Congress Votes Benefits And Adjourns

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Congress that gave President Reagan what he wanted all year long went home today for Christmas, adjourning until 1982 after voting to restore the $122-a-month minimum Social Security benefit and bestow a tax break on its own members.

"We gave the president of the United States everything he wanted," in 1981, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said a few hours before the session ended Wednesday. The Democratic leader's reference was to the unprecedented tax and spending cuts Reagan won several months ago.

"It's been a pleasure for us to work with you," Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee told the president in a traditional telephone call announcing the end of the session.

Both houses adjourned until Jan. 25, the day before the president delivers his 1982 State of the Union address.

For the Senate, the end came at 10:28 p.m. EST.

The House closed its doors almost an hour later after passing a bill to block Mobil Oil's attempted takeover of Marathon Oil for six months. The 223-107 vote sent the measure to the Senate for consideration next year.

Long gone in the final hours of the session were the spring and summer's tumultuous battles over spending and tax cuts.

In their place were major bills dealing with farm price supports, foreign aid and highway construction. All passed and were sent to the president.

But first, there was a gift to members of Congress — a more generous tax deduction for senators and representatives with a second home in the Washington area. At the last minute, the Senate also directed the Internal Revenue Service to determine how much lawmakers may deduct without showing any proof.

The House, which had passed the basic tax deduction measure for the first time Tuesday, accepted the additional provision with little debate.

It was the second financial break House members had voted themselves in two days. On Tuesday they decided to double the maximum amount they may receive each year in honoraria to 30 percent of their salary, or $18,198.

Ironically, the provision for tax breaks for members of Congress was attached to a bill that raises taxes on coal production to provide benefits for black lung victims.

For 3 million Social Security recipients there was a bill to restore the $122-a-month minimum benefit that both houses voted earlier this year to abolish.

Reagan at first asked for the cut, then asked for its reinstatement, and Congress was only too willing to comply. The Senate approved the final compromise 96-0 Tuesday and the House followed suit Wednesday, 412-10.

Most future retirees will be denied the minimum benefit under the bill, but those who have been getting it will continue to do so. Without the reversal, the February payment would have been their last. The minimum benefit is for people who have not contributed enough to the system to qualify for regular benefits.

The Social Security measure also includes provisions making sick pay subject to the payroll tax and allowing borrowing, until Jan. 1, 1983, among the three main Social Security trust funds.

In another major action of the day, the House bowed to White House lobbying and gave final approval to an $11 billion, four-year bill providing price supports for farmers. The vote was 205-203. The Senate had passed the measure earlier.

Supporters said the proposal provided an income safety net for farmers that will maintain adequate supplies of low-priced food.

Opponents included farm interests who claimed the support levels were too low to help financially troubled farmers and consumers who said resumption of sugar supports will be costly to taxpayers.

In addition to the farm bill, a measure authorizing $8.4 billion for federal highway construction went to the president for his signature.

Two foreign aid bills that the White House wanted also passed in the final hours of the session Wednesday. One was an $11.5 billion spending bill for the current fiscal year. The second was an $11.9 billion authorization for two years.

That bill cleared the House after Republican Reps. Paul McCloskey of California and Paul Findley of Illinois failed in a bid to suspend $2 billion in aid to Israel in retaliation for the Jewish State's decision Monday to annex the Golan Heights.

It includes a provision Reagan wants to permit a resumption of aid for Pakistan, Argentina and Chile, but rejects his request for lifting a ban against U.S. aid or covert action in Angola.

Both houses also passed a bill authorizing $2.4 billion over the next four years for sewer construction. The measure, designed to meet administration objections with the existing program, permits current projects to receive the money they were due but limits eligibility and reduces federal assistance beginning in 1984.

Troops Seize Shipyards Rounding Up Strikers

By The Associated Press

Poland's martial-law regime battled strikers with troop assaults and mass arrests and threatened "the most severe punishment" for anyone taking part in demonstrations today on the anniversary of a 1970 labor rebellion.

Violators will "pay according" to the ruthlessly binding letter of martial law, the army newspaper said.

In other developments, reports from Poland said troops backed by armored vehicles broke into the Gdansk shipyards Wednesday to crush a strike and Poland's powerful Roman Catholic Church challenged the government's martial law decrees and the policy of mass arrests.

In Rome, the Italian news agency ANSA said its correspondent in Warsaw reported Polish authorities were trying to force Solidarity leader Lech Walesa to make a TV speech in favor of "national peace," but that Walesa, held outside Warsaw, was "resisting and waiting" to be allowed to see Poland's primate, Archbishop Jozef Glemp. It said the report reached ANSA's Paris office through "private channels."

The Polish army paper, Zolnierz Wolnosci, said today that documents seized over the weekend from the Warsaw chapter of Solidarity called on soldiers to kill their officers and for the labor federation to take power in the event of martial law. The article, broadcast by Warsaw Radio, said there was only one choice for Poles:

"No support whatever for the madmen and political cheats frenzied with the lust for power." Referring to the documents allegedly found at Solidarity's Warsaw chapter, the paper said that not one drop of Polish blood must be spilled and anyone wanting this "deserves the most severe punishment."

Martial law regulations call for summary trials of soldiers and civilians in militarized industries violating the rules, with punishment ranging from two years in jail to execution. Warsaw Radio said that demonstrations were planned for the anniversary of the 1970 food riots in Gdansk, harbinger of the labor rebellion a decade later that the Communist Party is now trying to contain.

The leader of Poland's powerful Roman Catholic Church, breaking his silence on the Communist government's military crackdown, accused the regime of terrorizing the nation.

"Our suffering is that of the entire nation, terrorized by military force," said a statement issued by Glemp and the church hierarchy, according to reports from Poland.

Martial law "constitutes a blow ... to the hopes and expectations of society," said the statement. "The uncertainty and powerlessness of the workers have caused emotions, bitterness, disgust."

The statement called for the freeing of prisoners and said that until they are liberated "they should have human conditions of imprisonment, for we know of numerous excesses concerning the imprisonment of certain people in cold places without warm clothing."

Reports from Poland said the church was engaged in high-level talks with the Communist regime aimed at resolving the crisis.

Pope John Paul II appealed for a "return to the road of renewal" in his native Poland.

Extending Of Voting Rights Act Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — To the surprise of one of its leading opponents, a proposal to extend the 1965 Voting Rights Act is being backed by 61 senators — enough to shut off a potential filibuster and pass the bill next year.

Sens. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., and Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., expressing fresh optimism for prompt action on the measure early in 1982, listed the names Wednesday of 59 other senators who are co-sponsoring a House-passed version of the extension.

It takes 60 votes, or three-fifths of the Senate, to shut off a filibuster and limit debate on any bill.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., leader of the conservative opposition to the bill, said he was surprised at the development when a reporter told him about the number of co-sponsors of the bill.

"After the matter is explained and how unreasonable it is, they may agree to changes," he said. Asked if he intended to filibuster against the measure if it is not amended, Thurmond said, "I have no further statement."

Kennedy and Mathias initially told a news conference Wednesday they had 58 sponsors, including themselves, but three other names were added later in the day.

Although opponents could use stalling tactics other than a filibuster, including keeping the measure bottled up in committee, Mathias and Kennedy said they hoped the large majority support it would be enough to overcome any obstacles.

Thurmond has scheduled hearings on the law for next

January, and Mathias and Kennedy said they hoped the sessions would not be used to delay consideration of the issue by the full Senate.

Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., disclosed plans two weeks ago for an immediate Senate vote to extend the Voting Rights Act for 10 years without new provisions contained in the House version.

But Baker abandoned his plan the following day in the face of opposition from both sides of the issue.

The law now covers all or parts of 22 states, many in the South, which must apply to the Justice Department for approval of any changes in voting laws or regulations.

For example, a state or city in the affected areas may not adopt at-large voting for local offices unless the Justice Department decides the changes won't reduce the voting power of minorities.

Some conservatives want the so-called pre-clearance provision extended to all 50 states, a move civil rights groups say would overburden the government and make the law unenforceable.

The House-passed bill would extend the pre-clearance procedure indefinitely but would allow a state to "bail out" if it met stringent rules that showed it has not discriminated against minorities for 10 years.

President Reagan initially supported extending the act to all 50 states but since then has said he would sign legislation to continue the current law.

But Reagan also has expressed reservation over the strictness of the bail-out procedure in the House-passed bill.

Critics of the voting rights statute say it was passed to eliminate such abuses as poll taxes and discriminatory literacy tests directed primarily at blacks.

U.S. Factories Operating At About 75 Percent Of Capacity

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY
AP Business Writer

Manufacturing plants operated in November at the lowest percent of capacity since last year's recession, the government said today.

In yet another sign that the economy is in a recession, the Federal Reserve Board said factories were operating at 74.9 percent of capacity last month, down two percentage points from October.

The drop had been expected following the government's report on Wednesday that November production at the nation's mines and factories fell 2.1 percent from October.

Meanwhile, the U.S. surplus in foreign trade of goods and services grew to about $2.1 billion in the third quarter of this year, the Commerce Department said today.

The showing of the "current account" — the broadest measure of the nation's balance-of-payments standing — was the fifth quarterly surplus in a row.

It followed surpluses of $3.3 billion and $1.1 billion in the first two quarters of the year.

The figures, which are adjusted for normal seasonal variations in trade, include goods, private investment and other services, foreign aid, loans to foreigners and such payments as pensions to Americans who live abroad.

The new report said the oil-influenced merchandise trade deficit, the most widely publicized measure of foreign trade, stayed at about $7 billion in the July-September quarter.

Meanwhile, one of the world's largest banks warned that despite the short-term pain of the cure, "continued resolve" is needed if the American economy is to recover.

The assessment by Bank of America on Wednesday came as the government reported a 44 percent slump in November new-housing starts compared with the same month a year ago.

Bank of America predicted economic recovery in the United States by mid-1982, but a "substantial dose of patience and sacrifice is required," it said in its annual economic forecast.

Highlights of the economic outlook included predictions that 1982 inflation will average about 8 percent; interest rates will move down during the first half but remain volatile; unemployment will be up 0.9 percent from the expected 1981 final rate to 8.7 percent; the real gross national product may drop 1 percent from this year; auto sales will be static, and housing starts will be no higher than 1.3 million, compared with a 1978 peak of 2 million units.

Bank of America said in order for the Reagan administration's economic policies to have a chance of success, "the challenge is to avoid a precipitous reversal of policy and adhere to reasonable action ..."

In its companion global economic outlook, Bank of America said inflation-adjusted oil prices will be lower, and economic growth will be higher in developing nations than in the industrial nations. However, it said the rate of inflation will be slower in developed countries.

Abroad, Xinhua, the official China news agency, issued a translation of China's new income tax law on foreign companies that takes effect Jan. 1. Its provisions include credits on companies' home-nation taxes for companies paying taxes to China and a penalty of 1.5 percent a day on unpaid, overdue, taxes.

Toll-Free Calls?

Several people in Fountain have said we can telephone Greenville toll-free. Is that true? D.C.

Not yet. However, efforts are being made by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and the Pitt-Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce to have the telephone company begin toll free service between Greenville and Fountain, Greenville and Grifton, and Ayden and Grifton. Toll-free service between Greenville and Ayden, Bethel and Farmville, has been available for some time now.

If the new toll-free service is started, the basic telephone rate for all customers in Greenville, Ayden, Fountain and Grifton will increase slightly to compensate for the loss in "long distance" charges.

Reagan Decides Energy Dept. To Be Abolished

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has decided to transfer most of the Energy Department's functions to the Commerce Department if Congress agrees to dismantle the agency, a White House spokesman said today.

White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said thousands of jobs would be cut if the Energy Department were abolished.

The decision indicates Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige outdueled James Watt, the controversial interior secretary, in a behind-the-scenes struggle over which would get to expand his department's operations.

Reagan heard presentations on both options Tuesday, and made his decision Wednesday, Speakes said.

Speakes said the change would result in "personnel and cost savings to the government," which he could not estimate, "because we know it's cheaper when you cut people off."

Asked how many jobs would be cut, Speakes said it would "be in the thousands."

As for the prospect of congressional opposition to the move, Speakes said, "We're going to make our proposal and see what Congress does. We wouldn't do it if we didn't think there was an opportunity for it to pass."

Administration sources who asked not to be identified by name had said there was concern at the White House over the political fallout that would come from putting energy programs under Watt, who has drawn the ire of environmentalists with his outspoken efforts to promote energy exploration on federal lands.

However, a participant at Tuesday's meeting said Watt's controversial status never came up.

The administration's move to scuttle the Energy Department is sure to spark a battle on Capitol Hill, where one congressman Wednesday night reaffirmed his intention to try to keep the 4-year-old Energy Department intact. Congress not only will have a say in whether to dismantle the agency, but on where to transfer its functions if it is abolished.

One participant in the Cabinet council meeting said, "Part of the discussion concerned how it (the plan) would play on the Hill, but the president's main concern was to put the remaining energy functions where they would best fit in government."

'Relic' Shares Holiday Feelings

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Would you like to know how an 83-year-old relic feels about Christmas?

I dislike exchanging gifts because most people give only in the hope that they'll get something. If I could get off everybody's Christmas list I would rejoice. I don't need anything, and everything I get is either the wrong size, not my style or something I have already.

I can't go shopping myself, so I have to impose on others to shop for me, which is asking a lot. Also, a dollar doesn't buy nearly what it used to, and I resent spending all that money just so people won't think I'm a cheapskate.

I don't like those annual Christmas letters describing where people went last year. It's a lot of bragging and showing off.

Neither do I like Christmas cards with the sender's name printed on it. If a person can't even sign his own name in ink and add a personal "Hello," who needs it?

Also, somebody who notifies me that she has sent a contribution to her favorite charity in my name is somebody else I can do without. I like to pick my own charities.

Merry Christmas, Abby!

GRANDMA

DEAR ABBY: For some time now I have been amazed at your lack of fairness toward people who have not been able to quit smoking. It is so totally at odds with your usual efforts to lean over backward on behalf of every "sicky" in the book: drinkers, dopers, teen-age unwed mothers, and all the irresponsible, self-indulgent sex-gluttons who have brought VD back from near extinction to epidemic proportions. These threaten us all with much more horrible futures than cigarette-smoking could ever cause!

As far as I'm concerned, there is no excuse for the kind of vulgar rudeness that is so characteristic of non-smokers and their totally inappropriate, self-righteous hysteria.

I hope your own halo is not too tight, Abby. But if you are really honest in your efforts to be fair-minded, it has to be pinching a bit.

EVELYN IN N. J.

DEAR EVELYN: My halo fits fine; it's my slacks I'm worried about.

DEAR ABBY: For Christmas this year I've received a notice of a gift subscription for a magazine that I consider to be completely incompatible with my religious and political philosophy. I would never buy it myself, and don't even want it in my home.

What do you think of someone who would attempt to shove his views down my throat?

SAN DIEGO

DEAR SAN: He's both presumptuous and foolish. A good rule to follow: Don't send reading matter of a controversial nature (religious or political) to anyone unless you're sure that he is sufficiently open-minded to welcome it. (P.S. If we read only one side of a controversial issue, we never learn anything.)

Millionaire Offers Underwrite Viet Memorial Poll

Explosives Plea Made

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Special Forces sergeant Jamie Ervin, pleaded guilty Wednesday to a federal charge of storing and possessing stolen explosives at his home.

Ervin, 27, of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, U.S. Army Institute for Military Assistance, entered the plea at his arraignment before U.S. Magistrate F. Stuart Clarke.

Civilian and military police raided Ervin's Fayetteville home Nov. 13 and found 700 sticks of dynamite, 40 Claymore anti-personnel mines, 177 sticks of C-4 plastic explosives and a variety of blasting caps and ammunition. Law enforcement officials also discovered about 1½ pounds of marijuana.

Ervin's attorney Ronnie Mitchell told Clarke that a U.S. attorney agreed to ask a federal judge for a maximum sentence of five years when Ervin is sentenced in Raleigh Jan. 18. The charge carries a maximum 10-year sentence.

Ervin also faces three state charges of possessing weapons of mass destruction and possession of a controlled substance, Mitchell said.

In another arraignment Wednesday, two Fort Bragg military policemen and a Fayetteville woman pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to commit bank robbery.

Entering the pleas were Spec. 4 Joey D. Yearly, 21, of Jonesville, Va.; Spec. 4 Paul Doyle Hensley, 20, of Chicopee, Miss.; and Stephanie M. Coverstone, 18, of Fayetteville.

By MIKE FEINSILBER Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Millionaire H. Ross Perot says he is willing to underwrite a poll of Vietnam veterans to see if they like the plan for a memorial to those who served in the war — a design he considers "a tombstone."

But Jan Scruggs, the combat veteran who persuaded Congress to designate a site between the Washington and Lincoln Monuments for the memorial, says it does not matter what Perot's poll shows — the design is not going to be changed in any substantial way.

"What all this goes to prove is that this country is not recovered from the war," Scruggs said Wednesday. "When people start ganging up on a guy who's just trying to honor Vietnam veterans, I think it's a lot more than aesthetics. It shows we need to do a lot of healing."

Perot, who once offered North Vietnam $100 million in supplies in exchange for the release of American prisoners of war, says he has talked to thousands of Vietnam veterans and found few who like the design.

America made mistakes in the war and in the way it treated returning veterans and it should not repeat its errors in constructing a bleak monument to the war dead, he said.

The memorial, to be dedicated next Nov. 11, takes the form of a huge, below-the-surface "V" descending into the earth. The names of 57,692 men who died in the war and the 2,500 who remain missing are to be engraved on its black granite walls.

Perot, in a telephone interview from Dallas, said the design honors the dead without saying anything about those who returned home.

"It is a tombstone," he said. He also objected to its being below ground, to the use of black granite and to the decision to list the war dead in the order in which they died rather than alphabetically, making it difficult to find the names of sons, husbands and fathers who died.

Perot, who financed the $160,000 competition in which the design was picked last spring, said he would be willing to underwrite a poll of veterans.

But Scruggs said it is too late to make anything but minor modifications in the design.

"No," Scruggs said, "there will not be a new memorial designed for Vietnam veterans. If Perot wants to do his Gallup Poll, fine — it's his money."

Scruggs, who was wounded in Vietnam, heads the Vietnam Veteran Memorial Fund, which has raised $3 million of the $6 million to $7 million that will be needed to build the monument.

He confirmed that retired Adm. James Stockdale, a prisoner of war in North Vietnam for eight years, has resigned from the board of the memorial fund in protest over the design.

"But if you're going to report that, you ought to report that Gen. William Westmoreland (the commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam) was briefed on the design yesterday and he is in total support, and so is Bobby Muller, the president of Vietnam Veterans of America," Scruggs told a reporter.

Perot said he employs thousands of Vietnam veterans and has talked to hundreds of others and found few who like the design. "They think it is an apology, not a memorial," he said.

In 1970, Perot, chairman of Electronic Data Systems, a computer firm, offered North Vietnam $100 million in supplies to buy the release of U.S. prisoners.

Scruggs said the critics are just reacting to an unconventional design, which he predicted would become accepted and admired once it was built.

The design is the work of Maya Ying Lin, a Yale architecture student. The design was approved by the Fine Arts Commission, a government agency which must pass on public structures erected in Washington. Chairman J. Carter Brown called it innovative and inspirational.

Solidarity Won't Die

The United States government can only grimly stand by as the Polish army moves to crush the stirrings of freedom that country this week.

There were few who didn't see it coming. Worse was feared. There was the threat of Soviet armies moving in to crack down on the Solidarity movement.

For now the Soviets are saying the Polish situation is an internal matter and Soviet spokesmen have indicated they will not interfere.

The Russians feel safe in proclaiming that. The odds are good that once the military is turned loose on its own people any popular movement can be ended. Not always, however. It is possible that Polish troops may not have the heart to fire and and kill their own people if it comes down to full scale rebellion. Then it will be interesting to see how long the Soviet Union will keep its troops out of Poland.

It is clearly difficult for Solidarity to function when the country is in a state of martial-law. At the same time it is well to recognize that Solidarity sprang from the deep discontent among the Polish people about their existence under the communist rule. That discontent is not going to go away, and sooner or later the people of Poland will throw off the kind of government which has left them in such a distressing state.

