Cox Wins Race For Mayor By 2667-2246

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville voters, turning out in small numbers Tuesday, elected a new mayor and placed three new members on the City Council in races that saw two of the board seats decided by returns from the final reporting precincts.

With just over 39 percent of the city's voter registration expressing an election opinion, former Mayor Percy Cox carried seven of the nine precincts in defeating incumbent Don McGlohon in the race for mayor. Mayoral aspirant Beatrice Terry trailed with 506 votes.

Cox, who served as mayor here from 1975 to 1979 after six terms on the City Council, received 2,667 votes to 2,246 for McGlohon, a 421-vote victory margin, according to unofficial tabulations compiled by "The Daily Reflector."

Contacted this morning, Cox said, "I'm happy that I will be serving the people of Greenville again. I appreciate all the support given to me in the past, and look forward to the support and prayers of Greenville citizens in the future."

PERCY COX

McGlohon could not be reached for comment.

Janice Buck, in her first attempt at an elected office, swept to an impressive council victory with the top vote total and joined incumbents Judy Greene, Louis Clark and William Hadden, and newcomers Stuart Shinn and George Pugh as the choices for the six council seats.

The election results saw Mrs. Buck receive 2,916 votes, followed by Mrs. Greene with 2,686, Clark with 2,620, Hadden with 2,601, Shinn with 2,594, and Pugh with 2,584. Ed Carter just missed in his second council bid, finishing only 20 votes behind Pugh with 2,564.

Incumbent Dick McKee, completing his first term on the council, was unsuccessful in his re-election bid and actually ran ninth in the 11-candidate field. McKee, with 2,149 votes, trailed Wallace Wooles who finished with 2,477. Oscar Moore received 1,718 votes and Lucy Jones had 1,389.

Wooles was running in the sixth position by a slight margin until the last precinct — the Community Center on Chestnut Street — reported. Results there gave Pugh and Shinn 201 and 113 votes, respectively, to only 65 for Wooles and decided the final two seats. Carter made strong showings in precincts four with 538 votes and five (American Legion Building) with 487 votes but came up just short in the overall totals.

Two present council members, Joe Taft Jr. and Clarence Gray, did not seek re-election.

Carter's narrow defeat leaves the city governing board without a black member for the first time since 1971 when Gray and John Taylor were elected. Taylor only served one term but Gray has remained on the council.

In the mayoral balloting, Cox doubled McGlohon's total in Precinct 3 (West Greenville Recreation Center), 161 to 80, and had a one-sided margin of 311 to 107 in Precinct 4. He also carried Precinct 7 (Elm Street Gym) by 496 to 374, and Precinct 6 (Fifth Street Fire Station) by 208 to 148. McGlohon, who is completing his first term as mayor, carried only Precinct 9 (Gardner Fire Station) with a 378 to 326 vote margin and Precinct 10 (Aycok Junior High) with a 279 to 207 vote edge.

Mrs. Cox's successful effort Tuesday again gives the council a decided distaff element as she joins Mrs. Greene on the board. Mildred McGrath was the first woman to serve on the local council, receiving an appointment in October of 1971 and then running successfully for re-election in 1973, 1975 and 1977 before losing a bid for mayor to McGlohon in 1979. Mrs. Greene will begin her third term in December.

Hadden was first elected to the council in 1975, lost his re-election bid in 1977, and then was successful in winning a council seat in 1979.

Clark is completing his first term as a member of the council.

Cox was first appointed to the council in 1964 to fill an unexpired term and he then won election to six full tenures on the board before running successfully for mayor in 1975 and 1977. Cox, who did not seek re-election in 1979, served as mayor pro-tem his last four terms on the council.

According to the unofficial returns, 5,554 of the city's 14,063 registered voters visited the polls yesterday. In 1979, 4,945 of the registration of 12,648 voted, again a 39 percent turnout.

The official canvass of Tuesday's election results will be conducted on Thursday at 11 a.m. at the Pitt Board of Elections office on East Second Street.

United Way Exceeds Goal

The Pitt County United Way reached its 1981 goal today, reported executive director Lou Folger, with total contributions reaching $465,786.20.

A banquet held at noon celebrated the end of the campaign, which exceeded the 1981 goal set in September of $431,000. The amount raised represents 108 percent of this goal.

Folger said United Way workers and officials were "delighted" with the 1981 campaign.

Launch Of Space Shuttle Is Scrubbed

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Launch of the shuttle Columbia was scrubbed today because of an oil pressure problem that arose after a computer failed to respond in time to a change in the countdown command.

The countdown clock stopped cold, 31 seconds before liftoff. Another launch attempt will not come until Friday, at the earliest.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly were strapped in their cockpit seats, ready to fly, when the clock stopped at 7:48 a.m.

There was an effort to reschedule the launch for mid-morning, but at 9:35 a.m., launch director George Page called it off because of a problem with a lubricating device in Columbia's on-board auxiliary power units which steer the ship on launch and stabilize its landing.

A last-minute problem also halted the first attempt to launch Columbia on its maiden flight last April 10; the problem then was with communications between computers. It was fixed quickly and the ship launched two days later.

Columbia, filled with half-a-million gallons of volatile fuel, entered its "terminal countdown" flawlessly today at sunrise as excitement mounted here for the ship's never-before accomplished return trip to space.

There were minor delays due to a weather watch and the first hint of pressurization troubles, but the real problem began with the clock at 0:00:31.

"We were not able to restart the countdown clock. We do not know why," said Launch Control spokesman Hugh Harris. The clock, like Columbia itself, is controlled by computers; it automatically commands a shutdown if it senses any malfunction.

A little more than two hours later, the launch teams gave up. The astronauts, in the ship for more than four hours, were being taken from the Columbia and back to their crew quarters.

"We are going to scrub the launch for today," Harris said. "A minimum of a 48-hour turnaround will be necessary for another launch attempt."

National Aeronautics and Space Administration specialists tracked down the problem and said a message to lower the acceptable pressure threshold in two fuel tanks got to the computer too late.

While efforts were made to correct this problem, a lubricating device in the auxiliary units overpressurized and the launch window was slammed shut for today.

Mercer Is Honored By Farmville Commissioners

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners and other citizens present gave Mayor Linwood Mercer a standing ovation Tuesday night as he completed his last regular monthly Town Council meeting as mayor of Farmville.

Mayor Pro Tempore David Stowe read a tribute to Mercer who, he said, among many other accomplishments, has led the town through the worst blizzard in modern history, solved its roaming dog situation and brought it "the joy of 30-minute meetings." Mercer led a peaceful yet productive administration and did dispatch town business meetings more quickly than any mayor in many years, Stowe pointed out.

Mayor-elect Rusty Duke will take office prior to the December meeting.

A public hearing held on uses for the proposed community center on South Main Street was held. Citizens Lucy Rumley, Margaret Liverman, Edith Barnes, Richard Dupree, Dan Griffis and James Taylor spoke. All seemed to agree that the center does not need to be a gymnasium, but rather to have a large multi-purpose room with modest kitchen facilities and possibly smaller side rooms for other activities.

Dupree stressed that the Hospitality Hut, which the town has recently repaired, is prized and should be kept. Ms. Barnes pointed out Farmville's need for a day care center for black children, inquiring as to whether the Southside Center might be converted for this purpose. Ms. Liverman inquired as to whether the money designated for the community center could be used for other purposes and was told by Community Development Director John Downes that this would be possible, but that a change in conditions would have to be shown since the application for CD funds was submitted as a package with the community center a professed need.

The board voted to do the following:
•Raised the Community Development block grant rehabilitation assistance ceiling from $9,500 to $10,000 for single-family dwellings and from $15,000 to $16,000 for multi-family dwellings.

•Scheduled a public hearing to consider the inclusion of several more houses in areas adjacent to the Community Development Block Grant rehab area in that area. These include three houses on Hines Street, one house on Wallace Street, and the houses on the west side of Barrett Street between Moore Street and the railroad tracks.

•Postponed consideration of a new water and sewer extension policy until the next meeting to give the planning board time to review it further.

•Authorized the town administrator to advertise for bids on the U.S. 258 water main extension. An N.C. Clean Water 25 percent grant has been applied for and hopefully will be received in January 1982. The estimated cost of the line will be $40,000.

•Accepted the resignation of Billy Carraway from the Recreation Advisory Committee, leaving the slot open for the new mayor to make the appointment.

•Confirmed Mercer's appointment of Mrs. LaRue (George) Moye to the town Tree Board.

•Authorized the transfer of $425 from the general fund contingency account to the library operation budget for salaries for temporary help while a library staff member is on leave.

•Heard a report from Town Administrator Robert Morgan that repairs costing $2,700 to the Hospitality Hut of the town are complete.
•Adopted budget amendments providing for a $600 increase to the library memorial gift line and a capital project fund for the Lang's Crossroads well now under construction. The well is expected to cost $151,820, with $37,955 of this from an N.C. Clean Water Grant and $113,865 transferred from capital reserves.

•Adopted an ordinance to restrict parking on the east side of Baker Boulevard, extending 63 feet north from Anderson Avenue. This action was requested after an investigation by the police department because sight distances are not good with parked cars there.

•Approved the locking of the doors of the municipal building at 6 p.m. Previously they have been left open and there has been some problem with loitering there at odd hours.

•Set an auditor's management report review for a later meeting.

Soviet Sub Skipper Refuses More Questions

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The skipper of the Soviet submarine that ran aground in Swedish waters is refusing to leave his ship for further interrogation. Swedish officials say his explanations about the incident are "unlikely."

Meanwhile, Foreign Ministry spokesman Jonas Hojer said today that the Swedish government has instructed its ambassadors worldwide not to attend Soviet National Day celebrations on Nov. 7, the anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution.

The move "is an expression of Swedish disapproval over the Soviet submarine incident," Hojer said. Lower-ranking diplomats, however, would attend, he added.

Hojer also said that Sweden's ambassador to Moscow, Carl de Geer, had been called to the Soviet foreign department twice this week "to hear the Soviet views on the submarine incident."

Lt. Gen. Sven-Olov Olsson, the head of the military command in south Sweden, said of the incident, "We must stick to a clear-cut and firm Swedish stand and not give in to the Soviet demands to hold all sessions aboard the submarine."

Olsson said such technical matters as the functioning of the sub's navigation equipment could be sorted out best aboard the submarine, which Swedish tugs refloated Monday and towed to an anchorage in inner Gaase Bay.

Defense headquarters said Swedish Naval experts would conduct the technical investigation today aboard the sub.

But Olsson said the question of how and why the sub entered Swedish waters south of the Karlskrona naval base last Tuesday should be discussed elsewhere because "to talk about these matters in the cramped quarters of the submarine will be difficult; we would prefer to hold such sessions in private."

Pants In The Fashion Picture

PAIRING UP — In chilly weather there's nothing easier to wear than pants, and choosing the right coordinated separates is the secret of making trousers go a long way in extending the wardrobe. Wear them with blazers, all kinds and colors of jackets and color-coordinated sweaters. At left, tricolor tattersal check trousers provide a smart suit look when teamed with a matching button-front jacket. At right, classic fly-front pants go beautifully with a multi-color plaid blazer. (Fashions by James Kenrob.)

Dear Abby

Chatty Woman Appears Lonely

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How do you cope with a next-door neighbor who grabs you and talks your ear off every time you step outside your front door?
She catches my husband and me every chance she gets. On the average, I'd say 20 minutes per day is wasted on listening to this woman talk. On weekends, it's at least an hour! She does all the talking. No one else can get a word in edgewise.

We usually speak our minds, but we hate to hurt her. She's a nice lady — just talkative. My little trick of saying there's someone on the phone in an effort to rescue my husband when she traps him is getting old. We don't want to live this way. We are sick of hiding in the shadows and pulling down the shades. Please save us from future years of ...

HIDING OUT

DEAR HIDING: Your neighbor is obviously very, very lonely if she must grab someone to talk to every chance she gets. Plan on giving this pathetic woman just 10 minutes of your time when she snares you. (Call it your good deed for the day.) Quell the anger in you and listen patiently for only 10 minutes, then say, "Sorry, dear, I must run."
It takes more energy to duck her than face her. Besides, hiding is childish; it's also more wearisome than listening for 10 minutes. Try a little compassion, and thank God you aren't in that poor woman's shoes!

DEAR ABBY: I have a "friend" I have known for nearly 35 years. The last time we were together, she told me that a mutual friend had made some very disparaging comments about me, then she proceeded to tell me some of the terrible things this friend said about me. She went on and on and seemed to get a lot of pleasure out of telling me all these terrible things.

When she finished, I asked, "And what did you say?" She replied, "Oh, nothing. I was too shocked to say anything."
Abby, it seems to me that nearly every time I am with this so-called "friend," she says something to hurt me. I feel that the time to stand up for myself has come.
What should I say to her the next time I see her?

LUMP IN MY THROAT

DEAR LUMP: Two words, "Hello" and "Goodbye," and make them as close together as possible.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published the poem "If God Should Go On Strike," stating that it had been sent to you from a reader who didn't know who had written it.

Well, I am the author. I wrote that poem (and copyrighted it) in 1972. You have my permission to run it as often as you wish, but in the future I would appreciate an acknowledgment as the author. Thank you.

Practical Clothing Is Program Topic

Practical clothing for the mentally retarded and handicapped was discussed by two former graduate students in the ECU School of Home Economics at a professional meeting in Philadelphia recently.

The presenters were Theresa Hewett and Babs

Minter and their professor, Dr. Geneva Yadav of the ECU clothing and textiles faculty. Their presentations were part of the program of the eastern regional meeting of the Association of College Professors of Textiles and Clothing.

The ECU representatives demonstrated the practicality of specially designed items of clothing which involve velcro and gripper snap closures. Research and experimentation on the garments were done at Caswell Center where the students were interns.

Their internships were supervised by Charlotte Jones of the Caswell Center staff during May and June of last year.

Last month, Dr. Rich Zaharia, director of Caswell Center, presented Ms. Hewett a certificate of recognition for excellence in research in clothing design for mentally retarded

Brief Advice To Too Talkative

CHICAGO (AP) — Rosalie Loeding, an associate professor of speech and a specialist in conserving voices, has got some down-to-earth advice for people who talk too much: Shut up.

She also has advice for people with dry throats: Bite your tongue.

"It activates the little salivary glands underneath," she said, which helps lubricate the mucous membranes in the throat.

Ms. Loeding, 53, a teacher at Illinois Benedictine College, has solved the voice problems for more than 100 people referred to her in the last 10 years.

One of her most interesting cases, she said, was that of a construction executive who had chronic hoarseness. "He told me he was on the phone most of the time, cradling it on his shoulder ... Tipping his head to one side so much put a great strain on his larynx."

SHOPPING FOR GOLD JEWELRY

One of the most popular items to buy now-a-days is gold jewelry. People are buying it in the form of necklaces, rings, bracelets and just about any other form they can find. Whether you buy gold jewelry for yourself or as gifts for others, as a wise shopper there are some things you need to know.

For starters, you need to make sure that the jewelry dealer you are doing business with has a good reputation, both in the way he handles his business and in the merchandise he sells. In addition to having a reliable jeweler, you need to have some basic knowledge of gold jewelry so you will be aware of what is available and what you want.

The amount of gold in a particular piece of jewelry is measured in terms of a karat. Pure gold (actually only .9999 pure) has 24 karats. The 24 karat gold is too soft to stand the wear and tear of jewelry, so the gold is mixed with harder alloys to increase the durability. The most popular mix for jewelry is 14 karat, which is 14 parts of gold mixed with 10 parts of an alloy. Other mixes used for "lasting" jewelry include 12 karat, which is 12 parts gold and 12 parts alloy and 10 karat is 10 parts gold and 14 parts alloy. As far as durability is concerned, 14 karat is more durable than 24 karat, but 10 karat is the most durable selected for "lasting" jewelry because it has more alloy in its mix. The amount of gold in any object is one of the first things you need to determine in shopping for gold jewelry. An American piece of jewelry must be stamped with the karat designation, 10 karat is the lowest acceptable standard and any item containing less than 10 parts gold will not be stamped.

Once you understand what the karat designations mean, you will probably begin to wonder about the other types of jewelry sold; namely, gold-filled and gold-plated. Gold-filled jewelry is made of a base metal with the outer coating containing the only gold in the piece. The outer layer must be at least 10 karat and be 1/20 the total weight of the item. (Example: 1/12 10K Gold-Filled) Gold-filled items are considered to be more durable than gold-plated because they contain more gold. The gold-plated or electroplated items also have only a thin coating of gold. The difference here being that the layer has been put on chemically and is only a millionth of an inch thick, thus accounting for decreased durability.

The color of gold (white, yellow, etc.) which consumers often consider a determinant of price is only a personal preference; the color is determined by the alloys used in the mix and has no bearing on the price. Two factors that do affect the price are the workmanship and the amount of pure gold in a piece. With experience and comparative shopping you will learn to recognize reasonable prices for a given design and content.

In shopping for gold jewelry stay alert and keep these facts in mind so you can join the ranks of wise jewelry shoppers.

Marking Time On Draft

The flood of high-priority current events marking headlines and immediate concern these days, has served to submerge or sideline lingering questions that simply won't go away.

Take for instance re-instituting The Draft.

We've heard all the arguments that were raised and re-raised during the Carter administration. (The law requiring registration of eligible young men is still on the books.)

Among the points: the inconvenience of interruption in lives of so many young adults, the frightening cost when there is a spirit of budgetary belt-tightening abroad in the land, the question of need, the concern over inspiring spirits of militarism and adventurism, as opposed to:

The needs of national security, the psychological strategy of assuring the world that America is prepared to defend its convictions and thus deter actions leading to inevitable conflict, the stabilizing impact of personal discipline on the upcoming generation, the adding of more skilled and talented people to specialized military fields ... the arguments are near ad infinitum.

The question appears to be less a matter of adding more pros and cons, but one of ability and willingness to reach a decision. As of now, the country is only marking time.

How long should a state of indecision be allowed to continue?

We're Trading In Paper

Every time you pick up the newspaper, you see advertisements screaming the words "TAX FREE" at you. I'm not knocking it since the ads pay my salary, but it seems to me that with high interest rates and inflation, Americans are now trading in pieces of paper instead of things.

The other day I got a call from my accountant who said, "I've got good news for you. If we give your bank 5,000 pieces of paper, it will give you back almost 6,000 in six months."

"I saw an advertisement the other day that said if I gave a savings and loan institution 5,000 pieces it would give me 6,000 pieces AND a toaster."

"Big deal. The toaster probably cost them three pieces of paper."

"But I could use the toaster more than the paper," I told him.

"Look, if you don't want to go for the bank's deal, I can get you into a money fund which will pay 7,000 pieces of paper for every 5,000 you give them, unless the interest rates go down."

"Why can't I take the 5,000 pieces of paper and put them down on an automobile?"

"Because an automobile wears out. In three years you'll be lucky to get 900 pieces of paper for it."

"Yeah, but you can't get around town on a piece of paper." Believe me, this is no time to get out of paper. If you don't want to put your money in notes, put it in stock. It's more of a gamble, but it's still paper.

"What kind of stock?" "There is a company called A.C. which is rumored to be buying out the P.Q. Company." cash to put into an All Savers Account so you can get tax-free interest."

"Great. But what do we do with all the dirty dishes?" "Let them pile up until the loan rates go down."

"I don't think Ann's going to like that." "She will when you show it to her on paper."

"My wife was never much for paper. She likes to buy things like chairs and lamps and clothes."

"Most of my clients' wives are like that and, believe me, it doesn't make my life any easier. But you just have to hang tough and explain that the more pieces of paper you can put away right now, the less you'll have to worry about your future."

"What do I give my grandchildren for Christmas?"

"How about some nice, safe municipal bonds?" (c) 1981, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

ART BUCHWALD

The buyers have offered 65 pieces of A.C. paper for each P.Q. certificate, which is only worth 30. If you buy, and the deal goes through, you'll make a paper profit of 35 certificates.

"What does the A.C. Company do?"

"Who knows!"

"Is the P.Q. Company making any money?"

"No. That's why A.C. wants to buy it. You see, P.Q. had a bad year and has huge tax losses. A.C. had a good year and made a lot of profits. So, if it buys the losing company, A.C. will be able to offset its profits against P.Q.'s losses, and then it won't have to pay any taxes to the government."

"Sounds like a good deal. Would it be all right to buy a dishwasher this fall? Ann says the other one is falling apart."

"This is no time to buy a dishwasher. I need all your

Reagan Test Didn't Show

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent WASHINGTON (AP) — As the only political game in town, the odd-year elections were, inevitably, billed as a test of voter reaction to President Reagan and his programs. The test flunked.

