

Reagan Sets 3rd Meeting On Hit Team

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan scheduled his third meeting of the week with national security advisers today amid reports that an alleged assassination squad dispatched by Libya is now in Mexico.

Although deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said it would be wrong to assume that Libya was the topic of today's meeting, other sources indicated it would be discussed.

Meanwhile, syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, appearing on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" today, showed what he said were composite sketches of five members of the alleged assassination squad.

A spokeswoman for Anderson, Vicki Warren, said later that the sketches were part of a packet of information sent by the Customs Service to customs and border patrol stations around the country.

"I don't know anything about those pictures," Ed Kirtledge, a Customs Service spokesman, said. Citing national security considerations, he refused to say whether the agency had circulated sketches in connection with the alleged plot on the lives of high American government officials.

Kirtledge declined comment on Anderson's suggestion that publishing the pictures would enable ordinary Americans to be on the lookout for the alleged squad members.

The FBI was equally reticent. "The pictures were not released by the FBI and I don't know where they came from," said spokesman Wylie Thompson.

Ms. Warren said the FBI was mentioned throughout the packet obtained by Anderson's office.

Anderson identified the five, who, he said, use a variety of aliases, as Ahmed Jooma, Ali Chafic, Ahmad Abass, Ibrahim El Haya and Luitz Schewesman.

The columnist said Jooma and El Haya are Iranians; Chafic, a Lebanese; Abass, a Palestinian; and Schewesman, a German.

Anderson said there are nine others in the alleged "hit team," but no sketches of them have been made. He identified them as Nabib Berry, Mohamed Shams-e-Din, Soulaymane Hassan, Omar Sabruhui, Feysal Fouad, Abou Ali, Choumaly Saleh, Husayni Hassan and Saleh Hassan.

The columnist said the alleged assassination squad had orders, in his words, "to shoot Reagan or the highest available American official."

CBS News Wednesday night quoted unidentified congressional sources as saying an alleged five-member terrorist team — which the Reagan administration says was formed by Libya to kill the president and other high-ranking U.S. officials — is in Mexico. Speakes declined to discuss the CBS report.

Previous reports have said the alleged hit team was believed to have been in Canada and to have entered the United States.

CBS also quoted congressional sources as saying, "U.S. intelligence reports indicate that the members of the alleged hit team have had previous contacts with the Weather Underground terrorist organization here in the United States."

The network said it had been told that the informant who reportedly alerted U.S. intelligence officials to the alleged plot was being interviewed by psychiatrists outside the United States and had passed several polygraph examinations.

At least one person who gave information about the alleged hit team has passed a lie detector test, an administration source told The Associated Press.

According to CBS, Capitol Hill sources are increasingly concerned about skepticism expressed in the news media about reports of the hit team. It quoted one official as saying there probably would be "some development" in the next few days that will convince everyone the threat is real.

After meeting Wednesday with Reagan, Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., said: "I'm concerned there is a responsibility to take these threats seriously (and) have a high level of concern. I'm also convinced the president is responding to them in a careful and prudent way and appropriately."

Leaks of information about the alleged hit team were criticized Wednesday by Vice President George Bush, while a spokesman for Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Haig was "outraged" by reports of possible U.S. action against Libya.

"There has been too much, far too much, said about Libya," Bush told reporters. "There has been kind of a lack of discipline in terms of information coming out."

In Brussels, where Haig is attending a NATO meeting, State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said: "We are talking about leaks coming out of the administration (about) possible action against Libya. ... He (Haig) was outraged by them."

A State Department official, who asked not to be identified, said leaks "can have the effect of limiting the administration's flexibility" to take action.

Peace Prize Presented Refugee Commissioner

By ERIKA WOLD
Associated Press Writer

OSLO, Norway (AP) — Poul Hartling, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, today accepted the 1981 Nobel Peace Prize on behalf of his office and the 10 million refugees it cares for around the world.

Hartling, a former prime minister of Denmark, will receive a check for the equivalent of $180,000 on Friday, before giving the traditional Nobel Lecture.

He said after accepting the award that the money will be used to establish a trust fund for handicapped refugees. The United Nations has declared 1981 as the Year of Disabled Persons.

"We will use the funds to provide hospital care, artificial limbs, wheelchairs, all of which might otherwise be difficult due to lack of money," Hartling said.

The award was the second for the refugee organization, headquartered in Geneva. It won its first Peace Prize in 1955, in recognition of its aid to European refugees after World War II and as an inspiration to continue its task.

Professor John Sanness, outgoing chairman of the Norwegian Nobel Committee, told Hartling in presenting the Nobel gold medal and diploma that the choice of the UNHCR was in recognition of the agency's work since 1955.

Sanness stressed that the award was meant, as it was 26 years ago, to urge the UNHCR to continue "its good offices as an arbitrator and go-between in relations between governments with different interests to safeguard."

The International Red Cross is the only other world body that has won the Nobel Peace Prize more than once.

The award ceremony, in Oslo's University Festival Hall, came on the annual Human Rights Day, which also is the anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, who initiated the Nobel prizes. The other four original Nobel prizes and the Nobel Memorial Prize in Economics, adopted by the Swedish Central Bank, were being presented today in Stockholm.

Sanness said the high commissioner and his 1,600-member staff in Geneva and in 80 countries "have consideration for the refugees themselves and their fate as the one and only guiding principle."

The number of refugees in the world is growing steadily. Conservative estimates indicate there are now 14 million to 18 million people who have fled their home countries, including 2 million from Afghanistan alone.

Sanness said the task of the UNHCR remains the same as it has been since the office was established 30 years ago: to defend the fundamental rights of refugees and help them become self-supporting.

"We all live in a world community not only consisting of states, but a world community of men and women — many of them stateless," Sanness said.

"The office of the UNHCR is a bridge linking the world community of states and the world community of men and women. We have a duty to the refugees, and this is a duty to ourselves and the very basis of our own existence."

Polish Army Newspaper Again Hits Solidarity

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish army newspaper Zolnierz Wolności launched a new attack on Solidarity today, saying it was time to halt the union's "march to a national catastrophe, the suicidal march to the gallows."

Solidarity leaders gathered in Gdansk to map strategy, and the anti-Communist Confederation of Independent Poland said it was time for a "determined, massive offensive to rescue the country," unless the government met Solidarity demands.

Poland's Roman Catholic primate, Archbishop Jozef Glomp, met for four hours with Solidarity's leaders Wednesday in another attempt to ease the escalating crisis between the independent labor federation and the Communist government.

But union leaders who had said there might be a meeting with Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski said no session was planned.

Lech Walesa and six other union leaders went to Glomp's palace Wednesday at the primate's request. It was not known what was said, but there was speculation that the archbishop urged Solidarity to hold off on strike threats.

Glomp had asked Walesa and Jaruzelski to resume the stalled talks on union-government cooperation, but the government has made no public response.

The archbishop also wrote the Sejm, the Polish parliament, urging it not to enact legislation proposed by the Communist Party to give the government extraordinary powers to curb the right to strike the workers won in the labor upheaval in 1980.

"Passing anti-strike legislation right now would bring about a wave of strikes whose range, scope and consequences (are) impossible to anticipate," Glomp warned.

To ignore this, he said, "would weigh tragically on the fate of the country."

The Sejm is scheduled to take up the legislation at a meeting next Tuesday. There was no immediate response from its Communist leaders to the archbishop's appeal.

Reagan Promises Anew To Continue Fight On Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is vowing anew to hold the line on soaring federal deficits, and his treasury secretary is calling for more than $150 billion in budget savings over the next three years.

In the wake of statements by some of his economic advisers that the administration can live with sizable budget deficits, Reagan declared through several spokesmen Wednesday that he is not complacent about the growing deficits that loom over the next three years.

New administration forecasts show accumulated red ink of more than $400 billion over the next three years, with the deficit ballooning from a record $109 billion in 1982 to $162 billion by 1984 unless there are further spending cuts and tax increases.

"In meeting after meeting I sit with the president, and he's terribly concerned about the deficit," Vice President George Bush told an economic seminar Wednesday.

But Bush said Reagan still would opt for a strong defense spending plan over a balanced budget.

White House communications director David Gergen said the president remains "committed to reducing the size of the deficit" and will think of that as he listens to his Cabinet secretaries appeal the deep spending cuts that budget director

David A. Stockman is proposing for 1983.

Those appeals were to get underway today, beginning with visits from the secretaries of labor and energy.

Although Republicans traditionally have argued that deficits create high interest and inflation, members of the President's Council of Economic Advisers said this week that the economy can absorb large deficits without that happening.

Economic adviser William Niskanen contended Tuesday that there is no meaningful connection between deficits and inflation.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan told reporters Wednesday that he expects the administration to make significant progress toward reducing the 1983 and 1984 deficits through a combination of spending cuts and tax increases.

"We know a $100 billion deficit is bad for the financial markets," he said, but conceded the administration cannot achieve many savings for fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1.

Asked how much of the projected deficit the administration wants to eliminate between now and 1984, Regan said: "I'd be disappointed if we only reduced it by $150 billion."

Regan did not specify where the savings would come, but said he doesn't expect the president to seek any major cuts in defense.

The treasury secretary added that the administration is still considering how much of the deficit might be narrowed through tax increases.

Reagan pledged at the start of his term to balance the budget by 1984, but that goal has since been replaced by a drive to slowly reduce the deficit from an almost certain record level in 1982.

Niskanen suggested that annual deficits near the existing record of $66.4 billion, set in 1976, might be acceptable, and certainly preferable to a sharp increase in taxes.

That argument did not go over well in the Senate on Wednesday.

"It can't happen anywhere but Fantasy Island to have large deficits and not have economic disaster," said Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo. The idea that deficits don't matter could sound the "death knell" for the GOP, he said.

"If we're going to save this economy ... we're going to have to return to the old time religion of a balanced budget," added Sen. J. Bennett Johnston, D-La.

However, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a leading tax-cut advocate, said he was not surprised by the statements by Reagan's economic advisers.

Legislative Award For County's Farm Bureau

The Pitt County Farm Bureau received the Legislative Award at the annual state convention in Raleigh Tuesday. The award is presented to the county which has done the most outstanding work contacting their congressmen and senators at the national level and their representatives and senators in Raleigh to get legislation passed or defeated which concerns the farmers of Pitt County.

The Pitt County Farm Bureau held special meetings with the county commissioners to discuss the fair valuation of land used for agriculture. Members of the farm organization attended hearings in Raleigh and Washington concerning problems facing the tobacco program.

Representatives, congressmen and senators were contacted by telephone and letter and personal contacts were also made.

Sen. John East, R-N.C., was guest speaker at a regular board meeting. State Reps. Ed Warren and Sam Bundy and Sen. Vernon White are invited to regular board meetings of the county organization.

County President Atlas Wooten said it took the total effort of many Pitt County Farm Bureau members to win the award.

Wooten was elected to serve on the executive committee of the N. C. Farm Bureau Board of Directors at its annual meeting held in Raleigh Dec. 6-9. He has served on the board during the past two years and will now be involved in making decisions concerning all phases of the Farm Bureau Service Companies and its affiliates.

Mrs. Alma Worthington is chairman of the Pitt County Farm Bureau Legislative Committee and Mrs. Lois Briely serves as chairman of the Ladies Committee.

CITIZENSHIP MIXUP

I applied for United States citizenship three years ago. On June 5 of this year I went, as I was notified to do, to New Bern for a citizenship interview, taking along two witnesses, only to be told that the officer who was supposed to interview me was sick. Since then I've called the Charlotte Immigration office a number of times to see for when my interview is rescheduled and nobody gives me a proper answer. K.A.

Your interview is set for Dec. 15 at 1:30 p.m. at the federal courthouse-post office in Fayetteville. The person to whom we talked in the Charlotte U.S. Immigration office said your files have already been sent to Fayetteville and that she does not know why you did not receive the written notice sent you. She said the office is sorry that you were not notified when the officer became ill last June, but that the onset of his illness was too late to make contact with those like you who probably were already on the way to New Bern.

Mobil Threatens Turn Sights On Big Steelmaker

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — With its takeover bid for Marathon Oil Co. near collapse and U.S. Steel Corp. zeroing in, Mobil Corp. is threatening to turn its sights on the giant steelmaker.

Herbert Schmetz, Mobil's vice president for public affairs, said today the company had told U.S. Steel it planned to buy between 15 percent and 25 percent of the steelmaker's stock, or from 12.9 million to 21.8 million shares.

Schmetz declined to discuss the No. 2 oil company's motive, but analysts said Mobil could use the shares as a bargaining tool to acquire Marathon if U.S. Steel won the takeover fight.

Mobil's takeover attempt was dealt another blow Wednesday when a federal judge in Cleveland denied its request that it reconsider his order blocking Mobil's bid for Marathon.

That ruling, coupled with a recent series of Mobil failures and U.S. Steel victories in courtroom skirmishes, gave the steelmaker a clear edge in the lengthy battle for control of Marathon, the nation's 17th-largest oil company.

Marathon management favors U.S. Steel's $6.3 billion offer, although it is smaller than the $6.5 billion bid being pressed by Mobil. Marathon's management fears the company will be absorbed by Mobil and moved from its headquarters at Findlay, Ohio.

Mobil announced Wednesday it had filed reports with the Federal Trade Commission and the Justice Department that would allow it to buy as much as 25 percent of U.S. Steel's outstanding stock on the open market or through other means.

Mobil said it would be free to buy U.S. Steel shares after a 30-day waiting period that expires Jan. 8. If either the FTC or the Justice Department asked for additional information from Mobil, the stock purchases would be delayed an additional 20 days after Mobil supplied the information.

Although Mobil did not say explicitly in filing the reports that it would buy any U.S. Steel shares, the mere suggestion that it was planning to evoked a strong reaction from U.S. Steel.

From its headquarters in Pittsburgh, U.S. Steel said only an hour after learning of Mobil's filing of the report that it considered the action was "intended to coerce" U.S. Steel to abandon its bid for Marathon.

While stressing that it intended to proceed with its offer for Marathon, U.S. Steel advised investors "not to be misled by Mobil's reckless action."

Two weeks ago Mobil disclosed it held about 450,000 U.S. Steel shares, or less than 1 percent of the steelmaker's estimated 90 million outstanding shares.

By buying a larger stake in U.S. Steel, Mobil won't necessarily seek to gain control of the nation's largest steelmaker, industry analysts said. Instead, Mobil might try to force U.S. Steel to swap Marathon's business for U.S. Steel shares.

Mobil's main interest in Marathon is its vast domestic oil reserves. Marathon owns a 49.7 percent interest in the big Yates oilfield in west Texas, which ranks as the second-largest American oilfield behind Alaska's Prudhoe Bay field.

U.S. Steel will be free to start buying Marathon shares Tuesday.

In addition to the restraining order against it in Cleveland, Mobil faces the FTC's announced threat to sue Mobil on antitrust grounds. The commission said Tuesday it had decided to try to block Mobil and said it would file its suit by today, most likely in federal court in Cleveland.

Meanwhile, Mobil is awaiting word from the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati on whether it will be granted an expedited hearing of its appeal of a federal court ruling in Columbus, Ohio. That ruling freed U.S. Steel to start buying Marathon shares as early as Dec. 15.

Extend Enlistments?

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is reviving a proposal, rejected by the Carter administration, to build up a shrunken pool of trained reservists by lengthening the total military obligation of future volunteers.

The proposal would add two years to the time a former serviceman or woman would remain in the Individual Ready Reserve — and thus subject to recall in a war. The length of active duty obligation would not change.

Without a draft, the ready reserve is the main source of "pre-trained" manpower available to fill understrength active units early in a war, form new outfits and replace battle casualties.

Since the Vietnam war, this pool has shrunk from 1.6 million to fewer than 400,000. At that level the Individual Ready Reserve is about 300,000 short of wartime requirements, Air Force Brig. Gen. Randall D. Peat, a planning officer under the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told Congress last week.

Most recruits now enlist for three or four years of active duty and are carried on ready reserve rolls for the rest of their six-year military obligation.

Edward J. Philbin, a senior reserve affairs official, testified recently that "a proposal currently being considered by the Defense Department" would extend the military service obligation to eight years.

This idea was studied by the Carter administration in 1979, but was rejected by Pentagon officials, who said at the time they regarded it as unfair to those who have served on active duty.

If the two-year extension of total military obligation is recommended by the Reagan administration and approved by Congress, current Pentagon officials said, it would affect only those who enlist in the regular armed forces after it becomes law.

According to Philbin, this means the two-year extension would not result in an increase in the strength of the Individual Ready Reserve for several years.

In the meantime, the Pentagon probably will rely on such devices as the direct enlistment of young civilians into the IRR, a concept tested in 1979 under the Carter administration.

Under such a plan, youths would receive about three months of active-duty basic training in peacetime and then would return home to spend the remainder of the obligated period in their normal civilian jobs except for periodic refresher training.

Arms Negotiator Says 'Real Issues' Taken Up

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Paul H. Nitze, chief U.S. negotiator in arms talks with the Soviets, told NATO foreign ministers today that both sides are "getting down to real issues" but it is too early to say whether there will be rapid progress.

Nitze's report on the Geneva talks on limiting nuclear arms in Europe was greeted with "many strong statements of support" from the NATO foreign ministers, said a senior U.S. official. "There was not one single reservation" about the U.S. negotiating position, said the official, who didn't want to be identified.

Following his presentation, at a closed session of the NATO meeting, Nitze returned to Geneva for a lunch with his Soviet counterpart, according to the official.

"Ambassador Nitze was able to report the negotiations are being conducted in a very serious vein...The atmosphere has been a positive one," the official said.

But he said Nitze also cautioned it was too soon to say whether there could be rapid progress in the talks and that he underlined the need for NATO to continue plans to deploy U.S. nuclear missiles on schedule, beginning in late 1983, in the event no agreement is reached with the Soviets.

Another senior official told reporters at a briefing that the U.S. goal at the two-day NATO meeting, which opened today, is to renew NATO's determination to "go forward" with the 1983 deployment if there is not an agreement.

He said there had not been any expression of concern by other NATO countries that domestic opposition to nuclear missile deployment could hamper the missile plans. However, he didn't rule out that such concerns could be raised later in the session.

"We will have a better sense of where we are on all of these issues tomorrow night," he said.

The official, who also did not want to be identified, said Haig is discussing U.S. concerns over Libya during his meeting here, but didn't know whether he was trying to get support for possible action, such as an oil embargo.

Haig is seeking reaffirmation of the alliance's 1979 decision to deploy U.S.-made cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in Europe to counter the Kremlin's SS-20 missiles pointed at Western Europe from Western Russia.

Canadian Foreign Minister Mark MacGuigan opened the two-day foreign ministers' meeting today by stressing to the 15 North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies the importance of maintaining their deterrent to possible Soviet aggression.

Swearing-In At Grifton

GRIFTON — Residents of this Pitt County town have a new mayor, Ralph Thaxton, who was sworn in during ceremonies this week by Judge Robert Wheeler.

Thaxton, along with new Councilman Gibb Chauncey, took the oath of office Tuesday during the Town Council's monthly meeting.

Former Mayor Dave Bosley and outgoing Councilman Alton Clements were honored with plaques of appreciation. "Both these men have unselfishly shared their time and talents in service to the town for many years," said Thaxton, after presenting the plaques. "Grifton has seen much growth and progress under their leadership."

Thaxton listed the annexation of Forest Acres, the Country Club and Meadowgreen areas, the establishment of the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewage District and the establishment of a zoning and planning board as the major accomplishments of the 12-year terms of the two men.

"Many citizens are not aware of the countless hours these men have given to the town," added Thaxton, "Bosley researching laws and guidelines and Clements working closely with the fire and police departments."

Two Grifton Men Arrested

GRIFTON — Pitt County deputies and Grifton Police have arrested two local men on charges stemming from a Dec. 5 break-in at Pope's Department Store on Queen Street here.

Arrested, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson, were Kenneth Ray Sutton, 26, of Route 1, Grifton, and James Earl Bradford, 26, of Waters Street, Grifton.

He said both were charged with breaking into the department store and taking merchandise valued at approximately $280. The missing items, some of which have been recovered, included cassette and eight track tape players, AM-FM radio, and a car tape player, he said.

Both men were placed in Pitt County Jail under $500 bond each, the sheriff reported.

No Tax Break, No Cornerstone

CHICAGO (AP) — The planned cornerstone of a huge North Loop redevelopment project — a $250 million Hilton Hotel — won't be built because the hotel chain couldn't get the tax break it wanted from Cook County, Mayor Jane Byrne announced.

Hilton Hotels Corp. was counting on a city-backed plan of an assessed valuation at 16 percent of fair market value for 13 years, rather than 40 percent, the standard commercial rate.

