Nuclear Missile Cutback Talks Open In Geneva

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Under pressure from a European public fearful of war, the United States and the Soviet Union opened talks today to limit deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

Paul H. Nitze, chief of the U.S. negotiating team, and Soviet negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky met informally for about 1½ hours at the three-story grey and white Soviet mission here. Some officials said the first full-scale bargaining session could follow on Tuesday.

No statement was issued immediately after the opening session, but the U.S. mission said Nitze would meet reporters later today.

About 75 reporters were gathered at the gate of the mission, ringed by uniformed Soviet security guards, as Nitze's black limousine arrived in a light snowfall. Kvitsinsky greeted the American at the front steps.

The two men shook hands and smiled broadly before going inside to begin the talks.

Despite widespread interest in the talks throughout Europe, the opening session attracted little attention from passersby. There were no peace demonstrators on hand, although a women's group announced plans for a peace march this evening in downtown Geneva.

Although the negotiations were expected to be slow and difficult, both delegation chiefs have pledged to work toward an agreement.

Nitze, 74, in a meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt Saturday, promised to work "intensively, constructively and speedily," German officials said.

Kvitsinsky, 45, said his government is seeking "a mutually acceptable accord with the United States for radical reductions in medium-range nuclear arms in Europe." But a commentary distributed by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, charged that the United States was trying in the talks to achieve nuclear superiority.

The talks are being held in response to widespread opposition in Western Europe to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plans to deploy 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Western Europe, starting in 1983, to offset Soviet medium-range nuclear missiles trained on Western Europe.

Hundreds of thousands of opponents of the NATO deployment have marched in London, Paris, Bonn and Amsterdam in recent weeks, demanding rejection of the U.S. missiles. And the Dutch government has linked its support for the missile deployment plan to progress at the Geneva talks.

Expectations are running high among the public in Western Europe that the talks will lead to improvement in East-West relations.

"The negotiations on missiles in Europe are much more than a difficult military accounting," said the Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera.

Economic Indicators See New Decline In October

By SALLY JACOBSEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A broad gauge of future economic strength declined in October, the fifth drop in six months, the government said today. The decline points toward a likelihood of further weakness in the recession-struck economy.

The Commerce Department's Index of Leading Indicators dropped 1.8 percent during October, a little better than the 2.2 percent decline in September, which was the sharpest fall since May 1980, in the heart of last year's recession. Preliminary data had placed the September drop at 2.7 percent.

Robert Ortner, the department's chief economist, said the newest report indicates "the recession is for real and it's continuing."

Noting the decline in October was less than that posted in September, he said: "Hopefully the recession will be reviewed as a relatively moderate one."

Most of the decline was due to a worsening of the layoff rate, factory orders for manufactured goods and building permits for new construction, he said. "The three point to a pretty weak economy in the fourth quarter" of this year, he said.

He predicted the economy would show weakness in the first quarter of next year before turning up in the spring.

Of 10 economic indicators designed to forecast future trends, only four showed improvement last month, said the report.

Figures worsened from September to October for Americans' labor layoff rate, delivery performance, building permits, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, factory orders for manufactured goods and total liquid assets of U.S. companies.

The "layoff rate contributed the greatest decline," said the report.

Figures improved for average workweek, change in sensitive crude materials prices, stock prices and the money supply, it said.

The index fell in May, June, August and September. It was unchanged in July.

The national economy has shown little overall strength since February, leading economists inside and outside of government to say the economy is in a recession.

B-1 And MX Likely To Win Congress Approval

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate supporters of the new bombers and missiles President Reagan wants appear to have the strength to turn aside challenges to the weapons as debate begins on a $208.3 billion military spending bill.

At the same time, though, Senate Budget Committee Chairman Pete V. Domenici says military spending will have to be considered along with everything else as part of a program to dramatically cut budget deficits in 1983 and 1984.

And Domenici and Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan say federal welfare, pension and medical programs will have to be curtailed.

The Senate was beginning debate today a military spending bill that includes $2.1 billion to start work on a planned 100 B-1 bombers and approximately the same amount for MX missiles.

The action comes as U.S. and Soviet negotiators open talks in Geneva on limiting tactical nuclear arms.

Reagan has argued that congressional backing for the nuclear bombers and missiles will show the Soviets that the United States is serious about rearming if the Kremlin does not agree to his proposals for disarming.

The House already has approved both the B-1 and MX money, passing a $196.5 billion version of the military appropriation bill.

Senate attempts to eliminate money for both projects are expected to be defeated.

"We have no feeling we are going to win," said a strategist for opponents of the B-1, who asked to remain anonymous. "The question is how much we are going to get rolled over by."

Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, chairman of the subcommittee on defense appropriations, said last week that he is ready for attacks on the MX, B-1 and other weapons systems but expects none of them to succeed.

The Defense Department bill is one of several regular appropriations measures Congress is trying to pass before Dec. 15, when stopgap spending authority expires.

So far, Congress has given final approval only to those individual spending bills for the legislative branch, the District of Columbia and for energy and water development projects. Those measures not passed by the deadline will have to be included in another stopgap bill.

The House, which has passed the bulk of its appropriations bills and sent them to the Senate, has no legislative business scheduled during the week.

Republicans and administration officials are trying to craft a proposed package by the end of this week that would avoid the kind of confrontation that halted non-essential government services for half a day last week.

Part of the strategy will include getting final congressional action on some of the domestic spending bills, shrinking the size of the next interim appropriation.

Domenici, R-N.M., said Sunday that he is confident "that come Dec. 15 at least we are going to have a continuing resolution in place that the president clearly indicates he will sign."

Questioned on CBS' "Face the Nation," Domenici added that the next stopgap measure must include "somewhere around $2 billion" in additional budget savings.

Dismissing arguments that such an amount is not much compared with projections showing the 1982 budget deficit soaring to $60 billion to $80 billion, Domenici said: "It is important that the president make it clear to the Congress that this first exercise in fiscal responsibility is, just that, and that there is more to come, and that he is serious about controlling this enormous growth in the federal government."

In addition, Domenici said he expects the president in January to send Congress a budget "1/ set the fiscal policy of this country on a path that dramatically cuts deficits in '83 and '84."

Part of that process, he said, will include taking a new look at the military budget.

Reagan has proposed reducing the growth in military spending by $13 billion over three years, but Domenici said, "I think it has to be between 23 (billion) and 26 (billion)."

Will Not Run

RICHMOND (AP) — U.S. Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr., the only independent in the Senate, announced today he will not seek re-election to a fourth term next year.

Byrd, 67, said in a statement that he and his wife had agreed in the summer of 1980 that he would not run again, "believing that 18 years is long enough."

"I shall not be a candidate for re-election", he said.

Byrd was appointed to the Senate in November 1965 by then Gov. Albertis Harrison Jr. to succeed his father the late Democratic Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Sr., who had resigned after 32 years in the Senate because of illness.

He was elected in 1966 as a Democrat — to fill out his father's term which ended in 1970.

He abandoned the Democratic party in 1970 because of his opposition to the party's loyalty oath and ran as an independent in 1970 and 1976, easily winning re-election each time.

Right To Act In Govm't Strike Upheld By Court

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused today to become involved in an air traffic controllers' work protest that started before last summer's nationwide strike.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that the Justice Department was allowed to seek a court order against a union-backed controllers' slowdown at Chicago's O'Hare Airport in 1980.

The Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization has said the outcome of today's case would affect court actions started by the government to ban last summer's strike, which resulted in about 11,500 controllers being fired.

An issue in today's case was whether federal courts, at the request of the government can bar federal workers' strikes or job actions — or whether such power rests exclusively with the Federal Labor Relations Authority.

PATCO has been stripped of its right to represent controllers in contract matters. Last Wednesday the union filed for protection against its creditors under federal bankruptcy laws.

The union noted that the government filed about 100 separate court actions across the country to bar last summer's strike. In addition, various private parties filed their own lawsuits.

PATCO says it will continue to insist in those cases what it argued in today's case from Chicago: that the federal labor panel alone could issue anti-strike orders.

"The importance of resolving the issues this (Chicago) case poses is not limited to the immediate outcome of this lawsuit," the union told the high court.

It asked the justices to resolve the issue now to avoid unnecessary court fights as PATCO seeks to overturn the anti-strike orders issued by various federal courts during last summer's strike.

The government disputed PATCO's claim that only the federal labor panel could seek orders against strikes and other job actions, noting that the union's argument was turned down when the government obtained its strike curbs last summer.

"Not one district court considered (PATCO's) jurisdictional arguments sufficiently substantial to warrant the denial of injunctive relief," the Justice Department said.

Following last summer's strike, the Federal Labor Relations Authority, a government panel set up to monitor government labor relations, stripped PATCO of its right to represent air traffic controllers.

The federal labor panel's Oct. 22 order, issued after President Reagan's decision to fire the striking controllers, is still pending before a federal appeals court in Washington.

The Chicago dispute arose after the government turned down local PATCO leaders' demands for a $7,500 tax-free bonus for each O'Hare controller and for immediate improvements at the facility.

The government said the controllers then began a work slowdown, which "virtually paralyzed airport traffic by Aug. 15, 1980."

Last June 18, the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the Justice Department could seek a court order barring a work slowdown or stoppage.

The appeals court sent the case back to U.S. District Judge Milton I. Shadur, who had barred the slowdown before deciding in December 1980 that he did not have the authority to issue such an order at the Justice Department's request.

Traffic Tied Up 18 Miles

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Traffic on I-85 and I-40 near Greensboro was backed up 18 miles by a series of 13 accidents involving 35 vehicles Sunday.

Authorities said only one injury was reported, that not serious.

"We literally had them stacked up from the Regional Airport to the Alamance County line," said W.G. Bridges, a telecommunicator for the State Highway Patrol in Greensboro.

It all started about 4:30 p.m., when a rear-end collision at N.C. 61 and I-85 started slowing eastbound traffic.

"Every mile or so you'd have another accident," Bridges said. "It was one of the biggest backups that we've had in years. The main problem was everybody slowing down to watch the other accidents. They'd be looking the other way and then run into the car ahead of them. As the accidents started occurring, it had a domino effect."

In one accident, at N.C. 68 and I-40, seven vehicles tangled.

"We have no idea how many bumper-to-bumper accidents there were that weren't serious enough to report," Bridges said.

McGuire Reactor Staves Off Coming Electricity Demands

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The addition of the McGuire nuclear plant Tuesday to Duke Power Co.'s electricity network will keep the utility ahead of demand for about six months, officials said.

"McGuire will meet growth that has already occurred," said Duke Power president Bill Lee. "That electricity will be completely absorbed in about six months."

Commercial status for the $1.8 billion plant, 17 miles northwest of Charlotte, comes just before Duke's annual electricity growth of 400,000 kilowatts overtakes the unit's 1.2 million kilowatt output, he added.

Even with McGuire in service, reserves will slip below 20 percent by next summer, he said.

Tuesday also marks the day customers in North Carolina and South Carolina begin paying for the $963 million Unit No. 1. Cash revenues will go up $110 million a year in North Carolina alone.

Duke says nuclear fuel, which costs a half-cent a kilowatt hour compared with coal's 1½ cents, makes McGuire cheaper to run than a coal plant.

But the total cost of electricity from McGuire — fuel plus capital and operating costs — will average 4½ cents a kilowatt hour — nearly three times higher than electricity produced by Duke's only other nuclear plant, Oconee, which is 140 miles southwest of Charlotte near Seneca, S.C.

The plant begins operations despite the opposition of the Carolina Environmental Study Group, a small organization of nuclear power opponents led by Jesse Riley of Charlotte.

The 100-member study group failed to stop the construction and operating licenses, but an appeal is pending on the operating license.

The last round of safety hearings concerned the group's contention that an accident similar to the one in 1979 at Three Mile Island could cause a catastrophe.

Duke maintains that new safety procedures and equipment, such as a $600,000 indicator that reveals the water level in the plant's nuclear reactor, puts the chance of such an accident at less than one in 1 billion.

Critics doubt whether state and county officials can quickly and safely evacuate the 65,000 people who live within 10 miles of the plant. But Duke and state plans and drills have received good grades from federal officials.

Because of the release of minute amounts of radiation when McGuire begins operation, Duke and state health officials plan to monitor milk from nearby dairies, water supplies, soil and vegetation.

The state radiation protection division has set up its own instruments, but the agency will rely on Duke for immediate sampling information because a budget squeeze has put gaps in the state sampling system, said Dayne Brown, radiation protection chief.

McGuire's chief waste product will be highly radioactive nuclear waste that remains toxic for thousands of years.

At the end of McGuire's 30-year life, the two units will have manufactured 8,640 tons of waste in the form of burned-up fuel assemblies — a legacy that will be inherited by the federal government for permanent burial.

Ultralight Aircraft Is Stirring Controversy

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — As more ultralight aircraft take to the air, a swirling controversy threatens their economic survival.

Ultralights, driven by two-cycle gasoline engines and able to cruise 75 to 200 miles on a tank of gas, cost about $3,500 to $5,000 and fly up to 50 mph.

Some areas have attempted to regulate the nation's 10,000 ultralights because the Federal Aviation Administration has no rules governing the craft, said John Ballantyne, a Pacolma, Calif., ultralight dealer, who is active in the national Experimental Aircraft Association.

In North Carolina, where about 300 ultralights are hangared, airports are far from uniform in their attitudes toward the craft.

On Tuesday, James Peeler plans to appeal a Gastonia City Council order that grounded ultralight aircraft at the city's airport.

"Frankly, Gastonia Municipal Airport is a public facility, and I feel like we're being discriminated against," he said, adding that the order clipped the wings of a month-old ultralight dealership he and partner Karl Logan had opened at the airport.

Jack Robinson, who headed the committee that recommended the restriction, said the unregulated ultralights pose a safety hazard.

But Paul Justice, a Charlotte-based FAA operations inspector said ultralight pilots are required to meet FAA operating rules regulating approaches to airports, minimum flying altitudes and general flying compartment.

Meanwhile, other airports have varying reactions to the craft.

Charles Beckman, manager of the Moore County Airport near Southern Pines, said one ultralight is based there.

