Weapons Funding Sees Increasing Flak

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposed array of missiles and bombers is the target of increasing resistance in Congress as a Senate panel goes to work on the military budget.

The Senate Appropriations subcommittee on defense scheduled its initial votes today on the administration's request for $200.9 billion for the armed services in the current fiscal year.

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the panel, has said the 100 B-1 bombers that the administration wants to buy at $250 million apiece over the next six years are unnecessary and too expensive.

The administration contends the B-1 is needed to replace the aging fleet of B-52s, while development proceeds on a radar-eluding Stealth airplane.

The action on the MX missile and the B-1 comes as Congress rushes to complete work on regular agency appropriations bills. Temporary spending authority expires Nov. 20.

Meanwhile, congressional leaders expect a statement from President Reagan this week, perhaps Tuesday, on his proposals to hold down budget deficits that could reach $80 billion this year and $145 billion in 1984.

Published reports over the weekend said Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker is proposing massive cuts in federal welfare, Medicaid and Medicare programs. The Washington Post said the cuts may total as much as $9.3 billion in fiscal 1983.

Congress has until Nov. 18 to disapprove the MX and B-1 proposals by votes of both houses. Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan and other Democrats have introduced resolutions of disapproval, but Levin conceded there is less than a 50-50 chance Congress will consider them in the time remaining.

The House defense appropriations subcommittee has approved a military spending bill after voting 7-5 to provide funds for the B-1 but to reject Reagan's request for $1.9 billion for fiscal 1982 to begin building 100 MX missiles. Up to 40 of the missiles would be put into existing silos, a plan that opponents argue would make the MX vulnerable to Soviet attack.

Rep. Joseph P. Addabbo, D-N.Y., says he will renew efforts to delete the B-1 money when the bill reaches the floor.

As the strategic weapons debate continues, Congress is awaiting final word from Reagan on proposed cuts in benefit programs such as Medicare and food stamps, the defense budget, domestic programs and certain credit programs such as loan guarantees.

Reagan called six weeks ago for a $2 billion cut in 1982 defense spending, along with $11 billion in reductions in domestic programs and $22 billion in selected tax increases over three years.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, told ABC News on Sunday that the White House has agreed to fiscal 1982 budget cuts of $4 billion in domestic programs and $2 billion to $3 billion in defense. White House spokesman Peter Roussel said the figures are still under review.

White House chief of staff James A. Baker III said Sunday that the benefit and entitlement cuts will be sent to Congress in the next several weeks.

"They are basically cuts at the margin in these programs, rounding off to the nearest dollar on benefits and entitlement checks," Baker said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Of the 13 appropriations bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, the House has passed all but the defense and foreign aid measures. The Senate has passed six and is expected to spend most of this week working on others.

One of them, an $87.9 billion bill for the departments of Labor, Health and Human Services and Education, faces a possible veto. The Senate version is $1.6 billion over Reagan's budget, and the House bill is even larger by $3.3 billion.

In addition, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, chairman of the Interior appropriations subcommittee, said a $7.8 billion bill for the Interior Department and related agencies is "right on the knife edge of a presidential veto" because it is about $1.25 billion above Reagan's September budget target.

In another budget development, The New York Times reported Sunday that an interagency administration advisory group has endorsed putting a 1.3 percent income tax on federal employees eligible for Medicare benefits but who now do not pay any Social Security taxes.

The group has recommended making people who work past 65 rely on private health insurance coverage and increasing beneficiaries' monthly Medicare premiums that help pay for physician services from $11 to $19 by 1985.

KEROSENE HEATER SAFETY?

So many people I know are using those new unvented portable kerosene heaters this year. I worry about both the acute and the long-term effects of carbon monoxide inhalation from them. How long is it safe to run one in your house without having windows open? Should the open window be in the room where the heater is located or is another part of the house all right? J.M.

You're right to be concerned, Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said, though he added that he would not discourage the use of them to save energy as long as precautions are taken for their safe use. He said all devices for burning carbon-containing material consume available oxygen and put out some carbon monoxide. This is why most heaters and heating systems are vented.

He cited a study done at East Carolina University last spring by Ray Anderson, Bruce Crowell and Don Warren. The three analyzed carbon monoxide which accumulated in an unventilated room with an unvented portable kerosene space heater in operation. Various models were tested to collect data on the total amount of carbon monoxide produced during eight hours of operation. They noted that more than 40 parts per million of carbon monoxide were produced.

Health effects from exposure to this amount will depend on individual susceptibility, they said. In general, one could experience some impairment in psychomotor ability, slight headache, dizziness and muscle fatigue. Their research failed to directly analyze for kerosene fumes, but they could smell it, they said, adding, "It is possible that kerosene fumes together with carbon monoxide production create a potentially greater hazard to the kerosene heater operator."

Joyner said, based on these and other findings, that he would recommend that these heaters be used only in rooms that can be ventilated in some way and that they not be used in sleeping areas. The reason for this is twofold: to afford more efficient burning by increased supply of oxygen to the flame and so carbon monoxide formed can mix with larger quantities of air and thus be rendered less harmful. The ECU study pointed out that the Consumer Product Safety Commission recommends one square inch of fresh air for each 1,000 BTU rating.

Burning efficiency of the newer model unvented portable kerosene heaters is generally better than the old models, Joyner said, mainly because of the type of wick used. The newer ones use fiberglass wicks; the older ones cotton. With this exception and some improved safety features in the newer ones, they're very much alike, he said, and both are dangerous if not well vented.

It is important for the consumer to operate and maintain the kerosene heater according to the manufacturer's instructions, Joyner added, recommending that only Underwriters Laboratory-approved ones be used.

He said he knows of no Pitt County building or home fires that have been attributed to this kind of heater.

Begin Insists On No More 'Concessions'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today that Israel has made "the utmost concessions" for peace and accused the European Common Market of pressuring the Jewish state to accept the Saudi peace plan.

Describing the plan proposed by Crown Prince Fahd as the "Saudi liquidation program," Begin told reporters Israel has given in on some areas and "beyond this we can't make any concessions."

The prime minister said the Common Market has been waging "a campaign of pressure, which of course we will not accept, nor shall we surrender to that pressure" to accept the Saudi plan.

Israel's foreign minister angrily attacked U.S. military and political support for Saudi Arabia on Sunday and also said Begin's government will make no more concessions to the Palestinians.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir called the Reagan administration's decision to sell AWACS radar planes to the oil-rich Saudis "a grave mistake" and criticized U.S. and West European encouragement for the Saudi Mideast peace plan.

"The reaction of the West and their present attitude to the Arab oil-producing states may cause us to reassess our attitude. We cannot afford to continue taking risks that are met only with demands for more risks," Shamir said Sunday in a speech to a fund-raising group.

"I have no doubt that if any government in Israel were to accept such proposals as withdrawal to the June 1967 lines or the re-division of Jerusalem, God forbid, the reaction will be a demand for more concessions."

Two Greenville police officers were suspended last week pending further investigation by the department and the State Bureau of Investigation into a July incident in which a man the two officers were chasing was shot.

Capt. A. G. Whitaker acknowledged this morning that officers Jerry R. Lee and Thomas M. Bowen have been suspended without pay, but declined to give any details regarding the suspension, citing a state law which limits the release of such information by an employer.

Chief Glenn Cannon, on vacation this week, could not be reached for comment.

However, reliable sources close to the department said Bowen and Lee were suspended after it was learned that their report of the events leading to the chase, in which Kirby Mills of 102 Gardenia St. was wounded,

Fueling Of Shuttle Begun For Tuesday Countdown

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Workers wearing protective suits filled Columbia's cleaned-up power units with highly toxic hydrazine fuel today as the ship was readied for a second attempt to make a repeat journey into space.

The renewed countdown starts at 8 a.m. EST Tuesday, with liftoff set for 7:30 a.m. Thursday.

The launch pad was off-limits today to all except those involved in the fueling of the units, whose clogged filters caused last week's postponement. The pad was to reopen in late afternoon after being closed since the slow, methodical fueling operation began Sunday.

NASA spokesman Mark Hess reported at midmorning that the hydrazine loading was about 30 minutes ahead of schedule. "So far, everything is running along very smoothly," he said.

Officials kept watch on a weather front moving toward the Cape, but Hess said, "Right now they're saying the weather should be OK for launch. That front is expected to move through here Wednesday and be gone by Thursday."

Crews were to work through the night to service oxygen tanks and electricity-producing fuel cells and clean up the pad in preparation for starting the count.

On Saturday, the space agency rescheduled the launch after certifying that the two contaminated units were flightworthy after being flushed and replenished with two new filters and six fresh quarts of oil. If replacement had been necessary, the flight would have been delayed until next week.

High Court Refuses Bar States Require Payment For Vandalism

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to bar states from forcing parents of public school students to pay for school property vandalized by their children.

The justices, citing the lack of a "substantial federal question," left intact a New Jersey Supreme Court ruling its state law — similar to laws in every state but Georgia imposing such parental liability — is valid.

The precedent-setting value of today's action is far from clear, but at least for now, New Jersey's law is safe from challenge.

Although most states have such laws, few have been challenged in court. The justices were told that fact "suggests ... enforcement of those statutes has probably been something less than zealous."

But the New Jersey court noted that school boards in its state "have recently turped to the statute to deter vandalism and to cope with its burgeoning costs."

A 1978 report by the National Institute of Education estimated that at that time 42,000 incidents of vandalism occurred in the nation's schools each month, at an average monthly cost of $3.4 million.

Those incidents were reported as affecting 28 percent of the country's schools — 24,000 of them.

Georgia's parental-liability law was struck down in 1971, apparently because of that state's policy against imposing financial liability on people not at fault.

Similar legal challenges in Connecticut, Illinois, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Texas and Wyoming failed.

The New Jersey controversy began when school boards in Roselle and Piscataway sued the parents of students allegedly in-involved in 1975 and 1976 incidents of vandalism, respectively. In each case, the parents challenged the constitutionality of the New Jersey law the school boards relied on.

The law, dating back to 1867, says: "The parents or guardian of any pupil who shall injure any school property shall be liable for damages for the amount of the injury ... together with costs of suit."

The absolute liability imposed by the school vandalism law differs from New Jersey's general parental-liability law, which holds parents responsible only when they fail or neglect to exercise reasonable supervision and control over their children.

New Jersey's highest court, by a 6-1 vote last June 9, ruled that the law does not violate parents' rights to due process and equal protection.

"The existence of the parent-child relationship provides a rational basis for imposing liability and is a reasonable means to accomplish the purposes of compensation and deterrence," the state court said.

"We cannot say that such purposes are unreasonable and therefore an invalid basis for imposition of vicarious liability."

Soviet Warns Libya Of U.S.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Soviet officials are telling Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy a joint U.S.-Egyptian military exercise this month is a dress rehearsal for an "armed invasion of Libya," The Bulletin reports.

In a copyright story Sunday, the newspaper said it obtained secret Defense Intelligence Agency documents that discuss a Soviet attempt to convince Khadafy to allow establishment of Soviet naval and air facilities.

The Bulletin said Moscow is pointing to the Bright Star exercises — scheduled to involve 6,000 U.S. military personnel in maneuvers in Egypt, the Sudan, Somalia and Oman — to convince Khadafy his dictatorship is in jeopardy.

The newspaper said the documents were "based on information received by the U.S. government from foreign intelligence sources."

There was no immediate comment from Washington officials.

According to the documents, there are 1,300 Soviet troops and 700 Eastern European military personnel in Libya, the newspaper said.

Moscow is trying to pressure Khadafy to "provide the Soviets with previously denied use of a naval port facility on the Libyan coast and air bases in the remote Libyan desert," the newspaper said.

Although Khadafy has been reluctant to agree to a treaty with the Soviets, the documents say "he may be ready to yield under stepped-up pressures from the U.S.S.R. in addition to an increase in activity of U.S. military forces in the Mediterranean area."

The Bright Star exercises were planned during the administration of the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

Rhetoric Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — A newly adopted Reagan administration policy on human rights violations in other nations represents a change in rhetoric "to some degree," a top White House aide acknowledges.

However, White House chief of Staff James A. Baker says that President Reagan's approval of a State Department document pledging open opposition to rights violations abroad does not indicate a significant shift.

"The policy will be to speak out where that can best accomplish the result, and deal in quiet diplomacy where that can best accomplish the result," Baker said Sunday on the NBC program "Meet the Press."

Quered on whether the new stance is not "based on exactly the same principles advocated by the Carter administration," which Reagan criticized while campaigning against Carter, Baker said the former president's policy "was all one way."

"It was all speak out, beat them over the head with what they ought to be doing," Baker said of the previous administration's policy. "But I think you'll see that the Reagan administration's policy is balanced," he said.

The Reagan administration came into office pledged to use "quiet diplomacy" in dealing with abuses of human rights by friendly nations.

Baker conceded that to a degree "the rhetoric has changed," but added, "It's not an either-or situation."

A State Department memorandum disclosed last week, which according to Baker the president has approved, said, "If a nation, friendly or not, abridges freedom, we should acknowledge it, stating that we regret and oppose it."

"At the very least, we will have to speak honestly about our friends' human rights violations and justify any decision wherein other considerations (economic, military, etc.) are determinative," the memorandum said.

National Weather Service Says Dress For Winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paying close attention to the forecasts and bundling up warmly this winter could mean a lot more than reducing the chances of coming down with the sniffles, the National Weather Service is warning.

If a decade-long trend continues, the nationwide death toll directly linked to winter weather could top 450, weather and health experts warn.

The number of winter-related deaths has risen sharply in recent years, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

In the severe winters of 1977 and 1978 the cold claimed 652 and 634 lives respectively, among the worst winters the nation has ever seen.

"In those two years the death rate equaled three persons per million, the first time it has ever exceeded two per million. Those are frightening statistics and should emphasize the need to be cautious during the winter months," Dr. Richard D. Hallgren, director of the National Weather Service, said Sunday.

Between 1949 and 1978 the cold claimed an average of 35.5 lives each year, but in the last 10 years the average has climbed to 45.4 fatalities.

Those include deaths directly blamed on winter weather; victims of heart attacks while shoveling snow, asphyxiation in stranded autos and other indirect causes are not included.

At least part of the increase has been blamed by medical analysts on the aging of the population. The median age of the country recently passed 30 years, meaning there are more and more older persons who are more sensitive to extreme temperatures.

Hallgren suggests paying particular attention to weather forecasts and warnings in order to be prepared for storms, cold spells or other hazards.

He noted that during this time of year temperatures can drop abruptly, and winds combined with the cold can greatly increase the danger. At 30 degrees, a breeze of 10 miles per hour results in a "wind chill factor" equivalent to 16 degrees, increasing the chance of frostbite or possibly fatal hypothermia.

Local weather reports often include this wind chill factor and weather service officials urge considering it when deciding what to wear.

"Dress to fit the weather," suggests Mike Mogil of the weather service. "Wear several layers of loose-fitting, lightweight, warm clothing. The outer layer should be of tightly-woven material, water repellent and hooded to protect your face and cover your mouth protecting your lungs from extremely cold air. Mittens, snug at the wrists, offer better protection than do fingered gloves," he suggested.