That doesn't diminish the Democrats' victory in Virginia, where Charles S. Robb was elected governor after a dozen years of Republican rule.

In New Jersey, the outcome hinged on absentee votes after returns from all the state's precincts gave Republican Thomas H. Kean a minuscule margin over Rep. James J. Florio, the Democrat who said he wanted the voters to send Reagan a message of disenchantment.

Those were the main events in Tuesday's scattered balloting, and those were the races in which Reagan had campaigned personally.

But a Republican defeat in Virginia — where the pollsters had pointed to Robb all along — and the closest gubernatorial race in 100 years in New Jersey could hardly be read as a repudiation of Reagan or his economics.

Reagan had interceded in person and in television commercials for Virginia Republican J. Marshall Coleman. "Don't let me down," he said in Richmond. "It's no good cleaning up Washington if we don't elect the right kind of officials at the state level."

Reagan's man lost. But the Democrat who won is a conservative, too. Robb, now the lieutenant governor, didn't run against Reagan. He accused Coleman of trying to ride the president's coattails. Robb said he would side with the president when he thought him right, oppose him otherwise.

Not that it makes much difference. Governors don't have much say about what presidents do anyway.

Robb complained that the Republicans tried unfairly to depict him as a closet liberal just because the late President Lyndon B. Johnson was his father-in-law. The governor-elect is no advocate of Great Society liberalism.

Virginia is too conservative for that brand of politics, and Robb knew it. So after three conservative Republican governors, Virginia will have a conservative Democratic governor.

In New Jersey, Florio campaigned openly, and sometimes stridently, to make Reagan the issue. He said he wanted the voters to send the president a message "perhaps as startling as a punch in the mouth." He also said he wanted a landslide to emphasize the point.

The election was anything but a landslide; of more than 2.25 million votes, about 2,000 — not counting the late absentee ballots — separated the candidates.

Kean ran as an ardent Reagan man, with a business tax reduction program designed to mesh with the president's own. Borrowing a line Vice President George Bush would rather forget, Florio called it "voodoo economics." That was Bush on Reagan back when they were rivals for last year's Republican presidential nomination.

"Let me clear the air of a misunderstanding that evidently exists with Tom Kean's opponent," Reagan said when he campaigned there on Oct. 15. "I am not running for governor of New Jersey."

That's the point. He wasn't running there or anywhere. His economic programs weren't on the ballot, either, although they may have affected some votes, particularly in New Jersey. That's where the candidates made Reaganomics a major issue. Figured that way, New Jersey's verdict on Reagan budget and tax policies was a split decision. About as many people voted for Kean, who championed them, as for Florio, who denounced them.

As barometers or bellwethers, the two states that elect their governors a year after presidential elections never have measured or foretold much. In 1969, Republicans were elected governors of both states, and then-President Richard M. Nixon said Democrats had made him the issue. He wouldn't have said that if Democrats had won.

Four years later, in the depths of Watergate, New Jersey elected a Democrat, Virginia a Republican. Nixon didn't say anything, and Bush, then the Republican national chairman, called it a mixed bag. The outcome was the same in 1977.

The description remains apt. As Virginia and New Jersey go, so go Virginia and New Jersey.

The Customers' Money

Thanks to the settlement of a 1978 rate case with Virginia Electric & Power Co., Greenville Utilities is $4.7 million better off. We hope that means the utilities electric customers are that much better off.

Utilities officials say that is the case since the general idea is to use the windfall in a way that will directly benefit the customers.

One plan is to use $2.5 to $3 million for costs of transferring from Veeco to Carolina Power & Light — a move which is expected to mean direct reductions in the amount customers pay for electricity. The costs involve facilities construction which will have to be done, and the money must come from somewhere.

No decisions have been made on how the money will be used. That will be up to the Utilities commissioners who will take the matter under study.

The money was paid by the customers originally, however, and certainly it should be returned to them in some way.

Unequal System

By Bill Noblitt RALEIGH — "Discretion run wild" is the way Norman Lefstein characterizes some of the weaknesses in North Carolina's courtroom plea bargaining system.

The University of North Carolina law professor talked to a number of judges, defense lawyers, district attorneys and public defenders, in addition to analyzing survey responses from Superior Court judges in reaching his conclusion that the present method of plea bargaining "makes equal justice less than a reality in North Carolina."

Plea bargaining is a much-used process in which the accused can agree to plead guilty to the same or a lesser criminal charge in exchange for a reduced sentence or probation. The method is widely used (some say up to 80 percent of the cases) to avoid expensive and lengthy courtroom trials. Many district attorneys say it is the only way they can stay on top of the load.

RESISTANCE But past efforts to formalize plea bargaining have met stern resistance from the courts. The law would require that the judge preside over the process, that it be conducted in public, that rules spell out who is entitled and who isn't, and so on.

But, as candid court officers and legislators alike well admit, all of those open and formal procedures would bring to a halt the important political maneuverings and whispered conferences which characterize most political proceedings.

Lefstein, in his conclusions publicized recently in the "North Carolina Law Review," raises serious concern that the state's fair sentencing law will not correct the inequities of the plea bargaining system "and have the effect of encouraging business as usual."

BILL NOBLITT

That business as usual, reports Lefstein, means that defendants might plead guilty out of fear that going to trial will mean a stiffer sentence; judges can approve or disapprove plea bargained commitments and there is no uniformity in the process; that district attorneys in many jurisdictions have unbridled power; and that judges can either rubber stamp the prosecutors or impose stiffer sentences depending on personal whim.

Judges "interpret their plea bargaining responsibilities very differently," Lefstein writes. One prosecutor says some judges are "garbage men" or "crash" judges who accept virtually all sentence recommendations which come before them. Others want to give harsher sentences. Some resent being a rubberstamp for the district attorney.

UNFAIR This results even in negotiations over which judge will hear the plea. On one occasion most of the plea bargaining cases scheduled for a particular judge who normally rubberstamped the procedures were postponed when a tough sentencing judge took his place on short notice.

"What we have here in effect is a system that permits unequal treatment of similarly situated defendants — those with nearly identical backgrounds charged with the same crime," Lefstein feels.

The professor also worries about the absolute power enjoyed by prosecutors in many courts. Personal attitudes toward defense at-

Other Editors Say The Temperament

(Hickory Daily Record) All the rules and regulations in the world are no substitute for judicial temperament. Judges either have it or they don't. North Carolina needs a whole lot more judges with the correct temperament.

Judge John R. Friday took action in Lincoln County Superior Court that provides a wonderful illustration of this. In the case of a New Jersey man charged with driving while intoxicated, losing control of his car and running down and killing a 13-year-old as she played in her yard, the defense attorney and the prosecutor had agreed on a plea bargain when they entered Friday's courtroom.

The defendant had agreed to plead guilty to involuntary manslaughter in exchange for a sentence of three years in prison. North Carolina has a "fair sentencing act" which prescribes the three year sentence for this offense. The defendant could have been eligible for parole in 15 months with good behavior.

Friday turned down the negotiated plea and now the defendant must stand trial on a charge of voluntary manslaughter. Under presumptive sentencing, the defendant would receive six years in prison if convicted of this charge.

"I did not think three years was a sufficient amount of time in view of the seriousness of the offense," Friday said in explaining his action. "Voluntary manslaughter would be six years. I would accept that, but not three — after all, a little girl was killed."

If Friday had accepted the bargained plea, it would have been an example of what many feel is wrong with the court system today. Those convicted of serious offenses get off too lightly, many people believe.

By refusing to go along with the bargain, he displayed the judicial temperament that is such a valuable attribute for those who sit on the bench. If more judges exercised the wisdom Friday displayed, there would be fewer people trying to tinker with the judicial system.

The same week that Friday took action in the death of the 13-year-old, a professor of law at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was making news by complaining that Tar Heel trial judges enjoy too much control over the use of plea bargaining. He proposed several added controls on what the judge can and cannot do in regard to negotiating a plea.

Friday proved that there are judges in North Carolina who don't need any more rules for their actions. Their judicial temperament is such that they operate much better on their own than under any set of rules.

Another N. C. Redistricting Session Is Foreseen

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly may face another session on redistricting once the U.S. Justice Department clarifies its ruling on whether the maps may cross county lines, Sen. Kenneth C. Royall said Tuesday.

"There's no question everybody wants to go ahead and cross county lines," he said.

The Durham County Democrat said last week's legislative redistricting session was a premature because neither the Justice Department nor the federal courts had told the Legislature what restrictions it faced in devising new districts in the face of a court challenge.

District boundaries set by the Senate in June have been targeted in a lawsuit by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund. But the Senate decided last month to retain the boundaries until federal authorities act.

If they decide to strike down the state constitutional requirement that entire counties be used, Royall said, then counties would probably be split in drawing the new districts in a special session.

The constitutional provisions are under review by the Justice Department to see if they violate the voting rights of minorities protected by the 1965 Voting Rights Act. Royall said another session would be called in January if a ruling was made before then.

Last week's legislative session was called after James M. Wallace Jr., deputy attorney general, told House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey and Lt. Gov. James C. Green that the redistricting plans drawn last June would not likely survive the NAACP suit.

Lawyers said neither the House nor Senate plans would meet the U.S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote guideline because of population differences. The House adopted a new plan last week that lowered the differences in population per legislator among districts. But the Senate decided against adopting the plan and left its controversial June plan in effect.

Tobacco Growers Look For New Fight Ahead

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said that in return for saving the price support program, supporters agreed to review the program and make changes. Rose has promised hearings in the House Agriculture Committee, which he chairs, but no date has been set.

Tobacco has become vulnerable in budget-sensitive Washington because the program's cost to taxpayers has risen. Since its beginning in 1938, the program has cost about $500 million. But much of that cost has come in the past six years, mostly on defaulted interest payments on loans to tobacco cooperatives.

In addition, the inventory of tobacco bought with government loans has risen because it failed to sell for federally established market prices, increasing the interest on the unpaid loans.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, already has proposed doubling the federal excise tax on cigarettes, which is currently 8 cents a pack. Rose says manufacturers can no longer take those who represent the tobacco growers for granted.

"I'm opposed to excise tax increases, but the question is how opposed? As soon as I can I'm going to have a nice family chat with tobacco company presidents, as many as will see me. I want their advice about the total future of the tobacco program."

However, Horace Komegay, president of the Tobacco Institute which represents tobacco manufacturers, said an 8-cent tax increase will mean fewer cigarettes sold, which means more tobacco won't be sold.

Rose said the current system of allotments also faces modification.

Under existing law, tobacco can only be grown on land designated for that purpose. The allotments can be bought, sold, rented or inherited.

Rose said ownership of tobacco allotments by corporations and institutions may be abolished, but predicted that private, absentee ownership of allotments will survive.

"We're certainly going to take a close look at that, but I don't see what (eliminating) that would accomplish," he said.

torney can influence agreements.

One prosecutor told Lefstein "some defense lawyers I like and I will give them a break ... a few I don't like and I won't bargain with them."

Says Lefstein of such attitudes: "That sounds to me to be the antithesis of the way the system ought to operate and it's really a system of discretion run wild."

Studies Budget-Saving Alternatives

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With the goal of a 1984 balanced budget fading, President Reagan is reviewing a "full menu" of alternatives to the $115 billion in budget savings he proposed in September, his spokesman says.

Chief White House spokesman David R. Gergen told reporters Tuesday that Reagan has been meeting with advisers this week and "is in the process of reviewing where we stand" in Congress regarding those proposals and how they will be affected by forecasts that budget deficits will exceed the administration's projections.

Although the White House review is continuing, congressional budget writers are starting to draft binding spending outlines that likely will call for more than the $114.8 billion in budget savings over three years that Reagan had said would be necessary to get his economic program back on track toward a balanced budget in 1984.

The House Budget Committee was beginning work today on the spending outlines and the Senate Budget Committee was set to begin Thursday.

Republican sources said the Senate panel's chairman, Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., is proposing to balance the budget by 1984 through a three-year combination of about $184 billion in spending cuts and tax increases.

These sources, who asked not to be identified, said Domenici's proposal anticipated about $80 billion in tax increases over the next three years, with the bulk of the increases coming in 1983 and 1984. The president has proposed only $22 billion in higher taxes over the next three years.

Domenici's plan also would cut about $30 billion from the Reagan administration's proposed defense buildup and about $45 billion from benefit programs, apparently excluding Social Security. No details were available, although Domenici has previously suggested holding cost-of-living increases in benefit programs such as food stamps and Medicare below the rate of inflation. The remainder of the cuts would come from other, non-defense programs.

Meanwhile, the course that Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, wants to follow is less clear.

Jones has predicted that without additional savings, budget deficits over the next three years could exceed $300 billion, but Jones has not indicated how his panel intends to proceed to pare that projected shortfall.

The White House review is taking place following strong indications from top administration officials — including budget director David A. Stockman and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan — that a balanced budget may be out of reach in 1984.

Moreover, Stockman at one point conceded that without further budget savings, deficits over the next three years could total $300 billion and more.

While many legislators say higher taxes will be necessary to reduce deficits, the president apparently is maintaining his resistance to levies beyond those he has proposed.

House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said after a White House meeting with Reagan on Tuesday evening, "The president is very adamant for there being no tax increase." In addition, Michel said, Reagan appeared "a bit irritated" by recent published reports that some of his allies on Capitol Hill are convinced there will have to be tax increases to fulfill Reagan's goal of a balanced budget.

"There aren't going to be tax increases this year — period," Michel said.

Gergen, meanwhile, said Reagan also remains opposed to a so-called "windfall profits tax" on natural gas if its price is deregulated and has not actively considered a "national sales tax" to finance Pentagon spending. Both issues are being discussed on Capitol Hill. Gergen said the president, looking at a "full menu" of budget alternatives, will meet with House and Senate Republican leaders late this week or early next week to hear their views.

"Obviously there are people up there (on Capitol Hill) who have some other thoughts on spending and taxes," Gergen said, but he refused to concede that Reagan's plan is moribund. He acknowledged that there are "stiff upward pressures" on the federal deficit but said "it would take a powerful amount of persuasion to get (Reagan) to accept higher taxes."

Referring to the massive income tax cuts Reagan fought for and won earlier this year, Gergen said, "He doesn't want to give money back with one hand and take it away with the other."

confirmed Tuesday that Republicans have talked privately about a new, national sales tax to finance the nation's military budget, but declared he is "adamant in my opposition" to the idea.

He added, though, that he believes Congress should "consider funding defense through a trust fund."

Baker's discussion of a "national defense fund" appeared to be a recommendation that Congress consider establishing a method of earmarking money for defense such as that used for Social Security.

High Speed Trains Are Proposed As Solution

By DON WATERS

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel says America can get its transportation system on track if it follows other industrial nations and develops high-speed train service in major population corridors.

In the introduction to a report issued Tuesday, the leaders of the Joint Economic Committee, Rep. Henry Reuss, D-Wis., and Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, said the trains could "make a significant contribution toward the creation of a balanced national transportation system, a return of investment and growth to American cities and towns, the conservation of energy and reduction of our dependence on foreign oil."

The Japan-United States Rail Congress, comprised of 15 members of the Japanese parliament and 15 members of the U.S. Congress, was formed recently to push the idea of high-speed service. Leaders, including Rep. Adam Benjamin Jr., D-Ind., and Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., were invited to testify before the Joint Economic committee today.

The report said the popular Japanese, British and French high-speed trains average more than 100 miles per hour on their intercity runs and that such other nations as West Germany, Sweden, Switzerland, Italy and Canada are following suit.

By contrast, it said, the United States put its transportation priorities on automobiles and airliners while letting rail service deteriorate to the point where the average speed of U.S. passenger trains declined from 75 mph in the mid-1950s to 40 mph now.

The study noted that Amtrak President Alan Boyd testified last July that the popularity of Amtrak's Boston-New York-Washington service "has proven that people will leave their cars and take the train on trips of generally 100-300 miles if they are provided frequent, reliable, safe and comfortable service."

The foreign trains run through heavily populated areas, and the report said similar service could be practical in many U.S. corridors.

It listed candidates as Atlanta-Nashville; Atlanta-Savannah; Boston-Springfield-New Haven; Cleveland-Columbus-Cincinnati; Chicago-Indianapolis-Cincinnati; Chicago-Cleveland; Chicago-Detroit; Chicago-St. Louis; Chicago-Milwaukee;

Also, Los Angeles-Las Vegas; Los Angeles-San Diego; San Jose-Sacramento-Reno; Miami-Jacksonville; Washington-Richmond; New York-Albany-Buffalo; Philadelphia-Atlantic City; Philadelphia-Harrisburg; Seattle-Portland; and Houston-Dallas-Fort Worth-San Antonio.

The report is the first in a planned series of "case studies in private-public cooperation to revitalize America" to be published by the committee.

In line with this approach, the report said the billions of dollars needed for high-speed rail development would come from private sources, and the government's role would be to guarantee loans for projects it agrees are economically viable.

Tractor Contest Planned

A tractor driving contest will be held Nov. 16 at 2 p.m. at the Pitt Plaza Center, sponsored by the Southern-Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and Hendrix-Barnhill Co.

The contestants will complete a written test, a parts test and then the driving test. All tractor drivers must complete and pass the first two examinations before attempting the obstacle course.

The contest will be conducted under the rules of the North Carolina 4-H Tractor Operator Contest. Each contestant will be scored on safety movement throughout the event.

The written examination will consist of 25-50 questions pertaining to tractors and machinery. The parts identification section of the exam will require naming the 12 basic parts of a tractor.

Prizes will include a U.S. Saving Bond and a plaque to the first and second place winners.

The Winterville Jaycees will coordinate the contest along with the Pitt County Agricultural Extension 4-H program.

"This is the second year that our office has assisted with the coordination of the contest with the Tobacco Festival," said Dale Panero, Pitt extension agent. "It is very similar to the tractor competition held in the 4-H program. Since skills as well as knowledge is required, it is fine competition to show mastery of tractor operation."

Firm Moving A New Facility

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Crane Supply Co. is moving in March to a new office-warehouse facility in the Phillips Industrial Park at a cost of nearly $1 million, says Crane branch manager Robert F. Barr.

The new facility, which will be in the park at 625 Michael Wylie Drive, will have 30,000 square feet of space, including 4,000 square feet for office space and 26,000 square feet of warehouse space, Barr said. He said the company, founded in 1855 in Chicago,

Debris But No Pilot In Crash

EGLIN AIR FORCE BASE, Fla. (AP) — Rescuers have found debris but no trace of a missing Eglin pilot whose F-15 crashed into the Gulf of Mexico after colliding with another F-15 which limped back to base.

An Air Force helicopter crew Tuesday spotted a horizontal stabilizer and fuel-soaked foam floating in the Gulf about 40 miles south-southwest of Cape San Blas, said Petty Officer Michael Parks, of the Coast Guard's Rescue Coordination Center in New Orleans.

He said the debris from the Monday night crash was picked up by the Coast Guard cutter Point Lobos of Panama City, which confirmed that it had come from an F-15. It will be turned over to the Air Force as quickly as possible for use in the investigation, he said.

The search for Maj. John Clifton Booker Jr., 37, of Universal City, Texas, continued into the night Tuesday with air crews going aloft in hopes of spotting a flare, Parks said.

The mishap occurred near the same area where an Air Force F-4 Phantom was accidentally shot down by a missile fired from another Phantom in April. The two-man crew ejected and was rescued from the Gulf 47 miles south of Panama City.

The Air Force, meanwhile, put armed guards around the second Eagle involved in Monday's collision. It returned with superficial damage. The Air Force also began assembling an investigation board.

The two planes, both attached to the 33rd Tactical Fighter Wing at Eglin, collided at 7:20 p.m. CST Monday at 22,000 feet during a refueling mission, Air Force spokesmen said.

Each sophisticated jet costs about $16 million, carries a single pilot and is capable of flying up to 2½ times the speed of sound.

Lt. Craig McDaniel, the wing's public information officer, said the pilot who managed to get his plane back safely was Capt. Mike Lee, 31, of Greenwood, S.C., who was unhurt.

"Apparently it turned out to be a fairly routine landing, under the circumstances," McDaniel said.

McDaniel said the investigation board was being assembled from another base and that the cause of the crash wouldn't be disclosed until the panel finishes its work, probably not for "several weeks."

Lee's plane has been impounded by the investigation board pending the probe.

"We were lucky the second one made it back," McDaniel said.

He said the jet was leaking fuel and that its outer skin, wing pylons and external fuel tanks were damaged, but apparently there wasn't any serious structural damage, making the plane salvageable.

The collision occurred after the two F-15s had been refueled by a KC-135 tanker from Blytheville Air Force Base, Ark., McDaniel said.

