Schedule Electricity From New Source

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville and 10 of the other 32 municipalities participating in N.C. Municipal Power Agency No. 3 are scheduled to begin receiving electric power deliveries from the agency at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday.

For Greenville and the other former Virginia Electric and Power Co. wholesale customers, the switch to the agency as the wholesale supplier marks the culmination of over 16 years of efforts by the state's municipally owned electric utilities to establish their own self-directed power supply agency.

The startup of the non-profit, municipally owned power agency was made possible by an arrangement negotiated over a 2½ year period with Carolina Power & Light Co. which provides for the agency's purchase of ownership interests in CP&L generating facilities.

Greenville Utilities Commission Director Charles Horne said this morning that "we will begin the transition as of midnight tonight," and "receive billing from the agency," although "power will continue to come from Vepco until we complete the arrangements for the purchase of the Vepco substation here and the buy-in arrangements with CP&L."

"We won't physically see any change. The cost of power will be about the same until the first bonds are sold by the agency in February. That's when our money-saving ar-rangment will begin, when the agency actually acquires ownership of the generating facilities."

Horne noted that "as we sell the bonds and buy in, we'll begin to share more in cost savings." He added that the next "two or three years" will "be a transitional period."

In addition to Greenville, former Vepco customers moving to the power agency at midnight include Washington, Tarboro, Robersonville, Hobgood, Hamilton, Hertford, Scotland Neck, Belhaven, Edenton and Elizabeth City.

Under the terms of the project agreement with CP&L, the 21 cities in the NCMPA now served by CP&L will begin receiving power from the agency at the time of the initial closing on the purchase of the CP&L generating facilities, now scheduled for Feb. 25.

Until the first closing, the agency will purchase power under contract from both Vepco and CP&L to serve the former Vepco cities.

Just over two weeks ago, the agency's board of commissioners set bulk power rates that are projected to save the 11 initial participating cities about 3 percent in power costs over what they would have paid if served by Vepco directly. At the time of the first closing, those rates will be adjusted downward to reflect the lower cost of power that will be produced from the agency-owned generation.

Economic Indicators Dip Again, But Rate Slowing

WASHINGTON (AP) — October's flood of deposits in the nation's savings and loan associations dried up in November as interest in the new tax-exempt "all-savers" certificates waned, the latest government report shows.

Meanwhile, the government's Index of Leading Economic Indicators fell for the fourth straight month in November, but the decline slowed to just 0.3 percent, the Commerce Department reported today.

The index, which is designed to show future trends of the U.S. economy, had fallen 0.8, 2.1 and 1.6 percent, respectively, in the previous three months.

November's modest decline, while hardly good news for the weak economy, seemed to indicate the current recession may also begin losing strength before long, a development that would be in line with most analysts' forecasts.

Economists inside and outside government are saying the overall economy has declined substantially in the current fourth quarter but will fall by a lesser amount in the first quarter of 1982 and then will begin genuine recovery near the middle of the year.

In November, six of 10 leading indicators dropped, with a decline in business total liquid assets making the biggest impact, the new report said.

Savers withdrew $1.6 billion more than they deposited in the beleaguered S&L's in November, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Monday.

That made November the eighth month in the past nine with more withdrawals than deposits, with October's net deposit gain caused only by the rush to buy the new certificates when they were introduced Oct. 1.

In other economic developments:

—Henry Wallich, a member of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, said federal deficits do cause inflation, disputing recent contentions to the contrary by some of President Reagan's advisers.

—Yields on short-term Treasury securities rose in Monday's auctions, continuing a month-long general upward trend, officials said. About $4.9 billion in six-month bills were sold at an average discount rate of 12.448 percent, up from the 11.838 percent of the previous week.

The government also sold about $4.9 billion in three-month bills at an average rate of 11.69 percent, up from 11.037 percent. The yields were the highest since the Nov. 2 levels of 12.721 percent for six-month bills and 12.695 percent for three-month bills.

—Because the nation's money supply was growing more slowly than they had hoped, Federal Reserve policymakers voted last month to keep pushing for faster growth through the end of the year, according to a report released Monday.

The Federal Open Market Committee agreed at a Nov. 17 meeting to target growth through this month for the measure known as M1-B — cash plus most checking accounts — at the same annual rate of 7 percent which was set during October.

The report on the meeting said M1-B grew in October at an annual rate of 3½ percent. For the year through November, committee member Anthony Solomon said in a speech last week, the M1-B money supply grew at an annual rate of only 2½ percent, while the committee's overall target for 1981 was 3½-6 percent.

For the troubled savings and loan associations, November was the 11th straight month their net worth dropped, officials said, with a decline of $636 million to about $27.9 billion.

The new report said the slowdown in the growth of "all-savers" balances — from October's $16.5 billion gain to $2.5 billion in November — reflected both lower November interest rates on the certificates and the fact that the initial rush to purchase them may have used up a large portion of the potential market.

