Reagonomics Face New Congress Test This Week

By JAY PERKINS Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan's economic program faces another major test this week as Congress works against a

Friday deadline for legislation to keep the government operating. A continuing resolution that has funded government operations since Oct. 1 - the start of fiscal 1982 - expires at midnight Friday. Unless new legislation is passed, no money will be available for federal agencies. The bill is only one of several economic approaches before Congress that are aimed at keeping federal services going while trying to find a way to cut back on mounting federal deficits. In other pending action on economic matters, the House plans to consider the defense authorization bill - with a showdown looming on Reagan's plan to build the B-1 bomber and the MX missile - and possibly a conference report to restore minimum Social Security benefits.

Also, a House-Senate conference committee hopes to wind up its lengthy deliberations on the multibillion-dollar, four-year farm bill.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said Sunday on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" that he was "getting close" to the votes needed on the Senate Appropriations Committee to delete funds for 100 B-1 bombers which Reagan wants to build while developing a radar-eluding Stealth plane. Hollings said the $40 billion targeted for the B-1 over 10 years is too expensive "for a plane that is going to be serviceable for three years."

"I don't believe I have the votes," he said. "We are picking up."

The continuing resolution before the House today would keep the government going at current levels - not at lower levels sought by Reagan.

Because of the way the legislation was structured, Reagan's Republican allies in the House had almost no chance to reduce the projected spending. Their only hope was to defeat the bill and then introduce another calling for less money.

Republicans had sought to offer an amendment that would impose up to a 6 percent across-the-board cut in the bill's appropriations, but the House Rules Committee, controlled by the Democratic leadership, rejected that approach.

Republicans immediately threatened a floor fight in hopes of making the cuts, which they contended were needed to ward off a presidential veto.

The huge bill would provide funds for almost all federal agencies through the end of the fiscal year, or until the regular, individual money bills are passed.

Attempts by the Republican leadership to prune it faced difficulty because of the Democratic majority in the House and because the Appropriations Committee approved the measure earlier this week with bipartisan support.

A spokesman for House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said Friday that the GOP would attempt to force the bill back to the Appropriations Committee for additional cuts of several billion dollars.

Michel said defense spending, military construction and foreign aid would be exempt from the cut.

Meanwhile, in a copyright interview published Sunday in U.S. News & World Report, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger affirmed the Reagan administration's commitment to "rearming the country" despite the troubled economy. "We have been overspending for government as a whole but not for defense," Weinberger said.

Weidenbaum acknowledged that earlier economic forecasts by the administration were "optimistic."

Audit Report: County's Books Said In Order

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Accountant Lloyd Moody, reporting on the audit of Pitt County's 1980-81 books, told county commissioners this morning that "everything is in good order."

According to Moody, "Pitt County has done well to manage its operations as it has." He added that the county is "well managed and is competently staffed," and "is in reasonably good financial condition."

Commissioners, in other business this morning, awarded contracts to Barrus Construction Co. for the paving of the Stantonsburg Road solid waste container site. Barrus was low bidder for the project at $29.90 per ton for some 243 tons of asphalt. L. A. Renolds, the only other bidder, submitted a bid of $33.50 per ton for the project.

Commissioners also instructed county employees to move ahead with construction of a solid waste disposal site on Tar River Ports Authority property at the end of the Port Terminal Road just east of Greenville.

Also approved by the board this morning was an Infant Safety Seat Loan Program, handled through the Health Department, in which the Civitan Club will lease car seats to parents and train them in the proper use of the restraint devices.

Ed Carter Taking Appeal To State Election Board

Ed Carter, unsuccessful City Council candidate whose petition for a recount of the Nov. 3 municipal results here was denied by the Pitt Board of Elections, has appealed his case to the State Board of Elections.

Carter's attorney, Richard Powell, filed the appeal notice, dated Nov. 15, to the state elections board, contending the county board "was in error in denying" Carter's recount request.

The Pitt elections body conducted a hearing on Carter's petition last Tuesday and, after hearing testimony from Carter and several of his campaign workers as well as from various precinct officials, ruled that "there was no evidence to sustain an order to recount the votes."

Carter fell 20 votes short of a sixth-place finish in the council voting that filled six seats on the city governing board. He was 30 votes behind the fifth-place candidate in the field.

Carter's appeal, according to the notice, is "based upon the discrepancies and irregularities due to the closeness of the votes casted between the fifth, sixth and seventh place candidates" in the council race.

In a statement of the case filed by Powell, Carter requested that the state elections board "reverse the order" of the Pitt board and direct the county board to recount the votes.

In filing his initial request with the county board for a recount, Carter had cited "disorganization" among several precinct vote counting teams. He also said some counters experienced apparent difficulty in distinguishing between the names Carter and (Louis) Clark in the counting process and he expressed general doubt "as to the accuracy of the vote-count in this election."

The elections board, in denying the request, issued an order stating that based upon its findings of fact "there were no irregularities or discrepancies which existed or took place during the election process held on Nov. 3...which were of such a nature that the outcome of the election...could or might be affected."

Unemployment Of Up To Nine Percent Said Possible In '82

WASHINGTON (AP) - In the administration's gloomiest forecast yet, one of President Reagan's leading economic advisers says the unemployment rate may go as high as 9 percent before the nation begins working its way out of recession.

Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, conceded Sunday that the jobless rate "could conceivably" reach the 9 percent peak of the 1974-75 recession - the highest in the post-World War II period.

That would mean approximately 9.5 million people out of work, the most since the average for 1939.

"I do think that an unfortunate consequence of winding down the inflation...is the current recession, and yes, I expect the unemployment rate unfortunately to continue to rise during this recession," Weidenbaum said on CBS' "Face The Nation."

But Weidenbaum said he still strongly expects "one of the most vigorous periods of economic growth in recent years" by the second half of 1982 as Reagan's policies start taking effect.

Unemployment climbed to 8 percent in October, meaning about 8.5 million people were out of work. After the government reported that rise from September's 7.5 percent rate, the administration, which had been predicting unemployment would peak at about 8 percent, acknowledged its forecast was overly optimistic.

In other economic news Sunday:

-Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina said budget director David A. Stockman had "exposed himself as a great deceiver" by acknowledging his skepticism about the administration's economic programs. Hollings, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said the furor over Stockman's comments reported last week in the December of Atlantic Monthly "really shook President Reagan's credibility."

Appearing with Hollings on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said, however, that the issue now is not Stockman but "how we're going to get the federal budget under control."

-Democratic Rep. James R. Jones, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the Reagan economic program is "a Rube Goldberg mixture" whose parts are "inconsistent and therefore unworkable."

-In a copyright interview published Sunday in U.S. News & World Report, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger affirmed the Reagan administration's commitment to "rearming the country" despite the troubled economy. "We have been overspending for government as a whole but not for defense," Weinberger said.

Weidenbaum acknowledged that earlier economic forecasts by the administration were "optimistic."

Wall Caves In, Killing At Least 48 In Mexico

MERIDA, MEXICO, (AP) - Part of an old cement wall surrounding a bullring caved in, collapsing the wooden stands in front of it and killing at least 48 people at a political rally, a Red Cross spokesman reported.

A Red Cross official said 49 people were reported injured and taken to five hospitals. Some of the injuries were said to be serious.

The stadium was three-fourths filled by about 15,000 people attending the closing rally late Sunday afternoon of Gen. Graciliano Puce Pinzon's campaign for governor of Yucatan State. The wall collapsed as the general was speaking, the Red Cross man said in a telephone interview.

"We do not know yet what caused the wall to collapse," he said, "but we have a report that both the police and the district attorney's office have started an investigation."

The duty officer at the central police headquarters confirmed that a "serious mishap" occurred but said he could give no information until later today.

Puce Pinzon is the gubernatorial candidate of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, which has dominated Mexican politics since the 1920s.

The Yucatan Peninsula in southeast Mexico separates the Caribbean from the Gulf of Mexico. Merida, the capital of the state, is 23 miles inland from the port city of Progreso.

Accepted Bid To Avoid ECU Delay

The low bid for electrical work on the East Carolina University medical school's Brody Medical Science Building was 54 percent above the architect's estimated cost, according to state records.

However, the $3.99 million bid was not rejected in 1978 to avoid delaying construction of the building, state officials said.

According to John H. Emerson, chief engineer with the Division of State Construction, the electrical bid could not have been rejected "without rejecting all the others," and causing a delay in the project.

In a 1979 memo, Emerson said he doubted the accuracy of the architect's estimate of the electrical work. "It appears now that his estimate was better than we felt at that time."

Low bids on two of the six contracts for construction of the building were less than the estimates given to the state by Holloway-Reeves Architects of Raleigh - plumbing at $1.4 million and the elevator bid at $500,000. The other bids were over the estimates: general construction at $15.1 million was over by 27 percent; electrical at $3.99 million was over by 54 percent; heating and air conditioning at $5.1 million over by six percent; and fire protection at $300,000 over by 19 percent.

Under normal circumstances, Emerson said, a project that exceeds the budget by this amount would have been redesigned and rebid. "We consented to an attempt at negotiations due to the time that would be required for a second bid and the scheduled use of the facility by East Carolina University."

While Richards and Associates Inc. of Carrollton, Ga., was the low bidder for the electrical contract, the work is being done by Watson Electrical Construction Co. of Wilson.

Richards and Associates, Watson, and seven other firms that offered bids on the contract for the Brody Building were indicted on bid rigging charges last week by a Wilson County Grand Jury.

The Greensboro Daily News said yesterday that court records filed in Wake County indicate that a tip from a Watson employee enabled state investigators to learn more details about the alleged bid rigging.

The newspaper reported that an informer told State Bureau of Investigation agents that evidence of bid rigging was being altered and destroyed because officials of Watson Electrical Construction Co. had discovered that they were being investigated by the attorney general's office.

Wake Superior Court Judge James H. Pou Bailey, with that information in hand, issued a search warrant on July 7, which resulted in SBI agents gathering 45 separate files on Watson's contracts with the state and local agencies, during a raid on Watson's Wilson headquarters.

Donnie Lassiter Jr., appealed for through Hotline over the past several weeks, died Thursday evening. His family incurred approximately $150,000 worth of medical bills during his three-month, one-week life. His local physician, pediatric hematologist, Dr. Tate Holbrook, said Donnie's parents, Donnie and Dot Lassiter, have endeared themselves to the Greenville and Eastern North Carolina community through their courageous fight for their baby's life and he urges the community to continue to support them emotionally and with contributions during their bereavement. He said he's confident that what has been learned during the diagnosis and treatment of Donnie here and in Boston will help other children with the same and similar illnesses in the future.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and snow are expected in the forecast period Monday until Tuesday for the Northwest. Rain is forecast for northern New England and mild weather for the southern half of the nation. Cold weather is expected in the northern states. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Some cloudiness was expected to replace Sunday's sunshine today as an upper level area of low pressure moves into North Carolina, the National Weather Service reported.

The clouds will accompany a weak cold front entering the state from Tennessee, and may bring scattered showers to some sections by tonight.

The storm system that pounded the coast for the past several days has now moved to a position off the southern New England coast. While the winds have diminished considerably, the sea continues rough along the upper coast of north Carolina. This condition will gradually improve today.

Some cloudiness lingered over the coast Sunday, but the rest of the state reported sunny skies with temperatures cresting in the 70s except for some 50s and 60s in the mountains.

This morning, temperatures were in the mid and upper 30s with the exception of some 40s along the coast.

Reports Plot

NEW YORK (AP) — The government of former French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing was planning an assassination attempt on Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy and sought the Reagan administration's approval early this year, Time magazine reports.

Quoting unidentified sources in Washington, the magazine says in its current issue that a high-ranking official in Giscard d'Estaing's government presented the plan to high-ranking Reagan administration officials.

The U.S. would not have been directly involved in the assassination attempt, the magazine says, but the French asked that the U.S. give quick recognition to Khadafy's successor in the event of a coup.

Time says the plan was never approved, although U.S. officials agreed to continued discussions. The plan fell through when Francois Mitterrand defeated Giscard d'Estaing in the French presidential election in May, the magazine says.

"The French official proposed that the killing be done by a group of Libyan exiles, trained and controlled by the French," Time says. Its sources told it. Richard Allen, the national security advisor, was at the White House meeting, Time says.

Edwin Meese, counselor to President Reagan, would neither confirm nor deny the plan, Time says. But the magazine quotes State Department spokesman Dean Fisher as saying there was "no discussion of a covert plot to overthrow Khadafy."

Spokeswoman Kim Hogard, reached at the White House on Sunday night, said, "I don't have any information on that. I don't know what to tell you."

outlook called for mostly sunny skies in the east with cloudiness increasing in the west today. A few showers should reach the mountains later today with showers spreading across the state tonight and offshore by Tuesday morning.

A clearing weather pattern will then overspread the west portion of the state by late tonight with sunshine returning to most of the state on Tuesday. It will be mild today with temperatures in the 60s over the west to some low 70s over the southeast. Slightly lower readings will return to the state on Tuesday as winds become more northwest.

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦K6 ♥K1067 ♦74 ♦Q9632
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
1 ♥ 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?
A.—It's likely that you can defeat two clubs, but it's no sure thing—after all, East knew he was vulnerable when he entered the auction. In addition, your length in partner's suit makes your hand offensively oriented. If partner is very short in clubs, your side could easily have a game, and a double will not be adequate compensation if you set two clubs only one trick. Bid two hearts.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦762 ♥83 ♦73 ♦AQ10972
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?
A.—Despite the fact that you have only six points in high cards, we suggest that you gamble on three no trump. Any time that partner has the king of clubs, your hand rates to produce six tricks at no trump. Even if opener has only three low clubs, your hand should yield five tricks, leaving partner to look for only four more. Any attempt to play the hand at clubs, whether in a part score or game, is short-sighted.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q10873 ♥AJ7 ♦J5 ♦762
Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Your hand is worth one forward-going move, and it is more important to show good trump support for partner's suit than to introduce a suit of your own. Bid two hearts. That will allow partner to revalue his hand, which might enable your side to get to a laydown game.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦Q9 ♥AQ ♦AKQ1093 ♦J98
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Pass Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Since East has shown a near bust with his pass, you can expect partner to hold a card or two, so we suggest a jump to two no trump. In the balancing seat, a jump in no trump should be natural, and not "unusual"—a convention that we dislike, anyway. This might seem reckless with two suits virtually unstoppped, but it would be difficult to express the value of your hand in any other way. Indeed, a jump to three no trump would not be considered too rash.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♦9843 ♥6 ♦63 ♦QJ9865
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South
3 ♣ Dble ?
What action do you take?
A.—It is not a question of whether the opponents can make a slam, but whether they can make a grand slam. In any event, you should not give them room to work this out. While a jump to six clubs might throw a monkey wrench in their bidding machinery, we favor going all the way with a jump to seven clubs. If they still get to the right spot, congratulate them.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♦9 ♥AQ87 ♦K9 ♦AK10652
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one heart. What do you bid now?
A.—You have the strength for a takeout double, but you might not be able to handle the subsequent auction if partner insists on bidding your short suits. Overall two clubs. That is a slight underbid, but the odds are that someone will keep the bidding open and give you the chance to show additional strength at your next turn. Note that, in modern methods, a jump by you to three clubs would be preemptive.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Juvenile Rights Are Clarified

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Police do not have to let juvenile suspects talk with their parents before questioning them about a crime, the Supreme Court said today.

The court, leaving intact the conviction of an Illinois man who seven years ago confessed to killing three men when he was 16, said its 1966 Miranda decision allowing a suspect to have a lawyer's help before being questioned by police does not include allowing him to talk to his parents first.

By an 8-1 vote, the justices refused to hear arguments that Thomas Riley's confession to killing the three men in an Alsip, Ill., cemetery should not be used as evidence because police refused to let him see his father before they began questioning him.

Only Justice Thurgood Marshall voted to hear the appeal; four votes are needed to grant such review.

In other action Monday, the high court:

—Said it will decide whether the public and the press can be excluded from all criminal trials while young victims of sex crimes are testifying. The justices agreed to hear The Boston Globe's constitutional challenge to a Massachusetts law that makes such exclusion mandatory.

