

NASA Decides To Bring Columbia Home

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA said today that Columbia has achieved its most important goals and the shuttle is being summoned back to Earth on Saturday after 54 hours in space.

The decision was announced as Columbia's astronauts, working aloft, flexed the shuttle's remarkable space arm for the first time — completing a test essential to future shuttle missions and the success of this one.

"Mission management has made a decision to execute the minimum mission which was pre-planned to accomplish the major test — engineering and scientific," said Mission Control spokesman John McLeish. "Landing is set at Edwards Air Force Base, California, on Saturday after mission elapsed time of two days, six hours and 12 minutes."
A failed fuel cell forced the reduced mission, originally plotted at 124 hours and 83 orbits. The Saturday landing will come after 36 orbits — the same duration as last April's maiden shuttle flight.

Meanwhile, the ship and its crew were soaring smoothly and safely 157 miles above Earth.
It is only the third time in 33 manned space missions that an American flight was shortened after it began.

Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly were intent today on completing a busy flight plan jammed with experiments. "The arm is out and working great," Truly said after exercising the 50-foot, Canadian-built mechanical crane. "The movement is much smoother than it was in the sims (simulations). There's no jerky movement whatsoever."
The arm, unable to lift its own weight on Earth, is designed to deploy 60,000-pound satellites in space. Television pictures showed it practically waving down at a blue Earth — an image as fascinating as the moment of launch.

A camera was perched at the elbow hinge on Columbia's Remote Manipulator System — the arm. This provided a visual tour of the cargo bay, showing Mission Control the scientific sensors taking readings of Earth.

Another video shot showed Engle — weightless, grinning broadly — trying to steady himself in Columbia's middeck while taking pictures.

Engle was asked to photograph thunderstorms over Australia as part of a second experiment. "Super," he said, and went about the task.
As flight officials huddled to weigh the risks and rewards of a longer mission, Engle and Truly tested and stowed Columbia's $80-million "arm," developed to for shuttles to deploy and maintain satellites.

One of Columbia's three fuel cells malfunctioned Thursday, and half-a-day after the ship's second perfect launch, NASA instructed Engle and Truly to pull the plug.

After the astronauts performed a routine purge of the two operating cells this morning, Mission Control reported: "Fuel cells 2 and 3 look okay to us." Truly, above the Atlantic at the time, responded: "Good show."

"With two good fuel cells we could fly ad infinitum in the configuration we're in now," flight director Neil Hutchinson had told reporters earlier. "But at some point in time the risk of exposing yourself to that kind of an anomaly is greater than a decision to continue to fly."

City Asks Extending Of No-Toll Charge Phone Calls

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council adopted a resolution Thursday night requesting that Carolina Telephone be asked to provide service for the Grifton and Fountain exchanges that would give them the ability to call Greenville and Ayden without toll charges.

Adoption of the resolution, with Councilman Louis Clark casting an opposing vote, followed a request by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce that the council consider support of the additional toll free services.

The new services, if approved by the N.C. Utilities Commission, would result in additional per line costs for residents and businesses in each of the towns. Under the schedule provided by the chamber, the additional costs to residential subscribers would involve: Greenville, 70 cents per line per month; Ayden, 50 cents; Grifton, $1.45; and Fountain, $1.95. Business increases would include: Greenville, $1.75; Ayden, $1.20; Grifton, $3.55, and Fountain, $4.90.

In a letter to county residents and businesses, Bill Clark, chairman of the chamber's Telephone Service Task Force, explained that the chamber was asked recently by the Pitt County Commissioners to study the feasibility of toll free service on a county wide basis.

"After several meetings with all concerned communities," Clark wrote, "it was decided by the study committee that a county wide system would be too expensive at this time to implement. A limited toll free service is more feasible."

Clark said the chamber's board of directors approved a recommendation by the committee that support be given to additional two-way toll free service from Grifton to Ayden and Greenville and from Fountain to Greenville. He said all communities in the county would have toll free service to Greenville, the county seat.

"We feel that the increase of costs will be more than offset by the benefits," Clark stated in his letter. "Industrial and business development will be enhanced. The medical community and hospital will be in close touch with the people who need help and who are being served. Our county education system of course would have close ties with its administrative offices located in Greenville."

At the present time, all exchanges in the county except Fountain and Grifton can call Greenville without paying toll charges.

The city resolution points out that the council "considers this situation to constitute a barrier to good commercial development and healthy community relationships."

Grifton Mayor David Bosley, appearing at Thursday night's meeting, endorsed the toll free service proposals and said the state Utilities Commission, in considering the matter, could conduct a subscriber poll by mail to gauge support. He said, however, that such a poll would be costly and he would recommend instead that public hearings be held by the commission.

The Ayden Board of Commissioners, meeting this week, adopted a resolution asking CT&T to provide residents with toll free service from Ayden to Grifton.

In other business, council members adopted an ordinance modifying traffic regulations in the city. The ordinance provides for the removal of traffic signals in the central business district "that do not meet any warrants for signalization" and replacement with stop signs at: Reade and First streets on Reade; Reade and Third streets on Third; Evans and Third streets on Evans; Washington and Second streets on Washington; and Washington and Third streets on Third.

Ron Sewell, director of engineering here, said the modifications were recommended following a study of some 23 signalized intersections in the CBD by the Engineering Department, with assistance from the N.C. Department of Transportation.

Sewell said the study indicated that removing the signals at the five intersections will save a total of 22,028 hours per year for motorists and reduce the number of vehicle stops by 2,366,400 per year. Fuel consumption will be reduced by 17,248 gallons per year, the study indicated, and the city will save $5,322 in maintenance costs as a result of the modifications.

Council members, following a public hearing, voted to approve an application by the owners of Papa Kats Night Club for renewal of a special use permit to operate the private facility on Riverbluff Road off N.C. 33.

In other business, the council:
— Continued a request by Donald Gorham to close a portion of Pearl Drive;

— Appointed H. Edmund Logan to the Greenville Energy Commission, re-appointed Carl Tadlock, Ms. Gladys Sanders, Dr. Malene Irons and Ms. Jacqueline Hawkins to the Human Relations Council, named Herbert M. Wilkerson Jr. to the Parking Authority, re-appointed John Howard to the Stallings Field Advisory Development Commission, named Louis Clark to the board of the Mid-East Commission;

— Scheduled public hearings for three amendments to the Zoning Ordinance, on the adoption of revised mobile home park requirements, on the annexation of Meadowbrook Drive east of and adjacent to the city limits, and on rezoning 13

Repentant Stockman Still Has Problem

OFFERED RESIGN — David Stockman, Director of the Office of Management and budget talks to reporters after meeting with President Reagan and offering to resign after saying the Reagan economic plan might not work. (AP Laserphoto)

By OWEN ULLMANN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A repentant David Stockman is out of Ronald Reagan's woodshed but not out of the woods with a Congress that questions if he can ever again be a convincing economic spokesman for his president.

A "very chagrined" Reagan rejected his apologetic budget director's offer to resign Thursday after Stockman renounced admissions of doubt and deception about the president's budget and "supply-side" tax-cut program in a series of interviews published in the December issue of Atlantic Monthly.

But Senate Republican leader Howard H. Baker Jr. said today that Stockman "damaged himself," he damaged the president's program and may yet be forced to resign.

Baker said it remains to be seen whether the president can retain Stockman as a credible spokesman for the administration's economic program.

"We'll just have to see how the thing develops," Baker said, adding that while Stockman may be forced to quit he hoped that would not happen.

Baker had said Thursday he thought Stockman could ride out the storm.

A White House statement issued Thursday on Reagan's decision to keep the man who masterminded the administration's largely successful budget-cutting campaign in Congress this year said "David Stockman is needed as a member of the president's team." Some administration officials went further, suggesting that Stockman was too valuable to let him go.

"My visit to the Oval Office for lunch with the president was more in the nature of a visit to the woodshed after supper," the 35-year-old Stockman told reporters of his face-to-face meeting with the 70-year-old Reagan.

"He was not happy about the way this has developed, and properly so. He was very chagrined," said the usually confident budget director, whose voice quavered and hands trembled at times as he recounted his offer to step down "for my poor judgment and loose talk."

"I am staying on because I believe even more deeply that the president has charted a sound, constructive course. ... I believe, absolutely believe, that supply-side theory is workable," Stockman declared.

But Republican leaders say Stockman may have a struggle persuading Congress that he remains a true believer in Reaganomics. Democrats said Stockman should have quit, so devastating were his statements.

Among his most striking comments in the 23-page article was a suggestion that the president's tax cut was a political "Trojan horse" designed mainly to lower tax rates for the richest Americans. He also confessed that "none of us really understands what's going on with all these (budget) numbers. ... We didn't think it all the way through."

Reagan's response was one of "grave concern and disappointment," according to the White House statement.

Sees Sole Hope In 'Camp David'

"I tried to describe the inter-relating goals, the common bonds and the common enemies of Americans of all faiths who believe in Democracy," David Schoenbrun, noted news correspondent, analyst and author, said today of his talk "America, Israel and the Jews," Thursday night at East Carolina University.

Calling Israel "the rallying point" between those who believe in Democracy, Schoenbrun emphasized, "There is only one democracy in the Middle East — Israel — in a vast desert of feudalism, communism..."

According to Schoenbrun, "Only in Israel does one find the same values — freedom of worship, freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of assembly, representative government," that are so important to Americans. "Israel is our natural ally and friend, in addition to being the only stable, constant state in the Mideast."

"It's pitiful to see clashes going on which are unnecessary and wrong-minded," Schoenbrun said. "I blame that principally on America's unholy dependence on Arab oil. In effect, we as a mighty country, proud of its independence, seem lost to inexpedient action because of oil."

Schoenbrun said "I tried to explain the many, many bonds

HOME BURNS IN PACTOLUS — A Pactolus man escaped injury Thursday afternoon when his wood frame house was destroyed by flames. According to Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner, William Baker of Pactolus escaped without injury from the blaze, which engulfed his home off rural paved road 1557.
Joyner said initial investigation indicated the probable cause of the fire was a heater used in the house. Members of the Pactolus Fire Department responded to the fire, assisted by units from Stokes and Clark's Neck. The house was listed as a total loss in the 4:11 p.m. blaze. ## 4th Annual Tobacco Festival Begins Tonight

The fourth annual Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival will begin tonight as pipe smokers light up to compete in a pipe smoking contest scheduled for 7 p.m. at Carolina East Mall.

The contest, one of a handful of events scheduled through Thursday in conjunction with the festival, will pit pipe puffers against each other in an aromatic match of smoking ability.

Also on tap for this weekend is the Tobacco Festival Bowl Game, 1:30 p.m. Saturday, featuring East Carolina University vs. William and Mary at Ficklen Stadium.

Saturday night 11 young women will vie for the title of Tobacco Festival Queen 1982 at the Ayden-Grifton High School auditorium in the Tobacco Festival Scholarship Pageant. Talent, evening gown and swimsuit competition will be featured at the pageant.

A tour of the Village of Yesteryear at the Pitt County Fairgrounds will be held Sunday from 2-5 p.m. along with an Antique Car Show, also at the fairgrounds from 8-5. The car show will feature 20 or more classic cars such as La Salle, Model A, Ford Phaeton, Studebaker, Thunderbird and Victoria.

