Utilities Will Cut Water Main Fees

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

In an effort to attract new customers and thereby reduce the required maintenance flushing of little-used water mains in areas outside the city limits, the Greenville Utilities Commission board Tuesday night approved a sort of "water sale" to begin Jan. 1 and run through June 30, 1982.

Actually the "sale" is a reduction in water main fees — from the present $4 per property-front footage to $1 — for the six months period.

The $1 main fee would be in effect for all applications for the six months period and the regular tapping fees ($220 for a 3/4 inch tap) will still apply.

GUC director Charles Horne, who said there are currently about 250 potential users that would be effected by the "sale", explained that "if we can get 30 to 40 new services under this plan, we could offset the loss of a full main fee with additional water revenue in one or two years."

"But the important thing ... is the better utilization of our mains, getting residents off of shallow, potentially hazardous wells and increasing our long term operating revenues."

Although no formal action was taken, GUC board members agreed in principal to pass on natural gas and electric refunds to customers in the form of billing credits in the coming months. Formal action on the amount of refunds is expected at the commission's December meeting.

Refunds totaling $411,000 have been received from N.C. Natural Gas Corp., the commission's natural gas supplier, in connection with rate cases rejected or amended by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission on rates charged NCNG by its supplier, Transco.

Horne said firm figures would be presented to the board next month, but suggested the billing credits be applied to January, February and March natural gas bills.

The commission has also received a refund of more than $4.72 million from Virginia Electric and Power Co. following settlement of Veeco's October 1978 wholesale electric rate increase.

Rather than pass on all of the Veeco refund to customers through billing credits, Horne suggested that approximately $2.8 million of the $4.71 million be used to purchase Veeco's Greenville Substation facilities.

The purchase of the substation, Horne said, will provide GUC with direct service from Carolina Power and Light Co.'s system as a part of the transfer agreement from Veeco to Municipal Power Agency 3, scheduled to take place in December. Such a move, he continued, will provide GUC customers with "immediate and long term lower power costs."

Horn explained that, with GUC owning the substation, any

Ignore Ability To Pay

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ninety-seven percent of delinquent taxpayers identified during a recent period were allowed to pay the government on the installment plan without having to prove they were short of cash, congressional auditors say.

The General Accounting Office estimated that 20 percent of the delinquent taxpayers were upper-income earners. Fifteen percent could have paid their federal taxes in full just from their savings accounts. In one case, the GAO said, "a taxpayer earning about $77,000 a year was granted an installment agreement for a $3,000 (tax) liability."

Many of those who claimed they didn't have the money on hand to pay their tax bills were enjoying such luxury items as boats, cable television, dancing lessons and maid service, GAO said.

Allowing a truly needy taxpayer to settle on the installment plan is acceptable, the GAO said in a report to Congress. But it added:

"Allowing the use of installment agreements without regard to the taxpayer's ability to pay is a significant change in tax collection procedures which gives delinquent taxpayers additional rights not given to the general taxpaying public. In effect, IRS is giving taxpayers an additional year or more to pay their taxes at a minimal cost."

After a taxpayer fails to respond to three IRS demands for payment, the agency generally will offer an installment plan.

Highlights Of President Reagan's Press Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, at a glance, are highlights of President Reagan's news conference Tuesday:

THE ECONOMY: "Hard Times"

"I think that we're going to have hard times in the next few months," the president said. "Our top priority has been to rescue this economy from years of government mismanagement.... Our program has only been in effect for some 40 days. And you can't cure 40 years of problems in that short time."

On the positive side, "We believe we've laid a firm foundation for economic recovery in 1982. We said we would cut taxes and we've enacted the biggest tax reductions in history.... We slowed the growth of federal spending. We cut the growth of regulations by a third. Interest rate and inflation are both heading down."

However, "I stand ready to veto any bill that abuses the limited resources of the taxpayers.... Fiscal '82 is already five weeks old, but I have not received a single regular appropriations bill. Most of the bills pending are over budget." It is "imperative that the Congress meet its own spending target...."

BALANCED BUDGET:

"Unlikelihood"
Reagan called his goal of balancing the federal budget by 1984 "an unlikelihood" because of continued high inflation. "I would hesitate to make...set a date when a balanced budget would take place."

LIMITED NUCLEAR WAR: "High Risk"

Limited nuclear would entail high risk, Reagan said, "there's no question of that." However, "I could see where both sides could still be deterred from going into the exchange of strategic weapons if there had been battlefield weapons, troop to troop."

Is there still a NATO contingency plan to fire a nuclear warning shot? "There seems to be some confusion as to whether that is still part of NATO strategy or not, and I've had no answer to that."

FOREIGN POLICY: "Not in Disarray"

"We are not in disarray as to foreign policy.... I have had 70 meetings with foreign leaders. We have a better rapport established now between the three North American countries than I believe we ever had; a strong relationship with allies in Europe."

Peace in the Middle East must be based on the U.S. Camp David plan, although a proposal by Saudi Arabia is good because it implies "recognition of Israel's right to exist as a nation."

In revolution-torn El Salvador, he is "hopeful still that we can bring about the idea of an election and a peaceful settlement.... The guerrillas have failed miserably in attempting to bring the population over on their side. The populace is still in support of the government."

MINORITY UNEMPLOYMENT: "Not New"

High unemployment among blacks and other minorities "is not new with this administration.... We think our economic program is designed to rectify over the long haul this problem that has been with us over the last 40 years.... Also, we are looking very seriously at the idea of urban renewal...enterprise zones to hit unemployment in our cities."

B-1 BOMBER: "Important"

The administration must go ahead with production of the B-1 bomber to replace the aging B-52 fleet, despite a congressional budget report that it might cost $39 billion, well above Pentagon estimates. "I believe that

Challenges U.S. Prove Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuban President Fidel Castro, in a letter to The Washington Post published today, challenged the United States to prove its charges about Cuban involvement in the fighting in El Salvador. Castro said that on Sept. 3, his government had publicly urged Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and the U.S. government "to offer one shred of evidence to back their slanderous assertions."

Dear Abby

Climate Isn't Right For Moves

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My problem concerns my 87-year-old mother and my 67-year-old husband. They hate each other. Mother lives alone in a home she owns in Palm Beach, Fla. (Dad died four years ago.) Mother keeps writing that she's lonesome, wants to sell her house and come to live with George and me in Tucson. George says, "Absolutely not!" He usually has the last word, but I'm still working on him. I can't go to visit my mother because I can't leave George for an overnight trip. He's not well and he needs me all the time.

Mother's widowed 82-year-old sister lives alone in Wisconsin. Aunt Ida wants Mother to come and live with her, but Mother says it's too cold in Wisconsin. Mother wants Aunt Ida to move in with her, but Aunt Ida says it's too hot in Florida.

I suggested that Mother hire a companion to live with her, but she says she can't find anyone. She refuses to consider a retirement home because "old people" bore her. Can you help me?"

MOTHER TROUBLE

DEAR TROUBLE: Older people are usually happier in their own familiar surroundings, so quit working on George to try to coexist with your mother.

Arrange to have someone look after George and go to visit your mother for a week or two. There are some fine senior citizens' assistance groups in the Palm Beach area. Contact one and find a compatible live-in companion for your mother. Nothing is impossible if you try. Good luck.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is not unique. Several of my friends face the same situation, so you'll be helping more than just me if you answer this in your column.

I am in my late 20s and I am gay. My appearance is strictly straight and I keep my sexual preference to myself. My problem is that everyone I know — family, friends, fellow employees and even neighbors — are forever trying to fix me up with a "nice woman." I am hounded to death with these offers. I have run out of excuses.

Being a closet gay is difficult enough to handle without all these well-meaning fixer-uppers. How can I get everyone off my back without admitting my sexual preference?

GAY AND HAPPY

DEAR GAY: You are not obligated to explain why you're not interested in being fixed up — just say, "No thanks. I'll find my own." Period.

***

DEAR ABBY: How can a mother comment on the condition of a married daughter's home without hurting her or causing a rift? She is 27.

Two years ago our daughter was married. They furnished their home with cast-offs from me and her husband's parents, and every time we visit we are appalled at the way they live: sparsely furnished rooms, cluttered and not too clean.

They both work and their combined incomes are sufficient for them to add some new furniture, but apparently it never enters their minds. I believe she thinks because she's working she's not expected to keep her home in order.

I worked too, but I always came home to care for our home and a family of four.

My daughter has relatives and friends her age who do not live as she does. I'd so appreciate your help. (I can't believe I'm writing this.)

The Need Is Urgent

Once again a car and train have collided at the intersection of the Southern Railway tracks and a rural road east of Greenville. And another life is lost in a grinding crash of a massive train and a relatively puny automobile.

It happened again recently when a car and train collided on rural road 1728 near U.S. 264. The car was demolished and the driver died.

It has been happening as long as there have been railroads and autos. The roads have to cross the tracks and sooner or later a collision occurs. Fortunately in modern times railroad protection devices have been developed... blinking lights, cross arms or even overpasses on heavily traveled stretches.

Of course, it is too expensive to guard every crossing but protection can be provided where it is most needed. Now the question is, where is the need the most? Traffic counts don't always tell the story. The amount of train traffic is important, too.

The Southern tracks through Greenville are far busier than they once were. There was a time when only a few trains each day moved on the tracks. Now at times they are almost hourly. In addition to the Southern runs the track is now used by Seaboard Coastline. Coal trains are moving regularly and the prospects are for even more trains.

The railroads have to use their tracks, of course, but there is no reason why grade crossings shouldn't be protected with signals if the rail traffic is to be that heavy. The regular slaughter at rail crossings in Pitt County is proof enough that the need is urgent.

Protect Integrity of Bidding

Bid rigging allegations arose this week with charges being brought against nine electrical contracting firms and 10 executives by a grand jury in Wilson County.

The charges involved the 1978 bidding on the East Carolina University Medical School Brody Building now under construction at the Pitt County Memorial Hospital complex.

The construction bid rigging charges follow an investigation of highway bid-rigging in North Carolina.

The investigations should be pursued vigorously. The bidding system was designed to obtain the best possible prices for highway and other construction to the benefit of those who pay their taxes. The integrity of the bidding system must be protected.

THIS AFTERNOON

Cable Stretching

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Far more than half the homes in North Carolina are presently being left out of the communications revolution swirling about cable television.

If you live in the country — or even just the suburbs in many sections of the state — you can't hook on to the cable.

That situation is changing rapidly, however, as cable becomes more than simply a way to get a decent television signal to places hard to reach by over-the-air transmissions.

Communication satellites have changed things wonderfully in just the past five years: there are all-news channels, all-sports channels; movies all day and all night; local channels, and so on.

In the next five years more is in store: shopping at home and ordering goods via two-way cable hookups; home burglar alarms; linkups with computers for business or entertainment; classrooms and job training programs at home.

Still further along, but still definitely in sight, will be home delivery of print-out information, even the daily news; active participation in seminars and debates from the family room; possibly even voting on issues or candidates.

DISHES
Those big dishes are becoming a common sight down by the local newspaper office; at the telephone company; over at the cablevision office. The satellite at which those dishes are permanently aimed has brought about the big communication revolution across the country.

Circling the globe so they remain always in the same position relative to a given point in your hometown, the satellites can carry dozens of broadcast messages. Your local cable company picks and chooses and buys the ones they will put on the line to your home.

Almost every North Carolina municipality with more than a couple of thousand people has the cable, now. Modern installations offer up to 35 active channels. Some communities will have only the 12-channel system originally installed.

But so far the action has been in the towns where the population density satisfies the cable company economic demand for some 35 houses per mile of cable to make the sizable investment profitable.

Town governments have been awarding franchises, collecting fees, pushing for service area and channel expansion, and generally plowing new legal and technical ground as this new industry grew from its infancy.

Now, it is county government's turn to start trying to learn the technological ropes of cable television. As Grainger R. Barrett, a specialist in local government administration with the Institute of Government puts it: "Improved

Other Editors Say Exports Are Vital

(Henderson Dispatch)

With an expanding cigarette market overseas, United States tobacco manufacturers exported a record $1.18 billion in tobacco products during the year ending June 30, 1981, according to figures just released. In addition, United States leaf exporters sold and shipped another $1.25 billion of unmanufactured leaf.

Combining both manufactured and leaf tobacco, total U.S. exports reached $2.43 billion, or three percent above the 1979-80 total.

Sales in such proportions did not simply grow by accident. While American flue-cured tobacco generally is regarded as the world's standard in quality, steady development of the export market required, along with high-quality leaf a broadly-based effort in sales promotion and cooperation with foreign customers.

For example, one of the leaders in the industry in sales promotion is the Tobacco Associates, Inc., organization, the agency representing growers in their self-assessment program for promotion of flue-cured tobacco. The agency is based in Raleigh.

Tobacco Associates works in a number of ways. One of those methods is illustrated by the recent visits to flue-cured tobacco producing areas, under auspices of the agency, of several high officials in the Thailand Tobacco Monopoly.

Thailand is one of America's most loyal leaf customers and ranks as our seventh largest foreign customer. That nation purchased over 15 million pounds of flue-cured tobacco last year. The Thailand enterprise, described as the leading profit-making enterprise among all of Thailand's 75 government enterprises, has been trying to meet the demand of that nation's population for cigarettes containing significant quantities of American-grown, flue-cured tobacco.

With increased prices, industry leaders are saying the 1981-82 sales for the export trade will probably top the record $2.43 billion of last year.

Growers should therefore keep in mind that some 50 percent of the flue cured crop goes to the export market. It is urgent that producers continue to pay special attention to their crops to place clean, uniform and sound quality tobacco on the warehouse floors. That is the best way to assure retention of America's share in exports on the world market.

FALLING IN LOVE WITH GOD

"Getting religion" is more akin to falling in love than to anything else. The people who suddenly light upon what our Lord called the pearl of great price, who find heaviness of heart supplanted by joy, and the slavery of degrading habits succeeded by true spiritual liberty, are like people who suddenly encounter someone who fulfills every need in life and releases every pent up spring of joy. Religion can be truly defined as discovering God and falling in love with Him.

St. Francis of Assisi did this. He was a worldly, pleasure-loving youth until one day God touched his heart with a new experience. John Wesley experienced this when at a Mravian prayer meeting in England he felt his heart strangely warmed and went forth to exert such a tremendous influence over the British people.

The Bible tells us that God is love. To know Him is to fall in love with something greater and more significant than the universe itself. — Elisha Douglass

King Naban of New Gurdy stepped out of the helicopter on the White House lawn and shook hands with the President of the United States. Four cannons fired off a 21-gun salute.

"Thank you, Mr. President, for that wonderful salute. What kind of cannons are they?"

The President looked to his military aide. "A hundred and five millimeters, sir," the aide whispered.

"Would you like one?" the President asked the King.

"I'd rather have 200 ground-to-ground missile launchers — if it's all the same to you," the King said.

"I'll talk to Cap Weinberger about it. Will you join me while we play your national anthem?"

"Just a minute, I want to write down the name of the U.S. Marine helicopter I just flew in on. We could use some of those."

"We don't have too many in stock now, your highness."

"We'll take what you've got, and you can send us the rest later."

"Couldn't we wait until the welcoming ceremonies are

"How much do they cost?"

"They're not for sale, your highness. We just made a special exception in the case of the Saudis, because they've kept the price of oil down in OPEC."

"Then how come they raised it two dollars a barrel, and cut back production the day after you persuaded the Senate to give them the AWACS?"

"I'm sorry. I have to come to attention. They're playing the 'Star Spangled Banner.'"

"That's no excuse. We're your friends too. But if we don't get AWACS, my people will think we're being treated as third-rate power."

"The AWACS is overrated, your highness."

"Then how come you made such a big deal of it in Congress?"

"It was a question of pride with the Saudis. Had we refused to sell them, they would have lost face in the Arab world."

"And you don't believe it's a question of face with my government if you refuse to sell them to me?"

"Your highness, if we sell AWACS to every country, the Saudis will decide they're not worth much, and then we'll have to give them something else that nobody in the Middle East has."

"You always liked the King of Saudi Arabia more than you liked me."

"That isn't true, your highness. Didn't we give you 50 F-4 fighter planes on your last visit?"

completed?"

"Of course. Forgive me."

"Nancy and I are honored you would take time out of your busy schedule to visit us."

"It's my pleasure. I was only saying to the Queen last week how much I was looking forward to coming to Washington and meeting the man who singlehandedly won the AWACS battle for Saudi Arabia."

"It was really nothing, your highness. The Saudis are our friends, and if anyone deserved AWACS, they did."

Unreliable As An Aide

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Growing suspicion that presidential counselor Edwin Meese III is as notoriously unreliable as Hamilton Jordan was in the Carter White House about returning telephone calls was confirmed by the recent experiences of Sen. Dan Quayle, a freshman Republican from Indiana.

Quayle, anxious to confer with Meese on the details of disbanding the Department of Education, spent a full 10 days trying to get President Reagan's No. 1 aide on the telephone. He did not even receive the courtesy of an apology, an increasingly common experience in Washington.

Democratic power broker Robert S. Strauss laughingly commented at a recent dinner party that he had been able to get presidents and their top aides on the telephone in administrations of both parties from John F. Kennedy up to the present, with two notable exceptions: his close colleague of Carter days, Hamilton Jordan, and his new friend, Ed Meese.

