Test-Tube Baby Is Born

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — America's first test-tube baby was born this morning in Norfolk, doctors at the Eastern Virginia Medical School here announced.

The 5-pound, 12-ounce girl, delivered at Norfolk General Hospital, was doing well, as was her mother, according to Vern Jones, a spokesman for the school, which runs one of two in vitro fertilization clinics in the United States.

The school did not announce who the parents were, but Jones said more details would be given at a news conference this afternoon.

The baby girl is the first born in this country after being conceived through in vitro fertilization, a process used for women whose Fallopian tubes are missing or irreparably blocked.

In the process, an egg is removed from the mother's ovary, fertilized with her husband's sperm in the laboratory and implanted in the mother's uterus.

The rest of the pregnancy then takes a normal course.

The world's first test-tube baby, Louise Brown, was born in 1978 at a clinic in Bourn, England, operated by Drs. Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards.

Since then, several other such babies have been born in England and Australia — including one to an American woman earlier this year.

The Virginia clinic, housed in Norfolk General Hospital, began operating in February 1980. It announced the achievement of its first pregnancy last spring and said the expected birthdate was Jan. 9. Since then, three other pregnancies have been achieved at the Norfolk clinic.

In keeping with the clinic's policy, the names of the prospective parents have never been announced.

Another in vitro fertilization clinic has opened in Houston.

Polish Food Rations Cut; Future Shortages Faced

By The Associated Press

Poland's martial law regime began its third week in power by cutting monthly meat and butter rations for most Poles and predicting worse food shortages in the new year.

Western reporters in Warsaw said antibiotics and medical supplies also were in drastically short supply.

It was food shortages that provoked the nationwide strikes in Poland 16 months ago that spawned Solidarity, the first union in the Soviet bloc independent of government control, and ration cuts last summer spurred a string of Solidarity strikes.

Lech Walesa, leader of the now-banned Solidarity union, was named Time Magazine's Man of the Year for 1981 Sunday for standing out "not only as the heart and soul of Poland's battle with a corrupt Communist regime, but as an international symbol of the struggle for freedom and dignity."

Walesa has been held by the government at an undisclosed location in Warsaw since shortly after martial law was imposed Dec. 13.

The latest cuts in the already depleted Polish menu were announced Sunday by Warsaw Radio, which predicted that next year the situation "will be worse than this because of considerably lower imports and lower poultry output."

The radio broadcast gave figures which apparently referred to meat alone. It said the martial law regime was trimming January's meat rations to 5.5 pounds a month for most Poles. Children, pregnant women and the elderly and the sick will receive 8.8 pounds of meat per month, it said, and manual workers will be exempt from the cutbacks.

The broadcast did not say how much butter rations would be reduced. Most Poles were restricted earlier this year to about 8 ounces per month.

Meat and butter rations were cut off completely for farmers with more than 1.2 acres of land, the state-run radio said, presumably because farmers have access to their own food stocks.

The radio said the military council "appeals to individual farmers and to state and cooperative farms to expedite (food) deliveries..."

Western correspondents in Warsaw have said Poland's private farmers — the backbone of its food production — have held back shipments of some foods to protest martial law.

Warsaw Radio, monitored in Western Europe, quoted a Home Trade Ministry announcement as saying extra imports — "especially from the Soviet Union" — helped the government meet December rations but failed to secure enough meat to cover ration arrears.

The near bankrupt Polish government lacks the funds to pay for imported foods and feed grains.

Last August, meat rations were cut for a month from 7.7 pounds per person to 6.6 pounds, but even then supplies were still so scarce that Poles had difficulty buying the meat to which they were entitled.

A Polish woman arriving in Vienna told The Associated Press that certain food supplies such as meat and eggs were hard to get, "but it is not so terrible that people are starving."

A London Times report from Warsaw published Sunday said recent visits to Warsaw hospitals revealed a tragic shortage of medical supplies. It said people were dying because the government lacks hard currency to buy antibiotics, because disposable syringes and needles have to be used as many as 100 times and because there is not enough detergent to wash bed linen.

The International Committee of the Red Cross announced today in Geneva, Switzerland, that it sent more than four tons of needed medical supplies by plane today to Poland.

It said the shipment, worth more than $50,000, will be handed over to the Polish Red Cross and the Polish Ministry of Health.

Normal communications have been cut in Poland and Western reporters must file dispatches through government censors. Both official and unofficial reports are difficult to verify.

Uncensored dispatches filtering out of Poland said Poles are beginning to express their opposition to martial law in dozens of small ways. Many Warsaw residents are wearing Solidarity buttons on the inside of their lapels, while some others boldly display union stickers. Graffiti comparing Poland's martial law chief, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, to the late Nazi leader Adolf Hitler is appearing in various parts of the capital.

WILLIAMS TO TRIAL — Wayne Williams, as he was taken from Fulton Co. Jail this morning right, wearing glasses, is under heavy security in Atlanta. (AP Laserphoto)

Jury Selection Scheduled In Wayne Williams' Trial

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Wayne B. Williams was taken to the Fulton County Courthouse under heavy guard today to stand trial for two of the 28 murders of young blacks that haunted this southern metropolis for more than a year.

Williams, 23, wearing a black leather coat, was escorted by sheriff's deputies from the Fulton County jail, where he has been held since his arrest June 21.

With the selection of a jury set to begin, a prosecutor acknowledged that prospective jurors probably already have formed opinions.

But "the legal standard is, can you put your opinions aside and make your decisions on the evidence presented in court?" said assistant district attorney Gordon Miller.

One-third of the 700 prospective jurors were expected in court today.

Defense lawyers and prosecutors will be allowed to question prospective jurors individually. But first, Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper will question them in groups of 48 to determine if they have knowledge, friendships or general biases that would keep them from being impartial.

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance cameraman and self-styled talent promoter, is charged with murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths have been investigated by a special police task force. Williams pleaded innocent.

Payne and Cater were the 26th and 28th victims on the task force list of killings over 22 months. No cases have been added to the list since Cater's body was pulled from the Chattahoochee River May 24, and no charges have been filed in the other 26 cases.

Payne's body was found in the Chattahoochee on April 27, 500 yards from where Cater's body was found a month later. Medical examiners said Cater was strangled and Payne probably was asphyxiated.

Prosecutors are seeking a life sentence for Williams, who has been held in the Fulton County jail since his arrest June 21.

Georgia has a death penalty, but prosecutors have said it cannot be applied in the Williams case. The law allows the death penalty when a murder is accompanied by rape, robbery or kidnapping or if the defendant has a previous conviction in a capital case.

The trial is expected to take six to 10 weeks. The other prospective jurors are to appear at the courthouse Tuesday and Wednesday.

Miller said the intense public attention focused on the killings means prospective jurors are likely to have opinions about the case. But he said if jurors were required to have no opinion, "there would be certain cases that never could be brought to trial."

Much of the testimony is expected to center on similarities between fibers found on the victims and in Williams' car and home. The analysis of the fibers is central to the prosecution's case.

Courtroom space has been reserved for 64 reporters from 50 news organizations, said Ken Boswell, a spokesman for Cooper. A closed-circuit television system has been installed for reporters not issued courtroom credentials.

Defense lawyers have filed 44 pretrial motions since Williams' arrest, and three of those issues have yet to be resolved.

Former Polish General Claims Repression Was Long Planned

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Polish and Soviet army officers began preparations to crush Solidarity soon after the independent union was formed 16 months ago, a former Polish general was quoted today as saying.

Leon Dubicki, 66, who defected in August to West Germany, also told Der Spiegel magazine that Soviet troops dressed in Polish uniforms probably have been guarding key military installations in Poland since martial law was declared Dec. 13.

Dubicki, who fought with the Soviet army in World War II, told the magazine that Polish Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski vowed as early as February, when he became premier, to destroy Solidarity. Jaruzelski, an army general and defense minister, was named Communist Party chief three months ago.

Dubicki claimed he had tried to warn Solidarity of the threat but officials ignored him. Union leader Lech Walesa often said publicly that he respected Jaruzelski and considered him a man of good will.

Walesa, elected leader of the 9.5-million member union, has reportedly been under house arrest near Warsaw since Jaruzelski imposed martial law and suspended the union's activities.

In the interview, Dubicki was quoted as saying he had heard from quartermaster officers that Polish army uniforms were shipped from factories in Warsaw, Lodz and Poznan to the Soviet Union.

Asked whether Soviet troops in Polish uniforms were being deployed in Poland, he replied according to the magazine: "Yes, for the protection of certain installations on Polish territory, for example airports, weapons depots, Soviet communications stations. It is highly probable they are being used."

Dubicki was also quoted as saying discipline was strict enough in the Polish military to insure that troops would obey orders, even those to move against their countrymen.

He said that discipline was so tough in the Polish army that troops would not resist a Soviet intervention if it were sanctioned by their pro-Communist officer corps.

"The political officers are very proud that they have been successful in agitating the soldiers," he was quoted as saying. Dubicki said elements in the process of political indoctrination include "moral terror, coercion, punishment, the so-called honor of the uniform, the love of authority in the army."

He said officers and men who wavered in performing their martial law duties would be left in the garrisons. Only the dedicated, politically motivated troops would be used on the streets, he added.

"In the Polish army there are now very many officers and men under arrest," he was quoted as saying.

Robbery Arrest

Greenville Police arrested Gregory Taylor, 25 of 403B Dudley St., Christmas Eve on two counts of armed robbery and one count of auto larceny following investigation of robbery incidents at the Camelot Inn, 2828 South Memorial Dr., and at Rose's at the Pitt Plaza Shopping Center.

Chief Glenn Cannon said a lone man armed with a knife forced a clerk at the Camelot Inn to open the cash register and a money box in the motel office, about 6:48 p.m. An estimated $200 in cash was taken, he noted.

The chief noted that at Rose's, a man took an estimated $1,100 from a cash register at the check-out counter at the rear of the store about 7:47 p.m.

The man, later identified as Taylor, struggled with two female employees at Rose's before fleeing in a truck.

Cannon said Taylor was allegedly in possession of a truck owned by Ernest & Knott Glass Co. at 816 Clark St., which has been stolen, when he was arrested.

The chief noted that some $175 was recovered.

OUT-OF-BUSINESS LICENSE

I know that it's illegal to have "going out of business" sales unless the business is really going out of business. Is it true that a firm must have a license to go out of business? A.T.

Yes. It's true.

According to the N.C. Attorney General's office, businesses that are having sales before they close their doors for the last time must secure a license from the city clerk if the firm is located within the limits of a municipality, or from the county if located outside of town.

In Greenville, if a business has been operating for more than a year, the fee for the license is waived. Otherwise, a $500 bond is required to secure the going-out-of-business license.

The license is good for 30 days, and can be renewed for two 30-day periods.

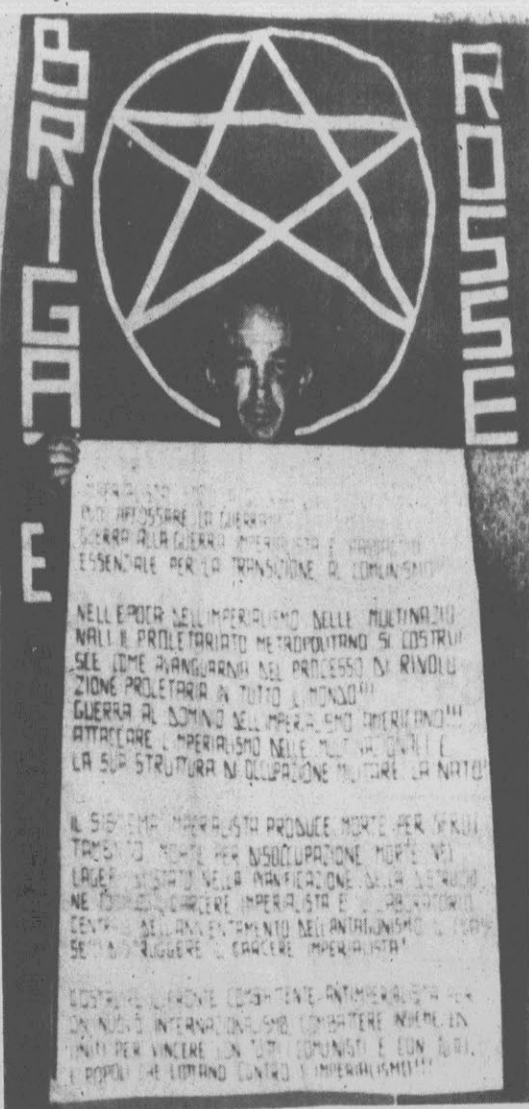

Photo Received

KIDNAPPED GENERAL — This snapshot of Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, kidnapped from his home earlier this month, was released Sunday after the Italian news agency ANSA received an anonymous telephone call announcing a packet containing the photo was in a trash can in a downtown Milan square. Milan police translated a portion of the sign in front of Dozier as "The curse of capitalism breeds imperialist war. Only anti-imperialist civil war can bury war." Police also said the dark spot seen under the general's eye may be a bruise. (AP Laserphoto)

'Bye-Lo Doll' Is Given Museum

A BYE-LO DOLL... is one of several gifts made to the N. C. Museum of History by members of the North Carolina Museum Associates. Other gifts include a bookcase, a Civil War rifle, and antique North Carolina silver and quilts.

RALEIGH — A Bye-Lo doll, designed by Mrs. Grace Storey Putnam and dating from the period 1922-25, has been given to the North Carolina Museum of History by members of the North Carolina Museum Associates.

Mrs. William S. Corbitt, Jr. of Greenville, a board member for the Museum Associates, explains that the Associates used membership funds to purchase artifacts and antiques for the museum collection since the museum receives only $4,500 annually from the state for artifact purchases.

"Recent purchases by the Associates," Mrs. Corbitt said, "made possible by membership funds, are valued at more than three times the museum's annual acquisitions budget of $4,500."

Included in this year's acquisition are a bookcase which belonged to Governor Charles B. Aycock, a Civil War rifle, and antique North Carolina silver and quilts.

