Agree Study Partitioning Middle School

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A motion to proceed with a study on the feasibility of installing inner walls to close the open classroom spaces at Greenville Middle School was approved Monday night by a margin of six in favor of, one against.

At the school board meeting, a joint information-action one held for the month of December, member Mrs. Terry Shank cast the single dissenting vote. "I hope the board realizes the impact of this action," Mrs. Shank commented in discussions of the proposal. "Closing in the classrooms at the Middle School will put an end to the team teaching concept in our schools." She pointed out that Middle School was originally designed specifically as a pod type school to provide one school in Greenville using the open classroom-team teaching concept.

Mrs. Shank also asked that more time be taken to consider the proposed closing in project before taking final action; and questioned whether installation of walls without insulation would actually help in cutting down noise.

The work on the first of four pods, if it is decided that funds available would justify proceeding with the project, could conceivably begin during the Christmas holidays, which created a sense of urgency in taking approval action at Monday's meeting.

Middle School principal John Carstarphen presented technical plans for the proposed installation of walls, using a scale model of a pod to demonstrate how walls would be placed. In his presentation, Carstarphen recommended that walls go all the way to the ceilings.

On that point, Bob Stewart, Director of Buildings and Grounds, said it was his understanding that plans were to install eight foot high walls, not walls that would go all the way to the ceiling. "That arrangement will restrict the air flow," Stewart commented. "There will be no return air flow, and it will be harder to heat. The air supply is in the ceiling, and there's no way to circulate air with such walls installed unless you re-do the duct work, and that's an expensive, major operation."

The noise factor at Middle School, with its pods of open classrooms, has been a bone of contention since the school opened. Earlier, baffles had been installed, but these are acknowledged to be ineffective.

"This noise factor is the only problem we have at the school," Carstarphen said. He added that the combination of lines of metal cabinets that reflect noise, the cross ventilation that carries noise, and the pattern of movement occasioned by the arrangement of pods, all created an atmosphere of noise conducting that cannot be overcome short of installing walls to change the character of the school's inner arrangement.

Strikes, Sit-Ins, Appeal Mark Polish Resistance

By The Associated Press

Strikes, sit-ins and an appeal from a Solidarity branch for major foreign support in resisting Poland's martial law government were reported today. The Kremlin accused the United States of "overt interference" in Polish affairs.

The Polish and Soviet governments said major factories and transport were operating normally throughout the country. Normal communications with Poland remained cut and it was difficult to confirm the situation in the Warsaw Pact nation.

But the British Broadcasting Corp. said 7,000 workers struck a Warsaw steel factory for a second day. Other unconfirmed reports, from travelers, said students occupied a university building in Warsaw and workers occupied the Lenin Shipyard in Gdansk.

A crewman aboard a Baltic ferry smuggled out a proclamation reportedly made by the Solidarity branch in Szczecin, a Polish port near the East German border, which appealed to foreign countries for "massive support and moral help" in fighting the martial law government.

The proclamation, dated Monday, called on "all foreign governments and people" to show "solidarity with Solidarity" and its resistance to the state of emergency.

It accused Poland's ruling military council of "manipulating with fear hundreds of thousands of Polish workers and patriots."

The appeal demanded the end to martial law, the release of all those arrested and the restoration of "all labor and democratic rights the nation has won since August 1980," when Solidarity was founded.

The Associated Press also received a copy of the proclamation from a Polish exile organization based in Copenhagen, which said the Polish-language version was telephoned from Ystad, Sweden, where the ferry docked.

It implored the outside world not to "sit idly watching how they try to strangle the germ of a budding democracy in the heart of Europe."

"Be with us in our hour of darkness," the proclamation said.

In Moscow, the official Tass news agency charged the United States interfered in Poland's internal affairs by threatening economic and diplomatic sanctions if political reforms were rolled back.

Tass said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. made declarations about martial law in Poland "which can be assessed only as an attempt of the U.S. administration to impose on (Poland) its own, in fact, imperialist terms for resolving the conflict."

Tass said Haig had demanded a "free implementation in Poland of political experiments" which the Soviet news agency said were "directed...at overthrowing the existing socialist system."

Tass interpreted Haig's statements as "nothing but overt interference into the home affairs of that country."

Tass said in an earlier dispatch that Polish authorities broke up a strike at a steel mill in southern Katowice, and that the "provocateurs will be tried under the criminal code in conformity with the martial law decree."

Poland's ambassadors in Paris and at the European security conference in Madrid said Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was negotiating with Polish authorities near Warsaw and that his influence could ease the situation, indicating the regime wanted him to urge unionists not to strike.

Builder's Offer Is Approved By Redevelopers

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

An offer by a local builder to purchase five parcels in the Southside area from the Redevelopment Commission as sites for single family dwellings received conditional approval Monday night from the board.

Commissioners gave conditional endorsement to the purchase offer of Joe Bowen of East Carolina Builders regarding the lots located on Griffin, Harris and Howell Streets in the western section of Southside.

Bowen, explained executive director Joe Laney, received notification from the Department of Housing and Urban Development that the builder could submit an application for eight Section 235 lower interest housing units. Bowen, however, had to indicate to HUD proposed sites for the allotted units, which would be built through FHA insured financing at interest rates below market levels.

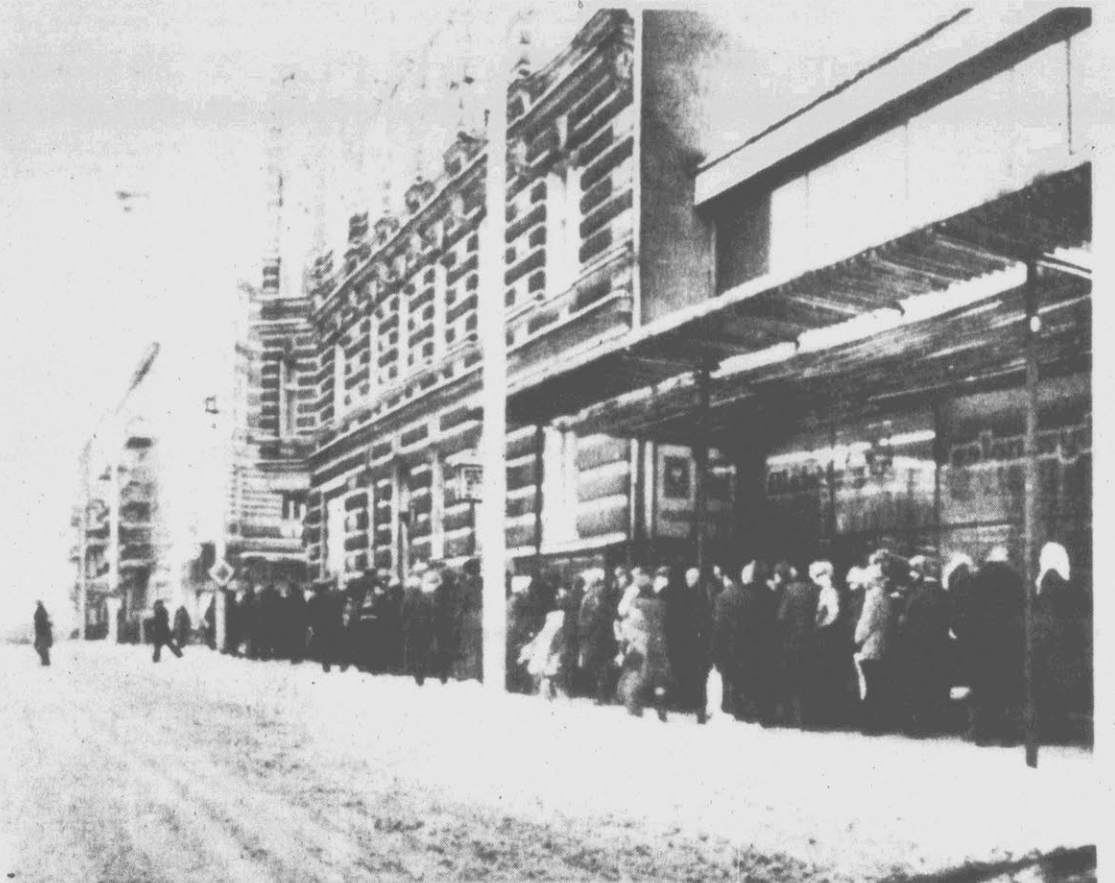

Laney said Bowen submitted his purchase offer to the Redevelopment Commission conditional upon him securing the FHA financing. The commission also stipulated as part of its approval that the property will be publicly advertised for bids.

Under the Section 235 program, a builder receives favorable interest rates for construction and is allowed to sell the units to moderate income families at reduced interest rates. HUD, which does not provide actual funding, allots the units to prospective builders, who in turn seek FHA insured financing for construction.

In another matter, commissioners endorsed a recommendation to eliminate six parcels in Southside from the roster of tracts scheduled for acquisition. The commission had voted in October to recommend that the City Council pursue condemnation proceedings on the parcels.

Laney said the real purpose of the scheduled acquisitions, involving parcels on Howell between the railroad and Ames Street, was to widen the right-of-way in order to construct a sidewalk on the south side of the street for the convenience of students at South Greenville School. The acquisition procedures moved slowly and the city built a sidewalk on the north side of Howell between Garland Street and the railroad.

Laney said last night that with the sidewalk already in on a section of the north side, it would be feasible to eliminate the parcels scheduled for acquisition. Only one severance would be needed in order to complete a section of the sidewalk on the south side from Garland to Ames and the sidewalk would then be available on the north side of Howell from the railroad to Garland.

Judge Denounces Pair In Bid-Rigging Sentences

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A Wilson County Superior Court judge says two executives of Watson Electrical Construction Co. who pleaded guilty to bid rigging Monday wronged North Carolina and financial system.

"The crime was committed not only against the taxpayers of this state, but against the economic system that enabled all of you and your company to flourish," Judge David E. Reid told Watson chairman T.L. Watson Jr. and president William E. Boyette.

Reid sentenced both men to 90 days in jail and fined them $5,000 apiece. They pleaded guilty to false pretense, a felony punishable by a maximum of 10 years in prison.

The charges stemmed from bid rigging on the construction of the medical school at East Carolina University in December 1978.

Cooper Electrical Construction Co. of Greensboro and its president, J.E. Cooper, also entered guilty pleas to misdemeanor charges of unreasonable restraint of trade. Cooper received a two-year suspended sentence and was fined $5,000 in a plea bargain.

Cooper was required to institute with the company an added trust compliance program and to cooperate with the state attorney general's office in the investigation into other suspected bid-rigging cases.

The company was also fining $10,000 plus court costs and suspended from the list of bidders for state construction contracts. It also must pay civil damages resulting from the crime.

Watson Electrical also agreed to pay civil damages estimated at $1.1 million.

Attorneys William D. Etheridge of Rocky Mount and Wade M. Smith of Raleigh defended the Watson executives and the company.

As part of their agreement, Watson and Boyette were granted immunity from further prosecution but will have to testify for the state if needed.

Other construction company officials indicted on charges of bid rigging Nov. 10 entered innocent pleas Monday.

N. Carlton Tilley Jr., attorney for Bryant Electric Co. Inc. of High Point, entered innocent pleas for his client and a trial date of Jan. 4 was set. Reid gave Tilley 10 working days to file a motion in the case.

The attorney for George Saunders, vice president of Bryant, also filed a plea of innocent and trial date was set for Jan. 4.

The attorney for William H. Howell, vice president of Industrotech Constructors Inc. of Atlanta, entered an innocent plea on behalf of his client. Howell's bond of $1,000, which he paid in Georgia, was refunded and he was released after signing a promise to appear in court.

Arraignments were waived by attorneys for Richards and Associates of Carrollton, Ga., and two of its officials, president Roy Richards and electrical division manager William A. Williamson.

Ayden Officials Sworn At Monthly Meeting

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — A mayor and five commissioners took the oath of office in this Pitt County town in a ceremony last night.

Mayor Ross Persinger was sworn in for his ninth term in office. Persinger has served 17 years as top Ayden official.

Marvin "Bear" Baldree, newly-elected representative of the fourth ward, began his first term in office after being sworn in by Judge Robert Wheeler. Taking the oath along with Baldree were commissioners Carl Speight, first ward; Robert Harris, second ward; J. Elliott Dixon, third ward and J.J. Brown, fifth ward.

The ceremony preceeded the board's monthly meeting.

Baldree's first action as a commissioner was a resolution calling for the Pitt County Mental Health Board to establish a satellite health service in Ayden. The board passed the resolution and appointed Baldree and J.J. Brown to a mental health committee.

Elaine King, counselor at Ayden Middle School, appeared before the board to ask for the resolution. "I see the need among students for some type of service from the mental health board," she explained. "If they could provide us with personnel even one-half day it would help." King added that transporting students who have identifiable problems to Greenville to be counseled is a problem.

"If we had a place locally where they could receive help, many more would be able to get help," she said. "And it's not just students — we have many citizens of all ages who could benefit from locally available mental health service."

King noted that Farmville had a satellite clinic and that Bethel received service one day per week from the county health service.

The board voted to accept into the budget a $121,053 utility overcharge refund from Greenville Utilities and to use $51,000 of it to repay the remainder of a loan from Greenville Utilities. The rest will go into a contingency fund until a decision is made about how much, if any, will be refunded to the citizens of Ayden.

Baldree recommended that the remaining $70,000, along with $51,000 from next year's budget to replace the loan repayment, be fully

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every year, one of my children wants a game for Christmas where the demand exceeds the supply by about 35 5,000.

The game is touted on television, beginning in June, with the approach that if it is not under your tree on Christmas Day, you are an unfit parent and your children will grow up to steal hubcaps.

By September, your child has built up to a pitch. If he doesn't get this game, he may give up breathing for Lent. He assures you it is the only game he wants.

Now the pressure is on for you to find the game that, for the purpose of avoiding a lawsuit, I will call "Humiliation" . . . a game for the entire family, order No. 1705 5 35 4, batteries not included.

By October, every store in your area is sold out of Humiliation with no hope of getting a new order in. But the television teasers go on . . . showing a typical American family with Mom and Dad and two-and-a-half children sitting around a table playing Humiliation until they faint from joy.

Forget baking fruitcake, buying a Christmas tree, entertaining with wassail, caroling, sending out Christmas cards, or decorating the house. Every morning as soon as the alarm goes off, your feet touch the floor and you give the battle cry, "Find Humiliation today!"

By mid-November, you have driven 1800 miles in search of the game, following tips from friends that a discount house has two left in the northern part of the state, or a toy dealer has one under the counter that is damaged, but negotiable.

Several times you are tempted to get a game that is a ripoff of Humiliation, like

Stars In Eyes, Love In Heart

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a Barry Manilow concert, and I haven't been able to get him out of my mind since. Abby, I am perfectly in tune with all the feelings Barry expresses! All my life I've had the feeling that God put me on earth to love and fulfill the needs of someone like Barry Manilow, someone who has everything in the world but happens to be very lonely. Please don't get me wrong. It's not the money, fame or glamour I'm looking for. I just want to devote my life to someone who wants more than anything in the world to be loved for himself, but has never found that person.