Maj. Bill Campbell, public information officer for Eglin, said the KC-135 pilot "saw something flying from the colliding aircraft, which may have been an ejection seat."

"Someone reported seeing a flash," said Campbell, "but the aircraft was not on fire when it was last seen."

Baptists Elect New President

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Delegates of North Carolina's two largest Baptist organizations voted Tuesday to build new state headquarters in Raleigh, while the Baptist State Convention elected Frank R. Campbell as its president.

Statesville pastor Frank R. Campbell, first vice-president of the convention for 1981, defeated Charlotte department store executive Henderson Belk, who was second vice-president this year. Belk was elected first vice president for next year.

The election came on the second day of a joint convention of the predominantly white Baptist State Convention and the predominantly black General Baptist State Convention.

FRANK CAMPBELL

The convention also chose one of five options for new headquarters. Called Option Four by the General Board, the plan calls for selling the present headquarters in downtown Raleigh and constructing a new facility on a four-acre plot of land donated to the convention by a Cary couple. The cost of the plan, adopted by majority vote, is $750,000.

The 350,000-member General Baptist Convention also adopted a proposal for a new headquarters. In a majority vote, the group decided to lease land from Shaw University in Raleigh and build a new facility on the campus.

The reason for leasing land instead of buying it was to save money. The land that the General Baptists considered buying would cost $300,000. The cost of clearing the land would be $50,000. By leasing, the group could use the $350,000 to build a facility, said Rev. Cureton Johnson, editor of the Baptist Informer, the group's newspaper.

In other business at the Baptist State Convention session, Greensboro funeral home director Al Lineberry became the new second vice-president.

Joint convention activities were expected to continue today with discussion of resolutions ranging from condemning the activities of the Ku Klux Klan to opposing the use of "morality ratings" for political candidates.

Two Pitt 4-H Leaders Elected

RALEIGH — Four Pitt County 4-H leaders, including two that were elected to state positions, were among 300 from across the state that gathered here recently for a 4-H leader convention.

Rene Thompson of Winterville was elected state treasurer of the 4-H Volunteer Leader Association and Nancy Allen of Grifton was elected to the state board of directors during the coming year. Also attending the event were Cynthia Lilley of Grifton and Dale Panero, 4-H extension agent.

The convention theme was "Volunteers: Building With 4-H." During the meeting leaders discussed their particular involvement in county or district programs and participated in idea forums, leadership mini-courses and project leader workshops.

Other convention features included an idea fair, a luncheon honoring the retiring Dr. T.C. Blalock and a dinner. Held at the McKimmon Center on the NCSU campus, the convention was planned and conducted by volunteer 4-H leaders who represented all six agricultural extension service districts.

Mixed Results In Referendum Votes Across U.S.

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Proposed tax breaks for District of Columbia private school pupils, a $750 million highway bond in West Virginia, and a gay rights measure in Palo Alto, Calif., were among measures that went down to defeat in ballot contests across the country.

But an 82-year-old Texas farmer named Jesse Johnson in danger of losing the land he bought 40 years ago fared better at the hands of voters. By a 79 percent margin, Texans overwhelmingly passed a constitutional amendment that nullifies a 140-year-old defect on the title to his land.

With 249 of the 254 counties reporting returns, and 238 of those complete, 603,008 voted in favor of Johnson, 163,107 against.

Also passing was a Washington state initiative which will give the public a direct say in determining the costs of that state's nuclear power construction program, the most ambitious in the nation. A court challenge of the measure was almost immediately announced after the outcome.

Sponsors insisted the measure was not anti-nuclear, citing instead the need to bring runaway construction costs under control. In the last few years, the pricetag for nuclear plants under construction in the state have gone from $4.1 billion to nearly $24 billion.

With 5,632 precincts out of 6,080 reporting, the initiative was ahead by 463,563 to 327,493, nearly a 59-41 percent margin.

"It appears we have gotten a saddle on this bronc here!" said Jim Lazar of Bankrupt Washington, an organization backing the nuclear measure.

Meanwhile, two possible Democratic presidential hopefuls - Gov. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia, and Gov. James Y. Brown Jr. of Kentucky - found themselves on the losing side of propositions in their states.

A $750 million West

Virginia highway bond strongly backed by Rockefeller was soundly defeated. Voters apparently balked at the lavish spending proposal, favoring instead the argument that the state could ill afford a fresh mountain of debt.

With 2,324, or 99 percent of the state's 2,329 precincts reporting, the vote was 200,374, or 61 percent against the bond, and 125,136, or 38 percent, in favor.

And a Brown-backed measure that would have allowed state officials, including the governor, to succeed themselves, was also defeated. With 84 percent of the vote in 319,000 precincts, 269,000 voted against Amendment 1, and 186,000 supported it.

Brown had said during the amendment campaign that the vote was a referendum of sorts on his administration.

A homosexual rights proposition in Palo Alto, Calif. that would have forbidden discrimination on the basis of "sexual orientation" was losing early today.

With 10 of 39 precincts and absentee ballots counted, the measure trailed by 1,491 to 2,251.

San Diego voters were heavily favoring a ballot measure calling for the firing of any county employee who went on strike. The vote in 846 of 2,084 precincts was 40,921, or 63 percent, in favor of the ballot issue, and 23,958, or 37 percent opposed.

A tuition tax credit measure in Washington, D.C., which had been condemned by national teacher unions and other public education interest groups was overwhelmingly defeated.

Final unofficial results on Initiative Seven showed 73,829 votes against, or 89 percent, to 8,904 in favor, or 11 percent.

The measure would have granted a tax break to parents with children in private school, an idea favored by President Reagan.

Despite a $4.3 million campaign by its supporters, Ohio voters trounced a ballot issue that would have allowed private insurers to provide workers' compensation benefits in the state.

With 10,105 of 13,477 precincts counted, Issue 1 had 412,459 votes in favor, or 21 percent, and 1,572,298, or 79 percent against it.

Elsewhere, Maine voters passed measures that will assist Bath Iron Works, the state's biggest employer, to expand its operations. But they turned down a ballot measure that would have drastically changed the way the state regulates power utilities.

New Yorkers split virtually down the middle on a $500 million prison construction bond issue.

With 97 percent of precincts tallied, the issue had

1,184,437 against, to 1,178,378 for it - considered too close to call.

And in Boston, votes had not yet been counted in a ballot measure which would call on the City Council to ask Congress to spend more on social programs, and less on defense expenditures.

Church Historian Has Heroes Of Past

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — St. Thomas More, Nicholas de Cusa, St. Jerome and Erasmus are the heroes of John P. Dolan.

More, the chancellor of England who was executed after refusing to recognize Henry VIII as the head of the church, "had guts to stand up for his principles and a wonderful sense of humor," says Dolan.

De Cusa, a 15th-century scientist, theologian and mystic is another favorite, as is St. Jerome, who translated the Bible into Latin. "He was a very urban, scholarly person, but no bookworm," says the University of South Carolina history professor.

So was Erasmus, who Dolan says was the founder of modern biblical studies. "He helped get the Middle Ages out of darkness," the professor adds.

Dolan's favorites are among the prominent figures who populate a massive 10-volume series titled "History of The Church," which Dolan and the late German scholar Hubert Jedin edited.

Critics have called the work the definitive history of the church for its detailed tracing of Christian history from the apostles to today.

"Completing the project has been like getting an albatross from around my neck," says Dolan, a retired Roman Catholic priest. "It was a job marked by all kinds of trials and tribulations, but of all the things which I have written, I believe it will endure the longest."

While he was working on the history, the frail-looking scholar also wrote 12 books and 50 articles.

He began working on the project in the late 50s. While in Germany as a chaplain for the U.S. High Commission, Dolan was instructed by his superiors at Notre Dame University to study for his doctorate at the University of Bonn.

At Bonn, Dolan studied under Jedin, who tapped his pupil as translation editor for his history. It took two decades to complete. Jedin died in July 1980.

As English editor, Dolan was responsible for hiring and supervising translators and for keeping the massive bibliography, which includes up-to-date entries in French, German, Italian, Latin, Spanish, Russian, Polish, Greek, Danish and English.

Dolan notes that the translators not only had to know the required languages but had to be well versed in theology and its terminology.

The English edition of the 10th volume was published last spring. The series came out volume by volume in the United States and England between 1965 and 1981. Dolan says a Spanish edition will probably be next.

People who read the entire series "will see the church in a much different light than they do with just a contemporary knowledge of it," says Dolan. "They will see how the church influenced and how it has been influenced by society and civilization."

The theme running through the series, he says, "is the problem expressed in the scripture, the separation between the things that are Caesar's and the things that are God's. The church must tread a thin line between over-involvement in the world and escapism. In the books, you see the constant struggle between God and man.

"I've had enough of Luther," jokes Dolan, whose specialty is the reformation. "Seriously, the beauty of history is you can bring someone back to life. The people in this series have become as well known to me as the living."

Dolan's next field of scholarly endeavor is medicine. Already having written about the subject, he now is working on a book on folk medicine that may span some 2,000 years.

"I like to try and get the big picture in my books," says Dolan.

Offshore Sail Slated

BEAUFORT — The Hampton Mariners Museum in Beaufort is hosting another visit of the 67-foot Continental Sloop "Providence," a reproduction of the U.S. Navy's first ship.

A three-hour offshore sail is being offered to the first 40 people to make reservations for each of the two scheduled cruises. The fee is $15 per person ($10 to members of the Friends of the Museum). The "Providence" will embark from the Beaufort docks at 1 p.m. Saturday and again on Sunday for the cruise under full sail.

For reservations, call the museum, 728-7317. In the event of bad weather, the ship's captain will decide whether to sail or not.

Water Acidity Reported Rising

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Acid in rain and snow is raising the acidity of streams, lakes and ponds in the Adirondack Mountains, says the state Division of Fish and Wildlife.

Forty percent of the streams sampled as snows melted last year showed "critical" or "endangered" levels of acidity, said the report, released Monday. Robert Flacke, New York's environmental conservation commissioner, said the study shows "the need for immediate federal action to bring an end to this pollution."

Acid rain is believed to come from discharge of sulfur dioxide, primarily from industry, and nitrogen oxides from automobiles.

Persinger Is Re-Elected

AYDEN — Incumbent Ross Persinger was re-elected mayor of Ayden Tuesday, beating third-time challenger Glenn Bowen Jr.

Persinger, mayor of Ayden for over 17 years, received 641 votes, compared with 345 ballots cast for Bowen.

Five seats on the Board of Commissioners were also filled, with incumbent commissioners in the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th wards holding their seats.

Carl Speight was unopposed in the 1st Ward, and received 785 votes. Robert G. Harris retained his seat representing the 2nd Ward with 660 votes, getting 359 more than challenger William Bonar's 301 votes.

J. Elliott Dixon was re-elected as representative of Ward 3 in a close race with opponent Simmons Hill. Dixon received 483 votes and Hill 473. Marvin Baldree Jr., with 566 votes, beat out contenders Joseph Conleton (63 votes), James Vance (276 votes) and Rockefeller Venters (80 votes) for commissioner of the 3rd Ward.

Incumbent commissioner J.J. Brown was unopposed for re-election as commissioner in the 5th Ward. He received 797 votes.

Election officials said 996 voters went to the polls in Ayden Tuesday, approximately one-half of the 1,860 registered voters in the town.

Tyer Elected In Falkland

FALKLAND — John L. Tyer was elected mayor of Falkland Tuesday.

He ran unopposed, as did all three candidates for Town Council.

Tyer received 19 votes, while council candidate A. Vernon Best received 18; Charles E. Mayo Jr., 21, and Woodrow W. Wooten, 20.

Simpson Voters Go To The Polls

SIMPSON — Eight-two percent of Simpson's registered voters turned out Tuesday to elect three commissioners in municipal elections here.

Winning seats on the council were Galloway C. Thompson with 142 votes, Virginia S. McDonald with 129 votes and Elsie M. Porter with 108 votes. Votes were cast by 237 of the 289 registered voters in the town.

Other candidates in the council race and the votes they received were: Emily W. (Pie) Edwards, 55; Brenda G. Hawkins, 101; Jasper R. Hodges, 23; Hugh W. Mills, 58; and Oscar L. (Jim) Telfaire, 56.

Farmville Gives Thaxton Upsets Grifton Mayor

FARMVILLE — Farmville voters Tuesday elected Michael B. Dixon a town commissioner.

Dixon won a runoff showdown between him and incumbent commissioner LeRoy Redden. He received 562 votes while Redden received 405.

Dixon's victory ends an era of black citizen representation on the board. Redden is a black former assistant principal of Farmville Central High School who now operates a florist business here. Dixon is a white dentist.

Dixon and Oliver Murphrey, elected last month, join John T. Walston, David Stowe, Charles Joyner and Joe Kue on the board.

MEDICAL ASSISTANTS — The Pitt County Chapter of American Association of Medical Assistants will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in No. 10 Doctors Park here.

The speaker will be Dr. Charles Mitchell, whose topic will be stress. All members are asked to be present and guests are welcome.

City Counts 4 Mishaps

An estimated $3,950 property damage resulted from a series of four traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Heaviest damage, according to officers, resulted from a 2 p.m. collision on 10th Street involving cars driven by Elizabeth Tripp Nichols of Route 1, Grimesland, and Ralph Jeffrey Foster of Goldsboro.

Damage was estimated at $700 to the Nichols car and $600 to the Foster vehicle.

Vehicles driven by Danny Ray Murphy of Route 1, Harrels, and Lynda Sue Arnold of Route 2, Fuquay-Varina, collided about 1:30 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, just south of the Dickinson Avenue intersection, causing an estimated $150 damage to the Murphy truck and $1,000 damage to the Arnold car.

A truck driven by Nancy Carol Yarrow of Route 3, Franklin, W. Va., and a car operated by Betty Wilson Good of Route 2, Washington, collided about 12:13 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Dickinson Avenue, causing $300 damage to the truck and $500 damage to the car. A 3:35 p.m. mishap on Elm Street, 175 feet north of the Brookgreen Drive intersection, involved cars driven by Kevin Paul Coburn of 1212 Redbanks Road and Mamie Elks Schlienz of 1609 East

Wright Road. Police estimated damage at $200 to the Coburn car and $500 to the Schlienz vehicle.

Martin Voting Reported Light

WILLIAMSTON — Voting was relatively light in Martin County's two major towns Tuesday as voters went to the polls to choose a mayor and five town commissioners in both Williamston and Robersonville.

In Williamston, 1,192 voters of a total of approximately 2,831 voters (about 42 percent) went to the polls.

Incumbent Mayor Robert (Bob) Cowen, with 773 votes, won handily in Williamston over his single opponent, John S. Faulk, who garnered 411 votes.

Only six candidates ran for the five-member Town Council. One of the five commissioners, Jerry Manning, is a newcomer to the commission. Manning received 694 votes. The four incumbents returned to the council and the number of votes received are: William Honeyblue, 988; George C. Griffin, Jr., 872; Gray M. Griffin, 783; and John L. Swain, 663.

The single unsuccessful candidate, Buck Brown, received 522 votes.

About 56 percent of Robersonville's approximately 1,100 registered voters (625) went to the polls Tuesday to re-elect incumbent Mayor Wilson Wynne. Wynne tallied 376 votes against his single opponent, Mike Kilpatrick, who received 221 votes.

Three incumbents and two newcomers were elected to Robersonville's Town Council from a field of 14 candidates. Incumbents returned to office were Claude Wilson, 391; Edward Casper, 361; and R. B. Nelson, 260. The two newcomers are Vernon Phelps, 234 and Mort Hurst, 221. None of the defeated candidates were incumbents.

Bethel Elects New Officials

BETHEL — Voting was relatively heavy Tuesday in Pitt County's northernmost municipality with 669 voters — a little more than 69 percent — of the town's 970 registered voters going to the polls.

Frank M. Hemingway, candidate without opposition for the post of mayor, received 494 votes. Five people each received a single write-in vote and another received two write-in votes.

For town commissioners, eight candidates were on the slate for five positions. The five elected and the number of votes they received were: Delton Perry, 378; Cleve M. Burton Jr., 376; Don C. Carson, III, 365; John Lloyd Watson, 360, and Richard B. Johnson, 350.

Fountain Picks Walker Mayor

FOUNTAIN — William W. Walker was elected mayor of Fountain Tuesday, winning 93 votes over Carter G. Smith's 46.

There was a write-in for Henry Darden.

All those who ran for town commissioner were winners. They are Bruce Beasley Jr. with 94 votes; Beverly Burnette with 107; Norman Gardner with 100; Hilton Owens with 94 and Charles Pridden with 104.

In all, 142 persons voted.

Chargers Battle Cougars For Share Of ECC Title

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

It comes down to this on the final Friday evening of the high school regular season: Ayden-Grifton must defeat Southwest Edgecombe for a chance at the playoffs. Anything less and the Chargers will be found wanting.

Southwest Edgecombe is alone atop the Eastern Carolina Conference following last week's 28-20 victory over previously unbeaten Charles B. Aycock. The Cougars are 5-0 in the league, one game in front of the Chargers and Falcons who are tied at 4-1.

A win by the Cougars, who are 7-2 overall, will clinch the ECC title. A loss would leave them tied with the Chargers for first. C.B. Aycock, meanwhile, now 8-1, plays at North Pitt, which has won only two games this season and has yet to win a conference game.

Wins by both the Falcons and Chargers would leave a three-way tie for first place. If that happens a drawing would be held to determine the league's two playoff representatives.

"This is the biggest game for us in three years," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said. "We're certainly looking forward to playing this game. This is the what you practice for all year long."

The Chargers last won the ECC title in 1973 when they tied with Southern Wayne for the top spot. Both Ayden-Grifton and Southern Wayne, now a member of Mideastern 4-A Conference, both went to the playoffs, the Chargers losing to Ahsokie, 28-14, in the opening round.

Ayden-Grifton is not the only local team with a chance of making the playoffs. As strange as it may seem, D.H. Conley also could find itself playing football after the regular season ends.

While White Oak has already clinched the Coastal Conference regular season title, three teams — D.H. Conley, Havelock, West Carteret — remain knotted for second with 2-2 records.

D.H. Conley, 3-6-0 overall, takes a two-game winning streak to Havelock Friday night. The Vikings must defeat the Rams and then hope North Lenoir beats West Carteret to gain a berth in the playoffs.

A victory by Havelock gives the Rams the playoff slot regardless of what West Carteret does. However, if West Carteret and D.H. Conley win, the Patriots will receive the berth because they defeated the Vikings earlier this season.

In other games this week, Greene Central (4-5-0, 1-4-0) travels to Southern Nash (2-7-0, 2-3-0), Williamston (4-5-0, 2-5-0) travels to Edenton (5-4-0, 4-3-0) and Jamesville goes to Bath (3-6-0, 2-5-0). Farmville Central (5-5-0, 2-4-0) and Roanoke (7-3-0, 5-3-0) both ended their seasons last week.

In games last week, Ayden-Grifton whipped Southern Nash, 27-13, D.H. Conley defeated West Craven, 28-7, Farmville Central blanked Greene Central, 9-0, Southwest Edgecombe edged North Pitt, 14-8, Roanoke Rapids defeated Roanoke, 28-14, Washington rolled past Williamston, 27-6, and Creswell whipped Jamesville, 26-14.

Ayden-Grifton

The year began with a disappointing 20-14 loss to Roanoke. Since then, though, the disappointments have been few for Ayden-Grifton as the Chargers have won seven of their last eight games, including four straight.

All of that will be for naught, however, if the Chargers fail to win Friday night when they play host to Southwest Edgecombe.

"Since the opening game of the season we have had to win every week to have the kind of season we want to have," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said. "From that standpoint, we have to win this game. We just hope the players will play it like a normal ball game."

It is, however, anything but a normal game. Not since 1973 have the Chargers won the ECC title and a victory over Southwest Edgecombe would assure them of at least a tie for the league crown.

Winning won't be easy. The Cougars have lost only twice this season — to D.H. Conley, 19-6, and Wilson Beddingfield, 10-6. Since the loss to the Bruins, the Cougars have won six straight.

In those six wins SWE has given up only 48 points — 20 of which came in last week's 28-20 win over Charles B. Aycock. The Cougar offense, meanwhile, has scored 96 points.

"They're a power-oriented team," Sauls said. "They try to run the ball right at you."

That is until last week. Against the Falcons, the Cougars shelved their wishbone for a more wide-open passing attack as quarterback Jeff Lucas completed five of 10 passes for 118 yards.

"It makes them difficult to prepare for," Sauls said. "They had been a power team and now they show they can pass as well."

The Cougars in rushing by are led by running back Wayne Mayo, who has ground out 953 yards this season.

