Reagan Wooing Labor Leaders

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, seeking to thaw relations with big labor, is considering whether to lift a three-year freeze on federal employment for air traffic controllers who were fired after striking against the government.

President Reagan broached that possibility in a meeting with leaders of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, White House aides confirmed late Tuesday. But chief spokesman David Gergen emphasized that Reagan "was not considering" returning the 11,500 controllers to the flight towers.

However, White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes today refused to rule out a return of the controllers to their old tower jobs.

"There really hasn't been a determination," Speakes said. "We haven't gotten that far with it. The president just hasn't gotten that far with his discussions yet."

Asked why Reagan was considering relaxing his stand now, Speakes said, "I think time has gone by and there have been various suggestions from many quarters that he think about the controller situation. He's always been sympathetic to the individuals and never wanted anybody to experience hardship but he was confronted with a situation where he felt he had no other choice."

Reagan was meeting today with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland and members of the federation's executive council in a major administration peace-making offensive aimed at rebuilding ties to labor leaders.

In a break with tradition, the AFL-CIO denied the chief executive an invitation to its biennial convention in New York last month. And it demanded that Reagan end his "demeaning vendetta" by rehiring the controllers, whose union, the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, has been decertified by the government and has filed for reorganization under the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Speculation about an administration show of mercy toward the dismissed air controllers has surfaced several times since the president fired controllers who ignored his back-to-work order in early August.

Despite repeated administration denials of any plans for a general amnesty, Reagan told the Teamster leaders that he was "considering the question of whether or not the controllers who have been fired should continue to be barred from any employment (with the federal government) for a three-year period, as is currently the case," Gergen said.

But the spokesman also quoted Reagan as saying, "Our first responsibility is to the controllers who stayed on the job, working long hours to keep the planes flying safely."

Gergen suggested, however, that because Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis is out of town, Reagan could not make a decision in time to announce it to the AFL-CIO leaders. Lewis is in Japan for talks with auto industry executives and isn't expected to return to Washington until Tuesday.

Redistricting Ruling Appeal Is Undecided

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys for the state said they were undecided about whether to appeal a U.S. Justice Department ruling Tuesday that rejected North Carolina's constitutional ban on dividing counties in shaping legislative districts.

The Justice Department ruling, under the 1965 federal voting rights act, said the 13-year-old amendment to the state constitution is "legally unenforceable" because it has led to the dilution of black voting strength.

The department did not rule on the state's specific reapportionment plans as approved by the General Assembly this year. A decision on the state Senate and congressional plans are due next week, while a decision on the state House plan is due in January, department spokesman John Wilson said.

State Special Deputy Attorney General James M. Wallace Jr. said state attorneys would consult with legislative leaders before deciding whether to appeal the ruling in U.S. District Court in Washington.

"I don't know yet," he said. "We're going to have to confer to find out exactly where we are. There are a lot of questions looming over what is in force."

The amendment was submitted to the Justice Department in September after a federal suit by the NAACP Legal and Education Defense Fund challenged the redistricting plans. The suit charged that the 1968 amendment was never submitted to the Justice Department for review of its effect on minority voting, even though 40 of the state's 100 counties were covered by the federal act.

Leslie Winner, an attorney representing the NAACP in the suit, said the ruling would help the suit against the plans. "I think they did exactly what the lawsuit sought," she said.

She added that the decision "takes away the barrier" to a move away from large, multi-member districts to smaller, single-member districts for state House and Senate seats.

State officials were informed of the Justice Department's decision by telephone Tuesday morning.

The ruling added a new element of confusion to the reapportionment case, since the state House and Senate districts were approved by the General Assembly this year with the assumption counties could not be subdivided into individual districts.

School Bd. Stands On Book Guidelines

By MARY SCHULKEN

A Farmville parent angered by a book his daughter checked out of a public library wants the Pitt County Board of Education to ban books with objectionable language from school libraries.

The board refused Tuesday to revise its guidelines for selection and use of literary materials, guidelines that have been in effect since 1977.

"I am not on a witchhunt," said Bobby Corbett of Farmville, who asked the board to prohibit books determined objectionable by the guidelines.

Corbett became concerned when his daughter brought home, "Catcher in the Rye," one of three titles specifically listed as unacceptable by the guidelines. She checked the book out of a public library but selected the title from a ninth grade reading list.

The current guidelines require books such as "Catcher in the Rye," "Of Mice and Men," "The Grapes of Wrath" and others deemed of a "like nature" to be placed on a reserve shelf and checked out by students only with written approval from parents.

The policy also states that if these books are part of a reading list, alternative titles must be provided and no student should be required to read these books.

"My daughter brought home this book from the public library and I recognized the book from church — I knew nothing else about it," Corbett told the board. "I told my daughter to take it back."

Corbett said he had read only excerpts from the book and had no knowledge of anything else the book contained.

"I say that the teachers who are recommending the three books listed as objectionable are violating the spirit of the guidelines," said Corbett. "The books should not be in the libraries to begin with."

The Rev. Terry Hardison, pastor of Beacon Free Will Baptist Church in Farmville, told the board, "I have not raised my children to take the lord's name in vain. I don't want them reading materials that do that."

"The reason these books are suggested to students is not because of their dirty words or vulgarity," said Annette McRae, North Pitt English teacher. "It's because of their themes and what they teach about human experience."

"It is the responsibility of a teacher of literature to deal with what is there," she added. "I do not like some of these words but they are there — they are in the halls of the school, they are in the tobacco fields."

"These books teach values. They may contain some profanity or vulgarity but they also show that these elements do not advance the status of human beings."

"At Farmville Central we provide a suggested reading list for each grade level," explained Peggy Congleton, chairperson of the school's English department. "These titles are not necessarily required for the classes, they are listed merely as a guideline. The challenged materials are indicated by an asterisk and can be checked out only with parents' permission."

"These books stay on a reserve shelf," she added. "Students cannot even see them without the parental permission slip."

"I would fight to the death to insure that your child does not read anything objectionable to you," said Assistant Superintendent Kathryn Lewis, who accepted Hardison's challenge to read aloud portions of "Catcher in the Rye" containing profanity. "But I would also fight to insure that we have a choice to read what we want."

"Children should not be forced to read anything they don't want to. But they should have a choice."

The board voted unanimously to retain the present policy but to include a copy of the guidelines in the reading list handed to students next year.

Protesting Changes In Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Led by 81-year-old Rep. Claude Pepper, several hundred disgruntled, placard-waving delegates to the White House Conference on Aging today demonstrated against a key committee's vote to back Reagan administration Social Security policies.

After a brief standoff, Pepper, who called his group "vigilantes," was admitted to address the conference's Committee on Economic Well-Being.

Outside, the protesters held aloft signs reading "Save Our Security" and "No More Cuts."

The dissidents oppose the committee's endorsement of the administration's opposition to using general tax revenues to shore up the financially strapped Social Security System. Pepper said the panel's vote did not reflect the sentiment of a majority of the nation's elderly.

His group, he said, was fighting "to make this conference what it was intended to be."

Dissident delegates, citing the committee's action, say they may try to convince a majority of conference delegates to reject all the recommendations being drawn up by its 14 committees unless President Reagan's proposed Social Security cuts are disavowed.

For his part, the 70-year-old Reagan, the nation's oldest president ever, says he has been wrongly portrayed as "an enemy of my own generation" and the elderly have been "needlessly and cruelly frightened" about his Social Security proposals.

"We will not betray those entitled to Social Security benefits," Reagan told the conference Tuesday. "And we will, indeed we must, put Social Security on a sound financial basis...."

"What we can't afford is supporting as disabled people who are not disabled or educating from Social Security funds young people from families of affluence and wealth," he said.

Large Crowd Of Polish People Defy Police At Warsaw Bldg.

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Special police units swooped down from a helicopter and burst through doors of a firefighters' school today, forcing out more than 300 protesting cadets. But some were rumored still inside the building, and a crowd of 3,000 civilians refused police orders to vacate the area.

The independent union Solidarity said police seized one of Solidarity's top officials in Warsaw, Seweryn Jaworski, who was with the cadets throughout the week-long sit-in. Solidarity chief Lech Walesa met with his National Leadership Commission and said: "I order instant readiness of all chapters." He said that "no action should be undertaken without central authorities of the union." The only exception, he said, was if government authorities take action against other union chapters. Solidarity said the order of instant readiness did not denote instant readiness to strike.

The cadets wanted to be covered by a new academic reform law sought by university students, and excluded from jurisdiction of the Interior Ministry. The official PAP news agency said "all cadets have been made to leave the building. There were no casualties and no one was injured during the operation."

But persistent rumors circulated through the crowd outside the building that some cadets were barricaded inside the building, three hours after the operation began. Solidarity officials on the scene told the crowd all the cadets had left the building, but the mob refused to leave.

"It was non-violent and we offered no resistance to give them any excuses," said a firefighter cadet corporal at Warsaw Solidarity headquarters were some 300 to 400 people greeted some of the cadets taken from the school.

"They didn't beat us," said the corporal, who along with other cadets was taken to a railroad station and ordered to go home but disobeyed the command and went to Solidarity headquarters.

Unemployment Is Slightly Up

Pitt County followed statewide trends in unemployment for the month of October, according to Jim Hannan, Greenville office manager for the Employment Security Commission. Unemployment rose in 65 of North Carolina's 100 counties from September to October. Hannan said Pitt County recorded a small rise, from 5.0 percent in September to 5.2 percent in October.

The broad-based rise in unemployment reflected a minimal increase in the statewide jobless rate from 5.4 percent in September to 5.6 percent in October.

Hannan noted that Pitt County's unemployment rate still remains 4 of a percentage point below the state average and well below the national unadjusted jobless rate of 7.5 percent in October — slightly above the 7.2 percent national rate for September.

Bob Harrington, claims supervisor at the Greenville ESC office, said the number of individuals filing claims for unemployment insurance is only one of the factors influencing the total unemployment rate. He said local claims load showed only a minimal increase from September to October.

"The increase in claims could not be traced to any specific industry type," Harrington added.

ESC analyst Lee Ausley attributed the statewide rise to economic conditions which, in general, are slightly weaker than during the previous report period.

Despite the current increase in unemployment, Pitt County is "holding its own in the state and is faring extremely well in the national situation," Hannan says.

Farmville Adds Ten Houses To CD Target Area

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville Commissioners met Tuesday night, with two new members and a new mayor as part of the board.

The new commissioners are Oliver Murphrey and Dr. Michael Dixon. The new mayor is W. Russell (Rusty) Duke.

Approval was given, following a public hearing, for the addition of 10 houses to the Community Development Block Grant Target Area. The addition includes three houses on Hines Street, one on Wallace and six on the west side of Barrett Street between Moore Street and the railroad tracks.

Consideration of both the Community Development Block Grant commercial rehabilitation policy and the CDBG commercial relocation policy were referred to the planning and finance committee. Commissioner Murphrey voiced the opinion that consideration of these matters should be delayed till he and other new people have time to inform themselves sufficiently to make a worthwhile decision.

After much discussion, the commissioners agreed to begin the process of "unannexing" the lot on which citizen Andy Martin Jr.'s house is located. Martin, whose dwelling is just outside the city limits but part of whose lot has been in town, has protested paying double water and sewer rates. He has not previously been required to pay them, as surveying has only recently been done to determine whether his house and lot are in or outside the city.

Martin stated that he did not feel he should have to pay town taxes on his land that is in town, plus double rates. He pointed out that his meter, mounted on his garage, is in town, but the town attorney said the double rates would be based on where the water is consumed and the sewage generated. Martin and his wife also pointed out that they feel put upon because they "inherited" a difficult situation and do not have a choice as to whether to put down a well and septic tank at this point.

Martin was asked whether he'd prefer his lot to be in or outside the town totally and he answered, "outside."

Branch Bank and Trust Co. was designated as the town's depository.

Christmas holidays for town employees were set for Dec. 25 and Dec. 28, with permission to leave noon or shortly thereafter on Dec. 24.

Duke announced the appointment of citizen Lee Parker to the recreation advisory board; citizen R.E. Deans Jr. to the planning and zoning board to fill his own unexpired term; citizen Mernie Outland to the Tree Board and citizen Walter B. Jones Jr. as Farmville's representative to the Mid-East Commission board of directors.

The board awarded a contract to Hendrix-Barnhill Co. of Greenville in the amount of $21,145 for the construction of sewer extension along U.S. 264 south of Farmville. The award is subject to receipt of the Davis Heirs (W.A. Allen Jr., agent) share of the project as specified in a memorandum of understanding between the town and the Davis Heirs, developers of this area. The town will install and connect an

Auto Production Continues Fall In November

DETROIT (AP) — November car production by domestic automakers plunged 25.6 percent from its 1980 level, according to industry reports.

The five major U.S. manufacturers said Tuesday they built 415,349 passenger cars last month, compared with 558,296 produced in November 1980.

American Motors Corp. produced 5,232 cars, down 60.5 percent from 13,261 built in the same period a year ago and the largest November decline among U.S. automakers.

General Motors Corp. had the smallest drop. GM reported it assembled 288,698 passenger cars in November, 13.4 percent fewer than 333,491 built in the same month a year ago.

At Ford Motor Co., production of 288,698 cars was off 43.1 percent compared with a November 1980 figure of 333,491.

Chrysler Corp. output was down 40.4 percent, with production of 42,554 cars compared with 71,404.

Volkswagen of America said it assembled 8,101 cars in November, a 48.5 percent drop from 15,734 produced in the same month a year ago.

Production for the first 11 months of 1981 totaled 5,909,345 cars for the five firms, a slight increase over 1980's 5,902,775.

AMC's year-to-date production of 104,285 showed the sharpest decline, down 33.4 percent from 1980's 156,499. Chrysler production for the period was 712,534, a 17.3

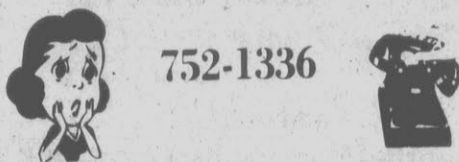

percent increase over 607,067 reported in the 1980 period. GM's year-to-date production was down 2.8 percent from 1980's 3,762,377 cars at

Ford output for the first 11 months of 1980 was 1,269,653 cars, 6.2 percent ahead of 1,195,322 produced in the same period a year ago. VW reported year-to-date production of 165,779, down 8.7 percent from 181,510 cars produced in the same period of 1980.

Dear Abby

Don't Invite Guests For What They Do

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Here's some useful advice for the professional vocalist who is frequently asked to attend functions and sing for free.

When asked to perform, ask this question: "What is your budget for entertainment?" This implies that the performer expects a fee.

After all, no one would expect a plumber or an auto mechanic to donate his services, so why should entertainers be expected to?

I am reminded of the story told about the wealthy socialite who asked Fritz Kreisler, the famous violinist, to "come dine with us" next Friday evening.

Kreisler was delighted and accepted readily. She then quickly added, "And please bring your violin."

"Madame," Kreisler responded, "my violin never dines."

FELIX DE COLA

DEAR FELIX: Beautiful! Kreisler should have gone and taken his violin — with no strings attached.

DEAR ABBY: Please, please warn parents about the danger of feeding their small children peanut butter! My beautiful 2½-year-old grandson choked on peanut butter six weeks ago. The peanut butter lodged in his throat, cutting off his oxygen. His breathing and heart stopped and he was clinically dead for several minutes. He was revived by CPR, but there had been extensive damage to his brain.

The child is still in a coma, paralyzed from the neck down. How long this dear baby will live in this condition no one knows.

The baby's father said he doesn't want his boy to be lost in vain and has asked for help in getting the word to other parents that warning labels should be put on peanut butter jars so other children can be saved.

I thank you, and am sure parents everywhere will thank you for helping to spread this message and for the lives it may save.

HEARTBROKEN IN CALIF.

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Your little grandson has my prayers, and his family has my sympathy. Be assured that millions of people will read this and, I hope, heed the warning. I agree, a warning label should be printed on every jar of peanut butter.

DEAR ABBY: I want to thank you for your advice to someone else, which I borrowed and for which I am extremely grateful. For several years I'd been kicking around the idea of going to law school, but every year I'd think of the years needed for school and the required year of clerking in Canada, and I'd say, no, I'll be too old.

Then you printed a letter from a man who was 36 (the age I'll be when I finish) and wanted to go to medical school. He needed another two years of undergrad work, then med school and internship, a total of seven years.

"My God, Abby," he wrote, "in seven years I'll be 42!" Your reply was simply, "And how old will you be in seven years if you don't go to med school?"

It hit me like a ton of bricks! I applied to and was accepted by the law school at the University of Victoria, just two miles from my home. We're now in the seventh week of classes and I still just shake my head and pinch myself because I'm having so much fun I can't believe it! The money is tight. My wife is working to clear the decks of everyday clutter so that I can concentrate on school. It's a lot of work, but I love it. How can I thank you?

TIM P. IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

DEAR TIM: You already have. Good luck and God bless.

MRS. TIMOTHY DEWAYE SIDERS

Miss Loftin Wed Sunday

Kathy Leigh Loftin, daughter of Mrs. Edna Loftin of Ayden, was united in marriage Sunday, Nov. 29, to Timothy Dewaye Siders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Siders of Harresville. The Rev. Raymond Gaskins officiated at the double ring ceremony held at 3 p.m. in Liberty Free Will Baptist Church.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Sue Edwards, organist, and Cora Lee who sang "One Hand One Heart" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Escorted by her brother-in-law, Erace Hardee of Greenville, and given in marriage by her mother, the bride wore a formal gown of sheer polyester, polyester lace sleeves and trim, fully lined in acetate taffeta and a U-shaped neckline with lace and pearl trim. The sleeves had fitted cuffs and snap closures. The skirt was trimmed with lace appliques and formed the chapel-length train. Her headpiece was polyester and the fingertip veil was of nylon netting with lace trim. She carried a bouquet of daisies, white roses and stephanotis accented with baby's breath and bridal streamers.

Linda Hardee, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and bridesmaids were Tammy Loftin, sister of the bride of Ayden, and Cora Pauline Lee of Greenville. Crystal McLamb, cousin of the bride of Farmville, was flower girl. The bridesmaids wore formal blue gowns of polyester knit with separate capelets of sheer polyester. They carried bouquets of daisies and carnations accented with baby's breath and streamers.

Honorary bridesmaids were Wanda Allen of Ayden, Gina Dixon of Grifton, Margaret Joyner of Chapel Hill and Vanda Sklavos of Greenville. They wore peach gowns of different styles and each carried a single white rose.

Bryan Early of Virginia Beach was best man. Ushers were Greg Siders, brother of the bridegroom of Harresville and Craig Grant of Stokes. Ring bearer was Tray Kennington.

The mother of the bride wore a burgundy gown of polyester knit and the mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of light blue polyester.

Ervin Hardee, nephew of the bride, and Angela McLamb, cousin of the bride, carried rice bags. The wedding was directed by Ruth Mills of Greenville. Christy Grant and Vickie Jones attended the register.

Saturday friends and family entertained at a rehearsal dinner at Parkers Barbecue Restaurant.

After a wedding trip to Atlantic Beach, the couple will reside in Greenville. The bride is attending Pitt Community College and the bridegroom is employed at Brown and Root.

Nobles Addressed Credit Women

Bill Nobles of Southern Bank & Trust Company, Ayden, addressed the Greenville Credit Women-International at their last meeting, held at Abram's Restaurant here.

He stressed the importance of federal compliance in banking, as well as in retail credit.

Ginger Hackett reported on the fall board meeting held in Salisbury Nov. 7 and 8. Sarah Moseley was welcomed as a new member. It was announced that the Christmas party will be held at the First Federal Building, Greenville Boulevard, Dec. 8. A covered dish dinner is planned.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn L. Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

More and more women are becoming careerist/homemakers. Even those not having a careers outside the home often experience stress due to the extras of the holiday season.

The holiday season can be the most difficult time of the year for the working woman. Shopping, decorating, baking, and trying to cope cheerfully with family and co-workers can leave one exhausted. Here are thoughts and tips to help you not only survive, but emerge from the holidays feeling contented and refreshed, with warm memories of a calm, pleasant holiday season.

Set realistic goals for yourself for the holiday season. It's important to accept the fact that you cannot and should not necessarily do holiday things the way your mother did or the way you would if you were not working away from home. Weeks before the season sets in, take a long look at Christmas Past. What do you remember fondly?

What was hectic? Get input from your family — It may surprise you. Think through the upcoming season. Pinpoint the really important elements. Then set priorities. If homemade presents are important to you, make them. If decorating the house is your pride and joy, then decorate. But don't try to do everything. Examine your traditions. Don't be bound by them. They may need revising or streamlining, or you may start your own new traditions that are less time-consuming. Learn to say no gracefully to yourself without feeling guilty.

Plan! Organize! Schedule! Manage! These are the key words for the careerist/homemaker year round, but during the holidays they are essential. If you are not in the habit of planning menus ahead or making schedules of daily or weekly routines for shopping, laundry or cleaning, now is the time to start. The few minutes it takes to plan ahead are well worth it when you consider the time saved, especially at this busy time when there are so many extras to do. Set deadlines.