"It's not problem at all," Beckman said. He said the ultralight uses a grass strip and doesn't mix with faster air traffic that often includes corporate jets.

However, an operator at the Chester, S.C., airport said ultralights should not use general aviation airports. Nor should any other recreational aircraft, said M.G. Johnson, who operates Commander Instruments and Avionics, because they're bad for business and pose a safety hazard.

A proposed set of FAA regulations expected to become effective by May would classify ultralights as experimental aircraft and would require an FAA certificate of airworthiness, said Charles Gray of the FAA's Charlotte office.

Detect Blast

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A strong underground nuclear blast was set off in the Sempalaine area Sunday in the Soviet Union, seismologists reported.

The blast measured 6.7 on the Richter scale, the Uppsala University seismological institute said.

The Swedish Defense Research Agency has registered 12 of this year's 18 Soviet explosions in the same area, officials said.

Clerk Shot In Motel Robbery

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — A 24-year-old motel clerk was shot during an armed robbery Sunday in Kings Mountain, town police said Monday.

Derrick Freeman of Shelby was treated and released from Gaston Memorial Hospital after being shot in the back, said police Sgt. Richard Reynolds.

No arrests have been made in the shooting, Reynolds said.

Reynolds said Freeman was robbed at gunpoint of an undisclosed amount of money at the Holiday Inn. He was forced into a car, taken to a wooded area in Gaston County, then thrown from the car and shot, Reynolds said. Freeman called for help from a nearby farmhouse, said Reynolds.

Charge Lodged In Incident

Greenville Police arrested Harry Hodges Gautier Jr. of Route 6, Washington, on indecent exposure charges an hour after an alleged 8:45 p.m. incident Saturday on Summit Street between Second and Third Streets.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Katharine Leath Kimberly, 19 of 514 East First St. told police she was returning to her home from the East Carolina University campus when a male, later identified as Gautier, allegedly stopped his car beside her and exposed himself.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

He said the requests were submitted by the Greenville Optimist Club to conduct a Christmas tree sale Nov. 25 through Dec. 20 to raise funds for youth work and projects sponsored by the club; and by the Greenville Exchange Club to conduct a merchant, telephone, and mail solicitation Nov. 24 through Dec. 17 to sell tickets to an annual variety show which will raise funds for local charities.

Two-Chair Guests Should Be Ashamed

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: The last few years my wife and I have had Thanksgiving dinner with her relatives. The meal has always been scheduled for around 5 p.m.

About five minutes to 5, in come some dinner guests, loudly announcing that they won't be eating much because they already had Thanksgiving dinner somewhere else, but they'll just "sit and pick" and maybe have dessert and coffee with us. Some guests have already been to two Thanksgiving dinners; others have to be somewhere else at 7 p.m.

I find this insulting to the host and hostess who have worked so hard to prepare a fine holiday meal. How do you feel about it? Please print this.

I would also enjoy reading responses from both hosts and guests on this subject.

G.F.H. IN MONROEVILLE, PA.

DEAR G.F.H.: I think people who are lucky enough to be invited to a Thanksgiving dinner should consider it a commitment and not try to "sit on two chairs with one posterior" — to recall an old ethnic expression that loses something in the translation.

DEAR ABBY: For the past six months I have been dating a widower. His wife was killed suddenly in an accident three years ago.

My question: Is it normal that he hasn't touched any of her belongings yet? Her clothes are still in her closets, and cosmetics, perfume, jewelry, etc., remain exactly where they were when she left the house for the last time.

When I am at his home, the presence of her things makes me feel as though she is still there and I should not be.

He is romantically interested in me and it is mutual. What do you think?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Your friend has obviously not yet worked through his grief, or completely accepted his wife's death. His reluctance to put her belongings away is his way of holding onto her.

DEAR ABBY: The following is from a letter I recently received from an out-of-state relative:

"Let's make a deal. Next year instead of sending each other Christmas presents, send me a check, and I will do the same for you. It will save us both a lot of trouble."

Abby, I never considered shopping for Christmas presents "a lot of trouble." Besides, what's the sense of my sending her a check for $50 and her sending me the same? How do you feel about it? I should add that this relative needs more money like I need another belly button.

BETSY

DEAR BETSY: I agree with you. Tell her to just blow you a kiss next Christmas, and you'll do the same for her.

DEAR ABBY: What are the parents' responsibilities for a daughter's second wedding? Our daughter was given a church wedding and reception for her first marriage. She is divorced, her ex-husband is married again, and now she is planning her second marriage.

I think a small, simple wedding would be in better taste and so does my husband, but our daughter's fiancé has never been married before and his family has suggested that it would be unfair to him to have a small, simple wedding just because it's the bride's second. However, it's the bride's family that must plan it, put it on and pay for it, right?

No names, please, just your opinion.

SECOND TIME AROUND

DEAR SECOND: Right! And I second your motion.

DEAR ABBY: I work in an office building about six blocks from downtown. Every day on my lunch hour, I enjoy walking downtown, window-shopping, browsing or doing errands. It's relaxing for me to get away from my desk alone for an hour.

However, lately a co-worker has been joining me every single day! We're the same age and have much in common, and she is very nice, but I don't enjoy spending every lunch hour with someone I work with all day. Besides, I feel compelled to keep up a running conversation the whole time, and I'm not able to window-shop or do many of the things I want to do.

How can I discourage her from joining me every day? Once a week would be fine, but I need time to be alone as I have a rather busy and hectic home life. I don't want to hurt her feelings or lose her as a friend.

LONER

DEAR LONER: There comes a time when we must either assert ourselves or suffer the consequences. Tell your co-worker in as nice and gentle a way as possible that you need time alone on your lunch hour, but you'd be delighted to have her company one day a week. "And shall we make it Monday?"

Dickerson - Culbreth Vows Said In Oxford

Bridge Wins Announced

MRS. GRADY GRESHAM DICKERSON II

OXFORD — Alice Teresa Culbreth and Grady Gresham Dickerson II were married in the Oxford Baptist Church here Sunday afternoon at three o'clock by Clarence E. Godwin, minister, in a double ring ceremony.

Mrs. Cindy Joy was organist and Mr. and Mrs. Duane Addison sang "Abiding Love," "The Wedding Song," "That's the Way" and "Thine Be The Glory."

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Culbreth of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Grady G. Dickerson of Oxford.

Karen Culbreth of Fayetteville was honor attendant for her sister. Bridesmaids were Pam and Lori Dickerson of Oxford, sisters of the bridegroom, Cindy McDonald of Wendell and Denise Hunsucker of Troy, cousin of the bride.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers included Andrew Questell of Lenoir, Robert Currin and Bobby Carter of Oxford and Stewart Phillips of Battleboro.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory organza over ivory peau de soie designed with V-neckline outlined in silk Venise lace. The empire bodice was enhanced with silk Venise lace that continued over the shoulders and down the back bodice. The full sheer bishop sleeves were fashioned with appliques of silk Venise and cuffs edged in the matching lace. The accordion-pleated organza skirt and attached chapel length train were accented with a crystal pleated founce topped with silk Venise lace. She wore a bridal hat of ivory silk Venise lace fashioned with an ivory satin ribbon with a double tier of illusion trimmed with pencil edging. She carried an arm bouquet of sprays of miniature white orchids and cymbidium orchids with springer fern.

The attendants were dressed identically in formal gowns of burgundy tinasetta Italian silk with each designed with an open neckline, miniature rolled shoulder straps and flared accordion pleated skirt. The gown was complemented by a sheer draped chiffon cape. Each carried an arm bouquet of dusty rose carnations with baby's breath and baker fern.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of mauve silesta knit designed with an open V-neckline enhanced by an overlay of self fabric. The mother of the bridegroom selected a two-piece amethyst matte jersey mushroom pleated long skirt coordinated with a matching metallic knit top.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the Oxford Woman's Club.

Pouring punch was Mrs. Katherine Belcher and Bob Hastings served champagne. Good-byes were said by Mrs. Mary Nell Newcomb and Jimmy Newton. Elizabeth Dickerson, Eileen McRoy and Jody Winstead distributed rice bags.

The bridegroom is the commercial graphics department head at Lenoir Community College. He received undergraduate and graduate degrees from East Carolina University. The bride attends ECU.

The couple will live in Greenville following a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Thorndale Country Club Saturday night.

MOVING PEOPLE

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Patti Davidson knows about moving people.

Davidson, supervisor of a travel department with a staff of seven, coordinates travel plans for more than 83,000 R.J. Reynolds employees worldwide.

In an average month, that includes issuing 1,500 airline tickets, renting 450 cars and reserving 1,400 hotel rooms.

While the company saves money on hotel and car rental rates, Davidson says shopping for lower airfares is one method that just doesn't pay off.

Wednesday afternoon duplicate bridge winners at Planters Bank were (north-south) Mrs. Barry Powers and Gary Bryant, first with 586 percent; Mrs. Fred Sorensen and Mrs. Bertha Jones, second; and Mrs. Beulah Eagles and Mrs. Willie Cummings, third; (east-west) Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Mrs. George Martin, first with 601 percent; Mrs. Clifton Toler and Mrs. John Tayloe, second; and Mrs. Fred Adams and Ms. Estelle Eastwood, third.

Saturday afternoon winners were (north-south) Mrs. Harold Forbes and Mrs. William Hillgartner, first with 589 percent; Mr. and Mrs. Kent Leggett, second; and Dr. Charles Duffy and Dr. Charles Hankerson, third; and Ida Rowe and Nancy Pate, fourth.

(east-west) Chris Langley and Ed Yauck, first with 595 percent; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew deSherbinin, second; Mrs. J.N. LeConte and Mrs. Robert Bright, third; and Dave Proctor and Lee Hastings, fourth.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: I sometimes moonlight as a caterer. Now I have to prepare a buffet supper at which the hostess wants to serve Macadamia Cream Pie. Do you have a recipe for this dessert? — MUSICIAN.

DEAR MUSICIAN: When your request came I remembered that a while back Family Circle magazine published a Macadamia Cream Pie given to them by the Kahala Hilton in Honolulu. The dessert is said to be one of the most popular ones served at the hotel. Here is our version of the pie. — C.B.

MACADAMIA NUT CREAM PIE

1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
3 egg yolks
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons coffee liqueur
Macadamia nuts, see Note
9-inch baked pie shell
Topping, recipe follows

In a 2-quart saucepan with a wooden spoon, stir together the sugar, cornstarch and salt; gradually stir in the milk, keeping it smooth. In the pint cup used to measure the milk, with the spoon, beat the egg yolks enough to blend thoroughly; add to the sugar mixture and stir vigorously until blended. Over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, cook until boiling, sputtery and as thick as (or thicker than) mayonnaise — about 10 minutes. Off heat, stir in the butter until melted. Turn into a bowl; lightly cover surface of mixture with saran — if you do this without pressure, you will be able to remove the saran without any of it sticking to the mixture. Refrigerate until mixture is cool — no longer warm to the touch.

In a small bowl beat the cream and coffee liqueur until stiff; fold into the cooled mixture until blended; fold in 1/2 cup coarsely cut macadamia nuts. Turn into the pie shell. Refrigerate until cold. Spread with the Topping; sprinkle the center with thinly sliced macadamias; arrange 8 whole macadamias equidistantly around the edge. Chill until served — the soft filling will cut beautifully. Makes 8 servings.

Note: Macadamia nuts (roasted and lightly salted) are now widely available in jars and cans in supermarkets and specialty food shops. As a rule, some of the nuts in these containers are whole, some in halves and some in smaller pieces. Set aside 8 whole nuts for a garnish. For the 1/2 cup coarsely cut nuts (the size of cherry pits) called for, I hold the nut halves in my hand and, with a small sharp knife, cut each in half again. I have found that chopping the macadamias with a knife on a chopping board does not work well because this way they inevitably splinter. For the center garnish, you can slice them thinly on a board because the splintering won't matter. — C.B.

Topping: Beat together until stiff 1/2 cup heavy cream, 1 tablespoon superfine sugar and 1 tablespoon coffee liqueur.

Mary Anne Pennington Married Thanksgiving Day

Col. and Mrs. James Clifton Pennington, USA Ret., of Murfreesboro and Mrs. Jesse Lee Shackelford of La Grange, announce the marriage of their children, Mary Anne Pennington and Walter Joseph Shackelford, on Thursday, Nov. 26.

Mrs. Pennington, who is retaining her maiden name, is executive director of the Greenville Museum of Art. Mr. Shackelford is employed by Biscuit Towne, Inc. as a food service manager. After a wedding trip to Nags Head, the couple will live in Greenville.

Lancasters Have 51st Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. James Lancaster of Rt. 4, Greenville are celebrating their 51st wedding anniversary today. The couple has five sons and 14 grandchildren.

A Good Day's Work

The "Nickles for Know-How" program re-approved last week by North Carolina farmers is basically one more example of self-tax, self-help projects that exist in almost every field of industry, business and profession.

There is one major change this year. Inflation made it imperative for farm people to approve "2 Nickles for Know-how" ... meaning they doubled their self-tax on every ton of feed and fertilizer to support agricultural research, education and extension work in the state.

People just don't double their "taxes" on anything unless they can see for themselves that the money results in tangible benefits. Even so, the number of ballots cast was significantly lower than in other years; which may mean either growing concern over the soaring costs of farming (and no end in sight), an attitude of over-confidence because no significant opposition was voiced; or, as some suggest, the weather kept people home.

The self-assessment practice is widespread, which is a good thing. It inspires a feeling of self-esteem, of sharing in a common effort, of mutual respect, and there's also those eventual benefits resulting from the work paid for by the investors.

It was a good day's work for Tar Heel farmers.

PCB Soil Has To Be Removed

The State of North Carolina will begin storing soil from roadside PCB dumping at a Warren County site.

The plans are to proceed after a U.S. district judge dismissed a suit which was filed by Warren County and some of its residents to keep the site from being developed.

It is easy to understand the Warren County objections and yet the toxic dirt, which was dumped along roadways in 1978, must go somewhere.

State officials are assuring Warren County people that the site will not be used for other toxic substances. That promise should be kept, but it is also time to resolve the matter of removing the PCB dirt from the roadways.