Unusual exertion also is a hazard in cold weather, the experts point out, as the cold is already putting a major stress on the body. Unaccustomed effort, such as pushing a stuck auto or shoveling snow can quickly lead to a heart attack, according to health and weather experts.

Clot Dissolver Is Being Tested

ATLANTA (AP) — Emory University physicians are testing heart attack victims to determine whether a new drug injected directly into clogged arteries can help limit damage during a heart attack.

Spencer B. King III, one of six doctors participating in the study, said heart attack victims who arrive at Crawford W. Long Memorial Hospital in Atlanta within four hours of the onset of chest pain are asked if they want to take part in the study.

"It's very important to treat a patient within four hours of the onset of chest pain," said Dr. Douglas C. Morris, another physician involved in the study. "After four hours, the chances of irreversible heart damage are much greater."

About half of those who agree are used as a control group, and the other half are injected with the drug streptokinase through a catheter placed directly into the clot that apparently is causing the heart attack.

All participants, including those who get the special drug, receive conventional treatment at the hospital, King said.

The new drug treatment, known as intracoronary thrombolysis, was developed in West Germany three years ago. In most cases since then in which the treatment has been used experimentally, blockages were dissolved, allowing blood to flow again to the heart.

"The study will try to determine if, in fact, this treatment is truly effective in reducing the size of the damage," said King, director of Emory University Hospital's cardiovascular laboratory.

"Most patients who have heart attacks have blockage of the arteries before the heart attack," he said. "So when you dissolve a clot, you're talking about dissolving the last straw that created the heart attack."

"You don't clean it out — you just open it a little," King said. "If you have complete blockage, you just open the artery so there's only a 90 percent blockage. But if you do that soon enough, you could prevent a massive heart attack."

King said all heart attack victims at Crawford Long will be given the treatment if the initial results of the current study show dramatically that streptokinase minimizes the extent of damage to the heart muscle.

Otherwise, King said, doctors expect they will need to have about 40 to 50 patients in both groups before they can conclude "whether, in fact, this treatment makes the heart attack smaller than conventional treatment."

Seek Busing In Wake Of Toll

BUNN, N.C. (AP) — A recent traffic accident that left six people dead has prompted a group of Franklin County residents to seek bus transportation for students who remain at Edward Best Middle School for after-school activities.

Four children and two of their grandparents were killed Sept. 29 when their vehicle was struck by a logging truck. The grandparents were returning the children home following an after-school activity.

The group is proposing the "Panther Express," which would be a shuttle system, using county-owned activity buses to take students from Best School to Bunn High School, where their parents would pick them up.

The program would cost $2,000 and a state Department of Public Instruction official said he knew of no other such program in the state. About $600 has been contributed to the program, which is expected to begin Dec. 1.

Controllers' Failure Rate Said High

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The failure rate of the first air traffic controllers class to enter training at the Federal Aviation Administration Academy since the controllers' strike is double the average for classes since the academy's founding, officials say.

Edwin Harris, academy superintendent, said Saturday that half the class that began Aug. 11 failed the course. The academy was founded five years ago.

Most of the failures happened in the laboratory during simulated air traffic control problems, Harris said.

The class, which graduated Nov. 2, specialized in controlling high-flying aircraft travelling between airports. A second class of equal size specializing in control of aircraft near airports is scheduled to graduate Nov. 23.

Measuring a single class's failure rate is misleading, Harris said, "but it averages over a period of time at 25 percent. But we've had classes with a higher failure rate and we've had classes with a lower rate."

The class failure rate ranges from "down in the teens" to about 55 percent, he said.

"Any time you're running a program like this, you'll have ups and downs," Harris said. "We still require that the standards be met."

Harris attributed the failure of 36 out of the class's 72 students to recruitment from an old list of civil service applicants.

"We only had a few days to recruit people and get them to the academy," he said.

"To pass the Civil Service commission, you need a score of 70 to get on the register," he said. "When you hire off the register, you're hiring from the top down. So when you get to the lower scores on the register, history shows the failure rate goes up."

Dear Abby

Literary Work, No; Sincere Message, Yes

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: As we grow older, we are bound to have friends and relatives who become terminally ill. Sadly enough, because we don't know what to say, we sometimes ignore them.

Some of these friends and relatives may live far away, making visits impossible, but your conscience keeps gnawing at you, and you really want them to know that you're thinking about them.

You browse around in a card shop, and what do you find? Cards that say, "Get well soon!" Or, "You'll be up and around in no time!" And, "Wishing you a speedy recovery."

Such cheery messages are clearly inappropriate when you know, and they know (and worse yet, they know that you know), that they will not be "up and around in no time."

So, what can you say? It need not be a flowery, literary masterpiece in order to be effective. Write a brief, sincere message to express your feelings:

"Dear Molly, George and I want you to know that you are in our thoughts and our prayers. We love you."

The above is from my new revised and updated booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." To obtain it, write to Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250, and enclose $2 plus a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope.

DEAR ABBY: Help! My mother-in-law thinks a married woman should worship her husband, family and home, and be a total slave.

If she hears that my husband and I hired a sitter so we could spend an evening out, she tells me we are too extravagant. If it's mentioned that my husband helped with the housework or children, she says it's the woman's job to take care of the house and kids.

When she sees me doing a crossword puzzle, painting or anything that's a hobby, she tells me that she never had time for that kind of foolishness, and I am a sorry excuse for a wife and mother.

All her children are grown. She's 55 — too young to be senile. I know she didn't have an easy life, and it bugs her to see me have it easier than she did. I think she needs counseling, but I'm not brave enough to suggest it to her. I've tried telling her it's none of her business, but she says the welfare of her son and his children will always be her business!

What should I do? She lives near me and I can't avoid her. BUGGED IN CICERO

DEAR BUGGED: You can't change your mother-in-law, but you can try to develop a tougher hide and refuse to blow your top when she comes on with her meddling and putdowns. Don't argue. Be pleasant, cheerful and agreeable. And go right on doing as you please.

DEAR ABBY: Is it correct to be addressed "Mary Jones" (not my real name) now that I am a widow?

I do not know if etiquette has changed, but it has really upset me! I want to be addressed as "Mrs. Richard Jones," but how can I tactfully let my friends, lawyer, banks, etc., know this without offending them?

I think it is a shame for people to drop the "Mrs." After all, I was a very happy "Mrs." for 49 years, so why do friends and other people immediately address my mail to "Mary Jones"? I am not a divorcee, and I do not want to forget that I was ever married. And I also dislike being addressed as "Mrs. Mary Jones." Please print your answer, as I am sure there are lots of people who need to learn this. MRS. RICHARD JONES

DEAR MRS. JONES: You are Mrs. Richard Jones as long as you live — unless you marry again. And please do not hesitate to correct those who address you incorrectly.

Delight your favorite youngster with a boutique collection of handknit and crochet doll clothes. She'll be the envy of the neighborhood when she dresses her teenage doll in a crocheted poncho, tam and skirt or knitted ski sweater, pants and cap or gets her ready for a party in knit dress, vest and beret. Directions are also given for crocheting a doll size rug.

To obtain directions for making the doll's wardrobe, send your request for Leaflet No. D-119 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector") P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or — if you don't have an assortment of leftover yarns — you can order Kit No. K-119 by sending check or money order for $7 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes the instruction leaflet, yarn and shipping charges.

Dear Pat: Having found so many ideas in your columns, I would like to share with you and your readers directions which I made up for a tiny Christmas stocking for trimming the tree. They also make excellent bazaar and gift items.

All you need is a pair of size two knitting needles and small amounts of white, red and green sports weight yarn. To begin, cast on 24 stitches with the white yarn and work in knit 2, purl 2 ribbing for 3 rows. The balance of the stocking is worked in stockinette stitch (knit 1 row, purl 1 row.)

Next, work 4 rows with red and follow with 4 rows with green. Change back to the red yarn and work 16 rows, ending with completion of a purl row. With right side facing you, put first 18 stitches on a stitch holder.

With wrong side of work facing you, join in the white yarn and, with it, do 8 rows of stockinette stitch on the remaining 6 stitches, ending with the completion of a knit row.

To "turn" the heel, work as follows: purl 2 together, purl 1, turn, slip 1, knit 1, turn, purl 1, purl 2 together, purl 1, turn, slip 1, knit 2, turn, purl 2, purl 2 together. Then pick 4 stitches on inside edge and purl across the 18 stitches on the stitch holder. You now have 25 stitches.

Now, working on first 6 stitches, with the remaining 19 stitches on a holder, do 8 rows of stockinette stitch ending with completion of a purl row.

Then, on these 6 stitches, work as follows: knit 2 together, knit 1, turn, slip 1, purl 1, turn, knit 1, knit 2 together, knit 1, turn, slip 1, purl 2, turn, knit 2, knit 2 together. Next, pick up 4 stitches on inside edge and knit across the 19 stitches from holder. You now have 26 stitches.

Working on all stitches, continue in stockinette stitch until there are 13 rows of white, counting the rows in the center of stocking. End with a knit row. Join red and purl 1 row.

With red, work the following rows for the toe of the stocking. For the first row, knit 5, work double decrease on next 4 stitches, knit 8, work double decrease on next 4 stitches, knit 5. Each double decrease is worked by knitting 2 stitches together, slipping the next stitch and then passing the slipped stitch over the knit stitch. For the remaining rows, you will just be told to decrease 2 whenever the double decrease is to be made. Purl the second and all remaining wrong side rows until advised otherwise. Work Row 3 as follows: knit 4, decrease 2, knit 6, decrease 2, knit 4. For Row 5, knit 3, decrease 2, knit 4, decrease 2, knit 3. On the seventh row, knit 2, decrease 2, knit 2, decrease 2, knit 2. On Row 8 purl 2 together across row, giving you 5 stitches.

Cut yarn leaving about 8 inches. Thread this yarn into a tapestry needle and pull through the 5 stitches, pulling up tight. With same yarn, sew up seam.

With white, chain 25 for a hanger. Double over and sew the doubled chain to the top of stocking at seam. — BETH B. VEROQUA, WIS.

Many thanks, Beth, not only for sharing your pattern but also for sending such good, clear directions. For those who have never tried to "turn" a heel, I might just add this one clarification.

At the point where you are told to purl 2 together, purl 1 and turn, you work only these 3 stitches of the 6 on the needle. By purling 2 together you reduce these to 2 stitches. When you are told to turn, you turn your work so that the right side of your work is facing you and on the 2 stitches, you follow the next set of directions (slip 1, knit 1, turn.) You now turn your work so that the wrong side is facing you and continue as directed.

High Level Bickering

Published reports pointing to rivalries and conflicts within the Reagan cabinet over conduct of foreign affairs may have touched only the tip of an iceberg, or, as the gossip crowd is inclined to do, the problem could well be overblown.

At one point Secretary of State Alexander Haig let it be known he felt he was fighting a sort of "guerrilla war" in Washington while trying to deal with multiple problems all over the world. The essence was, of course, that unknown or unnamed sources were undermining his work with rumors and conflicting statements or reports.

Whatever the case, President Reagan felt it necessary to call in the National Security Council boss Richard V. Allen and Secretary Haig to end dissent among members of the foreign policy team.

The President's intentions were good. So were those of President Jimmy Carter when faced by the same situation; and as Mr. Carter learned, Mr. Reagan is likely to also learn ... good intentions are not enough.

Outwardly Haig and Allen are friends (that's what they insist), so suspicion appears to focus on lesser-ranking officials in their respective departments for bickering which embarrasses efforts for a common front. Energies devoted to rooting out and squelching troublesome underlings would dilute the concentration of effort on global problems.

Possibility of an unnamed third party behind the disconcerting discord would appear to be ruled out, but one never knows. The mazes of Washington are filled with Machiavellian minds capable of intrigues beyond anything imagined on Main Street, U.S.A.

Daniels Exerted Influence

North Carolina and the nation lost one of their premier newspapermen with the death Friday of Jonathan Daniels, editor emeritus of the Raleigh News and Observer.

Daniels became editor of The News and Observer in 1933 when his father, the late Josephus Daniels, became ambassador to Mexico under President Roosevelt.

Jonathan Daniels later served in the Roosevelt government, and was the presidential press secretary at the time of Roosevelt's death.

He returned to the editorship of The News and Observer, then resided at Hilton Head Island, S.C. upon his retirement in 1970.

Jonathan Daniels exerted great influence on North Carolina as his newspaper grew in circulation and prestige. Much of what North Carolina is today can be attributed to his journalistic efforts.

Continuing Study

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It looks as though a property tax study commission of the North Carolina General Assembly will pay serious attention to the notion that citizens should get some reward for paying their taxes early; should get stiffer penalties for paying them late; and have the option of paying them on a staggered schedule rather than all at once.

"But most people pay it at one time, in one lump sum," Campbell said, and that makes property taxes both highly visible and a possible source of resentment

BILL NOBLITT

Those are, at the outset, matters of high priority on the new commission which is just launching its study. The revision of local property taxes has become a perennial study issue for the General Assembly, and except for occasionally new membership and another official-sounding title, property taxes have been under constant review for years.

Relief, however, is not just around the corner. This study will run for 18 months, with a report and recommendations to be given to the 1983 session of the General Assembly.

Two Problems
William A. Campbell, collections specialist with the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill and one of two specialists from that agency who will staff the study, told members at an organizational meeting the other day that most elements of tax collecting are in "pretty good shape, but that two areas deserve special attention."

A number of people pay the money for their local property taxes into an escrow account at the lending institution which holds the mortgage on their property. For them, annual payment is no problem.

heightened considerably by having to pay up such an amount every year.

At least two counties are experimenting with partial payment plans under which the approach is to spread payments out over the year in two or four installments.

Campbell said such a plan would "ease the pain ... and the resentment". But adopting such a program would require adjustments to both state law and local procedures by which boards of county commissioners receive budget requests from departments, hold hearings, adopt the budget, set tax rates, send out bills, and demand payment by a date certain.

Few people realize, Campbell said, that local property taxes are due September 1. Ask 100 people and they would tell you January 1, he noted. Penalties begin on January 6.

Which brought Campbell to his second area of concern — late payment. The penalty for non-payment is two percent in January plus 3/4 of one percent each month from then on.

"That penalty is too low ... holding back on paying taxes makes it so that the cheapest place to borrow money is from the local government because the rate is so low," Campbell said.

Change
He suggested that the commission work on a method of shortening the

(The Raleigh Times)

In 25 years of steering the vast University of North Carolina system through storms no helmsman ever confronted before — over the system's unity, over racial integration, over the 1960s' behavioral revolution — William Friday has never lost his head, his temper, or his compass.

Many veterans of Tar Heel political wars think him, with reason, the best politician in the state, and some want him to run for governor in 1984. At 61, Friday firmly, calmly denies being tempted at all.

The firmness and calm are typical. They combine with the breadth of Bill Friday's mind, the clarity of his values, the fairness of his outlook and the civility of his style to form a character of unique strength, dignity and effectiveness.

