Voter Turnout Termed Generally Steady

Voter activity in Greenville and in other Pitt County municipalities holding elections today was generally described as "steady" in most precincts with the turnout ranging from light in some areas to fairly heavy in others.

In Greenville, only 1,390 of the city's 14,063 registered voters had visited the nine polling sites by around 10 a.m., according to Margaret Register, supervisor of the Pitt Board of Elections.

A breakdown of the elections activity at the various precincts here included; Greenville I (VFW Post), 36 votes cast out of a registration of 476; III (West Greenville Recreation Center), 100 out of 1,041; IV (Jaycee's Community Center), 175 out of 1,362; V (American Legion Building, 309 out of 3,143; VI (Fifth Street Fire Station), 101 out of 1,092; VII (Elm Street Gym), 207 out of 2,200; VIII (Willis Building), 155 out of 2,154; IX (Gardner Fire Station), 173 out of 1,449; and X (Aycock Junior High School), 134 out of 1,146.

In the nine other towns where municipal balloting was under way today, voter turnout figures included: Ayden, 235 votes cast out of a registration of 1,885; Bethel, 204 out of 970; Falkland, three out of 75; Farmville, (run-off election) 329 out of 2,198; Fountain, 55 out of 188; Grifton, 185 out of 998; Grimesland, 24 out of 189; Simpson, 77 out of 289, and Winterville, 150 out of a registration of 953.

Turnout in Winterville was viewed as "heavy" this morning by Frances Dixon, voter registrar there, and in Ayden, Town Clerk Ralph Ford called the 10 a.m. results "fairly good for this time of morning and for a local election."

Nan Smith, town clerk in Grifton, said that voter activity for the office of mayor was "extremely good for just a mayor's election."

Precinct holders in Greenville and in the nine other Pitt towns are reminded to call "The Daily Reflector" with election returns as soon as they are available.

Housing Authority Looking To New 40-Unit Site

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Housing Authority commissioners Monday night authorized the agency's executive director to seek an option agreement on a tract off Arlington Boulevard for the location of 40 units of new low-rent family housing.

The board gave Joe Laney permission to enter into an option with the owners of the 5.7-acre site located adjacent to the new Boys' Club facility across Arlington from the Lakeview Terrace development.

Laney said 12 sites have been considered for the new housing units, recently authorized by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, including a tract in West Meadowbrook. Laney said the tract was ruled out when he learned that HUD regulations prohibit housing development in flood fringe areas.

The director said the Arlington Boulevard property, purchased by Bill Clark as agent for David Evans, is currently zoned RA-20 (residential-agricultural) and rezoning would be necessary to the R-6 residential zone that permits multi-family housing.

Laney added that Evans has indicated he would like to retain a 200-foot frontage strip on Hooker Road which would serve as a buffer.

The new units will be similar in design to the Hopkins Park apartments operated by the Authority off Evans Street.

Swedish Authorities Dissatisfied Lengthy Quiz For Sub Officers

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) - Swedish authorities, apparently dissatisfied with explanations about a grounded Soviet submarine, said today that questioning of the ship's officers would continue and it could be "a lengthy affair."

"The interrogation will be resumed, but it is not yet decided when," naval spokesman Cmdr. Gunnar Rasmussen said. "The whole thing might turn out to be a lengthy affair."

After a go-ahead from Moscow, the sub's captain, Lt. Cmdr. Pyotr Gushin, and his navigation officer were questioned for six hours Monday aboard a Swedish navy ship about the grounding of the sub last Tuesday night in a restricted military area off the southeast coast in the Baltic Sea near the Karlskrona naval base.

The commander-in-chief of Sweden's armed forces, Gen. Lennart Ljung, told a news conference the Soviet government also agreed to an inspection of the sub's navigational equipment, charts and duty lists. Swedish officials claimed that the aged, Whiskey-class sub had been fitted with special intelligence-gathering gear.

The Swedish government, after barring Soviet salvage ships from rescuing the sub, had said Swedish tugs would not refloat it until the government received a satisfactory explanation of the grounding. But a storm blew up while Gushin was being interrogated.

"The submarine sent Mayday signals over the radio and fired emergency red flares and asked for assistance," Rasmussen said. "The rough weather threatened to break up the submarine."

Despite 90-mile winds, two tugs completed the salvage operation in less than an hour, and the sub was anchored about 10 miles from the Karlskrona base.

"The submarine is safely secured and blocked, with no possibility to break loose and escape," said Cmdr. Lennart Forsman, the commander of the naval base.

A navy spokesman said Swedish engineers would go over the ship to determine if it was still seaworthy.

Gushin and his navigation officer were returned to the sub, accompanied by Cmdr. Karl G. Andersson, head of the Swedish interrogation team, and two interpreters.

A report on the interrogation, at which two Soviet diplomats were also present, was expected later today.

Gushin claimed last week that the sub got into the restricted area by mistake, because some of its navigational equipment failed. But Swedish officials said skilled maneuvering was necessary to penetrate the area, in which there are numerous small islands, and it was obvious the sub was there intentionally.

There was talk last week of charging Gushin and (Please turn to Page 10)

Rose High Gym Repairs Face Delay Due Misunderstanding

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A new problem has arisen in efforts to go ahead with repairs to the gym floor at Rose High. At the information meeting of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night, Bob Stewart, director of grounds and buildings for the city schools, reported a misunderstanding in agreements on costs and delays in proceeding with the project.

Citing a memorandum he prepared for Superintendent Delma Blinson, Stewart noted that Carl Jarvis, representative of Hillyard Inc., "had originally told us the cost for effecting the repairs would be $3,444.55. When I contacted him about getting the repairs accomplished, he said that cost figure was for labor, expenses and equipment only and an additional cost would be added for materials unless we wanted to buy them apart."

Stewart further noted, "I argued with him that our misunderstanding was the total cost was on his proposal. He persisted that his proposal was for labor, etc., only. He admitted that he had not made it clear in his proposal but said he would have to have the new figure of $5,272.34 if he did the work."

Questioned by board members about other contractors who might be able to do the repair work, Stewart said he had made such efforts, including contacting state officials, who provided him with the name of a firm in Winston-Salem known to handle floors of the type at Rose. "The Winston-Salem people said they only did new work, not repair," Stewart explained.

Stewart added that Jarvis did similar work on the Rose gym floor "three years ago and the bill at that time was $7,200."

Blinson told the board, "That floor at Rose is an unusual situation. The lack of competitive bids is caused by the type of floor itself. Eventually, we must look into replacing the floor. Maintenance of the floor is going to be a nightmare as long as we keep it."

Board members expressed concern that the project be completed prior to the beginning of the basketball season.

Three overnight and longer trips by students and teachers were approved. One is for 18 sixth grade students and four Rose High students, along with three teachers, to attend the Music Educators State Conference to be held in Winston-Salem on Nov. 22-23. The second is for the annual tour of Spain which will involve about 16 Rose High students and one teacher, and the third is the annual France-England tour by about 20 Rose students and one teacher. The two foreign trips coincide with the annual Easter vacation.

The board authorized Dr. Blinson to request approval from the State Board of Education to operate 16 classes at Greenville Middle School and one at Aycock that have pupil loads in excess of the 33 students per class maximum standard. At Greenville Middle the total overload is 33 students among 16 classes, and at Aycock it is one student over in a single class.

Relative to a recent request to operate classes exceeding the maximum pupil load limit at K-3 schools in the city, Dr. Blinson told board members, "I have reason to believe the state school board is going to deny this request. If they do we have no choice but to comply."

Blinson explained a denial would result in making a choice of one or several alternatives - hiring additional teachers, combining students in more than one grade level or transferring students to schools that have less than 29 students in any class. "One of the things we're looking into now is going to Sadie Sauter to see if we can find parents of students who will agree to transfer of their children to Elmhurst and Eastern schools," Blinson said.

"We have to approach this problem by the most expedient route," Blinson added.

The board unanimously approved a new "Facilities Use Form" to be used by any group making use of any of the city school facilities. The form, which goes into effect immediately, contains a contractual agreement that under the provisions of Section 115-133 of the General Statutes of North (Please turn to Page 10)

Hotline gets things done for you. Call 752-1336 and tell your problem or your sound-off or mail it to Hotline, The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834.

Because of the large numbers received, Hotline can answer and publish only those items considered most pertinent to our readers. Names must be given, but only initials will be used.

RECOVERY INC.?

Do we have here a chapter of Recovery Inc., a group of people who have been in mental hospitals and are out now and making it on their own and who are lonely? If there's a chapter here I'd like to know.

Robert DeSoto, coordinator of the partial hospitalization program of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, said there is not a fellowship-support group for mental hospital patients who've returned to the community at the present time. There once was one, he said, but it disbanded several years ago. If there is sufficient interest, he said, the Mental Health Center would be glad to lend whatever aid is needed in starting another. You and anyone else who's interested should call him, 752-7151.

Another possibility, he said, is that you would be welcome to serve as a volunteer in the partial hospitalization program for mental health clients in the community. There are many ways you could help out and, in doing so, possibly find the fellowship you seek. If you'd like to talk about this possibility, call DeSoto.

PHONE RECORDER DONATION SOUGHT

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council has asked Hotline to appeal for the donation of a telephone message storage recorder to add to its telephone line. The council wishes to establish a 24-hour listing of cultural activities in Pitt County available at all times to everyone by telephone. Anyone who can help is asked to contact Mary Ann Pennington, P.O. Box 8191, Greenville, 757-1785.

The Board of County Commissioners has given approval to four subdivisions recommended by the Planning Board.

Given the board's approval Monday were the Earl Spain property, Sweetbriar Sections III and IV, Magnolia Creek and Independence Acres.

County Manager Reginald Gray, in a report to the commissioners, said negotiations are under way with the East Carolina University School of Medicine to provide medical call service at the county jail each day.

Gray said medical school Dean William

Laupus, who is familiar with a similar arrangement between the Medical College of Virginia and the city of Richmond, expressed interest in such a program and is working out details.

Gray also told commissioners that work is under way by consultants on a study to determine the feasibility of a proposed convention center for the area.

The county manager also reported that if the proposed $300 million State Clean Water Bond referendum is passed, Pitt County will receive a direct allocation of $568,000 in pollution control (sewer) funds and $570,000 in water supply funds. Some $220 million of the $300 million issue, the county manager explained, will be available on a competition basis, based on need.

Assistant County Manager Don Davenport reported to commissioners that a draft request for bids for the operation of the county landfill has been completed. He said a final proposal would be completed following a review of the draft.

Commissioners have been investigating the feasibility of contracting the operation of the landfill, rather than operating the facility with county employees and equipment, in an effort to save money.

Bids are expected to be taken before the end of the year.

Ten of the state's 100 counties presently contract for landfill operations.

Ed Garrison, director of the Department of Social Services, reported that the Low Income Energy Assistance Program began Monday with the taking of applications. He noted that the deadline for applying for benefits under the program has been set at Dec. 11.

Tobacco Mart's Best Season

The Greenville Tobacco Market held its final sale of the 1981 season on Monday and recorded the highest season average in the history of the market, according to J. N. Bryan, sales supervisor for the Tobacco Board of Trade here.

Bryan said the market finished the season with a record average of $171 per hundred pounds.

The spokesman said the record was achieved through the sale of 45,220,065 pounds of tobacco for $77,324,115.

Monday's final sale saw an average of $151.20 per hundred pounds as local warehouses closed out their auction activities by selling 156,840 pounds for $237,231. There were 53 sales days this season, Bryan said.

In 1980, 58 sales days resulted in sales of 53,506,581 pounds for $78,550,874, an average of $146.81, the official said.

Total Stabilization receipts here for the 1981 season were 5.68 percent, which consisted of 2,567,523 pounds. Stabilization receipts Monday totaled 29.57 percent as offerings involved mostly leaf and non-descript grades, he added.

"I would like to thank the farmers who sold on the Greenville Market this year and to tell them that we will look forward to serving them in the future," Bryan observed.

"Early designation will make the operation of the 1982 marketing season as successful as 1981," he suggested. He urged farmers to designate their tobacco as early as possible for the 1982 season.

The Greenville Market began sales in 1890. Floor space here devoted to handling tobacco is over two million square feet, according to Bryan.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Even a beginner can create smash-hit effects with simple stockinette stitch and a classic pattern when an exciting yarn is used. The confetti-flecked yarn used for this timeless pullover is a blend of acrylic, polyester, nylon and cotton fibers that produces stunning effects with a minimum of effort.

There's nothing tricky in the knitting, with easy raglan shaping and your choice of crew or V-necklines. Directions are written for children's sizes as well as adult sizes with a stitch gauge of only four stitches per inch.

To obtain directions for knitting the Confetti Classic, suitable for men, women, boys or girls, send your request for Leaflet B-9352 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector,") P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. K-9352 containing the instructions and Bernal's "Calico" yarn by sending a check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Prices, which include shipping charges, are as follows: Children's Small (4-6), $16.50; Medium (8-10), $19.50; Large (12-14), $22.50; Adult's Small (32-34) or Medium (36-38), $29.50; Large (40-42), $32.50; Extra Large (44-46), $35.50.

Dear Pat: A couple of years ago you gave directions for knitting "TV Socks." After making a couple of pairs for Christmas gifts, I carefully put away the pattern — so carefully, in fact, that now I can't find it anywhere! Any chance of your doing a repeat? — Sue Ann, Worcester, Mass.

That's no problem at all, Sue Ann, as I am sure there are many others who would enjoy making these slippers with double strands of knitting worsted weight yarn and size 7 or 8 needles.

The directions are for a woman's slipper with the number of stitches for larger, man-sized slippers given in parentheses. In casting on, leave a tail of about 8 or 9 inches of yarn, to be used to sew the heel section together when the slippers are completed.

Cast on 29 (35) stitches. Row 1: knit 9 (11), purl 1, knit 9 (11), purl 1, knit 9 (11). For the second row, knit all stitches. Repeat these two rows until the piece measures 5 (7) inches, ending with completion of row two of the pattern.

Then, for the toe section, work as follows for 2 inches — Row 1: purl 10 (12), knit 9 (11), purl 10 (12); knit all stitches for the second row. Repeat these two rows for 2 inches, ending with completion of row one of the pattern.

Now decrease by working one row as follows: knit 7 (9), slip 1 stitch, knit 1, pass the slipped stitch over the knit stitch, knit 2 together, knit 7 (9), knit 2 together, slip 1, knit 1, pass the slipped stitch over, knit 7 (9). On the next row, purl 9 (11), knit 7 (9), purl 9 (11).

