Women May Win Half Of Convention Seats

Democrats Agree On Changes

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic rule writers appeared in agreement Saturday on guaranteeing women half the seats at the party's national conventions and throwing out the "faithful delegate" rule that split its 1980 convention.

Although official votes will not come before January at the soonest, the panel effectively dealt with the equal division provision for women and the most controversial part of the delegate binding rule.

The party's Commission on Presidential Nominations also appeared to be in agreement that something should be done to bring Democratic congressmen in closer touch with presidential politics and the national party.

But the panel discovered quickly that this may be more difficult to accomplish as it began the final round of debate before writing the latest revision in party rules, the fourth since the reform wave began in 1969.

North Carolina Gov. James Hunt, the commission's chairman, asked if anyone opposed the equal division rule, and when he heard none, concluded, "I think we have consensus on that."

The rule guaranteeing that women get at least half the seats at Democratic national conventions is the last vestige of the quotas that caused such controversy at the 1972 convention.

Quotas for minority groups imposed on the 1972 convention were dropped for the next one four years later, but the 50-50 split for women has surived with no serious challenge.

"Not only is it the fair thing to do, but it reflects the people in this party who do the work," Hunt said.

Tacit agreement was reached to continue the affirmative action programs that replaced minority quotas for minority participation in party affairs. The outreach program encourages minority participation in local parties but puts the emphasis more on efforts than results.

The faithful delegate rule was imposed in 1980 by supporters of then-President Carter to keep Carter delegates from defecting to his chief rival for the nomination, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Although party rules traditionally have contained some requirement that delegates support the candidate who wins them in primaries or state conventions, the Carter rule would have allowed his floor leaders to replace any delegate who bolted.

The rule became the chief issue of the Carter-Kennedy contest and created a party split which has been blamed by some for the Democratic ticket's poor faring in last fall's election.

Hunt asked the rules commission at the start of Saturday's meeting if "anybody favors keeping that rule?" After a moment of dead silence, he announced "We have a consensus on that."

The commission left undecided whether there will be less drastic delegate binding and whether presidential candidates should be allowed to approve delegate candidates running in their name.

Consensus also appeared to be building to give officeholders a greater convention role by giving them automatic seats instead of forcing them to win election as delegates.

Because of fierce competition among candidates for delegate votes, it has become very difficult for uncommitted delegates to be elected. Congressmen, senators, governors and others who back a losing presidential contender in their states often find themselves losing their seats at the national convention.

Mark Siegel, a political consultant and former party official, told the commission that an advisory committee had developed several schemes to increase congressional participation — most of them involving free rides for the officeholders.

Plans under consideration would allow either the Democratic caucuses in Congess, or party groups at the state or local levels to select a number of congressmen or other officials to serve as automatic delegates.

Voting Protest Heard

AYDEN — The Ayden Board Of Elections agreed Saturday to rule Monday night on a complaint filed by a candidate in last Tuesday's town elections that nonqualified voters cast ballots.

The board held a hearing Saturday on the complaint, filed by William Bonar, and on a petition filed by losing mayoral candidate Glenn Bowen, who charged that incumbent Mayor Ross Persinger — who won another term — violated election law by repeatedly entering the polling place.

Steve Nobles, chairman of the elections board, said Persinger acknowledged that he had entered the area of the marked off voting enclosure four times — to vote, to answer a telephone call, to get a drink of water and to use a bathroom. Bowen, who has run unsuccessfully against Persinger in three elections, contended Persinger had repeatedly entered the enclosure.

Nobles said the poll had a clearly marked voting enclosure. The law, he said, states that "once you enter those lines, you cannot return ... I talked to Mr. Persinger ... and he admitted he went into the voting enclosure four times."

Nobles, who said he had at one time on Tuesday instructed the registrar to keep Persinger "out of there," said the board took no formal action but "I did give Glenn Bowen my assurances this would not happen again."

"We heard the complaint and I admitted that had happened, and I think that is

PAINT THE TOWN PURPLE AND GOLD ... was the theme of this year's homecoming festivities and this float accurately captured the spirit Saturday. Alumni Awards Given

ECU News Bureau

Judge Gerald Arnold of the N.C. Court of Appeals, Dr. V. Reggie Edgerton of the University of California at Los Angeles and eastern North Carolina insurance executive Max R. Joyner received the 1981 Outstanding Alumni Awards of East Carolina University on Saturday.

The three ECU alumni were honored at the annual Homecoming Alumni Awards luncheon at Minges Coliseum, a highlight of the four-day ECU Homecoming weekend. Approximately 350 attended the luncheon which followed the traditional Homecoming Parade that moved down Greenville's Fifth Street.

Following the theme "Paint the Town Purple and Gold," a record number of sororities, fraternities and dormitories were bedecked in decorations for the event. Students participated in a morning cross-country run. Concerts and social events were held both Friday and Saturday nights and a concert was scheduled Sunday afternoon.

Interest Rates Offer Ray Of Hope To White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid the dark signs of a worsening recession, rising unemployment and burgeoning budget deficits, the Reagan administration has found a bright ray of hope — falling interest rates.

And, as long as interest rates continue to recede, President Reagan and his economic advisers seem willing to accept a weakening economy and a jobless rate likely to burst above 8 percent as the necessary trade off.

"Interest rates are dropping, and dropping rapidly," Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan noted last Friday, trying to cushion a new report by the Labor Department that unemployment had surged to 8 percent in October, the highest level since 1975.

Although there has been only slight downward movement in mortgage rates, which have kept millions of would-be homebuyers out of the market, other long-term and short-term interest rates have shown rapid decreases in recent weeks.

The short-term prime lending rate that banks charge their most creditworthy customers has dropped from 20.5 percent to 17 percent within two months, and Regan predicted "17 percent would be pierced in the near future."

Iranian Civilians Reported Killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kurdish rebels and leftist guerrillas machine-gunned scores of civilians in a "wholesale massacre" and suffered scores of their own killed by troops defending a northwestern Iranian city, Tehran Radio said Saturday.

The radio said the members of the outlawed Kurdish Democratic Party and Mujahedeen Khalq guerrillas blazed into the city of Bukan and killed "men, women, children in public baths, cafes, and streets as well as outside bakeries in a wholesale massacre."

The radio said corpses littered the streets and "counter-revolutionaries suffered scores of dead" from government counter-fire. It gave government casualties at 74 wounded or dead.

There was no specific breakdown, or confirmation from independent sources.

The broadcast said the attackers were repulsed in heavy combat that broke out Friday evening in Bukan, a West Azerbaijan town some 330 miles northwest of Tehran.

Soviet Vows Supremacy Over West In Arms Race

MOSCOW (AP) — Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov vowed the West will never overtake the Kremlin in military strength as missiles, tanks and troops were paraded through Red Square Saturday in the Soviet Union's annual revolution day celebration.

"The Soviet armed forces possess everything necessary to deliver a crushing rebuff to any aggressor," warned the 73-year-old marshal, a member of the Communist Party's ruling Politburo.

He accused the Western nations of feverishly building arms to achieve military domination, but asserted there was "absolutely no chance" Moscow will be beaten.

In Venice, meanwhile, NATO Commander Gen. Bernard Rogers urged the West not to acquiesce to what he called a Soviet military threat and called for "an effective deterrent to halt Soviet expansionism." He said the Soviets have a 4-1 advantage in arms systems and 3½-1 advantage in nuclear warheads.

Several Moscow paradegoers carried banners denouncing U.S. plans to build neutron weapons and deploy medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe to counter a perceived Soviet threat.

"We protest the aggressive course of the Reagan administration," one banner read. Another showed a picture of what was described as a neutron bomb crossed out by a resolute hand.

Others carried portraits of Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, who watched the two-hour festivities in a cold rain atop the Vladimir I. Lenin mausoleum overlooking the square. Lenin was father of the October 1917 revolution that brought the Communists to power.

Brezhnev, in ill health, climbed the stairs unaided to the top of the tomb and stayed until the parade's noon conclusion. Ustinov and other top Kremlin leaders accompanied him.

New Vocational Center Facility Is On Schedule

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The construction of a $5.1 million recreational and housing facility for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center here is on schedule, but a fund-raising drive to supply local money needed to match federal and state grants still has a way to go.

The ECVC, formerly the Sheltered Workshop, has served the vocational training needs of the handicapped of Pitt and Martin counties since 1965.

Morris Brody, chairman of the fund-raising effort, termed the project "a pilot program" for the comprehensive training and recreation of the handicapped. He said the addition will include facilities for in-house living, a pool, gymnasium and other facilities, and will make the ECVC "probably the finest vocational rehabilitation center ... keyed for the physically disabled" in the nation. It will be a "first class facility."

Construction of the 89,000-square-foot recreation and housing addition was started in August 1980 following a $40,000 feasibility study funded by the federal government, which has also contributed some $3.7 million in grants toward construction.

Of the remaining $1.4 million needed, $900,000 has been raised through a $225,000 state grant, contributions from the Pitt and Martin county governments, and through a public fund raising drive which began in February 1981, Brody said.

The facility is 80 percent complete now, according to project architect George Shoe of the firm of Dudley and Shoe Architects, who added that "everything is on schedule," for a February 1982 completion.

"I'm optimistic" of raising the $500,000 still needed, Brody said. "This whole thing has been built on faith. We haven't finished yet.

"The end goal of the whole drive," he continued, "is to provide better facilities to train the disabled person to take their place in the competitive world. We have already placed over 200 people in competitive employment and saved over $40 million in taxpayers' money."

Brody explained that, once a client is trained "and gets a job, it relieves the government of any kind of assistance program for the individual," and "gives the person staying home to look after the handicapped an opportunity to find a job."

The 200 that have been trained so far will earn more than $210,000 during their lifetimes — money that the government won't have to give them, Brody suggested.

Clients at the vocational center, Brody said, "make picture frames, battery lugs ... various things. They cane chairs, do a multitude of manufacturing out there. That's how the clients are trained. And they are paid a piece-rate salary on what they do. This gives them exposure to the competitive world."

Once a client is trained, he or she is then placed in private industry.

"We have 300 clients out there now," said Brody, who is also a member of the board of directors for ECVC.

"The people that have been called on" during the fund drive "have been most gracious," he said. But "the people that have not been called on ... we'll make an effort to contact them."

Brody noted that private contributions have ranged from "$300 up," with a Smith-Reynolds Foundation grant of $50,000 being the largest private contribution.

Brody noted that, in addition to the handicapped clients being trained at the center, the new facility will provide recreational opportunities for senior citizens in the area. "It will be a great thing for senior citizens, particularly the disabled senior citizens."

The ECVC was founded as the Sheltered Workshop in 1965 through the cooperative efforts of Pitt and Martin counties and served 27 clients during its first year, located in a small office building on North Greene Street.

In 1969, the center moved to its present site in the Greenville Industrial Park and the facilities have been expanded several times.

The ECVC has grown from four staff members into an organization employing about 75 people who provide training and job placement and other services for physically handicapped, mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed and low socio-economic-disadvantaged persons. Special services are also offered for veterans and the elderly.

what he (Bowen) wanted," Nobles said.

Bonar, who lost his bid for the 2nd Ward seat on the Town Board of Commissioners to incumbent Robert Harris by 359 votes, had filed a complaint with the town board and the Pitt County Board of Elections Friday asking for a recount. The complaint was based on reports that at least two people, Police Chief Tommy Burney and his wife, had voted although they lived in an area to be annexed in December.

Nobles said an investigation by the board indicated that the Burneys and one other person from the area to be annexed had voted Tuesday. He said Mrs. Burney had given the board a statement indicating that Persinger had encouraged her to vote, saying she was eligible.

Nobles said Persinger, however, told the board in a statement that he had advised her only to check with election officials.

"The board will meet Monday night to decide on that protest ... although only three votes are in question," Nobles said.

Bonar, a probation and parole officer, said he based his complaint on an interest in fair play, acknowledging that a recount would make no difference in his race.

"I was beaten very badly and that's not the reason for this," he explained. "It would make no difference in my case, but in the case of the candidate who lost by 10 votes, it just might make the difference."

Traffic Mishaps

Six traffic accidents occurred here Friday and Saturday, causing a total of $5,650 in damages, according to reports of the Greenville Police Department.

A vehicle driven by Sallie Mercer Weaver of 107 Oak Grove Ave. struck a parked vehicle on Greenville Terrace Drive Friday. Damages to the parked vehicle were estimated at $600 and $1,000 to the Weaver vehicle.

Damages amounting to $800 occurred to a vehicle driven by Bjorkman David Brian of 3736 Harton Rd., Virginia Beach, Va., when his vehicle collided with a vehicle driven by Star Dunning Cockrell of 1315 Beal St., Rocky Mount, on Cotanche Street Friday. Damages to the Cockrell vehicle were $300.

An accident occurred on Farmville Boulevard when a vehicle operated by Esther Slay Mooris of 400 Oak Grove swerved to avoid a parked vehicle and struck another vehicle driven by Robert Clayton Fornes of Route 1, Greenville, Friday. Damage to the Mooris vehicle was $300 and damages to the Fornes vehicle were estimated at $150.

A vehicle operated by Margaret Speight Warren of 404 Garden Terrace, struck a vehicle operated by Linwood Ray Evans of Route 1, Winterville. The accident occured on North Greene Street Friday. Damages to the Warren vehicle were estimated at $1,000 and $500 to the Evans.

A collision occurred at Darden Drive when a vehicle operated by Kenneth Wayne Sloope of 807 B 66th Ave. N., Myrtle Beach, S.C., struck a vehicle driven by Angelia Maria Dawson of 1900 A.W. 3rd St. The Sloope vehicle received $150 in damages and damages to the Dawson vehicle were estimated at $250.

A vehicle operated by Marvin Thomas Scarborough of 5-D Cannon Court, received $100 in damages when it collided with a vehicle driven by Allan Scott Buck of Lot 61 Shady Knoll. Damages to the Buck vehicle were estimated at $500. The accident occured on Greenville Boulevard Friday.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Fannie Ruth Gorham Clark, would like to express our deepest thanks to each of you who extended kindness and comfort to us during our recent time of sorrow. Your prayers and each kind thought and deed were greatly appreciated.

The family of Clark, Everson, Gorham, Hines, and the nieces and nephews.

Daddy's Birthday
Herbert Earl Ross

Your birthday is here but you are gone. Jesus thought it was best to call you on home. I wish you were here so I could tell you how much I love you but you are not.

I miss you at times more than you could ever know. I should have told you all of this before you had to go.

The holidays ahead will never be the same again because your place beside us has come to an end.

I sit and I think of all the good times we have shared and the happiness is beyond compare.

You are gone but not forgotten; you are in my heart and mind and I have wonderful memories to think of all the time.

I hope you are resting wherever that you are. I guess you are somewhere way beyond the stars.

So, a present I can't give you because you are not here and this day will be sad instead of happy this year.

So, Daddy, Happy Birthday, from the bottom of my heart and I am so sorry that we have to be so far apart.

Diane

Eleven Women Seeking Title

Eleven young women will compete for the title of 1982 Tobacco Queen during the Tobacco Festival Scholarship pageant Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Ayden-Grifton High School auditorium.

Debra Earley of Jacksonville, the 1981 festival queen, will crown this year's winner. The following contestants will compete for the title:

Angela Dee Moon, daughter of Jerry Moon of Greenville, is a junior at East Carolina University. She is an English major and plans to attend law school.

She enjoys dancing, singing, playing the guitar, swimming, modeling, playing tennis and fashion designing. Ms. Moon was nominated for the Governor's School and the Morehead Scholarship. She is a member of the National Honor Society and is an ECU Ambassador. She has participated in the Miss ECU Pageant and was in the 1980 Tobacco Festival. She is also a Miss ECU Calendar Girl.

Ms. Moon's talent presentation will be a medley of songs from Broadway musicals.

Federal Fuel Assistance Will Be Lower This Year

By The Associated Press

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — More than 210,000 families statewide who shared $35.5 million in federal funds last year to heat their homes may have to turn the heat down even lower this year, state officials who administer the funds said.

The North Carolina Division of Social Services says about the same number of households will get assistance this year, but the average payment is expected to decline because of anticipated budget cuts.

Last year, the average check was $155 for each household. This year, the program is expected to be cut to $26.5 million, which officials estimate will cut the average assistance check to $100.

"I'm not saying there's people out there who won't make it through the winter because of the cutback, but it still does help people who have so little that it's hard to make ends meet," said George Flemming, director of program administration for the agency.

He said Congress has not set a final figure for the program, so the exact amount the state will get isn't known.

In addition, a change in application procedures may result in the elimination of some eligible families. Last year, some families who received assistance from Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Supplemental Security Income were automatically eligible and did not have to apply for heating aid. But automatic eligibility was eliminated this year because some families who did not have heating bills got checks last winter, Flemming said.

Willie Suswell, coordinator of the program for the Charlotte Area Fund, said applications for assistance have lagged, with only 1,100 filed since the first date of application Nov. 2.

Last year, about 19,000 Mecklenburg households applied and about 12,000 received payments, she said.

Eligibility is determined by income and family size. For a non-farm family of four, the maximum income is $519 a month.

Flemming said the amount of assistance is determined by the state, and the state has established guidelines so that people living in colder areas of the state in the western mountain areas will receive more assistance than those living in milder areas.

New Council Means Changes For The City

Cox, who has consistently run well in seeking terms as a councilman and mayor, defeated Don McGlohon who is completing his first term.

Pending a recount request, there will be three new faces on the City Council. Janice Buck, George Pugh and Stuart Shinn were winners in the field of 11 candidates. R. J. (Dick) McKee failed to win re-election and Joe Taft and Clarence Gray did not seek re-election.

Three incumbants will return to office if the initial results stand. They are Judy Greene, Louis Clark and William Hadden.

Thursday Edward Carter, who missed being in the top six by only 20 votes, called for a recount, a request that was being considered by the Pitt Board of Elections.

Whatever is ruled by the board on the recount request, it appears that the City Council will have a somewhat different make-up for the next two years. We don't expect radical changes in direction since three incumbants will remain and the mayor has been away from city government for only two years.

Still the changes will be there.

As usual the biggest problem facing the new council will be money. Federal grants are rapidly drying up and there is not much enthusiasm for tax increases. Nevertheless city services must be maintained.

It is going to be an interesting two years.

First Blood Givers Offer A Boost For The Program

The recent Bloodmobile visit to Rose High was notable for collecting 169 pints, but of even greater note was that the school drive saw 118 first-time donors.

That is heartening.

Frequently over the years it has seemed blood donors tended to lapse into a hard-core group of "old faithfuls", and it should be much more than that.

Those 118 first-timers shared the qualms and uncertainties that accompany the unfamiliar; but the rewards will linger in the deep satisfaction that comes with sharing the gift of life with an unknown who is in dire need.

And once the initial shock of parting with a pint of that precious fluid passes, a sense of well-being sets in which can perhaps be described as an inner smile hidden from the world.

We hope those first-timers make blood-giving a part of their lives; perhaps two or three times a year when the Red Cross warns the "bank" is running low, or in those days preceeding a time of seasonal travel for many of the public.

That blood is precious; there is no substitute.

NATO

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration is concerned that an anti-American and neutralist movement is taking hold in Europe that would play havoc with the NATO alliance.

The recent anti-nuclear, anti-American protests staged in Europe are a cause of worry at the White House, and Vice President George Bush has undertaken a one-man crusade to brand them as Soviet inspired and to raise warning flags.

In several speeches recently, he has likened the movement to the appeasement policy of the 1930s, which paved the way for Hitler and World War II.

In an apparent attempt to be facetious, he opens by saying, "I am here to announce our policy on nuclear war. We're against it."

Nobody laughs.

The vice president does not beat around the bush. He declares loud and clear that the Soviet Union is the agent provocateur that is causing "well-intentioned men and women" to demonstrate against NATO's nuclear forces.

"The Soviet disinformation apparatus is as disquieting as it is dishonest, but it has not been unsuccessful," said Bush, a former CIA director.

"Many of them are young, too young to have had first-hand knowledge of World War II," he said, adding he does not question their idealism but their perspective.

Bush said that the rhetoric of their spokesman parallels the editorial line of Pravda, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper. "Pacifism and Soviet ideology are as incompatible as sheep and wolves," he said.

The demonstrations were ignited after President Reagan indicated in an interview that fighting a limited nuclear war on the European continent was possible. Reagan later clarified his remarks to say that an attack on Europe is an attack on the United States.

At the same time, Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev has said that a nuclear war would be "mass suicide."

The new demonstrations also are in anticipation of the NATO decision to modernize long range theater nuclear weapons in Europe by replacing the older Pershing ballistic missiles with newer models. Such a move does not sit well with the Soviets who have long range SS-20 missiles with several warheads aimed at European capitals.

Therefore, much will be riding on a meeting at the end of the month between Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva.

So far, the administration has shown no inclination to move into serious arms limitation talks, particulariy while Reagan contends the United States has a "window of vulnerability."

But the pressure is building for the administration to soft pedal its belligerence less the Soviets gain the initiative as the peace lover, while the United States is pegged as a warmonger.

Bush says the "great advantage" of the modernization program is that it got the Soviet Union "finally to sit down at the bargaining table."

He said the U.S. policy, and the policy of NATO, is "one of deterence," and added that the policy has been a "remarkably effective way" in "avoiding the horrors of modern day warfare."

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

(Photographer Tommy Forrest is as knowledgeable on electronic timepieces as anyone we know. Following is his contribution on the subject).

Clocks. They come in all sizes, shapes, digital, long hands, short hands, loud chimes, beeps, bongs, music and now the ultimate — a clock that actually speaks to say the correct time. It sounds a little Japanese but it does speak in a computer monotone.

When I was in school, to have a wrist watch was the big thing. Students would watch the clock on the wall and prepare for the great rush to the lunch line or recess. The teachers would get rather perturbed. One teacher placed a sign around the large IBM wall clock that read, "Time passes, will you?"

Technology has come a long way since that day of the IBM clock on the school wall. Now you can have a timepiece in the head of your ballpoint pen, in a credit card size calculator or even a wristwatch that plays "Dixie". If you're a real stickler for keeping track of time, purchase a WWV receiver. It receives time via short wave radio from the National Bureau of Standards' atomic clock in Fort Collins, Colo. Time, which is given every minute,is said to be accurate one part in a trillion. That's like gaining or losing one second in 31,623 years. Set your watch and see how many seconds it can lose or gain a day.

There's even dial-a-time from the local phone company.

And an election was held last Tuesday. As always, our staff members gathered at the office to take calls from precincts so that an unofficial tabulation could be made of the local elections.

And, as always, calls began coming in even before the polls closed from citizens who wanted to know the results.

One caller asked who won even before the first precinct was in.

The staffer who answered replied that no results were in.

"Well, how do you think it's going?" the caller asked.

"Ma'am," the staffer answered. "I don't have the slightest idea."

"If we knew we could all go home," someone commented after the call was concluded.

Unusual State Holiday Comes Up Wednesday

Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — That special holiday for public schools — the only one specifically required by state law — is coming up soon. Wednesday — Nov. 11 — will be Veteran's Day.

A midweek holiday not only disruptes the school schedule, but catches both parents and school officials off guard, as it did last year when some school systems completely forgot to close down to honor the veterans.

That isn't likely to happen again. Several big veteran organizations threatened lawsuits against any local schools which fail to honor the event in the future, and successfully beat down an effort in the North Carolina General Assembly earlier this year to either abandon the holiday completely, move it so it could fall on either Monday or Friday, or promise to hold special ceremonies and observances in the schools if they could just operate on that day.

State and local school officials have vigorously opposed the special holiday, and tried to get legislators to make some change.

Veteran's Day is the only statutory holiday on the books. Others such as Christmas are allowed, and dates set by local or state regulation — not by law.

The law went on the books four years ago, but escaped notice because it was too late in the year to schedule the holiday that first year. The next year, Veteran's Day fell on a weekend. Then last year, it came and surprised almost everybody with a sudden stop in the school schedule ... just as it will this year.

When Joe Grimsley moved from another state agency to assume command of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, there was considerable speculation that he would step up the state's concern for environmental problems.

In his first environmental talk made at a meeting of the Conservation Council of North Carolina, Grimsley fairly well put his endorsement on what has been done in past years.

"North Carolina's environment is in good shape ... Where we have invested dollars and efforts in environmental protection we have gotten results. We are making real progress,' Grimsley said.

Some of those concerned with environmental issues have complained that North Carolina puts more emphasis on economics and industrial growth than on environmental protection, and had privately hoped that a change in agency leadership would help turn that situation around.

Treasury's Regan Finds Support For Policies

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — In the wake of the Reagan administration's failed "September offensive" for austerity, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan is reaching for dominance in economic policymaking by opposing tax increases and downgrading budget deficits.

Regan has not won yet. Senior White House aides still think they can pass excise tax increases (liquor, cigarettes, gasoline), which are opposed by Regan inside the administration. But the president's men agree with Regan that preoccupation with budget deficits must end. Once the futility of getting Congress to enact consumption taxes becomes obvious, they may join Regan's no-tax stance.

Don Regan, 62-year-old wall Street barracuda, may be nearing the triumph over budget director David Stockman, 34-year-old congressional boy wonder, that long has been predicted by Washington insiders. But nobody guessed that Regan would be championing supply-side economics against Stockman, the ex-Michigan congressman originally pushed for the Cabinet by advocates of supply-side tax reduction.

In his memoirs as chief of the Merrill Lynch brokerage house, Regan said the only thing wrong with the last general tax increase (Lyndon Johnson's Vietnam surtax) was that it was not big enough. But at the Treasury a decade later, Regan has dragged his feet while Stockman at the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) sought budget-balancing tax increases.

The Treasury lost to the OMB in August's internal debate over the September offensive. The OMB not only won the doctrinal battle over whether budget deficits cause high interest rates but forced the rewriting of Regan's congressional testimony taking a contrary position.

That summertime struggle sowed seeds of discord, which yielded bitter fruit when the September offensive failed. Treasury officials protested that OMB assistant director Lawrence Kudlow, Stockman's chief economic adviser, in Oct. 20 congressional testimony promoted tax increases that were properly the Treasury's business. On Oct. 26, a front-page story by Martin Schram in The Washington Post, suggesting Regan's advice and forecasting had served the president poorly, was blamed by angry Treasury staffers on the OMB.

Shortly thereafter, Regan visited Rep. Barber Conable, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, who braced himself for a harangue on needed revenue. He was pleasantly surprised when Regan asked his advice. "We don't need a new policy every Tuesday," said Conable, who opposes tax hikes. That matched the position of Regan and his advisers.

These advisers deplore OMB's budget deficit fetish. In a private memorandum. A Regan aide cites forecasts by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) of a huge fiscal 1984 deficit accompanied by lowering interest rates, dropping unemployment, declining inflation and accelerating growth. The memo writer, decrying efforts to cut defense spending and increaes taxes, contends "the character of the current debate must be changed by putting the deficit problem in proper perspective."

Regan attempted this somewhat gingerly in Oct. 30 Senate testimony. On CBS's "Face the Nation" two days later, he suggested the problem was not excessive tax cuts but that too little (for the current fiscal year) finally passed too late. Thus, Don Regan emerges as a full-blown supply-sider. while Dave Stockman warns of red ink.

The Treasury's supply-side position appears in the current issue of Fortune in an article by Dr. Paul Craig Roberts, assistant secretary of the Treasury and pioneer supply-sider.

Looking Back, Who Won The Great Strike?

James J. Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — Three months have now passed since 12,000 members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) staged their ill-advised strike against the government. For all practical purposes, the strike is over. Who won? Who lost?

Plainly, the greatest losers are the union members. When the strike began on the morning of Aug. 3, the typical controller was a man in his late 30s or early 40s, possessed of wife, children, mortgage and late-model car. If he worked at one of the major towers or en route control centers, he was suffering signs of stress; if he were assigned to a lower level duty, he had no more ulcers than the rest of us. He was earning $33,000 a year.

In retrospect, it is hard to understand the colossal misjudgment that led to the strike. Union leaders misjudged President Reagan; they had supported him in 1980 and he had given assurances of his sympathy for their working conditions. The controllers' union misjudged the reaction of other unions; they got no help from the AFL-CIO. They misjudged the public reaction; at the time things came to a head, the country was simmering with resentment at the baseball strike in particular and at public union activism in general.

More than anything, the PATCO members misjudged their own importance. They truly thought they were indispensable — that the nation's airways could not operate without them. This posture of overweening confidence, often perceived as arrogance, dominated the union's public statements during the first few week of the strike. As it turned out, the union controllers were quite dispensable indeed.

Legally, at least, PATCO no longer exists. On Oct. 22 the Federal Labor Relations Authority formally revoked the union's status as exclusive bargaining agent for the controllers. The order is being appealed, but few observers anticipate a reversal. The authority held that the union "willfully and intentionally" had broken both the law and its members' own no-strike pledge. PATCO had attempted to tear apart the framework of collective bargaining and to replace it with bargaining on the union's own terms "in defiance of the public interest."

So much for blind loyalty. The striking union members have lost their jobs. Their union has lost its certification. Unpaid fines surpass a million dollars. For PATCO, the strike has resulted in unmitigated disaster.

The record turns up other loscrs. The major airlines lost $250 million in passenger revenues in August alone; despite savings in fuel and labor costs, the carriers' profits for the strike period will be substantially lower than they would otherwise have earned. Roughly 16,000 permanent airline employees —about 5 percent of the labor force — have been laid off. Owners of the 220,000 planes in general aviation have been seriously inconvenienced. The traveling public has had to cope with canceled flights, unreliable schedules and costly delays at major terminals. Operations are down by 22 percent; it will be two years before schedules can be restored to pre-strike levels.

But there is a happier side to the story. By general acknowledgment, supported by statistics on near misses and operational errors, air travel is safer than before. With the departure of complainers and troublemakers, the control towers and centers are running smoothly and cooperatively. The strike has permitted the Federal Aviation Administration to eliminate 3,000 controller positions not truly needed. The PATCO members who stayed on the job, along with hundreds of military controllers rushed into the breach, have earned a large measure of gratitude.

The greatest plus is an intangible plus. By his unshakeable firmness, Mr. Reagan sent a message to public employee unions that cannot possibly be misunderstood: Willy-nilly, come what may, the law will be upheld. The president's example will strengthen the hand of local governments everywhere. Public service is a public trust — and those who break that rule, as the striking controllers discovered to their sorrow, have only themselves to blame.

To the editor:

Last year 150 million Americans received some form of medical radiation. If you did not, the odds are that you or a member of your family will have a diagnostic X-ray in the future. Since it is likely that you will receive a medical X-ray exposure, it's important to understand the benefits, as well as the risks, derived from radiation exposure.

The N.C. Society of Radiologic Technologists is observing, in conjunction with the American Society of Radiologic Technologists, the week of Nov. 8-14 as National Radiologic Technology Week, coinciding with the anniversary of Roentgen's discovery of X-ray in November 1895.

There are an estimated 124,000 trained technologists administering radiation in America today; however, there are 45,000-50,000 people administering radiation who are not skilled or certified. This poses a potential danger to your health and safety and increases the risk that you may suffer from one of the side effects of excessive radiation exposure.

To alleviate these risks, there are five basic steps you should take:

1. Question the necessity of any X-ray examination requested by your physician.

2. If you're pregnant or think you might be, inform your doctor before X-rays are ordered or administered.

3. Question the credentials/qualifications of the person taking your X-rays. Because there is no licensure of X-ray personnel in N.C., the only way to be sure the person taking your X-rays is qualified is to be aware of the credentials. The only persons recognized by the American Medical Association as having proper training are physicians who have specialized in X-ray procedures, known as radiologists; and radiologic technologists, those certified by the American Registry of Radiologic Technologists with R.T.-R. after their names.

4. Ask if a gonadal lead shield can be placed over the reproductive organs to prevent radiation from reaching your reproductive cells.

5. Keep a record of all your X-ray procedures. When an X-ray is taken, record the date, type of exam and where the X-ray was done. Then, if another doctor requests an X-ray exam of the same part of the body, this information may prevent additional X-rays from being made.

Walter Mears — A Tale Of 'Once Upon A Time'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once upon a time, there was a secretary of state who got along perfectly with the president's adviser on national security affairs. No jealousy, no backbiting, certainly no guerrilla warfare between the State Department and the top foreign policy aide at the White House.

That time of total harmony lasted about two years — as long as Henry A. Kissinger held both jobs.

But there was no end of friction before Kissinger took the dual role under Richard M. Nixon. And there has been plenty of friction since, no matter the administration or the personalities involved.

So there is nothing unusual about the discord between Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and the unidentified White House official he accuses of waging "a guerrilla campaign" to undercut his influence.

It is widely assumed that Haig's hassle is with Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's assistant for national security affairs. That is what they're saying at the State Department, although the people saying so do it anonymously. Allen says they are wrong and that Haig knows it. "I know it is not I, and Haig knows it is not I," he said.

Assuming that is so, there would seem to be a problem at the White House, since a bureaucratic guerrilla is going around saying bad things about the secretary of state and nobody seems to know who it is.

Reagan's spokesmen say the president doesn't know and isn't trying to find out. "He has put the matter to rest," said David Gergen.

It would rest easier if Haig had not sent his own spokesman, Dean Fischer, to confirm publicly that he believes somebody on the White House staff is out to get him. Fischer would not say whom Haig suspects.

Standard procedure for administration spokesmen confronted with reports of internal discord is to dismiss them as gossip, feigning surprise that questions like that would even be asked.

Haig did not play it that way. Instead, he validated the reports which Reagan calls unfounded and potentially destructive. It is not the first time Haig has gone public with a complaint about the way things are being handled at the White House.

And for all Reagan's expressions of confidence in his secretary of state, he has acted before to cut short power struggles among aides. That's what led him to fire his 1980 campaign manager, John P. Sears.

The latest Haig controversy began with a report by columnist Jack Anderson that Reagan was disappointed in the secretary of state, had lost confidence in him and might replace him by next summer.

White House aides learned of the column before it was due to be published. Haig and Reagan both called Anderson. The president said it wasn't so. Haig said the report of presidential displeasure was "the handiwork of a top White House aide, who has been running a guerrilla campaign" against him since the earliest days of the administration.

Anderson published those comments and on Tuesday, Fischer publicly confirmed that Haig had made the statements.

Later, Reagan told newsmen that "the only thing I can figure out about stopping all the backbiting is convincing all of you that there is absolutely no foundation to any of these rumors." The trouble was that Haig, through his spokesman, already had said there was.

Reagan also said such reports were damaging U.S. dealings abroad. Haig echoed that in congressional testimony Wednesday. "Both the president and I recognize these reports can be harmful to the conduct of our foreign policy," he said.

There were, of course, two reports: one that Haig was in disfavor, the other of discord within the administration. Presumably, Haig was talking about the former. But the latter didn't do anything to enhance the image of the administration.

Still, there are reports and then there are reports. A columnist's assertion that Reagan is down on Haig is one thing. A secretary of state's claim that somebody high in the White House is out to get him is quite another.

The column might wind up as a footnote in a foreign diplomat's report to his government. State Department confirmation of bickering in the upper reaches of the administration probably makes it worth cabling home to the foreign office.

Even so, none of it is likely to do serious harm to U.S. foreign policy. "I don't know that it's damaging," said Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C. "There may be a little bit of paranoia here and there that ought to be corrected."

Then again, there is no guarantee that the fuss won't lead to problems. Say that it did, and that one of them reached crisis proportions. That, presumably, would put it into the baliwick of Vice President George Bush, a the administration's crisis management team.

After that flap, Reagan told his staff and the State Department that there was to be no further public debate about internal differences.

Noel Yancey — Blast

Looking back many years later, the man who triggered the atomic bomb that leveled Hiroshim said he felt compassion for its 78,000 victims, but "I've never had a guilt complex because of it."

"Sure, we killed quite a few, but that blast also saved a few lives," said Col. Thomas W. Ferebee a few years ago while attending a reunion of his classmates at Less-McRae College at Banner Elk.

Ferebee was only a few years off a Davie County farm that August day in 1945 when the B-29 bomber "Enola Gay" took off from the Pacific Island of Tinian on a flight that revolutionized warfare. Ferebee was bombadier on the plane commanded by Col. Paul W. Tibbets Jr. Its mission was to drop history's first atomic bomb.

Ferebee, then a major in the Army Air Corps, saw Hiroshima through his bombsight as he maneuvered the "Enola Gay" into position. He could see streets and buildings of the city of 350,000 as he triggered the release which sent the bomb hurtling down. It exploded 1,500 feet above the ground with the force of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Although he was busy after the blast noting the extent of destruction — the city was 90 percent destroyed and 130,000 people were killed, injured or missing — Ferebee was able to observe some of the reactions of the bomber crew.

"As I remember, the crew was quiet and rather stunned from what they observed," Ferebee said. He was less suprised because he was one of three members of the crew of 11 who knew the potential of the new weapon. The other two were the pilot, Tibbets, and Navy Capt. William S. Parsons, who inspected and armed the bomb before the drop.

Three days later a second atomic bomb was dropped on the city of Nagasaki. Five days later Japan surrendered, ending World War II.

Ferebee visited Hiroshima within a week after the surrender was formally signed aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay on Sept. 2, 1945. He was convinced the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki shortened the war and saved the lives of thousands of Americans who would have been killed in an attack on the Japanese mainland.

"The Japanese were all prepared to make one last stand to save face," he said during that reunion at Lees McRae.

Ferebee enlisted in the Army Air Corps in 1941, a year after he graduated from the western North Carolina college where he was captain of the football team and also won letters in baseball and track his senior year. After winning his wings and his commission as a second lieutenant, he was sent to England where he was bombadier on a B-17 piloted by Tibbets in the first Allied air raid against Europe. He was also aboard when Tibbets flew Gens. Dwight D. Eisenhower and Mark Clark to Gibraltar to prepare for the Allied invasion of North Africa.

In December 1942, Ferebee went to the North African theater as bombadier of the Flying Fortress "Red Gremlin." After 24 missions, he won the Distinguished Flying Cross as one of three survivors of the original crew. He won the equivalent of a second DFC for heroism during a raid on a heavily defended airfield at Milo, Sicily.

In the summer of 1945, after Ferebee had attained the rank of major and flown on 61 combat missions, he rejoined Tibbets in Wendover, Utah, in the midst of secret preparations for the use of atomic bombs against Japan. Ferebee's mission included the training of several bomber crews for atomic raids.

In a 1946 magazine article, Tibbets recalled he had asked specifically for the assignment of Ferebee and Capt. Kermit K. Beaham of Houston, Tex., to his group. He said they two of the best bombardiers he had met.

"I did a job the best I could as I would have any other mission I flew," Ferebee said in an interview on the 25th anniversary of the raid on Hiroshima.

But he expressed hope for the peaceful application of the atom, saying it "has opened many good ways ... for the good of the world."

Alferdteen Harrison — Facing South: Music

JACKSON, Miss. — Today most school children take music for granted as an extra-curricular activity. But for many black students — particularly those in the South — music has also been a way to raise money to run their schools.

Just outside Jackson, the Piney Woods School (founded in 1909) survived because of money brought in by a whole range of student activities, but most notably its female jazz bands, the Sweethearts of Rhythm and the Rays of Rhythm.

In a recent interview that forms part of an oral history project on the Piney Woods community, Lou Holloway recalled the years during the early 1940s when she played the saxaphone in the Rays of Rhythm.

"There were three groups: Sweethearts of Rhythm, Rays of Rhythm and the Flashers," she recalled. "When I got there, the Sweethearts had already gone off professionally. They ran away from the school. So the Rays of Rhythm were sent out to fill the dates that had been booked. And they became the traveling band for the school."

The band traveled every summer, from May to September, raising money for the school, and it was popular all over the country. Often they earned as much as $400 in a single night. They were booked also for shorter periods at locations closer to home, during the school year.

"We were professional. We were playing dances. Thanksgiving, Christmas, the Easter weekend — people were booking that band. Up through Louisiana, up through Arkansas, back down through the delta of Mississippi.

"We played four-hour dances. Nowadays, musicians come to Jackson, they play a show, maybe an hour or 20 minutes and that's it. We played four hours with a 30-minute intermission, which is the same thing that Duke Ellington, County Basie and all the other bands were doing.

"And we had jazzy uniforms. Now we were wearing pants on stage when other people were not, because you're sitting up high on that stage — you have pants on. We had black satin pants with a green satin sash with gold fringes on the end of it, and gold satin blouses with big puff sleeves.

Because they were so young — Ms. Holloway was only 14 when she started traveling with the Rays — the girls were carefully chaperoned, and bed and mealtimes were strictly enforced.

Ms. Holloway emphasized, "At intermission, we came back to the bus. We did not socialize with the public, because we were there to entertain the people and not to socialize. And during the dance, people could come up and ask for a certain number or request, but not just to have a coversation. When the show was over, we went back to the bus and got ready for bed."

The girls slept on the bus, in bunk beds arranged in three tiers. Each had a drawer for her things, and there was a toilet that had to be emptied by hand. The instruments were carried in a trailer on the back. "People used to come over just to look," Ms. Holloway said, "just to take a tour."

Ms. Holloway now lives in Gloucester, Va., and is doing research on big jazz bands similar to the Rays.

She said she has "never worried about a job, because I can get a job."

"I know how to do things. I can go back and play some blues right now, if necessary — if I had to eat," she said.

George Gallup — Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — Americans reject a proposal for a single six-year term for U.S. presidents, as they have in surveys going back to the 1930s. However, among the "informed" public — those who are familiar with the pros and cons of the issue — opinion is evenly divided.

In the latest Gallup Poll, 34 percent of adult Americans favor a six-year presidential term while 66 percent are opposed. These findings are little changed from survey results obtained last January and in 1979.

The views of the informed public (40 percent of the total) are evenly split between those who favor the proposal (47 percent) and those who oppose it (49 percent).

Informed Republicans and Democrats have similar attitudes toward the proposed six-year term, with 45 percent of each group expressing support; a 53 percent majority of informed independents endorses the proposal. Other informed groups in which a majority favors the six-year term include the college educated, persons 18 to 29 years old, men and Easterners.

One advocate of a single six-year presidency, former secretary of state Cyrus Vance, summed up the basic arguments as follows:

"... One key proposal — which I support — would limit a president to one term of six years. The idea of a single, limited presidential term is not new. It was proposed, debated and initially adopted by the Committee of the Whole at the Constitutional Convention in 1787. The issue was later revived by Andrew Jackson, and many presidents since him have publicly subscribed to the belief that the national interest would be better served by presidents who are not intent on being re-elected. The virtues of a single six-year term are that a president could devote his full attention to national needs, rather than spending much of his energy on trying to win re-election; the paralysis in decision-making that grips the executive branch during the long primary campaign could be eliminated, and a single-term president would be less inclined to use his office for the purpose of courting voters to win re-election."

A commonly-held view among those opposed to changing the present system is that a single six-year term would be "too long for a bad president, too short for a good one."

In this century, many proposals for six-year terms have been introduced in Congress, and once (in 1913) the Senate, but not the House, passed such a resolution. Interestingly, the constitution of the Confederacy during the Civil War provided for a six-year term and Jefferson Davis took office on that basis.

Here is the question asked since 1936 to determine attitudes toward the six-year term:

"Would you favor changing the term of office of the president of the United States to one six-year term with no re-election?"

Six-Year Presdiential Trend*

	Favor	Oppose
LATEST (Oct. 2-5)	34%	66%
January	32	68
1979	32	68
1973	30	70
1969	19	81
1945	27	73
1939	24	76
1936	26	74

*"No opinion" excluded

In the latest survey the question was altered to permit analysis of the opinions of the "informed public," and the following question sequence asked:

"Have you heard or read about a proposal for changing the term of office of the president of the United States to one six-year term with no re-election?"

Those who answered affirmatively were then asked:

"In your opinion, what would be the advantages of doing this?"

"And what would be the disadvantages?"

The informed public was considered to include those who said they had heard or read of the proposal and could name an advantage or disadvantage.

This question was then asked of all persons:

"Some people feel that limiting a president to one term of six years would best serve the national interest because he could devote all his energies to solving national problems rather than spending a lot of time trying to get reelected. Others prefer the present system because they feel it takes a president a long time learning how to do his job and that knowing that he will have to seek re-election will make him answerable to the wishes of the people. Which point of view comes closer to the way you, yourself, feel? Do you favor or oppose changing the term of office of the president to one six-year term with no re-election?"

Robert Burns — Corporations Running 'To Stay In Place'

NEW YORK (AP) — The burden of high interest rates on American corporations large and small is reaching a critical stage, many financial analysts believe.

The evidence is abundant: lower third-quarter earnings, surprise announcements of dividend cuts and reduced debt ratings. Perhaps most dramatic is the huge increase this year in the number of reported loans.

Because high borrowing costs are cutting into their profits, many companies find themselves in the vicious circle of having to borrow still more to repay maturing debt.

"They're having to run to stay in place," says David Jones, a financial economist at the Wall Street investment firm of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co.

To make matters worse the economy is in the early stages of a recession that some economists believe will curtail business profits through mid-1982.

Here are some questions and answers to help explain the financial pinch and its implications for the economy:

Q. Why do companies borrow money?

A. Most frequently they borrow to pay for equipment or expansion projects and to maintain a level of inventories that is neither too small nor too large. Retailers, for example, must keep a stock of goods that is a cushion against changes in demand. Usually that inventory is bought on credit.

Q. How long have interest rates been high?

A. Rates have been high, by historical standards, for two years. The period began in the fall of 1979 when the Federal Reserve Board did an about-face in its approach to curbing inflation. Instead of keeping a cap on interest rates, the Fed decided to focus its attention on growth in the money supply. Its reasoning was that too fast growth in the money stock was overheating the economy and compounding the inflation problem.

Q. Is that strategy working?

A. In recent months the Fed has had notable success in restraining growth of the money supply. At the same time inflation has abated somewhat, but not as much as the Fed had planned. The price the economy paid for the lower money-supply growth has been extraordinarily high interest rates.

Q. If rates have been high for so long, why is the business-failures problem only now becoming critical?

A. The resilience displayed by businesses earlier this year was deceptive. Many companies were obtaining short-term loans to finance the repayment of long-term obligations

Personal Income Climbing In 48 States

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans in all but two states saw their average incomes grow last spring, with total income rising at least as fast as inflation in a majority of states, the Commerce Department reported Saturday.

Total U.S. personal income rose 2.1 percent to an annual rate of $2.34 trillion in the April-June quarter — just under $11,000 for every man, woman and child in the nation. In the January-March quarter, total personal income rose 2.9 percent.

Consumer prices as measured by Commerce's implicit price deflator for personal income expenditures rose 1.7 percent in the April-June period, the report said.

Only West Virginia and Kentucky showed income declines during the spring quarter, a development Commerce officials blamed on the coal strike which kept thousands of workers off the job.

The biggest gains were the 3.5 percent increase for total income in Alaska, 3.4 percent in Oklahoma, 3.2 percent in Delaware and Michigan and 3.1 percent in Florida, the report said.

Income dropped 4.5 percent in West Virginia and 1.1 percent in Kentucky, and it rose only 0.5 percent in Wyoming 0.7 percent in New Hampshire and 0.8 percent in Alabama.

Of those five states, "most had large declines in payrolls in construction and, reflecting the coal strike, in mining," the report said.

By region, the Southwest piled up a 2.9 percent increase, the largest in the nation, followed by the Great Lakes states at 2.4 percent, the Far West at 2.2 percent and the Plains states at 2.1 percent.

In order after that came New England with a 1.9 percent increase, Mid-Atlantic and Southeastern states with 1.8 percent and the Rocky Mountain states with 1.4 percent.

The personal income increases, unless otherwise noted, for individual states were:

—NEW ENGLAND: Connecticut up 1.6 percent to $38.7 billion, Maine 1.9 percent to $9.6 billion, Massachusetts 2.3 percent to $62.8 billion, New Hampshire 0.7 percent to $9.1 billion, Rhode Island 1.6 percent to $9.6 billion, Vermont 1.5 percent to $4.4 billion.

—MIDEAST: Delaware up 3.2 percent to $6.7 billion, District of Columbia 1.5 percent to $8.2 billion, Maryland 1.8 percent to $47.3 billion, New Jersey 1.8 percent to $86.2 billion, New York 2.1 percent to $194 billion, Pennsylvania 1.2 percent to $118.6 billion.

—GREAT LAKES: Illinois up 2.6 percent to $132 billion, Indiana 1.3 percent to $53.6 billion, Michigan 3.2 percent to $100.6 billion, Ohio 2 percent to $110.2 billion, Wisconsin 2.6 percent to $47.4 billion.

—PLAINS: Iowa up 2.1 percent to $28.5 billion, Kansas 2.2 percent to $25.5 billion, Minnesota 2 percent to $41.9 billion, Missouri 2.3 percent to $47.3 billion, Nebraska 2 percent to $15 billion, North Dakota 2.1 percent to $6.1 billion, South Dakota 1.3 percent to $5.5 billion.

—SOUTHEAST: Alabama up 0.8 percent to $31.4 billion, Arkansas 2.3 percent to $18 billion, Florida 3.1 percent to $98.3 billion, Georgia 1.7 percent to $47.6 billion, Louisiana 2.7 percent to $39.1 billion, Mississippi 1.7 percent to $17.7 billion, North Carolina 2.8 percent to $50.6 billion, South Carolina 2.2 percent to $25.4 billion, Tennessee 2 percent to $38.8 billion, Virginia 1.4 percent to $55.1 billion, Kentucky down 1.1 percent to $30 billion, West Virginia down 4.5 percent to $15.5 billion.

—SOUTHWEST: Arizona up 1.7 percent to $26.1 billion, New Mexico 2.6 percent to $11.4 billion, Oklahoma 3.4 percent to $30.6 billion, Texas 3 percent to $151.6 billion.

—ROCKY MOUNTAIN: Colorado up 1.5 percent to $31.8 billion, Idaho 0.9 percent to $8.6 billion, Montana 2.1 percent to $7.3 billion, Utah 1.7 percent to $11.9 billion, Wyoming 0.5 percent to $5.5 billion.

—FAR WEST: California up 2.4 percent to $280.8 billion, Nevada 2.3 percent to $9.4 billion, Oregon 2.2 percent to $26.2 billion, Washington 1.1 percent to $46.8 billion.

—OTHERS: Alaska up 3.5 percent to $5.6 billion, Hawaii 1.6 percent to $10.2 billion.

Spill Said Cleaned Up

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Florida Power Company officials said Saturday they have safely recovered 1,000 gallons of radioactive water spilled at the company's reactor in Crystal River.

The water spilled Friday to the floor of the nuclear reactor, located about 70 miles north of St. Petersburg. The reactor was not operating at the time, having been shut down for routine refueling.

Approximately 15 workers were evacuated for several hours after the spill, according to utility spokesman Larry Shriner. The contaminated water never escaped from the containment area and was sucked into the normal waste-collection system, he said.

The accident occurred about 8:15 p.m. as workers were changing a pump on the reactor, said Shriner.

The Crystal River plant, cited earlier this year by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as being poorly managed, has been shut down since Sept. 27 for refueling and maintenance.

Shriner said someone made an "inadvertent cross connection" between the main cooling system and a storage tank and the contaminated water bubbled out. There was no damage to reactor and the accident shouldn't cause any major change in the maintenance schedule, he said.

Graham Marks 63rd Birthday

HOUSTON (UPI) — Billy Graham, the dean of American evangelists, celebrated his 63rd birthday Saturday and revealed that leaders of his religious group were discussing his organization's future in the event of his death.

Graham told the Houston Chronicle he has no plans to slow down or retire, but during a recent Dallas meeting of the Billy Graham Evangelistic Association members of the Board of Directors discussed the future of the organization after him.

He said the meeting did not signal any health problems on his part, but board members wanted to discuss what do do "in the event I have a heart attack."

Graham said, "I told them I am in the best health of my lfe and I feel I can go on for several more years." He said, however, he was "no longer in the corporate setup" of his $30 million evangelistic group and turned daily corporate operations over to the board.

"They wonder whether they will be able to carry on crusades or have enough money coming in to pay all these bills, like for the motion pictures and television and everything," Graham said.

Allen Emory, president of the religious corporation based in Minneapolis, said leaders of the group have two options when Graham dies.

Under the first option, he said, "There are those who feel that maybe at a certain point we ought to close it and merge it and give the assets to some charitable group or some other group that's doing similar work."

Under the second option, he said, "There are others who feel there are young men coming on who God is honoring and blessing and they would be able to carry on."

Graham, who lives in Montreat, N.C., said that his brother-in-law, evangelist Leighton Ford, was no longer being groomed to succeed him.

"I felt Leighton might do that but Leighton has more or less quit crusades," Graham said. "He holds a few small ones a year but he has become sort of a world religion strategist and leader and is under consideration for the presidency of Wheaton College in Wheaton, Illinois."

There is also talk that Graham's 28-year-old son, William Franklin Graham III, might become the heir apparent.

New Jersey To Decide On Canvass Of Election

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — County canvassers meet Monday to decide whether to certify their results in a hard-fought race for New Jersey governor, but it is uncertain when the state will announce if Democrat James Florio or Republican Thomas Kean won the election.

Kean has been clinging to a slight edge in the still-fluctuating results from last Tuesday's election and on Saturday was ahead of Florio 1,143,569 to 1,141,622, a margin of 1,947 votes, according to the News Election Service.

The final tallies for Hudson, Mercer and Monmouth counties will not be announced until Monday, and the status of some ballots in Essex County is waiting action by the state Supreme Court.

John Farmer, chief spokesman for Gov. Brendan Byrne, and both candidates have said they expect to know who the governor-elect is on Monday.

According to Secretary of State Donald Lan, county canvassers meet at noon to vote on whether to certify their results. They then have three days to get those figures to Lan.

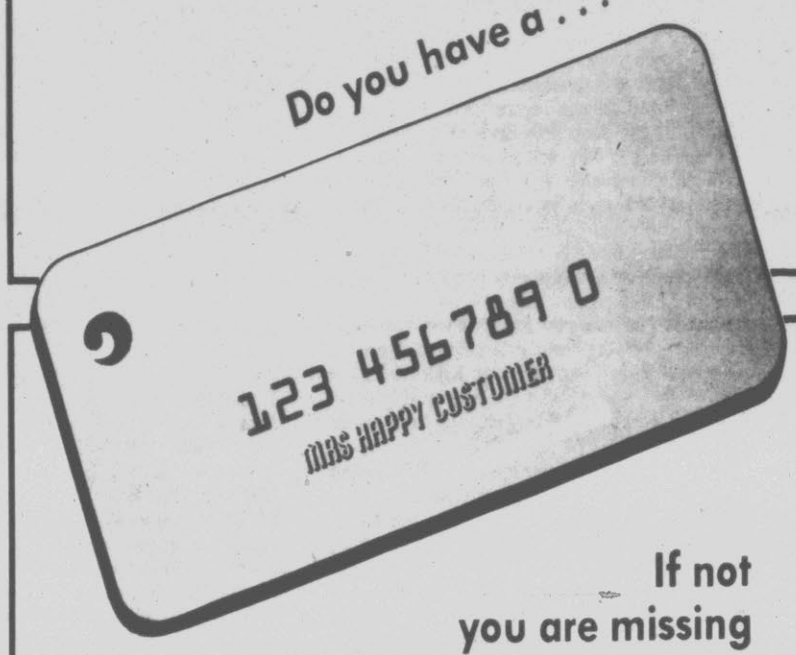

On Dec. 1, the state Board of Canvassers meets to certify the results and name the governor-elect. Lan said Saturday he is not required by law to tell anyone the results of Monday's canvass, and said he is not sure how to handle the issue because it has never come up before.