But the plan, pushed by the mayor since 1980, was rejected Tuesday by Cook County assessor Tom Hynes. He is a close ally of Cook County State's Attorney Richard M. Daley, a foe of Mrs. Byrne and son of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley.

Moral Majority Shows A Deficit

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — An audit shows the Moral Majority has a deficit of more than $500,000 even though it more than doubled its annual revenue in the fiscal year ended Aug. 31.

But Robert Godwin, executive director for Rev. Jerry Falwell's conservative political lobby, said the deficit is "less than one month's income." The group claims up to 5 million members.

The audit showed Moral Majority had revenues in fiscal 1980-81 of $5.77 million — up from $2.21 million in fiscal 1979-80.

Thanksgiving Day Column Appreciated

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is to thank you for your Thanksgiving Day column. It gave me the strength to make it through another day.

I am in the Army, stationed in South Korea, and I find it hard to be thankful for anything while I am unwillingly separated from my dear wife and two children.

I am under constant pressure from my buddies to go out with the local "girls," and I'm criticized because I won't. I am in a race with myself to see if I end up in a hospital from too much alcohol or from a nervous breakdown.

I volunteered to work today to keep my mind off the fact that it's a holiday. After reading you today, I realized that as homesick and blue as I am, lots of people have it worse. Thank you.

THANKSGIVING IN KOREA

DEAR THANKSGIVING: Hang in there. Your letter made my day. If you'll permit me a little unsolicited advice: Stay away from the bottle. One drink is too many and a hundred isn't enough. Write home every day, keep busy, stay out of trouble and, yes, pray. And before you know it, you'll be home with your family. God love you.

DEAR ABBY: Thanks a lot for telling my mother-in-law that she is entitled to use her dead husband's name forever. She refused to sleep with this man for the last 20 years of his life, then she nagged him to death. I never heard her call him anything but "that s.o.b." the whole time she lived with him. And now that he is gone, she insists on being called "Mrs. John Smith."

My husband is John Smith Jr., and his mother still goes by Mrs. John Smith. I wish she would use her given name so people wouldn't get us mixed up, because I am Mrs. John Smith, too.

Abby, why don't you tell these widows to get on with their own lives and quit hanging onto the past? They just sit around and suck up the Social Security money and wait to die. What a waste!

NO NAMES OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO: Regardless of your personal feelings about your mother-in-law, the fact is, a woman is entitled to use her late husband's name as long as she lives — unless she marries again.

DEAR ABBY: I just have to share this with somebody! My 5-year-old son said, "Mommy, do you know what I want for Christmas most of all?"

I thought to myself, "That little con artist — I wonder what he wants now?" His answer knocked me right off my feet. He said, "All I want is a mommy who doesn't smoke anymore. I love you very much and want you to live for a loooooong time." Then he put his chubby arms around my neck and kissed me.

I had to wipe away a tear. It's been two weeks, and I haven't had a cigarette since. I don't think I will ever smoke again. Wish me luck.

NANCY IN KANSAS CITY

DEAR NANCY: I wish you luck. And kiss your beautiful son for me.

DEAR ABBY: Where is the safest place to be in case of an earthquake?

THINKING AHEAD

DEAR THINKING: In an airplane.

Grant Goes To CHS

The Children's Home Society of North Carolina has been selected to receive a $150,000 grant from the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust, Mrs. Mary Taylor, president of the society, announced recently.

The grant will be used to assist indigent women with unplanned pregnancies in paying for prenatal, maternity home and hospital care expenses.

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. James Adams of Greenville announce the engagement of their daughter, Norma Worthington Northern, to William Elbert Byrd of Burlington. A Dec. 26 wedding is planned.

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (UPI) — Nationally syndicated financial writer Sylvia Porter will be featured guest lecturer on the Island Princess' Transcanal cruise departing Los Angeles on Jan. 30, Princess Cruises announced. Ports of call on the 12-day cruise include Acapulco, Panama Canal (transit), Cartagena, Colombia, Aruba, Martinique, St. Thomas, and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

With energy costs sky-high and cold weather coming, personal comfort becomes a matter of personal survival. Right now, Belk Tyler stores offer an idea that can help save energy dollars and make comfort sense. It's the Presto quartz heater — the modern way to warm up your life.

The Presto quartz heater heats like the sun — with direct, radiant heat from dual quartz tubes — to warm you comfortably almost instantly without first heating the entire room.

An energy stingy on-off cycle controls the temperature by automatically turning the unit on and off. Just turn on the Presto quartz heater anytime you want fast, radiant heat and be comfortable in seconds. The top mounted control is easy to see and easy to adjust without stooping. Plus, a safety switch turns the heater off in case of accidental tip-over. The Presto quartz heater, a tower of heating power that heats like the sun, is on sale right now at Belk Tyler. Of course, the Presto name means the quality is built in.

PRESTO QUARTZ heater

The Presto quartz heater symbolizes why 'quartz' is the magic word in portable heaters this season. The Presto unit generates 5120 B.T.U.'s of Infra-red heat that warms people and objects directly without first heating the air around them. Dual quartz tubes produce heat as much as 500° hotter at the source than other types of heaters.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I have always been led to believe that marketing is an exact science.

When a television commercial is produced it is after months of figuring out an appeal directed toward two groups: those who need it, and those who don't know they can live without it yet.

It's a revealing science. After years of watching commercials, I have gained some real insights into people I never knew before.

Elderly people don't sweat and never need deodorant. Young people never suffer from irregularity. Black people never get clogged-up nasal passages and people with short hair are never worth the price of an expensive hair coloring.

Women don't buy cars. At least not on television. So what if the statistics show that 42 percent of cars are bought by women? On the tube, they ride in them, on top of them, and walk on the beach with cars in the background, but they don't buy them.

According to commercials, Hispanics never get colds or if they do, never find a remedy for them. Chicanos don't get headaches or dial long distance, and Asian-Americans never do laundry.

As for native Americans, I've never seen them use any product on television. They exist on a diet of margarine.

As far as television is concerned, women may go around only once in their lives, but they never do it with gusto. They are never rewarded with a beer at the end of the day.

Watching television, you'd think that all consumers weighed less than 36 pounds. The only plump women on television get clogged sinks and dance with their cats.

Consumers don't wear glasses. They are worn only by doctors who want to relieve you from hemorrhoids or swollen tissues. And the only people who eat dry sandwiches for lunch are construction workers. The men in the three-piece suits brown-bag only freshness. It comes with the territory.

I've remained silent through a lot of television commercials that put a strain on credibility. Dancing underwear, butter that talks, dogs that sing and soup cans that march on a town, but the other night when a 36-pound woman said with a straight face, "I have to watch my weight." I threw a lamp at the set.

I've had it.

PUMPKIN CUSTARD
Both flavor and texture are delicate.

3 large eggs
¾ cup canned solid-pack pumpkin
½ cup Grade B maple syrup
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk, scalded

Beat eggs until foamy. Add pumpkin, syrup, sugar, vanilla and salt; stir until blended. Gradually stir in the scalded milk until blended. Ladle into 6 six-ounce custard cups. Place in a 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan; pour very hot water into the pan so it comes about as high as the custard mixture. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a knife inserted near center comes out clean — 45 to 60 minutes. Chill. Makes 6 servings.

We Must Move Forward

A new Greenville City Council is taking its place tonight with swearing-in ceremonies to be held in the council chambers at the Municipal Building.

There are new faces on the council with Janice Buck, Stuart Shinn and George Pugh having won election. They join incumbents Bill Hadden, Judy Greene and Louis Clark. A new mayor takes office. Percy Cox defeated Don McGlohon. Cox, of course, is familiar with city government having served previously on the council and as mayor.

The council members will face many problems in the two years they will serve in office. Money will be a primary one. Few want to see increases in property taxes; yet it is essential that certain city services be maintained. In addition there are other things the city must do if Greenville is to maintain its reputation as one of the outstanding communities of the state in which to live and work.

Like all municipalities, Greenville will face a sharp decline in federal funds available for various projects — and in past years such grants have done everything from build parks to construct streets. We may also face declines in some state funding, depending of the variations in the economy.

It is quite a charge to this council to maintain a progressive and forward-looking community and at the same time to wrestle with the problem of stable or declining revenues. The balancing act must be done, however. We must not slide backward.

Medical Library Begins Move

In the first of a series of moves, the Health Science Library of the ECU School of Medicine has begun transferring to its new facilities in the Brody Building adjacent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The library will have adequate and modern facilities to serve the medical school and the growing medical population of Pitt County and the entire east.

The library has been in several locations and having its permanent facilities will help the staff to better serve the medical community.

Soon other departments of the School of Medicine will follow in moving into the new building. The school's various departments also have been located in various buildings on the main campus, in the hospital and in the County Office Building.

When the Brody Building is fully utilized the ECU School of Medicine will be poised to reach its full potential of service to North Carolina.

Microbiology Step

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt has pushed North Carolina into the forefront in the explosive new world of microbiological technology through the establishment of the North Carolina Biotechnology Center.

Almost a full year of exploratory effort has already gone into the creation of the center, which was designed by Gov. Jim Hunt, Duke University President Terry Sanford and University of North Carolina President William Friday.

Staff of the center will answer directly to those three as it goes about the task of pulling together as much as can be learned about where and what kind of research is being done by the government, private industry, and universities.

At this point there is no telling what will result from that preliminary review. Expectations are high in governmental and university circles, however, that during the coming year sufficient information about this startling new field and its endless progress can be gathered to convince North Carolinians and their political leaders to take a giant step into the future.

Investment
Why should Tar Heel taxpayers back the proposal certain to be placed on the desks of legislators as the 1982 General Assembly meets which will call for investing millions of dollars and establishing a research, teaching and pilot production facility devoted to biotechnology?

When Gov. Hunt pushed his $24 million dollar proposal to establish a North Carolina center for microelectronics through the General Assembly, critics argued that such an investment during hard financial times would leave other governmental programs hurting. Nonetheless, the funds were provided on the promise of future rewards.

This state has, already, the nucleus of university minds and facilities, the private industries, and the prestigious Research Triangle Park and Research Triangle Institute to make attractive the prospects of development as a major center for microelectronics and computer-communications technology.

The same can be said for biotechnology — only more. The most immediate obvious advances in microbiology will be in agriculture, medicine, energy, and forestry.

All are critical areas for North Carolina, and there is already in this state the nucleus of expert development. N.C. State University, for example, has long played a lead role internationally in the agricultural revolution promise now greening undeveloped countries. The second agricultural revolution promised by microbiology will find a ready-made welcome at State. This is true, already, of forestry. And in medicine, the concentration of knowledge and resources in this state's four medical schools is well known.

Complex
Biotechnology is a new and complex field. Terminology and concepts are difficult for the layman. Not even the universities are preparing students for the field because it is so new and so rapidly developing.

But to illustrate what can be one result of the cell altering and gene splicing and cloning to produce new species, imagine: a disease resistant plant growing in salt-water marshlands which cares not whether it rains; whose leaves spread wide to soak up sun and are edible cooked or raw in salads and are rich in protein; whose

GAMBLING AND GAMBLING!

BY JAMES J. KILPATRICK

Sen. Byrd Steps Down

WASHINGTON — In one of his feistier moments 30 years ago, President Harry S. Truman snapped that there were "too many Byrds in the Senate." His barb was aimed at the penny-pitching senator from Virginia, Harry F. Byrd Sr., but it might have applied equally to the senator's successor, Harry F. Byrd Jr. Fourteen months hence, there won't be any such penny-pinching Byrds around.

With his announced retirement at the end of his present term, the younger Byrd marks a record not likely to be approached any time soon. Father and son together will have served 49 consecutive years in the Senate — the senior Byrd from 1933 to 1965, his son from 1965 to 1982.

It is not unusual in the annals of Congress for fathers, sons, grandsons, widows, brothers and nephews to serve in the House or the Senate or both. The Senate librarian records 86 such dynastic families, most notably the Bayards of Delaware; five generations of Bayards served off and on in the Senate from 1789 through 1929. The Longs of Louisiana — Huey, Rose, Russell and George — constitute another remarkable clan.

But the Byrds of Virginia are something special in our political history, not in their senatorial achievements, which have been few, but in the absolute integrity that has characterized their service.

Father and son, alike in so many ways, have proved quite different in others. The senior Byrd reveled in the nitty-gritty of Virginia politics. From the mid-20s until a few years before his death in 1965, with only a handful of losses, Byrd and his hand-picked candidates ran the Old Dominion. If you supported Byrd, you spoke of the "Byrd Organization." If you opposed him, you spoke of the "Byrd Machine." County by county, courthouse by courthouse, Byrd rewarded his friends and sandbagged his enemies. He would not tolerate the faintest breath of scandal or corruption. One or two of his key people were blockheads; few were brilliant; none was dishonest.

Young Harry never has relished political combat as his father did. He has his father's explosive laugh, his father's knuckle-cracking handshake, the same white hair and red apple cheeks, the same immaculate dress, but he is by nature a quieter man. Early on, he accepted the principle of noblesse oblige — that rank imposes obligations. Young Harry, now 65, always has done what was expected of him. The leading families of Virginia are born that way.

The old senator died in the same year the first Voting Rights Act was passed. It was a watershed point in Southern political life. The old courthouse rings were crumbling; the black vote was soaring. Byrd Democrats had been closet Republicans in presidential elections at least since 1948; now they gave their schizophrenia free rein. Young Byrd declared himself an independent. As such, he has done all his conservative constituents might have asked. That is to say, he has done as little as possible, and he has been a gentleman all the way.

In this regard, the senator — like his father — has lived by the precept that John Randolph of Roanoke once identified as the philosopher's stone: Pay as you go! They have been the Harry Frugality Byrds. In recent years the senator has made at least a dozen more or less official trips aboard — all at his own

Policy Near Bankruptcy

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — A confidential message to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger from the Joint Chiefs of Staff bluntly warned in mid-November that if the U.S.-Israel "strategic cooperation" agreement went beyond "minimal" joint military planning, they would exercise their legal right to complain directly to President Reagan.

In truth, Weinberger himself was no more enthusiastic about the U.S.-Israel "strategic" pact than his military subordinates. So the agreement signed Nov. 30 was long on implications but short enough in hard U.S. commitments to fall — just barely, though — within the limits set by the Joint Chiefs.

That whiff of dissension at the top of the Reagan administration is only the latest evidence of near-bankruptcy in U.S. Mideast policy. What passes for policy is described by one participant as "a bewildering succession of tactical ploys" to conceal the absence of real policy. The result: a bureaucratic free-for-all undermining Ronald Reagan.

Having alarmed Israel with the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia, the president was forced against the judgment of his Pentagon advisers to placate the Israelis with the "strategic" agreement they always have wanted. But within a week, Weinberger was in Morocco for a hastily-arranged audience with King Hassan, trying to appease angry Arab reaction to the U.S.-Israeli pact. Israel's strategic proposal, rejected by the U.S., would have given Israel security responsibilities from Pakistan "to the Moroccan border" (in the words of the Israeli draft).

Disagreement over the new pact with Israel is only the exposed tip of concealed conflict between Israel and the Arabs and between "Zionist" and "Arabist" officials within the Reagan administration. The dimensions of this conflict were seen at the White House Nov. 19 when Jewish leaders met President Reagan.

A National Security Council (NSC) staffer mousetrapped his own president in his efforts to help Israel. He prompted one of the Jewish leaders to ask Reagan whether he still stood by his Sept. 15, 1980 campaign statement that all of Jerusalem belongs to Israel. The president, caught off guard, said he did. It took Secretary of State Alexander Haig's personal intervention with the senior White House staff to get a "clarification" issued: Reagan's position "does not reflect a change in United States policy" — that is, the city's fate is for future negotiation.

The pro-Israel commitment of Mideast specialists on the NSC staff was shown in their vigorous arguments for an expanded U.S.-Israel "strategic" agreement. Their viewpoint also dominated the routine briefing papers prepared for Reagan's conversations about the West Bank with Jordan's King Hussein last month.

The NSC papers advised Reagan to tell the king that the Palestinians already had their state — in the kingdom of Jordan — and that talk of a "Palestinian state" across the Jordan River on the west Bank was irrelevant. They also advised Reagan to give Hussein no hint of what the U.S. has in mind for an eventual settlement of the intractable West Bank issue.

Before Hussein arrived, however, the briefing papers prepared by the NSC staffers were revised at the State Department. The new version spelled out for Reagan, who is no expert on the mysteries of internal Arab politics, that Hussein's greatest fear is the overthrow of his Bedouin monarchy by displaced Palestinians living in Jordan.

This battle for the president's mind on Israel is not merely NSC staff vs. State Department

Strength For Today

SOLOMON IN ALL HIS GLORY?

King Solomon was one of the most distinguished monarchs ever to occupy a throne, and his reign, in the sense of wealth and power, is often considered to be the high point of Jewish history.

Yet Solomon had certain weaknesses — and they were spiritual weaknesses. In the first place, he was vain and luxury-loving to such an extent that he was willing to oppress his subjects in order to satisfy his own vanity. He swept all moral problems under the rug. His many wives worshipped many different gods, and Solomon in a spirit of good-natured tolerance allowed these women to bring these gods into the land of Israel and corrupt the spiritual and moral life of the land.

There is no true success in life — for Solomon or anyone else — save spiritual success. If we make and keep our souls right with God, our degree of material success will be important only as it contributes to our spiritual success. — Elisha Douglass

To the editor:
In your Forum on Dec. 2 you carried a letter from Dr. M.W. Aldridge which unjustly defamed the American Civil Liberties Union. On the strength of information purportedly originating with Rev. Pat Robertson in Virginia, Dr. Aldridge depicted ACLU as waging a vicious war on the observance of Christmas. This is a completely unjustifiable misrepresentation of fact.

I believe Dr. Aldridge is an honorable man, a patriot and a credit to our community; but he is misinformed if his letter is representative of his knowledge of ACLU.

I am a Christian, a registered voter, an active member of ACLU. There is no war, no "emergency" and no attack on anybody's religion, rights under the Constitution, etc. Certainly, no such action is originating at the national or state policy-making levels of ACLU. Our specific purpose, since the founding in 1920, has been "to maintain throughout the United States and its possessions, the rights of free speech, free press, free assemblage and other civil rights, and to take all legitimate action in furtherance of such purposes." It's that simple.

Any person or organization can suffer immeasurable harm by way of careless innuendo or misrepresentation. If an individual were so treated he would probably have adequate grounds for a libel suit. But ACLU is in the public area, much like a newspaper, and generally has to just take its licks, fairly or not.

In this community the spirit I perceive of ACLU is to try to help preserve the Constitutional rights of all people, in a kind, loving and caring way. I truly hope I have not been unkind in writing this letter.

Governor Hunt has proclaimed Dec. 15 "Bill of Rights Day in North Carolina." Local members of ACLU, the League of Women Voters, the NAACP and other groups will "celebrate" the ratification by the states of the first 10 amendments to the U.S. Constitution. In 1791, those rights were precious. They are no less precious today.

Anger With Banks Has Impact

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of people are angry at their banks these days, such as Bob Loughlin of Portland, Ore., and Jackie Kleiner of Atlanta and Joe Pat Downs of Bardonia, Ky.

Loughlin got angry when, he says, a big bank foreclosed its loans to his firm and threatened to liquidate it. Kleiner got angry when, he says, he was badly overcharged on a loan. And Joe Pat Downs too.

Loughlin raised a to-do with regulatory officials and in court, then helped form a bank for small businesses. With evangelical zeal he denounces "greedy" big banks and "phony" prime interest rates.

Kleiner, a business professor and attorney whom Bob Loughlin considers the patriarch of the angry activists, got incensed when, he says, his bank charged him on the basis of a prime rate that wasn't prime at all. His loans, says Kleiner, were supposed to cost one percentage point over the prime rate, which an America Bankers Association book calls "the rate charged the largest and most credit-worthy customers."

Kleiner then discovered what the Federal Reserve Board and the House Banking Committee now know, that commercial banks have been posting "prime" rates much higher than rates they gave to certain customers.

He sued, claiming the First National Bank of Atlanta engaged in fraud and racketing activities. He seeks double the $30,000 interest already paid, plus damages. The case is pending. So is a growing list of cases.

Kleiner, in fact, is involved in seven other suits, the latest one in Portland, Oregon, where in conjunction with other attorneys he is suing First Interstate Bank of Oregon for allegedly overcharging his client.

One case already has been decided. A Kentucky jury ruled that Joe Pat Downs, a real estate developer, owed $104,000 less interest than United Kentucky Bank charged him, again because a loan was said to be based on the prime rate when, in fact, some customers received better rates.