Ayden-Grifton has, in the past weeks, come with a balanced attack of its own. The Chargers are led in the air by quarterback Bernard Ricciarelli, who has completed 49 of 101 passes and six touchdowns. He has had seven passes intercepted.

Gregory Jackson leads Ayden-Grifton is rushing with 819 yards and 13 TDs while running mate Cleveland Coley has rushed for 796 yards and five scores.

Not All Agree With Charges Made By Player

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the second of a two-part series dealing with allegations by former East Carolina split end Larry O'Roark concerning the Pirate football program.

Yesterday's story dealt mainly with O'Roark's charges that he left the team not because of personal reasons, but because of problems within the football program — problems that, he says, many see but are not willing to discuss on the record.

Today's article will deal primarily with refutations of O'Roark's charges by Coach Ed Emory and a number of ECU players.

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

In quitting the East Carolina football team, Larry O'Roark said his decision was based mainly on a lack of respect for Head Coach Ed Emory. But, O'Roark also admits being discouraged about not catching the football as much as he would have liked.

"Every football player deserves a shot, an opportunity to achieve his goals," O'Roark said. "One of his (Emory's) favorite sayings is 'Men, life's not fair. Men, life's not fair.' Well, you can at least try to make it fair."

O'Roark nearly quit before the Southwest Louisiana game two weeks ago, but Emory persuaded him to stay.

"I talked to Coach Emory before the game and told him I sort of had my mind made up, that I had certain goals I wanted to achieve and that it was sort of hard to achieve them now."

"But he did persuade me before the Southwest Louisiana game to stay. He said he didn't know how things would go the rest of the season but that some things would be changed next year."

"Emory said that if we really knew what was going on I'd just hang on a bit and wait until next year. He said he was almost certain we'd be going to the I next year. But I was wondering what if we didn't run the I next year. Where would that leave me?"

Nowhere, according to O'Roark. And for a some players that is too much for them to accept. Some view O'Roark's departure as a selfish gesture based mainly on personal goals.

"I totally disagree (with O'Roark)," ECU starting strong safety Marvin Elliott said earlier this week. "With Larry O'Roark the problem was selfishness. He couldn't reach his personal goals."

"I think he quit for selfish reasons," ECU starting offensive tackle Bud LaCock said. "It's hard for me to see it as a legitimate reason. I believe he believes everything he says, but I don't agree."

"I think it's a way of coping out and not standing up to the problem," starting cornerback Gerald Sykes added. "Larry and a couple of other guys quit because they weren't getting a lot of playing time."

For his part, Emory would not answer directly many of O'Roark's charges. He did say, however, that he believed it was a personal problem when a player complained about not playing as much and not catching the ball as much as he might like.

"We wish him the very best," Emory said earlier this week. "Larry O'Roark contributed to the East Carolina football team while he was here."

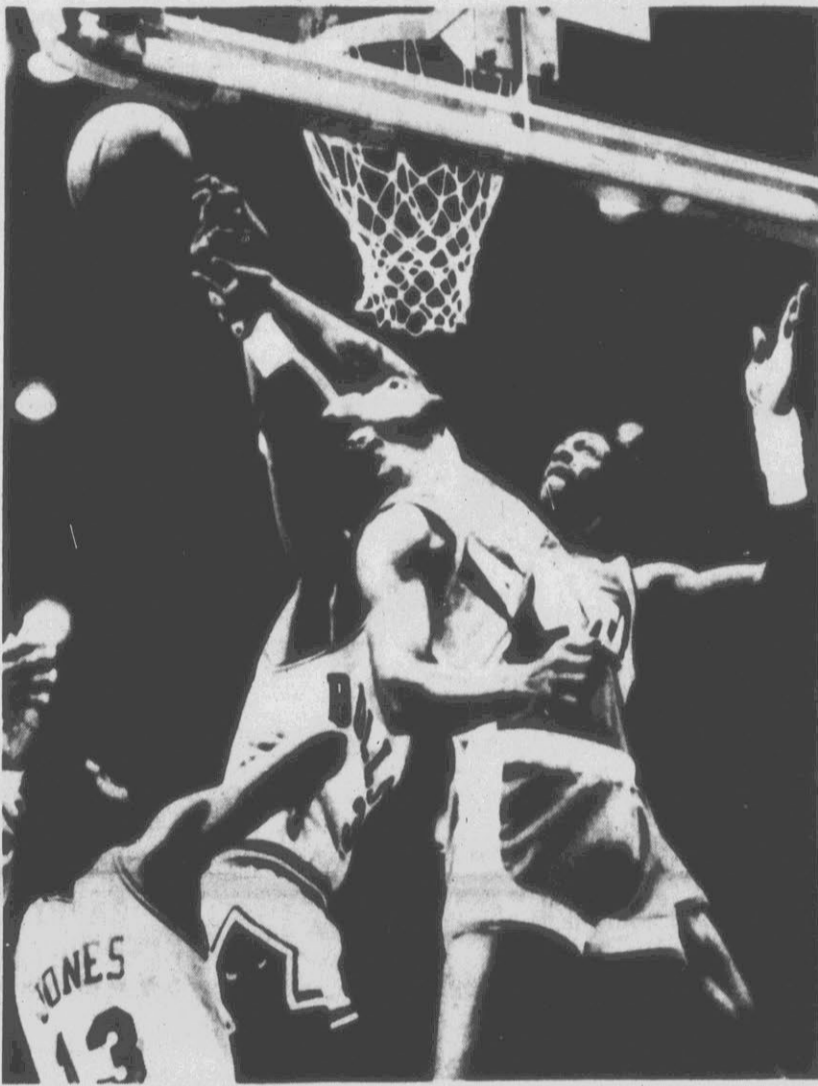

"But our concern now is with the 150 players who have sustained their motivation and will to play. We did everything we could for him. But you don't have a right to play football. It's a privilege to play football."

"The only power, the only authority a football coach has is to who plays and who doesn't. The team comes first before the individual and that's the toughest thing to decide: who plays and who doesn't."

Asked about O'Roark's charge that many of the players have lost respect for him, Emory said: "Respect is a two-way street. Talk to Tootie Robbins, Bud LaCock, Tony Hensley, Hal Stephens, George Crump. Talk to the ones who have stayed and who haven't quit."

"If you'll check, you'll see Larry has already quit one program. Larry is a transfer from another school and his main objective was to get a scholarship. That's wrong. A walk-on's main objective should be to make the team and play."

Miami Placed On 2-Year Probation

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Within days of scoring its biggest football victory in 55 years, the University of Miami has suffered one of its most telling setbacks.

The university announced Tuesday the NCAA has placed the 13th-ranked Hurricanes on probation for two years and barred the team from accepting a bowl bid this season.

The university was found guilty of 66 of 107 recruiting violations that allegedly occurred between 1976 and 1980 while the Hurricanes, now 5-2 after a 17-14 upset of then-No. 1 Penn State Saturday, were struggling to rebuild their program.

Besides forbidding postseason play before Nov. 1, 1983, Miami is restricted to 20 new scholarships for the 1982-83 school year, instead of the present 30.

The Hurricanes will still be allowed to appear on regional and national television and share in TV revenues.

Two players, whom the NCAA said violated regulations, were ruled ineligible immediately, while 14 others will be ineligible for postseason play for the rest of their collegiate careers. The two

Only Second AL Reliever To Get Award

Fingers Wins Cy Young

NEW YORK (AP) — Rollie Fingers says every pitcher who has ever won the Cy Young Award will tell you the same thing, "that everything went right during the whole year."

Fingers, cagey 13-year veteran with a handlebar mustache, was voted the 1981 Cy Young winner in the American League by the Baseball Writers Association of America, the BBWAA announced Tuesday.

The Milwaukee Brewers right-hander said he was surprised because he was a reliever and "being a relief pitcher, it doesn't happen that often. It makes winning even more gratifying."

Sparky Lyle, then with the New York Yankees, was the only other AL reliever to win the award, in 1977. Bruce Sutter of the Chicago Cubs in 1979 and Mike Marshall of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1974 won it in the National League.

"I feel this was my best season ever. Very few guys get a chance to have a year like I had," Fingers said when he learned of the award after arriving in Las Vegas, Nev., for a visit. "Every guy on the ballclub played great behind me, that's one of the main reasons I won."

"I gave up 10 runs all year, and every one of them was earned," he said. "The defense didn't give up a run when I was out there."

Fingers paid special tribute to shortstop Robin Yount and second baseman Jim Gantner for "getting me out of several jams."

He also said he was helped by the experience of catchers Ted Simmons and Charlie Moore, especially on "how to pitch to hitters I didn't know."

Fingers, 35, won six games and had 28 saves with a 1.04 earned run average in 47 appearances for Milwaukee. He worked 78 innings, striking out 61 and walking only 13.

He finished well ahead of Oakland's Steve McCatty in balloting by a special panel that consisted of two writers from each of the BBWAA's 14 franchise cities.

Fingers received 22 of 28 first-place ballots and finished with 126 points. He was the only pitcher named on every ballot. McCatty had the other six first-place votes and finished with 84½ points. Jack Morris of Detroit was third with 21 points.

Milwaukee won the second-half title in the AL East but lost to the New York Yankees in five games in the miniplayoffs.

"Awards at the end of the season are fine, but it's playoff wins and the World Series that really matter. We were shooting for a World Series and I sure would have liked to have gotten there," said Fingers, who broke into the major leagues with Oakland in 1968.

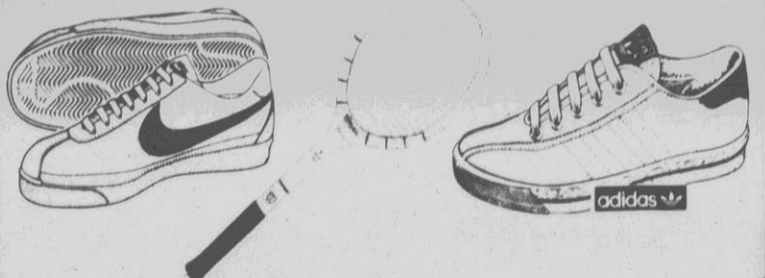

Fingers was an essential part of the A's World Series victories in 1972, '73 and '74. He was the Most Valuable Player of 1974 Series against Los Angeles.

Crum: Key May Be Stopping Tiger Quarterback

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina coach Dick Crum says the key to Saturday's confrontation with Clemson may lie in stopping Tiger quarterback Homer Jordan.

While the eighth-ranked Tar Heels struggled to a 17-10 victory over Maryland last week, Jordan ran for 388 yards and passed for more than 1,000 yards to lead second-ranked Clemson to an 82-24 rout of Wake Forest.

"Looking at all the quarterbacks we've played to date, he is the most well-rounded," Crum said Tuesday at a news conference. "He runs well, he throws well and he runs the offense well. I think he's their trigger man."

Asked how North Carolina could stop Jordan, Crum replied, "Got a shotgun?" Jordan, interviewed later, said

Clemson was trying to forget the awesome display of offense last Saturday and concentrate on this week's nationally televised battle for the top spot in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"It's the game everybody's been waiting on," he said. "It's still in our way to the ACC crown. They're undefeated in the ACC and we are too, and we're looking at the title."

Jordan said he looked forward to a hard-fought contest.

"Their personnel is real good," he said. "They come after you real hard. We'll have to control that. If we can control the line of scrimmage, we can establish our game."

While North Carolina has been battling injuries all season — losing quarterback

Rod Elkins and two running back before the Maryland game — Jordan said that would not be a big factor.

"They seem to be doing pretty good," he said. "The ones backing them up are doing a pretty good job."

Crum would have to call that an understatement.

The Tar Heels' backup quarterback Scott Stankavage came through by hitting 17 of 24 passes including the winning touchdown pass in the closing minutes. The experience will come in handy since Stankavage will fill in again for the ailing Elkins against Clemson.

"Considering it was his first start and it wasn't against the sisters of the poor, I think he did very well," Crum said of Stankavage.

North Carolina also had a surprise at tailback — a spot vacated by Kelvin Bryant in the fourth game and left empty once again when replacement Tyrone Anthony pulled a hamstring against South Carolina.

It was expected that Anthony's backup Bobby Ratliff would start against Maryland, but instead 6-foot-4, 225-pound freshman Ethan Horton, the third-string quarterback, was moved into the spot with three days practice and responded with 94 yards and a touchdown.

"I thought he was a better tailback," Crum said, explaining Horton's jump over Ratliff. "He is bigger and I thought he was a better runner, a little faster too."

Horton is scheduled to start again, although Anthony should be healthy by Saturday.

Crum also was asked if Bryant might return Saturday. While he did not rule out the possibility, he said it would be "a judgement thing," adding that the team doctors are still evaluating him.

Because of the inexperience of Stankavage and Horton, Crum ran a conservative offense against the Terrapins. The Tar Heel coach said, however, his team would not be afforded that opportunity against Clemson, which ran its record to 8-0 overall and 4-0 in the ACC with last week's victory.

One of the reasons for that is the Tiger defense, which is one of the best in the country — third in scoring, holding opponents to 7.8 points a game, ninth in rushing, limiting the opposition to 92.9 yard a games and 17th in total defense.

Jordan was justifiably proud of the defense.

"I don't think any team can put a lot of points on the board against our defense," he said.

But the Tar Heel defense is not weak — holding opponents to 11.1 points, 111.4 yards rushing and 282.5 total yards.

Clemson will be trying to avenge last season's 24-19 defeat at Death Valley when they come to Chapel Hill. The Tigers had seven downs inside the Tar Heel 10 in the closing seconds in that contest but North Carolina put on a goal line stand and held on for the victory.

Kickoff for the game, which will be televised by ABC-TV, is 12:35 p.m. in Kenan Stadium.

Players Disagree...

O'Roark, a native of Centerville, Va., transferred to East Carolina three years ago from Frostburg State, a Division III school in Maryland. His coach while there was John Peterson, now head coach at Holy Cross.

Peterson said O'Roark did quit the team three weeks into his freshman season at Frostburg State but returned at the end of the season to participate in the school's off-season weight lifting program.

"We were all set for him to come back the next season when he came in (in May) and told us he had decided to transfer to East Carolina," Peterson said in a telephone interview Thursday afternoon. "He said he wanted to play Division I football."

"I understood that, but I asked him if it was something we had done. He said absolutely not, that he loved the program here but that he just had his heart set on playing Division I football. It broke my heart."

Asked if O'Roark's character is such that he would quit abruptly and without reason, Peterson said: "No. He's a mature kid and a hard working kid. As a freshman he quit, but he didn't have his head all together and he was homesick."

Emory persuaded O'Roark to stay during a talk that both Emory and O'Roark said lasted some three to four hours. But the decision to stay remained tenuous and one week later O'Roark was gone for good.

"The final straw came in that game. I didn't have one pass called to me and everyone that was called to the 'X' (split end) was when Ricky Nichols was in the game."

"It finally got to the point on the last play of the first half that we called an 84 X and go — a fly pattern down the sideline. I went in and gave the play to (quarterback) Greg Stewart. I lined up at my position, about four yards from the sideline and then there Ricky comes in again."

What happened, according to Emory, was this: USL called a time out and he decided to change the play. So, he sent Nichols in and out came O'Roark.

The next day O'Roark quit — and, he says, he has not talked Emory since. "Why he said personal problems were the reason I left, I don't know," O'Roark said. "I haven't talked to him since I left."

A number of players contacted said that personally they respect Emory, but that some players do not and that, in some instances, it has taken the coach longer to gain the respect of some players.

"It's normal that there's going to be a little adjustment when someone new comes in," ECU starting linebacker Glenn Morris said. "I don't know that (it's taken longer for Emory to gain the respect of the players). I've only been through it (the change of coaches) once."

Another starter, who asked his name not be used, said: "I don't think we have as much respect for (Emory) as we did for Coach Dye. But I really don't know. I can't compare him with Coach Dye."

"With Coach Emory it's taking a while for him to get the respect of some of the players," the player said. "I think he's gaining it, but it's a slow process. Based on a scale of one to 10, I'd say he's at around seven."

In the re-evaluating process O'Roark said was going on, a number of players — some of whom are starters — are said to have at least thought about quitting the team. None of the players talked to, however, would admit to having thought about leaving the team.

"I don't think any of the (starters) are gonna quit," a player said. "There might be one, but that's because of the situation he's in." The source would not identify the player.

Despite disagreeing with O'Roark's assessment of the situation, nearly every player said he was surprised that O'Roark quit. "It shocked me," Sykes said. "It was a terrible blow. When they told me the reason I wanted to die."

Former ECU graduate assistant Rod Broadway, a good friend of O'Roark and now an assistant coach at Duke, was also surprised when told that O'Roark had quit. "I would never have thought he would quit," Broadway said. "It's not like him. He the street fighter type."

Asked about Emory, Broadway replied, "I personally though he was fair with everyone. He may not have always have done what they (the players) thought was right, but I can't say he tried to be unfair to anybody."

Emory, however, was not surprised that O'Roark quit. "Nothing surprises a head coach," he said. "No, it didn't surprise me."

O'Roark said Emory was surprised. "When I went in and talked to him he said I was the last person in the world he thought would quit."

"I ain't no quitter. I'll be back. Quitting the team was the hardest thing I've ever done. I'd like to play football at East Carolina. I love the players and East Carolina, but I can't (stay here)."

Dooley: Gators Better Than No. 2 Clemson

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — The Florida Gators, with a 5-3 record, may be a better team than undefeated and No. 2-ranked Clemson, Georgia Coach Vince Dooley claims.

"I've been watching Florida for 25 years and this year, they have as many or more good athletes than ever before," Dooley, who usually tries to make next week's opponent look awesome, said at his weekly news conference Tuesday. "They're big, fast and quick."

Georgia, 7-1, faces Florida in the Gator Bowl in Jacksonville, Fla., on Saturday. The kickoff was changed from 1:30 p.m. to 3:50 p.m. EST because ABC will televise the contest nationally.

"Overall, I think Florida has more athletes than Clemson," said Dooley of the club that knocked off the Bulldogs 13-3 earlier this season.

Georgia tailback Herschel Walker said he knows the Florida game will be an important one, but he isn't all fired up about the game and its long rivalry.

"Football didn't mean anything to me when I was growing up," Walker said, "so how can I know anything about it? I can understand how others might get all fired up about it, but I don't need to be fired up to play well."

"The game means to me what it means to everybody else," he said, "but not in an emotional way. I know it's a big game, but isn't every game we play big? Next week is Auburn, and they're (the coaches) going to say the same thing."

The game is a chance for Georgia players to prove that last year's last-minute, 26-21 victory over Florida was no fluke.

"Last year, they didn't think we had the caliber of athletes to beat them, and we did," Walker said. "And, they'll have the chance to prove that they're better this year."

Ford Taking No Chances Second-Ranked Tigers Preparing Hard For UNC

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — In preparing No. 2 Clemson to meet eighth-ranked North Carolina in a regionally televised football clash Saturday, Tiger coach Danny Ford is leaving nothing to chance.

Not even injured Tar Heels, rated as doubtful for the Atlantic Coast Conference clash, have escaped Ford's preparations for the contest.

"Not knowing exactly who they will play at some important positions does not cause problems for us," said Ford, "because we are going to prepare for everyone who could play."

"We are planning on Rod Elkins (quarterback) and Kelvin Bryant (tailback) playing. We are even preparing for Lawrence Taylor in case they bring him back from the pros," the Clemson coach said during his weekly press conference Tuesday.

Ford said his Tigers must beat North Carolina to even think about taking the ACC title.

"We have got to win this game, or we will not win the conference championship," said Ford. "We don't concentrate on the polls and winning the national championship, because if we win the conference title everything will take care of itself."

Ford focused on the Tar Heel team Tuesday, spending little time discussing his Tigers' 82-24 victory over Wake Forest last Saturday.

"North Carolina out-physicalised us last year when they beat us (24-19) in Death Valley," he said. "They had some veteran players who played well against us, so I thought they would have some voids to fill. But the players they have put in that defensive and offensive line have done a great job."

"Their youngsters on the defensive line have done especially well. Joe Conwell, Steve Fortson and William Fuller are all youngsters who have come on and done the job. They have not been blocked out all year," he continued.

Ford felt the game should be close because both teams have nationally-ranked offensive and defensive units.

The Tiger defense is third in the country in scoring after holding opponents to 7.8 points a game. Also, Clemson is rated ninth in rushing, limiting the opposition to 92.9 yard a games and 17th in total defense.

The Tar Heels are not far behind, holding opponents to 11.1 points, 111.4 yards rushing and 282.5 total yards.

"This game will show which side of the ball is more important, offense or defense," Ford said.