BECOMING A DAY-TO-DAY BUSINESS!

Buying Pig In A Poke

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — For those who might be interested in serving in the General Assembly, the decision to run next year will be akin to buying a pig in a poke.

Not only is there doubt about where legislative district boundaries ultimately will fall, candidates in next spring's primaries won't know whether they are running for a term that will end in 1984 or 1986.

The disputes over House and Senate reapportionment are well known by now — suits seeking new plans are pending in federal and state courts, and the U.S. Justice Department is reviewing the plans for evidence of voter discrimination.

Gaining less notice has been a proposed constitutional amendment — one of five amendments on the May 4 ballot — that would give legislators terms that last four years. Legislators decided they liked the idea this year, and now only the public vote is needed to change the two-year terms that have been the practice since 1835.

If approved, the longer terms would take effect with the 1982 elections. And thereafter, North Carolina would elect its legislators every four years in the off-year elections — separated by two years from campaigns for president and governor.

North Carolina voters have been receptive to changes in their state Constitution in recent years, approving 22 of the 24 proposals on the ballot since 1968.

But organized opposition, rare for a ballot issue in the state, has begun to emerge. Tom Gilmore, a former state representative from Guilford County and Human Resources deputy secretary in the Hunt administration, has stepped down from the state post and is trying to build an organization opposing four-year terms while pondering his own political plans for 1984.

"This is a very significant amendment we're voting on — it would change the whole balance of power in this state," he says. "I honestly think it's a serious mistake. It's another step toward a full-time, professional legislature."

He plans to unveil his organization in January, and hopes it will include prominent figures, including former governors. He hasn't given it a name yet, but is considering calling it the Committee to Preserve the Citizen Legislature.

But Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, the main mover behind the proposal, says he isn't concerned about the opposition.

"I don't think any Tom Gilmore opposition is going to defeat the thing," Barnes said. "Tom Gilmore is interested in Tom Gilmore running for something, and he thinks this is a vehicle to get him some publicity."

The proposal for four-year terms has been around for a number of years but has never made it through the legislature before. Supporters of the measure say it is needed to give legislators a break from the expensive and time-consuming rigors of seeking election every two years.

They say it is a logical extension of the recent changes in state government that have given the governor and lieutenant governor the chance to stay in office for eight years and the House Speaker the ability to remain in power indefinitely.

Gilmore, however, says reducing the number of elections lawmakers must face would make them less responsive to constituents.

"We need to keep the legislature on a short leash, and that short leash is a two-year term," he says.

It would generally favor incumbents, he says, and further weaken the governor, who already is the only one in the country without veto power.

"Doubling the terms is not the solution," he says. "If the expense is really a problem, increase their pay. If time is a problem, put a 90-day limit on the sessions."

Barnes, however, says the legislature is already a professional one, with three sessions this year, and that some kind of change is needed so average citizens can serve. He said the argument that fewer elections would distance legislators from their constituents is a "dumb state-

Not That Simple

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — It's so easy for people to say that taking routine traffic cases out of the overcrowded courtrooms would relieve the pressure and allow more attention to serious matters, but things are never quite that simple.

The more the state's Courts Commission looks into the subject, the more complicated it becomes. That is why the prospect of quick action which seemed at hand a couple of years ago is, instead, yielding to long and careful study.

Traffic cases make up more than half the total number of cases handled in the state's district courts — better than 300,000 each year. Additional thousands of traffic cases are disposed of through submission pleas to magistrates and court clerks without the defendant appearing in the courtroom.

Obviously, removing this caseload would provide tremendous relief to overburdened court personnel, allowing district attorneys more time for serious matters, and judges more time to handle their dockets.

Serious But not all traffic cases can be taken out of court. The public mood is such that serious traffic offenses — those which endanger people like drunk driving, reckless driving, racing — would have to remain in court. And those are the very cases which demand so much of the court's time and attention. The routine matters are disposed of routinely in short order as a rule.

And then there is the matter of money. Assuming that about half the traffic cases which are routine and could easily be decriminalized were transferred to another agency, such an agency would have to be built from scratch. That means every county seat and some other towns would have to provide office space, clerical help, supplies and equipment, and trained hearing officers to run the administrative processing of the traffic fines. Of course the traffic fines and court costs could defray the cost, but that presents another problem.

The courts are already dependent upon those court costs to help pay the daily bills. Taking them away to pay another agency would leave the courts financially short because it is clear that despite the workload transfer to some other agency, the courts would not rush to give up personnel and space and equipment already in the budget. That would be needed, court people will insist, to maintain the desired level of activity.

Also local schools now get much of the fine money and would protest using that money for the new traffic court system.

Despite the apparent problems, the prospects of streamlining the traffic penalty system, relieving the courts, decriminalizing the routine offenses, and forging a more workable link between the administration of justice in traffic cases and the auto registration and driving license agencies is appealing to reformists.

Attitudes This change would permit more attention to driver attitudes and training through remedial programs rather than simply imposing a fine and marching the individual out of the courtroom. Such an approach, tied to points and restrictions in driving privileges, is needed, say specialists, to help change peoples' aggressive driving habits and impress them with the need for safe and courteous behavior on the roads.

Also, specialists say moving the system to an agency more insulated from the political pressures which can be brought to bear upon district attorneys and judges in some instances would allow better justice. But that same situation would also mean that high-handed bureaucratic handling of cases could produce hardships for people in need of special consideration.

There is no way to tell, at this time, how many of the traffic cases handled by administratively hearing of-

A War With Asteroids

The big news for Christmss is that video games are hotter than ever. This means more people will be shooting down more asteroids, space invaders, UFOs and unfriendly missiles than ever before.

The video games are home versions of arcade games that have been the rage of the country this year, not only with youngsters but grown men as well.

I stopped into an arcade the other day and asked a man in a pin-striped suit, standing at an electronic machine, what he was doing.

"I'm shooting down asteroids," he said.

"Anyone can see that. But why?"

"Because I put a quarter in the machine and if I don't shoot them down, I'll blow my money."

"Do you have anything personal against asteroids?"

"Hell, no," he said, "I don't even know what they are."

"Suppose I told you that asteroids are minor planets that revolve around the sun between Mars and Jupiter and are no threat to Earth. Would that change your mind about wanting to shoot them down?"

"Not if I put a quarter in the machine," he said.

"Do you realize at the rate people are shooting down asteroids there might not be any left by 1984?"

"Hey, look, fellow. I don't need you to tell me what to shoot down in an arcade."

I replied, "Asteroids are small particles of matter created when the solar system was born. They are absolutely no threat to us. As a matter of fact, they may be preventing us from having skin cancer."

"Why would the people who designed this game program it with asteroids if they didn't want us to shoot them down?"

"Because all they are interested in is your quarters. I don't think any of them has seen one."

ART BUCHWALD

"Look at my score. While I was talking to you I only shot down one asteroid!"

"That's one too many!" I told him.

He moved to another machine called "Space Invaders."

I stopped him as he was about to put a quarter in the machine.

"Why are you going to shoot down people from outer space?" I asked him.

"Because they are going to attack us," he said.

"How do you know that?"

"It says so, right here on the screen."

"They put that on the machine to arouse your killer instinct. Suppose those spacehips we coming here on a close encounter of the third kind? Maybe there are women and children on them. How would you feel if someone from another planet shot down your space shuttle?"

"Hey, look, I have only 15 minutes of my lunch hour left. What business is it of yours anyway?"

"Because there are too many people in this country who want to shoot at something. It puts American in a very bad psychological frame of mind. It's worse for the kids. They are starting to think that war is a video game, and we can shoot down anything with a quarter."

"What about the Missile Command game? I have to protect six cities from enemy missiles. Do you have anything against protecting our cities from enemy missiles?"

"Once you put the quarter in and shoot down the first wave of armed missiles, the computer escalates the game by sending over 'smart' ones, and no matter how many you destroy, the cities get it in the end."

The man in the pin-striped suit said, "You really know how to ruin a guy's lunch hour," and he stomped out.

The owner of the arcade, who was watching the scene, came over to me and said, "Mister, you've got two minutes to get out of this place, or I'll break both your legs."

"I'd expect a threat like that from somebody who encourages people to kill asteroids."

Strength For Today

THOSE WHO CARE

A student in his first month away from home in college wrote to his parents: "Already two more boys whom I know have left college, and there are several more here on my floor who probably won't last through the semester, thanks to spending their time drinking and carousing when they should be studying. But don't worry about me. I'm all right. Not that I'm any better than some of these other fellows, but I just couldn't let you down, no matter what."

One of the wonderful things about human relationships is the strength and courage that come from love. Of course, most of us will do a great deal for those we really care for. But we often forget how much influence we have on those who care for us.

When others love and look up to us, everything we do takes on a double meaning. It is not just our own action; it is a source of strength or weakness for those who love us and depend upon us. — Elisha Douglass

Losing a successful football coach amid the struggle for instant greatness is among the reasons for East Carolina University's just-revealed $400,000 athletic budget deficit.

But this does not excuse management's allowing the department to slide this far into debt without putting the brakes on earlier. To their credit, university officials asked for a state audit although the General Statutes exclude athletic departments from required, periodic audits.

The sudden decline in ECU athletic fortunes can be linked almost directly to the departure three years ago of Coach Pat Dye, whose success at football, which carries the weight of the entire department at most schools, kept ECU sports in business. The loss through retirement of the leadership, political clout and personal popularity of President (Chancellor) Leo Jenkins, "Mr. ECU," aggravated the situation.

ECU's dilemma reflects what can happen to any school that seeks to build a big-time athletic program without the prerequisites of a winning tradition and a massive army of loyal, well-heeled alumni. Prodded by a strong craving for equality in size and prestige with such long-established sister-institutions as UNC-CH and NCSU, ECU has realized remarkable success in establishing a major university in Eastern North Carolina.

But academic expansion, including a controversial medical school, has been financed primarily by tax money and loyal contingent of Eastern legislators in the General Assembly. That same sort of support is not consistently forthcoming from fickle sports fans, who tend to tighten their purse strings when football teams don't win and favorite coaches depart.

ECU Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer says he does not regard the athletic department deficit as a "problem of major magnitude." And he points out that new people in key athletic positions should stabilize the situation.

That may be true. But ECU's Board of Trustees, fortunately, seem more concerned. They are anxious to erase the deficit as soon as possible and contemplate on calling on ECU alumni for help rather than relying on hope for a turn-around in athletics.

To help insure that ECU's problem doesn't recur, the university is wisely transferring the fiscal management of athletics from the athletic director to the vice chancellor for fiscal affairs.

Other universities, although they may not now be suffering ECU's problem, could profit from the same arrangement, as well as from regular, independent audits from the state.

Rivalry For Retirement Funds

By LOUISE COOK

Associated Press Writer
Banks, savings and loan associations and other financial institutions have fired the first shots in the war for the billions of dollars Americans are expected to put in Individual Retirement Accounts next year.

Until now, IRAs were available only for workers not covered by a company pension plan. The 1981 tax bill eliminates that restriction. Beginning Jan. 1, any wage earner can set aside up to $2,000 a year in an IRA. The investment and the interest it earns are exempt from income taxes until you start making withdrawals.

The money you put in an IRA can be invested in a number of ways. Some investments are insured; others are not. Some offer a guaranteed, fixed rate of return; others do not.

The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee recently authorized a new category of IRA — with a minimum term of 1½ years and no ceiling on the amount of interest which can be paid.

If you currently are eligible to open an IRA, you can get one of the new accounts starting Dec. 1. If you're not now eligible, you'll have to wait until Jan. 1.

Because there is no limit on the interest for this category of IRA, competition is expected to be fierce. Consumers will have to shop carefully to find the best deal.

Advertising campaigns to encourage deposits already are under way. The offers are reminiscent of the flurry of promotions that appeared in advance of the first All Savers Certificates on Oct. 1.

One New York thrift institution, for example, is offering what it calls a "Headstart IRA Plan." Here's how it works: Deposit a minimum of $500 today and earn interest on it at an annual rate of 14 percent between now and Jan. 1. At the start of the year, your IRA account will be set up and your money will be put into an 18-month certificate of deposit, with the interest rate linked to the interest on one-year U.S. Treasury bills.

The stakes in the battle for IRA dollars are high. An estimated 45 million people who are not now eligible for IRAs will be able to open the accounts next year. Those who already are eligible, will be able to set aside an increased amount. Self-employed people with tax-deferred Keogh plans also will be able to boost their contributions and, for the first time, they will be allowed to maintain both Keogh plans and IRAs. The banking industry says the changes will mean $50 billion to $80 billion a year in new deposits by individuals in tax-deferred retirement accounts.

Here are some of the basics about the way IRAs will operate starting next year:

—Any wage earner, whether he or she is self-employed or works for someone else, can open an Individual Retirement Account and deposit up to $2,000 a year. A couple with only one working spouse can set aside a total of $2,250 a year in separate accounts. The current maximum is $1,500 for an individual and $1,750 for a couple. You do not have to deposit the maximum. Nor do you have to put the entire sum into a single account.

—The money paid into an IRA can be deducted from current income for tax purposes. You do not have to itemize to claim the deduction. The interest earned on an IRA does not count as income for tax purposes.

—You must pay taxes on the money you set aside, plus the interest, when you start making withdrawals. The tax is not eliminated; it is simply postponed. Assuming, however, that you leave the money on deposit until you retire, you will be in a lower tax bracket. If you make withdrawals before you are 59½ you must pay a penalty, as well as the income tax on the accumulated amount.

—You can open your IRA at any one of a number of institutions: a bank, a savings and loan association, a brokerage house or an insurance company, for example. The available investments for funds put into an IRA include certificates of deposit, money-market funds, stocks and annuity programs. The new law prohibits IRA investments in "collectibles" like gold, coins, art, etc.

Nat'l Security Adviser Richard Allen Takes Leave

personnel allowed near the animals since their isolation four months ago when the baby panda was born. The small panda weighs nearly 18 pounds and is two feet tall. There are only about 250 pandas in the world. (AP Laserphoto)

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — National security adviser Richard Allen, taking a leave of absence pending investigation of a $1,000 gift from Japanese journalists, says he fully expects to come back. But a White House spokesman says "we would have to wait and see."