North Carolina, afflicted with at least its share of public figures whose small-gauge moral caliber does not match their large-bore ambitions, has also been blessed with a number of magnum-class leaders who seek power not just for power's sake but for the chance to do the state some good. Bill Friday is of that select company, do-gooders in the finest sense.

In the same era when knowledge has exploded as never in human history and information has become a priceless resource, university presidencies across the country have typically resembled revolving doors. That North Carolina's 16-campus university system is one of the nation's finest is largely the result of continuity and strength at the top.

Albert Coates, long the gray eminence of North Carolina government, wrote 24 years ago that then-new President Friday never sold the day to serve the hour. It still fits.

Like a car that runs as well at 90,000 miles as it did at 10,000, a useful, valuable person who superbly performs a tough job year after year tends to be taken for granted. Only when Bill Friday retires will the state's people realize how much they needed him. That day will come soon. Those shoes will indeed be hard to fill.

Strength For Today

GUIDED MEN

One of the most critical questions in national policy today concerns guided missiles. Who will build the most versatile and efficient ones? Which nation will deploy them in such a way as to wreak maximum havoc on its enemies?

Of course, in the world in which we live, national defense is indispensable, and survival means at least equality in the most lethal of armaments. But we should never forget that no problem has ever been permanently solved with violence of any kind, no matter how effective it was. The world's great problems will reach a solution not by guided missiles, but by guided men. If we turn back to our history books we can see that it was the guided men who led nations to great victories.

What we need is not just concentrated fire power but consecrated men. An assemblage of these will out-blast all the expensive hardware which brains, energy, and money can assemble. — Elisha Douglass

YOUTH APPRECIATION IS TEAMWORK

BY ART BUCHWALD

Keep It Small, Please

I can't tell you where the Limited Nuclear War Room is in Washington, but I can assure you that everyone there is working very hard.

Wakko, whose book, "Nuclear War — Keep It Small, Keep It Simple," is must reading for defense planners, said the idea of a Limited Nuclear War, or LNW as it is referred to in inner circles, is now catching on with more and more people who once felt nuclear war was unthinkable.

"According to our feasibility studies," he told me on the LNW mess "it is now possible to fight a Limited Nuclear War with minimal damage to the U.S. and the Soviet Union."

"Where?" I asked.

"Luxembourg. The terrain is excellent and the population is small. If both sides can contain it there, we won't get much fall-out from the rest of the NATO countries. What do you think?"

"I'm no expert on LNW," I said "but I don't see how we could keep it limited to just Luxembourg."

"If it does spill over, we're prepared to fight in Switzerland."

"I thought Switzerland was neutral."

"It is, but we can't do anything about the prevailing winds. If they're blowing that way, we may have to write off Geneva."

"I'm sorry to hear that. I was always fond of Geneva."

"Well, it's either Geneva or Paris, and we want to do everything in our power to spare Paris, if we possibly can."

"How come?"

"We were planning to set up our LNW headquarters there. Our generals prefer the hotels over Brussels."

"What guarantees do you have in a LNW that Paris won't be nuked?"

"We've told the Soviets if they zapped Paris, then we would nuke East Berlin."

"What about London?"

"We can't guarantee every European city in a Limited Nuclear war any more than the Russians can. But the object is to keep the fighting to the smaller towns, which won't be missed."

"I hope you can spare Rome and Florence," I said.

"I'm sure we can save Rome, but I can't give you any guarantees on Florence. If the Soviets come up from the south we're going to have to stop them somewhere."

"Have you written off Stockholm and Copenhagen if they attack from the north?"

"The Kremlin is aware that if they flatten Stockholm and

Arms Sales Contentious

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the arms sale business, it's hard to balance the interests of one customer against another — particularly when new priorities offend old friends.

That's one reason the sale of U.S. radar planes and other weapons to Saudi Arabia — over Israeli opposition — was such a contentious issue.

Now President Reagan may face the same kind of controversy in reverse, this time over whether to sell warplanes to Taiwan.

The deal would be with an old ally, the Nationalists, and the offended party would be the Peking government.

But Taiwan, which hoped for better days in a Reagan presidency, may be let down, despite some very comforting words during last year's campaign.

If Reagan follows the State Department's private advice, he will stall — and disappoint Taiwan, its supporters and those who question whether the United States is prepared to protect small countries.

If Reagan listens to his White House and Pentagon advisers and ships F-16s or less-advanced F-5Gs to Taiwan, he risks friendship in Peking.

Officially, the administration is not yet tipping its hand. The government line is that Taiwan's request "is being looked at intensively" but that there is no deadline for a decision.

Scholar A. Doak Barnett says that if Reagan authorizes jet sales to Taiwan, there is "a high probability" Peking will kick out the U.S. ambassador. Barnett says China might even try to patch up its differences with the Soviets.

That would be a major blow to Reagan's strategy of establishing a network of anti-Soviet countries.

But scholar Edward N. Luttwak calls a decision to sell weapons to Taiwan greatly overdue.

"The U.S. can renounce neither its friendship with Peking nor its obligation to Taiwan," Luttwak wrote in the Wall Street Journal. "If Washington is resolute in fulfilling its commitment to Taiwan, the leaders of the People's Republic will no doubt express their displeasure, but they will also recognize that the very act is proof of American reliability."

The fact that Reagan is getting conflicting advice from the State Department, on the one hand, and the White House and Pentagon, on the other, underscores the divisions within the administration on foreign policy. It also reflects the sensitivity of arming Taiwan.

The 17 million people on the island are trying to maintain their independence. They want as much U.S. support as they can muster.

Even though the communist government in Peking is making no overt move to take over Taiwan — in fact, tensions have been reduced — there is no doubt it considers the island an integral part of China.

A Reagan decision to send the warplanes to the Nationalists would be subject to congressional veto. This could mean a replay of the tug-of-war over arming Saudi Arabia.

The Taiwan arms issue was not mentioned in the communique that set up full relations between the United States and China at the start of 1979. In fact, some Chinese leaders apparently thought U.S. arms shipments would be reduced, or at least that Taiwan would not be provided with jets that could outmaneuver their own.

But former President Carter, on a trip to China last year, said the Chinese had been told that the United States would sell some defensive weapons to Taiwan, even though it was breaking relations with the Nationalists. The 1979 Taiwan Relations Act authorized providing Taiwan "with arms of a defensive character."

Last summer, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. went to Peking with word that restrictions against arms sales to mainland China would be lifted. But Chinese leaders, concentrating on economic development, do not seem interested.

A military mission to Washington has been postponed while the Reagan administration mulls over the Taiwan arms decision.

Barnett, an early proponent of recognizing the Peking government, says in a new study published by the Brookings Institution that a decision to sell jets to Taiwan "would represent a blatant example of insensitivity to Peking's basic views and concerns."

Chinese leaders, he says, "would interpret it as a sign that Washington gives higher priority to its old ties with Taiwan than to its new relations with China and that, deliberately or unwittingly, U.S. policy may encourage trends toward a permanent separation of Taiwan from China."

Setting Lawnmower Standards

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
The search for safety can get awfully complicated, even when the intent is clear. Take the government's effort to reduce injuries from power lawn mowers, for example.

The campaign is eight years old and it's still going on. There is a new safety standard — amended before it even took effect. It will mean higher prices for consumers. It will reduce injuries, but there are arguments about how many will be prevented.

Some 77,000 injuries a year are now blamed on power mowers; 10,000 fingers and toes are amputated as a result. Most injuries are caused by hands and feet touching the moving blade.

In 1973, the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute, representing the industry, asked the Consumer Product Safety Commission to mandate adoption of a voluntary safety standard developed by manufacturers.

"We found that there indeed was a problem," said Melvin Spencer, an investigator with the commission's Office of Program Management.

The commission rejected the industry standard. It advertised for someone else to develop a regulation and selected Consumers Union, the testing organization which publishes "Consumer Reports."

On Feb. 15, 1979, the commission published a final standard, due to take effect Dec. 31, 1981. It estimated the regulation would reduce injuries by almost 80 percent.

The rule seemed simple: it required the blade to stop within three seconds after the operator released the handle of the mower.

The regulation applied to power mowers where the operator walks behind the machine; it did not apply to mowers which are ridden. The commission estimates there are 34 million "walk-behind" power mowers already in use across the country; the industry says 5 million new ones are sold every year.

The standard listed two ways the manufacturer could stop the blade:

—By disconnecting the blade from the power source with a brake-clutch so the blade would stop while the engine kept running.

—By stopping both the blade and the engine and providing an automatic restart mechanism for the engine. The commission said the automatic restart mechanism was needed because consumers who found it a nuisance to restart the engine manually — a chore that can take several hard tugs — would disable the safety device.

Mark Silbergeld, an attorney who worked on the case for Consumers Union, said the testing organization estimated that the standard would add $35 to the price of a power mower, now about $125 and up.

Dennis Dix of the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute said the cost would have been higher — from $40 to $70.

The industry fought the rule. It took its case to Congress and won. Congress first delayed the effective date of the standard to June 30, 1982, then ordered the commission to make specific amendments.

The commission voted unanimously on Oct. 30 to follow orders, although two commissioners expressed reservations about the change.

The amended standard still includes the three-second rule. But it allows manufacturers to comply by stopping both the engine and the blade on mowers without an automatic restart mechanism. If the mower must be restarted manually, however, the controls may be no more than 24 inches from the top of the mower's handle or there must be a 360-degree protective shield around the blade housing.

Using this option, Dix said, manufacturers can comply with the standard at a cost of under $20.

Dix said the industry has made it easier to restart mowers by hand. "You can start the engine ... standing behind the mower," he said. "You have to pull a cord, but you don't have to pull so hard."

Will the easier start be easy enough?

Consumers Union says no. "People are going to find a way to defeat this," said Silbergeld.

Historian Will Durant Dies At Age 96

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Historian-philosopher Will Durant, who spent a lifetime writing "The Story of Civilization," has died at the age of 96, apparently unaware that his wife and collaborator, Ariel, preceded him in death by two weeks.

Durant died Saturday of a heart attack at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where he had been hospitalized since Oct. 3. Mrs. Durant, 83, died Oct. 25 at their home following a long illness.

"The Story of Civilization," in 11 volumes, was hailed by some critics as the most impressive history produced in the 20th century; the 10th volume, "Rousseau and the Revolution," won a Pulitzer prize for general non-fiction in 1968.

Durant started the 2 million-word history alone, but by the seventh volume the evidence of his wife's collaboration was so great that her name was added to succeeding volumes. She was born Ida Kaufman, but Durant called her Ariel after the imp in Shakespeare's "The Tempest."

"I had reached Volume 7 before I realized that Mrs. Durant was a true collaborator and not alone a researcher and assistant," he once said. "Her name has appeared with mine on the remainder of the series."

Generally, the Durants wrote separately on the same subject, then compared and rewrote for a final version. Mrs. Durant read more than 5,000 books, making notations for her husband.

They finished their final work, "A Dual Biography," in 1977, and Durant had said frequently in recent years that he was ready to die.

"Somebody has to get out of the way to make place for new vitality," he said when he was 94. "So I have a great respect for death. I shall run into it very soon. But it doesn't frighten me at all. I've wondered why the Reaper has waited so long to get hold of me."

He was born Nov. 5, 1885, in North Adams, Mass., one of six children of French-Canadian immigrants. He decided as a young man to study for the priesthood, but he broke with the Catholic Church — and his family — before making his vows.

It was in New York, where he went to teach and continue his studies, that he met Mrs. Durant. He was substitute teaching at a small progressive school. They were married Oct. 31, 1913.

He was in his 20s, a penniless educator and writer of articles, when he began gathering material for his masterwork. He had conceived of "The Story of Civilization" as he lay ill with dysentery in Damascus, Syria, in 1912.

He did not write his first book until the age of 40. That book, "The Story of Philosophy," was an immense success, selling millions of copies and enabling him to devote the rest of his life to history.

In his later years, working with his wife, Durant raced against time, trying to finish his epic work before death or infirmity stilled his pen.

Each of the volumes required from three to six years to complete. The first, "Our Oriental Heritage," which traced the beginnings of man and the history of Asiatic civilization, appeared in 1935.

Then came "The Life of Greece" in 1939; "Caesar and Christ" in 1944; "The Age of Faith" in 1950; "The Renaissance" in 1953; "The Reformation" in 1957; "The Age of Reason" in 1961; "The Age of Louis XIV" in 1963; "The Age of Voltaire" in 1965; "Rousseau and the Revolution" in 1967; and finally "The Age of Napoleon" in 1975.

Although he never wrote a volume of history about this century, Durant was a critic of his own times. He once said he thought "we have had too much liberty in the United States. We're especially overdoing moral liberty."

Baum said Durant was alone at the time of his death. He is survived by his daughter, Ethel Benvenuta of Hollywood, and an adopted son, Louis Durant, who lives in Illinois.

A memorial service is scheduled for Friday at the Westwood Village Mortuary Chapel.

City Files Job Report

Greenville has submitted its annual equal employment opportunity report to the federal government.

Jerry Cox, city personnel director, said the report to the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission indicated the city has made progress in the hiring of minorities and women during the last 12 months, particularly in the police, fire-rescue, planning, public works, and community development departments.

He said 52 percent of the new employees hired and 48 percent of the employees promoted were minorities.

Cox said the positions filled by minority candidates include: planner I, fire-rescue captain, sanitation superintendent, fire-rescue officer, police officer, police dispatcher, transit coordinator, equipment coordinator, mosquito/rodent control officer, minimum housing inspector, acquisition and relocation officer and code enforcement technician.

Some POWs Acquired Rare Parasite In Asia

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Stomach ailments and itchy skin rashes have dogged a group of World War II veterans who picked up a rare parasite while held captive by the Japanese in southeast Asia, a researcher says.

The parasite, a microscopic worm called strongyloides, is extremely difficult to detect in laboratory tests. Because it is uncommon in the United States, doctors consulted by the veterans never looked for it, according to Dr. Lawrence Pelletier.

Sometimes a full day of laboratory testing is needed before the parasite is found in a patient, said Pelletier, chief of the medical service at the American Lake Veterans Administration Medical Center in Tacoma, Wash.

Pelletier, who discovered the parasite in veterans, discussed his research in an interview Friday during a meeting of the American Society for Microbiology.

The men carrying the parasites were part of a group of 530 prisoners of war captured by the Japanese on Java in 1942 and sent to work on the Burma-Thailand railroad.

Pelletier sent questionnaires to the veterans, asking them whether they had rashes and stomach disorders since World War II. The veterans who reported problems were tested and so far 45 have been found to be carrying strongyloides. Pelletier expects the disease will be found in about 100 of the veterans.

When the men came home at the end of World War II, no cure for strongyloides existed. But a treatment has been available since 1967, and until now there has been no effort to find and treat victims of the disease, Pelletier said.

The illness is not life-threatening, he said, unless the victim's natural defense systems are weakened by disease or by treatments like chemotherapy.

When the body's defenses are weakened, the worms can multiply rapidly and the disease can be fatal if it is undetected.