Goldwater Says Goodbye
In soliciting funds for his son's Senate campaign in California, Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona made an offhand disclosure that he will not seek a fifth six-year term in 1986.

"Because this is my last term in the United States Senate," he wrote, "Barry Goldwater Jr. may join me in the Senate and will carry on the name of Goldwater after I have retired." Goldwater had made no such previous announcement.

A footnote: Goldwater's appeal repeatedly talks about his son, a House member, opposing Democratic governor Edmund G. Brown Jr. ("the leading radical in the nation"). Nowhere does he indicate that Barry Jr. faces at least seven foes in the Republican primary, including incumbent Sen. S.I. Hayakawa.

Reagan Aide's Blunder

Presidential aide Rich Williamson's chances to replace the retiring Lyn Nofziger as White House political chief slumped when he intervened in the Nov. 3 Houston mayoral election without authorization from his superiors, who promptly repudiated his action.

The National Conservation Political Action Committee (NCPAC) had asked the White House to endorse Sheriff Jack Heard, a conservative Democrat, over City Controller Kathy Whitmire, a liberal Democrat. Nofziger's office refused on grounds there was a Republican in the race. NCPAC then went to Williamson, presidential assistant for intergovernmental affairs. He promptly denounced Whitmire as "quite liberal" and "not sympathetic to President Reagan's goals."

A footnote: One other celebrity possibility to oppose Sarbanes is out of the picture. Syndicated columnist George Will met recently with Maryland Republican State Chairman Allan Levey at Levey's request, but informed him he had no intention of running.

James Baker III, White House chief of staff, was stunned by this news when he visited his hometown of Houston the weekend before the election. A White House spokesman promptly repudiated Williamson's intervention (Whitmire finished far ahead of Heard in the first-stage election). Favored until now by Baker as first choice to replace Nofziger, Williamson has a host of enemies in the White House and among Reaganite grass roots politicians.

Self-Arm Twisting
Sen. William Cohen, under intense attack back home in Maine for capitulating to President Reagan on the AWACS sale to Saudi Arabia, in fact was not lobbied at all by the White House at the recommendation of Sen. John Tower.

Tower, who as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee has worked closely with Cohen on defense questions, cautioned White House aides to put no pressure at all on Billy Cohen if they wished to turn him around. That advice was followed to the letter.

Cohen's two private half-hour talks with Reagan were conducted at his request to discuss details of the AWACS sale. No aides were present, also at the senator's request. "I twisted my own arm," Cohen later told a friend, explaining he sought — and received — assurances from Reagan on the arms deal.

Ex-Hostage Candidate

Maryland Republican leaders think that ex-hostage Bruce Laingen, charge d'affaires in Tehran when the U.S. Embassy was occupied, might be the party's best bet against Democratic senator Paul Sarbanes but suspect he does not have the commitment to enter politics.

They note that Laingen, while privately expressing interest in the race, has not even begun to travel Maryland's boar roast and fried chicken circuit to touch politil bases. Currently serving as vice president of the National War College, Laingen was even reticent about appearing on a prime-time Baltimore television show commemorating the second anniversary of the Tehran embassy takeover. He worried that his political aspirations made such an appearance inappropriate, but was talked into going on the show anyway.

A footnote: One other celebrity possibility to oppose Sarbanes is out of the picture. Syndicated columnist George Will met recently with Maryland Republican State Chairman Allan Levey at Levey's request, but informed him he had no intention of running.

Too Much Bitter Medicine?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Supply-siders are discovering the danger of having promised so much, and in order to defend themselves they may have to remind Americans just how bad a mess it was that they inherited.

The patient, they are learning, may be unable to tolerate a sudden, huge dose of their lifesaving medicine, a phenomenon that seems to be as true in economics as sometimes it is in the world of medicine.

Even the most optimistic defenders of the new economics now concedes that the job of resurrecting the economy on a new, stronger foundation may take longer than was anticipated a few months ago.

Therefore, the need to defend themselves with a review of how bad things were, an endeavor in which they could use the perception of John Winthrop Wright, an investor, investment adviser and portfolio manager of many hundreds of millions of dollars for Wright Investors' Service.

Wright recently spoke at the fifth annual symposium on American capitalism at Fairfield University, Fairfield, Conn., observing that almost all major economic developments of recent years have been "unfortunately, overwhelmingly negative."

To begin with, he said, NATIONAL PRODUCTION has shrunk to 79 percent of capacity and is still declining, versus, a 1950-1969 average of 84 percent.

"Competitive free-enterprise innovation and price-cutting of small and medium businesses is being crushed under the weight of unupportable debt service and swept up to feed the 'growth' of corporate giants — domestic and foreign," said Wright.

NATIONAL PRODUCTIVITY, or real output per hour of all workers, which improved at an average of 3 percent a year from the 1950s to the 1960s, slowed to a 2.2 percent rate during the past decade, and has declined over the latest three years, Wright observed.

UNEMPLOYMENT, meanwhile, has grown to about 8 percent, "with a near-term prospect of one out of every 10 able-bodied and willing workers unable to find productive employment," he said. "The cost to our nation in lost production is many times our budget deficit."

REAL GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT, he pointed out, averaged an annual growth rate of just 3.1 percent during the 1970s, compared with 4.2 percent and 3.9 percent in the two preceding decades. It is now declining.

The same negative story, said Wright, pertains to INFLATION. The latest figures show it declining from its double-digit rates "as a result of interim stabilization of imported oil prices."

But Wright warned about getting too optimistic. "Since the high cost of borrowed capital is now, itself, a major component in the cost of everything, further substantial reductions will be slow unless there is a significant reduction in interest rates."

CONSUMEPISM, said Wright, took precedence over savings in the past two decades. In an effort to increase living standards, and then pay for inflation, Wright observed that Americans lowered their savings rate and raised more debt, while productive investments suffered.

Now, he said, we are seeing the rapid dismantling of the FINANCIAL STRUCTURE OF AMERICAN CAPITALISM, "once the world's most stable and effective system of independent, competitive, commercial banks, thrift institutions, insurance companies and investment firms."

It is, he argued, being converted to an international network of financial conglomerates in which distinctions "between consumers and creators of capital, and between lenders and users, domestic and foreign, are becoming blurred."

THE COST OF CAPITAL, said Wright, "no longer bears a reasonable relationship to its fundamental earning power." Until recent prime rate cuts, the real rate of interest was about 13 percent, "more than six times the 20-year 1950-1969 post-war average of 2 percent."

And finally, the FEDERAL BUDGET. "The increase in the government's annual interest costs are alone enough to account for the total current federal deficit," he told the audience.

Here, plainly to be seen, said Wright, is "the unprecedented diversion and dissipation of the nation's stock of capital from productive investment into unproductive and wasteful consumption."

It's a vast challenge for the suppliers, one they still may have to convince Americans they can handle, now that the withdrawal pains are becoming acute.

Armistice Day

On this date in 1918, WWI, the "War to End All Wars," ended. The war's destruction — 12 million military and perhaps 10 million civilian deaths and total costs of $337 billion dollars — is said to be seven times as great as in all 901 major wars back to 500 B.C. Germany was forced to admit total blame for the war, and surrendered 1/8 of its factories and all of its colonies as punishment. These terms were a festering sore to the Germans. When Hitler forced France to surrender in 1940, he insisted that his unconditional terms be signed in the same railroad car at the same site as the humiliating armistice of 1918.

Nurse Pay Increase Said Insufficient

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's public health and mental health nurses received pay increases from the state Personnel Commission Tuesday, but a nurse representative says the raises weren't enough.

Frances Miller, executive director of the North Carolina Nurses Association, said the association felt the commission's action "was a step in the right direction," but she said the revisions weren't enough.

"We've taken the position this fall ... that nurses employed by the state ... ought to have the salary grades elevated at at least three grades above what they are now to be competitive with community hospitals."

She said many of the community hospitals are starting nurses out at $8 an hour with no previous experience. "That's about $16,600 a year," Ms. Miller said.

"We did repeat our position (at Tuesday's hearing) that all of the nurses' positions should be upgraded even more so than what commission did today," Ms.

Miller said in a telephone interview.

The Personnel Commission also carried out action passed last month by the General Assembly in its special session. The commission approved the addition of a ninth pay level to the salary schedule for state workers who may be considered for a merit increase and approved a 5 percent increase into all steps of the salary schedule for state employees, effective Jan. 1.

technology, demographic trends, and the ability to extend into unincorporated areas from a town franchise have now made cable television possible for certain county areas."

Barrett takes care to specify "certain county areas" since his thoroughgoing review of cable in North Carolina recently published in "Popular Government" magazine which is printed periodically by the Institute of Government spells out in detail a variety of complications likely to result from cable growth into rural areas.

Above all, Barrett cautions, local county government officials should get busy now to get on top of the coming developments by learning the legal and technological details which will make dealing with the experts from the cable companies more profitable and more rewarding for citizens.

Given the high cost of installing the receivers, dishes, amplifiers, miles of cable and other equipment, Barrett notes that the first clashes will come when cable companies want to pick off the suburbs right next to town but run head on into lack of a franchise, or a franchise already granted a competing cable firm, or a city ordinance which says one company will serve an area annexed to the city but the county has a contract with a competing firm.

At the bottom of the problem, local and state law has grown up willy-nilly just as have the cable franchise areas and operating companies. Absence of clear definitions of uniform procedures make it critical that local governments keep service to residents at the top of the priorities in their dealing with cable.

$3.5 Million Re-Write Of King James

By TOM McCORD
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — After seven years of sifting through the thees and thous of the King James Bible, a team of scholars is winding up a $3.5 million effort to update the 370-year-old English in the world's best-selling book.

To be published next year, the New King James Bible is the biggest publishing venture ever undertaken by Thomas Nelson Inc., the world's largest Bible publisher, based in Nashville.

"We don't like the term 'revised,'" said Ed Liden, advertising director for Thomas Nelson. "We're calling it the New King James. It's not a translation, it's not a paraphrase."

The company says the upcoming edition is a reworking and updating of the 1611 "authorized" version of the Bible that for centuries has been quoted in Protestant cathedrals and churches.

"The goal was to maintain the majesty, the rhythm — all of the intangible quality of it, but still have it updated," Liden said.

The 27 New Testament books of the New King James already have been published, but the hardcover edition of the entire 66-book Protestant Bible will be out in August 1982, Liden said.

Supervising the New Testament scholars and assisting with Old Testament work was Dr. Arthur Farsted of Dallas, who taught Greek at Dallas Theological Seminary before resigning to work full time on the King James project.

Farsted said a guiding rule for scholars was to change the most famous passages the least.

So John 3:16 — perhaps the most well-known passage in the Bible — is similar in both editions:

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

Another example, he said, is the 23rd Psalm. "We left it almost intact. We even kept the word, 'yea.'"

"There are millions of people who love the King

James version, and want their kids to use it, but they get turned off to some of the archaic words," Farsted said.

An example of a word that needed changing, he said, is found in I Thessalonians 4:15, which, in the 1611 version, reads:

"For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep."

"Today, prevent means to stop," Farsted said, "but in 1611, it meant to go back."

To critics who say the reworking is too arbitrary, Farsted counters that the originators of the King James Bible did the same thing.

"The reason that version is such good English is that they did not do it by computer. We have followed in their steps, their tradition, which was variety," he said.

Liden said Thomas Nelson plans to aggressively market the New King James Bible, aiming at various denominations.

"It's a very competitive market," Liden said. "When you put $3.5 million to $4 million in a project, you want to tell your stockholders you're going to get it back."

The company must also convince traditionalists and liberals alike that the New King James is an updating, not a tampering.

Sentencing Controllers

ATLANTA (AP) — Sentencing has been set for Dec. 11 for four fired air traffic controllers who pleaded guilty to charges of violating a judge's back-to-work order.

The four controllers could get six months in jail and a $500 fine, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Howard J. Weintraub. However, jail terms are not expected since the Justice Department has announced it will not seek jail sentences for fired controllers.

John T. Devane, Henry R. Elliott, Phillip C. Jones and Jonathan Doyle White entered their guilty pleas Tuesday before U.S. Magistrate Joel M. Feldman on charges of violating his back-to-work order of Aug. 3.

In exchange for the pleas, the government agreed to drop felony charges of participating in a strike against the U.S. government, Weintraub said.

Weintraub, who prosecuted the case, called the plea agreement "the most equitable disposition of the case in light of all the surrounding circumstances."

The controllers pleaded guilty after Magistrate Owen Forrester ruled against their claim that they had been prosecuted selectively because they were vocal advocates of the nationwide strike.

Scouts To Camp Dec. 4-7

The Pitt District Fall Scout Camporee will be held Dec. 4-7 at the old TV tower site near Grifton, with registration beginning Nov. 20.

Registration forms and camporee booklets have been sent to all Scout troops in the Pitt District. Late registrations can be made at the camporee site. A canteen will be open throughout the weekend.

Scoutmaster Terry Payne and Ayden Scout Troop 34, hosts of the camporee, have scheduled registration, campsite selection and set-up on Friday afternoon. Saturday will be a full day of competitive events starting at 8:30 a.m. and ending at 3 p.m.

Parents of Scouts may attend a program Saturday at the camporee campfire beginning at 8 p.m. The camporee will end at noon Sunday after Worship Services and cleanup.

The sponsors have invited all Cub Scouts in the Pitt District to attend on Saturday. Each Cub should bring a bag lunch and a drink, and be accompanied by his Den Leader or parents. All Webelos also have been invited.

Sponsors of the camporee include WITN-TV, Coca-Cola Bottling Co. and Ayden Scout Troop 34. Support services are being provided by the National Guard units in Greenville and Kinston.

Questions regarding the camporee should be directed to Bob Moseley, Pitt District executive.

State Tourism Outlook Gloomy

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The future of tourism, one of North Carolina's top industries, depends on the state's willingness to pay for quality marketing, travel promoters say.

"We tout North Carolina as the variety vacationland," said James "Slug" Claiborne, president of Barclay Enterprises and owner of three restaurants and four cafeterias in Charlotte.

"We recognize the fact that tourism is one of the state's top industries. But the (North Carolina) Travel Council has failed to tell that to the politicians."

Claiborne said he supports passage by the General Assembly of an act enabling municipalities to collect a room tax, if voters approve it.

He said he prefers a local option over a statewide tax because Charlotte might not see much of the money if the state was to allocate it.

Charles Heatherly, state travel and tourism division director, said Monday that he hasn't taken a position on the tax. But with more money, he said, "We could do a far better job of promoting the state."

During a travel council convention this week in Charlotte, professionals said the long-range future of the industry was bleak. They said competition with other states, increasing energy shortages and new technology such as video communications will cut down on business travel and hurt travel and tourism.

Marshall Murdaugh, commissioner of the Virginia State Travel Service, said competition between states and regions will increase.

"Everybody's getting into the (travel promotions) ball game and the market hasn't grown that much."

He said the South is going to lose business to other regions if it doesn't do research to define its market and then find promotional dollars to pour into attracting tourists and other visitors.

H.A. "Humpty" Wheeler, president of Charlotte Motor Speedway, said he'd been outbid for attractions by Caesars Palace in Las Vegas twice this year. First, he bid $50,000 for a U.S. vs. the Soviet Union boxing tournament and was topped by a Caesars offer of $100,000. And then Caesars bid $125,000 on a daredevil motorcycle act on which Wheeler bid $55,000.

"If you're not unique, find something about you that is unique. Think big and promote big, and be aware of changing travel trends," he said.

Women's Club Plans Meeting

REGULATIONS GONE AWRY — Katie Beckett, 3 and a half, smiles from her Cedar Rapids, Iowa, hospital room Tuesday after being cited by President Reagan as an example of government regulations gone awry. Katie, who suffers from viral encephalitis, would receive better care at home, according to her doctors, but current Medicaid regulations would not pay for such treatment. ## Bridgeton Police Chief Is Arrested

BRIDGETON, N.C. (AP) — Bridgeton Police Chief Harley Ringer has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon and communicating threats.

Ringer was released on his own recognizance Tuesday after warrants were sworn out on him by two people.

Thomas Albert Barrow of Bridgeton alleged that Ringer tried to hit him with his car Sunday. His attorney said Barrow had had an earlier run-in with the police chief but would not elaborate.

On Monday, former town policeman C.M. Mike Futrell swore out a warrant against Ringer, charging that the police chief threatened him. Futrell said that Ringer stopped him on N.C. 55 outside the Bridgeton city limits Sunday evening and threatened to kill him.

Futrell was fired as a police officer by the Bridgeton town council Friday night because of a dispute between him and Ringer.

In addition to the two arrests, a civil lawsuit against Ringer has been brought by James L. and Alma Scott, seeking to collect $250,000 in damages stemming from an arrest last July.

They allege that Scott suffered a heart attack after

Ringer "arrested him to emotionally and physically upset him and his wife."

Futrell and several other residents have alleged that Ringer habitually uses more force than necessary to arrest suspects.

"I have seen Ringer take prisoners and harass them and push them around for no reason at all," Futrell wrote in a seven-page report to the town board, which was presented Oct. 5.

Asian Elephants In Survival Struggle

By JOHN LAIRD
Associated Press Writer
BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Southeast Asia's majestic elephant, which in centuries past carried kings and princes into battle, is now facing a battle for survival.

From Burma across to Vietnam, and south to Malaysia and Indonesia, elephant numbers dwindle each year.