After Allen's surprise announcement Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press," even his strongest supporter in the White House — his boss, presidential counselor Edwin Meese III — said he thought the decision to step aside was "a good idea" and President Reagan considered it "the proper course."

Allen said he asked Reagan on Saturday to go on leave because "the interest in this case had developed to an extent that great pressures have been brought to bear on the White House."

Allen denied any wrongdoing but conceded that he did "exercise bad judgment" in sticking the cash in a safe — and forgetting about it — instead of turning it over to the proper authorities. He said he was now free "to speak out" where before he "had to react to innuendo" and much of what he did say was disregarded.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, asked whether Allen would be welcome back if the Justice Department investigation finds no basis for appointing a special prosecutor or continuing the probe, replied: "We would have to wait and see, but I would not assume otherwise."

Meese, who by numerous accounts supported Allen while other top presidential aides and Nancy Reagan reportedly were urging his ouster, said he thought Allen had been "very forthright" in his television appearance. He added, "We'll have to wait the outcome now."

Retired Rear Adm. James Nance, 60, Allen's deputy, will take over the duties of the national security adviser. Asked in the broadcast who was behind a reported campaign of orchestrated leaks mounted to drive him from office, Allen said he had no idea.

On the gift itself, Allen said he "intercepted" papers and the envelope containing the money as "someone tried to thrust (them) into Mrs. Reagan's hand" at the end of the brief interview with the journalists on Jan. 21, the day after the inauguration.

It was the first time any "papers" had been mentioned in addition to the envelope, and it was not clear just what the "papers" were.

Allen said he had no recollection of ever being asked for a receipt, despite reports from Japan that the journalists from the magazine Shofu-no-tomo — Housewife's Friend — requested one for their thank-you gift for the first lady.

The journalists also have said they understood the money would be given to charity.

As for one report that the envelope and an accompanying receipt were marked $10,000 instead of $1,000, Allen said the envelope had no markings on it but he had been shown a piece of paper bearing writing that could be taken as $1,000 or $10,000, "depending on how you read it."

On other points, Allen said: —Peter Hannaford, the former Reagan campaign aide to whom he sold his consulting firm, had now "satisfied" the installment purchase debt.

—He told the head of Toyota, the Japanese automaker, at the outset of a meeting at the White House in March, that he had taken himself out of all discussions of auto imports. Allen's firm had represented Nissan Motors, maker of Datsuns.

—The money was removed from the safe into which he instructed a secretary to put it to another safe before it was discovered in September.

—Reporters had staked out his house at 5 a.m., tried to interview his 6-year-old daughter, climbed trees trying to look into his bedroom windows and had left garbage around his house.

In Tokyo, Tsugio Takamori, editor-in-chief of the magazine, said through a spokesman he had "absolutely no comment" on Allen's action.

Neither Fuyoko Kamisaka, the freelance writer whose article on Mrs. Reagan appeared in March, nor Tamotsu Takase, Allen's long-time friend whose wife acted as interpreter at the interview, answered their telephones.

Meese said the decision was made by Allen alone and Reagan "didn't have any counseling or input." Speakes said he "didn't know" if anyone tried to talk Allen out of it.

The departure gives Allen "more flexibility" in presenting his side, "and so I thoroughly understand why he's doing this and I think it's a good idea," Meese told Associated Press Radio.

The president, he added, told Allen "he understood Dick's position and that he sympathized with his situation." Meese went beyond that with NBC, saying the president "agrees that this is the proper course."

According to Speakes, who repeatedly refused to give Reagan's reaction to Allen's departure, the president "hasn't passed judgment either way" on it.

The president watched the broadcast, Speakes said.

Tar Heels' Name Said On Alleged 'Hit List'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The name of William W. Pearce, a Youngsville native, appears on a "hit list" found in a raid on the home of a man on trial in Colorado on charges of trying to kill a Libyan student.

The News and Observer of Raleigh reported Sunday that the list came to light in the investigation of Eugene Tafoya, who has been linked to Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy and former CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson.

Tafoya is charged with conspiracy and attempted murder in the shooting of Faisal Zagallai, 35, a student at Colorado State University. He has admitted to the shooting, but said it was in self-defense.

Khadafy's World Revolutionary Committee later claimed credit for the shooting of Zagallai, a dissident who had been warned by the FBI that he was on a Khadafy hit list. Pearce, 40, said Saturday that beside his name was an accurate description of his address and habits. He said he now lives in Florida, but declined to say where.

Pearce also said he had been associated with Wilson until 1975, when he sued him in a Virginia court over a debt.

"He was a friend of mine until I sued him for moneys he owed me," Pearce said. He added that he would not be surprised if he had been marked as Wilson's enemy, the News and Observer said.

ment. "I'm terribly surprised that Tom Gilmore, who served in the legislature at one time, has so little faith in those serving that he would make that statement," he said.

"Those folks who are cynical about government are the ones you'll find who are opposed to it," he said.

Barnes points out that in 96 of the state's 100 counties, commissioners are elected for four year terms. And in 38 of the 50 states, at least one chamber of the legislature has a four-year term.

But if passed, the North Carolina proposal would make it one of only five states with both the House and Senate serving four-year terms. And Gilmore says that could distort future elections, with legislators free to run for governor or some other seat without risk of losing their legislative seat and political base.

Barnes said supporters had to include the House in the four-year term proposal to win support in that chamber. "It was the only way to get it passed, frankly," he said.

"Knowing Ed Wilson, it wasn't a surprise," he said. "When I started reading about (charges against Wilson) in the papers, that's when it started seeming more real."

Wilson and former CIA operative Frank Terpil have been indicted on charges of illegally supplying arms to Khadafy, hiring former CIA agents and Green Berets to train Libyan terrorists and recruiting assassination squads to kill Libyan dissidents abroad. Wilson lives in Libya and Terpil is in Lebanon.

Pearce said he attended college in Falls Church, Va., then set up "an investigative business" in Virginia, where he met Wilson.

"I retired six years ago from the business, and that's when I ended my relationship with Wilson, Khadafy and the whole bunch," he said.

He declined to elaborate on his ties to Khadafy and refused to say whether he had worked in Libya.

The News and Observer said it reached Pearce after an anonymous caller said that Pearce was on the "hit list" and would be in Wake County this weekend for his high school reunion.

ficers would eventually end up in courtrooms anyway. An appeal process would have to be provided, and whether that machinery would reside in the courts or in some special statewide higher traffic hearing system, the prospects of clogged dockets remains.

"I'm a little concerned how you know I'm here," Pearce told the newspaper. "Only the Central Intelligence Agency and the Fort Collins (Colo.) police are supposed to know where I am."

Pitt Board To Have Meet

The Pitt County Board of Education will hold its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Items on the agenda include a discussion of budgetary items funded in the past from surplus funds such as teacher supplements, longevity pay and maids and janitors. In addition, a discussion is scheduled concerning the guidelines adopted in August of 1977 for selection and use of literary materials in the county schools' media centers.

Secret Service Director Is Stepping Down Today

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — This was the last day on the job for H. Stuart Knight, who through eight years and three assassination attempts has been ultimately responsible for keeping the president of the United States free from harm.

Knight steps down as director of the Secret Service amid an intelligence agency alert that Libyan or other Arab "hit teams" may be planning to assassinate President Reagan and other top American officials.

There are reports, too — denied by Knight — that he is being forced out. A one-time underling, Robert Powis, now outranks him as deputy assistant secretary for enforcement at the Treasury Department and published reports say there is bad blood between the two.

"Absolutely not true," says Knight. "I realize that is the popular perception and from some perspectives even a logical or reasonable assessment. But it's absolutely not true."

Until a successor is named, Deputy Director Myron I. Weinstein will be in charge of the agency with its 3,600 employees and a $179 million annual budget.

A Secret Service agent for 32 of his 60 years, Knight is convinced that restrictions on intelligence gathering and the speed with which would-be assassins can travel have made the job of protecting presidents much tougher.

"What we do is to keep the odds at the lowest minimum possible, given the nature of the society in which we live and the nature of the society in which a president has to function," said Knight in an interview last week.

"The speed with which you can get around the country makes it more difficult now. I can remember taking train trips with Harry Truman. If you were going to visit San Diego, you would focus in those days on what were the problems in San Diego. That's irrelevant now. Somebody in San Diego can be in New York in four hours."

Also, he said, limitations put on the FBI and its freedom to operate has reduced the amount of intelligence about domestic security "and people or groups who have a nefarious aim in mind."

The flow of information, he said, is restricted by guidelines from the attorney general's office "and to a lesser extent the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act, which tend to make people less forthcoming with information we'd like to have."

The service is about to take on some functions and personnel of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Knight said that makes it a good time to move on because "whoever is going to have to be the leader of this organization the next five to 10 years ought to be the person right at the start."

Knight said he has "full promise and commitment" that the next director will be someone currently on Secret Service rolls, a tradition at least in this century.

"I put in 32 years with this organization," he said. "God forbid that you stay too long. There is a time to stay and a time to leave, I believe that. I think staying too long is a much more grievous thing than leaving too early."

As he rose in the bureau's ranks, Knight headed the detail that guarded then-Vice President Richard Nixon on a tour of South America, including a near-riot in Caracas when stones were thrown at Nixon's car and he was spat upon.

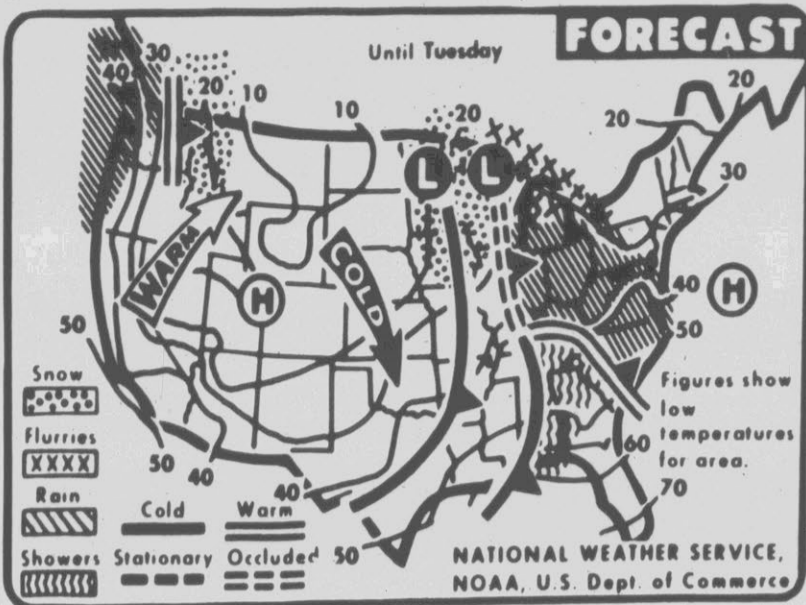

Knight's successor will take charge of 1,550 agents and 800 uniformed officers in an agency which got a generally clean bill of health in the wounding of President Reagan and three others in a March 30 assassination attempt.

A review of the Secret Service's performance that day found that the agents in the president's protective detail "reacted in precisely the manner required by their training," and recommended they receive special awards.

For the next three months, Knight will look into "border management," which includes the border patrol, the Immigration and Naturalization Service and the Customs Service. Then, perhaps, he will become a part-time lecturer at the Federal Executive Institute in Charlottesville, Va.

He said he won't write a number of really interesting offers, none of which I've accepted."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain and showers are expected in the forecast period, Monday until Tuesday morning, for most of the country east of the Mississippi. Snow is forecast for Iowa and Minnesota to upper Great Lakes. Rain and snow are forecast for the Northwest. (AP Laserphoto Map) today, reinforcing some very chilly temperatures across North Carolina. With an increase in cloudiness over eastern sections of the state today and rain spreading into the west, temperatures will be held in the 40s in most sections. That could mean rain mixed with snow and sleet at higher elevations.

A warm front moving from the Gulf coast into North Carolina tonight will create windy conditions.

By late Tuesday a trailing cold front from the winter storm will be moving into western North Carolina, bringing with it a clearing trend.

Around the state Sunday skies were mostly cloudy across the mountains and partly cloudy to cloudy in the east. Some areas of the mountains received light sleet this morning with some sprinkles reported in the Piedmont.

High temperatures Sunday ranged from the mid 40s to the mid 50s. Rocky Mount was the warm spot in the state with a high of 54 degrees. Cape Hatteras was the coolest with a high of only 46 degrees.

Overnight temperatures dropped into the 30s to mid 40s over northern sections.

The recreational weather outlook called for rain today and tonight with high temperatures in the 40s. Temperatures were expected to increase Tuesday with blustery winds entering the state as rain tapers off. Highs Tuesday should be in the 40s to the northwest and the 60s in the south.

Winds along the coast will be northeast at 10 to 15 knots today but will become southeast and increase to 15 to 25 knots tonight. Tuesday winds will be southwest at 15 to 25 knots. Small craft advisories may be needed tonight.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the Department of Physics of East Carolina University was 39 yesterday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 39 percent of your hot water yesterday.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Clearing Wednesday, followed by fair Thursday and Friday. Rather cold with highs in 50s for the east. Wednesday lows around 40 and slipping into low 30s on Thursday and Friday.

By The Associated Press
A winter storm moving out of the southern Rockies this morning should bring North Carolina some inclement weather by Tuesday, the National Weather Service reported.
The low pressure area that brought heavy snows to the southwestern United States this weekend will reach the Great Lakes by late Tuesday, bringing rain to western and southern North Carolina by this evening. Later tonight the rains will spread over the entire state.
High pressure over Ohio this morning will move across northern Virginia

Iraq Says Army In Hot Pursuit

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iraq today denied Iran's claim of a major victory in their 14-month-old Persian Gulf war and said its forces were "hot on the trails" of Iranian troops fleeing the battlefield in southwestern Iran.

In a Tehran Radio war communique Sunday, Iran claims it recaptured 70 Iranian villages, mauled an Iraqi division and pushed to within three miles of the Iraqi border in the second-biggest victory of the war.