People in Pitt County interested in information on becoming an Associates member can contact Mrs. Corbitt or other Pitt County residents who are members of the committee. These are Mrs. Clifton Everett, Jr., Mrs. William Frelove, Mrs. James Galloway, Mrs. Larry Vacek, Mrs. Ross Shuping and Mrs. Michael Weaver.

Seismologist Is Out Of Hospital

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Charles Richter, the 81-year-old seismologist who gave his name to an earthquake-measuring scale, says it was "a relief to get home" from a hospital after a car crash.

Richter, released Sunday from Huntington Memorial Hospital, had been hospitalized for nearly two weeks after his car plunged into a canyon. He spent six hours wandering in a daze before being rescued.

The co-developer of the Richter scale suffered bruises and exposure and was put in the hospital because of fear he might develop pneumonia, hospital spokeswoman Kaye Murphy said.

55 Speed Limit Believed Life-Saver

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Imposition of the 55 mph speed limit eight years ago is probably the major cause for an average decline of 400 highway deaths per year in North Carolina since then, the state Highway Patrol says.

"You do not see the high speed like you used to," said Maj. L. J. Lance, former patrol field commander for the eastern half of the state. "We rarely arrest people running about 70 or 75."

Lance said the state's traffic fatality rate is nearly half of what it was before the speed limit was lowered. Between three and four people die for each 100 million miles traveled now in North Carolina, whereas between six and seven people died for each 100 million miles traveled before the 55 mph limit went into effect, he said.

Local police and sheriff's departments are not as involved as highway patrolmen in enforcing the 55 mph limit. But their spokesmen agree that the lower limit has increased safety.

"I certainly feel it has saved lives. If we could just knock out drunken driving, we'd have it made," said Sgt. J. M. Riddle of the Fayetteville Police Department's traffic division.

Lance said that while the decrease in highway deaths is due partly to the reduced speed limit, a crackdown on intoxicated drivers has been effective as well.

Congress imposed the 55 mph limit nationwide in 1974, but the major impetus was the OPEC oil embargo and resulting gasoline shortages. Since then, however, the decrease in highway deaths has caused many politicians to favor keeping the lower speed limit although the gasoline shortage has eased.

In North Carolina, the maximum speed limit was 70 mph before 1974. In 1973, a total of 1,940 people died in auto accidents in the state, compared with 1,514 in 1980. Individual county statistics do not generally show the steady downturn in fatalities that state figures reveal. On a per county basis, the numbers of deaths tend to fluctuate from year to year.

Lance said total accidents have not decreased over the last eight years, but said serious accidents have declined because people are driving more slowly.

"When you reduce the speed, you reduce the seriousness of the accident," he said.

Officials acknowledge that the 55 mph speed limit is often exceeded. But they said it still induces people to drive slower than they did. Lance said the highway patrol has managed to keep the average highway speed at around 60 mph.

"We feel if we can get 85 percent of the vehicles to drive less than 60 we're doing a good job," he said. "We've controlled it. We haven't stopped it (driving over 55) but we've controlled it. To be very frank, the chances of being arrested at 60 are very slim."

If Baby Is A Boy, May Be First English King

LONDON (AP) — If Prince Charles and Princess Diana have a baby boy, he could become the first truly English king in more than 350 years, an expert on royal genealogy says.

British history books officially date the British monarchy from 1066, the year William the Conqueror defeated the Anglo-Saxons and proclaimed himself king.

royal child — who will be second in line to the throne after Charles, 33 — would be 58.8 percent British. That means the child could become the most British monarch since James I, who reigned from 1603 to 1625 and was 75 percent Scottish, and Anne, who ruled from 1702 to 1714 and was 60 percent British.

Debrett's calculation was based on analysis of the 64 great-great-grandparents of Charles and Diana. Diana, 20, is 90.6 percent British and 9.4 percent American. But Charles is only 24.81 percent British; 18 of his great-great-grandparents were German and others were Polish, Russian and Danish.

"It is a standing disgrace that the list should start with William the Norman, just because his successors, the Plantagenets, also Normans, decided to ignore their English predecessors," says Harold Brooks-Baker, former managing director of Debrett's, which publishes Debrett's Peerage, the bible of British nobility.

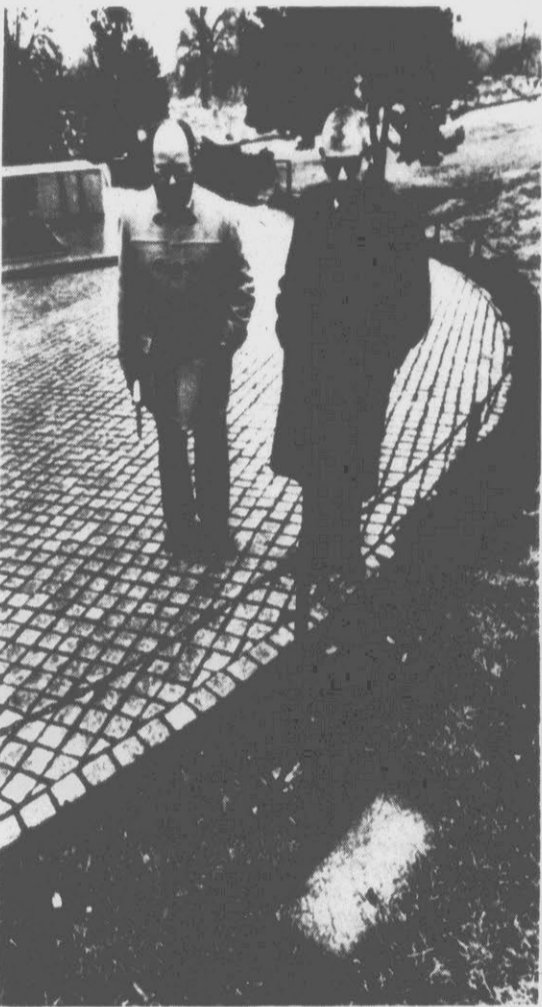

Brooks-Baker suggests that the Anglo-Saxons be officially recognized in some fashion when the royal child, due next June, is born. If it's a boy, he says, the royal couple should consider naming him Alfred in honor of his British heritage.

The Anglo-Saxon king Alfred the Great is generally credited with having unified England by defeating armies of raiding Norsemen, conquering various English kingdoms and seizing London in 886.

"It is remarkable but true that if a new heir to the throne was given (the name) Alfred, he would officially be the first of that name," Brooks-Baker says.

"It would be as if the man who was probably our greatest king, the ruler who defeated the Danes and so enabled his son to rule a united England, the man who established our legal system, founded our navy and, after astonishing achievements as warrior and administrator, gave his people the latest philosophical and religious thoughts, translated by himself, had never lived," he says.

Debrett's says that the

Hunt Plans Campaigning

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although he won't be running for election, Gov. Jim Hunt says he plans some active campaigning next year on behalf of congressional and legislative candidates.

"I will actively campaign whenever they want me," he said. Hunt said he thought 1982 would be a better year than 1980, when Republicans doubled their number of congressmen and senators from the state.

He noted one element he thought would help Democrats.

"I think the peak of that anti-government thing we saw last year is somewhat passed. My feeling is that after having reacted with a lot of pent-up feelings... the negative feelings that have been out there so much are beginning even now to modify."

State Republicans say they're planning to mount serious campaigns next year for several congressional seats and the GOP's chief objective is to gain control of the state Senate. Republicans now hold four of the state's 11 congressional seats and 10 of the 50 state Senate seats.

In the legislative races, the Republicans are expected to hit the Democrats hard for raising the gasoline tax by 3 cents per gallon.

Blame Rotten Wood In Ramp

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Rotten wood in a support timber is being cited as the cause of the collapse of part of a ramp suspended over an open-air koala exhibit at the San Diego Zoo. Three people were slightly injured.

Clayton Swanson, general manager of the zoo, said about 30 people were standing on the ramp Saturday when the timber gave way. Only two or three of the zoo's nine koalas were in the outdoor exhibit at the time, and they were not injured, he said.

Swanson said dry rot had set in on the support timber that broke.

Rainy Holiday

Slow, steady rain dampened the yuletide weekend in eastern North Carolina, bringing the area a "gray" Christmas rather than the white one experienced in the Piedmont and western part of N.C.

Over an inch of rain fell in Pitt County during the four-day period since Christmas eve with the largest amount, .76 inch, recorded on Christmas day. The Greenville Utilities' water plant measured 1.42 inches of precipitation since Dec. 24. The following daily totals were recorded by GUC: Thursday, .03 inch; Friday, .76 inch; Saturday, .50 inch; Sunday, .03 inch and .1 inch between midnight Sunday and 8 a.m. today.

Temperatures for the holidays stayed in the 30's and 40's, making precipitation cold but not frozen. On Thursday an almost balmy 57 degrees Fahrenheit was recorded as the high, with the low edging to 42 degrees. The high temperatures for Friday was 44 degrees and the low a chilly 34.

On Saturday temperatures remained in the 30's all day, with the high settling at 38 degrees and the low at 33 degrees. Sunday's high and low temperatures were 42 degrees and 35 degrees. At 8 a.m. today it was 38 degrees F.

The National Weather Service forecast calls for rain ending late tonight with partial clearing. Tuesday will be partly cloudy with highs in the 40's and lows in the 30's. Rain is predicted again by Thursday.

Elder Joe Sawyer performed the double ring ceremony. A program of organ music was presented by Charles Prather of Kinston. Mrs. Dorothy Gregory of Connelly Springs, aunt of the bride, sang "Whither Thou Goest" and "O Perfect Love."

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Edward Lang of Rt. 3, Ayden, the bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Joyce Whaley Smith of Rt. 2, Gritton, and the late Mr. Samuel Ervin Smith.

The maid of honor was Sharon Holland of Ayden. Bridesmaids included Gwen Smith of Snow Hill, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, Jean Brown and Darlene Johns both of Ayden.

The best man was Raymond Smith of Snow Hill, brother of the bridegroom and groomsmen included Melvin Lang Jr., brother of the bride, and Tim Mills of Ayden and Lemuel Smith of Gritton, cousin of the bridegroom. The ring bearer was Michael Lang of Ayden, brother of the bride.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza and chantilly lace styled with a high neckline and schiffli embroidered yoke encrusted with pearls. The organza bishop sleeves had lace cuffs. The A-line skirt was applied in lace to match the center front insert, border and attached chapel train. She wore a matching lace covered headpiece attached to a two-tiered elbow length veil. She carried a nosegay of white miniature carnations, roses, stephanotis and baby's breath tied with white satin streamers.

The attendants were each dressed in formal emerald crepe backed satin gowns fashioned with a raised waistline accented with a cream satin sash. The square neckline and sleeves were trimmed with cream lace. They carried nosegays of holly, red and white carnations tied with matching ribbon and wore red carnations and holly in their hair.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of burgundy qiana styled with a V-neckline and the mother of the bridegroom wore an off-white formal gown with a matching jacket. Both wore corsages of miniature pom pons and baby's breath. Grandmothers of the couple were remembered with corsages of white carnations.

The couple will be living near Gritton after a wedding trip to Florida.

The bride graduated from Ayden-Gritton High School and is attending East Carolina University. The bridegroom attended Greene Central High School and is engaged in farming.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held at the home of Miss Esther McLawhorn of Ayden, great-aunt of the bride.

The reception table was covered with a white cloth trimmed in lace and decorated with a red velvet bow, greenery and berries. Vicki and Nikki Gregory, cousins of the bride, assisted in serving. Lisa Lang, cousin of the bride, presided at the guest register.

An after-rehearsal party was held Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith, brother and sister-in-law of the bridegroom. The party was given by the mother of the bridegroom and Mr. and Mrs. Smith. The mother of the bride entertained at a bridesmaids luncheon Tuesday at Sweet Caroline's.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza and Chantilly lace. The gown was fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline outlined in Chantilly lace encrusted with pearls. Matching lace was also on the full bishop sleeves that were cuffed with lace. The modified A-line skirt was accented with a lace redingote over effect which flowed into an attached chapel-length train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion, bordered in lace, was attached to a matching lace capulet etched with pearls.

She carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and white baby carnations tied with pink and white ribbon streamers with greenery.

A Retirement Plan That Won't Cost Your Company A Cent.

Age 35: $654,000*

Age 40: $348,000*

Age 45: $150,000*

Introducing NCNB's IRA Service For Businesses.

Starting January 1, you can offer your employees a retirement "bonus." As you can see, it can add up to the kind of figures that can keep workers working hard at absolutely no cost to your company.

The new Individual Retirement Account law says that even people with a retirement plan at work can invest in an IRA.

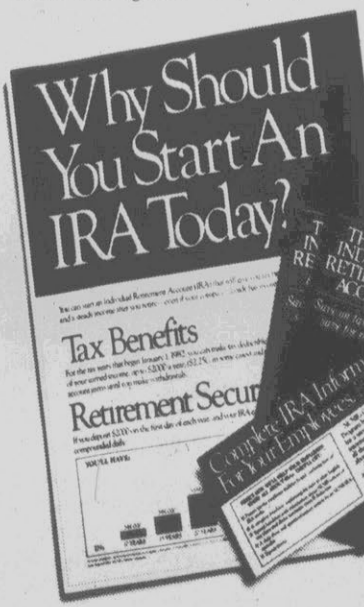

There have been other changes, too. For example, a working couple can invest up to $2000 each a year. If they both start at 35, their IRAs combined would be worth over $1.3 million by the time they retire at 65*.

Of course, even with a payoff like that, it's hard to find the money to invest. And that's especially true for your younger employees.

That's why NCNB has put together a program to inform and educate your employees on the values of opening an NCNB IRA. In addition to the posters and literature you see here, we can set up presentations and counseling — even automatic payroll deductions.

All in all, it's like adding an employee benefit without adding a penny to your overhead.

For information on this program and our SEP and the new Keogh Plan, call or stop in now at the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

*Based on single person's $2000 (or a working couple's $4000) annual deposit made on the first of each year, at an annual interest rate of 12%, compounded daily on 365/360 basis. Working individuals can contribute 100% of their annual salary up to $2000. Substantial interest penalty required for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

A Farm Policies Test

American farmers got a little something — perhaps mighty little — when President Reagan signed a four-year $11 billion farm bill just before Christmas.