Festival events for next week are as follows:

•Monday, 2 p.m., tractor driving contest, Pitt Plaza parking lot, Greenville Boulevard.

•Tuesday, 9 a.m., the Tobacco Farmer Show will begin at Farmer's Warehouse and last until 5 p.m., daily, until Thursday. Also from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. will be the agricultural art display at the Powell Manufacturing exhibit site, Farmers Warehouse. At noon the tobacco tying contest will be featured on stage at Farmers Warehouse, and at 2 p.m. Jimmy C. Newman & Cajun Country will perform on stage.

•Wednesday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Tobacco Farmer Show, Farmers Warehouse, along with agricultural art display; noon, tobacco spitting contest, Farmers Warehouse; 2 p.m.,

Wendy Holcombe; 4 p.m. awards presented to agricultural art winners, Powell Manufacturing Exhibit Site; noon-5 p.m., quilting demonstration and exhibit, Carolina East Mall; 8 p.m. clogging contest, Carolina Opry House, featuring the Green Grass Cloggers.

•Thursday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m., Tobacco Farmer Show, agricultural art display; noon, awards luncheon, Casablanca; 1 p.m. Jerry Clower will perform on stage at Farmers Warehouse.

The Tobacco Festival honors tobacco farmers and the industry in the five southern flue-cured tobacco growing states. Representatives of each of the four southeastern belts attend and participate in the festival events.

Most of the above events are free or open at a nominal charge.

According to Tobacco Festival officials, over 562,000 acres of the crop are grown in the southeast each year, and more than 392,000 of these acres are grown in North Carolina.

Dear Abby

Grandmother Is Off Her Rocker

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I've prayed about this for months, and the only answer I get is, "Write to Abby." My husband and I are having severe problems with his mother. We have four small children under the age of 6. We think we are doing a good job of raising them, but every time we leave them with "Namaw," she messes things up. She gives our toddlers wine and beer behind our backs even though we've asked her not to. She also sneaks them candy and all kinds of junk food, knowing that we allow them only fresh fruit between meals or for dessert.

Namaw also tells our 5-year-old that he is going to the "wrong" church — the one she goes to is the "right" one. (She's still mad because her son left his church, which is also hers, and joined mine.)

Abby, I want to love her, but her behavior makes it impossible. What should I do? Don't tell me not to leave the children with her because we feel that children need the special love their grandparents can give them.

DISCOURAGED IN OREGON

DEAR DISCOURAGED: This is "special love"? Sneaking toddlers wine, beer, junk food and sweets? Plus undermining their confidence in their church? This kind of "love" your children can do without. Sorry. Something is drastically wrong with "Namaw." I would never leave the children in her care.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old widower with no children. My wife died four years ago, and I am very close to her brother and his wife. We live near each other and get together several times a week.

My problem is in dealing with the sexual advances of their 14-year-old daughter. She is extremely well-developed for her age and could easily pass for 19 or 20. For the past year I wrote it off as just family affection (she was very close to my wife.) However, in the last six months she has been very aggressive, and there is no mistaking what she has in mind. (She even asked me point-blank in very coarse language what I've been doing about my "sex life" since my wife's death!)

Abby, I love my niece, I am not perverted and I am no child molester. I have made no advances toward this child. I date different women and lead a normal, healthy life.

Don't tell me to ignore her. I've tried, but to no avail. I'm at the point now where I don't know whether to grab her and turn her over my knee — or just grab her.

FRUSTRATED IN W. VA.

DEAR FRUSTRATED: You've contradicted yourself. The little tease has you on the ropes. Don't "grab" her for any reason. But do tell her like a Dutch uncle that she is playing with fire. And tell her parents to take their daughter in hand before she brings home a heap o' trouble.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my 40s. My hair is streaked with gray and I wear it pulled back in a bun. Each year I earn a line or two on my hands and face. I have never been to a beauty parlor and I own no cosmetics. I have always felt that cosmetics were basically unhealthy for the skin, a waste of time and money, and somewhat dishonest.

I have been happily married for 20 years to an exceptional man who makes me feel like the most beautiful woman on earth. He is the only person I care to please. If he asked me

Former ECU Teacher Loses In Contract Suit

RALEIGH — U. S. District Judge W. Earl Britt has ruled against a former East Carolina University assistant professor of chemistry who charged that his contract was not renewed in 1973 because he was Chinese.

In ruling against Dr. Kiang Hung "Bill" Hu Britt rejected Hu's quest for reinstatement and $800,000 in damages, and ordered Hu to pay the costs of the litigation in a decision handed down this week.

Last week, as the civil case came to trial, Hu's attorney told Hu was the hardest-working member of the chemistry department but his contract was not renewed in 1973 because he was Chinese.

Edwin M. Speas Jr., a member of the attorney general's staff who defended University of North Carolina system officials as well as ECU officials and faculty members, rebutted the allegations, saying Hu was denied tenure because of problems with his teaching techniques and his rapport with faculty and students.

Ensley Named To Council Job

By ECU News Bureau
Dr. Donald E. Ensley, associate professor in the department of community health and director of the department's graduate program at East Carolina University, has been reappointed by Gov. Jim Hunt to the North Carolina Internship Council.

The council is a 17-member body which screens and selects youth from across the state for paid work experiences to learn first-hand about government and public service professions. Eligible are young people who are students/attending a college, university, technical institute or community college in North Carolina, or a North Carolina resident attending such an institution out of state.

Ensley, a native of Beaufort, holds degrees from N.C. Central University, master's and doctoral degrees from Michigan State University and an M.P.H. (Public Health) from UNC-Chapel Hill. He is county chairman of the 1st District Congressional Caucus and area coordinator for the Pitt County Black Assembly, and has served on the state Democratic Platform Committee.

Charged

Jacqueline Louise Gray of Wilson Acres was charged with driving under the influence following investigation of a 12:50 a.m. collision today on Fourth Street, 150 feet east of the Reade Street intersection.

Police, who said Ms. Gray and a passenger were injured when the vehicle collided with a utility pole, estimated damage at $2,500 to the car and $50 to the pole.

contract was not renewed in 1973 because he criticized language department policies.

The 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., this week overturned a lower court ruling which awarded Mayberry $81,885 in back pay, saying there was no evidence that Mayberry's criticism of the language department head had anything to do with his contract not being renewed.

Both Hu and Mayberry were represented by attorney William G. Pfefferkorn.

Sale Should Proceed

Carolina Power & Light Company's troubles with nuclear reactors at its Brunswick County plant may be placing in jeopardy the scheduled purchase of a portion of that and other CP&L generating plants by Municipal Power Agency No. 3.

John Runkle of the Conservation Council of North Carolina, which opposes nuclear generation, has ridiculed the idea of selling portions of the troubled Brunswick reactors and two as yet inoperable reactors at the Shearon Harris plant in Wake County. Other non-nuclear generating plants also would be involved. Runkle also has urged the state Utilities Commission to block the scheduled sale.

Representatives of CP&L and Municipal Power Agency No. 3, of which Greenville and several other area municipalities are members, defended the proposal before the Utilities Commission this week. They pointed out the proposal, as envisioned, would provide low-cost construction money for CP&L — a savings for the utility's investors — and result in a lower electric rate for the power agency's customers.

Based on the available information, we would strongly urge the Utilities Commission to allow the sale to go through as a beneficial transaction for both CP&L and the power agency. As for Runkle's claim that the sale "would be rotten to the core" because the Brunswick plant has had problems and the Harris plant is not yet on line, we reject the contention outright.

Runkle's contention has nothing to do with conservation. It appears, instead, to be a flank attack when all else has failed to block the use of nuclear power.

Everyone's Against Me

"Come in, Mr. Secretary. Would you prefer the couch or a chair?"
"I'll stand, Doctor, if it's all the same to you."
"Suit yourself. What seems to be the trouble?"
"Everyone is against me."
"Everyone?"
"The Russians, the Israelis, the Sandinistas, the White House and the Defense Department."
"Ummmm. Could you be more specific?"
"The White House keeps leaking stories that the President is going to fire me."
"And to your knowledge he isn't?"
"He told Jack Anderson he wasn't."
"Well that should be enough assurance."
"Everyone around the President is talking behind my back. Every time I announce a foreign policy, they correct me. When I took this job, it was my understanding I would be the only voice talking for the United States."

"And you keep hearing other voices."
"I don't hear them. I see them on television."
"Have you asked the Presiwould fire a nuclear weapon over water first to show that we meant business. The next day Weinberger went up on the Hill and said we had no plans to do any such thing. He made me sound as if I didn't know what I was talking about."

"Is there such a NATO plan?"
"To my knowledge there is."
"But Weinberger said to his knowledge there wasn't. What did the White House say?"
"They said, to their knowledge, we were both right. There had been an option to do this, but it was rejected."
"Hmmmnn. Have you discussed this with Weinberger?"
"Why should I talk to him? He doesn't talk to me."
"Then I can assume Weinberger and you are not coordinating foreign policy."
"He's still mad at me because I said I was in charge of the government when the President was shot."
"So we can assume then that Weinberger is one of those who would like to see you fired."
"He's not the only one. The media are also out to get me. They're always making fun of the way I explain things. They've never forgiven me for working for Richard Nixon."
"Why do you think there are so many people against you?"
"I have no idea. That's why I came to see you, Doctor."
"Well as long as you have the President's confidence, why don't you ignore everyone else and go about

Other Editors Say Breeds Contempt

(The Gastonia Gazette)
You can always tell when a politician is beginning to notice the heat. He'll be the first one to suggest stepping inside and closing the door.
It matters not whether it is in a town board meeting, at city hall or in the state's general assembly.
When the fat begins to fry, it will be the vote-wary who suggests that, ahem, it would be within the strictures of the, uh, law to go into, ah, executive session.
People are wonderful puzzles. Perplexing, but wonderful. They will run for office on the strongest of promises to keep meetings open so that the public might know. "The public has a right to know!" "I stand by the principle that an informed public is the best public!" "Down with closed doors!" And so on.
But then, once again, when the public has been taken in by promises and has elected candidates on the basis of what they have said, there comes that moment of truth when the newly-come politician has to decide between the safety of secrecy or the glare of the public's eye.
There are some office holders who seldom will go into a secret session. There are others who would meet behind closed doors if for no other purpose than to repeat the Pledge of Allegiance.
Down in Raleigh, legislators trying to reshape the state's legislative districts have barred or expelled observers from four committee meetings in the past week and a half.
They might not be breaking any law. They probably are not. Sen. Marsha Raich of Gaston, redistricting chairman, said the state law allows such sessions to discuss legal matters. And he is right. We can hardly make the connection, however, between legislators trying to redistrict the state and using "legal" as a key to lock the door. It just doesn't wash.
Of course there is a suit against the state by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund saying that the districts are not legally drawn. But the committees are not talking about the suit. They are talking about the lines so that they will fall within the law. If they do that, there will be no suit.
Meanwhile, the legislators would do their constituents a big favor by meeting in open session and sweatin' through it all.