—Agreed to decide whether states can make it a crime to "promote" non-obscene sexual performances by children. The justices said they will consider reinstating such a New York law that was struck down for violating free-speech rights. Nineteen states have similar laws.

—By leaving intact a California court ruling that children have no legal right to sue their parents over visitation rights, refused to force a father to visit his 7-year-old daughter.

—Refused, by a 5-3 vote, to block the scheduled Nov. 27 hanging of convicted killer Dewey Eugene Coleman in Montana. Coleman sought to delay the execution until he files a formal appeal of his conviction for the 1974 death of Peggy Lee Harstad. Coleman's lawyers objected to the state's decision to allow a jury, without the help of a judge, to impose the death sentence.

—Said congressional investigators are not automatically shielded from lawsuits charging conspiracy. Without comment, the court refused to halt a suit against four investigators for the House Select Committee on Aging who let ABC News televise a film of a cancer insurance sales meeting they had arranged.

Riley's appeal tried to get the court to use his case to determine how its controversial Miranda decision of 15 years ago applies to juveniles. It asked the court to decide whether — and if so, when — police must put off interrogating young criminal suspects who ask to see their parents.

Illinois courts and two lower federal courts said Riley's confession was lawfully obtained and lawfully used against him.

Under the Miranda ruling, criminal suspects must be warned of their constitutional right to remain silent and to have a lawyer's help before being subjected to police questioning. If they invoke either right, police cannot question them.

But what actually constitutes such an invocation — especially when youngsters are concerned — has troubled the courts ever since Miranda was decided.

In 1979, a divided Supreme Court ruled that a teenager's request to see his parole officer before answering police questions was not protected under the Miranda doctrine.

The parole officer was not the "functional equivalent" of a lawyer, the court ruled. The decision left unresolved, however, whether that same standard would apply if the youth had asked to see a parent.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, ruling last July 10 in Riley's case, said it does.

"Riley's father is not trained in the law. Consequently, he was not in a position to advise the accused as to his legal rights," the appeals court added, borrowing words and logic from the Supreme Court's 1979 decision.

State courts in California, Colorado, Georgia, Indiana, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Pennsylvania have ruled that police must permit such parental consultation.

State courts in Kansas, Utah and Wisconsin have ruled against any such requirement.

Riley and his older brother were arrested not far from the Burr Oak Cemetery in Alsip, where the bodies of three young men had been found Feb. 27, 1974.

According to court records, Riley's father was in the police station when the youth asked to see him. The request was denied.

Riley's appeal attempted to portray the request as the youth's "means of obtaining the services of a lawyer" but Illinois prosecutors said such an inference was rejected by the lower courts.

The youth's confession came sometime between 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. in the police chief's office. He previously had been handcuffed to his cell for about two hours. Having been subjected to a strip search when he arrived at the station about 6 p.m., Riley was dressed in a tee shirt, undershorts and socks.

Riley was allowed to see his father sometime after midnight.

His appeal argued that the earlier refusal to permit Riley see his father "vitiates his confession." It contended that the circumstances were coercive, so that confession was not voluntary.

Riley, tried as an adult, was convicted on two counts of murder and one count of manslaughter. He was sentenced to 75 to 225 years in prison.

Fading Fad?

LONDON (AP) — Living together is going out of style, and religion in marriage is far less important than 10 years ago, according to a survey of 1,000 British couples.

The survey, carried out by one of the country's leading marriage bureaus, indicated that 6 percent fewer people now live with their partner before marrying. "It is unsatisfactory for the person who really wants marriage", said bureau boss Heather Jenner.

In 1971 the survey revealed 75 percent of Catholics wanted to marry another Catholic. That figure is now down to 42 percent. The same attitude applies to Jews, of whom only 45 percent insist on marrying into the faith, compared with 68 percent 10 years ago.

Says Fir Tree Prices 'Stable'

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Despite soaring inflation that's been needling many economists, it shouldn't cost much more to keep your house in firs this yuletide.

Donald McNeil, executive director of the Milwaukee-based National Christmas Tree Association, said Sunday that prices of the trees should not increase substantially from last year's levels.

Trees would sell for about $3 per foot, he said. A 7-foot tree which cost about $19 last year will cost about $21 this year, he said.

"You shouldn't pay more than $25" for the best tree available, he said.

Marriage Vows Said Sunday Afternoon

AYDEN — The marriage of Miss Kimberly Lynn Stancil and Edward Keith Harris was solemnized Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in the First Baptist Church here. The double ring ceremony was used and vows were spoken before the Rev. Gilbert Mister, pastor of the bride.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edwin Kelly and Mr. Albert Jasper Stancil and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harris, all of Ayden.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Glen Swanson, organist. Mrs. Diane Sutton of Kinston sang "We've Only Just Begun," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Miss Stancil was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a wedding gown of white chiffon over taffeta with a circular full chapel length train. The empire bodice was princess style and fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline accented with re-embroidered lace and seed pearls. Long sleeves extended in ruffles at the wrists. The Michaelangelo veil of illusion was attached to a caplet of lace and seed pearls and fell to a chapel train with matching trim. She carried a cascading bouquet of silk burgundy and pink dogwood and lilies with baby's breath.

Maid of honor Donna Herring of Kinston was attired in a formal gown of burgundy qiana with an empire waist and pleated skirt. A chiffon capelet fell from the shoulders. She carried wicker fan with dogwood, miniature carnations and daisies in varied shades of burgundy and pink. She wore a spray of silk dogwood and lilies in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Cathy Dennis of Greenville, Kay White and Connie Harper of Grifton and Cindy Cannon of Ayden. Their gowns were identical to that of the maid of honor and their fans were similar. They each wore a spray of miniature flowers in their hair.

Junior bridesmaids were Donna Wilson, cousin of the bridegroom, who wore a formal empire gown of pink chiffon over taffeta styled with a chiffon rose attached to a waistline sash. She carried classic burgundy roses tied with ribbons and her headpiece was the same as the bridesmaids. Ashley Gibson was flower girl and wore a gown designed similar to that of the bride with white chiffon over taffeta. She wore silk forget me knots and dogwood in her hair and carried a basket of mixed burgundy and pink flowers.

Jason McLawhorn of Winterville was ring bearer and carried a satin and lace pillow designed by the bride. The father of the bridegroom was best man and groomsmen included Michael Stancil and Tony Harris, brothers of the bride and bridegroom, and Lyman Wingate, all of Ayden, Greg Dennis of Greenville and Donnie Wilson of Winterville.

MRS. EDWARD KEITH HARRIS

uncle of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of mauve satin styled with a circular skirt. She wore a corsage of white miniature carnations. The mother of the bridegroom selected a formal gown of pink chiffon over taffeta styled with a draped neckline. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. H. W. Gooding of Ayden.

The bride is a graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School and attended Pitt Community College. The bridegroom is also a graduate of Ayden-Grifton and is self-employed.

Immediately following the ceremony the parents of the bride entertained with a reception in the church parlor.

The couple will be living in Ayden after a wedding trip to unannounced points. For

LET IT SNOW

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Producers of sodium chloride tend to dream of snowy winters.

Sodium chloride is commonly known as "rock salt." More than 10 million pounds are sold every year in the United States, with half of that amount used on roadways and walkways during the winter months to combat snow and ice.

The other 5 million pounds are used in water softening, food and agriculture.

Traditions Are Needed

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you ran an article about a woman who never cooked her own Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner. Instead, she went to her mother's or her mother-in-law's. She wrote to say that she wishes now that she had done her own holiday dinners.

That letter was terrific. If you could publish it again, it would be a great help to a lot of people.

I am a grandmother who wishes my married children would cook their own holiday dinners and invite me as a guest!

PAID MY DUES

DEAR PAID: It wasn't hard to find, and here it is:

DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and around holiday time someone always asks, "Should we go to his mother's or to my mother's for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner?" Your answer has always been: "Why not alternate?"

Abby, my husband and I struggled with that problem for years. We resolved it according to your suggestion. Both sets of parents lived nearby, and it seemed the only fair thing to do. So, for 22 years, we spent Thanksgiving and Christmas in their homes instead of our own.

It never dawned on us until this year — now that our children are ready to strike out on their own — that we never developed our own holiday traditions. We always went to Grandma's for the holidays. She insisted on doing all the cooking herself, then complained for months about how much work it was and how tired she got. When we, her daughters and daughters-in-law, asked if we could bring something for dinner, she wouldn't hear of it. When we brought food without asking her, she refused to serve it, so we finally gave up.

I realize now what a high price I've paid over the years for peace in the family. I wish I hadn't.

Abby, please urge young marrieds to dare to have their own holiday celebrations in their own homes. Suggest that they invite their parents and grandparents, who might even be relieved to be finally free of the burden of entertaining three generations.

DOING MY OWN THING

DEAR DOING: Thank you for an excellent letter. Perhaps it will inspire others to do their own thing, too.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that I see only Planned Parenthood mentioned in your column? Why don't you ever mention natural family planning? It is the only method of birth control that has no bad side effects.

Please be fair and answer this in your column.

FOR NATURAL FAMILY PLANNING

DEAR FOR: In order for the natural family planning method to be absolutely foolproof, the couple must recognize indicators of fertility, chart their symptoms and abstain from all marital relations during the fertile phase of the cycle.

Very few women are able to calculate their "safe" periods reliably. Women who miscalculate are called "mothers."

DEAR ABBY: This is no joke, so please give us a serious answer. Our son is a "Junior," named for his father. He is 35 years old, married and divorced twice, the father of four legitimate children, and three (that we know about) who aren't legitimate. He has made a mess out of his life and has given us plenty of headaches.

Needless to say, our son's reputation is terrible and his credit is lousy. His creditors are always getting my husband mixed up with him because his name is the same and he doesn't always add the "Jr."

My husband would like to change his own name for this reason. Can it be done?

NAMELESS, NATURALLY

DEAR NAMELESS: Yes. He may change his name as long as his intent is not to defraud.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Here's proof positive that fashion is a look, not a price. For a modest investment in yarn and the clicking of your needles, you can easily have this stunning hand-knit tunic — one of fashion's favorites for the 80s.

Best of all, you can change the look by using various yarns. The easy to follow directions are written for small, medium and large sizes in three weights of yarn.

To obtain directions for knitting the "Wear Everywhere Tunic," send your request for Leaflet No. K-8354 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order a kit containing your choice of yarn by sending a check or money order to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kits are available with Windrush (knitting worsted weight Wintuk) at $10; with Eleganza (brushed blend of mohair and acrylic) for $14; or with Cloudspun Fleck (brushed blend of acrylic and wool with flecks of contrast colors for a multi-hued effect) for $19. Windrush and Eleganza kits are available in burnt orange, light blue, or sunny yellow. Or you can specify white or sea green in Windrush or ivory or pale wisp green in Eleganza. Cloudspun Fleck is available in ivory, marsh heather or walnut. All prices include an instruction leaflet and shipping charges.

Dear Pat: Somewhere I once read that knitting should always be done in the front of all stitches unless instructions specifically call for knitting in the back of a stitch or stitches, but I don't remember the reason given for this.

I have a male friend who knits in the back of every stitch and does beautiful work. He claims that I imagined this taboo on knitting in back or that it is just an old wife's tale. Who's right, Pat? — Puzzled in Omaha

This really isn't so much a matter of who's right and who's wrong ... it's really just a matter of choice. Personally, I much prefer to work in the front of the stitches, which is the most widely used method and is the only one I have ever seen illustrated in knitting instruction books.

If you knit in the back of all stitches and purl in the front of all stitches, you get an effect known as "twisted stockinette." Now, there's nothing wrong with that, it just has a slightly different appearance. To achieve an untwisted stockinette, you have to also work all your purl stitches in the back portion of the stitch and this maneuver can be a little awkward, unless this is the way you originally learned — which is probably the case with your friend.

Another reason for my preference is that all pattern stitch directions are written assuming that the knitter is working in the front portion of the stitches and quite often you will be specifically told to knit or purl in the back of a particular stitch to achieve a certain result. If all of your work has been done in the back, you would have to reverse the directions and work in front when told to work in back and even then, the effect might not be the same.

I would never try to change anyone's method of working, however, as long as it is satisfactory for them. My advice here is directed toward the beginner, for whom I strongly recommend the conventional "knit-and-purl-in-front-of-stitch" method, unless directed otherwise.

Just to prove that there can be exceptions to every rule, I often work a "twisted ribbing" by working all knit stitches in the ribbing through the back and working all purl stitches through the front. For some reason it seems to have a little more elasticity than the usual ribbings.

No Surprises Here

The real question about the uproar caused by Budget Director David A Stockman's comments on the Reagan administration fiscal plans is why the surprise?

The budget reductions were poorly planned, hastily enacted and ignored "blatant inefficiency" in the Pentagon? That was pretty obvious.

Supply side economics is only a version of "trickle down" policies which favor the rich? The American middle class seems to want to ignore such things but it didn't take much reading about the tax cuts to determine that.

Stockman saw the across the board tax cut as a "Trojan horse to bring down the top (tax) rate." Could there have been much doubt about that, given the present climate in Washington?

The Stockman interview, published in the December issue of The Atlantic Monthly, apparently sent the president in a rage. There was a "woodshed" conference at which Stockman offered to resign, a move which was refused.

The presumption is that the dismissal of David Stockman now would be considered embarrassing to the administration, and it is best to keep him on at least for a time.

What he had to say, however, should not be any revelation to anyone who has followed carefully the path of the Reagan administration to this point.

The tax cuts clearly favored the rich. There was no way of knowing how the spending cuts would affect our nation, and none of the bloat in the military was even touched.

This is obviously not a government dedicated to more affluence for the middle class, and one has to wonder if there is anyone who ever thought it was.

Just Wait Until 1985

I was sitting in a bar in O'Hare Airport killing time, and struck up a conversation with the man on the next stool.

"Your plane been canceled, too?"

"Yep," he said. "I was going to Dallas. Now they've routed me through Rochester, N.Y. Where you going?"

"Washington, by way of Montgomery, Alabama. I guess this air controllers business is catching up with all of us."

"It seems to be. But I think Reagan did the right thing, not letting them come back to work."

"You can say that again," I said. "He sure showed them who was boss."

"Those guys should have never gone out on strike. They cut off their noses to spite their faces."

"I like a President who hangs tough. What time does your plane leave for Rochester?"

"Midnight. My flight to Dallas takes off at six in the morning."

"You're lucky, you have only four hours to wait. I have seven."

"It's a small price to pay for showing the air controllers they couldn't violate broke."

"Well, someone has to suffer to show that the Department of Transportation isn't going to take any flak from those guys on the picket line," I said. "Your wife work?"

"She's a stewardess," the bartender-pilot said. "She was laid off, too." He then went over to a man sleeping in a chair and woke him roughly. "Look, Mac, how many times have I told you you can't sleep in here. Now get out before I kick your butt."

"Who was that?"

"He's an air controller supervisor. Every time he gets a break, he comes down here and tries to catch a few winks before he goes up to the tower again."

"That's a nifty thing for a guy to do," I said. "You would think a guy could work in a tower for 12 hours without getting sleepy."

"You know what?" a man a few stools down the bar said. "I think Reagan should be a big enough man and go on television and say the air controllers made a mistake but he forgives them, and if they want to come back to work they can."

"Are you a Commie or something?" I said angrily. "What kind of signal do you think that would give to the Russians if he showed he was soft on air controllers?"

"If they pardoned Nixon they can pardon the air controllers," he said.

"There's always one bleeding heart in a bar," I said. "I'm glad there's no one in the Reagan administration who is thinking in terms of amnesty."

Portend Indictments

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — If any state officials had hoped for a quiet end to the bid-rigging scandals that first surfaced last year, they have received some disconcerting jolts.

It was like lightning bolts tossed in a couple directions, one state Democratic official observed last week, as bid-rigging indictments — previously confined to highway construction — were returned against nine electrical contractors.

State Justice Department officials then said they were also looking at water-and-sewer contracts, new U.S. Attorney Sam Curran said he wanted the FBI to open its own probe, and nearly everyone close to the investigation said more charges could be expected.

