloggers and the Blue Grass Reunion blue grass band entertained.

Council President Frances McLellan led the dedication and Dr. Harold Doster, president of Atlantic Christian College, delivered the dedication address.

The new shelter at "The Homestead" was dedicated in memory of Junior Girl Scout Kimberly Dawn Williams, who died in an accident earlier this year. Her troop members from Bailey presented a plaque to be displayed at the shelter.

The N.C. National Guard of Durham and Louisburg provided traffic management, first aid and security.

Clarification

An article in Wednesday's paper quoted City Council candidate Wallace Woolees as saying he favored increasing the city tax rate. Woolees said today that the Mayor's Advisory Committee, of which he served as chairman, had advocated a tax increase "but that has already been done" by the city and taxpayers "can't stand any further increases." Woolees said the city should look at other revenue sources, but not a tax increase.

Accept Only Emergency Calls

DEAR ABBY: We have new neighbors who do not have a telephone, and I doubt very much if they intend to get one. They have given our telephone number to their friends and relatives, who call frequently at all hours of the day and night, and we have to go next door and call them to the phone.

Abby, we would not mind doing this in cases of emergency, but these neighbors get calls that we know are strictly social and they tie up our line for long periods.

How can we handle this without appearing mean and selfish?

AREA CODE 602

DEAR 602: Ask your phoneless neighbors to please instruct their friends and relatives to call only in case of an emergency. And if you get too many "emergencies," your only option is to change your telephone number — and keep it to yourself. This is neither "mean" nor "selfish." It's protection against being taken advantage of.

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law and her husband celebrated their 49th wedding anniversary last August. Because of my sister-in-law's poor health, her daughter is planning a party to celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next month, which is premature by nearly a whole year!

I am reluctant to accept the invitation because I don't think it's proper to celebrate an occasion that has not yet occurred.

I grew up under the old moral code and still believe in it. Right or wrong?

PUZZLED IN ELMHURST, ILL.

DEAR PUZZLED: Wrong! I think it's more "moral" to be kind and prematurely generous than to go by the book and risk being too late.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I suppose there are some naive readers who still believe that Halloween is a prelude to a religious celebration of All Saints Day.

Those of us with children know that Halloween was started by a group of mothers who are art majors who seized the opportunity to publicly humiliate the rest of us.

All my life I have lived next door to woman who started sewing sequins on her daughter's fairy godmother dress in July. You all know her. She's the one who drags along after her children on trick-or-treat to make sure her son, who is dressed as a dragon, pulls the smoke vent on his nostrils at every house. She's the one with the kids who always step inside so you can guess who they are. With mine, they always stood them under the porch light and asked, "What is it?"

As a woman who cuts eyes out with scissors while the grocery bag is ON the kid's head, it's enough to make you sick.

I always tried to blank the day out of my mind until we heard a knock at the door at dinner. Then the kids would say, "We've got to get into our costumes. Where are they?"

"Why don't you go in what you're wearing from school?" I'd say.

"What am I supposed to be?" they'd ask.

"A wino."

The woman I lived next door to would never put her cat on the kid's head and tell him to go as Davy Crockett. She would never stick a couple of magazines under his arm and tell him to go as a magazine salesman.

She would never dot his face with lipstick and send him out as a contagious child. (The worst idea I ever had!) She would never spray-paint him green and let him be a leftover.

I stopped going to adult masquerade parties years ago when my friends got clever. (One couple dressed as dice came in separate cars and called themselves, "Pair of dice . . . Lost." Will you give me a break!)

The woman next door had a party last year and I broke my own rule. The theme was that each person was to dress up like a movie star. At the door, I was greeted by Dolly Parton. Bo Derek waved hello, Groucho Marx was dancing with Cher and Ronald Reagan was playing the piano.

My hostess looked at me and said, "I'm sorry. Who are you supposed to be?"

How soon they forget Martha Hyer.

Attractive Candidacy

This is a year when only local elections are held. Next year we will see the off-year elections, and then the elections of 1984 — when we choose a president, a governor and fill other major offices — will be upon us.

That is some time way but the speculation as to who will run for what office is already underway.

Published reports have appeared that Marvin Blount Jr. of Greenville may seek the attorney general's post which is currently held by Rufus Edmisten, contingent, of course, upon Edmisten seeking the governorship.

In reply, Blount says he is interested but will have to wait and see.

He suggested he would not run against Edmisten but would be interested in running if Edmisten decides on some other race.

Blount has the credentials for the attorney general post.

He graduated from Wake Forest law school and began practicing law here in 1966. He served as a Superior Court judge for three years, and was the youngest Superior Court judge at that time. He won the respect of those in the legal and law enforcement professions.

Since returning to private law practice he has handled some of the major court cases in Eastern North Carolina.

The 1984 primaries are a long way off and much could happen between now and then. If Blount chooses to run, however, it is clear that he can be a strong candidate.

Tobacco Sales Ending

Tobacco sales are rapidly reaching their conclusion with the Greenville Tobacco Board of Trade announcing that sales will end on the market Monday.

There will be sales of Maryland tobacco Friday, Oct. 30 and Friday, Nov. 6. The bright leaf sales, however, are virtually concluded.

It has been a better than average crop this year for this area and tobacco has generally brought good prices. How well tobacco farmers, beset as they are with ever rising costs, will come out will only be determined as each does his final bookkeeping.

THIS AFTERNOON

Exotica Is Applied

by BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — It is difficult at times to make a connection between the exotic happenings in North Carolina's Research Triangle Institute and our own daily lives.

A recent review of projects under way at that sprawling laboratory and office complex on 180 acres in Research Triangle Park between Raleigh and Durham demonstrates, however, that the work will have direct impact on people.

This month, in New Jersey, 440 volunteers will be wearing special jackets equipped with air monitors; rabbits and mice will be testing birth control devices and sugar substitutes; scientists will be trying to figure out how probable it is that a stray particle of radiation could wipe out the data stored in a computer; and continuing study will seek to answer pollution and health hazard questions about gasoline for your car made from coal.

These are but a mention of the dozens of projects which are going on in the 15 buildings where more than 1,000 people work on current projects totaling more than $47 million annually.

CHEMICALS
The New Jersey experiment has to do with the question of how much of the many chemicals we come into contact with every day — pesticides, household cleaners, and such — actually get into the body.

Participants will wear the jackets with air monitors to keep track of anything they come into contact with. They will keep samples of the water they drink as well. Then, RTI chemists will study samples of the blood, urine, breath and mothers milk from the volunteers.

As Edo Pellizzari describes the project: "We plan to develop a model for predicting how much of the chemicals that a person is exposed to actually enter the body."

Back in North Carolina, there are more than 4,000 laboratory animals housed in specially designed and equipped facilities which keep strict control over air flow, delivery and disposal of materials and such to make certain that germs, bacteria or other material used in experiments don't contaminate an important project. debate over side effects of birth control pills, and problems with other methods currently in use, there is great interest in an experiment with an implant which, for long periods of time, will put out a birth control chemical in the body.

Two of the studies now in progress are testing artificial sweeteners for toxic effects. Much has been said about such sweeteners commonly used by dieters and diabetics. Scientists are seeking to develop a totally non-toxic and non-cancer-causing artificial material which, by the shape of the cells produced chemically, will trigger the proper taste receptor cells in the mouth — instant sweet without calories is the promise.

Need For Philosophers

WASHINGTON — The trouble with federal regulations — one trouble, anyhow — is that we have too many regulators and too few philosophers. Pending regulations having to do with automobile safety and design provide a case in point.

Soon after he took office in January, Mr. Reagan named a task force to look at problems of the American automobile industry. The problems were legion: foreign competition, declining profits, low productivity, severe unemployment, and so on. Sales had dropped to the lowest point in 19 years. What could the government do to help?

The task force came up

with some general answers — foreexample, investment tax credits to increase commercial purchases of new cars — and with some specific proposals also. Specifically, the task force proposed to modify or to rescind a score of regulations with particular impact upon the ailing industry. Since last April the Department of Transportation has been industriously pursuing the course of deregulation. The Center for Auto Safety, an offshoot of the old Ralph Nader plant, has been just as industriously opposing deregulation.

Disputes between the government and the center involve such questions as these: Should bumpers be required to withstand impacts of five miles per hour, or only of two and one-half miles per hour? Should airbags or automatic belts be required first in small cars, or first in large cars? Should the government require that all passenger cars, or only some passenger cars, be required to meet high-altitude emission standards?

Good questions, perhaps, but these are the kind of questions that regulators ask. The threshold questions seem never to be asked at all: What is the proper role of government in this area anyhow? In a free society, what is the role of the marketplace? How stringently should the compulsions of law be imposed upon the voluntary actions of the people? These are questions that philosophers ask, and we too seldom address them.

Let us assume, to get the matter out of the way, that the Commerce Clause authorizes some federal authority over automobile design. In the conservative view, such authority should be exercised only to the extent that it is indispensably necessary to protect the public health and safety. Individuals should be left free to make their own decisions, for good or ill, on their own personal safety — and on their own personal expenditures also. In theory, ours is a voluntary society.

So we get to the pending regulations. The government's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration held hearings this past Thursday on bumper standards. The testimony was mainly in terms of dollars. Five-mile bumpers are heavier than 2.5-mile bumpers; the added weight increases gas consumption and adds to the cost of a car.

To the editor:

Education starts with the body. A healthy, well-working body implies dedication, desire, hard work and discipline. The body desires play just as the mind desires truth and the soul desires good; thus, if we are to succeed, we must always be on the alert. Establish priorities. Keep one hour a day inviolate — a full 60 minutes in which we retired from country, family and practice and there must be one day a week that's our alone. Learn self-esteem, self-acceptance. Know that we can be a hero. It won't be easy. There are people out there waiting to kill us with their demands. They will kill us if we let them. Don't let them. We have a friend. We are our only friend — the only protector of our body and its beauty. Rise to that challenge. Live our own lives.

Success is not something that can be measured or worn as a watch or hung on the wall. It is not the esteem of colleagues, or the admiration of the community. Success is the certain knowledge that we have become ourselves, the persons we were meant to be from all time.

There is no substitute for hard work and discipline. William James said: "Life was meant to be a struggle."

When death comes, we should have had time to fulfill the demands of Pythagoras: Build a house, plant a tree, sire a son and write a book.

Other Editors Say Stop The Ripoff

(The Raleigh Times)

Remember H. Pat Taylor, Jr.?

He's the Wadesboro lawyer who last served the state as part-time lieutenant governor back in 1973.

A lot of water has gone under the dam since then. And a lot of money has gone into the office of lieutenant governor since Taylor operated it with a part-time secretary and a budget of $17,000 a year — including his salary, travel, stamps and the secretary.

Look what's happened to that office since 1973. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green will get approximately $306,000 for this office in 1981-82! This includes Green's salary of $45,636. The remainder will go for his staff — seven fulltime employees, mind you — and travel expenses and stamps.

Yet the job has not changed significantly. It still consists primarily of presiding over the Senate when the legislature is in session.

The sad truth is that the office of lieutenant governor has been developed, largely by Green, into what Taylor described in a Winston-Salem Journal interview as a "political empire."

It is the imperial base from which a lieutenant governor, especially Green, launches his political campaigns for re-election to the same or a higher office. And the taxpayer pays the freight — all the way. Now that the lieutenant governor and governor can both serve eight years instead of four, look for the lieutenant governor's office to keep growing as fast as Pinocchio's nose.

Pumping over $300,000 of tax money a year into a part-time job which cost $17,000 only eight years ago is nothing but a blatant ripoff of the taxpayers. That the legislature, which just enacted a gas tax increase and will soon ask for more revenues, aids and abets in perpetrating this crime against the public is disgraceful.

It's high time for taxpayers to collar their representatives and demand that the General Assembly reassess the office of lieutenant governor and assign a salary and expenses in keeping with the minimal duties performed.

Is Housing Being Sacrificed?

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — In the decade of the 1980s the United States may need close to 2 million new housing units a year to accommodate about 41 million Americans reaching age 30, considered a prime homebuying age.

If present trends continue, that goal will not be reached. The housing industry is in a depression, with new construction starts averaging below 1 million units, foretelling the worst building year since 1946.

It is suffering from inflation too, and the most serious aspect of that is the accompanying high cost and scarcity of mortgage money. A mortgage in many areas of the country now costs 17 percent or more.

At that rate, the cost of a 30-year loan and other expenses of a new median-priced home of $70,000 is about $1,070 a month. It requires an income of $51,360, and that, says the National Association of Home Builders, eliminates from the market 92 percent of American families.

To housing people, the problems of inflation and the need to devise cost-cutting measures, high interest rates and the need to develop more sources of funds, and a building trades jobless rate more than double the rate for the labor force as a whole, are not insurmountable.

But those difficulties will become so, they say, if housing is sacrificed to reindustrialization on the assumption that housing drains investment funds from more productive use in plants and technology.

Many housing industry spokesmen fear that such thinking has already been accepted by the Reagan administration. They claim the assumption is poorly researched, and that it could lead to a housing debacle.

The administration has not yet announced a cohesive housing policy, but William McKenna, chairman of the President's Commission on Housing offers clues to a possible direction.

McKenna indicated in an interview that he believes the foundation for adequate housing is in budget control that lowers inflation and interest rates sufficiently to allow builders to build and families to buy. Rent

Sabotage In The Senate

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The spectacle of the B-1 bomber, whose fate has excited so much impassioned Republican oratory, being killed in subcommittee with the Republican whip of the Senate as chief executioner symbolizes the menace to President Reagan's richly advertised defense buildup.

With the president occupied by AWACS and Cancun, his promises to guarantee national security and encounter the Soviet Union with new bargaining muscle are threatened. The $182 billion defense bill for the new fiscal year is at best delayed until next spring, when a diminished version will emerge. It is victim to delays in the Democratic House, sabotage in the Republican Senate and feeble leadership downtown.

"There is no David Stockman masterminding passage of the defense money bill," one congressional Republican strategist told us. The nearly nine-month delay by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on the new Reagan strategic program retarded already lagging congressional committee work. So, the president's defense program has now become a hostage of his new budget-cutting proposals.

While candidate Reagan gave defense higher priority than the balanced budget, President Reagan has subordinated it not only to his economic program but to extravagant lobbying on the AWACS deal and preparations for the Cancun summit. In the absence of a firm presidential hand, there has been mischief in the Republican Senate.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, chairman of the Senate military appropriations subcommittee, sent to the White House a confidential "hit list" stripping an extra $2.4 billion (on top of Reagan's own reluctant $2 billion cut) from the fiscal 1982 Pentagon budget. What, particularly, angers the White House is that Stevens, the Senate majority whip, wants to kill the B-1 bomber program outright.

Stevens is under pressure from Sen. Mark Hatfield, chairman of the full appropriations committee, to go further and double his "hit list." When the subcommittee bill comes under Hatfield's tender care in full committee he will whack it some more. Result: Reagan would be handed a defense bill pillaged below Jimmy Carter's last defense request.

That poses the threat of personal humiliation for the president. Nevertheless, senior advisers in the White House and Pentagon show few signs of mounting a fight, and time is running out.

The administration's immediate hope, though modest, may not be attainable. Stevens is being asked to get a bill through his subcommittee in the next two weeks, with only gentle pruning. That bill could then be used in negotiations with the anti-defense House to leverage defense spending higher for a new "continuing resolution" (to permit spending in lieu of a defense appropriations bill).

But that strategy has a serious flaw: Ted Stevens. When we asked him why he wants to shoot down the B-1, the most visible element in Reagan's new strategic program, Stevens replied: "I don't know where we're going to get the money to build both the B-1 and Stealth (the futuristic bomber)."

