By TOM BAINES

A former mayor returned to a familiar seat Thursday night and three new City Council members took their places at the governing table as the newly elected city officials received their oaths of office.

The seating of a new mayor and council also marked the retirement for now of Mayor Don McGlohon and three members of the board, two of them veterans.

Percy Cox, who returns to the mayor's chair after a two-year absence, took his oath for a new two-year term and first-time members Janice Buck, Stuart Shinn and George Pugh joined incumbents Judy Greene, Louis Clark and William Hadden on the council.

Cox was first appointed to the council to fill an unexpired term and he then won election to six terms on the board before running successfully for mayor in 1975 and 1977.

The new board honored McGlohon, who served a single two-year tour, for his service and leadership and the large gathering at city hall gave the outgoing mayor a standing ovation. McGlohon received a service plaque and resolution of appreciation from the city.

Mayor Pro Tem Joe Taft Jr., who chose not to seek re-election this year after eight years of service, and Clarence Gray, who decided against running for his sixth term, received plaques and resolutions for their efforts. Dick McKee, unsuccessful in seeking his second term in November, was also presented a service plaque and honored with a resolution of appreciation.

Mrs. Buck, who led the council voting in her first venture as a candidate, was nominated by Mrs. Greene to serve as mayor pro tem and the council unanimously approved her election.

District Court Judge Jim Martin of Bethel administered the oaths to the mayor, pro tem and remaining council members during the ceremonies.

Cox announced following the ceremonies that he has appointed, with the concurrence of the council, a 10-member Election Study Committee to look at possible ways of conducting city elections that would provide more of an equitable situation relative to black and white council membership.

Cox said that he had met with a group of citizens who expressed concern that the council is now without black representation as a result of Gray's decision not to seek re-election and the failure of a black candidate to win a council seat in November.

The committee, which includes five black members, is composed of Gladys Howell, Beatrice Maye, Charla Davis, Anne Evans, Donovan Phillips, Tom Taft, Rufus Huggins, Dr. Frank Fuller, Charles M. Vincent and Dr. Don Ensley.

Cox said the committee will study the election process and make recommendations to the council for consideration.

The council approved a motion offered by Shinn that a committee be selected to "study items of public safety for the city." Shinn said concerns from the black community had been expressed to him regarding public safety and he endorsed the establishment of a public safety commission "to study ... problems."

Legislators Talk 'Delay' Of May 4 N.C. Primary

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) - Legislative leaders said Thursday they would appoint a committee to study the state's options in responding to the federal Department of Justice's rejection of North Carolina's legislative redistricting plans.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing said the 14-member committee would be composed of seven members of both chambers.

"They will study all the ramifications of this thing and try to ascertain who has the authority to decide whether to appeal," Lawing said.

Legislative leaders failed to decide on a next step in the state's reapportionment dispute Thursday, but they began to talk of postponing the statewide primary now scheduled for next May 4.

About 25 legislators met behind closed doors for more than two hours with state attorneys and a Washington lawyer.

Legislators who attended the meeting said the attorney retained by the General Assembly, Jerris Leonard of Washington, told them they should postpone the date of the spring primary if they chose to appeal in federal court a ruling by the U.S. Justice Department.

Most of the meeting was spent discussing the first of three Justice Department rulings, which struck down a 13-year-old state constitutional provision that prevented counties from being divided in shaping legislative districts.

Legislators were unable to decide whether they should appeal that ruling by filing suit in U.S. District Court in Washington, where the case would be heard before a three-judge panel.

Leonard, legislators said, told them that if they chose to take that decision to court, the legal question would probably remain unresolved for months, forcing a delay in the primary into the summer.

"He said the three-judge panel could rule in February, but either side, if they lose, will appeal that decision," said Rep. Parks Helms, D-Mecklenburg.

Although no votes were taken, several legislators said there appeared to be a strong sentiment in favor of appealing the decision on county lines.

Ramsey, who favors an appeal, circulated copies of the oath of office legislators take when they are sworn in and which says they will defend and uphold the state Constitution.

"I sensed there was a strong feeling to appeal it," Helms said. But he added there was "some reluctance on the part of the Senate," and Sen. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, president pro tem of the Senate, told reporters he didn't want to appeal.

Destroyed By Morning Fire

BODY SHOP DESTROYED BY FLAMES - Pitt County firemen fight a blaze that destroyed the Highway 43 Body Shop this morning about two miles north of Greenville. Parks Britt, co-owner of the shop, said he was in the paint room when he heard a small "boom," and discovered the fire. Britt said at least four cars were destroyed or heavily damaged during the fire. Containers of flammable chemicals in the building exploded, sending flames shooting high above trees. Marvin Singleton, whose house is near the shop and is also co-owner, said he was in the house and saw the smoke. The owners could offer no estimate of damage at this time. Fire departments from Red Oak, Falkland, Bel Arthur and Staton House responded to the call. Cause of the fire has not been determined. Community College Endowment Is Announced For Scholarships

Pitt Community College, along with 37 other community colleges and technical institutes in North Carolina, received an early Christmas gift this morning.

Wachovia Bank established a $250,000 endowment to support scholarships for technical training in the state's community college system, Gov. Jim Hunt announced early today. This endowment, a first in the system's history, will provide 50 scholarships each year, at least one per institution and two for the 13 colleges with the largest enrollments, including PCC. At PCC, two $500 scholarships will be given per year, based on need and performance.

"The scholarships will be available to students enrolled in two-year programs," PCC President William Fulford noted. "The money will cover all the needs of a student during one year - tuition, books, transportation, tools."

The recipients will be chosen by the president of the college, in cooperation with representatives of the local bank. They will be awarded beginning in the fall of 1982.

"We hope that establishment of these scholarships will encourage technical

U.S. Workers In Libya Urged Return Home For Own Safety

WASHINGTON (AP) - By urging 1,500 U.S. workers to return home from "imminent danger" in Libya, President Reagan apparently is trying to position himself to deal forcefully with Col. Moammar Khadafi if necessary.

If the appeal is successful and all Americans leave the North African nation, Reagan will have averted the potential for them being used as pawns in the festering dispute between Libya and the United States.

Fears for the safety of the Americans and fresh memories of the seizure of U.S. hostages in Iran effectively have barred the administration from considering a wide range of options up to now, including an oil embargo.

However, the only firm that immediately ordered its workers out of Libya in response to the president's request was Marathon Oil, which had just eight employees there.

Occidental Petroleum said it has told its employees they are free to leave if they wish. Exxon, which announced last month it was withdrawing its workers from Libya and terminating operations there, said it was arranging for its "fewer than 100" employees to leave Libya if they desire.

Other firms had no immediate comment. State Department officials met with oil industry representatives today to discuss the Libyan situation, and department spokesman David Nall said several company executives were expected to accept the offer.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said today the Reagan administration has not set a deadline for Americans to leave Libya voluntarily. "It would be up to the oil companies," he said. "We would prefer that it be done expeditiously, consistent with the needs of the companies there."

In Tripoli, the official Libyan news agency JANA said U.S. citizens there live in "peace and security" and that the U.S. warning of danger to their lives was an

"absurd pretension."

JANA said Reagan's inability to furnish proof of Libyan terrorism makes it clear that "Reagan is a liar, a coward and that he places his personal dignity above any other consideration."

State Department travel warnings issued as early as last May have had little effect.

Hunger-Striker Freed On Bond

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

James Redmond III, the inmate who for nearly three weeks had been on a hunger strike in Pitt County jail, was released shortly before noon Thursday on a bond total that was reduced from the original $6,000 to $1,500.

Redmond, who went on the hunger strike to call attention to what he claims is a case of mistaken identity in a Virginia charge against him, procured the $1,500 bond through the service of a professional bondsman.

Robert Shoffner, assistant public defender representing Redmond, said "the state asked for and received a continuation of the Virginia Beach, Virginia, charge until January 21. The ball is now in the state's court. You can't hold a person indefinitely to answer charges in another state."

"Redmond is fighting extradition, so the state of Virginia has to start the necessary legal steps for extradition. This will entail getting a governor's warrant, and they have only so long to do it."

Shoffner added that when the case goes back for a hearing on Jan. 21, "we will then be able to evaluate the status of the case, to know how to proceed."

The Virginia Beach charge against Redmond is one of felony for worthless checks. Pitt County authorities apprehended Redmond on the basis of a fugitive warrant issued by Virginia Beach authorities.

RIDES FOR A CHILD?

Catholic Social Services of Greenville has asked Hotline to appeal for rides that will enable a Creswell child to continue to be enrolled at the Earth School here.

Joan Chenier of CSS writes, "This is a loving 10-year-old. He is hyperactive and has been attending the Earth School in Greenville for over a year. He has made great progress and his teachers feel continued enrollment would benefit him greatly. His mother is a widow and, with budget cuts eliminating transportation allowance, she can no longer transport him back and forth to Greenville."

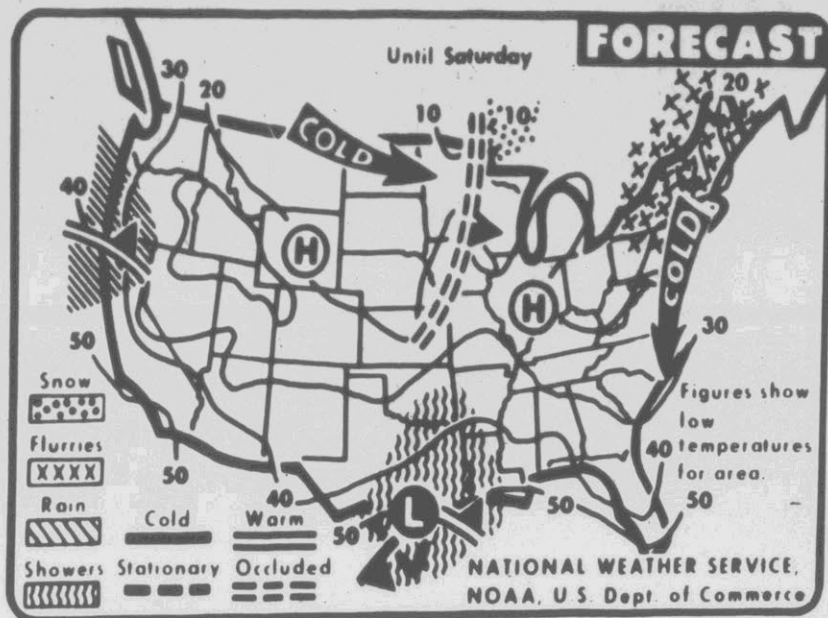

Creswell is on U.S. 64 East between Plymouth and Manteo. Beginning January 1982, is there anyone traveling to the Creswell area after 2:45 p.m. Fridays and returning to Greenville late afternoon Sundays or early Mondays who would be willing to help this child? If so, please contact Joan Chenier, Catholic Social Services, 756-1593.

EARLY CHRISTMAS GIFT FOR PCC ... Dr. William Fulford, president of Pitt Community College, left, and Reid Hooper, right, city executive with Wachovia Bank in Greenville, discuss the two $500 per year scholarships established at PCC by the $250,000 endowment the bank made this morning to North Carolina's entire community college system. The endowment will provide each college with at least one scholarship and provide the 13 institutions with the highest enrollment with two. PCC is among those 13. (Reflector Staff Photo)

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow flurries are expected in the forecast period until Friday morning for the Northeast. Showers are forecast for the western Gulf. Rain is expected for the northern Pacific coast and colder weather is predicted for most areas. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Gusty winds that have made unseasonably cold temperatures feel even colder will diminish, but the mercury will remain low for the next several days.