For the final row, knit 6 (8), slip 1, knit 1, pass; slipped stitch over, knit 2 together, knit 5 (7), knit 2 together, slip 1, knit 1, pass slipped stitch over, knit 6 (8). Bind off leaving 8 or 9 inches of yarn.

Thread a tapestry needle with this yarn. Fold the piece in half lengthwise and gather tightly the stitches of the toe end. Then sew together the 2 inches of the toe section to form the instep. Sew together the folded cast-on edges for the heel.

After this is done, you may want to single crochet around the top of the sock, followed by a double crochet or shell stitch row. Top each sock off with a fat pompon if you wish.

It takes approximately 2 ounces of yarn for a pair of slippers. If you have leftovers in small amounts, you can use contrasting colors for the two strands of yarn or make the toe sections in one color and the heel sections in another.

Endless Diet May Be Tragic

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Our 14-year-old niece is suffering from anorexia nervosa (dying to the point of starvation), but she has not been diagnosed as such because her parents refuse to seek further medical help. (They took the girl to two doctors. One said, "She needs to gain weight, and she can if she wants to." The other doctor said, "You're lucky. I have a daughter her age and she's too fat!")

Abby, this girl is going to die if she doesn't get help soon. She is 5 feet 5 and is down to 75 pounds! She's pale and listless and eats literally nothing. It all started when she decided she was too fat and she quit eating. Now she's determined to stay "thin" and she's down to skin and bones.

Abby, is there some organization, support group or information center one can contact to get literature about this terrible disease? Talking to these parents has done no good, and the doctors they have seen obviously know nothing about it. Please help us to help them.

CONCERNED AUNT

DEAR AUNT: There has been an alarming increase in the number of anorexia nervosa and associated disorder cases lately, 90 to 95 percent of which are women. The condition usually begins in the teen years when figure-conscious girls begin to diet because "thin is in" — then they become obsessed with the fear of getting fat and can't quit dieting. There are an estimated 500,000 victims in the United States alone, of which about 15 percent of the serious cases die!

ANAD (National Association of Anorexia and Associated Disorders) is the first non-profit, educational, self-help organization in this country (serving Canada and several other countries) to address itself to this problem.

ANAD provides information about anorexia and also provides referrals for counseling, treatment and support groups wherever you live. Write to: ANAD, Box 271, Highland Park, Ill. 60035. A self-addressed, business-size envelope with 37¢ postage speeds the response, but it is not necessary.

DEAR ABBY: We are making plans for our daughter's wedding. Her fiance chose a best man and three ushers. My husband and I do not approve of one of the ushers.

Do we have the right to say we don't want a certain person to be in the bridal party? We are paying for the whole wedding and reception. The person is not a family member — just a friend of the bridegroom.

We do not want hard feelings with our daughter. Hurry your answer and thank you.

MOTHER OF BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: The choice of the ushers is up to the bridegroom. And if you want no hard feelings with your daughter, you will voice no objections to her fiance's choice of ushers.

DEAR ABBY: The question has arisen in some of our singles' coffee "get-togethers," who should pay for the baby sitter? I am a single guy dating a divorcee with two children. When I ask her out, should I pay the sitter? Or should she? V. IN FARMINGTON, N. M.

DEAR V.: Single women (divorced or widowed) are usually living on a tight budget, especially with small children to raise, so I would suggest that you offer to pay the sitter. If the woman feels that it is either unnecessary or inappropriate, she will object, in which case you can back off.

CONFIDENTIAL TO E.K. IN UNION CITY, N.J.: An ounce of prevention is worth six weeks of wondering how to break the news to Mom and Dad.

DEAR ABBY: I am a Korean-born girl who will be an American citizen this September. I am in love with a Korean-born young man whom I have known since I was 15 in Korea. We are planning to marry, but my father is against it on the grounds that according to Korean law a person cannot marry anyone who has the same last name. That is our problem, Dear Abby. We have the same last name, but it is only a coincidence. We are not related to each other.

Is there a law in the U.S. prohibiting marriage between two people with the same last name?

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: There is no such law in the U.S.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Maybe the heartlands of America still speak 100 percent English, but in the larger cities, it's getting tougher and tougher to move about without an interpreter.

Don't get me wrong. I will buy anything touted by a foreign accent from yogurt to moisturizer that promises to erase my face. Somehow, I seem to feel people from another country know what they're talking about and would not lie to me.

But I'm talking basic communication. I am here to tell you there is not one English-speaking cab driver in the entire state of California. Last week, I climbed into a cab driven by Boris Szorgyoklov who was born in Odessa, Russia.

The word "Hello" was cookie time for Boris. It made me wonder how he had come to an American freeway behind the wheel of a Japanese car.

I could only surmise he arrived in this country and went to a placement bureau where a sociologist gave him a test. At the end, the sociologist said, "You cannot speak a word of English. You have never driven a car in your entire life. You come from a rural community. You are qualified for only one job: driving a cab in Los Angeles."

The week before, I got an Arab cab driver who could speak only four words: "I am not rich!" As he snapped a $20 bill out of my hand for 10-minute ride, I taught him three more new words: "You're getting there."

Obviously, there is logic as to where non-English-speaking immigrants are hired. Putting them in charge of room service phones in large hotels seems to be a great outlet. Another favorite is answering the buzzer from your hospital room when you are having difficulty in sleeping/sitting up/breathing.

And is there any greater fear than to have a hairdresser with a pair of scissors over your head who does not understand one word of what you are saying? Or how about the surgeon who asks in perfect Spanish, "Is this the patient?" (Suppose we all look alike to them.)

I'll never forget the woman I met once in South America who told me she sent her son to this country to learn how to speak English fluently.

"Where is he?" I asked. "Miami, Fla.," she smiled. It figures.

Warning signs of an impending stroke are: sudden temporary weakness or numbness of face, arm or leg on one side of the body; temporary loss of speech or trouble in speaking or understanding speech; temporary dimness or loss of vision in one eye; unsteadiness or sudden falls. # Element Of Faith

When the president "exults" the cause of peace in the Middle East is on the march again, an immediate response could well be one of doubts. It is remote, at best; but the prospects are better than if the Senate had disapproved sale of AWACS to Saudi Arabia.

It has been said that an oblique approach, together with patience, is just about the only way anybody can make people in the Middle East see things your way.

The AWACS sale will have some positive results in demonstrating an even-handed U.S. policy toward the Arab world and the Israeli. That is something we never have been able to "sell".

And, that last-ditch Senate fight over the sale's approval should make Arab doubters suspect they have at least a non-enemy in the White House ... someone they can almost trust.

Then the Senate debate and vote served to underline the strong U.S. interest in the Middle East, and concern for the security of that oil-rich area is taken very seriously in this country; and should be likewise taken seriously by the Arab world.

The American government has shown an element of faith in the good intentions of Saudi Arabia as a moderating influence upon its neighbors, and if nations are like people we might see the Saudis try to live up to those expectations.

It's all a pretty "iffy" business. Still, a start had to be made in the direction of understandings; and an offer to buy, and an agreement to sell, is one of the oldest means of establishing a relationship in our world.

On the whole, we're more pleased than displeased by the Senate's acceptance.

If You Have Death Wish

Preventive medicine, the practice of taking steps now to deter possibilities of future severe and disabling or fatal ailments, is simply good sense. A "stitch in time", you know.

It's cheaper, too, than being taken to a hospital or a funeral home.

That's why there are conscientious doctors who look with dismay at indifference to immunization procedures.

Right now they're concerned about high-risk people who are neglecting seasonal flu shots and are warning of a high death toll from flu and pneumonia this winter.

Of course, if you have a death wish .... not to worry.

A Bit Of Humbug, Too

WASHINGTON — There is a little bit of bad in the best of us, so the saying goes, and a little bit of good in the worst of us. In our town there is a little bit of humbug in practically everybody. Consider, if you will, three recent events.

The first has to do with tourists, the second with tobacco, the third with milk. The fourth event ends with a rousing chorus of "Don't do as I do, but do as I say."

Back in January the Senate approved the National Tourism Policy Act. In July the House added some amendments. The bill went to conference in September. A few weeks ago it reached the White House, and on October 16, with Mr. Reagan's signature, it became Public Law 97-63.

The National Tourism Policy Act, you will observe, is the product of an administration absolutely dedicated to reducing the federal bureaucracy. The law drifts onto the statutory beaches on waves of austerity. Not a non-essential dime! It was signed by a president who constantly reminds us of his preference for the private sector as distinguished from the public sector.

Well. The act will abolish the old U.S. Travel Service, whose function was to encourage foreign tourists to come to our shores. In its place the law creates a new U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration to do the same thing. This "administration," God save the mark, will be headed by an undersecretary of commerce. The agency operated since 1933.

In the House the debate ran on for hours. The chamber rang with pathos, bathos and bum statistics. As the orators dwelled upon the plight of 171,000 small family farmers — or 300,000 or 550,000 or 700,000 small family farmers, for the number kept escalating — the floor of the chamber was flooded with tears. "Man the boats!" cried Speaker O'Neill. Only a roll-call vote at 4:45 forestalled a tragedy of ghastly proportions.

The principal speakers in opposition to the Shamansky Amendment, as you will have surmised, were the gentlemen from the tobacco-growing states of Dixie — from Virginia, Kentucky, Georgia and the Carolinas. It is an interesting thing about these gentlemen: Almost to a man, they are fierce defenders of free enterprise, free competition and deregulation. Emblazoned upon their conservative coat of arms is a motto for the ages: "Get the Gummit Off Our Backs!" But on the afternoon of October 21, that venerable motto had been turned to the wall.

While all this was going on, over on the Senate side the greatest showboat economist of them all, William Proxmire of Wisconsin, was interminably holding the floor.

The senator's chief claim to fame lies in his monthly Golden Fleece Awards, given to especially deplorable examples of governmental extravagance. But on this occasion, what was the senator's purpose? Why, sir, his purpose was to defend that especially deplorable extravagance by which millions of tax dollars are spent to buy surplus milk and cheese from the dairy farmers of Wisconsin.

also will benefit from an assistant secretary of commerce. We are to have a nine-member Tourism Policy Council and a 15-member Travel and Tourism Advisory Board. A notable provision of the act will bind the grasping hands of Budget Director David Stockman: No matter what, the budget and staff of the administration cannot be cut below 1979 levels. And so on, and so on, and so on. So much for tourism. So much for austerity.

On October 21, by a vote of 231-184, the House killed what was known as the Shamansky Amendment to the farm bill. The amendment, had it passed, would have put an end to the program of tobacco acreage allotments and commodity loans that has

Elusive Justice

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — From the outset, the purpose of North Carolina's so-called fair sentencing law was to make certain that people convicted in comparable crimes got equal punishment.

The certainty of that punishment is supposed to be a deterrent to the would-be criminal. And the fairness of that punishment is supposed to help quell dissatisfaction and bitterness when prison inmates begin to compare notes later.

The problem, as detailed time and again as court officials, the General Assembly, Gov. Jim Hunt and his staff, and interested citizens debated the approach to criminal justice, has been almost unbridled discretion for judges and prosecutors in punishing those who come before them.

The solution, put forth by experts both nationally and in this state, was presumptive sentencing. A list of crimes and matching punishments, with companion roles on aggravating and mitigating circumstances such as past records which could make the punishment more or less severe.

through with it — including changing the name to "fair sentencing" — little remained of the original idea.

Then, at the last session of the General Assembly this spring, a few amendments were made in the law. For one thing, sentences arrived at through plea bargaining were taken from the presumptive sentencing procedure. And, the sentences were sharply reduced for most crimes.

The plea bargaining exception seemed routine to some at the time. Some critics, however, warned then that taking plea bargained sentences off the list effectively meant the early death of presumptive sentencing before it even had a chance in North Carolina.

Effectively 80 percent of the court cases disposed of go through some form of plea bargaining, many experts argue. Thus, few cases will even fall under the presumptive sentencing procedure.

And further, there are no reasonable rules setting forth which defendants can get plea bargaining; to what degree the judges will agree to the process, or even be involved in it; and to whether the defendant actually knows what is happening throughout the process.

Frustrated
Meanwhile, years of effort to establish speedy trials in North Carolina also have run into a series of frustrations, delays, and changes.

So from the start, when Gov. Jim Hunt put forth his contention that swift and certain punishment is the most promising and effective weapon against the rising tide of crime and that the solution lay in the courtroom, North Carolinians seemed about to set foot firmly and carefully on the track leading to genuine reform of the criminal justice system.

The record now makes it look less and less as though

To the editor:

It was one year ago today (Saturday, Oct. 31) that I wrote to you about the horrible and unnecessary death of a young man at a railroad crossing on county highway 1728. I have just finished watching them remove the body of another victim of a train accident at the same crossing. This sad and terrible event is all the more ominous because the man was killed by the second train to come through this crossing in an hour's time. We should all recall that the development of the Morehead City coal port will lead to an enormous increase in local train traffic. Some authorities estimate an increase of up to 40 trains a day! Because of this increase in traffic, if we hold to the current barbaric practice of safeguarding only those crossings at which a certain number of deaths and/or accidents have occurred, we are guaranteeing the future slaughter of a large number of our relatives, friends and neighbors.

Assisted By Billy Graham

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Evangelist Billy Graham and Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire were the unsung heroes in President Reagan's cliff-hanging AWACS victory Oct. 28, though neither wants any public credit.

Reagan turned to the country's best-known evangelical preacher to offset anti-AWACS inroads in the Senate by the Moral Majority's Rev. Jerry Falwell, a friend and supporter of Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. Parrying Falwell in talks to at least two senators, Graham made the case that AWACS in Saudi Arabia posed no military threat to Israel.

Help from Rudman, the only Jewish member of the Senate to support the AWACS deal, also came away from public view. His private remarks made a deep impression on Sen. Roger Jepsen of Iowa, who had declared himself totally opposed to the sale. Jepsen's switch at the last moment to support Reagan was in no small part caused by Rudman.

Reagan's B-1 Debacle
New doubts about President Reagan's proposed B-bomber program are rising because of confidential Pentagon estimates showing production figures far higher than the official Air Force estimates sent to Congress.

The Air Force originally said each of the 100 new bombers requested by Reagan would cost $230 million. Defense Department officials shocked Congress by admitting last week they had underestimated actual cost by about $90 million a plane.

But confidential estimates of the true cost, now under Air Force lock and key, show a further expansion of $100 million per plane — a huge overrun that Pentagon officials do not want Congress to learn about. The B-1, killed by Jimmy Carter four years ago, is likely to be killed for good in Congress when the full story of escalating costs gets out next year.