Strength For Today

THE DIVINE PLAN
Where has everybody gone? Go back one thousand years, five thousand — back beyond the dawn of history. What has happened to all the people who have died? What becomes of the different forms of life as they have passed through the cycle of existence? Without the Bible this question would leave us with a feeling of hopeless futility. The Bible, of course, tells us very little about life after death. But the interesting thing is that it assures us there is a life after death. People go somewhere. God does not create life only to destroy it. There runs through it all the pattern of purpose.
We cannot answer the question as to what happens to life after it leaves the body. But we can do something better than answer the question — we can leave it in the hands of a God who is perfect power, perfect wisdom, perfect goodness and, best of all, perfect love. So let us remember that death may be an end, but it is also a new beginning — Elisha Douglass

Humor Used As A Crutch

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN AP Special Correspondent RIDGFIELD, Conn. (AP) — "What's good walks on crutches," exclaimed the Elizabethan poet Philip Massinger, who must have suffered a touch of tendonitis in his time.
But there is a second opinion from his contemporary, the playwright John Webster: "Let guilty men remember, their black deeds 'Do lean on crutches made of slender reeds."
Webster's line touched me more to the quick because at the outset of my affliction I was hobbling about sinisterly arrayed in the undyed black wool cable stitch sweater an Irish relative had knitted for me from the pelt of a genuine black sheep. Since the nuns at school sometimes accused me of being the black sheep of the family, it seemed appropriate that the new cardigan should arrive on the same day that I tried to make my way about on the slender reeds supplied by the doctor's office.

its current burden of bandages and wool sock.

Getting out of a taxi in my newly impaired condition, I tried to strike a casual, heroic air, like Tyrone Power as the war-wounded RAF man in one of those old wartime turkeys. Or perhaps passers-by might mistake me for a member of the New York Giants taxi squad, recouping from last week's big game. But then one crutch got stuck in a subway grating and the other almost broke the rear window, so the blind news vendor had to assist the cabbie in extricating me from this Laurel and Hardy scene.

People who never stepped on my foot before or kicked me in the ankle were suddenly everywhere. We used to roar at those old Laurel and Hardy classics, when Ollie was grimacing with the goat and Stanley trying to be helpful kept bumping into him. I wonder now where the humor was. Funny as a crutch.

When at first the burning, throbbing pain inflamed my heel and swelled up my ankle to the size and color of a Smithfield ham, I thought sure I had come down with something classy like the gout, the refined ailment of kings and cardinals and gourmets.

The doctor, however, was adamant in his diagnosis: tendonitis. I even offered to take him down to my wine cellar and show him the jugs of California muscat stored beneath the washing machine for the coming holidays. A neighbor tried to comfort me. "Gout can't be such a classy disease," she consoled me not a whit, "my brother-in-law has it."

I had never been on crutches before. This blubbery facade, I used to preen myself, conceals a more solid structure than most people realize. In all my born days, I had never experienced a scar, a break, a stitch or a sprain. My model rolled off eternity's assembly line in a good year: no faulty engineering or defective parts. They don't make 'em like that anymore, I was convinced.

Then all of a sudden here I was almost immobilized, gift wrapped below the knee like Tutankhamen, forced to totter about on shaky sticks like a grizzled character actor in a burlesque road company version of "Treasure Island."

I really wasn't very agile at adapting to these new appendages, since from an early age inability to shift the balance of my bulk from one foot to the other had kept me out of the Royal Ballet school. I still haven't mastered the knack of climbing stairs as a quadruped — actually a tripod, since the inflamed tootsie still cannot receive any weight beyond

I have come to realize now, in the second week of my stumping about like a lame llama in my woolly waistcoat, that there is no blasé answer, humorous or heroic, to the insinuating, liquescent question: "What happened to you?"
It was too early in the season to feign an accident on the experts' trail at Killington or Stowe.
I tried muttering something about "throwing a shoe in the New York Marathon," got my foot caught in a subway door, but people scoffed before I got to the throwaway line.
I've given up saying, "My wife kicked me," because the rejoinders are too quick and fervent: "About time," "Don't blame her," "Score one for the good guys."
I no longer try to strike an amusing, mock-heroic pose, using humor as a crutch and vice versa.

Departing Costello's pub the other night, I waded my crutch and did my Tiny Tim "God bless us every one" number, but it came to naught. I almost impaled a guy coming out of the phone booth and thought sure I heard the bartender say, "Hey, Fatso, why don't you leave now so we can begin the happy hour."

Things went even worse when I entered Moriarty's, the Third Avenue steakery, doing my Quasimodo shtick; you know, hunched over the crutches, with my head thrown back, eyes wild and mouth wide open in a drooling leer. No one laughed, but one of the waitresses stifled a scream and almost spilled a tray of drinks. "But you always look like Charles Laughton, even without the crutches," she later apologized or whatever.
Not having a leg to stand on, or perhaps too many, what could I say?

Recession Not In The Planning

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — Implicit in the president's news conference remarks Tuesday was an admission that he and his economic crew hadn't foreseen the onset of a severe recession just 10 months into his administration.
Because of the recession, it was conceded, budget deficits would be larger than anticipated, and the possibility of budget balance, should it still be a goal, has been pushed into the unforeseeable future.
How could President Reagan have been so wrong? Well, how could Presidents Johnson, Nixon, Carter and Ford have been so wrong? Lyndon Johnson promised that the country could afford guns and butter simultaneously without inflating the currency.
Richard Nixon expressed his philosophical disdain for wage-price controls and then, without forewarning, found it necessary to impose a wage-price freeze.
Jimmy Carter, by one count, launched seven distinct economic programs, which meant that for one reason or another he found six weren't working out the way he had hoped.
Gerald Ford embarked on a well-publicized campaign to destroy inflation by slowing the economy, when recession had already replaced it as the No. 1 enemy of the people.
The corporate ranks provide similar miscalculations in numbers too great to list. Just two will provide the idea:
1. Montgomery Ward entrenched after World War II because a return to economic bad times seemed inevitable.
2. Walter Wriston, Citibank chairman, assured an audience some time ago that the prime rate would fall, a statement followed shortly by his own bank raising the rate.
What does it demonstrate? That nobody knows the economic future, especially nowadays, and if you need further confirmation of that you can take a look at the forecasts making the rounds these days.
Forecasting is big business, a multibillion-dollar business when you total up the receipts of the econometric outfits such as

Data Resources and Chase Econometrics, the academics, the $150-a-year newsletter writers, the stock market forecasters, the professors, the bank vice presidents, the commodities speculators, the clerks in government offices and the conventions, seminars, articles, books, speeches and scholarly papers.

More effort may be exerted in probing the future than in understanding the present or the past. The Great Depression of nearly half a century ago is still not fully understood, nor is the extent of the rise in last month's unemployment. "Facts" about each are still revised.
When the past is revised, of course, many of the forecasts of the future must also be changed, or updated, as they say, because the base has changed. It will be changed again, and so will the forecasts.
Was it always this way? No. There was a time — as recently as the Eisenhower years, some say — when a forecaster could forecast with a fair amount of confidence that the immediate future would simply be a continuation of the present. Change was slow; abrupt turns were rare.

More recently, the recession-recovery cycles seemed to follow each other more rapidly. Extremes — in interest and inflation, for example — have become more common. The problems of controlling them are more complex, in part because foreign events have a greater impact on domestic life.

In short, the economic world is unpredictable. All the king's horses and all the king's men, all his computers and all his advisers, can't make a great deal of sense out of the incredible scramble of events.
President Reagan has demonstrated that much, although verification of the impossibility of creating the future out of present wishes and analytic techniques was provided by all the presidents before him.
And it is that very impossibility, along with man's refusal to acknowledge it, that provides so many economic forecasters with more business than they can handle today.

Life As It's Lived

Three Distinct Stages In Child-Rearing Years

Gail Michaels
It occurred to me while I was watching Zachary as I raked the front yard that I would never have treated Meg that way. Oh, I would have thrown down the rake and brought her back kicking and screaming from the neighbor's yard, just as I did Zachary.

If I had been desperate enough, I might even have bribed her with a pack of M&M's like the one I gave to Zack just an hour before his suppertime.

But I never would have handed her a lollipop as well. And I certainly would not have watched calmly as she chewed up and swallowed the stick.

I think most parents go through three distinct stages in their approach to child-rearing. The first state lasts from the time they first start thinking about having children to the moment they actually reproduce. This is the stage at which they know everything and are aghast at the number of parents who don't.

On the Interstate they pass a station wagon with two unrestrained kids in the back and they marvel at the driver's idiocy in subjecting his children to the dangers of the road.

They see a toddler chomping Tootsie Roll, and they shudder at the damage to his teeth.

They are equally disturbed by the undisciplined nature of a 2-year-old throwing a tantrum in the middle of a mall and at the violence his harried mother displays as she yanks him up. Surely, they think, there must be a better way.

With their own child, however, their attitudes begin to change almost imperceptibly. After six hours in the car with a screaming infant, they decide that perhaps spending the remaining three hours to Grandma's in Mommy's arms is preferable to the continuing torture of all concerned. They feel guilty about depriving Baby of his protection, but in the end they do it anyway.

They manage to remain adamantly opposed to sugar until they find that it is an excellent means of preventing tantrums in the grocery store and other public places. They don't refer to it as bribery. They prefer to call it distraction.

And so it goes. By the time the first child reaches kindergarten they have tried out all their preconceived child-rearing notions, have found most of them to be inadequate, and are now exercising their authority with a mixture of intuition, whim and guilt.

Of course, one can carry the burden of guilt only so long. Eventually, the parents have to rethink their position, usually upon the arrival of the second child. This does not mean that they seek to recapture their youthful idealism. Far from it. They become cynical. They refuse to feel guilt. They call all their decisions common sense. It's pure common sense to let a child stretch out in the back of the car for a long trip, to bribe him with cookies while shopping or, in general, to stretch the rules when the situation calls for it. In fact, there's only one rule that an experienced parent doesn't stretch: If a kid is happy, as in the case of Zachary and his lollipop stick, for heaven's sake leave him alone.

manufacturing jobs will decrease. Of the new jobs, only 114,000 are expected in manufacturing; the other 834,000 will be in service, retail and trade categories.

Textiles, say the experts, will lose 27,000 jobs. Tobacco will lose 3,000, and food processing will lose 2,900. A lot of people will be hunting new jobs in new categories due to those declines.

And although much emphasis of late has been put on the promise of high wages in high technology fields associated with the state push for growth in the microelectronics industry, planners predict that the effect on the average Tar Heel of that major direction will be an expansion of job opportunities in small business firms rather than in some exotic and sophisticated research or production facility of space age importance.

For as those microelectronics firms do locate in North Carolina they will buy envelopes and paper and insurance and housing and landscaping and cars ... the list goes on and on.

The people providing those goods and services are the small businessmen of North Carolina which, despite the headlines, are the real foundation of the state's economy.

Blood Donors Give 109 Pints

The Bloodmobile visit Thursday at North Pitt High School resulted in the collection of 109 pints of blood, according to Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross. Mrs. Taylor said the "well organized" school drive saw 53 first-time donors. In addition to those giving blood, 14 people were deferred for various health reasons. She offered her appreciation to Josh Potter, principal, to teacher Randy Warren who was involved in the overall coordination of the drive, and to the students who participated. She also thanked the women of the Greenville Service League and the volunteer nurses who helped. The next area visit will be on Tuesday at Ayden-Grifton High School.