Meanwhile, in remarks prepared for delivery to the American Economic Association, Wallich said the Federal Reserve Board's effort to fight inflation by restraining the growth of the nation's money supply does need balance-budgeting help from the rest of government.

"More support from the fiscal side (the federal budget) is urgently needed to diminish the burden now resting on monetary policy," he said.

Defiance Still Runs High In Polish Spirits

By The Associated Press
Defiant Polish workers are producing automobile parts that don't fit and engaging in other acts of industrial sabotage, according to uncensored reports reaching the West.

But Poland's military government claims work is returning to normal as the last strikes against martial law are dropped.

Warsaw Radio quoted the Ministry of Mining and Industry as saying 939 miners at the Piast mine in Silesia would return to work today after ending their 13-day occupation — the last large-scale protest of martial law.

The radio said today that 12 "ringleaders of the protest action have been arrested by the military prosecutor's office." The arrests came despite earlier government broadcasts assuring there would be no reprisals if the miners quit the protest voluntarily.

Earlier official Polish media reports said the 2,300 miners who abandoned their strike last week at the nearby Ziemowit coal mine resumed digging Monday, and that full production had resumed at the Huta Katowice steelworks — where security forces had routed protesters.

Upholds Right Ban Handguns

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge today upheld the right of a suburban village to ban the sale and possession of handguns.

U.S. District Judge Bernard Decker said the Morton Grove ordinance is valid and does not infringe upon the individual rights provided by the Illinois and United States constitutions.

Attorneys for one of the groups of citizens opposing the ordinance said they will appeal the ruling.

Martin Ashman, Morton Grove village attorney, called Decker's ruling "a landmark decision."

The British Broadcasting Corp., in a report from Warsaw, said, "The military are said to have effectively secured the country."

But British newspapers said today that thousands of workers have been fired for refusing to resign from the now-suspended independent labor union Solidarity.

Uncensored reports reaching the United States from sources in Warsaw on Monday night painted a picture of defiance in Poland, under martial law since Dec. 13.

Sources said workers at the FSO automobile plant in Warsaw were turning out parts that do not fit together. Three alleged instigators of an earlier strike at that plant went on trial Monday in Warsaw and were to be sentenced today.

A traveler returning to Warsaw from the port of Szczecin said facilities were open, but dockworkers were merely "recycling" cargo — loading and unloading the same goods. About 200 former employees have been fired as undesirable, the traveler said.

End Of The Line

ALL USED UP — Although the family Christmas tree brought cheer and warmth to many Greenville homes, after the holiday most families have little further use for them.

Better To Light A Candle

A VIGIL IN PARIS — Two supporters of the Polish union Solidarity are lighting candles near the Polish embassy in Paris Monday night. Most of the night, people keep a silent vigil in front of the embassy (visible in background) to show their support for the victims of the repression in Poland. (AP Laserphoto)

Defector Urges U.S. End Poland And USSR Trade

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former Polish ambassador to Japan who renounced his position to protest the Warsaw regime says the United States should cut off all trade with his homeland and the Soviet Union.

"Do not give a single penny to the perfidious Polish junta," Zdzislaw Ruraz told the Commission on Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Asked by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., whether this meant "no trade, no food, no credits" to the Polish military government, Ruraz replied: "I would go even further than that. Not to the sponsors either."

He identified the "sponsors" as the Soviet Union, saying, "We are, in fact, fighting against the USSR."

"This junta, this government, would not stay in power for even a day, would never have come to power, without backing from the USSR," he said Monday. "The real screen players and conductors of the Polish drama are behind the Kremlin walls."

In Los Angeles, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the administration's Special Situation Group met at the White House on Monday and "reviewed a number of possible steps or options that may be taken as a result of the Polish situation." He said President Reagan's decisions would be reached and made public by the end of the week.

A well-placed administration official who requested anonymity said Reagan had decided on three retaliatory measures against the Soviets: blocking the sale of equipment for a natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe, halting export of computers and other high-technology goods to the Soviet Union, and suspension of Soviet rights to use U.S. seaports and airports. Reagan's announcement was expected later today.

The United States already has suspended food aid to the Polish government, but has stopped short of an outright trade embargo and is backing food contributions as long as they flow through non-government channels in Poland.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland charged Monday in a speech to the Industrial Relations Research Association that the administration is not reacting firmly enough to the situation in Poland.

Kirkland did not give details, but said the AFL-CIO was urging "a series of strong measures ... aimed at the Polish government and the true authors of the crackdown, the Soviet Union."

Earlier Monday, Kirkland aide Tom Kahn had advocated a grain embargo, said technology sales to the Soviet Union "should be placed under strict national security controls" and called for an end to trade to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Kahn's testimony came before the same commission that heard Ruraz' suggestions.