"We suspect there will be a number of other firms and people," said Attorney General Rufus Edmisten.

Edmisten and officials of Gov. Jim Hunt's administration said they had no evidence any state employees or officials had been implicated by the investigation, nor were they aware of possible collusion among bidders on state contracts.

But the developments have left a major question to be answered by investigators — has the practice of collusion and complimentary bidding, acknowledged among highway contractors who have pleaded guilty to federal charges, extended across a broad range of state construction projects?

H. Al Cole, special deputy attorney general, said it's too early to answer that question. But he said the bid-rigging could be more widespread than earlier thought.

"I'm certainly not going to indict anyone," he said in an interview. "I can only say that the atmosphere surrounding the electrical and highway cases, that same atmosphere or climate surrounds other types of contracts."

Edmisten went further, telling a reporter, "If the electrical industry is involved in bid rigging, what's to say that the plumbing and air conditioning and virtually everyone else is not rigged."

Nine electrical contracting companies were indicted by a grand jury in Wilson County for allegedly conspiring to rig bids on a $4 million contract for construction of an East Carolina University Medical School building in 1978.

The earlier highway cases had been brought under federal charges, and Cole said the latest cases were the first charges of their type ever brought under state law. So far the state has agreed to more than $11 million in settlements from 16 highway contractors, and still more are prevented from further bidding until they reach a settlement.

While Cole declined to say what other cases were under investigation, he acknowledged the Justice Department was looking into water and sewer project bids. Another official close to the state construction process, asking not to be named, said there was at least one other major project where charges were possible and that others were under investigation.

The first indication that the bid-rigging investigation had shifted from highways to other areas came in July when state agents, acting on a tip, searched the offices of Watson Electrical Construction Co. That company was among those indicted last week, and state attorneys said they had reached an agreement for cooperation with Watson officials.

The indictments charged that the companies conspired to file bids in which Watson's would be the lowest and win the contract.

Democratic officials, aware Republicans could be gaining another campaign issue, sought to downplay any embarrassment the revelations might cause them.

"It's not good news," acknowledged Brent Hackney, Hunt's deputy press secretary. "The thing you've got

Tobacco Festival Underway

The fourth annual Southern Flue Cured Tobacco Festival is underway here this week.

There were weekend activities including the Tobacco Festival Queen 1982 Pageant at Ayden-Gritton School. During this week a number of activities are planned highlighted by the farmers show at Farmers Warehouse.

It is a fun week, and it can be educational, too, if one visits all the exhibits available during the week.

The tobacco festival is growing in prestige and it is drawing visitors from long distances to Pitt County. We welcome them all and we encourage local people to participate to the fullest extent.

Unlisted Vehicles

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Once again, as in years gone by for many, many years, there is a legislative study commission at work on local property tax problems.

And once again, as it does everytime a committee is organized, the problem of people who don't list their cars and trucks for tax purposes reared its multi-million dollar head.

And once more, some members of the study commission suggested that the state ought to collect the tax when the car is registered and the license issued, then the money returned to the local governments.

That complex procedure, already studied and rejected several times, was quickly rejected again. The only hope, say the experts, is that the new law now taking effect which requires the owner to sign a statement on the auto registration form swearing that the vehicle has been properly listed for local tax purposes will solve the dilemma.

No Way

Numerous suggestions have been argued out in General Assembly committee meetings: a tax listing receipt in hand when registering the vehicle; a windshield sticker; and excise tax collected at time of sale; auto tags issued at the county tax office. None have been acceptable to the various state and local agencies, law enforcement officers, and auto dealers concerned.

The excise tax, for example, would have made car dealers the tax collectors, and they worried that having to add on dollars would spoil sales.

Best estimates are that tax cheaters annually hold back between $5 and $10 million from local tax coffers. The only way currently available to catch the cheaters is for the local tax supervisor to buy a computer list of vehicle registrations from Raleigh then compare the listings for taxes against that registration list.

Some counties do this with great success, using computers to make the cross checks. Some only spot check. Some do nothing. The cost for extra personnel and time runs nearly a dollar for every two dollars collected from the cheaters.

BILL NOBLITT

checks. Some only spot check. Some do nothing. The cost for extra personnel and time runs nearly a dollar for every two dollars collected from the cheaters.

But now even that procedure is being complicated almost to the point of being unworkable. The state is moving in phases to a staggered registration system. That means there will not be a time when a complete list of registrations will be available. The various renewal schedules never produce a cutoff date at which time all vehicles are signed up.

Those counties which already find the cost of the effort not worth the return will be even more reluctant to invest in trying to catch the non-listers.

Penalty

The certification on the registration form carries with it a penalty for those who falsely certify having listed their cars for tax purposes. But there is no mechanism for checking the statement. Again, only those who are honest will continue to be honest and the cheaters will continue to cheat and will be caught only if cross checks are made, or if they have a wreck with the local tax supervisor and he de-

Other Editors Say Is This Progress?

(The Wilson Times)

Once upon a time, North Carolina had a part-time citizen legislature, but no more. This year should have erased any doubts in anyone's mind that the General Assembly is a full-time job occupied by full-time people.

The legislature met three times this year. First, the representatives and senators went into regular session at the beginning of the year. But the legislators decided they could not settle the state's budget so they agreed to come back for a fall session, at which time they would complete budget action.

When the legislators met again in the fall, they delayed final redistricting action until a still later session. Thus, instead of meeting every other year, the legislature has met three times in a single year.

What's more, the Legislature may take on still another session early next year to try again to settle redistricting. If the current redistricting plan runs into legal problems, as many expect, then the legislature will have to go back into session for the fourth time in about a year.

Is the state or the legislature better off for these more frequent meetings? We think not.

These frequent meetings of the legislature makes representation more of a full-time job, thereby eliminating many people and many occupations and taking representatives away from their constituents and the "real world" for longer periods of time.

Until 1974 the legislature met every other year, with special sessions called by the governor on rare occasions. This year, the legislature has demonstrated its ability to call new sessions whenever and for whatever purposes it desires.

It is true that state government is growing larger and budgeting for the state is more complex than ever; but there is a limit to just how much more often the legislature needs to meet to cope with these problems.

It is instructive to remember that not so long ago the U.S. Congress met only part time for a few weeks or months of the year, and the entire congressional operation, which now sprawls through five office buildings (a sixth is under construction), was housed in the Capitol itself.

Strength For Today

THE MOUSE AND THE LION

Mark, the man who wrote the Gospel which bears his name, started out with Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey. But when they got into an area which was infested with bandits, Mark lost his courage. He ducked out and headed back for home.

Yet what about this boy who turned tail and ran? He later became one of Paul's most trusted companions. There is a tradition that Mark on his travels throughout the Roman world envisaged and predicted the establishment of the great city of Venice. The great Cathedral there is named for Mark. The Venetians proudly claim that his body rests there and beside it an autographed copy of his Gospel.

And here is the most amazing circumstance of all. The symbol in the Cathedral which today represents Mark's character is the lion. Mark, timid as a mouse, later became Mark the lion hearted. Why? Because he grew in Christian faith and grace. — Elisha Douglass

"Sorry," the bartender said. "I'm new at this job. I'm really a pilot. I was laid off because of the air controllers strike. Now just when I'm getting the hang of bartending, I'm going to be laid off here."

Today's would-be homeowners are facing a maze of mortgages, and the future is likely to be more — not less — confusing.

Government regulators have authorized a wide variety of new types of loans in recent months, giving lenders more flexibility in an effort to make more money available for housing.

Buyers must be "much more astute and much more careful," said Jim Christian, an economist for the U.S. League of Savings Associations. They must become "adapted to some uncertainty," he said.

The traditional, fixed-rate mortgage is still available, Christian said, but it is getting harder and harder to find. In its place are adjustable mortgage loans — AMLs — with fluctuating interest rates and payment schedules.

The AMLs take many forms. Interest rates are tied to a pre-selected economic index and are adjusted regularly.

There are several ways in which an increase or decrease in the interest rate may be passed on to the borrower. One way is to change the monthly payment directly to reflect the new interest rate. Another way is to leave the monthly payment untouched, while raising — or lowering — the size of the principal outstanding. The process by which the principal is reduced is amortization; increasing the amount of the principal is known as "negative amortization."

(Christian said negative amortization is prohibited in about one-third of the 50 states, but he said it is becoming increasingly popular in areas where it is legal.)

Consumer groups have expressed concern over the risks of adjustable mortgages, particularly those with monthly payments which can change. They fear borrowers will be unable to handle higher payments.

Christian admitted the new loans make it harder to plan. But he said they also have advantages for consumers. There is no need to refinance your mortgage — with possible pre-payment penalties — if interest rates drop sharply. There is less need for "creative financing" by sellers; the adjustable mortgage loan can automatically be assumed by the buyers.

Christian said both lenders and borrowers will have to do more planning with the new loans. They cannot make decisions based on current income and expenses alone.

Shop for money before you shop for a house, Christian urged. Take a realistic look at your financial situation: Do you expect your income to increase and by how much? Will you face major expenditures in the next few years? Will you need a new car? Braces for the kids?

Christian said would-be homebuyers should include "contingency reserves" in their budgets to protect against the possibility of an increase in their monthly mortgage payment. Your payment should actually be less than you can afford.

Suppose, for example, you think you can comfortably handle a payment of $800 a month. Look for a house and a loan that will cost only $650 a month. Set aside the difference — $150 — in a contingency fund each month, so you have a cushion if your payment goes up.

The thrift industry says adjustable mortgages are necessary to close the gap that now exists between earnings on outstanding loans — many of them long-term, low-interest mortgages — and the interest they must pay to attract deposits. Savings and loan officials say today's borrowers are, in fact, subsidizing the holders of existing mortgages, granted in the days of single-digit interest rates.

Christian said that if an adjustable mortgage system had been in effect in years past, interest rates on current home loans would be about 13 percent or 14 percent instead of 18 percent.

He said there is a tremendous amount of "market experimentation" with the new types of loans. As time goes on, he said, more and more lenders will "tailor loan contracts to the special circumstances of the borrower."

Buyers should compare lenders the way they compare houses, Christian said. "It's easy to get carried away by a dream house," he added. Before you fall in love, make sure you can pay the bills.

Suspect Tar Heel Mortgage Rates Decline Is In Offing

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina financial spokesmen, who agree that the interest rate on home loans may decline, offer differing opinions of how soon and how much the rates will drop.

"Mortgage rates have not moved appreciably for several months until the last two weeks," said Theo Pitt, president of Home Savings and Loan Association in Rocky Mount. "The national trend is that rates are beginning to move downward somewhat."

Karl Mendenhall, senior vice president of the marketing department of Cameron Brown in Charlotte, said he expected the interest rates to perhaps drop as low as 16 percent during the first quarter of 1982.

But Pitt said he looked for the rate to begin dropping this week and perhaps reach 16.5 percent in December. And he said he expected the rates not to drop lower than 15 percent in the first quarter of 1982.

While interest rates on home loans have ranged up to 20 percent over the past several months, Pitt said his savings and loan association currently is making home loans at an interest rate of 17 1/4 percent to 18 1/4 percent.

Mendenhall said his company dropped interest rates on home loans to 17 1/2 percent last week from an 18 1/4 percent rate that had been in effect since Sept. 1.

The rate for Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration financing is 16 1/2 percent. FHA and VA loans traditionally have been slightly lower than conventional rates.

But the seller is required to pay a fee to the FHA or VA lender for making a loan. These "points" have bounced wildly, at one time amounting to 10 percent of the amount financed. The payments to the lender usually are reflected in the selling price.

"There is less demand for mortgage credit and less overall credit right now with the economy having weakened some," Mendenhall said of the trend to lower interest rates. "The growth of money supply is in the range the Federal Reserve wants it and we expect inflation in 1981 to be in the 8 to 9 percent range — based on that prediction, rates should become somewhat lower than they are now."

One sure thing, the men said, is that the mortgage rates won't change as wildly as the prime interest rate, which reflects the cost of short-term lending while the mortgage rates reflect the cost of long-term borrowing.

"Traditionally long-term rates move down much slower and with a lot more lag time (than the short-term rates like the prime)," Pitt said.

Because the rates are expected to remain relatively stable, Pitt and Mendenhall said they don't expect to see a great influx of people seeking home loans at the lower interest rates.

Driver Charged After Accident

Dwayne Durant Fisher of 2806 Crockett Dr. was charged with careless and reckless driving and failing to report an accident following investigation of a 1:22 a.m. collision today on Fourth Street, 120 feet East of the Johnston Street intersection.

Police officers, who said the Fisher car collided with a utility pole, estimated damage at $5,500 to the car and $200 to the pole.

May Take His Issue To Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state veterans affairs official forced to resign last week says he will not file a grievance with the state but may take the issue to court.

Jack H. Daniel, 63, a district service officer since 1948, had said Nov. 5 that "the Vietnam war was such a brushfire compared to World War II."

Veterans complained and Daniel was asked to resign a week later by Charles A. Beddingfield Jr., deputy secretary of the Department of Administration.

Secretary of Administration Jane S. Patterson said she supported Beddingfield's decision.

Doves Not Peaceable

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A Duke University psychology professor is overturning stereotypes of the dove that have made it the symbol of peace, love and domestic bliss.

Dr. Carl J. Erickson says mated doves do work in harmony to build nests, taking turns sitting on the eggs and feeding their young. But he says when the chips are down, the gentle doves resort to jealousy, aggression and rejection.

Erickson and Dr. Patricia Zenone plan to publish their latest findings on the battle of the sexes in the ring dove population in the journal Animal Behavior.

Five years ago, Erickson revealed that male doves spurned the overtures of female "widows" who have mated recently with other males. The psychologist postulated that the male was more concerned with the fertility of his prospective mate than with her amorous behavior.

After a four-year study of 400 doves, the harsh view won out.

Erickson found that a male dove, forcibly separated from his mate, would attack her and the male put in his place — but only if she was still fertile. If she is not, his passion for her infidelity quickly dies.

Erickson says the appearance of love or a bond between mated doves is more a matter of "the male keeping an eye on the female .. not as love but as surveillance."

"I can wait," I said.

"I'll drink to that," my friend on the next stool said. "You let one air controller return, and they'll all want to come back to work. Before you know it, we'd have radar screens all over the country manned by criminals."

to keep in mind is that the state is the victim — the state has been defrauded...If anybody tries to say this is an example of corruption in government, they're wrong, because that's not what this is."

Currin, the federal prosecutor, also said it was too early to tell how far bid-rigging may extend. But Currin, who was an aide to GOP Sen. Jesse Helms until assuming the U.S. attorney's post this year, pointed out the latest charges follow not only the highway indictments but also indictments in the state's handling of federal job-training contracts.

"I think it is too early to say. Of course, this comes on the heels of the highway bid-rigging and the CETA scandal," he said. "You just don't know where it goes."

And even the highway bid-rigging cases may not be over. Currin said the federal grand jury in New Bern is continuing to meet on the case, and Cole said the highway bid-rigging investigation may be only halfway finished.

Call Greenville Utilities immediately. Anytime day or night. We'll get a serviceman to your home or location to correct the problem.

If you don't know what natural gas smells like, stop by our office and pick up a scratch and sniff leaflet.

Another Hinckley Suicide Attempt Is Thwarted

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
With the door lock jammed, U.S. marshals reached in the window of John W. Hinckley Jr.'s prison cell and cut down the accused presidential assailant as he tried to hang himself with a rolled-up jacket, the Justice Department says.
Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said the lock on Hinckley's cell single cell at the nearby army base.

DeCair said marshals saw him try to hang himself with a rolled-up jacket wrapped around a bar in the cell window and rushed to stop him. The door, however, would not unlock, so the marshals went outside in the exercise yard and reached through the window to cut him down.

"It was because he was under 24-hour watch that the attempt was unsuccessful," DeCair said. The spokesman said he did not know exactly how long Hinckley had been hanging before he was cut down.
Asked if Hinckley left a note, DeCair said, "I can't answer that."
He said he did not think the incident would delay or affect Hinckley's trial.

