Burney Tucker New Pitt Bd. Chairman

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Burney Tucker of Winterville, vice-chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners for the past year, was elected chairman of the board this morning during the annual reorganization of the board.

Tucker, a member of the board for the past 10 years, replaces Bruce Strickland. Charles Gaskins was elected vice-chairman, for 1981-82.

Commissioners gave their approval to a request by Pitt County Memorial Hospital to use about one acre of land dedicated to the county Mental Health Center for the location of a two-story building to house the hospital business offices now located on Memorial Drive, and to provide space for educational programs at the medical facility.

The Area Mental Health board has given it's approval of the project.

Commissioners today also approved a resolution approving the issuance of $575,000 in industrial revenue bonds for the Hexagon Corp. in Farmville, and passed a resolution approving the application for up to $3 million in industrial revenue bonds for a planned expansion of Eaton Corp. in Greenville.

County attorney Bill Watson said the proposed Eaton expansion is expected to provide 590 jobs by the end of 1984, with an average weekly wage by the end of 1984 averaging $392.

The expansion, he said, will provide space for assembly and storage of materials.

The Eaton application will be made to the N.C. Department of Commerce for approval.

The board also approved a resolution supporting toll-free telephone service from all Pitt County municipalities to and from Greenville.

Bill Clark, chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, said lack of support from some municipalities made a metropolital system, under which all municipalities in the county would have toll-free service within the county, impractical.

However, he said toll-free service between Grifton, Fountain and Greenville, and between Ayden and Grifton, could be added to the present toll-free service in the county at relatively little expense to telephone customers.

Forty Years Later, Fuel Leaks From USS Arizona

By BRUCE DUNFORD
Associated Press Writer

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — Fuel oil glistens on the murky waters over the hull of the once-proud battleship Arizona, and there are still scars on the concrete headquarters of the U.S. Pacific Air Force command.

The fuel oil is from the dreadnought, which was ripped open and sent to rest on the muddy bottom with most of its crew when a 1,000-pound bomb pierced the forward deck and penetrated to the black powder magazine before exploding.

The pock marks show where bullets from strafing Japanese fighters stitched their way across Hickam Field. There are similar scars on the base library at Schofield Barracks.

Little other physical evidence remains of what happened here Dec. 7, 1941, the day 40 years ago that President Franklin D. Roosevelt said would "live in infamy."

In a little more than two hours, 353 dive bombers, torpedo planes, high-level bombers and fighters launched in two waves from six Japanese aircraft carriers reduced the U.S. military fortress on the island of Oahu to flaming wreckage.

The final toll was 2,341 U.S. servicemen dead and 1,143 wounded; 18 ships, including seven battleships, sunk or heavily damaged; more than 200 Army Air Corps and Navy planes destroyed or unusuable.

Sixty-eight civilians also were killed, Navy records show.

Of the dead, as many as 1,177 remain entombed in the Arizona to this day. A gleaming white memorial now straddles the sunken Arizona and is one of Hawaii's top tourist attractions.

Japanese losses included 29 planes, five midget submarines and 64 men.

The attack was launched simultaneously with a breakoff in negotiations on a new treaty between Japan and the United States, and avenging the "sneak attack" on Pearl Harbor became a rallying cry for Americans who launched themselves into the task of war in Europe and in the Pacific.

But there also were cries of outrage in the United States that the American forces had been so off guard, and even today the debate over whether Roosevelt knew in advance of Japan's intentions continues in historical works.

Military historians agree the attack was perfectly executed, but also say the Japanese high command blundered in not knocking out the large naval supply center, the rows of fuel storage tanks and the submarine base, all easy targets at Pearl Harbor. Also detracting from the strategic value of the attack was the absence of any U.S. aircraft carriers in port.

Although Americans felt certain the United States eventually would have to go to war, Pearl Harbor survivors say the mood on Dec. 7, 1941, was relaxed. Most servicemen were sleeping in, as was allowed on a Sunday morning.

Two incidents might have tipped off the sleepy island defenders, but in the critical hour before the attack, military duty officers ignored them.

An hour before the attack began, the destroyer Ward came upon a Japanese midget sub trying to enter the harbor, opened fire with a deck gun and finished it off with depth charges. Both the Ward and a Navy patrol plane that helped spot the sub reported the incident.

Puzzling Report Says 10 Assassins Assigned U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Authoritative sources have confirmed that a detailed, but puzzling, report has been received by U.S. intelligence about a 10-man team allegedly assigned to kill President Reagan or his top Cabinet officers, The Washington Post reported in today's editions.

All but possibly one or two of the squad's members are said to be Libyans, the newspaper said.

According to the Post, the report is understood to give the name of each member of the squad plus known aliases each has used. Details on where the men were trained and reports that some of the training was in Eastern Europe are said to be included in the intelligence report, the source or sources of which were unclear.

Meanwhile, Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy on Sunday denied sending assassins to kill President Reagan, but the State Department said it has "strong evidence" the Libyan leader is plotting the murders of Reagan and other U.S. officials.

Calling the Reagan administration's charges "big lies," Khadafy challenged the United States to show proof of such a plot. He appeared on the ABC News program "This Week with David Brinkley."

The Post's article on the report said to have been received by U.S. intelligence about an assassination squad said the vagueness of references to the source of the information is causing a problem in evaluating the information and raising doubts about its accuracy.

If such a plot were in effect, the Post said, it probably would be a tightly guarded secret, and it is considered highly unlikely that an informant could obtain such detailed information as reportedly was provided U.S. intelligence.

Also, analysts doubt Khadafy would put his name to such an assassination plan because whether it succeeded or failed it could lead to severe retaliation, including a U.S. military attack on Libya, the Post said..

And, the newspaper said, some specialists believe a 10-man team would be too large for such a plan, making slip-ups too probable.

The sources, however, emphasized that the report is being taken seriously by U.S. officials, said the Post.

In another development, Newsweek magazine said Saturday that a Lebanese terrorist who defected told U.S. intelligence he was present at a meeting in Libya six or eight weeks ago at which Khadafy ordered Reagan and other top U.S. officials killed. The Secret Service has tightened protection recently of Reagan, Vice President George Bush, Cabinet officials and around Capitol Hill.

BAGGED TRAFFIC SIGNALS?

What gives with the bags over the lights on Third and Reade Streets? I'm delighted with not having to stop so much coming to work, but would like to know if it's a permanent or temporary situation. J.R.

It's probably permanent, according to city engineer Ron Sewell, though the bagging of the signals is to allow any one of the lights to be reactivated later if traffic statistics or public opinion were to call for it. He said the public should be aware that the lights at First and Reade, Third and Reade, Third and Evans, Third and Washington, and Second and Washington have all been replaced by stop signs. The signals were flashed for a week or so and now they've been bagged and probably will remain so for about a year.

Traffic studies had shown that the lights are no longer warranted by the volume of traffic and accident history at these intersections, Sewell said. "It's ridiculous to make drivers stop when it's not needed," he said . "The savings for everyone is phenomenal when signals are not needed. We've estimated that designaling these five downtown intersections will save the public who travel these streets 22,028 hours of delay time, 2,366,400 stops and 17,248 gallons of motor vehicle fuel annually. It will save city taxpayers $5,322 a year in maintenance and electricity costs."

Patrolman Is Hospitalized In Assault Case

WILLIAMSTON — Line Sergeant W. D. Parrish, 49, of the Williamston office of the State Highway Patrol remained a patient in Martin General Hospital today following an assault by two men in Parmele Saturday night.

First Sergeant P. C. Eure, District Supervisor of Troop A, District I, which covers Martin and Pitt Counties, confirmed details of the incident. He reported that at 10 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5, Parrish attempted to stop a vehicle on Rural Paved Road 1164 within the town limits of Parmele.

The driver of the vehicle, identified as William Coppage, a 29 year-old male, and a passenger, Jimmy Gardner, a 30 year-old male, reportedly drove the car into the yard of a residence, got out of the car and assaulted Parrish, fighting him down into the yard. Parrish managed to fire his pistol and the assailants fled the scene, it was reported.

Help was summoned and Parrish was taken to Martin General Hospital by Mike Roberson, Robersonville Fire Chief. Injuries reportedly sustained by Parrish are a broken nose, several lacerations and abrasions.

Members of several law enforcement agencies joined in the search for the two assailants. Those sending personnel included the State Highway Patrol, the Sheriff's Departments of Pitt and Martin Counties, the Williamston and Robersonville Police Departments, the Ayden Police Department and the Department of Corrections. About 50 people were involved in the search.

Sgt. Eure said that Coppage gave himself up to Williamston police on Sunday morning, and that Trooper Wayne Taylor arrested Gardner in Parmele on Sunday afternoon.

Coppage has been charged with driving under the influence, resisting arrest by a law enforcement officer, and assault with the attempt to kill. Gardner has been charged with all the same offenses except for driving under the influence. Both men are in the Martin County jail under $10,000 bond each. A tentative date of Dec. 14 has been set for a hearing in the Martin County Superior Court.

Worst Snowstorm In 3 Seasons Kills Eight People In New England

By EDWARD MILLER
Associated Press Writer

A snowstorm called the worst in three seasons killed eight people and stranded thousands in New England, while Oregon gurgled under another dose of heavy rain and six people died because of fog that cloaked Southern California.

The surprise snowstorm dumped up to 2 feet of snow, hitting Massachusetts and Rhode Island the hardest. Gusting winds piled the snow into drifts, and motorists abandoned their cars on snowbound highways. Airports and schools were closed, and on the vacation island of Nantucket, 200 holiday revelers were stranded and as many as 30 whales beached themselves.

The storm that carried the snow was thought to be heading to sea, but it first swept inland and dumped 1½ feet of snow on Boston, the most in one day in 50 years, and 15 inches in Providence, R.I.

"We brought our children to Boston to see the snow, but this is ridiculous," said George Porter of Miramar, Fla., who was stranded at Logan Airport with his wife, Beverly, and their two children, Glen, 13, and Tracy, 8.

Power lines in Rhode Island were knocked down, and 50,000 residents lost electricity. The Rhode Island Transit Authority suspended all bus service. Commonwealth Electric Co. reported blackouts for 35,000 customers in Duxbury, south of Boston, and another 5,000 in Marshfield.

"We're grateful it's Sunday because we don't have commuters going to work," said James Carlin, the Massachusetts secretary of transportation, as 2,500 snow plows cleared the highways.

The Weather Service measured 10½ inches of snow at snowbound Logan, the heaviest 24-hour snowfall in December since 1926. Blowing snow was hampering efforts to clear runways.

Select 3 Morehead Scholarship Semifinalists

William Bost III

Elizabeth Longino

Robert Ehinger

The three Pitt County seniors chosen Oct. 13 as nominees for the Morehead Scholarships have all been selected as semifinalists to go to the finalist competition stage at Chapel Hill during the period Feb. 27-March 2, 1982.

Robert Richard (Rob) Ehinger of D. H. Conley High and two Rose High students, William Stuart (Bill) Bost III and Elizabeth Ann Longino, were selected Thursday, Dec. 3 at the District I Competition held in Williamston.

A total of 23 candidates from eastern North Carolina counties were interviewed by the district committee. Of that number, seven were selected as semifinalists, including the three from Pitt County schools.

Ehinger is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Frederick Ehinger of Greenville. He is originally from West Seneca, New York and has lived in Greenville since coming here as a sophomore.

Bost is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William S. Bost Jr. of Greenville, and Ms. Longino is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank H. Longino is Greenville.

The Morehead Scholarships were established in 1945 by the late John Motley Morehead, a North Carolina native and a 1891 graduate of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

The prestigious scholarships are awarded to students on the criteria of academic achievement and personal merit rather than economic need, and provide funds for four years of study at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Mills-Darden Vows Spoken

The marriage of Sarah Michelle Darden and Zeno Ricks Mills was solemnized Sunday at 3 p.m. in Hooker Memorial Christian Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Alvis Darden Sr. of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Mills of Clayroot.

The Rev. Ralph Messick officiated at the double ring ceremony.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Randy Buck, organist. Mrs. Rita Dixon sang, "Wedding Song," "Wedding Prayer" and "Surround Me with Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white crystal organza designed with a fitted bodice of re-embroidered lace. The high neckline was edged with pearls and lace. The fitted sleeves of re-embroidered lace and organza, trimmed in scalloped chantilly lace, featured a trumpet oversleeve of crystal organza edged in scalloped lace. The full skirt was edged at the hemline with a ruffle flounce of organza bordered in double panels of scalloped chantilly lace, which extended around the attached chapel train.

She wore a waltz length veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace held in place by a Juliet cap overlaid in chantilly lace beaded with pearls. She carried a cascade of white roses, carnations and baby's breath with white velvet streamers.

Miss Beth Darden, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Mary Manning of Winterville and Miss Lille Darden of Aiken, S.C., both sisters of the bride, Mrs. Tammy Whitehurst, sister of the bridegroom of Pactolus and Cindy Darden, cousin of the bride of Raleigh.

The attendants wore formal length gowns of Singapore teal matte jersey designed with open neckline, miniature rolled shoulder straps, blouson bodices and full skirts. Lace jackets complemented the gowns. Each carried a nosegay of white carnations mixed with holly berries and leaves.

Rudolph Mills served his son as best man. Groomsmen were Keith Mills, brother of the bridegroom of Clayroot, Al Darden, brother of the bride and Keith Manning, both of Winterville, Lance Wetherington, cousin of the bridegroom of Greenville.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Darden wore a formal gown of mint green, with cape. Mrs. Mills chose a light blue formal gown. Both wore corsages of miniature white carnations with holly. Mrs. Ophelia Darden, Mrs. C.B. Strickland, Mrs. Lunette Wetherington and Mrs. Lizzie Colville, grandmothers of the couple, were remembered with white miniature carnation corsages.

Mrs. Ralph C. Tucker directed the wedding.

MRS. ZENO RICKS MILLS

The bride graduated from D.H. Conley High School and is employed at Nichols Department Store. The bridegroom, also a Conley High School graduate, is employed at National Spinning, Washington. Following a wedding trip to Banner Elk, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride's parents entertained following the wedding with a reception in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. C. Brantley Strickland Jr. greeted guests. Cake was served by Mrs. Marie Mills and Mrs. Mary Lou Cleary. Punch was poured by Mrs. Peggy Warren. Mr. and Mrs. Redding B. Elks said good-byes. Miss Lorna Wetherington presided at the guest register.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents in the church fellowship hall. Punch was poured by Mrs. Nancy Anderson. Cake was served by Mrs. Edna Hilton.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given at the Western Steer Family Steakhouse.

Couple Honored On Anniversary

GRIMESLAND — Mr. and Mrs. Carl Graham Hudson were honored on their 25th anniversary Sunday at a reception given by their children, Laura Lynn, Lisa Gay and Carla Graham Hudson.

The reception was held at the home of the couple and guests were welcomed by their daughter, Lynn.

The refreshment table was covered with lace cloths, draped with silver bows and bells, centered with a silver epergne holding silver tipped carnations, white pom pons interspersed with white baby's breath.

The three-tiered anniversary cake was served by Mrs. Billy Ray Taylor, sister-in-law of Mrs. Hudson, and punch was poured by Miss Lisa Hudson, daughter of the couple.

Gifts were received by Ms. Barbara Rouse and were displayed on tables covered with white cloths overlaid with Army-Navy cloths. Mrs. Elmore Hodges presided at the registry table where a portrait of the couple was displayed.

Mrs. Hudson wore a silver mist street dress complemented by a white rose corsage accented with net trimming.

The house was decorated throughout with silver bows, bells and ivy. The front door was accented with a swag of matching silver bows and bells. The foyer was decorated with a hurricane lamp with white flowers and greenery.

Good-byes were said to the 150 guests who called during the afternoon by Miss Lynn Hudson.

Miss Tadlock, Mr. Peele Marry

WILLIAMSTON — The marriage of Susan Edmondson Tadlock and Jeffrey Thomas Peele was solemnized Sunday at 4 p.m. at the First United Methodist Church with the Rev. Herbert Charles Davis officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Andrew Tadlock III of Williamston. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Daniel Peele also of Williamston.

Mrs. Wayne Hopkins, organist, Mary Wallace Tarkington, pianist and Mrs. Bermey Stevens, soloist, presented the wedding music. Mrs. Stevens sang "The Song of Ruth," "O Perfect Love" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of candlelight peau de soie with a yoke of lace embroidered with seed pearls. The bouffant skirt with a bustle back extended into a semi-train and her veil of silk illusion was attached to a princess crown of matching lace outlined with seed pearls. She carried her mother's white satin prayerbook centered with a cascade of red sweetheart roses, baby's breath and stephanotis accented with silver and pearls. Her only ornament was a pearl necklace given to her maternal grandmother by her maternal grandfather on her wedding day.

Lisa Freedman Tadlock, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a formal wine dress trimmed in ecru lace. She carried a white fur muff adorned with roses and holly.

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Lynn Peele, sister of the bridegroom of Raleigh, Tina Frances Burden, Danya Dee Stevens and Cathy Lee Cullipher, all of Williamston. Wearing dresses identical to the honor attendant, they carried white fur muffs adorned with carnations and holly.

Junior bridesmaids were Laura Page Edmondson, cousin of the bride of Kinston, and Mary Allison Manning of Williamston. They also wore formal wine dresses trimmed in ecru lace and carried white fur muffs adorned with carnations and holly.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man and ushers were William Daniel Peele Jr. of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, Paul Ashley Edmondson of Kinston, cousin of the bride, Richard Eugene Harrison and Jimmy Dale Cumbee, both of Williamston.

The flower girl was Sara Kristofer Maner, cousin of the bride. She wore a formal white dress with a wine sash and carried a basket of rose petals.

Honorary bridesmaids were Serena Chesson, Catherine Taylor Everett, Karen Marie Oglesby and Lynne Elizabeth Sanders, all of Williamston.

The mother of the bride wore a formal ecru hand-painted silk dress with an orchid corsage. Mrs. William Andrew Tadlock Jr., paternal mother of the bride, wore a plum silk organza dress and an orchid corsage. A dress of mauve georgette was worn by Mrs. Dewey Edmondson, godmother of the bride. She wore an orchid corsage.

Mrs. Ralph Mobley of Robersonville, assisted by Mrs. E. Rodney Edmondson of Kinston, served as mistress of ceremonies.

Mrs. Peele attended Peace College and is employed at Peele's Jewelers. Mr. Peele is engaged in farming.

After a wedding trip to unannounced points the couple will reside in Williamston.

On Saturday the parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Holiday Inn followed by a rehearsal party at the Roanoke Country Club given by the grandparents of the bride and the aunt and uncle of the bride.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was given Saturday by Mrs. Nelson Prince, Mrs. Bermey Stevens, Mrs. Hugh Martin, Mrs. Max Burden and Mrs. Donald Everett at the home of Mrs. Everett.

EDA Meets Wednesday

The Eastern North Carolina Development Association, whose purpose is "to promote and to develop a unified professional organization which will address the problems and projects involved in working toward the total economic success of eastern North Carolina" will have a membership meeting at the Wilson Country Club Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Chairman John Gurganus is planning for approximately 50 professional developers, bankers, contractors, utility representatives, community college representatives and concerned citizens to attend.

A program panel during the morning session consisting of Ledford Austin of HUD, James Johnson of FHA and Larry Cherry of SBA will address what financial resources are available to economic developers in Eastern North Carolina as they strive to provide additional jobs and tax base for their respective areas, Farmville Development Council Director Anne M. McGaughey said.

The luncheon speaker, Frank Alspaugh, executive director of the Economic Development Division of the North Carolina Department of Commerce, will bring the membership up to date, regardless of the development activities of the state.

For further information regarding this meeting or membership in the organization, contact Mrs. McGaughey, 753-4670.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Agri. Ext. Agent

The production of commercial vegetables in Pitt County is a subject that is gaining more and more interest. Historically Pitt County has been recognized as a tobacco, corn and soybean producing county. However, the production of livestock, eggs, peanuts, cucumbers and forest products rank high as well.

Due to poor prices on corn and soybeans and high costs of production, many farmers are looking into other avenues for making ends meet. Also, an uncertain future concerning tobacco and peanut programs exists today for many Pitt County farmers.

Vegetable production is a partial solution to some farming dilemmas. The production of such alternative crops as broccoli, seed corn or tomatoes is often risky, expensive, labor intensive and may present marketing problems. In short, vegetable farming is not for everyone.

To learn more about commercial vegetable production, plan to attend the 1981 Fresh Vegetable Growers Association Trade Show and School. This annual event will feature specialists from N.C. State University and the University of Florida discussing a wide variety of produce topics. It will be held at the Wayne Agriculture Center in Goldsboro on Dec. 3.

The conference is titled "Concerns for the Early '80's." The program will open at 8 a.m. Topics include cucumber weed control, southern blight control, cucumber pest management, broccoli and other new crops, finding new markets, energy conservation and plant beds, packing produce, economics of tillage, and herbicide incorporation. There will be about 25 commercial exhibitors.

This program should address the concerns of the experienced vegetable farmer as well as those of the beginning grower. There will be opportunities to discuss your needs with real experts and fellow produce farmers and it should be a good learning experience.

CRUSADE SERVICE

A crusade service will be held at Cherry Lane FWB Church at 7:30 p.m. Dec. 7-10 with Eldress Shirley Daniels conducting the services.

Various choirs and ushers will render the services. The pastor, the Rev. C. R. Parker, invited the public to attend.

Two Injured In Collision

Two persons were reported injured in a 12:44 a.m. collision Saturday on Greenville Boulevard, 706 feet north of the Tenth Street intersection.

Police said cars driven by James Ray Warren of Route 3, Greenville, and William Blackwell of Route 1, Stokes, were involved in the collision, which caused an estimated $2,000 damage to the Warren car and $3,000 damage to the Blackwell vehicle.

Officers, who charged Warren with driving after drinking, reported Warren and a passenger in the Blackwell vehicle were injured.

SCHOOL CHRORUS

The Stokes Elementary School Chorus will sing Christmas carols at Carolina East Mall on Dec. 11 at 12:30 p.m. The group will also perform that night at Washington Square Mall at 7:30 p.m.

No Easy Answers

In a move to placate organized labor, President Reagan has indicated that striking air traffic controllers might be allowed to return to government work — but in areas other than manning control towers.

The indication was that the striking controllers may never be able to return to their profession.

It is a sticky situation. Even now there would be real benefit to the nation to have at least some of the controllers back on duty. On the other hand many controllers stayed on in face of the called strike. There is bound to be bitterness between the two groups if they work together in the same towers again.

The president was quoted as saying, "Our first responsibility is to the controllers who stayed on the job, working long hours to keep the planes flying safely."

A majority of the nation agreed with the president when he fired the strikers. The air traffic control system is presently working, although the reduced crews must be feeling the strain. But there can be little doubt that the shortage of controllers can be made up in the future through stepped up training of new people who will take their places in the towers.

There will be no easy answers to this one.

Dec. 7, 1941: Never Again

Lest we forget, this is anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941.

The day of infamy it was characterized by President Roosevelt. It plunged the United States into its most devastating war. It changed the lives of millions of Americans and many were to die before the war ended in 1945.

Few today can image the impact of a war which was to take young men from their homes and send them to far off places to fight for freedom. None knew when they left whether they would survive, and if they did when they would return home.

Japan, Germany and Italy, our mortal enemies in 1941 are now a omong our closest allies. Even though we are at peace, we have new enemies in 1981 which keeps the war machines going. If an attack came now it would be far different from the one of 1941. The war might be over in hours, and there might be little left to the conquerers.

May it never occur.

THIS AFTERNOON

Unready Workers

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The General Assembly of North Carolina has put more than $24 million on the line. The Govenor of North Carolina has put his prestige and power to work. The leading shakers and movers in the educational and research hierarchy of North Carolina have put their best efforts forward.

North Carolina will likely win some major research and development facilities, and production plants, to push her far ahead in the new world of high technology microelectronics.