"If you have any ideas on how I should handle this, let me know," said Lan, who worked as deputy campaign manager for Florio. "Everybody in the state is as confused as you are."

Lan also said no legal challenge can be filed against the results until they are final Dec. 1.

Both candidates have claimed "ultimate victory" and both have announced they are forming transition teams to prepare them for the job of running the state.

Polish Official Says Climate Favorable For Ending Labor Strikes

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Communist Party chief Wojciech Jaruzelski said Saturday that "favorable conditions" exist for settling Poland's labor crisis. But more than 150,000 angry strikers remained off the job and authorities were reported abandoning attempts to negotiate with them.

Jaruzelski, a general who is also prime minister and defense minister, said his meeting last week with Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and Archbishop Jozef Glemp was "momentous" and "improved prospects for the construction of a front of national accord (and for) improvement of the social climate," state-run newspapers reported.

Walesa and Glemp, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, have also made optimistic statements since the meeting. Solidarity's presidium said Friday the union was prepared to make some unspecified concessions when union-government talks on the economic crisis start sometime later this week.

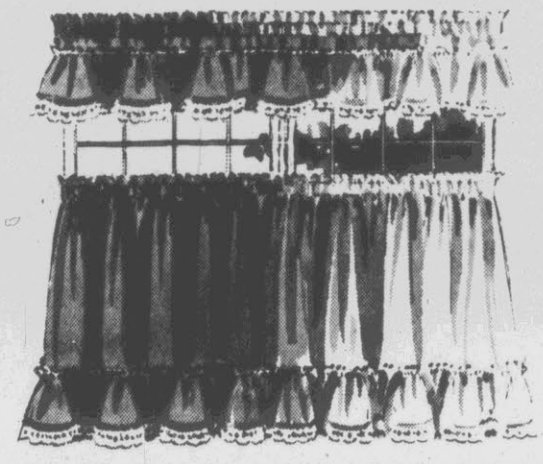

Glemp, at the Vatican Saturday to inaugurate a Polish pilgrim's hostel named after Polish-born Pope John Paul II, invited the pope to visit Poland next year for the 600th anniversary of the Black Madonna at Jasna Gora, Poland's holiest shrine.

"I wouldn't know how to resist," John Paul responded, although not directly accepting. He was last in Poland in 1979.

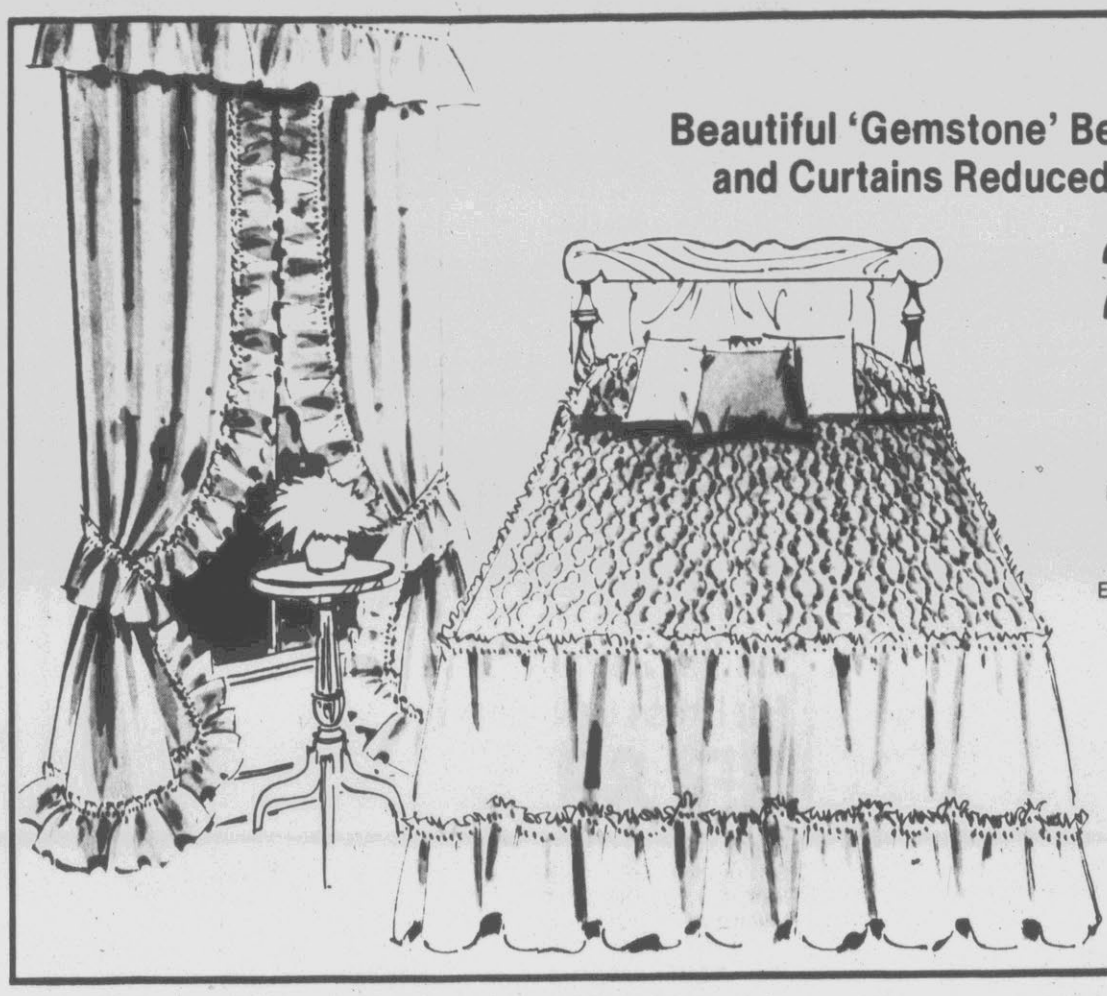

Poland's Communist Party daily Trybuna Ludu said: "There is a long way ...to the genuine formation of a front of national accord...and this way will, in all likelihood, not be strewn with roses.

Shuttle Flight Set Thursday

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space officials Saturday rescheduled Launch II of the space shuttle Columbia for next Thursday, setting up a special birthday celebration for one of its pilots, astronaut Richard Truly, who turns 44 that day.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials made the decision after certifying that two contaminated power units that halted a launch attempt on Wednesday are now ready to fly.

Analysis indicated that had the units flown Wednesday, they probably would have performed OK. "It's not absolutely certain, but the tests appear to indicate that," said NASA spokeswoman Theresa Foley.

Dirty oil has been flushed from the units and their filters have been replaced. If it had been necessary to install new units, the launch could not have been attempted until the week of Nov. 15.

Launch director George Page gave the order to start a renewed countdown at 8 a.m. EST Tuesday, aiming for liftoff of Columbia on her second mission at 7:30 a.m. Thursday.

Word of the new date was passed to Truly and astronaut Joe Engle at their training base at the Johnson Space Center in Houston. This is the fourth launch date they've had; the others, Sept. 30, Oct. 9 and Nov. 4, were wiped out by technical problems.

For Truly, born Nov. 12, 1937, in Fayette, Miss., the two solid fuel rockets that help propel Columbia into orbit could be the biggest birthday candles ever.

The astronauts came within 31 seconds of flying last Wednesday, only to have the countdown clock stopped dead when high pressure was detected in the lubricating systems of two of the ship's three auxiliary power units.

The APUs, which weigh 88 pounds each, drive the hydraulic lines that swivel the main engines on liftoff and move the body and wing flaps and rudder that control the vehicle during re-entry and landing.

Technicians worked non-stop in three shifts to resolve the problem. They drained lubricating oil from the two suspect units, flushed the plumbing, removed and inspected the filters, installed new filters and refilled each unit with three quarts of oil — a special blend developed for military use which costs $5 a quart.

NASA reported Saturday that the filters were found to be clogged with a material produced by a chemical reaction between the lubricating oil, water and the hydrazine fuel that powers the units. A small amount of hydrazine apparently leaked through a pressure seal into the lubricating system.

"It was concluded," the agency said, "that the impurities did not degrade the lubricating properties of the oil and that the size of the impurities would not lead to a clogging of any passages in the lubricating system."

"Getting to a Thursday launch is a very tight schedule but one which the mission management team feels can be made," said NASA's L. Michael Weeks.

At the launch pad, crews were completing the APU work and getting ready for another countdown start.

Columbia had yet another problem Friday. Two of its fragile heat-resistent tiles on the tail wing were slightly damaged when hit by a flashlight that fell about 100 feet from a workman's tether.

"The two white tiles were patched and fixed; there is no problem now," said NASA spokesman Dick Young.

Services Held For Haitians

MIAMI (AP) — Wailing, fainting Haitians packed into a church here Saturday to mourn 10 countrymen who died with 23 others while trying to reach Florida's shores.

Pastors from Roman Catholic, Episcopal and Protestant churches gave euglogies in English and Creole for the dead, whose bodies washed up on Hillsboro Beach when their rickety sailboat broke up off the coast Oct. 26.

Five hundred mourners packed the pews, aisles and balconies of the United House of Prayer in Miami's Little Haiti.

Highlighted by the melancholic, powerful voice of Haitian soloist Farah Juste, the ceremony was an intense, emotional honoring of the dead by a congregation that was in large part composed of other boat people. Three women fainted.

The Rev. Thomas Johnson described the dead as "symbols of the exodus of the Haitian people. They are men and women who lost their lives searching for freedom."

Thirty-four refugees survived the accident at Hillsboro Beach, 30 miles north of Miami. They are being held at an immigration service detention camp near Miami.

The other 23 dead were returned to Haiti and buried Friday in Port-au-Prince, the Haitian capitol.

Haitian refugee groups had wanted to bury all 33 in the United States. After protests from the Haitian government, the State Department agreed that victims who had relatives in the United States would be buried here and the others returned to the improverished island.

India To Double Its Population?

WASHINGTON (AP) — India, already the world's second most populous country, will have about one billion people by the year 2001 and is likely to double its current population in 40 years, a new study said Saturday.

"Unfortunately, there are no feasible shortcuts in the immense task of slowing the growth rate of India's already very large population, whose doubling over the next four decades seems to us to be almost inescapable," concluded Pravin and Leela Visaria.

Their study, "India's Population: Second and Growing," was published by the Population Reference Bureau, a Washington-based organization studying world population trends. The Visarias teach at the Sadar Patel Institute of Economic and Social Research in Ahmedabad, Gujarat, India.

After a four-year decline, India's family planning program is starting to make a comeback, the study reports, spurred by a 1981 census that showed a population of 684 million, 12 million more than had been projected.

Family planning in India peaked in 1976-77 but that was followed by a backlash against the coercive tactics used at the time and interest is only now showing increased strength, the report said.

However, the Visarias doubt that a compulsory program would be effective.

"This could reduce the temptation to adopt family planning to meet short term (financial) needs. It would also help substitute for children as a form of old-age insurance," they wrote.

They urged more research in contraceptives, particularly in the use of implants, anti-pregnancy vaccine, nasal sprays and injectible contraceptives.

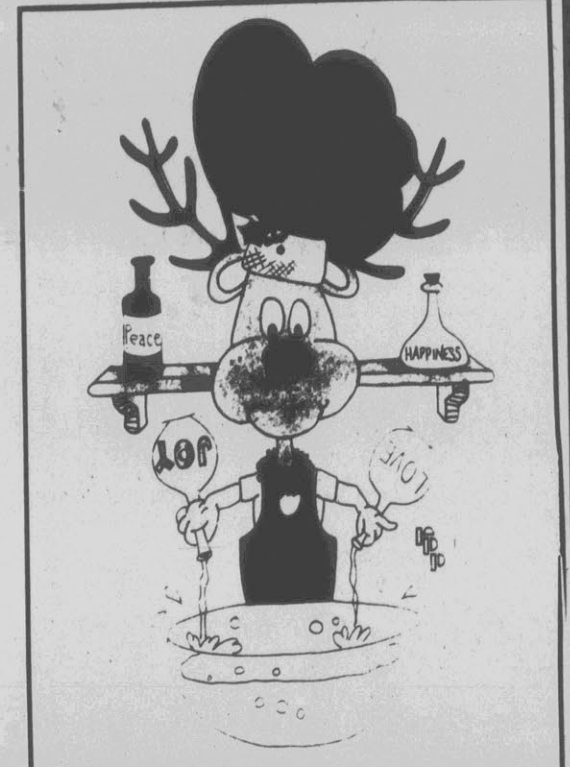

Government projections have called for the birth rate to drop to 2.3 children per woman — the replacement level — by 1996.

But this seems unlikely, the Visarias conclude, considering the high reproduction rate indicated by the new census results.

Thus, they wrote, "it is virtually inevitable that India's population will approach or exceed one billion by 2001."

"In our view, the immediate need for India is to launch a vigorous educational campaign aimed at both couples in the reproductive ages and young people aged 10 to 18 who will form families in the near future," the Visarias wrote.

"We believe that most Indian town dwellers and villagers already feel the pressures of rising population density — job and housing shortages, overcrowded buses and trains, smaller and smaller landholdings," the Visarias concluded. "However, many of them need to be educated to think in the abstract about the consequences of individual behavior and to abandon the traditional attitude of accepting things as they come."

Families Unplug TV Sets At Teacher's Urging

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Is there life after television? Fifty families here, egged on by an English teacher who fears that TV keeps people from thinking, will find out this month.

Peter H. Hufstader, a teacher at the private Wheeler School, says about 11 percent of the 454 families who send their children to Wheeler have signed a pledge to unplug the tube for the month of November.

He issued the challenge to students and their parents as a "gimmick" to draw attention to his pet contention: "Children who are watching a great deal of TV and not reading and listening don't become good readers or good handlers of the language."

He does not suggest that parents permanently banish the tube. But he argues that too many families switch the TV on in the morning and leave it "mumbling in the corner like an insane relative."

Hufstader has written a booklet for the parents, "A Family-Based Reading Program," that contains, among other things, ways to encourage children to read and tips on how to cultivate proper use of television in the home.

Priscilla Wolff's family is among those who have agreed to go cold turkey.

"We've unplugged it and it's just sitting there staring at us. It looks kind of sad," she said.

"At first, the children expressed disbelief. 'None? No TV?' they asked. But they're doing all right. As a last resort, my 11-year-old son took out a book the first evening and started reading. He read all night," she said with a laugh.

One of the parents who ignored the challenge, Rosemary Wittels, said her daughter enjoyed such shows as "Sesame Street" and "Mister Rogers." Mrs. Wittels said she doesn't believe television interferes with her 4-year-old daughter's emerging reading skills, partly because the child watches relatively little.

Hufstader, who heads the English department at Wheeler, which enrolls students in nursery classes through 12th grade, cites studies as well as "20 years of observation as a teacher," to support his view that television is "overpowering our ability to use language and to think intelligently."

While recognizing that TV is here to stay, he urges parents to encourage reading as an alternative.

"As nearly as we can tell, the good readers at Wheeler were read to as babies, by parents who very early took their infants on their laps and led them lovingly and entertainingly through childhood nursery stories and fantasies," he said.

Hufstader has several suggestions for controlling television use in the home. Among them: "Do not allow children to watch TV 'because there is nothing else to do'." Instead, children should be required to justify to their parents why they should be permitted to watch a certain program, he said.

Mrs. Wolff said her two sons used to watch a lot of television out of boredom. Will her television be back on in December?

"We don't know what will happen," Mrs. Wolff said. But at least "the children will have learned there is life after television."

Storm Katrina Dies Far Out In Atlantic

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Katrina, likely the last of the season, dissipated over the western Atlantic Saturday, leaving behind two dead in Cuba and some crop damage and many empty cocktail glasses in the Bahamas.

In its final advisory on the late-blooming storm, the National Hurricane Center reported at 11 a.m. EST that reports from ships and reconnaissance aircraft indicated Katrina had been absorbed into a large nontropical low pressure system.

The remains of the storm were located about 600 miles east of the northern Bahamas and speeding east northeastward about 35 mph.

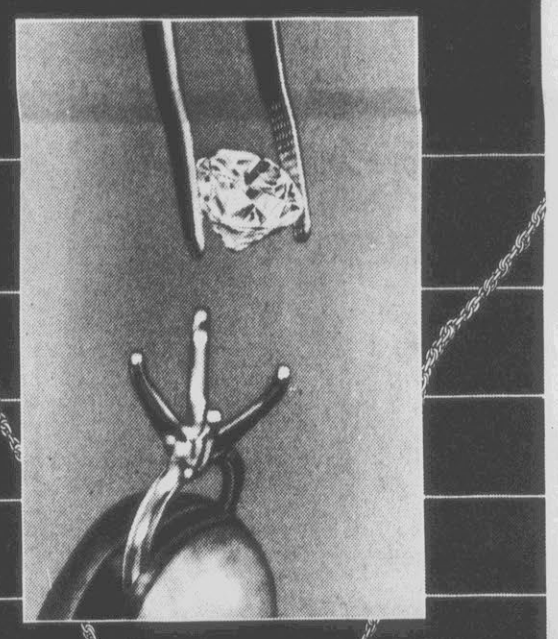

Forecaster John Hope said the 11th tropical tempest of the 1981 season, which ends Nov. 30, no longer posed a threat to land, but advised shipping interests to exercise caution until the storm completely blew itself out.

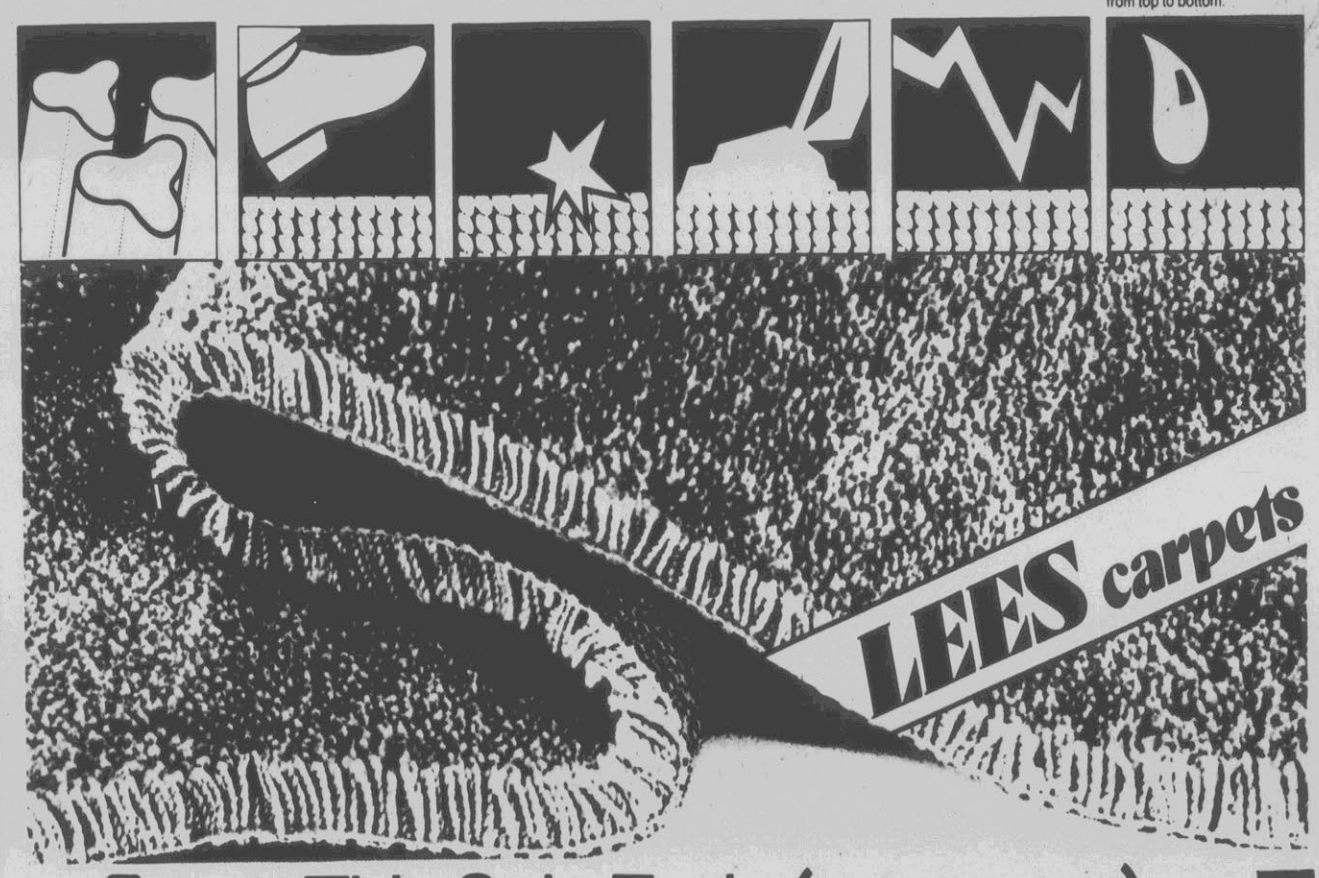

Katrina sprang up south of Cuba earlier in the week, built its winds to 85 mph and slammed ashore on the island Thursday.

In addition to the two people who drowned in the resulting flood waters, Havana radio reported that 290,000 others were routed from their homes.

The storm spent most of its fury on Cuba's towering mountain peaks, and when it broke clear of the island early Friday morning it began moving so fast it did not have time to rebuild its winds before making another soggy landing in the Bahamas, where it dropped 14 inches of rain.

Church Council To Seek Acts For Justice

By DAVID E. ANDERSON
UPI Religion Writer

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The National Council of Churches ended a three-day celebration of its past Saturday, ready to renew and refine its identity but certain in the conviction that faith must lead to action on behalf of justice.

It was a faith and conviction symbolized three decades ago when the leaders of U.S. Protestantism founded the Council, lighting a candle they hoped would grow to be a beacon for church unity and social justice.

Today, a somber mood pervades the 32-member NCC, testifying that the darkness of Christian division and secular injustice is as powerful now as ever. Even some friends of the Council fear its flickering candle of unity is in danger.

The three-day multi-media celebration, dubbed the Ecumenical Event by Council officials, brought together more than 700 local and regional church leaders, theologians and NCC staff for worship and song, small seminars and large meetings all aimed at exploring ways to bring the Council's twin concerns of Christian unity and social activism to the member denomination's 40 million members.

No resolutions were passed or statements issued during the Event but earlier in the week, the Council's 266-member Governing Board met to elect officers and act on a host of items that, together with the three-day celebration, will shape the Council for the next three years.

"Our challenge," outgoing NCC president M. William Howard said, "is to demonstrate in a non-doctrinaire ministry that the Good News of Christ is life for all ages.

"Let us spend our time and our resources to help the people articulate their faith in their own words," he said.

The need for spiritual renewal and a non-apologetic statement of faith pervaded both the Governing Board meeting and the Ecumenical Event.

So, too, however, did a sober sense of outrage and dismay at the secular direction the nation is taking, with participants speaking strongly on the fear of nuclear war and the Reagan economic program which they felt would substantially increase the suffering of the poor.

"I believe the current nuclear arms race is suicidal madness," United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong told the closing plenary session of the Ecumenical Event. "An unconscionable explosion of military expenditures is sending shockwaves across Europe and threatens to plunge the human family into an ultimate unwinnable war."

Armstrong, 57, was elected to a three-year term as president of the NCC earlier in the week and his speech closing the meeting was his first appearance before the Council.

ROLLER COASTER RAILROAD — A section of railroad track near Strelna, Alaska, looks more like a roller coaster track due to changes in the land contour caused by permafrost thawing. Permafrost is defined as land or rock matter which has remained colder than 32 degrees for two or more years. Thawing of the permafrost causes the land to settle, creating major engineering problems. Study Shows State Taxes Nearly Tripled

WASHINGTON (AP) — The amount of money state governments collect from taxpayers has almost tripled since 1970 to reach $607 a year for every man, woman and child in 1980, according to a new study to be published Sunday.

The report by the Tax Foundation Inc. said state taxes totaled $137.1 billion in fiscal year 1980, a gain of 186 percent since $48 billion in 1970. In 1970, state taxes averaged $237 for every man, woman and child.

"State taxes averaged double-digit growth in the 1970s for the second consecutive decade, and more than quintupled from 1965 to 1980," said the report by the non-profit research organization. The figures were not adjusted for inflation.

Alaska collected the most state taxes on a per capita basis in 1980 — $3,594 for each state resident, said the report. Hawaii was No. 2 with $1,035 per capita, followed by Delaware at $867: Wyoming, $824: California, $818; and Minnesota, $786.

Rounding out the top 10 were: New York, $724; Wisconsin, $715; New Mexico, $712, and Washington, $706.

At the bottom of the list in 1980 were: New Hampshire at $290, South Dakota $392, Tennessee $411, Missouri $426, and Ohio $441.

Income taxes from individuals and corporations accounted for 36.8 percent of the total collected in 1980.

"Life changes so fast, why on earth can't my life insurance keep up?"

IT CAN NOW!

"... Why in the world can't I earn current interest rates on my life insurance cash value?" You can, now.

"Why in this space age can't I put additional money into my cash value and earn tax-deferred interest?" You can, now.

"Why can't I change my premium payments if necessary?" You can, now.

"I can now what?" Change the amount of your life insurance as your life changes. Earn current interest on your cash value. Change the amount and frequency of your premium payments. All in one policy!

"How can I do that?" With UniversaLife, from Georgia International Life.

"Oh, I've read about universal life plans. I guess they're all alike?" No! Georgia International Life has the UniversaLife its current interest rate is keyed to a guaranteed index.

"What's a guaranteed index?" It's a contractual guarantee that the current interest rate is determined each calendar quarter based on a formula index using yields of short and long-term government securities.

Currently, that guaranteed rate is 12.56% paid on cash values in excess of $1,000.

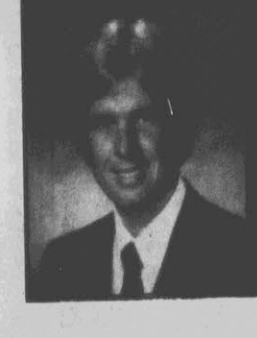

The first $1,000 is credited with 4% interest, which is also the guaranteed minimum. Since you won't pay taxes on this interest while it accumulates, your cash value increases rapidly. See your attorney or accountant for tax-related advice.

"But with so much flexibility, how will I keep track of my life insurance plan?" Georgia International Life will send you an annual report showing by month every transaction made in your account: Premium payments, expense charges, cost of insurance, interest credited.

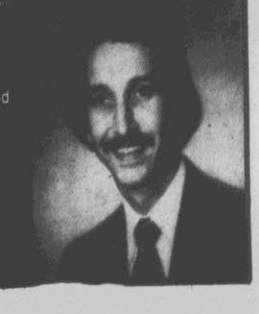

"I've been looking the universe over for something like that. How can I make my life insurance plan UniversaLife? Call, or have your agent call, a Georgia International Life representative!

Virginia Democrats Rush To Cash In On Victory

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The telephones in the office of Lt. Gov. Charles Robb are ringing off the hook with calls from triumphant Democrats congratulating Virginia's next governor — and wanting to know where to send their resumes.

David McCloud, the governor-elect's aide fielding the calls, said he's becoming "one of the most well-qualified telephone operators in the state" in his job as transition director.

Robb will be able to appoint more than 2,300 people to positions in state government in his four-year term. And McCloud has prepared a 294-page report to help Robb organize his administration during the brief 2½-month transition between election and inauguration.

Though Robb does not really begin to govern until January, "the transition is an extremely important time," according to University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato, "because the governor is watched very carefully, and little actions become messages writ large."

In putting the transition report together, McCloud said he drew on similar documents written for other governors, including one drafted by Sabato in 1977 for the unsuccessful campaign of Democratic Lt. Gov. Henry E. Howell.

"It tries to set forth the issues that the governor-elect is going to face and have to make decisions on — as best we can analyze them — in the future," McCloud said.

One of "the most critical areas" covered, McCloud said, is how to cope with the Reagan administration's budget and tax cuts. But it also deals with the more "mechanical things" like 1,060 people Robb must appoint to boards and commissions by July 1.

Job-hungry Democrats may be in for a shock if they think now is the time to cash in on the spoils of victory. Only a relative handful of the jobs Robb can appoint them to pays a salary or wields any real power.

There are positions that pay well, of course, such as the governor's Cabinet secretaries who head state agencies.

The Cabinet members chosen by Robb will direct the departments of Administration and Finance, Commerce and Resources, Education, Human Resources, Public Safety, and Transportation.

There also are positions of great power or prestige, such as membership on the boards of the state's universities, or on the Highways and Transportation Commission, an agency that controls hundreds of jobs and deals with millions of dollars in road contracts.

But there are many more with only limited appeal, such as advisory or study commissions on aging or Youth Government Day or Virginia dark-fired tobacco.

Nevertheless, Robb already is being urged to reward Democratic loyalists by replacing as many of the people appointed during the last 12 years of Republican rule as he can.

"There's going to be some changes recommended," predicted House Majority Leader Thomas Moss, D-Norfolk.

The General Assembly has purposely withheld confirmation of some of Republican Gov. John Dalton's appointments, Moss said, to ensure they can be replaced by people of the new governor's choosing.

Robb told reporters Wednesday he did not know how political he would be as governor. He promised during the campaign to seek the best qualified people for service in state government.

Cancer Society Backs Proposal For Bigger Labels On Cigarettes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Cancer Society board Saturday voted to join the Federal Trade Commission in a search for bigger, better and more numerous health hazard warnings on cigarette packages.

The new attack on "the reservoir of ignorance about the dangers of smoking" was in the form of a proposal, authorized during closing sessions of the ACS annual meeting.

There was no smoking as the 117-member board voted in the proposal — the typical situation during the four-day meeting.

"No smoking signs" were not in evidence and there were ashtrays. But anyone who dared to smoke would get a lot of stares, an ACS official said.

The proposal was part of a report from the Committee on Tobacco and Cancer. It was outlined in the draft of a letter of comment on an FTC staff report claiming present warnings on cigarette packs are "worn out" and "ineffective."

The Tobacco Institute was not immediately available for comment on the proposal.

Excerpts from the draft of the letter that will be sent to the FTC:

—"The American Cancer Society is willing to work with the FTC to create and test a series of powerful warning labels for cigarette packages and advertising."

—"The Society ... recognizes that the size of warning labels is too modest, that the current message is much too imprecise, and certainly too familiar — as the FTC report shows. It is, indeed, worn out."

—"The American Cancer Society believes ... that a stronger design is required to make a warning label visible and effective, that it should be made larger than at present, and that multiple specific warnings rotated in sequence or at random would probably be more effective than any single warning, no matter how detailed the latter might be."

—"It is ... shocking to learn from the FTC report that about 20 percent of the American public, or 30 million adults, do not even know that smoking causes cancer. Forty percent, 60 million people, do not know that smoking causes most lung cancer."

— "Although tobacco and cigarettes bring in gross revenues of $22.8 billion a year, including more than $6 billion in taxes, the cost to the country in smoking-caused absenteeism, ill health, medical care and death far exceeds the income."

Hunt Tightens Freeze On State Jobs

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has ordered a tightening of the hiring freeze in state government and on employee travel expenses because of a slump in state tax collections last month, budget officials said.

State budget officer John Williams warned members of the Cabinet and Council of State that preliminary revenue figures for October showed about a 5 percent growth rate for the General Fund over last year, about half of the 10.3 percent growth rate on which the 1982 fiscal year budget is based.

The fiscal year began July 1.

Williams said the administration has had a hiring freeze on state jobs for more than a year, but it has not been strictly enforced.

"The essence is that we're going to do this belt-tightening to avoid across-the-board cuts if the revenues do not come back up.

"We can manage it. We're not thinking about laying off anybody or cutting any raise," he said.

Williams said a 5 percent pay raise for teachers and employees, which was approved in October and will become effective Jan. 1, is not threatened, but its continuation in the second year will depend on revenue results of the third and fourth quarters of this year.

Administration budget officials blamed the slower growth on an artificial drop in the franchise tax due to collection procedures.

Marvin K. Dorman, deputy state budget officer, said taxes on sales and personal income had shown healthy growth in October, with personal income tax collections increasing from 12 percent to 13 percent and sales tax collections going from 9 percent to 10 percent.

The revenue projections for the General Fund were increased by the Legislature last month by a stroke of the pen, but legislators resisted pressures by the Hunt administration to set them even higher.

Williams said the Legislature's projections might turn out to be more accurate than the administration's.

"I think we're being very cautious," he said. "I don't have any concern about who was right or who was wrong."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles and state Schools Superintendent A. Craig Phillips said if a decrease in revenues force cuts in the state budget, local school units might panic.

"Less than 30 days ago, the General Assembly was laboring under a whole different set of assumptions," Boyles said.

Phillips said the developments make the education board look "pretty irresponsible," because the board accepted the state budget that was adopted in setting salary schedules for the education system.

Coastal Ferry Service Restored

OCRACOKE, N.C. (AP) — Ferry service between Ocracoke and Swan Quarter, interrupted Thursday when the Governor Edward Hyde hit a submerged object as it entered Pamlico Sound, was restored Saturday morning, the state Department of Transportation said.

David O'Neal said the Silver Lake left Ocracoke with 11 cars and 21 passengers at 6:30 a.m. He said the Silver Lake will continue making the run until the Governor Hyde returns from Jacksonville, Fla., where it was sent for repairs.

He said the repairs are scheduled to take several months.

The service was interrupted when the Governor Hyde ran into something as it left the mouth of a channel into the Pamlico Sound about 7 a.m. Thursday with 23 passengers aboard. The object caused a 5½-foot gash in one hold and seven holes in another hold.

The ferry began taking on water and the ferry issued a distress call, which was answered by the Coast Guard.

The ferry managed to limp 10 miles into port at Swan Quarter, where divers assessed the damage and temporary repairs were made to enable the vessel to go to Jacksonville for further repairs.

Max Powell, a spokesman for the Transportation Department which oversees ferry operations for the state, said the vessel was never in danger of sinking or tipping over. He said the most serious problem would have been the possibility the vessel might run aground.

The Coast Guard sent two boats to the scene of the accident and located the object, but they were unable to retrieve it.

Richard Chirnside, a spokesman for the Coast Guard, said Saturday that the object has been identified as a part of the Lehigh, a dredge that sank several years ago.

He said high winds have prevented recovery efforts, and a buoy has been placed over the wreckage until Coast Guard boats can remove it.

Ben O'Neal, director of the ferry division, identified the captain of the Governor Hyde as Harry F. O'Neal. He said the captain was not at fault because he was in the channel at the time of the accident.

UNC Official Dies

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Frank J. Schwentker, special assistant to University of North Carolina President William C. Friday, died Saturday morning at his home. He was 75.

Schwentker came to Chapel Hill in 1954 as the Julian Price lecturer on insurance. He retired from the faculty in 1973 to become Friday's special assistant.

In his 19 years on the School of Business Administration faculty, Schwentker led the insurance industry in the state in promoting professional education for underwriters and played an important advisory role in shaping the state's policies toward the industry.

He also designed new and more rigorous licensing examinations for insurance agents at the request of the North Carolina Department of Insurance.

Students Enter Art Contest

School students from 24 North Carolina counties will enter the Agricultural Art Contest Sponsored by the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and Powell Manufacturing Co.

The art competition is open to all elementary and high school students. Each school will hold competition on the local level and their finalists will compete for nine festival prizes. Final entries will be judged by a panel of art experts selected by the festival.

Every piece of art work will have an agricultural theme. The winner's work will be exhibited at the Tobacco Farm Show located at the Farmer's Warehouse in Greenville during the Tobacco Festival, Nov. 17-19. Prizes to be awarded will total $1,125, plus nine engraved plaques.

Kay Warren, executive director of the festival, noted, "Last year our entries in the art contest were outstanding and we expect this year's group to be just as outstanding."

Art Society's Fund-Raiser For Museum

Ball Offers Winter Motif

The Fine Arts Ball, sponsored annually by the East Carolina Art Society, was held at the Greenville Country Club Friday evening. The ball is one of the Greenville Museum of Art's major fund-raising events.

The entrance to the country club, which was prepared in a contemporary art deco style, was flanked on either side by branches of winter trees glistening with miniature lights and candlelight. Chairmen of the ball, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Cheatham III, received the 324 guests in the foyer as the activities for the evening began at 8 o'clock with a buffet dinner.

The ballroom was illuminated by twinkling white lights on numerous large trees. Tall black columns were capped with large silver sprays of cattails and bamboo grass with cascading silver weeping willow.

The centerpiece for the buffet table and individual tables consisted of an assortment of crystal candleholders containing lighted candles placed on mirrored tiles. Branches with random touches of fushia completed the setting.

Music for dancing was provided by the Contrast Dance Band under the direction of Joe Distefano.

A highlight of the evening was the giving of three books of art: :"The World of Bob Timberlake," "Mary Cassatt" and "The Impressionists."

This year, in conjunction with the ball, the art museum has published a numbered limited edition poster featuring the sculpture "Seated Figure" by Wes Crawley. Those attending the ball received the art poster.

Special guests attending were John Cramer of Raleigh and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tull of Morehead City.

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Cheatham as committee chairmen were: Mrs. Sam C. Williams, decorations; Mrs. William H. Taft Jr., publicity; Mrs. John L. Howard and Mrs. Steven M. White, invitations; Mrs. Clifton W. Everett Jr., buffet; Mrs. William S. Corbitt III, desserts; Mrs. J. Edwin Clement and Mrs. Ira M. Hardy II, tables; Mrs. Max Ray Joyner, treasurer; Mrs. Bruce B. Sugg Jr., special events, and Ms. Mary Ann Pennington, poster.

Officers of the art society include: Mrs. William Corbitt Jr., president; John Howard, vice president; Mrs. Jack Koontz, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sellers Crisp, secretary; Frank Wooten Jr., treasurer, and Mrs. William Monroe, immediate past president.

Directors are: Mrs. Leighton Blount Jr.; Mrs. Clifton Everett Jr.; Charles Gaskins; Walter Pories; Chuck Chamberlin; William Freelove; Mrs. Sam Williams; Mrs. Rufus Knott; Mrs. Bruce Sugg; Grover Maxwell; Gerald Crane and Joe Gantz.

Proceeds from the ball are used to help maintain the present Greenville Museum of Art and to aid in the expansion of future facilities. The museum is an affiliate gallery of the North Carolina Museum of Art.

Minister Balks At Book

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — A Lincoln County minister has circulated a petition in an attempt to force the county library to remove a book from its shelves.

The Rev. Louis McKinney, pastor of Harvest Time Baptist Church near Cat Square, said the book, "How does It Feel? Exploring the World of Your Senses," is wicked, perverted and pornographic.

He said he found the book while browsing through the Lincolnton-Lincoln County Library in April. He said it shows pictures of nude men and women, including pictures of a nun undressing.

He said the book also deals with the occult and says God is a creation of the human mind.

"The thing is wicked," McKinney said.

He said he confronted librarian Rich Rosenthal about the book and that Rosenthal said he didn't see anything wrong with it.

McKinney said he has gathered about 62 signatures on the petition.

The petition says that any library card holder over 6 years of age can check out the book "with its many naked scenes, massage scenes and equally perverted viewpoints. We the undersigned wholly condemn this book as unfit for reading.

"Furthermore, we the undersigned question the qualifications of those leaders who would deem this book fit for the taxpayers of Lincoln County."

Rosenthal could not be reached for comment.

Craig Ritter, director of libraries for the Gaston-Lincoln Regional Libraries and Rosenthal's boss, said he doesn't intend to remove the book from either library.

He said McKinney had not gone through proper channels and filled out forms required before the library staff reviews a book.

Ex-Stock Girl Is Chain's New Executive

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A jar of coconut jellybeans, the new occupant's favorite, is positioned on the desk in the president's office, and a bouquet of balloons and flowers sent by the sales personnel brightens the nearby table.

Even her attitude reinforces an upbeat, almost festive mood, which Judi Hofer, the newly appointed president of Meier & Frank Co., has good reason to maintain.

Ms. Hofer, a 40-year-old Hillsboro native, returns to the Portland area as the hometown girl who has made good, achieving a goal she set for herself before she left.

By nature a seemingly positive and candid person, she willingly admits she's made no secret of her ambition to become a store president, and a Hollywood scriptwriter could hardly have done one better than to see that ambition realized in the same store in which Ms. Hofer got her start in retailing as a stock girl.

But during an interview in her plush 12th-floor office in the downtown store, Ms. Hofer acknowledged that "it can be difficult to work right under the eyes of those in the corporate office, but it can also be positive."

She was previously executive vice president and general merchandise manager of the Famous-Barr stores in St. Louis, after other merchandising jobs here and in San Francisco.

With her recent appointment, Ms. Hofer joins an exclusive club, the handful of women at the helm of major retail stores across the country.

Ms. Hofer points out that she also has a distinction among them, that of operating the chain with the largest annual sales volume, a reported $175 million. In spite of this singular honor, the new chief executive officer acknowledges personal distaste for being identified as a woman executive and for the concept of "networking" among women in the same professional field.

As a woman, "the only obligation I feel is to perform my functions so that I set a good example. It (her sex) has only been an advantage for me in retailing," she said.

As an administrator, she added, "I look at people relatively squarely as to where their abilities lie. I don't distinguish between men and women."

Leadership of Oregon's oldest department store chain now belongs to a retailing pro who earned a business degree at Oregon State University and then, at the behest of her mother, earned additional job security via a teaching credential awarded by Portland State University.

But teaching "wasn't for me," said the woman whose merchandising instincts were kindled when she first came to Meier & Frank at the age of 15.

Ms. Hofer didn't marry, committing herself instead to 12-hour days and frequent business travel and recognizing that a woman with high aspirations in retailing "has to make a commitment a little further out" than her male counterpart.

She describes herself as "a not very self-possessed person," one who eschews professional manicures and does her own hair, although the model-like leanness of her 5-foot-7½ figure reflects a deliberate effort over the past year.

Cuba Reacts To Haig's Plan For Possible Military Action

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Scare tactic or not, Secretary of State Alexander Haig's desire for the Pentagon to come up with possible U.S. military actions against Cuba has succeeded in getting the attention of Fidel Castro's government.

Raul Roa Kouri, Cuba's ambassador to the United Nations, delivered a note to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim on Thursday protesting what he said were U.S. plans to blockade or bomb Cuba.

"I believe that there is a danger of either a naval blockade, of economic actions, or of persecuting the companies that do business with us, and even of an air strike against key economic points of Cuba," Roa told reporters later.

The perceived U.S. threat also has prompted Cuba to place its military forces on alert.

"We know military action is being prepared," said one Cuban diplomat in Washington. "The only question is whether it will be carried out."

Haig indirectly acknowledged Thursday the accuracy of reports that he had asked the Pentagon to examine options for possible military action in El Salvador and against Cuba and Nicaragua.

The Reagan administration's perception — emphatically denied by Cuba — is that Cuba continues to supply weaponry to Salvadoran insurgents.

It is not clear whether military force is seriously being considered or whether the administration is merely engaging in scare tactics aimed at inducing Castro to end his alleged support of Central American guerrilla movements.

But, because of the large stake the Soviet Union has in preserving the Castro government, some analysts believe the administration will take no action which would threaten Castro's survival.

According to these experts, any U.S. military move against Cuba could trigger Soviet retaliation in an area of first importance to the United States, such as Berlin.

Haig, however, may feel compelled to take some action in light of his repeated promises to go to the "source" in dealing with the turmoil in El Salvador. He has left no doubt of his belief that Cuba is the "source" of much of El Salvador's civil strife.

Since taking office, the administration has taken only limited steps against Cuba — tightening an economic embargo to reduce circumvention and planning to begin beaming anti-Castro radio broadcasts to the island in a few months.

Various sources said consideration has been given to establishing a naval blockade to prevent Soviet oil shipments from reaching Cuba and to unleashing anti-Castro Cuban exiles in Florida.

The sources refused to be identified and their accounts could not be substantiated by State Department planners.

An editorial in the Communist Party newspaper Granma last Tuesday likened the current situation to the periods before the Bay of Pigs invasion of 1961 and the Cuban missile crisis of 1962.

As in the two earlier conflicts, the United States is "creating a climate favorable for aggression," the editorial said.

Cuba also has been particularly troubled by an alleged message sent by Haig to unnamed foreign governments last month contending that Cuba flew 500 to 600 special forces troops to Nicaragua for possible deployment in El Salvador.

Cuba has denied the allegation and other State Department officials have said the information on the subject is inconclusive.

Nonetheless, Cuban officials here claim that Haig's message left no doubt about his belief the information was authentic. In the same message, the diplomats claim, Haig threatened action against Cuba.

Asked about the alleged Haig message, U.S. officials said they were not aware of its existence.

Eva Braun: Is She Dead?

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — New dental evidence uncovered by a California research team strongly suggests that the woman found next to Adolf Hitler in his Berlin bunker was not his mistress, Eva Braun, a British medical journal reports.

The findings indicate Miss Braun was buried elsewhere, or may even have escaped alive, the British Medical Association News Review said in its November issue.

Miss Braun was 24 years old when she met Hitler in 1936 through her Nazi photographer employer. She spent nine years as the Fuhrer's mistress before marrying him in the last days of his life.

Soviet soldiers who captured the burning German capital in the spring of 1945 came upon 13 bodies near the bunker, and Soviet authorities cited autopsy records to prove the bodies of Hitler and Miss Braun were among them.

The British medical journal said a 10-year study of World War II era records revealed the Soviet evidence on Hitler matches the Nazi leader's known dental records on 26 separate points, including a unique "window crown" on one tooth and bridgework in Hitler's lower right jaw.

However, "The odontological data virtually eliminates the previous assumption that (the woman's body found by the Soviets) was the remains of Eva Braun," the BMA review said.

It presented evidence that a dental bridge made for Miss Braun and used to link the corpse with Hitler's mistress had in reality never been installed in her mouth.

Several teeth found with the body showed extensive cavities while Miss Braun's dental records showed the same teeth cavity-free, it said. Moreover, it claimed two cosmetic "Hollywood crowns" made of fire-proof porcelain should have been found with the body but weren't.

The medical journal also said the woman whose remains were found by the Soviets had suffered extensive shrapnel wounds and had hemorrhaged. Miss Braun is believed by many to have committed suicide by taking poison.

The BMA review based its report on the findings of a research team led by Reider F. Sognnaes, a professor of oral biology and anatomy at the University of California at Los Angeles.

It quoted Sognnaes as saying "The Russian identification (of Miss Braun) would never stand up in court."

Sognnaes believes Miss Braun may still be buried in the rubble of the Chancellery, now part of East Berlin, according to the journal.

Or, "It is possible Eva Braun escaped." it quoted him as saying.

"After all, there were a number of men in the bunker unaccounted for who could have helped her. No one actually witnessed her death and there are inconsistencies in the accounts of those who supposedly took Eva's body outside the bunker."

Hitler's final hours have been documented by aides who were with him in the bunker, 50 feet below Berlin's Reich Chancellery building, on April 30, 1945.

With the city surrounded by the Soviets and the bunker under artillery bombardment, Hitler assembled his officers and staff and, Eva at his side, bade them farewell. The two then retired to their wood-paneled sitting room.

A short time later, one shot was heard. The Fuhrer's deputy, Martin Bormann, and other aides burst in to find Hitler slumped on a sofa, his Walther pistol at his side and a bullet through his head. Beside him lay Miss Braun, dead after biting into a cyanide capsule.

Aides said the bodies were carried up to the Chancellery garden under shell-fire and burned. It is there that the Soviets found the two charred bodies, along with 11 others.

An autopsy was conducted on them May 18, 1945, at a military hospital in the Berlin suburb of Buch. On the basis of the autopsy, the Soviets concluded that Hitler and Miss Braun had died.

The BMA review said Sognnaes' team recently obtained a handwritten report by dental technician Fritz Echtmann testifying that the gold bridge with four teeth he made for Miss Braun had never been installed because there was no time.

The document led researchers to dental assistant Kathe Keusermann — "now in her 50s and living quietly in a West German City" — who confirmed the information and filled in details of Miss Braun's dental history, the periodical said.

Mayor Notes 'Marine Week'

Mayor Don McGlohon has proclaimed Nov. 8-14 as Marine Corps Week in Greenville in conjunction with the U.S. Marine Corps' 206th anniversary on Tuesday.

He pointed out that the Marine Corps was created on Nov. 10, 1775, by a resolution of the Continental Congress, "to be formed by men so acquainted with maritime affairs as to be able to serve to advantage by sea on vessels of the Continental Navy."

McGlohon said "the record of the Marine Corps is one which will bear comparison with that of the most famous military organizations of the world's history."

The Marine Corps, he added, "has come to signify all that is highest in military efficiency, soldierly virtue, and the cause of freedom."

Canada's Compromise Leaves Doubts In Dispute

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

Canada's leaders, in what could be likened to a peaceable version of the American Civil War, agreed on a new constitution last week. But in many ways it was as if the South had won.

The settlement reached by Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and the premiers of nine Canadian provinces last Thursday cemented provincial powers in a way that might have pleased the most militant advocates of states' rights in old Dixie.

Transferred to the American scene, Canada's constitutional deal would have meant, for example, that Connecticut and Rhode Island could have remained "wet" in 1919 when the other 46 states approved the Prohibition amendment. Or a pro-slavery state legislature could have ignored the Bill of Rights and shut down the abolitionist press.

Trudeau hailed the compromise accord with the nine provinces — all but French-speaking Quebec — as "a fresh start in meeting the challenge of living together in our beloved country."

But the Canadian prime minister had to make substantial concessions to the strong-willed provincial leaders in order to reach the agreement.

The concessions included a major dilution of his proposed "Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms," and acceptance of a ratification process that allows some provinces to reject constitutional amendments that have been approved nationally.

The constitutional deal, which requires passage by the Canadian and British parliaments, is the culmination of generations of rivalries, distrust and jealousies among Canada's disparate provinces, colonies that were cobbled together in a loose federation by Britain a century ago. In some cases the provinces joined Canada only half-heartedly.

Newfoundland Premier Brian Peckford, in a comment typical of today's provincial attitude, denounced Trudeau's original constitutional proposals as a "grand plan to centralize and homogenize this nation."

The government of the oil-rich province of Alberta told Albertans that Trudeau's suggested amending formula, which envisioned possible national referendums on amendments, could have been used by other Canadians to seize control of Alberta's natural resources.

Stephen Scott, a constitutional law expert at Montreal's McGill University, described Trudeau's final settlement with the provinces as a "complete capitulation."

Scott said he was particularly disappointed with what he called the "toothless charter of rights."

"For example, I would see nothing ... that would stop the legislature of Quebec from closing down all English-language newspapers," he said.

The reform plan will make the British North America Act of 1867, an act of the British Parliament that serves as Canada's constitution, a completely Canadian document. It has remained under British legislative control until now because the Canadian provinces could never agree on what method they would follow to make future amendments.

The provincially proposed amending formula finally accepted by Trudeau requires constitutional changes to have the approval of the national Parliament and seven provinces with 50 percent of the population.

But it allows the three provinces that oppose an amendment to "opt out" — to decide that an amendment affecting provincial powers will not apply in their territory.

Trudeau's compromise on the charter of rights also solidifies provincial autonomy in a way that would be alien to the post-Civil War system in the United States. It concedes to the provinces the power to enact legislation that disregards such charter provisions as freedom of the press and religion, anti-discrimination guarantees and other rights.

South of the border, these issues of federal-versus-state supremacy were largely settled by the Civil War.

"If you go back to before the 13th, 14th, 15th Amendments, to a time before there were restrictions on state sovereignty — that, I suppose, is what we have here now," Scott said.

Even the ultimate question answered in the Civil War — whether a state could secede from the Union — remains essentially unanswered in Canada. The government of Quebec is working toward eventual secession from the Canadian confederation, and the federal government makes clear it will not use force to keep Quebec in.

The Canadian agreement may take on special interest for Americans at a time when a new states' rights movement, involving public lands and revenues, has arisen in the western United States.

The "Sagebrush Rebellion," as it is called, is not secessionist. But it does have an affinity to the Canadian movement in an important way — it, too, is aimed at asserting state control over natural resources, in this case by having millions of acres of federal lands in the West transferred to the states, and by levying hefty taxes on coal and other resources sent out of state.

Thank You!

I would like to express my appreciation to the citizens of Bethel for their support during the November 3 election.

I eagerly look forward to serving the community as its mayor and working with the newly elected town commissioners.

Swedes Mock Soviet Plan

By HARALD MOLLERSTROM
Associated Press Writer

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Four hundred demonstrators, some carrying a cardboard submarine and posters mocking Kremlin proposals for a nuclear-free Nordic zone, converged on the Soviet Embassy in Stockholm Saturday.

There was no response from embassy staffers who were trying to celebrate the anniversary of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution.

The embassy festivities were low-key, apparently because of embarrassment over the recent violation of neutral Sweden's territorial waters by a Soviet submarine believed armed with nuclear-tipped torpedos.

There was a heavy snowfall and temperatures dipped near freezing during the rally organized by the East European Solidarity Committee and several Baltic organizations, mostly made up of anti-Moscow exiles from the Soviet bloc, and the Swedish Liberal Party's youth wing.

Signs such as: "Keep on Sleeping, Europe, Soviet Missiles Will Wake You Up" and "No Soviet Nuclear Subs in the Baltic" referred to the 10-day stalemate which ended Friday when the Soviet sub that ran aground off the Karlskrona naval base Oct. 27 was released.

Sweden said there was evidence the submarine's torpedos were armed with nuclear warheads and called the incident the worst violation of its sovereignty since the end of World War II. Swedes said it raised new questions about Soviet sincerity in proposing a nuclear-free zone of the Nordic area and a public opinion survey showed over a third of Swedes who responded believe Sweden's defenses need to be bolstered.

Other signs bobbing along in the Saturday procession criticized Soviet interference in other nations' domestic matters — "No Soviet Interference in Poland" and "Soviets Get Out of Afghanistan."