Also, now is a good time to start utilizing "waiting time" — waiting to be served, waiting for appointments, commuting to work. Don't waste waiting time by resenting it! Carry a small notebook or file cards — write gift lists, plan menus, write schedules. Study a gift catalog or address envelopes.

Bake and Cook Ahead! Try to schedule some hours for advance cooking, and employ all the magic of double batches, freeze aheads and mixes you can muster! Stock up on staples for holiday baking and cooking long before December. Don't get carried away with too much variety and new recipes — tried and true is wiser when time is limited. Also, keep your eyes open for bazaars and bake sales that offer homemade goodies.

'Ashamed' Allen Given Bid-Rigging Prison Term

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An "ashamed" Richard R. "Bobby" Allen received a 60-day prison sentence after pleading guilty to conspiring to rig state highway bids, but an attorney for the prominent Democrat labeled his client a victim of circumstance.

Federal Judge Franklin T. Dupree gave Allen, from Fayetteville, a three-year suspended prison sentence and ordered him to serve one year probation after the 60-day active sentence, which begins Jan. 5.

Dupree also ordered that the corporation Allen heads, Allen Inc., pay a $250,000 fine for engaging in bid rigging.

Allen, 50, was a leading money-raiser for former President Carter and was appointed by Carter in 1978 to serve on the board of governors of the U.S. Postal Service. He later stepped down. He also is a former member of the National Democratic Executive Finance Committee. "I'm very ashamed of the posture I find myself in," Allen told the court.

Barry Levine, a Washington attorney representing Allen, described Allen as a victim of widespread bid-rigging practices who entered the highway paving business in 1974 and resisted engaging in the collusion practiced by others until 1978.

Appealing to Dupree for a lighter sentence, Levine said Allen once went to see Thomas W. Bradshaw, then state transportation secretary, to complain about the practice. "Regretably...that plea for help was denied," Levine said.

But federal attorney Robert E. Bloch told Dupree that Allen made the visit in September 1979 to ask Bradshaw for special treatment on project information.

Later, outside court, Bloch told reporters, "He didn't tell Bradshaw that fact, that he'd been engaged in bid-rigging."

Bradshaw, in an interview, said Allen asked to receive highway-project plans confidentially, so his competitors would not know of his interest. Bradshaw said he told Allen that would give him an unfair advantage and could not be done.

Bradshaw said Allen did not mention bid-rigging. "At no time did he ever say that," Bradshaw said.

Arnold E. Houston, vice president of Allen Inc., also pleaded guilty and was given a three-year suspended sentence and two years probation. Both Houston and Allen were ordered to do community service work while on probation.

Allen, Houston and the company each were charged with a federal Sherman anti-trust violation, a felony, for conspiring to rig bids on five highway projects in Cumberland County in 1978.

Dupree also accepted a guilty plea to a bid-rigging charge by Rudy W. Stankwytych and Concrete Service Co. of Jacksonville.

Stankwytych is president of the company, a subsidiary of Allen Inc.

Dupree sentenced Stankwytych to a three-year suspended sentence, with 60 days active, and one year on probation with a community-service requirement. The company was fined $100,000.

The cases were the latest to rise out of the U.S. Justice Department's investigation into bid-rigging by contractors on state highway projects.

Faces Trial A 2nd Time

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — A prosecutor says that charges of murder and felony drug offenses probably will be combined when Sally M. Holloman goes on trial next week.

Mrs. Holloman, serving a life sentence in the 1970 slaying of her husband, was indicted Tuesday on felony drug charges by a Johnston County grand jury, said District Attorney John Twisdale.

Mrs. Holloman, 37, is charged with conspiracy to possess methaqualone and a separate charge of conspiring to possess the drug for the purpose of selling it.

Named as co-conspirators in the two indictments were Robert Kite of Pitt County and Ashley P. Deaver of Selma, the man whose death prompted the murder charge which Mrs. Holloman faces next week.

During Mrs. Holloman's recent trial in the death of Jasper Talton Weaver, her second husband, Twisdale introduced some of his contention about the drugs. He claimed Mrs. Holloman shot Deaver in a dispute over a drug deal involving 100,000 tablets of methaqualone, a barbiturate.

Capture A New Fish In Pacific

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Three researchers working near the sea floor in a tiny submarine report capturing accidentally what they believe is a previously unknown species of fish that lives in total darkness.

"It was pure luck," biologist William Smithey said at a news conference Tuesday. "You could say the fish were accidentally kidnapped."

The fish apparently became trapped while swimming near the submarine hatch. The team nicknamed the 8- to 10-inch creatures "vent fish" because they apparently swam to the vessel while the crew was carrying out research on deep-sea vents, also known as sea chimneys.

The fish, found 130 miles off the tip of the Baja and in 8,500 feet of water, were frozen and stored at the expedition base at Scripps Institution of Oceanography here.

"There's a whole host of deep-sea animals around these vents but little is known about them," Smithey said. "They've been observed before, but never captured."

Other scientists said further study is needed before the fish can be identified or established as a new species.

"The fish are obviously predators," said Harmon Craig, the chief scientist aboard the sub. "They have sharp teeth and have probably eaten tiny organisms." He said their black-dot like eyes did not react to sunlight when brought to the surface.

The purpose of the geological and geochemical expedition was to collect fluids from a field of vents. Craig said titanium bottles were used to capture ethane, propane and butane, substances previously not observed in vent fluids. Before the expedition, only methane was known to exist in the fluids.

All the gases are abiogenic, or originating from lifeless matter.

Craig said scientists hoped that by studying the earth's crust, the chemistry of seawater and by tracing hydrothermal circulation, they would learn more about salt content in ocean water, among other things.

Begin Tarheeliafest?

North Carolina has its mountains, its beaches and its history — truly a "Variety Vacationland" as its auto license plates once said — but travel promoters say the future isn't bright.

They say competition from other regions, energy shortages and prices and greater use of video communications are cutting into the tourism dollar. And it is a big dollar in North Carolina, with the latest tabulation making it a $2.4 billion business.

Promoters and travel businessmen got together in Charlotte recently to discuss their industry. They received one interesting bit of advice from H.A. "Humpy" Wheeler, president of Charlotte Motor Speedway — one attraction that has had little problem in drawing crowds for its auto races but has had difficulty in landing other attractions against competitors with more money. But Wheeler says North Carolina should "think big and promote big." In so saying, he also suggested a major festival or similar event that could focus attention on the state.

It's not a far-fetched idea. The annual "Azalea Festival" at Wilmington has done that for years, although perhaps to not as extensive a degree in recent years. Then, too, Ayden's "Collard Festival" gained some national attention in 1980 when one of the television networks showed the champion and the finished product of the collard-eating contest. Gritton's "Shad Festival" is widely known. And there are strawberry, watermelon, mule days and rhododendron festivals, just to name a few. The Southern Flue-Cured Tobacco Festival has a large following, but it tends to be regional in character.

Maybe there should be a state event. Germany has its Oktoberfest; perhaps North Carolina could have a "tarheeliafest," bringing together some of the more exciting events already existing. Wheeler could top it off with one of his major stock car races. Or the state could build a major sports arena, as has been proposed, in the Raleigh area and cap off a week- or two-week festival with football games featuring back-to-back major college football games. The list is limitless.

Virginia's Byrd Will Retire

One of the famed names of the U.S. Senate may no longer be there following next year's elections.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Jr. an independent of Virginia, announced that he will not seek re-election.

Sen. Byrd has been a member of the Senate for 18 years and he succeeded his father, the later Sen. Harry F. Byrd, Sr., who served 32 years.

Sen. Byrd, Sr. was a Democrat and the present Sen. Byrd started out that way. However, he abandoned the party in 1970 because of the party loyalty oath. He has served as an independent since.

The retirement of the second Sen. Byrd will mean a major change for Virginia politics.

Money Goals Dim

By BILL NOBLITT (Second of Two Articles)
RALEIGH — Having a happy marriage and home life grows in importance while money shrinks as a major goal for the 23,500 participants in the continuing survey of the Class of '72 by research specialists from North Carolina's Research Triangle Institute.

That is one of the many fascinating findings revealed in summaries of the most recent followup survey in the elaborate tracking nationwide of young people who graduated from high school nine years ago.

At that time only 17 percent of the graduates classed as very important "having lots of money." Since then, the emphasis on riches has fallen slightly to 16 percent.

Finding the right person to marry and having a happy family life rated high on the list in 1972, with 82 percent saying that was a very important goal. Since then, that goal has taken a chief position for more than 87 percent of the graduates.

Equal Pay
There appeared a striking comparison of financial success for the high school graduate as compared to the college graduate, underlining other survey findings that work in skilled areas pays about as well as jobs requiring higher education.

High school graduates with six or more years of work experience were making about the same as college graduates with less than two years of work experience.

The most recent survey dramatically illustrates what political pollsters and election results of late have indicated: a decreasing concern with the problems of other people. In 1972, only 27 percent of the seniors rated as very important "working to correct social and economic inequities." Later, that concern is critical to only 14 percent of the individuals.

Politics is also less than a major concern. While more than two-thirds of the young people are registered to vote and nearly 90 percent of those have voted in at least one election, only one of six

To the editor:

The American Civil Liberties Union is planning an all-out assault on Christmas this year. They want to take all mention of Jesus Christ out of the holiday observance. They want no public manger scenes, no singing of carols and no reading of the Christmas story. School teachers will be forced to wish their pupils "Happy Holiday" instead of "Merry Christmas."

The founder of the American Civil Liberties Union wrote that he wanted the United States to be a communist state. To establish communism he needed to take away our religious beliefs. A war has been going on 40 years, but Christians are just now beginning to take action.

The above information came from Pat Robertson, president of CBN. He is establishing an emergency legal defense fund to assist Christian lawyers in fighting this vicious attack on religious freedom. Had such a fund been available in 1962, Madalyn O'Hair might never have won the first decision which took prayer from our schools. To the editor:

Greenville's City Council, city manager and community development director deserve praise for their recent decisions to appropriate funds for restoration of the Robert Lee Humber house and for hiring a competent architectural historian to survey Greenville's historically and architecturally significant buildings. After the Humber house has been rehabilitated by the city and the county, it will house the eastern branch of the North Carolina Division of Archives and History. This facility will stimulate interest in the preservation of many aspects of eastern North Carolina history. The architectural survey will open our eyes to the beauty of our built environment; it should lead to the creation of historic districts that will protect what we will have come to treasure. As in many other North Carolina communities, interest in historic preservation will invigorate the economy and add to the city's tax base. Before long, our thoughtful public servants will reap significant aesthetic and economic dividends from their wise investment.

Strength For Today

THE DIMENSIONS OF HEAVEN

We generally think of heaven as something above us, something above the blue firmament. And for many people it stays there. They have no idea of a heaven which comes down to earth or a communication on the part of man which goes up to heaven.

But one of the outstanding messages of the Bible — in fact, it might be called basic to all Biblical messages — is that communication between heaven and earth, between earth and heaven, is possible. We communicate by

Turn Out The Lights

November 23rd will go down in Washington bureaucratic history as Black Monday. It was the day that President Reagan ordered the government establishment to close down because there was no money to pay them. The President decreed that only those people essential to running the government be kept in place.

"Essential" was the key word that hit this town like a thunderbolt. With the presidential edict every government employee's essentiality was put in doubt.

The order of the day was for all non-essential employees to clean out their desks and go home. I stopped in to see Norman McKinney, a first-class bureaucrat, who obviously was very angry that he wasn't important enough to be kept on. "Teapot has always had it in for me," he said, as he kept opening and closing drawers in his desk. "He got in at six o'clock this morning and volunteered him away."

"That cable's been in your drawer all this time?"

"I knew I put it somewhere. No one in the department would take my word I got it so they let Khrushchev go back home."

McKinney opened another drawer and took out a large bottle of Alka Seltzer and a yellow piece of paper. He studied it for a moment and then said, "I'll be darned."

"What is it?" I asked.

"It's a $500 million check to save the New York Central Railroad. I guess I forgot to mail it. Now I remember! The Treasury sent it over at five o'clock and I stuck it in my drawer, and then the next day I had the flu, and when I got back to work it slipped my mind."

"That could happen to anybody."

McKinney kept digging in the drawer. He pulled out an old copy of "Look" magazine, a paperback copy of "Gone With the Wind," and a sheaf of papers which he studied carefully.

"Hmmmnn," he said, "I wonder how this got in here."

"What is it?"

"It's an application for building the Diablo Canyon Nuclear Plant on an earthquake fault. I was supposed to pass it on to the Atomic Energy Commission, recommending they turn it down."

"Maybe it's not too late," I suggested.

"It's dated July 17, 1970. If I to serve on the Ad Hoc Non-Essential Employees Commission, the only committee in the department that was declared "essential."

He pulled out a pair of storm boots and a cable from one of his drawers. "I was wondering where this was?"

"What is it?"

"It's a coded cable from Nikita Khrushchev saying he wanted to defect when he came to the United Nations. He said when he took his shoe off and started banging the podium, it was his signal for us to surround him and spirit

Stockman In A Tax Trap

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The awkwardness for President Reagan in retaining David Stockman is enlarged by the fact that the only general change in tax policy now entertained by the administration for next year's budget is to hasten the tax cut passed by Congress in July.

As director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Stockman has vainly tried at least to delay and possibly reduce the tax cut. Not greatly chastened by his personal ordeal, Stockman confides that massive budget deficit projections will vindicate — and ostensibly rehabilitate — him.

That deepens the mystery of Stockman's survival. The president and his closest aides agreed that the Cabinet's wunderkind stands indicted for disloyalty in the famous Atlantic Monthly article but felt his expertise could not be jettisoned. By keeping Stockman on the job, however, the court disloyalty economic policy that they cannot endure.

Herein is the Stockman tax trap. Ronald Reagan and key advisers are coming to believe that a deeper, quicker tax cut is essential to fight the recession. At the same time, these advisers feel the administration cannot stand a bitter internal struggle over tax policy. Yet, there is no willingness to face this reality: Stockman's retention markedly increases the probability for just such a debate.

Largely obscured by the sensation of William Greider's Atlantic Monthly article, that debate seemed resolved when Reagan rejected Stockman's bid for higher taxes. As in his previous, unsuccessful fight for massive defense cuts, Stockman had most of the administration behind him. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan was the lone senior official solidly opposing tax hikes.

Buttressing Regan were a few lower-level officials, including a middle-level White House staffer who warned in memo "we are over-committed to a balanced budget" and that "the Reagan presidency is not solely to balance the budget but to redefine how America is governed." To the stunned surprise of a cocksure Stockman, Reagan decided against him.

What's more, Reagan became convinced that the recession threatening his revolution in government was the product not of too much tax reduction too soon, but of too little too late. The delay in the effective date of the first 10 percent tax cut to next July

I can be traced to Stockman's desire to diminish projections of budget deficits.

In the wake of Stockman's defeat but before Greider's revelations, Rep. Jack Kemp began pushing to speed up the two 10 percent tax cuts from July 1 to Jan. 1 in each of the next two years. When Kemp broached this idea to the president on Air Force One en route to New York Nov. 6, he was interested.

Just how interested became clear Nov. 10 in remarks to Westinghouse Broadcasting's Gerald Udwin that were drowned out by the Greider bombshell the next day: "... maybe if the tax cut had come earlier, there wouldn't be this recession." If Kemp was putting a Stockman label on the recession, Reagan was agreeing.

Reagan's senior advisers now flatly say that the only possible change in the tax cut is not the delay advocated by Stockman but a speedup. Indeed, there is growing feeling that the speedup is essential — if only agreement can be reached in the administration without rancorous debate.

High-ranking Treasury officials believe a deflated Stockman can no longer be a Trojan Horse inside the White House challenging tax policy; surely he would stick to numbers crunching at OMB. Yet, after barely surviving in office, an undeflated Stockman told a friend he would surely be vindicated when the immense deficit projections became known. That friend surmised that Dave Stockman was by no means ready to follow the file of faceless budget directors into the dustbin of history.

The surmise proved prescient in the largely contrived government financing "crisis." The president accepted OMB's figures, not the Senate Republican leadership's. Republican senators, whose fidelity to Reagan contrasts vividly with Stockman's apostasy, blame the crisis on Stockman-engineered budget cuts in the ill-fated "September offensive."

While even the president's senior advisers agree that Stockman's "September offensive" was a horrible mistake and know now that it was conceived in a framework of disloyalty, they nevertheless bowed to Stockman's insistence that the stopgap financing bill be vetoed. He remains the best and the brightest of the dull, gray Reagan cabinet, dominating its Monday morning meeting on veto day. He seems ill-prepared to play the good soldier in hastening the tax cuts to fight the "Stockman recession."

Two Approaches To Investing

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There are many approaches to investing, but here for the sake of contrast are two of them: The book route, which might never get you there; and the investment club route, which guarantees to.

First, the books. If you were to study a tenth of the investment books that line the booksellers' racks you might never have time to invest. Moreover, you might become intimidated rather than encouraged.

After supplying more than 250 pages of material largely culled from other books and from magazines, one new author suggests you read five more books, pore through issues of five magazines, and study two or three investment advisory services, all of which he names.

You might become disillusioned too at having wasted time. "Buy stocks when they're undervalued," the author advises in his summary on the concluding 260th page of the $15 book, which purports to be a guide.

Considering the likelihood that nobody sufficiently accomplished to have survived to adulthood requires such ersatz wisdom, the reader's time and energy, not to mention $15, would seem to have been misspent.

The author, a person who seeks to earn a living with words rather than investments, inadvertently offers one valuable suggestion: "In getting advice," he advises, "consider the source." Excellent advice.

Meanwhile, as you meandered through the book racks, other amateurs have taken a simpler route: They've been investing, earning 21 percent compounded annually, doubling their money in less than four years.

This is the 10-year average experience of 220 investment clubs (3,500 individuals) which responded in a sampling by the National Association of Investment Clubs. It is an average; some clubs did much better but, of course, some failed to perform up to the average.

Still, as the NAIC proclaims, it's a remarkable record, considering it was accomplished "not by following an exotic, mysterious stockmarket system, but by consistently following three simple principles."

First, said Ken Janke of the NAIC, the clubs invested a set sum, usually $25 a month, regularly (usually monthly) over a long period. They reinvested dividends as received. And they sought a portfolio they believed, on average, might double in value in about five years.

The NAIC, based in Royal

Oak, Mich., has preached that philosophy for decades, and over the decades it has helped people of rather modest incomes to finance their homes and educate their children.

Members don't seek to outguess the market over the short term, having observed the financial corpses of those who seek to do so. Instead, they retain their shares through bull markets and bear, confident that the basics on which they made their choices will prove out over time.

After reminding you, as the investment advisers say, that past performance is no indication of future results, here in order of shares owned are the five most popular companies among NAIC clubs:

1. Moog, Inc., a concern that makes electrohydraulic valves and numerically controlled machine tools. In 1976, Moog sold at a low of $1.50 and a high of $2.38. Its range up to the time of sampling this year was $12 and $30.87. The low-to-low gain: 700 percent.

2. International Business Machines. Its 1976 range was $55.87 to $72.50. Its 1981 range to the time of sampling was $54.62 to $71.50. Since then it dropped to $48.37 but is now back over $50 a share. The five-year results show an approximate 2 percent low-to-low loss.

3. Mobil Oil, which in 1976 ranged from $11.87 to $16.37 a share. Up to the time of sampling in 1981 it ranged from $26.75 to $41.12, a low-to-low gain of 25 percent in five years.

4. Wang Laboratories. In 1976 it sold between $1.12 and $2.25 a share. Its 1981 range to the time of sampling was $32 to $41.37. If bought at the lowest 1976 price and sold at the 1981 low, the gain would have been 2,744 percent. That is, $100 invested in 1976 would have grown 274 times to about $27,400.

5. Tiger International, a holding company involved mainly in air cargo transportation. Tiger's price ranged from $10.37 to $19.50 in 1976. To the time of sampling in 1981 it showed a range of $14.25 to $26.58, for a low-to-low gain of 37 percent.

Club members begin with the assumption that they have basic common sense, and that their knowledge and study can be magnified many times by the common sense, knowledge and study of their fellow club members.

It seems to make sense — to be better, at least, than relying on those books that claim to tell you all you need to know, then proceed to tell you what you already know, and then advise you to read some more.

reported active political participation involving public issues or elections.

About one-fourth of the Class of '72 graduated from college, and another one-fourth never enrolled in any kind of postsecondary education.

More whites than blacks took college degrees; and more black women than black men had completed college. Degree fields were about evenly split between arts, sciences and humanities on one hand, and business, education, engineering or health services on the other.

Grants and scholarships rather than loans helped more of the students through college; yet about one-fifth of the individuals were still in debt for college loans and making no effort to repay them.

At Home

Home ownership continued to rank high as a goal, with 57 percent of the married persons in that category. There was a direct link between higher education and remaining single. About 76 percent of those with only a high school education are married; 62 percent of those with some after-high school education and only 46 percent of the college graduates.

The divorce rate is relatively high for such a young group, with 11 percent single through divorce, separation or death of a spouse.