But where does that leave the average Tar Heel? Will North Carolinians be the ones drawing down dividends from all this investment; or will they be the ones standing on an assembly line putting together an endless stream of bits and pieces of computers and communication devices for weekly wages little better than they can already get in a cut-and-sew plant or a textile mill?

A number of people intimately involved in the current high technology boom are worried that the people of this state will not be ready for the opportunities; that the highly paid, skilled people will be importing.

Resistance

One problem already apparent is resistance to technical education in the decisionmaking levels of the General Assembly and the educational establishment. The community colleges sought budget increases for new supplies and equipment but must now resort to begging used stuff from private industry. Vocational education in the high schools has been kept at rock bottom for years.

There is still a stigma attached to "technical education" which causes the subject to be pushed down in favor of the classics whenever the matter comes up for serious debate.

State officials warn, in a review of teacher supply and demand compiled by the State Department of Public Instruction, that "serious shortages of teachers in physics, chemistry, higher mathematics, Latin, and agriculture" threaten the school system.

A budding move to provide special bonuses to attract teachers to those fields was knocked down despite early backing from Gov. Jim Hunt. Stiff opposition from the professional classroom teacher organization of the N.C. Association of Educators is largely responsible. The opponents see such a bonus as a step toward merit pay which eventually would destroy the present system of paying all teachers of like experience the same regardless of subject or performance.

State Treasurer Harlan Boyles has warned of the neglect for providing an educational system which provides the depth and width of preparation needed in the coming high-tech age. His suggestion of a voucher system by which students can choose specialty schools has gotten little public notice.

Low Pay

Labor Commissioner John Brooks has cited continuing low wage scales in the state and warned that there is no quick, easy solution. "The surest remedy is for North Carolina...at both the state and local levels, to join with private enterprise in a longterm partnership to provide extensive career

Other Editors Say Battle Is Over

(Raleigh News and Observer)

The East Carolina University medical school has made an encouragingly strong start under the leadership of Dean William E. Laupus. When Laupus arrived in 1975, he found the remains of a limping one-year program that had been plagued by poor administration and limited faculty and facilities.

Now Laupus presides over a full-fledged medical school with its own teaching hospital. The school graduated its first MDs last spring. It has a faculty of 172 that is beginning to attract research grants, and its 170 students posted higher undergraduate grades than their contemporaries at Bowman-Gray Medical School in Winston-Salem (comparisons with UNC-Chapel Hill and Duke are unavailable). ECU's medical students are all North Carolinians. Thirteen percent of its total enrollment and 17 percent of the freshmen class are black.

It is a stronger start than critics, including this newspaper, expected when the General Assembly authorized the school in 1974.

The success is expensive. Construction costs came in close to original estimates at $44.9 million. But that figure will quickly be overtaken by a hefty $18.9 million annual operating budget. Critics point to projections of a nationwide doctor surplus and suggest that the services provided by Pitt Memorial Hospital may mean the decline of other hospitals in the East.

Further, skeptics and supporters agree that it is too early to tell whether the school will fulfill its mission of salting the doctor-short hamlets and towns of Eastern North Carolina with primary care physicians. It will be three years before members of the first class begin to complete their residencies and enter practice.

Even so, Pitt Memorial appears to be building a solid regional clientele and providing sophisticated services for patients who once would have been referred to Duke or Chapel Hill. Further, the medical school and the hospital clearly are a significant asset in the economic development of Eastern North Carolina which endures a disproportionate share of poverty.

Former ECU Chancellor Leo Jenkins, who led the political battle to establish the school, points with justifiable pride in particular to the neonatal unit, which treats about 370 critically ill premature babies a year. Pitt County is in the center of an area that suffers the highest infant mortality rate in the state and one of the highest in the nation. Without the type of treatment provided at the neonatal unit, many premature babies would be mentally retarded even if they survived.

William C. Friday, president of the University of North Carolina system and Jenkins' old adversary, gives the medical school's performance an A-plus. Friday himself deserves a share of the credit. He has lent his support despite the scars of a 10-year battle to block the school's establishment.

Future allocations to the medical school must be weighed against the state's other pressing needs. But the battle is over. Critics as well as supporters should wish Dr. Laupus and his colleagues continued success in the development of an important North Carolina resource.

Holiday Togetherness

I went over to see Harvey Dunlap during the Thanksgiving holidays and pay my respects to his kids, who were home from school.

Max was eating breakfast, Chris was eating lunch and Dottie was holding hands with her boyfriend.

I'd never seen Dunlap so happy. "This is the first time since they've been home that we've had this many at the table at the same time."

"Who is that down at the end?"

"That's someone Dougie brought from school. I think her name is Anna, and she's from Brazil. Do you speak Portuguese?"

"No. Where's Dougie?"

"He's upstairs sleeping. I have an appointment to see him at five."

"An appointment?" I said.

"Yes. You see, Dougie said he would be so busy this weekend it would be best for us to make an appointment with him. He worked Edna and me in for 5 o'clock."

"That's damn decent of him," I said. "Most college kids aren't that thoughtful."

"Well, as you know, Dougie

ART BUCHWALD

is studying to be a doctor, and he probably got the idea from that."

"You want to go to a movie?" I asked Dunlap.

"I'd like to, but I don't know what the kids are doing yet, and I can't walk out on them in case they decide to stay home."

"When will you know?"

"I'm not sure. They never can tell you until the last moment."

"Why don't you take a head count in the morning as to who will be eating dinner at night?" I suggested.

"We tried that yesterday. Everybody said they would be home for dinner, but as the day progressed they kept peeling off, because they had gotten a better offer. In the end there were only three of us — Edna, myself and Anna."

Dougie left Annna at home?"

"He had a date with his pals from high school, and told Anna she'd be bored."

"Max looks good," I said.

"Come to think of it, he does. This is the first time I've seen him since he got home."

"Wasn't he at your Thanksgiving dinner?"

"He was going to Florida with a friend, but at the last moment the friend decided to go to Aspen, so he drove home and missed our Turkey by a day."

"How long is he going to stay?"

"He says either until tonight, tomorrow or Monday, depending on some friends he's waiting to hear from in Vermont."

"It must be hard for you and Edna to make plans when no one is quite sure what they're up to. Where is Edna?"

"Has she seen the kids yet?"

"Yes and no. I believe they kissed her when they arrived, and she caught sight of two of them coming home this morning at 7 o'clock. But I think the only extended conversation she had was when she asked who took her car keys."

"If I were you," I said, "I'd make them sign up on a schedule indicating when they were arriving, how many friends they are bringing home, how many meals they were planning to have, and when their flights were leaving. As a parent you have a right to know that much about your children."

"We had that information when they came — but no one stuck to the schedule."

"So forget about them and

Stockman In Good Graces

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — David Stockman is back at his old stand using numbers in hopes of influencing economic policy, partly thanks to his private explanation to President Reagan of verbal indiscretions that insiders believe differed from his public explanation.

Stockman denies that allegation. Nevertheless, suspicion grows within the Reagan inner circle that in his private "woodshed" meeting with the president, Stockman blamed his troubles on William Greider, author of the famous Atlantic Monthly article. Stockman's gracious public statements absolved Greider of guilt; so did his private statements to senior presidential aides, but not to lesser aides.

What Stockman said in the woodshed may explain Reagan's decision to keep his brilliant budget director against the Republican consensus, a decision with widening economic repercussions. Contrary to expectations by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and others that Stockman would now be reduced to numbers-crunching routine at the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), Stockman's numbers loom large in determining economic policy.

In a meeting between the president and his principal economic advisers Friday (Dec.), Stockman was ready to present Reagan his approval of painfully-tight money growth projections that not only undercut Don Regan's monetary policy intentions but incidentally point to future budget deficits. The next logical step would be a resumption of Stockman's campaign for higher taxes.

The fact that Stockmanonics is far from dead can be traced to that Nov. 12 "woodshed" session with the president. Nobody else was present. But a member of the Reagan inner circle reported that Stockman had given the president the impression that the villain was his selfdescribed "old friend," Bill Greider, in publishing what was never intended to be published.

Remarkable credence for this version of the meeting was provided exactly two weeks later in Reagan's Thanksgiving Day interview with ABC's Barbara Walters: "... I think David Stockman was not the sinner. He was sinned against." According to the president. Stockman would "get together with an old friend ... knowing the safety of not-for-attribution."

After seeing the president Nov. 12, Stockman went to the White House press room to tell the world that publication of his quotes "is not an act of bad faith on his (Greider's) side, nor on mine." Acknowledging that he knew Greider planned to publish the article after the first phase of the Reagan program, Stockman said: "I don't take issue with him or fault him for doing what he did."

Did Stockman give a different story to Reagan's lieutenants? "Not to me or anybody else that I know of," one senior aide told us the day before the Reagan-Walters interview. "There was no effort at all to put the blame on Greider."

Asked to explain the discrepancy, Stockman informed us through an aide that he had told the president exactly what he told the news conference and "did not allege" bad faith by Greider. In fact, said the OMB spokesman, Stockman was "troubled" by the president's Thanksgiving Day remarks.

Yet, there are additional contradictions. On the evening of Nov. 10 as the story was breaking, Stockman implied to a political ally that he had been done in by Greider. On the next day, said a presidential aide, "I got the impression that Stockman was blaming Greider. There were about five of us present, and there was no mistake."

At the Treasury, Regan received no first-hand explanation from Stockman and wanted none. Despite their policy differences, he wanted to retain Stockman's expertise. Friends say the secretary talks of Dave Stockman's realm being the 20 percent of the economy dominated by the federal budget while Don Regan's is the other 80 percent. But expecting Stockman to stay cooped up in that 20 percent is tantamount to assuming Napoleon would limit himself to regulating wine consumption if returned to Paris after Waterloo.

Strength For Today

DISCOVERIES

Beginning about the year 1500 the world lived almost four centuries in an age of discovery.

The first of these might be called water discoveries, as men traveled from one continent to another in sailing ships. The next group of discoveries might be called political, as men struggled for freedom against tyranny and slowly developed the institutions of representative government. Then, between roughly 1800 and the middle of the 20th century came the beginning of an age of scientific discovery.

Now we are in a new era of that age. Our eyes are turned heavenward. We have already landed on the moon, and by rocketry and satellites we may learn much more about the cosmos.

If we try to keep our sky discoveries purely on a materialistic basis, we will make a great mistake. As we learn more about outer space, this should stimulate us to learn more about God and his purposes. — Elisha Douglass

Weigh New Savings Bond Plan

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Are you one of the millions of Americans who own U.S. savings bonds?

A major change in the program has been proposed, and it might be time to review your holdings and learn exactly what you have so you can add up the pluses and minuses.

Savings bonds have lost popularity in recent years as people turned to other investments that paid higher rates of interest. In an effort to make the bonds more attractive, the secretary of the treasury announced last week that he would ask Congress to approve a floating interest rate for the familiar certificates.

The new rate would be equal to 85 percent of the average interest on five-year U.S. Treasury securities. It would apply to current Series EE bonds and old Series E bonds held for five years or longer.

The savings bonds also would have a fixed minimum interest rate. If interest rates on Treasury securities fall so low that 85 percent of the rate is lower than the minimum, bondholders would earn the fixed rate instead of the floating rate.

If a floating rate system were now in effect, the interest on the Series EE and E bonds would be 10.8 percent. The existing, fixed interest rate is 9 percent, compounded semiannually, when the bonds are held to their full maturity. The interest is free of state and local taxes. You can defer payment of federal income tax on the interest until you cash in the bonds.

Here are some questions and answers about savings bonds:

Q. What types of bonds are available?

A. Series EE bonds, which are sold at half their face value in denominations starting at $50, and Series HH bonds, which are sold at full face value in denominations starting at $500. Interest on Series EE bonds is paid when the bonds are cashed in; interest on Series HH bonds is paid semiannually.

Q. What is the maturity for the bonds?

A. Series EE bonds have an eight-year maturity. You can redeem them as early as six months after you buy them, but you will not earn the maximum interest rate. Series HH bonds have a 10-year maturity. You must hold them at least five years in order to earn the maximum interest rate, currently 8½ percent. Like the interest on Series EE and Series E bonds, the interest on Series HH bonds is exempt from state and local taxes, but it is subject to federal income tax for the year in which it is paid.

Q. What about the old Series E bonds?

A. The Series EE bonds replaced the Series E at the start of 1980. All outstanding Series E bonds which have not reached their final maturity, however, keep earning interest at current levels. Because of previous extensions in the terms of outstanding bonds, the only ones which have reached final maturity are those issued more than 40 years ago. You have two choices when your Series E bonds reach maturity. You can cash them in, receive the face value plus the accumulated interest and pay federal income tax on the interest. Or, you can exchange them for a Series HH bond and continue to defer payment of the tax on the money earned by the old bonds. You will, however, have to pay tax on the interest earned by the new bond.

Q. Does it ever make sense to report the interest from Series EE or E bonds on your federal tax form as you go along?

A. Yes, if your income is below the level at which taxes must be paid. This is often the case with a child. If you buy bonds in your child's name, file a federal income tax return for him or her, reporting the income, after the first year. Assuming the child's total income does not exceed the personal exemption, no tax will be due. You do not have to file a return for the child every year. A single filing establishes the intention.

oriented. OMB projects four-year annual increases in the money supply of 4 percent, 3.5 percent, 3 percent and 2.5 percent — painfully tight for all but the most dedicated monetarist. These projections run counter to Regan's hopes for a less constrictive monetary policy and, incidentally, point to massive budget deficits into the future.

That renews the debate over whether continuing budget deficits will call for tax increases, supposedly to shrink the deficit. In the teeth of recession — a policy for which Stockman is the most potent advocate. It is a debate resumed in the shadow of doubts and conflicting reports over what this counseling and beginning vocational training opportunities," Brooks says.

And preliminary worksheets of the North Carolina 2000 project warn that in the next 20 years there must be nearly a million jobs for North Carolinians who will be leaving the traditional industrial scene due to cutbacks and changes. They must be retrained.

A Chapel Hill graduate student produced a research report warning that unless Tar Heels are to wind up doing the menial jobs while the thinkers and doers come from outside, action is required now.

But until key decisions recognize the fact that skilled workers will be much in demand and can earn as much as college graduates, and commit the state to spending the money to provide skilled training, the future remains questionable.

Three Killed By House Fire

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — Three people were killed when a fire swept through a one-story brick house near Kitty Fork before daybreak Saturday.

Sampson County Coroner Gene Barefoot identified the victims as Leland Hall, an 18-year-old son of Mrs. Julia Hall, the residence's owner; James Christopher Buckner, 22, and Karon Hargrove, 18, both of Clinton.

Hall's brother, Norwood, and Sandy Avery escaped the blaze, officials said.

Barefoot said the Sampson County Sheriff's department has asked the SBI arson squad to investigate the fire's origin.

ACLU Challenges Arkansas Creation-Science Law

By BILL SIMMONS
Associated Press Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The memory of the Scopes "Monkey Trial" was being revived in a federal court challenge today of a state law requiring schools to give equal weight to so-called "creation science" if they teach evolution.

American Civil Liberties Union lawyer Bruce Ennis has dubbed the trial Scopes II, likening it to the 1925 trial of John Scopes, who was convicted of violating a Tennessee anti-evolution law. The conviction was overturned by the state Supreme Court on a technicality. That case was the basis for the book and dramatization "Inherit the Wind."

"God will not be on trial," state Attorney General Steve Clark has said. The state will not attempt to defend the religious point of view, he said, and will contend only that it is sound educational policy to teach both evolution and creation science.

The ACLU says the 1981 law, which takes effect next fall, violates the First Amendment by establishing religion and violating academic freedom, and is unconstitutionally vague.

The ACLU suit was filed May 27 for 23 clients, including 12 clergymen. Lawyers say the trial may last two weeks.

Louisiana has enacted a similar law, and the ACLU has filed suit against it in a separate case.

"Creation-science" is the name given by the statute to the view more commonly called creationism, which maintains the universe was created about 6,000 years ago.

Evolution, accepted among most scientists, maintains that life on Earth developed slowly over millions of years and that the universe has existed for billions of years.

Creationism usually focuses on God, but the law forbids the use of religious writings or instruction in religion in teaching creation-science, allowing only scientific evidence.

If schools teach either creation-science or evolution, the teachers must give balanced treatment to the other theory, the statute says.

The case involves arguments about science, religion and education. Several scientists will testify, some for the ACLU, some for the state. Their fields are geology, genetics, biophysics, biology, chemistry and zoology.

The ACLU says creation-science is no science, and that the law is a disguised attempt by religious fundamentalists to teach the Bible.

"Even if some of its minor premises look, smell, taste, feel and sound scientific, its major premise — God — is not subject to testing or to disproof and, accordingly, is not scientific," the ACLU said in a brief filed in U.S. District Court in Little Rock last Wednesday.

One standard definition of a scientific theory is that it be testable and thus subject to being proven either true or false.

Creationists say evolution is no more scientific than creationism.

The state says creationism is supported by competent scientific evidence, but the plaintiffs want to censor it, "shutting out from the 'marketplace of ideas' those ideas with which they disagree because they are incompatible with their personal, religious or philosophical views," said a brief by the state.

The ACLU says teachers risk being fired if they try to maintain intellectual honesty by refusing to teach creation-science or by dismissing it as hogwash. Their only alternative would be to teach neither view, which the law allows, but that would deprive students of the scientifically more acceptable view of evolution, the ACLU says.

An Associated Press-NBC News poll in October said three out of four Americans believe both evolution and creation should be taught in public schools.

Seek An 'Out'

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — About 40,000 demonstrators gathered her Sunday to listen to speeches on peace and nuclear disarmament. Earlier, about 15,000 marched through the capital shouting anti-American slogans, police said.

The marches began at two military bases near the capital, including the U.S. base and Eleusis, and from the port city of Piraeus.

In the northern city of Salonica, 7,000 people assembled in one of the city's central squares. The protestors later dispersed peacefully. They had demanded removal of American military bases from Greece and the withdrawal of Greece from NATO.

Textile Officials Fear Impact Of Import-Rise

By The Associated Press

U.S. textile industry workers may lose jobs in the face of rising foreign imports unless the federal government increases import restrictions, industry officials say.

A recent study commissioned by the American Textile Manufacturers Institute concluded that if current import trends continue, the U.S. textile industry will lose 300,000 jobs to overseas competition in the 1980s.

The institute had no estimate of how many jobs would be lost in North Carolina, but officials said it would be proportionate to national losses. About 334,000 North Carolinians work in the textile and apparel industries, more than in any other state. About 3 million work in the industry nationwide.

The textile industry, along with normally pro-free-enterprise politicians like Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Sen. John East, R-N.C., have lobbied the Reagan administration for tougher import restrictions. Textile imports are expected to reach $10.4 billion this year.

But the industry itself is trying to cut jobs — and enhance profits and quality — through technological advances. Those advances have spurred an unusual strength in the industry, in spite of competition and dwindling exports.

Technological improvements in yarn spinning, fabric weaving, materials handling and other labor-intensive operations have allowed the industry to produce more with fewer workers.

Industry figures indicate U.S. textile mills now employ 150,000 fewer workers than they did at 1973's peak of 1 million workers, but the mills consumed as much raw fiber last year.

Over the last 20 years, textile production per employee nearly doubled from less than four pounds per hour to over 7½.

The improvements in plant and equipment cost the industry $1.6 billion last year and an expected $1.9 billion in 1981.

Beginning two years ago, Cone Mills replaced replaced 741 shuttle looms in its Pineville, N.C., plant with 376 Swiss and Japanese air-jet weaving machines that run more than twice as fast but require about 15 fewer people per shift. With half as many looms and three-fourths as many people, the plant is producing 65 percent more corduroy cloth.

Burlington Industries, leading the industry with more than $200 million in capital spending a year, is building a $55 million plant in Erwin, N.C., its fourth in four years. The plants feature air- and water-jet weaving.

The cost of such elaborate devices might seem out of proportion to the savings of mill wages averaging about $6 an hour. But in an industry that typically works three shifts a day, each job saved means three day's wages saved.

"You may have a long payback, but probably not that long," said Kay Norwood, an Interstate Securities analyst who follows the industry from Charlotte, N.C. "Machines don't demand fringe benefits. They don't demand days off. They don't threaten to unionize."

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 8.84 on Friday, slipped .47 to 892.22 by noontime today.

Losers held a 4-3 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Revlon led the active list, up ¼ at 31½. A 320,500-share block traded at 31⅝ and another of 192,600 shares changed hands at 31¾.

American Telephone & Telegraph, subject of favorable comment by an investment advisor quoted in the Wall Street Journal, rose ¼ to 59⅝.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.61 million shares at noontime, against 25.74 million at the same point Friday.

Charge Of Embezzling Filed Here

The manager of Clark's Department Store here has been charged with embezzlement and an Ayden police officer has been suspended pending investigation.

The arrest of Abraham Pruett, 40, was made yesterday by the Greenville Police Department, following an investigation by the Loss Prevention Division of Cook United, Inc., which is the parent company of the store.

Ron Monteith, regional director of the Loss Prevention Division, refused to comment when reached by telephone at the store this morning. Frank Tabor in the home office in Cleveland, Ohio, said he had not yet heard of the incident and, therefore, could not comment.

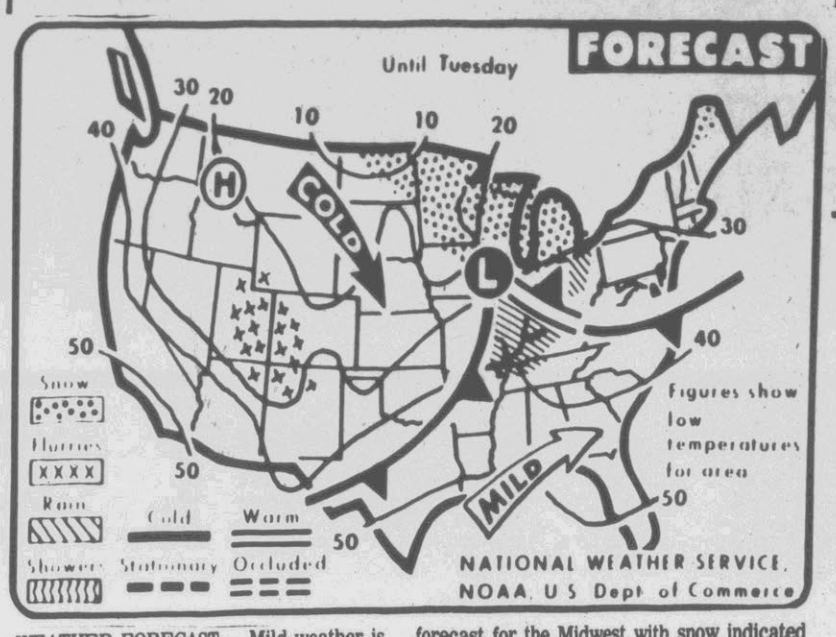

According to Magistrate Elmore Hodges, Pruett was released within about an hour after his arrest on $5,000 bond.

Ayden Police Chief Thomas Burney confirmed that Keith Gardner, an Ayden police patrolman who also has worked as a security guard at Clark's, has been given non-disciplinary suspension from the Ayden Police Department until an investigation of his possible involvement is completed.

Burney said he understands Gardner was buying merchandise from Pruett at the time of the arrest, but Burney said he believes Gardner when he says that he was buying the merchandise in good faith, believing it was from Cook United, rather than Pruett himself.

Burney said Gardner had told him and other people in his (Burney's) presence of the "good deals" Gardner was getting at Clark's during its going-out-of-business sale and appeared not to be hiding the fact that he had made discounted purchases. Gardner has not been arrested.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Mild weather is expected in the period until Tuesday morning for the Southeast. Most of the Plains and Northeast is expected to be cold. Rain is forecast for the Midwest with snow indicated from North Dakota to the Great Lakes. Snow flurries are forecast for the Southwest. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A high pressure system sprawling over the Gulf states today will bring clear skies to North Carolina today, the National Weather Service reported.