One of Hinckley's attorneys, Vincent Fuller, said Sunday night, "It's premature to say what it will do to the trial. I can't get to officialdom until tomorrow."
Fuller said he had no details of what happened at Fort Meade.
Hinckley's father, a Denver oil entrepreneur, and mother have been told of the incident, Fuller said, but he declined to give their response.

An extensive FBI investigation has concluded that Hinckley, who was arrested moments after the shooting outside the Washington Hilton Hotel, acted alone. All those wounded have returned to work except Brady, who remains hospitalized recovering from a bullet wound in his brain.

On May 27, while held in the U.S. Correctional Institution at Butner, N.C., for a series of physical and psychiatric tests, Hinckley was taken to the prison infirmary after swallowing an overdose of Tylenol and Valium.
In a hearing last month, an official of the mental health unit at the Butner facility said Hinckley had written of possible suicide while in prison. But those prison writings were not disclosed in court.

The official, supervisor Paul Hungerford, said a reference to "a trump card he planned to play some day" led him to worry that Hinckley "would attempt to harm himself again."

According to testimony at that hearing, as a precaution against suicide after the Tylenol overdose, the North Carolina institution read much of what Hinckley wrote, searched him frequently, watched him constantly, confiscated such items as a notebook with a metal binder and a mirror and denied him a plastic crucifix.

JOHN HINCKLEY

door malfunctioned and kept marshals from reaching him immediately after they saw him begin the apparent suicide attempt at 4:55 p.m. Sunday.

DeCair credited alert work by the marshals guarding Hinckley in the stockade at Fort Meade, Md., with saving his life.

The spokesman said Hinckley was "semi-conscious" and suffering from hypoxia, or oxygen deficiency, when he arrived at the hospital of the army base but was in satisfactory condition with "no serious injury of any kind."

U.S. marshals are investigating the incident, particularly to determine whether the 26-year-old Hinckley had disabled the lock on his cell door, DeCair said.

Hinckley has been under 24-hour watch since he unsuccessfully tried to harm himself with an overdose of Tylenol, an aspirin substitute, and Valium, a tranquilizer, in a federal prison in Butner, N.C., last May 27. Prison officials said Hinckley wrote of possible suicide after that.

Hinckley pleaded innocent to a 13-count federal indictment charging him with attempted assassination of President Reagan on March 30. His lawyers have told the court they will use an insanity defense and will not contest the fact that Hinckley shot and wounded Reagan, a Secret Service agent, a District of Columbia policeman and White House press secretary James Brady.

While Hinckley awaits the start of his trial Jan. 4 in U.S. District Court in Washington, he has been watched around the clock directly and on television monitors in his

Police Look For Second Suspect

Greenville police arrested Mitchell Wayne Leathers of Rt. 1, Robersonville on breaking and entering charges and are looking for a second man in connection with an incident at 214B Stancil Dr., about 8 p.m. Sunday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Leathers and another man allegedly took two speakers, valued at $100, from a vehicle at the Stancil Drive residence.

Witnesses chased the two, caught Leathers and held him for police, according to the chief, who said one of the speakers was recovered.

In addition to the breaking and entering charge, Leathers was charged with damage to personal property in connection with the estimated $100 damage done to the interior of the vehicle.

The 1981 tobacco crop was one of good quality and therefore a good price. Many factors entered into this successful crop. A good growing season, adequate rainfall, good production practices and good plantbeds are some reasons for the successful crop.

The plantbed is one important factor in a successful crop. This past year an abundance of plants were needed because dry weather made it necessary for many people to reset. So, let's take care in preparing a good plantbed.

The plantbed should be located on a five percent southern slope with windbreaks on the north, northeast and northwest. The windbreaks can be trees, buildings or artificial windbreaks of some sort. The bed should be located near a water supply that is clean, close and convenient.

The plantbed should be located on well-drained soil, which will warm up quicker. Soil that doesn't drain well will inhibit nutrient uptake and root growth. Some premature flowering may be attributed to this stress in the plantbed.

Prepare a seedbed relatively free of debris and undecayed vegetation. Prepare 80-100 square yards of bed for each acre of tobacco. Smaller farms need more yardage and larger farms can get by with less yardage. Good ditches should be provided to keep outside water from entering the plantbed.

Methyl bromide does an excellent job of controlling weeds, grasses, nematodes and some diseases. Methyl bromide should be applied when the soil moisture is about right for plowing. The air temperature should be 55 degrees Fahrenheit or higher at application. For best results, fumigate when soil temperature is above 60 degrees F at the four-inch depth. Do not fumigate if soil temperature is below 50 degrees F.

A liquid mixture of methyl bromide and chloropicrin can be injected five to eight inches into the soil with a chisel-type applicator. A mixture containing 68.6 percent methyl bromide works best at the rate of 8-10 pounds per 100 square yards.

There are a lot of good days in November and December to fumigate, so take advantage of them to get started on a successful 1982 crop.

Court Swamped By New Cases

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Lawsuits filed in North Carolina's U.S. Middle District Court are being filed so frequently that a record number of pending cases may result by the end of the fiscal year next July.

An average of three new suits have been filed every day this year in the district, which serves a 24-county region in the Piedmont. With 722 suits filed, there were 829 cases pending in the courts as of Oct. 31. The highest fiscal-year-end total of pending litigation ever recorded for the district was 932 cases June 30, 1979.

Judge Hiram H. Ward said the growing number of civil suits seems to reflect a change in society.

"People used to sit down and settle their differences," he said. "Now, they sue — and sit down and try to talk them over later."

To ease the backlog, Judge Richard C. Erwin was sworn into a newly created third judgeship last November. He was assigned 154 cases during his first month on the bench.

Since then, Erwin, Ward and Judge Eugene A. Gordon have been splitting the new civil cases. Although the three were able to cut to 708 the number of cases pending as of June 30, the figure is on the rise again because new cases are being filed quicker than old cases are being closed.

Gordon, who joined the federal bench in 1964, has on his docket the oldest active case in the district, a suit that has been pending for 13 years. The suit began after Edgar Russell and seven other blacks sued their employer, the American Tobacco Co. in Reidsville, and the Tobacco Workers Union, accusing both of racial bias in 1968.

All Savers at BB&T. Better than money market rates.

What makes our All Savers rate such a good deal—and, for many people, a better deal even than the money market certificate—is one simple fact: you'll get the first $1000 in interest free of all federal tax. In fact, if you file a joint return, you can get up to $2000 in tax-free interest. With an initial deposit of $500 or more, you can lock this rate in for a whole year now with our one-year All Savers certificates. But hurry. The All Savers rate will change at the beginning of next month.

The yield of 10.77% is based on an annual rate of 10.272% compounded monthly with interest left on deposit until maturity. You will lose tax benefits if you withdraw your money early or use your certificate as security for a loan. There is a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

Nobody works harder for your money. BB&T

Farmers Will Vote In Raleigh

RALEIGH — A meeting of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina is scheduled for Nov. 23 at 1 p.m. at the Kerr Scott pavilion on the state fairgrounds with Dr. T.C. Blalock, Jim Graham, John Sledge and Furney Todd as speakers. Farmers will vote at the meeting to indicate whether they feel an association should be formed. If the move is favored, by-laws will be voted on and a board of directors chosen.

Parisians Taste New Beaujolais

PARIS (AP) — Corks will be popping all over town today as Parisians taste the first Beaujolais wine of the season.

Nov. 23 will be dedicated to organizational activities. Each tobacco farmer is urged to go and participate in the meeting. The question of collecting dues for this organization will also be addressed.

For a few weeks each year beginning Nov. 15, there is a festive air in Paris as the first batch of the fruity red beverage from southeastern France near Lyon arrives. Trucks, trains and planes began pulling out of the vineyards to distribute the 1.3 million gallons of "Beaujolais Nouveau" to the rest of France, Europe and the United States.

The first shipments of the unaged wine, which is at its best when consumed immediately, began arriving in the capital Sunday, but bars and cafes don't get their stocks until today.

Some wine lovers, however, couldn't wait for the deliveries.

Japanese Editor Says Allen Check For A Charity

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese magazine that paid $1,000 for an exclusive interview with Nancy Reagan "understood in advance" that some of the money would be given to a charity by the White House, one of the magazine's senior editors said.

Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security adviser, has acknowledged he received the money that magazine editor Katsura Ishizuka called a customary honorarium.

Allen's role in the affair is being investigated by the Justice Department. He said he did not solicit the money but "intercepted" it, to avoid embarrassment to the Japanese reporters or Mrs. Reagan.

Allen said he locked the envelope full of cash in a safe and forgot about it until it was discovered by others.

"It was understood in advance that some of the money would be given to a charity by the White House," Ishizuka told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Sunday.

His statement indicated the White House knew in advance that the magazine Shifu-no-Tomo — Housewives' Friend — was prepared to pay an honorarium for the exclusive Jan. 21 interview with Mrs. Reagan.

Ishizuka, a director and general manager of the magazine, said such payments are customary among Japanese newspapers. The practice has been sharply criticized in the United States as "checkbook journalism."

First word of the payment came in a report Friday by the Japanese newspaper Mainichi Shimbun that said Tokyo police had investigated a payment to an unidentified top White House official. The Reagan administration then acknowledged Allen was the recipient.

Mainichi, quoting Japanese police reports, said a magazine editor who was present at the interview with Mrs. Reagan heard someone utter the word "honorarium?" as the first lady was leaving the room after the session.

Hearing that, the editor presented a company envelope containing money to a man she thought was an aide to Mrs. Reagan, but she did not know whether the man was Allen, Mainichi said.

Ishizuka said the decision to make such a contribution and the amount were agreed upon beforehand in a meeting of Shifu-no-Tomo's editorial staff. He said they settled on the total based on the time spent arranging the interview, the fact that Mrs. Reagan was taking time from a busy schedule to be interviewed, and the importance of the story, which ran in the magazine's March issue.

White House spokesman Mort Allin said there would be no comment on Ishizuka's remarks. The White House said Saturday it would "refrain from additional comments on this subject" while the investigation was under way.

The New York Times today quoted administration officials as saying there is no plan to ask Allen to step down during the investigation, but they added that position could change if a special prosecutor is appointed. But the unidentified officials said that question had not been specifically considered yet.

President Reagan, arriving in Washington from a trip to Texas, said he planned no changes in his administration.

Ishizuka said the interview with Mrs. Reagan was conducted by Fuyuko Kamisaka, a well-known freelance journalist who often writes for the magazine, and Chizuko Takase, who he said is an acquaintance of Allen and acted as interpreter.

CBS News quoted Takase late Sunday as saying that when the interview was first discussed before the election, Allen said no gratuity would be accepted. Takase said the magazine insisted on renewing the offer after the election.

Denying any impropriety, Allen said Saturday that he did not arrange the interview but did pass on the original request to others "for evaluation, handling and decision."

On Saturday, the Washington Post quoted Miss Kamisaka as expressing surprise at Allen's denial he set up the meeting. "That's really funny because without the assistance of Mr. Allen the interview would never have been realized," the Post quoted her as saying.

Today, the Post quoted Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate — who previously had referred questions to administration spokesmen — as saying the first lady does not remember the interview but has a "faint recollection" of a photo session.

Mrs. Tate also said Mrs. Reagan did not tell the interviewers she had had two miscarriages as the magazine reported.

The Post also reported that Mary Finch Hoyt, who was Rosalynn Carter's press secretary, said the magazine sent only a thank you letter after interviewing Mrs. Carter in 1978.

ACE Fellow Is Observing ECU

ECU News Bureau

Dr. Yuan-tsun Liu, dean of the Soochow (Taiwan) University College of Science is spending two months at East Carolina University, under sponsorship of the American Council on Education.

Dr. Liu is one of 42 educators, and the only foreign educator, in this year's class of American Council on Education Fellows in Academic Administration. His fellowship is a cooperative arrangement between the ACE and the San Francisco-based Asia Foundation.

As an ACE Fellow, Dr. Liu is observing in depth the operations of university administration at ECU. Upon completion of his stay here, he will attend special seminars and briefly visit other campuses in Texas, Ohio, the New England states and elsewhere.

The ACE Fellows program, established in 1964, is designed to strengthen leadership in higher education by preparing selected faculty and staff for responsible positions in academic administration. ACE Fellows spend their assigned time at their own campus or at a host institution.

Dr. Rosina Lao, chairperson of the ECU Department of Psychology, was an ACE Fellow last year, and served as special assistant to ECU Chancellor Thomas Brewer. Dr. Robert H. Maier, ECU's vice chancellor for academic affairs, was among the first class of ACE Fellows, assigned to the administration at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Dr. Liu's period of study at ECU has been chiefly spent in close association with Chancellor Brewer, ECU's four vice chancellors and the dean of ECU's College of Arts and Sciences.

He commented that he was pleased by his assignment at ECU, noting that the campus is "progressive" and developing rapidly. During his observations, Liu said, he has gained much knowledge of effective campus management and plans to adapt several practices and policies observed here.

In addition to his position as dean of the Soochow College of Science, Dr. Liu chairs the university's physics department. He is a specialist in statistical physics with more than 30 published articles on aspects of physics and educational theory.

Dr. Liu was previously in the U.S. as a student at Columbia University, from which he received the PhD degree in 1972.

No Big Rush To Fill Building

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina legislators are not scrambling to fill a new $8.5 million legislative building in Raleigh.

"I think it's going to be tough getting 20 senators to go over there," said state Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, about the annex behind the Legislative Building. "It's not where the action is. There ain't gonna be no press and TV cameras over there."

Ninety-five of the state's 170 legislators plan to keep offices in the Legislative Building — 67 representatives and 28 senators. The other 75 lawmakers — 53 representatives and 22 senators — will be moved across the street to spacious offices on the fifth and sixth floors of the annex.

Lawing, Senate pro tem, and Rep. John Hunt, chairman of the House Rules Committee, will assign the offices during the next month or so.

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market posted a broad loss today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 10.56 to 845.32 by noon.

Losers held a 3-1 lead over gainers in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The drop came despite word that San Francisco's Crocker Bank had cut its prime lending rate from 17 to 16 percent.

The Federal Reserve Board reported today that U.S. manufacturers operated at just 76.9 percent of factory capacity in October, the lowest level since August 1980, the end of last year's recession.

Injures 5 Children

BUNN LEVEL, N.C. (AP) - Six school children, a bus driver and the driver of a car were injured in an accident involving a Harnett County school bus and a car about 7:20 a.m. today off U.S. 401 near Bunn Level, officials said.

A spokesman at Good Hope Hospital in Erwin said the driver of the car, who had not yet been identified pending notification of kin, had been transferred from Good Hope to a Wake County hospital in serious condition.

Only seven children were on the bus, which had just begun making its rounds, at the time of the accident, ambulance personnel said. The children are said to range in ages from about 10 to 14.

Ambulance workers said three children and the bus driver were taken to Good Hope Hospital, while three other students were transported to Betsy Johnson Hospital in Dunn.

Blame Juveniles

Battle
 Mr. Harold Battle died Sunday in Pitt Memorial Hospital. He was the son of Mack and Lillie Bell Battle of Greenville. Funeral arrangements are being handled by Phillips Brothers Mortuary here.

Joy-riding juveniles yesterday caused two cars attached to a Seaboard Coast Line train engine to derail here Sunday morning, blocking the main SCL North-South rail line through the city.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said investigation of the 11:15 a.m. derailment is continuing and he added that juvenile petitions may be issued for the three youngsters involved in the incident.

According to the chief, the juveniles drove the engine and two cars back and forth along SCL's west siding several times before pushing past the switch at the intersection with the main line near Howell Street. When the boys started to back the engine up again, both the tank car and box car derailed.

Cannon, who said railroad crews arrived about 2:35 p.m. to get the cars back on the track, said railroad officials estimated labor alone to re-rail the cars would cost $1,300.

Postpone Trial Of Four Jaycees

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) - The trial of four Jaycees charged with mishandling funds collected by the club for charity was postponed today after a former state president pleaded no contest to the charges.