Pelletier said some Vietnam veterans might also be carrying strongyloides, which is found in the tropics and in areas with poor sanitation. In this country it is found occasionally in Appalachia and the South.

The parasite, which lives in human waste and in the soil in tropical climates, burrows into the skin and eventually into the blood stream. As the young worms crawl under the skin, they leave in their wake what doctors call "creeping skin eruption" — swollen, itchy red lines.

The worms travel through the blood to the lungs, crawl up the airway to the throat and are swallowed. The mature worms, still too small to be seen without a microscope, reside in the small intestine.

There they reproduce, sending a new crop of young worms on their way under the skin to the lungs.

Some types of parasitic worms get old and die over a period of time, Pelletier said, but strongyloides can reproduce and live in its victims indefinitely.

Architecture Program Held

ECU News Bureau

Approximately 50 persons from North Carolina and Virginia attended "North Carolina Architecture, 1960-1940: A Survey," a program sponsored by the Pitt County Historical Society and the East Carolina University Division of Continuing Education.

The event featured illustrated lectures by John B. Flowers III, founding director of the Stagville Preservation Center. Located near Durham, Stagville is the nation's first state-owned teaching center for historic preservation.

Flowers' presentation traced the development of North Carolina architecture from its earliest known beginning in the late 17th century to World War II, with emphasis upon various building styles.

Also on the program was Dr. Keats Sparrow of the ECU English faculty, vice president of the Pitt County Historical Society.

Sessions were held at the ECU Regional Development Institute.

Menu Planning Is A Project

Third Street Elementary School students have been involved in menu planning with Linda Tingle, Child Nutrition Supervisor and Mary Smith, assistant manager of Third Street School cafeteria. The K-3 students completed a survey of their favorite fruits and vegetables. The students in grades 2-3 also completed a survey on their favorite entrees.

The kindergarten students in Mrs. Lillian Week's and Mrs. Marian Smith's classes have been learning about good nutrition. The students recently made a jack-o-lantern, after which Ms. Tingle instructed the students on preparing pumpkin cookies.

Other classes at Third Street School have been studying nutrition and why they should eat a balanced diet. An emphasis has been placed on discouraging children from eating "junk" foods.

Urges Faster Japan Buildup

By DEBORAH SMITH
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Walter Stoessel, U.S. undersecretary of state, said today that Japan's defense buildup was "going in the right direction" but should move at a quicker pace.

Stoessel, a political affairs expert, made his remarks at a press conference at the U.S. Embassy. He arrived Sunday night on the first leg of a tour which will take him to Peking, Hong Kong, Bangkok and Manila.

"In light of the Soviet threat, we feel that all of the free countries should be doing more in the field of defense," he said. "We know and appreciate what Japan has already done and is doing. We hope she could do more in the interest of her own defense," he said.

Stoessel said the United States "would like to see some acceleration in the pace of the implementations of that (defense) program."

A recent flurry of bills introduced by conservative U.S. congressmen have sought to pressure Japan to earmark a greater percentage of its gross national product on defense spending. The Tokyo government has set a ceiling of 1 percent of the GNP for defense spending.

Japan's projected trade surplus with the United States is expected to reach $15 billion in fiscal 1981 and increase to $20 billion the following year. Japan budgets the equivalent of $10 billion yearly on defense.

"We do not believe in the linkage of these two matters (trade and defense), although we realize that in the Congress this has been linked. I think this is a reflection of (Congress') concern ... but this is not something we are doing in the administration," Stoessel said.

He said the Soviets have long had a conventional superiority and are "eroding the superiority of the free countries in other aspects, including naval ... and strategic weapons. The overall potential for Soviet action on a global basis has been greatly increased and must be a matter of concern."

Stoessel also cited "Soviet adventurism" into Afghanistan and Cambodia "which are of direct interest to Japan."

"The threat is not to be ignored ... It is a matter, we feel, of urgency that all of the free countries do more in order to have a more balanced situation in the world which is the best guarantee against Soviet aggression and outbreak of hostilities," he said.

Copenhagen, we'll wipe out Budapest and Warsaw. You see the beauty of Limited Nuclear war is that both sides can pick their targets, and if they overstep them, they know the other side will retaliate. For example, if the Soviets radiate Amsterdam, then we'll clobber Prague, and if they decide to destroy Lisbon, we'll hit Bucharest. This could lead to a major confrontation between the super powers, and we don't think the Soviets want that."

"As long as you believe an LNW can just be kept to the smaller towns in Europe, I don't see why any sane person would be against it," I said.

"We're getting some opposition from Europe, but we think it's being stirred up by the Communists. One of our jobs is to persuade our friends on the Continent that a Limited Nuclear War is in their best interests, even if it has to be fought on their soil."

"Better Madrid than Miami," I said.

"Well," Wakko said "I've got to go back to work. We're war gaming an LNW in Monaco."

time between the due date and the date interest begins, make the penalty more severe, and explore the various methods possible to reward taxpayers who pay early or on a staggered basis.

Joseph S. Ferrell of the Institute of Government presented a review of the state's revaluation system along with suggestions that reform be undertaken.

The practice of revising property values for tax purposes every eight years causes extreme reaction in most cases as values jump two or three times, and taxpayers invariably must face higher tax bills despite reductions in tax rates based on the higher valuations.

Ferrell pointed out that pegging tax values to market value is making rural and undeveloped suburban land values escalate more rapidly than are business properties.

Welcome to the bank that grew up on the farm.

At BBT, we feel very comfortable lending money to farmers.

After all, these are the people we grew up with. Our very first customers were farmers.

And even today, we lend a bigger percentage of our money to farmers than any other major bank in the state.

We also manage more farm land than any of our competitors. And a number of our bankers even have their own farms.

We know firsthand what it's like to borrow money for equipment, seed, chemicals or repairs. We know what kind of repayment schedule makes sense for a farm's cash flow.

We know where farm money comes from—and where it goes.

In fact, no financial institution in North Carolina is as committed to the farmer as we are.

Come in and see us. You'll feel right at home.

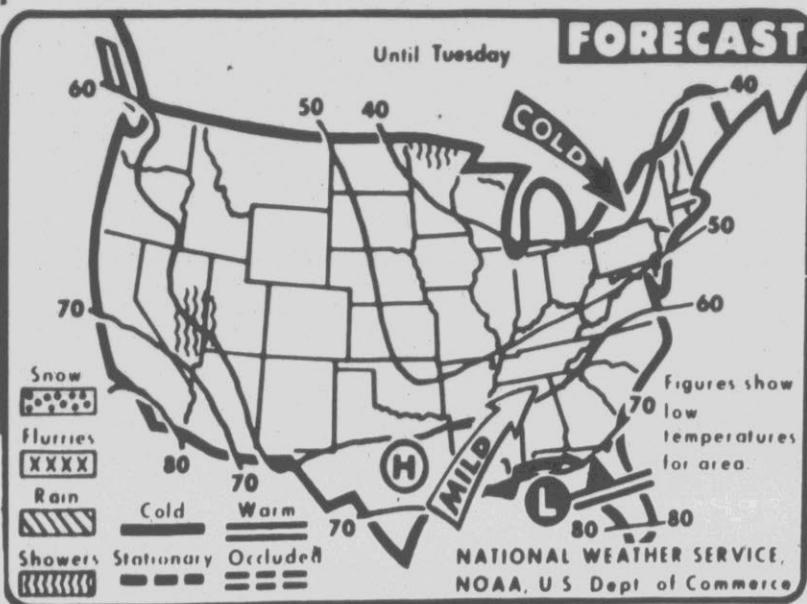

After all, we grew up together. And neither of us is finished growing yet.

Nobody works harder for your money.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service forecasts showers Tuesday for parts of Nevada, Utah and Minnesota. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
This morning's clear skies over North Carolina were expected to give way increasing clouds and a chance of rain later today, the National Weather Service reported.

A strong cold front stretching from New England to Texas plunged state temperatures into the 30s in most areas, including the Outer Banks.

As the front continued to move east, it was expected to bring showers to much of the state, before a high pressure system displaces it Tuesday. Meanwhile, a weak low pressure system on the southern portion of the cold front is edging eastward along the Gulf coast. The low was expected to reach northern Florida by early Tuesday, turning northeast off the Georgia coast.

The resulting wind circulation around the high to the north and the low to the south will feed an increasing amount of moisture into North Carolina, against producing a threat of rain. Rain will overspread eastern counties by late tonight and Tuesday, while the chance of rain will be somewhat less

Arrest 3 On

Drug Counts

Greenville Police, Friday night, arrested three persons on marijuana possession charges in two separate incidents in the downtown area, officers said today.

Capt. A. G. Whitaker reported Charles Glen Allen, 17 of 309 Springhill Rd., was arrested about 9:50 p.m. in the Beef-N-Shakes parking lot at the intersection of Fifth and Reade Streets when officers found an estimated $20 worth of marijuana in his possession.

Gary Charles Snyder, 18, and Donald Robert Winchester, 18, both of Tarboro, were charged with possession of marijuana and other charges following an 11:15 p.m. incident in a parking lot behind the Sub Station Two at the intersection of Fourth and Reade Streets.

According to Whitaker, officers saw what appeared to be marijuana in a car occupied by the two men. When they attempted to question Snyder and Winchester, Winchester backed the vehicle from a parking space and fled.

A short time later, other policemen stopped Winchester's car at the intersection of Fifth and Greene Streets. Snyder jumped from the car and ran, but was taken into custody by pursuing officers on Evans Street, south of the Sixth Street intersection.

In addition to the marijuana charge, Snyder was charged with delaying and obstructing an officer, while Winchester was charged with delaying and obstructing an officer, driving without headlights, careless and reckless driving, and failing to stop for a red light, according to Whitaker.

Technicians At Session

Over 125 surgical technologists from North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia were on the Pitt Community College campus Saturday for a workshop held by the Association of Surgical Technologists, chapter 205.

Appearing on the program were physicians from this area including Dr. Dennis McGillicuddy, speaking on "orthopedic trauma;" Dr. Robert Youngblood, "chest trauma;" Dr. Frank Sheldon, "abdominal trauma;" Dr. Robert Timmons, "neurological trauma;" Dr. Lee West and Adam Corbett.

Corbett, who spoke on the role of the emergency medical technician, has been employed by Greenville Fire and Rescue for 15 years. He is a community college medical specialist and training coordinator.

Chapter 205 of the ASTNC includes the cities of Greenville, Wilson, Rocky Mount, Williamston, Kinston, Washington and New Bern. The organization attempts to motivate surgical technologists to further their education and professionalism.

Surgical technologists were first certified and chapter 205 came into existence the same year.

Categorized As To Food Preferences

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — "You are what you eat," the saying goes, and two researchers are convinced a person who grabs a burger is fundamentally different from someone who orders broccoli quiche.

Edward Sadalla, an Arizona State University associate professor and Jeffrey Burroughs, an assistant professor at Juniata State College in Pennsylvania say fast-food eaters are conservative, competitive, religious, family-oriented and work hard at their jobs. Quiche aficionados are vegetarians. They are non-competitive, intellectual, fussy about their weight, use "recreational" drugs and picture themselves as sexy, the researchers said.

Sadalla and Burroughs recently completed their federally funded study titled "Food Preferences and Social Identity." The two divided food into five categories: vegetarian, gourmet, health food, fast food and synthetic food. They then selected 14 foods to represent each group.

"Food has metaphorical properties. It can be symbolic," Sadalla said.

Health food included yogurt and dried fruit. Gourmet fare featured caviar and fresh oysters. Synthetic food tantalized with breakfast powders and meatless bacon.

Hamburgers and submarine sandwiches were high on the fast food list.

Experiments then were carried out with several hundred participants in several states.

Health food lovers declared themselves pro-solar and anti-nuclear power, and by their own definition "weird" and individualistic, Sadalla said.

Gourmets tended to be atheistic liberals who lived alone, enjoyed fast living, took drugs and enjoyed glamour sports, they said.

Bayonet Training Back After Ten-Year Halt

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — The bayonet is back in basic training.

The U.S. Army dropped practice in that form of close-quarters combat a decade ago when training budgets were cut and technology and firepower were at the center of the Army's thinking.

"We're going very much back to basics," said Maj. Finley D. Stafford Jr., a 37-year-old Savannah native who heads the section at the Infantry School where training programs are written for the approximately 250,000 soldiers trained yearly by the Army.

"When it boils down to it, the only person who can take and hold ground is the infantry soldier," he said. "No matter how far along the technology gets, he's got to stay there in that foxhole. That's what the bayonet is all about."

Starting on Friday and continuing over the next 12 months, about 33,000 infantry recruits at Fort Benning will get nine hours of instruction on how to use a sharp blade affixed to a rifle barrel.

Six of the nine hours are devoted to learning the movements, parries and thrusts, and three hours are spent on the new, 400-meter bayonet assault course, which will be given its first test Friday, Stafford said.

The course, which can handle 10 soldiers at a time, winds down into a gully and up a ridge. It includes 18 obstacles — tires with pieces of plastic and rubber added to give them human form — for each soldier.

The soldiers attack trenches filled with plastic toy soldiers and negotiate barbed-wire obstacles, charge up a mound of clay, run across log footbridges and complete the course by crawling under more barbed wire.

Army Rangers began using an old, refurbished course at the west Georgia military installation last summer.

If it works out, bayonet instruction will be extended throughout the Army. Officials said the return to bayonet training means a return to basics and the recognition of the limits of technology in warfare.

During the early 1970s, bayonet training sputtered to a stop at the Army's various training posts. Stafford said something had to go as money was cut from the training budgets, and bayonet training seemed one of the least useful skills needed by soldiers in modern warfare.

Also, he said, there were injuries in training. M-16 rifles with plastic stocks couldn't take the strain, and finally a Marine was killed in 1976 during pugil stick (padded sticks) training.

The need for the bayonet was learned in Vietnam, Stafford said. Vietnam "was a super laboratory" in which the United States learned that superior firepower isn't always the most important weapon, he said.

Firewood cutting and timber stand improvement can complement each other if good planning and selective cutting are practiced. If dead trees are removed first, then diseased, damaged or misshapen trees, more room will be left for the remaining trees.

Dead trees must be cut with considerable care. Limbs and tops often become brittle or decayed and may fall if the trees are disturbed. On the other hand, dead trees are a source of shelter for wildlife, including the pileated woodpecker, an endangered species. The removal of dead trees reduces the likelihood of survival for this rare bird.

Other trees to be removed are insect damaged or diseased trees. These trees often use more room than their potential justifies. Sometimes weaker trees can further spread disease or insects.

Misshapen trees, forked trees or ones with small crowns take up extra space in the forest and removal can often allow straighter neighboring trees to grow better. These are often called "wolf" trees because they occupy more of the forest than do straighter more marketable trees. After these trees have been removed, selecting others may become more difficult.

The best crop trees should be identified and left to prosper. The poorer neighbors should be removed systematically. Since all trees compete for light, water and nutrients, individual trees will respond to removal of the competition.

