

Columbia Sails Second Time Into Orbit

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Columbia sailed into orbit today, the first craft from Earth to make a return trip to space.

The shuttle carried two American astronauts on a five-day test flight to prove Columbia is a truly reusable rocketship — and more. Scientific monitors were aboard the ship, along with a robot arm that will demonstrate the shuttle's ability to work in space.

Launch was perfect when it finally came, at 10:10 a.m. EST.

During the first revolution. Joe

Engle and Richard Truly were to crank up the first of many tasks on their busy flight plan — opening and closing Columbia's huge cargo bay doors.

Three minutes into the flight, Mission Control in Houston said Columbia's engines were running very smoothly and four minutes shuttle communicator Dan Brandenstein announced, "Columbia now committed to space flight."

"Very smooth," said Engle. At 12 minutes, Columbia soared into history at an orbit of 138 miles by 61 miles

It was the first trip into space for both astronauts, and a thunderous celebration for Truly's 44th birthday.

Columbia was moving at 17,400 mph. The craft was scheduled to make 83 orbits in five days before gliding to Earth next Tuesday afternoon on the Rogers Dry Lake in California's Mojave Desert.

Columbia's countdown, salvaged by a feverish, 11th-hour repair job, climaxed in a burst of fire and smoke as the craft's three main engines and two solid fuel rocket boosters flashed to life, punishing the launch pedestal with a dazzling sheet of flame.

Ignition came eight days after an earlier countdown was scrubbed just 31 seconds from T-zero. Columbia's first flight, April 12-14, also followed an anguishing postponement.

Today's launch first was delayed from 7:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. so technicians could fix a data relay unit with a part scavenged from the shuttle's half-built sister ship in California. Repair was completed this morning just after midnight and the signal flashed to start the final countdown hours.

Then, nine minutes before scheduled liftoff, there was one last, brief, delay — with launch director George Page telling his control team, "Let's take our time and do it right." They did and the launch was picture perfect.

Just before the ship escaped communications for the first time, Engle told Mission Control, "The burn (to orbit) looks good today." When communication was reestablished through a Madrid, Spain tracking station, there was but one minor flaw — if it could be called that — a high reading on an auxiliary power unit. Truly simply shut it down.

The launch trajectory — NASA calls it an "attack angle" — was steeper than for Columbia's April ascent, an effort by the space agency to test the shuttle's design limits by subjecting the ship to higher pressure loads.

The spacecraft moved swiftly away from pad 39A, clearing the 347-foot service tower in 7 seconds and arcing out over the Atlantic Ocean on a northeast heading.

The astronauts were riding upside down as Columbia rolled to orbit, spewing 700-foot-long plumes of white smoke from the solid fuel rockets.

Haig Says U.S. To Show Cuban Intervention Risks

By BARTON REPPERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. declared today that the United States is taking steps to show that the risks of Soviet-supported Cuban "interventionism" in Central America go beyond any strategic advantages sought by Moscow and Havana.

Appearing before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Haig was questioned about recent reports of U.S. contingency plans involving possible military moves against Cuba to retaliate for Cuba's support of leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Haig responded that there was now an "increasing level" of Cuban activity in the Western Hemisphere following Cuba's dispatching of troops and advisers to Angola, Ethiopia and South Yemen during the late 1970s.

"Now I think it behooves the United States, as we have done, to make it clear to all concerned that this kind of activity is a profound danger to world peace and stability," the secretary said. He added that "I think it would only be prudent of the United States to view this activity with the utmost concern, as we do."

Haig did not disclose any specifics about U.S. contingency plans regarding Cuba.

However, he warned that it is "essential" for the United States not only to provide economic aid to Central America, but also to demonstrate that the risks of Soviet-Cuban intervention "exceed whatever advantages they seek for themselves."

Earlier, Haig said the recent wave of peace demonstrations in Western Europe "does not mean that our European allies are going 'neutral' or that they are abandoning NATO."

Instead, he said, the Red Army's occupation of Afghanistan and the recent violation of neutral Sweden's territory by a Soviet submarine "should dispel the illusion that neutrality confers immunity."

Haig also told the committee that the United States was seeking to pursue a "balanced strategy" in the Middle East based upon the Camp David accords.

"The Reagan administration is fully committed to the Camp David accords which have not only brought peace between Egypt and Israel, but provide the basis for broader participation as well," the secretary said.

He said the Middle East today is "marked by a consensus of strategic concern about the threats posed by the Soviet Union and its allies."

In a statement reviewing overall goals of U.S. foreign policy, Haig applauded the Senate's narrow vote to approve AWACS radar planes for Saudi Arabia and called on Congress to provide the foreign aid money and other support the administration needs to carry out its foreign policy.

"Throughout the world, we are showing that we have a broad and practical program to foster respect for individual liberty, to preserve peace, to increase security and to promote development," he testified. But Haig cautioned that "if we are to conduct an effective policy directed toward these goals, Congress must provide the necessary resources."

Pool's Deficit Is Cut

By CHAD BUFFKIN
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's Recreation and Parks Commission has received a report showing the municipal swimming pool cut its operating deficit by 15 percent last summer.

Commission member Jim Parker, who oversees operation of the pool, told the commission Wednesday night that total expenditures this year were $16,321.94, compared with $18,804.53 last year.

Parker said the expenses last year represented a deficit of 69 percent. A $1 entrance fee and increased fees for swimming lessons offset the deficit this year.

The report came during the commission's monthly meeting.

In other matters, Sydney Womack, a commission member since June volunteered to serve as the agency's representative to the city Planning and Zoning Board.

Boyd Lee, director of the commission, presented the parks division's report for October, breaking down park maintenance, security, vandalism, equipment, personnel and salaries. According to the report, 20,310 persons used city facilities during October. So far this year, 268,717 persons have used the facilities.

The commission voted unanimously in favor of asking the city school system to establish a soccer program at Rose High School.

"Soccer is coming in fast all over the nation," said Dan Earnhardt, who made the motion. "Our city program is excellent, but after the kids outgrow it, there is no way for them to continue in the sport until they reach college."

According to Lee, a soccer program sponsored by the commission has 385 participants.

Another item on the agenda was to recognize committee member Joe Taft, who is going off the commission after serving for eight years. During that time, Taft was the commission's representative to

Prime Lending Rate Dips Again Demand Continues To Weaken

By The Associated Press
The prime lending rate fell to 16.5 percent from 17 percent today, reaching its lowest level in nearly a year, as a weakening economy continues to reduce demand for credit.

Chase Manhattan Bank, the nation's third-largest commercial bank, led today's move to lower the prime rate, which stood as high as 20.5 percent in September.

The prime rate — the base upon which banks calculate interest charges on short-term business loans to their most creditworthy customers — is at its lowest level since late November 1980, when it stood at 16.25 percent and was climbing toward a record 21.5 percent.

Declining interest rates have been one of the few bright spots in the deteriorating economy, and while corporate demand for short-term borrowing is abating, concern continues over the huge federal appetite for funds to meet a growing deficit.

The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board has called for additional government spending cuts to curb inflation, while rebellious Senate Republicans continued to push for tax increases and cuts in benefit programs, ignoring the president's wishes.

Paul Volcker, who heads the nation's central bank, said Wednesday that the prescription for cooling inflation requires additional federal budget cuts and continued tight control on the supply of credit in the economy.

Volcker said tax increases may be necessary to offset a mounting federal deficit and halt the growth in federal borrowing.

Raising the possibility of new taxes — or less tax reduction than Congress voted last summer — he said, "If spending trends cannot be brought into line with our prospective capacity to generate revenues with present taxes, then we cannot shrink from considering new revenue sources."

Morgan Says 'No'

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Robert Morgan says he is not a candidate for chancellor of East Carolina University, despite speculation that he might seek the post.

Morgan, an ECU graduate, said in a speech to the Young Democrats Club of Durham that he never was a candidate for the position.

Ashley Futrell, chairman of the ECU board of trustees, last month said Morgan, himself a former board chairman, had been nominated by several people for the chancellorship.

Morgan said last month he had not ruled out the possibility of seeking the job.

The position was left vacant with the resignation of Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, who has been chancellor of the Greenville school since 1978.

Morgan, defeated in his bid for re-election to the Senate in 1980 by Sen. John East, is a member of a Raleigh law firm. He also teaches a course at the Campbell University law school.

MOTHERS' MARCH VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Mrs. Barbara (Ralph) Hall, chairman of this year's Mothers' March for the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, has asked Hotline to appeal for volunteers to help canvass the community Monday through Nov. 22. She said the canvassers will be involved, not only in fund-raising, but in acquainting the community with the work being done by the March of Dimes and the work that needs to be done to prevent birth defects. Anyone who can help is urged to call Mrs. Hall at 756-0262 immediately.

Steering Committee For N.C. 2000 Chosen

The appointment of a steering committee to help direct the activities of the year-long NC 2000 project was announced today by Pitt County NC 2000 chairman Tommy L. Edwards.

The Pitt committee is one of 100 groups named — one in each county of the state — as part of the statewide NC 2000 project. The purpose of the project is to focus the attention of top thinkers, leaders and citizens on the next two decades in the state.

Members of the Pitt committee include: Dr. J. Elliott Dixon of Ayden; Mrs. Ann Dufus, Rev. Arlee Griffin, Bob Griffin, Larkin Little, Dr. Jon Tingelstad, Ed Walker and David Whichard, all of Greenville; Wilton R. Duke of Farmville; Sparky McCaskill and Charles McLawhorn of Winterville; Henry C. Oglesby of Grifton and Mrs. Betty Speir of Bethel.

"I'm very pleased that this group of leading citizens will be working with me on this planning effort," Edwards said. "This group will be very important in identifying issues of particular interest to citizens of Pitt County between now and the year 2000."

State NC 2000 chairman William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system, said, "We will be examining where we are now as a state; where we are likely to be in the year 2000, if present trends continue; where citizens want to be; and how we can bring about a better life for ourselves and our children in the years to come."

"A vital part of this effort," Friday emphasized, "involves citizens in each county actively participating through meetings, discussion of the issues in formal and informal ways with other citizens, and in involving as many citizens as possible in the public ballot which will take place next spring."

Persons interested in learning more about NC 2000 should contact Edwards at 756-1185 or by writing NC 2000, 116 W. Jones St., Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

Lawmen Overpower 2 Armed Ashe Inmates

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — Law enforcement officials rushed in and overpowered two prisoners early this morning to release the Jefferson police chief, another prisoner and a jailer who had been held hostage for about 13 hours.

No one was injured in the incident, which began about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday when escapees from federal prison took Chief Tony Black, 38, jailer Gib Johnson, 53, and inmate James Garrison, 37, of Lexington, hostage.

Black, at a news conference after the ordeal ended, identified the prisoners holding the hostages as Marty Spivey, 23, and Tony Walser, 29, both of Lexington.

The prisoners had been in the jail two weeks after being arrested on breaking and entering charges. Ashe County Sheriff Richard Waddell said he could not say why Garrison was held hostage.

Law enforcement officials immediately began negotiating for the release of the hostages and efforts continued through the night. The situation came to a head when officers unlocked a door to the jail about 7:35 a.m. today and saw Spivey sleeping.

The four officials — U.S. Marshall Corky Miller, Ashe County Sheriff's Department Capt. Eugene Goss, Davidson County Sheriff

Paul McCrary and his Chief Deputy Jim Johnson — said they rushed in, grabbed Walser and surprised Spivey.

Although the law-enforcement officials and prisoners were armed, no shots were fired.

The situation clearly grew tense during the night when lawmen tried to tie a metal cable to a rear door of the jail to prevent the prisoners from opening it.

"They're shaking this door right here, and I'm fixing to get very nervous," said one of the armed prisoners. The voice could be heard through a police radio the prisoner had taken when he took the hostages.

"One more time and I'm going to start shooting," screamed the man.

When the prisoner threatened to open fire, lawmen backed off and left the door alone.

After the ordeal, Black and Johnson said they were never threatened by the inmates, who were carrying shotguns and rifles. The prisoners allowed the hostages to receive sandwiches and Johnson, who has a heart condition, was given medicine, Waddell said.

Parade-Planning?

This year's Greenville Jaycees annual Christmas parade, planned for Dec. 12 at 10:30 a.m., will have an added dimension, parade coordinator Jim Allgood said — Several participants are building their own floats to enter in competition.

The entry fee is $50 per float. Anyone interested in building a float for competition should contact the Greenville Jaycees.

The Jaycees still have several professionally built floats left for anyone interested in sponsoring one. These are made by a company in Virginia, which provides each sponsor a complete float, including the name of the sponsor on the side of each.

The parade route, which is different from last year's, will begin at First and Reade streets and continue to Reade Circle, turning right on Dickinson Avenue, then turning left on Washington Street and ending on First Street.

Anyone not already signed up who is interested in taking part may contact one of the following Jaycees: Jim Allgood, 757-3441 or 758-3471, Ext. 278; Matthew Ward, 758-4748 or 752-1100; or Bobby James, 756-7124 or 758-1512.

Dear Abby

Mother, Son Need Help

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you've heard of battered wives, but have you ever heard of a battered mother? Well, I am one. I've been divorced for 10 years. I have a 13-year-old son who hasn't seen his father in eight years. I worked to support myself and my son, and I devoted myself to being a good mother.

The last two years my son has become physically stronger than me, and when he wants his way about anything he strikes out physically. He has hit me with a baseball bat, given me black eyes, numerous bruises and twisted my arms until I feared they were broken. More recently he knocked me against the stove and broke two of my ribs.

We went to a family counselor last year, but in the counselor's presence the boy shut up like a clam. He absolutely refused to go again. He quit Boy Scouts and now he's ditching school. He's not all bad. He's had a paper route for two years. I help him with the wrapping and stuffing.

The boy is enrolled in public school in the fall, but I can get a loan to put him in a private school. (He said he'd run away from a military school.)

His father was a bum. His grandfather is a Superior Court judge. Abby, how much of his behavior can I attribute to heredity?

TOUGHING IT OUT IN TEXAS

DEAR TOUGHING: Determining whether or not your son's behavior is due to hereditary factors is not nearly as important as doing something to alter it. A psychiatric evaluation of both you and your son is in order. His brutality and lack of sensitivity indicate that he could be suffering from a mental disorder. Help him! And if you allow yourself to be subjected repeatedly to his abuse, you need help too, Mother.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 65-year-old widow whose husband left her financially secure. I have two children in their 30s who for the last 10 years have been involved in a series of live-ins, marriages, divorces, remarriages and shack-ups. I finally couldn't take any more of their "your kids and my kids are fighting with our kids" situations, so I avoided them. They let me know that I wouldn't be invited to any more "family affairs" if I didn't take a more liberal view and become more accepting of their current roommates.

The emotional stress affected me physically and I was under the care of a physician for two months, during which time my children tried to prove me incompetent to handle my business affairs so they could get control of my holdings. I took a senior citizens' cruise to forget for a while my upcoming legal squabble and met an attractive widower. It was love at first sight! He's a retired professor of law and offered to assist the young attorney who is handling my case. We are courting now and plan to marry. My children insist that he is after my money. He's not. His holdings are equal to my dividends.

Abby, please tell your readers who believe in the sanctity of the home and marriage to take heart. The good Lord helps those who put up a fight to preserve that sanctity.

F. IN SOUTH CAROLINA

DEAR F.: There is no law, natural or conceived by man, that says children can force upon parents their concepts of culture - contemporary or otherwise. You, the good Lord and your new husband are sanctified in your course. Your kids are the losers.

DEAR ABBY: My name is Paula. I married Frank Wolf and we have a 4-year-old son. Frank and I were divorced a year ago and I took back my maiden name, so now I am Paula Johnson again. My question: Am I Miss Paula Johnson, or Mrs. Paula Johnson? Being the mother of a son, it would appear as though I had a child out of wedlock if I am Miss Paula Johnson, right? How can I explain this?

PAULA JOHNSON

DEAR PAULA: You are Miss Paula Johnson. You could use the convenient "Ms." which discloses nothing about your marital status. Should you encounter a situation that you think requires an explanation, simply state that you were married but are now divorced and took your maiden name back.

MR. AND MRS. BILL WATSON

Anniversary Reception Held

FALKLAND - Mr. and Mrs. Bill Watson of Falkland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday at the Falkland Presbyterian Church.

The couple's children are Donald Watson of Fort Worth, Tex., William Watson of Orlando, Fla., Dillon, Charles and Michael Watson and Sue W. Haddock, all of Greenville, and Danny Watson of Rocky Mount. They have 11 grandchildren, one great grandchild and seven step grandchildren.

Greeting guests were Mrs. Haddock and Mrs. Ruth Watson. Angie Haddock, granddaughter of the couple, presided at the guest register.

Mrs. Linda Watson poured punch and was assisted by Karen and Denise Stancil, granddaughters. Cake was served by Mrs. Ettil Mason.

A fall flower arrangement and two three-tiered silver candelabra entwined with ivy and gold mums highlighted the buffet table. Arrangements of mums, ivy and magnolia decorated the receiving table, gift table and a display of family photographs.

The honoree was remembered with a corsage of gardenias.

The anniversary was directed by Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Ruth Watson and Mrs.

Haddock. Approximately 140 friends called during the afternoon. The reception was given by the couple's children.

Addie Gore Gives Talk

The meeting of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club was held Tuesday morning at the home of Mrs. W. H. Woolard. The guest speaker was Addie Gore, home economics agent for the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service.

Speaking on "Old Tyme Thanksgiving," she contrasted the procurement of food, cooking procedures and Thanksgiving menus of the country's forefathers with those of present day. She also discussed shopping for good nutrition and cooking with safety.

Assisting hostess was Mrs. W. A. Wright.