If Barry is involved already, I would like the chance to make Burt Reynolds happy. In spite of his macho confident manner, I sense that Burt is also a very lonely person who needs love.

I am not a fat, ugly old woman who has never had a date. I am 22, attractive and have no trouble getting dates. I just need help to do what the Lord wants me to do.

Can you help me meet Barry Manilow or Burt Reynolds? NEEDS AN INTRODUCTION

DEAR NEEDS: Superstars such as Barry Manilow and Burt Reynolds work very hard, and their schedules are so demanding they have very little time to become lonely. However, if the good Lord wants you to meet either one of these gentlemen, trust him to provide the introduction.

DEAR ABBY: I am particularly upset when I arrive early at a movie to select a seat where I want it, and then have two or three people come in and sit near me and start talking or giggling or commenting on the movie. Even "stage whispers" can spoil the show for me.

I realize that the sooner I speak up, the better, but I keep putting it off, hoping it won't happen again. But it usually does.

How do you ask people to be quiet? And what do you say if they say, "If I want to talk, I'll talk"? Or worse yet, "If you don't like it — move?"

ATLANTA MOVIE LOVER

DEAR LOVER: Politely ask your noisy neighbors to please be quiet. And if you encounter a rude response, complain to the manager.

DEAR ABBY: I have no sympathy for the 52-year-old woman who married a 60-year-old man (second time around) and found that he was impotent.

I am 75 and my husband is 77. When he was 30, due to a bungled operation, he lost all sexual desire. Of course we were both very unhappy about it, but it wasn't the end of our marriage and it didn't diminish our love for each other.

Over the years we have experienced an intimacy that would not be believed by this present generation, which thinks all there is to marriage is sex. When we cuddle up in each other's arms on a cold winter night, we achieve a more lasting closeness than those couples who make love for three minutes, then leave each other to go to sleep in separate beds.

Training In Rifle's Use By Hinckley

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley, Jr., the man accused of shooting President Reagan, took rifle training last December a few days after spending time in Washington at the same time Reagan was here preparing to take office, federal prosecutors say.

Hinckley repeated his rifle training in early 1981 and the ear protectors he used at the rifle target range near Denver were taken from his room in his parents' home the day the president was shot, they added.

Those details were revealed Monday in a memorandum filed in U.S. District Court by U.S. Attorney Charles F. C. Ruff and Assistant U.S. Attorney Roger M. Adelman.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker asked for the memorandum, which outlines evidence the prosecutors plan to present against Hinckley.

Hinckley has said in legal documents that he is not contesting that he shot Reagan and three other men March 30, but that he is innocent by reason of insanity.

The prosecution memorandum said Hinckley was in Washington in early December while Reagan, as president-elect, lived at Blair House across the street from the White House.

Just two months earlier, the memorandum said, Hinckley was in Dayton, Ohio and Nashville, Tenn., on days when President Carter was campaigning in those cities. While in Nashville, Hinckley was arrested for possessing three handguns.

Adelman and Ruff said the FBI also took from Hinckley's room in his parents' home in Evergreen, Colo. "magazines and newspaper articles relating to earlier assassinations, including those of President Kennedy and Governor (George) Wallace."

The prosecutors also told Parker in the memorandum that they would not sign a proposed agreement sought by the defense that would state Hinckley committed the shootings and make it unnecessary for the government to present evidence of the crime.

The prosecutors said the defense has not offered, as part of the proposed agreement, to stipulate that it was Hinckley's intent to shoot the president.

The government has charged Hinckley with assault with intent to kill, a crime that involves intent and could bring a life sentence. Without proof of intent, Hinckley could be convicted of the lesser crime of assault with a dangerous weapon, which carries a maximum 10-year sentence. Hinckley also is charged with attempting to assassinate the president, which carries a maximum life term.

The defense has asked for a two-phase trial with separate juries. The first phase would be on the crime itself, while the second would consider whether, as a result of a mental defect, Hinckley was unable to appreciate the wrongfulness of his actions, and thereby be absolved of criminal responsibility.

Jailing Priorities Needed

The question of how effective jail is in deterring crime has been bandied about as long as there have been criminals.

In North Carolina the feeling apparently is that crooks should be locked up and that is reflected in statistics which show North Carolina has the highest rate of incarceration in the nation. U.S. Justice Department figures show the state has 256 state prison inmates per 100,000 population.

It is not that North Carolina has all that much crime. The state had 4,641 crimes per 100,000 people in 1980. It apparently is a deep rooted belief among North Carolinians that those who commit crimes should go to jail. Nor do the figures show jailing is all that much a deterrent to crime. Hoke County with a crime rate of 3,165 per 100,000 in 1979 had a jailing rate of 529 per 100,000.

Watauga with a crime rate of 3,648 per 100,000 population had an incarceration rate of only 194 per 100,000.

It is well to recognize that it is extremely expensive to keep a person in jail these days, even though certainly it is frequently necessary. As much as North Carolinians believe in packing off wrong-doers to jail, it is also likely the process will have to be selective. What is most important to society is to keep the habitual offender off the streets. No amount of jailing is going to convert this person, but we can put away those who repeatedly break the law and cause harm to law abiding citizens.

Then we must do what we can to rehabilitate first offenders and to keep young offenders away from the influence of hardened criminals.

Hold Primary On Schedule

The state's Legislative redistricting plan gets stickier as leaders name a committee to study the state's response to the Department of Justice, which has rejected the plan.

What legal steps will be taken are unknown at present, but one of the options may be postponement of the May 4 North Carolina primary.

Developing a redistricting plan which is acceptable to the Department of Justice clearly is difficult, and perhaps the state should fight Justice's decision. Surely, however, we can come up with some way to hold the primary on the planned May 4 date.

Already candidates are surfacing, hoping to build their campaigns toward the expected primary day. If the primary is moved to later in the year we will be subjected to interminable campaigning in 1982.

Let's do all we can to resolve the redistricting question and to hold the primary on the scheduled day.

THIS AFTERNOON

Four Year Terms?

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There are only four states in the nation in which members of the legislature are elected to four-year terms. In all of those states, the elections coincide either with the presidential or gubernatorial races.

If North Carolina voters next May choose to allow members of the state's General Assembly to serve four-year terms and run in off-year elections, this will be the only state in the nation with that arrangement.

What are the odds that this will occur? Very good, judging from the track record of amendments to the North Carolina Constitution which have been put to the voters in the last 12 years. Only one issue was defeated — an industrial revenue bond for industrial expansion question — and that same issue was revised, resubmitted, and endorsed.

The simple fact is that few voters care to read, study, understand and decide the often convoluted questions put forward as amendments to the constitution.

Few Care
Further, of nearly four million Tar Heels of voting age, only 2.7 million bother to register, and the last election when both governor and president were chosen, only 1.8 million voted. Two years earlier, in off-year races, only 1.1 million voted.

So in the May primary, fewer yet will go to the polls. Tradition has it that if the state's political power structure agrees on amending the constitution, who are the people to question that.

Tom Gilmore, a former state legislator and recently resigned as the number-two chief of the Department of Human Resources, thinks it is high time the people start questioning the matter of four-year terms for legislators.

BILL NOBLITT

As he points out, only Alabama, Louisiana, Maryland and Mississippi have recently adopted four-year terms. In each state, the governor has the veto power, and the elections come at a major election time; not an obscure off-year time.

When he was a legislator, Gilmore fought numerous efforts to change the terms of office. He can recall no convincing arguments in favor. The only reason usually given by the many legislators favoring the change is that it would cost less to run and be much easier than having to face the voters every two years.

Even if the voters reject the four-year terms, there is a strong likelihood that legislators will not give up. The history of the effort goes back to 1975 when political jockeying started and continued session after session.

Other Editors Say Doesn't Fit Mold

(The Morganton News Herald)

Recently we sat in after-dinner discussion over the state of the country's youth.

"Young people have no respect for authority, no regard for property, for the law, for anything but what makes them feel good," said one conversationalist.

"And it shows in their declining school work. Look at the kids coming out of high school. Look at the low SAT scores. They're just not as bright or at least not as motivated as kids were 15 or 20 years ago," said another.

To these men and to others who feel the young people of today are collectively on a downhill slide, we call attention to Mary Ann Hamby, a freshman at Western Piedmont Community College, who recently was cited as a national winner in the 4-H health program.

Mary Ann was one of eight — in the entire country to be singled out for her six years of work and service to her community and to herself through the 4-H program. She was recognized recently in Chicago at the National 4-H Congress with a $1000 scholarship.

Awards such as this don't come easily. They require a portfolio of personal study, time, dedication and initiative. Mary Ann conducted pulmonary resuscitation classes, taught people how to take blood pressure and how to aid choking victims. She worked as a nurse's assistant, arranged for 4-H to sponsor a bloodmobile, recruited members for a county 4-H child care workshop and then planned and taught programs. She researched proper nutrition for good health and gave two radio programs based on her study. And she has done volunteer hospital work and individual work with the elderly.

We are very proud of Mary Ann and of the aggressive spirit of helpfulness she has demonstrated in her community. Candidly, we believe there are many more of her ilk out there in Morganton and Burke County who are actively at work building up the world they live in as there are those too often getting attention by tearing it down.

Strength For Today

MODERN PAGANISM

It is disconcerting to face the fact that some people whom we like the best are superficial, lacking in stability, rather weak as regards to moral character. These are modern pagans. The pagans of olden days were the people who worshipped heathen gods; modern pagans worship ease and pleasure — in a different way, of course — which makes them attractive and companionable.

Because of these characteristics we excuse a great many things in them

IF ONLY SHE HAD HIS PERSUASIVE POWERS!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

The Unemployed Teens

WASHINGTON — One day a week or so ago the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced its November figures on unemployment. The next day several things happened. I went to a barber shop on Pennsylvania Avenue, hoping to get a shoeshine and a haircut, and while I was waiting on the haircut I read the morning paper. My brother columnist Carl Rowan was weeping his eyes out about teen-age unemployment. I finally got around to the classified ads — it was a long wait — and thereby hang these curmudgeonly reflections.

The reason I got only the haircut, and not the shoeshine, was that the proprietor of the shop couldn't keep a shoeshine boy/man/person. He had stopped trying to find one. Too much grief. Earlier in the year he had hired four in a row. No. 1 quit after three weeks; No. 2 lasted a month; No. 3 never showed up at all, and No. 4 had to be fired for sassing a customer. The job carried net compensation of $20 to $30 a day.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

These are the figures on unemployment among persons 16 through 19 years of age. The census finds 16 million such teen-agers in the country. Of these, 3.5 million, or 21.8 percent, are unemployed; 12.5 million have jobs. The November rate of unemployment for white teen-agers was 19.3 percent, for black teen-agers 45 percent. My brother Rowan finds the picture — especially the black picture — appalling.

Obviously the situation is unfortunate. But I persist in wondering what the difference is between the 12.5 million teen-agers who are working and the 3.5 million who are idle, and I suggest the difference lies in a single word: gumption. The 12.5 million have it and the 3.5 million don't. Whose fault is this?

On the day I couldn't get my shoes shined, the morning Post carried 33 columns of help-wanted ads. In this predominantly white-collar city, to be sure, most of the ads were for positions demanding skill and experience: legal secretaries, medical technicians, computer programmers, pastry chefs, sales managers, and the like.

But the Postal Service had opened examinations for clerks and carriers at $9.50 an hour. Carpenter's helper were being sought at $3 an hour. A garage helper's job paid $4.50 an hour, and a laundry helper could get $4.25.

The classified columns bulged with ads for nurse's aides, orderlies, waiters, waitresses, barmaids, cleaning persons, clerk-typists, bus boys, sandwich makers, custodial assistants, dishwashers, delivery truck drivers, kitchen help, go-go dancers, motel maids, handymen, janitors, messengers, clothes pressers and warehouse help. There were 34 separate ads for domestic help.

The situation in Washington is duplicated across the nation. U.S. News and World Report recently carried a piece on the problem. The state employment service in Atlanta last summer handed out 500 applications for summer jobs; only 80 were returned. In Detroit, where almost a third of all teen-agers are jobless, the owner of a fast-food franchise keeps a help-wanted sign constantly posted; his turnover is 100 percent every 90 days.

Listening In On Khadafi

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Electronic intercepts in Europe of conversations dealing with Col. Muammer Qaddafi's assassination plans are key pieces of evidence bolstering charges against the Libyan strongman by the Reagan administration.

This contradicts widely-circulated reports that U.S. intelligence was relying solely on a single, new informant for its charge that Libyan hit men have targeted President Reagan and other top U.S. officials. In fact, the electronic intercepts are also known to U.S. European allies.

A footnote: Unpublished by the Reagan administration, Libya's own intelligence agency — ostensibly running the assassination campaign — is under the virtual control of East Germany, with closest ties to the Soviet KGB.

GOP Politicking
White House chief of staff James Baker III is credited with taking over the national Republican headquarters with the appointment of political operative Rich Bond as deputy national chairman there, but the truth is that Bond was not his first choice.

Baker wanted Haley Barbour, a Yazoo City, Miss., lawyer who was John B. Connally's southern presidential campaign coordinator in 1980. Barbour, who plans to run against veteran Democratic senator John C. Stennis for reelection next year, showed no interest.

Bond, who masterminded George Bush's upset win over Ronald Reagan in the 1980 Iowa caucuses, has been serving on Bush's vice presidential staff. His selection to the vacant deputy chairmanship at the national committee was widely interpreted as another sign of the growing influence of Baker, who was chairman of the Bush presidential campaign.

Khomeini In Trouble
The early downfall of Ayatollah Khomeini as popular opinion swings against him, based partly on the endless, unpopular war with Iraq, is now privately predicted by intelligence reports from Tehran.

These reports are confirmed by Western industrialists who have maintained intimate contact with Iran's Islamic revolution ever since the fall of the shah in January 1979. Iranian political opinion moves very quickly when the mood changes, a factor in predictions that Khomeini is nearing the end of his bloody rule.

Earlier this year, a proposal by the Islamic conference for ending the Iran-Iraq war was quickly approved by Iraqi president Saddam Hussein and by all the secular leaders of Iran, including since deposed President Bani-Sadr. Only Khomeini vetoed ending what is probably the most unpopular war in Iranian history.

Harry Byrd's Surprise
Nobody was more surprised over the announcement by

Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. of Virginia that he would not seek reelection next year than the White House political operatives who spent months trying to woo him into the Republican Party.

President Reagan's men used polling information in trying to convince the veteran conservative that he could no longer be elected as an independent. Byrd switched his party label from Democrat to independent in 1967 though he has continued to sit on the Democratic side of the aisle in the Senate.

Byrd seemed so impressed by the White House polls that Reagan aides predicted he soon would cross the aisle to the Republican side. In fact, he long ago made his secret decision to leave elective politics.

Regan In China
Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan's biggest surprise on his recent trip to communist China: Not one word was said to him opposing possible U.S. sale of new F-5 jet planes to Taiwan.

Sinologists have cautioned Regan not to make too much of it. As the leading U.S. official on financial matters, they say, Regan is thought of in strictly non-military terms. Nevertheless, Chinese officials in the past have confided their intense apprehension over U.S. arms for Taiwan to all American officials, not just military specialists.