Kemp Reminds Reagan
Rep. Jack Kemp, who has criticized Ronald Reagan's budgetary and monetary policies lately, in an Oct. 23 letter reminded the president that nothing has been done about his campaign promise for tax-free enterprise zones in blighted urban areas such as the South Bronx.

Joining Kemp in signing the letter was a fellow conservative Republican, House Minority Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi, and four liberal Democrats: Reps. Robert Garcia of New York, Augustus Hawkins of California and William Gray and Bob Edgar of Pennsylvania. "The people of America's inner cities want concrete evidence that they are not the victims of recession," they wrote Reagan.

That reflects Kemp's fear that the permanent bureaucracy and the Reagan administration's emphasis on budget cutting are combining to suffocate the enterprise zones concept, the Republican Party's only plan for the inner city. Unless there is some positive action, Kemp is likely to go public with his complaints.

A gaullist Socialist?
Although French president Francois Mitterrand got along well with President Reagan at the Yorktown celebration and later at the Cancun summit, some diplomats detected incipient Gaullist "pretensions" that could cause future problems with the U.S.

One of the first decisions by the new socialist president when he took over the Elysee Palace was to move his office out of defeated President Valery Giscard's room into the chamber that Charles de Gaulle occupied as president.

Mitterrand also ordered back every bit of furniture, rugs and curtains that de Gaulle had used, placing them exactly as before. This Gaullist "pretension" is viewed by some diplomats here as a possible cause of future friction between Reagan and Mitterrand, quite apart from their diametrically opposite economic views. In their talks at Yorktown and Cancun, Reagan and Mitterrand discussed many topics but came to grips with none at all.

Jersey Reverse Coattails
Republican candidate Thomas Kean's 11th-hour television commercials stress his support from President Reagan in Tuesday's New Jersey gubernatorial election, but the Democratic campaign of Rep. Jim Florio has kept away from Democratic governor Brendan Byrne as though he had the plague.

BOOMERANG

Some people burden their lives by carrying grudges through the years.

Let us be sure of this — a grudge never hurts anyone except the person who carries it. If we have the idea that we can get even with someone and make him humble and contrite by being nasty with him, we should remember that human nature being what it is, people usually do not change under such treatment. Instead of becoming submissive, they tend to become obstinate and resentful. In the end a grudge leaves the man who carries it more unhappy than he was before, his life marred by bitterness.

Jesus spoke about having the kingdom of God in our hearts. When we harbor a grudge we carry the kingdom of hell in our hearts. The mistreatment we accord others when we cherish a grudge against them is not to be compared with the mistreatment we accord ourselves. Dark shadows are cast across our souls, and happiness dies as surely as growing grain would die in continuous darkness. — Elisha Douglass

'Field-Testing' Reaganomics

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — If

recent indicators are worth a thing, Americans over the next year or so are going to observe how well Reaganomics does when the chips are down and the cards aren't cooperating.

Heretofore, it has had pretty smooth sailing. The public has been with the president. And though it is inevitable, the economic downturn from restrictive policies has been mild and probably late in showing up.

But the economic atmosphere is changing now. Customer's aren't buying. Red ink is spreading. Unemployment is moving up. Plants are closing. Bankruptcies are soaring. The statistical indicators are looking awful.

It now appears that the automakers aren't going to recover this year or probably next, that the administration will be unable to balance the budget in fiscal 1984, and that living standards won't be rising.

As all this happens, the political climate is likely to change. To date, the Reagan administration has been promoting the vision of better times to come. Soon, it may have to ask that people bear with it.

Very few institutional economists have issued forecasts of a major recession, but in reading their remarks nobody can fail to detect that their private worries are greater than their official utterances.

A simple example: Many economists foresee interest rates falling, which on the surface is what everyone seems to want. But at what price? Will rates fall because bidders for money have been killed off?

That is, will conditions be such that business is forced to cancel plans to expand and individuals are compelled by job insecurity and tight budgets to wait another year to buy a car, a house or a new set of furniture?

Will the private sector, on which so much rests, be unwilling or unable immediately to pick up the economic slack from government, leaving the economy in such a state that supply side economics loses credibility even with its advocates within the administration?

With economic discontent translatable into votes, as Reagan himself demonstrated in being elected, will the White House feel compelled to step in with spending plan contrary to its long-term goal?

"Will the White House panic?" That question headlines a "special analysis" issued last week by Albert Cox Jr., president of Merrill Lynch Economics and a strong supporter of the Reagan economic program.

Cox says he doesn't think so, but he concedes the possibility of "a major recession" and concern in financial markets that Reagan might "throw in the towel" in his fight to bring inflation down.

Such suspicions probably are made to appear more plausible, suggests Cox, by efforts of his former boss, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, to exhort the Federal Reserve to ease up on the money supply.

Though Cox doesn't say so, the same viewpoint might apply to Regan's congressional testimony in regard to budget projections that "things seldom turn out the way you think they're going to." Such projections, of course, were the very keystone of the president's economic program.

And so we come to the first test in the real world, a political world, of the great experiment in new economics, of theories that look very sound in the lab but which have never really been tested in the field.

Draft Director Expects Registration To Improve

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost one of every four 18-year-olds required to register for the draft in 1981 has failed to sign up, but Selective Service Director Thomas K. Turnage predicts compliance will improve.

"The year's not over yet," he said Monday. "There's no reason to believe this year will be any different than previous years. We anticipate compliance will climb above 90 percent."

As of Sept. 1, according to Selective Service System records, 1,336,000 men born in 1963 were supposed to have registered for possible military service, but approximately 307,000 — or 23 percent — did not.

That is the highest number since Selective Service began keeping detailed records, surpassing the approximately 225,000 who failed to register in both 1973 and 1974 in the wake of the Vietnam War.

Turnage said he was "guardedly optimistic" that the 77 percent compliance figure for the first eight months of 1981 will improve by year's end.

A recent Harris Survey, he said, showed that 83 percent of the people polled favored compulsory draft registration.

Selective Service registration, halted after the Vietnam War, was reinstated by Congress at the urging of the Carter administration. The draft, however, has not been resumed.

Both President Reagan and Defense Secretary of Caspar W. Weinberger have voiced strong opposition to reviving the draft and have indicated misgivings about peacetime registration.

Nevertheless, Reagan has continued the registration program started by his predecessor.

In 1980, the first year of renewed registration, men born in 1960 and 1961 were required to sign up. The compliance rate was 95 percent for those born in 1960 and 93 percent for those born the following year, officials said.

Officials said 88 percent of those born in 1962 registered when required to do so last January.

Turnage noted that men born between 1960 and 1962 were registered during a month-long period, while those born in 1963 are being registered under a year-long system.

This year, men are required to register at post offices during the 30 days before or after their 18th birthday.

Turnage said some men had been signing up late this year and this is one reason why he expects the final figures for 1981 compliance to surpass 90 percent.

So far, Selective Service officials have referred the names of only 183 non-registrants to the Justice Department for possible prosecution. Officials say the names were supplied by citizens, often after hearing someone brag about not registering.

Turnage said his "objective is not to incarcerate people. We're trying to encourage them to register."

In today's editions, The Washington Post quoted Barry Lynn, president of Draft Action, an anti-draft organization, as saying the jump in non-compliance for 1981 shows resistance to the draft is growing.

"People who are supposed to register are unconvinced that it's an important obligation of citizenship," Lynn said.

Although he won a second term in a stunning 1977 comeback, Byrne's popularity has been consistently low for eight years. Anti-tax sentiment directed against him is now reinforced by anger that the new indoor sports facility at the Meadowlands complex has been named the Brendan Byrne Arena (which also plays prominently in Kean commercials). Florio often encounters voters on the campaign trail asking him to rename the arena.

Decorating Contest Set ECU Teacher's Suit Is Begun

The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival annual decorating contest for retail stores and businesses will be held again this year, with four categories for judging.

Division I includes retail stores and businesses with 10 or less employees. Division II covers retail stores and businesses with 11 or more employees. Division III includes restaurants and motels and division IV includes banks, savings and loans and other financial institutions.

All decorations must be centered around a segment of the tobacco industry or tobacco farm life. The judges will consider attractiveness, all-around appeal, neatness, originality and the tasteful use of decorating materials.

Judging will be completed Nov. 16-17. Plaques will be awarded for first, second and third place winners in each division. The first place winner in each division will receive $100.

Burke Barbee, festival president, urges all Pitt Countians and out-of-town guests to make a tour of these exhibits. Displays will remain for public viewing through the final day of the festival, Nov. 19.

RALEIGH — A civil trial in which former East Carolina University chemistry teacher Dr. Kuang Hung "Bill" Hu is seeking $800,000 in damages for alleged discrimination and reinstatement as a member of the ECU faculty began Monday in U.S. Eastern District Court here.

Hu's attorney, William G. Pfefferkorn, as the trial opened, said Hu was "the hardest-working member" of the chemistry department, but his contract was not renewed in 1973 because he was Chinese.

Edwin M. Speas Jr., a member of the attorney general's staff who is defending University of North Carolina system officials as well as officials and faculty members at ECU, rebutted the allegations. Speas said Hu was denied tenure because of problems with his teaching techniques and his rapport with faculty and students.

Speas said Hu "was an uncompromising idealist ... uncooperative. He did not fit the needs of the department." He also said Hu demanded too much from his students, did not do enough research or publish enough material and sometimes locked the chemistry lab so it could not be used by others.

Disputing Pfefferkorn's contention that Hu was terminated because of discrimination, Speas said Hu was replaced by an Oriental who since has been promoted and given tenure.

Several students testified Monday that Hu was a fine teacher who gave freely of his time and was patient with slow learners.

The suit is the second complaint protesting the denial of tenure at ECU to be tried in U.S. District Court.

Robert J. Mayberry, a former romance language teacher, charged that his contract was not renewed in 1972 because he criticized language department policies.

Mayberry, in January 1979, was awarded $81,885 in damages by U.S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree, but the judge refused to reinstate him.

That suit is now on appeal before the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals. The attorney general's office appealed the damage award, while Pfefferkorn, Mayberry's attorney, appealed Dupree's order refusing reinstatement.

N.C. Banks Trim Rate

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The state's three largest banks — Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., North Carolina National Bank and First Union National Bank — lowered their prime rates Monday.

The banks followed the lead of the nation's major banks, who lowered their prime lending rate Monday to 17.5 percent from 18 percent in what economists see as a downward trend in all lending rates.

The prime is the rate a bank charges its most credit worthy corporate customers.

Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. was the first to lower its rates last week. The Federal Reserve Board decided Friday to drop the discount rate — the borrowing fee it charges financial institutions — from 14 percent to 13 percent.

Wachovia's Jack Rummion, executive vice president for financial management, said he sees the reduction in both rates as part of a downward trend by the nation's financial markets.

And, Rummion said, the more short-term lending rates fall, the more likely it is that long-term interest rates, such as those charged on home mortgages, also will fall.

Several analysts said the prime rate, which earlier reached a near-record 20½ percent, probably will drop to 17 percent soon and could slide to around 15 percent by year end if the economy keeps slumping.

"I think it's quite likely we'll see a reduction in the prime rate this week," said Malcolm T. Murray Jr., senior vice president for the loan division at First Union National Bank.

Trend Is 'Same'

WILLIAMSTON — Early indications of the voter turnout in two Martin County towns today showed voters going to the polls at about the same rate as in previous elections for town officials.

In Williamston, which has a voter registration of 2,831, a few less than 200 people had voted prior to 11 a.m. A spokesman noted, however, that the general trend is for heavier voting at lunch time and late in the afternoon. The candidate slate in Williamston is for a mayor and five town commissioners.

The picture in Robersonville shows a little stronger interest in early voting. In Precinct 2, which has a total of 612 registered voters, 145 voters had gone to the poll by 11 a.m. Details from Precinct 1 were not available on early voter results. Voters in Robersonville also were making their choice for a mayor and five town commissioners.

DRIVER INJURED — The driver of this car, Timothy Tetterton of Bethel, was injured and admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital following the 11 p.m. collision Monday on Memorial Drive, south of the Farmville Boulevard intersection. identified the driver of the tractor-trailer owned by Barnes Truck Lines of Wilson as Oscar Lee Underwood of Route 5, Clinton. Damage was estimated at $300 to the truck and $8,000 to the car. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest).

NO AGREEMENT — Defense Dept. spokesman Benjamin Welles acknowledges the U.S. eventually hopes to have an "integrated defense" for the Middle East but denied a Washington Post story that implied such agreements have already been made. (AP Laserphoto)

Pentagon Denies Middle East Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although acknowledging the Reagan administration has a long-range goal of establishing an air defense network throughout the Middle East, the Pentagon denies a report an agreement toward that end already has been reached with Saudi Arabia.

Discussions have been held aimed at having combat equipment stored in Saudi Arabia for use by American troops if they had to mobilize in the Middle East, Pentagon spokesman Benjamin Welles acknowledged Monday. He said that would be part of a plan to eventually help Persian Gulf nations develop an "integrated air defense."

But such agreements could be adopted only at the Cabinet level, said Welles, and the discussions — "about strategy, about long-range ideas" — involved only lower-level personnel.

The Washington Post reported in Sunday editions that the Reagan administration's plan to sell five AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia is "one small piece" of a grand defense strategy, including locating U.S. combat equipment in Saudi Arabia and a Saudi-coordinated air defense network involving five other Arab states.

The article said Congress did not have to confront such long-term defense plans while debating the AWACS sale, which the administration can proceed with because of last week's 52-48 vote supporting the deal. Included in the AWACS package was additional weaponry for 62 Saudi F-15 jet fighters.

The Post said U.S. and Saudi officials had agreed among themselves to deny, even to Congress, that such long-range agreements had been reached.

"We are only obliged to tell them (Congress) what is being sold; we are under no obligation to make them understand it," the newspaper quoted one unidentified official as saying.

In response to the article, Welles said: "The implication of slipping past Congress a long-range strategy is in itself ludicrous. Whereas one might like to say that down the line, five to 10 years from now, we would like to have an integrated air defense for the entire Middle East...what we do not have now is an agreement."

Col. Michael Sheridan, deputy director of contingency planning at the Pentagon, said the Saudis have not yet agreed to letting the United States store combat equipment in their country.

"There is a question of what we would like to have as opposed to what the Saudis will allow us to have," Sheridan said. He added, however, "What's been decided at higher levels, I'm not privy to."

The Post article quoted unidentified U.S. diplomatic and military sources as saying there is an understanding that the United States will sell Saudi Arabia an integrated package of top-of-the-line military technology.

In exchange, according to those sources, Saudi Arabia will build and pay for a massive network of command, naval and air defense facilities large enough to sustain U.S. forces in extensive regional combat involving the Soviet Union.