The two weather systems responsible for the cold and windy conditions over North Carolina is weakening. The storm circulation off New England is slowly pulling away and the ridge of high pressure over the plains and mid west is building slowly south east.

Temperatures will continue below the seasonal normals for the next few days. Thursday turned out to be rather cold and uncomfortable. Afternoon maximums only reached into the 40s east of the mountains. For example the 49 degree observation at Fayetteville and the 48 at Wilmington and Cherry Point were a few of the highest in the state while at Greensboro the mercury never passed 40 degrees.

Mountains stations were in the much colder 20s and 30s for the most part. The range went from frigid 10 degrees at Mt. Mitchell to a 44 at Bryson City. Snow flurries over the mountains finally tapered off and ended early this morning. Many areas had a dusting but some of the higher mountains managed to pick up a few inches at least. Mt. Mitchell had 4 inches on the ground as of yesterday afternoon.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina will continue to be poor for outdoor activities except skiing. A small craft advisory continues for the coastal waters and sounds while temperatures continue on the cold side.

The North Carolina Forest Service reports that there is a serious danger of forest and brush fires across the state. The recent gusty and strong winds plus no rain has made outdoor burning conditions hazardous. All burning in or near wooded areas should be postponed until after the next rain.

Object To Mansion-Use

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt should cancel plans for his Democratic fund-raiser this Saturday if he isn't going to let the GOP hold a charity event in the governor's mansion too, Republican Party Chairman David Flaherty said Thursday.

Flaherty wrote Hunt last weekend complaining about the use of the mansion for a political fund-raiser and requesting that Hunt allow the GOP to use the mansion for a charity fund-raiser.

Hunt is holding a dinner at the mansion, with the money to go to the Democratic National Committee's Commission on Presidential Nominations, which is headed by Hunt.

"For his cronies to be putting $500 each into the Democratic National Committee's pockets to further Hunt's political nest is an insult to North Carolina families who have paid for this historic dwelling out of their paychecks," Flaherty said.

Stephanie Bass, Hunt's deputy press secretary, called it a "ridiculous and tacky request." She said the governor's office had already responded through the press and would proceed with plans for the event.

A Review Students' Play Is Rewarding

Thirteen student actors proved again Thursday night that high school drama productions can be rewarding. The Curtain Players of Ayden-Grifton High School also showed that a play little known to the local public is often worth investigating.

"The Me Nobody Knows," which opened Thursday night at Ayden-Grifton School with two more performances — Saturday night at 8 and Sunday afternoon at 3 — is by Robert Livingston and Herb Schapiro. According to the program notes, "the text of this play was written by children between the ages of 7 and 18 attending New York public schools." However, it's evident that professionals have selected and coordinated the children's words into a finely tuned entity.

Numerous specific references do pinpoint the local color of a large urban ghetto, but the gut wisdom of children which comes through clearly is universal in application and appeal.

Parents and cops, teachers and juvenile counselors, classmates and muggers, messy pigeons and drunks being black or wanting clothes, first thoughts on morning awakenings and speculation on the stars and space — all these, in the world of the young, are of compelling importance in their peppy, sometimes cockeyed philosophy.

These children may be street-wise, yet they reflect timeless insights into childhood attitudes in the eagerness to grow up into adulthood. Their youthful satire can be biting — as in rapping about religion in which they proclaim "they tell it, they yell it, they misspell it, they sell it."

The skit on school lunches is hilarious, while the one on the death of a student's baby brother tugs at the heartstrings — "guess we gotta rejoice. No more doctor bills, can pay the back rent now."

The structure of "The Me Nobody Knows" is interesting. With one brief exception, all 13 players remain on stage. There are no stars or dominant roles. Each is provided near equal time to speak or sing his or her thoughts, and the movement of players is almost as formal as a minuet.

Several excellent songs — "You Shall Be Saved," "If I Had A Million Dollars," "Shoobie-Doobie," "My Mind Holds This World In Its Hands" extend, blend easily into the dialogue.

Two of the girls in the cast, Mary Dixon as Cathrine and Sibby Anderson in the role of Nell, have appealing singing voices. Mitchell Riggs, who began acting as a pre-teen lad at Ayden-Grifton several years ago, is developing into a fine teen-age actor. Gloria Hooker as Melba, Randy Fussell as Carlos and Alan Surrrell as Benjamin provided some of the best moments in the play.

Others in the cast are Kathryn Dixon, Cathy Sutton, Shirley Hickman, David Webb, Reginal Dixon, Kenny Jones and Cassandra Doesh.

Director Doug Mitchell knows how to pace the student actors, and keeps the action moving but wisely restrained. Janipat Worthington accompanies the singers on the piano. Joey Pollock is musical director, Shelley Harker is stage manager, Mike Boykin handles the lights and Ty Taylor is technical director.

The set for "The Me Nobody Knows," constructed by the Ayden-Grifton Stagecraft Class, is absolutely first-rate.

A simple architectural structure of platforms, graffiti-filled walls and open windows fill the foreground, with a changing colors, sometimes star-studded sky in the background.

In many respects "The Me Nobody Knows" is similar to operettas popular as high school fare 30 or 40 years ago — with the significant difference that here reality overshadows make-believe. "The Me Nobody Knows" is witty, sad, funny, sometimes irreverent, and thoroughly enjoyable.

International Mystery

Seldom has an incident so occupied a presidential administration than the current reports of Libyan hit squads, commissioned by Moammar Khadafy, to assassinate United States' leaders, including perhaps the president.

The matter apparently has a basis in information obtained through our intelligence from so-called Libyan insiders. The information should be taken dead seriously, without a doubt. Khadafy is considered by many to be a madman and fully capable of such an act.

It is also true, however, that information about plots against the president or high government officials is constantly received. Security is tightened in such cases and rarely is information about it leaked to the public.

The more this particular situation is talked the more serious the threats get. The notoriety might cause domestic terror groups to seize the opportunity to team up with the "hit" squads and thus obtain some of the misguided "glory" for themselves.

Perhaps the thinking is that the United States might be forced to take severe action against Khadafy, and that the American public might as well know that this kind of plotting goes on against our leaders.

What is important at present is that security be tightened around national leaders so that this, or any other plots, will not succeed.

Mayor's Office To Be Moving

Mayor Percy Cox, even before he was installed, insisted that the mayor's office be moved from the second floor of the municipal building to the first floor.

He said he did so to be more "accessible to the public," and also because he didn't feel that the administrative head (city manager)

er) and the political head should share an office.

We can't argue with the logic. The mayor and council should set policy for city government and the city manager's job is to carry out the policies. The lines become vague at times, but that is the way it is supposed to be.

Japan's Teamwork

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Even though half a world apart, Japan and North Carolina have much in common when it comes to economics.

Company loyalty, management-labor cooperation, productivity and concern with quality undergird the phenomenal Japanese industrial resurgence of the last 20 years.

When Gov. Jim Hunt met with key industrial and governmental figures in Japan recently he put a great deal of interest on the attitude of workers in North Carolina.

The state's low unionism, willing and cooperative workers and general business climate apparently appeal to Japanese investors.

"The single most outstanding characteristic of the Japanese corporation is its close cooperation with government. The relationship is amicable and cooperative, not adversarial.

"It is the rule, rather than the exception, that government and business leaders attend meetings and social functions together to share common knowledge and interests," Gov. Hunt points out.

investment in North Carolina. Call it a culture gap.

For many years, Japanese have visited California and many Orientals live there. The community which has developed relieves many of the pressures on Japanese who move to that area. They find religious, cultural, historical, social and educational ties without difficulty.

But in North Carolina, Japanese families face another world, an alien and foreign land far from their home. Schools offer little in the way of Japanese language and culture.

Japanese firms are "actively, albeit cautiously, investigating..." says the governor, and "are coming to view us, with plenty of land, productive workers, a good business climate and the lowest construction costs in the U.S., as a vital part of their future."

Cooperation

This teamwork devoted to a common concern between government and business holds strong attraction within firms. "We tell them that our management and workers cooperate together; the approach is cooperative and not confrontational," the governor remarked. The Japanese also find intriguing the close ties which bind business and the universities in this state.

Despite the close relationships, good climate, ports, available land and good location and transit system providing ready access to important markets, there continues a major stumbling block to Japanese guage and culture. In some subjects, especially mathematics, education here is weak to the point of causing some difficulty for youngsters who aspire to enter the top Japanese universities. And even though families strive to teach the Japanese language at home, the young people miss the vocabulary building in technical and scientific fields needed for collegiate success back at home.

The Gap
Gov. Hunt said his administration is trying hard to close that culture gap and devoting much thought to how better provide a satisfactory place for Japanese executives to live. Some schools are developing special Saturday classes in Japanese language, history and culture where the population makes that possible.

The state has put together a film about North Carolina and the Japanese families here so that those back in Japan can get a better understanding.

The effort to develop closer economic ties between North Carolina and Japan is proving to be a slow and difficult process; partially because of the differences between the two societies and the distance, and also because of the traditional caution with which Japanese businesses make investment and expansion plans.

Japanese firms are "actively, albeit cautiously, investigating..." says the governor, and "are coming to view us, with plenty of land, productive workers, a good business climate and the lowest construction costs in the U.S., as a vital part of their future."

Other Editors Say Unfunny Story

(Winston-Salem Sentinel)

This is the story of the house the General Assembly built. Once upon a time the solons decided the Legislative Building, a sprawling resplendent structure, was too small to suit their working style. You see, they had to share their cubicle offices with a secretary. When a lobbyist friend or constituent dropped in, the secretary either took a walk or overheard everything.

So the lawmakers planned another building across the street. Some taxpayers complained about the cost, but legislators went ahead. After all, they said, other state agencies would occupy most of the space. The agencies weren't too happy about having legislators for neighbors; besides, they could look ahead and see that sooner or later the legislature would want the building all to itself.

A few snags developed. A $35,000 tunnel was included so the public servants could cross the street without getting wet in case of rain. The idea met so much opposition it was dropped. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green was more successful. He held out for a private bathroom in his suite of offices, and he got what he wanted.

Now the $8.5 million building is ready for occupancy. Perhaps you think the lawmakers are eager to move in? No. Behind-the-scenes bickering is going on over the assignment of space.

Why? Sen. Craig Lawing, Mecklenburg Democrat, supplied the answer. "It's not where the action is. There ain't going to be no press and TV cameras over there," he said.

It seems the solons at work want privacy from the secretary, but publicity close at hand when they have some business they'd like to see in the headlines or on the television news. So they are maneuvering to stay in the Legislative Building, with its news facilities, and send their colleagues across the street.

Strength For Today

TO CATCH A MONKEY

In Africa monkeys are caught in an ingenious manner which has a lot of relevance to the catching of human beings. A hollow gourd with a narrow neck which will admit nothing larger than a monkey's empty paw is filled half-full of rice and nuts and is attached to a tree. During the night the monkey finds the gourd, thrusts in his paw, and is unable to draw it out because the fistful of goodies will not go back out through the neck. Even facing capture the monkey cannot bring himself to drop the goodies in order to free his paw.

All of this reveals monkey mentality, whether the monkey lives in the jungle or in a Fifth Avenue apartment; whether he swings from tree to tree or rides about in a $50,000 automobile. Monkey mentality puts possession before everything else and insists that once you have grabbed something you must hold onto it regardless of the consequences. This is the outcome of the meaningless, materialistic life. — Elisha Douglass

Allen Forgets Easily

Richard Allen has been cleared of any wrongdoing with regard to the $1,000 he accepted from the Japanese Magazine "Sim-bu-No" for an interview given by Mrs. Nancy Reagan. The Justice Department has decided there is no reason to go any further on the matter, and has accepted Mr. Allen's explanation that he took the envelope stuffed with cash, gave it to his secretary, and then forgot about it, until the money popped up eight months later in a safe in Mr. Allen's office.