A letter was acknowledged from James Bailey of Pitt Memorial Hospital expressing appreciation to the club for the landscaping in the area outside the Rehabilitation Unit which the club financed. It was decided to provide sensor switch for the lights at the northern entrance of Lakewood Pines.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Joseph M. Laney Jr., where an auction of baked goods will be held for the funds to be donated to Social Services.

A dish of vinegar in a room will dispel the odor of smoke.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The first time I read where the First Lady was buying China for $209,509, I said to myself, "It's probably a bargain, but what is she going to do with a billion people and all that raw fish?"

Then I discovered it was china . . . as in women on television looking at their reflections in it and going crazy.

I'll be honest with you. I'm trying real hard to get excited about dishes that match, but at $952 a place setting, it's a strain.

Can you imagine $952 for 19 pieces? I can't be absolutely sure, but I think my best friend's daughter-in-law, Karen, chose the same pattern as the White House. All I know is when I looked at the bridal registry, I nearly had a heart attack. Here was a girl whom I know for a fact wore raggy underwear, and she listed china, glassware and silver patterns that came with armed guards.

Twelve of us, including her mother, chipped in and bought her a saucer for her wedding present.

I don't know whose idea it was to get matching china for the White House, but it's possible one of those super salesmen got through to the First Lady. Lord knows, they're hard to resist.

Before I was married, a man called Larry gave a dinner in our home and convinced me we would not be legally married until we had a complete set of waterless cookery that preserved the natural juices and prevented the escape of vitamins necessary for our growth and development.

Five hours later, I had signed a binding contract for $700 worth of saucepans and skillets. The payments were to be spread over the rest of my life.

My husband-to-be was tolerant, but my mother reminded me (a) I did not know how to turn on a stove; (b) steam took the curl out of my hair.

COOKING IS FUN!

We've updated a popular recipe from the 1950s; in addition, it's now a make-ahead dish.

1 pound ground chuck beef
15 1/2-ounce can tomato sauce

Tabasco sauce to taste

8-ounce package broad egg noodles

8-ounce package cream cheese, soft

1 cup creamstyle cottage cheese

1/4 cup commercial sour cream

1-3rd cup finely chopped firmly packed scallions (green tops included)

In a 10-inch skillet over moderate heat cook the beef, crumbling with a fork, until it loses its red color; off heat, stir in tomato sauce and tabasco. Cook noodles according to package directions. With a spoon, stir together the cream cheese, cottage cheese and sour cream until well mixed; stir in the scallions. In a buttered 2-quart oblong baking dish (11 1/4 by 7 1/2 by 1 3/4 inches) spread half the noodles; top with the cheese mixture; cover with the remaining noodles; top with the beef mixture. Refrigerate up to 2 days. Bake (directly from refrigerator) in a preheated 350-degree oven until bubbling around edges and hot in the center - about 30 to 40 minutes. Let stand about 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings. (If mixture begins to bubble over toward end of baking, place a sheet of foil on rack below baking dish.)

Nancy, Nancy, Nancy. I know what's going to happen with your 220 place settings of matched china. You're going to invite 220 people for the big eat-off and at the last minute Vice President Bush will want to bring another couple. Not only that, someone will decide that if we keep buying dishes, this country is not going to have a pot to cook in.

I don't want to know what happens when Larry goes to the White House with his sales pitch.

Using 18th Century Materials

NEW BERN — "The secret to an 18th century Christmas is in using 18th century materials," indicates Herb Rea, Tryon Palace staff horticulturist.

"Our decorations combine a variety of natural materials that Governor Tryon and his family would have had available to them in 1770, when they celebrated their first Christmas in the then-new palace."

The flavor of the palace this December will be of this bygone era—and Rea is the man responsible for insuring that the exterior doors, windows, railings and gates are festive in the traditional manner. Tryon Palace will be celebrating the third annual 18th century Christmas season complete with four tours of the complex by the light of over 1,000 candles.

"The palace gardens and grounds supply most of our material. Greenery such as magnolia, pine, boxwood, grecian laurel and variegated holly would have been found in Tryon's day and cut for the holidays. Then fresh fruits, nuts, berries and dried items would have been interspersed to contrast with the greenery," said Rea.

Extensive research was conducted by the staff using diaries and correspondence — records from individuals living in the 18th and 19th centuries. These records described in detail the types of materials which composed decorations including such items as herbs and spices, the different kinds of greenery, fruits (citrus fruits were brought to New Bern in the 18th century from the West Indies), and "everlastings" or dried materials so-called as some interior decorations were left up year-round.

To achieve an 18th century look, Rea had his staff begin preparation weeks before the opening day of the Christmas season. On days of inclement weather the foundation work commences. This is the time when nonperishables are taken care of.

Wreath bases consisting of straw forms are wrapped in green plastic material. Nuts, dried herbs and flowers are dipped into a preservative and allowed to dry; then attached to florist picks in readiness to stick into wreaths.

Timing is of the utmost importance. Rea instructs, "The secret to attractive decorations is to cut the greenery on a day close to Christmas so it will last through the holiday season."

Therefore, a flurry of activity marks the week before the opening. Rea has staff members cut greenery in the morning for immediate preparation of the decorations. He hangs the completed decorations that same day.

All of the greenery is cut from the palace grounds with the exception of the roping. The greenery is hand-tied to wooden picks and inserted individually in the wreath forms, and arranged "loosely" to look natural.

The next step is the fruit treatment. Larger fruits are placed on the florist picks (and smaller fruits are wired to picks); then apples, grapes, and pears are dipped in Johnson's Future, a crystal clear acrylic wax which preserves and protects the fruit. Citrus fruits are not dipped as they last longer without the treatment.

The final step occurs after all the wreaths are greened. Fruits, nuts and berries are carefully arranged on the wreaths in an artful manner. The simple green rings are transformed into colorful holiday symbols worthy of even Gov. Tryon's discriminating eye.

Some favorite decorations designed by Rea involve greenery with some unusual items. One wreath which was quite popular last year was a combination of pomegranates, photinia berries and peanuts. Another favorite was an arrangement of boxwood, pecans and limes. In both instances, the combination of green, bright accent fruit and the soft, subtle tones of the nuts blended together attractively.

In addition to the splendor of the building exteriors, the interiors of the 40-room palace and five other historic homes in the complex will be decorated for the 18th century.

The John Wright Stanley House, built around 1780, will reflect a late 18th century Christmas season; the Stevenson House, constructed in 1805 by a sea captain will be decorated in the manner of an early 19th century Yuletide; and the Daves house, completed about 1809 will display unique colonial crafts.

Additionally, two buildings not normally open to the public will be decked for the holidays. The first floor of the Commission House circa 1850 will be decorated for a Victorian Christmas and the Jones House, built about 1809, will exhibit a collection of antique toys on its first floor.

A Christmas tour ticket, including admission to decorated rooms of the palace and five houses, is available to adults for $4 and to children grades 1-12 for $1. Special candlelight tours are scheduled for Dec. 12-13, 15 and 17 from 5-9 p.m. Tickets are also available for these events.

Tryon Restoration Complex is open Tuesday through Saturday 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sunday from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. There will be a special Monday opening on Dec. 14 from 9:30 a.m.-4 p.m. All buildings will be closed Dec. 21, 24-26, and will reopen on Dec. 27.

Councilwoman Named To Post

CHARLOTTE — Greenville City Councilwoman Judy Greene was elected to the board of directors of the North Carolina League of Municipalities during the organization's 72nd annual meeting here this week.

Mrs. Greene will represent District IV, involving the counties of Pitt, Wayne, Lenoir, Greene, Johnston and Wilson, on the board, which is made up of 12 district representatives and five officers.

The new board member, who was elected last week to her third term on the City Council, is serving as a member of the league's Legislative Committee and is also a member of the National League of Cities' Policy Committee on Community and Economic Development. Greenville City Manager Ed Wyatt served as moderator of a program on "Getting More for Your Public Information Dollar" during the meeting. Wyatt filled in for Mayor Don McGlohon who had been scheduled to moderate the program.

A Monumental Work

This generation of Americans, and succeeding generations, has been enriched by the writings of Will and Ariel Durant who died but two weeks apart.

In a world marked by rapid change, hasty workmanship, shifting values, ever-briefer attention spans; and with it all a condensation of writing, "speed-reading", intensification of visual stimuli, the faster-paced adaptation of communications (letter-writing, for example, is no longer an art)...in a world such as this, the Durants produced a monumental literary work which required much of a lifetime: The Story of Civilization.

How many writers of the 1970s and the newborn 1980s can visualize a lifetime of writing on a single topic? Few, we'd guess (wouldn't you?).

Together the Durants wrote 11 volumes hailed by some critics as the most impressive history produced in the century. One earned a Pulitzer prize for general non-fiction in 1968, indicative of the quality of writing as well as the accompanying research.

Will Durant was also known as a philosopher; possibly because of his first book which opened the doors to the monument he later shared with his wife. That initial volume was entitled "The Story of Philosophy"; but the title of philosopher might just as well have been attributed to his genius of insight and knowledge of the world and his times.

One can have only deep respect for the thought Durant expressed in his recent years when he remarked "Somebody has to get out of the way to make place for new vitality, so I have a great respect for death. I shall run into it very soon. But it doesn't frighten me at all. I've wondered why the Reaper has waited so long to get hold of me."

As happens to all mortals, it happened.

RING AROUND THE COLLAR!

MORRIS

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

A Time To Remember

WASHINGTON — A bugler will blow taps, flags will fall to half-staff, and across our nation this week we will honor the veterans of American wars, both living and dead, for the service they gave their country. It is always a somber occasion, but this year brings a note of gratification: We are about to do something about Vietnam.

Since the beginning of our Republic, 38.9 million soldiers, sailors, Marines and airmen have participated in our wars. Of that number, 25.8 million are living. More than one million died in combat.

In keeping with millennial custom, we have honored our warriors, and we have especially honored those who went to war and did not return. In courthouse squares both north and south, Union and Confederate soldiers, immobilized in bronze, still give cause to remember. Almost every major city honors its dead of World Wars I and II. Until now, nothing has been done by way of tribute to those who fell in Vietnam.

Our treatment of the veterans of Vietnam has pro-

Veterans Memorial Fund has raised about $2.5 million toward its $7 million goal. This week the black granite will be ordered. In January stone carvers will begin inscribing the names of the dead, memorializing them in the order in which they fell. A year hence, on Veterans Day of 1982, the completed memorial will be dedicated.

It is a pity that this voluntary undertaking should recently have been slowed by controversy over the memorial design. Let me venture my own opinion: This will be the most moving war memorial ever erected. The dead are not to be symbolized by stock representations of soldiers and Marines. The design offers none of the bombast seen in such memorials as the monstrosity in Indianapolis. We are not to have Greek columns, mausoleums, Corinthian curlicues.

Speaking with a poignant, almost unbearable eloquence, the memorial offers only the names of the dead. The tribute is to these particular individuals. Theirs was the ultimate sacrifice; it is to them that honor is due. The memorial will occupy two acres in Constitution Gardens in Washington, close by the Lincoln Memorial. The very simplicity of the design, based upon two intersecting granite walls, carries the only message that needs to be conveyed: These were the 57,653 men and eight women (all nurses) who died in the line of duty.

Some months ago, in The New Republic and later in the Wall Street Journal, a wholly false report was spread that the memorial would not identify these dead as the dead of

Forming Of A Coalition

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Senate Republican frenzy over budget deficits is building a smaller-is-better defense coalition against new military hardware, with a specific hitlist circulated by Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum of Kansas.

"The Kassebaum Budget Mark" is a remarkable five-page document distributed to her colleagues by the first-term senator as a member of the Budget Committee. It would cut President Reagan's defense requests over the next three years up to $25 billion by cutting the B-1 bomber, the new nuclear carrier and just about every new procurement item imaginable. In their place, the Kassebaum Mark would take existing hardware off the shelf.

This good clothcoat Republican approach to defense appeals to conservative Republican senators in frantic pursuit of budget cuts. But it meshes with low-technology defense policy favored by liberal Democratic senators, who are supported by Defense Department analysts still in the Pentagon despite the advent of the Reagan administration. Indeed, though denied by Kassebaum's office, there is suspicion that the Kassebaum Mark was inspired or even written by Pentagon "numbers crunchers" (systems analysts).

The unintended inspiration for this clothcoat coalition was last summer's suggestion by Budget Director David Stockman of $30 billion in defense cuts as a ploy to get much less. Some defense-oriented senators feel Stockman did the president a profound disservice by developing the climate that produced the Kassebaum Mark.

Stockman himself was disturbed after a recent private meeting with Kassebaum. By seeking to reduce the defense budget through reduced procurement, her plan imposes longterm restrictions on U.S. foreign policy. Without a private meeting, mere reading of the Kassebaum Mark reveals something very different in national security policy than Ronald Reagan had in mind.

The Kassebaum Mark would kill Reagan's MX basing mode, the B-1 bomber, the F-15, F-18 and A-6 aircraft, AH-64 and LAMPS III helicopters, M-1 tank, Patriot and Roland ground-to-air missiles, the new Nimitz class supercarrier, new cruisers and Los Angeles class submarines and any new demotivated battleships. That is not even the complete Kassebaum hitlist. A much shorter list would compile weapon systems that she would keep.

The clothcoat mentality is underscored in the Kassebaum Mark's introductory paragraph which declares "very expensive weapons programs... should be replaced by existing ones that are proven to work and which are considerably cheaper." Thus, while killing the B-1 needed to reassert U.S. superpower status, she would build a low-technology new bomber from parts off the shelves; simultaneously, she would develop the Stealth bomber for some day off in the gloaming.

How did Nancy Kassebaum become an instant defense authority? "She must have read Fallows' book," snapped a senior senator with no great respect for her military expertise. The Kassebaum Mark does reflect the cheaper-is-better tone of "National Defense" by ex-Jimmy Carter speechwriter James Fallows. But the lineage of the Kassebaum Mark is more complicated, revealing how the permanent bureaucracy functions in Washington no matter who is in the White House or who controls the Senate.

Kassebaum's staffer influencing her defense ideas is Winslow Wheeler, who as an aide to Sen. Jacob Javits was so ardent for arms control that he was known to hard-liners as a "saltik." As Kassebaum's aide, he has invited assistants of other Republican senators to his house for informal seminars on defense.

Featured at one such beer-and-pizza session were Chuck Spinney, a systems analyst at Program Evaluation and Analysis (PA&E) in the Pentagon, and private consultant Pierre Sprey, a onetime PA&E staffer. The Kassebaum Mark reflects the mindset persisting at PA&E even in the Reagan era. Wheeler denied it to us, but military experts would bet money that the document was actually prepared at PA&E.

What frightens defense-oriented senators is the prospect that the low-technology, limited-foreign policy crowd is coalescing with conservative Republicans seeking a clothcoat defense. Sen. Bill Armstrong, a leading light of the New Right, is attracted to Kassebaum's draconian budget cuts. Senate majority whip Ted Stevens echoes the Kassebaum Mark in declaring that "our budget knife will be poised over any new (or revived) weapons systems proposed for development and procurement." Even the Republican national chairman, Richard Richards, last week called for more defense cuts.

Such inroads into the Republican party are unsettling to those Democrats who want to support Reagan's plans to close the military gap with Moscow. Sen. John Glenn, a prospective Democratic presidential hopeful, in a recent Senate speech cautioned that balancing the budget on the Pentagon's back "will mean little if... we find ourselves in deep international trouble because our military forces cannot support our foreign policy." That is the unanswerable rebuttal to the clothcoat coalition.

Inflation Appears Abating

If we are in for a period of tighter times, as President Reagan tells us, there might be one consolation. The rate of inflation does indeed seem to be slowing.

The report on inflation at the wholesale level for October shows an annual rate of increase of 6.8 percent. We are, of course, paying a price for this in higher unemployment and worsening business conditions, but stopping inflation has been one of our top priorities. The fight has been helped by a stability in petroleum costs and other factors but the declining inflation rate appears real enough.

With it could come lower interest rates which should stimulate the economy in itself.

Teacher Attitudes

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Whenever educators are grilled about low student test scores and how come Johnny can't read, they fall back on family heritage.

The public schools, they say, must take everybody, and those from poor families where mother and father were not very well educated just don't do as well in school. This almost automatically means Black youngsters in North Carolina, the inference is clear: They're doing the best they can, and you can't really expect much more anytime soon.

One of North Carolina's poorest counties is making those who blame poverty and parental education eat their words.

Patricia Benton, a first grade teacher at Sunbury Elementary School, knows how to cut right through to the heart of the matter:

"Some of the children come from homes without bathrooms or windows, but it doesn't matter where you come from, you can learn."

For years, Sunbury kids have been demonstrating this truth. Scores on various tests consistently have put the elementary school students above state and national levels. Results on the new state achievement tests show that pattern continuing.

Poor

When you talk about black and poor in North Carolina, you're talking about Gates County where Sunbury School is located. Blacks outnumber whites two-to-one, the per capita income level is way below state average. In the Sunbury school district, two-thirds of the kids qualify for free lunch. More than 40 percent of the parents have less than a high school education.

Mary Ann Bella, on assignment for the North Carolina School Boards Association, recently spent some time at Sunbury trying to find out what makes that school tick. The results of her study are published in the current issue of "Voice," a periodical printed by that organization.

Bella found the usual Head Start, teacher aide, kindergarten, activity bus regimen on which so many have placed so much hope for turning the public schools around.

But she found something which may be missing at some schools which still come up short of the mark. She found excellence.

As a parent explained: "The attitude the teachers toward students is everything. They expect a high level of children, and they get it."

Mrs. Benton summed the staff attitude: "The leader expects excellence from us. We expect from each other. And, we in turn expect it from the children."