The Pitt District Fall Scout Camporee will be held December 4-6 at the old TV tower site near Grifton. Registration will begin Nov. 20 and registration forms and camporee booklets have been sent to all Scout troops in the Pitt District. Late registrations can be made at the camporee site. A story published in Wednesday's edition of "The Daily Reflector" incorrectly listed the dates of the camporee as Dec. 4-7, rather than Friday, Saturday and Sunday, December 4-6.

Shriners Plan Musical Sunday

Greenville Shriners of the Rofelt Pasha Shrine Temple No. 175 will present "100 Voices In Song" Sunday at 3 p.m. at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church, Greenville. The musical program will feature soloists from Greenville and Ayden. The feature of the evening will be the 100 male voices under the direction of Jasper Payton, consisting of Shriners, Consistory, Masons, Odd Fellows and Elks. Interested members of those orders have been invited to form the 100 voices. A portion of the proceeds from the program will benefit Operation Santa Claus and other charitable non-profit organizations. Simon Hemby, program chairperson, said the program will be open to the public.

PCC Students Mark Observance

Posters were displayed and emblems worn by radiologic technology students at Pitt Community College in recognition of National Radiologic Technology Week, Nov. 9-13. A nationwide observance of this week was made by hospitals, colleges, universities and their staffs and students. Garrie Moore, chairman of the Radiologic Technology Program at PCC, explained that the thrust of this year's theme is on public awareness of radiation safety and emphasis is on the importance of certified persons operating x-ray equipment. The PCC rad-tech students, in addition to wearing emblems, held a bake sale to raise money for special projects. Today, the department concluded the week by holding an open house.

Bandit Used Suspect Fraud Toy Pistol In Yard Sales

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are investigating the Thursday robbery of a Chapel Hill bank, pulled off by a man carrying a toy revolver.

Authorities would not say how much money was stolen from the Northwestern Bank Branch in only the third bank robbery in the city's history.

The man entered the bank about 2:30 p.m., gave a note to a teller and walked away, investigators said. He reportedly told the teller to "Give me everything you've got above a 20."

Witnesses described the man as white, about 35, thin-faced, and wearing a black toboggan and a blue coat. The fake gun and the toboggan were reportedly found about 100 feet from the bank and a blue coat was found in an alley behind a nearby record store.

The last robbery in Chapel Hill occurred in January 1980 at First Citizens Bank on East Franklin Street.

Students Will Honor Babar

Babar, the fictional elephant character of children's storybooks, is 50 years old this week, and Falkland Elementary School is planning a celebration in royal style.

BABAR (Bring A Book And Read) is being held in honor of the elephant king's birthday and National Children's Book Week. The two happen to coincide. Students have illustrated their favorite fairy tales with various projects which will be displayed in the library. The school will also have 15-minute read-ins each day.

Carolyn Garris of Falkland Elementary said the children love the read-ins because they can bring any book they want to read. "When we have a read-in here, everybody reads, from the janitor on down," she said.

Other activities will include a program by first and second graders, Walt Disney films, dress-up day for teachers and students; a program given by Hansey Jones, the children's librarian at Sheppard Memorial Library, and a birthday party for Babar the elephant.

The highlight of the week will be a play given by the teachers entitled, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Two Injured In Accident

Two persons were reported injured and an estimated $1,250 damage caused in two traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said Dorothy Mae Stallings of 100 Rayfield Drive and a passenger in the car she was driving were injured when the vehicle collided with a car driven by Lester Ray Morning of 804A Bancroft Ave. about 12:50 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street.

Damage from the mishap was set at $500 to the Morning car and $300 to the Stallings vehicle.

Cars driven by William Paul Lavietes of 1809 E. Fifth St. and Worth Poole Gurley Jr. of 205 N. Oak St. collided about 12:30 p.m. on Fifth Street, 100 feet west of the Ash Street intersection, causing $250 damage to the Lavietes car and $200 damage to the Gurley vehicle.

Retirees Name New Officers

The Greenville Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons met Monday with Lee Williams, president, presiding. Mrs. Lucille Quinn was welcomed as a new member.

Officers for 1982 were elected as follows: president — Mrs. Porter Cain; vice president — Mrs. Polly Dail; secretary — Mrs. Mattie Lou Smith; treasurer — Mrs. Mary Robinette; new board members — Williamson George and George McArthur; Nominating Committee — Henry Lofquist, Lee Williams and Elizabeth Deal.

The new officers will be installed at a Dec. 4 meeting at Tar Landing Restaurant at noon on Dec. 4.

Suspect Fraud In Yard Sales

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Authorities suspect that four Eden housewives collaborated in a scheme to order more than $10,000 worth of items and then sell the property in yard sales without paying for it.

No arrests have been made in the case, and police and postal inspectors would only say that four Eden women were involved. Eden Police Chief Charles R. Perry refused to identify the women, saying the investigation is continuing.

Perry said evidence in the case will be presented to a federal grand jury in Greensboro when the investigation is completed. Arrests will be made if indictments are returned, he said.

He said the women ordered magazine subscriptions and other merchandise from mail-order organizations across the country, using actual addresses but with names taken from telephone directories and television programs.

The items were ordered on a delayed payment basis and then were sold at yard sales while the bills for the merchandise were ignored, Perry said.

The merchandise included a "large quantity of ... all the popular magazines you see in the newstands, flower bulbs, encyclopedias, how-to books, electronics-type books, the Bible, childrens books, newspapers, (and) records," Perry said.

"We estimated that tens of thousands of dollars worth of merchandise has been received in this manner," Perry said.

Police confiscated a roomful of the merchandise last week, but Perry said a large quantity of it was sold through yard sales or other means.

The investigation began in June when an Eden postal employee noticed hundreds of piece of mail addressed to "a multitude of names with only three or four addresses," Perry said.

Eden police and U.S. Postal authorities began investigating after being alerted about local yard sales featuring stacks of current magazines and other items.

Two ECU Arts Students Intern

ECU News Bureau
Melanie Young of Burlington and Karen Flynt of Winston-Salem, both students in the East Carolina University School of Art, are involved in internships with the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

They are majoring in arts management at ECU, a curriculum directed by Randolph Osman of the ECU art faculty. As interns, they are working under the supervision of Elizabeth Stewart, executive director of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

The purpose of the arts management internship program is to give students opportunities to learn through experience such aspects of arts management as fundraising, public relations, budgeting and increasing community awareness of the arts and artists.

Melanie Young is a psychology graduate of Appalachian State University. Karen Flynt is chair of the ECU Arts Management Committee and a senior at ECU.

ANNIVERSARY
FARMVILLE — The anniversary of Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church here will be celebrated Sunday at 11 a.m. The pastor, the Rev. E. F. Jones, and congregation invite the public to attend.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHEN THE ISRAELITES FIRST ASKED FOR A KING TO LEAD THEM AGAINST THEIR ENEMIES, SAMUEL, THE PROPHET, WHO WAS THE LAST OF A LONG LINE OF JUDGES, (SPIRITUAL LEADERS OF THE TRIBES) CAUTIONED THE PEOPLE (CIRCA B.C. 1000) HE EXPLAINED TO THEM ALL THE LIBERTIES, WHICH THEY ENJOYED, THAT THEY WOULD BE GIVING UP—ONCE THEY HAD A KING!
(1 SAMUEL 8:10-19)

AND NEVER DID A PROPHET PREDICT MORE TRULY! FOR IN THE FIVE HUNDRED YEARS THAT KINGS RULED OVER ISRAEL NEVER WERE THE PEOPLE FREE FROM BONDAGE. EACH MAN HAD TO WORK ONE MONTH OUT OF A YEAR FOR THE KING, TEN PERCENT OF ALL HIS CROPS AND CATTLE WENT TO THE THRONE, HIS BEST LANDS INVARIABLY WERE USED BY THE KING, HIS HEALTHIEST CHILDREN PUT TO WORK IN THE PALACES, AND EVEN WHEN HE WENT TO PRAY IN THE TEMPLE HE WAS TAXED! EVERYTHING SAMUEL HAD PREDICTED CAME TO HAPPEN!

Historic Organ Recital Sunday

CHOCOWINITY — The first "Historic Organ Recital" in North Carolina will be presented at Trinity Episcopal Church at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The program, sponsored in part by the Organ Historical Society, will feature an organ well over 100 years old. It was brought to Chocowinity in the 1940s.

Performing will be Vance Harper Jones, organist; Elissa Frederick Hardy, flautist, and Robert Hollatschek, violocellist.

Jones attended the University of Miami and is organist at the First Presbyterian Church in New Bern. He is director of library services at Craven Community College. Ms. Hardy was a music major at Brevard College and the University of Texas and is a surgical technologist at Craven County Hospital. Hollatschek attended Syracuse University and performed in the university symphony. He is employed by Weyerhaeuser.

Included on the program are compositions by Telemann, Bach and contemporary American composer Stuart Smith. The program is open to the public without charge.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, faced with fresh evidence of a slumping economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped 57 to 859.97 by noon.

Losers held a 4-3 edge on gainers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

On Thursday the government reported that retail sales dropped 1.5 percent in October.

Figures released this morning showed that industrial production declined by the same amount last month.

Utility issues, which are often sensitive to interest rate changes, accounted for several of today's volume leaders.

Middle South Utilities was up 1/4 at 13 1/2, while Public Service of Colorado was unchanged at 14 1/2 and Consolidated Edison of New York dropped 1/4 to 32 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index lost 28 to 71.41. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 4.55 to 320.50.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.78 million shares two hours into the session.

NEW YORK (AP) — Midday stocks: High 28 1/2, Low 28 1/2, Last 15 1/2, Change 1/2.

Sees Sole Hope...

between Israel and America," and "the absolute right of American Jews and American Christians to lobby and to speak out in favor of Israel. There are 2,000 lobbies in Washington D.C., from the National Rifle Association and the Right to Life, to the AFL-CIO and the Chamber of Commerce.

"What's so wrong about Americans of the Jewish faith lobbying for the Jewish state? I think our foreign policy is upside down. We don't seem to know where our true interests are."

Schoenbrun said the Camp David peace accord between Israel and Egypt "is one of the great news stories of the 20th century." After some 30 years of unrest and four wars, "Sadat offered his hand to Israel" and said Egypt "wants to live in peace."

"Beyond question," Schoenbrun said, the Egypt-Israel peace "is the one great accomplishment of Jimmy Carter's presidency."

He said the U.S. roll of guaranteeing peace as a "big and powerful friend," to both nations, "is the proper role for us to play... a friend of the court."

It is, he continued, "the only hope for peace in the Mideast. Nothing should be done to weaken the Camp David process."

Schoenbrun said, "I think America must be 100 percent behind Camp David for it to succeed, and not wander away from it."

American foreign policy, according to Schoenbrun, "is in disarray," and tends to "frighten and antagonize our closest allies. Out whole policy seems to be beligerant."

"I think Reagan should get his act together. Reagan now must stand on his merits and not on his charm. He's got to show results, not promises."

"The bottom line," Schoenbrun said, "is, 'hey fellow, how's the country doing?'"