An average timber stand begins with several thousand small trees per acre and after 30-40 years develops into fewer than 100 mature crop trees. Numerous trees are available for a sustained firewood harvest while improving the quality and growth rate of the crop trees.

It is almost assured that the demand for quality hardwoods will far exceed the supply in the coming decades. With thousands of acres of southern hardwoods left untended and growing up in "green junk," the future will belong to landowners who manage their timberlands properly.

Persons interested in improving their woodlots and learning more about forestry should attend the forestry tour of Pitt County scheduled for Nov. 11. The tour will begin at 9 a.m. in the Pitt County Office Building parking lot. Reservations may be made by calling 752-2934.

Forestry Tour Set For Nov. 12

There will be a Pitt County Forestry Club tour on Nov. 12 at 9 a.m., covering several sites in the county.

A bus will be provided and there will be a sponsored lunch at Abram's Barbeque, North Greene Street, Greenville. The tour should be completed by early afternoon.

Tour sites will demonstrate various areas of timber stand improvement techniques, land clearing and preparation, reforestation, etc.

Persons interested in joining the tour should call the Agricultural Extension Office at 752-2934 and leave their name. The tour will begin in the parking lot of the Pitt County Office Building.

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It was 11 months ago that Gov. Jim Hunt unveiled his plans to cash in on an "economic chance of a lifetime" — the North Carolina Microelectronics Center.

Now, with about $27 million set aside for the venture, Hunt is turning part of his attention to the North Carolina Biotechnology Center, an attempt to draw "a burgeoning new industry" to the state.

Although Hunt is quick to point out the differences in the two projects, the strategy in each case is similar — raise the standard of living by bringing higher paying, higher skilled industry to the state.

The tactics for establishing the industrial magnets are almost identical and much of the same criticism is likely to be heard for each.

The microelectronics center will have a facility in the research park where state universities are connected by computer terminals and video links. But Hunt said the biotechnology center would be more people-oriented, linking scientists with private companies that have research needs or finding them government grants.

In each project, the first step has been locating loose funds for establishing the centers. For the microelectronics center, Hunt found $900,000 in Council of State contingency and emergency money. For the biotechnology center, he is using a more modest $115,000 from the Board of Science and Technology.

After carefully selecting a target industry, the next ingredient appears to be finding project directors with already established credentials.

George Herbert, president of the Research Triangle Institute, leads the microelectronics board of directors. Dr. Leon Golberg, retired president of the RTI-based Chemical Industry Institute of Toxicology, will direct the biotechnology center.

Add to that list the names of University of North Carolina President William C. Friday, often mentioned as a 1984 gubernatorial candidate, and Duke University President Terry Sanford, a former North Carolina governor and candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The final step, in the case of the microelectronics center, was to press the legislature for funding after the project was beginning to take root. Hunt refused Thursday to predict future funding requests for the biotechnology center.

Republicans, in interviews last week, voiced the same criticism of the biotechnology center that they had voiced about the microelectronics center.

They charge that the projects are costly and sensational efforts to boost Hunt's image and that Hunt has taken advantage of his power by bypassing the legislature to set up the centers.

"It appears to be another public relations job," said David Flaherty, state GOP leader. "It will give him the opportunity to spend money and get another story out that he's helping the state."

Rep. Howard Coble, R-Guilford, an outspoken critic of the microelectronics center and a possible GOP candidate for governor in 1984, agrees that the public relations aspect appears to appeal to Hunt.

"He (Hunt) is wont to do this sort of thing and he does so masterfully," Coble said.

But Brent Hackney, a Hunt spokesman, says Hunt has a keen, natural interest in science and new technology, especially the kind that will affect agriculture.

"He also is an ardent student of history," Hackney said. "All the great governors of North Carolina are the ones that have been willing to stick their neck out a little further."

Hackney said Hunt has been particularly interested in the career of Luther H. Hodges, a former North Carolina governor and U.S. Commerce secretary. Hodges, often known as the business governor because of his industry-seeking efforts, was instrumental in establishing the Research Triangle Park.

Hodges was governor from 1954 until 1961.

Hunt would be unwise not to exploit North Carolina's industrial calling card — the Research Triangle Park, near Duke University, UNC-CH, Bowman Gray School of Medicine and N.C. State. "It's just a combination no one else has. That's why we can do this," Hackney said.

The Republicans also criticize Hunt for detouring the legislature in obtaining funds for his projects. Flaherty says it's an example of Hunt's "blatant abuse of power."

"It's another indicator we're spending money too quickly," Coble agreed. "I don't like the idea of a governor ... being this independent."

Sen. Robert Jordan, D-Montgomery, a member of the Board of Science and Technology, noted that during budget sessions earlier this year, lawmakers unsuccessfully tried to reduce the board's funding.

But he said he was not worried that Hunt's actions will commit legislators to funding something they didn't intend to fund. "I think it (the center funding) can be whatever we want it to be," he said.

In the microelectronics project, Hackney said the governor wanted to get the program going and then show legislators what he could do with state funding.

"Before you go to the legislature you need to have something to show them. Then you can say 'here's what we've shown we can do,'" Hackney said.

Dr. Lanier Is Appointed

Dr. Gene D. Lanier, professor in the ECU Department of Library Science, has been appointed to the Legislative Research Study Committee on Obscenity Laws by Liston B. Ramsey, Speaker of the N.C. House of Representatives.

The committee is to conduct a study pursuant to the authority of a resolution passed by the 1981 General Assembly.

Lanier will be the librarian designee on the 14-member committee. Also included will be three members of the House, three members of the Senate, one member of the press, one district attorney, one member of the judiciary, one representative from the Department of Justice, one representative of the periodical publishing industry, one representative of movie theater owners, and one member of the television industry. Their findings and recommendations are to be reported to the 1983 General Assembly.

Dr. Lanier serves as chairman of the N.C. Library Association Intellectual Freedom Committee. He has traveled the state speaking on freedom of expression and the right of an individual to choose. He testified in Senate and House hearings in the spring in opposition to proposed legislation that could have subjected librarians to undue harassment or punitive action by would-be censors.

Baptists See Loss Of Church Independence

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While Baptist State Convention officials are pressing for centralization to help sagging collections, many members fear the move will compromise the independence of local churches. Some officials argue that local power over the purse strings hurts convention programs. This year, for example, convention officials expect to end up about $1 million short of their $19.3 million goal for state and national projects.

"We have exercised our freedom to excess," said the Rev. Cecil E. Sherman of Asheville, who stepped down as convention president last week. "We need to centralize more than we have, and some of them (church members) are not going to like it."

Those church members are vocal about their disdain for centralizing power.

"In the business world it would be called tampering," said the Rev. C.L. Capps of Greensboro. "We're going down the road of forgetting the autonomy of the church."

The Rev. Robert M. Tenery, one of the convention's leading conservatives, said, "the denomination has to prove the program so the Baptists in the local church believe in it enough to support it."

He and others say that withholding money is the best way local churches have to let the convention know they don't like its direction.

"The people in Raleigh sit up and take notice," Tenery said. "The signal is that we don't like the way they are going."

Because local Baptist churches are not bound to the convention, and the local church decides whom it will hire as pastor and how much money it will contribute to the convention, officials at the convention's annual meeting last week were preaching the gospel of unity.

Sherman, in his final speech as president, warned that the churches' constant bickering has hurt the convention because losers in the arguments are not giving as much money to convention programs.

"Our mission is of such magnitude that we simply do not have either the time or the place for continued disruptions that divide our fellowship and hinder our mission," said Dr. Cecil A. Ray of Raleigh, the convention's general secretary-treasurer.

The Rev. Frank R. Campbell of Statesville, newly elected convention president, said the Baptists were hurting themselves.

"We should let the leader lead us. Unless we are united and make the decision to work together, we can't achieve things," he said.

UNICEF Drive Was Success

Church Women United of Greenville says it has forwarded a check for $1,083.86 to the U.S. Committee for UNICEF, as a result of money raised by its door-to-door trick-or-treat drive to benefit UNICEF.

"The money we send will enable UNICEF to expand its assistance to suffering children in Asia, Africa and Latin America," Mrs. Mary Grier, chairman of the local drive, said, adding that she thanks the residents of Greenville and the organizations who helped with solicitation for their support of the project.

Set Contest In Bundles

The fourth annual "Most Perfect Bundle of Tobacco Contest" sponsored by the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival will be held during the festival, Nov. 13-19.

Commissioners of agriculture in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia and Florida will have participants competing in the contest. Official bundles entered by each state will be judged by a panel of tobacco experts and cash prizes will be awarded at the Commissioner's Luncheon on Nov. 19.

The contest provides for nine winning entries from three categories. The entries will represent a cross-section of the entire flue-cured crop. Prizes will be provided by Branch Bank and Trust Co.

Graham announced that he expects wide participation in this contest by North Carolina Tobacco Farmers.

Thomas Jones, chairman of the event, stated, "The bundle is an integral part of the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival. The goal is to recognize the fine quality of tobacco which is grown in the five Southern states. This contest will enable our tobacco farmers to display their finest wares."

Sierra Club Meets

Ann Hooper, founder and president of the Carteret County Crossroads, will speak to the Greenville Sierra Club at a meeting tonight at the First Presbyterian Church at 14th and Elm streets, beginning at 8 p.m.

The meeting will be open to the public. Ms. Hooper has led the citizen group's efforts to block further development of coal-export facilities in Carteret County until an environmental study of their impact on the area has been made.

Crossroads was founded about a year ago in response to area residents' fear of water and air pollution in the Morehead-Beaufort region due to the transport and stockpiling of large amounts of coal. Currently, the Alla-Ohio Co. is the only exporter of coal through the Morehead port, but several other firms have expressed interest.

Ms. Hooper's talk will deal with the activity of Crossroads in seeking state and Corps of Engineers' intervention against further coal stockpiling in the harbor until an environmental impact study has been performed. She will also discuss the effects of coal-train traffic through the area.

A SINCERE THANKS
To all citizens and to my friends

I am eternally grateful to every one for your wonderful support prayerfully, intellectually, and financially, through my candidacy for the election for city council.

My effort was not a worthless one because there were numerous lessons learned that were beneficial to me.

I shall remain loyal to our city's government.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market surrendered some early gains and turned mixed today as a lower prime lending rate was tempered by more evidence the economy has slid into recession.

But utility stocks, sensitive to interest-rate changes because of their heavy borrowing needs, were active gainers.

The Dow Jones averages were mixed. The measure of 30 industrial stocks, which fell 6.66 points Friday and ended last week off 0.10 point after a strong start, was down another 1.04 to 851.41 today at noon EST.

The Dow Jones transportation index also was off slightly but its utilities and 65-stocks measures were higher.

Advances led declines by slightly more than 7 to 6 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Suspect Gang Seeks Revenge

CLEVELAND (AP) — When members of the Hell's Angels motorcycle gang twice descended on northeast Ohio recently, law enforcement officials had their eyes and ears open.

Gang members arrived for a funeral of one of their own last week and again recently for a meeting.

Among those at the recent meeting at the Hell's Angels clubhouse was Ralph "Sonny" Barger, reputed head of the gang nationwide, according to a report by The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer.

The newspaper reported that federal and local law enforcement authorities said the gang might have met to plan retaliation for two members murdered six weeks ago in North Carolina.

A police investigator in Cleveland, the newspaper reported, said the gang probably also discussed expansion by a rival gang, The Outlaws.

"The Outlaws have been expanding by merging with other clubs," the unidentified investigative source said. "This makes them more powerful. I believe the two gangs are at war. The Angels may have been deciding what groups they might merge with."

Law enforcement officials believe that the gang has evolved into an underworld crime organization with a national treasury of $2.7 million, the newspaper reported.

On Friday, local and national Hell's Angels gathered at a funeral home in Mentor, east of Cleveland, to bury gang member George Rothrock. The 38-year-old Rothrock, of Euclid, another Cleveland suburb, was fatally shot Monday in an argument.

The gang members rode their motorcycles two-by-two through town to Mentor Cemetery, with local police, FBI agents and others in law enforcement on hand.

With the two recent gang activities in northeast Ohio, the Plain Dealer contacted Barger and published portions of a telephone interview.

Barger denied allegations that the Hell's Angels now have a national crime organization. He said he lives in a $25,000 house in Oakland after serving time in jail twice — once for possession of marijuana and once for racketeering.

"Yes, I feel we are getting a bad rap, because you know as well as I do that we couldn't be committing all those crimes they say we are committing," Barger told the newspaper.

More Banks Trim Their Prime Rate

NEW YORK (AP) — Three more major banks lowered their prime lending rates today by one-half percentage point to 17 percent.

Chase Manhattan Bank of New York, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, No. 5 Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and No. 14 Marine Midland Bank of Buffalo, N.Y., matched the reduction initiated last Thursday by No. 6 Chemical Bank of New York. Continental Illinois National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, the seventh largest bank, and No. 9 First National Bank of Chicago went to 17 percent Friday.

The prime rate, which peaked at 21.5 percent last December, is the base upon which banks compute interest charges on short-term loans to their most credit-worthy corporate customers. Although it is not directly tied to consumer loans, it does serve as an indicator of interest rate trends.

The 17 percent prime rate is the lowest since last March.

At that time, speculation was widespread that the key interest rate would decline further, but instead it rose sharply to 20.5 percent in July, a level that prevailed until early September amid a substantial clamping down on growth of the nation's money supply by the Federal Reserve Board.

However, the prime has been falling in recent weeks because other key short-term interest rates have declined, making banks' costs of obtaining funds for lending less expensive.

For example, the rate on federal funds — overnight loans of uncommitted reserves among banks, transactions typically involving billions of dollars a day — were trading at 13.25 percent. As recently as last Wednesday, the funds traded at 16 percent. And in early July, the interest on federal funds averaged nearly 20 percent.

Many bankers and money market economists also predict the prime will fall further in the weeks ahead because of the decline in banks' cost of funds and falling loan demand.

In addition, the slowing national economy is seen as easing credit demands by businesses forced to cut back operations, which also could allow rates to fall.

Asks A Deposit For Weddings
PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — When a man or woman is "stupid" at the altar, the price is usually emotional suffering.

But for an Anglican vicar, the no-shows translate into a loss of income.

So Rev. Samuel Philpott has started demanding a deposit equivalent to $33.27 for would-be brides and grooms. Philpott said couples with second thoughts have left him standing at the altar too often.

Even bargain offers fail. Philpott says he agreed to do a wedding for free because the bride was pregnant and short of money.

"I waited around for ages and realized they weren't going to show," he said.

Arrest Driver With Marijuana

MIAMI (AP) — Whoever stole seven reptiles from the Crandon Park Zoo did it very carefully because the mix of two of the animals — a Mexican bearded lizard — can kill, authorities said.

The lizards and five boa constrictors were taken from the zoo's reptile house sometime Friday night or early Saturday while the zoo was closed, police said Saturday. Zoo officials estimated the animals were worth about $5,200.

