Bound For Foreign Markets

TOBACCO FOR EXPORT — Hundreds of hogsheads of tobacco are stored in warehouses such as this at the North Carolina Ports of Morehead City and Wilmington awaiting shipment to Japan, Thailand and Northern Europe. A hogshead is a rounded-wooden crate which contains 950 to 1,000 pounds of processed leaf tobacco. Over 125,000 hogsheads are expected to move through the state's two deep-water facilities by the time the tobacco shipping season is over in mid-February. The ports are also handling about 30,000 tons of baled, imported tobacco this season for use in special blends of cigarette and pipe tobaccos. Tobacco is the state's largest export commodity, other than furniture. (State Ports Authority Photo)

Another Battle Of Budget In 2 Weeks

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is back in business and President Reagan's running budget battle with Congress is on hold after approval of a revised emergency spending measure.

"Of course, we now must come back and do the work all over again in the Congress on a bill that can be signed," Reagan said Monday night after he signed the stopgap spending bill, which expires Dec. 15.

Shortly afterward, Reagan left the White House for his California ranch, a Thanksgiving vacation that had been delayed a day because of the budget impasse.

In a telephone call from Air Force One, Reagan told the Republican Governors Association meeting in New Orleans that the battle with Congress had been "a game of chicken, and someone just had to bring it to a halt."

Reagan's acceptance of the new measure ended a confrontation with Congress that led to the president's first veto and the layoffs of hundreds of thousands of federal employees.

The president's supporters in Congress said the episode was fresh evidence of Reagan's resolve to slash federal spending. But furious Democratic leaders said the skirmishing that left the government technically insolvent for nearly 67 hours was only "a charade."

Reagan believes "there is a lot more work to be done," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. "He's looking forward to working with Congress when he returns."

On Monday morning, Reagan vetoed a $428 billion emergency spending bill, expiring July 15, that a bitterly divided Congress had sent him late Sunday night. The House then voted 367-26 for a Republican-drafted compromise that expires Dec. 15 — as Reagan had requested.

The measure Reagan signed simply extended the interim spending legislation that expired at midnight Friday.

Democrats had wanted to extend interim spending authority through Feb. 3, but the Republican plan was substituted on a vote of 221-176.

Then the measure sailed through the Republican-controlled Senate, 88-1, with only Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California voting against it.

Reagan actually gained little from the confrontation in his efforts to hold down spending.

Congressional officials said that on an annual basis, the measure Reagan signed calls for about $27.3 billion less in spending authority than the measure Reagan vetoed. But $25 billion of that would come from defense, where Reagan wants to spend more money, and only $2.3 billion from domestic accounts, where he wants to spend less.

And the bill will remain in effect only for about three weeks.

With Reagan's signature, normal government operations were resumed.

Reagan said the measure he vetoed and his order to close "non-essential" offices and send an estimated 400,000 federal workers home were necessary because the bill was fiscally ruinous, paving "the way for higher interest rates and inflation, and a continued loss of investment, jobs and economic growth."

House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said that from the president's viewpoint the issue was "how do I really make my point that I'm serious about this."

Democrats scoffed.

City Council OKs Funds For Humber House Work

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The City Council adopted an ordinance Monday providing for the allocation, through a Community Development budget amendment, of $45,000 as the city's committed share for renovations to the Humber House on Fifth Street.

The council, meeting in a special call session, amended the CD budget ordinance to reflect the funding, which is being shared by the county government.

Mayor Don McGlohon said "no one would disagree" that the Humber property "should be restored and saved." He said the county had already committed its half of the funds and the ordinance amendment fulfills the city's commitment.

The house, it was pointed out, will be renovated and made available to the state Division of Archives and History as a regional office.

Maury York, a member of the Environmental Advisory Commission here, endorsed the council action and cited the "positive economic benefits" that will result from preservation of the house.

In other business, council members adopted a resolution establishing a policy for provision of transit service on holidays. The resolution stipulates that when there are two consecutive holidays, bus service will be provided on one of the city holidays contingent upon the availability of funds other than from budgeted revenue sources. The Public Transportation Commission will determine the fund availability.

Mayo Allen, Public Works director, said in the past merchants have been asked to sponsor a "ride free" day in conjunction with holiday bus service. Allen said it was felt the council should establish a policy relative to funding by merchants and other sources outside budgeted revenues.

Councilman Louis Clark said he was in favor of operating the buses on one of the holidays if the costs are handled by those who benefit from the rider traffic.

The council also:

— Approved a contract with Mrs. Kate Ohno for a historic preservation survey and inventory of historical and architecturally significant structures within the city ($7,950 contract);

— Approved a request by Donald Gorham to close an unimproved portion of Pearl Drive located west of Allendale Drive, with the right-of-way deeded to People's Baptist Temple;

— Adopted an amendment to the Public Works Capital Project Fund appropriating $19,889 (realized from sales tax refunds relative to construction of the Public Works facility) to cover debt service, equipment, and construction materials needs;

— Approved appraisal contracts for the South Evans Community Development Project with low bidders Casper E. Dozier ($7,984) and Lester Turnage ($7,850);

— Adopted a legal resolution designating redevelopment responsibilities to the council; and — Authorized the city tax collector to set just compensation for property acquisition under the CD program.

Schmidt Sees No Change In Brezhnev Nuke Offer

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt sees no major changes in Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's new offer on missile reductions in Europe, Schmidt's spokesman, Kurt Becker, said today.

Becker told a news conference that Schmidt "has actually taken over the function of an interpreter" between his American allies and the Soviet Union.

"The chancellor hopes that the secretary-general (Brezhnev) with greater trust meets the United States' willingness to negotiate," Becker said.

Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamyatin took sharp issue with the idea that the Soviet leadership lacked understanding of the United States.

"I don't know if...the statement is Herr Becker's own opinion...but if he has formed such an opinion that the Soviet leadership doesn't correctly understand the intentions of the American administration, that is not right. That is a false opinion," Zamyatin said.

The Soviet spokesman also reacted bitterly when Becker passed on the word that Schmidt, "since he himself was recently sick," was impressed with Brezhnev's vigor and his busy schedule.

Schmidt underwent surgery last month to have a heart pacemaker implanted, and Brezhnev is also thought to have a pacemaker.

"That his physical condition is good and that he is capable of work, that all is evidenced by the talks...the number of the talks and the length of the talks he had yesterday," Zamyatin said.

Brezhnev spent some seven hours in meetings with West German leaders on Monday, he said, and listed Brezhnev's busy schedule today "to...illustrate that the remarks of Herr Becker were not right."

Brezhnev on Monday night offered to reduce the number of Soviet medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe if the United States suspended its missile deployment plans while the two superpowers negotiate.

The offer, made in a speech during a dinner given by Schmidt, was a variation on a 1979 proposal rejected by the United States and its North Atlantic allies.

The 74-year-old Soviet leader offered to go a step further if the United States and NATO declared a moratorium on their plans to begin stationing 572 American Pershing 2 and cruise nuclear missiles in Western Europe in the fall of 1983.

"As a gesture of good will, we could unilaterally reduce a portion of our nuclear weapons of medium range in the European part of the U.S.S.R.," Brezhnev said.

He said this reduction would be "an advance on account, with the idea of moving toward a lower level opn which the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. could concur" in the negotiations that begin Monday in Geneva.

"As far as our side is concerned," he said, "we would be ready to undertake the reduction not by dozens, but by hundreds."

Schmidt during a three-hour session with Brezhnev earlier Monday rejected the Soviet demand for a moratorium on the NATO plans. A spokesman for the chancellor said he told his guest if he wanted no new American missiles stationed in Europe, he must "take away" all the Soviet missiles targeted on Western Europe.

Fifty People Removed From A Drifting North Sea Oil Rig

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Battling 40-foot waves on the North Sea and 90-mph winds, helicopters evacuated 50 people today from a drifting British oil rig and rescued seven seamen from a listing Norwegian freighter.

Oil company officials said there was no danger to the other 20 people aboard the rig, the Transworld 58, which snapped its anchors and was drifting very slowly about 150 miles east of Aberdeen, Scotland. Three tugs pursued the rig, waiting to attach a tow-line.

One of the sailors aboard the Norwegian freighter Soerstrand was "lifeless" when pulled aboard a helicopter, the Danish coast guard reported. It was unknown whether the man was revived.

Heavy seas washed over a fishing trawler between the Orkney and Shetland Islands, off the northern coast of Scotland, killing one fisherman and leaving two others missing, officials said.

Residents along the Danish North Sea coast were evacuated from low-lying areas because officials said they feared high seas might break through dikes and cause tides up to 18 feet above normal.

It was the first time that section of coast was evacuated since a storm lashed West Jutland in January, 1976, authorities said.

The worst gales and tides in five years lashed the North German coast, disrupting ferry travel in the North Sea and flooding a wide area of the lowland plain. Winds uprooted trees and snarled traffic. In Hamburg, traffic was sealed off in lowlying areas north of the city along the Elbe River.

Press Association in London reported earlier that the Norwegian supply rig Phillips SS, with 112 men aboard, broke loose from its anchors 30 miles north of the British rig and was in danger of colliding with another rig with 82 men aboard until a tug got hold of it.

The news agency said a Norwegian Coast Guard spokesman at Stavanger, Norway's North Sea oil center, told it the tug checked the drifting Phillips SS when it was within 250 feet of the production rig Tor.

"The situation is now under control," the spokesman said.

But in Oslo, the Norwegian capital, Phillips Petroleum Co. spokesman Sander Bull-Gjertsen said only one of the supply rig's eight anchors had broken loose, the rig was never adrift, and there was no danger of collision with the Tor.

"To help stabilize the supply rig, the tug Tender Power has a wire fixed to the supply rig. Still another tug is standing by, but there is no need to evacuate the supply rig's 112 crew members," Bull-Gjertsen told the Norwegian radio.

Nicaragua Topic In Mexico Talks

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Jose Lopez Portillo and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. were expected to discuss the "radicalization of the Nicaraguan regime" during a one-hour meeting today.

Haig, who returns home today, told reporters traveling on his plane from Washington on Monday that he would stress with Mexican officials how the "totalitarian regime in Nicaragua comes as a threat to peace and stability and peaceful social and economic changes."

In a veiled reference to reports that the United States is considering military options against Nicaragua and Cuba, Lopez Portillo told a meeting of Latin American parliamentary leaders on Monday that the region "is living through a time of very severe testing" in terms of the willingness of nations to coexist without meddling in each other's affairs.

Despite the various ideologies which set nations apart, Lopez Portillo said Monday, "the free determination of peoples, respect for their sovereignty, the peaceful solution of controversies, equality among states and non-intervention" are principles that should be respected by all.

State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said Haig's talk with Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda on Nicaragua "reflected a common perception" by the United States and Mexico, even if the countries differed sharply in how to deal with the problem.

Mexico maintains close ties with both Cuba and the revolutionary regime in Nicaragua. The Reagan administration claims both countries are responsible for the shipment of arms to leftist guerrillas in Central American.

An estimated 1,000 leftists demonstrated outside the U.S. Embassy here Sunday to protest Haig's visit and the Reagan administration's anti-communist stance in Latin America. The demonstrators called for support of Cuba and Nicaragua and leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

As a security measure, U.S. Embassy officials have tried to keep Haig's visit as low-key as possible by restricting his schedule and keeping details of his movements secret.

B-52s Display Long Range In Egypt Flight

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press Writer

WADI NATRUN, Egypt (AP) — Six giant B-52 bombers unloaded their 500-pound bombs today in a spectacular live ammunition demonstration as part of America's military exercises in the desert west of Cairo.

The bombers which refueled over the Atlantic during the 7,500 mile, 15-hour nonstop flight from Minot Air Force Base, North Dakota, dropped 27 bombs each from an altitude of 1,000 feet.

The demonstration of long-range air power was part of Operation Bright Star, a month-long test in Egypt, Sudan, Somalia and Oman of the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force.

In Moscow, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda denounced the maneuvers as "the biggest provocation" against peace and stability in the Middle East. It said Bright Star was "tactical testing of methods of invasion ... to intimidate progressive forces of the region."

The bombing was the culmination of a three-day battlefield exercise involving 4,000 U.S. troops. It began Sunday with a helicopter assault by 600 American paratroopers and 400 Egyptian soldiers on two hills in the desert near Cairo West Airbase, 18 miles west of Cairo.

Also taking part were Soviet-built Badger bombers and MiG jetfighters and French-made Mirage fighters from the Egyptian air force plus U.S. A-10 and F-16 jets.

Two American AWACS — airborne warning and control system — planes were assigned to provide radar warning of the bombers' approach and to serve as aerial command posts.

Egyptian Defense Minister Abdel Halim Abu Ghazala said the exercises "are a rehearsal for a possible joint operation" to protect the oilfields of the Persian Gulf.

"If any threat takes place in the Persian Gulf, I think the United States should do something to help those countries protect themselves from any invasion," he said.

He added, however, that Egypt and the United States would not give help to a threatened country unless the country asked for it.

"It's a chance for us to train with Egyptian troops, take their tactics and technical expertise and put them together with ours," said a U.S. military spokesman who asked not to be identified.

This is the second year of maneuvers in Egypt for the Rapid Deployment Force, which the Carter administration organized after the Iranian revolution and the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. Last year 1,400 Americans took part in the exercises with Egyptian forces.

WHY ADVERTISE?

I would like to know why Pitt County Memorial Hospital is spending money for large billboards on the highway in Greenville and outside of Raleigh when, according to the news reports, the hospital is already overcrowded. It seems strange to me to advertise like this. W.C.