Winning Season On Line Against Tribe

Loving Son

Special team player Mark Stewart of the Washington Huskies had a message for his mother during the UCLA-Washington game at the Los Angeles Coliseum last Saturday. The message on the towel lasted the whole game, but not the Huskies' stamina. They lost to UCLA, 31-0, their first shutout since 1975. (AP Laserphoto)

By WOODY PEELE Reflector Sports Editor Down through the years the East Carolina-William & Mary series has been a great one. Although the Pirates have stretched out a 9-3 advantage in the series, there have been some outstanding games in the past.

The one scheduled for Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium could prove to be no exception to that rule.

One of the things that has probably been gnawing at the mind of second-year coach Jimmy Laycock of William & Mary was East Carolina's calling time out in the closing seconds of the game, apparently trying to score once more in a game the Pirates were sure to win, 31-23.

"It just happened in the heat of the game," East Carolina coach Ed Emory, who was on the losing end of a couple of games just like that said this week. "He (Laycock) was concerned about us calling that time out, and I'm sure that he'll have 'em ready to come in here Saturday."

Laycock, in his pre-game notes, however, didn't mention it. Instead, he talked of injuries and emotional preparation. "We are banged up and probably at our worst physically now than at any time this year," he said. "I really don't know who will be playing in a couple of positions which have been hit hard by injuries.

"We will be facing an explosive and good East Carolina football team. They are coming off a big win and going for a winning season. I don't have to explain how much this game means to them. If we aren't ready emotionally, it could be trouble."

For Emory, however, there are memories of William & Mary quarterback Chris Garrity. "Last year, we would seem to put them away, and he'd bring 'em right back time after time." That could have been one reason why, with just seconds remaining, the Pirates were inclined to try for one more score.

"William & Mary is a team that could beat us if we don't play the best we can," the Pirate coach, who is also winding up his sophomore year, said. "Garrity is a fine quarterback, and they have some outstanding receivers, too. He can hurt you a great deal if you don't play well. We have to get a good pass rush on him and we have to defend very well."

Emory is also worried about the Indian defense. "They use what I guess you'd call a Maryland-8. It's an eight man front and it's about the toughest thing for a running team, like we are, to operate against. We haven't seen anything like it yet."

William & Mary has spoiled some of the best laid Pirate plans in the past. A few years back, the Pirates were sailing along and had a good shot at a berth in the Peach Bowl. But William & Mary spoiled that with a 21-17 win in the Oyster Bowl game in Norfolk, Va., and that year, the Pirates stayed home.

This year, the Bucs have nowhere to go after Saturday, but they would like to finish the season with a plus on the win side. Now 5-5, this is the last chance.

William & Mary, meanwhile, at 3-6, is already assured of a losing mark for the third straight year. The Indians face Richmond next Saturday in their season-enders.

"Our football season has come down to Saturday at 1:30," Emory said. "After that you can put a W or an L on East Carolina's program. You can put a W or an L on Ed Emory, and you can put a W or an L on the players. But we have too much invested to let it become an L. We've worked too hard in the off-season and throughout the season for it not to be a win.

"A win will help us financially, it will help us in recruiting, it will help us when we move into off-season work and it will help us with morale. It will help our young players look forward to 1982."

Emory noted that at the start of the season East Carolina had six "must-win" games. As it turned out, those represent the five games the Pirates have won so far, plus William & Mary.

And "must" it's turned out to be.

East Carolina will honor ten seniors playing their final game in purple jerseys Saturday. They include running back Harold Blue, offensive tackle Tootie Robbins, offensive guard Bud LaCock, placekicker Chuck Bushbeck, center Billy Parker, linebacker Glen Morris, defensive back Marvin Elliott, linebacker Mike Davis, scout team member Dexter Martin, and nose guard Fee Griffin.

"These are the guy for whom losing is the toughest," Emory pointed out. "They won't get another chance."

Rose, AG Playing

Two area high schools open their quests for a state championship tonight.

In the 3-A ranks, Ayden-Grifton, co-champion of the Eastern Carolina Conference, plays host to White Oak, the Coastal Conference champion. Kickoff in that game is slated for 8 p.m. at Ayden-Grifton.

The winner of the game will host the winner of the Tarboro-Warren County game.

In the 4-A ranks, Rose High School travels to Jacksonville to meet the Cardinals. Rose finished as the runner-up in the Big East Conference, while Jacksonville is the co-champion of the Mideastern Conference. Kickoff in Jacksonville is also set for 8 p.m.

The survivor of that battle advances to the second round, traveling to meet the winner of the Terry Sanford-New Hanover game.

Larkins Lifts JVs To Win

BANNER ELK - Kurt Larkins kicked a 46-yard field goal with 11 seconds left to lift the East Carolina junior varsity to a 28-27 victory over Lees McRae Thursday afternoon.

The season-ending victory, the Pirates' first this season, leaves East Carolina at 1-4. Further details were not available.

Michigan-Ohio State Game May Not Mean Title For Either One

By The Associated Press For the first time since 1967, the winner of the Michigan-Ohio State game may not be a factor in determining which team will be the Big Ten Conference's representative in the Rose Bowl.

Wisconsin, 6-3 overall and 5-2 in the Big Ten, has clinched only its fourth winning season since it last won the conference championship in 1962. The Badgers are the only team that doesn't have to depend on a loss by someone else to get in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1.

But, with two games to play, five other teams, including Michigan and Ohio State, have a mathematical chance to make it.

Iowa and Wisconsin, both of whom have been in The Associated Press' Top 10 this year but have fallen out of the rankings with three losses apiece, clash Saturday in a key conference contest.

Iowa, 4-2 in the conference, has to win to remain in the running, and Wisconsin needs to beat Iowa and Minnesota to clinch a share of the title and the Rose Bowl bid.

Eleventh-ranked Michigan, which faces Purdue this week, also has a 5-2 conference record, but the Wolverines lost to Wisconsin and needs help the last two weeks to get the Rose Bowl bid. Either Michigan or Ohio State, who meet Nov. 21, has been to every Rose Bowl since 1968.

Iowa and Ohio State, tied at 4-2, can get back into title consideration by winning their last two games if Wisconsin and Michigan both lose at least one. Minnesota and Illinois are next at 4-3, but all four of the teams above them would have to lose for the Gophers and the Illini to gain title shares.

In other games involving ranked teams, top-rated Pittsburgh is a heavy favorite over Army, No. 2 Clemson plays host to Maryland, No. 3 Southern California is at Washington, No. 4 Georgia meets Auburn, No. 5 Penn State plays host to No. 6 Alabama with Crimson Tide Coach Bear Bryant going for a record-tying 314th victory, No. 7 Nebraska plays Iowa State, No. 8 Southern Methodist meets Texas Tech, No. 9 Arizona State is at No. 18 UCLA, 10th-ranked Texas faces Texas Christian, No. 12 Miami, Fla., meets Virginia Tech, No. 13 North Carolina is at Virginia, No. 14 Southern Mississippi faces No. 20 Florida State, No. 15 Oklahoma is at Missouri, No. 16 Arkansas takes on Texas A&M, No. 17 Washington State tackles California and Brigham Young travels to Hawaii, which at No. 19 is making its first appearance ever in the rankings.

The Iowa-Wisconsin game, which will be televised regionally, figures to be a defensive battle. Wisconsin is led by superlative middle guard Tim Krumie, a 6-foot-3, 255 pound junior who has been nominated for the Lombardi Award which is given to the top collegiate lineman.

The Hawkeyes and the Badgers are ranked 1-2 in total defense in the conference and neither has the high-powered passing game that has characterized the league this season.

Both coaches, Hayden Fry of Iowa and Wisconsin's Dave McClain, expect a close, low-scoring contest. "I'm sure our offense will oblige," joked Fry. "We eat a lot of grass but have difficulty when we get close to the goal."

McClain said of Iowa: "Their defense is outstanding. Their kicking game is outstanding. Iowa is a good, solid football team."

"This game means an awful lot to both teams," McClain added. "It's what you work for. With two games to play, we can win the Big Ten championship. It's an exciting thing for our football team."

Clemson Can Wrap Up Title

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Clemson, fresh from a 10-8 win over North Carolina in the Atlantic Coast Conference's big 1981 showdown, can wrap its paws around the conference crown Saturday with a win over Maryland at Clemson.

The No. 2-ranked Tigers will put their 5-0 conference mark and 9-0 season's record on the line at 1 p.m. EST against the Terrapins in an attempt to capture their seventh conference crown.

But to win the ACC title outright, coach Danny Ford's club must get by a team that has been the Tigers' biggest nemesis in the conference. The Terrapins have defeated Clemson in 16 of 28 previous meetings, including 34-7 last year.

In other action involving ACC teams Saturday, Duke hopes to up its bowl aspirations at home against North Carolina State, North Carolina attempts to bounce back against Virginia at Charlottesville, Va., Georgia Tech steps out of the conference to play the Navy and Wake Forest brings its season to a close at Richmond.

MARYLAND AT CLEMSON Clemson hopes to ride to victory once again by using its rugged defense and a ball control offense to wear down a Maryland team that has struggled to a 3-5-1 overall mark.

But things may not be that easy for Coach Danny Ford's club because the Terrapins have a 3-1 conference mark and could still walk away with a share of the ACC title.

Tiger quarterback Homer Jordan may take to the air more than usual as Maryland's weak link appears to be a pass defense that has surrendered almost 280 yards per game.

If Tuttle does go to the air, his chief target is likely to be wide receiver Perry Tuttle, who has or is nearing just about all of former Clemson receiver Jerry Butler's records.

NORTH CAROLINA At VIRGINIA

A healthy North Carolina club will take the field against Virginia Saturday, marking the first time that has happened since early in the season.

Tailback Kelvin Bryant is expected to see limited action, but quarterback Rod Elkins will start for the Tar Heels.

Virginia, 1-7, has suffered through a difficult year. The Cavaliers will have Todd Kirtley, out since the Rutgers game with a broken hand, available for backup duty, although Gordie Whitehead filled in capably.

Kickoff time is 1:30 p.m. EST.

Woody Peele

Tom Baines, after jumping into sole possession of first place two week's ago with a fine 10-2 mark, found himself scrambling this past time out, slipping to a 5-6 mark that knocked him off his perch at the top.

In his place, this writer and Vickie Spivey have moved into the lead. Spivey thus threatens to be the first woman (Let's hear it from all those ERA folks!) to win the contest.

Needless to say, there are a few male heads who are hung in shame.

At any rate, this week's picks could produce a few more changes.

As it stands now, we are tied with Spivey for first with an 87-31 mark, followed closely by Baines and our guests, both at 86-32. Rick Scoppe comes fifth with an 85-33 mark, still in the race. And finally, there's Joe Jenkins, trailing with a 74-44 mark.

Our guest last week, new Conley football coach Gerald Garner fared a little better than Rose coach Ronald Vincent, turning in a 8-3 mark (thanks to a tie) while Vincent was 8-4.

Our guest this week is another new coach in the area, Farmville Central's Gilbert Carroll.

Since the regular high school season is over now, we will let the whole panel pick the remaining games in the playoff, which see two area teams still in combat. Meanwhile, our record for the year finished up at 5-1 with a 50-17 mark for the year. We are counting the Conley "loss" to Havelock as right, since that was the way the game actually came out. Conley, of course, was later awarded a forfeit victory for Havelock having dressed out several JV players who had already participated in ten games.

