

Board Approves Four-Laning Of US 264

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — The state Board of Transportation today approved a revised 1982-1991 highway improvement program that includes four-laning U.S. 264 from Wilson to Greenville and N.C. 43 from N.C. 121 to Falkland.

The board also approved improvements for six grade crossings in Pitt County along with improvements to the intersection of N.C. 43 and N.C. 222 which will include redesign to a T-intersection and a separate left turn lane on N.C. 43. The intersection was designated as a high-hazard area.

Deleted from the 10-year plan were four-laning of U.S. 13-N.C. 11 from Greenville to Bethel and a proposed U.S. 264 bypass to downtown Farmville. They were chopped off along with nearly 50 percent of the original highway improvement program as the board attempted to cut costs during the next decade.

The transportation board first approved construction of a freeway between Wilson and Greenville in March 1979. The freeway had drawn support from Gov. Jim Hunt, who labeled it one of his prime projects.

Other Area Projects Cleared

One observer at today's meeting described the original road improvements program as a "wish book." The same observer said the new program also would be in the same category unless additional funds could be found to match federal funding.

As approved today, right of way acquisition already under way for a four-lane U.S. 264 between Greenville and Wilson will continue with first construction scheduled to start by mid-1983.

The new U.S. 264, as approved, will be four-laned with limited access. However, interchanges proposed in the earlier plan were eliminated and grade crossings were substituted as a means of cutting costs.

Work on grading and structures is scheduled to begin first from the intersection of N.C. 58 east of Wilson to the Greene County line, along with paving from S.R. 1127 to U.S. 264-A west of Farmville.

Construction will begin from Farmville to Greenville and from S.R. 1537 east of Greenville to Washington in fiscal year 1984.

The N.C. 43 project will begin immediately. It includes widening and resurfacing the highway from the intersection of N.C. 121 to Falkland at a cost of $200,000.

The railroad grade crossings funded through the federal aid safety program to be improved include those on S.R. 1521 at Station, S.R. 1809 east of Greenville, S.R. 1728 east of Greenville, S.R. 1708 north of Winterville, S.R. 1203 west of Greenville and 14th Street in Greenville at the Seaboard crossing.

Work on the crossings will include installation of automatic warning devices with the first project scheduled for S.R. 1521 during this fiscal year at a cost of $54,900. Installation of warning devices at the other crossings is scheduled for fiscal 1983 at a cost of $60,000 for each crossing except the one in Greenville, which has been set at $50,000.

Improvements at the intersection of N.C. 43 and N.C. 222, estimated to cost $25,000, are programmed for fiscal year 1983.

No timetable was set for reconsideration of the items deleted from the program.

In addition to the highway improvement program, the board also approved expenditure of $5,350 to pave the entrance aprons at the Falkland Fire and Rescue Station and at the Belvoir Fire Station.

Pitt Rep. Ed Warren attended the meeting, which was presided over by W.R. Roberson of Washington, the state secretary of transportation.

Polish Demonstrators Reported Killed In Fighting

By The Associated Press

Polish riot police battled young demonstrators in downtown Warsaw with rubber clubs and tear gas and the military regime reported seven dead and 80 injured in a clash with striking miners in southern Poland.

"Blood was needed for those who do not want the community to return calmly to work," Warsaw Radio said today in a stern commentary defending military action that crushed protests at the mine and the shipyards in Gdansk.

Seven demonstrators were killed and 39 wounded at the mine, and 41 policemen were reported injured. In Gdansk, 164 demonstrators and 160 policemen were injured in battles that ended the shipyard strike Wednesday, the Polish media said.

The situation in the rest of Poland was unclear because of a communications blackout imposed by the government. Most normal communications have been cut, and Western news organizations have to rely mainly on information, often delayed, pieced together from travelers, diplomatic sources and others.

Miners were reported on strike in at least 15 other coal mines, and the strikers were reported occupying the shafts at six of them. The reports said troops were ringing the mines, preventing the miners' families from bringing them food, but the troops were not ordered to evict the strikers because officials feared the miners would flood the shafts.

Coal is Poland's most critical resource, the chief source of foreign exchange for the near-bankrupt economy. Meanwhile in Washington, the State Department urged Americans to leave Poland because of its "uncertain and unstable condition."

And in a nationally televised news conference Thursday, President Reagan indicated the United States thinks the Soviet Union at least partly responsible for the crackdown in Poland.

"It would be naive to think this could happen without the full knowledge and support of the Soviet Union," he said. "We are not naive."

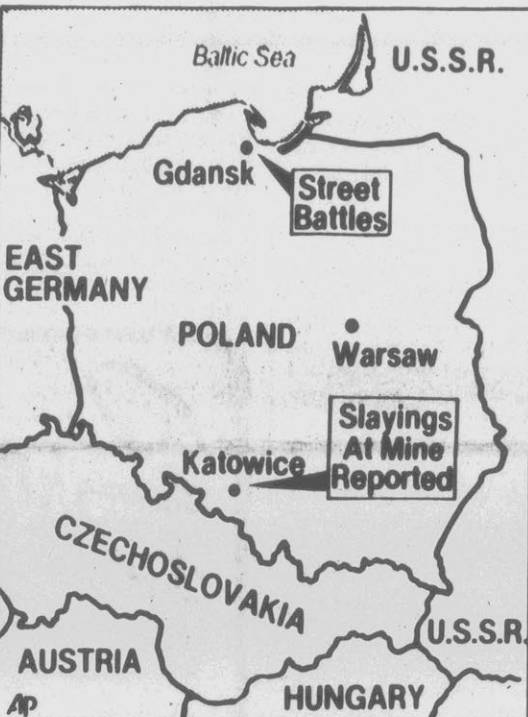

Reagan also said "it will be impossible" for the United States to send food and economic aid to Poland as long as thousands of people are imprisoned and the country is under martial law.

A Soviet source in Moscow confirmed that Red Army Marshal Viktor Kulikov, the commander of Warsaw Pact forces, was in Poland last week just before martial law was proclaimed. But he denied reports he told Polish leaders the Soviets would intervene unless the Poles brought the situation under control. The Soviet news agency Tass followed up today by accusing the U.S. government of giving "direct instruction" for an armed coup in Poland.

Reliable reports from Poland said the police smashed demonstrations Thursday evening along at least two major streets in the capital by crowds of students and others chanting, "Fascist," "Gestapo," "Solidarity," and "Lech Walesa."

The protesters, defying a martial-law ban on public meetings, apparently gathered to mark the 11th anniversary of food riots in Gdansk in which scores of workers were killed in a rebellion that foreshadowed the birth of the Solidarity labor movement a decade later and the current national crisis.

FIGHTING IN POLAND — Map locates two cities where Polish troops clashed with civilians with resulting injuries and reports of at least seven killed. (AP Laserphoto)

In one demonstration outside the Church of the Holy Cross near Warsaw University, trouble began when a group of students gathered on the steps began chanting, "Poland, Poland."

A militia jeep with a loudspeaker sped to the church and an officer warned the crowd they were violating martial law by gathering in a public place.

His warning drew jeers and whistles from the crowd of several thousand who sang the Polish national anthem, drowning out the loudspeaker.

Advise Leave Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is advising Americans that it might be best for them to leave Poland because of the "uncertain and unstable condition" there, a situation being blamed, at least in part, on the Soviet Union.

"The imposition of martial law and the disruption of communications ... make it impossible for our embassy and consulates to extend normal welfare and protection services to U.S. citizens in Poland," the State Department said Thursday.

And in a nationally televised news conference, President Reagan made it clear that the United States believes the Soviet Union was at least partially responsible for the crackdown in Poland.

"It would be naive to think this could happen without the full knowledge and the support of the Soviet Union," he said. "We are not naive."

Today, after discussing the Polish crisis with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, the president declared his goals in the Polish crisis. "We want a return to the negotiations stage, an end to martial law and a release from confinement of those people unjustly arrested and an end to the violence," Reagan declared.

Reagan agreed with Kirkland's observation that in any U.S. effort to send foodstuffs to the Polish people without supporting the martial-law regime, "the key point is supervision of distribution." Reagan pointed out Kirkland's remark to Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who also attended the Oval Office meeting.

The president refused to spell out what action the United States might take if the Soviet Union intervenes in Poland.

A senior Pentagon official indicated, however, that the United States might break off nuclear arms reduction negotiations with Moscow, at least temporarily, if intervention occurs.

"I would be very surprised if we returned to the talks on schedule" if the Soviet troops intervened, said Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle.

Report Economy's Third Quarter Growth Was Above The Estimate

By CHRISTOPHER LINDSAY

AP Business Writer

The economy expanded more in the third quarter of 1981 than was reported earlier, growing at an annual rate of 1.4 percent despite widespread agreement that a new recession has begun, the government reported today.

The inflation-adjusted gross national product, the broadest measure of national economic activity, grew more than twice as fast as the 0.6 percent annual rate estimated by the Commerce Department one month ago, the new report indicated.

Back in October, department officials had first estimated a 0.6 percent rate of decline for July through September, after a 1.6 percent rate of decline in the second quarter.

The new revision was not expected to change any economists' minds about the current recession. The report said the third-quarter gain in "real" GNP, discounting the effects of inflation, stemmed mostly from a buildup of inventories rather than strong sales.

Put simply, businesses were still turning out new products at a fast clip in the third quarter, but at the same time sales and new orders were beginning to dry up.

That led to a fourth quarter in which business officials have cut back production and laid off workers — classic recession signs — to sell of inventories built up in the previous three months. Economists inside and outside the government have been gradually lowering their estimates of fourth-quarter GNP, many saying it will fall at a rate of about 4 percent to 5 percent and some saying as much as 8 percent.

Today's new report also raised one of the government's measures of inflation for the third quarter, now pegging the GNP implicit price deflator at an annual rate of 9.9 percent for the period rather than 9.5 percent.

The report said corporate profits for the third quarter were slightly better than first estimated.

Before-tax profits rose 2.4 percent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $234.4 billion rather than the 0.8 percent reported earlier, the Commerce Department said. After-tax profits also rose 2.4 percent to $156.3 billion, rather than the 0.5 percent estimated one month ago.

DRY ICE

Is there a source for dry ice in Greenville? I've asked a number of people and can't find any. R.G.

Baskin-Robbins Ice Cream Store at the Greenville Square Shopping Center sells dry ice — solidified carbon-dioxide — for 50 cents a pound when they have it. They receive a shipment each Monday from Triangle Ice Co. in Raleigh, but it's usually gone by the weekend. And Triangle Ice is the only place we know of that sells dry ice in bulk.

'Rigging' Indictments

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Two Asheville men and a paving company were named in bid-rigging indictments handed down by a federal grand jury Thursday, U.S. Justice Department attorney said.

Indicted on a single count of violating the federal Sherman Antitrust Act were Robert E. Colgate, John S. Caldwell Sr. and Asheville Pavin Co., said Robert E. Bloch, a Washington attorney who has headed the Justice Department investigation into bid-rigging in the state.

Caldwell is president of Asheville Paving Co., Bloch said. He said Colgate is president of the Asheville division of Ashland-Warren Inc., which did business as Warren Brothers.

Ashland-Warren is unrelated to Asheville Paving Co. and was not charged, Bloch said.

Bloch said the indictments alleged the defendants conspired to rig bids on highway projects in western North Carolina. The indictment did not name the projects but alleged they engaged in a conspiracy to allocate projects from at least 1975 until August 1979, Bloch said.

According to Transportation Department records, Asheville Paving was awarded 15 contracts worth $6.7 million since July 1975. Warren Brothers, the Asheville division of Ashland-Warren, was awarded 55 contracts worth $19.2 million during the same period.

'Time' Reports Jobs Go Begging In Greenville

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The assertion in an article in a recent Time magazine edition that Greenville is one of the places in the nation where certain construction "Jobs Go Begging" apparently does not reflect the current situation.

Greenville, along with Phoenix, Houston and Tampa, was listed as "Sunbelt cities" where "Jobs for construction workers were mainly available."

Jim Hannan, manager of the local Employment Security

Commission feels that the Time article resulted from "misinformation. I'm sure the information on which the Greenville reference was based was taken from a monthly state study made last July. In that particular study, there was a listing of a need for a few specialized construction workers such as steel tiers. But of course those needs have long been filled."

Hannan further noted that instead of being an area where jobs were going begging for workers, it is the other way around "with more construction workers than ever looking for jobs. In fact, Brown and Root of Aurora has just laid off a number of people, many of them people who had been with the company as long as 20 years. So right now we have a substantial number of construction people drawing unemployment benefits."

Three local contractors echoed Hannan's viewpoint of the local construction situation at this time.

J.H. Hudson, president of J.H. Hudson, Inc., said, "Our normal work force at this time of year for the past ten years (Please turn to Page 16)

Couple Says Vows In La Grange Tuesday

LA GRANGE — Linda Rhodes Threewitts and Ernest W. Schwarz were united in marriage Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 in the La Grange Christian Church here. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Graham Nahouse of Greenville and the Rev. Gordon Lee, church pastor.

A program of music was presented by Molly Zincone, guitarist and soloist, and Lynn Lieberman, flutist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Raeford E. Rhodes of Rt. 3, La Grange. The bridegroom's parents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Ernest C. Schwarz.

The bride's honor attendant was her sister, Debbie R. Harrison of Rt. 3, La Grange. The brother of the bridegroom, Robert C. Schwarz of Smyrna, Del. was best man.

The flower girl was Angie Harrison of Rt. 3, La Grange, niece of the bride.

The bride wore a formal gown of candlelight crepe styled with an empire bodice accented by a high Victorian neckline of re-embroidered Venise lace with bridal pearls. The bishop sleeves of crepe were cuffed at the wrist with matching Venise lace. The full length A-line skirt extended into a chapel train. She wore a headpiece of white jack frost pom pons and carried a cascading bouquet of white roses, jack frost pom pons and miniature carnations accented with lace and bridal ribbon.

The honor attendant selected a formal gown of tapioca crepe with accordin pleated sleeves. The waist was accented with an overlay of accordin pleated lace. She carried two long-stemmed roses with matching bridal ribbon.

The flower girl was dressed in a white cotton lace street length dress accented with red puff sleeves and sash. She carried a basket of rose petals.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The couple received guests at a reception in Greenville at the Pirate's Club.

The bride attended Atlantic Christian College and is manager of Sunshine Toy Station No. 002, Greenville. The bridegroom graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and is now a professor of physical education at East Carolina University.

The couple will travel to Houston, Tex. after the first of the year for a wedding trip and will be living in Greenville.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

From Elizabeth David's book, "English Bread and Yeast Cookery" (Viking), one of our friends recently adapted a 17th-century recipe and urged us to try it. We did and are happy to pass her American version along to you. She calls it Raisin Spice Coffee Cake.

Mrs. David is England's best known food writer and an extraordinary researcher. Her book is a long treatise that is bound to interest culinary historians. For everyday cooks there are all kinds of recipes — from crumpets and muffins to dumplings and doughnuts.

The recipe that inspired our friend is from a chapter on "Regional and Festival Yeast Cakes and Fruit Breads." Mrs. David notes some of these cakes and breads were iced. Because of this, our friend composed an Orange Spice Butter to serve with toasted slices of her Raisin Spice Coffee Cake. In our opinion, the Orange Spice Butter is a great addition.

RAISIN SPICE COFFEE CAKE

- 2 cups milk
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 1 package dry yeast
- 8 to 8 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 3 large eggs
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cinnamon
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground cloves
- 1 1/2 teaspoons ground nutmeg
- 1-3rd cup medium sherry
- 2 cups raisins
- 1 1/4 cups finely ground (but not paste-like) blanched almonds mixed with 1 1/2 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 cup butter, at room temperature

Orange Spice Butter, recipe follows

In a small saucepan heat the milk and cream until warm (105 to 115 degrees); off heat, sprinkle with the yeast; stir vigorously until dissolved.

In a large mixing bowl stir together 6 3/4 cups of the flour, the sugar and salt. With a spoon stir in the yeast mixture and the eggs until blended — dough will be soft and sticky. Cover and let rise in a warm place (about 80 degrees) until doubled — about 1 1/2 hours.

In a small bowl stir together the cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg and sherry; stir in the raisins. Stir into the dough with the almond mixture and the butter. On a well-floured surface, adding as much of the remaining flour as necessary to keep dough from sticking, knead until smooth — 6 to 8 minutes.

Turn into two well-greased 9-cup fluted tube pans (each 9 by 3 1/2 inches). Cover and let rise as previously until doubled — about 1 1/2 hours.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until browned and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 40 to 50 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack; if bottom is paler than you like, turn coffee cake back into pan, bottom side up, and continue to bake until golden brown — 5 to 10 minutes longer. Turn out on wire rack to cool completely. Serve sliced and toasted with Orange Spice Butter.

Makes two 9-inch coffee cakes.

Orange Spice Butter: In a small bowl thoroughly beat together 1 cup butter (at room temperature) with 1/4 cup firmly packed light brown sugar, 2 tablespoons grated orange rind and 1 teaspoon nutmeg; gradually beat in 2 tablespoons dark rum.

All you "undecideds" out there ... and you all know who you are ... are going to have to shape up. You're screwing up the polls.

How can we tabulate percentages of people who are for or against something when the majority of the people are checking the little box marked, "Undecided." "No Opinion." "Don't know." "Don't care." "Don't ever want to discuss this again?"

How long does it take to make up your mind about something of grievous importance? Recently, there was a poll asking whether or not the public favored Prince Charles and Lady Di having a baby the first year or waiting awhile. Thirty-three percent said Yes, 12 percent said No, and 55 percent didn't have an opinion.

Prince Charles and Lady Di couldn't wait around forever, so they're having a baby anyway and taking a chance that some of you will swing over and make it unanimous.

Sometimes I get the feeling marking the undecided box is a habit we slip into to keep from making a commitment to something. I offer as evidence a recent polling where Americans were asked if they favored clean air. Seventy percent said Yes, 2 percent said No, and 28 percent hadn't made up their minds yet.

I have never in my life met an "undecided" face to face. On the contrary, most of the people I know carry placards and bullhorns.

In my mind, I visualize them as quiet pacifists who never make waves and play it safe and conservative. They sit around evenings watching whatever the Nielsen family watches. They eat vanilla ice cream, and don't know how they feel about anything until they see a bumper sticker on it.

The difficulty in making a decision is overrated. There's nothing to it. You don't even have to know what you're talking about. I saw a show once where people on the street were asked how they felt about Mendacity. (A word meaning dishonest.)

One person said she thought they should do a telethon for it. Another said he thought he was becoming a dictator and should be removed from office by force. Fifteen people said they were undecided about how to get rid of it and would have to think about it.

My question to "undecideds" is, "When will you know?"

See Difficult Job In Organizing Demo Club

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The leaders of a new organization formed to counter the influence of the National Congressional Club say they know from personal experience how difficult a job they've got.

Mike Mann, president of the still-unnamed organization, and vice president Doug Copeland both were involved with the campaigns of Democratic candidates who were beaten in 1980 by Congressional Club-backed Republicans.

Mann co-directed former Sen. Robert Morgan's unsuccessful re-election campaign in 1980. Copeland was chief of staff for former U.S. Rep. Richardson Preyer.

Both Morgan and Preyer were outspent and out-advertised. Democrats claimed that the ads for Morgan's opponent, freshman Sen. John East, distorted Morgan's position on several issues, and they hope the new group can help change that in upcoming elections.

"From the last election," Mann said, "it is pretty obvious there is a lot of taking facts out of context going on. We want to truly inform the people, tell them what's really happening in Washington."

Mann and Copeland say their new group will begin meeting in late winter. He Helms is up for re-election in 1984 and among possible opponents is Gov. Jim Hunt, a Democrat.

"It's not necessarily geared to go after Jesse Helms or anyone else," said Mann. "I'm sure that in some people's eyes it will be seen that way, and, according to what issues the board of directors decides to take up, it could appear that way."

"But as long as this group is honest and straightforward, I don't think this week.

we'll be thin-skinned about what people say."

"I think the thing we began to realize is that the image North Carolinians get of Congress is colored by what the press reports and what the special-interest groups choose to educate them about," Copeland said.

Group members said they plan to distribute information through mass mailing, a tactic used by the Congressional Club.

The group does not plan to use television advertising, and won't finance any candidates.

Copeland said the group has applied to the Internal Revenue Service for a classification as a non-profit educational group, which would prohibit it from financing campaigns.

Mann didn't want to name the other members of the group, but Copeland said all but himself are from Raleigh.

Copeland does public relations work for Moses Cone Hospital and Mann is employed by the North Carolina Wildlife Federation.

Commuting Sentences

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt, invoking a state Christmas tradition, announced Thursday the early release of more than 250 prison inmates so they can spend the holiday at home.

Hunt's Christmas commutation order directed that inmates who would normally complete their prison terms by Jan. 31, 1982, be released this week.

"This is a traditional practice followed by governors to release for the Christmas holidays those inmates who are about to complete their full prison terms," Hunt said in a prepared statement.

Hunt said the order does not apply to inmates on maximum or close custody, to those serving life sentences or those serving active portions of split sentences. It also does not apply to inmates who are being considered for parole during that period.

Hunt said the order additionally includes the release of some state prisoners who are near the end of sentences being served in county jails. Spokesmen for the governor said they did not know how many county-held inmates would be released as a result of the order.

This 'Help' Not Needed

Let's see now . . . the people of Southeastern North Carolina have been striving mightily for some years now to develop their area economically.

They've been doing a pretty good job of it, too. New industry has come into New Hanover County and the state port there is booming.

Like rest of the east, however, the area has suffered from lack of an adequate highway. . . and it is well known that a controlled access highway is essential to the economic development of most any area.

