Senate Agrees Cut On Reagan's Terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave President Reagan a victory early today by agreeing to about $3.3 billion in new cuts in domestic programs as it passed a stopgap spending bill that would keep the government operating after midnight tonight.

Passage came just before 7 a.m. EST on a 69-26 vote that ended a rare all-night session. The key was a carefully crafted compromise amendment by Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., that incorporated the new budget cuts.

A House-Senate conference committee will have to work out differences between the House and Cenate-passed versions. The House refused to make the cuts Reagan wanted in its bill, but House Republican leaders are hopeful that can be changed.

Any compromise bill worked out by conferees must be approved by the House and Senate before it can be sent to Reagan.

If a bill is not passed by midnight tonight, most of the government will technically run out of money. Except for its own operations, Congress has not passed any of the regular spending bills for fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1.

Baker told his weary colleagues early today that "the president will sign the bill" if it would cut more than $3 billion, on an annual basis, from domestic programs while sparing the Defense Department.

Before the marathon session began, Baker warned that without the cuts, Reagan "would undoubtedly veto" a bill that did not embody his proposed cuts.

Republicans and Democrats in both houses said Reagan had enough support to sustain a veto.

Exempted from the Senate's cuts — which average 4 percent in hundreds of programs — are the Pentagon, revenue sharing to the states, the judiciary and benefit programs such as food stamps and Medicare.

The Senate specified that no individual program may be reduced by more than 5 percent and gave the president flexibility in determining how reductions will be applied.

In congressional business Thursday:

—The House Ways and Means Committee approved a bill that could require the government to pay court costs of up to $5 0,000 when a person wins a tax case and a judge concludes that the Internal Revenue Service was trying to harass or browbeat the taxpayer.

—The House passed and sent to the Senate legislation that would partially deregulate the inter-city bus industry. The measure falls short of what the Reagan administration has requested but, rural lawmakers say, could hurt service to small towns.

—Opponents of the special financing package for the Alaska natural gas pipeline lost House and Senate votes on their proposal to strip language that would force homeowners to begin paying construction costs before the pipeline is complete.

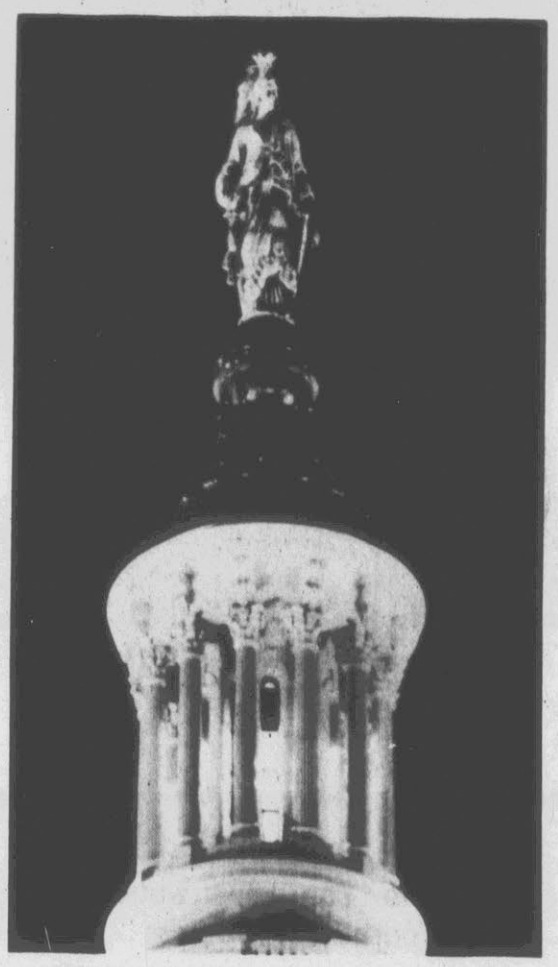

—After meeting with senior Republicans on the House Interior Committee, Interior Secretary James G. Watt said he would hold public hearings and consult with Congress before allowing any oil drilling in federal wilderness preserves.

—Handing organized labor a political victory, the Senate Labor Committee rejected a motion to recommend Senate confirmation of John R. Van de Water, Reagan's nominee to chair the National Labor Relations Board. Unions claim the Los Angeles labor consultant is pro-management.

—The House passed a resolution authorizing U.S. participation in the multinational peacekeeping force for the Sinai. A conference committee may have to work out differences between it and a Senate-passed Sinai resolution.

—The House Foreign Affairs Committee voted to permit the sale of 40 F-16 jet fighters to Pakistan. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved the deal earlier this week.

—House-Senate conferees set the stage for a final vote on a $12.5 billion spending bill for water and energy projects by cutting the measure to within $148 million of Reagan's September budget recommendation.

INTO THE NIGHT — The top of the dome of the U.S. Capitol is lit through the evening Thursday, signifying that a body of Congress is still in session to work on a stopgap spending bill. (AP Laserphoto)

Dawkins Said Resigning Vocational Center Post

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Joe Gantz, board chairman for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, said today that Howard G. Dawkins, executive director of the ECVC for the past 13 yesrs, has resigned effective Dec. 31.

Gantz also said that completion of the center's $5.1 million, 89,000-square-foot housing and recreation facility, now 80 percent complete, has been rescheduled "until the Capital Fund Campaign" is complete.

According to Gantz, Dawkins, 65, tendered his resignation in October. "The resignation was accepted with regret and appreciation for his years of service," Gantz said.

"Dawkins' retirement was submitted upon his doctors advice following recent illnesses involving heart problems, including by-pass surgery," Gantz explained.

The ECVC and the counties of Pitt and Martin, which it serves, "are deeply indebted to Howard Dawkins for his long tenure and outstanding service to the handicapped citizens of our area, and recognize that this workshop has been recognized as one of the largest and most effective workshops in the nation," Gantz said.

Retirement services for Dawkins will be scheduled at a later date, the board chairman noted.

Gantz, who said that a search committee has begun interviewing candidates for Dawkins' successor, said he expects a final selection will be made shortly.

Dawkins is expected to serve the center in an advisory capacity following his retirement, according to other board members.

The fund-raising campaign, designed to obtain some $1.2 million in local funds to match $3.9 million in federal and state grants for construction of the housing and recreation facility, is about 85 percent complete, according to Gantz.

Construction of the new facility started in August 1980, and completion was scheduled for February, 1982.

However, Gantz said the board decided Tuesday to reschedule the completion date at the suggestion of the contractors. He said the "contractors have suggested that ... they are in a position to hold final completion without additional costs or damage to work already caccomplished."

"We have enough money to keep going," according to Gantz, "but are concerned that if we do, and run short, it might cause more problems and cost more money."

Rather than stop work completely on the facility, both architects and contractors termed the completion reschedule a "slow down" or "cut back on progress."

Gantz said that Capital Fund chairman Morris Brody and Dawkins are "working diligently" to complete the campaign and said he anticipates work to be resumed shortly.

Gantz noted that some $350,000 is still needed to complete the fund-raising effort.

"I'm optimistic," Brody said of raising the funds still needed. "This whole thing has been built on faith. We haven't finished yet.

"The end goal of the whole drive is to provide better

Atlanta's Accused Killer Leaves Courtroom Appearing Ill; Recess

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A hearing on a motion to suppress evidence in the murder trial of Wayne B. Williams was recessed briefly today as Williams rushed from the courtroom, apparently ill. He returned a few minutes later and the hearing resumed.

Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper called a 10-minute recess as marshals escorted Williams out just after the 9 a.m. hearing began. Cooper did not explain the recess, but Williams looked ill.

Fulton County Sheriff Leroy Stynchcombe said Williams "said he had to go to the bathroom to vomit. He said the courtroom was too warm."

Williams was escorted to a restroom but returned to court a few minutes later, the sheriff said. "He's all right now," he added.

Williams, 23, is scheduled to go on trial next month on charges of murdering two of the 28 young Atlanta blacks whose slayings are being investigated by a special police task force.

At issue at today's hearing was a defense attorneys' motion to suppress evidence obtained in a June 22 search of Williams' home. The attorneys contend the search was done without a valid search warrant and without probable cause.

The defense motion was prepared by Alvin M. Binder, an expert on search and seizure law who recently joined lead attorney Mary Welcome and attorney Clifton Bailey on the defense team.

The search occurred at the red brick home in northwest Atlanta where Williams lived with his parents until he was arrested June 21. Dozens of officers who took part in the 10½-hour search combed the house from attic to basement and removed enough material, most in sealed paper bags, to fill two vans.

The hearing is the third challenge to the way police obtained evidence against Williams, who is charged with killing Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21.

Cooper held two previous hearings and denied defense motions to suppress evidence. He ruled that statements taken from Williams on May 22 and evidence taken in a June 3 search of his home were obtained legally and can be used at Williams' trial, which is scheduled to begin Dec. 28.

Kremlin Softens Its Attack Against Reagan Arms Proposal

MOSCOW (AP) — A top Kremlin spokesman expressed skepticism about President Reagan's new arms talks proposal, but said he would welcome a shift from Washington's previous "warlike" policies.

"If in fact Reagan wants to be a peacemaker after issuing warlike statements since taking office, then we can welcome this as a turn for the better," said Vadim Zagladin, a member of the policy-making Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party and first deputy chief of the committee's international department.

Zagladin, who is considered close to President Leonid I. Brezhnev, told a news conference that Reagan's call to reduce nuclear and conventional forces in Europe and the world was not clear, but that Soviet negotiators would respond to more detailed proposals.

American and Soviet representatives are slated open talks in Geneva on Nov. 30 on limiting medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Zagladin said Reagan's remarks "were obviously an attempt to make the negotiations more difficult."

Although skeptical of Reagan's call for bilateral disarmament in Europe, Zagladin expressed a more moderate view than earlier comments by the Soviet media.

Western analysts believed that the news conference, which was organized on extremely short notice, was apparently designed to counter favorable European response to Reagan's speech before Brezhnev's scheduled departure Sunday to meet with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in Bonn.

Soviet newspapers adopted a much tougher tone.

"A smokescreen is being set so that the NATO program could be ultimately implemented under the cover of it," charged Sovetskaya Rossiya, the newspaper of the Communist Party Central Committee. NATO plans to deploy 5 72 new U.S. cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe, beginning in 1983.

Reagan's speech Wednesday to the Washington Press Club proposed foregoing deployment of the new U.S. missiles in return for dismantling Soviet SS-20, SS-4 and SS-5 nuclear-tipped missiles.

A commentary by Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Reagan's speech had not fooled "objective observers in the United States."

Correspondent N. Kurdyumov, in a Pravda commentary entitled "propagandistic trick," said American commentators viewed the Reagan proposal as an acknowlegement that the previous "bellicose anti-Soviet policy is leading it to lose friends ... in Europe and is encouraging an increase in anti-nuclear and anti-American sentiment."

Pravda repeated the Soviet line that Reagan's plan "skipped over such facts as nuclear warheads on American submarines as well as nuclear arms delivery systems such as U.S. bombers based in Europe."

Komsomolskaya Pravda, the paper of the Communist Party youth organization, said the Reagan opening was "alas, just an awkward and absurd attempt to achieve by deceptive means a military superiority and to sharply violate the existing balance of forces in the world in favor of the United States."

The United States and its NATO allies contend that the Soviets have achieved substantial nuclear superiority in Europe.

The Soviets claim there is a "rough nuclear parity" in Europe. They say to dismantle their SS-series missiles would leave NATO with superior nuclear strength.

Free Exercise?

There are places people can go to lose weight, but you have to pay money. Is there anywhere you can go to exercise that is free? A.D.

There is no organized program that we can find. However, the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department has an inexpensive program for men and women.

The exercise program for women ($4 for 12 weeks), meets Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m. or on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday at 10 a.m. at the Elm Street center. The men's program — cross-court basketball — meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 5:30 to 6:40 p.m. and costs $4 for 12 weeks. If you are male and over 30 years old, it's Tuesday and Thursday from 5:30 to 6:40 p.m. with a $3 charge.

There's also a jogging and exercise trail at Green Springs Park which is free.

Walesa Asks World For Emergency Food Aid

By W. JOSEPH CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa appealed today to the "whole world" for emergency food aid to get Poland through the winter. He said shortages could spark dangerous popular outbursts of anger.

Walesa's appeal was at first addressed to Western European trade unionists, but he said later he meant to make his request to the entire world.

Walesa said food shortages in Poland "can become a source of dangerous social tensions and (provoke) spontaneous outbursts of popular anger which may upset the prospects of economic and political stabilization in Poland."

His letter did not specify the foods required. The most acute shortages are of meat and meat products, butter, cheese and other dairy products.

"Since the initial moments of its existence, Solidarity has enjoyed the backing of the working people of the entire world," Walesa said.

"We are convinced that we can lead the country out of crisis," he said. "We are positive that Solidarity knows no borders."

The Polish news agency PAP reported, meanwhile, that about 800 military squads sent to Polish towns and villages one month ago were to begin returning to their barracks today, but will "remain in constant readiness to enter into action again if necessary."

The three- and four-man squads, sent to 2,000 towns, were to monitor local officials' actions, help move food and fuel to market and "solve local conflicts." An unspecified number of soldiers are remaining in the field, the announcement said.

In talks Thursday with the government, Solidarity urged creation of an independent council of experts to supervise the overhaul of Poland's debt-ridden economy.

"It would consist of individuals representing a high degree of expertise and of impeccable honesty who would be willing to drag this country out of economic chaos," said union spokesman Marek Brunne.

While not rejecting the proposal at the meeting Thursday, the government said it believes "conditions already exist for a wide-ranging consultation on all important existing economic conditions," the official PAP news agency said.

The Communist government and the 9.5 million-member union opened discussions on Solidarity's role in rehabilitation of an economy beset by years of mismanagement and faulty planning, acute shortages of food, raw materials and machinery, falling production, strikes and a $27-billion debt to Western banks and governments.