Since the Justice Department is satisfied, I'm satisfied with the outcome of the investigation. But Trenchant, who works down the hall from me, still thinks Allen should go as the President's National Security Adviser.

Trenchant said, "He was cleared of wrongdoing, but not of being absent-minded. Nobody wants a guy as National Security Adviser who forgets?"

"Everyone forgets," I said.

"Yeh, but when the President's National Security Adviser forgets it could mean the end of the world. Suppose the President calls up Allen some night and says, 'Is it Honduras or Nicaragua we're supposed to send helicopter gunships to?' and Allen says, 'I forget.' How do you think the President would feel?"

"He probably wouldn't sleep too well," I said. "But just because Allen forgot to the President. Let's say the President is planning on building an airfield in the Middle East. He doesn't know whether to put it in North Yemen or South Yemen."

"What difference does it make?"

"North Yemen happens to be our client, and South Yemen is being supplied by the Soviets," Trenchant said. "Suppose Allen has forgotten this and he tells the President 'South Yemen,' because he has it mixed up with South Korea. We might build an airfield for Soviet planes."

"That's ridiculous. I know for a fact that Allen has a large map on the wall of his office and our friends are marked in green and our enemies in red. He'd never get the two Yemens mixed up."

"Okay, let's take the worst case situation any National Security Adviser has to deal with. One day the President calls up Allen and says, 'Where is the button I have to push in case the balloon goes up?' Allen says, 'I think I gave it to my secretary on the day after Inauguration.' And the President says, 'I have to know where it is right now. Allen starts looking all over the office for it, but can't find it. His secretary doesn't remember Allen giving it to her. Allen calls up his Japanese friends and asks them if, by mistake, he gave it to them when they interviewed Nancy Reagan. They say 'No, we gave you two Seiko watches, but you didn't give us a button in return.'"

"It could never happen," I told Trenchant. "Let me continue. The only other person who knows where the button is is Secretary of State Al Haig. Allen calls up Haig and asks where he kept the button when he worked in the White House. He says, 'I don't know where it is now.' Allen starts looking all over the office for it, but can't find it. His secretary doesn't remember Allen giving it to her. Allen calls up his Japanese friends and asks them if, by mistake, he gave it to them when they interviewed Nancy Reagan. They say 'No, we gave you two Seiko watches, but you didn't give us a button in return.'"

"Oh, no. What about the charges that he forgot to list the clients he represented when he had a consulting business before he went into the government. "Nobody can be expected to remember every lawyer's name in the White House," I said.

A Role For Gerald Ford

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Ford may be getting a new government job: efficiency expert.

His name heads the list of prospective chairmen for a new commission Congress is creating to look for ways to streamline the federal government and make it work better.

"For it to have the fullest impact, it must be composed of individuals of the highest caliber and who command the respect of our people," said Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., who sponsored the commission bill. "President Ford, I believe, would make an excellent chairman for the commission."

Since the panel is to be bipartisan, with nine Republican and nine Democratic members, Roth also mentioned former President Carter as the kind of figure who could be considered to head the operation.

But the emphasis was on a Ford commission as the Senate passed the bill and sent it to the House for certain approval. "I would like to add my support to the suggestion that President Ford be asked to do the job," said Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan.

The bill creates an 18-member panel to be chosen by President Reagan and the leaders of Congress to study federal government operations and their relationship with state and local government and come up with proposals to improve efficiency. The commission would have a $10 million budget for the three-year study.

Reagan would name the chairman, subject to confirmation by the commission itself.

The panel would take up the kind of work last done by the two Hoover commissions, named for their chairman, another former Republican president. The second Hoover commission wrapped up its efficiency study 26 years ago. One of its recommendations led to creation of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. That was split into two departments under Carter, and Reagan wants to eliminate one of them, Education.

"Over the past 20 years, we have tended to create a new government organization to address each new policy issue," Roth said. He said the inevitable result was duplication and overlapping agencies, so it's time for a new overhaul.

Roth said questions involving the size and substance of federal programs are political issues, but problems of organization and management are not. It is going to be difficult for the commission to draw that line clearly as Reagan strives to cut the size and cost of the federal establishment.

Democrats agree there's a problem in the way the government runs now. "Anyone who has run for federal office knows that the people feel that Washington taxes too much, spends too much and accomplishes too little in return," said Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., who joined Roth in sponsoring the bill.

But Eagleton doesn't like Reagan's way of dealing with the problem. He called it "a determined, all-fronts assault on the federal government" at the expense of the needy, described the administration's tax cut as outlandish, and said regulatory reform has become a cover for a radical slowdown in government efforts to protect health, safety and the environment.

"I do not believe that the activities of the federal government represent the mediocre picture of waste and fraud which the president sometimes paints," Eagleton said.

He said the government should keep doing much of what Reagan wants stopped, and the commission will help find ways to do it better.

That's not the Republican attitude. "The Reagan program to reduce the size of the federal government is the most significant shift in domestic policy in many decades," said Dole. "But even if the federal role is scaled back, there is no guarantee that the government will function with maximum efficiency unless we make a concerted effort to find the best ways to streamline government operations."

The Hoover Commissions looked into a government that had expanded with the New Deal and World War II. The new panel will be looking at a government the Republican president wants to shrink. It is going to be difficult, perhaps impossible, for any commission on government effectiveness to skirt the political question of how much the government really should be doing.

So if Ford does wind up handling the gavel at the Commission on More Effective Government, he'll probably have to bang it frequently.

Explaining Deficit Prospects

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It certainly sounds like a brand new economic line: Big budget deficits, it is said, aren't always as destructive as you might think they are. Spread the word: deficits need not always be feared.

The confusion attending this seemingly clear message from White House economists is due to the fact that it was their team that made such a racket about deficits and the inflation and high money costs they induced.

You can recall it. The deficit inherited by the Reagan administration was something on the order of $50 billion, and it was said to symbolize a deterioration of the economy and to bring closer a day of reckoning.

Now the projected budget deficits are $152.3 billion for fiscal 1983 and $162 billion for fiscal 1984, the year, according to the campaign rhetoric of 1980, in which the federal budget was to be balanced.

Something needs to be explained about this new position, and Murray L. Weidenbaum, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, seems to be the man to do it. In fact, he already sought to do so in an address last week to a Federal Home Loan Bank Board audience.

Considering the economic situation, it was almost imperative that he do so. How, for instance, could such big deficits not lead to higher interest rates and a resumption of double digit inflation?

"We must not forget," said Weidenbaum, "that in order for the inflationary potential of deficits to be realized, they must be monetized by the Federal Reserve." And, he said, "I have every confidence that such a development is simply not in the cards."

To monetize such debts, the Fed would need to ease its constraints on money supply growth; it could finance that debt, in effect, by diluting the value of the currency, that is, by inflating it.

If it didn't monetize that debt, however, it would seem that some other part of the economy would have to make do with less than desired, or else pay extremely high interest rates in order to obtain funds.

Weidenbaum indicates no. "During a time of recession, such as at present," he told the group, "a large deficit will not be 'crowding out' the rather modest funding needs of business and consumers." Because of recession, he suggested, the latter's demands will be off.

As the economy picks up, "in fiscal 1983 and beyond," he continued, those deficits have to be viewed differently. Then, he said, "a steady and substantial reduction in the deficit will be very much in order."

While this line of reasoning can be convincing, it still leaves a very great deal to be explained at a very basic level. Such as, for example, why the deficit should rise in 1983 and 1984 when it should be falling.

Weidenbaum did offer an explanation, though a feeble one. As economies grow, he pointed out, budgets (and, presumably, budget deficits) may seem high but actually make up a smaller portion of total output.

"Indeed," he said, "our budget deficits represent a much smaller share of our gross national product than is the case for many other industrialized nations with lower inflation rates."

While this may be true, it sounds also like a defense of big deficits, the end of which was promised repeatedly and in fact was the keystone of the Reagan administration's model for running the government.

When his program was offered to Congress, the president asked that it be considered as a neat package. Now, though, something seems to be bulging from the president's package.

Ingram Chided For Challenge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The general manager of the North Carolina Rate Bureau Thursday chided insurance Commissioner John Ingram for challenging the bureau's auto insurance rate filing.

Ingram has questioned the validity of the bureau's July 1, 1980, rate filing, an action the rate bureau says was prompted by one company's request for a rate reduction.

"I am sure the commissioner would not approve an industry-wide rate increase if the request were based solely on the experience of one company even if that company were the largest writer," Paul L. Mize said. "Neither should he imply that because a single company offers a rate reduction, the bureau's filing on behalf of the 176 companies writing the coverages was not valid."

Nationwide Mutual Insurance Company announced Monday it had applied to Ingram for approval of a 7 percent deviation below bureau rates for private passenger auto insurance.

According to Mize, Ingram said, in part, of the reduction request: "This proves that what our actuarial experts testified to a year ago is true. That the rates a year ago should not have been increased for auto liability insurance."

"Some companies, apparently including Nationwide, are able to operate at lower cost than others, but their ability to do so in no way reflects on the validity of the filing which included their experience in the total," Mize said.

Cooper has headed the Farmville police force for the past five years and has been in law enforcement work for 16 years.

Seek Relief

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The University of North Carolina board of trustees will lobby state legislators for relief from a law a UNC official says "is going to bring us to our knees if we follow it."

John Temple, UNC vice chancellor for business and finance, told the board's Committee on Needs and Resources Thursday that a state law giving the General Assembly more power over how UNC and other state agencies use their funds is "unworkable."

Trustees Chairman Newman A. Townsend Jr. said the law is "the manifestation of a trend in N.C. government — the governor's office or the executive branch is being stripped more and more of its managerial powers."

The law enacted this fall requires state budget office and General Assembly approval when a state agency transfers money from one budget item to another within a large account, if the transfer involves more than 10 percent of the money in one of the categories involved.

For example, educational and household supplies are both in the supply account of the UNC-Chapel Hill budget. In the past, the University has been able to transfer funds between the two items, Temple said.

Now, however, if UNC needed to take $110 out of a $1,000 household supply account to add to its educational supply budget, the University would have to go through an approval process likely to take two months, Temple said.

Two Hospitalized Due School Bus Accident

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — An 18-year-old Fayetteville youth says he may have been dissuaded permanently from driving a school bus after an accident Thursday in which 28 students required treatment.

Two riders remained hospitalized at Cape Fear Valley Hospital Thursday after the bus overturned on a sharp curve about three miles east of U.S. 401 south. The wreck occurred as William Charles Davis, driver of the bus, swerved to avoid an oncoming car which careened into his lane as it rounded the curve.

Davis, shaken by the accident, spoke with disbelief about the driver of the car, whom police have not identified and are seeking.

"He saw me go in that ditch and wouldn't stop," he said. "If that's what the world's coming to, I wouldn't let my children ride a bus."

His mother, Mrs. Colleen Davis, said if her son continues driving a bus, it will be without her blessing.

Eva Player, 14, and Roger Hart, 13, were admitted for observation while the remaining injured were treated and released.

The bus was delivering 50 students home from Hope Mills Junior High School at the time of the accident.

"He (Davis) took evasive action and the shoulder gave way," said the investigating officer, C.L. Salmon of the N.C. Highway Patrol.

The bus landed on its right side, blocking the door normally used by students. Some of those not injured, including the driver's brother, helped the others scramble over seats in the overturned bus to the rear door amidst screaming and crying, Davis said. The uninjured students were transferred to another bus for transportation home.