The newspaper quoted the sources as saying that ultimately the Saudis will permit the U.S. to store more than a 90-day supply of equipment, munitions and supplies at the Saudi facilities.

The Post story said the long-range strategy has not been approved by President Reagan or top-level aides. But it quoted unidentified officials as saying many of the basic agreements for the strategy have been reached.

"Any recent suggestion in print that there is already a strategic agreement between the United States and Saudi Arabia is what we distinctly and directly challenge," Welles responded.

A Saudi embassy spokesman in Lebanon, in a statement carried by the official Saudi news agency, also denied the report's accuracy.

Official Calls Uprooting Of Japanese In WWII Wretched

By MIKE FEINSLBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An official who played a small, unwilling role in the uprooting of 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry during World War II says the experience was a wretched one that he hated.

Laurence I. Hewes was director of the western region of a New Deal small farmers' agency, the Farm Security Administration, when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor. He was assigned the job of moving Japanese and Japanese-American farmers in California to 10 resettlement camps in the interior.

"There is something Kafkaesque in the evil of such an assignment," Hewes said today in testimony prepared for Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians. "Everything was so quiet and orderly."

"A field office in an Exclusion Area (which the evacuees had to leave) had the outward appearance of normalcy. Evacuees sat quietly beside desks, soberly answering questions as an official form was filled out. "It was heartbreaking to witness the cooperation of human beings in preparations for their disposal, he said. "Loud expressions of rage and despair would have been a relief. The quiet acceptance of injustice was unnerving."

Hewes described the mood in California, where 110,000 people of Japanese descent lived, in the days after war broke out.

At first, he said, nothing happened, but then came word that a unit of the California National Guard from Salinas, Calif., had been wiped out in the fighting at Corregidor and public opinion took a sharp turn.

"Practically all political leadership joined the anti-Japanese crusade," Hewes said in his written testimony.

"One after the other they competed in vocal support of those who claimed that our Japanese neighbors were a clear and present threat," he said.

California Attorney General Earl Warren, later to become chief justice of the United States, led the call for anti-Japanese measures, he said.

The mayor of Los Angeles fired all people of Japanese ancestry on the city payroll and soon, Hewes said, "no official anywhere dared to challenge the wave of Japanese prejudice that swept the Pacific Coast."

Since many of the older Japanese-born farmers spoke little English, the government was forced to hire young Japanese-American farmers to help in the field offices.

"This was surely an anomaly," he recalled. "The federal government putting on its payroll people who it had identified as dangerous to national security!"

Non-American Japanese were prohibited, by California law, from owning land. Hewes job was to oversee the transfer of their leases to Caucasian farmers.

"We were haunted by another problem of which we only became gradually aware and that was the inferior to mediocre quality of the soil on which these small farms had flourished," he said.

"The magic of Japanese intensive cultivation could not be transferred," he said. "Quite a few people whose mouths had salivated at the thought of gaining possession of these flourishing farmstead had assumed that the lush production was due primarily to good soil. But the real input was not soil fertility, but rather extraordinarily detailed Japanese management based on knowledge and skill."

So the result of the evacuation program, he said, was no gain in national security, but the loss of crops vital to the war effort.

Shuttle's Arm Frail On Earth

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — On its second voyage into orbit, the Columbia will carry an ingenious bionic arm that will eventually turn the space shuttle into a satellite delivery truck.

In space, the arm can grab onto a 60,000-pound object the size of a boxcar and wave it like a handkerchief; on Earth, it is so weak it can't lift itself.

The device is a space crane, designed to lift satellites out of the Columbia's cargo space and release them in orbit and to retrieve other satellites for refurbishing on Earth. It is attached at the forward left side of the shuttle's cargo bay and controlled from the cockpit by an astronaut.

As long and thick as two telephone poles placed end to end, the arm is hinged at the elbow, moving about like an upper arm and a forearm. At the hand, the device loses its human quality. There are no fingers; only three wires that intersect to form a snare — called an end effector.

The booms that link the arm joints are tubes made of a carbon composite material so lightweight that it needs to be braced by a "strongback" in the gravity of Earth.

During the Columbia's mission, the astronauts will practice with the arm for 22 hours just to get acquainted with its operation. On Earth they had to make do with simulation; the six motors on the device just aren't strong enough to move the structure in gravity.

Should there be a question of how the tiles on the underside of Columbia are faring — as there was on last April's flight — there won't be a need for guessing. Astronaut Richard Truly simply would swing the arm out and down and let the wrist camera do the looking.

The first device, designed and built at a cost of $100 million, is a gift from Canada. That country's maple leaf flag and the legend "Canada" are prominently displayed. Canada is under contract to build three other arms for $25 million each.

The arm's shoulder turns, its elbow bends and its wrist swivels. The hand at the end of its 50-foot reach is so accurate it can ensnare a foot-long rod placed on the cargo for just that purpose.

Each of its six rotating joints contains motors, gears and sensors and a network of 300 wires spreads throughout the arm to work like a human nervous system. It even has a kinesthetic sense — the means by which a human knows where a limb is and what it is doing — provided by electric sensors that feed their information into a computer.

Say Resignation Under Pressure

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — E. Blaine Liner, director of the Southern Growth Policies Board for four years, has resigned under pressure, a Raleigh newspaper reported Tuesday.

The News and Observer of Raleigh quoted observers of the research agency in Research Triangle Park as saying that several years of poor communications between the board and the staff led to the resignation.

Mississippi Gov. William F. Winter, chairman of the board, asked for the resignation last month. It will be effective Dec. 1.

The agency seeks ways to plan for growth in the South and gets much of its $556,000 annual budget from its members — 13 Southern states and Puerto Rico.

Liner did not return telephone calls Monday.

Tar Heels Prepare For Big Season Of Skiing

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
The leaves aren't off the trees yet, but in the North Carolina mountains cross-country skiers are already thinking snow.

At Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, skiing classes are already under way. The university added cross-country skiing to its program this semester because of the growing popularity of the sport.

"Right now, we're just getting into condition," said physical education professor Sue Fields. "We're doing dry land training, watching a lot of skiing movies and waiting for snow."

Appalachian State University in Boone also plans a skiing class later this year which will include cross-country and downhill instruction.

Ski instructors say more downhill skiers have taken up cross-country skiing in the past few years. But cross-country isn't a new sport. Europeans have been using it as a mode of travel in winter for centuries.

"It's downhill that's the relatively new sport," said Jim Byrne of Blowing Rock. "Cross-country is genuinely the sport for people of all ages."

In cross-country skiing, the ski is longer and lighter than those used in downhill skiing.

Also the ski is loose at the heel and allows the skier to "walk" along trails.

Byrne, owner of the Sunshine Inn in Blowing Rock, began cross-country skiing in his native Pennsylvania when he was a child. Now his children cross-country ski along the nearby Blue Ridge Parkway.

"Cross-country is such a cheap way to have a great time," Byrne said. "It costs a maximum of $8 a weekend to rent the equipment and a wool cap, sweater and dungarees are perfect clothing. You don't have to spend a lot of money on clothes like you feel compelled to do in downhill skiing."

The Moses Cone area, 3,200 acres of federally owned land just off the parkway and Roan Mountain are two of the most popular cross-country spots. In the Moses Cone area alone, there are 25 miles of trails.

Several outdoor outfitters in the Boone area rent out cross-country equipment. However, North Carolina ski resorts such as Sugar Mountain and Beech Mountain handle no cross-country business. Resort owners say the reason for that is because cross-country is totally dependent on natural snow while man-made snow keeps downhillers on the slopes when no snow falls.

However, Byrne says cross-country skiers can hit the trail with only four inches of snow on the ground.

"The only disadvantage of cross-country is that you have to have natural snow," he said. "But it's great for people of any age. It's inexpensive."

Drivers Collide At Intersection

Cars driven by Wiston Emsley Ethridge of 1016 Brownlea Drive and Timothy Alan Norton of Winterville collided about 5:50 p.m. at the intersection of Evans Street and Arlington Boulevard, police investigators reported.

Officers, who charged Ethridge with following too closely, estimated damage at $1,000 to the Ethridge car and $300 to the Norton vehicle.

National Sales Tax Considered By GOP Senators

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national sales tax to finance Pentagon spending is being considered by Senate Republicans searching for ways to curb swelling budget deficits, sources say.

"It may not go anywhere, but it may," said one source who insisted that the plan is "purely, purely in a talking stage."

"There has just been some discussion about it, no written proposal," the source said.

Tom Griscom, a spokesman for Senate Republican leader

Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, refused to confirm that such a proposal is under consideration.

"My boss, at this point, is not considering any specific tax proposal," Griscom said. "We're awaiting a chance for the (Republican) congressional leaders to meet with the president. It is the president's program and it is his decision to make as to what is in his program."

Griscom did acknowledge, however, that "Senator Baker has discussed the possibility of establishing a national defense fund, but there have been no recommendations for how such a fund should be established and if it was, how it would be funded. He (Baker) has not advocated a sales tax for such purposes."

The sources, who insisted on remaining anonymous, said Baker has discussed the plan with Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, and it also has been mentioned to other Republican senators and White House budget director David A. Stockman.

The idea would be to provide money for defense spending "entirely from one source of revenue," such as a sales tax which would be in effect nationally for "a couple of years," the source said.

There was no indication of the level at which such a tax might be imposed or what goods would be covered.

Sources said it is not contemplated that such a measure would be enacted next year — an election year — although the aim would be to provide revenues for 1983 and 1984.

The Reagan administration has requested $181.8 billion for defense in 1982, $214.9 billion in 1983 and $242.6 billion in 1984.

Public opinion polls show that increased defense spending enjoys widespread support, suggesting that linking a new levy to the military budget might be one way of lessening traditional opposition to higher taxes.

A national sales tax is among numerous plans that congressional Republicans have under study as they search for methods to shrink the budget deficit.

Budget writers in the House and Senate begin work Wednesday on legislation that will set binding revenue floors and spending ceilings for the 1982 fiscal year that began Oct. 1. The resolution that both the House and Senate finally agree upon will set guidelines for tax-writing and other committees to follow as Congress decides on a mix of spending reductions and tax increases to hold down deficits.

Democrats on the Senate Budget Committee called a news conference this afternoon to announce their plans for dealing with the budget resolution. A draft "statement of principles" obtained by The Associated Press says the Democrats "can neither condone nor support those administration policies that would force additional spending cuts in areas that are critical to the safety and well-being of our nation's future."

While not mentioning the national sales tax, Baker told reporters Monday that Senate Republicans are still in the "list-building stage" in trying to come up with tax proposals.

He said that while he expects Congress to approve a tax increase in 1982, he doubts it would have much effect in the current fiscal year.

Tax increases for the current year are a "diminishing possibility," he said. "Three or four billion (dollars) would probably be an upper limit," he said. The bulk of the tax bite would come in fiscal 1983 and 1984, he added.

However, Baker made an unusual departure from President Reagan's legislative script when he said Congress should approve a new windfall profits tax if it decides to phase out price controls on natural gas.

Baker said he favors a "phased and gradual" decontrol of natural gas, along with "some kind of tax."

One recent study estimated that immediate lifting of controls, coupled with a tax like the one voted on the oil industry, could raise $75 billion over four years.

But White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Monday that the president remains opposed to a "windfall profits" levy and would veto any legislation imposing one.

Senate GOP leaders are looking for between $50 billion and $70 billion in new tax revenue through 1984. Until recently, their discussion had focused on a wide range of tax increases that could raise a few billion dollars each, such as excise levies on tobacco, alcohol and gasoline.

But Baker said Monday that the search is shifting toward one large tax instead. "I think that when you have a whole bunch of them (tax increases) it's much more difficult" to pass in Congress, he said.

Under current law, price controls on about 60 percent of the nation's natural gas are to be phased out by Jan. 1, 1985. The other 40 percent would remain under control after that date. The Reagan administration has been considering submitting legislation to Congress to lift all controls by 1985.

A "windfall profits" tax actually has nothing to do with profits but would simply take a percentage of natural gas increases caused by decontrol.

Bail Reduced For Woman Facing Brinks Robbery, Killing Charges

NEW YORK (AP) — With her lawyer protesting that charges against her were "totally fabricated," bail was reduced from $500,000 to $250,000 for Cynthia Boston, charged with conspiracy involving a Brink's truck robbery and three killings last month.

Meanwhile, in Rockland County Court in New York City, Eve Rosahn, the woman accused of supplying two vehicles used in the bloody heist in which two policemen and one Brink's guard were killed, also was held Monday on $250,000 bail.

Miss Rosahn, 30, faces up to 15 years in prison if convicted on charges of criminal facilitation.

Earlier in the day, in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Miss Boston's arrest in Mississippi on federal conspiracy charges last week was denounced by her lawyers, William Kunstler and Chokwe Lumumba, who is also a regional vice president of an organization calling itself the Republic of New Afrika.

Miss Boston, 33, was said to be minister of information for the New Afrika group, which seeks to make an independent black nation out of the territory of five Southern states.

Lumumba charged that Miss Boston was arrested by "a heavily armed band of U.S. terror troops" on "totally fabricated" charges and that "she was thousands of miles away at the time of the Brink's incident."

At Miss Rosahn's bail

hearing, Judge Harry Edelstein fixed the $250,000 bail despite a claim by the state that she was a poor bail risk.

"The court feels this is a serious matter and it would be very easy to set no bail," Edelstein declared. But he added that he was persuaded that the defendant, who has lived all her life in New York City, and whose mother was present in court, should have bail set in a sum "large enough to make sure she appears in court."

"That bail isn't reasonable; it's punitive," declared Miss Rosahn's attorney, Sharon Flood.

Edelstein ordered the defense bail application and the district attorney's answering papers sealed from press and public. The judge said they contained hearsay information from New York City police and the FBI about Miss Rosahn's reputation and character.

Outside court, Rockland County District Attorney Kenneth Gribetz denied a defense charge that his office was responsible for Miss Rosahn being fired from her New York City job during the course of the Brink's investigation. He did not say where she had worked.

Gribetz also said there were no plans to move her from the Rockland County jail, as has been done in the case of four suspects charged in the robbery-murders.

Three of four people arrested in Nyack, N.Y., and charged with taking part in the Oct. 20 heist and killings were described by the FBI as members of the radical Weather Underground. They were the long-sought Katherine Boudin, Judith Clark and David Gilbert.

Miss Boston's arrest resulted from a photo identification of her as one of the people seen loading the contents of a Weather Underground "safe house" in Mount Vernon onto a van after the Brink's robbery.

The apartment contained bloody clothing and a fingerprint of another person, William Johnson, for whom a warrant has been issued.

Kunstler labeled the attempt to enlarge an armed robbery into an underground conspiracy "a fraud and a fake."