PAP said the talks were held in a "calm, matter-of-fact atmosphere"

Think-Tank Nuke Count Varies From Others

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet-led Warsaw Pact has a distinct nuclear advantage in Europe over NATO, but the edge is not "on the order of 6-to-1" as President Reagan says, according to the International Institute for Strategic Studies.

By its way of counting nuclear arms, the advantage is closer to a maximum of 3-to-1, says the IISS, a London-based independent research organization.

The Soviet Union, in yet a third version, said after Reagan's speech Wednesday that there is approximate parity in nuclear weaponry in Europe.

No one is necessarily completely wrong. The argument is over how to assess the arsenals.

The IISS think tank, which deals with international security and arms control in the nuclear age, approaches its assessment from a different angle than Reagan or the Soviets.

On bare figures, the institute includes British and French nuclear weapons, in addition to U.S. weapons in Europe. Reagan did not include British and French weapons. The Soviets did.

The institute, which is not supported by any government and is financed largely by private foundations, goes beyond a simple count of nuclear systems and warheads, and attempts to show what warheads would actually "arrive" on targets in the event of all-out war.

The institute uses a formula that takes into account known warhead inventories and applies factors including the actual availability of warheads for deployment when war breaks out, and their survivability and capacity for penetrating to enemy targets.

The implication is that there could be a significant gap between weapons on inventory and those that make it to targets.

In its latest assessment of the balance of "Long and Medium Range Nuclear Systems for the European Theater," the institute concludes:

"Without Poseidon being included on the NATO side, the Warsaw Pact overall advantage in arriving warheads is about 3.27:1; with Poseidon that advantage falls to about 1.5 7:1."

There are some 400 U.S. Poseidon submarine missile warheads earmarked for NATO use.

The assessment was published Sept. 24 on the basis of figures available up to July. The figures used are obtained by the institute directly from governments and from other unspecified informed sources.

The Warsaw Pact advantage increased slightly since last year's IISS assessment — and has grown further in the past four months — since the Soviets are believed to be putting one additional SS-20 triple-headed missile launcher into place each week.

In his speech Wednesday, Reagan set the opening U.S. negotiating position for European nuclear arms limitation talks with the Soviets that begin Nov. 30 in Geneva, Switzerland.

He offered to withdraw NATO's decision to base 5 72 new U.S. cruise and Pershing II missiles in five Western European countries in 1983, if the Soviets dismantle their comparable weapons, approximately 600 intermediate-range missiles — SS-20s, SS-4s and SS-5 s. This trade-off is the so-called "zero option."

During his speech, Reagan displayed a chart said to show that the Soviets enjoyed an "overwhelming advantage" of about 6-to-1 over U.S. forces in Europe in nuclear "delivery vehicles."

On Thursday, Reagan administration officials explained that the ratio was 3,725 to 5 60. The number of Soviet "vehicles" included some aircraft and missiles of relatively short range, and the number for the U.S. side did not include British and French bombers and missiles.

Commenting on the Reagan speech, the Soviet news agency Tass reported another set of figures, saying the Soviets had 986 "delivery systems" for medium-range nuclear weapons, against 9 7 5 for the U.S.-led NATO forces.

Moscow's count of Soviet forces apparently included both middle-range missiles and middle-range bombers. Its count of NATO forces included about 25 0 British and French missiles and bombers.

It also included what it said were 700 medium-range American warplanes based in Europe. But American military officials say the United States has only 410 such planes in Europe.

The London institute emphasizes the complexity and dangers of trying to make exact assessments of the balance of forces in Europe. Its presentation, the institute says, "cannot therefore be taken as a scenario of a European nuclear war. Rather it seeks to assess the question of theater nuclear forces from the perspectives of the respective military planners who need to be able to count on the functioning of a certain number of delivery systems."

BRUNCH FARE

Grapefruit
Ham Apple Rings
Rice Muffins Coffee
RICE GEMS

They have delicious flavor and are an attractive gold color.

1½ cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons butter
1 large egg
1 cup milk
1 cup cold cooked converted-type rice

In a medium bowl stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. With a pastry blender, cut in the butter until particles are fine. In a small bowl beat egg until foamy; add milk and beat until blended; add to flour mixture with rice. Stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Fill muffin-pan cups (each 1-3rd cup capacity) ½ to 2-3rds full. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 25 minutes. Remove from pans at once and serve hot. Tops will be rounded but muffins will be only about an inch high. Makes 12.

Dear Abby

Outlook Turns Pain Into Joy

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: "Sue in San Francisco" wrote: "Recently, I received a phone call from the 35-year-old illegitimate daughter of my deceased husband. She said she was anxious to know something about her father. She knew before contacting me that she had been conceived within six months after my marriage and that the affair with her mother, of which I had no knowledge, was an ongoing thing since before our marriage. She also knew that her father had died some years ago."

Sue closed with, "I don't need this woman to enter my life as a constant reminder of my late husband's infidelity. Abby, I beg you to ask those who seek their natural parents to please consider the heartaches they can bring to others in order to satisfy their own curiosity."

I had been married only seven months when my husband told me that his son by another woman had just been born. I recall that I literally "froze." But the next morning I made up my mind that I would acknowledge that child so he could bear our surname. (My mother-in-law's advice was, "Leave him in the street where he belongs.")

Although today my husband is in a mental hospital and will not get better, our own daughter, 9, and I make twice-yearly visits to her stepbrother of whom she is very proud. He has also brought me a great deal of joy, and his own mother has done a splendid job of bringing him up. Sign me . . .

DEAR STEPMOTHER: There must be a special place in heaven reserved for people like you, but I hope you don't have to wait that long for your reward. Bless you for your generous, understanding heart.

DEAR ABBY: A while back someone wrote in asking if pigs made good pets. May I add my 2 cents' worth? Pigs may be cute when they are little piglets, but when they grow up to be hogs, they are mean and dangerous. And they will eat anything! I know. My husband (at 71) was knocked down by a sow. He was alone at the time, and the fall rendered him unconscious, and before anyone could get to him the sow had killed him. Once a sow tastes blood, she continues to eat and there is no stopping her.

All farmers know this, Abby, and they never turn their backs on a hog or sow. I hope you print this letter. It may save someone from going through what I experienced.

Quality Education Maintained In Russia

Dr. Hagop S. Pambookian, professor of psychology at Elizabeth City State University, is a former Senior Fulbright Fellow who served a year recently as a lecturer on educational and developmental psychology at the Soviet Union's Yerevan State University in Armenia.

Based on his observations there, he said that the recently formed National Commission on Excellence in Education should carefully study the Soviet Union's success in maintaining quality education for all its children.

"The external and internal structure of the Soviet Union's educational system is undergirded by a strong national commitment and uniformity," he said. "What is observed and practiced in one school, district or state is done throughout the nation. In the move to achieve national goals, there is no such thing as local or state autonomy.

"Schools begin operating for everyone on Sept. 1. And what a beginning it is for all first graders, who are welcomed and offered bouquets of flowers by school administrators and escorted to their classrooms by the seniors!"

Except for three holiday periods, the Soviet schools continue the year of operation through May or June, depending on the class levels of the students. For instance, students in grades one through seven complete their studies for the year on May 30; eighth graders finish on June 10, while 10th graders (seniors) remain in school until June 25.

Ten years of public education is compulsory. Students are required to attend classes six days a week — from Monday through Saturday. Students in grades eight through 10 are given four hours of homework each day.

He said there are more than 120,000 creches (day nurseries) in the country and kindergartens for 13 million children under seven and more than 183,000 general education, specialized secondary and vocational schools for 56 million boys and girls over seven.

He said thousands of extracurricular establishments provide all sorts of facilities for the development of school children, the enhancement and strengthening of their personal interests, abilities and talents. In an effort to "keep young children off the streets and from engaging in folly or idleness," the Soviet Union provides numerous facilities and outside-the-classroom programs that reinforce learning and development. Among these are such establishments as Centers for Young Engineers, Stations of Young Technicians, Young Pioneer Palaces and Houses, Young Pilots' and Cosmonauts' Clubs, Young Pioneer Camps, and Stations of Young Naturalists, to name a few. In addition, there is the Annual All-Union events such as "The Child's Week," "the Competition in Space Engineering and Rocketry," observation of "The Week of Children's Books," "The Exhibition of Amateur Art" and the competition in "Creativity in Technical Fields."

There are extended day schools for all pupils in grades one through eight. Such schools make the after-school education and recreation of working parents' children possible. Special classes are scheduled for these boys and girls under the supervision of regular teachers or tutors who get extra pay for this work.

He concluded, "All the schools and the extracurricular establishments provide opportunities for the Soviet children for 'the comprehensive development of their abilities and inclinations' i.e. for the acquisition of useful skills and actualization of individual potential at a very early stage in the development process. Moreover, the development of desirable social behavior, concern for others, respect for parents and adults, and appreciation of knowledge are stressed. Getting a well-rounded education is not a hopeless dream and few of the young of the USSR are ill-educated or ill-equipped for the exigencies of life."

Phone Records Public

Insurance Commissioner John Ingram and The News and Observer of Raleigh have, on occasion, not seen eye to eye on his qualifications for office. They seem to have reached the pinnacle this week.

The newspaper, which has a tradition of pointing up what it considers to be questionable expenditures of taxpayers' money by public officials, reported that Ingram's office made 90 telephone calls during July and August to Ingram's vacation home in Myrtle Beach. The newspaper said Ingram and his staff have refused to allow reporters access to telephone records for earlier months.

Now Ingram publicly accused the newspaper of "political harassment," "suppressing the news" and lying. He said his staff has expended $2,000 in time spent on responding to the newspaper's reporters on the telephone calls and other subjects.

All of this points up two main points: Ingram says the newspaper's questions are unreasonable; the newspaper says Ingram has been unreasonable in not making public records available.

There may be merit to each claim. But the telephone calls, at least, are public records and, by law, should be made available. Ingram is not restricted in the vacation time available to him. He only stands to lose if he persists in carrying on a personal attack by refusing to make the records public.

Never Quite 'Doomsday'

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — It always sounds like doomsday — the government is going to run out of money and shut down at the stroke of midnight because Congress hasn't passed the appropriations to keep it going. That never quite happens.

And this season's rendition is likely to run to form, with dire forecasts but no lasting disruptions of the federal machine.

Appropriations have lapsed in the past, once for a 12-day span, without anything really stopping. During that lengthy hiatus, two years ago, some government checks were delayed, some paydays postponed and some programs stalled. Then Congress acted and everything went back to normal.

There is one unusual feature in the current appropriations dispute between President Reagan and Congress. It is about appropriations.

Spending stalemates in the past usually have been triggered by congressional disagreement over emotional side issues. There have been hangups on such issues as school busing, abortion and a disputed congressional pay raise. Two decades ago, appropriations were stalled because two crusty committee chairmen couldn't agree whether they'd hold meetings on the Senate or the House side of the Capitol. They compromised and met in the middle of the building.

This time the dispute is over a stopgap spending measure Reagan says would bust his austerity budget. It's necessary because the current stopgap spending measure expires at midnight tonight. It will eventually be succeeded by another stopgap spending measure.

Congress parcels out appropriations in 13 separate money bills, each for a different set of agencies and programs. But they seldom are enacted by the time the budget year begins on Oct. 1. One of the reasons for the Oct. 1 start is that Congress never could make the old timetable, under which fiscal years began on July 1. It can't make the new timetable, either.

Only one of the appropriations bills for the 1982 fiscal year has been passed. It is the legislative appropriation, which keeps Congress in money.

At issue is a resolution that would extend appropriations until the regular bills are passed or until the end of the fiscal year, whichever comes first. Reagan says the measure would exceed his budget targets and "excessive appropriations measures simply cannot be tolerated." The president already had said he would veto any measure that costs too much.

He's using that threat, and the midnight deadline, in an effort to enforce his demand for spending reductions. It hasn't worked because this time the Republicans who were virtually unanimous in earlier spending tests are not standing solidly with him.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said Reagan is willing "to stop the government for a personal political victory."

"It's never been stopped before," O'Neill said. "What it would cost to get the government functioning again I don't know."

He didn't find the prospect so worrisome two years ago. The deadline then was Oct. 1, and the House took a 10-day recess on Sept. 28, guaranteeing that appropriations would lapse. An O'Neill spokesman said at the time that the speaker had been assured things would be all right until the House reconvened.

There has been a change in the ground rules since then. The Justice Department has held that government officials are legally obligated to shut down their agencies unless they have the appropriations to keep going. As a result, the Federal Trade Commission did shut down briefly when its appropriations were halted in 1980.

Under that ruling, all the government is supposed to do when appropriations expire are the things it must do to protect life, property and national security. That and shut things down.

Then again, nobody is going to get arrested if appropriations expire for a while and the government keeps doing business.

There was a one-day lapse on Oct. 1, 1980. About the only agency that really did anything differently was the Justice Department, which went through the motions of following the ruling about shutting down. It opened up again in the morning.

Medicine Has Its Baling Wire

America once kept itself together with baling wire and now it looks as if glue may keep us living.

We've had glue for paper, glue for cloth, glue for metal, glue for other glues that wouldn't work. Now we have a glue for the brain.

Radiologists at Duke University, using a technique developed in San Diego seven years ago, have found that they can thread tubes through arteries running from the leg to the brain. Using such a conveyor system, they then attach a small amount of the special glue to a tiny balloon that 'floats" the substance to the brain and the particular site that needs to be repaired. The technique is said to offer a major hope for extended life for some patients with weakened blood vessels in the brain.

It probably also would have been effective when the baling wire failed to keep the family car running.

THIS AFTERNOON

Public Strike Laws

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — Legislators and other top state officials have, for some months, been passing the word to city and county governments that all must work together to keep the lid on public employee unionism.