A footnote: A lesser surprise for Regan was that Chinese officials told him their greatest need for outside private investors is to finance more Chinese restaurants and tailors.

Today In History

By The Associated Press
Today is Tuesday, Dec. 15, the 349th day of 1981. There are 16 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Dec. 15, 1961, former Nazi Adolf Eichmann was sentenced to death in Jerusalem.

On this date:
In 1916, the French defeated the Germans in the World War I battle of Verdun.

In 1965, the U.S. Mariner spacecraft relayed back data about Venus as it flew past the planet.

In 1974, U.S. Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr. took over as Supreme Allied Commander in Europe.

And in 1979, the deposed Shah of Iran fled from the United States to what was called "temporary" exile in Panama.

Ten years ago: The Nixon Price Commission voted to limit increases in doctors' fees to 2½ percent and placed a 6 percent ceiling on rises in hospital charges.

Supply Or Demand Is First?

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — When you provide savings incentives do you thereby (1) enhance industrial expansion by helping to supply needed capital, or (2) impede expansion because you discourage buying and market growth?

If you think you know the answer you may be able to help your country now, because Congress and business seem to be in a growing dispute over the answer. Congress thought those tax incentives would help business. Business, however, now says that savings can undermine final demand.

Without that demand, the business leaders say, they cannot be expected to commit their billions to bigger markets. So in spite of various tax inducements, the total amount may not grow much until late in 1982.

This is but one of the problems — some may call them contradictions — that have worked themselves to the surface and are being debated anew following passage of President Reagan's combined tax and spending cuts.

As budget balance becomes more elusive, for example, more critics say a formula of tax cuts and big defense spending cannot resolve huge deficits, and that they might even insure the continuance of red ink.

Other critics comment that the quest for greater productivity and more jobs may conflict, since efficient production would seem to depend more on automation and less on human labor, especially in newer industries.

And then there is that long-standing debate: How can private sector expansion occur when the Federal Reserve actively pursues a policy of high interest rates even as the number of business failures soar?

That first named problem — Do savings incentives help or hinder expansion? — seems to have the potential for extended debate because those big commitments to industrial expansion just haven't occurred.

Congress is said to be getting angry about it too, and even in private industry there have been comments made about the faintheartedness of executives who won't commit money to a market that isn't already there.

The administration's idea was that if business expanded and customers saved, the two — seller and buyer — would meet down the road in a very suitable arrangement. That is, the seller would have the products to offer and the buyer would have the funds with which to buy them. Neat.

Business, however, has said "show me," which isn't at all like the entrepreneurial, risk-taking style of the market builders of old, such as Henry Ford and Thomas Edison. Those fellows took calculated risks.

Modern executives, though, are products of the big business schools. They consider themselves professional managers rather than tinkers, and good managers don't take risks without preparing in advance a rationale (alibi) to offer stockholders. Because of this, some critics view them as private sector bureaucrats rather than industrial leaders.

Business Week magazine

reports growing resentment about the rather slow pace of investment, saying there is "a menacing squall of impatience brewing in Congress." Industry, however, asks if it is wise to invest when so much of existing capacity is idled by recession.

Economists for the Business Council, which is made up of heads of the country's largest concerns, complain that while individual tax cuts might have spurred savings they did little "to stimulate final demand that might help to spur a larger increase in business investment."

In part because of this, they indicate, business fixed investment is expected to decline through the first quarter of next year and to rise only moderately after that, in spite of a Commerce Department survey released last week that suggests investments would rise somewhat.

The council's observations, however, might merely have restated the question: Which comes first, the products or the demand?

If you know the answer you can go to the front of the class and be the leader. Nobody else is there.

till the question is finally on the ballot in May.

How Long

The May primary opens up a strange situation for those who will run for the General Assembly. Since the four-year term question is on the same ballot, those running for office won't know whether they are seeking two years or four years as assemblymen.

Gilmore makes a compelling argument: "In the only state in the nation that does not permit the gubernatorial veto, the Legislature should be held on a short leash by the public. That leash is a two-year term....Our Legislature belongs to the people, and the people's interest should continue to be their (legislators') first order of business."

"Our election systems should be designed for the benefit of the voter, not the candidate."

Unless Gilmore finds a way to get his message across strongly, the voters next May will follow their habits of years past, punching without thought the button which makes Tar Heel lawmakers the most powerful and entrenched ones in the nation.

Kilpatrick Col. ...

Many teen-agers make first-class employees. They are bright, energetic, well-mannered, eager to learn. But thousands of teen-agers labor under the misimpression that the world owes them a living. They show up late for work; they have terrible records of absenteeism; they think they're too good for menial jobs; they won't follow instructions. A recent survey in Orange County, Calif., found that 29 percent of working high-school students gave away goods or services to their friends; 18 percent had stolen from employers or co-workers.

The fact is, as my brother Rowan is so fond of commencing his lectures, the fact is that hundreds of thousands of jobs are available to teen-agers, black and white alike. The jobs go begging because too many teen-agers who are able to work are not willing to work. If they are therefore broke and hungry, let'em starve.

No New Infant Formula Complaint

WASHINGTON (AP) — The makers of Enfamil infant formula "have no reports of any other can defects in any other size" than the 32-ounce size of the ready-to-use formula, according to a spokesman for Mead Johnson and Co.

Roland Eckels, director of public affairs for the company that manufactures Enfamil, said on Sunday the company has found no problems with any other Enfamil product.

Food and Drug Administration spokesman Wayne Pines confirmed that defects reported late last week involved only the 32-ounce size of the product's ready-to-use formula.

School Board...

To finance the project, an amount of $8,000 has been set aside to apply to the work. The board's approval motion gives Supt. Dr. Delma C. Blinson authority to proceed with the study, and possible initial work during the holidays, with work to be carried out as far as the $8,000 will go.

Four budget amendments were approved Monday night. Three of the amendments, numbers 6, 7 and 8 to the Current Expense Funds, together add $83,881 to that budget category, upping the Current Expense Funds total for the fiscal year to $2,949,600.

Budget amendment number 6 adds $27,751. This budget item comes from an $28,000 more than predicted earned in interest income from money invested. Use of this money basically goes to locally funded instructional staff, business support and other supporting services.

Budget amendment 7 is for $49,865 and is basically additional funds received for vocational education programs, including funds for handicapped training.

The last of the three Current Expense Funds budget amendments, number 8, is for $6,264 and represents additional funds received for special programs.

The fourth budget amendment approved is in the School Food Services Fund for an amount of $15,725. These are funds realized through income from sale of supplemental food items in the food service system in the city schools.

Approval was given to add an additional kindergarten teaching position at Third Street School. Supt. Blinson told the board notification had been received that the State Board of Education will not approve the board's request for exception to a class load in excess of the state maximum. Blinson explained that the additional teacher would make it possible to take in any newcomers to the kindergarten class at Third Street, and would also make it possible for the return of the two who had been transferred to another school if the parents of the two so desired.

Letters received from five North Carolina U.S. representatives reveal that all five — Walter B. Jones, James G. Martin, L. H. Fountain, Bill Hendon, and James T. Broyhill — are opposed to proposed national tuition tax credits for non-public elementary and secondary schools. The letters were in response to a board resolution setting forth its opposition to the proposed tuition tax credits.

The reply from Sen. John East shows a different stand. East notes "I firmly believe this proposal, if enacted into law, would have no negative impact on public education." East cited as a precedent the fact that "the majority of private colleges and universities, including many church-affiliated institutions, do receive such (federal) assistance in one form or another."

A position statement on electrical load management and a committee of nine to monitor policy of electrical loads were both approved by the board. The position paper takes the stand that "The Board is committed to maintain its quality programs of education and considers this financial burden (escalating electrical rates) to be a threat to this commitment. In order to lessen this threat the board... states it shall support a program of electrical load management that will promote prudent and economical practices to reduce electricity consumption and manage its use in such ways necessary to reduce costs..."

Named to the Electrical Load Management Committee are: Bob Stewart (coordinator), Francis Dorey, Harold Taylor, Paul Rasberry, Leslie Washburn, Wilson Rhodes, Dave Bumgarner, J. B. Smith, and Robbie Tugwell.

Board members concurred in the continuance of the designation of city schools as emergency shelters in the event of disasters.

Reports on two recently conducted audits reveal that in both the auditors gave the highest ratings to the areas being audited. One was an audit of Title I funds conducted by Wendell Hall, Regional Coordinator for Compensatory Education. The other was an audit of the Food Services operation conducted by Jay P. Davis, director, Food Distribution Division of the N. C. Department of Agriculture.

Board members commended Fraegar Sanders, Title I director for city schools and Linda Tingle, director of Food Services, for their outstanding work as reflected in the results of the audits.

The new Administrative Assistant for the city schools, Mrs. Kathy (Jeff) Riggs, was introduced to the board Monday night. Mrs. Riggs, a native of Black Jack now completing work on a master's degree at East Carolina University, will begin work full time after the holidays. She succeeds Mrs. Lorie Ehlebeck, who earlier submitted her resignation effective at the end of the year in order to return to school. The board commended Mrs. Ehlebeck for the outstanding work she did as administrative assistant.

Winterville Officials Sworn

By TOMMY FORREST
Reflector Staff Writer

WINTERVILLE — A new administration began its duties Monday night at the Winterville town board meeting.

Mayor E. C. Hines opened the meeting by asking the board to appoint a mayor pro tem. Alderman Bobby Crawford was appointed to the office. Mayor Hines appointed Alderman Leland Tucker to the police department, water and sewage department and housing; John Weatherington was appointed to the fire, recreation, and streets and drainage departments; and Bobby Crawford was appointed to the electric rescue and sanitation departments. Mayor Hines said he would be in charge of the cemeteries in the community.

Town Clerk Elwood Nobles and Chief of Police Edward Cox were sworn in to the offices in accordance with the town ordinance. Carlton Branch was once again approved as fire chief. Alderman John Weatherington was appointed to the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewage District board for a term through December, 1985. Mayor Hines was appointed to the Mid-East Commission board for a one-year term, and Robert Blount was appointed to the Planning and Zoning Board replacing deceased member Clyde Hines.

In other business heard by the board, Town Clerk Elwood Nobles presented two bids for painting of the older of Winterville's two water tanks. Nobles said the last time the tank was painted was in 1968 and it was beginning to rust under the bottom of the structure. The board tabled the matter until the next meeting.

Calvin Henderson, who ran as a candidate for alderman in the recent election, spoke to the board concerning the appointment of Bobby Crawford to the unexpired term of E. C. Hines. Henderson said, "I don't think you (the board) looked at the whole situation. I think a person that ran a campaign should have been chosen to fill the position."

Henderson was referring to Veronica Ward who came in second in the race for alderman November 3. John Weatherington won the seat.

Town advisor Carl Dean said the appointment of Crawford to the vacant seat was by the law and the board was in order when he was appointed. Crawford did not run for the seat due to personal reasons, but accepted the position when appointed by the board.

Town Clerk Nobles also said the leash law will be enforced, and that it was against town ordinance for a dog to run at large without a leash. Dogs caught will be carried to the Pitt County dog pound.

Town offices will be closed December 24 and 25 for Christmas holidays.

Bill Of Rights Program Is Set For Willis Bldg.

ECU News Bureau

A special "Bill of Rights Day" program in recognition of the day the United States ratified the Bill of Rights 190 years ago will be held tonight at 8 p.m. at the ECU Willis Building.

Sponsored by ECU, The League of Women Voters and the Greenville-Pitt Area Unit of the N.C. Civil Liberties Union, the program will feature an address by Judge Willis P. Whichard of Durham, an associate judge of the N.C. Court of Appeals.

A panel discussion presenting political, legal and humanitarian aspects of the Bill of Rights will also be included. The public is invited.

A graduate of the UNC School of Law, Whichard was appointed to the Court of Appeals by Governor Hunt in September of 1980. He is formerly a member of the N.C. House of Representatives and the State Senate. Whichard currently serves as chairman of the Citizens Commission on Alternatives to Incarceration.

Others participating in the Bill of Rights Day Program include Dr. Patricia Dunn, president of the League of Women Voters and a member of the ECU Department of Health, Physical Education Recreation and Safety faculty.

Rhea Markello of the League of Women Voters; Dr. Tinsley Yarbrough, chairman of the ECU Department of Political Science; Hugh Cox, a Greenville attorney and legal counsel to the Greenville Chapter of the Civil Liberties Union; and Prof. Lauretta Lewis of the ECU Department of Social Work and Correctional Services will participate in the panel discussion.

Coordinators for the Bill of Rights Day program are Dunn and Prof. William Byrd of the ECU Department of Community Health.

The original 10 amendments of the Bill of Rights were passed by Congress on Sept. 25, 1789. The Bill was ratified by the states on Dec. 15, 1791.

Partisan Judge Issued Pardon

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — Gov. Brendan Byrne has issued a pardon for the perpetrator of a "major" street crime.

The crime was by a drum major, Stephen Teager, who was slapped with two summonses by police for leading the Princeton University band down a street in celebration of the Tigers' 37-14 football victory Nov. 14 over Ivy League rival Cornell.

The Princeton police cited Teager for leaving the sidewalk and parading without a license. The parade caused a big traffic jam.

But Byrne, himself a Princeton alumnus, said Monday that Teager's only crime was "misplaced exuberance." The pardon removed the possibility of conviction at a municipal court session set for Wednesday.

The only question Byrne had for Teager was the drum major's timing.

"I can't understand why Mr. Teager's enthusiasm took so long to reveal itself," Byrne said. "Even the Princeton police would have forgiven him if he'd done it the week before" when the football team beat Yale for the first time in 15 years.

In any event, Byrne decreed, "it is impossible to have criminal intent so shortly after a Tiger victory."

REQUESTS APPROVED

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by the Winterville Ruritan Club to conduct a sidewalk and merchant solicitation Dec. 11-31 to sell fruitcakes to raise funds for community projects; and by the East Carolina University Choir to conduct a door-to-door solicitation Dec. 14-31 to raise funds for the School of Music and the choir's music tour.

More Freedom To Spend Less

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina school systems that in the past have been most aggressive about seeking federal aid will be hurt the worst by federal budget cuts, a state official says.

Joseph B. Webb, special assistant for federal relations with the state Department of Public Instruction, said systems expected to suffer most include the Winston-Salem-Forsyth, Wake County, High Point and Moore County systems.

"It's a leveling kind of thing as far as school systems go," Webb said. "School systems that have been aggressive in seeking out federal grants will get less. Those that have not been aggressive will get more."

Webb and other state officials say they are disturbed that under new federal aid guidelines they'll be getting less money for education. But they say they are pleased that the new program will give them more flexibility to use the money as they see fit.

The changes will come in July, when the administration's education block grant program goes into effect.

North Carolina's share of the funding is expected to be from $1.8 million less to $2 million more than is being provided this year under the Reagan administration's pared-down budget.

Whatever the amount, school systems will have more leeway to use remaining dollars where they are most needed, said

"I think the school people pretty well know what to expect," Webb said. "Now, they will have to write only one application (for funds) and then make some hard choices" on how to spend the money, he said.