Very Carefully Stole Reptiles

SIoux Falls, S.D. (AP) — Six inmates have been charged with attempted murder following an hour-long disturbance at South Dakota penitentiary in which 10 guards were wounded by prisoners wielding clubs and chains.

Five guards were hospitalized suffering from stab wounds. Prison officials said the other officers injured were treated and released following Saturday's melee.

Warden Herman Solem said the incident involved from 20 to 40 inmates wielding homemade knives, chains and clubs. Inmates remained locked in their cells Sunday, he said.

Wrecks Injured Three

TWO INJURED ... Jeffery Butler McIntyre of Route 1, Battleboro, the driver of this car, and a passenger in the vehicle were injured when the car overturned on Tenth Street about 3:26 a.m. Sunday. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Three persons were reported injured and an estimated $2,000 property damage set in a series of three collisions investigated by Greenville Police.

Officers said Jeffery Butler McIntyre of Route 1, Battleboro, and a passenger in the car he was driving were injured when the vehicle overturned on Tenth Street at the Brownlea Drive intersection about 3:26 a.m. Damage to the car was estimated at $2,000.

Cars driven by Robert Earl Butler Jr. of Route 1, Winterville, and Marcia Elizabeth Reed of College View Apts., collided about 10:25 a.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the Butler car and $500 damage to the Reed vehicle.

Officers said 14-year-old Phillip Aronson of 107 S. Harding St. was injured when the bicycle he was riding collided with a car driven by Nancy Lewis East. about 2:20 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Oak Streets.

Officers, who said investigation of the mishap is continuing, listed no damage for either vehicle.

Court To Rule On Boycott Damages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether the NAACP can be held financially accountable for a boycott of white-owned businesses in Port Gibson, Miss., during the civil rights struggles of the 1960s.

The justices said they will review a ruling that the group and 91 individual blacks must pay for the merchants' losses.

The latest ruling, issued by the Mississippi Supreme Court on last Dec. 10, sent the case back to a trial court for a determination of the amount of damages.

The state's highest court found that a $1.25 million award made by a trial court was excessive. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had said an award that size would threaten it with financial disaster.

Charles E. Carter, an NAACP lawyer, said in a telephone interview that under limits set by the Mississippi Supreme Court, merchants or it will be so minimal that it won't be anywhere near the $1.25 million.

Name Change Is Approved

At the October meeting of the Pitt County Epilepsy Association the group voted unanimously to change its name to the Coastal Plains Chapter of the Epilepsy Association of North Carolina (E.A.N.C.).

The local group sought a name change to more accurately reflect the multi-county nature of its activities on behalf of persons with epilepsy. The Coastal Plains Chapter serves Pitt, Martin, Greene, Lenoir, Beaufort, Hyde, Craven, Washington, Tyrell, Dare, Bertie, Hertford, Gates, Perquimans, Pasquotank, Camden, and Currituck Counties.

The chapter headquarters will remain in Greenville. Anyone desiring information about the local group can contact the president, Scott Luce, at 752-7151 during the day, or 752-3769 in the evening.

All Savers at BB&T. Better than money market rates.

What makes our All Savers rate such a good deal—and, for many people, a better deal even than the money market certificate—is one simple fact: you'll get the first $1000 in interest free of all federal tax. In fact, if you file a joint return, you can get up to $2000 in tax-free interest.

With an initial deposit of $500 or more, you can lock this rate in for a whole year now with our one-year All Savers certificates. But hurry. The All Savers rate will change at the beginning of next month.

The yield of 10.77% is based on an annual rate of 10.272% compounded monthly with interest left on deposit until maturity. You will lose tax benefits if you withdraw your money early or use your certificate as security for a loan. There is a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

Nobody works harder for your money. BB&T

San Fran Wins 7th Straight; Saints Upset Rams

By The Associated Press
San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh may wind up with ulcers as his 49ers continue to add to their winning streak.

The 49ers won their seventh in a row in the National Football League Sunday, 17-14, over the Atlanta Falcons. The victory gave San Francisco an 8-2 record and a three-game lead in the National Conference West over the Falcons and the Los Angeles Rams.

San Francisco's past three triumphs have been by three points over teams that once had little trouble with the 49ers, including Los Angeles by 20-17 and Pittsburgh by 17-14.

Sunday, Joe Montana threw two touchdown passes, and the 49ers held on by their toenails to win. It took an interception of a Steve Bartkowski pass by safety Dwight Hicks with one minute left to preserve the victory.

"Atlanta is as resourceful a team as you'll ever see," Walsh said. "I'm totally spent. Everything happened that could possibly happen."

Trailing 17-7 after a 3-yard TD pass from Montana to tight end Charlie Young midway in the final period, the Falcons stormed back. Bartkowski hit Alfred Jackson for a 25-yard touchdown with 1:43 left, and Atlanta's Kenny Johnson recovered the onside kick.

Bartkowski hit Alfred Jenkins with a 25-yarder that moved the ball to the 49ers 17, and the Atlanta quarterback then loaded up for tight end Junior Miller.

Hicks, however, made his second interception of the day, hauling down the pass at his own 5-yard line to halt the drive.

Bartkowski said he didn't spot Hicks until it was too late. "I didn't see Hicks out of the corner of my eye until I released the ball," Bartkowski said.

Hicks' first interception helped set up a 48-yard field goal by Ray Werschling that gave San Francisco a 10-0 halftime lead. The 49ers' other first-half score was on a 14-yard pass from Montana to Solomon.

Saints 21, Rams 13
The Rams lost for the third time in four weeks, the victim of the running of rookie George Rogers. Rogers gained 161 yards and scored three touchdowns. His rushing yards gave him 1,040 so far this season, the most in the league.

The Heisman Trophy winner from South Carolina scored on runs of 59, 5 and 2 yards, and led New Orleans to only their third victory this season, while the Rams dropped to 5-5.

Los Angeles led 10-0 on a 44-yard field goal by Frank Corral and a 26-yard pass from Dan Pastorini to Preston Dennard.

Broncos 23, Browns 20
Denver took advantage of losses by Kansas City and San Diego and a 30-yard field goal by Fred Steinfort 4:10 into overtime to move into sole possession of first place the AFC West Division. Denver now has a 7-3 record.

Steinfort, who has hit on just five of 15 attempts this season, got his chance after rookie cornerback Dennis Smith recovered a Cleveland fumble near midfield. Broncos quarterback Craig Morton then hit Rick Upchurch with a 33-yard pass that moved the ball to the Cleveland 20.

Matt Bahr kicked two Cleveland field goals, of 27 and 32 yards, in the final 4:18 of the game to forge a 20-20 tie and force the overtime.

Eagles 52, Cardinals 10
Philadelphia took over the top spot in the NFC East behind the throwing arm of Ron Jaworski, who passed for 235 yards, including four touchdowns.

Two of Jaworski's scoring strikes, covering distances of 14 and 38 yards, went to Harold Carmichael in the third quarter as the Eagles overcame a 10-7 deficit in the first half.

The Eagles completed the rout with fourth-quarter touchdowns by Billy Campbell, Wally Henry and Booker Russell.

Vikings 25, Bucs 10
Minnesota snapped a first-place tie with Tampa Bay in the NFC Central. Ted Brown ran for 129 yards and a touchdown, and Rick Danmeier kicked Tampa Bay, and the Vikings outscored the Buccaneers 205 yards to 43.

Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer passed 41 times, completing 24 for 228 yards and a 1-yard TD pass to Rickey Young.

Oilers 17, Raiders 16
Houston snapped a three-game losing streak with the help of reserve quarterback John Reaves, substituting for the injured Ken Stabler. Reaves threw a 25-yard touchdown pass to tight end Mike Barber on fourth down with 7:20 to play, and Toni

Bonnett Throttles Past Waltrip To Capture 500

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Neil Bonnett didn't really want to be in first place — until the end.

But the Hueytown, Ala., driver led 26 of the last 27 laps Sunday, holding off powerful challenges by Darrell Waltrip and Cale Yarborough to win the Atlanta Journal 500 Grand National stock car race at Atlanta International Raceway.

"I would have like to be in second place the last 10 laps," Bonnett explained. "Then I could have picked the time and place to make my move on Darrell at the end. It's usually easier to run second than first."

"But I looked in my mirror and I saw both of those guys back there, and they was giving each other hard signals. I knew one car couldn't get by my Ford. But two cars working together..."

Bonnett decided he'd better try to stay out front.

"I couldn't swap first for third, so when Darrell passed me (one lap from the end), I knew I had to go past him again right now."

"I went crazy into the first turn," Bonnett added with a shake of his head. "I didn't back off the throttle at all. It was the farthest I went into a corner all day, and I got back on the throttle quicker than I had all day."

The 35-year-old racer put his red and white Wood Brothers Thunderbird back on top in that turn and stayed there.

Waltrip, who lost his opportunity for a fifth straight victory, finished less than a car length behind. Yarborough was just off Waltrip's bumper at the end even though his car's engine blew on the last turn.

"Finishing second feels good to me," said Waltrip, who now has won 12 races and been a runnerup six times this season. "I was down a lap early in the race, but fortunately it was early enough to work hard and get that lap back."

"But Neil was just too strong for me on the straightaways."

Bobby Allison finished fourth, just ahead of Jody

Ridley, but lost another 15 points to Waltrip in their tense battle for the Winston Cup championship. Waltrip, now 83 points ahead, can clinch his first national driving title by finishing anywhere in the top 20 in the Grand National season finale two weeks from now at Riverside, Calif.

Yarborough, who had won the two previous Grand National races on Atlanta's 1.522-mile banked oval, was disappointed.

"I wasn't running for second," the three-time national champion said. "I felt I could take both of them on the last lap, because I knew they would get side-by-side. I was counting on them doing that coming off turn four."

"And it was close to that type of situation...it was perfect except when I hit the throttle all the way the engine let go."

Bonnett, winning his third race of the season and the 10th of his Grand National career, averaged 130.391 mph, said there also was an element of luck in the victory.

"I smelled smoke near the end, but I figured it was from the tires spinning coming off the turns. Then, when they rolled the car into Victory Lane, I noticed a huge gash in the right-rear tire. That danged thing was really flat."

Bonnett led 14 different times, pacing the field on 200 of the 368 laps in the race. His prize money of $31,500 included a special $10,000 award from Uno for leading the most laps.

"That was not an easy race in any way," Bonnett said. "The car ran just beautiful all day and I kept thinking I had the strongest car out there. But it seemed like when one bunch would have problems and fall off, another bunch would come on and give me a real run."

"I almost wore that thing out," he added with a grin. "I overused and abused that Ford, but there was still plenty left at the end."

There were seven caution flags in the race, most of them brought out by crashes, blown engines or a combination of the two. However, no injuries were reported.

Blown engines took out many of the top competitors.

Emory: Story Will Hurt Reputation, Recruiting

By The Associated Press
East Carolina football coach Ed Emory says the publication of a complaint by a former ECU player will unfairly damage the school's reputation and will hurt his recruiting efforts.

"I know the papers can't write good things all the time," said Emory in following ECU's 66-23 victory over East Tennessee State Saturday. "But they shouldn't pick up on something that is mostly hearsay."

The story, published last week in The Daily Reflector, was based on an interview with former Pirate receiver Larry O'Roark and centered on allegations by O'Roark that there was dissension and disrespect of Emory among the players.

Emory said he was unaware of impending publication of the story until a reporter "came over here and asked me if I wanted to defend myself."

Emory said the article was "the kind of story you can find on any team in America."

"It's important that people who cover football know the team concept," he said. "At least two-thirds of the players on a team are not playing regularly, and many of the players who quit do so because they aren't playing."

Emory said the wide circulation of the story received after being picked up and distributed by wire services will be damaging to ECU's recruiting efforts.

"We've been almost trouble free as far as adversity is concerned, but I pick up the Greensboro paper and I read that dissension is growing," he said. "That's where the trouble comes in."

"If the schools we compete against (in recruiting) do like they did last year, they'll use everything they can get their hands on to try to hurt us, whether it's factual or not, which I think is unethical," he said.

O'Roark, who transferred to ECU from Frostburg (Md.) State in 1980, left Frostburg's team on two occasions and had dropped football once before at ECU, according to Emory.

O'Roark, who started briefly at split end for the Pirates early in the season, had been relegated to reserve status before leaving the team in October, Emory said.

Emory said he had met with the team's seniors twice after the article was published and that "they feel like it has brought us closer together."

"I'll take some more adversity if it'll make us play like this," he said, referring to the victory over East Tennessee State.

The win evened the pirates' record at 5-5 and kept alive Emory's hopes of nailing down his first winning season after taking over the reins at his alma mater in the 1980 season.

East Carolina fans Saturday finally got a chance to see how it feels to be on the other side of the snowball.

After last year's game at Florida State, and this year's at Carolina, it was a welcome relief to get a chance to come out on the long end of the score.

East Carolina's Pirates, despite losing five of nine fumbles, were just too much for East Tennessee once the snowball started to roll.

A couple of fumbles by a punter who hasn't had problems all year, plus a snap over his head on another occasion gave the Pirates outstanding field position and they turned these into an unsurmountable lead.

And it wasn't that the Pirates were trying to run it up either. Coach Ed Emory used every player who was dressed for the game, as can be seen by the fact that nine different players were involved in the scoring.

It was a great day for kicker Chuck Bushbeck, too. Not only did he get a feature on ABC-TV's pre-game show prior to the Saturday doubleheader, but he kicked the opening field goal, then followed that with nine straight extra points, a new school record for single game PAT's. ABC, taken with Chuck's struggle to overcome Hodgkin's Disease, brought to light his field goal and later his new record during the day's broadcast.

Such will be good for the Pirates all across the country.

And those people who didn't show up a couple of Saturday's ago can look back on what they missed. Miami, which upset number one Penn State last week, downed favored Florida State this past Saturday, and will surely climb further up in the poles. One cannot forget that just two plays could have left Miami unbeaten and probably among the top three teams in the country.

Two area high schools will be moving into the state playoffs this Friday night, Rose and Ayden-Grifton. The Rampants, as the number two team in the Big East Conference and holding down the league's number two Division I spot, will be on the road throughout their venture into the playoffs. Such a role is not unfamiliar to them. Two years ago, when they advanced to the state finals, they traveled the same route, and back in 1975, when they won the state title, they went the same road.

Ayden-Grifton, meanwhile, will be on a road that will allow that school to host all four games, should it win its way into the state finals.

Both schools deserve the support of their areas, and are to be congratulated for gaining the playoff berths.

Paterno Gets 'Kick' Out Of Narrow Win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Joe Paterno got a kick out of watching his 6th-ranked Penn State football team knock off upset-minded North Carolina State 22-15 Saturday. But it was a kick he didn't get that pleased him most.

Trailing 9-7 in the third quarter and facing a fourth-and-four on its own 49, Paterno called for a fake punt.

The ball was snapped to Ken Kelley instead of punter Ralph Giacomarro. Kelley lofted a pass to Harry Hamilton who converted the 6-yard wobble into a 51-yard touchdown.

"We've taught that for a year and a half," Paterno said. "That guy (defensive end Frank Bush) was getting so close to blocking it that I thought if we're ever going to use it, we better use it today."