The always worrisome threat of a public employee strike is only one reason. A more immediate and important reason is the expectation that what state and local governments do regarding union organization activities has a diredt impact on union activities in private business.

And, it is widely recognized that North Carolina's relative lack of unionism is a mojor selling point in winning industrial growth for the state.

President Reagan's firm stand in the air traffic controllers' strike has won praise from public officials and private citizens alike who see that action as setting the pace for state and local officials to take similar strong steps should the occasion present itself.

New Law

Even before the president fired the striking controllers, the North Carolina General Assembly was adopting some tough, new laws which prohibit public employee strikes, and establish penalties for any who particiapate in a work stoppage — including firing.

North Carolina, in recruiting new business and industrial growth, boasts the lowest unionization rate of any other state in the nation. Only 7 percent of the industrial workforce here is organized, compared to 25 percent nationally. The state also has one of the lowest industrial wage rates in the nation.

It is feared by those pushing for economic development that any reversal of that condition would seriously hamper recruitment efforts. Since governmental work conditions such as salalry, fringes, holidays and such have a direct impact on the private sector — and so does the attitude toward unions — a number of government officials want to see workers remain unorganized in North Carolina.

Considerable impetus for this philosphy is presently resulting from general economic conditons. Even though unemployment is climbing sharply elsewhere in the nation, and effects of a recession are apparent and growing more severe, North Carolina appears to be getting by unscathed.

When bad economic conditions threaten, those who are well employed tend to hold on to what they have rather than push for new goals. Thus, employees in both the public and private sectors are not likely to mount any aggressive push for extra union strength.

Slowdown

Measured by union elections, work stoppages and other factors, there has been a noticeable slowdown in union activity in North Carolina in recent years, both among private employees, and the sanitation, police and fire service personnel who have been active in work slowdowns and stoppages in the past.

The union election figures show the trend. In 1977, unions won 53 elections, and in 1978 won 57. But the trend reversed in 1979, according to the National Labor Relations Boardp. From 106 elections that year, the unions won only 41. In 1980, the unions won elections in only 27 of 87 attempts.

During that same period, union membership declined.

Specialists warn, however, that the same conditions which cause business to look with favor upon North Carolina — low pay, lack of unionism — also make the state ripe for major efforts at organizing by the unions.

Return Of Deep Throat

Not since "Deep Throat" met with Robert Redford in a garage in Washington has there been such a stir in the nation's capital as over the recent interview in "Atlantic Monthly," given by David Stockman to writer William Greider.

Stockman catches colds easily in garages, as does Greider, so the men had breakfast together in a comfortable hotel across from the White House. It was at these meetings that Stockman unloaded to Greider what was happening with President Reagan's economic program.

The story of "Reaganomics" definitely has the makings of a great movie. You have tbe President of the United States, which Ronald Reagan could play himeelf,nd a 35-year-old, driving, idealistic man, who thinks he can cut fraud and waste out of the government, give everyone a tax cut, increase military spending, and balance the budget over a period of three years.

He would be played by Mel Brooks.

At the beginning of the movie, Mel is made Budget Director of the United States. In the first scene he takes President Carter's old budget and starts tearing pages out of it and throwing them out the window. "Nobody will be spared," he shouts, as he rips away at every department in the government.

Finally, Mel has the budget book down to the size of a Redskin football program, and he goes into the Oval Office and tosses it onto the President's desk.

ART BUCHWALD

"Here it is," Mel tells the President. "It has something for everybody. A safety net for the poor, a floor for the middle class, and no ceilingfor the rich."

The President is delighted. "Mel, you're a genius. This document will allow me to go down in history as the greatest President since Raymond Massey."

A month later, the President calls Mel in and says, "Do you think you could squeeze a trillion dollars in the budget for the Defense department?"

"No sweat," says Mel. He goes out into the streets, sweeps up 500 pages of the budget he threw away, and pastes them back into the book.

A month later, the President calls him in again and says, "Mel, I'm getting a lot flak from Southern Democrats who won't vote for my budget unless I do some horse trading. Can you find me $15 billion to keep them happy?"

"What are budget makers for?" Mel says. "We'll take it out of Social Security and Medicaid."

A month later Mel gets a call from the President who says, "I'm getting all sorts of political pressure on Social Security. We can't take cuts out of that. Do you have any other ideas?"

"We could knock out peanut, sugar and tobacco subsidies?"

"That's impossible. What would the country do without them?

"How about cutting down on oil and gas depletion allowances?"

"Stop joking, Mel, this is serious. Have we made all the possible cuts we could in welfare and unemployment benefits?"

"We can make some more, but it won't go over too well with the poor if we don't take something away from the rich."

"Don't they know that whatever the rich get will trickle down to them?"

"The poor are sick and tried of being trickled."

"I'm going horseback riding, Mel, and when I come back, I want you to give me a balanced budget."

Mel decides to have breakfast at the Hay Adams Hotel, and he runs into Robert Redford and tells him the President is out riding a Trojan horse."

"Can I write it?" Redford asks him.

"For whom?" Melsks.

"The 'Alantic Monthly.'"

"Why not?" says Mel. "Nobody in Washington reads 'The Atlantic Monthly.'"

Other Editors Say Legislative Clinker

(High Point Enterprise)

Here it is November, and suddenly it's discovered that the North Carolina General Assembly last July passed a piece of legislation that hardly anybody knew anything about. The particulars started coming clear after an administrator of the Department of Human Resources commented on it.

It is, says DHR soliciting and licensing chief Edwin Edgerton, "the most severe disclosure procedcure ever enacted by a state."

Starting Jan. 1 most charitable organizations will have to pay license fees to the state and buy newspaper advertisements to explain their finances.

It is so poorly conceived that even its sponsor, Sen. James Speed of Franklin County, is obviously embarrassed about it. Quoth he, "It's like most of the other legislation we pass down there (Raleigh), sometimes we can't see the forest for all the trees."

It means, for the first time, that such agencies as United Funds and Goodwill Industries will have to be licensed. Any agencies that raise over $10,000, with the exception of religious organizations, government agencies, hospitals and public radio and television stations, are included. A Carolinas United spokesman says that could be a real burden on some smaller United Way groups.

The N.C. Press Assn., whose lobbyist apparently failed to spot the clinker, is belatedly quite upset about that publishing requirement in that it tends to overlook some newspaper realities.

The new rule is that financial results of any campaign must be published in the largest daily newspaper in the county in which solicitations are made. (For the High Point United Way, for instance, that would presumably mean statements in the Greensboro Daily News, the Asheboro Courier Tribune and the Lexington Dispatch. One may notice the absence of The High Point Enterprise from that list. We did.) Weekly newspapers all over the state are howling about discrimination.

Our hope is that the eagle eyes in the General Asembly will look upon this work and decide if it is really what they want. If not, they should agree with a state publisher that "this is one that dropped through the crack", and zap it.

The primary purpose of the legislation, says its sponsor, was to correct a problem with professionals running charitable collections and taking a majority of the money collected as a fee. He didn't even seem sure that this lofty goal was realized.

Strength For Today

MAYBE

Someone has said that everything creative in life is built on a "maybe". The scientist begins his investigations on a hunch. He has a gut feeling that he is on the track of certain unknown processes in nature awaiting discovery.

Spiritual life also starts with a "maybe". The great fundamental doctrines of Christianity cannot be proved — that is, proved as problems in mathematics can be proved. They have to be taken on faith, and their proof comes in their constant use. If they are found to work, they are "proved" — that is, proved to the extent that religious people demand proof. They are not proved scientifically; rather they are proved pragmatically, by experience.

What joy there is at weddings and christenings, yet the word "maybe" drifts like a ghost above the festivities. Marriage is a venture in faith. Every birth represents God's hope that another soul can be developed worthy of eternal life. Maybe! Maybe! Maybe!

Damage By 'Crude Managers'

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — During the wild growth days of the 1960s, corporate bosses often were forgiven their crudeness and their costly mistakes because, as it was often rationalized, they got things done.

In the newer industries especially, it was learned that if you gave a go-getter more discretionary authority the company might benefit from more rapid growth. The mistakes, therefore, could be forgiven.

And the damage was overlooked. The human chaos they caused on the way to accomplishment was shrouded by the growth curve, hidden by rising sales and earnings, lost in the blind desire to grow at any cost.

Now the growth curve has slowed, and the damage done by crude managers is more clear. Now, says Professor Eugene Jennings, adviser to corporate managements, "boards won't tolerate high cost for high performance."

It is known now, says Jennings, that the most difficult assignments can be executed with little human cost. "The person who turns a division around by bloodying up the executive resources," he asserts, "no longer is tolerated." He is as outdated as the 1960s.

Jennings, management professor at Michigan State University and adviser to directors, chairmen and presidents of blue chip companies, has found boards of directors concluding that "a person who makes it difficult for others to give their best is a person we need less of today."

In place of the high performing but crude executive who make matters more difficult than they really are is the executive who has developed personal skills in dealing smoothly and effectively with people.

Because they are well known, he illustrates with examples from public life: Dean Rusk or perhaps Henry Kissinger versus Alexander M. Haig Jr., Ronald Reagan versus Jimmy Carter, and Lyndon Johnson, the smooth Senate leader, versus Lyndon Johnson, the embattled president.

"There is no such thing as a professional athlete or manager whose effort isn't influenced by the boss," said Jennings in an interview. "No longer are we willing to tolerate insensitivity to human needs."

Boards are asking, he continued, if an executive's rude, crude style is causing low morale and productivity, if he is part of the problem rather than its solution, if he prevents others from giving their best.

It means, says Jennings, that the 1960s notion that "I don't get ulcers, I give them" is now replaced by "I don't have ulcers and you don't have ulcers either." Ulcers, he observes, are unproductive.

Boards find it easier today to accept technical blunders than those involving people, said Jennings. They are, he says, anxious to raise managerial productivity, an area coming under increasing scrutiny.

They are, therefore, impatient with behavior that causes inefficiency, illness, low morale and turnover. He maintains that while capital and technology are vital, they aren't the most important corporate assets. "Human resources are," he says, adding that the person who protects them, while still aspiring to high performance, is in growing demand.

Industry still wants to set tough objectives and achieve very high performance, of course, but "if you are pushing people hard don't make it any harder by being part of the problem."

For greater acceptance as a manager, advises Jennings, remember there are two standards of managerial excellence: Never be satisfied with mediocrity; and be sensitive to people so you get the most out of them.

Life As It's Lived

Not The Only One Who Fumbles In The Kitchen

Both my grandmother and my mother garden, can and freeze, so it stands to reason that some of this affinity for fresh produce would have rubbed off on me. But it didn't. When Meg and I planted a carrot garden this spring, all we ended up with after my careful weeding was a bumper crop of crabgrass.

During the summer the largess of our neighbors made up for my deficiencies. They kept us supplied with fresh vegetables, and I was familiar enough with each variety to look it up in a cookbook and at least to make an attempt at preparing it correctly.

But the fall vegetables they keep bringing over have me stumped. The first bag of fall produce to appear on our doorstep proved to be, after some investigation on my part, collard greens. Now I had never cooked collards, and apparently neither had the editors of the Better Homes and Gardens Cookbook, the Southern Living Cookbook or the Farm Journal Cookbook. After looking in these, I felt I could safely skip the New York Times and Julia Child.

Feeling extremely ignorant, I finally broke down and asked my neighbor how she cooked them.

"Just put them in the pressure cooker with a piece of fatback for about 30 minutes," she said.

So I did. The odor which wafted throughout the house was enough both to cure my sinusitus and to make me appreciate my affliction, but for the sake of my family's nutrition, I endured.

I could have saved my energy. Without even tasting it, Zachary threw his helping of collards to the cats, who promptly stalked from the kitchen at the insult. Meg and Phillip each took a bite and through puckered lips uttered several offensive exclamations, the gist of which was that the collards were somewhat bitter.

I made several other stabs at preparing them, each time altering my cooking method according to the information from my latest source, but the results always landed in the trash. Just when I was most discouraged, the collards stopped appearing on my doorstep. In their place was a veggie which was large and slightly rounded on top with two or three points on the bottom, and it came in a bunch. I was truly mystified, but I was not about to ask my neighbor what these objects were for fear she should ask me if I enjoyed the collards.

"Do you think they might be turnips?" I asked my friend Brenda.

"Sure," she said reassuringly. "What else could they be?"

"Then you take them. My family doesn't care for them when someone else cooks them. There's no telling how they would react if I were the one who prepared them."

Two days later I took Brenda another bunch, which she received without marked enthusiasm. I didn't think much about her reaction until my neighbor caught me out in the yard and asked me how I liked the radishes.

"The what?"

"The radishes we brought you the other day."

I called Brenda right away. "Did you really think those vegetables I gave you were turnips?"

"Well, they looked a little peculiar, but I just thought they'd had silicone injections or something."

"How did they taste?"

"Well...they were rutabagas, right? Rubabagas never have tasted quite right to me."

"They were radishes."

"You're kidding."

"You're sure you're not feigning ignorance to make me feel better?"

"I cooked them. I really did. And you say they were radishes?"

At least I'm not the only one who feels stupid now.

Two Charged In Burglary

Two Greenville men were arrested by Pitt County deputies early Wednesday when the officers responded to a burglary alarm at the Kash and Karry Store No. 6 on the Pactolus Highway.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said deputies arrested Jonathan Roberson and David O'Neal, both of 116 E. Jackson Ave., at the store and charged them with breaking, entering and larceny.

The sheriff said a cinder block had been thrown through a front glassed section of the building to gain entrance. Deputies were in the area when the alarm sounded and were on the scene in a short time to make the arrests, he said.

Bond for each man was set at $5,000.

OPPORTUNITY DAY

North Pitt High School observed "Post Secondary Opportunity Day" on Tuesday.