Ruraz, who left his Tokyo post for asylum in the United States last week, disclosed that as long ago as March 27 or 28 he received an official cable from Warsaw saying a "state of war" might be imminent.

After this cable, he said, he realized it was "absolutely not true" to tell the Japanese, as he had been doing, that the Polish government was "guided by the best historical traditions" in dealing with difficult times.

He said that as ambassador he received delegations of Japanese workers petitioning him for restoration of human rights in Poland.

Tobacco Fee

ATLANTA (AP) — Mandatory tobacco inspection, which was free until a new law took effect Oct. 1, will cost 45 cents per hundred pounds next year, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced.

The 45-cent fee was proposed Sept. 9, said J.T. Bunn, acting tobacco division director for USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service in Washington, D.C.

The USDA's free inspections, which began in 1935, came to an end under requirements of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981.

Tobacco warehouse operators will collect the inspection fee and pay it to the USDA. Failure to collect or pay the fee could result in suspension of inspection and related services, Bunn said.

TRIBUTE TO LEAF COLLECTORS

In the summer Greenville is shaded by lovely trees and in the fall we are deluged by all their leaves. I would like to compliment the city's leaf collection crews for their efficiency and persistence. The leaves have not had to remain long on the grass before they are promptly collected and the yards left very clean. These workers deserve a lot of praise. L.J.

"WONDERFUL HEAD START!"

Since the Hotline appeal last week stating that about $1,000 more was needed for the Pitt County Department of Social Services to be Santa to all the foster children of the county, $4,449 has been donated, with more still coming in, foster care worker Becky Starkey said. The donations include $2,000 given anonymously. "We're so delighted," Ms. Starkey said, "because we need to begin shopping in October or November of each year and it's wonderful to have such a head start for next Christmas. We can't thank everyone who donated enough!"

Rita Cobb Butler Weds Dr. Rodabaugh

Rita Cobb Butler and Dr. Karl Louis Rodabaugh were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in the First Presbyterian Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Richard R. Gammon.

The bride, given in marriage by her son, Kenneth L. Butler Jr., is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Cobb Sr. The bridegroom is the son of Dr. Louis Rodabaugh of Hartsville, Ohio, and Mrs. Louise Crumk of Erlanger, Ky.

The best man was George Threewitts of Greenville and ushers included Kraig Butler, son of the bride, and Charlie Karsco, both of Greenville. The maid of honor was Miss Kelly Butler, daughter of the bride of Greenville.

A program of wedding music was presented by Dr. E. Robert Irwin, accompanied by the bridegroom on the trumpet.

A wedding reception was held following the ceremony at Courtney Square Clubhouse. Serving at the table were Mrs. Jane Shankle and Ms. Sara Langdale and Ms. Susan Hardcastle. Also assisting at the reception were Mrs. Rayneal Calfe, Ms. Barbara Entzminger, Ms. Sheldon Mahoney, Mrs. Ann Attmore, Mrs. Kay Davis and Mrs. Adelaide Ratcliffe.

The bride obtained a B.A. and M.A. degrees from East Carolina University and presently is lead instructor in Psychology and anthropology at Beaufort County Community College, Washington. The bridegroom, who is associate professor of history at ECU, received a B.A. and M.A. degrees from Southern Illinois University and his P.H.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

After a wedding trip to the Florida Keys, the couple will reside in Greenville.

COOKING IS FUN

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Bart and Kitty Devito work closely together but each has a different role. He's a food photographer, and she's his studio's stylist. When it comes to preparing everyday meals and entertaining, they also play different roles. Bart does all the cooking; Kitty cheerfully does the cleanup.

It was only after Bart married Kitty that he became an expert cook. Kitty's parents and five of her brothers run restaurants specializing in southern Italian food. Once Bart began to hang around those restaurant kitchens, he was hooked. He became as interested in cooking as in eating. Both allure him — though he's constantly concerned about putting on weight. "All I have to do is smell something good cooking," Bart says, "and I gain five pounds."

During the week the Devitos, whose photography studio is in New York City, stay in town a couple of nights. The rest of the time they drive upstate to their country house. Bart never has to worry about having an appreciative audience for his cooking. The Devitos' 20-year-old daughter goes to college but lives with them. Their 18-year-old son, about to start college, will continue to live at home. Their third child, a 15-year-old boy, attends a local high school. And friends visit over weekends.

Occasionally the children take their father's place at the kitchen stove. Recently they fed their parents a big platter of spaghetti tossed with an olive oil and garlic sauce. As Kitty says, "Nothing tastes better and is easier to make."

To pass along to you, Bart came up with a pasta sauce that's also delicious and easy to make. The flavor of this tomato and anchovy combination depends on the tomatoes — they must be fully red-ripe and sweet.