The Stevens "hit list," which he described as simply suggestions for White House study, goes far beyond the B-1. It targets a new nuclear carrier, an attack submarine, air-to-air missiles, the Army's new "infantry fighting vehicles" and assorted aircraft and helicopters.

Reagan's chance of salvation in the House is zero. Still another $5 billion will be cut under the guidance of Rep. Joseph Addabbo of New York, long an anti-defense stalwart as chairman of the House military appropriations subcommittee. For now, Addabbo argues his subcommittee cannot make weapons decisions before Congress has heard serious testimony from the new strategic program.

White House insiders fear Addabbo wants to keep the defense bill hostage until the big domestic money bills are

Strength For Today

FEAR AND APPETITE

Modern man does not need to be told that fear can tear his life apart and destroy it. But he should be reminded that there is another factor which often goes along with fear and is equally ruinous — an appetite for the grosser things of life.

There are many reasons why people develop and cultivate the desire for self-indulgence of this kind. Some of these come out of environment. Others are the result of unstable mental attitudes and emotions. But almost always gross appetite and a gnawing sense of inferiority, anxiety, and insecurity go together.

There can be no rule given for the building up of a strong moral life. But of this we can be sure — if we want to be different persons, we have to begin laying foundations at very deep levels.

The anxiety and insecurity leading to appetite can only be banished when people become aware that their only security can be found in the power and love of a living God. — Elisha Douglass

Truckers Avoid N.C. Stations

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Truckers are using CB radios to escape North Carolina's 13 weighing stations, taking alternate routes not monitored by the state, state officials say.

"If a driver is aware that his truck is overweight, an alternate route can be selected to avoid being weighed," said an operational audit of the Division of Motor Vehicles' weigh station operation. "During our examination... we noted that all of the permanent weigh stations could be bypassed on an alternate route."

The audit, released Wednesday by the State Auditor's Office, said, "Unless alternate routes are monitored, the permanent weigh stations will not be effective in deterring the operation of overweight vehicles."

The state monitors the weight of trucks because heavily loaded trucks damage roadways.

A report issued by the U.S. General Accounting Office says that a five-axle tractor-trailer loaded to the federal weight limit of 80,000 pounds causes as much damage as 9,600 cars weighing 2,000 pounds each, the state audit said.

In 1980, about 5.7 million trucks were weighed in the state, and about 23,000 were found in violation of various state laws, the audit said. During that year, cash collections totaled about $2.4 million and spending about $2.9 million.

The audit questioned whether all counties were getting enough protection for their primary and secondary road systems.

The audit suggested that another permanent weigh station be located on the northern section of Interstate 95.

"A truck entering North Carolina from Virginia on I-95 would not be weighed until the Lumberton Weigh Station in Robeson County," the audit said. "This route feeds traffic into Roanoke Rapids, Rocky Mount, Wilson, Goldsboro and Fayetteville."

Transportation Secretary William R. Roberson Jr. responded by saying the division needs more personnel to monitor alternate routes.

The General Assembly authorized the establishment of permanent weigh stations in 1951, but the five oldest stations are no longer located on major truck routes, the audit said.

The audit suggested that the operation of fixed scales at the five cities — Wilson, Kinston, Hertford, Salisbury and Apex — be discontinued. That would free more personnel to operate portable scales, the audit said.

Portable scales can be carried in a patrol car and used in open, level areas.

The audit also concluded that weigh stations should be kept open for longer periods. At the eight largest stations in 1980, the permanent scales were closed about 20 percent of the 24-hour, five-day operation schedule, the audit said.

Farmers Moving To 'No-Till' Crops

North Carolina farmers set a record in 1981 for the number of acres planted under "no-till" and reduced tillage cultivation practices, according to Coy A. Garrett of Raleigh, state director of the Soil Conservation Service.

Conservation tillage, a relatively new form of cultivation, combines protection of topsoil with cash savings in fuel and manpower, Garrett said. SCS workers promote the practice because it protects soil and conserves moisture.

Garrett said acres committed to the low-tillage practice increased in 1981 by 54 percent over 1980. In 1980, over 286 thousand acres were planted by conservation tillage.

Farm operators like the savings in fuel, manhours, and wear and tear on tractors and other farm equipment.

High Style For Braces

CHICAGO (AP) — Revolutionary fashions can backfire, but Dr. J. Dewitt Fox thinks using good taste in designing braces to treat whiplash will hold off any backlash.

"For the men, there are subtle tones of gray, brown, navy blue and black — and they come to match suits," said Fox, owner of Fox Medical Products in Los Angeles.

"For the ladies there is an array of pastel colors in velvet or the ultimate collar with mink and rhinestones — a breathtaking creation for the opera or cocktail parties."

The braces, which protect the cervical vertebra and are called cervical collars, are used to treat headaches, neck pains and whiplash.

"But some patients told me it also kept them from snoring" by holding the mouth closed, the doctor said Tuesday at his display booth at the American Surgical Trade Association show here.

"I've sold about 2,000 collars in a little more than a year," Fox said. "We have doctors buy them for their wives who snore, or wives buy them for their husbands, but always a mate buys them for a mate, not for themselves. A person who snores never thinks he does, even when he is told he does."

Fox said his patented collars sell for $37.50 and up.

supplies has abated, but probably that is a temporary situation. Work is going ahead on making gasoline and other petroleum products from coal. South Africa has two large production facilities turning out both gasoline and diesel fuel from coal, and it is likely that more such plants will be installed in the future.

The technology is at hand, but little is known about the environmental impacts of such a fuel. RTI specialists are developing the information on that subject.

And, while the effects of a subatomic particle on the semiconductor may sound exotic and remote from your daily routine, it is a problem which may have immediate and direct problem-making results.

Semiconductors are the tiny chips which are the nerve-centers of modern computers and communications systems. They are made by altering the atomic structure to channel or store information. Scientists are finding, now, that a stray radiation particle could invade the chip, alter the atoms, and... oops... there goes the bank account, newspaper column, research project or whatever was in there.

Kilpatrick Col. . . .

On the other hand, heavier bumpers reduce repair costs and also reduce the costs of collision insurance. Who comes out where?

It seems never to occur to the disputants to let automobile buyers decide for themselves. If there is a market for five-mile bumpers, the market will supply it. If buyers prefer the lighter and cheaper 2.5-mile bumpers, why shouldn't they be permitted to have them?

The same considerations apply to airbags and to automatic seat belts. The old rule of the marketplace is a sound rule: You pay your money and you take your choice.

One proposed rule would require that seatbelts be "colorfast," for heaven's sake. What does this have to do with anything? Another proposal would require that speedometers be calibrated in both miles-per-hour and kilometers-per-hour. How does this affect the public health and safety? Still another rule would require an electronic device to indicate low tire pressure. In a voluntary society, shouldn't we be offered this as an option?

On its own initiative, without being ordered to do so, the auto industry in times past has come up with laminated windshields, collapsible steering wheels, padded instrument panels and power brakes. In a competitive market, these amenities were regarded as good business. I raise a philosopher's question: What's wrong with that approach?

passed. There is no chance that Congress will approve Reagan's requested reductions for these funding bills. Supported by anti-defense-minded House liberals of both parties, Addabbo then will use the defense bill to sponge up excess spending voted for domestic programs.

The depth of Reagan's predicament on the defense budget is just beginning to penetrate higher echelons at the White House. But that will not suffice. It will take the president himself to make Congress understand that he meant all those campaign promises to rebuild the nation's security.

Contradiction

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A recent computer analysis contradicts the theory that the Biblical book of Genesis was written by several authors.

Tel Aviv University statistician Haim Shor said on Israel Radio that a computer analysis of the 20,000 words in Genesis showed a distinctly uniform style that had to be written by one person and could not have been duplicated by other authors.

The accepted belief, taught at universities around the world, is that Genesis was written by three different authors around the 6th century B.C.

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Intense, 11th-hour intervention by President Reagan, on top of skillful political maneuvering by his chief of staff, rescued the AWACS arms deal. It wasn't smooth, but it worked.

"The president was given a bum deal by the people who look out for him at the State Department, the Pentagon and the National Security Council," Sen. Roger W. Jepsen, R-Iowa, told a reporter sadly as he reiterated his opposition to the deal.

Eventually, Jepsen came around, and therein lies the tale. Loyalty to the president and attention to the considerable persuasive powers that come with the office triumphed over congressional opposition and the administration's own misuses.

Reagan spoke with almost half the Senate, including more than a dozen in the final days when it became clear that he might actually lose in his first foreign policy showdown on Capitol Hill.

White House chief of staff James A. Baker III put together the strategy and the appointments that won most of the uncommitted and reversed seven Republican opponents in the last two days.

Wednesday's vote was 52-48 for Reagan.

Sen. Sam Nunn, a defense-minded Georgia Democrat who supported Reagan, said: "If we were voting up or down on whether the administration handled this right, it would be 97 to 3 against them, and I would be one of the 97."

Criticism of the administration ranged from ineptitude to needless internal power struggles to undertones of anti-Semitism that confused and irritated several senators.

Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said a businessman told him, "I realize the only reason you oppose the sale is because of your Jewish constituents, but I want you to be objective."

Congressional sources who asked not to be identified said Maj. Gen. Robert Schweitzer, then of the National Security Council, told Republican Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, who is Jewish, that he feared there could be "a backswing" against Israel if the deal were vetoed by Congress.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, asked a group of businessmen lobbying for the sale to leave his office after they referred to their campaign contributions. Grassley also was angered when White House lobbyist Powell Moore mentioned the senator's desire to see an associate appointed U.S. attorney in Iowa.

Jepsen said he hoped "one of the positive things that will result from this will be an enhanced understanding of the early coordination on behalf of the administration when consent is necessary."

Said one administration official involved in the lobbying: "There was pulling and tugging for a while between State, on the one hand, and the National Security Council on the other and then you had Defense in there, too. We didn't have clear coordination in there for a period of several weeks."

The sale of Airborne Warning and Control System planes to Saudi Arabia was drafted last spring. Originally, the administration wanted to sell the Saudis weaponry for F-15 jets. But AWACS were added, representing a victory for Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger over Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., and the opposition began to build.

Coordination of the arms deal with Congress was a long time coming — it was not formally presented until Oct. 1.

Senate Majority leader Howard H. Baker Jr., who led the administration's fight on Capitol Hill, found out about AWACS only when he glanced at the latest briefing books before leaving on a trip to Saudi Arabia early last April.

Senate Democratic leader Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia was not contacted by administration lobbyists until September. He declared against the sale in the last week, interrupting Reagan's gathering momentum.

Brushed aside by the White House were overtures from senators seeking to avoid a confrontation. Two of them, Boschwitz and Democrat John Glenn of Ohio, were to help lead the charge against the sale.

The White House was absorbed with tax legislation and other major domestic issues. While it avoided even low-key lobbying for the Saudi purchase, the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, unions and other groups concerned about Israel's security made major gains on Capitol Hill. By fall, only 13 senators were counted as supporting Reagan, 60 as opposing it.

Finally, Richard V. Allen, the NSC director, was put in charge of briefing members of Congress on technical aspects of the weapons sale. The uphill struggle to gather votes had begun in earnest, but Allen and Haig were sniping at each other.

One of their disagreements was over a visit Allen tried to set up to Saudi Arabia for several senators, including Glenn, who had urged that Americans be put in the AWACS cockpits to protect the sensitive equipment. The Saudis eventually scotched the trip.

Glenn also thought that he, Allen and Saudi Prince Bandar bin Sultan had worked out an agreement to satisfy his security demands, and Bandar promised to report back after conferring with his government. The answer — a flat rejection — came back sooner than expected and through State Department channels.

Some senators suggested that both ideas were the victims of Haig's annoyance with Allen's lead role. Allen's role was reduced, James Baker took command, and Reagan prevailed with an appeal to support the presidency, if not him.

"He makes persuasive arguments based on the fact that we only have one president of the United States at a time," said Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb. "He indicated it is difficult for him to conduct foreign policy with a defeat of this nature."

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said, "If we made a mistake, maybe it was in treating this as something more in the nature of defense or foreign policy, rather than political."

Arts Fundrive Kicks Off New Campaign

The 1981 Arts Fundrive kickoff was held recently in the ECU Gray Gallery on the East Carolina University campus. The ECU Jazz Ensemble provided music while Fundrive volunteers viewed the gallery exhibition prior to attending a solicitation workshop.

Drive chairman G. Henry Leslie made opening remarks and introduced Donald L. Lemish, ECU vice chancellor for institutional advancement and planning. Lemish conducted a solicitation workshop for this year's Arts Fundrive volunteers by outlining fund-raising techniques and Arts Fundrive procedures.

Arts Fundrive volunteers will be taking pledges for 1981-82 and also for 1982-83. Businesses will not be approached again until the spring of 1983.

All contributions will be publicly recognized and donors of $2,000 or more over a two-year period will be presented with a limited edition print that is signed and numbered by artist Donald Sexauer.

Funds realized from the drive will support the Arts Council, and supplement the budgets of the Ayden Theater Workshop, Coastal Carolina Fiber Guild, East Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association, the Green Grass Cloggers, Greenville Boys' Choral Association, the Greenville Choral Society, Greenville Piano Teachers Association and SPEBSQUA Inc.

A Saudi Overture To Egypt's Leader

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Saudi Arabia has made its first public gesture of support for Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, the West German government reported today.

The government said Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Saudi Crown Prince Fahd, at a three-hour meeting Wednesday, agreed that Mubarak "deserves trust and that the rest of the obligations under the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty should be fulfilled."

There was no elaboration on the statement, and Fahd left the West German capital for home without speaking with reporters.

The Saudis have refrained from any public show of support for Mubarak, who came to power following the assassination this month of President Anwar Sadat, the architect of rapprochement with Israel.

Mubarak is expected to try to end Egypt's political isolation from the many Arab governments that ostracized Sadat following his decision to make peace with Israel. And one of the arguments advanced by President Reagan and his advisers for the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia was that it would open the way to Saudi support of the peace treaty.

Vehicle Hits Parked Car

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,000 to the Stutts car and $250 to the Higgs vehicle.

New 'Suspect' Due To Pistol

NEW YORK (AP) — An automatic pistol found near the spot where two policemen were killed last week in a Brink's truck robbery was traced to the Texas hometown of a woman sought for questioning in the holdup, authorities said.

Rockland County District Attorney Kenneth Gribetz said Wednesday that the .380-caliber weapon was purchased in Austin in October 1979.

The FBI is searching for Marilyn Jean Buck, 33, a former Austin resident who allegedly rented apartments in New Jersey and Mount Vernon, N.Y., used as hideouts by the gang involved in the Brink's robbery.

"Marilyn Jean Buck is a former Austin resident," said Greg Rampton, the FBI's agent in charge in Austin. "She is being sought for questioning in the robbery, and she is also a federal fugitive."

Ms. Buck failed to return to a West Virginia prison in 1977 after being furloughed. She was serving a sentence for weapons charges.

FBI spokesman Joseph Valiquette said the FBI in Washington was comparing results of ballistics tests on guns or slugs found at the site of the Brink's robbery in Nanuet, N.Y., and the subsequent roadblock shootout in Nyack. The FBI was also examining other evidence, including items found in raids on what were described as "safehouses" used by the gang.

An armored van was held up Wednesday in the New York City borough of Queens, and the New York Daily News quoted an unidentified FBI spokesman as saying the bureau was examining evidence from the robbery to see whether there was a connection with the Brink's holdup.