Sunbury, by some measures, is old fashioned. It concentrates on basics like reading, writing, and arithmetic. Students learn by memorizing and drilling. Flash cards are still flashed. School Board members hold

To the editor:

To celebrate this year's National Children's Book Week from Nov. 16-22, with its theme, "Any time, any place, any book", the library media personnel in the schools and libraries throughout our nation will be spearheading varied activities: Story telling, book talks, colloquies, book fairs, television and radio programs, motion pictures, authors sharing their books, students, teachers and librarians exchanging books and periodicals, colorful bulletin boards depicting the theme, special assembly programs or programs in library media centers or children's rooms of public libraries portraying book characters, puppet shows or perhaps books, circuses and parades to promote the interest of young people in reading good books. Whichever, the primary purpose is to encourage the enthusiastic reading of good books, not only at school or through public libraries, but at home, in particular, with parents setting the example.

Have you ever thought of a quiet reading period at home just as at school when every member of the family stops everything and reads? Let's not be like the 16 year-old when asked the question: "What books are you and your friends reading these days?" She answered, "We don't read books. We watch TV."

Read something worthwhile for at least 15 minutes each day. Books are the best companions we can have. "A book is the best of friends."

During a brief period each day, you can travel widely, meet fascinating people and enjoy thrilling experiences as you sample fiction, biography, nonfiction, or poetry. A scanning of one of the weekly news magazines will keep you posted on world events. This will make you a more interesting and better informed person.

As parents, teachers, and media personnel or librarians, let us work together not only during Book Week, but every week to see that the library is used as a link between television and books and urge parents to buy more books in the home and encourage students to use their libraries wisely.

"There are many little ways to enlarge your child's world. Love of books is the best of all," stated Jacqueline Kennedy.

Strength For Today

FOLLOWING THE UNDERSTANDABLE

Mark Twain, asked if he was not dreadfully disturbed by the things in the Bible he could not understand, replied that the things in the Bible which bothered him were not the things he could not understand, but the things he could.

There is a simplicity about the Christian gospel which is at one and the same time inspiring and disconcerting. If we fail to live up to the gospel, we cannot say it is because we do not know what our duty really is. The Bible, of course, will not pick out any particular situation and say, here is what you must do. But it will turn our faces in the right direction. It will hand us a moral principle and say, "Try this."

The plainness of the Christian gospel — inspiring if we obey, disconcerting if we do not. It makes the good life perfectly plain. "There is the path; walk ye in it." — Elisha Douglass vided the final shame of that sad chapter in our history. Upward of 8.7 million persons served in Vietnam during the nine years of that bitter conflict. Almost 57,700 died. The survivors returned in virtual silence: no parades for them. They came home to a nation that wanted not to remember, but to forget.

The injustice suffered by Vietnam veterans can never be remedied. Those who served in Vietnam did not start the war; it was not their failure that led to the miserable ending. They lived up to the code: Duty, Honor, Country. No belated apology will erase the contumely the survivors experienced.

But at least we are now well along in providing deserved tribute to those who did not survive. The Vietnam

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — While many savings institutions are burdened with low interest loans that steadily deplete their earnings and threaten them with insolvency, Butterfield Savings and Loan is prospering.

Butterfield enjoys a spread of 7.5 points between the 12 percent cost of its money and its 19.5 percent loan portfolio. It also charges 4.5 points on loans. Last month it says it cleared $90,000 on such fees.

Butterfield, based in Temecula, Calif., 50 miles north of downtown San Diego, is less than eight months old, and therein lies much of the explanation of why things should be so good for it, so bad for others.

Others savings and loan associations are older. In prior years they made housing loans at 7 percent for 30 years into the future. Then expenses rose, especially their money costs. They would have liked to raise the rate on those mortgages but they couldn't. They were locked in.

Butterfield, begun largely by Donald W. Endresen, 36, and his brother, William D. 27, isn't burdened by the past. It can profit immediately, doing nothing more creative than lending for more than it borrows.

The Endresens are the envy of many other savings and loan people at the U.S. League of Savings Association convention here, where survival is the primary topic of hallway discussions. The Endresens don't worry.

Instead, their concerns run in a different direction. They've applied for their first branch office and, says Bill, the executive vice president, "I'd like to open a branch every quarter."

Butterfield Savings and Loan Association, state chartered, opened April 1 with $2 million of capital. It now has $8.5 million of assets, and 1,800 accounts in a town whose service area embraces 7,000 people.

It got off to a running start, employing 21 workers, or several times the number in some savings and loan associations, at an annual payroll cost of $500,000. "We took the community by storm," they said.

They feel they got the best, endorsing Douglas Weeks, top loan man at California Savings and Loan Association, to move from Los Angeles to Temecula by offering him "a six-digit financial package."

They advertised and promoted heavily, through the media, by mail and with their hot air balloon, for which two staffers have an operating license. "We have the balloon at every function," said Don, the president. At, for example, "the biggest event in town, the Great Temecula Tractor Race." The balloon towers over tiny Temecula.

Under its state charter, Butterfield is able to roam a bit more broadly than a federally chartered association. It has more leeway, for example, to build homes directly rather than as a lender.

Though many builders have gone bankrupt in recent months, Butterfield is seizing the opportunity. It is building and selling triplexes at nearby Lake Elsinore for $145,000. It puts its costs at $100,000.

"We're building at 8 percent less than a year ago for the identical building," Don said. He claims that recent hard estimates have been beaten by 14 percent, a result of competition among subcontractors. "They're so hungry for work that framers are blowing the foundations dry so they can get to work," he said, chuckling at the rarity of it.

The Endresens were entrepreneurs from the start. Neither has a college degree because they were more interested in the world of business. Said Don: "After eight years I almost finished." Bill never enrolled.

In 1976, on an initial capital investment they say was only $1,500, their Kacor Financial Group began syndicating troubled properties, especially in Texas. The brothers say Kacor now manages $50 million of assets. It has offices in San Antonio, and in Brea and Whittier, Calif.

And Sunbury is a small, community school where people know one another and care about what is happening with the youngsters. To modern-day devotees of the big school campus and long bus rides, a community school is not the answer. In Gates County, the test scores might point in a different direction.

Bryan Salter, principal at Sunbury for 12 years, is an old-fashioned principal, too. He still believes the principal is in charge and can demand excellence from teachers. He keeps test scores on review to see which classes are doing well and which aren't. He evaluates his teachers, and considers student performance a critical factor in evaluation.

The teachers are competitive, each wanting their students to be the best. They assume responsibility for their classrooms and are reluctant to send children to his office, Salter recounts.

Community ownership and involvement in a school where the faculty and staff push parents and students alike for excellence just might be more important than new buildings, smaller classrooms, mergers, New Math or a host of other alternatives which have assaulted the public school in recent years.

Vietnam. There was not a word of truth in the tale. Of course the memorial will be designated as a Vietnam memorial. Some objectors have read into the design a political message — a pacifist, anti-war message — but this is the sheerest fantasy. The design speaks of sorrow, not of glory, not of victory, not of defeat. This is all it says of Vietnam.

Congress has given the site for the memorial, but the fund itself must be privately raised. For the record: The address is Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, 1110 Vermont Ave., Washington, D.C. 20005.

Military Retirees Boost San Antonio's Economy

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
WINDCREST, Texas (AP) — There is nearly one retired general for every 100 residents in this small affluent San Antonio suburb, dubbed "Fort Windcrest" because of its population of top Air Force, Army and Navy brass.

Located halfway between Fort Sam Houston and Randolph Air Force Base, Windcrest, population 5,330, is the crown jewel in San Antonio's military community, a dominant economic force in this metropolitan area of one million people.

Elliot Johnson, staff manager for military affairs for the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, said the "fort" nickname could apply to the entire San Antonio area, which benefits economically from military retirees' attraction to the city's five major military installations and warm climate. His figures, gleaned from military finance offices, reveal that there are 42,330 retired service and reserve personnel living here, and they collected $298 million in retirement pay last year.

Nearly $3.7 million of that figure went to 4,216 Navy personnel who moved here after retirement. The rest went to former Air Force and Army officers and enlisted men, many of whom were stationed in San Antonio during their military careers.

San Antonio's major military installations — Randolph, Brooks, Lackland and Kelly air force bases and Fort Sam Houston — also have 40,500 active duty personnel who earned $830 million in pay during 1980.

The recently approved military pay raise added $66 million a year to that figure, Johnson said.

"We know the military impact on this community is $1.5 billion every year," he said, including salaries for thousands of civil service workers and retired military personnel at the bases and Audie Murphy Veterans Hospital.

"In this city we try to be pro-military and make them feel at home," Johnson said.

Most retirees chose to come to the San Antonio area because of its excellent military facilities, said retired Col. John Campbell.

Campbell is director of development at Air Force Village, a 15-story retirement complex which opened in 1970. It is located near Wilford Hall Air Force Hospital, the service's largest medical facility and is in the process of doubling its capacity to 377 units.

The $14 million complex, started at the request of the Air Force Wives Club of Washington, D.C., and the wife of former Air Force chief of staff Curtis LeMay, will have a population of 600 when all its new units open next month. The facility will include 238 mid-and-high-rise apartments, 125 garden homes and a new 68-bed nursing home with complete medical care and meal service.

Residents of the complex include retired Gen. Harry Armstrong, the first surgeon general of the Air Force, and Col. George Howard, first director of the Air Force Band. He has formed a choral group to entertain at other homes for the elderly.

Campbell said he considered retiring to California or Arizona, but settled on San Antonio because he and his wife had made many friends here during their active-duty days.

Retired Col. Richard Hagauer, executive director of the non-profit village which operates without federal subsidies, said he selected San Antonio as his home because of its frontier feeling.

"I decided years ago that I would eventually retire in San Antonio because it's the frontier — open, not crowded."

Retired Army Col. Mark Hanson, a Guthrie, Okla., native who donates one day a week working for the Retired Officers Association, said he chose the city for its warmer climate.

"I was stationed at the Pentagon," he said. "My wife had arthritis and we thought we'd move somewhere in the South where the weather was better. And as far as the Army goes, this is the main medical center."

Hanson said many retirees come to San Antonio to be near other military personnel who went through

World War II and the Korean and Viet Nam wars.

Many of them spend their time relaxing, playing golf, traveling and "telling lies about the war," he said.

Challenge Posed

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police Detective John Chidester is looking for a burglar who did everything but leave a calling card when making off with $5,000 from a downtown tavern.

Marco Conner, owner of the Irish Pub, found his office ransacked Tuesday morning. The cash was missing from a filing cabinet, but there was a challenging note on a sheet of yellow paper.

"Sergeant: Add this to your file, Detective Chidester," it read. "Solve it if you can."

It was signed: "Your friendly burglar."

Chidester, whose name was in the news less than two weeks ago after he had solved some downtown burglaries, said investigators think the burglar entered the tavern during business hours and hid inside until it closed.

And Chidester, the senior member of Central Detectives, took up the challenge.

"I think I know who it is, and he'd better watch himself, because I'm going to get him," he promised.

Reorganizing Of ECU Archives

By ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University is moving to establish a professionally staffed and managed archives to preserve and maintain all of the university's permanent records and documents and to make them readily accessible to researchers.

University officials announced that operation of the university archives will begin in early January following approval of the project by the UNC General Administration and funding through the recently enacted budget. Request for approval of the archives was given high priority by Vice Chancellor Robert H. Maier whose academic affairs office will assume responsibility for university records and maintenance.

Donald R. Lennon, director of the East Carolina Manuscript Collection, will oversee operation of the archives under Dr. Eugene Brunell, director of J.Y. Joyner Library. The archives will be located in the university library.

"The university has seen the need for a professionally operated university archives for some time," Lennon said. "During the past year, a records survey was undertaken in cooperation with the State Division of Archives and History in order to identify and locate campus records and schedule them for proper preservation."

In the past, university business records, documents of the chancellor's office and alumni records were stored in the basement of Fleming Dormitory. Other permanent records have been housed in various locations on campus and in separate offices, schools and departments.

Lack of a central archives was illustrated when Dr. Mary Jo Bratton of the history department undertook an assignment to research and write a history of ECU's first 75 years and she discovered that a university archives did not exist. Since then she has conducted a wide-ranging search to locate depositories of various records, old documents and papers.

Stitchery Classes

Pitt Community College will offer two classes in Christmas stitchery at the Scotch Bonnet. The classes will begin Tuesday, 7-10 p.m., and Nov. 19, 9 a.m.-12 noon.

Included will be instruction in Swedish weaving, candlewicking and crocheted snowflakes. Each class will meet for three hours each week and will last four weeks.

Registration fee for each class will be $8. Participants will be responsible for their own supplies. For further information call 756-3130, ext. 238.

HOLY COW! — Rescue workers gather around a 440-pound cow that fell into a manhole in a Bangkok street. The cow was stuck for nearly three hours, and rescue workers broke her hind legs pulling her out. She was returned to a local slaughterhouse from which she had strayed. (AP Laserphoto)

Selvia Chapel Marks Event

The officers and members of Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will observe their pastor's anniversary today through Sunday.

Services will be conducted by visiting pastors, choirs, ushers and the congregation. Tonight's visiting pastor will be the Rev. Randy Royal of the Philippi Church of Christ and on Friday, the guest pastor will be the Rev. E.B. Williams of the Nazarene Church of Christ Disciples.

On Sunday at 11 a.m. a visiting pastor will conduct the services and a 3 p.m. service will be provided by the Rev. J.B. Taylor, pastor of Corey's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Services will begin each night at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

ATTACKED — A lone gunman fired "many shots" this morning at Christian A. Chapman, the charge d'affaires of the U.S. Embassy in Paris, but no one was wounded. The gunman, who escaped on foot, opened fire as Chapman's car was preparing to drive away from his apartment house in central Paris. (AP Laserphoto)

SCHEDULE
St. Matthew Free Will Baptist Church announces the following services for the weekend:

A board meeting will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday at 8 p.m. Deacon Ceasar Crandall will preach his initial sermon; On Sunday, Eldress Hattie Cobb will preach at 11 a.m. with the senior choir and ushers attending; Sunday at 3 p.m. Eldress Hattie Cobb and congregation will hold services at Bethel Chapel in Washington, then at 5 p.m. the senior choir will celebrate their anniversary.

Ayden Board Asks Phone Co. Drop 'Long Distance' Charge

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff writer

AYDEN — Calling toll-free telephone service from Ayden to Grifton a "necessity for the two towns," the Board of Commissioners passed a resolution Wednesday night asking the phone company to provide residents with this service.

"It is ludicrous that two communities with the proximity that Ayden and Grifton have can't call each other without having to pay long distance fees," noted Mayor Ross Persinger. "It would be a benefit, needless to say, to businesses and a convenience to citizens."

Should the utility grant toll-free service between the two towns, residents would have bills 52 cents higher each month, and businesses would see an increase of over $1.

A committee of four was appointed to study what town officials termed "disappointing" returns on the town's present pension plan. Members Ralph Ford, Alice Register (town bookkeeper), Elliott Dixon and Robert Harris will review the pension plan and meet with other agencies desiring to submit a proposal.

The Ayden Board of Elections' report on results from the Nov. 3 elections was approved by the town board. The final report showed Persinger winning re-election as mayor and Harris, Dixon, Marvin Baldree and J.J. Brown winning board seats.

The board accepted 3½ acres of land donated to the town by Bill Clark for recreation use. The land lies in the east end of Strawberry Banks subdivision on a flood plain and, according to Clark, "is not economically feasible to develop."

A resident of recently paved Willow Street advised the board that the new pavement sported cracks 12- to 14 inches along the shoulders.

"The road has not yet been inspected by myself and the town engineer," reported Town Manager Don Russell. "When we do this inspection, we will ask the paving company to repair any such defects under the terms of the warranty."

In other business, the board:

— Accepted the final plat for the Strawberry Banks II subdivision, submitted by Clark as developer.

— A delinquent housing authority account in the amount of $208.52 was eliminated from the town's books. The tenant is deceased.

— Amended the personnel ordinance to allow a two-day holiday for town employees on Thanksgiving (Thursday and Friday). Police and sanitation personnel will be excluded.

— Accepted the northern loop of Ayden's thoroughfare plan, completion date unknown.

Pam McAlpine Receives Award

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Pam McAlpine, Cheraw, S.C. Arts Commission chairman, received the South Carolina Recreation and Park Society Eastern Division "Lay Award" during a banquet held in Myrtle Beach recently.

Ms. McAlpine is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Carter of Greenville.

The award recognizes outstanding volunteer service in support of recreation in Cheraw. She was nominated by the Cheraw Recreation and Parks Department.

The award winner is a 1974 graduate of the University of North Carolina in Greensboro and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the organization that recognizes honor students.

She became chairman of the Arts Commission after its formation in 1980.

Ask School Ban Steinbeck Novel

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — "The Grapes of Wrath," John Steinbeck's novel of a Depression-era migrant farmworker family, should be banned from a high school English course, a group of parents says.

"It's using the Lord's name in vain," said Claire Doe, a mother of four who is leading the fight against the book. "We're just trying to get good, wholesome reading."

Barry Steinhardt, the executive director of the Vermont American Civil Liberties Union, said Wednesday his group will go to court to prevent the book from being banned.

Participated In Adult Ed Class

Around 125 people participated in an adult basic education program held at A.G. Cox Grammar School recently which climaxed the promotional efforts for ABE held during the month of October.

Elliot Frank, PCC visiting artist, was a special guest. Eldress Martha Tyson addressed the students and encouraged them to continue their schooling. Special responses were given by ABE students.

Persons interested in attending either the adult basic education or adult high school should call the continuing education division of PCC at 756-3130, ext. 266.

Administration Adamant On Farm Bill

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is remaining adamant in its demand that the new farm bill being negotiated by House and Senate conferees cost no more than the version approved two months ago by the Senate.