In referring to the New Afrika group, Kunstler invoked the American Revolution and said, "Seeking independence by force is not illegal in this country."

A Meteorite?

NORTH ADAMS, Mass. (AP) — A 13-year-old junior astronomer and his father took the day off to travel to Harvard University today to find out if the baseball-size object the lad says fell from the sky into his family vegetable garden is really a meteorite.

If it is, said the father, Anthony M. Sarkis, 37, an employee of General Electric's plastics division, said he was told it may be the first meteorite ever known to fall in Massachusetts.

Sarkis said he and his son, Anthony Jr., will take the object to Wood for tests.

"We don't know what it is," said the elder Sarkis. "It had a tail on it. It could be a meteorite or a piece of a satellite."

The younger Sarkis, an eighth grader, said he was adjusting his telescope in his front yard Halloween night when he spotted a red fireball shoot across the sky and disappear behind his house. Then he heard a boom as loud as a shotgun blast.

When he went to investigate, there, among the debris of the garden, was a crater a foot wide and four inches deep. And inside the hole was a glowing red rock.

The elder Sarkis was suspicious when summoned from work by his son.

"After all, it was Halloween," he said.

The father also marveled that Sunday morning, after a night outside, the object was still warm.

The boy later told the police. As his story got around, his home was visited by Mayor Richard C. Lamb and William G. Seeley, a physics professor at North Adams State College.

"Not in a dozen lifetimes will you see this," Seeley told the boy. "This is a rare occasion. You should be proud of yourself."

Objectionable

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Higher educated respondents — and those with higher incomes — lead a majority of North Carolinians opposing a payroll tax, a poll by the University of North Carolina School of Journalism reveals.

The poll, conducted by The Charlotte News, showed that 61 percent of the 592 people surveyed statewide oppose the concept of a city payroll tax.

Some 49 percent of those with less than a high school education opposed the tax for city employees, but nearly 70 percent of those with a college education were against the measure.

And while only 44 percent of respondents earning less than $10,000 a year opposed the tax, more than two-thirds of those earning more than $20,000 annually indicated they were not in favor of the tax.

Under state law, North Carolina cities aren't allowed to levy such a tax. But some Charlotte officials have mentioned it as a way to collect more money to pay for the costs of city growth.

Many workers in Charlotte drive to their jobs every day from small South Carolina towns or counties surrounding Mecklenburg.

So far, the General Assembly has been unwilling to go along with the tax and, according to the poll, state residents support that decision.

"I'm not surprised at all (at the results)," said Charlotte Finance Director Jack Fennell. "I doubt that people look at the revenue function of government that critically, so you naturally get a more emotional response."

City governments are beginning to feel a greater need for new sources of money, Fennell said, because of greater responsibilities being piled on by federal and state governments.

So far, no extra money has come along with the extra duties, Fennell said.

Tom Ray, chairman of the Mecklenburg County Board of Commissioners said he would prefer an extra penny tacked onto the sales tax. But state legislators also have turned down requests to let cities and counties add to their local sales taxes.

Representatives from rural areas oppose the idea of a payroll tax because the people who elect them are sometimes those who drive to work in large cities in other counties.

"HERE'S SOUTHERN RAILWAY'S ANSWER TO THE ENERGY SHORTAGE FOR THE LUMBER INDUSTRY."

"THE LONG AND..."

The simple fact is, that the way the energy situation is today and, undoubtedly, will be tomorrow, railroads make more sense for long hauls than trucks do.

Because railroads are a lot more energy-efficient than trucks.

But does that mean trucks will soon be a thing of the past for the lumber industry? No. We think trucks have a very definite place in the future of transportation.

As long as trucks are used in the right place.

Harold H. Hall, President
Southern Railway System
Washington, D.C. 20013

...THE SHORT OF IT"

The right job for trucks is the short haul where the railroad begins and ends.

We believe so much in this concept and its important implications for the future of this country, that we've set up a system to capitalize on our advantage for long hauls and trucks' advantage for short hauls. We've made interchange agreements with over 180 trucking firms all over our route to give you dock to dock service even when your dock isn't on our railroad.

We think the wave of the future is to have each mode of transportation do what it does best.

We have the energy for the long haul.

Study Finds Inflation Eroding Welfare Benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although the maximum welfare payment has decreased in only one state since 1970, inflation has eroded the purchasing power of most of the nation's welfare recipients, a new study says.

Only welfare recipients in Wisconsin and California are receiving more today than in 1970, taking inflation into account, under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program, according to a congressional study.

The current maximum for a family of four receiving benefits under the joint federal-state program ranges from $120 a month in Mississippi to $634 in Alaska.

The report, released Monday by Rep. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., shows that in Texas the maximum AFDC benefit for a family of four has dropped from $179 to $141 since 1970, making it the only state where the maximum payment has fallen.

On the other end of the scale, California's maximum AFDC benefit for a family of four has risen 172 percent since 1970, from $221 to $601, while Wisconsin's has risen 159 percent, from $217 to $563.

Inflation, as measured by the Consumer Price Index, has risen 135 percent over the same period.

Statistics gathered for Downey by the Congressional Research Service indicate that five states — Arkansas, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon and Washington — lowered their maximum AFDC payment in the past year.

Michigan had raised benefits in October 1980, but because of continuing financial woes has since pared them three times and will make another cut on Dec. 1 that will wipe out last year's gain.

Eighteen other states boosted their AFDC benefits from 1980 to 1981, while 27 made no change.

States set their own benefit levels for AFDC, an $11 billion program that covers more than 11 million people, most of them children. The federal government on the average pays 54 percent of the benefits, while the states cover the rest.

Congress tightened the eligibility rules this summer to save $1.1 billion during fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1, and $11 billion over the next five years. About 400,000 poor families, primarily those with income from work, are expected to lose their benefits entirely, and 280,000 families will get smaller checks.

Here is a state-by-state list of the maximum AFDC benefits for a family of four in July of the indicated years, followed by the percent change since 1970. The maximum figures for Michigan and New York are for Wayne County and Suffolk County, respectively, which have the highest levels in the state.

Gov. Hunt Addresses Meeting Of Largest N.C. Baptist Groups

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt was among the speakers Monday as North Carolina's Southern Baptists opened a two-day meeting at the Greensboro Coliseum.

He told a crowd of more than 7,000 people that he had worked hard to reduce the crime rate in North Carolina but urged Southern Baptists to add their support to his efforts.

"The longer I serve, the more I understand the limits of what a government can do," Hunt said. "What's really needed is to prevent young people from becoming criminals in the first place."

The governor also asked representatives of the Baptist State Convention and the General Baptist State Convention, assembled for the second joint gathering in seven years, for endorsement of a program in which adults work with troubled youths.

"It says in the Bible, 'Raise up a child in the way that he should go and he will not stray from it,'" Hunt told the applauding Baptists.

The state-wide program Hunt asked the Convention to initiate would be totally volunteer and work through local churches. Although it would not be a government program, Rich Maxson, Hunt's special assistant for Juvenile Affairs, would be helping with the program.

In other action, missionary efforts were addressed by the Joint Convention. The members of the General Baptist group, representing more than 365,000 black Baptists in 1,700 churches across the state, met jointly with Southern Baptists representing about 1,130,000 members in 3,470 churches.

At the first session, plans were unveiled for the Convention's 1982 Joint Evangelistic Crusade. The theme of the crusade is "Here's Hope," and the program itself is similar to Hunt's proposed effort but also would help adults.

"We need every church and every missionary involved, so we can reach anyone who doesn't belong to a church," said C.W. Ward of Raleigh, vice chairman of the Crusade Committee.

Cecil E. Sherman, president of the Baptist State Convention, said the Joint Convention would probably continue to be held "once every five or six years."

"I doubt very seriously that this (joint convention) will lead to a union of the two conventions," he said. "If someone asks me would I vote for union, I'd say yes, if they (General Baptists) want it. But I don't think they want it. There are three of us to every one of them.

Devised 'Talking Computer'

By JACK EDWARDS

A blind ECU student and a Voice of America electronics technician as a team have developed a talking computer that has won them national recognition, a computer and an invitation to Washington last weekend to exhibit at the National Academy of Sciences.

Richard Hartness of Rocky Mount, totally blinded in an accident 12 years ago at the age of 13, is a senior at ECU majoring in science education and a pioneer in the development of chemical laboratory devices for the visually impaired.

Bill Cope, originally from Boston, is in charge of the repairs to the frequency synthesizers for the Voice of America, world-wide. With input from Hartness, he developed the talking features helpful to the blind and applied them to the computer.

Talking computer systems are available commercially for $4,000 to $5,000, not including the computer, but Cope and Hartness have developed the same types of features for about $500.

The team competed in Atlanta last August in a contest sponsored jointly by Johns Hopkins University and the National Science Foundation. Entries were devices that have been developed to help the physically impaired. The Hartness-Cope system was awarded a certificate of achievement by Johns Hopkins, placing them in the top 30 in the United States. They also won an Apple computer and the trip to Washington, where the winners will conduct a two-day workshop to share their devices for helping the handicapped.

The device Cope developed will spell out words on the computer's TV screen, translate them in international Morse Code, or say them in "synthetic" speech, which sounds like robots as they are portrayed in the movies.

Cope has also invented a device that "announces" the frequency of the radio. He develops a project at the bench and Hartness experiments with it, determining features that would be more helpful to a blind person. Cope then returns to the drawing board and incorporates the improvements.

Hartness says, "We hope to demonstrate to non-handicapped people that progress is being made so that all types of activities are accessible to the handicapped and we hope to show the handicapped that prices are coming down on devices which give them more independence."

Congress Members Give Little To Charity Drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's principal charity drive, the Combined Federal Campaign, gets so little support from members of Congress and their staff employees that the situation is "disgraceful," Sen. Dennis DeConcini says. Although approximately 60 percent of all federal employees in the Washington made contributions last year, records of the charity campaign show only 7.7 percent of senators, representatives and their staffs did so. The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

DeConcini, an Arizona Democrat, decrying the low participation rate, said he gives to charity both at home and through the Washington fundraising drive as part of "supporting the community."

The campaign is the government's equivalent of United Way. In the Washington area, the Combined Federal Campaign gave the United Way $10.2 million of the $12.4 million it collected last year, with the balance going to other charities. This year's campaign now is under way.

Congressional aides say the poor showing is the result of the desire of members and their employees to contribute to charities in their home districts.

But campaign officials took another view. "They live here for all practical purposes," said William A. Schafner, director of the campaign.

"We really have the reverse of 'I gave at the office.' We gave at home," said Harry Nicholas, administrative assistant to Rep. Barber B. Conable, R-N.Y.

Two people in Conable's office gave $100 to the campaign last year. Conable, said Nicholas, gives to "several United Ways back in his district."

Several other members gave similar explanations.

Overall, Congress raised $63,449 from its 11,869 employees. The Treasury Department, with about 45 percent more employees, raised nearly 10 times as much money as Congress, $628,848, to lead all federal agencies.

Military employees in the Washington area, considered equally transient by campaign officials as congressional employees, had a 64 percent participation rate.

May Ask Assembly Aid For Disturbed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt says he may urge the General Assembly to appropriate an extra $8.1 million in aid to disturbed and violent children in North Carolina.

Hunt told about 100 mental health, corrections and education professionals Monday that the request depends on whether local agencies have found disturbed children and planned their treatment.

The professionals were attending a workshop, sponsored by the state Department of Human Resources, designed to show them how to plan programs for severely disturbed and aggressive youth.

"As tight as dollars are right now, and as many cuts as we are experiencing in needed human services programs, I think that is the only right way to do it, ask for the dollars when they are needed," Hunt said.

"But I can promise you that when the programs are ready, I will ask for the money," he said.

The 1981 Legislature appropriated $1.9 million in July and $2.6 million in October for treatment and education programs for disturbed and aggressive youths.

A 1979 class-action suit known as the "Willie M." case contended that such youths were improperly served by the state and were often relegated to mental institutions, prisons or training schools.

In a consent decree filed with the U.S. District court, state officials promised to provide treatment for all such children.

Mongrel Is Stowaway

NEW YORK (AP) — A mongrel used to roaming the docks and dives of Manhattan's waterfront stowed away for a brief taste of luxury, on the Queen Elizabeth 2.

Cunard Line spokeswoman Alice Marshall said Monday that Piccolo, a 9-pound black, brown and white mutt, had become the first dog to stow away on the luxury liner since it put to sea 12 years ago.

It was a dog's life aboard the cruise from New York to the Bahamas — Piccolo was the only canine aboard and had the run of the ship's luxurious kennel, usually reserved for pets of wealthy passengers.

The ship, which docked in Nassau on Monday, is due back in New York on Thursday.

Charges Cover-Up On Spy Ring In Britain

LONDON (AP) — A Laborite member of Parliament has accused Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and her attorney general of trying to cover up the extent of the Soviet spy ring in British intelligence services. He renewed his demand for a full investigation.

"It seems that the attorney general misled the House," Dennis Canavan told the House of Commons Monday. "It seems, too, that the prime minister was involved in a cover-up."

Canavan's charges stemmed from the revelation during the weekend by a former military intelligence agent, Leo Long, that during World War II he passed secrets to the Russians through art historian Anthony Blunt and confessed in 1964 when Blunt did.

Long said he had not been formally given immunity from prosecution when he confessed, as Blunt was. But he said he was told by counter-espionage officials that he probably would never be prosecuted.

Canavan and other members of Commons were angered because Attorney General Sir Michale Havers told them in 1979, after Blunt's treachery came to light, that he was the only double agent in the security services who had been granted immunity since World War II.

"It seems to me that this man (Long) did, in fact, receive immunity from prosecution," said Canavan. "I am still convinced that there is a massive Establishment cover-up here."

Welcome to the bank that grew up on the farm.

At BBT, we feel very comfortable lending money to farmers.

After all, these are the people we grew up with. Our very first customers were farmers.

And even today, we lend a bigger percentage of our money to farmers than any other major bank in the state.

We also manage more farm land than any of our competitors. And a number of our bankers even have their own farms.

We know firsthand what it's like to borrow money for equipment, seed, chemicals or repairs. We know what kind of repayment schedule makes sense for a farm's cash flow.

We know where farm money comes from—and where it goes.

In fact, no financial institution in North Carolina is as committed to the farmer as we are.

Come in and see us. You'll feel right at home.

After all, we grew up together. And neither of us is finished growing yet.

Nobody works harder for your money.

Doctor Says Big Drug Prescriptions 'Forced'

By LES SEAGO
Associated Press Writer
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dr. George Nichopoulos told a Criminal Court jury that he was forced to prescribe huge amounts of amphetamines for Jerry Lee Lewis because the singer was heavily addicted to them.