Two armed robbers with camouflage jackets took $28,000 and critically wounded a guard outside a bank. Sgt. Tom Fahey of the New York City police department said today there was no apparent link between the robbery Wednesday afternoon and last week's holdup.

Four suspects, including Katherine Boudin, a federal fugitive identified as a member of the Weather Underground, were arrested Oct. 20 at the scene of the Nyack shootout, where Nyack police Sgt. Edward O'Grady and officer Waverly Brown were fatally wounded.

The four suspects also are charged with killing Brinks guard Peter Paige earlier in the day at a $1.6 million robbery. The money was recovered. The three other suspects seized that day are Judith Clark and David Gilbert, also identified as members of the Weather Underground, and Samuel Brown, who has no known political connections.

Cynthia Boston, described as an officer of a terrorist group called the Republic of New Africa, was arrested Tuesday in a Mississippi farmhouse and charged with participating in the Brink's heist.

Her common-law husband, William Johnson, believed by police to be a member of the Black Liberation Army, is thought to have gone to Mississippi with her and is the object of a manhunt, as is Donald Weems, an escapee from a New Jersey prison.

Also arrested Tuesday in connection with the Brink's robbery was Eva Rosahn, who allegedly owned one of the gang's getaway cars and rented a van used in the holdup.

Police Say Card Calls Are Phoney

Greenville Police Chief Glenn Cannon warned area residents today not to give their bank charge-card number and expiration date to anyone calling to check on or "verify" a check allegedly given to an out-of-town business.

The chief issued the warning after a number of people received telephone calls early Wednesday, inquiring about checks allegedly written to businesses in South Carolina.

Cannon, who said many of the persons contacted the Police Department about such calls, said the caller would ask if the person had lost checks or had checks stolen. The caller would then explain that a business in South Carolina was holding a check allegedly signed by the person being called, then would ask for their bank card number and expiration date in order to run a cross-check on the check.

The chief suggested that flim-flam artists can use charge-card numbers and expiration dates to purchase merchandise without having to have the charge card in their possession.

Cannon said that persons receiving such calls should get as much information from the caller as possible, then report the incident to the Police Department.

Festival Plans Village Tour

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival will serve as host for an open house featuring a tour of the "Village of Yesteryear," located at the Pitt County fairgrounds, Nov. 15 from 2-5 p.m.

The village, a creation of the American Legion Post in Greenville, consists of a mule and cow barn built in 1852, a log cabin, a corn bin, chicken house, smoke house and a church.

Old farm implements will also be displayed, including a number of tools used specifically by tobacco farmers in years past.

"Both young and old will enjoy this tour," stated Kay Warren, Tobacco Festival executive director. "This part of the festival program is a must for all of the family."

Members of the festival's board of directors will serve as guides.

Along with the tour of the Village of Yesteryear, an exhibit of antique cars will be at the fairgrounds.

Researchers Can Change Blood Type

NEW YORK (AP) — Researchers who discovered they could change type B blood into the much-needed type O say they're now looking for ways to work the same kind of transformation for another blood type.

Type O, known as the universal donor type because it can be transfused into virtually any patient without ill effects, is sometimes in short supply in hospitals, while type A and type B is sometimes so abundant it is thrown away.

Scientists were able to change type B blood into type O by using an enzyme, called alpha galactosidase, derived from green coffee beans, said Jack Goldstein, head of the laboratory of cell biochemistry at the Lindsley Kimball Research Institute of the New York Blood Center.

Goldstein said Wednesday that researchers will now try to perfect the process and find a way to convert type A to type O.

The ability to change other blood types into the universal donor type would allow blood banks to juggle the supplies on hand to meet any needs, Goldstein said.

"It's been a dream of blood-bankers for a long time to change unused type B and type A blood to type O, which can be given to anybody," he said.

Goldstein said it could take several years before the technique is practical for day-to-day use.

To be practical, the process of converting the blood types must be inexpensive, he said.

Preliminary transfusion tests show no signs of negative reactions in three human volunteers, Goldstein said. He said he was among the volunteers.

Dr. Dennis Donohue, director of the Division of Blood Products for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, called the work "potentially very significant," but said it must be carefully tested to make sure the converted blood can be transfused without reactions.

The enzyme removes the sugar galactose, which is found in type B blood cells but not in type O, Goldstein said.

The only difference between the types of blood is the presence or absence of certain sugars on the surface of red blood cells, he said.

If the wrong type blood is transfused, the body's biological defenses take over to fight what the body recognizes as foreign matter. Such a reaction can be fatal, researchers say.

The volunteers each received an injection of one milliliter of the altered blood marked with radioactive tracers so researchers could monitor them. The units of blood normally used for transfusions are 200 times the amount the volunteers received.

"The cells were physiologically viable," Goldstein said. "They picked up their normal quota of oxygen and released it to the lungs. There was no reaction and no antibody production that we could detect. Everything was normal."

Lawyers Assist Prison Program

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — More than 60 lawyers have signed up as volunteers to help settle complaints by inmates in an experimental program in the Florida prisons, state officials say.

The lawyers, who will be called fact-finders, will hear inmate gripes on anything from rules banning chewing gum to charges of racial discrimination. The experiment begins Jan. 1 in three prisons and will be expanded statewide if it works, officials said Tuesday.

Under the program, if inmates aren't satisfied with an in-house ruling on a complaint, they can ask Secretary of Corrections Louie Wainwright for an outside lawyer to hear the gripe.

FBI And Secret Service Eyed To Fight Fraud In Food Stamps

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is ready to "increase dramatically" its crusade against fraud in the food stamp program, activating FBI and Secret Service agents to bolster the nationwide investigation.

"We do have strong indications that fraud has permeated the food stamp program in distressingly large proportions," Assistant Attorney General D. Lowell Jensen said Wednesday.

Jensen said the entrance of the FBI and Secret Service into the probe will bolster efforts of Agriculture Department and Postal Service investigators, who up to now have had sole responsibility for the anti-fraud effort.

He also said the intensified investigation will target "a number of major metropolitan areas where we believe major fraud in the food stamp program may be occurring." He declined to identify the cities.

"We're dealing roughly with a billion dollars that is being wasted through abuse and fraud," Jensen said in outlining the anti-fraud campaign to the House Government Operations subcommittee on intergovernmental relations and human resources.

William T. Murphy, assistant chief postal inspector for criminal investigations, said his personnel have been hampered by a lack of information, a problem Jensen said should be solved with the addition of the FBI and Secret Service.

"Criminals will engage in activities which minimize their risk and maximize their profits," added Murphy. "The current situation in the food stamp program is that there is very little risk with tremendous profit to be made through illicit activity."

In the past three years, food stamp fraud and abuse have netted 1,200 prosecutions nationwide involving criminal trafficking in food stamps, Jensen said, 799 of them in the last 12 months since the government augmented its enforcement effort.

Jensen said most involve cases where food stamps are obtained illegally by people unconnected with the program. But he also said there have been cases involving embezzlement of food stamps by program employees and counterfeiting of food stamps by criminals groups.

Last week the House voted to enhance the government's anti-fraud arsenal by agreeing to give Agriculture Department food stamp investigators the authority to carry firearms, to make arrests without warrants and other limited police powers. The Senate has not acted on that proposal. "We have found criminals who organize to exploit the food stamp program," Rep. Fred Richmond, D-N.Y., told the panel.

As chairman of the House subcommittee overseeing the multibillion-dollar food stamp program, Richmond has led efforts to eliminate fraud so more benefits can be funneled to its 22 million recipients.

"Finally," he said, "things are happening and the fraudulent are on the defensive for the first time."

Jensen said the Justice Department's Organized Crime Strike Force has prosecuted some food stamp trafficking cases involving organized crime figures, especially in the Midwest. He said, however, that there is no evidence of widespread involvement of organized crime such as the Mafia.

Ford Is Third Automaker To Report Third-Quarter Losses

By STEPHEN JONES
Associated Press Writer
DETROIT (AP) — Ford Motor Co. has become the third U.S. automaker to report a loss for the third quarter of the year, and Chrysler Corp. is in line to become the fourth.

Ford, the No. 2 automaker, announced Wednesday it had lost $335 million from July through September, a loss of $2.78 per share of stock. Ford lost $595 million, or $4.95 per share, in the same period last year.

Chrysler was expected to report a third-quarter loss of $150 million to $200 million today, perhaps pushing the industrywide total loss for the period to more than $1 billion. Domestic automakers lost $1.74 billion in the 1980 third quarter.

Ford officials blamed the company's loss on poor economic conditions and on the traditional and expensive process of retooling factories in the third quarter for production of 1982 cars. "Ford achieved substantial reductions in costs and increased its car market shares in all major regions, but the company continued to be affected adversely by weak economic conditions worldwide," Ford Chairman Philip Caldwell and President Donald Petersen said in a statement.

The third-quarter results ended Ford's brief return to profits. Ford reported a narrow profit of $60 million in the second quarter of the year, following six consecutive quarters of losses.

"I don't see them as having cash problems," said David Healy, auto analyst for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York. "But if losses like this continue for any length of time, they're going to have to think about making some additional cuts, closing plants and cutting employment."

"I think they'll have a good-sized loss in the fourth quarter too, though not as big as this one," he added.

General Motors Corp. reported last week that it lost $468 million in the third quarter, and American Motors Corp. reported a $16.8 million third-quarter loss earlier this month.

Analysts had predicted Ford would lose around $280 million to $300 million. GM's third-quarter loss was more than twice what analysts expected.

For the first nine months of 1981, Ford has lost $713.8 million, or $5.93 per share, compared with a nine-month loss of $1.23 billion, or $10.20 per share, in the 1980 period.

Once again, profits by Ford's overseas operations were more than offset by the company's losses in the United States and Canada. Ford's subsidiaries outside the United States and Canada earned a pre-tax profit of $67 million for the third quarter.

Ford's U.S. operations lost $476 million before taxes in the third quarter while Ford of Canada lost another $81 million before taxes.

Caldwell and Petersen said Ford must have a reduction in its North American labor costs as well as an overall improvement in business conditions to make its U.S. and Canadian operations profitable.

"We absolutely must overcome our competitive disadvantage in labor costs," they said. "During the forthcoming labor negotiations, the company, the union and our employees will have a unique opportunity to address this objective and influence positively the future of automobile production in this country, with a resulting improvement in job availability and security."

suspicion. The House plan reduces the range to 10.3 percent, close to the figure recommended. But the Senate plan has a range of 13 percent.

And both plans achieved the reductions by consolidating into fewer and larger districts, a method that some lawyers say could endanger the plans in federal court by diluting minority voting strength.

A Washington law firm hired by legislators to offer them advice warned of that danger in a closed meeting Monday, according to some legislators who attended.

The plans do not divide counties, and all keep the 120 House seats and 50 Senate seats. Tradition and a 1968 state constitutional amendment prevent the division of counties in forming legislative districts.

That constitutional amendment is challenged by the NAACP suit, which seeks to have the state turn to single-member districts. Many believe that move would lead to major changes in the makeup of the General Assembly, and few incumbent legislators support it.

In response to the suit, state officials asked the U.S. Justice Department to review the constitutional provision for compliance with the voting rights act. Jim Wallace, deputy attorney general, said the state had requested the ruling in time for today's session. But, he said, the ruling is no longer expected to come by the time the legislature convenes.

In the Senate, opponents said Wednesday that they may try to make a motion to return the latest plan to committee — a move that, if successful, could tie up the reapportionment session for some time.

Much of the Senate opposition has centered around a 150-mile district drawn in the east, running vertically from Sampson County near South Carolina to the Virginia line and including seven counties.

In the House several alternate plans have been circulated. One has been drawn up by Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance, and would reduce the range to 9.9 percent.

The NAACP suit also challenges congressional district lines. But state lawyers plan to defend the congressional district plans passed by legislators in June, and it will not be an issue in the upcoming session.

Poor Management Is Hurting Utilities' New Rate Requests

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's electric utilities must pay for poor management and bad plant performance, recent actions by the state Utilities Commission indicate.

When the commission granted Virginia Electric and Power Co. a 15.7 percent rate increase in North Carolina Tuesday, it said the Richmond-based utility could have received more if it had not had bad company management during the 1970s. The commission said bad management led to poor performance of Vepco's large coal and oil-fired power plants.

Commission officials said the penalty cost Vepco about $8.2 million a year.

Plant performance is also an issue in Carolina Power & Light Co.'s 16.4 percent rate request, currently pending before the commission.

CP&L's Brunswick nuclear plant near Southport has not performed well during the past two summers, adding temporary but large amounts to CP&L bills because of higher fuel costs.

CP&L rates are expected to increase in late December, but even if CP&L got its entire request, its charge to a typical residential customer for 1,000 kilowatt-hours a month would be 6 percent lower than Vepco's.

But commission observers say the issue of plant performance probably will not affect CP&L's request as dramatically as it affected Vepco's. The commission lacks the substantial documentation it had in the Vepco case that led to findings of poor management.

That could change in later CP&L rate proposals. The commission is seeking consultants for a study of CP&L's management of nuclear plants.

But the study will not be finished until late 1982, perhaps not in time for CP&L's next rate proposal, expected next spring.

The commission's Public Staff, which represents consumers in rate increase requests, provided a consultant's study in the Vepco case. The commission also looked at Vepco's own reports that pinpointed bad management practices.

"The evidence clearly establishes that throughout the 1970s, Vepco's management knew or should have known of the deterioration of its (coal and oil) units," the commission said in its 128-page ruling.

Mexico's Scientists Expanding War On Fruit Fly

By RICHARD BOUDREAU
Associated Press Writer
METAPA, Mexico (AP) — Mexican scientists, victors in a four-year battle against the Mediterranean fruit fly, are trying to eliminate the pest from all of North America in a chemical-free campaign using the insect itself.

At a laboratory in this town on the Guatemalan border, 500 million medflies a week are sterilized with zaps of radiation and let loose over Mexico, Guatemala and California to sabotage their species' breeding patterns.

"There is no reason why this pest, which is not native to our part of the world, cannot be driven all the way across the Panama Canal," said Carlos Fredersdorf, 30, who lives and works here at the world's biggest fly farm. He and the 29 other biological warriors are among Mexico's best young agronomists and biologists. Recruited from universities, they are conspicuous around town in T-shirts emblazoned with an oversized fly, emblem of the $17 million "Moscamed" (Spanish for medfly) eradication program financed by the U.S. and Mexican governments.

Their enemy is the destructive little fly that breeds 10 generations a year, slips with ease across vast oceans and lays eggs under the skin of about 200 kinds of produce that eventually wither and die.

It has raised havoc with California farmers who are spraying the pesticide malathion to try to eliminate it. The medfly is a major threat to the state's multi-billion dollar fruit crop.

Originally from Africa, the medfly reached Central America in 1955 and spread through the coffee belt there, living off the coffee bean's fruity skin. Because the pest did not destroy the bean — or either of the region's other money crops, cotton and bananas — governments ignored it.

But when the medfly infested Mexico's southern Chiapas state in 1977, it threatened a $1.5 billion fruit industry to the north. Three years of aerial spraying with malathion stopped the advance, and a continuing mop-up operation with sterile flies has virtually eliminated it.

All 103 fertile flies trapped in Mexico this year were within a few miles of heavily infested Guatemala, and none has turned up since

Aug. 2. Patrick Patton, the 29-year-old coordinator of Mexico's medfly program, said the "sterile fly technique" works only if an infestation is so low that the laboratory-bred flies can overwhelm their wild cousins by 100 or more to 1.