Children remain an important interest. More than half the total survey participants have already become parents, with 93 percent saying they expect to eventually have children, and 83 percent indicating they want two or more.

At the work place, private business employed 78 percent of the individuals who are working, with 17 percent in public sector jobs and 5 percent self-employed or in a family business.

Working women and college graduates predominate in the public sector jobs. Changing attitudes about work and life goals were reflected in a major part of the survey: at graduation, 84 percent felt being successful in work was very important. Later, that goal dropped to 75 percent.

"What do you know? I've been looking for this for years," he said.

"What is it?"

"I can't remember any more. It's either an urban renewal plan for the South Bronx, or a diagram of the Berlin Wall which we stole from an East German engineer."

"It's lucky President Reagan caused this crisis or you would have never cleaned out your drawers. Reach back, there might be something stuck in the cracks."

McKinney did and came out with a letter. He whistled.

"Listen. This is a letter from President Nixon ordering me to immediately destroy all the tapes in the White House basement closet."

"And you stuffed it in your drawer?"

He said angrily. "If I had done it right at that moment I would have missed my car pool."

Order Suspect Be Sent To Dix

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A Raleigh man accused of murder has indicated he will not contest his commitment to a state mental hospital although it may mean he'll be given drugs against his will, officials said.

A spokesman for Dorothea Dix Hospital for the Criminally Insane said Joseph McDonald Pulley had decided not to contest the commitment proceedings.

Pulley did not attend a hearing Tuesday during which a district judge ordered him sent to Dix's forensic unit for 90 days of treatment for mental illness.

The ruling opened the way for Pulley to be given psychotropic, or mind-altering, drugs against his will if doctors see fit. Last week, a Superior Court judge said the drugs could be administered if Pulley was committed.

In that ruling, Judge D.B.

Herring of Fayetteville said the drugs might suppress Pulley's symptoms of psychosis and render him competent to stand trial. Pulley is charged with the August 1980 shooting death of his neighbor, Peter E. Dickens.

Pulley's attorney, Johnny S. Gaskins, has said that he approves of giving his client the drugs because Pulley was not capable of helping defend himself.

Dr. Robert L. Rollins, director of the forensic unit at Duke, would not say whether he would give Pulley psychotropic drugs. He also declined to discuss the nature of Pulley's mental illness, saying such topics were confidential under a doctor-patient relationship.

Rollins said that if he decided to administer the drugs to Pulley, the primary reason would be to relieve his illness, not to make him fit to stand trial, although he acknowledged that such competency might be produced by the drugs.

Pulley, who has been in and out of Dix for several years, was diagnosed in 1978 and 1979 by two different doctors as a paranoid schizophrenic, according to hospital records filed in Wake County.

Pulley's case and another in Duplin County are the only two in which a North Carolina court has authorized doctors to forcibly administer drugs, Rollins said.

The state's appellate courts have not addressed the issue of forced medication to render a defendant "synthetically competent" to stand trial.

Using Historical Attractions To Fight Landfill

By ELISSA MCCRARY
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)
— A few dozen Charlotte residents are hoping a 19th-century mining town and a 10,000-year-old spearhead will keep their property from being turned into a landfill. The residents are depending on archaeological evaluations of the relics to convince Mecklenburg County officials to keep the dump off the land, some of which belongs to them and some of which the county owns. But no matter what state archaeologists recommend, the residents say they don't intend to give up their fight against the proposed landfill.

"We're going to fight this thing to the end, no matter what it takes," said Joan Andersen, whose husband Bruce heads the Long Creek Citizens Committee.

"We'll take legal action, appeals, the whole thing to stop this landfill," she added.

The controversy began last May when the Reames Road area of northern Mecklenburg County was proposed by the city as a possible site for a new landfill. The city had been seeking a landfill site for a year, saying the current site would be full by next summer.

Last month, the city applied to the county for a special use permit to operate the landfill.

However, residents near the proposed site last month discovered the remains of 18th and 19th century buildings and mine shafts and a rare spearhead that may be 10,000 years old. The relics gave the residents hope that their land could be spared.

They wrote to the state Department of Cultural Resources asking that an archaeologist be sent to Charlotte to examine the finds and assess their value.

An amateur archaeologist, Rodney Peck of nearby Harrisburg, called the site "a miniature Old Salem." He said the 200-acre area contains the remains of 19th century mines, an old water mill, a general store, a school, a blacksmith shop and a cotton gin, dating to the Colonial and Civil War eras.

The oldest find is an inch-long, fluted spear tip, called a Clovis point, that is estimated to be 10,000 years old.

Last week, a state archaeologist looked over the discoveries and is expected to make a report later this month. The archaeologist, John Clauser, said even if the state deems the relics valuable, it will only make recommendations to local officials and won't be involved in any decision on use of the property.

"It would still be a completely local matter," Clauser said. "All we do is give our professional evaluation. The rest is up to Charlotte." Dan Morrill of the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Historical Properties Commission said his agency considers the site "extraordinary as far as the mine site goes." He said he expects to have the discoveries placed on a study list for further evaluation. But he said the county commission has the final say on the property.

Meanwhile, residents like the Andersens who live less than a mile from the proposed dump site say they have discussed the issue with an attorney and will decide what action to take after a public hearing on the proposal in January.

"But I can say this, we don't want a landfill in our back yards, and we will do everything in our power to stop it," Mrs. Andersen said. "We don't intend to do back down on this."

Pitt Building Permits Showed August Decline

Preyer On Committee

RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt has named former U.S. Rep. L. Richardson Preyer of Greensboro to America's 400th Anniversary Committee and has reappointed seven other members to that committee.

The committee has 14 members — 10 appointed by the Governor. Members serve four-year terms.

Preyer, a lecturer in the political science department at UNC-Chapel Hill, replaces the late Paul Green. Those reappointed to the committee are:

— Dr. Herbert R. Paschal, Greenville, professor of history, East Carolina University.

— David Stick of Kitty Hawk, author and civic leader.

— Emma Neal Morrison, Washington, D. C., producer of "The Lost Colony."

— William S. Powell, Chapel Hill, professor of history, UNC.

— Margot Tillet, Manteo, member of the Sea and Sound Arts Council.

— Charles B. Winberry Jr.,

Building permits valued at $1,205,371 were issued in Greenville during August, according to the monthly building activity report released by state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

For the first eight months of 1981, Brooks said, building permits with a total value of $14,952,666 were issued here.

The August figure in Greenville compared with $1,296,154 recorded in July.

In Pitt County, construction authorized during August amounted to $1,309,051, including $487,572 for 12 single-family homes, $114,000 for five multi-family units, $46,116 for eight non-residential units, and $661,363 for 72 additions and alterations.

Brooks said all categories of building activity reported monthly by the Labor Department's Research and Statistics Division were down in August, reflecting a 69.5 percent decrease in multi-family dwellings authorized; 38.9 percent drop in single-family homes, 18.4 percent decline in non-residential construction, and 3.2 percent drop in additions and alterations.

Building value figures for August and for the first eight months of 1981 in several neighboring cities included: Elizabeth City, $364,100, $2,667,375; Goldsboro, $421,005, $6,803,499; Jacksonville, $2,385,465, $11,235,962; Kinston, $314,186, $7,431,398;

New Bern, $526,785, $6,871,163; Roanoke Rapids, $403,830, $3,338,954; Rocky Mount, $1,197,693, $11,686,661; Tarboro, $302,150, $3,332,700; and Wilson, $423,585, $9,576,091.

Charlotte led the reporting cities in estimated value of construction authorized in August with $15,756,509; followed by Raleigh, $12,012,402; Greensboro, $7,080,878; Winston-Salem, $6,208,109; and Durham, $6,168,266.

Rocky Mount, a Superior Court Judge.

eight-inch sanitary sewer line from manhole 1-5 and owners of the property will pay all costs for the extension of the sewer line from manhole 5-7 and grant easements without cost to the town for necessary connections. Other bidders on the project were James E. Watson Construction, Thompson Plumbing, Cox-Edwards, Billings and Garrett, T.A. Loving and Turner Plumbing, with bids ranging from $23,571 to $31,761.25.

The board adopted a Community Development Grant program budget of $996,000. It was explained that maintaining a separate budget for such programs makes financial business easier, since programs sometimes last for several years and are not directly connected with other town business. It was also explained that no federal money is expended much in advance, if any, of drawing down money, so the town would not be overextended if the federal government were to eliminate or cut back on such a program at any time.

Duke, Mayor Pro Tem Walston, Town Administrator Robert Morgan and Town Clerk Margie Tripp were authorized to request money from the federal government under the terms of the Community Development Block Grant, with John B. Lewis Jr. designated as the certifier of signatures.

Taxes were released on property owned by Ray Moore Braxton ($572.48) and Jack McDavid Jr. ($3), but old age exemptions requested by Essie A. Elramey and Lillie M. May were denied. The board pointed out that it had no choice but to deny the old age exemption requests because they were not applied for before April 15 as the state law requires.

Business Is Cutting Back As Recession Deepening

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer
Businesses are trimming their spending plans to compensate for sluggish sales and the prospect of a lengthy recession, new economic reports indicate.

The Commerce Department reported Tuesday that spending on new construction fell 1.7 percent in October, the eighth decline in the last nine months. Spending on private projects was off 1.9 percent, led by a big decline in home building.

And in New York, a business research group said manufacturers' overall spending plans fell sharply in the third quarter. The Conference Board said spending by the nation's largest manufacturers on new plants and equipment jumped 10.4 percent in the third quarter, but authorizations to spend money in the future slipped 5.6 percent from the second quarter. Most economists believe the economy is in a recession now, although the government's latest estimate of the gross national product for the third quarter showed a small increase in the total value of goods and services produced.

from 1978, the last peak sales year. The report, presented to the Senate Finance subcommittee on international trade, foresaw "no prospect for a sharp turnaround in the immediate future" for the auto companies.

U.S. Trade Representative William Brock said in Michigan the government must step in if American automakers are to compete with foreign companies after 1984. In talks with industry leaders, Brock said export restrictions negotiated with the Japanese earlier this year expire in 1984 and will not prevent a resurgence of imports.

A Commerce Department report to Congress said the financial strength of the automobile industry has sharply eroded, and the industry may not be able to restore its long-run competitiveness.

Families Shun TV For A Month And Cite 'Pleasant Discoveries'

By HAL SPENCER
Associated Press Writer
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The Motamed family emerged from its month-long fast from television determined that it will never again indulge in electronic junk food.

The Motameds, Mehrdad and Linda and their two daughters, were among 50 families who answered an English teacher's challenge and boycotted television for the month of November.

"The beginning of the month was a little bit difficult, especially for our youngest child," Mrs. Motamed said Tuesday.

Her family and others who accepted Peter Hufstader's challenge met at the private Wheeler School to discuss their experiences and celebrate a victory over what some called the pervasive influence of TV in their homes.

"I'm going to see if we can't set down on paper a schedule of what we're going to watch in the future," said Mrs. Motamed, who has two daughters, aged 8 and 13.

"We've seen that we can do other things without the TV," she said.

"God knows, we used to — and fun things too," interrupted Francis Dinneen, a first-grade teacher at the 540-student day school.

The teacher said she noticed that children of families boycotting television seemed more attentive during the month.

"Too much television does interfere with learning and with reading. The children, they come to school and that's all they talk about: what they saw on television last night," she said.

"It (the boycott) is a gimmick," said Hufstader, head of the school's English department. "A gimmick to point out that heavy, chronic television watchers do not make good readers."

Only one family hinted it might continue the boycott. In fact, said Marilyn Johnson, her family of four turned off the TV in September, after hearing about Hufstader's upcoming challenge.

"We've really made some pleasant discoveries in all this. Everybody is finding a little niche in the family room to curl up and read."

"Oh, we might watch a little television in the future," but very little, she said, adding that the family broke the boycott to watch news of the assassination in October of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and the launching and landing of the space shuttle Columbia.

"The month without television made everybody more conscious" of its interference in other family activities, said Dory Skemp, a single parent with two sons, aged 9 and 10.

Hufstader acknowledged that the families who accepted his challenge probably were the type who controlled TV viewing to begin with.

"There's no question about that," he said, adding that only about 10 percent of the families with children at the school took part.

Hufstader confessed he broke the boycott several times.

He explained that several television stations interviewed him about the challenge, and "I wanted to see how I did on TV. I couldn't miss that. That's a once in a lifetime thing."

Kinston Field Tower Readied

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Officials prepared to reopen the air traffic control tower at Kinston's Eastern Regional Jetport Monday, the first of 71 U.S. towers to reopen after being closed because of the air traffic controllers' strike.

Dale Cannon, tower chief at New Bern's Simmons-Knott Airport before the facility was closed, will assume duties as tower chief at Kinston.

Jerry Rayburn, one of the controllers at the tower when it was closed, will help out for the first few weeks of renewed operation before being transferred.

Cannon said he has spent the past several days doing lots of coordination.

"It takes a lot of work just getting everybody aware of the fact we are going to open," Cannon said.

He said he spent most of Monday on the phone with officials at Seymour Johnson Air Force base which has been handling communications and radar clearance for Kinston flights since the tower closed.

Cannon said Tuesday that two former New Bern air traffic controllers will man the tower on a limited basis for several months. He said the tower will operate from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. until more personnel become available.

The controllers will be George Herring and Kathy Holbrook. Cannon said Ms. Holbrook was nearly ready to begin duty when the New Bern tower closed Aug. 12.

The Kinston tower closed Sept. 26. Federal Aviation Administration officials said the closing would last at least 90 days before a decision would be made about when to reopen the tower.

CIVITAN
The Greenville Civitan Club will meet Thursday at 7 p.m. at Three Steers Restaurant.

Graverobber Sent To Jail

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A teen-ager who said he stole human skulls from two crypts as a joke has been sentenced to up to 10 years in jail.

Oakland County Circuit Judge Frederick Ziem imposed a one- to 10-year sentence Tuesday on David A. Campbell, 18, of Pontiac. Campbell said he took one of the skulls to his home and left the other next to a headstone at the Pontiac cemetery June 30.

"He stated that his intent was to play a practical joke, such as placing the skull in the refrigerator or on his sister's bed," Ziem said.

Hoping to receive a reward, Campbell called Pontiac police July 1, and reported he had found a skull, Ziem said. He was arrested that day, and has already served 154 days in the Oakland County Jail since his arrest. Campbell pleaded guilty to a rarely used felony charge: removing the remains of a human body.

Two juveniles were charged as accomplices. The disposition of their cases was confidential because they are minors, Ziem said.

Divided Court Orders New Trials

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The former chairman of the Dare County Democratic Party, his cousin and a former Dare sheriff's deputy charged in a 1979 hit-and-run death have been granted new trials.

The North Carolina Supreme Court, in a weakly aligned decision, ruled 4-3 Tuesday that former Democratic chairman Charles S. Fearing, his cousin Malcolm Fearing, and former deputy C.C. Duvall should be tried again.

Charles Fearing was convicted of hit-and-run and death by motor vehicle in the death of 87-year-old Cloise H. Creef, who was struck and killed by a vehicle on U.S. 64-264 near Manteo Feb. 19, 1979.

The court's ruling affects only his conviction of hit-and-run, for which he received a prison term of not more than three years. He was sentenced to not more than one year on the death by motor vehicle conviction but has been free while the case was appealed.

Malcolm Fearing was convicted of being an accessory after the fact to hit-and-run, while Duvall was convicted of helping to cover up the hit-and-run. Both were awarded new trials. In making its ruling, the court urged the Legislature to revise the state's hit-and-run law because, it said, the law's current legal interpretation is not "what the law should be."

The interpretation is that a motorist involved in a wreck — and capable of continuing down the road — must know that he caused an injury to a person before he can be required to stop and assist the injured person.

Fearing admitted during his testimony that he knew he had hit something but said he didn't know he had fatally injured Creef because of distractions caused by a passenger.

The court ruled that the trial judge erred by telling the jury to return a guilty verdict if it found that Fearing "knew of the accident" instead of knowing that he had caused the injury.

The knowledge may be specific or implied by the circumstances, but prosecutors must be required to show that the person on trial knew that somebody had been hurt in the accident, the court said.

Although voting with the majority, two justices — Phillip Carlton and James Exum — took the unusual step of noting that they partially agreed with the dissenters.

They joined dissenters J. Frank Huskins, Joseph Branch and Louis Meyer in urging that the General Assembly revise the hit-and-run statute.

Others voting with the majority were David M. Britt and J. William Copeland.

Huskins wrote in his minority opinion that the statute requires that drivers stop their vehicles anytime they are involved in an accident regardless of whether he knows someone has been hurt.

"Reason dictates that the legislature intended to punish hit-and-run drivers involved in accident resulting in either property damage or injury to some person," Huskins wrote. "Knowledge of the accident is all the knowledge that the law requires."

Bennett Says Scholars Not Chosen For Views

WASHINGTON (AP) — William J. Bennett, president of the National Humanities Center, says visiting scholars are chosen to study there without regard to "political consideration."

"I do not know what the fuss is about," Bennett said. "This is an academic institution. We are not putting together a political party."

Bennett commented Tuesday after aides to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said Helms was reconsidering his support for Bennett as chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities. President Reagan recently nominated Bennett for the prestigious position but the U.S. Senate has yet to ratify the nomination.

Aide James Lucier said Helms asked the White House last week to look into complaints that under Bennett's leadership, the National Humanities Center in North Carolina's Research Triangle Park had awarded a majority of fellowships to liberal scholars.

"It appears the majority of the persons (awarded fellowships) were not supportive of the Reagan administration," Lucier said. "That raises questions about what he will do at the endowment."

Bennett said he planned to be in Washington today and might try to see Helms to discuss the matter.

"We don't have any quotas," he said Tuesday from New York City, where he was on a business trip. "We don't take people on the basis of race, sex or political coloration."

Bennett said he served on the conservative Heritage Foundation's transition team for the national endowment, which recommended that grants be awarded on the basis of "merit and excellence." He said he did not know the political makeup of the 40 scholars chosen annually to study at the center.

But Lucier said Helms believes that conservative scholars have not been given fair consideration for grants in the past. He said Helms' belief had been reinforced by information he had received in the past few weeks.

"We are just astonished at some of the things pointed out to us," Lucier said.

Lucier said Helms would not decide whether he will oppose the Bennett nomination until he receives a response from the White House.

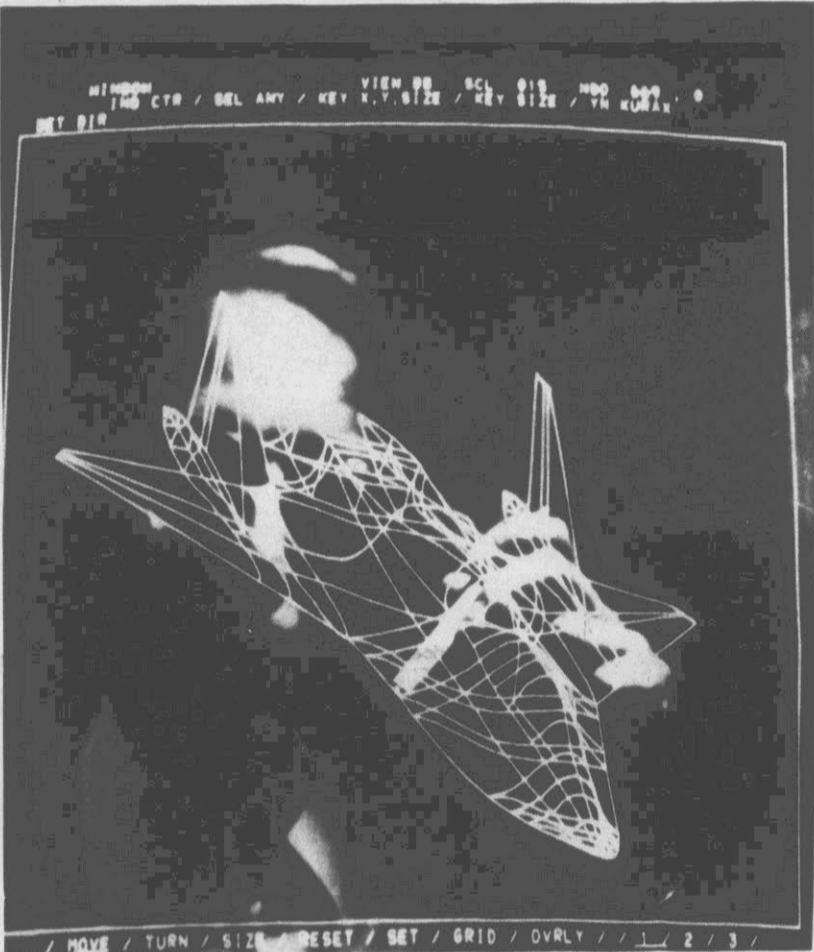

The other major contender was Melvin Bradford, a Texas English professor who was the self-described candidate of the "Old Right."

Soon after meeting Bennett in Raleigh during August, Helms wrote a letter of endorsement for the North Carolinian. But in October, he endorsed Bradford at the urging of his close political ally, Sen. John East, R-N.C.