"I am only authorized to go to the Senate bill," said William Lesher, the Agriculture Department's chief economist, in response to substantial concessions on grain price supports by House negotiators.

Negotiations over subsidy levels for wheat and feed grains broke down again Wednesday when Lesher's comments prompted Senate negotiators to delay action on an extremely scaled-down compromise offered by the House team. Those are the only major commodity support programs still at issue in the 1981 farm bill negotiations.

"We've gone way over to the Senate side on this bill, and yet nothing seems to merit agreement," said Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who offered the compromise, the fifth presented to the joint conference committee in two days.

"I don't know how far we can go," added Rep. Thomas Coleman, R-Mo. "As a Republican conferee, I'm not willing to go very much lower than this."

The conference committee is trying to resolve differences

Plan Hike Acreage For Broccoli Demand

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — Broccoli's increased use in salad bars and as an hors d'oeuvre has led to plans by the state's farmers to plant more acres of the crop in 1982.

William Lamont, vegetable specialist for the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, said 35 acres of broccoli were planted in the state in 1981, but he expects that figure to increase next year as farmers continue their search for alternate crops.

Per capita consumption of broccoli has more than doubled in the last 15 years, Lamont said, with most of the increase being in the fresh, uncooked form.

"It's the most nutritious vegetable in terms of essential vitamins and minerals," Lamont said.

He attributes at least part of the new demand for broccoli in the state to the increase in the number of northerners moving into North Carolina.

Lamont said broccoli is a cool season vegetable which has about the same cultural requirements as cabbage. In fact, he said cabbage growers have often been the leaders in developing the new broccoli crop for the state.

Broccoli harvest begins in April and May in the Tidewater region, but the harvest moves westward into the Coastal Plain and Piedmont areas as the season progresses.

North Carolina's broccoli growing season was extended by another two to three months by several cabbage farmers in Jackson County who proved they could grow quality broccoli during the hottest part of the summer, Lamont said.

The farmers were assisted in their efforts by the Jackson County Board of Commissioners, which purchased an ice-making machine for farmers to in an effort to help get the enterprise off the ground.

between the House's $16.6 billion bill and the $10.6 billion Senate version endorsed by President Reagan.

Reagan has indicated he would veto any program that is substantially more expensive, but Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., says the final compromise farm bill still might be acceptable even if it is $500 million over the cost of the Senate's four-year plan.

Foley's proposal, adding about $100 million to the four-year cost of the Senate plan, effectively would have adopted the Senate position on price support loans for wheat and corn, while scaling down the House-backed mechanism for direct federal payments to farmers when market prices are depressed.

But Lesher noted that the Senate bill is already $2 billion to $3 billion more than the administration's original farm bill proposal.

"We came a long way, and that is as far as I'm authorized to go at the present," Lesher said.

Earlier compromises on dairy, wool and rice subsidies have pushed the cost of the bill the conferees are considering about $250 million above the Senate version.

Later, however, Lesher told the panel the administration supports a proposal to compensate farmers if another grain embargo is imposed, even though, he estimates, the compensation plan could cost $30 billion.

Lesher said cost was not an issue because the administration does not intend to impose any embargo that isolates farmers as the Soviet grain embargo did. Consequently, he said, the plan's provisions would never come into effect.

But action on the plan was delayed after a number of House and Senate members said even the possibility of paying that amount of money must be avoided and that the administration had a responsibility to come up with an acceptable proposal.

May Act On Appeal Delay

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state court official says he'll ask the N.C. Supreme Court to intervene if the attorney representing a man convicted three years ago of armed robbery doesn't file an appeal soon.

Supreme Court clerk J. Gregory Wallace said the attorney representing Sammy Lee Jackson has yet to appeal his client's case to the state's highest court, although appeal is automatic in cases involving penalties of either death or life imprisonment.

Jackson was sentenced to life in prison Nov. 16, 1979 in Guilford County Superior Court and has been incarcerated at Central Prison in Raleigh ever since.

For the past two years, different Supreme Court clerks have tried to get Jackson's lawyer, L. Samuel Dockery of High Point, to file the appeal.

"It's quite conceivable that some reversible error could have been made at the trial level," Wallace said. "Jackson could have served three years for nothing.

There's no way for us to know. I have no idea what issues (Dockery) may raise."

Dockery declined to comment until after he has filed the necessary appeal records — which he said would happen soon.

If the delay persists, Wallace said the state Supreme Court could appoint a new attorney or notify the N.C. State Bar, the licensing agency for attorneys.

The court was alerted to the case in March 1979, when Dockery asked that he be given an extension of time in which to file the appeal. The request was granted and Dockery was ordered to file the papers by May 30, 1979.

SCHOLARSHIP

DURHAM — Calvin Lee Williams of 300 Paige Drive, Greenville, has been named a recipient of the 1981-82 Leroy Latten Scholarship Awards at North Carolina Central University.

The scholarship is presented to junior and senior English majors who exemplify character and records of citizenship and service to the campus and community.

State Law Changes On Solicitation Is Likely

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — A new state law requiring most charitable organizations to pay license fees and publish their financial statements probably will be revised before it takes effect, the author of the bill says.

"In all probability, we'll have to make some changes in it," said Sen. James D. Speed, D-Franklin, sponsor of the legislation which was passed in the last days of the General Assembly's first session.

Effective Jan. 1, the law directs most charitable groups to pay license fees to the state and buy newspaper advertisements to print their financial statements.

Exempt from the law are religious organizations, governmental agencies, educational institutions, hospitals, public radio and television stations and agencies that collect less than $10,000 in a year's time.

But for the first time, agencies such as Goodwill Industries and United Way will have to be licensed by the state. And they have raised a storm of protest.

"We don't raise funds — we just solicit materials," said Nelson Kessell, president of Winston-Salem Goodwill Industries Rehabilitation Center Inc. He said he considers it ridiculous to require a 55-year-old agency to buy advertising space to tell people what it is doing.

"It's the strictest, no, make that the most severe, disclosure procedure ever enacted by a state," said Edwin Edgerton, head of the state Department of Human Resources' solicitation and licensing branch.

Edgerton, responsible for administering the law, said he expects to hear a lot of complaints Nov. 24, when his department holds a public hearing at 10 a.m. in Raleigh.

Speed said his purpose in writing the bill was to correct what he saw as a problem with professionals running charitable collections and taking a majority of the money collected as a fee.

Now, however, the state senator recognizes his bill does have some problems.

"It's like most of the other legislation we pass down there — sometimes we can't see the forest for all the trees," he said.

Peter Auerbach, of the North Carolina United Way in Charlotte, said the cost of the license and advertisements would be a burden on some of the smaller units of the state's 76 United Way chapters. The law says the ads must be run in newspapers with the largest audited circulation, where ads are more expensive.

Anyone can make a lot of tricks if all suits break and all finesses succeed. The real challenge of the game is in surmounting unexpected pitfalls.

There are those who might claim that South's bidding lacked finesse and ran the risk of missing a grand slam. But no one can deny that he reached the best contract in the shortest possible time.

When dummy came down, it seemed that the contract would be a formality—indeed, an overtrick was possible if the diamonds behaved in a friendly manner. So declarer won the ace of spades perforce and led a low diamond from dummy. East's club discard was a rude jolt because now declarer couldn't set up diamonds without conceding two tricks. It looked as if a perfectly sound slam would founder on the rocks of distribution.

But declarer found a neat way to overcome the bad break with perfect safety. He won the second trick with the ace of diamonds and led a low diamond toward the jack! West could not rise with the king, for that would permit declarer to bring in the suit with only one loser, and with it his slam. When dummy's jack won, declarer switched horses. He returned to his hand with the king of clubs and led a heart to the jack. He did not even care whether it won or lost, for he had twelve tricks in either case—four spades, three hearts, two diamonds and three clubs. If West has the queen of hearts, the finesse wins and declarer has his three tricks in the suit there and then. If East has the queen of hearts, he was free to win it because he couldn't return a diamond to enable West to cash the king for the setting trick.

Isn't it amazing what a simple game bridge is!

Police Report

Two Accidents

An estimated $3,300 property damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

An estimated $1,000 damage resulted to each of two vehicles involved in a 3:35 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets. The drivers were identified as Donald Lee Stephenson of 1302 Fantaza Drive and Annie Green White of 606 Contentnea St.

Police charged Ms. White with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of the collision.

Cars driven by William Elmer Manning of Route 5, Greenville, and Sheila Ann Morgan of White's Trailer Park collided about 11:55 a.m. at the intersection of 10th and Washington streets, causing $300 damage to the Manning car and $1,000 damage to the Morgan vehicle.

Round-The-World Bikers Are In Argentina; A Waystation

By DOUGLAS GRANT
MINE

Associated Press Writer — BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — "Word is out there's three crazy gringos riding bicycles through the jungle," said Tim Young.

And through the desert, and over mountains — around the world, in fact.

Young and his friends, Steven Williams of Indianapolis, Ind., and Peter Wuerslin, of Skaneateles, N.Y., arrived in Buenos Aires late in October, one year after leaving Jackson, Wyo., on their 10-speeds.

The 27-year-old Young, of Syracuse, N.Y., was describing their crossing of Panama's Darien Gap, whose intimidating geography makes it the only missing link of the Pan-American Highway stretching from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego at the tip of South America.

"The Indian kids had heard we were coming and would greet us on the edge of the villages yelling, 'Monten! Monten!' (Ride! Ride!), but we had the bikes torn down and had to carry them most of the way, sometimes hacking out a path with machetes," he said of what has been the toughest stretch so far.

"It's an adventure," he added of the trip that the bike riders figure will take three years and cover 30,000 miles.

It is not the first 'round-the-world bicycle trip, they say. But so far as they know it is the first following their down-the-Americas, up-Africa and Europe, across-Asia route.

"It's a lot of things, but most of all it's an education," said Williams, 28, who worked as a bicycle mechanic and radio announcer before setting out.

Buenos Aires is a waystation for overhauling their bikes, booking passage to South Africa, and visiting embassies in preparation for the Cape Town-to-Cairo leg — from the bottom of Africa to Egypt.

Young and Wuerslin, also 28, met at Alfred University in their native upstate New York and went to Wyoming to ski. Williams says he went to Wyoming for love. In any case, the three cycling enthusiasts met in Jackson and planned the tour for a year and a half, saving money and designing and making the racks and saddle bags attached to their bicycles.

They are financing the trip themselves, but the bikes and spare parts are donated by various companies.

"We were ready for anything and found just about all of it," said Wuerslin, who made his living as a carpenter and ski instructor.

They pedaled west from Jackson to the Pacific and turned left, down Baja California, then across the Sea of Cortes to the west coast of Mexico by ferry. They rode through Mexico munching fruit and vegetables during the day and cooking up stews in a four-quart pressure cooker on their portable stove at night.

They say they felt a pervasive tension in Guatemala and El Salvador, where leftist guerrillas are fighting to topple military regimes. They did not see the violence first hand, but were searched at gunpoint by government forces and heard gunfire at night.

After the Darien Gap, where they would lie in their tent at night listening to jaguars roar, their closest call came in Colombia where they were visiting the Cristo Rey monument outside Cali.

"Here we are sitting under this 100-foot-tall statue of Christ, enjoying a beautiful evening, when about 10 guys hop this little wall, cross themselves and genuflect in front of the shrine, then walk over to us and whip out knives," said Williams. The cyclists lost their watches and a camera, but consider themselves lucky nothing worse has happened so far.

They have covered 10,000 miles, making between 50 and 60 miles on a good day. Crossing the Atacama Desert in southern Peru and northern Chile they fought a constant headwind that follows the Humboldt Current flowing north along the coast from Antarctica.

They say it is difficult to go more than 60 miles a day, but that incentive plays a part.

"Our first day in Argentina we met some women ski instructors who were going to be in Mendoza Saturday night," said Young. "That Saturday we made 90 miles."

The travellers are cooperating with a doctor from the Jackson Hole Human Performance Laboratory, where they took physical and psychological tests

Eta Members

Hold Meeting

Members of Region I of Eta State Delta Kappa Gamma Society, including several from Pitt County, met at Benvenue Country Club in Rocky Mount recently for the biannual meeting.

The program, "Many Pathways to a Common Goal," emphasized the role of the society in current educational trends and crises.

Participants were able to choose one of three workshop topics to attend during the morning session. Jeanette Pittman of Rocky Mount and Peggy Mills of Washington led a session on leadership skills. Sessions on constitutional exploration and regional structure of Delta Gamma were led by Nina Fountain of Tarboro, Ruth Turnage of Nashville, Anne Briley of Greenville and Bertha Cooper of Washington.

Katherine Collins, Eta state president, spoke to the group on "Building the Superstructure."

Attending were Delta Chapter members Mary Lois Staton, Elizabeth Wilkerson, Lucille Evans, Elsie Egan and Beta Alpha members Anne Briley, Mildred Southwick, Jo Ann Jones, Evelyn Blue and Wilma Brown.

Polls Selected For Farm Vote

The Pitt County "Two Nickles for Know-How Referendum Committee" has released a list of polling places for the Nov. 24 vote on whether to continue the program in support of agricultural research.

Nickles for Know-How, in the past, has provided financial support to research through 5-cent contributions per ton of feed and fertilizer purchased in North Carolina. The money supports research, teaching and extension programs at North Carolina State University. The 1981 General Assembly amended the law to increase the contribution to 10 cents per ton.

Polling places for the referendum include: Ayden Tractors Inc., Ayden; Stokes & Lane, Route 2, Ayden; K.M. Crawford's, Bell Arthur; Tri-County Feed Mills, Bethel; W.W. Wooten, Falkland; Fountain Milling Company, Fountain; Hendrix-Barnhill Inc., Greenville; Fred Webb Inc., Greenville; ASCS Office, Greenville; Agricultural Extension Service, Greenville; FCX, Greenville; FCX, Farmville; John's Trading Post, Black Jack; J.P. Davenport's Store, Pactolus; Stokes & Congleton Store, Stokes; Belvoir General Merchandise, Belvoir; Farmville Hardware, Farmville; and Grimesland Fertilizer Supply, Grimesland.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market held a broad advance in midday trading today as the prime lending rate tumbled for the second time this week.

Before the opening bell two major banks, Chase Manhattan and First National of Chicago, cut their prime rates to 16.5 percent from 17 percent.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which rose 3.14 points Wednesday thanks to a late rally, climbed another 5.70 to 862.82 today after two hours of trading. Its transportation and utility measures also rose.

Gainers led losers 8 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange and 2 to 1 on the American Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 24.74 million shares at noon EST, compared with a relatively light 17.48 million in the same period Wednesday, which was Veterans Day.

The NYSE's composite index rose 0.35 to 71.89.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 2.24 to 324.60.

Building Shows Sharp Drop-Off

Building permits valued at $1,296,154 were issued in Greenville during July, according to statistics released by state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

For the first seven months of 1981, permits here totaled $13,747,295, the commissioner reported.

In Pitt County, total construction authorized during July amounted to $1,343,789, Brooks said, including $486,000 for 10 single-family dwellings, $292,688 for eight multi-family units, $148,776 for seven non-residential units and $426,325 for 84 additions and alterations.

Brooks said only one category of building activity reported monthly by the N.C. Department of Labor Research and Statistics Division gained in July. He said while there was an increase of 4.2 percent in multi-family dwellings authorized, compared to last July, permits for the other three categories all dropped. The decreases reflected: single-family homes, down 26.8 percent; non-residential construction, down 11.3 percent; and additions and alterations, down 2 percent.

Total building recorded by the state's 44 reporting cities of more than 10,000 population dropped 6.6 percent to 3,595 units, compared to 3,847 last July, but the estimated value of those permits, $92,590,248, decreased by less than 1 percent from $92,918,911, he reported.

Permit totals for July and for the first seven months in other eastern cities included: Elizabeth City, $246,000, $2,303,275; Goldsboro, $2,434,643, $6,382,494; Jacksonville, $1,318,628, $8,850,497; Kinston, $84,000, $7,117,212; New Bern, $843,371, $6,344,378; Roanoke Rapids, $154,805, $2,935,124; Rocky Mount, $972,239, $10,488,968; Tarboro, $265,400, $3,030,550; and Wilson, $1,794,865, $9,152,506.

Brooks said Charlotte, for the fifth time in 1981, led the 44 reporting cities in estimated value of construction authorized with $17,527,143, followed by Winston-Salem with $13,190,070, Raleigh with $11,130,287; Greensboro with $8,956,808, and Durham with $7,211,868.

Seeks Limit Paperwork

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Sen. John East has introduced legislation to limit the amount of time businesses must maintain records to comply with federal agency rules.

East, North Carolina's junior senator, said "right now, there is no limit on how long agencies can require private businesses to keep records. This is a serious omission which hurts many small businesses who often cannot afford to spend scarce resources to retain detailed records indefinitely. It causes higher costs for them and their customers, and diverts capital from productive, job-creating activity."

East's "Federal Recordkeeping and Civil Action Limitation Act" puts a three-year limit on the length of time federal agencies can require businesses to maintain records. It also limits to three years the time an agency can initiate civil actions for unintentional infractions of agency rules.

The limits would not apply to cases involving public health and safety, dangerous materials or hazardous wastes, fraud or willful violations of agency rules.

The bill would also prevent agencies from retroactively applying new interpretations of existing regulations.

"The basic intent of this legislation," East said, "is to protect small and independent businesses from some of the unreasonable costs in their efforts to comply with agency rules."

Rose Opens Playoff Quest

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor
Rose High School starts the season all over again on Friday night.

Ten weeks ago, the Rampants boarded their buses for the trip down to Jacksonville for the opening game of the year against the Cardinals. In that contest, Rose pulled out a 15-14 victory.