"We were sending 122 million sterile flies a week to California, but the infestation there was just too high," Patton said. The shipments stopped in July, with the start of aerial spraying in California, and are expected to resume when the fertile population there is low enough, he added.

The Mexican government's decision to spray here met some public opposition, but nothing like the outcry in California, where malathion still is raining on densely populated areas infested by the medfly. The aerial pesticide campaign has about two weeks left to run.

"When the pest invaded Mexico, we had to attack and there was no time to inform the public," said fly lab director Arturo Schwarz. "Now we have a campaign to thank the people of Chiapas, on behalf of the whole public, for their cooperation in stopping the medfly."

One Mexican study said the spraying here, which ended last year, was unrelated to coffee crop damage in the area. Another study found no ill effect on locally grown food, but the U.S. Agriculture Department called the sampling inadequate.

In Central America, where the fly is out of control, the human obstacles are greater. Patton is plotting a military-like offensive down the 1,000-mile-long isthmus that he says could take 10 years.

Leading Energy Producers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top three producers of energy during 1980 were the United States, the Soviet Union and Saudi Arabia, according to an Energy Department report.

The report, issued Wednesday by the department's Energy Information Administration, said U.S. energy production totaled 64.8 quadrillion British thermal units, compared to 54.5 quadrillion Btu for the Soviet Union.

Saudi Arabia, whose production included only crude oil and other natural products, produced 22.1 quadrillion Btu. China was fourth in production, with 20.6 quadrillion Btu.

The report also said North America led the world in consumption of crude oil, using 33 percent of the world total, and natural gas, using 44 percent, in 1979, the latest year for which figures were available.

Charged In The Wrong State

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Christopher Legear's trial on charges of tossing a woman off a bridge to her death had just gotten under way when officials discovered he had been charged in the wrong state.

A survey of the border between Nebraska and Iowa, conducted at the request of the Douglas County deputy attorney, showed the killing occurred in Iowa — not Nebraska, authorities learned Monday.

Freager discussed the purpose, objectives and scope of the city schools compensatory programs. Reports from the individual schools PACs were given.

Food Fight Turned Into A Riot

MURFREESBORO, N.C. (AP)—Six-hundred students flinging turkey, mashed potatoes and chairs in a college cafeteria turned a food fight into a riot until police broke it up with nine arrests and the mayor declared a state of emergency.

"It was funny for a while, but it got too funny," Mayor W.W. Hill said Wednesday night after declaring an emergency in the northeastern North Carolina town of 3,500 people and banning alcohol sales for 12 hours.

"We're a little liberal in this college town — we bend a little," Hill said. "But when the buck has to be stopped, we stop it."

Estimates of damage to the Chowan College cafeteria ranged from $2,000 to $3,000, officials said.

"Food was all over the ceiling," said town police Officer Tommy Gee, who arrived soon after the worst of the rioting. "The floor was such a mess you couldn't walk on it. It was a total wreck."

Police Chief Robert Harris said he and three officers went into the cafeteria and found "students just screaming and hollering, throwing food and trays, breaking up furniture — they broke the door open, too."

Some of the doors were broken down by panicked students after a college official tried to calm the crowd by locking the exits.

Harris said nine students were charged with inciting to riot. They were held on $2,000 bond and scheduled for court appearances Tuesday. More arrests were expected, police said.

No serious injuries were reported.

"I was in the cafeteria when it happened," said infirmary night nurse Marie Elliot. "I haven't seen any injuries. The biggest thing I saw was somebody got hit in the back with an apple and got a pretty good bruise."

"Food was flying everywhere, and dishes and trays," said Darryl Bryant, a student from Woodland. "I got hit in the right eye with an apple and swung around to get out of the way and then got hit in the left eye with a plate."

Students said the melee began Wednesday afternoon at a local tavern where students were taking advantage of reduced beer prices. Witnesses said someone stood up and announced plans for a food fight later at the Halloween banquet, which was held in the cafeteria.

The cafeteria at the school, which has 1,100 students, was decorated with crepe paper for the occasion and a special meal of turkey, yams and mashed potatoes was being served. John Odom of Wilmington, a student, said the fight started when one student stood up and yelled "Food fight!" Another stood up with a roll in his hand and threw it, he said.

"I never saw anything like this except one time before, and that was in the movie

"Animal House," Odom said, referring to a film about a college fraternity filled with pranksters.

After the fight began, Odom said, dozens of students tried to escape but found the double steel doors locked.

Many students panicked and some crouched in corners and under tables, he said, before the some of the doors were broken down.

"I locked the doors because I thought when they realized the doors were closed they would stop," said assistant cafeteria manager Larry Lassiter. "But it got worse, so I opened the doors."

Iranian Woman Speaks Out For Motherhood

By VICTORIA GRAHAM Associated Press Writer PEKING (AP) — Cloaked in black from head to foot, an Iranian woman lawmaker today denounced birth control and day care in a speech to an Asian population conference.

Maryam Behrouzi, a member of the Islamic Consultative Assembly, extolled motherhood and asked: "Should we prevent the growth of population or should we stand against the superpowers who pretend to support human rights while they oppress human beings and human society?"

Sixteen of the 18 nations represented at the Asian Parliamentary Conference on Population and Development called for increased birth control. Only Iran and war-ravaged Cambodia spoke against it.

Wearing the traditional enveloping black chador, Mrs. Behrouzi said before Iran's Islamic revolution, the royal government's policy called for "prevention of the reproduction of people" through sterilization and abortion, "products of the West."

The mission of women in Islam, she said, is to "nourish children who will take the world toward completion and hold back the humanity of the 20th century from deviation."

"People of Asia, Moslems and non-Moslems awake, the earth devouring imperialists have no goal other than to attack humanity," she continued. "The only way to save humanity is to seek shelter in the precepts of Islam."

The "greatest treason against women is to separate their warm embrace as a secure place for children and their laps for the building of a valuable people," Mrs. Behrouzi said.

She said nursery schools, kindergartens and day care centers build "machine-like people who later with the stroke of a pen endanger the lives of millions of people, destroying them and taking into account only their own economic interests."

Today, she said, "in the logic of Islam, population is not the main issue, rather He and the value of population is... Society needs a belief in a divine school of thought and action."

"The basic roots of the family are mothers, Islam knows a mother to be half the fabric of society and a model for cultural and ethical growth of society."

Since the revolution, she added, the new regime has eliminated 114,000 prostitutes "who were the products of the disgraceful, satanic domination of America and lived at the highest level of wretchedness." She did not say how this was done.

Three Collisions In City Wednesday

An estimated $12,725 property damage resulted from three collisions investigated by Greenville Police Wednesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:20 p.m. collision at the intersection of Heath Street and Greene Springs Park Road involving a car driven by Schweitzer Daniel Seymour of College Court Trailer Park, and parked cars owned by Joseph Williams of Route 2, Beaufort, and Joseph Byrd Jr. of Athens, Ga.

Police, who said investigation of the mishap was continuing, set damage at $4,000 to the Seymour car, $5,000 to the Williams vehicle and $100 to the Byrd auto.

Seymour was injured in the collision and admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment, investigators noted.

Cars driven by Julius Lee Jones of Route 6, Greenville, Tommy Leeroy Harrell of Route 4, Greenville, and Glenda Beth Stancill of Route 6, Greenville, collided about 7:45 a.m. on Greene Street, 61 feet south of the Mumford Road intersection.

Police, who charged Jones with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $150 to the Jones car, $400 to the Harrell car and $1,500 to the Stancill auto.

Cars driven by Denise Sutton Dennis of Bethel, and John Harrison Brown of 315 Circle Drive collided about 8:30 p.m. on 10th Street, 155 feet west of the Greenville Boulevard intersection, causing an estimated $175 damage to the Dennis car and $500 damage to the Brown vehicle.

Police reported Brown was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident in connection with the mishap.

Sub's Delivery Is Years Late

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first of a fleet of Trident missile-firing submarines has been delivered to the Navy by the General Dynamic Corp. Electric Boat Division, 2½ years behind schedule.

The 18,700 ton Ohio, equipped to fire 24 missiles with multiple warheads, has been delayed by a series of problems, including faulty welds and substandard steel, according to past Navy complaints.

The $1.2 billion submarine, delivered to the Navy Wednesday, will be commissioned Nov. 11 at Electric Boat's shipyard at Groton, Conn.

The contract for the Ohio, awarded in 1974, had called for delivery in April 1979.

The Navy has eight more Trident subs under construction at the Electric Boat yards. A ninth was authorized by Congress last year, but a contract has not been awarded

Zany Laws Still Exist

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Pants with hip pockets break an old South Carolina law designed to keep you from carrying a concealed pint bottle of liquor. In North Carolina, the law says you can't plow a cotton field with an elephant.

University of South Carolina law professor Randall Bridwell collects legal oddities, and has found quite a few zany ordinances in his search for laws that have failed to die.

In Nebraska, anybody who works where liquor is sold must wear clothing that weighs at least 3 pounds, 2 ounces.

In Indiana, it's illegal "to lead a young lady astray" while teaching her to rollerskate.

In Helena, Mont., it's against the law to "indulge in unrestrained giggling" on the streets.

A Maine law prohibits anyone from stepping out of an airplane in flight, except in an emergency.

Other laws aren't quite as ridiculous.

In Waterloo, Neb., barbers are forbidden to eat onions between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Bridwell says most laws like these would die rapid deaths if anybody were ever arrested for breaking them.

"Everything depends on the enforcement of them," he says. "So if they're never enforced or prosecuted, they're harmless."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost ground today in the face of new signs of a slumping economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 3.14 to 834.47 by noon.

Losers held a 7-5 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said some traders were encouraged by the Senate vote late Wednesday in favor of President Reagan's plan to sell AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia.

They also noted strength in the bond market today as fears eased about the prospective impact of the federal government's newest borrowing plans on interest rates.

But the stock market also had to contend with news of a 2.7 percent drop in the index of leading economic indicators last month, the biggest decline in 17 months, and a 1.9 percent third quarter drop in the annual productivity rate of American business, the largest decline in 3 1/2 years.

The NYSE's composite index dropped 15 to 69.19. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.63 at 306.55.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 17.88 million shares at noon, against 20.99 million at the same point Wednesday.

N.C. Jobless Impact Varies

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The September unemployment rate rose in 17 North Carolina counties and fell in 77 counties, the Employment Security Commission said Wednesday.

Six North Carolina counties had the same unemployment rate in September as in August, the ESC said.

The statewide unemployment rate for September was 5.4 percent, down from 5.7 percent in August.

The national unadjusted rate for September was 7.3 percent, up slightly from 7.2 percent unemployment nationwide in August.

The highest unemployment rates in the state in September were in Cherokee and Davie counties. Cherokee was highest at 12.8 percent and Davie County's unemployment was 12 percent.

Allegheny County had the lowest rate, at 2 percent.

The rate was down in six of seven of the state's largest geographical areas.

The rates declined from 4.3 percent to 4 percent in the Raleigh-Durham area, from 8.7 percent to 8.3 percent in the Fayetteville area; from 7 percent to 6.6 percent in Wilmington; from 7.8 percent to 6.1 percent in Burlington; from 5.6 percent to 5.5 percent in the Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point area and from 5.4 percent to 5.3 percent in Asheville.

Unemployment was unchanged in the Charlotte-Gastonia area at 4.7 percent.

Dodgers Top Yankees For Series Title

NEW YORK (AP) — So much for waiting until next year.

Once, when they lived in Brooklyn, that was a way of life for a team called the Dodgers. Wait till next year. Things will be better then.

It took them seven visits to the World Series before they won one. And they had lost their last three bids for baseball's world championship. Frustration was being a Dodger fan and always waiting for next year.

Well, now 25 other major league clubs will do the waiting. Things have gotten better in a hurry for these Dodgers from Los Angeles who found happiness in a house of horrors called Yankee Stadium on a chilly evening in October.

They are the final survivors of baseball's longest, most frustrating season, a year fragmented by a bitter seven-week player strike that created a new tier of playoffs and kept the games going almost until Halloween.

They are world champions, and next year is here at last.

"This is heaven," said Pedro Guerrero, one of three Dodger heroes who shared the most valuable player honors in the 1981 World Series.

It's a cinch he's the first guy to say that about the South Bronx. But Yankee Stadium looked like Cloud Nine to all the Dodgers Wednesday night as they mugged the Yankees 9-2. The game wasn't as close as the final score indicated.

Guerrero drove in five runs with a single, triple and home run. He shared the MVP award with courageous Ron Cey, who drilled two hits, one of them driving in the go-ahead run, and Steve Yeager, who had another vital RBI-single.

The Dodgers won this World Series the same way they won everything else in this postseason — by bouncing off the deck, and coming from behind. They lost the first two games of the divisional playoffs to Houston and recovered with three straight victories at home. Then they trailed Montreal 2-1 in the League Championship Series but won the last two games in Canada to clinch the pennant.

If they were emotionally drained when they got to the World Series against the rested Yankees, they had an excuse. New York won the first two games and someone suggested to Tommy Lasorda, the good humor man who manages the Dodgers, that now he had the Yankees just where he wanted them.

The words turned out to be prophetic.

"That was the turning point of the Series," said Yeager. "Losing those first two games...that's the only way we can play. I can't explain it, but that's it."

Lasorda told his team that they could turn the Series around and that's exactly what they did.

"I told them they hadn't been blown out," he said. "All we needed was a couple of breaks and we would have won those first two games."

That would have been uncharacteristic for this comeback crew though. Being behind was more comfortable for them.

Rookie Fernando Valenzuela struggled to a 5-4 victory in Game Three and then the Dodgers won an almost comical 8-7 endurance test in Game Four. When Guerrero and Yeager tagged consecutive seventh-inning home runs, Los Angeles took the pivotal fifth game 2-1. It was then that Steve Garvey, who finished the Series with 10 hits, decided something special was going on.

"The home runs on Sunday started to tell us that this was our year," he said.

But the Yankees were still smug about the situation. They had lost three games in California, each of them by a single run and each of which they could very easily have won. Now the Series was switching to New York, where the Dodgers seemed to be suffering from a terminal Yankee Stadium syndrome. Pinstripe panic had beaten Los Angeles six straight times in the Stadium.

What's more, owner George Steinbrenner had defended his team's honor in an elevator fight and emerged with his hand in a cast. Surely that would fire up the troops for the final Series push.

"That's nonsense," snorted Cey. "The field is where it's done, not some elevator."

"We had beaten them three times in California," said Yeager. "We knew we could beat those guys. We had to beat them, not the stadium, not the fans."

So, the Dodgers went about doing exactly that.

Willie Randolph got the Yankees in front with a third-inning home run against winning pitcher Burt Hooton. But Los Angeles tied the score in the fourth on singles by Dusty Baker, Rick Monday and Yeager.

Then, in the bottom of the fourth, the game turned. With two out and a runner on second, Lasorda forced Yankee Manager Bob Lemon's hand by walking Larry Milbourne to bring up starting pitcher

Tommy John. Lemon went for pinch hitter Bobby Murcer. It was a bold move but it backfired. Murcer flied out, and in the next two innings the Yankee bullpen disposed of the game.

John wasn't thrilled with the decision.

"I wanted to pitch," he said. "I had just completed 13 innings against this club and held them to one run. It wasn't as if I had gotten hit hard. Lem had a decision to make and he made it."

"I just wanted to get some runs," said Lemon. "I didn't figure it was a gamble. He's my best pinch hitter. I wanted a base hit and I didn't get it so I wasn't very smart."