The billboards (one on Memorial Drive, which will be moved to Greenville Boulevard in January, and one on U.S. 64-U.S. 264 near Raleigh) are not intended to advertise for patients. They are being used "as a recruiting tool for nursing personnel," according to PCMH director Jack Richardson, "as part of a statewide and nationwide recruiting program," to bring nurses to Greenville.

The additional bed tower, which will open at Thanksgiving, has to be staffed "and a complement of over 100 registered nurses will be needed in the next year," Richardson emphasized. "It's just part of a total program to bring visibility to professional personnel who might seek employment in Greenville at the medical center."

First Adopt-A-School Breakfast Opens Drive

The Pitt County Community Schools Program held its first "Adopt-A-School" breakfast recently at Wellcome Middle School, with representatives present from all 20 schools in the county along with groups, individuals and businesses who "adopted" one or more of the schools.

The Adopt-A-School concept involves groups and citizens of the community willing to share time and experiences to enrich the educational background of students. The background of the adoptor reflects a variety of economic, social, racial, religious, ethnic and educational backgrounds.

"It brings back that sense of community lacking in many of our schools," commented one adoptor on the program.

Dr. Charles Petty of the Governor's Office of Citizen Affairs was the guest speaker for the event. "These are your schools," said Petty. "These students will be the leaders of tomorrow and it is our responsibility to do our part for them today."

Schools and their adoptors are as follows:

•Ayden Elementary: Ayden Elementary Listeners, Ayden United Methodist Men, Book Hours Book Club, Book Lovers Club, Farmers' Agri-Supply, Ayden-Grifton Kiwanis Club, Silk Screens Unlimited.

Travel Along with Janet Stoughton

Choosing the lowest fare to Pacific points can be tricky simply because the distances are so vast and there are so many widely separated destinations. The best idea is to consult a travel agent before firming up any plans. As a rule of thumb, it is helpful to know that tour based fares to the Orient and Pacific are generally much lower than regular economy fares. Fares to Hawaii have become comparatively less expensive,and visiting the other Hawaiian islands, has become less expensive as well. There is only a small additional fee for visiting other islands in the Hawaiian chain.

For your Hawaiian tour or your Swiss ski vacation, for your business trip to New York or your Mardi Gras reservations in New Orleans, for Christmas travel or weekend commuting, contact QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC for expert assistance with all your travel planning. Senior Citizens Heard Speaker

The Pitt County Senior Citizens Social Club met recently in the Council on Aging office here, with Mrs. Josephine Reaves presiding.

Twenty-two members attended. Mrs. Beatrice C. Maye, guest speaker, spoke from the theme, "How to Make the Rest of Your Life the Best of Your Life." She listed the six great killers after 60: worry, fatigue, mental stagnation, chronic infection and retirement shock and the "Big Six" for a long and happy life: wise eating, regular exercise, rest-relaxation, peace of mind, accident prevention and moderation in everything one does. She summarized her points by giving the two words that will bring happiness throughout life: Keep busy, keep in the stream of life. She passed out handouts of interest to the group.

Dear Abby

Sweet Smell Eludes Woman Plagued by Odor

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You are the only person I know who can help me. I have a problem that didn't just start. I've had it all my life, but lately it's really been getting to me. I stink. You know, body odor. I suppose I should try to find a doctor who deals with this sort of thing, but because of my embarrassment and inability to talk openly about it, I've gotten nowhere.

Abby, I'm a clean person. I bathe twice a day and sometimes three times. I use an anti-perspirant as frequently as I bathe, and I change undergarments as well as outergarments every day without fail. I'm almost a fanatic about dental hygiene. I brush my teeth and use a mouthwash several times a day.

I've given up using perfumes or colognes because even though I could smell the fragrance, other people would smell the offensive odor I was trying to cover up, and they'd make nasty comments like, "Soap and water are cheaper and would do you more good."

Abby, if you think I should see a doctor, at least please tell me what kind of doctor I should see.

SMELLS BAD IN KENTUCKY

DEAR SMELLS: See your family physician for a thorough checkup and tell him exactly what you've told me. If there is actually an offensive odor, he will determine the source and prescribe a remedy. If there is none — if you're only imagining it — you have another problem, which can be relieved by treatment. Don't despair. In any case, it's nothing to be ashamed of and you can be helped.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Over the years I have had the problem of telephoning a friend's home, asking for the friend by name, and being asked, "Who is calling, please?" I was even told recently by the wife of a friend that it is common courtesy to identify myself before asking to speak to her husband!

Am I wrong to assume that a conversation is private and privileged communication between two adults and need not be censored by anyone else?

Frequently a small child will answer the phone and persistently ask, "Who is this?"

Please let me know what is common courtesy between two adults.

PAYSON PETE IN ARIZONA

DEAR PETE: The most courteous callers start off with, "This is John Jones calling. Is Mr. Smith available?" Mr. Smith has a right to know who is calling him before he picks up the telephone. Most busy mothers instruct their youngsters to ask who's calling, so don't blame the child for carrying out mother's instructions.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: If you have ever addressed yourself to my problem, I've missed it, so here's hoping you'll comment again.

I'm middle-aged and happily married, but for a year now I've had a terrific crush on a man who attends the same church my family and I do. I try to justify it by telling myself that no one is being hurt since I'm the only one who knows it, and it has made my middle years easier to bear as a result of the excitement and anticipation I experience when I know I'm going to see him or talk to him.

It has not interfered with the strong, happy relationship I have with my husband and I don't expect that it will. In a way it has made me feel like a schoolgirl again — very nice.

Can it really be wrong?

Candlelight Wedding Performed On Sunday

PLYMOUTH — Ginger Murl McQueen and Gordan Keith Vann were united in marriage Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Plymouth United Methidist Church in a candlelight ceremony. The Rev. Vasser W. Jones performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eldred L. McQueen of Plymouth. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Geraldine Clemmer of Roanoke Rapids and the late P.D. Clemmer.

A program of wedding music was presented by Peggy Adams, organist and Cyndi Hewitt sang "The Song of Ruth" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The best man was Milton Carroll of Scotland Neck and the usher was Eldred McQueen, brother of the bride of Plymouth. The honor attendant, Lisa Frymier of Plymouth, wore a formal gown of burgundy silk designed by Oscar de la Renta. The sleeveless gown was accented with an off-the-shoulder ruffle. The gown featured a fitted bodice and full skirt. She carried three long-stemmed silk mauve colored roses accented with baby's breath and Boston fern. The bridesmaid, Christy McQueen, sister of the bride of Plymouth, wore a dress identical to that of the maid of honor. She also carried three long-stemmed roses.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silesta over white peau de soie. The Queen Anne neckline was outlined in silk floral Venise lace and beaded with clusters and scrolls of bridal pearls. The lace extended to and encircled the empire waistline. The long-fitted sleeves were accented by silk floral Venise lace and the cuffs were edged in scalloped lace. The pleated full skirt extended into an attached chapel length train. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in silk Venise lace. The veil was held in place by a lace caplet beaded with pearls. The bride carried a silk cascading bouquet of burgundy sweetheart roses, tiger lilies, ivory daisies, baby's breath, pink anemone and Boston fern.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of azalea pink crepe and an orchid corsage.

A reception was given following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall by the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Klass greeted the guests and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Frymier presided at the register.

The refreshment table was centered with an assortment of flowers and candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Frymier hosted a brunch at their home om the morning of the wedding.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by June Waters. Hostesses were Hazel Hedgepeth, Catherine Chesson and Francis Klass. The wedding party, relatives, and friends attended.

After a wedding trip to the Pocono Mountains, the couple will live in Grimesland.

The bridegroom is employed as a project industrial engineer at the National Spinning Company, Washington. The bride is a teller at Branch Bank and Trust Co., Greenville.

Powell-Brink Vows Exchanged

VANCEBORO — Linda Higgins Brink and George MacRay Powell were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. The double ring ceremony was presented by the Rev. Kenneth Townsend in St. Paul's Episcopal Church here.

A program of wedding music was presented by Sylvia McCreary, organist and Serena Matney, violinist.

Parents of the bride are Mr. Ottis Higgins of Smithfield and Mrs. Lonnie Fennel of Bartonville, Ill. The bridegroom is the son of Mary G. Powell of Vanceboro and the late L.E. Powell.

The bride was given in marriage by her son, Pete Brink. She wore a floor length gown of silk organza over taffeta. The wedding band neckline and sheer bishop sleeves were trimmed in lace. The bodice was accented with tucks and lace which extended to a natural waistline encircled with a belt of bridal satin ribbon. She chose a Juliet cap with a chapel length veil trimmed in alencon lace and carried a bouquet of minuet roses, stephanotis, baby's breath and lace fern.

The maid of honor was Amber Brink, daughter of the bride, with Dusty Woodbury of Greenville attending as bridesmaid. They wore formal gowns of burgundy lusteglo designed with an accordian pleated skirt which flared from an empire bodice. The sleeveless dresses were complemented with English net capes which fastened at the neck. They each carried bouquets of silk flowers.

The best man was Lou Powell, brother of the bridegroom, while the ushers included Douglas Robinson of New Bern and Mike Morton of Vanceboro. The ring bearers were Travis and Matt Powell, nephews of the bridegroom.

The wedding was directed by Judy Tunstall and Patty Jefferson, both of Washington.

The bride is a graduate of ECU and is employed with Pitt County Schools. The bridegroom, a graduate of Lenoir Community College, is self-employed.

The couple will reside in Washington after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

A reception was held at the home of Mary G. Powell, mother of the bridegroom. Peggy Lancaster presided at the guest register while Mrs. Jim Sandlin and Mrs. Bob Boone assisted with the cake and punch.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

The other day on a talk show when I mentioned being married for 32 years, the audience gave me a standing ovation.

It was the kind of tumultuous applause usually reserved for an 85-foot redwood, Katharine Hepburn or a battleship returning to port.

It was sweet. It really was. But at my age, I don't need approval . . . I need a booster shower.

Boy, for awhile I had it all going. What with the loot from two kitchen showers, three miscellaneous, one bathroom, one personal, and my mother calling in all the IOUs . . . I figured I was set for life.

I had a toaster for each finger, blankets for three beds, enough dishes to throw a state dinner and enough gadgets to play "Stump Julia Child."

Dishtowels? It was three years before I stopped treating them as disposables. Around the third year, I chipped my egg separator and bent my cake tester, but the storehouse groaned under the necessities of life.

The year the children started doing dishes, I lost the six sets of glasses, three sets of dishes, silver setting for 16 and a coffee pot that drowned when the electrical plug was submerged in water.

The year the children went to camp, I lost four complete sets of towels, two complete sets of sheets, two pillows and a jeweled clock with two people in it dancing to "The Anniversary Waltz."

The year the children gave a carnival in the back yard, I lost a card table and four chairs, a large punch bowl with 16 cups, a colander and three pots (worn as hats in a parade), plus a popcorn popper, hibachi and all the wickets from the croquet set.

When the children went off to college, I lost our television set, 9 x 12 rug, five lamps, car, sewing machine, typewriter, bathroom heater and chess set.

When the children went to their own apartments, I lost whatever was left.

You see before you the broken remains of a storybook wedding . . . a woman who uses old shorts to dry dishes . . . who uses corn holders to tack notes on the bulletin board . . . who steals plastic spoons from fast food-stores.

Go ahead, someone. Surprise me with a booster shower. I'm free Saturday night.

Tie a ribbon around the hanger of a garment that needs to be mended so that it is easily visible in the closet.

TORTILLAS ARE MEXICAN BREAD

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — The tortilla, a ubiquitous part of Mexican cooking, is actually one of the world's simplest breads.

Tortillas are created by softening dried corn in lime water, forming a thin cake and baking.

Tortillas are available today in most American grocery stores in both frozen and fresh varieties, says Patio Mexican Foods.

Auditing Is Essential

A real revelation came out of the recent state audit release of East Carolina University's athletic department records.

The state auditor's office is prohibited by law from auditing the athletic records of state universities unless the audit is requested by the institution.

State Auditor Ed Renfrew said his office audits some school's athletic budgets, but he wasn't certain which ones. He made it clear, however, that his office did not audit the athletic records of UN-C-Chapel Hill and N. C. State, the two largest athletic budgets in North Carolina.

How did this incredible situation come about? Well, it is not difficult to imagine friends of institutions which don't want auditors meddling sidling up to Legislative members and pointing out this desire.

Then it is easy to slip the necessary wordage in a long and complicated bill which eventually slides right through the General Assembly.

What happens if allegations of slush funds and such eventually surface? Why the legislators express surprise that such a restriction was ever included and immediately declare they would have never voted for it if they had but known it was there.

However it happened, it should be corrected. Budgets for athletic programs that operate on campuses or property owned by the state, campuses supported by hard working taxpayers, should be subject to state audit.

The UNC Board of Governors should make this clear to any dissenting institution, responsible members of the Legislature should make certain that this glaring deficiency in state auditing procedures is corrected and, if all else fails, the North Carolina courts should make certain that the interests of the taxpayers are protected.

Let Us Complete This Drive

The resignation of Howard G. Dawkins was announced by Joe Gantz, chairman of the board of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, last week.

It was also announced that work on the new facilities for the center is being slowed down pending completion of a fund raising drive.

It is being attempted to raise $1.2 million to match $3.9 million in federal and state grants for the structure.

The campaign is being conducted under the chairmanship of Morris Brody and some $350,000 is still needed.