The conservative Svenska Dagbladet newspaper said: "For everyone with common sense and elementary knowledge of military and political realities in our part of the world it has long been clear that sweeping communist talk about the Baltic as the 'Sea of Peace' is nothing but propaganda."

The liberal Expressen said: "...Our conception about Sweden, Scandinavia and Europe cannot remain what it used to be...The Soviets activities force us to ask ourselves if the Soviet Union really respects Swedish neutrality. For Swedish opinion neutrality is something that applies in any situation. Now the Soviet Union behaves like it was a question of neutrality for the time being, to be respected as long as it fits them ..."

A poll by the Institute of Market Research published in the liberal Dagens Nyheter on Saturday showed 37 percent of the respondents saying Sweden needs a stronger defense, 49 percent saying present military capabilities are adequate, 7 percent supporting a reduction and 7 percent undecided.

Previous polls have shown an average of 25 percent of the respondents believing Sweden needs to upgrade its defenses and that between 75 percent and 80 percent support the general idea of a strong defense. The new poll shows 90 percent now support the general idea of a strong defense.

Nineteen percent of the respondents also said their view toward the Soviet Union became more negative because of the incident but 80 percent said their attitudes were unchanged.

IMU director Hans Alfredsson said "This has to be seen in the light that many Swedes already held a negative view of the Soviet Union."

NATO Head Sees Soviet Threat

VENICE, Italy (AP) — NATO Commander Gen. Bernard Rogers on Saturday urged the West not to give in to what he called a Soviet military threat, and he called for an "effective deterrent to halt Soviet expansionism."

Rogers spoke as the Soviet Union paraded arms through Moscow's Red Square in the country's celebration of the 1917 revolution that brought the Communists to power. Soviet Defense Minister Dmitry Ustinov said during the festivities that the Kremlin will never let the West achieve military superiority.

At a Venice conference on Soviet strategy, Rogers said Western allies could not agree how to respond to "the growing will and capacity of the Soviet Union in recent years to employ military power for political purposes on a world basis."

The U.S. general who heads the North Atlantic Treaty Organization said Soviet forces were trying to scare Poland in that country's power struggle between the Moscow-backed Communist government and the independent union Solidarity. But Rogers did not elaborate on the Polish situation.

"The Soviets continue their brutal occupation of Afghanistan. At the same time they favor Vietnamese aggression in Southeast Asia," he said.

Just What The Doc Ordered - ECU 66, ETSU 23

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

It was just what the doctor ordered. East Carolina University's football program, seeking to bounce back after a losing season last year, needed a victory over East Tennessee State Saturday afternoon to keep its hopes for a winning slate this year alive.

So kicker Chuck Bushbeck, who was profiled on ABC-TV's pre-game national football show, simply booted a 33-yard field goal and a school record nine extra points while Leon Lawson scored two touchdowns and seven other Pirates added single scores as ECU romped to a 66-23 victory over the Buccaneers from the Tennessee mountains.

Bushbeck, who surpassed the mark of seven set by Jim Woody and later tied by Bill Lamm, made light of the record. "It's my job to make the extra points," the transfer from Villanova said. "The whole team scored that many points and it's because of them that I set the record."

Bushbeck was also named the player of the game, and credited "the guys up front" for that award."

Lawson, who scored on runs of 11 and one yard in the first period, soon gave way to a host of other teammates, as Coach Ed Emory played everyone who dressed, a total of 96 people.

There were scores in almost every imaginable way. Harold Blue scored from three yards out, followed by Mike Davis' recovery of a freak fumbled kickoff in the end zone. Ricky Nichols scored on a 49-yard pass from Carlton Nelson, while second unit quarterback Kevin Ingram raced 46 yards and Mike Corsey scored from two yards out. Jimmy Walden ran back a kickoff for 93 yards for another and Marvin Cobb finished it off with a 37-yard run.

East Tennessee, hampered by field position, scored on a 55-yard punt return by Jerry Butler, runs of three and 11 yards by Earl Ferrell, and a 47-yard field goal by Barry Reed, who kicked two of the three extra points.

The game was also highlighted by 18 fumbles — nine by each team. East Carolina lost five of them, but ETSU hung on to all but two of its nine.

"East Tennessee is a much better team than they showed today," an estatic Emory said in the dressing room. "This game must goes to show you what specialty teamscan do to you when they break down."

Emory was referring to two fumbles by ETSU punter Phil Wilson, and a bad snap that sailed over his head, all three resulting in the Pirates getting outstanding field position.

"Our defense just got the ball in good field position. They (ETSU) coughed it up a lot. In the first quarter, we got the wind (a heavy breeze that gusted to 25-30 miles an hour) and I was tickled about that. They made mistakes in the kicking game and we got out front."

East Tennessee's Jack Carlisle felt frustrated by the outcome. "The people we counted on just didn't come through. Our kicking game killed us. Our quarterbacking situation hurts us also," he said in reference to missing number one signal-caller Scott Nault, out with a shoulder separation. ETSU started freshman Walt Bowlin in his place, and after he left the game with an injury, Jeff Padgett took over — his first collegiate action.

"We were banged up when we came into the game," Carlisle continued, "and we got more banged up as the game went on."

Emory sympathized with Carlisle. "I've been on the other end of these kind. The points are not important; just winning is important to me."

The 89 points scored in the game by both teams set a new ECU record. The previous mark was set in 1932 in only the fourth game played by the then-ECTC, when Guilford rolled to a 79-0 win over the Pirates. The 66 was the most scored by an ECU team since 1959, when the school downed Newport News Apprentice, 74-0.

Ironically that team was coached by Jack Boone, installed into the ECU Hall of Fame during the day's Homecoming activities, and another inductee James Speight played on the team, scoring a school record 26 points. Emory was a co-captain of the team that year, along with former athletic director Bill Cain.

• •

It didn't take long for the Pirates to get on the scoreboard; scoring the first time they had the ball. That came after ETSU went into punt formation on its own 42 and had a bad snap over Wilson's head, resulting in a 13-yard loss back to the 28, where ECU took over.

Kelly Stars As Miami Dumps FSU

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Miami Coach Howard Schnellenberger said Saturday that knocking off intrastate rival and 14th-ranked Florida State "was a bigger win than beating the nation's No. 1 team last week."

Schnellenberger's 13th-ranked Hurricanes dumped Florida State 27-19 in a regionally-televised game for their third straight victory, including a 17-14 decision over then top-ranked Penn State on Oct. 31.

What made Saturday's victory bigger in Schnellenberger's eyes was its timing — just four days after the NCAA slapped Miami with a two-year probation for recruiting violations.

"In 23 years that I have been coaching I have never been prouder of a team," Schnellenberger said. "I really don't know if there is another team in the country that could have gone through what this team has gone through and then come up here and play one of the best teams in the country and come back to win."

The triumph snapped Florida State's 19-game winning streak at Doak Campbell Stadium and gave Miami the mythical state championship for the second straight year. The Hurricanes beat Florida 21-20 in September.

Quarterback Jim Kelly, who passed for 273 yards, engineered two fourth-quarter touchdown drives to give Miami a 27-13 lead and the Hurricanes withstood a late Florida State rally to improve their record to 6-2.

Schnellenberger said the Hurricanes, who are barred from post-season play this season because of the probation, had something to prove to football fans in Florida and across the country.

"They now recognize that this team has a great deal of courage and character," he said.

Scouts from seven bowls were on tand for the game and the Seminoles, 6-3, were hoping to take a step toward nailing down a bid to one of the major post-season classics.

"We did not come in here with the thought that if we can't go any place, Florida State can't either," said Schnellenberger, adding that he hoped thb Seminoles will receive a bid.

Danny Miller's 57-yard field goal lifted Miami into a 13-13 tie midway through the third quarter.

Miami took possessimn at the Miami 44. Then, Kelly hit fullback Speedy Neal with a screen pass that went for 33 yards and connected for 17 yards to wide receiver Rocky Belk.

Halfback Smokey Roan ran 6 yards for a touchdown on the next play and Miller, who booted a 32-yard field goal in the first half, added the extra point for a 20-13 lead.

Miami got the ball back two plays later when safety Ronnie Lippett intercepted a pass by Rick Stockstill and returned it 15 yards to the Florida State 25.

After two running plays, Kelly hit Neal with another pass and the 245-pound fullback broke several tackles along the sideline as he rambled 22 yards for a touchdown and a 27-13 lead.

Florida State's Greg Allen, who rushed for 109 yards, returned the ensuing kickoff 54 yards after taking a lateral from Cedric Jones, giving the Seminoles a first down at the Miami 35.

Five plays later, Stockstill hit tight end Sam Childers with a 7-yard touchdown pass. A two-point conversion attempt failed and the Seminoles trailed 27-19.

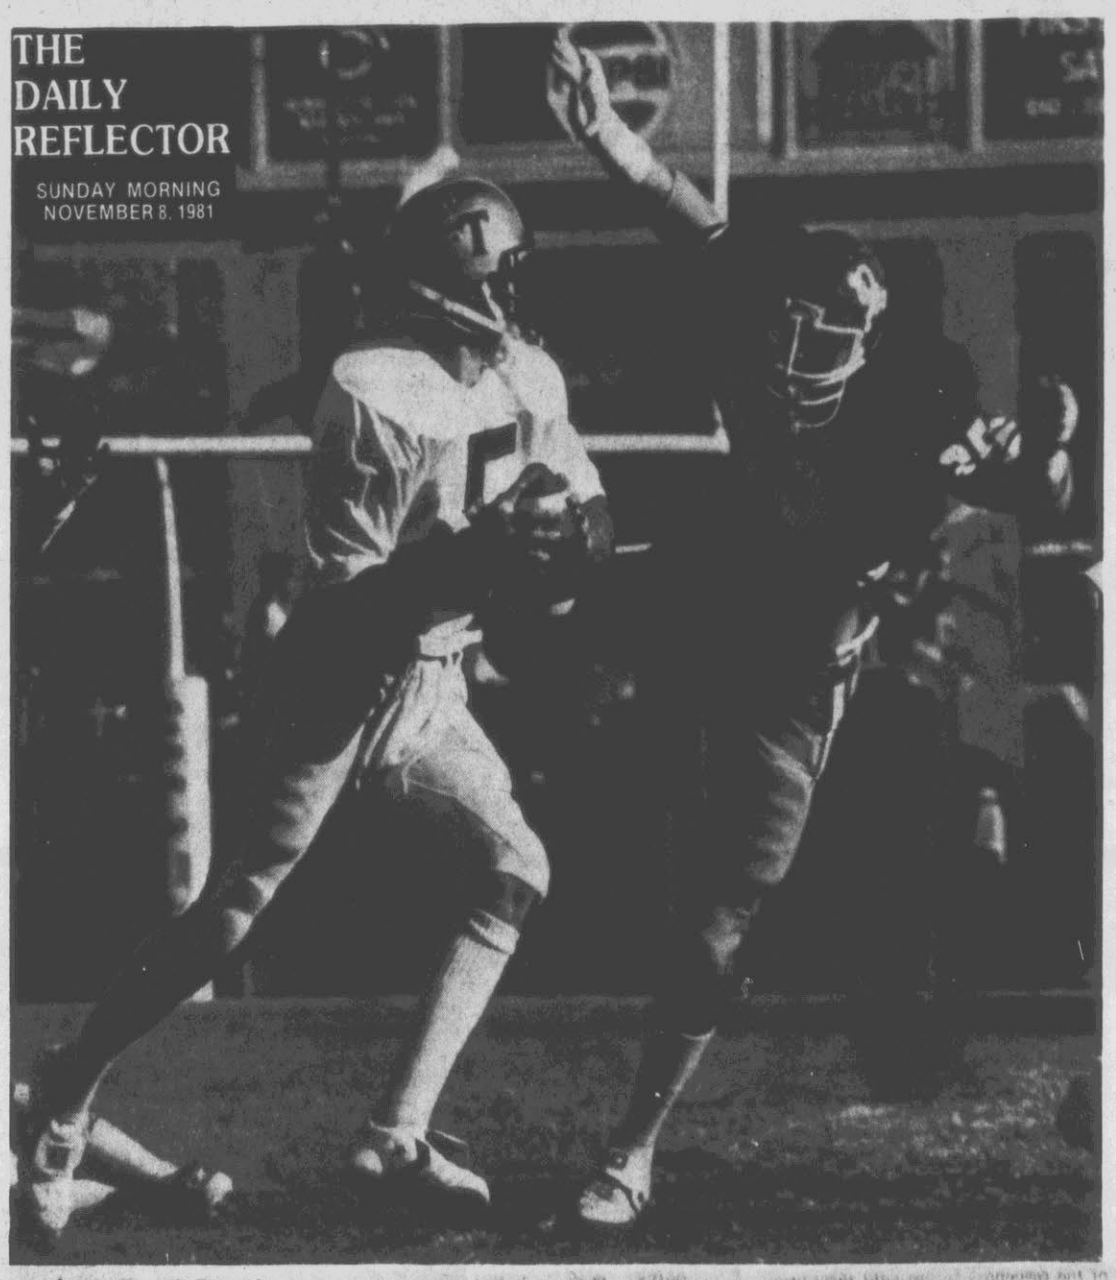

Florida State scored on its first possession of the game after a Miami punt. Stockstill passed 12 yards to wide receiver Tony Johnson for the touchdown, capping an eight-play, 60-yard march. But Brown blocked Rendina's conversion attempt.

After receiving the ensuing kickoff, Miami marched 66 yards to the Florida State 14 with Kelly completing 7 of 9 passes. But the drive stalled and the Hurricanes settled for Miller's first field goal.

Defense Sparkles As No. 2-Ranked Tigers Slip Past Tar Heels

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Clemson coach Danny Ford knew what he was doing. North Carolina elected to receive to start the second half and Ford gave the Tar Heels the wind, as well.

"We took the wind in the fourth quarter because we wanted the defense to win the game for us," Ford explained. And that's just the way it happened.

Jeff McCall's 7-yard run in the second period and Donald Igwebuike's 39-yard field goal in the third quarter capped Clemson's only two sustained drives and enabled the unbeaten, second-ranked Tigers to nose out eighth-rated North Carolina 10-8 Saturday in an Atlantic Coast Conference football showdown.

The Clemson defense, led by tackle Dan Benish, shut down the ACC's most prolific attack — which was bolstered by the return to partial duty of tailback Kelvin Bryant and quarterback Rod Elkins — without a touchdown and turned aside several North Carolina threats in the final period.

"I thought we played some pretty good goal-line defense," Ford said. "We went after them pretty good. We put some pressure on them down deep."

North Carolina had to settle for field goals after first downs at the Clemson 7-and 4-yard lines. The Tar Heels also were turned away after recovering a fumbled punt at the Clemson 37 with less than 11 minutes remaining and again after driving to the Tigers' 41 with 3:30 to go.

"The North Carolina quarterbacks threw well all day," Ford said. "I don't think we put enough pressure on them. Elkins was hurt and I don't think he was quite over his injury. Bryant ran well, but he looked like he lost some of his quickness: he wasn't going quite full-speed. We didn't stop him — the injury stopped him to be fair about it."

Clemson, 9-0 for the first time in 33 years, moved into sole possession of first place in the ACC with a 5-0 record. North Carolina, 7-2 overall, is 3-1 in conference play.

Despite the victory and Clemson's perfect record, Ford said the Tigers "don't deserve No. 1 because we didn't play well today. We are not ready for No. 1. We still have two more ballgames to play and we have to get ready."

After spotting North Carolina a 3-0 lead on Brooks Barwick's 22-yard field goal early in the second period, the Tigers drove 81 yards in 14 plays. McCall's touchdown run at 8:06 of the period gave them a 7-3 lead which they never relinquished.

However, they needed Igwebiuike's field goal at 6:53 of the third quarter to

Penn State Defeats Wolfpack, 22-15

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Penn State coach Joe Paterno had been waiting for a long time to use his fake punt play. The wait ended Saturday as the sixth-ranked Nittany Lions got a touchdown off the play and went on to whip North Carolina State, 22-15.

"We've taught that for a year and a half and we've been waiting for that," Paterno said. "That guy (Frank Bush) was getting so close to blocking it that I thought if we're ever going to use it, we better use it today."

And it worked like a charm with two players who ironically are listed at the "hero" position, Penn State's version of the rover back, pulling off a 51-yard touchdown pass.

Ken Kelley took the snap and threw a short pass to Harry Hamilton who ran the rest of the way with 6:30 left in the third period.

The play came after N.C. State, 4-5, had taken a 9-7 lead on three field goals by Todd Auten, and stopped the Lions on their own 49.

Penn State used used two blocked punts and a safety to clinch the victory. But the Lions did not win easily with the Wolfpack defense holding the offense to under 100 yards rushing.

"North Carolina State was awfully tough," Paterno said. "They're in the same class with Miami (which beat the Lions 17-14 last week). North Carolina State is just all over the place. They surprised us with defenses we have not seen. We had no preparation for it. We got confused, disorganized."

"Our game plan was working," he said. "We were up 9-7 and had them fourth down, then the fake punt. The defense played well. They were going against an offense that had scored 30 points against Nebraska."

After the Wolfpack defense stopped the Nittany Lions on their on 49, Kelley and Hamilton pulled off the fake. Kelley threw a short pass to Hamilton, who ran the rest of the way with 6:30 left in the third quarter. Ironically, both men play the hero position, or rover, in the Penn State defensive setup.

The Lions added a safety when Giuseppe Harris blocked a Wolfpack punt out of the end zone at 12:12 of the fourth period. Then another blocked punt, this by Dan Biondi, gave Penn State, 7-1, the ball on the Wolfpack 4. Fullback Mike Meade scored on a 1-yard run with 5:41 left.

Blue Devils Pound Wake Forest, 31-10

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

WINSTON-SALEM — Duke, with the Atlantic Coast Conference's sixth-best rushing offense, finally established a potent ground game Saturday and pounded Wake Forest 31-10.

Coming into Saturday's game, the Blue Devils had gained 988 rushing yards on 310 plays. But against a porous Demon Deacon defense, the Blue Devils rushed for 432 yards, easily its best performance of the year and fourth best ever.

Also, three Duke runners broke the 100-yard barrier during the game. Tailback Mike Grayson led the way with 188 yards on 17 carries.

Although he did not score a touchdown, Grayson did complete a 13-yard scoring pass to Ron Frederick in the third quarter. It was Grayson's 55-yard run in the fourth quarter which set up a 1-yard dive by Joel Blunk.

Blunk rushed for 110 yards on 20 carries and Greg Boone rushed 16 times for 101 yards.

"They're a little too aggressive," Grayson said. "They overrun the play too much, can't stop their momentum."

Duke coach Red Wilson was delighted that his team was able to capitalize on another facet of its offense.

"This had to be the highlight of Duke football for a long time, that we finally found a running game," Wilson said.

Wake Forest coach Al Groh said he was pleased with his defense, despite the fact it yielded 542 yards.

However, the defense Groh sent onto the field consisted mainly of underclassmen, due to injuries suffered by frontline players earlier this season.

"Probably we played as hard and as well as we are capable of playing on defense right now," Groh said. "Offensively, we did not play as well as we are capable, and that was disappointing."

The Wake Forest offense, third in the ACC, managed only 179 yards.

Duke quarterback Ben Bennett completed 8 of 20 passes for 68 yards and a first-quarter 3-yard touchdown pass to Cedric Jones. For Jones, it was his 20th career touchdown reception.

Allen Sets Record As USC Whips Cal

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Southern California's Marcus Allen ran for 243 yards, increasing his season total to a major-college record 1,968, and scored three touchdowns as the third-ranked Trojans beat California 21-3 Saturday.

The Trojans' All-American tailback went 20 yards on a play late in the fourth period to surpass the NCAA single-season record of 1,948 yards set by Tony Dorsett in 1975. Earlier in the game, he broke the Pacific-10 season record of 1,875 yards set by Ricky Bell of USC in 1976.

Allen, whose seventh 200-yard rushing day of the season was marred by four fumbles, figures to reach the 2,000-yard mark next Saturday against Washington.

Southern Cal will take an 8-1 season record and 4-1 Pac-10 mark into the Washington game.

All three of Allen's touchdowns against Cal's Bears were on 1-yard dives, in the first, third and fourth periods. He carried the ball a career-high 46 times for his 243 yards.

Allen already held the NCAA record for most 200-yard games in a season, and by posting the 10th of his career Saturday he tied an NCAA record held by former Cornell star Ed Marinaro.

Cal, 2-7 overall and 2-4 in the conference, trailed only 7-0 at halftime. The Trojans lost three fumbles, including two by Allen, in the first half.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Quarterback Dan Marino ran for one touchdown and threw for three more as No.1-ranked Pittsburgh crushed Rutgers 47-3 in college football Saturday at Giants Stadium.

Marino, who completed 18 passes for 239 yards, hit fullback Wayne DiBartola with a 5-yard pass to give the undefeated Panthers a 7-3 lead in the second quarter.

The junior quarterback capped the next series with a 31-yard pass to tight end John Brown deep down the middle, seconds before the half.

The victory boosted Pitt's ecord to 8-0, while Rutgers fell to 5-4.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — All-American Herschel Walker scored four touchdowns, the last on a 1-yard dive with 2:31 remaining, as No.4 Georgia overcame an early 14-point deficit and trimmed Florida 26-21 in a nationally televised college football game Saturday.

Walker's game-winning plunge capped a 95-yard drive on which he was the workhorse, carrying 11 times for 65 yards to erase a 21-20 Florida lead. The Gators went ahead early in the final quarter when Wayne Peace fired his second touchdown pass of the game, a 10-yarder to Spencer Jackson.

Walker, who ran for 190 yards on 45 carries to go over the 3,000-yard career mark in only 20 contests, also scored on a 4-yard run and hauled in two touchdown passes from Buck Belue covering 24 and 16 yards.

The victory was the sixth straight for Georgia lifting its record to 8-1 overall and 5-0 in the Southeastern Conference, gaining a tie for the lead with Alabama.

Journal 500 May Be Most Dramatic Race This Year

(Lineup on page B-12)

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — The Atlanta Journal 500 Sunday at Atlanta International Raceway is not necessarily the most important Grand National stock car race of the year, but it could be the most dramatic.

The stage is set for a showdown between Darrell Waltrip and Bobby Allison that could determine the 1981 national champion.

Waltrip, who has won four straight races, has gone from 350 points behind Allison at midyear in the Winston Cup race to 68 points ahead with only this race and the season-finale at Riverside, Calif., left.

In this battle of veteran drivers who never have won a national championship, Waltrip could put away Allison by winning the 500-mile event over Atlanta's 1.522-mile banked oval — under certain circumstances:

—If Waltrip wins and gets the five-point bonus for leading the most laps, he would win the title if Allison winds up 28th or worse.

Otherwise, the battle likely will be decided at Riverside in two weeks. There is a mathematical possibility that Allison could leave Atlanta with a lead in the point chase.

Allison, who will leave the Ranier Racing Team after the season, insisted he feels no pressure.

"I'm disappointed that we haven't had more success in the second half of the season," Allison said.

"The national championship is important, but it's never been the most important thing for me. The main thing is to always go out and do the best you can. If you do, then you can't feel bad when you leave the track."

Waltrip could become the first driver in 20 years to win five races in a row. Allison and Richard Petty both accomplished that feat in 1971, the last season in which NASCAR ran more than 31 races — there were 46 races that season.

A victory here also would give Waltrip 13 for the season, equalling Petty's "modern era" record, set in 1975. Petty, who will start third Sunday, also holds the all-time mark of 27 victories, accomplished in 1967 when he ran in 48 races.

"Junior (Johnson) told me early in the season that we were going to win 12 or 13 races," Waltrip said. "We've got 12 now, and I figure we've got a pretty good chance to win one of these last two."

Waltrip, who lost a late-season duel with Petty in 1979 for the Winston Cup, said, "I'm not going to worry about the championship. If we do our job, that will just come with it. And, starting second, I figure we've got a pretty good shot here."

Gant, who has lost chances at victory in nearly every way imaginable and still is third in the point race, said, "I'm just going to try to get so far ahead that if anything happens to slow me up, it won't knock me out of it."

Touchdown Run

The Pirates, however, after getting one first down, failed to pick up another, and Bushbeck started his point barrage with a 33-yard field goal, making it 3-0 with 11:06 showing.

Just three minutes later, the Pirate put their first touchdown on the scoreboard. Clint Harris stepped up on a Bowlin pass picking it off at the ECU 48 and returning it down to the ETSU 32.

After a one-yard gain, Lawson took an option toss around the right side for 20 yards, down to the 11. On the next play, he skirted right end for the score, and Bushbeck upped it to 10-0 with 8:09 left in the quarter.

Then the comedy of errors began in ernest. Wilson fumbled another snap and was thrown for a 17-yard loss back to the ETSU 15. But on the first play by ECU, Nelson fumbled it right back. Bowlin then threw an interception to Marvin Elliott on the next play, and he returned it 22 yards to the seven.

On the first play, it looked like the fumble parade was continuing, as Nelson in the attempt to option the ball, fumbled it out of the side of the end zone for an apparent touchback. But his toss had been forward, and East Carolina was penalized for an illegial forward pass.

That turned out to be a blessing in disguise. From the eight, Lawson cracked through the middle to the one, then took a pitch out around the right side for the final yard, and the Pirates led, 17-0 with 4:45 left in the quarter.

Late in the period, the Pirates faced a third and six with only six seconds left and called a time out. With the stiff wind at their backs, Emory elected to have the Pirates kick it away on third down.

It was a good idea, but it didn't pay off. Butler reeled in the ball at the ETSU 45, and followed his blocking down the left side all the way to the end zone, 55 yards away. Reed added the PAT, and the Buccaneers had cut it back to 17-7 on the final play of the first period.

A few minutes later, the Pirates were back in the end zone. Taking over after another Wilson fumble and a 19-yard loss, the Pirates got it at the nine. It took only three plays for the score, with Blue, on his only carry of the game, scoring from three yards out on a quick pitch to the left side. With 10:00 showing, that raised it to 24-7.

Another ETSU mistakes resulted in another Pirate score only six seconds later. Butler coming up to take the kickoff saw it fall in front of him at the 15, kick off his heel and continue to the end zone. There, Davis fell on it for the next ECU touchdown.

That made it 31-7 with 9:54 still to go in the first half.

After a couple of punt exchanges, the Pirates got it back at their own 48. After Corsey got three yards to the ETSU 49, Nelson faded back and lofted a long downfield pass to Nichols on the post. The ball, thrown into the teeth of the wind, looked too long at first.

"When I first started out going toward the ball I didn't think I could catch up with it," Nichols, who is nursing an ankle injury said. "But when I got to it, I really turned it on. I didn't give much of a move, maybe a head fake."

The Pirates had one more chance, but another turnover cost them the ball. This time, after a 16-yard pass from Ingram to Norwood Vann put the ball on the ETSU 40 on first down after a punt, a face masking call moved it to the 24. But on first down there, Scott Lewis fumbled it back to the Bucs at the 16.

The Tennessee team used that to set up a march down to the ECU 30, highlighted by a Bowlin to Mark Neely pass of 20 yards and a 19-yard run by Ferrell. There, however, time got precious and Reed, with the wind behind him, booted the 47-yarder with only two seconds left. That cut the lead to 38-10.

Taking over on the second half kickoff, Nelson guided the team to another score, moving 80 yards in six plays. Nelson scrambled for 16 yards on first down, then later kept for 12 more. He went out after the last run, and Ingram, picked up one yard to the ETSU 46 before heading around the left side on a keeper, and breaking into the secondary. He dodged potential tacklers, weaving his way into the end zone on the 46-yard run, and that made it 45-10 with 12:22 left in the third period.

After forcing another punt, the Pirates got it back at their own 48. In three plays, the Pirates pushed it to the 38, from where Ingram broke away for another big gainer, down to the three. On second down, Corsey went over left tackle for the final two yards, and the margin climbed to 52-10 with 5:49 to go in the third period.

Late in the quarter, two straight Pirate fumbles cost them field position and forced a punt from the one yard line, giving ETSU the ball at the ECU 38, setting up the second Buccaneer touchdown.

On the first play of the final period, Padgett hit Shelby Cornelius for 19 yards to the 16, and three plays after that, Ferrell went 'round the right side for the final three yards. Reed's boot cut the lead to 52-17 with 13:17 left.

Then, it was time for another heroic by another Pirate. On the kickoff, Walden gathered in the ball at his own seven and headed for the wall along the left sideline. Breaking through, he had only two defenders left, but his speed left them behind as he raced 93 yards for the touchdown, and that upped it to 59-17 with 13:05 to go in the game.

Another East Carolina fumble helped set up the next ETSU score. After being stopped, the Buccaneers punted away, but Stefon Adams fumbled the kick and ETSU had it back at the ECU 34. It took the Bucs only five plays to score, with Ferrell again going in, this time from 11 yards out. Reed's kick was off the mark, however, leaving it at 59-23.

There was one last score left in the Pirate arsenal, however. It came on the next series. Adams, trying to make up for his fumble, returned the kickoff to the 40. On third and one, Bubba Bunn broke away for 14 yards to the ETSU 37. On the next play, Cobb broke through the middle of the line, shook off a couple of tacklers, and went the final yards for the ninth and final ECU touchdown. Bushbeck's kick — establishing the new school record — made it 66-23 with 6:35 to go.

And there was almost another score. Guided by freshman quarterback Kenny Gibbs, the Pirates pushed from their own 41 down to the three before the clock finally erased the scoring opportunity.

East Carolina used 15 different ball carriers in the game, led by Ingram's 80 yards on six carries. Lawson added 51 yards on seven lugs, while Dobb had 48 on three trips. Lawson and Bunn, with seven each, led the team in carries.

"We played almost all twos, threes and fours in the second half," Emory noted, referring to non-starters.

"We have won five of the six games we said we must win," the coach added. "We have a chance to win one more and have a winning season."

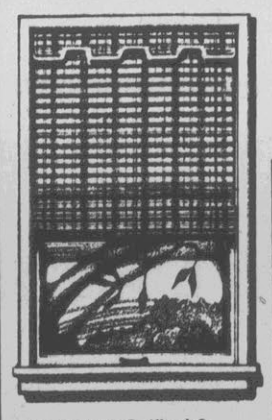

That chance comes next Saturday when the Pirates close out the season against William & Mary. The Indians, 3-6, lost to Harvard 23-14, yesterday.

Marshall Wins First SC Game

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Tailback Larry Fourgurean rushed for 245 yards and scored from 5 yards with 8:03 remaining to give Marshall a 17-10 Southern Conference football victory over Appalachian State Saturday.

It was Marshall's first league victory since it joined the conference in 1977. Marshall is coached by former ECU coach Sonny Randle.

Appalachian tied the scored at 10 when Mark French connected on a 40-yard field goal with 12:26 remaining.

Marshall boosted its record to 2-7, 1-4 in conference play. Appalachian State, which received 18 of 30 passing from Joyce for 228 yards, dropped to 3-5-1, 1-3-1 in league action.

Sacking A Tar Heel

Spinks Retains Crown

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks said a "sneak" right hand helped him retain his World Boxing Association light heavyweight title against challenger Vonzell Johnson Saturday.

Spinks' vicious overhand right came at 1:15 of the seventh round of their scheduled 15-rounder as referee Larry Hazzard broke the fighters from a clinch.

The right put Johnson to the canvas, where he took a mandatory eight count. He stood up and took one quick left before Hazzard declared Spinks the victor.

"It's a sneak. You're in a clinch, see?" Spinks said, grabbing a reporter playfully. "So, when he thought I was coming out of it, I moved in."

Johnson said he thought Spinks' move was clever, but not quite fair.

"I can't say I thought it was right," Johnson said, shaking his head. "I heard the referee say 'Break' and I did. Spinks said he didn't hear it and I can't call the man a liar."

But manager Angelo Dundee, who was in Johnson's corner, said his fighter was to blame for letting down his guard.

"Oh, was that beautiful," Dundee confessed. "When you're a professional, you have to defend yourself at all times."

Spinks, now undefeated in 18 professional outings, made his first successful defense of the WBA title that he took from Eddie Mustafa Muhammad in Las Vegas on July 18.

Johnson, 29, of Columbus, Ohio, is now 22-3 as a professional. One of his losses came to World Boxing Council champion Matthew Saad Muhammad on Feb. 28 here, when Johnson was knocked out in the 11th round.

Johnson looked better against Muhammad then he did against Spinks, who, at 173 pounds, repeatedly backed Johnson into the ropes with an effective left jab that preceded left crosses and combinations to the head.

Spinks, 25, of St. Louis, was most effective on the inside, where he repeatedly beat Johnson to the punch.

Johnson was effective only in the fifth round, when he shook off the earlier blows and backed Spinks up with aggressive left jabs throughout the round. He continued his comeback in the sixth, but wandered into the telling final clinch in the seventh.

Spinks, brother of former heavyweight champion Leon Spinks, is usually a slow starter. But he showed early aggressiveness against Johnson with the long left jabs and three- and four-punch combinations inside that constantly kept Johnson retreating.

Spinks, who also has a 1976 Olympic gold medal to his credit, earned $300,000 from the fight. He hoped it would be a tuneup for a million-dollar showdown with Muhammad to unify the light heavyweight title.

After the Spinks-Johnson fight, Muhammad pledged to take on Spinks, but the light heavyweight championship has been marked with broken promises and contracts that never are completed.

N'western Sets Winless Mark

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Quarterback Brian Clark hurled three touchdown passes in the first half Saturday to lead Michigan State to a 61-14 victory and send Northwestern reeling to a major college record 29th consecutive defeat.

Northwestern had shared the NCAA Division I record of 28 consecutive losses with Kansas State and Virginia. The Wildcats' last victory dates back to the second game of the 1979 season, when they tripped Wyoming 27-22. It aas their 33rd straight Big Ten defeat and their ninth loss this season. Michigan State improved its record to 3-4 in the Big Ten and 4-5 overall.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Mike Hohensee passed for five touchdowns and 444 yards, including a 28-yard game-winner to Jay Carroll with 2:38 to play, as Minnesota upset 18th-ranked Ohio State 35-31 Saturday to knock the Buckeyes out of first place in the Big Ten.

Carroll, a tight end, caught the winning pass in the end zone after Buckeye cornerback Kevin Bell deflected the ball. That erased a 31-28 Ohio State lead and gave Minnesota its only lead of the game.

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Blair Kiel hurled two touchdown passes, including a Notre Dame record-setting 96-yard strike to Joe "Small Wonder" Howard, to lead the Irish to a 35-3 victory over Georgia Tech Saturday.

Kiel and Howard, a 5-foot-7, 163-pound freshman, also combined on a 58-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter, and John Mosley scored two touchdowns in the second half. The Irish handed Georgia Tech its eighth straight loss following an opening-game upset of Alabama.

The Irish, ending their home season, boosted their record to 4-4 with their second straight victory. They have three road games left.

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Quarterback Darrell Shepard uncorked fourth-quarter touchdown runs of 20 and 49 yards Saturday to rally No. 17 Oklahoma to a 28-21 victory over upset-minded Kansas State.

Kansas State, which upset then-No. 11 Iowa State a week ago, stunned the Sooners by jumping to a 21-0 lead in the second quarter. The Wildcats led at halftime 21-6 after recovering two on-side kicks. Kansas State thoroughly dominated the Sooners, who were 26-point favorites but stymied themselves with four turnovers and a rash of penalties.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Tailback Sammy Winder dived a yard for a touchdown after a big second-quarter fumble recovery and 20th-ranked Southern Mississippi survived a late scare for a 7-6 college football victory over 15th-ranked Mississippi State Saturday.

The unbeaten Golden Eagles, now 7-0-1, held Mississippi State quarterback Tim Parenton inches short on a fourth-and-one play to kill the Bulldogs' last threat at the Southern Mississippi 33 with 1:26 left in the game.

Dana Moore kicked two filed goals for Mississippi State but missed a 30-yarder with 11:03 left in the last quarter that would have given the Bulldogs the lead.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan quarterback Steve Smith passed for three touchdowns and ran for three more Saturday to lead the 12th-ranked Wolverines to a comeback 70-21 Big Ten football victory over Illinois.

Illinois, behind the passing of junior quarterback Tony Eason, shocked Michigan with three touchdowns took a 21-7 lead after one period of play. But the Michigan defense came up with three big second-quarter interceptions and Smith put the Wolverines' offense into gear.

Tulane 14
Maryland.....7

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Turning in the first route-going performance by a Tulane quarterback this season, Mike McKay threw for 238 yards and two touchdowns to lead his team to a 14-7 victory over Maryland in a college football game Saturday night.

Tulane has played musical quarterbacks, rotating three signal-callers this season.

All the scoring came in the third quarter.

After Maryland quarterback Boomer Esiason hit split end Russell Davis on a 59-yard scoring bomb, McKay came back with a six-yard touchdown pass to fullback Reggie Reginelli with 15 seconds left in the third period.

Pacific 23
S. Carolina 21

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Alternating quarterbacks Harley Miller and Grayson Rogers passed for 335 yards and three touchdowns to lead Pacific to a 23-21 upset victory over South Carolina Saturday.

But the margin of victory was two points that Pacific received when strong safety Darryl Ragland blocked Chris Norman's punt into and beyond the South Carolina end zone in the first period.

Hall Of Famers

By The Associated Press

Return with us now to those thrilling days of yesteryear when the fledgling American Football League filled the air with passes every week, threatening to permanently remove the foot from football.

The AFL fought the pro football war in those days with a bombs-away air attack that left ground games looking stodgy and old fashioned. Eventually, as it always does, the pendulum swung back and running backs resurfaced in most places. But old habits are tough to change and some teams with AFL heritages cling to the pass as the best route to take from one end zone to the other.

There are, for example, the Cincinnati Bengals and San Diego Chargers, a couple of first-place teams who use the passing game every chance they get. The Bengals and Chargers collide Sunday in one of this week's more intriguing National Football League matchups and, in some ways, it promises to be a peek at the past.

Elsewhere Sunday, American Conference pairings match Cleveland at Denver, Miami at New England, the New York Jets at Baltimore, Oakland at Houston and Pittsburgh at Seattle. In the NFC, Atlanta plays at San Francisco, Detroit visits Washington, New Orleans goes to Los Angeles, the New York Giants play Green Bay at Milwaukee, Philadelphia visits St. Louis and Tampa Bay plays at Minnesota. Chicago plays at Kansas City in an interconference pairing.

The Monday night game offers another interconference matchup with Buffalo at Dallas as the league completes its 10th week of action.

The Bengals have ridden the strong right arm of Ken Anderson to first place in the AFC Central Division, one game in front of Pittsburgh and two up on Cleveland and Houston. Anderson is ranked second among conference passers with 15 touchdowns and 2,148 yards gained this season. His main targets are rookie wide receiver Cris Collinsworth and tight end Dan Ross, each with 38 catches and four touchdowns, tied for 10th best in the conference.

Right behind Anderson in the AFC quarterback rankings is San Diego's Dan Fouts, a member of the exclusive 4,000-yard passing club. The only other quarterbacks to top 4,000 yards in a single season are Joe Namath and Brian Sipe. Fouts could be on target to hit that plateau again, with a league-leading 2,730 yards including 19 TDs so far. Tight end Kellen Winslow with 45 catches and wide receiver Charlie Joiner with 41 are Fouts' top receivers.

The Chargers are locked in a tight battle atop the AFC West, tied for first place with Kansas City and Denver.

The Chiefs slipped back into the tie by losing 22-20 to the Chargers last week and will try to bounce back against the Bears, basement-dwellers in the NFC Central.

The AFC passing leader remains 38-year-old Craig Morton of Denver, who has thrown for 2,048 yards and 17 TDs with a completion percentage of 61.5. He will work this week against Cleveland and Sipe, who must solve a Bronco pass defense ranked No.1 in the league.

Minnesota and Tampa Bay, tied at 5-4, stage a first-place showdown in the NFC Central race. The Vikings have won the division in seven of the last eight seasons, missing only in 1979 when Tampa Bay dislodged them.

The Bucs won the season's first meeting 21-13 with reserve Steve Dils replacing injured Tommy Kramer at quarterback for Minnesota and throwing 62 passes. Kramer, recovered from early season injuries, will be on the case for the Vikings this time.

In other races, Dallas and Philadelphia are tied for the NFC East lead at 7-2 with the Eagles on the road in St. Louis Sunday.

Clemson Edges Tar Heels...

stave off the Tar Heels before an overflow crowd of 53,611, the largest in the history of Kenan Stadium.

After Clemson took the lead, North Carolina twice pulled within two points. The first time was at 7-5 when linebacker Danny Barlow blocked a punt by Clemson's Dale Hatcher with 14 seconds left in the first half and it rolled through the end zone for a safety. Barwick kicked a 26-yard field goal with 30 seconds left in the third quarter to make it 10-8, but the Tar Heels wasted two glittering opportunities after that.

The first came when Clemson's Billy Davis fumbled a punt at his 37-yard line with 10:44 left to play and Dwight Parrish recovered for North Carolina. Three plays lost 6 yards, however, and the Tar Heels were forced to punt.

Sophomore quarterback starter Scott Stankavage, who gave way to Elkins in the first period and then returned when Elkins re-injured an ankle in the second quarter, passed the Tar Heels from their 20 to the Clemson 41 with 3:30 left. However, North Carolina elected to gamble on fourth-and-12 and a Stankavage pass was batted down by cornerback Hollis Hall.

The Tigers' 10-game winning streak, dating back to the 1980 finale, is the fourth-longest in Clemson history. The victory also pushed the Tigers one step closer to a major bowl bid, which they seem assured of if they defeat Maryland and South Carolina in their remaining two contests. A victory or a tie against Maryland would give them the ACC title.

After scoring 82 points against Wake Forest last week, Clemson had to rely on its defense this time. Benish led the way until he was injured late in the third period and the Tigers suffered no dropoff after he was hurt.

Clemson posted the first opportunity, but Igwebuike missed a 50-yard field goal attempt with 5:50 left in the opening period. Late in the quarter, Elkins drove the Tar Heels from their 31 to the Clemson 7, completing passes of 13 yards Jon Richardson, 16 to Mark Smith and 30 to freshman Larry Griffin, who made a diving catch at the 7. But Benish sacked Elkins for a 7-yard loss and three plays later, North Carolina had to settle for Barwick's field goals.

Clemson retaliated with the game's only touchdown drive. In a march that lasted 5:45, the Tigers methodically drove from their 19. The key plays were a 13-yard pass from Homer Jordan to Jerry Gaillard, a 6-yard run on third down by Chuck McSwain, and a 16-yard pass from Jordan to Perry Tuttle, which put the ball at the North Carolina 23. It marked the 29th consecutive game in which Tuttle has caught at least one pass.

North Carolina got a break in the final minute of the first half when Scott Williams snapped the ball high to Hatcher and Barlow broke through to block the punt for a safety.

Clemson ate up 6:17 en route to Igwebuike's deciding field goal. Starting from their 27, the Tigers marched to the North Carolina 17 before a holding penalty pushed them back and their Nigerian placekicker split the uprights for the decisive points.

The Tar Heels came right back with a 17-play drive, which culminated in Barwick's second field goal. After that, it was just a series of wasted opportunities for North Carolina.

McIntosh rushed for 137 yards and became the 15th freshman in National Collegiate Athletic Association history to run for more than 1,000 yards in a season.

After a scoreless first quarter, N. C. State put together a 58-yard drive, shuffling in a number of running backs. When the drive stalled at the Penn State 14, Wolfpack placekicker Todd Auten kicked the first of two field goals in the first half — a 27-yarder with 9:12 left.

The Nittany Lions then took advantage of a 56-yard punt return by Kevin Baugh. Despite a clipping penalty that put them back on the Wolfpack 37, the Lions put together their best drive of the half.

Then the Wolfpack took advantage of their own return — a 46-yard kickoff return by Ken Jenkins and drove to Penn State's 26 with 3 seconds left. Auten kicked a 43-yarder to pull the Wolfpack within one point.

The Lions potent offense was held to only 63 yards rushing and 28 passing in the first half while N.C. State piled up 145 total yards.

Duke Wins...

Wake Forest dropped to 3-7, 1-5 in the ACC. Duke's conference record is 2-2.

Wake Forest's Gary Schofield, the ACC's total offense leader, completed 16 of 29 passes for 167 yards, including a 8-yard touchdown pass to Tim Ryan in the third quarter.

A fumbled punt by Duke's Dennis Tabron gave Wake Forest an early opportunity to score. But the Demon Deacons squandered the opportunity when Schofield was sacked twice.

Duke later capitalized when punter Harry Newsome fielded a poor snap and was forced to run on fourth down. Six plays later, Bennett hit Jones with the touchdown pass with 3:45 left, giving Duke an early 7-0 lead.

Duke extended the lead to 10-0 early in the second quarter on a 31-yard field goal by Scott McKinney at the 9:56 mark.

Wake Forest managed only a field goal in the first half. After a 29-yard completion from Schofield to flanker Kenny Duckett, the offense bogged down. Phil Denfeld then kicked a 37-yard field goal with 4:04 remaining to cut Duke's lead to 10-3 at halftime.

The Friday Front/ A Roundup of Friday Night's Results

Rose Shifts Tailbacks, Rolls Into Playoffs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

ELIZABETH CITY — Rose High School coach Ronald Vincent, looking for a berth in the State 4-A playoffs, found he had to do a little shifting in the Rampant backfield Friday night against Elizabeth City Northeastern.

The shift, however, put the Rampants into yet a higher gear, as they romped over the Eagles, 27-0, earning a shot at a previous victim, Jacksonville, in this week's first round.

Donnell Lee, a 5-7, 143-pound junior, was shifted from his usual slotback position to tailback for Roderick Harrell. Harrell had been slowed by a bruised thigh. The diminutive tailback had, mostly on slotback reverses, picked up 178 yards on 22 carries in the games he had played in prior to Friday night.

But against Northeastern, he rushed 22 times for 174 yards and two touchdowns, sparking the Rampants to the victory.

Harrell, who did see some action, rushing eight times for 54 yards, also scored twice, on runs of five and eight yards. Lee's scores came on runs of 20 and four yards.

Rose could have done even more, but used its reserves throughout the final quarter of the game.

Rose, in finishing the regular season with an 8-2 overall mark and a 5-2 Big East record, earns the number two spot in the playoffs, and faces Mideastern representative Jacksonville, which shared that conference's title with New Hanover. The Cardinals, who will be the host team in Friday's first round game, beat New Hanover in their meeting to earn the number one berth.

It will be the second meeting of the two teams. Rose won the first game — its opening contest of the year, 15-14.

"I'm tickled to death to be in the playoffs," Vincent said afterwards. "This whole thing has been a team effort, and I have to give a lot of credit to my staff. Everybody contributed. We have had no problems with these kids and they've worked hard to earn this."

Rose went into the game facing a must-win situation after last week's loss to Wilson Hunt, 20-19, in an upset. "But these kids did it," Vincent said. "When they have their backs to the wall, they come out fighting."

Vincent, referring to the move that put Lee in the backfield, said that it was no secret that he could fly. "He's small and he takes a beating in there, but he really played well tonight." He also gave credit to the final play of the line in opening holes for Lee and the other backs.

Rose didn't have to do much throwing during the contest, putting the ball up only six times. The Rampants completed three of those for 31 yards, while having one intercepted.

"They had Chris (McLawhorn) double covered all night, so we had planned to go over the middle with the ball. Then, when we had so much success running the ball, we figured that we'd make them stop us running before we went to the passing game. They never stopped us."

Rose did stop itself several times, as both teams rolled up heavy yardage on penalties. Rose was flagged ten times for 129 yards — eight of those major penalties — while Northeastern drew eight flags for 109 yards, all but one a major.

"Some of those calls were really questionable," Vincent said afterwards, "but I guess it's part of the game."

The Rampants took the opening kickoff and marched right down the field for their first score, going 76 yards in 13 plays. Lee carried on seven of those plays and accounted for 39 yards. A 15-yard face masking penalty also helped move the drive along, moving it from the Rose 36 to the Eagle 49. The longest play of the drive was a ten-yard burst by Lee that moved it down to the Northeastern 18. After Lee added eight more to the ten, Harrell came in for the final two carries, going five yards for the score with 6:42 left in the first period.

Roger Williams, who had not tried an extra point in the first nine games, did the booting afterwards, and Rose led 7-0.

Northeastern came right back with one of its few threats of the evening. Helped along by a 16-yard scramble by quarterback Douglas Shannon and a 29-yard pass from Shannon to Avery Brooks, the Eagles moved to the Rose 17. But a holding penalty helped to stop the drive, then, Shannon was intercepted by Cornelius Moore, who pulled in a throw that was tipped just before the catch by Williams.

Rose, taking over on its own 13, drove downfield, reaching the Eagle 19 in just five plays, stalled, however, when a 19-yard clipping penalty cost it field position, and an interception two plays later cost the ball.

Rose again got good field position after forcing a punt, taking over on the Eagle 31 after a 12-yard return by McLawhorn. But again, at the 19, Rose was given a major penalty, thrown back 20 yards by a holding call. Williams punted the ball down to the goal line, but Rose was penalized for batting the ball to keep it from going into the end zone, and Williams had to kick again from 15 further back.

On that play, however, Jojo McCullen fumbled it and Rose pounced on it at the 20.

On the very first play, Lee took the ball up the middle, cut to his left, then outraced the secondary into the end zone for the second Rose score. That came with 5:05 left in the half and gave the Rampants a 14-0 lead after Williams' kick.

Just a couple of minutes later, Rose got it back at his own seven following a punt. From there, the Rampants marched 93 yards for their third score. Lee ripped off ten on first down, and 15 more were added for face masking. On the next play, Lee broke away for 35 yards down to the Eagle 33. Harrell picked up eight more, but then Rose was hit with a 15-yard holding penalty, throwing them back to the 40.

This time, however, the Rampants refused to let the penalty stop the drive. Ronnie Worsley, running from Lee's old slotback position, raced 28 yards on a reverse, getting a first down at the 12. Three plays later, Lee again went through the middle of the line for the final four yards and his second touchdown. Williams' kick upped it to 21-0 with 39 seconds left in the half.

Early in the second half, the Eagles got off their best threat. It came after McLawhorn fumbled a punt at the Rose 48. Helped along by a 15-yarder against the Rampants, Northeastern moved down to the 27, then got a half-the-distance penalty on a pass interference call that put it on the 13.

But the defense stiffened there, and held on downs at the seven.

That set up another 93-yard scoring drive. Worsley again made a big play, taking another inside reverse for 23 yards, followed by a 28-yard pass from Barry Smith to Marty Barnes that put the ball on the Eagle 20. Four plays after that, Harrell pushed the final eight yards for the last score of the game.

Neither team offered a threat in the final period.

So now, the Rampants move back into the playoffs. Two years ago, in their last playoff appearance, Rose reached the state finals before bowing to High Point Central.

This time, however, they must overcome the fact that they've already beaten Jacksonville and do it again.

"It's always tough to beat a team a second time," Vincent said of the upcoming contest. "And we have to go on the road, too. It's going to be a tough game. I just hope our kids realize that that game was ten games back and Jacksonville is a different team now. They're a whole lot tougher than they were then, and we were lucky to beat them then.

"But I'd like to think that we're tougher now too," he added.

Speier Enters Free-Agent Draft

MONTREAL (AP) — Montreal Expos shortstop Chris Speier is the latest major leaguer to declare for free agency.

Speier's entrance into the the major-league baseball free-agent draft was confirmed by a club spokesman Friday.

The spokesman said the 31-year-old Speier submitted his name to the Player Relations Committee Wednesday but that the Expos' offer was still on the table.

"We are still talking," Speier said in a telephone interview from his suburban Ste. Adele home. "I had to enter my name on the list before Nov.10, so I did it just as a precaution on the chance I don't sign with Montreal.

Speier, who is his own agent, would not say what he is asking for, but is reported to be seeking a five-year contract.

The former San Francisco Giant, acquired by Montreal in a 1977 trade, batted .225 in 96 games in the strike-shortened season.

He and pitcher Ray Burris are the only Expos who have entered the free agent draft, which takes place next Friday in New York.

One of the big aggravations in life is taking your car for service and not getting it fixed right — the first time.
We have a new system to change all that.
It's a new quality assurance system designed to assure that you are satisfied with our work.
It starts when you buy a new car from us.
But it works with any car you bring in for service. No matter where you bought it.

Pre-delivery inspection. Our salesman who sells you one of our new cars gives it a top to bottom, inside and out inspection to make sure every thing works the way it's supposed to. If he finds any deficiencies, they are reported to service management and fixed.

Quality inspector. He is specially trained to look over the service work we agreed to perform to make sure we did it right. In effect he represents you. He checks all requested repairs and service to make sure they were performed properly.

Telephone followup. We'll give you a call within a few days after you pick up your car to make sure you're satisfied with our work. We don't have to. We want to. We care.

A-G Blanks SWE, Wins Draw For Playoff Berth

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — During the preseason, Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls offered how if the Chargers stayed healthy his might be one of the school's best teams in many a year.

He was not lying. Ayden-Grifton has proved that throughout the season. The latest and perhaps the most convincing proof came Friday night as the Chargers totally dominated Southwest Edgecombe, 14-0, to win a share of the ECC championship.

The win left Ayden-Grifton at 8-2 overall and 5-1 in the league, tied with Southwest Edgecombe and Charles B. Aycock, which defeated North Pitt, 36-6, Friday night, for the league championship.

The victory, however, did not give the Chargers a berth in the playoffs. A drawing Saturday morning in Wilson did that. The Chargers won the preliminary drawing held to decide which team would go first in the drawing to determine the league's playoff representatives.

Seven numbers were put in a box and the teams drawing the lowest two numbers were in the playoffs. Sauls drew first and picked the number one, giving the Chargers the ECC's Division I playoff berth.

C.B. Aycock drew next and pulled out a number two, giving the Falcons the league's Division II playoff berth. Southwest Edgecombe drew last and pulled out a number three.

"This is what we've been shooting for all season," Sauls said afterward outside his team's lockerroom. "We were very determined tonight. We've worked for three years for this and nobody can take it away."

As has been the case throughout much of the season, it was the Ayden-Grifton defense that led the way. The A-G defense limited Southwest to 90 yards rushing and 133 yards total offense.