U.S. 264 Fate Awaited

Tomorrow will be a most important day for Eastern North Carolina.

The State Board of Transportation is expected to announce its revised plans for state highway construction.

Even with the increase in gas tax authorized by the Legislature, funds available for road construction are falling short. This is due to decreased gas consumption and increased costs of construction.

Caught up in this is the state commitments to controlled access U.S. 64 and U.S. 264. Without these two highways continued eastern development is going to be difficult, indeed.

The new U.S. 264 is critical to Pitt County's development. Hopefully it will survive the highway revisions.

ABOUT TO ASSUME A VERY INFLUENTIAL ROLE!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

Helping Revenue Side

WASHINGTON — There are two sides to every story, so the journalistic maxim goes, and there are two sides to every budget. Most of the budget talk we have heard lately has dwelled on one side only on reducing federal spending. Not nearly enough has been said about increasing federal revenue.

An unpleasant reality has to be faced: Unless Congress and the president will agree on major cuts in defense spending, no significant savings are in prospect on the expenditure side. Nothing much could be done to Social Security payments; nothing at all can be done about interest on the debt. Grant-in-aid programs for states and localities have been cut to the point that governors and mayors are howling in pain. The secretaries of energy, education, commerce, housing and labor — to mention only a few — are balking at further reductions.

Meanwhile, the recession continues, the rate of unemployment rises, and guesstimates on the deficit for the current fiscal year are climbing out of sight. Some working papers at the Office of Management and Budget, leaked to reporters last week, presented the horrendous possibility of $731 billion in outlays, $622 billion in income, and a deficit of $109 billion for the year.

Such a monstrous deficit, representing 14 percent of expenditures, would not be bad out of line with other deficits of recent years. In

But looking to the future, a good many steps could be taken to improve the situation on the revenue side. The steps could be taken, that is, if Congress has the courage to take them.

Over a span of five fiscal years, revenues could be increased in this fashion:

The federal gasoline tax is now 4 cents a gallon. Every penny of increase — up to a point — would produce another billion dollars in revenue. A not intolerable 2-cent boost would produce $10 billion over the five years.

Suppose the present 8-cent-per-pack tax on cigarettes were doubled. This would produce an estimated $9 billion.

The present liquor tax of $10.50 per proof gallon could also be doubled. Over five years, this would bring in $10 billion. If taxes on beer and wine were doubled, credit another $6.5 billion.

Thus far, Congress has refused to consider a limit on the income tax deductions we take for mortgage interest and consumer interest. A $5,000 cap on mortgage interest would produce an additional $35.6 billion. Abolition of the consumer interest deduction would improve revenues by $39.6 billion.

Congress also has declined to increase user fees for internal waterways, general aviation, Coast Guard services and deep-draft navigation. The modest increases asked by Mr. Reagan would produce more than $19 billion over a five-year period.

A windfall profits tax on deregulated natural gas could be a big bonanza — anywhere from $50 billion to $125 billion depending upon the way in which a tax were structured.

constant dollars, we have survived such deficits before. But few persons think in terms of percentages and constant dollars. By any measure, a deficit of more than $100 billion would be politically and economically painful.

What can be done about it? For the short haul, not much of anything can be done about it. Most economists look for a decisive upturn in the economy next summer, helped along by the next 10 percent cut in income tax rates that becomes effective in July. Mr. Reagan will not tolerate any retreat from that promised relief, and he is right in holding his course.

Growth Emphasis

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — A theme for continued emphasis on industrial and economic growth while defending those natural assets which make North Carolina attractive was sounded by Natural Resources and Community Development Secretary Joseph W. Grimsley.

Speaking to the Water Resources Research Institute, Grimsley struck a balance in describing his top three priorities as chief of the state agency which is responsible for protecting resources and for spurring careful community development of those essentials to both the good life and economic growth.

Recognizing that industrial and business growth is essential to providing better wages which are themselves essential to enjoying life and solving some of the ills that beset people, Grimsley put his first priority stamp on "water — unpolluted and abundant, the key for North Carolina's future."

aesthetic and recreational enjoyment of the environment in North Carolina. We are richly blessed with a diverse and beautiful state. Our citizens greatly value our forests, parks, beaches, lakes, and rivers for recreation that is truly satisfying and renewing," Grimsley said.

As he commented to the

water research group, Grimsley made it plain that the reason for putting water in top priority among the three is the fact that water is critical to all three.

Good water management, Grimsley said is "absolutely critical for our economic health" and only with adequate supplies and treatment and distribution facilities can the state attract the growth necessary to overcome economic problems which "cause real human suffering and waste human potential. We must make sure that we have the water and wastewater capacity needed to attract high wage jobs for our citizens."

Spending With reduced federal participation in water and sewer projects, the state must step up its efforts, Grimsley noted in plugging the pending $300 million bond issue referendum.

Water is critical to industrial and economic growth and consistently tops the list of environmental concerns as well. "Our citizens want good water quality and are willing to support whatever it takes to achieve this goal," he said.

There are some "warning signs" of water management problems, but the state has "not yet reached a crisis level where problems threaten to overwhelm us and where drastic and divisive remedies are needed ... we have time to plan, to act and to shape the kind of future that we want," Grimsley said.

Plans call for a statewide conference next spring as his agency further defines and develops a management program addressing water supply, quality, ground water, coastal waters and river basin management.

Other Editors Say Warts And All

(Greensboro Daily News)

Richard Nixon's face is back in the news. The former president's portrait was recently hung in the White House alongside those of other American chief executives. Not surprisingly, the unveiling did not go unnoticed by the press.

Whenever Nixon's face appears in public, the media gives him due attention. Nixon, in a phrase, makes good copy because sinners are more interesting than saints.

With the unveiling of the Nixon portrait, several cartoonists predictably put pen to paper to mark the occasion. Syndicated cartoonist Paul Conrad drew a sketch that duplicated the Nixon portrait but one thing more; Conrad portrayed Nixon holding a pencil with the eraser pushed against a notepad.

Presumably the former president was trying to erase his Watergate-ridden past. So far, Herblock's pen has chosen to let the moment pass. But if previous cartoons are an indicator, the mischievous Herblock would have depicted Nixon with monstrous jowls, ski-lift nose, sinister eyebrows and a swarthy "five o'clock shadow".

The White House portrait is decidedly more genteel. Alexander Clayton, a Texas artist who was paid $15,000 for his services, paints Nixon as a young, vibrant looking president. The scars of Watergate have not yet furrowed the presidential brow.

Though cartoonists do not let Nixon's past go unnoticed, few of them would deny that Nixon's portrait should be hung at the White House. For the same reasons, a Nixon presidential library should be located at Duke University. To camouflage official sins from public view is the antithesis of an open, democratic society. History is history, warts and all. The faces of scoundrels belong on the White House walls along with the saints.

Strength For Today

ROOT SYSTEMS

White birch trees constitute a problem for anyone who tries to transplant them. They have a shallow root system, to begin with, and when they are transplanted they often wither and die. On the other hand, trees with fairly good root systems can be lifted and replanted even under unfavorable conditions. It is the root system which counts, and the way we handle it.

All this amounts to a parable. Sunshine and rain, mild weather, fertile soil — all these are important. But the one thing absolutely imperative when we plant — be it a grain of wheat or a seedling oak — is the root system.

So it is with our souls. How far do our roots go down? Do they penetrate only the top soil of expediency and immediate gain, or do they go deeper and draw their strength from the hidden powers of the earth?

Good root systems are indispensable — in soul growth as in plant growth. — Elisha Douglass

Proper 'Uniform' For Work

By CHET CURRIER

AP Business Mirror NEW YORK (AP) — By the time any person in business arrives at the office in the morning, we are told, he or she has already made the first important decision of the day — what to wear to work.

Countless books and magazines trumpet the "secrets" of dressing to look like the successes we are or want to be. On the other side of the coin, we are warned that the wrong attire can kill a job interview, a deal or a sales pitch before it even begins.

No doubt there have been business dress codes, written and unwritten, as long as there has been business.

In his book "Fire and Ice," Andrew Tobias recounted the story from years ago of Charles Revson, the cosmetics tycoon, telling an advertising executive on the Revlon account to "get out" because he was wearing a brown suit.

Today corporate personnel executives take pains to insist that it is the contents of the package, not the wrapping, that matters. "If a person was placing too much importance on matters of dress, I would suspect he was trying to cover up some shortcoming," a recruiter at a large corporation told the Wall Street Journal recently.

And the world of fashion no longer dictates, as it once did, a single shirt color or skirt length to which everyone should conform.

But the issue of what is right or wrong to wear to work has hardly gone out of style. It may well be more pervasive than ever.

Thus it was that many graduate business students at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School gathered a few weeks back for a series of lectures on the working wardrobe.

The dominant theme, as subsequently reported by the Wharton Journal, was "go conservative" — classy, but low key.

"What we wear reflects the general conservative wave of

Dissatisfied By Chairman

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's top aides want him to dump Richard Richards as Republican national chairman and replace him with Sen. Paul Laxalt (R-Nev.), the president's close friend and counselor.

Long-simmering dissatisfaction at the White House with Richards' performance since taking over the party's reins last January erupted Nov. 28 when he predicted the ouster of David Stockman as budget director and Richard V. Allen as national security assistant.

White House political aid Lyn Nofziger, who had been a sponsor of Richards for the job in the first place, has recommended that Richards should go. That view is shared by the president's top three senior staffers: Edwin Meese III, James Baker III and Michael K. Deaver. But Reagan himself has not yet decided.

Laxalt is the choice of the White House senior staff to replace Richards, but he is not eager to take that post. In addition, the new Republican National Committee rule requiring a full-time chairman would have to be repealed for Laxalt to be elected.

Whether or not Richards actually will be replaced depends on the speed of the White House in getting the president's approval, selecting a successor and finding a new job for Richards. With planning underway for the 1982 mid-term election, presidential aides said next January's meeting of the Republican National Committee is the effective deadline for replacing Richards.

"You know how hard it is for this administration to fire anybody," one White House aide told us. "It ought to be done, but I can't guarantee it will be done. The first requirement is that Dick Richards go up, not out. Nobody wants to make him look bad."

The first sign of a serious intent to get rid of Richards came this week when White House personnel aides began seeking a high-level post for him. They specifically are eyeing a federal judgeship for the 49-year-old lawyer from Ogden, Utah.

Richards, a party leader in Utah and longtime Reagan backer, has been criticized from the moment of his selection for the party post as the Reagan administration began. He began his term by rebuffing the "New Right" as "one of the toughest problems" he will face and has attacked independent campaign expenditures by the National Conservative Political Action Committee (NCPAC). His organizational efforts preparing for the 1982 campaign have been called inadequate by state party leaders.

But what has really caused Richards trouble has been his tendency to shoot from the hip verbally, as in his attack on "the so-called black leaders, the so-called civil rights leaders, the black ministers." According to one presidential aide, "Dick never has really gotten the knack about how to speak for publication."

Richards thought he was not speaking for publication at a closed-door fund-raising party in Cincinnati Nov. 28 when he predicted the ouster of Stockman and Allen. Although reporters were not invited to the function, his comments were reported by the Cincinnati Enquirer and later confirmed by Richards.

"As Yogi Berra said" he made the wrong mistake," one presidential aide told us. Baker, the White House chief of staff who previously had been a strong Richards supporter, gave him a scolding over the telephone.

Next to Laxalt, the leading candidate to succeed Richards would be Texas Republican Chairman Ernest Angelo. Other possibilities are State Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf of Nevada and Republican National Committee Chairman Jack Courtemanche of California.

Today In History

By The Associated Press Today is Thursday, Dec. 17, the 351st day of 1981. There are 14 days left in the year.

On Dec. 17, 1538, Pope Paul III communicated England's King Henry VIII.

On this date: In 1531, the Portuguese Inquisition began under Pope Clement VII.

In 1830, South American patriot Simon Bolivar died in Colombia.

In 1965, Britain imposed an oil embargo on Rhodesia.

And in 1973, Arab guerrillas attacked a U.S. jetliner at an airport in Rome, killing 31 people.

Ten years ago: The 15-day-old India-Pakistan war ended with a cease-fire in West Pakistan.

Five years ago: The Soviet Union freed its most prominent imprisoned dissident, Vladimir Bukovsky, in exchange for the release by Chile of the jailed Communist Party leader, Luis Corvalan.

One year ago: The Senate Armed Services Committee called for a renegotiation of the Salt II treaty with the Soviets, saying the pact would not serve the best interests of the U.S.

Today's birthday: Author Erskine Caldwell is 78.

Thought for today: Education is that which remains when one has forgotten everything he learned in school. — Albert Einstein, German-born physicist (1879-1955).

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning from the mid-Atlantic into the Northeast. Mild weather is forecast for the Southwest. Colder weather is forecast for most regions. (AP Laserphoto)

A heavy snow warning has been issued for the northern mountains and a travelers advisory has been issued for the remainder of the mountains for this afternoon and tonight.

Low pressure moving through the Ohio River Valley region today will bring more precipitation to North Carolina. Across the mountains a mixture of rain sleet and snow will develop by midday. But will most likely change to all snow by late afternoon. Accumulations of 4 to 6 inches are expected across the northern mountains while 1 to 3 inches are expected across the remainder of the mountains before the snow tapers off to flurries tonight.

East of the mountains, light rain will develop later today. The rain may begin as sleet or snow across the northern foothills and northwest Piedmont. The light rain may change to snow flurries before it ends across the piedmont and foothills tonight.

The cold front associated with the low pressure will move across North Carolina tonight. Behind the front, much colder weather will return for the weekend.

High pressure centered over the southeastern states brought sunny skies to North Carolina Thursday. Highs were mostly in the 40s...But ranged from 26 at Spruce Pine to 53 at Jacksonville and Wilmington.

There was an increase in cloudiness last night. Overnight lows ranged from the mid-20s to lower 30s.

Recreational weather outlook: A mixture of sleet, snow and rain will develop across the mountains today but will change to all snow by late afternoon and diminish to flurries tonight. East of the mountains light rain will develop across the foothills and western Piedmont toward midday and then east to the coast during the afternoon.

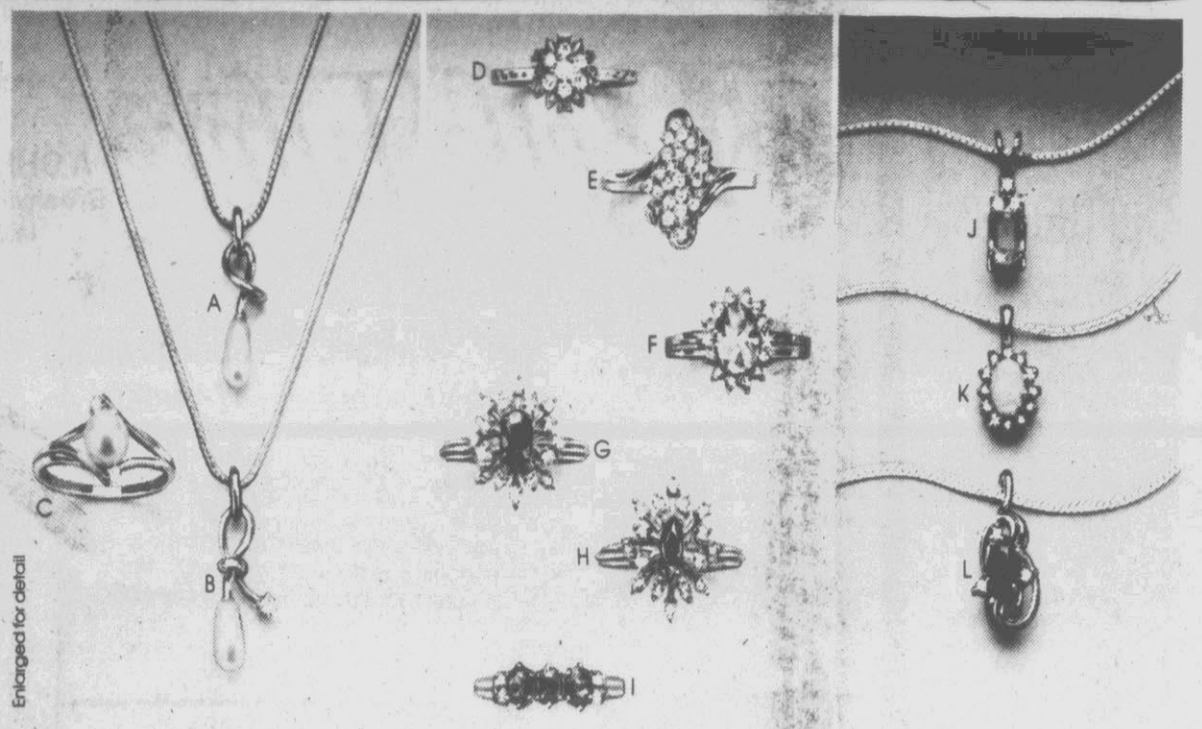

The rain may change to flurries before ending across

Such tax increases would require a high level of political courage, a characteristic for which Congress is not widely acclaimed, but in one combination or another they would go far toward reducing the prospective deficits. A billion here and a billion there, as Everett Dirksen used to say, it all adds up. The point is that we don't have to tolerate mountainous deficits in the out-years. We can improve the picture, if we try.

University Has Course On 'Titanic'

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — "Be British," Capt. E.J. Smith cried to frightened passengers aboard the Titanic as the ship sank in the icy waters of the North Atlantic.

The scene is true, but many other stories surrounding the sea disaster are romantic myths formed over the decades, says Carl Quatraro, who teaches a course on the Titanic at the University of Akron.

For $40, anyone interested enough can have the myths dispelled in Quatraro's non-credit course under the college's special programs curriculum.

"There are so many myths and unanswered questions about the entire voyage, that I have to be careful to separate fact from fiction from the beginning of the course," said Quatraro, a building contractor who has been studying the disaster for a dozen years.

The Titanic, making its maiden voyage from England to the United States, sank on April 15, 1912, killing more than 1,500 people. About 700 escaped.

"One of the difficulties ... is too much information floating around, most of it wrong," he said.

He and some of his 12 students are members of the Titanic Historical Society, headquartered in Indian Orchard, Mass.

Many students are anxious to get right to the ship's collision with an iceberg, he says, adding, "In fact, the first question of the first class was 'Why weren't enough lifeboats on the ship?'"

"I have the course arranged so it takes us three classes just to get to the collision."

Stories are often told that the Titanic's crew didn't respond to repeated warnings of icebergs in the area it was entering, but Quatraro said precautions were taken.

"We know that the lookouts, high up in the crew's nest, were watching for ice based on warnings from other ships," he said. "There is no truth whatsoever that the Titanic hit one isolated, monster iceberg floating in the North Atlantic."

Because there was no moon and the sea was calm, no waves were breaking on the iceberg, Quatraro explained. Waves might have been heard by the lookouts.

"We now know that when the Titanic spotted the iceberg, she reversed her engines," he said. "This caused the ship's main propeller to stop turning, resulting in an almost complete loss of steering capability."

"The Titanic went into what must have been a sickening two-mile skid into a spur of the iceberg," he said. "Even a head-on collision would have been better. The ship's bow would have been damaged but she would have stayed afloat."

Three hours later, the luxury British oceanliner sank.

One story that is not myth, Quatraro said, is that the Titanic's sinking was foretold in a way.

In 1898 — 14 years before the disaster — a book titled "The Wreck of the Titan" told a fictional story about the world's greatest ocean liner which sank on its maiden voyage after striking an iceberg in the North Atlantic, he said.

Dismiss Cher's Damage Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Cher's quest for $30 million in punitive damages from a freelance writer and two publishers has been dismissed, but she can continue her legal battle for unspecified general damages, a judge has ruled.

Cher lost in U.S. District Court Wednesday as Judge Manuel Real said she still could seek general damages against the plaintiffs — Forum International Ltd., News Group Inc. — which publishes the Star magazine — and writer Fred Robb.

Her lawyer, Douglas Conroy, argued for dismissal of the entire suit, claiming Cher had "made no showing of damages."

'Parson Of The Hills' Brings Joy

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer
HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — He doesn't wear a red suit and he drives a van instead of a team of eight reindeer, but the "Parson of the Hills" is Santa Claus to thousands of underprivileged children throughout Appalachia.