This Friday night, with an 8 p.m. kickoff set, the Rampants board their buses to again face the Cardinals. This time, however, it's the first game of the State 4-A playoffs, and the winner gets to keep playing.

The loser just gets to pack his gear up for another season. The Rampants gained the playoff berth by finishing second in the regular season to Big East champ Rocky Mount, a 36-6 winner over Rose in their meeting. Jacksonville finished as co-champ of the Mideastern Conference, winning the number one berth by having beaten Wilmington New Hanover in their head-to-head meeting.

The winner of the contest will travel to face the winner of the Terry Sanford-New Hanover contest.

In the opening game of the year, Rose took advantage of a number of Cardinal mistakes to gain the victory, scoring on 29 and 31-yard passes from Barry Smith to Chris McLawhorn and a 26-yard field goal by Willie Levett. Levett's kick, which climaxed the first half, actually hit the left upright of the goal posts and bounced through to provide the winning margin.

Rose had another touchdown, a 95-yard kick return by McLawhorn called back by a holding penalty behind the play.

Both teams were bothered by mistakes. Rose fumbled seven times, losing two of them, and had ten penalties for 67 yards. Jacksonville fumbled but twice, losing none, but had 12 penalties for 113 yards. Several of those penalties came when the Cardinals were lined up for fourth and short yardage situations in which they were going for the yards.

Rose coach Ronald Vincent, who's Rampants beat Northeastern, 27-0, in the final regular season game, was very pleased with his team's play in that game.

"Our offensive line did a tremendous job. I was very pleased with our ability to run the ball. Three hundred-ninety-nine yards in total offense isn't bad."

Vincent said he expected the Rampants to be able to run some, but not as well as they did. But he wasn't surprised by the running of Donnell Lee, switched from slotback to tailback for Roderick Harrell, slowed by a bruised thigh.

All Lee did was carry 22 times for 174 yards and two touchdowns. "His statistics were somewhat of a surprise, but his ability was no surprise at all," Vincent said.

Now, the Rampants face Jacksonville again and Vincent isn't too happy about it.

"I'd rather play someone else. It's awfully tough to beat a team twice in a season, especially when it's a team as good as Jacksonville. But I guess a lot of things have changed since then."

"We've changed our offense since then," he noted. Rose, which opened the season with two split ends, moved Marty Barnes into a tight end position, and Vincent feels that this has helped the rushing game.

"We've gotten better at our offense because of this. But I suspect that Jacksonville has gotten better, too."

Vincent said that the Rampants have watched the game films from the first meeting. "The guys remember how tough it was, so I don't think they will be overconfident about it. Jacksonville was probably the toughest team we've played with maybe the exception of Rocky Mount. We

Rampants Arrive, But Year Off Schedule

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

Last year's Rose High School football team was supposed to be a shoo-in for the State 4-A playoffs. The Rampants opened the season ranked number one in the state, and got off to a start that befitted such a ranking.

But midway through the season, when the Big East Conference games rolled around, the Rampants went sour. After whipping arch-rival Rocky Mount, they ended up losing three of their last four games and did not even qualify for the playoffs.

The year before, in 1979, the Rampants had finished second in the state, losing to High Point in the finals. Four years before that, the Rampants had gone all the way, beating East Mecklenburg for the state championship.

Each of those two ventures into the playoffs, the Rampants had a tough road to follow. At no time during those two trips did the Rose team have a chance to be the host team.

This year, as the Rampants again enter the playoffs, they face that same road. No matter how far they go, they will not be a host team.

And, probably more of a surprise, the Rampants weren't expected to be there at all. Even though the pre-season poll of the Big East coaches did place the Rampants second in the league, most observers felt a break-even season would be great.

Rose was facing great obstacles. First, head coach Dave Bumgarner underwent coronary bypass surgery in late July, and was sidelined for the year. Ronald Vincent, an assistant on the staff, was named as interim coach just a week before practice started.

It had already been decided to switch to the I formation from the wishbone this year, and Vincent had to implement that. To top it off, he found only 14 lettermen back from last year's team, along with two offensive and two defensive starters.

Rose faced a rugged schedule too. First, the Rampants had non-conference games with Jacksonville, New Bern and Hoggard. The Cardinals were a state playoff team last season and were picked to repeat that role. New Bern had an up-and-coming program (how up-and-coming really didn't show until later in the season) and Hoggard was expected to be one of the stronger teams in the Mideastern Conference.

Vincent, in preseason talks, said he would be glad to win just one of those three.

Instead, Rose won them all,

Stout Coach Of Year; Vincent Gets Support

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

Associated Press Writer

Burlington Williams head football coach Pete Stout acknowledges that he gets a lot of the credit for his team's 10-0 record during the 1981 season. But he also feels that he couldn't do the job without his assistants and his players.

Nonetheless, Stout has been at the helm for 45 victories in 47 games as well as a career record of 56-11. For his achievements, Stout has been named The Associated Press North Carolina High School Coach of the Year.

Stout was chosen by a panel of high school sportswriters.

"I think one of the true measures of a coach doing a good job is that if he's getting all he can out of the material he has available," Stout said. "You can win and have a great deal of talent and not be doing a good job of coaching."

Stout's Bulldogs had five returning lettermen on offense and defense, but refused to characterize the 1981 season as a rebuilding year.

"We really felt like it was a regrouping year because we did have two offensive backs, two offensive guards and an offensive tackle returning," he said. "Rebuilding to me is when you're playing sophomores to seniors and then you start all over again with sophomores."

Stout said his junior varsity football teams have been good during the past few years and that he's relied on them to keep the winning tradition going.

"We were hoping that these people would fill in and they have. They've done a real good job," he added.

After whipping crosstown rival Cummings in the season finale, Stout learned that his team would face Jamestown Ragsdale in the first round of the state 3-A playoffs. Although Williams downed Ragsdale in the first round of the playoffs last year, Stout expects the situation this Friday to be just as tough.

"It's an entirely different experience," he said. "You're playing people you don't normally play. We feel like we have a real tough opening game."

The game, to be played in Burlington, will give Stout and his charges a chance to extend their winning streak to 30 consecutive games.

"I'm sure our players are aware of it," he said, adding, "That's the furthest thing from my mind and that's the truth."

In accepting the award and praising his coaching staff, Stout also mentioned two players whose performances also earned them spots on the Associated Press N.C. All-State team — quarterback Richard Moore and linebacker Donald Beard.

"(Moore) is a wishbone quarterback. He has a good throwing action and throws real well," Stout said. "Being a wishbone quarterback means you have to run with the football, you've got to handle the triple option, you've got to throw effectively. He's a leader."

Stout said coaches had expected a lot of Beard this season and that he has delivered.

"Sometimes, we may expect him to be super-phenomenal, but he's had a great year for us," he said.

The success Burlington Williams has enjoyed for the past few seasons is an apparent reflection of Stout's philosophy.

"If you're coaching and you're getting as much effort and as much ability out of the players as you possibly can, it doesn't matter if you win or lose," Stout said. "Then, you're doing a good job coaching."

Also nominated for coach of the year honors were:

— Bobby Poss of Fayetteville 71st, who turned 1980's 3-7 football team into Mid-South Conference champions in 1981.

— Eddie Williamson of Asheboro, who fooled those predicting a low finish for the team and closed the year with a 8-2 record.

— Herb Goins of Andrews, who was also picked to finish low in his conference's standings, but who guided his squad to a 9-1 finish.

— Ronald Vincent of Greenville Rose, who took over the head coaching duties one week prior to the start of the season and still guided the Rampants into post-season play with an 8-2 record.

Rose High School coach Ronald Vincent gives instructions from the sidelines during a recent contest. Vincent, who took over as interim coach just a week prior to the start of practice, guided the Rampants to an 8-2 record and a 4-A playoffs berth, and was one of four runners-up for Associated Press High School Coach of the Year honors. Restlessness Became Dream Come True

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Friday night, Ed Emory admits that he had a very sleepless night. It was toss and turn throughout most of the midnight hours.

Saturday afternoon, however, his East Carolina Pirates put on a show in Ficklen Stadium before a Homecoming crowd that left him relaxed and comfortable when he crawled between the sheets that night.

Emory admitted that he was concerned about whether the Pirates would come out on top in the game, and how it would affect the players should they bow to East Tennessee. "I knew we had the better program, the better team, better talent, but that doesn't always win ball games," he said. "I was worried how the players would handle it if we didn't win due to the adversity we'd had during the week before the game."

All of that, however, evaporated in the early minutes of the game as East Tennessee made mistakes that the Pirates parlayed into a quick 17-0 lead, one that was eventually to blossom into a 66-23 victory.

It turned out to be the most points put on the scoreboard since Emory was co-captain of his own ECC collegiate team back in the late 50's.

"I was surprised that it turned into a blow out like it did," Emory said. "I knew that we should win if we played to our capabilities, but I didn't expect anything like that."

Emory admitted that part of it had to do with the way East Tennessee played in the early moments of the game, having a complete breakdown in its kicking game. On its first punt, the ball was snapped over the kicker's head, and on two later first quarter punts, the kicker fumbled the ball and was tackled for losses. "I think they let us intimidate them after the second score. They moved the ball some early, but it was their kicking game that beat them."

East Tennessee got on the scoreboard in the final seconds of the first half when East Carolina elected to punt on third and six. "We had the wind at our backs at the time. We didn't want to have our freshman kicker kicking into that strong wind, so we decided to go ahead and kick on third down. As it turned out, we got a 45 yard kick, but the coverage broke down, and they returned it 55 yards for the touchdown.

"But we came right back and scored again, then got another quick one when we recovered the kickoff in the end zone, and the game was over after that."

Emory was happy that the Pirates didn't have to play some of their banged up players that much, giving them a chance to heal more for this Saturday's finale against William & Mary.

"I really felt sorry for Stefan Adams, too," Emory said. "He went from the penthouse to the outhouse in one week. After being our offensive player of the week against West Virginia, I guess he fumbled the ball the first three times he touched it last Saturday. But he's the type of player who can laugh it off and come right on back."

The Pirates did lose one more player in the game. Defensive tackle Steve Hamilton, called by Emory the best pass rusher on the team, suffered an ankle injury and will miss the final game.

"East Tennessee really is a much better team that they showed Saturday," he said. "But they had that kicking game breakdown and they were without their number one quarterback."

For Saturday's 1:30 p.m. game against William & Mary, the Pirates will be practically at full strength. In addition to Hamilton, Jeff Pegues, Earnest Byner and Tony Hensley continue to be out, but Emory expects Harold Blue, Bud LaCock, Leon Lawson, Milt Corsey and Ricky Nichols to be close to 100 per cent for the game. "Norwood Vann (tight end) lost his grandfather this week, and will attend a wake for him on Friday, but he's going to be here to play on Saturday," Emory noted.

Emory also hinted at his Wednesday press conference that the day of the wishbone at East Carolina might be ended.

Asked if he could give odds on whether Saturday would be the last showing of that offense, Emory, who has used a few I-formation plays, and has been unofficially quoted as saying the Pirates would switch to the I, smiled as he said that he "couldn't give odds."

"I'll evaluate things after the close of the season. I have to evaluate several things: myself, the staff, the players. We're going to take a long, hard look at the offense. We have to see what other teams are doing, and how we've done with the wishbone. And we have to make those decisions quickly due to recruiting."

Kelly Receives DeSimone Grant

Arnetta Kelly, a freshman track performer at East Carolina University and a native of Chester, Pa., is the 1981 recipient of the annual Mary Ann DeSimone Memorial Award, given to the Pirate female athlete who best exemplifies the attributes of Miss DeSimone.

While on her way to attend East Carolina on a track scholarship in 1977, Miss DeSimone was killed in an auto accident at Nags Head. She was a 1977 graduate of Jefferson High School and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.A. DeSimone of North Springfield, Va.

Kelly, who receives the $500 award for her achievement, motivation, sportsmanship, academics and the love of her teammates, is a high school all-America from Chester High School in Pennsylvania. She earned 10 letters while at Chester and the track team was district and state champion during her tenure. She also played point-guard on the basketball team and was a cheerleader. She is majoring in accounting at ECU with aspirations of becoming a certified public accountant.

"Arnetta is our top women's recruit," said head track coach Pat McGuigan. "She is the most talented individual on the squad and our goal for her is to reach the national meet in her first season."

The East Carolina University track season opens January 8 at the Eastman Kodak Invitational in Johnson City, Tenn.

To The Editor:

Fan apathy is one thing but the two articles written by Rick Scappe and published in the Daily Reflector on November 3 and 4, 1981, concerning internal problems between Coach Emory and the Football Team, is something else. The timing of the articles could not have been worse as the Pirates have to win only two games to have a winning season. How these articles will affect recruiting remains to be seen.

I do not know if Mr. Scappe is trying to make a name for himself or if he has an ax to grind with either Coach Emory or the Pirate Football Team. To me the article borders on "Blue" journalism and should have been published in the National Enquirer. Not only should Mr. Scappe apologize to the Pirate Football Team but the Daily Reflector should also apologize.

beating Jacksonville, 15-14, topping New Bern, 34-14 after a third-period scare and then downing Hoggard, 14-12, holding off a late rally by the Wilmington team.

"We had more talent last year actually," Vincent said in retrospect. "But these guys play well together. And they really want to win, too."

Vincent said that the team goal was to get back into the playoffs. "But I really didn't know how good our chances were. I guess I really thought that they would be pretty slim."

"But I do feel that we have gotten better every week, and basically, that's all you can hope for."

It all earned the Rampants a state-wide ranking, one they have held throughout the season, despite two Big East losses, one to favored Rocky Mount, 36-6, and the other in an upset to Wilson Hunt, 20-19, a team that was to win its final three games of the season.

Friday night, the Rampants again enter the pipeline. They travel to Mid-eastern co-champion Jacksonville to again face the Cardinals in a 8 p.m. game -- the first round of the 4-A playoffs.

The winner of the game will move on to a second round contest against the winner of the Fayetteville Terry Sanford-Wilmington New Hanover game -- on the road, the next Friday.

Sanford, winner of the Division IV title, finished the regular season ranked number one in the AP poll across the state. New Hanover, the other Mid-eastern co-champ, gained its berth by beating New Bern the final game of the season.

In the other Eastern playoff games, Big East winner Rocky Mount plays host to Enloe, the Cap-8 runner-up, while Fayetteville 71st, the Mid-South winner takes on Cap-8 winner Cary. The winners meet on the following Friday.

Winners of the two Eastern playoffs meet for the right to advance to the state finals on November 27.

Meanwhile, in the west, Central State champ High Point T.W. Andrews hosts Big Six winner Chapel Hill. In the same bracket Western champ Asheville is host to Big Six runner-up Vance. The winners of these two meet next Friday.

In the other bracket, South-western champ South Mecklenburg takes on Western runner-up Gastonia Asheville, while Central Piedmont winner East Forsyth is host to South-western #2 West Charlotte.

Billy Gets Last Laugh: Named American's Manager Of Year

By The Associated Press

Combative Billy Martin, who turned the sadsack Oakland A's into a championship team, was named American League Manager of the Year by The Associated Press today for a fourth time, tying the league record set by the legendary Casey Stengel.

It was the second straight AP award for Martin, who was Stengel's prize pupil in the days when Casey managed the New York Yankees. He also was named Manager of the Year in 1974 when he led the Texas Rangers to a surprising second-place finish in the AL West and again in 1976 when he piloted the Yankees to their first pennant in 12 years. Stengel won the award in 1949, 1952, 1953 and 1956.

Martin was an easy winner this time, receiving 386 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Bob Rodgers of the Milwaukee Brewers was second with 62 votes and Sparky Anderson of the Detroit Tigers finished third with 31.

Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers was selected National League Manager of the Year by The AP earlier this week.

Martin guided the young A's to the West Division title this year, gaining an automatic playoff berth by leading the division when the strike began and then eliminating Kansas City in the first round of the playoffs. Oakland was beaten by the Yankees in the League Championship Series.

The A's opened the season with a rush, winning their first 11 games to establish a record for start-of-season success.

were lucky to win, and I think the players realize this."

Vincent said he feels the Rampants must control the line of scrimmage for Rose to win. "We've also got to be able to throw on them, and I expect that they are going to be double-covering McLawhorn," he added.

Injuries could prove another problem for the Rampants. Harrell is still not quite 100 per cent as he comes off the tight injury. Vincent expects to start Lee at tailback, but also expects both to see a lot of duty in the game.

Defensive tackle William Rhodes (leg injury) will be out, and so will offensive tackle Ben Smith (chicken pox). Safety Sammy Hodges (ankle injury) is still questionable.

"We're about in the worst physical condition we've been in," Vincent said. "But I don't think that will be at problem at the start of the game. If we get some people hurt as we go along, it could become a problem."

The coach also feels that Rose must stop Jacksonville fullback Tyrone Currence to stop the Cards. "They've been throwing the ball better lately," Vincent said, "but Currence was the man who gave us the most trouble in that first game."

Currence, running from the fullback spot in the I-formation backfield, has carried the ball 152 times for 826 yards and six touchdowns. Quarterback Elliott Johnson, however, has been showing the way through the air. He's hit on 55 of 126 passes for 956 yards and 15 touchdowns.

Chief targets have been tight end Buddy Halbert with 17 catches for 315 yards and six touchdowns, and wide receiver Dale Kerns with 14 grabs for 189 yards and two touchdowns.

Defensive standouts for the Cardinals include free safety Ron Golden, with ten interceptions; along with linemen Lowell Currence and Reggie Sharpe and linebacker Bruce Simpson.

Jacksonville has rushed for 162 yards a game and passed for 95, a 257 total offense average. The Cardinals have allowed only 91 yards a game rushing and 71 passing for 162 yards a game in total offense.