In an interview last month, Helms said he could support either candidate.

East's spokesman, Jerry Woodruff, said East has not joined Helms in asking the White House to reconsider Bennett's nomination.

Supreme Court Tells Lower Courts Use Restraint

By KEVIN COSTELLO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is telling lower federal courts to exercise more restraint and trimming their power to hear some tax-related civil rights cases.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court Tuesday, accused a federal appeals court of "inventing" a requirement that the Pentagon must disclose where it may be storing nuclear weapons and what impact such storage might have on nearby residents. "In inventing the 'Hypothetical Environmental Impact Statement,' the court of appeals departed from the express intent of Congress manifested" in the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, Rehnquist wrote.

"The court of appeals in this case should have accepted the balance struck by Congress, rather than engrafting onto the statutory language concepts of its own making," he added.

Rehnquist, generally regarded as the court's most conservative member, mustered all eight of his colleagues behind him in overturning the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The dispute stemmed from concern over the possible storage of nuclear weapons in a Navy ammunition facility on the Hawaiian island of Oahu.

In the second, unrelated case, Rehnquist's opinion virtually closed the federal courthouse to people who claim that state tax assessments violate their civil rights.

The decision evolved from a lawsuit over allegedly discriminatory real estate assessments in St. Louis County, Mo.

Rehnquist based his ruling on "the principle of comity," which says federal judges must respect the authority of state courts.

His opinion did not spell out exactly how far his notion of "comity" should reach or how far it should be applied outside of tax cases. But it did leave open the possibility that some tax disputes may still be heard in federal court.

Only four other court members agreed with Rehnquist in the tax case.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing a strong dissent, said federal courts should still hear such tax cases:

"The power to control the jurisdiction of the lower federal courts is assigned by the Constitution to Congress, not to this court. In its haste to rid federal courts of a class of cases that it thinks unfit for federal scrutiny, the court today departs from this fundamental precept."

Ironically, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who wrote an article earlier this year urging more deference to state courts, joined Brennan's dissent.

Rehnquist's opinions Tuesday are in line with the conservative trend the court has been taking.

In addition, President Reagan and other conservatives have long accused federal courts of "judicial activism" by expanding various rights.

As recently as Monday, Attorney General William French Smith was quoted in The Washington Post as saying:

"I think their independence and prestige is greatly enhanced when the (federal) courts through their own restraint stay within their institutional roles."

In other matters Tuesday, the Supreme Court:

—Heard arguments on whether the Constitution requires Texas to provide free public education to illegal alien children. The case could determine the rights of millions of illegal aliens.

—Ruled unanimously that the Interior Department does not have to experiment with new leasing systems in future sales of offshore oil-drilling rights.

Ports Profits Are Still Down

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Revenues were up but profits were down at North Carolina's two state ports for the first four months of the current fiscal year, state officials said Tuesday.

"The good news is that October was a good month at Wilmington, with revenues up 23 percent over last October," said Steve Meehan, spokesman for the state Commerce Department.

Profits at the Wilmington port were down 36 percent for the period ending Oct. 31, compared to the same period last year, said Steven Meehan, spokesman for the state Commerce Department. The profits fell from $493,000 to $316,000, he said.

At Morehead City, profits were down 18 percent — from $112,000 to $91,000, he said.

Gross revenues rose 4 percent, to $2.98 million, at Wilmington. At Morehead, revenues rose 9 percent to $1.36 million.

The figures were presented to the state Ports Authority during a meeting Tuesday.

Meehan said the profits decline and slowdown in revenue growth was due to general economic conditions. "At Morehead City, there's been a decrease in the shipment of wood products and lumber," he said.

CP&L Told

Pay Refunds

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Company was ordered Tuesday by a federal Energy Regulatory Commission judge to refund $9 million dollars in excess charges collected from its cooperative and municipal customers in North Carolina.

CP&L failed to justify the entire $34 million rate increase that went into effect for those wholesale customers Aug. 18, 1980, ruled Judge David Harfeld. Most of those customers are in the central Piedmont.

The rate increase, beginning next month, will be superceded by a new, higher CP&L wholesale rate schedule, which could also be subject to later reduction by the FERC. The higher rates take effect Jan. 12, 1982.

It will probably take quite some time before the refunds are passed on to the co-ops and cities involved, said Jim Hubbard, executive vice president of the North Carolina Electric Membership Corp.

"In the meantime, the 18 co-ops affected will probably have to increase their rates in January in order to pay CP&L's higher rates," Hubbard said. He said it could take 18-24 months for the FERC to rule on the new CP&L rate schedule.

"We're pleased that the judge ordered refunds in the magnitude that he did, but we had hoped that they could have been somewhat higher," Hubbard said. "Although we lost on some issues, we were able to win on those issues which carried the highest dollar values."

Delete Museum From Duke's Nixon Library Plans

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — President Terry Sanford says Duke University's decision is non-negotiable that a Richard Nixon presidential library planned for the Duke campus will not include a museum.

Sanford's statement followed an announcement of an agreement to that effect between the university's library-negotiating team and its advisory body.

The Duke News Service quoted university President Terry Sanford as saying: "It has already been determined, accepted and agreed that Duke could not handle the sightseers who would be attracted to a museum."

"Consequently, the museum, or more accurately the visual archives, will have to be placed somewhere else. That condition cannot be changed."

The decision represented a victory for the Duke faculty, which strongly urged through its Academic Council that any Nixon library not include a museum or other facility which might glorify the former president.

The decision was made during a closed meeting Tuesday of the Advisory Committee to Duke's library negotiators.

According to the university news service, the faculty's position was backed by Sanford and J. Alexander McMahon, chairman of the Duke University Board of Trustees.

The team representing Duke in its negotiations with Nixon is composed of trustees John A. Forlines Jr. of Granite Falls, Mrs. Kay Goodman Stern of Greensboro and Neil L. Williams of Atlanta. They are to be advised by university attorney Eugene McDonald.

The advisory committee is composed of three faculty members, three trustees, three students and three alumni.

The negotiating team also announced that it would negotiate "within the spirit" of other recommendations adopted by the Academic Council and be guided by conditions prescribed by trustees.

On Oct. 29, the Academic Council set forth a list of conditions it said should be established as the basis for any future negotiations with Nixon.

Besides opposing a museum, the council also recommended that the library not exceed 55,000 square feet, that the university insist on control over funds raised for the library and over privately funded activities taking place in the library, and that all litigation over access to Nixon's material be settled before a final agreement is made.

Trustees also established a list of conditions, including assurances over funds, architectural style and availability and use of library materials. The trustees recommended that the library be limited to 150,000 square feet.

Royal Banquet Cut Off By Voting Call

LONDON (AP) — A banquet for Prince Charles and Princess Diana was disrupted Tuesday night when senior politicians attending were summoned unexpectedly to vote in the nearby House of Commons.

The ringing of the "division" bell warning that a vote was about to take place in the lower house of Parliament created "general consternation" among the diners, the Times of London reported.

"Food and drink was dropped instantly from eager hands as Members of Parliament went to answer the call to arms," the Times said. "In seconds the banquet was deserted as the honorable and gallant gentlemen raced for the division lobbies."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, sitting next to the 33-year-old heir to the British throne and his 20-year-old wife, "was not amused" the Times said.

The host was the speaker of the House of Commons, George Thomas, and the banquet was held at his official residence in the Palace of Westminster, a short distance from the Commons chamber. He apologized to the royal couple for the interruption.

The cause of the summons was Tam Dalyell, a member of the opposition Labor Party, who forced a vote on what normally is a routine motion to adjourn because he wanted to continue debate over factory closures. The government won the vote 72-32, and the house adjourned.

How Tar Heel Representatives, Senators Voted

ROLL CALL REPORT
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes before adjourning for Thanksgiving recess.

HOUSE
Spending — The House passed, 205 for and 194 against, a stopgap FY 1982 budget measure (HJ Res 357) to fund the government until regular appropriations bills (already nearly two months overdue) are approved by Congress sometime next year. The vote was a triumph for the Democratic leadership, but victory proved shortlived when President Reagan vetoed the resolution and House Democrats abandoned what would have been a futile attempt to override the veto. Reagan said in his veto message the $428 billion emergency spending bill was about $2 billion too expensive. As the House and Senate try to fashion a stopgap budget more to the president's liking, federal spending will be governed by yet another temporary plan (see vote below).

Supporter Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., said that a veto threat notwithstanding, the Congress as an independent branch of government should "discharge its own functions in its own way, because we are right."

Opponent Robert Michel, R-Ill., said "the president told me quite frankly that there is no way he can sign this continuing resolution in its present form."

Members voting "yea" wanted to enact the stopgap budget despite likelihood of a veto.

Reps. L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, and W.G. Hefner, D-8, voted "yea."

Reps. Eugene Johnston, R-6, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "nay."

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, and Charles Rose, D-7, did not vote.

Budget — On a tally of 221 for and 176 against, the House voted to extend government funding at existing levels until Dec. 15. This was a victory for President Reagan over the Democratic leadership, which favored extending the stopgap FY 1982 budget until Feb. 3. The Democrats wanted to keep their spending priorities — carried over from FY 1981 — in effect as long as possible.

By Dec. 15, the House and Senate hope to enact a temporary 1982 budget that the president will sign. The patchwork budgeting is necessary because Congress has not yet passed the full range of appropriations bills for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. When those bills are operative, the federal budget will for the first time reflect the spending levels and priorities the administration has been advocating since soon after taking office.

This vote occurred during debate on HJ Res 368, later passed by the Senate in a virtually unanimous vote and signed into law by the president.

Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., a supporter of the Dec. 15 deadline, said "we are told that we are going to get another veto if we go beyond the Dec. 15 date, and I am willing to try anything here to see if we can get the government greased, oiled up and back to work."

Opponent Floyd Fithian, D-Ind., said the threat of another presidential veto is an effort to "distract the country from what is at hand, the recession and $80 billion deficit" projected for FY 1982.

Members voting "yea" wanted the stopgap 1982 budget, which reflects FY 1981 levels distasteful to the president, to last only until Dec. 1.

Johnston, Martin, Broyhill and Hendon voted "yea."

Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal and Hefner voted "nay."

Jones and Rose did not vote.

SENATE

"Veto Bait" — The Senate

passed, 46 for and 39 against, the stopgap FY 1982 budget plan (HJ Res 357) that later was vetoed by the president (see first House vote above).

Supporter Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said "the budget cuts we have made already are too deep. They are written, not in the numbers of David Stockman's balance sheet, but in the tears and pain of millions of our citizens who must bear the brunt of these harsh and unfair budget cuts."

Opponent William Armstrong, R-Colo., called the measure "little more than veto bait" and added that "I do not wish to have it on my voting record that I voted for this monstrosity ..."

Senators voting "yea" favored the budget plan in defiance of the White House.

Sen. John East, R, voted "yea."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted "nay."

Federal Pay — The Senate adopted, 54 for and 41 against, an amendment providing top executive branch employees with pay hikes averaging 4.8 percent. The top salary for federal executives is now frozen at $50,112. The amendment was attached to HJ Res 357, a stopgap appropriations bill (see vote above), but was later dropped in a House-Senate conference.

Supporter Howard Baker, R-Tenn., said "we have to get on with the business of making it possible to retain competent people in the upper levels of government."

No opponent spoke during debate.

East and Helms voted "nay."

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened mixed today as the market continued to evaluate whether the recession could worsen, offsetting the glitter of lower interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which reached its best level in three months Tuesday, fell 2.38 to 887.84 after 30 minutes of trading. Its transportation and utility measures also turned lower. Declines held a 43 edge over advances on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market's mixed performance carried over from Tuesday, in which selling was attributed by analysts to investors taking advantage of the market's strong gains over the four previous sessions.

Analysts also said the recent rally might be ending as investors take a closer look at whether the recession might deepen, further damaging corporate profits and jeopardizing dividend payments.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrials, which had climbed 37.19 points in the previous four sessions, rose another 1.24 to 890.22.

It was the first time the measure closed above 890 since Aug. 28, when it finished at 892.22.

Still, about four stocks fell for each three rising on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 53.98 million shares, compared with 47.58 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index was off 0.19 to 73.18.

VW Recalling 450,000 Cars To Fix Emission

DETROIT (AP) — Volkswagen of America says not all of the 450,000 Rabbits and Sciroccos being recalled for checks of nitrogen oxide and hydrocarbon emission levels will need engine repairs.

"Not all cars have the high levels," VW spokesman Thomas McDonald said Tuesday after the recall was announced. "It depends on what kind of condition they're in, for instance, and how many miles they've been driven."

The Environmental Protection Agency began proceedings last year against the company to force correction of the emissions problem. In return for VW's voluntary recall program, the EPA has agreed to drop its proceedings, McDonald said.

Owners of 1977 through 1979 Rabbits and Sciroccos with gasoline engines will be notified by mail in February that they may take their cars to dealers for emissions tests, the company said. If the emission levels are too high, repairs will be made at no cost to car owners.

Under the program, dealers will adjust the ignition and exhaust gas recirculation systems to reduce nitrogen oxide, McDonald said. In cars with excessive oil consumption, dealers also will install a new type of valve stem seals.

The seals, which have been installed on all VW vehicles since 1980, reduce engine oil consumption and lower hydrocarbon emissions. Owners who already have replaced the valve stem seals in their cars' engines will be eligible for a refund from Volkswagen, McDonald said.

The full recall program will be carried out in all states except California, where only the hydrocarbon emission levels need to be corrected, McDonald said.

Approved in October by the General Assembly, North Carolina cuts include a change from unlimited to 18 annual Medicaid-paid visits to physicians or mental health clinics, and a maximum of four prescriptions or refills per month.

The reductions are in response to a $25 million federal cutback for the federal-state program, which provides medical services for nearly 456,000 clients. In June, an additional $46 million federal cut goes into effect.

Federal contributions nationally drop $500 million in fiscal 1982, from $17.1 billion last year.

She thanked Leon Wright, plant personnel manager, and his staff for their efforts in spearheading the drive. Mrs. Taylor also expressed her appreciation to the women of the Greenville Service League and the volunteer nurses for their help.

The next Bloodmobile visit will be the big Dec. 30 holiday drive at the Moose Lodge, scheduled to help meet the critical blood needs of the holiday season.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C. Partly cloudy Friday and fair over the weekend. Highs Friday and Saturday in the 40s with some 50s on the coast and 30s in the mountains. Highs Sunday mostly in 50s. Lows in teens and 20s Saturday with 20s and 30s on Friday and Sunday.

Falkland Man Held In Assault
Frank Chavis of Falkland was arrested this morning by Pitt County deputies on an assault charge following an incident during which his wife was shot in the leg.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Chavis was charged with assault with a firearm inflicting serious injuries. Chavis' wife, Hattie, was shot in the upper left leg with a .22 caliber rifle, the sheriff said.

Mrs. Chavis was transported by the Falkland Rescue Squad to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment following the 5:30 a.m. incident.

Bond for Chavis, who was arrested around 8 a.m., was set at $500, according to Tyson, who said a hearing will be scheduled in District Court here.

63 Pints Given To Bloodmobile
A Bloodmobile visit Tuesday at the Empire Brushes plant resulted in the collection of 63 pints of blood, according to Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said that, in addition to the units collected, there were 11 deferrals for various health reasons. "All blood donated, especially this time of year, is very helpful," Mrs. Taylor said in commending those who gave at Empire Brushes.

Heaters Stolen
Greenville police were investigating a break-in at Garris-Evans Lumber Co. at 701 W. 14th St. just before midnight Tuesday night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said thieves broke a glass out of a front door to gain entrance and take three kerosene heaters from the building.

Cannon noted that investigation is continuing into the theft of a kerosene heater from Hollowell's Drug Store at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Sixth Street, Monday night.

He said a man entered the store about 8:35 p.m., picked up the heater and ran.

NCSU Holds Off Lady Bucs, 62-56

RALEIGH — N. C. State's ninth-ranked Lady Wolfpack held off a determined rally by East Carolina last night to pull out a 62-56 victory over the Lady Pirates.

The game gained some measure of revenge for two overtime losses sustained by the Lady Wolfpack at the hands of the Pirates last year, one of which ended a 64-game, five-game in-state winning streak.

But it wasn't as easy as the Wolfpack might have thought it would be after the first half of play, which ended with State in a 35-22 lead. In the second half, the Lady Pirates rallied behind Mary Denkler and Loraine Foster to close the gap to as little as three, 53-50, with 5:29 left in the game, but Ginger Rouse scored three straight jumpers to hold off the Pirates and clinch the victory for State, which is now 3-0 on the season.

"We played very well defensively, but we did not do what we wanted to do in the first half offensively," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "In the second half, we flattened out their zone and got the ball down low to Mary and Loraine."

"I was especially pleased with the defensive play of Loletha Harrison, who shut off (Paula) Nicholson in the second half." Nicholson scored 18 of her 21 points in the first half of the contest. "Harrison guarded her man-to-man in the second half, limiting her to one field goal and one free throw." The two players were teammates last year on Louisburg Junior College's national championship team.

State jumped out into an early lead behind Nicholson, who scored the first ten points as the Lady Wolfpack jumped out into a 20-5 lead as the Lady Pirates couldn't buy a shot. ECU's first trip down the court saw seven shots refuse to drop for them — it was indicative of the first half's play.

But in the second half, Denkler got ten of the first 12 points for the Lady Pirates to spark a comeback. The Lady Pirates steadily cut into the lead until they finally cut it to three at 53-50 on a free throw by Denkler.

But Rouse came back with three in a row to raise the lead to 61-52 with 2:04 left in the game. After Foster hit a jumper with 4:11 left to make it 57-52, ECU didn't score again until 52 seconds were left when Denkler hit, due to a tight man-to-man defense which the Wolfpack switched into.

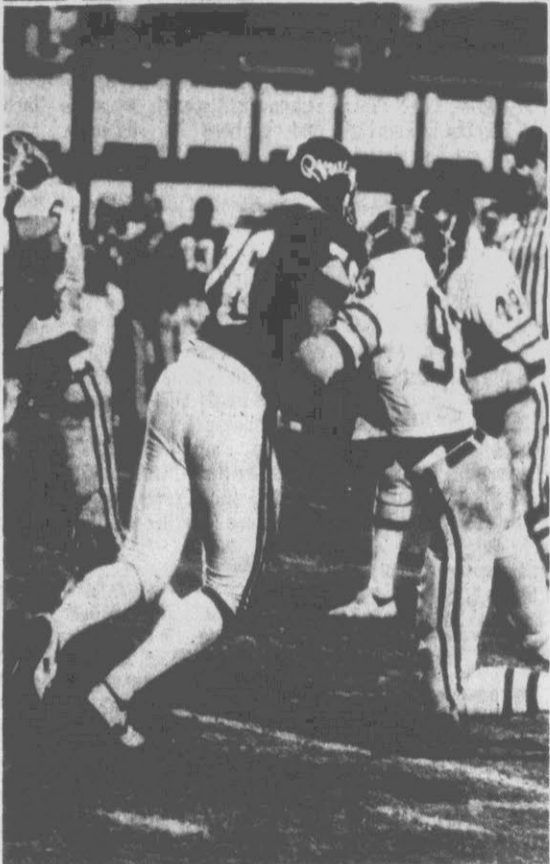

East Carolina managed to rebound the Lady Wolfpack, 36-34, despite a 14 rebound effort by the 6-2 Nicholson. East Carolina was led by Denkler with eight.

East Carolina also outshot State in field goal percentage, (Please turn to page 16)

Pirates' Tottie Robbins 2nd Team All-America

Defensive End Jody Schulz Honorable Mention

Staff & Wire Reports

NEW YORK — East Carolina University senior offensive guard Tottie Robbins was named to the second-team Associated Press All-America team, it was announced today.

ECU defensive end Jody Schulz was named to the honorable mention team. Schulz is a 6-4, 230-pound junior from Chester, Md.

Robbins, a 6-5, 275-pounder from Merry Hill, N.C., is only the second ECU player to make the second team All-America team. The only other player to do so is former star Jim Bolding, a defensive safety.

Danny Kopley, a linebacker, Cary Godette, a defensive end, and Wayne Inman, an offensive guard, are the only other ECU players to be among the top three teams since ECU achieved Division I status.

Robbins will play in the Blue-Gray game on Dec. 25 in Mobile, Ala. The Blue-Gray game is a senior all-star game.

Nationally, Georgia running back Herschel Walker, Michigan wide receiver Anthony Carter and Texas defensive tackle Kenneth Sims were named to the team for the second year in a row, joining record-breakers Marcus Allen and Jim McMahon on the squad.

Brigham Young's McMahon, who will wind up his career against Washington State in the Holiday Bowl, not only set a pass yardage mark of 9,535 regular-season yards but also led the nation this season in passing and total offense.

Despite missing two games with a knee injury, he completed 272 of 423 passes for 3,555 yards and 30 touchdowns and was intercepted only seven times. Allen, of Southern California, the first runner ever to gain 2,000 yards in a season, rushed for more than 200 yards seven times in 11 games and finished with 2,342 yards, smashing the mark of 1,948 by Pitt's Tony Dorsett in 1976. His average of 212.9 yards per game set another record.