The center has grown and the capital improvements project has come far under the leadership of Howard Dawkins. It will certainly be fitting if the final phase of the fund-raising drive can be completed in short order, thus fulfilling a dream.

THIS AFTERNOON

Look To Reforms

By Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — There was a considerable amount of grousing among legislators when the North Carolina General Assembly finally finished its 1981 business.

Three sessions was a bit much, especially when the final one was only for redistricting which was imperfectly done in the House of Representatives, and not changed in the State Senate.

Serious thought is being given to some method to both limit the sessions of the General Assembly, and to get a better system of outlining what the agency is supposed to do, what it is not necessarily involved in, and the most effective way to handle business.

Quietly, at the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill and in the offices of several members of the General Assembly, the problems are being analyzed and thought given to reform.

If the informal group involved can come up with a better plan, they will present it to the leadership of the General Assembly and request that a formal legislative study commission be established next year.

The sorely missed ingredient in the formula for legislation is an agenda. Any member can take the floor at will and introduce any sort of proposal or resolution. Local legislation continues to dominate the time and energy of legislators as business matters which are of limited importance and almost no statewide importance clutter the business day.

Most legislative committees, during the regular sessions, meet for only one hour each week to run through the proposals — big or little — which demand their scrutiny and action. Given the numerous pressure groups, state agencies, volumes of words, and the mixture of inconsequential with monumental, there is little wonder that mistakes are made.

A first, critical step in reform would involve close study of other state assemblies to see which have limiting mechanisms and how they handle the flow of legislative business.

If, some of those involved in the study think, the General Assembly had a firmly established beginning and ending date, the leadership would be forced to take care of all the essential business within that framework.

Well ahead of the beginning date, a deadline could be set for filing legislative proposals, with exceptions allowed only upon agreement from members.

Strict limits could be established on local legislation so that proposals already covered by law could be determined, and so that those which have statewide implications could be handled for all local governments instead of the same matter being done over and over again.

Planning

With proposals filed and the formal agenda drawn up before the session convenes, the various committees could begin meeting and when necessary holding public hearings. This would allow ample time for study and debate without members being distracted by the clock and by other committee assignments.

To the editor:

This week is the annual celebration of American Education Week, with the theme, "American Education: Partners in Your Children's Future."

Perhaps no other institution in America, with the probable exception of home and government, has received as much abuse and ill repute as education in recent years. Daily newspaper accounts and television clips indicate the decline in students' SAT scores and the vandalism which permeates schools. Evidence of inadequacies and results of poor performance seemingly highlight conversation of many of our citizens.

During this week we educators invite and encourage all segments of American society to evaluate your own contribution to the development of quality education in our schools. Educators need the tangible and intangible support of the public. Whether you are a school volunteer at the elementary level, a member of the PTA or PTO at the middle school level or an athletic booster at the high school level, educators need you to constructively participate in forging a network of care, concern and contribution through which students may be benefitted by the experiences we all provide.

Educators want your insights and assistance throughout the school year. We can never afford to have anyone believe that American Education Week is only a week set aside in November; American Education Week is conducted each day of each week in the schools of our nation.

May I ask each citizen to actively engage themselves in participating in making our schools second to none in this nation. And may I invite your observations and feedback through proper communicative channels in order to enhance the learning opportunities of our students. And may I encourage the public to work cooperatively with school leadership and personnel to magnify the public awareness of the positive role and indisputable value of our schools, and we need it now.

Education needs committed people in the classroom, in leadership positions and in the community. May we become determined, dedicated partners committed to improving the future of our young people.

Visit and work with the schools!!

ANOTHER SORT OF 'TRICKLE-DOWN' OPERATION!

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Losing War On Crime

MIAMI — We use the word "war" too loosely. In recent years we have talked of a war on poverty, a war on inflation, a war on drunk drivers, and even a war on the Mediterranean fruit fly. The war we hear most about these days is the war on crime. And the grim truth is that we are losing it.

We are losing this metaphorical "war" for the same reason we lost a real war in Vietnam: We are not serious about winning it. For all the talk, we have yet to take those measures, especially at the national level, that would involve an all-out commitment of money, manpower and resources.

Last week this beautiful but beleaguered city recorded its 549th homicide of 1981. Charles Whited, writing in the Miami Herald, bluntly defined the area's No. 1 problem: "violent, brutal, vicious crime of epidemic scope." Miami has become "a community besieged," he said, in which an innocent population lives at the mercy of criminals of the most hardened sort.

The problem here, as in so many great cities, is the problem of the drug trade: marijuana, cocaine and heroin. The stuff arrives by the ton, by the planeload, by the boatload. All the evils of gangland Chicago in the days of Prohibition have returned. Rival gangs fight bloody wars for a share of the turf. Local law enforcement officials are as helpless as so many Cub Scouts in a rumble with the Black Panthers.

Miami's 200 Club held its annual fund-raising dinner the other night. The club's purpose is to provide lump-sum benefits for the widows and orphans of police and firemen who die in the line of duty. A dozen local police chiefs were in attendance. Vehemently, almost bitterly, they pleaded for the kind of federal action that might change a no-win war into a winnable war.

What action? Bring on the United States Navy, urged one police chief. And the Air Force, too, said another. Their point was that the nation maintains a highly sophisticated and effective system of coastal surveillance. Not a plane flies in the Caribbean without the knowledge of the Air Force. Yet for some unfathomable reason, embedded in the old Posse Comitatus Act, this intelligence cannot be made available to civilian law enforcement agencies.

Do something about bail, said the chiefs. Eight months ago, after a tedious and dangerous investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration arrested a notorious trafficker in drugs, one Jose Antonio Fernandez. A federal judge in Vero Beach fixed his bond at $20 million. In April a federal magistrate in New Orleans, where the case had been moved for trial, reduced the bond to $10 million. Shortly thereafter, another federal judge further reduced the bond to $500,000. The accused's lawyers promptly showed up with a cashier's check for $500,000. Fernandez hasn't been seen since. It was a mere business expense.

The Florida police chiefs want a short and simple federal law to this effect: Any person convicted of using a firearm in a criminal offense gets an extra five to 10 years in prison — mandatory, no deals, no plea bargaining, no time off, no suspended sentences. If such a law were strictly enforced, word would move swiftly through the underground. Some of the homicidal violence might be contained. A dozen such bills are pending in Congress. What's wrong with Congress, the chiefs ask. Why doesn't Congress act on these things?

Most criminal offenses, of course, are state offenses, not federal offenses. The prevention, detection and punishment of crime must remain primarily local responsibilities. Almost no one disagrees with that proposition. But here in southern Florida, criminal activity and drug activity are so intertwined that one cannot be separated from the other — and drug smuggling most emphatically is a federal crime. We are fighting this war with popguns. No wonder the lords of cocaine are winning.

Mubarak Is Determined

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

CAIRO, Egypt — Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak foresees "rejoicing" in Moscow and the "rejectionist" Arab camp if the long-stalled Egyptian-Israeli West Bank autonomy talks fail.

Articulate and plain-spoken, the heir of Anwar Sadat told us in an exclusive interview: "Failure of the autonomy talks will create more suspicion of America in the whole Arab world but it will bring rejoicing in the Soviet Union and the rejectionist camp (which opposes any deal with Israel). The Russians twice told President Sadat that with America, you will never succeed but with the Soviets you will."

If a Palestinian settlement cannot be reached within the Camp David framework, Mubarak said, "The Arab world will see that the Soviets are correct. We must succeed."

Mubarak received us in his presidential house, called Aruba Palace, built 50 years ago by an Egyptian made rich as King Farouk's jeweler. If he is having difficulty establishing himself as the third modern pharoah in postFarouk Egypt, it does not show. His chief concern today is to make absolutely certain that nothing interferes with the final withdrawal of Israel from the Sinai Peninsula by next April 25. That explains his monotonous refrain that Egypt remains "totally committed" to the Camp David peace process. He means it.

Mubarak's early weeks in office show continuity with Sadat's sensational 11-year rule of the country that has become America's most powerful friend in the Arab world. His first task — internal security following Sadat's assassination — has gone better than some of his own associates expected. Despite dire predictions in Washington, Israel and elsewhere of internal upheaval, Mubarak is believed to have a solid grip on his police, intelligence and armed forces, all essential to domestic order.

The new president's second, more troubling problem is the economy. Runaway food subsidies, combined with reduced income from oil sales, inflation and lack of money for capital investment, are a major threat. The subsidies must be curtailed early next year. No economist, Mubarak has assembled the country's top financial and economic brainsand opened the door to a public debate on how to handle the explosive subsidy question. Public debates have not always been welcomed in previous governments.

A third immediate problem for Mubarak is the purely political one of identification: to take some dramatic action, possibly in the economio field, that will give his presidency an identity of its own after the celebrated years of Anwar Sadat.

Mubarak's accession looks like roses compared to the thorns that hemmed in Sadat in 1970. Gamal Abdel Nasser bequeathed him 17,000 Soviet military advisers, a government infiltrated by pro-Soviet activists plotting a coup d'etat and a reeling, socialized economy. Worst of all, the then-great enemy, Israel, held the Sinai and the eastern bank of the blocked Suez Canal.

Both Mubarak and the high command he inherited from Sadat know that one key to his future — and the larger future of the Middle East — is the vital Egyptian-American connection which was created by Sadat. That will greatly depend on the perception of Mubarak by the American public. There is much private talk here at the top about the president's crucial first trip to the U.S., tentatively set for February, and whether he will parade the same skill and finesse before Congress and on television that gave Sadat unprecedented popularity as a foreign — and an Arab — leader.

But for the immediate future Mubarak's mind is single-traoked: Permit nothing that Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin could use as a pretext to delay the April 25 last-stage Sinai withdrawal. "We are not going to slip into such a mistake," Mubarak told us. His decision to retain all Sadat's high-level military, foreign and political advisers is directly hinged to denying Israel the slightest pretext of backing out of its treaty commitment.

Strength For Today

CHRISTIAN EQUALITY

Some time ago a woman missionary was describing a ceremony for the consecration of native missionaries in India. Upon inquiry she found that they were to go to the fierce tribes in the Himalaya Mountains. "But do not the churches of England or America have missionaries who might be sent, thus releasing these people for work among established churches here in India?" she asked.

The native Indian church official to whom she made the inquiry smiled briefly and said, "We are sending our own people because the tribesmen of the North don't like Europeans or Americans."

Here we see how Christianity has unfortunately become identified in some parts of the "third world" with the exploitation and domination which we know today as colonialism. And this situation poses a challenge for what we might call a "new" missionary message — a renewed emphasis on the equality of all Christians and the separation of Christianity from all the secular aspects of the old colonialism. — Elisha Douglass

Seers Confirm Trend Is Down

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Hold onto your hats, the economic seers are telling you, the roller coaster is headed down. But of course you already know it; what's occuring is that the seers are just finding out.

How do they know? Well, they see that more than 8 percent of the work force is jobless, that industrial production plunged at an annual rate of 1.5 percent last month, that housing starts are close to their lowest in 30 years, that millions of people just can't afford a car, and that business bankruptcies are running 40 percent over a year ago.

It's all there in the monthly statistics out of which seers love to make computations and correlations, but what's unfortunate from a forecasting viewpoint is that all those statistics represent history.

They represent, in effect, what you already know and have told the economic world, and now the analysts of that world are giving them back to you with all sorts of forebodings, forecasts and recommendations.

So what else is new? Recessions are old stories in recent American economic history. This one is the second in as many calendar years, and the eighth since World War Two, and if you believe the seers those up-down cycles may be more frequent during the 1980s than during the '70s.

What is newsworthy — even if it isn't new — is that it takes those who should know so long to figure out when a major economic change is under way. Washington seems to have been surprised by the suddenness and sharpness of this downturn. So were most of your favorite forecasters.

One of them, the Morgan Guaranty Survey, was unusually candid in acknowledging this. "The pronounced sag in activity has once again caught the forecasting community by surprise," it announced a few days ago. Six weeks ago, it said, "most analysts — including those at The Morgan Bank — expected that the economy would avoid a downturn."

More analysts, it seems, should be listening to and questioning the people, getting a line on what they feel and plan to do, rather than waiting weeks for their thoughts and actions to appear as statistics.

Some do just that, of course. The University of Michigan's Survey Research Center, Sindlinger & Co., the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and The Conference Board are prominent among those who seek to understand the future economy by questioning the consumer. The National Association of Purchasing Management seeks similar advance information from major producers. And others pursue the future in their own particular way.

This, however, is the day of the economic model makers, of the econometricians, who prefer to load up their computers with official numbers and who put a low value on opinions and observations from the trenches. "Soft" data like that is too hard to process.

For this and probably many more reasons, the recession information now being offered to you is probably no surprise at all since, after all, it is based on nothing other than what they received from you.

Received from you, that is, in the form of decisions made or decisions delayed, on whether or not you were able to hold your job, buy a car, afford the rent, take a trip, save money, reduce your indebtedness.

You knew. All you're getting down is the statistical documentation.

And just when the emergence from recessions comes about will depend on you also. Not that the actions of the president and the Federal Reserve don't mean anything. They do.

But it's the reaction to their actions, policies and achievements — the reactions of you and your neighbors, consumers and producers — that to a very great degree determines where the economy is headed.

Senator Sues To Block Debate Over His Expulsion

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr. is asking a federal court to block Senate debate on his possible expulsion unless he is given the opportunity to defend his conduct in the Abscam bribery case.

Williams filed suit Monday in U.S. District Court, charging that the Senate is pushing him toward a "judgment day" without allowing him time to defend himself. He charged that his rights to due process and to effective representation have been denied.