Now to the panel.

Ayden-Grifton High School won its way into a three-way playoff for the Eastern Carolina Conference title, then pulled out the number one seed for the playoffs in the draw that followed. The Chargers go up against White Oak, the Coastal champ, in a game that may turn out to be a real hum-dinger. Ayden-Grifton has been tough at home, but White Oak has been tough — period. Anything could happen here. The panel goes with the Chargers, picking Ayden-Grifton by 5-1 — Baines picking White Oak.

In the 4-A ranks, Rose travels down to Jacksonville to battle the Cardinals. The two met in the first game of the year for Rose and the Rampants pulled out a 15-14 win. Beating the same team twice in the same year is no easy task, but the panel is giving the Rampants a slim nod. It's 4-2 for the locals — this writer and Baines going with Jacksonville.

East Carolina closes out its season on Saturday, hosting William & Mary. East Carolina got a good shot in the arm last weekend against East Tennessee, and it is hoped that it will carry through this weekend to produce a winning season. A lot is at stake, but there could be a revenge factor brewing for the Indians. The panel sticks with the Pirates, however, with a solid 6-0 vote.

Our other consensus picks include: Duke and State, a toss-up; North Carolina over Virginia; Florida State over Southern Mississippi; Furman and VMI, a toss-up; Clemson over Maryland; Navy over Georgia Tech; Richmond and Wake Forest, a toss-up; Penn State over Alabama; and Brigham Young over Hawaii.

Bear Seeks To Tie Stagg As Tide Faces Tough Penn State

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — Bear Bryant says Saturday's game against Penn State is "something to get excited about" but the Alabama coach isn't referring to his pursuit of Amos Alonzo Stagg's all-time record of 314 coaching victories.

While everyone else, it seems, is focusing on the one triumph Bryant needs to equal Stagg, the Bear is concentrating on the game itself between two of college football's hallowed names.

A contest between Penn State and Alabama would be a treat anytime, regardless of the records. The fact that fifth-ranked Penn State is 7-1 and No. 6 Alabama is 7-1-1 makes it that much more attractive.

Bryant and Penn State's Joe Paterno have spent much of this week saying what great teams the other has, but Paterno has a long way to go to rival the Bear when it comes to praising an upcoming opponent.

"It's a real honor to be playing Penn State," says Bryant, who brought the Crimson Tide to Pennsylvania on Thursday and holed up about 30 miles down the road from State College. "If they're not the top team in the country, they're certainly amongst 'em, as they say."

"They have a great program, great coaching and a great team. It's something to get excited about, a great challenge. I hope it is for the team, too. I'm going to have a good time."

"Everything I hear or see about Penn State is impressive. They have great balance and they look awesome on film. They're very big, but they're quick. Penn State has always been very physical and this year not only do they have an outstanding quarterback (Todd Blackledge) but excellent speed at tailback, too."

The problem there is that Curt Warner, Penn State's exceptional tailback and leading rusher with 859 yards on 128 carries, has missed two of the last three games with a pulled hamstring. His status for Saturday's game, which will be televised to most of the country (ABC-TV, Noon, EST), is questionable.

Except to Bryant. "Curt Warner is one of the great backs in the nation and we expect him to be at full speed for us," Bryant said.

Paterno calls Alabama "a great football team," which certainly will draw a chuckle or two from the Bear.

"They certainly are the best team we have played so far," adds Paterno. "Alabama has an awfully good defensive team. They will show us multiple defenses and they are very aggressive on defense."

"This will be the first time we have played a Wishbone team this year. Offensively, they are very fast and very quick and that will present us with some problems. And they have a fine kicking game. Alabama simply is an excellent football team."

And while most of the attention is being riveted on Bryant's 313-90-17 record, be advised that Paterno is no hayseed when it comes to winning. Paterno's 16-year mark of 148-32-1 for an .820 percentage makes him the winningest coach in the country with a minimum of 10 years of experience in the major college ranks.

To The Editor:

I am speaking as a former East Carolina football player and coach and as a member of the East Carolina University Athletic Hall of Fame. I love East Carolina University and I am proud of the progress we have made.

Let's not be too quick to condemn the football coach. He and his assistants are going to play the best man they can find for each position on the team. If a freshman comes in and challenges a junior or a senior for a position, the more experienced player has the advantage. If he isn't willing or capable of outperforming the freshman he just has to take a back seat. If the replaced player wants to quit, that's his business, but when he quits and tries to undermine the football team, that's my business.

There is always keen competition on the football team and when a player quits and says it is because he doesn't have confidence in the coach, he is really saying he doesn't have confidence in himself. I am appalled that a player would quit the team and try to save face by publicly discrediting the coach. We who have been in the game know better.

My best wishes go to the football team and the coaches. If there are anymore quitters or underminders in either group my I suggest that you quietly fold your tent and move out so that the rest of us can get on with the job of playing football.

My advice to each individual on the football team is that you ask yourself am I enjoying football and do I have the desire and determination to win a starting position? If every player on the squad could answer yes to this we could all be winners.

To The Editor:

After almost two seasons of watching East Carolina's football program go downhill, I can be silent no longer. Ed Emory has proven that he cannot accept the challenge at East Carolina and produce a football team which continues the winning tradition.

I have followed East Carolina football for some number of years. As a freshman at East Carolina, I saw Jack Boone produce respectable teams followed by the late Clarence Stasavich, who improved immensely an already good program. After the doldrums produced by Sonny Randle and Mike McGee, I was elated to see a top quality coach in Pat Dye, who proved he was a winner. It was a sad day when Dye left for Wyoming. Emory has proven that he is not capable of gaining the respect of the majority of his players and football supporters.

Emory, as reported by the News and Observer, stated that only a third of the players on any team were happy; that being the third that's playing. That statement is hogwash. The players who are not starters on a winning team are still proud to be a part of that team, and I stress the word team. I knew football players who, although not starters, were proud to be a part of a team coached by Stasavich. This was not just the one-third who started. They were happy to be part of a winning tradition.

The time has come to begin a search for a new coach. Although Emory has another year left on his contract, he should be terminated at the conclusion of this season. It is in the best interest of East Carolina football to employ a coach who can reestablish a winning tradition and regain respect on the college football scene — Emory apparently is not that coach.

National Conference Finally Has Caught Up With AFC's Victories

By The Associated Press

It's taken a long, long time but the American Conference is finally down and looking up.

In 28 regular-season interconference games, the AFC trails the National Conference 15-13. Not since the 1973 season, when the two conference's finished tied for the year at 19-19-2, has the older NFC been ahead this late in the season.

The Chicago Bears' 16-13 overtime victory in Kansas City last Sunday and the Dallas Cowboys' 27-14 triumph over visiting Buffalo Monday night put the NFC on top and improved its chances of taking the season series for the first time since 1971, when it finished on top 23-15-2.

If the oddsmakers are right, the NFC will still be ahead on Sunday night, when the 11th weekend of the season draws to a close. There are six interconference games that day.

The NFC is favored in three — Cleveland at San Francisco, Pittsburgh at Atlanta and Baltimore at Philadelphia. The AFC is favored in the other three — Los Angeles at Cincinnati, Denver at Tampa Bay and Buffalo at St. Louis.

The rest of the day's games are Houston at Kansas City, Dallas at Detroit, Oakland at Miami, New Orleans at Minnesota, Washington at the New York Giants, the New York Jets at New England and Chicago at Green Bay. Monday night's game is San Diego at Seattle.

This has been a season of firsts for the NFC. Besides being first in the two-way interconference race, the older conference (basically the old National Football League minus Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Baltimore) had never swept four games in one weekend. It did that two weeks ago.

The last time the NFC was so much as tied in the series in the second half of the season was in 1978, deadlocked at 15-15. The AFC then went on to win 31 of that year's 52 games against NFC teams. Last year the AFC won 33 of 52.

The AFC has, of course, won the past three Super Bowl games and nine of the past 10. Only in the Pro Bowl, the all-star game, has the NFC established superiority, winning seven of 11 including the past four in a row.

San Francisco (15-21 vs. AFC teams and 3-7 vs. the Browns) is gunning for its eighth consecutive victory of the season. The 49ers, with a visit to Los Angeles on the schedule a week from Sunday, lead the Rams and Falcons by three games in the NFC West. Cleveland, conversely, trails first-place Cincinnati by three games in the AFC Central Division.

Atlanta (13-23 vs. the AFC and 1-4 vs. the Steelers), sends its rushing defense, the best in the league, against Franco Harris of Pittsburgh, who last Sunday became the third 10,000-yard rusher in NFL history, joining Jim Brown and O.J. Simpson. The Falcons and the Steelers are each 5-5 and the loser will slip dangerously close to elimination from serious playoff contention.

Philadelphia (20-16 vs. the AFC and 3-5 vs. the Colts) is coming off a 52-point game against St. Louis, its biggest scoring spurge since running up 56 points against the Cardinals (then based in Chicago) in 1953. The Eagles and Dallas are tied for the NFC East lead with 8-2 records, the league's best this year along with San Francisco. The Colts, meanwhile, were bombed for 41 points by the Jets last Sunday, have given up the most points in the league, 339, and have lost nine in a row, the worst skid in the club's history.

Cincinnati (21-15 vs. the NFC and 2-1 vs. the Rams) is enjoying its best season since 1976, when it finished 10-4 ... but failed to even make the playoffs. The Steelers were also 10-4 that year and won the division, and New England, 11-3, was the lone wild-card team. The Bengals have a two-game lead now.

Lloyd Leads Tourney Field

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The best women tennis players in the world are heading for Australia in hopes of winning a spot in the Toyota Championships, which will be staged here Dec. 14-20.

Leading the fields at a $125,000 tournament at Sydney Nov. 23-29 and the $200,000 Australian Open in Melbourne Nov. 30-Dec. 6 will be Chris Evert Lloyd, Martina Navratilova, Tracy Austin, Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia and Andrea Jaeger, the top five on the Women's Tennis Association computer rankings.

Lloyd, who captured Wimbledon in July, and Navratilova, winner of the U.S. Women's Indoor Championships in October, have clinched spots in the $250,000 eight-woman tournament at the Meadowlands Arena. The championships culminate the Toyota Series, which links 33 major women's tennis events in 12 countries by a point system.

Austin, Mandlikova, Jaeger and Sylvia Hanika are close to clinching berths in the championships, leaving a battle for the other two spots between Virginia Ruzici of Romania, Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and Pam Shriver.

One player who will miss the Australian tournaments is Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia. Marsikova currently is 10th in the Toyota Series standings with 745 points. But she hasn't been seen since she lost in the opening round of the U.S. Open the first week in September.

Marsikova returned home and was involved in an automobile accident. The case is being investigated and a trial is expected. Under Czechoslovak law, Marsikova automatically surrendered her passport and has been unable to rejoin the women's tour.

Lloyd and Navratilova, now tied with 1,405 points each, have joined the fray in Australia in order to determine the seedings for the East Rutherford tourney. The top seed at the Toyota Championships receives $125,000 and a new car, while the second-place finisher in the points derby gets $80,000.