That case is not ended though. It is being appealed, by Downs and his attorney, Kleiner, who now seek the addition of punitive damages against the bank and forgiveness of the entire $1.3 million loan.

The Loughlins, Kleiners and Downs, along with attorneys Henry Casey in Portland, Oregon and Joe Merren in Atlanta, are having an impact. Many banks no longer quote "prime" rates, and if they do they are careful to avoid saying so in loan contracts. The Federal Reserve has expressed some concern. And so has the House Banking Committee.

The latter — officially the House Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs Committee — found that 60 percent of commercial loans by big New York banks in May 1980 were made at rates below prime. It said the average discount was four points off the prime rate posted by the banks.

It is for this reason that Loughlin, the chief executive officer of Western Food Equipment Co. and a lay leader of his Baptist church, refers to such rates as "the phony prostituted posted prime fib."

Aside from his talents as a successful business executive, Loughlin is possessed of a missionary's sense of purpose. And his purpose now is to correct what he sees as an outrageous injustice done to small business.

Loughlin's anger can be traced back at least to October 1977 when, he maintains, U.S. National Bank arbitrarily attempted to "liquidate Western — not its loan — but the Western Food Equipment Company."

Loughlin repeatedly sought an explanation off why a long-standing relationship should be ended so abruptly but, he said, he has never received one. He did, however, obtain new financing, at better terms, from Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

He survived; he won't forget.

He beseeched federal banking authorities to chastise U.S. National Bank, which after investigation they declined to do. He feels he got a runaround in his attempt to "assure Western and other Oregon small businesses that there will not be a repeat performance where a worthy business could be stamped out." He is considering litigation.

Meanwhile, he and associates helped form Stewardship Bank of Oregon, which he describes as "owned by small business people and committed to sharing profits with Evangelical ministries and Christian Schools."

"In our bank," he said the other day of Stewardship, which opened April 4, "we use the best and lowest rate." Small business people are welcomed; they are considered special people, not inferiors, he said.

While offering rates to small businesses 1.5 points below the "phony prime," he says, the new bank still was able to report an operating profit for September. Loughlin is pleased, but hardly appeased.

He is determined to continue the battle. The issue, he said, is big business versus small business, especially in regard to financing. "There can be no sacred cows living above the regulations," he said.

Evans-Novak . . .

or Pentagon; it pits State and Defense Department bureaucrats against each other. The U.S.-Israeli pact and the AWACS sale intensified the conflict, but did not start it.

A blatant case came before British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's state visit earlier this year, triggering hostilities within the State Department. Paul Wolfowitz, the pro-Israeli director of the State Department's policy planning staff, drafted a briefing paper for Reagan intended to counteract Thatcher's Foreign Minister, Lord Carrington, who is anathema to the Israelis. Reagan should make clear to Thatcher, Wolfowitz wrote, that the U.S. is prepared "to rid ourselves of the burden imposed by the myth of the Palestinian problem."

The briefing paper was killed by Haig before it got out of his department. Whatever its defects, however, it represented a firm opinion standing in stark contrast to the lack of any declared Reagan administration policy on the West Bank. The absence of a known U.S. position invites the "Zionists" and "Arabists" within to press for advantage with Ronald Reagan. The longer the vacuum lasts, the worse the freelancing will get.

expense. He has returned to the Treasury more than a million dollars in office and salary allowances. He follows Randolph in another way. Randolph once proposed a rule that would require that one law be repealed for every new law enacted. Byrd of Virginia feels the same way.

Three years ago Byrd succeeded in one of his rare legislative crusades. He won overwhelming enactment of a single-sentence amendment to the International Monetary Fund bill: "Beginning with the fiscal year 1981, the total outlays of the federal government shall not exceed its receipts." No president, no Congress, no court has paid the slightest attention to this statutory law. It stands on the books as lonesome, as respectable, as conservative, as symbolic of the old ways as the senator himself.

Government, he feels, must be involved both to pull together the possibilities and to make sure that the people receive in the most direct way the numerous benefits certain to result.

Adopt-A-School Drive Breakfast Event Held

About 130 friends of Greenville City Schools, representing more than 40 businesses, industries and social and civic clubs from the Greenville community, attended the Adopt-A-School kick-off breakfast held Tuesday morning at E. B. Aycock Junior High School.

Organizations adopting either an individual school or the entire school system at the breakfast include Proctor and Gamble, Coca-Cola, Eaton, Greenville Cable TV, Wachovia Bank, Home Building Supply, Womack Electric, the Pitt County Chapter of SCLC, the Service League of Greenville, Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, the Greenville Garden Club, Don McGlohon, and Wilson Rhodes Electrical Contracting. Dr. Delma C. Blinson, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, said he was "very pleased with the turnout and enthusiasm shown by those attending."

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state agriculture official says North Carolina farm leaders showed this week they were becoming more pragmatic in their reception to changes in the federal tobacco support program.

Reversing a longstanding policy, the North Carolina Farm Bureau called Wednesday for sale of flue-cured tobacco allotments independent of the land to which they are tied. In addition, the 552 voting delegates to the bureau's 46th annual meeting agreed on a resolution urging that the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture be allowed to adjust leaf prices under certain circumstances.

John Cyrus, tobacco affairs chief with the N.C. Department of Agriculture, said the action meant farmers had "made some progress ... to begin to move in the direction that's been indicated by Congress."

Cyrus predicted that if the Farm Bureau policies did become law, tobacco-land transactions would become more common in the state.

The lease-transfer resolution was amended to support the program through 1982 instead of 1983, said bureau president John Sledge. It will allow holders to sell their allotments only to producers with sufficient tillable land to plant the allotted tobacco.

The resolution also called for allotments to be planted on the original farm one out of three years.

The resolution favoring federal intervention in price-loan levels said adjustments should be made "in order to make such kinds (of tobacco) more competitive in domestic and foreign markets."

The resolution added that the action was also meant to "help achieve the objective of no net cost to the taxpayer other than administrative expense incidental to implementing the program," Sledge said.

But the action would only be taken with the advice and consent of a tobacco producing committee and was approved for a period of three years.

The recommendations were in line with those recently urged by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to help save the tobacco support program from its critics. Helms was one of several officials who warned the bureau that the tobacco program would be endangered unless revised.

Ironically, the measures were almost identical to proposed changes in the 1981 Farm Bill that the Farm Bureau opposed this fall. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., a frequent critic of tobacco, announced in September that he would offer an amendment incorporating the changes. But he later dropped the amendment under pressure.

Sledge said the bureau was not "necessarily inconsistent" in its passage of the resolutions because they were necessary to keep the tobacco program afloat.

Another important resolution passed, Sledge said, asks that allotments lost due to lack of crop land be redistributed to growers within the affected county.

A Retirement Plan That Won't Cost Your Company A Cent.

Age 35: $654,000*

Age 40: $348,000*

Age 45: $181,500*

Introducing NCNB's IRA Service For Businesses.

Starting January 1, you can offer your employees a retirement "bonus." As you can see, it can add up to the kind of figures that can keep workers working hard at absolutely no cost to your company.

The new Individual Retirement Account law says that even people with a retirement plan at work can invest in an IRA.

There have been other changes, too. For example, a working couple can invest up to $2000 each a year. If they both start at 35, their IRAs combined would be worth over $1.3 million by the time they retire at 65.*

Of course, even with a payoff like that, it's hard to find the money to invest. And that's especially true for your younger employees.

That's why NCNB has put together a program to inform and educate your employees on the values of opening an NCNB IRA. In addition to the posters and literature you see here, we can set up presentations and counseling—even automatic payroll deductions.

All in all, it's like adding an employee benefit without adding a penny to your overhead.

For information on this program and our SEP and the new Keogh Plan, call or stop in now at the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

*Based on single person's $2000 (or a working couple's $4000) annual deposit made on the first of each year, at an annual interest rate of 12%, compounded daily on 365/360 basis. Working individuals can contribute 100% of their annual salary up to $2000. Substantial interest penalty required for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

Church Eyes Bear-Hunt

FORKS-OF-CHEAT, W.Va. (AP) — The historic Baptist church here, started in 1775 on what was then America's western frontier, is looking for someone to be its unofficial bear hunter.

The congregation holds a bear-eating festival each July to commemorate its pioneer beginnings, but the man who has always provided the meat, county magistrate A.M. "Tony" Sellaro, died this year.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Joseph Gluck, said he is stumped on how to get the meat.

"I don't know what he's going to do," said Ellsworth Conn, a deacon in the church.

Gluck says he needs about 40 pounds of bear meat for the 50-member congregation to keep alive one of three special traditions at the church.

"We fly the Union Jack once a year, eat bear meat once a year and open the hollow tombstone once a year," Gluck said.

The Union Jack commemorates the British rule at the time the church was started. The hollow tombstone was used by bootleggers from nearby Pennsylvania to hide and trade illegal whiskey.

Terrorist Grandma Gets Prison Term

GENOA, Italy (AP) — A Genoa court today convicted Caterina Picasso, the 74-year-old "grandmother" of the Red Brigades, on terrorism-related charges and sentenced her to 40 months in prison.

The woman, dubbed by the Italian press "nonna mitra," or "machine gun grandma," was tried along with 47 other alleged members of Italy's most feared urban guerrilla gang on charges of belonging to an armed band, illegal possession of arms and conspiring to carry out terrorist raids.

The court convicted 44 of them, sentencing them to prison terms ranging from 2½ to 8½ years. Four of the defendants were acquitted because of insufficient evidence.

Mrs. Picasso, a widow, was arrested in her apartment on the outskirts of this northern Italian city in October 1980. Police seized arms, ammunition and a file of the Red Brigades from her apartment which, police said, was being used as a terrorist hideout.

During the two-month trial, some of her neighbors testified that she apparently had been "duped" by the leftist terrorists and that she acted in good faith when she sheltered the urban guerrillas.

But she told the court she had joined the Red Brigades of her own free will. Behind iron cages used to hold the defendants, the short, bespectacled woman was seen saluting with a clenched fist. She often wore a long, red scarf over a black suit.

"I helped the comrades who are struggling against an unjust state," she told the court, declaring herself a "political prisoner."

A supporter of Italian leftist parties, Mrs. Picasso, a retired maid, allegedly joined the terrorist group several years ago.

Alleges Nixon, Burger Discussed Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — According to the galley proofs of a new book by John D. Ehrlichman, Richard Nixon met with Chief Justice Warren E. Burger in the White House in 1970 and discussed a case pending before the Supreme Court, The Washington Post says in today's editions.

It is improper for a judge to discuss a pending case with anyone who is not a party to the court's decision-making process, according to the Code of Judicial Conduct of the American Bar Association.

Barrett McGurn, spokesman for the Supreme Court, said Wednesday night when queried about the allegation, "It is the general practice for the justices not to respond to allegations, and it is the practice now."

Ehrlichman, who was Nixon's adviser on domestic affairs, says in the galley proofs that he kept notes of several such discussions, and that former Attorney General John N. Mitchell also took part.

Proofs of the book, "Witness to Power," were mailed to reviewers by Simon and Schuster, the publisher, said the Post, but the newspaper said it obtained a copy independently.

The newspaper also quoted Ehrlichman's proofs as saying that before his nomination, Burger was so eager to become chief justice that he offered to step down before the expiration of Nixon's term so Nixon could make another nomination to the court. Mitchell, however, said the idea of Burger stepping down was Ehrlichman's and was never communicated to Burger.

Ehrlichman, convicted in connection with the Watergate scandal, served a prison term in part for falsely testifying before a grand jury.

The Post said Ehrlichman declined to comment on any aspect of the book, which is to be published next spring. Ehrlichman's telephone number in Santa Fe, N.M., is unlisted.

Mitchell denied he took part in discussions about pending court cases with Burger, the Post said. "I can't conceive of the chief justice over at the White House discussing cases before the court. Certainly I was not a party to it," Mitchell said.

According to the newspaper's account of the proofs,

Ehrlichman wrote, "On several occasions, Nixon, Mitchell and I openly discussed with the chief justice the pros and cons of issues before the court."

One instance was on Dec. 18, 1970, the account said, when "the president pointed out to the chief justice the enormous importance of the 'school cases' before the court. They discussed the issues of forced integration of the schools, ... desegregation in northern schools and the president's intention to 'set the course' for the country."

On that same date, the court was considering an important desegregation case from the Charlotte-Mecklenburg, N.C., school district, since used as a precedent in many other cases. Burger wrote the court's unanimous decision in that case upholding the right of federal judges to remedy segregation by various means, including busing.

No other discussion of a pending case was reported in the proofs, the newspaper said.

Bethel's Mayor, Officials Sworn

BETHEL — In recent ceremonies, Magistrate Paul Cullifer swore in Frank Hemingway as mayor of Bethel and Richard Johnson, Cleve Burton, John Watson, D. E. Perry and Donnie Carson as town commissioners.

In the December meeting following the ceremony, each commissioner was named as a representative to work with various departments. Departments and commissioners assigned as representatives are: Police Department, Perry; Health and Sanitation, Johnson; Water Department and Town Library, Burton; Street, Sidewalk and Cemetery Departments, Watson, and Recreation, Fire and Rescue Departments, Carson.

The town board elected Burton as mayor pro-tem, approved a motion to re-hire town employees and held a discussion on initiating a personnel file for town employees. Agreement was made to study two proposals on this issue, one prepared by the town and another prepared by the Mid East Commission.

Approvals were given to razing a building in town ruled to be a fire hazard, and for purchase of adult and child's MAST trousers for use by the Rescue Squad.

In other actions, the board re-elected Johnson as the town's representative to the Mid East Commission with other commissioners to serve as alternates; agreed to continue holding the annual dinner for town employees; and noted that Judge Herbert Phillips will meet with Hemingway to discuss the feasibility of having District Court held in Bethel once or twice a month.

Scared Deer Broke Glass

LINCOLNTON, N.C. (AP) — Observers say blastings by a pipe construction company might have frightened a deer which bolted through Lincolnton Wednesday, crashing through a plate-glass window in a discount store before disappearing.

John Anderson was sitting in Bob Ramseur's sandwich shop when he saw the deer fleeing past the courthouse square. Anderson says it apparently came from the direction of the Lincoln County Citizens Center when he saw it.

Bob Turner, a local deer hunter, attempted to give chase but the deer disappeared and was last seen going between a block of businesses and the City Hall.

Mary Sue Ballard, manager of a local discount house, said she was standing near the front of the store dusting merchandises when she heard a crash. She saw the deer had come through a display window opposite her, shattering the glass.

The deer turned around and ran down the street, she said.

Anderson said about 50 deer have already been killed in Lincoln County by hunters this year.

Testimony Heard In King Suit

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billie Jean King bit her fingernails and stared as the woman who once was her lover testified that the tennis star promised to give her the Malibu beach house where the two women used to watch the sunset.

Marilyn Barnett said softly in a hushed courtroom Wednesday that she abandoned her job as a Beverly Hills hairdresser to become Mrs. King's private secretary and lover, and she said Mrs. King in return promised to support her always.

"I gave up my occupation, my pride, my career, my identity," she said at the opening of the trial of a lawsuit filed by Mrs. King and her husband, Larry, who are trying to evict Ms. Barnett from a beach house they own. Ms. Barnett, 33, has lived at the house since 1974.

Although eviction is the only issue being heard before Superior Court Judge Julius Title, the judge has said he believes a decision in the case will resolve a "palimony" lawsuit filed by Ms. Barnett last April.

After that lawsuit was made public, Mrs. King acknowledged having an affair with Ms. Barnett, but said she had never promised her any money or property.

Ms. Barnett, who walks slowly with the aid of a cane because she was partially crippled by a fall, said she was working as a hairdresser in 1972 when Mrs. King was referred to her as a client. Within a year, she said, the tennis star offered her a job.

"She asked me if I would like to travel with her and be her secretary," Ms. Barnett said. "She told me not to worry about giving up my work, that she would always take care of me financially."

From that time through 1974 they traveled together on the professional tennis circuit.

"I woke her up with coffee every morning, served her breakfast, arranged her day, found out about her matches and took care of her equipment," Ms. Barnett said.

"I made sure her rackets were strong ... I cooked for her, cleaned for her, helped her entertain. I answered phones and wrote letters. I did everything I could so she would be free to think of nothing but tennis."

"When Mrs. King said she would take care of you for the rest of your life, you assumed your relationship would continue the rest of your life, didn't you?" Mrs. King's attorney, Dennis Wasser, asked Ms. Barnett.

"I hoped it would," Ms.

Barnett said in a near whisper.

In late 1973, Ms. Barnett said, she told Mrs. King she wanted a beach house. Mrs. King said "to go buy myself a beach house and I said, 'Great. Thank you,'" Ms. Barnett testified.

She found a house in Malibu and asked Mrs. King to come see it.

"She asked me if I was sure about the house," Ms. Barnett said, "and I told her I loved it. We watched the sunset together, and I talked about what I'd like to do with the house, putting a fireplace in and all." She said Mrs. King agreed to buy it for her.

Asked whether she was sure she remembered the conversation clearly, Ms. Barnett said she was sure.

"She was making a dream of mine come true and it was a very important conversation to me."

Ms. Barnett's palimony suit seeks lifetime support and half of Mrs. King's earnings during the period they were lovers. To prove her case, she must show there was a contract between the two women — the same issue that is at the center of the eviction matter.

Ms. Barnett said Mrs. King stayed with her at the house whenever she was in town until 1978 "when we broke up."

Later, she said, Mrs. King phoned and told her she was selling the Malibu house but would share the profits with Ms. Barnett.

Ms. Barnett said Mrs. King's business manager, James Jorgenson, asked her in 1978 to begin paying $200 a month toward taxes on the house, which she did until 1979 "when Billie told me she was selling my house."

Outside court, the Kings declined to comment. But Ms. Barnett told reporters: "I'm sorry we have to go through this. But we did have an agreement and she broke it and I feel I have to stand up for what I believe is mine."

Authorize New Half-Dollar Coin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has approved and sent to President Reagan legislation authorizing a George Washington half-dollar to commemorate the 250th anniversary of the first president's birth.

The coin would be minted only in 1982 and 1983, and although it would be legal tender rather than purely commemorative, it could be worth far more than 50 cents because it would be 90 percent silver.

Ball Of Fire Startles People In Wide Area

By The Associated Press
A meteor that flashed across the Midwestern sky could be seen from Oklahoma to Indiana and prompted scores of telephone calls to police with reports ranging from crashing planes to UFOs, authorities said.

Many of the people in northwest Arkansas who saw the meteor at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday described it to police as "a big ball of fire," officials said.

Jim Powell, 43, of Texarkana, Ark., said he had never seen a meteor before but the flash of light "looked just like the pictures in National Geographic."

Powell, an administrative assistant for the city, said he was leaving Texarkana for Little Rock when he saw the meteor.

"It wasn't on a downward plane," he said. The meteor, which he described as a bright white light with an orange tail, took about 10 seconds to cross the sky from east to west, Powell said.

Police and sheriff's deputies in Benton and Washington counties in Arkansas answered scores of calls from people reporting the flaming object.

Benton County deputies said they didn't know at first what the object was that seemed to pass almost over Springdale and Fayetteville, Ark.

For about an hour deputies and local police officers followed up on residents' reports that the object had crashed, said officer Larry Goheen of the Springdale Police Department. He said a fellow officer who saw the ball of fire said it was moving at a fantastic speed.

Authorities in Washington County said they received reports from as far north as Goodwin, Mo., and one caller said the object seemed to be following U.S. Highway 62 southwest toward Rogers.

Air traffic controllers at Springdale, Fort Smith and Tulsa, Okla., airport towers reported seeing the meteor almost simultaneously as it passed from the northeast to southwest, said Arkansas State Police radio operator James Cospelich of Fort Smith.

Cospelich said the Fort Smith tower received a report from the pilot of a jet flying at high altitude over Indiana who said he'd seen the fireball at about the same time it was sighted in Arkansas.

Residents of southern Arkansas also called an El Dorado television station to report the meteor, and air traffic controllers in Little Rock said they could see the flames far to the west.

Anse Raney, a controller in Little Rock, said the meteor crossed the western sky but disappeared before it reached the horizon. Raney said he'd seen several meteors before and that it was unlikely that the object reached the ground.

Friction from the atmosphere usually destroys meteors before they hit the ground, he said. "I've seen those things explode before and I'd be willing to bet that there wasn't much left of it but dust."

Would Review SALT II Terms

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan should appoint a special panel on the SALT II treaty to determine whether Senate ratification of the pact "is or is not in the best interest of U.S. security," says a former U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union.