It lacks a lot in protecting the essential farm economy of the nation against ruin, but it is the best that can be obtained from the current administration.

The farm measure contains about $5 billion less in expenditures than the bill first passed by the House.

The administration is anticipating increased exports of farm products. That remains to be seen. It is likely that just one year of sinking prices for farm products can mean disaster for many in the agricultural industry. We hope that doesn't occur, but that will be the ultimate test of the Reagan farm policies.

Rule Is By Gun

There is an unexplored story behind Poland's travail.

That is the point that the government (and the Soviet Union) is not merely opposed to labor unions with a voice in their own affairs, but to preserving privilege and political nepotism among Communist Party favorites.

As we have read accounts of the events, the Polish Solidarity movement was not aimed against communism but against mismanagement in the country's economic sector and abuses of individual power in the private sector and outright fraud in the government.

This undercuts the dictatorial regime at home and abroad; so Solidarity had to go.

We remember the Russian people were told that after an interval of dictatorship of the "proletariat" they would reap the benefits of "pure socialism". But "pure socialism" in Russia or among its satellites is as remote today as it was under the czars.

Behind the Iron Curtain it is just business as usual: rule by the gun.

THIS AFTERNOON

Bottom 10 In N.C.

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolinians little noted and will not long remember some things which happened during 1981, and that's probably for the good.

Tradition has it that news gathering organizations take note of the year's departure with a compilation of important events — the Top Ten local, state, national or international stories.

In fairness, it seems the Bottom Ten should gain attention as well. Competition is keen in state government for this distinction. Eliminating the numerous events which obviously qualify as the least important stories of 1981, here is the Bottom Ten.

Legislators approved continuation of the study commission on locating and building a big sports arena primarily designed for basketball games and big enough so legislators can get tickets.

Criminal law was changed by the General Assembly so it is now a felony to assault or threaten members of the General Assembly and other high state officials, or their homes, cars, or offices.

Big Law
After more than four years of study involving hundreds of individuals and thousands of manhours, the North Carolina Public School Law was completely recodified, eliminating archaic terminology and renumbering the sections.

Attorney General Rufus Edmisten unveiled a plan to publish a State Register containing all the rules and regulations and administrative procedures coming from the ever-rumbling bowels of state bureaucracy.

The Department of Transportation intalled and tested a radio transmitting system along Interstate 40 in Winston-Salem so that motorists could tune in and listen to tape-recorded messages about the work in progress ... as they sat stalled in the detour jams.

A communications study group devised a plan to provide statewide broadcast of television coverage of various state government meetings including the General Assembly itself.

Gov. Jim Hunt played basketball on numerous occasions, and stories and pictures recorded this significant activity.

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green traveled overseas to the Far East and the Middle East to represent North Carolina's business and farming communities in bolstering world trade.

The General Assembly met three times to handle a total of 2,256 bills or resolutions introduced, with a 48.6 percent passage rate.

Donations

Charitable or civic organizations which set up refreshment stands on state-owned property at rest stops or welcome centers can now accept contributions or donations from those who pause to refresh.

This list does not represent the worst stories which occurred during the year. There were many bad ones.

They do, however, demonstrate some of the things which happened which will probably have little significance for citizens or the public officials involved in the years to come.

Other Editors Say Restitution, Too

(Gastonia Gazette)

There was an interesting case that had an interesting outcome in the Gaston County District Court.

It involved one man who shot another, injured and paralyzed the latter from the waist down. And instead of asking for a prison term for the shooter, the wounded man asked that his assailant not be sent to prison and that he be given a chance to make a degree of restitution. That restitution would be $150 a month for five years, a small price to pay for such a violent and serious injury that the first man had brought to the second.

Michael June, 21, of Stanley, had pleaded guilty in court to assault with a deadly weapon, inflicting serious bodily injury. He had shot Thomas F. Stewart, 31, of Stanley, at a club which Stewart had operated. Stewart had asked June to leave the premises after a scuffle had resulted in a banister's being broken.

June, angered, left and returned with a pistol and shot Stewart twice, once in the back and once in the thigh. One bullet lodged in Stewart's spine, permanently crippling him. He said that doctors had given him a 10 percent chance to live. The bullet remains in his body and can't be removed. He has little chance of recovering mobility in his legs.

Instead of asking that June be sent to prison, Stewart suggested to the judge that June be given an opportunity to help with Stewart's medical and hospital bills. He suggested $150 a month for five years.

The judge considered and agreed. He gave June a 7-to-10 year sentence but suspended it on condition that the payments be made to Stewart. If June fails to make the payments, or violates any other ordinary probation requirements, he will be required to serve the prison sentence.

Assistant District Attorney Larry Langston made a sage comment when he said that restitution instead of imprisonment often is better for the victim, the defendant and society.

We couldn't agree more. Too often defendants and our courts are more concerned with retribution than with restitution.

If the emphasis could be shifted from the former to the latter, we all would be better off.

Strength For Today

HOW IT STARTED

The opening chapters of Genesis should capture the attention of every religiously-minded person.

We learn in the first place that man is definitely related to his Maker. He is created in the image and after the likeness of God. The second thing we learn is that sin lies at the bottom of all human evil and misery. We often attribute war to political, economic, or social causes. These simply trigger the war. War rises from innate human sin, or disobedience to God.

JUST CAN'T SEEM TO LET SLEEPING DOGS LIE!

A Talent For Profits

One of the things the CIA does is run secret businesses known as proprietaries, to provide covers for agents to "wash" money for covert operations and for other clandestine operations.

Up until recently, these businesses have been very successful, but lately many of them have been losing money. So "the Company" decided to call everyone back to Langley, Va., to see what was going wrong.

The Director of Covert Business Operations was in a foul temper.

He addressed the CIA agents who were charged with running the business covers.

"This is the worst year we've ever had," he said.

"Our gross sales are down by 20 percent, and the CIA can no longer eat your losses. Now what the hell is going on?"

The agent, whose cover was president of the "Deutschland Music Box Company," said, "It's the fault of the Hong Kong station. They stole our designs and they're flooding the U.S. market with cheap imitations. I make the best music boxes in the world, but I can't compete on price."

"Isn't that tough?" the agent from Hong Kong, whose cover was chairman of the Kowloon Toy Company, said. "If you can't compete, then get out of the music box business. I'm not making a dime on my boxes ever since the Taiwan CIA Company started to undercut us."

The director said, "Why does everyone have to make music boxes? Can't you come up with a new product like the Barbie doll?"

The agent running the South Korean Novelty Company said, "We put out a Nancy and Ronnie Doll for Christmas and it laid a bomb."

The director looked over his computer printouts. "What happened to you, Danfield? It says here your New Delhi Exporting Company in Pakistan, anyone here ever try to sell a Made in India welcome mat in Pakistan?"

"That wasn't my fault. I sent one million madras welcome mats through Donnegger's shipping company in Bombay, and his stupid people unloaded them in Pakistan. Anyone here ever try to sell a Made in India welcome mat in Pakistan?"

Donnegger said, "Your company got the invoices all screwed up. You had the yak butter going to the United States and the welcome mats going to Pakistan. We're not mind readers."

"Oh, shut up," the director said. "Let's get to you, Brinkley. How do you explain the fact you still have 200,000 Lapland ski boots in your warehouse in Helsinki?"

"I had an order from Harrod's in London for the whole lot, when the KGB's Finlandia Sporting Goods Company got wind of it, and made Harrod's an offer they couldn't refuse. I've asked covert operations to burn down the Finlandia factory three times, but they keep ignoring my request. How can I run a clandestine business if our people won't get tough with the competition?"

The director said, "I'll talk to the arson people later. Now we get to Biberman. I have a report that you used CIA covert funds to cover up your losses from the Mediterranean Fruit Fly Company."

"I'm suing Jerry Brown and the State of California. As

Urge Export Of Furniture

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — With the furniture industry beset by recession, high interest rates and a poor housing market, North Carolina state officials suggested a new strategy — find new buyers overseas.

The suggestion, made in a bulky study offered to furniture executives earlier this month, was the same message state Commerce Department officials have been carrying to other industries and businesses across North Carolina.

After spending years concentrating on attracting foreign capital and investments to North Carolina, the Commerce Department has begun emphasizing the other side of the foreign trade coin — exports of North Carolina-produced goods.

A result of increased exports, Commerce officials say, has been a healthy growth for a variety of firms — and, importantly for the state, the means to create new jobs and preserve old ones.

"A lot of them are going overseas because they need the business — furniture is a good example," said Gordon McRoberts, director of international marketing for the Commerce Department. "But from our point of view, now is just a good time to get into the export business."

"Just because it (the economy) has slowed down doesn't mean it has dried up," he added. "There's no shortage of buying power in Saudi Arabia, for instance."

State officials estimate North Carolina companies exported $4 billion worth of goods in 1980, a growth of $500 million over the year before. For 1981, export figures are expected to be down nationally, but McRoberts says they should be up again for North Carolina firms.

Economists figure that for every $1 million in export sales, 40 domestic jobs are created. In North Carolina that means 160,000 jobs, or one of every eight in manufacturing, is now due to foreign sales.

McRoberts came to the department to run the program two years ago, after exporting Harley-Davidson motorcycles when they were made by AMF and setting up his own export brokerage firm in Milwaukee.

With a staff of four export specialists, Commerce offers a variety of services, from helping plan an initial foray into a foreign land to lending advice on language and culture and even helping companies negotiate foreign deals. State officials sometimes travel with North Carolina companies to help start them on an export deal.

More than 300 North Carolina firms sought the state's help in export deals during the last year, and often the calls came for help with emergencies.

Once recently the call came from a North Carolina company that exports mountain trout — it had barrels of the iced trout stranded on an Amsterdam freight dock at the start of a five-day holiday. In that case, state officials found a Dutch-speaking intermediary and by telephone located storage capability and a truck.

McRoberts said the state offers assistance because many North Carolina businesses are reluctant or afraid to seek foreign markets. "It's like firing your first 12-gauge shotgun," he said. "There's so much mystery to it."

For North Carolina's traditional industries — furniture, textiles and apparel — the potential is there to make up for weakening sales at home, McRoberts said. Canada is the biggest foreign market for the state's products, particularly furniture, and furniture and apparel industries are finding demands for high-quality products in western Europe.

GAMBLING AND GAMBLING!

'Timeshare' Plans Have Risks

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A growing number of Americans are cutting vacation costs by signing up for "timeshare" plans giving them the use of a holiday home for a limited period each year.

The Federal Trade Commission says timeshare sales have doubled every year since 1975, topping $1 billion in 1980. But the FTC warns consumers to "consider the risks as well as the benefits before signing a contract or check."

There are two basic types of timeshares: deeded and non-deeded.

With a deeded plan, you buy an ownership interest in a piece of real estate. You actually own part of the house or apartment building.

With a non-deeded plan, you buy a lease, license or club membership allowing you to use the property for a specific amount of time every year for a stated number of years.

In both cases, the cost depends on the length of time you want to spend on the property; the longer your holiday, the more you'll pay.

The FTC says would-be buyers should follow 10 basic rules:

— Weigh the value of "gifts" or "prizes" used to promote timeshare sales. "Common promotional giveaways include gems with little or no value as jewels, 'solid-gold' ingots with minimal gold content ... or 'vacation awards' that do not cover major costs such as travel and food," the FTC says.

— Consider whether you actually will be able to use a timeshare facility regularly. Are your vacation plans subject to last-minute schedule changes? Are you willing to go back to the same place every year? If you are looking at a timeshare plan with units in several places, make sure the club has enough units at the locations you prefer so you can vacation there when you want to.

— Evaluate investment claims made by the seller. Try to make a realistic assessment of the future value of the timeshare. "Resale ... may be difficult," the FTC says. You may face competition from the same company that sold you the timeshare in the first place. And even if a unit does increase in value, your share of the profit is limited by the length of your timeshare.

— Look at the total cost, including finance charges, annual fees and travel expenses. Find out whether there are limits on annual increases in maintenance fees, and compare the cost of your timeshare on a weekly basis with the going rates for similar accommodations in the same area.

— Don't let yourself be pressured by a seller who tells you that you'll miss an opportunity of a lifetime if you don't sign right away. Review all documents yourself or have a lawyer do it for you.

— Make sure oral promises are included in the written contract. If the seller tells you something that contradicts the contract, be careful; the contract is what counts.

— Remember that exchange programs, which offer "swaps" with other resorts in different places, usually cannot be guaranteed, according to the FTC. There also may be limits on the exchange opportunities or a provision requiring you to request the use of the "swap" facility far in advance.

— Look into the record of the seller, developer and management company. Visit the property before buying and, if possible, talk to other buyers. Ask local real estate agents and the Better Business Bureau for information on the companies involved.

— If you're buying a timeshare on a property which is still under development, get a written commitment from the seller that the facilities will be completed as promised. You might want to ask that some of your money be held in escrow until the work is done.

— Find out what your rights are if the builder or management company has financial problems. See if your contract includes clauses concerning "non-disturbance" and "non-performance" to protect you from claims against the builder or manager and to guarantee your rights even if a third party, like a bank, buys out your contract.

he said.
But the biggest growth potential is for small companies, with high-technology or specialized products. And the boom markets appear to be Mexico, which has oil money and is pressing to industrialize, and the Arab countries, where all types of products are in demand, McRoberts said.
North Carolina's biggest export items continue to be the traditional lines: machinery, textiles, and apparel. But a diverse group of other products is selling overseas — such as computer, medical and scientific equipment, electronics, agriculture equipment, industrial recycling processes and sporting goods.
Much of the growth has come to aggressive technology firms in the Research Triangle Park, but McRoberts said businesses around the state are finding exports worthwhile. For example, an Angier company is making hydraulic basketball goals and selling them around the world, and companies in the far western corner of the state are exporting aviation instruments, power tools and big-name jogging apparel.

soon as I win the case, I'll replace the money. I can prove every fruit fly we sent them was sterile."
The director said, "Biberman, you wouldn't know a sterile fruit fly from a gypsy moth. I see from this readout the only one who made a profit this year for 'The Company' was Tablestone. Let him tell the rest of you dunderheads how he did it."
"He isn't here, sir. He resigned last month and went into business for himself."
"What kind of business?"
"Selling submarine guns, bombs and poison gas canisters to the Libyans. He said that as far as business was concerned the CIA didn't offer him a future, and he'd rather strike out on his own."
"Where is he getting all his stuff?"
"The same people we get it from, sir."
"Do you mean to say he is telling people he is still working for the CIA?"
"No, just the opposite. He keeps telling them he isn't. But the more he insists he has nothing to do with us, the more our suppliers believe he does."
The director said, "You have to hand it to Tablestone. He always had a talent for making a buck. I wish I had 100 more like him."