This will be solved with the construction of I-40 link from Benson to Wilmington, funds for which were approved by Congress before it adjourned this week.

But Sen. Jesse Helms of our own state, although he didn't try to block the appropriation, was on record as being opposed to the federal funding of the highway. Why? Well, apparently he just didn't think we ought to be spending all that money. Downgrade it, and add another lane and let North Carolina pay for it was his attitude.

The people of Southeastern North Carolina must be wishing that their senator would go on off and "help" some area of, say, California. But then they have Sen. Hayakawa.

Annexation Is Dangerous

Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin moved to annex the Golan Heights area which Israel captured from Syria.

The move caught the world by surprise and created international protests.

Many analysts saw Begin making his move while the United States and the Soviet Union were preoccupied with the Polish crisis.

It is likely that the annexation was carried out without United States' approval. It is certainly a dangerous and probably unwise move. Anything that upsets the status quo in the Middle East in these critical times could lead to disaster. Israel's long-term security is tied more to peace initiatives than to anything else.

THIS AFTERNOON

Demand Is There

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — All that high-faluting economics jargon about balance of trade deficits, dollar strength or bullish markets doesn't mean much to the average Tar Heel.

Dollar bills in your jeans makes sense. After all is said and done, that is what the present emphasis at state and federal commerce offices concerning exports is about.

The simple fact is that North Carolina is far from realizing the tremendous potential for increased business to be made from exporting both agricultural and manufactured goods.

As Dave Thomas, chief of the International Trade Center at N.C. State University, sees it, North Carolina could easily double the number of products being shipped overseas. The demand is there.

This is equally true for farm products. North Carolina is now first in the nation in turkey production, with 26 million grown here.

The state is also a leader in butter, hog and egg production.

Then there is tobacco. Right now at the ports, those tremendous, round hogs-heads are piling up for shipment. Over 28,000 tons have been moved since the markets opened in July.

Cold Storage
William A. Greene, ports director, is now trying to get funds for a cold storage warehouse at Wilmington and Morehead City because the absence of such facilities is hampering movement of agricultural perishables moving in or out. The Advisory Budget Commission will be asked to approve a revenue bond issue to cover the cost.

Last year the state exported over a billion dollars worth of farm goods, with tobacco, poultry and soybeans as the most important ones. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham has taken the stump regularly of late to urge farmers and processors to move into exports. Growth of farm product exports has been steady but slow. Growth of exports otherwise, however, has been little short of phenomenal, according to state officials.

Jim Hinkle, head of the international division of the state Department of Commerce, says North Carolina leads the Southeast in export of manufactured goods, and ranks 12th or 13th nationally. Hinkle claims the national export increase is running $350 million per year to reach last year's record of $4 billion.

Federal commerce people aren't quite that optimistic, reporting a growth rate of 100 million yearly. Either way, specialists see the export business as important to the state's economy, and ripe for growth. About 75 percent of the trade is in manufactured goods and the rest in farm goods.

Adding somewhere between $100 million and $350 million annually in new business as the export business does means a grate deal to the approximately 1,000 North Carolina firms involved and the communities in which they are located.

Jobs, Too
Economists claim that every million dollars of business creates 40 jobs. This means increased exports can be responsible for somewhere between 4,000 and 14,000 new jobs each year; and furniture was valued at more than $350 million last year.

Nonelectronic machinery exports totaled $700 million in 1980, and other major shipments included paper, chemicals, metals, fertilizers, petroleum products and transportation equipment. While Gov. Jim Hunt was in Japan and other Far East countries recently, he spent a lot of time talking with industrial prospects about locating manufacturing or research facilities in North Carolina. But taking note of the growing im-

Door To New Careers

As a compassionate gesture, President Reagan didn't promise you a job. He just promised you could apply for one providing it had nothing to do with your specialty, which is guiding airplanes.

"Okay, I'd like to sign up for a position as a scientist at the National Institutes of Health."

"I'm an air controller who went out on strike and I would like a government job."

"Wait a minute, Benedict could wipe out Denver."

"I'm sure I could get the hang of it. Let me practice on a few loaded B-52s and I'll get the drift of it."

"The President has issued orders that a striking air controller may not go within a mile of an airplane. When you people went out, you should have realized that."

"We didn't think it out. If Mr. Reagan is going to let us go to work for the government again, why doesn't he let us do what we were trained to do? After all you would think he would want to get the aviation industry back to full capacity."

"Drew Lewis, his Transportation secretary, promised the people now working in the towers that they would never have to work beside a striking air controller again. He has to think of the morale of the people manning the towers now."

"But a lot of them are supervisors who would be delighted to go back to their old jobs. The ones I've talked to are sick and tired of having no one to supervise," Britt said.

"Lewis maintains the supervisors now working in the towers are happier than they've ever been before. The pilots are thrilled with the new system and safety has never been higher. Even the airlines, who are losing their shirts because of flight cut-backs, are overjoyed that you people can't return to your old jobs. You controllers don't have a wing and a prayer of working at your specialty ever again. Reagan may forgive — but he doesn't forget."

"Okay, if he feels that strongly about it, I'd like to apply to be a federal judge."

"I don't see anything in the regulations against that. Fill out that application."

"That's very specialized work. One mistake and you

(Please turn to Page 5)

What are your qualifications?"
"I have none. I don't even know how to use a microscope. But since President Reagan doesn't want us to practice our trade, I figure being a scientist would be a lot of fun."

"Do you realize that we've had to lay off qualified scientists at NIH because of budget cuts?"
"Well, Reagan could always make them air controllers."

"I'm sorry, but there are no openings at NIH. Is there any other position in the government you would like to apply for?"
"How about being an atomic weapons inspector? I could check out warheads to see if they were armed or not."

"That's very specialized work. One mistake and you

Bob Hope's Yuletides

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Bob Hope was on the phone from his home in Palm Springs, Calif., reminiscing about his ghosts of Christmas past, most of them blessed and benign, but a few unforgettably frightening.

"You try to put those things out of your mind," Hope said of Christmas in Saigon, 1964, when the Viet Cong blew up the Brinks bachelor officers quarters 10 minutes before his troupe was to arrive at the Caravelle Hotel across the street.

That was when this past master of the ad lib, on his first visit to Vietnam, came up with a line that restored the morale of Jill St. John, Janis Paige, Maria Alberg and the rest of the jittery cast so that the show went on as usual:

"A funny thing happened on the way into the hotel from the airport. I met a hotel coming out to meet us."

Hope played Vietnam every year after that until the big troop withdrawal in 1972, and the phone call came about because I had covered every one of his shows out there, except 1969. I had called his office in Burbank to find out what he would be doing this Christmas, and Bob himself returned the call.

He would be home for Christmas for a change, with his family in Palm Springs. The exhausting, emotionally draining but always rewarding Christmas visits to troops on far off battlefields, which he had begun in the earliest days of World War II, were all behind him now. No more round the world hops, followed by days of jet lag and the echoing laughter of the grateful wounded and dying.

Of course, there would still be the big NBC Christmas special, "Christmas a Time for Cheer and a Time for Hope," on Sunday, Dec. 20, and as usual Bob had a bevy of exciting stocking fillers: Loni Anderson, Brooke Shields, Rose Bowl Queen Kathryn Ann Posthaus, along with the AP All-America football team and Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen.

Next day Hope would take his rapid fire routines to the Veterans Hospital in Long Beach, playing at the bedside of the worst cases, just as he always had done in the war zones.

After that truckload of explosives blew apart the Brinks barracks, Hope grabbed sidekick Jerry Colonna and bandleader Les Brown and visited the small Navy clinic where the surgeons were still picking glass out of the victims. One young officer, who couldn't believe it, raised himself up from the operating table and with blood streaming down his face wished Hope a Merry Christmas. When the comedian got back to the Caravelle, he had blood stains on his jacket.

"Those were days you never forget. Gratifying but they tear you apart," Hope was saying over the phone. "They're so much a part of me still. Wherever I go, some guy comes up and says, 'Hey, I flew cover for you in Nha Trang.' Or a nurse will recall me lousing up a gag in the burn ward at the 3rd Field Hospital in Saigon. For years the doorman at the Taft Hotel used to say, 'I remember when you came to New Guinea with Patty Thomas. Wow, she was a knockout. How is she?' He never asked how I was."

Hope is 78 now and his millions of ex-servicemen fans can date their wartime years by mentioning which reigning beauty appeared with him in their combat zone.

Lana Turner, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Frances Langford, Ginger Rogers, Jayne Mansfield, Anita Ekberg, Marilyn Maxwell, Gloria DeHaven, Ann-Margaret, Gina Lollobrigida, Tuesday Weld, Joey Heatherton, Barbara McNair, Raquel Welch — Hope always provided his own cover facing the troops.

Taking the show where the action was, the Hope troupe played for the U.S. 1st Division at Lai Khe, in the rubber plantation outside Saigon on Christmas Eve, 1969. Before they arrived, perimeter guards dismantled Viet Cong rockets aimed at the stage and the amphitheater that would attract 10,000 troops. Hope, as usual, counterattacked with a fast one liner: "Security is really tight around here now — the M.P.s frisked me so often, I got to like it."

Another year, flying into Bien Hoa from Bangkok, Hope was in the midst of amusing his fellow players with a joke about an airplane being hours behind schedule on account of losing three engines. "If we lose one more, we'll be up here all day," was supposed to be the punch line, but he never got to it. Someone looked out the window, and an engine really was on fire.

The most bizarre and least known of Hope's wartime adventures is when he flew secretly to Vientiane, the capital of Laos, at Christmas 1971, for a meeting with North Vietnamese consul Nguyen Van Thanh. He was trying on his own to arrange the release of the American prisoners of war in Hanoi. Thanh, who spoke French throughout the interview, turned out to be a fan of "Road" pictures, especially the one where Bing and Bob befriend a little Vietnamese boy. But he was impervious to the POW issue, even when Hope offered to raise millions to aid Vietnamese children.

That was 10 years ago, but on the phone Bob was still rebuking himself for that diplomatic failure. "I was so stupid. I should have concentrated on asking him to let me put on a show for the POWs, instead of trying to negotiate their release. Thanh was Ho Chi Minh's son-in-law, and looking back on it now, I think he might have gone for it. He was probably dying to see our show. Why wasn't I smarter then?"

Other Editors Say Need Confidence

(Mount Airy News)

Several current and former governors met for a weekend conference on the role of states in the 1980s recently in Durham.

Probably the most significant statement to come out of the conference, sponsored by Duke University's Center for the Study of the Governorship and State Policy Making, came from Governor Richard A. Snelling of Vermont. Snelling stated, "Government has no contact with the public today."

Snelling was right on target. The loss of contact between the elected representatives and the people has become a perpetual tragedy for our democratic process. It has led to a near total disillusionment and mistrust of government officials by the voters, and if we all do not begin to take a more active role in expressing our views and opinions on legislation that affects our lives we will become the real losers.

It is understandable that people have become disillusioned with "career politicians" who tend to have a total disregard for the people who have elected them to office.

People have seen so much deception and corruption on the part of far too many public officials to trust their credibility, and yet the average person feels a strong sense of frustration to do much about it.

Improving the public's view of government is going to be a major undertaking, but it is a must. We can no longer afford to be a people accepting of whatever a few decide is best for us. Government belongs to the people and most of us are guilty of sitting back and allowing government to become an entity unto itself.

The problem is two-fold. We have far too many politicians and not enough statesmen and far too many voters who for various reasons have decided their vote really doesn't count anymore.

Correcting the image of government is going to require plenty of work from both sides. But we, the voters, ultimately have the final say when we go to the polls.

Strength For Today

FAVORITISM

Parents frequently fall into the mistake of picking out certain of their children and favoring them above other children. There is scarcely anything more surely designed to engender a feeling of frustration and despair in the heart of a child than to realize that a brother or a sister is preferred over him or her.

All through history we find this mistake being made, often by conspicuously wise characters. For example, King David had a large family, but he picked out an unworthy son, Absalom, and heaped favors upon him until the young fool was turned into a traitor and a murderer.

God treats all men and women with justice and love. Every benefit which comes out of the heart of God is open to all men.

The Perfect Parent never prefers one child over another. We need to ponder these words of Holy Writ: "He makes his rain to fall upon the just and the unjust." His love is for all. — Elisha Douglass

Bad Luck? You Had Company

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Your investments didn't fare so well in 1981, you say?

Your stocks went down, your bonds went down, and the gold you bought as "insurance" against bad times went down too?

Well, it won't do much to change the figures on the bottom line, but it might soothe your pride a little to know that you have plenty of company.

It also may be consoling to consider that, if you'd been sophisticated enough to try something exotic like commodity futures or foreign currencies, your luck might have been even worse.

In the past year, as the numbers clearly show, it has been exceedingly easy to lose money in just about any major category of investment you can name.

In the stock market, the Dow Jones industrial average is down about 10 percent since Jan. 1. Bond prices, despite a November rally, remain well below where they were at the start of the year.

Gold, which came out of the starting gate at about $600 an ounce, is now hovering in the low $400s. Diamonds, touted not so long ago as "the one investment that never declines," have lately been quoted at prices 40 percent to 50 percent off their peaks.

While forecasts of lower inflation rates have done very little to help stock and bond prices, they have inflicted plenty of damage on the commodity markets. One index of commodity prices dropped almost 18 percent in the first 10 months of the year.

How about Swiss francs, German marks or Japanese yen? Sorry, all those foreign currencies have fallen in value against the dollar since last winter. If you simply held onto dollars themselves, inflation kept eroding their purchasing power at an annual pace of close to 10 percent.

Even that old standby, the family home, was no longer the reliable inflation hedge it had been for the past decade. In the third quarter of this year, for example, prices of new single-family houses rose just 0.6 percent, according to the Commerce Department.

Economists point out that if breaks on financing and other sales inducements being offered by builders were taken into account, actual prices probably would have shown a decline. In any case, their recent progress has been no match for the inflation rate.

The one prominent success story of the year that comes to mind is the money market mutual funds, which yielded returns of close to 16 percent for the 12 months ended Oct. 31. That goes a long way toward explaining why more than $110 billion has poured into the funds since the first of the year, more than doubling their total assets. Unfortunately, money funds have a weakness too. Unlike many other types of investments, they enjoy no favored tax status. For an investor in the 40 percent bracket, a 16 percent money-fund yield becomes 9.6 percent after federal taxes — and it drops even further if state and local taxes are owed.

To complicate the problem, money-fund yields have fallen sharply, to the neighborhood of 12 percent, in recent weeks with the decline in interest rates.

Will this tale of woe take a happier turn next year? The financial seers say that depends to a large degree on whether the economy improves on its recent dismal performance.

Even in more prosperous times, investment success can be elusive. But some relief from recession, inflation, and volatile interest rates would at least give investors a fighting chance — which is more than can be said about 1981.

Life As It's Lived

Maintaining A Family Christmas Tradition

By GAIL MICHAELS
Yesterday, Meg was busy interpreting her latest Christmas decorations for my benefit. "And do you see this?" she asked. "This is an angel of the Lord."
I squinted at the picture before me. "Where?"
"Right there beside the shepherd. And way back there, beyond the hill is the stable and three wise men on camels."
"Okay."
"Is that all you have to say?"
"Well, the picture's kind of hard to see. Why did you do it all in gray crayon on black paper?"
"Because," she explained patiently, "it's the night before Christmas."

story about Bob Hope was told to me by one of his production men, when the troupe was weathered in at Nha Trang and hours late for the 30,000 Marines awaiting the big show at Da Nang. Hope bided his time signing autographs for any soldier who happened by and copying down the phone number of those who asked him to call their mothers or girl friends when he got back to "The Big PX."
"Hope is a very funny guy," the production man said, as we watched the mob scene in the little Quonset hut terminal. "Other celebrities in this business would turn those phone numbers over to a secretary. Not Hope. When he gets home, he'll lock himself in his den and call every one of those numbers himself. Sometimes, it takes him days. He just gabs away. He loves those kids."

Our house is filled with Christmas decorations of this kind. At this time of year Meg definitely loves exercising her artistic bent, or warp as the case may be, for she has no discernible talent. She has decorated the kitchen with pine cones studded with holly berries and wilted camellia petals. She has festooned the rocking horse with ribbon and has taped a big scrap of red gingham to his nose. She has wrapped her presents of hand-decorated building blocks in doll blankets of varying degrees of cleanliness and has deposited half a dozen of them under the Christmas tree.

And what a Christmas tree it is. Phillip and I have been longing for a decent Christmas tree for years, but we never seem to have much success. One year the needles all fell off three days after we bought it. Another year the branches let down in the warmth of the house to reveal a trunk that half way down was bent at a 45-degree angle. Every year the tree has a yawning gap or a peculiar defect of shape which remains artfully concealed until the tree has irrevocably left the lot.

This year's tree is no worse than usual. It has three gaps, only one of which is in front, and only half the needles have fallen off so far. The decorations are what make this particular tree outstanding. There are none below eye level except for the ones made by Meg and all loaded on one choice bottom branch. The rest have been stripped off by Zachary.

We did the initial decorating with high hopes. Naturally, we didn't put any breakable or dangerous ornaments within Zachary's reach. This resulted in 20 crystal icicles being hung on the top three branches.

But we did decorate the bottom branches with dozens of pretty wooden ornaments, and we told ourselves that after a few lessons, Zachary would learn, as Meg did at his age, either to look with out touching or to kiss the most desirable ones.

However, as I've said many times before, Zachary is a new experience for our household. He did learn very quickly that he was not supposed to walk up to the tree and touch the ornaments outright. So he grabbed the branches and shook the ornament he wanted off. Or he knocked it off with his truck.

Or he backed into the tree and pinched it off with his hands behind his back.
"This tree looks like a victim of strip mining," I told Phillip as I surveyed the room with dismay. The stockings I had cross-stitched were hanging by necessity for the finials on the curtain rods. Small, free-standing ornaments jockeyed for position on top of the television because that was the only surface safe from the reach of small hands. In the middle of the coffee table was the pumpkin Meg had stripped of the construction paper turkey feathers for which she had substituted a white fiberfill beard and a purple elf hat. She had taped Christmas pictures everywhere.

Hunt Stands Behind I-40 Link Plans

By ROBIN PATER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt isn't backing off his support of a proposed Interstate 40 link between Benson and Wilmington, although farmers say the highway could ruin thousands of acres of prime farm land.

"I understand people who are concerned about having their land taken for a highway, because an interstate (I-95) went right through the middle of my farm (in Wilson County) and took about a third of it," Hunt said Thursday during his weekly news conference.

He said efforts were made to avoid "some of the best farmland" along the I-40 corridor. "But anytime you build a new road... you have to take some good farmland," he added.

Hunt's statements didn't mollify a group of farmers who stand to lose land in the link is constructed. The farmers, who call themselves Citizens for Preserving Farmlands, say they're considering a lawsuit against the state to halt I-40 construction.

Henry Barefoot, 56, of Union Grove, said the group had hoped the state Department of Transportation would reconsider its decision and stop construction of the 90-mile highway.

Congress approved Tuesday a package of highway projects to include funding of $10 million to $20 million for the I-40 link.

The farmers' group, which has 1,600 to 1,700 members, staged a quiet protest in the lobby of the Jane S. McKimmon Center in Raleigh Thursday while the governor addressed a symposium on the need to preserve farm lands.

Barefoot said the group wants the state to upgrade U.S. Highway 421 rather than build a new highway. He said the new highway would parallel about six miles of U.S. 421, which already has about 30 miles of four-lane road.

The U.S. 421 upgrading was planned by DOT, according to its interim report in April 1978, and would be carried out anyway after the I-40 link is finished, he said.

"Obviously, our farmland is not worth anything in North Carolina but for asphalt," said Jimmy Johnson of Benson.

"This highway is scheduled to go through four leading agricultural counties. This was an ill-conceived highway... poorly planned, poorly designed. It'd be better off dead."

The new highway would cover up to 5,000 acres of farmland.

In his speech during the symposium, Hunt said the state would lose farm and forest land equal to the size of Sampson County by the year 2000 without corrective action.

He said he would announce a "strategy — not a plan" to make residential, industrial and transportation planners more cognizant of the value of prime forest and farm land, and said farmers would have a chance to join with businessmen and special interest groups in forming solutions on a case-by-case basis.

Resigns Over Firing Dispute

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Wilkesboro town commissioner George Forester resigned Thursday in a dispute over the firing of town manager J.M. Bentley Jr.

Bentley was fired by the commission Tuesday night after Bentley refused to hire a man he called a political appointee favored by the mayor.

Bentley had worked for the town for 28 years.

Forester voted against the dismissal, but three new commissioners and newly elected mayor Neil Casnon Jr. voted for it.

On Thursday, the town board named Barbara Stone as acting town manager to replace Bentley and will advertise for a permanent replacement.

Reviewing Recruiter Arguments

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A U.S. Army officer says recruiting officers dismissed for hiring illegal recruits have no one but themselves to blame for their actions.

Capt. Richard Rosen reacted Thursday to comments by a lawyer representing 400 Army recruiters in a $10 million class-action suit against the government. The suit says recruiters were caught up in an "impossible" situation in trying to meet recruiting quotas.

Rosen, who represented the Department of the Army in a hearing before a U.S. Magistrate, said the recruiters were properly dismissed for recruiting violations they admitted committing.

"These are recruiters who were relieved because they cheated," Rosen said. "If they came into court with clean hands, they might have a case. But that's not the case here," he argued.

Rosen said also that many of the dismissed recruiters, including at least two who were up for the Recruiter of the Year title, cheated to gain honors and enhance their careers.

Magistrate J. Rich Leonard heard arguments from both sides in the suit Wednesday and said he will rule later on whether to dismiss the suit.