Conservationists such as Thailand's Dr. Boonsong Lekagul put the greatest blame on relentless destruction of forests, but also point to incidences of elephants killed for their ivory, or even for food.

Decades of warfare in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos have depleted wild elephant populations. Although rarely caught in battle, elephants were affected by the by-products of war: famine, migrations of people and destruction of habitat through such military measures as defoliation.

In northern Malaysia and the Indonesian island of Sumatra, normally shy, wild elephants raid encroaching plantations — feeding off oil palms, sugar cane, banana and papaya trees, and bringing them into direct conflict with man.

Elephant numbers in the wild are hard to estimate, but the total of tame and wild elephants left in seven Southeast Asian countries may be fewer than 17,000, according to various estimates.

By contrast, one historical reference says that the ancient Cambodian empire, which at its peak about 700 years ago included large chunks of present-day Vietnam, Thailand and Laos, had more than 200,000 elephants.

Boonsong, who at 75 is the dean of Thailand's conservationists, said that the number of tame elephants in the kingdom drops every year. Last year there were 5,232 compared to 6,629 in 1977 and 13,397 in 1950.

He believes there are fewer wild elephants than tame ones. Their breeding rate is lower in captivity, and elephants continue to be captured.

"Wild elephants will be gone in 30 or not more than 40 years — except if they are given strong protection in national parks and reserves," he said. Most are now found along the Burmese border, in national parks and in the northern Petchabun Mountains.

Boonsong recalls that migrations of elephants from neighboring Burma and Cambodia, so common during the rainy season 15-20 years ago, are now rarely seen.

The Forestry Department in Rangoon, Burma's capital, says there are 4,000 tame elephants in Burma and about 3,000 wild ones. The latter figure is half that of 40 years ago. Most roam deep jungles in northern Kachin state.

Burmese forestry officials link the decline to a birth rate of 2.12 percent, compared to a death rate of 3.35 percent a year.

Tame elephants — some 2,500 owned by Burma's state timber corporation — are indispensable for hauling out felled teak logs from dense jungle.

Burmese officials say about 25 wild elephants are killed each year by ivory poachers. Illegal poaching is a relatively small problem in Thailand, too, because the Asian elephant has smaller tusks than its exploited African cousin.

Boonsong believes that killing for meat — even in Thailand's national parks — is worse.

"One village can use the meat for at least three or four months; much longer if it is dried," he said.

He fears that this practice has decimated smaller elephant populations in Cambodia, which faced famine in 1979 caused by political upheaval; and in Laos, an impoverished, food-deficit country.

Boonsong says he is alarmed by the reported use of toxic chemicals against anti-government guerrillas in Laos and Cambodia, saying this also threatens wildlife. He could not estimate the elephant population in Vietnam, but expresses a belief that it must have been seriously diminished by the destruction of large tracts of southern forest by the United States spraying of defoliants during the Indochina war in the 1960s and 1970s.

Wild elephants are protected in Malaysia, with only about 200-300 left. The problem is how to preserve them and stop them from raiding crops.

In July, marauding elephants destroyed 660 acres of young oil palm trees, worth about $250,000, on a large plantation.

Malaysia's Federal Land Development Authority estimates plantation damage at $22 million in the last decade. It is now experimenting with low-voltage electric fences to keep away elephants.

Indonesia's Sumatra is believed to have about 300 elephants — a fraction of previous centuries. There, the problem too is a conflict with planters, who have resettled from over-populated Java, and steadily encroached on the natural habitat.

Sumatra's best protected elephants are in national parks and reserves.

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA will not longer publish unclassified analyses for the public, including its widely read and controversial studies of international terrorism and estimates of future Soviet oil production, officials say.

The decision to stop publication was made to give agency analysts more time to produce intelligence reports for government officials and Congress and to help lower the agency's public profile, spokesman

Dale Peterson said Tuesday. Peterson said the agency will continue to publish statistical data on foreign governments and economic indicators because it is less time-consuming to produce unclassified versions of them.

The decision, made about three months ago but not publicly announced, stemmed from a review ordered last spring by CIA Director William J. Casey.

The public analytical reports began appearing in the late 1960s and grew in number under Casey's predecessor, Stansfield Turner. Peterson said they all were derived from classified reports for government officials.

"It took manpower to start with a classified report and try to produce something meaningful in an unclassified fashion," Peterson said. "In this administration, there was a conscious decision that our primary responsibility is to provide U.S. government policymakers with the best intelligence product we are capable of producing. When we looked at ways to do that, we saw that a lot of analysts' time was spent preparing these unclassified analytical pieces."

He said a secondary reason for the decision was Casey's view that "an intelligence agency should maintain a low profile."

The last terrorism report was produced earlier this year and contained a new definition of terrorism which increased the reported number of incidents.

The book-length report was virtually the only single source of data on trends in attacks on property versus those on individuals, on government officials versus those on businessmen and on the geographic incidence of attacks.

In 1977, the CIA predicted the Soviet Union would begin importing oil by 1985. After that view spawned sharp public debate, the agency revised that estimate earlier this year and forecast the Soviets would not be competing for Middle Eastern and other foreign oil during the 1980s.

The report had major implications for U.S. foreign policy. After the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan in 1979, administration officials cited the projected Soviet need for oil as an ulterior motive for moving Red Army troops closer to the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

Among the discontinued publications are the annual U.S.-Soviet Military Dollar-Cost Comparisons and the annual Communist Aid Activities in Non-Communist Less Developed Countries, Peterson said. Other analysis that will not be repeated include ones on the competitiveness of U.S. experts, on a European space vehicle, on difficult prospects for the steel industry in developed countries and on unemployment prospects in the western world.

The agency will continue its annual "World Factbook," which gives basic economic, political and geographic information on each nation, its annual 220-page "Handbook of Economic Statistics" giving worldwide trade, energy, employment and production figures and a series of wall charts and directories of foreign government officials.

Peterson said the agency had received "isolated, not extensive" complaints from scholars, businessmen and reporters over discontinuing specific analyses.

The publication review was disclosed last March at the same time the agency sharply curtailed backround briefings for journalists on foreign economic, political, scientific and military developments.

Found Innocent 2 Years Later

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Two years to the day after he was convicted of killing a highway patrolman and sentenced to die, Michael Linder was found innocent in a retrial and released. And he says that's just what a pastor said would happen.

The 26-year-old auto mechanic, found innocent Monday night, said Tuesday that a pastor came to his cell after his conviction and told him in two years he would be free.

Linder got a new trial on orders of the state Supreme Court, which said the trial judge refused to tell the jury that Linder could be found guilty of voluntary manslaughter and that the judge failed to poll jurors on the death sentence. The defense introduced new evidence in the second trial that the shooting was in self-defense, because the patrolman fired a shot.

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Opening statements scheduled for Thursday in the trial of a former Green Beret charged with attempted murder in the slaying of a Libyan dissident.

A jury was selected Tuesday to hear the case of Sgt. Gene Tafaya, 47, of Truth Consequences, N.M. He is charged with the slaying of Faisal Zagallai, a student at Colorado State University and an outspoken critic of Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

Reagan Declares Peace Is U.S. Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, denying there is any "bickering or backstabbing" among his foreign policy advisers, says exaggerated reports of dissension in the upper ranks of his administration are a disservice to the country, "We're a very happy group," he says.

But while saying news coverage last week stemming from an allegation by Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. "has been exaggerated out of all reality," Reagan acknowledged that there was "too much just loose talk going around."

On other points relating to foreign policy in his news conference Tuesday, the president:

—Said he stands behind a recent statement that it is possible a nuclear war could be confined to Europe.

—Praised one part of a Saudi Arabian Mideast peace plan which he said would recognize Israel's right to exist. That "is a hopeful sign," he said.

—Declined to clarify conflicting administration comments on whether a nuclear warning shot in Europe is a part of NATO's strategy in a conflict with the Soviet Union.

—Said the United States has no plans "for putting Americans in combat any place in the world," including Libya, Cuba and El Salvador. "Our goal is peace," he added.

Referring to the controversy arising from Haig's allegation that an unidentified White House aide was trying to discredit him, Reagan said, "There is no animus, personal animus, and there is no bickering or backstabbing going on. We're a very happy group."

He said Haig "has done a remarkable job as secretary of state" and his only problems seem to be because "I think sometimes that the District of Columbia is one gigantic ear" — a reference to The Washington Post's "Ear" gossip column.

The president said both reporters and administration officials should "recognize that every word that is uttered here in Washington winds up by way of ambassadors and embassies in all the other countries of the world."

"The picture that has been given of chaos and disarray is a disservice to the country and to other countries and allies as well," Reagan said. "We are not in disarray with regard to foreign policy."

He said his administration's foreign policy accomplishments "have been rather astounding," including 70 meetings with foreign leaders and progress toward peace in the Middle East.

The president did not back off a recent statement to a group of editors about the possibility of a limited nuclear war in Europe.

"I endorse only what I said; it was offered as a possibility and I think you'd have to still say that that possibility could take place," Reagan said.

He said he had told the editors "I could see where both sides could still be deterred from going into the exchange of strategic weapons if there had been battlefield weapons, troop to troop, exchange" in Europe, Reagan said.

"I can't say that it was misunderstood," he said of his comment. But he said it caused concern in Europe only when it was taken out of the context of a discussion "of the whole strategic concept" for U.S. and allied defense.

Regarding conflicting statements by Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger over whether NATO contingency plans include a nuclear warning shot in event of conventional war in Europe, Reagan said: "There seems to be some confusion as to whether that is still a part of NATO strategy or not, and so far I've had no answer to that."

Later, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Reagan was aware of the contingency plans but didn't want to talk about them in public.

Haig told a Senate committee last Wednesday that NATO had such a "contingency plan," but Weinberger denied it the next day. The White House issued a statement saying both were right, that NATO had considered a warning shot but that it had never been translated into a specific military plan.

He also said there are no plans for U.S. military intervention in El Salvador and said his administration will work for elections to resolve that country's problems.

DuPont Has December Vote

KINSTON — Du Pont here reported that it was notified of the decision by the Baltimore regional acting director of the National Labor Relations Board to schedule employee representation elections Dec. 7-8.

Joe LaMotte, staff assistant at the Kinston facility, said the elections will be held at the plant site and ballots will be impounded until Du Pont employees at 13 other sites around the country have voted.

LaMotte said the last election will occur on Dec. 11 and the ballots will be counted beginning at 7 p.m. that day. Results will be announced as soon as counting is completed at each plant, he added.

Some 1,950 employees are involved in the elections here.

Kinston plant manager Howard Kress said, "We are pleased that this lengthy process is drawing to a close and that employees now can decide for themselves about their future."

The 1.4-million member United Steelworkers of America union asked the NLRB on July 31 for certification as the representative at 16 Du Pont plants in seven states. The union's organization activities, which began in 1974, were aimed initially at all of Du Pont's 66,000 workers nationwide. However, the Steelworkers narrowed their campaign this year to 16 plants employing approximately 15,000 workers.

During hearings before the NLRB, voting units for 14 of the 16 plants involved in the union's certification petition were agreed to. The NLRB then set the dates for representation elections at the 14 plant sites.

Art Auction At ECU Thursday

The East Carolina Art Society is sponsoring an art auction for the benefit of the Greenville Museum of Art Thursday at 7 p.m.

The auction will be held at the Museum of Art and will begin with a cocktail buffet. Reservations are limited. The cost is $25 per couple for members and $40 per couple for non-members.

Co-chairmen for the event are Mrs. Fred Webb and Mrs. Jack Koontz. A variety of art objects will be auctioned by a professional auctioneer.

Responses should be sent to the museum.

Utilities Meet...

Vepco wheeling charge for delivering Power Agency electricity to Greenville will be eliminated. He said, too, that by being a "high voltage customer" — having the facilities to accept direct 230KV service from the CP&L system — utilities customers would save an estimated $700,000 to $800,000 per year through lower wholesale power costs.

Commission board members last night also approved a negative fossil fuel charge for November electric bills of $5 per 1,000KWH. The reduction results from a cut in fossil fuel charges by Vepco. A negative charge is also expected in December, commission members were told.

In other business last night: the board accepted the 1980-81 audit report; approved a three-year renewal of a contract with National Computer Corp. for utility billing service; appointed a committee to review proposals for a computer system to provide accounting and payroll functions for the commission and make recommendations to the board as soon as possible; and approved the extension of a sewer outfall line in the Industrial Park area at a total estimated cost of $150,000.

The board also approved the sale of a quantity of used surplus vehicles and other equipment at public auction, and the negotiated sale of the 15-year-old propane gas system in Azalea Gardens. The system, which includes a large bulk tank and distribution lines within the trailer park, now serves about 30 customers.

Daughtridge Gas Co. — formerly Moore-King-Sullivan Oil Co. — has offered the commission $2,850 for the Azalea Gardens system.

The GUC board also awarded contracts to low bidders including: $20,500 to J. H. Hudson Inc. for a 100-foot by 30-foot extension to a vehicle and equipment storage shed at the Operations Center; $10,053 to Phelps Chevrolet for a one-ton crew cab truck (cab and chassis); $84,963 to Jet-Vac Sanitary Service for a sewer cleaning truck; and $20,187 to Mill Power Supply Co. for 25 padmount transformers.

Former Teacher At ECU Loses Plaintiff

RICHMOND, Va. — The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed a lower court decision Tuesday and ruled against a former East Carolina University teacher who said his contract was not renewed because he was critical of department policies.

The court said Robert J. Mayberry, a former romance language teacher at ECU, was entitled to 1st Amendment protection for his remarks, but said there was no proof that language department chairman Joseph A. Fernandez knew of Mayberry's criticism when he denied tenure to Mayberry. The court noted that such knowledge by Fernandez was an essential ingredient to Mayberry's case.

more than unproven possibilities are required before the court may intervene in the operation of the tenure conferring process," the court said in a 53-page opinion. "It is our conclusion that Mayberry's case rested on no more than unsubstantiated conjecture, and must be decided against him."

Mayberry's suit was filed in 1973. He asked for monetary damages and reinstatement at ECU.

U. S. District Judge Franklin T. Dupree, in 1979, upheld a jury award of $81,885 in back pay for Mayberry, but denied reinstatement.

As a result of Tuesday's ruling, Mayberry will not receive the money, which had been withheld pending outcome of the appeal.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is due for today into early Thursday over the northern Pacific coast and snow is expected over the Pacific Northwest. Skies will be sunny over the remainder of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

A pesky frontal zone off the North Carolina coast continues threat of rain for coastal plain and coastal area today. The rest of the state will have varied weather today, with some rain near the coast ranging to sunny skies over and near the mountains.

The nearly stationary front along the coastal waters of the southeastern states will have a weak low pressure area move northward along its boundary today. This feature will give the coastal areas as well as the coastal plain some light rain or drizzle today.

The frontal zone will be pushed out to sea by tonight with cooler and drier air moving rapidly toward the Atlantic Seaboard from the great lakes today. This new air mass will press through North Carolina tonight bringing mostly sunny skies

Thursday with windy and cool conditions. Especially east of the mountains.

Temperatures Tuesday afternoon were kept down over eastern areas where clouds were thick but western counties had sunshine and warmed into the 60s and even some low 70s over sections of the mountains. Overnight temperatures had dipped into the cold 30s over the mountains and foothills while eastward through the piedmont the 40s were common. Coastal sections had 50s with some more clouds and rain.

Rainfall over the past 24 hours had been light but a few locations along the Outer Banks did have close to one half inch. In most cases the coastal reports were under one tenth of an inch or traces.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina will improve as far as clouds and rain are concerned today but cooler and more windy conditions will move in on Thursday. Occasional rain or drizzle near and along the coast today will be reflected by sunny skies over the mountains. Highs in the mid-50s over northeast sections will warm into the upper 60s over the southwest.

Tonight will see fair skies over the west and cloudy over the east. Low in the 30s over the mountains ranging to the 50s along the coast. Clearing near the coast and mostly sunny elsewhere on Thursday. Windy with cool 50s for the most part with some 40s over the higher mountains.

For the beaches the winds will favor the northeast today at speeds of 10 to 20 mph and a small craft advisory will probably be necessary by this afternoon. Wind Thursday will be stronger. Rain today will end by tonight with clearing Thursday.

Penn Disbands A Fraternity

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Citing "a continuing pattern of serious disciplinary problems," including racial harassment, the University of Pennsylvania has ordered its Kappa Sigma fraternity chapter disbanded.

In its decision to revoke recognition of the fraternity, one of the university's largest and best-known, the university alleged "personal threats and physical assaults, instances such as racial and anti-semitic harassment, unauthorized possession and misuse of BB and air gun firearms as well as other disruptive behavior."

The decision officially revokes recognition of the chapter "for a period of not less than three years" and means the 33 members who live in the ivy-covered brick house at the center of Penn's west Philadelphia campus must leave by Dec. 24, university officials said Tuesday.

The chapter, which also has 17 members who don't live in the house, is one of 186 chapters under the national Kappa Sigma organization, based in Charlottesville, Va.

"Withdrawal of recognition at this time is the direct result of a continuing pattern of the very behavior that resulted in the suspension of the fraternity in February 1980," Vice Provost Janis Somerville said in a statement.

"The Director of Fraternity Affairs then cited 'violence, blatant ignorance or disregard of civil and criminal codes as well as university standards,' and 'religious slurs, physical threats, sexual harassment, or racist behavior,'" the statement said.