The specially called session of Cabarrus County Superior Court ended after only an hour and a half when J. Harold Herring pleaded no contest to two counts of misapplication of about $16,000 in Jaycee funds. Under the terms of Herring's plea-bargain arrangement, he will be interviewed by the State Bureau of Investigation and will testify in the trial of other Jaycees charged in the case.

Immediately after Herring pleaded no contest, special prosecutor with the state Attorney General's office Lester Chalmers asked that the state be given additional time to interview Herring.

Superior Court Judge Donald Smith of Raleigh agreed to Chalmers' request and waived the state's speedy trial requirements in the case. Earlier, Smith delayed sentencing of Herring, 33, until after completion of the other cases.

Herring and four other former state, local and national Jaycee officials are charged with diverting hundreds of thousands of dollars in funds.

Bahr 'Kicks' San Francisco; Lions Upset Cowboys

By The Associated Press

When the San Francisco 49ers kicked Matt Bahr off the squad a few weeks ago, they never figured he'd kick them back.

Bahr, given his walking papers by the Pittsburgh Steelers during training camp, hooked on with the 49ers early in the season when their place-kicker, Ray Wersching, was sidelined by an injury.

For four weeks, his kicking was an instrumental part of their seven-game winning streak. Then he was traded to Cleveland. And on Sunday his 24-yard field goal with 43 seconds to play ended that streak. It gave the Browns a 15-12 victory.

The loss didn't dent the 49ers' lead in the National Conference West, though. Atlanta was beaten 34-20 by Pittsburgh and Los Angeles fell 24-10 in Cincinnati. The Falcons and Rams remain three games off San Francisco's pace.

The American Conference won four of the six games played against the National Conference to tie the season series at 17-17.

Steelers 34, Falcons 20

Terry Bradshaw was in better than Super Bowl form. The Pittsburgh quarterback, who holds the record of four touchdown passes in a Super Bowl, threw five scoring passes against the Falcons, two to John Stallworth.

"Just another day at the office," he said with a grin. "It was a lot of fun. It was the first time I ever threw for five ... It was like a playoff game. It's our biggest win of the year."

The Steelers, 6-5, are two games behind Cincinnati in the AFC Central Division. They play the Bengals at home on the next-to-last Sunday of the season. The Falcons, last year's NFC West champions, are 5-6. So are the Rams.

Bengals 24, Rams 10

Dan Pastorini was intercepted three times and sacked five times in his second start in Pat Haden's place for Los Angeles. "Our defense just totally won the ball game," said Cincinnati wide receiver Cris Collinsworth. "There's no other way you can put it."

The interceptions paved the way to Pete Johnson's TD runs of 1 and 3 yards and his 3-yard scoring catch from Ken Anderson.

"All day long, we never had a lot on offense, but our defense gave us the ball three times inside the other team's 50-yard line, and that was the game," Collinsworth said.

Broncos 24, Bucs 7

The Broncos survived the loss of quarterback Craig Morton, the NFL's passing leader, and rode Larry Canada's two TDs past the Bucs to remain one game ahead of second-place Kansas City in the AFC West.

Morton was knocked out of action with a bruised shoulder when Dave Logan sacked him shortly before halftime. Steve DeBerg took over and guided Denver to Canada's 1-yard TD run and 3-yard scoring catch. Earlier, Canada blocked a Tampa Bay punt to set up the Broncos' other touchdown.

Vikings 20, Saints 10

Tommy Kramer moved into the 10,000-yard passing department for his career and his 11-yard TD toss to Joe Senser helped widen Minnesota's NFC Central lead to two games.

But New Orleans Coach Bum Phillips was fuming over a blown call by the officials. Jim Wilson blocked an attempted pass by Kramer and fellow defensive end Frank Warren caught the ball and ran it into the end zone.

No score, the officials said, saying an "inadvertent whistle" had blown the play dead. Incomplete pass was the ruling.

"It was not an inadvertent whistle, it was an incompetent whistle — let's make that clear," Phillips said. "You can't kill a ball that is in the air."

Eagles 38, Colts 13

"I don't remember a game like this where we could do whatever we wanted on offense," said Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski after he threw for 294 yards and two touchdowns and Wilbert Montgomery ran for two scores en route to handing Baltimore its 10th loss in a row.

"We were in a situation during the whole game to do what we wanted. We could throw. We could run. We could do whatever the coach wanted us to do. Today, we would've had to have made tons of mistakes to get beat," Jaworski added after Philadelphia, 9-2, opened a one-game lead over Dallas in the NFC East.

Lions 27, Cowboys 24

Eddie Murray's 47-yard field goal on the game's final play propelled Detroit past Dallas.

The Cowboys took a 24-17 lead with 2:37 to play on a 14-yard pass from Danny White to Jay Saldi. But on the Lions' first play from scrimmage, quarterback Eric Hipple and Billy Sims teamed on an 81-yard scoring pass play that tied it 20 seconds later.

Then, after holding the Cowboys and forcing a punt, Hipple threw passes of 15 and 30 yards to David Hill to pave the way to Murray's winning kick.

Raiders 33, Dolphins 17

Marc Wilson passed to Todd Christensen, Bob Chandler and Derrick Ramsey for touchdowns as Oakland, 5-6, continued trying to avoid becoming the first defending Super Bowl champ to fall under .500 the following year since the 1968 Green Bay Packers were 6-7-1.

The loss dropped Miami's record to 7-3-1 and left them one game ahead of the New York Jets in the race for the AFC East lead. The Dolphins visit the Jets next Sunday.

Jets 17, Patriots 6

Linebacker Greg Buttle's interception and fumble recovery preceded Bruce Harper's 4-yard TD run and a Pat Leahy field goal in the first half, paving the way to the Jets' victory, their first in Foxboro since 1975. Tom Newton ran in from the 5 for the Jets' other score. The Patriots are 2-9.

Red-Hot Lakers Nip Indiana In Two OTs

By The Associated Press

After a rocky start, all looks well in Hollywood again. The Los Angeles Lakers won just one of their first four games, prompting reports of dissension on the team, with Coach Paul Westhead's job reportedly in jeopardy.

But that was last week's news. The Lakers, 6-4, are now red hot, with their 124-123 double overtime victory over the Indiana Pacers Sunday night making it four straight wins and moving them within one game of the Portland Trail Blazers in the Pacific Division. The four victories, coming in the space of five days, were by a total of eight points.

"It was a big, big weekend," Magic Johnson said. "It gets us back on the winning track. The team is just making a commitment to suck it up and play as hard as we can and get the job done. We've been getting it done offensively, and in the last couple of minutes, defensively. That's why we've come out with some big wins."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's free throw with eight seconds left in the second overtime period gave the Lakers the victory. Abdul-Jabbar's foul shot came 27 seconds after Los Angeles rookie Kevin McKenna's 18-foot jump shot tied the game at 123.

Los Angeles blew an eight-point lead in the final two minutes of regulation play. Indiana rookie Herb Williams hit a short jump shot with four seconds left to send the game into overtime tied 109-109.

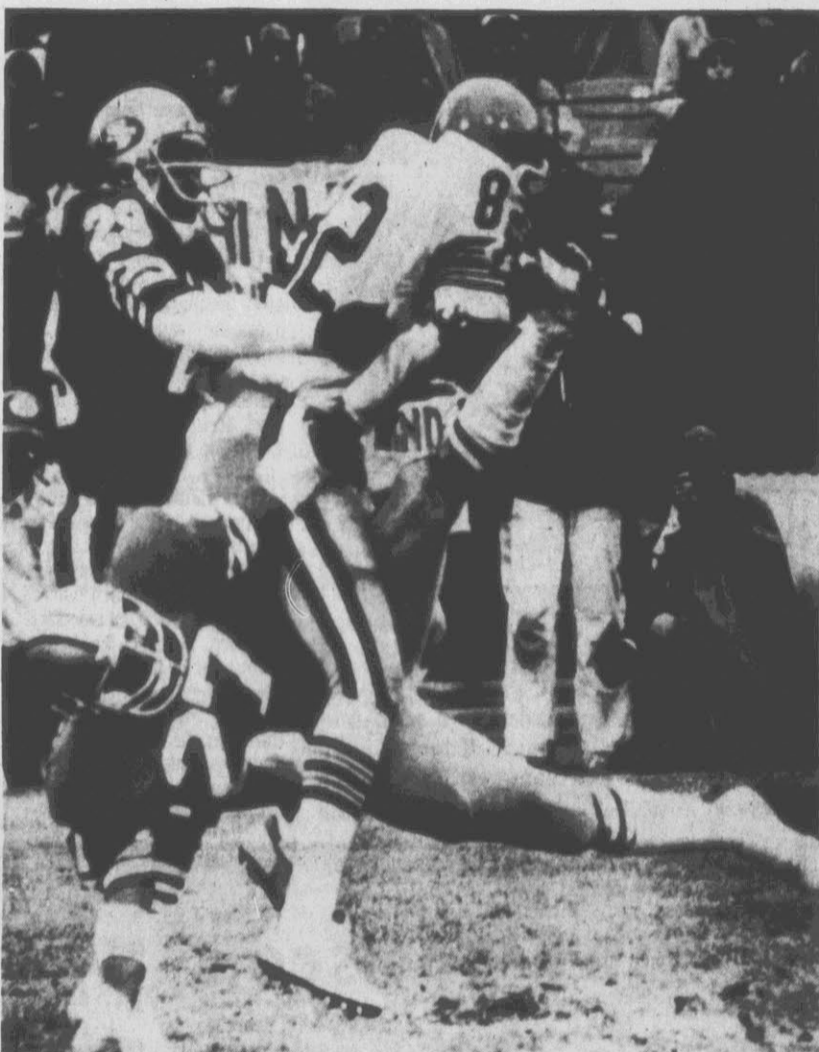

In the first overtime, the Pacers took a four-point lead with three minutes left, but the Lakers got the final four points of the period on shots by Mitch Kupchak and Johnson to send the game into a second overtime deadlocked at 115-115.

Spurs 110, Blazers 105

After ripping off seven straight victories to open the season, the Portland has now dropped three in a row. Mark Olberding led a 26-7 San Antonio spurt in the third quarter as the Spurs, 7-1, came from behind. George Gervin led the Spurs with 23 points and the Blazers, playing without the injured Kermit Washington, Kelvin Ransey and Kevin Kunnert, were led by Jim Paxson's 26 points.

Bucks 98, Cavaliers 96

Sidney Moncrief scored 12 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter as Milwaukee wiped out a seven-point deficit. "The team needed a spark," Moncrief said, "and our outside shots weren't falling, so I just decided to challenge their big guys. Our quickness just wore them down."

'Bear' True To Form After Tying Record

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — On one of the most memorable days of his career, Bear Bryant remained true to form — coaching his Alabama team to another victory, then poking fun at himself.

"My limited vocabulary doesn't permit me to tell you how proud I am of my team," was Bryant's line to the media following Saturday's 31-16 trouncing of Penn State, a triumph that tied him with Amos Alonzo Stagg's record of 314 coaching victories.

And even though Penn State Coach Joe Paterno called it "a magnificent achievement...an historic moment in football history," Bryant was more inclined to lament that "I doubt very seriously if I played enough people" to give the defense proper rest.

If the 68-year-old Bryant and his sixth-ranked Crimson Tide did many things wrong, they weren't visible to the record Beaver Stadium throng of 85,133. Touchdown passes of 37 and 3 yards from Walter Lewis to Jesse Bendross, Paul Carruth's 2-yard run and a 27-yard field goal by Paul Trodd — kicking in his first varsity game — gave Alabama a 24-3 halftime lead.

It was all downhill thereafter, especially once Alabama repelled the fifth-ranked Nittany Lions on four cracks from the 1-yard line early in the third quarter.

Fullback Mike Meade, who was stopped cold twice, couldn't believe Alabama's goalline stand, one which brought back memories of similar heroics in the Tide's 14-7 national championship Sugar Bowl showdown three years ago.

"On one of the plays, I thought one of their linemen was going to take the handoff," Meade said in describing Alabama's super-quick defenders. As he has done so many times in his 37-year career, including a 3-0 record against Paterno, Bryant stole the spotlight. But he said he really didn't want any of it.

"Right now, I don't feel anything more than that we've won another good game," he said. "Maybe when I get home and talk to my children and grandchildren, I'll think about personal satisfaction. But I never thought about it (the record). I didn't tie any record. A tremendous number, a multitude of people, tied the record and shared in it."

The Alabama players were much more excited than Bryant. "It was the biggest game anyone on this team ever played," said Lewis.

After hearing a pregame speech in which Bryant never mentioned the record chase but exhorted his troops to play like it was the last game of their lives, the Crimson Tide went out and put on a show calculated to make the old man proud.

"They played as well as they can play," he said. They played over their heads in the first half, a little better than they're capable of playing."

Bryant can break the mark he now shares with Stagg when Alabama winds up its regular season against Auburn on Nov. 28 in Birmingham.

UNC Picked To Win ACC

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina, which finished second in last season's national collegiate basketball championships, has been selected to capture the 1981-82 Atlantic Coast Conference Basketball title by the league's sportswriters and broadcasters.

The Tar Heels received 973 votes, easily outdistancing Wake Forest, which was picked to finish second, with 764 votes.

North Carolina finished second in the ACC last year before defeating Maryland in the tournament championship game.

Virginia, which finished third in the national championship and lost to the Tar Heels in a semifinal game, was chosen third with 740 votes. The Cavaliers won the regular season ACC championship during the 1980-81 season.

Only the Tar Heels, Demon Deacons and Cavaliers received first-place votes. North Carolina was picked first on 119 ballots, while Wake Forest was chosen on two ballots and Virginia on one.

Clemson was selected fourth with 653 votes. The Tigers were followed by North Carolina State with 489, Maryland with 352 and Duke with 282.

Georgia Tech, with new head coach Bobby Cremins, was chosen to finish last, where it has finished in its first two years in the ACC.

Chargers Face Seahawks Tonight

SEATTLE (AP) — The San Diego Chargers and Coach Don Coryell are having some unexpected problems this season, but past performances indicate a turn for the better, at least temporarily, tonight. The Chargers' eight triumphs over Seattle have been by an average of 12 points.

"You just don't see San Diego play poorly against us in any phase," Patena said. "They don't have a linebacker fall down, defensive backs don't miss tackles and (Dan) Fouts doesn't overthrow his receivers."

In the first San Diego-Seattle game this season, Fouts completed 17 of 18 passes in the second half.

Fouts had three touchdown passes in that game and completed a club record 30 of 41 passes for 302 yards.

protested. "They're capable of it. We've been very fortunate." Despite Coryell's disclaimer, San Diego has dominated the series on the scoreboard, too. The Chargers' eight triumphs over Seattle have been by an average of 12 points.

In the first San Diego-Seattle game this season, Fouts completed 17 of 18 passes in the second half.

But the Chargers are coming off a 40-17 loss at home to Cincinnati while the Seahawks are coming off a 24-21 Kingdome victory over Pittsburgh last Sunday. Seattle trailed 21-3 late in the second quarter in the Pittsburgh contest.

"When you're losing games, it's natural and normal for people to think of something other than their own inabilities as an excuse," Coryell said of the departures of Jefferson and Dean.

"It's a normal reaction. But actually we're at the same position (6-4) as we were last year (when the Chargers won the division). In the last half of the season for the last three years, we've gone 19-5."

Pete Rose is going to have to do some reshuffling in his already overcrowded trophy cabinet — he gets another award tonight, and it's a dilly.

It's the "Athlete of the Decade" Award, presented by the American Cancer Society, at a swanky black-tie affair in one of New York's fanciest hotels, and the guests are in for a treat.

This is no ordinary man — this stubby hunk of grit and gristle whose exploits on the baseball diamond have made him an anachronism, a throwback to the rough and tumble days when ballplayers came out of the coal mines, off the farms and from the sticks to play the game almost purely for the love of it.

The award, decided by a blue ribbon panel, encompasses all sports and aims at honoring athletes not for just a day, not for just a year but for an era — sports figures who leave their marks carved in imperishable stone.