About 400 juniors and seniors had an opportunity to talk with approximately 60 representatives from colleges, universities, technical schools, business schools, branches of the military and industries.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning for the central and northern Rockies and for northern New England. Showers are forecast from northern Texas to southern Kansas. Mild weather is expected in southern states and cold weather in the North. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A strong cold front was crossing the mountains of North Carolina early this morning. The front was expected to continue to sweep east across the state during the morning hours and move off the coast in the afternoon.

A band of showers and scattered thunderstorms preceded this front into the mountains Thursday night with a few showers getting into the Piedmont early this morning. Just before daybreak, the line of showers and thunderstorms began breaking up as it moved across the Piedmont with most of the activity moving across western Virginia and western South Carolina.

Temperatures ahead of this cold front were rather balmy. High readings on Thursday were mostly in the low and mid-70s. Only the northeast portion of the state stayed in the 60s as did some of the higher mountains. The coolest temperature reported yesterday was the 62 at cape hatteras followed by 63 at Elizabeth City. The warmest was the 75 at Charlotte.

The sky continued clear over the east during the night but clouds were on the increase over the western half of the state. Rather brisk southwest winds aided in keeping temperatures in the upper 50s and low 60s over much of the state early this morning. A few mid-50s were noted over the eastern counties. Some colder air was just entering the mountains shortly before daybreak.

Recreational weather outlook: Look for a change to colder weather for the weekend. It will turn much cooler as the day progress. In fact, temperatures began their trend downward across the mountains this morning. Winds were expected to be between 15 and 25 mph with gusts in excess of 30 mph. A few showers and possible thunderstorms moved east along and ahead of a cold front as it marched across the state today. Much colder air will overspread the state tonight and Saturday. Some snow can be expected in the northern mountains where some accumulation is likely tonight.

A travelers advisory may be necessary in the northern mountains by tonight. Elsewhere across the mountains a few snow flurries are possible tonight. Temperatures by Saturday morning will dip into the 20s and low 30s over the west and central sections to the upper 30s near the coast. Partly cloudy, but windy and cold weather will continue Saturday with highs only in the 40s for the most part.

A small craft advisory is in effect along the coast and sounds of North Carolina for southwest winds 15 to 25 mph and gusty today. Winds will become more west 20 to 30 mph tonight and Saturday.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 71 Thursday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 71 percent of your hot water.

REQUESTS APPROVED

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by: Phi Eta Sigma to conduct a sidewalk solicitation Dec. 4-5 to raise funds for book scholarships; and by A & T State University Alumni Association to conduct a merchant solicitation Nov. 23-Dec. 5 to sell ads for a souvenir program to benefit the college scholarship fund.

WEEKEND SERVICES

Five visiting deacons and three ministers ordained under the administration of the Rev. Elbert B. Williams, pastor of Nazarene Church of Christ, 205 W. Skinner St., will be involved in 3 p.m. services Sunday at the church.

Weekend activities at the church will begin with a bazaar Saturday from 9 a.m. until noon. Pastor Williams will deliver the 11 a.m. service Sunday and Eldress Fannie Roberson and the St. Paul Church of Williamston will be in charge of the 3 p.m. services. The service is sponsored by Mrs. Eva James of Jamesville.

The service will be open to the public.

ANNIVERSARY

The No. 2 Singers will observe their seventh anniversary Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at Bethel Chapel Free Will Baptist Church. The speaker will be the Rev. Clifton Gardner of Selvia Chapel.

The guest choir will be the Holy Hosea from Robersonville. The service will be open to the public.

SERVICES PLANNED

Fleming Chapel A.M.E. Zion Church will hold services marking the end of the fiscal year, beginning Saturday at 2 p.m. with Evangelist Jean Marshall of Baltimore.

Sunday services will begin at 11 a.m. with the pastor, the Rev. Lindwood Chadwick, delivering the sermon. Others taking part during the afternoon will be: Evangelist Phyllis Watts, 1 p.m.; Jean Marshall, 2 p.m., Shirley Daniels, 3 p.m., Daisy Barnes, 4 p.m.; and Geven Phillips at 5 p.m.

ANNIVERSARY

The Mother Board of St. Peter Missionary Baptist Church, Route 5, Greenville, will celebrate the board's anniversary Sunday at 2 p.m.

Elder Mark Ebron and congregation will be in charge of the service. The pastor, the Rev. Hue Walston, invited the public to attend.

Woman Takes Stand To Deny Poisoning Husband

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Smithfield beautician denied in Wayne County Superior Court testimony Thursday that she killed her husband in 1970 by poisoning him.

Taking the stand in her own defense against a first-degree murder charge, Sally M. Holloman also said that she refused to allow an autopsy "because I didn't want my husband's body mutilated."

The defense rested its case late Thursday after Mrs. Holloman testified for nearly four hours. The trial entered its fourth and possibly final day today.

Asked specifically by defense attorney John O'Hale if she killed her husband, Japser Talton Weaver, Mrs. Holloman tearfully replied, "No sir, I did not."

The prosecution rested its case Wednesday after two witnesses testified that they heard Mrs. Holloman make incriminating statements about Weaver's death.

Ollie J. Kornegay, a licensed practical nurse at Wayne Memorial Hospital, testified that when told of her husband's death, Mrs. Holloman screamed, "I killed him. It's all my fault."

Thomas Farrell, Mrs. Holloman's brother-in-law, testified that one night after Weaver's death, Mrs. Holloman began crying and said, "I killed him."

He said he paid little attention to it and didn't believe her.

In testimony Wednesday, Mrs. Holloman's third husband testified that he and Mrs. Holloman began seeing each other before her second husband died.

An investigation began into Weaver's death earlier this year when a friend of Mrs. Holloman went to the Johnston County Sheriff's Department and said Mrs. Holloman had admitted poisoning Weaver by putting arsenic in his intravenous fluids while he was in the hospital.

Weaver was originally believed to have died from a severe reaction to medication. His body was exhumed earlier this year and doctors found arsenic in tissue samples.

Mrs. Holloman also faces another murder charge. She is accused of killing Selma businessman Ashley Deaver, 64, whose body was found in May near Little River. He had been shot five times and his body burned.

City Students Are Visitors At NCSU

More than 200 seniors from North Carolina high schools attended Minority Visitation Day at North Carolina State University last weekend for an orientation sponsored by the university's office of admissions.

"The program is designed to help black students get acquainted with NCSU's academic programs and extra-curricular activities," said Reginald Fennel, the NCSU assistant director of admissions who directed the day-long program.

During the morning session, students were welcomed by Mrs. Anna P. Keller, director of admissions.

Mrs. Keller spoke to the visiting seniors and their parents on minority application and university life. After an informal meeting, the high school seniors talked with professors and students from the undergraduate schools and various activity groups.

The afternoon session included a minority faculty and staff presentation, a reception in the North Gallery of the Student Center and a campus tour.

Greenville participants were: Pamela D. Laughinghouse, daughter of Mrs. Bettie Laughinghouse, 1007 Colonial Ave.; Monique A. Kilpartick, daughter of Ms. Mary Furguson, 1516 W. Sixth St.; Belinda M. Haselrig, daughter of Bernard R. Haselrig, 1100 Fairfax Ave.; Ernest R. Reeves, son of Alfred T. Reeves Sr., 519 W. 14th St. Barry D. Smith, son of Mrs. Geraldine Smith, 119-A Lakeview Terrace, and Veda V. Smith, daughter of R.P. Smith, 1235 Battle St.

Opposition To Longer Terms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A poll of state business leaders by the North Carolina Citizens Association showed that 56 percent were opposed to extending the terms of General Assembly members.

The question of extending the legislative terms from two to four years by constitutional amendment will be on the ballotin the May 1982 political primary.

Poll respondents said they would support legislation or constitutional amendments to limit future growth of state spending and to place a time limit on sessions of the General Assembly.

Breitman Joins Rutgers' Staff

ECU News Bureau

Paul Breitman, associate director of East Carolina University's Mendenhall Student Center, will join the administration of Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J., Dec.7.

Breitman has accepted a position as associate dean of students and director of the two student centers at the 19,000-student campus. His function will include supervision of all campus entertainment programming, the 200 student organizations and student government operations.

He will supervise a full-time staff of 23, along with 250 student employees.

An alumnus of ECU where he received an undergraduate degree in business administration and a master's degree in education, Breitman joined the ECU staff in 1970 as assistant director of student activities.

He was promoted to his present position in 1974.

Oil Co. Is Acquired By U.S. Steel In Big Bid

PITTSBURGH (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp., which has been making less steel over the years, took another big step toward diversification with its $6.5 billion bid to acquire the Marathon Oil Co. of Ohio.

With the continually disappointing profit returns in the steel industry, a move into the energy field makes good financial sense, several analysts said of U.S. Steel's move Thursday.

"I think it's a favorable deal for U.S. Steel," said David Healy, a steel analyst for the Wall Street firm of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

"It would reduce the percentage of their overall earnings taken from the steel business ... (and) it doesn't really cost them much in the near term. If improvements in Marathon earnings develop, the company could contribute significantly to U.S. Steel earnings in the 1980s," he said in a telephone interview.

U.S. Steel's bid challenges a hostile takeover attempt by the Mobil Corp.

In a joint announcement by U.S. Steel and Marathon, the oil company said its directors had accepted U.S. Steel's offer to buy 30 million shares, or about 51 percent, of Marathon common stock at $125 a share.

Mobil had offered $85 a share in cash for up to 40 million shares of stock. The nation's second largest oil company said it was studying U.S. Steel's offer.

The steelmaker also would have an option to buy up to 10 million of Marathon's shares at $90 a share and would purchase additional shares through a stock-for-notes transaction.

U.S. Steel Chairman David Roderick said the acquisition of Marathon would "achieve the major diversification that U.S. Steel has been seeking. At the same time, our stockholders will benefit from the acquisition of important energy resources."

U.S. Steel is flush with money at the moment. As of the end of September, the company had $2.6 billion in cash. Some of that came from the recent $550 million sale of coal reserves to Standard Oil of Ohio.

FOCUS

Time For A Change?

Ninety-eight years ago this week international astronomers agreed that clocks around the world would be based on Greenwich Mean Time. An imaginary north-south line was drawn through the Royal Observatory in Greenwich, England, and called the prime meridian or 0 degrees longitude. The earth's 360 degrees were divided into 24 time zones, so for each 15° west of Greenwich the time is one hour earlier. But times have changed. In 1966, Congress adopted Daylight Saving Time for six months of the year, and now — despite farmer's objections — may extend it to eight months. The change might cut traffic deaths by 12%, violent crimes by 10% and oil use by 100,000 barrels on each of these days.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the name for 180° longitude?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Over 630 billion cigarettes are smoked in the U.S. each year.

Problems Beset Campus Voting

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Embarassed officials at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro have called for the sixth Student Government Association election in eight months.

The five previous elections were riddled with problems, including a month ago when the student body president was indicted by a grand jury on a fraud charge, and two days ago when the vice president resigned after admitting he plotted to stuff the ballot box.

"Never," said James Allen, UNC-G vice chancellor for student affairs. "We've never before had anything like it here at all."

On March 24, 1,600 of the school's 10,000-plus students marked their ballots for the annual SGA elections.

A crowded field of presidential candidates prompted a runoff and two subsequent spring elections ended in accusations of polling irregularities. Both times, the student elections board threw out the results.

In September, another runoff was held, with David Miller of Reidsville, a senior planning a law career, winning by a 55-vote margin.

Two weeks later, Miller and another student were arrested by Greensboro police officers. Both were charged with using a stolen credit card to buy clothes at a local department store.

Miller resigned earlier this month when a state grand jury indicted him on the fraud charge.

A fifth SGA presidential election was held Tuesday and Wednesday, with a field of nine new candidates vying for office.

But again the tallies were destroyed after SGA Vice President Rusty Weadon resigned Wednesday night, admitting he intended to stuff the ballot boxes.

Senate members agreed to scratch the election results at the urging of Vice Chancellor Allen.

A sixth attempt will be made Monday and Tuesday. With eight candidates on the ballot, a runoff election — the seventh — has been set for Nov. 30 and Dec. 1.

If a victor finally emerges then, he or she will serve only three months. The next round of SGA elections are scheduled in March.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Fair Sunday and Monday, partly cloudy with chance of showers Tuesday. Cold Sunday with moderating temperatures Monday and Tuesday.

Facts About The BIBLE

BY JOHN LEHTI

PARABLES - THE GREAT INSTRUMENT OF TEACHERS!

IN BIBLICAL TIMES, THE OLD STORY-TELLER, THE RECITER OF PARABLES WAS THE TEACHER, THE INSTRUCTOR OF THE PEOPLE—HIS CLASS-ROOM WAS ANY CONVENIENT STREET CORNER WHERE YOUNG AND OLD ALIKE LISTENED TO WHAT HE HAD TO SAY. THIS METHOD, AGES BEFORE THE PRINTED BOOK, WAS JUST ABOUT THE ONLY WAY TO INFORM. THOSE WHO COULD READ THE WRITTEN WORD WERE FEW AND FAR BETWEEN SO, BY WORD OF MOUTH, HISTORY WAS PASSED DOWN FROM ONE GENERATION TO ANOTHER—BUT THE PARABLE WAS MORE THAN JUST HISTORY—IT PRESENTED TO THE LISTENER MORAL ETHICS, IT MADE HIM PONDER ON WHAT WAS THE RIGHT THING TO DO AND WHAT WAS WRONG! WHEN JESUS BEGAN HIS MINISTRY, HE RECITED THE LAW, HE GAVE HIS "SERMON ON THE MOUNT" BUT THESE DIRECT TEACHINGS WERE MUCH TOO STERN AND DEMANDING—AND TURNED MANY PEOPLE AWAY....