It said 1,500 Iraqi troops were killed and 1,000 were taken prisoner in an 11-hour battle in the oil-rich Khuzistan province in Iraqi-occupied southwestern Iran.

A conflicting Iraqi communique on Baghdad Radio today acknowledged "fierce fighting" in the area, but said Iraqi forces were repelling Iranian troops attempting to recapture the southwestern city of Bostan.

Iraq's state news agency later said Iranians were fleeing the battlefield with Iraqi forces "hot on the trails."

Baghdad Radio claimed 56 Iranian soldiers were killed in fighting Sunday along with five Iraqis.

Neither side lets journalists near the battlefield so the official war claims — often exaggerated — cannot be confirmed.

Sunday's surge was the biggest advance claimed by Iran since it announced the siege of Abadan on Sept. 27.

Iraq invaded its Persian Gulf neighbor in September 1980, seeking complete control of the Shatt al-Arab waterway, its only sealane to the Persian Gulf.

Both Iran and Iraq are Moslem countries, but Iran's population is ethnically Persian while the Iraqis are predominantly Arab. They have been fighting sporadic wars for centuries.

Four Wrecks Investigated By Police

An estimated $5,400 property damage resulted from four traffic mishaps investigated by Greenville Police Sunday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 4:15 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Arlington Boulevard, involving cars driven by Shirley Ann Daniels of Winterville, and Lonnie McGowan of Route 2, Greenville.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $800 to the Daniels car and $1,000 to the McGowan vehicle.

Cars driven by Andre Wooten of 104 Ford St., and Harold Lane Blackwelder of Route 4, Greenville, collided about 3:31 p.m. at the intersection of Third and Reade Streets, causing an estimated $800 damage to each of the two cars.

Officers charged Wooten with failing to stop for a red light following investigation of the mishap.

A 4:20 p.m. collision at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Ione Street involved cars driven by Ervin James Buck of 2608 Dunn St., and Theo Dell Nichols Waters of 2614 Sunset Ave.

Damage was estimated by police at $200 to the Buck car and $1,000 to the Waters auto.

Cars driven by Cathy Ann Venable of 720 Vanderbilt St., and Rosylin Lynette Mayo of 407A Darden Dr., collided about 7:55 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Ford Streets, causing $300 damage to the Venable car and $500 damage to the Mayo auto.

The 'System' Undercuts Wife

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A new identity given to a Greensboro man who testified for the U.S. Justice Department in a gambling trial is making it difficult for his wife to collect child support payments.

Patsy Thomas says her husband, William, testified in the trial of operators of a small-time sports gambling ring headquartered in Greensboro.

documentation to support her claim, including information from Thomas' former employers and a missing-person report she filed after he disappeared in November 1974.

She then discovered that Thomas had been given a new identity under the Witness Security Program.

"My God," she said. "All this time something called 'the system' has helped Bill desert Gregory. All those unpaid bills, the house we lost, the seven times we had to move.

"But worst of all, listening to little Gregory's questions about his dad," she said. "And I couldn't answer them."

Mrs. Thomas asked U.S.

Deputy Marshal Dwight Rich of Greensboro for help. She also tried to swear out another non-support warrant against her husband and have the U.S. Marshals Service issue it to him, wherever he was.

She was told the federal magistrate's office could issue a warrant if she could give them a name and address. But she didn't know his new name or his address.

Mrs. Thomas said Rich called U.S. Marshals Service headquarters in McLean, Va. She said he was told no one with the Witness Security Program knew where her husband was.

"He told me they lost contact with Bill in 1977," she said.

PROGERIA VICTIMS MEET — Mickey Hays, Left, of Hallsville, Texas, and Fransie Geringer, of South Africa, stand side-by-side Sunday after finally meeting each other for the first time at the Disneyland Hotel. (AP Laserphoto)

Rare Disease Victims Finally Meet In Calif.

By CYNTHIA STEVENS
Associated Press Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Fransie Geringer, 8, and Mickey Hays, 9, both have a rare aging disease that makes them look like little old men. But their first meeting, made possible by Americans moved by their plight, was right out of the schoolyard.

The boys started at each other Sunday night, made some tentative passes at friendship and then began a competition to see who could keep balance the longest while standing on one withered leg.

Fransie lives in South Africa, more than 11,000 miles from Mickey's home in Hallsville, Texas, but the youngsters have a world in common that transcends geographic and cultural bounds.

Their disease, progeria, apparently is a genetic disorder and manifests itself in bald heads, beaked noses and stunted growth. Progeria strikes only one in 8 million children, who usually die in their mid-teens.

Both boys thought they were the only living cases until The Associated Press carried a story in August about Fransie's plight from Orkney, South Africa, mentioning that his dream was to meet his storybook idol Pinocchio at Disneyland.

Americans responded with donations for a trip, which ultimately was organized by the Sunshine Foundation, a Philadelphia charity group that grants wishes to terminally ill children.

Texans, meanwhile, rallied to raise money so Mickey could meet Fransie while he was here.

The boys were to rest today and Tuesday, before heading to Disneyland.

"Is he coming? Is he down the hall? What's it going to be like?" asked an eager Mickey as the time neared to meet Fransie at Disneyland Hotel.

"Will he talk to me?" asked the chattering, extroverted boy in a strong Southern drawl. His mother, Cindy Edwards, 28, said her son by a former marriage had been so eager all day that "he took Roloids for his nerves."

"I think I'm going to faint," he had told her. "He hasn't slept for days because he was thinking about Fransie. I was worried about him," she said.

Mickey, who wears a baseball cap from the time he wakes up to the time he goes to sleep, was rigidly poised in an armchair as he waited for Fransie to appear.

When Fransie, who had arrived with his family via Europe just an hour before, entered the room with a big box wrapped in Christmas paper, Mickey looked and looked, apparently searching for some reaction from his new friend.

Fransie was frozen, and clutched at his mother self-consciously. The veins showed clearly through his scalp.

Inside the box was a "Doctor Snuggles" doll — a balding, paunchy man in red and white striped trousers.

Mickey was almost a master of ceremonies, showing his new friend the T-shirts and other goodies he had started collecting for him 2½ months ago when he first found out they would meet.

Fransie watched the proceedings with his bulging brown eyes and smiled shyly. He hardly said more than an occasional "Thank you."

Mickey, only a bit shorter than Fransie's 3-foot, 8-inches, eventually addressed his many questions to Fransie's mother, Magda, 31.

"Do you play rugby?" asked Mickey, who said he had read about South Africa's most popular sport in a magazine.

"Does his brother?" he asked Mrs. Geringer with a nod toward Paul, 10.

Mickey, whose legs have always been bowed and stiff, eventually got Fransie to show him how he can bend his knees. And then the pair tried standing on one leg to see who could last longer.

Both sets of parents were moved by the meeting.

"I'm trying, Mickey, I'm trying to keep my promise," said Mrs. Edwards.

"He says I cry everywhere I go and it embarrasses him. I promised I wouldn't cry," she explained. Mrs. Edwards came close to tears when she displayed the oversized green cap Mickey had chosen for Fransie.

"This is something," said Herman Geringer, 37, who said he was confident his son would loosen up when he and Mickey began playing together.

Mrs. Thomas, 44, says she is unemployed and out of money. And she says Thomas is now $14,000 behind in support payments to her and her 11-year-old son, Greg. She says he agreed to pay $150 a month in child support beginning in July 1974.

She said an FBI agent gave Greg a touching speech last March about his father's important government work and that a U.S. marshal gave her attorney Thomas' secret identification number.

Ed Jennings of Winston-Salem, a former assistant U.S. attorney who depended on Thomas' testimony to win a conviction in the case, told the Greensboro News & Record that he believes Thomas was in the government's Witness Security Program.

But Mrs. Thomas says when she tried to have the government find her husband so she could pursue her legal right to collect the back payments, the government said it needed to know whom to look for.

Mrs. Thomas has not heard from her husband since April 1975, when she received her last child-support check by mail.

This year, she decided to see if she could have Thomas declared legally dead. That way, Greg would be eligible for Social Security benefits.

On March 5, a Social Security Administration claims officer told her to collect

Covert Activity Is Distributed

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration is presenting a classified U.S. document that charges Cuba is promoting terrorism and subversion in Latin America in capitals all over the world, Newsweek magazine says.

In its current issue, the magazine says the report charges Cuba has placed agents in all its diplomatic missions in Latin America and the Caribbean, "in at least five recent instances in the person of the ambassador or charge d'affaires."

Administration officials concede that U.S. intelligence sources in Latin America, made up mostly of local police and security forces, are unreliable and that it is possible to overdramatize the danger of the Cuban threat, according to Newsweek.

The report, titled "Cuba's Covert Activities in Latin America," has been sent to all U.S. diplomatic posts in Latin America, as well as to a NATO meeting in Brussels and the Vatican, Newsweek says.

The document charges that after the Sandinista victory in Nicaragua in 1979, a Cuban official "was re-documented as a Nicaraguan citizen and became the first chief of Nicaraguan internal security."

Secretary of State Alexander Haig will take the report to the Caribbean island of St. Lucia this week, where he will try to persuade the Organization of American States to unite against Cuban aggression, Newsweek said.

Cars Collicde At Intersection

Cars driven by David Alonzo Devine of Route 6, Lincolnton, and Harold Dean Penland of 400 Lewis St. collided about 4:40 p.m. Saturday at the intersection of Fourth and Maple Streets.

Police, who charged Devine with failing to stop for a stop sign, estimated damage at $800 to the Devine car and $1,000 to the Penland car.

RADIO GUESTS

City Manager Ed Wyatt announced that guests on the city's radio program, "City Hall Notes," this week will be Terry Oglethorpe of the Public Works Department and Ron Sewell of the Engineering and Inspections Department.

Wyatt said Oglethorpe will talk about the city's beautification program and Sewell will discuss the proposed re-establishment of the fire district.

The program is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:30 p.m. on WOOW Radio.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today, pausing after last week's strong rally.

The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 5.61 at 880.33.

Gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

In the five previous sessions, the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 41.19 points.

Analysts said the sharp drop of interest rates over the past five weeks remained an important plus for the market.

But they said many traders were still cautiously appraising the likely length and depth of the recession. The government reported today that the index of leading economic indicators dropped 1.8 percent in October after a revised 2.2 percent decline the month before.

And with stock prices at their highest level since late summer, brokers said traders seemed a little less eager to buy than they had been over the past week.

Marathon Oil, subject of a takeover battle between Mobil and U.S. Steel, led the active list, down 2 1/2% at 104 3/4. A 160,000-share block traded at 105 1/2 and another of 278,100 shares changed hands at 104 1/2.

Mobil dropped 3/4% to 26 and U.S. Steel was off 1/4% at 29 1/4.

The NYSE's composite index lost .22 to 72.49. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .58 at 329.58.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.18 million shares at noontime, against 13.88 million at the same point Friday.

Grimesland Bank...

 explosive device placed in the money bag by the teller blew up near the entrance of the bank, leaving a trail of red dye, it was reported.

Chocowinity Police Chief Gordon Edwards, who heard the report of the incident on his car radio and apparently was the first person on the scene following the robbery, said he was told by bank tellers that the man entered the facility around 10:15 a.m. and instructed one of the tellers on duty to put all of her money in a bag. The teller, he said, placed the money and the device, which is designed to go off and mark the bills, in the bag.

Edwards said the tellers reported that as the man left the bank, the device exploded, ripping open the bag and causing him to drop part of the money on the sidewalk. The robber also dropped a bundle of money and single bills as he fled, it was noted.

The man, who carried what was described as a small chrome handgun, was on foot as he fled the area, witnesses reported.

Apparently no one in the bank was injured in the incident and it was not known whether the man was hurt when the dye device went off.

Members of the Pitt County Sheriff's Department, agents from the State Bureau of Investigation, and local police are involved in the investigation.

Possible Price Cut On Christmas Tree

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Christmas tree shoppers may see lower prices this season as dealers try to compete with the artificial tree market.

Some dealers say they will sacrifice profits to keep prices at about the same level as a year ago.

"We don't want to force our customers to buy artificial trees," said W. Hal Johnson, owner of the Bogger Mountain Trees chain.

"I expect our business will increase, but our net profit will be less because we're trying to hold down the retail price," Johnson said.

He said increases in fertilizer, labor, interest rates and wholesale prices will force many area dealers to reduce profits to stay competitive.

William T. Huxster of the North Carolina State University Agricultural Extension Service said retail prices for 6- to 7-foot Fraser firs are generally running about $25, with white pines that height running about $15 to $25. But he said wholesale prices have increased 5 to 10 percent, or about $1.25 to $2.25 per tree.

Richard A. Gardner, owner of Gardner Tree Farms in Raleigh, said higher labor costs forced him to raise both retail and wholesale prices. He said Fraser firs had gone up $1 to $1.50 and white pines were up 50 cents.

49ers Edge Giants, Clinch West Title

By The Associated Press

One down, nine to go.
The San Francisco 49ers, who haven't attended this party in the last few years, are the first team to qualify for the National Football League playoffs. But the rest of the guest list may have to wait awhile as teams scramble for postseason berths with just three weeks left in the regular season.

Nine more teams eventually will qualify for the tournament that will lead two of them to Super Bowl XVI in the Silverdome at Pontiac Mich., Jan. 24.

The 49ers clinched the NFC West Division championship Sunday, defeating the New York Giants 17-10. The victory pushed San Francisco's record to 10-3 and even if second place Atlanta, 7-6 after beating Houston 31-27, catches the 49ers in won-lost record, San Francisco would own the title because of an edge in intraconference play.

So tip your hat to Coach Bill Walsh and Co., as San Francisco returns to the playoffs for the first time since 1972. The 49ers have enjoyed only one season over .500 since then. Now they can sit back and watch the scramble for the rest of the postseason lineup.

There are three-way ties for the lead in two divisions. Detroit, Tampa Bay and Minnesota all own a piece of the lead at 7-6 in the NFC Central after the Lions beat Kansas City 27-10 on Thanksgiving Day and Tampa Bay won while Minnesota lost Sunday. The Bucs overcame a two-touchdown deficit to defeat New Orleans 31-14 and the Vikings blew a 14-point lead, bowing to Green Bay 35-23.