Its prestige may be gauged by previous winners — Muhammad Ali, the heavyweight boxing champion who transcended his sport to become a social and political force; golfer Jack Nicklaus, whose 19 major championships may never be equalled and the stoical Bjorn Borg, winner of five straight Wimbledon tennis titles before his 25th birthday.

Only the super great qualify — and Rose brings with him all the credentials.

"If all the players were like Pete Rose," said Dallas Green, former manager of the Philadelphia Phillies now a general manager of the Chicago Cubs, at baseball's re-entry draft in New York last Friday, "the game wouldn't be in the mess it's in."

Rose Named 'Athlete Of The Decade'

"He plays with a gusto rarely seen in others — always digging, scrapping, trying for every edge. Other team hate him. He's a hell of a ballplayer."

Monte Irvin, the old Giants Hall of Famer now on the commissioner's staff, said, "It's Rose's durability that has impressed me. He never gets hurt. If he does, he never lets it out. He shows up for every game."

"He's not a slugger but he gets the hits. He's not fast but he steals bases. He's not big and agile but he always manages to get his glove on the ball. He's amazing."

Dick Wagner, president of the Cincinnati Reds whose experiences with Rose were across the bargaining table, called Rose the most intense competitor he has ever seen.

"He loves baseball," Wagner said. "He eats it. He's the last one in the world you'd want to throw to. Once on the field, he catches fire. He never lets up. No athlete ever developed his skills the way Pete has."

Rose, 5-11, 203 pounds, built like a tree stump, lacks the grace of a Joe DiMaggio, the effortless skills of a Willie Mays, the smooth hitting stroke of a George Brett or the power of a Reggie Jackson.

Yet he does everything on a baseball field you can ask of a man. In 15 All-Star games, he has played a record five different positions (1f, rf, lb, 2b, 3b). Already he has passed Ty Cobb in number of 200-hit seasons (10) and the National League leader, Stan Musial, in hits (3,697). In 1978 he hit in 44 consecutive games, a league record, falling only 12 short of Joe DiMaggio's magical 56.

Of all the players in history, only Ty Cobb is ahead of him in hits (4,191) and now at age 40 and secure with a long-term, $800,000-a-year contract with the Phillies, Pete is threatening to surpass in the statistical bases (games, hits, at bats, runs, singles, doubles and total bases) such cherished heroes as Cobb, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Tris Speaker, Hank Aaron and Willie Mays.

He was Rookie of the Year in 1963, National League MVP in 1973, World Series MVP and Sports Illustrated's Man of the Year in 1975 and Baseball Magazine's National League Player of the Decade for the 1970s.

Pete says he probably gets his aggressiveness from his dad, a onetime semi-pro football player ("He told me somebody's always got to win or lose but, if you've got to lose, let it be the other guy") and his intensity from the combative Cobb.

"I feel I always identified with Cobb," said the Philly fireball. "I heard so many tales about him from Waite Hoyt, the old Yankee pitcher who did some broadcasting in Cincinnati."

"Waite told me once how the Yankees started calling Cobb ugly names. Cobb didn't answer back. But when he went up for batting practice he rifled nine foul balls into the Yankee dugout."

Former Davidson Coach Discovers Paradise In Hawaii

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For former Davidson football coach David Fagg, paradise is being an assistant coach in Hawaii, with luau, the ocean, and one of the best college football teams in the nation.

Prior to Saturday's 13-3 loss to Brigham Young, Hawaii was one of only four unbeaten nationwide and had the nation's second-longest winning streak at 11 in a row.

Fagg, a native of High Point, and Hawaii head coach Dick Tomey were assistants at Davidson in 1965 and 1966.

"We always said that the first one who became a head coach would hire the other," Fagg said. But when Fagg was named head coach at Davidson in 1970, Tomey had already gone to UCLA as an assistant.

Fagg eventually became an assistant coach under Pepper Rodgers at Georgia Tech. After a stopover at Kansas, Tomey took the Hawaii reins.

Remembering their pledge, Tomey tried to hire Fagg. But it took two years before Fagg decided to accept the offer.

Finally, Tomey got Fagg to visit by sending him two airline tickets and telling him he owed it to his wife to take the trip.

As soon as Fagg and his wife, Barb, stepped off the plane, they were sold on Hawaii.

McEnroe Fined, May Be Out Of Davis Cup Finals

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — John McEnroe lost a tennis title to Jimmy Connors Sunday, was fined $700 for tantrums on the court and faced a suspension that could put him out of the Davis Cup final.

Connors came from behind to win 3-6, 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 and took the Benson and Hedges title, which McEnroe had won for three years in a row. The victory was worth $32,500.

The fines, imposed by Grand Prix supervisor Keith Johnson after the match, sent McEnroe over the statutory limit of $5,000 for minor offenses. That means automatic suspension for three weeks, but it is up to the Professional Tennis Council to decide when the ban starts.

The United States plays Argentina in the Davis Cup final at Cincinnati Dec. 11-13.

McEnroe's running feud with British officials, which marred his triumph at Wimbledon this summer, reached the boiling point after he had won the first two sets against Connors.

In the second game of the third set, he lost a point and angrily slammed a ball into the netting at the side of the court.

Umpire John Parry decided that was misconduct and gave McEnroe a public warning.

From then on the atmosphere in the Wembley arena was electric.

One point later McEnroe marched angrily to the side of the court and swung his racket at a television microphone and put it out of action. Parry awarded a penalty point to Connors.

In the final set as McEnroe dropped service to trail 2-3, he banged a ball high into the crowd. That was another penalty point.

Connors was fined $400 for "audible obscenity." It was not clear when this happened.

Throughout the last three sets there were frequent arguments over linesmen's decisions, while the crowd of 9,000 roared and whistled.

At one point McEnroe shouted at the umpire, "You're doing a lousy job." Another time Connors walked up to the chair and said, "Are you in a dream world up there?"

The umpire twice got the score wrong. Once a woman line judge walked over to the chair and told him he was wrong. The crowd yelled in derision.

Connors was interviewed on court after the presentation ceremony and was applauded loudly by the crowd for defending McEnroe.

"I don't think a lot of people understand our position," Connors said. "They think it is all fun and games."

"It is fun playing for all these people, but nobody understands what we have to go through to get here."

"There are too many rules and restrictions put on the players. Maybe if they gave us a little more rein it would help things a bit."

At one point the two players had a long talk at the net, while the umpire appealed to them to play on.

Connors explained later, "I was telling John he should forget about the umpire and just play tennis. He agreed, and we played on."

McEnroe has another $5,000 fine hanging over him. That was imposed for "ggravating behavior" during Wimbledon and is the subject of an appeal to be heard by an independent three-man tribunal in New York next Friday.

That fine is not connected with the accumulated fines of $5,000 which lead to automatic suspension.

Connors won his first tournament since last March.

He said, "John played well, and I played well. At times I played unbelievably well. To come back from two sets down and win against someone like John McEnroe must rate pretty high among my performances."

Cardinals 24, Bills 0

Ottis Anderson's 177 yards and two touchdowns and a defense that intercepted four Joe Ferguson passes and recovered two Curtis Brown fumbles carried St. Louis past Buffalo and saddled the Bills with their first shutout in 28 games. Ken Greene had three of the interceptions and one fumble recovery.

Chiefs 23, Oilers 10

Rookie Joe Delaney rushed for a team-record 193 yards — one more than Mike Garrett amassed in a 1967 game against the Jets — and scored a TD and Nick Lowery kicked three field goals in Kansas City's victory over Houston. Earl Campbell had 99 yards rushing for the Oilers. Ken Stabler, replacing starter John Reaves, threw a 50-yard TD pass to Kenny Burrough for Houston's only TD.

Packers 21, Bears 17

David Whitehurst's touchdown passes of 1 and 39 yards to Harlan Huckley and 2 yards to Terrell Middleton carried Green Bay past Chicago. The 39-yarder, the go-ahead score, was set up by safety Mark Murphy's 50-yard interception return. Cornerback Mark Lee intercepted two other passes by Chicago's Vince Evans.

Redskins 30, Giants 27

Mark Moseley's 49-yard field goal in the rain forced overtime and his 48-yarder 3:44 into the extra period gave the Redskins their heart-stopping triumph.

The Giants, trailing 24-20, went ahead 27-24 when reserve quarterback Scott Brunner, replacing the injured Phil Simms, whipped a 27-yard TD pass to rookie wide receiver John Mistler with 45 seconds remaining. Joe Theismann passed for two Washington touchdowns.

Burrus Undergoes Knee Surgery

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina fullback Alan Burrus underwent surgery Sunday to repair his left knee, injured in Saturday's 17-14 victory at Virginia.

Burrus tore two ligaments and three muscles in his knee, which was repaired by Dr. Tim Taft. Taft termed the operation a success, but said Burrus would not be ready for spring practice. He said Burrus should be ready to play by next season.

Burrus, a 5-foot-11, 210-pound junior from Shelby, is the Tar Heels' third-leading rusher with 463 yards. He had started every game in 13-ranked North Carolina's 8-2 season.

Burrus is expected to be replaced in the starting lineup by James Jones, a 6-foot, 199-pound sophomore from Rocky Mount.

North Carolina also lost linebacker Lee Shaffer in the Virginia game. Shaffer, the Tar Heels' leading tackler this season, suffered a broken shinbone in the game. He will be replaced by Chris Ward, a junior from Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Tar Heels finish their season next Saturday at Duke.

Edwards finished three shots ahead of Tom Watson and Jerry Pate, who both shot final round 70s for 279 totals.

Lon Hinkle, who was tied with Edwards after three rounds, had a final-round 74 and was another stroke back at 280.

East Carolina's football season came to an embarrassing halt Saturday afternoon in a game that left the Pirates wondering about the future.

Undoubtedly there will be some changes made in the ECU scheme of things before the next football is snapped in the spring. What those changes are to be will be determined in the next few weeks. Some of them have to be accomplished before recruiting can really get into full swing.

East Carolina will almost definitely make a change in its offense. The wishbone will be junked, probably in favor of the I formation. That in itself will see the Pirates rely on the aerial attack more than they have since the days of Sonny Randle.

There must be some changes made defensively, too. The Pirate pass defense continues to lag behind that of the rushing game. And, to be truthful, it has been hurting since ECU fielded the Wild Dogs under Randle and his staff. Perhaps it was due to the fact that the defense saw more passing in practice. We don't have the answer to that one.

At any rate, there will be changes in those areas.

And with these changes will probably be some changes in the ECU staff. And undoubtedly, there will be some changes in player personnel too. As in any program having its problems, there will be those who look for greener pastures. We wish them well.

One thing we feel sure of. Ed Emory will be back at the helm next year, regardless of any opposition some might bring against him. He has another year left on his contract and those who would cough up the money to buy out his final year might be just as well advised to put their money into the program to help in other ways through the Pirate Club.

East Carolina is currently in the process of hunting for a new chancellor. With that situation such as it is, there actually is no one to fire a coach, or to hire one. And few coaches would be willing to come to East Carolina not knowing who the new chancellor is going to be.

And the school certainly could not afford to wait until that job hunt is completed before finding a new football coach. So that would seem to settle that.

Of one thing we have no doubt: Ed Emory wants to be a winner at East Carolina.

He feels for East Carolina. He is an East Carolina man. There was probably no one hurting any more Saturday afternoon when the ball game was over than Emory was.

But, too, Emory is the man who has to work out the problems. He must reassemble a staff that can get the job done. He must iron out the internal problems that are present. He must recruit people who can do the job.

Next year's schedule is not going to get any easier. While the slate has not been officially released, informed sources tell us that it includes road games against Missouri, Florida State, Temple, N.C. State, William & Mary and West Virginia. Among the home games are dates with Richmond, Western Carolina and Central Michigan, a strong Mid-American Conference team. Anyone who studies football will know that this schedule will be difficult.

The Pirates return a good number of veterans. Only ten seniors graduate, and Emory will have an experienced group to build around.

When he first arrived on the scene at East Carolina, Emory said that it would take five years to get the program where he would like it to be. Year Three is ahead. Whether Emory is back for the next two will be determined by what happens next fall.

Defense Set To Begin In Trial

NEW YORK (AP) — The defense phase is ready to begin at the point-shaving trial of former Boston College basketball player Rick Kuhn and four others accused of fixing games in 1978-79.

Defense witnesses today were expected to include Eagles Coach Tom Davis, a professional oddsmaker from Las Vegas and a subpoenaed Sports Illustrated reporter who wrote about the alleged scheme earlier this year. It was not certain whether Kuhn would testify in his own behalf.

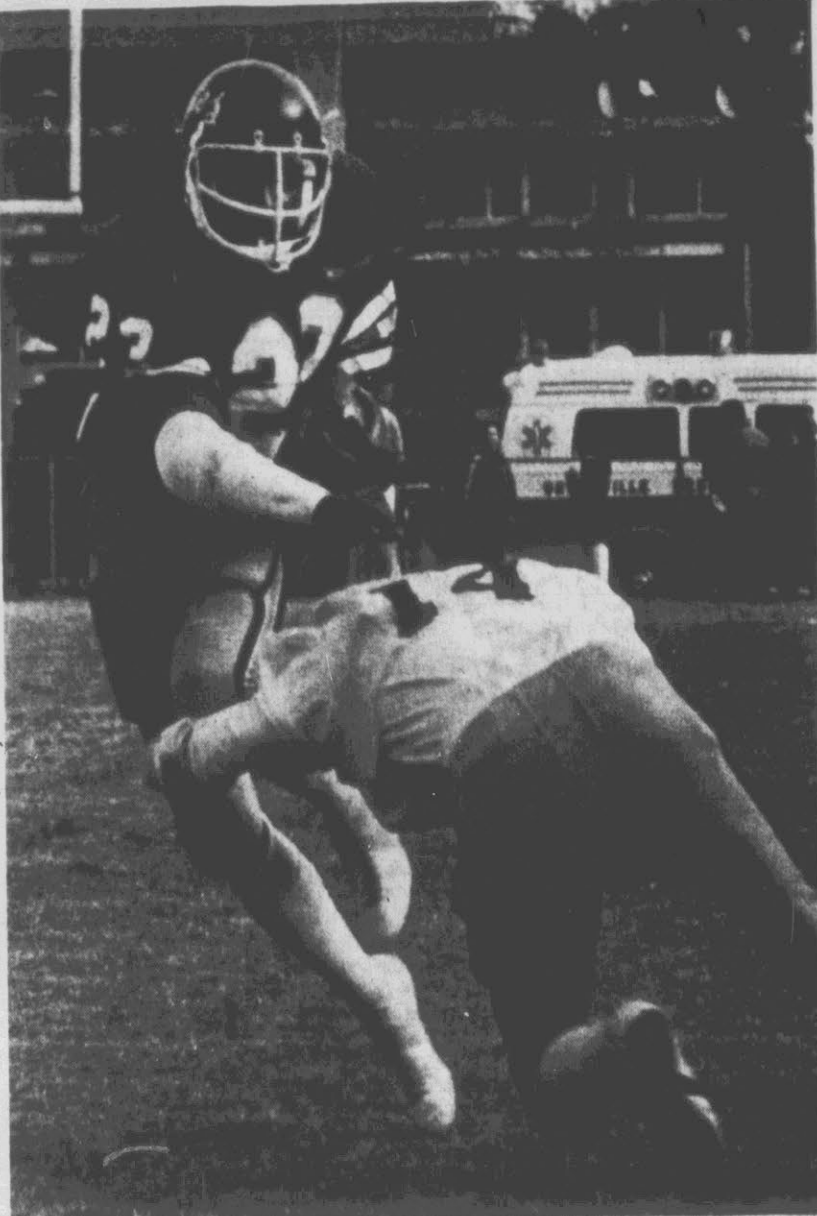

The government alleges that the defendants conspired to shave points in six Eagles' games during the 1978-79 season so their betting syndicate could win big money against bookies' odds.

Kuhn allegedly was paid $2,500 for each game in which he shaved points.

The defense denies the games were fixed and says the government's case is based solely on unreliable testimony from Henry Hill, a participant in the alleged scheme who turned government witness to avoid prosecution on unrelated drug charges.