Leonard is scheduled to make his recommendation to U.S. District Court Judge Earl Britt.

The suit filed by the recruiters claims they suffered prejudicial and adverse administrative action by being dismissed for admitting unqualified recruits, although high-ranking recruiting officials condoned the practice.

The recruiters claim that top recruiting officials imposed inflated quotas on them, and they in turn were forced to meet the manpower requirements by violating recruiting regulations or face dismissal for failing to achieve quotas.

"The defendants were caught in an absolutely impossible Catch-22 situation," said Mark Waple, the Fayetteville attorney representing the recruiters.

The suit requests $10 million from the Army to compensate the recruiters for their loss of monthly recruiter proficiency pay and promotions earned but withheld after their dismissals.

Named as defendants in the suit are Clifford Alexander, former Army secretary, Maj. Gen. Maxwell Thurman, former commanding general of the U.S. Army Recruiting Command and officials of the Southeast recruiting region.

The suit was filed in March 1980 on the behalf of 60 former recruiters from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Virginia, Florida and Connecticut. An amendment was made the following August to include as defendants about 400 recruiters nationwide who were dismissed for malpractice.

Baffled Over Custody Of Dog

SURREY, British Columbia (AP) — A custody battle over a German shepherd is forcing the dog to lead a double life.

Louise Hesketh was at a stop sign last week when another car pulled up and she spotted Bismarck, the family dog that disappeared four months ago.

After a discussion, the new owner, Alec McMillan, agreed that pedigree papers, licenses and a registered ear tattoo makes it certain he has Mrs. Hesketh's dog.

But he won't give up the dog until he is reimbursed the $800 he paid for Bismarck at a dog pound.

Mrs. Hesketh won't pay. The Mounties are investigating, and while that's going on, the dog is living with both owners until the families can resolve the issue.

At the Hesketh's, his name is Bismarck; at the McMillan home, he's known as London.

"He seemed happy to be back in his own backyard," Mrs. Hesketh said. "But he's really fond of Mr. McMillan, too."

RDF Commander Is Confident Of Response

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. could get enough troops into the Middle East to defend against a Soviet assault if there is enough advance warning, the commander of the U.S. Rapid Deployment force says.

Lt. Gen. Robert A. Kingston told a news conference Thursday he thinks he would get the warning through intelligence sources at least 4 to 5 days before a Soviet attack.

An airborne brigade could be placed in the Middle East within 48 hours, although it would take 10 to 14 days to assemble an airborne division there, according to the Army officer.

Kingston was questioned about Bright Star, the recent joint exercise involving about 4,000 U.S. Army troops and airmen plus Egyptian forces in Egypt's western desert. Reporters, noting the relatively small size of the U.S. force in the exercise, asked whether the United States could get enough troops to the Middle East in an emergency.

"I think we can get sufficient force there, given strategic warning, to carry out that mission," he said. The "Russians could not project a force of the size that we did and sustain it."

Kingston said his direct command — a 56,000-man Army airborne corps and 11 squadrons of Air Force planes — has the necessary strength to handle a flare-up in the region.

"I don't consider that a paper force," he said, alluding to some criticisms of the RDF.

Kingston said he would like to have heavy equipment stockpiled in the Middle East, rather than depending on airlifts or sealifts from the United States or from a group of supply ships anchored near Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

But he said, "so far, we've not been invited in" to do this by any country in the area.

Echoing other U.S. defense officials, Kingston said the United States needs more strategic airlift capacity to haul tanks and other major weapons and equipment from the United States. This has been a chronic problem that is still years from being resolved.

He said that besides pre-positioning equipment in the Middle East, "I would like a forward deployed operational element" of between 150 and 250 U.S. military personnel stationed there on a permanent basis.

Kingston said "negotiations are taking place at this time," but he declined to provide details except to say that he had in mind seven possible locations in five countries.

The recent desert exercise underscored a number of problems which were noted in the first, and smaller, Bright Star exercise in Egypt in the fall of 1980. Some of the problems are on their way to being solved, he said. Kingston said the problems included "communicating with my units in a spread-out situation" and finding "a rifle that can reach out farther" than the M-16, the standard Army weapon.

A water supply problem has been partially solved, he said.

Rate Boost

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state Utilities Commission granted Duke Power Co. a 14.9 percent rate increase that will bring the company an additional $166.4 million a year.

But Thursday's ruling didn't give Duke all it requested. The utility had sought a 19.7 percent increase for an additional $211 in income.

The ruling means Duke customers will receive a one-time refund of $1.70 to $6.10.

The commission decided that a 19.72 percent rate increase Duke had put into effect was excessive and should be reduced to 14.99 percent. Duke applied for the rate increase last May.

It put the increase into effect beginning Oct. 18, raising rates by 9 percent. It went to the full 19.72 percent Dec. 1, Donald R. Hoover, of the utilities commission, said.

North Carolina law allows a utility to raise rates while a commission decision is pending, but requires the company to give refunds if the commission decides the rate increase request is excessive.

The increase was necessary because of expenses caused by Duke's McGuire Unit One and general inflation, the commission said.

"We'd like not to raise rates at all but considering the inflation that has been affecting all parts of our business we feel that the full amount was justified and necessary to continue good service and the state's policy of continued industrial development," said Alex Coffin, manager of news services for Duke.

He said he did not know when the refunds would be granted, but said they would appear as a credit on customer's bills.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Recovering From a Stroke

My father had a stroke six months ago. He still is paralyzed on one side of the body. At first his speech had changed and we couldn't understand him. Now it seems to be getting better. I'd like to know if a person can have more than one stroke. I am concerned, too, that his stroke came on when he appeared to be in perfect health. — Mrs. R.T., Del.

Dear Mrs. T.: Under normal circumstances, the heart beats at regular intervals and pumps blood to all the organs of the body. This keeps the organs nourished with a sufficient amount of blood and oxygen.

The blood vessels from the heart pass through the neck and into the brain, supplying it with life-giving oxygen — without which no organ, including the brain, can survive.

Any interference with the free flow of blood to the brain can cause a cerebro-vascular accident (CVA). This is the technical term for a stroke.

The brain can be deprived of blood in a number of ways. A hemorrhage in a blood vessel, due to rupture or a tear, is one of the major causes of stroke.

Occasionally a spasm of an artery in the brain, due to tobacco or drugs, can temporarily interfere with the free flow of blood.

High blood pressure can also be responsible for a break in a blood vessel. An aneurysm is a weakness in the wall of a blood vessel; it too can be responsible for a hemorrhage if it breaks.

People suffering from arteriosclerosis have a narrowing of the blood vessels in all parts of the body. Fortunately the process is a slow one and allows nature to build up an additional blood vessel. A thrombus, or clot, sometimes forms in a blood vessel that has been narrowed by arteriosclerosis. This, too, interferes with the blood supply and can produce the stroke.

The symptoms that are produced by any stroke depend entirely on the area of the brain that has been deprived of its blood supply and oxygen. Each part of the brain is responsible for certain functions. If the area in the brain controlling speech or body movement is deprived of blood, paralysis of one limb or the other on either side can be affected.

The center for speech is in the left side of the brain in a right-handed person. If that area, known as Broca's area, is affected, then speech and the understanding of words may be disturbed. Recovery from a stroke depends on how well the brain is again supplied with blood.

It is possible to have more than one stroke unless the underlying reason for the stroke is treated. Even though your father seemed to be in good health, he may very well have had some undetected evidences of trouble or he might even have had "small strokes" that were not detected. Today there is vast hope for those afflicted with strokes. Extensive strides have been made in the rehabilitation of these patients, and many can once again be returned to productivity.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Little Hope Of Locating Parents

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Authorities say there's little hope of locating the parents of "Baby Noel," a 1- to 2-day-old baby abandoned at a Charlotte shopping center.

Nurses at Charlotte Memorial Hospital named the infant in honor of Christmas.

Ed Chapin, director of the Mecklenburg County Department of Social Services, said efforts to find parents in such cases rarely succeed.

"Baby Noel will spend the holiday in a nice, warm, loving foster home, where he'll probably remain until he's adopted," Chapin said. That will take about six months, he said.

Doctors said the 6-pound, 10-ounce baby was normal and healthy. They said the infant was between 24 and 36 hours old when he was found by a woman who was going to buy throat lozenges.

Noel (also known as Baby Christmas to police) was found on the sidewalk between the 7-Eleven store and Harris Teeter store at Providence Square Shopping Center by Bobbie Ann Holmes, Charlotte police said.

Mrs. Holmes told police she parked her car across from the 7-Eleven about 7:30 a.m. and she heard a baby crying. She discovered a cardboard box and peered in, she said. There she found a heavy white blanket wrapped around the infant. He was clothed in a disposable diaper and a white undershirt.

She picked him up, drove to her Matthews home and called police.

County police took Mrs. Holmes and the baby to the hospital.

Capt. B.J. Smith of the Charlotte police Youth Bureau speculated that the baby may have been outside on the sidewalk for about an hour before he was discovered by Mrs. Holmes.

Smith said the mother or person who abandoned the child may have been watching to assure that the child was found.

TOOTSIE ROLL DRIVE A SUCCESS ... Bob Martin, left, representing the Pitt County Association for Retarded Citizens, accepts a check from Jim Murphy, chairman of this year's John Ivey Council of the Knights of Columbus Tootsie Roll drive. The drive netted the organization their goal of $10,000 which will be distributed for use in programs for the handicapped and retarded at G.R. Whitfield, Bethel, North Pitt and Falkland schools, as well as to the Pitt and Beaufort County associations for retarded citizens, the United Cerebral Palsy Center and East Carolina Scouting. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Local Agencies Aided By Tootsie Roll Sales

The proceeds from the Tootsie Roll drive of the John Ivey Smith Council of the Knights of Columbus are now being distributed to local agencies for the retarded and handicapped of Pitt and Beaufort counties.

"The 1981 goal of $10,000 was reached through the efforts of the council members and the great generosity of local citizens," Jim Murphy, chairman of this year's campaign, said.

This is the eighth year that Operation Lamb, commonly known as the Tootsie Roll drive, has been held locally. It brings to $54,500 the amount collected by the local council to help retarded and handicapped persons. Nationwide, millions of dollars are collected by Knights of Columbus councils, all of which goes directly to agencies supporting mentally and otherwise handicapped citizens.

Murphy said money from this year's local campaign is being distributed for use in programs for the handicapped and retarded of G.R. Whitfield, Bethel Elementary, North Pitt, and Falkland Elementary schools, both the Pitt and Beaufort County Associations for Retarded Citizens, the United Cerebral Palsy Center, and East Carolina Scouting.

experts ordered witnesses and reporters to clear the block, strewn with glass, rubble and the mangled remains of Christmas bunting from shop windows.

There was no immediate indication who planted the bomb in the offices, usually heavily guarded by former guerrillas who search visitors.

On Aug. 16 an explosion tore through the Inkomo army camp near Salisbury, destroying millions of dollars worth of arms, ammunition and vehicles. The 20-month-old government blamed agents of neighboring white-ruled South Africa.

Mugabe came to power in the former British colony of Rhodesia in February 1980 after leading a seven-year guerrilla war to end nine decades of white-minority rule.

The country, renamed Zimbabwe, won its independence on April 18, 1980 with a pledge by Mugabe for reconciliation between the 7.2 million blacks and the 190,000 whites.

Mugabe Unscathed In Bombing Attack

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — A bomb ripped through the Salisbury headquarters of Prime Minister Robert Mugabe's political party today, and the Information Ministry said five people were killed and several wounded.

Mugabe's aides said the prime minister was at lunch when the blast occurred. Government and hospital officials would not release the names of the victims.

The blast shook buildings and houses for several miles around the city, shattered windows and showered terrified Christmas shoppers in downtown Salisbury with glass.

Army engineers, police and rescue workers combed through the rubble of the party headquarters and surrounding buildings, and fire trucks sprayed the buildings with water.

"There could be another one," an army engineer said, referring to the possibility of another bomb.

Officials of the Zimbabwe African National Union (Patriotic Front) Party staggered dazed from the four-story building, some sobbing and others screaming hysterically.

"It went off there," an official, his face bloodied, said pointing to a gaping hole in the roof.

To The Needy In Name Of Greedy

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — They're giving to the needy in the name of the greedy.

When The Home News Needy Cases Fund went through its Christmas contributions Tuesday, it found one reading:

"In memory of Jacob Marley, our late partner." It was signed, "Scrooge & Marley."

Inside was a check for $100. But the signature there was not of the tight-fisted Scrooge or any Dickens character. It was signed with the real name of a generous person who was granted anonymity by the newspaper.

So far, the fund has raised more than $12,000 from readers to help poor people in central New Jersey.

Snow And Cold In Broad Area

By The Associated Press
An isolated storm off Lake Michigan dumped two feet of snow on northwestern Indiana today, a day after a storm surprised parts of the Midwest, and temperatures fell to record lows on the Plains.

More than 20 weather-related deaths have been reported this week.

A storm feeding on moisture from Lake Michigan rolled across northwestern Indiana early today and dumped heavy snow in a narrow belt from Michigan City to Valparaiso, closing schools and highways.

Snow was forecast to continue throughout the day after 22 inches of snow fell at Valparaiso, Ind., by mid-morning and up to 14 inches elsewhere.

A snow emergency was declared in Michigan City, Ind., and Mayor Clifford Arnold asked nearby cities to help with snow removal.

Twenty miles to the east, Gary, Ind., had only 5 inches of snow, and South Bend, an additional 15 miles to the east, had only a half-inch of snow.

The east-bound lanes of Interstate 94 were closed between Portage, Ind., and Chesteron, Ind. U.S. 30 was closed in Valparaiso and packed with stalled cars.

At least four weather-related deaths were reported in Indiana since Thursday morning.

On the Plains, the temperature dipped to 17 degrees below zero before midnight at Lincoln, Neb., breaking the record for Dec. 18 of 9 below set in 1964.

At St. Joseph, Mo., the morning low was 19 degrees below zero, breaking the old record of minus 7 set in 1963. The cold extended as far south as Texas, with San Antonio reporting a record low of 25.

On the northern Plains, the morning's low for the 48 contiguous states today was 28 degrees below zero, at both Jamestown, N.D., and Watertown, S.D.

Snow flurries continued in West Virginia today, icing untreated mountain roads and making driving hazardous throughout the state, the weather service said.

Five inches of snow fell on the state Thursday.

Later today, more snow is expected from the Ohio Valley and lower Michigan to the mid-Atlantic Coast and New England.

In Thursday's unexpected storm, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Indianapolis were blanketed with 6 to 8 inches, catching many residents and officials unprepared.

Blizzard conditions were reported Thursday in downtown Chicago before snow dwindled to flurries. While the Windy City was getting soaked, Fox River Lake about 40 miles to the northwest had sunny skies.

"We did not expect the heavy snowfall," said Bob Everetts, Cincinnati Highway Maintenance spokesman, explaining why the department had not installed snowplows on salt trucks before Thursday.

Six inches of snow fell in the city, and Everetts ordered the trucks without plows to salt the streets anyway, in what he called a "no-win situation." No serious traffic accidents were reported.

Chicago got 6 inches of snow in the city proper, snarling traffic for more than an hour on the busy Kennedy Expressway, the city's main link to O'Hare International Airport. Police reported two pileups — one of 40 cars, the other involving 15 — but no serious injuries.

Thirty-one people suffered slight injuries when a Chicago Transit Authority bus skidded on the snow-slickened Lake Shore Drive expressway and hit another bus.

In Indianapolis on Thursday, a car skidded out of control and hit a crowd of children waiting for a school bus. Five children remained hospitalized today, suffering from multiple fractures, back and neck injuries.

Traffic was slowed to a crawl throughout the Indianapolis area as highways and streets were covered with up to five inches of snow.

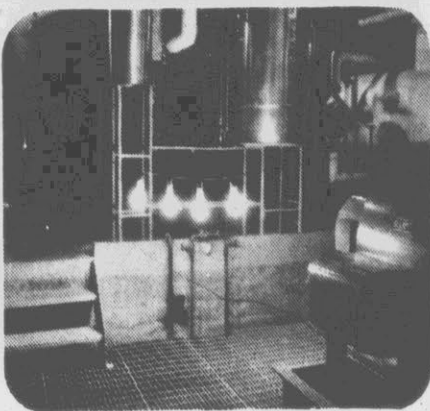

Parts of northeastern Ohio — including Cleveland — received from 6 to 8 inches of snow and another 6 inches was forecast before the storm was to head for southern New England.

Deliberating In Hobby's Trial

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A six-man, six-woman jury began deliberations today to decide whether to convict former AFL-CIO president Wilbur Hobby and Mort Levi, his former business associate, on charges of defrauding the government.

The jury began deliberating about 9:10 a.m. today. U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt instructed the jurors Thursday after prosecutors and defense lawyers delivered final arguments.

FOCUS

The First Nuclear-Powered Light Bulbs

These four small lights were the first promise of great things to come. On December 20, 1951 in Idaho Falls, Idaho, scientists for the first time "harnessed the atom" for peaceful instead of destructive uses. Now 30 years later, many experts think nuclear fusion is even more promising than nuclear fission. Fusion combines light atoms like hydrogen instead of splitting heavier atoms like uranium. Fusion would produce little pollution or radioactive waste and its raw materials are readily available. One glass of water could produce as much energy as 500,000 barrels of oil. For a million years the sun has produced energy by fusion — combining 10 billion billion tons of hydrogen. But our first fusion-powered light bulbs probably won't be ready for at least 20 more years.

DO YOU KNOW — Where is the largest nuclear reactor in the world?

Israel Is Hoping To Renew Former Ties To Africa

By ARTHUR MAX
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Working through private contacts, Israel is hoping to restore some of its broken ties in black Africa next year and to crack its diplomatic isolation from the Third World.

The breakthrough could come as early as the spring when Israel withdraws the last of its military forces from Egypt's Sinai Peninsula after nearly 15 years of occupation.

Most black African nations severed relations with Israel and switched allegiance to the Arabs during the 1973 Middle East war.

But now the Israelis say Africa is seeking military aid from Israel to combat what they conceived to be Soviet-backed thrusts against them, such as Libya's intervention in Chad and its alleged threats against Sudan and Nigeria.

Defense Minister Ariel Sharon of Israel says he visited a number of African countries in November. He refuses to identify them, and claims the agreements he reached are so sensitive that he cannot even show them to his colleagues in Prime Minister Menachem Begin's Cabinet for fear of leaks.

The Israeli radio says Israel is negotiating with seven African countries to renew diplomatic relations. From press and other reports, it appears that the diplomatic activity began in earnest early in 1981 with a series of unpublicized tours through Africa by top Israeli officials.

In September, Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir met the foreign ministers of six African countries during the U.N. General Assembly session in New York.

Sharon disclosed recently that a delegation of Cabinet ministers from an African state had "showed up in my office" seeking arms and military cooperation against what they called "Soviet expansion." Sharon gave the impression the visit led to his own swing through Africa.

After news of Sharon's trip leaked out, President Mobutu Sese Seku of Zaire said that once Israel left the Sinai he would be willing to resume ties. But he said he had to coordinate the move with other black African states.

The groundwork for the secret diplomacy was done years ago by Israeli farmers, engineers and others, who planned agriculture, built roads and trained and supplied armies.

The rupture of 1973 left Israel in diplomatic contact with only three African states — Malawi, Lesotho and Swaziland — and with the white supremacist government of South Africa.

Partly because of the 1973 break, Israel upgraded its ties with South Africa, expanded trade and, according to foreign reports, developed a rich military relationship.

But at the same time, the Israelis were quietly trickling back into black Africa.

By 1979 they were in charge of rebuilding Nigeria's road network, were involved in massive housing and government office construction projects in the Ivory Coast and were quietly advising the Kenyans on growing crops.

These experts often served as unofficial ambassadors, keeping open channels of communications between governments.

An Israeli honorary consul recently was accredited by Zaire. Israel has been allowed to open an interests section in Gabon, and a Ghana-Israel friendship society was launched two years ago.

Israel often had put out feelers with an eye on renewing formal ties. In 1976, then-Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin secretly met with President Leopold Senghor of Senegal and separately with President Felix Houphouet-Boigny of the Ivory Coast.

But the power of Arab oil remained strong, and the Africans pleaded that the time was not right for diplomatic ties with Israel.

"The political map of Africa has changed drastically," because of the alleged Soviet-Libyan threat, said a recent editorial in the Jerusalem Post.

Israeli officials say the Africans believe Israel could be their channel to the United States, which they accuse of neglecting them.

Americans Get Brazilians Babes

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Three American mothers have left for the United States with five newly-adopted Brazilian babies after U.S. Ambassador Anthony Motley interceded on their behalf.

"I feel great," Vicki Ludwig said Thursday night before departing Rio for St. Louis with adopted sons Michael and Jeremy. "I've been in Brazil trying to get this worked out since June 30 I haven't smiled in a long time."

She said the babies were adopted through Joyce Blumer, an American-born Brazilian woman who has been the target of news stories that prompted a government investigation of adoption practices.

The articles alleged that rich Americans and Europeans were taking advantage of backward conditions in northern Brazil to buy babies from poverty-stricken families. A U.S. Embassy official who asked not to be named said Ambassador Motley intervened personally when it became apparent the publicity had blocked these perfectly legal adoptions.

"The Brazilian authorities accepted the argument that the American mothers had followed proper adoption procedures and could not be blamed," the official said. Papers allowing four other Brazilian children to be adopted by Americans should be completed within a few days, the official added.

The other mothers who flew out Thursday were Peggy Sandstedt of St. Louis, adopting Browyn Erinm and Linda Wheeler of Memphis, Tenn., who took her own adopted child, Rene Wynn, and Mandy Jane Hileman, who was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hileman of Bulls Gate, Tenn.