Every year, the Rev. Charles Keyes of Hickory — better known as the Parson of the Hills — begins collecting toys, clothes and food months before Christmas to deliver to children in isolated coves and hollows who otherwise would find empty stockings on Christmas morning.

"It's really unbelievable. You drive up to some of the shacks and the children come running out in the cold without even shoes or coats," said Keyes. "We take them warm clothes, fruit and candy and toys. Their little faces just light up. It's the best feeling in the world."

This time of the year, Keyes' camp for underprivileged children on the outskirts of Hickory is bustling with activity as dozens of volunteers load boxes into vans and trucks. Every building at the camp is filled with goods donated by people all over the country.

The white-haired Keyes, 63, has been helping needy mountain people for 50 years. He opened his first mission house in his native West Jefferson in the western North Carolina mountains when he was 13, enlisting the help of his friends to collect food for poor families. They delivered the food on foot and by mule.

"Going up in the mountains, I saw old people and children just too poor to even have enough food to eat," he said. "But they were too proud to ask for anything."

"So I started up a mission with eight other boys. About Christmas time, we'd go all over town with tow sacks and get the merchants to give us anything they could, then we took it to the people who needed it."

When he was 18, Keyes was awarded a scholarship to Duke University to study for the ministry. But he left school after three years with no degree.

"I was too far away from my people, from the mountains. I was used to being free like a bird, free to go out and help the people who needed my help."

Keyes, raised a Methodist, says his ministry is non-denominational and he preaches on street corners and in houses, anywhere people are gathered.

For Keyes, Christmas begins in late fall and doesn't end until March, when all his gifts are delivered in five states from North Carolina to West Virginia.

Meanwhile, Keyes and his family are building a warehouse to store next year's Christmas donations. He's also trying to answer the stack of letters on his desk, all pleading for Christmas presents for poor children.

"I only wish I could give all those children a glorious Christmas," Keyes said. "But at least I know Christmas will be a little brighter for some of them."

Christmas Not For Wise Guys

LONDON (AP) — Christmas is for wise men, but not wise guys, and Santa Claus proved it when he got fed up with a 15-year-old and decorated the boy's ear with his fist.

The Jolly Old Elf, in the person of Graham Head, admitted to losing his cool when the boy pulled an aerosol can and, as wide-eyed youngsters looked on, sprayed Santa with streamers of foam.

"I told the kid to go away but he wouldn't listen," Santa said. "So I gave him a clip around the ear to stop him. That aerosol stuff was going all over the place. I had to get another beard and my costume cleaned."

Head, a part-time street merchant who donned the snowy beard and red suit for an Oxford Street department store, said "hitting kids isn't the sort of thing Father Christmas would do, but I was provoked."

Unable To Halt Rabbit-Killing

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — A second roundup and slaughter of jackrabbits by farmers who claim the animals destroy crops will not be stopped by the state, the Humane Society of the United States has been told.

Pat Costello, legal counsel for Gov. John Evans, told the group the state has no legal basis to stop the "necessary extermination" of rabbits in southeastern Idaho.

Farmers near Mud Lake say the jackrabbits have nibbled away $5 million in hay, barley and wheat. About 3,000 rabbits were clubbed to death during a drive last Saturday, but farmers had hoped to kill about 15,000 rabbits.

John Hoyt, president of the Washington-based Humane Society, sent a telegram to Evans Wednesday asking the governor to stop the planned roundup. Farmers drive the animals into pens, then club them and cut their throats. "Our state attorney general has indicated that the state does not have any legal basis to enjoin activities of this nature, and so no intercession by the state is planned at this time," Costello wrote.

The Idaho Humane Society failed to get state Attorney General David Leroy to seek a court injunction against last Saturday's roundup.

The 6,000 pounds of rabbit meat from that drive was supposed to be shipped to Nigeria, but a trucker has threatened to destroy the load, claiming he hasn't been paid for freezing and hauling it.

The shipment has been held in limbo for three days in Dodge City, Kan. It was supposed to arrive today at the city docks in Houston.

Scott Archibald, the Rigby, Idaho truck broker who is handling the shipment, said he isn't sure the meat ever will be loaded on a ship bound for Lagos, Nigeria. Unless he is paid by noon today, Archibald said he would have the meat unloaded at the city dump in Houston.

Testifying On AT&T Breakup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two former Carter administration officials say the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. should not be broken up if it would result in a loss of business to foreign competitors.

Leonard Woodcock, Jimmy Carter's ambassador to China, said that if the breakup placed the U.S. telecommunications industry in a poor competitive situation worldwide, it would result in a loss of jobs.

Woodcock, former president of the United Auto Workers union, testified in U.S. District Court on Wednesday in the government's antitrust suit against AT&T.

Another witness in the case, former Commerce Secretary Philip Klutznick, said the U.S. telecommunications industry is now dominant in the world, and that the industry should be protected to maintain that position.

The trial was resuming today, with former Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., and former Defense Secretary Harold Brown scheduled to testify.

The Defense Department has long opposed the Justice Department's 7-year-old case against AT&T, arguing that breaking up the Bell System would harm defense communications.

U.S. District Judge Harold H. Greene has admitted into evidence a Pentagon study that concludes national security would be harmed if the breakup took place.

Polish Tensions Defused: USSR

MOSCOW (AP) — Radio Moscow reported today that the situation was improving in "most parts" of Poland and that tensions had been "defused" on the Baltic Coast and "some other regions."

The radio's midday English-language newscast made no mention of troops storming the Lenin Shipyard in the Baltic coast city of Gdansk Wednesday to evict striking members of the Solidarity labor movement.

Western reports from Poland said crack troops overran the shipyard, birthplace of the Solidarity movement.

The radio quoted "Polish information agencies" as saying that Polish army and militia units "are cutting short attempts by provocateurs to organize strikes at some enterprises."

It said the troops and police "rely on growing support from the workers who on many occasions rebuff the provocateurs themselves."

Newsmen in Warsaw were told by the Foreign Ministry that workers "are not under such pressure from Solidarity as (of) several days ago," the broadcast said.

It said Leszek Moczulski, a leader of the "counter-revolutionary" Confederation for an Independent Poland, was arrested "as he tried to flee from authorities." The Soviet news agency Tass had reported his arrest Wednesday.

Radio Moscow said two Polish newspapers — Zolnierz Wolnosci and Trybuna Ludu, the army and Communist Party dailies — published excerpts of documents they said were taken from Solidarity headquarters in Warsaw. The papers cited the documents as evidence that the independent labor movement sought to seize power, the radio said.

"The instructions were for using the tense situation in the country to openly confront the authorities and then start an armed rebellion around the country," the radio said. It quoted the papers as saying "the criminal plans of the enemies of socialist Poland have been foiled."

A Russian-language broadcast this morning said that the documents confiscated by police outlined a three-stage "action plan" by Solidarity to resist martial law.

"At the first stage it was planned to develop subversive, terrorist activity, linking it with anti-socialist propaganda," the radio said.

"At the second stage it was planned to cobble together armed gangs capable of taking part in bigger operations and finally at the third stage it was planned to unleash a real civil war," the radio said.

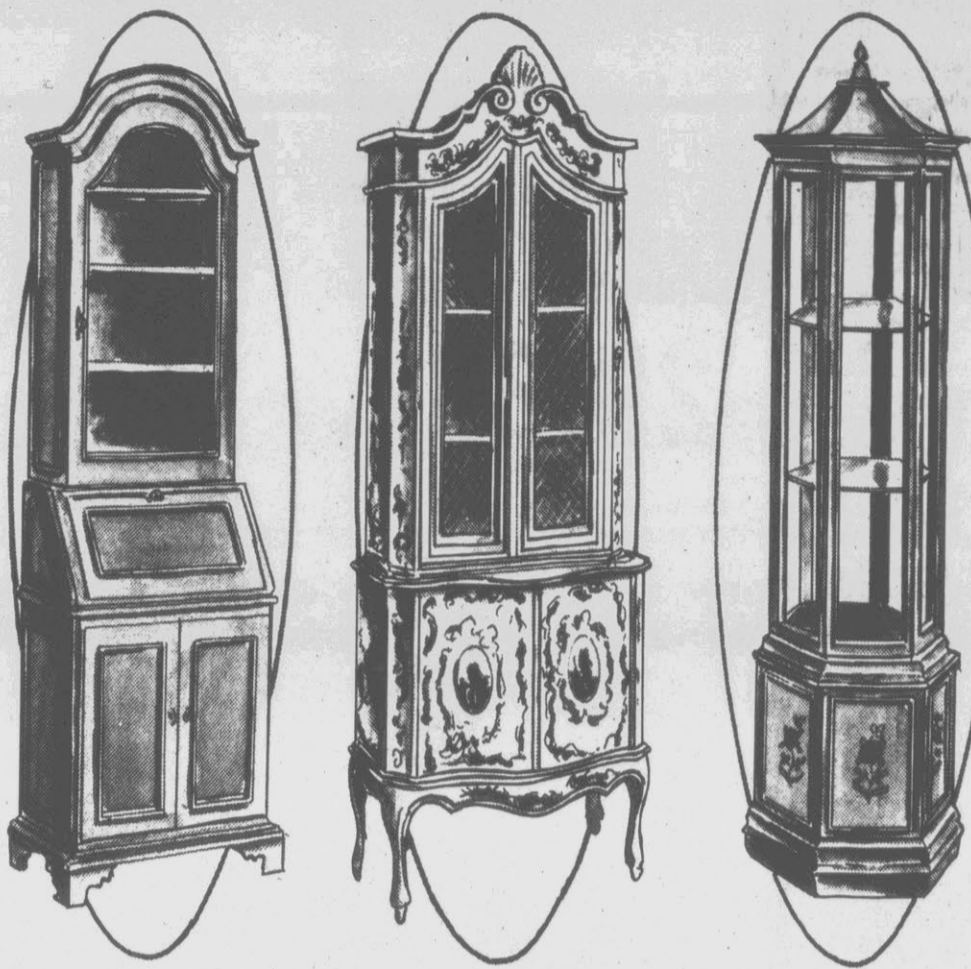

The broadcast said one document called for soldiers to "get rid of their officers" when martial law was imposed, and for Solidarity leaders to assume control of the country.

"However, these criminal plans ... were broken up in line with the decision on the highest authorities of the socialist state. The armed forces are restoring law and order and are standing guard over the gains of socialism," said the radio, quoting the Polish army paper.

EULOGY TOO EARLY PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — Legislators in the Sicilian Chamber of Deputies gave a moving eulogy to their late colleague Wednesday. Moments later he telephoned to say he was alive. "Despite my 87 years I am still in good form", Giuseppe Montalbana said.

'Long Fault' Discovered

THE BIG CRACK — Space-age technology has uncovered a giant crack across the face of America, located on above map. (AP Laserphoto Map)

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Scientists have discovered what could be one of the world's largest continental faults, reaching from Washington state to the southern tip of the Appalachian Mountains.

The fault is inactive, poses no danger and is not likely to become active with earthquakes again, said Associate Professor Raymond E. Arvidson of Washington University.

The 1,700-mile-long rift — which is nearly three times the length of the San Andreas Fault in California where earthquakes frequently occur — would not be noticed by someone standing on top of it, Arvidson said. Scientists using satellite pictures and Earth-bound research discovered the rift.

"Our first reaction was: 'it just can't be — it's just too big,'" Arvidson said in an interview Tuesday. "But there it is."

Arvidson said scientists are trying to figure out what the discovery means, and said the rift may give scientists clues about how the continents were formed and how they respond to stresses between the massive plates in the earth's crust.

The discovery may also help explain why earthquakes persist in the Missouri Bootheel, the site of the devastating New Madrid quakes of 170 years ago, which changed the course of the Mississippi River and were felt as far away as Boston. The rift intersects with the New Madrid fault, creating a hot spot that is a frequent source of quakes, said Arvidson, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Regional Planetary Image Facility.

Arvidson said he and a team of researchers made the discovery by using computer technology developed to handle data collected by the Viking unmanned mission to Mars.

More than 600,000 gravitational figures were combined with topographical data to produce a "simulated spaceview" of the United States, Arvidson said.

"We used space technology on existing data — data that's been around for at least 10 years," Arvidson said.

Urge Negotiation

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. General Assembly has called for a negotiated political settlement to the civil war in El Salvador and asked "all states to abstain from intervention in the internal situation" there.

The resolution, approved Wednesday by a vote of 68-22 with 53 abstentions, also criticized "government para-military organizations" in the Central American nation.

It asked all nations currently supporting either side of the conflict "to suspend all supplies of arms and any type of military support, so as to allow the political forces in that country to restore peace and security."

The United States, which has sent arms and about 50 military advisers to El Salvador to help the ruling junta fight leftist guerrillas, was among the resolution's opponents.

FOOD FOR POLAND — School children lined up Monday for packages of food delivered at Leszno, Poland by a convoy of West German Red Cross trucks. The 80 tons of food was collected in a charity drive organized in Stuttgart, West Germany. The photo became available Wednesday in Stut-gart. Because of the communications blackout decreed by martial law in Poland, almost no pictures and little reliable news has reached the outside world since martial law was imposed. (AP Laserphoto)

More Federal Programs Facing Move Into Block Grant Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Money that now funds federal programs which provide birth control and food for poor women and their young children would be shifted into general grants to the states under a Reagan administration proposal, sources say.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said the change is being proposed by the Office of Management and Budget. Under the plan, they said, funds now targeted for the federal projects would go to the states as general grants, to be used as the states wished.

The information was based on background documents to be used in preparing a budget appeal by the Health and Human Services Department to President Reagan, according to the sources. HHS Secretary Richard S. Schweiker was to make that appeal to Reagan today.

The reported OMB proposals are in line with Reagan's call to cut red tape and give more discretion to local governments on how to spend federal funds. Such a shift would be part of a transfer of a half dozen more federal health programs into four new block grants.

However, Edwin Dale, an OMB spokesman, declined on Wednesday to comment on any 1983 budget plans.

Family planning advocates and other opponents of shifting the funds into the grants for the states argue that it would enable states to eliminate the programs and use the money for other purposes.

Overall, the budget office wants to cut money for the four HHS block grants to 95 percent of what Reagan proposed to spend last September, when he sought a 12 percent cut in domestic spending. Congress rejected cuts of that size.

The sources said the OMB proposal calls for adding an Early Periodic Screening and Diagnosis program, which now is part of Medicaid, to a maternal and child health block grant.

But Schweiker opposes that. In a letter to budget director David Stockman, dated Dec. 4, Schweiker said the proposed change "may result in higher federal expenditures in total" He said claims for reimbursement for screening still could be made through Medicaid.

Jobless Rate Expected Rise

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Christmas season, traditionally a time of joy, is bittersweet at best for thousands of North Carolinians and South Carolinians who find themselves unemployed, victims of the nationwide recession.

Officials expect the N.C. jobless rate for November and December to rise sharply from October's 4.5 percent.

South Carolina's October rate was 8.1, and officials estimate November and December figures will increase. "Things are definitely slowing down," said Ray Drafts, research director for the S.C. Employment Security Commission.

In North Carolina, textile and furniture industries have been hit hard, with about 40,000 employees out of work.

In South Carolina, textiles and apparel have been hit the hardest, followed by electronics and machinery, Drafts said.

And the effects of the situation are being felt by the jobless and their families in a personal way.

"My three kids aren't going to have any Christmas at all," said Danny Zissitt, 29, an unemployed truck driver in Rock Hill, S.C. "I'm looking for another job, but there doesn't seem to be anything."

Joe Buckley, 20, of Dallas, N.C., has been looking for work since he was laid off his mechanic's job at Trailways Bus Lines in Charlotte Nov. 17.

"They're real nice," he said. "They say they'll call you. But, it's the same story everywhere. No openings."

In Charlotte, Ed Smith, 41, an unemployed sales manager, said, "It's made Christmas a little shaky."

Smith stood in line Thursday at the Charlotte office of the N.C. Employment Security Commission (ESC), dressed in a dark business suit, carrying a black brief case containing printed resumes.

His company fired 18 sales people in November, he said, "without severance pay or even vacation pay."

Things are not as bad as they were in the 1974-75 recession, when South Carolina unemployment reached 10.6 percent and North Carolina unemployment peaked at 11.9 percent.

But as the 1981 recession goes on and layoffs increase in furniture, textiles and elsewhere, the bad news continues.

For the week ending Dec. 4, more than 54,000 North Carolina workers filed new claims for jobless benefits, nearly double the number a year ago. In South Carolina for the week ending Dec. 12, 22,500 workers filed initial claims, also nearly double a year ago.

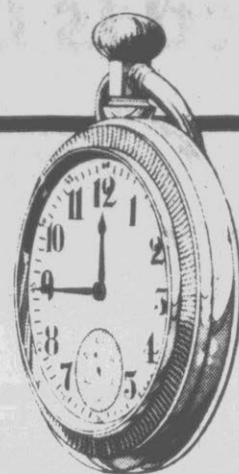

Nearly 60,000 South Carolina workers and more than 114,000 North Carolina workers are already drawing jobless benefits.

At the GE transformer plant in Hickory, N.C., George Bergholz and 200 other workers were laid off Thanksgiving.

Because the transformer market is closely tied to the housing industry, suffering its worst slump since World War II, Bergholz figures he might not return to work for several months.

America Is Libya's 'Public Enemy Number 1'

EAST CAROLINA INSURANCE AGENCY, INC.

By ROBERT MCCARTNEY
Associated Press Writer
TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — The highly colored poster plastered on hundreds of walls throughout Libya's dusty capital shows a skeleton draped in the Stars and Stripes holding a large, curved dagger marked "U.S.A."

"America is the leader of the terrorists," the poster proclaims in Arabic.

They have been up for two months, and residents say the ones before it were just as harsh.

In Libya, the United States surpasses even Israel as Public Enemy No. 1.

"The Reagan Administration has been criticized for going too far in its attacks on Libya, but the Libyans say just as bad things about the United States, and sometimes worse," said a West European diplomat who asked to remain anonymous.

There is a marked similarity between the charges hurled back and forth by the two governments.

President Reagan and Col. Moammar Khadafy each accuse the other of plotting to assassinate him. The State Department says Libya is a leading supporter of international terrorism and arms and finances dozens of violent revolutionary groups around the world. Khadafy and his news media hang the terrorist label on the United States because of its support of Israel, its stockpile of nuclear weapons and repeated accusations of CIA plans to murder foreign leaders.

While the two governments' accusations are similar, there is a key difference. The U.S. news media are often skeptical of their government's claims. The Libyan media are firmly under the government's control, and there is no criticism or skepticism of Khadafy, "the leader of the glorious Sept. 1 Revolution" that overthrew King Idris in 1969.

JANA, the official news agency and the media's principal source of information, devotes about half of its 30-page international report each day to attacks on U.S.

policy. Despite the constant anti-American barrage from the press, radio and TV, most Libyans are friendly and curious when they meet Americans. Like Khadafy, they often make a point of saying that the dispute is between the two governments, not between the people.

"For me, America A-OK," an elderly taxi driver said in broken English on learning that his passenger was from the United States. He said he worked for 12 years as a guard at the U.S. Air Force's Wheelus Base outside Tripoli, which Khadafy closed down in 1970.

Western diplomats here accuse Khadafy of whipping up anti-American sentiment to try to draw the public's attention away from growing shortages of consumer goods and his recent year-long military intervention in Chad.

But the diplomats say Khadafy and his government are genuinely concerned that the Reagan administration is out to get them, particularly after it challenged Libya's claim to the Gulf of Sidra off the Libyan coast by holding naval maneuvers there last August.

During the maneuvers, two U.S. Navy jets shot down a pair of Libyan planes after one of the Libyans fired first about 50 miles off the coast. The Libyan media responded with charges of U.S. aggression and invasion.

The media alternate between accusing the United States of picking on Libya, a nation of 3 million people, and boasting that the Libyans are courageously challenging the mighty superpower. Seeking to demonstrate that America's allies oppose Reagan's Libyan policy, JANA constantly relays foreign newspaper criticism of that policy.

The media also portray the United States as a country severely troubled by racial disharmony and unemployment.

"The American people now lead a disturbed and unstable life as a result of the atmosphere of terror which dominates the United States," JANA's political editor wrote recently.

Employment Is For 'Eternity'

KYOTO, Japan (AP) — Taking Japan's lifetime employment system one step further, an industrial ceramics company is offering its workers a chance to stay on the job through eternity.