Under the Reagan administration's plan, 28 federal programs called "categorical grants" will be replaced next year by the new federal Elementary and Secondary Education Block Grant Program.

The 28 types of categorical grants may be used only for specific programs, such as basic skills training, metric education, gifted and talented education and improved educational opportunities for disadvantaged children.

North Carolina public schools received $15 million in categorical grants in the 1980-81 school year.

Under the Reagan cuts this year, funding was trimmed to $9.8 million to carry the categorical programs through the end of the 1981-82 school year, Webb said.

Under the new block grant program beginning in the 1982-83 school year, North Carolina will get an appropriation of $8 million to $12 million, he said.

Meanwhile, the state is facing cuts of up to $23 million in all federal education aid programs during the state's 1982-83 budget biennium.

Some of the other educational programs for which the state receives federal money are child nutrition, vocational education and impact aid to systems near military bases.

Legislation creating the education block grant program was approved earlier this year, but the appropriations bill to put it into effect has been tied up in Congress.

Webb said it probably would be mid-January before state officials have full information on the block grant. A reliable figure will be up in the air until Congress acts on the appropriations bill.

Medal Given Dr. Oakley

Dr. Godfrey P. Oakley Jr., originally of Greenville, has been awarded the U.S. Public Health Service's Outstanding Service Medal.

In a justification statement, the Public Health Service reports, "Dr. Oakley has shown sustained imaginative and aggressive productivity since assuming leadership of the Birth Defects Branch, Chronic Diseases Division, Bureau of Epidemiology of the U.S. Public Health Service. He played a crucial role in developing a thorough and effective surveillance activity in the metropolitan Atlanta area, jointly managed between CDC, Emory University and Georgia State Health Department. His skill, scientific knowledge and administrative skills have been largely responsible for the continuing success of this program...for nearly 15 years."

activity devoted to studies of infant mortality, an area where understanding of causes and risk factors are poorly developed..."

Oakley is a graduate of Rose High School, Duke University and Bowman Gray School of Medicine, where he was a Reynolds Scholar. He is the son of Mrs. Carrie G. Oakley and is married to the former Mary Ann Bryant, also originally of Greenville. The couple and their three children live in Atlanta.

Big Fire Loss For Drugstore

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — A fire Sunday night caused about $200,000 damage to a drugstore in an Eden shopping center, officials said.

The fire at Mann Drugs was discovered about 11:15 p.m. All three of the city's fire departments spent about four hours trying to control the blaze.

Firemen say the blaze started in the back of the drugstore but they still are investigating the cause. No other stores were damaged in the blaze.

Study Refutes Fear U.S. Running Out Of Cropland

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new private study says that contrary to some scary headlines the United States "is in no danger of running out of food because of disappearing farmland."

Moreover, it said, the pressures to switch land from crop production to non-agricultural uses are likely to lessen in the coming years.

The study was scheduled for release today by the Population Reference Bureau, a private, non-profit educational organization located here.

Michael Brewer, an agricultural economist, is author of the report. He was research director of the National Agricultural Lands Study, an 18-month project that reported its findings last January, just before the Carter administration left office.

The NALS, as it was called, said changes in government policies are needed to curb the loss of agricultural land to urban sprawl and other non-farm purposes.

It said the United States has been losing agricultural land in this fashion at the rate of about 3 million acres a year, including 1 million acres from the nation's cropland base.

Brewer said the NALS figure "is misleading" since it does not refer solely to cropland or even farmland "as many press stories have reported. It includes land that never was and never could be used for crop production."

Three Wrecks Are Reported

An estimated $6,375 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 4 p.m. mishap on 10th Street, 500 feet west of the Rocksprings Road intersection, involving cars driven by Marsha Leah Dermott of 408 Fletcher Dorm, and Kurt Edward Sayce of 2411 East Fourth St.

Police, who charged Ms. Dermott with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, estimated damage at $1,500 to the Dermott car and $1,000 to the Sayce vehicle.

Cars driven by Verna Williams Perkins of 606 Sheppard St., and Joan Wilson Mathews of Robersonville, collided about 3:30 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial and Sylvan Drives, causing $800 damage to the Perkins car and $1,500 damage to the Mathews vehicle.

Police charged Ms. Mathews with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the incident.

Cars driven by Alexander William Ellis of Goldsboro, and Linwood Elmo Lang of 1417 Jule St., collided about 10:35 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 40 feet east of the Charles Street intersection.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,100 to the Ellis car, $450 to the Lang auto, and $25 to a highway department sign.

Awards Dinner Held By Club

The Kiwanis Club of Golden K held its annual awards dinner and ladies night Tuesday, Dec. 8, at the Masonic Temple. President Samuel C. Winchester Sr., presided.

Claude J. Goodman, chairman of the awards committee, introduced Dr. Richard C. Todd who reviewed highlights of previous administrations and awarded presidential plaques to the following past presidents: Dr. Ralph Brimley, Walter G. Garner, Dr. Charles G. DeShaw, Merrill H. Bynum and Henry C. Oglesby.

Poinsettias were presented by Edgar L. Harrington Sr., to the following guests: Mrs. Eric Brockmann, Mrs. Robert E. Laughter, Mrs. Raymond C. Smith, Mrs. Arden L. Tucker, and Mrs. Robert H. Snyder.

"It is true that the U.S. agricultural land scene is changing," he said. "This was inevitable with the 'rural renaissance' of the 1970s, escalating international demand for American grain and the drive to replace some costly imported oil with gasohol derived partly from home-grown corn."

The changes do present "particular regions and communities with problems that can be acute," he said.

"But ... these problems do not add up to a national crisis to be solved with a bumper sticker campaign to 'Save Our Farmlands,'" Brewer said.

Using 1977 statistics gathered by the Soil Conservation Service, the latest available, Brewer's report said that of 1.3 billion acres of non-federal agricultural land, the United States had 413 million acres shown as cropland, plus 127 million acres of other land with "high" or "medium" potential for conversion to crops.

Between 1967 and 1975 — the time frame used by the NALS project Brewer worked on previously — the amount of this type of land converted to "urban, built-up, transportation and water uses" was 875,000 acres per year, he said.

That rate is "likely to decline," Brewer said. But even if it doesn't, the loss of 875,000 acres a year by the year 2005 would mean that less than 4 percent of the potential U.S. cropland base of 540 million acres would be gone, he said.

The remaining land in the cropland base "would be ample to meet even the highest of current projections of domestic and international demands on American croplands in the year 2000," Brewer said.

Brewer cited several factors to support his contention that the pressures on cropland are likely to ease:

—A reduced need for housing. During the 1970s, some 4 million more people moved into rural areas than moved out of them. Rural areas may continue to gain more residents than they lose in the 1980s and 1990s, but the gain is likely to be less and the need for new housing thus reduced.

—New highways and reservoirs also are likely to preempt less agricultural land than they did in the '60s and '70s. The interstate highway system, which consumes 41 acres of land per mile of road, is virtually completed. Reservoir construction is likely to slow, with most of the better sites already utilized and "the increasing success of environmental groups" in blocking water projects.

Brewer noted that business and industry may continue to expand in rural areas, both taking over land directly and attracting newcomers who increase the pressure to convert farmland.

But this "has also helped maintain many small farms" by providing jobs to supplement the incomes of many farm families, he said.

Further, high interest rates could dampen non-farmers' eagerness to speculate in soaring farmland prices, another source of recent pressure on land. As much as one-third of the farmland sold in 1979, for example, probably went to non-farmers, Brewer said.

Exports of grain and other commodities are putting the main pressure on agricultural land, in large part because the revenue is needed to pay for the escalating costs of imported oil, he said.

But even that pressure might be eased in the future, Brewer said, if national strategies are developed to achieve or approach self-sufficiency in energy.

Competition for water, rather than land, is agriculture's main threat from energy activities, especially in the arid West where irrigation is essential for any significant crop production, he said.

Brewer said technology, policy decisions and other developments makes him feel "with unflagging optimism" that the U.S. agricultural enterprise will endure beyond the year 2000.

"If higher prices signal that suitable land for growing crops may be in short supply, U.S. agriculture will pursue new ways of production that conserve land and increase land yields," he said.

"Systematic investment in research to increase agricultural productivity as an integral part of national agricultural policy may be the best way to ensure that future demands on U.S. agriculture will be met."

Inmates Are Toy-makers

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Inmates at the Western Correctional Center wanted a way to pay society back for their crimes, and they think they've found it.

They have made 500 wooden toys to brighten Christmas for needy children in Burke County.

Little wooden race cars and buses, elephants, cars and rocking horses were all made in the prison shop.

"I liked making the toys. I feel I'm paying back," said one young inmate who is serving a sentence for armed robbery.

"It's good to do something for somebody who doesn't have a lot of Christmas anyway. It's not a bad thing to do," a 17-year-old prisoner said.

The project, organized by the Explorer Scout unit at the 16-story prison for youthful offenders, began last January. Since then, various Western Correctional Center vocational school students have participated in the effort, said Harlan Murray, director of the vocational school.

Several Burke County industries and clubs donated money and material for the project, but much of the funding came from the Explorer Scout unit, which sponsored several fund-raising events.

Most of the work was done in assembly line fashion, said supervisor George Allison.

Gail Barron, a Western Correctional Center teacher, drew the design for the toys and the residents did all the work, she said.

Some of the prisoners delivered the wooden toys to the Christmas Cheer headquarters Wednesday for distribution.

As the toys were being delivered, a 16-year-old participant said, "Now we can say we are giving the community back something."

U.S. Not Told About Annexation Of Golan Heights

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Convalescing Prime Minister Menachem Begin pushed legislation annexing the Golan Heights through the Israeli parliament in less than nine hours.

Syria, which lost the strategic plateau to Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War, accused Israel of a "declaration of war" and vowed to defend its territories. The United States and Egypt said the annexation violated the Camp David peace treaty.

Syria requested a meeting of the U.N. Security Council. The legislation was introduced Monday in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, without advance notice. Begin, in a wheelchair recovering from a broken hip joint, piloted it through the necessary three votes and committee consideration without delay.

The prime minister told the Knesset he had given the U.S. government no warning of his move because he knew it would object.

"Why put the Americans in a difficult position?" he asked. "To invite their 'no' and then not take it into account would not be politically wise."

The Golan Heights is a bleak, volcanic plateau, 458 square miles in size, with a population of about 15,000 Arabs and several thousand Jews who have built farm settlements there since 1967.

It overlooks Israeli agricultural settlements in Northern Galilee, and Israel conquered it in the 1967 war because Syrian batteries there had been shelling the settlements.

The new law extends Israeli "law, jurisdiction and administration" over the territory, the same procedure used to annex Arab East Jerusalem after it was captured in 1967. The votes in the Knesset were 60-17 on first reading and 63-21 on the two final readings, after three hours of committee consideration.

The bill was supported by Begin's conservative Likud Bloc and its allies in the coalition government as well as by some members of the opposition Labor Party. It was opposed by a scattering of splinter parties and other Laborites, but a number of Laborites were absent because of the lack of advance notice.

Israel used the same method in 1967 to annex Arab East Jerusalem, which it captured from Jordan in the same war.

The annexation seemed aimed at appeasing Israeli nationalists who have mounted a massive campaign to block Israel's withdrawal next April from the Sinai Peninsula in compliance with its 1979 peace treaty with Egypt.

It also reflected the Begin government's anger over Syria's support for Palestinian guerrillas based in Lebanon and its deployment of anti-aircraft missiles there that limit Israeli reconnaissance flights.

Foreign Ministry Director General David Kimche said the annexation came "after a lengthy period of increasing frustration at seeing the growing extremism of Syria."

"If we cannot neutralize the Golan Heights by a peace treaty then we have to do it this way," he told reporters after the vote. "We have seen again and again that the chances of Syria joining the peace process are zero."

In Damascus, President Hafez Assad's government issued a statement calling the annexation "a declaration of war on Syria" and vowed, "The Syrian government will defend its territories and its national interests."

"The Syrian government as a first step has demanded an urgent meeting of the Security Council to ... take a resolution canceling the Israeli measures and applying sanctions on the Israeli enemy in accordance with the U.N. Charter and its resolutions," it said.

In Cairo, news of the annexation caused the first confrontation between Israel and Egypt's new President Hosni Mubarak. The Egyptian government called the annexation "a direct blow to Middle East peace efforts" and "a clear violation of the framework of peace in the Middle East" signed by Egypt and Israel in 1979.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes echoed the Egyptian view with a statement expressing the Reagan administration's "deep concern over — and opposition to — any effort to change the status of the Golan unilaterally."

He told reporters in Washington the annexation contradicted U.N. Resolutions 242 and 338 "on which the Camp David accords and all peace negotiations since 1967 have been based."

Israel eight months ago changed a citizenship law to enable Golan inhabitants to drop Syrian nationality and become Israeli citizens. The move increased Arab nationalism, and Druse religious leaders threatened to excommunicate any Golan residents who took advantage of Israel's offer.

Analysts Suspect Begin Saw Opportunity, Then Seized It

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Menachem Begin may have annexed Syria's Golan Heights at this time because the United States and the Soviet Union are preoccupied with the Polish crisis, some analysts say.

The Golan Heights issue was on the back burner in the Knesset, Israel's parliament, until Prime Minister Menachem Begin, fresh out of the hospital with a broken hip joint, rushed the annexation bill through Monday in less than nine hours. Its hasty adoption, which he directed from a wheelchair, astonished the nation and angered its peace partners, Egypt and the United States.

It also enraged Soviet-backed Syria, Israel's harshest enemy in the Middle East.

Israel Radio quoted government officials as having two central concerns:

—That the U.N. Security Council will approve Syria's request for economic and political sanctions against Israel in the U.N. Security Council and the United States will not block it with a veto.

—That Syria, which called the annexation "a declaration of war," will take military reprisals, perhaps by restricting the U.N. peacekeeping forces on the heights who patrol the cease-fire signed by Syria and Israel in 1974.

An Israel Television commentator said Begin may have chosen this particular moment to annex the territory because the Soviet Union is preoccupied with the Polish crisis and would be hard-pressed to give any substantial military support to Syria.

A knowledgeable Israeli source said Begin also took into consideration that the West also is occupied with Poland so the Reagan administration has less time and resources to devote to censuring or pressuring Israel.

David Kimche, director-general of the Foreign Ministry, denied that interpretation. He said the government acted after "a lengthy period of increasing frustration at seeing the growing extremism of Syria," culminating in Syrian President Hafez Assad's boycott of the Arab summit in Morocco last month.

Moroccan officials said Syria's absence was the main reason the summit failed to consider a Saudi Arabian peace proposal that implied recognition of Israel. But Israel also rejected the Saudi plan because it called for a Palestinian state with East Jerusalem as the capital.

Some commentators said Begin timed the annexation to precede Israel's promised withdrawal from the Egyptian Sinai peninsula next April in accordance with the Camp David peace treaty.

They explained that he gains two advantages: he mollifies Israeli nationalists who have threatened to block the Sinai withdrawal physically, and he minimizes the risk of Egyptian reprisals because the Egyptian government wouldn't want to jeopardize the return of the last of its territory.