Chemicals In 'Yellow Rain'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A man-made propellant and four poisons believed to have been used in chemical warfare have been found in a yellow powder reportedly scraped from foliage in Laos. ABC News says in a documentary to be broadcast Monday night.

"There may now be sufficient evidence," says Bill Redeker, the ABC News correspondent for the documentary, "to conclude that it (chemical warfare) exists, and to judge whether the Soviets and their allies are responsible."

The documentary, "Rain of Terror," to be broadcast at 8 p.m. EST, suggests through eyewitness and other sources that the Soviets and their allies currently are using outlawed chemical warfare in both Afghanistan and Southeast Asia. Hmong tribesmen, who fought on the U.S. side in Vietnam, are among the targets for the gas attacks, ABC News says.

The disclosure of the propellant and four poisons supports and extends evidence of gas attacks in Southeast Asia previously reported by U.S. government researchers, but challenged in congressional hearings by scientists who maintained three mycotoxin poisons previously isolated grow naturally in Southeast Asia.

"What is crucially important about this finding is that it tends to make irrelevant the arguments of those critics who say the poisons occur naturally in Southeast Asia," Redeker says in the report.

Dr. Joseph Rosen, a Rutgers University scientist hired by ABC News to analyze the sample reportedly taken from Laos, says the man-made compound, polyethyleneglycol, "could not be found sitting on a rock or on a plant in Southeast Asia."

Rosen isolated in the sample a fourth mycotoxin, as well as the three found by government scientists, ABC News says.

The sample was obtained from Charles Whitney, a hospital administrator with long experience in Southeast Asia. He said he received the yellow powder from refugees from Laos, ABC News says.

ABC News says in "Rain of Terror" that political considerations may have kept the United States from pressuring the Soviets on the subject.

"By making it a point of U.S.-Soviet confrontation," says Richard Burt, a State Department spokesman, "all we're doing is going to be to force the Soviets to dig in their heels."

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Sunny skies but colder weather is the forecast until Saturday for most of the country. Rain is predicted for the Northwest, snow for the lower Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Valley. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A strong cold front moved off the North Carolina coast this morning, ushering in cold arctic air and bringing back wintry weather to the state.

The cold air is associated with high pressure that is centered over the Dakotas. The center of high pressure will drift southeast for the next several days. As a result, the outbreak of cold air will persist across North Carolina into the first part of next week.

The low pressure that was expected to bring a mixture of wintry precipitation to the state during the past 24 hours was centered over New Jersey this morning. As a result the precipitation was not widespread and was slow to develop. Some light snow fell across the northern mountains Thursday, while some light rain fell across the remainder of the mountains.

Ski Slopes

By The Associated Press
Here is a report of ski conditions today in North Carolina from the Southeastern Ski Areas Association. The conditions were supplied by resort operators.

APPALACHIAN: Base of 22 inches. Frozen granular primary surface. Machine powder secondary. Four slopes open. Four inches new machine-made snow. Skiing tonight.

BEECH: No report available.

CATALOOCHIE: No report available.

FAIRFIELD SAPPHIRE VALLEY: Base of 6-20 inches. Packed powder primary surface. Packed powder secondary. Two inches machine-made snow. Two slopes open. Skiing tonight.

SCALEY MOUNTAIN: Base of 18-24 inches. Packed-powder primary surface. Loose granular secondary. Three to six inches machine-made snow. Three slopes open. Skiing tonight.

SEVEN DEVILS: Base of 6-36 inches. Frozen granular primary surface. Making snow. Three slopes open. Skiing tonight.

SUGAR MOUNTAIN: Base of 40 inches. Packed powder primary surface. Seven slopes open. Skiing tonight.

WOLF LAUREL: Base of 18-40 inches. Packed powder primary surface. Frozen granular secondary surface. Three slopes open.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES
The Nazarene Church of Christ, 205 W. Skinner St., will observe regular Sunday morning worship with the Rev. Alexander Brown delivering the message.

The Rev. Lucy D. Jones, accompanied by the Mount Calvary Choir, will have the 3 p.m. service and the youth department of the church will present a Christmas play Sunday at 6 p.m. Rehearsal for the play will be Saturday at 3 p.m. and choir rehearsal will be at 4 p.m.

SERVICE PLANNED
Eldress Phyllis Watts and Rock Spring Free Will Baptist No. 2 choir and ushers will have services at Arthur Chapel Free Will Baptist Church on Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The choir will have rehearsal at 3 p.m. Saturday.

There was a wide range in temperatures across the state Thursday. Highs ranged from around 40 in the higher mountains to the mid-60s along the south coast. Temperatures during the wee hours of this morning ranged from the 20s and 30s in the west to the 40s and low 50s in the east.

Recreational weather outlook: It will become cloudy and rather windy as temperatures turn sharply colder. Snow flurries will occur at times across the northern mountains and the higher elevations of the central mountains through Saturday.

Steady or slowly falling temperatures will be the rule today with lows tonight in the teens across most of the state. Lows will range from 5 to 10 in the northern mountains to the 20s on the outer banks. Highs Saturday will be in the 20s to mid-30s.

Small craft advisories are in effect for the coastal waters and sounds. Along the coast southwest winds will increase to 15 to 25 mph and shift to the northwest.

Money Tree At Sunday Service

A 12-foot bare tree sitting in Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church will become the church's first Christmas tree decorated with ornaments of checks and money during Sunday's 11 o'clock service.

Dr. James H. Bailey, senior minister of Jarvis Memorial, says "most families, as part of their Advent preparation and tradition decorate a tree for Christmas. For years, we have given gifts at Christmas to everyone except to our church. Gifts received Sunday for the tree will be used for the church emergency building and roof repairs", he said.

Craftsman Shares Three Eras

By MARY ANNE RHYNE Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Roy Underhill is a craftsman trapped between three eras — 18th-century Williamsburg, 19th-century woodworking and 20th-century television production.

But the freckle-faced, red-haired Underhill loves the challenge and says his "biggest reward is to do this for a living."

What he does is teach traditional woodworking. His time is divided between colonial Williamsburg in Virginia, where he is the master housewright; a wood shop north of Durham on the Eno River, where he makes everything from rakes to log cabins; and Chapel Hill, where he works on his public television series "The Woodwright's Shop."

Underhill — a 31-year-old who almost always appears in blue jeans, suspenders, flannel shirt and denim cap — also has completed his first book. The recently published 202-page book is a guide to woodcraft and accompanies the television series.

"I've always known I wanted to teach people how to make things," Underhill said in an interview during a recent stopover in Raleigh to autograph books. "It was something I was interested in on my own but I got lots of early reinforcement."

Some of that reinforcement came from an older sister who worked on American history exhibits at the Smithsonian Institution. When Underhill was growing up in Washington, he remembers that his sister would bring home objects used by early Americans in their daily lives.

"I grew up knowing that people make a living at this and I learned how people fit into their environment very directly," he said.

When he went to the University of North Carolina as an undergraduate, Underhill studied theatre and directing. The acting talents came in handy for spicing up woodcraft demonstrations that he gave to earn a little money.

But Underhill says his love for woodworking took over and prompted him to go to the Duke University Forestry School as a graduate student. There his professors allowed him to modify the study program, concentrating on early American woodcraft.

About that time, Underhill set up his woodshop on the Eno — a cooperative venture with park administrators — and began making rakes, chairs or "whatever I could make the old way" to sell.

But there was little money in that and when Underhill's first daughter was born, he concluded he'd "either have to give it up or find a way to make a living at it."

So Underhill took a truckload of homemade chairs to the television producers at UNC-TV in Chapel Hill and told them he had an idea for a show that was "going to be the hottest thing since earth shoes."

The result was a series of 30-minute PBS shows now aired by stations from North Carolina to Oregon. On each show, Underhill demonstrates how to make tools, chairs, hay forks, dough bowls or log houses, liberally sprinkling his commentary with quotations from Shakespeare or any other classic author whose work vaguely relates to woodworking. Underhill is to begin filming a second series in January and he says the reason for the show's success is simple.

"They say the essence of drama is conflict. This (show) is man against material. People, I think, wonder whether this man is going to win over this log," he said.

The main theme of the show, Underhill says, is that people have a choice. They don't have to accept mass-produced furniture; they can make their own, he says.

"I've met people who have made everything I've shown," he said. "Then there are people who are interested in the tools themselves."

"With the increasing complexity of life, the stimulus is toward this more direct, self-reliant thing. It (the woodworking ability) makes people a little more confident, like having the firewood stacked up out-

And Underhill believes the show teaches people to slow down and notice the patterns of daily life.

"It (woodworking) gives you another perspective on your daily existence. You begin to see patterns in language and the physical environment," he said, noting that the logic behind many of the patterns can be found in history books.

"We ask why in the world something looks the way it does — there used to be a very obvious reason."

Newcomers Try Get In Step With Senate Rhythm

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ten months after becoming a U.S. senator, Charles E. Grassley of Iowa was bounding up the steps of the Capitol one day this fall, when he was brusquely stopped by a policeman.

The presence of a foreign dignitary in the Capitol had triggered tight security measures.

"Sir, no one except senators and their staffs are permitted in the Senate gallery now," the policeman said, tightly clasping the Republican freshman's arm.

"Do you know who I am?" asked Grassley, angrily. "Do you know who I am?" asked the policeman, whose own temper flared.

Eventually, it was all straightened out, Grassley's identity was established and he went on his way.

But the encounter is an apt symbol of the impact the new class of 16 Republicans has had in their first year in the Senate. It is their election which gave President Reagan a GOP majority in the Senate, and insured relatively easy approval of his budget and tax programs.

"Our accomplishment is right there for all to see," Grassley said. "Where would these things (the tax and budget cuts) be without us?"

But harsher critics of the newest senators refer to them as the "popsicle brigade," a derisive reference to their relative youth, and their inability to fit into the rhythm of the Senate, to learn its rules and customs, and their tendency to identify with single issues like abortion, a balanced budget, school prayer, or busing.

Sen. Jeremiah Denton of Alabama, for example, is known for a seeming fascination with matters of sex and the family.

During a Senate Judiciary Committee discussion of whether a husband should be prosecuted for rape, Denton said: "When you get married, you kind of expect you're going to get a little sex."

Denton successfully steered a bill designed to discourage teen-age pregnancy through the Senate, and at one point provided a graphic description of what kinds of sex he was concerned about.

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., has become well known for having served strip steak, asparagus and strawberries at a luncheon where the chief subject of conversation was to be fraud in the federal Food Stamps program.

In addition, aides to more experienced Republican senators view her as one with unbounded ambition who is probably the most difficult to work with among the newcomers.

"She sure has ruffled some feathers around here," says one official. Another says simply, "She is a grandstander with little sense of common courtesy."

But in the same breath, the same source says Mrs. Hawkins was invaluable in seeking votes in support of President Reagan's proposal to sell AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

While Sandra Day O'Connor's nomination to the Supreme Court was pending before the Senate, Grassley was invited to the White House for a meeting on another topic.

After the meeting in the presence of others, Grassley abruptly asked Reagan if he had a commitment from Mrs. O'Connor to oppose legalized abortion.

Knowing it would be improper for any president to obtain promises on how Mrs. O'Connor might vote on any issue, Reagan sought to politely deflect the question.

Nonetheless, pressed Grassley, "She's going to vote right, isn't she?"

The outcome of decisions made in Senate committees are almost always known in advance, but roll call votes are taken as if minds were made up only at the last minute.

Earlier this year, freshman Dan Quayle, R-Ind., tried to raise a point of order to avoid a series of time-consuming recorded votes in the Senate Labor Committee.

"I know how the vote is going to come out," complained Quayle.

"So do I," a more experienced Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, lectured Quayle "and so does everyone else in this room."

More recently, Denton and Sen. James Abdnor, R-S.D., became so entangled in the complexities of parliamentary rules during a fight over abortion, that Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker had to be summoned to the Senate floor.

The result was that legislation to deny insurance coverage to federal employees seeking abortions was put off until next year.

"A lot of these people had no real legislative or political experience before they got here," said one Senate veteran. "And some are just a little slow to learn."

Many of the freshmen were elected because of their conservative stands on social issues like abortion and school prayer and busing.

One observer said, "They really believe that the New Right and the Moral Majority is the only constituency they have, and so they have become single issue senators."

Ironically, in 1981, there was no final action on any of those issues in the Senate. "That is partly because of they don't know how to do things around here," said one senior Senate official.

Six of the new senators served in the House of Representatives. But because they were in the minority in the House, and are now part of the Republican majority in the Senate, they have as many or more problems adjusting to the Senate as those with no congressional experience.

When the Republican-controlled Senate was faced with the distasteful task of approving the first $1 trillion federal debt limit, former House members among the freshman Republicans said they had always voted against an unbalanced budget in the past, and couldn't change their ways in the Senate.

Republican Leader Howard Baker called them into his office, and explained patiently that their roles had changed, that majority status can be tough, and that the president needed their votes. Eventually, they came around.

Three of the new Republicans, Arlen Specter of Pennsylvania, Warren Rudman of New Hampshire and Slade Gorton of Washington, have won high praise for learning quickly how to get things done in the Senate.

Specter and Rudman especially say one experienced Senate observer "are quietly effective and are really quick studies."

THE POPSICLE BRIGADE — Some critics of freshmen senators refer to them as the "popsicle brigade". Four of the newest members, are from

Two Of FBI's Most Wanted Are Captured On A Single Day

By The Associated Press
The coincidental captures of a former terrorist bank robber and a man wanted in connection with four execution-style killings has allowed the FBI to scratch two names from its Ten Most Wanted list.

John William Sherman, 39, who broke out of a federal prison in Lompoc, Calif., two years ago, was held today on $2 million bond after FBI agents arrested him Thursday near his home in Golden, Colo.

Leslie Nichols, 38, was arrested Thursday by the FBI and police in a Los Angeles apartment and was held on $500,000 bond.

An FBI spokesman in Washington said it was the first time two fugitives on the most wanted list in connection with unrelated crimes were captured on the same day.

Sherman, who once said in court he was dedicated to the destruction of the "evil" American system, was a member of the George Jackson Brigade, named for a radical prisoner killed by San Quentin prison guards in 1971.

The underground anarchist group admitted to a string of political bombings in Washington and Oregon in the late 1970s, and Sherman allegedly participated in at least 14 of the group's bank robberies and 11 bombings, according to an affidavit filed in the case.

The FBI called him a a bomb specialist and a master of disguise.

"He's what we call a real bad apple," FBI special agent Jack Egnor said at a news conference Thursday, adding that Sherman allegedly was involved in at least two shootouts with police.

Egnor said Sherman's 39-year-old wife, Marianne Louise Sherman, and Paula Jean Botwinick, 28, also were taken into custody Thursday.

A preliminary hearing for the trio was scheduled for Dec. 24 before U.S. Magistrate Royce Sickler.

Mrs. Sherman, arrested at a Denver art gallery where she was employed under an alias, was charged in a federal warrant with helping Sherman escape in April 1979 from the Lompoc prison, where he was serving a 30-year sentence for bank robbery and escape.

Ms. Botwinick was charged with aiding a federal fugitive, said FBI agent John Detlor in Seattle.

Nichols, of Little Rock, Ark., had been on the most wanted list since July 1980 in connection with four murders in Little Rock that were apparently drug-related, officials said.

The killings took place over the period June 12-15, 1980. One victim's body was found in the back seat of a car, two were found in the trunk of another car and the fourth victim was found in a ditch.

"In each instance the victims' hands and feet were tied with coat hanger wire and shot at close range in the back of the head," said FBI agent John Hoos in Los Angeles.

Nichols was picked up on a Sept. 5, 1980, federal warrant charging him with unlawful interstate flight to avoid prosecution for the crime of capital murder, the FBI said.

Hoos said he did not know if Nichols had been living in Los Angeles or if anyone else was wanted in connection with the murders.

Egnor said Sherman's escape from Lompoc was modeled after a scene in the movie "The Godfather." After being taken to downtown Lompoc for treatment by an ophthalmologist, Sherman obtained a gun allegedly hidden in a bathroom by his wife, Egnor said. Sherman fled in a getaway car driven by his wife, the agent said.

Expect Endorse Peanut Program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A representative of North Carolina peanut growers predicted that they'd endorse the 1981 Farm Bill in an upcoming referendum, though they're not happy with all its provisions.

"I'm not elated, but I'm grateful that it's over and that we do have a bill we can live with," said Norfleet Sugg, executive secretary of the N.C. Peanut Growers Association.

If the program is rejected, Sugg said, farmers are left "with zero."

"The choice is basically to accept the program the Congress has approved in the farm bill or we won't have any program," he added. "But I think the probability is very good that the growers will accept it once they thoroughly understand how it works."

After more than four decades of silence, the peanut program came under harsh attack in Congress by critics who said that the system was archaic and drove up the price of peanuts.

It was eliminated in October by the House but revived by a conference committee after its supporters made concessions.

"I don't know of any of the commodities that are completely happy with the bill," Sugg said. "It's the first time a farm bill has been written under such strict budget restraints. We've all compromised and tightened our belts."

The measure provides almost $11 billion for commodity aid over the next four years — about $200 million more than the Reagan administration had wanted. But President Reagan has indicated he will sign the bill.

Terrorists Kidnap An American General In Italy

By DENNIS REDMONT
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — After more than a decade of attacks on Italian politicians, judges, journalists and police, the Red Brigades apparently have reached out to snare a American general, raising the ante in the war of terror with society.

The Red Brigades claimed responsibility for Thursday's abduction of Army Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier in a telephone call to the Italian news agency ANSA in Milan. Police said they took the claim seriously.

Dozier, the second highest ranking U.S. Army official in southern Europe, is the first American abducted for politics rather than pay in Italy. He was snatched by a squad of gunmen posing as plumbers, who invaded his apartment.

The abduction focused fresh attention on Italy's most feared urban terrorist gang, grabbing headlines beside the martial law crisis in Poland.

Self-proclaimed Communists who sign their leaflets with a five pointed star and the words "For Communism," the Red Brigades first made their mark with the bombing of a Siemens electrical plant in Milan on a hot August afternoon in 1970.

Over the next few years, they raised the stakes, kidnapping a Fiat executive for eight days, then a judge in Genoa for 35 days, demanding the release of imprisoned terrorists in exchange for his freedom.

Hundreds of youths reportedly rallied to the red star banner in a show of disenchantment with 30 years of Christian Democratic government and the lack of reforms following the student agitation of the 1960s.

By 1978, the Red Brigades and other spinoff terrorist gangs like Prima Linea, or Front Line, and the Armed Proletarian Nuclei claimed more than 100 murders and nearly 100 kidnappings.

The Red Brigades were ready for their most daring commando action: The seizure of Aldo Moro, five-time former premier and president of the ruling Christian Democrats.

The abduction came as Moro was about to negotiate a truce with the Italian Communist Party, the largest in the West, and a frequent target of Red Brigades charges of treason against the principles of Marxism.

Pleas for Moro's life from Pope Paul VI, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and other world leaders went unheeded, and on May 9, 1978, the politician's bullet-riddled body was found in downtown Rome, half way between the headquarters of the Communist and Christian Democratic parties.

Throughout Moro's 50-day ordeal, the Red Brigades sought to embarrass the government and extract promises for the release of what the terrorists called "political prisoners." The government refused.

Authorities have struck back in the three year's since Moro's death.

Police, armed with new weapons and bulletproof vests, made waves of arrests and courts, given wider investigative powers, tried and convicted thousands of suspects.

An estimated 3,000 terrorists currently are being held in Italian jails, many of them serving life terms.

Investigators say they have proof that Brigades members have received arms and training in such places as Lebanon, South Yemen, Libya and probably Czechoslovakia.

But the so-called "Eastern Connection" has sparked public controversy.

Italy's Socialist President Sandro Pertini kindled a national debate when he claimed that the sanctuaries of Italian terrorism lie in the Soviet Union.

Red Brigades leaflets recently announced an "autumn-winter campaign," aimed at freeing imprisoned comrades and following the "Third World Revolutionary Movement."

But few Italians expected the next kidnap candidate to be a top American general.

Chief Justice Denies Account By Ehrlichman

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger says he shouldered a network TV cameraman because the camera lens "hit me in the chin."

Burger also told the Lincoln Journal in a copyright interview that allegations made by former White House aide John Ehrlichman about conversations the chief justice had with President Nixon are only attempts "to sell a book."

Other than that, Burger said Thursday he would not discuss Ehrlichman's claims that Burger and Nixon privately discussed a pending Supreme Court school busing case.

The Ehrlichman claim, contained in a forthcoming book, and a CBS television crew's attempts to get Burger to comment on it led to the showing incident here Wednesday in which a camera was knocked out of a cameraman's hands.

CBS news reporter Derrick Blakley was quoted as saying that the film crew had hoped to question the chief justice before a luncheon that preceded Burger's tour of the Nebraska State Penitentiary and an address at the University of Nebraska.

Blakley said Burger did not respond to the queries, nor did he indicate that he was angry or offended. But, Blakley said, when the crew tried to enter an elevator with the chief justice, Burger turned and knocked the camera off the cameraman's shoulder.

Burger said the incident occurred after a member of the crew apparently pushed the cameraman into the elevator and the front of the camera lens "hit me in the chin." Burger said there appeared to be a rubber ring around the lens and "I didn't get hurt."

The chief justice, a Minnesota native, said he played hockey in his younger days, "and I just turned and gave him a shoulder. It probably wasn't his fault. I think someone was trying to push him in. But there were already four or five us in there."

Burger toured the newspaper office and discussed topics ranging from press coverage of the courts to what he sees as a need for expanding the manufacturing output of prison inmates and enlarging the market for their goods — the main point of his address Wednesday.