Besides the money, the points winner will get a relatively easier draw in the tournament.

Shriver, who burst onto the international tennis scene in 1978 when she gained the U.S. Open finals when she was 17, struggled the next two years after suffering a shoulder injury.

"The highest I was ranked before the injury was 12th," she said Thursday, when she stopped at the arena to promote December's championships. "Now I'm seventh in the world."

"But I don't to be No. 7 the rest of my life. If you don't go up, you usually go down in the rankings."

Her shoulder, she said, "is no problem any more. I've got to take care of it and make sure I do my weights. The hard thing was getting over the mental problems that come with an injury."

Then she headed off for Perth, Australia, and the start of a three-week tour she hopes will bring her back to here as part of the elite field.

Sugar Said After Ga.

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia, the defending college football champion, could return to the Sugar Bowl for a game against top-ranked Pittsburgh if the Bulldogs beat Auburn Saturday, according to the Atlanta Journal.

With a victory, the No. 4 Bulldogs would clinch no worse than a tie for the Southeastern Conference title. Sixth-ranked Alabama could get a tie by beating Auburn Nov. 28. Both Georgia, 8-1, and Alabama, 7-1-1, are 5-0 in SEC play, but do not meet this year.

The Sugar Bowl's agreement with the SEC requires that the conference champion be the host team for the bowl, but in case of a tie the bowl can choose either team.

The Journal Thursday quoted Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl as saying there was "no way we can wait until the 28th to make our decision."

Holmes said he plans to ask the NCAA to allow the Sugar Bowl to make an official announcement inviting Georgia to the bowl after the game Saturday, but he said he does not expect the request to be granted "so long as there is a chance for a tie."

Holmes insisted the Sugar Bowl has not crossed off any alternatives.

"We're trying to stay solid with (No. 5) Penn State and (second-ranked) Clemson. And even an Alabama-Georgia game is a possibility, although of course that may never evolve," Holmes said.

The Journal reported, however, that the Sugar Bowl is hoping for a Georgia return. The Bulldogs iced the national championship last New Year's Day with a 17-10 victory over Notre Dame.

Guidry Heads Free Agent List

NEW YORK (AP) — In 1978, Reggie Jackson was in an enviable position: One of baseball's biggest stars at the peak of his game whose contract ran out just in time for the first re-entry draft.

Jackson, then 30, made the most of the situation. He became the prize catch of the Class of '76, leaving the Baltimore Orioles for a five-year, $2.9 million contract with the New York Yankees.

Today, Jackson was up for grabs again. But relentless time and baseball's new economics may mean he'll do well to match his history-making pact of five years ago.

Jackson was among 41 players eligible for the free-agent draft held at the Plaza Hotel.

This year's standout choice was a Yankee left-hander, but not the outfielder who came to be known as "Mr. October" for his World Series feats with New York.

Ron Guidry, coming off a year in which he was 11-5 with 104 strikeouts and a 2.90 earned run average, figured to be the focus of most of the 21 teams eligible to participate in the draft of Type A players.

The Type A designation also went to relief specialists Dick Tidrow of the Chicago Cubs and Ed Farmer of the Chicago White Sox, for ranking in the top 20 percent at their position statistically over the last two seasons.

Farmer was 3-3 with 10 saves this season, while Tidrow was 3-10 with nine saves.

Their signings will mean their old clubs receive as compensation a player from a pool of major-league roster talent which was a central issue in the players' seven-week strike during the 1981 season.

Settlement of baseball's first midseason walkout also included the creation of a Type B category, for free agents ranking in the top 20 to 30 percent at their positions. Teams losing these players will get a pick in an extra round when the amateur free-agent draft is held next June.

The Type A compensation draft will be held in January.

Jackson was one of four re-entry repeaters in this year's draft, the first one in which a player could auction himself off for the second time. The others were relief pitcher Bill Campbell and outfielder Joe Rudi of the Boston Red Sox and infielder Bert Campaneris of the California Angels.

Because they are repeaters, they require no compensation to the losing team.

The draft list also included such stars as infielder Jerry Remy of the Red Sox and Ron Jackson of the Detroit Tigers, and pitchers John Denny and Rick Waits of the Cleveland Indians.

But many of the top players who could have been free agents followed other routes. Outfielder Ken Griffey was traded to the Yankees by the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for a minor-league pitcher and another player to be named later.

Third baseman Bill Madlock signed a multimillion-dollar contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates, as did second baseman Bobby Grich with the Angels.

At one point, Griffey — 31 years old with a lifetime batting average close to .300 — might have figured to become another Dave Winfield, last year's re-entry plum who signed a 10-year, $23 million contract with the Yankees.

The image was enhanced by evidence that Yankee owner George Steinbrenner wanted a new right fielder to replace Jackson.

But Steinbrenner swung the trade instead, then announced the Yankees would skip this year's draft while retaining the rights to their own free agents

— Guidry, Jackson, outfielder Bobby Murcer and pitcher Dave LaRoche.

With most National League teams saying they didn't want him and few American League clubs expressing an interest, Jackson in recent days said he would settle for being a designated hitter in the AL or even try a new position, first base.

Steinbrenner's checkbook had been among the most open during the first five years of the draft as he signed pitchers Don Gullett, Tommy John and Rich Gossage in addition to Jackson and Winfield.

His stated withdrawal from the fray appeared to reflect a change in attitude toward the re-entry process throughout baseball, perhaps caused by the strike which kept the turnstiles from spinning during the time of the season when attendance is usually the highest.

California owner Gene Autry, for example, had also been a free-spender in the first years of the draft. But this time, the Angels officially "opted out" of the Type A category, which means they can't dip into that group for three years. It also means they don't have to help stock the compensation pool, thus having their entire rosters available for trades or sales.

Also out of the Type A draft were Seattle, Boston, Minnesota and Los Angeles. All were eligible to draft any free agents other than Type A.

Another change in this year's draft resulting from the strike settlement was the ability of a free agent below the compensation levels to be drafted by all 26 teams. Previously, a maximum of 13 clubs could select negotiating rights to a player.

Coke Drops LPGA Event

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Promoters of the Coca Cola Classic, the richest 54-hole event on the Ladies Professional Golf Association circuit, are searching for new sponsors for the event after the bottling company withdrew 75 percent of its sponsorship.

"We want to save the tournament," director Peter Busatti said Thursday. "We get the largest galleries in the country, and our program is always sold out with corporate support. We've talked to several corporations already."

Busatti said he has no commitments from other companies.

Coca Cola is the second sponsor to reduce its LPGA support this year. The Lorillard Corporation dropped its Golden Lights tournament in Westchester, N.Y. A new sponsor for that event has not been found, an LPGA spokeswoman said.

Busatti is searching for three companies that would each pay 25 percent of the tournament's cost, including club rental, promotional dinners and other expenses that push the tab well over the $125,000 purse.

"There was no real indication something like this would happen," Busatti said.

The Coca Cola Classic, played for six years in northern New Jersey, will be renamed the New Jersey LPGA Classic when it is held May 17-23 at the Ridgewood Country Club in Paramus. The bottling company has been the sole sponsor for five years.

Portland Gets Off The Trail, Loses To Clippers

By The Associated Press
The Portland Trail Blazers have been playing the best ball in the National Basketball Association so far this season.

Until Thursday night, that is. We stopped our offensive execution and permitted too many second shots. The defense was too permissive and the offense too fragmented," said Portland Coach Jack Ramsay after a 122-115 loss to the San Diego Clippers.

The defeat was the first this season for the Trail Blazers, who had won seven straight games, and marked the end of the last unbeaten record in the NBA.

"We really hung in there, even when we were down, we didn't quit," said San Diego's

Paul Silas. "The game was kinda special because we were down after losing to Utah Tuesday night. We have to be aggressive. (Michael) Brooks gave us a good lift. (Brian) Taylor ran the show perfectly (13 assists). When we were down I just told the guys, now's the time to pick it up. I told them we could roll over and play dead or we could come back and be men. They responded."

Michael Brooks scored 17 of his 29 points in the second half to trigger a comeback for the Clippers. The Blazers led by as many as 14 points, 75-61, with nine minutes remaining in the third period before the Clippers began their comeback.

Trailing 93-91 at the start of the fourth quarter, the Clippers reeled off the first six points of the period to build a 97-93 lead, and they never trailed again.

Brooks also had 11 rebounds for the Clippers, and reserve center Jerome Whitehead hauled in 14 rebounds.

Portland was led by Calvin Natt, who scored 33 points and pulled down 14 rebounds. Mychal Thompson had 21 points and 13 rebounds for the Blazers and also blocked five shots. Kelvin Ransey added 20 points for Portland.

"We wanted the victory and didn't care who it was against," said Taylor. "But it's special against the team playing the best basketball in the country. It's important because we realize we can play with anybody."

Suns 95, Pacers 93

Dennis Johnson and Leonard "Truck" Robinson teamed up for 41 points and keyed a pivotal fourth period to help Phoenix outlast Indiana.

Robinson, who had 21 points and 15 rebounds, helped Phoenix erase a three-point, fourth-period deficit with four quick points. Johnson tallied six points in a five-minute span to put the Suns up 82-77 with 6:01 to go.

The game see-sawed until Alvan Adams hit four free throws in a 40-second span and reserve Alvin Scott put in two jumpers to give the Suns a 95-90 lead and their eventual winning points.

Bullets 95, Hawks 87
Greg Ballard scored 10 points in a 31-point third quarter to lead Washington over Atlanta. After leading 45-42 at the half, the Bullets twice struck for seven straight points to take a 72-63 lead late in the third period on their way to only their second triumph in six games.

The defeat broke a three-game winning streak for the Hawks. Ballard finished with 14 points, behind John Lucas' 23 for the Bullets. Dan Roundfield was high scorer for the Hawks with 23 points.

"Defense was the reason for our win," said Washington Coach Gene Shue. "It was a great win for us and no doubt

AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Ever see a movie or television show and been disappointed because the book was better? On Sunday, this classic disillusionment goes one step further with a TV first: The commercial was much better. This was no ordinary advertisement. It was the award-winning Coca-Cola commercial, in which Mean Joe Greene, playing Othello in cleats, limps off the field and is befriended by an awestruck kid. Taking pity on his fallen hero, the boy offers Greene a Coke. Greene, dripping pathos, sentiment and sweat, swigs the big bottle without coming up for air. He then tosses the kid his jersey, and everybody lives happily ever after. It is a wonderfully poignant scene, worthy of inspiring Sunday's TV movie, "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid," on NBC, starring Greene but not the original kid. And at 7 p.m. EST, the children of the house should enjoy it, even though it's not terrific television. Whether they'll begin cleaning their rooms or doing their homework — two of the show's heavier messages — is best left for child psychologists.

The re-enactment of the commercial takes place at the beginning, after Greene hurts his ankle. This scene is a pale imitation of the original, which packed an incredible emotional wallop, proving how much advertisers can achieve in one minute. The movie version was shot in two hours; the 1979 commercial took 20 hours. The movie's kid, Nick, played by Henry Thomas, is not as cute as Tommy Okun, whom NBC said was too big when the movie was filmed last summer. Another difference is that Coke is not mentioned. No soft drink is a sponsor Sunday.