Justice O'Connor Shows No Signs Of 'Alignment'

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — As the Senate considered Sandra Day O'Connor's nomination to the Supreme Court, Sen. Joseph Biden told his colleagues that "all bets are off" once a justice takes the oath of office.

The Delaware Democrat was right on target in his reminder last September that no one in the Senate can predict how a new member of the nation's highest court will vote once he or she "dons that robe and walks into that sanctum across the way."

After three months on the court, Mrs. O'Connor shows no signs of aligning herself with either its liberal or conservative bloc.

She told the Senate last summer that her job would be "one of interpreting and applying the law, not making it."

That philosophy has led the high court's first woman member on occasion to side with the court's liberals, its conservatives and sometimes mixtures of both.

Since she was sworn in Sept. 25, Mrs. O'Connor: —Joined three of the court's more conservative members in dissenting from part of a decision allowing most confidential secretaries and other workers with access to an employer's confidential information to join labor unions.

—Joined Justice John Paul Stevens and liberal Justices Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan in dissenting from a decision barring federal courts from hearing virtually all lawsuits seeking money damages because of allegedly discriminatory property tax assessments.

—Joined overwhelming majorities — made up of both liberals and conservatives — in several decisions since the court term opened on Oct. 5.

For example, Mrs. O'Connor was among the 8-1 majority in votes that state colleges must allow student groups to conduct religious worship and study sessions in campus facilities; that the city of Berkeley, Calif., cannot impose a $250 limit on each contribution to support or oppose ballot measures; and that county-employed public defenders cannot be sued by their indigent clients under federal civil rights law.

She dissented, along with Stevens and Brennan, from a decision making it easier for young criminals sentenced under the federal Youth Corrections Act to lose their special privileges.

On Dec. 14, Mrs. O'Connor said the court should decide whether to create a new branch of "federal common law" to allow Vietnam veterans to sue the manufacturers of the defoliant Agent Orange. Only Justice Harry A. Blackmun voted with her.

In fact, the 51-year-old jurist from Arizona shows no signs of holding strong ideological positions that will lead her to a particular outcome on a case.

She shares with a majority of her Supreme Court colleagues the conviction that judges operate within somewhat restricted limits.

"I do well understand the difference between legislating and judging ... As a judge, it is not my function to develop social policy by means of making the law," she told the Senate Judiciary Committee last Sept. 9.

Less than six weeks after her swearing-in, Mrs. O'Connor and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger joined Justice William H. Rehnquist in accusing the court of taking too much liberty with the words of the Constitution.

Rehnquist, in objecting to the court's decision not to hear a criminal case, wrote that the Supreme Court has gradually been reducing the Constitution to "aphorisms, whose resemblance to the actual text of the Constitution grows increasingly remote as they are used as substitutes for the text itself."

In her three months on the high court, Mrs. O'Connor has given few personal glimpses of her new job — or how she views her eight brethren. She did not respond to requests for an interview.

Visitors to the Supreme Court almost never see Mrs. O'Connor — or any of the other justices — in the public areas of the building, nor are there any pictures of her on the court walls.

Justice Potter Stewart is still featured in the photographs on the court walls and in the photographs for sale at the court's souvenir stand. Mrs. O'Connor took over Stewart's high court seat following his retirement last July.

For Defense

TOKYO (AP) — The ruling Liberal Democratic Party, citing U.S. pressure for Japan to spend more on defense, and the Finance Ministry have agreed to increase defense spending 7.7 percent, major newspapers reported.

Five national dailies reported Sunday that the compromise for fiscal 1982 would be put before the Cabinet today for final budget proposal approval before it goes to Parliament next month.

The papers also said the party and ministry agreed to increase the defense budget's outlay to maintain military facilities leased to the U.S. forces stationed in Japan. The reports said the outlay would be increased 27.3 percent to $160 million.

Graham Will Ordain Son

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham says his 29-year-old son, whom he plans to ordain in Tempe next month, "has a presence about him."

"He is a very powerful speaker and Bible teacher and very authoritative in the pulpit," the evangelist said about William Franklin Graham II, who is to be ordained Jan. 10 at the non-denominational Grace Community Church.

Graham said during a recent Houston crusade that some people think the younger Graham may eventually take over the vast Billy Graham Evangelistic Association. William Graham II said his father has "at least another 10 years" to head the organization, but added that "a lot of things can happen in 10 years."

The younger Graham heads Samaritan's Purse, which donates money to struggling churches, and World Medical Missions. Both are based in Boone, N.C.

Franklin is a graduate of Appalachian State University in Boone and spent a year at a Bible college in Colorado. He has not attended a seminary.

Dean Named At Lenoir CC

Mrs. Joyce Gilbert Cherry, wife of Glenn F. Cherry, is the new dean of Commercial Education at Lenoir Community College, Dr. Thomas M. Benton, executive vice president, has announced. She will begin Jan. 1.

Mrs. Cherry, who taught in Kinston and Lenoir County Schools for eight years, is a native of Pitt County. She received a B.S. degree with a major in business and a minor in social studies and her M.A. from East Carolina University. She received graduate credit through ECU for a summer's study in Europe and took extension courses at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Before joining LCC in 1968 she taught for two years at Mount Olive Junior College.

Mrs. Cherry was head of the Business Administration Department before becoming dean. She has been active in many educational and professional organizations.

Her appointment fills the vacancy created last summer when Dr. Thomas O. Fulcher resigned to accept the post of dean at Mitchell Community College in Salisbury.

Fire Aboard Liner Ends Cruise Plans

MIAMI (AP) — Nearly 2,000 passengers of the S.S. Norway are back ashore in Miami today after a fire hot enough to buckle steel plates raced through the luxury liner's boiler room and turned their vacation plans to ashes.

Sunday's blaze forced the owner of the world's largest cruise ship, Norwegian Caribbean Cruise Line, to cancel the Norway's seven-day New Year's cruise, an NCL spokesman said. The company will refund money to the 1,950 people scheduled for the trip and will offer to reimburse their air fare and give them a discount on a future cruise, the spokesman said today.

NCL vice president Art Kane estimated the loss to the cruise line from the blaze would easily "exceed a million dollars."

The fire, which broke out shortly before noon a few feet above the water line of the 1,035-foot luxury liner, heated air to more than 1,000 degrees, Deputy Miami Fire Chief Dan Fabyan said. The flames spewed black smoke upward through the crew's quarters, and thick, oily smoke blew across Miami's port.

Sweatsoaked firefighters from the Norway's crew and nine companies of Miami firefighters in protective clothing fought the blaze for nearly two hours before extinguishing the flames.

"I can't believe this. I'm just heartsick," said Marlene Brown, a Neptune, N.J., insurance agent scheduled for the cruise. "If it was going to get stranded, why couldn't it get stranded in the water by St. Thomas instead of here?"

Kane said inspectors from the U.S. Coast Guard and Norwegian ships control officials were expected to board the Norway today to check the ship for seaworthiness. Even after the fire was extinguished Sunday, Kane said, heat in the area was so intense it prevented the inspectors from checking for damage.

"We can say this was not a critical fire, not a serious fire. It was confined to a small area," said Kane, who added that NCL officials will not know the full extent of damage until the inspections are carried out.

The Norway had been scheduled to leave at 5 p.m. Sunday for seven nights at sea and stops at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands and at one of the outer islands in the Bahamas. When the ship docked, it was returning from a Christmas cruise, and about 200 departing passengers still aboard had to be evacuated.

The New Year's cruise traditionally is one of the most heavily booked of the year, Kane said. Singer Jack Jones had been scheduled for the voyage.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress should consider limiting federal judges' power to set aside state courts' criminal convictions, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger says in his annual "Year-End Report on the Judiciary."

Although Burger previously has advocated such limits for lower federal courts, this is the first time he is suggesting specifically that Congress should impose the restrictions.

Copies of Burger's 18-page report were sent to all members of Congress.

Federal court dockets are often crowded with state prison inmates looking for a constitutional error in hopes of having their convictions overturned.

Burger, who is head of the federal court system, cited as his reason for requesting the curbs: "The administration of justice in this country is plagued and bogged down with lack of reasonable finality of judgments in criminal cases."

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A policeman gunned down after he cornered a suspect in an attempted rape was able to describe the suspect before he died, authorities said.

About a half-hour later, the suspect, Julius Hyde Joyner, was shot and killed by another officer.

Officer Daniel T. Maloney, 25, died of multiple gunshot wounds Sunday after responding to a call from a woman who reported an attempted rape by a man in a yellow Cadillac, police said.

About 30 minutes later, a half-mile away, officer J.J. Bell spotted a yellow Cadillac, police said. Bell stopped the car and exchanged fire with Joyner, 27, who was killed, police said.

MEETING POSTPONED
 The Pitt County Council on Alcoholism will not meet tonight. The announcement was made by Sandra Smith.

REWARD OFFERED
 The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating a Dec. 23 incident on Highway 43 north of Greenville during which a shotgun blast was fired into an occupied dwelling.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said no one was injured in the incident which took place at a house occupied by a tenant on the Atlas Wooten farm on Rt. 4, Greenville. He added, however, that the blast apparently narrowly missed a child inside the residence.

The shot was fired through a front glass door of the house, the sheriff said. The incident was reported at 6:52 p.m.

Sheriff Tyson said a $500 award has been offered by "concerned citizens" for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons responsible for the shooting.

MURDER CHARGE
 Kenneth Gray Suggs of Rt. 1, Greenville has been charged with first degree murder following the Dec. 23 shooting death of 23-year-old Robert Lee Williams of Rt. 1, Fountain, according to Pitt Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Sheriff Tyson said Williams was shot in the temple with a .32 caliber pistol as he sat in a vehicle at Suggs' residence. The shooting took place around 5:50 p.m., he said.

The sheriff said Suggs attempted to take Williams to the hospital following the shooting but the vehicle ran out of gas near Rock Springs Church on Highway 43 north of Greenville. The Greenville Rescue Squad transported Williams to Pitt Memorial Hospital, where he died on Dec. 24, Sheriff Tyson reported.

Suggs, 25, was placed in Pitt County Jail without privilege of bond.

Again Offers List To Man-Watchers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One is a football player, one is a boxer, one is a singer and many are actors. But all of them are sexy and talented, says Suzy Mallery, president of Man Watchers Inc. and originator of its annual list of the "Ten Most Watchable Men."

This year's list, released Sunday, is dominated by actors, with James Garner and Tom Selleck making the grade for the second consecutive year.

"We think all men are 'watchable,'" Ms. Mallery said. "But these 10 are special. They're handsome, sexy, appealing and, importantly, they are all very talented, too. What more could a man watcher ask?"

Also on this year's list are college football star Marcus Allen, actor Stuart Damon of TV's "General Hospital," actor Richard Dreyfuss, singer Andy Gibb, TV sportscaster Frank Gifford, actor Gregory Harrison of the TV series "Trapper John M.D.," actor Paul Newman and former heavyweight boxing champion Ken Norton.

This year Ms. Mallery made the final selections based on a Man Watchers questionnaire on the perfect man of the 1980s as well as her own opinions.

Ms. Mallery started the list in 1976. The group, which says it has 5,000 members, passes out Man Watchers cards to any man considered worthy. The questionnaire was sent to the organization's members.

ADDED POLICE REDUCED CRIME
BOSON (AP) — A drop in crime on buses, trolleys and subways since October is due to the assignment of more police officers in high-crime areas, not the presence of the Guardian Angels, officials say.

The Angels, volunteers on anti-crime patrols, began working city subways and downtown areas Sept. 22, but Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority spokesman Paul DiNatale said Saturday the volunteers are rarely seen on patrol.

Susan Piver, the 24-year-old leader of the Angels' Boston chapter, said the group's 48 Boston members are too few to patrol 24 hours a day, but said her group deserved some credit for the drop in crime.

Robberies dropped 31 percent and larcenies 22 percent in October, compared with October 1980, DiNatale said. In November, robberies dropped 39 percent and larcenies 18 percent, compared with 1980.

Carpenter, Defense Key Giants By Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was simply a case of the New York Giants beating the Philadelphia Eagles at their own game — running the football and unrelenting defense.

The Giants, with the help of a pair of first-period turnovers — two fumbled kick returns — beat the Eagles 27-21 in a National Football League wild card playoff game Sunday.

New York running back Leon Bright caught a 9-yard touchdown pass moments after Eagle return specialist Wally Henry fumbled a punt at his 25. Later in the first quarter, Henry bobbled a kickoff that rolled into the end zone where Mark Haynes fell on it for a touchdown and a 20-0 Giant lead.

The Giants sandwiched those two touchdowns around a scoring drive capped by a 10-yard pass from quarterback Scott Brunner to wide receiver John Myster.

"We had a lot to prove out there today," said free safety Beasley Reece, who recovered Henry's first fumble. "Maybe people will realize now that we are the team of the future."

"I'm absolutely ecstatic," Reece continued. "I can't even contain myself. I can't wait to get to the phone to call my relatives. I've got to be one of the happiest men in the world right now."

As the door to the Giants' locker room swung open, many players were singing, "California, here we come."

The Giants now head for California to meet the San Francisco 49ers, the National Conference Western Division champions, in a second-round playoff game next Sunday.

The Eagles reduced the deficit to 20-7 in the second quarter on a 15-yard pass from quarterback Ron Jaworski to wide receiver Harold Carmichael. It ended a 26-yard drive following a pass interception. The Giants, however, took the ensuing kickoff and drove 62 yards in five plays for a touchdown that gave them a 27-7 halftime edge. Rob Carpenter gained 40 yards on the ground and Brunner completed the drive with a 22-yard scoring strike to tight end Tom Mulla.