Marvin Lucas, principal at Hope Mills Junior High School, said practice evacuation drills have been held at the school twice this year and safety drills are held each month. That training made evacuation of the bus more orderly than it might have been, the driver said.

Davis, who is driving a bus for the first time this year, said he hadn't made his first stop at the time of the accident. He said after the bus overturned he was dangling by his seatbelt. Ted Chappel, transportation coordinator for Cumberland County Schools, said this is the ninth bus accident since school opened this year, but the first with injuries.

House. But Haig is suspicious, because he thinks this is just another ploy in the guerrilla war the White House is waging against him. So he gives Allen a lot of doubletalk, which Haig is very good at.

"Now here we have a President of the United States, who doesn't know where the button is, his National Security Adviser, who has forgotten, and the Secretary of State, who won't tell him. Eight months' later they find the button in a filing cabinet in the Executive Office Building. How would you feel about that?"

"So you're saying the President should not take back Allen even if he's cleared on all the charges?" I said.

"I'm not saying he should be fired, but he should be put in some non-sensitive job like the Office of Management and Budget, where if you forget something it doesn't hurt anybody."

Ruritans Honor Don Boyd

WINTERVILLE — Donald Boyd received the Ruritan of the Year Award at a recent meeting of the organization.

The award was presented to Boyd by Bobby Crawford, member of the town board of aldermen and guest at the meeting. The honor represents, according to Crawford, Boyd's outstanding work on the local community watch program and the birthday calendar.

Keith Knox, deputy sheriff of Pitt County, congratulated Boyd for chairing what he called "one of the best community watch programs in the county."

The Goldsboro District Ruritan Organization elected the following 1982 officers at the meeting: Richard Minnick, president; Donald Boyd, vice president; Wayne Meads, secretary; Paul Hunsucker, treasurer; Mark McGlohon, director; Panny Fortlines, sergeant-at-arms; Elwood Nobles, club reporter. District Gov. James Stroud of Greenville installed the new officers.

In other business, Leck Keeter will chair a project to raise $300 per year for the next three years for the purchase of a piano for the D.H. Conley drama department. The money will be matched by the school.

Tony Moye, former president of the Ruritans, and Buck Weaver will attend the national convention in Orlando, Fla. Jan. 14-16.

Jan. 30, 1982, was designated as the day the organization will honor former Mayor Walter Dail. "This day has been chosen to show him our appreciation for his contribution while in office," explained reporter Elwood Nobles.

Nobles reported that fruitcakes are still being sold by Winterville Ruritans at a cost of $5.50 each. The cakes are available at the town hall or from any member of the organization. "We have only a few left," noted Nobles, "so folks that want them better hurry."

RETIREES MEETING

The Greenville Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons will meet Monday at noon at the Tar Landing Restaurant.

Officers for next year will be installed. The chapter urges members to attend the meeting and invites anyone interested in joining the organization.

NAACP Meeting

The Pitt County NAACP will meet Sunday at 7:45 p.m. at St. Stephens A.M.E. Zion Church on Hines Street in Farmville. Branch President D.D. Garrett will deliver his annual year-end address. The meeting will be open to the public.

Reports, Planning For Bethel Council

BETHEL — Reports of recent activities and future plans were covered at the meeting of the Board of Governors of the Bethel Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Thursday night.

Council chairman Bob Bowers presided, and Becky Bell attended as a representative of the Pitt-Greenville office.

A number of community development reports were presented by Danny Norris. Norris noted that the Hospitality House for the recently held Bethel Marathon entertained 350 people. The board, noting that the Christmas parade was another successful event, announced plans to consider combining the Christmas parade and the marathon into one major event in 1982.

In another report, Norris praised Danny Warren, Bethel's recreation director, for programs held during November attended by 50 to 60 people for each event. Crafts and men's free-play basketball were the major activities conducted in the recreation program. Because of the interest shown, plans are now being made to have a men's basketball league initiated in January.

Also being planned for January is the opening of a nursery for 3- and 4-year-olds in the Bethel United Methodist Church, with Holly Tetterton to be the director.

Raymond Latham, chairman of the council's Economic Development Committee, announced that application has been made for a Governor's Award of Excellence. Another plan announced is to hold the Bethel Council Annual Dinner in May.

Toby Timberlake, chairman of organization and membership, announced that a Pepsi Break will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Feb. 1 in the Rotary House.

ORGANIST DAY

GRIFTON — New Deliverance Free Will Baptist Church, presently worshipping at Grifton Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, will hold an appreciation service for its organist, Roger Ingram, Saturday at 6 p.m.

Different choirs and special guests will be on the program. The pastor, Elder J.L. Wilson, invites the public to attend.

Campus Paper Reports Substitution Of Story

CAROL TYER

Reflector Staff Writer

A unauthorized substitution was made of a front page story in the Tuesday edition of the East Carolina University campus newspaper, The East Carolinian. Editor-in-Chief Paul Collins said. Instead of a story about on-campus construction, 10,000 issues were printed carrying a story criticizing Collins and announcing the resignation of advertising staffer C.W. "Chuck" Foster.

Collins, contacted this morning, says he cannot say for sure who switched the stories just before the paper went to press. He said he received a letter of resignation from Foster Tuesday afternoon just about the same time the newspapers came out.

Collins said there was no way of calling back the entire printing of the paper and that the substitution was doubly damaging in that this is the last issue of this semester, with no issue scheduled until about a month from now. He said he does not know yet what sort of "correction or whatever" will be printed then.

Collins said he had recently fired Foster, then taken him back onto the staff after school officials ordered that he be reinstated, then demoted him from advertising director to a lesser position.

Foster, also contacted this morning, said he did not make the switch of stories. "I wish I were not a suspect," he added, "but I know that I am, because I was up there late that night. The paper was running late."

He said he is the person responsible for making the final check of all the pages that have advertisements, but that this does not include the front page which generally has no ads, and he did not look at it Monday night before it was sent for printing.

Foster confirmed that he was demoted by Collins, in his opinion, "for no reason at all" from advertising director to technical supervisor after he was reinstated on the staff.

Foster says he does not know who wrote the story, that no member of the news staff of the newspaper talked to him. He said some of his friends, including some staffers, did know he planned to resign, but that he did not speak for publication to anyone about it.

Joseph H. Calder, director of campus security, said this morning that his department has investigated the matter at the request of Dr. Elmer Meyer, vice chancellor for student life, and he sees no basis for a criminal charge at this time, "because there was no vandalism or damage to property."

Wrecks Cause $2,000 Damage

An estimated $2,000 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 150 feet south of the Club Pines Road intersection, involving cars driven by William Thomas Holland of 1218 Evans St. and Phillip Lowell Lehman of Grifton.

Officers, who charged Lehman with driving under the influence, estimated damage at $500 to the Holland car and $1,000 to the Lehman vehicle.

Cars driven by Kingsley Coleman Dozier of Stratford Arms Apartments and Gerlene Fleming Dixon of Route 1, Vanceboro, collided about 10:55 a.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 1500 feet west of the Hooker Road intersection, causing $200 damage to the Dozier car and $300 damage to the Dixon vehicle.

Today Is Last Day To Apply For Aid On Fuel Bills

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — People who received federal help in paying fuel bills last winter may receive a rude shock this time unless they apply for the help today, state officials said.

N.C. Department of Human Resources officials say the number of applications for heating assistance are running far behind last year's figures statewide. And they think the major reason is that welfare recipients, who last year were given the aid automatically, must apply separately this year.

By Wednesday, only about 95,000 applications had come in to the energy assistance office in the department's Division of Social Services, said DHR spokesman James Burns.

That compares with 210,000 heating aid checks averaging $155 sent out last year, Burns said.

"We know that there probably are quite a few applications where people applied at the county departments, but which haven't been processed and sent to the state," he said.

But many county offices also reported applications far below last year. In Wake County, about 4,500 people have applied for the aid, said Mary Lineberger, director of eligibility for the county Department of Social Services. Last year, about 6,600 people received checks, she said.

"It's hard to believe people haven't heard about the change (in application policy)," said Mrs. Lineberger. "There have been notices on radio, TV and in the papers."

Burns said recipients of food stamps, Supplemental Security Income and Aid to Families with Dependent Children were notified with inserts that came with their checks that they must apply for heating aid themselves.

By Monday, 4,400 applications for aid had been received by the Charlotte Area Fund, which is administering the state program for Mecklenburg County's Department of Social Services, said director Tom Sanders.

By last Friday, Guilford County had received about 5,240 applications, compared to 9,000 households that received aid checks last year, said Ralph Sheppard, income maintenance administrator for the county Department of Social Services.

"It's kind of odd, because the eligibility requirements were relaxed this year," said Burns. Last year, an applicant could not receive aid if he or she had assets above $1,100. This year, the limit is $2,000, and life insurance and burial policies are exempted, he said.

School Equipment Need Said Desperate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's universities and technical colleges face a "crisis" because their training equipment has become so worn and outdated, officials said.

"There comes a time in a program when the equipment is of such inadequacy that you are no longer effective as a training system," Larry J. Blake, president of the state's community college system, said Thursday.

Blake joined representatives of the N.C. Board of Science and Technology and officials of the University of North Carolina system in addressing a committee created this year to make recommendations to the General Assembly on equipment acquisitions.

They warned the group that failure to update training paraphernalia could hurt the state's economy by damaging efforts to recruit high-technology industry.

The speakers said that the equipment problems affect not only community and technical schools where skilled workers for industry are trained, but also colleges and universities where industry-related research is conducted.

"High technology has come to research," said Walton Jones, UNC vice president for research and public service. "The kinds of equipment that support research today are tremendously expensive."

North Carolina's institutions of higher learning, government installations and industries contain between $300 million and $500 million worth of scientific equipment, a study by the Board of Science and Technology shows.

But the study says that over half of the equipment is more than 10 years old, the age at which it is considered obsolete. And many pieces are of pre-World War II vintage, it says.

The 1981 General Assembly appropriated $5 million for new equipment for the community college system but $30 million more is needed, Blake said.

However, during Thursday's meeting, committee members agreed to focus their study on approaches to the equipment shortage that don't involve huge expenditures.

Gov. Jim Hunt already has recommended that industries donate equipment to colleges. Other ideas mentioned Thursday included shifting pieces of equipment from campus to campus, working out agreements with industry for more on-the-job training, and restricting a program involving expensive equipment to one site in a region.

N.C. Bond Sale To VEPCO Used Aid Some Buy Home Polygraph Test

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Through the sale of $30 million in tax-exempt revenue bonds by the state Housing Finance Agency, North Carolina can make it easier for some people to buy homes, state officials said.

Loans made under the program will carry a 13 percent fixed-rate interest for a 30-year term. Rates generally now run from around 15 percent to 17 percent.

The executive director of the Housing Finance Agency, Gary Paul Kane, estimated that the revenues from the bond issue would "provide below-market interest rate mortgages for approximately 750 families or in individuals of lower income."

North Carolina's issue, made possible under provisions of the 1980 Mortgage Subsidy Bond Tax Act, is the first by any state housing finance agency in the United States, Kane said from his Raleigh office.

The agency is providing the mortgage funds through private lending institutions.

"The funds will be for new or existing housing in the state for the next six months or until they are gone," Kane said from his Raleigh office. "After the six-month period, we hope to be able to make additional low-interest moneys available in a similar manner."

SURRY, Va. (AP) — Polygraph tests reportedly were administered to some workers at Virginia Electric & Power Co.'s Surry nuclear generating station during a probe of alleged illegal drug use by security personnel.

A published report said today other workers at the plant resigned rather than submit to the tests, according to a source close to the investigation, whose statements Veeco officials declined to confirm.