The Kyoto Ceramic Co. will commemorate its 23rd anniversary next spring by opening an employee cemetery, company spokesman Takayuki Maeda said today in a telephone interview from the northern Japanese city.

Maeda told The Associated Press the company has acquired a tomb capable of holding the remains of 2,000 workers and their families at Kyodo's Empuku-ji Zen temple.

"Many people worked very hard for the growth of the company and we want to reward their loyalty by comforting the spirits of those who die," he said.

"We don't want our workers to feel lonely, so we have provided a place where we can meet our friends in heaven and enjoy and talk to each other. We are all members of one family, so it is natural to stay together after we die."

In Japan's close-knit society, most employees stay with the same company throughout their working life. In exchange, the company provides training, job security, housing and other benefits and increased salaries for every year of service.

To make sure that company camaraderie does not perish, Kyoto Ceramic Co.

plans to hold occasional drinking parties at the tomb, where a cup or two can be raised to those who gave their lives to the business, Maeda said.

Although some younger employees would prefer to put off decisions about a final resting place, most workers have expressed appreciation of the company's gesture, he said.

Kyodo Ceramic, which began in 1959 with eight workers, now employs more than 5,000 people, Maeda said. It is one of the highest rated stocks on the Tokyo Stock Exchange.

Streamlining Is Watt's Goal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary James Watt says rules he is proposing would streamline the government's coal leasing program and speed up the offering of land for leasing.

The changes, which Watt announced Wednesday after having them under review since January, would give the coal industry more of a voice in the leasing program and would ease some environmental restrictions.

The changes are intended to eliminate "regulations and policies that hindered responsible and efficient production of federal energy resources," according to the Interior Department.

Crunch On Farm Income Felt Throughout Industry

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The crunch on farm income is being felt throughout the agribusiness world, including the fertilizer industry, a new Agriculture Department report indicates.

Total U.S. fertilizer use in the 1981-82 marketing year that runs through next June 30 is expected to be about 23.4 million tons or "close to last year's level," the department's Economic Research Service said Wednesday.

But if the financial outlook improves by next spring the overall use of fertilizer could be boosted 1 percent to 2 percent from last year, the report added.

"The fairly stagnant outlook for fertilizer use arises from reduced agricultural commodity prices, which will not encourage either significant expansion in crop acreage or increased application of fertilizers," it said.

"Interest rates on farm production loans are expected to remain relatively high during the planting season. As a result, there's little incentive for farmers to greatly expand input use."

The analysis said fertilizer prices paid by farmers, overall, could average 6 percent to 7 percent higher next spring than they did last spring. They were up 7 percent from a year earlier during last spring's planting season.

However, the report said "above-normal inventories of phosphate and potash" could help dampen price increases.

Compared to phosphate and potash, nitrogen prices could show the biggest year-to-year jump by spring, up by as much as 10 percent.

"Supplies of fertilizer materials will be adequate to plentiful," the report said. "The domestic industry is coming off its second consecutive year of high production and less-than-expected use of phosphate and potash."

Analysts said above-normal inventories carried over from last season and production currently "could easily supply expected use this year."

"Nitrogen supplies will likely remain adequate, because production from available capacity and imports will offset modest increases in demand," the report said.

The stagnant U.S. fertilizer situation is in contrast to indications that world use will probably increase 5 percent this year, rising to more than 124 million tons.

"World supplies of nitrogen, phosphate and potash fertilizers should be sufficient to meet expected demand through 1985-86," the report said.

"Still, nitrogen supplies are forecast tighter than other nutrients tthrough 1985-86," it added. "The nitrogen supply-demand balance suggests that some additional (production) capacity will be needed if farmers are to avoid a large price rise by the mid-1980s."

WASHINGTON (AP) — World coffee production in 1981-82 is estimated at a record 96.9 million bags, up 15 percent from last season, says the Agriculture Department.

The department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday the latest forecast is up 12.6 million bags from a revised estimate of 84.3 million bags harvested in the 1980-81 season.

A bag of green, unroasted coffee beans weighs 60 kilograms or about 132.2 pounds.

Besides informing Americans about one of their favorite beverages, the periodic coffee figures play a role in assessing how U.S. agricultural imports may shape up. Those countries, in turn, buy American farm commodities.

There were no figures to indicate total exportable supplies of coffee, meaning the quantity producing countries have available for export after deducting their own domestic needs.

Officials noted that the latest estimate was up slightly from the 95.3 million bags indicated for 1981-82 in a similar report in September.

"The improved outlook in major African coffee producing countries is largely responsible for the upward revision," the report said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The annual garlic report by the Agriculture Department shows that production declined this year in all major producing countries except India.

Total production was put at less than 1.7 million metric tons, down 14 percent from 1980, the department said Wednesday.

South Korea's garlic output dropped 39 percent to 154,000 tons "due to drought-reduced yields and a 30 percent drop in planted area," the report said.

In Spain, drought also reduced the crop 30 percent to 218,000 tons, the smallest since 1971. And in Egypt farmers turned to more-profitable vegetable crops, with garlic production declining 19 percent to 162,000 tons.

But in India, the report said, this year's garlic crop, estimated at 240,000 tons, is up 6 percent.

Plan Abolish Teacher Ass'n

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — John Wilson, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, says the decision to phase out its controversial statewide teachers' division was "purely an organizational change" and had no political motives.

The Association of Classroom Teachers will be abolished in 1983 because it duplicates much of the North Carolina Association of Educators' work, Wilson said.

"It's just a structural reorganization, and it's just that," he said. "There's no hidden agenda."

Dissolution of the division came about because local units pushed for it, said Wilson said. "They started saying, 'This is not really efficient,'" he said. "We thought this would mean a better use of our money and a better use of our human resources."

Both associations have a president, publications programs, committee structures and offer service to local units.

"That means that individual members find themselves performing the same tasks," said an NCAE newsletter, though Wilson said the duplicated presidencies had produced no tension between the two groups.

The classroom teachers' division developed when many administrators held NCAE membership and tended to dominate the organization's sessions. Classroom teachers expressed a need for their own division, separate from administrators.

Today, however, 95 percent of the estimated 41,000 NCAE members are classroom teachers, all of whom must join the ACT division.

The NCAE Board of Directors and executive officers of the ACT made the decision for the change which permits local ACT units to retain their names and functions or become affiliates of the NCAE.

New Snowstorm Threatens Northeast

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

A storm that brushed the Midwest with up to 7 inches of snow threatened another whitewashing today for the Northeast, which was hit by more than a foot of snow in two storms this week.

Five people died in snow-related accidents Wednesday. Motorists abandoned their cars on Interstate 91 in Massachusetts, hundreds of schools were shut down and thousands of homes temporarily lost power in the snow-muffled Northeast.

Washington, D.C., got its first measurable snowfall of the season Wednesday and Philadelphia got 4 inches of snow that later turned to slush and refroze, making driving hazardous. New York City had less than an inch.

Searchers found the body of a hiker not far from a shelter on a snow-covered Colorado mountain Wednesday night, and the storms stranded climbers in New Hampshire's Mount Washington.

The Midwest storm spread up to 7 inches in Nebraska, up to 4 inches in Missouri and 3 inches in Kansas. Schools were closed throughout the affected regions and some state offices were shut early.

The National Weather Service issued a winter storm watch today for parts of Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and snow was forecast in Connecticut and New York.

"It was waist deep when I went out to my cruiser to go to work this morning," said Massachusetts state police Trooper Todd Bell of the barracks in Pittsfield, which got 6 inches of snow Tuesday and another foot Wednesday. Other parts of the state, including Boston, got rain and only a little snow.

"With the wind blowing, we got 4- to 5-foot drifts," Bell said. The snow forced the closing of most schools in western Massachusetts.

The steady snowfalls follow two seasons of little or no snow for Massachusetts and other parts of New England. Concord, N.H., already has had 21.5 inches of snow this month — more than twice as much as it got in all of December 1980.

"We're snowed in, pal," reported a truck stop operator near Albany, N.Y., where about 14 inches of fresh snow fell.

"There's a whole bunch of trucks waiting to leave. I was the only guy to make it to work today," said Charlie Sands at the truck stop on the New York Thruway.

A 56-year-old man who drove a tredded snow vehicle up Mount Washington in New Hampshire spent the night in a Berlin, N.H., hospital after being lost for nearly five hours Wednesday in blinding snow and high winds. Phil Labbe was being examined to see whether he had frostbite.

More than 200 schools were closed in New York state

Wednesday as up to 14 inches of snow choked the Catskills and winds gusted up to 46 mph. The Albany area had a foot of snow, one day after a storm dropped up to 6 inches of snow.

The northern suburbs of New York City, northern New Jersey and parts of New England got at least a foot of snow. There was 8 inches of new snow in western Maryland and central and eastern Pennsylvania.

About 34,000 residents in Philadelphia and in the Allentown and Lancaster areas lost power Wednesday as lines were knocked down, but most service had been restored by nightfall. About 2,000 homes and businesses lost electricity in Connecticut.

Police said Victor Kleppinger, 24, of Hughesville, Pa., was killed early Wednesday when a tractor-trailer jackknifed and three other rigs crashed into his car on Interstate 80 near Hazleton, Pa.

In Colorado, where mountainous areas got up to 14 inches of new snow Wednesday, rescue teams searching Long's Peak on Wednesday found the body of James Joseph Duffey III, 24, of Boulder, who was stranded there during heavy snow and high winds Sunday.

A layer of ice under the snow made roads in Missouri slippery, and Carolyn J. Jeffries, 33, of Otterville was killed in a head-on crash on U.S. 50 about four miles west of Sedalia, Mo., the Missouri Highway Patrol said.

Snow and freezing rain in Kansas contributed to a car accident that killed Walter Hubert, 70, of Larned, Kan., authorities said.

Nebraska troopers said Cheryl Lawrie, 18, and Robert Scott, 46, were killed in the collision of a pickup truck and a tractor-trailer on a snow-packed road near Fairmont.

On Long Island in New York, a man was killed on the Montauk Highway when his car skidded into a tree in front of the Good Samaritan Hospital in West Islip.

Three people had died on icy roads in the Northeast on Monday and Tuesday.

Objections By Governor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Alabama Gov. Fob James says he supports the attorney general's efforts to block a second mass release of state prisoners, and the governor says he'll probably launch a legal battle of his own.

The governor's stance, announced late Wednesday night upon his return from an industry-hunting trip to Korea and Japan, differs from his position on the state's first mass release of prisoners in July. At that time James called Attorney General Charles Graddick "legally incompetent" for fighting the court-ordered release.

U.S. District Judge Robert Varner, who freed 277 prisoners on July 25 to ease overcrowding in Alabama's prison system, told the state Monday to release another 352 inmates Dec. 22. The judge said the crowded conditions in Alabama's "grossly inadequate" penal system violate inmates' constitutional rights against "cruel and unusual punishment."

The judge Wednesday removed 23 names from the list — with more deletions likely — after prison officials learned belatedly the 23 were already out of prison or were ineligible due to pending sentences for other crimes.

HANOI-BOUND — Robert U. Muller, executive director of Vietnam Veterans of America, is accompanied by his wife, Virginia, as he leaves the set of the NBC-TV "Today" show in New York. Muller, paralyzed by a bullet through the spine at Con Thien in 1969, and three other veterans from the organization, left New York Wednesday for Hanoi in an attempt to seek help from their former adversaries in relation to Agent Orange damage and in resolving questions about missing American servicemen. Mandel Wants Practice Law

BALTIMORE (AP) — Former Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, just out of federal prison, says he wants to again practice law and "be a useful part of the community."

"I want to be a full-time working man," Mandel, 62, told The Evening Sun in an interview published Wednesday.

Mandel, whose three-year sentence for political corruption was commuted Dec. 3 by President Reagan, said he will try to regain his license to practice law, which was suspended by the Maryland bar following his conviction in 1977. Meanwhile, he said he would go into private business, but stay away from politics for the time being.

He was found guilty of mail fraud and racketeering with five others in a scheme to fix favorable racing dates for a Maryland race track. He was released Dec. 4 from a federal prison at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., after serving 19 months of his sentence. Since then, he has been living at a halfway house in Baltimore where he is completing his sentence.

Collision

Cars driven by Linda Lee Banks of 12A Courtney Square and Samuel William Smith of 107 North Harding St. collided about 7:45 a.m. Wednesday at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Merry Lane.

Police Department investigators estimated damage from the collision at $1,000 to the Banks car and $3,000 to the Smith vehicle.

Chicago Parking Ticket War To Build Up Revenue

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — You can feel the mood darken as she enters the courtroom — smiles melt into scowls and formerly bright eyes take on a mournful hue. Demurely, the meter maid, that light of the law, that paragon of parking, makes her way to the bench. And little more than an hour later, Richard Friedman stands in a cashier's line, and thinks,

"Every dog has his day. Why not me?" Chicago, like big and even small cities everywhere, is suddenly very interested in the money that parking fines represent in these days of shrinking federal revenues.

That interest has translated into get-tough policies that would chill even the most calloused double-parker. Earlier, Friedman, his spirits high, had walked into Judge Glenn Fowlkes' courtroom, already crammed with 100 others, braced to battle the city over parking tickets.

"How do you like that?" Friedman said to no one in particular. "If she doesn't show up, we all walk."

There were sympathetic nods all around, but the fighting spirit waned when that slim, blonde woman — looking solemn in her bowtie and bright green suit — took her place beside the bench.

Although nearly half of those charged plead not guilty, the meter maid, her features impassive, faced down 73 offenders one after another and didn't lose a case.

Not all her opponents conceded.

Number 34 was a small, young woman whose pregnancy was fast nearing its end. She told Fowlkes the muffler had fallen off her car at the spot and on the day in question. Producing a receipt to verify the claim, she went on about having to find a telephone to get a ride and being unwilling to go far "in my condition."

Even as Fowlkes appeared to soften, the meter maid — who so far had stood by silently — asked in a low voice, "Every day?"

"What was that?" the judge said.

"Every day?" the maid replied, turning toward the woman. "Every day? I know this (license plate) number pretty well. I ticket it just about every day."

"Twenty and ten," said Fowlkes. "Twenty dollars for the ticket and ten dollars court costs."

And the quest for parking-ticket fees is being replayed across the country: — In DeKalb County, Ga., police are going door-to-door to collect delinquent fines, demanding a cash bond on the spot or a trip to jail.

— In Detroit, Chief Traffic Court Judge M. John Shamo signaled that city's crackdown by ordering Mabel Adamson to pay $3,000 of the $7,000 worth of tickets she ran up since 1978. Under a $100-a-month plan, Ms. Adamson won't retire her debt until August 1983.

By June, the city was averaging revenue of $375,000 a month from tickets against just $1 million collected during the previous year.

— In Miami and Washington D.C., a scofflaw gets a notice to make good on the fines or face the "boot" — a metallic device that locks on the wheel of an auto, rendering it immobile.

"People thought this crackdown was a big joke, but we're just lacing up that boot until it chokes them," said Judge Harvey Baxter, pointing proudly to parking-ticket revenue of $350,000 a month, a 20 percent improvement over the previous year.

— In New York, Wilfred Flowers, an employee of the federal government earned the uncontestable title of "King of the Scofflaws" by accumulating $102,000 in parking fines between 1975 and 1979. Although he claimed he sold the car to a relative, the transfer was ruled improper. He was found guilty and a judge ordered his salary garnished for $28,000.

Like California, New York has a stop-gap system that prevents motorists from renewing state license plates if tickets are outstanding against that plate.

"That is just about the perfect system," said Anthony T. Bertuca, chief assistant corporation counsel assigned to Chicago's Traffic Court. "That would aid us immensely, but to get it done would take cooperation from the city and state that just hasn't been there yet."

"I know it has been discussed in (legislative) committees from time to time, but as yet state legislators have not deemed it important enough," he added.

But states, like the cities that stand to benefit most from any such arrangement, might change their minds by taking a look at the figures.

This fiscal year, New York — like its scofflaws, the uncontested leader in the field — took in $94 million in parking fines as the result of 9.6 million summonses.

Chicago figures to collect about $22 million in parking-tickets — four million tickets that will be handed out by uniformed policemen and Meter Maids.

Of the remaining 2.3 million tickets, an unknown number will be dismissed in court, said Bertuca. Others will be dismissed, he added, because of error.

"The smooth flow of traffic is the first priority of this system and the court does not want to be used as a revenue-raising device," said Bertuca. "But when you start taking a hard look at some of these figures, it's real money that we're talking about. And cities want to get some of that."

Ingram Speaks In Louisiana

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Insurance Commissioner John Ingram was in New Orleans Wednesday, calling for open competition in automobile casualty insurance before a committee of the Louisiana House of Representatives.

The hearing by the Louisiana House Commerce Committee was held at the opening of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners annual winter meeting.

Ingram called for repeal of the federal McCarran-Ferguson act, a law he said exempts the casualty insurance industry from anti-trust laws. Ingram described it as a tool the insurance industry has used to hamper state regulation.

"There will be no real open competition until McCarran-Ferguson is abolished," Ingram said.

Cooperative Witnesses Said Often See Long Prison Stays

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Witnesses who cooperate in government investigations of organized crime often end up spending more time in prison as an indirect result, says a Senate investigations subcommittee report.

The report, which was critical of the government's witness protection program, said government prosecutors urge cooperating prisoners to fully reveal their criminal activities. The idea is to present a complete picture of organized crime activities.

As a result, the witnesses may provide information unrelated to the crimes for which they were convicted, the report said.

When it comes time to consider the protected witness for parole, officials often use the information against the witness, the report continued.

"Upon seeing his many admissions about other crimes, parole authorities decide the man is more of a menace to society than ever," the subcommittee said. "They have no interest in giving him parole. Cooperating prisoners should benefit from their cooperation, not be punished because of it."

The report was based on hearings a year ago and was made public last week.

The subcommittee urged that the U.S. Parole Commission revise its policy to eliminate any incentive for a prisoner to keep his silence over criminal activities.

Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., the subcommittee chairman, said, "If the word gets out that cooperation will only result in further hardship, then law enforcement agents and prosecutors could face an impossible task in the future."

The subcommittee also criticized other aspects of the witness security program, created in 1970 under the U.S. Marshals Service. The program provides relocation with new identities for some cooperating witnesses.

About 3,500 witnesses are participating in the program.

The subcommittee urged that the program be placed directly under Justice Department control, instead of the marshals service, which is an agency within the department.

In its 1980 hearings, the subcommittee was told by witnesses who had cooperated that they were not given adequate documentation for their new identities; they were not given full instructions on what services they could expect, and they were often unable to get credit or new jobs because of poor preparation by the marshals service.

Witnesses who were jailed said prison authorities were insensitive about their position and their lives were constantly in danger from other prisoners who knew they had cooperated.

One witness testified he was placed in a cell next to the man against whom he had testified.

Hospital Sets

Hiring Freeze

By The Associated Press
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke Hospital imposed a hiring freeze Wednesday, saying reduced reimbursements from the state and federal government have forced the hospital to intensify efforts to reduce costs.

Dr. Andrew G. Wallace, the hospital's chief executive officer, said the hospital treats large numbers of Medicare and Medicaid patients, who make up 40 percent of all of the hospital's patients. He said reductions in those programs left the hospital with no option but to cut expenditures.

In addition to the hiring freeze, the hospital eliminated all but essential overtime, consolidated inventories to reduce supply purchases and deferred equipment purchases.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, adding to Wednesday's losses.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 7.23 Wednesday, slipped .66 to 868.06 by noon today.

Losees held a 6-5 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

On Wednesday the government reported that industrial production fell 2.1 percent in November. That larger-than-expected drop was taken as a new warning signal that the recession might grow more severe than had been expected earlier.

Today Chicago's Continental Illinois National Bank raised its prime lending rate from 15 1/2 to 15 3/4 percent, joining most other large banks at that level.

The NYSE's composite index gained .07 to 71.13. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .08 at 317.89.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 20.27 million shares at noon, up from 17.82 million at the same point Wednesday.

Craven Says No To Bonds

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Craven County Community College President Thurman E. Brock said the "general economic climate" dissuaded the county's voters from supporting bond issues totaling $15.5 million for the college and the local public schools.