...BUT WHEN JESUS BEGAN TO ILLUSTRATE HIS SERMONS WITH THE WELL-KNOWN FORM OF THE PARABLE, THE COMMON MAN COULD UNDERSTAND HIM, COULD PLACE HIMSELF IN THE STORIES—A FISHERMAN COULD GET THE POINT IN "THE NET CAST INTO THE SEA", A HERDER COULD WELL UNDERSTAND "THE LOST SHEEP", AND A FARMER "THE SEED CAST INTO THE GROUND" AND, THROUGH THIS TRADITIONAL METHOD, JESUS' TEACHINGS BEGAN TO SPREAD LIKE WILDFIRE!

NEXT WEEK: A CAMEL OR A ROPE — HOW CORRECT IS OUR BIBLE?!

A 20-Year Thank-You Gesture

By JERRY SCHNEIDER
Associated Press Writer

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A thank-you gesture that became a nationwide project, airlifting medical people and supplies to Mexico's poor and unreachable, has been repeated once a week for 20 years.

Thousands of doctors, dentists, nurses, interpreters and other volunteers, who call themselves "The Flying Samaritans," have made the typical early Saturday morning departure for a dirt airstrip at some remote village in Baja California.

They return Sunday night, after visiting people who otherwise might never have seen a doctor or dentist.

The San Diego-based group, which organizers say has donated more than $1 million in food and services since 1961, is a blend of avid aviators, dedicated medical people and adventurous volunteers who spend their weekends in surroundings totally different from their homes and jobs.

"I like to fly and I like the Mexican people, they are so warm and grateful to you," says Aileen Mellott of Escondido, Calif., and a two-time Powder Puff Derby champion. She is one of the group's founders. "I feel like we're helping people, and at the same time I get the enjoyment out of a trip to Baja."

"It's such a different routine," says Dr. Dale Burke of La Mesa, Calif., who was among the first dentists to volunteer. "I don't take welfare patients (in the United States). I do my charity work in Mexico. People who receive my care there deserve it as much or more than they do up here."

He recalls one of his first visits, during which he pulled a bucketful of teeth — 180 — in eight hours.

If not for a provident 70 mile an hour sandstorm on a cold November night in 1961, the Flying Samaritans may have never gotten off the ground.

Ms. Mellott and five others were en route to San Diego from La Paz on the peninsula's tip after a tour when the storm forced them to land at El Rosario, 300 miles below the border city of Tijuana.

Residents put up their stranded visitors and protected the grounded twin-engine Beechcraft from the blowing sand until the party was able to leave the next day.

In return, Ms. Mellott and about 19 others in nine planes organized a "Christmas Airlift" of clothing and candy on Dec. 9, 1961. Among the pilots was Dr. Dale Hoyt of National City, Calif., who brought his medical bag as an afterthought.

Townspeople accepted the gifts, but when Hoyt casually asked if anyone needed a doctor, lines began to form. At a makeshift kitchen clinic, he worked until nightfall and vowed to return.

He and others did return, and now there are six chapters of the "Flying Sams," stretching up and down the state.

Ms. Mellott estimates 500 different people have flown on mercy missions to some of the 20 clinics set up by the non-sectarian, non-profit organization, to which she says thousands have donated goods.

The group has expanded into a network of ham radio operators which alert pilots for the rescue of stranded American tourists in Baja California, Ms. Mellott says.

Non-surgical care is the primary job of physicians and dentists, with serious surgical cases airlifted to better equipped San Diego hospitals.

Ms. Mellott refuses to estimate how many miles have been flown in 20 years, but records show 400,000 air miles covered in the first decade.

The only fatality in the Flying Samaritans' history occurred three years after flights began, when a frequent volunteer pilot, Julian P. Burchett, 39, and three others died on takeoff from El Rosario.

Ms. Mellott and Burke say they are making fewer flights to Mexico lately as Mexican doctors and the Mexican Red Cross take over, and as flying costs escalate. Looking back over two decades, Ms. Mellott says volunteers are still needed.

"We would arrive at a place where there are no telephones and yet people come from 150 miles away," she says.

Homecoming

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices pushed ahead today in a carryover of buying from late in Thursday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up .67 at the close Thursday after spending most of the session on the minus side, rose 4.28 to 849.03 by noontime today.

Gainers held an 8-5 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

U.S. Steel's bid for a controlling stake in Marathon Oil early Thursday stirred up new interest in the energy group.

Marathon shares, up 27¼ Thursday, slipped back ⅝ to 103⅝ today. U.S. Steel, meanwhile, was unchanged at 28.

The NYSE's composite index rose .36 to 70.72. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 2.35 at 317.17.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.14 million shares at noontime, against 18.91 million at the same point Thursday.

The ECVC, established in 1965 as the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop, is considered one of the largest workshops in the nation, and "is probably the finest vocational rehabilitation center ... keyed for the physically disabled," according to Brody.

The fund-raising chairman said by training physically handicapped, mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed and low socio-economic-disadvantaged persons to take their place in competitive employment, the center saves millions of dollars in taxpayers' money.

Brody said once a client is trained, "and gets a job, it relieves the government of any kind of assistance program for the individual" and "gives the person staying home to look after the handicapped an opportunity to find a job."

Denies Audit Will See Improprieties

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — The executive director of Eastern North Carolina Legal Services has denied that a government audit would uncover improprieties within the agency.

"This needs to be placed in perspective," said Dennison Ray, executive director of North Carolina Legal Services. "It is not uncommon for a senator to ask the GAO to look into a government agency."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., requested that the General Accounting Office investigate complaints about the agency, a legislative assistant to Helms said Thursday.

Scott Wilson said Helms has forwarded to the GAO a constituent's letter which alleges a wide range of improprieties or abuses by agency, which is based in Wilson.

Helms has asked the GAO to investigate the allegations, which include complaints about office operations, use of funds, salaries and benefits for employees.

Boy Injured In Gun Accident

A 14-year-old Greenville boy was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital last night for treatment of an accidental gunshot wound he received about 7:04 p.m. at his 1602 E. Wright Rd. home.

William Aaron Smith was wounded in the lower jaw area and neck by a bullet from a pistol.

Police Department investigators reported Smith and a 15-year-old friend were playing with a toy pistol when the friend picked up a real pistol, which had been placed on a bed after being cleaned, and pulled the trigger.

RELIGIOUS FILM

"Free Again," a religious film produced by Earl Miller, creator of the film series "Focus on the Family," will be shown at Immanuel Free Will Baptist Church, Winterville, on Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

"Free Again" is a documentary narrated by Dr. Grady Wilson of the Billy Graham team. The one-time showing will be open to the public.

CALL MEETING

The City Council will conduct a special call meeting on Monday at 4 p.m. in the council chambers on the third floor at city hall to consider various matters relative to the city.

Chargers Host Warren County

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton and Warren County both put lengthy winning streaks on the line here tonight when the two teams battle in the quarterfinals of the Division I State High School Playoffs.

The Chargers, 9-2-0, have won six straight dating back to Oct. 2 when Charles B. Aycock defeated them, 29-6. The Eagles, 9-2-0, go the Chargers one better, having won seven straight since Sept. 25 when they dropped a 14-12 decision to Henderson Vance.

Ayden-Grifton advanced to tonight's 8 p.m. showdown after defeating White Oak, 8-0, last week. Warren County rolled past Tarboro, 42-6, last Friday for the right to play into tonight's second-round.

The Chargers ended up in a three-way tie for the Eastern Carolina Conference championship and then won a draw for the right to represent the league in the Division I playoffs.

Warren County, a first-year 3-A school formed from the merger of Warrenton Graham and Norlina, won the newly-elevated 3-A Roanoke River Conference title with a 7-0-0 mark.

The winner tonight will meet the Clinton-Burlington Williams victor. Both Clinton and Williams are undefeated going into tonight's game.

ECU Athletics Are In The Red

From Staff and Wire Reports

East Carolina University's athletic department is some $400,000 in debt, and state auditors have expressed "grave concern" over it.

"We believe the primary cause for this condition is the lack of budgetary and fiscal controls exercised by management," the audit said. "We are gravely concerned over the rapid deterioration of the financial condition of this fund and believe that appropriate action is needed by the Board of Trustees to correct this deficit trend."

The deficit apparently developed because the department overestimated its receipts and did not cut spending when receipts didn't materialize, state Auditor Ed Renfrow said.

ECU Board of Trustees chairman Ashley Futrell of Washington said he knew the athletic department had been losing money for several seasons, but was not aware of the extent.

However, Renfrow said that audits of the department made annually showed the continued growth of the deficit.

Contrary to reports in The News & Observer, Renfrow said the audit was not a special one made at the requests of East Carolina officials. "We audit the books each year," he said, "and the athletic department is included in this audit."

Renfrow said the annual audit includes the athletic funds because ECU officials had requested some time ago that they be included, and had not withdrawn their request. Under state laws, state schools have the right to prohibit the audit of their athletic budgets by the auditor's office, but that most do not prohibit it.

"We audit some of them; I don't have a list right in front of me. I can tell you we do not audit the budgets at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill or N.C. State. They won't let us near their books. But I do believe we audit Appalachian, Western Carolina and Wilmington. I don't think we do Charlotte's audit."

Renfrow said that it was East Carolina's — or any other state school's — right to refuse his office admission to its athletic books.

Futrell added that having a losing football season over the past two years had not helped East Carolina's efforts to clear the deficit.

Earlene Leggett, assistant athletic director for business affairs, said, "It worries me to death. We've made such great strides through the years, and now ..."

But Dr. Thomas Brewer, ECU chancellor, said he thinks the situation has improved.

"I think we have the situation much better under control than it was," he said.

"The trustees are very much aware of it; the administration is very much aware of it. We feel that we have very solid leadership in the department of athletics and the situation will be stabilized."

The ECU athletic department had a surplus of $351,173 on July 1, 1978, but lost $77,778 in the fiscal year ending in June 1979. It also lost $394,866 in 1980 and $283,589 in 1981, according to the audit. It had a total deficit of $404,982 as of June 30, 1981.

The biggest losses in 1980 came in football and basketball, the audit showed. The athletic department had football expenditures of $928,505 and gate receipts and guarantees of $618,866, a difference of $309,639. This was the final year the program was under the direction of former coach Pat Dye.

The men's basketball program spent $214,175 in 1980 and had gate receipts and guarantees of $52,454, a difference of $161,721. This was the first year the program was under the direction of new coach Dave Odom, and under the burden of being on NCAA probation because of actions of former coach Larry Gilman.

Those differences partially were offset by contributions from the ECU Educational Foundation (Pirate Club), concessions, $414,397 in student fees and other athletic department revenues.

The athletic department also borrowed money from unrestricted (non-tax) institution trust funds on which it is paying interest at the market rate, Renfrow said.

In the past year, under current athletic director Dr. Ken Karr, most areas of the ECU athletic department have undergone heavy budget cuts in order to try and bring the deficit under control. That is despite the fact that the budget has risen by over $700,000 during the period in question.

The budget for the current year is $2,185,818, which includes $50,000 to pay interest on money owed by the department. School officials said they expected further deficits this year unless there is a dramatic turnaround.

The budget for 1978-79 was $1,474,348, followed by a budget of $1,729,000 in 1979-80, and a $2,072,000 budget last year.

Troy Pate Jr., chairman of the trustees' athletic committee, said, "The chancellor is ultimately responsible for the athletic department at the university. Prior budgets have been prepared through the athletic department with Dr. Brewer."

Brewer said there was a number of explanations for the deficit.

"Obviously, one is that income did not meet projections, particularly in football," he said. "Two of those seasons, we had rain on several playing dates and this university is heavily dependent on day-of-game sales."

Other factors, Brewer said, included budget overruns, mainly in football and basketball in 1978 and 1979; expenditures of more than $100,000 to upgrade women's facilities in compliance with federal non-discrimination orders (Title IX), and sub-par fund raising by the Pirate Club which was about $140,000 below its goal, and losses sustained in attending the Independence Bowl in 1978. East Carolina guaranteed the bowl the purchase of $70,000 worth of tickets.

Jury Set To Begin Its Work

NEW YORK (AP) — A jury in Brooklyn's U.S. District Court was prepared to deliberate charges against former Boston College basketball player Rick Kuhn and four others accused of conspiring to fix games in the 1978-79 season to benefit their betting ring.

Two days of final arguments by four attorneys and prosecutor Edward McDonald ended after nearly eight hours Thursday, and the jury of eight women and four men were to get instructions today from U.S. District Judge Henry Bramwell before beginning deliberations.

Accused of racketeering conspiracy and sports bribery in connection with the alleged point-shaving and betting scheme are Kuhn, of Swissvale, Pa., brothers Rocco and Anthony Perla of Braddock Hills, Pa.; Paul Mazzei, of Pittsburgh and James Burke of Queens.

The defendants are charged with conspiring to shave points and rig BC games during the 1978-79 season so their betting consortium could beat bookies' odds and cooperating players could make money. Kuhn allegedly was paid with yrugs and $2,500 per game.

Much of final arguments by the remaining three defense attorneys Thursday was taken up with assaults on the character and testimony of Henry Hill, the government's key witness who was described by one lawyer as a "vicious, slimy viper" who had broken all 10 commandments during his long life of crime.

Hill was a participant in the alleged scheme who told the government what he knew in exchange for immunity from prosecution on drug charges and protection under the Witness Protection Program.

"That viper is being fed and sustained by the United States government," instead of being brought to trial himself, said Michael Coiro, Burke's attorney.

In addition to Coiro, Leonard Sharon and Gary Zimmerman, who represent Mazzei and Kuhn respectively, told the jury the government had no case without Hill's testimony, testimony they argued was inconsistent and untrue. Kerry O'Malley, attorney for the Perlas, presented his final argument on Wednesday, making the same points.

"He never related the facts of this incident the same way twice," Sharon argued, pointing to inconsistencies in Hill's statements to the FBI, a grand jury and to Sports Illustrated magazine for a story.

Coiro listed each of the 10 commandments, comparing each biblical caveat to Hill's criminal past.