Company officials said they would not comment on specifics of the probe beyond a press release issued Wednesday night. That release said some workers were dismissed for refusing to cooperate in the investigation.

The probe resulted in the firing or resignation of 18 employees and the suspension of six others for allegedly using marijuana or having knowledge of such practices by other employees.

Surry County Sheriff W.C. "Cordie" Andrews said he expected the state forensics laboratory to take 10 days to two weeks to complete tests on a substance believed to be marijuana that Veeco investigators turned over along with drug paraphernalia to his deputies late last week.

Dennis W. Hedgepeth, a Veeco spokesman, said Thursday that the bulk of the probe that began Dec. 2 had been completed and it did not show any incidents of drug abuse by employees elsewhere at the Hog Island plant, which employs 600 people.

$125,000 Offer By Billie Jean

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In return for an offer of $125,000, Billie Jean King's former lesbian lover agreed to move out of a Malibu beach house, give back the tennis star's love letters and stir up "no publicity," Mrs. King testified.

"She would get an advance of up to $25,000 and she would get $100,000 when she vacated," Mrs. King said on the second day of a trial in which she and her husband, Larry, are seeking to evict Marilyn Barnett from the beach house, estimated to be worth at least $550,000.

Ms. Barnett, a 33-year-old former hairdresser, says she believed the house was hers. In addition to resisting eviction, Ms. Barnett has filed a "palimony" lawsuit seeking the house and lifetime support.

The $125,000 deal fell through and Mrs. King was unable to evict Ms. Barnett from the house, Mrs. King's business manager, James Jorgensen, testified Thursday in Superior Court.

Outside court, Ms. Barnett told reporters: "I am getting tired of people lying and saying I was threatening Billie with my letters. I kept the letters because I am sentimental, and I took money because I was vegetating at home and needed leg braces to learn to walk again."

Ms. Barnett, who has braces on her legs and uses a cane, broke her back in a fall from the balcony of the house she says Mrs. King bought for her while they were lovers. Ms. Barnett and her lawyer Joel Ladin have refused to discuss published reports that the young woman's fall was a suicide attempt.

Mrs. King, 37, testified that when she told Ms. Barnett in 1978 that she planned to sell the house, Ms. Barnett "got very upset."

"You also told Ms. Barnett then that you were no longer in love with her, didn't you?"

asked Ladin. Mrs. King's lawyer objected, and the question was stricken from the court record as irrelevant.

Mrs. King said she first offered Ms. Barnett half the profits from the sale of the house, then switched to the $125,000 offer.

In return for the cash, Mrs. King said, Ms. Barnett would "get out of my life, get out of my house and not be bothersome to me. (She would) give the letters back and have no further claims, no publicity, no lawsuits. She said that would be fine."

Jorgensen said Mrs. King paid $25,000 to Ms. Barnett and thought she was going to return about 60 love letters. But in April 1981, he said, Ms. Barnett hired Ladin to represent her and showed the lawyer the love letters. Jorgensen said he later received a call from Ladin.

"He said he had some bad news for me and my client," Jorgensen recalled. "He said the deal was off, that he had read the letters ... and that Marilyn was entitled to a lot more than $125,000, that she was entitled to the house and a lot more."

Economic Impact Of Military Cited

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The armed services are more important economically to North Carolina than even tobacco, Gov. Jim Hunt told Marines and Navy men Thursday.

"The military pays out about $1.7 billion annually in North Carolina," while tobacco generated about $1.3 billion in wages and salaries in the state this year, "one of the best yet for our No. 1 crop," Hunt said during a Military Appreciation Day address at Camp Lejeune.

After a 19-gun salute to the governor, Hunt and Maj. Gen. Charles Cooper, commanding general of the base, reviewed an honor guard as the 2nd Marine Division Band played "Nothing Could Be Finer Than to Be in Carolina."

Accompanying Hunt were Burley B. Mitchell Jr., secretary of crime control and public safety; Leo Jenkins, assistant to the governor on economic and military affairs, and Maj. Gen. William E. Ingram, North Carolina adjutant general. The governor's group also was scheduled to visit the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, Fort Bragg and Pope Air Force Base before returning to Raleigh about 6 p.m.

Notecards Depict Old Greenville Landmarks

THE FLEMING-WINSTEAD HOUSE...now Chamber of Commerce office is one of Mrs. Hibbard's 10 different sketches on notecards.

A local woman is marketing for the first time this year a box of notecards, each depicting a different Greenville landmark.

"Here and There in Greenville" is a set of 10 pen and ink sketches done by Carolyn Ross Hibbard.

"I started the sketches last winter while I was taking a three months leave of absence from work due to the illness of my son, Randy," she said. "I found it was best to keep very busy, so I started to work on a project I had thought of doing 'some day' for years. I took a picture of each building or scene, and later went back to each location and sketched, sitting in my car on the colder days, out in the open if it was nice weather. Then I redid each drawing, straight edging each line, and finally transferred each to pen and ink."

Mrs. Hibbard estimates she has about 16 hours of work in each sketch. The hardest part of the project was finishing after she went back to work, she said. She credits finishing the project to the supportiveness of her husband, Doug, and the prodding of friends Jan McLendon and Bev Logue.

CHURCH SERVICE
The Rev. Arlester Coward and the St. James Unified Free Will Baptist Church of New Haven, Conn., will hold services at the St. Rest Holy Church in Winterville, this Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Coward is a former president of Winterville. The service will be open to the public.

Boxing the cards, which were printed by a local firm, is being done at her dining room table during hours away from her job as secretary to Dr. Yash Kataria and Dr. Robert Shaw, pulmonary specialists with the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Mrs. Hibbard does not sell the cards directly herself, but they are available at the Gazebo, Gandall's, the Mushroom, the Book Barn, A Little Bit of Sunshine and Jefferson's Florists at $5 a box.

Ask Lifting Camera Ban

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Saying that uninformed citizens have acquired a "Perry Mason" impression of the judicial system, the North Carolina Press Association has asked the state Supreme Court to lift its ban on cameras in courtrooms during trials.

The organization represents 174 newspapers in the state. In a petition filed with the state's highest court, the group supported an earlier petition filed by the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters and the Radio-Television News Directors Association of the Carolinas.

The newspaper group asked the court to allow television cameras, radio reording devices and still photographs in courtrooms during trials and appellate hearings for the benefit of the public.

Rigid guidelines for use of the equipment, including that it only be allowed through approval of the judge, is requested in the petition filed Wednesday.

Even if television cameras and recording equipment are not allowed in courtrooms, still cameras should be permitted, the newspaper association's petition said.

SPECIAL SERVICE

A special service at Morning Star Holiness Church Sunday at 2 p.m. will honor a special person. Pastor Roxanna Brown invites the public to the service. The church is located on the Old Tar Road between Winterville and Ayden.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower today amid some new doubts about the interest-rate outlook. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .95 to 891.08 by noon. Losers held a 7-5 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Falling interest rates have been cited by analysts as an important plus for the market over the last couple of months.

But since early this week the bond market's rally has faltered, and open-market interest rates have turned upward again.

Brokers also noted continuing concern over the prospective length and depth of the recession.

Four-Phase Systems was delayed in opening, while Motorola fell 4 1/2 to 60 1/2. On Thursday, Motorola agreed to acquire Four-Phase through an exchange of $45 worth of its own stock for each Four-Phase share.

Revlon led the active list, up 1/8 at 30 1/2. A 350,000-share block traded at 30 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index lost 17 to 72.67. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.90 at 324.13.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.24 million shares at noon, against 20.52 million at the same point Thursday.

 remain inadequate, however," he said. "They need considerable new equipment to train individuals and additional scholarship funds to assist those who cannot pay tuition fees."

Dr. Fulford noted that Wachovia's endowment indicated a trend among businesses and industries toward financial support of community college and technical education.

"It is something that has become of increased interest and emphasis," he said. "We have seen more and more companies donating surplus equipment as well as time and effort to our programs."

Hooper said that, in Greenville alone, Wachovia employs 35 to 40 persons who have had part or all their training at Pitt Community College. "And I estimate that this figure is reflected throughout the state," he added.

Wachovia, noted Charlie Russell, assistant to the president at PCC, is also one of the college's biggest employers of co-op students.

Ali, Berbick Go Into Ring Tonight

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali, nearing 40 and the heaviest of his career, is scheduled to fight tonight against Trevor Berbick in a bout plagued by problems.

Thursday, rumors flew like the wind which whipped this island and dropped the temperature into the 60s after Berbick said he hadn't received all the money due him and "it's got to be there, or there won't be any show."

But Berbick's financial problems apparently were solved, and a source close to the boxer said Thursday night he would fight for $300,000.

At the weigh-in Thursday morning, at which he scaled 218 pounds, Berbick said he had received "some pocket money," about $100,000.

James Cornelius of Los Angeles, who is president of Sports Internationale, Ltd., of the Bahamas, insisted the fight would go on. Then, several hours later, Lionel Schaan, president of SelecTV, in charge of worldwide television sales and distribution, said, "He (Berbick) has got most of his money, and the rest will be put into place tomorrow."

"We were told yesterday (Wednesday) by new (American) investors brought in the last couple of weeks that all the fighters will be taken care of."

There was a rumor that Thomas Hearns, beaten by Sugar Ray Leonard in their welterweight title showdown, would pull out of his scheduled 10-round middleweight debut against Ernie Singletary.

"The fight is OK with us. We have a letter of credit," said Emmanuel Stewart, manager-trainer of Hearns, who said the fighter's purse was $500,000.

Also scheduled to be on the card were unbeaten heavyweight contender Greg Page, Scott LeDoux, who will fight Page, Earnie Shavers, who once fought Ali for the title, and Eddie Mustafa Muhammad, former World Boxing Association light heavyweight champion.

Ali, who will be 40 January 17, will get $1 million for his first fight since he failed to become heavyweight champion a fourth time when he was stopped after 10 rounds Oct. 2, 1980, by Larry Holmes, World Boxing Council champion.

Ali blamed an overdose of thyroid medication and the loss of too much weight for his listless performance against Holmes.

He weighed 217½ for that fight, but came in at 236¼ for what he hopes will be a fight that will earn him a title shot against Mike Weaver, the WBA champion. Ali's previous high weight was 232 for Mac Foster in 1972.

"Six months ago, I was retiring," said Ali. "I was tired of boxing. I was going to get out of it. I lied."

"I didn't lie," he added. "I changed my mind."

"Some people can see farther than others," said Ali of critics, who say he shouldn't fight again. "Some have limited vision, some not. I can see farther than most."

The fight is scheduled to start at 10:20 p.m. EST in an 11,000-seat arena at the Queen Elizabeth Sports Centre and to be televised on pay cable and subscriber television.

Schaen said the fight could reach almost five million homes in the United States. He also said, "The satellites are in place. We've tested the signal and everything is perfect."

Berbick, who has an 18-2-1 record compared to Ali's 56-4 mark, also fought Holmes and lasted 15 rounds.

Berbick indicated he felt he might have more than just one opponent.

"I'm fighting a legend and man who has been through it all, and the officials have leaned his way," said the 27-year-old native of Jamaica who lives in Nova Scotia.

"It depends on the judges. If we have judges with a conscience, I'll be okay."

It was thought that the referee would be Zack Clayton of Philadelphia and the judges Clyde Gray of Canada and Jay Edson of Florida.

The Page-LeDoux fight was set for 12 rounds, with other 10s scheduled to be Hearns-Singletary; Shavers-Jeff Sims and Mustafa Muhammad and Mike Hardin.

Lady Pirates Host Seahawks

East Carolina's Lady Pirates, riding a three-game losing streak, return home to the more friendly confines of Minges Coliseum Saturday night, as they host UNC-Wilmington.