Allen, who led the nation in scoring with 23 touchdowns, will end his career against Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

Walker, the other first-team running back, has a regular-season game remaining against Georgia Tech Saturday. In 10 games he has rushed for 1,666 yards after setting a record of 1,616 for a freshman last year.

The AP All-America team will appear on Bob Hope's All-Star Comedy Christmas Special on Sunday, Dec. 20, from 8-9 p.m. EST (NBC-TV).

Carter caught 44 passes for 825 yards and seven touchdowns and returned 15 kickoffs for 406 yards and 10 punts for 150. With one season left, he has averaged 16.9 yards every time he has touched the ball. The record is 13.8 by Nebraska's Johnny Rodgers.

The rest of the offensive unit includes tight end Tim Wrightman of UCLA, wide receiver Julius Dawkins of Pitt — he led the nation with 15 touchdown receptions while catching 40 passes for 690 yards — tackles Ed Muransky of Michigan and Terry Tausch of Texas, guards Kurt Becker of Michigan and Sean Farrell of Penn State, center Dave Rimington of Nebraska and placekicker Gary Anderson of Syracuse. Anderson did not miss an extra point in his career and connected on 18 of 19 field goal attempts this season. Besides Sims, the defensive unit consists of ends Billy Ray Smith of Arkansas and Andre Tippett of Iowa, tackle Jeff Gaylord of Missouri — Big Eight Defensive Player of the Year — middle guard Tim Krumrie of Wisconsin, linebackers Johnnie Cooks of Mississippi State, Bob Crable of Notre Dame and Pitt's Sal Sunseri, backs Terry Kinard of Clemson, Mike Richardson of Arizona State and Tommy Wilcox of Alabama and punter Reggie Roby of Iowa. Roby missed a bid to become the first college punter to average 50 yards per kick but his 49.3 average bettered the mark of 49.3 by Kirk Wilson of UCLA in 1956.

Valenzuela NL Rookie Of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the left-handed pitching star of the Los Angeles Dodgers, added the National League Rookie of the Year award today to the Cy Young honors he captured last month and became the first player to win those two trophies in one season.

The chunky hurler from Sonora, Mexico, who impressed the baseball world with poise belying his 20 years — he turned 21 last month — and a dancing screwball, received 17 1/2 first-place votes and 6 1/2 for second for 107 points. The balloting was done by a panel of two members of the Baseball Writers Association of America from each National League city.

He became the third straight Dodger pitcher to be named NL rookie of the year — Rick Sutcliffe and Steve Howe preceded Valenzuela. Montreal outfielder Tim Lincecum, who led the league with 71 stolen bases in just 88 games, placed second to Valenzuela. Raines, a .304 hitter, captured the remaining first-place votes, 6 1/2, and second-place ballots, 17 1/2, for 85 points.

Only five other players received votes, and those were for third place. New York Mets third baseman Hubie Brooks got 8 1/2 third place votes, followed by pitcher Bruce Berenyi of Cincinnati and second baseman Juan Bonilla of San Diego with five. Catcher Tony Pena of Pittsburgh received four third-place votes and Mets outfielder Mookie Wilson got 1 1/2.

Five points were awarded for each first-place vote, three for second and one for third.

Valenzuela, whose 13-7 record with a 2.48 earned run average — and league-leading totals in innings pitched (192), shutouts (8), strikeouts (180), and complete games (11) — made him the first rookie ever to win the Cy Young Award, was Mr. Clutch for the World Champion Dodgers in 1981. In becoming the 10th Dodger to capture rookie honors, Valenzuela won three times in the team's postseason run to the championship.

He beat the Houston Astros in the fourth game of the West Division playoff, then hurled the pennant-clincher against Montreal in Game 5 of the League Championship Series.

In the World Series, the man responsible for "Fernandomania" got the Dodgers started after they lost the first two games in New York. Pitching without his best stuff, Valenzuela held off the Yankees for a 5-4 victory that began Los Angeles' Series comeback. The Dodgers won the next three games and the title.

"Fernando showed what a great pitcher he is tonight by hanging in there without his good stuff and never getting flustered," said Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda after that game.

Valenzuela, who speaks no English, not only was the Dodgers' most popular player but was a drawing card wherever he pitched in the majors. He was the top pitcher in the balloting for NL Most Valuable Player, finishing fifth.

"Nothing he does surprises me," said Lasorda. "He has the poise and confidence of a 10-year veteran. Nothing bothers him. He pitches like he's been through it all before."

The Rookie of the Year award was started 35 years ago with Jackie Robinson the winner. Other Dodger winners were Don Newcombe in 1949; Joe Black in 1952; Jim Gilliam in 1953; Frank Howard in 1960; Jim Lefebvre in 1965; Ted Sizemore in 1969; Sutcliffe in 1979 and Howe 1980.

Davis ACC Player Of Yr.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Clemson linebacker Jeff Davis, the anchor of the nation's second-best defense, has been chosen Player of the Year in the Atlantic Coast Athletic Conference.

Davis' selection marked the second straight year a linebacker has received the award, with North Carolina's Lawrence Taylor having been chosen a year ago. Only three other times has a defensive player been cited.

Davis, who has not missed a game in four years, received votes from 57 of the 117 Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association voters while his teammate, quarterback Homer Jordan, was second with 17 votes.

Duke wide receiver Cedric Jones was third with 11 while others receiving votes included running back Kelvin Bryant and quarterback Rod Elkins of North Carolina, running back Joe McIntosh of North Carolina State, quarterback Gary Schofield of Wake Forest and wide receiver Perry Tuttle of Clemson.

Three times this year Davis was named conference defensive Player of the Week, the last time after making 15 tackles against rival South Carolina.

"Jeff Davis is the heart of the Clemson defense," Tiger coach Dan Ford said. "Everybody on the defensive team looks to him for leadership. To put it simply, he's a great linebacker."

Davis also made 15 tackles in a 10-8 victory over North Carolina and 11 in a 13-3 victory over Georgia. He holds the school record of 24.

Vikings Hold On To Down A-G

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton missed out on two late scoring opportunities and D.H. Conley's Vikings remained unbeaten last night, 46-45.

Earlier in the evening, the Valkyries of Conley nipped Ayden-Grifton's Lady Chargers, 48-47, in another barnburner.

Conley's Vikings had stormed out to an early lead, moving ahead by 20-10 at the end of the first period. Ayden-Grifton rallied in the second quarter, cutting the Vike lead back to 30-26 at the half. In the third quarter, the Chargers rally continued, with the lead falling to only 38-37 as the final period got under way.

The game continued close until the Vikes finally held a 46-45 lead with about two minutes left to play. Ayden-Grifton lost the ball on an in-bounds play, however, and the Vikes were able to stall it until only 11 seconds remained. At that point, A-G fouled Tommy Joyner, who missed a pair of free throws.

Ayden-Grifton had the ball on the rebound, but missed a shot with three seconds left. The Chargers were fouled on the rebound, but not being in the bonus, took the ball out of bounds. One final shot missed, and although the Chargers again got the rebound, time ran out before another shot could be made.

Keith Gatlin led the Conley scoring with 20 points, while Leon Cox added 11. Thomas Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 14, while Bernard Cannon and Calvin Peterson each had ten.

In the girls' contest, it was just as close. Ayden-Grifton inched into a 12-10 lead in the first quarter, and held that margin, 20-18 at intermission. In the third frame, the Lady Chargers eased further out, 37-32. But in the final period, Conley rallied and finally took Cannon and Mechio Korgey led the Conley scoring with 10 each, while Cora Faison had 18 and Brown had 11 for A-G.

The results left the Conley boys and girls with 3-0 records each. Ayden-Grifton's boys are now 1-2 while the girls are 0-3.

Conley entertains Farmville Central on Friday, while Ayden-Grifton is host to North Lenoir on Tuesday.

Missouri Romps By Alcorn State

By The Associated Press

Even at age 37, Coach Tom Meyer of Illinois-Chicago Circle is finding out he's not old enough to beat up on Dad.

Tuesday night, Meyer put his team on the court against seventh-ranked DePaul, coached by his father Ray, and took a licking. The Blue Demons beat Chicago Circle 78-53 behind the game-high 20 points Terry Cummings and some timely baskets by reserve Bernard Randolph.

"I'm thankful that he didn't run up the score," Tom Meyer said. "I was hoping that we'd keep it between 12 and 13 points..."

In other games involving ranked teams, 12th-ranked Indiana downed No. 19 Notre Dame 69-55, No. 16 Missouri clobbered Alcorn State 82-51 and 17th-ranked Alabama walloped Tennessee-Martin 94-64.

Jon Sundvold scored 19 points, 10 in a burst early in the second half, as Missouri romped over Alcorn State in its season opener. Sundvold's fastbreak basket ignited a spree of 13 straight Missouri points during a four-minute span midway in the second half as the Tigers led 61-39.

Missouri center Steve Stipanovich scored 16 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. Albert Irving led Alcorn State with 10 points.

East Carolina plays Missouri Friday night in the opening round of the Show-Me Classic in Columbia, Mo.

Freshman Bobby Lee Hurt scored 20 points to lead Alabama, which was ahead by as many as 20 points in the first half and finally built the lead to 30, the margin of victory.

Eddie Phillips added 14 points for the Crimson Tide, now 2-0, while Curtis High led Tennessee-Martin with 26 points.

Dominique Wilkins scored 20 points to lead Georgia over Florida State, 70-67.

Jaguars Capture Second Straight

FARMVILLE — Terrence Pettaway tossed in 17 points and Farmville Central gained its second straight victory last night, downing North Lenoir, 51-34.

Meanwhile North Lenoir's girls rolled to a 63-37 victory over the Lady Jaguars, remaining unbeaten.

Farmville's boys, unbeaten in two games, eased out into a 15-12 lead in the first period of their game, but were unable to get anything going in the second period. Both teams scored six points in that frame, and the Jags settled for a 21-18 halftime lead.

In the third period, Farmville was able to add three more points to the lead, allowing the Jaguars to hold a 32-26 edge. They pulled away in the final period with a 19-8 margin to win going away.

Pettaway was the lone scorer in double figures for the Jaguars. Maurice Thorbes led North Lenoir, now 1-2, with 11.

In the girls' contest, North Lenoir won its third straight, moving out to a 15-7 lead after one period. That was extended to 35-18 by halftime, and to 51-22 by the end of the third period. Farmville outthit the Lady Hawks, 15-14, in the final quarter.

Susan Smith led North Lenoir with 20 points, while Debra Pope added 12. Rose Lang led Farmville with 16 points, while Stephanie Newton had 12.

The Farmville girls are now 0-2 on the year. Farmville travels to Conley on Friday.

Sauls Coach Of Year; SCOREBOARD

A-G Has 5 On ECC Team

Ayden-Grifton, Charles B. Aycock and Southwest Edgecombe each landed five members of their team on the Eastern Carolina All-Conference team, announced today.

The three teams finished the season tied for first place in the league, and Ayden-Grifton went into the Division I playoffs, losing to Burlington Williams last weekend in the Eastern finals. Aycock went into the Division II playoffs, losing in the second round to Bertie.

Making the team from Ayden-Grifton were: Donovan Arnold, a senior guard; Cleveland Coley, a senior running back; Gregory Jackson, a senior running back; Matthew McCotter, a senior tackle; and Chris Strickland, a senior wingback.

Picked from Aycock were Andy Bunn, a senior fullback; Ken Grantham, a senior halfback; J.L. Gurley, a senior halfback; Greg Thomas, a senior tackle; and Paul Thomas, a senior quarterback.

Southwest Edgecombe's five included Johnny Cobb, a senior guard; Melton Graham, a senior halfback; Darryl Hussey, a senior end; Wayne Mayo, a junior halfback; and Marvin Sharpe, a senior fullback. Farmville Central, Greene Central and Southern Nash each placed two on the team, while North Pitt rounded out the selections with one.

Named from Farmville Central were Raymond May, a senior tackle, and Willie Davis, a senior halfback.

Greene Central's selections were Robert Sheppard, a senior halfback, and James Moore, a senior tackle. Picked from Southern Nash were Terry Best, a senior end and Roscoe Young, a senior guard.

North Pitt's lone honoree is Donald Hunter, a junior tackle. Ayden-Grifton's Dixon Sauls was selected as coach of the year.

Honorable mention went to Kevin Craft, Bernard Ricciarelli, Chuck Smithwick, all of Ayden-Grifton; Nicky Burroughs, Richard Colbin and Bobby West of Aycock; Robert Barnes, Rusty Cotton and Charles Sutton of Farmville Central; Robert Anderson, Cepado Albritton and Antonio Hall of Greene Central; Dennis Bradley, James Clard and Barry Gurkins of North Pitt, Calvin Mitchell and Jeff Lucas of Southern Nash, and David Pridgen, David Proctor, David Williams and Nathan Armstrong, all of Southwest Edgecombe.

The ECC also named its all-conference volleyball team, led by Southwest Edgecombe, the league champ.

Selected to the team were Cora Faison and Lisa Ward of Ayden-Grifton; Michelle Medlin and Lydia Worthington of Farmville Central; Amy Kearney and Letha Taylor of Greene Central; Gladys Roberson of North Pitt, Laura Doughty and Melissa Morgan of Southern Nash, and Bridget Jenkins, Delphine Mabry and Sheila Staton of Southwest Edgecombe.

Southwest's Connie Varnell was named coach of the year.

The league also named its tennis all-conference team, with C.B. Aycock taking every spot. Selected were Dee Sanders, Vickie Pridgen, Lisa Bunn, Ann Lancaster, Sheri Williams and Brenda Montague in singles and Dee Sanders and Vickie Pridgen; Lisa Bunn and Brenda Montague, and Ann Lancaster and Sheri Williams in doubles.

Redskins Beat Yellow Jackets

ROBERSONVILLE — Mike Wilson, Angelo Spruill and Ricky Highsmith combined for 34 points to lead Roanoke to a 56-47 victory over Roanoke Rapids Tuesday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Sylvia Parker scored 17 points — three of which came in overtime — to lift Roanoke past Roanoke Rapids, 38-34. Wilson led the Redskins, now 3-0 overall and 1-0 in the league, with 13 points while Spruill added 12 and Highsmith, nine. Keith Sledge led Roanoke Rapids with 22 points. Travis Hite added 16 for the losers.

In the girls' game, the score was tied at the end of the first period, 10-10, and the Yellow Jackets led at halftime, 18-17, and at the end of the third quarter, 25-23. A fourth quarter surge by the Lady Redskins gave them a two-point lead at 34-32 late in the game, but Janet Slade's bucket — her only one of the night — with seven seconds sent the game into overtime. In the overtime, Roanoke outscored Roanoke Rapids, 4-0, led by Parker's three points to win. Tina, Gay led Roanoke Rapids with 13 points. The win leaves Roanoke at 3-0 overall and 1-0 in the conference. JV — Roanoke 69, Roanoke Rapids 52.

Pam Pack Downs Tigers

WASHINGTON — Washington High School rode a strong second period advantage out to a 79-58 basketball victory over Northeastern Conference foe Williamston last night.

Earlier in the evening, however, Williamston's girls won their first game in two starts, downing Washington, 39-28.

Washington eased ahead, 18-14 in the first period of the boys' contest, and then outscored the Tigers, 16-9, in the second period to start the snowball rolling. That made it 34-23 at the half.

The Pam Pack came back with another good sized advantage, 21-13, in the third period, running the lead out to 55-36. Washington closed it out with a 24-22 margin in the final quarter.

Earl Smith led the Pam Pack with 18 points, while James Guilford and Reggie Stevenson each had 14. Vincent Washington led Williamston with 16, while James May had 14 and Woody Sadler had 13.

In the girls' game, Williamston jumped out to a 10-4 lead after one period. They increased that to 23-8 in the second quarter and on to 33-18 in the third. Washington outscored the Lady Tigers, 10-6, in the final frame, to no avail.

Karen Oglesby led Williamston with 14 points, while Angie Williams had 12. Glenda Daley and Robin McLean each had ten for Washington.

Williamston returns home to face Plymouth on Friday.

Trinity Nips Mt. Calvary

HOOKERTON — Greg Jones hit a jumper with 30 seconds left and Darryle Wells then stole the ball to help Trinity hold off Mount Calvary, 32-31, Tuesday night in a high school basketball game.

Mt. Calvary led 31-29 with time running out when Jones, who led Trinity with 12 points, hit a jumper to give the visitors a 32-31 lead. Mount Calvary moved the ball up court looking to regain the lead, but Wells stole the ball to preserve the victory.

Mt. Calvary, which was led by Oaks with 16 points, jumped out to a 12-0 lead in the early going before Trinity battled back to within one at halftime, 17-16.

The second half was a see-saw battle. Trinity went up by four at one point, but Mt. Calvary countered to take a one-point lead at 31-29 before Trinity rallied to win.

Randy McGowan had eight blocked shots for Trinity.

Jamesville Girls, Boys Down Bears

BEAR GRASS — Jamesville High School swept a pair of Tobacco Belt basketball games from Bear Grass last night. The Bulls rolled to a 55-36 victory, while the Jamesville girls took a 56-53 overtime contest.

In the boys' game, Bear Grass managed a 10-8 lead after one period, but Jamesville came back to tie it up at 17-17 at the half. In the third period, the Bulls forged into the lead, gaining a 32-28 advantage. Jamesville outscored the Bears, 23-8, in the final quarter to win going away.

Rex Bell led Jamesville with 15 points, while Eric Carmon had 14, Ritchie Ange had 12 and Onwood Jones had 10. Bear Grass was led by Rudy Brown with 12.

Bear Grass also took the early lead in the girls' game, taking a 12-7 margin. Jamesville trimmed that back to 23-20 at halftime, only to see the Bears take command again in the third period. In that frame, The Bears ran out to a 44-32 lead, but were unable to hold it. Jamesville rallied in the fourth period to finally tie it up, 50-50, and then outscored the Bears, 6-3, in the overtime for the win.

Kelly Hardison led Jamesville with 22, while Kim Floyd added 21. Angie Mizelle led the Bears with 26, while Mary Rawls had 14.

Bear Grass travels to Columbia on Friday, while Jamesville is at home to Aurora.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — YELPING WHELP WON'T GET HELP FROM FRANTIC CANINE MOMMY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals I

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Saw A Big Year Of Salad Days

NEW YORK (UPI) — Salad days seem to be all the time, according to statistics showing that the average American adult consumed 67.8 pounds of salad fixings last year, topped off by 12.9 pints of salad dressing.

Going into that huge mixture were an average 27.4 pounds of lettuce, 13.4 pounds of tomatoes, 13.4 pounds of onions, 6.3 pounds of carrots, 4.3 pounds of cucumbers, and 3.6 pounds of green peppers. Oil and vinegar were used for dressing greens nearly 2,000 years ago, but salad dressing in bottles did not make their appearance on market shelves until the 1920s with the introduction of assembly line bottling techniques and the aluminum screw closure that allowed resealing of bottles, according to the Closure Manufacturers Association.

'Dallas' Replaced By '60 Minutes' In Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — "Dallas" was knocked out of first place in the weekly prime-time ratings competition by another CBS stalwart, "60 Minutes," and the network itself grabbed the No. 1 spot from ABC in the race for the week ending Nov. 29, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

It was the first time this season — outside of the two weeks of baseball's World Series — that "Dallas," the top-rated show in prime time last year, failed to win the weekly competition.

The rating for "60 Minutes," the highest-rated prime-time show two seasons ago, was 29.8. Nielsen said that means of all the nation's TV-equipped homes, 29.8 percent saw at least part of the newsmagazine.

In the networks' race, CBS and ABC swapped first place for the fourth consecutive week. The No. 1 network had eight of the 10 highest-rated programs, and compiled an average rating for the period of 19.2 to 17.6 for ABC and 15 for NBC.

The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 19.2 percent of the country's TV homes were watching CBS.

ABC had two Top 10 shows, "Three's Company" in fourth place, "Too Close for Comfort," in 10th. NBC's top-rated show, "Little House on the Prairie," finished 19th.

New series were only moderately successful in the ratings, as they have been all season, though a made-for-TV movie on ABC, "Sizzle," finished 11th, far ahead of NBC's noble competing effort, "Of Mice and Men," in 51st place.

CBS' new "Simon & Simon" finished 31st, and "Fall Guy" on ABC was 33rd. "Father Murphy," on NBC, finished 41st.

Eleven of the 12 lowest-rated programs were episodes from new series or specials. The exception was "NBC Magazine," in 63rd place.

NBC's "Gimme a Break" finished 62nd, with "Making a Living" on ABC 64th. Then, in order, it was, "Darkroom," "Strike Force," "Code Red" and "Open All Night," all on ABC, CBS'

"Jessica Novak," and four NBC programs, "The Osmond Family Special," "Nashville Palace," a movie, "Seal," and an NBC News special report, "The Spies Among Us."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated shows: "60 Minutes," with a rating of 29.8 representing 24.4 million homes, "Dallas," 28.8 or 23.6 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 24.3 or 19.9 million, all CBS; "Three's Company," 23.6 or 19.3 million, ABC; NFL football prime-time rerun, 23.4 or 19.2 million, "The Jeffersons," 23.2 or 19 million, "One Day at a Time," 23.1 or 18.9 million, "Alice," 22.8 or 18.7 million, and "Archie Bunker's Place," 22.6 or 18.5 million, all CBS, and "Too Close for Comfort," 22.5 or 18.4 million, ABC.