George Frazier relieved and the Dodgers jumped on him in a hurry. Davey Lopes singled and moved up on a sacrifice. With two out, Cey hit a seeing-eye single up the middle, scoring Lopes with the go-ahead run. After Dusty Baker also singled, Guerrero tripled to make it 4-1 and eventually make Frazier the only three-time loser ever in a six-game series.

An inning later, Los Angeles was back for more, this time against Ron Davis and Rick Reuschel. Davis walked Hooton and Lopes with one out. Bill Russell singled for one run and after Reuschel relieved, the Dodgers pulled a double steal. Garvey was then walked intentionally, loading the bases.

Derrel Thomas batted for Cey, who was beginning to feel some lightheadedness, an aftermath of the frightening beating he suffered Sunday against Goose Gossage. Thomas forced Russell on a fielder's choice but an error by Graig Nettles reloaded the bases. Guerrero singled to center for two more runs and an 8-1 LA lead.

After that, it was just a matter of time. The Yankees nicked Hooton for a run in the bottom of the sixth with reliever Steve Howe pitching out of the jam. Then Guerrero smashed his second Series homer in the eighth.

A little while later, it was over. The Dodgers had captured their first world championship since 1965 and had done it with an exact reversal of the fate they suffered against the Yankees in 1978, when they won the first two games at home only to lose the next four to New York.

The year before that, the Yankees also had beaten LA in six games. Lasorda couldn't help but express some special

Emory Disappointed Pirates Let Chances Slip By Against Miami

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

All year long, East Carolina football coach Ed Emory has had some games classified as "musts" and others as "upset opportunities."

Last weekend against the University of Miami, the Pirates trailed only 17-6 going into the final quarter, only to lose 31-6. Emory feels that the Pirates had the opportunity for that upset, and he's very disappointed that it didn't come about.

"We did learn some things," he said of the loss. "For instance, the defense now knows how much it has improved over the season. They have confidence in themselves. But we're disappointed in not winning. If we had had a few things happen on offense, we could have won."

Emory pointed out that the defense gave the Pirates excellent field position, especially in the third period of the game, when East Carolina had several scoring opportunities, but got only one field goal out of the situations. "You can't do that and have a chance to beat the great teams," the coach said.

Emory praised the play of linebacker Mike Grant and end Jody Schulz, who had standout games. "Our defensive line played well too. Our nose guard situation is getting better every week, and Glen Morris probably is playing the best of his career right now."

Emory said he was a little concerned about the secondary, which allowed 14 pass completions by Miami. "Maybe we're just trying to make too many things happen," he said. "But still, when you hold a passing team like Miami to just 14 completions, it's not that bad."

Emory again defended his decision to accept a holding penalty that made it third and 18 instead of fourth and three early in the game. On the following play, quarterback Jim Kelly completed a long pass for the first down.

"We went into a special defense and it involved Schulz playing an area he had only practiced three times. I guess we'd do it a little different if we had it to do over, but we'd still take the penalty. They had the wind to their backs, and we wanted them as far back as we could get them to punt. Some folks feel that you should never give a great passer another chance. Maybe so, but we felt we could hold them."

The coach also noted that the chance in the holding rules has really helped the passing game — and passing teams in general. "When you're backing up, you're allowed a certain amount of holding to protect the passer. So they get by with more holding than a rushing team can get away with. It's helped passing, and that was the purpose of putting the rule in, but it's hard to turn techniques on and off, depending on whether you're passing or running."

Emory expressed great disappointment in the offense, but felt that injuries had something to do with it. "We didn't have Harold Blue (out with an ankle injury). He did go in for a couple of plays, but never carried the ball, and just wasn't able to go. He's our best blocking back and our best runner right now. He's still a question mark for this week."

The coach noted that the Pirates called 23 passes in the game, but got off only 11 of them. "A couple of them did turn into big gainers, but generally there were breakdowns at the flanks — where the backs and ends have to block."

"I'm also disappointed in the final score. We had such good field position in the third quarter, and then, they realized that we weren't going to move the ball and got bolder going for those two long passes for touchdowns. I think if we'd been able to move the ball, they might not have been that bold."

East Carolina travels to West Virginia on Saturday to meet the Mountaineers in a 1:30 p.m. game.

Rose Closes Out Home Slate Vs. Hunt

Running Back Jeff Ferrell

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's Rampants close out their home football schedule Friday night, and hope to make the playoffs in the process.

The Rampants will entertain Wilson Hunt at 7:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium, seeking their eighth win in nine games.

A victory in either of its last two games would sew up one of the two Big East spots in the Division I playoffs. Such a split would give Rose a 5-2 league mark, and although they could end up in as much as a four-way tie for the top, should all the games break just right, Rose would still have one of the two best overall records, the criteria for breaking ties between more than two teams.

The Rampants are currently 7-1 overall with a 4-1 Big East record following last Saturday's 30-23 victory over Wilson Fike. Fike, which still has an outside chance of being of the team that could share the title, is now 4-4 overall and 3-2 in the league.

getting a punt blocked. Plus, we didn't get a single point on conversions."

Vincent said all of these areas of the kicking game having broken down at once worried him. "It is especially worrisome since we worked real hard on the kicking game during the week," he said.

However, right now he plans no changes in the games.

"I was very pleased with our overall play, however. Chris (McLawn) and Barry (Smith) had another good night and Roderick Harrell ran real well." Smith hit on eight of 12 passes for 131 yards, hitting McLawn on five of those for 108 yards. Harrell ran for 81 yards on 22 carries.

"In the second half, our defense was very, very strong. (Outside linebackers) Freddie Cherry and Reggie Clark had outstanding games. William Rhoades and Mike Spell (linemen) both put a lot of pressure on their quarterback.

"Actually, Spell has been playing very, very well recently," Vincent pointed out.

The 23 points, despite the fact that 14 of them came as a result of the blocked punt and kickoff return, was the most allowed by the Rampants in a winning contest. Only Rocky Mount, which beat Rose 26-6, scored more points overall.

Rose's offense is still led, on the ground, by Harrell, who has rushed for 570 yards on 141 carries. Fullback Roger Williams has picked up 231 yards on 52 carries, while slotback Donnell Lee has 146 on 19 lugs.

Overall, Rose has rushed for 1,212 yards, while holding opponents to 999.

Through the air, Smith has taken command, hitting 32 of 72 tries for 701 yards and six touchdowns. He's had five interceptions.

Overall, Rose has thrown for 988 yards, while its foes have thrown for 709.

The leading receiver, of course, is McLawn, with 23 catches for 520 yards and five touchdowns. He's also the leading scorer, having picked up two more touchdowns running and one on a punt return. He's also got one two-point conversion pass for a total of 50 points, more than twice that of any other Rampant.

The regular season will come to an end next weekend, with Rose traveling to Elizabeth City to face Northeastern High School. Hunt will close out the year by hosting Northern Nash.

playoffs, the Number One team in the conference will face the Cap-8 runner-up. Currently, three teams are tied for that spot: Garner, Sanderson and Enloe. Garner, in first place, still must face Garner and Sanderson, and has beaten Enloe. Enloe beat Garner and lost to Sanderson, while Garner beat Sanderson — leaving the league still in flux as far as the playoffs are concerned.

The Big East runner-up will meet the Mideastern champ, and currently Jacksonville is in the driver's seat there. A victory by the Cardinals over New Bern this week would wrap it up for them.

In the other Eastern playoffs, the Mid-South winner, currently Seven-First meets the Cap-8 winner in the same bracket as the Big East winner, while the Southeastern winner — currently top-ranked Terry Sanford — meets the Mideastern runner-up (probably New Hanover or New Bern) in the same bracket with the Big East runner-up.

As far as home field advantage is concerned, the Big East winner could host the first, second and third games — should it continue to play, while the Big East runner-up, should it go the limit, would not play at home at all.

Davis Switches Ends, But Still Very Successful

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

After a year of moving forward, the 1981 football season has become one of going backward for senior defensive end Mike Davis.

Whoa, there! It's not what it seems.

Last year, Davis played the "rush end" position on the Pirate defense, but this year, he's switched over to the drop end position and instead of being the guy who goes into the opponent's backfield most of the time, he's dropping back to protect against the pass, or guarding the corner against the rush.

This past weekend against the University of Miami, Davis had plenty of work to do, as he continues as the team's fourth leading tackler with 68 on the year.

The 5-10, 200-pounder from Rocky Mount transferred from Shaw after his freshman season, and earned his first starting job as a junior. He's been out there ever since.

"Miami was the biggest team we've played as far as size is concerned," Davis said of the game last week. "They're not as fast as some we've gone up against, however."

This week's opponent, West Virginia, appears to be smaller than the Hurricanes, but Davis feels that the Mountaineers are faster. "Their quarterback (Oliver Luck) is better than

(Jim) Kelly. Luck is very good."

Because of this, the Pirates have been working harder on their pass rush this week, and expects it to be a big part of their defense. "If our line can put some pressure on them, it makes my job easier, forcing them to pass quickly. That way the quarterback doesn't have time to look for several receivers," Davis said.

Luck likes to throw to his tight end Mark Raugh, who, prior to last week's game against top-ranked Penn State, was tied with wide receiver Rich Hollins for the most catches with 24. Raugh was second in yardage with 245 yards and one touchdown.

Raugh is the man Davis will be facing most of the time.

Davis, too, has to worry about the end sweeps. He has to decide, with the clues given him by the receivers and quarterbacks whether to protect against the run or to move to the ball. "Sometimes, we follow an assignment by going with the receiver anyway," he said. But, when the time comes to go after a ball carrier, he knows what to do.

Davis rates North Carolina's Kelvin Bryant as the quickest man he's had to defense against, but surprising picks Western Carolina's Melvin Dorsey as the strongest runner he's met.

While Davis and the defense has been getting the job done in most instances for the Pirates, the lack of offensive punch has hurt a number of times. Is this weighing heavily on the defense?

"I think in the early part of the season it bothered us some, to give the ball to the offense in good field position and not get anything from it. But in the last few weeks, we've put it behind us. We're just trying to play the best defense we can to hold it close and give the offense a chance to get something going. Maybe if they get the ball often enough, they'll be able to get it going."

And Davis doesn't think the Pirates are down on themselves. "Sure, we've had some people to quit, but the rest of us have adjusted to that, and are going on. Morale is down some, I guess, but I think that's more to do with having lost to Miami than anything else. It's just the normal let-down right now."

Davis and his fellow defenders will be trying to get the ball to the offense in good field position again this week — as East Carolina travels to Morgantown, W. Va., to face the Mountaineers of the University of West Virginia.

Looking ahead to the

This week's game with Hunt marks the inauguration of the "Little Tobacco Bowl" competition. The contest will be a part of the Tobacco Festival, and the winner will receive a trophy commemorating the victory.

Vincent expects a tough game from the Warriors, despite their 3-5 overall record and 2-3 Big East record.

Hunt's lone non-conference victory came over Southern Nash, 13-12, while it lost to C.B. Aycock, 26-7 and Southwest Edgecombe, 12-6 — all 3-A teams. Aycock, it should be pointed out is unbeaten and ranked in the Top Ten by the AP, while Southwest has lost only twice and is unbeaten in its conference.

Inside the lead, Hunt beat Kinston, 6-0, then lost to Northeastern, 7-0, Fike, 27-12, and Rocky Mount, 30-6, before downing Beddingfield last weekend, 18-12.

"They run a lot of things on offense," Vincent said. "Last week, they ran plays out of the wishbone, the I, the shotgun, and the slot. While they've played pretty good defensively throughout the year, they've been erratic on offense. I don't know if their switches on offense are because of that, or the reason for it."

Hunt's offense is paced by quarterback Christy Rodri, who "throws the ball well," according to Vincent. For most of the way, the Warriors have relied on the pass.

"Their best running back got hurt early in the year, but I understand that he played a little against Beddingfield, so he'll probably be ready for us," Vincent said.

On defense, the Warriors line up in a 5-3 alignment, and Vincent points out that this will be the first time the Rampants have faced it. "Their nose guard, Johnny Coleman, is very good. They blitz a lot, so I think we're going to have to play very, very hard to beat them."

"It would be nice to get a lot of support from Greenville for this, our last home game," Vincent said. "It would really fire the team up, I think."

To The Editor:

A new conference is in the making if a few dreamers become doers. East Carolina needs a conference. The school is too weak alone.

East Carolina should take action to form a conference and not sit around hoping one will come to them.

Suppose ECU joined with South Carolina, Virginia Tech, West Virginia, Miami of Florida, Florida State, Penn State and Pittsburgh. These eight schools are all independent.

East Carolina has played or will play South Carolina, Florida State, Miami and West Virginia.

Three things must happen before a conference is formed.

First, William Friday must let ECU become a fifth power in this state. Ever since ECU became competitive with ACC teams a wave of fear and awe has passed through his committee. To stop ECU's sports program, they brought in Mr. Brewer as a growth suppressant and got rid of Pat Dye and hired Ed Emory. The past year has taken the school, the team, and the fans from honorable mention as a football team just one season away from the top twenty worst teams.

Second, ECU must book here and there games with the above mentioned schools.

Third, Ed Emory must change his team's image, perhaps a two phase offensive line. Maybe a power I as well as the wishbone would strengthen the team or we should get a new, stronger coach who's willing to gamble on his team, not give up and kick the game away.

Except for N.C. State, the in-state ACC teams believe they have more to lose than gain by playing ECU, but they play teams who face the same situation by playing them. They should be playing ECU.

The dream of a new conference with ECU as a member will cut deeply into the ACC's recruiting as well as the Southeastern Conference. If Dr. Karr would make the attempt, who knows, maybe the school's financial worries will cease as support grows again.

satisfaction about beating New York.

"I never said this before," the Dodger manager said, "but I've always wished that if the good Lord let us ever win the World Series, I hoped it would be against the club that beat us twice. This is the greatest thing that ever happened in my life in baseball."

Moments after the final out, Steinbrenner issued a press release apologizing to the people of New York for the play of the Yankees in the Series and congratulating the Dodgers on their victory. The controversial Yankee owner promised, "We will be at work immediately to prepare for 1982."

Lemon, a more placid man than his occasionally impulsive boss, was asked what changes he anticipated for the Yankees following the Series disappointment.

He thought about it for a moment and then replied, "I don't think we'll make any changes before tomorrow."

That's when next year starts for the Yankees. The Dodgers, who originated the tradition of waiting for it, are enjoying their next year right now.

Lopes Laughs Off Errors After Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — There's been a lot of talk about breaking up that veteran Dodger infield, so the 1981 World Series might have been its last chance. And Davey Lopes knew it.

"They can break us up, they can tear us apart, but they can never take away that ring," said Lopes in the hysterical Los Angeles clubhouse Wednesday night. "All those errors don't mean a thing now, do they?"

Lopes, 35, set a Series record for a second baseman by committing six errors, including one in the sixth and final game, but it didn't prevent the Dodgers from trouncing the New York Yankees, 9-2, to climax another one of their patented comebacks.

The Dodgers had to come from a 2-0 deficit to win the National League West playoffs over Houston, a 2-1 deficit to capture the N.L. Championship over Montreal, and another 2-0 deficit to overcome the Yankees. They did all three.

"I think that was one of the motivating forces," said Lopes, referring to the possibility of change in an infield that's been together a big-league-record nine seasons. "I really don't know (if he'll be around next year). I'll talk about that with Al Campanis (the Dodgers' General Manager) in a month or so."

Meanwhile, the Dodgers are celebrating their first World Series triumph since they beat the Minnesota Twins in 1965.

One member of the veteran Los Angeles infield who has been more concerned with his life than playing baseball recently was less vocal than most of his teammates. But he seemed just as happy.