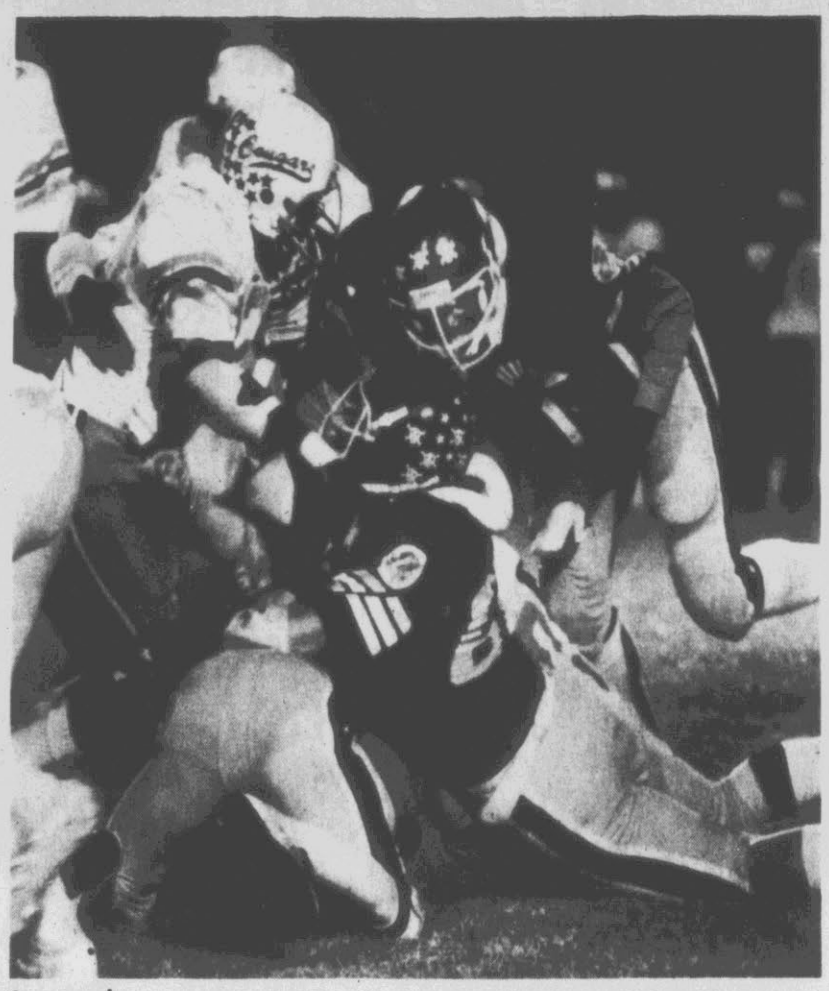

Moreover, the Chargers held SWE halfback Wayne Mayo, who entered the game as the league's second-ranked rusher with 974 yards, to a meager eight yards in six carries.

"Our defense played exceptionally well throughout the ball game," Sauls said. "Entering the game, we felt like we had the best defense in the conference and we felt like our defense would be able to limit the things they'd be able to do."

The defense was not the whole story, however. While the Charger offense managed only two scores — one a five-yard run by fullback Gregory Jackson early in the second period and the other a fumble recovery by center Derrick Atkinson late in the final period — it did control the ball most of the evening.

In the first half the Chargers ran 31 plays to the Cougars 12. For the game, A-G had 58 plays to the Cougars 39.

"Our inability to score in certain key situations gave us grave concern on the sidelines," Sauls said. "We felt like we controlled the game but weren't scoring enough."

Stopped

Ayden-Grifton was led on offense by tailback Cleveland Coley, who gained 117 yards on 20 carries and now has 913 yards this season. Jackson added 94 yards on 23 carries, giving him 926 yards this season.

• •

Ayden-Grifton received the opening kickoff on this windy and cool first Friday in November and promptly moved into Southwest Edgecombe territory via on the legs of Coley.

Coley seemed headed nowhere as he looked for room around the right side on third and seven. But the 5-5, 145-pound senior tailback suddenly found a crack and sprinted 50 yards, down to the Southwest 33.

The drive ended two plays later when Bernard Ricciarelli's pass was picked off by Darryl Hussey — the first of two interceptions for Hussey. The Chargers got the ball back three plays later, however, when Chris Strickland intercepted a Kevin Battle pass at the A-G 43.

Eleven plays and over 5½ minutes later the Chargers went ahead as Jackson crashed over from five yards out with less than a minute left in the opening period.

Jackson kept the drive going when he drove for four yards on fourth and one from the SWE 47, but it was his 38-yard run with a screen pass from Riccarelli that sent the Chargers rolling into the end zone.

With second and 26 from the A-G 41 following a 15-yard holding penalty and a one-yard loss, Ricciarelli hit Jackson on the left with a screen pass. Jackson eluded one tackler in the backfield and then raced down the sideline before being tackled at the SWE 21.

The Chargers got the ball back early in the second period when right tackle Matthew McCotter hit Battle as he went to throw. The wobby pass was picked off by Chuck Smithwick, who returned it eight yards to the SWE 48.

Ayden-Grifton picked up one first down on the ensuing series on fourth and one, but was then forced to punt. The Cougars gained only one yard on its next series and punted the ball to the SWE 46.

Ayden-Grifton moved to the SWE 14 before being stopped on downs as the half came to an end — a half dominated by the green-and-gold clad Chargers.

In the opening 24 minutes of play, the Chargers managed 162 yards total offense to the Cougars 17. Ayden-Grifton had six first downs to the Cougars one, that coming on a penalty.

The second half started with Southwest Edgecombe gaining more yards on its second play from scrimmage than it did in all the first half. With second and 11 from the 19, reserve halfback James Thorne ran around right end for 27 yards.

Two plays later a 15-yard clipping penalty moved the ball back to the SWE 24. Battle, however, hit Melton Graham with a 15-yard pass and a 15-yard personal foul penalty was tacked onto the play to move the ball to the AG 47.

On fourth and three from there Mayo rambled for four yards for the first down. Thorne added a 15-yard run two plays later as the Cougars moved to the A-G 22 — SWE's deepest penetration of the night. The march stalled, however, when the Cougars were called for an illegal motion penalty which moved the ball back to the 26.

"We felt like they'd come out hard in the second half," Sauls said. "But we were very determined tonight."

The Chargers, determined though they were, turned more conservative and that, plus better play from the Cougar defense, kept them from scoring until late in the final period.

"We played conservatively for three reasons," Sauls said. "First, because of the wind. Second, because we wanted to keep the football away from them and, third, we were not having a good night throwing the football."

After failing to move on its first series and having Joey Kennedy get off a 67-yard punt, Ayden-Grifton set up house in Cougar territory.

Twice the Chargers were stopped on downs in Cougar territory, at the 11 and at the 26. The Charger defense, meanwhile, was containing Southwest after its initial thrust of the second half.

The Cougars did not get past midfield again until Forbes, in for the injured Battle, hit David Williams with a 28-yard pass with less than 30 seconds left in the game. Williams fumbled as he went down, however, and Cleveland Coley recovered at the 26.

Ayden-Grifton's only score of the second half came after a SWE mistake. After the Cougars failed to pick up a yard on three plays, Battle went back to punt, replacing Thorne, who usually does the Cougar punting.

Seemingly, SWE had a special play on. It never materialized, however, because the snap went over Battle's head and he was forced to fall on the ball at the SWE 4.

It took the Chargers only two plays to score. From the three, Jackson tried the middle and fumbled. But center Derrick Atkinson recovered the ball in the end zone for the score. Ricciarelli then hit a wide-open Kennedy for the two points and A-G led, 14-0, with 1:32 left in the game.

Ninety-two seconds later Sauls and his Chargers had won their fourth game at home in as many tries and, more important, had captured a share of the ECC championship.

Rams Shut Out Firebirds

STANHOPE — Robert Sheppard gained 71 yards and scored one touchdown to lead Greene Central to 19-0 victory over Southern Nash in the season finale for both teams.

The Rams finish the season at 5-5-0 overall and 2-4-0 in the league. Southern Nash, the ECC champion last season, ends up 2-8-0 overall and 2-4-0 in the conference.

After a scoreless first period, the Rams took the lead early in the second quarter when Sheppard ran it in from six yards out to cap a 71-yard drive. The kick failed, but Greene Central led, 6-0, with 10:51 left in the half.

The Rams added to their lead in the third period. Following a punt that was downed at the GC 3, the Rams drove 97 yards for their second TD.

Tailback Terrace Edwards appeared headed for the score on a short run, but fumbled and tight end Greg Speight recovered in the end zone for the touchdown. The pass failed, but the Rams led, 12-0, with 3:23 left in the third period.

Greene Central's final touchdown came late in the final quarter. Wingback James Artis, who gained 50 yards on three carries, keyed the drive with a 39-yard run.

Moments later, quarterback Brian Forbes hit Chris Ginn with a 29-yard pass for the score. Donald Warren kicked the PAT and the Rams led, 19-0, with 3:10 left in the game.

The Rams outgained the Firebirds in total yards, 242 to 136, with all of Southern Nash's yardage coming on the ground.

The shut out was the third this season for the Ram defense, which earlier in the year blanked James Kenan, 14-0, and North Pitt, 30-0.

12 Nominated For Lombardi Award

HOUSTON (AP) -- Twelve top college football players, five defensive linemen, four offensive linemen and three linebackers, have been nominated for the 12th annual Lombardi Award, symbolic of the nation's top college lineman.

The list of 12 will be reduced to four finalists before the winner is announced Dec. 10 at a $125-per plate dinner.

Named Saturday were: offensive linemen Roy Foster, Southern California, Kurt Becker, Michigan, Brad Edelman, Missouri, Sean Farrell, Penn State; defensive linemen, Irv Eatman, UCLA, David Galloway, Florida, Tim Krumrie, Wisconsin, Kenneth Sims, Texas and Billy Ray Smith, Arkansas; and linebackers Chip Banks, Southern California, Johnnie Cooks, Mississippi State, Bob Crable, Notre Dame.

Sportscaster Bryant Gumbel will be master of ceremonies and former Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes will be a featured speaker. Jim Stillwagon, the first Lombardi Award winner, also is scheduled to speak.

The award is named in honor of Vince Lombardi, the former coach at Green Bay and Washington, who died of cancer. Proceeds from the dinner are donated to the American Cancer Society for cancer research.

From 1927 to 1933, Helen Wills Moody of the United States won every set of every tennis match she played. During that time she won five Wimbledon titles and four U.S. championships.

Thurber Named To A-A Team

Former Greenville Rose pole vaulter Mike Thurber has been named to the second-annual National High School Track All-America team as selected by a committee of over 100 high school coaches.

Thurber, who will attend UCLA this spring but will not run track until next season, was one of only nine athletes from North Carolina and one of only 375 from across the nation to be named to the select team. There were 1,270 named to the honorable mention squad.

Last year Thurber was one of eight Rose High athletes to advance to the state meet. Thurber won the state title with a leap of 14-6 and then went on to clear 15-2 to set a state record.

In the only other area selection, Delphine Mabry of Southwest Edgecombe was named to the honorable mention team.

Others from North Carolina named to the team were: Katrina Grier from West Charlotte and Jimmy Allen from Forest Hills (Marshville) in the long jump and Clara Hairston of East Forsyth in the 100 meter hurdles.

Also named to the team was the 400-meter relay team from Northern Durham: Alston Glenn, Arthur Glenn, Greg Neal and Jeff Parker. Neal was also named to the team in the long jump. Mamie Wilson, also of Northern Durham, was selected to the team in the 100 meters.

An estimated 875,000 athletes representing 15,000 high schools were considered for the team. Winners were selected on the basis of performance in the state meets.

The program is sponsored by the American Textile Manufacturers Institute.

Gurley, Grantham Lift Aycock Past North Pitt

BETHEL — J.L. Gurley rushed for 181 yards and two touchdowns to lead Charles B. Aycock to an easy 36-6 victory over North Pitt Friday night and a share of the Eastern Carolina Conference championship.

The victory left Aycock tied with Ayden-Grifton and Southwest Edgecombe for the league's top spot at 5-1. The Chargers defeated the Cougars, 14-0, Friday to force the three-way tie.

A draw was held Saturday morning in Wilson and the Falcons came out with a second-place finish and will play at Havelock Friday night in the opening round of the Division II playoffs.

Ayden-Grifton drew the top spot and will play host to White Oak Friday night in the first round of the state 3-A Division I playoffs.

The Falcons, who finished the regular season with a 9-1-0 record, wasted little time Friday night in taking command of the game. Paul Thomas capped a 12-play drive on a seven-yard run early in the first period and then added the kick for a 7-0 lead with 7:11 left in the first period.

It stayed that way until Thomas hit Nicky Burroughs with a 16-yard scoring toss with 7:41 left in the half. Thomas kicked the PAT, the second of four extra points.

Four minutes later Gurley added to the CBA lead with a 26-yard run as the Falcons went into the dressing room with a 21-0 lead.

Thomas, who threw two TD passes and ran in another, hit Randy Pate with a 27-yard pass early in the third period and then hit Steve Hicks for the two points for a 28-0 lead.

Gurley then ripped off a 62-yard scoring run seven minutes later for the Falcons' final tally of the evening.

North Pitt's only score came early in the final period when Ken Whitehurst raced 14 yards into the end zone. The pass for two failed.

Gurley's 181 yards gives him 829 yards this season. Ken Grantham, the ECC's leading rusher going into the game, added 120 yards on the ground in 20 carries and now has 1,399 yards this season.

To the editor:

Did you expect many people to respond to your request for possible ECU games? People are generally free with suggestions and complaints as long as no effort is required.

Unfortunately, most people do not understand the effort and problems required in scheduling. Having been close to (the late Clarence) Stasavich and Bill Cain, I know the frustrations they experienced in trying to up-grade the football schdedule. It's tough to co-ordinate timing, cost, distance, etc., with the type of teams you would like to play.

It's obvious ECU is frozen out of the ACC. Rightly or wrongly, it is a decision which has been made.

Who could we play who is within traveling distance and has a program within our limitations but has some name attractions?

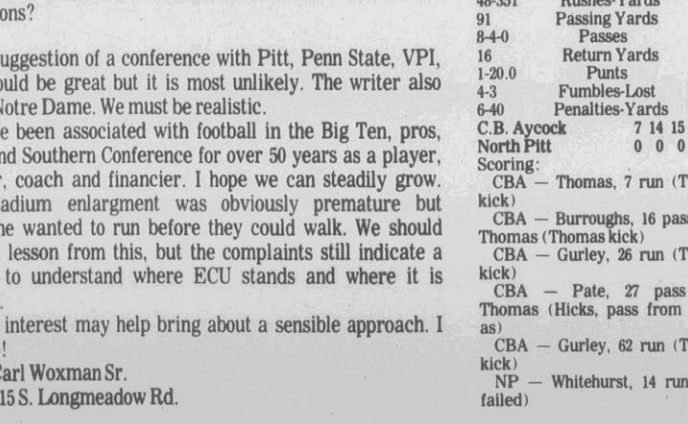

The suggestion of a conference with Pitt, Penn State, VPI, etc., would be great but it is most unlikely. The writer also forgot Notre Dame. We must be realistic.

I have been associated with football in the Big Ten, pros, ACC, and Southern Conference for over 50 years as a player, planner, coach and financier. I hope we can steadily grow. The stadium enlargment was obviously premature but everyone wanted to run before they could walk. We should learn a lesson from this, but the complaints still indicate a failure to understand where ECU stands and where it is headed.

Your interest may help bring about a sensible approach. I hope so!

Conley Awarded Forfeit Victory Over Havelock

HAVELOCK — Havelock, after apparently wrapping up a Division II playoff berth against C.B. Aycock in next weekend's state playoffs saw its hopes crushed when it had to forfeit the game on Saturday.

James Nolan scored two touchdowns and Jeffrey Frazier rushed for 96 yards to lead Havelock to a what appeared to be a 34-14 victory over D.H. Conley Friday night in the Coastal Conference football game.

With the win Havelock became the league's Division II playoff representative. But Conley had noticed that the team had dressed several junior varsity players in the game, those youths having already participated in ten games, the regular season limit for high school players. Viking coach Gerald Garner informed the officials of this fact and protested the game. Under North Carolina High School Athletic Association rules, it was not necessary for the players to actually partipate in the game, but only to dress to be in violation of the rule.

Late Saturday afternoon, West Carteret was informed by Charles Adams of the NCHSAA that it would serve as the league's Division II representative and that Havelock had forfeited the game to Conley.

The Vikings, who finish the season at 4-6-0 overall and 3-2 in the league, ended the season tied with West Carteret for second place, but the Patriots gained the playoffs by having beaten the Vikings during the season.

The Patriots defeated North Lenoir, 20-6, to close out any hopes of the Vikings to advance. Had West Carteret lost, Conley would have been the representative. Havelock held a similiar advantage over West Carteret, having beaten the Pats earlier in the season.

Against the Vikings, the Rams scored 28 first-half points to take a lead that was never threatened. DHC did not score until the final period.

Vaughn Franklin scored the Rams' first TD on a nine-yard pass from Mike Green. Dwight Downie kicked the PAT. Tom Young scored the second TD on a two yard run and Downie again added the point after.

The Rams third score came on a one-yard run by Nolan. The kick failed, however, and Havelock led, 20-0. Then, with time running out in the half, Green hit Paul Garrett with a 65-yard scoring connection. Green then hit Frazier for the two points and the Rams led, 28-0, with 20 seconds left in the half.

Havelock's final score came early in the third period following a fumbled snap by DHC that the Vikings were forced to fall on deep in their own territory. Nolan got the TD on a one-yard run. The pass for two failed.

DHC's two scores both came in the final quarter. Jesse Maye, who rushed for 54 yards on 14 carries, scored on a two-yard run and Jeff Manning hit Greg Toler for the two points.

Manning then ran it in from eight yards out later in the period for DHC's final TD of the game and season. The kick failed.

All of it came to naught, however, as the teams were notified Saturday of the forfeit.

Bath Rallies By Jamesville, 15-6

BATH — Bath High School spotted the Jamesville Bullets a 6-0 lead in the first half, then came back with two Jimmy Mason touchdowns in the second half for a 15-6 victory.

Bath, completing the year with a 9-1 record, will hold down the Tobacco Belt Conference's number two spot, and will face Carolina Conference winner Rosewood in the first round of Friday's State 1-A playoffs.

Stanley Roberts put the Bullets into the lead in the early minutes of the second period, scoring on a one-yard run. A two-point pass attempted failed on the conversion.

Late in the third period, Bath finally got on the scoreboard with Mason scoring from two yards away. Keith Sullivan kicked the PAT.

After holding the Bullets, Bath got it back and drove for the clincher. Mason again did the honors on a 32-yard run. He then passed to Jeff Tooten for the two-pointer, forcing Jamesville to score twice to get a victory.

Thomas, McGuigan Win Firsts In Campus Run

East Carolina's 4th annual intramural Cross-Campus runs, held each Homecoming, were held Saturday morning.

In the 2½-mile event, Ted Thomas won the men's division in 13:26, followed by Charles Poller in 13:57. In the women's division, Pat McGuigan finished in 18:13 and Martha Boward was second in 20:26.

Bill White won the men's division of the five-mile race in 26:22, a new course record. White captured the title last year and is the first repeat winner in the race series. Second place went to Eddie Hereford in 28:01.

The women's race was won by Kathy Edwards in 38:23, followed by Cely Shands in 42:38.

The races are open to all ECU faculty, staff and students. A total of 44 participated in the two events.

John Wayne Commemorative Carbines — President Ronald Reagan received the first pair of John Wayne Winchester Commemorative Carbines in a presentation ceremony. The President's golf-plated carbine, bearing serial number one, is one of 1,000 limited-edition Winchesters called "the Duke." An accompanying pewter-finish commemorative version also bearing serial number one, was presented to the First Lady.

In honor of Wayne and his patriotic love for the 50 United States, the John Wayne Winchester Commemorative Model 94 carbine is issued in a limited edition of 50,000. It is the first Winchester commemorative firearm chambered for the classic 32-40 Winchester caretridge. It is unique also for its oversize bow-type lever, introduced by Wayne in "Stagecoach" and popularized by him in all of his Western movies. The gun's pewter-plated receiver is decoratively engraved with scenes of a cattle drive and an Indian attack on a stagecoach. A border design highlights the titles of Wayne's most famous Western movies, and his signature is engraved on the upper tang. A nickel-silver medallion in the buttstock bears a bas-relief bust of the action against the rugged background of Monument Valley, familiar site of many of his pictures. "The Duke One of One Thousand" special deluxe version features gold-plating, fancy American walnut stock and forearm, and fitted display case. The presentation of this special gun to President Reagan continues a Winchester tradition that has included Presidents Teddy Roosevelt, Dwight Eisenhower and Lyndon Johnson.

Wildlife Commissions Adopts New Public Hearing Process — Sportsmen will find it easier to suggest changes in wildlife regulations thanks to a new public hearing process adopted by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission at its meeting on October 26.

The new regulations process will feature public input meetings held shortly after the end of hunting and fishing seasons. Wildlife commissioners, Wildlife District advisory committees, sportsman's organizations, and Wildlife Commission employees will be heavily involved in these meetings.

"In the past, we often received excellent suggestions from sportsmen at public hearings, but we did not always have enough time to fully evaluate and implement these suggestions for the upcoming hunting or fishing seasons," said J. Robert Gordon of Laurinburg, chairman of the Wildlife Commission. "Holding these meetings right after the seasons end not only gives us plenty of time to study suggestions, but also allows sportsmen to voice their opinions while the regulations are still fresh in their minds. We are also planning to simplify our regulations, and develop a regulations digest that is easier to understand."

Fishing Report

Nags Head to Ocracoke — The warm weather has helped fishing on the Outer Banks. Puppy drum and trout has been productive. Little to report offshore except for large bluefish. Flounder gigging behind Ocracoke has been good with 4-6 pound flounder abundant.

Drum Inlet to Bogue Inlet — Paul Hodges of Harkers Island reports good catches of king mackerel and flounder around Cape Lookout. The warm weather has turned on the king's offshore and kept the flounder close to shore. Speckle trout were biting around the Beaufort bridge, try a stingray grub.

Inland Fishing — Large white perch are still hanging around the Washington bridge. Little else to report on inland this week.

Local Notes — Jack Byrum of Greenville finally found the large buck he missed opening day. The white-tail was a fine eight-pointer. James White and Bennie Mobley both of Greenville caught over 100 speckle trout last week around Morehead. Maybe the specks are coming back?

ECU Lady Bucs Defeat Alumni

The East Carolina Lady Pirates, led by Sam Jones and Mary Denkler, outlasted the alumni team, which featured the greatest names in Lady Pirate basketball, 74-56, Friday night in Minges Coliseum.

Jones, who had 16 points, thrilled a crowd of approximately 600, with dazzling moves and passes and Denkler worked inside for 17 points to lead the Lady Pirate varsity victory.

Alumni coach Catherine Bolton started the five seniors on last year's 23-7 ECU squad — Laurie Sikes, Marcia Girven, Lydia Rountree, Heidi Owen and Riley — and they responded by sprinting to a 12-6 lead.

But when those five went to the bench, it soon became all varsity as they rolled out to a 45-30 halftime lead. East Carolina freshmen Loraine Foster, Darlene Chaney and Laura Regal very impressive during the pullaway.

Sheila Cotten, who was installed in the ECU Sports Hall of Fame on Saturday afternoon — the first woman to be so honored — managed four points before fouling out in the second half.

At the beginning of the second half, Bolton started a team consisting of the top five scorers in Lady Pirate history — Thompson, Debbie Freeman, Rountree, Cotten, and Riley (all 1,000-pointers in that order), but they were unable to make a move on their younger numbers.

Highlighting the evening was a time-out called by Bolton midway through the first half. After starting last year's senior group, Bolton subbed some of the older players. About five minutes after that, she called the time out, and to the amusement of the crowd, rolled an oxygen tank out onto the court.

The Lady Pirates put on their next exhibition on Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Weldon High School gymnasium where they will face Old Dominion in a scrimmage. The game will be the dedication game for the school's gym, which is being opened with the game.

Alumni: Sikes 6, Rountree 7, Girven 0, Owen 4, Riley 9, Thompson 9, Kerbaugh 0, Ross 11, Dail 0, Freeman 4, Cotten 4, Mobley 0, Rollins 2, Taylor 0, Manning 0, Lacey 0.

Varsity: Jones 16, Barnes 10, Hedges 2, Hooks 2, Denkler 17, Chaney 10, Foster 10, Truske 0, Regal 4, Harrison 3.

Women B-ball Meeting Set

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's meeting for all women interested in playing organized basketball this winter will be held Tueday at 7 p.m. at the Jaycee Park Auditorium.

Plans for women's practice days, fees and free play will be discussed. League play will begin in January.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Lesley Ball at the athletic department, 752-4137, ext. 259.

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's youth basketball program will preregister on Tuesday through Friday from 3 to 6 p.m. at the gym at which the youth wish to participate. These include South Greenville Gymn, West Greenville Gym and Elm Street Gym.

There will be a $5 participation fee. The age divisions are as follows: Pee Wee — ages 9-10; Midget — ages 11-12; Junior — ages 13-14, and Seniors — ages 15 through senior in high school. All ages are as of April 1, 1982.

Fundamentals will be stressed in practices and all players play in games. Practice begins with the following schedule: Pee Wees, Monday, Nov. 30 and Wednesday, Dec. 2, from 3 to 4 p.m.; Midgets, Monday, Nov. 30 and Wednesday, Dec. 2, from 4 to 5 p.m.; Juniors, Tuesday, Dec. 1 and Thursday, Dec. 3, from 4 to 5 p.m., and Seniors, Friday, Dec. 4, from 4 to 5 p.m.

Golf Notes

Greenville Country Club notes....

At last week's Ladies Day, a blind draw tournament was held. First low net went to Nancy Monroe with a 27. Second place was won by Marge Parrish with a 32. Third was taken by Mary Rachael Winslow with a 32 also.

Three women played in the Brook Valley Invitational recently. Nancy Monroe finished first low gross in the second flight, while Sue Castellow was second low gross in the first flight. Harriette White was second low gross in the championship flight.

Ref Stops Fight

Holmes Rises Off Canvas For TKO

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When Larry Holmes crumpled to the canvas from a thunderous right by Renaldo Snipes in the seventh round, it conjured up visions of a $10 million payday with Gerry Cooney going down the drain with him.

But Holmes reached way down into his champion's heart to survive the one-punch knockdown and recorded a disputed 11th-round knockout over Snipes Friday night to keep his World Boxing Council crown.

"I wasn't thinking about the money," said Holmes, recalling his thoughts after being knocked down for the third time in his career. "I was just thinking about getting out of the ring without getting hurt and with my title."

But fight promoter Don King and others who have a stake in the Cooney fight in March at Ceasar's Palace in Las Vegas got a scare when Holmes' knees buckled.

"I think Don King wet his pants. I think Cooney wet his pants. And I think Ceasar's Palace wet their pants too," Holmes laughed at the post-fight news conference.

Holmes, four days past his 32nd birthday, ran his record to 39-0 with his 11th successful title defense. Twenty-nine of those wins have come by knockouts, including 10 in championship bouts.

Snipes, 22-1, needed 40 stitches to close a two-inch wide gash in his left forearm. He was accidentally stabbed when a trainer holding a pair of scissors was pushed into the fighter during a post-fight scuffle outside the ring.

"No, no, no," Snipes screamed to referee Rudy Ortega, who stopped the fight at 1:05 of the 11th round after Holmes had landed five straight right hands to the head.

Later in a nearby hospital emergency room, he told his chief trainer, the Rev. Jim Williams, that he had been cheated. "They took my fight," Snipes told Williams.

But Snipes' physician said the fighter will be out of action for two months because of his injury. Snipes, who earned $150,000, referred further questions about the fight to his trainer.

Holmes, who earned every penny of his $1.1 million purse, was ahead on all three of the judges' cards when the end came.

The fight was billed as "Imminent Danger," with Holmes risking the anticipated bonanza with Cooney. And it was the first title fight in Pittsburgh in 30 years, when Jersey Joe Walcott, a 6-to-1 underdog, kayoed Ezzard Charles in the seventh round.

Pistons Drop First Game

By The Associated Press

Friday night, the Detroit Pistons surprisingly succumbed to the winless Washington Bullets (leaving the New Jersey Nets as the only team still in search of a first victory); and the Philadelphia 76ers went down at home against the Atlanta Hawks.

Then, when the Blazers dropped the Utah Jazz 119-109 in Portland, they became the last of the undefeated teams. Portland is off to a 5-0 start.

Mychal Thompson was the man responsible for Friday night's victory, putting together one of those games players dream about — 30 points, 13 rebounds, three blocked shots.

"Everybody I play is much bigger and slower than I am," the 6-foot-10 center said, "so I have to take advantage of my quickness. It was wide open inside and I was able to get the ball in front of the hoop. When you get the ball in front of the basket, it's hard to stop you from scoring."

"Mychal Thompson just killed us inside," Utah Coach Tom Nissalke said. "He could develop into one of the better centers in the league. Their hot start shouldn't surprise anybody. They're just picking up from where they left off last season."

Thompson hit his first 10 field goal tries and finished with a 13-of-14 shooting night. He sparked a burst that brought the Blazers from a 65-64 halftime deficit to a 101-82 lead early in the fourth quarter.

Hawks 106, 76ers 99

Dan Roundfield scored 28 points as Philadelphia lost its first after four victories. Roundfield also pulled down 13 rebounds as Atlanta — still missing four key players — evened its record at 2-2. Andrew Toney led the 76ers with 26 points.

Bullets 86, Pistons 82

Washington hadn't won in three tries and Detroit hadn't lost in three games. Both streaks came to a halt. Second-year center Rick Mahorn scored 19 points, including two free throws with six seconds left, to ice the game. Isiah Thomas led the Pistons with 19 points, giving him 93 points in his first four games as a professional.

Knicks 104, Mavericks 95

Campy Russell scored 29 points — the largest output by a New York player this season — to help the Knicks break a two-game losing streak and even their record at 2-2. Dallas, 1-4 and losers of three straight, were paced by rookies Rolando Blackman and Mark Aguirre, who combined for 40 points.

Bulls 114, Clippers 93

Ricky Sobers scored 22 points and Reggie Theus added 21 to lead Chicago. The Bulls led nearly the entire game, using an early 18-2 scoring spurt to take a commanding 37-17 lead at the end of the first quarter. In that period, forward David Greenwood scored 13 points, grabbed seven rebounds and blocked two shots. Phil Smith led San Diego with 17 points.

Celtics 111, Pacers 94

Larry Bird scored 15 of his 28 points in the third quarter when Boston, 3-1, broke open a tight game. The Celtics led 52-48 at the half but outscored Indiana 35-16 in the third period to take a 23-point lead. Tom Owens led the Pacers, 2-2, with 16 points.

Edenton Whips Williamston, 41-6

EDENTON — Edenton held Williamston to 103 yards total offense and scored 35 second-half points as the Aces routed the Tigers, 41-6, in the final regular season game for both clubs.

Williamston, which scored just 45 points in losing its final six games of the season, finish the year at 4-6-0 overall and 2-6-0 in the Northeastern Conference.

Williamston's only score of the evening came late in the final period with Edenton up, 41-0, when Jonathan Runion hit Tony Speller with a 12-yard scoring pass. The pass afterwards for two failed.

After a scoreless first period, Edenton got on the board midway through the second period when Robert Cofield hit Thomas White with a 19-yard pass. The kick failed.

The score remained 6-0 at the half, but the Aces erupted for 20 points in the third period and 15 in the fourth to end any thoughts the Tigers might have of winning.

Coefield got the Aces' second TD on a one-yard run and then hit White with a pass for the two points to give Edenton a 14-0 lead early in the third quarter.

Bill Whichard and Tony Crucy then each went over from two yards out later in the period. Both point-after kicks failed, but Edenton led, 26-0, going into the final period.

Ed Austin scored the Aces' fifth touchdown of the night on a one-yard run and Tony White scored the final TD on a three yard run. Thomas White hit William Roundtree for the two points following Austin's tally. Thomas White kicked the PAT after Tony White's score.

TRIPLE THE DIFFERENCE

Kroger Sav-on promises to pay you Triple the Difference in cash if you can do your normal weekly food shopping for less at any other supermarket in town. Kroger Sav-on can make this promise because we have thousands of low Cost Cutter prices throughout our stores. Just purchase not less than 25 nor more than 50 items* totalling $20 or more at Kroger Sav-on (Excluding items prohibited by law and meat items). Compare these prices with any other supermarket in town. If the total amount for the identical items is less at any other supermarket in town this week, we'll Triple the Difference in cash. Bring your Kroger Sav-on register tape plus the other store's prices to your Kroger Sav-on store. See for yourself who really has low prices.

ADVERTISED ITEM POLICY

Each of these advertised items is required to be readily available for sale in each Kroger Sav-on, except as specifically noted in this ad. If we do run out of an item we will offer you your choice of a comparable item when available, reflecting the same savings or a rain-check which will entitle you to purchase the advertised item at the advertised price within 30 days.

Prices Fall As Traders Face Restrictive Orders

By PAULINE JELINEK
AP Business Writer

To avoid possible defaults on November-delivery feeder cattle contracts, Chicago Mercantile Exchange officials took the unusual action Friday of ordering traders to reduce their contract positions.

Prices fell somewhat as traders began liquidating positions, one analyst said. All livestock, as well as the pork belly futures prices, fell in quiet activity.

Exchange officials said the restrictive action was taken because of the "extraordinary open interest" and because the period for delivery on the contract will be shortened by the Thanksgiving holiday. Open interest, the number of contracts outstanding, stood at about 4,838 Thursday, compared with 742 a year ago. Each contract represents 42,000 pounds or about 65 animals.

After holding a special meeting late Thursday, the Business Conduct Committee of the exchange issued a report Friday morning saying "an emergency" existed and, effective immediately, all trading would be limited to liquidation only.

Furthermore, by the close of trading Tuesday, speculators must liquidate half of their contract positions, and the limit on the number of speculative positions allowed will decreased to 100 from 300. Approved hedge accounts were ordered reduced to 100 by the close on Nov. 13.

The move was criticized by a number of analysts because it raises the question of how much any exchange should tamper with free trading in the marketplace. Others said it was more palatable because the contracthis more thinly traded than others and therfore more susceptible to erratic price moves.

"I had calls starting at 8 a.m. that have run the gamut," said Larry Rosenberg, chairman of the Business Conduct Committee. "Some said it was the greatest thing since the old sliced bread and others made me afraid to go out and start my car."

Exchanges sometimes take such restrictive action when there is a fear that supplies will not be large enough to deliver against the contract. But Rosenberg said the worry in this instance is that delivery on the number of oustanding contracts would overburden terminals and federal livestock inspectors and defaults would result.

There was widespread talk on the trading floor that a major cattle feeder who also speculates in the market wanted to take delivery on a large number of contracts, a situation contrary to the exchange's primary purpose of working as a price setting mechanism rather than a livestock delivery operation.

There also were rumors that the situation was created by a firm which was trading with a "special tax purpose" in mind, one analysts said.

"It's that there is just not the time or perhaps not the physical capability for delivery — we are not making any accusations," Rosenberg said. "We believe all the shorts are well intentioned and that they want to make delivery and that all the longs want to take delivery, but that the facilities are just not there to process that many deliveries and then there would be default."

Oats futures rose sharply again in a similar situation on the Chicago Board of Trade. Supplies of oats are tight amid light farmer selling. Open interest in the December oats contract is high, but officials there say there is still sufficient time for traders to offset their positions before the delivery process begins next month.

The December contract rose the 6-cent daily limit set by the exchange and settled at $2.28½ a bushel.

Cocoa prices opened weaker and then took off higher following rumors that two leading trade houses interested in lending the International Cocoa Or-ganization money to do further purchases for its buffer stock, said Phil Spinelli, analyst in New York with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Analysts have said in recent weeks that it appeared previous buffer stockpiling might not be effective in supporting prices as the organization sought to refinance its buying program.

Business Notes

NEW BUSINESS

Marshal F. Henson, formerly of Commercial Credit Claims Service, announced that he has taken an early retirement to open Henson Adjusters and Appraisers here. He said the business will serve eastern North Carolina.

Henson, long time resident of the area, attended N.C. State University. He served as vice president of the N.C. Insurance Adjusters Association and is presently serving as state director from Greenville on the association. He was elected "adjuster of the year."

Henson and his wife, Sue, have two daughters, Holly and Sandy.

SHARES SOLD

North State Savings & Loan Corp., established in 1979 as a state-chartered, stock-owned, North Carolina Savings Guaranty Corp. insured institution, announced the completion of the firm's sale of 60,000 shares of class A common stock.

North State said the stock issuance, the firm's second, has increased its capital base by $720,000.

World's Fair To Open Next May

THE SUNSPHERE ... focal point of the 1982 World's Fair, will rise 226 feet above the fair site, with the top five-story globe containing a restaurant and observation area. When completed the structure will be covered in silvered glass panels.

The steel-girder frame of the Sunsphere stands as a reminder to all of those working to get the 1982 World's Fair ready that they have a long way to go in only 175 days.

With the theme "Energy Turns The World," the Fair will be held in Knoxville, Tenn., from May 1 through Oct. 31, 1982, and construction is continuing at a furious pace to meet the deadline.

In the past two weeks, there have been several goals reached, according to fair officials, including the topping-off of the United States Pavilion on Oct. 21 and groundbreaking for the natural gas industry's pavilion.

Fair officials say that they are most proud, though, of the decision of the People's Republic of China to participate in the exposition. China's pavilion will consist of 15,000 square feet of inside space and 5,000 square feet of outdoor space in the southern part of the site adjacent to Funland and the University of Tennessee's Neyland Stadium. Part of their exhibit will include relics and antiques representative of Chinese culture, fair president S.H. "Bo" Roberts Jr., said in an announcement from Peking on Oct. 21.

This is the first time that a World's Fair has been held in the Southeastern United States. There have been several fairs in the region, but the 1982 World's Fair is the first to be sanctioned by the international exposition commission in Paris.

The fair sits between downtown Knoxville and the University of Tennessee main campus on a 70-acre site bordering on the Tennessee River.

The fair will have more than just exhibits, though. Entertainers scheduled include Bill Cosby, the Israeli Philharmonic Orchestra, Bob Hope, Red Skelton, Up With People, the Knoxville Symphony Orchestra, Patricia Neal, the Atlanta Symphony-Chorus, the Grand Kabuki Theater of Japan, Debby Boone, Jennifer Muller and The Works, Tennessee Ernie Ford, the Houston Ballet, Victor Borge, Stephanie Mills, Carlos Montoya and Peter Nero with the Knox Pops.

Sporting events are also planned for the fair's duration. Events include the Athletic Congress men's and women's outdoor track championships, an international round-robin basketball tournament, Avon 10-kilometer women's race and the U.S. Baseball Federation tournament.

Children and adults alike will be able to enjoy Funland, the fair's amusement area. There will be rides and other diversions, all centered around the fair's energy theme.

At present, the international participants in the 1982 World's Fair include the United States, Italy, France, West Germany, Great Britain, the European Economic Community, Japan, Australia, Mexico, Saudi Arabia, Canada, Korea, Hungary and the People's Republic of China.

Corporate exhibitors, including states and municipalities, include the city of Knoxville, state of Alabama (through the Mountain Lakes Association), American Gas Association, America's Electric Energy Exhibit Inc., North American Philips Corp., Tenneco Inc., Occidental Petroleum Corp., Knox County, Tenn., Baptist Ministries, Church of Christ, Association of Christian Denominations, Federal Express, U.S. Steel OILWELL Division, Ford Motor Co., state of Kentucky, state of North Carolina, Tennessee Valley Authority, Control Data Corp., Stokely Van Camp Inc., Dairymen Inc., Anheuser Busch Corp. and Union Carbide Corp.

Corporate sponsors include American Express, Coca-Cola Co., Delta Air Lines, General Electric, Greyhound Lines Inc., JFG Coffee Co., Lay Packing Co., Avis Rent-a-Car, Philips Informations Systems Inc., Universal Imports, Carey of Knoxville/Bell Limousine, E.I. du Pont de Nemours and Co., Philips Business Systems Inc., Word Processing Services, Federal Express, Eastman Kodak Co., Pacific World and Travel, Amliner American Coaches Inc., Dairymen Inc., Kingtron Corp. and Stokely Van Camp Corp.

Most of the fair's buildings are temporary structures which will be taken down after the exposition. The United States Pavilion, an energy-effecient solar building, will be only one of two structures build specifically for the fair to be left standing after it is over. The other is the Tennessee Amphitheater, and it will be left in keeping with plans to turn part of the fair site into a park.

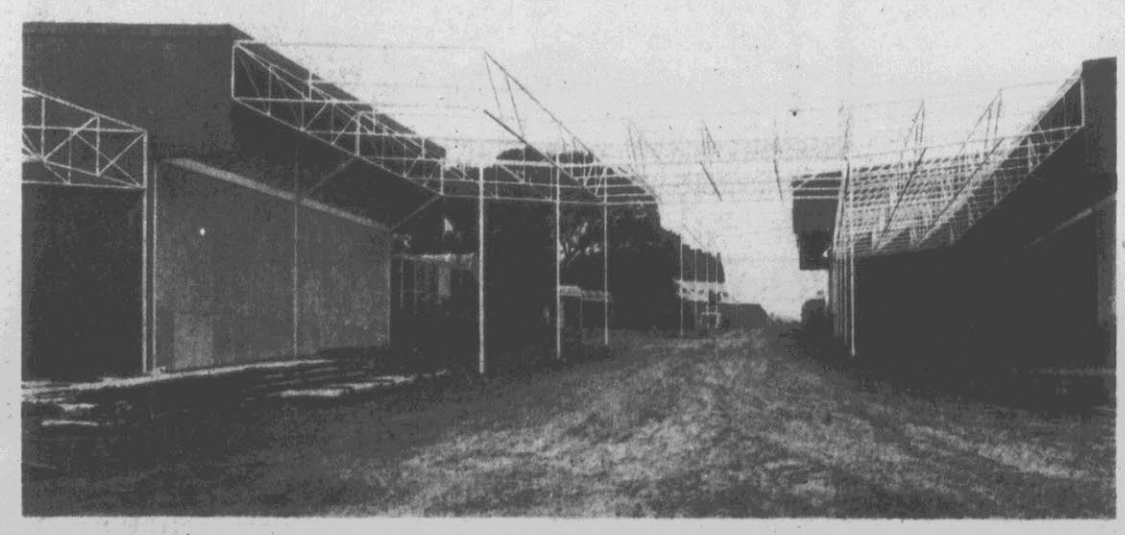

There are almost 20,000 hotel and motel rooms available in the Knoxville and Gatlinburg-Pigeon Forge resort areas. Many resort areas in western North Carolina are developing vacation packages which would provide rooms in North Carolina and bus trips to the fair.

Many people have expressed concern that price-gouging will be rampant in anticipation of the influx of tourists to the fair. Officials announced that hotels and motels will be allowed to raise their rates only 21 percent between now and May 1. Violators of this policy will be excluded from the fair's computer reservation system, through which most room reservations are made.

Knoxville sits at the junction of Interstates 40 and 75 in eastern Tennessee, and is about 130 miles west of Asheville. Tickets to the fair are priced at $9.95 for a one-day adult admission and $15.95 for a two-day adult admission. Discounts for children and senior citizens are available, and many hotels and motels are offering packages including accomodations and admission to the fair.

INTERNATIONAL PAVILIONS ... are under construction along this walkway. The short building at center left is an international refreshment area.

Candlelight Wedding Held

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Paul Russ of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. James Rex Smith of Ayden.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Betty leRoux, organist and Ann Smith, sister of the bridegroom, and Anne Joyner, flutists. Mrs. Ann Pearce sang "There Is Love" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a wedding gown of silk organza and imported peau d'ange lace over taffeta fashioned in a Victorian silhouette. The empire bodice had a sheer yoke outlined with a double lace ruffle and had a lace Edwardian collar. The full bishop sleeves had lace cuffs at the wrists. Bands of lace ruffles extended down the skirt front and around the hemline of the column skirt. A detachable train was banded with lace and flowed chapel length. Her chapel length mantilla veil of imported English tulle was bordered with lace scallops and attached to a Camelot cap. The bride carried a colonial nosegay of white miniature carnations, blue daisies and bridal pink roses interspersed with white baby's breath tied with white lace ribbon.

Sue Boyd of Greenville was her sister's honor attendant and wore a formal gown of riviera blue tineseta Italian silk designed with an open neckline featuring miniature rolled shoulder straps. The empire styled gown and a flared accordian pleated skirt and was complemented by a cocoon jacket with lettuce edging. She carried a colonial nosegay of white miniature carnations, baby's breath and blue daisies tied with blue and white lace ribbon highlighted with blue silk gypsophila.

Bridesmaids included Barbara May of Grimesland, sister of the bride, Tina Holland and Grayson Castellow, both of Greenville and Wendy Jones of Ayden. They wore marigot blue gowns styled identically to that of the honor attendant and each carried a single white mum nosegay with blue baby's breath and ribbon.

The flower girl was Wendy Worthington of Ayden, niece of the bridegroom, who wore a formal gown of white organza over taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with a ruffle and baby doll sleeves. The three-tiered skirt of organza was accented with Val lace and a white satin ribbon encircled the waistline forming a bow with streamers in back. She wore a halo of white silk flowers and carried a white basket filled with white miniature carnations, bab y's breath and blue daisies featuring blue and white lace ribbons.

MRS. RICHARD MARK SMITH

The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Stuart Smith, brother of the bridegroom, Gordon Jones, Randy Jones, Dale Butler and Tony Butler, all of Ayden.

Mrs. Jane Worthington of Ayden, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the guest register and Mrs. Gail Kelly of Wilson, aunt of the bride, was mistress of ceremony assisted by Mrs. Estelle Cannon of Greenville. Rice bags were distributed by Christy Kelly of Wilson, cousin of the bride, and Heather Pearce of Greenville.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall.

The refreshment table was centered with a five branch silver candelabra holding an arrangement of pink roses, white carnations and blue daisies interspersed with baby's breath.

After the bridal couple cut the traditional slice of cake, it was served by Mrs. Lynn Heath, sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Beulah Smith, aunt of the bridegroom, poured punch. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Don Rhodes and good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Bob Melton.

The bridegroom graduated from Ayden-Grifton High School and attended Pitt Community College. He is employed by Rex Smith Farms. The bride graduated from Rose High School and attends Pitt Community College.

The couple will live in Ayden after a wedding trip to the North Carolina mountains.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I was really interested in the recent survey McCall's magazine did among 160,000 teenagers who said what they wanted most from their parents is more advice.

Let me get this straight. Are they saying that just because they slam a door on your lips they still want to hear what you've got to say?

What a fool I've been. I thought when my kids hummed the theme from "Dragnet" during my lectures or drove off in the car while I was explaining my philosophy of life, they just didn't care.

We've been on an understanding-children kick for almost 20 years now. I don't think there's a mother alive who does not understand children's fears, their legal rights, what motivates them, their sensitivities and their concerns. It's been a Camelot of ask-not-what-children-can-do-for-their-parents-but-what-parents-can-do-for-their-kids.

God forbid a parent should swim against the tide, but let me tell you where most parents are coming from. The No. 1 complaint we get from kids is, "You don't trust me." Wrongo. You don't trust US.

You don't trust your parents enough to tell them the truth and have us believe you. You don't trust us enough to risk our disapproval of anything you do. You don't trust us to pull from our experience and youth and understand what you're going through.

You don't trust us enough to share what you're feeling. You don't trust us enough to follow advice that we give you out of pure love.

You play games with us. Find the evidence. Catch that lie. Where did we really go and with whom.

We fear you. Does that surprise you at all? It shouldn't. We're afraid if we're too strict or too dogmatic, we will lose you to peer pressure, drugs, someone else's liberal mother . . . or the open road.

Two minds meeting from two generations is difficult at best. Both must compromise. If we talk too much, we're a nag. If we don't talk at all, we don't care.

If we come too close to your life, we smother you. If we keep too great a distance, we lose contact altogether.

Probably the only optimism I got out of the survey was a 17-year-old who acknowledged, "It's tough to be a parent. I let my Mom ramble on and on when she's giving me advice about something, but once I get past the lecture, I usually can filter out a piece or two of good advice."

Ask yourself what did your mother get out of it and you'll just begin to understand what parents are all about.

Heimlech Method Is Explained

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women held its meeting at the Ramada Inn last week. A program on the Heimlech method was given by Tony Brannon of the Greenville Fire Department.

Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Paul Nethercut and Fire Chief Jenness Allen and his wife.

Nethercut was honored by the PCAIW for being chosen fire-rescue man of the year by his co-workers. He was given a plaque from the group by Hilda Pinkham, safety chairperson, during Fire Prevention Week.

Evelyn Stroud, membership chairperson, installed Debbie Keating as a new member of the organization. Ms. Stroud was recognized as being chosen "Professional Business Women of the Day" recently.

President Joyce Mills, CPIW, conducted the meeting.

Norman- Smith Vows Solemnized Saturday

SALTER PATH — Jo Ann Smith and Bruce Edwards Norman Jr. were married in a double ring ceremony performed Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The ceremony, conducted by the Rev. Foster Reynolds, took place in the Salter Path United Methodist Church.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Smith Jr. of Ayden, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Edwards Norman Sr. of Salter Path.

The matron of honor was Elva Lu Guthrie of Salter Path, sister of the bride and the maid of honor was Joan Abernathy of Richmond, Va. Bridesmaids included Connie Willis, sister of the bridegroom, Jeanine W. Norman, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Sonya Willis, niece of the bridegroom, all of Salter Path and Peach Davis of Ayden. The flower girl was Toni Marie Frost of Salter Path.

The bridegroom's brother-in-law, Brink Willis of Salter Path was best man while ushers included Hugh Guthrie, brother-in-law of the bride, Dale and Mike Norman, brothers of the bridegroom, Ted Willis and Brink Willis Jr., nephew of the bridegroom, all of Salter Path.

A program of music was presented by Victor Salter, organist, Dwayne Salter, pianist, Alice Mullen and Steve Marshall, soloists.

The bride wore a formal gown of chantilly and alencon lace over white taffeta featuring a Queen Anne neckline, long fitted sleeves and tiered chapel train. The neckline and cuffs were trimmed in iridescent sequins and seed pearls. She chose a Juliet cap with an illusion chapel length veil trimmed in alencon lace and carried a bouquet of white silk roses.

The honor attendants and bridesmaids wore identical dresses of ice blue taffeta fashioned with a high Victorian neckline, long full sleeves and full skirt. The dresses were accented with cummerbunds, bows at the waist and lace trim. They each carried silk roses with matching blue velvet streamers.

The flower girl was dressed in a long white dress of taffeta with ruffles accenting the neckline and sleeves. It featured an ice blue taffeta sash and lace at the waistline. She wore a headpiece of blue flowers with white ribbon streamers and carried a lace basket of pastel silk flowers.

The bride is a graduate of Arendell Parrott Academy, Kinston and ECU. She is a personal banker at Wachovia Bank, Vanceboro. The bridegroom is a graduate of West Carteret High School and is a self-employed commercial fisherman.

The couple will be living at Emerald Isle after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Assisting were Jo Hedgepeth, godmother of the bride, and her aunts, Rose Helms and Mildred Lilly and Whit Davis.

Rice roses and rice bags were distributed by Sonya Willis, Peach Davis and Shannon Johnson. Good-byes were said by Whit Davis.

The parents of the bridegroom gave a buffet dinner at their home Friday for family members and the wedding party. Assisting were Mrs. Jeanine Norman, Mrs. Connie Willis and Mrs. Grace Frost.

MARSALA PORK

4 center slices (each about ¼-inch thick) cooked boneless smoked pork butt
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon sweet Marsala
Garnish: watercress or parsley sprigs

Heat an 8-inch skillet and grease with a little fat cut from the butt; add the pork slices and fry until hot through and slightly browned; keep warm in a low oven. In the clean dry skillet, bring the cream to a boil; boil gently, stirring constantly, until thickened and reduced to about ¼ cup — 3 minutes or so. Off heat, stir in the Marsala until the sauce is smooth; spoon over each slice of pork — the sauce should be thick enough to hold its shape.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

WASHINGTON — Cynthia Lynn Heller and William Troy McCarter Jr. were married Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in a ceremony performed by the Rev. Ron Ivey. The double ring ceremony took place in Emmanuel Free Will Baptist Church here.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Paul Heller Jr. of Stokes, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a Bridal Original of cream qiana styled with a chapel train, empire lace bodice and sleeves with fingertip lace. Her fingertip lace veil was attached to a lace crown. She carried a cascade of cream and ivory silk roses highlighted with pink miniature roses and baby's breath.

The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Troy McCarter Sr. of Washington and his father served as best man.

The bride's honor attendant was Linda Lou Jones of Tarboro, aunt of the bride . She wore an emerald green qiana gown styled with a pleated skirt. She carried a nosegay of cream silk roses and matching ribbons.

Flower girls were Becky and Alice Cannon of Stokes, who were dressed in mint green print gowns. They each carried a bouquet of silk roses.

Ushers were Richard Paul Heller III of Stokes, brother of the bride, and John Robinson of Washington, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was rendered by Tom Jones, organist, and Mrs. Janet Elks, soloist, both of Washington.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School and attended ECU. The bridegroom graduated from Washington High School and attended ECU. She is employed by Belk Tyler and he works at Stanadyne in Washington.

A rehearsal party was given by the parents of the bridegroom Friday. Assisting was Mrs. Mary Jane McCarter, aunt of the bridegroom. A cake cutting was also held.

Mr. & Mrs. Branch Goodson affirmed their love for one another in a seaside ceremony September 20, 1981 at the Goodson Cottage in Atlantic Beach, North Carolina. The couple's parents stood as their witnesses before God with Rev. John Farmer officiating. A small gathering of immediate family shared this joyous occasion with the couple.

The bride, Melissa Long, is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. C. Richard Long of St. Marys, Ohio. She received a B.S.B.A. from East Carolina University and is employed as a staff accountant and EDP manager for Richard K. Worsley, CPA. The groom is the son of Mr. & Mrs. Philip L. Goodson, Jr. of Greenville, North Carolina. He is a sales representative for Tar Road Enterprises, a distributor for Solar One, a leading manufacturer of solar hot water systems.

Mr. & Mrs. Goodson were honored by the bride's parents with a reception in St. Marys, Ohio on October 25, 1981. A reception honoring the couple is being held in Greenville this afternoon by the groom's parents and a group of relatives at the Gathering Place, former home of the groom's great grandparents.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

When a young friend told me that for her wedding she had a tiered and frosted carrot cake, I almost fell off my kitchen stool. Yes, I had encountered a Genoise (the French butter sponge) and a chocolate torte (the Viennese cake-style dessert) used for wedding cakes. But I had no inkling that a vegetable concoction might some day rival the fruited or white cakes traditional for weddings.

So be it. Recently I heard that visitors to Nantucket were flocking to a harborside cafe to enjoy the carrot cake served there. I hied myself to that Massachusetts island to ferret out the recipe.

Yes, I was lucky. Through a friend, I met the generous young baker of the cake who gave me her formula. Here it is, reduced in my test kitchen to a family-size proportion.