The proposed $6.5 million for expansion at the college was defeated by a better than two-to-one margin, 2,769 votes to 1,238, during Tuesday's election.

The school system had asked for $9 million for construction of two new schools and renovation of three other schools. Voters turned down that request 2,537 votes to 1,514.

An election official said even the areas that stood to gain the most from the school bond voted against it. Jasper voters rejected the bond 142 to 37, Fort Barnwell 72 to 27 and Havelock 210 to 134.

The New Bern-Craven County school board planned to build a new school between the existing Jasper and Fort Barnwell schools and a new elementary school in Havelock.

Brock said that the college still has building needs and that the issue is now in the hands of the college's board of trustees.

School Superintendent Ben Quinn said that, though he is disappointed, the school system will look at other ways to address its building needs.

Would Help Pay For Houses

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A group studying ways to encourage growth in northeast Mecklenburg County is recommending that the local government pay developers up to $2,000 for each new house they build there.

Comprised of Charlotte-Mecklenburg planning commission staffers, University of North Carolina-Charlotte officials and business leaders, the group recommends the city and county subsidize the cost of water and sewer tap-ins for northeast developers.

A draft report containing the recommendations says more housing is needed in the northeast because businesses are moving there.

The Charlotte-Mecklenburg Planning Commission will review the recommendations at its January meeting before forwarding the report to the city council and county commissioners for final action.

Sent Olympians To Fort Bragg

Pitt County sent 25 youngsters to the Special Olympics Fall State Games held at Fort Bragg last weekend.

The state games were part of the year-round program of sports training and athletic competition provided to the mentally retarded through Special Olympics. Athletes who participated in the state-level games must first compete in local athletic competition.

On Saturday, the athletes gathered at various sites to compete in team basketball, bowling and run, dribble and shoot events.

North Carolina will host delegations from Alabama, Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi and Tennessee for the 1962 Southeast Regional Winter Games in Boone Jan. 17-20. The games will consist of ice skating and Alpine and Nordic skiing events. For more information on the Winter Games, contact the N.C. Special Olympics State Office at P.O. Box 30191, Raleigh, 27652.

Disappointed

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Eugene Johnston, R-N.C., said he was disappointed with Wednesday's passage of a bill restoring the minimum Social Security benefits to 3 million recipients.

Johnston, who voted against the measure, said the benefits will be paid with money taken away from Medicare.

Pirates Test Field In W. Va. Tourney

It'll be three break-even teams going up against the home-standing favorite Friday and Saturday night in the Mountaineer Classic, hosted by the University of West Virginia in Charleston.

East Carolina, which brings in a 2-2 record, will be meeting Long Island University, 3-3, in the tournament's opening game at 7 p.m. Friday night. West Virginia, now 4-1, takes on 3-3 Manhattan in the second game, at 9 p.m.

The consolation game is scheduled for 7 p.m. Saturday, with the championship at 9.

West Virginia has won three of the five Mountaineer Classics, including the past two. The tournament was originally begun in 1971, but stopped following the 1973 season. It was resumed in 1980. This is the first time it has been held away from the Morgantown campus.

For the Pirates, the tournament will be the first action in ten days: their last game, back on Monday, December 7, when ECU beat Campbell, 66-61, to even its record.

East Carolina, too, is still looking for its first victory away from Minges Coliseum. It lost its only two games away from home, to hosting Missouri, 87-55, in the first round of the Show-Me Classic, and to Canisius, 73-66, in the consolation game of that tournament.

Also, the Pirates are still looking for their first invitational tournament championship since they began Division I NCAA members. They have reached the finals in several tournaments, but have never won one. ECU has won just one game (not counting a game later forfeited to it) in invitational tournament play in Coach Dave Odom's three-year tenure at ECU.

And that's something he doesn't like. Long Island's 3-3 mark includes an opening game win over Pratt, 118-60, followed by three straight losses — to Maryland, 87-79, to Detroit 73-72, and to Baltimore, 96-91, in a triple overtime. Since then, they've won two in a row, beating Hofstra, 80-72 in overtime, and Tuesday night, downing Pace, 90-74.

"Long Island played in the NCAA last year," Odom pointed out. "They have everybody back. Against Maryland, they were down just six points with four minutes to go and lost by 11 points.

"They are a very good team. They are very quick and play with a great deal of confidence. They can shoot it. I'm familiar with their personnel through summer camp and Riley Clarida is their most productive front liner."

Clarida, a 6-7 senior forward, was averaging 14.7 points a game in the latest stats available. Senior guard Earl Fuller, 5-9, was the leading scorer with a 16.3 average, while his backcourt partner, 5-10 Robert Cole was scoring 15.7, and swingman Eric Short, 6-4, was hitting 11.3. Rounding out the prospective starting lineup is forward Russell Davis at 6-6. He's averaging 6.3 points a game.

Clarida is the leading rebounder with an 8.0 average, while Short averages 7.3 per game.

Manhattan is also 3-3 on the season. The team opened with an 80-68 win over Dowling, then lost to Fairleigh-Dickenson, 71-69. They beat West Chester State, 64-55, before losing to Seton Hall, 67-62, and St. John's 85-54. They downed St. Francis (Pa.) on Tuesday, 68-59.

Manhattan is led by 6-1 guard John Lenoard, averaging 21.3 points a game, while 6-7 forward Tim Cain has a 16.3 average.

West Virginia, which will probably draw the favorite's role, opened the season with a 111-63 win over St. Leo's, then lost to Marshall, 91-78. They have since recorded wins over Robert Morris, 84-64, Ohio State, 73-68, and on Tuesday, they beat Wisconsin-Superior by a whopping 113-54 total.

The Mountaineers have four starters in double figures, 6-7 forward Russel Todd, 16.5 and 10.0 rebounds; 6-1 guard Greg Jones, 16.0; 6-5 forward Michael King, 11.0, and 6-0 guard Diego McCoy, 10.0.

East Carolina's Pirates, with three starters in double figures are led by guard Tony Byles at 14.8, followed by Morris Hargrove at 10.8 and Charles Green at 10.5.

Hargrove is the leading rebounder with a 6.5 average.

The status of forward Mark McLaurin is still uncertain for the tournament. McLaurin suffered ligament problems in his shooting hand during pre-season practice, and has not played to date. He will make the trip, and may play if able.

For the Pirates, it will be their first meeting with Long Island — the only team in the tournament that ECU has not previously met. The Pirates stand 1-0 against Manhattan, and has yet to beat West Virginia in seven tries.

East Carolina's next action, following the tournament, will be Tuesday, when the Pirates travel to Durham to meet the Duke Blue Devils.

Jackets Roll To Victory

ATLANTA (AP) — With Atlantic Coast Conference scoring leader Brook Steppe on the bench it looked like West Chester State might have a chance against Georgia Tech.

But when Steppe, who is slowed by an ankle sprain, came into the game Wednesday night, Tech romped to an 89-60 nonconference basketball victory over the Golden Rams.

Tech, which has had an 11-day layoff for exams, trailed 9-6 when Steppe came in four minutes into the game. In minutes the Yellow Jackets had a six point lead.

They held the six point lead at intermission, but then Steppe and Brian Howard went to work.

The two combined for 22 points in the second half as the Yellow Jackets overwhelmed West Chester's man-to-man defense and forced several turnovers by the Golden Rams' offense.

Seven minutes into the half, Tech led 58-41.

Steppe, who had a 24-points-per-game average going in, finished with 15 points and Howard added 16. Forward Maurice Bradford scored a game-high 22 points for Tech, now 3-1.

Tech made 65 percent of its field goal attempts, with Bradford hitting 10 of 13 and Steppe and Howard combining for 10 of 13.

West Chester, 1-8, was led by Kevin Givens, who got 21 points. Rick Gillam added 17 and Brad Pencyl scored 14.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — George Welsh, who restored Naval Academy football to respectability, didn't mince words.

Welsh, who was introduced Wednesday as the University of Virginia's next football coach, said he expected similar success in his new position.

"I didn't come here to win four games," he said. "I'm not going to be foolish now. If there weren't problems, I wouldn't be here. But if you accept less than the top, you're not going to make it. You're not going to come close."

The eight men who've coached the Cavaliers since 1952 managed only two winning records in 29 years.

Six of Welsh's eight predecessors have been fired. The last, Dick Bestwick, was fired by U.Va. Athletic Director Dick Schultz on Nov. 30 after five years and a 16-49-1 record. Bestwick had three years to go on his contract.

Bestwick refused to agree to meet certain guidelines for next year, one of which was that the Cavaliers win six games, and was fired by Schultz, who's in his first year as athletic director.

Welsh, 48, will not take over his new job full time until after Jan. 1, for he still has one more game to coach for Navy — a Dec. 30 Liberty Bowl date against Ohio State's Buckeyes.

"It's my responsibility to take this Navy football team to the bowl game. That's my first priority right now," Welsh said at a news conference on the Virginia grounds in Charlottesville.

The Cavaliers, who won just one of 11 games this past season, will open their 1982 football season Sept. 11, in Annapolis, Md., against Navy.

A 10-year assistant under Rip Engle and Joe Paterno before he took the Navy job in 1973, Welsh has compiled a 55-45-1 record in his nine years at Navy. His record includes seven victories, one tie and one defeat against arch-rival Army.

"Hopefully this will not be too great a challenge," Welsh said at the news conference. "It's something I'm looking forward to. After nine years at Navy I felt it was time to leave."

"I'm looking forward to working with the people here. I have a good relationship with Dick Schultz. He's been very

Vikings Roll To Fifth Win

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's wrestlers continued to roll along unbeaten last night, winning their first Coastal Conference match as White Oak went down, 53-14.

The Vikings won 10 of the 13 weights and pulled out a draw in another. White Oak's two victories both came on pins, however.

Five Viking wrestlers have posted 5-0 records. They are Reginald Moore, 105, William Green, 112, Lorenzo Strong, 145, Willie Greene, 167 and Paul Menichelli, heavyweight.

The Vikes, also 5-0 overall, travel to Farmville Central on Friday.

Summary:

school with high academic standards and built-in situations which make their recruiting much tougher than ours."

Welsh was offered the Cavalier coaching job in 1975 after Sonny Randle was fired, but he turned it down. "I was not interested then," he said. "I'd only been at Navy three years. I'd just gotten started."

Welsh, aware that academic standards have proven a problem in recruiting athletes at Virginia, said, "Virginia is an outstanding academic institution. I like the idea of having both, of having a high graduation rate and being able to play good football every week, too."

"If there was ever a time to come to a place like Virginia, it's now. Scholarships are leveling out. There are a lot of good kids coming out of high school. There are a lot of good people to go around for everybody."

He indicated he would like to bring many of his present assistant coaches with him when he moves to Charlottesville.

Lucas Deal No Question Mark Bearcats Top Duquesne

For Their 1,000th Win

By The Associated Press
The New York Knicks picked up Maurice Lucas from the New Jersey Nets at the start of the season in what some considered a questionable deal. But the veteran frontcourt player has been an exclamation point for them so far this year.

"We've been physically improved because of Maurice Lucas," said New York Coach Red Holzman after watching the veteran help the Knicks beat the Philadelphia 76ers 117-115 Wednesday night.

Lucas' contribution included 23 points and 18 rebounds and the game-winning basket.

Lucas' powerhouse game provided the Knicks with a dramatic rebounding advantage. Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham said the 76ers were beaten on the boards at both ends of the court.

"We missed Caldwell Jones," Cunningham said of the 76ers' 7-foot sixth man, out with a foot injury. "But it's nothing new for us to get beat on the boards."

In other NBA action, it was Boston 109, Dallas 92; Kansas City 97, Phoenix 81; Washington 106, Cleveland 102 and Chicago 98, New Jersey 97 in overtime.

The 76ers played catchup ball all the way, scoring 16 points early in the fourth quarter to tie the game at 115 before Lucas put in his game-winning shot off a rebound. New York's Michael Richardson was the game's leading scorer with 30 points while Julius Erving had 21 for Philadelphia.

Celtics 109, Mavericks 92
Larry Bird contributed 30 points and Boston broke open a tight game in the third period to beat Dallas. With Boston leading 65-61, Robert Parish and Kevin McHale scored on consecutive fastbreaks to give the Celtics a 69-61 lead with 3:36 left in the third quarter. It was their biggest lead up to that point and Dallas could come no closer than six points to the Mavericks.

The Mavericks played without leading scorer Mark Aguirre, who underwent foot surgery Tuesday. Rookie Jay Vincent started in his place and led Dallas with 27 points.

Kings 97, Suns 81
Cliff Robinson scored 30 points, and rookie Steve Johnson added a career-high 23 to lead Kansas City over Phoenix. Robinson and Johnson outscored the Suns 16-6 in a third-quarter surge as the Kings built an eight-point lead, then broke open the game in the fourth period.

"We're not world beaters," said Kansas City Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons. "Collectively, this is the best we've played, though. It was the best game Cliff Robinson played all year. I'd been on his shot selection, but tonight I thought he made just one bad shot."

Bullets 106, Cavaliers 102
Frank Johnson scored 22 points, including the final six, to spark Washington past Cleveland.

With less than 90 seconds left and the Bullets trailing 102-100, Johnson dropped in two free throws. After Cleveland forward Mike Mitchell missed a shot, Johnson hit a long jumper to put Washington up 104-102. Mitchell missed another shot, and Johnson drove on Geoff Huston for the clinching basket with 11 seconds left.

Greg Ballard led the Bullets with 25 points, while Mitchell topped Cleveland with 23.

Bulls 98, Nets 97
Ricky Sobers hit a 20-foot jumper with one second left in overtime to pace Chicago over New Jersey.

The Nets built a 97-94 overtime lead, but with 38 seconds to play, Reggie Theus narrowed the gap by connecting on a pair of free throws. The Nets then missed a chance to surge ahead when center Sam Lacey missed a three-pointer with 14 seconds left.

In regulation time, Chicago took an 86-76 lead with 5:30 remaining on an 18-foot jumper by Theus. But the Nets, propelled by six points from Otis Birdsong, rallied with a 12-2 spurt to tie the game at 88 with 2:17 left.

Sobers scored a game-high 22 points, while Theus added 18.

By The Associated Press
At the start of this season, 24 college basketball teams had reached the 1,000-victory plateau and the Cincinnati Bearcats were on the verge of making the elite group.

Wednesday night, they joined the club.

With Bobby Austin scoring 24 points and Dwight Jones 20, the Bearcats posted the 1,000th victory in the school's history with a 79-60 decision over Duquesne.

The Bearcats started playing basketball 81 seasons ago and their tallest accomplishments came in the 1959-1963 period, when they visited the Final Four five times under Ed Jucker and won the NCAA championship in 1961 and 1962.

This year's team may not be up to those earlier powerhouses, but Cincinnati Coach Ed Badger is content with a 5-1 season so far.

"We really are where we want to be at this time," said Badger. "We are young with freshman trouble. The one thing that pleased me tonight was our defense and our bench."

Badger used all of his 12 players in the game which the Bearcats blew open in the first four minutes of the second half by taking a 37-24 lead.

"They got away from us in the second half," said Duquesne Coach Mike Rice. "I thought we had a chance when we held them to a small lead at the half (29-24) but they got away from us too fast at the start of the second half."

The 19th-ranked Georgetown Hoyas, only Top Twenty team in action Wednesday night, beat George Washington 61-48 as Eric Floyd scored 12 of his 17 points in the second half.

"Eric was just doing what I expect him to do," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson of Floyd, who hit 7 of 10 shots from the floor. "He's great. He does it when you have to have it."

The presence of 7-foot freshman Pat Ewing has opened up the Georgetown offense this season.

"The shots are coming a lot easier," said Floyd. "They have to go back on Pat. Most teams would rather get beat on the outside than inside."

Floyd, meanwhile, did what comes naturally.

"The shots were there so I took them," he said. "If anyone else had them, they would have an obligation to shoot."

Elsewhere, Sean Tuohy hit six free throws in the last minute to help Mississippi beat Georgia 56-54; Harold Martin's 20 points led South Carolina over Brown 105-77; Kenny Wilson's 19 led Davidson past Appalachian State 64-62; Matt Houpt's free throw with 10 seconds left lifted UNC-Charlotte over Campbell 71-69; Brooke Stepe and Brian Howard combined for 22 points in the second half as Georgia Tech stopped West Chester State 89-60.

Claiborne Is Kentucky Coach

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jerry Claiborne learned his football under Paul "Bear" Bryant as both a player and coach.

However, Claiborne says he will just be himself as he tries to turn around a University of Kentucky football program that has struggled in the shadow of Bryant for nearly three decades.

Claiborne, head coach at Maryland for the past 10 years, was signed to a five-year contract as the new Kentucky head coach Wednesday after receiving the unanimous approval of the UK Athletics Board.

Kentucky has never regained the glory years of Bryant in the late 1940s and early 1950s. Fran Curci, the fourth coach since Bryant, was fired Nov. 24 with three years remaining on his contract after his fourth consecutive losing season and an overall 47-51-2 record in nine years.

"I would like to see the Kentucky program back on top again," Claiborne said following his appointment.

However, he said he would have to accomplish that with his own natural attributes and not anything copied after other people, such as Bryant.

"I can't be Paul Bryant," Claiborne said. "Some people make the mistake of trying to emulate others. I have to be myself."

Claiborne said his main attributes are hard work and an ability to communicate with his players.

Claiborne said he was anxious to meet with the Kentucky squad "and get to know them better."

A native of Hopkinsville, Ky., who played at UK under Bryant from 1946-49, Claiborne said "It's good to be home."

Claiborne served as an assistant to Bryant at Kentucky, Texas A&M and Alabama before becoming head coach at Virginia Tech in 1961 and compiling a 61-37-2 record over the next ten years.

After being unexpectedly fired at Virginia Tech, Claiborne was an assistant at Colorado for a year before taking over a moribund Maryland program in 1972 that had posted a 7-25 record over the previous three years.

Claiborne's Maryland teams have been 77-37-3 over the past decade, with three Atlantic Coast Conference titles and seven bowl appearances. This season's 4-6-1 mark was his first losing season.

The 53-year-old Claiborne conceded that the Kentucky job would be a challenge, "but if I didn't think I was up to it I wouldn't take it."

Claiborne said he also hopes the university administration, faculty and students and the fans in the state will rally behind the football program and forget the problems of the past few years.

In addition to his losing record, Curci was plagued by a series of highly publicized off-the-field incidents involving his players.

"What happened in the past is water under the dam," Claiborne said.

Without A Conference Jaguars Look Elsewhere For Competition

By RICK SCOPPE

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central is a wrestling team without a conference, not to mention a state champion.

With D.H. Conley having moved to the Coastal Conference and Southern Nash and North Pitt having dropped wrestling, Farmville was left alone in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

The disbanding of the ECC forced first-year coach Gilbert Carroll to look elsewhere for matches. "I had to start from scratch," Carroll said. "I had to get on the phone and see if I could get some matches for the guys."

Carroll did his job well, perhaps too well. Not only did Carroll manage to schedule two tournaments — one next week in Lumberton and one a week before the sectionals in February — but five of the Jaguars' 10 dual matches are against teams ranked in the top 20 in the state, including both D.H. Conley (7th) and Plymouth (16th).

"It's good experience for the kids and it allows them to see how far we have to go to get where these other teams are," Carroll said. "We could have got some weak team — if I had known which teams were the weak ones — but I went out and got some of the best."

One of Carroll's top priorities was to find a tournament the Jaguars could enter the week before the sectionals on Feb. 12-13. After some searching, he found one in Cape Hatteras.

"The experience and pressure and physical demands of a tournament is what they (the wrestlers) need before a tournament," Carroll said. "Had we not gotten this tournament the kids would have gone into the sectionals having not wrestled in two weeks."

The tough schedule has had its drawbacks, however, the chief one being a less-than-impressive record. Farmville has won only one match in four outings this season, losing to powerful D.H. Conley in its opener and then falling to Wilson Beddingfield and Havelock before topping Camp Lejeune.

"I'm not disappointed, but I'm not real happy we haven't done better as a team," Carroll said. "There have been some high spots individually and I think we're improving with every match."

"We've only got two seniors, though, and we'll definitely be a much better team next year."

The Jaguars lost three outstanding wrestlers to graduation and return only three starters. Lost were state heavyweight champ Ronnie Locust along with Roger Joyner, who finished fourth in the state, and Chris Sutton, the ECC champion.