Nichopoulos, on trial charged with prescribing excessive quantities of drugs for Lewis, the late rock 'n' roll king Elvis Presley and several other patients, answered questions from the prosecution Monday about his methods of treating drug abusers.

The silver-haired internist, Presley's physician for 11 years, was to return to the witness stand today for more cross-examination.

The month-long trial was recessed 90 minutes early Monday to allow prosecutors and defense lawyers a chance to agree on "certain items to attempt to speed up the trial," Judge Bernie Weinman told the six-man, six-woman jury.

Beginning with the case of Lewis, Assistant District Attorney Jewett Miller questioned Nichopoulos at length about each patient's medical records and prescriptions.

In Lewis' case, there were at least five hospitalizations and dozens of prescriptions for amphetamines, barbiturates and narcotics over a three-year period.

Nichopoulos, who was on the witness stand less than three hours Friday answering Neal's questions, admits writing most of the hundreds of prescriptions entered into evidence.

But he maintains that he was making a good-faith effort to treat his patients' drug abuse problems. He said all of the patients who had drug problems became addicted either while under the care of other physicians or through purchases from "street sources."

Under Miller's cross-examination Monday, Nichopoulos repeated his earlier testimony that his goal with Lewis and other patients was to earn their confidence, become their sole source of drugs, then gradually reduce their drug intake.

Miller raised a question about a prescription Nichopoulos wrote for 100 amphetamine tablets about two weeks after Lewis was released from a hospital where he underwent detoxification.

"Mr. Lewis had already started back taking this medication before I prescribed it," Nichopoulos said.

When Miller, referring again to Lewis' medical records, questioned Nichopoulos about a prescription for 28 sleeping pills less than a week after he had been treated for a drug

Housing Auth

 Laney said. The development would involve two-, three- and four-bedroom units.

Commissioners, who authorized Laney to pursue rezoning of the property, approved a resolution to have attorney Kenneth Hite proceed with land acquisition services and Cameron Dudley of the architectural firm of Dudley & Shoe to handle architectural services for the new development.

In other business, Laney said Section Eight program activity continues to move along "fairly well" with 86 of the 100 units authorized in the existing housing segment under lease and 53 of the 100 units allocated under the moderate rehabilitation program under lease. Some 20 more units are being processed, he said.

All 60 units in the University Towers mid-rise development for the elderly off East Third Street are leased, Laney reported.

Commissioners authorized the staff to obtain price quotes on computer services for the authority in areas such as payroll preparation, utilities computations, accounts payable and receivable, inventories and tenant applications. Ken Noland, director of operations, said HUD was approached about the possibility of the authority going to computerization and HUD saw no problems with the idea.

Noland said it is felt that the use of computer services will save many man hours for the staff and help in the preparation of paperwork required by HUD.

The authority's director of tenant affairs, Sallye Streeter, reported that seven temporary vacancies occurred in the six housing developments in October. She said average rents for the month included: NC 22-1 (Meadowbrook), $93.98; NC 22-2 (Kearney Park), $101.99; NC 22-3 (Moyewood), $107.51; NC 22-4 (Moyewood), $109.77; NC 22-5 (Hopkins Park), $76.84; and NC 22-6 (Newtown), $84.21, for an overall average of $96.77.

Mrs. Streeter said that as of Oct. 1, there were 638 families residing in units owned by the authority, including 611 black tenants and 27 white tenants.

Laney said that roof work continues in the Meadowbrook and Kearney Park areas, with 50 of the scheduled 73 units in those areas now having new roofs.

He informed commissioners that this year's payment in lieu of taxes to the city, which is based upon actual unit rents less utility costs, will amount to $9,593. Laney said the figure is higher than projected initially for the year but lower than the previous year. The director said that if utility costs continue to escalate, the payment in lieu of taxes figure could eventually reach zero.

Vending Machine For School Lunchroom Fails Earn Okay

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Jungle juice, a sneeze guard and a black market in cookies. It was like a wild script for a film on student jinks, only it was for real. At the information meeting of the Greenville City School Board of Education Monday night, school board members and Linda Tingle, food services director for the school system, engaged in a spirited dialogue about these three colorful topics.

Behind the discussion was a serious purpose. Ms. Tingle was seeking approval of two things — permission to operate a vending machine for non-carbonated drinks in the Rose High Cafeteria, and a recommendation to offer a limited-choice lunch program at South Greenville School.

Ms. Tingle explained that the current sale of jungle juice, along with punch in cartons at Rose, resulted in a mad crush of students ganging up to buy the popular products and that similar canned products could be offered in a vending machine which would eliminate the rush and confusion. Her suggestions for a change in lunch program at South Greenville entailed four recommendations, one of which would involve the purchase of a sneeze guard for protection of food choices displayed.

Based on a study that shows only a minor difference in student participation at Wahl-Coates, where a limited choice is offered, school board members opted for a no-change stance at South Greenville. On the proposal for a vending machine at Rose that would offer canned drinks at 40 cents per can, board members concurred in denying that a valid need existed for such a machine, as the juices are supplemental offerings to three kinds of milk and orange juice.

The bit about the black market in cookies surfaced during a discussion by board members in their concern for guarding against the possibility of students using all their lunch money to purchase cookies or other sweets. A couple of school principals at the meeting declared it was impossible to monitor or curtail student purchases. In instances where such a restrictive move had been tried, it was discovered that enterprising students were conducting a black market for cookies.

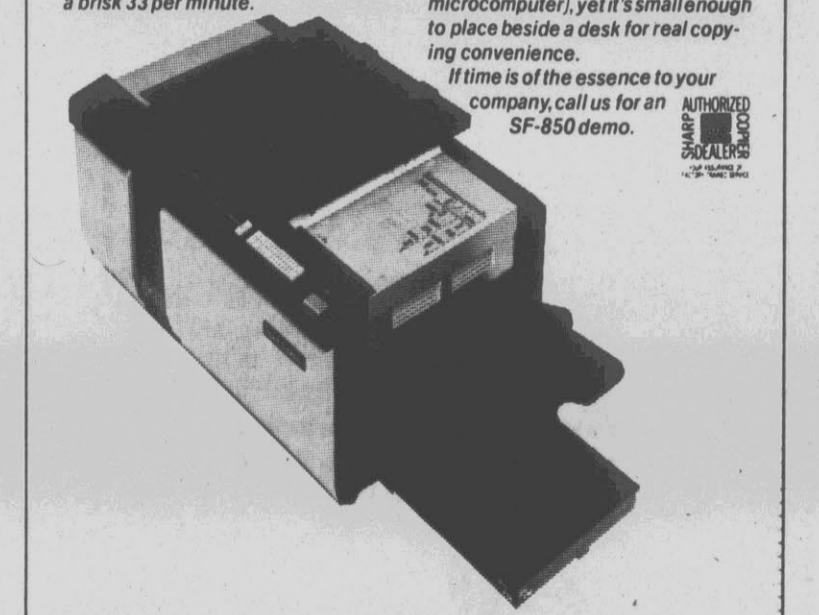

The board requested that Dr. Delma Blinson, the system's superintendent, have school staffs do some research to determine what percentage of students not using the school lunch program bring bag lunches to school. Their basic concern is to try to make certain that all children have access to lunch, either through the food service or by bringing their own.

Broncs Hold Off Late Vike Rally, 19-17

DENVER (AP) — A 19-3 lead with 8½ minutes remaining ought to be safe, and the Denver Broncos apparently thought so, too.

But they hadn't taken into account the Minnesota Vikings' two-minute offense, which produced two quick touchdowns in the closing minutes and nearly a winning field goal. But when Rick Danmeier's long field-goal try fell short on the final play, the Broncos escaped with a 19-17 National Football League victory Monday night.

"You have to wind up and hit it just right, and I just didn't kick it far enough," said Danmeier.

winning boot was made possible by an ill-advised decision by Denver Coach Dan Reeves, who ordered his team to go for a first down on fourth-and-one at the Bronco 40 with three minutes remaining.

"I may have done some stupider things in my life, but I must have been real little when I did them," said Reeves.

"Thank God it didn't cost us the game." Minutes earlier, the Vikings, using a hurry-up, no-huddle offense, had scored to draw within 19-10.

Reeves' decision backfired as fullback Larry Canada was stopped for no gain by defensive end Randy Holloway. Two plays later, the Vikings made it 19-17 on Tony Galbreath's second TD of the quarter.

The Vikings got the ball one more time with 2:09 left. With Tommy Kramer finding the open receiver repeatedly, they drove to the Bronco 26. On third down, Ted Brown was dumped for a 2-yard loss by Denver cornerback Perry Smith, and Danmeier came on for the 46-yard field goal effort, which fell about 5 yards short.

Smith, who started the game in place of Louis Wright who had suffered a strained calf muscle in pre-game warmups, said he was just trying to make a solid tackle on Brown's run. "On something like that, you either make it or miss it. I made it."

"We were surprised they went into the hurry-up offense so early. We couldn't get set on defense, and they hurt us."

The first half ended in a 3-3 tie as Danmeier and Fred Steinfort traded field goals. Denver went ahead 6-3 midway through the third period when Steinfort, mired in a season-long slump, connected from 49 yards out.

After a Minnesota fumble at the Denver 6, the Broncos marched 94 yards for the game's first touchdown, which came on Rob Lytle's 5-yard run with 10:16 left. Three plays later, cornerback Aaron Kyle intercepted, setting up Craig Morton's 15-yard TD pass to Steve Watson with 8:32 left.

The Vikings then staged their furious rally. "We knew our only chance was to put the ball in the end zone quick," said Kramer of the decision to go to the two-minute drill so early. "We were trying to get it close enough to kick a field goal at the end, but Denver has a very fine defense."

The victory raised Denver's record to 6-3, while Minnesota dropped to 5-4.

Former Pirate Split End Claims All Not Well In ECU Grid Camp

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the first of a two-part series dealing with allegations by former East Carolina split end Larry O'Roark concerning the Pirate football program.

Today's story deals mainly with O'Roark's charges that he left the team not because of personal reasons but because of problems within the football program — problems that, he says, many see but are unwilling to discuss for the record.

Tomorrow's article will deal primarily with refutations of O'Roark's charges by Emory and a number of ECU players.

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

When Larry O'Roark quit the East Carolina football team two weeks ago Head Coach Ed Emory announced his leaving was based on personal problems and was not connected with football.

It now appears, however, that O'Roark's decision was based in large part on problems within the ECU football program, problems O'Roark says include a lack of respect for and confidence in Emory and an inability by Emory to motivate his players.

"The primary reason I left was I lost respect for Coach Emory," O'Roark said. "I respect everybody on the coaching staff except the man. Some of the players respect him, but not some of the assistants. I've seen the way he's treated other people and what he's done to me."

"When he first came in he tried to gain the respect of the players, but he hasn't been able to. If he hasn't gained it by now..." O'Roark said, not finishing his thought.

"There is a great deal of dissension and a great deal of disrespect for Emory within the team," O'Roark said. "We were questioning everything he (Emory) tells us. We can't know that what he's telling us is right."

"Right now a lot of players are re-evaluating what's going on," he added. "Everybody's re-evaluating what's going on."

"The facts need to come out. People around here really don't realize what's going on," O'Roark said. "The players who are playing now know something's wrong. The players are tight, tight as hell and they know something's wrong, but most aren't going to talk about it."

O'Roark, who in 1979 received the Rick Bankston Memorial Award given to the scout team player of the year, might not have talked either had it not been for a news article in The Daily Reflector quoting school officials as saying he left the team for personal problems that did not relate to football.

"I read some of the players that (the news article) and they just laughed," he said. "They said, 'This is just b---. Why don't they tell the truth?'"

"There are a lot of instances involved, but the main point is that I did not quit because of personal problems."

Emory, a 1960 graduate of ECU, is in his second year of a three-year contract as Pirate head coach, his first head coaching job on the collegiate level. Prior to coming to ECU Emory was an assistant coach at Duke, Clemson and Georgia Tech.

The Pirates were 4-7-0 a year ago in Emory's first season and are 4-5-0 this season with two games remaining.

Rumors have circulated and persisted since early in the year about a growing groundswell of discord and discontent within the football program. O'Roark, however, is the first player to talk on the record about the problems.

A number of other sources, both players on the team and others close to the team, confirmed O'Roark's assessment of what is going on. Asked if O'Roark's view of the problems surrounding the football program were on target, a number of sources, who asked their names not be used, replied that they were and that the problems have existed for much of the season.

Many players will not talk on the record about the problems because of a fear of losing their scholarships. A number, however, will talk off the record about the problems.

Some — including a number of starters — agree with O'Roark's assessment of the problems. Others, however, disagree, saying O'Roark has blown the problems out of proportion.

Typical of the comments received from players who support Emory was that offered by starting offensive right guard Bud LaCock.

"I think every football player re-evaluates things at some point," LaCock said. "But I believe the thing has been blown out of proportion."

"Coach Emory has my respect, but I guess some of the seniors don't respect him because they're not playing enough and they feel Coach Emory's out to get them."

"It is taking longer for Coach Emory to gain the respect of some of the players, but I don't think that's a big problem."

(Other comments from players supporting Emory will appear in tomorrow's story.)

O'Roark, a 6-0, 188-pound junior who until he quit split time at split end with freshman Ricky Nichols, is only the latest player to leave the ECU football team. Over the past few weeks three players — all of whom have put in substantial playing time this season — have quit.

Senior noseguard Wally Myers, a walk-on from Goldsboro who earned a grant last season, quit before the Duke game. Myers started early in the season as he and Fee Griffin split time at noseguard.

Tight end Will Saunders, a senior from Franklin, Va., quit before the Southwest Louisiana game. Saunders started some last year but injured a thumb during this year's preseason and was never able to regain his starting position.

Neither Myers nor Saunders could be reached for comment. Both players were said by ECU officials, using information supplied by Emory, to have left the team because of personal problems and not because of a conflict with Emory.

O'Roark, Myers and Saunders join nearly a dozen other players who have quit the team this season, over half of whom were on scholarship. Another dozen or so quit between

Pittsburgh Moves To No. One As Fifth Leader Of The Season

By The Associated Press

The Pittsburgh Panthers moved into the No. 1 position today in The Associated Press college football poll, the first time in the poll's 46-year history that six teams have held the top spot in a single season.

Michigan, Notre Dame, Southern California, Texas and Penn State also have been No. 1 this season, but failed to hold the lead. The years with five No. 1 teams were 1950, 1958, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1965 and 1977.