The next 11 programs: Movie, "Sizzle," ABC; "Love Boat," ABC, and "M-A-S-H," CBS, tie; "NFL Monday Night Football," Minnesota vs. Atlanta, and "Hart to Hart," both ABC; "Frosty the Snowman" and "Trapper John, M.D.," both CBS; "Laverne and Shirley," ABC; "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, and Movie, "The Muppet Movie," CBS, and "That's Incredible," ABC, tie.

Network Television Offering Week Of Family Fare Films

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Network television is offering three wholesome movies about children and family this week. They aren't typical nuclear families, but they still have the important ingredients. Let's hope the Coalition for Better Television is watching.

These tender TV morsels would have been perfect for the Thanksgiving weekend. But that's when families tend to be entertaining or traveling, and TV viewing is down. Hence, the week after we've gathered around bulging tables to give thanks and while we're getting into the Christmas spirit, TV has several warm-hearted illustrations of what families are supposed to be about.

And they're a far cry from families depicted in nighttime soap operas, like "Dallas" and tonight's "Dynasty," which treat kin more like rival mob families than blood relations. CBS' "Dallas" is this season's top-rated program and ABC's "Dynasty" was No. 8 last week, testament to the popularity of this negative concept of family.

Some other family series are doing well, but they're comedies, like "The Jeffersons" and "One Day at a Time." Dramatic series with a more positive view of the family, like NBC's "Little House on the Prairie," are just not faring as well. That leaves TV to capture the strong family binds in one-shot movies, which the networks do well by building poignant stories from real-life situations.

It's a very successful, emotionally manipulative formula, and it works.

Already, CBS had "The Marva Collins Story" on Tuesday, in which a dedicated Chicago teacher successfully turned slow and learning-disabled pupils into eager students.

Mrs. Collins stressed positive thinking, personal attention and individual pride. Written on the blackboard in the tenement schoolhouse was one of her pet phrases, "Welcome to Success."

Those same words are written on a Florida school blackboard in ABC's Sunday movie, "A Long Way Home," starring Timothy Hutton as Donald, the eldest of three abandoned and separated siblings. Donald's passion for real family turns him against his adopted parents and creates an obsession to find his brother and sister.

"I need them back," he tells his fiancée, Rose. "I want to go home."

The anchor of a real family is often taken for granted, except by those who don't have it. Donald's loss colors his every relationship, including the one with Rose. He fears being abandoned again: "Just don't ever leave me," he says.

On Saturday night, CBS also deals with orphans in "The Children Nobody Wanted." Fred Lehne is Tom Butterfield, a college student who, at the age of 21, became the first bachelor and the youngest single adult to become a legal foster parent in Missouri.

By the movie's end, Butterfield has brought nine children into his home and created a heart-warming family situation that is bound to touch viewers.

The same tug of family is what helps makes tonight's "Love, Sidney" on NBC one of the best new programs of the season. Middle-aged Sidney Shorr (Tony Randall) is resigned to the fact that he will never have a family. In the movie pilot, it was because he was homosexual. In the series, no stated reason has been offered thus far.

Then into his life comes a young woman and her illegitimate daughter. They form a threesome that isn't the conventional kind of family living unit but has all the elements, nonetheless: love, caring, protectiveness.

"Love, Sidney" and this week's three sentimental movies prove that the networks don't have to tear down the family to build good programs.

Concert At School Hoax

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — About 250 students and administrators took their seats after school in the cafeteria in eager anticipation of a rare junior high school concert by country music stars Loretta Lynn and Barbara Mandrell.

They waited and waited, but only after no one showed did they know they had been duped.

The students paid $1 apiece for the show, and school officials even promoted it by sending fliers home to parents.

A long white gown for Miss Lynn hung in a school closet, supposedly put there by Miss Lynn herself during a sneak visit to check out the stage and sound system.

Maxwell Junior High School Principal Dan Lupo said Tuesday that the administration's approval was based on a letter hand-delivered him by a 13-year-old eighth-grade student. It bore signatures purported to be those of the two country music singers, and Lupo said he thought it was genuine.

He said the student, whom he would not identify, said Miss Lynn and Miss Mandrell were willing to do the concert Monday as a favor to her family.

Capt. Kangaroo A Grandfather

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Keeshan, who has educated and amused legions of little children for 26 years as CBS's "Captain Kangaroo," is a grandfather for the first time.

Britton Conroy Keeshan was born Tuesday in Greenwich, Conn., the son of Michael and Lynn Keeshan.

Bob Keeshan has two other children — both daughters.

Educators Conference

WINSTON-SALEM — School administrators from throughout North Carolina will discuss "Crisis Management-Intervention" at the sixth annual conference of the N.C. Association of School Administrators being held in Winston-Salem on Thursday and Friday.

Bishop Kenneth Goodson, currently bishop-in-residence at Duke Divinity School, will be the banquet speaker. Keynote speaker will be Carl E. Annas, corporate group vice president of Burlington Industries Inc.

Dr. Charles Ward of the division of continuing education at East Carolina University and state Rep. Sam Bundy of Pitt County will appear on a seminar, "The Influence of Private Education on Public Education."

Participants in the meetings include superintendents, principals, assistant principals and supervisors in local school systems.

Seminar sessions are designed to improve science and mathematics education, teacher selection, evaluation and reduction-in-force, energy conservation in transportation and other topics.

Kinston High Dinner Theater

KINSTON — The Kinston High School Drama Department will present the musical, "Damn Yankees," on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The musical is a dinner theater presentation and will be presented each evening in the high school cafeteria.

Tickets for the dinner and musical are priced at $10 per person. Reservations in advance are required. They may be made by calling Betty Anderson at 527-7250 or Cathy Swann at 522-1193.

Fall Appeal

What's as crisp and cool as a fall afternoon? A delicious autumn apple. Apples are the world's most widely grown fruit, and the most valuable of all fruits that grow on trees. Although we like to think that apples are as American as apple pie, the first apples to arrive in this hemisphere came over from Europe with the Pilgrims. Now, however, over 2,500 varieties are grown in the U.S. But fewer than 20 of these account for 95% of our production, and nearly half are "red delicious." Although the 1981 crop is not as large as last year's, we've still got nearly 8 billion pounds to tide us over till next fall.

DO YOU KNOW — To what plant family does the apple belong?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Admiral Rickover will retire from the navy after his 82nd birthday.

In New York Recital Friday

NEW YORK — Selma Gokcen, cellist and faculty member of the school of music, East Carolina University, will present a cello recital at 8 p.m. Friday in the Paul Recital Hall at The Juilliard School, Lincoln Center, New York City.

Ms. Gokcen's program will feature music by Haydn, Beethoven, George Crumb, Shostakovich and Paganini. She will be assisted by William Wolfram.

Ms. Gokcen did her undergraduate work at Juilliard between 1972 and 1978 after which she began teaching at ECU. She is on leave from the university to pursue her doctor of musical arts degree at Juilliard and is currently studying with Leonard Rose and Channing Robbins.

donors and emergency needs.

Hearn will never regain sight from a transplant himself, though.

"I'm going to be totally blind," he said. "I have just a tiny bit of shadow vision in one eye. My problem is detached retinas, and they can't do a thing for my eyes. I'm hopeless as far as anything goes."

Nevertheless, Hearn calls the 10,000 mark "terrific" for others and said just helping in the transplant arrangements had been good for him.

Several declarers at the recent World Team Championships in Port Chester, N.Y. had no problem with this technical position.

After an opening bid by West and an overcall by North, South showed strength with a cue-bid of the enemy suit and then bid no trump to show his club stoppers. North, in view of the vulnerability, boldly bid to game.

The lead was always the queen of clubs. Consider the problem from declarer's point of view. Even if he can bring in the spade suit and the diamond finesse wins, there are only eight tricks. The ninth will have to come from a long card in the diamond suit. The danger is that East might gain the lead to play hearts through declarer's queen—an unappealing prospect. Therefore, East has to be kept off lead.

Declarer ducked the opening lead and won the club continuation as East sluffed a spade. A diamond to the queen won. Declarer would dearly have liked to be able to cross to his hand to lead another diamond toward the ace, but entries were inconvenient. If he risked a spade finesse now and it lost, the contract would surely have been defeated two tricks.

Several declarers found the right technical play. At trick four, they led a low diamond from the board. That would win whenever West started with a doubleton king. The chances for that were particularly good because West had already shown up with six clubs.

Now declarer had eight tricks, and he had only to find the queen of spades for a ninth. Since it was obvious East had the longer spades, declarer took the percentage line by leading a spade to the ace and finessing on the way back, and a close contract rolled home.

Vision Fading, He Works For Others

By JAMES WYCKOFF
TUCSON CITIZEN

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The wall calendar next to J. Lester Hearn's complicated array of ham radio equipment here reads Dec. 31, 1978.

Hearn, 67, hasn't much use for the thing. He has been going steadily blind since the 1960s. A shadow of vision is left in one eye.

But recently Hearn was one of the proudest of a select group of amateur radio operators dedicated to preserving sight whenever possible.

That's when the Eye Emergency Radio Network helped arrange its 10,000th transfer from someone who no longer could use a good eye to someone who could.

The network began in 1962 when two Midwest ham operators saw a need for a national radio network that could arrange direct exchanges of eyes between dying donors and eye-injury victims.

Since then, eye preservation has come a long way, to the point where corneas that once had to be transferred from a donor to a recipient within two days can be preserved for a week.

But advanced techniques have not done away with the work conducted by the eye radio network, which continues through ham operators to make exchanges regularly.

"We sure do get a bang out of doing this," Hearn said as he awaited the 10,000th case.

He started with the Tucson branch of the eye radio network in 1966, filling in for a full-time operator. He said he had already been losing his own sight but felt "7 feet tall" working the radio the first evening. The Sunrise Lions Club of Tucson helped get the network going here, and a state Lions Club eye bank has worked with the group.

Every day for 15 years, Hearn has signed on to make contact with other network members. They pass along information about possible

Introducing the Quantum wagon from VW.

At a time when other cars are shrinking, Volkswagen designed the Quantum to have more practical dimensions. There's plenty of room for you and four passengers, something you won't find in most small cars. Plus loads of space for what you're transporting, unlike all the huge cars with the tiny trunks. We invite you to come examine the proportions of the Quantum wagon and to size up its advanced engineering and performance by taking a test drive. That way, you'll be fully able to evaluate just how well the Quantum measures up to your expectations.

Majlis System Permits Saudis To Let Off Steam

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's citizens are unable to vote or form political parties but they can air their grievances face to face with their rulers at an open-door audience known as the Majlis.

Originally a tribal tradition, the Majlis has moved from the tents of Bedouin nomads in the desert to the marble palaces of Saudi Arabia's modern leaders. King Khaled opens the gates of his palace each Monday, but the princes of the kingdom's 18 provinces hold sessions almost daily.

Hundreds of other audiences are held by village headmen, the mayors of the nation's major cities and tribal chieftains. Saudi officials claim the institution is a major source of the kingdom's stability and strength.

"There is no doubt that this system makes the responsible person busy and often tired but we take on this kind of burden because there should be a direct kind of contact between the citizen and the government," Prince Salman, governor of this capital city and surrounding Nejd Province for the past 25 years, said in an interview.

As three large waiting rooms in the palace began to fill up with petitioners for a recent morning Majlis, the 44-year-old half-brother of the king added: "As long as we go out to prayer and have direct contact with the people we are in a good position in this country but if you hear we lose these two things then predict our situation is not good."

Dressed in a flowing, gold-trimmed brown cloak, the prince arose and answered the call to prayers with those who had come to seek his favors before convening his Majlis.

The royal audience was held in a large salon on the second floor of the governor's palace in the bazaar district of the capital across from the main mosque. Petitioners lined up between two columns of royal messengers, wearing bandoliers and carrying ceremonial rifles and gilt-handled swords.

tioner, and in turn received a kiss on the right shoulder in the highly ritualized ceremony.

"About two-thirds of the cases should go to a specific department but they wouldn't be satisfied unless the rulers take care of their cases personally," said an aide to the governor, who translated several of the handwritten petitions that he said average about 100 a day for Prince Salman.

One man asked for financial aid to pay off a debt. A Bedouin asked for a deed to property he claimed had long been in his family. Another asked help in getting birth certificates for his children. A landlord sought help in getting back an apartment that had been locked up by a tenant who fled.

Only one of the dozen letters involved broader social issues: a father sought the prince's help in getting his son out of jail where he was serving a sentence for drunkenness.

Prince Salman studied each request individually while the more than 40 petitioners sat in green-and-white upholstered chairs lining the walls of the salon. Some petitions he dropped into a wastebasket, others were handed to his aides, and a few were given to the sword-carrying messengers known as "khuwi" who took the petitioner to the specified government agency to settle the problem.

Most of the petitioners had the leathery, weathered faces of desert people. Few were under 40 and none were women.

Prince Talal, half-brother of the king and a former minister of economy and finance, said in an interview that the Majlis appeared to be losing some of the vitality it had during the 50-year reign of his father, King Abdul Aziz Ibn Saud, who held traveling Majlises while forging quarrelsome tribes into a unified state.

"Majlis is a basic thing in this family but I would like to say that unfortunately the Majlis does not exist like it did before," said Talal. "There are many reasons. People now are busy with business and money. It is becoming smaller and smaller. But my feeling is that the Majlis has to come back. We have to put the blame on ourselves, too, not on the people, because we have to encourage the people."

In the wake of the siege of the Grand Mosque in Mecca by radical Islamic fundamentalists in November 1979, King Khaled and Crown Prince Fahd put forward a plan to set up a consultative council called a "Majlis al-Shoura" that would act as a quasi-parliament and be made up of appointed deputies. Also proposed was a 200-article document of government by-laws that has been compared to a constitution that would define the process of choosing a king. A third element of the plan was enhancing local government and giving regional officials more authority.

Talal said the plan had been thoroughly reviewed and presented to Fahd, who is the king's heir apparent and in charge of day-to-day affairs as deputy prime minister. Talal suggested it would only be a matter of "two or three months" before the plan is implemented but he said the concept of an elected assembly was still years away.

"Once upon a time when I was in government I thought that elections were the answer but now I don't think it is necessary as a first step. We can have elections one day, maybe after 10 years or so," said Talal, who left the kingdom along with several military officers in 1961. He flew to Egypt after losing a battle within the royal family to turn the monarchy into a more Westernized democracy.

The prince, who described himself as a "liberal," said he now agrees that a step-by-step approach is necessary so that the political system keeps pace with the people. "We are not prepared for this," said Talal, noting that two-thirds of the native population of six million still lives outside urban areas and is mostly Bedouin.

He noted that the late President Anwar Sadat of Egypt allowed opposition groups to form and later was forced to jail dissidents.

"Would you like us to make a political party and then put them in prison?"

Many Lose Their Sleep

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Most Americans don't get enough sleep, say scientists at sleep research laboratories.

In one test, subjects who said they usually sleep no longer than eight hours a night actually slept longer in a lab, says Mary Carskadon, a sleep specialist and researcher at the Stanford University Sleep Disorders Center. In a report to the Washington-based Better Sleep Council, the researcher said the subjects were more alert and less likely to fall asleep during the day after nights of longer sleep.

She said the degree of sleep loss varies from person to person, as does its impact on daily life. Sleepiness in some may cause an unpleasant or uncomfortable feeling, a lack of ability to function at peak or an irritability that the individual may not attribute to sleepiness.

Or, the researcher adds, sleepiness could cause people to nod off repeatedly during the day.

Falling asleep or feeling sleepy during the day may present a significant danger or risk for people in hazardous occupations or for airline pilots and long distance truck or bus drivers.

Researcher Carskadon says not getting enough sleep is probably a result of American lifestyles. It's not that they can't sleep — they may decide to stay up and watch late television shows or read or even stay out late.

See Spontaneity Not Encouraged

NEW YORK (UPI) — Grade schools often tend to stress rigidity and conformity although many experts believe creative thinking is becoming more important in our rapidly changing world, says educator James Borland.

"Spontaneity isn't encouraged, in the interest of discipline," Borland says in an article in the December issue of Parents magazine. He is co-director for Columbia's Center for the Study of Education of the Gifted.

Both Borland and Sarah Zarem, a doctoral candidate at Columbia College, are quoted as saying creativity involves consistent reasoning along with intuitive flashes of insight. The most visible sign of children's creativity is play, they say, because it gives them a chance to work something through with imagination and creativity.

Studies have shown kids who have more solitary time and their own room are, in fact, more creative, said Brian Sutton-Smith, a children's play expert at the University of Pennsylvania.

Doctors Not Practicing

By TSE PUI SHAN
Associated Press Writer
HONG KONG (AP) —
Leung Ying, 47, who in mainland China was a qualified obstetrician, makes her living now in Hong Kong selling noodles — earning $5 a day.

Li Shing, 39, also qualified to practice medicine on the mainland, works as a laborer at a construction site, making $13 a day.

Both served for more than 10 years in Chinese hospitals before coming to Hong Kong in 1974 and 1979 respectively.

They are among about 2,000 China-trained doctors who are not allowed to practice in this British colony because authorities here do not recognize their medical degrees.

Some have gone underground, practicing at home or in remote areas, but increasing numbers have taken up jobs ranging from household maids to building caretakers to earn a living as a result of the Hong Kong government's renewed efforts to crack down on unlicensed doctors.

The Legislative Council enacted a law in July raising the maximum penalty for unregistered doctors to a fine of 50,000 Hong Kong dollars ($8,300) and five years' imprisonment for 1,000 Hong Kong dollars ($165) and three months' prison.

Not all China-trained doctors are barred from practice in Hong Kong. Those who pass a stiff examination on medical knowledge and professional English are allowed to practice after completing an 18-month externship in local hospitals.

Just 213 of the 1,800 candidates have passed the examination since it was introduced four years ago.

Critics say the examination is unfair because too much emphasis is put on English-language ability.

Tsoi Kwok-ying, chairman of three unions representing 2,000 unregistrable doctors, charged that the examination was discriminatory, stressing that practicing doctors here need not have a high standard of English since 98 percent of Hong Kong's population is Chinese. He accused the government of deliberately keeping the failure rate high to safeguard the interests of 3,600 physicians among Hong Kong's 5.1 million people.

David Wong, chairman of the Hong Kong Medical Association, denied Tsoi's allegations and attributed the failure rate to insufficient professional knowledge and low standards of English.

"The system is fair enough," Wong said. "I see no arguments that unregistered doctors are being discriminated against."

Tsoi, himself an unregistered physician, maintained that most China-trained doctors have more than five years of formal medical training and are qualified to practice in Hong Kong.

He emphasized that they are not "barefoot doctors," the name given the million or so rural health workers scattered all over China with only first-aid medical knowledge.

He said about 70 percent of his union members continue to practice illegally despite the threat of heavier fines and longer jail terms.

Most people here are divided on the issue, with some urging a relaxation of the policy and others favoring strict examination rules to maintain high medical standards.

Seventy people were convicted of offenses related to the management of unregistered clinics last year.

Miss Leung, who now sells noodles, is an obstetrician. She was an unlicensed doctor for four years before taking up her present trade. She changed her career only after she was fined 2,000 Hong Kong dollars ($330) and warned of heavier penalties if she continued her practice.

With the renewed clampdown, some people believe many unregistered doctors are likely to follow her footsteps.

Can Relate To Crippled Toys

By MARTIE BARNES
Associated Press Writer
MANOMET, Mass. (AP) —
The elephant has a hearing aid, the cuddly bear an artificial leg and the ordinarily frisky monkey can't get out of his wheelchair.

The animals are toys and their creator, Margaret Gibbons of Lowell, has designed them as a comfort to handicapped youngsters and a learning aid for "able-bodied children."

"It's a good way for getting able-bodied children acquainted with handicaps and the paraphernalia that goes along with them," she said.

Ms. Gibbons is an occupational therapist who works with students in the Plymouth-Carver school system in Manomet and now also stuffs and finishes her eight animal creations with colleague Bonnie Stone, a Malden toymaker. They are marketed under the name "Special Friends."

"If a child can take Bear and play with his false leg... I see the potential of extending it to a real-life situation more possible," she said in an interview at the Indian Brook Elementary School here.

In addition to Elephant, Bear and Monkey, there is Rabbit, who has an artificial arm holding a carrot; Snake, who is paralyzed and rides upon a wheeled and wavy "snakeskate" theoretically controlled with his tongue in the way some real electric wheelchairs are; Penguin, who is blind and carries a walking stick; and Frog, who wears a cast for a broken leg.

"My favorite is Monkey. He's No. 1," said 11-year-old Chris Bell, of Plymouth, a student at Indian Brook. Bell has cerebral palsy and uses a wheelchair as does Monkey, whose legs are sewn together to characterize the tightness and lack of mobility experienced by those with the disease.