In contrast, Rose has rushed for 168.6 yards a game, passed for 118.0, a total output of 286.6 yards a contest. The Rampant defense has allowed 106.6 yards rushing and 87.6 passing, a total of 194.2 per game.

Rose has given up 131 points while scoring 207. Jacksonville has scored 218 points, while allowing just 93.

Harrell leads the Rampants in rushing with 661 yards on 165 carries, with five touchdowns. Lee is next with 44 lugs for 352 yards and three touchdowns. Fullback Roger Williams has rushed 64 times for 277 yards and three scores.

Quarterback Barry Smith has hit on 41 of 93 passes for 859 yards and eight touchdowns. McLawhorn has been his chief target with 27 catches for 593 yards and seven touchdowns. Barnes has caught 16 passes for 340 yards and one touchdown.

"The first game was a tough one," Vincent said. "This one isn't going to be any easier."

Final Day Before Free Agency South Mecklenburg Star Is Player Of The Year

By The Associated Press
Major league teams trying to sign their free agents before facing competition in the re-entry draft are down to their last pitch.

Midnight tonight is the deadline for teams to exercise sole negotiating rights with players who have used up their option years.

Free agents remaining unsigned can be drafted Friday by all clubs participating in this year's re-entry process, the first under rules resulting from the strike that split the 1981 baseball season in two.

At the top of the list are three pitchers whose signing by a new team will require a roster player as compensation to his old club.

Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees, Ed Farmer of the Chicago White Sox and Dick Tidrow of the Chicago Cubs are classified Type A free agents — in the top 20 percent of their position statistically.

There are also three Type B players, whose loss will mean an extra amateur draft choice in a special round for their old teams. These players — in the top 20-to-30-percent bracket — are shortstop Chris Speier of the Montreal Expos, outfielder Dave Collins of the Cincinnati Reds and catcher Tim Lincecum of the Cubs.

All other free-agent signings mean compensation in the same manner as under the system that existed in the draft's first five years: A choice from the signing club in next June's amateur draft.

Forty-one players today still were eligible for the draft. The number was reduced by one Wednesday when outfielder Jerry Morales signed a two-year contract with the Cubs.

Morales batted .286 with the Cubs last season. Financial terms of his contract were not disclosed.

Guidry generally is seen as the prize in this year's draft, which is set to begin at 11 a.m. EST in New York's Plaza Hotel. He was 11-5 with 104 strikeouts and a 2.90 earned run average this season for the Yankees, who have refused to meet his demands for a $1.3 million-a-year contract.

"I haven't heard from George (Yankees owner George Steinbrenner) since Tuesday at about 4 o'clock," John D. Schneider, Guidry's agent, said in Louisiana Wednesday afternoon. "I'm flying out tomorrow to New York, and I'll be there for the draft." Farmer was 3-3 with 10 saves for the White Sox last season, striking out 41 and posting an ERA of 4.61. Tidrow, another relief specialist, was 3-10 with nine saves and a 5.13 ERA for the Cubs in 1981.

Four players on Friday's list are going through the draft for the second time and so do not require compensation. They are Yankees outfielder Reggie Jackson, infielder Bert Campaneris of California and pitcher Bill Campbell and outfielder Joe Rudi of Boston.

Toronto, with the worst record in the majors last season, will pick first, although position means little in this draft.

Game Dedication

East Carolina's football team dedicated game balls to several cancer victims, all related to the Pirate program last Saturday. Yesterday, game balls were presented to two of those in Pitt Memorial Hospital. Here Harold Blue, left, presents a game jersey to Howard Battle, the son of an ECU staff member, as Smokey Norris (right) prepares to present the ball and an ECU cap. Also presented with a game ball, jersey and hat was Kevin Harrell, son of another ECU staffer. Others to whom the game was dedicated included Robert Reid, father of players Donald and Ronald Reid; Janet Overton, a Pirate supporter; and Chris Durand, a team member currently not in school.

Tootie Robbins Dons Purple For Last Time

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

What was billed as an all-America year comes to a close for Tootie Robbins this Saturday when he and his East Carolina teammates play host to William & Mary.

Robbins, who floundered for the first couple of years he was at ECU, finally began to come into his own after Ed Emory took over as head football coach at the school. This year, he's been pushed as an all-America candidate, and is felt to be sure of a high draft position by the NFL come next spring.

Saturday, however, will be the last time he dons a purple jersey over his pads. "I'll miss it, there's no doubt about that," he says. "All of the players are my friends. We've been together through thick and thin. We practice together, eat together, sleep together."

"This is where it's all happened for me," he said.

Robbins, from his offensive guard spot, has gone up against some of the nation's premier defensive personnel, such as the University of Miami's Lester Williams a couple of weeks ago. But surprisingly, he doesn't pick Williams or any of them as the toughest to play against.

"The people who have the size rely on technique," he said. "Williams is a very good technique player, but he wasn't that aggressive. The little guys are the toughest," he said, mentioning players on teams like Western Carolina and Southwestern Louisiana. "I guess the guy at Southwest, I can't remember his name, was the toughest I went against. He was small and quick and very, very aggressive. That made up for what he lacked in size."

Tootie, a native of Bertie County, has great hopes of being in the pro ranks next fall. "I've talked to a few of the scouts," he said. "They've let me know that they think I have a chance to play pro ball. As to where I'll go, it doesn't matter. I just want the chance. I'd still like to play offense, but if they want me to play defense, that's okay too."

While the Pirates are fighting to put together a winning season — the first in Emory's two year tenure — Robbins feels that some of the losses have helped him in a leadership role. "The games we lost made me realize that if we were going to have a winning season, I'd have to step forward with some leadership and play well myself. I felt that if I did that, the rest would follow. The Carolina game cost us some confidence, but I think we got some of it back against State, because we didn't play that bad. We lost some of it against Duke, but we came back again after that too."

"Those games made a lot of people tighten up," he added. Robbins downplayed some of the problems faced by the team over the past week or so. "We might have a few problems on the team, but I think the majority are satisfied. There may be a few who are dissatisfied, but the majority are happy with the way things are going."

Robbins won't be completely through with his collegiate playing days after Saturday, however. He's got at least one more chance left during the all-star games.

He's already been selected to play in the Blue-Gray game in Mobile, Ala., on Christmas Day. "I'd like to get in another game or two, but I'm glad for the chance to play in this one," he said.

Guidry Waits For Phone Call

LAFAYETTE, La. (AP) — Loyalty is one thing, but it'll be no more Mr. Nice Guy when Ron Guidry goes on the free agent market Friday morning, warned the business manager for the New York Yankees' pitching ace.

"He hasn't asked to re-negotiate. He hasn't walked out. In fact, he went beyond what anyone could expect in helping the team to win," agent John D. Schneider said Wednesday.

"Call it principle," he said. "Call it the price you pay."

"Look at it. For the past three years, the Yankees have had a bargain."

"If the Yankees allow Ron on Friday to become a free agent ... it's going to become all ball clubs on an equal footing. It becomes all business on Friday at 9:30," said Schneider. "Loyalty, as we've said before, is a two-way street."

The Yankees have until midnight to reach an agreement with their pitching ace, who wants $1.3 million a year. If they can't, he becomes a free agent along with as many as four other Yankees.

"I haven't heard from George (Steinbrenner, Yankees owner) since Tuesday at about 4 o'clock," Schneider said. "I'm flying out tomorrow to New York, and I'll be there for the draft." All major league teams except five who have opted out of the draft have the chance Friday to make an offer for Guidry through the draft.

Schneider said as seven teams other than the Yankees have expressed an interest in putting in a bid. He said he expects the Yankees to bid, too, and that could be a tactical mistake.

"If George is saying, 'Let me see what the other teams are offering, and I'll match the offer or maybe pay him another $100,000 or $200,000,' then he's making a mistake," Schneider said.

He said he and Guidry based their salary demand to the Yankees on the team's income and salary structure.

"As far as the Yankees are concerned, we have a figure, and I doubt that Ron's going to deviate from that figure," he said.

He said the figure "we've tossed around" is $7.5 million for a five-year contract. He said Guidry was easily worth $125,000 a year more than he was paid.

"We want to let the Yankees know — or George — that Ron's saying that he wants to be with the Yankees shouldn't lull him into a sense of complacency," Schneider said.

South Mecklenburg Star Is Player Of The Year

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

Associated Press Writer

South Mecklenburg running back Steve Griffin, who reached his season's goal of 1,000 yards rushing in six games and who helped lead his team to an undefeated record, has been named North Carolina High School Player of the Year by The Associated Press, it was announced Wednesday.

Griffin was the unanimous selection of a panel of high school sportswriters from around the state.

During the 1981 season, Griffin carried the ball 177 times for 1,671 yards and 24 touchdowns. As a pass catcher, the 5-foot-11, 177-pound senior had 16 receptions for 207 yards.

Griffin was one of three 1,000-yard rushers named to The AP's All-State High School Football Team announced Wednesday. The others were Dwight Richardson of Fayetteville's Terry Sanford and Kenny Grantham of Charles B. Aycock.

South Mecklenburg Coach Jim Seacord said when Griffin started his high school career, he was one inch shorter and 40 pounds lighter. His forte in junior high school was track and field. As a sophomore, he captured championships in the 100- and 220-yard dashes.

On the football field, however, Griffin didn't accomplish much as South Mecklenburg slipped to 2-8. But work with the high school's weight program gave Griffin some extra size which helped out on the football field, but slowed him somewhat in the dashes.

His junior year, Seacord said, Griffin gained 860 yards and led the team to an 8-2 record.

This year, South Mecklenburg is undefeated and opens the playoffs Friday night against Gastonia Ashbrook.

Seacord said in a telephone interview that Griffin is acknowledged as the leader of the team, especially by his offensive line.

"They look to him. They know if they block real well that there's always a chance he'll break it," Seacord said.

"He leads through example. He runs hard on every down," the coach added.

As for the recipient, Griffin was at home when notified of the honor. Schools in Charlotte and Mecklenburg County had several days off this week.

"I don't know what to say," Griffin said. "It's a great feeling to wake up to."

Griffin is considered to be a top prospect for several colleges in the area. He said he is looking hard at Clemson, North Carolina, North Carolina State and Georgia.

He also said his team was glad to have reached its primary goal, that of an undefeated season.

"We worked for it," Griffin said. "It got hard but everything paid off. It feels good."

In addition to being named North Carolina's player of the year, Griffin was named Wednesday by The Charlotte News as Mecklenburg's top prep player in 1981.

Youth Ball Registers

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Youth Basketball registration will continue through Friday from 3 to 6 p.m.

Players may pre-register at the gym at which they wish to participate, either Elm Street, South Greenville or West Greenville. There is a $5 participation fee.

The league will be divided into the following age groups: Pee Wee, ages 9-10, Midgets, ages 11-12, Juniors, ages 13-14, and Seniors, ages 15 through senior in high school. These ages are as of April 1, 1982.

Elm Street Gym will be open to the public for free play on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. beginning Monday. These times will only be available until Thanksgiving.

Tennis Clinics Are Scheduled

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will hold a series of adult tennis clinics from November 16 through November 25.

Classes for beginners will be held from 10 to 11 a.m., Monday through Friday. It will include the basic strokes: forehand, and backhands, along with service and other fundamentals of the game, such as how to keep score.

The advanced beginner class will be held from 12 noon to 1 p.m., Monday through Friday. This is for those who have some knowledge of tennis and want to improve their consistency on the basic strokes. If you have played before but are not up to the competitive level, this class is for you.

Intermediate classes will be held from 1 to 2 p.m., Monday through Friday. The placement of shots, when to go for a winner, and the net game will be covered.

Registration for all classes will be held through Monday, November 16 at the River Birch Tennis Center, where all classes will be caught. There is a $3 for the clinic.

Further information can be obtained from the River Birch Center, 756-9343.

Journalist Becomes A Judge: He Still Writes

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer
ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Eleven years ago, Tom Hodson was a law student, chasing a degree to make him a better news reporter. Somewhere in between, he ended up in a courtroom rather than a newsroom, a judge instead of a journalist.

Besides serving as Athens County municipal judge, the 33-year-old former campus newspaper editor still writes freelance articles and teaches public affairs journalism at Ohio University.

Hodson never forgot his love or respect for journalism. He might be the ideal person to debate either side of the free press-fair trial issue.

"The first time I had to say, 'No comment,' to a reporter, I almost gagged," Hodson said in an interview. "I think my wife thinks I'm a professional schizophrenic. Sometimes on bad days, I think I'll just bag it and be a journalism professor."

Hodson is something of an enigma. He doesn't pretend to understand how he ever came to mix the two professions.

"I had been frustrated by lawyers all through college and I figured the only way to learn what they were talking about was to be one of them," he said.

"I really did intend to get into reporting after I got my (law) degree, but I figured it would be silly to have three years of law and never argue a case," Hodson said. "I thought I'd try it for a year."

One year stretched to three. And although he never really intended to return to Athens, where he had spent his undergraduate years, Hodson said he found a law career here rewarding.

"It wasn't like going to a city and spending your first three years in someone's law library writing memos," he said. "I spent my first day out of law school defending someone on a possession charge."

By winning his six-year judgeship in 1979, Hodson successfully crossed what in this college town is referred to as the "town-gown gap." He went from the status of O.U. student in the turbulent late 1960s to that of a prominent civic and university leader a decade later.

"The years 1966 to 1970 represented one of the biggest transitions of all time. When we came to school in 1966 we were scrubbed. Ties ... the works. We came here from suburbia with those values. It was a very radicalizing period, probably to the extremes."

"We came in moderate-to-conservative and left liberal-to-radical. Since then, it's been a tempering process for me," Hodson said.

It doesn't take much prompting for Hodson to reflect on those years.

"It was an era of great excitement, great involvement," he said. "I don't think we've seen it since. I lost a girlfriend over the war ... over an issue. Could you see that happening now?"

Hodson and his colleagues at the campus paper, some of whom are today noted journalists, had a few image problems in those years. Because they reported and editorialized on the day's issues, they were often perceived as being radical.

"We weren't the street demonstrating radicals. We were anti-war and anti-ROTC and very opinionated in an editorial sense. But just because we were promoting the issues, I don't think that made me responsible for a kid who went out and threw a brick through a window," Hodson said.

When Hodson ran for judge nine years later, it was students rather than adults who had to be convinced Hodson was a viable candidate. "A lot of students would come up and say, 'You're too young to be judge.' They thought of me as their contemporary, or at best their older brother," he said.

Townpeople and residents in the surrounding Appalachian hills accepted the youthful Hodson, partly because of the programs he proposed during the campaign. Some included "circuit riding" and holding evening and weekend court sessions.

Hodson never stopped writing. His latest articles have been published in radio-TV trade publications and in law journals. It keeps him close to his first love.

Some of his written legal opinions, however, have caused a split in Athens. When Hodson submitted an opinion that results of the Intoxilizer, a device used for measuring alcohol on the breath, were unreliable and inadmissible as court evidence, he received the label of bleeding heart liberal.

The 4th District Ohio Court of Appeals overruled him, but his image was set in the minds of some people.

By JENNIFER PARMELEE
Associated Press Writer
EVERGREEN, Colo. (AP) — When veterinarian Robert Winters was stricken with bubonic plague, many of his clients were shocked to find the scourge of medieval Europe in this affluent mountain community.

"Gee, that's a Middle Ages disease, isn't it," one pet owner told Winters. "Did they treat you with leeches?"

Winters contracted the disease from a cat bite, although more common carriers are chipmunks and prairie dogs.

Today plague is accepted by health officials as a fact of life in 14 Western states, where scientists acknowledge it is impossible to stamp out.

In the United States, the incidence of human cases still is relatively rare, but it has increased significantly in the last 15 years. Plague-carrying fleas have affected wild rodents in Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Utah, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Oklahoma, Montana, Washington, Texas and Kansas, with human cases reported in the first 10 states on the list.

"It is a dynamic disease, and the potential for human cases is always present," says Dr. John Emerson of the Colorado Department of Health.

Before 1965, plague was limited to an average of one human case per year in the U.S. That figure has increased to between 15 and 16 human cases each year, according to Allan Barnes, plague specialist with the National Centers for Disease Control laboratory in Fort Collins.

Barnes said there have been 147 cases between 1965 and 1980, 23 of them fatal. More than half of them have been in New Mexico.

"It's kind of like dropping a handful of wheat on the floor," Barnes explained. "Most of it hit New Mexico, but a few kernels spread as far east as Brownsville, Texas."

The modern version of plague takes four forms — bubonic plague, the most common form of the disease, affects the lymph glands; septicemic plague enters the bloodstream, while primary and secondary pneumonic plague, the most contagious and life-threatening forms, enter the lungs.

The Black Death of the 14th century, named for the black patches and boils — or "bubos" — that appeared on the victim, was a combination of pneumonic and bubonic plague.

"In their bones they bore so virulent a disease that anyone who only spoke to them was seized by a mortal illness and in no manner could evade death," Michael Platiensis, a Franciscan friar wrote in 1348 about the infection that wiped out half of Europe.

If a man with secondary pneumonic plague passes it on to another individual, the disease becomes primary bubonic plague. In 1980, primary pneumonic plague had its first American victim in more than 50 years, Barnes said.

Today plague, if diagnosed in time, is curable with simple antibiotics. But it is still a lethal disease, with a mortality rate running as high as 60 percent if untreated, according to Barnes.

It can kill within days, and health specialists say they are concerned that many doctors would not be able to diagnose it. In Winters' case, a 12-day delay in diagnosis was not fatal because he took tetracycline to combat the symptoms.

Other plague victims have not been as fortunate. Emerson said a girl from Wichita Falls, Texas was infected with plague in Colorado's Boulder County. Only after she returned home and died did doctors discover she had bubonic plague.

The disease, once concentrated in rat-infested urban slums, increasingly threatens man as he moves into wilderness areas.