This carrot cake is high in sugar and oil, which helps account for its special flavor, moist texture and the fact that it slices beautifully. Its bottom surface looks slightly caramelized; right side up, it has a sugar-top crust. Most of my tasters sang the frosted cake's praises. But for several of them, it was too sweet. My own reaction? Truly worth baking when you know a sweet dessert will be appreciated by your guests.

NANTUCKET CARROT CAKE

1 cup all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2 large eggs
¾ cup oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups tightly packed thinly shredded pared carrots, see Note
1 cup chopped pecans (the size of tiny peas)
Frosting, recipe follows

Line the bottom of a loaf pan (about 8½ by 4½ by 2½ inches) with wax paper; grease paper and sides of pan. On wax paper or in a bowl thoroughly stir together the flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt and cinnamon. In a medium bowl, with a wooden spoon, beat the eggs enough to blend yolks and whites; add oil and vanilla and beat to blend; add the flour mixture; stir until smooth; stir in the carrots and ½ cup of the pecans. Turn into the prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 1 hour. Let stand on a wire rack for 10 minutes; loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; with another rack turn right side up; let cool completely. Cover top and sides with the Frosting; sprinkle with the remaining pecans.

Note: One-half pound carrots minus green tops and pared will, after shredding thinly, give the amount called for.

Frosting: Beat until blended ¼ cup butter, 4 ounces cream cheese and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Gradually beat in 1¾ cups confectioners' sugar or enough to make a good spreading consistency.

Latchkey Kids Are Prisoners In Own Homes

By DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Economic situations that force both parents to work and the increasing number of one-parent families have resulted in the mushrooming of an old and controversial phenomenon: latchkey children.

Latchkey kids are those who let themselves into an empty house after school and spend hours each day without adult supervision. Their care is an old problem. The term itself derives from the 19th century when children left on their own wore their housekeys on chains around their necks.

But, according to Dr. Thomas Long, the changing demographics of the work force combined with the high divorce rate have caused the number to sharply increase.

Long, of the Catholic University of America, bases his comments on studies by himself and his wife, Dr. Lynette Long, assistant professor of education at Loyola College in Baltimore.

Long said national statistics on the the number of latchkey children are still being compiled from the 1980 census and are not expected to be available until 1983. According to 1975 statistics from the Bureau of the Census and the Bureau of Labor Statistics, however, there were 16 million children between the ages of 3 and 13 of working mothers, and less than 2 percent of these children were enrolled in any type of group child care program. In at least 10 percent of the cases, the child cared for himself.

In 1979, Joan H. Wiskowski, assistant commissioner for the New Jersey Department of Labor and Industry, testified before Congress that there was an estimated 66,000 latchkey children in her state alone.

Long, in an extensive study of one parochial school in Washington, D.C., found 30 percent of the children were latchkeys.

A 1970 report of the Joint Commission on the Mental Health of Children estimated at that time that there were 38,000 children under the age of 6 who were left alone, and double that number left with a slightly older brother or sister.

Demographics seem to indicate the phenomenon will grow.

By 1980, for example, more than 50 percent of all mothers were participating in the labor force outside the home and predictions for the end of the decade suggest the rate will be as much as two of every three mothers.

In addition, 19 percent of all children below the age of 18 are living with only one parent. For black families, the total is 50 percent.

According to Long, parents of latchkey children appear to be somewhat ambivalent about the experience, as economic necessity coupled with social disapproval give way to accommodation, if not understanding.

Most parents of latchkey children are positive about the experience for the children and report the children learn self-help skills, take on responsibilities and solve problems earlier than other children.

Parents justify their child-care arrangements, he said, by telling themselves "My child is old enough; he can do it; it's only for a few hours."

The children, at least publicly, often support these decisions, Long said, because being sent to a day-care center "is not considered cool."

But he said little research has been done from the child's point of view.

The Longs, in their study, found the children were left alone at home an average of three hours a day — a figure that grew dramatically during holiday and vacation periods.

Of the children Long interviewed, 28 percent reported spending the summer alone, 33 percent spent the summer in the care of a relative, 28 percent attended summer camp anmd 11 percent were cared for by a baby sitter and 8 percent were at home with a parent.

One sixth grade girl reported she spent the whole summer locked in the house until her mother came home from work at 4:30 p.m. She said she "hated summer."

Long's conclusion: "In effect, they were often prisoners in their own houses."

While latchkey children may develop a sense of self-sufficiency, Long said there are also negative results, including reduced trust in other people.

Most of the children interviewed in their study, Long said, had a routine they followed after school that included either walking or taking the bus home, letting themselves into the house, locking the door behind them and immediately notifying their parents of their safe arrival.

Most of the children were instructed to "lock the door, stay in the house, don't let anyone in and don't tell anyone you are home alone."

"The parents generally did not allow the younger children either to leave the house or have friends come over," he said. "The older children were more often permitted to leave the house or have a friend visit but even those who could leave the house were usually instructed to stay in their own block or backyard."

"Most of the children had a routine that they followed after school each day, which included doing homework and house chores, but what occupied their time most was television," he said.

Long also said that the earlier a child begins to be left alone at home, the more adverse are the effects, evidenced by nightmares and general fears.

The biggest fear the study found was the fear that someone would break into the house so that children, if they heard noises, would hide

Dear Abby

Dealing With Office Gossip

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My boss asked me to write to you with a problem our office is having. Office gossip! Do you have any remedies?

A MEDICAL GROUP IN HOUSTON

DEAR GROUP: As long as there are people who are willing (indeed, eager) to listen to gossip, there will be gossip.

Gossip can be entertaining, boring, informative, true, false, malicious, innocuous, devastating, benign or it can sink a ship.

Some gossips aren't even aware that they're gossiping — they're merely attempting to be "good company," and always seem to have an amusing tale to tell.

The only remedy I know of to discourage gossip is to refuse flatly to listen. If someone says, "They say ..." and then proceeds to gossip, have the courage to ask, "And who are 'they'?"

Or if someone says, "Have you heard the latest dirt about So-and-so," have the courage to say, "No, and I'd rather not. It's none of my business." (They'll respect you for it.)

When gossips no longer have an audience, they'll quit gossiping. And not until.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 12-year-old girl, and our family just recently moved from a big city to a small town in the country. We really do love our home in the mountains.

The only thing that bugs me about our new home is that hunting is the name of the game here. Everybody hunts deer and elk. My dad is the only man in town who has any respect for wildlife. These animals don't hurt anybody, Abby. They're actually afraid of people. When I look out the window and see those beautiful deer walking across our property, then think of all the hunters out looking to kill them, it just makes me sick!

We sit in our house and hear gunshots every day. The hunters around here don't care about anything else. They shoot at anything that moves — or whatever chases their target away. That's why so many dogs have been killed around here. I'm scared to leave my dog out during the day.

DISGUSTED IN SEQUIM, WASH.

DEAR DISGUSTED: I don't know, but I've heard that hunters actually do a "kindness" by killing those beautiful animals swiftly with a bullet — otherwise they would die of starvation or overexposure. It may be true, but I still can't buy it.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have been going out with the same wonderful guy for five years, and he absolutely refuses to go to bed with me! We are both over 21 and we love each other, so this doesn't make any sense to me.

We are planning to marry, and he wants to wait until we are married, but I feel that sex is such an important part of marriage we should make sure we can get along in bed as well as we do out of bed. Abby, I am not a dog; I'm an attractive part-time model.

I am sure he's not gay — he just has these old-fashioned ideas. Please tell me what to do.

WAITING PATIENTLY

DEAR WAITING: Keep waiting. And thank your lucky stars for your wonderful old-fashioned guy. If you really love each other, you'll get along fine in bed. And should there be some kind of sexual dysfunction, there is always Masters and Johnson.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I have to chuckle when I hear these young housewives complain about cooking. Abby, they don't even know what cooking is. Everything they put on the table comes out of a can or has already been prepared and frozen, and all they have to do is thaw it out and heat it up.

There are delis and "ready-to-go" carry-out meals that just have to be picked up. And if they're too lazy to go and get it, it can be delivered to their door!

OLD-FASHIONED COOK

DEAR O.F.: Yes — isn't it wonderful!

* * *

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. Write to Abby, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250. For a personal reply, please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hot Air Ballooning For Thrills, Chills: Reporter Escapes

By FRED FERGUSON

RINGOES, N.J. (UPI) — We got all set to fly away with Vicki Harrison in her beautiful, yellow, hot air balloon, except it rained. So she told about her adventures.

Somehow after that, we never got back to ballooning. Let others do it, of which she said there are many.

"It's getting to be quite a sport," said Mrs. Harrison. "There are hundreds of people flying hot air balloons all over the country now. Mostly it's families although there are some partnerships" owning balloons.

She explained families are best "because you've always got to have a ground crew. There's nothing like kids for that." Husky teenagers are preferable, with one old enough to drive a van or pickup. The balloon and its occupants need to be retrieved when it comes down — wherever it comes down.

Like, she said, "one time I landed crossing Delaware Bay."

Yes, it was wet.

"If you get into a wind, you have to deflate. You have to land, land!

"Sometimes you have a sliding landing and the basket goes over," she said.

That's the trouble with wind. The balloon can get moving pretty fast instead of settling gently to earth. What do you do about that?

"Oh, you can brush through the tops of some trees. It slows you down," she said. Well, SHE can brush through the tops of some trees.

"But if you still wind up bouncing along the ground, what you do is you'll let it come up against those trees."

Simple. Just like that.

"Well, it's best if you do it when they're leafy and soft."

Actually, aeronauts — what you call a balloonist — don't have this kind of problem too often, she said. They take care not to. We thought that understandable.

What they do, they confine their flying to the early morning and late afternoon. It's least windy then, mostly.

And they check weather reports up to the minute they go up. If it's windy, they don't go up, which is also why we didn't go up. Wind often accompanies showers.

No, the real problem, or fun, as Mrs. Harrison, 36, mother, homemaker, aeronaut, sees it, is never knowing where you're going to set down.

"I remember one time, three of us were in the basket. We hit the water and it came up into the basket to my hips. It was October. It's a good idea to wear long underwear at times like that."

But then, she'd been tempting fate. There's this trick. It demonstrates skill. You let the balloon descend until the basket hovers just on the surface of a pond.

After you've given your passengers that little thrill, you ascend again — except if you don't, as in this case.

"It's no problem, the ground crew comes along. A lot of people carry radios to direct them to where they land. Personally, I don't. I just wait."

"I always carry my champagne, though," she said. A bottle of champagne is de rigeur. You toast with the people whose property you land on.

"It's the French tradition," she said. Those daring French balloonists of the 1800s discovered ruffled feelings about a landing in an unfortunate spot could be smoothed with a bottle of the bubbly.

"And I just love champagne," said Vicki Harrison,

"It really works very well. Sometimes you're coming down and they know about the tradition and they fight over you:

"'Land in my yard.'

"'No, come over here. Land in my yard.'"

But you do try to avoid farm fields. Land instead in an abandoned field or "look for a backyard or a lawn or a golf course. But stay off the greens."

In the latter case, you don't need to yell, "Fore!"

"But I do always try to ask, 'May I land?' They appreciate it whether you have any choice or not at that point."

That's how ballooning began for Vicki Harrison.

One day in 1974 she and her airline pilot husband, Terry, were outside when, "from we didn't know where someone said, 'May I land?' And down came this man in a balloon. Terry was enthralled. Within two weeks, we owned a balloon.

"After that, my husband learned to fly the balloon. I did all the ground stuff. Lifting, lugging. You can get tired of that after a while."

Amazing how this 5-foot, 100-pound blonde, aided by a young assistant, heaved the big wicker basket around and loaded it with four, padded, 300-pound propane tanks to fuel the burners that heat the air that makes the balloon go up.

In 20 minutes they had the eight-story high balloon laid out and rigged for inflation. Then it rained. They packed it in the van, basket and all. We tried to help. It was embarrassing. The basket was too heavy.

"I did a lot of chasing that balloon. Finally, I told him I was going to learn to fly that thing."

She did and more. With her husband, although he's away with the airline much of the time, she now runs Harrison Air from their farm here. She teaches ballooning, takes people on balloon excursions, flies exhibition flights and does advertising flights promoting a yogurt, the name of which (Yoplait) is emblazoned in huge letters on her balloon.

"We play hare and hounds, for one thing. One balloon goes off and the others try to follow."

She explains that by using the burners to ascend and releasing air to descend, aeronauts can seek out air currents moving in various directions and thus have some control over the movements of their balloons.

"But just to fly, is what I like. The silence. The beauty. The leaves in fall. The snowy landscape in winter. The sunrise, when you fly in the morning."

Latchkey Children. . .

or turn up the television set to mask the sounds.

Some of the children, he said, had a "safe place" where they would hide or a "security item," like a blanket, they would hold for comfort. Long said one girl reported she sat in a chair much of the time holding a shoe to ward off intruders.

"Children who routinely stay home alone," he said, "run at least one chance in three of developing substantial fear responses, including recurring nightmares."

Many of the children experienced nightmares, he said, often of what they had seen on television. If they had to walk home alone from school or a friend's house, they were afraid of being attacked on the way home.

The result, he said, was that "most of the children had a severely limited play life and maintained few after-school friendships."

Parents sought to teach their latchkey children emergency procedures, he said.

"Most of the children knew of an adult nearby they could contact, but there was no guarantee that the adult would be home.

"In the event of a break-in, children were instructed either to hide, run out of a door opposite the intruder or call their parents or the police if possible.

"Some of the emergency procedures recommended by the parents were downright dangerous, though. One child had been told that in the event of a fire, she should first gather all of the valuables, then leave."

Long said that parents are not usually happy about leaving their children at home alone, but that it is frequently seen as an unavoidable situation.

If a latchkey arrangement is unavoidable, Long recommends developing as close a relationship as possible with the child in what time is available, especially in seeking to reduce or overcome the fear factors.

Sometimes that fear can be reduced by providing the child with a pet, but most important is development of a "close, concerned, interactive parent-child relationship" during the time the parent and child are together.

The Longs also urged "greatly expanded" private and public resources for adult supervision of preteens, but they were not optimistic about a rapid rise in those services.

"People simply didn't project this development (of rapidly increasing latchkey children) as a problem," Long said. "The result is that the public monies available have almost exclusively gone to pre-school" day care facilities.

"The reality is that the major caretaker at this age range is the school system" but that leaves the gap between the end of school and the end of the parents' working day.

"Industrious parents can often find school or community activities in which their children can participate," he said. "Participation in such activities can break up the sense of confinement latchkey children often experience."

Cash-Short States Are Seeking Loans

United Press International

Once well-to-do state governments with fat bank accounts are finding themselves lining up for loans.

Only a few years ago, many states had huge revenue surpluses. That, however, is now a rarity enjoyed mostly by energy-rich states. Others are having to mortgage their future tax collections to make ends meet.

Large states such as New York and Pennsylvania are among those that have gone to Wall Street, seeking loans from the nation's top banks and financial houses.

Others, including as Ohio and Mississippi, are borrowing from themselves — shifting revenues between funds to meet expenses. Officials in Ohio explain such "cash pooling" as taking money from one pocket and putting it in another.

Michigan, hard hit by economic problems in the auto industry, has done both. Officials sold $500 million in tax anticipation notes and borrowed another $50 million from a recreational land acquisition fund to balance the budget.

A statehouse survey by United Press International shows most states are prohibited from borrowing to cover a deficit but can borrow for short periods of time to pay their bills.

"As a general rule of thumb, these short-term borrowings are to cover cash flow imbalances — that is when the revenues (tax collections) come in at times other then when the revenues (bill payments) go out," said Claire Cohen, vice president of Moody's Investors Services.

Mrs. Cohen, whose Wall Street firm provides state credit ratings for the tax anticipation notes, said there is a major difference between the borrowing done by states and that done by the federal government.

Veteran's Day

Pasico Norfleet Jr. Post 160 of the American Legion, Greenville, will hold a Veteran's Day ceremony on the steps of the Pitt County Court House Wednesday at 3 p.m.

Local officials will be present.

After the ceremony, American flags will be placed on indentifiable graves of veterans in Brown Hill Cemetery. Relatives and friends of veterans buried in Brown Hill are asked to identify these graves by placing any type of white marker on the grave by noon Wednesday. A brief ceremony will be held at the cemetery at 4 p.m.

For further information, contact Ernest Brown, 756-0982, or Milton Leathers, 752-3530.

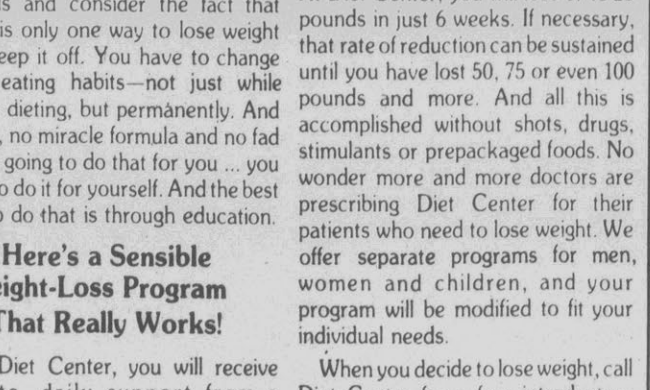

Pitt Qualifies For CARE Role

The North Carolina General Assembly has approved House Bill 512 for expansion of aid for Community Based Alternatives Programs. Pitt County qualifies for $7,313 to be used to expand the project CARE program by revising the present program and/or developing new program components. Agencies applying for these funds have been asked to submit formal program agreements to the task force by November 16.

Remember! Your Christmas portrait MUST BE TAKEN by Nov. 15.

Sure it's tough to lose weight. If it were easy, we would all be slim. Maybe the hardest part of all is getting started. There are so many diets, pills, miracle capsules and weight-reduction programs to choose from that weeks or even months can pass while we try to decide what to try next! And while we wait and wonder, we eat and gain even more weight.

Before you buy another pill, before you clip another magazine diet, before you skip one more meal stop ... ask yourself if this is the way you want to spend the rest of your life. Look beyond your desire to lose a few pounds and consider the fact that there is only one way to lose weight and keep it off. You have to change your eating habits—not just while you're dieting, but permanently. And no pill, no miracle formula and no fad diet is going to do that for you ... you have to do it for yourself. And the best way to do that is through education.

Here's a Sensible Weight-Loss Program That Really Works!

At Diet Center, you will receive private, daily support from a counselor who cares and understands. She knows what it takes to make those permanent changes because she has done it herself. You will learn how your body functions and just how satisfying a nutritionally balanced diet really is. You will lose weight quickly and safely, without hunger or loss of energy. But what's even more important, you will lay the foundation for a lifetime free of excess weight.

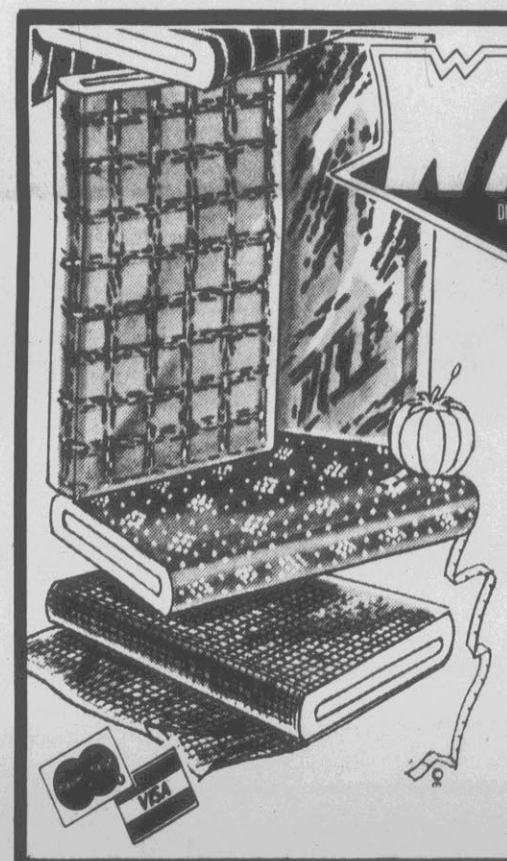

In just 10 years, Diet Center has grown to over 1,100 locations all across the United States and Canada. We've grown this big, this fast for one basic reason ... Our Program works!

Lose 17 to 25 Pounds In Just 6 Weeks!

At Diet Center, you will lose 17 to 25 pounds in just 6 weeks. If necessary, that rate of reduction can be sustained until you have lost 50, 75 or even 100 pounds and more. And all this is accomplished without shots, drugs, stimulants or prepackaged foods. No wonder more and more doctors are prescribing Diet Center for their patients who need to lose weight. We offer separate programs for men, women and children, and your program will be modified to fit your individual needs.

When you decide to lose weight, call Diet Center for a free introductory consultation. Stop by and talk to people who are already on the program. (Our dieters are our best salespeople!) We think you'll decide to try Diet Center, and when you do you'll find that this is the last weight-loss program you'll ever need.

East Germany Combines Western Ties With Soviet-Style Politics

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Behind the gray guard towers, the Berlin Wall and the Iron Curtain, East Germany flourishes as an orthodox, Soviet-style state, although deeply influenced by ties and contacts with the West.

Every night millions of East Germans in cities like Leipzig, Rostock and Magdeburg tune into West German television or catch uncensored news on West German radio — broadcast in their own language.

Last year at least 2.5 million West Germans crossed the heavily guarded border to visit friends or close relatives in "the other Germany."

Although East Germany still bars trips to the West for most of its 17 million citizens, exceptions are made for pensioners. Many elderly East Berliners take the streetcar daily into West Berlin, returning home in the evening with Western perfumes, chocolates and other goods for themselves, their friends and relatives.

These contacts have played an important role in bridging the Cold War-era barriers to the West, in combatting a constant flow of Communist propaganda in the state media and in moulding a country unique in the Soviet bloc.

For Poles, or Romanians, or Russians, their country is their only homeland, the only place where people share their language, customs and culture. Not so for East Germans — millions of whom have uncles, sisters or cousins only a telephone call away in neighboring West Germany.

Official propaganda touts East Germany as something unique in European history — the first socialist German state, heir of a humanist tradition fostered by Martin Luther, medieval peasant leader Thomas Muenzer and even communism's father, the German philosopher Karl Marx.

But East Germany is also increasingly conscious of the heritage it shares with West Germany.

Trade with West Germany has opened lucrative Western markets, allowing this Soviet satellite to become, in effect, the 11th member of the European Common Market and maintain a living standard higher than other Communist countries.

No longer an international outcast, East Germany — officially the German Democratic Republic — maintains diplomatic relations with the United States, Britain, France and sits in the United Nations.

But for many in the West, East Germany remains the land of the Berlin Wall and Iron Curtain. Most of its non-German Western visitors see only East Berlin, with its drab, Soviet-style downtown buildings and goose-stepping honor guards.

Materially, life is better in East Germany than in other Soviet-bloc states and the living standard compares favorably with some Western European nations.

East German shops offer a wider selection of meats, seasonal fruits and canned goods than those in Poland, Romania and Czechoslovakia, and apartments in East Berlin rent for as low as the equivalent of $15 a month.

But as in other East-bloc countries, luxury items are expensive and hard to find. East Germans must wait as long as 10 years for delivery of a domestically produced car.

East Germans also must contend with a way of life that includes stringent security controls as well as restrictions on dissent and travel to the West.

Because of an efficient secret police, Western diplomats doubt a nationwide opposition movement could develop here as in neighboring Poland.

"The security network is so elaborate and the authorities would clamp down hard at the first sign of dissent," said one Western diplomat who asked not to be identified. "And besides, Germans are so 'regime loyal'. They are not the Poles."

Westerners with contacts here believe most East Germans see events in Poland not as a struggle for freedom but as an economic and social disaster in the making.

"There is still a lot of historic, anti-Polish feeling here," said one Westerner. "The regime will have nothing to fear from the 'Polish virus' until the people see the experiment there as a success and not in terms of food shortages, long lines and economic chaos."

Officially the East Germans blame the security controls on continued international tensions fanned by "imperialist circles" in the United States and West Germany seeking to undermine "the socialist community."

The state-run press presents the country as a frontier outpost protecting the Soviet bloc against "imperialists." The official ADN news agency often reports arrests of Westerners on spy charges and "criminal bands" who for money will smuggle East Germans to the West.

Lutheran-MS Leader Hopes To Heal Rift Left By Doctrinal Dispute

By TIM BRYANT

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The Rev. Ralph Bohlmann's spacious 14th-floor office could house a high-powered business executive as easily as the new head of a major church.

Bohlmann himself, in a neat suit, looks more businessman than cleric. The Yale-educated church leader, son of a Nebraska pastor, chooses his words carefully and clarifies himself if he believes he is not conveying the exact meaning he intends.

Bohlmann, ninth president of the 2.7-million member Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod, says a major job he must face is closing the gulf between synod factions that developed under the tempestuous rule of his predecessor and friend, the Rev. Jacob A.O. Preus.

"It's not a question so much of what you want to do but how you set priorities," said Bohlmann. "I want it to be a united church."

Under Preus, all but five faculty members quit in a doctrinal dispute at Concordia Seminary, North America's largest Lutheran school for pastors. More than 100,000 Lutherans left the synod in the 1974 split.

Bohlmann, 49, was one of the faculty members who stayed. He became acting president, then permanent head of the seminary. He is credited with rebuilding the school to its pre-walkout positon, despite the continued existence of a dissident seminary here.

"The aftermath of the controversy is that they continue to have feelings about the church I think they ought not to have," Bohlmann said of the dissidents.

A controversy concerning Bible interpretations festered for several years before the highly publicized walkout of Concordia students and faculty. The synod's so-called "conservative" position was, and is, that the Bible should be interpreted literally.

Concordia "moderates" left after the Rev. John H. Tietjen was ousted as seminary president on charges of teaching false doctrine and malfeasance in office. Moderates suggested some Biblical accounts, such as Jonah and the whale, could be seen as symbolic stories.

Bohlmann said synod members are comfortable with their doctrine, perhaps the most conservative of any Lutheran body, which he outlined in a 1972 paper that became a catalyst for the public rift two years later.

"They think Missouri is going to remain a conservative church," Bohlmann said. "And I think so, too.

"I rarely describe myself as a conservative. I sometimes say progressive conservative. I think the church needs to be dealing with the questions of 1981 not 1931."

Bohlmann, whose specialty is early writings of Lutheranism, said describing the synod's rift as a dispute over literal Bible interpretation is oversimplifying the controversy.

While Bible interpretation was at the heart of the doctrinal dispute, he said the focus of Lutheranism is the teachings of Jesus.

"It's a Bible-based church but a Christ-centered church. Our attitude is that what it says is true. We don't always know what it means. It's an attitude toward the Scriptures."

Bohlmann said he hopes other Lutherans understand Missouri Synod members are people whose Christian doctrine encompasses more than a belief that a whale swallowed Jonah.

"We have the capability of being a very isolated church body," he said.

Remaining faithful to the synod's doctrine, keeping the membership united and increasing its education and mission activities are Bohlmann's main goals. He said they are the same as Preus', but his methods will be different.

"We are quite different people in personality and style, and probably as administrators," Bohlmann said. "I'm a bit more reserved and scheduled."

Bohlmann, who said he did not seek the office and had not solicited a single vote, was elected to a two-year term as president in July at the synod's St. Louis convention. On the fourth ballot, he got a majority of votes over the Rev. Charles S. Mueller of Roselle, Ill. Bohlmann was installed Sept. 27.

"I had the good fortune of not being anyone's candidate," Bohlmann said. "The new president comes into office as his own man. It says to me that this church is tired of being torn by political factionalism."

Though he described all Lutherans as "part of a family," Bohlmann said the Missouri Synod is not taking part in merger talks among other Lutheran denominations.

The Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Church have discussed closer ties.

Delegates representing the 6,000 Missouri Synod congregations voted in July to end a 12-year fellowship with the American Lutheran Church.

Under fellowship, members of the two denominations were permitted to take communion in each other's churches and pastors were allowed to preach in pulpits of both churches.

Preus had recommended the fellowship be broken because of doctrinal differences. For example, the 2.3-million member American Lutheran Church allows women to be ordained. The Missouri Synod does not.

The 61-year-old Preus, who insisted his only reason for retiring was to allow a younger man to take over, said Bohlmann will be an able leader.

"We were very close together at the time of the walkout from the seminary," Preus said. "I have the highest respect for him. He can disagree without being disagreeable."

Despite continuing doctrinal differences, Bohlmann said he remains cordial with the leader of the dissident group that left Concordia seven years ago. He said he occasionally meets with Tietjen, now president of the Christ Seminary-Seminex.

"The hurt and the bitterness that filled the pages of the newspapers have subsided," he said.

"I kept getting offers to teach," Bohlmann said. "I grew up wanting to be a pastor like my dad."

He began his teaching career at age 28 after studying at Heidelberg University in Germany.

Book News

By MARGARET CLARK

Very exciting and plausible, "Normandie Triangle" by Justin Scott is a humdinger of a World War II yarn. Scott combines just enough fact with fiction to leave the reader wondering "What if?" Fact: there was indeed a dreadful fire aboard the once elegant French cruiser liner, the "Normandie," while it was being converted to troopship in New York harbor shortly after America entered the war. Fiction: suppose a specially trained German expert in demolition and sabotage was not only responsible for the destruction of the ship, but also dreamed up an even more devastating attack on the "Queen Mary," making regular visits in and out New York as a troop ship?

Scott, who wrote "The Shipkiller," has obviously done his homework very well. He captures the atmosphere of New York City as the war takes over, he knows his shipbuilding and makes us understand it, and he brings together a colorful cast of characters.

Theodore Wilden's "Exchange of Clowns" is an unusual work of espionage fiction, distinguished by a candid political shrewdness, and by an insider's understanding of the harsh realities of the intelligence war between the West and the Soviet Union. The title refers to the "clowns of the liberal establishment who crave Soviet blessing," the repeatedly stated views of Therrick, protagonist and narrator. As a hired agent of British Intelligence, Therrick is trying to effect the release, or death, of their agent, Nichols, arrested as a Soviet spy in West Berlin and about to be exchanged for a Russian operative. It is imperative that Nichols be kept from divulging information to the Soviets, however, this is a nightmarish enterprise. Therrick's path is strewn with corpses; his contacts break down until he meets Kagin, a Soviet official. Kagin declares his intention to defect and to intercept the "exchange of clowns" at the checkpoint where Wilden's novel reaches a shocking conclusion.

Although not another "Anatomy of a Murder," Robert Traver's new novel, "People Versus Kirk," has some of the same tense courtroom drama. The narrator is a trout-fishing Michigan lawyer Frederick Ludlow, who's been hired to defend young Randall Kirk — accused of murdering mining heiress Constance Spurrier, with whom he was having a longtime affair. The problem, however, is that sullen Randy claims to have no memory of the time surrounding the murder. Furthermore, he seems to forget even more while in jail. But Frederick Ludlow and his wise-cracking partner take up the defense and enter a plea that is bizarre as the crime itself.

Bowling Show At New Clark Street Gallery

Musical interpretations in art is the direction that Alan Bowling is taking in his newest work. Bowling, a spring 1981 graduate of the School of Art, East Carolina University, is the first local artist to have work exhibited in the recently opened Carriage Trade Antiques and Art Gallery.

This new outlet for display of art by local artists is located at 802 Clark Street (just off Dickinson Avenue behind Ernest & Knott Glass Company).

Until the end of November, Bowling is showing five musical-motif lithographs, all from a portfolio entitled "Audio for the Eyes."

These works incorporate horizontal lines of black images that somewhat suggest musical notes. The images can also be interpreted as variants on Arabic script or as calligraphic characters. They are placed against colored backgrounds in which traceries of patterns are interwoven.

The five works in this series conveys a visual parallel on a larger scale to textual sections of Persian miniatures with emphatic black images and vivid areas of color set off against areas of untouched white.

Two smaller paintings not part of the "Audio for the Eyes" portfolio are also being shown by Bowling. One is a fine small figure study.

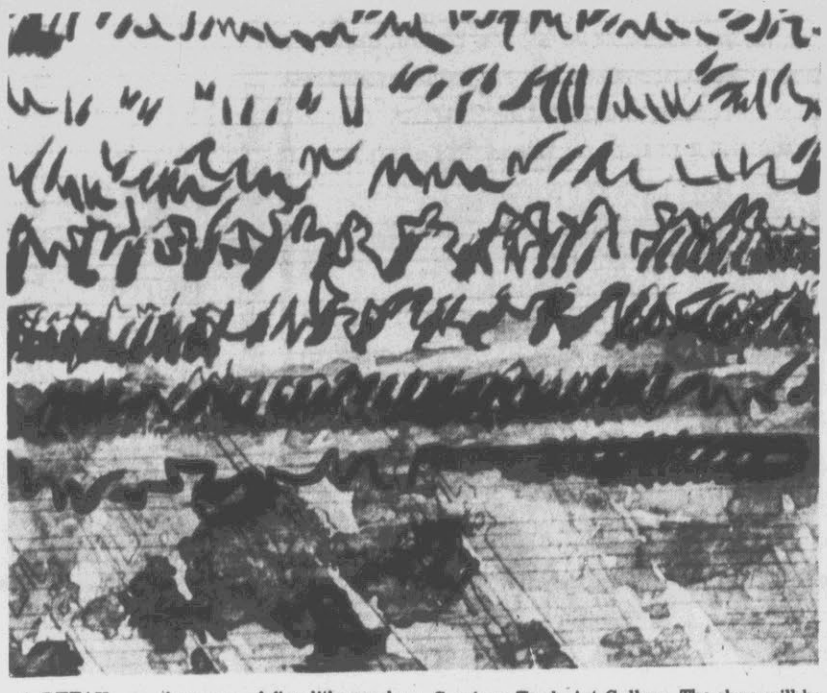

Bowling, a native of Raleigh now living in Greenville, has exhibited locally in Gray Gallery on the ECU campus, at Mendenhall Student Center, and in two downtown restaurants, Margaux's and Freddie's. He has also presented a series of public showings of multi-media art accompanied by music.

Dr. C. Gentry Trimble, proprietor of Carriage Trade, notes she plans to periodically exhibit work by young local artists. "I like to support these young people," she said. "There's lots of good talent coming out of ECU. I feel that my showing their work will provide one more place in Greenville where the public can see their work."

Later in the month, Dr. Trimble will be exhibiting art by the noted Southwest American Indian painter, R. C. Gorman.

The public is invited to see Bowling's exhibit. There is no admission charged for viewing this show.

CONLEY BAND SELECTED FOR MARDI GRAS...The 72-member D.H. Conley Marching Band has been invited to perform in the Mardi Gras celebration to be held in New Orleans in February, 1982. Members and sponsors are beginning a fund drive to raise the approximately $10,000 required for the band members and their 16 chaperones to make the trip. According to James Fleming, band director, persons interested in contributing should contact Fleming or Conley principal J.R. Carraway at the school, 756-3440. "It's a great opportunity for the students in the band," said Fleming. "For many of them it will be a once-in-a-lifetime chance, and their taking advantage of it depends on whether we can raise the money." The school has also scheduled an auction for Dec. 12, and are appealing for donations of household items and other goods to be auctioned. The Conley Band has won several honors, including first place Greenville Christmas Parade, 1980; first place Shad Festival and first place Collard Festival. They participated in the Governor's Inaugural Parade by invitation and in the Azalea Festival 1981. The Conley band was the only one in eastern North Carolina asked to attend the Mardi Gras. Weyerhaeuser Gift

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Symphony recently received the second $10,000 installment of a $30,000 grant from the Weyerhaeuser Foundation to help underwrite the cost of the symphony's musical program in Onslow, Beaufort, Craven, Washington and Martin counties over the next three yeras.

The symphony will use this year's $10,000 to present educational and evening concerts, discovery programs, clinics and residencies for the citizens of the five eastern counties, many of whom are Weyerhaeuser employees.

Nancy Faircloth, the North Carolina Symphony's chairman of the board, praised Weyerhaeuser for its generosity. "We are extremely grateful to Weyerhaeuser for helping to bring the symphony to eastern North Carolina."

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you – well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

INSTEAD Concert On Wednesday

A concert by INSTEAD, the East Carolina New Music Ensemble, will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday, November 11 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend on a first-come, first-seated basis.

The concert will also feature a special appearance by the East Carolina University Concert Choir, Dr. Brett Watson, director.

Donna Coleman and Robert Stine are directors of INSTEAD. Formerly the East Carolina Contemporry Chamber Ensemble, INSTEAD Players adopted its name in 1979. The ensemble presents one full concert each semester and collaborates with student composers, premiering their new works on the Composer's Forum Concert series.

Co-directors Coleman and Stine are both faculty members in the School of Music, ECU. Ms. Coleman, winner of several prestigious performance awards, is Assistant Professor of Piano. Dr. Stine, a composer and recipient of an ASCAP scholarship, was formerly a faculty member at the University of California, Berkeley and the Cleveland Music School Settlement. He joined the theory-composition faculty at ECU this fall. Watson, the Concert Choir director, is a faculty member in Vocal and Basic Studies Departments.

Works by two older contemporary composers and three younger composers will be featured in Wednesday's concert.

The program will open will Larry Baker's "Music Piece 1," featuring percussion soloist Richard Brazelle.

The second piece will be Jared Beynon's "Unsleeping City," based on a poem by R. Sloan Radin. This will be performed by Anne Gunn, soprano, accompanied by Cynthia Creel, pianist.

Robert Stein will conduct the third selection on the program, Lukas Foss's "Music for Six." Performers are Ellen Kaner, flute; Joel Schultz, C trumpet; Richard Brazelle and William Congdon, percussion; Deborah Daniel, piano; and Donna Coleman, prepared piano.

Stine will also conduct Charles Ives' turn of the century composition, "From the Steeples and the Mountains." Musicians to play the Ives piece are Joel Schultz and Kerr Strang, trumpets; Glenn Johnson, trombone; Deborah Daniel, Ellen Creel, James Gilliam, pianos; and Mark Shelton, chimes.

After an intermission, the concluding offering of the concert will be Stravinsky's "Mass." Watson will conduct the ECU Concert Choir in the performance of this composition.

Center Specials

CHAPEL HILL — Animals as olympians and a Russian congress held in London in 1903 are among topics being presented during the coming week over the UNC Center for Public Television. Highlights of selected programs are:

— Today — 7 p.m., "More of that Nashville Music" with Mickey Gillery, Bille Joe Spears, Del Reeves and I. Anderson. — 8 p.m. "Animal Olympians." The beauty, endurance and power of animals in the wild are juxtaposed with human athletes in a parallel of grace and strength. A Nova program. — 9 p.m., the concluding episode of "A Town Like Alice."

— Monday, November 9 — 8 p.m. In the "Fall of Eagles" series, Lenin fights for a radical Marxist policy at the first Russian Social Democratic Party congress held in London in 1903. — 9 p.m., Diane Lane stars in "Summer," a Great Performances play about a young woman moving from adolescence to adulthood.

— Tuesday, November 10 — "The Rake's Progress" is the whimsical title Roy Underhill has given to a demonstration of constructing a garden rake in "The Woodwright's Shop" series. — 8 p.m. In Cosmos, Carl Sagan travels back in time to the island of Samos in ancient Greece. — 9 p.m. "Myths and Moundbuildiers" takes viewers for an inside look at some of the huge earthen mounds scattered throughout the central United States.

— Wednesday, November 11 — 8 p.m. A fabulous adventure is shown as skier Yurihico Miura skis down Mt. Everest, traveling 6,600 feet in two minutes and 30 seconds and completing the final 1,300 foot part by parachute. — 10 p.m. Omar Sharif narrates a documentary, "Mysteries of the Great Pyramid."

— Thursday, November 12 — 8 p.m., a Jacques Cousteau film focues in on the world of the eight-armed denizen of the sea in "Octopus, Octopus." — 11 p.m. Thursday's Twilight Zone is "Dust," the story of a con man who sells a young girl a "magic potion" to save her brother from the gallows.

— Friday, November 13 — 10 p.m. In the "Ten Who Dared" series, the subject is "Jedediah Smith: Trapper." Smith was the first known white man to reach California from the east by crossing the Great Salt Lake and the Majove Desert.

— Saturday, November 14 — 2 p.m. Charlotte's Randolph Scott teams with Buster Crabbe, Noah Berry and Judith Allen in a 1934 western, "Buffalo Stampede." — 8 p.m. "Live from the Met" features Renata Scotto in a trilogy of Puccini operas — "Guinni Schicchi", "Suor Angelica" and "Il Tabarro." James Levine conducts the Metropolitan Opera orchestra.

Percussion Concert Set

Monday, November 9 is the date of performance for a concert by the East Carolina University Percussion Ensemble. The Ensemble, under the direction of Mark Shelton, will present a program of percussion music at 7:30 p.m. in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The entertainment is without charge and the public is invited to attend.

Compositions by five composers have been chosen for the program. These are: John Beck's "Overture for Percussion Ensemble"; "Musica Battuta" in three movements, by Harold Schiffman; "Phonetiks" by Ron Delp; the six-part Alan Hovhaness work, "October Mountain;" and Lensberg/Shelton's "Haunting Rag."

Director Shelton is a graduate teaching assistant at ECU. A native of Bethel Springs, Tenn., he received the bachelor's degree in music from Louisiana Tech University, Ruston, La.

PHOTOS EMBARRASS — Teenage actress-model Brooke Shields leaves Manhattan Supreme Court Thursday after testifying that nude photos taken when she was 10 are embarrassing and should not be reprinted. She and her mother, Teri Shields, are asking for a permanent injunction against photographer Garry Gross to block further commercial use of the photos which he took with Mrs. Shields' permission for a Playboy Press book called "Sugar and Spice". Senior Recitals

Vocalist Cheryl Ann Holder and flautist Wilma Cox will present senior recitals on Friday, November 13 in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus. Both are free and the public is invited to attend.

Ms. Holder of Raleigh, will present her recital beginning at 7:30 p.m. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Annemarie Lalik, pianist.

For her program, Ms. Holder has chosen two songs from "Les Nuits d'ete" by Berlioz; three Hugo Wolf songs; an aria from Rossini's "La Cenerentula;" and three British folksongs arranged by Britten.

Wilma Cox of New Bern will be in recital at 9 p.m. Her accompanists are Patricia Foltz, piano; John Bumgardner, guitar; and Jeff Tuthill, cello. She has listed four works for her program — Michel Blavet's "Sonata VI"; Ibert's "Entr'acte"; Enesco's "Contabile et Presto"; and "Sonatina" by Eldin Burton.

Bath Concert Next Sunday

A program of sonatas for violin and piano will be given by Joanne and Charles Bath at 4:15 p.m. Sunday, November 15 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The concert is without charge and the public is invited to attend.

The program will feature three works from the sonata literature for violin and keyboard. The first composition to be performed will be the "Sonata in E minor" by Veracini, to be followed by Beethoven's "Sonata in A minor, Opus 23." The concluding selection will be the Brahms "Sonata No. 1 in A Major, Opus 100."

Dr. and Mrs. Bath have appeared in numerous recitals in Greenville and the surrounding area. In addition to concerts given at the ECU School of Music, they have also performed for various civic groups and churches. They have been invited for the third consecutive year to perform for the Christmas candlelight tour of the Tryon Palace in New Bern.

Dr. Bath is chairman of the Keyboard Faculty of the ECU School of Music. Joanne Bath teaches violin, specializing in the Suzuki method. This past summer the Bath family, along with 20 students and 15 adults accompanying the students, made a concert tour of England.

TO PERFORM TONIGHT — Pianist David Pinnix, left, a member of the Greensboro College music faculty, and violinist Rodney Schmidt, faculty member in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will perform in a joint recital at 8 o'cock tonight in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center. The program will feature music by Brhams, Debussy, Bartok, Enesco and Richard Strauss. There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

Jazz Ensemble Concert Scheduled For Nov. 15

The East Carolina Jazz Ensemble will present its Fall concert at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, November 15 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. School of Music faculty member George Broussard directs the Ensemble. There is no admission charged for the concert and the public is invited to attend.

The 21-member group will perform compositions and arrangements encompassing a wide variety of jazz styles ranging from the sound of Count Basie (a Sammy Nestico chart of the Elington standard "Satin Doll") to the contemporary writing of Bob Brookmeyer (a haunting score of Hoagy Carmichael's 1940 "Skylark," which will feature graduate saxophonist Gary Liebst.

ECU alumnus Rich Holly, currently on the faculty of Western Colorado University, has scored the Stevie Wonder hit "All in Love is Fair," which will feature trombonist Glenn Johnson, and "Lonely Tears," a ballad by Mark Taylor with Scott Ireland taking the solo role.

Trumpeter Joel Schultz will be spotlighted in Henry Wolking's "Intimate Intrusion," which was donated to the Jazz Ensemble through the National Association of Jazz Educators.

ECU freshman Mark Pressley has arranged a medley of the Commodore's hits and senior trombonist Rich Moncure has written "Child's Play." In addition to the feature selections, each ensemble member will be heard as a soloist.

Composer/arranger Les Hooper has contributed three tunes, and the program will be rounded out by two Rob McConnell originals.

The ECU Jazz Ensemble is a member of the Pitt-Grenville Arts Council and the National Association of Jazz Educators. The Ensemble has toured both Carolinas and Virginia.

Elliott Frank Recital At GMA Thursday

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday, a guitar recital will be presented by Elliott Frank, visiting artist at Pitt Community College. Elliott will perform music by J.S. Bach, Isaac Albeniz, Heitor Villa-Lobos, Benjamin Britten and Joaquin Turina.

The first half of the program will be music originally written for other instruments and transcribed for the guitar. The second half of the recital will be devoted to music written originally for guitar to include Villa-Lobos' "Etudes" and Britten's "Nocturnal."

There is no admission charge for the Frank recital and the public is invited to attend.

Lampoon, A Family Affair

By DAN COLLINS

Martin and magazine editors Billy Kimball, 22, of New York City, and Gregg Lachow, 22, of Tallman, N.Y., came to town to plug the parody.

The cover shows teen starlet and model-cum-sex symbol Brooke Shields posing with a big, dead fish. The three seniors explained that they persuaded the fish to pose for the cover by purchasing it.

A phone call was all it took them to get Miss Shields.

Martin, who explained that the top spots at the Lampoon are decided through wrestling matches, said the magazine had invested more than $100,000 in the project — excluding steep printing costs.

"We pooled our allowances," Kimball said.

The cash the non-profit Lampoon hopes to realize from the venture will be used in part to publish the humor magazine, which is distributed free of charge at Harvard five times a year.

The three seniors made it clear the Lampoon has no connection with the National Lampoon, a commercial humor magazine established by "Lampy" graduates. They don't regard the National Lampoon as terriby funny.

The Lampoon's parody includes a "People" reader survey reporting that 47 percent of Americans blame the Russians for inflation while 20 percent blamed "evil dogs who live in the forest." Allen Ludden, the former host of Password, was blamed by 14 percent.

And so it goes with many of the gags focusing on celebrity figures. Little of the humor is really harsh or acerbic.

WOOW Classics

A program of Baroque Concerti and Great Theme Music will be presented on Karen Hause's "WOOW Classics" program Sunday from 10 p.m. to midnight over WOOW Radio, 1340 on the dial.

During the first hour of her program, Mrs. Hause will offer listeners a quartet of classic baroque compositions — Bach's "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6;" the "Viola Concerto in B Minor" by Handel; Vivaldi's "Oboe Concerto in D Minor;" and Telemann's "Flute Concerto in C Major."

Half a dozen notable pieces of compositions used as theme music for radio and TV shows will constitute the music to be presented during the second hour of "WOOW Classics."

The selections are: "Fanfare for the Common Man" by Copland; the Lone Ranger theme, Rossini's "William Tell Overture"; "Les Preludes" by Liszt; "Love of Three Oranges" by Prokofiev; Reznicek's "Donna Diana;" and Holborne's "Night Watch."

The heat energy released by one hurricane in a single day, if converted to electrical energy, would supply the United States with power for three years, says National Geographic.

VALUABLE SPANISH PAINTING — This painting, found hanging in the gift shop of the 800-year-old Spanish Monastery at Saint Bernard's Episcopal Church, is believed to be a lost work of Spanish art by Julio Romero de Torres. The painting was discovered by Juan Adriaensen Menocal, a Madrid art magazine publisher, while he was touring the old building which was originally brought to the United States by William Randolph Hearst. If the painting, now at North Miami Beach, Fla., is certified to be an original Romero de Torres work of art, it is said to be worth $200,000. (AP Laserphoto)

Visits Led To Founding Clinics

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer

EL CASCO, Mexico (AP) — This poor Mexican farming village is where Roger Belisle takes his vacation as often as twice a year, travelling 2,000 miles from his home in Bloomington, Minn., to get here.

On his first visit to his wife's hometown a dozen years ago, he was appalled at the conditions in this place where she grew up.

"There was no electricity or running water. There were dirt floors in the adobe homes and no glass or screens on the windows," Belisle says.

Medical care was virtually nonexistent. The nearest hospital was 125 miles away and people had to travel 30 miles to the nearest clinic. Parasite infestation was rampant. Nutrition was poor. Babies were dying "from the simplest of problems," Belisle said.

So, with his wife Eva, he makes his pilgrimages in a roomy station wagon, stuffed to the brim with new and used clothing and other necessities. "We bring bandages, aspirin, vitamins and other essentials to help the villagers," said Belisle.

Belisle, who was studying biomedical engineering at the University of Minnesota, took additional courses and was able to pass the necessary tests to become licensed to practice medicine in Mexico.

As time passed, Belisle was encouraged.

"It turned out that what I was doing was making a pretty big impact," Belisle said. "So we contacted the Mexican government to tell them what we were trying to do" and find out if there were plans to set up a medical clinic in El Casco.

Since his first visit, the government has run an electric line into the town and graded the village's main street to make it more accessible to motor vehicles.

The Mexican government said if there was some way the Belisles could represent the people in a larger area of the state of Durango, that they probably would be able to help establish a clinic. So Belisle returned to Minneota and began talking to friends and business associates.

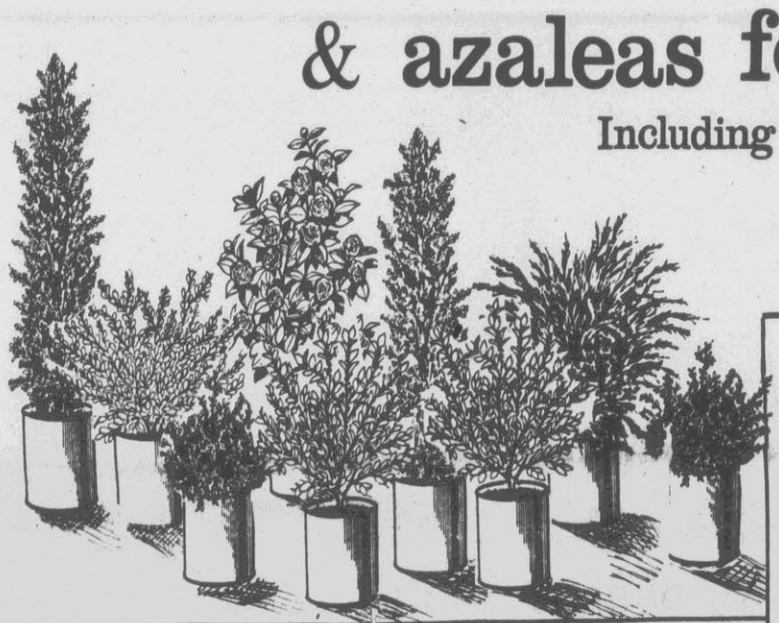

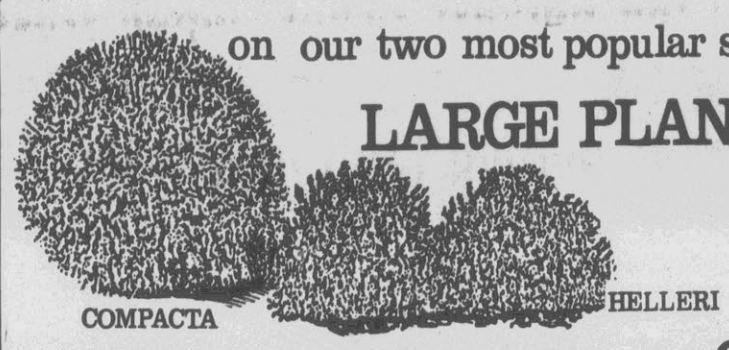

He told of the women washing their clothing in the stream, of the farmers still using mules and horses to get to and from the fields. He talked of the corn and bean crops failing year after year because there is no irrigation, of the men being forced to work in large cities in Mexico and the United States during the winter to make ends meet.

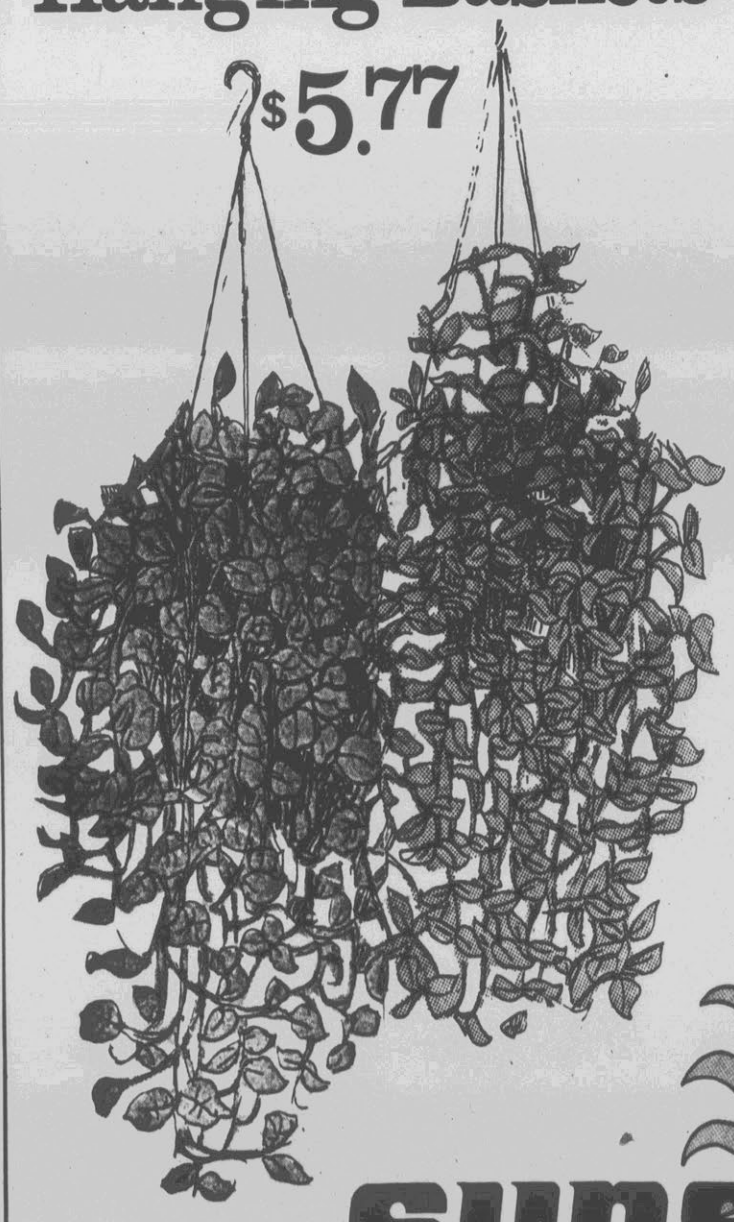

In 1979, the American-Mexican Medical Foundation was formed as a non-profit Minnesota corporation to help with the project.