But the Senate Select Committee on Ethics, which recommended that the full Senate expel Williams, said the 61-year-old New Jersey Democrat just wants to reopen the case and try it a second time.

The Senate is scheduled to begin the debate Dec. 3 on whether to oust Williams, who was convicted of bribery and conspiracy charges in connection with the government's Abscam probe.

Williams asked the court to block the debate unless his lawyers are allowed to present newly developed evidence and call witnesses before the entire Senate. The case was assigned to U.S. District Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer.

"All I'm asking for is the opportunity to present my case and my situation," Williams told reporters afterward.

The ethics committee, meeting in a pre-arranged session a few hours after the suit was filed, decided there was no reason to conduct more hearings into Williams' case.

"We are satisfied that there is no testimony that was unknown, or that could not have been ascertained by due diligence, and that could not have been made available at the time of the committee's hearing in this matter," the committee said in a letter to Senate leaders.

It said the possibility that Williams' new lfwyers, who were hired since the ethics panel concluded its hearings last summer, might have presented the senator's case differently "is insufficient reason for this committee to in effect reopen its hearing and allow the entire case to be presented for a second time."

The panel said Williams may wish, however, to secure affidavits or other written materials from anyone he wanted and submit that directly to the senators themselves.

Robert Flynn Jr., Williams' chief lawyer, told the committee in a letter last week that he wanted 25 witnesses called to discuss different aspects of the case.

Committee Chairman Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said the suit was "not unexpected" in view of statements made by Williams' attorneys.

A federal jury found Williams guilty May 1 on Abscam bribery and conspiracy charges. The ethics committee held three days of hearings in the case last summer, and voted Aug. 24 to recommend that Williams be expelled.

The suit charged that Williams was being placed "in the untenable position" of standing before the Senate on "Judgment Day, Dec. 3" after "its members' minds have been poisoned by the committee's demonstration to most of the Senate's members of false and misleading tapes," which the government made during its Abscam investigation.

Williams says a linguist and a behavioral psychologist have told him that he said nothing criminal on the tapes, and that prosecutors are interpreting the tapes unfavorably to his cause.

The suit said the ethics committee violated the senator's due process rights by acting first as an investigator, then as a grand jury and finally an "initial trier of fact."

It charges that Williams was denied the counsel of his choice before the ethics committee last summer, and his lawyer was then given too little time to prepare the defense.

And it alleged that the committee improperly denied Williams access to the panel's executive session transcripts, which the senator said "would clearly have established a basis for finding plaintiff non-culpable in terms of the charge that he acted in a fashion ethically repugnant to the Senate."

New N.C. Tobacco Growers Ass'n Wants Role In Any Alterations

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Members of a new association designed to speak for North Carolina tobacco growers, say they want to be in the forefront of any planning for alterations of the federal tobacco program.

"We want to have a voice that's coming directly from the farm," said one of the association's founders, E. Fleming Chrissman, a flue-cured leaf grower from Boonville.

Some 250 growers from across the state, meeting at the state fairgrounds Monday, voted to form the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina Inc., approved a set of bylaws and elected a board of 32 directors.

The organization was formed amid calls by several tobacco leaders for the group to be a leader in proposing changes and adjustments in the federal tobacco price-support program. Several cited the near defeat of the tobacco program in Congress as requiring program changes.

"It's time for us to set our own house in order, so our program will pass the next test, whenever that may be," said Furney A. Todd, professor emeritus at North Carolina State University and a leading tobacco expert.

Several speakers cited problems of high production costs and high rents for allotments. T. Carlton Blalock, director of the agricultural extension service at N.C. State, described them as serious problems that are cutting income for the actual producers of tobacco.

"We do have problems. Make no mistake about that," Blalock said. "I think all of us realiize we have to make changes.

"In my opinion, there is real question whether the program can stand the strain of even one more season under the present laws and regulations," he added.

Chrissman, elected one of four vice presidents, said changes in the lease-and-transfer procedures would be one of the first issues the group would address.

"We're not trying to be detrimental to allotment owners," he said. "We want to work on a solution for both sides."

State Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham appeared before the group and urged it to cooperate with other tobacco-oriented groups.

"If there is one lesson that tobacco growers should have learned this fall, it is that they must present a united front before Congress and sweep aside any petty differences," he said.

The group was formed as a result of some growers' — particularly a group from Lenoir County — becoming "frustrated" with the N.C. Farm Bureau, said Chris Bickers, editor of a a tobacco publication and a director of the new association.

The new association elected Donald E. "Donnie" Taylor of Pink Hill as president.

The new approach also could provide that senators and representatives sponsoring measures would have to work together rather than each separately introducing a proposal on the same matter and then pushing it through so that different forms emerge and a compromise process results.

With such a system, the General Assembly could convene on a certain date and find on members' desks a complete file of legislative proposals with an agenda for action. The measures would already have been cleaned up as to grammar, technicalities, constitutionality, and conflicts with present law. Legislators would have already been involved in review so they could know how people at home feel, whether the proposal had hidden intents from some special interest group, and how it would likely be received by fellow lawmakers.

The changed committee process and strict session limits are seen by some legislative insiders as the key to getting the machine back under control.

Congress Beats Hasty Retreat, Takes A Vacation

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress beat a hasty retreat from its high-stakes budget showdown with President Reagan, heading home for a Thanksgiving recess after rescuing federal agencies that had been ordered to shut their doors.

The struggle was all but over when House Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, taunted Democrats with a proposition he knew they'd have trouble refusing.

Continue to defy the president and prolong a nasty fiscal stalemate or accept Reagan's proposal for a simple extension of all government programs until December 15 "and you're free to leave for your Thanksgiving."

Michel was booed from the Democratic side. But he hadn't underestimated the desire of members to leave town for a recess when there was nothing to be gained by sticking around.

They gave Reagan the victory, 221-176, and took the rest of the week off. And government — technically out of funds since 12:01 a.m. Saturday — was back in business.

The Senate scheduled an abbreviated session for today, but no votes were planned and many members had already left town for the holiday.

Both parties were making no pretenses about their veto confrontation with Reagan, which closed goverment buildings and halted services around the nation on Monday: it was a bruising political struggle that probably could have been avoided.

And Reagan once again wound up on top, although congressional Democrats claimed his victory held more show than substance.

"This has all the markings of a publicity stunt. But real people are being hurt," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who joined 87 Senate colleages on Monday to vote for the Reagan-backed extension.

Only one member of the Senate dissented in that vote, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who called Reagan's veto and subsequent actions to shut down the government "theatrics."

"The president wanted to have an occasion to call us 'budget-busters,'" Cranston said.

And while the "budget busting" Reagan cited entailed no more than $2 billion — against a $700 billion-plus federal budget for 1982 — Reagan decided to make a stand.

"It demonstrates it's not fun and games," said Senate Finance Chairman Bob Dole, R-Kans. "I think it's kind of nice for a change to have the president stand up to Congress and call its bluff."

Democratic leaders deplored Reagan's veto and steps to shut down to the government. "An absolute and utter disgrace ... an act he is putting on," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

"Just a test of who was going to win the shootout at the OK Corral," said Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

But in the end, outgunned Democratic leaders knew they had lost the shootout and made no serious effort to try to override Reagan's veto.

It was, pure and simple, a political brawl, conceded Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn.

"It's been a struggle from the beginning. But we won the struggle — the president and Republicans in Congress. I'm sorry it turned into a partisan political battle."

Baker said the partial government shutdown could have easily been avoided had the dispute not developed into such a partisan confrontation.

And as to nothing of substance being at stake, Baker denied that $2 billion was a trifle, quoting an often-repeated remark by his father-in-law, the late Senate Republican leader Everett Dirksen of Illinois:

"A billion here and a billion there, and pretty soon you're talking about real money."

Used Car Dealers Ass'n Has $500,000 Invested In Lobbying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Automobile Dealers Association made campaign contributions totalling more than $500,000 to members of Congress who are trying to veto a regulation governing used car dealers, says the public interest organization Congress Watch.

But spokesmen for several senators listed as receiving NADA contributions said after the report was released Monday that there was no connection between the campaign funds and their opposition to the regulation.

Congress Watch, which was founded by consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said the contributions were made over the 30-month period that ended last June.

The Federal Trade Commission issued an order in August requiring that used car dealers inform their customers of any mechanical defects they know about.

Congress, however, empowered itself last year to veto FTC regulations within 90 days of when they are issued. So far, nearly half the members of Congress have become co-sponsors of resolutions to veto the FTC used car rule.

Of 206 House co-sponsors, 175 received a total of more than $476,000 from the car dealers association, Congress Watch said.

"If Congress vetoes this rule, it will be inviting business groups that can't make their case before an impartial decision-maker on the basis of the facts and the law to come to Congress and make their case on the basis of" the contributions, said Jay Angoff of Congress Watch.

Congress Watch said nine of the 13 representatives who got at least $7,500 are co-sponsors of veto resolutions and five of the six senators who received $9,700 or more are backing the veto move.

NADA spokeswoman Penelope Longbottom declined immediate comment on the Congress Watch report, saying a copy of it had not been been given to the association.

Senators who received at least $9,700 and are co-sponsoring the resolution were James Abdnor, R-S.D.; Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa; Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C.; Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho.

Responding to Congress Watch, Grassley spokeswoman Beverly Hubbel said, "He's always been a champion of free enterprise. It is natural that business groups would contribute to that kind of candidate."

Mike Freeman, Abdnor's press secretary, said, "If Jim Abdnor were selling his soul to everyone who contributed to his campaign, he'd be hopelessly confused about how to vote. ... We took money from every person who approved of his voting record."

Hollings spokeswoman Mike Fernandez said, "There is no cause-and-effect relationship between contributions and votes. The senator believes the regulation is impractical and inoperable."

Symms press secretary Robin Rollinson said, "Senator Symms is a longtime advocate of reduced government involvement in our lives. Any inference that he is co-sponsoring this resolution because of a contribution is improper."

Shuttle Ready For Fla. Return

By PHILIP ASHFORD
Associated Press Writer

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Speedy servicing and Columbia's good condition when it returned from space had NASA officials hoping to get the space shuttle aloft again today, this time mounted on a jet for a trip back to Cape Canaveral.

"It was a super job," said Jim Harrington, ground operations manager at the Dryden Space Flight Center. "Everybody really pitched in and did a fantastic job."

National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials planned a noon takeoff for the two-leg flight back to Florida. The shuttle was being loaded onto the back of a Boeing 747 jet early today.

Weather forecasts predicted wind and temperature conditions would be favorable for the takeoff, said Les Reinertson, a NASA spokesman.

NASA calculates the 747 and the piggyback shuttle cannot take off from the Mojave desert facility when temperatures exceed 73 degrees. Reduced air density during warm weather causes poorer engine performance and the craft would "run out of runway."

The trip's first leg, taking 3½-hours, ends at Bergstrom Air Force Base near Austin, Texas. The second leg, expected to begin early Wednesday morning, will take about three hours, Reinertson said.

The craft will be accompanied by a T-38 chase plane flown by Donald K. "Deke" Slayton, the former astronaut who is orbital flight test manager for the shuttle.

Bergstrom base officials have decided to allow limited drive-in sightseeing when the shuttle's carrier arrives.

"It's not going to be a great look. There's not going to be anybody walking up and touching the shuttle," Air Force Col. Alan Lurie, commander of the 67th Tactical Reconaissance Wing, said Monday. Public viewing at Bergstrom will be allowed only from moving cars.

Work on preparing the shuttle for its return to Florida had been knocked off schedule by the shuttle's early return, which found many key service personnel still at Cape Canaveral. Officials were concerned that problems at the Mojave desert facility could delay the next shuttle flight, planned tentatively for mid-March.

But streamlining of procedures and the better-than-expected condition of the craft enabled crews to make up for lost time.

"We paralleled some paths that we thought we would have to do in series and picked up 12 to 16 hours," Harrington said.

He said crews had no more than "the normal problems you would expect" in the turnaround maintenance.

Work Monday afternoon focused on retracting the landing gear and attaching the aerodynamic tail cone which is used to cover the craft's engines during its mated flights with the 747.

"This is something we've done many times. We don't expect any problems," Harrington said.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the period until Wednesday from Arizona to the central Plains, changing to snow in the Dakotas and Minnesota. Cold weather is forecast for the Northwest and warm weather is expected for south-central regions. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A winter storm moving out of the midwest brought heavy snow to the northern mountains of North Carolina Monday night. A heavy snow warning remained in effect for the northern mountains where from 4 to 8 inches of snow was expected by late morning.

Rain developed across the remainder of the mountains and Piedmont. During the pre-dawn hours the rain spread into the coastal plain. The rain was mixed with some snow across the central and southern mountains and the northerj counties of the northwest piedmont. Low tempertures last night were generally in the 30s and low 40s.

As the storm, or area of low pressure, moved across North Carolina today the precipitation ended in the west.

Recreational weather outlook: A heavy snow warning was in effect for the northern mountains this morning. Snow was expected to accumulate 4 to 8 inches there before tapering off to flurries.

Across the rest of the state, occasional rain will spread from western and central sections to the coast. Some snow or sleet may be mixed with the rain, especially across the northern counties and across the central and southern mountains. The rain was to end across western and central sections by mid-day. Afternoon temperatures were to range from the 30s in the northern mountains to the 50s in the southeast.

Skies will be fair in the south...And partly cloudy in the north tonight and Wednesday. Lows tonight will be in the 30s. Highs Wednesday will be mostly in the 50s.