Executive producer George Wallach thought the commercial would work as a movie and constructed a flimsy plot around it. A sportscaster, who sees Greene toss his jersey to Nick, considers it symbolic of the end of the line for the Pittsburgh Steeler lineman, and he says so on the air. Nick, who feels badgered by his parents' persistent chores and commands, hears the report and decides to return the jersey, thinking it will return Greene to his former greatness. Somehow he gets onto the Steelers' plane, which takes off for Dallas and a date with America's Team, the Cowboys. The funniest moment is when two players, passing time at the airport, are involved in some serious connect-the-dots action. Since this is for kiddies, the real sports roadwork, lifting glasses at the bar or running after skirts, is ignored. The rest of the movie focuses on Greene's brooding deliberations over his career, Nick's education about responsibility, and their emerging relationship. Although the story line could have been more interesting, the real flaw of "The Steeler and the Pittsburgh Kid" is the lack of any conviction in the friendship between Joe

Sunday against Seattle. Nick is participating in a fantasy-come-true, yet seems to mope around the film, like a lost puppy. Isn't this supposed to be exciting for him? Through Joe, Nick learns that winning isn't everything; doing the dishes counts, too. Through Nick, Joe learns that football is nothing when it's not played with enthusiasm. In the end, Nick returns the jersey. In slow motion. Maybe there's a commercial sequel here.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle:

CRYPTOQUIP 11-13

Y K K G M F S Q K B C X O C M F S R B Y O R G V X Q F M V X

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — CATERPILLAR CREPT INTO UNRIPE CANTALOUPE.

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

to the excellent heart slam. Once North jump raised hearts, South was interested in slam. He wisely did not launch into Blackwood, because the response would not necessarily have solved his problem. Instead, he launched a cue-bidding sequence, then asked for aces after he learned that his partner held a club control. When he discovered an ace was missing, South settled in the small slam.

West led the queen of clubs, and declarer was delighted with his dummy.

He could envision no loser other than the ace of trumps, so without further ado, he won the ace of clubs and led a trump to the king. West won the ace and continued with the jack of clubs. East ruffed away dummy's king—down one.

While South was unlucky to run into a 5-1 club split with the trump ace in the wrong hand, it did not take a genius to see that almost the only threat to the slam lay in a club ruff. There was a simple way to protect against that possibility.

Correct technique is to cross the ace of spades at trick two, cash the ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond in dummy. Now declarer cashes the king of spades and discards his second club. With that matter taken care of, declarer can proceed to draw trumps. West can take his ace, but when he continues clubs, declarer can overruff East, and the contract is assured.

NUTLEY, N.J. (AP) — A prescription acne medication for two serious, scarring forms of the skin disorder may not be available until mid-1982 at the earliest, the drug's manufacturer says.

Hoffman-LaRoche Inc. has applied to the federal Food and Drug Administration to sell the treatment, Accutane. It was developed to fight cystic acne and keratinization disorders. Hoffman-LaRoche spokeswoman Carolyn Glynn said Wednesday.

"There is excitement about the drug because there is no previous treatment for these severe forms of acne," she said.

FBI Investigating N.C. Bid-Rigging Allegations

County Board Meets Monday

Pitt County Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. in the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is a report on the audit of the county's 1980-81 financial records, consideration of a request by John E. Moore to have his property on Secondary Road 1529 included in the extra territorial jurisdiction of the city of Greenville, the consideration of bids for paving the Stanton Road solid waste container site, and a report by Bill Clark, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's Extended Area Telephone Service committee.

Other items for consideration and discussion include a request by the city of Greenville for computer service, a Health Department proposed infant safety seat loan program, the Tar River Port Commission, and the appointment of a Domiciliary Community Advisory Committee, and other business.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The FBI is beginning an investigation into the most recent bid-rigging allegations involving electrical contracts, U.S. Attorney Sam Currin says.

Currin said Thursday in a prepared statement that the

Commission Eyes A Possible Refund

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The average natural gas customer of Public Service Co. of North Carolina Inc. could get a $15 refund if the N.C. Utilities Commission gives its approval.

The company filed a rate request Thursday to refund more than $7 million, which would be passed along through credit to December billings.

The company filed the request after it received a refund from its supplier, Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. as a result of a favorable court decision denying a tax which the state of Louisiana had imposed.

Public Service said the average credit would be about $15.

Charles Zeigler, president and chief executive officer of Public Service, said the commission traditionally has allowed the company to pass along reductions or increases in wholesale gas rates without benefit to the company.

Public Service distributes natural gas to 150,000 customers in 79 North Carolina cities, from Raleigh to the southern Piedmont to the western part of the state.

PRESIDENT'S LIST

A Greenville native, Michael Rasberry, has been named to the President's List at James Sprunt Technical College. Michael is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Rasberry.

In order to qualify for this list, a student must have earned an "A" on all course work taken.

MONTHLY MEETING

The Pitt County Association of Educational Office Personnel will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday at 5:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County office building.

Mr. Richard Ferris, personnel director at East Carolina University, will be the guest speaker. His topic will be "Positive Thinking."

Benefit Affair Topped $1,000

The recent benefit square dance and auction held at Carolina Opry House on behalf of the United Cerebral Palsy Center here was a success, UCP Center personnel reported, with over $1,000 raised to support the work of the organization.

Barbara Thurber, director of the center, said the funds support the UCP of North Carolina in providing a quality developmental program for 15 physically handicapped children.

She said the Greenville center, located at Hooker Memorial Christian Church, offers a 12-month program for children between the ages of 12 months and five years. Children learn skills in all areas of development, she said, in preparation hopefully for entering the public school system at 6 years of age.

Celeste Hasell, lead teacher, said the UCP activities are dependent upon contributions to insure continuation of the program. She said the public is invited to visit the center. People seeking further information should call 756-6533.

FILM PRESENTATION

Dr. Grady Wilson of the Billy Graham Team will present a film entitled "Free Again," which is part of the series, "Focus on the Family." The film will be shown at the Landmark Baptist Church on U.S. 264 West at 6:30 p.m. on Sunday.

REQUEST APPROVED

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced that a request by the D. H. Conley Band Boosters Club to conduct a merchant solicitation on Nov. 10 was approved.

probe will focus on all aspects of the bid-rigging allegations, with special emphasis on construction projects financed with federal money.

Meanwhile, nine electrical companies indicted this week on anti-trust charges were suspended Thursday from bidding on state contracts.

The Capital Building Authority, which oversees contracts for construction of most state building projects, voted unanimously to temporarily prevent the companies from further bidding after receiving a recommendation of the state Department of Justice.

The authority suspended eight of the firms until there is a resolution of the bid-rigging charges handed down on Monday by a Wilson County grand jury. The ninth, Watson Electrical Construction Co. of Wilson, was suspended for 30 days, until Dec. 9.

H. Al Cole, special deputy attorney general, said the lighter treatment for the Watson company was the result of a negotiated agreement. Watson has agreed to pay more than $1 million restitution and cooperate in the state investigation, he said.

The suspensions came as Attorney General Rufus Edmisten told authority members they could expect more indictments to come as the Justice Department expands its bid-rigging investigation. The indictments this week were the first bid-rigging charges to come outside the area of highway road-paving, and Justice officials say they are looking at other types of state contracts.

"We suspect there will be a number of other firms and people," Edmisten said.

Jane Patterson, secretary of Administration and chairman of the authority, said the suspensions were made under a policy adopted by the authority in July. She said the firms had a right to contest the suspensions in a hearing, but Cole said he did not expect any of the firms to request a hearing until after their cases go to court or are otherwise resolved.

The commission met with Cole in private for 30 minutes before acting in a public session.

The companies were charged with conspiring to rig a $4 million contract for the East Carolina University Medical Education Facility in Greenville in December 1978. The indictments charge that the companies conspired by submitting complementary bids higher than that of the Watson company so that Watson would be the low bidder.

The firms were charged with conspiracy to commit false pretense, a felony, and engaging in a conspiracy of unlawful restraint of trade, a misdemeanor. Watson and another firm, Richards & Associates Inc. of Carrolton, Ga., were charged with a third count of felonious false pretense.

The other firms indicted and suspended from bidding were Darden Electric Co. Inc. of Goldsboro; Bryant Durham Electric Co. of Durham; Bryant Electric Co. of High Point; Starr Electric Co. of Greensboro; Elcon Corp. of Hendersonville; Industrotech Constructors Inc. of Atlanta and Cooper Electrical Construction Co. of Greensboro.

Former Employee Charged in Entry

Greenville police took Maynard Pettit Ernest of 19D Courtney Square into custody about 4:55 a.m. today as he came out the rear door of the Casablanca Restaurant on North Greene Street and charged him with breaking, entering and larceny, Chief Glenn Cannon said.

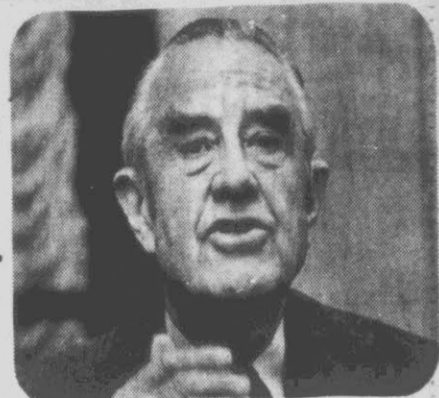

According to Cannon, Ernest, a former employee of the firm, allegedly entered the front door with a key, opened the safe and removed $400 in cash, then broke a lock off a rear door and left the building.

Officers, called by manager Joseph Cherry who was working in the building when Ernest entered, were waiting at the rear door and took him into custody.

Cannon said Ernest allegedly told investigators the firm owed him $400 in back wages.

FOCUS

The Eldest Statesman

On Sunday, one of America's true elder statesmen, Averell Harriman, will celebrate his 90th birthday. With a career that spans everything from the vice-presidency of the Union Pacific Railroad at age 25 to the governorship of New York, he is one of the few living links to the greatest figures of this century. A close adviser to Roosevelt, Harriman developed personal relationships with Churchill and Stalin which helped maintain that often strained wartime alliance. Later he served in the Truman, Kennedy and Johnson administrations, coordinating European post-war recovery, securing a limited nuclear test ban, and, at the age of 77, heading the U.S. delegation at the Paris peace talks with North Vietnam.

DO YOU KNOW — Who beat Averell Harriman in the 1958 New York gubernatorial election?

What's New?

Come join us in Greenville, N.C. November 17, 18 & 19 and find out

At the 6th annual Tobacco Farmer Show you'll be able to shop through more than 190 exhibits of farm equipment, curing systems, chemicals, seed, fertilizer, building supplies, irrigators and agricultural services. You'll learn what's available to help you increase yields and profits from your tobacco as well as your peanuts, corn, beans, livestock and vegetables.

It'll be worth your time. There's no charge for admission or parking. And you'll also enjoy a free stage performance each afternoon by outstanding stars of country music. Tuesday, it's Jimmy C. Newman and Cajun Country. Record star Johnny Russell will be on the stage Wednesday. And everybody's favorite country comic Jerry Clower will close the show on Thursday. There's nothing like being entertained while you see the newest and best and learn what's available to help you prosper in the years ahead. Plan now to be with us.