In the AFC West, the Chiefs' loss to Detroit left KC at 8-5 and they were joined at the top by San Diego and Denver after the Chargers battered the Broncos 34-17 Sunday.

The other tight races are in the AFC East where one-half game separates first place New York and pursuing Miami and Buffalo and the NFC East where Dallas, a 10-9 winner on Thanksgiving Day over Chicago, holds a half-game lead over Philadelphia.

Miami hosts Philadelphia tonight in a game vital to the East division races of both conferences, ending the season's 13th week.

49ers 17, Giants 10

San Francisco's turnaround came just two years after the club struggled to a 2-14 season. Defensive back Dwight Hicks, whose 54-yard return of an interception set up the 49ers' first touchdown, remembered that sorry season.

Tackle Keith Fahnhorst, who has been with the club for eight mostly losing years, said, "I never thought I'd see the day when the crowd at Candlestick Park would be celebrating a championship."

Chargers 34, Broncos 17

San Diego avenged an early-season setback and threw the AFC West into a three-way tie by knocking off Denver as Chuck Muncie scored four touchdowns. That's not bad for a guy who wasn't even supposed to play because of a sore knee.

Bucs 31, Saints 14

Tampa Bay roared from behind after New Orleans grabbed an early 14-0 lead. Doug Williams, who has never lost in the Superdome either as a pro or in college, threw a pair of TD passes and ran for another score to spur the comeback and help the Bucs grab a piece of the NFC Central lead.

Packers 35, Vikings 23

Lynn Dickey rallied Green Bay, throwing for three TDs after Minnesota had jumped in front by scoring 14 points early. The victory left the Packers just one game behind Tampa Bay, Detroit and Minnesota.

Dickey, returning from an injury that kept him out for most of a month, said the TDs were something less than carefully planned.

Jets 25, Colts 0

Rookie Freeman McNeil scored his first two pro TDs, one on a 30-yard run and Pat Leahy kicked four field goals as New York edged one-half game ahead in the AFC East.

McNeil gained 93 yards, 44 more than the entire Colts' ground game, as New York won its eighth game in 10 starts after opening the season 0-3. Baltimore lost its 12th straight.

Steelers 24, Rams 0

Franco Harris gained 114 yards on 18 carries and broke O.J. Simpson's record for career rushing attempts by pushing his total to 2,420 in Pittsburgh's shutout of Los Angeles.

"I find it hard to believe I've carried the ball that many times," said Harris, after passing Simpson's total of 2,404. The victory was the third straight for Pittsburgh, 8-5 and two games behind Cincinnati in the AFC Central. It was the fourth straight loss for the Rams, 5-8.

Bengals 41, Browns 21

Ken Anderson threw four touchdown passes, connecting on 26 of 32 attempts for 235 yards as first-place Cincinnati pushed its record to 10-3. Anderson has thrown for 25 TDs and completed 250 of 390 attempts this season.

Pete Johnson scored three touchdowns and rushed for 105 yards for the Bengals.

Falcons 31, Oilers 27

Steve Bartkowski completed 18 of 25 passes for 372 yards and TD passes of 43 and 42 yards just 22 seconds apart in Atlanta's victory over Houston.

The scoring pitches to Alfred Jackson and Alfred Jenkins gave Bartkowski 29 TDs for the season, tying him with San

Denkler Lifts ECU To Opening Win

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor
Mary Denkler's three-point play with 33 seconds left to go eased East Carolina out into a three-point lead and the Lady Bucs held on over the time remaining to eke out a 61-58 victory over stubborn Appalachian State Sunday afternoon.

East Carolina trailed most of the game, taking the lead for good when Denkler broke a 56-56 tie with her three-pointer. Prior to that the Lady Pirates had led by as much as six and trailed by as many as eight.

Appalachian, which had one game already under its belt, played an aggressive defense against the younger Pirates and kept ECU off balance most of the afternoon. But behind the play of Denkler and veteran Lillian Barnes, the Lady Pirates struggled back to gain the eventual victory.

"You know, none of our first games are easy," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said afterwards with a sigh of relief. "Every time we open the season it's like this. Last year we were down five with about three and a half minutes left and still beat Virginia Tech. This time, we were down again and came back."

"Openers are just not kosher with me," she added.

There were times when the Pirates, with only two starters back — Denkler and Sam Jones — seemed confused, and Andruzzi attributed that to the number of newcomers on the team. Only two others — Barnes and Fran Hooks — of those who played as much as ten minutes were on the team last year. The other three all were newcomers, and saw most of the action.

"For the first game, and a team playing together for the first time, I guess we did okay," Andruzzi said. "Appalachian played out of their minds. They did a super job and played good defense. They shot just phenomenally."

Indeed, ASU shot 53.1 percent in the second half, when they were holding off the Pirates time after time, although they ended up with only a 44.4 percentage for the game. That was still better than that of the Pirates, who hit just 38.8 percent.

ASU also outrebounded the Pirates, 47-40, controlling the middle much of the way. The Pirates seldom got second shots, especially when Denkler was on the bench, robbing ECU of veterans on the inside.

Jones led the ECU rebounding effort with eight, while Loletha Harrison had seven and Denkler had six. ASU's Muriel Higginbotham led the Lady Mountaineers with 11 rebounds, while Susan Cameron had eight.

"Our defense wasn't really what we wanted," Andruzzi said. "We had intensity and we hustled, but I was disappointed at times with the way we played defense. We didn't adjust quickly enough when subs went into the game, and we didn't force their wings to the sidelines like we wanted too. They were able to get the ball inside on us."

Denkler didn't start the game — she was a minute late arriving, according to Andruzzi — and Harrison started in her place. "I was kind of glad, because I thought Loletha played very, very well," the coach said. "But when Mary came in there, she gave us some power on the inside. We just weren't able to get the ball inside to her like we wanted to. I think our inexperience

Clemson Officials, ABC Trade Barbs Over Story

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Officials at Clemson University and the Orange Bowl charge ABC-TV promoted the rival Sugar Bowl through a report of an NCAA investigation into alleged payoffs to a pair of would-be Clemson football players.

But a spokesman for ABC Sports denied Sunday there was any intent to damage Clemson's Orange Bowl appearance against 5th-ranked Nebraska.

The report, aired during halftime of the Pittsburgh-Penn State game Saturday, was called "a cheap shot" by Stan Marks, chairman of the selection committee for the Orange Bowl. That game will be carried New Year's night on NBC opposite ABC's coverage of the Sugar Bowl game between top-ranked Pitt and No. 3 Georgia.

Clemson President Bill L. Atchley said the timing of the report led him to believe ABC may have tried to influence voters in national collegiate football polls.

Because Pitt's 48-14 loss to

Penn State left Clemson, 11-0, as the only unblemished major college team, Clemson could replace the Panthers as the nation's top-ranked team.

But spokesman Donn Bernstein of ABC Sports said that, "In no way whatsoever was this story investigated and reported to hurt Clemson in any form, whether in the rankings or in its bowl appearance."

Bernstein said ABC had been looking into the story since early this month when it first appeared in the Washington Post.

"We pursued it then but felt we did not have enough background or information to responsibly air it at that time. We continued to pursue the story and when we had enough information and background we did air it," Bernstein said.

He said the decision to report the story was made the middle of last week and officials of both Clemson and the NCAA were advised at that time.

"Pitt was No. 1 at time," Bernstein noted in response to charges that the telecast may have been aimed at the rankings. "Clemson is 11-0 and regardless of anything else it will be No. 1."

The ABC report, by sportscaster Jim Lampley, broke little or no ground concerning charges by James Cofer and Terry Minor, football players from Knoxville, Tenn., that Clemson coaches had a Knoxville insurance agent pay them to sign with the Tigers.

But Atchley, Marks and Clemson Athletic Director H.C. "Bill" McLellan bristled at the story's timing.

McLellan said he knew that ABC was prepared to air the story, which included interviews with Cofer, Minor and former Clemson head basketball Coach Tate Locke.

"I called and did everything I could to try to keep them from running it and the NCAA tried to help, but they said that there is an eight-to-nine-minute segment where they (the network) can run whatever they want to," McLellan said.

"And they thought this was a news item and so they went ahead and put it on," he said. Bernstein denied there was any attempt by the NCAA "to restrain us."

McLellan said prosecuting a case against a school on national television "is an unprecedented thing in college athletics, in our opinion."

"I think they were trying to promote the Sugar Bowl instead of the Orange Bowl," he added.

Atchley said, "My comments have been that the people (Cofer and Minor) can say anything they want (but) there have been no official charges made against the school. ABC and the media are taking it upon themselves to find out what's going on. But they should leave it to the NCAA."

Atchley said the school had been advised by attorneys during the investigation, which he said was in the preliminary stages.

Marks said, "They (ABC

Rose Lands Four On Big East Team

Rose High School's Rampants landed four players on the Big East All-Conference team, announced today.

Split end Chris McLawhorn, fullback Roger Williams, defensive lineman Mike Spell and safety Sammy Hodges were selected to the team, elected by the league's eight coaches.

Rocky Mount, the regular season champion paced the team with eight selections. They included offensive backs Eddie Coats and Kevin Farmer, receiver Ken Weaver, offensive linemen Coye Still and Leslie Mercer, defensive lineman Larry Barnes, linebacker Carl Bynum and specialist Chuck Mills.

Wilson Fike, which finished tied for third with Hunt in the conference standings behind Rocky Mount and Rose, was second in all-conference selections with five. Making the team from Fike was offensive linemen Howard Land, Glenn Lee and Ernie Smith, defensive lineman Joey Page, and specialist Lee Gliarmis.

Kinston, finishing fifth, landed four. They were receiver Mike Pittman, defensive lineman Jeff Jenkins, linebacker Mike Fields and defensive back Kenny Sims. Beddingfield, which tied Northeastern and Northern Nash for sixth, had three selected, offensive lineman Jeff Bass, and defensive linemen Dennis Baron and Will Whitley.

Hunt had two, as did Northern Nash. From Hunt came defensive lineman Johnny Coleman and linebacker Glen Coley. Northern's selections were linebacker Rupert Fox and defensive back James White.

Northeastern had one selection, offensive lineman Ken Barcliff.

Rocky Mount's Walt Wiggins was named as Coach of the Year.

Tigers Off To Slow Start

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
WILLIAMSTON — Williamston basketball coach Peggy Taylor is hoping for an early Christmas present from her Lady Tigers. But, Taylor concedes she probably won't get her wish.

"I've said all along that we were going to start out slow," Taylor said. "We've got a lot of young players and it's going to take them some time to get the experience they need."

"Give us till Christmas. I just hope we're not too far behind before then."

If the Lady Tigers' opener was an indication, it could be a long season. Playing without injured forward Theresa Duffy, Williamston dropped a 40-21 decision to North Pitt. It was a loss that left Taylor upset and vowing changes would be made.

"We just didn't play well," Taylor said. "Playing without Duffy hurt us considerably. We ended up playing with two rookies and they just don't have everything down yet."

The 5-8 Duffy, a two-year starter who averaged just over 10 points a game last year when she was voted the all-conference team, is joined by Gail Smith, a 5-11 senior center, as the lone returning starters.

Another player, Karen Oglesby, a 5-11 junior forward, started a few games last year.

sophomore), Timberly Rodgers (5-8, sophomore) and Sonya Purvis (5-8, freshman) at the forwards.

"It looks like we've got some experience with Smith and Duffy, and that should help," Taylor said. "But we'll probably end up playing one of our rookies."

"We have not experienced depth and I think that's going to hurt us, too"

OSU Hands Hoyas Second Loss

By The Associated Press
After an opening-round loss to Southwestern Louisiana and a lackluster triumph over Alaska-Anchorage in the Great Alaska Shootout Tournament, the Georgetown Hoyas were an enigma to Coach John Thompson.

He felt that his team was too good to look so bad and complained of a lack of "killer instinct."

The point was never more apparent than in Sunday's game with Ohio State, when the nation's fifth-ranked team blew a 13-point lead and dropped a 47-46 decision to the Buckeyes in the tournament's consolation round.

"That's one game I would have liked to have had," said Thompson, although insisting that the Hoyas got what they came for: experience.

As for Ohio State, Coach Eldon Miller saw interesting developments in a team that did not have the preseason notices of a Georgetown.

"Any time you win a close game early in the season it helps build character for the team," said Miller. "We had our trouble offensively, but the last 12 minutes we played a great game."

Southwestern Louisiana, meanwhile, won the Shootout tourney with an 81-64 decision over Marquette Sunday night as Alford Turner scored 26 points.

In games involving the nation's ranked teams on Saturday, No. 1 North Carolina stopped Kansas 74-67; No. 2 UCLA trimmed Pepperdine 76-69; third-ranked Kentucky walloped Akron 83-64; No. 9 Iowa beat Northern Illinois 84-66; No. 11 Tulsa blasted U.S. International 89-62; No. 12 Indiana tripped Miami of Ohio 71-64; 14th-ranked Alabama-Birmingham blitzed Pitt 78-62; San Francisco defeated No. 16 Georgia 92-84; Nevada-Las Vegas upset No. 17 Louisiana State 83-79; No. 18 Arkansas turned back Michigan 83-72 and No. 19 Notre Dame romped over St. Joseph's (Ind.) 82-52.

Larry Huggins hit a 20-foot jumper with four seconds left for Ohio State's winning points. Tony Campbell's 10 points in the second half sparked the Buckeyes' comeback after Georgetown had built a 13-point lead. Clark Kellogg's jumper from the baseline tied it at 40 with 7:56 to go.

Georgetown went ahead by three points on a goaltending call against Granville Waiters at 2:23. But another Kellogg baseline jumper put the Buckeyes in position to win. Huggins finished with a game-high 13 points. Kellogg added 10. Patrick Ewing, the heralded seven-foot freshman center, scored 12 for Georgetown.

Freshman Jimmy Miller scored 16 points as Virginia coasted past George Mason. Jeff Jones, Virginia's only senior, had 14 points and junior Craig Robinson, named the event's Most Valuable Player, added 13 as Virginia won its fifth straight title in its own tournament. Virginia also stretched its tourney winning streak to 10 and won its 13th game in a row at home.