Along the coast, light winds will become southerly 10 to 20 mph and shift to northwest 15 to 25 mph during the afternoon. Winds will be northerly 20 to 30 mph tonight and diminish slowly Wednesday. Small craft advisories were needed on the coastal waters and sounds by afternoon.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 62 Monday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 62 percent of your hot water.

Lindbergh Files Opened Today

EWING TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — The kidnapping and murder of the Lindbergh baby gripped the nation 49 years ago. Now, the evidence that led to the execution of a man for the crime is being released, little by little.

For years, lawyer Robert Bryan has been trying to get the files opened. On Monday a judge allowed two of his researchers and a pool of three news reporters to begin sifting through the evidence that led to the electrocution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Anna Hauptmann, 83, the widow of the convicted killer, is suing the state for $100 million in damages, claiming her husband is innocent. Bryan, on her behalf, demanded the files be opened.

In a separate case, Bryan also represents a man who claims to be the Lindbergh child.

Rummaging through the 90,000 pages of reports and a huge volume of physical evidence by just five people is expected to take several weeks. Bryan would not say what he and his researchers are seeking.

"I'd be foolish to go into a ballgame and tell the other side what plays we're going to run," he said.

One of the things Bryan wants to determine is what evidence still exists. "State police conceded last March 2 that a number of items were missing," he said.

The first child of aviation pioneer Charles Lindbergh and Anne Morrow Lindbergh disappeared from his nursery at the family's home near Englewood, N.J. After Hauptmann was convicted, the evidence used against him was taken here to the headquarters of the New Jersey State Police and has been sealed ever since.

Gov. Brendan Byrne on Oct. 9 ordered the files opened, and on Monday a federal judge in Newark ruled that The Associated Press, United Press International and The Record newspaper of Hackensack, N.J. each could have one researcher present each day to sift through the files. In addition, two of Bryan's researchers will be allowed to examine the files.

The ruling was a victory for Bryan, who went to U.S. District Judge Frederick Lacey after state police Col. Clinton Pagano's said only four researchers could look at the files.

"My client is 83 years old and if we have only one representative in there, this could take us years," Bryan said.

He said he has spent 10 years researching the case and $40,000 of his own money on the project and his team has "a case of (Hauptmann's) innocence without looking at these files."

Detective Cornell Plebani, who is in charge of the evidence, said the case has taken much of his time for several years.

"I was walking down the hall one day a long time ago and the sergeant said 'I want you to help me do something for a little while,' and here I'm still at it," Plebani said.

The first file, opened Monday evening and given to the AP for examination, was a transcript of Hauptmann's questioning by authorities in New York City, where he was arrested.

Hauptmann said a telephone number for a ransom go-between found penciled in his closet was written by him after he read a newspaper.

"Your only explanation for writing Dr. (James) Condon's address on this board and the phone number is that you were probably reading the paper in the closet and you marked it down?" Bronx District Attorney Samuel Foley asked. According to the transcript, Hauptmann reaffirmed the statement.

Shrimp Harvest Seen 'Disaster'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's poor fall shrimp harvest has prompted Gov. James Hunt to ask the U.S. Small Business Administration to make disaster loans available to shrimp fishermen.

Connell Purvis, director of the state Division of Marine Fisheries, said in addition to forcing fishermen in the Pamlico Sound area to seek government help, the small harvest threatens to create a sharp increases in the seafood's consumer price.

This year's harvest is expected to run about one-third of last year's, according to Robert B. Pittman, assistant director of the fisheries division.

The dockside value of this year's harvest will be about $5.2 million compared with $16.8 million last year. Heads-off shrimp weight this year is expected to be about 2 million pounds compared with 6 million pounds a year ago.

SBA loans were made available to the state's shrimpers in 1978 when the take was 1.8 million pounds. Through October, 1.6 million pounds had been harvested.

How much the consumer price of the product will be changed is hard to figure because shrimp can be brought into the state from other areas that have a bountiful year, Pittman said.

South Carolina's shrimp harvest is down significantly, but the catch along the Gulf Coast is reported to be excellent this year.

Pittman blamed low temperatures last spring for the shrimp loss. The larvae were killed by unsually cold water and juvenile shrimp died when heavy rains created huge runoffs into the shrimp-rich waterways, he said.

As few fishermen depend entirely on shrimp, the average shrimper "could flunk out on shrimp (this year), but still make it with oysters, fin fish or clams," Pittman said.

"Generally speaking, the past year has been a below-average year for fishermen overall," Pittman said.

Hayakawa Has Friend

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — It hasn't been discussed, it hasn't been encouraged and it's purely speculative, says President Reagan's incoming political director.

But just in case Sen. S.I. Hayakawa should decide, of his own volition, that he doesn't want to face the "very tough, uphill battle" for re-election, he's got a friend in the White House, Ed Rollins says.

Rollins said Reagan is "anguished" by the Republican Senate primary, in which he is officially neutral. Hayakawa, who would be seeking his second term, has been lagging in third or fourth place in opinion polls, and many state Republicans have encouraged him not to seek re-election. At least nine prominent candidates, among them Reagan's daughter, Maureen, are likely to enter the race.

"If the senator chooses, on his own initiative, not to run for re-election, I'm sure the president would be willing to offer him a substantial administration post," Rollins said in response to a question during an interview with the Sacramento Union. Rollins will succeed Lyn Nofziger as Reagan's political director in January.

"In that it has never been discussed, it is purely speculative to say" what job Hayakawa would be offered, Rollins said.

Prime Rate Moves Down To 16 Percent

NEW YORK (AP) — Reflecting other declining interest rates, several major banks today lowered their prime lending rate to the lowest level in a year.

Citibank, ranked second-largest among U.S. commercial banks, and First National of Chicago, the ninth largest, cut their prime rate to 16 percent from 16.5 percent. Chemical Bank, ranked sixth largest, followed suit.

Chase Manhattan Bank, No. 3, went further, dropping its prime from 16.5 percent to 15.75 percent.

The lowest equivalent prime rate was in mid-November 1980 when the prime varied from 15.5 percent to 16.25 percent.

Chase today said it lowered its prime because interest rates have been declining and loan demand had slackened.

As an illustration of how other interest rates have fallen recently, the Federal Reserve Board reported the federal funds rate averaged 12.94 percent in the week ended Nov. 11, down from an average of nearly 14 percent in the previous week. Today, that rate opened as low as 12 percent.

Economies Achieved

Mayo Allen, director of Public Works here, announced that occupancy of the new Public Works facility last fall has enabled the department to implement several cost containment and productivity measures.

According to Allen, the additional space provided at the new facility has allowed the department to reduce its work force by several positions, modify operational procedures and maintenance practices, reduce equipment down-time, and lower fuel and maintenance costs of city-owned vehicles.

The storage yard at the new facility has enabled the department to stockpile materials which have also resulted in a savings, he said. The paint room and welding shop allow the department to perform many tasks which were previously being contracted out, the director explained.

Allen said the department has less employees today than it has had in the last 10 years and is providing more services. The present facility was constructed in 1980 with funds approved in a $1.9 million bond referendum.

Turkeys Are Steady Diet

DAYTON, Va. (AP) — Alan Shelton eats turkey every working day, but he won't complain when it's served up at home on Thursday. He knows Thanksgiving just wouldn't be right without it.

Shelton is a taste tester a the Marval Poultry Co. plant in Dayton, and in a single day he might cook and sample turkey wings, breasts, necks tails, gizzards, hearts and drumsticks, as well as Marval's line of turkey franks, turkey hams and other turkey-based products.

"I take a drink of water between bites of the different products to be sure I've got the one taste out of my mouth before I go to the next," he said. "But I'm looking for a lot more than taste."

Shelton judges the cooked products for appearance, overall flavor, smell, tenderness, color and and how well it slices.

About once a week the top executives join Shelton in the test kitchen to taste their products.

Shortly after Christmas, Shelton will be involved in cooking more than 100 whole turkeys in order to test the company's cooking directions included with each bird.

About 60,000 turkey ar processed each day at the plant, which is located in the heart of the Shenandoah Valley's poultry farming area. Marval's Rockingham County plant is the largest turkey processing plant in the world.

Oregon Voting On School Sums

ESTACADA, Ore. (AP) — Voters who rejected an operating levy and forced schools to close are going to the polls today to consider a similar, but smaller, tax increase that would reopen classes.

This timber mill town's 2,500 students and 158 teachers were sent home Nov. 6 after the failure of a $2.89 million levy. Estacada thus became the first Oregon school district since 1976 to close for lack of money.

Today's request asks $2.75 million. Passage would bring a tax rate of $10.42 per $1,000 of assessed property value, meaning the owner of a house assessed at $75,000 would pay $781.50 in property taxes for schools.

Last month, the Alpena, Mich., school district became the first in Michigan since the Great Depression to close for lack of money. A tax levy was defeated but a later election saw a smaller proposal pass and the schools reopened.

Estacada, 25 miles southeast of Portland in Clackamas County, has about 6,200 eligible voters. The district has six schools.

The new proposal includes cutbacks on money allocated for printing, library books, special education, field trips, bus runs for special activities and a band program.

"There's been considerable sentiment in the community not to cut things that affect programs directly or kids directly," school board member Bob Burgee said, but he warned that cuts would be more drastic if this levy fails.

School officials said classes would resume Friday if today's issue passes. The teachers have earned no pay since classes ended, but the district's 13 administrators, in accordance with state law, have continued getting their paychecks.

After schools closed, Estacada teachers issued a no-confidence vote on the administrative abilities of Superintendent Terry Waters, who then resigned.

Some school officials have said many students are expected to transfer to other disticts if the levy fails.

Cutbacks By Car-Makers

DETROIT (AP) — In the face of a continuing sales slump, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. have slashed their production plans for the current quarter by another 102,000 cars, pushing 1981 car output to the lowest level in 20 years, an industry journal says.

Ward's Automotive Reports said Monday that current plans by the major automakers call for industrywide production to reach 6,291,000 cars for the year, down from 6,372,000 in 1980 and the lowest since 5,516,000 in 1961.

Last week, Ward's said, GM cut 55,000 cars out of its production plans for November and December while Ford trimmed its production schedules for the remainder of the year by 47,000 cars.

In addition, GM slashed its January and February production by 50,000 cars per month, Ward's said.

The major domestic automakers are expected to build 1,338,000 cars for the period, down 21 percent from last year's 1,696,000 and the smallest number for the fourth quarter since 1959 when 1,257,000 were built, according to revised figures for the October-December quarter.

Projected car output through March shows production for the first six months of the 1982 model year down at least 7 percent from the first two quarters of the 1981 model year.

WRECK REPORTED

Cars driven by Melvin Ray Pollard of Route 6, Greenville, and Carlton Wayne Hemby of Route 2, Greenville, collided about 8:50 a.m. Monday at the intersection of Charles and Elm streets.

Police, who estimated damage at $700 to the Pollard car and $2,000 to the Hemby vehicle, charged Hemby with following too closely.

In 1980's Olympic Games, Australian Ian Davies was THE leading scorer in the basketball competition. Last night in Minges Coliseum, the man from Down Under showed the folks from Down East why.

He put on a show, hitting 16 of 28 shots from the floor, mostly on long range bombs, and adding nine of nine free throws to lead the Australian National Team to a 72-71 victory over East Carolina's Pirates in an exhibition game.

Davies' performance overshadowed that of the Pirates, who were playing for the first time against a foe other than themselves. The win boosted the Aussies current U.S. tour mark to 2-5.

"He did the same thing against Virginia Commonwealth," official Jim Burch said of Davies, "and they put everyone on him but the janitor."

It was the 6-6 forward who put together the rally that overcame the Pirates, and then who helped his teammates hold off a furious ECU rally that had a chance to pull it out at the end.

Down by as much as seven points in the final five minutes of play, the Pirates rallied to within one with 1:27 left on a 16-footer by Charles Davis, 70-69, only to see Philip Smyth hit a pair of free throws with 1:22 to go. It was at that point too that ECU point guard Tony Byles fouled out of the game.

The Pirates missed threw shot this time, but Les Riddle failed to connect at the line, and Green hit another jumper to pull the Pirates back to one again, 72-71 with 42 seconds to go.

East Carolina used its final time out after the shot to try and steal the inbounds pass or force a five-second violation — something the Pirates had done twice earlier.

The Australians got it in, however, and Smyth was again fouled, missing and the Pirates got the rebound, only to turn it over. This time, Larry Sengstock was fouled with nine seconds left, only to miss once more.

ECU got the rebound, and freshman Bruce Peartree took it all the way to the basket, missing his shot and when another rebound or two also missed, time ran out.

While the loss was a bitter disappointment to coach Dave Odom, who wanted a victory in the contest, he was pleased with the effort. "I liked the way we came back, and I like the way we, the staff and the players, communicate. That's so important in trying to be successful. They take constructive criticism well."

Odom said that this was an important point early in the second half, when the Aussies, down by as many as ten in the first half, rallied to take the lead. "There was a time when they could have cracked there in the early part of the second half," Odom said. "We really had a chance to get a big lead in the first half, but we forgot to block out (on the rebound) and they got six consecutive second shots." That helped as the Australians cut the lead back to 34-28 at the half.

Odom also expressed a little disappointment in the officiating. "I thought we picked up some cheap 'touch' fouls," he said. "Then, when we lost Tony it was more than losing a fifth player — it's the organization that goes with him that hurts."

One of the problems that might have hurt the Pirates is that they used only two defenses, full and half court man-to-man. "We did this intentionally. We wanted out guys to see that they would win playing man-to-man. We have other defenses, and it wasn't a question of not showing them. I believe in man defense and I wanted our players to believe in it."