Game time is 7:30 p.m.

The ECU women, winners of just one in four games, got that lone victory in their only home contest, against Appalachian State, and that didn't come easy. East Carolina won that one, 61-58.

Since then, the Pirates have lost road games to N.C. State, 62-57, to Villanova, 72-59, and to New Hampshire, 65-61. The latter two losses came at Monclair State's Dail Classic.

Wilmington comes into the game with a 3-2 record, having beaten N.C. A&T, 68-61, in its last outing. Earlier the Lady Seahawks beat Shaw, 92-54, and Baptist, 80-46, before losing two straight, to Pembroke State, 69-67, and to Campbell, 105-69.

"Wilmington is a very good team. They had a great recruiting year last year, and they return five veteran players," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said.

"This is definitely an important game," she continued. "We are concerned about going into the Christmas holidays with a 2-3 record."

"Wilmington always gives us a good game. We have to be cautious about them getting a big lead early. We have to jump out right at the beginning. We haven't done this, and we need to. It gets us in a hole."

Currently, Wilmington is starting Sherri Crumpler, a 6-0 sophomore at one forward, with Jill Amos, a 5-8 sophomore that the other. Gwen Austin, a 6-3 freshman, has played at center. The guards are 5-8 sophomore Sharon McMillan, and 5-7 Vertha Dixon, a former Ayden-Grifton High School player who is 5-7.

Austin had been the leading scorer going into the A&T game with a 17.3 average, while Amos was hitting 16.8, McMillan 15.5 and Crumpler, 11.0. Crumpler was the leading rebounder with 11.0 a game, while Austin was getting 9.8.

Against A&T, Amos and reserve Sheila Patterson, a 5-9 forward, led the scoring with 14 points each, while Crumpler had ten points and 13 rebounds.

East Carolina leads the series with the Seahawks, 4-0, having won last year, 96-65.

The three straight losses by ECU are the longest under Andruzzi. The last time the Lady Pirates lost as many was back in 1976-77 when Catherine Bolton's 6-16 team dropped the first eight games of the season.

Mary Denkler leads the Pirate scoring with a 19.8 average, after scoring 49 points in the Dail Classic, where she was named to the All-Tournament team. She also leads the team in rebounding with a 7.3 average.

In rebounding, Denkler has moved to sixth place on the career list at 394, 15 more than Kathy Riley.

The game is ECU's final home game in December. The Lady Pirates return to action on Dec. 29 participating in the Miami (Fla.) Jamboree, facing Northwestern. ECU returns home next on January 10, hosting Virginia.

The North Carolina AIAW stats, through games of December 7, list Denkler as the state's number one scorer with a 19.8 average. Denkler stands ninth in field goal percentage at 52.3, first in free throw percentage at 91.7, and sixth in rebounding at 7.3.

Lorraine Foster is seventh in scoring with an 11.3 average.

Sam Jones is ninth in scoring at 11.0, first in assists with 6.0 and eighth in free throw percentage at 80.0.

Lillion Barnes stands ninth in rebounding with a 5.3 average.

Year Makes Difference For Jets And Browns

By The Associated Press

What a difference a year makes. In 1980, when the New York Jets visited Cleveland, they were just playing out the string of a disastrous season while the Browns were battling for the Central Division title in the American Conference.

On Saturday, when the Jets visit Cleveland, the roles will be reversed. The Jets will be trying to catch Miami and Buffalo in the AFC East while the Browns will be chalking up just one more game in a lost season.

Saturday's other National Football League game is Minnesota at Detroit. On Sunday it's Cincinnati at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia at Dallas, San Diego at Tampa Bay, Houston at San Francisco, Baltimore at Washington, Buffalo at New England, Green Bay at New Orleans, the New York Giants at St. Louis, Miami at Kansas City, Chicago at Oakland and Seattle at Denver. Monday night's game is Atlanta at Los Angeles.

When the Jets and Browns met a year ago, Cleveland was 9-4, the Jets 3-10. Now the Browns are 4-9 and the Jets 8-5-1 ... but the Jets have never beaten the Browns in their six meetings.

"I'm sure (Cleveland Coach) Sam Rutigliano will have the Browns ready," Jets Coach Walt Michaels said.

And Rutigliano said, "We're a team that wants to show we can win against a playoff-type team. We have no opportunity for the playoffs and most of our players are not used to playing under that circumstance ... We need to get back into the habit of winning ... We don't intend to have another season like this one."

"What we can't allow to happen in these last two weeks of the season is anything counterproductive to putting the pieces together for a strong 1982, Rutigliano added. "This organization hasn't lost confidence in our ability to produce a winner. I don't see people looking for life rafts. We'll be back soon."

Independence Sees Biggest Crowd Ever

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Independence Bowl officials say they expect the biggest attendance in the six-year history of the event Saturday when the potent offense of Texas A&M tests the rugged defense of Oklahoma State.

It's the first Independence Bowl since the tie-up with the Southland Conference was dissolved after last season.

Bowl officials said they passed the 40,000 mark in ticket sales at midweek and expected 45,000 or more at the 50,000-seat State Fair Stadium by kickoff 7 p.m. CST.

The bowl record attendance was 42,600 set last year when Southern Mississippi edged Southland Conference champion McNeese State in the fifth annual event.

Each team is guaranteed $200,000, but Independence Bowl officials are hoping a bigger gate will enable them to raise the payoff to $250,000 per team.

For the second year, the game will be carried by the Mizlou Television Network.

Texas A&M, 6-5, represents the Southwest Conference. Oklahoma State, 7-4, is one of five teams from the Big 8 playing in postseason games.

"I don't ever remember a conference sending over half of its teams to a bowl," said Pat Quinn, sports information director at Oklahoma State.

"We may be a year premature getting into a bowl," he said. "We only have two seniors in the top 22 on offense, and both of them are on the second unit."

Oklahoma State's defense is anchored by 6-foot-4, 250-pound junior nose guard Gary Lewis, one of four Oklahoma State defensive players to be named All-Big 8.

Linebacker Ricky Young, a senior, is a three-time All-Big 8 selection. Junior linebacker Mike Green and senior strong safety Pete DiClementi were chosen for the first time this season.

Texas A&M fields two of Louisiana's biggest recruiting disappointments of recent years — halfback Johnny Hector of New Iberia and defensive back Billy Cannon Jr., son of the LSU Heisman Trophy winner of the 1958 national championship season. Billy Cannon Sr. is now a Baton Rouge dentist.

Each occasioned statewide headlines when they spurned home-state schools to sign with Texas A&M.

Hector, a junior tailback, is the second-leading rusher for the Aggies with 727 yards and seven touchdowns on 13 carries.

Cannon is the leading kick returner for A&M. He has returned 29 punts for 109 yards and eight kickoffs for 172 yards this season.

Hector shares carries with fullback Ernest Jackson, also a junior, who has rushed for 887 yards and four touchdowns on 153 carries.

Aggie quarterback Gary Kubiak completed 111 of 209 passes with 13 interceptions for 1,808 yards this season and also ran the ball 119 times for 178 yards.

Well Guarded

Lady Wolfpack Rips Deacons

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Freshman Candy Lucas scored 22 points to spark No. 9-ranked North Carolina State to an 85-53 victory over Wake Forest Thursday night in women's college basketball action.

Lucas, playing point guard after being moved from the forward post, scored 11 points in each half and connected on 6 of 8 from the floor and all 10 free throw attempts. Another freshman, Linda "Hawkeye" Page, scored 12 points and sophomore Claudia Kreicker led all rebounders with 10.

State, now 6-1, built a 48-27 halftime lead and was never threatened despite playing without the services of 6-foot-2 center Paula Nicholson, the team's season-long leading scorer.

Nicholson injured her knee earlier against Duke and 6-7 Ronda Falkena was reactivated from her red-shirt status. Falkena responded with 9 points and 3 blocked shots in 14 minutes.

Wake Forest, which fell to 5-4, was led by Barbara Buchanan with 12 points and Keeva Jackson with 10.

Grifton Edges Past Savannah

GRIFTON — Leslie Moore scored 19 points to lead Grifton past Savannah, 30-25, Thursday afternoon in a junior high basketball game.

Grifton, now 1-0, plays host to Bethel Monday.

Berry Sparking Vol's Attack

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — There was James Berry. There was Terry Daniels. There was Glenn Ford. And there was Dennis Mayhan.

Four years ago, they were four of the best high school running backs in the nation. They all signed with the University of Tennessee and expectations were high in Knoxville that a Southeastern Conference title — at the very least — wasn't far off.

It hasn't worked out that way. Mayhan never made it to Tennessee. Ford transferred after a couple of years. Daniels played sparingly for three years and is listed as a second-string cornerback for Sunday's Garden State Bowl clash against Wisconsin. Only We're back for one more try at getting them right. The panel of experts go for the bowl games, with Vickie Spivey showing her heels to the rest of us.

Our lone female picker is making points for women's liberation by holding onto the lead as we go to the wire. And she has a good chance of holding on for the victory — her first.

The current standings find Vickie posting a 103-39 record, while our guests are second with a 102-40 mark. This writer and Tom Baines are tied for third with 101-41 records, just two back. Rick Scoppe comes in fifth with a 96-44 record, while Joe Jenkins is in his usual position — the rear — with an 84-58 record.

We'll let you know the outcome following the end of the bowl season.

As far as the final count went with the guests, North Pitt's B.T. Chappell won out over the area's other new football coaches during the final four weeks with a 9-3 record. Conley's Gerald Garner was 8-3, while Rose's Ron Vincent was 8-4 and Farmville Central's Gilbert Carroll was 7-5.

Sonny McLawhorn, former part-time sports staffer, now a Greenville attorney, returns as our guest picker for the bowls. His 10-2 mark was the best individual effort. City manager Ed Wyatt also was 10-2, but admitted he had his son's help.

Opening the bowl slate is the Independence Bowl, where Texas A&M (6-5) and Oklahoma State (7-4) meet. There, the panel goes with the Aggies, 4-2.

Next up is the Garden State, where Wisconsin (7-4) meets Tennessee (7-4). There, the panel likes by a similar 4-2 count.

The Holiday bowl pits Brigham Young (10-2 — yes, 10-2, they play Hawaii and get an extra game) against Washington State (8-2-1).

Brigham Young is the solid choice here, 5-1.

The California and Tangerine bowls are both played the same day. The former pits San Jose State (9-2) against Toledo (8-3 — one of those losses to ECU). The choice here is San Jose, 4-2. In the latter, Southern Mississippi (9-1-1) takes on Missouri (7-4), and the Golden Eagles draw 5-1 support from the panel.

The day after Christmas, Houston (7-3-1) takes on Oklahoma (6-4-1) in the Sun Bowl. There, we like Oklahoma, giving them the first 6-0 ballot.

Next up is the Gator Bowl, where the Tar Heels of North Carolina (9-2) take on Lou Holtz' Arkansas Razorbacks (8-3). Holtz has a way of winning when he isn't supposed to, but the panel sticks with the Tar Heels, 5-1.

The Liberty Bowl will send Ohio State (8-3) against Navy (7-3-1). There also is a 5-1 vote, this one going to the Buckeyes.

Three games highlight New Year's Eve — the Bluebonnet, the Hall of Fame and the Peach. In the Bluebonnet, UCLA (7-3-1) and Ron Butler of ex-Rose High School fame, go against Michigan (8-3). There, we like the Wolverines, 4-2. In the Hall of Fame, it's Mississippi State (7-4) against Kansas (8-3). There, the pick is Mississippi State, 5-1. And rounding out that day's play, the Peach sends West Virginia (8-3) against Florida (7-4). The panel there picks Florida, 4-2.