Barnes attributed much of its increase to changing lifestyles. Popular pastimes like hiking and camping bring people in contact with fleas from wild animals. Woodpiles and rock walls near opulent country houses also attract rodents, Barnes said.

One plague victim was bitten by fleas at his mountain campsite, while a baby in Norwood, Colo. was infected when a family dog, fond of chasing prairie dogs, brought the disease right into the house.

The disease is not only spreading among wild animals, but the number of people who expose themselves to possible infection increases with each passing year.

"Like it or not," said Emerson, "We're stuck with it."

See Big Crop Of Christmas Trees

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
It's two weeks until Thanksgiving and almost two months until Christmas but North Carolina Christmas tree growers already are getting ready to harvest a record crop this year.

William T. Huxster, extension forestry specialist at North Carolina State University, says Christmas-tree farmers will harvest a bumper crop of 1.9 million trees this season.

Huxster estimates the crop will bring farmers about $21 million.

"Despite the abnormally dry growing season, a bumper crop is predicted," he said.

Most of the trees will be cut during the week of Thanksgiving and will be delivered by mid-December. Trees from North Carolina are shipped all over the South.

Christmas trees are grown as a crop in 50 counties from the mountains to the coast, Huxster said, but most come from Ashe, Alleghany, Avery and Watauga counties in the western part of the state. There are about 2,000 growers in the state, with only 1 percent of those growing Christmas trees on a full-time basis.

About 60 percent of the state's Christmas trees are Fraser firs, which are cultivated only in the mountains. About a third of the crop consists of white pines and the rest are cedars and other pines.

Currently, North Carolina produces about 5 percent of the nation's Christmas-tree supply. Huxster said the figure will go up to about 6 percent this year. However, he predicted that the state will be top Christmas-tree producing state in the next five years.

"A lot of farmers have started Christmas-tree plantations and will be harvesting their crop in the next five years," he said. "By then, we should be producing about 15 percent of the nation's Christmas trees."

Michigan now is the top producer with 5 million trees a year.

Meanwhile, forestry specialists are looking ahead to Christmas-tree crops 50 years from now.

"The long-term seed supply is our main concern," Huxster said. "A tree has to be 30 years old to be a good seed-bearing tree. Seeds picked this year are going to be the Christmas trees 13 or 14 years from now. We're worried about the crop even further ahead than that."

Huxster said this growing season answered some of the seed problems that have plagued western North Carolina growers. Fraser firs were loaded down with cones this year, which meant plenty of seeds for growers.

Huxster said Fraser firs only produce a good seed crop about every three or four years. Until this year's crop, farmers had not been able to get enough seeds to meet the total demand for their trees.

Couple Plans Joint Recital

By ECU News Bureau
A program of sonatas for violin and piano will be given by Joanne and Charles Bath on Sunday at 4:15 p.m. in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall at East Carolina University.

The program will include three works from the sonata literature for violin and keyboard: Veracini's Sonata in E Minor, Beethoven's sonata No. 4 in A minor, opus 23, and the Brahms Sonata No. 2 in A Major, opus 100.

The Baths have appeared in numerous recitals in Greenville and the surrounding area and for the third consecutive year will perform for the Christmas candlelight tour of the Tryon Palace, New Bern.

Bath is chairman of the ECU School of Music keyboard faculty. Mrs. Bath is a violin teacher specializing in the teaching method developed by Shinichi Suzuki.

The recital will be open to the public without charge.

Wife Value Rated High

LONDON (AP) — If Peter, Peter Pumpkin Eater had been able to keep his wife, he would have had quite an investment.

The Legal and General Assurance Society Ltd., one of Britain's biggest insurance companies, says a wife is worth 204.63 pounds, or $380.61, a week.

That's figured from work done at home at rates typically paid cooks, child minders, waitresses, dishwashers, cleaners and other workers.

The figure, published Wednesday, is based on a 12- to 14-hour work day, seven days a week.

The company said it was devised to highlight the cost to a husband if his wife dies without life insurance and he has to hire help.

A similar survey six years ago valued a housewife's work at 71 pounds, then worth $157.62, but inflation has taken its toll.

The higher figure is equivalent to that of an army sergeant major, a bishop of the Church of England or a fire chief, although they generally work far fewer hours. The average industrial weekly wage in Britain for men is $261.52 for 40 hours work and for women it's $170.

This Thanksgiving, the brightest ideas in the world are here to play.

Gov. Hunt, Lt. Gov. Green Going To The Orient

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt left the state Wednesday on a two-week trip to the Orient which he said should benefit North Carolina's economy and boost employment.

"Last year North Carolina had more foreign investments than any other state in the nation," Hunt said in a prepared statement. "I believe this trip will also pay off in more good jobs for North Carolina."

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green planned to join Hunt on the trip to Japan, Taiwan and South Korea as part of a 10-member delegation of state officials. Also making the trip are two Hunt cabinet members, Joseph Grimsley, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, and Sara Hodgkins, secretary of Cultural Resources, along with two press aides.

"The purpose will be to try to tie the ribbons on some industrial prospects we've been working on, and to renew our contacts from the last trip in 1979," said Stephanie Bass, Hunt's deputy press secretary and a member of the state delegation.

Ms. Bass said the trip is expected to cost the state $3,000 for each official going at state expense. In addition, more than 20 private business executives and trade association officials were scheduled to travel with the group at private expense.

Hunt plans to spend two days in Denver for a meeting of the Education Commission of the States. He is president-elect of that group, she said.

Hunt will depart from San Francisco for Tokyo on Saturday, and will be joined Sunday by Green and other state officials.

In Tokyo, Hunt will first attend a two-day meeting of the Southeast U.S.-Japan Association, a trade group composed of state and business officials.

Four state Commerce Department officials are in the delegation, including William M.A. Greene, director of the State Ports Authority, and Stephen L. Meehan, special assistant to the secretary and spokesman for the department.

Meehan said the group would meet with Japanese business executives and also with officials of Japan Tobacco and Salt, the government monopoly dealing in those commodities. Japan is the largest overseas purchaser of North Carolina tobacco, he said.

The group hopes to meet with about 60 Japanese shipping executives to promote North Carolina's two ports and will visit the cities of Nagoya and Osaka as well as Tokyo. Visits to Seoul, South Korea, and Taipei, Taiwan, are to encourage purchase of North Carolina goods, including tobacco, soybeans and electrical parts, Meehan said.

Hunt plans to return Nov. 25. Recent Japanese industrial investments announced in North Carolina include a $37 million acid manufacturing facility in Raleigh by Ajinomoto, a textile machinery sales and service office in Charlotte by Toyota and a $4 million Sampson County plant by Fuji Cone.

The trip is Hunt's third major foreign visit since taking office in 1977. He visited Japan and China two years ago and also led a trade mission to Europe.

No Suspects In Abduction

BREVARD, N.C. (AP) — Authorities say there are no suspects in the slaying of a 17-year-old girl whose badly beaten body was found in a vacant lot about one-half mile from her home.

Brevard Police Chief L.B. Vaughan identified the victim as Jacqueline Lee, a junior at Brevard High School.

Vaughan said Miss Lee's body was found about 4:30 p.m. Wednesday. She had been reported missing shortly after midnight by her mother, he said. The girl was apparently abducted from in front of her home by an unknown assailant.

Neighbors told police they heard screams near the Lee residence shortly after 8 p.m. Tuesday. Officers dispatched to the scene could find nothing, Vaughan said.

Vaughan said police have no suspect or motive in the killing. A local doctor assisting police said sexual assault had not been ruled out and that the girl had possibly been shot once.

Brevard police, State Bureau of Investigation agents and Brevard Rescue Squad members were conducting a search for the missing girl at the time.

Police refused to release most details surrounding the case, citing the need to keep some information confidential during the search for the killer.

The first meeting of the Pitt County Migrant Parent Advisory Council met recently with Les Strayhorn, medical-social counselor of Pitt County, as the principal speaker.

Sue Branch, Title I director, also gave an overview of migrant education to about 35 migrant teachers and parents who attended the meeting at Parker's Restaurant.

Must First Learn To Pronounce The Name Israel

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of an Israeli delegation says Saudi Arabia's implied willingness to accept the Jewish state's right to exist is a step in the "right direction." But he says the Saudis still must learn "to pronounce the name of Israel" before becoming partners in the Middle East peace process.

The statement Wednesday by Moshe Arens, who is expected to be Israel's next ambassador to the United States, appeared to contradict Prime Minister Menachem Begin, who has dismissed the entire Saudi proposal as an "annihilation plan" for Israel.

Arens, who heads the Israeli legislative committee on defense and foreign affairs, told reporters after a 90-minute meeting with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. that the Saudi formula as a whole is "totally unacceptable" and represents "a threat to the very existence of Israel."

But he added: "The Saudi statement goes a little ways beyond the statements they've made in the past — a little ways in the right direction but a long ways from making Saudi Arabia a partner for peace in negotiation with Israel," Arens said.

The six-member Israeli delegation was continuing its consultations today at scheduled meetings with top White House aides and Senate leaders.

President Reagan said at his news conference Tuesday that the Saudis' tacit acceptance of Israel's right to exist is a "hopeful sign."

"This has been one of the sticking points so far with the Arab world refusing to make that acknowledgement," Reagan said.

Begin, however, has denounced the Saudi proposal.

The Saudi plan does not directly mention Israel but says all people in the region should have the right to live in peace, and Begin says there is no assurance that the reference to the rights of all coun r0230 -b- Nevertheless, Arens said it may be a "step ahead" for Saud 02:24 Arabia to suggest it might be ready to accept Israel's right to exist. Egypt is the only Arab nation which has done that.

"Maybe in Saudi Arabia, as in Egypt some years ago, the realization is penetrating that nothing is going to be done by force and that the Arab world does not have the military capability to defeat Israel in the battlefield," Arens said.

But he said that if Saudi Arabia wants to enter the peace process, Israel would insist that it do so without preconditions and that the Saudis "would have to learn how to pronounce the name of Israel."

Reagan and other U.S. officials have expressed sharp reservations about the rest of the eight-point Saudi plan, and the president said Tuesday that the Camp David process must be the basis for any Mideast peace.

The Saudi proposal, unveiled last August, also calls for the establishment of a Palestinian state with its capital at East Jerusalem; Israeli withdrawal from all territories occupied since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war; recognition of the right of all Palestinians to return to their homeland inside Israel; the removal of all Israeli settlements in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Arens also said Wednesday that growing diplomatic pressures on Israel, combined with a gradual eroding of Israel's military edge in the region, could "cause problems" for Egypt's new President Hosni Mubarak and "reverse the peace process that took us 30 years to get going."

Food Service Elections Held

Cafeteria manager Margaret Barnhill of South Greenville School has been elected president of the Pitt County-Greenville City School Food Service Association.

Meeting at the Greenville Middle School, the association also elected Nellie Dunn of Belvoir School as vice president, Elsie Wynne of Eastern Elementary School as secretary and Betsy Mills of Chicod Elementary as treasurer.

First place in the fall-winter cafeteria decoration contest was won by Alberta Garris, second place was claimed by Helen Roberts and third place went to Karen Lawrence.

Veterans Day Also Stirs U.S. Nuclear Protestors

By The Associated Press

The 63rd anniversary of the armistice that was to mark the end of all wars was observed at Arlington National Cemetery with a wreath-laying at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by the man who started that tradition.

Elsewhere across America, Veterans Day was marked by get-togethers by former warriors young and old, the dedication of a new submarine designed to "strike fear and terror" into enemies by its mere existence and by protests against the Reagan administration's proliferation of nuclear weapons.

At Arlington, Hamilton Fish Sr., the 93-year-old former New York congressman who laid the first wreath at the tomb 60 years ago on Nov. 11, repeated the honors Wednesday at the spot set aside for an unknown comrade killed in World War I.

"On behalf of the ex-servicemen of the United States Army of World War I, I welcome this opportunity" he said, the remainder of his address drowned by a commercial jet passing overhead. Some 3,000 people, including dignitaries and politicians, were on hand.

In Groton, Conn., the first Trident submarine, the USS Ohio, was commissioned. Admiral Hyman Rickover, considered the father of the nuclear navy, took to the podium to praise the ship, which he once had criticized for being built over-budget and late.

The Navy estimated its cost at $1.22 billion, $431 million over the original estimates and excluding its weapons and fuel. The Ohio carries 24 ballistic missiles, each tipped with eight nuclear warheads and each with the explosive power of 100,000 tons of TNT.

"Once at a ship launching I was asked the purpose of the ship," Rickover said. "I replied, 'To strike fear and terror in the hearts of the enemy.'"

Seated next to Rickover and following him at the microphone was Navy Secretary John Lehman, who Pentagon sources say has recommended that the 81-year-old admiral be replaced.

But it was weapons such as those aboard the Ohio that were the focus of Veterans Day protests at 147 college campuses in 42 states and the capital sponsored by the Union of Concerned Scientists, based in Cambridge, Mass.

Eric Van Loon, the executive director, said the events that brought together nuclear weapons opponents from the ranks of veterans and college students are "going to be repeated and shared" in months and years to come.

Achim Maske, executive director of the West German Committee for Peace, Security and Cooperation and organizer of a Bonn rally attracting 250,000 anti-nuclear protesters Oct. 10, spoke at Harvard and said his country's pacifists will have more mass rallies next spring "and we hope to double the number of people taking part."

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame, said at his school's rally that he wants to organize world scientific and religious leaders to oppose the threat of nuclear war.

Hesburgh noted there is a "spontaneous combustion" movement in response to the threat of nuclear war, adding that he was glad universities are spearheading the movement.

Veterans in Philadelphia placed a wreath before an eternal flame Wednesday, exactly at 11:11 a.m. — the hour of the armistice that ended the first world war.

In Beaumont, Texas the "Last Man Club" — old soldiers from the Army's B Company, 143rd Infantry, 36th Division in World War I, celebrated the armistice, then said it would be the last observance. They had gotten together on Nov. 11 every year for 45 years.

Wayne Aspinall, a former Colorado congressman who served in both world wars, said Vietnam vets "fought for the same worthy cause."

"They didn't win in Vietnam, but ours were hollow victories in a way, too."

"There has been a decision made by more and more Vietnam vets to get up and have our say," a veteran of that war, 30-year-old Andrew Schmaltz, said at ceremonies in his hometown, Grand Junction, Colo. "I don't believe people in general think of Vietnam vets on Veterans Day, not yet. But when more time has passed, maybe they will."

Three Historical Organizations Of N.C. To Receive Recognition

By Dr. H.G. Jones

For The Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Three of North Carolina's historical organizations will receive national recognition during the annual meeting of the North Carolina Literary and Historical Association in Raleigh on November 20.

The American Association for State and Local History, a 7,600-member organization promoting history on the North American continent, will present a certificate of commendation to the Junior League of Raleigh and awards of merit to the Historic Preservation Society of Durham and the state Division of Archives and History.

The Junior League's award is for "the preservation and interpretation of the history of North Carolina's capital city." Among the league's projects since 1966 were the production of a documentary color motion picture on the history and architecture of the state capitol, the co-publication of the book "North Carolina's Capital, Raleigh," and support of the Raleigh Historic Sites Commission in the preservation of the Mordecai House.

Nearly 20,000 hours of voluntary work was contributed by the league's members in the Mordecai House project. Mrs. Robert Bilbro is president of the organization.

One of the two awards of merit — the association's highest recognition — will go to the Historic Preservation Society of Durham for its leadership in a variety of cultural efforts, among them the establishment of the St. Joseph's Historic Foundation, which preserved a historic black church as a performing arts center.

The Durham group was also the prime mover in the saving of Stagville Plantation and the formation of Stagville Preservation Center as a teaching center.

It initiated a survey of the downtown historic area, saved the Pegram House, and was involved in the preservation of the Durham Auditorium and the observance of the city's centennial. Mrs. William T. Coman is president of the Durham preservation group.

The acquisition, development, and interpretation of the Duke Homestead as a state historic site portraying the history of tobacco is the basis for the state Division of Archives and History's award of merit.

In 1971, with the encouragement of Mrs. Mary D.B. Semans, Duke University agreed to transfer to the state title to the homestead of Washington Duke, including about 40 acres of land, for development as a state historic site.

To assist the state agency in the project, the Tobacco History Corporation, headed by the late John L. Crumpton, was formed. The corporation received its first gift from R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. and was instrumental in raising about $100,000 for other aspects of the project, including a motion picture on the history of tobacco. Liggett & Myers Co. donated additional land.

For its role, the Tobacco History Corp. will receive a duplicate certificate from the AASLH.

In 1973, the Legislature appropriated funds for a modern visitor center at the homestead, and the state historic site was opened the following year, combining indoor exhibits relating the history of tobacco to buildings and grounds where tobacco was actually grown and manufactured.

North Carolinians have been prominent in the AASLH since its founding in 1940. Christopher Crittenden was its first president; W. Samuel Tarlton was a member of its governing board; H.G. Jones is now its secretary and state awards chairman; and Samuel T. Townsend is state membership chairman.

The organization held its national meeting in Raleigh in 1963.

'Graham Day' Draws Support

Arnold Parris, chairman of the Agri-Business Committee of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, announced today that his committee has gone on record supporting "Jim Graham Day" in Pitt County.

Graham, who has served North Carolina as agriculture commissioner for 20 years, will be honored at the Farmers Warehouse at a barbecue on Nov. 24 at 6 p.m.

Anyone wishing to attend the dinner may contact members of the committee, which is headed by Howard Wilson, to secure a ticket. Tickets cost $20 each and will include dinner, entertainment and special recognition for Graham.

For further information, call the chamber of commerce at 752-4101.

Tobacco Tying Contest Slated

A tobacco-tying contest will be held at Farmers Warehouse at noon Tuesday in conjunction with the Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival.