On occasion, Bart makes some of the famous Italian desserts — cannoli, zuppa inglese, cream puffs and strufoli. But, as a rule, the Devitos serve fresh fruit for dessert.

LINGUINE DEVITO
5 large very ripe sweet tomatoes (2 pounds)
2-ounce can anchovy fillets, drained
Olive oil
16-ounce package linguine
¾ cup finely chopped parsley

Remove stem ends and skins from tomatoes; slice thin. Oil a shallow 2-quart casserole and arrange half the tomato slices over the bottom; layer the anchovies on top and cover with the remaining tomatoes. Drizzle with 1-3rd cup oil. Cover and bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until the tomatoes begin to lose their shape and are juicy — the time will vary greatly, but count on 30 to 45 minutes.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

This winter, a lot of you people out there are going to be using your fireplace a lot. As some of you may or may not have already discovered, there is an art to starting a fire.

Here are some observations that might prove helpful.

Do not count on a careless smoker to start your fire. There is never a careless smoker around when you need one. I've seen them on television a million times and so have you. The smoker who simply flips a cigarette butt into a field and seconds later 300,000 acres of forest are ablaze. All it would take to start your fire is one ca. Jess cigarette, but it'll never happen.

Old newspapers never burn. You can feed your fire 50 to 60 pounds of newspapers that are taking up space in your garage, but they won't burn. The only paper that will catch on at all is the one just delivered which no one has read and which still has a rubber band on it.

Cereal boxes, milk cartons and cracker boxes are excellent fire starters, but you lose momentum when you have to stop and wait until the kids eat up their contents.

Everyone in the room watching you struggle to build the fire will know that your wood is unseasoned but you. The builder of the fire is always the last to know.

Half of the people in the room watching you struggle to build the fire will know that you are giving the fire too much oxygen, thus creating a draft and blowing it out.

The other half of the people in the room watching you struggle to build the fire will know that you are not giving it enough oxygen, thus smothering it and blowing it out. Do not be proud when members of the family offer old rulers, yardsticks, shoe supports, wooden hangers, birdhouses and Popsicle sticks. Every little bit of kindling helps.

Do not assault people who say they installed a gas conversion burner for under $14, use the prepared logs at the store for 98 cents, or who sit around all summer having the kids roll logs out of old newspaper that burn for 30 hours.

Never spurn the help of an eight-year-old Scout who once built a fire out of wet wood by rubbing two Boy Scout leaders together.

Never go to bed on a fireplace of darkened ashes. The moment you turn your back and say, "It's too late for a fire anyway," flames will leap out toward the screen, wood will crackle and pop and you'll have smoking embers for three days.

Remember, being warm isn't everything.

Pat's Pointers

This stunning Swedish Weave afghan is so easy to make that it is nicknamed "Idiot's Delight." No knitting or crochet is involved — just a simple weaving stitch worked on a background of monk's cloth with a tapestry needle threaded with 4-ply knitting yarn. Once the first row of the pattern is established, you will find it clear sailing from then on.

You may use the yarn colors of your choice, but it is most effective done in shaded tones of one color family — in much the same way that elegant effects are created with Bargello needlepoint.

To obtain directions for making the "Idiot's Delight" Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. W-8080 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KW-8080 by sending a check or money order for $27 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit contains 2 yards of monk's cloth, five skeins of yarn, an instruction leaflet and needle, with the shipping charges included in the price. Please specify your choice of gold, blue, rust, green or brown tones.

From time to time it is my pleasure to review needlework books that I think will be of particular interest to my readers. One is an old favorite of mine that has just been reprinted after being unavailable for some time, while the other is brand new.

The new book, "Clergy Stoles" by William R. Doser, is self-published by the author and will be of particular interest to anyone looking for ecclesiastical designs for needlepoint or cross stitch.

In addition to 15 pages of charted designs for symbols and monograms, there are excellent discussions on liturgical colors, the meanings of the various symbols, the types of liturgical stoles as well as down-to-earth advice on the basics from preparation of the materials to the finishing techniques.

Perhaps the spirit of this book is summarized best in the preface by the author, who says "It is hoped that this book will help individuals express their own faith in the creation of stoles for the clergy of their choice and provide an aid in worship to all wherever the stoles may be worn."

When I first met Bill Doser eight years ago at a meeting of the American Needlepoint Guild, he was a Methodist minister serving as pastor to three small, rural North Carolina churches.

After seeing the pleasure that his wife, Mabel, got from doing needlepoint — particularly when they were driving from one church to the other — he asked her to teach him. It wasn't long before their roles on those Sunday drives were reversed, with Mabel behind the wheel and Bill stitching away on his newest creation. In just a couple of years Bill was the proud possessor of blue ribbons from national and international needlepoint competitions and was being commissioned for needlework designs for churches.

IDIOT'S DELIGHT. ...afghan requires no knitting or crochet. It is a weaving stitch worked on a background of monk's cloth.