Corrales Named Phillies Manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Former Texas Rangers Manager Pat Corrales has been signed to a two-year contract to manage the Philadelphia Phillies, a team spokesman said today.

Spokesman Larry Shenk said the club would hold an 11 a.m. EST, news conference to discuss the appointment.

Bill Giles, who put together a group that bought the Phillies last week for $30.175 million, talked with Corrales Tuesday night to clear the way for the announcement.

Sherrill Cautious With #1 Ranking

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Coach Jackie Sherrill carries the nation's No. 1 ranking cautiously. He knows it's meaningless unless the Panthers finish on top at the end of the season.

"You want to be there at the end of the dance, not the beginning of it," Sherrill said Tuesday after Pitt became the sixth different team to hold the top spot in this topsy-turvy year.

The Panthers survived with a 29-24 win over Boston College last week after a less-than-impressive 23-10 victory over Syracuse. Nevertheless, Sherrill figures Pitt is the best team in the land.

"I don't think anyone else deserves it over us," he said.

But Sherrill is concerned about what he calls "playing not to lose" in discussing why Pitt was so conservative in its last two games.

"When you play to win, you're reckless and you make things happen. When you play not to lose, things happen to you. It was very evident Saturday. We were playing not to lose," Sherrill said Tuesday.

"The pressure's going to be there. We have to handle the pressure if we're going to keep it rolling. Right now, the pressure is bothering us and we're not playing relaxed football," he added.

Dodgers, 4 Others, Skip Re-Entry Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Champion Los Angeles Dodgers and four other teams will be skipping the bidding war for baseball's premier players in the next three re-entry drafts.

Joining the Dodgers on the sidelines for the only four Type A players in this year's draft will be the Seattle Mariners, Minnesota Twins, California Angels and Boston Red Sox, Blake Cullen, administrator-director of public relations for the National League, said Tuesday.

"I think the theory is, as it has been all along, that the Mariners are a team that grows through the farm system," said Melody Tucker, Seattle's public relations director. "That has been the club's philosophy all along and continues to be (owner) George Argyros'.

"He wants to get into the free agent market actively when it gets to a point where one or two players will make the difference — put you over the top."

According to Tucker, seven teams asked not to participate in the Type A re-entry draft. But only five teams could be listed as "excluded clubs," according to the formula worked out at the end of this past season's 50-day strike. Cullen would not reveal the names of the other two teams opting out.

Type A players are those in the top 20 percent in a computerized category of all major league players. Players who have been in the major leagues for 10 years and with their last team for at least five years, and those who have gone through the re-entry draft before are excluded from the computer listings.

76ers Roll By 'New' Bullets

By The Associated Press
There was something peculiar about playing the new Washington Bullets, Julius Erving said.

"I felt like it was an exhibition game," the Philadelphia 76ers star said. "I kept looking over my shoulder for Wes Unseld and Elvin Hayes."

With the two longtime Bullets gone from the team, the 76ers built a 20-point lead in the first half behind Erving and Bobby Jones, then whipped Washington 112-99 Tuesday night.

Unseld retired and Hayes was sent to Houston after the Bullets finished third in the National Basketball Association's Atlantic Division last season behind Boston and Philadelphia. Coach Gene Shue has been trying to find a winning combination ever since.

"It's tough with a new group playing against the best in the league," said Shue, whose Bullets have been beaten by Boston and Philadelphia in their first two games this season.

Bullets guard Kevin Grevey said the absence of Unseld and Hayes had made things much tougher offensively.

"I missed Wes setting those picks and Elvin tipping in missed shots," Grevey said. "We're trying to learn from our mistakes, and we certainly made enough of them."

Erving, who has led Philadelphia in scoring in its first three games, all victories, scored 19 points. Jones, a supersub turned starter this season, added 15.

The 76ers opened a 58-38 halftime lead, at one point outscoring the Bullets 13-1. Jones had seven of those points.

Don Collins led the Bullets with 17 points, and Grevey had 16, seven in the third quarter before Sobers and Blume combined on nine straight points for Chicago. With Chicago leading by four points, 94-90, Jones sank a pair of free throws, and after Atlanta rookie Rudy Macklin scored a basket, Thues sank two free shots with one minute left.

Cavalliers 125, Mavericks 110
Mike Mitchell scored 33 points, and Bob Wilkerson added 28 as the Cavaliers evened their record at 1-1 and gave new Coach Don Delaney his first victory. Mitchell scored 14 points in the third quarter and had 10 in the fourth, during which Cleveland outscored Dallas 33-14.

Suns 111, Spurs 88
Kyle Macy scored 18 points to lead seven players in double figures as Phoenix recovered from two straight losses with its first win of the season. Suns rookie Larry Nance scored nine of his 13 points in the first quarter as Phoenix took the lead for good eight minutes into the game.

Rockets 101, Knicks 98
Hayes and Moses Malone combined for 10 points late in the game to snap an 88-88 tie and produce a 98-93 lead with 1:47 left as Houston got by New York. Hayes and Malone each hit four straight free throws, and Hayes added a layup in the run.

Blazers 102, Lakers 100
Kelvin Ransey hit an 15-foot jump shot with 25 seconds to play as the unbeaten Trail Blazers held off the Lakers. Portland led by as many as 11 points in the second period, but the Lakers eventually cut the lead to two points, 100-98, on a sky hook by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Conley still has a chance at making the playoffs. Who would have thought it?

Not Coach Gerald Garner. Not, at least, after Garner saw his Vikings lose six of their first seven games, including an embarrassing 40-7 loss to West Carteret.

Even now, Garner downplays his team's chances at playing football after the regular season ends. "We know the chances are still remote," Garner said. "But we're just elated in Viking land that the kids have had their heads beat in we still have a chance and here we are in the tenth week of the season."

To make the playoffs the Vikings must beat Havelock and then have North Lenoir defeat West Carteret. Any other combination and Conley is out.

The first order for the Vikings is Havelock. The Rams, who lost to West Craven a year ago in their season finale to be denied a playoff berth, are not the team they have been the past few years but still present D.H. Conley with numerous problems.

"They're awfully big and awfully physical," Garner said. "They just like to run power left and power right. They rely on good old hard-nosed football and we're going to have to block and tackle Friday night. We'll have to play our best ball game of the season to win."

The Rams run a wishbone on offense and a stacked 4-4 on defense that, at times, will almost become an eight-man line.

"They almost ran a gap eight against Farmville Central and Farmville was able to throw the ball on them," Garner said. "We fell like we have picked up some tendencies and feel real good about the ball game."

D.H. Conley is coming off a 28-7 victory over North Lenoir in which Wesley Smith accounted for five turnovers — four interceptions and a fumble recovery.

"It was a solid performance," Garner said. "It was the best game we've played all year. We played with more enthusiasm from gun to gun than we have all year."

North Pitt

North Pitt coach B.T. Chappell is not too sure that last week's open date did the Panthers any good.

"I don't think it was too beneficial," Chappell said. "A lot of the players are at the stage where it's been a long season and the open date pushed things out longer than it should of been."

The open date did allow the Panthers an extra week to prepare for their finale against powerful Charles B. Aycock.

"We spent a lot of time working on our passing game," Chappell said. "We know to have a chance against them we're going to have to pass."

The Falcons come to Bethel needing a win to assure themselves of at least a tie for the ECC championship. And if that's not enough, they also figure to be smarting after losing their first game of the season last week to Southwest Edgemcombe.

"The last game when North Pitt played them they beat us, 55-0," Chappell said. "C.B. Aycock has the same team as last year but we've got a different football team."

It is a younger football team than the Falcons and also a smaller team. Ken Whitehurst returns to quarterback after being switched to wingback two weeks ago. Donald Hunter will continue at fullback and Dennis Bradley will again be at tailback. Hunter and Bradley were both moved from the line to the backfield two weeks ago.

The Falcons run a straight T-formation and are led by Kenny Grantham, the ECC's leading rusher with 1,279 yards this season. He is also the ECC's leading scorer with 19 touchdowns and three PATs. Grantham's running mate, J.L. Gurley, has 649 yards this season.

Quarterback Paul Thomas is the league's leading passer, having completed 31 passes in 60 attempts for 674 yards and eight touchdowns. He has had seven passes intercepted.

On defense the Falcons run a 4-4 and a 6-2. Against SWE, Chappell said the Falcons used the 6-2 almost exclusively.

"They play good, tough football and just execute real well," Chappell said. "It's gonna take some breaks for us to stay in the ball game."

"This is the last game of the season for them and they have to win it to tie for the conference (title) and they've got more incentive than we do."

players, who weren't identified by officials, are appealing.

UM President Edward T. Foote said school officials were notified of the NCAA's action Oct. 21, but had 15 days to decide whether to appeal the penalties.

"We concluded we would accept the findings and accept the imposed penalties. These matters go back five years and at least part of the thinking of those of us involved in making this decision was that it is time to get on with it. It is time to put this chapter of university history behind us," said Foote.

Foote said the school wouldn't appeal because officials felt chances of reversing the findings or penalties would be "virtually nil." He admitted that the UM football program "broke the rules."

"I'm glad the investigation is over. I feel we've been on quasi-probation the last two years," said Coach Howard Schnellenberger, who took over the football program in 1979 when Lou Saban, now an executive of the New York Yankees, resigned to become head coach at Army.

Schnellenberger said he felt the program's progress has been impeded by the investigation, but "now we stand ready to go for the national championship."

The university chose not to contest about half of the alleged violations, which involved such things as use of rental cars to drive recruits during visits to campus, improper recruiting contacts, improper entertainment of recruits and providing small loans to recruits who ran out of money during visits.

QB Keeper Play Of The Week

Ingram Run Led To Only ECU Points Vs. W. Va.

Saturday afternoon, East Carolina University managed to put only three points on the board against West Virginia, and a key play on the drive was selected as this week's Play of the Week by the university's football coaches.

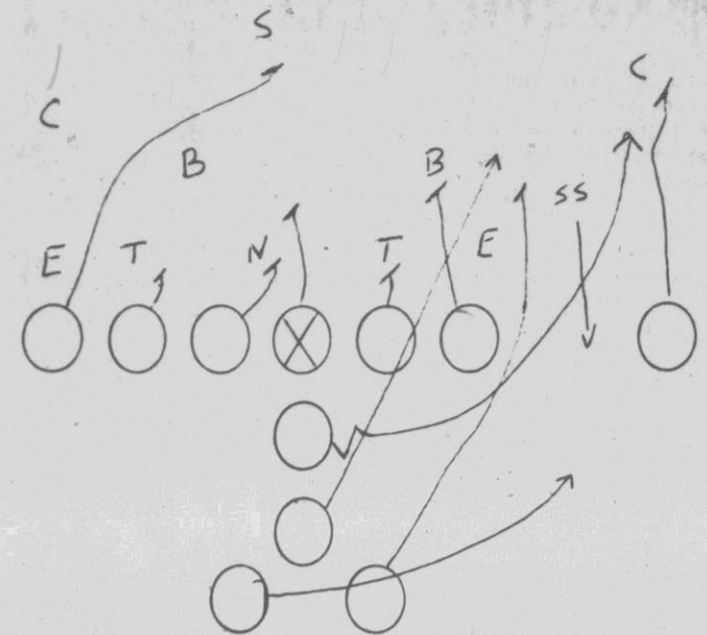

The play was a loaded option that came in the first quarter when the Pirates were facing a second and seven at the West Virginia 25.

With Kevin Ingram at quarterback, the Pirates began a move to the right side of the line. Ingram read the defensive back, who came up to take the fullback fake.

Ingram then pulled the ball and worked the option on the strong safety. The safety came upfield and took the pitchman, so Ingram kept the ball for an 11 yard gain and a first down at the West Virginia 14.

The series came to a halt, however, when the Pirates failed to pick up another first down, and elected to go for a Chuck Bushbeck field goal on fourth at two at the six. The 23-yard field goal made it 7-3 at the time with the Mountaineers in the lead.

West Virginia went on to claim a 22-3 victory in the game, breaking open a 10-3 game late in the contest.

Rose Falls To 10th-Place Tie

By The Associated Press

Fayetteville Terry Sanford, Burlington Williams and Marshville Forest Hills — each one game away from perfect regular seasons — remain atop their divisions this week in The Associated Press high school football poll.

Terry Sanford is ranked first in 4A by a statewide panel of sportswriters after receiving 14 of 19 first-place votes and 180 of a possible 190 points. It faces a rugged test in its final game, a Friday night encounter with fifth-ranked Scotland County.

Williams, facing a Friday game against Burlington city foe Cummings, is first in 3A with 15 first-place votes and 186 of the possible 190 points.

Forest Hills, which closes against twice-beaten West Stanly, has the 2A-1A lead with 12 first-place votes and 170 points.

Each poll leader, however, has undefeated foes breathing down its back.

In 4A, South Mecklenburg, the only other unbeaten 4A team in North Carolina, has five first-place votes and 160 points. The 3A runnerup is Clinton, with three first-place ballots and 150 points. In 2A-1A, the No. 2-rated team is Whiteville, with four first-place votes and 151 points.

The Top 10 in each class includes a number of newcomers this week.

Rocky Mount is ninth in 4A after two of last week's Top 10, Jacksonville and Greenville, lost. However, Jacksonville and Greenville managed to stay among the leaders in a tie for 10th.

In 3A, newcomers are seventh-ranked Jamestown Ragsdale and Boiling Springs Crest, tied for eighth with Pembroke. Ragsdale climbed after defeating previously unbeaten Eastern Guilford. Crest was in the Top 10 earlier this season.

New teams in the 2A-1A Top 10 are ninth-ranked Southwest Onslow and 10th-rated St. Pauls. Southwest Onslow had the state's most spectacular score last week — an 85-0 drubbing of Dixon. Southwest Onslow has scored on 20 of its last 21 possessions, and its standout running back, Robert Simmons, is averaging 11 yards a carry this season.

Here is how a statewide panel of sportswriters rates North Carolina high school football teams this week for The Associated Press. First-place votes are in parentheses, followed by records and point totals. Points are assigned on a basis of 10 for a first-place vote, then nine for second, eight for third, etc.

ECU Alumni Game Set

"I'm just glad I don't have to coach the alumni team," said East Carolina University Lady Pirate basketball coach Cathy Andruzzi. "One ball won't be enough for them."

Andruzzi will unveil her 1981-82 team against an alumni team coached by former Lady Pirate coach Catherine Bolton on Friday at 8 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

Listed on the alumni roster are Lady Pirate all-time great Rosie Thompson (the leading scorer and rebounder in ECU history), Broderick Trophy winner (for slownpitch softball) Kathy Riley, Marcia Girven, Lydia Rountree, Sheila Cotton, Debbie Freeman, Gale Kerbaugh and a host of other former Lady Pirate standouts. ECU assistant coach Laurie Sikes, the Lady Pirate career assist leader, will also play for the alumni team.

"Our program has made leaps and bounds because of the dedication of its athletes," Andruzzi said. "We are honored to recognize some of them on Homecoming weekend."

"We are proud of our alumni and their accomplishments. They are a part of East Carolina and our program and they always will be."

Bolton fashioned a 103-53 record in nine years as the first head basketball coach for women in the modern era. Her teams posted eight winning seasons including an 18-2 record in 1972-73. That year the team won 18 in a row and went to the national finals before bowing.

P.J. Taylor and Lorraine Rollins played on that team along with Cotton. Those three former greats are all slated to appear.

Players and coaches will be available for autographs and interviews on the Minges court at 7:15 p.m.

Andruzzi's squad will be led by returning starters Sam Jones and Mary Denker. The young Lady Pirates will show many new faces after losing

Lady Buc Tickets On Sale In Area

Reserved seat season tickets for Lady Pirate home games are on sale in the Greenville area. A group of 10 volunteers began selling the tickets last week. This is the first time that reduced-price, reserve seat section tickets have been offered for women's basketball.

"We are really excited about the opportunity to improve our program," said Lady Pirate coach Cathy Andruzzi. "Our faithful fans can now have reserved seats."

"The tremendous growth and interest in our program made it a must to provide our fans with good seating. We're really pleased with this move by Athletic Director Ken Karr. It shows the impact that our program has on East Carolina athletics. The campaign shows the commitment to quality women's basketball here."

The $25 tickets offer a $17 savings over the at-the-door cost, plus the luxury of reserved seating. Many Lady Pirate fans found it hard to find a good seat last season when the women outdrew the men's team at home and had three crowds of 4,000 or better.

Season tickets can be purchased at the Minges Coliseum ticket office or from volunteers, Pattie Parker, 757-6441; Terrie McManus, 758-4188; John Anema, 752-0119; Pam Kachmer, 756-2427; Randy Scheer, 752-5878; Ruth Katz, 757-6514; Lucy Wright, 757-6881; Vanessa Higdon, 757-6381; Mary Bryan Carlyle, 758-2244; Pam Holt, 757-6417; Iney Fridley, 757-6455.

Holmes Marks 32nd Birthday

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A college kid presented Larry Holmes with an orange University of Pittsburgh sweatshirt, then promoter Don King laid another piece of apparel on the heavyweight champion — a full-length sable coat, priced at $50,000.

And so Holmes marked his 32nd birthday, with the practical sweatshirt, the flashy coat and some other gifts, including a hunting rifle...and with a three-round sparring session.

Holmes' 32nd year promises to be a rich one financially and could be a rich one in terms of recognition. In March, he is scheduled for a $10 million payday in defense of the World Boxing Council title against top-ranked Gerry Cooney.

The champion acknowledges that his training already is for the Cooney fight, but it also has a short-term goal. Friday night at the Civic Arena, Holmes will make his 11th defense, against Renaldo Snipes, who is a decided underdog.

"I'll tell you Cooney is Snipes, Snipes is Cooney," said Holmes, explaining that his boxing schedule is busy to the point that he trains more for fights than he does for the fighters, although he admits there are some opponents for which he puts forth extra effort.

Tie Leaves Flames Smiling

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The Calgary Flames weren't exactly popping open champagne bottles after a 1-1 tie with the New York Islanders.

But they were a happy bunch of National Hockey League players despite seeing their winless streak stretch to four games.

"This was about as stable a game as we've played," Flames Coach Al MacNeil said Tuesday night. His team is off to the worst start in its 10-year history, 2-8-3.

"We've been lax in our own end. Our defense has been full of holes, MacNeil explained. "But we concentrated 60 minutes tonight and did the work in our own half of the ice."

"We have a pretty good team and we can do well if we come to play every night, like we did tonight."

In the only other NHL game Tuesday, the Winnipeg Jets downed the Colorado Rockies 5-3.

Goals by Jim Peplinski and Dave Hindmarch provided the Calgary offense and the Flames lined up at their blue line all night, forcing the Stanley Cup champions to dump the puck and chase it — hardly the Islanders' strength.

"They knew if they didn't come in here and play like that, they'd get blown out," said Bob Bourne, who scored a power-play goal in the second period for New York.

Bob Nystrom, who scored his first goal of the season in the opening period for the Islanders, wasn't happy with the effort of his club against a struggling team like the Flames.

"You try to gear yourself for not having a letdown," said Nystrom. "We knew they were having trouble and that they would try to play a low-scoring game. Our game is to get in there and wheel the puck around, but we couldn't get it going. We were lethargic."

The Islanders, unbeaten in their last six games, also got solid goaltending from Bill Smith, especially in the closing minutes.

"If not for Smitty," said Bourne, "they would have beaten us tonight. Montreal would have beaten us the other night (a 2-1 Islanders victory Saturday) if not for Smitty. He made some saves in that game and tonight that I've never seen him make."

Islanders defenseman Mike McEwen suffered a broken nose late in the third period when he collided with Peplinski's stick. The Flames, having the own injury problems, played without star center Kent Nilsson and Guy Chouinard, and ace defenseman Paul Reinhart.

Jets 5, Rockies 3
Paul MacLean set up Normand Dupont, who scored at 14:24 of the second period to snap a 3-3 deadlock and lead Winnipeg to its fourth road victory of the season and sixth overall.

The Jets won only two games away from home a year ago and finished the season with just nine victories.

Steve Tambellini scored twice and Paul Gagne once for Colorado, now 2-8-2, while Lucien DeBlois had two goals and Dale Hawerchuk and Doug Small one each for Winnipeg.

Gets Probation In Guns-Drugs Case

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — One of 12 people accused in an alleged guns-for-drugs conspiracy is free on probation after pleading guilty to drug conspiracy charges in federal court.

Homer F. Clayton, 36, of Columbia County, was sentenced by Judge Dudley H. Bowen Jr. Monday to a two-year suspended sentence, five years probation and a $5,000 fine after pleading guilty to a single charge of conspiring to distribute and possession with intent to distribute illegal drugs.