Accused by the government of racketeering conspiracy and sports bribery are Kuhn, brothers Anthony and Rocco Perla and Paul Mazzel — all of the Pittsburgh area — and James Burke of Queens.

Prosecutor Edward McDonald rested his case in Brooklyn federal court last Monday, the only full day U.S. District Judge Henry Bramwell held court last week. At the defense's request Tuesday, the judge recessed the 8-woman, 4-man jury until today.

Clemson Headed To Orange Bowl?

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Color the No. 2 Clemson Tigers orange.

Yes, it's true the undefeated Tigers wore all-orange uniforms for only the third time in two seasons Saturday as they defeated Maryland 21-7 for only the second time in the last 10 meetings between the two schools.

And it's also true that Clemson's 10 victories this year and seventh outright Atlantic Coast Conference title may have earned them a berth in the Orange Bowl.

"A lot of people seem to believe Clemson is our favorite team," said Steve Hudson, president of the Orange Bowl Committee which will select an opponent for Big Eight Champion Nebraska.

Hudson also repeated to reporters in Miami a variation of that often-repeated statement uttered by different bowl representatives during the past week — they can't definitely say who will be invited until next Saturday. (The National Collegiate Athletic Association could levy a substantial penalty on any school that accepts a bowl bid before Nov. 21.)

But Orange Bowl representatives have seen the Tigers play three times so far this year, and Ed Harkrader, a committee member, said he would be in Columbia, S.C., Saturday for the annual showdown between Clemson and arch-rival South Carolina.

As far as Tiger coach Danny Ford is concerned, a bowl bid is only third on his team's list of priorities.

"When they (Clemson seniors) came back in August, they had their goals set," said Ford. "First, to win the Atlantic Coast Conference title, then to win the state championship, and then to go to a major bowl."

Clemson won the ACC title with another defensive gem, while the Tiger offense continued to sputter.

Clemson's defensive unit — spearheaded by linebacker Jeff Davis, who had 10 unassisted tackles and was in on six others — held the Terrapins to only 13 yards rushing in the first half and 44 for the game.

Maryland went to the air 45 times, completing 18 for 192 yards. But the Tigers batted nine passes away and sacked the quarterback five times.

Meanwhile, Clemson quarterback Homer Jordan finally got his offense cranked up late in the first quarter after two drives died inside the Terp 30 — one on an interception and the other a lost fumble.

With four seconds left in the first period, Jordan deftly lofted a pass into the corner of the end zone over the shoulder of wide receiver Perry Tuttle, who pulled the ball in for the touchdown.

Then Jordan, who connected on 15 of 18 passes in the first half, threw two more scoring passes in the second quarter, a 5-yarder to Tuttle and a 12-yard toss to wide receiver Jerry Gallard.

Former Ranger Infielder Dies Of Lung Cancer At 27

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — The Texas Rangers' first batboy, Steve Macko, has succumbed to "baseball-sized" cancer tumors in his lungs, his father said.

Macko, 27, a utility infielder for the Chicago Cubs, had been treated for cancer since last November, said his father, Rangers equipment manager Joseph Macko.

Steve Macko didn't play in 1981, but appeared to be im-

Bailey Leads 'Pack Past Belgrade Team

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Thurl Bailey scored 26 points and Scott Parzych added 19 to lead North Carolina State to an 85-69 exhibition college basketball victory over Belgrade Red-Star Team of Yugoslavia Saturday night in Reynolds Coliseum.

Derick Whittenburg chipped in 14 points and Sidney Lowe 10 for the Wolfpack. The Wolfpack also won the rebound battle, 39-28, with Parzych and 7-foot-5 Chuck Nevitt grabbing eight each.

N.C. State build an 11-point margin en route to a 42-33 halftime edge and led by as many as 18, at 83-65, with 2:15 left.

proving with chemotherapy, his father said.

However, Steve was hospitalized last Wednesday after playing seven holes of golf, his father said.

"He just couldn't continue," Macko said after his son's death Sunday. "He was short of breath. The doctor diagnosed it as his lungs were leaking air. The tumors on his lungs were baseball-sized."

Steve Macko, a .250 hitter in two seasons with Chicago, spent 1981 on the Cubs' disabled list but when he wasn't taking treatment, he was in uniform.

"He suited out every day," his father said. "He took infield practice and sat on the bench the whole year. They (the Cubs) got permission from other teams because he was on the disabled list all year," his father said.

Steve baffled doctors, his father said, by taking part in spring drills.

"He proved them wrong," Macko said. "He went to spring training and was there a little over two weeks. I don't think he played in any games but he went through some of the spring training conditioning programs."

"All he thought about was baseball. That was his life. He was happy with the Cubs. Those were his buddies and he enjoyed being there."

"He grew up on the field while I was playing," said Macko, who played for the Cubs and the Cleveland Indians in the 1940s and 1950s.

To The Editor:
As far as the Pirate home schedule, I do not think that it could be much better. The home schedule should produce a 4-1 record with powerful Miami coming to town. The road schedule has a lot to be desired. When a team get humiliated as often and as bad as our Pirates have this season, it tends to discourage people from coming out to the home games — not that it is right, but that is just the way it is.

My answer? SCHEDULING!!! Every year should produce the following: four games that you should win; four with colleges with budgets about the size of yours, figuring to win two and lose two; two with budgets slightly larger than yours and that you will be able to be competitive with; and two long shots — if you beat them you will get a lot of recognition, but if you lose, you were supposed to lose. This type of scheduling will provide you with an average of a 7-4 or 8-3 season and prevent you from being humiliated on a regular basis, therefore increasing fan and player interest in your program and its objectives.

ECU's football schedule for 1981 shows the following: three should-be shoo-ins instead of four; three toss-ups with colleges of comparable size athletic budgets instead of four; five long shots instead of two and no schedule with colleges of slightly larger budgets. So right away I see a lot of losses and lop-sided scores. The law of averages would indicate anywhere from a 3-8 to 6-5 season.

I realize that ECU cannot set up tentative schedules with team 10 years from now and know what type of program those schools will have in the future.

I think that this year's schedule is an example of too much too fast.

Our program can never go big time without the dollars that it takes to go big time.

Helen Hayes: Effective Spokeswoman

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Helen Hayes anchors PBS' "No Place Like Home" tonight, a documentary that illustrates America's neglect of its elderly and makes a strong case that cheaper and more dignified alternatives to nursing homes are available for many senior citizens.

"No Place Like Home," produced by WNET-TV in New York, could only be on public television, particularly during the sweeps month of November, when ratings determine the advertising rates of network stations.

Last summer, with viewership down and network series on trial or in reruns, both CBS and ABC had prime-time specials on Social Security, a safer way of dealing with the elderly issue because the subject was then in the news.

So while the networks tackle more sensational topics — ABC's "World News Tonight" had a story on a possible cure for acne last week — it's left to PBS to examine the subject of care for the aging.

The subject won't go away; America is getting older. Miss Hayes says when she was born in 1900, 4 percent of America was over 65. Today it's 11 percent and, by the middle of the next century, the projection is 20 percent.

For the incapacitated or those in need of constant medical attention, hospitals or convalescent homes are the appropriate facilities, although care there can be greatly improved. There is gruesome footage of maltreatment and brutality. "We feel more like inmates than patients," said one nursing home resident.

The PBS program focuses on the desire of many senior citizens for the independence and self-respect that comes with living at home. "Independence is life," says one man.

'Camelot' Is Back With Richard Harris Starring

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Critic
NEW YORK (AP) — "Camelot," first on Broadway in 1960, is back. In a way, it's a revival of a revival and methinks it's time to give this Lerner and Loewe war horse a rest. It looks that weary.

The musical was last here in July 1980, with Richard Burton reprising the magnificent King Arthur he created 20 years earlier. Now his pal, Richard Harris, stars in the 1981 model bowing Sunday.

Directed by Frank Dunlop, who staged the 1980 edition, this "Camelot" drags, to put it mildly. The book always creaked, but this version is so dull you fear the patrons will succumb to Morpheus long before the fair Guenevere yields to handsome Lancelot.

(Not all the woe was on stage at the preview I saw. Late-arriving patrons, 20 clumping down my aisle alone in clusters of two and four, also marred the show. Why these pests aren't barred at the door and handed over to muggers is beyond me.)

Harris — whose Guenevere is played by Meg Bussert, with young, dashing Richard Muenz back in his 1980 role as young, dashing Lancelot — is a fine actor, capable of powerhouse drama and comedy.

But he's not too convincing as Arthur, the ruler who tries to create a world of good, decency and might for right, only to find that not only is that a doomed dream, he's also wound up shy one queen.

Too often he comes across as a lightweight, even vapid king, with little of the majesty, the sense of impending tragedy, that Burton brought to the mythical English world of Camelot.

The man's agony and underlying sorrow is there, when he finally realizes that his Guenevere and his most trusted knight have developed a severe case of love. But there's not much dramatic impact until the end, when tears stream down his royal cheeks.

Then, only the stone-hearted could remain unmoved at Harris' powerful depiction of both hope and tragedy. And leave us note that the preview audience did give him a standing ovation afterwards.

But the moving finale only reminds one of a boxer who ends a dull bout with a flurry of brilliant fisticuffs in hopes that a strong finish obscures an otherwise forgettable bout.

Too bad. Too bad, also, that his singing and that of Miss Bussert (so good in the "Music Man" and "Brigadoon" revivals last season) are done in by a wayward sound system.

Harris, who has a thin singing voice, can barely be heard over the orchestra, likewise the strong-voiced Miss Bussert, who occasionally but not often triumphs over the bandsmen in the pit.

Only Muenz' sturdy baritone rings out, particularly in his fine "If Ever I Should Leave You." Unfortunately, his love-struck Lancelot and Miss Bussert's Guenevere don't give off the romantic sparks you'd expect of a duo who've become quite keen on each other.

Others in the kingdom also are disappointing. Barry Ingham, whose Uriah Heep was the only lively part of last season's ill-fated "Copperfield," is oddly routine here as King Pellinore, Arthur's loyal, slightly dotty ally.

He emerges as sort of a vaguely English edition of Art Carney, while James Valentine's Mervyn gives the old wizard a hammy but ho-hum go. And Richard Backus only is adequately evil as Mordred, the king's trouble-making bastard son.

This "Camelot," on a long U.S. tour before arriving in town, has brought along Desmond Heely's eye-catching sets and costumes — and no doubt much hope that, with Harris in his Broadway debut as Arthur, it can still enchant the multitudes here.

But it seems to h, the "one brief shining moment that was known as Camelot" has just about flickered out with this production.

The show's had a good life, given us some lovely music. But two Broadway revivals of the same musical in less than two years — well, enough, already. It's time for something new.

What other critics said:

Douglas Watt, of the Daily News branded the current production "a bore," being "as ponderous a show as ever," and said the show in general was "too long" and "remains irreparably flawed."

In contrast, New York Times critic Frank Rich zeroed in on Harris, or more accurately the absence of Burton, as the major disappointment in the new production.

Although Rich called Harris' performance "a regal piece of showmanship, he said: "What's fatally missing from this King, however, are sexual pass

Not Mad; Suit Just A Dispute

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Singer Kenny Rogers, embroiled in an impending civil suit against Liberty and Capitol Records, wants it known he is not mad at anyone personally at either company.

"I'm a performer, and this is a dispute between accountants and attorneys," he said. "I have left these matters to my advisors, and I regret they could not resolve these issues without the necessity of taking this to court."

"I've developed a valued artistic and close working relationship with all the people at Liberty and Capitol. We've had great success together and it would bother me greatly if there was any misunderstanding of the issues."

The suit, filed Oct. 22, cites Liberty, Capitol and other defendants for breach of contract and seeks compensatory and punitive damages.

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Acting President Abdus Sattar, running on a platform of peace and stability, won a five-year presidential term today in a landslide victory.

Pavarotti Drew Fans To Screen

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three thousand opera fans, turned away from the box office of San Francisco's opera house for a performance of "Aida," got to see tenor Luciano Pavarotti sing anyway.

The crowd jammed Civic Auditorium, about two blocks away from the War Memorial Opera House, paying $5 to $15 each to view the opera via closed circuit television on a 20-by-30-foot screen.

The telecast also was viewed by audiences in West Germany, Spain, Austria and, by tape delay, in Italy, Britain and Scandinavia.

Kurt Herbert Adler, general director of the San Francisco Opera, said the experiment was being viewed with great interest by operas throughout the world, and he predicted the experiment would be a success.

"Absolutely, because after all, opera is music and view," he said. "A live performance will always have the strongest effect on the public, but I hope people will enjoy this."

Hepatitis Vaccine Approved By FDA

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration today approved the nation's first vaccine against hepatitis B, the debilitating liver disease that strikes hundreds of thousands of health workers, homosexuals, drug addicts and other Americans each year.

The vaccine, which has proved safe and highly effective in clinical trials, is the first ever made directly from human blood and the first new viral vaccine introduced in this country in a decade, said FDA Commissioner Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr.

The vaccine, called Heptavax-B, was developed by Merck Sharp & Dohme of West Point, Pa., and will be on the market in mid-1982.
Dr. Maurice R. Hilleman, Merck's senior vice president for research, and associates began working on the vaccine in 1970 and the company began studying mass production last January. The manufacturing process will take 65 weeks, Merck President John A. Lyons said.

estimates that almost 4,000 chronic carriers die each year from cirrhosis of the liver, or one-third of all non-alcoholic deaths from cirrhosis. Also, 900 contract liver cancer and hepatitis B costs the economy an estimated $750 million a year in medical bills and lost productivity.
A different hepatitis B vaccine has been marketed in limited quantities in France since last May, and experimental vaccines are being used in Japan and the Netherlands, according to Medical World News magazine.

Hayes said hepatitis B exacts a far higher toll in many developing countries, and there are 200 million carriers worldwide.
Hayes noted that liver cancer, which accounts for only 2 percent of the cancers in this country, comprises as much as 20 percent to 40 percent of all cancers in Africa and Asia. He said the new vaccine has "the potential for a dramatic effect" on eradicating disease around the world.

The vaccine has been given to more than 5,000 people in clinical trials since 1975, proving 92 percent effective in one study and 85 percent effective in another involving homosexuals.
The vaccine was an outgrowth of a 1964 discovery by Dr. Baruch S. Blumberg, then at the National Institutes of Health, of a strange protein material in the blood of an Australian aborigine which proved to be related to the hepatitis virus. Blumberg won a Nobel Prize in Medicine in 1976 for his discovery, which paved the way for a blood test to detect hepatitis.

Bishops Tackle Nuclear Policy

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A call for stronger church opposition to nuclear arms and U.S. reliance on them is one of the major issues facing this year's National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

About 250 Roman Catholic bishops from across the nation are attending the conference, which was opening here today. In recent months, more than 30 bishops have addressed the nuclear arms issue, criticizing the buildup in nuclear weaponry and urging that it be halted.

Although no definitive action was planned immediately, sharp debate on the topic is expected after a preliminary report Wednesday from a committee that was authorized a year ago to propose a new church stand.

Some bishops have called U.S. nuclear policy immoral, suggested tax resistance to arms spending, advocated unilateral disarmament and questioned whether possession of nuclear weapons as a deterrent can be morally justified.

That question was raised but not answered by the Second Vatican Council in 1965 in the council's call for "an entirely new attitude" about war in light of the threat posed by the nuclear weapons.

Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia, in congressional testimony for the bishops two years ago, maintained that the U.S. policy of nuclear deterrence can be morally tolerated only if used to achieve progress in arms limitation.

But lack of progress since then toward arms limitation could lead to a different judgment by the bishops on American policy.

However, some bishops have defended the U.S. stockpiling of nuclear weapons, maintaining that it serves as a deterrent to their use by other nations.

Worship — a celebration of Mass — was set for the start of the four-day meeting, followed by various business formalities and budgetary matters.

The bishops also were to take up newly drafted statements on missions and on health and healing.

Prior to the opening at the Capitol Hilton Hotel, about 200 women demonstrated outside, demanding admission of women to the priesthood. With drums and horns, they staged a liturgical re-enactment of Joshua's army bringing down the walls of Jericho to proclaim "justice for women" in the church.