If the book is unavailable in your area, it can be ordered direct from Doser Designs, 605 Poplar Street, Lincolnton, N.C. 28092 or you can call Mr. Doser at (704) 735-5933. The softcover, 52-page book retails for $7.50 plus $1.50 for postage and handling if ordering by mail.

"A Treasury of Knitting Patterns" by Barbara Walker (published by Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 Fifth Ave. New York, N.Y. 10017) has long been a favorite of mine, having been originally published in 1968 in hardcover. Many times in more recent years, I have wanted to refer readers to this book but couldn't do so after it went out of print. So it was like rediscovering an old friend when I learned that it was being reprinted in softcover ($14.95).

This is not a collection of patterns for making specific items, rather it is a marvelous collection of pattern stitches, simple, intermediate and complex. All together there are over 500 pattern stitches given and there are good clear photographs of each along with easily understood directions. Just leafing through the book is sure to make your fingers itch to start knitting! It is an invaluable aid for the designer while the beginner will find it a real source of inspiration.

Most encouraging to the average knitter, the author was self-taught and had only been knitting for two years when she first started working on this book. Barbara was a former newspaper reporter in Washington, D.C., and, after retiring to raise a family, wanted a challenging hobby. After learning to knit she became fascinated with pattern stitchery and looked for a comprehensive book on available pattern stitches.

Poem Gives Abby A Clue

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: You said you couldn't understand why anybody would refuse to share a recipe. The enclosed poem may give you a clue:

She didn't have potatoes
So she used a cup of rice.
She couldn't find paprika
So she used some other spice.
Tomatoes weren't in season
So she used tomato paste.
The whole can — not a cup, dear
She couldn't bear to waste.
And now she isn't speaking;
She's convinced I pulled a fast one.
So don't ask me for a recipe —
That one was my last one!

MT. VERNON, OHIO

CONFIDENTIAL TO ART B. IN SEAL BEACH, CALIF.: A mistress is something between a mister and a mattress.

DEAR ABBY: Around the first of the year you had a lot of letters in your column advising men to wear boxer shorts, instead of the tight kind that hugged the body, if they wanted to become fathers.

It so happened that my wife and I had been trying unsuccessfully for years to have a child. The doctors found nothing wrong with either one of us, but none could help us. The last doctor told us to give up and adopt a baby.

Then we saw the letters in your column recommending boxer shorts to increase fertility. We both laughed, but my wife said, "Let's try Abby's suggestion for just one month," so I bought three pair of boxer shorts and started to wear them. Guess what? The second month my wife got pregnant! On Nov. 19 she gave birth to a beautiful baby girl. She weighed 7 pounds 6 ounces and we named her Catherine Ann-Marie. (I'm enclosing her picture.)

God bless you, Abby. My wife, Carol, and I both love you for your wonderful column in the Cedar Rapids Gazette.
GALEN A. LUKE, CEDAR RAPIDS, IOWA

DEAR GALEN: Congratulations to you and Carol. Catherine Ann-Marie is indeed a beautiful baby. May the Lord richly bless you and your family.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a bachelor living alone. There's another bachelor in my building who drops in often, and we rap. He seems like a nice guy, but all he talks about is his sex life — which according to him is terrific! His biggest complaint is that once he scores with a woman he can't get rid of her.

I don't know whether to believe him or not. He certainly doesn't look like a ladies' man, and I've never even seen him with a date.

What is your opinion of a guy who is always talking about sex?

DOUBTING THOMAS IN THOMASVILLE, GA.

DEAR THOMAS: He's probably doing what he does best. Talking.

A Mexican jumping bean is not a bean — it is a seed with a larva inside.

A cucumber is not a vegetable. It is a fruit.

Seek Avoid Squabble In Courtroom

ATLANTA (AP) — A lawyer for a group of parents whose children were among 28 young blacks slain in the Atlanta area says he wants to settle two civil suits involving the group and keep the cases away "from the heat of a courtroom battle."

Attorneys for Stop the Children's Murders Inc. planned to negotiate with the state today for a settlement of the two civil suits, which were filed to define the group's legal status.

Lawyer Don Keenan said the group was "willing and able to accept any reasonable compromise proposed by the state of Georgia."

Stop the Children's Murders was founded last August after its predecessor, the Committee to Stop the Children's Murders of Atlanta, disbanded. The earlier group had encountered financial difficulties.

The first committee was formed by parents of some of the 28 murdered young blacks whose cases have been investigated by a special Atlanta police task force. The group accepted donations given to the victims' parents and distributed them to the families.

On Oct. 26, Stop the Children's Murders filed suit asking that Tim Ryles, director of the state Office of Consumer Affairs, be stopped from harassing the group. The suit also asked the court to decide if the new group is responsible for the former group's debts, Keenan said.