...chrysanthemums are to November what daffodils are to April

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

November, the eve of winter. A time of the last of all the harvest riches, when frost threatens late gardens and hardy summer flowers that persist in putting forth new buds. November is the month when nature changes its canopy of spectacular colors for more subtle browns and golds as cool winds denude hardwood trees of their last cluster of leaves.

...a fallen leaf is caught against a lone cherry tomato, and on another, still green tomato plant, small yellow flowers appear — as if summer's fruitful warmth instead of frost lay ahead

...Scuppernong grapes, some withered, other late ones invitingly ripe, are part of November's harvest bounty

...bronzed leaves of a beech tree will be among the last to drift to the ground in the annual cycle of falling autumn leaves

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

One of the most erroneous assumptions made by parents is that they can childproof their homes. They put all the medicine on a high shelf, empty the mop bucket as soon as they are finished with it, dispose immediately of the paper bags which come on the dry cleaning, and stay alert to all potential dangers.

And their precautions work, for approximately six months. After that, nothing is safe from the machinations of busy little minds. First, baby learns to crawl into the trash can and eat pencil shavings. Then he learns to pull himself onto the rocking chair and stand up — and all too often fly over. Then he learns that by opening the drawers to Mommy's dresser, he can climb up to her perfume.

The more he gets into, the more effort the child puts into childproofing, but they can never be successful because they never come close to anticipating the schemes which the average toddler is capable of hatching.

I know a couple of excellent parents who found out too late that their 19-month-old could unlatch the hook lock on the front door of their apartment with a broom handle. They found him in the Dempsey Dumpster. Another mother thought her cleanser was in a safe place until her 13-month-old walked into the kitchen and handed it to her.

"Show Mommy how you got this," she said to her daughter.

The little girl obliged her by opening the door to the linen closet, putting her back against the shelves, planting her hands and feet on the doorsill, and scaling up to the top shelf like a human fly.

I have come to the conclusion that the only completely safe dwelling for a child is an unfurnished air raid shelter stocked only with raw fruits and vegetables and straw pallets for sleeping. And even that arrangement is unlikely to be safe if there is more than one child.

With Meg around, I have about as much chance of babyproofing our abode as I have of serving martinis in a Playboy Club. At any given moment Zachary is being tempted to feast on Legos, Lite Brite, pegs, pencils, marbles and non-toxic but colorful lipstick. That's because Meg stores all her treasures on the floor.

After many lectures and almost as many threats, she has learned to confine her minutiae to her own floor and to close the door against Zachary's scavenging. But Zachary is now learning to turn the doorknob.

"He's a pest," she complained not long ago. "He ate my good barrettes."

I hurriedly fished them out of his mouth as he sat on the dining room table and then removed the sewing scissors, which were the object of his ascent. "I know he's into everything," I sighed. "And I forget to put things up, too. But you just have to try harder to keep the little things out of his reach."

Meg tried very hard, but she found it as impossible as I did. "He goes into my drawers. He climbs on my table. Nowhere's safe," she lamented with a wisdom beyond her years.

She did, however, come up with a partial solution to the problem. "You know what you told me about how babies are made?"

"Yes."

"Well, I want you to promise me that you and Daddy will never do that again!"

Sometimes I think we should have thought of that years ago.

Harvest Fest

A harvest-fest will be held for the residents of Greenville Villa on Nov. 23 from 7-9 p.m. at the nursing home on Stantonsburg Road.

Games, prizes, entertainment and refreshments will be available. Music will be provided by a trio from a local church. Interested persons are invited to attend.

For more information call Sarah Clark, 752-0969 or Hannah Biles, 355-6850.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I ran into a problem last night that was new to me. I was sitting South, and the bidding proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♢	Pass	3 ♢	Pass
4 NT	5 ♡	?

I held one ace, and I wasn't sure how to go about showing it. What makes this problem more complicated than it might seem was that I wasn't sure one ace was enough for us to make slam! Please help.—J. Foster, Yonkers, N.Y.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—There are several ways to show aces after interference. Here are two of the more popular.

The first is to show aces in steps exactly as if there was no interference, with one slight modification. That is to use "Pass" instead of the first step over the interference to deny an ace. The first step over the interference—i.e., five spades in the auction in question—shows one ace; the second step, two aces; etc.

A different way, and one that I prefer, is called DOPI, an acronym for Double with 0 ace, Pass with 1. That not only has the virtue of keeping the bidding one step lower, it has the additional advantage of allowing you the option of penalizing the opposition on those hands where you have no slam.

Obviously, you are least likely to have slam on those hands where the responder to Blackwood holds no ace. Since he shows this by doubling, the ace-asker will now be well placed to decide whether to settle for a sure profit by converting the double for penalties, going on to a small slam, or of settling for a game when the penalty seems to be inadequate.

Q.—In a recent game, I was disappointed with the cards I had been holding. In an effort to change my luck, I shuffled the deck seven or eight times before passing them to be cut. My opponent claimed that my shuffle was illegal. He said the deck should not be shuffled more than three times because it tends to return the cards to their original order. Is that so?—R.L. Tampa, Fla.

A.—First of all, let's clarify the matter of illegality. There's nothing in the Laws of Contract Bridge to tell you how many times you must shuffle the deck, so you may do so as often as you wish.

As for returning the cards to their original order, that's an old wive's tale. Even if man could cut the deck in exactly the same place each time and have a perfect shuffle, I don't even want to try to work out how many times he would have to riffle the pack to return it to its original order.

Send any questions for this column to: Charles Goren and Omar Sharif, care of this newspaper. Each week a prize of a copy of the new "Goren's Bridge Complete," a $9.95 value, will be awarded for the question judged the best received.

Charles Goren and Omar Sharif personally cannot undertake to answer all questions submitted.

Winterville Board To Meet

WINTERVILLE — The Town Board of Aldermen will hold its monthly meeting Monday night, beginning at 7 p.m. with the following items on the agenda:

— A public hearing will be held to discuss including installation of stop signs at certain intersections.

— Barry Gaskins of Pitt County Community Schools will explain to board members the replacement of old ball park lights at A.G. Cox.

— A report from Cable TV on franchise fees will be heard.

— A request will be heard from Norman Worthington, owner of Ragland Acres, for the town to repair potholes in the subdivision, with him paying town for labor, etc.

Gastonia Man Likes Energy-Saving Hillside Home

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Leon Cloninger of Gastonia was watching a television news show one night in 1977 when he saw something that really caught his attention: A man in Illinois had built a house in the side of a hill and it cost less than two dollars to heat it all winter.

"When I heard him say it cost him $1.68 to heat his house for the winter and that was in gas for his chainsaw to cut up wood, I said that's for me," Cloninger said.

The result of Cloninger's interest is his own hillside home on the outskirts of Gastonia. It took about two years and $40,000 to build the concrete structure, which has three feet of sod and grass on top.

"I had some problems with the contractor and ended up finishing it myself but other than that, I've been real satisfied with it," said Cloninger, a truck mechanic.

The 1,500-square-foot house, which sits in a grassy hill, features a bedroom, bathroom and laundry room and a combination livingroom-dining room-kitchen in one large front room with a huge brick fireplace. The house is totally electric but a wood stove provides a lot of heat in the winter.

The most startling feature of the exterior of the house is that Cloninger's lawn is the top of the house. A television antenna and a chimney stick up through the grass on the roof. Cloninger and his wife, Fay, have planted fruit trees and built a split-rail fence around the edge of the roof.

The house only has three windows — one large picture window in the livingroom and two smaller ones alongside it.

"The thing surprises most people is that it isn't really dark in here like they think it will be," Cloninger said. "These windows make a lot of light."

After he saw the Illinois house on television, Cloninger went to a lot of effort to get the plans for it. First he called a local television station, which referred him to CBS in New York. From there he was given the name of the Illinois builder and he wrote to him. The builder invited him to come see the house. After seeing it, Cloninger was so impressed that he bought the plans.

Although it has cost him more than $1.68 to heat his house, Cloninger's bill still runs considerably less than that of a conventional home. Last winter, his power bills ran about $40, he said.

"The dirt holds the heat in in the winter time and keeps the place cool in the summer, just like it's supposed to do," he said. The house isn't air-conditioned but seldom gets over 80 degrees in the summer, he said.

What do the people of Gastonia think of Cloninger's unusual home? "Well, some like it and some don't. It gets a lot of stares," he said.

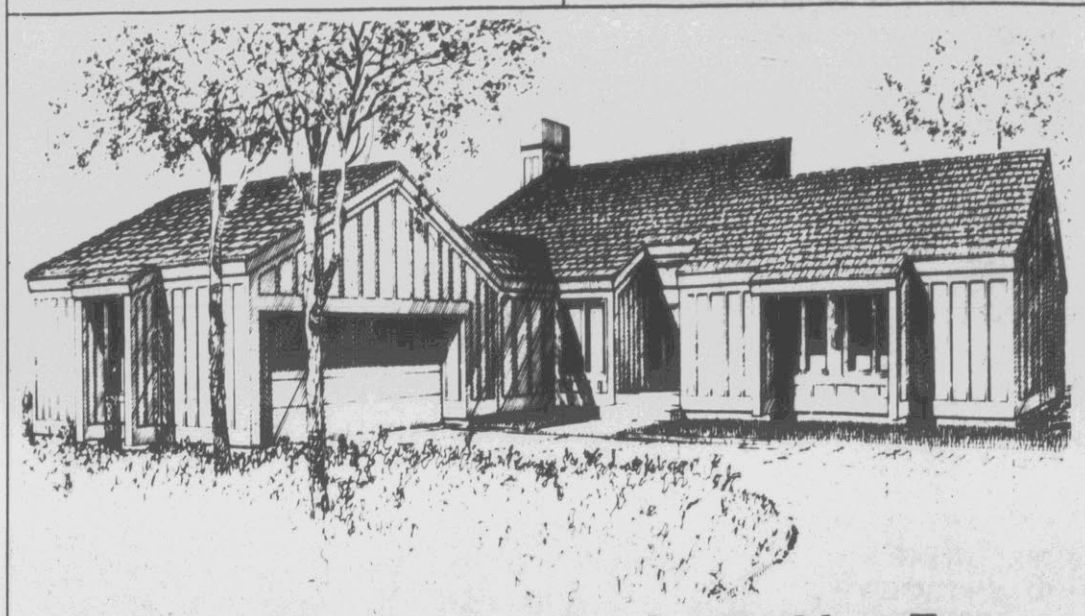

Meanwhile, Cloninger likes his home so much that he has built a smaller version for his dog, Lady.

"It keeps her cool in the summer and warm in the winter, just like ours does," he said.

PLAN YOUR HOME — The Meriden

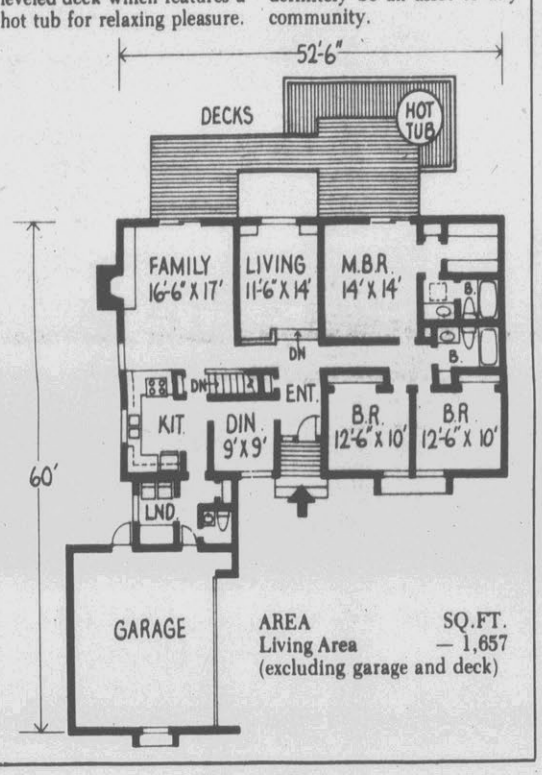

Charming Three Bedroom Rancher Has Many Extras

By Jerry Bishop

There are many features to recommend this highly appealing ranch-style home. The entire design radiates a cheerful, informal country atmosphere. Special attention has been given to the planning of the attached garage so that it adds instead of detracts from the exterior design of the house. Nothing insures the workability and livability of a home quite so much as a well thought out floor plan. Here is such a home that is not only a model of efficiency but which offers many features that contribute toward an exciting and impressive design. How to achieve the maximum of usefulness in a minimum amount of space is every prospective home owners budget problem, a not insurmountable one as is illustrated in this charming three bedroom rancher. The Meriden features something for everyone, the romantic, the outdoor enthusiast or the traditionalist.

A sunken living room provides a lovely conversation area with a beautiful view of the great outdoors. In the family room an energy saving fireplace provides not only heat but a cozy atmosphere for those family gatherings. Entertaining and outdoor living is easy with the deck just outside the family room, sliding glass doors offer easy access to the deck. The well designed kitchen and dining room provides the opportunity for casual as well as formal entertaining. Grouped separate from the living areas are the bedrooms, offering privacy and quiet. The master suite shows its own private bath, a large closet and dressing room. Sliding glass doors give access to the multi-leveled deck which features a hot tub for relaxing pleasure.

The two Jr. bedrooms have spacious closets and both rooms share a centrally located bath. A laundry room, lavatory and storage area are conveniently located between the kitchen and garage. This is truly a fine home for a growing family, and would definitely be an asset to any community.

Q. I have a small area near my home that I would like to set in trees. How can I get some seedlings? (H.E., Corapeake)

A. The North Carolina Forest Service offers seedlings to landowners at low cost. You can get a form for placing your order from the office of your county forest ranger, agricultural extension service or soil conservation service. Available this year are seedlings of loblolly, longleaf, shortleaf, Virginia, slash and white pine. Also available are Arizona cypress, red cedar, black walnut, black locust, sweetgum and yellow poplar. Prices range from less than two cents each for most of the pines, when ordered in lots of a thousand, to 22 cents each for black walnut, when ordered in lots of a hundred.

Q. I would like to plant a cover crop on my garden site. What should I plant and have I waited too late? (R.E., Boiling Springs)

A. You should plant rye with wheat as a second choice. Do not plant oats or barley. Rye should generally be planted by mid-November in the Piedmont and by Thanksgiving in the Coastal Plain. However, it is very winter hardy and will usually provide a good cover if planted in December. After all, you are not interested in harvesting a crop from it next spring. Scratch your soil or till it lightly. Rake the seed in to a depth of about an inch. Use one-and-a-half pounds of seed per 1,000 square feet. No fertilizer is necessary if your garden site is fertile. If not, apply about six pounds of 10-10-10 or the equivalent per 1,000 square feet. Apply the fertilizer at planting time or wait until the rye is four inches tall. Do not apply fertilizer at the time seed are germinating.

For years, homeowners were warned that most of their houses were underinsured because inflation had increased values so substantially.

The problem of inadequate coverage on structures became less and less severe as more and more insurance policies carried provisions that automatically kept coverage in line with rising prices.

Generally, the coverage of the contents of a house is equal to half the amount of the total insurance. So, as the total coverage goes up, the coverage on the contents also goes up. What has happened, though, is that, in many cases, the increase is not enough to cover the actual cash value of better-than-average furniture, carpets, drapes, etc. Policy holders can protect themselve from partial recovery for the loss of such items by getting an endorsement to the homeowners policy that provides for "replacement value on contents." With that endorsement, claims are paid on a "new for old" basis. Without the endorsement, claims are settled on the basis of cash value that takes into account depreciation.

It is the high quality, difficult-to-replace items — such as jewelry, paintings, sculptures and antiques — that present particular problems, since homeowner policies limit their coverage to an amount far below the actual cost of replacement. On silverware, for example, most states limit coverage to an amount very much below what it would cost to buy a new set.

Regardless of the type of insurance involved, people should complete a detailed inventory of their property. The inventory should list and fully describe each item. Photographs can help the insurance company establish the quality of such items.

Crafts Museum Observing Anniversary

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

This is a year of celebration for the American Craft Museum — 1981 is the 25th anniversary of the founding of the museum as a permanent record of the excellence of American crafts.

If it were simply a matter of recording the passing of a quarter century, there would be little reason to note the occasion, according to Paul Smith, director of the museum in New York, which is sponsored by the American Craft Council.

However, what is being noted is not merely the passage of years. Instead, the vitality and continued growth of American crafts is where the focus should be and is, in Smith's opinion.

Besides numerous exhibitions and special events this year (the latest exhibit is a kind of bird's eye view of all 233 former shows), museum officials recently announced the projected opening of a second exhibition space of 3,500 square feet to be housed on the main lobby floor of the new headquarters of a large manufacturing concern.

The space (donated by International Paper Co.) will have three contemporary craft shows a year after it opens in the spring of 1982. It is the latest in what has been a career of innovation.

As August Heckscher, director of the Twentieth Century Fund and a former New York administrator of cultural affairs in the early days of the museum, recalled, "The craft museum played a courageous role of leadership from the beginning."

Aileen Osborn Webb, the impetus behind the opening of the museum and a potter herself, saw crafts as a way of providing employment and giving meaning to the lives of Americans.

The museum was established at a time when new ideas were invigorating many areas of life, and inevitably the artistic revolutions of the Bauhaus in design and abstract expressionism in art would be reflected in the methods and images of the craftsmen, says Heckscher, adding "Mrs. Webb looked puzzled or sad at times and some craftsmen objected to the avant garde nature of some of the exhibits."

But the museum continued to support experimenting craftsmen. In the late 1960s, when the pursuit of crafts became a way of life for some young people as well as a way of making things, there was a burst of public interest in crafts.

The museum responded to the ferment of the '60s by "kicking up its own heels and joining the general exuberance," recalls Heckscher.

In various themed shows — such as those on the bed, amusements, paper and body coverings — "the museum explored the limits of artistic craftsmanship, reminding us that no corner of the imagination — and no cranny of the home — need be immune to the contagion of the handmade," says Heckscher.

The exhibits continue to explore various aspects of American culture. The message, according to Smith is that "crafts in all their forms are among America's most vital contributions to the world and they provide a significant alternative to an increasingly technical and coldly materialistic world."

Smith says crafts have matured unusually quickly, from what started as a kind of alternative movement with, overall, not very high standards of workmanship, to a fully-developed art form with the highest standards.

"Americans are recognized by all of the world as leaders in crafts. American inventiveness, experimentation and execution are highly admired," he said.

Although the American Craft Museum is in New York, he sees its role as a national one — to introduce to the public through publications and traveling exhibits the best work of today, to report on new directions and to document and collect the works of American craftsmen.

The new gallery to be opened next spring will not only double exhibition space, according to Smith, but will also introduce crafts to new audiences.

"I like the idea of bringing exhibits to people — wherever they gather. One of our most successful shows in this regard was at the San Francisco airport," he recalled.

As for the future, Smith sees a growing role for handmade objects of quality:

"Objects that last and have meaning will become even more attractive in the future," he concluded.

Here's the Answer

Q. — Our house has wooden shingles on the side of it. There appears to be some kind of transparent stain on it that is worn in spots. We would like to paint it. Can we put on the paint right over the stain or do we have to remove the stain?

A. - Stain which sinks into the wood is virtually impossible to remove. You can apply paint to the wood, but first apply some kind of sealer so that whatver stain is left does not bleed through. For a good result, apply two coats.

(Painting techniques and the uses of rollers and brushes are explained in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents PLUS a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

Mild Flu Season Expected

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — Flu watchers at the national Centers for Disease Control are cautiously optimistic that the upcoming influenza season will be a mild one.

Where the unpredictable flu virus is concerned, however, they are hedging their bets.

Dr. Alan Kendall, a virologist specializing in influenza research at the CDC, said in an interview that there were virtually no reports of flu activity in the United States this past summer and no buildup of cases during the past few months.

"If that's any indication, then maybe we will have a quiet winter," he said. But, he added, "Of course, you never know with influenza."

Although influenza experts at the CDC don't know for certain how severe or widespread this type of respiratory illness will be in any given fall and winter, they do know what type of flu virus strains will be circulating. That knowledge is based primarily on what happened during the Southern Hemisphere's winter, which occurs during our summer.

Kendall said two subtypes of the influenza-A virus, plus the B-Singapore virus, caused illness in South American countries during their winter. For this reason, and others, a vaccine containing protective antigens against the A-Bangkok, A-Brazil and B-Singapore flu varieties is now available in the United States.

"It's the best barometer we've got," said Kendall, "but of course it is not a reliable indicator of what might happen (in this country)." Nothing has happened in the Southern Hemisphere, Kendall said, "that would lead us to believe something unusual may occur."

It takes two weeks for the body to build up protection against flu viruses following vaccination. Persons for whom flu shots are recommended should get their immunizations as quickly as possible, Kendall said.

Symptoms of influenza include abrupt onset of fever, chills, headache, muscle pains and sometimes prostration. Nasal congestion and sore throat are common in the later stages of the disease and a cough is almost universal, often severe and protracted.

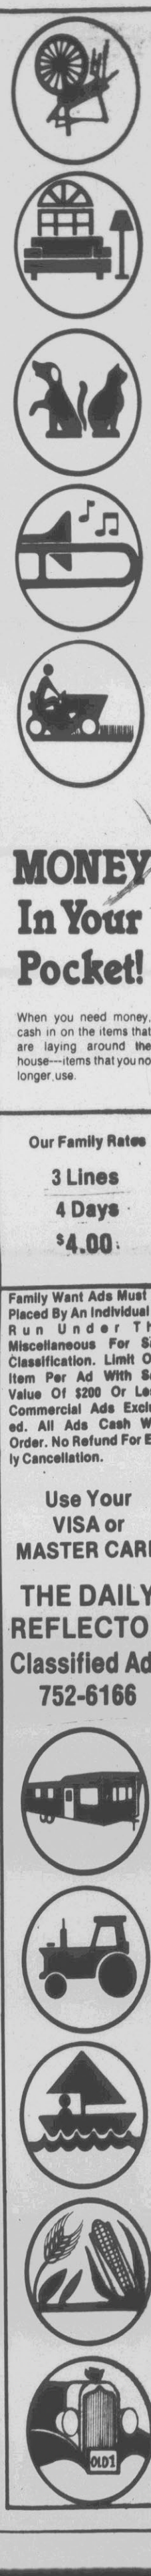

It is considered a dangerous disease because of the rapidity with which epidemics strike, the height of the attack rates and the seriousness of complications, notably bacterial pnuemonia. Severe disease and death usually occur among the elderly and the chronically ill.

Once a person contracts influenza, doctors can only treat the symptoms and try to make the patient as comfortable as possible until the virus runs its course, normally in about a week. The usual treatment consists of bed rest, consumption of liquids and aspirin for headache.

About 18 million doses of vaccine are being manufactured by drug companies to meet the demand for flu shots this fall and winter. Although there will be no government-sponsored free vaccination program as in past years, some states have purchased vaccine with funds left over from previous federally-funded programs.

The Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, an outside group of physicians which advises the CDC on vaccination questions, recommends annual flu shots for high risk groups, identified as chronically ill children and adults and older persons, especially those over age 65. The vaccine recommended for this fall and winter is the same as that used last winter, according to Kendall, except that it has been doubled in strength.

The advisory committee said in its recommendations, however, that the increased concentration of antigens in the 1981-82 vaccine should not significantly increase the frequency of side effects, generally local redness and swollen tissue at the site of injection lasting one or two days.

IN RE: Foreclosure of Deed of Trust executed by James Everette Tyson and wife, Carrie Linda Tyson, dated September 21, 1978, and recorded in Book E-47, page 240, of the Pitt County Registry, by Edward J. Harper, II, Substituted Trustee (by instrument recorded in Book S-49, page 391, Pitt County Registry.)

NOTICE OF SALE OF LAND UNDER DEED OF TRUST

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain deed of trust dated November 21, 1978, executed by James Everette Tyson and wife, Carrie Linda Tyson, and duly recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds for Pitt County, North Carolina, in Book E-47, page 240, in which W. W. Speight, was named Trustee (Edward J. Harper, II, having been duly substituted as successor trustee by instrument recorded in Book S-49, page 391, Pitt County Registry), default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured, and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured thereby, and after notice and hearing and order authorizing foreclosure to proceed by the Assistant Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County dated October 26, 1981, and done in accordance with Section 45-21.16 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the undersigned Substituted Trustee will, at 12:00 Noon on November 17, 1981, at the front door of the Pitt County Courthouse, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at public auction, that certain real property and the improvements located thereon described as lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

Being all of Lot 18, Block "G" as shown on map of Lake Ellsworth Subdivision, Section II, of Greenville Engineering and Surveying Company dated April 10, 1974, and recorded in Map Book 22 at Page 196 of the Pitt County Registry, except the following parcel: Beginning at a point in the right-of-way of Whittington Circle, said point being a common corner betwen Lots 18 and 19, Block G; thence N 32-39-36 W 41.00 to a point in the line between Lots 18 and 19; thence S 07-17-36 E. 35.37 along a new line to the right-of-way of Whittington Circle, thence a chord N 88-21-34 E, 17.54 to the point of Beginning.

The improvements on said property are included in the sale. Said sale will be made subject to all ad valorem taxes and any outstanding governmental assessments, building restrictions and easements of record.

The last and highest bidder at the sale will be required to make a cash deposit of ten percent (10%) of the first one thousand dollars of the bid price and five percent (5%) of the balance of the bid price at said sale.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, NOV. 8, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to delve deeply into philosophical studies and benefit from the knowledge. Accept conditions as they are and don't worry about something you cannot change.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Use your hunches more and get right answers to difficult problems. The one you love has high expectations, so don't disappoint.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Try to please loyal friends instead of being too preoccupied with personal worries. Show thoughtfulness for others.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to be of real service to those who have done you favors in the past. Sidestep one who likes to impose on you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A fine time to engage in amusements that will relieve stress and strain of the past week. Be more cheerful.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) You may find it difficult to gain the facts you desire, but persevere and all will turn out to your advantage. Relax tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Go to wherever you can for the knowledge that appeals to you. Plan the new week wisely so you can accomplish more.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Study your financial and property interests well and know exactly where you stand. Plan a better course for the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show others that you are a serious thinker and can solve knotty problems. Avoid a foe who is detrimental to your progress.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Meditating about whatever has been difficult to solve in the past can help you find the right solution.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Some personal aim you have can now be attained by pursuing it in a positive manner. Express happiness.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study every angle of your regular work and strive to be more efficient in the future. Take no risks with your reputation.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You need to apply yourself more to gain your true aims. Sidestep one who likes to take advantage of your good nature.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one who can figure out every angle of difficult problems and come up with the rights answers most of the time. Give the best education you can afford and then this can become a most successful life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, NOV. 9, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime delays and obstacles can exist in the early part of the day, so try to exercise patience for best results. Make plans to strive for a better performance in the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure you don't act too hastily with higher-ups today or you could regret it later. Do less talking at a social affair.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Not a good day to make any radical changes you have in mind. Make new contacts with influential persons.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Be sure to keep promises you have made and gain the goodwill of others. Show more patience with loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better agreement with an associate. Seek the truth where a civic matter is concerned.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) The week's new work requires all of your attention so don't go off on any tangents. Taking health treatments now is wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Changing conditions around you is on your mind but it requires more study before you do so. Save money for future use.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A situation at home does not please you but don't become involved at present. Make plans to improve your invironment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) More care with the use of your money is wise now. Don't lose your temper with an associates who is in a bad mood.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans to save money instead of spending it so lavishly. Talk with an adviser and obtain the advice you need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) There is tension in the wind and you may not be able to accomplish much in the morning. Avoid a group affair.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Not a good day for outside activity, but fine for conferring with a business expert about the future. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) One you have known for a long time could inadvertently give you the wrong information, so depend on your own good judgment.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will act well in time of emergency, so direct the education along troubleshooting lines for best results. The latter part of life will be much better than the former. Don't neglect ethical training early in life.

The Ultimate Game Of Endurance

NBC has devised what it considers to be the quiz to end all quizzes: an all-encompassing question-and-answer challenge in which the participants will travel 8,000 miles, starting in Los Angeles and continuing in Little Rock, Ark., Washington, D.C., London, Paris, Rome and Athens. Along the way, the losers will be carted off ignominiously in assorted lowly conveyances; the final winner will receive $100,000 in cash and a personalized "fantasy" prize of his choice.

Dan Rowan and Dick Martin host this mental and physical endurance test, called the "First Annual Ultra Quiz," which will be presented in two parts. Part One will be shown on Tuesday, Nov. 10 (9-10 p.m.). Part Two will be shown at the same time the following week.

Nearly 1,000 contestants began the competition in Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles. Besides an extensive true-false exam, they had to correctly guess whether or not two parachutists could jump 2,000 feet onto a target only 36 inches in diameter. The parachutists failed, and the winning circle was cut to 95 persons. By the time the contestants finally left Los Angeles, their number had been reduced to 42.

The next stop was Washington, D.C., or so the exuberant winners thought. A surprise layover and an elimination quiz in Little Rock, Ark., narrowed the field to 30.

In Washington, D.C., the contestants worked their way through a Celebrity History Quiz on Capitol Mall, where they had to interview "Ben Franklin," "Thomas Jefferson" and "Abraham Lincoln" and decide whether statements given by the costumed actors were true or false. This test cut the finalists' number to 10, who were then flown to London.

In London, two of the participants were eliminated after failing in the "Pick-A-Fish" part of the quiz, where they had to answer questions drawn from a pushcart filled with raw seafood.

In Paris, the quiz, aptly called Dr. Death, took place in a dungeon. The losers were taken to an authentic guillotine in a medieval horse-drawn carriage; the winners left for the airport in a royal horse-drawn carriage.

DAN ROWAN (l) and Dick Martin host NBC-TV's global "First Annual Ultra Quiz," a two-part special in which contestants continue — so long as they win — to travel around the world to compete in mentally and physically demanding games, airing Tuesdays, Nov. 10 and 17 (9-10 p.m.).

Greaser Vs. 'Nice' Girl

"Grease": a 1950s tale about a macho greaser who tries to hold onto a sweet-as-sugar girl without tarnishing his image, will be broadcast as The ABC Sunday Night Movie on Nov. 8 (9-11:15 p.m.).

Danny Zucco (John Travolta) is in danger of being labeled "a nice boy" — as terrible an accusation as a rebellious teen-ager could face — when he falls for Sandy Olsson (Olivia Newton-John), who is a classic example of "a nice girl." Since his image is at stake, Danny, of course, makes it obvious that he isn't the least interested in this nice-Nelly, so Sandy responds by ignoring him in favor of a clean-cut athletic type. Danny is not at all pleased, since a "don't care" image is all very nice, but you can't dance with it to slow songs.

The pain of rejection is eased a little for Danny when a badder but wiser girl called Cha Cha falls for him after he wins a hot-rod race against a resident juvenile delinquent. Even so, Cha Cha's charms look like chopped liver next to True Love.

So Danny goes clean-cut, determined to be a respectable athlete; maybe even "a nice boy." Sandy, equally driven by True Love and its ultimate goal — Going Steady — is also ready to make the ultimate sacrifice: dressing like a tramp.

Stockard Channing and Jeff Conaway are also starred in this affectionate recollection of the teen angels, leaders of the pack and beach blanket hijinks that made high school in the '50s a time of love, innocence and blue suede shoes.

The '50s sounding tunes from the Broadway production of "Grease" mixed with the new songs give this movie a terrific, uplifting beat. The title tune was written by Barry Gibb of The Bee Gees and sung by Frankie Vallie.

The action is equally as lively and many of the minor characters have scene-stealing moments, including veteran performers Eve Arden, Joan Blondel, Sid Caesar, Alice Ghostly and Dody Goodman. Edd Byrnes, Kookie of "77 Sunset Strip" fame, plays to the hilt his role of a vain dance show host with an eye for the female fans.

"Grease" was the longest-running musical in Broadway history and, when released theatrically in 1978, became the biggest money-making musical in film history.

JOHN TRAVOLTA AND OLIVIA NEWTON-JOHN star in one of the most popular musical stories of all time, "Grease," which will make its first appearance on television on "The ABC Sunday Night Movie" Nov. 8 (9-11:15 p.m.).

Chamberlain Set

Richard Chamberlain has been firmed for the lead role as Father Ralph in "The Thornbirds." Slated for the 1982-83 season, it will be an eight-hour "ABC Novel for Television."

DICKIE ROOK

Tips About Stains

If you get a spot or stain on your garment, A CLEANER WORLD GARMENT CARE CENTER suggests you follow these precautions: First, avoid heat. Heat will often set a stain. Second, don't rub the stained area of a garment. Rubbing may chafe a fabric or damage the color. Third, have the stain or spot removed as soon as possible. The longer a stain stays in a fabric, the harder it is to remove. Finally, tell your cleaner what caused the stain. If you've worked on removing it yourself, tell your cleaner what you've used.

A CLEANER WORLD GARMENT CARE CENTER offers these helpful hints for your benefit and feels you'll find their cleaning service excellent for removing stains.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Could you tell me something about Nancy McKeon who plays on "The Facts of Life"? Also, where I can write to her? ROBERT TOMPKINS, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Nancy's been in show business since she was 2 years old doing a wide variety of commericals and modeling – her brother Phil McKeon stars in "Alice." Born in Westbury, Long Island, N.Y., on April 5, 1966, Nancy says, "being a native New Yorker helped me get the part of Jo." Write to her in c/o the show "The Facts of Life," NBC-TV, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif., 91523.

Q: Will you please tell me the real name and address of Julie McCoy of "Love Boat"? H.B., LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: We may all know her as Julie McCoy, cruise director, but her real name is Lauren Tewes. Entertainment personalities prefer their personal addresses remain private, so write to Lauren in c/o "The Love Boat," ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Q: Can you please tell me what has happened to the following shows, "Benson," "Mike Douglas Show," "Barney Miller" and "M*A*S*H?" E. FREMONT, N.C.

A: "Benson" and "Barney Miller" are on ABC-TV – "M*A*S*H" on CBS-TV. All these shows are part of the 1981-82 fall lineup. "The Mike Douglas Show" is syndicated, therefore your local channel has evidently decided not to renew it.

Q: Is Charlene Tilton any kin to Martha Tilton? I have a snapshot of Martha taken in the South Pacific in 1943 and the resemblance is great. C. WRIGHT, HENERSON, N.C.

A: The resemblance is there, but the relationship is not! Charlene was born December 1 in San Diego, California. Her family moved almost immediately to Hollywood, where she attended Hollywood High School.

Q: How old is Valerie Bertinelli, and where did she grow up? B. CROGHAN, FT. BRAGG, N.C.

A: Lovely Valerie has grown up right before our eyes – she turned 21 last April 23rd. Born in Wilmington, Delaware, Val moved to the West Coast in 1971 with her parents, older brother and two younger brothers.

Q: Has ABC taken "American Dream" from its programming list? I really enjoyed it, and would like to see it next season. C.G., COATS, N.C.

Q: Please tell me the name of "The Waltons" theme song. Also the name of the person who plays the cornet on the program. M.D., FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: The name of the song is very original – "The Waltons Theme," composed by Jerry Goldsmith. Evidently the cornet player is Sandy Courage – that's the name listed under the show's music credits.

'Nurse' Given A Facelift

"Nurse," starring Michael Learned and Robert Reed, begins its second season on Wednesday, Nov. 11 (9-10 p.m.). The series will focus on the human drama that encompasses the professional and private life of Mary Benjamin (Miss Learned), head nurse at a bustling New York City hospital.

In the premiere episode, "Margin for Error," Mary becomes fast friends with her new neighbor, Joe Calvo (Dennis Boutsikaris). Boutsikaris, who had a small role in an episode of "Nurse" last year, will now star regularly as Calvo, a young street-wise lawyer who becomes Mary's confidant.

The conflict in the story arises when Mary is on her rounds at work and discovers that a cardiac patient is suddenly in critical condition with a highly irregular heartbeat. Mary learns that the patient has been given the wrong medication. Fortunately, through her quick thinking the man's life is saved.

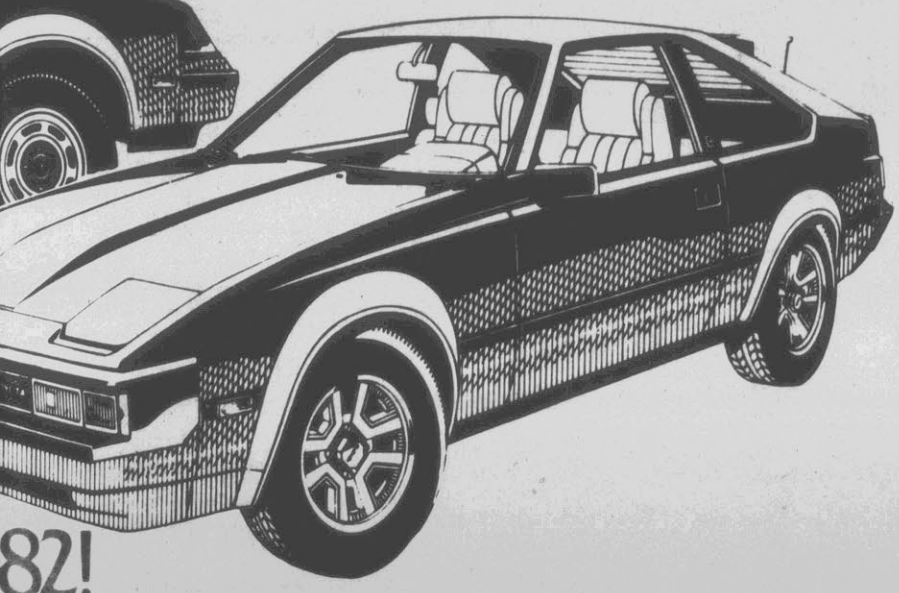

The patient is being treated by Dr. John Finchley (Ralph Byers), son of one of the most respected doctors in the city. Finchley blames his nurse for misunderstanding his instructions and administering the wrong medication.

An inquiry is held to determine the truth of the matter.

Boutsikaris, is a native of Berkely Heights, N.J., began acting in high school. Later he attended Hampshire College in Amherst, Mass., where he studied drama, acted in various stage productions and wrote a musical play, "The Birds, The Bees and Gum Disease." The play was subsequently made into an underground film and won an award at the Kennedy Center in 1977 as the Best Short Film.

After graduation, Boutsikaris moved to New York and joined John Houseman's Acting Company, touring with the group for two years. During this time, he appeared in such diverse productions as Shakespeare's "Love Labours Lost," Arnold Wesker's "The Kitchen" and Tennessee William's "Camino Real."

'Strike Force' Tackles Crime

Robert Stack returns to television in his fourth police-related series, in "Strike Force," premiering on Friday, Nov. 13 (9:30-11 p.m.). Previously, Stack appeared in "The Untouchables," "Name of the Game" and "Most Wanted."

Strike Force refers to an elite police unit that handles extremely sophisticated or dangerous cases. At the head of this unit is Capt. Frank Murphy (Stack), a hard-driving, methodical and seasoned policeman. Strike Force is comprised of officer Paul Strobber (Dorian Harewood), officer Charlie Gunzer (Richard Romanus), officer Mark Osborn (Michael Goodwin), officer Rosie Jacobs (Trisha Noble) and deputy commissioner Herbert Klein (Herb Edelman).

A fifth-generation Californian, Stack grew up among motion picture, concert, opera and radio personalities. His grandmother was singer Marina Perrini and his grandfather was Carlos Modini, both renowned opera stars.

Stack's interest in dramatics evidenced itself first while he was in high school, but it wasn't until his second year of college that he seriously pursued a theatrical career. He entered the Henry Duffy School of Theatre and six months later was signed to a contract with Universal Studios.

His career was interrupted when World War II broke out, and he enlisted in the Navy, where he was commissioned an ensign and served as an aerial gunnery instructor.

After four years in the service, Stack returned to Hollywood. His first post-war picture was "A Date With Judy" with Elizabeth Taylor and Jane Powell. This was followed by "Miss Tatlock's Millions," "Fighter Squadron," "Mr. Music" and one of his favorite roles, that of the airline pilot in "The High and the Mighty." In all, Stack has appeared in 35 motion pictures, including "Written on the Wind," in which he received an Academy Award nomination.

Stack is also an accomplished skeet shooter, and in 1971 he was inducted into the National Skeet Shooting Hall of Fame. In 1976 he helped raise money to send the U.S. Skeet Shooting team to the Montreal Summer Olympic Games by appearing at the national qualifying trials.

His biography, "Straight Shooting," was published a few years ago. The title refers to his marksmanship rather than to the type of characters he has portrayed on film and television.

ROBERT STACK STARS as the commander of "Strike Force," an elite police unit charged with solving the most puzzling crimes, airing Fridays (10-11 p.m.), on ABC-TV. The premiere episode will air Nov. 13 as a 90-minute special.

Role Reunites Stars

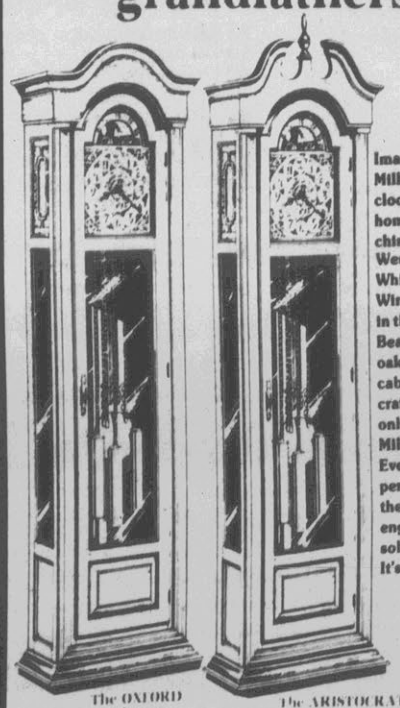

Olivia Newton-John and John Travolta will reunite in cameo role in the "Grease 2" sequel, reprising their characters from the first hit.

School For Golfers

The Fall Qualifying School, set to start in early November at the Waterwood National Golf Course in Huntsville, Texas, will likely be the first such school for golfers, if the concept of an All-Exempt Tour is ratified by the Tournament Policy Board.

One Joe To Go

"If nothing else," acknowledged Luciano, "it's done wonders for my business back home," referring to his sporting goods store in his hometown of Endicott, N.Y. "The only problem is that most of my customers come in to ask what Joe Garagiola is REALLY like. Now if I can just get them to buy something when they're in there."

Cowboys To Host Buffalo

On Nov. 9 (9-11:45 p.m.), "ABC's NFL Monday Night Football" will feature the matchup between the Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills. The game will be played at Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas.

Dallas sports a 6-2 record and trails Philadelphia by a full game in the race for the NFC East title. They have not enjoyed an easy schedule, playing against teams like Miami, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Their two losses were suffered against the 49ers and the St. Louis Cardinals. At their present pace, the Cowboys look like a good choice for a wild-card berth in the playoffs.

Dallas' quarterback Danny White has been enjoying an outstanding year as chief helmsman for the Cowboy offense. In his game against Miami two weeks ago, White threw two touchdown passes in a 31-second stretch of the fourth quarter to rally the Cowboys from a 13-point deficit. Dallas emerged from the contest a 28-27 victor.

White is currently ranked third in the NFC in passing with a rating of 84.5. He has completed 131 passes in 223 attempts for a completion ratio of 58.7 percent. In the process he has gained 1,680 yards in the air while throwing 10 touchdown passes.

His favorite receivers are Tony Hill and Ron Springs. Springs is leading the Cowboy receiving corps with 30 catches for 213 yards. Hill has recently regained his starting status with the squad and has caught 17 passes for 325 yards. He has scored two touchdowns in the process.

Coach Tom Landry knows the importance of a balanced attack and counters his aerial game with an awesome rush. Running back Tony Dorsett leads the Cowboys' rushing corps with 139 carries for 894 yards. He is the leading rusher in the NFL. Dorsett has already enjoyed five 100-yard games and has posted three touchdowns this season.

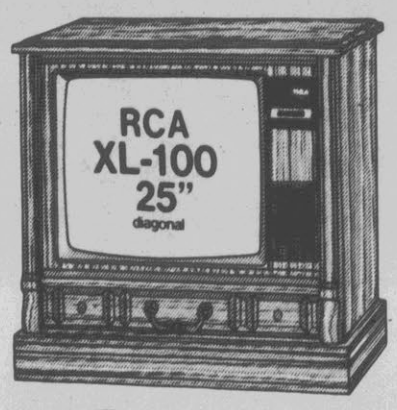

Team Struggles

The Seattle Seahawks are struggling through a season of mishaps. Their five-game losing streak has caused head coach Jack Patera much concern. "Despite our record, we remain optimistic about the future," says Patera. "Our problems have been something different each week. We still have confidence in our players that we can turn things around."

HOLLYWOOD — Now that RANDI OAKES is wearing an engagement ring from GREGORY HARRISON she just has to be the happiest girl in Hollywood. Her smile is as bright as her diamond.

On the other side of the coin, one of the unhappiest girls is SUZANNE ROGERS of "DAYS OF OUR LIVES," who has separated from actor-husband SAM GROOME after less than two years of marriage.

JOHNNY CARSON is determined to have a swimming pool installed on his beach front property at Malibu. He just paid $1.5 million dollars for the house next door to be torn down to make room for his pool.

The latest news about EDDIE FISHER reports that poor EDDIE had to have four stitches in his forehead when he hit his head on a file cabinet in his office while chasing a cockroach — "Oh Mein Cucaracha" was never one of his favorite songs.

UNICEF has established "The Danny Kaye Award" as Canada's highest civilian honor, to be given annually to an individual who has contributed significantly to aid children. DANNY himself will be the first recipient.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR fans can be looking for her on "GENERAL HOSPITAL" during Nov. 10, 12, 16, 17 and 19. The two thousand dollar salary she earned from her appearance on the show was donated to the two hospitals in Virginia that treated her while campaigning in the state with husband JOHN WARNER.

REGIS PHILBIN, the talk show host who will soon begin his morning show on NBC, looks much younger than his 47 years. He attributes his looks and energy to Mega Vitamins - he takes 75 pills twice a day (at a cost of about $180 a day).

WHAT'S NEW IN CONSUMER ELECTRONICS

The fascinating world of consumer electronics

Consumer electronics: in tune with today's lifestyle

By IVAN BERGER

In the past 50 years, consumer electronics has done more than any other industry to give us more ways to enjoy ourselves, and more time to do it in.

It brings the world's best entertainment and the latest news to our homes, through radio and TV.

It turns our homes into concert halls, through modern high-fidelity recordings and stereo equipment. While the phonograph existed before electronics did (the first ones were all-mechanical), it's a far more lifelike, more convenient instrument since electronics was added.

Electronics lets us take good sound with us, too, in our cars, in our pockets or to the beach.

It lets us make our own recordings, to preserve broadcasts, make safety copies of rare old recordings, or make visual or audible records of our lives.

With tape, we can practice anything from golf to public speaking and get an instant replay of it.

We can free ourselves from the radio and TV schedules, yet still hear and see everything we like—and preserve the best of it for later re-enjoyment.

We can even create sonic fantasies, or shoot our own movies . . . the potentialities are endless.

Electronics gives us new games and pastimes, too, even giving us "opponents" ready to play whenever we are, at the level of skill we choose to face.

Electronics is fun. But, it's a lot more, too. Someone in your family wears a watch that tells time with far greater accuracy than you'd have been able to buy at any cost, a few years ago. Yet such a watch costs surprisingly little.

By now, there's hardly a home without a calculator—20 years ago, even some offices had to get along without one.

And, 20 years from now, there'll be hardly a home without its own computer (more than half a million personal computers are already in use).

You may already have a computer without knowing it. Electronics has brought the cost of them so low that they're being built into control systems for eveything from your TV set to your washing machine to your car.

Electronics also lets you keep in touch with the world while you're driving, with CB radio or even mobile telephones.

At home, it lets you get more from your phones, too. Electronic equipment can let you answer your phone when you go visiting, or answer your phones from out in the yard.

Even waking up can be eased by electronics. Your clock radio can wake you gently. Then, when you're ready to arise, a touch of a bedside button starts your coffee perking.

The same system can turn lights on and off even while you're away. And, if that doesn't fool prospective burglars, electronic alarms can howl and even telephone for the police. Electronic fire and smoke alarms can save your home and your life.

All in all, electronics has given us a battery of electronic servants, savants, guides and entertainers—all of whom work inexpensively.

For electronics is probably our biggest bargain:

The hi-fi system that cost $1,000 back then costs $1,000 now—but gives dramatically better sound, and in stereo instead of mono. The calculator that cost too much for many offices is now $10, and fits in your pocket.

And, the computer (an unimaginable expense for even major businesses, back in the '50s) is now just a few hundred dollars, sits on your table-top and lets you program it yourself in English.

What's in the future? Smaller, better and less expensive versions of the products we already have—and bigger, less expensive versions of things such as TV screens that gain from large size. And, TV with super-detailed, 3-D pictures will be here someday.

Meanwhile, today's miracles are here—all around you, throughout the stores in this area. Check them out!

A new dimension in sound—how to expand your music and listening pleasure

Why is listening to live music in a concert hall so much more enjoyable than listening to a recording of that music in your home?

One of the main reasons is that the sound reaching your ears as you sit in a concert hall is not limited to the space between two speakers, as is the recorded sound in your home.

This spatial limitation is even more obvious when you play a tape recording in the cramped environment of a car.

A live orchestra occupies a much wider space than the distance between two speakers. When a recording is played through a conventional stereo system, the various musical instruments sound as though they've been squeezed between the left and right speakers. This greatly reduces the life-like quality of the music and the listening enjoyment.

One way to solve this problem is to add a separate "ambience" unit, usually requiring an extra pair of speakers and an extra amplifier. However, this solution is too inconvenient and too expensive for most people.

Yamaha has come up with a new solution to this problem, one which makes more life-like music obtainable simply and economically. The top four models in Yamaha's new receiver line offer a new feature.

The unique Yamaha Spatial Expander considerably broadens the field of sound produced by a stereo system without the need for an extra pair of speakers or a second amplifier.

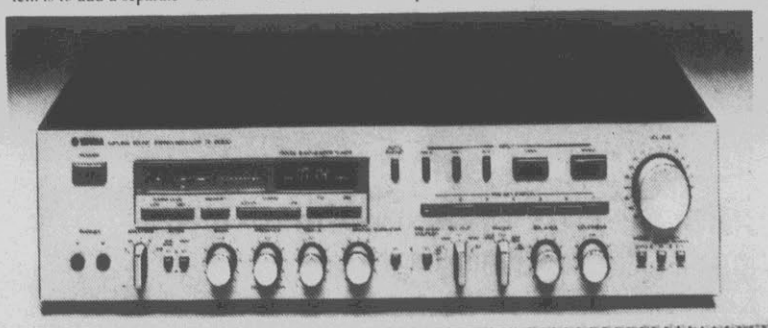

The Spatial Expander does for the ear what a wide angle camera lens does for the eye. The expanded sound field restores to the music the illusion of greater distances between the instruments, as experienced in a live performance.

Rather than being a separate, add-on unit, the Yamaha receiver with the Spatial Expander is the heart of a stereo system, offering synthesized tuning with a digital readout, AM/FM station presets, and other top-quality receiver features.

An important advantage of having the Spatial Expander incorporated into the receiver is that the expansion effect can be recorded during home taping, enabling the user to capture the effect and carry it with him.

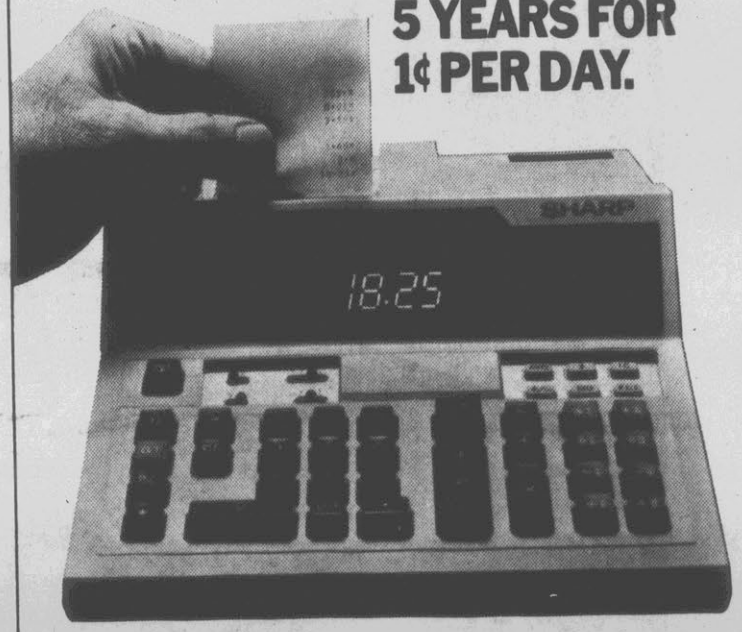

This allows the car stereo enthusiast to broaden the sound field in his automobile. Previously, no matter how good a car stereo was, the life-like quality of the music played on it was limited.

Yamaha's four top receivers featuring the Spatial Expander are: the 50-watt per channel R-700, carrying a suggested list price of $450; the 70-watt per channel R-900, $500; the 100-watt per channel R-1000, $700; and the 150-watt per channel R-2000, $900.

By BENNETT EVANS

The car seems a peculiarly American listening room: we've all used car radios and tape players to keep us company across the long stretches of the American landscape.

Many of us felt our first twinges of romance to the sounds of car radios, too, whether it was Guy Lombardo, Perry Como, or the Rolling Stones. And, the car radio was, after all, an American invention.

So, it's no surprise that car stereo is the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. hi-fi market. We have more cars per capita than anyone; we drive longer distances; and lately we've been holding onto our cars longer, making a big investment in sound gear more worthwhile.

Then, too, Americans are probably more used to good sound at home than anyone except the Japanese—and they don't drive as much.

Changes you can hear

What comes as more of a surprise, especially to those who haven't listened lately, is how good car sound has become.

Sure, the car is a rugged listening environment, with weird acoustics, poor places to mount speakers, and a tendency to alternately broil, jounce and freeze car-stereo equipment. Nonetheless, good equipment, properly installed, is as good as many good home systems.