If such a panel found the treaty on balance improves U.S. security, Thomas J. Watson Jr. said Wednesday, Reagan should resubmit SALT II to the Senate "with his full endorsement."

The U.S.-Soviet treaty, limiting long-range weapons, was signed by both nations during the Carter administration, but Senate action was deferred after the Soviet military move into Afghanistan.

'Elephant Woman' Is Recovering From Surgery For Disfigurement

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A woman with the disfiguring disease neurofibromatosis was in satisfactory condition today after a team of surgeons removed the hideous facial tumors that had made her an "elephant woman."

The success of the lengthy operation Wednesday on the 21-year-old woman identified only as "Lisa H." won't be known immediately because the surgery was so extensive, said Donna Ursillo, a spokeswoman for the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

The operation, a new and radical attempt to correct the horribly disfiguring problems resulting from the genetic disorder that affects 100,000 Americans, was the 12th for the woman who said she was tired of being an outcast by her deformities.

"The disease affects both sides of her face," Ms. Ursillo said. "The surgeons at HUP are the first to undertake such an extensive approach to reducing her disfigurement."

Ms. Ursillo said the hospital had been receiving calls offering encouragement and gifts for Lisa throughout the day.

The surgical team, headed by Dr. Linton A. Whitaker, director of Penn's craniofacial program, removed masses of diseased flesh from Lisa's face, reduced her eyelid openings, reset her ears and reshaped her jaw, and then rebuilt her face with flesh, cartilage and tendons from other parts of her body.

The team also removed her diseased left eye, which was able to distinguish only between light and dark and was three times its normal size, reconstructed her nose, and performed a craniotomy — an operation in which the skull is opened.

The surgery, which lasted nearly nine hours, went as anticipated, Whitaker said.

Lisa said the disfigurement had made her the object of taunts and insults.

"I know I'm not going to look like Farrah Fawcett-Majors," she said in an interview before the operation. But "I can't take this abuse all of my life and you'll never make me believe that most people will accept me for what I am."

"Her disease was severe enough to warrant radical measures usually reserved for cancer patients," Whitaker said, adding it was the worst case of the so-called Elephant Man's disease any of the plastic surgeons involved had seen.

Neurofibromatosis gained nationwide attention through a play and movie entitled "The Elephant Man," about the life of John Merrick, a 19th century English side-show freak who, despite his deformities, became the toast of high society.

Lisa has said she would have elected to have the surgery even if it provided only 1 percent improvement, "but I think it will be much more than that."

The mysteries of the disease are publicized through the efforts of the National Neurofibromatosis Foundation, which put Lisa in touch with the doctors at HUP.

No photographs of Lisa were available, and the hospital said it would honor her request to remain anonymous.

Approve Plan For Elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — Support by the Organization of American States for El Salvador's election plan is viewed as "an important endorsement of the electoral process now under way" and a clear signal to leftist guerrillas to renounce violence, the State Department says.

Department spokesman Alan Romberg said on Wednesday that the Reagan administration is "extremely pleased" with Tuesday's 22-3 vote at the OAS foreign ministers meeting in St. Lucia.

The U.S.-backed civilian-military junta in El Salvador plans to hold elections for a constituent assembly in March, after which presidential elections will be held.

One-Room Schools To Close In Rural Napa Valley

By LISA LEVITT
Associated Press Writer
WOODEN VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — A dozen children peer out the door of their one-room schoolhouse at a sick animal nosing through trash in the yard. Cows low nervously on the other side of the fence, but Arlene Samuels remains calm. "A coyote. Could be rabid," says the teacher's aide, fetching her .22-caliber rifle. A shot rings out. "Good thing I got him," she says. "That was my last bullet."

It's a sunny fall day and the children at Capell Valley school have just had a lesson that wasn't on the agenda, one they would have missed at the schools in Napa where the school board plans to bus them.

"In the country, you don't call for help," Mrs. Samuels says. "You learn to take care of yourself."

They've been taking care of themselves for more than 50 years at Capell Valley, Wooden Valley and Soda Canyon schools, the one-and two-room schoolhouses that the Napa Unified School Board has voted twice to close.

A successful lawsuit brought by angry parents calling themselves the Save Our Schools Committee forced the board to vote a second time on the matter. Now two board members face a spring recall vote that could oust them a year and a half before the end of their terms.

In rural Napa Valley north of San Francisco, where tangles of grape vines flourish and the grass turns yellow and brittle under the summer sun, they produce most of the state's finest wines. And some of its brightest, most motivated children, parents and teachers here say.

That's the reason many of them came here, and that's the way they want to keep it, say Mary and Len Colson, who formed Save Our Schools with their Napa neighbors.

After the board's vote, the parents activated a petition that will keep Capell Valley, enrollment 30 students, and Wooden Valley, 18 students, open for another three years. But even that has failed to defuse an emotionally explosive situation.

"Two of the schools they voted to close, to save money, are staying open for another three years," Mrs. Colson said. "Where's the money being saved? It would be laughable, if it weren't so sad."

Part of their discontent can be traced to a 16-year-old promise made by the Napa Valley Unified School District. Back then, parents say, the board struck a deal with the area's rural residents: join the district and the tiny schools will never be closed.

Donna Heine, one of the board members facing recall, said none of the old board members remembers that pledge. Today's board, facing declining enrolments and limited funds, couldn't honor it anyway, she said.

"I didn't become a school board member to say no to people. I became a member because I wanted to become involved in the process that would allow students to maximize their potential," she said. "The dollars realized from closure would allow us to distribute the money more equitably to all the schools."

But the parents speculate that the board wants to close the schools to sell the valuable real estate beneath them. They say the closures might also appease the parents of city school children who resent the tiny schools, particularly Soda Canyon.

"They say we're sipping off the cream, so to speak. But we're not. These are the children of parents who like the smallness of the school and the fact that we keep the kids for four years," said Maryellen Bess, who has taught seven year's worth of Soda Canyon kindergartners to read and write.

After the first year, her kindergartners are reading, writing and illustrating their own stories. Unfettered by the traditional restraints of bells and report cards, they are learning and having a good time doing it.

In September, Soda Canyon became a school within a school, moving its 56 students into Vichy Elementary School five miles away. The parents, tired of the fight, have decided to make the move work and at least keep the Soda Canyon spirit alive.

That's more than can be said for the almost 150,000 one-room schools that have closed since 1930. The government stopped keeping tabs on the schools at the end of the 1976-1977 school year. At that time, there were 1,111 one-room schools across America, and California had 54.

Len Colson's two boys, particularly Frank, had problems at their school in San Jose. It was an open classroom situation, noisy, confusing, unfulfilling. At Capell Valley, the pair have thrived on the responsibility of helping the younger pupils.

"Here you have schools that are working," Mrs. Colson said. "These kids are being educated. They are getting along with their teachers, they are getting along with kids of different ages. It's all working, it's productive. It's a shame to take it all away."

END OF AN ERA — Students at the tiny Wooden Valley school in the Napa Valley north of San Francisco start their school day with the

Immunity Disorder Has Caused Fatal Outbreaks

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Homosexual men who fall ill with unusual infections should receive fast, aggressive medical care because they may be victims of a baffling wave of fatal disease that has spread among homosexuals from coast to coast, a doctor says.

Dr. David T. Durack, chief of infectious diseases at Duke University Medical Center, bases his recommendation on the results of three studies published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine. The papers are among the first to delve into the strange disorder, so new that it doesn't even have a name.

The researchers found that the victims' natural disease-fighting systems are drastically weakened, leaving them susceptible to rare forms of pneumonia, cancer and other diseases. The cause of the disorder and the reason why it is limited largely to homosexuals are still mysteries.

So far, 180 cases of the illness in 15 states have been reported to the Centers for Disease Control since it was first spotted last July, and 75 of the victims have died. Ninety-two percent of the patients are homosexual men.

"It's a very serious problem and does not seem to be on the wane," said Dr. James Curran, head of a task force on the disorder at the federal disease center in Atlanta. "This is probably just the tip of the iceberg." The victims' immunity systems are weakened comparably to those of surgery patients who have received drugs for a kidney transplant.

"Homosexuals with syndromes suggesting unusual infections should be investigated promptly and aggressively," Durack wrote in an editorial in the New England Journal. "The physician should anticipate simultaneous multiple infections, poor response to treatment and a tendency to relapse."

Victims of the disorder may become ill with diseases caused by any of a dozen different microbes. But often they contract two very rare diseases — a form of pneumonia called pneumocystis and a cancer called Kaposi's sarcoma.

"This is an extremely dramatic, prolonged, debilitating illness," Curran said. "It's an old axiom that you can tell how confused the doctors are by the thickness of the charts. Some of the charts of the patients in these case reports have been a foot and a half thick with laboratory studies."

The three new studies were conducted by doctors from UCLA School of Medicine, Cornell Medical College and Mt. Sinai Medical Center in New York. The researchers examined 19 men with varying forms of this illness and found that their levels of disease-fighting white blood cells were far below normal.

Most of the patients studied had infections of the cytomegalovirus, a virus found among 94 percent of all homosexual men as well as many heterosexuals. The UCLA study said homosexuals may be repeatedly in-fectured with this virus, which is carried in semen and other body secretions.

Receiving a second dose of virus before recovering from the first infection "could conceivably lead to overwhelming chronic infection and immunodeficiency or Kaposi's sarcoma," the UCLA study said.

Durack speculated the infections could somehow be related to the use of drugs common among homosexuals, such as amyl nitrite.

N. C. Incarceration Rate Said Highest In Nation

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A need for road gangs and a historically harsh opinion of lawbreakers has led to a larger prison population per capita in North Carolina than any other state in the country, according to officials.

North Carolina has 256 state prison inmates per 100,000 people, according to U.S. Justice Department figures for June 30, the latest date for which comparative figures are available.

Next are South Carolina with 247, Nevada with 241 and Georgia with 238. At the bottom of the list is Minnesota with 51, North Dakota with 45 and New Hampshire with 39.

The national rate is 140 prisoners per 100,000 people, said Lao Rupert, director of the North Carolina Prisons and Jails Project in Durham.

North Carolina's high incarceration rate harks back to the fierce independence of the English and Scots who first settled the area, said Stuart Shadbolt, public information director for the state Department of Correction.

"The feeling was, if the son of a gun commits a crime, send him to prison and throw away the key," he said. "Fortunately, we're coming out of that antiquated approach."

Willis Whichard, a judge on the state Court of Appeals who heads the Citizen's Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration, said the old practice of forcing prisoners to work on roads led to the high imprisonment rate — a habit that persisted even after the practice ended.

"The demand for labor led to a pattern of higher incarceration," he said. "The state still has not fully considered the high cost of incarceration. We need to look at which offenders need to be incarcerated and which could be better served by an alternative approach," such as restitution and community service, he said.

The Justice Department said North Carolina had 16,085 prisoners serving a year or more on June 30.

On Dec. 7, the state had a total of 16,275 state prisoners serving all lengths of terms, said Glenn Williams, director of management, information and research for the Department of Correction. But he said that figure includes about 4,400 youthful offenders and persons convicted of misdemeanors, which not all states count in their state prison populations.

A high incarceration rate does not necessarily mean a high crime rate, said Ms. Rupert of the Prisons and Jails Project.

FBI figures indicate North Carolina had 4,641 crimes per 100,000 people in 1980, not much different from Minnesota, with a crime rate of 4,799 and an incarceration rate of only 51 per 100,000 people, said Robert Pence, special agent in charge of FBI operations in North Carolina.

A high incarceration rate does not appear to lead to a lower crime rate, Ms. Rupert said. Florida, with an incarceration rate of 217 is seventh among the states, had a crime rate of 8,402 in 1980, Pence said.

The same is true among counties in North Carolina, Ms. Rupert said.

Hoke County, with a crime rate of 3,165 per 100,000 people in 1979, had an incarceration rate of 529 per 100,000 people — the highest in the state. Watauga County, with a similar crime rate of 3,648 for every 100,000 people, had an incarceration rate of only 194 per 100,000. And Durham County had a crime rate of 7,988 per 100,000 and an incarceration rate of 245 per 100,000.

The incarceration rates of North Carolina and other states have been rising for years, said Stevens Clarke of the Institute of Government in Chapel Hill.

One reason is that arrests for serious crime have quadrupled in the last 10 years, he said.

Judges are becoming more selective in sending convicts to crowded prisons. Fewer people are going to prison, but they are going for longer terms, he said.

North Carolina sends felons to prison for an average of 35 months, according to 1977 figures compiled by the National Law Journal. That term is exceeded only by Massachusetts with 53 months and Utah with 41 months.

Another reason for rising incarceration rates is that North Carolina's state prison system has been taking over responsibility from local jails since the Depression, Clarke said.

Critics say the 1981 Fair Sentencing Act, designed to set uniform sentences for each type of crime, will increase North Carolina's incarceration rate. But Clarke, who drafted the law passed in July, said it probably will reduce prison population slightly.

Will Set New Date To Execute Killer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Another execution date for convicted murderer Velma Margie Barfield will be set in a special hearing Dec. 22, following a decision by the U.S. Supreme Court not to re-hear her death penalty appeal.

The court turned down a previous appeal in October, then this week denied Mrs. Barfield's request to reconsider that decision.

Richard Burr, an attorney with the Southern Coalition in Nashville, said he would file a writ of habeas corpus with the U.S. District Court in Raleigh. Burr said he expects the case to be heard in January.

"I'm not surprised (at the Supreme Court's decision)," Burr said in a telephone interview. "I'm disappointed but not surprised."

Mrs. Barfield, 47, was convicted in 1978 of poisoning her fiancé. She also admitted using rat and ant poison to kill three other people, including her mother. She was tried and convicted for only one of the deaths.

A Superior Court judge had ordered that Mrs. Barfield die in North Carolina's gas chamber on Oct. 21. But several appeals delayed the execution.

Burr said three other avenues of appeal are still open to his client. He said if the federal court upholds the penalty, he can appeal it to the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond. Should that fail, Burr said he could ask Gov. Jim Hunt to review the case and request clemency.

Burr said the issue in the appeals process is whether the jury that decided on the sentence for Mrs. Barfield reached their decision based on rational guidance or acted arbitrarily.

"She has a very strong religious faith," Burr said. "She doesn't want to die. She is going to continue to challenge her death sentence to every extent possible."

Rehabilitation Doubts Voiced

MIAMI (AP) — Vincent Bugliosi, the chief prosecutor of mass murderer Charles Manson, says convicted murderers shouldn't be released simply because they give the appearance of being rehabilitated.

Bugliosi, who was in Miami Wednesday promoting his new book "Shadow of Cain," said he believes there is a trend toward freeing those convicted of horrible crimes because parole officials are more preoccupied with rehabilitation.

"It's disturbing to me when you hear the argument made that a convict who has been rehabilitated is entitled to be set free," the former Los Angeles deputy district attorney said Tuesday.

"The question is, should some people ever be set free?" Bugliosi asked. "It's been said some people are born with a germ, some innate trait, some bad seed that leads them to crime ... Maybe you can't isolate it, but it must be there."

Bugliosi said there are no guarantees that murderers like Manson and Sirhan Sirhan, the convicted killer of Robert F. Kennedy who is scheduled for parole in 1984, will not be freed if they prove themselves "rehabilitated."

SERVICES
Miracle of Faith Soul Saving Station Holiness Church will hold services on Sunday, with Sunday School scheduled for 11 a.m. At noon, minister Ronnie Purvis will be the speaker.

On Dec. 18 a Christmas service will be held at 7:30 p.m.

The church is located at 1515 Broad St. The pastor is Inetta Fleming.

FARM MEETING
HERTFORD — The state Department of Agriculture will sponsor a public meeting Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. to consider the feasibility of a cooperative graded sale in eastern North Carolina for goats and sheep.

The meeting will be held at Perquimans County Agricultural Extension office.

Just A Hill - Or A Clue To Discovery Of America?

By JOE FERULLO
ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — From the day his bulldozer unearthed four sets of human bones, Thomas Mahoney knew he had stumbled on something.

What he hadn't anticipated was that his discovery would plunge him into a controversy with a building contractor, the State of New York and scholars arguing over when white men first came to America.

Mahoney is an amateur archeologist who says he's discovered an Indian burial mound near his home in Cropseyville, N.Y. He believes the site supports the theory that Norsemen came to America hundreds of years before Columbus, instructing native Americans and leaving behind bits of their culture.

Both Mahoney and an archeological organization based in Boston say the 33-foot-high, farmland burial mound is highly significant. They say a European-style burial found at the site dates back about 800 years — three centuries before white men were supposed to have landed on mainland America.

Professionals from the State University of New York doubt that claim. And Mahoney says he's had to fight state officials to get them to look at the grave site. He's also had to fend off building contractors who wanted to dig up nearly 100,000 cubic-yards of gravel in the mound.

What have been found are four sets of bones — the remains of three men and a woman — that have been identified as American Indian, probably Algonquin. One set, archeologists say, was discovered in what appeared to be a coffin.

Beneath the top level of the burial mound, Mahoney says he's spotted 75 cremation sites from a culture that probably predates the top-most sites.

Dr. Barry Fell, a Harvard professor who has studied ancient cultures, says the only skull found at the site so far may date back 800 years, which is when Norsemen are said to have crossed the Atlantic. "The man in the coffin may have been a chief of great respect, who was given a European burial," Fell said.

The archeologists say the site provides more evidence that Columbus was not the first white man to come in contact with American Indians. The mound, containing nailed coffins, indicates European burials, they say.

They contend Indians, who lived around 1100, were clearly influenced by a European culture that supposedly wouldn't "discover" mainland North America for another 400 years.

Fell and others are part of a rebel school in archeology that is much better received in Europe than here. Essentially, they say a number of Europeans settled on mainland North America around 1100 to 1200 A.D. and came into contact with native Indians.

Below the mound, Mahoney and his colleagues have found a number of prehistoric Indian artifacts, including ancient arrowheads.

Fell theorized the site was first cleared around 500 B.C., the "early woodlands" period, when Indians were first beginning to use the land.

"The entire area is an extremely rich site," said James Whittle, head of a Boston-based archeological group called Early Sites Research Center. "We've found arrows, scrapers, knives. Why, when it rains, the bones just come rolling out of the site."

Whittle calls the area "material for a national historic site." Yet he, Mahoney, and Fell have met silence or resistance from state officials.

That's because most of them think those theories of 12th century contact with Europeans are pure baloney.

"Fell and others make this stuff up as they go along," says Dean Snow, head of the Anthropology Department at the State University of New York at Albany. "They put out page after page of very vivid nonsense."

Snow says the site is not a rare one, but probably a grave from colonial times, with the remains of Indians converted to European ways by missionaries. The mound, they say, was put there by a natural glacier, not Indians.

But, responded Whittle, "talk to Dean Snow about contact (with early Europeans) and he starts ranting. None of these people get out there and work the site. They just sit at desks and remain closed-minded."

Snow did term the site "potentially" significant. He said the Department of Environmental Conservation has refused permits to construction companies which want to dig gravel at the burial ground. "It's safe," he said.

Mahoney sees the state's attitude toward the site as benign neglect. He has contacted the Association for the American Indian in New York City, which says it will look into the find. Meanwhile, the mound remains much as Mahoney found it.

The bones are at the Early Sites center in Boston. There is no money right now to have them "carbon-dated" to see just how old they really are.

All this leaves Mahoney a little disgruntled.

"I think I'll probably get those bones back from Boston," he said, "and just bury them again."

Laundry Wins Postal Boxes

KEARNEY, Neb. (AP) — More than a hundred new post office boxes are available in Kearney, and you can find them at the Hill Top Laundry.

Postmaster Robert Goldenstein said Wednesday the 136 new boxes will go into the laundry because conditions are too crowded at the main post office downtown.

Goldenstein was authorized by the U.S. Postal Service to seek space for a separate box facility, and embarked on a three-month search.

The Hill Top Laundry got the boxes because the owner was the only one interested who also had the right type of facility for the post office, Goldenstein said. He didn't elaborate.

Drunk Tests Given By Saloon Patrols

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Authorities here, realizing "the only one who can stop a drunken driver is a police officer," are taking special training on ways to detect an intoxicated motorist.

"Once they can determine what to look for, what the problem is and how to find it, they can go out and get 'em every night," a sergeant in charge said.

And to make arrest procedures easier after inebriated motorists are spotted, the department's drunk driving van — which roams the city to administer breath tests measuring suspected drunks — now operates seven nights a week.

The program, Sgt. Jim E. Howland said, is designed to curb "a problem that's been let go too long."

Officers now are combing the streets around bars after 11 p.m.

The program also encourages police officers to make arrests.