The state filed suit in November charging that two of the mothers and the business manager for the Committee to Stop Children's Murders of Atlanta had used some money collected by the group for personal expenses without the group's permission.

The state's suit also claims the committee failed to file all financial statements required by law and asks that the mothers be prohibited from soliciting donations or spending any committee funds until they comply with the law.

Keenan said Stop the Children's Murders Inc. was granted full, unconditional tax-exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service on Dec. 3.

The earlier group never applied for such status, he said, because its officers "never understood how to do it."

"By the time they got around to trying to find out what they were supposed to do," he said, "they had made so many mistakes that it was too late."

Farm Count Is Up For 1981

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since the Depression, the Agriculture Department says, the number of farms in the United States increased in 1981.

The department estimates there now are 2,436,000 farms, 8,000 more than in 1980, officials said Monday. They predicted the trend will continue next year and that there will be 1,000 more farms by the end of 1982.

The Signals Are Clear

In retrospect, the world is made up of very forgetful people. History books remind us that Kaiser Wilhelm made no secret of his aggressive intent long before World War I became a reality. No country could build the kind of war machine he did, without signalling its purpose. Still, the civilized world was "surprised" when the unthinkable became too true.

Adolph Hitler make it clear that his Nazi philosophies were exportable by subversion or by force ... remember "Today Germany, Tomorrow The World"? His aggressive intent was clearly signaled, but the rest of Europe and the United States were dreadfully unprepared for the barbarism he unleashed.

For years, this country and other civilized nations of the world have been watching and ignoring the clear warning posed by the multiplying of weaponry in the Soviet Union. The atmosphere of aggressive intent emanating from the Soviet Union is so strong as to be unmistakable.

Maybe this time the signal is so strong it cannot be ignored. Congress has at last approved what is called the biggest defense budget ever, but the hour could be uncomfortably late.

The aura of violence is strong in our world these days.

He Could Not Be Part Of It

The agony of Poland is well illustrated by the decision of Ambassador Romuald Spasowski to defect to the United States.

It was obviously a difficult and emotional decision for the 61-year-old ambassador, but he said he not could be part of the government waging war on its own people.

"I cannot be silent," he said.

Spasowski was granted asylum by President Reagan last week.

The ambassador cited a "reign of terror" in Poland.

It couldn't have been easy for Ambassador Spasowski. He did what he had to do to dramatize the plight of his people. The government he represented was crushing freedom with brute military force. He could not even live the illusion of being a party to it.

Re-Study Murder

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The biggest surprise in recent crime statistics for North Carolina is that murder was down 21 percent for the first nine months of the year.

The decline flies in the face of popular wisdom and the conviction of professional law enforcement people which contend that most murders are crimes of passion. They are done by people who are mad, and involve people who know one another.

what it is and how to prevent it.

Another factor to be taken into account is how much notice local news outlets give to crimes of violence, particularly murder, and how such crimes are handled in the press.

Murder is not, Hyde concludes, a popular dinner-table topic. But he thinks there might be a direct link between increased public concern and awareness, public discussion, private conversation, and community attitudes toward murder. And that increased sensitivity abroad in a community just might be the ingredient which triggers people to look about for other outlets to their anger and frustration in place of murder.

BILL NOBLITT

Therefore, say the experts, there is no way to control the violent crime rate, especially the murder rate.

But North Carolina's chief crime prevention people are taking an ever-so-cautious look at this year's decline with the hope that hidden somewhere within the statistics and the various crime prevention programs there is a hint at what might possibly be a way to help trim the murder rate and keep it down.

Cautious L.D. Hyde, chief of the crime prevention division of the state's Crime Control and Public Safety Department, acknowledges the murky waters which he has chosen to explore in this particular field.

"The professionals say you can't prevent murder ... that people are going to get mad and kill each other at home, in a bar or elsewhere, and nothing the police or society can do will help.

"We challenge that idea," Hyde said. The first tentative step will be to seek a relationship between the declining murder rate and active community crime prevention programs. Those activities bring community people and law officers together regularly to talk about crime, cludes, a popular dinner-table topic. But he thinks there might be a direct link between increased public concern and awareness, public discussion, private conversation, and community attitudes toward murder. And that increased sensitivity abroad in a community just might be the ingredient which triggers people to look about for other outlets to their anger and frustration in place of murder.

Nowhere in the country are law enforcement specialists probing this matter. The traditional approach to crime prevention has been to cry for more men, more equipment, more law.

Hyde wonders if public education which will heighten public awareness of the conditions which breed anger and can lead to killing, and open consideration in the press and at community gatherings of ways people can respond to cool the passion prior to murder might prove a worthwhile approach.

The Stats

To begin to understand murder requires some detailed study of the statistics of murder in North Carolina. Although blacks make up only 25 percent of the population, well over half the murders involve blacks both as victims and offenders.