Burger said he favors getting court opinions to reporters as early as possible to give them more time to study complex decisions and write about them accurately. He said he prefers staggering the release of major opinions instead of overwhelming journalists by handing down several such decisions at once.

Rules Mistrial In Drug Suit

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A mistrial was declared Thursday in Wilkes County Superior Court in the trial of a 33-year-old man charged with trafficking in marijuana.

Judge James Davis declared the mistrial during the presentation of evidence by witnesses for the state.

Davis didn't give a reason for his decision. Yorkie Johnson of Roaring River was on trial after being arrested at his home March 26 after a raid by state and local officials.

Police said they found 123 bales of Colombian-grown marijuana, three barrels of home-grown marijuana and seeds in Johnson's basement.

Similar charges against Johnson's wife were dropped last week because of insufficient evidence.

Red Brigades Shift Sights In Lengthy War On Society

By CLARA HEMPHILL
Associated Press Writer
VERONA, Italy (AP) — In the first political kidnapping of an American in Italy, four men believed to be members of the Red Brigades carried Army Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier from his fifth-floor apartment in a trunk after knocking him out and tying up his wife with chains and adhesive tape.

"This is the Red Brigades," an anonymous telephone caller told ANSA, the Italian news agency. "We have kidnapped Brig. Gen. James Dozier in Verona, Via Lungo Adige 5. A communique will follow."

But hours passed and there was no further word.

The police said they believed the claim that the abduction was the work of Italy's most feared urban guerrillas, the terrorist organization that kidnapped and murdered former Premier Aldo Moro.

Dozier, 50, is the second highest-ranking U.S. Army official in southern Europe. He was kidnapped about 6 p.m. after his bodyguard drove him home from the nearby NATO base where he has been stationed since June 1980.

"Four men armed and described as plumbers entered his home and after having struck the general, immobilized his wife with chains and adhesive tape and then fled with the hostage presumably locked in a trunk," a statement released by the NATO base said.

It said the kidnappers also took a stack of documents from Dozier's library.

Police sources said Mrs. Dozier, 47, opened the door to the men who said they were sent to fix a leak in the apartment immediately below. They hit the general in the head with a pistol butt when he resisted them, then stuffed him into a trunk that they loaded onto a blue Fiat van with a Milan license plate.

The van was found abandoned on the outskirts of this northeastern city 60 miles west of Venice.

"I feel that his putting up resistance would be very natural for him," Dozier's sister, Joan Townsend told a Houston, Tex., TV interviewer. "My brother is a very steadfast person — he's very strong in his convictions. He isn't a weak person. He wouldn't willingly submit to anything like that."

Mrs. Townsend said the State Department "put me in touch with my brother's wife, Judy. She was fine and said the military people took her someplace safe."

She said Mrs. Dozier tipped over the chair to which she was chained and banged her head on the floor, alerting the neighbors. The Doziers' two children were not home at the time.

In Washington, the State Department convened a working group of experts to monitor developments. White House deputy press secretary Peter Rousel said President Ronald Reagan, told of the kidnapping, "expressed concern and asked that he be kept informed."

Premier Giovanni Spadolini met with Interior Minister Virginio Rognoni, Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio and top intelligence officials and called a meeting of the Cabinet council for national security this morning.

A spokesman said Spadolini was in contact with U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Rabb, who was in Genoa on a tour of northern Italy. Rabb has been given special protection since reports circulated in September of alleged Libyan plots to kill him and other U.S. diplomats in several West European capitals.

Dozier, of Arcadia, Fla., is deputy chief of staff for logistics and administration for allied land forces in southern Europe. A veteran of more than 25 years of Army service, he fought in Vietnam with an armored cavalry regiment, won the Silver Star for valor and later was attached to armored units in West Germany.

A graduate of West Point, he also commanded a brigade of the 2nd Armored Division at Fort Hood, Tex., and held a number of staff posts.

The Red Brigades have claimed responsibility for at least seven of the 16 political assassinations in Italy this year. But heretofore they shunned attacks on foreigners, although they have criticized U.S.-based multinational companies and accused them of supporting the parties in power in Italy.

The only other kidnapping of an American in Italy in recent times was for ransom. J. Paul Getty III, grandson of the American oil billionaire, was freed after five months captivity in 1973 when his family paid $2.7 million.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, following through on Thursday's late upswing. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 1.81 Thursday, rose 4.28 to 874.81 by noontime. Gainers outnumbered losers by about a 5-3 spread in the over-all tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. In the economic news, the Commerce Department announced the second upward revision in its figures for the Gross National Product in the third quarter of this year. The department said GNP, after adjustment for inflation grew at a 1.4 percent annual rate in the July-September period. A 0.6 percent decline had originally been estimated, and the numbers were subsequently revised to show a 0.6 percent rise. Large inventories of unsold goods have been a problem for the economy in the current quarter, for which economists are estimating a decline of 5 percent or more in GNP. The NYSE's composite index gained .30 to 71.67. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.13 to 320.00. Volume on the Big Board totaled 21.78 million shares at noontime, against 20.27 million at the same point Thursday.

Moscow Claims U.S. Incitement

by DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union, escalating its verbal duel with the United States, accused the Reagan administration today of having given "direct instruction" to Polish extremists who planned an armed coup against the Warsaw government.

The assertion was made in a report by the official Soviet news agency Tass.

Earlier today, in its first commentary on the Polish situation, the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda said U.S. leaders "obviously lose their equilibrium seeing how the Polish people are putting their own home in order, stopping the actions of the counter-revolutionary forces which enjoyed such great favor of their American and NATO friends and patrons."

Tass assailed President Reagan for having described Solidarity labor union activists as "freedom fighters" at a White House news conference Thursday in which he denounced last Sunday's imposition of martial law in Poland.

"The White House's position is not surprising if it is taken into consideration that the heads of the counter-revolutionary forces were preparing to fulfill their plans with the knowledge and encouragement and also by direct instruction of the Washington administration," Tass said.

The report claimed the military took control in Poland because Solidarity leaders and members of other groups "were preparing an armed putsch in the country."

The earlier Pravda report said, "Setting great hopes on pressure, the U.S.A. will only appear before the whole world again in the ugliest form as a power which engages in interference in the internal affairs of sovereign states and resorts to methods which are inadmissible in international life," Pravda said in an article signed by Yuri Zhukov, the newspaper's chief commentator.

In addition to the Pravda attack, the Soviet army newspaper Red Star accused the CIA of playing "first fiddle in subversive activities against the Polish People's Republic."

It claimed the American intelligence agency had acted because it "saw its chance to implement its cherished goal — to weaken world socialism, to wash socialism out of Poland.

"All that the counter-revolutionaries did in Poland received the imperialists full approval and all-round support," said the Red Star article by Maj. Gen. M. Monin, who was described as a professor of history.

"The sources of insolence and impertinence of Solidarity's leaders should be sought mainly beyond the ocean and in NATO circles in Europe," the article said.

It warned the United States not to continue futile attempts to use "political and economic means" to force the Warsaw Pact allies to follow any particular course.

Washington cut off food aid to Poland following the imposition of martial law.

The new attacks on the West and the allegations of CIA links to the independent Solidarity labor movement in Poland came as Soviet bloc leaders were arriving in Moscow to celebrate President Leonid I. Brezhnev's 75th birthday on Saturday.

It was not known whether Polish Premier and Communist Party chief Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski would leave his troubled homeland to attend the celebration.

In another development, which observers here said was unprecedented, the Tass English language service ran what appeared to be Thursday's entire report in English by the Polish official news agency PAP. An official at Tass told The Associated Press by telephone that the move was a "favor" to PAP designed to give it a "greater outlet."

"We have a larger network for distribution than they do," he said.

Meanwhile, a major Yugoslav Communist newspaper said today that events in Poland would have far-reaching consequences for Communism, not only in that country but in "the broadest possible sense."

The newspaper Borba said in an editorial that the Polish developments could undermine East-West detente and disrupt world stability and security.

Routine Meeting

ECU NEWS BUREAU

The Chancellor Selection Committee of East Carolina University will meet in routine executive session at 11 a.m. Monday at the Willis Building at ECU, chairman Ashley B. Futrell announced.

The 15-member committee is beginning its process of screening applications which have been reviewed by subcommittees. A Dec. 15 deadline was set earlier for receiving nominations for a new chancellor to succeed Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer, who has resigned effective July 1. The selection committee has also published criteria it will use in screening candidates and making recommendations.

ECU trustees, alumni, faculty, a student representative and the general public are represented on the selection committee.

Futrell indicated the committee will hold frequent meetings during the next several months.

Prelate To Visit China

MIAMI (AP) — For the first time in almost 19 years, the archbishop of Miami's Roman Catholic Church will attend a religious ceremony in Cuba, church officials said.

Archbishop Edward McCarthy will be accompanied by Auxiliary Bishop John Nevin and Monsignor Bryan Walsh on a trip to attend the Dec. 26 consecration of Jaime Luca Ortega as archbishop of Havana. The clerics will return to Miami on Dec. 28.

"We are going because we feel... our presence there will be a source of affirmation for all the members of the Catholic community in Cuba who live in difficult circumstances," Walsh said Thursday.

Cuban-born Auxiliary Bishop Agustin Roman is the only high Catholic official in Miami who will not make the visit.

"It's not hard to understand why I am not going," Roman said. "I was expelled from Cuba... 20 years ago. I would never ask for permission to go back."

Nonetheless, Roman praised the planned trip.

"I think my brothers (the other bishops) should be present," Roman said. "It is an act of love among bishops."

Roman and Walsh stressed the visit is purely for church business and has no political overtones.

McCarthy could not be reached for comment.

The last visit of Miami's Catholic prelate to Havana was in March 1963, when Walsh and then-Archbishop Coleman F. Carroll traveled to the communist-ruled island for the funeral of Cuba's Cardinal Manuel Artega.

Church officials said the invitation for the trip came from the new Cuban bishop last week, during his visit to Mexico for a celebration in honor of Our Lady of Guadalupe.

Reeves

EDEN — Harry Desmond "Red" Reeves, 62, of 203 Ray St., Eden, died Thursday at his home. A funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday at the First Wesleyan Church by the Rev. Bill Westafel. Burial will follow in Ridge View Cemetery.

Mr. Reeves was a native of Rockingham County and a veteran of World War II. He was a retired employee of the American Tobacco Co.

Survivors include his wife, Margaret, of the home; two sons, Donald Wayne Reeves of Greenville and Mark Desmond Reeves of the home; one daughter, Mrs. Nancy R. Meadows of Eden; one sister, Mrs. Margaret Thompkins of Lawrence, N.J.; and one brother, James L. Reeves of Eden; three grandchildren.

Family visitation will be at 7-9 p.m. tonight at Fair Funeral Home, Eden.

Smith

MR. ROY LEE SMITH, 69, died at his home Thursday morning in the Clayroot Community.

The funeral service will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Randall Riggs, pastor of Grace F.W.B. Church. Burial will be in Pinewood Memorial Park.

Mr. Smith, a native of Pitt County, spent most of his life in the Clayroot Community. He had been employed by Daniel's Construction Co. until his retirement in 1977. He was a member of Timothy Christian Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucy G. Smith; a son, Gilbert Lee Smith of Belhaven; a daughter, Mrs. Nancy S. Landon of Greenville; his step-mother, Mrs. Betty Smith of Greenville; two brothers, Asa E. Smith and Jesse C. Smith, both of Greenville; two sisters, Mrs. Alvin Parrott of Greenville and Ms. Anne M. Smith of Lumberton; three half-brothers, Zeb B. Smith of Ayden, Pete Smith of Vanceboro and James Curtis Smith of Greenville; two half-sisters, Mrs. Sidney Ormond of Winterville and Mrs. Archie Tyson of Greenville; and three grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7-9 p.m. tonight.

Award Cher $750,000

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Cher has won a $750,000 judgement in a suit against a freelance writer and two publications she accused of using an interview without her permission.

The award was granted late Thursday by U.S. District Judge Manuel Real. Cher sued Forum International Ltd., Rupert Murdoch's News Group Inc., publisher of the Star tabloid, and writer Fred Robbins, whom she accused of breach of contract.

Cher testified that she did not question the accuracy of Robbins' articles about her for Forum magazine and the Star. But she "objected to the kind of questions he asked me" and the "very gossipy" tone of the stories, "a rehash of my marriages to Sonny (Bono) and Gregg Allman."

Cher said she was "totally satisfied by the decision" Thursday. She had charged that the publications misappropriated her right to control her publicity, and misappropriated her name for financial gain.

The civil suit, in a non-jury trial, began Tuesday. It centered on an April 1980 interview Robbins had with Cher.

The interview was to have been used in US magazine and was to deal with her new band Black Rose, her lawyer John Forbes said. Cher objected when she read a pre-publication copy, and US decided not to use Robbins' material.

Material from the interview then showed up in the March 1981 issue of Forum under the title "Exclusive — Cher Talks Straight."

Cher said she had neither consented to nor authorized the story.

'Letter-Bomb' To President

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service says it is investigating a "rather rudimentary" letter-bomb addressed to President Reagan that arrived in the White House mail and was defused without incident Thursday.

Spokesman Dick Hartwig said the device, discovered in a routine fluorescope examination of all incoming mail, was in a 6-by-9 inch manila envelope postmarked at San Juan, Puerto Rico, and bearing a return name and address in San Juan.

"It was not sophisticated, it was a rather rudimentary type of device," said Hartwig. He added that its assembly was "crude" and it might not have exploded.

On another front Thursday, the Secret Service said an unlawful-entry charge would be placed against William Persons, 23, of Washington, D.C., for jumping the White House fence and running toward the main entrance.

Rookie Pro Bowl Pick
New York Giants' rookie linebacker Lawrence Taylor sits in front of his locker at Giants Stadium Thursday, the morning after he was chosen for the National Football League's Pro Bowl. Taylor is a former player for the University of North Carolina. (AP Laserphoto)

Taylor Pick Is 'No Big Deal'

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Lawrence Taylor says becoming the first rookie linebacker in a decade to make the National Football League Pro Bowl "is no big deal."
"It's nothing. I'm not going to get all that excited about it," said Taylor, who remains an unassuming newcomer. "It's going to be nice, but we need to get to the playoffs."

"If we win, all I've wished for will come true," he said between workouts for Saturday's game against the Dallas Cowboys, a team the Giants must beat if they hope to make the playoffs.
"I feel I've had a pretty good year, as far as a rookie goes," said Taylor, the second player chosen overall in the 1981 NFL college draft. The last All-Pro rookie linebacker was Isaiah Robertson, who joined the Rams in 1971. This season's Pro Bowl Game will be played Jan. 31 at Honolulu.

Giants veteran Brad Van Pelt said Taylor is the best rookie linebacker he has played with or against in the NFL.
"I've been here nine years and I've yet to see a rookie come in and dominate at his position like he does," said Van Pelt, a Giants linebacker who has made five Pro Bowl appearances.

Giants veterans, upset by reports that Taylor was about to sign a three-year $750,000 contract, were publicly complaining about their relatively low wages — the top salary was $145,000 — and threatening a walkout.
"This kid's a good, clean country boy," said Ivery Black, one of Taylor's agents. "He's not used to the stuff that goes on with a pro football career, and I told him not to worry if they're talking about him."
But Taylor did worry, and

Elon Goes After National Title

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Elon College will attempt to win its second consecutive NAIA national football championship Saturday as it hosts Pittsburg (Kan.) State in the Champions Bowl at Memorial Stadium in Burlington.

Both teams will bring high-powered offenses and stingy defenses into the game and neither appears to have a clear statistical edge. Both head coaches say they expect the issue to be determined by ball control and turnovers, with neither team dominating the action.

The Fighting Christians lost four fumbles and had six passes intercepted in playoff victories over Concord and Hillsdale, while the Gorillas' win over Moorhead State was marred by two lost fumbles and two interceptions.

Pittsburg State coach Ron Randleman says Elon will enjoy the home-field advantage and worries that his team will suffer from lack of action over the past several weeks.

The Gorillas, ranked sixth in the NAIA, upset No. 1-ranked Moorhead State 14-13 but haven't played since. They made the finals when their semifinals opponent, Cameron State, was disqualified for using two ineligible players during the season.

"That layoff probably has hurt us," said Randleman. "We have played only one game in the past five weeks," while Elon has played three.

Randleman also sees Elon kicking specialist Phil Renn as giving the Fighting Christians an advantage. Renn has hit 14 of 17 field goals and 35 of 36 extra points and leads the team in scoring, while Pittsburg's Dave Hammons has kicked four field goals and 34 extra points.

The Elon backfield features quarterback John Bangle, who has thrown 14 touchdown passes, and running backs Ray Dalton and Fred Jordan. Gorilla quarterback Nick Motosko threw less often than Bangle this season but still hit for 10 touchdown passes.

Defensively, Pittsburg State has limited its opponents to an average of 93 yards rushing and 98.2 yards passing per game, while Elon's opponents have averaged about 100 yards on the ground and in the air.

The Gorilla defense is led by linebacker Mark Kilgore and noseguard Ron Freeman, who have accounted for 95 and 78 tackles respectively. Down linemen Chris Worst, Adrian Robertson, and Quinton Ballard and the linebacker team of brothers Stanley and Ernie Tootoo anchor the Fighting Christian defense.

Elon is in the playoffs for the sixth time in nine years and holds an 8-4 post-season record, while Pittsburg won the national title in 1957 and 1961.

Lady Pirates To Be Surprising In Track

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Lady Pirates will run an "official" indoor track schedule for the first time this year under a new coach, Pat McGuigan.

In the past, the Lady Pirates' winter schedule has been unofficial, just as warmups for the outdoor season, which begins in March.

But McGuigan, who takes over this year for the departed Laurie Arrants, is fielding a nine-woman team with an official schedule which gets underway on January 8-9 at the East Coast Invitational at Richmond, Va.

The Lady Pirates have a young team — there are no seniors on the roster and just one junior — but McGuigan feels that "there will be some surprises."

"Our team is small and young, but I think they will surprise someone," the coach said. "We don't have a lot of talent, but hard work is helping to make up for this."

The Lady Pirates do have some tough meets, especially in the early part of the schedule, but those will be followed by some "low key meets."

"The tough competition will give them a chance to see what collegiate track is all about, and give them a chance to set their goals high," McGuigan said.

Of the nine girls on the team, only three are back from last year's unofficial team, sophomore Ann Hartman, sophomore Carolyn Moore and junior Eve Brennan.

Brennan, the lone upperclassman, may be the class of the team. "She's a distance runner, and may be one of our biggest surprises. She's looked strong in practice," the coach said. She'll be participating in the 1,500 and 3,000-meter event.

Hartman runs in the 400, 600 and a leg on the mile relay. "She's had some injury problems and we just want to get her through the indoor season injury free. She does not have a lot of experience, however."

Moore is another that McGuigan feels will surprise some people. "In the past she's been a sprinter, but she will concentrate on the 400 and will also run in the 300, 600 and mile relay. We're really prepping her to run the 400 outdoors."

The only other sophomore on the team is Lori Pate, who is new to the program. "She won't run in the first meet. She came out late and isn't quite ready physically yet," the coach said. She'll participate in the 1,500 meters when she does run.

There are five freshmen on the team, Arnetta Kelly, Devona Cherry (former Rose High School sprinter), Liz Graham, Lisa Whitley and Kirsten Anderson.

Kelly will run the 60, 300 and mile relay. "She's very talented, with a lot of untapped talent," McGuigan said.

Cherry possesses a lot of natural speed, but is working on form and technique, McGuigan pointed out. She will run the 60, 300 and mile relay also.

Graham, new to the sport, is gaining experience. "She doesn't possess a lot of natural talent, but she's a hard worker and that's paying off for her."

Whitley will handle the middle distance events such as the 1,000.

Anderson is another who came out late and will not participate in the opening meet. She will concentrate on the 400.

The ALAW Nationals for indoor track will be held this spring in Cedar Falls, Iowa, and McGuigan feels that there are at least three women on the team who could meet qualifying standards for the meet. She looks to Brennan to have a chance to qualify in the 1,500 and 3,000-meters, Moore in the 400 and 600, and Kelly in the 60 and 300.

"If we do qualify someone, it will be the first time we've had anyone in the indoor championships," McGuigan said.

Rose Matmen Win 3rd In Row

Rose High School's wrestling team closed out its pre-holiday schedule last night with a 57-12 romp, evening its overall record at 3-3.

The Ramrants are unbeaten in Big East Conference play, having won all three of their matches in the league.

Rose lost only three matches, one of them on a forfeit and the other two on decisions. Rampant wrestlers claimed nine pins in the 11 matches they won. James Richardson, Rose's 167-pounder, forced his opponent, Jimmy Banner, to the mat in just eight seconds.

The Ramrants return to action on January 5, hosting Rocky Mount.

Summary:
98: Jeff Harvey (K) won by forfeit.
105: Paul Michaelson (R) p. David Washburn, 1:21.
112: Francois Middleton (K) d. Stanley Austin, 6:0.

Byles Shares ECAC Honors

East Carolina's Tony Byles has been selected a co-player of the week in the ECAC-South for the week ending December 13.

Byles, who scored in double figures in all three games during the rating period, added ten steals and ten assists over the period while shooting 64 percent from the floor. He scored 15 against Missouri, 20 vs. Canisius and 12 against Campbell.

Sharing the honor with him was George Mason's Andre Gaddy, a senior center, who scored 20 points to pace the Patriots over Delaware and then scored 14 in a loss to James Madison. He pulled in 19 rebounds in the two games and shot 54 percent.

Gaddy is the league's scoring leader for the current period, averaging 18.6 points per game. Ronnie McAdoo of Old Dominion is second at 18.4, followed by Andy Bolden of George Mason at 17.6. Linton Townes of James Madison at 16.5 and Mark West of Old Dominion, 15.0.