McDonald admitted Hill's inconsistencies, but said the main points of his story were corroborated by documents and at least three other witnesses.

He also said Hill might have lied in the past to stay out of jail, but under his present immunity agreement, "There's only one way he can stay out of jail, and that's to tell the truth."

Defense attorneys also attacked the credibility of the government's corroborating witnesses, with Zimmerman terming the government's case "three liars trying to corroborate a fourth one."

Zimmerman told the jury to disregard testimony about a confession Kuhn made to an FBI agent about shaving points because his client had been coerced and argued Kuhn was not shaving points, but only being paid by the co-defendants for inside information on the team.

Coiro in particular spent a large portion of his summation on Hill, a long-time friend of his client's, repeating his argument that the "only evidence against my client" was testimony by Hill.

McDonald called Burke the "boss, the man without whom the fix could not succeed" and said telephone records placed him at the center of the betting conspiracy.

Tates Locke Telling It All In His New Book

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Tates Locke became trapped in a daily cycle of amphetamines and alcohol as he tried to build the Clemson University basketball program, he reveals in a forthcoming book he says is aimed at portraying the high-pressure world of college basketball.

Locke, fired from Jacksonville University in April, also will focus on recruiting of such stars as Moses Malone, Tree Rollins and Phil Ford in a book titled "Caught in the Net," the Jacksonville Journal said in a copyright story Thursday.

During the early 1970s, Locke headed a Clemson program that was put on probation by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for numerous recruiting violations.

Locke, now an assistant coach at Nevada-Las Vegas, would not tell the Journal specifics in the book about the recruiting of the Clemson players.

"The book is for young coaches and young people who think of this amateur athletic world as something that it's not," Locke said.

"There are a lot of young coaches out there who are recruiting and don't know what it's like to be in a position where they get caught and the anxiety and all that goes with it."

Locke told the newspaper that pressures at Clemson led to his taking amphetamines to stay awake and drinking alcohol to go to sleep.

"There just wasn't enough time in the day to do what we had to do," he said. "We were five years behind the rest of the Atlantic Coast Conference, and we had to catch up. There wasn't any need to sleep.

"All the days were the same. I couldn't tell one day from the other or day from night."

About the drinking, Locke said:

"There were times when I had to sleep, and it helped me sleep. I was never much of a drinker and still am not, and I think that was the part that scared me more than anything else.

"I got real heavy. I wasn't happy with myself. That's when I started running. I ran 13 miles the other day."

Locke's current boss, head coach Jerry Tarkanian, was involved in NCAA probation earlier in his career at Long Beach State.

"Knowing what Jerry went through and what I went through, it's like being a doctor sued for malpractice by a patient. I mean, it's something that you love very much and you lose it," Locke said.

Locke coached at Army and Miami of Ohio before becoming head coach at Clemson in 1970. He briefly headed the now-defunct Buffalo Braves of the National Basketball Association, then came to Jacksonville in 1978.

His JU tenure ended abruptly after a heated argument with school officials last spring.

He said the book will focus on JU in the first two chapters.

"I stayed away from names and personalities in the community. I don't think it'll raise any eyebrows," he told the Journal. "We have an agreement with the school that the actual financial settlement will never be discussed. I have maintained that agreement."

The 1981 football season is drawing to a close, and with it the panel's championship is still on the line. We have this week's games, plus the bowl lineup later on to sort things out.

And going into the final two columns-ful of picks, we find there is still a tie for first place in the standings. This writer and Vickie Spivey are still knotted for the lead with 94-36 records. Right behind are our guests with a 93-37 mark. One game further back comes Tom Baines at 92-38, while Rick Scoppe is fifth with a 91-39 record. Joe Jenkins trails the field at 80-50.

And this week, there could be some massive switches. For instance, our picks have six differences with Baines, and both Baines and this writer have four differences with Spivey.

So there could really be a shakeup if we don't end up splitting things up.

Our guest for this week is North Pitt's new football coach B.T. Chappell, rounding out a four-week swing through the county's new coaches. Last week's guest Gilbert Carroll of Farmville Central went 7-5, leaving Conley's Gerald Garner ahead at 8-3, with Rose's Ronald Vincent close behind at 8-4.

There's only one game on the local scene this week, as Ayden-Grifton plays host to Warren County in the second round of the State 3-A Football Playoffs.

The Chargers come into the game not having lost at home. They've been rolling along taking advantage of an outstanding defensive unit.

Warren County meanwhile, a newly consolidated unit playing for the first time as a 3-A team this year, has been one of the state's surprises of the year. Admittedly, the Eagles come out of a weak conference, but they've thoroughly dominated that league and whipped Northeastern champ Tarboro throughly last weekend.

The panel is going to give Ayden-Grifton the nod in this one, by a 5-1 margin. The lone dissenter is this writer, who goes with Warren County.

Probably there is more local interst in two other collegiate games: North Carolina at Duke and Clemson at South Carolina. There are a couple of upsets waiting to happen. Whether they will happen is to be answered Saturday afternoon. Both of the favorites, Carolina and Clemson have a lot riding on the outcome.

The panel, however, gives a 5-1 margin to the Tar Heels, Jenkins favoring Duke, and a 4-2 margin to the Tigers, Baines and Jenkins following the Gamecocks.

Our other concensus picks: Miami over N.C. State, William & Mary over Richmond, Southern California over UCLA, Washington and Washington State, a toss-up; Maryland over Virginia, Notre Dame and Penn State, a toss-up; Southern Methodist and Arkansas, a toss-up; West Virginia over Syracuse; and Furman over The Citadel.

Southwest Conference Might Begin To Get Some Respect

One of a Series

DALLAS (AP) — Texas A&M and Arkansas have made inroads in recent years, but for the most part, the Southwest Conference is a basketball league trying to grow into the big time.

League coaches are optimistic this might be the year SWC muscle gets some national respect.

"This league is due some respect and I think it can certainly hold its own," Houston Coach Guy V. Lewis said recently at a gathering of SWC mentors. "The top six or seven scorers return and the league will be balanced and tough if experience means anything."

He added,"This league will be its best ever from top to bottom ... all the teams in the lower divisions have improved themselves."

There's no question which team has the most respect. That's Lewis' loaded Cougars.

The player primarily responsible is junior guard Rob Williams, who was the nation's fifth leading scorer last year with 25 points.

He also doled out five assists per game and shot over 50 percent from the field.

"Rob's even better this year," said Lewis. "He's getting the ball down the floor quicker."

Lewis plans more run-and-gun offense this year based on the return of ace rebounders Larry Micheaux and Michael Young and the appearance of seven-foot Akeem Abdul Olajuwon, a Nigerian.

Olajuwon is expected to give the Cougars added rebound strength. Lewis is keeping the media away from Olajuwon until "he blocks some shots, scores some points and gets some rebounds .. . no more interviews until he's done something."

"He's no Jabbar but his greatest thing is that he is improving each day in practice ... he's going to be a good player," said Lewis.

"We're going to try to run this year although the league has been slowing down the tempo in recent seasons.

"I just think our league can hold its own with the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Big Ten and we'll prove it by the end of this year," Lewis said.

Arkansas, the defending SWC champion, is the next best bet to take the SWC title.

The Razorbacks return 6-10 all-SWC center Scott Hastings, talented Darrel Walker and Keith Peterson. The only big question mark for Coach Eddie Sutton's crew appears to be the lack of proven outside shooting, although Ricky Norton could fill that gap.

The other SWC teams have reason for hope.

Baylor Coach Jim Haller can count on the 20 points-per-game average of senior Terry Teagle.

Rice has its hopes built around senior forward Ricky Pierce, a 20.9 points-per-game performer.

SMU has a gunner in junior guard Dave Piehler who averaged 14 points per game last year for Coach Dave Bliss.

Texas Coach Abe Lemons can count on 6-10 junior center LaSalle Thompson, a 19.2-per-game scorer.

The Texas Aggies have the "Crockett Rocket," 6-9 Claude Riley, and 6-11 Rudy Woods returns from a year's absence and will be played at forward.

TCU has a 19.4 points-per-game performer in guard Darrell Browder.

Texas Tech has two players who averaged 13 points per game, Clarence Swannegan and Jeff Taylor.

Elsewhere in the Southwest, Lamar University under Coach Pat Foster should be favored to win the Southland Conference again.

West Texas will be troublesome in the Missouri Valley Conference while Texas-El Paso always plays tough in the Western Athletic Conference.

The top independent team will be Coach Bill White's Pan American crew, a team that knocked off national champion Indiana last year.

Seer Sees Upsets Spoiling Week When Bowls Start Naming Names

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It's bowl-picking time. Oops, check that — it's bowl-announcing time.

Anyone who thinks the bowl lineups aren't set — barring last-minute upsets, of course — probably still believes in the tooth fairy.

For instance, one member of the Clemson family was asked this week if the Tigers really deserved to be ranked No.2.

"If we beat South Carolina we do," was the reply.

"How about No.1?" was the next question.

"If we beat Nebraska we deserve to be No.1," was the prompt answer.

Nebraska? The Clemson-Nebraska Orange Bowl match isn't supposed to be announced until Saturday, the NCAA's "official" bowl-inviting day.

If Michigan beats Ohio State and Washington State defeats Washington, the Rose Bowl will be set and other Bowls will fall into place. If there are a bunch of upsets...well, the bowls don't even want to think about that.

Seventh-ranked Michigan is an 8-point favorite over Ohio State. For this week's first blow to the bowls, the Upset Special of the Week ...Ohio State 28-21.

No.17 Washington is a 2-point favorite over No.14 Washington State. To further confuse the Rose Bowl...Washington 17-13.

Last week's score was 49 right and 19 wrong for a .721 percentage, including two of three Upset Specials — Washington over Southern Cal and Rice over Baylor. For the season, the count is 493-192-15 — .720. Against the spread, it was 19-13-0 — .594 last week, bringing the year's total to 157-170-6 — .480.

No.10 Southern California (favored by 3½) vs. No.15 UCLA: UCLA has an inferiority complex where USC football is concerned. Here's another reason why...Southern Cal 28-17.

No.6 Southern Methodist (2) at No.16 Arkansas: SMU would love to embarrass its fellow Southwest Conference members by winning the championship even though it can't go to a bowl...Arkansas 27-24.

No.1 Pitt (NL) at Temple: Expect Temple's Wayne Hardin to come up with some new wrinkles for the Panthers. Expect the Panthers to win anyway...Pitt 31-14.

No.2 Clemson (8) at South Carolina: The Tigers are on the verge of their first unbeaten season since 1948...Clemson 21-10.

No.5 Nebraska at Oklahoma (pick 'em): This game doesn't have its usual impact (Nebraska is the Big Eight champ and in the Orange Bowl) but the Sooners always beat the Cornhuskers, or so it seems...Oklahoma 24-17.

Baylor at No.8 Texas (12½): The Bears will go from SWC champs to a losing season if they don't win this one. Second Upset Special...Baylor 21-17.

No.9 Southern Mississippi at Louisville (NL): Who's going to play USM in the Tangerine Bowl? Says Florida State's Bobby Bowden, a 58-14 loser, "Nobody who saw what they did to us." ... Southern Mississippi 35-14.

No.11 Miami, Fla. (7) at North Carolina State: The Hurricanes better not look ahead to Notre Dame or they could get stormed on ...Miami 20-10.

No.12 North Carolina (7) at Duke: Hardly anyone realizes the Blue Devils are 6-4 and improving. Third Upset Special...Duke 17-14.

Notre Dame at No.13 Penn State (3½): Last week, Joe Paterno got a coaching lesson from Bear Bryant. This week, he gives one to Gerry Faust... Penn State 24-14.

Utah at No.18 Brigham Young (NL): Cougars go to the Holiday Bowl by WAC-king the Utes...BYU 35-21.

Michigan State at No.19 Iowa (7): Can the Hawkeyes keep their eyes off the scoreboard? Fourth Upset Special...Michigan State 21-14.

Bowl Bids On Line In Weekend Games

By The Associated Press

Postseason bowl bids officially go up for grabs Saturday afternoon, but some college football teams don't have to rely on the whims of a selection committee to determine their holiday plans.

Teams like No.1 Pittsburgh, 9-0, and No.2 Clemson, 10-0, have their tickets all but officially validated. And, where conference champions are locked into contract deals like the Rose and Cotton Bowls, the teams still in the running know what they must do and the circumstances that will have to develop for them to make a national television appearance during the holidays.

Pitt, a heavy favorite, travels to Philadelphia to play unheralded Temple, and Clemson will be at South Carolina, topping Saturday's heavy college gridiron schedule.

Third-ranked Georgia, 9-1, and No.4 Alabama, 8-1-1, both get the weekend off, though each will receive a bowl bid Saturday.

The Associated Press learned earlier this week that the Sugar Bowl matchup would be between Pittsburgh and Georgia. That would likely send Clemson off to meet Big Eight champion and fifth-ranked Nebraska in the Orange Bowl.

The Cotton Bowl must wait to see which team will represent the Southwest Conference, but Alabama or No.10 Southern California will provide the opposition in Dallas.

The Rose Bowl battle is much less settled, with the Big Ten and Pacific 10 races undecided going into what is the final weekend of the regular season for most schools.

Among the many traditional rivalries on tap this week are meetings between Nebraska and Oklahoma, No.7 Michigan and Ohio State, No.8 Texas and Baylor, Southern Cal and No.15 UCLA, No.14 Washington State and No.17 Washington, 18th-rated Brigham Young and Utah, and No.19 Iowa and Michigan State.

And most of those games will have more riding on them than pride.

Michigan can clinch a return trip to the Rose Bowl with a victory or a tie against the Buckeyes in Ann Arbor, Mich. If Ohio State beats Michigan and Iowa wins, the Hawkeyes would go to Pasadena. But, if Ohio State wins and Iowa loses, the Buckeyes would spend New Year's Day in California.