Penn State was the latest No. 1 team to fall, losing 17-14 Saturday to Miami of Florida. That opened the door for Pitt, a 29-24 winner over Boston College, to move up from second place. The Panthers received 49 of 65 first-place votes and 1,283 of a possible 1,300 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

This week's poll is the 500th, not counting preseason polls, since The AP ratings began in 1936.

Clemson, which crushed Wake Forest 82-24, moved up from third place to second with nine first-place ballots and 1,201 points. Southern Cal rose from fourth to third with seven firsts and 1,178 points following a 41-17 victory over Washington State that knocked the Cougars, 14th last week, out of the Top Twenty.

Defending national champ Georgia trounced Temple 49-3 and climbed from fifth to fourth with 1,075 points. The Bulldogs are followed by Texas, up from sixth to fifth with 1,007 points after whipping Texas Tech 26-9. Penn State is sixth with 869 points.

Alabama's 13-10 triumph over Mississippi State boosted the Crimson Tide from eighth to seventh with 861 points and dropped MSU from seventh to 15th. North Carolina, a 17-10 victor over Maryland, jumped from ninth to eighth with 767 points. The Tar Heels entertain Clemson in Chapel Hill on Saturday.

Arizona State, idle last weekend, moved up from 10th to ninth with 626 points after beating Texas A&M 27-7. Mississippi State was the only team to fall out of the Top Ten.

The Second Ten consists of Nebraska, Michigan, Miami, Florida State, Mississippi State, Washington, Oklahoma, Ohio State, Arkansas and Southern Mississippi.

Last week, it was Iowa State, Nebraska, SMU, Washington State, Michigan, Iowa, Florida State, Washington, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Iowa State dropped out of the Top Twenty by losing to Kansas State 10-7, Washington State was bumped out by Southern Cal and Iowa fell out after a 24-7 loss to Illinois.

Replacing them are Miami, Ohio State and Southern Mississippi. Miami, which was as high as 13th earlier in the year, returned after defeating Penn State. Ohio State, which had been as high as seventh, had been out of the rankings for three weeks. But the Buckeyes made it back with a 45-33 triumph over Purdue.

Southern Mississippi, which blanked North Texas State 22-0, made it for the first time this season. The Golden Eagles have a 6-0-1 record, the only blemish being a 13-13 tie with Alabama.

Buccaneers Have Been Thorn In ECU's Side

East Tennessee State, East Carolina University's foe for this Saturday's Homecoming contest, has long been a thorn in the side of the Pirates.

The Buccaneers, which haven't appeared on the East Carolina schedule in the past seven years, hold an advantage over the Pirates in the won-lost column.

The six game series, which began in 1954, has seen one tie, one ECU victory and four East Tennessee victories.

Most of those came when the Buccaneers were members of the Ohio Valley Conference. Since East Carolina left the Southern, the Tennessee school has moved into that league, along with Marshall University.

The tie was in the first meeting of the two schools, in 1954, a 6-6 deadlock. After that, East Tennessee won four straight from 1955 through 1970, 34-20, 17-7, 7-0 and 10-0. East Carolina did win the last meeting in 1974, 24-8.

The Buccaneers will bring a winning record into the game, having posted a 5-3 mark to this point of the season. They are 3-2 against Southern Conference opposition.

East Tennessee won its opening game against Tennessee Tech, 31-22, but then bowed to Louisiana Tech, 31-3, following that with a 21-0 loss at the hands of Furman.

Then came four straight wins, 14-10 over Marshall, 17-13 over The Citadel, 34-23 over Western Carolina, and 34-8 over Wofford.

The Buccaneers lost their last outing, 17-0 against UT-Chattanooga.

East Carolina has played only one common opponent with East Tennessee, Western Carolina, which lost to ECU in the season opener, 42-6.

The Buccaneers got some bad news in the game last Saturday as quarterback Scott Nault, a 5-11, 178-pound sophomore, went down with a shoulder separation. It is not known whether he will be available for the ECU game.

Nault had passed for 525 yards on the season, hitting 48 of 89 for four touchdowns. He had had five picked off.

Stepping in, should Nault be unable to play, will be Walt Bowlin, a 6-2, 210-pound freshman. In limited action, Bowlin has thrown 13 passes, connected on six for 80 yards. He has no interceptions nor touchdowns.

Overall, East Tennessee has passed for 610 yards, while holding opponents to 1,113 yards.

On the ground, running back Earl Ferrell (6-0, 185, So.) leads the way, with 534 yards on 96 carries. He's scored four touchdowns.

His mate in the I-backfield, Richard Dill (5-9, 166, Jr.) has rushed for 293 yards on 79 carries for two touchdowns.

Overall, the Buccaneers have rushed for 1,455 yards, while allowing 1,304.

Leading receivers have been back-up flanker Keith Oliveira (6-1, 182, Sr.) with 11 catches for 168 yards and no touchdowns. Close behind him comes split end Shelby Cornelius (5-11, 185, Sr.) with 10 catches for 158 yards and two scores. Ferrell leads the backs in receptions with 14 catches for 110 yards.

East Tennessee will not stick with the straight I, but will run a variety of formations off it. Defensively, they line up in the five-three alignment.

The Buccaneers are coached by Carl Carlisle, in his fourth year, with an 18-23-0 record.

Kickoff is set for 2 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Harris In Pick Win

Jimmy Harris of 307 Kirkland Dr., Greenville, is the winner of last week's Daily Reflector Football Contest.

Harris correctly picked the winners in 28 of the 32 games listed, but took first place on the basis of his point total guess. He guessed 71 would be the most points scored by both teams. The actual total was 106 in Clemson's 82-24 win over Wake Forest.

Second place went to Lou Jones of P.O. Box 211, Walstonburg, who also had 28 games correctly picked. His point total guess, however, was further off with a guess of 68.

The next in the contest series appears in today's paper.

Reggie Joins Free Agent Pool

By The Associated Press
Major league baseball teams in need of a seasoned slugger now can contemplate Reggie

Jackson.

Those seeking a veteran starting pitcher can include Ray Burris in their considerations. For those who covet a reliever, there's Sid Monge.

Those three, plus seven others, declared their free agency Monday, serving notice they intend to go through the re-entry draft on Nov. 13. Any player who has declared his free agency — there are 29 so far — can sign with his old team until midnight Nov. 10 or after the draft. In the meantime, he can talk to any other team, but not about money.

Jackson, 35, is going the free agent route for the second time. After playing out his contract with Baltimore in 1976, Jackson signed a five-year, $2.9 million contract with the Yankees. In his stormy stint with New York — he has had run-ins with former New York Manager Billy Martin, team owner George Steinbrenner and Yankees third baseman Graig Nettles, among others — Jackson helped the team to three pennants and two World Series titles.

He had his worst season as a Yankee this year, hitting 237 with 15 home runs and 54 runs-batted-in. Steinbrenner has never indicated whether he is serious about re-signing Jackson and has not talked contract with his right fielder since spring training.

Also opting for free agency Monday were Montreal right-hander Burris; Cleveland left-hander Monge; righties Larry Christenson of Philadelphia and Jesse Jefferson of California; outfielders Jeff Burroughs of Seattle and Tom Poquette of Texas, and infielders Ron Jackson of Detroit and Bert Campaneris of California.

Jackson and Campaneris do not carry a professional compensation price tag because they are second-time free agents. Infielder Bobby Grich of California, outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Bill Campbell of Boston also are going to the re-entry draft for the second time so the team which signs them will not be required to compensate the club which loses them.

Jackson is the second key

Yankee signify his intention to go for free agency. Left-handed starter Ron Guidry filed last week.

Guidry would require compensation under the terms of the agreement which ended the 50-day players' strike this summer. Premium players, as defined by a complicated mathematical formula worked out during the strike, require their former clubs to be given a replacement player from a draft pool stocked by major league clubs which participate in the draft.

One player who decided not to become a free agent is Phil Garner, who signed a three-year contract on Monday for an estimated $1.8 million with Houston. Garner, 32, was traded to the Astros by Pittsburgh late in the season.

"(General Manager) Al Rosen and John McMullen (chairman of the board) did a great sales job on me," Garner said. "At this stage of my career, my main concern was financial remuneration. But a big concern was playing with a team I thought could win it all."

Frustrated Kiffin Is Making Some Changes

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State has lost three straight games and sixth-ranked Penn State is next on the schedule.

That prospect does not have coach Monte Kiffin jumping up and down with joy after the Wolfpack's "frustrating" 20-12 loss to South Carolina.

"I don't think I've ever been in a more frustrating football game," Kiffin said at his weekly news conference Monday. "I hope I'm not in another as frustrating if I'm in coaching 100 years."

So frustrated is Kiffin that he has a new quarterback slated to start against the Nittany Lions, who were knocked off their No. 1 perch by Miami, Fla., last Saturday. Junior Ron Laraway will replace Tol Avery who has started for the Wolfpack since last season.

"We feel Ron Laraway deserves a chance to start," Kiffin said. "Tol has been consistent at times and not consistent at other times. We wanted to see what Ron could do from the start with the score 0-0."

The change in quarterbacks was brought about partly because of the three straight losses and the seven fumbled center snaps against the Gamecocks. Kiffin blamed Avery, saying he "pulled away too quick."

N.C. State's day against South Carolina looked good on paper, however. The defense held the Gamecocks to 124 total yards, blocked a punt for a touchdown and sacked the quarterback to start the game.

"It was a tremendous defensive effort," Kiffin said. "But you can do all those good things but they don't mean a hoot if you don't win."

Freshman running back Joe McIntosh bulled through the Gamecock defense for 124 yards. But there were the six Wolfpack turnovers that offset that, plus three missed field goals.

Kiffin tried to put the loss in perspective.

"Whether you are a coach or a player, you are going to be tested in life," Kiffin said. "But true competitors can go through those tough times. I'll tell you I'm going through some tough times now, but you can't give up."

And he said his 44 team will not surrender to Penn State.

"Penn State is truly a great football team," Kiffin said. "The pro scouts say that Penn State has the best offensive line in college football. This is his (coach Joe Paterno's) best team ever."

"There is no doubt that this will be our biggest challenge, stopping their offense."

McIntosh needs 86 yards against the Nittany Lions to become only the 15th freshman in NCAA history to rush for more than 1,000 yards in a season. The freshman tailback currently is third in the nation in rushing, averaging 130.6 yards a game.

Claim Coach Struck Players

ATLANTA (AP) — Morris Brown College officials say they are investigating reports that football Coach Lambert Reed has struck players with an ax handle this season.

Reed, 44 in his fourth year as coach at his alma mater, was reprimanded after a similar incident during 1980 spring practice.

"The incidents did happen, and right now we're conducting an in-house investigation," Morris Brown Athletic Director Earnest Ross said Monday afternoon. "Upon the conclusion of that investigation, a recommendation and appropriate action will be taken."

One incident involved junior defensive back Ben Scott.

Scott said Reed has been harrasing him because of reports some players had smoked marijuana while in Alabama for a game. Scott denied knowledge of any marijuana use.

Scott said Reed called him into his office Thursday, then took away his scholarship.

After leaving the office, "Coach Reed was behind me, with this ax handle," Scott said. "I thought he was going to hit me then. He kept telling me to get on."

Minutes later, in the locker room, Scott said, he told other players that Reed had taken his scholarship and the 6-foot-4, 240-pound Reed "came down across my back with that stick."

"I grabbed the stick then because I knew the man was going to hurt me," Scott, who is 5-foot-11 and 175 pounds, said in an interview with The Atlanta Constitution.

"I figured I'd better defend myself. That's when I went under him and slammed him to the floor," Scott said.

Thursday night, the team held a meeting without any coaches present and 64 players signed a petition calling for Reed's dismissal.

Asked about the incidents, Reed said only:

"My statement is that I refer you to the athletic director. I'm about making men. When they don't stand up and be men, they hear from me. I don't mistreat kids. You don't win when you mistreat them."

Scott, a starter up until last weekend, did not make the trip to South Carolina State. He said he is under tremendous pressure to keep quiet.

"And some of the players have been led to believe that I told Coach Reed they've been getting high," Scott said. "But that doesn't bother me as much as what might happen to my brother, who is here. I'm afraid that if Coach Reed stays here, it's going to be a cloud over his (the brother's) head."

Yeager Says He's Happy As A Dodger

NEW YORK (AP) — If they're going to break up the Los Angeles Dodgers, then catcher Steve Yeager hopes he's not included in the dispersal plan.

"I don't want to be traded," he said Monday after accepting his one-third of the World Series Most Valuable Player Award. "I just want more playing time."

Ron Cey and Pedro Guerrero, who shared the Series MVP honor with Yeager, were unable to attend the awards ceremony sponsored by major league baseball and Sport Magazine. The word at the Series was that this would be the last time around for these Dodgers. Ironically, only days after sharing the MVP award, Guerrero was rumored heading for San Diego in a trade for shortstop Ozzie Smith. But the Padres rejected that deal.

If management is determined to clean house, then Yeager is glad the Dodgers ended their run with a world championship.

"This was our fourth time (in the Series)," he said. "It was very gratifying to finally win it, especially if they are about to break up the team."

Yeager thought there were some lessons to be learned by Series observers. The first is that he can produce more than his 86 regular season at bats allowed and the other is that the Dodger veterans are still quality players.

"This might have been our last chance to do it collectively and we did," said Yeager. "Basically, it was done by the veterans. We showed we can still play."

And the veteran catcher hoped he showed he can play more than he did before the playoffs.

Under Manager Tommy Lasorda's platoon system, righty-swinging Yeager was to be used against left-handed pitchers and Mike Scioscia, who swings from the left side, was the man against right-handers.

Somehow it seemed that, until the Series against the lefty-laden New York Yankees, the Dodgers never faced many southpaws. So, Yeager sat. He wasn't thrilled with that role.

"I have a lot of nervous energy," he said. "I want to play, to do something. I didn't have that opportunity too much. I don't want to leave the Dodger organization. I've been in it for 15 years and it's a great one. I only want to play."

Yeager and the other Dodgers were annoyed at the notion that they had not won the Series as much as the Yankees had lost it.

Heels-Tigers To Be On Television

Air time is noon with the kickoff set for 12:35 p.m.

spring drills and the start of fall practice, nearly all of those players were walk-ons.

Among those who left after spring drills were Keith Golden, Chris Skeeter and Brent Chambers. Golden is a junior from Asheboro who was voted special teams player of the year the past two seasons. Skeeter and Chambers were both nonstarting walk-ons. None could be reached for comment.

In leaving, O'Roark cited numerous instances, but three in particular that led to his decision to leave the team.

"The first incident O'Roark discussed concerned an alleged altercation between a player and Emory.