Agenda Is Readied By Planning-Zoning

Seven business items, including six rezoning requests, are on the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission agenda for Tuesday's 8 p.m. meeting at city hall.

The requests were submitted by: Thomas Taft to rezone 15.61 acres at the northwest corner of the intersection of Stantonsburg and Allen roads from RA-20 to Highway Commercial; J. T. Manning to rezone 4.51 acres adjacent to Tucker Farms development and Shenandoah Subdivision from RA-20 to R-6;

LeRoy Cherry to rezone 45 acres west of Memorial Drive and south of Greenville Country Club from RA-20 to R-15 and R-6; Eaton Corp. to rezone 13.13 acres on the east side of Greenville Boulevard NE adjacent to the railroad easement from RA-20 to R-6;

James H. Hudson to rezone 26.26 acres on the eastern side of Greenville Boulevard NE some 716 feet from the right-of-way line of the boulevard from RA-20 to R-6;

The Housing Authority to rezone 5.2 acres on the north side of Arlington Boulevard west of and adjacent to the Boys' Club property from RA-20 to R-6; and by Doctor's Park Apartment group to annex 17.63 acres on the western side of Arlington Boulevard at the Beasley Drive intersection.

Hayes said 200,000 to 300,000 Americans are infected with hepatitis B each year "and 100 to 200 victims die of acute hepatitis. Thousands more suffer from degenerative liver diseases as a result of hepatitis B."

A majority of those infected show no overt signs of the disease, but one-fourth get jaundice, fever, nausea and vomiting, and about 10,000 require hospitalization each year.

Even if they do not fall ill themselves, between 5 percent and 10 percent become carriers of the disease. Hayes said there is "a reservoir of 400,000 chronically infected carriers, many of whom continue to transmit the disease."

Scientists suspect hepatitis B is linked to liver cancer.

Clean-Up After A Storm

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — As the storm that threatened North Carolina's Outer Banks moved north late Sunday, traffic resumed on most of the highways that were flooded and an ocean-going tug continued its pursuit of a runaway barge.

U.S. Coast Guard officials reported Sunday night that a small craft advisory remained in effect from Cape Lookout north through this morning, but seas and winds were subsiding.

Coast Guard spokesman Wayne Lamont said the runaway barge carrying 400 tons of liquid fertilizer posed no immediate threat to navigation or to state beaches. It broke loose from the tug Osprey late Saturday en route to Norfolk, Va. in heavy seas and 40 knot winds.

N.C. Route 12, closed early Sunday from Oregon Inlet south to Buxton because of sand and ocean sater, was reopened later in the day. Meanwhile, ferries from Ocracoke to Swan Quarter and Cedar Island were expected to resume operations today.

The National Weather Service reported that northwest winds of 20 to 30 knots would shift to the west today, while waves that were at 8 feet Sunday were expected to further diminish.

A National Park Service spokesman at the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse said a seawall protecting the 111-year-old structure appeared to be holding up in the rough waves. He said workers continued to pile broken pieces of asphalt and sandbags around the seawall.

Officials elsewhere said it was too early to assess damage to beaches.

"The water is too high to see how much beach has been lost," said Charles C. Compher, spokesman for the Cape Hatteras National Weather Service office.

Overall, beaches to the south fared better. "The erosion isn't as bad as the high water," said Carolina Beach Police Chief R.L. Lewis. "It gets 12-14 inches deep in Canal Street — the main street through town — but it only lasts about 30 minutes when the tide peaks. Then it's gone."

"The people who complain most are the ones who haven't lived here very long," Lewis said.

But at Topsail Beach, Mayor Philip J. Stevens said high tides claimed about 20 feet of beach.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Charles G. Rose III, D-N.C., who led the successful House fight to save the tobacco program, says he may run for governor in 1984.

But the 7th District congressman said his chief concerns are re-election next year and his duties as chairman on the House Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts, which is working to reform the tobacco program.

Rose got some Raleigh exposure Saturday as the featured speaker at a Farm Breakfast sponsored by Rep. Ike Andrews, D-N.C.

TANKER AGROUND — A coastal storm striking eastern Virginia and North Carolina pushed this tanker aground near Cape Charles late Friday night. Saturday night, a barge carrying hot liquid asphalt was torn away from its tug and threatened the Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel until it was stabilized by the Coast Guard early Sunday. (AP Laserphoto)

Japanese War Hero Survivor Learned 'Desperation' Lesson

By ALFRED HAMILTON Jr.
Greensboro Record
Managing Editor

TOKYO, Japan (AP) — The aircraft's single engine howling, the young Zero pilot had just kicked his rudder bar hard left when the two .50-caliber machine gun rounds shattered his canopy, sending shrapnel ricocheting off his goggles frame and into his brain.

The Japanese had seconds before he dived his fighter into a formation of Grumman Avenger bombers 12,000 feet above the coast of Guadalcanal and his 20 mm cannons chopped up two American aircraft.

The two victims exploded at the same instant that a tail gunner in another Avenger gravely wounded the Japanese pilot. Naval Aviation Pilot First Class Saburo Sakai had claimed his 61st and 62nd Allied victims, but had finally become one of the wounded himself.

Sakai, 65 years old now, remembers, "I thought I was paralyzed. What happened after that proves the power of desperate human beings."

The Zero actually saved its unconscious pilot in the first minute by avoiding the Solomon Sea on its own. When Sakai came to, his plane was flying upside down about 300 feet off the water.

With one arm useless, Sakai stanch his wound with his silk scarf. He then flew his fighter more than 550 miles to his Rabaul base on New Britain.

Saburo Sakai, a war hero in a nation that has no war heroes, barely survived the mistake over Guadalcanal.

During an interview in his home recently, an interpreter said, "Sakai-san said he was confident that he would never be defeated by another fighter plane. It was the bombers, and their guns, that he worried about."

A handsome man, only Sakai's poor right eye and a slight limp suggest his history. Now he has a management consulting business, based on principles of aerial combat, that is booming.

But Sakai's view of life was forged between December 1941 and August of 1942, nine months in which he flew more than 200 combat missions over New Guinea, knocking down 60 Americans in man-to-man combat.

"The single reason for my success is luck," he said. "Human beings tend to be optimistic and we always think in terms of tomorrow. I always thought my turn to die was coming but never today, always tomorrow."

Horribly wounded over Guadalcanal, Sakai spent much of the war's last two years instructing pilots, sending them into increasingly hopeless combat.

When he returned to Tokyo, Sakai did not receive medals or ticker tape parades — his exploits pushed into the darkness of defeat. "Japan had lost everything and being a hero had no value; the priority was to survive," he said.

An Associated Press reporter named Fred Saito eventually "discovered" Sakai and collaborated with Martin Caidin and Sakai on "Samurai," a book written in 1957.

"A few people began to ask about me after that," Sakai recalled. And while the pilot's life renewed itself, the Japan that once swept the Pacific in khaki began sweeping the world in business suits.

Sakai learned to fly in 1937, after he was admitted to the Navy Fliers School in Tsuchiura, one of 70 selected from 1,500 applicants. It was harsh training, producing aviation prodigies who could snatch house flies from the air and spot stars during daylight.

His combat began in southeastern China in 1938 where he encountered a Russian-made fighter in his Mitsubishi Type 96 fighter.

He recalled, "I went out of my mind when I saw him and forgot everything I had been taught. I thought my heart was going to burst when I opened fire on him." He left his formation and shot down the aircraft. Thinking he would be praised for his first kill, the excited pilot touched down at his Kiukang base. "I was scolded for clumsy flying and slapped in the face."

Never again was Sakai accused of sloppy flying. But the punishment and the mid-1941 introduction of the Zero helped prepare the Kyushu farm boy for his destiny.

Built of aluminum alloy, the Mitsubishi A6M2 "Zero-Sen" Navy Type 0 Fighter Model 21 had a 14-cylinder radial engine and a top speed of 332 mph. Two .25-caliber machine guns were mounted forward of the cockpit and a 20mm cannon was on the leading edge of each wing.

Sakai said in 1957, "The Zero excited me as nothing else had ever done before. We could hardly wait to meet enemy planes"

The first chance was Dec. 8, 1941, as Sakai's squadron sat beside their planes in Formosa, waiting to surprise a U.S. base in the Philippines, simultaneously with another attack the pilots had not been told about. A heavy ground fog closed them in while aircraft from other carriers shattered placid Pearl Harbor 5,000 nautical miles to the east.

"My reaction to the news of Pearl Harbor is difficult to relate," he remembers. "We were all very anxious to fly that night and wanted to be the first to attack."

In daily missions from Lae, Sakai and a group of four other handpicked pilots accounted for the loss of more than 210 U.S. aircraft. Only Sakai, with his 64 combat victories, lived to see Japan weep over Emperor Hirohito's surrender announcement on Aug. 15, 1945.

"You can count on one hand the number of my flying mates who survive. We were close in Lae; flying the way we did made us loyal and considerate of each other," he said quietly.

"At the beginning (of the war)," he recalled, "we always had the feeling that the Americans would come back, that Japan had no chance. We thought the government had some special strategy, but it turned out that their brains were no different from ours."

His book recounts outrage at being asked to fly in a kamikaze attack, months before the suicide dive became official strategy at Okinawa. He wrote, "The ancient words returned to me, 'A Samurai lives in such a way that he will always be prepared to die.'"

"The Samurai code, however, never demanded that a man be constantly prepared to kill himself."

Sakai nonetheless made his kamikaze flight with three other pilots but a furious storm 400 miles from his Iwo Jima airstrip forced them back to base. They were welcomed home, even by the officer who ordered them out.

Sakai snapped his fingers and left the room. He returned with his battered leather flying helmet, its right goggle frame twisted where the .50 caliber rounds shattered his forehead in 1942.

In his other hand was the silk muffler he used to save himself from bleeding to death on the long flight home from Guadalcanal. It is falling apart now.

He twisted a bit off the scarf and offered it to his visitor. "With this in your pocket," he said, "I'm sure you can survive any adversity in life."

Demos 'Use' GOP Letter

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee is using a five-year-old remark attributed to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to thwart Republican congressional ambitions while it boosts its own.

The quote, which links the federal government with several forms of unsavory activities, is used in connection with a national direct-mail appeal for contributions by the DCCC.

Following a letter from Rep. Morris Udall, D-Ariz., warning that a "right-wing Republican machine" is trying to capture the U.S. House of Representatives, the committee lists Helms and his quote, with the eye-catching words capitalized.

"...your tax dollars are being used to pay for grade school courses that teach our children that CANNIBALISM, WIFE SWAPPING, and the MURDER OF INFANTS and the ELDERLY are acceptable behavior."

Evan Zeppos, a DCCC spokesman in Washington, said Friday the letter was one of several mailed in a fund-raising effort that will include 3 million pieces of mail.

The congressional committee's letter is only the most recent case of Democrats using Helms as a way to solicit money from Democrats. The Democratic National Committee has referred to Helms in six of eight fund-raising letters this year. The Raleigh Times reported Friday. "A lot of these far-right groups and their supporters have made some pretty outrageous statements when people weren't paying much attention to what they say," Zeppos said.

The source for the quote, he added, was a direct-mail letter signed by Helms in 1976 in an effort to raise money for the National Conservative Political Action Committee.

Terry Dolan, chairman of NCPAC in Arlington, Va., said in a telephone interview that the quotation was correct and the letter was signed by Helms. But he said he didn't know whether Helms wrote it or someone at NCPAC did.

Dolan said the comment was directed at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare for advocating a type of sociology course for public schools.

"It was a disgrace," Dolan said. "A bunch of bumbling bureaucrats were teaching 6th and 7th graders that wife swapping, cannibalism and leaving elderly on the cold mountainsides to die was, as they put it, 'acceptable forms of social behavior in certain societies.'"

Asked if he thought the quote was surprising, Fuller said, "That's the way these pros write these things, sort of scary. I'd suppose the liberal side is no worse than the conservative side."

Helms' administrative aide, Clint Fuller, said Helms was unavailable for comment and that he didn't know whether Helms had actually written the statement.

FOCUS

Labor Centennial

As the AFL-CIO holds its centennial convention today, delegates may have more reason than ever to heed the words of their founder Samuel Gompers: "The worst enemy of the working man is a business that doesn't make a profit." Gompers was talking about workers losing their jobs, but today even more may be at stake. Through their union and company pension funds American workers are estimated to own more than one-third of the stock in American industry. By the turn of the century their share of ownership of American business may exceed two-thirds. Though few people may think of today's AFL-CIO meeting this way, it may be a meeting of the most powerful group of capitalists in America.

DO YOU KNOW — Who is the president of the AFL-CIO?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Nelson Rockefeller won the 1958 New York gubernatorial election.

N.C. Weekend Toll Is Eight

By The Associated Press
An Elizabethtown man died Sunday evening in Bladen County when his car left the road, overturned and crushed him, the North Carolina Highway Patrol reported Sunday, bringing the weekend death toll to eight.

A Highway Patrol spokesman said the death of James Perkins, 39, brings this year's traffic toll to 1,269, compared with 1,323 for the same period last year.

Alan Dale Powers, 18, of Chesapeake, Va., was killed Saturday in Dare County about 10 p.m. as he was walking along U.S. 158 and was struck by a car attempting to pass another vehicle.

Ferry Lee Williams, 50, of Winston-Salem, was killed at 5:35 p.m. Saturday in Winston-Salem when his motorcycle ran off a city street and struck a median.

Georgia Lee Kinsey, 21, of Goldsboro, was killed about 2 a.m. Saturday in Wake County on a rural road.

Troopers said she was a passenger in a car traveling at high speed when it ran off the road, crossed back, hit a ditch and overturned several times.

Chasteen Massey, 59, of Gastonia, died shortly after midnight Saturday after she lost control of her car, ran off the road and hit a tree, the patrol reported. The accident occurred in Gaston County on a rural road just north of Dallas.

Deborah Church Ashley, 23, of Millers Creek, was killed at 8:50 p.m. Friday, south of Wilkesboro, when a car she was riding in was struck from behind by another car traveling at high speed, the patrol said.

Lissie Evers, 58, of Mount Airy, was struck by a car as she attempted to cross Highway 601-S at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Mount Airy.

John W. Varnell, 61, of Elm City, died Friday night when he pulled out from a private drive into the path of another car on a rural road, the patrol reported.

Sue To Block District Plan

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A lawsuit challenging reapportionment plans enacted by the mostly Democratic General Assembly will be filed early this week by the state Republican Party, GOP leaders said Sunday.

"The papers are all drawn," said state Sen. T. Cass Ballenger of Hickory. "The suit will be filed soon, maybe Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday this week."

The suit is aimed at forcing reapportionment through single-member districts. Such a change would mean that the state constitution's ban on splitting counties when legislative districts are redrawn would have to be invalidated.

State GOP chairman David T. Flaherty said single-member districts constitute the party's only goal in the suit.

The state Republican Party's policy-making Central Committee unanimously approved the proposal Sunday, as committee members met in a special session at the party's state headquarters in North Raleigh.

The party's attorneys say the suit must be filed on behalf of individual citizens, not the party itself. Ballenger said he didn't know who the specific plaintiffs would be.

The attorneys will make a last-minute decision on whether to file the suit in a state court or in federal court, he said.

"I don't know where it will be filed," Ballenger said. "Ideally, what could be better than (a suit filed by) a black Republican in Mecklenburg County?"

One suit is already pending against a state Senate re-districting plan enacted in June and a House plan approved during a special legislative session in October. It was filed by the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund Inc. and is being handled by a Charlotte civil rights law firm.

Meanwhile, lawmakers are awaiting word from the U.S. Justice Department's Office of Civil Rights to determine whether the redistricting plans comply with the federal Voting Rights Act.

Answer to Saturday's puzzle.

NEITHER BIRD NOR BEAST — What appears to be an unusual organism being hatched from an egg is actually a photograph of a group of glass beads made with the benefit of a scanning electron microscope. The photograph is the work of microscopist Bob Woods of the Engineering Research Center at Princeton, N.J. The image was magnified 900 times. (AP Laserphoto)