West is the league's top rebounder at 12.4, while McAdoo is pulling 8.8 and Gaddy, 8.5.

Colts, Patriots Battle For NFL's Cellar

By The Associated Press
While Cincinnati, Denver, Dallas, San Francisco, Tampa Bay, Detroit, Miami and Buffalo play for No.1 positions in their divisions or conferences, a far different No.1 is up for grabs in Baltimore.

The Colts and the only team they've beaten this year, the New England Patriots, are in the running for the No.1 choice in next year's National Football League draft.

The Colts' record is 1-14, the worst in the NFL. The Patriots, who lost to them 29-28 on opening day, are 2-13. So if the Colts lose, they're guaranteed not only the worst record this year and the No.1 pick about four months from now, but they'll also tie New Orleans' 1980 record as the worst since the league went to a 16-game schedule in 1978.

Sunday's other games are Denver at Chicago, Green Bay at the New York Jets, Kansas City at Minnesota, St. Louis at Philadelphia, Tampa Bay at Detroit, San Francisco at New Orleans, Cincinnati at Atlanta, Cleveland at Seattle, Pittsburgh at Houston and Washington at Los Angeles. Saturday's games are Dallas at the New York Giants and Buffalo at Miami. On Monday night, it's Oakland at San Diego.

Defensive back and kick-returner Nesby Glasgow of Baltimore is distressed by the negative aspects of the so-called fight for the top choice. "I don't want my team to have the No.1 pick," he said. "I guess it's a big deal to me. I guess I would take it personally. I mean, it's an indictment of my team."

"There's a negative sense of attention attached to us. I know there'd be a lot of hoopla surrounding this game. We kind of saw it coming even a few weeks ago."

The Colts' ballpark holds more than 60,000 fans, but only about 30,000 tickets have been sold — and a lot of no-shows are likely, meaning the crowd could be barely one-third of capacity.

Despite the similarity of their records, there is a great disparity in what the Colts and the Patriots have done on the field. The Patriots have scored 301 points and allowed 347, not much of a difference. The Colts, though, have scored just 236 points, the fewest in the American Conference, and given up 512, the most in the league. The San Diego Chargers, 27th in points-allowed, have given up 380 — 132 fewer than Baltimore.

At stake in the Buffalo-at-Miami game is the championship of the American Conference East and perhaps the conference's best record. The Dolphins lead the East by one-half game. If they win and Cincinnati loses to Atlanta, Miami will be 11-4-1 to the Bengals' 11-5 and will host all playoff games as long as they're alive.

The Miami-Buffalo loser will wind up with a wild-card playoff berth. The Bills beat Miami 31-21 Oct. 12, the Dolphins' first loss of the season.

In the other AFC division race, a victory over Chicago by Denver, a one-game leader over San Diego, assures the Broncos of the West crown.

The Tampa Bay-Detroit matchup could determine the NFC Central champion. Those two teams, along with Green Bay, are 8-7, and the only way Green Bay can win the division is to beat the Jets and have the Buccaneers and Lions tie.

A triumph by San Francisco over New Orleans gives the 49ers the homefield advantage in the playoffs, regardless of what Dallas does Saturday, since the 49ers beat the Cowboys 45-14 earlier this year.

Similarly, the Bengals can lock up the homefield in the AFC playoffs by beating Atlanta. If the Bengals and Broncos wind up deadlocked 11-5 (and Miami loses to the Bills), Cincinnati gets the homefield edge based on its 38-21 victory over Denver this season.

The Giants must beat Dallas and root for the Jets to defeat Green Bay to assure them of a wild-card playoff berth.

If the Giants and the Packers both win, Green Bay would gain the wild card because it beat the Giants twice during the regular season. New York then could make the NFC playoffs only if Philadelphia — already guaranteed a wild-card spot — lost to St. Louis. That would create a three-way tie, with the Giants advancing on the basis of a better record within the conference.

For Jim McMahon, Holiday Bowl Is To Be Time For Him To Shine

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Sit back and enjoy. It's showtime, says Jim McMahon.

"This is a key game for me," says the whip-armed pass master from Brigham Young University.

Because of his two-year aerial onslaught — 77 touchdown passes and 8,126 yards passing — McMahon is the apple in the eyes of numerous National Football League scouts. They'll turn out in droves tonight when BYU battles Washington State in the Holiday Bowl.

With a national television audience looking on, McMahon, the two-time national passing champion, has a rare chance to showcase his talents from coast to coast.

"We're playing a Pac-10 team. And they (the scouts) really look at us when we play out of our conference because they don't really study our conference that tough," he said, referring to the Western Athletic Conference.

"If I do well against these guys, it will help my chances in the draft," said McMahon, who is playing his final game at BYU.

Asked for a prediction on his performance, McMahon, without flinching, replied: "At least four. We don't want it to go down to the last minute again."

His reference was to last year's barnburner, when he triggered an incredible last-quarter comeback. Down 20 points with four minutes remaining, McMahon heaved three touchdowns to lift the Cougars to a last-gasp 46-45 victory over Southern Methodist.

His favorite targets tonight will, most likely, be sophomore tight end Gordon Hudson, the club's leading receiver with 67 catches for 960 yards and senior wide receiver Dan Plater, McMahon's best friend, who has 62 for 891 yards.

They are part of what Washington State Coach Jim Walden calls BYU's "army of receivers."

After establishing 55 NCAA records in his career, no one questions McMahon's arm, only his battered left knee. Ligament damage requires he wear a knee brace and McMahon possibly faces surgery after the season ends.

After Thursday's final workout, McMahon announced he plans to play in the Hula and Senior Bowls, passing up the inaugural Olympia Gold Bowl in San Diego Jan. 16.

His reasoning for passing up the San Diego bowl? "I wanted to have Plater in the game. How can you depend on all those guys from running schools. You don't know what they can do."

Walden knows what McMahon can do, but, armed with one of the nation's best pass defenses, he likes his chances.

"If we can hold BYU to 400 yards and force them to punt five times at some time in the game, we have an excellent chance of winning," said Walden, who guided WSU, 8-2-1, to its first bowl berth in 51 years.

Woody Peele

The football public will be eagerly awaiting the January meeting of the NCAA to see what new comes out of it.

Television rights will surely be the main battleground between the bigger schools and the less fortunate. What comes of it could be control of the vast spreading cable network situation.

A number of colleges have already set up their cable networks should they gain eventual control of "their own destiny." With such a system, the rich would only become more richer, and the poor will be pushed further down the ladder.

How this will all affect East Carolina will be seen, as the school waits for word that it will be among those schools left in Division I-A following the NCAA's realignment.

All factors would tend to indicate that ECU will be among the more fortunate to stay in the top division.

Recently, the "Cronicle of Higher Education" listed 54 schools of "Status Uncertain," in its December 16 publication. It also listed 84 other schools as Division I-A.

Among those schools were the members of seven conferences, the Atlantic Coast, the Big Eight, the Big Ten, the Pacific Ten, the Southeastern, the Southwestern and the Western.

Nineteen independents were also listed. They included Boston College, East Carolina, Florida State, Louisville, Memphis State, Miami (Fla.), Notre Dame, Penn State, Pittsburgh, Rutgers, South Carolina, Southern Mississippi, Syracuse, Temple, Tulane, Army, Navy, Virginia Tech and West Virginia.

The "status uncertain" teams included members of six conferences and seven independents. The conferences were the Ivy, the Mid-American, Missouri Valley, Pacific Coast, Southern Conference and Southland. Independents listed included Cincinnati, Colgate, Holy Cross, North Texas State, Northeast Louisiana, Richmond and William & Mary.

It is worth noting that North Texas State is a member of the Collegiate Football Association (CFA). Should North Texas, indeed, be dropped it would tend to show that critics of ECU's non-membership in the group were somewhat off base. But that remains to be seen.

Teams which are scheduled to be dropped into Division I-AA will have the opportunity to ask for waivers at the January meeting. How many of these will be approved is anybody's guess.

Like Past Greats, Hank Won't Get All The Votes

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

A couple of years ago, when Willie Mays became eligible for the Hall of Fame, 23 voters in the Baseball Writers Association of America did not find him worthy of mention on their ballots.

Before Mays, the same thing happened to Joe DiMaggio, whose 56-game hitting streak may be baseball's most remarkable single achievement.

They were the two most complete players of our time, but they moved into Cooperstown without benefit of unanimous approval from the electorate.

Ty Cobb, with more hits than any man in history, Babe Ruth, a slugger of awesome dimensions, and Honus Wagner, the peerless shortstop, all received the same treatment. Some voters, for some muddled reason, decided they just didn't cut the mustard.

Now Henry Aaron, baseball's all-time home run king, is taking his Hall of Fame swing. Next month when the results of the election are announced, he will be swept into Cooperstown.

And once more, the vote will not be unanimous. Bank on it.

"I don't worry about that," Aaron said the other day. "If it's not unanimous, so be it. I'd love to be unanimous, but I never said I would be. I won't be bitter."

Some people might be. Aaron's Hall of Fame credentials are monumental. Besides 755 home runs (41 more than Ruth), there were 3,771 hits, second only to Cobb's 4,190 — a record 2,107 runs scored and 2,297 runs batted in, another record.

The man is clearly belongs in the Hall of Fame. But it won't be unanimous. It just doesn't happen that way and Aaron knows it.

There are those with sinister thoughts who suggest that this might be a racial question, that Aaron will be denied some votes only because he is black. To the BBWAA's credit, and his, Aaron does not see that happening.

"I'm a long way from dumb," he said. "If you're going to vote for me because I'm black or if you're not going to vote for me because I'm black, then you don't belong on the election board in the first place."

The statistical argument for Aaron is persuasive. He is, after all, the greatest home-run hitter the national pastime has ever known. But for him, the home runs and RBIs are only part of the picture.

"I don't look at the homers," he said. "I look at the total package — 3,700 hits, playing 23 years and batting over .300. I stole my share of bases (240). I wasn't a Maury Willis or a Lou Brock, but when I had to steal, I stole. I won two Gold Gloves. I was not the worst outfielder in the world."

"Those are the things I'm most proud of. Hitting home runs? Well if you hit one home run and then strike out the other three times, that's a bad day. For me, consistency was more important. That's the mark of any true athlete — Johnny Unitas, Jim Brown, Mays and DiMaggio. They were consistent year-in, year-out. That's what makes you great."

In his four rounds in the 1980 Heritage Golf Classic, George Archer required only 94 putts for 72 holes, a PGA record.

San Jose State, Toledo Kick Off Newest Bowl

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — The nation's newest post-season football game, the California Bowl, will be inaugurated here Saturday afternoon between offense-minded San Jose State and defense-minded Toledo.

The bowl was established at Fresno State's new 30,000-seat stadium to provide a matchup between each year's champions of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association and the Mid-American Conference. It is the only post-season contest besides the Rose Bowl that pits champions from two specific leagues.

San Jose won the PCAA by averaging 426 yards a game on offense and giving up 288 on defense, the league's best in both categories. The Spartans were 5-0 in league play and 9-2 overall, including wins over Stanford and California for the mythical San Francisco Bay area championship.

Toledo held opponents to an average of just 266 yards and 13 points per game in finishing 8-3 overall and 8-1 in the MAC. It was a sharp reversal from the Rockets' 4-7 record in 1980.

Offensive leaders at San Jose are senior tailback Gerald Willhite, who ran for 1,154 yards and caught passes for 435; and junior quarterback Steve Clarkson who passed for 2,965 yards.

Willhite is only the second player in National Collegiate Athletic Association history to run for more than 1,000 yards and catch 50 passes in a single season. He did it in both 1980 and 1981.

Toledo's tough defense is paced by strong safety Mike Kennedy who had 67 tackles and four interceptions during the regular season.

The Rockets' offensive leader, quarterback Jim Kelso, was sidelined by a knee injury in the ninth game and was replaced by senior Maurice Hall. Sophomore tailback Arnold Smiley averaged 165 yards running in the final four games to lead Toledo to its league title.

Toledo Coach Charles R. Stobart will move to the University of Utah next year but doesn't think his leaving will hamper the Rockets' intensity Saturday.

"We've had a very good week in practice," Stobart said Thursday. "We've been working two weeks on football and three weeks getting physically ready. Now, we're ready to go into the mental preparation."

San Jose Coach Jack Elway said the Spartan defense will "have to stop the run first. Toledo has an outstanding running game."

Stobart said Toledo needs to do just the opposite — nullify San Jose's explosive passing. "We have to stop the long scoring play," he said.

Southern Miss Faces Missouri

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — "I'm just a part of a fine machine," says Southern Mississippi quarterback Reggie Collier, whose little-known but ambitious team goes against Missouri of the Big Eight Conference in Saturday night's Tangerine Bowl football game.

Despite Collier's modesty, the 18th ranked, 9-1-1 Golden Eagles from Hattiesburg, Miss., have built their offense around the speedy signal caller's running and throwing abilities, which he does equally well.

Collier became the first NCAA big-college player to gain more than 1,000 yards in both passing and rushing this year.

Along the way, he accounted for 18 touchdowns, 12 of them by lugging the ball across the goal line and six by passing. This earned him a number of votes for the coveted Heisman Trophy, putting him ninth in the balloting.

"He's the best quarterback in the country as a runner and passer," says Missouri Coach Warren Powers. "He has great size and great speed."

But the Tigers don't plan to concentrate exclusively on Collier. Southern Mississippi's tailback Sammy Winder, holder of a number of school records, led the team in rushing with 1,029 yards on 228 carries. He also scored 12 touchdowns.

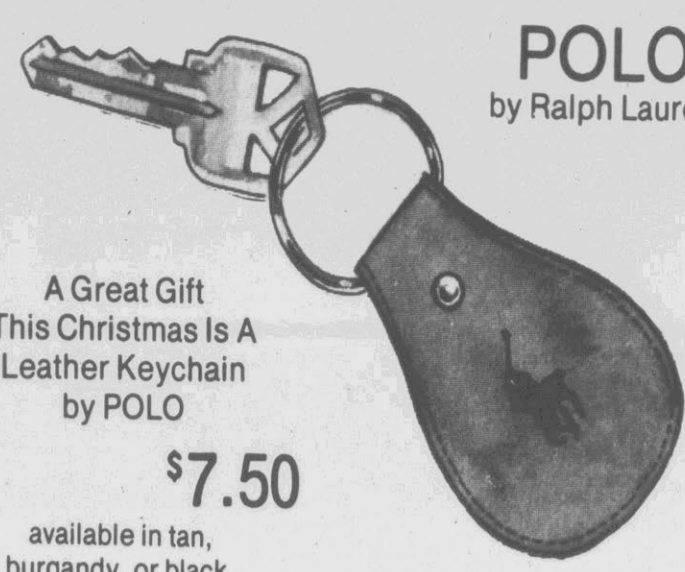

"We've got to try and contain them somehow," Powers says. "We also have to control the ball and keep their offense off the field."

Missouri, which brings a 7-4 record into the T-Bowl, has a "big, strong aggressive defense equal to that of Alabama and Mississippi State," according to Southern Miss Coach Bobby Collins. "It will no doubt be one of the toughest we've faced."

Missouri quarterback also is productive. He has completed 123 of 249 passes for 1,471 yards and eight touchdowns.

Thirty-three of the catches were by James Caver, a 5-foot-11 flanker ranked No. 2 among Big Eight pass receivers.

was wracked with despair when, a few days after the draft, his best friend's hopes for a pro football career were dashed by a terrible car accident on a rain-slick road not far from the Chapel Hill campus.

Steve Streater, a Tar Heel teammate, was left paralyzed in North Carolina Memorial Hospital and doctors say there is a chance he may never walk again.

Taylor canceled his first Giants Stadium news conference and rushed immediately to his friend's side, deciding right away to dedicate the 1981 season, along with his prayers, to Streater's recovery.

"It really hit me when he had that accident," Taylor recalled, speaking softly in his mild Southern accent. "I didn't think God would do that, maim him for life. He's a beautiful human being."

When Taylor returned from his first visit with Streater, he was pleasantly surprised to find the Giants veterans greeting him warmly and assuring him their complaints were directed at upper management.

There was no walkout and Taylor quickly endeared himself to the squad in training camp through his diligence at practice and his good-natured antics off the field.

As the season progressed, Taylor remained quiet, funny and polite, playing basketball with his teammates when he wasn't working out in practice.

And every Sunday, he transformed his easy-going personality into a ferocious presence, sacking quarterbacks like a cat pouncing on mice.

Taylor is credited with 10 sacks, 91 tackles and one interception with one regular-season game to go.

Taylor appears unaffected by the plaudits. "He's still the same person. He hasn't changed as far as getting a big head or anything," said rookie tight end Dave Young, Taylor's roommate. "He's just having fun, and when you have fun, you don't put much emphasis on the honors."

Weighs Decision On Creation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — A federal judge who presided over the final testimony in a legal challenge of Arkansas' creationism law says it will probably be more than a week before he announces his verdict on whether the law is constitutional.

The American Civil Liberties Union has sought to show that it is unconstitutional for the state to require schools to give equal treatment to creationism if they teach evolution. The law is scheduled to go into effect in September.

Some of the witnesses summoned by the state in its defense of the law have sought to show that creationism, or creation-science, is a valid theory and that evolution is unproven.

But U.S. District Judge William Overton said Thursday that constitutionality is the sole issue in the trial.

"I will not be trying to decide the validity of the biblical story of Earth and man, nor the validity of evolution," he said. "A lot of people seem to think that's the issue. Obviously, it is not."

Overton said before he issues his ruling he must review 300 pages of notes he has accumulated. "I doubt very seriously if I will have anything out within a week," he said.

"We had a case and they didn't," said ACLU legal director Bruce Ennis. The ACLU rested its case a week ago after presenting 17 witnesses and 130 documents.

Attorney General Steve Clark said the state's 11 witnesses and 120 exhibits showed credible scientific evidence for the creation theory.

The law, passed by the Legislature earlier this year and signed by Gov. Frank White, prohibits religious instruction in the teaching of creationism.

The ACLU filed the lawsuit May 27 on behalf of 23 plaintiffs, many of them clergymen, scientists and educators. The lawsuit says the law violates academic freedom, violates separation of church and state and is too vague. The ACLU says the law is an attempt by fundamentalists to force a literal version of Genesis into the schools disguised as science.

The trial closed with a final witness testifying that rocks may have formed suddenly rather than over a long period of time. There were no closing arguments.

Robert Gentry of Takoma Park, Md., called by the state, said there are concentric discolored rings in the earth's deepest rocks. He said the discolored rings, caused by polonium radiation, should not be visible in rocks that cooled slowly. Gentry said that means the earth is much younger than evolutionists say.

Creationists believe the universe and man were created suddenly from nothing 20,000 or fewer years ago. The definition of creation-science in the Arkansas law includes a worldwide flood and separate ancestry for apes and man.

Evolutionists believe that various forms of life developed gradually through natural selection over millions of years.

N.C. Art Museum May Be Ready In Late '82

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians will be able to view part of the new state art museum by Christmas 1982, Museum director Edgar Peter Bowron said Thursday.

Bowron was given permission to occupy the $17 million building in west

Raleigh on Thursday by Museum of Art Building Commission Chairman Thomas J. White Jr. The move ends a six-month impasse that had kept the museum's staff from taking over the nearly-complete building.

White said he talked with Bowron after deciding that the insurer for the museum's general contractor did not plan to appeal the commission's decision to declare the contractor in default.

However, the move isn't likely to end the legal haggling between the commission and the contractor, Middlesex Construction Co. of Charlotte, which has kept the building closed to the staff since it was dedicated in May.

"We're no longer going to have to fool with Middlesex," White said. "I have notified Dr. Bowron that there are some areas of the building that he can occupy."

White said architect Ralph Reeves believes Bowron's staff can use some portions of the building without getting in the way of work which must still be done.

At the heart of the controversy is a disagreement over work which Reeves says still must be done. Reeves complains that, among other things, some brickwork is not up to par and some floors are uneven.

But while lawyers haggle over details, Bowron has a schedule for moving to the museum. He said he'll meet with Reeves Tuesday to see which areas of the museum he can take now.

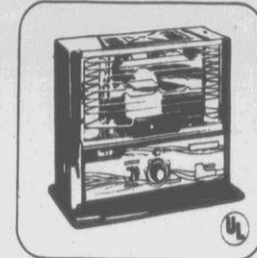

Bowron said he hopes to open several galleries by November, including the education gallery and galleries for contemporary, North Carolina, American, classical, ancient an ethnographic art.

Told of White's decision, H. Hugh Stevens of Raleigh, Middlesex's lawyer said, "Good, that's wonderful. I'm delighted. I hope they will be able to start doing the work they need to be doing so the public can enjoy it." Stevens said White's decision ends one of two disputes — the date the museum staff would move in. A dispute over the quality of the work and whether Middlesex is paid any more money, or if it ends up paying for work to be done, still hangs in the balance. He said the latter could take years to settle.

Ex-Policeman Avoids Prison

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)

Former Charlotte police officer Michael Flaherty avoided active prison time Thursday by pleading no contest to three charges of involuntary manslaughter.

Flaherty, 28, was given a five-year suspended sentence and fined $1,000 by Judge William Grist, who also ordered Flaherty to surrender his driver's license for one year.

The former officer entered the pleas after winning a new trial from the N.C. Court of Appeals on Dec. 1. He was convicted of the same charges in a March 1980 trial but the appeals court ruled that the judge improperly instructed the jury.

Flaherty was charged after three of four passengers in a car were killed in a collision with a patrol car he was driving on Nov. 16, 1980. Judge Preston Cornelius sentenced Flaherty to one to three years imprisonment although district attorney Peter Gilchrist asked that no active sentence be imposed.