"Words can't express my feelings," said third baseman Ron Cey, who shared the Series' Most Valuable Player Award with teammates Steve Yeager and Pedro Guerrero. "It's a great honor for us, something we've had in the back of our minds for a lot of years from the beginning of spring training. Our goals have never been lower than that."

Cey was beamed by hard-throwing Yankee reliever Rich Gossage in Game 5 last Sunday and suffered a concussion. But he played five innings Wednesday night before asking to come out.

"I felt okay. If I hadn't, I wouldn't have gone out there," said Cey, who had two hits, including a run-scoring single in the fifth that put the Dodgers ahead to stay. "I was happy I could go out there and confident I could do it. I didn't know for how long."

Cey was removed for a pinch-hitter in the top of the sixth because "I was experiencing light-headedness and dizziness. It started right after I came off the bases (in the fifth)."

Yeager was an unlikely hero. The veteran catcher had only 86 at-bats during the regular season and played as much as he did in the Series only because the Yankees started so many left-handed pitchers.

"Terrific," he screamed when told he was sharing the MVP Award. "This is the best moment of my life. It's been a long time, nine years and four World Series, before winning the big one."

Does Yeager still want to be traded, something he has requested several times in recent years?

"Let's enjoy this happy moment," he said. "I don't want to talk about that right now."

Guerrero was hitless in his first eight Series at-bats, but he closed with a rush. The second-year major leaguer had three hits and drove in five runs Wednesday night.

"I know I wasn't hitting," he said. "(First base coach) Manny (Mota) has been working with me. He talked to me after the first two games and tonight he talked to me for 10 or 15 minutes."

"I was hitting straight up. He told me to stay down and I would see the ball better and that helped me."

"This is one of the big things in my life. When we won the three games in Los Angeles I didn't think we'd lose in New York."

That they didn't, doing the same thing to the Yankees that the Yankees did to them in 1978, losing the first two games, then winning four straight.

"This is the greatest thing that has ever happened to me in baseball," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda, whose first two Dodger teams lost to the Yankees in 1977 and 1978.

Pirate Booters Kick Monarchs

In one of its best performances ever, East Carolina University's soccer team downed Old Dominion yesterday, 3-2.

Mike Swann scored on a breakaway with 2:30 left in the match to give the Pirates the victory.

Old Dominion had taken the initial lead in the first period on a goal by Jae Choll. East Carolina tied it up on Mark Hardy goal, with an assist by Brad Winchell. The first half ended 1-1.

Old Dominion again took the initial lead in the second half, with Choll again hitting with an assist by Petri Manola. But again, East Carolina rallied, as Winchell hit to knot it up.

The contest was really a defensive struggle, as the Pirates took only six shots on goal, while Old Dominion managed just five. ECU goalie Steve Brown recorded six saves, while Monarch goalie Todd Warner had two.

"Without a doubt, this was our best game of the year," Coach Brad Smith said. Old Dominion, while not currently ranked, opened the season as high as fifth in some polls.

East Carolina, with the win, climbs to 6-8-1 on the season, while Old Dominion is now 6-7-4.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday, traveling to Christopher Newport for a 2 p.m. match.

Face Of Happiness

Five Heels Sidelined

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Five starters for the ninth-ranked North Carolina football team, including quarterback Rod Elkins and tailback Tyrone Anthony, did not practice Wednesday because of injuries, the team announced.

Elkins and Anthony, who both were injured in the Tar Heels' loss to South Carolina last week, are listed as doubtful for Saturday's game against Maryland. Elkins is suffering from a sprained ankle and Anthony has a pulled groin muscle.

Listed as questionable are linebacker Darrell Nicholson and defensive tackle Jack Parry. Both have sprained ankles. Defensive back Billy Jackson is definitely out with a sprained ankle.

Linebacker Lee Shaffer, who missed the South Carolina game, did practice and will play Saturday. Offensive tackle Mike Marr, who was having knee problems, also will play.

They Are The Winners

Crowd Deserts Yankees Early

NEW YORK (AP) — The souvenir vendors knew they were in trouble when the Los Angeles Dodgers had an 8-2 lead after six innings, and they were right.

Thousands of New York Yankee fans left after the sixth, and as they streamed by Edward Patterson, he halfheartedly hawked, "Souvenirs. Get them here."

But he had little luck. "If the Yankees win, everything goes quick," Patterson said. "Now they just come out gloomy and downhearted, no interest at all. I made $500 before the game. I'll be lucky to do $100 after the game."

Inside Yankee Stadium, with 2½ innings to go before the Dodgers won the World Series with a 9-2 victory in the sixth game, there were still some diehards.

"Where's your Yankee spirit? Let's get fired up," one man said. "But most felt like the departing fan who said: 'Right, all we need's a touchdown.'"

While most at Yankee Stadium were disappointed, for small pockets of Dodger fans the game was a dream come true.

Ramon and Marie Martin of Miami, Fla., have been Dodger fans since before the team left Brooklyn for Los Angeles in 1957. This was the third time the Martins have made the cross-country trip to watch the Dodgers play the Yankees in the World Series.

"We saw the Dodgers lose in 1977 and '78 but we stayed with them this year and are so proud they won," said Mrs. Martin, who, like her husband, is a native of Cuba.

"We didn't go to Montreal (for the National League Championship Series) because it was too cold. But we were in Houston for the playoffs and since the Series started we have been to New York, to LA and back to New York for every game," she added.

Martin, who speaks little English, sat quietly for the last six outs of the game with the Dodgers ahead 9-2. He became a little impatient when Dodger second baseman Davey Lopes failed to handle a grounder with two outs in the bottom of the ninth.

But Bob Watson flied out to end the game and Martin tipped his Dodger cap, beaming happily.

ABC Wins No Laurels For Series Coverage

By MIKE HARRIS AP Sports Writer

It was a strange World Series.

Few sporting events offer the built-in drama and excitement of the annual fall classic. But, with much of the most interesting action taking place off the field, the 1981 Series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Yankees was more like a three-ring circus than a World Series.

There was little classic baseball as the Dodgers came back from a 2-0 deficit to sweep four straight games and win their first championship since 1965.

Nor was ABC's coverage of the 78th World Series a model for the ages.

What we saw on the illuminated box through most of the Series was basic television coverage of the game of baseball, with an overkill of the faces of baseball wives or blustery Yankee owner George Steinbrenner intruding on the action more often than anyone but their mothers would appreciate.

Through the six games, the announcers — either Keith Jackson or Al Michaels handling the play-by-play and Howard Cosell and Jim Palmer doing the color commentary — acquitted themselves with great restraint. And, except for an occasional foray into excess verbiage and overstatement by the verbose Cosell, they were generally knowledgeable and informative.

Palmer, whose regular job is pitching for the Baltimore Orioles, was unexpectedly strong. His comments often gave us a peek at the way ballplayers look at their game, as well as filling in the gaps on strategy moves.

The telecast was replete with solid, if less-than-scintillating, interviews with the various people in the spotlight during the Series. But ABC let us down too often in the technical production.

There were too few pictures showing viewers the reaction of the players, the bench and the managers to the important plays, victories and defeats. And, though we have become spoiled by instant replays, split screens, reverse angles and other camera tricks in virtually every sports broadcast, the ABC production was neither particularly creative nor complete in that area.

There were exceptions, of course.

During the Dodgers' 9-2 clinching victory Wednesday night, the cameras caught in sharp focus the frustration of a pair of Yankees players.

When New York Manager Bob Lemon, in a move that will be second-guessed for years to come, removed starting pitcher Tommy John for a pinch hitter in the fourth inning with the score tied 1-1, John was seen pacing the dugout in obvious dismay. At one point, he leaned back against the wall at an end of the dugout and appeared to mouth the word "unbelievable."

Later, with the Yankees trailing 8-2 and New York runners loading the bases with one out, a replay camera showed us Yankee outfielder Lou Piniella at first base losing a couple of epithets when a line drive out to right failed to score teammate Rick Cerone from third.

The post-game wrapup from the two clubhouses also was done well.

In the midst of the nearly hysterical happiness of the Dodger clubhouse, Bob Uecker elicited a few comments from baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda, the Los Angeles front office braintrust of Peter O'Malley and Al Campanis, and several of the Dodger stars. But the spraying champagne bottles, the bearhugs and the smiles told that story far better than any interview.

ABC then switched to Jim Lampley in the quiet Yankee clubhouse. His brief, businesslike interview with the well-composed Piniella was a beautiful counterpoint to the bedlam at the other end of Yankee Stadium.

Jackson then signed off, giving us one last quick look at the linescore of the final game superimposed on a view of the fast-emptying stadium from the air. There were no replays of exciting moments; no repeat of the moments of excitement after the victory was nailed down or of the wild scene in the Dodger clubhouse.

Those last moments of air time pointed out exactly the reason that this World Series will not be remembered for its television coverage.

Yank Loss Goes Down No Apology For Goose, Reggie As A Thudding Collapse

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — The green grass of Yankee Stadium took on a bluish hue today — Dodger blue — and Yankee pride turned crimson.
It was a bluish of embarrassment for baseball's most successful team, winner of 33 American League championships striving for a 23rd World Series victory.
The Yankees were crushed 9-2 in the sixth and final game Wednesday night by a plucky, never-say-die Los Angeles team that rallied from 0-2 to win four games in a row.

It will go into the record books as one of the sport's most thudding collapses.
What happened?
Were they over-confident? Or were they too tight because of the heavy hand of owner George Steinbrenner hanging over their heads?
Steinbrenner, by his own admission a demanding boss, had continually dropped warnings of a possible housecleaning if the Yankees faltered in pursuit of another championship.

Rumors were planted — if not by Steinbrenner, then someone in the upper echelon — that some of the older players might be headed for free agency or the trading block.
Some of the club's older yet more illustrious players were given warnings not to sign any long-term house leases. Some were made to feel it wouldn't be wise to send out their laundry.
The names bandied about — never officially confirmed — as on thin ice included outfielder Lou Piniella, 38; first baseman Bob Watson, 35; Mr. October, Reggie Jackson, 35; third baseman Graig Nettles, 37, and even such younger players as catcher Rick Cerone and second baseman Willie Randolph.

NEW YORK (AP) — This may come as a surprise to George Steinbrenner, but the New York Yankees aren't about to apologize for their showing in the World Series.
Moments after Steinbrenner, the win-or-else owner, issued a formal statement of apology Wednesday night when the Yankees completed their folding act and dropped the World Series to the Los Angeles Dodgers in six games, slugger Reggie Jackson and relief ace Rich Gossage responded angrily.
"I apologize, I apologize," Jackson snorted sarcastically as he read Steinbrenner's tart statement. "I apologize, I apologize, I apologize. Well, I don't apologize for anything. I'm sorry we didn't win, but we tried our best."

"I guess you'll be reading a lot of propaganda from George in the next few days. I mean, we made it to the World Series. Are we supposed to do time because we lost?"
The Yankees lost Game 6 by a 9-2 score in much the same manner as their other setbacks after winning the first two contests — a lack of clutch hitting and, except for a 2-1 loss in Game 5, poor middle-inning relief pitching.
They were 1-for-13 with runners in scoring position Wednesday night, while George Frazier, Ron Davis, Rick Reuschel and Rudy May were tagged for eight runs and seven hits in four innings.

"I think we beat ourselves about 90 percent and they beat us about 10 percent," said outfielder Bobby Murcer. "We just didn't play the kind of baseball we're capable of playing."
Steinbrenner, flanked by security guards, showed up briefly in the clubhouse. Moving quickly, he strode into Lemon's office, but the expected fireworks never materialized. The owner's performance was as punchless as his team's offense.
"Thanks for a good year, pal," he said to Lemon. "Come up and have a drink later."
However, in his statement, Steinbrenner said:
"I want to sincerely apologize to the people of New York and to fans of the New York Yankees everywhere for the performance of the Yankee team in this World Series. I also want to assure you that we will be at work immediately to prepare for 1982."
"George is all right," Jackson said. "His style is different, but he wants to win."
So do his players.
"We have a long winter ahead of us," said Gossage. "He can say anything he wants to say, that's his prerogative."

I'm not very happy with the outcome, either, and I don't think there's any player on this team who is happy.
"This is no more of an embarrassment to him than it is to us. I guess he doesn't realize that we have to go home and face up to our public, too. Every time we go to dinner or get out of the car or walk down the sidewalk people are gonna ask what happened. He's in no different a boat than we are."
"He talks about apologizing. He doesn't think about what Dave Winfield's gonna have to go through all winter. Maybe he didn't get any hits, but he tried. George isn't the only one who has to go through this."
The big question in Game 6 concerned why Manager Bob Lemon lifted starting pitcher Tommy John for a pinch hitter in the bottom of the fourth inning with the score tied 1-1. Murcer fled out to end the inning with runners at first and second and the Yankees' first four relievers then failed to hold the Dodgers.
Lemon's reasoning was obvious, but it still left him open to what is certain to be some of the severest second-guessing in World Series history.
"It's seldom that your best pitcher on a given night is pinch-hit for that early," John said, trying hard not to be overly critical of Lemon but not succeeding very well. "And your starter is obviously your best pitcher at the time of you'd have somebody else in there."

As Murcer walked toward the plate, John, who surrendered six hits but only one run in four innings, could be seen shaking his head disapprovingly in the dugout. At one point, his lips seemed to form the word "unbelievable."
"I was still throwing the ball well and I wanted to pitch," John said. "It's not as if I was getting cuffed around. I'd just completed 13 innings of holding a club like that to one run. But we needed to score some runs and Lem did what he thought was right. My concept doesn't matter because I'm not the manager."
Lemon explained that he was "trying to go on offense. I was trying to get a run ahead and get to the seventh inning so I could bring Goose (Gossage) in. I was trying to get something going but it didn't work, so I guess it wasn't too bright."

After the 1959 season ended, Penn State's football stadium, Beaver Field, was dismantled and moved in 700 pieces to a new location one mile away.

An Apology

NEW YORK (AP) — Owner George Steinbrenner of the New York Yankees issued a news release Wednesday night, an apology to Yankee fans following the team's loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers in the sixth game of the World Series.
"I want to sincerely apologize to the people of New York and to fans of the New York Yankees everywhere for the performance of the Yankee team in the World Series," said the statement.
"I also want to assure you we will be at work immediately to prepare for 1982."
"I also want to extend my congratulations to Peter O'Malley and the Dodger organization — a fine team that didn't give up — and to my friend Tom Lasorda, who managed a superb season, playoffs and a brilliant World Series."

In the three games at Los Angeles and the single clinching game at the Stadium here, they were so tight psychologically that it seemed only the slightest touch would break the taut string that would send them into smithereens.
Only the veteran Tommy John, a former Dodger, the classy Ron Guidry and fireballing reliever Rich (Goose) Gossage measured up to their Yankee reputations.
Ron Davis, an excellent middle reliever, was roundly shelled and only a ghost of the speedballer who was so effective during the campaign.
George Frazier wound up with the dubious distinction of being the first pitcher to lose three games in a World Series since 1919, when the best-of-seven format was adopted.
Winfield, a superb athlete, suffered a horrendous slump, getting only one hit in 22 at-bats. The long-legged, high-leaping star who soared over fences to make spectacular catches during the last weeks of the season, took an ugly spill and barely released a throw on a Bill Russell hit to left field in the sixth inning.
Reggie Jackson, accustomed to performing home run miracles in October, went 0 for 5 in the big-pressure finale.
One could look at him and see intensity burning inside that muscled frame. He twitched his head. He shook his shoulders. He had the look of eagles in his eyes. But he drew only blanks.