The Egyptian government denounced the annexation as a "direct blow to the peace efforts" launched by the late President Anwar Sadat's visit to Jerusalem four years ago. An Egyptian delegation broke off a session of the U.S.-Egyptian-Israeli talks on Palestinian autonomy for the occupied Gaza Strip and West Bank.

If Cairo breaks off the talks on Palestinian autonomy or halts the normalization of relations between Egypt and Israel, Begin would probably threaten to call off the Sinai withdrawal and the whole Egyptian-Israeli peace process would be threatened.

The annexation is unlikely to affect any chances for peace with Syria, however, for they already were minimal at best or nonexistent.

"If we cannot neutralize the Golan Heights by a peace treaty then we have to do it this way," Kimche told reporters. "We have seen again and again that the chances of Syria joining the peace process are next to zero."

Public opinion polls show the majority of Israeli's favor annexing the Golan, where 6,000 Jewish settlers have joined the 15,000 Druse residents since Israel captured the volcanic plateau in 1967.

Guerrilla Radio Station Seized

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Government troops have captured the clandestine radio transmitter leftist guerrillas were using to broadcast anti-government propaganda across Central America, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman, who asked anonymity, said Monday the transmitter was captured Saturday evening at a guerrilla base called Joya del Volcancillo, about 70 miles northeast of the capital in Morazan province. The army launched an anti-guerrilla offensive there eight days ago.

A communique issued Monday night in San Jose, Costa Rica, by the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front denied that the radio had been captured.

In other developments, Foreign Minister Fidel Chavez Mena said Monday that a United Nations vote citing human rights violations in El Salvador did not represent a setback for his government.

"In the first place, this was not a majority decision," he said, since only 65 of the 157 nations who are members of the organization voted for it. Regional organizations are better equipped to know a nation's problems first-hand, and of Latin American countries, only Granada, Mexico, Nicaragua and Panama voted for the resolution, Chavez Mena said.

"In this military operation that is now under way, the clandestine radio station Radio Venceremos (We Shall Overcome) was captured," the military spokesman said. Observers said loss of the radio, which transmitted for two hours daily on a short-wave frequency that could be monitored from Mexico to Costa Rica, could prove a severe blow to the leftists' ability to counteract the government's propaganda.

The radio station had been off the air for more than a week. Military officials said the guerrillas might be having trouble getting cassettes to the transmitter because of heavy fighting in the area.

The current sweep is the sixth major offensive of the year in the rugged area near the Honduran border. Military sources said at least five soldiers and 32 guerrillas have been killed in the fighting so far.

It was not clear how long the transmitter had been at its present location. Earlier this year, Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia said the government had filmed proof the transmitter was located in Nicaragua and that only a repeater was located in El Salvador.

Human rights groups estimate more than 30,000 people have died in the civil war between government troops and leftist guerrillas since the ruling civilian-military junta took power in Oct. 1979.

Woman Finally Is Given 2nd Chance

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A Charlotte woman who defended herself from manslaughter charges by claiming that her husband had beaten her is getting a second chance after being paroled.

Gloria Gilliam, 24, of Charlotte, was convicted in the 1979 stabbing of her estranged first husband, Raymond Phillips.

Sentenced to eight years in Women's Prison, Mrs. Gilliam worked her way through the institution's ranks until a parole board released her last week.

"My biggest fear in prison was that one of the other girls would set me up after I got real close to getting out. A lot of times they'll do that if they see you trying to better yourself," she said.

Several organizations for battered women supported Mrs. Gilliam's claim that she killed her husband in self defense, thinking her husband was going to beat her again. She said she had to be hospitalized after some of the beatings.

At the trial last year, a Mecklenburg County jury found that Mrs. Gilliam used excessive force in the killing and convicted her of voluntary manslaughter.

Mrs. Gilliam made use of her time in prison to get her high school diploma. Later, she "graduated" to the work-release program and worked at a fast-food restaurant.

"The worst part, the very worst part, was the loss of my freedom ... and now it's real scary to have it back again," she said. "I feel like my verdict was a fair one but all I can tell women in situations like mine is to get out of it, don't stick around till it gets so bad you have to kill somebody to get out of it. Prison just isn't a place for anybody to be."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Gilliam is renewing family ties with her new husband, Tom, whom she married during her trial, and her two children.

"It (freedom) still feels strange," she added. "It's going to be a while before I feel really normal again."

Polish Parents Are Concerned

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Kamienski of Gastonia say the recent crackdown in Poland has led them to worry about their daughter and son-in-law, who live about two hours from Warsaw.

Their daughter, Paula, and her husband, Boguslaw Gadowski, are living in Koluczki. They were married Sept. 5, 1980, in Gastonia, but went to Poland to live.

Because the borders are closed, Mrs. Kamienski said she doesn't expect to hear from her daughter or for her daughter to be able to hear from her.

Paula and Boguslaw commute to the university at Krakow, where she had hoped to get her masters degree in Polish literature within the next three years.

Those hopes have changed now, Mrs. Kamienski said. The new hope is to get herself and her husband out of Poland to safety in the United States.

The change in thinking began last summer when the food shortages began there, the mother said.

"My daughter is a U.S. citizen, so there is no problem there," she said. "But for my son-in-law, there could be some red tape."

Mrs. Kamienski said she and her husband already have begun proceedings on the U.S. side to get the couple out of Poland, but said she thought it would be June before the two could leave.

"My son-in-law is a very cautious person," she said. "He refused to join Solidarity (the Polish labor union) or the Communist Party," she said. "He said last summer that he was about to emigrate and he wouldn't join anything that might keep him from leaving Poland or entering the U.S. He said he was going to remain neutral."

A Rainy Day For Area

Nearly an inch of rain fell in Pitt County yesterday and early today, the largest amount of precipitation for the area this month.

Greenville Utilities' water plant measured .79 inch of rain in the 24 hour period ending at 8 a.m. today. Temperatures, although balmy last night, returned to normal today. After a high yesterday of 60 degrees Fahrenheit, the mercury dipped to a chilly 43 degrees F. by 8 a.m. today.

The level of the Tar River, despite the rainfall, fell slightly in 24 hours, according to the GUC water plant. The river measured 3.2 feet on the National Weather Service Gauge yesterday and 3.0 feet today. Both readings were made at 8 a.m.

The low temperature Monday, recorded at midnight, was 23 degrees F.

refunded to residents. "They are the ones that paid the overcharges," he noted, "and they should be the ones reimbursed. The money belongs to them."

Town manager Don Russell pointed out that a refund of this type is often not financially feasible because of the large administrative costs.

"What you end up with," added Mayor Ross Persinger, "is some residents getting 25 cent and $2 checks while businesses, because of their high electrical usage, get big checks." He said many persons with small checks did not cash them after the last utility refund and this money must be paid to the state.

No action was taken by the board concerning a refund.

In other business, the board:

- Re-elected J.J. Brown mayor pro-tem.
- Re-appointed J. Elliott Dixon to a three-year term on the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewerage District Board.
- Appointed Gay Blocker, Fred Fuller and Dan Sellers to the Recreation Commission.
- Named Mark Suggs safety director for the town.
- Appointed Carl Speight and Robert Harris to the drainage committee.
- An appointment to the Mid-East Commission was deferred.

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow and snow flurries are expected in the forecast period until Wednesday morning from the Southwest and upper Mississippi to the northern Plains.

Snow and snow flurries are forecast for the Northeast. Most areas will be colder. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

Much of North Carolina has had a good soaking rain during the past 24 hours. Rain will be diminishing from the west today but the east was expected to have rain well into today.

Weak areas of low pressure have been moving northeast across the southeastern states and up through eastern North Carolina. It looks as if one more area of low pressure will track northeast along the coast today and deepen off the Virginia coast by this evening. This will set the stage for a turn to rather windy conditions developing over the west later today and across the state tonight and Wednesday. This will also mean cold temperatures will be with us for the next several days.

Rainfall amounts for the past 24 hours have averaged one half inch to one inch in most areas, with some of the heavy rain over the south coast dumping up to around two inches.

A warm front moved inland through much of the coastal plain during last evening allowing temperatures to reach the low and mid-60s over eastern North Carolina Monday and into the night. In sharp contrast, the Piedmont remained in the colder air with light north and northeast winds.

As a result, temperatures remained fairly uniformly in the mid-to upper 30s Monday and overnight. The mountains ranged from the upper 30s to some mid-40s over the far southwest Monday.

Recreational weather outlook: Rain will gradually diminish over the mountains this morning and east through the Piedmont later this morning. Rain will continue at times over the east today. Again temperatures will show a wide range today, from the 30s over most of the western half to the 50s and even some low 60s along the coast this morning.

Temperatures will begin a downward trend across the mountains later today and some snow flurries will develop across the northern mountains later today and continue into Wednesday. A few flurries are also possible over the remainder of the mountains and possibly into the northern foothills and northwest Piedmont tonight.

Temperatures will drop into the 20s west to 30s near the coast by Wednesday morning. Partly cloudy and windy conditions will continue on Wednesday along with temperatures mostly in the 40s except for some 30s in the northern mountains. It looks as though clouds will be on the increase again by Wednesday night as a fast moving area of low pressure will swing from the Rockies to the lower Mississippi valley region by late Wednesday.

Terrorists From Iran

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A gang of "terrorists" under arrest here told interrogators they had been trained in Iran for anti-Bahraini subversion, a Bahraini newspaper said today.

The report in Akhbar al Khaleej quoted Interior Ministry officials as saying the suspects, arrested over the past 10 days, gave "detailed confessions" about training they received in Iran on arms similar to those produced by Israel.

The group had planned to attack government installations in this pro-Western Arab country and assassinate officials in Bahrain and other Persian Gulf nations, the newspaper said. It gave no further details.

The Gulf News Agency reported that five armed Iranian men delivered a statement to the Bahrain Embassy in Tehran Monday night demanding the release of the Iranians held in Bahrain. It said the petitioners claimed responsibility for the planned subversion.

The Bahrain Embassy immediately asked Iranian authorities to tighten security around the embassy compound, the agency said.

Abdullah Bishara of Kuwait, secretary-general of the Gulf Cooperation Council, issued a statement on its behalf pledging to support Bahrain against outside aggression.

The GCC includes Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Oman and Bahrain in an economic cooperation and combined defense pact.

Rams End Falcon Playoff Bid

Too Close For Comfort

NFL Umpire Gordon Wells, right, gets a little too close to the play as Los Angeles Rams defenders gang tackle Atlanta Falcons' running back William Andrews (31) during second half action Monday night in

Anaheim. In on the play are Jim Youngblood (53), Nolan Cromwell (21) and others unidentifiable. The Rams beat the Falcons, 21-16, to knock them out of the playoff picture. (AP Laserphoto)

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams were already looking ahead to next season. Now it seems the Atlanta Falcons are, too.

"Realistically, we're going to be at home at Christmas time just like the Rams," Atlanta Coach Leeman Bennett said Monday after Los Angeles dampened the Falcons' playoff hopes with a 21-16 victory.

"It looks like we finally ran out of chances," said Falcon quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who was held in check by the Los Angeles defense. "Obviously I'm disappointed, but we were simply outplayed in this game."

Atlanta, 7-8, still has a slim shot at the lone remaining National Football Conference wild card berth. If the Falcons whip Cincinnati in next Sunday's regular-season finale at Atlanta, they could possibly finish as one of six NFC teams with 8-8 records. The NFL's complex tie-breaking system would then determine the wild-card berth.

Atlanta's loss assured Philadelphia of the other NFC wild card spot.

Wendell Tyler ran for two touchdowns, the last to bring the Rams from behind with 7:17 remaining in the game.

Trailing 16-14, Los Angeles went 80 yards to Tyler's 7-yard scoring run with the help of two pass-interference calls, against the Falcons' Bobby Butler and Kenny Johnson. The penalties, which occurred two plays apart, moved the ball all the way from the Rams' 20 to the Atlanta 7.

Despite those two mistakes and an interception off Bartkowski that ended the final Falcons' hope at the Ram 7-yard line with two minutes remaining, Bennett said an earlier play made the difference.

"I felt the key was the interception by Nolan Cromwell when it looked like we were going to score," he said. "That was a swing of 10 or 14 points."

With Atlanta at the Rams' 11 late in the second quarter, Cromwell picked off a Bartkowski throw three yards deep in the end zone and raced 94 yards to set up a 3-yard touchdown run by Mike Guman. That gave Los Angeles a 14-10 halftime advantage.

Tyler's other touchdown came on a 6-yard run earlier in the second quarter.

Lynn Cain gave Atlanta a 7-0 first-quarter lead on a 2-yard touchdown burst. The other Atlanta scoring came on field goals of 45, 25 and 22 yards by Mick Luckhurst, the last giving the Falcons a 16-14 edge with 8:40 left in the game.

Atlanta's William Andrews

rushed for 115 yards on 23 carries, running his career total to a club record 3,569 yards. Bartkowski connected on just 14 of 36 passes for 160 yards.

Tyler rushed for 79 yards on 22 carries, putting him over the 1,000-yard mark for the campaign. Los Angeles quarterback Dan Pastorini, starting in place of the injured Pat Haden, completed 11 of 22 throws for 111 yards and, like Bartkowski, was intercepted twice.

Clemson Rolls By West Chester

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Vincent Hamilton scored 15 points in pacing Clemson to a 96-56 triumph over West Chester State in college basketball Monday night as the Tigers extended their winning streak to six straight games.

After jumping to an 18-point lead at halftime, 34-16, Clemson claimed its first 30-point lead three minutes into the second half with a 14-2 blitz as Hamilton got six of his points.

Kevin Givens, who led the Rams in scoring with 16 points, fouled out with 10:37 left to play. His team, now 1-6 not counting a protested game Friday night, also lost Edward Evans late in the game on fouls as West Chester was charged with 31 personal fouls.

The Tigers took advantage of the fouls, hitting 18 in a row before a miss and 32 of 39 from the line on the night.

Behind Hamilton in Clemson scoring were Fred Gilliam with 13, Clarke Bynum with 12, Marc Campbell with 11 and Chris Dadds and Joe Ward with 10 each.

Johnson Wins Lifting Title

Jeff Johnson, East Carolina's strength coach, participated the Mid-American Weight Lifting Championships, at Chicago, Ill., placing first in the 181-pound class this past weekend.

The coach also has announced that the ECU Strength Complex will host the National Collegiate Strength Championships on February 27.

Johnson snatched 303 pounds and clean and jerked 370 for a total of 676 pounds, both of them personal records for him.

As a result of his first place finish, Johnson moved into fourth place in the standings nationwide for his weight class.

"The training that I've been teaching our football players, is the training that's helped me to do this," Johnson said. "Our players have maintained a very good level of strength. Just about all the third teamers and below are making improvements, and that is unusual for the guys who don't play much. Even some of the starters have made improvement (since the end of the season). Three weeks after the season is over, most have gained a higher level than they had during the season."

Some examples of this are Doug Ford, who now hang cleans 330 pounds, Hal Stephens, 323, and Earnest Byner, 333, coming off a knee injury.