Clayton entered his guilty plea before Bowen in early September, shortly before he and 12 others were to stand trial for involvement in an alleged Augusta-based guns-for-drugs smuggling ring.

The defendants were arrested and indicted last April for conspiring to trade illegal weapons and explosives for large amounts of drugs.

Federal agents, in an investigation code named Operation Flying Circus, posed as Miami drug smugglers and said they made arrangements with several of the defendants to trade them cocaine and marijuana for illegal weapons.

According to evidence submitted during the trial, Clayton had agreed to clear a field on his Burke County farm where several of the defendants and agents were supposed to land a plane loaded with marijuana.

The three principal defendants, Anthony T. Mulherin Jr., Harvey B. Hornsby and Robert A. Holliday, each were granted mistrials on some of the charges against them and are scheduled for retrial Nov. 30.

Two other defendants, Elizabeth M. Moore and Henry Mulherin were convicted of drug conspiracy and an illegal weapons conspiracy charge, respectively, but sentencing has been postponed indefinitely. Five other defendants were acquitted and charges against the last four were dismissed during the trial.

Re-cycled Rocket

Despite budget cuts in the space program, the space shuttle Columbia is scheduled for its second launch today. This marks the first time that a spacecraft has been re-used. Such re-cycling is a key part of NASA funding strategy. The government hopes to spread the $9.9 billion development costs over a total of at least 100 flights — 12 flights per year. Private companies can rent flight space for experiments and use the shuttle to launch and repair satellites less expensively. Another moneymaker may be "getaway" canisters. For as little as $3,000 you or I can book space to carry out our own private scientific experiments in the unique and possibly profitable conditions of "zero gravity."

DO YOU KNOW — What was the name of the original, airplane-launched space shuttle?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — John Lindsay was elected without the support of either major party.

Opening lead: King of ♦.

One of the fascinating aspects of duplicate bridge is that the same hand gets played many times, giving us the opportunity to study the expertise of a variety of players. We followed this hand at several tables at a recent tournament.

Four hearts was the popular contract, reached on an auction such as the above. Almost invariably, the king of diamonds was the opening lead, won by the ace. After cashing the ace of spades, most declarers led the king of hearts, and few Wests could resist the temptation to grab the ace.

Now declarer was able to make the contract with careful play. He could force an entry to the table by leading a low trump to the eight-six, conceding a second trump trick, and the defenders could do no better than win two trump tricks and a diamond—declarer's club losers would be discarded on dummy's spades.

A few Wests managed to defeat the contract. They held up the ace of trumps for one round, won the second heart, cashed the queen of diamonds and exited with the nine of trumps. That meant that declarer was cut off from dummy, and he had to lose three club tricks for down two.

One declarer found a way to make the contract without any assist from a defender.

He won the ace of diamonds, cashed the ace of spades and exited with the jack of diamonds. This simple stratagem had the effect of end playing West at trick three. In fact, had West returned any suit other than a club, declarer would have made an overtrick. After a club return, however, West was able to ruff the third club with the nine of hearts, thereby holding South to seven tricks.

It is perhaps one of the flaws of duplicate that the only player who found the winning line in four hearts received no greater reward than those who got home thanks to a defensive error. But he does get a pat on the back from us.

Va. Democrats See Comeback

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

Off-year elections for governor offered no clear message to President Reagan or his opposition today as Democrats celebrated a comeback in Virginia and both parties awaited the final count from a near dead-heat in New Jersey.

Charles S. Robb, the politically conservative son-in-law of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, restored the Democrats to control of the Virginia governor's office with a surprisingly easy victory Tuesday over Republican Attorney General J. Marshall Coleman.

81-year-old East Texas farmer threatened with loss of his land because of a title defect dating back 140 years.

Big-city mayors easily re-elected included Edward Koch of New York, George Voinovich of Cleveland, Coleman Young of Detroit, Richard Caliguiri of Pittsburgh, Donald Fraser of Minneapolis, Margaret Hance of Phoenix and Charles Royer of Seattle.

Thirman L. Milner was elected mayor of Hartford, Conn., to become the first black chief executive of a major New England city.

Run-offs will be needed to choose mayors in Miami and Houston.

Maurice Ferre, a native of Puerto Rico who is seeking a fifth two-year term as mayor of Miami, faces a run-off against Cuban-born Manolo Rebozo.

In Houston, Controller Kathy Whitmire and Sheriff Jack Heard won spots in a run-off against incumbent Jim McConn finished out of the running in his bid for a third two-year term.

In Albany, N.Y., 72-year-old Mayor Erastus Corning II, first elected in 1941, easily won an 11th term.

Rejection of a proposed constitutional amendment to remove the ban on Kentucky state officials seeking re-election was a blow to Democratic Gov. John Y. Brown, who was viewed as anxious to use a second term as a base for a 1984 presidential campaign.

Gov. Jay Rockefeller of West Virginia, another politically ambitious Democrat, also saw a favored proposal go awry when voters rejected his appeal for the bond issue, which would have doubled the state debt.

Jesse Johnson was the beneficiary of the compassion of Texas voters.

"I feel real good, I sure do," he said when the results came in. It took an amendment to the state constitution to allow Johnson to keep the land on which he had lived and paid taxes for more than 50 years.

Nearly 90 percent of the voters in the District of Columbia rejected the proposal that would have provided for a $1,200 tax credit to compensate parents for tuition costs for private or public schools.

But in New Jersey, where Reagan's budget and tax cuts were major issues, the race between Republican Thomas H. Kean and Democratic Rep. James J. Florio hinged on the tally today of absentee ballots from about half the state's 21 counties.

With all 5,647 precincts reported, Kean led Florio by 2,060 votes out of more than 3.26 million cast.

The unofficial totals pending completion of the absentee ballot count were 1,137,076 for Kean, 1,135,016 for Florio — the closest gubernatorial election in New Jersey in a century.

Both candidates expressed confidence they would emerge the winner to succeed Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, a Democrat barred by law from seeking a third four-year term.

"We think that lead is going to hold up," said Kean, who campaigned in favor of Reagan's economic plan and proposed a similar business tax cut for the state. "I think I'm going to be the next governor."

"I'm convinced that when the final certification comes in, we're going to win," said Florio, who openly called for turning the election into a referendum against Reagan's domestic policies.

Both candidates asked election officials to take security measures to protect the ballots, apparently in anticipation of a possible recount request, and Byrne ordered state police protection for both men.

In Virginia, where Robb and Coleman differed hardly at all over Reagan's economic goals, unofficial returns gave Robb 789,422 votes, or 53.7 percent, to Coleman's 662,788, or 46.3 percent.

That ended 12 years of Republican control of the governor's office.

Both parties had hoped for decisive victories that would enable them to claim a public mandate either for or against Reagan's economic program.

The Democrats were anxious for a sign that they were rebounding from their drubbing one year ago at the hands of Reagan and the Republicans. The GOP was anxious for evidence that the president's program represents the wave of the political future in America, and Reagan campaigned for both Coleman and Kean.

Neither party got its wish. Aides at the two national party headquarters were geared up Tuesday night to issue victory statements, but as the night wore on they found themselves with nothing to say.

In addition to the two gubernatorial races, voters refused to give Kentucky state officials a chance to seek re-election, rejected a $750 million highway bond issue in West Virginia, turned down overwhelmingly a tuition tax credit proposal in Washington, D.C., and came to the rescue of an

Specializes In Low Cost Last Rites

By MARTIN J. WATERS
Associated Press Writer
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)
— You can tell Gennaro J. Capobianco is no ordinary funeral director when he scampers upstairs and, with the enthusiasm of a child, returns to show off a model he keeps on his kitchen table.

It's a plastic miniature of a hearse he assembled himself. A friend, he explains, added a final touch by giving him the tiny casket that rests in the rear of the hearse. Inside the casket is a little plastic skeleton.

Capobianco, 33, jokes about his business: "I can put you on the layaway plan, or you can go cash and carry." But he is serious about his attacks on members of the funeral business establishment.

"Vultures" he calls some of them, for charging what he terms exorbitant prices and exploiting personal grief.

Capobianco once wanted to be a Roman Catholic priest but preferred to remain his own boss, he says, while still tending to spiritual needs. Earlier this year, he got a mail-order minister's certificate.

"A minister is anyone who believes in helping people," he says.

Capobianco, unmarried, and known as Jerry, lives upstairs in his funeral home.

"I like my independence," he says. "I didn't get to visit 30 countries so far by being married, you know."

He owns a slightly rusty 1965 hearse with peeling paint. By his own assessment, he is an outcast among funeral directors, belonging to none of the industry's business associations. He even got an anonymous hate call recently he suspects was from another funeral director.

Capobianco spent a decade in apprenticeship, working at other funeral homes, before opening his own in 1978. Not a licensed embalmer, he employs a professional to prepare bodies.

His iconoclasm hit a peak last winter when he argued unsuccessfully for a license to operate a crematory at his funeral home. Residents objected to the possibility of odors and smoke, although Capobianco says they were misinformed.

The crematory dispute grew from Capobianco's specialty: bargain funerals.

He wanted to reduce costs for his customers by avoiding sending bodies to the nearest crematory, in Springfield, Mass., about 25 miles away.

He urges his customers — and anyone else who will listen — to consider cremation, because it generally costs less than burial.

He often hauls bodies to cemeteries in his own maroon station wagon instead of the hearse when people want a cheap burial.

"I don't believe in owning a limousine. I can rent them if I need to, but people who come here don't want that," he says.

Capobianco, a round-faced man with curly hair, a thin mustache and purple-tinted eyeglasses, won the city's welfare burial contract in August. By underbidding the only other contender, the undertaker who previously had the contract, he assured himself of getting about 100 bodies per year.

Sitting near the $250 urn reserved for his own ashes, Capobianco attacks the prevailing manner among funeral directors. He describes many of them as greedy men who have found that the American attitude toward death can make them rich.

"Undertakers have become funeral directors. Now they're grief therapists," he says. "Wake parlors have become slumber chambers. People aren't dead, they're sleeping."

Walking into his funeral home is a journey back to the turn of the century, when the 23-room former mansion was built in the Georgian style. Capobianco has outfitted it with 19th century furniture and wall decorations, including faded photographs of his Italian immigrant ancestors.

He has tried, he says, to give the place a warmer feeling than most funeral homes present.

"Did you ever see a funeral home with people in photographs smiling?"

A Molasses Season In W. Virginia

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
BOGGS, W.Va. (AP) —
Autumn is molasses-making time, or at least it used to be in the days when mountain folk would plant a field of sorghum to augment their sugar supply.

Now, however, only a few hardy traditionalists still "raise cane" and convert it into sweet, sticky, syrupy sorghum molasses.

"No, not many people make molasses these days, but I still love it," Ruby Roberts said as she watched her brother, Roy Boggs, make a batch on his Webster County farm. "I still mix my molasses with butter and eat it on hot biscuits, the way I used to when I was a child."

Boggs harvested an acre of the tall, slender, bamboo-like plants on his farm beside the Birch River, 10 miles south of Cowan. He said he and his wife, Vivian, have been growing sorghum for the past 25 years, since they dusted off her father's old cane press.

"I grew up here on Birch River," said Boggs, who's also the mayor of Cowan. "We used to make molasses when I was a boy. It's a lot of work, I can tell you that."

Two of his brothers, Carl and Arnold, both from Fairmont, looked on as Boggs climbed aboard a tractor hooked up to a 12-foot-long log that served as a crank for the cane press. Then, as he began driving in a circle, his wife and brothers began feeding the sticky stalks into the press.

Soon, the crushed cane began sending a steady stream of greenish juice out of the press. It wasn't long before the sticky juice, which flowed into a waiting tub, had attracted a horde of hungry yellow jackets.

"The only difference between now and back when we were kids is that they used a horse to turn the press back then," said Mrs. Roberts, who watched as the bees buzzed about the juice. "I've spent many an hour riding around on the back of that horse."

Carl Boggs nodded. "Yes," he said, "that horse would work all day long while we cut the cane and fed it into the press."

As the Boggs reminisced, two neighbors sweated over the sorghum pan, an 8-foot-long container resembling a wooden rowboat. Inside the pan, which sat on a makeshift oven filled with burning logs, several dozen gallons of bubbling juice sent up a thick cloud of greenish steam.

Doyle Barnett and his wife, Gathel, wiped the condensed steam from their faces as they skimmed a green froth from the boiling juice.

"We're green-skimming it," said Barnett. "This pan of juice has to cook for several hours. Then, when it's finally cooked down and has turned a golden brown, it's ready to pour into the bottles."

Roy Boggs estimated he'd probably get about 150 gallons of molasses this year.

"You need about 130 or 140 gallons of juice to make 20 gallons of molasses," he said. "I got $3 a gallon when I first started making it back in the late '50s, but the price is $12 a gallon these days."

Asked whether he thought the price was a little high, Boggs shrugged.

"Heck, they get $20 a gallon up at Richwood," he said. "I don't have the nerve to ask that much, though."

He said he never has any trouble selling his molasses.

Greensboro Elects First New Mayor In 10 Years

By The Associated Press

John Forbis was chosen as Greensboro's first new mayor in 10 years Tuesday, as local elections throughout North Carolina resulted in mixed responses for alcohol referenda and a big day for write-in candidates.

Forbis, mayor pro tem and a four-term council member, defeated Vic Nussbaum, who also left the council to campaign for the job vacated by retiring Mayor Jim Melvin. Nussbaum conceded the election after partial returns showed Forbis leading 14,820 to 11,824 in the non-partisan race.

Beer and wine referenda were defeated in Cabarrus and Union counties, but voters in Gaston County were in favor of alcohol sales.

Unofficial vote returns indicated beer lost 8,598 to 4,951 and wine lost 8,755 to 4,761 in Cabarrus County, while beer lost 5,935 to 3,731 and wine lost 5,913 to 3,151 in Union County.

In Gaston County, Cherryville voters passed beer sales by a vote of 1,075 to 833. Wine passed by a 1,069 to 827 margin and the location of an alcoholic beverage commission store was approved by a vote of 1,114 to 827.

In Union County, the issue was whether to permit off-premises sales of beer and wine. The referendum had been sought by store owners who complained that they were losing business to stores in neighboring communities to permit beer and wine sales.

Voters in Cabarrus County rejected proposed countywide package sales and on-premises consumption of beer and wine was left to voters.

"It's been a good day," said Roy Privette, director of the anti-liquor Christian Action League.

Write-in candidates in the Wilkes County town of Ronda defeated four out of five unopposed candidates for town commissioner.

The only commissioner candidate on the ballot to be elected was Bill Key, who gathered 53 votes.

The write-in candidates elected were Parmalee Byrd, 65 votes; Russell Combs, 59 votes; Kim Pierce, 57 votes; James Parks, 55 votes.

Also in Ronda, Mayor Billy Soots was re-elected unopposed with 71 votes. He ran against four write-in candidates.

Losing the commissioner race were Carleen Holbrook, 45 votes; Fred Holbrook, 48 votes; Dennis Key, 34 votes; and Richard Miller, 34 votes.

In Asheville, in a vote that almost eclipsed the city council election, voters rejected a $40 million general obligation bond issue designed to help fund an immense proposed downtown shopping mall complex.

The proposed bond issue, which would have helped finance a $117.5 million retail store and convention hotel center, was defeated by a 2-1 margin.

The rejection of the bond issue was seen as a solid victory by Save Downtown Asheville forces, who maintained that the city's urban core is being steadily revitalized by private investment and development without outside interference.

In North Carolina's largest city, voters had an easy choice for mayor. Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox ran unopposed, gathering 21,823 votes.

Voters also elected city councilmen, choosing Harvey Gantt, Dave Berryhill, Herbert Spaug Jr., Ed Peacock, Pam Patterson, Charlie Dannelly, Ron Leeper, Laura Frech, Minette Trosh, George Selden and Ralph McMillan.

In Lumberton, four school board candidates ran for four seats on a race affected by a U.S. Supreme Court decision handed down Friday. The court barred the vote of residents in three areas annexed to the district between 1967 and 1969.

The plaintiffs in the case claimed that the annexed areas diluted the minority vote in the district and caused a violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The court agreed and the district has been given until Dec. 31 to comply with federal standards.

The results of the election Tuesday are contingent on the board compliance by the end of the year. The results will be void if the district does not comply and another election will be held.

The school board winners were John T. Barker, William Billie Bryan, Sidney A. Locks and Herbie Oxendine. Dorothy Powers, who was cut out of the race by the U.S. Supreme Court decision, received 459 write-in votes.

Dr. James P. Green became the first black to win a Henderson City Council seat in a runoff election Tuesday. Green, with 1,215 votes in unofficial tallies, defeated Ward 1 incumbent W. Duke Champion, with 834 votes.

There were no statewide issues or candidates on the ballots. In other elections across the state, Charles Markham defeated incumbent Harry Rodenhizer 7,799 to 6,825 to become Durham's mayor. Elected to that city's council were Tom Campbell, Sylvia Kerkhoff, Ralph A. Hunt, Maceo K. Sloan, Jane S. Davis and Chester L. Jenkins.

With a 29 percent voter turnout, incumbent Wayne Korpening remained Winston-Salem's mayor by defeating Ted Wills 12,450 to 5,667, while Betsy Soares tallied 252 votes. Winston-Salem aldermen elected were Larry Womble, Ernesting Wilson, Lynne Harpe, Bob Northington, Martha Wood, Larry Little, Vivian Burke and Virginia Newell.

In Asheville, Larry McDevitt, Norma Price, Ray Trantham, Joe Pless, Gordon Myers, H.C. Wilkes and Mary Lloyd Frank were elected to the city council.

Roger Swisher was elected mayor of Kernersville as he defeated Larry Brown 869 to 429.

In High Point, Republican Bob Wells took the mayoral seat as he defeated Democrat Roy Culler, 5,107 to 3,635.

In New Bern's aldermanic runoffs, Boyd C. Meyers defeated Guy E. Boyd Jr. 911 to 751 in the 1st ward while Pete Chagaris beat Durwood S. Grady 1,104 to 529 in the 2nd ward and the 4th ward went to E. Sydney Bartholomew as he defeated Clyde C. Best Jr. 1,114 to 548.

In Sanford, incumbent alderman Walter McNeil defeated Jody Wicker, 973 to 393.

Ralph Hunter became mayor of Broadway, defeating Steve Alford 232 to 142, while K.L. Ketchum ousted incumbent mayor Joseph Barbour 3,363 to 2,980 in Burlington.

Elected to Burlington's city council were Kathy Hykes, and David Maynard.

Other Mayoral Races

In other mayoral contests, incumbent Tim Parker beat Don Witt 180 to 125 in Elon College, Ralph ElRamey ran unopposed in Wilson, Ralph Smith defeated Roland Lucas in Black Creek, George E. Tyson defeated Harry R. Helmer in Elm City, incumbent Ledane Bullington defeated Tom Jones in Ocean Isle Beach and Ida Mintz beat Berkley Mercer in Bolivia.

Also, it was Jim Somers over incumbent Ben Thomas in Long Beach, Beamon Hewett over Leon Cheers in Shallotte, Alfred Toney defeating Arthur Greene in Bolling Spring Lakes, and Leslie O. Wickham besting three contenders in Tarboro.

T. Jeffers became Gastonia's mayor, defeating Paul Stewart and Paul Finger by a 2-1 margin. Elsewhere, Barry Gilliam defeated Roy Wagner in Arlington, Delos Martin defeated Jimmy Combs in Jonesville, incumbent Edgar Evans captured the Bladenboro mayoral spot, Irene Brissen ousted incumbent James Freeman in Duplin, incumbent Annie Lee Smith defeated Rodney Marshburn in White Lake, incumbent Dwight Fort beat Felix Hardgraves in Clarkton and William W. Mikeal overcame challenges in Gamewell from John D. Hightower and Grace Klominger.

Rounding out the mayor's races, R.A. Bowman defeated Jack Hendrix in Rhodhiss, Burt Huffman beat Bob Wakefield in Granite Falls, Lenoir mayor Robert Gibbons ran unopposed and Joseph W. Icard defeated Lawrence M. Throneburg Jr. in Hudson.

In other elections, winners in the Wilson City Council race were A.P. Coleman, L.P. Bullock, George F. Rice, James T. Parker, C.C. Burris and Ashton P. Wiggs. In Raleigh, Walter M. Keller was elected to the city council.

In Tarboro, councilmen elected were: Ross E. Schaffer Jr., O.S. Surles, Donald A. Morris, Jay Ray King, Brent D. Nash, Johnnie M. Smith, Moses A. Ray and Jack P. Bobbitt. William A. Pulley and David C. Goff were elected to the Rocky Mount council, while Gastonia councilmen elected were R.L. Adams, Joe Davis, Roger Kayler, Glen Dell Brooks, Harry Connor and Ronnie Ransom.