In one incident cited by university officials, black students complained that several Kappa Sigma members wore bedsheets resembling Ku Klux Klan costumes at a Halloween party at the fraternity house.

Some pedestrians have also complained they were pelted with debris or harassed with racial and religious insults as they walked past the house, officials said.

"We were railroaded," said fraternity president Bruce Edwards, a senior political science major from Piedmont, S.C., who is also a tight end on the Penn football team.

"There are some pretty wild guys here, and they've made a real effort to behave themselves," he said.

The university's action was backed by Liz Cooper, the chairman of the Penn student government organization; and the Daily Pennsylvanian, the campus newspaper. Both said they were saddened by the ruling but felt it was justified.

No decision has been made on the use of the fraternity house, which is owned by a fraternity alumni group, university officials said.

Kappa Sigma is one of 36 fraternities on the Penn campus.

Few Caught For Smash-n-Grab

CHICAGO (AP) — "Smash and grab" crimes — in which a thief smashes the window of a car driven by a lone woman motorist, then grabs her purse and runs — are becoming more common partly because few offenders are caught and convicted, officials say.

Assistant State's Attorney Dean Morask said Monday that victims often are unable to identify the culprits. "The people doing it really have a great advantage," he said. "They pick their victims. They pick their time."

Police Commander Rudolph Nimocks said no statistics are kept on the frequency of such crimes. A week can pass without such an incident and then there may be a half-dozen in two hours, Nimocks said.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 3 Tuesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 3 percent of your hot water.

Fugitive Hunt Is Now Personal

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer
WEST TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Lt. Peter Coughlin has worked 26 years for the State Police and says he might retire were it not for a woman he is particularly keen to meet.

Coughlin, 50, has spent two years trying to find Joanne Chesimard, a.k.a. Assata Shakur, New Jersey's most wanted fugitive and a suspected leader of the Black Liberation Army.

"I can retire right now, but I don't want to until we get her," Coughlin said. "It gets to be a personal thing after a couple of years."

Ms. Chesimard was convicted of killing a state trooper in 1973, and she escaped from the Correctional Institution for Women at Clinton two years ago last Monday.

Her escape came about a year after establishment of the state police Fugitive Unit, which Coughlin heads.

People who make Coughlin's quarterly "12 Most Wanted" list are considered the most dangerous of some 800 New Jersey convicted or suspected criminals on the lam.

But of them all, Bronx-born Joanne Deborah Byron Chesimard has proven the most elusive. She remains the one Coughlin said he "would most definitely like to meet."

Until recently, Coughlin said his "best information" was that Ms. Chesimard was somewhere in California. He has maintained for years that she has been waging a small war on police, and evidence is now mounting to support his claim.

Scores of clues have indicated there may be a connection between Ms. Chesimard and the recent $1.6 million robbery of a Brink's truck during which two Nyack, N.Y., police officers and a Brink's guard were slain and three members of the radical Weather Underground were apprehended.

Four suspects in the case are believed to have ties to the B.L.A., including Anthony Laborde and Marilyn Buck, both still at large and both believed by authorities to have aided Ms. Chesimard's escape.

Laborde is a co-suspect with James Dixon York of Linden, N.J., in a New York shootout several months ago during which one policeman was slain and another wounded, Coughlin said.

York, who was captured and charged with the police shootings shortly after he was added to New Jersey's most wanted list, is also suspected of being one of the five who aided Ms. Chesimard's prison escape, Coughlin said.

Coughlin's search for Ms. Chesimard has been made more difficult because while the general public knows little of behind-the-scenes police work, Ms. Chesimard knows a great deal.

While she was in prison, she used the Freedom of Information Act to obtain more than 1,700 pages of FBI documents concerning her case, including details of police investigations.

Coughlin said the search is also hampered by the network of radicals believed to have aided her flight and by the fact that one of the suspects at large in the Brink's case has been identified as a "Chesimard look-a-like."

"If one-tenth of the reports we get are correct, she's been all over the place in the last couple of years," he said. "They want to make a heroine out of her."

But among state troopers, she is no heroine. Indeed, no one is more feared than Ms. Chesimard, Coughlin said he sees reminders of that fear every day — a compelling example being the officer who survived the turnpike shootout with Ms. Chesimard.

Working a desk job now, he is still shaken by what began as a routine check on a suspicious vehicle and ended in a bloody gun battle with Ms. Chesimard, who was wounded, and a suspected member of the Black Panthers, who was slain.

The officer — who asked that his name, while a matter of public record, not be brought to public attention again — refuses to discuss anything relating to Joanne Chesimard.

"I have a wife and a child. Please," he said.

Although state troopers are forever on the lookout for Ms. Chesimard, much of the investigation is left to Coughlin, who spends his days around the National Crime Information Center computer and by the phone.

He has learned everything he can about her; now and then he even curls up with "Assata Speaks," a biography by a radical sympathizer who portrayed Ms. Chesimard as an "African gem" who was "railroaded" by authorities.

A just-the-facts type of cop, Coughlin makes few personal asides about the case, although he said he thinks the first mistake was to send Ms. Chesimard to a medium security prison like Clinton. She had already stunned authorities by managing to conceive a child, now living with relatives, while she was in a holding cell in Middlesex County awaiting trial.

When he started the Fugitive Unit, Coughlin cleared state police files of about 200 names of people who had been captured or released or who had died since they were listed. Since then, 16 of the first 27 Coughlin put on his most wanted list have been apprehended.

"There's always an opening," Coughlin said.

Still, Coughlin doesn't like the distinction of being in the only state where the most wanted of the most wanted has been at large for two years.

"I guess it's human nature. I guess most cops would like to arrest somebody that bad. Whatever else we're working on, she's always No. 1," he said.

PUMP REGGIE...HE'LL PUT YOUR THINK TANK ON FULL!

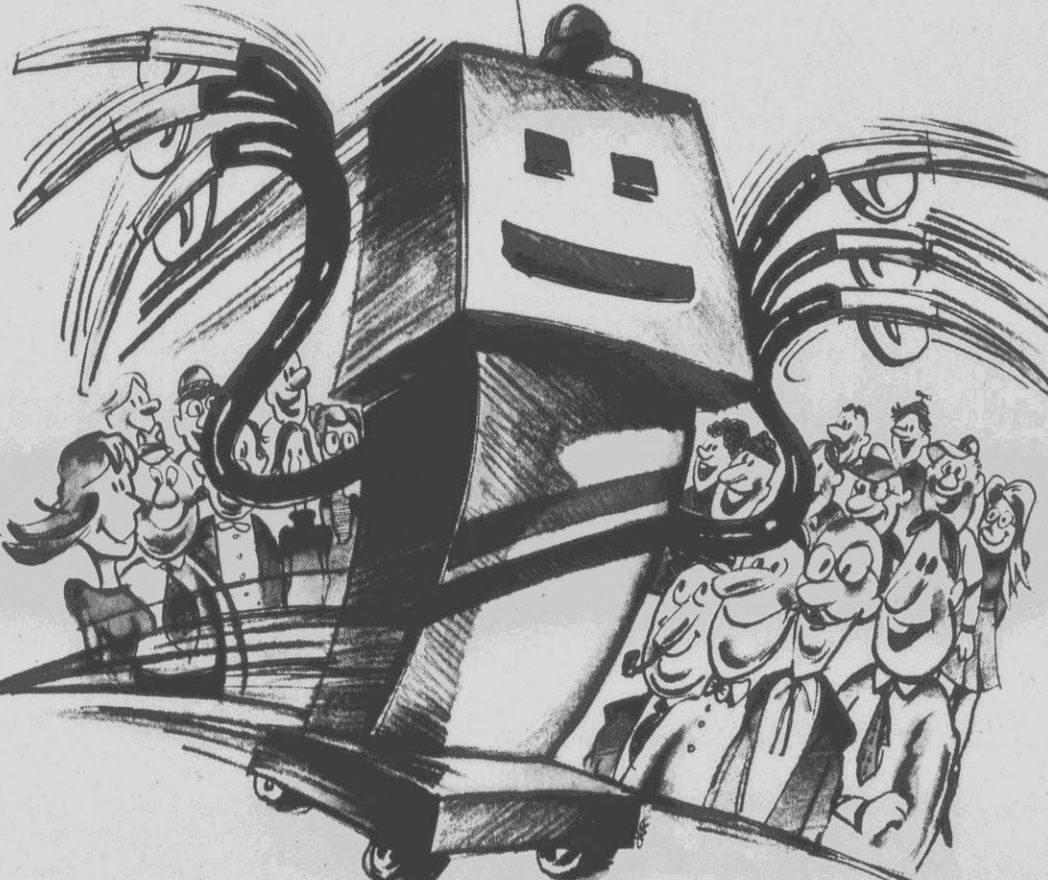

"Hello, I'm Reggie. And as you've probably noticed, I'm a gasoline pump. But I like to think I'm pretty smart for a gas pump. I can walk I can talk. And I'm an expert on energy.

"You might even say that energy is my life. These days I've been spending much of my time on the road with Energy Adventure, a traveling educational program designed to help students and others better understand today's energy dilemma.

"In a typical program I'll spout off about the history of energy use in our society. The economic forces that affect energy use. And the role technology plays in increasing our energy supply.

"Energy Adventure was developed by the Energy Education Division of Oak Ridge Associated Universities and is sponsored by my friends at Ashland Oil, and its subsidiary, Integon Insurance, who believe it's important for young people to have their energy questions answered."

Chargers To Meet White Oak In Division I Opener

Ayden-Grifton In Playoffs For First Time Since 1973

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — The high school football regular season ended last Friday, but for the first time since 1973 Ayden-Grifton is not hanging up its uniforms and putting away its cleats and pads for the winter.

Instead, the uniforms have been washed, the cleats cleaned and shined and the pads refurbished as Ayden-Grifton prepares to face White Oak Friday night in the opening round of the Division I State High School Playoffs.

The Chargers, 8-2-0 overall and 5-1-0 in the league, enter the 8 p.m. contest in Littlefield having won their last five games, the latest victory coming last Friday night when they shut down Southwest Edgecombe, 14-0, to earn a share of the (Please turn to page 18)

First-Year Head Coach Leads Vikings To Eight-Win Season

By RICK SCOPPE

It did not take White Oak first-year head coach Tony Zvonar long to realize his Vikings might be the class of the Coastal Conference. Just one look and he knew.

"This might sound a little surprising, but I knew from the start that these kids wanted to play," Zvonar said. "Heck, I knew they were winners and boy, that's half the battle."

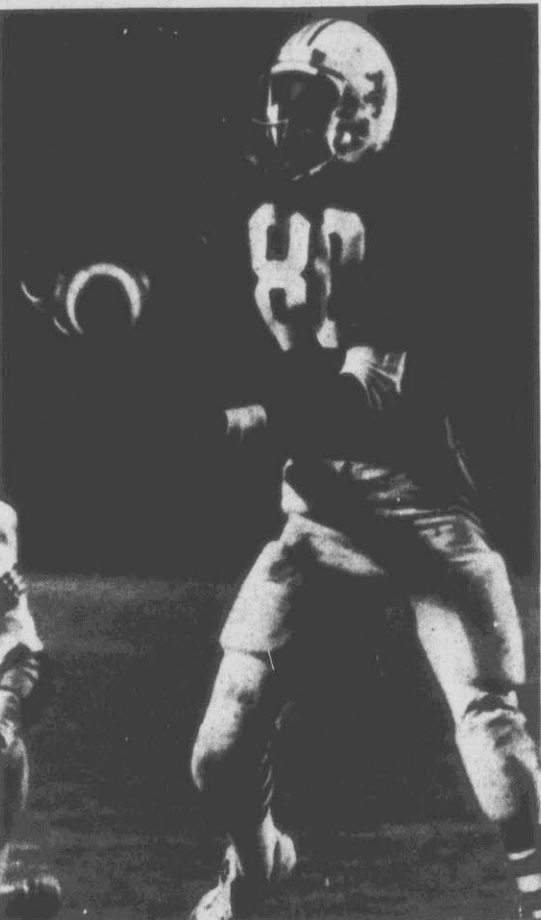

The other half began 11 weeks ago when the regular season opened and continues Friday night when the Vikings travel to Ayden-Grifton in the opening round of the Division I state high school playoffs.

White Oak, 8-2-0 overall, won the Coastal Conference crown with a 5-0-0 mark to advance to the playoffs for the first time (Please turn to page 20)

Rose Wide Receiver Chris McLawhorn

McLawhorn Named All-State

From Staff & Wire Reports

Greenville Rose wide receiver Chris McLawhorn joined three running backs who have combined for almost 4,400 yards, a free safety with 26 career interceptions and a deadly-accurate placekicker on the 1981 Associated Press North Carolina All-State High School Football Team announced today.

Three receivers were selected to the offensive unit, including McLawhorn of Rose and Tim Morrison, also of Terry Sanford, who finished in a tie for the spot. The third receiver is Ken Weaver of Rocky Mount.

McLawhorn caught 27 passes for 593 yards, a 22-yard per catch average, and seven touchdowns. Morrison caught 30 passes for 680 yards and six scores, while Weaver had 42 receptions for 856 yards.

Backs Steve Griffin of South Mecklenburg, Dwight Richardson of Fayetteville Terry Sanford and Kenny Grantham of Charles B. Aycock were selected by a panel of high school sportswriters from throughout the state.

Chosen on defense was Anthony Flack of Greensboro Smith. In addition to his interceptions, the 6-3, 185-pound senior has averaged 10 tackles per game during the 1981 season.

Wilson Fike's Lee Gliarmis, chosen as the all-state placekicker in 1980, was selected for the second consecutive season. Gliarmis has kicked seven of 12 field goals this season and 19 of 22 extra points.

At one point, Gliarmis had booted 37 straight points after touchdowns over two seasons.

Richard Moore of Burlington Williams was selected at quarterback. The 6-foot-1, 165-pounder has completed 47 of 93 passes for 809 yards and nine touchdowns while leading Williams to another 10-0 record and a spot in the state playoffs.

While Moore has been at Williams, teams there have won 44 consecutive football games.

Griffin, 5-foot-11, 165 pounds, carried the ball 177 times for 1,671 yards as South Mecklenburg also went undefeated and gained a post-season spot. He also caught 16 passes for 207 yards. Griffin has scored 24 touchdowns during the regular season.

Richardson rushed 200 times, gaining 1,318 yards and eight touchdowns. As the team's placekicker, he also booted 19 PATs.

Grantham ranked as the top runner in the Eastern Carolina Conference, gaining 1,387 yards and 19 touchdowns on 210 carries. He also caught 10 passes for 310 yards and three (Continued on page 20)

Lasorda NL Manager Of The Year

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Now that Tommy Lasorda has tasted the fruits of the ultimate victory, as he would put it, the manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers is looking for more.

"There's no law against winning the World Series again," said Lasorda. "And that's what we're going to attempt to do. Now that we know how to do it, let's keep on doing it — 1982 will again be the year for Dodger Blue."

Lasorda might not make anyone forget about Walt Whitman, but a panel of sportswriters and sportscasters throughout the country was impressed enough by the job he did on the field that he was made an overwhelming choice as the Associated Press' National League Manager of the Year.

Lasorda received 215 votes, while runnerup Whitey Herzog of the St. Louis Cardinals had 163. John McNamara of the Cincinnati Reds was third with 81 votes.

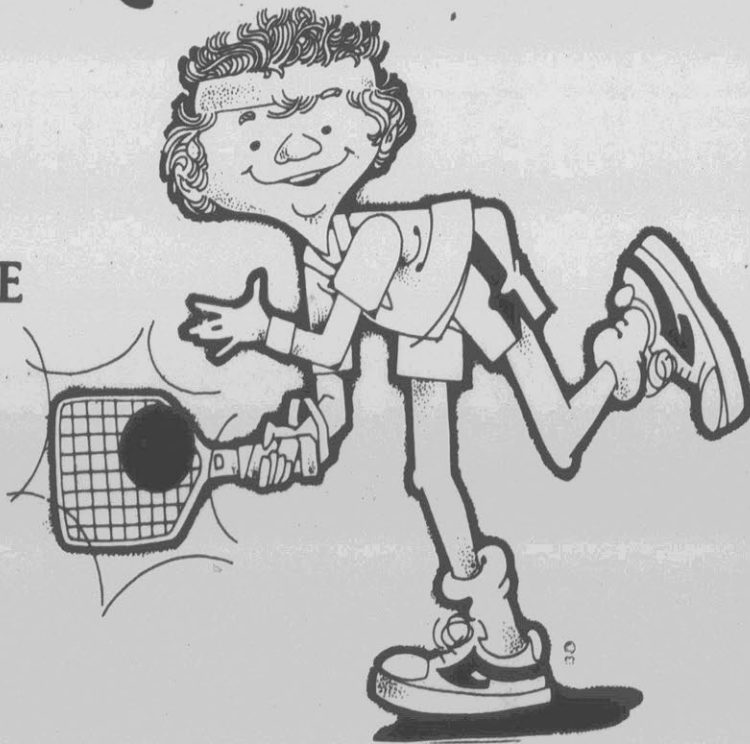

"I'm extremely honored to receive an award like this," said Lasorda, whose Dodgers won their first World Series in 16 years last month by disposing of the New York Yankees in six games. "I certainly want to thank all the people who made it possible for me to receive it."