Back this season for the Jaguars are Joel Shackelford at 119 pounds, Jerry Foreman at 126 and Charles Sutton at 195. Jay Tyson, at 132, and Johnny Ford, at heavyweight, were on the team last season but did not start. Both are starters this year.

The remaining eight grapplers are first-time wrestlers. They are: Anthony Streeter (98), Kent Speight (105), Harvey Rogers (112), Connie Streeter (138), Ben Williams (145), Rusty Cotton (155), Bobby Daniels (167) and Richard Harper (185).

Holmes, Cooney Set To Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — "There's somebody on the horizon to take Larry Holmes," says the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion, "I'm getting the opportunity to shut up more mouths."

The somebody is Gerry Cooney. The horizon is March 15, when Cooney will become the 12th man to try to dethrone Holmes.

The pertinent information about the Cooney-Holmes bout already was known, but the two unbeaten fights got together Wednesday at a news conference to kick off the promotional campaign for a fight at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev., in which each reportedly will receive $10 million and which stands to gross more money than any bout in history.

It is a fight which has all the ingredients needed for a big event — two unbeaten boxers, age vs. youth, age vs. experience, and enough questions to be answered to make any fight fan drool in anticipation.

Dennis Rappoport, who manages Cooney with Mike Jones, pointed out the age difference — Cooney is 25, Holmes 32. "Gerry's young, but he's not smarter," said Holmes.

"My prediction is to win," said Cooney who will go into the fight with just 3 minutes, 43 seconds of actual fighting in 17 months. The 6-foot-5 power puncher knocked out Ron Lyle at 2:49 of the first round Oct. 25, 1980, then ran his record to 25-0, with 21 knockouts, by knocking out Ken Norton at 54 seconds of the first round May 11.

Won't the fact that many of his fights have ended early adversely affect him if he doesn't get to Holmes early, Cooney was asked?

"I hope when I get through, and I come to a press conference like this, you'll ask me the same question," replied Cooney.

Contending that Cooney has gained his No.1 ranking by both the WBC and the World Boxing Association against generally weak opposition and has kept it with only the Norton fight this year, Holmes said. "This is a justice fight," said Holmes. "Wherever Cooney is today, we all know he doesn't deserve to be there."

"I promise you. I promise myself," said Holmes when asked if he thought he would knock out Cooney. "No prediction (on a specific round), but he's a 6-round fighter."

Holmes has defended the title four times beginning Oct. 2, 1980, when he stopped Muhammad Ali after 10 rounds. He then outpointed Trevor Berbick, knocked out Leon Spinks in 3 and stopped Renaldo Snipes in 11. But he was knocked down in the seventh round by Snipes.

"I don't like to talk this way, but if I was Snipes, Holmes wouldn't be champion any more," said Cooney.

"How many of our great champions haven't been knocked down and gotten up and rallied to win," said Eddie Futch, Holmes' chief trainer. "That is a test of a champion."

Tickets for the fight, which will have worldwide television coverage, will be scaled from $600 down to $50 and went on sale Wednesday, according to Bob Halloran, corporate director of sports for Caesars World. There will be closed-circuit television in the United States and Canada, with home pay TV available in some areas.

Odom: Pressure Affects Choices

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — East Carolina University basketball coach Dave Odom says many players succumb to peer and community pressure by attending schools with major basketball programs, only to find that they seldom see action.

"It takes a lot of courage for a youngster to say 'No' when his peers, or people in the community want him to go to a certain school," said Odom during an address at the Raleigh Sports Club Wednesday.

"What they (the prospects) don't realize is that the TV lights grow dimmer as time goes on. Sitting on the bench clapping and patting rumps wears out after a while."

Odom insisted that he knew of no coach who intentionally misled prospects into signing, saying the guilty parties almost always were friends and local patrons of high school basketball programs.

He said many players would be better off at smaller schools, where they could play major roles, instead of at big-time schools where they'd do little more than warm the bench.

"I have a son and if he developed to that stage I would tell him to choose wisely where you go and where you think you can make a contribution on the court at game time," Odom said. "People in the community do not always advise correctly."

"Players always say they want the best education. All schools make that available. Guilford (Odom's alma mater) is a great small school, but I have never gotten a job because of where I went to school and I have never failed to get a job because of where I went to school."

The Pirate coach said he believes in recruiting hard, but in recruiting only players he believes will be integral parts of the program.

"Every player we recruit we think can play — maybe not immediately, but perhaps by his junior year," said Odom, who is in his third season at ECU. "If he doesn't play — I mean about 20 minutes a game — by then, we are disappointed."

Washington State Faces Job Of Stopping BYU's Jim McMahon

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Coach Jim Walden, only half kidding, says Washington State's Holiday Bowl strategy Friday night against free-scoring Brigham Young University and quarterback Jim McMahon is simple: "Somewhere along the way, we've got to make them punt."

Washington State, one of the nation's surprise teams with a 5-2-1 record in the Pacific-10 Conference, is a three-point underdog to 14th-ranked BYU, 10-2, and McMahon's "army of targets," as Walden calls them.

Kickoff for the nationally televised game is 6 p.m. PST, but the telecast will be delayed two hours.

If 20th-ranked Washington State, 8-2-1 overall, is going to make good on its first bowl appearance in 51 years, the key is keeping the game close, says Walden.

Stopping McMahon is not a realistic goal, he allowed. "You don't stop Brigham Young's passing attack," says Walden. "Limit it, hopefully... take away the passes they want most, maybe... delay it, possibly. Stop it? No."

McMahon, whose destroyed the NCAA record book by setting marks in 55 categories, helped Brigham Young lead the nation in scoring for the third year in a row and passing for the second consecutive year.

Western Athletic Conference champions for the fourth year in a row, the Cougars averaged 38.7 points per game behind an awesome offense that averaged 480.3 total yards per game.

Throw in that Washington State ranked among the nation's most potent offenses, averaging 406 total yards per game, and the matchup has all the makings of another wild-scoring Holiday Bowl affair. In the bowl's three-year history, the last team with the ball came away the winner each time.

A year ago, McMahon staged one of the most incredible comebacks in bowl history. BYU overcame a 20-point deficit to stun Southern Methodist 46-45 behind McMahon, who threw three touchdown passes in the last 2:04 of play.

Washington State counters with one of the Pac-10's best pass rushes and a ground-gulping option attack.

Walden dropped a mild bombshell Wednesday when he announced that sophomore quarterback Ricky Turner will make his first start of the season. Turner, a darting runner who finished No. 2 in team rushing behind Tim Harris, had shared duties all season with junior Clete Casper.

Tar Heels Begin Preparations For Another Test: Gator Bowl

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's 11th-ranked football team, its exam schedule virtually complete, starts a different test today — two-day drills in preparation for the Gator Bowl battle with Arkansas.

Coach Dick Crum will guide his team through workouts for the next three days in Chapel Hill. On Sunday, the Tar Heels will head south to Daytona Beach, Fla., for the start of their once-daily, warm weather workouts, which will begin at 7:30 each morning through Dec. 24.

And, although the team will get some time to see the sights of Florida, they'll have to earn each trip.

"When we go to work, we work. There's no fooling around about that," Crum told reporters Wednesday. "But once we're done working, we forget about football and expect the youngsters to enjoy the activities planned for them."

Crum said the early practice time has much to do with keeping the team motivated, and at the same time, allows the squad time to travel to such places as Disney World.

"I think most youngsters hate to go around all day long thinking about a 3 o'clock practice. We just said let's get up in the morning and go practice and you won't have to worry about it the rest of the day," he added.

But even with mixture of business and pleasure, Crum has no intention of taking the Razorbacks lightly.

"Our youngsters know that Arkansas is a very good football team," Crum said. "I don't think we will have any problems with our kids feeling that Arkansas isn't a good ballclub."

Arkansas has several injury problems which could hurt its chance to end North Carolina's two-bowl victory streak, as well as Crum's four-game streak in post-season play.

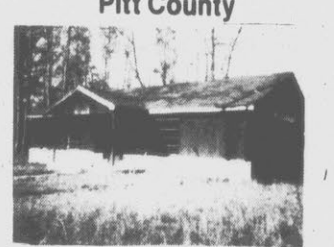

Starting quarterback Tom Jones and backup Brad Taylor have both been hurt during practice. Jones reinjured his knee last week and is doubtful for the Dec. 28 game. Taylor injured his Achilles tendon during a workout last weekend, but is expected to return to action.

The defense is healthy, and is anchored by all-America defensive end Billy Ray Smith.

"They are a very well-balanced football team," Crum said. "Defensively, all you hear about is Billy Ray Smith,

No Sign Of Ending State Bidrigging Investigation

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Investigations into bid-rigging on state projects have mushroomed from highways into nearly all types of contracts and show no signs of ending, state and federal officials say.

"It's like a tar baby — you can't let go of it," said Al Cole, state special deputy attorney general in charge of the bid-rigging probe.

The investigations produced their first indictments for collusion in bidding on highway paving projects in several other states before moving into North Carolina last year. The trail, said Robert E. Block, the U.S. Justice Department attorney heading the federal probe, quickly led from Chicago, to Tennessee, to Virginia and to North Carolina.

So far, 35 paving company executives have been convicted or pleaded guilty to federal anti-trust charges in North Carolina. All but one has been given an active prison term, most running 60 to 90 days.

In addition, 22 companies — some of them with interlocking ownership — have been convicted in federal courts in this state.

A federal grand jury that has brought most of the North Carolina indictments is continuing to meet this week in New Bern. Bloch says the investigation continues, and Cole says he believes the highway probe may be only half finished.

The first step that broadened the probe out of highways came in July, when state agents — acting on a tip — seized records at a Watson Electrical Construction Co. of Wilson. This fall, Watson and eight other electrical firms were indicted on state charges they conspired to rig bids on a $4 million contract for a medical building at East Carolina University.

Watson has agreed to repay the state $1 million in restitution. Charges against one of the companies were dropped last week after prosecutors said they had erred. But Cole says they are looking at all types of state contracts now.

some extent, that there's involvement in all those areas," he said.

The state Board of Transportation has moved to bar from bidding on highway projects companies indicted here or in other states. The electrical companies have been barred from bidding on contracts by another state agency, the Capital Building Authority.

About 50 paving companies have been removed from the list of eligible highway bidders, and 16 companies have been restored after paying the state $11.2 million in cash settlements.

The pattern in most of the cases has been the same. State officials said highway contractors would get together before submitting their bids and agree which ones would get different projects.

Often the contracts were spread around according to geographic regions, and some contractors would bid high — make a "complimentary bid" — to assure the project would be awarded to their designated low bidder.

Contractors sometimes paid cash — as much as $400,000 to one company — for other companies to make high bids.

No state official or employee has been convicted in the case. One Transportation Department official, J. Preston Allen, acknowledged he disclosed confidential internal estimates and accepted free paving work from a contractor. But he was found innocent of influence peddling.

State Highway Administrator Billy Rose contended the department officials didn't detect the rigging or see a suspicious pattern.

"Basically, the arrangement was between contractors and didn't involve the department," he said.

The bid-rigging probe touched the state's second highest official earlier this year. Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green admitted he accepted free paving work in 1977 from a contractor later sent to prison for bid rigging. Green said he paid for paving work at his tobacco warehouse in Clarkton, then received nearly $5,000 in a paper bag from the contractor.

the bid-rigging probe have been close to top Democratic officials. Richard R. "Bobby" Allen of Fayetteville, who pleaded guilty to bid rigging, was a money-raiser for President Carter. Gov. Jim Hunt's administration was embarrassed, too, with the indictment and conviction of S.T. Wooten of Wilson. Wooten had been appointed by Hunt to his Blue Ribbon Study Commission on highway finance needs, which later recommended the gas tax be raised.

In addition, records showed Hunt's 1976 campaign for governor received $38,000 from paving company executives. Hunt said there was no official, including himself, who had any hint of the bid-rigging practice, however.

State officials say they have tried to recover the costs of bid-rigging to the taxpayers through settlements with the companies. But most of the cases have involved 1978 paving projects, and investigators say there is reason to believe bid rigging has gone on for years.

"It depends on who you talk to," said Cole. "One man says 50 years. There were some second-generation people in it who just figured that was the way you did business."

Cole said investigators believe just about every highway project that came in above the state's internal cost estimate was rigged. Those where bidding was competitive usually came in under estimates, he said.

"A lot of times they would take a project and know they were going to lose money, just to protect their territory," he said. "One reason they would do that was because they knew they could make it up with the captured or rigged bids."

And if bid rigging had gone on for years, the state's internal bid estimates were probably artificially inflated since they were based on previous state experience, Cole said. Highway department officials say they can see a difference in bids now. Since June 1980, when the in-

Pledges Better Nursing Record

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina A&T State University Chancellor Edward B. Fort predicted that the school's nursing program would receive full approval from the N.C. Board of Nursing by 1983.

"Ultimately, we are going to get full accreditation," he said. "It's just a matter of time."

"My great disappointment is the fact that, notwithstanding this massive effort, we still find ourselves in a situation where the School of Nursing is left dangling for another year with regard to clinical evaluation and another two years for upgrading the passing rate."

Fort made the comments Wednesday after the nursing board decided to give the N.C. A&T nursing program only conditional approval until the program's graduates improve substantially their passing rates on the state licensing exam.

The ruling means that at least 70 percent of A&T nursing graduates must pass the four state licensure exams to be given between now and July 1983.

In 1981, only 28 percent or nine of the 32 A&T graduates taking the exam passed on the first try.

For the school to be returned to the board's fully approved list of nursing education programs, A&T officials must also submit to the board by July 1 completed plans for evaluating students' clinical experience.

The nursing board approved conditions for accreditation of the A&T program after an hour-long executive session Wednesday in Raleigh. Fort, nursing dean Marietta C. Raines, and professional nursing consultant Rosemary Ritzman offered testimony about the A&T program's improvements before the board went into executive session.

"There's no way we cannot be impressed with the amount of work you've done," said Judith Seamon of Morehead City, chairwoman of the board. "In spite of major odds, you have done a stupendous job, and we want to acknowledge that. We want to give your efforts every opportunity."

But, she added, "We could not find you almost in compliance."

A&T's nursing program has been on conditional accreditation with the nursing board since 1978, when the board found the program in non-compliance with board standards in areas varying from student admissions to library holdings.

On Wednesday, the board said all of the problems had been corrected except the passing rate and evaluation of students' clinical experience, and Fort said the clinical evaluation problems could quickly be solved.

CLAIMS 5,000 ARRESTED — Wearing a Solidarity lapel pin, Prime Minister Kezimevz Sabbat, of the Polish Government in Exile, addresses a news conference in London. Poland Seeking Additional Loans

NEW YORK (AP) — Poland has asked a number of foreign banks for loans totaling $350 million so that past-due interest payments on debts can be met, The New York Times reported today.

The Eastern European nation, plagued with labor unrest, shortages of food and other goods, and under strict military rule, indicated that it cannot pay about $500 million in past-due interest by the end of the year, the Times reported.

Poland owes about $16 billion to banks in non-Communist countries, including about $1.2 billion owed to 60 American banks. The Treasury Department reported that Poland owes $10 billion to some 25 foreign governments, including $2.5 billion to the United States.

Bank Handlowy, Poland's central bank, sent out wires Tuesday to several foreign banks saying the $350 million loan would be repaid in six months, the Times said.

However, the newspaper said, the request was met around the world with skepticism. Several banks indicated that no additional loans would be made until past-due interest, all of it due earlier this year, is paid.

In New York, an emergency meeting was called Wednesday of representatives of the city's major banks, which reacted negatively to the Polish bank's request, the Times said.

One unidentified bank representative quoted in the Times described the response as "decidedly chilly."

Each bank, it was decided, would handle the matter in its own way.

According to the Times, Citibank informed Poland that it would not provide any new credits until past-due interest payments were met. Citibank would not comment on the report.

Bankers were puzzled over why Poland had asked some foreign banks for additional credit, but not others. In the United States, requests were sent to Chemical Bank, Manufacturers Hanover Trust, Bank of America, Citibank, Marine Midland and Morgan Guaranty while Chase Manhattan and Bankers Trust were not asked.

The United States government has not interfered with the individual banks' negotiations with the Poland, the bankers said.

Ex-Senator

Wife, Separate

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Fred Harris, a former U.S. senator from Oklahoma who made an unsuccessful bid for the 1976 Democratic presidential nomination, said he and his wife, LaDonna, have agreed to an "amicable separation."

Mrs. Harris was Barry Commoner's running mate during his campaign for president in 1980, running on the Citizens' Party ticket.

Harris, now a professor of political science at the University of New Mexico, said he would teach in Mexico City next spring and summer in an exchange program, returning to UNM in the fall of 1982.

Creationism, Evolution Taught At Schools

By HARRY RENFREW
 Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W. Va.
 (AP) — Years before the state of Arkansas was taken to court over the teaching of creationism, Kanawha County public schools began teaching the biblical account of creation along with the theory of evolution.

Certainly it is the only one that uses textbooks provided by the fundamentalist Creation-Science Research Center in San Diego, according to a spokeswoman for the center. An emblem on each of the Research Center's books shows the world with a cross in the center, surrounded by the words: "By Him Were All Things Created."

"It is a difficult position," said Marjorie Hall, head of the biology department at Charleston High School. Teachers try their "very best not to offend religious beliefs and stay within the bounds of science. You walk this very thin line."

In a suit being tried in federal court in Little Rock, Ark., the American Civil Liberties Union is challenging a new state law that takes effect next fall requiring schools teaching evolution to give equal emphasis to creationism.

The law differs from regulations in Kanawha County in that religion is not allowed to be mentioned in Arkansas in connection with creationism, which contends that life began from nothing about 6,000 years ago.

Kanawha County integrates the biblical explanation of life's origin into the teaching of creationism.

West Virginia doesn't have a creationism law, but administrators in the Kanawha County school system began to discuss in the early 1970s what they saw as an impending revival of the confrontation between evolutionists and creationists.

Llewellyn Cole, the county's science supervisor, said teachers met to discuss the problem with administrators and eventually decided that the idea of creationism should be taught alongside evolution.

"We all agreed that it is easier to solve a problem than let it get out of hand," she said.

The county bought textbooks from the Research Center for science classes for kindergarten through high school, and when the school board brought up the subject of evolution and creationism, "we had the books on hand and we were ready for it," Miss Cole said.

She said the decision predated a 1974 schoolbooks controversy that led to violence and strikes in the county. Protesters forced the board to withdraw books they said were anti-religious and one of the leader of the protests, Alice Moore, eventually became head of the county board of education.

The Research Center's books call evolution and creation "theories," and discount scientific ideas that the Earth is hundreds of millions of years old and that life evolved gradually from simple cells.

Biblical accounts of the great flood and other disasters are used to explain the disappearance of dinosaurs, the ice ages and upheavals in Earth's geologic history. At the same time, students read science textbooks that say all life evolved gradually from simple cells over millions of years. Helenmarie Hofman, a Washington spokeswoman for the National Organization of Science Teachers, one of the groups challenging the Arkansas law, said Kanawha County's policy is wrong. "It is not science. It is not a discussion of whether it's right or wrong. It's not science and that's the bottom line," she said.

Says Evolution Theory Is Lacking Credibility

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A witness testifying for the state in the trial of Arkansas' creationism law says life probably came to Earth as microorganisms in a comet's tail.

The theory of evolution, N.C. Wickramasinghe of University College in Wales said Wednesday, is no more credible than saying "a tornado blowing through a junkyard would assemble a Boeing 707."

Arkansas' new law, which would go into effect in September, says public schools that teach evolution must teach creation-science, which holds that the universe and man were created suddenly about 6,000 years ago.

The law is being challenged in federal court by the American Civil Liberties Union, which says it violates constitutional guarantee of the separation of church and state, impinging on academic freedom and is vague.

No religious materials can be used to teach creation-science, the law states, but the ACLU says the law is a means by fundamentalists to teach a literal interpretation of the Book of Genesis.

Robert Gentry of Oak Ridge National Laboratories in Washington D.C., testified Wednesday that radiation damage to rocks indicated the Earth might be only a few thousand years old.

Evolution holds that life on Earth developed slowly over millions of years and that the universe has existed for billions of years.