In addition, low pressure over the Great Lakes will provide westerly winds today, blowing up some clouds by tonight, especially over western counties.

A cold front approaching from the west will bring colder air to the state by late Tuesday, with some snow flurries forecast into Wednesday at higher elevations.

Temperatures Sunday afternoon were slightly below normal. The range fell in the mid 40s to the mid 50s east of the mountains. Fayetteville had a 54 maximum and cape hatteras managed to reach only 47 degrees.

Some patches of clouds drifted over the state early this morning but were beginning to dissipate toward sunrise. Chilly 20s were noted over the western counties with 30s and low 40s eastward.

The recreational weather outlook for the state indicated colder air toward midweek. Skies will be mostly sunny today with increasing clouds tonight into tuesday. High temperatures this afternoon will range in the 50s to low 60s except for some 40s over the higher mountains. By tonight minimum will be in the 30s to near 40.

By Tuesday, colder and windy conditions will set in by late in the day. Maximums will be in the 40s and 50s for the most part.

Ski Report

By The Associated Press

Here is a report of ski conditions Monday in North Carolina from the Southeastern Ski Areas Association. The conditions were supplied by resort operators.

APPALACHIAN: Base of 18 inches with a packed powder primary surface. Packed powder secondary. Two slopes open. Skiing tonight.

SUGAR MOUNTAIN: Base of 30 inches. Powder primary surface. Two slopes open. New machine-made powder.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the Department of Physics of East Carolina University was 59 yesterday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 59 percent of your hot water yesterday.

Rejecting A Job Offer

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel got a job offer on his first weekend out of prison, but his lawyer says Mandel will turn it down.

Baltimore Mayor William Donald Schaefer offered Mandel a temporary job at City Hall as a state-budget analyst because "there's no more knowledgeable person" on the subject, said George Piendak, head of the city budget departmentment.

But lawyer Arnold Weiner said Mandel would prefer something closer to his home in Annapolis, the capital, where he ran the state until his conviction for mail fraud and racketeering.

"I'm sure there are many lawyers in town who would use him as a law clerk," said Bruce Bereano, an Annapolis lawyer instrumental in getting support in Washington for President Reagan's commutation Thursday of Mandel's sentence at a prison camp in Florida. He served 19 months of a 3-year term.

He was released Friday and must stay here in a halfway house until Dec. 20. Mandel was suspended from law practice in Maryland and must face disbarment proceedings.

An organization of state troopers discussed hiring Mandel as a lobbyist, but Mandel said no.

Mandel was convicted of accepting $350,000 in cash and gifts in a scheme to fix favorable racing dates for the defunct Marlboro Race Course, in which his co-defendants held a secret interest.

Wiener said attempts are being made to move Mandel to a work-release facility in Anne Arundel County that would be closer to his home.

N.Y. Crime Up, Fewer Police

NEW YORK (AP) — New York City's crime rate has soared in recent years, but the police force nevertheless has dwindled to its smallest size in 17 years, police figures show.

There were 20,050 people in the department in 1954, and by 1970 the number had grown to 31,797. But as of Nov. 19, the department says, 22,170 officers, detectives, supervisors and recruits were on the force. That figure includes 1,000 rookies in the Police Academy.

The figures were reported Sunday in The New York Times.

EXTENDED WEATHER OUTLOOK FOR N.C.

Fair, but turning colder Wednesday through Friday. Wednesday highs in 50s cooling to highs in 40s by Friday. Lows Wednesday mostly in 30s, dropping into 20s on Friday.

Two Collisions Here Yesterday

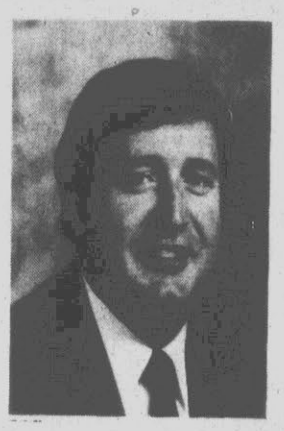

An estimated $1,825 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police Sunday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 11:33 a.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Fifth Street involving a truck driven by Clifton Earl Whitehurst of Route 2, Grifton and a car driven by Charlie Evans of 601 Ford St.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $800 to the truck and $300 to the car.

Cars driven by Barbara Martin Baker of Route 11, Greenville, and Willie Allan Nichols of 1002B W. Sixth St., collided about 7:15 p.m. on Greene Street, two tenths of a mile north of the First Street intersection, causing an estimated $375 damage to the Baker car and $450 damage to the Nichols vehicle.

ECU Status Should Be Known By Jan.

Staff & Wire Reports

East Carolina University Athletic Director Dr. Ken Karr said Sunday the status of the Pirates' football program should be known by early January.

East Carolina was one of approximately 40 college programs threatened with demotion from the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division I-A to Division I-AA following a vote of the NCAA membership Friday.

"There is a lot of conjecture right now, from athletic directors, the media, everybody, and 90 percent of it could be right," Karr said. "But nobody knows for sure until the classification committee publishes its report."

Karr said that committee is likely to meet before the NCAA's annual meeting in January.

Karr said classification-type issues "come up every two or three years," and that the threatened schools don't feel harshly toward the 61 members of the College Football Association. The CFA is a group of big-time college footall schools whose actions precipitated the reclassification vote.

"Of course, many schools have given a great deal of time and a great committment to play at that level, and I think rightly so," Karr said. "We can understand their problems."

Karr said East Carolina's situation would not have been improved significantly if it were a member of the CFA.

"In fact, two years or so ago (when ECU first had the opportunity to join the CFA), I don't think we were eligible," Karr said. "I'm not sure we are now.

"They have a requirement that 70 percent of your games must be played against other schools in the group or similar schools," he concluded. "I think that's an attractive, ultimate goal."

Major factors that determine 1-A status are a stadium seating 30,000 or paid attendance at home games averaging 17,000 over the last four years.

However, it appears that if an institution fails to meet the home attendance and stadium requirements there are a number of "exception clauses" that would allow the school to qualify for 1-A status.

Some of those exception clauses are:

•If a school has averaged 20,000 paid in attendance for all of its games both home and away.

•If a school is a member of an allied conference in which at least six of the league members sponsor football and more than half of the football-playing conference members meet the attendance requirement.

•A waiver, which would be granted by other members of Division 1-A. It would deal with cases in which circumstances were beyond the control of a school such as having to play in a smaller stadium because of renovation of a large stadium.

N. Hampshire Defeats ECU Women, 65-61

Denkler Scores 22 In Consolation Loss

MONTCLAIR, N.J. — Strong inside play led by Gail Jackson paced New Hampshire to a 65-61 consolation game victory over East Carolina at the Montclair State Dail Classic Sunday afternoon.

In the championship game, Villanova (3-0) downed Montclair (2-1), 69-58 later Sunday afternoon.

Jackson worked inside for 15 points and 12 rebounds while all-tournament selection Theresa Redmond poured in 20 points from the outside to make a four-point halftime advantage hold up for the victory.

East Carolina's Mary Denkler, also an all-tournament selection, had 22 points and 11 rebounds. Lillion Barnes had 14 and Sam Jones added 13 for the Lady Pirates.

ECU, now 1-3, tied the game at 28-28 on a short jumper by Barnes with two minutes left in the first half. But an inside basket by Denise Higgins and a jumper by Redmond gave New Hampshire a 32-28 halftime lead.

The Lady Pirates never led in the second half, never getting closer than four points. New Hampshire, now 4-1 this season, led by as many as 13 in the final 20 minutes.

"Our lack of experience was showing in this tournament," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "It's right to happen to us right now. Instead of us not knowing what we have to work on. We do have some talent and I'm tremendously enthusiastic about our possiblities."

ECU plays host to UNC-Wilmington Saturday night.

Phils Sell Boone To California

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Catcher Bob Boone, who fell out of favor with the Philadelphia Phillies after the baseball players' strike ended last season, has been sold to the California Angels for a reported $250,000.

Boone, 34, a veteran of nine years and a three-time National League All-Star, was the first player moved in what was expected to be a busy week of trading at baseball's annual winter meeting.

Boone batted just .211 in 76 games with the Phillies last season, and was replaced as starting catcher by young Keith Moreland.

Ironically, Moreland, too, is on the trading block because his value probably can bring the Phillies the starting pitcher and bullpen hammer they believe they need to compete for the NL East Division championship.

The Phillies still have four catchers — Moreland, Bo Diaz, Don McCormack and Ossie Virgil Jr.

Bill Giles, head of the group that recently bought the Phillies for $30.175 million, said two more catchers will go if pitching can be obtained in return.

The Phillies reportedly are interested in Toronto's Dave Steib or Jim Clancy, Floyd Bannister of Seattle or Rick Sutcliffe of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Pat Corrales, recently named manager of the Phillies, said he planned to go with just two catchers.

Giles said the plan was to go with Diaz, acquired last month in a three-team trade that cost the Phillies outfielder Lonnie Smith. Either Virgil or McCormack would be kept as backup.

Gene Mauch, manager of the Angels, said he expected Boone to catch at least 120 games. He said he'd use present catchers Brian Downing and Joe Ferguson as parttime outfielders.

It was obvious that Mauch did not expect to sign catcher Ed Ott, who has gone the free agent route.

"Boone is not a .211 hitter," said Mauch. "Anyway, that doesn't concern me. I just want him to catch and throw and direct the pitching staff."

Washington Shocks Eagles; Dallas Wins

By The Associated Press

Tom Landry was succinct, as usual.

"With a two-game lead, we only have to win one of our last two games. That's a plus," the Dallas Cowboys coach said.

The Cowboys took a two-game lead over Philadelphia in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division Sunday with a 37-13 drubbing of Baltimore while the Eagles were losing 15-13 to the Washington Redskins. Dallas is 11-3; Philadelphia is 9-5.

The only team with a chance to clinch its division Sunday was Cincinnati, but the Bengals lost, 21-3, to San Francisco, cutting their lead in the American Conference Central Division to 1½ games over Pittsburgh, which plays at Oakland tonight. Cincinnati is 10-4; Pittsburgh is 8-5.

Cincinnati plays Pittsburgh next Sunday in a possible showdown for that division lead, and Bengals Coach Forrest Gregg said: "There's a lot on the line. If that's not enough motivation, there's nothing I can do."

The 49ers already had clinched the NFC West with an 11-3 record, but there was a new leader in the NFC's "Black-and-Blue" Central Division after Sunday's play. Tampa Bay defeated Atlanta 24-23 while Detroit and Minnesota were losing, and the Buccaneers took a one-game lead in the division with an 8-6 record. The Lions, Vikings and Green Bay Packers were tied for second at 7-7.

Green Bay defeated Detroit 31-17, and the Chicago Bears downed the Vikings 10-9.

The AFC Eastern and Western divisions also were in upheaval. The Miami Dolphins defeated New England 24-14, and the New York Jets lost in Seattle, 27-23, to snap a tie in the AFC East. The Dolphins, 9-4-1, led the 8-5-1 Jets by one game. The Buffalo Bills defeated San Diego 28-27 to slip into second in the division, a half game back of Miami at 9-5.

A three-way deadlock was broken in the AFC West when Denver got by Kansas City 16-13. Denver, 9-5, took a one-game lead over the Chiefs and the Chargers, both at 8-6.

In the remaining National Football League contests, the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals kept alive slim hopes of earning wild card playoff berths with their 7-7 records. The Giants defeated Los Angeles 10-7, and St. Louis walloped New Orleans 30-3.

Cowboys 37, Colts 13

Dallas' victory was engineered by reserve quarterback Glenn Carano and running back Ron Springs, who scored three touchdowns. One of those touchdowns came on a 2-yard pass in the second quarter from Carano, who was substituting for the injured Danny White. The Cowboys led 27-6 at halftime.

Tony Dorsett ran for 175 yards for Dallas, giving him the NFL rushing lead with 1,506 yards.

After the Philadelphia game, the Cowboys finish their season by playing the Giants at home. A tie with Philadelphia would give the Eagles the division championship since they have a better conference record than Dallas.

Redskins 15, Eagles 13

Trailing 13-9, Monte Coleman intercepted a Ron Jaworski pass and returned it 52 yards for a Redskins' touchdown with 6:29 to play, and the Eagles' third straight loss was sealed when they botched a field goal attempt with less than a minute left.

Barefooted kicker Tony Franklin was lined up for a 25-yard attempt — a chip shot for him — with 54 seconds left, but holder John Sciarra bobbled the snap, depriving Franklin of his chance to tie it up.

"John is the most sure-handed football player we have," Coach Dick Vermeil said, "but he dropped the ball. Maybe we are just snakebit."

49ers 21, Bengals 3

Joe Montana threw two touchdown passes and ran for another, and the San Francisco capitalized on six Cincinnati turnovers to hold the Bengals to three points.

Pirates Try To Regroup Vs. Campbell Tonight

A Staff Report

COLUMBIA, Mo. — After watching his team put on a poor performance in losing to Canisius Saturday night, East Carolina coach Dave Odom said the Pirates would have to regroup.

The Pirates' first chance at redeeming themselves comes tonight when they play host to an improved Campbell team in Minges Colisieum.

Game time is 7:30. Tickets are available.

The Pirates enter tonight's game having lost their last two games after opening the season with a 72-54 win over Ohio University. ECU lost to 16th-ranked Missouri, 87-55, Friday night in the opening round of the Show-Me Classic and then fell to Canisius, 73-66, in the consolation game Saturday night. Campbell is 3-1.

A win tonight would give Odom, who is in his third year at ECU, 30 career victories.

Following tonight's game, ECU takes an exam break before returning to the court next Friday night in the Mountaineer Classic in Charleston, W. Va.

ECU will play Long Island University in the opening-round of the two-day tournament.

Notes from the Show-Me Classic...

•Missouri, now 3-0, won the tournament for the ninth straight year by beating Wyoming, 64-54. The win was Missouri's 22nd straight in the Hearnes Center. Wyoming is now 4-1.

Missouri forward Marvin McCrary was named the tournament's most valuable player. The five-man all-tournament team included Missouri's Steve Stipanovich, Ricky Frazier, Jon Sunvold and Wyoming's Mike Jackson and Bill Garnett.

ECU guard Tony Byles led the Pirates in scoring and most else during the tournament, scoring 15 points against Missouri and 20 against Canisius. Byles hit 14 of 22 from the field and seven of 10 from the foul line.

ECU forward Charles Green was the Pirates's second-leading scorer, with eight against Missouri and 22 against Canisius. Green hit 12 of 21 from the field and six of 10 from the foul line. Green also had 13 rebounds, 10 of which came against Canisius.

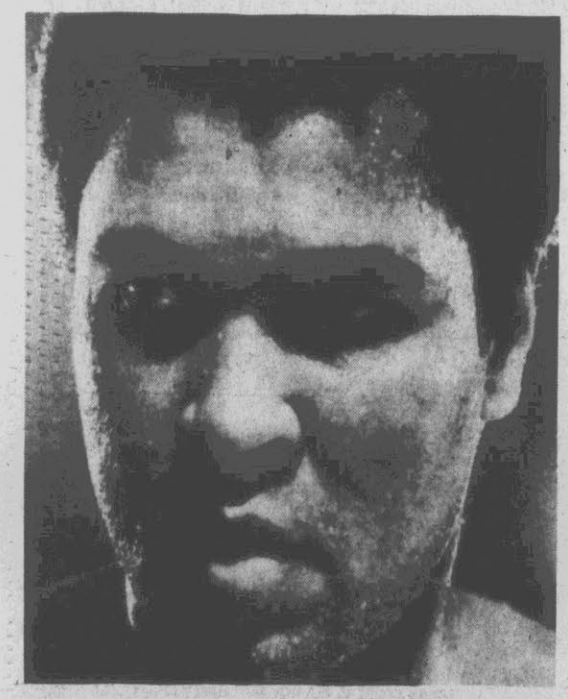

The Pirates had 49 turnovers in the two games and hit 49 of 111 shots (44%) in the two games.

Can Ali Overcome Age, Foe?

Preparing For Comeback

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

An old Ali-watcher and sometimes confidant is convinced that Ali will beat Trevor Berbick in his comeback fight Friday night in the Bahamas and set off another wave of "Muhammadmania."

"It's a gut feeling and knowing Ali as I do," said Irving Rudd. "He may even win impressively, and can you imagine what that would do to the heavyweight picture?

"Ali has a forum again. He's no longer is just 'The Greatest,' he's the 'Super Greatest.' Can you imagine the storm he can create — Heaven help us.

"But don't laugh it off."

Rudd, 64, is a son of Russian immigrants out of the Brownsville section of Brooklyn which also produced Danny Kaye, Phil Silvers, Steve Lawrence and Murder, Inc., not to mention a distinguished line of lawyers, doctors and statesmen.

Rudd chose none of these fields. He was destined to become a press agent, one of the last of a dying breed cut from the cloth of Cash'n'Carry Pyle and P.T. Barnum. He would sell his soul for a catchy headline.

As a kid, he hung around the boxing clubs and was doing press agentry for hand-to-mouth promoters before he got out of his teens. He peddled items when the ring game was thriving in Ridgewood Grove, an arena the borough of Queens.

He took orders from Walter O'Malley as promotion director of the Brooklyn Dodgers in the 1950s and then, when the big city became enamored of harness racing, he joined Yonkers Raceway for 12 years.

In 1963 he pierced the Iron Curtain by persuading the Russians to send horses to the Yonkers track.

When the New York City Off-Track Betting was inaugurated in New York in 1970, he was hired as Director of Public Relations. The first thing he did was bring in Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder from Las Vegas as a consultant.

But too much sweat of the gyms had seeped into his blood and he could not resist a return to boxing. He had a hand in publicizing 75 world title fights, including Ali's two bouts with Leon Spinks and the first Sugar Ray Leonard-Roberto Duran fight in Montreal.

When Ali took a stance rare for him and went into a shell, refusing to talk to writers prior to the first fight with Spinks in Las Vegas, it was Rudd who gave it its imperishable tag:

"The Sphinx vs. the Spinks."

Rudd, now with Bob Arum's Top Rank, Inc., says he thinks it's a shame that Ali, who will be 40 next month and who was badly beaten by WBC titleholder Larry Holmes last year, should risk another comeback attempt.

"It's a tragedy for all who remember Ali in his greatest moments," Rudd said. "But the man is mystical, sometimes almost magical. He reaches down and draws from a reservoir that only he knows exists."

Rudd has had the good

Surging Steelers Face Raiders

OAKLAND (AP) — The surging Pittsburgh Steelers hope to increase their playoff chances while the Oakland Raiders try to avoid elimination when the last two Super Bowl champions clash at the Oakland Coliseum tonight.

Pittsburgh is riding a three-game winning streak with an 8-5 record going into the nationally televised National Football League game. A victory would move the Steelers to within a game of front-running Cincinnati in the American Conference Central Division, with the Bengals scheduled to play at Pittsburgh next Sunday.

"It's just one of those seasons. We've struggled some defensively, we've struggled some offensively. We seem to have it a little under control now," said Steelers Coach Chuck Noll in explaining Pittsburgh's sudden surge.

With Terry Bradshaw passing for one touchdown and running for another, and with Franco Harris rushing for 114 yards and a TD, the Steelers looked like their old, NFL-dominating selves last week in a 24-0 rout of Los Angeles.

In their last three games, the Steelers have averaged 30 points, and their opponents have committed 17 turnovers.

The Raiders, meanwhile, have blown hot and cold in compiling a 6-7 record. They trail three teams in the AFC West but mathematically could still earn a wild card playoff berth.

Injuries have plagued Oakland, veterans such as guard Gene Upshaw have been benched, and second-year pro Marc Wilson has taken over for Jim Plunkett, who last January led the team to victory in the Super Bowl.

Rather than thinking Super Bowl again, the Raiders now are concentrating on avoiding their first losing season since 1964.

Oakland is coming off an impressive 32-31 victory over Seattle in which Wilson fired three touchdown passes in the second half as the Raiders erased a 24-3 deficit.

If the Raiders have an advantage against the Steelers, it is their record in Monday night games — 17-1-1. Last year they defeated the Steelers 45-34 in the highest-scoring Monday night game ever.

That was a pivotal contest for both teams. It marked the emergence of Plunkett as a comeback star, and spelled the beginning of the end for the Steelers' chances to defend their 1980 Super Bowl crown.

Pittsburgh wide receiver Lynn Swann, hospitalized briefly with a bruised lung suffered against the Rams, is expected to play.

Dave Odom

ECU Coach Dave Odom To Speak At Sports Club

East Carolina coach Dave Odom will be the featured speaker at the regular meeting of the Greenville Sports Club at noon Tuesday at the Ramada Inn.

Odom is in his third year at ECU after being an assistant at Wake Forest from 1977 to 1979. Prior to that he coached at Goldsboro and Durham high schools and was named Durham's coach-of-the-year in 1973, 1975 and 1976. He was selected to coach the U.S. all-stars in the McDonald's Classic in 1976.

ECU is 1-2 this season and plays Campbell tonight.

Visitors and new members are welcome. Annual dues are $30, but at this stage of the season they have been reduced to $25.

The next meeting of the club will be Jan. 12 when former Atlantic Coast Conference official Lou Bello will speak.

Woody Peele

East Carolina, contrary to the headlines in the Saturday morning newspapers, has not been banished to the never-never land of Division I-AA football.

That's not to say that it still might not happen. But, to paraphrase, reports of ECU's death have been greatly exaggerated.

East Carolina would seem to meet most of the requirements for the "new" Divison I-A, meeting all home and overall attendance figures and the stadium size attendance marks.

Whether, or how quickly, the strength of schedule requirement is brought to bear may be the final telling point.

East Carolina's schedule for the 1982 football season has not yet been released, but it is believed to list Florida State, West Virgina, N.C. State, Missouri, and Temple. It is thought that all five of those will make the Division I-A setup. Depending on what happens in the Mid-American Conference, Central Michigan, another team on the list, could also achieve I-A status. It is doubtful that the others on the slate will remain I-A however. Several Southern and Southland Conference teams are on the list, along with Richmond and William & Mary.

The whole thing may be resolved in the January NCAA meeting, if not sooner. The Collegiate Football Association (CFA) has to sign its proposed television contract with NBC by next Monday or it will be voided. More than likely, the majority of the 61 teams will stick with the pact.

That will bring them into open conflict with the NCAA. How the NCAA will react to that is another question. It can ignore it, allowing the CFA teams to go their own way. It can punish the CFA teams, either by expulsion, probation, or a gently wrist-slapping.

Or, the CFA may choose to drop out of the NCAA and go its own way, working with other sports beside football.

East Carolina, which had the opportunity to join the CFA some years back, but didn't, would now like to be on the inside. Whether it will be possible is questionable.

One thing is certain. ECU must have the backing, solidly, of its supporters, regardless of how things go.

For East Carolina's Dave Odom, this past weekend must have been a nightmare. The Pirates, after an opening game win over Ohio, dropped back-to-back games in the Show-Me Classic, continuing ECU's tournament troubles.

Not since the second game of Odom's three-year tenure have the Pirates won a tourney game, dropping eight straight since then, although one of those was later was later forfeited because of the use of an ineligible player.

East Carolina has not been in the championship game of a tournament since the year before that, when it reached the finals of the U-Conn Classic, losing to hosting Connecticut.

Since joining Division I, East Carolina has never won an invitational tournament, something Odom would like to see changed.

His Pirates have one more chance this year, in the Mountaineer Classic at West Virginia.

Tonight, the Pirates play their final home game in Minges for December. Hopefully, the fans will not give up on them this early in the year.

Cincinnati outrushed and outpassed the 49ers but lost the ball three times on fumbles. In addition, Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson was intercepted twice before he left the game with a sprained toe in the third quarter, and the 49ers intercepted his backup, Jack Thompson, once.