Odom also felt that the zone defense used by the Aussies hurt late in the first half and early in the second. "It was a different kind of zone. They pressure the ball with their guards, keeping very active, almost like a man-to-man, while the other just lay back. But we solved it toward the end and started getting the ball inside to our weak-side people."

At that point, Green, held scoreless in the second half to that point took control and banged through 12 points in the late going, bringing the Pirates back into the game.

East Carolina led throughout the first half, moving out slowly to a 7-point spread, 14-7, on an Al Mack layup with 14:07 to go. Australia cut that back to one, 14-13, but the Pirates pulled away again after two ties, and inched out to as much as a ten point lead, 28-18 at 5:00 on a jumper by Peartree, and again at 30-20 as Peartree scored again.

But the Aussies chopped away at the lead over the last four and a half minutes and cut it back to four before Michael Gibson tapped in a missed shot at the horn.

In the second half, Davies took control, hitting 10 of 14 shots from the floor and all nine of his free throws, He cut it back to two, and then a three-point play by Smyth put the Aussies up for the first time, 37-36 with 17:58 to play.

East Carolina regained the lead, but lost it again and tied it up three more times before Riddle hit with 13:25 left for a 45-43 lead. The Aussies pulled out to as much as an eight point lead, 53-45, before Charles Watkins, with a couple of key steals, pulled the Pirates back to a tie, 53-53 with 8:07 showing. But Davies made a couple of free throws and the Aussies never trailed again.

After regaining a seven point lead, 66-59, with 4:12 left, they seemed to finally lose their touch, however, as the Pirates came roaring back. But the final shot missed, and that was it.

"(Peartree) was a little tentative out there, and I told him to calm down and just play like it was the state championship in front of the home folks," Odom said. Peartree is a solid veteran of high school championship competition, leading his high school team to a couple of titles.

"That's what he did, but the ball just wouldn't go for him. I think he took a shot or two going in, too."

Morris Hargrove led the Pirate effort, hitting 23 points on nine of 12 field goals. He was also the leading rebounder in the game with nine. "At times, he was awesome," Odom said. "Green hit some clutch shots for us and Gibson got some key rebounds. Watkins also had some great steals, and Byles gives us organization and poise."

Odom added that he felt his pre-game assessment of the Pirates was about right. "We have nine or ten who can play right now," he said.

In addition to Hargrove's points, Green had 16 and Watkins had 12.

No one other than Davies hit double figures for Australia. And that brought a comment from Odom about the crowd.

"I was pleased with the enthusiasm of the crowd and I'm sorry that more didn't attend (attendance was listed as 1,250). Those who weren't here missed a chance to see us play aggressively, and to see a great shooting exhibition by Davies.

"But I'm very disappointed that the East Carolina crowd would cheer when Davies scored. That does more to tear down in five seconds what it takes years to build for our team. I just hope that we'll show more school loyalty and feeling for our own players."

Mark McLaurin, one of the Pirate co-captains, did not play in the game due to a hand injury suffered on Saturday. He is expected to play Saturday night when the Pirates officially open the season against Ohio University in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges.

Jinx Is Not Pitt Problem

By The Associated Press

The so-called "No. 1 jinx" doesn't seem to be jinxing the Pittsburgh Panthers.

Five other teams who were No. 1 earlier this season in the college football poll dropped out shortly after assuming that position — but the Panthers have managed to hold on tenaciously.

For the third straight week, the Panthers retained the top ranking Monday after defeating Temple 35-0. And they can finish the regular season in the No. 1 spot if they beat No. 11 Penn State Saturday.

The 10-0 Panthers and five closest challengers all retained their positions after Saturday's action. They were Clemson, Georgia, Alabama, Nebraska and Southern Methodist.

Pittsburgh collected 60 of 65 first-place votes and a near-perfect 1,294 out of a possible 1,300 points Monday from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Clemson, only other unbeaten-untied team in the country with an 11-0 record in its first perfect regular season in 33 years, received the other five first-place ballots and 1,234 after beating South Carolina 29-13 Saturday.

Georgia, which will play Pitt in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Day, held onto third place with 1,157 points, while Alabama was fourth with 1,054. Both were idle over the weekend.

Nebraska, Clemson's Orange Bowl opponent, held onto fifth place with 1,015 points after a 37-14 trouncing of Oklahoma. No. 6 SMU, winner of the Southwest Conference championship after a 32-18 trouncing of Arkansas, received 965 points. The Mustangs, ineligible for a post-season bid because of probation, finished the season with a 10-1 record, second best in the school's history.

Texas, which clinched a Cotton Bowl berth against Alabama with a 34-12 trouncing of Baylor, moved up from eighth to seventh after Michigan, last week's No. 7, lost to Ohio State 14-9.

Southern California's 22-21 comeback victory over UCLA lifted the Trojans from 10th to eighth; Miami of Florida jumped from 11th to ninth after beating North Carolina State 14-6 and North Carolina moved from 12th to 10th following a 31-10 triumph over Duke.

Roanoke, which made it to the finals of the Eastern Regional last season where it lost to eventual state champion Durham Jordan, jumped out to a 18-12 lead in the opening period. It was a lead the Redskins never lost.

Roanoke led, 33-23, at halftime and 43-30 at the end of the third period. The Chargers made a brief run at the Redskins in the final period, outscoring Roanoke 15-9, but it was not enough.

Thomas Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 24 points, Jesse Anderson added 11 for the Chargers.

In the girls' game, Roanoke surged to a 20-6 lead after the first quarter and led, 28-16 at halftime. The Lady Redskins then outscored Ayden-Grifton 16 to 8 in the third period to seal the win.

Cora Faison had 12 points for Ayden-Grifton while Linda Brown added 11.

Rose Looks For Improvement In '81-82

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Despite the fact that he has only two starters back from last year, Rose High School coach Jim Brewington is looking for improved play from the 1981-82 Rampants.

Rose opens the season Wednesday night, playing host to Conley's Vikings.

"We expect to be better this year, but with the tough conference schedule we have, our record might now show it," Brewington said.

Back for the Rampants are 5-10 guard Barry Smith and 6-3 forward William Battle. Joining them will be four lettermen from last year, giving Brewington a good building nucleus.

The other lettermen include 5-8 guard Russell Perkins, 6-0 guard Freddy Cherry, 6-2 forward James Whitehurst and 6-6 center Tim Harris.

"If our big men come around quickly enough we could do well," Brewington said. "We will be depending on three newcomers to give us a lot of help too up front." Those are 6-5 forward Derwin Little, 6-6 center Tyrone Andrews and 6-6 center-forward Alan Dickens.

"This should be one of our better teams," the coach said. "But the Big East Conference should be one of the toughest in the state. With teams like Rocky Mount and Kinston, it's going to be awfully tough for anyone else to win. But I think we can do well. I'd say that if we could finish fourth in the league, I'd be happy. Anything above that would be gravy."

Brewington looks for more inside scoring out of the Rampants this year, although he notes the guards can put it in too.

He anticipates starting Smith and Perkins at the guards, with Battle, Andrews and Little in the front court. "We can really start Whitehurst and Harris too, and might."

Another guard who could see a lot of action will be 5-8 Donnell Lee, with Bill Bost, a returning non-letterman who missed much of last year with a foot injury; along with guards Albert Brown and Tony Clemons and forward Jay Mahoney.

"Our shooting should be improved. Of course, we'll miss Donald Johnson (off last year's team). We expect Battle to carry the load this year. Perkins might be our best outside shooter. Smith is not a scoring guard, but he's a good floor leader.

"We really hope to play more of an inside game this year, instead of relying on our guards as in the past. We look for Harris to do well, too. One problem is that we still haven't had many practices. Some of the players who were late coming out (football) haven't practiced but four times."

Brewington expects the defense to be weak early — mainly because of the slow start to practice. "It's going to take us a game or two to work things in," he said.

"Our big men are going to be the key," Brewington said. "Once they get some confidence in themselves I think we'll be okay. I look for about 30 points out of the inside game. If we get that, we'll be on our way. And I think we'll be able to play with anybody in the league.

"Right now, I'm just anxious to see us play."

West Craven Topples Rams, 57-49, In Opener

SNOW HILL — Ronnie Bellamy poured in 25 points to lead West Craven past a cold-shooting Greene Central club, 57-49, Monday night in a high school nonconference basketball game.

Earlier, Letha Taylor scored 19 points to lead the Greene Central to an easy 45-28 victory over West Craven in the girls' game.

"We had chances and chances but just didn't take advantage of them," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said after he saw his Rams lose their season-opener.

The Rams shot a meager 28% from the floor and did little better from the foul line, hitting just 17 of 31 for 54.8%. Among their 14 misses, the Rams failed to hit the front end of five one-and-ones and missed both ends of three two shot fouls.

Greene Central moved ahead, 12-10, in the opening quarter, but poor shooting — both from the floor and foul line — coupled with foul trouble sunk the Rams in the second quarter.

West Craven, relying on the shooting of Bellamy and Wayne Becton, who scored 12 points, outscored the Rams 16 to 8 in the second period to take a 26-20 lead at halftime.

The Eagles then extended their lead to 39-31 at the end of the third quarter before coasting home with the eight-point win.

Roderick Lane led the Rams in scoring with 19 points, but hit on only three of seven at the foul line. John Ray added 17 points, but hit on only 11 of 19 foul shots.

In the girls' game, Greene Central jumped out to a 14-8 lead in the first period and was never headed. The Lady Rams extended their lead to 26-12 at intermission.

West Craven made it 33-22 at the end of the third period, but could get no closer as Greene Central outscored the Lady Eagles, 12 to 6, in the final period to win by 17 points.

Sharon Suggs had 11 points for the Lady Rams. Ernestine Brown and Eunice Hargett led West Craven with 10 points apiece.

Greene Central plays host to South Lenoir Wednesday.

Dear Dean: The Polls Haven't Been That Far Off In The Past

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Mr. Dean Smith
Basketball Coach
University of North Carolina

Dear sir:

In reference and partial rebuttal to remarks you made following your No.1 ranking in The Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll, some research was in order.

Your comments were not unlike those of other coaches in similar situations. In previous years, in fact, you have been among them. You expressed your sense of honor at being selected No.1, but added you thought the poll was meaningless.

You said: "The college basketball rankings really don't mean anything. The national championship is decided by playing the game."

Of course, you are correct, in essence. The poll is show business, like the game of basketball. It's only real news value is in providing the reader with a scale against which he can measure performance. It enhances the entertainment value of the game. It gives the man in the bar or the subway commuter something else to argue.

You said: "Our team is broken up from last year, and that's where all the attention from the polls has come. It's based on last year."

Perhaps, in part, but it's more likely your selection was based on the players returning — like starters James Worthy, Sam Perkins and Jimmy Black — and the freshmen you recruited, like Michael Jordan. Your No.1 ranking may even have had something to do with your own coaching ability and the Tar Heel tradition, which is no accident.

A poll is to the game itself what a magnifying glass is to an electron microscope. It's imprecisions are undisputed. It is the best guess of men and women judged to be knowledgeable in their field, but no less a guess. Forecasting the success of a basketball team is a little like forecasting the weather. Weathermen goof; pollsters goof.

More often than not, however, pollsters don't goof, and the proof is in the record.

In the past 10 years, three national champions were ranked No.1 before a game had been played. They were UCLA in 1972 and '73 and Indiana in '76. Four more national champions were ranked No.2 in the preseason poll: North Carolina State in 1974, UCLA in 1975, Marquette in 1977 and Kentucky in 1978. That's seven of 10 NCAA champions ranked either No.1 or No.2 in preseason.

The lowest a national champion has been ranked in any of the past 10 preseasons was 10th. That was Louisville in 1980. Michigan State, 1979 champion, was ranked seventh, and 1981 champion Indiana was ranked fifth.

Until 1977, the final AP poll of the season was taken after the national championship playoffs, so there was no guessing who was No. 1. It already had been decided by your method, Mr. Smith, on the court. It seemed a waste of time to restate the obvious, so beginning with the 1976-77 season, the final poll was taken before the playoffs.

In the past five years, the national champion has ranked no lower than ninth in the postseason poll, and that was Indiana last March. The postseason poll has produced one NCAA champion, Kentucky in 1978. In 1980, NCAA champion Louisville was ranked second in the final poll, and the previous champion, Michigan State, was ranked third. When Marquette won the national title in 1977, the postseason poll had the Warriors seventh.

Only one of the 10 teams ranked No.1 in preseason failed to make it into the NCAA playoffs. That was a rival of yours, North Carolina State, which posted a 22-6 record in 1974-75, the season after winning the NCAA title, but lost to your team in the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

The year N.C. State won the title, UCLA was ranked No.1 in preseason. The Bruins finished third in the nation, beating Kansas 78-61 in the Final Four consolation game. Your own Tar Heels were ranked No.1 before the 1977-78 season and made it to the tournament with a 23-8 record, although you lost in the first round to San Francisco, 68-64. The other preseason leaders — Michigan in 1976-77, Duke in 1978-79, Indiana in 1979-80 and Kentucky last season — also earned NCAA tournament berths.

To The Editor:

I was saddened to learn that the ECU Athletic Program was in such bad financial condition. I hope that this situation is caused by the lack of attendance and not through mismanagament.

I, for one, shall endeavor to double my contribution to the Pirate Club in 1982. I agree with Jack Edwards — this is a time to rally our support for those who have given so much of themselves. Hopefully, 1982 will be a year of rebuilding and stronger teams.