There are even more possibilities for who will be the Big Ten team's opponent in the Rose Bowl.

A Washington State triumph over its state rival would send the Cougars to their first bowl game since 1930. But a Washington victory, combined with a UCLA loss to Southern Cal would give the Huskies the Pac 10 bid.

UCLA can make a return appearance in the Rose Bowl if Washington wins and it beats the Trojans, while USC could still sneak in if it stops UCLA and Washington State and Washington tie.

Although No.6 Southern Methodist can clinch the SWC championship with a victory Saturday over 16th-ranked Arkansas, the Mustangs are on NCAA probation and cannot go to a bowl game. That leaves the battle for the conference Cotton Bowl berth to Arkansas and Texas.

Arkansas, 5-2 in the SWC, must beat SMU to stay in the running. But Texas, 4-1-1 in the league, can grab the bowl bid by beating Baylor this weekend, then knocking off Texas A&M on Thanksgiving Day, regardless of what the Razorbacks do.

The Brigham Young-Utah game will decide the Western Athletic Conference championship and that league's representative to the Holiday Bowl. Whichever team goes to the postseason game, Washington appears a likely opponent — if it isn't in the Rose Bowl.

In other games Saturday, No.9 Southern Mississippi plays at Louisville; 11th-ranked Miami of Florida is at North Carolina State; No.12 North Carolina, a likely Gator Bowl participant against either Texas or Arkansas, plays at Duke; No.13 Penn State, a possibility for the Fiesta Bowl, is at home against Notre Dame, and No.20 Arizona State, ineligible for postseason play, plays Colorado State in a night game at Tempe, Ariz.

Southern Mississippi appears to be a cinch for the Tangerine Bowl, with Brigham Young, Houston or Missouri possible opponents.

And UCLA could wind up playing Oklahoma in the Sun Bowl or Ohio State in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

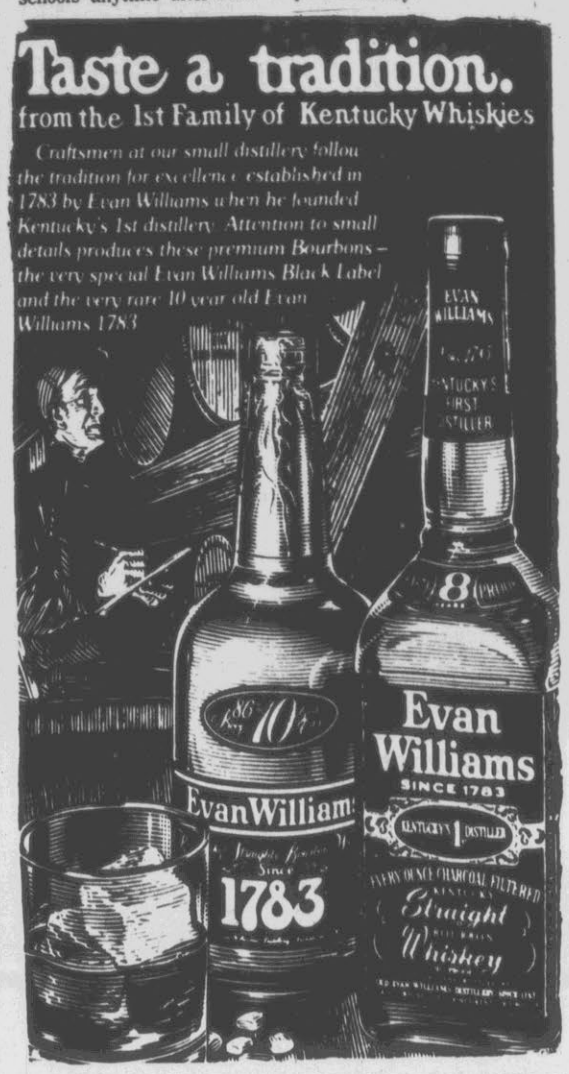

Navy will be in the Liberty Bowl, probably playing either Ohio State or Iowa; the Garden State Bowl matchup will be Wisconsin vs. Tennessee; the Peach Bowl will pair West Virginia against the winner of the Florida State-Florida game, and Texas A&M is in the Independence Bowl against the winner of Saturday's Oklahoma State-Iowa State contest.

There is nothing unusual about all the bowl speculation, since NCAA rules permit bowl representatives to contact schools anytime after Nov. 1 and do just about anything but extend a formal bid. Those can be proferred anytime after 6 p.m. Saturday.

Soccer Tri-Champs

The Aztecs ended the 1981 Greenville Recreation and Parks Department's Grades 7-9 soccer league in a three-way tie for the title. Members of the team are, first row, left to right: David Hudnell, Bobby Sullivan, David Lee, Gregg Ward, Chris Coble, Tim West, Greg VanScoy, Wendy Moore; second row, Nathan Green, Paul Sullivan, Mike Herrin, Carl Wille, Brian Walsh, Greg Vacek, Robbie Ehrmann, David McDonell and Coach Will Wiberg.

Dallas-Washington Is No Longer Holy War

By The Associated Press

It used to be more like a holy war. But that was the 1970s, when George Allen was coaching in Washington and the Dallas Cowboys topped his enemies list.

"We take a whole different approach now when we play the Cowboys," says Joe Theismann, quarterback of the Redskins. "The series used to be dominated by the personalities of (Redskins defensive tackle) Diron Talbert in his feud with Roger Staubach. There were so many words exchanged it always seemed like the game was anti-climactic. The battle was in the media.

"It's not hate now. But it's not love, either."

One thing it is — to both teams — is important. For Dallas, Sunday's meeting in Texas Stadium means a chance to catch Philadelphia, the leader in the National Conference's Eastern Division, or at least to stay within one game of the Eagles. For Washington, it's a chance to stay solidly in the playoff merry-go-round in which one of seven NFC teams, all deadlocked now at 5-6, will likely grab the brass ring in the form of the conference's second wild-card.

Sunday's other games are the New York Giants at Philadelphia, Denver at Cincinnati, Miami at the New York Jets, San Francisco at Los Angeles, Detroit at Chicago, Green Bay at Tampa Bay, New England at Buffalo, New Orleans at Houston, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, Seattle at Kansas City, St. Louis at Baltimore and San Diego at Oakland. On Monday night, it's Minnesota at Atlanta.

The Cowboys and Redskins have had some memorable meetings. The most notable, perhaps was Staubach's performance in the last three minutes of the final 1979 regular-season game. The Cowboys, leading 21-17 after three periods, fell behind 34-21 before Staubach fired touchdown passes to Ron Springs and Tony Hill for a 35-34 victory that knocked Washington out of the playoffs.

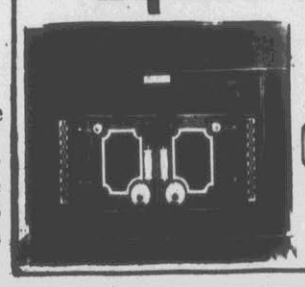

And there was the Thanksgiving Day game in 1974 when Clint Longley, replacing the injured Staubach, rallied the Cowboys from a 16-3 deficit to a 24-23 victory with a last-minute, 50-yard touchdown bomb to Drew Pearson.

This year's first meeting was less than memorable, a 26-10 opening-day victory by the Cowboys, when they intercepted Theismann four times and started Washington on a five-game nosedive. Since that skid, though, the 'Skins have climbed back into the playoff picture.

"Washington is probably playing as good as any team in the (NFC) East right now," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "They've won five out of their last six games, losing only to Miami by a field goal. They are the team I thought they would be at the first of the year."

The Cowboys have won the last four meetings between the two teams and have won 15 consecutive regular-season games at Texas Stadium.

'Magic' Makes Westhead Disappear

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, less than a day after Earvin "Magic" Johnson's outburst of discontent, made a stunning change in leadership when owner Jerry Buss fired Paul Westhead as head coach and appointed Pat Riley and Jerry West his successors.

Buss announced at a news conference Thursday that Westhead was out and assistant coach Riley and Lakers' special consultant West would be in charge. Buss said of the dual coaching arrangment: "I did not want to specifically make someone head coach and someone else the assistant coach."

Riley and West said they expect to work out details later about each's responsibilities, but they also indicated West would be the offensive coach and be subordinate to Riley. Both are former Lakers players, and West coached the team for three years beginning in 1976.

The shakeup came on the heels of Johnson's statement Wednesday night that he was not having fun and wanted to be traded.

Westhead guided the Lakers to the NBA championship in 1980 and the team had won seven of 11 games this season as the players adjusted to a new offensive scheme installed by the coach. But Johnson erupted after a 113-110 Lakers' victory at Utah, saying he was not happy and that he and Westhead "did not see eye to eye."

Buss, however, said Johnson's comments had nothing to do with his decision to fire the coach.

"In the best interests of the entire Lakers organization, I decided to relieve Westhead," said Buss, who spoke with some of the players after the team flew back to town Thursday morning. "I am dedicated to providing the Los Angeles fans an exciting brand of basketball."

He said he was close to making a decision on the coaching situation last Sunday but waited because it was a very big step, with millions of dollars involved.

Buss said his decision was "based on the appearance of the team. I am doing what every single person believed I had to do."

"Obviously it was a difficult decision for us," said Buss, whose club won the NBA title in 1980, his first year as its owner. "There is no way to criticize anybody. I was disappointed in not seeing an exciting team once again. This started after the first or second game."

Although the owner indicated Riley would be in charge of the defense and West the offense, West said: "As I see it, my role is as an assistant coach to Pat Riley. I'm going to work for Pat.

"This will not be a permanent situation for me. I will feel much more confident with Pat taking over. He has ideas and I have ideas.

"I don't think the changes will be very major. I'll be here until Pat can get along by himself. Nobody is happy about this situation (the firing of the coach)."

Riley, asked if West would be his assistant, said, "That's what he expressed to me. He'll have input into the game — everything. That's the only way we can work together."

Riley has been an assistant the past two years.

West played 14 years with the club and led the team in scoring nine times. He was selected to play in the NBA All-Star Game 13 consecutive years and has been inducted into the NBA Hall of Fame.

The Lakers will make their first appearance under the Riley-West duo tonight against the San Antonio Spurs at the Forum.

Johnson, 22, was the catalyst of the Lakers' NBA championship two seasons ago. Last summer, the former Michigan State standout signed a $1 million per year, 25-year contract, starting in the 1984-85 season with the understanding that after his playing days, he would become part of the millionaire Buss' organization.

Buss also had signed Westhead to a four-year contract in 1980 and said he would live up to the terms of the agreement.

"He and I separated on good terms," the Lakers' owner said. "I will live up to all contracts I have signed." Buss also indicated that Westhead might have a job in his various enterprises.

Johnson, who had expressed displeasure with Westhead's new offense, said when informed of the change: "I'm just happy to be here in L.A., I'm happy to still be on the Lakers. I just want to play, and that's the bottom line."

Asked if it would have been difficult for him to stay had Westhead not been fired, Johnson replied: "I don't know... pretty much, but since that's over with, we'll just leave that alone and go on with the new day."

The new Westhead offense was complicated, with more picks and moves, and allowed for little freewheeling, one of the strongest parts of Johnson's game.

A feud apparently had been simmering between Westhead and Johnson for some time. It reached its climax in Utah when Johnson told reporters he wanted to be traded.

Buss had expressed shock over the Johnson statement and said said he planned to talk with several leaders of the Lakers after they arrived home from Salt Lake City.

"I'm going in and ask him (Buss) to deal me," Johnson said. "I haven't been happy all season and I'm not happy now."

Johnson was asked if Westhead was the reason of his discontent and answered, "Yeah. We don't see eye to eye on a lot of things. It's time for me to go."

Westhead relieved Jack McKinney on Nov. 9, 1979 after the latter was seriously hurt in a bicycle accident. Westhead, an assistant coach with the Lakers at the time of McKinney's injury, guided the club to the NBA championship.

McKinney left the Lakers on less than pleasant terms and is now coach of the Indiana Pacers. He called Westhead's firing, "ridiculous." Said McKinney: "The guy won the championship for them."

Last season, the Lakers were eliminated in the first round of the playoffs.

CBS Announces Lengthened Evening News In 83'

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS, which led the move from 15-minute to half-hour evening television news, says it is going ahead with plans to lengthen its evening newscast to as much as an hour by early 1983, despite opposition from network stations.

"It's our anticipation that we'll be able to offer an hour," James Rosenfield, executive vice president of the CBS Broadcast Group, said Thursday night.

CBS said, however, that three proposals are being considered — to expand the news to 45 minutes, expand it to an hour, or provide a combination under which stations would have the option of taking only the first half hour and tuning out for the second.

CBS' decision was announced after two days of what the network described as "extensive and intensive" discussion of the issue with the network's affiliates board, which is meeting in Hawaii.

Plans to expand the newscast have been criticized in the past by stations that say they will lose advertising income from local programming, which they air between 7:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Eastern time — after the network news and before the networks' prime time programming begins.

James Babb, chairman of the CBS Affiliates Advisory Board and executive vice president of WBTV in Charlotte, N.C., said today his own station is "not very enthusiastic" about moving the time slot for its hour of local news because of the possible effect on the station's audience.

The CBS statement said, "The board generally agreed that expanded network news could be of value to the television audience, but that there were many existing obstacles, including local news and programming requirements."

CBS' founder and chairman, William S. Paley, one of the most influential figures in broadcasting, is believed to be a strong supporter of lengthening the evening news. CBS newsman Walter Cronkite has said that 30 minutes is not enough to offer more than a "headline service."

CBS was the first of the three networks to expand the original 15-minute evening newscast to a half hour, in 1963, and NBC and ABC followed suit.

All three networks have expressed interest in the longer format, and it appeared in September that NBC would be the first to take the step. NBC's affiliates board recommended a proposal to offer stations an hour-long newscast, from 7 to 8 p.m. Eastern time, in return for certain commercial considerations. But several influential affiliates, led by Westinghouse's Group W, opposed the plan, and it was shelved.