The Dodgers went all the way despite trailing Houston 2-0 in the best-of-five National League West Division playoffs, trailing Montreal 2-1 in the best-of-five NL Championship Series, and trailing the Yankees 2-0 in the World Series.

Lasorda, manager of the Dodgers for the last five years, also was the NL Manager of the Year in 1977, his rookie season with Los Angeles after he succeeded Walter Alston.

Valenzuela Named Cy Young Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the sensational Mexican left-hander who took baseball by storm in his rookie season, was named the National League's Cy Young Award winner today in a very close vote.

Valenzuela, who turned 21 last week, was 13-7 for the Los Angeles Dodgers this season, leading the league in four pitching categories and helping the Dodgers to their first world championship in 16 years. He became the first rookie ever to win Cy Young honors since the award was instituted in 1956.

A pair of three-time Cy Young winners, Tom Seaver of Cincinnati and Steve Carlton of Philadelphia, placed right behind Valenzuela in the voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Valenzuela received eight first-place votes, eight seconds and six thirds in the balloting for 70 points — based on five points for a first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Seaver, who was 7-1 in each half of the split season, got eight first-place votes, seven for second and six for third, giving him 67 points. The difference between Valenzuela and Seaver was one second-place vote.

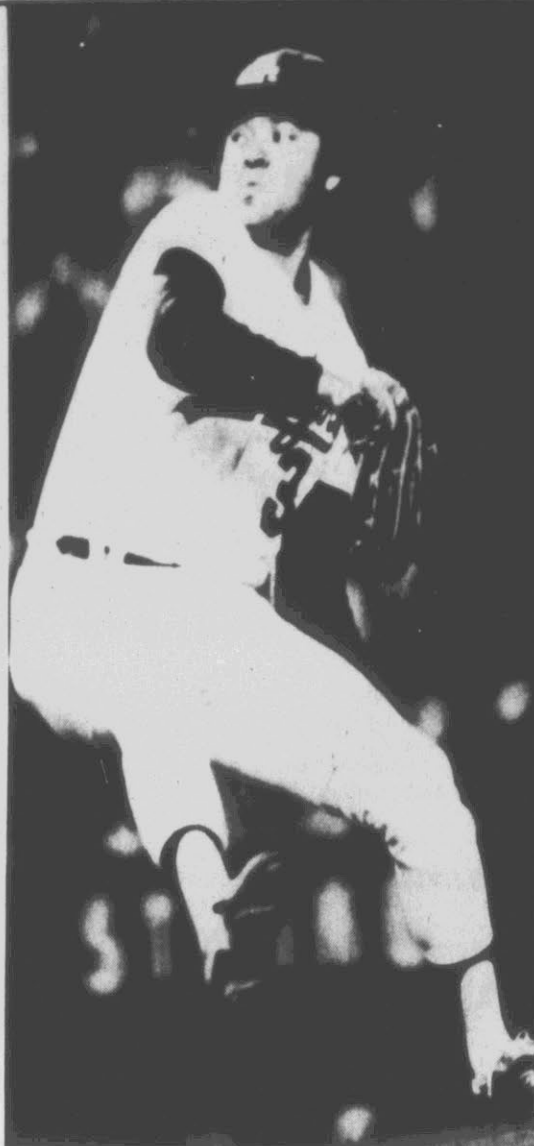

Carlton, who won the award in 1980, received five votes for first place, six for second and seven for third for 50 points.

Nolan Ryan of Houston, who led the NL in earned run average with a 1.69 mark, was fourth (3-34 28). St. Louis reliever Bruce Sutter was the only other pitcher receiving a vote; one for third place, giving him one point.

Valenzuela, who made 10 appearances with the Dodgers in 1980, is only the second pitcher to win the Cy Young honors in his first full season. Vida Blue of Oakland was the first to do so, in 1971.

The left-hander with the dancing screwball who inspired "Fernandomania" in Los Angeles, posted a 2.48 ERA, and led National League pitchers in four departments: complete games, 11; shutouts 8; innings pitched, 192, and strikeouts, 180.

In the postseason, Valenzuela won the pennant-clinching game over Montreal, then beat the Yankees in Game 3 of the World Series, giving the Dodgers their first victory over New York. Los Angeles then won the next three games to capture the Series.

Valvano: Tar Heels ACC's Best, Carolina's Blue Team Second

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Jim Valvano, N.C. State's volcanic basketball coach, was asked yesterday at the Greenville Sports Club to pick the ACC finish for this year.

It proved no hard task. "Carolina is the best. They have the most talent. And second, I'd pick Carolina's Blue Team. They've got the second best talent in the league."

It was like that throughout the meeting of the club, as the second-year Wolfpack coach kept the audience doubled over with laughter most of the time.

"You know," he recalled, "we just had a roast of Lefty Driessell (Maryland coach). Can you think of anyone easier to roast. Lefty thought it was the Man of the Year banquet, however, after the stuff that's been said about him in Washington press."

When he wasn't joking, Valvano related some chances he'd like to see made in the world of collegiate basketball — changes involving shot clocks, fouls, officials and scholarships.

"I would really like to see a clock of some kind," Valvano said. "Most of the games now are played in a frenzy for the first 30 minutes. Then, for the last ten, it seems like everyone starts playing not to lose. They don't play to win anymore. They get too cautious."

"This is a disservice to both the kids and the fans. We're still entertainment, but everybody has gotten too cautious. I don't want a 24-second clock. I don't want us to become like the pros, but I would like to see some sort of clock, maybe a 45-second one, in the late stages of the game, where it's needed. We have to get our kids trying to win again."

Valvano also would like to see some modification of the foul rule, which currently sidelines a player who collects his fifth. "High school kids play for 36 minutes and get five fouls. We play for 40 and still get five. I'd like to see them go to six for college. There are a lot of reasons for this."

"People spend a lot of money on tickets to see a game. Ralph Sampson is the most valuable player in the whole world right now. But if Sampson gets a couple of quick fouls, he quits playing. If he gets a third, he sits beside Terry Holland. And people who've paid that kind of money don't like to see that."

Valvano also has an alternative to six fouls, in which on the sixth and succeeding fouls by a player, it becomes a two-shot technical and loss of possession. "That puts some of the decision on the coach. He has to decide whether to keep that top player out there and take the chance. But too many games are decided in the final minutes by players who are not front line players now."

Valvano said that if such a rule were adopted, schools could cut their scholarships back to 10 or 12 instead of the current 15. "You don't need 15 players," he said. "Give me ten on grant and a couple of walk-ons with this foul rule and we could make it." He noted that State had about 30 walk-ons try out for the team this fall.

Another rule he'd like to see changed is making offensive fouls only team fouls and not personal fouls. "There are too many 'step-ins' to draw the offensive foul. That's not the way to play basketball."

The coach also said he'd like to see a return to two officials, then one, then none. I don't particularly like officials. I've found that officials don't like to be in a big upset game."

He said he would also like to have what he called a "Bobby Knight rule." In that, a school could only offer a new scholarship to an incoming freshman when a senior player graduates. Valvano noted that only three of his players have not graduated in his 14-year career.

Valvano said he expects to play 7-5 Chuck Nevett more this fall. "He's put on some weight and will start. We hope to get about 25 minutes out of him a game. He has improved."

In the ACC race, following Carolina, Valvano said most people are picking Virginia, but he feels that Wake Forest will surprise and finish there. Then, he picks Virginia third, followed closely by Clemson. "Most people will pick us fifth and Maryland sixth, followed by Duke and Georgia Tech."

"I really think that Duke will be better than people think due to their style of play, and Georgia Tech will surprise some people too."

"No one will pick us in the top four, but I think we'll be there when the season is over," Valvano added.

Duke football coach Red Wilson will be the speaker for the next Sports Club meeting, scheduled Tuesday, November 24.

Eastern Carolina Conference championship.

The Vikings, however, can go the Chargers' win streak one better. White Oak, 8-2-0 overall and 5-0-0 in the Coastal Conference, bring a six-game winning streak into the game, including a 61-7 victory over West Craven last Friday evening.

The winner of the Ayden-Grifton-White Oak game will be at home next week to face the survivor of the Tarboro-Warren County contest. Ayden-Grifton will not play a road game in the playoffs.

"This is a big game for us, but that's what I said last week," Ayden-Grifton coach Dixon Sauls said. "We've got kind of a thing going with the kids. They say I've told them that every game is critical."

None of Ayden-Grifton's games, however, have been more important than last week's against Southwest Edgecombe. The Chargers needed a victory to assure themselves of a tie for the league title. A loss and the season was over.

The Chargers got what they needed — and more. Relying as they have nearly all year on its aggressive defense, the Chargers held Southwest Edgecombe to 133 yards total offense en route to a 14-0 win.

That win, coupled with C. B. Aycock's 36-6 victory over North Pitt Friday, left the Chargers tied with the Falcons and the Cougars for first place and forced a draw Saturday morning in Wilson to determine the ECC's two playoff representatives.

The team drawing the lowest number out of seven would receive the league's Division I berth. The team drawing the second lowest number would receive the ECC's Division II berth.

Sauls drew first and pulled out the number one, thus assuring the Chargers of their first trip to the playoffs in eight years. C. B. Aycock drew the number two and will play West Carteret in an opening round Division II game.

"I felt both elation and surprise," Sauls said. "To win in athletics you have to be well-prepared and play well but you also have to be lucky sometimes. We got lucky."

The drawing over, Sauls immediately began considering his team's first playoff foe: White Oak.

"I think they compare favorably in both size and quickness with us," Sauls said. "I feel we're quicker than they are but they average about five to 10 pounds more than we do per man."

White Oak, which runs out of a multiple-I on offense, is led by tailback Ivory Meadows and quarterback Charlie Soos, both of whom are seniors on a team that has over 20 seniors on its squad.

Meadows, a 5-6, 204-pounder who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.7 seconds, has rushed for 1,404 yards on 250 carries and 19 touchdowns this season.

Soos, a 6-1, 202-pounder, has completed 46 of 85 passes (54.1%) and seven touchdowns while having only three passes intercepted. He has also rushed for 300 yards and six touchdowns.

"Soos is the best passer and the best athlete at quarterback we will have faced all season," Sauls said. "He has a fine leader and has a very strong arm. He's the key to their football team."

As for Meadows, Sauls said: "He's their heavy-duty back. He carries the ball 25 to 30 times a game and is quick for his size. I don't know how to describe him. He's just their bread-and-butter ball carrier." Defensively, the Vikings run a split 4-4 which at times appears turns into either a six- or eight-man front. "Their defense is similar to our first opponent, Roanoke's," Sauls said. "They're aggressive and they try to penetrate."

The Chargers will try to counter that defense with the one-two running punch of tailback Cleveland Coley and fullback Gregory Jackson, the ECC's #3 and #4 leading rushers during the regular season.

Jackson, a 6-0, 190-pound senior, rushed for 926 yards this season and 14 touchdowns. Coley, a 5-5, 145-pound senior, was not far behind his running mate, gaining 913 yards and scoring nine touchdowns.

Quarterback Bernard Ricciarelli, a 5-7, 150-pound senior, had an off-game last week but completed 50 of 107 passes for 649 yards and six touchdowns. He also had eight passes intercepted.

Ricciarelli's favorite receiver this year has been Chris Strickland. Strickland, a 5-9, 145-pound senior, has caught 23 passes — tops in the ECC — for 288 yards and five touchdowns.

The Chargers' #2 receiver is Joey Kennedy, a 6-0, 162-pound junior, who has pulled in nine passes for 154 yards.

Still, defense has been the Chargers' strength this season. Last week's victory over the Cougars was the Chargers third shutout this year. For the season, the Chargers have given up only 96 points.

Moreover, Ayden-Grifton held SWE running back Wayne Mayo, ranked second in the ECC in rushing entering the game with 974 yards, to a mere eight yards in six carries.

"Some of the guys on the team were talking about holding Mayo to under 1,000 yards," Sauls said. "But I never expected that."

The mainstays of the A-G defensive unit include Coley at linebacker and Jackson, Donovan Arnold (5-9, 185 senior), Chuck Smithwick (5-11, 178 junior) and Matthew McCotter (5-10, 185 senior) on the front line.

Strickland, a defensive back when not playing wide receiver, leads the team and the league in interceptions with seven.

"I think the key to the game may be whether we can stop the big play," Sauls said. "If we can play with the same aggressiveness on defense as we did last week I think we'll do all right."

This year, Fayetteville Terry Sanford, Burlington Williams and Marshville Forest Hills will try to give the statewide panel of sportswriters voting in the poll a better record.

They are the top-ranked teams in the 1981 high school season's final Associated Press poll. In the state poll's two years, no top-ranked team ever has won a playoff championship. But teams ranked in the Top 10 have accounted for five of the six champions crowned in the 2A, 3A and 4A ranks (in the poll, 1A teams are combined with 2A).

Sampson Pulls Hip Muscle

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Ralph Sampson, the 7-foot-4 center who helped fling Virginia into the national spotlight in his freshman year, is on the sidelines with a pulled muscle, says Cavalier Coach Terry Holland.

Holland said Tuesday night he is not sure when Sampson, a junior All-American, will be able to return or whether he will make the Cavaliers' Nov. 21 opener against Brigham Young in Springfield, Mass.

Sampson pulled the muscle in his right hip about 10 days ago during practice.

Ingram Dash ECU Play Of The Week

Quarterback Kevin Ingram dashed 46 yards to score a touchdown and run East Carolina out to a 45-10 lead in the third period of last Saturday's Homecoming game against East Tennessee State, and that play was chosen as the Play of the Week by the ECU coaches.

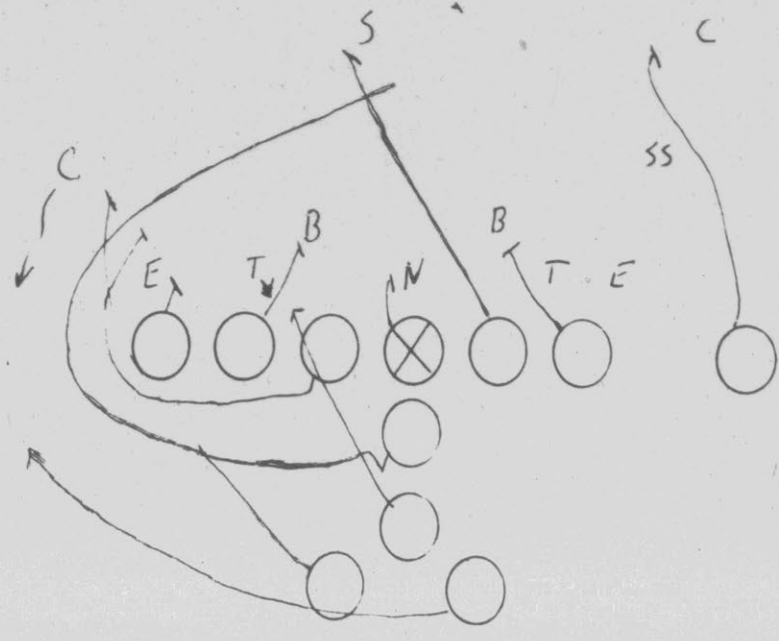

On the play, Ingram read the defensive tackle as he closed on the fullback. Going to the option, Ingram read the corner back taking the trailing halfback, leaving him free. Ingram then cut back into the secondary, picking up additional blocks, including one by Norman Quick, the backside guard, who took out the safety, and split end Reggie Harden, who cut down the other corner back. From there on it was an easy footrace to the end zone.

The play, which came on second and nine capped the first possession of the second half for the Pirates, as the team went 80 yards on six plays.

It was Ingram's longest carry as a Pirate and the longest ECU run of the season.

The Pirates went on to claim a 66-23 victory in the contest, pulling even on the season at 5-5.

East Carolina goes for a winning season Saturday afternoon when the Pirates play host to William & Mary in their season finale.

Draft Has Familiar Faces

NEW YORK (AP) — The major league baseball free agent re-entry draft has a new twist this year even though some familiar faces are its headliners.

In 1976, the first year of the draft, 25 players were available for selection.

Four of them — Reggie Jackson of the New York Yankees, Bert Campaneris of California and Bill Campbell and Joe Rudi of Boston — also will be commodities in this year's draft.

The players were on a list of 43 announced Tuesday by the baseball commissioner's office as those who had declared for free-agency in the new-look draft Friday.

The number was immediately cut to 42 when outfielder Lou Piniella agreed to terms on a three-year contract with his present team, the Yankees. And it could be even lower on Friday because players have until midnight Thursday to come to terms with their current clubs.

Jackson apparently will remain on the list and go through the draft again because Yankees owner George Steinbrenner reportedly has decided not to sign the slugging outfielder beforehand and will reserve the right to negotiate with him following the draft.

Jackson's agent, Gary Walker, said Tuesday that he had spoken with Steinbrenner by phone. "The essence of our conversation," Walker said from Tempe, Ariz., "was that due to the nature of things, he's going to retain rights to Reggie in the draft and we'll continue to talk. We'll pick up the ball next week."

Three other Yankees were on the list — outfielder Bobby Murcer and pitchers Ron Guidry and Dave LaRoche.

By virtue of the worst record in the major leagues, Toronto will have the first selection in the draft, though in this grab bag, position in the roll call has no significant bearing.