In nearly two-thirds of the cases, the victim knew the person who killed him or her. There were spouses and former spouses, parents and children, boyfriends and girlfriends, and other family members, and friends and acquaintances.

In the moment of passion, a gun usually does the job — it's quick and easy to use, and can be done from a distance without bloodying one's hands. The handgun figured in 44.6 percent of the killings; shotguns in 14.8 percent; and rifles in 12 percent — a total of nearly 74 percent using guns.

Knives were used in 16 percent, while blunt objects and fists or feet were used only rarely.

The figures prove that, (Please turn to Page 6)

Court With No 'Trends'

WASHINGTON — Before it recessed for the Christmas holidays, the Supreme Court had handed down 11 full-blown opinions and disposed of hundreds of cases with summary orders. As an old trend-spotter, I venture this observation: There are no trends to spot.

The high court rocks along as smoothly as those famous crewmen of the children's round, who rowed, rowed, rowed their boat gently down the stream. The 1980-81 term saw no great leaps in the law. Nothing thus far in the new term suggests a lust for judicial innovation.

The only difference in the present term lies in the presence on the bench of Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, whose destiny is to go through life forever hearing herself introduced as the first woman ever to be appointed, etc., etc. She has slipped into the life of the court as easily as a fireman slips into his boots. She has not hesitated to ask questions from the bench. She speaks her mind at the court's weekly conferences. By every account she is a charming woman, but she is also a justice. She expects, and she gets, the same respect the others get.

As Ronald Reagan's first nominee, it was generally expected — hoped, perhaps — that Justice O'Connor would join the court's conservative bloc. It hasn't worked out quite that way, though the evidence is inconclusive.

Mrs. O'Connor has participated in nine of the 11 plenary cases; she dissented from the majority's reasoning in four of them. As a dissenter, she has sided with the liberals three times, the conservatives only once. None of the cases was of earthshaking importance. The case with real meat in it, we will have a better idea of her style.

The only notable trend around the high court is not a new trend, but an old one: The work load keeps growing. In 1979-80, the court docketed 4,781 cases. In 1980-81, the number swelled to 5,144. The total will increase again this term. Barrett McGurn, the court's information officer, has computed that the court must dispose of cases at the rate of one every 20 minutes during working hours. So many cases already have been accepted for oral argument that no new case, unless it is a case of compelling importance, has a chance of being heard before the court concludes oral arguments on April 28.

Rumors regularly float around the court's press room that such-and-such a justice is thinking of retiring. The only such rumor lately has to do with Justice Lewis Powell. He joined the court following his confirmation in December 1971 with the vague understanding that he wished to serve for 10 years only. But at 74, Justice Powell is in good health — good enough to go duck hunting over the holidays — and he has no present intentions of abandoning a labor he so plainly loves.

None of the other graybeards seems likely to step aside either. Chief Justice Warren Burger also is 74; William Brennan is 75; Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackmun are both 73. Justices historically are like Cleopatra: Age does not wither them, nor custom stale their infinite contrariety. Frankfurter was still sitting at 80, Brandeis at 83, Black at 85, and Holmes at a venerable 91. Mr. Reagan, who doubtless would like to make a few more appointments to the court, had best be patient yet a while.

Justice O'Connor's maiden opinion came on Dec. 1. Following custom in such matters, she wrote for a unanimous court. The case concerned certain discretionary powers of the secretary of the interior over bidding systems on oil and gas leases. Hers was no opinion for the ages, but the issue was not immortal either. When she is given a

Reagan And Baker 'Rift'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — As the White House shut down for the holidays, the president and his chief of staff were locked in political disagreement, unique in its openness, over the administration's domestic policies and electoral strategy.

The heart of this dispute between Ronald Reagan and James Baker III is whether taxes should be increased by $45 billion the next two years. But political judgement is more at issue than economic philosophy. To Baker, the specter of triple-digit budget deficits is a worse evil than higher taxes; to Reagan, revising his ground on taxes will give Democrats their issue for 1982.

That political disagreement contains seeds of deeper discord, based on a president and a chief of staff who view the world differently enough to cause trouble. After one year in office, Reaganites on the White House staff and elsewhere in the administration are starting to finger Baker and his two lieutenants, Richard Darman and David Gergen, as uncommitted to the Reagan revolution.

Some finger-pointers exaggerate, as in referring to "President Baker" running the administration. Baker deeply resents this, and justifiably so. He has lost key battles on defense, on dropping Richard V. Allen and may be losing the tax fight. Ronald Reagan is president — whenever he wants to be.

Nor is it fair to brand Baker as advance man for vice President George Bush's succession to Republican leadership, much less as a "liberal" mole. Baker is unquestionably conservative, not merely a Houston country club money conservative but (along with his wife) a right-to-life antiabortion advocate.