How TarHeel Senators And Representatives Voted

BY ROLL CALL REPORT SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 15-21.

HOUSE

TOBACCO — The House rejected, 184 for and 231 against, an amendment to end the federal tobacco program, which consists mainly of price supports for farmers and acreage allotments that limit production and the number of farmers who can grow tobacco. The amendment was offered to HR 3606, the new four-year farm bill that was headed for final passage by the House.

Sponsor Bob Shamansky, D-Ohio, said "this marvelous, successful program has set the price of American tobacco at about twice the price on the world market ... The original draft of this program was made by Lewis Carroll as an appendix to 'Alice in Wonderland' and 'Through the Looking Glass.'"

Opponent Larry Hopkins, R-Ky., said "This amendment will not stop smoking ... it will not stop cancer ... it will literally shift the production of tobacco from the small tobacco farmer to the larger corporation."

Members voting "yea" wanted to end the federal tobacco program and return tobacco growing to the free market economy.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

SUGAR — The House killed, 213 for and 190 against, a proposal for government price supports for sugar. No such program now exists.

Eliminated by the vote was language to guarantee — through a Commodity Credit Corp. loan program — that farmers be paid at least 18 cents a pound for their sugar. If the actual market price falls below 18 cents, the farmer would be excused from repaying the loan and would release his sugar to the government stockpile. If the price exceeds 18 cents, the farmer would sell his sugar and repay the loan plus interest. The vote occurred during debate on the new farm bill (see preceding vote).

Rep. Margaret Heckler, R-Mass., a supporter of killing the proposal, said that "for every one cent increase in the price of sugar there is an increase in costs to the consumer for sweeteners of between $250 and $300 million."

Opponent Ed Jones, D-Tenn., said that without price supports for sugar "we will lose our domestic producers thus putting American consumers at the mercy of foreign producers."

Members voting "yea" opposed price supports for sugar growers.

Broyhill voted "yea." Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Johnston, Rose, Hefner, and Martin voted "nay."

Jones and Hendon did not vote.

MOTHERS-IN-LAW — By a vote of 305 for and 66 against, the House adopted a resolution (HJ Res 331) setting the fourth Sunday in October as National Mother-in-Law Day.

Supporter Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., said that "for too long mothers-in-law have been the victims of unfair jokes and ridicule, whereas they deserve our affection and respect."

Opponent Don Pease, D-Ohio, said in an interview that "Congress should have better things to do with its time" than conduct lengthy votes on such measures. He said the 20-minute roll call vote cost House members a total of 145 man-hours.

Members voting "yea" wanted to establish National Mother-in-Law Day.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Martin voted "yea."

Johnston, Broyhill and Hendon voted "nay."

SENATE

NUCLEAR SPREAD — The Senate adopted, 51 for and 45 against, an amendment cutting off foreign aid to Pakistan or India if either nation explodes a nuclear device. On a later non-record vote, the Senate extended the denial of foreign aid to any country that does not now have nuclear weapons. This occurred during debate on S 1196, a FY 1982 foreign aid bill headed for final passage and the House.

Sponsor John Glenn, D-Ohio, said: "We have had Pakistan give us no assurances that they will not build nuclear explosives. They say they are going ahead. They make no bones about it."

Opponent James McClure, R-Idaho, said: "The president in his capacity as chief foreign policymaker ... must be allowed the flexibility to determine the specific action for specific conditions" when it comes to using foreign aid as a policy tool.

Senators voting "yea" favored foreign aid sanctions to slow the development of nuclear weapons by Pakistan and India.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Sen. John East, R, voted "nay."

LIBYA — By a vote of 47 for and 44 against, the Senate endorsed the softer of two policies before it for dealing with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy's support of international terrorism. Adopted by this vote was a request that President Reagan immediately study the possibility of cutting off U.S. imports of Libyan oil, a transaction which yields $4 billion in profits to Libya annually. Shelved by the vote was a proposal to stop importing Libyan oil within 90 days of enactment of the FY 1982 foreign aid bill (see preceding vote).

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., a supporter of study rather than immediate action, said the United States should not make such a drastic policy change without working in concert with its allies.

Opponent Gary Hart, D-Colo., said: "The issue is clear cut. Are we going to cut off this American financing of Khadafy, or are we going to study the issue?"

Most senators voting "nay" favored a unilateral and immediate cut-off of U.S. oil imports from Libya.

East and Helms voted "yea."

SOCIAL SECURITY — The Senate killed, 65 for and 30 against, an amendment to shore up Social Security trust funds by increasing the so-called "windfall profits" tax that oil companies pay on newly discovered oil. Supporters said this would raise about $14 billion through 1990. The vote came during consideration of a Social Security bill (HR 4331) later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., who favored killing the proposal, said the amendment would begin financing of Social Security out of general Treasury revenues, a major policy change that Congress has never approved.

Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., sponsor of the amendment, asked: "Do we think adding $14 billion to the already swollen profits of major oil companies is more important than providing a small margin of security for our senior citizens?"

Senators voting "nay" wanted certain oil taxes increased with the resulting revenue used to pay Social Security benefits.

East and Helms voted "yea."

Chosen For Institute

DURHAM — Bernadette Gregory Watts, a native of Greenville, was chosen as one of 19 North Carolina agricultural extension agents to participate in the first Extension Executive Development Institute in the state and the nation.

Ms. Watts, an extension home economist with the Durham County Extension Office for over 10 years, was selected from a pool of 60 candidates.

BERNADETTE WATTS

Ms. Watts is a graduate of C.M. Eppes High School and holds a bachelor's degree from Bennett College in Greensboro as well as a master's in home economics-food and nutrition from East Carolina University.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Ruth H. Gregory and the late John A. Gregory.

The Extension Executive Development Institute is a leadership-management development program for county extension staff members interested in assuming positions of greater responsibilities in the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service. The institute will be held periodically through March 1982.

Pitt Student Attends Meet

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central student Julia Smith attended the Future Business Leaders of America Southern Region Leadership Conference in Baton Rouge, La., Oct. 23-25.

Ed Miller, executive director of FBLA-PBL Inc., keynoted the conference, which was attended by more than 1,200 members and advisers. He spoke concerning the growth — past and future — of FBLA.

The theme of the conference, "In Touch With the Business of America," was emphasized in all sessions and workshops.

Miss Smith, state FBLA reporter, attended the conference with the other state officers and her adviser, Barbara Wooten.

The Southern region is comprised of the 11 Southern states. Each fall the region meeting is held to help students develop leadership skills.

Colorful Caskets Now In Demand

BOSTON (AP) — People are buying more brightly colored caskets and seeking more non-traditional funerals, according to morticians in town for the convention of the National Funeral Directors Association.

"We use mostly pastel colors now. Blue is used traditionally because it is the favorite color of women. Pink rates second. Men still like the coppertone and brown caskets," said Edward Keohane of Quincy, president of the Massachusetts Funeral Directors Association.

Biologist Creates Tiny Self-Sufficient Worlds

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Biologist Joe Hanson builds tiny, self-sufficient worlds and seals them in softball-sized bottles to prove a living community can survive on its own by recycling all that it has, to produce all that it needs.

The colonies of shrimp, algae and bacteria — which convert each other's wastes into oxygen, carbon dioxide, water and food — are apparently the most complex, fully closed ecosystems ever to survive more than a year. And they may be the first, tentative step toward self-contained ecosystems that would allow mankind to venture deep into space and colonize other worlds.

"Eventually, assuming humanity doesn't destroy itself on this small ball, we're going to want to start moving out into space. That's the sort of thing humanity does," Hanson said. "That means we're going to have to support people and possibly colonies for extended space flights and for extended periods on other planets."

A space voyage could take years, even decades, and require huge supplies of food, water and oxygen. Providing such fundamental essentials for a full-scale colony in orbit around Earth or on another world would be a near-impossible challenge.

So the Closed Ecology Life Support Systems section of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration is considering another possibility: sending aloft a whole ecosystem that can handle its own needs just as the bottled "worldlets" on a laboratory shelf at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory have done for almost 16 months.

And on a more terrestrial level, Hanson said, "There's a kind of moral lesson in there: We don't have to keep throwing all of our trash away. If we have enough energy ... it is possible to recycle everything.

"These are, in a sense, very small, very simplified analogs of spaceship Earth," he said.

Still, he added, "They're extremely complicated, even though all you see is a little bit of algae and a few shrimp swimming around in a small bottle."

Almost all the fundamental pieces that maintain Earth's natural balance are working in three cups of artificial seawater inside the sealed beakers. Plants — microscopic, stringy green algae — produce oxygen through photosynthesis. The half-inch red shrimp use the oxygen and exhale carbon dioxide, the raw material of photosynthesis. Bacteria and other microscopic creatures feed on the shrimp's wastes, converting it into fertilizer for the algae, which are eaten by the shrimp.

"You've even got a predator-prey loop," Hanson said, although "it's very simplified. The shrimp, I'm sure, are also eating bacteria and some of the other microscopic organisms."

The only thing these little worlds take from outside is light and heat. Just as Earth feeds on energy from the sun, the driving force in the microecosystems are fluorescent lights that burn 12 hours a day.

A totally closed microecosystem could prove a major tool for scientists studying the effects of such things as pollutants on a much more complex scale.

But for now, Hanson said, the beakers "have pretty much served the purpose I had in mind. ... The biology community in general believed that closed ecosystems smaller than the planet probably were not possible. I think we have now shown ... that they are, in fact, possible."

He did it, he said, with about $200 and odds and ends "from somebody's garage."

Hanson started with about a dozen beakers, each holding a roughly identical mixture of artificial seawater, algae and 11 to 16 shrimp. Then the tops were melted shut so nothing could get in or out. Now most are thriving, although "they've all gone off in different directions."

The shrimp died in several jars, a few of which now look like green, stagnant swamps. Most survived, although the algae appears in several different forms and is sometimes present only at a microscopic level.

The diversity probably resulted from "very small differences" in the original mix that caused each isolated community to follow different routes to stability, Hanson said.

"The same kinds of things happen in nature," he said. "When the systems survive, that means they have assumed a balance between the photosynthetic organism (plants) and the consumer organisms."

Once that balance is achieved, the system should live until the shrimp die of old age, which could take years, unless some chemical calamity wipes out a whole community by depleting some vital component.

Hanson said he hopes to develop instruments and procedures to monitor such systems without breaking the seals. Without that, he said, "I don't really know what's going on in there."

And he said the next logical step is to mix in new variables and new species, especially true predators. But if the shrimp are to become prey, "You're not making much of a game out of it."

And he'll have to figure out how to persuade the shrimp to reproduce, which probably will require manipulating the intensity and duration of their artificial sun.

Without such added components, he said, "You're not playing the ecology game fairly and it won't come out right."

Synthetic Fuels Industry Is Adopting Different Approach

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's effort to aid the fledgling synthetic fuels industry is back on the track but with a new engine that has a lot less power.

The Reagan-appointed board of the Synthetic Fuels Corp. held its first meeting Wednesday and left no doubt that its approach would be far different from that taken during the Carter administration.

The corporation was created by Congress in June 1980 to funnel government subsidies to private corporations interested in building plants to convert coal, oil shale and tar sands into synthetic liquid and gaseous fuels.

President Reagan, who was highly critical of the subsidies during the campaign, fired the entire board in January and replaced it with members more attuned to his scaled-down approach to the program.

In its first meeting, the new board approved a budget pared in half from one left by Carter appointees and implemented a new staffing plan calling for half the number of employees envisioned by the law.

Chairman Edward Noble, a millionaire drilling and real estate executive from Tulsa, Okla., said the corporation would be "lean and tough" with its first priority to keep watch over "taxpayers' dollars."

Where the law allows the corporation to provide up to $88 billion in loan guarantees and other subsidies, Noble has said he does not intend to spend more than the $15 billion provided in the first phase.

The corporation's new 1982 budget of $22.5 million still carries authorization for large salaries approved by the old board for top corporation employees. But Noble said the actual salaries approved in hiring new employees will be much lower, although to attract qualified people the board may have to go over the government's ceiling of $69,600. Noble is working for $1 a year instead of the $175,000 annual salary paid his predecessor, John Sawhill.

The board on Wednesday also adopted a schedule for reviewing the 63 projects that have applied for government subsidies and ordered a second round of solicitations in which companies can apply for aid until next April 30.

Under the corporation's timetable, finalists for the first round of awards will be selected in February and will enter into contract negotiations with the commission. The winners in those negotiations could receive awards in July, according to the timetable.

Corporation officials refuse to say how many projects may be given subsidies in the first round, but the budget adopted by the board was drawn using the assumption that the corporation would be monitoring five projects in 1982.

The board also approved a new staffing plan in which board member Victor Schroeder, an Atlanta developer, was named president and chief operating officer of the corporation under Noble.

Also approved were the appointments of Edward Cox, Richard Nixon's son-in-law, as general counsel; Charles Cowan, vice president for projects; and Dwight Ink, vice president for administration.

Other board members sworn in Wednesday were Robert A.G. Monks, a Boston banker; C. Howard Wilkins, of Wichita, Kan., a former president of Pizza Huts Corp. of America, and Victor M. Thompson Jr., a Tulsa banker.

Budget Runs At Deficit For 12th Straight Year

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite perennial presidential pledges to slash federal deficits, the government continues to spew a torrent of red ink that is blotting out President Reagan's promise to balance the budget by 1984.

The Treasury Department reported Wednesday that the budget for fiscal 1981, which ended Sept. 30, ran $57.9 billion in the red, marking the 12th straight year that federal spending has outpaced receipts.

This was the same budget that former President Carter and Congress redrafted 18 months ago to bring it into balance. Instead, the budget produced the third largest deficit in history, surpassed only by a $59.6 billion deficit in 1980 and a $66.4 billion deficit in 1976.

The new figures underscore the widespread skepticism about Reagan's latest pledge to balance the budget by 1984 — a goal that many economists and politicians contend may fall short by a staggering $100 billion or more.

Economists discount presidential budget forecasts as rosy political scenarios that intentionally avoid inevitable economic realities. As time passes, events force presidents to face those realities and adjust their forecasts.

For example, if economic growth proves weaker than an administration is willing to predict — which is usually the case — the government winds up collecting less tax money and spending more on social welfare programs than its original estimates. The result is a larger budget deficit.

Reagan's plan for eliminating deficits by 1984 assumes very strong economic growth over the next five years, a forecast other economists label as too optimistic to attain. In recent weeks, administration economists have hinted they may lower their expectations, a change that puts a balanced budget even further out of reach.

Reagan already has back-pedaled from his initial campaign promise to balance the budget by 1983, if not sooner. Now, the administration's official estimate for 1982 is a $43.1 billion deficit that seems certain to top $60 billion without new spending cuts or tax increases.

Administration budget officials also are conceding that they will be unable to balance the budget by 1984 without some form of new tax increases to help offset the loss of $280 billion in revenues from the individual and business tax cut enacted by Congress last summer.

White House budget director David A. Stockman said Wednesday that the federal deficit could swell to $100 billion in 1984 unless Congress makes further spending cuts or raises taxes.

The official Reagan administration estimate is for a 1984 deficit of $58.8 billion without further action by Congress, but Stockman said, "There are enormous upward pressures on the budget."

He said the most recent Congressional Budget Office estimate of the 1984 deficit — $100 billion — "isn't out of the ballpark."

As the deficits accumulate each year, efforts to balance the budget become more elusive because of the huge interest payments the government must make on the ballooning national debt.

With the national debt now above the $1 trillion mark and interest rates at unusually high levels, the government was forced to pay a record $95.6 billion in interest in 1981. That is more than the entire federal budget in 1960.