In a country in which half the traffic deaths stem from drunken driving, Howland said, a reduction in the number of drunks on the road would save lives.

So far this year, 12 of Virginia Beach's 29 fatal accidents are attributable to drinking.

In the past in many departments, officers were not prodded to arrest drinking drivers, Howland said, and sometimes were reluctant to do so because of the frustration involved.

"But in today's world they're realizing every drunken driver is a potential killer, and every time you arrest one, you're taking a potential killer off the road," he said.

Officers also are being given alco-sensors, which are screening devices to quickly measure a driver's alcohol content to help police decide whether a motorist should be arrested.

Police contend drunk driving arrests are among the most complicated they make, traditionally requiring hours off the street to obtain the driver's alcohol level, necessary to obtain a conviction in court. And once in court, Howland said, the required testimony is lengthy and detailed.

COURT BOMBED
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A bomb blast yesterday damaged the magistrate's court in the black township of Soweto, near Johannesburg, police say. No injuries were reported.

Much In Common

WASHINGTON (AP) — Instead of concentrating on what divides Christian from Moslem from Jew, an organization commemorating the 14th centuries of Islam looked for what they have in common — and found much.

An exhibition opening today at the headquarters of the National Geographic Society dwells on the common heritage of the three faiths, as represented in symbols that recur in religious art objects of each.

The exhibit — rooms full of icons of Orthodox Christianity, menorahs of Judaism and prayer rugs of Islam — was organized by the National Committee, Islam Centennial Fourteen, an American organization which, in observance of the 14th centennial, is seeking to make Islam better known to Americans.

It will run through April 18, coinciding with important observances — the birth date of the Prophet Mohammed, observed on Jan. 7 or 8; the Jewish festival of Hanukkah, commemorating the rededication of the Temple in Jerusalem after its recapture from the Syrians; and Christmas, the observance of the birth of Christ.

The exhibit notes the similarity of themes in the art objects of the three faiths. For example, the open human hand appears as a motif in each religion's artworks.

In the Christian icon, the raised hand is a sign of blessing or good will. Icons are stylized paintings, usually on wood.

In Jewish folk art, the open hand is a symbol of good will or good luck.

And in Islamic art, raised hands are considered to be a sign of good luck, able to overcome the evil eye. For Moslems, the open hand additionally is associated with the number five — mystical because it stands for the five members of the Prophet Mohammed's family, the five daily prayers and the five pillars of faith.

Similarly, lamps, flames and lights are common to the three faiths, the exhibit shows.

Cynthia S. Finlayson, the curator who arranged the exhibit, borrowed objects and ideas from Washington's B'nai B'rith museum, Islamic Center and St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST—Snow is expected in the forecast period until Friday for the Northeast. Snow, snow flurries and rain are due for the central areas. Showers are forecast for the central Gulf, rain for western Oregon. Southern states will be warm and northern areas cold. (AP Laserphoto Map)

VEPCO Acts Against 24 Security Guards

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Twenty-four security guards at the Surry nuclear power station have been disciplined for violations of company rules related to the use of illegal drugs, Virginia Electric & Power Co. says.

Three security officers resigned under pressure or were fired Wednesday for smoking marijuana while on their way to work at the Surry plant and 10 others were dismissed or resigned for refusing to cooperate in an investigation and for lying to company officials, Veeco said in a news release.

Five other security officers resigned during the course of a weeklong investigation, Veeco said.

Six other security officers were suspended without pay for smoking marijuana off-duty or because they knew marijuana was being smoked by security officers off-duty, but failed to report it to company officials, the utility said.

Veeco said the disciplinary actions grew out of a probe the utility conducted into allegations by unspecified individuals that a number of security officers at Surry had smoked marijuana while on their way to work or while off-duty.

Veeco said it began its investigation into the allegations immediately after they were made last Wednesday. Both the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the Surry County Sheriff's Department were notified and were kept informed throughout the investigation, the company said.

"The level of security required by the NRC at the Surry Power Station is being maintained and has been maintained throughout the investigation," Veeco said in its statement.

Veeco also said it would "fully cooperate in any investigations which might be undertaken by either the NRC or Surry County law enforcement officials."

Surry County Sheriff W.C. Andrews could not be reached for comment.

The news release included Veeco's policy regarding the use of illegal drugs by company employees.

The policy states that "the illegal use, possession of or sale of narcotics, hallucinogens, depressants, stimulants or marijuana on company business or company property can result in suspension or termination."

The use of drugs "which affects an employee's ability to perform his job, or which generates publicity or circumstances which adversely affect the company or its employees, can result in discipline, including possible suspension or termination," the policy states.

Veeco said the investigation found no violation of company policies concerning illegal drugs by other personnel at the plant.

About 600 people are employed by Veeco at the plant in rural Surry County, about 50 miles southeast of Richmond.

Veeco also services much of northeastern North Carolina.

By The Associated Press
The chill that has gripped North Carolina is expected to continue at least for the next couple of days and probably for the remainder of the week. And the gusty northwest winds should continue at least for one more day.

The combination of deep low pressure just off the New England states and a high pressure ridge over the plains south into the Gulf of Mexico was to persist again today. The circulation of cold air around these weather features caused winds to reach gale force along the coast and sounds Wednesday and over night.

Toward morning the speeds were slowly dropping off, thus the gale warning was changed to a small craft advisory. Over the mountains the brisk wind blew snow about, causing hazardous driving conditions. Slow moderation is expected beginning Friday over the western counties. Weak low pressure developing over the southern plains today could cause more clouds to spread back over North Carolina by Saturday.

Temperatures Wednesday were some 15 to 25 degrees lower than the previous day. The cold and raw day was even more uncomfortable with the gusty northwest winds. Maximums only managed to peak into the 40s east of the mountains where the range went from an even 40 at Greensboro to a 49 at Fayetteville.

Precipitation for the past 24 hours has been confined to the mountains and even there to the higher elevations where snow flurries had reached 1 to 2 inches but with some locally heavier amounts.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina will continue cold with some lingering snow flurries over the higher mountains. A travelers advisory is in effect for the northern mountains today with a small craft advisory for the sounds and coast. Temperatures in the 20s and 30s over the mountains today will rise only into the 30s and 40s by Friday. Eastward the 40s will be the rule into Friday. Skies will be generally partly cloudy.

Because of the strong gusty winds and very dry conditions, the danger of forest fire is quite high. The North Carolina Forest Service urges everyone to be careful with cigarettes, matches and with fire in any form in or near woodlands. All burning in or near wooded areas should be postponed until after the next rain.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 48 Wednesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 48 percent of your hot water.

Nine Seek U.N. Prestige Role

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Four new Third World candidates, including a deposed president of Ecuador, joined the race for U.N. secretary general Wednesday, swelling the field to nine.

Kurt Waldheim, the Austrian incumbent, and Tanzanian Foreign Minister Salim Ahmed Salim withdrew from the balloting to break a stalemate after 16 inconclusive rounds of voting in the Security Council. Both remain available for the job in the event the council cannot agree on a candidate.

Waldheim, whose second five-year term expires on Dec. 31, was vetoed repeatedly by China, which has committed itself to support a Third World candidate. Salim was blocked by the United States, which apparently considers him too radical.

The new candidates are: —Dr. Carlos Julio Arosemena-Monroy, who was president of Ecuador from 1961 to 1963, when he was overthrown by a military junta.

—Rafael M. Salas of the Philippines, U.N. undersecretary-general for population activities.

—Ambassador Radha Krishna Ramphul, chief U.N. delegate of the Indian Ocean island state of Mauritius.

—Santiago Quijano-Caballero of Colombia, former director of the U.N. Office of Inter-Agency Affairs in Geneva, Switzerland.

The new names were announced by Ugandan Ambassador Olara Otunnu, president of the Security Council for December. The deadline for declaring candidacy was 6 p.m. Wednesday.

Five candidates joined the race on Tuesday: Foreign Minister Jorge Enrique Ilueca of Panama; veteran Peruvian diplomat Javier Perez de Cuellar; Shridath Ramphal, former Guyanan foreign minister and now secretary-general of the Commonwealth; Carlos Ortiz de Rozas, Argentina's ambassador to Britain; and Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, former U.N. high commissioner for refugees, who was born in France but is a citizen of Iran.

The 15-member Security Council, which nominates a candidate for election by the 157-nation General Assembly, is to begin consideration of the new candidates Friday.

The Assembly's current session is tentatively scheduled to adjourn on Tuesday.

Mexico had been expected to recommend its Foreign Minister, Jorge Castaneda, but a government spokesman said earlier Wednesday that there would not be a Mexican candidate.

Mexico "will support the Third World candidate that has the most support among other member nations," the spokesman, Carlos Ferreyra, said in Mexico City.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was little changed today as the rally that began late Wednesday faded.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 6.47 Wednesday, rose 2.10 to 890.32 by noon today.

But gainers and losers were evenly balanced in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Just about all the Dow Jones industrial average's gain was accounted for by U.S. Steel, which rose 2 1/2 to 32 1/2 in the first trading of the stock since Tuesday.

Mobil Corp., which is vying with U.S. Steel for control of Marathon Oil, said late Wednesday it might seek to buy up to 25 percent of U.S. Steel. Mobil shares dropped 1/2 to 25 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .01 to 72.68. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .60 to 324.78.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.52 million shares

'Most' Oppose Missile Bases

BÖNN, West Germany (AP) — A majority of West Germans oppose basing U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe regardless of the outcome of Soviet-American arms talks in Geneva, according to a survey published today.

The survey, conducted for Stern magazine by the Sample Institute of Hamburg, found that 54 percent of the 2,000 people questioned agreed that "in no case should the new missiles be deployed" because it would trigger a new arms race.

Only 23 percent agreed with the West German government that the American cruise and Pershing 2 missiles should be deployed if U.S.-Soviet negotiations fail to produce an agreement on arms control.

Stern said opposition to the missile deployment plan was strongest among women and young people aged 14 through 29.

It also revealed broad opposition to the missiles within Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's Social Democratic Party.

The survey said 59 percent of SPD members opposed the missiles, compared with only 43 percent among those in the conservative Christian Democratic or Christian Social Union parties.

Schmidt supports the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's December 1979 decision to deploy 572 U.S.-made nuclear missiles in Europe starting in late 1983 to counter Soviet SS-20 missiles aimed at Western Europe from Western Russia.

He also was a prime mover behind NATO's offer to negotiate a reduction in medium-range missiles with the Soviets that could stave off deployment.

Schmidt told Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev before the talks began Nov. 30 in Geneva that West Germany will accept its share of the missiles unless some agreement is reached between Moscow and Washington by 1983.

Wintry Chill

Old Man Winter blew his icy breath on Pitt County today, bringing the coldest weather so far to the area.

Most residents found it hard to believe autumn still lingered as temperatures plunged to 26 degrees at 8 a.m. today, recorded by Greenville Utilities' Water Plant. The high Wednesday reached to 45 degrees F. and the low, recorded at midnight, dipped to 28 degrees F.

Strong, gusty northwesterly winds whipped the wind chill factor into the teens today, said the National Weather Service. The forecast calls for lows in the 20's and teens tonight and highs in the mid 40's Friday. The extended forecast calls for frigid nights and days through Sunday.

Hardee's Systems Buying Burger Chef

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Burger Chef, an Indianapolis-based fast-food chain of more than 650 restaurants, is being acquired by a North Carolina business for $44 million, officials said.

General Foods Corp., parent company of Burger Chef Systems Inc., announced the sale Wednesday to Hardee's Food Systems Inc., based at Rocky Mount, N.C.

Burger Chef's headquarters and training center will remain in Indianapolis "for the foreseeable future," said Breen O. Condon, vice president and general counsel for Hardee's.

The acquisition may be reviewed by the Federal Trade Commission or the U.S. Justice Department, Condon said. He predicted that if the purchase is approved, conversion of the 259 company-owned Burger Chef restaurants will begin immediately, while holders of franchises at the 420 other outlets will be given the option of converting.

"We would encourage all the franchisees to convert," Condon said. "but we are contractually obligated to serve those stores as Burger Chefs. We won't force anyone to switch."

The fast-food chains do not compete in territory. Burger Chef, founded here in 1954, has operated only in the Midwest. Hardee's has 1,395 stores in the Southeast, Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Oklahoma.

Burger Chef was founded as a single restaurant by two Indianapolis men. It was sold to General Foods for $15 million in 1968.

Hardee's was founded in 1960 in Rocky Mount. It is owned by Imasco Limited, a public company based in Montreal.

Defense lawyer William Gagen had asked the judge to set bail at a "reasonable" level. Mrs. Nathan, who is married and has a 12-year-old child, is accused of killing Matthew Cromwell, one of the children entrusted to her care. A preliminary hearing was set for Jan. 18.

Bogus $100
 The Greenville Police Department said a counterfeit $100 bill was passed at White's Department Store on Dickinson Avenue this morning.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the bill, a copy of a Federal Reserve Note, Series 1977, had the serial number E09791384A. The front plate number on the counterfeit bill was B86, while the back plate number was 82.

Cannon, who said the U.S. Secret Service has been notified, said anyone receiving counterfeit bills should report the incident to the Police Department.

Cannon noted that a counterfeit $20 bill was uncovered earlier in the week.

Christmas Plant Gifts Hazards
 SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The most traditional of all Christmas plant gifts — mistletoe, holly and poinsettias — can be hazardous to your health.

The warning comes from Dr. Frederick F. Newirth, vice president and medical director for Fireman's Fund American Life Insurance Co. He says a curious child who eats a leaf, stem or berry stands a chance of suffering stomach and intestinal irritation, diarrhea and bradycardia.

Those small, innocent-looking white berries on mistletoe contain poisons that can kill when eaten in large quantities, says Newirth. All parts of a poinsettia plant — stems, leaves, flowers, buds and the milky sap — contain a toxic substance that irritates the mouth, throat, stomach and eyes.

Holly is not often regarded as dangerous, notes Newirth, but the berries can cause extreme vomiting, diarrhea and stupor. The poison actually gets stronger as the leaves begin to die.

Girls Told Can't Divorce Parents

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Two teen-age girls who said they were deprived because their father drank and their mother spent mornings reading a racing newspaper can't divorce their parents, a judge has ruled.

The girls, aged 16 and 13, said they "were in conflict with their parents" and wished to continue living with an older sister while their parents supported them. The family was not identified.

Yanks Settle Manager Situation For Future

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — The New York Yankees have a manager for 1982, and another one waiting in the wings to take over for the next three years.

That's life in the world of owner George Steinbrenner.

The Yankees announced Tuesday at baseball's winter meetings that Bob Lemon would be back to manage the team next season.

On Wednesday, they called another news conference and disclosed that Gene Michael would succeed Lemon in 1983, and reign through 1985.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Dodgers and Cleveland Indians took a turn in the center ring with a five-player trade.

The Dodgers obtained outfielder Jorge Orta, right-handed pitcher Larry White and catcher Jack Fimple. They gave up right-handed pitcher Rick Sutcliffe and second baseman Jack Perconte.

In another deal, the Seattle Mariners sent Dan Meyer to the Oakland A's for right-handed pitcher Rich Bordi.

Steinbrenner at an informal news conference in his hotel suite said he hadn't made up his mind on a manager for 1982, before talking with Lemon Monday night.

"He told me, 'I'd like an opportunity, another chance to manage one more year' After that he wants to retire to California."

"After a man asks for that you've got it..." Steinbrenner said. "It was something he really wanted. I told him, 'you ask and I owe.'"

"There will be no change in managers in 1982, unless dictated by health or Lem's feelings," Steinbrenner said. "I don't care how the team is doing."

Lemon became manager last Sept. 6, when Steinbrenner fired Michael after the manager accused the owner of meddling and demanded it either be stopped or he be fired.

Steinbrenner asked for an apology and when Michael declined, the manager was dismissed. Lemon came in and led the Yankees to the American League pennant, but lost the World Series to the Dodgers.

Steinbrenner's publicly stated discontent afterward led to speculation that Lemon would not be back in the dugout.

Steinbrenner said Michael still hasn't apologized, but it isn't necessary.

But Michael appeared a little repentant at the news conference announcing his new status.

"I felt badly the way it ended (last season). I was concerned that our friendship had been damaged," Michael explained.

"During the playoffs I started to miss baseball. I'm glad George and I could resolve our problems and I will be back in the game."

Michael, 43, will spend the 1982 season scouting all the American League teams and quite a bit of time with Yankee minor league clubs evaluating youngsters for the future.

Michael said he has always felt that managing the Yankees was the most prestigious job in baseball.

In Wednesday's only major trade, Cleveland acquired its fourth pitcher since the season ended. Sutcliffe, National League rookie of the year in 1979, was 2-2 last season with a 4.02 ERA in 14 games (six starts).

Sutcliffe erupted in an angry debate with Manager Tom Lasorda after learning he would not be on the Dodgers playoff roster. The 6-foot-6, 225 pound pitcher broke up furniture in Lasorda's office.

Lasorda insisted the run-in had nothing to do with the trade.

Dodgers' General Manager Al Campanis said Sutcliffe asked to be traded.

Lasorda said he planned to use Orta in the outfield and as a pinch hitter.

Orta, 31, is a 10-year veteran who hit .272 for the Indians last season in 88 games. He played for the Chicago White Sox from 1972 to 1979, and the last two years in Cleveland after signing.

There has been a lot of talk in the last week or so, since the question arose as to whether East Carolina University might not be in the new Division I-A ranks, as to why the school didn't join the Collegiate Football Association (CFA).

One report has quoted ECU head football coach Ed Emory as saying that the school could have joined the group had it been willing to spend $2,000.

But that might not be entirely true.

Emory said he did not mean that spending a few bucks kept the Pirates from joining the association. "I just think that we should pursue it with all of the vigor and enthusiasm we have," he said. "I'm not trying to put anybody down because we're not in the organization."

Emory noted that he first heard of the organization while he was an assistant coach at an Atlantic Coast Conference school, and admits that at the time, the coaches at that school didn't think the organization would be able to accomplish much.

"I know a lot of it is hindsight, but when East Carolina was going through this growth period, it should have been willing to join any group that would have the potential to help it achieve the goals it had," he told us.

Emory said that he had been told by people he knows inside the CFA that the $2,000 figure was a charter requirement when the group was first put together.

Whether East Carolina was approached by the group forming the CFA is not known.

Former Athletic Director Bill Cain said that he did make efforts to get into the CFA, but that the group apparently didn't respond to ECU. "We were in touch with those people when Pat Dye was still coaching here," Cain recalls. "I know that if we had been given the opportunity to join we would have, no matter what the cost."

Cain said that the CFA was sent a packet of information on East Carolina as a prospective member, but that the CFA did not reply.

Current athletic director, Ken Karr, said he is also pursuing the CFA, noting that he is on record as stating that membership in the CFA should be a goal of ECU, that statement made early in his ECU tenure.

Virginia Tops Duke By 92-83

By The Associated Press

Ralph Sampson scored just eight points and grabbed eight rebounds Wednesday night, but the 7-4 center's mere presence at crucial times made the difference as the Cavaliers defeated Duke 92-83 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

"No stat sheet will ever show what Ralph means to us — what he does for us," said Virginia guard Jeff Jones.

Cavalier coach Terry Holland was compelled to bring Sampson, who has been nursing a broken finger, off the bench as the upset-minded Blue Devils took a 61-55 lead midway through the second half of the first league battle for either team. And that was all right with the restless Sampson.

"I just couldn't last much longer on that bench," he said. "It was an ACC game, and I had to play. I mean, I had to."

"I had said all along that I could play if I was needed. And it looked to me like we needed a spark or something."

In other ACC action Wednesday, N.C. state used a stifling defense to riddle Appalachian State 66-38, and Maryland topped Towson State 76-59, the 200th career coaching victory for Lefty Driesell.

Sampson entered the game for the second time with 8:04 remaining, and Virginia quickly took control. From that point on, the Cavaliers outscored Duke 29-14, erasing the deficit and forcing the Blue Devils to gamble and foul.

Freshman Jimmy Miller led Virginia with 26 points, while Othell Wilson had 18. For Duke, Vince Taylor had a career-high 31 points, while Chip Engelland had 18 and Tom Emma 17.

Duke was coming off an embarrassing 75-70 loss to Appalachian State Saturday on the Blue Devils' home floor, and N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said that might have helped his team avoid complacency.

"We had the benefit of seeing them beat Duke. That got our attention," Valvano said. "They didn't sneak in here on us."

The Wolfpack completely dominated the game, running up a 34-13 halftime lead which ballooned to 50-19 midway through the second period.

Junior forward Thurl Bailey led N.C. State, 5-0, with 23 points and seven rebounds. Guard Sidney Lowe added 13 points and 11 assists and Dereck Whittenburg tossed in 12 points.