"A number of players are approaching 500 pounds on the backsquat. They'll be using the same program in January, but will be using new explosiveness techniques, such as the power snatch and the power jerk," Johnson said. "These lifts are to make the program more exciting for them. They really like to go down and lift weights now."

But of the 10 Rose wins, six came on pins, one on a forfeit, and one on a superior decision.

The Rampants return to action on Thursday, hosting Kinston.

Reports Guidry To Remain Yank

MIAMI (AP) — Ron Guidry has chosen to remain in pinstripes for the next five years. The Miami Herald reported today.

According to The Herald, the New York Yankees pitching ace turned free agent has accepted a contract offer from his former American League baseball club, reportedly for five years at nearly $1 million a year.

The Yankees have called a news conference for this afternoon in New York. There was speculation that Guidry's signing would be formally announced then. But his agent, John Schneider was quoted as saying a contract would be signed next week.

Schneider said Yankees' owner George Steinbrenner made the offer to the 1978 Cy Young award winner last week at the winter baseball meetings, the newspaper reported.

The agent would not disclose the terms of the pact, but The Herald quoted a source familiar with the negotiations as saying it was "the second-best contract ever negotiated by a ball player."

Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield, who signed a 10-year deal worth $22 million, is thought to have the richest per-year contract in the major leagues.

The newspaper said four years on Guidry's five-year deal were guaranteed, and his annual salary will be $1 million.

After four years, New York has the option of retaining Guidry for another year or releasing him, in which case the club would have to fulfill a buy-out clause in his contract. The Herald quoted the unnamed source as saying.

Guidry, 37-34 over the last five years, had been pursued by eight of the 17 other ball teams that had drafted him as a free agent: Baltimore, Toronto, Kansas City, Oakland, St. Louis, Houston, Cincinnati and the New York Mets.

Schneider met with representatives of each club during baseball's winter meetings in Hollywood, Fla., last week. The initial offers for Guidry were in the $700,000 to $750,000 range for each of the three years, The Herald said.

Schneider said the star left-hander, who wanted $7.5 million over five years, was not excited about the contract offer when he first learned of it Friday.

Second Thoughts Seem To Have Been Untrue

From Wire Reports

Dean Smith had second thoughts when his North Carolina Tar Heels were made the preseason favorite in The Associated Press college basketball poll a few weeks ago. It appears he doesn't now.

"We played outstanding defense in the first half," Smith said Saturday after North Carolina raised its record to 4-0 with a whopping 75-39 victory over South Florida. "If we continue to play with that kind of intensity on defense, we'll be a great team."

The AP's nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters Monday gave the Tar Heels 42 of 58 first-place votes and 1,137 points as North Carolina maintained its stranglehold on the No. 1 spot in the poll.

North Carolina takes its No. 1 ranking on the road for the first time this year when it meets Rutgers, a team that surprised UCLA earlier this year, on Saturday in New York.

Kentucky retained the No. 2 position and once again was followed by Louisville, Wichita State, Virginia, Iowa, DePaul and Minnesota. Arkansas and San Francisco both moved up two places and rounded out the Top 10, replacing Alabama-Birmingham and Indiana, which both fell from the unbeaten ranks last week and slipped into the Second 10.

Kentucky received eight first-place votes and collected 1,077 points after raising its record to 4-0 with an 85-69 victory over then No. 10 Indiana and a thrilling 77-74 overtime victory over Kansas.

Louisville, the team Dean Smith tabbed as his preseason favorite, grabbed five first-place votes and 1,017 points in securing the No. 3 position, while Wichita State, which bumped off then No. 9 Alabama-Birmingham 75-60 for one of its two wins during the past week, topped one ballot and had 983 points.

Virginia was in the No. 5 position with one first-place vote and 900 points. Iowa was sixth with 854 points, while Ray Meyer's DePaul team held the No. 7 slot with 783 points. Minnesota, which dumped Drake to raise its record to 4-0, was next with 704.

Arkansas, which received the final first-place vote, took over the No. 9 slot with 623 points after raising its record to 5-0. San Francisco, also 5-0 following triumphs over both Southern Utah and Chico State, was 10th with 574 points.

Missouri, No. 13 last week, headed the Second 10. Tulsa, whose only loss this year was to North Carolina, was 12th and was followed by Indiana, Alabama, Southwestern Louisiana, Alabama-Birmingham, UCLA, Villanova, Georgetown, D.C. and Oregon State, which was surprised by Portland last week, but still remained in the elite 20.

Last week, the Second 10 was Arkansas, San Francisco, Missouri, Tulsa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Alabama, UCLA, Southwestern Louisiana, Oregon State and Georgetown.

Rampants Learning From Early Losses

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

The 1981-82 wrestling season hasn't gotten off to a great start for the Rose High School Rampants, but coach Gary Niklason points out that the team is young and has gone up against some tough opposition.

Among the early winners over Rose, now 2-3 overall and 2-0 in the Big East Conference, were Washington and D.H. Conley. "I feel like we've met two very strong teams in those two," Niklason said. "Conley is about as good as there is in the state. Washington is also strong, so considering that, I think we've done pretty good so far," he said yesterday prior to Rose's match at Wilson Fike, won by Rose, 54-18.

"We have a young team, there are only four starters back from last year, and no other lettermen. Everyone else is new to our program," he added. The newcomers include a couple of transfers and a few who did not wrestle on the junior high school level.

Returning this year are John

Holley (132), John Maye (155), James Richardson (167), and Robert Brown (185). The rest have little or no experience on the varsity level.

"We have nine people who are in their first year of wrestling," Niklason said. "We've got about 25 out all together, but that number is changing. Some are dropping off as we have challenge matches, and it begins to become clear who'll be doing most of the wrestling. But we're trying to have as many exhibition matches as we can to let everyone who can gain experience."

Of the 13 starters, nine, of course, are starting for the first time. Six of them are sophomores, while five are seniors.

At 98 pounds, sophomore Frank Moye holds down the spot, and has worked a 2-0 record so far. Paul Michaelson, a sophomore transfer, who wrestled on the junior high level in Fayetteville last year, is at 105. He's currently 2-3.

Robert Moye, a sophomore, will wrestle at 112, backed up by Stanley Austin, a sophomore, who has yet to wrestle. Moye has a 1-3 record.

Mark Brewington, another sophomore, is at the 119-pound slot, with a 2-3 record.

Tommy Michaelson, the brother of Paul, and a transfer from Fayetteville Westover, is at 126. He's a senior with an 1-3 record.

Holley, one of the four veterans, holds down the 132-pound level. The senior is currently 2-2-1. Amos Edwards, a sophomore, is 2-2 at 138, while Delano Williams, a junior, has an 0-1 record.

Donald Nobles, a senior, is 1-3 at 145, while John Ormond, a junior, is 0-1.

Maye, another of the veterans, has a 4-1 record, while Greg Britt, a junior backup, has an 0-1 mark. Britt also backs up another veteran, Richardson, a junior at 167. Richardson is 4-1.

The other vet, Brown, a senior, occupies the 185-pound level, backed up by Kelvin Williams, a junior. Brown is 3-1.

Mike Spell, a senior is 3-1 at 195, while Marvin Fleming, a sophomore, is 2-3 at the heavyweight ranking. Fleming is backed up by sophomore Barry Lyons.

"We have some people who have the ability to move up in the regionals," Niklason said. "Richardson and Maye are off to fine starts, and we look for Holley to come on also."

The coach feels that Wilson Beddingfield will be the team to beat in the conference.

"Hunt is the defending champion, and is expected to be good too," he said. "I would think after our victory over Rocky Mount that we have a good chance to finish towards the top. But a lot will depend on how the next few matches go. I think we'll learn a lot (against Fike)."

"The important thing is that all of the wrestlers have to hang together and improve every day. I think a lot of them came to that realization after the Conley match," Niklason said.

"I just hope things are on the upswing."

The Steelers Of Today Are Not THE Steelers Of Yesteryear

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Sometimes we tend to hold onto our heroes too long, to believe that they're still demigods. Faith can be a powerful instrument. Sometimes it can slow the ravages of time.

But when we blink a bit and look carefully enough, we see that those whom we worshipped in years past are, like ourselves, mere mortals.

These are the 1980s, not the 1970s. Lynn Swann, Terry Bradshaw, Franco Harris, Joe Greene, Jack Lambert, Mel Blount, Jon Kolb, Coach Chuck Noll... They are the Steelers.

But they are not THE Steelers.

Those Steelers are gone. These Steelers wear the same uniforms, speak the same words, go through the same motions, try just as hard... perhaps harder. But they are not the same Steelers.

We live in our memories. We remember Swann leaping gracefully over defenders, catching every impossible-to-catch pass. We remember Bradshaw standing stoically in an impenetrable pocket, seeking out and finding one of his myriad receivers. We remember Greene, Lambert, Blount and their defensive teammates, layer upon layer of Steel Curtain.

Those dreams die hard. After eight consecutive seasons in the playoffs, after four Super Bowl victories, they faltered in 1980. But with that vise-grip that precludes us from cutting loose the past, from recognizing reality and accepting it, we held to the belief that it was just a momentary lapse. They, after all, were the Steelers. THE Steelers.

No longer. But the Steelers, after two mediocre years, still believe. "If we can get rid of the mistakes, we'll be all right," said Noll. "You don't get rid of people just to get rid of people because chronologically they've been here so long. Somebody has to come in and beat him out... This age business makes a great story when things aren't going well — and who can argue when you're losing?"

Bradshaw, tape enveloping his broken right hand, insisted on shouldering the blame (if that's the right word) for Pittsburgh missing the playoffs again. "We really had it going," he said. "I don't get hurt in Oakland, we beat Oakland, no doubt about it. And we beat Cincinnati. As it is now, the record makes us look like just another ordinary football team. That's what's sickening."

"I don't know what kind of good can come out of losing a crucial game," he said after Sunday's loss to Cincinnati officially eliminated the Steelers. "I don't care what you're trying to accomplish. The only important thing is winning and that's been the way around here for years. Nothing good comes from losing."

Not even a higher draft choice?

"The hell with the higher draft choice," Bradshaw replied. "I'd rather be 16-0 and draft last every year. I'm not interested in higher draft choices... unless it's Herschel Walker," he added with a laugh.

"So what's next for the Steelers?"

"We go home again for Christmas," Bradshaw said.

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe's long year in tennis is over. And what a year it was.

He beat Bjorn Borg in a dramatic five-set battle to win Wimbledon for the first time and halt the Swede's five-year string. He demolished Borg to capture his third straight U.S. Open title. And he was instrumental in all three victories in America's 3-1 Davis Cup win over Argentina in Cincinnati.

"I felt really pumped up," McEnroe said of Sunday's clinching victory over Jose Luis Clerc. "The crowd was getting into it. I wanted to win it."

On Monday, McEnroe slept on the flight from Cincinnati to Newark, N.J., physically and emotionally drained from the gruelling three-day Davis Cup competition and the year-long tournament grind.

The victories had exhausted him. His reputation as the "bad boy of tennis" bothered him.

But all that disappeared for that moment Sunday when he beat Clerc and assured that the Davis Cup would return to America, the place of its birth, for the first time since 1979. The crowd at Riverfront Coliseum roared its approval. McEnroe leaped into the arms of team captain Arthur Ashe and trainer Bill Norris.

The joy of the 22-year-old New Yorker was apparent.

"It had been a long year for me," the left-hander said afterwards. "So it's great to have people behind you. I wanted so much to win."

"After losing the fourth set, I was a little tired going into the fifth set. But the crowd was so pumped up, it made you want to go out and give it 100 percent."

His performance against

Argentina proved again his dominance on the court, showed why he is ranked No.1 in both singles and doubles. His other on-court antics added fuel to those who criticize him.

"He (McEnroe) was very tense. Every time you change ends, you take a look at the Cup," Ashe said, referring to the huge silver and wood trophy trophy sitting court-side.

"It's staring you in the face."

"Tensions are quite high."

On Saturday, Ashe had rushed onto the court three times to calm his high-strung star and head off a possible default. And, during one changeover, Ashe told McEnroe to "either play tennis or sit down."

Later, when Ashe learned the on-court confrontation between McEnroe and Clerc was started by Clerc, the U.S. captain apologized to McEnroe.

"We both wanted to win" McEnroe said. Then, noting that Ashe is known for being a gentleman on the court, McEnroe added: "We always had different ways of going about it."

To The Editor:

I think your coverage of "Minges-Mania" was grossly inadequate. In your columns, Mr. Peele, you complain about the lack of support of the Pirate programs, and yet as a sports editor your coverage of a promotion to help bring in fans was limited to one photograph of Dave Odom on a ladder!

Those who read your paper have no way of knowing what "Minges-Mania" is. It is the promotion of Greenville business organizations built around the distribution of painter's hats inscribed "Minges-Mania," which means going crazy about basketball in Minges Coliseum! The idea is for the student to wear the free hats to the games, cheer the team and stomp. Stomping is very important.

At the Campbell game local businesses gave away $1,000 in door prizes to encourage attendance. The painter's hats were visible throughout the coliseum.

I am told that the promoters' aim was to fill the place last Monday and the 3,100 in attendance was short but not disappointing for a beginning.

The Minges-Mania program will be on-going. If your paper would at least print this, maybe your readers will get interested in the program. Come on, Woody, help the local community support basketball!

Bouchie Took Knight's Words Seriously

By The Associated Press
Indiana Coach Bobby Knight is not one to mince words, so when he told Steve Bouchie he was going to swim or sink, the junior forward apparently took him seriously.

"I told Bouchie after the game (against Penn State) on Saturday that he was going to play no matter how he plays," Knight said. "He can play well, and we need him to play like he can play."

Bouchie scored 12 of Indiana's first 23 points in the second half as the 13th-ranked Hoosiers built a 61-30 lead and clobbered Tulane 77-59 in college basketball Monday night.

"I was just looking to take the shot more," Bouchie said. "Coach Knight really didn't tell me to shoot more, but it just seemed I got a hot hand at a certain point of the game."

Ted Kitchel scored 23 points for the defending national champion Hoosiers, whose only loss in six games this season was to second-ranked Kentucky, and Bouchie wound up with 18, all but four in the second half.

Southwestern Louisiana, which had worked its way up to No. 15 in the poll, was the lone upset victim in a light Monday night schedule of ranked teams. The Ragin' Cajuns bowed, 70-65, to New Orleans. No. 16 Alabama-Birmingham downed Roosevelt 86-40, and newly ranked Villanova, No. 18, defeated Towson State 85-55.

The Top Twenty
New Orleans got 22 points and 12 rebounds from junior forward Mark Petteway to hand Southwestern Louisiana its first loss in nine games. The Ragin' Cajuns shot only 32.4 percent in the first half and trailed by four points, 31-27 at intermission. Petteway scored 16 of his points in the second half, however, including a layin with 30 seconds left to salt away the victory for New Orleans, 3-0.