According to O'Roark and another source who also witnessed the incident, a player hit Emory in the face in the locker room following the Pirates' 42-6 opening-day win over Western Carolina.

"We meet to say the Lord's Prayer after the game and Coach Emory saw (that the player was not going to join the rest of the team) and went to get him," O'Roark said. "He (Emory) went up to grab him and there was a little scuffle."

O'Roark and the source said the player hit Emory in the face with a closed fist. When asked how hard the player hit Emory, O'Roark said: "He buckled his knees."

Reportedly, Emory went after the player but O'Roark said "five to six players pulled them apart."

"When a player hits a coach because he's frustrated about not playing enough and no action is taken, you know there's problems," O'Roark said. "And when another player misses practice because of a girlfriend and he is threatened with having his scholarship taken away, you know there's problems."

"What it comes down to is you can't hit a head coach," O'Roark said. "There's a principle involved."

Two sources close to the team said the player involved was Ronald Reid, a sophomore linebacker from Farmville Central. Both Emory and Reid deny a fight occurred.

"Ronald Reid is an emotional player and he was upset about not playing," Emory said when asked about the incident four days after the Western Carolina game. "He was upset and I will be upset if I see anything in the paper about it."

"If I do, you might as well not come back and ask me anything again. It was a player-coach situation."

Emory also said that he did discipline Reid, but would not say how. "As head coach I handled it," he said. "It was handled within the program."

Not one player contacted in researching this story could remember seeing Reid being disciplined. However, many, though not all, believe he was.

"The second occurred following the Toledo game. After every game players are graded by their individual coaches. Emory then sees the grades and uses them to help evaluate the player's performance."

"In that game I had a clip and I lined up in the backfield. Those are counted as minuses. But good plays are counted as pluses, like a catch for over 25 yards or knockdowns."

"Well, I had four knockdowns and they evened out with the two minuses and I graded at an 86 (percent). (Wide receiver) Coach (Gary) Weller took it to Emory's office and Emory asked him how'd O'Roark grade out to this."

"Coach Weller said I had four knockdowns," O'Roark said. "But Weller said Emory made him grade me down to a 68. Coach Weller came back and told me that he had to do that to pacify Emory but that he didn't agree with him."

When contacted Friday Weller, who is in his first year at ECU, would not talk about the incident. "Why is that important? I don't think it's anything that important," he said. "A coach grades his players and that's it. I don't have any other comment."

"The third instance O'Roark cited occurred the previous week as the Pirates readied for N.C. State.

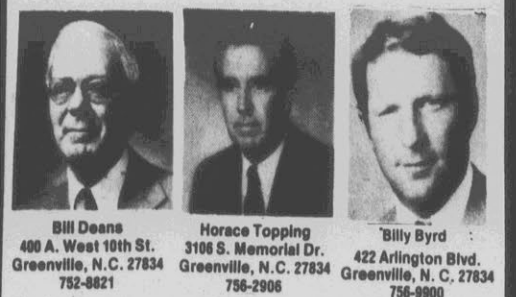

"It was sometime during the week before the State game — I don't remember what day — but Lou Hallow (a member of the Pirate Club) got a hold of Tootie Robbins and set up a meeting in the Pirate Club.

"We all met over there about 10 p.m. and he helped motivate us. He helped us a lot. It was pretty emotional and it was probably the closest we've been all year. The point is, though, that it wasn't his job to get us ready for the game. It was Emory's."

Vikings Get Ready To Move Indoors

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

environment of the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome.

History is only a confused heap of facts.

—Lord Chesterfield

Mike Lynn, the general manager of the Vikings since 1975, the point man in the drive to bring Minnesotans in from the cold, didn't waste any time once the domed stadium was approved in 1977.

"Let me give you some interesting statistics," he said. "First of all, there never has been a team that has played in a domed stadium and has won its division. Not one."

Houston's last title came in 1967, the year before the Oilers moved into the Astrodome. The Lions' Silverdome is only six years old. And, of course, we all know about the "Aints" and the "Hee-Hawks."

"Secondly," Lynn went on, "in the modern history of professional football, there never had been a season in which two teams lost every game at home — until last year, when New Orleans and Seattle, two indoor teams, did it."

"Now, that's got to give you something to chew on."

We nibbled. So what? "So, since '78, we've been drafting an 'indoor' team," Lynn said with a hint of triumph — but not without a hint of a smile.

That's right! The Vikings, who spent years building a reputation as foul-weather foes, are building a team that'll fit perfectly in a building. Or so they hope.

"Prior to '77, we would take a player with marginal speed," Lynn said. "We had plenty of players on our team like that — Dave Osborne, Bill Brown, Wally Hilgenberg. Look at our rosters back then. We had a great team that could play in its climate, in adverse conditions, and continue to win year after year. They were the types of players who maybe didn't have the great speed, who weren't what I'd call 'perfect-weather' players. But we could slug it out in the trenches when the mercury went down, keep it together in the cold, and win."

"We would take those players with marginal speed because of those conditions under which we had to play. You didn't need great speed when you were running on ice and snow. You needed great balance, durability, courage, all the rest of it."

History is bunk.

—Henry Ford

Starting in 1978 (the stadium approval came after the 1977 draft), the Vikings began a concerted effort to pick speed players to take advantage of an artificial surface and a controlled environment, Lynn said.

He ticked off a few names — running backs Ted Brown and Jarvis Redwine (the latter played on artificial turf at Nebraska, too), wide receiver Mardy McDole, defensive ends Doug Martin and Ray Yakovonis, linebacker Dennis Johnson, guard Brent Boyd ...

"You look at all our drafts starting with '78 and you'll find a lot of people who have one thing in common — great speed," said Lynn. "You look at our record on artificial turf over the past 10 years and I think it's the fifth-worst in the National Conference. And that was before the St. Louis game (which the Vikings lost 30-17 on the Cardinals' AstroTurf.)

Including the 1981 season, Tom Weiskopf finished in the top 60 in earnings 16 years in a row.

"That's why we've been trying to develop a speed team, an indoor team," he said. "We're trying to find out if we can be the first team to win a title playing indoors at home."

With two domes (Detroit and Minnesota) and one warm-weather team (Tampa Bay) in the NFC's Central Division, only Green Bay and Chicago will be subject to brutal winters — but not necessarily the Packers and Bears. It is likely they will play virtually all of their home games before December rolls around. The Lions, Vikings and Bucs will be the hosts when the weather outside is frightful.

Lynn grinned when "frozen tundra" was mentioned. "We remember when we played Los Angeles, watching those Californians come out and there's snow 10 feet high on the sidelines and a wind-chill factor of 20-below," he said. "You could see the faces on those Rams droop."

"We're going to come up with something else to create that atmosphere. We're not gonna give up that homefield advantage. Maybe we'll get a big refrigerator truck and store up the snow and pile it on the sidelines. Maybe we'll aim the air conditioners at 'em. I don't know. Something."

The past should be studied if the future is to be successfully encountered.

—Winston Churchill

Mike Lynn couldn't have put it better.

Fairy Tale And A Folk Story Offered Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Television offers a fairy tale and a folk story tonight, and you can probably enjoy them if you sprinkle some fantasy dust and dispense with belief for a while.

The fairy tale is "The Princess and the Cabbie" on CBS, a cutesy love story about two opposites bucking the usual great odds. The folk tale is the pilot movie for NBC's new series, "Father Murphy," starring Merlin Olsen.

"Princess and the Cabbie" stars Valerie Bertinelli as Joanna James, who suffers from the reading and writing disorder dyslexia. She dresses like her dolls and lives for the 4:30 movie, while her dotting father shelters her from the outside world.

But then she meets Joe Holliday (Robert Desiderio), a cab driver by trade, a poet-writer by inspiration. In one of those hard-to-swallow obsessions that TV creates so easily, Joe falls hard for his "fare" maiden. Before long, he's teaching her to read and write, despite resistance from Papa James (Peter Donat).

You know this movie comes from the land of make believe by its opening: water-color skies and castle-like apartments — all to the strains of soft flutes and harpsichords.

And with an understanding of TV's creed that happy endings make happy consumers, you know what to expect from Joanna's syrupy struggle for independence from Daddy and her relationship with her hack.

As the soft-hearted cabbie, Desiderio, a Dustin Hoffman lookalike, has a wonderfully manic charm and an earthy vibrancy. Miss Bertinelli is a marketable name and does the cute innocence bit well, but she's never strong enough to make us forget Barbara Cooper from "One Day at a Time."

It isn't easy to erase a longtime role, but more convincing actresses — Kristy McNichol ("Family"), Melissa Gilbert ("Little House on the Prairie") — have pulled it off.

Another "Little House" actor who effortlessly made the transition is Olsen, but his new frontiersman is not that different from Jonathan Garvey. On "Father Murphy," Olsen again plays the strong, silent type who prefers simple philosophies to physical violence.

He may be the new John Wayne of the TV western. The former National Football League star and still NBC's top football commentator (when he's available) is good at playing Merlin Olsen. The pilot for the Tuesday villainous Garrett. This bad guy is so bad, he doesn't have a first name. At Garrett's saloon, Murphy can't get coffee or water. He also can't get an honest shake at the roulette wheel, although he does out-cheat Garrett, souring their relationship forever.

The bidding:

South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass
4 ♦ Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

To give yourself the best chance to make your contract, it is important to test your possibilities in the right order. South's technique on this hand is an object lesson.

North-South bid a difficult hand quite well. Note that South could do no more than rebid spades as cheaply as possible until he learned that North had at least a couple of spades. And North had to bid a weak four-card suit at the two-level and then rebid two no trump to show his values.

West led the queen of diamonds. Before reading on, consider the hand from declarer's point of view and decide how you would give yourself the best chance to make four spades.

Obviously, there is no problem if spades break no worse than 3-1. You can cash dummy's trumps, get back to your hand with a diamond ruff and draw the last trump. Now you cannot lose more than two club tricks and a heart. Therefore, it must be right to lead a trump to the king at trick two. When West shows out on this trick, how do you continue?

You can now try the club finesse, but if that fails you might be reduced to hoping that you can drop the queen of hearts to fulfill your game. Better technique is to tackle hearts first.

Cash the ace and king of hearts. If the queen drops, you again cannot lose more than three tricks. But the lady doesn't oblige. Now do you cross to dummy to take the club finesse?

Not yet. You have yet another chance. Continue with a third heart. If the hearts split 3-3, or West has the queen, the high heart in dummy will take care of a club loser, and the high trump is the entry to it. East can ruff, but he will, in effect, be ruffing your loser with his winning trump.

But hearts are 4-2 the wrong way, so now you have no choice but to use the trump entry to dummy to take the club finesse. Fortunately that succeeds, and you end up making the same ten tricks as those players who took the club finesse at trick three.

But think of all the extra fun you've had!

Actor Is Given A Heart Bypass

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Film and television star Rock Hudson is expected to spend the next two weeks in a hospital after heart bypass surgery, described by his manager as "an unqualified success."

"His heart is functioning perfectly on its own, with no signs of any complications," said Tom Clark, personal manager for the 55-year-old actor.

Arteries feeding the heart muscle were bypassed in surgery Monday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

"We're lucky they caught it this early," Clark said. "The doctors said he could have had a fatal heart attack within a month."

After his hospital stay, Hudson will recuperate at home for about six weeks, Clark said.

TOKYO (AP) — Both orchestras are celebrating their 100th anniversaries, but one conductor says he still feels like the other conductor's student.

The Republican Democrat

Although this is not a federal election year, many hotly-contested state and local elections will be held today. One race, however, is virtually over before the polls open. In a political first, incumbent New York City Mayor Edward Koch garnered both the Republican and Democratic mayoral nominations in September. Despite criticism from blacks and hispanics, Koch has kept his coalition together to assure four more years of governing the "ungovernable city." Even if he weren't on both party tickets, no strong challenger has emerged. Koch might well echo the words of another New York mayor, Fiorello La Guardia, who claimed he could run on a "laundry ticket" and win.

DO YOU KNOW — What New York mayor was elected without the support of either major party?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — The glue of a postage stamp contains about 1/10 of a calorie.

Indian Tribe Is Asking For Citizenship

By PEGGY ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Texas band of Kickapoo Indians, a 600-member tribe without a country, is asking Congress to make its people citizens of the nation they once shunned.

Since the early 1900s, the traditional Kickapoo, which split from the Oklahoma Kickapoo tribe in hopes of preserving their aboriginal heritage, have wandered between the Texas border town of Eagle Pass and Nacimiento, Mexico — a distance of about 120 miles.

Neither country has provided them with clear citizenship status, a lapse which complicates their access to jobs, education and health and social services. Some members were born in Mexico, some in the United States.

The band presently calls home a cluster of cardboard and cane huts on a borrowed one-acre plot under the International Bridge at Eagle Pass. Local authorities have provided a spigot and arched privies. There are no other amenities.

"We were masters of this land," said Nakai Breen, a Cherokee who has spent much of her life working to help the Kickapoo. "Now we don't have so much as a handhold to call our own."

She urged the House Interior Committee on Friday to give the tiny tribe citizenship, a land base and access to services that federally recognized tribes receive.

"I can't think of any insurmountable obstacle to prevent them from taking their rightful place in our society," said Rep. Abraham Kazen Jr., D-Texas, who introduced the bill to help the tribe. "They just want a place they can call home."

The Reagan administration has taken no official stand on the Kickapoo.

Since leaving Wisconsin in 1795, the tribe has signed seven treaties with the United States, winning — and losing — 18 million acres of federal land in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Mexico gave the group 17,000 acres near Nacimiento in 1852 for defending that country's borders against Kiowa, Apache and Comanche raiders.

But for the traditional Kickapoo, Eagle Pass is home.

"Our grandparents, our forefathers are buried there," said Makateenodua, who also uses the name Raul Garza. "We are not Mexican people. We are American Indians."

Their case for U.S. citizenship hinges partly on an 1832 U.S. Army pass which says they "are under the protection of the United States."

In 1958, they were given "parolee" status by the Immigration and Naturalization Service and now carry cards that say "Kickapoo Indian — pending clarification of status by Congress."

The Kickapoo say the matter is more urgent now.

The migrant work that has sustained the tribe for years is dwindling and Eagle Pass authorities want their tiny tract for a park.

And tribal leaders say they need education to survive.

"Many years ago, our people resisted all white man's forms of education... But times have changed," said Wipeucinaudita, also known as Jose Naco Jimenez.

In 1977, Texas granted the Kickapoo state recognition and the tribe obtained a $1.5 million federal grant for land and housing.

But those gains were lost in 1978, when Texas' attorney general ruled the state could not help them unless they had federal recognition.