The Eagles scored once in the third period on a 6-yard run by Wilbert Montgomery, and again in the fourth on Montgomery's 1-yard dive.

"It's hard to give a team 13 points, especially that kind of defensive team, and then go ahead and win," said Eagle Coach Dick Vermeil, whose team lost a chance to return to the Super Bowl.

"That gave them real impetus and confidence and hurt us because we had to go totally away from what we planned to do — run the ball."

The usually unemotional New York

Coach Ray Perkins couldn't conceal his delight with the Giants' first playoff effort in 18 years.

"How sweet it is," he said, stealing a line from comedian Jackie Gleason.

Carpenter, the running back acquired from Houston in a trade after the season started, led the New York running game with 161 yards in 33 carries. He said he had "great one-on-one blocking up front."

"All I had to do was pick which hole I wanted. I had a lot to choose from. Those guys did a great job."

"I was getting tired late in the game, but my enthusiasm kept me going," said Carpenter, who called the game the greatest of his life.

What made the effort by the Giants' offensive line even more outstanding was that it came against the NFL's top-ranked defense.

The Giants were led by Brunner, the second-year man who took over six weeks ago when Phil Simms suffered a separated shoulder.

"The Eagles have a good club, but the breaks went our way today and we capitalized on them," said Brunner. He completed nine of 14 passes for 96 yards, but three of them went for touchdowns.

Brunner looked ahead to Sunday's game with the 49ers, the only team to beat the Giants since he became quarterback. The 49ers beat New York in San Francisco, 17-10.

"It will be a tough game. It was the last time. But we were right in the game until the end," he said. "This time we will do basically the same we did before and see how it works out."

The Eagles drove 80 yards in the final period to pull within 27-21. They were helped by three penalties before Montgomery scored from the one.

But the Giants ran out the final 2:51 on the clock as Carpenter made two first downs.

Jaworski completed 13 of 24 for 154 yards, and Montgomery ran for 65 yards on 15 carries.

The Giants, the worst offensive team in the NFL, gained 275 yards to the Eagles' 226.

"I'm disappointed for my guys, but like I said many times before, nothing good happens by accident," Vermeil said. "The things that happened to us in the first quarter, it seems like they have been happening to us the whole year, and that's why we didn't win more football games."

Henry conceded the turnovers were crucial.

"On the first, it was raining and the ball was wet. I didn't get a fair catch signal from the sidelines."

UNC Turns Motel Into Fieldhouse

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The coaching staff of North Carolina's 11th-ranked football team turned their motel into a makeshift fieldhouse Sunday to prepare for Monday night's Gator Bowl encounter with Arkansas.

Every available room of the Sea Turtle Inn at Neptune Beach contained coaches giving final instructions and reviewing game films and plans. In the parking lot, reserves were running through plays to simulate the Arkansas offense.

Tar Heel coach Dick Crum has spent much of the two weeks of preparation discussing the explosive nature of the Arkansas offense, but the responsibility for stopping the Razorback triple option rests on defensive coordinator Denny Marcin.

"They run five different options and they've used them all," Marcin said following a film session with his defensive unit. "We'll probably get some kind of misdirection option."

Marcin said Arkansas running back Gary Anderson, who rushed for 616 yards and four touchdowns, could be his greatest concern.

"He's got good outside speed and he's got good quickness," Marcin said. "We saw him bust it loose against Texas."

Quarterback coach Cleve Bryant took one of the motel offices to discuss the offensive scheme with starter Rod Elkins and backup Scott Stankavage.

"Arkansas is a great defensive team," Bryant said. "They've shown great pursuit, they fly around. They're probably as physical a team as we've played."

He added that he hasn't made any big offensive changes to prepare for Arkansas standouts like Billy Ray Smith, an Associated Press All-America selection.

"In the last few years we've been in bowl games, we've had some changes," Bryant said. "What we're going to do in this bowl game is what got us there."

Fullback Alan Burrus will be the only regular-season starter not appearing for the Tar Heels, after he suffered a knee injury against Virginia. Tailback Kelvin Bryant will be in the backfield, but not at 100 percent.

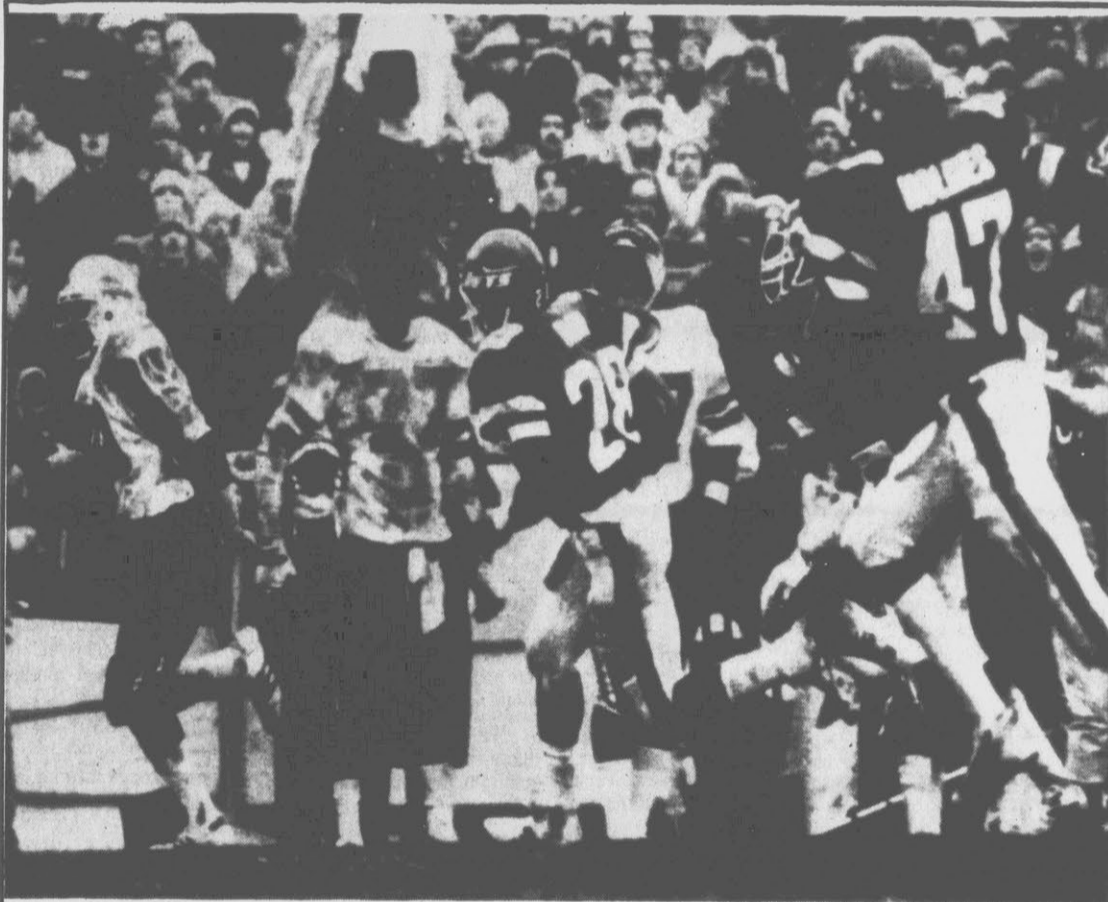

The Tar Heels took a walk around the Gator Bowl Stadium itself Sunday night. For the first time since Christmas Day, the sun appeared and sent temperatures into the 70s. Forecasters said Sunday the thermometer will dip into the 40s by kickoff time.

'Bad Read' Ends Jets' Comeback

NEW YORK (AP) — It takes only one play to make a hero or a goat in a football game, and Buffalo Bills safety Bill Simpson knows that as well as anyone.

Simpson was a hero for Buffalo Sunday, coming up with an interception with two seconds to go to help the Bills preserve a precarious 31-27 National Football League wild-card playoff victory over the New York Jets.

In the dressing room after the game, Simpson was reminded that he was burned for a game-winning touchdown by Ron Smith last year in a first-round American Conference playoff loss to the San Diego Chargers.

"People made more out of that play (last year) than I ever did," Simpson said. "I also made a lot of mistakes today that a lot of people don't know about. All they will remember is the big play I made."

Jets quarterback Richard Todd, who was in the trainer's room for an hour after the game, said Simpson's interception, which came after the Jets had scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter and reached the Bills' 11-yard line in a last-ditch attempt to win the game, "was a bad read by me. I should have thrown the ball out of bounds. I didn't see him until I threw the ball."

The near-defeat by the Bills after they took 24-0 and 31-13 leads left Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson, who threw four interceptions, "physically and emotionally exhausted."

"when the Jets only needed that one more score, I was talking to myself on the sidelines. I said, 'We're not gonna let 'em. We can't let 'em. They just can't take this away from us now.'"

Ferguson, who started the day brilliantly, completing 12 of 19 passes for 211 yards and two touchdowns, both to Frank Lewis, in the first half, said he "finished like I was coming through the back door. It was a sick feeling remembering those interceptions, but the Jets had a lot of class to come back."

Lewis, who caught seven passes in all, said, "Everything fell for me all day. If we had lost it, it would have been hard to take."

Joe Cribbs, whose 45-yard run with 10 minutes left in the game gave the Bills a 31-13 lead, was pushed hard in the back by Jets safety Darrol Ray after he reached the end zone on his run, and he took that as a sign that the Jets might quit.

"I thought they might give up after the long run," Cribbs said. "I thought it was an unclass thing to do when Ray hit me from behind. But he came up and apologized, which is the class thing to do. He said he realized the moment he pushed me he knew it was wrong."

Marty Lyons, a member of New York's front four, a group that registered a National Football League high 66 sacks this year, said, "We came back with all our heart and soul and guts and came up 10 yards short. We dug ourselves a hole. We got all the dirt off, but we couldn't get on top of the mound."

Late Interception Seals Win Bills Hold Off Jets

NEW YORK (AP) — The Buffalo Bills, perhaps 10 seconds away from going nowhere but one, are still traveling a road that could lead to Pontiac, Mich., and the Silverdome.

Ralph Wilson, the Bills' owner, once wanted a National Football League team in Detroit, and though having the Bills in suburban Pontiac for the Super Bowl was not what he had in mind at the time, he is delighted at the possibility.

After watching as the Bills held on by their fingernails for a 31-27 wild-card playoff victory over the New York Jets Sunday, Wilson crowed, "After all of these years, it would be the greatest thrill of my life to go to Detroit for the Super Bowl."

Wilson, in the 1950s, tried in vain to buy a piece of the Detroit Lions but eventually settled for ownership of the American Football League's Bills.

The Bills are now a couple of victories from getting to Pontiac, about a 30-minute drive from the Motor City.

Next Sunday, they'll be in Cincinnati to play the Bengals. If they win there, they'll play in Miami or San Diego, depending on whether the Dolphins or Chargers win next Saturday. And, then...

The Bills were close to closing all their options Sunday in the American Football Conference wild-card matchup with the Jets.

They had built a 24-0 lead in the second quarter with the help of a Charles Romes fumble return for a touchdown on the opening kickoff and a pair of Joe Ferguson-to-Frank Lewis scoring passes.

But the Jets rallied to pull within 11 points. And after Joe Cribbs raced 45 yards with a pitchout early in the fourth quarter for a seemingly secure 31-13 lead, New York stormed back for two touchdowns and were just 11 yards and 10 seconds away from an incredible comeback when free safety Bill Simpson stepped in front of a Richard Todd pass and intercepted it two yards from the goal line.

"I thought they would give up after the run," Cribbs said. "Everybody felt they would just quit. But they fought back."

Ferguson, who completed 17 of 34 passes for 288 yards and was intercepted four times, expressed similar feelings. "Some people thought the game was locked. I thought we had it wrapped up after Cribbs' touchdown, but the Jets showed a lot of class by coming back the way they did," Ferguson said.

"I started out great (he completed 12 of 19 passes for 211 yards in the first half) and finished like I was coming through the back door."

Coach Chuck Knox of the Bills called the game "typical of our season. We had a lot of problems, a lot of mistakes, and had to overcome a lot of obstacles to win."

Knox suggested that maybe some of those obstacles were wearing black-and-white striped shirts. He questioned a couple of officials' calls against the Buffalo defense in the closing minutes, most notably a holding call that wiped out an interception by Steve Freeman six plays before the one which saved the game for the Bills.

"For a moment there," Knox said sarcastically, "it looked as though they were trying to keep both New York teams in the playoffs, make it an all-New York day (the Giants, in fact, beat Philadelphia 27-21 about three hours later). But they forget Buffalo is in new York, too."

Simpson's interceptions (he also had one deep in Buffalo territory in the final minute of the third period to preserve the Bills' 24-13 lead at that time) atoned for a year-old play more than a few Bills fans remember. That was the 30-yard touchdown pass play from San Diego's Dan Fouts to Ron Smith that beat the Bills 20-14 and knocked them out of the 1980 playoffs.

"People made more out of that play than I did," Simpson said. "I make mistakes today that a lot of people don't know about. All they will remember is the big play I made."

Romes got the Bills on the scoreboard in just 16 seconds. Ervin Parker stripped the ball from Bruce Harper, Romes picked it up on one bounce at the Jets' 26 and was in the end zone before anyone knew what had happened. Only Miami's Nat Moore, who had run an opening kickoff back 89 yards in 15 seconds against Oakland in a 1974 game, scored more quickly in a playoff.

Then Ferguson went to work with his TD passes of 50 and 26 yards to Lewis around Nick Mike-Mayer's 29-yard field goal.

Todd's 30-yard scoring pass to Mickey Shuler started the Jets' comeback, then Pat Leahy kicked field goals of 26 and 19 yards, the second one raising a few eyebrows since it came on a fourth-and-goal at the 2-yard line in the third quarter.

"It was a two-touchdown difference," Jets Coach Walt Michaels explained. "We were going to need a third score in any event."