Grist accepted a plea bargain between Flaherty and Gilchrist, saying he felt Flaherty had suffered and would continue to suffer from the accident.

But Grist supported Gilchrist's decision to prosecute Flaherty.

"This thing of racing around the city streets at high speeds is dangerous," Grist commented. "The fact is they have rules and regulations concerning this type of thing. They have to be enforced."

Flaherty was driving east on a Charlotte street in response to a request for assistance from a fellow officer when his car slammed into an oncoming vehicle. Killed were Farrar Parker, his wife Gilles Parker, and their 10-year-old son George Farrar Parker III.

Gilchrist said Flaherty ran two red lights in his haste and was traveling at speeds averaging 84 mph, but defense attorney Jim Carson contended that Flaherty thought he had green lights and only averaged between

Carson said Flaherty has been "totally unable to work" since the accident, which cost him his job as a police officer. He was retired on disability pay of $5,500 a year following his conviction.

Flaherty is undergoing psychiatric care, Carson said, and still needs treatment for physical injuries. And, said Carson, Flaherty has already spent more than $10,000 in legal fees. "He's suffered a very, very heavy price," Carson said.

Also Thursday, the civil lawsuits stemming from the deaths and injuries suffered by the Parker family in the accident were binally settled for a total of $465,000.

Farrar Parker's daughter, Dana Parker, the only survivor of the accident, and her attorneys received most of the estate of her father and brother. Miss Parker, now 14, lives in Society Hill, S.C., with her mother, Marie Parker, who is divorced from Parker.

Crushed In Ice

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand (AP) — A West German research ship sank beneath Antarctic ice today after five large helicopters on board rescued its 17 crew members and 25 scientists, National Science Foundation officials said.

A spokesman for the foundation said the ship, the Gotland II, had been trapped in an ice pack for several weeks about 30 miles from Yule Bay. The ice finally crushed the ship's hull and caused it to fill with water, the spokesman said.

The Gotland II left Wellington, New Zealand, for the Antarctic on November 14.

Hardee Named To Milk Board

Gov. Jim Hunt has named Charlie L. Hardee of Gritton to the N.C. Milk Commission, the governor's office reported.

Hardee is president of Hardee Realty Co. Inc. He is chairman of the Gritton Planning and Zoning Board and the Gritton Board of Adjustments.

The Milk Commission has 10 members who serve terms of four years. The board investigates matters relating to the production, storage and sale of milk in the state, acts as a mediator between milk producers and distributors, and sets the minimum price level of milk.

Today's Cryptquip clue: Z equals U

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

We have often commented that rubber bridge and duplicate pairs are actually two completely different games. Here's a hand that proves our point. Assume that you are in six spades and receive the ten of diamonds lead. You cover with dummy's jack and it holds the trick. How would you play the hand at duplicate pairs and rubber bridge, and why?

Let's start off with rubber bridge. Here, your main consideration is to make your contract. Since all your side-suit cards are winners, your only concern is the trump suit. If trumps are 4-1 or 3-2, you have no problem. So you must try to protect against a possible 5-0 split.

At trick two, lead the eight of spades from dummy. If East plays an honor, you win and you cannot lose more than one trump trick. If East plays low, run the eight of spades! As the cards lie, the eight wins the trick and your slam is home—you lose only one trump trick. That is also the case if West wins the first spade trick, for now your three master spades will draw the outstanding trumps. Congratulations—you found a classic safety play!

At duplicate pairs, you can't afford the luxury of a safety play. If the spades are 3-2, you might make only twelve tricks while the rest of the field takes thirteen, so your safety play would net exactly zero matchpoints on the hand.

Therefore, at duplicate pairs it is correct to lead a trump to the ace at trick two. When West shows out, you are in trouble, but the hand can still be made with perfect timing.

Cash the ace of diamonds and ace-king of clubs. Enter dummy by overtaking the king of hearts with the ace and ruff a diamond. Now cross back to dummy with the queen of hearts. You are down to five trumps, while East has four trumps and a diamond. Lead any card from dummy and you have set up a trump coup-end play.

If East ruffs, you overruff and he makes only one trump trick. Thus, East must discard his diamond. You ruff, and you are down to the same trump length as East. Exit with the seven of spades, and suddenly East finds that he can make only one trump trick. Try it!

REMEMBER JANUARY 30TH IS THE LAST DAY FOR LISTING TAXES IN THE ABOVE TOWNSHIPS. PENALTY OF 10% IS ADDED TO ALL LATE LISTINGS.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF PROPERTY IN PITT COUNTY

The listing of property for tax purposes in Pitt County will begin January 4, 1982, and will continue through January 30, 1982.

Any person, firm, corporation or organization owning property in this county as of January 1, 1982, whether real or personal, must list such property within the listing period or be subject to the penalties prescribed by North Carolina Law. Property must be listed in the township in which it is located.

Persons who requested to list by mail should receive their listing forms early in January. These forms must be completed and returned to the office of the Tax Supervisor before the deadline of January 31, 1982.

Bring your social security number and your motor vehicle registration cards with you when you come to list.

Application for the Age and Disability Exemption should be made at the time of listing, but no later than April 15th. Once application is made and approved, you will not have to reapply unless circumstances change within the household.

Owners and operators of parks or storage lots renting space for three or more trailers or mobile homes are required by law to furnish the Tax Supervisor of the county in which the lot is located, the name of the owner and a description of each trailer or mobile home situated thereon. This list must be submitted by January 15th of each year. Owners and operators failing to comply with the law shall be liable to payment of tax in addition to a penalty of $250.

Persons having custody of taxable tangible personal property belonging to another firm or individual that is held for storage, sale, rent, or any other business purpose shall furnish the Tax Supervisor a report of such property by January 15th or will be liable for the tax on the property plus a penalty of $250.

FOR A COMPLETE LIST OF LOCATIONS AND DATES FOR LISTING TAXES IN JANUARY, SEE OTHER AD IN THIS PAPER.

Taste a tradition.
 from the 1st Family of Kentucky Whiskies

Craftsmen at our small distillery follow the tradition for excellence established in 1783 by Evan Williams when he founded Kentucky's 1st distillery. Attention to small details produces these premium Bourbons—the very special Evan Williams Black Label and the very rare 10 year old Evan Williams 1783.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE PROPHETS AND POLITICS!

DURING THE YEARS OF THE DIVIDED KINGDOMS, JUDAH AND ISRAEL, THEIR DAYS OF GLORY OVER, WERE HEMMED IN BY ENEMY STATES ON ALL SIDES! THE KINGS, EACH IN HIS TURN, APPEALED TO PROPHETS FOR HELP. BEING A PROPHET IN THOSE DAYS ENTAILED MORE THAN JUST A PASSING KNOWLEDGE OF CURRENT POLITICS! WAS SYRIA AT ODDS WITH EGYPT? DID BABYLON HAVE ITS EYE ON ASSYRIAN TERRITORY? WERE THE MEDES LIKELY TO FORM ALLIANCE WITH MOAB? THESE QUESTIONS HAD TO BE WEIGHED CAREFULLY, FOR JUDAH AND ISRAEL WERE SQUEEZED BETWEEN POWERFUL STATES....

IN THE BOOKS OF THE PROPHETS, WE CAN FIND, AMONGST ADMONITIONS TO THE PEOPLE TO KEEP GOD'S WAYS, MANY BITS OF ADVICE AGAINST ALLIANCES WITH COUNTRIES THAT MIGHT BRING THE WRATH OF ANOTHER POWERFUL STATE SHATTERING DOWN UPON THEIR LUCKLESS HEADS! ISAIAH, JEREMIAH, AMOS, NATHAN, ETC., ALL HAD THEIR SAY IN HOW BEST TO AVOID DESTRUCTION BY SOME ALL-POWERFUL NEIGHBOR—UNFORTUNATELY, KINGS BEING WHAT THEY WERE, THIS ADVICE WAS RARELY TAKEN!

NEXT WEEK: WHEN FAMINE CAME!

Judaism Celebrating Hanukkah

By GEORGE W. CORNELL AP Religion Writer

From their mountain camp, a ragged band of fugitive guerrillas watched anxiously as a huge Syrian army approached across the plain. "How can we, few as we are, fight such a mighty host as this?" they worried.

Their leader, the "hammerer," Judas Maccabee, was unshaken. "In the sight of heaven there is no difference between deliverance by many or by few," he said. "So do not be afraid of them."

It was a lopsided, three-year war in which the relatively small, tattered company of Jewish warriors finally in 165 B.C. defeated the world's then greatest military power in history's first crucial fight for religious freedom.

Commemorating that victory, Judaism on Sunday evening begins the eight-day celebration of Hanukkah, the "festival of lights," a joyful period of gift-giving, prayers and lighted candles recalling the heroic triumph of faith.

Sometimes the observance is seen as a kind of Jewish "Christmas," and it does have indirect connections with that holiday of Christianity's origins, since the Maccabean victory prevented destruction of the "mother religion," Judaism.

From it stemmed all monotheism, including Christianity.

Had the Maccabees not won, "Judaism might have perished, and quite conceivably, Christianity and Islam would never have emerged," says Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum of the American Jewish Committee.

"That's how fateful Hanukkah was for the whole human family."

In that ancient and epic struggle, the Syrian empire which had spread over much of the Middle East ordered elimination of all vestiges of Judaism so that subjects would be "one people" serving the state pantheon of pagan gods.

"Whoever refuses should be put to death," it was decreed. Observance of the Jewish Sabbath was forbidden. Scripture scrolls were burned. Anyone found in possession of one was executed and thousands of Jews were slain. Mothers who circumcized their infant sons (as Mary and Joseph were to do with Jesus) were killed and the babes hung by the neck.

A statue of the idol, Jupiter, was set up in the temple at Jerusalem, defiling Judaism's holiest place.

Throughout Israel, pagan altars were erected and patrols deployed to force villagers to bow to the new "gods." Although Israel before had suffered many foreign occupations, it always had retained its right of worship.

But the Syrian emperor, Antiochus Epiphanes, had ordered Judaism wiped out. It was the decree compelling Jews to bow down at pagan altars that sparked the revolution.

It began when the aging Maccabee father of five sons defied a Syrian officer's command to kneel and instead attacked and killed him. He and his sons fled to the Galilean hills, where he later died.

But the sons carried on, gathering a scanty, ill-equipped but growing army of resistance fighters, ready to die for the sake of conscience.

"Arm yourselves and be brave," Judas Maccabee told them. "It is better for us to die in battle than to witness the ruin of our nation and our sanctuary."

Their struggle marked the first successful use of guerrilla tactics - lightning strikes and retreats, surprise attacks, ambushes, night raids and harassment.

In the final decisive battle, the overwhelmingly outnumbered guerrilla force of only 3,000 routed a Syrian army of 47,000, including horsemen, foot soldiers and spearmen mounted on elephants.

It was a turning point for civilization in the preservation of a monotheistic religious heritage that has spread around the earth through its offspring faiths.

The Jerusalem temple was cleansed and rededicated.

Tradition says that there was only enough oil for the Temple lamps to burn one day but miraculously they burned eight days until more oil could be made.

In celebrating the event, Jewish families light an additional candle each night beginning with the first candle after sundown this Sunday. By the eighth evening the following Sunday, eight candles will shine from the menorahs.

PRAYER SERVICE

Holy Mission Church will hold a prayer and promise service tonight at 7:30 p.m. Roland Howard will be the guest speaker.

A Christmas program entitled "The Savior is Born" will be held Sunday at 7 p.m. Pastor Eldress Shirley Atkinson invites the public.

Officers Chosen At UMW Dinner

The United Methodist Women of St. James Methodist Church held their annual harvest dinner Monday night.

The Women's Chorus, directed by Mrs. Joe Sturz, entertained with a program of Christmas music. They were accompanied by Stephen Vaughn, diacanal minister at the church. Invocation was said by the Rev. Dewey Tyson, church minister.

Special recognition pens were presented to Mrs. Hoyt Narron and Mrs. Stanley Walter. Gifts to missions were made in honor of Mrs. Charles Whiteford, J. T. Snowden Jr. and Emily Thomas Allen. Mrs. J. T. Snowden Jr., outgoing president, was remembered with a gift.

New officers installed by Mrs. E. L. Harrington were: president, Mrs. Joe Hayes; vice president, Mrs. Sturz; secretary, Mrs. Reynolds Kernon, and treasurer, Mrs. Warren Charlton.

Coordinators are: Mrs. Narron, Christian social involvement; Mrs. Danny Shive, Christian personhood; Mrs. William Pludderman, global missions; and Mrs. Walton Kitchens, supportive community. Committee chairpersons are Mrs. Michael Colombo, local church hostess, Mrs. Sam Price and Mrs. Horace Vincent, condolence, Mrs. Ledyard Ross, flowers, Mrs. Roy Honeycutt III and Mrs. Lawrence Nason, nursery and Mrs. Harold Bowers, publicity.

Group chairpersons are Mrs. Brenda Cayton, Miss Lydia Hayes, Mrs. Floyd Phillips, Mrs. George Harvey, Mrs. Bill Gofforth, Mrs. Frank Steinbeck, Mrs. James Williamson, Mrs. Michael House and Mrs. Herschel Williams.

Pastor To Be Honored

The congregation of Philippi Church of Christ will honor its pastor, the Rev. Randy B. Royall, at an appreciation banquet to be held at South Greenville Recreation Center Saturday at 6 p.m. Royall has served as pastor for one year.

Each auxiliary of the church will pay tribute to the pastor, with the appreciation address to be given by the Rev. George Royall of St. Paul Church of Christ in New Bern.

Cantata

The Bethel Baptist Church and the Bethel United Methodist Church join together this year for their annual cantata, "An Old Fashioned Christmas," directed by Don Green.

The cantata will be held at the Bethel United Methodist Church Sunday at 7 p.m. Also helping Green will be Lorraine Erb, organist, and Isabel Gurganus, associate director.

Bethel Cantata

A Christmas Cantata will be held Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Methodist Church in Bethel. The public program, entitled "An Old Fashioned Christmas," will be sponsored by the Bethel Baptist Church and the United Methodist Church.

The cantata tells of the Christmas season as it was celebrated in the late 1800s. The choir will be under the direction of Donald Greene of Bethel and Lorraine Erb, organist.

Full Steam Ahead For 'Grease' Sequel

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Producer Allan Carr, refusing to be intimidated by the perils inherent in motion picture sequels, is going full steam ahead with his sequel to "Grease," the most successful movie musical ever made.

"Grease," according to Carr, earned $300 million in gross receipts at the box office, making him independently wealthy for life. Not any of the famed Fred Astaire, Gene Kelly or Ginger Rogers films or the spectacular musicals at MGM and RKO earned a fraction of what "Grease" has done at turnstiles around the world. "Grease," which starred John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, ranks fifth among all-time box-office films, behind "Star Wars," "The Empire Strikes Back," "Jaws" and "Raiders of the Lost Ark." With this astonishing finanial track record it was almost a foregone conclusion that there would be a "Grease 2."

"We thought we'd leave it alone and not tamper with a sequel to what has become sort of a classic of its kind," Carr said.
"After all, it sold more than 2 million cassettes and discs for home entertainment units and Paramount has given 'Grease' two major reissues since it was first released in the summer of 1978.

improved on the originals. "The 'Godfather' sequel brought people back to theaters and so did 'Jaws II.' Both of them were big financial hits.
"Last summer we decided to go ahead because the original was scheduled for television release in the fall. It was No. 2 in the ratings, the highest rated movie of the year, beating 'The Goodbye Girl' or 'Close Encounters.'
"It proved people really wanted to see more of 'Grease.'
Carr is convinced Travolta and Newton-John, both of whom zoomed to superstardom following the film, can no longer pass for California high school students.

"Grease" aficionados will, however, be happy to find the old Rydell High School faculty and staff intact with Eve Arden as principal, Sid Caesar as coach and Dodie Goodman as secretary. Added to the teaching staff will be Connie Stevens and Tab Hunter.
Back, too, are the T-Birds, the car-crazed, greasy-haired dudes, and the Pink Ladies, the sweated, sexy feminine clique, Rydell's leading social groups.
Carr conducted a major search for replacements for Travolta and Newton-John, even considering such established names as Debby Boone and Sean Cassidy. Neither were signed.
The hero and heroine of "Grease 2" are Maxwell Caulfield as Michael Carrington and Michelle Pfeiffer as Stephanie Zinone, a pair of attractive youngsters who look pretty much like '50s California high school seniors.
"We found Maxwell in an off-Broadway play," Carr said. "He has the same magnetism as Travolta. We see him as having a mixture of the qualities of Marlon Brando and James Dean — with a slight English accent."
"We were really lucky to find Michelle. She just walked in and read for us

No, Sunday's Movie Is Not About John Paul 11

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — One thing you should know about NBC's Sunday night movie, "From A Far Country: Pope John Paul II," is that it's not about the pope.
Actors do portray Karol Wojtyla's early life in Poland and historic footage of Wojtyla as a cardinal and pope are interjected at odd times, but "From A Far Country," which NBC calls "a compelling dramatization of the life of Karol Wojtyla," is a far cry from the movie the network thought it purchased.

didn't consider keeping it in the can, contending that a pre-Christmas showing and today's Polish situation make it presentable.
"From A Far Country" isn't a traditional biography tracing a personality's life. The best that can be said is that it attempts to explore the social, political and religious conflicts in Poland during World War II and under communist rule, with vague references to Wojtyla's personal battles and achievements.
The struggles of Poland on film could have created a historic context for its current unrest. At one point, a Polish priest responds to the German invasion by saying: "Hope and prophecy are our history."

But the film doesn't work on this level. The sub-plots of resistance to oppression are incredibly fuzzy. It seems the movie tried to be both a documentary and a drama, but ended up being neither.
And as a biography, it certainly isn't. In the movie's opening, Wojtyla, as a young boy, watches an Easter re-creation of the crucifixion. It's a tedious scene, but in the end Wojtyla spots the man playing Jesus in a local bar. "Why is Jesus drinking beer?" Karol asks his father.
Then the movie shows Wojtyla as a dedicated student and thespian, but it is unclear which actor is portraying him. By process of elimination, you could dismiss the women characters and then the blond man because someone charitably said: "Oh, it's you," and later called him Tadek.
After finally discovering midway through the film which character is Wojtyla, he disappears. Other characters talk about him, but he only resurfaces in historical footage. The movie then gets involved in an obscure father-son conflict. It's all very bizarre, to say the least.
"From A Far Country" is filmed in Europe with a cast of mostly British actors. NBC said it was the first dramatic movie filmed inside the Sistine Chapel and St. Peter's Basilica.
As a counterpoint to this critique, another viewpoint is offered: NBC said Pope John Paul II liked it.

'Fame' Making Its TV Debut

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Fame," a new one-hour series based on the Oscar-winning movie musical, will make its debut Jan. 7 on NBC-TV.
The cast will include three of the film's stars in the high-energy drama-comedy-musical.
Starring in "Fame" as students will be Lee Curreri, Erica Gimpel, Carlo Imperator and Valerie Landsburg. Faculty members will be played by Debbie Allen, Albert Hague and Carol Mayo Jenkins.

Eye Robin Hood As TV Series

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The adventures of Robin Hood, the legendary bandit of medieval England, are being developed by Columbia Pictures Television and CBS for a weekly series.
Jonathan Axelrod, senior vice president for CPT, announced that Norman Rosemond will produce the project with John Gay writing the pilot script.
Axelrod said the series will be based on ancient legends, rhymes and poetry about the nobleman who turned fugitive to fight King John in the 12th century and who became a hero to the downtrodden.

Exotic Names In 'Exposed'

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The exotic names of the three stars of "Exposed" make this American film movie sound like a foreign import from Mittel Europe or perhaps the Balkans.
Headlining the cast of the contemporary romantic drama for United Artists are Nastassia Kinski, Rudolf Nureyev and Harvey Keitel.
The producer-director, James Toback, and executive producer Serge Silbermann add to the European flavor of the film's leading players excepting Ian McShane who somehow slipped into the cast.

Cadet Leaders Named At ECU

ECU NEWS BUREAU
Duane Kirk Little of Jacksonville, a cadet lieutenant colonel in the East Carolina University Air Force ROTC detachment, has been appointed cadet group commander for the spring semester.
Cadet Maj. Robert Melvin of Fayetteville was named deputy commander and Cadet Maj. Frederick Padilla, also of Fayetteville, was named deputy commander for operations.
Formal announcement of the three appointments was made at the detachment's annual Dining-Out ceremony, at which the guest speaker was Gen. Richard Lawson, chief of staff of the Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers-Europe (SHAPE), Mons, Belgium.

Salvation Army More Than Just Christmas Kettles

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer

A few steps from an X-rated movie parlor, two gaunt men in ratty brown coats peer through a smudged glass storefront on Times Square. Inside a bearded 23-year-old in uniform leads a dozen people in Christmas carols and prayer.

The Salvation Army's red kettles and brass quartets won't appear on the streets for a few hours on this cold December Sunday, but on the other side of the collection plate Lt. Philip Ferreira is doing the work that few ever see.

"I've shaken hands and put my arms around people I never thought I would touch before I became a Salvation Army officer," Ferreira says. "I don't think we'd be able to do this if we didn't let God's light show through."

As the federal government abandons some programs for the needy, and the economy forces more people to look for help, Ferreira and his wife, Susan, will be among the Army's full-time ministers taking up the slack.

"I'm sure we'll have more people coming to our door, saying, 'Hey, we're out of money.' We'll just have to do our best to help them," says Ferreira.

The Salvation Army, America's largest private charity with an estimated $575 million annual budget, never has trouble recruiting people who need help.