Falcons Outlast Minnesota, 31-30

ATLANTA (AP) — "The game just ended and they were ahead," was the way Minnesota Coach Bud Grant described the Atlanta Falcons victory over the Vikings in a weird, turnover-plagued National Football League game.

The Falcons, who outlasted the Vikings 31-30, apparently had Monday night's nationally televised slugfest wrapped up after linebacker Buddy Curry intercepted a Tommy Kramer pass and returned it 35 yards for a touchdown and a 31-21 lead with just 4:06 remaining.

But the Falcons gave up an intentional safety after failing to move the ball inside their own 6-yard line with 1:54 left. Just 44 seconds later it was 31-30 when Kramer hit Joe Senser with a 16-yard TD strike.

The Falcons Reggie Smith, however, recovered the Vikings' onside kick after it bounded out of the grasp of two other Falcons players on Atlanta's 43. Atlanta ran out the clock for the victory, snapping a two-game losing streak and keeping its wild card playoff hopes alive with a 6-6 record.

"We almost got a chance to win at the end when the onside kick broke loose up the middle," said Grant. "If we would have recovered, we were only 15 seconds away from a field goal."

The Vikings, who pounded out 460 yards, were hindered by five turnovers, including four interceptions of Kramer, who passed for 330 yards and four touchdowns. Meanwhile, the Falcons had three lost fumbles, all in the opening half and all by William Andrews, helping Minnesota to a 21-7 halftime edge.

"They gave us plenty of opportunities to win, and we returned the favor," said Grant. "Here was a game won by one point and there really was no turning point. There were fumbles, interceptions and penalties."

The loss left the Vikings with a 7-5 record, one game ahead of Detroit and Tampa Bay in the NFC Central Division race.

"There was no pep talk at halftime. We didn't do anything different," said Steve Bartkowski, who threw three touchdown passes and set up Mick Luckhurst's 32-yard field goal with his passing.

"We were our own worst enemy in the first half with the turnovers an we were fortunate to still be in the game," said Bartkowski, who hit on 21 of 32 passes for 213 yards and ran his TD total to 27 for the season.

"We need to win all the rest," he said of Atlanta's chances of making the playoffs. "Obviously we have been playing must games the past few weeks and I don't believe any of the rest are less than must games.

"I think our chances are excellent but then I'm the eternal optimist," said Bartkowski, who had TD tosses of 8 yards to Alfred Jackson, 3 yards to Junior Miller and finally a 29-yarder to Wallace Francis that got the Falcons even at 21 midway in the third period.

"That certainly was an important play. No question," said Bartkowski of the third-down-and-10 play to Francis, who caught the ball on the 17 and streaked between defenders into the end zone.

"I hadn't made an interception all year," said Curry, the Falcons' second-round draft choice of a year ago, "and I didn't feel like I was contributing in that one area until tonight."

Curry, who had a touchdown last year after picking up a fumble against Detroit, termed the TD return "the biggest play of my life. I've scored before but never has one meant so much."

"This was our season and from here on in we can't afford to lose," the linebacker said.

Kramer had scoring passes of 6 and 42 yards to Ahmad Rashad, 3 yards to Bob Bruer and the 16-yarder to Senser while Ted Brown had 108 yards in 16 rushing attempts for the Vikings, the first running back to go over 100 yards this season against the Falcons.

Rashad was Kramer's favorite target, catching 9 passes for 151 yards.

The Falcons, who accumulated 342 yards, got 91 yards out of Andrews in 22 attempts and 67 from Lynn Cain in 11 tries while Jenkins had 5 catches for 65 yards to break the club record for single-season receivimg yardage with 1,047.

NEW ROLE AS LAWMAN — James Arness, perhaps best known for his two-decades of portraying "Marshal Mat Dillon" on the TV series "Gunsmoke", talks about his new role as a modern-day detective in a new television series. He has the title role in "McClain's Law", and says there are many parallels between the two characters. Essentially they're both lawmen from different eras ... I don't feel I'm doing a totally different type of guy at all", he says. (AP Laserphoto)

Good Actors Step Out Of Character

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ed Asner and Jean Simmons step out of character and become undercover derelicts in a murder investigation, all the while their arms-length relationship is warming up in the best Katharine Hepburn-Spencer Tracy tradition, in tonight's CBS movie, "A Small Killing."

Asner and Miss Simmons are delightful together, turning middle-aged love into something warm and funny, with the sophisticated edge of veterans who've been there before. When Miss Simmons fences off Asner's first proposition, he shrugs: "If you're going to come on like Burt Reynolds, I guess you have to look like Burt."

The story's opening premise is a bit hard to swallow and the eventual rescue from the jaws of death is an unnecessary lapse into Hollywood extravaganza, but, in between, everything else is grand.

Margaret Lawrence (Miss Simmons), an elegant widow, is a sociologist conducting a research project on problems of the elderly. She befriends one of her subjects, Sadie Ross (Sylvia Sidney), a bag lady who subsists on other people's garbage.

Sadie is murdered, and it turns out that she was a "mule," which in street parlance meant she delivered bags of drugs inside her bags of rags. Sadie also was skimming extra money and was killed for her double dealing.

"She wanted to make a small killing and ended up being one," said Asner.

The plot takes its unbelievable opening turn, when Margaret, frustrated by what she considers police foot-dragging, insists on sullying herself to become a bag lady in the hopes of smoking out the killer.

Asner, the crusty but lovable Lou Grant, is still crusty — but initially less lovable — as Sgt. Simon Shaber, who's posing as a skid-row wino to crack the drug-running scheme. He's embittered and cynical, which comes with the police territory, but also has other motivations: His wife left him for a younger man after a quarter century of marriage.

Asner doesn't want Margaret on the case. He considers her a bleeding heart, the type that calls cops "pigs" and opposes police requests for more funding and manpower. He's also resentful that she would attempt to do his job and afraid that her inexperience will be risky for him.

Their early exchanges crackle with acerbic wit, but, before long, they're caring for each other, falling in love and playing house together.

Asner easily slips into his Bowery Bum routine, while Miss Simmons is a little too regal to make the switch in a totally convincing way. As a bag lady, she has the sidewalk shuffle down fine, but the stunning British actress still looks like she should be shopping on Madison Avenue, instead of rummaging through trash on Seventh Avenue.

Actually, the story takes place in Los Angeles, where they obviously get a more sophisticated and cleaner breed of street people than in New York.

But none of this lack of authenticity matters when Asner and Miss Simmons are warming things up. At one point he calls her Lombard and she calls him Gable, but the real Hollywood parallel is Tracy and Hepburn, those "September Sweethearts" from another era.

CBS offers another new crime-solving pair tonight in the adventure-drama series debut of "Simon & Simon." But these detective brothers, different as night and day, are strictly run-of-the-mill fare.

Jameson Parker is wooden as the clean-cut, button-down brother, while Gerald McRaney brings a comic touch to the one who enjoys life and showering with women.

Tonight's pilot is slow-developing, and the latest in this busy season of crime shows is very standard fare, more like "Simple Simon."

THE ULTIMATE SLOT — Jewelry designer Sidney Mobell shows off his latest creation for the person who has everything, the ultimate slot machine with a price tag of $1 million. It's a 1925 model that he has added 264 pennyweights of gold, 317 sapphires, 302 rubies, 183 diamonds and 16 emeralds. But he'll throw in 200 gold plated liberty-head nickles at no extra charge. Undecided Over Fonda's Holiday

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The family of veteran actor Henry Fonda was hoping he could be home for Thanksgiving, but a hospital spokeswoman says doctors have not made a determination.

"His doctor hasn't made any decision about it yet," said Virginia Bohannon at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, where Fonda has been since Nov. 17. She described his condition Monday as "the same. He's OK. He's still here having his (heart) medication monitored."

There was no change in his condition early today, officials said.

A spokesman for the 76-year-old star described him Monday as "very ill," and also expressed concerns that he might not be able to go home for the holiday.

"He's very ill but he's been this ill for a long time. Then he gets a little stronger, then he slips back. I think he's getting a little stronger," Fonda spokesman John Springer said by telephone from his New York office.

"He has indicated that he wants to be home at Thanksgiving. Whether he'll be able to or not, I don't know," Springer added.

Fonda has been in and out of the hospital for the past year, most recently to monitor his response to new heart medication. He had exploratory heart surgery in May and has worn a pacemaker since 1974.

His latest movie, "On Golden Pond," in which he appears with Katharine Hepburn and his daughter, Jane Fonda, premiered here last week and is scheduled for national release Dec. 4. It was the first time he had been in a film with either actress.

Miss Fonda said at the opening of "On Golden Pond" that it probably would be her father's last film.

Fonda, who won an honorary Academy Award in 1980 and was nominated for an Oscar as Best Actor for the 1940 film "The Grapes of Wrath," has appeared in more than 80 films and in many plays and television shows.

Reagan Grew Up With Alcoholic

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite a childhood memories of his father's alcoholism, President Reagan "doesn't have anything bad to say about his father ... He loved his father very much," the president's son says.

Ron Reagan, reminiscing recently about his own life with father, said "perhaps it made him feel a real sense of responsibility, being there and being available."

Ron Reagan and Patti Davis Reagan tell Barbara Walters in an ABC-TV Thanksgiving special that their father often told them what it was like to grow up the son of an alcoholic, John William Reagan.

"He tells very poignant stories about going out, finding his father in the snow in the early morning and pulling him back into the house unconscious," said Ron Reagan, now a member of the Joffrey II ballet company.

"It's a painful thing for him to remember," said Ms. Davis. "I've heard him talk about Christmases where the little money they had would go to alcohol. I guess anything like that you go through in your life makes you stronger, and I think that's made him stronger."

Opening lead: Eight of ♡.

Don't fret about the inevitable. Instead, see if you can derive some benefit from it.

This hand is from a team-of-four match. At both tables, a contract of four spades was reached after a one no trump opening bid and a Stayman inquiry. At both tables West attacked with the eight of hearts.

Both declarers realized that it was probably a short-suit lead. Therefore, East was marked with the king of hearts, and there was a great possibility that the defenders would score a heart ruff. Both declarers played a low heart from dummy, both Easts won the king and returned a heart, taken on the table. Here the declarers parted ways.

One declarer led a trump from dummy. East grabbed the ace and gave his partner a heart ruff. West wisely exited with a club, and in the fullness of time he scored the setting trick with the king of diamonds.

The second declarer decided that there was no point in trying to prevent a heart ruff. Instead, he searched for a way that he might benefit from the fact that West would be on lead after ruffing the heart. He found a rather neat strip play that would depend on West having started with a doubleton trump in addition to his heart shortage. This distribution was against the odds, but it cost declarer nothing to try.

After winning the second heart in dummy, declarer took the club finesse. When it succeeded, he cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club on the table. Now he led a trump. East grabbed the ace to preserve the ruff, and returned a heart. West ruffed, but he was now in an unenviable position. Down to nothing but minor-suit cards, he could either yield a ruff-and-sluff by exiting with a club, or lead a diamond in the hope that his partner held the queen. No matter which he chose, the contract was assured, for declarer would be able to get rid of his remaining diamond loser on dummy's long heart.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Diplomatic Prince

When the Arab Summit opens tomorrow in Fez, Morocco, one of the busiest diplomats present will be Prince Saud Al-Faisal. Suadi Arabia's Foreign Minister. Saud hopes to obtain approval for a new Mideast peace plan. The youthful Saud is the first grandson of Saudi Arabia's founder, Ibn Saud, to achieve political prominence. Most major government posts are controlled by his 42 paternal uncles. Saud is an urbane and intelligent man, whose Princeton education and U.N. career help him bridge the gap between Moslem and western cultures. All the diplomacy he showed in negotiating a Lebanese cease-fire will be necessary if he is to help achieve an accord between militant Arab states and Israel.

State Auditor Not Examining Records

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Auditor Edward Renfrow refused to examine telephone records turned over by Insurance Commissioner John Ingram Monday, saying his office does not conduct audits outside of any agency under investigation.

Ingram's action came after the News and Observer of Raleigh reported that he had made long-distance phone calls unrelated to his business as insurance commissioner. He has denied the allegations.

"We inspect such records only on the premises," Renfrow said. "They brought the records over this morning, but we sent them back."

Audits are conducted at an agency's offices to prevent loss of records, he said.

"The only way we'd be able to accept them would be to make an itemized list of everything in there and get receipts for them," Renfrow said.

The News and Observer reported on Nov. 15 that taxpayers paid for calls to Ingram's home in Myrtle Beach, S.C., during 27 days in July and August.

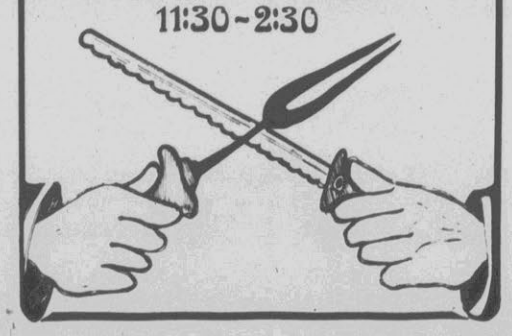

Ingram said later that he takes no vacation and that the calls were on official business.

Sen. Robert W. Wynne, D-Wake, co-chairman of the Legislative Study Commission on Insurance Regulation, said he asked Renfrow to audit the Insurance Department's telephone calls.

Renfrow said Monday he had not received a written request from Wynne or the other co-chairman, Rep. Mary P. Seymour, D-Guilford, and would not decide when to schedule an audit or what questions would be raised until the written request came.