"They had been playing as the best team in the league," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh said of the Bengals, "but they didn't quite meet up to their standards this week. I still think they are one of the great teams in the league."

Bucs 24, Falcons 23

Tampa Bay quarterback Doug Williams threw a 71-yard scoring pass to wide receiver Kevin House with 5:39 to play, and Atlanta's Mick Luckhurst missed a 45-yard field goal try with four seconds left in the game.

The TD strike was Williams' second of the day and came four minutes after William Andrews ran 2 yards to give Atlanta a 23-17 lead. The loss left Atlanta at 7-7, four games behind San Francisco in the NFC West.

The Bucs went into the game in a three-way for the NFC Central lead with Detroit and Minnesota, all one game ahead of Green Bay.

Packers 31, Lions 17

Lynn Dickey passed for 279 yards and a pair of touchdowns as the Packers snapped Detroit's three-game winning streak. Dickey's longer scoring strike went for 15 yards to James Lofton and gave Green Bay a 21-10 lead in the third quarter. Lofton caught four passes for 90 yards.

The victory was the fifth in six games for the Packers.

Detroit led 10-0 midway through the second quarter, but Harlan Huckleby scored the first of his two touchdowns with 4:46 left in the first half to pull the Packers within three.

Bears 10, Vikings 9

Bob Avellini threw his first touchdown pass in two years, a 72-yarder to Brian Baschnagel early in the fourth quarter, to power the Bears past Minnesota. Walter Payton gained 112 yards to go over the 100-yard mark for the 46th time in his career.

The loss was the third straight for Minnesota, while Chicago, 4-10, snapped a three-game losing streak.

Dolphins 24, Patriots 14

David Woodley, booed after sub-par performances in his previous two games, ran for one touchdown and threw for another to help Miami take control of the AFC East. The loss was the seventh in a row for New England, 2-12.

Woodley snapped a 14-14 tie with 56 seconds left in the third quarter when he hit Eddie Hill on a 4-yard scoring play. It was the first touchdown pass in five games for Woodley, who was ineffective in his past two appearances and was relieved by Don Strock.

Seahawks 27, Jets 23

The Jets, who began the day tied with Miami in the AFC East at 8-4-1, saw their Seahawks jinx continue. The Jets never have beaten Seattle, and second-year pro quarterback Dave Krieg of the Seahawks engineered Sunday's victory.

Krieg, playing for the injured Jim Zorn, passed for two touchdowns and ran for another. Seattle trailed 23-20 when Krieg hit Steve Largent on a 57-yard scoring play with 8:21 to play.

Bills 28, Chargers 27

Joe Cribbs ran 1 yard for a touchdown with 3:37 left in the third period, giving Buffalo a 28-24 lead, and the Bills halted San Diego's last-gasp drive with a fumble recovery by cornerback Rufus Bess with 1:54 to play.

San Diego led 21-14 at halftime, but Bills quarterback Joe Ferguson engineered scoring drives of 70 and 68 yards in the third quarter to keep Buffalo's playoff hopes alive.

Broncos 16, Chiefs 13

Rob Lytle and Larry Canada scored on short runs to cap drives engineered by Craig Morton, and Denver built a 16-0 first-half lead that held up over Kansas City.

Giants 10, Rams 7

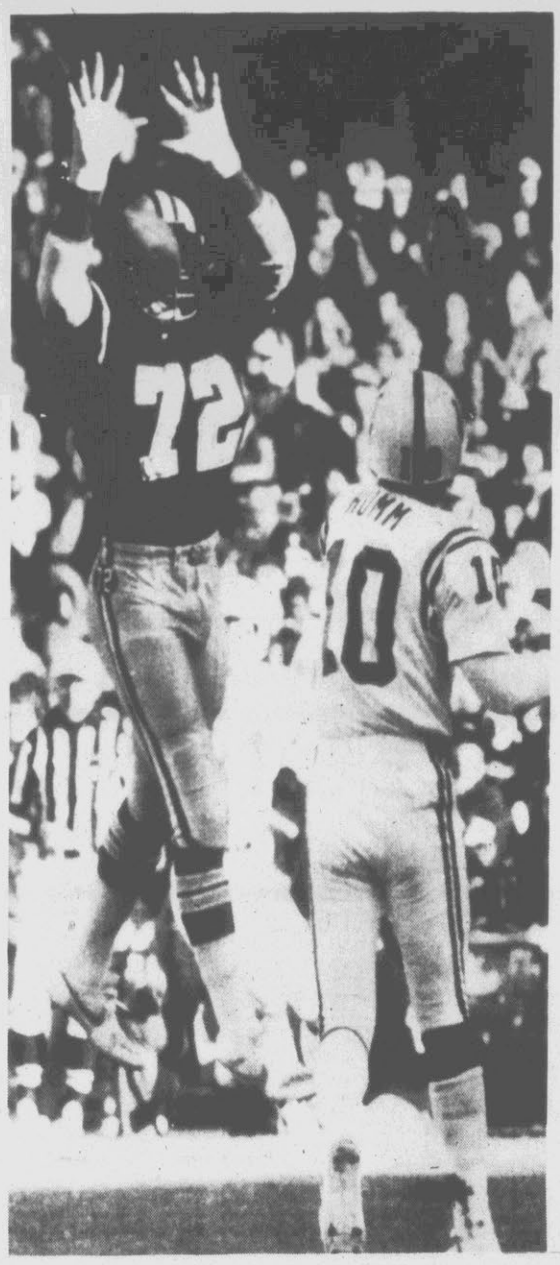

Rob Carpenter scored on a 1-yard run, and Joe Danelo kicked a 19-yard field goal that broke a 7-7 tie early in the fourth quarter as the Giants handed the Rams their ninth loss of the season.

New York trailed 7-0 until Carpenter's scoring dive evened the score early in the third quarter.

Cardinals 30, Saints 3

Neil Lomax, a rookie from Portland State, completed 10 straight passes as he led two scoring drives, and he ran 22 yards for a touchdown to beat the Saints, who dropped to 4-10.

St. Louis capped its romp with a 44-yard scoring run by Roy Green out of punt formation.

fortune to work with two of the most fascinating sports personalities of our age — Casey Stengel, who was a Dodger before he was a Yankee or Met, and Muhammad Ali.

"The two greatest press agents I've ever known," said the veteran drum beater. "Both had a finger on the public pulse. Some people thought Ali was a bombastic bore and regarded Casey a loveable clown. Listen, maybe they weren't school smart but both had sharp minds and wonderful down-to-earth philosophies.

"They were both puckish, playing the press and public on a string, but never cruel."

Rudd recalled how Ali once summoned him into his room in the middle of the night to read a speech he was to deliver to the National Press Club in Washington, D.C.

"I was astounded," Rudd said. "It was written in long hand on legal pads. It was almost a sermon, warning his audience to always listen to the little people — the poor and the working mothers — or they would have to answer to God."

Stengel's sense of humor was reflected once when, as a director of a Glendale, Calif., bank, he was interviewed by a financial reporter on the economic state of the country.

"Back in the Depression, when things were tough, I decided to go into the window blind business — everybody's got windows," Casey said. "But then some guy came along with something called Venetian blinds. I went broke.

"Then I read that FDR (President Roosevelt) changed the date of Thanksgiving, giving us two Thanksgivings. I bought a turkey farm. Then they changed back to one. I was up to my ears in turkeys."

Thursday evening Gilchrist noticed more than just his clothes in his suit case. "I looked over and I saw this rat crawling around my underwear," Gilchrist said.

Gilchrist asked the one of the housekeepers about the rat. "She said they had heard there was one around," Gilchrist said.

The rat did not return the rest of ECU's stay in Columbia. Rumor persists, however, that the rat had hopes of returning to Greenville to join ECU's Lady 'Pi-Rats'.

•A former ECU player and a former ECU coach are both now on the Missouri football staff.

George Wheeler, a former ECU star defensive lineman during the late 1960s, is now the UM defensive line coach. Wheeler is also a former D.H. Conley coach and was the first white coach at North Carolina A&T.

Carl Reese, a former defensive coach under Mike McGee and Sonny Randle, is now the UM defensive coordinator.

Missouri, which operates under a $7.75 million athletic budget, was 7-4-0 this season and will play Southern Mississippi (8-1-1) in the Tangerine Bowl on Dec. 19 in Orlando, Fla.

Player Captures S. African Open

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Veteran Gary Player, shaking off the fatigue of more than five rounds of golf in five days, won the South African Open Golf Tournament for the 13th time in a 21-hole playoff with fellow South African John Bland and Briton Warren Humphreys.

The 46-year-old Player, Bland and Humphreys finished the regulation 72 holes tied at 272, after all three broke par on the Royal Johannesburg course. An 18-hole playoff round eliminated only Humphreys, who scored a par-72. Player and Bland, each with 70, went into sudden-death extra holes.

LPGA To Return In 1983?

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The director of the American Defender-WRAL golf tournament says the sudden cancellation of the 1982 event does not mean the end of LPGA events in Raleigh.

Tom Bradshaw said in an interview that he had been in touch with LPGA Commissioner Ray Volpe about the chances of bringing the LPGA tour back to Raleigh in 1983.

The Raleigh tournament is one of the oldest on the LPGA tour and has been held every year since 1966 except in 1979, when suitable dates could not be arranged.

Bradshaw said he was optimistic about a possible LPGA return to the city, adding that the LPGA was "trying to put something together for 1983" and that a tournament would be held if dates could be obtained and a new, major sponsor arranged to underwrite the event.

In the past month, the American Defender Life Insurance Co. and Capitol Broadcasting Co. agreed to drop their joint sponsorship of the tournament. Each was contributing in excess of $60,000 toward a total tournament budget of $260,000 and each was concerned about the small amount of money turned over to Sports for Charity.

Jim Goodmon, WRAL president, said the basic idea was for the tournament to grow through ticket sales and advertising, thus providing more money for charity. He also said input would go down as the tournament grew. But that input increased and nothing could be done to improve the situation, he added.

"Both American Defender and WRAL were putting in $45,000 in cash and at least $15,000 in time," Goodmon added. "And Sports for Charity realized all of $9,000 from the tournament."

Although Bradshaw has not given up hope of holding an LPGA tournament, alternative plans have been discussed for raising money for Sports for Charity, including an exhibition soccer game, possibly a tennis exhibition.

One of the stumbling blocks for the 1982 tournament was the planned dates, May 2-9. Those dates, which were changed from the 1981 tournament, conflicted with the American Defender Life corporate sales meeting. Company executives could attend no more than one day of the tournament.

Track Officials Set To Decide Plucknett Mark

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The American discus record will better the world mark if U.S. track officials give final approval today to a toss earlier this year by Ben Plucknett.

Plucknett remains barred from international competition for alleged use of steroids.

Members of the records subcommittee of The Athletics Congress, the nation's premier track organization, voted unanimously Sunday to recognize the discus thrower's May 16 throw of 233 feet, 7 inches. Their recommendation is subject to final approval Monday.

If recognized, Plucknett's throw would top the world record of 233-5 held by East German Wolfgang Schmidt.

Plucknett was banned for life in July from international competition by the world body governing of track and field: the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

The IAAF maintained Plucknett used steroids, a drug that adds to muscle bulk and aids in building an athlete's strength.

TAC directors have rejected Plucknett's appeal to ignore the IAAF ruling and allow him to participate in international meets. As it stands now, he's only allowed to compete in domestic events.

In effect, the TAC has said the discus thower is eligible as far as it's concerned, but it will abide by the IAAF decision.

"Plucknett's 233-7 has been recommended for approval by the Track and Field Committee as an American record," said records panel chairman Bob Hersh. "He is an eligible American athlete and, for our record purposes, there's no grounds for denying it."

Plucknett has another record pending — a 237-4 toss on July 7 in Stockholm. But as yet, no application for record approval has been submitted to the panel, Hersh said.

In other action Sunday, the records panel heard an appeal from two-time Olympic silver medalist Dwight Stones to restore 1976 high jump records taken from him last year.

The TAC took the records away after it determined the high jump runway where Stones set the records was slanted.

Stones has since regained the record with a later jump, but the high jumper said he'd like to see his 1976 leap of 7-7 recognized "for the sake of posterity."

The records panel voted to move Stones' appeal to the Track and Field Committee without recommendation.

Boone Sold To Angels...

Paul Owens, Phillies' general manager, said there were a couple of clubs interested in Boone.

"He expressed some interest in returning to California, so we worked up a deal with the Angels," Owens said said of Boone, a native of San Diego.

Boone was picked out of Stanford in the sixth round of the 1969 free agent draft. He became the Phillies' regular catcher in 1973, and has compiled a lifetime batting average of .263.

Boone, a son of former major leaguer Ray Boone, is a two-time Gold Glove winner. He is the National League player representive to the Players Association.

The only other move made Sunday was the re-signing by Toronto of free agent catcher Buck Martinez.

Among the many rumors that made the rounds at the meeting was that the St. Louis Cardinals might trade talented but controversial shortstop Garry Templeton to Baltimore for two pitchers.

The Baltimore pitchers mentioned were Mike Flanagan, Steve Stone and Scott McGregor.

The Cardinals also indicated they were ready to meet the trade demand of outfielder Sixto Lezcano.

Seattle also reportedly was set to oblige a similar request by outfielder Tom Paciorek, the second-leading hitter in the American League.

Montreal was said to be set to re-sign free agent shortstop Chris Speier, while the Dodgers appeared on the brink of doing the same with Baltimore free agent shortstop Mark Belanger.

Another report had Dodgers super scout Charley Metro joining Oakland as a coach.

There still were 37 of this year's free agent class waiting for offers, including Reggie Jackson and Ron Guidry of the New York Yankees; Ed Farmer, Chicago White Sox reliever; Cincinnati's Dave Collins, and Cleveand's John Denny.

The Chicago Cubs were interested in signing Tony Scott, who played out his option with Houston.

Houston, Oakland, Kansas City and the Yankees are in the Guidry bidding. Houston would trade pitcher Bob Knepper for much needed power if it signs Guidry.

Despite 5 Bogeys, Pair $100,000 Richer

Kite, Daniel Win Title

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite and Beth Daniel thought they had ruined their chance to win the JC Penney Golf Classic. But despite five bogeys — including two in the final round — the twosome is $100,000 richer.

"We made bogeys every round," said Kite after the pair recorded a 2-stroke, 18-under-par 270 victory Sunday. "I didn't think if we had five we would win. But we never let ourselves get down. We'd come back and make birdies. If we played any good, we were going to win, we were so confident."

Kite and Daniel, top money earners on the men and women's tour this year, put together a final-round 70 to stave off a challenge from the fast-closing twosome of Vance Heafner and Cathy Morse. At one point late in the last round, the pursuers pulled within one stroke of the leaders, but Kite and Daniel managed to put another birdie between them and held on.

Heafner, a second-year player, and Morse blasted their way from a five-way fifth-place tie — with the help of nine birdies and despite two bogeys of their own — for the $57,000 runnerup spot in the sixth annual mixed teams event at Bardmoor Country Club. Forty-eight teams played the 7,015-yard course.

Heafner didn't know he was playing the tournament until last week when he got a telephone call asking him to team up with Morse because her partner, Dan Halldorson, had withdrawn.

"I was the sixth guy called," he said. "I picked up Golf World Magazine to see how much money Cathy won and to see what kind of a partner I was going to get."

He wasn't disappointed.

In the final round, Heafner dropped birdie putts of 6 and 12 feet on the front side and Morse sank a 15-footer.

They blistered the back nine with six straight birdies, Heafner firing four of them from a 1-foot tap in to 15 feet and Morse making the other two including a 30-foot putt.

"We were lucky nobody made the charge earlier," said Kite. After bogeying the 15th hole we found ourselves with a one-shot lead. Two holes before we had a four-shot lead. I was pleased with the way we responded."

For the four-day $500,000 event — the richest purse in golf — Kite and Daniel put together earlier rounds of 69, 67 and 64, the best round of the tourney. It gave them a three-stroke lead heading into the final round.

Heafner and Morse combined for 69-67-71 and 65 for a 16-under-par 272 finish.

Andy Bean and Sally Little, who held the lead until the midway mark, finished third with 66-68-69-71 for 274 and a team total of $36,000.

Defending champions Curtis Strange and Nancy Lopez-Melton were tied four strokes back with Jay Haas and Hollis Stacy at 275. Each team pocketed $23,400.

Cav Coach Wants Respect

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — If you're a Cleveland Cavalier fan, don't go buying your playoff tickets just yet, warns new Coach Chuck Daly.

"I'd be remiss if I guaranteed anything," the former Philadelphia 76ers assistant said Sunday as he assumed the team head coaching job. "All I'm interested in is credibility for the franchise and getting the team headed in the right direction."

The Cavaliers have a 4-14 record and are in last place in the Central Division of the National Basketball Association's Eastern Conference.

Don Delaney was fired as Cleveland's coach Thursday, but he remains general manager of the club.

Daly, who met with his players for the first time Sunday, said, "Their record would indicate it's questionable at this point" that they have the talent to make the playoffs this season.

He added, "I've only seen the club — well, I scouted them twice and we (the 76ers) played them twice, so I would say it's unfair to say at this point."

Daly was in his fifth year as an assistant to Billy Cunningham in Philadelphia when he agreed to take the Cleveland job.

Former Atlanta Hawks Coach Hubie Brown was the top choice of Cavaliers owner Ted Stepien, but Brown declined Stepien's offer Friday. A few hours later, Daly was offered the job.

He signed a three-year contract said to be worth about $500,000.

"I don't think there are any easy jobs in this league," he said. "You've got to have players who care about winning and will work toward that goal."

Daly said that he had been contacted previously by four other NBA teams about coaching jobs. He decided that now, "The timing was right, and the challenge was right. You can wait too long, and I think it's time to move on," he said.

The Cavaliers have compiled the NBA's second-worst record despite the preseason signing of free agents James Edwards, Scott Wedman and Bobby Wilkerson and the acquisition of James Silas in a trade.

"We didn't foresee Wedman getting off to a bad start, hurting his back and then hurting an ankle," Stepien said.

Cleveland sent a 1985 second-round draft choice to Philadelphia as compensation for signing Daly.

Daly compiled a 125-38 record over six years at the University of Pennsylvania, where he won four Ivy League titles. He also coached Boston College for two years after six years as a Duke assistant.

He will keep current assistants Bob Kloppenburg, Gerald Oliver and Gus Johnson for the rest of this season. Kloppenburg served as interim coach during a loss to the Washington Bullets Saturday night.

4 Local Gymnasts Qualify For State

GREENSBORO — Four Rosette gymnasts qualfied for the state meet this past weekend at the Class 2 Sectional Qualifying meet here. A total of 75 girls from 10 teams competed in the meet.

Debbie Sigler, Peggy Becker and Christy Garrison all qualifed for the state meet in the 12 to 14 age group while Jenny Johnsrude qualified in the 15 and over age group. The state meet is set for March.

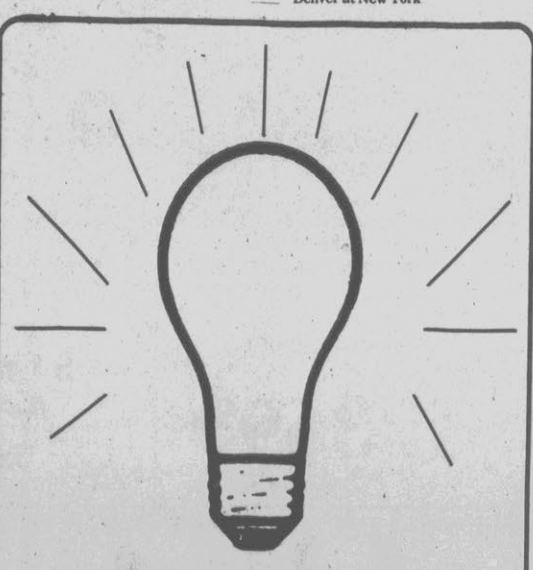

Johnsrude was first in the vault, second on floor exercise, third on the balance beam and sixth on the uneven bar to finish third all-around with a score of 58.65, good enough to qualify here for the state meet.

Also in the 15 and over age group, Ginger McLendon finished third on the balance beam.

Sigler was second on the uneven bars and sixth on the balance beam for an all-around total of 62.45. Sigler scored an 8.65 on the compulsory uneven bars — the best score of the meet.

Becker was fifth on the balance beam and floor exercise for a 61.85 total. She had the highest score of the meet on the optional balance beam with an 8.55.

Garrison finished with an all-around score of 58.40.

Manpower Shortage Felt By Houston's Police Dept.

By JAMES R. KING
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Issuing traffic tickets is now considered an extra duty of regular patrol squads in the nation's fifth largest city, where a severe manpower shortage in the Houston Police Department has eliminated all but the essential police services.

It means, "unfortunately, you can speed or run a red light in Houston and not get caught if you're lucky, and you don't have to be too terribly lucky," said police spokesman Larry Troutt.

Houston has about 3,000 officers and needs at least 5,000, he said, to cope with a population of about 1.6 million that is growing at a rate of 1,000 people a week.

The department has launched a national recruiting program focused on urban areas of the Northeast and aimed at blacks and Hispanics, but because of the department's rigid standards, only 70 out of every 1,000 applicants qualify for the city's new $11 million police academy.

Another problem, said Deputy Chief Bill Gaines, is the tarnished image of the department in recent years and a hostility among young people toward any kind of authority, a holdover of the "lifestyle of the 1960s."

To complicate matters, nearly half of all applicants are disqualified because of their past use of drugs, Gaines said. At the present rate, "it will take us 10 to 12 years to get to 5,000 and by that time we're probably going to be behind again," because of the city's rapid population growth, he said.

In the meantime, Troutt said, if a Houston resident is involved in a minor traffic accident or his home is burglarized while he is away, the police department's advice is: Don't call us.

"What we're doing in Houston is saying, 'Folks, we're undermanned, and until we get it together, you're going to have to help us out,'" said Troutt. He said motorists involved in non-injury accidents should go in person to the nearest police substation or headquarters within 24 hours and fill out a report.

Burglary victims are told to do the same thing.

"It used to be that the citizen role in the policing effort was more of a crime prevention effort," said Troutt. "Now we're actually getting them involved in the working situation — stuff a police officer has had to do in the past."

According to the department's Statistics Division, crime in seven major areas — murder, rape, burglary, robbery, larceny, assault and auto theft, increased 1.6 percent from 1979 to 1980. The number of murders actually decreased from 1979 to 1980 — 657 to 633 — but so far this year, the murder count stands at 650 with about four weeks left in the year.

The police shortage has attracted a chapter of the Guardian Angels, the teenage citizens security group founded in New York City. And some businessmen have hired their own police guards. Merchants in the poor Montrose neighborhood near downtown pooled their funds six months ago to hire two off-duty officers to walk the beat, which Troutt said was congested with "prostitutes, con artists and muggers."

Gaines said Houston has 1.7 police officers for every 1,000 residents — the lowest ratio among the nation's top 10 cities. He said Philadelphia, which has about the same population as Houston, has more than five officers per every thousand citizens.

The FBI has recommended a ratio of at least 2.5 officers per 1,000 residents, but if that were used here, "we've been undermanned for 10 to 12 years," said Gaines.

He said in 1974, when the department had about half as many officers as it needed to meet the FBI minimum standard, it accepted $3.5 million in federal funds and embarked on a national campaign to attract recruits.

"We recruit at national conventions, county fairs, rodeos, parking lots, shopping centers — everything except going out and roping people and dragging them in," said Gaines.

As a result, as many as three-quarters of the cadets in training here today are from out of state, with New York and Detroit at the top of the list of home towns.

"Our schools have been heavily from northern and eastern cities — the mostly economic-depressed areas," said Gaines.

He and Police Chief B.K. Johnson say they don't wish for hard times, but they admit the worse off the economy is, the easier it is to find qualified applicants willing to work as a police officer for a starting salary of $18,767.