There are five on New Year's Day, rounding out the activity. In the Cotton Bowl, Texas (9-1-1) faces Alabama (9-1-1). The record's over for Bear now, so the Tide should be relaxed. And the panel picks 'Bama, 4-2. Southern California (9-2) takes on Penn State (9-2) in the Fiesta Bowl. There, the Trojans and Marcus Allen rate a 6-0 ballot.

In the Orange Bowl, Nebraska (9-2) takes on Clemson (11-0) and the Tigers have the national championship at stake. The panel rates this one a toss-up, three going each way.

Finally, there are the Rose and Sugar bowls. Washington (9-2) meets Iowa (8-3) in the Rose, and we again don't find a clear favorite, each gathering three votes. The Sugar, with Georgia (10-1) taking on Pittsburgh (10-1) finds the Bulldogs getting a 5-1 nod.

Thom Brown Didn't Expect To Be Playing Again After Transferring

By Mark Brand
Special To The Reflector
East Carolina University forward Thom Brown thought he had given up basketball for good. No more of those three- and four-hour days of running, lifting weights, working on individual drills and pick-up games at night. Since the fifth grade, he had dedicated himself to the game.

But now he is back on the hardwood, dedicating himself to ECU and head basketball coach Dave Odom.

At age 21, Brown thought he had seen it all. He had walked in the footsteps of his father and brothers before him. And large footsteps they were, for Brown's father had played baseball at Dartmouth and his older brother played baseball and basketball at the same Ivy League school. Another brother played basketball at Bates College. His brothers range in height from 6-4 to 6-8. Thom was 6-6, leaving no doubt in anyone's mind as to what sport he would choose.

The East Greenwich, R.I., native was a typical high school basketball player with all the trimmings. He led the East Greenwich Avengers with a 25-points per game average as a senior (good for third in the state) and was responsible in part for leading his team to all-state championship honors. Brown was also afforded all-division, all-state and tournament MVP during his senior year. Like clockwork, the scholarship offers came rolling in.

"I wanted to go to Holy Cross," said Brown, "but I applied too late and didn't get accepted. My father had gone to a prep school and he talked me into that."

Brown packed his bags and his basketball and headed for the Worcester Academy, a Maine prep school boasting a basketball-rich tradition. Academically and athletically, the work was more rigorous than high school. It was closer to college work. There were 14 players on the Academy team and Brown led them in scoring that first year with a 22-point medium. Worcester won the New England Prep School championship and every player on the squad was recruited and consequently attended school on a basketball scholarship.

"During my junior high school years my mother died of cancer," Brown said. "During my senior year my father and I lived alone. I wanted to go into forestry so I chose Maine over all the Ivy League schools and New Hampshire and Johns Hopkins."

While at the University of Maine, Brown became disgruntled with the coach and the administration, but it was not the usual player-not-getting-playing-time situation. Brown was disappointed in Maine's failure to fully commit to big-time Division I basketball. The Black Bears had only two coaches and a gym that held a mere 2,000 fans. Five players transferred from the school in two years.

"After playing that sophomore year, I was going to hang it up," admits Brown. "We had played down here (Greenville) and I liked the school and I wanted to get away in a new environment. I had no intention of playing again."

Brown contacted coach Odom in reference to housing at East Carolina, not to basketball. Odom secured Brown a room with no strings attached.

"I happened to go over to the gym one day and played a pick-up game with some of the team members," said Brown. "I was doing it for the exercise, but I became more and more involved. I talked to the coach and by the spring he offered me a scholarship."

For the physical education major with a future career in physical therapy, the scholarship represented a re-birth, a second chance.

"Then, at last year's basketball banquet," he said, "they elected me tri-captain and I hadn't even played a minute on the team. That was the icing on the cake."

Brown, a lover of jazz music who listens for relaxation before and after basketball games, admits that he will never jump over anybody or run past anyone. But he does consider himself a jack of all trades.

"I'm a good shooter and a good passer," he said. "After sitting out and watching a year I can be objective on the floor. I hope I can bring some solidity and consistency to the team."

Brown attributes this ability to stabilize an opponent's offensive game-plan to his development as a child and his discipline learned while playing basketball.

"Being the last kid in the family I learned from the mistakes of other," says Brown. "Being so structured and disciplined in my upbringing and in basketball I have learned to apply the same sort of concepts."

Brown's discipline is also reflected in his choices of favorite professional basketball stars Dave DeBusschere and Bill Bradley.

"DeBusschere was so big, but not exceptionally fast," Brown said. "He played a heady, intellectual game as did Bradley. They had an excellent grasp of the fundamentals, like being able to shoot with both hands. And now DeBusschere is out of the game and successful."

In everything Brown has attempted he has experienced success. But there is one discipline which Brown would like to attempt.

"I like to ride my bike," Brown said. "On weekends, I ride 10-20 miles. I want to ride to Wilmington one day. But my biggest goal is to compete in a triathlon, the race where you swim, ride a bike and run. I'm going to do that before I'm through."

Templeton, Smith May Change Uniforms After 'Partial Trade'

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — Two of baseball's best shortstops — Garry Templeton of St. Louis and Ozzie Smith of San Diego — may be changing uniforms in the aftermath of a puzzling "partial trade" completed at the winter meetings.

The Cardinals and Padres made a 1-for-1 swap, with pitcher Steve Mura moving to St. Louis for outfielder Sixto Lezcano. But the intriguing part of Thursday's trade is that there is a mysterious "player to be named later" on each side.

Those players are expected to be the controversial Templeton and Smith.

St. Louis General Manager Whitey Herzog said, "It's a partial trade. The rest will be made in three days, one month, two months or three months."

In another major action Thursday, the Boston Red Sox re-signed free agent second baseman Jerry Remy to a five-year contract estimated at $2.8 million. The Sox have an option on a sixth year.

Meanwhile, free agent pitcher Ron Guidry appeared ready to sign with his old team, the New York Yankees.

After a 2 hour, 55 minute negotiating session with Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, attorney John Schneider said he was close to agreement on a contract for Guidry.

"Ron and the New York Yankees are close to reaching agreement," Schneider said early today.

Schneider said he telephoned Guidry and his wife, Bonnie, in Lafayette, La., and explained the details of the Yankees' offer.

"They were asleep and I gave them an opportunity to digest it and talk about it. It's up to Ron. By tomorrow morning (today) we'll have accepted or rejected the Yankees' offer."

Schneider said if Guidry accepts the contract it will not be signed until next week in New York. He said the negotiations were in the spirit of compromise.

"I feel real good about the proposal," Schneider said. "Right now all discussions with other clubs are suspended. We made tremendous progress with the New York Yankees." Schneider said the best way to describe the offer was that it was very lucrative.

Schneider and Steinbrenner finished their talks about 2:10 a.m. today.

Guidry, 31, was seeking a five-year contract for $7.5 million. He played out his option after four full seasons with New York in which he posted an 87-34 record with a 2.73 ERA. He won the Cy Young Award in 1978.

Guidry was selected by 17 teams in the re-entry draft, plus the Yankees. Schneider said there were about a dozen teams still in the bidding for Guidry's services.

It appears, however, that Steinbrenner and the Yankees will reach an agreement.

Earlier, outfielder Tom Paciorek, second-best hitter in the American League at .326, turned down a four-year offer by the Seattle Mariners. With incentives it could have totaled $1.1 million.

In other business, the National League approved the sale by the Carpenter family of the Philadelphia Phillies for $30.175 million to a group headed by Bill Giles, the club's executive vice president.

Also on the administrative side, both leagues met separately and jointly, and the major result was an American League pronouncement that it would like to go with three divisions in 1983. This would mean an extra tier of playoffs.

The AL urged the National League to give the three-division setup serious consideration. The NL needs a unanimous vote to approve and at least two teams are reported to disapprove the idea.

There appeared to be several reasons for the delay on the reported Templeton-for-Smith portion of the transaction.

It was learned that the Padres want to examine Templeton, who spent several weeks in a psychiatric hospital last summer after making an obscene gesture to the fans.

Also, the contracts of both Templeton and Smith would have to be renegotiated. If these technicalities cannot be worked out to the satisfaction of both clubs, lesser players could finalize the trade.

Templeton is entering the third year of a six-year, $4.4 million contract, while Smith earns in the $300,000 area.

Lezcano, 28, acquired from Milwaukee last year, hit .266 in 72 games last season. Mura, 26, was 5-14 with a 4.27 ERA at San Diego and is 17-27 in his three-year major league career.

The signing of Remy climaxed more than six months of negotiations during which the infielder declared free agency.

"I'm very excited ... and pleased to be with the Red Sox for probably the rest of my career," said Remy. "It's a two way type of deal that's good for both myself and the ball club."

Valkyries Run In New League

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — The fast break is alive and running at D.H. Conley and Coach Joy James hopes it stays that way. D.H. Conley, 11-10 overall last season, has raced to a 4-0 mark going into tonight's game against Ayden-Grifton and much of the Valkyries' success is the result of their running game.

"We're real quick this year and we're getting a lot of points off the fast break," James said. "I'd say we've scored at least 20 points a game off our break."

"We're going to run the ball this year," James said. "We're going to run the fast break. I've got the type of girls in the starting lineup that can do it."

Leading Conley on the fast break are guards Darlene Cannon, a 5-3 junior, and Irish Barnhill, a 5-4 junior. Cannon started last season while Barnhill was a reserve.

At center is 5-10 sophomore Karen Barrett, who was a reserve last season. Barrett and Barnhill lead Conley in scoring this season. Both are averaging around 12 points a game.

Starting at the forwards are Helena Barnhill, a 5-7 senior, and Mechio Kornegay, a 5-7 sophomore. Barnhill started last season. Kornegay was a reserve. A year ago Conley relied on Jackie Hansley to carry much of the scoring load and Brenda Green to control the boards. Both, along with guard Tammy Streeter, have graduated. With Hansley and Green gone, the Valkyries are no longer relying on one or two players to shoulder the scoring and rebounding load. "In three of our four games so far we've had three and four girls in double figures," James said. "We're not depending on one person to score this year."

Going into this season, James was perhaps most concerned about her lack of experienced depth. Five of the Valkyries eight reserves are freshmen.

"I knew I could depend on the starters, but I didn't know about the young girls on the bench," James said. "But they've come on strong."

Conley's top reserve is guard Cheryl Thompson, a 5-2 junior. Thompson is one of three juniors James has on the bench. The other two are 5-7 forward Jackie Daniels and 5-3 guard Patricia Hanson.

Other reserves — all freshmen — are center Lisa Mills (5-10), forward Debbie Patrick (5-7) and guards Angela Smith (5-5), Venessa Marro (5-4) and Terri Spencer (5-4).

Conley finished tied for fourth a year ago in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

This year, however, because of conference realignment, Conley, along with North Lenoir, moved to the Coastal Conference — a move that James sees as an advantage.

"The teams around here know what to expect from us, but they (the Coastal Conference teams) don't," James said.

Another plus, according to James, is that the CC is not as strong overall as the ECC, what with state-champion Southwest Edgecombe again picked as the team to beat in the ECC.

James picks North Lenoir and West Carteret to be among the leaders in the Coastal Conference. In doing so, however, she does not rule out the possibility of the Valkyries winning the league title.

"I'd say we'll definitely be in the top three," James said. "And I wouldn't count us out of the running (for the title). We could possibly take it if we can continue to improve, cut down on our turnovers and have better shot selection."

Berry...

two of the Class of 1982's four years have been winning ones. That leaves Berry, a two-time Mississippi High School Back of the Year. The 5-foot-10, 185-pound senior from Natchez has been the Vols' top rusher the last two seasons, but his numbers — 543 yards in 1980, 500 this season — are far from staggering.