After Cribbs' scoring run 4:44 into the fourth period, Todd brought the Jets back with drives of 80 yards capped by his 30-yard TD pass to Bobby Jones, and 58 yards climaxed by Kevin Long's 1-yard plunge. And when the Jets' defense held the Bills again, he moved New York from its own 20 to the Buffalo 11 before Simpson stepped between receiver Derrick Gaffney and the football.

"When the play started," Simpson said, "I looked into the backfield and just read Todd's eyes. He was following the receiver all the way. I just stepped up and it was in my hands."

"It was a bad read by me," said Todd. "I should have thrown the ball out of bounds. I didn't see him — not until I threw the ball."

For Bryant—What Might've Been

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — As September gave way to October, three runnings backs were the talk of college football — Marcus Allen of Southern California, Herschel Walker of Georgia and Kelvin Bryant of North Carolina.

Allen went on to set a national single-season rushing record, sophomore Walker eclipsed his brilliant freshman statistics and Bryant, who scored an amazing 15 touchdowns in his first three games, went to the sidelines with a knee injury his next time out.

"If I had stayed healthy, I think I could have gotten just as many yards as they did," says Bryant, who is close to 100 percent again for 11th-ranked North Carolina's Gator Bowl clash tonight with Arkansas.

"I'm just trying to keep all that in the back of my mind and finish the year the best I can. Maybe I'll say to myself what might have been, but not to anybody else."

Judge for yourself what might have been. Bryant opened up with 211 yards and six touchdowns against East Carolina, and followed that with 136 yards and five TDs against Miami of Ohio and 173 yards and four touchdowns against Boston College.

He was the national scoring leader and third-leading rusher in the nation, and seemed about to go higher when he went down with torn cartilage and a sprained knee ligament after gaining 46 yards on just five carries against Georgia Tech.

"The start was kind of hard for me to believe at first," says Bryant, who averaged 94.5 yards on just 16 carries a game a year ago while splitting time with Amos Lawrence.

The knee injury kept Bryant out for four games. He did not have to go under the knife but was just a shadow of his old self when he tried to come back against Clemson — "I didn't have all my flexibility back" — and managed just 31 yards on 13 rushes.

But the rest of the season resembled the start — 171 yards and a touchdown against Virginia, 247 yards and two scores against Duke. Only Allen (23), Walker (20) and Eric Dickerson of Southern Methodist (19) topped Bryant's 18 touchdowns, and in the five games for which he was relatively healthy, he averaged 187.6 yards, a pace which would have left him behind only Allen at the end of the season.

"I could feel the knee getting better each game," Bryant says. "It felt good against Duke and it's pretty good now."

although it gets sore now and then after a workout."

Coach Dick Crum has no doubts about Bryant's ability.

"Allen and Walker are both exceptional players," he says. "But I feel Kelvin's in their class."

Jets Up Again, Down Again In Loss To Buffalo

NEW YORK (AP) — For the New York Jets, it was not unlike the boxer who dances to the middle of the ring at the bell and before he can get his dukes up — bam! — a roundhouse haymaker sends him crashing to the canvas.

He shakes the cobwebs out of his head, rises unsteadily and — boom! — down again. Up again, down again, up again — bang! — where are all of those shots coming from?

In the National Football League's AFC wild-card playoff game in Shea Stadium Sunday, the Buffalo Bills struck with such suddenness and deadliness that the New York Jets found themselves down 24-0 with only a third of the game played.

Did Coach Walt Michaels of the Jets panic and throw in the towel?

No, sir. "It's like dice," said the son of an immigrant Polish miner, "and you don't feel you can always roll seven, you just don't shoot." So the Jets kept bouncing back like a rubber ball and made a game of it on a raw, drippy afternoon although the Bills prevailed 31-27 in an old-fashioned cliff-hanger.

The comeback Jets were 10 yards away from a possible winning touchdown when Buffalo's Bill Simpson, a free safety who was a goat of the Bills' playoff loss to San Diego a year ago, redeemed himself by snaring an errant Richard Todd pass and snuffed out the Jets' last flickering hope of duplicating the Joe Namath Super Bowl heroics of 1969.

"I had a knot in my stomach," said the Bills' fine quarterback, Joe Ferguson. "I said, 'Oh, no, this can't happen to us now.'"

Mark Gastineau, the 6-5, 276-pound co-chairman of the Jets' notorious New York Sack Exchange, was sighted on the Jets' bench in those final moments, eyes closed, hands folded as if in prayer.

"Please excuse me, I just don't feel like talking football now," he said later, seeking solitude in the locker room. His sacking partner, 272-pound Joe Klecko, could hardly stand on a swollen ankle.

"I am physically and emotionally drained," said Ferguson. "I started off great and then went bad. I threw some terrible passes. I finished at the back door."

A distraught Todd rushed to the sanctuary of the off-limits training room. "I had to be depended upon, but I didn't come through," he said quietly to a pursuing newsmen.

Technically, it wasn't a great game. There were stark errors in judgment and execution on both sides — fumbles, centers bouncing the ball back to kickers, perfect passes sliding through slippery hands.

Wesley Walker, the Jets' ace wide receiver, twice dropped passes in the end zone. Teammate Bruce Harper fumbled the opening kickoff and the Bills' Charles Romes was in the end zone with the first touchdown in 16 seconds, a second off the all-time playoff record.

Buffalo needed only 55 seconds to score its second touchdown and 51 seconds its third. By this time, the Jets were glassy-eyed.

Trailing 24-10 late in the third period, needing two TDs to tie, the Jets drove to the Bills' one. There in a state of confusion they called a timeout, lost a yard and finally settled for a field goal when a touchdown was desperately needed.

If anything, the game proved that there is dullness in perfection, while excitement and great fan stimuli in human error. Overall, it was a poorly played game, with the Bills deserving their slender victory, but the fans loved every scrambling, hectic moment of it.

Giants Have 'Time Of Their Lives'

New York Captures First Playoff Win In Over 2 Decades

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Making the playoffs for the first time in 18 years was an uplifting event for the New York Giants, but winning their first postseason game in more than two decades was even better.

"I was having the time of my life out there," said center Jim Clark after the Giants topped the Philadelphia Eagles 27-21 in a National Football League wild card playoff game Sunday.

The Giants had been absent from post-season play since 1963 and had not won a playoff game since 1958, when they tied Cleveland for the Eastern Conference title and won the playoff game with the Browns 10-0 prior to their famous 23-17 overtime loss to the Baltimore Colts.

Sunday's victory also sent the Giants on to San Francisco, where they'll meet the 49ers, the National Football Conference Western Division champions, in a second-round playoff game next Sunday.

The 49ers, idle this weekend, beat the Giants 17-10 several weeks ago in San Francisco and have a 13-3 record, the best in the NFL.

"I was getting tired out there, and I'm glad it's over," said Clark, the old man on the Giants at age 34. "But it couldn't be a bigger win for me."

Defensive end Gary Jeter, who suffered through five seasons of losing, said the victory "means respectability" for the Giants, now 10-7 for the season.

"There have been so many atrocities in the past," Jeter said. "Fumbles, interceptions — something would always go wrong with the New York Giants. Not now."

Six-year veteran free safety back Beasley Reece led the back-slapping in the Giants' dressing room.

"I'm absolutely ecstatic. I can't even control myself," he said. "I can't wait to get on the phone and call my relatives. I've got to be one of the happiest men in the world right now."

"It's hard to comprehend winning a playoff game," said All-Pro rookie linebacker Lawrence Taylor. "I never dreamed of something like this."

"To be honest, at the beginning of the season, I didn't think we'd be here," added another first-year linebacker, Byron Hunt.

And Brian Kelley, a nine-year pro, tried to put the game into perspective, saying, "It's been a long wait, so the feeling was that once we got here, let's do something with it. You never know when you'll make it back (to the playoffs)."

Philadelphia fell far short in its bid to make it back to the Super Bowl, in which the Eagles lost to the Oakland Raiders last January.

"There is no tomorrow. We just lost," said gum Eagles cornerback Herman Edwards. "This is the bottom line."

Philadelphia, which trailed 27-7 at the half, rallied for two second-half touchdowns, the last one coming with 2:51 left in the game. But the Giants were then able to run out the clock.

"We worked hard to get there, but so did the Giants," said Philadelphia Coach Dick Vermeil. "They deserve to go to San Francisco, and we don't."

Wake Forest Battles LSU In 'Sugar' Opener

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Louisiana State University Coach Dale Brown was optimistic — as always — as he prepared to send his young little team against big, experienced Wake Forest in Monday's opening game of the Sugar Bowl basketball tournament.

"David and Goliath is the truth," Brown said. Houston, 7-1, 18th-ranked and the tournament favorite, meets Purdue, 3-4, in the second game of the opening night at the Louisiana Superdome.

The championship and consolation games are scheduled for Tuesday night.

LSU returned only two of its first six players from the team that finished fourth in the Final Four last year. Wake Forest returns four starters from its 22-7 team of last season.

Wake Forest is 6-1. LSU is 2-3.

"They are the most veteran team in the tournament," Brown said. "They were ranked as high as sixth in some preseason polls, and almost everybody had them in their Top 20."

"They're a tough rebounding team, but everybody's a tough rebounding team for us. Briarwood Elementary would be a tough rebounding team for us."

Freshman center Ray Bomer, 6-foot-10, teams with forwards Leonard Mitchell, a 6-7 sophomore, and Howard Carter, a 6-5 junior, in LSU's front line.

Wake Forest's front line is much bigger: forward Guy Morgan, 6-8, already the 12th leading rebounder in 75 years of Wake Forest basketball; center Jim Johnstone, 6-11, and sophomore forward Anthony Teachey, 6-9, and the only new face in the Deacons' starting lineup.

Brown doesn't like to hear this season described as a rebuilding year for LSU.

"We are picked not to do anything, and I could just rest with that," he said. "But I defy that. This is not a rebuilding year, it's a re-adjustment year."

The adjustments could include a shuffled starting lineup for Monday night's game.

Brown said he was considering moving Carter, LSU's leading scorer and its major threat from outside, to the off-guard spot in place of 6-2 sophomore Johnny Jones. He said he would then use 6-8 freshman Stefford Johnson at the forward spot and bring 6-8 junior Tyrone Black in at center to replace Bomer.

As Brown tinkered with his lineup in pre-tournament practice, the name that came up repeatedly was that of Wake Forest center Johnstone.

"That's where No. 54 will be," said assistant coach Jordy Hultberg, pointing to a spot just outside the lane to the right of the basket. "He'll kill us, if you let him rebound."

Brown said LSU would have to counter Wake Forest's superior size by keeping the big men away from the basket — something his team failed to do last week in a five-point loss to UCLA before a crowd of 28,880.

But he said his team is maturing rapidly and learning from its mistakes.

"Time is our ally. We're going to be all right," he said. "Hey, we are all right."

Changes Big Part Of NASCAR

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — On the NASCAR Winston Cup racing circuit, the only thing that changes hands faster than the lead may be the steering wheel.

In recent years, as National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing season neared a close, drivers have scrambled from one team to another. In the 1981 version of "musical rides," Bobby Allison, Dale Earnhardt and Benny Parsons mounted the merry-go-round, setting off a chain reaction of change.

Allison's move to the DiGard team in Charlotte for 1982 will be his third switch in five years. He spent 1978-80 with Bud Moore's Spartanburg outfit and drove for Ranier Racing of Charlotte this season.

Parsons will leave Moore's stable to replace Allison on Harry Ranier's team, led by Waddell Wilson. The previous season, Parsons was with M.C. Anderson.

Earnhardt will ride with Moore, forsaking the Rod Osterlund-J.D. Stacy and Richard Childress organizations after one season.

And Ricky Rudd is expected to complete the circle by joining Childress, if adequate sponsorship can be found.

Driver Buddy Baker has been with four teams since 1975, but he said the constant flux of drivers is may hurt the reputation of racing.

"Thank God for major-league baseball and its managerial changes — particularly George Steinbrenner and his parade with the Yankees — and professional football with its firing of coaches," Baker said. "Otherwise, we might be the laughing stock of professional sports."

The reasons given for the moves are as varied as each driver's history.

Allison said his move from Ranier to DiGard was because the former team "wasn't aggressive enough in 1981." Earnhardt, the 1980 Winston Cup champion, said he was disillusioned by Osterlund's sale of the team to Stacy.

Baker summed up the situation. "I've made some voluntary moves and some involuntary ones during my career," he said. "The times I went willingly, well, it was always because I thought I could better myself."

Humpy Wheeler, president of Charlotte Motor Speedway, put it a little more bluntly.

"One word describes all the changes we see near the end of every season," he said. "That word is money. They're all looking for that $800,000 year like (Darrell) Waltrip had with (Junior) Johnson this season."

Ford: Must Ignore Distractions

MIAMI (AP) — Clemson Coach Danny Ford says one of the key factors in Friday's Orange Bowl matchup between his top-ranked Tigers and No. 4 Nebraska could be how well his team can deal with all the hoopla that goes along with playing in a major bowl game.

"Oh, there are distractions, and you try to protect the players from them," said Ford, who is holding closed workouts in preparation for the annual New Year's Night game.

"But you're always going to have some at a bowl game — families, fans, so many places you have to go. Miami itself is a distraction. We aren't fortunate enough — or unfortunate enough — to come from a big city."

Although he is stressing the need to block out distractions, Ford said none of them is great enough to actually decide the game.

"The key is who is best prepared and who makes the fewest mistakes. I guess everything that can be tried has been tried by coaches over the years — going to the site before or after Christmas, easy practices, hard practices. I don't know if there really is a method that fits all teams," said Ford.

A Clemson victory could give the Tigers their first national championship, but Ford admits that his first bowl victory in the 1978 Gator Bowl still remains special to him.

"I don't know if any bowl victory could match my first one as a head coach in '78," said Ford, who at age 30 took over the Tigers' reigns when Charley Pell resigned 11 days before the Jacksonville classic and guided Clemson to a 17-15 upset of Ohio State. Woody Hayes, the Buckeyes' legendary coach, was fired after he punched a Clemson defender in that game.

"The thing is, this game (Orange Bowl) can't detract from our season, no matter what happens. What we have is a chance to add to it," said Ford. "I don't know if we're better than Nebraska or not. All we'll do is try to play our game. And if things don't work out — well, we'll still be proud."