Ms. Gibbons conceived of "Special Friends" in 1976 and began making the toys with Ms. Stone in 1977. The idea evolved from Ms. Gibbons' experience with a paralyzed pet squirrel. Considering his disability, she made several contraptions to increase its mobility and in the process, she said, thought others might be able to relate in the same way with toy-animals.

"When I first started putting them out, a lot of adults were offended... because of their fear," she said. "A number of people put me down for doing it. They said how horrible it was, as if I was putting their children down."

She said that parents often don't want to accept that their children are different.

The turning point, for her and her business, she said, came in 1980 at the International Disabled Expo in Chicago.

"A paralyzed veteran came up to me and said 'it's about time there were gimpy toys on the market,'" she said. "I knew right then I was doing the right thing."

Most Likely To Wear Helmets

NORWALK, Calif. (UPI) — Bicyclists most likely to wear safety helmets are men aged 25-34 with a family income of $30,000 or more, according to a recent study done for a major helmet manufacturer.

More than 75 percent of the riders in this group, the Bell survey says, own a bike with 10 or more speeds and 31.7 percent in this group bought a new bike within the past two years.

However, bicyclists in general have been slow to adopt helmets. As of 1980, only one-half of 1 percent of the nation's bikers were wearing them.

Alpine Pilot Likes Risks In Rescuing

By HANNS NEUERBOURG

Associated Press Writer ZERMATT, Switzerland (AP)—Siegfried Stangier is a lowlander who has never climbed the 14,690-foot-high Matterhorn. But he believes he knows the world's most photographed mountain better than any among the 100,000-odd people who have made the ascent since Edward Whymper was the first to reach the top in 1865.

Climbing mountains "does not fascinate" him, he said in an interview. But helping climbers in distress to safety does, because he enjoys the thrill of the "calculated risk, the steady probing of one's limits" in almost 10,000 helicopter flight hours.

The 42-year-old, German-born Stangier, who at the age of 17 failed a high-altitude test and was still a teen-ager when he taught others how to fly Luftwaffe choppers, is No. 1 in the exclusive set of Switzerland's daring Alpine rescue pilots.

He has made 174 life-saving missions, and has 1,106 other mercy flights to his credit since he joined the volunteers of the Swiss Air Rescue Service.

Stangier was the first overseas pilot to win the American "Helicopter Heroism Award."

In a recently published book, "Retter, die von Himmel kommen," Stangier recounts for the first time, and in hair-raising detail, his feats and fears while performing an unpaid job which, as he puts it, carries "a certain degree of danger."

He says he hopes the book will be a warning against recklessness, the cause of most fatal mountain accidents. Stangier has recovered the bodies of 181 dead climbers, transporting them to the morgue in red, rubber-lined bags which are kept on board the rescue helicopters.

He remembers the young American who fell to his death climbing in jeans and tennis shoes. Or the West German lawyer who was not roped to a fellow climber, but survived a fall. Or the skiers who left staked-out slopes in search of new snow, and died under avalanches. Or the Englishman who wanted his 8-year-old son to become the youngest conqueror of the Matterhorn.

Stangier searched in vain for father and son on several of his more than 1,000 flights around the famous mountain where 11 other people also have vanished in recent years. All told, an estimated 400 people have died on the Matterhorn.

Workdays are usually less spectacular for Stangier, who is chief pilot of Air Zermatt, a company whose helicopters fly cement to high-altitude construction sites, serve as ski lifts for well-heeled tourists, haul garbage from mountain lodges and occasionally fly injured cows to veterinarians in the valley.

Even a routine workday can have its hazards, though.

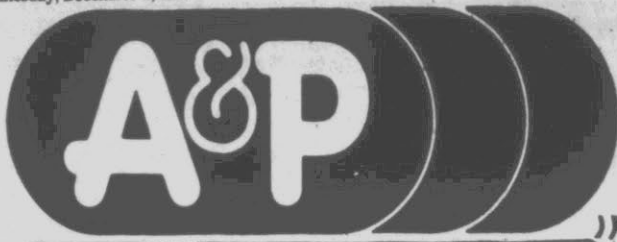

Stangier suffered vertebral fractures recently in his first accident ever. A faulty fuel gauge left the helicopter piloted by a friend without power and the craft plunged 100 feet, crashing near its base.

Stangier says he plans to remain "on the frontline" of rescue flying for another 10 to 15 years, estimating the work carries "a risk factor just below that of a formula-one racing-car driver."

"Almost every year one of the Swiss rescue pilots has had bad luck," he notes in his book. "How many pilots do we have in Switzerland who do our job — 12 to 15? If one applies mathematics he can figure out when it is his turn."

Take Medicine Clearly Marked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Persons planning a trip abroad should keep any medicine they take with them in the original containers with the name of the drug, doctor and pharmacy on each, according to the Health Insurance Association of America.

Business Of Colt Cuts Is Still Alive

By DENISE MEYER
Associated Press Writer
PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Steve Metje, a self-described reformed beef butcher, says the horsemeat business is precarious these days, but his trade is still alive and kicking.

Eight years ago, lines of 200 or more people eager to buy horsemeat stretched around the tiny Southeast Portland market that received national attention as consumers rebelled against then-skyrocketing beef prices.

But beef prices eventually began to tumble, and soon were at least competitive with those for horsemeat. And nowadays, Metje doesn't even open the store at times.

Metje, 33, says inconsistent supplies are his biggest problem, forcing him to close for days at a time, although he sells about 4,000 pounds a week.

"I can't just call someone up and get more," he says. "Butchers in the beef business can just look in the phone book and find at least a page of other suppliers."

Metje says supplies are short because of an overwhelming demand for horsemeat in countries like France, Belgium and Japan, where the variety is accepted food for humans.

Here, he says, the horsemeat industry exists mainly for export trade.

"It's strictly a case of cultural prejudice, and your heart running interference against your logic," Metje says of the problem Americans generally have with eating horsemeat.

He says just the name makes horsemeat tough to swallow.

"There's nothing more lovable than a calf, but the name is 'veal' so you don't think about it," Metje says.

In Europe, horsemeat generally is priced competitively with beef, but Metje says his prices are about half that of U.S. beef.

His horsemeat sirloin tip is $1.79 a pound compared with $3.18 for beef, chuck roast is 89 cents versus $1.78, and round bone roast is $1.29 a pound compared with $2.98 for the same beef cut offered at a local supermarket.

Most of it comes from small horses, since meat from the larger animals is snapped up by the export trade.

"The caloric value is comparable to beef considered on a lean, no-fat basis," says John W. Howder, a veterinarian with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. "It is said to have a low to negative-cholesterol content."

Howder says some hospitals in Europe use horsemeat exclusively for their patients, or prefer it for heart patients because of its leanness.

Metje calls it a "a hormone-free, chemically free, non-adulterated meat."

He says he has "a lot of health-food nuts and a lot of heart patients and diabetics," in addition to many people who know the product from living in Europe. Some of his regular customers come from up to 100 miles away, he says.

All stages of horsemeat packing for human consumption are USDA inspected, says Dr. Helmut Blume, USDA assistant area supervisor.

At livestock auctions, buyers of horses for slaughter often are called "the killers."

Although not all slaughtered horses were pets, John Valterza, a state Department of Agriculture spokesman, says "the 'killer' price generally dictates the price of pleasure horses."

Ronald J. Corn, president of M&R Packing Co. in Hartford, Conn., says his horsemeat all is exported, but he would prefer to persuade Americans that horsemeat is nutritionally better product and a less-expensive source of protein.

Metje says he has received few criticisms of his business from people who are concerned about the humane treatment of horses.

"Every once in a while (I'll get) a crank phone call from kids," he says. "But I have a 100-percent batting average for (of changing the mind of) every person who has heard me out."

Shunning The 'Endangered' List

KINGMAN, Ariz. (AP) — The razorback sucker is dying out, but conservationists trying to revive the breed don't want the fish on the endangered species list, fearing that would be the kiss of death.

"In the razorback, we had the best candidate for listing that we've ever had," said Jerry Burton, an endangered-species biologist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"But if the fish had been federally listed, we would have had a fight on our hands every time we tried to introduce them to new areas."

"Largely because of Tellico Dam and the snail darter, the introduction of endangered species sets bells ringing, and nearly everyone, including federal land-management agencies, are reluctant to consider endangered species because of the political problems they can cause," Burton said.

Environmentalists successfully used the snail darter's status as an endangered species to block the $136 million Tellico Dam project for six years, claiming the Little Tennessee River, which was to be blocked by the dam, was the last habitat of the fish.

Congress and former President Jimmy Carter approved legislation in 1979 to keep the act from applying to the snail darter, and the dam went into operation in November 1979. Since then, the snail darter has been found in other eastern Tennessee streams.

For now, officials have resorted to trying to put the razorback sucker back into waters where it once flourished — the Salt, Gila and Verde rivers of Arizona.

The razorback, known as Xyrauchen texanus, is reddish with a yellow underside, an elongated snout and a cylindrical body. It grows up to 3 feet and 14 pounds, and was common in Arizona and Southern California irrigation canals fed from the Colorado River until the 1940s. Wagonloads were collected from Phoenix canals and a commercial fishery operated Saguaro Lake until 1949.

The razorback's predators, which include large-mouth bass and catfish that have been introduced into the Colorado River, are believed to be the chief reason for the decline.

There were no razorbacks found when the lake was drained in 1966, and Arizona State University zoologist W.L. Minckley says the species has been reduced to a scattered few in Southwestern waters.

The only concentration of the fish appears to be in Lake Mohave, a man-made lake created in 1950-52. But no razorback offspring have been found there recently, Minckley said.

More than 90 percent of the razorbacks in Lake Mohave are blind in at least one eye, and 4 percent have external tumors that signal old age, according to statistics compiled by Minckley.

"It's like having a bunch of 80-year-old people around," Burton said.

Faced with the possibility that razorbacks would die out in five years, federal and state biologists teamed with Arizona State University researchers to net 136 razorbacks from Lake Mohave in January and send them as brood stock to a national fish hatchery in Dexter, N.M.

A total of 16,000 fry since have been reintroduced to the Salt, Gila and Verde, but no one will know until they mature if they will reproduce in the wild.

The brood stock at the hatchery had been dying off slowly, and the conservationists returned to Lake Mohave last week to net another 70 brood stock in a four-day capture.

Their goal is to produce 100,000 razorbacks at Dexter for the next 10 years, so that 1 million eventually will be reintroduced in Arizona and surrounding states.

Meal Deal By Chicago Airline

CHICAGO, Ill. (UPI) — The Chicago-based Midway Airlines, admitting that you can't mass produce gourmet meals in advance, is offering passengers what it calls The Better Meal Deal.

According to president Gordon Linkon, passengers who pay full coach fare until next April on flights between Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Minneapolis-St. Paul, Tampa and Washington, D.C., will get a $60 check for a meal of his choice at a restaurant of his choice in any one of the cities. If he flies round trip between Chicago and the other cities, he will get a check for $120, Linkon said.

Researcher Collecting Names Of Lakes Ships

CLEVELAND (AP) — When it comes to Great Lakes ships, what's in a name is not always as simple as the letters painted on their massive bows.

That's why John O. Greenwood's effort to chronicle the names of lake ships has kept him busy for the past 11 years.

"Sometimes I feel like a detective," said the assistant vice president of Pickands Mather & Co., which runs a fleet of 10 lake carriers that haul iron ore, coal and other commodities over the lakes.

He does most of the work at nights and on weekends.

Through Freshwater Press Inc. here, Greenwood publishes a series of books called "Namesakes of the Lakes." The latest volume covers the period 1956-1980.

Greenwood's research takes him to marine museums, libraries, historical societies, families, firms, and even graveyards.

He said Lakeview Cemetery in Cleveland had been especially useful in helping him pin down a deceased person's middle name, dates of birth and death.

The recent trend of naming lake carriers after steel-company executives was not always in vogue, Greenwood said. Some ships were named after Indian tribes, mothers, sons or daughters of ship owners, and cities and towns where iron mines were found. One Canadian lumberman even named his boat after his dog, Jed, who outlived the vessel, he added.

And some names are like puzzles, being amalgams of letters of other names.

Greenwood's publishing firm also puts out a yearly "Greenwood's Guide to Great Lakes Shipping," a compendium of facts that takes him on at least one extensive trip through the lakes each year. Viewing the docks, ships, cargoes, storage piles and other facilities is what got Greenwood started in researching the names.

His interest, however, goes back to his childhood summers in Minnesota, where his family had a cottage on the lake. From the shore, he would watch the silhouettes of ships passing by.

In addition, he worked as a business manager here for Cargill, the large grain concern, and made many contacts with shipping officials.

Grain, however, is no longer the dominant trade on the lakes. Prominent in the 19th century, it gradually gave way to lumber, then to coal, and now to iron ore, Greenwood noted.

The next volume of "Namesakes" will cover the period from 1900-1930. But Greenwood says he probably can't go farther back than that, as the historical record gets dimmer. To research ships of the early part of the 20th century, he says he picks the memories of people who remember facts about their grandparents or great grandparents.

A Blacksmith Still Is Needed

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
MONROE, N.C. (AP) — When Todd Taylor and Dave Varner decided to go into business together, they took a step back into the past to forge their future.

The two men left lucrative careers to start up the Old Time Blacksmith Shop near the Mecklenburg County town of Monroe. After seven weeks of standing over a blazing forge, the men said they are enjoying their new line of business.

"It's a refreshing kind of life," Varner said. "We just got to thinking there had to be something more to life, something that would get us back to the basics. Well, we found it, and we love it."

Varner, 34, spent six years at Charlotte Memorial Hospital as a respiratory therapist. Taylor, 41, left an executive position at PCA International, a chemical company.

Varner handles the business end of the shop, while Taylor works the hardware. The two invested about $5,000 in the operation, including rental of the building.

Stepping into the shop is like walking into an Old West scene. Taylor, wearing leather chaps and bluejeans, heats a steel rod to glowing red over the coal-fired forge and begins pounding it into a hook with a 4-pound sledgehammer on the anvil.

Varner, a burly, bearded man in blue jeans and boots, greets visitors inside the rough-hewn wood lobby. Black wrought-iron fireplace sets, shovels and other tools stand against the wall.

Taylor said he began making fireplace sets several years ago when a flimsy store-bought poker fell apart as he tried to punch up his fire at home. "I just went out to the anvil and made one that I knew wouldn't tear up," he said.

"So far, most of our business has come from repairs," Varner added. "But what we're really here for is to make things from other people's ideas, to have them tell us what they want and we'll make it."

Taylor, who worked his way through the University of Utah shoeing horses, spends Saturdays shoeing local horses. He has diploma from the Western School of Horseshoeing in Phoenix, where he studied corrective shoeing for horses with bad legs.

The shop has stalls where owners can leave their horses overnight for shoeing.

Meanwhile, the men said the 2-month-old business is off to a good start. They have orders for all types of tools, and they have representatives selling their wares in several cities across the country.

They unconditionally guarantee every piece they make.

"We don't have any urge to expand a lot or make a lot of things in a hurry," Varner said. "What we want to do is make quality lasting items, build up our reputation and have a good time with what we're doing along the way."

Navy Submarine Radio System Again Stirs Debate

By P.B. SEYMOUR
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — In the name of national defense, Patricia Holter gave the government five weeks of her life to undergo X-rays, blood tests, eye exams, psychological studies and other health research.

One week each year from 1970 to 1974, she traveled to Navy hospitals in Illinois and Florida, where doctors studied her to determine whether the extremely low frequency radio transmissions originating in a simple metal building near her Clam Lake, Wis., home were affecting her health.

The building is in what might seem an unlikely place for a Navy outpost: 1,000 feet above sea level and 800 miles from the Atlantic Ocean.

It is part of the Navy's controversial Project ELF, a proposed $230 million communications system designed to get messages to nuclear submarines operating deep at sea by taking advantage of transmission properties of bedrock.

After a two-year moratorium on transmissions ordered by President Carter, the Navy has resumed operations at the test site run by GTE Sylvania Corp. President Reagan is asking Congress for money to complete the 28-mile antenna and to connect it with a 56-mile grid in Michigan's Escanaba River State Forest.

Those actions have revived a longstanding debate over the merits and risks of Project ELF, which, when first proposed in 1958 as Project Sanguine, was to be a 6,600-mile network of buried cable — 41 percent of the area of Wisconsin.

Last April, in an advisory referendum in Ashland County, home of the Navy transmitter, Project ELF was narrowly endorsed by its neighbors. But Upper Michigan voters have rejected the project in similar referenda.

Among the objections are claims that Project ELF's radio waves endanger plants and animals, perhaps attacking the nervous system, that the system is vulnerable to sabotage, and unresolved doubts about whether Project ELF will work as well as the Navy says.

At the urging of Wisconsin and Michigan members, the House rejected an initial $34.9 million appropriation on Nov. 18. The Senate Appropriations Committee has recommended funding, although no money has been provided.

The Navy, whose tests included raising a Hereford bull named Sylvester at the Clam Lake test site, says its studies have disproved any health concerns.

"We've done all the research we can. Flora, fauna and animals; there is no effect. It doesn't even melt the snow," said Rear Adm. Bruce Newell, a Navy chief of communications.

Mrs. Holter, an officer in Citizens for ELF, concurs. "The only thing they found wrong was that I was pretty sloppy in my eating habits," she said of her tests. "I was eating too much fatty stuff."

Navy officials and defense scientists have said for years that they are concerned the present system for communicating with missile-firing and attack submarines at sea makes them vulnerable to attack.

The Navy currently uses very low frequency signals relayed by aircraft to communicate with these submarines, which must trail buoyed aerials near the surface to receive messages.

This system is vulnerable in time of war, because it is easier for an enemy to detect and because nuclear blasts could charge the atmosphere with high-energy particles disrupting VLF signals and missile guidance, the Navy says.

The ELF system would take advantage of the fact that the lower the frequency of radio waves, the deeper they can penetrate the ocean. With Project ELF, nuclear submarines could operate at safe depths and still communicate with land-based commanders.

Extremely low frequency wave lengths are 2,500 miles long. Their transmission ordinarily would require an antenna hundreds of miles long, but scientists have shown that bedrock can be used to form part of the ELF antenna.

Electrodes bored into the granite of the Laurentian Shield at the ends of the Project ELF antenna — cable strung on 40-foot utility poles — transmit current, which in turn uses the bedrock as part of the antenna loop. The signals, if given enough power, can radiate worldwide.

Several submarines already have receivers and computers to handle the coded messages. The first to get a Clam Lake signal was the USS Stonewall Jackson in July 1976.

ELF critics say its exposed cable antenna, running through the forest, is vulnerable to sabotage, something project manager James Barron does not refute. "The system is highly vulnerable," he said. "But it is very easy to repair in a few hours. It is just like a utility company repairing a power line."

More worrisome to opponents is the system's vulnerability to another kind of attack — nuclear. U.S. Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says ELF would make northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan first-strike targets if the Soviets launched a nuclear attack.

Indeed, the Chief of Naval Operations, Adm. Thomas B. Hayward, expressed doubt about Project ELF's usefulness last March, before Reagan endorsed the project. Hayward cited its cost and inability to survive a nuclear attack.

U.S. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., a member of the House Armed Services Committee, and Rep. Robert Davis, R-Mich., say the Pentagon should work on a technologically more secure system, including laser communications beamed from satellites.

The laser idea is being researched, said the Navy's Rear Adm. Newell, but it would not be available until the 1990s at the earliest — if it works.

Sort Of Peace Movement In East Germany

By ERIC WAHA

Associated Press Writer
BERLIN (AP) — Communist authorities in East Berlin are making clear they will not tolerate the growth of a Lutheran Church-backed "peace movement" which seeks to establish an alternative social service corps for East Germany's conscientious objectors.

The Communist Party newspaper Neues Deutschland has branded proposals for an alternative service, in which young men could serve tours of duty in hospitals, schools or other public jobs, as "anti-socialist" and "unconstitutional."

"The enemy has no chance to foil the necessary military strengthening of socialism with such phrases as a 'social peace service,'" Werner Walde, a candidate member of the ruling Politburo told a Central Committee meeting last month.

Walde, whose remarks were published in Neues Deutschland, added that such calls were considered anti-state activity "regardless of who may call for such actions."

His remark clearly referred to activities of East Germany's Evangelical (Lutheran) Church, which has taken up the cause on behalf of disaffected youth who do not want to serve in the army. The Protestant group is the largest religious organization in East Germany, a country of 17 million people.

The idea of such an alternative service, modeled after one in effect in West Germany since 1969, did not originate with the church but came instead from a group of young people in the Dresden area last spring.

They began petitioning both state and party organizations and the church hierarchy, arguing that it was a religious duty of Christians to do all they could to avoid war.

Responding to the appeals, many Protestant pastors began using the pulpits to express concern about the chances of nuclear war and to urge parishioners to work for peace.

Some have called for reductions in military arsenals not only in the West but in the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact. They have also complained about the degree of militarization in East Germany, where soldiers in uniform are common sights in shops, stores, restaurants and on the streets.