Dinosaur Hunters May Have Reached African Destination

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A trio of Californians who went to Africa to search for dinosaurs may already have reached their destination, a swampy jungle lake that according to pygmy lore harbors huge, mysterious creatures for centuries.

When last heard from in an Oct. 22 message that arrived by cable Tuesday from the Republic of the Congo, Herman and Kia Regusters of South Pasadena, cameraman Darby Switzer of Reseda, five African officials and 15 hired pygmies were about to embark on the last leg of their journey, a four-day, 50-mile trek through hazardous jungle swamplands.

"So that would mean that either they're at Lake Tele or they've been eaten by a snake and stomped on by a leopard or whatever," quipped John Sack, an associate of the explorers who stayed behind in Los Angeles.

Regusters, a 47-year-old consulting engineer, and his wife left for Africa in early September to try to photograph what the pygmies call the mokele mbembe, a very large, brontosaurus-like animal.

Stories of the creature in the swampy Lake Tele area have been handed down by the pygmies for 200 years. In 1776, a missionary reported seeing animal tracks 36 inches in diameter. There have been other, similar stories and last year one explorer came back with film of what observers say looks something like a dinosaur neck and head sticking out of a river.

Scientists say the last of the dinosaurs died 60 million years ago.

The Regusters, who are paying for the four-month expedition themselves, spent several weeks in Brazzaville, capital of the Congolese republic, before flying to Epena, a pygmy village 500 miles inland and the site of the nearest airstrip to Lake Tele, Sack said.

After about two weeks in Epena the explorers had originally planned to complete the trip to the lake in 18-foot dugout canoes equipped with outboard motors.

"Everyone assumed it was a 90-mile journey up one river and down another," Sack said.

But he said they got only as far as Boa, a tiny village of pygmies 40 miles from Epena "and 100 miles from the nearest telephone." They then found their maps were wrong and they would have to travel the remaining 50 miles on land, "going through the jungle, going through the swamp on foot through a very dangerous area," Sack said.

"It's not so much the leopards and the elephants there as it is the poisonous snakes," he added.

Sack said the reason it took so long for the Oct. 22 message to arrive was that it had to be taken by boat from Boa to Epena and then flown to Brazzaville where it was cabled to Los Angeles.

"The pygmy who was carrying the message back to Epena wouldn't have a canoe with an outboard motor, I don't think," Sack noted, and the Epena-Brazzaville plane only runs once a week.

He said he hoped Regusters would send back another message via pygmy, boat and air when the expedition reached the lake, but that he wouldn't worry about the Regusters unless they hadn't returned by New Year's Day as scheduled.

Driver Charged In Accident

Greenville police have charged Timothy Duane Tetterton, 23 of Route 1, Bethel, with careless and reckless driving in connection with an 11 p.m. Monday collision on Memorial Drive, 500 feet north of the South Village Drive intersection.

Officers said the Tetterton car collided with a truck, injuring Tetterton and causing an estimated $8,000 damage to his car. Damage to the truck was estimated at $300.

Tetterton was also charged with possession of marijuana after investigators found a small quantity of marijuana in his car.

Farmville Man Cited In Theft

Leonard Anthony Tyson of Farmville was charged with larceny by trick this morning after allegedly taking $50 from a cash register at the Sav-A-Ton service station at 612 Greenville Boulevard, about 5:58 a.m., and driving away.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Farmville police officers took Tyson into custody about 6:30 a.m. He was returned to Greenville and placed in the Pitt County jail under a $650 bond.

Cannon said Tyson, waiting for change to purchase a drink and snack, allegedly reached into the open cash register and took the money.

'The Other Victim' Has A Different Perspective

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) - Rape, of course, is a crime against women, but CBS offers an interesting psychological profile of a secondary sufferer - the husband - in tonight's TV movie, "The Other Victim." This different perspective is well-drawn by William Devane as Harry Langford. Harry is so confused and haunted by the violation of his wife that he can't function normally. His relationships with his wife, children and friends all begin disintegrating as he becomes obsessed with tracking down the rapist.

The film begins with Harry and Nancy (Jennifer O'Neill) in bed, remembering fondly their night before. They've been married for 18 years and seem to have a solid alliance, two beautiful teen-agers, a pleasant home and two big cars.

When Harry and the kids leave after breakfast, Nancy is alone. There's a sudden knock on the door and a cheerful reply: "Who forgot something?" A man enters and flashes a knife. The rest is left to our imagination, indicative of this classy, subtle production. Harry's first reaction is to be comforting and reassuring: "You're safe now; I'm here." He wants to call the police; she resists. But Nancy does see her doctor and haltingly and painfully recounts some details. Effectively, Harry is listening outside the office, his rage mounting.

Slowly, Nancy begins to move beyond the rape, but it's Harry who won't let go. There's a sharp turnaround in attitudes through poignant portrayals by Devane and Miss O'Neill. Increasingly tormented and paranoid, Harry badgers the police to solve the crime. Impatient with the slow pace of the case, he purchases a gun.

Harry becomes volatile at work, overprotective of his daughter and suspicious of everybody he meets. He and Nancy barely talk, and it's Harry who develops sexual problems. Nancy unsuscessfully tries to force him to look inside. "Maybe the man took something that belongs to you," she says. "Maybe you think I'm dirty."

Nancy goes for counseling; Harry refuses. "I'm fine. You're the main concern here." It's all one massive denial. He won't admit any feelings or emotions. He won't be honest to himself or Nancy about how the rape affected him.

In one strong scene, Nancy wants to go to a neighborhood party, but Harry balks, masking his own embarrassment in solicitude for his wife. At the party, a tense Harry punches out a friend who playfully put his arms around Nancy. "I thought I was the victim," Nancy screams at Harry.

In another dramatic scene, Nancy faces a police lineup after identifying a possible suspect. Miss O'Neill strikes the perfect combination of wishing the nightmare would end and fearing another look at her assailant. You could feel the strain and pressure in her deliberate eye movements.

One thing about this movie; it takes the high road. Besides not exploiting the sex and violence of the rape, it avoids the obvious. Harry resists the sexual advances of an eager co-worker, even though he tells a counselor, in whom he finally confides, that he considered the affair to reprove his manhood, but he has never been unfaithful.

In this session with the counselor, Harry shows a softness and vulnerability that has been closed off since the rape. Viewers will be hooked by his plight and compulsion, which makes his strange behavior understandable.

This is a courageous movie, dealing with a sensitive subject in a sophisticated way. Although it gets a bit talky and takes a far-fetched turn at the end, "The Other Victim" is an example of television that can be entertaining and revealing without sacrificing its intelligence.

A WORKING MAN'S STORY - Marlon Brando stars in the classic film of life along a big city's rough and ready dock area in "On the Waterfront," which opens Friday at Plaza Cinema, to play through Nov. 12. This is one of four Great Cinema Classics being presented at Plaza Cinema for one week runs through Dec. 3 at reduced admission prices. For show times and prices, patrons are to call the theater at 756-0088. Future films in the series are "The Guns of Navarone," "The Bridge on the River Kwai," and "Dr. Strangelove."

Baseball Gave ABC 'Assist'

NEW YORK (AP) - The World Series, historically a ratings winner this time of year, helped ABC to a second straight No. 1 finish in the networks' weekly ratings competition, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

The Series finale between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees was the top-rated program in the week ending Nov. 1, with a rating of 37.2. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with TV, 37.2 percent saw at least part of the game.

The rating for the sixth and deciding game was well below the 40 recorded for the championship game last year, between Philadelphia and Kansas City, broadcast by NBC.

The networks normally would count on higher ratings for a championship series involving teams from the two largest television markets, but ratings for the Series this year were consistently below those of last season - presumably the result of fan disenchantment because of this summer's strike by the players.

ABC, with five of the week's 10 highest-rated shows, recorded an average rating for the week of 20.4 to 19.7 for CBS and 15.6 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the period, 20.4 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were watching ABC.

ABC's "World News Tonight" beat out CBS' "Evening News" for first place for the first time in a month in the three-way race.

Sees Brain Transplants Next Step

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer
CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — Fourteen years after he performed the world's first heart transplant, Dr. Christiaan Barnard reckons no other medical event will get as much publicity "until somebody discovers how to transplant the brain."

Barnard said he was surprised by the sensation the heart transplant caused because it was "a very easy organ to transplant."

He added, in an interview with The Associated Press, "There will be much, much greater scientific breakthroughs in medicine, because the heart transplant was not a scientific breakthrough. It was a technical breakthrough."

"But something that will arouse the emotions of people as much as the heart transplant can only be a brain transplant."

The 58-year-old surgeon said, however, he was not predicting that a brain transplant was imminent.

Barnard said his code of his medical career always has been: "You can do everything, if by what you do you give the patient a better quality of life."

He said many people still judge the heart transplant — Barnard performed the first Dec. 3, 1967 — on how long the patient survives.

"We should look at what type of life they were able to lead after the transplant to the time they died. And if you look at this you will find that people who lived four, five, six years after the transplantation had a very, very comfortable life."

"Because that's the one thing about transplantation. If you do a successful transplant 90 percent of these patients can return virtually to a normal life."

Barnard's longest-surviving transplant recipient, Dorothy Fisher, 50, collapsed and died Oct. 19. She had survived 12 years, leading a normal life most of that time, a hospital spokesman said.

Barnard said those who believe it was contradictory for him to publicly advocate euthanasia misunderstand why he developed the transplant procedure.

"I've never done anything to prolong life... My goal in transplantation was not to prolong the patient's life. It was to give him a better life."

"And that's where it fits in very well with euthanasia. Euthanasia says if your treatment cannot help to give the patient an acceptable quality of life then you must stop that treatment. You must allow the patient to die."

Barnard's team at Groote Schuur Hospital has performed nine complete transplants and 39 so-called "piggyback" transplants since the first.

Barnard said he prefers the "piggyback" method, in which a second heart is installed alongside the original, because it provides a safety factor if the new heart is rejected.

There was criticism of the transplant procedure as many surgeons tried it soon after Barnard, often with disappointing results. There were nearly 100 transplants in 1968.

Barnard said the procedure is widely accepted now, although "some people feel that they can spend their time better doing more straightforward operations where they can help more people in the same period of time."

Sharp Rise In Non-Cash Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharp increases in the number of American families getting non-cash benefits from federal programs occurred in 1980, according to a Census Bureau report.

Such programs include food stamps, free or reduced-price school lunches and housing subsidies.

The number of households with members covered by Medicaid remained constant, according to the report, released Monday.

Meanwhile, real median household income declined 5 percent between 1979 and 1980, the bureau reported, and that affected the non-cash benefits because many of them are tied to family income.

Labor Peace Descends On J.P. Stevens

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A labor peace has descended on textile giant J.P. Stevens & Co. in the year since the company signed a historic collective bargaining agreement with the Clothing Workers Union.

As a result, company officials say, they have been able to focus on internal problems and have begun an overdue restructuring of company operations.

But things haven't worked out as well for the union, which had hoped the pact would lead to widespread victories in Southern textile mills.

It lost an election at another Stevens plant and an election it had expected to win at a Rowan County, N.C., textile concern. Last summer the union called off a new drive to organize Cannon Mills.

The union did win elections at other textile companies, in Morganton, N.C., Andrews, S.C., and Augusta, Ga., a better record than it had in 1980 when it lost all six of its elections.

For the company, the turnaround began Oct. 19, 1980, with the signing of an agreement that ended a long and bitter organizing struggle at 10 Stevens plants. Since then, the company and the union seem to have established a more workable relationship.

"We respect them, and we think they respect us," a Stevens official says.

Union Vice President Scott Hoyman said last week that relations between the two are "substantially better" than a year ago.

"The company seems to be attempting to live up to the terms of the agreements," Hoyman said.

The dispute was the basis for the film "Norma Rae," in which actress Sally Field won an Oscar for her portrayal of a woman battling to gain representation in a Southern textile mill.

According to some Wall Street analysts, the agreement has freed Stevens management from its 17-year obsession with fending off the union, enabling it to deal with chronic internal problems.

Stevens' chairman Whitney Stevens, great-grandson of the company's founder, agrees.

"We think that because of our involvement with the union, we were less focused on the basic underlying problems of the company," he said.

In August, the company announced a $42 million overhaul to close some plants, drop unprofitable lines and trim its work force. It also said it would close its Shelby drapery plant and five of six plants in South Carolina.

With the announced closings, the union went ahead with an August election at the Rock Hill denim plant, the first at a Stevens plant since the agreement. After a low-key campaign, workers rejected the union 433-299.

In the October 1980 agreement, Stevens didn't give up its right to try to keep the union out of the rest of its plants. The union, for its part, agreed not to make Stevens its prime organizing target or treat it differently from any other target.

But the union did not relinquish its right to fight Stevens in the courts and before the National Labor Relations Board.

The union has filed objections with the board over the Rock Hill election. And ACTWU's Hoyman says the union "also has a bunch of unfinished cases involving a number of other Stevens plants."

When the contract covering the seven Roanoke Rapids plants was ratified, union official Richard Rothstein told workers the union would step up its organizing efforts.

In the 12 months since, however, the union's drive has been only partly successful. Less than two months after the agreement, the union lost an election at the Rowan County plants of Linn-Corriher Corp. in Landis.

Tale-Teller Only Needs A Listener

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WELLSBORO, Pa. (AP) — Rain beat steadily on the tent as Kathryn Windham told the story of Martin, a lazy Alabama fiddler whose playing was so sweet it charmed rattlesnakes.

On day, he dropped his bow and the snakes killed him. "But late at night, you can still hear the strains of 'Amazing Grace' drifting from Fiddler's Ledge," whispered Mrs. Windham.

A striped circus tent became a theater of the imagination, as four nationally known storytellers and scores of locals spun yarns at the first Northern Appalachian Storytellers Festival.

Ghosts of Alabama fiddlers and steelworkers mixed with rheumatic Maine farmers whose uncles had been raised by cannibals. There were magic eggs, talking donkeys and evil rogues, a peanut-craving catfish and a featherless rooster wearing little bib overalls.

"Storytelling needs nothing whatever except a teller and a listener," said Mrs. Windham, a retired newspaper reporter from Selma, Ala., who specializes in historical ghost stories.

"It's very exciting and exhilarating and it buoys me up. I can be very weary and almost depressed. Then you get with a group of people and you get to telling stories, and you get high on it."

The festival — a miniature version of the national storytellers gathering held every October in Jonesboro, Tenn. — was organized by Mansfield State College, a small school seeking an identity as a folklore center.

"Maybe instead of listening to rock 'n' roll and watching TV, we can get our kids telling stories," said Jim Glimm, an English professor who plays the banjo and tells stories himself.

With the advent of television and stereo systems, storytelling was on its way to becoming a lost art. But it is enjoying a modest revival, thanks to renewed interest in oral history and folklore.

"Storytelling and monologues are slowly creeping into folk festivals that used to be only music," said Maggi Peirce, a Belfast native who now lives in New Bedford, Mass.

Mrs. Peirce and her colleagues, all well past middle age, grew up hearing and telling stories.

"We had storytelling in my home as a way of life," said Doc McConnell of Rogersville, Tenn. "We were always asking to hear about the time grandpa's team of mules ran away from him, or the face they saw in the window of the old house."

McConnell, a gray-goated cowboy in a bright red shirt imprinted with a black bull, took audiences on an ebullient roller coaster ride through his hometown with a combination of one-liners and homespun "mountain lies."

"From Rogersville, you can go anywhere in the world. Most people have already gone," he said. "We used to didn't have a town drunk in Rogersville. We were so small, we had to take turns. ... We got some 'Welcome to Rogersville' signs; we just put 'em back to back. ..."

According to McConnell, it is so dangerous outside town that "the tooth fairy carries a gun." And one winter it was so cold that beagle dogs had to put jumper cables on a rabbit "to get him started."

At the other end of the regional spectrum, soft-spoken Henry Hatch — a retired forester from tiny Islesboro, Maine — told dry, understated tales of set-up farmers, cooks and seafarers.

Donning a pair of bib overalls, Hatch became an aging farmer peering through rimless glasses at a porch-side visitor.

"You're looking right pert, Sally. I guess you're coming from the funeral. ..."

Hatch said one man, suspecting his son of tipping the family outhouse into the creek, made his point by re-telling a famous tale:

George Washington saved box tops and sent them to Sears to get a hatchet. His father discovered the death of his favorite cherry tree upon coming home from a poker game. And when George confessed, his father took him inside for milk and cookies.

New Sail On An Old Ship

BOSTON (AP) — Old Ironsides, towed from its berth to lead the Bicentennial parade of Tall Ships in Boston Harbor in 1976, is one sail up in an attempt by teen-agers to give the historic vessel new sails.

Cmdr. Herman Sudholz, captain of the vessel, said Minnesota sailmaker Oscar Heath is coordinating a program called Sails for the USS Constitution. Under it, youth groups, working with maritime museums across the country, will make full sets of 1812 flax sails for the Navy's oldest commissioned warship.

The ship received its first sail in 50 years, a triangular sheet that Sudholz hoisted, on Saturday.

It was made by teen-agers from the Community Boating Association of Boston. They worked with the USS Constitution Museum and area sailmakers, who taught them the traditional methods of handsewing.

"Each teen-age group from the individual maritime museums will make one sail for the USS Constitution and hang it in their museums," Sudholz said. He said Heath's organization is also raising funds to make a full set of Dacron sails to be kept aboard the vessel.

Sunholz said the program will take three to five years to complete.

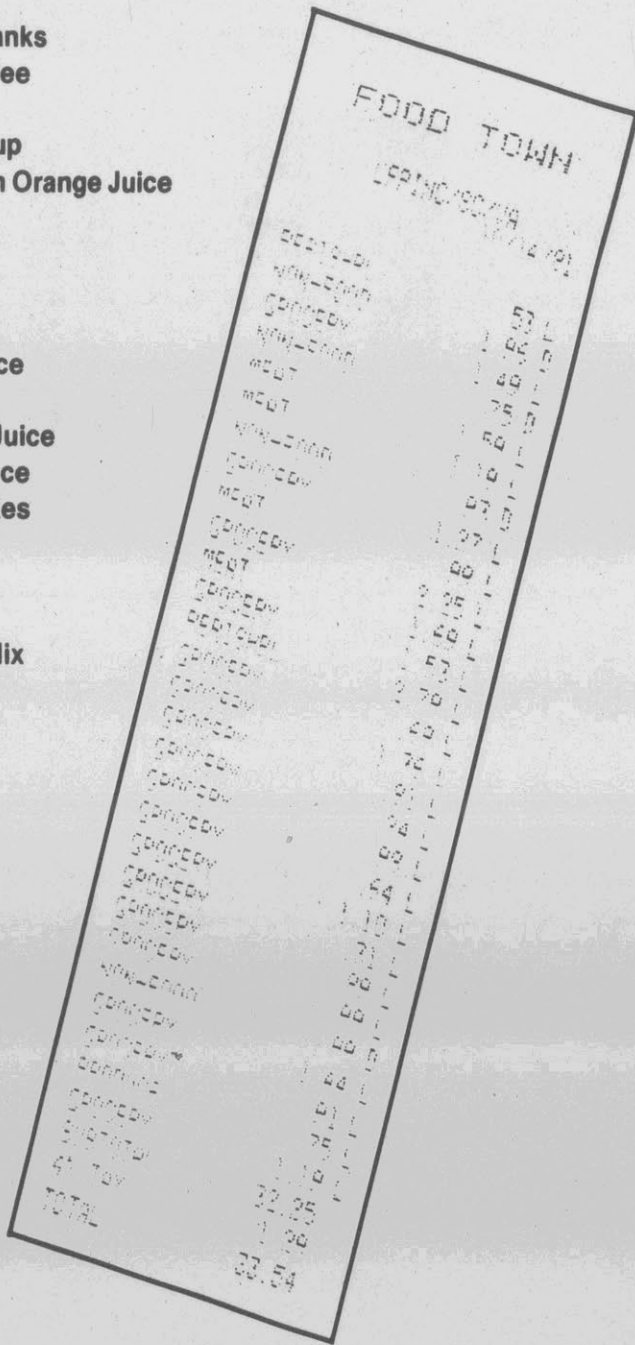

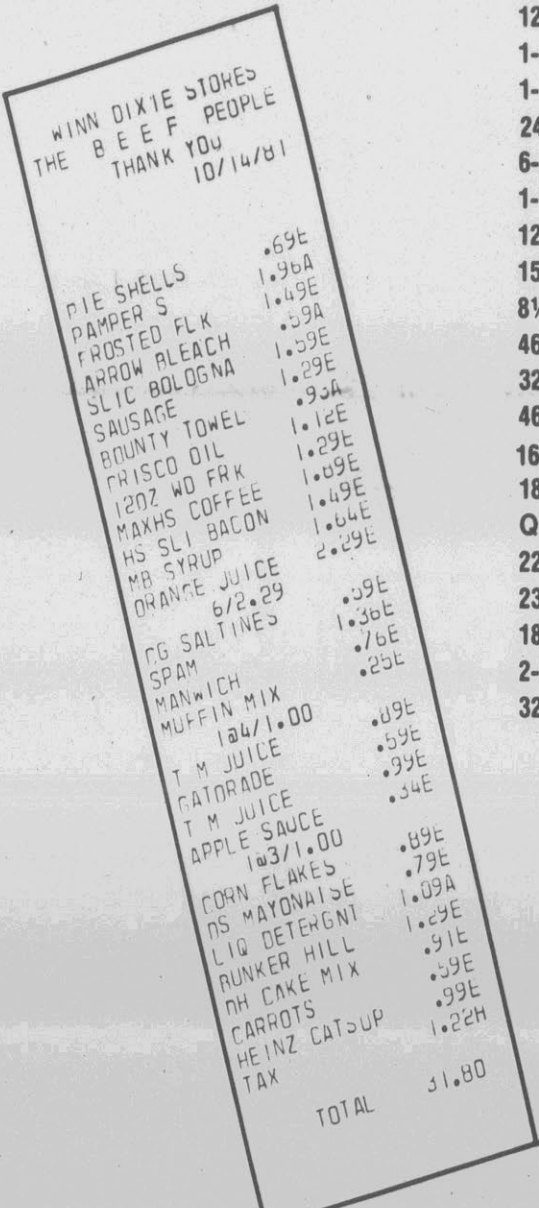

"It was a thrill for me and civilian workers who've been working on the sailless ship for 30 years to have a sail hung," Sudholz said.