Paterno's Nittany Lions did get a couple kicks themselves, twice blocking attempted punts by the Wolfpack. One bounced out of the end zone for a safety and the other was recovered at the Wolfpack 4 to set up the final touchdown.

Michel Skates To Two Firsts

WILSON — Angie Michel of Greenville won two firsts and teamed with Steve Whitley to capture another first in a Speed Skating Invitational this past weekend.

Michel was the first in the 1,000-meter and 500-meter races in the Junior Ladies Division. She then teamed with Whitley of Kinston to win the Senior 2 Mixed Relay.

In her final event of the day, Michel placed second in the Senior Ladies 3,000-meter open race.

Seventeen teams from the Southeastern Regional competed at the two-day meet which ended Sunday.

"They've had trouble with their punt protection and we've worked hard on our punt blocking," Paterno said, after his team boosted its record to 7-1.

"All year I've been worried about that part of our game," Paterno said. "You're always going to be in a game like this somewhere down the line and you're going to need something like that to win it for you. We worked awfully hard on that this week and the kids did a great job on it."

The Lions needed the added defense to make up for the absence of tailback Curt Warner, sidelined by an injury. Penn State gained only 95 yards rushing, far below its usual production.

"I think we have to start to evaluate the fact that we don't have one of the greatest players we have ever had playing for us — Curt Warner," Paterno said.

It was the fourth consecutive loss for N.C. State, 4-5. But Coach Monte Kiffin was not disillusioned.

"Look at the statistics," he said. "They rushed for 203 yards against one of the best defensive lines in America. No, we didn't win. But I feel, as a coach, I took it away from them."

"Our game plan was working. We were up 9-7 and had them fourth down, then the fake punt. The defense played well. They (Penn State) have a great offensive line, ask the pro scouts."

Wolfpack quarterback Ron Laraway, making his first collegiate start, did a good job directing the offense and freshman tailback Joe McIntosh rushed for 137 yards. He now has 1,051 yards and became only the 15th freshman in NCAA history to go over 1,000 yards in a season.

"We seem to find ways to lose," Kiffin said. "But, that was a good call by coach Paterno, a gutsy call."

Nets Down Pacers For First Victory

By The Associated Press

The National Basketball Association season started 10 days ago, but the New Jersey Nets were playing as if no one had told them.

Not until Sunday night did the Nets finally register their first victory of the season and it was naturally Coach Larry Brown's first NBA victory since he left the Denver Nuggets midway through the 1978-89 season.

"It was a long time coming," Brown said after New Jersey's 89-86 decision over the Indiana Pacers at the Meadowlands Arena, "and we did it in a strange way. We missed free throws and some easy shots, but we defended well down the stretch. It was kind of special to see the kids fight that way."

The game ended on a bizarre note. With the Nets leading 87-86 with 26 seconds remaining, Pacers Coach Jack McKinney told his team to let the Nets run out the 24-second clock, hoping to get the ball at midcourt with two seconds remaining. Instead, Don Buse fouled Mike Woodson with three seconds left.

Then, McKinney, last year's NBA coach of the year, used Indiana's last timeout before Woodson went to the foul line. Woodson hit both shots and the Pacers, without any timeouts left, had to inbound from the backcourt, rather than calling time and taking the ball from midcourt. They didn't get a shot off as time expired. Instead of explaining his strategy, McKinney scolded Buse for fouling Woodson.

"If they had done what I asked, if they held on just one more second, we would have had the ball," McKinney said.

Blazers 120, Nuggets 116
Calvin Natt and Billy Ray Bates combined for 26 points in the fourth quarter as the Trail Blazers kept right on rolling.

After trailing through most of the second and third quarters, the Blazers finally took the lead at 99-97 on a jump shot by Bates, who had 13 of his 16 points in the last quarter. Natt scored 13 of his team-leading 30 points in the final quarter.

Lakers 121, Mavericks 111

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 15 points to become the third-leading scorer in NBA history. Abdul-Jabbar reached his latest milestone on a tip-in with 4:24 remaining in the third quarter to pass John Havlicek of the Boston Celtics on the all-time NBA scoring list.

Only Wilt Chamberlain with 31,419 points and Oscar Robertson with 26,710 points now lead Abdul-Jabbar, who has 26,398 points.

NCSU Coach Valvano To Speak At Sports Club

Jim Valvano, the colorful and humorous N.C. State basketball coach, will be the featured speaker at the Greenville Sports Club tomorrow at noon at the Ramada Inn.

Valvano came to NCSU in March of 1980 from Iona College, where he coached for five seasons and had a record of 96-47.

Prior to coaching at Iona, Valvano was head coach at Bucknell and Johns Hopkins. At Johns Hopkins he coached the team to its first winning record in 24 years.

The Club's next meeting will be Nov. 24, when Duke coach Red Wilson will speak. Club dues are $30 a year and new members and visitors are welcome.

Tigers 1 From ACC Title

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Right now, Clemson is concerned about being No. 1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. If the Tigers accomplish that goal, Coach Danny Ford says that any higher objective "will take care of itself."

For the first time since 1958, the Clemson Tigers, ranked No. 2 in the nation, are 9-0. Their Atlantic Coast Conference record following Saturday's hard-hitting 10-8 triumph over eighth-ranked North Carolina is 5-0 and they can nail down the title with a victory or tie against Maryland at home next Saturday.

A tie, of course, would seriously impair Clemson's hopes for a national championship. "We don't deserve No. 1," Ford said, "because we didn't play well and we had way too many turnovers."

Actually, the Tigers only had one turnover — Billy Davis fumbled a punt that North Carolina recovered at the Clemson 37 with 10:44 left — but they fumbled — and recovered — three other times.

After Maryland, Clemson visits South Carolina for the traditional regular-season finale. Then it's time to go bowling, reported as of now to be the Orange Bowl.

Clemson's defensive effort after Davis' fumble was typical of the way Saturday's contest went. North Carolina's Kelvin Bryant, returning to action after missing four games with a knee injury, cracked the left side for four yards and then was stopped for no gain — the last of his 13 carries, which produced only 31 yards.

On third down, quarterback Scott Stankavage was sacked by nose guard William Perry for a 10-yard loss.

"I thought we played pretty good goal-line defense," Ford said, noting that Carolina had to settle for field goals after first downs at the Clemson 7- and 4-yard lines.

"We went after them pretty good. We put some pressure on them down deep. The defense was on the field a long time but they really rose to the occasion. The defense got the job done."

On the other hand, the offense didn't do much, but its only two sustained drives culminated in Jeff McCall's 7-yard second-period touchdown run — 81 yards in 14 plays — and Donald Igwebuik's 39-yard field goal in the third quarter after the Tigers marched from their 27 to the Carolina 17.

For North Carolina, 7-2 overall and 3-1 in ACC play, it was a case of what might have been had quarterback Rod Elkins not reinjured his ankle nor had Bryant, who began the season by scoring 15 touchdowns in three games, been anything remotely resembling his old self.

Fritsch's extra point gave Houston its victory.

The pass capped a 79-yard drive that included Reaves passes to rookie Mike Holston, Ken Burrough and Mike Renfro. Houston's Earl Campbell went over 1,000 yards, rushing for 97 yards and ending the game with 1,011 so far this season.

Dolphins 30, Patriots 27
Miami stayed on top of the AFC East Division with its victory over New England, earned when Uwe von Schamann kicked a 30-yard field goal with 7:09 elapsed in overtime. Linebacker Bob Brudpass at the New England 45-yard line and returned it to the 26.

The Patriots forced the overtime on a 34-yard field goal by John Smith with 10 seconds left in the fourth quarter.

Redskins 33, Lions 31
Mark Moseley's 44-yard field goal with 43 seconds left erased a 31-30 Detroit lead and gave Washington the victory. The field goal was Moseley's fourth of the game.

The Lions had taken the lead 1:07 earlier on a 50-yard field goal by Ed Murray, but quarterback Joe Theismann moved the Redskins into field goal position with three plays that covered 45 yards.

Joe Washington rushed for 144 yards and scored two Washington touchdowns.

Packers 26, Giants 24
Green Bay led 20-0 after the first quarter, then struggled to beat New York on Jan Stenerud's fourth field goal of the game, a 23-yarder with 2:36 to play.

The Giants had taken a 24-23 lead with 6:14 left on a 33-yard field goal by Joe Danelo.

Green Bay's first-quarter scoring included a 41-yard interception return by Estus Hood and a 94-yard punt return by Mark Lee.

Bears 16, Chiefs 13
John Roveto took advantage of a Kansas City penalty to kick a 22-yard, second-chance field goal with 1:53 left in overtime. Roveto missed his first attempt, a 37-yarder, but was awarded a second attempt when Kansas City's Gary Green was penalized for jumping onto the back of a Chicago player to try for the block.

The winning drive started when Chiefs quarterback Steve Fuller fumbled a snap, and Al Harris recovered on the Bears 36.

Jets 41, Colts 14
Richard Todd passed for 277 yards and three touchdowns as New York handed the Colts their ninth straight loss. Todd completed 21 of 31 pass attempts. His scoring passes were to Wesley Walker for 34 yards, Lam Jones for 25 yards and Kevin Long for 1 yard.

The Jets, who have won five of their last seven games, took a 17-14 lead on a 1-yard run by Mike Augustyniak in the second quarter.

Seahawks 24, Steelers 21
Theotis Brown's second 1-yard touchdown run was the winning score. Steelers kicker David Trout missed a 22-yard attempt with 19 seconds left that would have sent the game into overtime.

Jim Zorn kept alive a 64-yard drive with a 52-yard pass to Steve Largent, and Brown scored with 9:04 to play.

Pittsburgh's Franco Harris rushed for 61 yards, giving him 10,003 in his career. Only two other players, Jim Brown (12,312) and O.J. Simpson (11,236) have more.

Bengals 40, Chargers 17
Cincinnati dealt the Chargers their worst homefield loss since 1975, and Bengals cornerback Louis Breeden tied an NFL record with a 102-yard interception return for a touchdown.

Ken Anderson threw a pair of touchdown passes in the first half as the Bengals scored 31 points before intermission.

Breeden's long return tied a mark set in 1949 by Detroit's Bob Smith and since equalled by two other players.

To The Editor:
True ECU fans will support our teams against any opponent. What our program lacks are true fans. We have fans who will cut off their noses to spite their faces. You hear them say, "I don't like Emory, Brewer, etc., so I'm not going to support the team."

It seems to be their only visible means of striking back. This action is small and childish. They not only hurt the people they wish to hurt, they hurt our entire program.

To these "fans" I say, "Grow up, be responsible and support our program, and get to know our players one on one."

We have recruited a great group of young, talented athletes. These young men and women need and deserve a great deal more support and loyalty than they have received!

You, the fan, have one more game to prove something to the football fan and an entire season to prove something to our basketball teams.

Coaches come and go, but the fans remain. We fans can be a great asset to our entire program. Please stand up and be counted and...be counted on.

Dallas, Buffalo 'Duel' Tonight

IRVING, Texas (AP) - It will be dueling shotguns when the Dallas Cowboys and Buffalo Bills tangle tonight to try to keep pace in their respective National Football League divisions.

Both teams rely heavily on the Shotgun spread offense on obvious passing downs. Buffalo has studied the offense to the point where the Bills run it as effectively as the Cowboys, who began using it regularly eight years ago.

Buffalo is a game and a half behind Miami in the American Conference Eastern Division while Dallas must win to remain tied with the Philadelphia Eagles in the National Conference East.

The Cowboys rated a field goal favorite for the 8 p.m. CST kickoff in Texas Stadium before a soldout house of 65,000.

It's only the third meeting between the two teams and Dallas has won both outings, 49-37 in 1972 and 17-10 in 1976 when O.J. Simpson was still playing.

Dallas is 27-9 against American Conference teams while the Bills are 14-18-1 against National Conference foes.

Both teams have been poor

Monday night specials. Dallas is 9-9 while Buffalo is 3-5.

The Cowboys are 7-2 while the Bills are 6-3.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry and Buffalo Coach Chuck Knox have met five times when Knox was at Los Angeles. Landry was at Los Angeles. Landry has a 3-2 edge.

Knox put in the Shotgun offense after calling the Cowboys and asking for films if the formation. Landry said it was OK with him and shipped all Dallas' offensive films to Knox.

"They use the Shotgun exactly as we use it," said Dallas assistant Coach Ermal

Allen. "They looked at our films a long time. They'll even jump into the Shotgun on second down."

"We've made the yardage we needed out of the Shotgun 50 per cent of the time," Allen said.

There currently are 14 teams in the NFL using the Shotgun.

Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson has thrown 19 touchdown passes and completed 52.9 per cent of his passes.

He has been trapped just six times.

For the Cowboys, Danny White has thrown 11

Mr. Bill Creators Are Going To Court

By JANET McCONAUGHEY
Associated Press Writer
NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Mr. Bill is going to court, and for once it is his creators — not the clay character abused on "Saturday Night Live" — that are torn asunder.
U.S. District Court Judge Adrian Duplantier is to hear the copyright suit today without a jury.
Vance DeGeneres of New Orleans claims he and his one-time pal Walter Williams worked together to devise

Mr. Bill, his dog Spot, and the villains who do nasty things to the two: Mr. Sluggo and the pair of live human hands called Mr. Hands. Mr. Bill became popularized on the NBC-TV comedy series with his falsetto cries of "Oh, No!"
DeGeneres wants half the take from the "artistic property known as Mr. Bill" — at least $200,000 from a videotape, a book, and T-shirts.
Williams holds the copyright on the character, which was introduced on "Saturday Night Live" on Feb. 22, 1976.

He sued DeGeneres July 25, 1979, nine days after DeGeneres asked for an out-of-court settlement, and five days after a newspaper article about DeGeneres' claims appeared. It was followed by DeGeneres' countersuit, and a motion to move the suit to New Orleans because he was living as a $125-a-week, part-time disc jockey and rock musician.
Their two years of arguments — and those of David Derickson, who also claims a share of the pot for work on the films — make a six-inch stack of paper.

DeGeneres claims Mr. Bill was invented while he and Williams were playing with modeling clay.
"I created a comic head which was attached to a body Williams had formed, creating the character which was to become Mr. Bill. ... We both then developed his character and his personality and the premise that he is invariably victimized," he said in one legal paper.

"The idea of having a Mr. Hands character to victimize Mr. Bill was a joint creation. I, however, individually created his voice and personality modeled after Mr. Rogers, a personality on a public television children's program. ... After deciding that two characters would be too limiting, together Williams and I created Mr. Sluggo and Spot."
"As the popularity of our act grew, Williams, Derickson and I became known in New Orleans as 'The Mr. Bill Boys,'" he said. In November 1976 they quit their jobs, co-signed a $3,000 loan and moved to New York.

New York.
Williams said in an affidavit that DeGeneres brought his claims just before a new TV season began, a move "carefully calculated to inflict ... the greatest damage possible under the circumstances."
DeGeneres denied that.
"I merely made a statement which I believed and continue to believe to be true: that I am entitled to a return of some of the proceeds from the successful exploitation of 'The Mr. Bill Show' as I was co-creator of said artistic property," he said.