Participants in the contest, sponsored by the festival and Ciba Geigy Corp. of Greensboro, will have quality, high-order tobacco available to bundle and tie. Each contestant must tie three bundles and the bundles should be no larger than a 50-cent piece with no cap on the head (the tie leaf should not cover up the stems so that the judges can take a critical look. Overall neatness will be an important factor. A time limit of approximately two minutes will be given to each contestant.

The tying of flue-cured tobacco for market has almost become a lost art. The use of a loose-leaf, untied leaf was introduced to flue-cured tobacco marketing in the 1960s. Earlier, tobacco was offered for sale in tied bundles.

Egypt-Bound

PORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Nearly 1,500 soldiers from the four major military branches were to arrive at Fort Bragg today in preparation for the Bright Star 82 exercises, in which the troops will participate in simulated war games in Egypt.

Lt. Col. Pat Cannan, public affairs officer at the fort, said the exercise involves a total of about 4,000 troops from the U.S. Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps. He said the troops are part of the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force.

He said the troops would undergo military maneuvers and simulated war games in conjunction with Egyptian military forces.

Bright Star 82 is the second such deployment to Egypt, although Cannan said it is the first time Fort Bragg has been used as a base for the exercises.

Cannan said the troops will be given a specific mission after they arrive at the fort. He said the troops are scheduled to return to the United States around the first of December.

Many of the troops are already in Egypt, Cannan said.

Cannan said about 800 paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg will fly to Egypt and will parachute into isolated desert areas.

The paratroopers will assemble en masse at the Division Support Command Friday morning for an address by Maj. Gen. James J. Lindsay, division commander.

The soldiers will remain at the center until they begin loading on the C-141 transport aircraft Friday morning at Pope Air Force Base.

Television crews from CBS, ABC, the British Broadcasting Company, will be on hand to film Friday's departure. Television crews will film the loading of troops and equipment Friday, as well as the departure of the aircraft.

Cannan said television crews also will film parts of the military maneuvers in Egypt.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Oct. 29-Nov. 4.

HOUSE
Spending — The House rejected, 63 for and 318 against, a motion to send back to committee a bill funding State Department operations in fiscal 1982-83. This was a move against planned budget cuts in educational and cultural programs run by the International Communications Agency. The cuts would virtually end Fulbright fellowships, eliminate the ICA's academic exchanges, reduce financial support for some 300,000 foreign students enrolled in U.S. universities, and curtail Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty broadcasts. The cuts are a response to President Reagan's call for an additional 12 percent reduction in spending by all federal agencies in FY 1982. The bill (S 1193) was sent to conference with the House.

Sponsor Edward Derwinski, R-Ill., said the motion would strengthen the ICA as an instrument of foreign policy.

Some opponents favored the cuts. Most, however, opposed the cuts and favored a strategy of preventing them during a House-Senate conference on the appropriations bill.

Members voting "yea" wanted the bill rewritten in committee to force cuts in State Department operations other than the ICA.

Rep. James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."
Reps. Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.C. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and William Hendon, R-11 voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, and Charles Whitley, D-3, did not vote.

Cost overruns — By a vote of 171 for and 224 against, the House agreed with a Senate plan to control cost overruns in major weapons contracts. Members voting "yea" wanted to table instructions that the House agree with the Senate. Under the plan, Congress must be warned any time a major weapons system is costing at least 15 percent more than had been estimated. If the Pentagon fails to explain the overrun in writing within 30 days, the funding of the contract is to be frozen. The vote occurred during debate on the $130.7 billion Defense Department authorization bill (S 815) for FY 1982, later sent to a House-Senate conference where the cost-control plan was approved by both chambers.

Members voting to table said the plan could increase defense contracting costs by disrupting production schedules.

Opponent Mary Rose Oakar, D-Cleveland, said: "The question really is, why should the Defense Department be sacred when it comes to waste and cost overruns?"

Members voting "nay" favored the Senate plan for combatting cost overruns in major weapons contracts.

Johnston, Martin and Hendon voted "yea."

Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Broyhill voted "nay."

Jones and Fountain did not vote.

SENATE

Cuts — By a vote of 32 for and 51 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to cut the $21.1 billion FY 1982 Agriculture Department appropriations bill by an additional 2.6 percent. The bill (HR 4119) was passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sponsor Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., said his amendment "provides another chance for us to chip away at inflation and high interest rates ... and allow us to keep faith with the expectations and hopes of the American people."

Opponent Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said the bill already had been cut by $1.1 billion in response to the president's latest economy request and that "virtually every program and every account in this legislation was scrutinized in a very careful and sensitive manner."

Senators voting "yea" wanted an additional 2.6 percent cut in agricultural appropriations bill for FY 1981.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

Amtrak — The Senate refused, 34 for and 53 against, to prevent resumption of Amtrak's Cardinal passenger train connecting Washington, D.C., and Chicago via Cincinnati. Losing several million dollars annually, the Cardinal was discontinued on Oct. 1. The amendment was proposed to HR 4209, the Transportation Department's FY 1982 appropriations bill. The $10.4 billion measure for Transportation and related agencies was sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., a supporter of keeping the Cardinal out of service, said "it is the wrong route" for the Senate to approve Amtrak routes on the basis of political clout rather than cost effectiveness.

Opponent Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., said "rail passenger service is important to West Virginia" and that the Cardinal also benefits the District of Columbia, Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois.

Senators voting "nay" wanted to put the Cardinal back in business.

Helms voted "yea."

East did not vote.

Cut — The Senate rejected, 39 for and 52 against, an amendment inflicting an additional 4.1 percent cut in the $10.4 billion Transportation Department appropriations bill for FY 1982 (see preceding vote). The across-the-board cut would have exempted Coast Guard programs.

Sponsor Mack Mattingly, R-Ga., asked: "When will we admit the fact that it is time to pay the piper — time to keep our promises — time to act decisively to get this economy turned around?"

Opponent Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said he has already backed massive cuts in the bill yet "now I find I am being castigated ... because we have not saved enough money."

Senators voting "yea" favored an additional 4.1 percent cut in the Transportation Department appropriations bill.
Helms voted "yea."
East did not vote.

Tipped Scales Over Estimates

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Sneezing could have been left uncured had he ever gotten the sniffles.

The Tulsa Zoo decided to scrap its estimates of how much its elephants weighed and put the animals on the scales, if they could find scales big enough.

"We could have done them serious harm had we medicated them on a weight guesstimate," said Larry Nunley, the head animal keeper.

To their aid came Oklahoma Highway Patrol troopers with four truck scales — one for each of the animal's feet.

Gunda weighed 11,000 pounds. That was way over the estimate of 8,600 pounds. Sneezey, the only male in the group, tipped the scales at 7,000 pounds, much more than the 3,000 estimate. Tooma weighed 10,000 pounds after being estimated at 6,700.

BY THE WEEKEND

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — An International Red Cross conference has adopted resolutions urging Israel to give back Arab lands and condemning Afghanistan's refusal to allow the Red Cross to visit prisoners.

In another resolution, passed today, the Red Cross asked all nations to take "any appropriate action" to end the practice of making political opponents "disappear."

The resolution said several countries have done away with opposition by quietly eliminating them, but not necessarily murdering them. The Norwegian delegation circulated a study quoting the human rights group Amnesty International as saying up to 13,000 people "disappeared" in 1980.

The resolution on the occupied Arab territories, introduced by the Jordanian Red Crescent society, said the conference was "deeply concerned" by Israel's alleged refusal to apply the terms of the Geneva Convention to those territories. The agreement describes treatment of prisoners and civilians in wartime.

The resolution described Jewish settlements in Arab lands occupied after the 1967 Mideast war as "incompatible" with the Geneva Convention and urged Israel, referred to only as "the occupying power," to speed up the return of displaced Palestinians to their homes.

Ten Couples Will Be Repeating Vows

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ten couples who said "I do" before Judge J. A. Wilkes are being asked to say it one more time, with feeling.

Wilkes was suspended as justice of the peace Sept. 4 and became a minister 15 days later, but the 10 couples were caught in between when he apparently had no legal standing to sanction their vows, says Katherine Spaht, professor of family law, community property and successions at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge.

Repeating the vows "would be the safe thing to do, especially if significant property rights are involved," she said.

Wilkes was suspended by the state Supreme Court for 90 days for taking illegal fees from people and businesses on whose behalf he collected debts, and for threatening to arrest debtors. And he was convicted Oct. 26 in U.S. District Court on two counts of mailing jail threats.

He became a minister of the Universal Life Church Inc. of Modesto, Calif., which ordains by mail and Spaht said the validity of marriages Wilkes performed as a minister were not in question.

Frederick Campbell, one of the 10 bridegrooms, said he plans a new ceremony by someone else just to be sure.

"I spent the weekend teasing my wife, telling her I didn't think we were married," he said.

B.P. Simoneaux Jr., married by Wilkes the day he got ordained, said he didn't know what he will do.

"We have been taking a tremendous ribbing from our friends and my wife is always joking about moving out," he said.

Violence To Rival The Friday Night Agenda

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Right away, you know this isn't the typical, late-night sleazy diner. It's too clean; so's the hired help. Under their aprons, look, could it be those law-enforcing thugs from the "Strike Force" waiting to battle crime as violently as possible?

The answer comes fast as a speeding bullet. Criminals — maybe they hate greasy food — stick up the joint. The Strike Force springs into action. In slow motion, with graphic sound, gun violence begets violence. Another victory for indigestion and nauseous television.

"What do you do?" one of the patrons asks Robert Stack, Capt. Frank Murphy of the Strike Force. Pointing to the death and destruction at the O.K. Diner, Murphy says, "This is what we do."

At last, ABC has savage, bloodthirsty brutality to rival CBS' sex shows on Friday nights. "Strike Force," where have you been all season?

Stack brings the same Shakespearean staccato he did to Eliot Ness in "The Untouchables." He can even talk tough with a chili dog stuffed in his mouth. His every conversation sounds like a police interrogation. He's so authoritative "Strike Force" should be watched at attention.

At his homely home, Murphy lifts barbells and rails about that nasty woman who divorced him. "I don't live here. I sleep here," he growls, trying to find the phone, a running gag that is supposed to make Murphy more human.

Murphy has a dog, who's all dog. This monster could play linebacker for the Cowboys. Spot — not his real name — eats raw hamburger.

For the pilot movie, the producers taxed their imagination for something grisly enough for the whole family: hatchet murders, decapitation. Every Tuesday, some victim gets the axe. When the count reaches five, the whiny deputy police commissioner orders a solution by next Monday.

But this is a 90-minute show, and the guillotine drops again. In the show's only touch of taste, we don't see or hear the head-chopping, just the grim anticipation of No. 6.

We do see the victim's widow walking into the coroner's office and going berserk. This subtle measure ensures sympathy for hatchetees and malice toward hatcheters.

In another dainty touch, the creative forces behind "Strike Force" have inserted an annoying drum roll to punctuate every dramatic crossroad. They do crack the case, as they will every week. This isn't "Hill Street Blues." Call the Marines, somebody says. "We are the Marines," Murphy answers.

Murphy's Marines include a thoughtful black, a beautiful brunette, an insecure white and a macho swarthy. The message, in television, anybody can grow up to pack a blazing gun in the name of law and order.

Tonight, physical violence gives way to verbal violence as John Calloway interviews Howard Cosell on PBS. Taking nothing away from the talents of Cosell — who else could have handled the chaotic ring scene after last Friday's Larry Holmes-Renaldo Snipes fight — Cosell comes across as vindictive, preachy and self-righteous.

He hated "Woody" Allen because the comedian kept him out of a poker game. Then Allen asked Cosell to appear in "Bananas," and they became friends. Cosell says there was more personal integrity in doing that role than in broadcasting bigtime college basketball. What?

He often overgeneralizes, saying that Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Red Smith of the New York Times forever "forfeited himself" because he once covered a fight in South Africa.

Cosell spends much of the hour on the soap box. He calls the Super Bowl, which ABC doesn't televise, excessive, even hear Howard hype "Monday Night Football." "I have a naturally dramatic delivery," he says.

Oh.

ABC Retains Lead In Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, thrust to the top during the World Series, held onto first place in the networks' weekly prime-time ratings competition despite the continuing success of last season's top-rated show, CBS' "Dallas," figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. show.

CBS won the first two weeks of the 1981-82 season, which was delayed by labor problems in Hollywood, but ABC, broadcasting baseball's fall championship series, claimed the distinction the last two weeks.

With the series over, ABC retained the standing, thanks largely to the first TV showing of the movie "Grease," a key "Monday Night Football" game and nine of the 20 highest-rated shows in the week ending Nov. 8.

ABC's rating for the week was 19.2 to 18.4 for CBS and 16.1 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the period, 19.2 percent of the country's television-equipped homes were watching ABC.

In addition, ABC's "World News Tonight" finished No. 1 for the second straight week, with CBS' "Evening News" second and "Nightly News" on NBC third.

The rating for "Dallas" — No. 1 three of the five weeks of the new season — was 27.4. Nielsen says that means of the nation's homes with TV, 27.4 percent saw at least part of the program.

NBC, though third for the fifth consecutive week, found some consolation in the week's highest-rated new series, "Love, Sidney," tied for 14th place, and "Father Murphy" 30th. "Hill Street Blues," acclaimed by the critics last season but largely ignored by viewers, registered its highest rating ever for the second consecutive week, and finished 38th.

But NBC had five of the week's six lowest-rated shows, with "NBC Magazine" 64th, "Here's Boomer" 65th, a movie, "The Legacy of Maggie Walsh" 67th, "Lewis and Clark" 68th and "Fitz and Bones" 69th. "Maggie" on ABC, was No. 66.

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated programs:

"Dallas," with a rating of 27.4 representing 22.3 million homes, CBS; Movie: "Grease," 25.1 or 24.4 million, ABC; "60 Minutes," 24.8 or 20.2 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 24.1 or 19.6 million, both CBS; "Three's Company," 23.1 or 18.8 million, ABC; "Facts of Life," 22.2 or 18.1 million, NBC; "Love Boat," ABC, and "Magnum, P.I.," CBS, both 22.1 or 18 million; "M-A-S-H," 22 or 17.9 million, CBS, and "NFL Monday Night Football," Denver vs. Minnesota, 21.9 or 17.8 million.

The remainder of the Top 20:

"Too Close for Comfort," ABC; "Archie Bunker's Place," CBS; Movie: "Born to Be Sold," NBC; "Benson," ABC, and "Love, Sidney," NBC, tie; "One Day at a Time," CBS; "Real People," NBC, and "Fantasy Island," NBC; "Happy Days" and "Mork and Mindy," all ABC.

A Review Puts Verve In Emotional Play

"The Glass Menagerie" by Tennessee Williams, directed by Stephen Finnan.

There's an old rule of thumb for playwrights: If you can't write a play without using a narrator, don't. Fortunately, Tennessee Williams would not listen.

The opening evening of Stephen Finnan's production of "The Glass Menagerie" belonged to Robert John Willie, who presented the full house with a sensitive, energy-packed portrayal of the narrator, Tom. Combining his experience from other emotional plays ("Getting Out and Streamers," ECU Playhouse) with Finnan's careful direction, Willie mastered his character's subtle tension buildup, critical to the part, yet frequently overdone in other productions. The audience loved Willie's timing and verve in the sarcastic "I'm a hoodlum" scene, and his soul at the play's end.

Diane Pickett, as mother Amanda, was at her best in the few quiet moments she allowed the former Southern Belle. Absent were blanchmange and the gentlewomanly pride so often associated with this character. There were good moments for Mrs. Pickett's Amanda: The definitive look of not being able to face a DAR meeting; the interaction with son Tom, as he apologized, was understated and well done. This Amanda almost singlehandedly brought out the humor so often overlooked in the drama. Her level of tension, however, was so high at the start that it was impossible for her to develop it uniformly as the play progressed.

Paige Weaver keeps showing up as someone's sister or daughter in local productions, probably because casting directors recognize her ability to capture the naive quality these roles require. But while Laura lives in her imaginary world, Ms. Weaver's character hasn't left the stage. Her best scenes included some excellent non-verbal responses to Amanda's ravings and a difficult but beautifully executed range of feeling from not wanting to dance with Jim, to giggling and loving it.

Gregory Watkins, as the gentleman caller Jim, surprised everyone with a deceptively casual first-time performance: When acting looks that easy, it's not.

"The Glass Menagerie" is a good first choice for this little theater because it is a play about Everything. The fact that it at first seems to be only about an unremarkable family attests to the genius of the man who ignored the rule of thumb.

Two Blondes In Pacino's Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A pair of glamorous blondes, Dyan Cannon and Tuesday Weld, have signed to star with Al Pacino in "Author! Author!" for producer Irwin Winkler at 20th Century-Fox.

Cannon will play Alice Detroit, a Broadway actress involved with playwright Pacino. Weld will play Pacino's wife who walks out on him, leaving him with her five kids.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP

A K C P Z T Y U U K Z A Z P T C Y R C B

Q R Z Y T P A K R C K U B Q T P

Yesterday's Cryptquip — PLAYFUL PLATYPUS FOOLS FEARFUL OTTER.

Today's Cryptquip clue: P equals E

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

PINK ELEPHANT BORN — Ida the elephant protects her unnamed baby, born Tuesday at Copenhagen's zoo. The new addition is pink in color, attributed to a premature birth, according to a zoo spokesman. (AP Laserphoto)

NOTICE TO GAS APPLIANCE DEALERS AND HEATING AND PLUMBING CONTRACTORS

On February 10, 1981, the Greenville Utilities Commission elected to discontinue all gas piping from the meter to the customer's appliances. Greenville Utilities crews will no longer install piping of this sort after December 31, 1981.