Interest is the third largest category of federal spending, exceeded only by defense and income security programs, such as Social Security and welfare.

Reagan's optimistic budget goals are the latest in a decade-long quest by presidents to find a formula for moving the government into the black. While the plans look good on paper, they rarely turn out so well.

In 10 of the last 12 years, actual federal spending outpaced the original presidential targets by amounts ranging from a low of $300 million in 1973 to a high of $48 billion in 1980.

The two exceptions were 1974 and 1979, when the deficit was $300 million and $6.6 billion less, respectively, than initial forecasts. Both years were marked by unexpectedly high inflation caused by soaring price increases for imported oil.

That is no coincidence, economists say. When inflation exceeds expectations, the Internal Revenue Service takes a larger tax bite out of Americans' paychecks, giving the Treasury more money than it had counted on.

The reverse is also true. If inflation proves to be lower than administration forecasts, the Treasury winds up collecting less money than it had anticipated, producing a larger deficit.

Administration officials are saying privately they believe inflation may come down even faster than their current bullish forecast, which predicts a 5 percent inflation rate by 1984.

Such a development, they concede, will dash any lingering hopes of balancing the budget. But given a choice between a lower inflation rate and a balanced budget, they say there would be no contest. The balanced budget would lose hands down.

Boosts Boeing

SEATTLE (AP) — Senate approval of President Reagan's plan to sell AWACS aircraft to Saudi Arabia means The Boeing Co. will keep 1,500 people busy on the planes, including 400 workers who faced layoffs if the sale had been rejected.

The $8.5 billion arms sale that includes the five Airborne Warning and Control planes gives the Boeing 727 production line a two-year reprieve, company officials say. Boeing expects about $2 billion in orders from the sale of the planes.

"Without the order we would have terminated about 400 employees between now and next June," said C.G. "Jerry" King, AWACS program manager for the Boeing Aerospace Co. "Those people will now remain on the program."

AWACS planes are based on the Boeing 707 commercial jetliner, which has been in production since 1958. The AWACS version was first tested in 1972.

"The order will extend our production of AWACS two years, through 1986. That will keep about 1,500 people working those two more years," King said Wednesday. "(It) will also keep the 707 production line open for two more years, giving us at Boeing the opportunity to seek more military orders with that airplane."

"The general impression here is happiness," said Bill Rice, Boeing spokesman. But "it isn't Boeing selling the aircraft overseas, it's the U.S. government," he added.

"We feel that this news is a plus for the country and is obviously good news for Boeing," Rice said.

Besides the five AWACS, the proposed military package includes six 707-based tanker planes with options on two other tankers.

'Hill Street' And 2 New Shows Appear On Tonight's Television

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — For all the viewers it got last season, "Hill Street Blues" was probably mistaken for a ragtime tune from New Orleans. Six Emmy awards and a major promotional campaign later, "Hill Street" returns, and NBC hopes audiences know it's a television show — a fine one at that.

Aware that "Hill Street" might attract a large curiosity audience tonight, the producers structured a dynamic opening before the title and credits even roll. It dares you to turn the dial.

It's typical of "Hill Street's" authentic glimpses of police life — raw, funny and human — instead of fitting glossy fantasy into a conventional TV format.

Grant Tinker, whose former production company created "Hill Street Blues," is now chairman of NBC. He promises fewer story lines per episode, the completion of at least one of them and an anchored time slot.

Still, "Hill Street" is not easy to watch because it's so provocative. Everything doesn't unfold in neat 15-minute segments. There are shifting sub-plots — some based on the action but more rooted to the characters' undulating emotions and feelings, a remarkable feat for TV.

While it's own quality may be an obstacle to popularity, "Hill Street" is burdened by NBC's mediocre Thursday night comedy schedule. It's immediate lead-in, "Gimme A Break," takes the lowest road and should have viewers elsewhere at 10 p.m. EST.

"Gimme A Break" stars

Tony award winner Nell Carter as housekeeper for a recently widowed police chief (Dolph Sweet) and his three daughters. This vehicle, well beneath Miss Carter's enormous stage talents, retraces a worn TV theme begun by Ethel Waters' "Beulah" in 1950.

It specializes in cheap, adolescent sexual humor. Girls must think of other things besides "sucking face," which means kissing, and kicking boys "where it hurts," a line thought so funny it was used twice.

The decibel level of "Gimme A Break" could register on the Richter scale. Sweet is a loud-mouthed, rigid dolt, who has none of the round edges of Archie Bunker. You won't love to hate him; you'll just hate him.

This show doesn't know what it wants to be. Whenever a little sentiment creeps in, the mood is clobbered by some tasteless, pointless joke. The laugh track is consistent with the show's crudity, spewing out some "woooo woos" for particularly vulgar insults.

NBC's other new comedy tonight, "Lewis and Clark," is funnier and has much more class.

Gabe Kaplan plays Stewart Lewis, who tires of the suburban New York ratrace and buys a Texas saloon, managed by Roscoe Clark (Guich Kooch). Transplanted Easterners battling a new culture is similar to ABC's "Best of the West," but NBC's has a warmer feel.

Kaplan, star of "Welcome Back Kotter," is creator and co-writer. He's a stand-up comedian who's slightly out of place in a strong ensemble cast. He works well when he can utilize — not force — his humor, like when he learns to mosey tonight.

Kooch, star of the short-lived "Carter Country," and the bartender (Mike McManus) are especially strong. The barmaid (Wendy Holcombe) sounds like Ellie Mae Clampett from "The Beverly Hillbillies."

"Lewis and Clark" is funny and touching, the best of tonight's NBC comedies. Production on "Harper Valley," with Barbara Eden, has stopped while script and personnel changes are made. Meanwhile, "Diff'rent Strokes," the hit of the bunch, is having contract problems with star Gary Coleman.

So if "Hill Street," 83rd out of 97 shows last season, is to improve, it will have to do on its own.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Actor Cliff Robertson, one of the stars of the science-fiction movie "Brainstorm," says filming in North Carolina ended too early.

"I'd like to stay around for a few more weeks," Robertson said as the crew prepared to move to California Wednesday for the finishing touches. "It's beautiful here."

Robertson plays the chief researcher for a large scientific corporation trying to invent a device for probing secret parts of the human mind.

Other stars in the film, which cost $16 million to produce, include Christopher Walken, Natalie Wood and Louise Fletcher.

MGM began filming Sept. 28 in Chapel Hill. Other North Carolina locations included the Burroughs-Wellcome building at Research Triangle Park, Duke Chapel and the Sarah Duke Gardens.

The company will spend several more weeks filming on sound stages in California, then release the movie in the early fall or late summer next year.

Monday's rain forced director Douglas Trumbull to change the script to have the party sprinkled on.

Then the rain stopped, and the technical crew had to rig a sprinkler system from the top of the barn to keep the precipitation going. A dark reflector was used to give the background a stormy look.

"That's Hollywood," said one extra. "Everything has to be faked."

Actress Hit By A Burglar

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Barbara Stanwyck was treated for minor cuts after a burglar entered her home, asked her where he could find jewelry and hit her over the head, police said.

The burglar then shoved the 74-year-old, four-time Oscar nominee into a closet and made off with about $5,000 in jewelry, Lt. Russ Olsen said Wednesday.

Miss Stanwyck said that because of the darkness, she did not get a good look at the assailant who came into her home in this posh community early Tuesday morning, but described him to police as 6-foot-2, 200 pounds and possibly wearing a ski mask.

Olsen said the man may have gained entry through a broken window.

Miss Stanwyck starred in such films "The Bitter Tea of General Yen" and "Meet John Doe," and later appeared in television's "The Big Valley."

Solo Auditions Set For Messiah Sing

Solo auditions for the Dec. 6 community "Messiah Sing" will be held at East Carolina University School of Music on two days next week — at 7 p.m. on Nov. 5 and at 3 p.m. on Nov. 6.

Scores are available from Cha-Rich Music located on Arlington Boulevard. Information concerning the exact solos and choruses to be sung will also be available in written form at Cha-Rich and on the main bulletin board of the school of music.

EXECUTED PEKING (AP) — A man charged with "counter-revolutionary activities" for a series of robberies at night and sabotage in southwest China's Sichuan province has been executed, according to newspaper reports.

NEW YORK (AP) — The tough audition was enough to ruffle any aspiring actor's feathers.

Actress Colleen Dewhurst, who is directing "Ned and Jack," a play about the friendship between playwright Edward Sheldon and actor John Barrymore, appeared uneasy Wednesday as she stood with a 20-inch Moluccan cockatoo perched on her head.

"What is it doing now?" she asked, warily.

The bird was one of three cockatoos tested for the part of "Charlie" in the play. Charlie, who belongs to Sheldon and is presented to Barrymore, is a symbol of caged characters straining to break free, according to Peter Goetz, who plays Barrymore.

"Ned and Jack" opens Nov. 8 at the Little Theatre and is Miss Dewhurst's directing debut.

She said the cockatoo from the first production last spring is "a mean old bird" who bit through a velvet cover over his cage. That bird is being replaced and about 50 people were on hand for Wednesday's "audition" at New York's Parrot Jungle.

When Miss Dewhurst walked over to the birds' perch, the first allowed her to stroke it, the second shifted backward and the third raised its crest and screeched.

The part went to cockatoo No. 1, a 3-year-old male.

MOCK CONFERENCE There will be a mock conference held at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church Friday at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. Willie Joyner will give the introductory sermon.

The combined choirs are asked to serve along with the combined usher boards. All mock pastors will make their reports at this time. Dr. W.L. Jones invites the public.

New Twist For Their Wedding

ROSWELL, N.M. (AP) — It was a case of the karat and the schtick. Terry and Charles Roberts couldn't come up with the money to get their wedding rings out of layaway, so they tied the knot at the jewelry store. The bridegroom's mother, Sue Roberts, said unusual marriages run in her family. "I had a shotgun wedding," she said, explaining that her sister's husband walked into the church behind her intended holding a double-barreled shotgun — just for fun.

China Is Urged To Reconsider

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Chinese government is being urged by Sigma Delta Chi, the society of professional journalists, to reconsider its warning to foreign correspondents to avoid reporting "illegal" activities.

The society, in a letter to Vice Foreign Minister Zhong Xidong, expressed concern about indications of increasing restrictions on reporters from the United States and other nations working in the Peoples Republic of China.

Michael Weisskopf of The Washington Post was admonished recently by the Chinese government and Willem Van Kemenade of the Netherlands was expelled.

"We urge your governmental authorities to be tolerant of such expression, to release any writers and editors now incarcerated and to permit the traditional Chinese respect for truth to prevail," said the letter, written by Howard Graves, president of Sigma Delta Chi.

minimum opening bid and a balanced hand, he might have been sufficiently dubious about his heart stopper to pass and let his partner act. Had he done so, his side might have reached a sound five club contract rather than a shaky no trump game.

West led the ten of hearts, and East fell from grace when he captured dummy's king with the ace. Since he had no sure entry to his hand, he should have allowed the king to win. On the auction, South was marked with exactly four hearts. By ducking the first heart, East would have preserved communications between the defenders' hands.

East cashed the queen and jack of hearts, and West came up with a sensational play—he discarded his king of clubs! East continued with a fourth heart, and declarer was without resource. He had no way to come to nine tricks without using the club suit, and there was no way to tackle clubs without allowing East to gain the lead and cash his hearts for a two trick set.

The defenders got the second shot at the contract because of West's brilliant defense. Had he kept the king of clubs, declarer would have coasted home. After winning the fourth heart he would lead a club and, who West produced the king, declarer would allow him to hold the trick! Now East would have been shut out of the lead and declarer would bag exactly nine tricks.

Liberty Enlightening The World

Towering 300 feet above New York Harbor, the Statue of Liberty holds aloft her welcoming beacon to the world's "homeless" and "huddled masses." On the 95th anniversary of her dedication today, her traditional role as "Mother of Exiles" may be censored out of our national script. Current U.S. plans call for cuts in refugee aid, stringent border patrols, and expulsion of Haitian and El Salvadoran exiles. Despite the Nobel Peace Prize to the U.N. Refugee Commission, the world-wide refugee problem remains critical. Only the kind of international cooperation symbolized by the Statue of Liberty, a joint achievement of the French and American peoples, can offer hope to the world's 10 million homeless.

DO YOU KNOW - Whose poem is inscribed at the base of the Statue of Liberty?

PRINCESS OF PULP - Novelist Rosemary Rogers is shown in her home in Manhattan. In just seven years, Rogers has built a string of successes in the literary world that prompted the Washington Post to anoint her "the princess of passion pulp". Literary critics have been decidedly less kind, pronouncing the princess' prose more porno than pulp, and darn silly porno at that. (AP Laserphoto)

Suspect Death Due A Hunter

SUFFOLK, Va. (AP) - While Suffolk police try to interview 177 people who were in the Dismal Swamp for a deer hunt this weekend, they are hoping the person who fatally shot a hunter will come forward.

"It had to be an accidental shooting. You couldn't see 30 feet in there, much less 125," Lt. R.V. Bryant said Wednesday. "The person who did this knows he left a widow woman and four children. It's ridiculous for him to suffer."

By tracing the pattern of the 12-gauge shotgun pellets, police determined the shot that killed Elbert Jackson Kidd Saturday came from 100 to 125 feet away, Bryant said.

All nine pellets used in such shot have been accounted for, he said, and they came from the type of gun commonly used in this area for deer hunting.

"We feel like whoever shot him knows what he did. When you shoot at a sound - and that's what it was - and you don't hear that sound you go and check," he said. "Even if whoever shot him didn't go to the body, they've got to know they fired a shot in that area," he said.

Kidd's body was found Monday after a weekend search. His shotgun was loaded but unfired.

Bryant said Kidd must have been killed in the morning. He failed to meet his two companions at noon, as arranged, and still had his lunch in his pocket.

By Wednesday, police had interviewed 15 of the 177 people registered for the controlled deer hunt in the swamp's National Wildlife Refuge, Bryant said, but have found no one who was in the area.

They are trying to locate two men, with backpacks and a hunter's tree stand, who were seen talking to Kidd as he left his two companions. "They were probably the last two people who saw him alive," Bryant said.

If no one comes forward, Bryant said, police will continue interviewing the registered hunters. "If it comes to that, we're going to have to talk to all 177."

Say PCB Found In Mothers' Milk

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Many North Carolina mothers have PCB concentrations in their breast milk near the federal limits for PCB in commercial cow's milk, a researcher says.

The PCB concentrations, are not directly attributable to PCBs dumped long state roadways in 1978, said Dr. Walter J. Rogan of the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences.

But Rogan urged women not to stop breastfeeding in response to the report.

"No case reports or systemic studies report illnesses in children attributable to PCBs ... at the levels we find them," Rogan said.

Rogan presented his study during a conference on toxic chemicals at NIEHS headquarters in Research Triangle Park.

"There are reasonable health benefits attributable to breast feeding," he said.

NIEHS researchers are testing PCB and DDT levels in about 860 mothers in eastern and central North Carolina to determine whether the chemicals might affect the health of the women's children.

DDT, a banned pesticide, and PCB, an industrial chemical used in a variety of products, are known to cause cancer and other health problems in animals.

The study, which monitors women and their babies at East Carolina University, Wake Medical Center and a private clinic in Durham, is not complete.

The study shows that more than 20 percent of the women's milk had PCB concentrations approaching or exceeding 62.5 parts per billion, the amount that would require the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to ban sales of cow's milk products.

Rogan said the chemical

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd. and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you - well, you'll just have to see for yourself.