Oliver Robinson scored 29 points as Alabama-Birmingham rebounded from its loss Saturday night to Wichita State by routing Roosevelt University. The Blazers, 4-1, led 39-18 at the half and continued to widen the margin as they forced Roosevelt into 24 turnovers. John Pinone, a junior center, scored a game-high 25 points, and freshman Ed Pinckney scored 22 points to lead Villanova to an easy victory over Towson State. The unbeaten Wildcats, 6-0, began the rout late in the first half when Pinckney scored 18 of his points.

Unranked Teams
Willie Burton and Dale Ellis scored 17 points apiece to help

Tennessee over Cleveland State, 74-58. Willie Jones led six Vanderbilt players in double figures with 19 points as the Commodores trounced North Alabama 116-88.

Clemson led by 30 points with only three minutes gone in the second half and routed West Chester State 96-56, getting double-figure scoring from six players, topped by Vincent Hamilton's 15 points. Oklahoma, unbeaten in five games, got 37 points from David Little to beat Pan American 92-82.

NCAA Holds Out Olive Branch After CFA Deal Falls Through

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A victorious NCAA is holding out the olive branch to rebellious factions within the College Football Association after the CFA admitted its bid to take control of television rights had failed.

Tom Hansen, speaking Monday for NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers, also said "it was fairly obvious" at the end of the association's special convention Dec. 4 that a majority of the CFA's 61 members would side with the NCAA.

Arthur A. Watson, president of NBC Sports, announced in New York Monday the CFA had been unable to gather enough support for its four-year, $180 million contract. The NCAA, which has always controlled football telecasts, has made a $283.5 million deal with ABC and CBS for the same period, 1982-85.

The CFA, which includes all major football schools and conferences except the Big Ten and Pac-10, tentatively ratified the NBC contract by a 33-20 vote Aug. 21. But in the meantime, the NCAA mounted a vigorous lobbying campaign, including threats of sanctions or outright expulsion of CFA schools who adopted the NBC pact.

The turning point, everyone agreed, was the special convention in St. Louis Dec. 3-4 when about 40 schools were trimmed from the 137-member Division I-A, the top football division.

CFA Executive Director Charles M. Nelms said from his home in Boulder, Colo., Monday that he did not view the setback as a victory for the NCAA. Hansen, an assistant executive director of the NCAA, later agreed.

"It's a victory for the fans who watch TV and for the young people who play the game," he said. Hansen and Byers are in San Diego, Calif., negotiating a supplemental television contract with cable companies.

"Let's also hope the misunderstandings and apprehensions have been put behind us now," Hansen added. Nevertheless, the explosive issue of cable rights is expected to dominate the NCAA's annual convention Jan. 11-13 in Houston. The policy-making NCAA Council has proposed a constitutional amendment, dubbed "proposal 47," which would give the NCAA control over all football cablecasts.

Ashe, Despite His Achievements, Still Can't Play In Some Places

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The calendar says 1981 but in many ways, tennis is still locked in the antebellum age that flowered before the Civil War.

Here is Arthur Ashe, captain of the United States Davis Cup team, winner at various times of Wimbledon, the Australian Open, the U.S. Open, the U.S. Clay Court Championships, and the World Championship Tennis tournament.

Twice ranked No. 1 in the world, he is a former president and currently member of the board of directors of the Association of Tennis Professionals. He is co-founder of the National Junior Tennis League and last weekend, his input helped deliver the Davis Cup, tennis' most prestigious trophy, back to the United States.

And yet, in 1981, 35 years after Jackie Robinson once and for all established the fact that the color of a man's skin doesn't matter very much in sports, Arthur Ashe still faces the ugly spectre of racial discrimination in tennis.

"Give me two minutes and I can name five places where I can't play tennis today," Ashe said.

This is no tennis bum we're talking about here. This is a man who represented the United States in Davis Cup play 11 times. This is a man who played on the United States World Cup team eight times.

And because he was born black, he is barred at a number of places in this country from playing the sport he mastered.

"I know it's true because a friend of mine, a college coach, has a black player on his team and there are a number of clubs which won't allow the team practice time, because of that player," Ashe said. "We got to talking and both of us came up with places where blacks can't play tennis today."

Ashe is rather stoical about the discrimination. "It's no big deal," he said. "A private club is a private club."

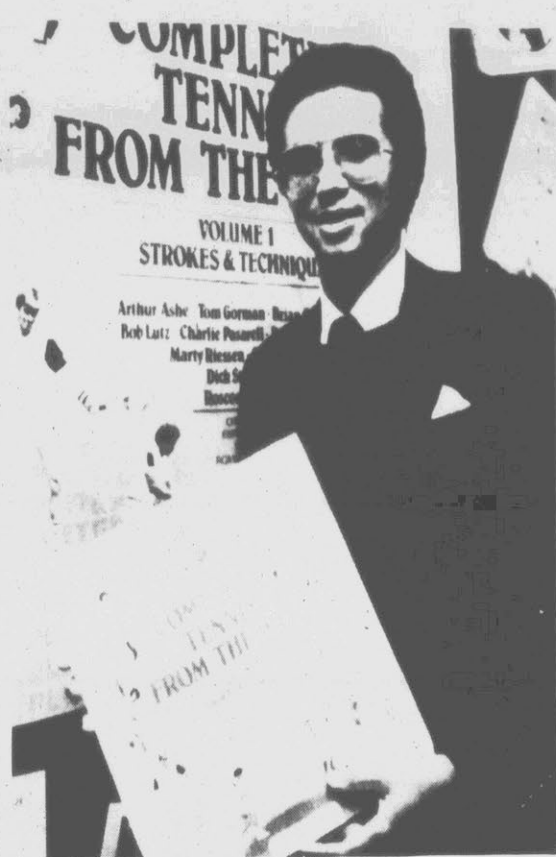

But, because he is black, Ashe had to walk a straight and narrow line when he was first starting on tennis' tournament road. His behavior had to be above reproach.

So Ashe never displayed the temper tantrums and carrying-on which has become so distressingly commonplace in today's tennis. He controlled himself, which doesn't seem like a whole lot to ask of an athlete.

That's probably why he bristles over the boorishness of a John McEnroe and why he felt obliged to rush on the court three times to calm the youngster during the Davis Cup play.

There is no more competitive tennis for Ashe, who was sidelined by quadruple bypass heart surgery a few years ago. Now he concentrates on teaching the sport through techniques such as the video disc series being manufactured by RCA.

There are no discs to teach decorum, though. That might be useful for some players.

Young Drivers Are Impressing

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mark Martin and Rusty Wallace, two young drivers determined to make an impression in 1982, wasted no time getting started Monday by posting better than 192 mph in test laps.

The runs, about 2 mph shy of pole qualifying speed last year, came on the second of two days of testing at Daytona International Speedway in preparation for the Daytona 500 on Feb. 14.

"We can pick up a little more by doing some things over the winter, and the cooler weather in February will help us a little bit also," said Martin, 22, of North Liberty, Ind. "When it comes time for the Busch clash, we'll be ready."

Martin is one of 13 drivers eligible to run for a purse of at least $150,000 in a popular 50-mile sprint on Feb. 7.

Carlen Silent About Firing

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Former University of South Carolina head football coach and athletic director Jim Carlen says he's "going to let them pick my bones somewhere else."

Carlen, who showed up at his office Monday, made the statement after refusing to comment on his dismissal Friday night.

"I have nothing to say at this time or at any time," Carlen said. "I'm going to let it rest."

Meanwhile, the university moved to plot its new course for the athletic department as a search committee appointed by USC President James Holderman to find an athletic director held its first meeting Monday morning.

"Time is of essence in this search," said William F. Putnam, chairman of the seven-member search committee. "Recruiting is on everyone's mind and we are moving as quickly as we can to find the best possible athletic leadership for Carolina."

Putnam said the committee discussed "people inside and outside the university" but that no one has been contacted.

The committee's recommendations will be made to Holderman, who will make the final decision in consultation with the USC Board of Trustees. The new athletic director will then take the lead in a subsequent search for a new football coach.

Holderman met briefly

Monday morning with the entire athletic department staff to announce that Dr. John Moore, the associate director of athletics and business manager, will serve as acting athletic director until a permanent replacement for Carlen is chosen.

Holderman also told the staff that Ron Dickerson, the assistant athletic director in charge of non-revenue sports, will coordinate the football program until a new coach is selected.

During the meeting, Holderman said he hopes to have a new athletic director on the job by the end of this month and a new head football coach in place by the end of January.

After Holderman left the building, Carlen addressed the staff, telling them that he was hurt by the dismissal but that they made the best group he'd ever worked with.

Moore, 44, came to South Carolina in February 1975 after 14 years as athletic administrator at Miami-Dade North Junior College in Miami. The Bloomington, Ind., native holds a doctorate in education from the University of Alabama and is a 20-year veteran in athletic administration.

Dickerson, 32, a former assistant football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, joined the USC staff in May. In his assistant athletic director role, he directs all programs except football and men's basketball.

How A Working Couple Can Retire With $1,308,000.

Introducing The New NCNB IRA.

The new NCNB IRA, the most revolutionary retirement idea in 50 years, starts January 1. In many ways, it's much better than Social Security.

In the first place, under the new tax laws, even if you have a retirement plan where you work, you can now open an NCNB IRA.

Secondly, you can make bigger deposits. For example, a working couple, 35 years old, can deposit up to $2000 each (or a total of up to $4000) a year. At 12% a year, their NCNB IRA's together would be worth over $1.3 million at age 65.

How An NCNB IRA Can Grow:

AGE NOW	SINGLE PERSON AT 65*	WORKING COUPLE AT 65*
30	$1,216,000	$2,432,000
35	654,000	1,308,000
40	348,000	696,000
45	181,500	363,000
50	91,000	182,000
55	41,500	83,000

*Based on a working couple's $4000 (or single person's $2000) annual deposit made on the first of each year at an annual interest rate of 12%, compounded daily on a 365/360 basis.

Working individuals can contribute as much as 100% of their salary, up to a maximum of $2000.

Substantial interest penalty required for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

And, as you can see by the chart on the left, for single people and couples in their 30's, 40's and 50's, with all kinds of incomes, an NCNB IRA can help make retirement a lot easier.

What's more, you can save on taxes. All your IRA contributions are tax-deductible, and you pay no taxes on the interest that you earn now. Then, when you start withdrawing after you retire, and you have to pay taxes, chances are, you'll be in a much lower tax bracket than you are now.

So, sign up now. The sooner you start, the richer you'll be when you retire. The new IRA, from the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

'Head Start' Backers Ready To Fight For Program

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advocates of Project Head Start are going to war against a plan they say would "renege" on a presidential promise and kill the popular program for pre-school children by merging it into a block grant.

Head Start has enjoyed strong support in Congress for a long time and efforts to abolish it are likely to run into trouble with the House and Senate committees which oversee the program.

President Reagan had promised to protect Head Start under his so-called "safety net" for social programs, but the Office of Management and Budget is now proposing that the program be cut and merged into a community development block grant.

Among those fighting to keep Head Start intact: Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker.

Other opposition to that proposal began surfacing Monday in congressional offices. The message also was being conveyed to the White House, where a staff member in the office that monitors public opinion — she refused to give her name — said most phone calls on the subject favored keeping the program as is.

The program's supporters questioned the soundness of upsetting a program that has been shown to boost the educational achievement of pre-school children. They also expressed surprise at the attack on one of the programs protected by Reagan's safety net.

Joseph Williams of the Children's Defense Fund said the president would be "reneging on a commitment" by merging Head Start into a block grant. Williams' organization is a non-profit group that lobbies on behalf of children.

A spokeswoman for Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., ranking Democrat on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said Kennedy also strongly opposed the plan and would fight it in the Senate.

The General Accounting Office gave Head Start a positive review in a report issued last summer. The program's effectiveness also has been demonstrated in a variety of studies on children who have participated since it began during the Johnson administration.

Schweiker expressed his opposition to the merger idea in a Dec. 4 letter to budget director David A. Stockman.

The secretary is due to appeal this and some other budget proposals affecting his department Thursday during a meeting with the president at the White House.

The OMB draft calls for adding Head Start to a community services block grant. Schweiker wrote that he opposed expanding that block grant and added that "we have developed alternative proposals which we believe are sounder ... and more likely to succeed in Congress."

Schweiker also protested a proposed reduction in the funds available for Head Start should it be merged into the block grant. Reagan originally proposed $950 million for the program in fiscal 1982. That would be reduced to $780 million if the block grant idea is adopted.

The funds also would be mixed with those for community services programs, putting the activities in competition.

Schweiker wrote: "It is not reasonable to expect the Congress to agree to incorporating Head Start into this block. I believe the president appropriately placed Head Start as one of the 'safety net' programs."

Anti-Crime Committee To Establish Priorities

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

A new committee of local, state and federal law enforcement officers should benefit investigations of drug-related violent crimes in North Carolina, says Kenneth McAllister, U.S. attorney for the Middle District.

McAllister is forming the committee at the direction of the U.S. Justice Department to set crime-fighting priorities and find ways to use federal resources. Both the western and eastern districts already have committees, formed before they became mandatory, spokesmen for the other two districts said.

McAllister, sworn in as U.S. attorney in late October, said he has not worked out firm priorities. "But the drug problem permeates the state to a degree that the public is unaware he said. 'And we're all concerned about violent crime.'"

He said the Middle District's committee, if designed properly, can become an effective crime-fighting tool. But it will have to overcome the persistent turf problems that often keep overlapping law enforcement agencies in a state of competition. "The committee will have to establish a real information flow," he said.

At the committee's first meeting, law enforcement officials will outline their departmental priorities and, hopefully, the problems they are having with the federal government, McAllister said.

The result will be a plan submitted to the Justice Department. It will be used in allocating federal resources.

The committee also will discuss jurisdictional questions. In several statements last fall, the attorney general said many small-scale drug cases were clogging state courts when they could have been handled in the federal system.

So far, McAllister has identified in the 24-county district almost 100 law enforcement officials who may participate in the Law Enforcement Coordinating Committee, though the actual working committee will be much smaller. The committee will meet every two months, beginning in late January or early February.

"I see it as an effort to get the federal government into a day-to-day, cooperative relationship with state and local agencies," he said. "It won't be an advisory committee for the federal government, rather a forum for the exchange of information." Meetings of the committee will not be open to the public.

Before the committee's first meeting, McAllister said he will meet with representatives from all federal law enforcement agencies, including the Drug Enforcement Administration, the FBI and the U.S. Marshal Service.

Attorney General William French Smith already has sent out directives emphasizing five crime areas: violent crime, drug enforcement, organized crime, white-collar crime and public corruption. The federal agencies will tailor these general categories into a set of priorities in the Middle District.

PARIS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Evan G. Galbraith was quoted Monday as saying France was naive to support guerrillas in El Salvador. He also said he was surprised and disappointed to see the French government normalizing its relations with Libya.

In an interview published in the newspaper Le Matin, Galbraith said the principal point of friction between President Francois Mitterand and President Reagan was El Salvador and Nicaragua.

Employee Is Charged In Incident

WINTERVILLE — An employee of the Stop & Go in Winterville was charged Sunday night with assault.

According to Winterville Police Chief Edward Cox, Dwight Seawell of Greenville was charged after a 9:15 incident at the Main Street Stop and Go, involving two juveniles.