Matt Doherty, Sam Perkins and James Worthy led North Carolina on a 12-0 scoring burst midway through the second half to key the Tar Heels' victory over Kansas. Worthy scored a game-high 23 points.

"We played well offensively," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "Kansas was willing to give us the 15-footer... our players showed a lot of patience in attacking the zone. I liked our zone attack."

Cavs Bomb G. Mason

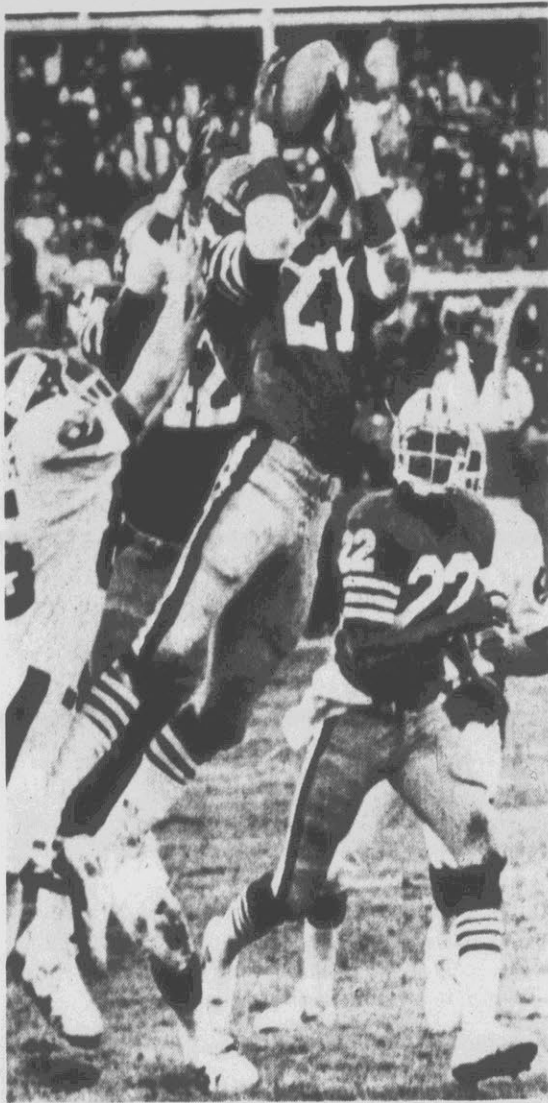

By The Associated Press
All-American Ralph Sampson has just 35 points in seventh-ranked Virginia's first three basketball games, all victories, but Coach Terry Holland isn't all that concerned.

"While Ralph's statistics were not as good as they have been, he's still such a factor in the game that he's hard to miss," Holland said Sunday night after the Cavaliers trounced George Mason's Patriots 76-57 for the championship of the United Virginia Bank-Cavalier Invitational.

The 7-foot-4 junior went scoreless the first half after picking up two fouls in the first two minutes and finished with just eight points, but he had a game-high 16 rebounds and three blocked shots. Freshman Jimmy Miller led the Cavaliers with 16 points.

"I think his poor offensive game is a result of his injury (a groin pull before the season opened)," Holland said. "It's hard to be out as long as he was and not lose anything."

George Mason fell to 1-1, and Virginia Commonwealth's Rams dropped to 0-2 when they were beaten 58-54 by Fairfield in overtime in the consolation game at Charlottesville.

Marc Wilson's three TD passes in the second half rallied Oakland past Seattle. The Raiders trailed 24-3 early in the third quarter before Wilson brought them back, completing the recovery with a 22-yard TD pass to Art Whittington with just 5:53 left to play.

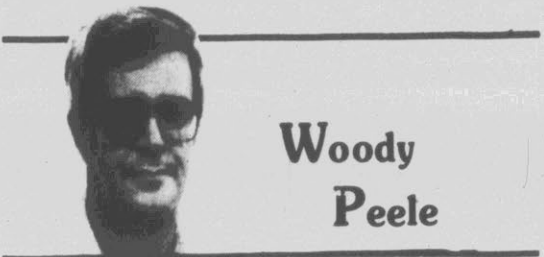

Cardinals 27, Patriots 20
Neil Lomax' 33-yard TD pass to Roy Green with 33 seconds left to play carried St. Louis past New England.

Green, who plays both offense and defense for the Cards, then knocked down a desperation Patriot pass to seal the victory.

"He's got great endurance to play both ways," said St. Louis Coach Jim Hanifan. "I don't think many guys in the league have the ability to do that."

Bills 21, Redskins 14
Roland Hooks, replacing injured Joe Cribbs, scored a pair of touchdowns as Buffalo defeated Washington.

Hooks rushed for 109 yards and scored on runs of four and 18 yards as the Bills remained in the thick of the AFC East race.

Those who saw East Carolina's Pirates play basketball Saturday night in the season opener against Ohio can't fault the Bucs for their hustle. It was outstanding.

And the Pirates played defense, too. In fact, that was one of the main factors in the 72-54 victory over the Bobcats. East Carolina also shot the ball well, except for its free throws.

Overall, it was the kind of game that the fans could enjoy. There was the suspense of how it was going to come out, helped along by a pull-away in the final stages of the contest that saw East Carolina dominate play in the last five minutes or so.

The Pirates have a young club, evidenced by the fact that there are only three seniors on the club, and one of them, Mark McLaurin has not played yet because of a hand injury. Hopefully, he'll be ready to go when the Pirates return to action on Friday.

The other two seniors, Tony Byles and Michael Gibson are already contributing well, and their backups are learning rapidly. It all fortells of an upswing in Pirate fortunes.

That's not to say that it's going to be a banner year. A lot still lies ahead, and one game does not a season make.

The ECAC-South has already given signs that it will be a tough league. Witness Saturday night's upset victory by Richmond over nationally ranked Wake Forest. Old Dominion is the pre-season pick, along with James Madison, to rule the roost, but George Mason is already making noises of having a strong team, as is William & Mary. So the Pirates can't expect to waltz in by any means.

Just how good the Pirates might be will be shown on Friday when they face nationally ranked Missouri.

The Wildcats are riding a long home-court winning streak, and have some outstanding players. Coach Dave Odom feels that this would be a chance for the Pirates to pull off a major upset and get some national attention.

Too, the Pirates would like to do something they've never done since they became a Division I member in basketball — win an invitational basketball tournament championship.

Foster, but ASU came back on a jumper by Higginbotham and a baseline jumper by Kay Hampton to take the lead at 4-2. East Carolina came back to tie it up at 6-6, but ASU regained the lead on a layup by Higginbotham, and the Lady Mountaineers inched steadily away until they held a 22-14 margin with 6:29 showing — the biggest lead for ASU during the game.

Foster, however, led a rally that finally tied it up on her short jumper with 2:34 left at 22-22, but Susan Cameron hit with 2:19 showing to put ASU back up, 24-22, and it stayed that way until Darlene Chaney tied it once more with 37 seconds left on another short jumper, knotting it at 24-24 at the half.

Cameron put ASU back out after ten seconds of the second half, and although the Pirates tied it up four times over the next few minutes, ECU could never gain the advantage.

Finally, two baskets by Kay Hampton pushed the ASU lead back to six, 40-34 with 14:22 remaining.

East Carolina fought back again, tying it again at 40-40, and then three more times after that. Then, with 7:31 showing, Jones hit a jumper up close to put the Pirates ahead for the first time since the opening minutes, 46-44.

Barnes followed with a jumper and Harrison drove in for another upping the lead to six, 50-44, but ASU stormed back on shots by Cameron, Pam Allen and Susan Skeie to tie it again, 50-50.

Twice more it was tied before ASU moved ahead one last time, 56-54 on a ten-foot jumper by Horton with 2:17 to go. East Carolina then missed twice at the foul line over the next minute, before Harrison hit with 1:16 showing to make it 56-56.

Denkler then followed with her three-pointer with 33 seconds left and both teams scored once more after that for the final score.

"I've got to give our kids a lot of credit for coming back after they were down by six. And then for not giving up after they had taken the lead by six and lost it again. They stuck with it and got the job done," Andruzzini said.

Barnes, tabbed by Andruzzini in pre-season as the biggest surprise on the team, led the scoring, along with Foster, each hitting 12 points. Denkler added 11 and Jones had ten.

Appalachian State was led by Cameron, Hampton and Angelita Horton, each with

Eagles, Miami Face Must-Win Game

MIAMI (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles and Miami Dolphins, both facing must-win situations to maintain a share of the lead in their respective National Football League divisions, collide tonight.

The 9-3 Eagles trail Dallas — a Thanksgiving Day winner over Chicago — by a half game in the NFC East and are two-point favorites heading into the 9 p.m. EST game at the Orange Bowl which will be nationally televised on ABC.

Miami, 7-4-1, fell a half game behind in the AFC East after the New York Jets blanked Baltimore 25-0 Sunday. The Dolphins need a victory not only to keep pace, but to stay ahead of Buffalo, which improved to 9-5 with a 21-14 triumph over Washington.

A victory tonight would give the Dolphins, losers of two straight, an 8-4-1 mark. The Jets own a playoff tiebreaker advantage because of their 1-0-1 record in head to head competition between the teams.

Miami Coach Don Shula is confident his team will be able to make the playoffs anyway, if it can win its four remaining games.

"If we can take care of our own from here on in, I've got every confidence we'll be there," said Shula. "But that's a tough task ahead with the schedule that remains."

Dolphins quarterback David Woodley, who has completed 153 of 286 passes for 2,032 yards, 10 touchdowns and 11 interceptions, will be facing the NFL's No. 1 overall defense.

Jaworski, the NFC's fourth-rated passer, will test a Miami secondary that has given up 234 yards per game. He has hit 198 of 351 attempts for 2,426 yards and 18 touchdowns and 12 interceptions.

Authorities Mystified By Natalie Woods' Death

SANTA CATALINA ISLAND, Calif. (AP) — Natalie Wood's solo midnight boat trip into darkened seas is mystifying authorities investigating the actress' apparent drowning off this Pacific Ocean resort. Miss Wood, who recently said in a newspaper interview that she was terrified of water, slipped away from her husband's yacht in a small rubber boat early Sunday without telling anyone, authorities said. Her body was recovered later in the morning off the northern tip of the island, which is 26 miles offshore from Los Angeles. An autopsy was scheduled for today, and "if the coroner says she died strictly by drowning, with no indication of foul play, the case is closed," said Lt. Gary Crum of the Los Angeles County Lifeguard Service.

Robert Wagner, the actor and Miss Wood's husband, left the yacht and searched for his wife himself before calling the Coast Guard. After helping their search and later identifying the body, Wagner secluded himself in the couple's Beverly Hills home with two friends, actress Elizabeth Taylor and actor Roddy McDowell.

Miss Wood appeared in some 60 films, beginning at age 4, and perhaps was best known as Maria in the movie version of "West Side Story." She was nominated for Oscars for her roles in "Rebel Without a Cause" in 1955, "Splendor In The Grass" in 1961 and "Love With the Proper Stranger" in 1963. Wagner's yacht is named Splendour.

Miss Wood "seemed to be in great spirits on Wednesday" the last day of filming last week on her latest movie "Brainstorm," said Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spokesman Don Levy. "Nothing seemed to be out of the ordinary," he said.

been lashed by storms in recent days, but harbor director Doug Bombard said the weather late Saturday was moderate with minor rainstorms. The water was a cool 55 degrees.

Miss Wood, Wagner, the ship's captain and actor Christopher Walken, who was making "Brainstorm" with Miss Wood, had returned to the yacht about midnight after dinner on the island, which also is the movie location. Levy said just a few days' shooting remained for the film, and MGM did not know how it would be finished.

According to Ziffren's account, which was contained in a statement, Wagner, 51, "was in the cabin. Mrs. Wagner apparently went to their stateroom. When Mr. Wagner went to join her, he found she was not there and the dinghy was gone." Wagner did not search for her until she failed to return in 10 or 15 minutes, Ziffren said.

Wagner called the Coast Guard at 3:30 a.m., Ziffren said. Five vessels were in on the search and the body was spotted by a Coast Guardsman, Lt. Roger Smith of the Lifeguard Service said.

Bombard, who pulled the body from the water, said no injuries were apparent and the boat was not damaged. Miss Wood and Wagner married in 1957, divorced in 1965 and remarried in 1972. They had a daughter, Courtney Brooke, now 7, and Miss Wood had a daughter, Natasha, now 11, from her 1969 marriage to executive Richard Gregson.

Miss Wood told the Daily News that Elia Kazan, director of "Splendor In The Grass," had assured her that a double would do a scene calling for her to swim beneath an 8-foot waterfall. "But then it turned out the double couldn't swim at all and I had to do it. I told Kazan 'I'll do it only if you take me out to the waterfall and throw me in. I know I can't swim that far and I'm scared senseless besides.' And that's what they did. They threw me in, and had to get me out real fast before I drowned."

Miss Wood's death was the second tragedy in two weeks for the cast of television's "Hart to Hart," starring Wagner and Stefanie Powers, who was romantically involved with actor William Holden, who was found dead Nov. 16 after a drunken fall in his apartment.

"It can't be a loving God to do this," Ms. Powers said of Miss Wood's death. "We've known each other since we were children. I can't believe it. And those poor little children of hers ... it's just not fair."

Main Thing Going For TV Film Is Cloris Leachman Performance

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dear Maggie, NBC postponed the TV movie, "Advice to the Lovelorn," from Feb. 2 until tonight. Why couldn't the network have kept it off a little longer? Sincerely, Disappointed in New York.

find its way, it's a movie desperately in search of a focus.

It isn't socially relevant because the letters woven into the plot are unbelievable and stupid. It isn't a serious film about the impact and responsibility of the popular advice columnists because Maggie doesn't have much to say, and she seems more inclined to offer clever lines than substantial advice anyway. And it isn't very entertaining because the movie is jumpy and nearly interminable.

The main thing going for this film is the acting. Emmy Award-winner Cloris Leachman gives an energetic performance as Maggie, who dispenses homilies to strangers but is decidedly undecided about her own love life. The best moments are her off-phone comments, just before she turns on her sincerity for the callers.