"We lose about 47 percent of our applicants strictly because of their past use of narcotics," Gaines said. "We're not going to drop those standards.

"It is a big problem stemming from the lifestyle of the 1960s. Another one is that during the 1960s and the early part of the '70s, authority was looked down upon," he said.

One problem unique to Houston, he said, was the bad publicity the department has received from several incidents during the late 1970s when several officers were accused of killing a Mexican-American arrested for being drunk and rowdy and for planting what are called "throw-down guns" on unarmed citizens killed by police.

The City Council has increased the police department's advertising budget from $179,000 last year to $545,000 this year, but no one sees that as a complete solution.

"We got so smeared around in the last two or three years — one of the things you're going to have to do down here is change the whole image of the police department," said Gaines.

THREE INJURED IN SUNDAY EVENING ACCIDENT — Three persons were reported injured Sunday afternoon about 5:30 when two cars collided about five miles west of Greenville on U.S. 13/264. According to North Carolina Highway Patrol records, a car driven by Lyman Earl Bryan of Farmville was headed east and attempted to make a left turn into a driveway and was struck by a westbound vehicle (car on left) driven by Cathy Denise Gray-Williams of Elizabethtown. Both drivers as well as a passenger in the Bryan car were injured and transportated to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment. The Bryan car was destroyed when it caught fire shortly after the collision. Bryan was charged with a safe movement violation. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

District Judge Parker Quitting Court System

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A North Carolina district judge said Sunday that he will resign a juvenile court system that he says damages children, so that he can do more to help the young.

Judge John Hill Parker of Wake County said he was exhausted from trying to "salvage peace, hope and support for children from wrecked homes and being able to only slap bandaids on hemorrhaging child relationship."

Parker, 37, announced that he plans to resign as a domestic court judge on the 10th Judicial District effective Feb. 1. But he announced plans to become and advocate for children.

"I have this calling," he added. "I want to do more to help the children of the state. Banks and other groups have lobbies, but children don't have a lobby."

Judge George F. Bason, chief judge for the district, said Sunday he was "very sorry that he (Parker) finds it necessary to resign."

But Bason, who handles juvenile cases himself, said, "This is the same frustration that I have mentioned a number of times ... that precipitated the 'Willie M' class-action suit."

The suit, filed on behalf of emotionally disturbed children in North Carolina, contends that the state is not doing enough to help the children.

Saying that Parker was "an excellent spokesman" for these issues, Bason said, "There certainly is an opportunity in the Legislature to address these problems."

Parker said he became frustrated under the massive workload of the child custody and child support cases he must hear and because he lacks power to help the innocent bystanders in the cases — the children.

"I can't make anyone pay child support," he said. "I can jail them, but I can't make them do what they ought to do."

Children from broken homes and children of abusive parents often grow up becoming the kind of parents they had, Parker said.

"We've got to break this generational spiral," he said. "During the years of turmoil, so much damage is done to the child that it carries down to his marriage. The children are forced to relive the sins of their parents."

Parker said he had to hear eight to 10 cases a day.

"It's a zoo in there," he said. "The emotion is so thick you can cut it with a knife. The problems are coming so fast that I have to decide a lifelong case in a matter of minutes."

Parker says the courts should hire clinical therapists to screen cases and to mediate "the less vitriolic cases."

"It would cost less money to have therapists than more judges and courtrooms," he said.

The courts also should appoint guardians to represent the independent interests of children involved in domestic cases and to monitor the results of the case long after it is heard, Parker said.

Holshouser Doubts He Will Run Again

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — James E. Holshouser, who in 1973 became North Carolina's only Republican governor in 100 years, said in an interview he probably will never seek elected office again.

"I'm inclined to think that the odds are less than even," Holshouser said last week. "It's not from lack of desire. But if I can help good candidates to run, I'd much prefer to remain in the private sector."

Holshouser, who has a law practice in Southern Pines, a fund-raising program for Davidson College, a position on the University of North Carolina Board of Governors and chairmanship of First Colony Savings and Loan Association, said he has little interest in the Executive Mansion or as a congressman or senator in Washington.

"I still find life down here mighty pleasant," he said.

Holshouser, governor until 1977, said health problems would have to be an issue discussed "up front" if he were to seek election. He is undergoing regular dialysis treatment for a chronic kidney ailment.

Holshouser said President Reagan's election would have an indirect, but signficant, effect on the party's efforts in 1982 and 1984.

"The state party's goal of winning control of the state Senate in 1982 or 1984 is certainly a possibility," he said.

What makes our All Savers rate such a good deal—and, for many people, a better deal even than the money market certificate—is one simple fact: you'll get the first $1000 in interest free of all federal tax. In fact, if you file a joint return, you can get up to $2000 in tax-free interest.

With an initial deposit of $500 or more, you can lock this rate in for a whole year now with our one-year All Savers certificates. But hurry. The All Savers rate will change at the beginning of next month.

The yield of 8.34 % is based on an annual rate of 8.037 % compounded monthly with interest left on deposit until maturity. You will lose tax benefits if you withdraw your money early or use your certificate as security for a loan. There is a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal.

Quebec's Separatist Premier Threatens Quit In Policy Fight

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

MONTREAL (AP) — Quebec's separatist premier, Rene Levesque, threatened to quit as leader of the Parti Quebecois after a stormy weekend convention in which the party took a new hard line on the question of seceding from Canada.

Levesque, regarded as a party moderate, lost a policy fight with militants who stripped the PQ platform of most references that would bind a future independent Quebec in an economic association with the rest of Canada.

By overwhelming shows of hands, the 2,109 delegates to the PQ's policy convention adopted resolutions Saturday and Sunday that set a new strategy for the party.

The old platform had linked political sovereignty for the French-speaking Canadian province with economic association, saying a PQ government would not declare independence until it had first negotiated continued free trade, a joint currency system and similar common-market measures with English-speaking Canada.

Sixty percent of Quebec's residents rejected a Levesque government referendum in May 1980 seeking authorization to begin economic association negotiations as a prelude to independence.

The new platform declares that "complete sovereignty" for Quebec will be the principal goal, regardless of economic association, and the party will fight the next provincial election on the independence issue.

One approved resolution says the PQ will declare independence for Quebec if it wins that election, even if it does not win a majority of the popular vote.

The timing of the next election has not been set. It could come as early as next year or as late as 1986, when the PQ's current five-year mandate expires.

The new party militance reflects feeling inflamed here in recent weeks by a pending federal constitutional reform that Levesque complains diminishes Quebec's provincial powers.

Levesque said he was deeply disappointed with the changes. Rejection of economic association amounted to "throwing out the baby with the bath water," he claimed.

He said he considered resigning as party president Saturday night but decided to think it over for a few days and consult with other party leaders.

Asked at a later news conference whether he was also considering stepping down as parliamentary party chief and premier, Levesque, 59, indicated he would soon ask the PQ caucus in the provincial legislature for a vote of confidence in his leadership of the government.

Levesque, who helped found the party in 1968, has frequently squabbled, and eventually reconciled, with PQ radicals. This was the first time, however, that he made such a strong public threat to resign the party leadership.

Ian Smith Told Leave Zimbabwe

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AS) — Finance Minister Enos Nkala was quoted today as telling former Prime Minister Ian Smith and "racialist" whites to leave Zimbabwe before they are expelled.

"Zimbabwe will not go to the dogs because some racists have left us," Nkala was quoted as saying in an interview published today in the Herald newspaper, controlled by the government-financed mass media trust.

"Racialist technicians, businessmen and Ian Smith can go before we send them rolling out of the country," the paper quoted him as saying.

Nkala is the 20-month-old black majority government's most vociferous critic of Smith, the last white leader of the former British colony before it became independent as Zimbabwe in April 1980.

Nkala, like most black politicians now in power including Prime Minister Robert Mugabe, was a detainee of the Smith government for a decade.

The minister described as "silly and mischievous" rumors that the Zimbabwean dollar — presently worth $1.40 — would be devalued.

He accused Smith, his successor black bishop Abel Muzorewa and "unscrupulous" businessmen for spreading the rumor.

Calling Smith a "monster" who wanted devaluation, Nkala declared: "Smith has tried to see me but I am not interested in his racialist economics, but rather in the overall social well-being of the majority of the people."

He also was quoted as saying "the World Bank and the IMF (International Monetary Fund) have no role to play" in organizing Zimbabwe's economy.

"We have a lot of friends in the world including the Far East and the Balkan states who want to invest and give technical assistance to Zimbabwe," he was quoted as saying.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 8, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day finds you tied down to uncovering some perplexing conditions from which you can gain many benefits in the future. Plan the future wisely.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Keep rooted to present routines and avoid trying to find new outlets for best results at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Keep promises made and gain the respect of others. Avoid spending money on the the new and untried. Be logical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't come to any agreement in the morning if there is the slightest bit of doubt. Strive for increased happiness.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you study well any responsibilities you want to assume in the future. Know where you are headed.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Study your financial status well and don't go overboard on matters of amusements. Work is the key to success now.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study what your personal desires are and steer clear of a negative-thinking family tie who could spoil things for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Forget the frivolous for now and spend more time on matters that could give you more security in the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure you follow through with promises made to others and gain their goodwill. Attend a social affair tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Listening and following the edicts of influential persons is wise today and you get ahead faster.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have new and practical plans that could give you more benefits in the future, so stop wasting precious time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Postpone meetings with friends and get busy meeting important business commitments. Relax at home tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take extra steps and be of more assistance to associates for mutual gain. Fine day for communicating with outsiders.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY . . . he or she will be one of those clever young persons with much organizational ability and should be given a chance to express this quality early in life. Teach not to be critical of others. Sports are fine for teaching fair play.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

No Solutions Reported As U.S. Envoy Ends Talks

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Philip C. Habib ended his talks in Israel today and a Foreign Ministry spokesman said the U.S. Mideast envoy failed to end Israel's squabbles with Syrian and Palestinian forces in Lebanon.

"His mission was to solve the problems of the region. For the time being the problems have not been solved," said spokesman Avi Pazner.

Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir again told Habib of Israel's concerns over an alleged Palestinian guerrilla arms buildup in southern Lebanon, and the presence of Syrian anti-aircraft missiles in eastern Lebanon, Pazner said.

Habib "expressed the hope" that the cease-fire he arranged in July to end 10 days of fighting between Israel and the guerrillas would continue, Pazner said.

He said Habib's meeting with Shamir today was his last in Israel, and that the American was expected to make one or two more stops in Arab capitals and then return to Washington.

Habib has visited Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Israel this month on his fourth trip to the Middle East since last April.

Habib's mission has been expanded as an effort to help restore political order in Lebanon, where dozens of private armies are engaged in sporadic warfare, as well as mediate Israel's feuds with Syria and the Palestinians.

President Reagan first sent the veteran diplomat to the area to persuade Syria to remove the batteries of missiles that Israel claims hinders its air force from monitoring Palestinian guerrilla movements in southern Lebanon.

Syria moved the missiles into eastern Lebanon in April after Israel shot down two Syrian helicopters it said were attacking its Christian allies.

The Syrians say they need the missiles for self-defense and have vowed they will remain. In addition, Damascus now claims the United States disqualified itself as a mediator when it signed a strategic alliance with Israel last week.

Israel also claims that despite the cease-fire the Palestine Liberation Organization has concentrated between 15,000 ane 20,000 guerrillas in southern Lebanon and is approaching the fighting strength of a regular army.

Israel has repeatedly warned it will take military action if Habib makes no progress on the Syrian and Palestinian issues. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is due here in a few days and is expected to try to restrain the Israelis.

Meanwhile, roving Soviet ambassador Mikhail Sytenco met with Lebanese President Elias Sarkis and Prime Minister Chafik Wazzan in Beirut today, Beirut Radio said. There was no word on what was discussed.

Beirut was the fourth stop on Sytenco's Mideast tour. There was no indication of the reason for his mission, which corresponds with Habib's tour.

In another development, Israeli settlers in the northern Sinai town of Yamit, who last week sealed the entrance to the enclave in a self-imposed siege, took down their barricades today and sat down to negotiate with Defense Minister Ariel Sharon.

Militant settlers are protesting the government's refusal to meet their compensation demands for homes and businesses to be vacated before Israel turns the final third of the Sinai Desert over to Egypt next April.

Sharon refused to meet them until they reoened the gate. The settlers agreed Sunday night, apparently to avoid a possible confrontation with Israeli troops.

At the end of today's talks, Sharon promised to return next week following consulations within the government.

Most of Yamit's 3,500 residents have agreed to government compensation offers of $65,000 to $100,000 for their houses or apartments. About 100 of the town's businessmen are demanding nearly $250,000 each for their stores and homes. The government has offered half that amount.

Question Price Effect In Commission's Role

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Critics and supporters of the North Carolina Milk Commission disagree over whether the policy of setting milk prices hurts consumers or helps small dairies.

The commission sets the price dairy farmers are paid for the milk they sell to processors, while state law forbids processors and retailers from selling milk below cost.

But a recent survey indicates milk costs in Raleigh were among the highest in the nation at $2.35 a gallon. Prices in the rest of the state are lower — $1.87 in Charlotte and $2.29 in Durham.

But supporters say without the controls retail price wars would force small processors out of business, which would let large grocery chains introduce higher prices.

But Allen Baughcum, a Boston economist who used to work with the North Carolina attorney general's office, said that is unlikely.

"There would still be a tremendous number of processors," he said. "Just look at OPEC, they have a tremendous struggle keeping the price in line, even with only 17 members."

Baughcum said milk prices are high in North Carolina because it is "inefficient" for milk to be produced in this area. Production costs are lowest in Minnesota and Wisconsin, and prices rise in proportion to the distance from this center, he said.

Commission executive secretary Grady Cooper Jr. said the Milk Commission began in 1953 in an effort to ensure "a uniform and adequate supply of wholesome milk" after chaotic market conditions in the early 1950s sometimes made it hard to get.

Within 10 years, North Carolina had reduced the amount of milk it imported from 43 million pounds to about 1 million.

But the system is aimed at the least efficient producer, said Lillian Woo, an economist who served briefly on the Milk Commission in the mid-1970s. While it keeps small farmers in business, it gives large farmers, processors and retailers a cushion for profits, she said.

According to the International Association of Milk Control Agencies, the only places where farmers get more than they do in North Carolina are eastern Virginia and Hawaii. The commission's latest price of $16.28 per hundred pounds was set according to a formula involving economic conditions and costs to farmers.

Despite the controls, Milk Commission figures indicate the 2,384 dairy farms operating in 1968 was reduced to 1,080 by 1980.

North Carolina State University economist Geoffrey Benson says that although the price for farmers went from $12.63 per hundred pounds of milk in 1979 to $14.04 in 1980, their costs went from $12.97 to $15.38 for the same period.

Meanwhile, Richard Carlton of the attorney general's antitrust division said his office is monitoring milk prices in the stores to see if there's any evidence of collusion.

Noel Allen, a former member of both the antitrust division and the Milk Commission, said that when word went out about the monitoring, some retailers dropped their prices by 26 cents within weeks.

Iran Student Count High

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although relations between the United States and Iran have broken down, there are more students from Iran attending American colleges and universities than from any other foreign nation, a new study shows.

About 47,550 Iranian students attended U.S. colleges in 1980-81, down from 51,300 the year before, according to the Institute of International Education's annual census of foreign students, released Sunday.

Overall, nearly one-third of the record 312,000 foreign students attending U.S. colleges and universities in 1980-81 were from Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, the study said.

Many of the Iranian students were already in the United States when the U.S. embassy in Tehran was seized and American hostages were taken in November 1979. While new Iranian students are not banned from entering the United States, getting here would be difficult because there are no diplomatic relations between the two nations.

After Iran, the other countries that sent the most students were: Taiwan 19,460; Nigeria 17,350; Canada, 14,320; Japan 13,500; Venezuela 11,750; Saudi Arabia 10,440; Hong Kong 9,660; India, 9,250 and Lebanon 6,770.

Victims Still Hospitalized

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A small girl and a woman, injured last Thursday when the car they were in was struck by a Continental Trailways bus, remained hospitalized Sunday.

Officials at Winston-Salem's Baptist Hospital said Gabriel Godfrey, 7, was in serious but improved condition with head injuries suffered in the incident.

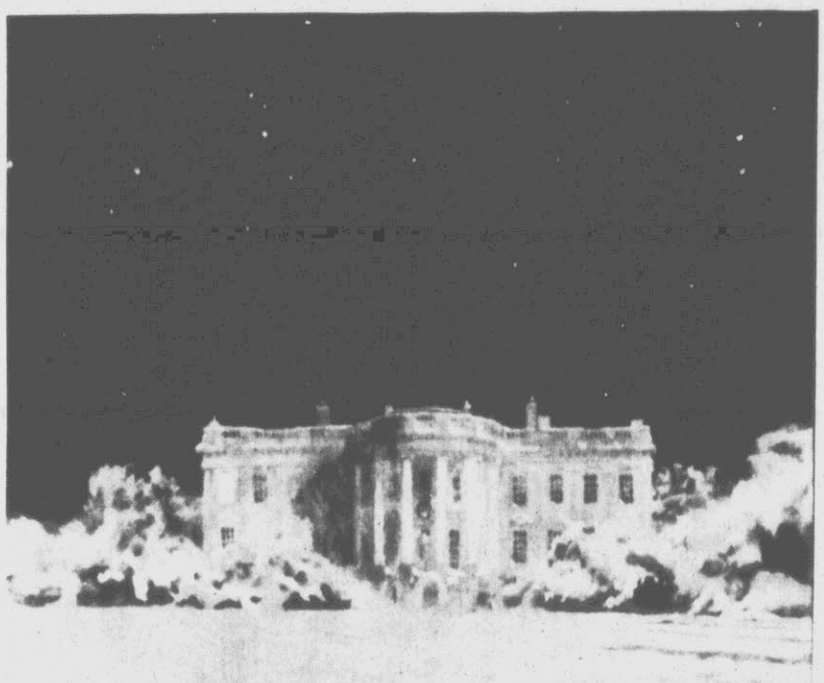

Sherrie Page Jordan, 26, was listed in critical but stable condition in the intensive care unit at the hospital after sustaining internal and head injuries, officials said.

Four-month-old Jody Page Jordan, the Godfrey girl's stepsister, was killed in the crash.

Police have charged the bus driver, Wesley Irvin Jones, 54, of Kernersville, with manslaughter, drunk driving, speeding and failing to stop at a stop sign. He is scheduled for a first court appearance in Burke County District Court Tuesday.

ATOLL SINKING?

LONDON (AP) — A group of dissident French government scientists has warned that repeated French nuclear tests on Mururoa Atoll are steadily sinking the South Pacific Island, the Sunday Times of London reports.

THE MERRILL LYNCH TAX DEFENSE—MAKING TAX DOLLARS WORK FOR YOUR RETIREMENT.

Effective January 1, 1982, anyone who has earned income will be eligible for his or her own Individual Retirement Account (IRA), even if you are already covered by another retirement plan.

You may set aside $2,000 each year and, if you are self-employed, you may also be able to set aside $15,000 in a Keogh Plan, for a total of $17,000 tax deferred each year.

That's a tremendous tax break. And a tremendous opportunity to build a substantial nest egg.

For example, if you begin your retirement planning at age 35, and the $2,000 you put into an IRA grows at an annual average rate of 12%, it becomes $400,000 at 65. The $15,000 you set aside in Keogh or Simplified Employee Pension Plan (SEP) becomes $3,000,000 in the same period. (These are hypothetical rates and amounts. Merrill Lynch believes that 12% is a reasonable growth rate, but, of course, no assurance can be given that this rate will be achieved. You may make less or more than the accumulation shown, depending on the investments you select.)

Don't wait until January 1st. These increases in tax deferments start next year. But now is the time to make plans to capitalize on them.

If you already have an IRA, Keogh or SEP, let Merrill Lynch show you how you might improve it, right now. If you won't be eligible until January 1st, talk to us today so you can take full advantage of these new benefits as soon as they are available. And especially, if you are currently eligible but do not have an IRA, Keogh or SEP, we urge you to get in touch with us immediately so you can capitalize on the opportunity to save tax dollars this year.

A crucial question: which kind of IRA, Keogh or SEP Account should you open?

All IRA, Keogh and SEP Accounts are not alike. There are many variations, some quite limited in their investment options. Merrill Lynch opens up virtually the entire range of investment opportunities to your tax-deferred money.

They enable you to tailor a plan that best suits your investment needs. You can even select a mix. And you can change your investments anytime your goals change or new opportunities arise. Choose from:

Growth stocks • Speculative stocks • High-yield stocks • Blue chip stocks • Corporate bonds • Convertible bonds • Discount bonds • Lower grade bonds • Covered call options • Mutual funds • Government securities • Money market funds • Real estate limited partnerships • Corporate income funds • Government agencies • Treasury bills • Certificates of deposit • Passbook savings accounts • Annuities • And more.

This unique flexibility is part of the Merrill Lynch Tax Defense —your all-out offense against the high cost of retirement. Take advantage of it today. Mail the coupon or call for complete information.

Pearl Harbor Memorial Straddles USS Arizona

By LINDY WASHBURN
Associated Press Writer

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — With private thoughts of war and of peace, they come — American and Japanese alike — to remember the day President Franklin D. Roosevelt said would "live in infamy."

Forty years have passed since Japanese bombers pierced the early Sunday morning clouds over Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, to drop the deadly load that blasted America's Pacific fleet and ignited a generation's patriotism.

The billowing black clouds, the thud of armor-piercing bombs and the rattling percussion of anti-aircraft fire live only in the memories of those who survived the attack, which brought the United States into World War II.

But the day of history is not forgotten. A graceful white memorial straddles the submerged hull of the USS Arizona, with the names of 1,177 dead crewmen, most still buried within the ship, engraved on its marble wall.

It stands where the Arizona's mangled turrets once jutted from oil-slicked waters and the USS Oklahoma wallowed on its side, its air pockets a living hell for men who survived up to 17 days.

The memorial — near the shore of Ford Island in the middle of the harbor — honors the 2,341 American servicemen who lost their lives in the attack. Navy records list 68 civilian casualties as well.

The only other ship still on the harbor bottom, the battleship Utah, lies just off the opposite side of the island. It is commemorated with a shoreside plaque and flagpole.

Navy boats shuttle nearly 2,5 00 visitors a day from the National Park Service's new visitor center to the memorial; mostly Americans and Japanese sharing in the remembrance of World War II as they shared in its sacrifice.

"I could never have imagined it 40 years ago," said one recent visitor, Makato Bando, a Japanese Zero pilot who participated in the attack.

"I myself did not expect to return (from that mission)," he said. "I left my parachute behind. All of the pilots left their parachutes behind."

Bando's attack group followed the first Zeroes to strike Pearl Harbor. "Because the first group already had gone, when we came over ... ships were burning, hangars were burning. ... Most of the planes were already damaged," he said through an interpreter.

How did he feel about the mission?

"When you are in the military, you have to follow your orders whether you like it or not," he said. "Our mission was to attack Pearl Harbor."

Bando was 24 then. Now robust and animated at 64, he recently retired from an insurance company and is filming his memoirs for a Japanese television station.

"That guy was doing his job like I was doing mine," said another recent survivor, speaking not specifically of Bando, but of his Japanese enemy in general.

Horst "Fred" Garbuschewski was at the memorial on a Tuesday afternoon, proudly wearing the hat and shirt of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association, and telling his story to those who cared to ask.

Garbuschewski was 21 years old on Dec. 7, 1941. He was tuning up his clarinet for the Sunday call to colors aboard the USS California when he spotted the Japanese Zeros.

One pilot came so close, he said, he could have hit him with a baseball. A piece of shrapnel hit the back of his neck, but was deflected by a gas mask canister.

"Disaster! That's what I thought," he said. "I could see the Arizona burning."