Under the current East German system, men 18 to 25 years old are subject to the draft for 18-month tours in the National People's Army.

Those who do not wish to bear arms can volunteer for military construction brigades. Some refugees from East Germany claim those who join the construction units face job discrimination later in life.

Although no social service program exists, human rights groups in West Berlin claim some 4,500 East Germans have already applied to serve in the proposed alternative service, or "friedensdienst."

Church involvement in the issue has placed a severe strain on relations with the state, which had been improving steadily since the Stalinist era of the 1950s.

Under a 10-year-old agreement, the church and state acknowledge each other's role in society. The church in turn avoids anti-Communist political activity.

Regime sensitivity to the church's role in the "peace movement" prompted authorities to bar Western journalists from recent Protestant church synods where the issue was discussed.

Although the focus of the issue has centered on the alternative service plan, the churches also have become more critical of other aspects of militarism.

The synod of the Protestant church of Saxony at Magdeburg adopted a resolution recently complaining of "growing militarization of our lives" starting in kindergartens.

East Germany's state-controlled press has remained silent about the issue except for Walde's speech.

The stern reaction from the authorities is ironic, considering the fact that the regime here lavishes praise on pacifists in Western Europe and never misses an opportunity to declare opposition to the "war plans of NATO."

Commentators maintain no such campaigns are necessary in East Germany, claiming that the Communist Party and government are champions of peace and disarmament.

"Nobody here needs to demonstrate in the streets (for peace) because everybody knows that our state, just as the citizens, is in favor of peace and disarmament," said a television commentator recently.

Report Few Unadoptable

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI) — The American Academy of Pediatrics insisted in a newly published policy statement that "almost no child is truly unadoptable" and stated special provisions to be followed when children with "special needs" are candidates for adoption.

In this category, the Academy listed school-aged children, of mixed or minority heritage, mentally, physically or emotionally handicapped; or brothers and sisters who need to be placed together.

The Academy notes, "Although many couples still want to adopt a newborn infant, many other couples are opening their homes to 'hard to place' children."

One arrangement that has proved successful, it said, is when a family which has a member with a handicap chooses a child with a similar special need. It said adoptive parents also should be made aware of organizations and resources available to help them, and to have a pediatrician familiar with community resources, agencies and state and federal regulations which will help the child receive maximum training and support.

One drawback to adopting such children has been the expense of providing needed special medical care, but the Academy points out some states now provide financial aid to help such parents.

Supreme Court Today Joining Computer Era At Full Speed

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is spending $1 million to join the computer age.

And for the first time ever, the "law of the land" is being fashioned on word processors, committed to the printed page by a kind of computerized publishing house.

Law clerks, secretaries and even two of the nine justices have computerized their work habits as part of a move the court expects to help speed its considerable paper flow.

One of the nation's most tradition-bound institutions now features its own computer nerve center. Last summer, 65 word processing terminals seemingly sprouted like gleaming white toadstools throughout the justices' chambers and other offices within the marble temple on Capitol Hill.

bined word processing with electronic typesetting.

Supreme Court opinions — together with law clerk memoranda, opinion drafts, headnotes, speech texts and correspondence — now are composed on word processors. The opinions are published in final form by electronically transferring the information to typesetting computers.

"We know we are at the front edge of the technology here," said James Donovan, the court's director of data systems.

The decision to computerize was made in 1978. After money was appropriated by Congress, the court contracted with Atex Inc. of Bedford, Mass., to design the computer system it wanted.

That system now is in full operation. But when it came to each justice deciding whether to abandon dictaphone or pen and legal pad, the split apparently was 7-2.

Only Justices John Paul

Stevens and Byron R. White, who used to do his composing on a typewriter, are using word processors to mete out majority rulings or detail dissenting views.

Each of the court's 32 law clerks and each of the justices' secretaries have their own word processor terminals — an average of six in each justice's chamber.

The court's decision-making has remained a zealously secretive process — aided by "secure passwords" and differing levels of computer access.

"It's up to each justice to determine who in what chamber has what access," Donovan said.

Each word processor user has his or her own coded identification and passwords for "program" entry. Some identifications allow broader entry than others. If someone seeks access not granted by the personal code, an alarm sounds in computer control, a combination-locked room off limits even to most court employees, and Donovan's employees investigate.

The cost of the computerization is expected to be offset by future "cost avoidance," Donovan said. For example, a group of Government Printing Office printers who for years have manned the court's basement print shop will be released sometime next year. An end to the court's contract with the GPO will save money.

It is anticipated that computers will allow the court to cope with its increasing workload without hiring additional employees. And even the computerized typesetter's ability to print on both sides of a sheet of paper is expected to yield savings in paper costs.

Campaigns In Mexico Help Towns

By CONCEPCION
BADILLO

Associated Press Writer
APATZINGAN, Mexico
(AP) — Until the kickoff of Mexico's presidential election campaign, the 60,000 people of this poor cotton-growing town lived in obscurity.

Then suddenly they had a federal project worth $1.6 million — twice the town's budget. In seven days 130 men built a 4,265-foot airstrip and a small terminal building. The road running to the main plaza was smoothed out and lane lines repainted.

Finally, on Oct. 14, each worker in the town and surrounding villages was given a tortilla lunch, a sun visor, the equivalent of $8, a day off from work and a truck ride to the plaza. There they were handed banners proclaiming solidarity with the stocky visitor responsible for the sudden largess.

His name was Miguel de la Madrid and, until his Sept. 25 nomination by the long-ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party as its presidential candidate, few in Apatzingan had heard of him. But here he was, promising "justice, equality and social advance" in a town where half the children are listed as suffering from intestinal diseases and most families lack running water and electricity.

The scene will be repeated in dozens of cities and towns across Mexico over the next eight months as de la Madrid, a career bureaucrat with no previous political experience, goes out to meet the people before his certain election next July to lead them until 1988.

It is a ritual played out every six years in Mexico. After months of infighting among party rivals, the incumbent president chooses a successor and the party, unbeaten in national elections in its 52 years, unites around him.

This campaign is expected to be livelier than past ones. The conservative National Action Party, which stayed out of the 1976 race, has nominated a businessman, Pablo Emilio Madero, to oppose de la Madrid, and a coalition of three leftist groups, including the Communists, are expected to unite around a single candidate next month.

Although his victory is a foregone conclusion, de la Madrid is undertaking a grueling campaign to build an image as a politician and assert his control over the party as the party reasserts its grip on the country.

De la Madrid's two-hour appearance in Apatzingan showed the party's vast electoral machinery at work in a town where its influence has been slipping. To some here, it raised hope in the candidate's promise to spread around Mexico's vast new oil wealth.

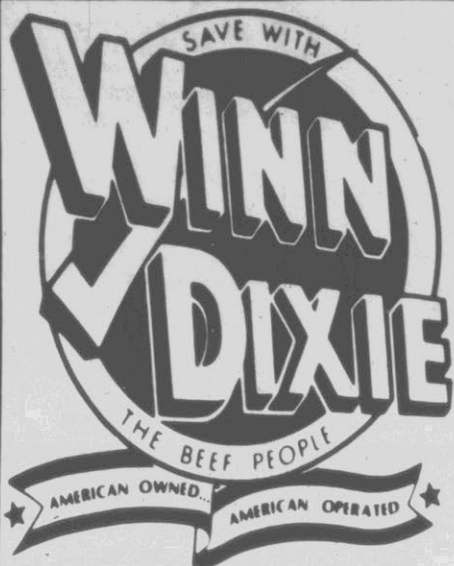

"Now we have the support to rise out of backwardness," Mayor Ramon Aguiano Estrada, who wants federal aid for street lights, a water system, a slaughterhouse, a bus terminal and a central market. "I am sure de la Madrid will help us."

The candidate chose to kick off his formal campaign in Apatzingan, 300 miles west of Mexico City, because it is the birthplace of Mexico's first constitution. In order for him to fly here, the federal government built the airstrip.

For years the town had only enough money to pay its workers and none for public works. Its fortunes declined after 1964, when synthetics ended a cotton boom and few new industries took up the slack. Much of its revenue came from licensing fees paid by 457 saloons and 80 houses of prostitution, until the state governor shut them all down last year.

With merchants of such essentials as rice and sugar living in luxury, and 40 percent of the workers earning less than the $8.50 daily minimum wage, leftist parties have gained support. Communist candidate Daniel Sanchez Perez lost last year's mayoral race by 920 votes amid charges of fraud against the government.

Computer Is Applied To Litterbugs

SINGAPORE (AP) — Superclean Singapore is throwing computers into its war against chronic litterbugs.

A 13-year clean-up campaign has brightened this island republic, but hardened litterbugs still lurk despite fines and court appearances.

"Records on litterings of offenses in 1980 alone revealed that there were 135 repeat offenders," said Teo Boo Tech, assistant commissioner of public health in the Ministry of Environment. "This shows that it is difficult for people to change their habits."

Writing in The Mirror, publication of the Ministry of Culture, Teo said: "The ministry plans to use computers to overcome tedious clerical work and, when implemented, information on recurring offenders can be quickly ferreted out. Such cases would then be singled out to the magistrate for deterrent action."

Few other nations chase litterbugs as relentlessly or study them as closely as Singapore. For example, Teo reported, women are less likely to litter than men.

"They prefer to use their handbags to contain litter in order to avoid the embarrassment of being apprehended by the law and having to attend court."

He said a special study of 850 cases showed that 75 percent of litterbugs were between the ages of 21 and 50, but only 3 percent were women.

Last year 8,034 people were prosecuted for littering roads and public places with cigarette butts, paper, fruit peelings and plastic drink containers. Fines imposed by the courts amounted to 376,000 Singapore dollars the equivalent of $180,769 in U.S. currency.

The Keep-Singapore-Clean drive that began in 1968 has produced sparkling results. What once was regarded as one of the filthiest cities in Asia has been scrubbed, trimmed, painted, landscaped, decorated, beautified and made almost litter-free. Almost.

The change seems most impressive to returning visitors who remember the old sights and smells. Generations of Singaporeans dumped their rubbish into streets, vacant lots or the harbor.

Singapore's growing population — 2.4 million people live in an area the size of El Paso, Tex., which has a population of about 450,000 — produced ever larger piles of garbage. Indiscriminate trash disposal and industrial pollution added to the mess and a tropical climate provided ideal conditions for the breeding of disease-carrying insects and bacteria.

The government of Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, Singapore's leader since 1963, gave top priority to the Health Ministry's campaign for a cleaner, greener city.

There were competitions for the cleanest factory. Cash prizes and commendations were awarded the most beautiful gasoline stations. Schools held poster contests. Newspapers gave prominent play to clean-up stories. Educational films were screened on television and spot announcements broadcast regularly by the radio. Car-bumper stickers and billboards, placards and posters pushed the message.

"Educational programs are on-going in schools, organizations and community centers," Teo wrote in The Mirror. "In 1980 the ministry held talks and film shows at 15 community centers to sustain its efforts to promote an anti-littering way of life. Persuasion and enforcement are also being continued," Teo wrote.

Main streets, traffic circles and parks seem virtually spotless. The 5,500 litter baskets are in place. So are signs in English, Mandarin, Tamil and Malay warning of a possible fine of $240 for littering. However, the heaviest fine imposed so far was $77.

Some critics say that while the streets may have less clutter, the reverse is true in court where each and every person charged with littering must appear. Some lawyers contend that prosecuting thousands of litterbugs each year has helped cause a backlog of more serious cases.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Newborn Can Contract Mother's VD

Is it really true that a newborn infant can contract a venereal disease from its mother? — Mr. P.T., R.I.

Dear Mr. T.:

Unfortunately this is true and, sadly, it happens more often than it should. Many children have paid a lifetime penalty for the syphilis they acquired from their parents.

Congenital syphilitic birth defects are very common when syphilis in a parent is unrecognized, untreated and uncured. The frequency of these birth defects is high.

Today routine blood studies of the mother during pregnancy and childbirth will pick up syphilitic activity if it is present. Active anti-syphilitic treatment of the mother and the child offers some hope that syphilitic birth defects may possibly be avoided.

Newborn infants can have their eyes affected by the germ that causes gonorrhea if bacteria is harbored in the vaginal tract or birth canal. It is for this reason that each newborn child has the eyes carefully washed out with an antibiotic solution to prevent gonorrheal and other bacterial infections.

My uncle was put in a "hyperbaric" chamber. What kind of a machine is this? — Miss J.B., La.

Dear Miss B.: A hyperbaric chamber is one of the great new advances of modern medicine. It is a large, completely sealed room which is kept under great pressure.

Patients with gangrene, with carbon monoxide poisoning, and with certain lung conditions have been kept alive by being placed in a hyperbaric room.

It is even possible to perform certain types of surgery in such chambers. Some germs which grow in the absence of air and oxygen (anaerobic bacteria) have previously been devastating and often caused death. Gas gangrene cases that formerly did not respond to antibiotics alone are now being treated and cured in hyperbaric chambers.

Not all hospitals have these complex rooms. The U.S. Army, Navy and Air Force have been most cooperative in quickly transporting patients to areas where such hyperbaric chambers are available.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Most large and relatively-large cities now have a doctor's emergency service. If your own doctor is not immediately available in an emergency, it is a great source of comfort to know that such a doctor can always be contacted.

Emergency rooms in hospitals are practicing a brand of medicine that is excellent, reliable and under constant medical supervision.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 3, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a day when you would be wise to concentrate your efforts on accepted and proven means by which to advance in your line of endeavor. Steer clear of impulsive actions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Higher-ups may appear to be too demanding today, so do only what is feasible and still show loyalty. Be logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have new ideas but they need more study before you put them in motion. Show increased devotion to loved one.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make certain to keep any promises made to others. Use courtesy if an associate happens to be in a bad mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You may feel a little uncertain of an associate, but if you carry through with your end, all will be fine.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Make sure you handle your duties in a most efficient way and make a fine impression on co-workers. Take it easy tonight.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can accomplish a great deal at work today. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials later in the day.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't be upset if a family member is acting oddly, but try to find out the reason, and then act intelligently to improve the situation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Attend to most important duties early in the day and take any delays in stride. Evening is fine for planning the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make plans to have a more affluent position in the future, but be sure you consider all the pitfalls.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure you know what you want before taking positive action. Attend the social and relieve pent-up emotions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Study the many opportunities around you and find out how you can make the most of them. Maintain a cheerful manner.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Sidestep a person who likes to brag and spend more time with one who is practical and honest. Strive for personal aims.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those youngsters who should be given the right religious and ethical training to curb any inclination to do things the wrong way. The good things in this chart can be easily attained.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Parenting For Young

NEW YORK (UPI) — Noting that 20 percent of all American babies are born to teenage mothers, 80 percent of high school home economics teachers reported in a recent survey that their schools offer courses in parenting as a regular part of the curriculum.

Ninety-seven percent of the teachers thought their schools should have such courses in the poll conducted for the Mead Johnson Co.'s Nutritional Division at a recent annual meeting of the American Home Economic Association in Atlantic City, N.J. The convention was attended by more than 3,000 home economists from all 50 states.

Other poll results: 74 percent of the teachers said the parenting courses are favorites with the students; 96 pct. said the courses were more effective than "health" courses taught 15 years; almost half thought their students consider ages 20-22 the best years to have a first child; 65 pct. thought this ideal age had risen compared with views of 15 years ago; 64 pct. said their students feel a mother with a very young child should work outside the home only if it is an economic necessity.

Jorge Luis Borges Discourses On Life And Death

THE DAILY REFLECTOR, GREENVILLE, N.C. — WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1981

By DOUGLAS GRANT MINE
Associated Press Writer
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Jorge Luis Borges, Latin America's most renowned living writer, is dreaming away the last years of his life and waiting to be "saved by the nothingness" of death.

The 82-year-old storyteller, his sightless blue-gray eyes appearing to smile at his own wit, talked of life and the end of it, his work, politics, Argentina and the Nobel Prize in a recent interview.

"I'm old, I'm blind, a very lazy man dreaming away my life," he said, sinking into an overstuffed armchair in the book-lined living room of his modest apartment. "Even so, not a day passes that I don't spend a moment in paradise, perhaps a few moments."

He is currently working, in collaboration with his secretary Maria Kodama, on a book of essays on Dante, the translation into Spanish of the 17th century German mystic Angelus Silesius and a collection of short stories he intends to call "The Memory of Shakespeare."

The eclectic scholar, a student of humanities ranging from Buddhist philosophy to Norse language and mythology, recalled a line from a medieval English poem he favors. Speaking of the grave, he quoted in his perfect English: "Doorless is that house and dark it is within."

"I think of death as a great hope," he said. "I hope to be wiped out, utterly forgotten, saved by nothingness."

And his literary legacy — 35 volumes of poetry and short stories translated into more than 20 languages?

"A few jottings that will be forgotten."

Borges has been a nominee for the Nobel Prize for literature every year since 1963, but said he has given up hope of winning it.

"The tradition has been established of not awarding me the prize, and traditions have to be respected," he said.

Called "a jeweler of words" by critics, Borges has a modest opinion of his own work.

"Maybe I have attained, not a book, but perhaps several pages, several lines, that are not worthy of oblivion. But I do not think I am worthy of a prize given to Rudyard Kipling, George Bernard Shaw and William Faulkner," he said.

Borges describes himself as an anarchist with no interest whatsoever in politics. Of the generals who have run this country of 27 million people since a 1976 coup he said, "I don't suppose they are too competent, but I think they are well meaning."

He said contemporary things cannot be known and stated proudly that, even before going blind in 1956, he never read a newspaper. But he has been brought up to date on Argentina's current economic woes, including triple-digit inflation and rising unemployment.

"The country is in a bad way and nobody knows why. Perhaps the reason is ethical. Maybe ethically we are nowhere: cheating, bribing and lying. But I have no solutions whatever to offer. Elections would be a disaster."

Borges shares the opinion of democracy held by 19th century Scottish philosopher Thomas Carlyle, who said, "Democracy is chaos provided by means of ballot boxes."

"Democracy is an evil," said Borges. "Why should every man meddle in politics?"

He has bitter memories of Argentine populist governments presided over by Juan Domingo Peron, who in 1946 "promoted" Borges from director of the municipal library to inspector of chickens in Buenos Aires markets.

Borges said the vigilance the military government exercises over what Argentines read and see is not necessarily a bad thing. "Censorship is better than utter license," he declared, pointing to the pornography that abounds in freer societies.

He talked with pride of his military ancestors who fought in Argentina's war of independence against Spain and the wars against Indians as the country was opened to settlement by European immigrants.

"But today I am a pacifist," he said. "I suppose some wars can be justified, but if you admit that a war may be justified, the world will find reasons to justify any war."

He continued: "The idea that the world should be divided into different countries is a fatal mistake. It makes for wars, discord and hatred. I think of myself as the Stoics did, cosmopolitan. I think of Austin, Texas, the same way I do of Buenos Aires, or Montevideo, Geneva or Edinburgh. I am a citizen of the world."

He is planning to travel to New Orleans in January to receive an honorary doctorate from Tulane University, to go with those he has received from, among others, Harvard, Columbia, the Sorbonne and Oxford.

Traveling is one of the joys of Borges' life. He said he was "dazzled" by Japan when visiting that country recently, and he intends to visit India and China before retiring to that doorless, dark house of the old English poem.

"I stand in no fear of hell and no hope of heaven," said Borges, an agnostic.

The writer, who married at the age of 60 but separated from his wife 10 years later, said he is not sad he will leave no descendants. But he reflected on what it is his unborn sons are missing.

"Life may be awful. But it may be lovely also. Why on earth omit the spirits of living since it is so interesting, though it may be painful?," he asked.

JORGE LUIS BORGES

Editing Error Only Natural

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kenneth Johnson says that when you're putting together a 1,396-page book, it's only natural that a few mistakes might creep in — such as misspelling President Reagan's name.

Johnson is the editor of the 1982 edition of Missouri's official state manual, which dropped the first "a" in the president's name, showing it as "Regan." Johnson said with the thousands of facts, figures and names that go into the book, "an occasional error is almost impossible to avoid."

Johnson said he and five staff members were operating under a reduced budget this year. The Missouri General Assembly appropriated $400,000 for the book, but because of a state budget crunch, the manual was produced for $350,000, he said.

Reagan wasn't the only victim of an editing error. The hard-back manual also lists Missouri Democratic State Party Chairman Thomas Guilfoil as a "national committeewoman."

Holler 'Mason' If Help Needed

AURORA, Utah (AP) — In Aurora, it's easy to find someone in city government if you need help. Just yell "Mason!" and most city officials will answer.

Mayor Marvin Mason is about to leave office, to be replaced by Mayor-elect Larry Cosby, who takes over Jan. 1.

Meanwhile, Allen Mason and Wendall Mason were elected to city council seats in the November election.

Since then, state officials declared Aurora a third class city and as such, it is entitled to another councilman.

Guess who got the appointment?

Versel Mason, Wendall's son, Ferrald, said his father and the rest of the city government Masons are related, "but not very closely." He didn't know the exact relationship.

Aurora, population 500, is 140 miles south of Salt Lake City in central Utah.