This year there is no limit to the number of clubs which may select negotiation rights to a player, but the most important difference between this year's draft and previous years is the emergence of the so-called "ranking" player.

As part of the settlement which ended the 50-day midseason strike by major leaguers, ranking players were established as a category in this draft as a basis for determining which teams receive compensation for the loss of certain free agents. According to the agreement, "ranking" players are those in the top 30 per cent at their position on the basis of a set of pre-determined statistics over the past two years.

Lawyers Preparing 'Shaving' Defense

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge in Brooklyn has recessed the Boston College basketball point shaving trial until Monday to give attorneys a chance to their defense.

The five defendants — former BC player Rick Kuhn of Swissvale, Pa.; Anthony and Rocco Perla of Bradock Hills, Pa.; Paul Mazzei of Pittsburgh; and James Burke of New York — told Judge Henry Bramm through their lawyers that their witnesses were not available until next week.

The government, led by special attorney Edward McDonald, rested its case Monday earlier than had been expected.

Since it was scheduled to be a short trial week with sessions set for only Monday and Tuesday, defense attorneys had asked their witnesses to be ready to begin testifying Nov. 16.

The judge recessed the trial until that time.

Vikes Face Chargers...

since 1978 when the Vikings lost in the opening round to Clinton.

The Vikings enter Friday's 8 p.m. contest with six straight wins, having last lost to Southwest Onslow, 21-15, the fourth week of the season. Since then, the Vikings have scored 218 points to their opponents' 47 points.

For the season, White Oak has scored 345 points (an average of 34.5 per game) while giving up just 115 points (an 11.5 average). The Vikings have shut out two foes — Swansboro, 57-0, and Pender County, 27-0.

That, however, is the past. Now, the Vikings are intent on preparing for Ayden-Grifton.

"I think we're fairly evenly matched," Zvonar said. "Their strength is their defense and ours is our offense, even though our defense has come along lately."

"It's hard to make comparisons, though," he added. "I think their overall team speed is good, but I don't think they have great size, and I don't think they have the depth we do."

"I think we're more of a power-oriented team than they are," Zvonar said. "We don't run a complicated offense, but we're averaging about 340 yards a game."

Asked if he planned anything different for the Chargers, Zvonar said: "We might add a wrinkle or two but when you've got a good horse that's got you this far you keep riding him."

The season really began for White Oak in July when school officials named Zvonar as the new Viking head coach. Zvonar came to White Oak after coaching at Bluefield State College in West Virginia for seven years, the last three as head coach.

"I wanted to get off college level coaching," Zvonar said. "I have two kids, six and eight years old, and I felt I needed to spend more time with them."

So, he came to White Oak. And now, less than six months after arriving at the Jacksonville school, Zvonar has the Vikings in the state playoffs. It was not quite as easy as all that, however.

White Oak opened the season with a 27-6 loss to arch-rival Jacksonville. "We didn't make a whole lot of mistakes," Zvonar said. "But me being new and they're 4-A and we're 3-A and we had eight going both ways, all hurt us."

From there, the Vikings easily defeated Camp Lejeune (49-20) and Swansboro before SW Onslow defeated the Vikings, a game in which White Oak had two touchdowns.

more touchdowns. Named to the offensive line were Ronnie Yarborough of Henderson Vance, Donnie Wallace of Roanoke, William Stevenson of Statesville, Paul Sheets of Westover and Kenny Winters of Dunn.

Wallace was the only junior selected to either team. Meanwhile, Yarborough is the largest player on either unit at 6-foot-3, 280 pounds.

SPORT LINE

To The Editor:

With more than cursory interest, I read your column regarding home attendance and "what do the people of eastern Carolina want?"

While not living in the eastern part of the state, I am an avid supporter of ECU football, graduating from ECU in 1965 and being a member of the Pirate Club and a season ticket holder since the days of Sonny Randle.

I believe you are overlooking two very important points. First, seven of the top-ten all-time crowds occurred in 1978 and 1979—years in which our program produced a winner on a highly competitive level. These records were against teams that have a less than household name: Western Carolina, Texas-Arlington, and Southwestern Louisiana. If we can average 26,238 fans against those teams, I firmly believe the people of the east will support a winner. Second, granted that Miami does have a top-ranked team this year, it still does not have the prestige and mystique of a team of lesser stature (Georgia Tech, Ole Miss or Tennessee). Therefore, your lukewarm football fan is not going to beat down the fence at Ficklen to see Miami.

I would make the following observations:

1—A winning team will produce an acceptable attendance figure against even mediocre competition.

2—An average team will produce an acceptable attendance figure against any level of competition if the team plays an exciting brand of football: imaginative offensive plays and a gang-tackling defense.

3—A losing football team must play top caliber teams from this state or adjoining states. If the chances of victory are slim to none, as on (the Miami) Saturday, about the only incentive to attend the game is the Monday morning quarterbacking that takes place with fans of the opposing team the next week. I know of no Miami graduates in this area.

It appears that we are to be saddled with a mediocre program for the foreseeable future. (Ed. note: The writer then listed a number of possible opponents, which will be covered in a future column.)

called back because of penalties.

The loss left the Vikings at 2-2-0 one week before they were to face the first of five straight games against league foes. White Oak rebounded to defeat Pender County the next week and then ripped off five straight league victories, including a 14-6 win over Havelock — the first time the Vikings have ever defeated the Rams in Havelock.

"Psychologically, that was a big win for us," Zvonar said. "We had never beaten them at their home field and it meant something."

White Oak is led by quarterback Charlie Soos and tailback Ivory Meadows. A 6-1, 202-pounder, Soos has connected on 46 of 85 passes (54.1%) for seven touchdowns while having only three passes intercepted. He has also rushed for 300 yards and six touchdowns.

Meadows, a 5-6, 204-pounder who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.7 seconds, has rushed for 1,404 yards on 250 carries and 19 touchdowns this season.

Defensive back Eric Bratcher (5-10, 153) and lineman Tim Dumas (6-5, 255) were named.

At linebacker are Gerald Reynolds of Tarboro, Donald Beard of Burlington Williams, Henry Walls of Central Davidson and Pat Teague of Raleigh Sanderson.

Joining Dumas on the line are Dennis Barron of Wilson Beddingfield, Raymond Phillips of North Mecklenburg, Jeff Barringer of South Rowan and James McCray of South Robeson.

Much of Meadows' success can be attributed to the blocking of fullback Jason Crist, a 5-8, 175-pounder. Crist, while serving primarily as a blocker, has also carried the ball 40 times for 249 yards for a 6.1 average — the best on the team.

"It's hard to credit just one person for our success," Zvonar said. "We haven't thrown a lot this season and you don't run without the blocking up front."

Doing the blocking up front for the Vikings multiple-I formation are center John Simma (6-1, 190), tackles Keith Oliver (6-0, 210) and Pat Riley (6-0, 210) and guards Billy Harrell (5-10, 195) and Tim Baker (5-10, 190).

Richard Sloan (6-0, 200) mans the tight end slot while Brian Baquer and (6-0, 160) is at the slotback. Baquer has caught 11 passes for 180 yards. He also punts for the Vikings and is averaging 36.0 yards per kick.

White Oak's most dangerous receiver is split end Lester Williams (6-1, 175). Williams, who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.7 seconds, has caught 18 passes for five touchdowns and is averaging 26.8 yards per catch.

Defensively, White Oak uses a split 4-4 and is led by Simma and Duran Smith (6-0, 180) at the ends and Riley and A.J. Pierce (6-1, 210) at the tackles. Pat Riddle (6-0, 180) and Steve Simma (5-10, 175) are at outside linebacker while Baker and Robert Mills (6-0, 180) are at inside linebacker.

In the defensive backfield are Baquer at safety, John Gilliard (5-11, 175) at one cornerback and either Ricky Fritter (5-10, 170) or Brian Jernigan (6-0, 170) at the other cornerback.

Elkins, Bryant Set To Start Against Cavs

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
CHAPEL HILL — Thirteenth-ranked North Carolina, patched-up and limping the last three weeks, will look more like itself when it faces Virginia in Charlottesville on Saturday, coach Dick Crum said Tuesday.

Crum told reporters that quarterback Rod Elkins, who twisted his ankle two weeks ago against South Carolina and reinjured the ankle in last Saturday's loss to No. 2 Clemson, will start for the 7-2 Tar Heels.

"Monday, his ankle was much better than it was one week ago," Crum said during his weekly news conference. "He ran around for about half an hour and seemed to move better."

Kelvin Bryant, who saw his first action in more than one month against Clemson, will also face the Cavaliers, despite the fact the game is being played on the Scott Stadium artificial surface.

Bryant, injured against Georgia Tech on Oct. 3, suffered knee damage when he was brought down on a body block by a Yellow Jacket defender. Georgia Tech plays its home games on artificial surface.

"Kelvin Bryant got out of the (Clemson game) without any difficulty," Crum said.

Also on offense, tackle Mike Marr was listed in good shape, while center Steve McGrew may return to the lineup on a spot basis, Crum added.

Linebacker Darrell Nicholson will be as close to full speed as he's been all season, according to Crum. The Winston-Salem senior has also suffered with an ankle sprain. Only the status of defensive back Bill Jackson is not known.

Looking back on the Clemson game, Crum said the contest did not live up to expectations.

"The greatest game in the ACC's history wasn't the greatest game," Crum said. "I don't think it lived up to its advance billing."

Although his offense was practically shut down by the Tiger defense and several scoring opportunities were missed, Crum refused to get down on his team.

"I cannot find fault with our youngsters," he said. "They were disappointed... but we've got two more football games with two very good teams."

Even with the two missed opportunities, Crum said the turning point in the game came at the end when a Scott Stankavage pass to fullback Alan Burrus was ruled a lateral and Clemson recovered to snuff out the last Tar Heel threat.

Crum said he did not dispute the official's call and added he would not lay blame with Stankavage.

"He feels badly about the ball game. He did the best job he could and I'm not going to fault him on that," Crum said.

N.C. Prep Star Headed To UNC

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Brad Daugherty saw his boyhood dream come true Tuesday after announcing his decision to attend the University of North Carolina on a basketball grant-in-aid.

"It's always been a dream of mine to play for a Dean Smith-coached team," Daugherty said. "I've had that dream since childhood and as I grew older the dream became more like reality."

"I heard how he always took care of his players and made sure they got their degrees. I guess living here in North Carolina made it seem kind of natural to want to play for coach Smith and Carolina."

Daugherty, who narrowed his final list to Clemson, North Carolina, Maryland and Georgia Tech earlier this fall, said he liked Clemson at first and had also considered Maryland, but changed his mind after comparing the two programs.

"I liked Coach Driesell a lot and the way he talked to me about life and basketball," he said. "But in the end, it all came back to North Carolina and Coach Smith."

During the 1980-81 season, Daugherty teamed with five Owen seniors to lead the Warhorses to a 23-1 record under Coach Bill Burrows. He averaged 17 points per game, 13 rebounds, eight blocked shots and seven assists, according to Burrows.

Plan Exhibit On Quilting

A quilting demonstration and exhibit will be conducted at Carolina East Mall on Nov. 18 from noon until 5 p.m. sponsored by the Fourth Annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival and the Greenville Quilting Guild.

Event chairperson Kay Clemens noted that the guild will show different aspects of the American folk art with a display of many quilts furnished by members of the guild. She noted that women from the guild will show how quilting is done on a frame and by the newer method of quilting on their laps.

The display will cover quilted items from bedquits to wall hangings and clothing. Members of the Greenville Quilting Guild will be on hand to explain the art form to spectators.

A drawing for a free quilt will be held at the end of the show.

According to Mrs. Clemens, "Since the early 1970's, quilting has gone contemporary and the public is invited to come see how this dramatic change has been incorporated in quilting techniques."

HARMONICA MAN — Larry Adler, the self-described "granddaddy" of Harmonica players, ponders question during an interview in Raleigh. The musician will be performing this week with the North Carolina Symphony. (AP Laserphoto)

Larry Adler To Accompany The N.C. Symphony

By BILL OUTLAW
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Symphony will team up this week with Larry Adler, a harmonica player whose musical talent may be outmatched only by his skill for storytelling.

Adler, self-described "granddaddy" of harmonica players, uses an instrument that bears his name and says he doesn't like to call it a harmonica, because he says a harmonica is really "musical glasses filled with water."

But by whatever name he prefers, he has played the instrument for 53 years in a career that has taken him all over the world, including performances in such places as Carnegie Hall.

He's had works written especially for him by composers such as Vaughan Williams.

Adler says he was the first mouth-organ player in the world to play solo, and he was also the first to play classical music in concert.

He has met famous personalities running the gamut from Jack Benny to Al Capone, and he's played with jazz musicians such as Duke Ellington and Dizzy Gillespie as well as classical composers like Gershwin and Williams.

And he has a story to go with each one, like the time when he was a youngster playing in Chicago and this strange man asked whether he wrote his mother every day and if he went to the synagogue at least once a week. That man, Adler later discovered, was Al Capone.

Adler also is a tennis buff, and takes pride in the fact that his musical talents are held in high esteem by the Wimbledon crowd in England, where he now lives.

In fact, he also likes to tell about the Centre Court seat he's had for the past five years because the head linesman at Wimbledon likes his music.

But perhaps Adler's favorite story pops up when ever he plays "Rhapsody in Blue," the famous George Gershwin tune.

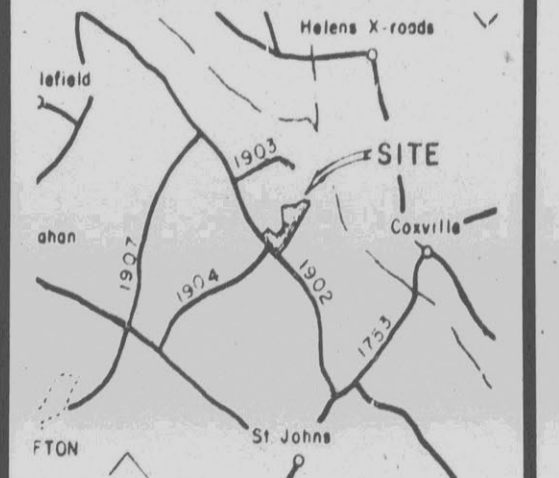

Adler, then 16, was talking with well-known "Big Band" musicians Paul Whiteman and Frank Trumbauer and another person whom he didn't know.

He and Whiteman were discussing Adler's performance, which Whiteman had praised, when Whiteman asked him if he could play "Rhapsody in Blue." Adler didn't know how to play the song, but he didn't want Whiteman to know it.

No Austerity Yet For Vets' Benefits

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — These may be days of austerity for cities, symphonies and schoolchildren, but the pinch hasn't come yet for veterans who look to Washington for a helping hand.

Without any ceremony, President Reagan put aside his deficit-fighting efforts a few weeks ago to sign a bill that added nearly $1 billion to federal outlays. He issued a brief statement of satisfaction and congratulations, then went back to work. The event caused barely a ripple.

That's because the extra spending involved veterans and, even in austerity, money for veterans is pretty much inviolable. Abraham Lincoln laid down the premise that still governs. He said the government had an obligation "to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan..."

As a result, while asking other agencies to take a new cut of 12 percent in their budgets, Reagan proposed and signed an 11.2 percent increase in disability payments for 2.3 million service-disabled veterans and their survivors.

"We cannot lose sight of the nation's debt to those brave veterans who have sacrificed their life and limb for the defense of their country," his statement said.

Even though Reagan did suggest modest reductions in some areas, the overall budget of the Veterans Administration keeps growing. It has doubled since 1972 and now totals over $23 billion.

A day of recalculation may be coming; costs are soaring as an aging population of veterans makes more demands. The 12.4 million veterans of World War II now average 61 years of age. In four years most will be eligible for free VA medical care — a demand that could force reconsideration of what is offered veterans.

In the meantime, the VA sees its constituency as a growing one: 30 million veterans, 59 million family members of living veterans, nearly 4 million survivors of deceased veterans. The VA calculates that 41 percent of the people in America are "potential recipients of veterans benefits provided by the federal government."

The American Legion which, along with other veterans groups, lobbies mightily to maintain and increase these programs, foresees a potential tightening up.

Says Robert Lynch, the Legion's director of rehabilitation: "The American Legion believes this nation has provided a well-founded and comprehensive program of benefits for veterans, their dependents and survivors. The main problem in these days of fiscal austerity is the provision of adequate funding to keep all veterans programs functioning in the manner intended by Congress. The American Legion believes that in the nation's priorities, veterans, representing the men and women who have defended the nation in time of war and active hostilities, should rank second only to national defense."

The VA's reach is enormous. On an average day, there are about 67,000 patients in the VA's 172 hospitals, which make it the nation's biggest health delivery system.

Over the course of a year, 1.25 million veterans become patients in VA hospitals. In any given month, 1.5 million other veterans may get treated or examined in VA outpatient facilities.

In an average month, 3,000 veterans may be buried in veterans' cemeteries and thousands of other veterans, their dependents, spouses and survivors will qualify for other services.

All told, the VA employs more than 200,000 people to dispense its services and payments.

On a typical day, they get 45,000 telephone calls from veterans inquiring about its programs.

What the government offers them is enough to fill a book, and in fact does: "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents," spelling out the fine-print details, is a 78-page pamphlet available for $2.50 from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

The book details the programs available to veterans who qualify — medical care, disability compensation, pensions, home loans, educational benefits, counseling, insurance among others.