Cox said he was on regular patrol, when he passed the store and observed two juveniles wrestling with what appeared to be the manager.

Cox said he approached the building and observed the man throw a can and hit one of the boys in the head.

Cox said he could not gain entrance to the building because the front doors were locked.

Cox said Seawell had asked the boys to leave and they would not. Cox noted only one count of assault has been filed against Seawell.

A first appearance hearing will be held January 14.

The juveniles, who were not identified by Cox, were not reported seriously injured during the scuffle.

Investigation into the incident is continuing.

Would Defeat New Farm Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of House members is calling for the defeat of a compromise $11 billion farm bill, saying it will result in excessive costs to food producers and consumers.

The group, led by Reps. Stan Lundine, D-N.Y., James Jeffords, R-Vt., Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, Ron Marlenee, R-Mont., and Peter Peyser, D-N.Y., scheduled a news conference for today to announce efforts to defeat the measure.

The House Rules Committee cleared the way Monday for final action this week on the four-year bill, which includes price support programs for major commodities; a one-year extension of the food stamp program; continuation of agricultural research and maintenance of the Food for Peace program.

A vote on the measure, which was generating little enthusiasm even among its supporters, was expected Wednesday. The Senate approved the compromise last week.

"I'm not proud of it, but it's all we could do," House Agriculture Committee Chairman Kika de la Garza told the Rules Committee, which turned aside efforts to get separate votes on controversial aspects of the package. The House will be forced to consider the bill as a single unit.

House critics say the bill represents little more than a cave-in by the House on all important issues.

A consumers' coalition, including the Community Nutrition Institute and Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, also attacked the bill on Monday, calling it "unbalanced special-interest legislation which would needlessly add billions of dollars to consumer food costs over the next few years through exorbitant sugar price supports."

State Plans Reply To Education Suit

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)

An assistant attorney general says North Carolina will respond within a few weeks to a lawsuit by parents of an autistic child who want the state to pay for the child's education.

Edward Speas, an assistant attorney general who argued the case for the state Department of Public Instruction, said the state's position is the child is getting an education and related services which meet all requirements of the law.

Parents of the 13-year-old Guilford County boy are seeking $165,000 in damages and guaranteed, year-round services for their son in a suit against state and county officials.

U.S. District Court Judge Eugene Gordon denied motions Friday by the state, Guilford County and the county school board to dismiss the suit by Ray and Ellen Hunt.

Gordon also helped the parties work out a consent decree that will enable Dr. Arnold Rincover, a faculty member in the psychology department of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, to provide consultation services to the child, Danny Hunt, 13.

The county school board ended Rincover's services in May because it felt they were no longer needed and because of budgetary problems, said school board attorney John Hardy.

The severely retarded youth requires constant supervision because of his autistic condition. In the past he was prone to act violently toward himself.

The Hunts contend that state and federal laws require that public agencies pay for those services as part of a commitment under state and federal law to appropriate education for the handicapped.

Color-Change In January Checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — January's Social Security checks will look the same on the front — green as usual — but the backs will be a new buff color, with endorsement instructions in orange ink.

According to John Trollinger, a Social Security spokesman, the Treasury Department decided on the change to improve the legibility of its microfilmed records of checks after they are cashed.

He said that the old checks printed on green paper with black ink instructions sometimes made it difficult to read the endorsements on microfilm. The new buff color and orange ink disappear during microfilming, leaving any bank stamps and signatures intact.

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Sales of this city's birthday song are full of blue notes and the flip side of the story is red ink.

Ten thousand copies of the 45-rpm disc "I'm El Paso" were pressed for the city's 400th birthday in July.

Six months later, city officials are on the record as still trying to get rid of 9,000 of them.

The platters remain in cardboard boxes at the El Paso Parks and Recreation Department, which got $9,000 from the City Council to produce the tune for sale at $2 a disc.

Parks officials and promoters gave the council a preview in May and everyone was impressed — except for Alderman David Escobar.

"I wouldn't have given two nickels for it," Escobar said, "but maybe they will unload it to somebody."

The song is a narration of El Paso's history, landmarks and famous people to the tune of Marty Robbins' old ballad "El Paso."

Margaret Mead's Work Told

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The best "Odyssey" programs have been the ones that don't talk about rocks but look beneath them, applying anthropology to today's world and today's people. Tonight's PBS program is about a woman who made that her life's work: Margaret Mead.

Some think that watching public television requires a degree from MIT. Although some PBS programming is leaden and certainly not for fans of "Mork and Mindy," the Mead retrospective is a valuable human story.

It's also one of the last chances to catch "Odyssey." The money runs out, and no more episodes are planned for this season after Jan. 5.

Miss Mead, who died in 1978, was more than a famous anthropologist on TV and educational films, teaching and learning in exotic places around the world. She was a renaissance woman, one of the first feminists who wouldn't let male rules and criticisms stop her from doing her work her way.

The documentary, produced, written and directed by Ann Peck, is a fine reporting job, tracing Miss Mead's cultural investigations through archival footage, her own writings, and interviews with friends and family. It offers another side of the explorer; a woman who understood other families, but, sometimes, not her own.

Luther Cressman, the first of Miss Mead's three husbands, said her work always came first, and that she was never meant to marry. Her only child, Mary Catherine Bateson, said her mother was upset because she hadn't spent enough time with her and tried to rectify it when the grandchildren came along.

For her part, Miss Mead admitted that her faculty for being observant and objective with children in other cultures was impaired around her own.

Miss Mead's mother was a sociologist who made the first study of Italian immigrants in America. And one generation further back confirmed the family's feminine curiosity and will. Her grandfather had used his Civil War bonus to get college educations for himself and his wife.

Miss Mead studied under Franz Boas, the father of American anthropology, who taught that documentation of people would explain cultural differences. But Miss Mead was the first to apply that information to American lifestyles.

For her first expedition in 1923, she wanted to go to Polynesia, but Boas felt it would be too difficult for a woman; he suggested American Indians. They compromised on Samoa, where a boat was available every three weeks.

There she tested young girls to determine whether these adolescents experienced the same growing pains as Westerners. Her book, "Coming of Age in Samoa," was doubly controversial. First, for applying her foreign findings to American youth, and because she didn't write in scientific mumbo-jumbo.

She broke other ground. In 1928, she did ink-blot psychological testing in the field. Also aware of her own cultural bias, she utilized new, objective tools in comparative testing: moving pictures and still photographs.

During World War II, Miss Mead again took anthropology beyond scientists and academicians. She explained it wasn't enough to provide food for the starving, it had to be food they wouldn't reject.

She also was sent to England to bridge a cultural gap that had become a diplomatic rift. American soldiers were dating English women, and they didn't understand each others' expectations and practices. Miss Mead's explanations soothed hurt feelings and helped reduce charges of immorality directed against the Americans.

"Your sense of proportion depends on understanding what other people do," Miss Mead said.

To understand the breadth of what television has to offer, you have to watch the so-called education network, PBS. Tonight is one of those nights.

Early Airplane Fabric A Gift

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — The only person believed still living who flew with Orville Wright is giving a piece of history — some fabric from the wing of the first airplane that ever flew — to the Air Force Museum.

Ivonette Wright Miller, a niece of Wilbur and Orville Wright, will present the gift to the museum at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base on Thursday, the 78th anniversary of the first flight of the aircraft designed and built by the brothers, who lived and worked in Dayton.

The fabric covered the lower left wing of the Wright Flyer, which the brothers flew four times on Dec. 17, 1903 before it was damaged on the ground by a sudden gust of wind.

The plane was the first successful power-driven, heavier-than-air craft. Orville piloted it first, having won the privilege in a coin toss. The longest of the four flights at Kitty Hawk, N.C., that day was 85.2 feet and lasted 59 seconds.

"It is interesting to look back at the time when the Wright brothers were looking for a strong, closely woven fabric," Mrs. Miller told The Associated Press in an interview.

"John O. Davis, a buyer for the white goods department of Rike-Kumler Co. in Dayton (now Rike's department store) found a material that qualified and put in an order for 125 yards of... muslin."

When a decision was made in 1928 to restore the plane for display at a museum in England, Orville decided to re-cover the entire aircraft with new cloth, Mrs. Miller said.

"The original cloth was in bad shape and had become very frail, dirty and badly worn from having been handled so much from ... various exhibitions. When Uncle Orv died, the wing fabric came into our possession and has been in our care ever since 1948," she said.

Mrs. Miller said that the Wrights were very shy and quiet and described Orville as the more outgoing of the two. "Orville was full of ideas. He was bubbling over with ideas and always wanted to make whatever we were working on better."

"Wilbur was the theoretical one, always coming up with theories. He was always able to make the thing practical," she said.

Mrs. Miller is the only person who is still living who flew with Orville Wright, the Air Force said. But she's not sure whether that's true. "I don't like to publicize that," she said. "There may have been somebody else still around that flew with him."

Mrs. Miller said she, her sister and a cousin were the first children in the United States to fly. Orville Wright took them in the air in 1911. "We took off from Simms Field, now part of Wright Field," she said. "We stayed up for a little less than 10 minutes. My sister and my cousin went up before me. It was very exciting and something I'll never forget. I haven't been the same since."

And neither will anyone else, she said.

"I'm sure the Wright brothers never knew they were going to put the railroads out of business. They had no idea the effects would be as far-reaching as they are. It has changed the face of the globe. It has changed everything," Mrs. Miller said.

Keeshan Again

A Grandfather

NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Keeshan, TV's "Captain Kangaroo" for more than a quarter-century, has become a grandfather for the second time this month.

Derek Hans Ashbaugh was born Monday at Elkhart General Hospital in Elkhart, Ind., to Keeshan's daughter, Maeve, and her husband, Hans Ashbaugh.

Keeshan's first grandson was born Dec. 1.

This excellent piece of card-reading is reported by Pierre Schemiel in the French magazine, Le Bridgeur.

West might have been better off had he taken advantage of the vulnerability to preempt with four spades. As it was, North-South were able to get into the auction at a low level. Unfortunately, they ended up in their 5-4 fit rather than the 4-4 fit—five clubs would have been on ice with a 3-2 trump break.

West led the king of spades and East took advantage of the situation to play his ten—a suit preference signal for a heart shift. West duly switched to the jack of hearts, which ran to declarer's queen.

It seemed that declarer would have to lose two heart tricks in addition to the spade, but he worked out a distribution that would allow him to make the contract with a strip and end play. First, it required West to have started with specifically J-10 of hearts bare. It seemed from the bidding that West held seven spades—with four spades and an ace East would have raised over the double; with eight spades, West probably would have rebid four spades. That left him with

ZCVBXB YMKEBSXY XEGYB

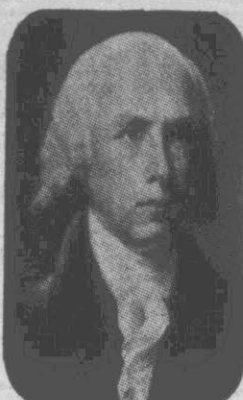

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WILD SNOWFALL WOULD REALLY BE APPRECIATED BY SUFFOCATING GUYS AND DOLLS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: M equals X

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

The Greatest Man in the World?

Washington Irving once called James Madison "a withered little apple-John." But this thin little man, now forgotten by many Americans, was one of the most powerful forces in shaping this country. Madison's sophisticated political theory of checks and balances formed the framework of the Constitution. He co-authored The Federalist papers, founded the Democratic-Republican Party with his close friend, Thomas Jefferson, and served as President of the U.S. during the War of 1812. A staunch defender of personal liberty, he drafted the Bill of Rights — perhaps his most important legacy. Today on the 190th anniversary of the adoption of the Bill of Rights, we remember the person that Jefferson thought was "the greatest man in the world."

DO YOU KNOW — Which three men wrote The Federalist papers?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — In Greek mythology Cassandra was always prophesying doom.

CONCORDE DRAMA — Damaged tires on a British Airways Concorde being inspected at Heathrow Airport, Monday, when the supersonic aircraft returned to the airport after the pilot heard a vibration and "realized that one of the tires had probably burst" as the craft was taking off for New York. Thousands of gallons of fuel were jettisoned off the south coast of England before the aircraft made a safe return leg and landing. (AP Laserphoto)

Tracking Down Allergies Is Tough Job

Sometimes without any reason a skin rash appears on my hands, my chest and my legs. It lasts for about two hours and then disappears. I can't figure this out. — Miss M.C., La.

Dear Miss C.:

To give you some idea of how difficult it is to track down the cause of such a recurring rash, I'll name just a few.

1. Allergic reaction to detergents, soaps and cosmetics.
2. Allergic responses to foods or drugs.
3. Contact with certain leaves or plants — such as poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac.
4. Emotional stresses and anxiety.
5. Infectious diseases.
6. Contact with certain clothing fabrics — wools, synthetics, and even silk.

With diligent examination, the cause of these transient skin rashes can usually be determined. Sometimes allergic testing is necessary to find the offender.

I get the most excruciating pains between the toes. I remember that my mother had the same thing at my age, which is 37. Can it be some inherited condition? — Mr. C.R., W.Va.

Dear Mr. R.:

I doubt that there is any congenital or familial disorder that accounts for this problem. I would speculate that it is only coincidental that your mother and you had the same problem. The condition you describe certainly needs study, both clinically and by X-ray.

There is an unusual condition known as "Morton's Neuroma" or "Morton's toe." A small tumor of one of the nerves of the foot, usually in the webbed space, can cause this severe pain. It usually occurs on one foot and is thought to be due to an injury to the nerve.

Many devices using foam rubber padding and other protective means have been employed to take pressure off the nerve, and off the small nodule that may be on it. This condition deserves to be investigated. If, indeed, it is the cause of your problem, surgery is simple, safe, and effective and can bring immediate relief.

Since there are many foot problems, all of them should be ruled out before coming to the conclusion that you may have a Morton's toe. Although the condition you describe does not seem to be a dangerous one, it certainly deserves medical attention.

When any adhesive tape is applied to my skin, I suffer intensely. I know it must be allergic. Is this a common condition? — Miss T.T., Tenn.

Dear Miss T.:

I am sure it is true that you have an allergic reaction to some of the sticky ingredients that are used in adhesive tape. It is very common for people to develop itching, redness and swelling of the skin when in contact with such tape.

Sometimes the tape is applied too firmly or may be inadvertently rolled around the edges and cause undue friction and irritation against the skin.

There are now many new silk and hypo-allergenic tapes which, when gently applied, can prevent many of these distressing reactions.

Taught Course Without Pay

SEATTLE (AP) — When budget cuts forced the University of Washington to cancel a business law class a few months ago, lawyer Allen Lane Carr says he "uncanceled it" and taught the course without pay.

Students thanked the 53-year-old affiliate lecturer at a surprise ceremony last week.

Carr's 45 students presented him with a $50 gift certificate for dinner at a restaurant in nearby Edmonds and $13 in cash to pay for a full tank of gasoline.

One of the students also nominated Carr for one of the university's $2.500 good teaching awards, three of which are awarded each spring at commencement.

"I got a little moist in the eyes," he said. "I told them that if this was going to be my last quarter teaching, I was glad they were my last class."