The Wolfpack puts its unbeaten record on the line Saturday in a league encounter with Maryland, also without a loss at 6-0.

The Terrapins prepared for the game by disposing of Towson State, though they had to resort to a zone defense after Driesell found their man-to-man wasn't working.

"I don't like to depend on the zone, but tonight it was what we needed to win the game," Driesell said. "It bothered them, and we got momentum out of the zone."

Robbins Picked For Bowl Game

East Carolina University All-America offensive tackle Tootie Robbins has been selected to participate for the Team National in the first Olympia Gold Bowl game to be held in San Diego's Jack Murphy Stadium at 12 noon Saturday, January 16, 1982. The game is expected to become an annual affair.

Robbins, a 6-5, 274-pound Merry Hill native and first team All-Southern Independent in 1981, was selected to play for Philadelphia Eagles coach Dick Vermeil on the Team National in the NFL-style draft held especially for this event. San Diego Charger coach Don Coryell will coach the Team American.

The contest is nationally syndicated, and players on the winning team will receive $2,250, with $2,000 each to the losers. Automobiles will be awarded to the Most Valuable Players on offense and defense.

Most of college football's big named have been chosen to play in the affair. Commitments have been received from several players from Bowl-bound teams, but names cannot be released because of the games remaining to be played. A few, however, include Arizona State's record-breaking quarterback Mike Pangel, running back Darrin Nelson of Stanford and wide receiver Steve Bryant of Purdue.

Robbins had earlier been selected to play in the Blue-Gray game, scheduled for December 25 in Mobile, Ala.

Right now, however, Karr noted, ECU doesn't meet the criteria for membership.

That criteria, as spelled out in a notice sent him by the CFA, calls for five points. One is a 30,000-seat stadium, a second is for an average attendance of 20,000; a third, having given 80 scholarships in football for the previous three-year period; a fourth is having eight Division I men's sports; and the last is scheduling 70% or eight of eleven games with other CFA members.

"A review of our situation shows that we now meet all but the scheduling criteria," Karr said. When ECU first wanted to join the CFA, however, it met less than this. "We've only had 35,000 seats for the past four seasons."

Karr said that ECU still aspired to the group, but getting in was not just simply saying "we want in!"

East Carolina does, in Karr's estimation, meet the criteria for the NCAA's Division I-A membership, he emphasized.

Emory noted that several members of the CFA who play as independents don't currently meet the group's scheduling requirements, pointing out that Virginia Tech played only seven of 11 vs. CFA members, and that Southern Mississippi had less than that.

What the solution is cannot be known. Whether the CFA would welcome ECU is in question. Whether ECU ever had a chance to join might also be in question. The only fact is that the school is not now a member. How that will affect the future will only be seen as the future unfolds.

The "list" of teams published last Saturday morning by newspapers around the state which said that East Carolina would no longer be in Division I-A came from the St. Louis office of United Press International. Late Saturday night, we had tracked the list to that office, but were unable to contact personnel there to learn of its origin.

Charles Chandler of the "East Carolinian" managed to track down the author, one of the writers there, who told Chandler that he thought East Carolina was a member of the Southern Conference, and therefore, like the rest of the league would be going down.

He also admitted that while the NCAA had no list of teams that may or may not be moving out of the Division I-A ranks, he felt his "clients" would want some sort of a list, so the St. Louis office put one together on its own.

Being on that list certainly isn't helping ECU's recruiting efforts, Emory has said, and the fact that it was simply a "guess" by non-involved people makes it even worse.

Edmonds Honored

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose Edmonds, a former Farmville Central basketball star, has been chosen Female Athlete of the Week at N.C. Wesleyan College.

Edmonds has played in two basketball games thus far for the Battling Bishops women's team and is averaging 11 points a game and 7.5 rebounds. Last year's Most Valuable Player at Farmville Central, the freshman appears to have a bright career with the Bishops ahead.

"For a freshman to play as key a role on a championship that returned every player is unusual," said coach Laura Ferrell. "Rose has the potential to be one of the top players in our conference before she finishes her basketball career."

Rose is the daughter of Ms. Carrie Pettaway of Fountain.

Angry Fans Don't Like Programming

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

When football widows complained about their husbands in the 1960s, the object of their anger was the Washington Redskins. Although the Redskins were sure to get whipped, they'd show up on television every Sunday afternoon in front of a loyal army of viewers.

Those widows don't have just the Redskins to kick around anymore, however. They can get angry at the Atlanta Falcons and the rest of the National Football League as well.

Thanks to a change in programming and attitude at several CBS-affiliated television stations in North Carolina, there's now an option of choosing between the Redskins and the Falcons, or they may decide to carry the game of greatest importance. But to the fans of those two teams, there are few things as important as seeing Joe Theismann or Steve Bartkowski.

"There have been a lot of loyalties built up through the television exposure," said WBTV program director Mark deCastrique. "They (the Redskins fans) are very upset. They'd rather see the Redskins lose 77-0 than two Super Bowls." deCastrique says he's tried to please both crowds, showing Falcon games when the Redskins are on the road and vice-versa.

"We did not want to dump them and get out of Redskin football entirely," deCastrique said. "We haven't said we don't want Redskin games, but we would like to get a balance and that's the way to achieve it."

Of course, you can't convince the fans that television stations are doing their best to keep viewers happy.

"Most of them accused the station of purposely blocking a Redskin game for locally-originated programming. They don't understand the fact that it's not our option to carry a doubleheader," he says. "They have exercised much more control on a week-to-week basis than they have in the past."

deCastrique says CBS now plans only two weeks in advance instead of offering stations one team at the beginning of a season and sticking with it. In the past, you could only see the Redskins. Now, viewers in Washington may be lucky if they get to see the "Skins themselves."

"There have been weeks in which, regardless of whether I wanted the Redskin game or not, it didn't get out of the home market," he says.

Of course, not everyone trying to juggle his football schedules has been successful —or satisfied. "It's a sore subject with me," says WFMY program manager Jack Forehand, who says his home telephone has been ringing off the hook with calls from irate Greensboro citizens who want to see their Redskins.

A case in point was last weekend's Redskins-Eagles game. No one in the state broadcast the game, presumably because the Redskins are now just spoilers with no hope of reaching the playoffs. But a late touchdown on an interception by linebacker Monte Coleman, plus a botched snap on a field goal try, gave Washington a narrow 15-13 victory.

The second game was Atlanta-Tampa Bay, and the Falcons dropped a 24-23 decision. Life might have been miserable for Falcon fans, but it was worse for Redskin rooters.

"It's been jockeying back and forth," Forehand says of the weekly switching between Washington, Atlanta and games of national interest. "When we clear the Washington games, they lose. When we don't clear them, they win."

Forehand's problem is compounded by the ratings war. Last season, WFMY lost the battle to WXII, a Winston-Salem affiliate who carried Pittsburgh Steeler games. Thus, CBS is forced to try and win the audience back.

"Before, we used to dominate with Redskin games. Now, it's not that way," Forehand says. "They're concerned with winning the ratings war in the market and they're providing us with the game they think will generate more interest. We're catching all kinds of flak from those loyal Redskin fans who've been watching Redskin games since 1950," he adds.

Forehand, who says he's still battling scheduling troubles with NFL games, has a simple solution to his crisis.

"I'd like the network to decide and let them furnish us with the game of the week. I'd like that load lifted from my shoulders."

For Don Shea, sports director at WTVD in Durham, the handwriting was on the wall several years ago. His station lost the ratings war, partially because the Redskins were losing football games.

"From 1978 to 1980, we lost six rating points. That's not to say that the Washington Redskins pulled the whole load," Shea said, adding that such a drop might have moved CBS officials to reconsider their football package.

Despite Experience, Pant-HERS Still Young

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

BETHEL — North Pitt's Pant-HERS have some experience returning this winter, but by-and-large, the Eastern Carolina Conference basketball team must be considered a young one.

There is only one senior on the team, 5-5 senior guard Gladys Roberson. All the rest are underclassmen. For second year Randy Avery, that gives hopes of the program getting better in the future. Last year, Avery's Pant-HERS posted a 9-13 overall mark and were 6-10 in ECC play, finishing fifth in the conference.

One other full time starter returns to the team along with Roberson. She's 5-7 junior forward Linda Harrell. Also back is part-time starter Patricia Daniels, a 5-4 junior guard.

But aside from them, there is only one other letterwinner back, sophomore forward Sherri Bradley, 5-8.

Currently, Avery is starting those four, along with 6-1 freshman center Sudi Sharpe. Also, 5-10 forward Delores Pittman is sharing starting duties with Bradley — to this point. Avery noted that one or the other might earn permanent starting duty before long.

Rounding out the team are Frances Barnhill, a 5-3 junior guard; Peggy Purvis, a 5-3 sophomore guard; Joycelene Brown, a 5-3 freshman guard; and Tonya Hardison, a 5-10 sophomore forward. "We have a good nucleus to build around, but with only one senior, we are a young team," Avery said. "They're a good group, though. They know what I expect and they seem eager to learn. They work hard and learn quickly. They're way ahead of last year at this time."

Avery feels that the offensive play of the team is improving. "Our best point output of the year was in our loss to Rose High School the other night (54-51 in overtime). So far this year, we've had five different players in double figures. So I don't think we're going to have to depend on one super star to do all the scoring for us. We should have fairly balanced scoring."

Avery has also been pleased with the rebounding of the Pant-HERS. "We have been real strong so far, around the top in the league. We are very tall and we have good leapers."

Defensively it hasn't been disappointing either, despite the 2-3 opening of the Pant-HERS. "I think we've done a pretty good job on defense in most of our games. The 54 points Rose scored was the most we've allowed. We have been aggressive going after the ball, and I think the fouls we've had in that area are reasonable ones."

Like about everyone else, Avery picks Southwest Edgecombe, the defending state champions, to be the class of the conference this year. "Aycock has been good in the past and Greene Central has everyone back, so I expect them to be strong too," Avery said.

"So far we've done a poor job at the foul line. If we made some of the shots we've missed, we could have a much better record. But I think once we get some more experience, and work a little harder, things will come around. We just all have to pull together."

"The girls are willing to learn," Avery said. "They accept what I want them to do. And having (ex-Pant-HER star) Susan (James) Manning as an assistant coach has really been a great help too."

To The Editor:

In August, our son Chuck Bushbeck, while in pre-season camp, looking forward to playing his final year of collegiate football at East Carolina University, was stricken by Hodgkins Disease. From that moment on, mere words will never be able to describe the many, many acts of support, friendship and humanity unselfishly extended by the wonderful people of ECU, the City of Greenville, and the State of North Carolina.

It is honest to say, that without you, the feeling of apprehension and helplessness we felt as parents, would have been almost too much to bear when our son decided to remain at the university. Our worst fears proved to be unfounded when the people of Greenville opened up their hearts in the most generous demonstration of love we have ever experienced.

Coach Ed Emory and his beautiful wife Nancy, were Chuck's parents away from home. We could have done no more for our son than they did. They are two of the most gracious, giving people it has been our good fortune to meet. May their efforts at ECU be rewarded with much deserved success.

We would also like to express our appreciation to the ECU coaching staff, sports medicine people, Pirate teammates, fellow students, doctors and nurses who attended Chuck, and all the other wonderful people in the great State of North Carolina we never had the opportunity to meet. God bless you.

Chuck has now returned home to Philadelphia where he will enjoy Christmas with his family. He is a determined young man and has pretty much accomplished when he has set out to do in his life. We feel that he will make his friends in North Carolina proud of him, as we have always been.

We would like to conclude by saying that we will never forget you for your kindness. We wish you all a blessed and happy holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Bushbeck
3269 Teesdale St.
Philadelphia, Pa.

(Editor's Note: According to ECU reports, Chuck Bushbeck has completed his radiation therapy for the treatment of Hodgkins Disease, and tests now show that the disease is in remission. He will continue to have regular checkups every few months, but it would appear at this point that he has won his battle with the disease, giving him, his family and friends the finest gift they could receive in this holiday season.)

Brown's Play Helps Cardinals Win

By The Associated Press
Two things upset Louisville Coach Danny Crum about the shot by Derek Smith: There was too much time left on the clock, and the wrong player had the basketball.

That's when Wiley Brown jumped in and solved both problems.

Brown rebounded a missed free throw by Smith, then went back up to score a short jump shot with four seconds remaining and give the third-ranked Cardinals a 73-71 victory over Purdue Wednesday night.

Smith had gone to the line after being fouled by the Boiler-makers Mike Seavey on a baseline drive with seven seconds left.

"We had a play set up for the last shot. We couldn't get it to the man we wanted and Derek Smith ended up with the ball," said Crum. "I didn't object to Derek taking the shot. It was just I didn't want him to take it with seven seconds left. That gave Purdue time to get down and score if he missed."

The Boiler-makers called timeout with two seconds left, but Louisville, 3-0, intercepted the ensuing inbounds pass as time expired.

"I think you're going to see that Louisville is going to beat some great people before the year is over," said Coach Gene Keady of Purdue, 3-2. "All we've got to do is keep our heads together and learn from each game and come back and be mentally tough."

Louisville had the only close call among the four members of The Associated Press Top Twenty in action Wednesday night.

No.5 Virginia, with 7-foot-4 center Ralph Sampson coming back from a broken finger to help key a second-half rally, beat Duke 92-83. No.7 DePaul

Top Twenty
Purdue led Louisville through most of the first half as Keith Edmonson and Russell Cross scored 14 points apiece. The Cardinals grabbed a 43-42 edge just before intermission, but had to rally from a five-point deficit in the game's closing minutes to stay unbeaten.

"We made a lot of mistakes early in the game and we gave up a lot of back-door layups and things like that," Crum said. "We thought we played a lot better defense in the second half."

Pancho Wright scored 16 points for Louisville, with Jerry Eaves adding 15 and Smith 14. The winning basket gave Brown his only points of the night. Edmonson finished with 22 points for Purdue.

Virginia also remained undefeated by coming back from a 59-53 deficit with 13:28 to play against Duke.

Sampson, who broke his finger in the Cavaliers' season opener, had been expected to miss the game after aggravating the injury in practice Tuesday. But Coach Terry Holland said circumstances altered the situation.

"We had not planned to play Sampson," said Holland, "but he wanted to play so badly we thought, 'Well, what the heck, let's let him give it a try.' It took a while to get his shooting down but he was a factor."

Sampson, the college Player of the Year last season, scored eight points, grabbed eight rebounds and blocked two shots in his 13-minute stint as the Cavaliers, 6-0, roared back. Freshman Jimmy Miller led Virginia with 26 points and sophomore Othell Wilson added 18. Vince Taylor scored 31 points for Duke, 1-3.

DePaul trailed 14-9 in the early going in its game against Gonzaga before scoring nine of the next 11 points for a lead it never relinquished.

Terry Cummings and Bernard Randolph led the Blue Demons, 3-0. Cummings hit all seven of his field-goal attempts and wound up with a game-high 26 points, and Randolph connected on 10 of 15 shots from the field while scoring 21 points.

Senior forward Bill Dunlap had 15 points and guard Tim Wagener 13 for Gonzaga, 2-2.

Georgetown had by far the easiest time among the Top Twenty teams, routing St. Leo behind the scoring of freshmen Bill Martin and Anthony Jones.

The Hoyas, 4-2, raced to a 14-0 lead and didn't allow St. Leo a shot in its first nine times down the court. After the Monarchs finally got on the scoreboard, Georgetown scored 20 of the next 22 points for a 34-4 lead with 6:23 remaining in the first half.

Martin finished with 21 points and Jones 19. For St. Leo, 1-4, Duane Mlachnik scored 19 points, including 17 in the second half.

Unranked Teams
Two free throws by Jack Moore with 19 seconds remaining lifted Nebraska to a 64-63 victory over Baylor. It was the Bears' first loss of the season and left the Cornhuskers 4-1.

Louisiana State, led by Howard Carter and Leonard Mitchell, trounced St. Peter's 71-55. The Tigers, a Final Four team last season, won for the first time in three games.

North Carolina State boosted its record to 5-0 with a 66-38 victory over Appalachian State. Thurl Bailey scored 23 points and had seven rebounds for the Wolfpack.

Marquette edged Old Dominion 75-70 in overtime. Glenn Rivers scored eight points for the Warriors in the extra period.

Colgate snapped a 76-year-old jinx, beating Yale 70-57 behind Kevin Halloran's 17 points. It was Colgate's first victory over the Elis since 1905.

Washington Brings Suit Over Game Cancellation

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The state of Washington has gone to court to block an attempt by Florida State University to cancel a 1982 football game with the University of Washington.

Washington state Attorney General Ken Eikenberry said Wednesday he has filed suit in U.S. District Court in Seattle, seeking nearly $1 million in damages on behalf of the University of Washington.

The game was scheduled to be played next Sept. 11 in Seattle.

The suit, filed Tuesday, asks at least $350,000 damages for losses in ticket, program and concession sales, parking and other losses the university contends will result from cancellation.

It also seeks undetermined damages estimated at $400,000 for the Huskies' losing the chance of television coverage of the game and possibly future games, loss of prestige, recruiting chances and early-season national rankings.

The decision to file, said Eikenberry, followed attempts to persuade Florida State legal officials to get Florida State to honor its contract.

Defendants named in the suit are FSU Athletic Director Cecil W. Ingram, former acting Athletic Director Phillip P. Fordyce, Chairman of the Athletic Board James P. Jones, University President Bernard Sliger and Board of Regents Chairman DeBose Ausley.

The schools agreed in 1971 to play the game. The contract was signed in 1979.

Last Sept. 8, Ingram wrote his UW counterpart, Milo R. Lude, asking to break the contract. Lude denied the request, contending it was too late to schedule another game with an acceptable opponent, Eikenberry said.

Ingram replied Oct. 14 that the Seminoles won't travel to Seattle, Eikenberry said.

The suit says Ingram's letter is an "anticipatory breach of contract."

"Every attempt was made to resolve the contract in the same way many other schools across the country have done due to the recent rise in the cost of travel," Ingram said Wednesday.

"A counter-offer was made by Florida State University to include travel expense into the operation of the game with the game being played in Seattle or Tallahassee."

White had his best record last season at Chattanooga of the Southern Association where he was 10-12 with a 3.51 ERA. Fimple was an All-Star in the Midwest League where he hit .288 with 10 homers and 76 RBI.

Cleveland Manager Dave Garcia jested about Sutcliffe, saying "I don't know him but I know I'll never talk back to him."

On a serious note, Garcia said Sutcliffe would be a starter. The Indians' skipper planned to use Perconte at second base. Perconte, 27, hit .346 for Albuquerque in the Pacific Coast League. He stole 45 bases in 127 games.

Garcia said he felt that with the recent acquisition of Ed Whitson from San Francisco and Larry Sorenson and Silvio Martinez from St. Louis, the Indians had strengthened their pitching staff.

In a minor transaction, the Chicago Cubs acquired outfielder Gary Woods from Houston for outfielder Jim Tracy. Both were assigned to minor league teams.

In a trade Wednesday night, the Detroit Tigers acquired outfielder Larry Herndon from the San Francisco Giants for pitchers Dan Schatzeder and Mike Chris.

Herndon batted .288 with five home runs and 41 runs batted in for the Giants last season. He also stole 15 bases.

Schatzeder posted a 6-8 record with a 6.08 earned run average in 24 games, including 21 starts.

Chris was 2-2 with a 6.46 ERA in 16 games with Evansville of the American Association, and was 5-5 with a 4.15 ERA in 14 games with Birmingham of the Southern League in 1981. In 13 major-league appearances with Detroit, all in 1979, Chris was 3-3 with a 6.92 ERA.

The Giants assigned Chris, also a left-hander, outright to Phoenix of the Pacific Coast League.

Ark Of The Covenant Lost In The Mists Of Legend

WASHINGTON D.C. — This has been the Year of the Ark.

First, "Raiders of the Lost Ark" thrilled film-goers as Indiana Jones searched for the missing ark of the covenant.

Then a team of Duke University archeologists found the carved limestone top of a 3rd century A.D. synagogue ark in upper Galilee, the oldest such ark ever found. Soon, confusion abounded as journalistic accounts mixed up the two, as well as Noah's ark.

What, then, is the "lost" ark? Where did it come from, why was it important and what happened to it?

There are 201 Biblical references to the ark, under a variety of names: ark of the Lord, ark of testimony, ark of God and many others. However, much of the information is contradictory.

The Exodus Description
The book of Exodus, which deals with events of the 13th century B.C. but was compiled as much as two centuries later and put in its final form another 500 years later, gives the first and clearest description of the ark.