'Ned And Jack' Debuts Off Broadway For A Long Evening

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic
NEW YORK (AP) — The play starts on one night in 1922, in a New York penthouse. There, a rich, young, handsome and ailing playwright is heard to warn his Irish manservant:

"None of your little hints to Miss Barrymore about my condition. I don't want word of this to get back to Jack."
You suspect you're in for a long night. You are, at Sheldon Rosen's "Ned and Jack," bowing Sunday on Broadway. All it does is make you wonder why Colleen Dewhurst, a brilliant actress, decided to make her directing debut with it. It's a tableau of solid lead.

only bring in Barrymore's celebrated sister, Ethel (Barbara Sommers). She arrives, loaded with arch dialogue about theater and Jack, then withdraws to track down her brother.
You never see her again. After her exit, an ebullient Barrymore (Peter Michael Goetz) makes a dramatic entrance, clambering over Sheldon's balcony, bearing three bootleg jugs of Mumm's.
Clad in a raincoat, a battered hat and his Hamlet tights, he's in high spirits, up for a night of roistering after a long, debilitating bout of dryness in preparation for his major success as Hamlet.
He wants Ned to come out and play. His friend can't. So Barrymore shucks hat and coat, uncorks a bottle and away we go into an all-night bout of black humor, taunts, rampant self-doubt and manly affection.

one point, puckishly passing water, at Barrymore's instigation, from Sheldon's balcony.
But it's thin dramatic fare, made thinner by dialogue that often makes you wince — like the arthritic author's query of the boozing actor: "Why are you so afraid of my disease, Jack?"
(Jack's anguished reply: "Because you're my glue, Ned. How dare you let this happen to you!")
Goetz, whose Barrymore has most of the funny lines, makes the most of things with his rapid mood changes, a comical, self-mocking stentorian voice and the delicate walk of a drunk who's just warming up.
At times, he's a triumph of actor over play. Alas, Vickery, as the staff stiff, comes across as a start-to-finish bore. Miss Sommers and Sean Griffin (he plays the manservant) are to be pitied in their brief, nowhere roles.
Rookie director Dewhurst tries to keep things moving on James Leonard Joy's routine penthouse set, but "Ned and Jack" is a lost cause.
You'd be better off curling up with a good book. If you're in the mood for that, start curling with Gene Fowler's biography of Barrymore, "Good Night, Sweet Prince."

What it boils down to is a long revelation that each man, at the peak of success, knows he's helplessly watching his friend's decline — Ned into infirmity, Jack to an awaiting Hollywood career that will fritter away his talent and ultimately destroy him.
Back and forth they go, alternately bolstering and hurting each other, erupting in rage, then laughter, or, at 1 NT 2 ♥ ?

What action do you take?
A.—After an opponent has overcalled your partner's no trump opening bid, any simple action by you is competitive and doesn't promise much more than a reasonable five-card suit. So bid two spades. Had you wanted to force, you would either have to cue-bid the opponents' suit or jump the bidding.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
A.—You have a bare minimum opening bid, and partner's response has not improved your hand one iota. You should not take any voluntary action—even to rebid a good suit at such a low level—without something in reserve. Pass. Partner can reopen the auction if he has values.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A1065 ♥7 ♦8763 ♠Q962
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—A jump rebid of opener's original suit is not forcing. You have a dead minimum response, so there is no reason for you to bid again. And you shouldn't even think that there might be a better contract. Pass.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠84 ♥Q965 ♦K83 ♠AJ107
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 2 ♠ 4 ♥ Pass Pass 4 ♠ ?
What action do you take?
A.—Your hand is defensively oriented, and you already stretched your values slightly when you leaped to four hearts. Your minor-suit cards should be well placed behind declarer. Double. That warns partner not to bid five hearts and that you have the values to defeat four spades.

What other critics said:
Frank Rich of The New York Times: "In its Off Broadway production last spring... 'Ned and Jack' was a spirited and touching, if small and unformed, work that brought two quixotic heroes to life. In the Broadway version, the spark has dimmed."
Douglas Watt of the Daily News: "'Ned and Jack' is a wholly synthetic evening, a lifeless charade."

LMEZ WZZRX WRDL FSDJZQ
JZLLRZQ FSLSEMXL

Saturday's Cryptoquip — UNUSUALLY WILD DRIVER HAD FRIGHTFUL OVERSHOT ON DOG-LEG FAIRWAY.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: E equals R

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Believes Mission Was Near Success

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Retired Army Col. Charles Beckwith, commander of the aborted raid to free the American hostages in Iran, says only "two or three" people would have been hurt or killed if his mission had not been called off.

The April 1980 rescue attempt was scrubbed after three of the mission's helicopters developed mechanical problems. Eight Americans died when a transport plane and a helicopter collided while taking off from the desert 200 miles from Tehran.

"After the hostages got back, (we learned) where they all were and their activities, coupled with the security at the embassy. We would have done the job. Absolutely. We just didn't get there," Beckwith said.

"We would have had two or three people get hurt, maybe killed. But it would have been worth that, and human life is very, very precious," the 29-year Army veteran told the Austin American-Statesman in a recent interview.

Beckwith, who commanded Special Forces in Vietnam and was wounded there, now heads Security Assistance Service of Texas Ltd., an anti-terrorist consulting business he started last month.

Two former members of Delta Force, the hostage rescue team, and a former Secret Service agent work for him.

On his desk is a plaque that reads: "Kill 'em all. Let God sort 'em out."

FOCUS

Ben's Library

In the 18th century Philadelphia was the political and cultural capital of this country. One of its oldest institutions, the Library Company of Philadelphia, celebrated its 250th anniversary yesterday. The country's first circulating library and first museum, it was founded in 1731 by Benjamin Franklin. Similar libraries soon sprang up in the colonies and according to Franklin, "made the common Tradesmen and Farmers as intelligent as most Gentlemen from other countries." Among the Library's many homes were Independence and Carpenter's Halls. Its facilities were used by the First Continental Congress in 1774, by the signers of the Declaration of Independence in 1776 and by the Constitutional Convention in 1787.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the largest library in the world?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Wilt Chamberlain scored a record 100 points against New York in 1962.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, NOV. 10, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Conditions do not seem to be breaking as you would like and you are inclined to be in an argumentative mood. Strive for more harmony with co-workers to gain your objectives.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A higher-up is looking for someone to blame so be sure to stay out of this person's way. Strive for increased happiness.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Leaving present duties for something new is not wise at this time. Make the evening with congenial a happy one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good day to check your credit and to take care of important bills. Follow the good advice of a financial expert.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you keep your end of an agreement you've made with a friend. Making changes now is unwise.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Although you may be in a bad mood at this time with duties ahead of you, attend to them cheerfully for best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) It is best to attend to regular routines first before engaging in worthwhile recreation. Use common sense.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The situation improves at home but you still have to use more tact to gain your objectives. Don't neglect your health.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't be resentful if an associate wants you to do more work than you had expected. Sidestep any arguments.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Your ideas may not be as good as you think, so be careful in all your dealings. Relax at home tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Do not involve yourself in a civic matter at this time. Show more cooperation with associates and increase harmony.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You could feel hemmed in by circumstances beyond your control so do only those things that are within your power.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Look within yourself for answers you need to puzzling situations instead of relying so much on the ideas of others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be able to accomplish a great deal in public life once the personal motives are understood by others. Much ability at detail here which is the key to success. Teach to understand the true value of money.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Conservatives Campaign To Curb Federal Judges

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—New Right activists are mounting a campaign to curb the power of federal judges as a way of pressuring the judiciary and the Reagan administration into a more conservative role on social issues like busing, abortion and school prayer.

Newly prominent in Ronald Reagan's Washington, these conservative activists are joining allies in Congress in an open effort either to sway federal judges into reversing a series of decisions or to pry support from the administration for legislation to strip federal judges of power to rule on such issues.

Their efforts, coupled with other steps the administration has endorsed, comprise the most significant assault on federal court decisions since Franklin D. Roosevelt proposed packing the Supreme Court with additional justices after it rejected New Deal economic legislation.

The campaign will begin Nov. 19 with formal publication of "A Blueprint for Judicial Reform," 22 essays by scholars, state officials, activists and conservative Republican Sens. John P. East of North Carolina, Orrin Hatch of Utah, Charles Grassley of Iowa and Alan K. Simpson of Wyoming.

The book was produced by the Free Congress Research & Education Foundation, whose president, 39-year-old New Right activist Paul M. Weyrich, is a frank admirer of Roosevelt's effort. In an interview last week, he noted that after Roosevelt's bill failed, "the Supreme Court suddenly discovered a new interpretation which brought about that which he had wanted in the first place."

"Even if we do not succeed in changing the law or the Constitution, we will change the nature of the judiciary by making this a hot political issue," Weyrich said. He reasons that wide public discussion of ideas like reconfirming or electing federal judges or limiting their jurisdiction will make them "think twice about some of the decisions they have been coming up with."

Weyrich acknowledged that the social issues are too controversial for Congress to address head-on.

"The social issues have been dividing even conservatives, but the economic conservatives, the social conservatives, the defense conservatives and moderates and even some liberals don't like federal judges deciding those issues," Weyrich said. "They unite to agree that the courts have gone too far and that those issues are best handled at the state and local level."

Weyrich's effort comes at a time when there are 31 bills in Congress designed to strip either the Supreme Court or lower federal courts of power to rule on various social issues. The Reagan administration has taken no position on the bills, saying they raise thorny constitutional questions still being studied.

Meantime, top Reagan adviser Edwin Meese III told The Washington Post in July, "I personally have some real concerns about selectively cutting back on the authority of the court...That's a kind of a conflict between branches I would hope we would not get into."

The administration decided early on to postpone divisive fights over social issues until Congress completes work on its economic program.

Attorney General William French Smith said last week that "federal courts have gone far beyond their abilities" and "we believe that the groundswell of conservatism evidenced by the 1980 election makes this an especially appropriate time to urge upon the courts more principled bases that would diminish judicial activism."

The attorney general proposed appointing judges who would exercise restraint, supporting legislation to overturn specific court rulings and selecting cases for Justice Department involvement in which a philosophy of restraint could be argued.

But Weyrich said, "While I applaud what the attorney general is recommending, it will be a remedial step whereby they may end up with a problem just as bad as it was when they went into it, because they haven't attacked the root of the difficulty."

"My problem with the federal judiciary really stems from the isolation that they have once they get on a lifetime term and the fact that they are accountable to almost no one, because it's almost impossible to impeach a judge," Weyrich said.

Legislation to strip jurisdiction would return the issues to state judges, many of whom are elected and do not have life terms, Weyrich said.

"The people who have an investment in the status quo will never take these initiatives; they will always look at symptoms," Weyrich said. "My business is to light the fire. If you have a real prairie fire, some reform will be adopted, either self-imposed or imposed from the outside."

At the kickoff for the campaign, Weyrich will be joined by President Reagan's closest friend in the Senate, Nevada Republican Paul Laxalt.

Weyrich plans to open a dialogue on judicial power through the book, a second book next year on court criminal rulings and a conference next year of legislators, activists, scholars and administration figures. Another Weyrich group will push for congressional hearings.

Student Grouping Said Segregation

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—Administrators, teachers and students at Charlotte-Mecklenburg's 10 high schools say grouping students of equal academic abilities makes teaching and learning easier. But some critics claim the practice amounts to segregation.

"How can we think busing has benefited us when we bus (black) kids miles and miles away and then re-segregate them into skills classes," said Arthur Griffin, tutoring coordinator at Double Oaks Center and director of Fairview Homes Crime Prevention Program. He said the classrooms were increasingly separating blacks into basic classes while whites moved into advanced curricula.

"And it's worse if they stay in those classes," he added. "They get the label of being a skills student and being black." This year marks the first time since integration in 1970 that the schools have grouped students into slow, average and fast classes according to their academic achievements.

School officials have not yet determined whether the grouping has affected the racial balance of high school classes systemwide. But teachers acknowledge that racial imbalance appears to be present in at least some cases.

Independence High School, with a black student population of 27 percent, has a 12th-grade basic English class for slow readers that consists of 13 blacks and four whites. Meanwhile, the 11th-grade advanced English class has 29 whites and one black enrolled.

"We've never really had as heavily black or white classes as this year," said Missy Kozack, English department chairman and reading instructor at Independence.

The imbalance also is evident at Harding High School, where 50 percent of the students are black. One basic English class has about 15 blacks and three whites, while another has about 20 blacks and two whites.

Harding teacher Catherine Watermann said she favors the grouping "because my students seem to be more comfortable with other kids of about the same ability."

School Superintendent Jay Robinson this week said he is concerned about whether a substantial number of students are going to classes with others of their own race. Robinson said he thinks the grouping is good for teaching, but that he wants to ensure the program is carried out properly.

Superintendents and principals are being reminded to be sensitive to the problem, he said. "It's their responsibility to monitor this."

Although a date has not been set, administrators expect to make a class-by-class count this year for the federal Office of Civil Rights, which says individual classes should be within 20 percent above or below the school's total racial makeup.

Visualizes Cure By Hearing Aid

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP)—The weak, faltering voice often associated with the elderly can be rejuvenated with the help of a hearing aid, a Western Carolina University specialist says.

"I think geriatric voice syndrome is a reversible syndrome, not a curse one should have to live with," said Robert W. Teel Jr., a 37-year-old communication disorders specialist WCU's Speech and Hearing Center. "We should be able to remedy it with hearing aid amplification and voice training by a speech pathologist, and in some cases, by surgical intervention."

Teel said he based his findings on hearing and voice tests of 10 women and 10 men, ages 65 to 86, who were selected randomly from a group of elderly at a free hearing test.

He will present his findings at the International Congress on Aging beginning Nov. 12 in Besancon, France. Attending the four-day meeting will be more than 1,000 of the world's leading scientists, doctors and researchers in the field of aging.

In Teel's experiment, participants' voices were recorded as they read a 200-word passage, pronounced certain vowels and spoke spontaneously. The recordings were evaluated by Teel and a panel of four graduate students.

The results showed that 15 of the 20 people tested had geriatric voice syndrome and suffered moderate to severe hearing losses, three had normal hearing and their voices were described as either superior or inferior in quality, two suffered severe hearing losses and had voices rated as inferior.

Teel said he plans to conduct further research using a device that measures the energy level of voices electronically instead of relying on a subjective evaluation.

Teel became interested in language difficulties of the elderly after studying the effect of middle-ear hearing problems on children's speech.

"I just reversed my research and started looking at elderly persons instead of children," Teel said.

Now Teel urges people with the syndrome to try to improve their hearing by wearing hearing aids. But he said that advice is seldom adhered to.

"Unfortunately, there is a tremendous resistance in this country to wearing hearing aids. Only 5 percent of the elderly who need hearing aids wear them," he said, citing vanity, high costs and the improper fitting of hearing aids by some salesmen as reasons for the opposition.