One reason is that a lot of the same techniques are used. All but the least expensive car-stereo tape players now have Dolby noise-reduction and equalization switches to match normal or chromium and metal tapes.

Most have separate bass and treble controls—if they don't have built-in equalizers for even more precise control of the sound.

Amplifiers with 10 or 20 honest watts per channel are quite common, and those with as many as 150 watts are not unknown. Speakers have separate woofers and tweeters, sometimes each driven by a separate amplifier.

Another reason why car sound is so good, these days, is that a lot of companies with reputations in home hi-fi gear have entered the auto audio field, too: and they want to protect those reputations.

The car manufacturers are keeping the car sound industry on its toes, too. When a major manufacturer introduces a new body shell, it may well be built around a dashboard slot that fits nothing but the radios and stereo equipment which that particular car maker sells... at least till the stereo manufacturers can re-tool for it.

Ingenuity the key

And, even when the dimensions are known, they're likely to be small ones, calling for extra ingenuity to cram in all the controls and features.

There are lots of features and controls to cram into a dashboard, too.

For radio listeners, various models offer as many as four tuning methods: manual tuning, pushbutton selection of a favorite station (many radios can do that for five or six FM stations and the same number of AM ones; some models select five AM and 10 FM stations), "scan" tuning that samples every station on the dial for a few seconds till it hits one you like, and "seek," which homes in on the next station and locks it in for you.

Increasingly popular

Those last three are getting more common, too, because more and more radios use digital frequency-synthesis tuning circuits. These not only do a better tuning job, but make fancy tuning features easier to add. Many also double as digital clocks, accurate and reliable.

There are fancy features in the tape department, too. Dolby noise reduction is already common, and so are automatic music finder circuits, which fast-wind the tape to the start of the next selection, or back to the start of the current one, if you want to hear it over.

Auto-reverse tape decks are far more common in the car than at home, too—and for a good reason: the more the stereo does for you, the freer you are to concentrate on the road.

One former problem of FM-stereo car radios is disappearing: when your station starts fading in the distance, the best new ones don't jump back and forth erratically from broad-sounding but noisy stereo to clean-sounding mono. Instead, they fade gradually from one extreme to the other.

One major change in car-sound gear is hard to see: more and more units have no amplifier sections built in, but connect to external amplifiers, instead.

The television set may perform a noble deed for society in the coming decade by bringing the family back together.

The automobile turned America into a country of nomads who thought nothing of jumping into the car and taking off to see Aunt Millie or some distant national park.

But, rising costs of transportation—plus inflation in general—will mean less travel and more emphasis on home entertainment in the 1980s, according to an RCA forecast.

And, the days when the average viewer had to rely on programs supplied by three television networks and a few local stations are past. Now, people have cable and pay TV as well as video games, video cassette recorders and the video discs.

There's not only more programming to choose from, but the viewer has the ability to program the television set to meet his own tastes and desires.

With the video disc, for example, a viewer can watch a movie, a ballet, a Shakespearean play, or a wide variety of other programs when he wants and as often as he wants without commercial interruption.

It wasn't always so. In the early days people were hard put to find pleasant diversions. They'd sit around listening to a traveling bard or do something else equally exciting. Books did not become generally available until Gutenberg invented movable type in 1456.

But, home entertainment got a shot in the arm in 1707 when a Florentine harpsichord maker invented the piano, providing some decent music in the home. The player piano came along in 1863, providing a major boon to the family sing-along.

The 1870s saw the birth of the telephone (that's the black thing growing out of the ears of teenagers) and the phonograph, one of the most popular consumer products in history. "Victrola" became a household word.

Radio made its commercial debut in America in 1920—a by-product of World War I communications. Now, Americans really had a versatile product that brought music, news and entertainment into the home. In the evenings, the family would gather around the box and listen to the "Blue" Network or the "Red" Network.

But, even as radio was proliferating across the land, scientists were working on the development of a box that would provide both sight and sound. "Television" is what Scientific American magazine called it.

Just as radio's introduction was speeded by World War I, television's commercial appearance in America was delayed by World War II. It wasn't until 1946 that the first television sets were introduced by RCA. Color television came along in 1954, also a pioneering effort.

Gradually, Bartolomeo Cristofori's piano began fading into the sunset as a home entertainment device. Television was now the star in the living room and family viewing occupied the evening hours.

And, there it sat, dispensing hour after hour of programming ranging from soaps to sports to sitcoms. The viewer had little choice over what he watched. His alternatives were to change channels or shut it off.

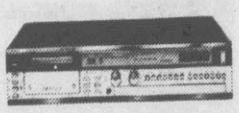

In the coming decade, many industry observers see the television set as a focal point of a computerized electronic control center.

By remote control, a viewer can decide whether to watch off-the-air broadcasting, cable TV, pay TV, video games, cassettes or programs prerecorded on video discs.

Experiments now going on with two-way interacting cable and teletext could change the way people shop and bank, and also could presage the day when newspapers and magazines are electronically delivered into the home.

FAMILY ENTERTAINMENT—RCA's new VideoDisc system lets all members of the family participate in video entertainment in the home. Jennifer Yount, age six, shows how easy the player operates as she selects her favorite Walt Disney movie. Available nationally, the RCA SelectaVision" VideoDisc player has an optional retail price of $499.95. Video discs are priced from $14.98 to $27.98.

One-brand systems: easy, one-stop way to buy audio

By FRED PETRAS

Once upon a time, a "sound system" was a simple box, the phonograph. Fancier systems were in fancy furniture, called consoles, but it was still just one box.

Then came components—sound systems split into separate amplifiers, tuners, turntables and so on.

That opened possibilities for better sound, and for systems that had just the features and facilities you needed. But, it also made hi-fi buying more complicated.

To the seeker of audio perfection, it's bliss to have a choice of dozens of brands, hundreds of components.

But, to the typical music lover who wants top-notch sound but wants to avoid a big shopping hassle, it was mind-boggling.

So, the perfectionists went one way, the hassle-haters went another, and their two kinds of equipment grew further and further apart.

That's not true any longer, though. Now, you can buy an all-in-one system at nearly any quality and price level, from $100 phonographs to pre-assembled systems costing (and worth) thousands.

There are all kinds of systems; nowadays. Table-models still exist, and so do horizontal consoles; but, the big boom is in systems that stack your system vertically to save floor space.

Single-brand systems from the component companies actually consist of separate components, usually packaged for you into handsome racks which save space and give the system a unified look.

Some companies give you fixed-menu systems; "no substitutions, please." Others let you pick and choose among components that will fit.

Those racks are usually designed to exactly fit one manufacturer's components—some competing components may fit in there, too, but not as neatly.

It's a time-saving snap to buy a one-brand system: you merely figure out what you want from a system and how much you want to spend.

The system you get is bound to work well, since its individual components are "matched" to each other.

The price is right; a one-brand packaged audio system is budget-effective, since the manufacturer can pass on production/inventory/promotion economies. If ever you need service, it can all be done at one place.

And, finally, you can avoid the intimidation of a hi-fi buying scene where salesmen sometimes spout indecipherable "technicalese."

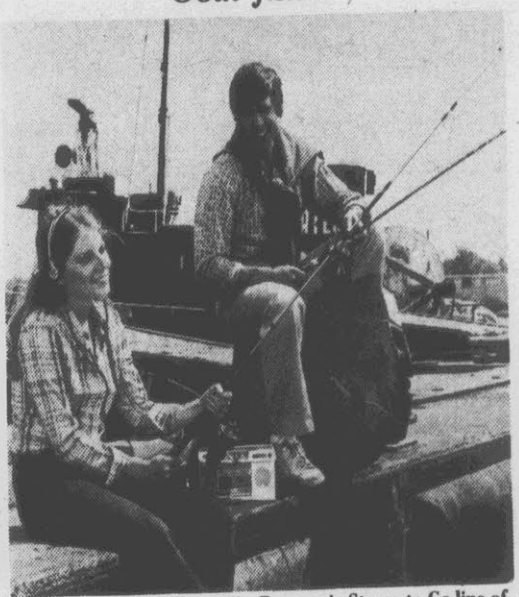

Check around, and you'll find packaged systems with virtually all the flexibility of "custom" set-ups, plus at least one feature that's mainly available in packaged systems: remote control.

As for quality, dollar for dollar you'll do better, on the average, buying a one-brand package, despite rumors to the contrary.

The only area in which you might come out a bit on the short side is in speakers. You're likely to find that as your ears become more sophisticated you may develop a need for speakers that do the rest of your new system greater justice.

But, you can buy many systems without speakers, and add those of your own choice later.

By ELLEN KLEIN

Ready or not, we're entering a video age. The family TV set, once merely a medium for preselected "mass" programming, is becoming today's home entertainment and education center.

Video cassette recorders and video disc players let us watch what we want, when we want it, in ways far beyond the imaginings of television pioneers. The prospect has most people wanting to buy a video something. But what?

Key to understanding

Your choice gets clearer when you understand the differences between the video cassette and disc. A video disc player, like the turntable in a hi-fi system, plays only pre-recorded discs.

Besides watching pre-recorded cassettes, you can tape TV shows, or make home "movies" with a video camera, then play them through your VCR.

Why all the excitement over disc players, if VCRs can do as much and more? Well, disc players have a lot going for them, too: They cost less than video cassette machines, and their discs cost less than recorded cassettes.

Stereo sound available

Some players offer two-channel sound, for stereo concerts or bilingual discs; but only one VCR has that capability, so far—and it will go to waste until TV and commercial cassettes with stereo sound arrive.

There's also a possibility of innovative programming made specially for disc, which may tickle your viewing fancy more than conventional fare.

So far, manufacturers have settled on three disc player designs, or formats, and they're incompatible—discs made for one type of player won't work with another.

You should determine the kinds of program material out there, for any format, as a player's potential won't amount to much if there's little available for it that you'd care to watch.

The offerings in brief

That caveat aside, let's look at what each of the formats offers:

- RCA's CED-format players, introduced to retail at $500, (and those due from Sears, Wards, Zenith, Sanyo, Toshiba, Hitachi, Radio Shack and JC Penney) are the least expensive and simplest to operate, because at present they do not offer such extras as stereo, freeze-frame and slow motion (though they do have fast-scan facilities).

These machines are made to order for movies, TV highlights, and concert discs. The over 115 discs in RCA's catalog cost $15-$28, and can play up to an hour per side.

- LaserVision-format players such as the Pioneer, introduced at about $750, and Magnavision models, listed at about $775 (plus those announced by Kenwood, Gold Star, Fisher and Advent), use a laser beam, instead of RCA's mechanical stylus, to "read" the audio and video information encoded in their grooveless discs.

Made to last

There's no physical stylus contact; and the information's sealed in a transparent layer, which protects it from dust, dirt and scratches (to the laser beam, such surface defects are too out-of-focus to be noticed). So, these $6-$25 discs should last.

LaserVision players have stereo and special play features, such as freeze-frame, frame-by-frame advance, slow motion, fast motion and fast scanning, usually in both forward and reverse.

Random access a feature

Pioneer's player also offers random access, for zipping to specific chapters or frames, and an optional remote control.

- VHD-format players aren't due out till early 1982 when they should be available from JVC, Panasonic, GE, Sharp, Sansui and Quasar.

This format promises stereo sound and other special features at a lower price than LaserVision. Most of the initially-scheduled 200 disc titles will be movies, but we can expect music, sports, TV hits and interactive discs, too.

Turning to video cassette recorders, here you'll also find incompatible formats: Beta and VHS are the two big ones in VCRs and there's some interest in Technicolor's miniature system.

Recording capability

That incompatibility is less of a problem with tape, though, because you're not totally dependent on programs produced in your format—you can record your own.

Beside the ability to record TV broadcasts when you're out, or watching another channel, VCRs let you erase and re-use your tapes at will.

If you do want to buy recordings for your tape machine they'll cost more than discs—$50 to $70; but if you're not inclined to spend that, you can rent many of them for $6 to $10 a day.

Most VCRs offer two or three recording speeds—a fast one for best reproduction and slower ones for longer recording time; make certain that the features you need work at the speed you'll use most.

Portable VCRs split a table model's functions between two compact modules, a recorder and a tuner/timer, with the recorder running on rechargeable batteries when you disconnect the two.

More money, but worth it!

Though they cost slightly more (up to $1500), portables make sense for users who want to record off the air and out of doors.

Your first video purchase could be the start of something big, like a whole home entertainment center. Sooner or later, you may want a disc player and a VCR, each for what it does best.

After that, it's but one step to a big-screen TV, a personal computer, a satellite dish,... it's certainly a video age, isn't it?

Learning + fun = winning electronic games

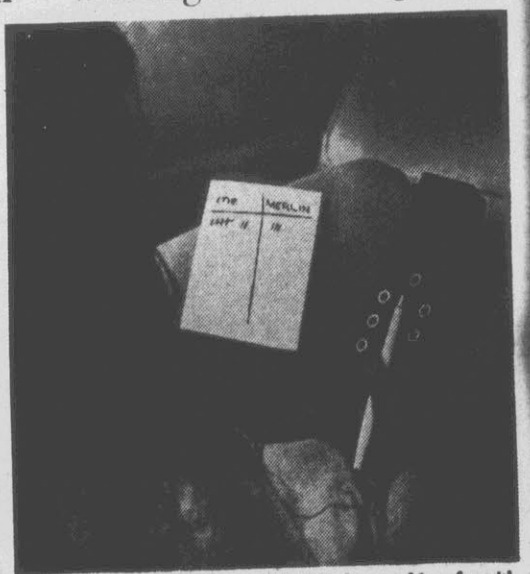

Electronic games should do more than blip and blink. In fact, the ones with the most lasting appeal and play value are those that combine fun with learning.

Parker Brothers, toy and game manufacturers for nearly a century, offers consumers these tips on what to look for in an electronic game:

- Look for games that offer a variety of skill levels. These games give a player a chance to learn the rules first. Then as he improves, they automatically speed up to conform to his ability, providing continous challenge and encouragement to excel.
- Look for games which offer more than one game in a hand-held unit. The best selling hand-held electronic game last year, MERLIN™, is a good example.

It offers six different games at varying levels of difficulty, each requiring strategy, memory, logic, creativity, or some combination of these to win. One of the games even encourages children to try their hand at composing music.

- Look for games with problem-solving themes. Just as in mathematics, these games require players to exercise logic and deductive reasoning to figure out the correct solution. They teach players the difference between taking a chance and making the right decision.
- Look for action games that require quick reactions. These games not only get the competitive juices flowing but are great exercise for eye-hand coordination and manual dexterity.
- Look for games that require players to think and plan ahead. In games such as electronic pool, a sharp eye, deft touch and keen strategy will help players decide where to aim and angle to sink the easy shots and get into position for the tough ones.

FOX: THE GOOD NEWS GUYS.

ComRadar Corporation, the company which has the only full line of quality radar detectors, has more good news for its dealers.

The Plus 50 Lens gives our dealers the opportunity to sell higher performance and better range to the owners of almost all other radar detectors.

First is the Fox XK. It reads all bands and tucks away on the visor.

And now there's Superfox!

The first remote, superheterodyne radar warning system. Superfox has 10 times the sensitivity capability of any conventional radar detector. It is ideal for custom installations.

Come hear the good news. Come see the good news, from ComRadar. Increase your sales and profits, become a single source, full line dealer of Fox quality products. Don't miss the Fox.

Mini component system gives you more

PERFECT FOR THE PERSON who has a space problem but still desires good quality sound . . . BSR's new mini stereo component system. System MCR 200 features an AM/FM stereo receiver (12 × 4 × 10 inches), a cassette deck (12 × 4⅓ × 10 inches) and two 2-way acoustical suspension speakers (6 × 8½ × 6). All for just $529.95.

High-technology products lead home video revolution

By WALTER C. FISHER
President, Zenith Sales Company Division

A revolution is taking place in consumer electronics. During this decade, video high-tech products—video cassette recorders, video disc players, video cameras, big screen projection TV and even personal microcomputers—will be as common in the American home as today's TV set.

The TV receiver is no longer a passive instrument. It has become an integral part of a home communications system. The exclusive Advanced Space Phone from Zenith is a major step in that direction.

Zenith's new Projection TV system also will take a leading role in the home video revolution this fall. With a touch of a button, the 45-inch diagonal screen rises from its fine furniture cabinet for viewing.

Because the screen also descends into the cabinet after viewing, this is the first large screen projection unit that is at home in the living room.

Three patented, self-converging picture tubes eliminate constant adjustments common on conventional projection TVs. The green, red and blue tubes, developed and patented by company engineers, provide full picture brightness with greater sharpness and detail than ever possible in projection TV.

This new Projection TV is also a video monitor for video cameras, video disc players, video cassette recorders, video games and personal computers.

A new generation of color television receivers has been developed by building on advances that demonstrated reliability and performance.

Around our advanced line of color TVs, which incidentally are all built in the U.S., the American consumer can expand his "electronic playground" to keep up with future advances.

A number of new TV receivers are equipped with the exclusive Advanced Space Phone, which allows the viewer to not only answer calls, but make calls, through the TV.

With a hand-held key pad, the viewer can dial the desired telephone number, local, long-distance or overseas. As the number is dialed, it appears on the screen.

Zenith's fall line of video cassette recorders (VCRs) is the most advanced yet. The fully-portable VR-9800 and companion timer/tuner and power supply are compatible with our video cameras.

Industry sales for VCRs—the fastest growing segment of the business—are expected to jump 80 percent over 1980 with approximately 1.5 million units expected to be sold this year.

These changing times demand quality, high-technology video products for the home. And, the new generation of Beta-format VCRs, in addition to the Video Disc Player and other Video High-Tech products, are meeting this demand.

Zenith engineers, technicians and designers are dedicated to leading the video revolution of the '80s and leading the American home into the future.

NEW STEREO RECEIVER

Music buffs constantly update their stereo systems with better quality components to ensure continuing performance and excellence.

Zenith's fall audio components line has been designed to meet the needs of the most discriminating audio enthusiast.

The 1982 stereo line, available this fall, features a stereo cassette receiver with technical advances that allow the listener to recall five AM and five FM pre-selected stations automatically at the touch of a button.

The new quartz synthesized tuner in the cassette receiver permits automatic signal scanning of stronger stations, and manual scanning of all FM and AM broadcast stations.

A light emitting diode (LED) signal strength meter and fluorescent digital display provide a readout of the stations being tuned.

Another low profile receiver features a cassette player/recorder and Dolby noise reduction system.

Target tuning, mono/stereo switch, electronic solenoid-controlled soft touch controls, metal tape capability, and cue and review are also included.

A UNIQUE CONCEPT in big-screen television, Zenith's Projection Color TV is at home in the living room. The fine furniture cabinet contains a 45-inch diagonal rear projection screen that rises to viewing height at the touch of a button on the hand-held wireless remote control.

Stereo buffs making a ruckus over noise

The issue isn't the noise of loud radios played in public places. Nor is it opera or punk rock played at painful volumes by next-door neighbors.

The noise in question is background noise heard on records and tapes. More people are noticing and looking for ways to eliminate, or at least reduce, noise on recordings.

Background noise includes the "hiss" on magnetic tape recordings. Phonograph records, made from master tapes, also have tape hiss. Another example of background noise is the coarse sound the phono needle picks up from disc surfaces.

There are several approaches to noise reduction available to consumers. One is called encode-decode processing.

The listener buys specially processed, premium-priced discs and tapes used with a decoder box connected to the stereo system.

An increasingly popular approach to noise reduction is the use of a dynamic processor, a home stereo component created by a U.S. company called RG Dynamics.

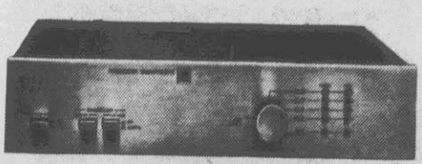

Dynamic processors are sold in hi-fi audio shops at prices ranging from $255 to more than $400. Dynamic processors work with standard discs and tapes. These account for most of today's recordings—and all of yesterday's.

Audio inventor Robert Grodinsky, RG Dynamics president, says dynamic processors not only reduce background noise but also offer other sonic benefits to make recorded music sound more lifelike. These units restore musical details and provide a more three-dimensional sense of sound, he says.

The inside workings of a dynamic processor are rather complex. A simple explanation is that the device selectively makes loud sounds louder and soft sounds, including background noise, softer.

Technicalities aside, manufacturers such as RG Dynamics say they have designed noise reduction devices for easy use, even by music lovers who aren't necessarily gadget freaks.

"Interest in noise reduction goes to the heart of high fidelity sound," Grodinsky asserts. "Live music, after all, does not have background noise except, of course, the coughs and whispers of the audience."

QUIET ZONE—For more lifelike sound, stereo buffs are turning to devices such as this dynamic processor from RG Dynamics to reduce background noise on discs and tapes.

This remarkable achievement is due to the development of hi-fi recording technology, in particular the rapid evolution of audio tape formulations.

Still, it is easy to make poor recordings if you do not understand the differences between the four basic types of tape, and which one will best meet your particular recording needs and those of your cassette recorder.

The most important thing to understand about audio tape is that optimum performance from any type of tape means matching it to the setting of the recorder.

You must set the recorder to match the "bias" and "equalization" of the particular tape and, vice versa, select a tape that your recorder is designed to use.

An easy way to remember which tape is right for a particular recording job is to understand why it was developed in the first place.

All cassette recorders have "normal" bias settings. Since normal bias cassettes such as Fuji's FL low-noise tape were first used for voice recording, and later for general music recording, it makes sense to use this economical tape for non-critical recording needs.

But, compare brands because you will find that one normal bias tape is not the same as another. Fuji's FL, which recently won the Society of Audio Consultants Seal of Excellence, performs as well as many more expensive brands.

The second major tape type is represented by Fuji's FX-I, a pure-ferrix particle tape that fulfills the demands of home recordists who wish to combine high performance with economy at normal bias. Fuji FX-I is equally at its best in all home, car and portable recording equipment.

Owners of more sophisticated recorders demand more of their tapes and should select a "high bias" cassette such as Fuji's FX-II, to meet their stereo recording needs.

To capture the realism of orchestral music, as well as the booming bass and high frequency electric guitars of rock music, a super sensitive, high bias cassette is the right choice.

Everyone's ears appreciate slightly different sounds, so it is wise to test a variety of brands of tape until you find the one that you prefer.

Then, buy about 10 cassettes at a time to ensure they all have the exact same characteristics. It will also ensure that you do not run out of tape just as you prepare to make an important recording.

Two years ago, metal particle tape was introduced. Many industry experts hailed it as the most significant development in the history of the audio cassette format. The particles used are not oxides like all other tapes but are made of pure metal powders.

These super-premium tapes, such as Fuji's award-winning metal tape, cost more but provide a significant improvement in performance, provided you own a new cassette deck with metal tape settings.

Metal tape is best suited to the needs of audio enthusiasts who tape live performances or record from the variety of super-fidelity records that have appeared recently.

Most tapes are available in three playing lengths, so you should select the length the best fits the job at hand.

For example, a C-46 tape has 23 minutes of playing time on each side. This length is suitable for recording an individual album and is also the easiest on which to locate a particular selection.

The popular C-90 cassette, with 45 minutes recording time per side, is both durable and long enough to fit one full LP on each side, or two records on one tape. You can listen to a complete symphony or Broadway show without interruption.

Cassette shell construction is the key to consistent performance and long life of a cassette. Stick to the major brands such as Fuji who stand behind their products. This is the best way to protect your valuable cassette recordings.

A cassette recording can never be better than the original, but if you are careful in making the recording and use premium tapes it should be almost indistinguishable from the original.

SHORT HISTORY OF CONSUMER ELECTRONICS

Contributing to the birth of consumer electronics were many earlier landmarks.

Perhaps the most significant were Edison's 1877 invention of the phonograph, Fleming's development of the electron tube in the 1890s. Marconi's first wireless tranmission in 1895 and DeForest's 1906 inventions which led to the electronic amplifier.

Music on the go

WHETHER YOU'RE A MAESTRO WARMING UP on the way to a concert hall or someone who appreciates good music, this Technics portable audio system gives such remarkably clear digital tuner and cassette deck into a single and rugged, but handsome, cabinet. An optional car battery adaptor is available for truly symphonic movements.

How to improve home taping

Home tape recording is getting more popular every day. Music lovers tape music from the radio and records, enjoying their music at home or carrying it with them in the car, to the beach, or to a picnic.

With the boom in portable tape players, many people carry music with them, in the form of tapes, almost 24 hours a day.

If you are one of the people doing more home taping, you should be careful to use high quality audio cassettes—to ensure that they sound as good as they can, and last as long as they can.

There are many good brands of tape available, but there is one high quality cassette which has a special feature to prolong cassette life.

New Loran cassettes have a shell made from highly heat and shock-resistant Lexan, a space age material being used by many to replace metal, making them particularly well-suited to warm weather or car stereo use.

Conventional cassettes, which are made of plastic called polystyrene, can warp to the point where they cannot be played when exposed to extreme heat.

Loran cassettes, the only audio cassettes with shells made of Lexan, can withstand temperatures well above (and below) any that an audio cassette might be exposed to.

In addition, the Loran cassette shell has 16 times the impact strength of polystyrene—so, even if you drop it or step on it, it won't break. This allows you to preserve your music on tape, without worrying about it falling apart or melting.

These new precision-engineered cassettes also benefit home taping because of their extremely accurate assembly, which helps to prevent skewing and jamming of the tape.

LEADING CASSETTE TAPES were placed in environmental test chambers along with Loran cassettes and exposed to high temperatures. At both 198°F. and 250°F., after the tests were completed, the Loran cassettes played perfectly. The warping of the other cassettes was so severe that they could not be inserted into the cassette deck.

The tape itself is of the highest quality, and features a boosting of the low as well as the high frequencies, providing the unique benefit of a very broad range of sound.

To get the most out of home taping, it is important to keep the heads on your tape recorder clean. Several manufacturers offer head-cleaning tapes, which must be run through a tape player periodically, for a few seconds.

Using Loran cassettes simplifies this matter, because they have a head-cleaning leader tape (the tape at each end of the cassette which cannot be used for recording). Each time you play a Loran cassette, your tape heads are cleaned automatically.

One other unique feature of these new cassettes is a device called the Safety Tab. Loranger Manufacturing, which makes Loran cassettes, has a patent pending on this convenient mechanism, which allows the user to permit or prevent the tape from being recorded.

By simply rotating the Safety Tab, you can prevent someone from inadvertently erasing something you want to save, while still being able to re-record the tape whenever you are ready to do so. Most cassettes have an immobile tab which must be broken off to prevent re-recording.

For improved home taping, don't underestimate the importance of a sturdy, premium quality cassette. It can make all the difference.

The solid-state story

The adoption of solid-state technology in the consumer electronics industry has brought to these products new high levels of performance and reliability.

Through the use of transistors, integrated circuits, diodes and "chip technology," the industry has replaced many mechanical systems with electronic circuits that have fewer parts to wear out or require service.

A FAITHFUL ENTERTAINER

New services such as FM and CB have continually revitalized the radio.

Now, the latest sound revolution, involving both radio and tape, is the extension of true high fidelity stereo reproduction to the automobile.

Housing your home entertainment center

POOLING TOGETHER a TV, VCR and stereo system creates a total home entertainment center and one major problem: where to put all those electronic components. One solution is electronics furniture, a specialty breed of home furnishing, such as this functional cabinet from Gusdorf Corporation. Electronics furniture has distinct advantages over conventional furniture. Shelves are sized to the weight and dimensions of equipment so that the fit appears customized. Removable back panels provide breathing space for heated components. Wires are kept neatly organized, threaded through carriers that fasten at the back. Glass doors keep sensitive equipment beautifully protected from damaging dust. Electronics furniture is a stylish yet sensible means of unifying storage and display of equipment. It can be found in most department stores, audio or video dealers and furniture stores.

New TV sets offer better sound, pictures, tuning, more to watch

By LANCELOT BRAITHWAITE

From the outside, TV sets look pretty much the same, year after year. Inside, though, they keep changing, so that each years's sets give you better pictures and more convenient operation than those from the year before—and, lately, better sound as well.

The main improvements in the picture stem from new picture tubes and a small device called a "comb filter." The new tubes aren't all that new: they've been gradually replacing older types for several years.

But, this year, the conversion's just about complete. Check a new color set's screen with a magnifying glass, and you'll see colored stripes instead of the round dots of older picture tubes.

Part of the increased sharpness may be due to a "comb filter" inside the set, which helps keep color and brightness information separate.

That not only keeps things crisp, but keeps colors from crawling on complex patterns such as tweed suits or stripes. You can expect comb filters to become nearly universal in the next year or two.

Better tuning makes for better pictures in the new sets, too. More and more sets are using digital, frequency-synthesis tuning, which requires no fine-tuning by hand, or automatic circuitry.

You can usually recognize such sets by their calculator-like tuning keypads, which let you access any station by punching in its number.

Often, such sets have up-down tuning buttons, too, so you can scan through all the channels on the "dial" in either direction to see what is on.

You'll find fewer and fewer sets with tuning knobs for VHF and UHF stations. A few have both bands on a single knob, but more and more of them have abandoned knobs entirely, for either up-down tuning buttons (which scan only a pre-selected "list" of 12 or 14 stations) or single buttons for each channel.

One company has an interesting variation in some sets: push a button, and it scans through both TV bands, memorizing where the channels are and programming itself to scan up and down through only those channels when you tune thereafter.

Some sets—mostly digitally-tuned models—also can pick up special cable-channel frequencies not on the regular TV bands. Such sets grow increasingly common as the number of viewers hooked to cable rises.

But, since those cable frequencies aren't standardized, some sets won't work on certain cable systems; so check the set you're buying at a dealer showroom that's hooked up to the cable system you'll be using.

Cable capable sets are more convenient (you can tune with the set's remote control, instead of through the cable box) and save you money in the long run (most cable systems charge less if they don't have to rent a box to you); however you'll still need special decoder boxes for pay-cable channels such as Showtime and HBO.

These tuning systems are all-electronic, as opposed to the old, mechanical knob tuning. That makes them easily adaptable to remote control—one reason you'll find remotes on more and more sets, in sizes ranging down to 13-inch or so.

Since remote-set owners tend to tune from their chairs, many sets have only rudimentary or hidden controls on their front panels, with the main controls on the remote transmitter.

The new remotes mostly signal their sets via infra-red light beams, rather than the ultrasonic sound impulses of the first remote sets, so high-frequency sounds from scissors and phone bells won't accidentally switch the set off or change channels.

Sets without VIR circuits usually have automatic color-adjustment circuits which also do a good job. Some VIR sets have them, too, to handle those stations which don't transmit VIR signals.

Another picture improvement—though only for those with video cassette recorders or video disc—comes from the direct video "monitor" inputs on a small but growing number of sets.

To play video tapes or discs on standard sets, the signal has to pass through two extra circuits: a "modulator" in the player which converts the recorded video and audio signals into a TV-band signal like the ones stations transmit, and your set's tuner which converts the signal like the ones stations transmit, and your set's tuner which converts the signal back to audio and video.

Since every extra circuit degrades the signal slightly, it makes more sense to by-pass both and feed directly from the player's video and audio circuit's to the set's.

One set has direct inputs that feed small black-and-white screens built into a three-screen 19-inch color set. With inexpensive, black-and-white TV cameras, you can use those screens to watch the kids, view callers at your doors or keep track of what's on other channels.

Another manufacturer has several sets with direct connection to the telephone line, so your TV set can double as a speaker-phone.

VCR or video disc— which one should it be?

"Take control of your life," "Pull your own strings," urged the pop-psychologists and self-help experts. While you may not be able to run the show everywhere, you can run it at home, thanks to the latest in video equipment.

Home entertainment products, including video cassette recorders (VCRs), video cameras and video discs, have created a new phenomenon, "viewer-controlled television"—the chance to watch what you want when you want to see it.

Perhaps the most versatile piece of home video equipment is the VCR. It allows you to record your favorite TV programs while you're asleep, away from home, or watching another channel; play pre-recorded cassettes; and, with the optional camera accessories, make your own movies.

The basic VCR machine has multiple speeds to allow for extended recording time; picture search-and-scan so you can go directly to the part of the tape that you want; freeze-frame stills, slow and fast motions; remote pause control.

The latest models incorporate highly sophisticated features. For example, a new deluxe version from RCA offers a two-week, 8-program timer that lets you record as many as eight different programs at different times, on different channels, for up to two weeks.

So, if you don't like what's on the tube, you can play the TV special you recorded last winter, watch a pre-recorded cassette on any subject from golf to cooking lessons to the movie classics, or relive your vacation by screening the tape you took in Mexico.

Or, you might want to consider the newest video playback device—the video disc. It differs from the VCR in that it plays material recorded on a disc rather than a cassette or tape, and it cannot record.

It has the advantages of being less costly than a VCR—an RCA SelectaVision VideoDisc, for example, retails for less than $500—and the high quality video discs are less expensive than pre-recorded cassettes. In addition, the discs are easier to store since they take up no more space than a record album.

With VideoDisc, you can watch your favorite TV hits, sports and movies simply by sliding in the desired disc. On the RCA model, the disc is housed in a protective caddy and you never handle the platter itself. The SelectaVision model also features forward and reverse visual search, rapid access and a pause mode.

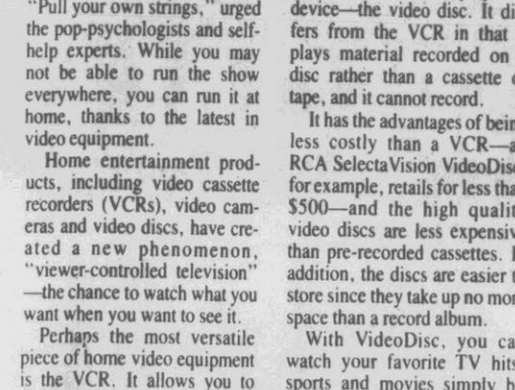

Available discs, which run the gamut, from classics such as Casablanca to Blondie's Eat to the Beat, sell for $14.98 to $27.98, with most under $20.00—substantially less than they cost on cassettes.

Which system should you choose?

The VCR offers several pluses. It records and is programmable. VCR tape is reusable and has a longer playing time than a disc—up to eight hours. And, with a VCR, you can make instant home movies.

The VideoDisc, on the other hand, is more like your record player. You just slip in your favorite disc, sit back and watch whatever you want.

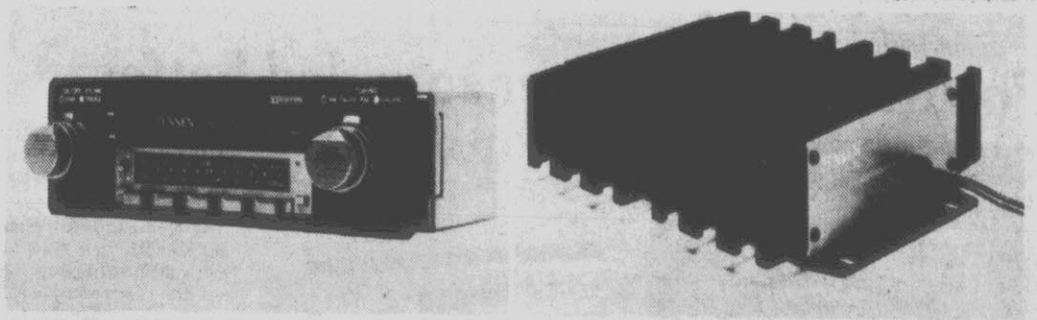

Some people probably won't choose between the two, they'll simply buy both. After all, with either machine you're the one who's pushing the buttons!

THE TOP-OF-THE-LINE VCR from RCA (model VFT650) features a 35-channel cable-ready tuner and a new wireless remote hand unit that contains all the function controls including special effects. The VFT650 has a 14-day/8-program timer.

PREMIUM AUDIO CASSETTES from Fuji are designed to meet the needs of every home recordist, as well as provide superior recordings in car stereos and portable tape machines. FL is ideally suited for general recording purposes; FX-I is a premium normal bias tape for all types of music recording; FX-II is the choice of serious music enthusiasts, whether lovers of symphonic or rock music; and Fuji Metal Tape represents the state-of-the-art in high fidelity recording for the most demanding audiophiles with the latest cassette decks.

CONSUMERS WHO APPRECIATE THE SOUNDS THEY GET from their home audio component systems can now get the same kind of quality in their cars. Jensen has an advanced component system with the T415 in-dash AM/FM stereo/cassette tuner ($300) and the A30 high energy power amplifier ($100). The T415 has excellent performance and features to match: auto-reverse, Dolby noise reduction, locking fast-forward and rewind and separate bass and treble controls. The A30 amplifier features push terminal connectors, speaker lead input and output terminals and automatic power switching.

Portable stereo never sounded better

By BEN SHEPHERD

The only time you used to hear good sound outdoors was at outdoor concerts. Now, you can take really good sound with you, anywhere and any time.

Portable sound is nothing new—there have been portable radios for over 50 years, now—but never before have portables sounded as good, or been available in so many forms.

The big, stereo "box" is the most familiar of today's forms. Combining AM/FM radios (sometimes short-wave or TV sound) with a stereo cassette recorder/player, amplifier and speakers, it can make an instant party anywhere.

For private listening, there are now more than two dozen pocket systems—stereo cassette players or FM stereo radios—that have no speakers, just jacks for ultra-light, high-fidelity earphones.

And, for those who want the best sound on the move, there are now complete, multiple-piece stereo systems that run on AC house current, 12V car-battery power or their own internal batteries.

Pocket sound

The pocket portables are the newest thing. With headphones, you can get true stereo and great sound without speakers. And, you can listen as loud as you like without bothering anybody else.

Most of the pocket systems also have an extra headphone jack so you can share your music with a friend.

There's a big variety of pocket portables to choose from, priced from below $100 to just over $200.

Many of them offer extra features, too: One model automatically stops at every song in rewind or fast-forward, so you can find, skip or repeat songs without having to hunt back and forth for them.

Other models have FM-stereo tuners you can slip into the cassette compartment (those tuners won't work with other cassette players, though).

Available are pocket models that record as well as play tapes and there's a larger one with stereo mikes built in (and a smaller one that records on tiny microcassettes).

You can purchase one with AM and FM built in and a speaker for monophonic listening—you still need the headphones for stereo, though.

Those little headphones are finding their way into home systems, too, because they feel so light and comfortable.

Several units have tiny phones with standard-size plugs for home hi-fi. Another brand's mini-phones come with adapters for home stereo use, and one company's products have adapters for home stereo, pocket stereo and monophonic radios or tape players.

The big boxes

The big "box" portables have really become sophisticated. Many, in fact, even sport phono inputs and extension-speaker outputs, so you can base low-cost home stereo systems on them.

If you want to make top-quality recordings, for example, you'll find dozens of makes with Dolby noise reduction and the ability to record on the new metal tapes.

Some portables have microphone mixers, so you can sing along with a song you're taping off the air; one or two models even let you add a touch of artificial echo to your voice.

Music finders, automatic repeat and auto-reverse make tape playback more convenient, too.

On the radio side, you'll find portables that pick up TV sound or short-wave in addition to the regular FM and AM bands, not to mention those with complete TVs built in.

Some even have true digital ("frequency-synthesis") tuning, which hits only the frequencies where stations may legally exist. There's no mistuning with that system.

Some portables have automatic tuning, too. You need only touch one button to bring in any of your favorite stations, on models with preset, push-button tuning.

Modern electronics makes the portables more powerful, too, without making them huge and heavy. Some have amplifiers nearly as powerful as those in most home hi-fi systems, a few years ago.

Others have "two-way" speakers, with separate woofers and tweeters for better sound.

Since the speakers are too close together for a normal stereo effect many have special stereo enhancement or expansion circuits to widen the sound. Some larger portables have speakers that clip on for carrying and spread apart for play.

Systems—with handles

The biggest and most expensive portables are those which look and act like home component systems. There aren't many of these, yet, but they're surprisingly diverse.

There's one model designed for music-makers as well as listeners: it has mixing inputs for two microphones and guitar, built-in echo, and speakers in detachable enclosures.

Another is styled more like home equipment, with such home-fi features as a digital, quartz-synthesis tuner with pushbuttons for six AM and six FM stations, a Dolby tape deck, a phono input, and 30 watts of amplifier power per channel.

An industry which thrives on innovation

Consumer electronics is an industry of innovation, whose rapid technological improvements bring to the buying public new products with new features and benefits.

The industry's early products—the radio and phonograph—are still alive and well and in use in many modern configurations.

The transistor freed the radio from its line cord to house current and from its bulk and weight.

The advent of stereo regenerated the high-fidelity phonograph and later the FM radio markets.

Capture the wide world of TV with new satellite earth stations

By EDWARD MORAN

You come home from work, brew some coffee or pop open a can of suds, plop down in front of the tube...and order your backyard dish antenna to lock onto your favorite satellite.

Then, you flip through television channel after channel of programs from all over North America. You name it, you watch it: pro football from many locations, coast to coast; college basketball from arenas scattered from New England to the Rockies; a Bogart rerun on a Miami channel; a live bullfight from Mexico City; and much more.

You can even sneak-preview network "pre-feeds"—shows that ABC, CBS and NBC send to their local station affiliates for screening before they're broadcast to the ordinary viewer.

With a satellite receiving dish, all this is yours—no more eking out a meager evening on a few local channels or, if you're lucky, a dozen or so on cable.

Sound intriguing? This science-fiction scenario isn't far-fetched. Already, thousands of people around the country have installed their own satellite-TV systems.

Cable services, hotels, condominiums and schools have been using similar systems for years; now, some manufacturers are hoping to cash in on the home market, too.

The satellite age of television began just 20 years ago, with the launching of the first Telstar satellite over the Atlantic. (Remember the amazement at live TV from Europe?)

Later, other satellites were launched, that did Telstar one better: the newer ones were placed in "geosynchronous" orbits where, 22,000 miles above the equator, they just kept pace with the earth's rotation.

To the earthbound, they seemed to stay forever in the same spot in the sky, never disappearing below the horizon, where their signals would be lost.

The latest generation of communications satellites can provide several hundred TV channels—and that's what's exciting the small but growing homesat industry.

Obviously, only a small percentage of Americans will decide that it's worthwhile to spend anywhere from five to 15 thousand dollars for the luxury of direct-satellite programing via antenna dishes in the backyard.

But, some industry executives expect that enough people will want one to justify at least limited production.

Jim Trecek, a consultant for a number of satellite system programmers and manufacturers, cites research indicating a real market of about 300,000 households for "homesat" hardware. "And this market will grow as the price comes down," he predicts.

The dish antenna isn't the only part of a satellite "earth station"—other components go between the dish and your TV set, to amplify the signals it brings in and convert them to normal TV frequencies.

But, the dish is the most expensive part, so attempts at lowering the price are concentrated there.

Some companies are experimenting with smaller-diameter dishes to bring down the price, though this also limits the range of signals that can be received.

Others are working on less-expensive ways to re-aim the antenna for each satellite to be received.

While the most expensive models are motorized and aimed by remote control (one system is controlled by a home computer), less expensive ones are moved by hand (a two-person job) or require that the main receiving element be shifted from one post to another to change satellites—flipping the dial isn't always all you have to do.

Some companies are trying dishes with a spherical curve instead of the usual parabolic one, to make the antenna less directional, and reduce the need for such re-aiming.

While "a dish on every roof" isn't too likely, it's a sure bet that the 1980s will see much more of the nation's TV audience getting signals directly from satellites.

If several proposed systems are approved by the FCC, there will even be signals deliberately aimed at home receivers—or at least the receivers of those who subscribed for a one-time antenna fee plus a monthly service fee.

Tomorrow, satellites, not stars, may be our "diamonds in the sky"—diamonds the homesat companies hope to mine.

Consumer electronic products fight inflation

You pay more—a lot more—today for food, clothing, homes, cars, gas, vacations—you name it and up it has gone.

Battered and bruised by the skyrocketing increases in the cost of living, you may find comfort in the inflation fighting efforts of the consumer electronics industry.

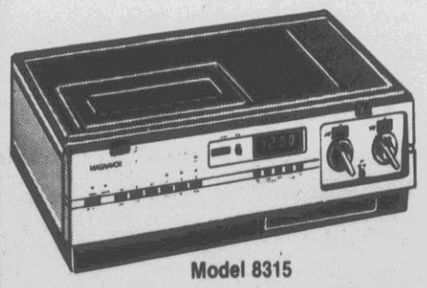

While the Consumer Price Index (CPI) for all goods and services has skyrocketed past 260 from a base of 100 in 1967, consumer electronics prices have barely moved past 105-106 in the past 13 years and have decreased from levels of the 1950s.

Monday night with the movies—at home!

The lights darken, and the opening credits for the first-run movie Ordinary People appear on the screen. The audience settles back for two hours of pure cinematic pleasure watching the latest Academy Award winning film.

This could be a scene from one of California's exclusive "Bel Air Circuit" screening rooms...but it's not. It's happening with video discs in typical television rooms across America.

The video disc can turn every television room into a screening room rivaling anything found in Hollywood's plushest homes, according to RCA.

Vital statistics

The video disc player can be hooked up to any television set. Each disc plays up to one hour of programming per side, for a total of two hours per disc.

And, the best part of it, RCA adds, is that the screening room can be had for less than $500—the cost of a video disc player—compared with $100,000 or more on the so-called Bel Air Circuit.

The implications of the video disc are nothing short of revolutionary. For the first time, American consumers are able to afford a simple, reliable audio-visual playback system for use in the home. And, they will be able to buy a wide variety of discs to entertain and educate every member of the family.

The RCA catalog has something for everyone: movies—classics as well as recent hits, sports, culture, religion, music, children's programs from Walt Disney and other producers, how-to and instructional programs. And, each of these categories is being added to on a regular basis.

Mother will certainly appreciate the wide variety of programs on disc. The kids can watch E. B. White's animated classic, Charlotte's Web, or Walt Disney's 20,000 Leagues Under The Sea, or she can use her disc player in the kitchen to learn to cook Lasagna a la Francaise or Strawberry Souffle from RCA's delightful cooking disc: Julia Child—The French Chef.

No more waiting!

Teenagers will not only be able to hear their favorite rock groups—they'll see them, too! The Grateful Dead, The Rolling Stones, Billy Preston, Elton John, Blondie....

With video discs, Dad doesn't have to wait until Sunday for exciting sports action on TV. When he gets a turn at the family video disc player, he can pop open a beer, settle back in an easy chair and watch a video disc of Muhammad Ali slugging it out in historic bouts with fighting greats such as Sonny Liston, Archie Moore, Ken Norton and Joe Frazier.

When it's time for the whole family to get together, there are plenty of video discs that appeal to everyone. It may be a first-run movie such as Elephant Man, a hilarious comedy such as Airplane! a memorable TV series such as The Fugitive or a classic documentary such as Victory at Sea. Whatever disc is viewed in the new family "screening room," watching quality, uninterrrupted entertainment on television when you choose to watch it, is a nice way for the whole family to get together.

With a video disc player, the average television viewer can turn his or her home into a theater, a classroom, a sports arena merely by inserting a disc onto this magical new video turntable.

Taking TV "personally"

Video disc is part of a current trend toward TV viewing as a "personal" rather than a "mass" communication experience.

Until recently, TV viewers had very little choice of TV fare. Viewers had to choose from a handful of commercial programs broadcast over the air and aimed at a mass audience.

Today, the TV set is becoming a receiving screen for an ever-expanding array of sources—commercial and public broadcasting, multi-channel cable, pay cable, subscription televison, two-way interacting television, teletext, home computers, video games, home movies on cassettes, programs taped off the air and played later, pre-recorded cassettes, and the video disc.

THIS TALKING CLOCK from Sharp Electronics speaks up to tell you the time at the press of a button, and shows the hour, minutes and seconds on its liquid crystal display. Combining the functions of a clock, alarm and timer with Sharp's latest technology in voice synthesis, the pocket-sized CT-665E Talking Clock is the perfect traveling companion. A chime and voice announcement warn you five and 10 minutes before the alarm sounds. After the alarm has announced the time, the clock plays Verner's "Heiden Röslein." And for clocking any event, three countdown chimes announce "one hour to go," "10 minutes to go," and "time is up."

A compact television set from Zenith Radio Corporation—the company's first fully portable TV—has been designed to take on vacation, to the park or the beach.

More than 25 percent of the chassis is on an integrated circuit slightly larger than the head of a match. The Explorer, which also houses an AM/FM digital clock radio, weighs less than eight pounds, including the optional power pack.

According to John McCallister, Zenith vice-president-marketing, the Explorer can operate on any of four power sources: AC household current; the 12-volt DC electrical system of a car; six "D" cell alkaline batteries; or its own optional rechargeable battery pack.

The Explorer is also the first Zenith set to offer four-way performance: as a black-and-white TV set, an AM/FM radio, a digital LCD (liquid crystal display) clock, and an alarm with a choice of a radio, television or electronic tone alarm.

Since March, 1977, it has been legal for consumers to own and install their own phones. However, since that time only about 5 percent of the 110 million residential phones in the U.S. have become customer-owned.

The remaining 95 percent of phones today are still phone company rentals. But, estimates indicate that within five years, 95 percent of the 110 million residential phones will be customer-owned. What are the reasons for this dramatic change? Simple!

2) By March, 1982, the FCC has ruled that the phone company must "unbundle" its rates. In simple terms, this means that customer bills will be itemized, including a figure which indicates exactly what is charged for equipment rental.

3) The overall atmosphere in Washington regarding the phone industry is pro-competitive and deregulatory, encouraging independent phone manufacturers to remain cost effective;

4) Several new consumer awareness campaigns are being launched by independent telephone manufacturers such as Webcor Electronics, Inc. These campaigns often include educational booklets as in Webcor's "Owning Your Own Phone Is A ZIP!"

Substantial cost savings

Following is a simple cost-comparison using New York State telephone rates. We have compared the cost of renting phone and wire from the phone company, to purchasing your own Webcor ZIP 727 phone and using company wire, to purchasing your own phone and doing your own customer-owned premises wiring (COPW):

As noted from the chart, a ZIP 727 one-piece phone with push-button convenience and a suggested retail of $59 will pay for itself within one year's time with the rental savings!

Average lifespan

The phone company estimates that, for their telephones, the average lifespan is 10 years. The FCC reports the most other FCC registered and approved phones manufactured by independent phone companies have roughly the same lifespan.

In addition, many states, New York among them, now allow customer-owned premises wiring. (Check with your state's Public Service Commission to see whether this applies in your state.) COPW can substantially increase the money you save by purchasing your own phones. The last column in the cost-comparison chart points out this saving.

If the financial advantages aren't enough motivation for customers to buy rather than rent phones, the technological advances of today's new phones should help create the incentive!

Consumers have a wide range of choices today when buying their phones. There are decorator phones, refurbished antique phones and technologically advanced phones. These new advanced phones are equipped with features that would have 007's head spinning!

There are cordless remote units which allow calls to be made or received from up to 1000 feet away from the home base station. There are multi-feature phones which offer multiple memories for storing frequently used numbers.

Special features

There are phones which allow hands-free dialing and automatic continuous redialing of busy numbers. There are phones with hold or mute buttons, and many other advanced features. In addition, these new advanced phones come in a variety of shapes and colors!

Further advances in phones are inevitable and unlimited. The estimated increase in purchasing-customers and the present pro-competitive mood in Washington serve to motivate independent manufacturers to continue their advanced technology at low costs.

Installation and maintenance

Installation of today's new phones is relatively simple. Most of them are equipped with a standard modular plug. In older homes, the four-prong jack and the standard wire connection are more common. But, accessories are available with detailed do-it-yourself instructions for adapting these plugs for use with the standard modular jack.

Most new phones have an FCC registration number and an REN (ringer equivalence number). These two numbers help assure FCC approval of your phone.

Because of the competition in the burgeoning phone industry, most independent phone manufacturers also offer attractive warranties and repair capabilities.

Simple. They can call their State Public Service Commission. They can write to the FCC. Or, they can request booklets from many independent phone companies. One in particular which is available for 50¢ is produced by Webcor ZIP and titled: "Owning Your Own Phone is a ZIP!"

Send for it and further information on Webcor products at: "It's a ZIP!" Department, Webcor Electronics, Inc., 28 South Terminal Drive, Plainview, NY 11803.

Eight tips to protect your videocassettes

Keep it clean, keep it cool, and don't zap it with magnetism are bywords offered by the video tape experts at 3M, inventors of video tape. 3M manufacturers both the Scotch Beta and VHS-format videocassettes.

These experts say the main enemies of recording tapes are airborne dust and oily fingerprint contamination, drastic temperature changes and strong magnetic fields such as those coming from electric motors. With proper care, they say, videocassettes will provide many years of viewing pleasure.

The videocassette itself is an attempt by manufacturers to package video tape so that minimal care is required. Most of the tape care cautions are common sense and easy to remember.

Time does not fade or weaken the signal of modern magnetic tape coatings. Today's tape backings and the binder systems which adhere the magnetic material to the polyester film backing can withstand extremely demanding environments.

Handling Scotch videocassettes (or any magnetic tape for that matter) should be done with reasonable care. Here are eight proven tape care tips:

1. Although the plastic shell is tough, the cassette should not be dropped or tossed onto a table as this may cause some internal misalignment of the tape.

2. Cassettes should be stored in their containers preferably supported on end as though they were books. This avoids any possible case distortion.

3. Contamination is the principal enemy in tape care. The shell of a videocassette provides a large measure of protection from room dust, paper and cardboard lint, tobacco ashes, dirt, food crumbs, etc.

Still, the cassette is not airtight, so it is best to keep the cassette away from these contaminants when handling or storing. The cassette should be kept in its original sleeve, or even a plastic bag, when not in use.

4. While physically touching the tape should never be necessary (and isn't easy), you never want fingerprints on the tape as the body oils will tend to hold dust or dirt.

5. Cleanliness is vital because contaminants interfere with the close contact necessary between the tape and record/playback heads, but, more importantly, because the abrasive action of some contaminants can cause physical deterioration of tape and machine components.

The machine is a prime source of tape contamination, so keep it, and the area around it, clean.

6. Extreme heat or sunlight is not good for a tape as it could distort the plastic shell or tape. So, videocassettes should not be left on a radiator or window sill where the sun's rays can reach them.

7. If a tape is subjected to temperature or humidity extremes, allow time for the tape to return to normal before using. This usually takes about 24 hours.

Ideal environment has temperatures around 70 degrees and a relative humidity of about 40 percent.

8. Stray magnetism, if powerful and close enough, could accidentally erase the tape, although this is rarely a problem. Motors and loudspeakers with large permanent magnetics are the two most likely offenders.

Normal physical spacing of the tape from the magnet (three inches or more) is usually enough to prevent a problem.