Any Exercises for Varicose Veins?

Are there any special exercises that can cure varicose veins? Can anything be done to keep them from getting worse? — Mrs. R.R.D., Minn.

Dear Mrs. D.:

When varicose veins are already visible, or when they are present deep below the skin surface, it means that changes in the muscular walls of the veins have already taken place. Rarely are these changes reversible.

Exercises cannot change the physical structure of the veins themselves. In some form, exercise can be beneficial to everyone. It is accepted that execerise stimulates the blood circulation and may therefore prevent a moderate stagnation of blood that occurs in some cases of varicosities.

The upright position of man imposes a great burden on the veins of the legs. The additional pull of gravity further interferes with the functioning of the tiny valves in the veins.

Exercise is not a substitute for the beneficial treatments now in use against the fatigue and cramps associated with varicose veins. Support stockings, elevation of the legs at frequent intervals during the day (even for a few minutes at a time) will help the return of blood through the veins. Prolonged periods of standing or sitting or driving in an automobile should be avoided. Tight girdles also interfere with blood circulation.

There are now many excellent and exact ways to determine whether the superficial veins or the deep veins are affected. Each case must be studied individually to determine the efficiency of the blood flow through the veins.

Sometimes local injections are very effective in patients with small varicosities. Positional exercises are not curative, but are sometimes used as an additional form of treatment.

When it is established that the deep or superficial varicose veins are causing symptoms and are incapacitating, surgery may be advised.

The newer, refined techniques of varicose-vein surgery make the operation safe and ensure that recovery is rapid and complete.

Unfortunately, many people delay such an operation because they feel it is "too radical" an approach to the problem. Actually, it should be emphasized that surgery is often the most conservative approach rather than the radical one, for surgery performed at an optimum time can prevent complications and a long convalescence.

Seniors Form A Drill Team

RENTON, Wash. (AP) — A dozen or so senior-citizen cheerleaders had nothing to do when the softball season ended, so they hired two Marine drill sergeants and fell in line as the Renton Senior Center Drill Team.

"Heads back, stomachs in, right face!" the drill instructors bark for an hour every Friday afternoon, and obeying the orders are women who range in age from 63 to 81.

"It's fun," Jeanette Riggle, 72, who helped organize the squad, said Monday. "It's good mental work, strong discipline and quick thinking.

"I think they do about like they would with new Marine recruits. They snap it to you — straighten up! Shoulders back! They put us through the paces."

Annie Kuharic, 81, the oldest member, said that after an hour of marching, she goes to folk dance class. The result of her labors?

"I stay young," she said.

Marching, Mrs. Kuharic said, is "good for the posture and good mentally. I'm a little slow mentally, my thinking is a little slow, but I'm trying awfully hard. You really have to concentrate."

Marie Henspeter, 64, said she had cartilage removed from her knee in September "and my doctor said this is very good exercise for me."

The drill team was organized in the fall when the women, then known as the Late Bloomers cheering squad, saw the softball season end. The women attend the center, which organizes activities for senior citizens.

Ms. Riggle asked Sgt. Ray Wagner of the Marine recruiting office in Renton to help, so he and Sgt. Dan Garrett of the Federal Way recruiting office share drill duty.

"They're coming along fine," Wagner said. "We don't get to drill them as often as we'd like but they're coming along fine."

The team hopes eventually to perform at basketball and football halftimes and at community celebrations.

But for now, "we're not ready for the public yet," said Doris Grube, another team organizer.

They practice in civilian garb, but Ms. Riggle said spit 'n' polish is in the plans.

"We're trying to get down to be good marchers before we go into getting uniforms," she said.

Stopgap Killed House Pay Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Annual salaries for top-ranking federal bureaucrats and members of the House will remain at their current levels in the wake of the hastily resolved dispute between President Reagan and Congress over the stopgap spending resolution.

A conference committee of the House and Senate working on the spending measure had approved proposals to raise House members' salaries 4.8 percent and to raise the ceiling on top-level bureaucrats' pay to $57,500. But both proposals wound up being dropped.

The boost for House members would have been a raise of $2,911 a year. Their current salary is $60,662. Senators' pay would not have been increased.

The House raise was attached to a provision lifting the two-year pay cap for top-ranked bureaucrats, which now is at $50,112.

The House rejected the raises on a voice vote without any dispute Sunday as it considered the conference committee report which President Reagan vetoed Monday.

Dropping of the raises was part of an effort to clear the way for the Senate to also pass the stopgap bill. The Senate later passed the legislation without any pay increase.

The issue of a pay raise had become moot earlier Sunday when President Reagan announced he would veto the bill because it did not provide for the spending cuts he wanted. Thus, there was no longer any reason for Congress to battle over that provision.

The new continuing resolution passed by the House and Senate Monday to keep the government running until Dec. 15 continues financing at the current levels, and retains the current pay cap.

Indict Two In Smokies Death

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted two men in the beating death of a Florida man who was hiking the Appalachian Trial through the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

Robert Elton Taylor Jr., 29, and Freddy Ray Staton, 33, of Williamston, N.C., were indicted in the death of Albert Brian Hunt, 20, of Arcadia, Fla., who had been missing since April 29 when he began his camping trip.

Hunt's abandoned car was found in Lawrenceville, Ga., May 4, while his body was found two months later.

A spokesman in the U.S. District Court clerk's office in Knoxville said Monday the murder indictment of the two men was among 14 indictments and one no-true bill issued Friday.

The grand jury is to reconvene Jan. 12.

FAMILY REUNION — After a seven-year separation, the family of Tran Van Sang is reunited. Sang was in M.P. school at Ft. Gordon, Ga. while in the South Vietnam's army when Saigon fell in 1974. It took a year before he knew his family was alive. After applying for immigration status three years ago, they arrived this week. His wife, Hat, is to the left, and his daughters Thao, Trang and Thy hug him. (AP Laserphoto)

Zoo's Veterinarian Has Big Variety Of Patients

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — When Dr. Charles Lee goes to work every day, he never knows if his next patient will slither, swim or sway.

Lee is a veterinarian for the hundreds of animals at the North Carolina Zoo and his patients range from boa constrictors to otters to elephants. In the past 10 years of the zoo's existence, the exotic has become the ordinary for Lee.

"Every day is a challenge but you get used to it," Lee said. "You just have to learn to be prepared for whatever comes up."

Althouth Lee takes care of the zoo animals, he works full time for an Asheboro veterinary hospital. His office is located about three miles from the zoo and he is on call 24 hours a day.

A day's work for Lee could include anything from an exotic bird with a broken wing to a huge buffalo with a nail in its hoof.

Lee, a 35-year-old Union County native, began working for the zoo when he graduated from veterinary school at the University of Georgia in 1971. "The main reason I began working with the zoo is that I was the only doctor here at the hospital with enough free time," he said. "Plus, I was very interested in working with exotic animals. I really wanted to do it."

According to Lee, the bulk of his work at the zoo involves preventive medicine such as immunization. Many of the vaccines given the animals are the same ones administered to domestic animals.

"For example, lions and tigers get feline distemper shots just like house cats," he said. Primates such as chimpanzees and gorillas get diptheria and polio medication just like children.

One of the most difficult aspets of working with wild animals is the fact that they must be tranquilized in order to be treated.

"Obviously, you can't tell a wild animal to hold up its paw or roll over while you check it, and a lot of the wild animals such as elephants and rhinos are huge and could be dangerous," Lee said.

Most of Lee's zoo patients suffer non-serious injuries such as broken wings or legs or minor cuts and scrapes. However, several of the zoo's animals have died, including a rhiocerous that died from the cold and two elephants that perished from absorption problems.

"We still haven't figured out why the elephants died," Lee said. "It's very frustrating when you can't save an animal because you don't know what's wrong with it. We still have scientists trying to determine what killed those elepants."

Meanwhile, Lee keeps up with the latest facts on zoo animals by reading every book and article on the subject that he can find. He also belongs to the National Association of Zoo Veterinarians and attends the group's annual meetings.

"It's a lot of hard work, but it's interesting because you never know what you'll be doing from one day to the next. It's a rewarding experience and I wouldn't have missed it for anything in the world," Lee said.

The 1,371-acre zoo is located on Purgatory Mountain nine miles from Asheboro and was created by the state General Assembly in 1969. Only North Carolina and Minnesota have state-operated zoos with financing coming from the legislature and donations collected by the non-profit zoo society.

Two N.C. Policemen Killed In 2 Days; Killers Remain At Large

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte policeman was shot and killed Monday night in the wake of an armed robbery, the second fatal shooting of an officer in North Carolina within two days.

Edmond N. Cannon, 26, of the Charlotte Police Department died of a gunshot wound to the heart, said John Lottich, director of public information at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Earlier Monday night, Hendersonville police officer Dennie Enevold died after being shot in the head Sunday morning.

Cannon, who was shot about 10:20 p.m., was brought to the hospital at 10:25 p.m. and pronounced dead at 10:48 p.m.

A team of six doctors headed by police department surgeons Stephen Naso and Gerald Adams opened up Cannon's chest and tried internal heart massage, Lottich said.

Immediately after the shooting, police launched an intensive manhunt for three suspects believed to be on foot in a 20 block area surrounding the Handy Pantry Food Store on the east side of the city.

The suspects also took the officer's service revolver and portable walkie talkie, police said.

A police spokesman said Cannon pulled up to the Handy Pantry to make a purchase, unaware that a robbery was in progress.

"The clerk was apparently locked in the cooler, said Police Capt. G.L. Painter. They (the robbers) came out shooting — he (Cannon) ran into the street and fell."

Neighborhood residents said they heard at least four shots in quick succession. The officer, residents said, appeared to be struck several times in the body.

"I saw him (the officer) running toward the street and I saw him fall," said Rosemary Miller, 26, who lives in a one story brick house across Eastway from the convenience store. "He was running toward the house with one hand up."

Ms. Miller said she immediately notified police and then ran to where the officer was lying on his face near the convenience store driveway.

Another bystander climbed into Cannon's patrol car and used its radio to call police, while still another freed the store clerk who had been locked in the cooler.

It could not be determined how much money was taken.

Police spokesman Emily Hedrick said Cannon, who had been with the department since 1977, was unmarried. She said he was the first officer on the force to have been killed in the line of duty in 21 years.

Hendersonville officer Enevold died at 6:50 p.m. at Mission Memorial Hospital in Asheville, said assistant police chief Debois Edmundson.

He said Enevold underwent brain surgery Sunday afternoon and had been on a respirator since then.

Police said the shooting took place at about 4:52 a.m. Sunday, when Enevold stopped a suspicious vehicle inside the Hendersonville city limits. They said he was shot with a small-caliber handgun, the bullet entering just below his left eye.

Leon Hill, 27, of Brevard was charged with assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury Sunday. The charge was changed to murder Monday night, a Buncombe County Jail spokesman said.

Community Invaded By Number Of Stray Pigs

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — For awhile there, residents of the Rosewood community were considering having barbecue instead of turkey for Thanksgiving dinner.

A neighborhood pig-pickin', they joked, would be one way to dispose of a group of pigs which mysteriously appeared on their lawns for 11 straight days. The animals would tear up their grass rooting for acorns and would disappear at dark.

Fortunately for the two to five boar hogs, two sows and 10 to 20 baby pigs which composed the invading party, their owner appeared on the scene Sunday and returned them to their proper rooting grounds.

"They were as cute as they could be, like little children or puppies," said Patricia H. Howell, a resident of the Perk Hills subdivision where the animals paid their visit.

But she said their mothers, the sows, were less appealing. "They were what we were worried about, because they can be very vicious around the babies," she said.

Jerry and Pat Howell also were worried about their swimming pool, which Mrs. Howell said the piglets loved.

Taking advantage of a slope in its cover, she said, they would slide down its edge, then run back for more as children would do. "Later I laughed at it," she said. "You'd see two boar hogs standing on the edge and the babies on the cover. But at the time it wasn't funny."

The Howells notified the Wayne County animal control office, which told them to find out who owned the animals and to take out a warrant. But lacking the owner's identity, the Howells decided to take action themselves.

Mrs. Howell said she began poking at a boar hog in her driveway with a stick.

"He just growled at me," she said. "I got kind of scared and ran away from him and threw rocks at him from a safe distance. It didn't faze him.

"He went back to his rooting and when it started getting dark, he looked up at the sky as if to say, 'time to go home,' and took off running through the woods."

The pigs, it was finally learned, belonged to Luther Johnson, a farmer who lived nearby. He had been hospitalized and had made arrangements for the pigs to be fed, but apparently didn't know that his sly animals were escaping daily.

Sunday was round-up day for the group of porkers. Residents breathed a sigh of relief as Johnson's son took the pigs home. But even he had trouble and had to resort to trickery — tickling the piglets and making them squeal — to induce the sows to surrender peaceably.

Schools Mark Book Week

Pitt County Schools observed National Children's Book Week by participating in special projects and programs involving teachers, students and parents.

First grade classes at W.H. Robinson School taught by Anna Thomas and Phyllis Swindell celebrated Book Week by presenting a reading program to the residents of the University Nursing Center in Greenville. Each child wore a book costume depicting their favorite book. Each resident of the center received a bookmark in honor of Children's Book Week.

Most schools held poster contests, Pactolus School had a clown costume contest and Wellcome Middle School had a T-shirt Slogan Contest.

The theme for Book Week was "Let the Book Bug Bite" at Wellcome, Sam Bundy and Farmville Middle Schools. Bethel Elementary School students shared their favorite books orally, heard stories and received bookmarkers.