A representative of Moral Majority, meanwhile, charged that the judge hearing the ACLU's lawsuit against the state is biased. A group supporting the law said the law probably will be struck down because of a poor defense by the state.

U.S. District Judge William Overton "conducted himself in a very unusual manner by questioning and attempting to correct" the state's witnesses during testimony earlier this week, Arkansas Moral Majority leader Roy McLaughlin of Vilonia said at a news conference Wednesday.

McLaughlin said he joins "with many others in questioning his neutrality in this very important and crucial constitutional case."

"Let me be quick to say that I am not in any way questioning or attacking the character or integrity of the judge himself," he added.

Federal judges often question witnesses, McLaughlin mentioned one remark by Overton — that a public school is not Sunday School — but gave no further support of why Overton's actions were unusual.

Overton has declined to comment on McLaughlin's remarks.

The Creation Science Legal Defense Fund said Wednesday a creationist victory is unlikely because the state didn't put in 10 percent of the time the ACLU devoted to preparation for the trial.

New Director Extension Serv.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Dr. Chester Black was promoted from associate director to director of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, North Carolina State University announced Wednesday.

The promotion will be effective Jan. 1. He will succeed Dr. T. Carlton Blalock, who plans to retire Dec. 31 after 30 years with the service.

The Agricultural Extension Service is a statewide educational agency that functions as an off-campus arm of the School of Agriculture and Life Sciences at N.C. State.

How A Working Couple Can Retire With $1,308,000.

Introducing The New NCNB IRA.

The new NCNB IRA, the most revolutionary retirement idea in 50 years, starts January 1. In many ways, it's much better than Social Security.

In the first place, under the new tax laws, even if you have a retirement plan where you work, you can now open an NCNB IRA.

Secondly, you can make bigger deposits. For example, a working couple, 35 years old, can deposit up to $2000 each (or a total of up to $4000) a year. At 12% a year, their NCNB IRA's together would be worth over $1.3 million at age 65.

How An NCNB IRA Can Grow:

AGE NOW	SINGLE PERSON AT 65*	WORKING COUPLE AT 65*
30	$1,216,000	$2,432,000
35	654,000	1,308,000
40	348,000	696,000
45	181,500	363,000
50	91,000	182,000
55	41,500	83,000

*Based on a working couple's $4000 (or single person's $2000) annual deposit made on the first of each year at an annual interest rate of 12%, compounded daily on a 365/360 basis.

Working individuals can contribute as much as 100% of their salary, up to a maximum of $2000.

Substantial interest penalty required for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

And, as you can see by the chart on the left, for single people and couples in their 30's, 40's and 50's, with all kinds of incomes, an NCNB IRA can help make retirement a lot easier.

What's more, you can save on taxes. All your IRA contributions are tax-deductible, and you pay no taxes on the interest that you earn now. Then, when you start withdrawing after you retire, and you have to pay taxes, chances are, you'll be in a much lower tax bracket than you are now.

So, sign up now. The sooner you start, the richer you'll be when you retire. The new IRA, from the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

Sign Up Now At NCNB.

U.S. Expected To Back Golan Heights Resolution

By O.C. DOELLING
Associated Press Writer
UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The United States is expected to support a Syrian resolution in the Security Council declaring Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights "null and void" and calling on the Jewish state to reverse its action.

Washington on how to vote, but "there seems to be a broad measure of agreement" on the revised Syrian draft.

The first draft of the Syrian resolution would have required the council to "take necessary measures," meaning sanctions, if Israel did not comply. Since the United States was considered certain to veto any call for sanctions, Syria amended the draft to provide that the council would "consider taking necessary measures."

In the Golan Heights, Arabs began the second day of a general strike that shut down shops, schools and services on the disputed plateau overlooking Northern Israel.

Suleiman Kanj Abu Salah, a Moslem elder in the main Golan town of Majdel Shams, said the three-day strike was designed "to let the Israeli government and the world know we are against this annexation."

"We are Syrian Arabs and we will continue to be Syrian Arabs," he said. "We will never change our nationality."

He pointed out that Reagan administration officials had "expressed concern" over the Israeli move and said, "They should translate this concern into action."

The General Assembly on Wednesday voted 141-1 to adopt a resolution declaring null and void all Israeli legislative actions that "purport to alter the character and legal status of the Syrian Golan Heights."

The resolution, adopted over Israeli objections and with the United States, Guatemala and the Dominican Republic abstaining, also condemned Israel for "attempts and measures to impose forcibly Israeli citizenship and Israeli identity cards on Syrian citizens" on the heights.

The resolution was introduced before the annexation, and 21 countries that abstained when the measure was voted out of committee Nov. 30 changed their votes to "yes" in the assembly polling Wednesday. They included the 10 nations of the European Common Market, whose spokesman, British delegate Charles T.W. Humphrey, attributed the change to the annexation.

The 157-nation assembly also adopted a resolution Wednesday deploring the extradition by the United States to Israel of a Palestinian accused of planting a bomb in a crowded Israeli market. It demanded that the alleged terrorist, Ziad Abu Eain, "be immediately released and that the government of the United States, being responsible for his safety, should facilitate his safe transfer to the country of his choice."

The General Assembly has no power to enforce its resolutions.

Many Gas Stations Closing Christmas

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Motorists traveling in North Carolina or South Carolina on Christmas Day will find stable prices and plenty of gas — if they can find an open service station.

The Carolina Motor Club reports that 70 percent of the stations in the Carolinas will be close on Christmas, and the club urges drivers to fill up the previous day to avoid getting stranded with an empty tank.

"There won't be many opportunities to get gas on Christmas Day," said Quentin Anderson of the Charlotte-based club.

Most of the 180 service stations contacted by the club said they would operate on a near-normal schedule the day before Christmas and the following weekend, Anderson said.

South Carolina currently average $1.37, down half a cent since Thanksgiving.

Anderson said while a gallon of gas is 68 cents higher than the 1978 price, the price of gas rose only 13 cents this year.

COREY'S CHAPEL
The Rev. C. Gardner of Selvia Chapel Free Will Baptist will conduct services at Corey's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church at Worthington Crossroads Friday at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at 3 p.m. the Rev. Jimmy Whitehurst will speak.

According to a club survey, gas supplies are plentiful and prices have stabilized.

"Stabilized prices and an abundance of gas should mean more holiday travel than usual this year," said T. Ed Pickard, president of the club. "Higher air fares and tight reservations are also causing some people who might have otherwise taken a plane to drive their cars."

The club's touring department reported requests for travel information were up 30 percent in November. Preholiday routings are running ahead of last December, the club said.

According to the organization's figures, gas prices peaked at an average of $1.40 in April and have dropped 3½ cents since then. Gas prices in North Carolina and

Chief Justice Suggests Prisons Become Factories

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The nation's prisons should be converted into "factories with fences" to help reduce the cost of the penal system and rehabilitate inmates, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says.

The key to the success of the program, Burger said Wednesday, is acceptance by American business and labor.

Burger urged in a speech at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln that federal and state lawmakers to take four steps before building new prisons:

—Convert prisons "into places of education and training and into factories and shops for production."

—Repeal laws that limit prison industry production.

—Limit "any form of discrimination against prison products."

—Work to change the attitudes of organized labor and business leaders toward the use of prison inmates to produce goods or parts.

While in Lincoln for the speech, Burger knocked a TV camera out of the hands of a CBS News cameraman who tried to follow him into an elevator, CBS said.

A lawyer who witnessed the incident, Richard A. Knudsen of Lincoln, said Burger reacted only after the camera struck him in the face. There was no indication Burger was hurt.

Burger — who attended a party celebrating the 100th birthday of Knudsen's law firm — had no comment, Knudsen said.

In the speech, Burger said, "since we seem to be embarked on a massive prison construction program, we should try a new approach — convert our 'warehouses' into factories with fences around them," Burger said.

He cited statistics showing that $5 billion to $10 billion will be spent over the next 10 years in building new prisons. He said the U.S. prison population has grown steadily to its current total of 350,000 inmates.

"Most prison inmates, by definition, are maladjusted people," Burger said.

"Place that person in a factory, whether it makes ball-point pens, hosiery, cases for watches, parts of automobiles, lawn mowers, computers or parts of other machinery; then pay that person some reasonable compensation, and charge something for room and board and keep, and we will have a better chance to release from prison a person able to secure gainful employment."

FAILURE PENALIZED

MOSCOW (AP) — The chief criminal investigator of Soviet Kirgizia has been fired and other top law enforcement officials reprimanded for failing to prosecute theft and bribery cases, according to a newspaper report reaching Moscow.

Burger said he saw such factory production when he visited a Chinese prison during a trip there last summer.

"Of course, prison production programs will compete to some extent with the private sector," the chief justice said, adding that "the displacement of workers in the private sector would be insignificant in the whole scheme of things."

Burger said he is "confident the enlightened leaders of labor and business will not support reactionary restraints on production of goods in prisons and the movement of such products in commerce."

Such restraints have been imposed in the past.

"To maintain a prison in American prisons costs the taxpayers from $10,000 to more than $25,000 per year," Burger said. "That load should be lightened if not taken off the backs of overburdened taxpayers."

Burger Knocks Down Camera

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Chief Justice Warren E. Burger knocked a television camera out of the hands of a CBS News cameraman who tried to follow him into an elevator, CBS said.

But a lawyer who witnessed the incident Wednesday said Burger reacted only after the camera struck him in the face. There was no indication the chief justice had been hurt.

The incident occurred before Burger gave a speech on prison reform at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

A videotape shown on the "CBS Evening News" Wednesday showed one of Burger's hands reaching out at the camera, then a wildly shifting scene. He was heard to say, "Don't stick that thing in my nose."

CBS said its crew had been trying to question him about statements in a forthcoming book by former White House aide John Ehrlichman that Burger discussed a pending Supreme Court case with then-President Richard Nixon.

Burger did not respond to the questions, CBS said.

Attorney Richard A. Knudsen of Lincoln said he was on an elevator in the Stuart Building when the incident occurred.

Knudsen said a TV cameraman started to get on the elevator with the camera on his shoulder.

"It hit the chief justice on the face, the chief justice turned his shoulder some way and the camera dropped to the floor," Knudsen said. "One of the reporters made mention about assault."

There were four or five people on the elevator at the time, but Knudsen did not identify them.

He said that after the elevator door closed, Burger said he had been hit by the camera. The lawyer said there was some black fluid on Burger's face.

Knudsen said the building manager had arranged for the elevator to be reserved to take Burger and his party to the University Club in the building.

Knudsen, a member of the law firm of Knudsen, Berkheimer, Richardson & Endacott, said Burger later attended a party celebrating the law firm's 100th anniversary.

Knudsen said Burger would have no comment on the matter. CBS News in New York said there were no network spokesmen available Wednesday night for comment.

The chief justice reportedly spent Wednesday night in Lincoln and was to leave the city today.

The Tar Heels Dig In

As this year's college basketball season heats up, the early favorite is North Carolina. The team's strange nickname — the Tar Heels — does not derive from the habit of walking barefoot on blacktop country roads in the summertime. Legends say it dates back to the Civil War. North Carolina troops stood firm in one battle while troops from other southern states fled. Afterwards the Carolinians jokingly remarked that perhaps they'd have to put tar on the boots of their less brave companions. If the basketball Tar Heels hope to improve on last year's number two finish, they'll have to show the same scrappy offense and sticky defense their confederate predecessors exhibited 120 years ago.

DO YOU KNOW — Who are the defending NCAA basketball champions?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The Greek name for the gentle west wind is Zephyr.

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Headaches: A Confusing and Common Complaint

I have given up eating shrimp (I love them) because I get an attack of migraine, especially if the shrimp have an iodine taste. Can other fish do the same thing? — Mr. B.L., Texas.

Dear Mr. L.:

Migraine headaches are the most distressing and confusing complaints brought to the attention of the doctor. A great many misconceptions exist about migraine headaches because their description is often so vague and inconclusive.

Vascular headaches and "cluster" headaches are often used interchangeably because so many of the associated symptoms resemble each other.

There is no doubt that some foods and some types of alcohol may set off a migraine headache. Tyramine is a substance found in high concentration in some cheeses, in chicken livers, and in herring. It is well-known that tyramine can be responsible for the onset of any one of these types of headaches.

It is highly possible, therefore, that foods like shrimp may contain a substance that you are sensitive to. It is fortunate that you have been able to identify such an offender and avoid it. Not everyone is lucky enough to pinpoint the basic problem.

The study of headaches has become an important specialty in medicine. Most hospitals and university medical schools have established headache clinics where intensive study is made on the nature of the headache. The history of the headache is elicited with fine-comb diligence. Then, by a process of trial and error, the triggering mechanism for the headache is traced down.

It is an arduous task. But the coordinated efforts of the doctor and the patient can often pinpoint the origin and the nature of the headache. Only then can the exact drug or combination of drugs be chosen to control the headache and to prevent its repeated onset.

For a large segment of society, headaches account for an enormous waste of functional potential.

Are elderly people immune from acquiring syphilis? — M.B., Ind.

Dear Mr. B.:
No age, no sex, no social or economic level, no race or people in any geographic area can be considered immune to the ravages of syphilis. When a direct contact is made with a person infected with the germ that causes syphilis, there always is the possibility of acquiring it.

Syphilis still remains one of the great scourges of mankind. It is sad to report that syphilis in the young exists today in epidemic form — this despite concentrated

Native Tar Heel No Ordinary Inventor

By Dr. H.G. JONES
For The Associated Press
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Richard Jordan Gatling, a native of North Carolina whose inventions ranged from toilets to torpedo boats, is best remembered for his "labor saving device for killing" — the rapid-fire gun which bore his name.

Born on Sept. 12, 1818, at Maney's Neck in Hertford County, his childhood was typical of the sons of relatively prosperous farmers at the time. Since there were no public schools nearby, he attended a "subscription" school, privately established to provide basic education for children in the area. They were sometimes called "old field schools" because of their customary location in a cleared area no longer agriculturally productive.

The school "year" was usually only three winter months — corresponding to the time when children were not needed to work on the farms. Gatling later attended Buckhorn Academy in Maney's Neck, a private high school from which he graduated at the age of 15 or 16.

His first job — copying records for his great-uncle who was clerk of court — lasted about a year, and it was during this time that he began his career as an inventor. The government was seeking a new system for powering warships, and, as a boy of 17, Richard Gatling developed the concept of the screw propeller and built a model which he presented to the patent office.

Unfortunately, someone else had the same idea a few months earlier and had applied for the patent only a matter of days before.

After working on the family plantation for two more years and spending one term as a teacher in an "old field school," he opened a country store at Frazier's Crossroads in Hertford County, and it became a gathering place for both business and pleasure.

Gatling produced his second most famous and profitable invention in 1839 when he was 21 and still living in North Carolina. Originally patented as a rice planter, he later modified it for use as a "wheat drill," a planting device producing higher yield from fewer seeds.

Five years later, he moved to St. Louis, and by 1845 he was profitably manufacturing his planter on a full-time basis. Eventual profits are said to have been a "fortune."

An unusual episode in Gatling's life took place in 1846 when he decided to study medicine. Speculation is that his interest was generated by his near death from smallpox and pneumonia and the untimely death of three of his sisters. Though there is considerable doubt that he actually graduated from medical school, he was known as Dr. Gatling after 1849. He never practiced publicly and apparently never had any intention of doing so. A biographer has said that Gatling pursued medicine only because of his personal interest in the subject and so that he could care for his own family.

Richard Gatling's most widely known invention and his primary claim to fame was prompted by the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861. Though the history of multi-firing weapons of sorts dates from before the eighth century B.C., there was no satisfactory rapid-fire gun available when the War Between the States began.

Then described as a "non-practicing medico and erstwhile inventor of agricultural machines," Gatling joined the many inventors — some prompted by patriotism and some purely by the prospect of profit — who set out to develop "engines of war."

The original Gatling Gun, patented on Nov. 4, 1862, could fire 200 rounds per minute. Plagued with operating problems, the gun was not readily accepted by the military, though some were used during the Civil War. After considerable refinement, the United States government officially adopted the Gatling Gun on Aug. 24, 1866.

With this mark of acceptance, a world-wide market was developed rapidly, with Russia leading the way for the major European powers to adopt the gun the following year.

During the last 15 years of his life, while continuing to make refinements on his famous gun, he also invented a diversity of things including a torpedo boat, a toilet flushing mechanism, a bicycle which would be powered by the handle bars as well as the pedals, and a steam tractor.

Richard Jordan Gatling died on Feb. 26, 1903, at the age of 84, and was buried in Indianapolis, Ind. He was still a wealthy man, though he is said to have lost over $2 million in development and promotions of his later inventions.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — MODEL WATER SPANIEL PERFORMED WELL IN FIELD TRIALS.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals B

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Don't worry. If the front door is barred, sometimes you can get in through the back door.

South decided that, if both his opponents were honest, there was no point in looking beyond game, so he simply bid what he hoped he could make. The alternative method was to start with a takeout double and then jump to game in spades, but there were pitfalls to that course.

West led the king of hearts, and declarer ruffed. Since he had a sure loser in diamonds, declarer's problem was to hold his losers in the club suit to two. Even if a club finesse succeeded, declarer would still need to ruff a club in dummy, or obtain a club sluff, to achieve that objective.

There was another difficulty. The only entry to dummy was the jack of trumps. If declarer used that card to get to the table to take a club finesse, the defenders could kill dummy's ruffing power by playing a trump as soon as they won a club trick. An alternative line was to lead the king of diamonds to set up the queen as an entry, but the defenders could thwart that by winning the ace of diamonds, and switching to trumps immediately to kill the possibility of a club ruff. Declarer found an elegant solution to his impasse. At trick two he led a low diamond away from the king! The defenders had no counter.

If West played low, dummy's queen of diamonds would win the trick and declarer would finesse the jack of clubs. Even if the defenders won and returned a trump, declarer would have time to ruff a club. So West climbed with the ace of diamonds and shifted to a trump, but that proved to be no better. Declarer won in hand, cashed the king of diamonds, entered dummy by leading a trump to the jack, and discarded a club on the queen of diamonds. When the finesse on the jack of clubs worked, the contract was safe.

North Carolina Brownbuilder Lem Taylor: One of the Best

Lem Taylor, from Edward, is helping build the economic growth and progress of his state as part of Brown & Root's worldwide engineering and construction team.

Lem joined Brown & Root in 1970 as a pipefitter helper and is now a labor general foreman. He attends New Hope Baptist Church in Edward and is also a member of a spiritual singing quartet. On the weekends, Lem enjoys hunting and fishing.

Another thing about Lem: he's one of the best. He's helping Brown & Root do a better job, because he knows his job and gets it done right. His advancement with Brown & Root speaks for itself.

Wherever Brown & Root works, we always look for people like Lem. We give preference in hiring to people in jobsite communities and offer them opportunities to advance as fast and as far as their abilities and merit take them. That way, we share the benefits of every job with local people and share the economic benefits of payrolls, purchases, savings and taxes with local communities and states.

Diablo Canyon Report Alleged Edited

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is investigating allegations that a utility was given an advance copy of an independent consultant's report on the Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant and toned it down.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. has acknowledged that its engineering experts saw a preliminary draft of the safety report, which was written for submission to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, but says it did nothing wrong and did not change the report.

"That allegation is totally untrue and unfounded," said a statement released by PG&E in San Francisco on Monday.

"It is common and approved practice for an engineering consulting firm to ask its client to check a preliminary draft in order to make certain that there are no factual errors or omissions of which the client is aware," the statement said.

A National Public Radio story broadcast Saturday from Washington contended PG&E toned down the report, which was submitted to the NRC on Nov. 18.

The Diablo Canyon plant — which is completed but has not gone into service — has been the object of a number of protests by anti-nuclear activists who contend among other things that the plant would be unsafe in an earthquake.

Consultant Robert Cloud of Berkeley was selected to compile a report on the plant's seismic design after flaws were discovered in late September.

The NRC suspended Diablo's low-power license on Nov. 19 pending completion of a further independent review of the plant's seismic design. PG&E nominated Cloud to participate in that review.

The utility already had received the draft from Cloud when PG&E officials denied on Nov. 3 that they had seen it or would edit it.

PG&E spokesmen Chris Piper said Monday that he believed PG&E attorney Bruce Norton and Vice President George Maneatis were unaware then that some PG&E staff had seen the draft report 11 days before.