TV SETS OUTNUMBER CARS AND TELEPHONES

Television is so much a part of daily life in America it's hard to imagine how we ever lived without it. Yet, back in 1946, when the TV age began, there were only 6,000 sets in the entire U.S.A.

In those early days, people mobbed appliance store windows and neighborhood bars to watch the infant medium. Despite tiny screens and erratic programming, TV was an instant hit.

More statistics

And, people watch those TV sets. Daily television viewing in American homes averages about 6½ hours—that's a 45-hour week.

Nowadays, more and more families are broadening their use of the TV set—with cable, pay TV, video cassette recorders, video disc players, video games, and so on. So, it looks as if television, at age 35, is getting more popular than ever.

OFFICIAL RULES—NO PURCHASE NECESSARY

1. Write the number of the sweepstakes you wish to enter in the space provided on the official entry blank, or on a plain 3" x 5" piece of paper.
2. Handprint your name, address and zip code on your entry. Include with it the bottom panels from two packs of Benson & Hedges 100's or Benson & Hedges Lights, Regular or Menthol, or the words "Benson & Hedges 100's" handprinted on a plain piece of paper.
3. Enter as often as you wish, but you may enter only one sweepstakes per envelope. Each envelope must be mailed separately to: Benson & Hedges 100's P.O. Box 2873, Westbury, NY 11591. Entries must be received by February 19, 1982.
4. IMPORTANT: You must write the number of the sweepstakes you are entering on the outside of the envelope, in the lower left-hand corner.
5. Winners will be selected in random drawings conducted by National Judging Institute, Inc., an independent judging organization whose decisions are final. Winners will be asked to execute an affidavit of release and eligibility. All prizes will be awarded. One prize to a family. Tax liability is responsibility of individual winners. In lieu of prize, winner may elect to receive a cash award of $200.
6. Sweepstakes open to U.S. residents over 21 years of age, except employees and their families of Philip Morris, Inc., its advertising agency, and Don Jagoda Associates, Inc. Subject to all federal, state and local laws. Void in Michigan, Wisconsin and wherever else prohibited, restricted or taxed.
7. For a list of winners, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Benson & Hedges Winners' List, P.O. Box 2866, Westbury, NY 11591. Winners' List will be available by June 1, 1982.

Hedges 100's Sweepstakes

100 inches of new car or a 100 inch skiff and a fishing rod?

Enter once or 100 times. Just remember to put each entry in its own envelope with the sweepstakes number printed in the lower left-hand corner.

And if you win and decide you'd rather have 100 feet of dollar bills (that's $200), we'll swap.

Now it's up to you to decide which sweepstakes you'd like to enter, and let us know which 100 hours, ounces, feet, legs, sonnets or macadamia nuts you'd like to try to win. And we'll put your name into the drawing, with pleasure.

FOR BARBARA L. NICHOLS, M.S., R.N., president, American Nurses' Association, Inc.

What is the biggest problem facing the nursing profession today? —M.K., Pineville, Pa.

● The unique roles and responsibilities of the nursing profession have never been clearly distinguished by the public from the roles and responsibilities of other health-care professions. Despite the fact that the nursing profession, in comparison to all other health professions, has traditionally had the largest number of members and provided the greatest amount of direct patient care, the public has not yet fully recognized nor understood nursing's contributions. Members of the profession today are educated and certified to perform health assessments, health-teaching, family-counseling and a number of other health-care services.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

● It is possible to maintain a normal life style in Hollywood, according to one big star who lives there. Asserts Jackie Bisset, whose latest film is Rich and Famous: "It's like any other place; if you get into the subculture and drugs, you can go crazy, provided you start with a certain character weakness and a desire to get lost. Many people want to get lost in California—the plentiful drugs, transients, sun and life style lead to boredom which steers them into dumb things. But working people here are like those anywhere else — they don't get involved. They go about their daily lives and perform their work and raise their families. I personally have seen none of those wild goings-on, but I certainly hear about them from time to time."

Hollywood: a place for dumb things?

FOR SENATOR BARRY GOLDWATER (R.-Ariz.)

Do you favor a change in the annual cost-of-living increase in Social Security payments? —P.W.Y., Wellsboro, Pa.

● I don't think the benefits of anyone presently retired will be touched. I think the cost-of-living increase will be preserved. We will make changes in the welfare elements that were added onto the original old-age security concept. I understand the needs of the disabled and older person and will protect the system.

FOR RALPH McFILLEN, assistant director of championships, National Collegiate Athletic Assoc.

Why are college football teams selected for bowl games before the competition of the regular college football season ends?—W.C., Smyrna, Del.

● Waiting would not permit sufficient time to prepare for the event. The fourth Saturday in November or first Saturday in December would allow for the completion of more games, but it would reduce the time for all the arrangements necessary.

FOR LORETTA SWIT, co-star of S.O.B.

What was the incident on the set of the film that you said you'd never live down?"—G.B., Eau Claire, Wis.

● The day I got the call sheet with "F" (meaning "finish") next to my name. I was wailing in my trailer. Blake Edwards (the co-producer and director) heard the dreadful noise, came rushing in, thinking something terrible had happened. He did not know whether to laugh at me or comfort me and opted to tell everyone about my childish reaction to the lay-off.

FOR JUDITH KRANTZ, author of Princess Daisy.

Were you a big reader as a kid, and what books did you enjoy?—A.N., Marion, Ohio

● I learned to read after turning 5 years old and spent almost my entire childhood and adolescence with my nose stuck in a book. My parents encouraged it because they both came from immigrant backgrounds and knew the value of book learning and education. My favorites were Mary Poppins, Babar The Elephant books and Oz books. At 10, I started on Dickens.

Harry Belafonte

● When Harry Belafonte started out in the late 40's, his goal was acting, not singing. At night, he worked Off-Broadway; by day he was an apartment house superintendent. One night Belafonte stayed home, and the understudy went on. A talent scout was so impressed with the understudy, he gave him a Hollywood contract—and that's how Sidney Poitier became a star... Belafonte's first LP in four years, "Loving You Is Where I Belong," was recently released... If actor Michael Caine and his wife, Shakira, have a tiff, it usually takes place in the kitchen, which Michael considers his absolute domain. He's a gourmet cook, proud of it and doesn't welcome any outside interference or advice, even from his beloved wife...Having completed his personal-appearance tours for S.O.B., William Holden is preparing to return to his beloved Africa and pick up his devoted work with endangered species. Says Holden: "I have sanity in both areas. I'm a dedicated actor and a dedicated conservationist."

PRO AND CON

Should Defendants With Serious Prior Convictions Be Denied Bail if It Appears Likely They May Commit Crimes While Awaiting Trial?

PRO Senator Sam Nunn (D.-Ga.) ranking minority member, Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations

Pretrial bail should be denied to any defendant who is found to pose a danger to the community if released. I have introduced a tightly drawn bill to permit Federal judges to consider whether a person accused of a Federal crime is likely, for instance, to continue selling narcotics, robbing people at gunpoint or harming witnesses while out on bail. A person's prior criminal record would be one of many factors reviewed at a bail hearing, which would protect the defendant's right to due process.

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Charles S. Sims, national staff counsel, American Civil Liberties Union (A.C.L.U.)

It would not dent the crime problem. Less than 10 percent of crimes are committed by those on bail. It wouldn't work. The best predictors of future dangerousness are wrong 66 percent of the time. Experts say that for every 1,000 defendants, we could avoid 70 crimes only by unjustly imprisoning 270 defendants who wouldn't commit crimes while on bail (and wrongly releasing 30 who would). It's unfair. Jailed defendants are more likely to be convicted and given longer sentences.

COVER STORY

THE MYTH

Trudi Smith

Have women really won choices—or simply traded a feminine mystique for a feminist mystique? Ms. Friedan's conclusions will startle women who care deeply and men who care deeply about them.

By Betty Friedan

These past few years, I have been nagged by an uneasy feeling of urgency. Listening to my own daughter and sons, and others of their generation whom I've met while lecturing at universities and attending professional conferences around the world, I sense something off, out of focus, going wrong, in the terms by which these young people are trying to live the equality we in the women's movement fought for.

In the voices of these daughters and sons, I've begun to sense undertones of pain and puzzlement, a queasiness, an uneasiness, almost a bitterness that they hardly dare admit. Despite all the opportunities we won for them, and for which we envy them, they seem afraid to ask certain questions. And they continue to be troubled by those old needs which shaped our lives and trapped us, those needs against which we rebelled.

• In California, in the office of a television producer who prides himself on being an "equal opportunity employer," I am confronted by his new "executive assistant." She wants to talk to me alone before her boss arrives. Lovely, in her late 20's and "dressed for success," she is not just a glorified secretary with a fancy title in a dead-end job. The woman she replaced has just been promoted to the position of "creative vice president."

"I know I'm lucky to have this job," she says, defensive and accusing, "but you people who fought for these things had your families. You already had your men and children. What are we supposed to do?"

• A young woman in her third year at Harvard Medical School tells me, "I'm going to be a surgeon. I'll never be a trapped housewife like my mother. But I would like to get married and have children, I think. They say we can have it all. But how? I work 36 hours in the hospital, 12 off. How am I going to have a relationship, much less kids, with hours like that? I'm not sure I can be a superwoman. I'm frightened that I may be kidding myself. Maybe I can't have it all. Either I won't be able to have the kind of marriage I dream of or the kind of medical career I want."

• In New York, a woman in her 30's who has just been promoted says, "I'm up against the clock, you might say. If I don't have a child now, it will be too late. But it's an agonizing choice. I've been supporting my husband while he gets his Ph.D. We don't know what kind of job he'll be able to get. There's no pay when you take off to have a baby in my company. They don't guarantee you'll get your job back. If I don't have a baby, will I miss out on life somehow? Will I really be fulfilled as a woman?"

I sense victories we thought were won yielding illusory gains; I see new dimensions to problems we thought were solved. After 15 years of the women's movement, the gap between women's earnings and men's is greater than ever, with women earning on the average only 59 cents to every dollar men earn; the average male high-school dropout today earning $1,600 more a year than female college graduates.

An unprecedented majority of women have entered the work force in these years, but the overwhelming majority of women are still crowded into the poorly paid service and clerical jobs traditionally reserved for females. (With the divorce rate exceeding 40 percent, it turns out that 71 percent of divorced women are now working compared to only 78 percent of divorced men; the women must be taking jobs the men won't touch.)

UPI

Even in the "new girls" network of the women who've broken through to the executive suite and enjoyed the tokens of professional and political equality, I sense the exhilaration of "superwoman" giving way to a tiredness, a certain brittle disappointment, a disillusionment with "assertiveness training" and the rewards of power. Matina Horner, the high-powered president of Radcliffe, calls it a "crisis of confidence."

What worries me today is that many of the "choices" women have supposedly won are not turning out to be viable options. How can a woman freely "choose" to have a child when her paycheck is needed for the rent or mortgage, when her job isn't geared to taking care of a child, when there is no national policy for parental leave and no assurance that her job will be waiting for her if she takes time off to have a child?

What also worries me is that despite the fact that more than 40 percent of the mothers of children under 6 are now working because of economic necessity due to inflation, compared with only 10 percent in 1960 (and, according to a Ford Foundation study, it is estimated that by 1990 only one out of four mothers will be at home full time), no major national effort is being made for child-care services by Government, business, labor, Democratic or Republican parties — or by the women's movement itself.

In the 15 or 20 years after World War II we were bombarded with the image of woman as being completely fulfilled in her role as wife and mother. It was an image I called the "feminine mystique," and it denied the very existence in women of the need to be recognized as persons, individuals in their own right.

In the 1960's we broke through that image. So for nearly 20 years now, the words written about, by and for women have been about women's need to be themselves, find themselves and fulfill themselves — to free themselves from submission as servants of the family and take control of their own bodies, their own lives; to find their own identities apart from men, marriage and child-rearing; to demand equal opportunity and power of their own in corporate office, Senate chamber, spaceship, ballfield, battlefield, at whatever price.

As feminist Ellen Goodman writes, "We were to be the first generation of superwomen. We were the women who would — in fact, should — have dazzling careers and brilliant, satisfied husbands and remarkable, well-adjusted children" (Washington Post, June 7, 1980).

But the new image, which has come out of the women's movement, cannot evade the continuing tests of real life. That uneasiness I have been sensing these past few years comes from personal truth denied and questions unasked because they do not fit the new accepted image — the feminist mystique. It may take only a few years for the feminist image to harden into a similarly confining, defensive mystique. Does our feminist image already leave out important new, or old, dimensions of female possibility and necessity?

I want to help women break through the mystique I helped to create. They have to ask new questions, speak the unspeakable again, admit new, uncomfortable realities and secret pains and surprising joys of their personal truth that are hard to put into words because they do not fit either the new or old images of women.

The simple, heartfelt questions I've been hearing from young women all over the country this past year seem to me to indicate a blind spot in feminism that is both personal and political in its implications and consequences. The younger women have the most questions:

"How can I have it all? Do I really have to choose?"

"How can I have the career I want and the kind of marriage I want and be a good mother?"

"How can I get my husband to share more responsibility at home? Why do I always have to be the one with the children, making the decisions at home?"

"I can't count on marriage for my security — look what happened to my mother — but can I get all my security from my career?"

"Can I make it in a man's world, doing it the man's way? What other way is there? But what is it doing to me? Do I want to be like men?"

"Will the jobs open to me now still be there if I stop working in order to have children?"

"Does it really work, that business of 'quality, not quantity' of time with the children? How much is enough?"

"Do men really want 'equal' women?"

"If I put off having a baby till I'm 38 and can call my own shots on the job, will I ever have kids?"

"How can I juggle it all?"

"How can I put it all together?"

"Can I risk losing myself in marriage?"

"Do I have to be a superwoman?"

I think we can only find the answers by sharing our new uncertainties, the seemingly insoluble problems and unremitting pressures, our fears and shameful weaknesses. Do we deny certain painful feelings, certain yearnings, certain simple needs for fear we will drown in them, be trapped again in the weakness, the helplessness, the terrible dependence that was woman's lot before? If we suddenly suggest that old experiences supposedly irrelevant or distracting to new women are, in fact, more important than we wanted to admit — experiences like motherhood, which the old feminine mystique and the new enemies of equality claim are the only important experiences for women — do we thereby deny the importance of the gains won in the women's movement: Would we want to go back?

That is the fear, of course. That is why we do not want to face new questions, new tests. But if we go on parroting or denouncing or defending the cliches of women's liberation in the same old terms until they harden into a new mystique, denying the realities of our personal experience and the new problems, then we are in real danger of going back. Then, we invite a real backlash of disillusioned, bitter women — and outraged, beleaguered men.

The balance of power is undeniably shifting now between the sexes, everywhere in the world, as women move into jobs. But the tradeoffs have not been worked out in the family. In fact, for the real tradeoffs to take place, the sharp demarcation between family and home as "woman's world," and work (and politics and war) as "man's world" will have to be redrawn. Equality in jobs, without domestic equality, leaves women doubly burdened. And equality in the family isn't real for women if it is isolated from economic measures of worth and survival in the world.

UPI

Columnist Goodman: "We were to be the first generation of superwomen."

Part of the problem comes from the lack of either real economic measures or political attention to the previously private woman's work, in home and family, an irreducible minimum of which is necessary for the survival of humans and their society.

The new imbalance is becoming visible, at least. Equal job opportunities for women "will turn out to be a recipe for overwork" unless "the sharing of unpaid household labor between men and women becomes a reality," said a research report issued by the World Watch Institute in 1980. Although half of the world's adult women are in the labor force out of choice or necessity, "they have retained an unwilling monopoly on unpaid labor at home. The result is a pronounced imbalance between male and female workloads, with unhappy consequences for women, men and children."

In a certain sense, the roles of women and men in the labor force have virtually come full circle. Historically, both men and women worked to "support the household in subsistence production," states the World Watch report. Then came the split "between women's unpaid work in the household and men's breadwinning." In the current transition, the report continues, "women increasingly share the breadwinning role with men but retain most of the responsibility for the house." In "the as-yet-unrealized ideal," the family will again become symmetrical, when "both the financial support and the physical maintenance of the family are equally shared between men and women."

Between 1950 and 1975, the number of women considered "economically active" rose from 344 million to 576 million, both because of women's rising demand for equality and inflationary pressures requiring them to seek jobs outside the house. Since this trend was not matched by an increased involvement of men in housework, women are now carrying a double burden.

When supposed solutions such as part-time work, flextime and child-care centers are sought as "women's benefits," instead of easing the strain between work and family, they actually do the reverse, merely "reinforcing the idea that home and family belong to women's sphere rather than being a joint responsibility."

We weren't wrong, in the women's movement, to focus the first stage on equal opportunity for jobs and education. Women have to experience at least the beginnings of equality in the world before they can trade off that supreme, excessively burdensome power in the family.

The transition to the next stage of the women's movement won't be easy. The same shadow of the idealized family of the past — that compulsion to be a Perfect Mother left over from excessive female dependence — keeps many women and the experts from coming to grips with the new problems. But for the sake of women and men and families, we must begin to break through the feminist mystique — and the myth of supermom. FW

Ideas for the Future

What can we do to help ease the burden of women today? In an interview with FAMILY WEEKLY, Betty Friedan offered these suggestions.

A new concept of work: "Housework, child care and care of the elderly should be viewed as equivalent to wage work, and the Government should offer tax breaks and Social Security benefits for such work."

Quality day care: "Mothers do not want impersonal government day care. There should be neighborhood centers, with community and parent boards overseeing standards."

Tax incentives for day care: "We should encourage communities, states, profit-oriented companies, developers, shopping centers, unions, churches and volunteer agencies to develop good child-care programs by offering them tax incentives."

Better company benefits: "Instead of offering a standard program of vacations, retirement plan, medical insurance and maternity/paternity leave, a company should allow an individual to choose the benefits that suit his or her own family needs."

Part-time work: "Survey after survey indicates that mothers of young children prefer part-time work. Companies must start meeting this need by offering 'flextime' and job-sharing arrangements."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

APOCALYPSE NOW?

Worrying Along with the Survivalists

Alarmed by what they consider to be the inevitability of nuclear war and worldwide starvation, thousands of Americans are literally taking to the hills. Are they really serious? Indeed they are.

Wide World

By Ernest Volkman

The way Dennis Barrett explains it, this country is not just on the road to ruin, it's heading there in the express lane. Which is why not too long ago he stood before a rapt group of similar-minded Americans in Illinois, explaining what they must do about the situation.

"When things break down," he told his audience, "there's going to be an initial surge of people from the cities. They'll kill you for a can of sardines . . . You should band together with a few other families because you're going to need all the firepower you can get. If you have a 9- or 10-year-old kid, teach him how to shoot . . . Get yourself a good guard dog. And if worst comes to worst and you run out of food, you can eat it."

For those standing there in an Illinois field deep in the American heartland, listening to Barrett's lecture (called "Special Weapons and Tactics"), such seemingly bizarre circumstances are not fantasies. They're real-life visions of the future.

These Americans, like many thousands of others, see the future only in dark terms. They're "survivalists," a growing body of Americans who believe that the social order is collapsing, with Armageddon just around the corner.

To them, the future is a nightmare vision. Society, which they already feel is far past redemption, will one day totally collapse, either because general nuclear war will have broken out or because the stresses and strains now tearing at the American fabric will finally rip it all apart. They believe that when that day comes, millions of crazed, starving (or perhaps radiation-burned) people, mostly from the cities, will wander America, desperately scouring for food, water and shelter — and possibly killing anyone who stands in their way. And when that inevitable day comes, the only survivors will be those who prepared — starting now.

So the survivalists do prepare: gathering guns, ammunition, supplies and food to stockpile in secret hideouts in a dozen states, mostly in the mountainous area of the West. They also are preparing by taking courses that will teach them how to survive after "The End."

For the most part, the survivalists are not part of any political movement or extremist organization using violence to effect political change (although a fair number of extremists also believe in what they call "survivalism"). As a rule, they tend to be ordinary Americans representing a fair cross section of "Middle America." A good percentage of them are devoutly religious, but many are not.

How many are there? No one is quite certain at this point, but according to law-enforcement agencies, the estimates run as high as nearly 20,000. One indication of how large the movement has grown is the booming business in assorted "survivalist equipment," ranging from dehydrated foods that can be stored for long periods of time to sophisticated arms (one Georgia company is doing very well selling a small submachine gun). There is even a magazine exclusively devoted to survivalist concerns.

What kind of people believe in the apocalyptic vision these products represent? A few examples:

- A Utah movie company executive who leads a small group in paramiltary maneuvers and who has fortified his home (as have the others) with reinforced bunkers and a $20,000 tunnel system.
- An Oregon veterinarian who maintains a large weapons cache secreted someplace in the mountains; he is careful never to drive too far from his home for fear of not being able to return in time when the end comes.
- A Georgia businessman who has set up an elaborate "survival center" in a forest, where he also holds live-fire training sessions for similar-minded Georgians.
- A factory owner in the Middle West who takes his entire family on expeditions to a secret hideaway deep

"No other full-size pickup gives you so much for so little."
SAYS EX-FORD OWNER WALT GARRISON.

The new generation of Dodge Rams—toughest Dodge pickups ever—just got gas stingier than ever. New 1982 Ram Miser gives Dodge the biggest mileage increase of all full-size pickups. Yet it still delivers Ram Tough performance, thanks to a standard drivetrain that teams a 4-speed overdrive manual transmission and hardworking 2.94 axle ratio with Dodge's famous Slant Six engine. No Ford or Chevy standard model matches that tough combination.

The profits of doom: California supplier William Pier made $1 million last year selling food, guns and other "necessities" to survivalists.

Few of these survivalists seek publicity, but one who has is Richard Johnson, an Oregon farmer. Johnson lives in the town of O'Brien, in southern Oregon, but not too many miles away is what he regards as his second home — a secret survival camp, complete with enough food to last a long time, as well as sufficient guns and ammunition to hold off a small army. If, of course, the small army could ever find it, which would be no small feat considering the fact that only Johnson and his wife and five children know where it is.

"The people I know," said Johnson in one interview, "are convinced the Russians will wipe us out militarily, and they know the kind of chaos that would follow. Having the place up here gives us a little more time."

Actually, survivalism is not only setting up secret hideaway camps. It's also a whole style of life for those who take it seriously. Those who do were at a recent training course in Illinois, picking up the latest tips (and offering a few of their own). There were, for example, lectures on how to fumigate food grains that will be stored for a long time, how to subsist on wild plants and how to refill shotgun and rifle shells (obviously, the ammunition supply stores will not be open when the end comes).

Many survivalists operate an informal network, sometimes pooling their resources to buy a secret retreat to which they will all evacuate and live commune-style for however long it takes.

The survivalist phenomenon has, of course, attracted a wide range of commercial interests, seeking to capitalize on a whole new market. And that market should not be underestimated: William Pier, a leading California survival-supply distributor, says he has 200,000 names on his mailing list and sends catalogs all over the country. Pier made $1 million in profit last year selling every conceivable "necessity" for the survivalist. Leafing through Pier's catalog, a customer can find freeze-dried food, outdoor equipment, fatigues, winter survival gear, all sorts of Army surplus equipment for the outdoors and various guns and artillery (a growing specialty in this field is special lightweight weapons that can be used comfortably by women and young children).

Other survivalist equipment specialists offer portable outdoor toilets and, for those who want to be really well-equipped, radiation suits and special "night-vision" glasses, one set costing over $8,000. You can also purchase a "commando watchband" ($6.75) and a "commando wallet" ($8.25).

Another booming business is survival "manuals" of all descriptions. Ads for one of the best-selling manuals are headlined:

> THIS BOOK PREPARES YOU FOR TERRORISM, FOOD SHORTAGES, MONETARY COLLAPSE, A DICTATORSHIP AND GUN CONFISCATION!!!

The book claims to answer questions about survival and says it is the final word on alternate life styles, weaponry, defense tactics, physical conditioning, food, diet, non-traditional education and producing your own electricity — all in 285 pages. Another company simply reprinted the standard Air Force manual on survival (used to teach airmen how to survive for up to a month if their planes are downed) and is now selling it for $6.95. Purchasers are apparently unaware of the fact that they can buy the original from the Government Printing Office for half that amount.

Commercialism is not the only dubious feature of the survivalist movement; another is the growing interest in the phenomenon by certain right-wing extremist movements. Although the vast majority of survivalists stay away from organized right-wing movements, the extremists have been seeking to co-opt survivalism for their own purposes. For example, one extremist group, the Christian Patriots Defense League, has proposed the idea of a "golden triangle" someplace in the Middle West to which all Americans who want to survive will go when the end comes.

"Prepare for the storm," the group advises in one of its more hysterical pamphlets. "Prepare yourself." To that end, the group advises an incredible regimen, including the stockpiling of clothing, medical supplies, canned foods, portable stoves, portable radios and guns and ammunition, as well as plenty of water.

Readers are also advised to prepare "alternative plans" for travel past blocked roads, and avoid cities, which will "vomit out their citizens in a panic-stricken condition." Before this can happen, citizens must get themselves into good physical shape, and make sure their teeth are "in good condition." And finally, people are advised to be ready to decide what to do in case of "local riot and arson, nuclear attack, negotiated surrender by the U.S. Government itself, subversion, infiltration or general anarchy caused by the collapse of our money system, famine, etc. Leave no possibility or probability unthought..."

This sort of hysteria is generally unappealing to the vast majority of survivalists, who simply think that the situation is irretrievable and the great collapse is only a matter of time. They want to be prepared for it.

Thus far, law-enforcement officials do not see much danger in the survivalist craze, although some of them worry about all those arms being stockpiled. Further, others are concerned about some of the paramilitary training camps — earlier this year, police arrested 13 men armed with semiautomatic weapons near an Alabama nuclear power plant. It turned out that each of the men had paid $350 for a "survival training course," which seemed more like an Army ranger training exercise.

Survivalists are unfazed by the kin of criticism events like the Alabama in cident generate. Indeed, they are un fazed by any kind of criticism; they ar convinced that their vision of an im pending apocalypse is true. As a lot o them like to say, it wasn't rainin when Noah started to build his ark.

BEHAVIOR

How to Stand Up to Pushy People

By Robert M. Bramson, Ph.D.

From time to time, all of us run into Sherman Tanks — people who love to push, charge and attack on a psychological rather than physical level. When criticizing something you've said or done, they seem to attack not just the particular behavior but you. They are abrupt, abusive, intimidating and overwhelming.

Sherman Tanks have a strong need to prove to themselves, and others, that their view of the world is always right. Tasks seem clear and concrete to them, and the way to perform them straightforward and simple. They get impatient with people who don't see things their way. When resistance to their own plans is perceived or anticipated, impatience turns quickly to irritation, righteous indignation or outright anger. Finally, they expect others to run from them.

Charles Waller

Coping with Sherman Tanks requires that you not fulfill their expectation that, through either fear or rage, you will be put out of commission. At the same time you must avoid an open confrontation with them over who is right. Tanks will react to your combative behavior with an escalation of their own assault. Here's how to succeed without an all-out battle.

1) Stand Up for Yourself: The first rule of coping with an aggressive person is to stand up to that person. If you let yourself be pushed around, you simply fade into the scenery for them.

For instance, at a meeting Mark raises an idea for consideration only to have Sharon, an aggressive person, say something like, "No! No, that won't work at all." Unless Mark does something to stand up for himself, such as saying, "Well, wait a minute, I'm not sure you really heard what I was trying to say," something very interesting will happen. Sharon will begin to act as if Mark is not a part of the meeting.

True, when you are being overwhelmed by a Sherman Tank the last thing you are likely to want to do is stand up to him or her, particularly when the assault is coming from a person who has real authority over you. It helps to recognize that the fear and confusion that you feel are natural, even appropriate reactions to being attacked. Expect to feel distraught, angry or awkward, but say something assertive anyway.

2) Give Them Time to Run Down: If the person you are confronting is yelling at you, crying angrily or being otherwise noisy, remain in place, look directly at him and wait. When the Sherman Tank's attack finally begins to lose momentum, jump into the situation.

3) Don't Worry About Being Polite, Just Get In: If you wait for an aggressive person to finish sentences and conscientiously give you time to enter the conversation, you are likely to wait a long time. It is often necessary to interrupt in order to stand up to him or her. This is a time when cutting people off before they're through is a necessity. If you, in turn, are cut off before you've finished your thought, say firmly and loudly, "You interrupted me!"

4) Get Their Attention, Carefully: Sherman Tanks tend to have firm expectations of how you are going to react to them. You need, therefore, to get their attention so that they recognize that you won't be responding according to their formula — that is, by either running or raging.

It often helps to begin by clearly and loudly calling the hostile person by name (by his or her name, that is, not a name). Use the name that fits the present level of your acquaintance.

Other ways of both getting attention and interrupting the interaction are rising very deliberately or dropping a book or a pencil.

5) Get Them to Sit Down: Since most people behave less aggressively when seated, point to a chair and say, "Look, if we're going to argue we might as well be comfortable."

6) Speak From Your Own Point of View: Certain words and phrases project a self-assertive quality. They clearly express your own viewpoint or perception, yet do not imply a direct attack on anything the other person has said. Examples are: "In my opinion, it's a good idea..."; "I disagree with you..." (or, if it's your boss, "I guess I disagree with you..."). FW

A new and original work in porcelain
by the world's foremost portraitist of butterflies

T·H·E MEADOWLAND BUTTERFLY VASE

BY JOHN WILKINSON

hand-decorated with pure 24 karat gold . . .
Your commission must be entered by November 30, 1981.

The British artist, John Wilkinson, has been described as "the most outstanding portraitist of butterflies in the world today." And he is widely regarded as one of the foremost nature artists of our time.

Now this celebrated artist has designed his first work of art in porcelain: The Meadowland Butterfly Vase. This new work is a significant contribution to the porcelain medium, and is certain to be a source of lasting pleasure to any collector who possesses it. Furthermore, it will be a magnificent accent to any room in the home.

The Meadowland Butterfly Vase will be crafted in fine white porcelain—ideal for portraying the rich colors and graceful lines of Wilkinson's art. For his subject, the artist has chosen the loveliest butterflies that are seen in a sunny spring meadow. The Admiral, with its golden wings and distinctive black markings. The Painted Lady, softer in tone and elegantly graceful in flight. The Mourning Cloak, dramatic in tones of deep rust, blue and yellow. And the Purple Wing, aptly named for the shimmering beauty of its colors. Each of these spectacular creatures is portrayed among the flowers that bloom in the meadow—the wild geranium, the blue violet, the forget-me-not, the larkspur and the wild blue phlox.

The artist has not only depicted the variety of shades and tones of the butterflies—using 16 different colors—but has captured the atmosphere of the English countryside as well. The height of the vase (11¼") provides ample room for this superb depiction. And, to add the final touch of refinement, the vase will be hand-decorated with a band of pure 24kt gold surrounding the crown and the base.

An elegant showpiece for the home, The Meadowland Butterfly Vase will be issued exclusively by Franklin Porcelain, and the responsibility for its creation has been entrusted to Franklin Porcelain of Japan, where there is a thousand-year-old tradition of crafting vases in fine porcelain.

A LIMITED EDITION. The Meadowland Butterfly Vase is being issued in a limited edition, and advance orders are being accepted until November 30, 1981. A later announcement of this work will be made, but no orders for the vase will be accepted after the end of 1982. The issue price is $95, plus $3 shipping and handling, payable in four convenient monthly installments of $24.50 each. The vase will be accompanied by specially written reference information about the artist and this work in particular. A Certificate of Authenticity will also be included.

To enter your commission, be sure to mail the advance order form at right to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, PA 19091, by the date indicated: November 30th. No advance payment is required.

FASHION

Getting His Wardrobe in Shape

By Rosalyn Abrevaya

Should a man pay attention to fashion? By all means, yes, says Charles Hix, author of How to Dress Your Man (Crown).

Hix believes that a man should develop a sense of style, because the way he dresses affects how people react to him, especially in the business world.

Hix reports that a suit in beige or brown (both warm colors) tends to give a friendly, less authoritative look than a medium-gray suit and, therefore, is more suitable for someone in sales or advertising. A subdued gray suit is better for a stock broker or someone in finance who wishes to be thought of, in Hix's words, "as a man who looks as if he can be trusted to handle money."

Outfit by Hart Schaffner and Marx

A dark blue suit helps a man project authority and reserve.

He divides men into five fashion types: the connoisseur, the drum major, the moderator, the solid citizen and the good scout. Check to see which category your man fits into.

The connoisseur is a man who wants to project authority and reserve. He looks best in a dark blue suit, which can be double-breasted and worn with a crisp white shirt.

The drum major wants to project creativity and ingenuity. He thinks of himself as a style leader but is definitely not faddish. He should choose a gray flannel or camel suit, with padded shoulders, which are more fashionable, rather than a natural shoulder line.

The moderator seeks a balance between authority and creativity. He is the "hearty" type, interested in conveying both intelligence and compassion. His best look is a well-cut herringbone suit in a somewhat rough texture, as opposed to a smooth, worsted wool suit.

The solid citizen doesn't want to stand out in a crowd, but he doesn't want to look dull, either. So accessories are important here,such as a color-coordinated pocket square. ("Don't call it a handkerchief," says Hix. "It's never used to blow your nose.") This type of man looks well in navy or dark gray pinstripe, single-breasted suits with notched lapels and natural shoulders.

The good scout wants to project friendliness and loyalty. He might be a high-school teacher who wants to convey a position of importance, yet not look like someone in an ivory tower. He is at his best in textured or corduroy suits, worn with an oxford cloth shirt and knit tie.

Hix cautions about the pitfalls involved in helping a man change his wardrobe. One of the biggest dangers is being influenced by what's "in."

"Take the narrow tie," says Hix. "It was touted not so long ago in menswear circles. But if you paired the thin tie with a wide shirt collar or a wide-lapel suit already in your man's wardrobe, he might end up looking like a clown."

Another mistake is to believe the misconception that the way to liven up a man's basic wardrobe is with a few new ties. On the contrary, a bright new tie worn with a bland shirt or nondescript suit might accentuate the fact that the clothes lack style. Instead, a man's basic wardrobe should be surveyed periodically to see that it flatters him, communicates a sense of his personality and that the pieces can be coordinated easily.

Hix offers these strategies for getting your man's wardrobe in shape: 1) Take an inventory of his present wardrobe. (If he hasn't worn something in two years, suggest he give it to charity.) 2) Write down a list of major activities he pursues in a given month. Try to visualize how his wardrobe is meeting those needs, then determine what pieces are missing or need replacing. 3) Compile a specific shopping list. 4) Then, armed with your list, comparison-shop. "Don't buy impulsively," says Hix, "and don't let a salesman talk you out of your purchase because 'it's last-year's color.'" FW

.999 Pure Solid Silver Ingot

As part of an advertising program commissioned by International Monetary Mint, we will send a Norman Rockwell commemorative ingot to any reader of this publication who responds to this notice by midnight December 16 for the sum of $8 plus $1 shipping and handling. There is no further financial obligation. Each ingot is 1 gram of solid (.999 fine) silver, 11 x 21mm, depicting Norman Rockwell's famous illustration "Grandfather Painting Granddaughter" and is ready to wear on a favorite chain. If you would like a matching 16" solid sterling silver chain, please indicate this when you make your request and one will be included free of charge with each ingot you order. These ingots are ideal as personal jewelry or as a gift. This advertising program is being conducted simultaneously in other publications. If you see it in more than one, please let us know as this information is important to us. Should you wish to return your silver ingots and chains, refunds will be promptly made. While this program ends on December 16, if you are able to respond by December 9, and you request two or more solid silver commemorative ingots, you may request them at a special price of $7 each and we will pay all shipping and handling. There will be a limit of ten solid silver Norman Rockwell commemorative ingots with chains per address. No requests will be accepted past midnight December 16. Any checks postmarked later will be returned uncashed. Please enclose this original notice with your request. We will also accept credit card orders. Just give us the name of the card, account number and expiration date. Or, send appropriate sum together with your name and address to: International Monetary Mint, Dept. It's Time for The Winter Squashes

By Marilyn Hansen

Country Maron

All kinds of unusually shaped, colored and sometimes downright strange-looking squashes are in the markets now. They are the family of so-called winter squashes, which have hard skins and are harvested in late summer and fall. Specifically they are: the acorn, hubbard, turk's turban, and mammoth squashes; pumpkins are also part of this group. They really are fun to cook and experiment with, once you learn how to cut them open with a heavy, sharp knife and scoop out the fibrous seed-laden center. To accomplish this, place squash on damp cloth to prevent slipping and cut lengthwise or crosswise, as necessary, with a heavy knife. If squash is very hard and thick-fleshed, you may have to tap knife with a mallet or hammer to open. Here are a few recipes, plus one for toasting the seeds, a project that kids love to do.

TOASTED SQUASH SEEDS

Salt

1. Rinse seeds in colander or coarse strainer. Turn out onto paper towels and rub off all fibrous material.
2. Rinse seeds again. Spread wet seeds on cookie sheet and sprinkle with salt.
3. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for about 15 to 20 minutes until very pale gold color. Cool.

BAKED SQUASH PARMESAN

4 small to medium-size acorn squash
16 teaspoons butter or margarine
16 teaspoons grated Parmesan cheese
8 teaspoons finely chopped parsley
8 teaspoons finely chopped shallots or green onions
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

1. Preheat oven to 325°F. Wash squash and cut in half lengthwise with heavy knife. Scrape out seeds and fibrous membranes with a spoon.
2. Place squash, cut side down, in shallow baking pan filled with ½ inch hot water. Bake for 30 minutes.
3. Turn squash cut side up. Fill each squash with 2 teaspoons butter, 2 teaspoons Parmesan cheese, 1 teaspoon parsley and 1 teaspoon shallots. Sprinkle lightly with salt and freshly ground black pepper. Return to oven and continue baking 30 to 40 minutes longer or until fork-tender. Makes 8 servings

PUMPKIN-VEGETABLE SOUP CURRY

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
⅓ cup finely chopped green pepper
¼ cup finely chopped green onion
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon basil leaves, crushed
1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, crushed
1 can (1 lb.) pumpkin or 2 cups mashed cooked pumpkin or squash
2 cans (13¾-oz. size) chicken broth
½ teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
2 teaspoons curry powder
½ teaspoon ground cumin

1. Melt butter in large saucepan; add green pepper, green onion, parsley and basil. Cook, stirring about 7 minutes until wilted.
2. Add tomatoes, pumpkin and chicken broth. Stir in salt, pepper, curry powder and cumin.
3. Heat to boiling; stir; reduce heat and simmer, uncovered, for 30 minutes.

Makes 1½ quarts

BUTTERNUT SQUASH SAUSAGE PUFF

1 medium-to-large-size butternut squash
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
3 eggs, separated
2 teaspoons finely chopped onion
2 teaspoons lemon juice
¼ cup flour
½ lb. ground cooked sausage meat
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dried leaf thyme
¼ cup chopped parsley

1. Cut butternut squash in half and scoop out seeds. Place cut side down in shallow baking pan and add 1 inch of water. Bake in preheated 400°F. oven 50 minutes, until tender.
2. Remove squash from water and scoop out pulp to make 2 cups mashed squash.
3. Mix butter, egg yolks, onion, lemon juice and flour. Stir in sausage, salt, thyme, parsley and reserved squash pulp.
4. In small bowl, beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; fold into squash mixture. Turn into greased 2-quart casserole. Bake in 375°F. oven 50 to 60 minutes or until tip of knife inserted in center of puff comes out clean. Makes 4 to 6 servings

DOES 3 OR 4% MAKE ANY DIFFERENCE?

10% FOR OUR CUSTOMERS

10% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE

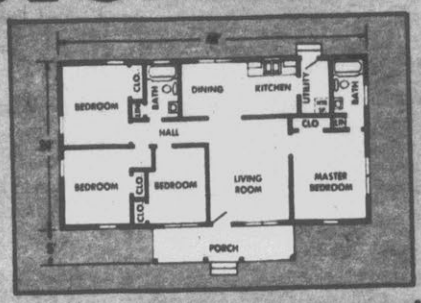

Jim Walter offers you 10% mortgage financing when he builds your home. Do you know how much this means to you? Just 3 or 4 percent more, over a 20 year period, amounts to many extra thousands of dollars.

Here are some facts for you to consider. If you sign a 20-year, $30,000 mortgage at only 13%, you will pay back $14,872 more than for a Jim Walter-built-and-financed home having this same cash price. On a 20-year, $35,000 mortgage at just 13%, you'll pay back over $17,000 more. That's 17,000 of your dollars! Can you afford to give away this much money? With Jim Walter, your monthly payment on a $30,000 mortgage is only $289.50, based on the example below. For comparison, at 13%, your payment would be approximately $351.47. That's $61.97 MORE! THINK OF THAT! $61.97 more you'll pay every month for 20 years.

But that's not all . . . with Jim Walter there are NO "Points" or "Closing Costs" and, in most cases, NO DOWN PAYMENT is required. Credit approval is usually a matter of one or two days instead of the weeks and weeks of most mortgage companies.

Shop and Save When you shop around for a builder, be sure of your total costs. Find out how much your interest rate will be, then ask your Jim Walter representative to show you comparison figures. While he's there, take a close look at what Jim Walter has to offer. Let him show you our more than 20 homes that can be built on your property almost anywhere to almost any stage of completion from the shell (unfinished inside) to 90% finished. This means you can do some or all of the inside finishing yourself to save even more money.

So if you own property on which you would like to build, come to where your costs are low . . . where your value is exceptionally high. Come to where 10% annual percentage rate financing is no problem. Come to Jim Walter Homes. Call, stop by or send the coupon to your nearest display park today.

Homes built on your property to almost any stage from the shell up to 90% complete.

Rock's Beefy Meat Loaf:

Raw and Well Seasoned

Merry Alpern / LGI ©1981

By Jim Farber

A not-so-funny thing happened to rock singer Meat Loaf on the way to recording his second album three years ago. It was Christmas 1978 and the man-mountain (260-pound) vocalist had just come off an 11-month tour pushing his eight-million-selling Bat Out of Hell — one of the largest debut albums in music history and jumping point for the smash single "Two Out of Three Ain't Bad."

But when Meat Loaf opened his mouth to sing that cold December night, his voice sounded like it was out of hell. He was practically mute. "At first I thought I was allergic to cats," Meat Loaf, 32, explains. "Then I thought it was psychosomatic and it got even weirder. I was convinced it was all in my mind."

For three years the inaudible hulk was kept out of the rock arena — a stretch that ended this past September with the release of his second LP, Dead Ringer, an album rising fast here and already No. 1 in England. (Four years after its release, Bat Out of Hell is still in the top 10 there.)

During the many months he was mute, Meat (as his friends call him) futilely went to five different vocal coaches. Finally, late in 1979 the problem was correctly diagnosed. "I had a paralyzed vocal cord," he notes. "The right one was swollen at the top and base. It wouldn't vibrate. When someone figured that out I regained my sanity." And not a moment too soon, for life was becoming frantic for Meat, his wife, Leslie, and their two young daughters, Pearl, 5 (from Leslie's previous marriage), and Amanda, 10 months. "I was pretty crazy," he admits. "And living with a crazy person has got to be hard."

Actually, it's surprising that Meat's voice — not to mention most concert stages — didn't give way sooner, considering the fury of his live performances. Meat's act is a mix of raw rock energy and seasoned theatrics, as he sweats, shakes, screams, stomps and often requires snorts of pure oxygen after a show.

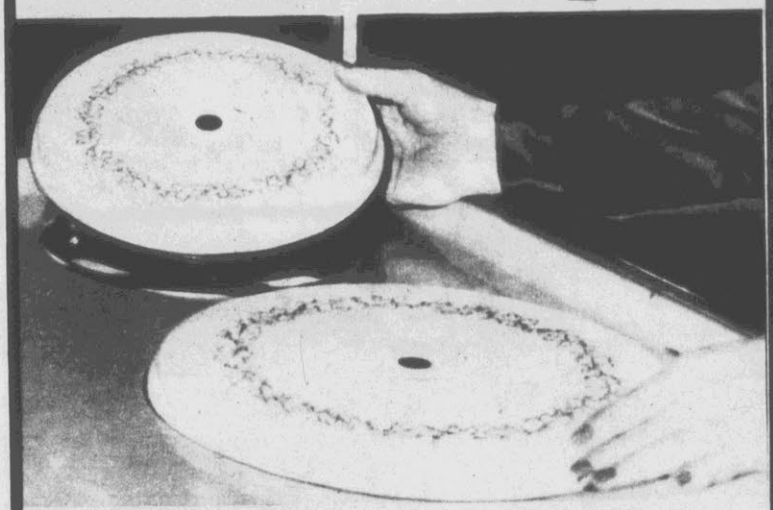

After the vocal cord healed, Meat needed to relearn how to use his voice. Leslie heard from singer Maria Muldaur about a California vocal guru named Walter Berrigian, who's worked with people like Jackson Browne and Cher. "I pulled up one day and James Coburn had his trailer out there," says Meat. "This guy is a genius. He doesn't do it for money. He charged me five grand for three or four months work. He could have charged me $100,000. I would have paid it.

"His technique is called vocal bio matrix. I can't explain it. It deals with the body's electrical system. The idea is to open up the circuits in your body. Vocal coaches say he's off his rocker. But 50 years from now people will understand." (Meat's voice sounds different on his new album, but he says it's actually better: "I have more 'lows' now. I have a bigger range.")

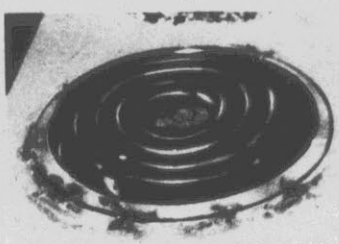

It was a long road to recovery but the

- A true Collector's Item

Give your home or patio a touch of luxury out of the past—an authentic replica of the Roman Country Estate Bell that might have once graced the royal summer palace of the mighty Caesar himself!

Since you may not have as large a household staff as Caesar, we've had the entire bell carefully antiqued so that it will never need polishing. Its beautiful luster will last year after year, throughout the four seasons, and its musical refrain will delight your guests.

Of course, with the price of metals and craftsmanship skyrocketing, you could expect to pay an emperor's ransom for a collector's treasure like this, complete with its own chain pull! 20" long. Act now, you can still obtain this decorator's gem for just $9.95—because our supply comes directly from the source.

MEAT LOAF

Merry Alpern / LGI © 1981

Meat fears family life may sometimes be a grind for wife Leslie and little loaf Pearl, 5 (from Leslie's previous marriage): "Living with a crazy person has got to be hard," he says.

beefy singer claims he's always been a fighter, ever since he was a terrifying tackle on his Dallas-area high-school football team. (He reportedly suffered 11 concussions while in school.) In fact, a football coach gave him his nickname when he was 13, and since it was significantly catchier than his real moniker (Marvin Lee Aday), he decided to use it professionally. (The name has caused a fair amount of confusion, however. The New York Times refers to him as Mr. Loaf, while on Tomorrow, host Tom Snyder inadvertently kept addressing him as Meat Ball.)

After leaving Texas to tour the country in a road company of Hair, Meat wound up in New York where he worked in several Joseph Papp productions. In those years he also created the character of Eddie in the cult film The Rocky Horror Picture Show and worked with the National Lampoon comedy troupe. Eventually he met Jim Steinman, the composer of Meat's dramatic ditties, and the two began mulling over ideas for a full-blown rock 'n' roll band. The result was 1977's Bat out of Hell. If all had gone well the follow-up LP was supposed to have been out in 1979.

Luckily, Meat Loaf has developed a realistic attitude about his long time out of the limelight. "Everything happens when it's supposed to happen — that's my theory in life," he says. "I'd rather have what I have now than what I was going to have in '79. I don't know if I would have progressed. We would have sounded too much like we did on Bat."

"Bat" also brings to mind Meat's primary passion outside music. Besides being an excellent softball pitcher and coaching a Little League team in his adopted hometown of Stamford, Conn., he's a maniacal Yankee fan, owning a season ticket behind third base at Yankee Stadium. While on tour in Australia, he even called into Sportsphone in New York for game scores. (For his platinum single "Paradise by the Dashboard Light" Meat coaxed Yankee announcer — and ex-shortstop — Phil Rizzuto into providing a double-entendre play-by-play to his breathy lyrics of a backseat teen-age seduction.)

These days, Meat is also branching out from vinyl to celluloid. In 1979 he was featured in two movies, Americathon and Roadie, which also starred Blondie's Deborah Harry. He's just finished a new film, to come out next spring, called Dead Ringer (like the album). Meat plays two roles — himself and Marvin, the singer's biggest fan. "It's a comedy version of The Rose," he explains. "That movie really depressed me. I thought Bette Midler was great but the concept was stupid because everything was a downer. Who would want to be in this business if it was all like The Rose; if there was no fun at all?

"I've been touring and doing rock 'n' roll since the mid-60's — close to 17 years — so it's in my blood," he says. "Anybody in his right mind, after all I've been through, wouldn't be back. But here I am."

And how can one help but notice.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

DON'T DIVORCE YOUR KIDS

When George Newman got divorced in 1967, he faced the plight many such men have — how to establish a relationship with his children miles away. But over the years, he's found numerous techniques to communicate with his son, Rick, and now he's put them in a book, 101 Ways to Be a Long-Distance Super Dad.

His suggestions include playing word and quiz games by phone, exchanging cassette tapes by mail, furnishing large stamped envelopes for your child to send his schoolwork in, mailing seeds for flowers and vegetables and then keeping abreast of the progress.

"At first, I felt total despair, as if there was no way to approach my son," says Newman, a California newspaper reporter. (His son lives in Florida.) "But I learned that a perfect idea is to watch his favorite TV programs. I'd take notes and we'd discuss the show when I called. I found myself watching The Six-Million Dollar Man every week — and liking it."

Dan Nevins

THE SHOW MUST GO ON

In today's films the true stars may be insurance agents. Everything is covered, even the snakes in Raiders of the Lost Ark ($200 each; $1,000 for the cobras).

For example, Fireman's Fund, which insures 70 percent of movies and TV, covered against unexpected delays in the filming of Raging Bull in case Robert

Paramount

Fireman's won that round, but recently had to pay off for shooting delays due to death (roles played by Peter Sellers and Freddie Prinze); injury (to TV's Robert Wagner and James Garner) and robbery (a reel of Blow Out was swiped, and an entire Mummers parade had to be reshot).

And then there was that insurance nightmare, Apocalypse Now, shot in the Philippines. Normal typhoon season there begins June 1, so Fireman's restricted its policy against damages from storms after that date. But on May 27, a massive typhoon struck, and the company had to fork over $1.5 million.

COTTONTAIL TALE

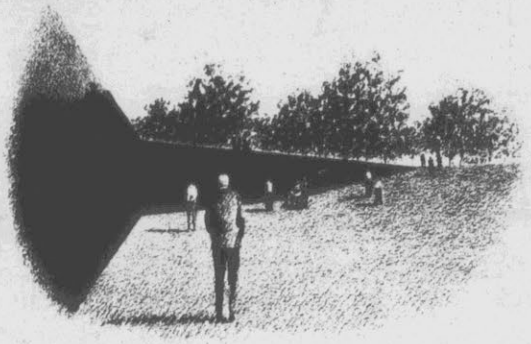

Hank Blaustein

As the owner of a greenhouse in Grants Pass, Ore., William Schultz had a problem — heating bills of $1,000 in fuel oil a month. But last year, reports Outside magazine, he got what seemed like a harebrained scheme. Learning that rabbits have a body temperature of 101.5 degrees, Schultz installed 350 bunnies into his greenhouse. The furry little furnaces gave off 180 B.T.U.'s (that's British thermal units, not Bunny thermal units) an hour, or 10 to 15 times what the average house needs. Despite $15 daily in feeding costs, he wound up saving $25 a day. And one thing's for sure: Schultz never has to worry about running low on fuel because, well, you know how rabbits are.

PYRRHIC VICTORY

At long last, a group of ignored veterans will be commemorated. The nonprofit Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund is currently raising $7 million in private donations to build a memorial in Washington, D.C., on two acres of national park land near the Lincoln Memorial. Groundbreaking is expected in February, with the dedication to be Veterans Day 1982.

The winning design, chosen from 1,421 entries, was done by Maya Ying Lin, 22, then a senior architecture student at Yale. (An artist's conception of the finished memorial appears above.) Carved in the two 200-foot black granite sloping walls will be the names of all 57,692 people who died in Vietnam, listed chronologically.

"I was too young to be caught up in the politics of the war," Lin told us. "I tried to break it down to simple feelings, simple emotions. The idea is not to glorify war but to pay respect to those who died and those who still suffer."

Ironically, Lin, who beat out many noted architects and sculptors for the $20,000 top prize, received a "B" in the architecture course for which she designed the memorial.

BEAUTY & BLOOD PRESSURE

If you're a teen-age girl, being unattractive may be hazardous to your health. As reported recently in Psychology Today, researchers at Johns Hopkins recorded blood pressures and rated the physical attractiveness of some 650 men and women aged 14 to 76. Blood pressure was found to be roughly 6-percent higher for female high-school and college students who were rated in the bottom 50 percent in attractiveness. This difference did not show up among boys or grown men and women, and researchers speculate that the strain of being judged by one's looks is toughest on teen-age girls.

● OH PSHAW! George Bernard Shaw, the story has it, once stated to the press that his writings were worth a dollar a word. Reading this in his local paper, a smart potato from Idaho sent Shaw a letter enclosing a dollar, "Send me one of your words," he wrote. With what word did Shaw respond?

"Thanks."

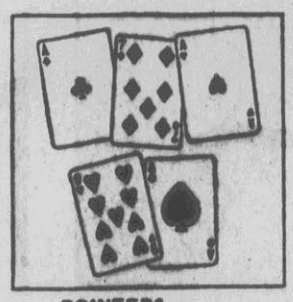

● Coin Test! How many U.S. five, ten and twenty-five cent pieces equal $2.80 if there are equal numbers of all coins? Answer quickly.

Seven of each.

● Editor's note! My typxwritxr wxrks xkay, xxcxpt fivx kxys ix fwx ixtixrs. What's wrong?

E's and O's are missing, replaced by X's.

● Riddle-Me-This! Which science deals with clotheslines? Aerodrynamics. What is the oldest copying machine? The mummy-o-graph. Which musical instrument is named for a farmer? The yokel-lele.

POINTERS IN CARDS

Certain playing cards are pointers. Notice the emblem of the ace of spades above. It points upward. The nine of hearts has five pips pointing down. The seven of diamonds has an odd pip below center.

Alakazam! A batch of pointer cards are fanned out and someone is asked to select one. Now, the trickster turns the fanned cards around so they point the other way.

When the selected card is returned to the hand, it is out of place.

OVER LIGHTLY! Don't take this bizarre basketball scene seriously, folks. To complete scene, draw lines dot to dot.