It is a chest of acacia wood — a hard wood found in the desert — two and one half cubits long, one and one half cubits wide and deep, or about 45 inches by 27 inches by 27 inches. It was covered with gold, and had four gold rings, so that carrying poles could be inserted in each corner. Portability was important to desert seminomads.

On top was the "mercy seat," a golden slab flanked by two cherubs facing each other, their wings spread out.

"And in the ark," Exodus says the Lord told Moses on Mount Sinai, "you shall put the testimony that I shall give you."

The ark became the central focus of the Israelite tribes during their wanderings. It was carried about by the Levites under a tent tabernacle.

"The pre-Koranic peoples of the Syrian desert and of modern Saudi Arabia all had portable tent shrines," said Dr. Edward F. Campbell, professor of Old Testament at McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago. "They all contained some sort of box or chest, so the ark itself is thought of as a container of some sort."

Though the original Hebrew word for this sort of ark is different from the Hebrew for Noah's ark, both have been translated into "ark" in English, meaning "chest" or "repository," but there is some disagreement among scholars about whether the ark of the covenant carried the stone tablets with the Ten Commandments.

Legendary Mists

"There is no reason to believe that at some certain stage, the ark didn't contain essential covenant documents," said Dr. Frank M. Cross, a prominent Harvard University biblical scholar.

"But that it went back to Sinai and the tablets Moses brought down from the mountain, that is another matter. That is really lost in legend."

Dr. Eric Meyers, the Duke religion professor who found the 3rd century ark, raises another question: What would the commandments have been written on?

"The popular image is of huge stones that Charlton Heston carries as he comes tripping down from Sinai," said Meyers. "But I can't imagine that. We have so little writing from the 13th century B.C. It could have been incised on potsherds, or even on parchment."

"The point is that the object in and of itself was important. The popular imagination appreciated it for its invisible power, God's unlimited power."

The ark became thought of as the throne of Yahweh, the Israelites' God. The most prominent place at which it was kept was Shiloh, and it was from there that it was taken into battle against the Philistines in the 11th century B.C.

The Israelites thought they could not be defeated with the ark, but they were and it was captured. The Philistines suffered a plague, however, and attributed it to Yahweh's wrath. The ark was returned after seven months.

Refuse License Charles Diggs

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The Maryland Board of Morticians has refused to award an apprentice's license to former Rep. Charles Diggs, who has been convicted of fraud.

The board's decision Wednesday will be reviewed at a formal hearing, said George Gonce, the board's executive secretary. No date has been set for the hearing.

Diggs, who was a Michigan Democrat, left Congress in 1980 after being convicted on the fraud charges, which involved alleged misuse of federal funds.

Gonce said the question to be resolved at the hearing is whether the conviction involved a crime of moral turpitude under Maryland law. He said a formal hearing is required when a license application is denied on those grounds.

A Political Role
During the monarchy that soon emerged, King David led a large procession of Israelites — some biblical translations say as many as 30,000 — to the new capital, Jerusalem, with the ark.

"David is trying to bring it to his use as the central political figure, and he puts the worship of Yahweh under royal patronage," said Campbell. Meyers agrees, calling David's use of the ark "a move of absolute political brilliance."

"David ties himself with both the old religious establishment and the new expansionist monarchy," Meyers said.

The book of Samuel says David wanted to build a temple to house the ark, but that he was dissuaded by the prophet Nathan, who tells him that the Lord wants no such home. Solomon, David's son, did build such a temple, and the ark was put into its most sacred niche, the Holy of Holies.

From then on, the ark virtually vanished from view. When the Babylonians destroyed the temple in 587 B.C. and carried off its treasures, there was no mention of the ark's fate. Nor was it replaced when the second temple was built five decades later.

It was this "disappearance" that has led to notions of the ark being "lost," and to expeditions to find it. There are some rabbinic traditions that it actually was hidden, perhaps by Jeremiah in a mountain cave, perhaps under the floor of the second temple. Most scholars, however, think it was taken for booty, its gold melted down, its wood burned or left to disintegrate.

Many Arks?
But one historian has suggested that the ark had vanished earlier, during a period when a king of Israel replaced it with an idol of a different god. Another has written that there were actually three different arks.

How could such an important object drop out of biblical records? Meyers' wife, Dr. Carol Meyers, also a Duke religion professor, says this may be due to the "sad" shape of religion in the later monarchy; it had become so diluted that the ark's loss may not have seemed vital.

The important thing is that the ark later became a symbol in all synagogues, such as the one the Meyerses found in Galilee. Today the ark is the place where the scrolls of the Torah are kept, and is the most holy place in the synagogue.

LANDSLIDE

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — A 20-foot-high landslide caused by heavy rains buried eight houses and apparently killed 41 people in the East Java village of Joho, a regional official said.

THE ORIGINAL ARK of the covenant as described in the Bible may have looked like the drawing above — a wooden chest covered with gold, with cherubs guarding the mercy seat. Much later, synagogues held a symbolic version of the ark, such as the third-century example below, which includes a portion found by Duke University researchers in Galilee this summer. Astronaut Is Kill Devil Hills Speaker

KILL DEVIL HILLS — Tickets are now available for the reception and luncheon of the annual First Flight Ceremony to be held Dec. 17 with Dr. Mary L. Cleave as the guest speaker.

Dr. Cleave, one of America's eight women astronauts, will speak at the noon luncheon at the Seafare Restaurant following the morning ceremony.

The 34-year old astronaut, a native of Southampton, N. Y., holds degrees from Utah State University in microbial ecology and civil and environmental engineering. Before her selection by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Dr. Cleave for nine years did research work in the Ecology Center and the Utah Water Research Laboratory at Utah State University. In conjunction with her research, she has published a number of scientific papers.

This year's First Flight Ceremony will be opened with a concert by the Manteo High School Band and the Northeastern High School Band from Elizabeth City. Capt. Fred T. Merritt, U.S. Coast Guard (Ret.) and a past president of the First Flight Society, will preside over the ceremony.

A Boy Scout troop will present colors, and local officials will extend a welcome to visitors.

At 10:35 a.m. a five-plane flyover will take place by the Manteo-based Coastal Senior Squadron of the Civil Air Patrol. The fifth plane will fly alone in tribute to CAP members who lost their lives during World War II.

The name of Alberto Santos-Dumont will be presented as the society's 1981 nominee to the First Flight Shrine. It was 75 years ago that Santos-Dumont, a Brazilian, made the first successful airplane flight ever recorded in Europe.

Presentation of the nomination will be made by Paul E. Garber, historian emeritus of the Air and Space Museum at the Smithsonian Institute and a board member of the First Flight Society.

Famed aviators named to the shrine in earlier years include the Wright Brothers, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, Adm. Richard A. Byrd, Amelia Earhart and Col. John Glenn. A portrait of Santos-Dumont, to be unveiled by Garber, will be added to those of former inductees at the visitor center at the Wright Memorial.

The ceremony, the reception and luncheon will be open to the public. The ceremony is free. Tickets for the luncheon and reception are priced at $12 per person and may be purchased by sending a check to: The First Flight Society, P. O. Box 1903, Kitty Hawk, N. C., 27949.

GUEST CHOIR

Bishop Arlesta Coward and his gospel choir of St. James Unified Holiness Church of New Haven, Conn., will render services Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

Bishop Coward is married to the former Mildred King of Greenville. Their daughter, Vickie, is organist for the choir. The services will be open to the public.

GRADUATES

MORGANFIELD, Ky. — Clayton Williams of 1106 S. Greene St., Greenville, took part in graduation exercises of the Earle C. Clements Job Corps Wednesday.

Williams successfully completed studies in operation of heavy equipment and plans a career in the field.

Behind-Scenes Effort Claimed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration mounted a behind-the-scenes operation aimed at influencing last week's White House Conference on Aging according to delegates who say were enlisted to serve as "whips" during conference debates.

This contradicts denials from top officials of the Department of Health and Human Services that neither its employees nor conference staff members had anything to do with such a plan.

But several delegates listed as whips or deputy whips on documents leaked by a conference staff member acknowledged that they got instructions from Marlyne Lipfert, an aide to Rick Davis, director of Delegate Services for the conference.

Circus Fire Killed Horse

NEW YORK (AP) — A fire broke out before dawn today in a tent and trailer of an outdoor circus at the huge Lincoln Center performing-arts complex, and a horse was killed, officials said.

The fire also left a performing pony badly injured, but no people were reported hurt.

Fire officials said the blaze broke out at the Big Apple Circus in Lincoln Center's Damrosch Park around 5:15 a.m. and was declared under control within 10 minutes.

Circus spokesman Fred Nathan said the fire started in the straw inside one of the tents and spread to a trailer. He said he thought the blaze was suspicious but did not explain why.

Nathan said a horse named Dabo was killed, and Kelso, a pony, was burned so badly that it will probably be destroyed.

Several ambulances from the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals arrived but weren't needed.

One of the circus' star attractions, Tarra the roller skating elephant, was quartered in a tent away from the fire.

The circus opened Friday and will play through Jan. 3.

Nathan said that as far as he knows "the show will go on tonight."

Guardsmen Finish Course

FORT BRAGG, N.C. — Sgt. 1st Class Elmer B. Parker III, Sgt. Roy W. Grimes and Staff Sgt. William J. Wingate, all of Greenville, graduated Sunday from the North Carolina National Guard Basic Non-Commissioned Officers' Course conducted by the N.C. Military Academy at Fort Bragg.

The 75-hour course began Aug. 8 and was taught by N.C. National Guard and U.S. Army Reserve instructors.

The program of instruction covered different areas of specialized training including such subjects as organization and history of reserve components; military justice; radio-telephone procedures; land navigation; drill and inspections; nuclear, biological and chemical protective measures, and training to lead.

Grimes is a member of the 213th Military Police Company; Parker is a member of the 514th Military Police Company, and Wingate and is a member of the 213th Military Police Company.

Phoenix Meeting At 7:30 Tonight

There will be a meeting of the Phoenix Organization tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Bachelor Benedict Club, located at 707 Wyatt St.

Guest speaker will be Chet Emerson, Executive Director of the Boys' Clubs. Emerson will talk to Phoenix members about the need for volunteers to help in the local Boys' Club program.

One of the agenda items will be nominations of officers to serve for the coming year.

ference. The source of the leak, who asked not to be identified, said the political operation was under the direction of Paul J. Manafort, who directed the Reagan campaign in the South last year.

But interviews with nearly two dozen conference delegates and staff members suggest the operation failed to help the president since the nearly 2,300 delegates approved some 600 overwhelmingly liberal recommendations for boosting benefits for the elderly.

David Newhall III, chief of staff to HHS Secretary Richard S. Schweiker, said through an aide Wednesday he stands by his earlier denials that any department or White House employees had anything to do with the political operation.

Newhall described Manafort as an unpaid volunteer who handled conference logistics.

Manafort did not return repeated phone calls. His consulting firm said he was out of town. His partner, Charley Black, said friends in the White House enlisted Manafort's help. Black said it was not unusual for Manafort to volunteer his time, although "we're not in business for charitable purposes."

Manafort showed up at conference offices Oct. 2, the day Schweiker replaced David A. Rust as executive director. Rust had clashed with Republican National Committee leaders — who said they feared the conference was going to prove an embarrassment to Reagan — and had balked at giving the RNC a delegate list to conduct what turned out to be a controversial poll of delegates' political views.

Davis, a speechwriter on loan from Human Development Services in HHS and a former Republican campaign worker, did not respond to phone calls.

Ms. Lipfert said she had no comment. Several whips said Ms.

Lipfert contacted them in advance about a meeting with Manafort Saturday night, Nov. 28, a day before the first conference event.

Fred McComb of Minneapolis, who is Minnesota's GOP vice chairman, said he conferred with Ms. Lipfert when he arrived at the Sheraton-Washington Hotel on Nov. 28.

"She was wondering who might agree philosophically with the administration and we talked about a couple of them. As a matter of fact, I probably gave her a couple of those on the favorable list," said McComb, who was whip for a committee on the government's role in helping the elderly.

McComb said he doubted there was any clearcut administration attempt to alter the outcome of the conference, but "they got in a position of being a little bit pregnant. They wanted to take an interest and yet they didn't want to go all out."

Paul Hayes, a congressional employee and former District of Columbia GOP chairman who was whip on the long-term care panel, said he had received instructions to ask questions related to the costs and scope of any programs proposed in his committee. Hayes, a college classmate of Manafort's at Georgetown University in the 1960s, would not identify who gave him the instructions.

Delegate Jean Sommerfield, a Garland, Texas, housewife and Republican State Committee member, said conference staff members contacted her about being a whip after she was assigned to the long-term care panel.

Carl Croasdale, of White Stone, Va., a deputy whip on the same panel, said: "I can't see anything that involves a conspiracy. Certainly the opposition...did this very thing. They immediately rounded up people who were of their point of view and they had about three-quarters of the delegates."

Feud Knots NATO Foreign Ministers' Meeting

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Greece carried its feud with NATO ally Turkey into the winter meeting of the Western foreign ministers today after blocking the defense ministers' communique because they would not brand the Turks potential aggressors.

It was the first time since NATO was formed in 1949 that the defense ministers failed to issue a closing statement.

Turkish Defense Minister Umit Haluk Bayulken called the Greek position "absurd and preposterous."

"To seek security guarantees by a member against another member of the alliance is an incredible proposition," he told a news conference today. "The alliance is based on the assumption that the members are united against a common threat."

"It has consistently been the Turkish position to resolve these differences (with Greece) through negotiations."

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and the other defense ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization on Wednesday rejected a demand by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreu for a statement guaranteeing his country against any aggression by Turkey.

The two neighbors have been NATO's eastern defense anchor since 1952, but their traditional, centuries-old hatred has been revived in recent years by rivalry for control of Cyprus and the Aegean Sea.

Greece withdrew from participation in NATO's military activities in 1974, after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus. The United States got it to return in 1980, but the election of the anti-American, anti-NATO Papandreu in October reversed the trend.

Papandreu, who is also Greece's defense minister, told the other NATO defense ministers at the start of their semi-annual meeting Tuesday he was considering a "process of disengagement from agreements that are prejudicial."

NATO Secretary-General Joseph Luns said he wanted the final communique summing up the two-day meeting to include "the guarantee that the eastern frontier of Greece (with Turkey) would be protected against aggression."

Luns said Turkish representatives gave Papandreu that assurance verbally but "objected to a text which would indicate that in some way the alliance thought Turkey would be capable of attacking Greece, or that Turkey would have the intention of doing so."

He said he and representatives of Italy, Norway and Britain proposed a text "which would in a general way reflect the position of the alliance that it was inconceivable that countries of the alliance would aggress against each other." However, Papandreu refused to accept that and then vetoed the rest of the communique.

Luns told a news conference Papandreu would raise the issue today with Turkish Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen.

The secretary-general read a lengthy declaration calling for NATO solidarity against Soviet military buildups and welcoming the opening of U.S.-Soviet negotiations in Geneva to limit the deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe. The U.S. ambassador to NATO, William Tapley Bennett Jr., said the statement was the communique the defense ministers would have issued if Papandreu had not vetoed it.

During the election campaign last fall that brought him and his Socialist Party to power, Papandreu demanded better terms for permitting U.S. bases in Greece and for Greece's continued participation in NATO's military activities, and guarantees against Turkish aggression.

Papandreu met Wednesday with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., and State Department spokesman Dean Fischer said they had a "valuable, substantive and productive" talk. He refused to give any details.

REVIVAL

The Rev. Jimmy L. Stokes of Greenville will hold a revival at the House of Prayer, 1008 New St., Ayden, Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The following groups and choirs will help lead the services:

Monday — the J.L. Stokes Traveling Choir of Tarboro; Tuesday — Antioch Young Adult Choir, Bell Arthur; Wednesday — the St. Paul Junior Choir of Greene County and the Rev. Charles Joyner; Thursday — the Four Shining Stars of Greenville; Friday — a special gospel group to be announced.

The public is invited, says the pastor, Eldress Cora Cox.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — People seeking a good place to settle need look no further than North Carolina, says a publication which rates different areas of the country for their livability.

"Places Rated Almanac: Your Guide to Finding the Best Places to Live in America," published by Rand McNally & Co., places the Triad — comprising Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point — and the Triangle area of Raleigh, Durham and Chapel Hill in the nation's top 10 most attractive metropolitan areas.

The book based its conclusions on a wide range of economic, social and political factors.

The Triad area ranked third in the U.S., behind Atlanta and Washington, D.C., while the Triangle area ranked ninth. Listed as fourth through eighth were Pittsburgh; Seattle-Everett, Wash.; Philadelphia; Syracuse, N.Y.; and Portland, Ore. Rounding out the top 10 was Dallas-Fort Worth.

The worst place in the U.S. to live, said the guide, is the Lawrence-Haverhill area on the Massachusetts-New Hampshire border. A total of 277 metropolitan areas were listed.

According to the almanac, the Triad is attractive because of its recreational facilities, which ranked 26th, its housing (132nd), and crime rate (108th highest).

The Triangle's major assets, on the other hand, were found to be health care (15th), education (19th), the arts (37th), climate and terrain (45th), economics (57th), and transportation (78th).

A relatively bright employment picture was an advantage listed for both

North Carolina areas, with fewer layoffs caused by layoffs in manufacturing and construction than in most places.

The book suggested that the Triangle area improve its recreational facilities, citing a lack of bowling alleys, neighborhood bars and "crowd pleasers" such as zoos, aquariums, professional sports, gambling and racing.

It also said the Triangle needs to work on crime safety, though it said that Miami, Fla., is the nation's most crime-infested area. The most crime-free metropolitan area is St. Cloud, Minn., the guide said.

Housing, a gold star in the Triad, was a low point for the Triangle because of high prices in the Triangle. The Raleigh-Durham area ranked 174th, with the average market value of a home being $59,375.

The most least expensive home prices were found in Terre Haute, Ind., where the average market value was $26,279. The most expensive

School Insurance To Be Reviewed

WILLIAMSTON — A motion for evaluation of the entire insurance coverage of schools in Martin County was approved at the December meeting of the Martin County Board of Education.

The consulting firm of C. J. Spivey and Associates of Charlotte was contracted to inspect the county's entire school system insurance package — to include buildings, liability and vandalism policies.

After the evaluation, the board will make a decision on which direction to take in adopting an insurance plan. A report was given revealing that the Martin County Board of Commissioners has voted to contribute $15,500 for special retirement funds for employees who wish to buy back previous retirement years of service. The school board has been required to use $1,117 from surplus funds to complete funding for the buy-back effort, which will cost employees involved a little more than $13,000.

Board members voiced support for a statewide effort on the part of school systems to join in a program to raise funds to help save Cape Hatteras Lighthouse.

Urban-Consumer, Agriculture Alliance Reviving

By BOB FICK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battle in the House over a new farm program is forging a strange alliance of agriculture and urban-consumer interests.

Usually at odds over multibillion dollar farm legislation, the two groups are now working toward the same end — defeat of an administration-backed, $11 billion farm bill.

"It's the oddest coalition that I've ever seen," said Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., a House Agriculture subcommittee chairman who is among those organizing opposition to the bill.

Agriculture Secretary John Block, still optimistic about passage of the compromise he shoved through a House-Senate conference committee this week, acknowledges that he needs the support of some House Republicans who have never before voted for a farm bill.

"We need to cultivate all the votes we can," Block says. "We're not going to leave any stone unturned."

The compromise bill is expected to be approved, possibly as early as today, by the Senate, where Block's position has generally been endorsed by the Republican majority.

The measure's backers emphasize that by keeping farmers financial afloat, consumers also are guaranteed continued production of adequate food supplies at the lowest prices.

But in the Democratic-controlled House, where farm legislation has traditionally faced a stiff challenge, many farm interests are abandoning the bill because they feel it's completely inadequate, especially for dairy and grain producers.

Besides Jones, their ranks include Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, another Agriculture subcommittee chairman, and Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who as the Democratic whip is charged with marshaling support for legislation on the House floor.

That opposition is strengthening the hand of urban and consumer interests, who object to the compromise's sugar program. They claim it will cost taxpayers and consumers hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

"What we have plus their support will be enough to do it," says Rep. Peter Peysers, D-N.Y., who's leading the House anti-sugar forces.

They mustered a majority of the House against that program in October only to see it returned to the compromise bill by congressional negotiators. The administration dropped its opposition to the program this summer in return for southern Democratic votes on President Reagan's budget cuts.

"Unfortunately, the administration bailed out, which I think was a big mistake," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., a leader in the negotiations that yielded the compromise package.