Mexico's Maverick Mayor Has Reform Priority

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — A radio station owner with a grandfatherly face, a handlebar mustache and an easy smile is turning this border city upside down with his maverick brand of populist politics. Since taking office Jan. 1, Mayor Jorge Cardenas Gonzalez has closed cantinas on Sundays, donated his $12,000 salary to illuminate crime-plagued neighborhoods and told barkeeps in the intamous "Boys' Town" redlight district to move out or shut down. His campaign slogan was "Jorge es el cambio" — "Jorge is the change" — and he says he's trying to change everything wrong with this city across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Texas.

"When we started the campaign, we found out that Matamoros was a sick city, politically, morally and financially. It was terribly bad," he said.

Cardenas, 55, challenged the candidate backed by Mexico's establishment party, Partido Revolucionario Institucional — the party of President Jose Lopez Portillo and most elected officials in this country.

Cardenas bolted PRI several years ago to join the opposition PARM, Partido Autentico de la Revolucion Mexicana. Despite his middle-class background and ownership of grocery stores, import-export companies, orange groves, a hotel, a rope factory and two radio stations, he has become a folk hero to many impoverished supporters — "Jorgistas" who helped elect him by a 2-to-1 margin.

His popularity contrasts starkly with feelings about his predecessor, who three years ago was dragged from his office by a mob enraged over the death of a teen-ager while in police custody.

The mob burned the municipal palace, which houses the mayor's office. Cardenas remodeled the office. He tore out a wall, replaced it with glass "to let everyone see who is here" and removed all door locks. He promised an open government and has set aside daily "office hours" to meet the public. On a daily talk show on one of his radio stations, he takes questions and complaints from listeners.

"We want them to know how money is invested, what is going to be done with money, what errors are committed in city administration and how we messed up," he said.

Cardenas ran three times for mayor before winning his three-year term. He cannot succeed himself, so he has little to lose politically in his reform projects. Top priorities for the city of 210,000 are street and drainage improvements, he said. Some areas now turn into lakes after a heavy rain.

"We are going to close the redlight district or move it out of town," he said. "The club owners came to see me and I firmly told them that this year we have to make a move or we close it. It is causing a very serious problem where it is now."

Shootings and knifings within the "zona roja" have alarmed the surrounding residential areas.

"We're going to run a socially moral city, that is my aim," he said. Local leaders learned Cardenas was beholden to no one when police arrested several sons of influential families during raids on a popular drinking and marijuana-smoking hangout. "I don't care if you are rich or poor. Everyone is going to get the same treatment — jail," he said at the time.

Legendary corruption and favoritism among Mexican officials is another of Cardenas' targets.

"I'm going to tell you the truth," he said, breaking into a wide grin. "If we had to put them (corrupt officials) in jail, we wouldn't have the jail space. They would not fit. That is just the plain truth."

He blames much of the problem on dismal salaries that encourage people to take money under the table.

"When I started, a policeman was making 3,250 pesos ($130) a month. Now a policeman makes 7,350 pesos ($294), which is above the minimum wage, with all kinds of benefits," he said. "I don't doubt that some of them would be corrupt. But I can sincerely say that 95 to 99 percent of public officials here are honest."

Cardenas knows Matamoros depends on tourism for revenue and has exempted tourist-oriented bars from the Sunday closing law. Tourists are not, however, exempt from random gun searches the Mexican army conducts in restaurants and bars. The pistol checks are aimed at reducing the number of barroom shootings.

The mayor doesn't worry that the checks might drive tourists away: "On the contrary, this will help tourism.

I've never said it's the tourists who carry pistols. It is other people, residents of Matamoros and others who are armed and I am certain by the end of the year, things will be back to normal."

The joyous frenzy that filled Plaza Hidalgo when Cardenas won the election last December has an opposite, frightening side. The mayor says he continues to receive death threats that started during the campaign.

But he is philosophical. "There is a saying in Spanish. 'Pero que ladro no meurde' (a barking dog doesn't bite)," he said. "While they're barking, there's no concern for me."

Art Thefts Is Plague In Italy

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — Italian art experts say they were horrified by the account of Thomas Hoving, the former director of New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art, that he arranged for a valuable stone relief to be taken out of Italy illegally. But they add that the loss is only a small part of a plunder of Italy's art treasures.

"Italy has lost an infinite number of art works," said Rodolfo Siviero, head of a government delegation to recover stolen works of art. "It's a multimillion-dollar business."

He claimed that art works are slipped out of poorly guarded museums or churches, past careless or dishonest customs officials and into the hands of dealers in Western Europe and the United States.

Italy has asked the U.S. government to help it recover two works on display at the Metropolitan in New York: the 11th century high relief depicting the Annunciation and a painted terra cotta vase by Euphronius, the Greek artist of the 6th century B.C.

"Your intervention might produce a positive effect, better and sooner, than an international quarrel," Raffaele Costa, undersecretary for foreign affairs, said in a recent letter to U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb.

Costa is planning a trip to the United States to talk to museum officials about bringing the works back to Italy. U.S. Embassy spokesman Gilbert Calloway had no comment except to say the United States is looking into the matter.

Hoving, in his newly published book "The King of the Confessors," describes how he arranged to have the relief smuggled from a dealer's garage outside Genoa across the border to Switzerland and to the United States.

Siviero said in an interview with The Associated Press that he finds the account particularly scandalous because of Hoving at the time was a museum director.

But Siviero added that smuggling is common, and works are hard to retrieve because of the lack of coordination among the various branches of the police and Siviero's office, which is part of the Foreign Ministry.

"Italy doesn't have adequate means to stop this illegal trade," he said. "The police will be doing something and they don't tell us about it. The carabinieri (paramilitary police) won't tell the police what they're doing and the police won't tell the carabinieri. This disorganization helps the thieves."

Siviero showed a reporter a dozen paintings, one of which was 15 feet high, which had been stolen from Naples after last November's earthquake in the area. They were recovered from dealers in France and Switzerland who suspected the works were taken from Italy illegally and contacted Italian officials.

Siviero said he found it hard to imagine that a truck carrying a huge painting could slip through customs without officials noticing it.

Siviero said the illegal trade will be hard to stop without an international, coordinated effort.

"There are too many interests involved in this — interests in the millions," Siviero claimed. "You don't know who the big fish are. This cannot be resolved with the return of the Annunciation and the vase of Euphronius."

UNESCO, the Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization of the United Nations, drafted a treaty to curb art smuggling in 1970. In 1975, plans were made to open an international office in Florence to coordinate efforts to return stolen art works, not just to Italy but to other countries. But the office still hasn't opened.

Soviets Selling Antique Icons For Western Cash

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Seeking to profit from the boom in antique art, the Soviet Union is selling thousands of Russian icons for Western cash at a secluded showroom in a Moscow church.

The Russian Orthodox holy images, many worth thousands of dollars, are offered to selected art dealers from the West at St. George's Church, a medieval edifice where religious services are no longer held.

The Soviet state sales organization Novoexport, the sole legal seller of Russian antique art for export, screens icon dealers before permitting them to visit the cavernous showroom. Inside, the wood-backed pictures stand on shelves or hang on the walls.

There is no sign on the church door, no hint of advertising anywhere, and few Soviet citizens appear aware that the icon business exists.

"It goes without saying that these objects are sold as artistic creations for lovers and connoisseurs of Russia's old days, not as (religious) cult items," Vladimir V. Lebedev, a Novoexport director, said in an interview with The Associated Press in the showroom. Atheism is the official policy of the Soviet government.

"The Soviet Union doesn't need to export icons," said Irina M. Lukyanova, the agency's chief authenticator of icons. "For us, it is an opportunity to share Russian art with our foreign clients."

Money is also a motive, however. The Soviet government has frequently sold nationalized religious art for hard currency. Art experts say most of the best icons in the West were sold between 1925 and 1938 by Soviet representatives seeking cash in Western Europe.

Nowadays, the Soviets avoid flooding the Western art market with icons, and those judged artistic treasures or older than the 18th century cannot be legally exported.

"Soviet prices are not negotiable," said a West German who has dealt with Novoexport. "But there's no doubt about the authenticity of the icons they sell."

Lebedev said Novoexport sells about 2,000 icons a year and that "99 percent" are from the 19th century. He gave no overall income figure from the sales.

Prices start at $50 for palm-sized copper or enamel icons 100 or more years old. Top-quality wood-block paintings of saints and other holy figures sell for thousands of dollars.

One of the most valuable icons now on sale depicts "St. Andrew's vision of the mother of God." Painted in the late 18th or early 19th century, the gold leaf-ornamented picture, about three feet high and a foot wide, carries a price tag of $8,850 in West German marks.

Prices are quoted in West German marks, reflecting the Soviet Union's biggest export market for icons. Art galleries in London, Paris, Rome and other cities also send buyers to Moscow two or three times a year to make icon purchases, Lebedev said. On one recent day, three Spanish dealers were browsing in Novoexport's gallery.

While most of the icons are state-owned, private Soviet collectors, who are forbidden to make deals on their own, can put up icons for sale at the showroom. Novoexport takes a commission if the icons are sold.

Sales are not depleting Soviet supplies of icons, Lebedev said.

"Russian icons date back at least six centuries, and a very great number were produced in the 18th and 19th centuries, when whole schools were mass-producing them," he explained.

The state permits icons to be displayed in museums and restored churches, and the limited number of Orthodox churches now open for worship can use them in religious services.

But the "Atheist's Pocket Dictionary" — a 1979 guidebook for Soviet atheist campaigners — has nothing good to say about icons, charging that they were misused by the "ruling classes" before the 1917 Communist revolution in Russia to "implant religious ideology in the consciousness of the oppressed masses."

The 14th century masterpieces of Russia's greatest icon painter, Andrei Rublyov, are proudly displayed at the state icon museum in Moscow, and other priceless icons hang at the Tretyakov Gallery near St. George's Church.

Lebedev said a limited number of icons were sold to tourists at the 1980 Moscow Summer Olympics, and that a retail shop may eventually be opened for visiting collectors.

He warned that tourists to the Soviet Union should never deal with the country's black market in icons, saying tourists risk heavy fines for smuggling or winding up with forgeries.

In a continuing press campaign against blackmarketing in icons, Soviet newspapers published a series of articles early this year on the breakup of an icon-smuggling ring involving Soviets, foreign diplomats and art dealers in the West.

Women's Inheritance Law In Kenya Stirs Outcry

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer
NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A new law giving Kenyan women equal rights to inherit property has sparked an outcry from the country's men, especially Moslems.

Until the new law took effect on July 1, Moslems, Africans, Hindus and other ethnic groups followed their own traditional laws of inheritance — all of which favored male heirs.

The so-called Law of Succession was drafted by a commission established in 1967 by Kenya's first president, the late Jomo Kenyatta. It was passed by Parliament in 1972 but sat on the shelf until President Daniel Arap Moi's government decided to enact it this year.

Educated women have applauded the law as a first step toward equality of the sexes. But Moslems, estimated to be a quarter of Kenya's 15 million population, argue that abandoning the inheritance laws of the Koran, the Islamic holy book, is tantamount to abandoning their faith. And many Kenyan African men argue that the new law will completely destroy the traditional fabric of rural life.

Vice President Mwai Kibaki said recently that Kenya decided to adopt a uniform inheritance law "not to break our traditions but to recognize that the traditions have already broken down."

"In the Kenya that we have today, women who struggle and work hard are the ones who should reap the rewards of their efforts," Kibaki said. "Why should tradition therefore be resurrected at funerals only to try to deprive a woman of the property she helped her husband build?"

The law applies only to people who die without making a will. Critics note, however, that half the population is illiterate, knows nothing about wills, and so far isn't being told how to prepare them by the government.

Under the law's provisions, a surviving wife receives all her husband's property. If she dies or remarries, the estate passes to her children, to be divided equally regardless of sex. In cases of polygamy, which is widely practiced in Kenya, all the wives inherit from a deceased husband according to the number of children each one has.

Even if a person writes a will, the law provides that it can be challenged in court by any dependent who feels he or she didn't get a fair share of the estate.

"This is a law for the white men, but this is not a law for Africans, or Moslems or Hindus," said prominent Nairobi lawyer Joel Muruthi Muriithi. "This law, if it was explained to the people and a referendum was held, I'm sure 98 percent of the people would not agree."

Muruthi Muriithi said land, which is now held by the same clan, could go to strangers and become very fragmented. "What they're trying to do is break the family unit — in fact, it's a complete destruction of rural life."

He also argued in an interview that women who wanted the right to inherit without any restrictions didn't get what they wanted because a woman still can't dispose of her husband's property without going to court.

Sureta Chana, a lawyer in the attorney general's office, agreed that the law is not perfect, but said "it's certainly good for women ... because it definitely upgrades women — that's the problem."

"Before, the wife was at the mercy of the eldest son," said Mrs. Chana. "Now, the children are at her mercy. This is riling the Africans and the Moslems because it undermines the position of the son. The idea of women coming back to their father's land and the mixing of the clans is also an alien concept for them."

Leaders of the Moslem community took their protest to Moi last month. He advised them to form a committee to work with the attorney general on a compromise.

So far, no compromise has emerged and there have been reports that some Moslem leaders are trying to have the law repealed — or amended to exclude all Moslems. The Moslems claim that even writing a will is a violation of Islamic law.

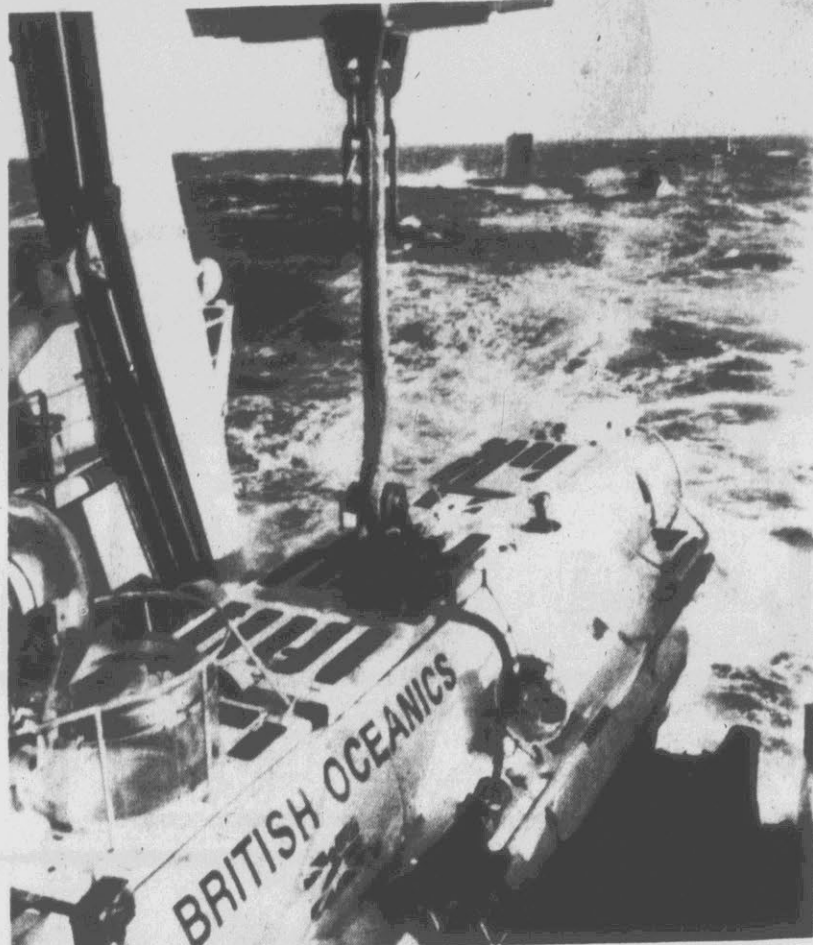

Attorney-General Joseph Kamere said before the Moslems met Moi that they would not be exempted from the Law of Succession — or any other law.

Mrs. Chana said: "You can't compromise for one group because if you do it for one group, you'll have to do it for all groups. Besides, Kenya is not an Islamic society."

Muruthi Muriithi said African men have been less vocal because "most of us don't understand what it's all about."

A few African men have complained, however. One was Kennedy Njuki who wrote to the Standard newspaper saying property must belong to men because "women are always depending on men from the day they are born to the day they die."

Deregulation Is Now Dominant

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Register, that daily publication in which the government makes things official by placing them in print, has in outward appearances been barely touched by the onslaught of deregulation.

The reason: It takes almost as many pages to deregulate as it does to regulate.

As of Oct. 5 the register had published nearly 50,000 pages since the year began. Last year at the same time it had published slightly more than 66,000.

For all of 1980 there were 5,347 individual documents appearing in the proposed rules section, covering 16,276 pages. For the first nine months of this year, however, there were only 2,974 individual documents in the proposed rules area, covering 7,879 pages.

The later figures include the month of January when outgoing Carter administration officials loaded up the register with numerous proposals that the Reagan administration froze.

Subscriptions to the register have not been affected. They run slightly more than 38,000. There is a press run of about 50,000 daily, with about 12,000 going to Congress and government officials.

The content, of course, has been different since the Reagan administration came to town. There are now more notices of withdrawal and review than proposals for new regulations.

The Administrative Procedures Act, however, lays out strict guidelines for what a government agency must do before it can scrap a regulation. Adequate notice must be given and explanations made so the public will have a chance to find out what's going on.

Some items that appear in the register are not regulation-related. There are presidential proclamations, meeting and hearing notices and notices of availability of studies.

When a drug company seeks approval for a new product, or withdraws its application for an old one, it appears in the register.

When the Coast Guard issues notices of changes in drawbridge operations, it shows up in the register.

If the Treasury receives an application for a new wine-growing region it appears, along with the exact boundary lines and the history of the region.

When the Federal Trade Commission signs a consent order with someone accused of false advertising, an antitrust violation or other matter, it also shows up in print.

The register has been published continually since 1936 when the government decided it needed a central and uniform place for its notices. Subscriptions cost $75 a year.

Arrangements Irk Jazz Fans

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — When concertgoers turn their ears upward at the Hartford Civic center, the sounds they hear won't be coming from rock 'n' roll heaven.

Some jazz fans who planned to attend the Nov. 10 concert by the Preservation Hall Jazz Band were dismayed to hear that directly above, in the hall's 15,000-seat coliseum, will come the rompin', stompin' rockin' of the Rolling Stones and their fans.

The jazz band was booked first and given the downstairs assembly hall, which has 2,000 seats. The Stones also play Nov. 11 and both performances were sold out in three hours Wednesday.

Jazz follower Al St. Arnaud of Meriden said he got nowhere when he asked for a refund because he does not want to bring his wife to the same building with 15,000 rockers.

"It's not the 17 bucks," he said, "it's the shoddy business practice at the civic center." A spokesman said the city-run center "will not be giving refunds."