Army programs for everyone from victims of disaster to alcoholics to idle teen-agers touched 19 million Americans last year. This Christmas it is giving food, clothing and toys to 3 million people and, visiting 4 million prison inmates and hospital patients.

General Arnold Brown, the international leader, says the Army has "a genius for discovering human needs."

The Salvation Army is a London-based fundamentalist Protestant church; the world's largest temperance organization. Its soldiers and officers adhere to a no-frills lifestyle, vowing not to smoke, swear or drink liquor.

This year the number of people seeking its help is larger than usual due to hard times and Reagan's cuts.

For example, a cut in government dollars for halfway houses has contributed to a 17 percent increase in the number of residents at a Cleveland adult rehabilitation center, says Capt. Joe White, center administrator.

"They've got to go somewhere, and they usually come here," he says.

And the slumping auto industry has left many jobs in Ohio. Some are seeking help from the Army for the first time. Others are unable for the first time to contribute.

"That's hard for people and they're frustrated," says Lt. Col. Clarence Kinnett, the Army's commander in northeast Ohio. "We've never faced anything like this before."

Another setback came last month when the Target department store chain banned Yuletide solicitations at its 151 stores in 19 states because it had too many requests from similar organizations and didn't want to discriminate.

The Salvation Army, which traditionally stationed its kettles outside Target stores, estimated the decision would cost the church $1 million in the Midwest.

Still, donations nationwide this season are up slightly and the Army expects a 10 percent increase in revenue this year.

Drops in federal aid also mean the Army's own coffers may be depleted. About $45 million of its annual budget comes from the government to administer programs, like a lunch program for 90 elderly people in Cleveland.

Although it's too early to tell which programs will be cut, "we're not in a position to take on the expenses of all those programs at once," says Col. G. Ernest Murray, the army's national chief secretary.

"That's not to say we're opposed to the president's program," he adds. "But we don't want to see people who deserve aid suffering."

The Salvation Army operates year round, helping old people, the ill, the imprisoned and the poor. It teaches karate and music, and takes teen-agers roller skating.

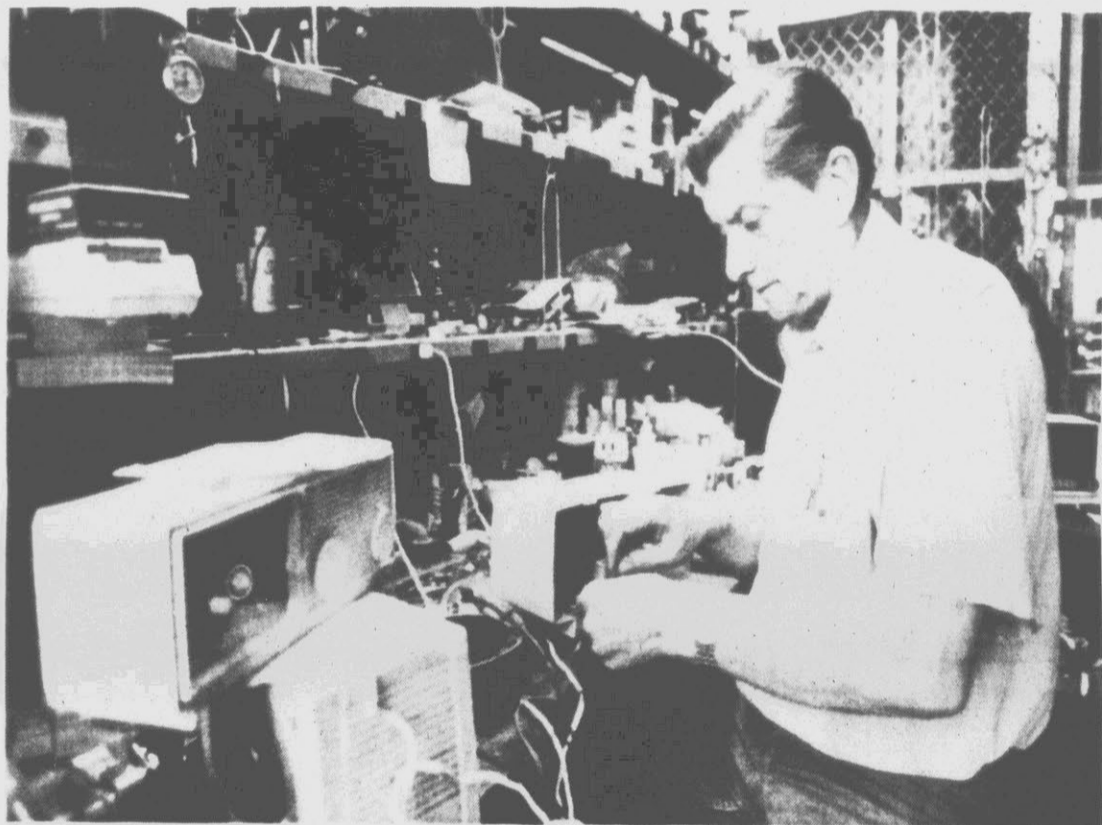

Doc Severinson learned the trumpet and Julius Erving the fundamentals of basketball in two of the Army's 1,056 corps community centers, the Army's churches.

In Times Square, "people come in right off the street to our Sunday services," Ferreira says. "Some don't smell too good and aren't too clean, but we give them a songbook and a good seat. We treat them like human beings."

Poor and middle-class bargain hunters shop in Army thrift stores for $4.99 sports jackets and $1.99 pocketbooks recycled by alcoholics and drug addicts in rehabilitation programs.

PLENTY OF USE LEFT — One of the Salvation Army's prime functions is collection and repair of old appliances, radios and clothing that is like new to the less fortunate. Here, Frank Simna rewires a radio that will find its way to a person in need of one. (AP Laserphoto)

On the Bowery, ex-convict Clarence Peterson runs a halfway house for parolees. An Army captain and a recovering alcoholic, Peterson often walks the streets, nudging drunks to offer them help.

And in a Manhattan office building, the Army's version of Santa's workshop has sprung up. Basketballs, space games and toy trucks are sorted and wrapped for children whose parents can't afford new toys.

Other programs provide homemakers for single-parent families, transportation for prison visits, day care, temporary lodging and counseling for runaways. The Army owns 20,000 buildings worldwide, among them hospitals in New York and Toronto.

All those good deeds require money, and the Army relies on

Salvation Army Is More Than Christmas Kettles

soldiers and volunteers to man its Christmas kettles. "This time of year gives me a different kind of spirit," says Bert Rexin, 64, a soldier with kindly blue eyes who puts in 20 hours a week beside a kettle in Cleveland. "That's when I really like wearing the uniform."

Unlike the soldiers, who are part-time Army workers, officers come from four "war colleges" commissioned as lieutenants. The Ferreiras graduated this year; their first assignment is one of the Army's most important battlefronts. "Our thing is to try not to act shocked by what we see," Ferreira says. One woman writes obscene names in the chapel guestbook during Sunday services. A man came in a few weeks ago, yelled for a few minutes at the top of his lungs and left.

Times Square has proved frightening to Ferreira's wife, the 22-year-old daughter of Salvationist parents in Painesville, Ohio. She's afraid to stroll the streets alone, even during the day.

The Ferreiras receive $122 a week, with housing, transportation and medical bills paid. After 45 years of service, they can look forward to a salary of $144.50.

They also can look forward to a mobile life; officers have no say in their assignments and are transferred frequently. In five years, the Ferreiras will be promoted automatically to captains and after 20 years to majors. Colonels and commissioners are appointed, and one international general is elected in a secret meeting of the church's highest officers.

Husband-wife teams of clergy are the rule in the Army. Officers must marry officers, and a woman assumes her husband's rank and tenure—even if it is lower than hers.

Discipline and regimentation have been the Army's hallmarks since it was founded 116 years ago amid the squalor of London's East End. Founder William Booth realized men who were hungry and cold had little interest in looking heavenward. So he fed them soup, put coats on their backs and tried to renew their dignity.

Booth believed discipline was the only way to straighten out lives in disarray and that only by good example could he preach salvation.

So in 1878 he organized his movement along military lines, with uniforms, brass bands and red-and-blue flags, and appointed himself the first general. Two years later, the army had a U.S. division. It is now in 86 countries.

From the beginning, soldiers have taken vows of temperance. Even communion was banned because Booth feared that a taste of wine would weaken the resolve of alcoholics.

"This is a lifestyle as well as a church," explains Jim Kissner, an Army soldier in Montclair, N.J.

The strictness of the Army life is perhaps one reason its membership rolls are small. The Army claims 2 million soldiers and adherents, about 400,000 living in the United States.

Many feel a kinship with the Army—six of seven respondents said they had a favorable opinion of the Salvation Army and its work, according to a nationwide Associated Press-NBC News telephone poll of about 1,600 people this week.

But few know it is a church as well as a social service organization. Its services and even many of its salaried jobs are offered without regard to faith. Of its 22,000 U.S. employees, only a fourth are Salvationists, although most top jobs are held by officers.

The Army's goal "has always been for people to get right with God and then go back to their church," says Col. Murray. "If they're inclined to worship with us, we're delighted."

Peterson's concern on the Bowery "is not what church they belong to, but what is the condition of their soul," he says.

Yet the number of people who turn their lives around is small, "so small that you can destroy yourself if you let it get to you," Peterson says.

What is the reward? For the Ferreiras, it is one alcoholic they brought off the streets and into the church.

"If he was the only one to become physically and spiritually recovered," Ferreira says, "it would be worth it."

Rejects Become Items Of Value

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
CLEVELAND (AP)—The dusty stereo set had a shattered speaker cabinet, but Frank Simna was delighted. At least it worked.

"A real find," said Simna, a 53-year-old recovering alcoholic who repairs appliances for Salvation Army thrift stores.

"It works both ways with the Army," he said. "They give you their best shot and you give them yours. They get you totally back on your feet."

Simna and 77 other men live in an Adult Rehabilitation Center near downtown Cleveland, one of 113 such Army facilities in the nation. They pick up clothing, furniture and household bric-a-brac from donors in this city of 640,000, repair the goods, then sell them in eight thrift stores.

In exchange, the Army gives the men free meals, beds with creaky springs and clean sheets and weekly stipends that ranges from $5 to $15, depending on their progress in the program.

To get in, they must have an "identifiable handicap" such as an alcohol or drug problem—and they must be sober.

coming off the bottle," says White. "If we didn't supply them cigarettes, they'd go outside—and that means to a bar and temptation."

Each man in the program has a job. They sweep floors, prepare food, drive trucks or repair bicycles, refrigerators and other household appliances.

Clients are supposed to stay at least 90 days, but some stay long enough to get a "sobriety certificate" for going a year without a drink. Others stay much longer.

"Some have been here off and on for 20 years," White says. "They can't cope with the outside. After they've come up from the gutters, they've given up on themselves and on society."

Simna ended up at the center when his marriage of 28 years broke off and he turned to the bottle. He graduated from the program once, but found life outside too much and returned last summer.

"This place gets you totally back on your feet," he says. "It gives you good working habits, good spiritual habits and a sense of responsibility to do everyday things."

Rhino's Foot Is Missing Trophy

Like the Army nationwide, the center in Cleveland, which runs entirely on proceeds from its stores, is beginning to feel the effects of cuts in federal assistance and a sluggish economy.

The thrift store business is brisk, with many shoppers on the lookout for bargains. But the center's 12 delivery trucks aren't as busy as they once were.

"People these days are having garage sales and yard sales rather than let us have their extra clothes and furniture," says Capt. Joe White.

White, 38, runs the center from an office filled with trophies and country music. The center has a two-lane bowling alley, a cafeteria, two TV rooms, and a snack bar selling soap, cough tablets and cigarettes.

Although Salvation Army officers take a vow not to smoke tobacco, the rule is suspended for clients.

"Guys have enough trouble

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP)—It was a busy hunting season like always in Montana this year, but no one expected a rhinoceros to lose a foot in the shuffle.

Bob Bradford of Powderhorn Sporting Goods said that in order to pile extra merchandise into the store for the hunters, many fixtures were moved temporarily. That included the rhino trophy Sid Nesbit of Livingston shot in Kenya 20 years ago.

When it came time to put the rhino's head back on the wall, however, workers discovered one of the feet that goes with the trophy was missing.

"I guess it's about a foot across and stands about 10 inches high," Bradford said.

The round foot was lined with a copper canister and fitted with a copper lid, and is valued at more than $1,000, he said. The store is offering a $100 reward.

Hidden Anger And Stress Said Endangering Teeth

By TODD R. EASTHAM
SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Anger and stress pose at least as great a danger to teeth as sweets or poor brushing, says a California dentist.

Clenching and grinding of teeth, acknowledged by dentists as a major problem in our high-stress society, results in large part from "hidden anger," according to Dr. Bill Buran.

A practicing dentist in nearby Pacifica, Calif., Buran has spent years researching the problem and compiling statistical data to support his theories.

Roughly 80 percent of Buran's patients have manifested the problem to some degree, but children who learn to suppress or restrain natural aggressive emotions tend to become severe clenchers or grinders, he says.

"People who always have a smile on their face — they're the ones that are holding it in," says Buran, pointing to such public figures as the recently-crowned Miss America, Elizabeth Ward, and Secretary of State Alexander Haig as prominent examples.

Salesmen and television comedians are also prone to the disease, known to dentists as "bruxism." Don Rickles and Red Skelton are clenchers, he says, and the late Dan Blocker — "Hoss" of the Bonanza television series — was a clencher and a grinder.

"He (Blocker) broke his teeth and chewed them apart," says Buran.

The habit can lead to many problems including overbites, submerged molars, periodontal gum problems, joint pain and, ultimately, total tooth destruction.

Soreness of the jaws, neckaches, headaches and backaches are frequent complaints from sufferers of this common but largely untreated area of emotional and stress-related illness, he says.

Traditional dentistry considers bruxism the result of purely physical stress resulting from "malocclusion," or a bad bite.

"It's an old wives' tale that people who grind their teeth in their sleep have psychological problems," says San Francisco dentist

Gene McCoy. "They just have uncomfortable teeth. The person tries to obtain relief by making successive adjustments of his jaw, and that is bruxing."

"The tooth grinder doesn't need to see a psychiatrist, but a dentist who recognizes the problem of overstress."

Buran agrees the problem should be handled by dentists but says, "Basically, we have two kinds of stress — physiological and psychological."

"If you break your tooth, the break itself would be physiological stress. The emotional and psychological stress can develop later."

Just as physical stress can develop from suppressed anger, psychological stress can be associated with

Buran says, "the dentist of tomorrow must of necessity treat many symptoms that appear outside the oral cavity."

To be truly effective, dentists must discover the "social dynamics" of dentistry and learn to read the "body language" that betrays underlying stress, he says.

Beads of sweat on the upper lip, for example, are a tip-off the patient is under stress. Facial structure is another easy tip-off, he says, noting that people create their own faces "to a tremendous extent" by the degree to which they carry stress in their teeth.

Charlotte Man Target Of 'Palimony' Lawsuit

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Attorneys say a "palimony" lawsuit filed by a Florida woman against a Charlotte man may be the first of its kind in North Carolina.

Frances Furr, 32, now living in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., filed her lawsuit Thursday in Mecklenburg County Court against Charlotte businessman Wayne Jernigan.

The suit asks that Jernigan provide financial support for Ms. Furr and divide his property with her. She claims they pooled their finances and invested in two businesses while living together for eight years.

Ms. Furr contends that she and Jernigan moved into her home in June 1970 when Jernigan separated from his wife. "It was with the understanding that the parties hereto would marry," the lawsuit says.

It says they lived together as husband and wife until September 1978 but never married, and that "led to the eventual deterioration and dissolution of the relationship."

Ms. Furr contends she paid all the couple's living expenses and debts between 1970 and 1974 so Jernigan could invest his income.

After Jernigan invested in a recording studio in Charlotte, the suit says, Ms. Furr began working as a secretary and director there. Because of her efforts, the suit says, they were then able to invest in a night club, the Kountry Klub, which now is called Country Underground. The suit says Ms. Furr managed the night club until September 1978.

The suit says the couple also bought a home in Charlotte and two acres of land in Blackhorse Run, S.C.

Lawyer Robert Karney, who filed the suit, said Thursday he based its claims on established laws of equity and contracts he thinks can apply to a relationship such as the one his client says she had with Jernigan.

He also feels that a new North Carolina law concerning "equitable distribution" of marital property can fairly be extended to cover unmarried relationships.

But other lawyers specializing in domestic cases in North Carolina expressed doubts about the validity of the claim in interviews with The Charlotte Observer.

"I've thought about it, but I don't think it would fly," said attorney Michael Blackford of Charlotte. "It's against the law for people to live together without the benefit of a marriage license. I don't see our Supreme Court or the Court of Appeals going against public policy. They're very conservative, especially conservative on claims against public policy."

Bill Diehl, a Charlotte divorce lawyer, said he doubted that North Carolina courts would extend the equitable distribution law, which specifically applies only to people who have been married and divorced, to relationships not involving marriage.

But a palimony-type suit where the relationship was based on a written contract might be successful, he said.

Hunt Issues 'Message'

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt, who used up his Christmas card money to push his gas tax package last summer, issued his annual "Christmas message" Thursday.

"I'm thankful to have this chance to share my thoughts with you at Christmas, because Christmas is a time to express our love and appreciation for each other, and for all the good things that God has given us."

"I'm grateful for all the North Carolinians who have worked so hard and given so much this year to help our state grow and prosper. I'm especially thankful for the thousands of North Carolinians who have volunteered to help others."

"That spirit of love and sharing is the best gift we can give each other this Christmas, and my wish for North Carolina is that we give the gift of love as freely as God gave it to us on that first Christmas so many years ago."

Brent Hackney, a spokesman for Hunt, said the governor issues a Christmas message each year.

He said Hunt was unable to send Christmas cards this year because the money that had been set aside for them was spent on advertising to counter Congressional Club opposition to the gas tax package.

City Counts 2 Collision

An estimated $12,000 damage resulted from two traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from an 8:32 a.m. collision on Stantonburg Road, 154 feet west of the Medical Drive intersection, involving cars driven by John Gregory Carraway of Route 1, Maury, and Laura Hill Cannon of Route 1, Farmville.

Investigators, who charged Carraway with operating left of center, said the cars collided almost head-on. They said both drivers were injured in the crash.

Damage was estimated at $4,500 to the Carraway car and $6,000 to the Cannon vehicle.

Cars driven by Richard Wayne Griffin of Raleigh and Saif Al Saeed of 1601 Willow St. collided about 9:55 p.m. at the intersection of Fifth and Elm streets, causing $1,000 damage to the Griffin car and $500 damage to the Saeed vehicle.

Police charged Saeed with failing to stop for a red light.

No Reindeer, He Paid The Fine

WILLISTON, N.D. (AP) — Because he had no reindeer, Santa Claus had to give up two bucks.

"I told him he was spending too much time in one spot, and some of the kids were going to be missed," said Police Chief Ray Atol, who slapped the Old Elf with a $2 parking fine.

Santa was using a car. "If it had been a sleigh and reindeer, there might not have been a problem," Atol said.

"He attempted to get his parking ticket excused. I told him, 'Laws were made for everybody, Santa, even you — and I'm not trying to be a Scrooge.'"

Santa, played by radio station employee Ralph Lockwood, may have been naughty, but in the end he was nice. He paid the ticket.

Confused About Which Microwave Oven To Buy?

Consider These Features....

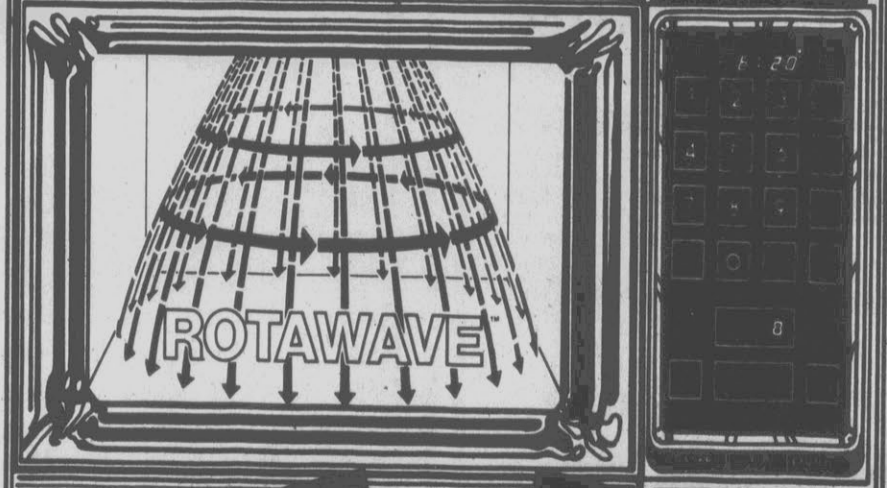

Amana is the only Microwave Oven Manufacturer to earn a U.S. Government exception from displaying a warning label. Stainless steel interior to reflect Microwaves. More efficient cooking. Rotating shower of power that cooks better and cooks most foods faster than ever before. Most foods require no turning. Up-front vent does not blow moisture under cabinets. Convenient pull-down door...and many other features not found on other Microwave Ovens. Come in for a demonstration soon.

Amana Radarange.

SO FOODS COOK MORE EVENLY.
Even rows of cookies, or several potatoes cook more evenly.

BETTER FOOD QUALITY
Breads, cakes—even egg dishes—turn out lighter and fluffier. Meats brown more evenly.

AND IT'S MORE CONVENIENT!
Rotawave rotates the microwaves, so most foods require no turning!

MOST FOODS COOK FASTER.
Some foods like cakes, pies and muffins now bake up to twice as fast!