Before leaving for a trade meeting in Brussels late Wednesday, Block talked to a number of House members about the bill and met with the leader of at least one consumer group. Top Agriculture Department officials plan to meet with the major commodity groups as well in an effort to blunt their opposition to the compromise.

"It might be a little early to test the water, but we have a 60-40 chance," Block told reporters. "We're just starting to work on it. I'm optimistic we can pass it."

Block seems to be banking on opponents ultimately realizing that without the compromise a complex 1949 farm law will take effect, causing severe dislocation for farmers and extreme costs for the government.

"It would be unacceptable to agriculture," he said.

May Apply 1902 Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unless Congress quickly changes a 1902 law, says Interior Secretary James Watt, he will begin strict enforcement of an ownership limit of 160 acres for western land fed by federally subsidized water.

"We think we've got the genesis of a consensus bill here and if this doesn't go through, I won't give it another 10 seconds," Watt told the House Interior subcommittee on water on Wednesday.

Unless Congress changes the law, Watt must comply with a federal court directive to enforce the acreage limit. Watt, who wants the ownership limit increased to 960 acres, said, "It is time we update reclamation law to reflect modern farming practices and today's economic conditions."

The debate centers on the turn-of-the-century law which controls federally subsidized irrigation to some 12 million acres in 17 western states. The subsidy, estimated to be as high as $2,200 an acre, means millions of dollars to farmers.

Studies have shown that 96 percent of the farms receiving the subsidy comply with the law's limitations. But enforcement has been lax and the leasing of additional land so prevalent that a third of the land served by the federal water projects is now in the hands of only 4 percent of the farmers.

In The Dark

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Everyone is in the dark about the polar bear cub here, including the little bear itself.

The cub, now weighing two pounds, was born Nov. 3 at the Columbus Zoo. The cub and the 16-year-old, 750-pound mother, Zero, are out of sight in a darkened den, to simulate the kind of digs the mother paws out in their native Arctic habitat.

Only zookeepers William Cupps and Diana Frisch have seen the hide and hair of the bears. Even the sex of the little one has not been determined.

"They don't come out until spring," Cupps said, but spring to the bears may be January if they get restless.

"They mainly just play around," he said. "If the floor gets too cold, the mother will put the baby on her stomach. But there's not a whole lot of action in there."

"from the applicable standard of medical care" not only in the circumstances involving Randy's birth but also in its treatment of the infant's defective heart.

He ruled that the United States was liable for the actions of the medical center staff. The issue of financial obligation, however, will be decided later following additional hearings.

Down's syndrome, or mongolism, is a congenital disorder associated with a chromosomal abnormality. Victims are mentally retarded in varying degrees and heart defects are common.

Randy, born Sept. 23, 1977, has an IQ sufficiently low that "he can't adequately take care of himself or protect himself from danger," said Ellis I. Kahn, the lawyer for Mr. and Mrs. Phillips. "But he's not a vegetable by any means. He's capable of loving, of being loved — he is loved."

"This is not a case of abortion," Kahn added. "The issue is whether people should be informed of risks and options which are reasonably available. Judge Blatt ruled that they should."

Held Liable For Wrongful Birth

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A federal district judge here has ruled that the United States is liable for damages sought by a couple for the wrongful birth of a son who suffers from Down's syndrome.

Dwight and Kathleen Phillips, who filed the $5 million suit 2½ years ago, alleged that the Naval Regional Medical Center staff should have been aware of the risks involved in the birth because Mrs. Phillips had an immediate family history that included Down's syndrome.

Had genetic tests shown the affliction, the parents contend they would have chosen an abortion. The couple argued that the medical center staff never notified them of the risk or the option.

In a 28-page order filed Monday, a year after the non-jury trial was held, U.S. District Judge Sol Blatt Jr. concurred with the Phillipses.

Blatt found that the medical center staff deviated

Ex-Hostage May Enter Politics

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Former Iranian hostage Richard Morefield has switched his political affiliation from Democrat to Republican, moving a step closer to a rumored run for Congress next year.

Morefield, former consul general of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, returned to his hometown of San Diego on Tuesday and re-registered, the San Diego Tribune reported Wednesday.

The 52-year-old career diplomat still works for the State Department and recently moved the family residence from San Diego to Annandale, Va. If Morefield decides to run, he will have to move his family back to San Diego.

According to reports, a court challenge is being prepared by Republican lawyers in Washington to test a California law blocking Morefield from running. State law says a party switch must occur at least 12 months before a candidate files his nominating papers.

'Falcon Crest' Inherits 'Dallas'

Fans, Apparently Bound To Fly

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Jane Wyman's new series, "Falcon Crest," is bound to fly and James Coburn's spooky anthology, "Darkroom," is bound to die. And it has little to do with the quality of these shows. Just blame J.R. Ewing.

Today's lesson in television programming begins and ends in Dallas. CBS' "Falcon Crest" is on J.R.'s side; ABC's "Darkroom" is the enemy.

Last Friday, the premiere episode of "Falcon Crest" inherited "Dallas" fans at 10 p.m. EST and finished eighth in the weekly rankings. At 9 p.m. EST, "Dallas," the second-rated show for the week and the TV season's leader, had three times as many viewers as "Darkroom," No. 69 out of the week's 70 programs.

If remote control ever caught on, it could jumble one of TV's most accepted axioms. Many viewers are lazy. After the dial is set to one channel, it stays there.

What viewers see next is what they get, particularly if the follow-up program is compatible with the lead-in.

"Dallas" and "Falcon Crest" were hatched from the same rotten egg, so to speak. Lorimar Productions created "Falcon Crest" and bad gal J.R. Wyman in the image of "Dallas" and its dastardly oil manipulator.

The only trouble is that Larry Hagman, as J.R., brought a gleeful delight to the art of menacing. Miss Wyman, the Academy Award-winning actress once married to an actor named Ronald Reagan, is not a natural snake. And it shows.

After a 15-year acting hiatus because she couldn't get the roles she wanted, Miss Wyman looks and sounds stiff as Angie Channing, the scheming matriarch of the family vineyard, Falcon Crest. It's possible Miss Wyman could grow some fangs since in the original pilot seen last summer, she was even more wooden.

That went back for an overhaul in plot and several of the major characters, but not Miss Wyman and her nasty grandson, Lance (Lorenzo Lamas). It emerged last Friday as a slicker production, with enough sprawling, soap opera conflicts for a long run of convoluted battles of good and evil, if you care about such things.

The main trouble began when Angie's brother Jason died in a wine cellar accident, and Angie orchestrated a sham that made it look like he was drunk and drove off a cliff. He owned a small portion of the vineyard, which Angie wants to control.

But Jason's son, Chase Gioberti (Robert Foxworth), won't sell the land, deciding to cultivate it himself. This is a major surprise to Angie and Chase's family since Chase is a longtime airplane pilot and not the green-thumb type.

Chase broods a lot and his wife, Maggie (Susan Sullivan), gets to be supportive and caring in several pajama scenes. Then they kiss, roll over, the music builds and the scene fades. The Giobertis also have a handsome son and a beautiful daughter, so it's obvious that producer Earl Hamner, creator of "The Waltons," has a different family in mind here.

Over at ABC, that network has taken a different approach to counterprogramming against the themes of power and passion on Friday nights. The tact now is horror at 9 with "Darkroom" and unchecked violence at 10 with "Strike Force," the fourth lowest rated show this season.

"Strike Force" is a bloody waste, but if "Darkroom" could find better scripts and stronger endings, there could be an audience for its mystery and bizarre twists. Coburn, as the shadowy host, strikes a nice balance of foreboding and irony, and the spooky special effects do build suspense nicely.

It's just that J.R. Ewing doesn't scare easily.

CHARGED — Pornographic movie actor John C. Holmes, left, is escorted to an awaiting van after appearing before a Los Angeles County Municipal Court where he won a two-week delay in his arraignment. Holmes is charged with four counts of murder and one count of attempted murder in the July bludgeon deaths of four persons in the Laurel Canyon area of Los Angeles. (AP Laserphoto)

Peter Makuck To Autograph His New Book

From 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday, Peter Makuck will be at Walden's Book Store, Carolina East Mall, to autograph copies of his new book, "Breaking and Entering," published by the University of Illinois Press.

"Breaking and Entering" is a collection of 10 short stories by Makuck, director of the ECU Poetry Forum and an associate professor of English, East Carolina University.

This collection contains two previously unpublished stories and eight which have been published between 1975 and 1980 in literary magazines such as The Sewanee Review, The Virginia Quarterly Review, and The Southern Review.

Two of the stories were nominated for inclusion in Martha Foley's prestigious annual anthology, "Best Short Stories" and two others have been nominated for the Pushcart Prize.

Makuck also has a volume of poetry due for publication in January 1982.

Copies of the 172 page book are priced at $4.95 for paper cover, and $11.95 for hardcover.

CBS Again Is Nielsen Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS won the networks' ratings race for the second straight week, thanks mostly to a one-two finish by "60 Minutes" and "Dallas" and six other shows, including the new "Falcon Crest," in the Top 10, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

ABC's "NFL Monday Night Football" game between Philadelphia and Miami placed third in the week ending Dec. 6, an extraordinarily high finish for the normally popular sports program. And there was a promising sign for struggling NBC — the network's new "Bret Maverick," starring James Garner, finished seventh for the week.

It was the second consecutive No. 1 finish for "60 Minutes," and the newsmagazine, prime-time champion for the 1979-80 TV year, seems to be mounting a challenge to "Dallas," last year's winner and the top-rated show five times in the first seven weeks of the current season.

"Dallas" still leads "60 Minutes" for the season to date, though by a slim margin.

For CBS, it was the second straight first-place finish in the weekly competition, after swapping the lead twice in four weeks with ABC. CBS now has been at the top five times in the nine weeks since the TV year began Oct. 5, ABC four.

CBS' average rating in the latest period surveyed was 18.7 to 17.7 for ABC and 17 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute, 18.7 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were tuned to CBS.

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 28.9. Nielsen says that means of all the nation's homes with television, 28.9 percent saw at least part of the show.

CBS scored with the debut of "Falcon Crest," No. 8 for the week, though the show certainly benefitted from its lead-in, "Dallas." "Hill Street Blues," NBC's award-winning police series, continued to climb in the ratings — to 16th place, its highest ever.

Ten of the week's 11 lowest-rated programs were new shows or specials, beginning with CBS' "Simon and Simon" in 60th place, followed by "McClain's Law" and "Doug Henning's World of Magic," both on NBC, two ABC shows, "Making a Living" and "Open All Night," CBS' "Shannon," "Television Inside and Out" on NBC, ABC's "Strike Force," "NBC Magazine," "Darkroom" on ABC and Part I of "Through the Magic Pyramid" on NBC.

"NBC Magazine" is the only continuing series among the 11 introduced before this season.

Here are the week's 11 highest-rated programs: "60 Minutes," with a rating of 28.9 representing 23.7

million homes, and "Dallas," 27 or 22.1 million, both CBS; "NFL Monday Night Football," Philadelphia vs. Miami, 25.3 or 20.7 million, ABC; "Archie Bunker's Place," 24.9 or 20.4 million, "M-A-S-H," 24.8 or 20.3 million, and "One Day at a Time," 24.2 or 19.8 million, all CBS; "Bret Maverick," 23.2 or 19 million, NBC; "Falcon Crest," 21.8 or 17.9 million, and "Dukes of Hazzard," 21.6 or 17.6 million, and "Alice" and "The Jeffersons," both 21.2 or 17.4 million, both CBS.

The remainder of the Top 20:

"House Calls," CBS, and "Little House on the Prairie," NBC, tie; "Lou Grant," CBS; "Dynasty," ABC; "Hill Street Blues," NBC; Movie: "A Long Way Home," and "Three's Company," both ABC; "Real People," NBC, and "Magnum, P.I.," CBS.

DESERT EXERCISES
TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's army this week held its last military exercises in the Sinai Desert before the area is turned over to Egypt in April, the military command said Wednesday.

'Fast Track' Not For Everybody

HOLYOKE, Mass. (AP) — Fast track careers hold little appeal for some 400 secretaries surveyed by a national office-supplies manufacturer.

The majority (55 percent) of those surveyed by American Pad & Paper Co. say their personal productivity is not affected by the absence of job advancement opportunities in their companies. Considerably more, 85 percent, say salary is the more important factor regarding productivity.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 11, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An excellent day to observe the progress you have made and to make more plans for the future. State your views to influential persons who can be helpful to you. Be logical.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A fine day to examine new outlets through which to expand. A direct course is the best to follow at this time.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Use a more direct method where finances are concerned and gain benefits. Take needed health treatments today.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Come to the right decision concerning relations with associates. Be sure to spend your money wisely today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Get your work done early in the day so you'll have more time for social activities later. Use care in motion.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A time to be calm while going after a personal aim. Take constructive steps to improve the quality of your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You are able now to get the support of associates in a new project you have in mind. Show others that you are wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) State your views to associates early in the day and come to a fine agreement. Strive for increased happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't neglect to handle monetary affairs that are important to your welfare. Be more reassuring to loved one.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study your financial status and find a better way to increase your income. Be wary of false friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Obtain important information you need at the right sources. Maintain a cheerful disposition at all times today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Morning is best time to be gregarious and to talk with key persons. Seek the company of congenials tonight.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Go after your personal aims in a positive manner and get excellent results. Take no risks with your reputation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those delightful persons who will adopt the right philosophy that could lead to a most successful life. Be sure to give ethical and spiritual training early in life. Sports are a must in this chart.

Encourage, But No Cold Cash

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A man who wants to open a public radio station in Hickory is finding that townspeople are somewhat more generous with warm words of encouragement than with cold cash donations.

So far, Robert Sumner has raised only about $80 for his pet project — a far cry from the $50,000 to $100,000 experts say he'll need. But Sumner isn't giving up.

"I thought Hickory would be excited by non-commercial radio," he said. "And everybody I've talked to said it's great, but everybody's too busy to help us out. I think a lot of them are just waiting to see what's going to happen."

"Up until now, I haven't really thought about the money end of it. I've finally come to the point where I've discovered that some money would be nice, yes."

The 27-year-old grocery store clerk envisions a public FM station which would provide an alternative to commercial radio, offering listeners minority programming, opera, jazz, and air city council meetings.

"There is a need for minority programming here in the area, and for public radio," says Sumner, a former announcer who attended high school in Shelby.

"Non-commercial radio would benefit the community more than another commercial radio station," he said. "If I turned on the radio right now, I bet you would hear five commercials back-to-back."

There are about 30 public radio stations in North Carolina. All such stations operate on individual and business donations and not advertising, while some receive federal aid or institutional aid.

Most of the state's public radio stations are university affiliated, but there are only a handful of community stations like the one Sumner has in mind, such as WBUM in Asheville.

Sumner paid for a 1980 engineering study that identified two possible frequencies for the station.

Two Elected To State Posts

Two local recreation and park officials were elected to state posts at the recent annual conference of the N.C. Recreation and Parks Society in Winston-Salem.

Boyd Lee, recreation and parks director, was elected as a District Advisory Council representative on the Southern Regional Recreation and Parks Council of the National Recreation and Parks Association. He will represent 10 southern states.

Parks superintendent Charles Vincent was named chairman-elect of the Municipal Division of the state society.

Middle School Plans Concert

The Greenville Middle School band and chorus, directed by Johnny Wooten, will present a Christmas concert at the school Dec. 14, at 7 p.m.

A PTA gift to the school, made possible by a recent student sale, will be announced during the short business meeting preceding the concert. A committee to nominate next year's PTA officers will also be selected.

Four student accompanists and 120 chorus members will perform "Young King," "Christmas Calypso," "A Round About the Manger," "Deck the Halls" and "Bless the Lord O My Soul."

Works to be performed by the 100-member band will be "White Christmas," "Poet and Peasant Overture," "Coronation March," "The Little Drummer Boy" and "The Christmas Song."

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

Bridge is as much a war of nerves as a game of skill. Until you learn to put maximum pressure on an opponent, your effectiveness at the game will be limited.

South held almost enough for a jump rebid. However, he decided that unless his partner could bid again game was out of reach, so he took the conservative course. North's raise to game was beyond reproach, especially since his partner was marked on the bidding with a six-card suit.

West led a low club. East topped dummy's king with the ace, cashed the queen and shifted to a trump. Declarer won and drew two more rounds of trumps to clear the suit. Now he was faced with the problem of avoiding two diamond losers.

Technically, it might be correct to take the diamond finesse. Even if it loses, declarer can still get home by dropping the jack of diamonds next and establishing the ten. As the cards lie, it is obvious that the line would fail.

Instead, declarer selected a line which was perhaps mathematically not as good, but which stood a better chance of revealing which defender held the king of diamonds. He crossed to the king of spades and led a low diamond from the table!

If East held the jack of diamonds and not the king, he might not realize the need to go up with the jack. And if East held the king of diamonds, he might not have the strength of character to duck smoothly when the low diamond is unexpectedly led.

At the table, East did not have the poise to play low in tempo. He hesitated a while, thereby giving away the position, before electing to win the king. That resolved declarer's problem, and he claimed the rest of the tricks.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms. And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you—well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Parliamentary Quagmire Stalls Pipeline Measure

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —
Despite approval by both houses of Congress, the $43 billion financing package for the Alaska natural gas pipeline is caught in a parliamentary quagmire, and critics say it still could be defeated — by Congress or the courts.

The House thought it gave final approval to the package Wednesday on a 233-177 vote, sending it to the White House. But opponents raised technical objections, threatened a filibuster, and threw the House action into an unusual legal limbo.

They said an obscure federal law prohibited the House from taking a final technical step needed to send the bill to President Reagan.
A frustrated House Rules Committee voted 13-1 Wednesday night to let the House vote on the identical Senate bill. But that action was called "patently illegal" by two chief opponents, Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-N.Y.

The package, proposed by President Reagan in October, is designed to attract billions of dollars in private construction loans for the 4,800-mile pipeline, intended to bring Alaskan natural gas to the lower 48 states.
Financiers have been reluctant to back the project, saying it is too large and more assurances are needed to ensure a return on their investment.
The package would waive antitrust and pricing laws to shift much of the financial risk from lenders to consumers.

Under a controversial pre-billing section of the package, consumers may have to start paying off billions of dollars in construction loans before the pipeline is completed — even if it is abandoned. Opposition to the package is billed as an attempt to save the consumer from the oil companies.
The bill is threatened, however, because the House and Senate passed separate versions of an identical bill. Legally, they were separate pieces of legislation, and the 1976 law forbids either chamber from considering the same subject twice within 60 days.

Rep. Clarence Brown, R-Ohio, told the Rules Committee that the debacle could have been avoided if the House Interior or Energy committees simply had considered the Senate measure rather than its own.
Brown said "this particular waiver package is dead," with neither the House nor the Senate legally able to adopt the other's measure.

But the committee said it would allow the House to consider the Senate resolution in a second debate, waiving legal arguments against the vote. Opponents maintain that's beyond the committee's authority.

"We're not dealing with the rules of the House," said Corcoran. "We're dealing with a statute."

Seek Reduce Costs Roadside's Upkeep

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Scientists at North Carolina State University say they're using computers in an effort to trim the cost of maintaining the state's roadsides.
"North Carolina is now mowing more than 230,000 acres of highway land at an annual cost that exceeds $8 million," said Dr. Joseph M. DiPaola, assistant professor of crop science. "The service is essential to our well-being and safety, but costs must be reduced."

DiPaola and Dr. William B. Gilbert, an N.C. State professor of crop science, are experimenting with the system.
"All we know about the life requirements of the state's most promising vegetation will be put into an NCSU-developed computerized mapping system which categorizes North Carolina plants by their zones of adaptation," DiPaola said. "If we need to know where a new plant may be adapted in North Carolina, we'll simply ask the computer."

North Carolina's environment is so diverse that researchers have set up nursery test facilities at 17 locations across the state.

He said regulatory chemicals might help reduce growth where new species were unable to take root.
"The ideal chemical is one that restricts vertical growth, permits lateral growth and doesn't hurt the root system," DiPaola said. "We don't have it yet, but we certainly could in the not-too-distant future."

Another measure being considered to reduce maintenance costs is planting slow-growing grasses along the state's 76,000 miles of roadway.
DiPaola said tall fescue is currently being used along 80 percent of state highways. Changing to a slower growing grass species could save millions of dollars a year in labor and energy, he said.

Clean Sweep!

2 out of 3 smokers choose MERIT low tar/good taste combination over leading higher tar brands.

Landmark smoker study produces solid new evidence that MERIT delivers a winning combination of good taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

MERIT Clear Choice In New Tests.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

MERIT Switch Clicks.

In the second part of this extensive new study, former higher tar smokers report MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.