Here's a summary of what is offered to those who meet specific qualifications, which vary from program to program:

Disability — Payments are available to veterans disabled by injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active duty.

Pension — Veterans with low personal or family incomes who are over 65 and not working are eligible for pensions; so are younger wartime veterans with limited incomes who are permanently and totally disabled.

Hospitalization — Veterans whose ailments arise from their time in service or were the cause of their discharge are given first claim to VA medical treatment; those who state under oath that they cannot defray the cost of treatment in civilian facilities are treated at VA hospitals where space permits.

Survivors' medical care — Payments for care in civilian facilities are available to the spouses or children of totally, permanently disabled veterans whose condition arose from their time in uniform, even after the veteran dies.

Nursing home care — Veterans eligible for hospitalization but not in need of hospital care are eligible for nursing home care.

Domiciliary care — Disabled veterans who cannot support themselves are eligible to make their home in VA domiciliarys.

Outpatient medical care — Medical exams and rehabilitation, counseling, training and mental health services are available to veterans who qualify for hospitalization.

Readjustment counseling — Vet storefront centers offer advice to Vietnam-era veterans who experience difficulties readjusting to civilian life.

GI Bill — Some veterans, generally those of the post-Korean War and Vietnam eras, are eligible for up to 45 months of payments covering all or part of their education tuition costs.

Educational loans — Eligible veterans may borrow up to $2,500 per academic year.

Vocational rehabilitation — Those with service-connected disability are eligible if the rehabilitation is necessary to overcome their handicaps.

Say Haitians In Prisoner Role

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Lutheran immigration agency says United States seems to be operating "concentration camps" for Haitian refugees, and shouldn't do it.

A statement by the Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service of the Lutheran Council in the U.S.A. said nearly 500 Haitian refugees have been detained in at least six federal correctional institutions, and added: "These Haitians have not been convicted of any crime. They are being held in prisons while awaiting immigration processing. The United States ought not to operate concentration camps."

Sponsorships are available for the Haitians, the statement said, through family and agency channels, and also are available for other groups seeking asylum.

Urging Congress Make Redress

ELGIN, Ill. (AP) — The U.S. Congress is being urged by the Church of the Brethren to acknowledge that the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II was wrong and to make redress for the damage done to them.

The church noted that under an executive order of President Franklin D. Roosevelt on Feb. 16, 1942, more than 120,000 persons of Japanese descent were uprooted and interred during the war years, without trials or claims of wrongdoing against them.

In a resolution, the general board of the Brethren church, which actively sought in that wartime period to protect the rights of the Japanese Americans, asked Congress to act to make amends.

Painful PBS Documentary Honors U.S. Veterans

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — On Veterans Day, it's easy to stand on Main Street and cheer the bands and colors honoring America's warriors. Another recognition of America's veterans is a documentary on PBS tonight, and it's not easy at all; it's awfully painful.

"Frank: A Vietnam Veteran," produced by WGBH in Boston, covers one man's wartime recollections and their grip on his everyday life for the next decade. It doesn't contain a single piece of war footage, only Frank's gripping story of a man and a war gone wrong. It already has been attacked by the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who criticized the program's air date and charged that Frank is not typical of "the vast majority of Vietnam veterans." PBS President Lawrence Grossman replied that the documentary doesn't imply any universality to Frank's experiences, but that the recounting is "an important and responsible presentation of matters of particular interest to veterans." Following the program, viewers will be able to call an off-air phone bank, manned by Vietnam veterans from Operation Outreach Vet Centers.

In the documentary, Frank, a social worker in Boston, is alone on center stage. Seated in a bare room, he tells his sordid story in rough, raw language.

Slightly balding at 37, Frank has neither the look nor manner of a killer. But that's what he thinks he was. He says there are times he wishes he died in some rice field, rather than be haunted by his guilt and nightmares.

"I wish everybody could understand what it is to take another human life, not knowing whether it's right or wrong, and to live with it," he says of his confusion.

"even today, 10 years later." He recalls the first time he killed, never thinking the victims were people who, in another time or place, might be friends. "I was very powerful. Everywhere I went, I had a weapon. I was not Frank. I was John Wayne. I was Steve McQueen. I was Clint Eastwood... I was living a fantasy."

Still, he remembers having some feelings about cherishing human life that contrasted to his indiscriminate killing as a twice-wounded, often-decorated U.S. Navy river patrolman. There was a woman who was carrying a tiny baby in one hand and a pig in the other. She was told she could only bring one on board, so she drowned the kid. "I couldn't understand it," Frank said.

The assured Frank on TV belies the confused Frank who was patrolling a Vietnam river one day and was a discharged soldier in San Diego — without an identity — that night. "I would have given anything to be back in Vietnam."

The excess baggage he brought home wrecked his marriage, drove him to alcohol and drugs, and made him a psychological mess. He paints a picture of American negligence toward the returning soldiers, a common theme to tonight's other documentary, the flimsier "Warriors' Women," also on PBS, about the women the vets came home to.

Frank's wife didn't understand his pressures and conflicts, and he couldn't ask for her help. "I was a war hero. John Wayne didn't do that."

The helplessness led to depression and near-suicide. "In Vietnam, when I felt like this, I could kill somebody," he said.

Doing the documentary was a catharsis, and Frank hopes the medication might work for others. The message: "to be honest about what happened over there, so that these guys who are walking the streets and holding this stuff inside can feel the freedom to talk about it somewhere. And not be judged for it."

Forty Arrested At Concert By Stones

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Forty people were arrested outside an arena where the Rolling Stones were playing their second Hartford concert, bringing to more than 100 the number of arrests at two shows by the hard-rocking English band.

Sixty-four arrests were made Monday night, in many cases as a crowd tried to rush the gates of the Civic Center, and there were 40 more arrests Tuesday night, police said.

Police Lt. Thomas Moore said Tuesday night's crowd was "more mellow."

But police reported at least three robberies, one at knife-point, outside the Hartford Civic Center Tuesday night. Some of the assailants were after money, but others were trying to get their hands on the precious tickets.

While those lucky enough to get inside — some paid as much as $300 per ticket — shook and shouted to the 25 songs the Stones performed each night, hundreds more without tickets waited outside hoping to get in.

Police had nearly 200 officers on the scene to handle the crowd.

Most of the arrests were on charges of disorderly conduct, breach of peace and interfering with police officers, police Capt. Charles Grasso said.

Inside the Civic Center, 15,000 fans each night heard songs ranging from "Down the Road Apiece," from the Stones' first record album nearly 20 years ago, to selections from their most recent album, "Tattoo You."

Civic Center director Frank E. Russo Jr. said Monday's opening night concert "went off fantastically."

Avers Snyder Is Not Committed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Snyder had not officially decided to leave NBC's "Tomorrow" show or the network, according to his agent.

Snyder last week warned his staff in New York that he would quit if NBC went ahead with plans to schedule a new David Letterman show after "The Tonight Show" and move his show back from 12:30 a.m. EST starting time to 1:30 a.m. NBC announced the starting time change this week.

But Ed Hookstraten, a Beverly Hills attorney and Snyder's agent said "The only thing we have discussed is the 1:30 time."

PIONEER DIES — Abel Gance, a cinematic pioneer of wide-screen and stereophonic sound, died Tuesday night at his Paris apartment, friends of the family reported. Gance, whose 1926 classic "Napoleon" is still acclaimed by audiences worldwide, was 92. (AP Laserphoto)

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 4 ♠ Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

This hand turned up in a national pairs championship. It rewarded those declarers who displayed superior technique.

Note North's raise to two spades. Even though the partnership was using four-card major-suit opening bids, the raise was a better choice than one no trump because the North hand contained a ruffing value to offset the fact that the raise was made with three low trumps. South wasted no time in getting to game.

The queen of diamonds was a popular opening lead, and most declarers won in dummy and took the trump finesse. West won and returned a diamond, and declarer ended up down one, losing a trick in each suit, or a club overruff.

At the table we watched, declarer gave himself an extra chance. He won the opening lead in his hand and led a low club toward the jack. Had this lost to the queen, declarer would have fallen back on the trump finesse for his contract. As the cards lay, however, West won the queen of clubs and continued with another diamond to force dummy's ace. Declarer cashed the jack of clubs, crossed to his hand with a high trump and discarded dummy's diamond loser on the king of clubs. He then ruffed a diamond on the table.

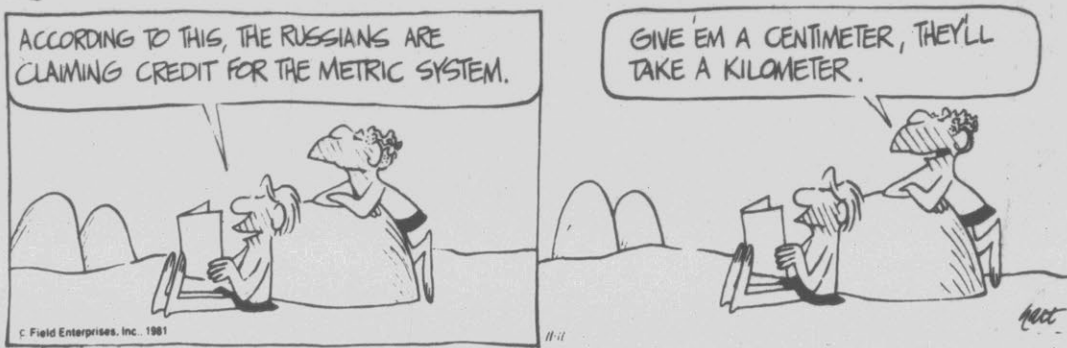

Declarer was now in the fortunate position of being able to make his contract even if he lost a trump trick. His only loser other than the club he had already surrendered was a heart. But the trump finesse was now a distinct liability—if it lost, declarer would be exposed to a club ruff. In the interests of safety, declarer led a trump to his remaining honor, and was pleasantly surprised to find that the queen dropped offside. As a result, he emerged with an unexpected overtrick.

Sees TV Basis Of Denomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sociologist who has analyzed contemporary television preaching says that the so-called "electronic churches" may lead to separate "electronic denominations."

Jeffrey K. Hadden, a professor at the University of Virginia, says that the sophistication of new computer-based communication techniques, allowing direct communication between broadcasters and audiences, makes feasible the formation of such new denominations.

He told a religious liberty conference, sponsored by the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, that such denominations also will be hastened by an ever-increasing need for funds to keep the programs on the air.

Hadden, author of a new book, "Prime Time Preachers," added:

"The propensity of the 'televangelists' to equate their grandiose dreams with God's will, and their childlike trust that the Almighty will deliver the bucks to pay for their monumental projects, no matter how ambitious, portends a disastrous conclusion some day."

San Francisco Chinatown Lures All; Yet, A Ghetto

By DAVID EINHORN
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Chinatown. It glitters with restaurants and open-air markets, bazaars and jewelry stores that make it a must stop for every visitor to San Francisco.

Yet it is also a ghetto, a dark, cramped place of sweatshops and gang violence and old people who live in fear.

This is the changing face of Chinatown. What started as a neighborhood for those who had worked on the gold mines and railroads in the mid-1800s has grown to become the largest community of its kind outside the Orient.

And it's still growing. When the lid was lifted on immigration from China in 1965, 20,000 people per year began to flow into the 40-square-block area bordered by the city's financial district on one side and Italian North Beach on another.

Today the population of Chinatown stands at about 65,000, a mixture of Cantonese-speaking elders and an influx of middle- and upper-class immigrants speaking Mandarin.

Ernest Chann, president of the Chinese Historical Society of America, says that for newcomers, Chinatown is a necessary way station on the road to the American dream. "It's a community in flux. There are immigrants who learn the language and learn the ropes and move out," he said.

"However there are also old folks who insist on staying, and you'll see many of them sitting around the few open parks, whiling away their twilight years."

The elderly live in what Chann calls a "subculture. They only speak Chinese and never venture out of the area, even for a day's vacation. They live and die in Chinatown."

Chinatown itself nearly died before it had a chance to live, said Chann.

Most of its first settlers were men. In 1872, the federal government passed an act halting immigration for all but relatives of people who were living in America at that time.

The supply of brides cut off, Chinatown became a bachelor's haven littered with opium dens.

What saved the community was the very event that destroyed it — the great earthquake of 1906. Many records were lost in the fire that swept through the city, freeing Chinese residents to purchase fraudulent identities of people who had lived in Chinatown before 1872. The tide of immigration resumed.

Chinatown took on its modern character in the 1920s, when the first shops and restaurants catering to tourists opened. It remained largely unchanged until 1965.

when the wave of immigrants gave it a new face.

"The culture has been diluted in certain ways," Chann said. "For instance, the food is no longer strictly Cantonese. The chefs are borrowing elements from each style. And the movies are sometimes in Cantonese."

Throughout its history, Chinatown has lived with violence. In the old days it was the Tong Wars. Today it's youth gangs. The violence reached a peak in September 1977 when five diners died in a hail of bullets at the Golden Dragon restaurant.

"We're concerned about it. There's always the potential for problems," said police Sgt. Mike Pera. He said the most common problem is extortion of small businessmen.

The police operate a gang task force that tries to head off trouble before it starts.

"Somebody finally gets fed up by being extorted and we get involved," Pera said.

But when the police do go to the people, as they did in investigating the Golden Dragon massacre, they get little help.

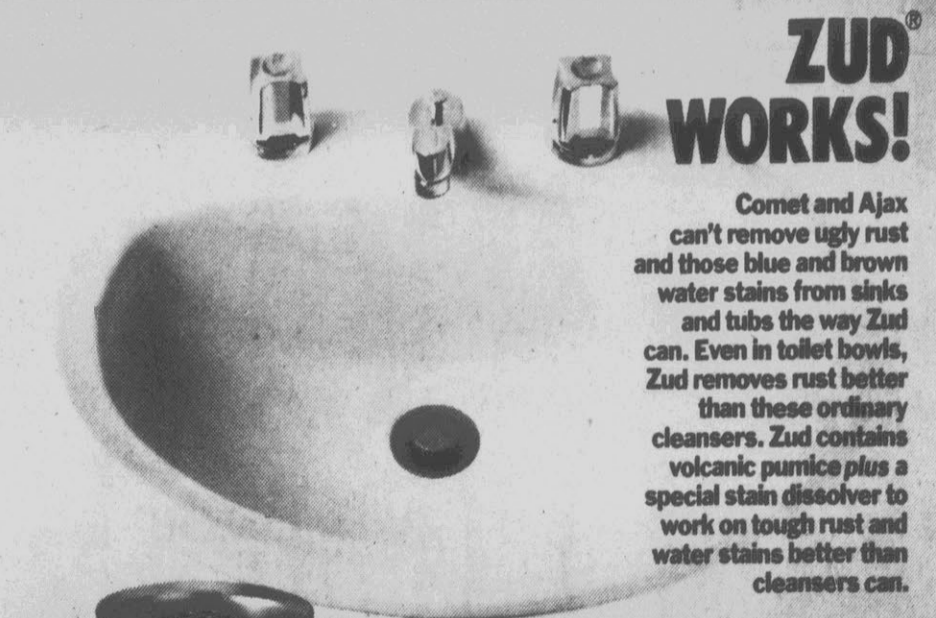

The experience of immigrants in the early years of this century as they were detained and sometimes deported has made them "very wary of government agencies," Chann said.

"Many people in public housing units don't apply for welfare even though they qualify. They don't report crime, they just lock their doors."

PCC To Teach Candlewicking

Pitt Community College will offer a course in candlewicking at Calico Square in Greenville beginning Nov. 13 at 10 a.m. The class will meet from 10 a.m. until noon each Friday for four weeks.

Candlewicking is a white-on-white embroidery which was used in North Carolina by colonial women to decorate bedspreads, pillows, curtains and clothing. It has recently experienced a revival in this area and may be adapted to contemporary as well as traditional designs.

PCC's registration fee is $8. Participants in the class will be responsible for their own supplies. For further information call 756-3130, ext. 238.

Opines Lost Ark Possibly A True Story

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The leather tent said in the Bible to have stood over the ark of the covenant really existed, and that means the golden box holding the Ten Commandments might also have been real, a biblical scholar contends.

"Obviously if the tent was real it lends credence to the fact that the ark was real," said Richard Friedman, a professor of Hebrew and literature at the University of California at San Diego. Friedman said although he doesn't know whether Moses built the tent, the structure stood inside Solomon's Temple at Jerusalem until the temple was burned down by the Babylonians in 587 B.C.

The Bible says that just inside the door of the red leather tent was a small incense altar where priests offered sacrifices. Behind the altar was the shrine housing the ark of the covenant. The story of the ark showed up in a surprising setting this year — the movie "Raiders of the Lost Ark" was about a search for the ark by rival archaeologists. "I loved the movie," Friedman said.

Speaking Monday to journalists at a meeting of the Council for the Advancement of Science Writing, Friedman said his research was based on ancient writings, archaeological evidence and the Bible. Friedman, a Harvard Divinity School graduate who analyzes the literary and historical aspects of the Bible to determine its origin and meaning, said he is not a fundamentalist and doesn't believe in every detail of the Bible.

He said the existence of the ark itself is an open question, since no evidence has been found to indicate it was real. But he said he has some 20 pieces of evidence from the Bible that prove the tent existed. The proof, he argued, lies in the descriptions of the size of the tent and the descriptions of Solomon's Temple. Because many different Biblical authors agree in their descriptions of the tent, it must have been real, he concluded.