Hit in the forward magazine by a Japanese bomb, the Arizona sank in 38 feet of water, its crew dead where they lay. Fuel still seeps from its submerged tanks, its eerie sheen dispersed by the waves.

But others remember a radio announcer breaking into the Dodgers-Giants football game to flash news of the Japanese attack.

They remember the "initial defeat and ultimate victory" that architect Alfred Preis expressed symbolically in the memorial's form.

"The structure sags in the center, but stands strong and vigorous at the ends," Preis wrote. "At low tide, as the sun shines upon the hull, the barnacles which encrust it shimmer like gold jewels ... a beautiful sarcophagus."

Dedicated in 1962, the memorial was built from government and private funds, including proceeds from Elvis Presley's 1961 benefit concert.

To bring back a sense of the world moving toward war, the National Park Service shows a historical film of the attack and its place in World War II, drawing upon news footage for part of it.

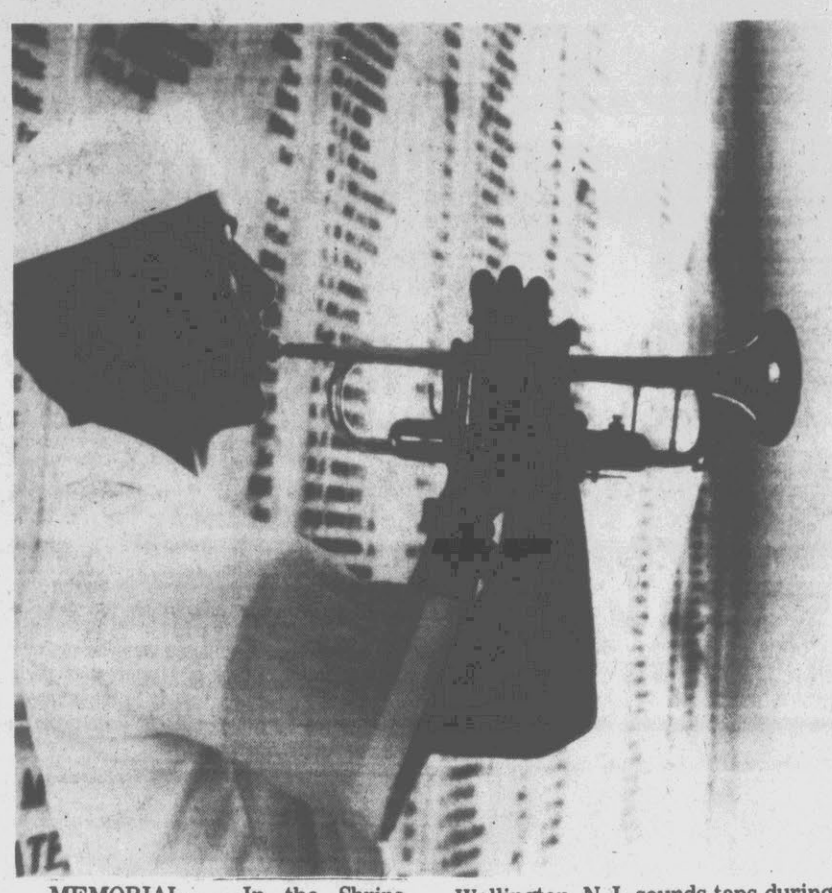

After one showing, a young man asked why no effort had been made to recover the bodies of the Arizona crew. Ranger Pete Yoshihara replied that the Navy tried, but explosive, poisonous gases forced it to abandon the effort. Two divers were killed.

Privately, some visitors ask the rangers why Japanese tourists are allowed to come back, and what they must be thinking.

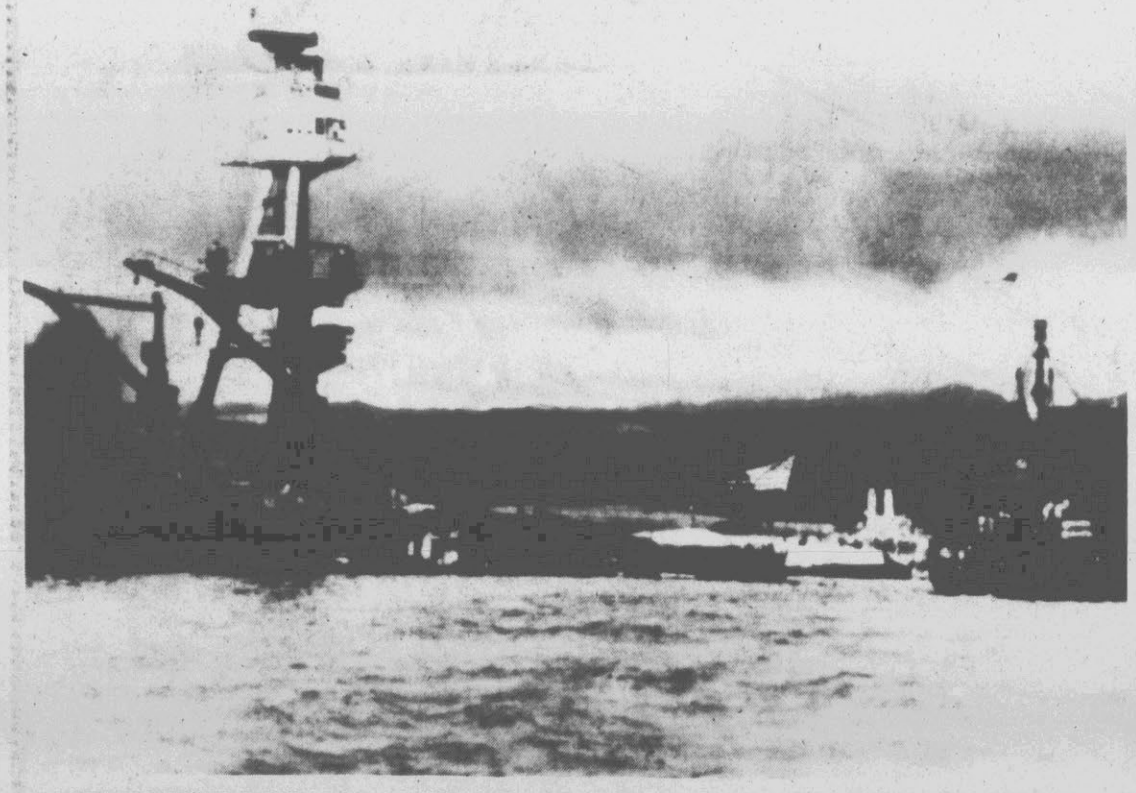

"I guess they all have their own inner feelings," said park technician Fred Kukonu, unofficial historian of the memorial. "The Japanese people I've met here over the years are very remorseful.

"The older ones remember what happened that morning. It's just like us going to Hiroshima or Nagasaki. How would you feel?"

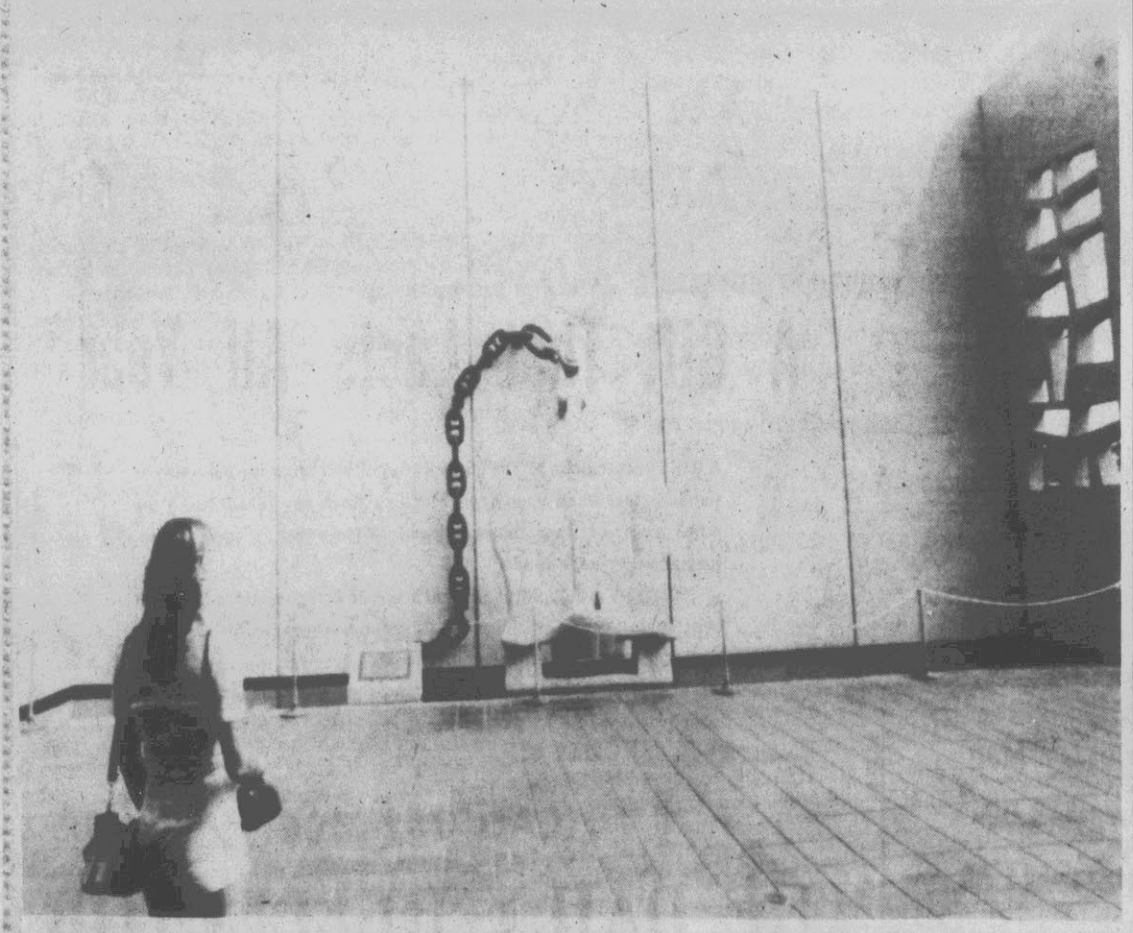

"Many people think of it as a military park," said Superintendent Gary Cummins. "But we'd like to see this park as a monument to peace more so than war."

Consultations Convince Diplomacy Best U.S. Bet

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fresh consultations with Latin American leaders apparently have convinced the Reagan administration that diplomacy, not military action, offers the best hope for preserving U.S. interests in the Caribbean-Central American region.

The administration had seemed headed toward a confrontation with Nicaragua because of a perception that nation's Sandinista government was about to become a Soviet beachhead in Central America, a launching pad for leftist revolution throughout the region.

Cuba also had been seen as a potential U.S. target

Although the administration remains concerned about Nicaragua's political course, extensive discussions last month with Venezuelan and Mexican officials and at an Organization of American States meeting in St. Lucia last week seems to have tempered any inclination to pursue a military solution.

Three weeks ago, President Reagan ruled out use of combat forces in the area, but Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. had left open the possibility of limited military activities. There was some talk, for example, of a naval blockade.

Since the administration's early days, Haig has hoped the implied threat of U.S. military action would moderate the behavior of both Nicaragua and Cuba. Although both nations have denied it, they have been accused by the administration of promoting leftist revolution in Central America, particularly in El Salvador.

The main drawback of the U.S. threats was that they renewed fears throughout Latin America of unilateral American military intervention. In that area, "Yankee imperialism" remains an explosive political issue.

Now the Reagan administration appears to be pinning its hopes on a still undefined form of collective action with other OAS members that share U.S. concerns about the area but oppose unilateral American military action.

In the coming weeks, the administration plans additional consultations with these nations to cope with what Haig describes as the dangers of "terror and war in the region."

The administration recognizes that action by the OAS as a whole is not likely because there is no consensus on what course to pursue.

OAS reticence to take such action was dramatized in 1979 when, during the final month of Anastasio Somoza's rule in Nicaragua, the United States proposed an inter-American force be sent there to oversee the transition to a new government. The proposal was rejected by OAS members almost unanimously.

The administration's strategy for dealing with the existing situation appears to rely heavily on quiet appeals to Nicaragua from countries friendly with both the United States and Nicaragua.

This could be coupled with increased military and economic aid to El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala, the countries which feel most threatened by Nicaragua.

In the early stages after taking office last January, the administration focused on shoring up the civilian-military junta in El Salvador in its struggle against a leftist insurgency the administration believed was fed by Cuba and Nicaragua.

Lately, the attention has shifted more to the prospect that Nicaragua could join the "totalitarian" camp backed by a military force, which — if Nicaragua carries out its plans — would dwarf all others in Central America. A senior U.S. official expressed concern last week that Nicaragua could become a Soviet-bloc "military base."

In its public statements, the administration has left the impression that failure to take early action against Nicaragua would enable the Sandinistas to further consolidate their power, creating a situation which would be even more difficult to deal with next year.

Haig's meeting in St. Lucia last week with Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto Brockman did little to ease Haig's concerns. But his willingness to discuss his differences with the Nicaraguan was evidence that Haig has not abandoned hope of easing tensions through diplomacy.

Haig reportedly also had a secret meeting in Mexico City two weeks ago with Cuban Vice President Carlos Rafael Rodriguez. That report, appearing this weekend in the Mexico City daily El Pais, has not been confirmed or denied by the State Department.

All along, however, military action against Cuba has seemed less likely than against Nicaragua because of the possibility the Soviet Union would retaliate in an area of vital interest to the United States, such as Berlin.

The Soviet press has warned that any U.S. action against Cuba would incur "dangerous consequences." But U.S. officials say the general Soviet commentary on the subject has been limited and highly ambiguous.

Thirteen Die In N.C. Accidents

By The Associated Press

A Marine who apparently fell asleep and ran his car off the road was among 13 people who died in weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina, the state Highway Patrol said today.

The deaths bring the traffic toll for the year to 1,363, compared with 1,412 at the same time last year.

Marine Carl J. Fisher, 23, of Camp LeJeune, died Sunday in Carteret County when he apparently fell asleep and ran his car off the road near Emerald Isle.

Also killed Sunday was Helen M. Colbert, 49, of Newark, Ohio. She was a passenger in a car that hit another vehicle when it stopped to help a stalled car on the highway.

Gertrude Williams, 73, of Coates, died Sunday afternoon when the car in which she was a passenger was struck from the rear by another vehicle near Angier., injuring three others. Alexander Gaines Jr., 40, of Newport News, Va., died when the car he was driving ran into the back of another on I-95 near Dortches in Nash County.

On Saturday, Willie C. Hemingway, 19, of Trenton, N.J., and Danny Howard, 20, of Hamstead, died when they were struck by a hit-and-run driver on U.S. 17 about 15 miles north of Wilmington. And a Southport couple died in Brunswick County when their car ran off the road and hit some trees. Troopers said Johnny Carvie Benton and his wife, Margie Alsbury Benton, both 18, were killed.

Also Saturday, Kenny McCoy Ranor, 64, of Raleigh, died when he hit another car head-on near Benson in Johnston County, and Thomas Glen Harrell, 22, of Mount Olive, died in Wayne County south of Goldsboro when he ran his car off the road into deep ditch.

Charles L. Daniels, 23, of Newland was killed Saturday when the car he was driving ran into the rear of another car at a high rate of speed north of Crossnore, injuring four others.

On Friday, Sherry J. Waters, 19, of Goldsboro died when the car she was driving was hit head-on by a vehicle that crossed the center line in Wayne County. Johnny L. Cornett, 36, of Drexel lost his life when a car he was driving crossed the center line on a curve and overturned near Morganton.

Suspect In Slavery Death Case Caught

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A suspect in the Nash County slavery-death case has been arrested in Washington, D.C., the FBI's special agent in charge of North Carolina operations said Sunday.

John Lester Harris, 39, of Bullock, Ala., was arrested at a bus station by Washington metropolitan police, said Robert Pence.

He is among four men indicted Oct. 7 on charges of conspiring to violate the constitutional rights of six migrant workers by holding them in involuntary servitude.

U.S. Justice Department spokesman John V. Wilson said the indictment was the first ever brought by the department which charges slavery resulting in death.

On Sept. 13, worker Robert Anderson collapsed and died in the field shortly after one of the four men ordered him to continue working despite the fact Anderson was spitting blood, the grand jury charged.

The incidents allegedly took place on the Rainbow Farm in rural Nash County. The FBI liberated 13 migrant workers from a migrant camp at the farm, Pence said.

Two of the four men charged are in custody, Pence said. They are Dennis Warren, 19, and his brother Richard Warren, 22, both of Orlando, Fla. Halsey Jose Norwood, in his mid-20s, is still at large, Pence said.

Harris will have a removal hearing today, Pence said. The trial of the four men is scheduled for January.

Defend Loss Transferral

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials are defending a new program that encourages unprofitable businesses to transfer their federal tax breaks to other firms.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., who has introduced legislation to kill the program, calls it "an unjustified and outrageous raid on the U.S. Treasury and on the taxpayers of the nation."

But Greg Ballentine, deputy assistant secretary of the Treasury for tax analysis, says it "is working just like we planned it."

The administration's purpose with the program is to allow new companies and others not showing a profit to benefit from the newly enacted reduction in taxes and therefore help stimulate the economy.

Under the "tax leasing" provision, an unprofitable company buys machinery and "sells" it to a profitable firm, which in turn leases the machinery back to the money-losing company. The profitable firm receives a 10 percent tax credit for buying the equipment and a deduction for depreciation.

Responding to Pell and other critics, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, said, "What's wrong with helping an ailing company rather than put it out of business?"

Celebrating Its 40th Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Church Women United, an ecumenical organization of Protestant, Roman Catholic and Eastern Orthodox women, celebrates its 40th annivesary this Sunday, Dec. 6, with a festival of celebration and worship at the Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

The organization, founded in the week after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor in 1941 with a call for prayer among Christian women, has since become an interdenominational organization working for peace and justice, particularly for the needy and exploited.

13-Year-Old Political Time Bomb Is Haunting N.C.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Alex Brock, the state elections director, didn't believe 13 years ago that North Carolina needed federal approval to change its Constitution.

John Sanders, who directs the state's legal think-tank at the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill, says no one in 1967 and 1968 ever thought to ask for federal clearance.

But David Flaherty, who now heads the state Republican Party, says Democrats used the state Constitution to plant a political time bomb that has finally blown up in their faces.

Whatever the reason, the state's failure to seek a federal okay for what many thought was an innocuous amendment has come back to haunt.

A U.S. Justice Department decision last week invalidated the provision of North Carolina's Constitution that has prevented state legislators from dividing counties when forming political divisions.

The department was acting under provisions of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, empowering it to review any voting-law changes in the 40 North Carolina counties covered by the act. Its decision said by banning the division of counties, the constitution forced lawmakers to adopt large, multiple-member districts to balance population. Those large districts would dilute the votes of black people, and was therefore discriminatory, the department said.

The decision might have been tendered 13 years earlier when the amendment was adopted, but it was not submitted until a lawsuit by the NAACP Legal and Education Defense Fund called attention to it.

"I have to believe that there only can be one reason for this amendment having been sat on for years," said Flaherty. "That is, it was obvious if it was sent to the Justice Department it would not be accepted. This may be the reason we've had such a delay in getting to the one-man one-vote process in North Carolina."

Others say the reasoning wasn't so simple or partisan. Brkck, who has been elections director since 1965, is the one responsible for seeing the state complies with federal voting requirements.

"No one who was in any way involved in state government construed that as being a matter to be submitted," Brock said in a recent interview.

The federal act requires review of voting-law changes, and North Carolina had never split up counties before so no change was involved, he said.

In fact, there's some question whether voters who ratified the constitutional change in 1968 knew just what it did. The amendment was passed by the legislature the year before, and the language it put on the ballot didn't say anything about county lines.

Instead, voters were asked to vote in favor of or against "Constitutional Amendments continuing present system of representation in the General Assembly."

But the amendment did make a change, after all, Sanders said. Prior to 1968, the constitution allowed counties to be split in one set of circumstances — in Senate districts where there was more than one senator.

"A district like Mecklenburg County with two or more senators could have been subdivided," said Sanders. But in practice, none ever was.

Sanders, who was director of the Institute of Government then as now, also says there was no intention of avoiding federal scrutiny 13 years ago.

"To the best of my knowledge, nobody thought about the matter — it may seem curious now, but in the 1960s it was not the practice to send as much in to the (U.S.) attorney general to be cleared under the voting rights act as it may be now," he said. "Then, there was just not much said."

The decision has stirred some resentment among Democratic officials because Flaherty told reporters in the days before the announcement that he knew how it would go. Federal officials say they didn't tell the GOP.

"Obviously, we do have I think legitimate reason to feel the true intent of the voting rights act was misused in objecting to the amendment," Brock said last week, after the verdict was in. "Apparently (the act) was extended to include other factors."

Partisan factors, perhaps?

"What else could you mean," he responded.

The decision, of course, didn't say North Carolina now must divide counties to form districts. But most read the decision as indicating that the legislative reapportionment plans are likely to be rejected by the Justice Department, and legislators may have to divide some counties if they draw up new House and Senate redistricting plans.

A decision on the state Senate plans is due this week. The same officials who ruled on the amendment make the decision on the plans themselves, and the argument against large, multiple-member districts is expected to again be raised.

Toughest Disease For N.C. Tobacco

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although total losses were down from last year, Granville wilt stepped up its destruction to be the toughest tobacco disease to hit the North Carolina flue-cured crop in 1981, said a plant pathologist.

Dr. N.T. Powell, of N.C. State University, said the bacterial wilt, first discovered in Granville County more than 100 years ago, caused losses of about $13 million.

Granville wilt destroyed slightly more than 1 percent of the 1981 crop, with losses concentrated in Bladen, Green, Jones, Johnston, Lenoir, Wake and Wayne counties.

Total losses to the state's flue-cured leaf growers due to tobacco diseases have been estimated at $61 million, he said.

"That was a big bite, but even so, the losses to disease were $11.5 million smaller than in 1980," Powell said.

He said the major reason for the drop was that losses to blue mold fell from $22.6 million last year to less than $250,000 in 1981.

Mosaic, which caused losses estimated at $12.4 million, was the second-most destructive tobacco disease this year. Caused by a virus, the disease struck mainly in Craven, Duplin, Pitt and Wake counties.

RECEIVED AWARD

Geraldine Goodall of Grimesland, an insurance sales manager with Combined Insurance Co. of America, has received an award for sales and service to the public, the company announced.

Don Hines, regional sales manager for the state, said Ms. Goodall won the Ruby Award in the W. Clement Stone International Sales and Management Achievement Club for her work in the company's health income-protection program.

The Combined group of companies specializes in non-cancelable accident and health income-protection and life insurance.

VOTED DIVIDEND

Directors of Fieldcrest Mills Inc. voted on Thursday to pay a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share on Dec. 31 to holders of record on Dec. 15, the company reported.

NEW STAFF MEMBERS

Dance Slimnastics Ltd., a Wisconsin-based aerobic fitness organization, announced that local residents Vicki Ann Meekins and Dianne Hale have joined the firm's staff of aerobic dance instructors.

Both have assumed teaching duties with the fitness club following a training session in which participants received instruction in class procedures, instructor techniques, and aerobic exercise benefits.

Dance Slimnastics is a non-profit corporation run in accordance with the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports. Instructors must be certified in cardio-pulmonary resuscitation techniques.

NATIONAL BOARD

Gregory I. Boykin, president of BOYCO Landscape Maintenance of Wilson, was elected to the national board of directors of the Professional Grounds Management Society and the National Landscape Association.

Boykin is a member of the association and past president of the North Carolina branch. He will serve with board members from Washington, D.C., Maryland, Texas, California, Oregon, Illinois, Missouri and Indiana.

INDEX GAINED

The level of business activity in North Carolina moved upward in October, according to the Wachovia Business Index, registering 154.2 or an increase of 0.4 percent from the revised September level.