Nebraska, winner of its last eight games, is holding workouts at the University of Miami. The Cornhuskers' sessions are also closed to the media and public.

"It's a great opportunity to play the No. 1 team, and you don't get that chance too often," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said of the Orange Bowl. "We started off shaky, but we've won eight in a row, so we have a good head of momentum. Of course, you can't do better than 11-0. We're just glad to be here."

Tolley Resigns As Elon Head Coach

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry Tolley, who led Elon College football teams to National Association for Intercollegiate Athletics titles in 1980 and 1981, resigned today as head coach.

But Tolley said he would remain at the 2,500-enrollment school in another capacity, which is expected to include fundraising.

Tolley, 39, announced his resignation in a joint statement with Elon President Fred Young and Athletic Director Alan White. It was nine days ago that Elon defeated Pittsburg State of Kansas 3-0 for the 1981 NAAIA championship.

"My decision should have come as no great surprise to anyone," said Tolley, when reached at Jacksonville, Fla. where he will watch the Gator Bowl game tonight. "I have mentioned several times in the past year that I never had the desire to coach football all of my life and that by the time I reached 40 I would like to find another career."

In his five years as head coach at Elon, Tolley's teams earned a 49-10-2 record, making him the NAAIA's second winningest active coach at the time of his resignation. Only three active National Collegiate Athletic Association coaches boast winning percentages higher than Tolley's 80.6.

His post-season record of eight wins and one loss and two national championships in a five-year period is unsurpassed and Tolley was named NAAIA Coach of the Year in 1980.

Welsh: Ohio State Bigger, Stronger

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — George Welsh insists Navy must duplicate its performance in the Michigan game to spring a Liberty Bowl upset on Ohio State.

The Midshipmen, appearing in their third bowl game in the last four seasons, are playing for the final time under Welsh, Navy's winningest coach with a 55-45-1 record.

Welsh, after nine Navy seasons, has accepted the job of rebuilding the struggling University of Virginia football program.

Navy, 7-3-1, rate a 14-point underdog against Ohio State, the Big Ten co-champion with an 8-3 overall record.

"Is that all?" questioned Welsh.

"Realistically, we have to play this game like we played at Michigan. It was one of our best games. Our defense held up the whole game. We controlled the second half," he said.

Michigan, a 14-9 victim of Ohio State in the final regular-season game, beat Navy 21-16 in the Midshipmen's third contest of 1981.

Welsh compares Ohio State with Notre Dame, which whipped the Midshipmen 38-0.

"They were the only team that really beat us. They got a lot of our people hurt. We couldn't handle them," he said.

"Ohio State is bigger and stronger than us. We have to be prepared to play our toughest, our most disciplined game," Welsh said.

Navy may have to defend a new passing combination — Art Schlichter to Bob Atha.

Bruce was to decide after practice today on whether to start Atha as a wide receiver rather than year-long regular Cedric Anderson.

Atha, a senior from Worthington, Ohio, has served as Schlichter's backup at quarterback for the past two seasons. He also handles the team's kickoffs, field goal and extra point attempts.

Bruce says the move was made to give Chicago freshman Mike Tomczak, the heir-apparent to Schlichter, more work as the second-string quarterback, and to reward the versatile Atha's contribution.

Of Atha, he said, "He has great speed. He has great hands. He has great versatility. He has everything."

As a senior, Atha has caught just one pass for four yards. He lined up as a flanker on one other play and ran the football.

Anderson, who missed Sunday's workout because of a late flight from his Apopka, Fla., home, ranks as the Buckeyes' No. 3 receiver this season with 26 receptions for 507 yards and four touchdowns.

Bruce anticipates another lineup change because of an injury. Sophomore Jeff Cisco or junior Mark Eberts likely will replace regular Shaun Gayle at cornerback. Gayle has an injury to his left foot.

HOW TO MAKE A TAX-DEDUCTIBLE CONTRIBUTION TO YOURSELF. SM

Beginning January 1, the new tax law makes it possible for you to deposit up to $2,000 a year in a Wachovia Individual Retirement Account and deduct it from your taxable income... even if you are presently covered by a company retirement program.

You can deposit the money in large or small amounts, as often as you choose, whenever you choose. Your interest is based on money market rates and it accumulates tax-free until you start making withdrawals. When you begin withdrawing from your account, each withdrawal will be taxed as ordinary income. Of course, the law requires penalties on withdrawals before you reach age 59 1/2.

What it all adds up to is an opportunity for any employed individual to put something aside for the future, and reduce his or her income taxes at the same time.

Here's how much a Wachovia IRA can reduce your 1982 taxes.

If your 1982 taxable income is approximately:	Your tax brackets probably are:		If you put $2000 into a Wachovia IRA, you can probably reduce your 1982 income taxes by:	If your working spouse also contributes $2000, together you can probably reduce 1982 taxes by:
	Federal	North Carolina
$20,000	22%	7%	$580 REDUCTION	$1,160 REDUCTION
$29,000	29%	7%	$720 REDUCTION	$1,440 REDUCTION
$39,000	39%	7%	$920 REDUCTION	$1,840 REDUCTION
$64,000	49%	7%	$1,120 REDUCTION	$2,240 REDUCTION

The above examples are based on the most recent IRS and N.C. tax information available assuming a married couple filing a joint return. While deposits to an IRA are tax-deductible in the year they are made, these funds are taxed as ordinary income when they are withdrawn from the account. Substantial tax penalties required for withdrawals prior to age 59 1/2. Federal regulations also require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal of a time deposit.

You can start earning tax-deferred interest right now. Deposits to your Wachovia Individual Retirement Account start earning interest from the day you open your account. Yet you pay no taxes on that interest — or your deposits — until you begin your withdrawals. And if, like most people, you begin withdrawals when you retire, you will probably be in a lower tax bracket.

Why not see a Personal Banker this week about opening a Wachovia I.R.A.? And start enjoying your tax break now.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K5 ♠AJ106 ♠AQ5 ♠A873
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Dble
Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—There is/ not much to choose between a raise to three clubs and a bid of two no trump. However, with such excellent club support and only a single stopper in the enemy suit, we prefer the raise of partner's suit. Naturally, if partner shows any sign of life, try no trump at your next turn.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK954 ♠KJ82 ♠K85 ♠7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Dble
Pass 2 ♠ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Partner has not promised much, but he must have something. You have prime defensive values against a heart contract, so we suggest a double for penalties. Don't worry about the opponents escaping to another suit at the three-level—partner rates to have length in the minors, and he should have something to say at that level.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠4 ♠AQ84 ♠103 ♠KJ762
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?
What do you bid now?
A.—A treacherous hand. Partner obviously has slam intentions, but it looks as if the hands might not fit well. If you make any forward-going move, such as four clubs, you could easily get too high. For that reason, we suggest you bid three no trump, despite your unbalanced hand and lack of a diamond stopper. You want to dampen partner's ardor, and he surely has values in diamonds.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J5 ♠AQ ♠AQJ9873 ♠AQ
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ 4 ♠ 4 ♠ Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have a strong hand and partner could act freely at the four-level despite the fact that he is missing two of the three top honors in his suit, so slam must be a strong possibility. But don't be too aggressive—remember, partner was bidding under the pressure of the preempt and your queen of clubs is a wasted value. Cue-bid five clubs. If partner does no more than return to five hearts, accept his decision gracefully.

Q.5—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠5 ♠J98542 ♠1073 ♠Q76
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♠ Dble
4 ♠ 4 ♠ Dble Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—You have warned partner that you have long hearts and little in the way of defense when you elected to make the four heart preempt. So respect partner's decision. He should be able to set four spades in his own hand without relying on heart tricks, and your queen of clubs should be a helpful card.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠764 ♠93 ♠KQ109763 ♠5
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
3 NT Pass 6 ♠ Pass
6 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—You have already described your hand, so pass. Partner surely has the ace of diamonds to run your suit. Apparently, he feels it necessary to have his hand as declarer, probably to protect some holding like K x from a lead through.

Hoagy Carmichael Is Dead At Age 82

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Oscar-winning songwriter Hoagy Carmichael, who made gentle wryness his trademark and turned out perennial favorites such as "Stardust" and "Georgia on My Mind," is dead at age 82.

Carmichael, who also sang and acted, was rushed Sunday morning to Eisenhower Memorial Center where he died of a heart ailment in the emergency room, said hospital spokeswoman Helen Eckert.

Carmichael's body is being shipped back to his birthplace, Bloomington, Ind., said Dick Jensen of the Palm Springs Mortuary.

Jensen said the funeral was set tentatively for Jan. 4.

Carmichael was interested in music as a youth, but became a lawyer for job security. He dabbled in composing, however, and soon turned to it full time.

"Stardust," his first hit, was a romantic, dreamy song that violated the rules of popular songwriting at the time — it ran 64 bars when most publishers insisted 32 was the limit.

He adopted a bittersweet or down-home, folksy tone in later composition, which had more of the Deep South in them than Carmichael's native Indiana.

Many — such as "Lazybones," "Small Fry," "Rockin' Chair" and "In the Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening," an Academy Award winner — reflected his characteristic wryness.

He played the role of a cool piano player in "To Have and Have Not," a 1944 film that starred Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall. He also played in a variety of other films and television shows.

One night early in his career he was having dinner with Don Redman, musical director of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, when he was asked about his activities. He pulled out a new instrumental work with no words, only the title, "Stardust."

"I wasn't sure what it meant, but it just seemed like a nice title," he said later.

The first recording of "Stardust" was made by Redman in October 1928 at a fairly fast tempo. But it didn't become popular until Isham Jones' New York dance orchestra recorded it, featuring Victor Young's violin. Mitchell Parish added lyrics. Louis Armstrong and Bing Crosby recorded it, and the song was on its way.

Carmichael sang with Armstrong in "Rocking Chair" in 1929, one of the first hits by an interracial vocal team.

It wasn't until 1951, however, that he landed an Academy Award. "In the Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening" was in the film "Here Comes the Groom." Johnny Mercer wrote the lyrics.

In his later years, when he was known for being tanned and dapper, he said songwriting kept him young. When he turned 70, he said, "I'm too busy following the melodies in my heart to feel it."

In 1936, Carmichael married Ruth Meinardi and they had two sons, Hoagy Bix and Randy. Both survive him.

His wife obtained a divorce in 1956, testifying her husband had been "cold and indifferent" to her for three years. Carmichael married a second time in 1977 to Wanda McKay, who also survives him.

Gorgeous Photography In 'Bush Doctor' Film

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Bush Doctor" is a film worth seeing without the sound. Shot in Kenya, it's a beautiful African travelogue, a National Geographic of wildlife, landscape and breathtaking scenes of sunsets and sunrises.

But with the sound on, it's just a trite, flimsy movie that gets in the way of gorgeous photography.

You can't blame the networks this time. This is one of Liberty Mutual's periodic forays into TV. The insurance company buys a project, hands it to a producer (Robert Halmi of "Nurse") and then sells it to a nationwide syndicate of stations.

Then Liberty Mutual gets to sound dignified in six minutes of commercials during the one-hour broadcast on 100 stations next week.

The movie opens with a busload of African children singing on their way to school. As nature's finest roam the bush around them, the viewer is struck by the visual excitement of Africa, so different than the experience of American children, whose concept of animals is the house-and-garden variety.

In a normal network movie of two hours, the story can wander awhile, but not here. Almost immediately, the bus overturns. Besides the injuries inflicted by the accident, some children are mangled by lions, something we're spared seeing.

There's a need for immediate medical attention, but not enough doctors. The call goes out to a vacationing American doctor, Robert Marshall. It's Hugh O'Brian, ol' Wyatt Earp. But instead of a six-shooter, he's equipped with a snarl and a smirk.

Through the tedious first-grade technique of constant flashbacks, the message becomes clear that Dr. Marshall suffered a trauma. A brilliant reconstructive surgeon, he was not able to help his daughter after she went through the windshield in a car crash.

In the flashbacks, we're not spared the unnecessary, gory details, nor do we miss Marshall's agony at the operating table. All of which has soured Marshall on the practice of medicine, and he snidely resists enlistment attempts by the American mission doctor, James Stone, nicely played by Jack Hedley.

Stone eventually persuades him by suggesting the plane supposed to fly him to his next watering hole could be grounded by red tape. Marshall is bitter and pouts like a small child, but a precocious one. He turns out to be a crackerjack surgeon.

O'Brian seems to me going through the motions and his deadbeat cynicism is just spoken words, and not very convincing. In contrast to this downer is Katherine Justice as Sam, the medical assistant who is joyous in her dedication to being in Africa and doing more than punching a clock.

Again, time is of the essence here, so the two opposites begin falling in love. Talk about trite movie-making. They're watching two hippos mating and are almost enraptured enough to steal their first kiss.

When a young African girl is severely injured in another car accident, this story gets predictable again: Marshall resists, there are more flashbacks and he shows more surgical brilliance.

But he's not exactly flushed with the joy of saving a life. After he expresses more bitterness after the successful surgery, Sam slaps him. Finally, he explains why he's such a cactus: "I couldn't save the one life that meant something to me."

Having unburdened himself, he mellow and grapples with whether to practice medicine and smiling in Africa. When he and Sam run to each other, arms open, with the camera cutting back and forth to each face, the decision is made. Hollywood comes to Africa.

At least Hollywood didn't try to improve on the African sun, an incredibly huge ball of blaze and a major asset of "Bush Doctor."

Resume Tale Of Witch Mountain

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Eddie Albert and Efram Zimbalist, Jr., who rarely makes television appearances, will guest star in "Beyond Witch Mountain," a one-hour Disney film for CBS-TV.

Albert will re-create his role of Jason O'Day, a retiree who helps two young orphans with supernatural powers escape the clutches of a ruthless millionaire played by Zimbalist.

The fantasy drama resumes the story of the magical youngsters first established in the Disney feature film, "Escape From Witch Mountain."

Carol In Film On Alcoholics

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Carol Burnett, whose parents died of alcoholism, will star in a two-hour CBS-TV drama based on a true story of a woman who recovers from alcoholism and starts the first recovery house for women alcoholics.