The tent stood inside the temple under statues of two cherubs, he said, explaining that cherubs are not childlike angels who carry bows and arrows, as they are often shown. "These were sphinxes," he said of the statues, "with the head of a human, the body of a lion and the wings of eagles." Friedman said the tent was built sometime before the 11th century B.C., and since Moses is believed to have lived in the 13th century B.C., he has not ruled out Moses as its builder. He said his findings are helping him in his research to find out who wrote the first five books of the Bible, which by tradition have been ascribed to Moses.

Many scholars now agree that the first five books are a mixture of four separate accounts by four authors. Friedman has concluded that two of the tales were written by rival factions of priests in Israel in the 6th or 7th centuries B.C. "The destruction of Solomon's temple by the Babylonians, a historical fact, is mentioned along with the destruction of the tent in the Old Testament books Deuteronomy and Chronicles, and in several of the Psalms, Friedman said. The Book of Lamentations contains a description that mentions the destruction of the temple and the end of the observance of the Sabbath, another historical event, along with the demise of the tent.

"The companion elements here (in this passage) are all real institutions whose roles in Jerusalem were destroyed and are here bemoaned," Friedman has written in the Biblical Archeologist, a scholarly journal.

By DON McLEOD
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignorance of the complex, varied laws governing firearms use is the major problem facing the nation's law-abiding gun owners, says the author of a new state-by-state guide to firearms rules and regulations.
 Most of the people who own firearms are neither criminals nor dangerous eccentrics, says Alan M. Gottlieb, whose new book is called "The Rights of Gun Owners."
 "The majority of households in the United States have firearms in them, and half of America is not kooks," Gottlieb said in an interview. "Gun owners really resent the fact that they are called gun nuts."
 "And they don't like the fact that every time there's a crime committed, it's sort of like they've been accused just because they own a gun," he continued.

 While saying that "the rights of gun owners are under severe challenge," Gottlieb maintains, however, that lack of knowledge about current laws is the biggest problem people who own firearms have today.
 Laws governing firearms use and possession vary from state to state and are enforced differently in different jurisdictions, he says.
 "I found out in working on this issue for a number of years that an awful lot of gun owners don't know what the laws really are and a lot of law-abiding gun owners get trapped by this," Gottlieb said.
 "For example, if you live in Washington, D.C., and you wanted to go hunting in Massachusetts and you brought your rifle into Massachusetts to go hunting,

Previously Thought Extinct, A Tropical Bird Is Refound

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A colorful tropical bird not seen for 85 years and thought to be extinct has been found in New Guinea, the National Geographic Society announced today.

Previously the existence of the yellow-fronted bowerbird had been known only because of three skins of male birds brought in by Malay or Papuan hunters in the 1890s.

And a series of expeditions had failed to find the bird until last Jan. 31, when California ornithologist

Jared M. Diamond sighted one in an unexplored mountain range in New Guinea.

Scientists had thought the bowerbird extinct, and Diamond was not looking for it at the time.

"When I and anyone else who goes to New Guinea have dreams, we dream about finding the mystery bowerbird, but my goal on this trip was simply to do a general bird survey of this mountain range and help the Indonesian government plan a new national park there," Diamond said.

Nevertheless, he found both the bird and its bower on the first day of his two-week trip, and saw several others during his stay. Diamond now estimates that as many as 1,000 bowerbirds may live in this remote area.

At first he nearly ignored the bird, thinking it was another related species, but then he noticed that its golden yellow plume curved over to the nostrils. On his return to New York, he examined the skins of the birds from the 19th century and confirmed that the species was not extinct.

Male bowerbirds build a special tall nest of twigs around a sapling. Known as a bower, this nest is decorated with fruits and flowers and used to entice the female bowerbird into romance. Later the female builds her own nest in the trees to raise the young.

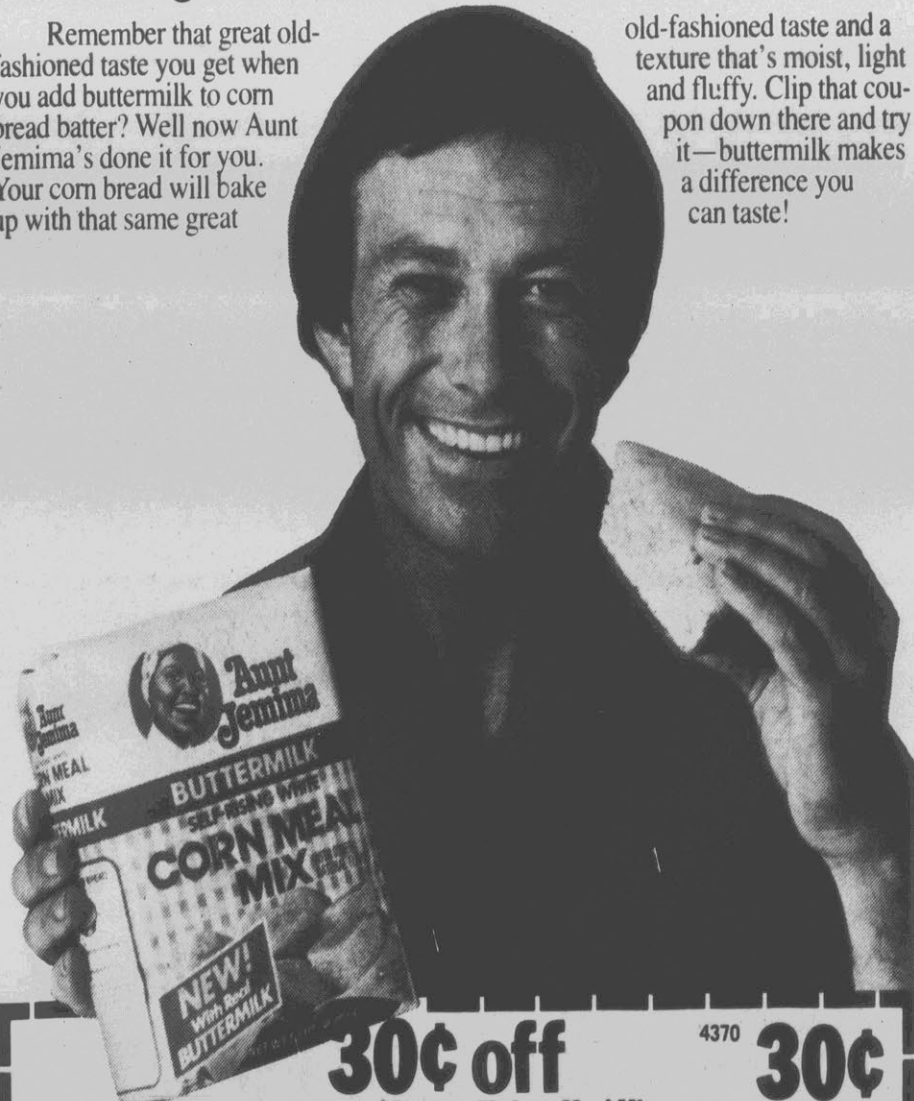

Diamond reported that on one instance he encountered a bird courting a female, making odd noises and parading in front of her with a blue fruit in his bill. The bower was decorated with three piles of fruit, one yellow, one blue and one green.

All To Be Dunned For TMI Decontamination Cost

FOOTING THE BILL — No matter who you are and no matter how far you live from Harrisburg, Pa., you will be helping foot the bill for cleaning

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — No matter who you are and no matter how far you live from Harrisburg, Pa., you'll be helping foot the bill for cleaning up after the billion-dollar nuclear accident at Three Mile Island.

The accident happened March 28, 1979, and the plant still sits — idle and dangerous — with eight feet of radioactive water on the floor.

Even after it's decontaminated, the damaged reactor may never produce electricity again.

Whether the cleanup money comes from utility bills, stock dividends, taxes or — as is likely — a combination of the three, all Americans will be dunned for decontamination costs.

Already, the federal government has spent $12 million on radiation research at the disabled plant. Another $19 million is budgeted for this year.

Now Congress must decide whether to endorse a Reagan administration recommendation to spend $100 million more for cleanup. Congress is also weighing legislation that would force utility companies nationwide to contribute to the project.

General Public Utilities Corp., owner of the crippled Three Mile Island plant, is warning that without government help it will go bankrupt. Utility analysts have told Congress that GPU's bankruptcy would shivel capital investment in electric utilities and cripple the entire industry.

Not everyone buys that argument.

"It's a game of nuclear chicken. Who's going to be the first to blink, the Congress or GPU?" said Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., who opposes federal cleanup aid for TMI. "If we blink because of their threat, we end up picking up part of the tab that belongs squarely on the shoulders of the utility industry."

Markey and other opponents of federal aid for TMI believe utility companies would produce the money to buoy GPU if there were no possibility of federal help.

And the plea for federal funds is particularly galling to lawmakers who were forced to cut job training projects and the school lunch program this year under the Reagan administration's austere spending program.

"It's a budget-busting bailout of a privately owned utility," said Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y., chairman of the House energy conservation and power subcommittee. "The Reagan administration continues to spout its rhetoric about the magic of the marketplace while it quietly spends millions of dollars to save the nuclear industry from the verdict of the marketplace."

Utility executives claim that some federal responsibility for nuclear accidents was implied when the U.S. government offered financial incentives to build nuclear power plants. Opponents of federal aid note that the utilities have never shared their profits with the government.

In addition, the utility executives say the Energy Department and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission will benefit from research and development conducted during cleanup at the plant.

"The federal government spent $12.8 billion in 1979 dollars from 1950 to 1979 to encourage the commercial use of nuclear power," Louis T. Austin Jr., nuclear task force chairman of the Edison Electric Institute, told Ot-tinger's subcommittee this fall.

"The TMI accident demonstrated that neither the efforts of the federal government nor the electric utility industry were sufficient to avoid the (resultant) loss. We both have an underlying responsibility to learn from the experience and assist in decontaminating the facility," Austin said.

But in the Republican-controlled Senate, where approval of federal cleanup money is expected, Democratic opponents say manufacturers of nuclear hardware should help pay for cleanup before the government steps in.

"Companies like Westinghouse and Babcock & Wilcox who make the reactors and profit handily from the nuclear program haven't been asked to come up with any of the funding," Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said.

The EEI, which represents 200 utilities, has pledged to contribute $192 million for the cleanup. To make it easier for EEI members to collect that money from ratepayers, the organization has asked for legislation making the contribution mandatory.

So far, the cleanup of TMI is estimated to cost about $1 billion, but further delays could escalate the cost. GPU has exhausted its $300 million in available nuclear insurance money to vent gas from the plant and prepare for chemical decontamination.

To produce an additional $700 million, Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh has proposed a funding plan endorsed by President Reagan.

Under Thornburgh's plan, the utility industry and the federal government each would pay $190 million, while GPU would pay $245 million and the states of Pennsylvania and New Jersey would contribute a total of $45 million.

Critics, pointing to the Reagan administration's promise of only $123 million, predict that the governor's plan will sputter for lack of funds — a suggestion that infuriates Thornburgh.

"This is not an exercise for bean counters. What we have accomplished is that the president of the United States now acknowledges that TMI is a financial priority," Thornburgh said in an interview.

"I cannot tell you the exact dollar amount of what the federal government will eventually pay, but I have to take the president at his word when he tells me he considers this a national problem and pledges his help," Thornburgh added.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Average attendance at United Methodist church school increased in 1980 for the first time in 19 years, reports the Rev. Warren Hartman of the denomination's education section. He says the overall increase was very small, only 1 percent, but nevertheless significant considering the past downtrend.

College Was An Example Of Self-Help

By Dr. H.G. Jones
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Joseph Charles Price, the first president of Livingstone College in Salisbury, was born free, on Feb. 10, 1954, only because his mother was free.

And the law gave the mother's status to the child, whose father, Charles Dozier, was a slave.

In fact, Charles Dozier was sold while Joseph was an infant, and the boy was given the surname of his mother's new husband, David Price.

Dozier, incidentally, was a ship's carpenter by trade and was reported to have prospered at the Baltimore shipyards after the Civil War.

At the age of 9, Joseph was carried by his mother from Elizabeth City, the place of his birth, to Union-occupied New Bern where he attended St. Andrews Chapel, St. Cyprian Episcopal School and Lowell Normal School.

One of his classmates from those early years described Price's emphasis upon essentials this way: "He wasted no shot on dead ducks."

In 1871, though his formal education was far from completed, Price was named principal of a school for blacks in Wilson, and he held that position until 1873, when he entered Shaw University in Raleigh.

His intention was to become a lawyer, but he decided instead to enter the A.M.E. Zion Church ministry. To this end, he transferred to Lincoln University, from where he was graduated in 1879 as valedictorian. Two years later he received his theological degree.

Shortly after his graduation, Price married his childhood friend, Jennie Smallwood, whom he had known in New Bern, and they had five children.

While attending an A.M.E. Zion Ecumenical Conference in England in 1881, Price was approached by Bishop James W. Hood, who proposed that he undertake a speaking tour in England in the interest of funds to establish a college for blacks in North Carolina.

Through his efforts nearly $10,000 was collected for Zion Wesley Institute, which had been chartered in Concord in 1879 and opened its doors the next year. These funds enabled the school in the fall of 1881 to move to Salisbury.

Price became president of the institution, whose name in 1882 was changed to Livingstone College in honor of David Livingstone, the English missionary and explorer of Africa.

The school originally stood on 40 acres and had three teachers, three students and a matron. It was a beginning, however, and Price is quoted as saying in 1884 that "Livingstone College stands before the world today as the most remarkable evidence of self-help among Negroes of this country."

Indicative of Dr. Price's national recognition was the fact that in 1888 he was offered a diplomatic post by President Grover Cleveland. Price responded, "I thank you for the honor you do me to offer me the Post of Minister to Liberia but I think I can do more good for my people here in Salisbury."

"My people" had always been of first concern to Joseph Charles Price, and his contributions to North Carolina undoubtedly would have been even greater had not his health begun failing in 1893. He was a victim of the dreaded Bright's disease.

The best medical aid was sought, but there was no stopping the disease. In August 1893 he was sent to Saratoga Springs, N.Y., for special treatment, but his health had deteriorated further when he returned in October.

He died on Oct. 25, 1893, and was buried on the campus of the college that he founded.

SIGN DISAPPROVED LONDON (AP) — London's municipal Labor government, the Greater London Council, proposed putting signs on roads leading into the city saying "You are entering a nuclear-free zone", but the Conservative national government disapproved.

Romania Is Following Own Course

By STEPHEN H. MILLER
Associated Press Writer
BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — More than a year after the founding of Poland's labor movement Solidarity, the name of Lech Walesa still goes unmentioned in Romania's tightly controlled press.

The government of President Nicolae Ceausescu, one of the most restrictive in the Soviet bloc, is unhappy with Solidarity and the continuing Polish problem, nevertheless.

Romania is suffering from economic troubles similar in some respects to those which led to Poland's 1980 strikes and the founding of Solidarity, a non-party organization unprecedented in Eastern Europe.

Ceausescu's government has threatened food hoarders with jail terms of up to five years and last month was forced to institute formal rationing of bread and flour.

Ceausescu has long discouraged political challengers of any sort in Romania, allowing the promotion of his own family and the celebration of himself in Eastern Europe's most intensive personality cult.

While other East-bloc countries bitterly attacked Solidarity from the first, Romania's press appeared to be trying to reveal as little as possible to Romanians about events in Poland.

Comment was scarce, as were news reports on Poland's troubles. The name Solidarity appears relatively seldom even now in Romania's press.

Diplomats and Bucharest residents say they cannot remember hearing or reading the name of Lech Walesa in Romanian broadcasts or newspapers.

But Ceausescu is also the architect of Romania's course of independence within the Soviet bloc, a course often hailed by Western politicians and one popular with many Romanians.

Romania, a non-Slavic Black Sea country of about 22 million people, lost considerable territory to the neighboring Soviet Union at the close of World War II.

Ceausescu rose to power in 1965 and enforced a clear de-Sovietizing of his country's brand of communism.

Romania has long resisted much of the tight economic integration encouraged in the Soviet bloc. Its national airline flies U.S.-made aircraft and the Russian language is not a required subject in Romanian schools.

Romania does not send troops to Warsaw Pact maneuvers and will not allow other troops of that East-bloc military alliance to maneuver on its soil.

Solidarity's national congress in September brought a new wave of charges around the Soviet bloc that the union was encouraging intolerable anti-Soviet activity in Poland.

Romania joined in the criticism, though avoiding the anti-Soviet issue, only after Solidarity issued a statement encouraging the founding of independent labor unions elsewhere in the East bloc.

The Romanian Communist Party newspaper Scinteia charged the congress had brought attacks "against the social order and the Polish party."

Elsewhere in the Romanian press there were attacks on "anti-state activities" and "reactionary forces" as well as "anti-socialist activities" in Poland.

But Romania, which condemned the 1968 Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia, carefully did not join in the threatening charges that anti-Soviet forces were loose in Poland.

Even in the heat of its unusually extensive attacks on Solidarity, Ceausescu's government upheld Poland's right to resolve its own troubles.

"The Romanian party," Scinteia said, "does not wish in any way to interfere in Poland's internal affairs."

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retail prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)
Lowe's Return Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.