Wachovia said gains in services employment and other areas of non-manufacturing enabled the overall North Carolina economy to resist national trends. However, employment in the state's manufacturing sector dropped slightly, reflecting the decline experienced nationally.

The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate for the state was 6.1 percent in October, up 0.1 percent from the September level, it was reported. The national rate for October was eight percent, up 0.5 percent from September.

Seeks New Royal Family Role

LONDON (AP) — Anti-monarchist William Hamilton is seeking legislation to turn members of Britain's royal family into civil servants susceptible to layoffs, the London Sunday Telegraph says.

Hamilton, 64, a member of Parliament from Scotland and notorious as a royal-antagonist, has submitted his proposal to the opposition Labor Party's national executive committee in hopes it will be included in the party's platform, the paper said.

He said this would tie the salaries for members of the royal family, including Queen Elizabeth II, to civil service grades.

"Some of them might even be declared redundant (laid off)," he told the Telegraph. "The present (Conservative Party) government is cutting the civil service. I see no reason why a Crown Department should be made an exception and excluded."

ONE THING'S FOR SURE. WITH AN IRA FROM BB&T, YOU'LL AGE WELL.

Your age is going to increase with time, of course. There's no getting around that. But, with an IRA, so is your fortune.

If you start your IRA (Individual Retirement Account) when you're in your early thirties and interest rates stay about the same as they are now, a $2,000-a-year investment will make you a millionaire by the time you retire! And even if you can't start that early, you can still build a whopping retirement fund.

You'll pay lower income taxes.

As long as you're a wage earner, whether or not you have a retirement plan where you work, you're eligible for BB&T's IRA. And you can open your account after January 1st with as little as $500. You're allowed to sock away up to $2,000 each year ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if both of you are). And whatever your annual investment is, you can deduct every penny of it from that year's gross income. Which means real tax savings.

Your interest is tax-deferred.

The interest you earn, which is tied to money market rates, is compounded daily at BB&T, not monthly or annually as may be the case at some banks and savings and loans. This can add up to a difference of thousands and thousands of dollars by the time you reach retirement age.

And all your interest is tax-deferred. You pay no tax on it until you begin withdrawing funds at retirement, when you'll almost certainly be in a lower tax bracket and, therefore, required to pay less.

Your money piles up until you're 59½.

If you withdraw any money from your IRA before you reach the age of 59½, Federal regulations require you to pay a 10% IRS penalty on that money and perhaps a substantial interest penalty as well.

But once you hit 59½, nothing can stop you. You may take your money in a lump sum, receive it in monthly, quarterly or annual installments, or even wait until you're 70½ — but no later — to begin withdrawing funds.

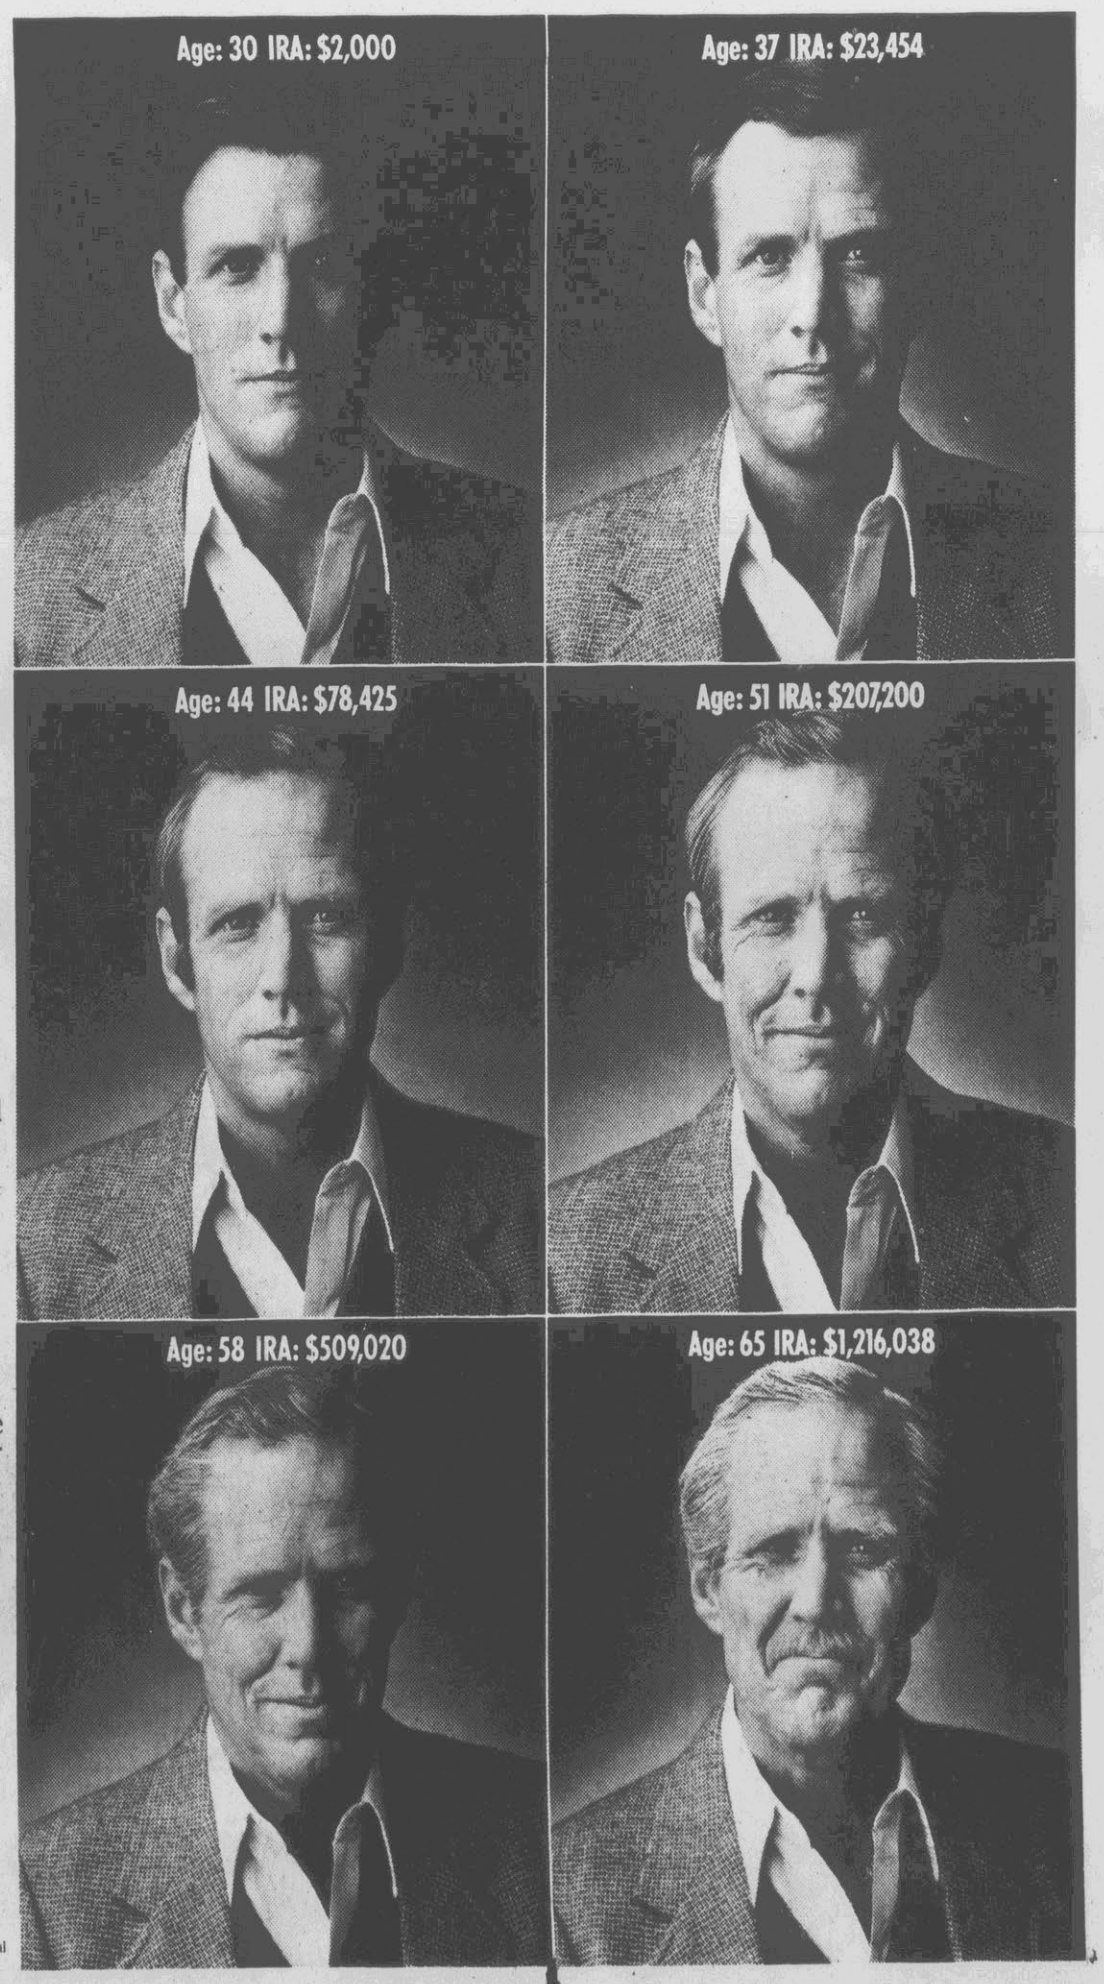

Call or visit any BB&T office today and ask us about this extraordinary opportunity to save for your future. Then plan to open your IRA after January 1st and get started along the road to prosperity.

Supreme Court To Study MacDonald's Conviction

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court will weigh Dr. Jeffrey R. MacDonald's conviction in the slayings of his wife and two daughters against his constitutional right to a speedy trial today in Washington.

Attorneys who have fought the legal battle for 12 years said last week that it could be only months away from a resolution from what could be the longest murder case in U.S. legal history.

MacDonald's wife Colette and daughters Kimberly and Kristen Jean were found stabbed to death on Feb. 17, 1970, at their Fort Bragg apartment. MacDonald, the only survivor, told investigators that four people broke into his home in the early morning, chanting, "Acid is groovy."

The former Green Beret doctor said they stabbed him 17 times and that when he regained consciousness, he found his family dead of multiple stab wounds.

MacDonald was charged with the slayings within weeks. The charges were dropped following an Army Article 32 hearing, the equivalent of a civilian grand jury hearing.

But investigators continued to compile evidence against MacDonald. Their efforts, with pressure from Mrs. MacDonald's family for further prosecution, sparked the reopening of the case by a civilian grand jury. In January 1975, the grand jury issued a three-count murder indictment against MacDonald, who had moved to California and resumed work as a physician.

On Aug. 29, 1979, MacDonald was convicted of one count of first-degree murder in Kristen Jean's death and two counts of second-degree murder in the slayings of Colette and Kimberly.

MacDonald steadfastly maintained his innocence, but was sentenced to life. His lawyers appealed the verdict.

A year later, a three-judge panel of the 4th Circuit Court ruled 2-1 that the U.S. Justice Department had delayed too long in prosecuting the case. MacDonald was released from federal prison after serving a year.

Government lawyers asked for the review, contending the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals erred in overturning MacDonald's conviction on the grounds that he did not get a speedy trial.

"We cannot and do not assess the correctness of the jury's verdict," said Judge Francis B. Murnaghan of Maryland, writing for the panel's majority. "Regardless of that, we certainly cannot ... condone or establish a prosecutorial method of obtaining convictions in violation of the fundamental constitutional right of future generations."

The majority also said that witnesses' memories could have eroded while the Justice Department made up its mind to prosecute, causing a "substantial possibility of prejudice."

The delays after MacDonald's indictment are irrelevant to the speedy trial issue, because they were caused by the appeals of the defendant's lawyers. The pretrial conduct of the Justice Department is the issue that will fall on the Supreme Court.

He pointed out that the jurors agreed with the prosecutors' arguments that MacDonald had bludgeoned his wife during a furious argument, struck out at 5-year-old Kimberly as she interrupted her parents' battle and then killed 2-year-old Kristen in her bed to cover up the other two slayings.

"His guilt and sanity were established to the satisfaction of the trial jury beyond a reasonable doubt," he wrote. "Nevertheless, this court absolves him forever of this hideous offense."

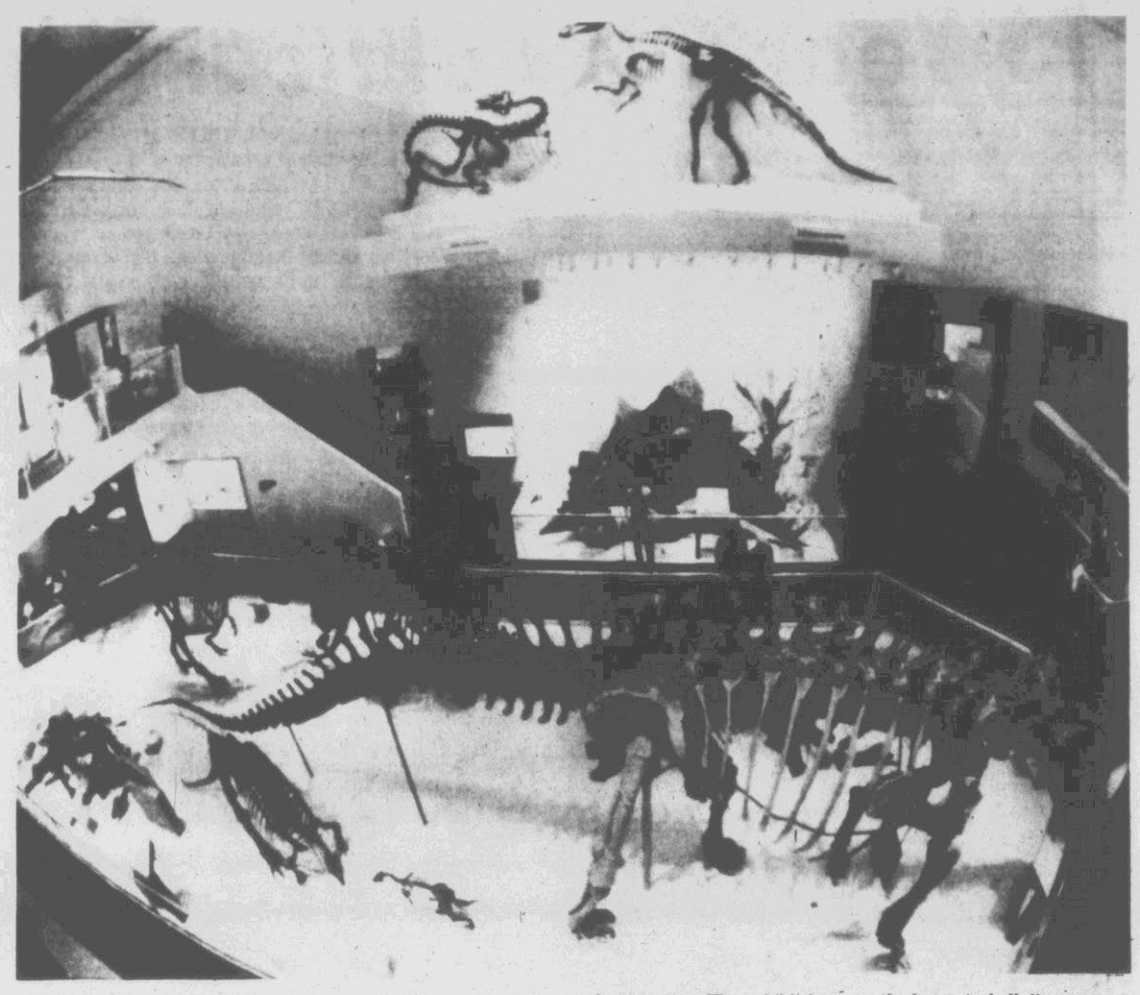

That set the stage for the Supreme Court review, giving the court a chance to issue definitive guidelines on how long prosecutors can delay trials without violating the right of the accused in criminal cases.

MacDonald, now 37, will appear before the court.

The Supreme Court now has several choices.

It can agree with the appeals court that MacDonald's constitutional rights were violated and free him with no possibility of retrial. The justices could also rule that MacDonald's speedy trial right was not violated and sent the case back to the lower court for further review — a prospect that attorneys for both sides believe is unlikely.

In addition, if the court decides the delay did not significantly affect the case, MacDonald might go back to prison while the case was returned to the appeals court. Under this opinion, the Supreme Court would build enough guidance into its decision to guarantee that the lower court would reinstate the conviction and let it stand.

CARE Card A Gift Idea

NEW YORK (AP) — With the approach of the holiday season, CARE, the international aid and development agency, has announced a holiday gift card plan.

"This provides a distinctive way for people to send meaningful greetings to friends, relatives and business associates, while at the same time helping needy families overseas," says Dr. Philip Johnston, executive director.

"The cards let each person know that you have given in his or her honor to help needy families in 37 developing countries in Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Middle East."

The gift, Johnston explains, helps provide nourishing food for hungry children, materials to build rural schools, equipment for villagers to construct water systems, tools and training for struggling farmers to grow more food, plus other self-help projects for survival today and self-support tomorrow.

"And through MEDICO, the medical arm of CARE, you also help send teams of doctors and nurses to teach better health care and medical practices in remote areas," he adds.

Names and addresses on your list, with a minimum contribution of $3 per card, can be sent to CARE, Dept. HOL, Box 570A, New York, N.Y. 10156. Allow ample time for mailing. The cards will be sent to you, or if you prefer, directly to persons being honored.

Johnston cites examples of what contributions can do: $5 serves 100 children bowls of porridge for a week; $10 pays for hand tools for a farmer; $15 covers a month's training for a rural health worker; $25 provides clean water for a village through a community well.

Dews, Maier Named To Commission On Future

The newly established Commission on the Future of North Carolina is holding its first major working session today in Raleigh.

Gov. Jim Hunt has appointed Kenneth K. Dews of Winterville and Dr. Robert H. Maier of Greenville to serve on the commission, which is chaired by UNC President William C. Friday.

The commission was established by Hunt to prepare for the growth and change expected in North Carolina between now and the year 2000. It is composed of state leaders in education, business, law, medicine, environmental protection and other fields; members of the General Assembly; and members of the State Goals and Policy Board. Elizabeth Koontz, assistant superintendent for teacher education with the Department of Public Instruction, serves as vice chairman.

Dews is a farmer and a member of the State Goals and Policy Board. Dr. Maier is vice chancellor for academic affairs at East Carolina University.

Some projections for the future, if present trends continue, the Governor said, are as follows:

•The state population will increase by 30 percent and the number of older adults by 70 percent.

•Nine out of 10 new jobs will be non-manufacturing ones.

•Almost 700,000 acres of prime farmland — an area larger than Sampson County — will be converted to other uses.

The commission will be responsible for examining projections like these and involving the state's top thinkers in determining realistic choices available for the next two decades. N.C. 2000 county chairmen will work with the commission in promoting public awareness of these efforts and in providing citizen involvement in the commission's work, the Governor said. Members of the commission are ex officio members of their county N.C. 2000 committees.

Want Thurmond To Run Again

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Some South Carolina Republicans want Sen. Strom Thurmond to run for re-election, even though he says his current term will probably be his last.

Thurmond, a Republican who is Senate president pro tempore, will be 82 when his term expires in 1984.

But Rep. Carroll A. Campbell Jr., R-S.C., said he hopes to change Thurmond's mind.

"I fully intend to start urging Sen. Thurmond to run for re-election and that he start by announcing it next year," Campbell said.

Rep. John L. Napier, R-S.C., a former aide to Thurmond, also said he supports efforts to have his old boss seek another term.

Save-A-Babe Drive Is Launched

SEATED FOR SAFETY — Amy Lynn Wilkinson rides in a safety seat in the back seat of her family car. Steve and Emma Wilkinson (pictured with Amy) feel this is good protection for their tiny daughter. N.C. law will require such a seating arrangement for children two and under beginning in July and Tar River Civitans will loan seats to those who need them. (Reflector Photo by Mary Schulken)

Infants in the Pitt County area will be much safer because of a new law and a major project being launched by the Tar River Civitan Club of Greenville, in conjunction with the Pitt County Health Department, Patrice Alexander, Citivan Save-A-Babe project chairman said.

Enacted by the N.C. General Assembly to become effective July 1, 1982, the law requires parents to protect children up to two years of age by restraints in motor vehicles. The project is a safety seat loaner program.

Tar River Civitans will make available Infant Love Seats by March 1 primarily to low-income families for a small rental fee and a deposit.

In addition to providing some financial relief to parents complying with the law, the organization will attempt to educate parents on the proper use of the seats and on other aspects of car safety. Club members will receive training through the N.C. Highway Safety Research Center in Chapel Hill.

The Research Center will study the results of the law's first two years of existence to see if it's effective in reducing death and injury to babies. "The law is designed to be educational rather than punitive," a Research Center staffer said. "During the first two years of enactment, violators will be given warning tickets; $10 fines will be levied the third year. No driver's license points will be assessed. Whether to continue the law will be decided by legislators in 1985, based on the findings of the researchers."

"Car accidents are the leading cause of death to children," Ms. Alexander said. "And North Carolina ranks only below Texas and California in the number of car-related deaths. But crash-tested restraint devices can reduce the probability of deaths by about 90 percent and of injuries by about 70 percent. Helping prevent infant mortality and injuries is our goal."

The club is soliciting seat donations with a goal of 150 seats. To help expand the project, the Highway Safety Research Center will match on a one-to-one basis the seats donated to or purchased by the club. "Public support is vital," Ms. Alexander said.

For making contributions or obtaining more information on car seats and safety, call Pitt County Health Educator Pat Byrd, 752-4141, or Tar River Civitans, Patrice Alexander, 752-3070; Ingrid Wright, 752-6074; or Raye Troutman, 756-3871.

New Cuts In Labor Dept.

WASHINGTON (AP) — More spending cutbacks are looming for the Labor Department, which already slashed its expenditures for fiscal 1982 by $7.8 billion, says Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan.

Donovan, queried Sunday, however, declined comment in detail on reports the agency's budget request for the next fiscal year, starting Oct. 1, 1982, is being substantially reduced by the Office of Management and Budget.

But he did confirm that his department will challenge budget cuts that go far deeper than those proposed by agency officials.

"At this stage of the game, this thing is in the appeals process and I don't think it would be appropriate for me to comment," the labor secretary said in a telephone interview.

The OMB is proposing to allow the Labor Department less than half the money it sought for job training programs in fiscal 1983, the Washington Post reported in Sunday's editions.

It said the department requested approximately $3.4 billion, but that the administration's budget office wants that figure slashed to about $1.5 billion for a variety of manpower and job training programs.

Five U.S. Performing Artists Honored At Kennedy Center Gala

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five of America's greatest performing artists, hailed by President Reagan for their "lofty standard of excellence," were toasted until early today at a gala celebration at the Kennedy Center.

Band leader Count Basie, actor Cary Grant, actress Helen Hayes, choreographer Jerome Robbins, and pianist Rudolf Serkin sat with Reagan in the presidential box of the center's Opera House and viewed a two-hour show in their honor, which was taped for broadcast Dec. 26 on the CBS television network.

Before going to the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, Reagan entertained the artists at a lavish White House reception.

Enroute to the Kennedy Center afterward, Reagan's motorcade traveled a circuitous route that was sealed off by police. Heavy security precautions were evident.

It was Reagan's first such venture outside the White House since he expressed concern Friday about an intelligence report that he is the primary target of a Libyan terrorist team that reportedly has entered the United States on a mission to kill him and his top advisers.

Humorist Art Buchwald got the evening off to a lighthearted start by looking up at Reagan from the stage and announcing that the Kennedy Center was doing its part to support his economic program.