"Norton was referring to the report we would be issuing to PG&E and subsequently to the NRC, and in fact it wasn't done," said Cloud in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "The earlier draft floating around was purely our working paper."

"If the implications of this story are that we sent something over to PG&E so they could doctor it up for their own ends, that's simply ridiculous," Cloud said. He said it was standard practice to send drafts to clients for fact-checking.

"PG&E did give us a number of comments, most of which were irrelevant. For certain they did not edit our report, and in fact the report that was finally issued in November was more critical than the draft report," Cloud said.

Robert Tedesco, the NRC's assistant director for licensing management, told the San Luis Obispo Telegram-Tribune on Monday, "We really can't tell if the report was toned down, but that's the inference that one would draw."

The NRC staff, he added, was studying a newly discovered Oct. 21 draft to determine if it is different from the official report, which was dated Nov. 12, but not submitted to the NRC until Nov. 18.

Property Tax Study Goes On

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A legislative committee gave a lukewarm reaction to pleas for higher delinquent-payment penalties from county tax collectors, who said county coffers are being strained by increasingly late payments.

Sen. Jim Garrison, D-Stanly, who was a leading sponsor of bills this year allowing banks to charge higher interest rates on consumer loans, said he feared taxes, inflation and interest rates were making it tough on some landowners and businesses.

"I know your problem, but I think we've got to be awful careful," said Garrison, a member of the Property Tax System Study Committee. "I see there's a breaking point somewhere. You've got to look at the folks as well as the county treasury."

The panel took no action on the requests. The chairman, Rep. Robert McAlister, D-Rockingham, said the commission would continue to hear testimony on property taxes in meetings early next year.

County tax officials representing the North Carolina Tax Collectors Association told the commission Wednesday that the current 9 percent annual interest rate is too low to provide an incentive for tax payment.

"They just laugh at us," said Tom Davis, Wilson County tax collector. "They say, 'Why should I pay now."

I've got my money invested."

C.E. Worley, Alamance County collector, said the current penalty, combined with a long interest-free grace period, provides little encouragement for a money-wise individual or corporation to pay property taxes on time.

He said Alamance County and most other counties in the state are finding taxpayers are waiting longer and longer before paying property taxes.

He said that has put county governments in a cash-flow squeeze and could force some counties to borrow money with tax-anticipation notes.

"Just about every collector I've talked to is down, on a percentage basis," he said.

Davis said the tax-collectors association wants the interest penalty raised from 9 percent to a level closer to that on commercial money markets. He suggested 14 percent.

The collectors said their association also recommended the Jan. 5 delinquent date be moved forward, perhaps to Nov. 1.

The collectors also asked for an earlier date on which they may sell tax liens on property of delinquent taxpayers. That date is now March.

Plan Removal Of Sand, Debris

OCRA COKE, N.C. (AP) — Two projects to remove sand and debris will improve a hazardous portion of a major navigation channel near Ocracoke Island within a month, said a U.S. Army Corps of Engineers official.

Barry Holliday, chief of the navigation branch for the corps' Wilmington district, said work is under way in the Big Foot Slough Channel north of the island to clean out sand and debris.

A buildup of sand has cut the channel width to 60 feet — less than half the normal width. Used by state ferries linking the mainland with the Outer Banks, the channel has been the site of several accidents.

Philadelphia Tabloid Ends

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Journal, a spicy tabloid heavy on sports and crime news, has shut down, citing $15 million in losses and its employees' refusal to accept contract concessions.

"Smile for a super four years," said a tagline beneath the masthead on Wednesday's final edition, which carried the headline, "There may be no tomorrow for the Journal."

"Yes, a decision has been made... There will be no paper tomorrow," said Journal Publisher and President Howard E. Whiting after The Philadelphia Newspaper Guild and Teamsters Local 628 unanimously rejected the company's plan to save $3 million annually through the layoffs of 43 of 157 employees, a cutback in wages and a conversion next month to an all-sports format.

The company's proposal was modified in negotiations that stretched beyond Wednesday's noon deadline, but the package still called for layoffs and wage cuts of 12.5 percent, down from 16 percent. The total projected savings were unknown, but were believed to be about $1.5 million a year.

"Totally unacceptable," said Jim Donahue, president of the Teamsters local, representing 85 drivers and advertising personnel at the morning newspaper.

"There's no way we can swallow that," said Richard Sabatini, administrator for the Guild, which would have lost 17 of 44 editorial positions.

It was the second time this year that a Philadelphia newspaper has sought contract concessions under threat of shutting down.

In August, The Bulletin, once America's largest afternoon daily, stayed in business after eight unions — their members facing the prospect of unemployment — agreed to cutbacks totaling almost $5 million.

"We told them (Journal negotiators), 'You are not the Bulletin,'" said Donahue. The Journal's Teamsters agreed to concessions in 1980 when the paper closed for three days, and have always earned less at the tabloid than they would have at Philadelphia's other three dailies.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

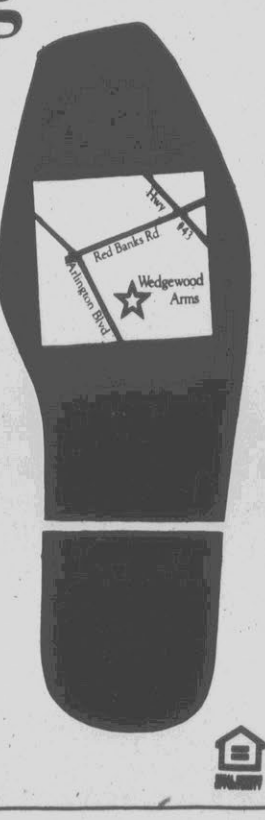

Take the floorplans, they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Comedy Credibility Is Facing ABC-TV

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It all boils down to credibility. If ABC's press releases constantly claim that each of its dozen comedies is a hilarious laugh riot, who's going to believe it when those shows actually are funny?

—Laverne and Shirley swing to new heights of hilarity when they find themselves appearing on television as part of a Latin acrobatic act in an effort to help zany neighbors Lenny and Squigg launch their tacky talent agency in "Laverne and Shirley."

—"Shock waves bowl over the Rush household with the startling announcement that Muriel, 42, is going to have a baby; throwing Henry into lofty euphoria and plunging Jackie and Sara into a sea of embarrassment" on "Too Close for Comfort."

—"Jack faces a breathtaking comical crisis when he's forced to borrow Terri's CPR dummy in a wild scheme aimed at convincing his employer's daughter that he's really a married man" in "Three's Company."

Just like ice cream, comedy comes in many flavors. Some people think Bob Hope is funny; some people favor "Saturday Night Live." But no network goes to greater lengths than ABC to consciously and subconsciously influence the public and television writers with exaggerated and hyped-up publicity information.

CBS and NBC, which have inflated views about their programs — just as ABC does — also produce reams of program information, designed to advise and interest TV writers. But their copy takes a softer sell and is more likely informational than persuasive.

"Bent on having Stella fired from her new job as mayoral assistant, Flora arranges for her to be bribed by a shady character named Slick (guest star Abe Vigoda) — and she takes the cash to catch the crook" in NBC's "Harper Valley."

"Merlin and Alex are peevish at Zac's male chauvinism, especially when Zac uses Merlin's magic to impress a beautiful girl by creating tickets to a sold-out Rolling Stones concert," in CBS' "Mr. Merlin."

The effect of reading ABC's overstatements is to dismiss almost all of ABC's press information as incredible hype. Since ABC's on-air promos are similarly outlandish — also more so than the other networks — do some viewers find ABC's comedies disappointing because they never achieve the anticipated heights of hilarity?

Salesmanship, of course, is an integral part of television. TV is in the business of selling shows to the public, directly through TV promos and guest appearances by stars, and indirectly through the nation's press, which previews shows and writes feature stories about personalities and programs.

ABC has been very effective in promoting its product. A new series or movie in ABC's prime-time lineup means the star will come by to gab with David Hartman or Joan Lunden on "Good Morning America." NBC does the same thing with its "Today" and "Tonight" shows.

ABC also has successfully brought promotion to news. Ted Koppel on a Friday "Nightline" might suggest we watch David Brinkley's Sunday morning program. And ABC's one-minute "Newsbrief" will often have a reference to a story being covered later on "Nightline."

The other networks have followed. When Mike Wallace recently had a prime-time profile on Jean Seberg, "The CBS Evening News With Dan Rather" devoted a long segment to Miss Seberg's case that same night.

Experience

Pays Better

WASHINGTON (AP) — Local radio and TV stations were paying almost the same average salary this summer to entry-level reporters, but television remains a more lucrative field for the experienced broadcast journalist, a new survey shows.

The survey, conducted annually for the Radio Television News Directors Association, found local radio stations paid an average $214 a week to a starting reporter, compared with $223 paid by TV stations.

When asked how much they paid their top veteran reporter, however, radio stations reported an average $268 a week compared with an average $381 a week by TV stations.

The survey said the difference in salaries becomes even more pronounced at the anchorman and news director levels.

Television stations reported paying an average $623 a week to their top anchorman, compared with an average $303 a week for radio. The television news director earned an average $566 a week compared with $298 a week for his counterpart in radio.

The salary study was conducted by Dr. Vernon A. Stone, director of the School of Journalism at Southern Illinois University and chairman of the association's research committee. A total of 449 TV stations and 356 radio stations participated.

The average salary paid to top TV anchormen in the 25 largest markets climbed to $1,296 a week this summer, compared with $581 a week for anchormen working in markets 51-to-100.

On the radio side, a top anchorman in a major market earned an average $462 a week, compared with $267 in a medium market.

But Stone said, "The highest salary of all the TV news directors surveyed, $75,500 a year, was in the 51-to-100 (market) category, as was the lowest, $11,700 a year."

Year Later, Chad Faces Difficulty

By SALET GABA Associated Press Writer N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — One year after the "end" of Chad's civil war...

The country is split into zones controlled by rival political factions. The South, for example, is Vice President Wadal Abdelkader Kamougue's turf.

Eastern Chad is held by rebel leader Hissene Habre and is cut off from the rest of the country. Habre, the former defense minister...

Libya withdrew its 10,000 troops in November at Goukouni's request. But Goukouni's Transitional Government of National Unity...

Despite government radio pleas, very few men in the factional forces have turned in their weapons and joined the tiny National Integrated Army.

A declaration of amnesty last January allowed several thousand Chadians to return home, including some supporters of Habre.

The Libyan pullout was followed by the arrival of about 2,000 peacekeeping troops assembled by the Organization of African Unity.

The president told a news conference on Tuesday: "If the inter-African force does not act militarily, I don't think there will be a positive solution even if the OAU sends us 40,000 men."

He said that unless relations between the OAU forces and his government improved, he would ask for the withdrawal of the foreign troops.

Economically, Chad is in chaos. Residents of the towns are dependent on emergency rations brought in by international organizations.

N'Djamena is somewhat better off than other centers because hundreds of merchants cross the Chari River daily to Kousseri, Cameroon, to buy what they can.

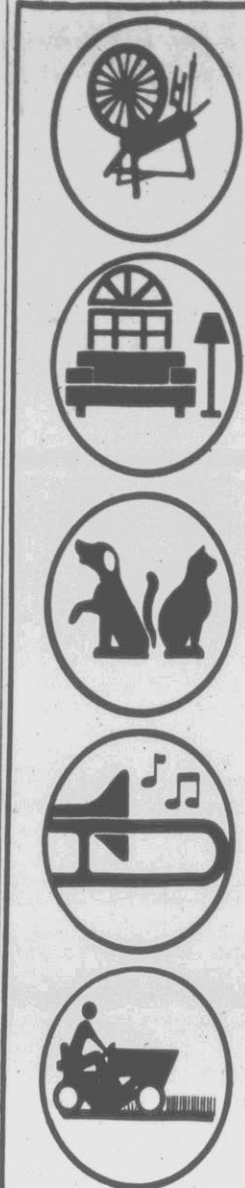

The government bureaucracy left by the French colonial administration is in shambles, beset by a lack of qualified personnel, specific programs and basic materials.

Only two of the capital's 12 professional, technical and secondary schools are open. One, the nursing school, is wholly supported by the U.N. Children's Fund.

The teachers and all other government employees have not seen a paycheck in many months.

French technicians have just restored N'Djamena's international telex and telephone links which had been cut for about a year.

French aid chief Pierre Ricard says his men now will likely concentrate on restoring the capital's electric power and water systems. They were wrecked in the civil war.

Border Angel Arrives In Van, Four Times A Week

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
MATAMOROS, Mexico
(AP) — Dozens of women and children had waited for more than an hour outside a compound of ramshackle wood and cardboard buildings for the blue and white van to pull up.

Inside was a tall, white-haired man clad in pajamas and a white jacket.

The waiting crowd eagerly cleared a path for him as he slowly walked toward them.

"Buenos dias," some of them told 87-year-old Frank Ferree as they shook his hand reverently.

Ferree, nicknamed the "Border Angel" by local residents, had returned with another supply of white bread, donuts, fruit and vegetables for some 300 impoverished families in this Mexican border town, across the river from Brownsville, Texas.

"They like to see me," he said, surrounded by smiling faces. "They think I've come back from the tomb."

Ferree suffered a heart attack last year but has resumed his trips, four times a week, to distribute food, clothing and medicine to the poor here and in Reynosa, another Mexican border town.

"I'm getting stronger," he said. "I couldn't stop if I tried."

Despite his age and more than a half-century of jobs across the country, Ferree, a native of Valentine, Neb., continues his full-time welfare work.

During World War I, he ran communication lines on the Western Front in France and marched into Germany with the occupation forces.

After the war he delivered mail on horseback and lived in several states before moving to Harlingen, Texas, in the 1940s.

One day while working as a surveyor along the Rio Grande, he noticed field workers eating scraps discarded by his crew.

He said that incident led him to start distributing food to the poor on both sides of the border. He founded Volunteer Border Relief in 1956.

"Thirty or 40 years ago, it used to be the cotton pickers here and across the border who were suffering," he said. "Now it's the families who have moved to the border from the interior of Mexico. They want to come over (to the United States)..."

Ferree and several full-time volunteers rely on contributions and donated food and clothing. No one receives a salary, and Ferree lives on his veterans' pension of $481 a month.

"It's going to be a beautiful day for a lot of people," Ferree said one morning before a recent trip to Mexico, 30 miles away. Beside his chair was a worn copy of

Billy Graham's book, "Angels — God's Secret Agents."

Two Dallas men donated the van he uses to collect and distribute goods.

Before driving to Mexico, Ferree and his volunteers stopped at a grocery and a bakery for last minute donations of day-old products and partially spoiled fruit and vegetables.

Unemployment runs at 30 percent in Matamoros, a city of 200,000 residents. Many families live in primitive conditions, without indoor plumbing or electricity.

Barefoot children stopped their games to stare at the van coming down the dirt road to a distribution center built with funds provided by a Matamoros industrialist. They recognized the blue-eyed, elderly man and raced off to stand in line for a sweet handout.

The few men waiting come through first, taking a loaf of bread and some potato chips.

Next come the children, some old enough to attend school. One of Ferree's helpers says the families cannot afford to pay the one-time, public school registration fee of a few dollars.

Each child gets a fried pie, donut or cupcake.

Women with families at home line up next, taking bread, some vegetables or fruit and potato chips.

The meager fare, along with some pinto beans, is likely all they will have until the van comes again, Ferree said.

He also hears many hard luck stories. A young mother and two children lost their home in a fire, another woman says, pointing to the unfortunate family. A thin, young man says he cannot pay a doctor to treat him for tuberculosis.

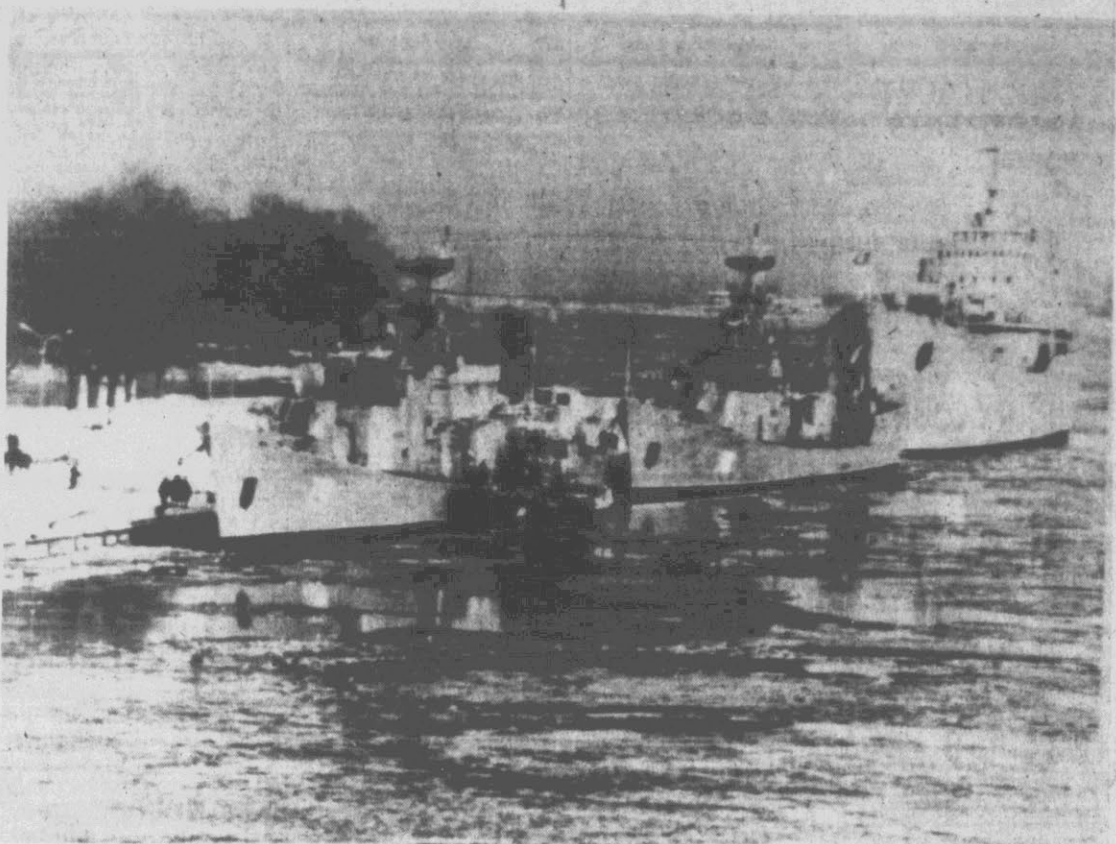

Ferree deals with these cases individually, giving additional food, referrals to friendly doctors and, in a few instances, cash.

After passing out food to approximately 300 families, Ferree and his volunteers take a woman and her two children to a local pharmacy to buy a special infant formula for her sick baby.

When he gets back home, Ferree sends a volunteer to buy burn medicine not available in Mexico for a young child who was burned in a fire. The worker takes a bus back to Matamoros to deliver it.

In his mail that day, Ferree finds a $100 check from a man in Tonawanda, N.Y., and a $25 contribution from Houston.

"Isn't that nice," he says. "And they don't even know us."

Ethanol Fuel Plant Slated

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Ethanol Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of Diversified Fuels Inc. of Wilson, will build and operate a large-scale, fuel-grade alcohol production plant near Selma in Johnston County, Gov. Jim Hunt announced Wednesday.

The plant will cost approximately $120 million and will produce anhydrous ethyl alcohol from corn. The alcohol will be marketed as an octane booster and as a petro-chemical feed stock.

Construction of the facility is scheduled to begin next March with completion scheduled for 1983. It is designed to produce 50 million gallons of fuel-grade ethyl alcohol annually, using approximately 20 million bushels of corn. When fully operational, the plant is expected to employ 120 people.

The Carolina Ethanol plant will also produce liquefied carbon dioxide as a co-product of the distilling process.

Store Break-In Charged Man

Farmville police have charged Lamont Tyson of Farmville for the Nov. 20 breaking and entering and larceny of a Mack's department store.

Tyson is currently in jail for unlawful use of a conveyance, a parole violation.

Farmville police hope this arrest will lead to solutions in three other breaking and entering cases, according to Ron Cooper of the police force.