Kelly Bishop as Maggie's supportive gal Friday also does well. And "Little House on the Prairie's" Melissa Sue Anderson proves she can take on roles outside her log cabin. But the story itself is a tangle of pointless conflicts. The first letter involves two students who cheat on a term paper. Larry Ames, played with wooden tentativeness by Lance Kerwin, writes a paper for Maureen Taylor (Miss Anderson) because he's smarter and has a crush on her.

But when Larry gets a case of the guilts, he writes to Maggie. "Confession is good for the soul," Maggie writes back.

Letter No. 2 is an incredibly bizarre love triangle. Steve Vernon (rigidly acted by Dezi Arnaz Jr.) is sleeping with the boss' wife (Tina Louise) to gain a promotion in his advertising firm. Steve's wife, played by Donna Pescow, discovers the relationship, and he can't understand why she's not happy with his ambition.

"It has nothing to do with us. It's not gonna hit us," Steve says.

Maggie's advice: "The end does not justify the means." Meanwhile, Maggie's paper, the Los Angeles Standard, is being sued by a Hungarian chef because Maggie advised him to keep his mustache, despite complaints by the restaurant owner. The chef lost his job. It's unlikely that columnists can be liable for their advice, but particularly over something like this.

In any case, this issue is handled by Maggie's editor telling her to stay away from everything controversial and by Maggie using her connections to find a restaurant for the chef that doesn't discriminate against facial hair.

The other plot line has a confused Maggie being wooed by Nick Fraser (Paul Burke), who wants to marry her, only to discover that she's already wedded to her job.

It's ironic that newspaper columnist Erma Bombeck's series about a suburban housewife was recently put in hiatus — a network euphemism for canceled — since that show was called "Maggie."

NBC didn't cancel "Advice to the Lovelorn;" it only delayed it. Our advice is to cancel it yourself.

FOCUS

"We Don't Want a Euroshima!"
 Hundreds of thousands of Europeans have protested this fall against nuclear weapons. As the U.S. and Russia begin talks today in Geneva on missile limitations, both sides feel pressure to reach some accord. U.S. statements about a possible nuclear war have outraged many in Europe. Russia's credibility has been undercut by the Afghanistan invasion and the submarine spying in Sweden. In Eastern Europe, criticism of Soviet militarism has come from Rumania's leader and East German churches. But perhaps the greatest pressure for arms control comes from within the two superpowers. A continuing arms race would hurt both countries, who already spend hundreds of billions of dollars a year on arms.

DO YOU KNOW — What type of missiles is the U.S. planning to deploy in Europe?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — New York will have seven fewer house seats in 1982.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 1, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Confusion is rampant early in the day and whatever decisions are made could work out to your disadvantage. Study every aspect of a new project before putting it in motion.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to regular duties instead of going off on some activity that seems lucrative but isn't. Apply clever economy measures.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle monetary and property matters cleverly now or there could be trouble ahead. Don't run away from obligations.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get out of that rut and engage in new interests. Use your intuition which is accurate at this time. Be wise.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You have many duties to finish and should not delay any longer. Take no chances with your reputation now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Don't worry over some pleasure that is no longer in your life and concentrate on new and better ones. Express happiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Look into the reason why you may feel you are not being treated fairly by others. Come to the aid of a person in need.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure you use care in motion today and avoid possible costly accident. Be precise in all your business dealings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study new outlets that could give you more abundance in the days ahead. Strive for more harmony with family members.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Concentrate on better ways to gain your goals. Your devotion to loved one needs bolstering. Sidestep a troublemaker.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get rid of the obsolete and engage in more modern methods of doing things. Consult a business expert for advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Go along with what a financial expert has to say. Make long-range plans that can provide more security.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take no risks with your good name at this time. Perform your duties in the most efficient way possible.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will possess much wisdom but must not be permitted to express advanced ideas until they are approved by higher-ups. Give as fine an education as possible. There could be fame in this chart. Ethical training is a must.

trump. North surely has only three hearts, and, in view of your strength in the black suits, it is a moral certainty that he has high-card values in diamonds. Since those high cards may not be pulling their full weight at a suit contract, a nine-trick no trump contract might be easier to make than ten tricks at hearts.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—Obviously, we don't like no trump, and we want to paint as accurate a picture of our hand as possible. Three spades is a possibility, but we would like better trumps to raise a suit that partner hasn't rebid—on this auction he would be entitled to expect three trumps headed by an honor. Therefore, we opt for three clubs, to show at least ten cards in the minor suit.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K6 ♠AQ983 ♠AQ82 ♠54
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A.—You have not yet bid the full value of your hand. Since partner has persisted with spades despite the fact that your bidding has warned him that you might be short in that suit, he should have at least a six-card suit and, possibly, quite a useful hand. Your doubleton king in his suit is adequate support, and we suggest that you make an effort to get to game by raising to three spades.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q854 ♠962 ♠74 ♠AQ106
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Your hand is worth 10 points at a spade contract (you must revalue your trump queen) and partner has made a move toward game. Since you have an absolute maximum for your raise, you should accept. Bid four spades — the 4-4 major fit should be the better contract, especially since you have a ruffing value in diamonds.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠865 ♠8 ♠AJ9 ♠AK8763
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A.—You have a difficult bid to make. Neither three clubs nor two spades expresses the value of your hand. A jump to four clubs bypasses three no trump, which could be your side's only playable spot, and you should have better trumps for a jump to three spades. A temporizing bid of three diamonds, giving partner another chance to describe this hand, is the solution.

Saturday's Cryptoquip — DAFT MALINGERER TRIED TO FEIGN SOME MALIGNANT MALADIES.
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: S equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.4—As dealer, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠A96 ♠AQ98 ♠AJ1052 ♠7
 What is your opening bid?
 A.—Tactically, it might be better to open one heart rather than one diamond. The problem with a one diamond opening bid is that you will have a difficult rebid to make should partner respond either one spade or two clubs. Your hand is not quite strong enough for a reverse into hearts, but too good for a simple two diamond rebid. By opening one heart, you leave yourself with a convenient rebid and can bid strongly later if the auction warrants such action.

Historic District - The Stuff Of Dreams - Lost

LYNN, Mass. (AP) — City officials have pledged to rebuild from a fire that wiped out five year's work on this old harbor town's quaint redevelopment district, but some businessmen say the flames ended their dreams. "You can't borrow money to build nowadays, with interest rates at 16, 17 and 18 percent," lamented Allen

Crowell, 77, who with his wife Frances operated a luncheonette here for nearly 25 years.

"I didn't insure the business because they wanted $3,000 a year for $12,000 insurance. It was crazy. I couldn't afford it," he said Sunday.

Losses from the 16-hour firestorm that began early Saturday are expected to exceed $35 million, but it could cost $50 million to rebuild, officials said.

No one was killed, but at a somber public meeting at city hall Sunday, authorities said at least 31 companies and hundreds of apartments were burned out and 1,500 people lost their jobs. Arson has not been ruled out.

In the 1890s, Lynn, 10 miles north of Boston, became the capital of America's shoe industry. But the old manufacturing shops had long lain idle when the idea of commercial transformation took hold, with the old industrial works as the centerpiece.

"Many of you out there — your hearts are broken," Mayor Anthony Marino told the standing-room only audience Sunday. "Your problems will be met with and dealt with. We will build Lynn the way we planned. But we'll be delayed a little."

But Bob Vianick, who hired a guard more than a year ago to protect his Colonial Wood Heel business from arson, said he also wonders if he will reopen. The guard was helpless against the blaze, and Vianick's business was wiped out.

"Right now, I can't tell my people anything," he said. "There is no industrial space in Lynn adequate for my needs. There's nothing left; everything is wiped out. The payroll is just not going to exist."

Fire companies from nearly 100 cities and towns battled the fire, which authorities said started on the first floor of the Hutchinson's Wharf building and jumped through a score of others. Gov. Edward King said the ruins reminded him of European cities that were bombed and burned out in World War II.

On Sunday, a special fire task force of local, state and federal authorities was formed to investigate the origin of the blaze. Joseph O'Keefe, the state fire marshal, said the cause was not known. Earlier, he was quoted as saying it was arson.

King said he planned to go to Washington, possibly Tuesday, to ask President Reagan to declare the city of 82,000 a disaster area, making it eligible for federal aid.

The 5-year-old effort to bring new life to the area included plans for housing, businesses and commercial condominiums.

The final deal in the $194 million project was to be signed Tuesday, committing a Milwaukee developer to renovating the last block of brick buildings.

The Salvation Army and the Red Cross helped shelter nearly 400 of the 700 people forced to flee their homes.

Mary Forgione, 61, who was widowed in August, and her mother, Rose Abate, 83, had moved into the Vamp Building three weeks ago. Authorities said half of the converted shoe factory's 460 apartments were ruined.

She said she was asleep at 2 a.m. Saturday when a guard pounded on her door and refused to let her take anything because of the roaring flames next door.

"My mother was so shocked; she shivered and shook the entire night. We froze, and our feet were sopping wet. We were numb, but we stayed and watched everything go up."

AFTER THE FIRE — The remains of some of the 17 buildings in Lynn, Mass. which were destroyed by flames early Saturday morning stand silhouetted against Sunday's sky. The fire displaced nearly 750 people and caused an estimated $35 million in damages. Firefighters from 45 communities aided in battling the blaze which raged out of control for 16 hours. The Massachusetts National Guard was called in to prevent any possible looting. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Hunt Missing Toddler In Gangland-Style Slaying Of Six

MIAMI (AP) — Police fear a baby boy orphaned in the gangland-style slaying of six people was kidnapped after the killings, and have appealed for help from the public.

"The baby is our main concern," said Metro-Dade homicide Detective Jose Diaz. "He has to be with someone. He's only 13 months old."

Police released a photo of the baby Sunday, saying his first name is Andres. His surname and the name of his parents were withheld until relatives could be found and notified of the deaths, which may have been drug-related, authorities said.

An anonymous caller directed police Saturday evening to the boy's home, a $135,000 townhouse. "They're all dead," the man told the emergency dispatcher. "Except the kid."

The caller, Diaz said, told the dispatcher the child was alive, inside the home but "when we checked, no kid."

The mother's bound body was found in the child's room. In another bedroom, investigators found the body of a young woman they think was a live-in maid. Both women were shot, Metro-Dade police spokesman Dave Graveline said.

In another bedroom, police found the father of the boy and three other men, who had been suffocated.

The house had been ransacked, but a neighbor sharing a common wall with the dwelling heard nothing.

Officers said the four men were believed to have been in their 20s and 30s, and the two women in their 20s.

Sgt. Robert Edwards said there were no suspects and some of the victims had not been positively identified. Those who have been identified were from Colombia.

"There's a good possibility it may be drug-related," Con Daugherty, Miami spokesman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, said of the slayings. "It has kind of that classic appearance of an execution-style murder."

Edwards said no drugs were found inside the house.

The six killings, plus another unrelated slaying over the weekend, pushed Dade County's homicide total this year to 566, according to the medical examiner's office. The county had a record 580 homicides in 1980 and, according to FBI statistics, the highest per-capita murder rate in the nation.

Trying To 'Normalize' Psychic Experimenting

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The Institute of Parapsychology is almost as difficult to pin down as the phenomena its researchers attempt to explore.

Studies of telepathy, clairvoyance and other psychic phenomena have fallen into disrepute in the scientific community in recent years, making the institute an unwanted stepchild of nearby Duke University.

The connections that exist between the two institutions are low-key, said Dr. Edward Kelly, an institute psychologist who leads a research team in the Duke Electrical Engineering Department. There are no departmental or telephone listings for the research laboratory, and Kelly is listed as a visiting professor.

"We are trying to normalize parapsychology by correlating it with existing sciences," Kelly said. "We want to learn from other fields and contribute to them — not isolate ourselves."

Duke and the institute sometimes exchange experimental subjects, and share library and technical facilities. In addition, Kelly instructs a summer graduate course in parapsychology at the institute.

While the research is supported by grants, Duke pays the salary of the researchers. But even that is considered classified information by some.

"We don't want to irritate anyone," he said. "I'm not even sure you should publish... It's a very delicate situation."

"I'm sure that some people would rather us not be here, but we also have some strong supporters," he added.

Kelly and two other researchers are trying to determine whether events in the brain accompany success in experiments designed to test a person's psychic powers.

Kelly said a clear correlation between psychic events and changes in the activity of the nervous system could be "the most persuasive possible evidence" that psychic ability does exist.

Kelly said he tried to get support from Duke's psychology department in 1972, with little success.

"Some were cool to moderately friendly, but hostility predominated," he said. "These guys went bananas at the mention of the work 'parapsychology,' so I have given up any idea of getting support from them. It seems like the Duke psychology department is the heartland of the enemy."

Dr. Norman Guttman, Duke professor of psychology, confirmed that the department is less than enthusiastic about parapsychology.

"A large fraction of the 25 faculty members would say that their 'science' is nonsense," he said. "It doesn't even make sense as a science. The parapsychologists have no definite positive hypothesis, so how can they submit it to tests?"

Charge Made After Incident

James Williams Smith, 25 of 117H Lakeview Terr., was arrested by police on multiple charges following an incident at the A&P Store at Greenville Square Shopping Center about 2:20 p.m. yesterday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Smith was charged with shoplifting and larceny in connection with the alleged theft of $30.65 worth of meat from the store, and with resisting arrest and assault on an officer following a scuffle with police in the parking lot near the store following the alleged theft.

TYPHOON'S TOLL
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Social Welfare Ministry said Sunday the death toll from Typhoon Irma was 273. Another 153 people were injured and 43 are still missing.

STOPS MUGGER COLD — Police Officer John Tierney of New York's street crime unit holds a gun to the head of mugging suspect Lawrence Gill in New York Saturday night, after Gill, of Brooklyn, was seen to be standing in a doorway, carrying a sock with a brick inside it. Tierney and his partner say Gill beat a Long Island man with a brick and choked him unconscious after two confederates, dressed as women, waylaid the victim. One other suspect was arrested and charged in the mugging. (AP Laserphoto)