"We've taken Pavarotti off food stamps," he said. "We've asked (Mstislav) Rostropovich to play only unfinished symphonies, and this year's Messiah is being sung by the Teamsters Barbershop Quartet with a grant from Mobil Oil."

In tributes to the artists, actor Jimmy Stewart said that for Miss Hayes, "acting is a form of giving ... since the beginning she has been giving audiences the very best of herself."

Basie's band came on stage to pay him tribute, with the guitarist asking him for the downbeat, and Ella Fitzgerald sang one of Basie's favorites, "Too Close for Comfort."

In Robbins' honor, ballet dancers performed a scene from his musical "Fancy Free," with an introduction by a famed admirer, American Ballet Theater director Mikhail Baryshnikov.

After Reagan returned to the White House, the guests of honor, entertainers and dignitaries who attended the black-tie extravaganza dined and danced in the Grand Foyer of the Kennedy Center until the early hours.

At the reception in the White House East Room, Reagan said of five artists: "In their lives and art they have fashioned lofty standards of excellence. Through them we can all sing and dance and act and play."

In announcing those being recognized in 1981, Kennedy Center chairman Roger L. Stevens said the 4-year-old honors program "fills a need in this country for national recognition of individuals who enrich our lives and our culture by their life work in the performing arts."

The benefit gala also raises funds to support artistic productions at the center, which receives virtually no federal funds for its performances on four stages.

TV Film Gives Chilly Look At Cult Of Past

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On one level, NBC's "Child Bride of Short Creek" offers a fascinating look at an American religious sect so unique its members could just as easily have been Martians.

But on another level, tonight's movie is scary because it raises the same dangers implicit in the kind of unquestioning herd-thinking that turned Jim Jones' Guyana community into a mass tragedy.

"Short Creek" revolves around an Arizona fundamentalist sect practicing polygamy, inspiration for the story coming from an incident in 1953 in which government agents invaded such a community.

Conrad Bain of "Diff'rent Strokes" is Frank King, president of the religious order, a splinter group excommunicated by the Mormons. President Frank preaches that his people are "the real Americans, the last pioneers."

Frank's son, Isaac (Christopher Atkins), has just returned from the Korean War, where his view of the outside world intensified his alienation from his father and the community, its religious rigidity, sexism and primitive way of life.

Isaac dreams of life beyond this desert town and dares to question the sect's polygamy. He mocks the practice by greeting the three wives of Jay Jacobs with a sardonic: "Sister Jacobs ... Sister Jacobs ... Sister Jacobs."

Beyond his philosophical objections, he's concerned that his father, who also has three wives, is disregarding Isaac's aging, ailing mother. "You're unhappy and you don't even know it," he tells her. Her response is that her sister wives are her best friends, sharing the work, pain and joy.

The father-son conflict deteriorates further when Frank, 45, decides to marry 15-year-old beauty Jessie Jacobs, claiming his wives can't bear him any more children and he needs progeny.

He decides this at a dance, where the youthful vitality of sweet Jessie (Diane Lane) raises his body temperature past boiling. He immediately convenes a meeting of elders, including Jessie's father, Jay Jacobs, who gives his blessing: "The Lord has spoken. Amen."

But Isaac is in love with Jessie. The problem is she isn't much of a feminist. When Isaac and another young girl speak of their plans to ditch their sheltered lives, Jessie argues that the inside world is good enough for her. She typifies the close-minded religious members, so weak and dependent they need to be protected and devoutly obedient.

Naive and innocent, Jessie is sexually repressed and doesn't immediately realize that the marriage code — old men selecting young girls — applies to her. Then her best friend, Naomi, whose dream was to go to Las Vegas, become an actress and have a white refrigerator filled with cherry popsicles, is forced to marry one of the town grandfathers.

But Jessie is awakened when she learns she's been promised to President Frank. "Love is something that comes after you're married," he tells her.

She runs to Issac. He promises her a "life out there," and they plan to run away. Isaac has already had a physical confrontation with his father about Franks's marriage plans. What gives you the right? Calling himself a prophet, he says: "God."

Meanwhile, the outside world is watching. Undercover cop Bob Kalish (Kiel Martin from "Hill Street Blues") has gathered evidence of the sect's polygamy and presents it to government officials. The state attorney says there are moral, legal and political reasons why they have to raid the community and end the "white slavery" with force, if necessary.

Filmed entirely in Utah and Arizona, the desert locations beautifully capture the sparsity of this community's existence. But the power wielded — in the name of God by Bain's chilling character — has menacing applications anywhere.

A Review

Rose Play Emerges Okay

The plot is corny. There's this incredibly talented bunch of high school kids led by a director (Betty Topper) who is as enthusiastic as she is imaginative. Being Thespians, they want to put on a school play. But there's no room for them at their own school. Something to do with basketball. So they do it in the multipurpose room of an elementary school. And in spite of the odds, they do a great job. Very Walt Disney.

The play was "Flowers for Algernon" (by David Rogers from a book by Daniel Keyes), which ran at Wahl-Coates School Friday, Saturday and Sunday). It is the story of a retarded man who was guinea pigged to a genius, then regressed.

Shaun Wallace portrayed the sympathetic Charlie, who underwent experimental brain surgery to increase his intelligence. In an especially demanding role, Wallace made a smooth, gradual transition from moron to genius and back, yet kept the human in Charlie constant.

And Wallaces's wasn't the only excellent performance. Louise Hindmarsh, with gray bun and an enchanting, role-enriching accent, mastered every mannerism of the humanistic Dr. Strauss. Kevin O'Neal's mature portrayal of Professor Nemur gave us a believable person who's become a servant of Scient and Foundations, rather than the mad scientist this role could slip into in less capable hands.

Lynn Lieberman played the warm-hearted Mrs. Donner, and brief but spirited performances were given by Patti Murphy, Jeanne Ingenito, and Beth Kopelman. Ginny Haskins was a natural Mrs. Moony, while Kim Lingerfelt played the haunting Mother with more than a hint of the possible cause of Charlie's problems.

Kate Cunningham as Alice, Charlie's teacher-girlfriend, voice a major thought of the play, "I hope I'm doing the right thing." Jon Pringle and Chuck Williamson portrayed the wonderfuly directed other Charlies.

There were many other good performances. There was a script loaded with great truths like "Each man builds on another man's failures," and, "The end of the maze is death. Which path I choose makes me what I am."

There was imaginative use of media — newspapers, tapes, TV, typewriter. There were some shadow scenes, other scenes starting or frozen while another was going on. There were at least six different sets, and not an awkward transition in the lot.

It was an evening of chuckles and goosebumps, which is, after all, what drama is all about.

Like Charlie Gordon's mother, we create self-fulfilling prophesies. By providing a place for Rose High students who want to participate in sports and by not providing a place for theater, we are making a strong statement of values. The point is not that they did a good job in spite of the odds. This bunch would be super anywhere. It is rather that whatever we choose to do (or not to do) teaches values. The students at Rose High School have just had a crash course in Priorities. Wonder if they'll pass the final?

Henning Lost His 'Magic

FAIRFIELD, Iowa (AP) — The groom wore white tails and shoulder-length curls, the bride wore a fur-trimmed satin gown, and more than 1,500 people watched the ceremony in a huge, not-quite-finished meditation dome.

Sunday's ceremony marked the union of magician Doug Henning and New York artist Deborah Douillard, 26, on the campus of Maharishi International University, where the couple met in January while studying meditation.

Things went along about as one might expect at a magician's wedding, only both of his magic tricks didn't turn out as he might have wished.

At one point, Henning, 34, turned to the audience and said, "As a symbol of my love for Debby and my wish for peace throughout the world, I am going to produce a symbol of peace and love — a white dove."

The bird flew briefly into a throng of cameras, then was captured and placed in a cage, but not before it soiled the bride's dress.

Later the groom proceeded to show the congregation a large white and gold box with legs, opening it to show it was empty. The bride and groom each put a flower in the box, and Henning promised they would become "a rose for everyone in the audience."

But the sides of the box collapsed and a mass of flowers fell from its secret compartment.

CRYPTOQUIP 12-7

Saturday's Cryptoquip — HIGH DUDGEON: BEAUTIFUL FEMME FATALE DEMANDS AT LEAST ONE HANDSOME BEAU.

Today's Cryptoquipclue: P equals K

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ5 ♡6 ◇AQ543 ♣K76
The bidding has proceeded:
East South
What action do you take?
A.—Don't interfere with someone who might be working for you! Your diamond suit is too weak for an overcall at the two-level, and you can't make a takeout double because you don't have heart support. Pass. Any action by you to impede the forward progress of the opponents could be to your detriment.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A853 ♡K76 ◇AKQ102 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
East South West North
1♠ Dble Pass 1♡
Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have forced partner to bid, and he might have done so with little or nothing of value. So you should proceed with caution. A bid of two diamonds adequately describes your values—with a weaker hand you would have simply overcalled two diamonds. You should be reluctant to raise partner with only three trumps when he has bid a suit under pressure. However, if he rebids his hearts, you can then raise.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQJ9 ♡AK6 ◇AK83 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2♠ Pass 2NT 3♠
What action do you take?
A.—All you know about this hand is that partner is weak. You will be better placed to decide where you want to go after partner has clarified his holding. Pass. In view of your demand opening bid, the pass must be construed as forcing. This gives partner the opportunity of bidding three no trump, introducing a long suit of his own or of making a penalty double of three clubs, if he has nothing else to do.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J1065 ♡5 ◇K982 ♣QJ75
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1♡ Dble
What action do you take?
A.—You have a mediocre holding and no real prospect of improving the contract. The way to show such a hand is to pass. Do not worry about the possibility that partner will have to play the hand in one heart doubled—that rarely happens. What is certain is that any action by you simply makes the opponents' task easier by offering them the opportunity to make a penalty double at a higher level.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K ♡A984 ◇A10854 ♣Q105
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass Pass Pass 1◇
Pass 2♠ 3♡ Dble
Pass 4◇ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Though you have a near minimum opening bid and you are facing a partner who passed originally, we would go on to five diamonds. The fact that partner couldn't stand your double of three hearts suggests that he is short in that suit, so your hands should fit well and game ought to be a reasonable undertaking.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠A8 ♡K8 ◇AQJ1073 ♣A65
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1◇ Pass 1♠ Pass
2NT Pass 3◇ Pass
What do you bid now?

A.—Partner appears to have an unbalanced hand and, if it does not contain the king of diamonds, a contract of three no trump could prove vulnerable to a heart or club lead. We want to be in game even opposite a weak distributional hand, so we may as well bid it. Jump to five diamonds. If partner's bid was a waiting move, that might even lead to a slam.

FOCUS

The Infamous, Sneak Attack

The most anticipated surprise attack in history occurred at Pearl Harbor 40 years ago today. From 1931 until the year of the attack, the final exam for every class at Japan's naval academy had been, "How would you plan a surprise attack on Pearl Harbor." The American navy had asked the same question. In 1932 a U.S. force executed a practice predawn attack on Pearl Harbor from the Northwest and "wiped out" the entire fleet. The U.S. ambassador in Tokyo reported in January 1941 that Pearl Harbor would be the target for any first strike. Yet nobody actually believed it, until that Sunday morning when the Japanese completed their 4,000 mile surprise, by destroying the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

DO YOU KNOW — Which two ships were so damaged at Pearl Harbor that they never rejoined the fleet?

Hot-Tubbing Fad Grows In Southern California

By DEBORAH BELGUM
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a typical Friday or Saturday night, the parking lot at the former Montessori school is packed with cars as disparate as the clientele. Jaguars, Porsches and Alfa Romeos are parked next to Fords, Chevrolets and Volkswagens.

Inside, a roaring fire lights the lobby where guests — mostly couples — sign in for an hour or two of soaking in sybaritic splendor.

Hot tubbing — the backyard custom of lounging in 100-degree bubbling water — has become the latest thing to do on a date in Los Angeles.

The idea was popularized by two area establishments — Hot Tub Fever and Le Hot Tub — where, for $10 an hour per person, patrons rent hot tub rooms complete with sauna, showers, hair dryers, tape decks and "relaxation" beds.

At Hot Tub Fever, once the door to a private room is shut, the rest of the world is a thousand miles away. Hot tubbers can idle away their time soaking in a five-foot tub while listening to taped music, lounging on a rubber hammock slung over the tub, playing backgammon on a floating board or relaxing in the sauna.

For Dedra, 19, and Miguel, 21, both students, it was their first time at the place. "I really enjoyed it," Dedra said. "It was different and relaxing."

Another couple, Sharon and Wayne, both in their late 30s, came because it was something out of the ordinary. "We usually go to the movies," she said.

Carole Cook invited her husband, Jim, who just turned 34, to Hot Tub Fever as a birthday present.

For the true hedonist interested in more than just relaxation, there is the V.I.P. room which has the added attraction of a fireplace, built-in color television set with remote control and videotape machine, bathroom complete with bidet, and backdoor entrance for those celebrities who wish to go unnoticed.

"We've had office parties in the V.I.P room," said owner Steven Freedberg, adding that he gets a lot of V.I.P. business from the movie and record industry.

The 39-year-old Freedberg, who used to be in the packing business, says his average customer is between 18 and 45 and stays between 1½ and two hours, although the record was 12 hours and 40 minutes.

He said business is brisk on Friday and Saturday nights from about 8 p.m. to 2 a.m. The club is open until 6 a.m. on weekends and until 3 a.m. Monday through Friday.

Hot Tub Fever offers various fruit juices to its guests, but patrons can bring their own more spirited refreshments if they desire, Freedberg says.

Hot Tub Fever Inc., which is owned by Freedberg and several other partners, invested $500,000 to renovate the building.

The initial capital outlay has kept a lot of competition out of the market for now, with only a handful of clubs located primarily in northern and southern parts of the state.

Hot Tub Fever's main competitor in the Los Angeles area is Le Hot Tub Club, a smaller $250,000 establishment with only six rooms and a low-key setting. The building is wedged in between a YWCA and a small retail business. There is no large lobby where customers can wait, and patrons must make reservations specifying how long they plan to stay.

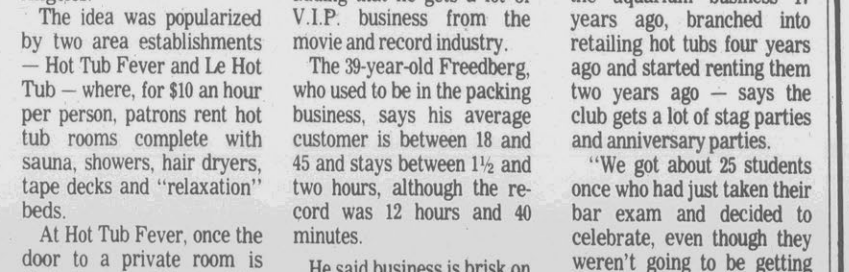

To owner Larry Davis, hot tub establishments are "the American version of the Japanese bathhouse." The bearded 34-year-old entrepreneur — who got into the aquarium business 17 years ago, branched into retailing hot tubs four years ago and started renting them two years ago — says the club gets a lot of stag parties and anniversary parties.

"We got about 25 students once who had just taken their bar exam and decided to celebrate, even though they weren't going to be getting the results for a couple of months," Davis said, who calls his typical customer a "BMW driver."

"They are in their late 20s to late 40s and annually make between $30,000 to $100,000 and up," he said.

"We have a lot of women who come in with their boyfriends blindfolded as a birthday surprise. They will have called in advance and reserved a room," he said.

Davis said he gets a lot of noontime business from nearby Century City, a fashionable area of Los Angeles filled with office buildings and attorneys' offices.

History Says: A Sneak Attack Can Happen Again

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Could it happen again? A massive sneak attack on the style of Pearl Harbor but even more devastating and involving nuclear weapons?

If history is any guide, the somber answer would have to be yes.

"Oh certainly," said retired Lt. Gen. Daniel Graham, former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency and now consultant for an independent research group regarded by critics as conservative and "hawkish" as regards the Soviet Union.

"Sure," agreed retired Rear Admiral Gene La Roque who heads another private defense "think tank" judged by its opponents as liberal and "dovish."

History's lessons have been ignored persistenty over the centuries by emperors and kings, presidents, premiers, dictators, admirals and generals — and even historians.

Since the 1941 surprise Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, there has been an abundance of sudden or undeclared wars and military actions by big and small nations. The Soviets alone have probably executed more Pearl Harbor-style attacks than any other major nation since World War II, and the events that led up to that conflict.

The United States has been involved in a few, as well as Britain and France, and, of course, Israel and the Arab nations.

These include aerial, naval and ground military attacks on other nations, including professed allies, generally without benefit of an ultimatum or declaration of war and almost always with the element of surprise.

History has a way of repeating itself.

Pearl Harbor, in fact, was an almost exact replay of the Japanese attack and subsequent annihilation of the Russian Imperial Fleet in the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-1905.

The Japanese fleet attacked the Czar's Pacific fleet anchored in neat rows at Port Arthur, a northern, ice-free port in China then under Russian control, and remarkably similar in geographical configuration to Hawaii's Pearl Harbor.

They attacked while peace negotiations were still going on in St. Petersburg, then the Czarist capital — just as Japanese envoys were still talking to American diplomats in Washington when their planes hit Pearl Harbor.

A lot of intelligence was available in Tokyo before both attacks. The Japanese knew which Russian ships were at Port Arthur and exactly where they were anchored 77 years ago, just as they knew the berthing stations of ships at Pearl Harbor 40 years ago.

In the Russo-Japanese War, the Japanese Navy was then headed by Adm. Heihachiro Togo, who was told Feb. 5, 1904, that negotiations with the Russians were to be broken off the next day and he was to immediately attack Port Arthur. Not coincidentally, the Japanese flagship for the Pearl Harbor attack flew Togo's original flag.

The Russians were again caught by surprise decades later when they were attacked by their ally, Nazi Germany, June 2, 1941, even though they had been explicitly warned of impending invasion by one of their spies in Tokyo. Stalin ignored the warning.

But the Soviets had also been doing some "Pearl Harbors" of their own shortly before World War II broke out and during that conflict: a war with their tiny northern neighbor, Finland, and a takeover of the Baltic states of Lithuaniam Latvia and Estonia.

"Perpetual pacts of friendship and solidarity" did not hinder the Soviets from attacking and invading such "socialist allies" as Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968 when those countries became restive under their Moscow masters. And the Soviets went into Afghanistan Dec. 27, 1979. Some 85,000 Soviet troops are still there.

Undeclared wars, surprise attacks and military incursions, however, are not the exclusive domain of the Soviets or their proxies in the post World War II period.

A list of only a few includes the invasion of Israel by Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Jordan and Iraq after Israel declared its independence in 1948; the joint Israeli-British-French invasion of Egypt in 1956 and other conflicts involving Israel, Syria and Egypt in 1967 and 1973; the Turkish invasion of Cyprus with 40,000 troops in 1974; U.S. covert support of the abortive Bay of Pigs action against Cuba in 1961; invasion of South Korea in 1950 by North Korea, with Chinese support; China's takeover of Tibet in 1950; Libya's invasion of Chad last year.

Given the awesome nuclear arsenals of the Soviet Union and the United States and recent high-level talk of "first strikes" and "winning a nuclear war" and "survivability," is another Pearl Harbor on a nuclear scale possible?

"Oh, certainly," said retired Gen. Daniel Graham, former head of the Defense Intelligence Agency, former military attache in Moscow and, with fluent Russian, an expert on Soviet affairs.

"In order to launch an attack on Pearl Harbor," he said in an interview, "the Japanese had to hide a fleet for weeks. It takes only about 35 minutes for a Soviet intercontinental ballistic missile launched from their mainland to reach anywhere in the United States. We have the same capability, going the other way.

"It takes only five to 10 minutes for a submarine-launched nuclear missile to hit a vast area of the American mainland, depending on how far offshore the boat is lurking."

Graham now is a consultant for the Heritage Foundation, a conservative "think tank" that holds the United States is becoming increasingly inferior militarily to the Soviet Union and only a massive buildup of U.S. arms can deter the Soviet Union from the temptation of a "first strike."

If an all-out nuclear war started now, Graham argues, "the United States would be unable to defend itself."

This condition, he said, "begs for a Pearl Harbor."

"If you are going to fire nuclear weapons," he said, "it begs you to use a first strike."

It is known that U.S. intelligence and the military have in their possession copies of Soviet military manuals that argue that a nuclear war with the United States is "winnable."

Also quoted extensively is a book on military strategy by Marshal of the Soviet Union Vassili Sokolovsky in the 1960s, who asserted the Soviet Union was prepared to fight a nuclear war and would come out victorious.

Retired Rear Adm. Gene La Roque, who as an ensign was aboard the destroyer MacDonough during the Pearl Harbor attack, was asked the same question by UPI whether a surprise nuclear attack was possible.

"Sure," he replied. "The heck of it is that both we and the Soviets are developing weapons to fire at each other first. Missiles are in effect 'Pearl Harbor weapons' for a surprise attack."

"I'd suggest negotiations (with the Soviets) to slow the increase in firing power," he said. La Roque, who has been accused by critics as a "dove," said "I've never advocated U.S. disarmament."

He is now director of the Institute for Defense Information, a research group that advocates avoidance of nuclear war; support of "a strong but not excessive" U.S. defense posture; and "reduction of the impact of military influence on U.S. domestic and foreign policies."

He recently told a Senate Armed Forces subcommittee, "The Reagan administration appears to have psychologically declared war on the Soviet Union."

Objecting to the administration's plans to build the MX and Trident II missiles and the B-1 bomber, La Roque said such projects only make sense "if we are actually planning to fight — and try to win — a nuclear war with the Soviets."

If the ostensible aim for the new weapons was deterrence, he said, the United States already has the capability to "explode 12,000 nuclear weapons on the Soviet Union." That would be sufficient to destroy the Soviet Union "even if they strike first," he said.

Washington has a lobby for practically every known cause.

Reporters who follow national security and defense affairs are inundated daily with books, pamphlets, news releases, texts of speeches, invitations to seminars, news conferences, breakfasts, lunches, suppers — all promoting Pentagon, defense industry, anti-defense, pacifist, religious, political and other theories ranging from unilateral U.S. disarmament to "negotiations from a position of strength" or simply for the sake of keeping the dialogue open.

More recently, remarks by Secretary of State Alexander Haig and President Reagan have spoken of a "demonstrative" nuclear shot in a crisis with the Soviets as a "warning" or the use of "tactical nuclear weapons" to stop a conventional war in Europe from escalating to an atomic holocaust.

But a possible nuclear "Pearl Harbor" does not necessarily have to involve only the United States and the Soviet Union.

India has the atomic bomb and Pakistan, although insisting it has no intent of building one, is said to have the capability. These two countries have been implacable enemies since the 1947 partition of the subcontinent between Hindu India and Moslem Pakistan.

Israel, believed already to have its own home-built, stockpile of nuclear weapons, was so fearful that Iraq was getting to the stage of producing one that it carried out a Pearl Harbor-type bombing attack on Iraq's reactor earlier this year. Iraq is rebuilding the installation — with Saudi funding.

China has the bomb and is still in a posture of tense confrontation with the Soviets along a border of thousands of miles.

South Africa is believed to have the capability of making nuclear weapons — if it does not already have them.

Urging Action By Methodists

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Adding to a rising tide of church oppositon to the nuclear arms race, the nation's United Methodist bishops have called for intensified efforts in that cause, saying:

"The most crucial issue facing the people of the earth today is the threat of nuclear holocaust which would destroy the created order as we know it."

Meanwhile, the United Church of Christ's social-action arm praised the growing public demonstrations against nuclear weapons in Europe, and pledged to help build a similar groundswell for peace in the United States.

The denomination's recent governing synod called for "unilateral initiatves by the United States toward nuclear disarmament."

The moderator of the United Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Robert M. Davidson, sent a message to President Reagan.