Titled "Beatrice," the drama will be directed by Lamont Johnson from a script by Mitzie Welch based on the life of Beatrice Jorgensen, now 75 and still active in the work she began 30 years ago.

The TV film will be produced at The Burbank Studios and on locations in and around Los Angeles.

Social Security Chief Rejects General Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Raising the payroll tax or using general tax revenues to bail out the Social Security system would mean "you can say goodbye" to the financially ailing program, says Social Security Commissioner John A. Svahn.

Even if the National Commission on Social Security Reform, which Reagan created last fall, recommends those possible solutions, the administration will remain opposed to them, Svahn says.

passed a stopgap bill that preserves the $122 payment for the three million beneficiaries now receiving the monthly minimum benefit and lets the dwindling old age and survivors trust fund borrow next year from Social Security's disability and Medicare funds.

Svahn, however, believes Congress should not have maintained the minimum payment because "it's an artificial floor, a welfare benefit."

Defending Reagan's original proposal to slash early retirement benefits, at age 62, from 80 percent to 55 percent of full benefits, Svahn said "the big bugaboo" was calling for the reduction to start Jan. 1.

"The whole criticism was around the timing and not on the provision itself," said Svahn.

Svahn said Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security, stirred up "no flap at all" by proposing to lower early retirement benefits to 64 percent and to raise the age for full benefits to 68 by the year 2000. Pickle's bill was defeated in committee.

Young workers should "recognize that Social Security isn't going to carry the full freight when they get ready to retire," said the 38-year-old Svahn, the youngest Social Security chief in history.

An outspoken conservative with a penchant for publicity, Svahn was an architect of the welfare reforms that Reagan instituted as governor of California.

Several Democrats of the 15-member bipartisan presidential commission, including Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., and former Social Security Commissioner Robert M. Ball, favor some form of loans or direct use of general revenues for Social Security, either as a back-up or to help pay Medicare costs.

But Svahn said injecting general revenues into Social Security would turn it "into a welfare program."

"Right now that's definitely our position. You can't open that box. You just can't. If you do, you can say goodbye to Social Security..." Svahn said in an interview last week. "It's our policy that we not raise taxes and that we not use general revenues to bail out Social Security."

President Reagan "took on a bum rap" on his proposals last May to cut early retirement and other benefits, Svahn said. Reagan withdrew the proposals in September and created the commission to come up with long-term solutions to the system's problems.

As a short-term measure earlier this month, Congress

Coconut No. 34 For Ed Clinch

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — has never been able to figure out the identity of the benefactor.
 This year's coconut was delivered by local television weatherman Roland Keith

WALK ON THE BEACH — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and his wife, Hannelore stroll along the sands at the Sundial Beach and Tennis Resort on Sanibel Island, Fla. Saturday. Need More People In Field Of Robots

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The United States is ahead of the Soviet Union in the technology of robots, but a lack of engineers is putting this country at a disadvantage, according to a university specialist.

"Engineering manpower is crucial to us," Dr. Delbert Tesar, director of the University of Florida's Center for Intelligent Machines and Robotics, said recently. "Of all of the bachelor of science degrees given in this country every year, only 5 percent are in engineering. In the eastern bloc, it's 40 percent."

"The American military uses 25 percent of our yearly production of 60,000 engineers, while the Russian military system uses 60 percent of their yearly production of 300,000 engineers," said Tesar, also a professor of mechanical engineering.

Tesar visited the Soviet Union in June and toured several research centers involved with robotics. For the most part, he said, the robots he saw were comparable to those in the U.S. about 10 years ago. But he said he believes the Soviets are not lagging in all areas.

A group at the Cybernetics Institute in Kiev is conducting advanced research on artificial intelligence — that is, duplicating human perception and decision-making, he said.

The Soviets also have been working for 15 to 20 years on locomotion, while work here has been sporadic.

The major American advantage is in the area of component technology, he said.

"Things we take for granted, like precision electro-mechanical components, microprocessors and servo-valves for example, they don't have," Tesar said.

Repudiates Report Marriage On Rocks

LONDON (AP) — Despite reports that he was having an affair, Capt. Mark Phillips says he and his wife, Princess Anne, are "close enough" that they never doubted one another.

Phillips, 33, who is married to the only daughter of Queen Elizabeth II, denied in an interview published today that his marriage was on the rocks, as newspaper reports had said.

Some reports claimed Phillips developed a close relationship with Angela Rippon, 36, the first female news reader for the British Broadcasting Corp. She was writing a book about horses with Phillips.

In an interview with a British magazine, Woman's Own, Phillips said the reports were "pure and utter fabrication."

"It caused a lot of hurt at the end of the day," Phillips was quoted as saying.

"The whole thing was so ridiculous ... Angela was writing a book about me. Luckily, Anne and I are close enough so there never were any doubts between ourselves."

Phillips said Anne, 31, and Ms. Rippon, who is married to businessman Christopher Dare, became "quite good friends" when Ms. Rippon stayed at their home southwest of London.

Phillips said he agreed to the book because it was a good idea and he needed the money. Phillips runs a farm at Gatcombe Park. Anne's state allowance was increased in March to $190,000 a year.

Didn't Mind Losing Holidays

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 21-year-old victim of "elephant man's disease" who recently underwent extensive corrective surgery says she really didn't mind spending the holidays in the hospital.

Lisa H., a false name adopted by the patient at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, had large disfiguring tumors removed from her face in a pioneering operation Dec. 9. A fever kept her in the hospital on Christmas instead of at home as doctors had hoped.

"My doctors are wonderful. The nurses are excellent. They're all terrific," Lisa said in a prepared statement.

"I know my family will come to see me, so I don't really mind."
 Hospital officials said Lisa's face is swollen, discolored and aching, but that messages from hundreds of well-wishers have lifted her spirits.

The note that usually is attached said this time that the tradition is being carried on by a daughter of the original sender.

Clinch said he suspects the gifts are reminders of his service during World War II in the South Sea Islands.

In the past, the coconut has been delivered by the Peoria Police Department canine corps, paramedics, a skydiver and the Bradley University basketball team.

Phelps Chosen Acting Director ECU Continuing Education Div.

ECU News Bureau
Herman D. Phelps, professor and associate director of Continuing Education, East Carolina University, will become acting director of the Division of Continuing Education effective Jan. 1.

HERMAN D. PHELPS

As the chief administrative officer of the Division of Continuing Education, Phelps will be responsible of one of the largest extension programs in southeastern United States. Graduate, undergraduate, and non-credit programs are offered at a number of locations in eastern North Carolina. In addition, the University College (evening undergraduate program on campus) a sub-unit of the division designed primarily to serve adults in the Greenville area.

The appointment was announced jointly by Chancellor Thomas B. Brewer and Dr. Robert H. Maier, vice chancellor for academic affairs. In the meantime, search will continue for a permanent director to succeed Dr. David J. Middleton who has requested a return to full-time teaching.

"Herman Phelps is well suited for this responsibility," Maier said. "He has many years of experience in the field of continuing education, is a highly competent administrator, and is well respected by his colleagues at East Carolina University and elsewhere."

Phelps is a native of Greenville and has served on the ECU Continuing Education staff for nearly 20 years. Upon joining the ECU staff, he served as director of the ECU Resident Center at Camp LeJeune. Prior to his appointment to ECU, he served as associate professor of business administration at Campbell University for 10 years.

Phelps served six years on the board of directors of the Association for Continuing Higher Education. He was awarded a certificate for meritorious service by that organization in 1980. He also served as president of the National Association of Continuing Professional Education during the 1979-80 school year.

He is current chairperson for the Independent Study Advisory Committee for the University of North Carolina system. In addition, he is an active member of the North Carolina Adult Education Association.

Phelps received his B.S. and M.A. degrees from ECU and has completed additional graduate study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He recently retired from the Air Force Reserve with the rank of Colonel after serving 32 years.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Agri. Ext. Agent

Over the past several years, wood has become a very popular source of home heating fuel. In some neighborhoods on a cold night, wood smoke hangs thick in the air. This smoke can become a nuisance in the immediate area and smoke can cause problems that must be dealt with at the source—the wood stove itself.

Pitt County fire officials estimate that there will be over 150 more fires this year than last year. Many of these fires will be caused by improper maintenance and operation of wood-burning appliances. Some problems with wood stoves are the result of poor installation. Setting a stove too close to draperies, paper or other combustible material, loose sections of flue pipe and faulty smoke alarms are part of poor installations.

The buildup of creosote in chimneys and flues is the primary cause of wood stove fires. Creosote must be removed periodically when it builds up. If creosote accumulates inside chimney flues, there is a chance that a hot fire may ignite it and result in a chimney fire.

Chimney fires are often spectacular and frightening. There is a rush of air into the stove, often making a loud "whoosh." The stove itself may shudder and shake and throw off tremendous heat. Since the creosote has ignited inside the chimney, there is often a Roman candle of fire shooting from the chimney outside. The result of this type of fire can be cracked masonry in the chimney, an ignited roof, smoke in the attic or house and combustion of wood, paper or furniture adjacent to the stove.

Creosote is the unburned gases and fog of unburned tar-like liquids which condense out of the wood smoke onto cooler surfaces. It is composed of many compounds and its composition is not well known. It can be found inside some stoves and anywhere along the flue or chimney. The amount of creosote deposited depends upon several factors—the density of the smoke and fumes from the fire and the temperature of the surface upon which it is condensing. Highest smoke densities occur when a large amount of wood in relatively small pieces is added to a hot bed of coals with the air inlets closed. Also, the type of wood being burned has a considerable bearing upon creosote buildup. Dry hardwoods, have, in theory, the smallest creosote producing potential and green softwoods the most. But no wood eliminates creosote production entirely.

Creosote builds up more during low-temperature burns overnight when the fire is more or less smoldering. When there is more air available for combustion, burning is more complete and there's less creosote deposited.

There are creosote inhibitors available. These chemical chimney cleaners may or may not be effective. The chimney can be inspected and cleaned by most wood stove owners. A stiff wire brush, a heavy chain or burlap sack stuffed and hung from a rope may be worked through the chimney to remove the creosote deposits. Also, commercial chimney sweeps are available to do the job. Checking the stove should be done on a frequent and regular basis, certainly at the beginning and end of wood burning season.

If a chimney fire does start, it is advisable to shut off the air supply to the stove first. It may be a good idea to wet the roof with water and move combustible items away from the stove.

Information on wood stove safety and installation is available at your county agricultural extension office free of charge. Persons may obtain this info by calling 752-2334 or visiting the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, second floor of the county office building.

Post Holiday Sales 'Brisk'

By The Associated Press
North Carolina merchants are gloating over a weekend sales bonanza most described as unusually profitable—even though post-Christmas sales generally draw big crowds.

Some store managers estimated they had 20 percent to 25 percent more customers than they had last year on the day after Christmas. And they said more customers than usual were there to buy instead of exchange Christmas gifts.

"Very, very busy—super," said sales clerk Claudia Madigan of Thombers in Raleigh's North Hills Fashion Mall. "Returns haven't been as bad as I thought they would."

Bill Guyer, store manager for J.C. Penny in the same mall, said, "People are making a lot of after-Christmas exchanges, but sales are exceeding those of last year."

Max Best, operating manager of the Montgomery Ward store at Carolina Circle Mall in Greensboro, said, "This year we are doing about 20 percent better than anticipated."

Best and other managers attributed the increase to the fact that this year's after-Christmas sales began on a Saturday and bargain hunters knew the day traditionally is one of the biggest sale days of the year. As one woman at Charlotte's Eastland Mall said, it's "grab and growl" time.

Most stores had wrapping paper, artificial trees, seasonal decorations and greeting cards at half price but there were other bargains to be found—fishing poles marked down from $36 to $19 each at one Charlotte store and the Rubik's cube puzzle marked down from $6.95 to $1.95 at one Greensboro store.

Many merchants opened early to accommodate the crowds. Jim Brendle, head of security at Charlotte's SouthPark mall said there were 4,000 to 5,000 people waiting for the stores' doors to open at 9 a.m. He anticipated about 50,000 SouthPark shoppers that day compared to a normal day's 10,000 to 20,000.

"There's just as many people here the day after Christmas as Thanksgiving weekend because people are returning merchandise and buying up the sales," said Bonnie McManus, Eastland's assistant manager.

The day after Thanksgiving is traditionally the busiest of the Christmas shopping season.

When asked whether there had been more returns or purchases, security officer Brendle said, "All I can tell you is we've been making a lot of escorts to the bank."

Peat Plant Construction Is Discussed

CRESWELL — A peat-to-methanol refinery will be built in Eastern Washington County near Creswell, Mayme Davenport, chairman of the Washington County Board of Commissioners said last week.

Davenport said the facility will be built by Peat Methanol Associates of Santa Fe, New Mexico, at a cost of $250 million. An estimated 400 persons will be employed at the peak of construction.

When completed, the plant will be capable of producing 67.5 million gallons of methanol from 675,000 tons of peat per year, and employ some 200 persons.

Methanol is a type of alcohol currently used as a substitute for gasoline.

Bob Fri, president of Energy Transition Corp., the project consultant, said the project is still in the planning and design stage. He added that numerous permits must be secured from federal, state and local governmental agencies before construction can begin.

Fri noted that PMA has applied for a price guarantee but has not received final notification from the federal Synthetic Fuels Corp.

Uncle Sam's made a big change in First Federal's tax-deferring IRA: Starting January 1, 1982, everyone is eligible!

Even if you are already involved in a pension or retirement plan, beginning Jan. 1, you qualify for an IRA at First Federal.

And that means you can contribute up to $2000 ($2250 spousal IRA) to your IRA, and write it off your income taxes.

You don't have to pay one cent of taxes on either your funds deposited in an IRA, or on the high rate of interest it earns either, until you withdraw it.

And since your income (and your tax bracket) will probably be lower after you retire, the net amount you pay the government will almost certainly be lower. In other words, an IRA helps you keep more of the money you earn.

So, put yourself first. Open up an IRA at First Federal, and pay the government less and yourself more.

Your IRA funds are, of course, available to you at any time. However, there is a stiff IRS tax penalty if you withdraw from this account before age 59½. You must receive at least $2000 a year in compensation to be eligible for an IRA.