"Things could have been a whole lot better," Berry said Thursday.

Since returning to the lineup following a foot injury that sidelined him for several weeks, Berry has been outstanding. He rushed for 69 yards on 11 carries against Memphis State, 92 yards and two touchdowns against Wichita State and 91 yards and two TDs against Mississippi (winning Offensive Player of the Week awards in those two contests) and closed out Tennessee's 7-4 regular season with 102 yards against Vanderbilt.

Berry has become a sturdy, dependable runner who usually gets the ball in short, goal-to-go situations. Stardom, the could-have-beens have eluded him.

"I've had my share of injuries," Berry said. "My freshman year I saw spot duty and started one game. My sophomore year I played fullback and I started just about every game. Last year I switched between fullback and tailback and this year I've been strictly a tailback."

"I've had mostly little nagging injuries — a shoulder, a thigh bruise, this year's foot injury. But nothing bothers me right now. That's the great thing about coming back at the end. People always remember how you do in the latter stages of your season and career. I can keep this up and end it on a happy note."

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

"SING UNTO THE LORD!"

THE BOOK OF PSALMS RECORDS THE ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY HYMNS WHICH WERE SUNG IN THE TEMPLE IN JERUSALEM. THE MEN WHO SANG THEM WERE ALL LEVITES, AS WERE THE PRIESTS....

PRIMARILY, THE CHORISTERS ARE LISTED AS SONS AND DESCENDANTS OF ASAPH, HEMAN, AND JEDUTHUN, CHARGED WITH THE RESPONSIBILITY OF CONDUCTING THE MUSIC AND SINGING DURING THE SERVICES HELD IN THE TEMPLE. HARPS, PSALTERIES, AND CYMBALS WERE THE INSTRUMENTS USED TO ACCOMPANY THE SINGERS AND, ALONG WITH HYMNS OF PRAISE, PRAYERS OF THANKSGIVING, AND PLEAS FOR DIVINE HELP AND FORGIVENESS, IT WAS EXPECTED THAT THE CHORISTERS WOULD ALSO PROPHECY IN SONG WHENEVER SUCH A NEED WAS DEEMED NECESSARY!

started with only two diamonds. It was also apparent that East was not going to contribute anything toward the defense, so West had to look for the setting trick in his own hand. Despite all the strictures against conceding a ruff and sluff, West continued with a third diamond.

Declarer could not afford to ruff in dummy for that would have promoted a second trump trick for the defenders. But it proved to be no better to ruff in his hand for that reduced his trump length to that of West. When declarer led a trump, West grabbed the ace and continued with his last diamond. Declarer was again forced to ruff in his hand, and trump control had now passed to the defense. Eventually, West scored his long trump for a one-trick set.

On this hand it was easy for West to work out the winning defense—he was looking at the long trumps. However, the same defense would have been appropriate had West held a singleton trump. He should then place his partner with the trump length and defend in the same way in an attempt to promote his partner's trump holding.

When a defender holds long trumps, it is usually a sound tactic to force declarer to ruff rather than strive for defensive ruffs. Look at this hand.

Both North and South had difficult bids to make. Since North was a passed hand, we prefer a two club response to one no trump, but we can find no good alternative to South's jump to three spades. North correctly raised to the spade game with his singleton honor.

West cashed his ace king of diamonds, and from the fall of the cards it was obvious that declarer had also

Television Retrospective On Vietnam

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Does America need another Vietnam documentary? Before you say no, consider that Saturday night's "Bittersweet Memories: A Vietnam Reunion" on CBS Reports is a different kind of Vietnam retrospective: a made-for-TV event, with 31 members of "Charlie Company" gathered together by CBS recently for a three-day reunion in Marathon, Fla. These aren't the typical anti- and pro-military forces reminiscing about the war, with psychologists and sociologists following behind, telling us what America has wrought.

That's one point in its favor, one reason to watch a program at 10 p.m. EST on Saturday, television's most popular graveyard shift. Another reason is that "Bittersweet Memories" is anchored by Bill Moyers, an articulate and insightful reporter in his first documentary since moving from PBS to CBS last month.

Most Vietnam recountings are in the order of "Frank, A Vietnam Veteran" on PBS last month, which dealt with a soldier who came home in body, but not entirely in soul. Although dramatic and compelling, this may have been a skewed look because Frank was not the typical returning veteran, yet he was news by most definitions, including Moyers': "News is the exception to the pattern," he said.

And because we've been conditioned that way, "Bittersweet Memories" becomes more interesting, ironically, because it's the exception to the exception, dealing largely with the silent majority from Vietnam, men who locked up their war memories and went on with life as usual over here.

"Every time we see something on the news, we're killing somebody, we're running over and taking hostages, we're dealing in drugs," said Gerry Dickman, one of the vets. "Hey, man, all the rest of us here, we don't deal in drugs, we don't go around killing people every day."

"We're ordinary people, have an ordinary job, pay ordinary taxes, and we do our ordinary work every day."

That isn't to say that these men were unaffected by their ordeals. They were, and Moyers' gentle, sensitive questioning allows many of them to release emotions and memories they couldn't or wouldn't offer before. Besides, nobody asked. Until Newsweek, which had a comprehensive cover story this week on Vietnam veterans, tracked down 80 members of "Charlie Company" and profiled them, their careers and their recollections. In the first collaboration between a TV network and a news magazine, CBS invited 31 of Newsweek's subjects for a televised reunion.

It was a sentimental, moving occasion, well captured by CBS' cameras and microphones. One scene was particularly striking: one veteran confronted Richard Rogers, a captain then and now an army colonel, for causing needless killing because he commanded an attack, despite being advised not to by Vietnamese scouts.

Col. Rogers, not one of the boys and still looking and sounding like the leader, took the heat and calmly explained his reasoning. The man, having finally gotten the complaint off his chest, shook Rogers' hand. Time does heal some wounds.

Mike Fetterolf, his long locks untouched by a barber since leaving Vietnam, appeared the most tormented by the experience. Life on the edge in Vietnam had him experimenting with the fringe and the fast lane over here. He's living a communal-type existence in Montana, still trying to make sense of Vietnam.

"All these guys I'm gonna see for the first time in 13 years. I have no communication with them," Fetterolf said. "You didn't want to think of them as friends when you were there. They could leave ... quickly."

Fetterolf is given the most air time; even this unconventional documentary knows conventional news when it sees it. It just goes a lot further.

Issuing Old Beatle Track

LOS ANGELES (AP) — EMI Records in London will release a Beatles track entitled "Leave My Kitten Alone" in either 1982 or 1983, EMI spokesman Brian Southall said.

The song, in which the late John Lennon sings lead vocals, is one of 12 unreleased Beatle tunes tucked away in vaults in England, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported Thursday.

Ken Townsend, a spokesman for Abbey Road Studios in London, said there were about 10 such songs at the studio where the Beatles worked from 1962 until Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr dissolved the group in the early 1970s, the newspaper said.

EMI has "Kitten" and one other song, "How Do You Do It," a Mitch Murray tune which the British group Gerry and the Pacemakers made into a hit in the mid-1960s, Townsend said.

He described "Kitten" as "probably the best" of the unreleased material. Brought to public attention by a British disc jockey, EMI planned to release it for Christmas 1980.

Those plans were scrapped after Lennon was murdered in New York City in December 1980. An EMI spokesman said the firm didn't want to appear to be cashing in on a tragedy.

Youths Charged In Theft

FARMVILLE — Five youths have been charged with breaking and entering and larceny at Farmville Central High School Saturday night. Two of them also were charged with breaking and entering at the Farmville Bakery the same evening.
Charged with breaking and entering at and larceny from the school are Johnny May, 16, Johnny Baines, 16, and James Streeter, 16, all of Farmville, and two juveniles whose names are withheld. The arrests were made by the sheriff's department because the school is outside the town limits of Farmville, but the youths were picked up and held by the Farmville police.
May and Baines were charged with a breaking and entering at the bakery.
Police said soft drinks and snack food was taken from the concession stand at the school gymnasium and that 10 bags of chocolate-covered peanuts and a sheet of cookies were taken at the bakery. The west side door of the bakery was broken into, Capt. W.G. Barber said.
He said the boys were

Life As It's Lived

The Bedtime Ordeal Is Marked By Variations

By GAIL MICHAELS
There's something to be said for the terrible 2s. At 19 months Zachary is just beginning to hit them. Conventional baby toys and games are no longer sufficient to amuse him. He has to invent his own diversions, like climbing onto the kitchen counter and pouring a gallon of milk into his lap or methodically pulling yards of tape from each cassette in the tape deck.
He also has to protest vehemently about the constraints of his schedule. For instance, he feels that he should go to bed about three hours after the time we want him to flake out. But there's not much he can do about it. That's what's so nice about the terrible twos. All he can do is stand up in his crib and howl, "No! No! No!" Eventually, abandoned by the mother whose heart has been progressively hardened by exhaustion, he gives up and lets the sandman have his way.

Meg also fights going to bed, but she fights with a weapon not available to the average toddler. She wages war with subtlety.

"Read one more word," she begs at the end of story time. "Just one more little bitty word."
She knows that if she can manage to get Phillip or me interested in the next chapter, there's a good chance that bedtime will be moved back a half an hour.
The next play in Operation Delay occurs during prayer time. Whether or not we succumb to her wheedling for "one more word," we always end by saying "Now say your prayers."
"You first," she replies. "But it isn't my bedtime." "But how will I ever know how to say a good prayer if I don't have a good example?"
So the grownup prays. Then comes Meg's prayer. She begins with "Now I Lay Me," follows with "The Lord's Prayer," then, depending upon how tired she is, finishes with a rambling commentary on life.
This rarely marks the end of the negotiation process. "Stay with me," she begs.

"Lie down beside me till I fall asleep, or I might have scary pictures come before my eyes that will keep me awake all night."
I'm leaving out the glasses of water, the rash of trips to the bathroom, the complaints about the sufficiency of the nightlight, and the sudden dry, hacking cough because these aren't unfailingly included. They only occur singly or in combination two or three nights out of three.
By the time we make it through this routine, Phillip and I are usually so worn out that it's sometime between the weather and the sports before we can muster enough energy to get ready for bed ourselves.
"Thank goodness Zachary's so nice about going to bed," I told Phillip one night last week as I crept into the living room and collapsed upon the sofa. "I don't think I could take this ordeal more than once a night."
Just then we heard a thud. Seconds later a pacifier came sailing through the door and Zachary peeped in after it.

Phillip looked at me and sighed. "I think we're in for big trouble."

My Kingdom For A Woman

Thirty-five years ago today Edward VIII of England announced to the British people that he could no longer "discharge my duties as King ... without the help and support of the woman I love." The woman he loved was a twice-divorced American, Mrs. Wallis Simpson. But public sentiment made marriage to her impossible as long as he remained king. So he renounced the throne — becoming only the third ruler in English history to abdicate. Although his reign lasted less than a year — the shortest of any English monarch in nearly 500 years, his marriage proved more enduring. The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were married 35 years until his death in 1972.

SOMETIMES THE SELLER'S MORTGAGE CAN HELP YOU BUY A HOME.

Most VA and FHA loans are assumable at the original interest rate. Other types of mortgages also may be assumable at interest rates which are lower than current market rates.

Some lenders are now offering preferred or discount rate plans that allow you to assume an existing mortgage at an interest rate higher than the original rate but still lower than the current market rate.

These are some of the homes that are available on a loan assumption. The information indicated is approximate and can change at any time. With a loan assumption, now may be the best time to buy a home!