An NBC spokesman said late Thursday that there was no immediate network reaction to CBS' announcement.

ABC has said only that it is studying the concept. Thursday night, network spokesman Alan Raymond said there was no immediate official network reaction. He added, "it is no secret that ABC News would very much like to expand, but there are other factors." He said the issue would be discussed at the network's own affiliate board meeting in two weeks in Hawaii.

Westinghouse's Group W does not have a member on the CBS affiliate board. But its opposition to a one-hour program has not changed, its executives said earlier in the week.

"Our position is that what the country needs and desires most is more local news," said Larry Freiberg, president of the Group W television station division.

Jas. Arness Back In TV Series To Tame San Pedro, California

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Marshal Matt Dillon, his six-gun blazing again, comes back tonight to tame the wild, wild west town of San Pedro, Calif., in NBC's new James Arness cops-and-robbers series, "McClain's Law."

And this time, Arness has the limp. Chester's gimpy leg must have been contagious.

The 6-foot-7 Arness began a 20-year run on "Gunsmoke" in 1955 after John Wayne turned down the role and recommended his friend for the job. Now, NBC, seeking to hitch its ratings star to Dillon's badge and other golden oldies like Jim Garner and Rock Hudson, has created a vehicle for Arness.

Arness is James McClain, whose leg wound in the line of duty knocked him off the police force in 1966. For the next 15 years, McClain and a partner ran a fishing boat until they sold it. McClain didn't want to spend his golden years punching a 4 a.m. alarm clock.

But a retirement series, with Arness fishing, reading magazines and taking long walks, wasn't what NBC had in mind. So something had to give, and it's McClain's partner. Planning to take his money and move to Iowa, he flashes the cash at the local harbor dive, the Flatfish Cafe.

His crime? Stupidity. His sentence? Death by bullets.

The senseless murder spurs McClain to reapply to the force to avenge the killing. He's now 52 — would this rugged guy really take disability at 37? — but the old geezer can still show those whippersnappers a thing or two.

It's not a bad peg for a cop show, and tonight's pilot is slick and fast-moving. Creator Eric Bercovici, who wrote and produced "Shogun," has constructed an interesting format, although tonight's two-hour pilot is about as subtle as McClain's left hook. You can't teach an old cowpoke new tricks.

Age and the generation gap, focusing on McClain's efforts to cope with today's crime with yesterday's pre-Miranda tactics, can be appealing wrinkles, provided the plots and lesser characters are given some substance.

If McClain's brand of law enforcement is too heavy-handed, can he adjust? The scowling, meanie of a police lieutenant (George DiCenzo) doesn't think so and rejects his application. But McClain tells his story to the local paper — ah, the power of the press — and the mayor demands a police academy tryout.

McClain can jog without limping and the greenhorn recruits can't catch him on the chin-up bar. But he really shines on the shooting range. Twenty years chasing black hats will do that. Every target gets it in the chest. Male and female. Ol' dead-eye is back.

McClain is teamed with a blue-eyed, blond-haired, white-teethed cop, Harry Gates (Marshall Colt). A real heartthrob, who lifts weights, wears spiffy sports jackets and thinks 52-year-old cops should be playing board games, Gates gives McClain a hard time. McClain calls him "Sonny" but finally impresses him with good detective work and a hard-knocks philosophy toward bad guys.

Their friction is a good hook, but by show's end, they're fast friends, leaving the lieutenant, the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Constitution and criminals the only villains.

Arness looks like he can carry this series. Along with his craggy face, gravelly voice and tough stance, he brings a light-hearted ruggedness to McClain. If Arness' method acting is a shot to the face, so be it. This isn't supposed to be Eugene O'Neill.

And the boy next door to McClain's houseboat has a divorced mother with nice legs and an eye for authority figures. Do you suppose "Miiiiister Dillon, Miiiister Dillon" gets to grab Miss Kitty this time?

Midwestern Snowstorm Leaves 11 Inches Of Snow

By The Associated Press

The first big snowstorm of the Midwestern winter killed at least five people and may have been a factor in the collapse of huge fabric dome over the new Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis, officials said.

The storm left up to 11 inches of heavy, wet snow in the southern half of Minnesota and ranked "somewhere in the top 10" of the worst storms in the state's history, said radar specialist Rainer Dombrowsky of the National Weather Service. More than 100,000 homes and businesses lost electrical power when snow-covered trees fell on power lines.

Slushy roads led to an automobile accident that killed two teen-agers near Marshall, Minn., on Wednesday, the State Patrol said. They were identified as Brian Martin, 18, and Keith Paradis, 17, both of the Marshall area.

The Iowa Highway Patrol said a 49-year-old minister, Roderick Jackson, was killed in an icy crash Thursday near Maurice, Iowa, and police in Lincoln, Neb., said Mabel B. Yaney, 91, died of exposure Thursday after accidentally locking herself out of her home.

Jane A. Folsom, 30, of Robinson, Kan., was killed Thursday after losing control of her car on an ice-covered bridge near Hiawatha, Kan., the Kansas Highway Patrol said.

Sixteen people were hurt in a 26-car pileup Thursday night just north of Kansas City, Mo., authorities said. The wrecked cars stretched for a half-mile along the icy highway.

The snow, chilly air and gusty winds snapped a spell of unusually mild weather Wednesday, and only a few flurries were still falling in most areas Thursday night.

The Humphrey Metrodome in downtown Minneapolis collapsed in about an hour Thursday night, less than a day after the roof sagged under the weight of heavy, wet snow. No injuries were reported. Don Poss, executive director of the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission, said the collapse may have been caused indirectly by the 10 inches of snow that fell on the Twin Cities Wednesday night.

"The dome was under higher pressure than normal because of the snow load," he said. "The additional pressure may well have been enough to catch a manufacturing flaw in the dome panel."

Seen through the stadium doors, the sagging roof resembled a souffle gone flat.

Up to 8 inches of snow fell in parts of Wisconsin, and winds gusted up to 41 mph Thursday night. Temperatures were in the mid 20s in some areas, but the wind-chill factor made it feel more like 2 degrees, officials said. Iowa had up to 3 inches of snow.

In Atlanta, meanwhile, a line of thunderstorms slashed across the huge Hartsfield International Airport early today, damaging buildings and six Delta Air Lines planes. There were reports of three minor injuries.

"Two aircraft were struck by ground equipment and one 727-200 was moved 90 degress at the gate," said Delta spokesman Jim Ewing.

"We had some roof damage and some aircraft damage. I don't know how major anything is," said Carolyn Wills, a spokeswoman for Eastern Airlines. She said the only injuries she knew of were "a couple of minor personnel injuries at Eastern."

"No passengers or visitors on parked Delta aircraft or on Delta's oncourse was injured. One stations employee was injured. We don't think it is very severe," Ewing said.

Sales Tax For Schools Is Sought By Educators

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Frustrated in their efforts to pass a $600 million bond issue for school improvements, North Carolina education officials are seeking a one-cent state sales tax increase for the same purpose.

But some key legislators say chances for its passage are slim.

"I'm against it," said state Rep. Al Adams, D-Wake, chairman of the Appropriations Base Budget Committee and vice chairman of the Rules and Operations of the House Committee.

"It's a regressive tax — it has poor people paying to build schools everytime they go to the grocery store.... I haven't heard much sentiment in the legislature in favor of it."

"It has a possibility of passing, but it's a marginal chance," Rep. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, said. "I feel like the bond referendum would be a fairer way to do it."

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles two months ago suggested the one-cent sales tax, with 40 percent going to school construction, 40 percent to city and county governments and 20 percent to water and sewer projects, Davis said.

School officials propose sharing the money with local governments to increase support for the measure.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips supports the move, and it may come up in the legislature in June, Davis said.

Officials of the state Department of Public Instruction have been asking for a $600 million bond referendum since 1978. They are seeking the funds for new buildings to replace temporary and obsolete structures and for renovation and other improvements.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who says he supports the bond issue, has never endorsed putting it on the ballot because poor economic conditions might have defeated it, a spokesman said.

While state leaders and education officials haggle, several school systems say they have pressing needs, totalling $1.8 billion according to a 1980 study. The tax would produce $250 million the first year, about $300 million the second year.

Other school systems have shrinking student populations, due to declining birthrates, but don't have the money they need to replace outdated school buildings.

MUSIC PROGRAM

Oak Grove Holy Church will present a music program Sunday at 7 p.m. The program will be open to the public.

Collision

Cars driven by Christine Ensley Jetter of 705 Tyson St. and Ronald Page Jones of 3105 Tucker Drive collided about 8 a.m. Thursday on Memorial Drive, 54 feet north of the Glennwood Drive intersection.

Police Department investigators estimated damage at $600 to the Jetter car and $2,200 to the Jones vehicle. Ms. Jetter was charged with driving left of center in connection with the collision.

SOMETIMES THE SELLER'S MORTGAGE CAN HELP YOU BUY A HOME.

Most VA and FHA loans are assumable at the original interest rate. Other types of mortgages also may be assumable at interest rates which are lower than current market rates.

Some lenders are now offering preferred or discount rate plans that allow you to assume an existing mortgage at an interest rate higher than the original rate but still lower than the current market rate.

There are other ways to refinance an existing mortgage, and a member of the DUFFUS REALTY staff can provide information regarding these programs. Duffus Realty has loan assumptions among their portfolio of listings. We know what type of financing is available locally. Ask one of our salespeople for help in finding a financing program that can work for you.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP

QNXCQS LRELPR UNZPR UNXC ZPRS XPTLJNQNTCE VJPTXCV

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — MANY IDLE HANDS ARE WELL PAIRED WITH EMPTY HEADS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

In the bridge player's Garden of Eden, the serpent tempts with a finesse instead of an apple. Consider this hand.

As the cards lie, three no trump cannot be defeated. However, should hearts divide 5-3, as is normal, three no trump would stand little chance while four spades would be an overwhelming favorite. North acted wisely when he chose to correct with four trumps and a balanced hand.

To those declarers who are expert in the art of the finesse, the hand presents no problem. Win the king of hearts and lead the nine of clubs, finessing West for the jack. Although this fails, declarer can now force an entry to dummy in clubs by leading low to the ten. Declarer uses this entry to run the ten of spades. Unfortunately, that loses to the king, but declarer is not yet through. The nine of trumps is now an entry for the diamond finesse. Tough luck — West wins the queen for down one. Declarer can rail against the gods for his fate — he went down in a contract because three finesses were wrong!

Rather than complain, declarer should brush up on his technique. He can make the hand without having to take a single finesse! Look what happens if declarer wins the first heart trick, cashes his other high heart, then bangs down the ace and queen of spades.

West should refuse to win this trick, for otherwise declarer has two trump entries to dummy. But declarer continues with the jack, and West must win perforce. His only safe exit is a heart. Declarer ruffs and now makes what seems to be an unusual play — he cashes the ace and king of diamonds, then exits with the jack!

South does not mind which defender wins this trick. Whoever gains the lead has an unappetizing choice of continuations. He can either lead a red suit, which allows declarer to ruff in one hand while discarding a club from the other, or lead a club, which gives declarer a free finesse. Either way, the defenders cannot get more than one club trick and the contract rolls home.

ANNIVERSARY

The closing of the Middle Ground Deacon Union Anniversary will be held Sunday at 7 p.m. at Wynn's Chapel Baptist Church in Robersonville.

The Rev. G.L. Harris' anniversary sermon will be delivered by the Rev. Walter Cherry, accompanied by his choir, deacons, ushers and congregation. Deacon president Seymour Staton and Dr. G.E. Brown, moderator, encourage all deacons to attend. The service will be open to the public.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, NOV. 21, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A good day to extend your activities beyond present boundaries. A time to contact influential persons who are in a position to help you get ahead. Be more practical.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make sensible plans for the future. Do whatever will make your loved one happier. Take time to improve your surroundings.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Study ways to have increased abundance in the future. Consult experts for advice you need in a business transaction.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have fine inventive ideas that should be presented to others without delay. Engage in hobby with congenials.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) A talk with a business expert could lead to financial security in the future. Relax at home tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Personal interests should be uppermost on your mind today for gaining the happiness you seek. Attend a group affair tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get together with one who has much experience and gain the knowledge you need now. Pave the way for greater happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Take time to improve our health and appearance. Joining an outside activity now can help you advance in your career.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show more loyalty to those in high position and you can benefit greatly in the future. Improve your surroundings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Go to the right source for the data you need in a new project you have in mind. Be fair in all your dealings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Using your intuitive faculties will help you today in a business matter. Improve your relationships with associates.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Try to reach an agreement with one who opposes you. A new contact can give you valuable information you need.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have many chores to do now but do the most important first for best results. Follow the advice of a dynamic person.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she may need a little prodding to achieve the success that is in this chart. Direct the education along lines that will prepare your progeny for possible government work. Some religious training is advised.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Retired School Personnel Meet

The Greenville-Pitt County Chapter of North Carolina Retired School Personnel met Wednesday for a luncheon and business meeting.

President Irma Carr presided over the meeting and reports were given by Dorothy Johnson, secretary; Dr. Lawrence Brewster, treasurer, and Carman Dawkins, membership chairman.

Guest speaker Ernest Carraway spoke on "Tax Credits for the Elderly." Topics of discussion included the Andrus Foundation and the Northeastern District annual meeting in Washington, D.C., which was attended by W.W. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Williams and Mrs. Dawkins.

The local chapter has 150 members and is the largest group in the 15 counties that make up the Northeastern District.

HELMS DINNER

A dinner in honor of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., will be held Saturday at 6:30 p.m., at the Lenoir Community College Gymnatorium in Kinston.

Tickets are available locally by contacting Carol Patterson at 752-5466 or 752-4827.