Yet, there is a difference, subtle but profound. Baker does not share Reagan's visceral commitment to drastic change, even at the cost of smashing totems. The cultural difference between the old movie actor with small-town working-class roots and the Ivy League lawyer of inherited wealth who runs Reagan's White House staff, asserts itself in the dispute over budget deficits, actual and predicted.

Although this dispute lacks face-to-face confrontation between laidback Reagan and urbane Baker, the chief of staff asserts privately that he is only seeking the best political solution for the president. Adhering to traditional Republican ideology, he sees disaster in those horrendous deficits forecast by budget director David Stockman. Since deep defense cuts and Social Security cuts are ruled out by the president, Baker sees no alternative to higher taxes.

Reagan characteristically fizzes the issue in staff meetings. Yet, he seems intuitively to understand that a $45-billion tax increase will be seized, and properly so, by Democrats as a confession of failure for Reaganomics and a transparent course-correction of last summer's tax cuts. Indeed, Democratic leaders are poised to turn any Reagan tax increase into a suspension of the third year of the Reagan tax reduction.

What makes this internal disagreement so important is Baker's supremacy on policy questions. He has eclipsed his peer, presidential counselor Edwin Meese, not through nefarious means but because he is much better organized. While Meese was on his extended speaking tour of California and Hawaii, Baker was orchestrating the tax increase.

An enthusiastic power player, Baker has been no passive conduit filtering opinions to his chief. Other White House aides see him as the activist ginning up the tax increase option in close collaboration with Stockman and Republican senators, especially Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici.

The culmination came Christmas week with front-page stories on successive days in The New York Times and Washington Post claiming that all presidential aides had bought the Stockman-Baker tax increase. The inescapable inference was that only the poor old president, bogged down in ideology, opposed such a reasonable course.

But Reagan is not alone. "If we increase taxes $45 billion, you can forget about '82 (the mid-term election)," one anti-tax aide whispered to us. Such Reaganites put it this way: that although Reagan has delegated more duties than any modern president, he has proved he is still a heavyweight champion can

Strength For Today

SENSE OF GUILT

A great deal is being written today in the field of psychology about the damaging effects of guilt feelings. We are often told that the chief evil arising from a sinful act is that it leaves the sinner burdened with a sense of guilt.

But of course the sinner ought to be burdened with a sense of guilt if he is guilty. There are thousands of people who do evil deeds every day and who are not burdened with the least sense of guilt in so doing. This certainly does not indicate a well-integrated personality. They are people who are simply lacking in conscience.

To be sure there is a neurotic sense of guilt which comes from imaginary evils or a morbid dwelling upon actual evils. Where evil has occurred, a sense of guilt follows in the case of a healthy personality.

The cure for guilt is not the shaking off of a sense of guilt but the forgiveness of the sin which caused it. — Elisha Douglass

Now Time For Big Clearances

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) —

Having passed through the phase of the retail zodiac known as the Christmas selling season, we enter now the period of the big clearance — of linens, toys, cars and old Christmas cards.

As surely as we anticipate the seasons, we know that post-Christmas sales are coming. It has always been so, and until merchants learn more about how to keep lean inventories it probably always will be so.

But there is a difference this year. We are in a recession, as we were in 1973 and 1974. People are pressed for cash, and they are holding down their purchases. It's a buyer's market.

Moreover, as William Burke of the San Francisco Federal Reserve Bank, puts it, "saving — not spending — is the 'in' thing for the 1980s." That means double trouble for sellers: An inability of some customers to spend, and an unwillingness to spend by some who might have ability.

It's a deadly package for retailers, especially those who concentrate their sales. Last December, for example, 15.8 percent of all sales by department store and other general merchandise outlets occurred in December. A bad season, therefore, can break a store, and lead to a desperate attempt to reduce inventories through price cuts in January.

At the height of this year's season, unemployment was at least 8.4 percent, meaning 9 million American were without jobs. And, despite a tax cut, real consumer income hadn't moved appreciably higher in years.

In fact, Burke observes, the net worth of consumers weakened in the past year after rising for nearly a decade. In part, that rise was a consequence of soaring home values, but now much of that equity is gone. Burke believes that homeowners cashed in perhaps $25 billion in each of the past several years, to buy cars, campers, educations, vacations an other consumer items. Now they have little more to spend.

Credit cards also helped them to spend, but now many Americans fear their little plastic discs. They see them as passports to bankruptcy, and relatively few people ever want to take that step. They know that one way to avoid bankruptcy is to keep their handy little credit card in a place that isn't handy, such as in the safe-deposit vault rather than in the wallet. In other words, to retire it rather than use it.

All this the retailers know in their own special way, which is by reading the cash register receipts. If those receipts are down their concern is up. And that in turn leads to an abundance of January sales.

In bad times sales are almost an imperative. When interest rates are ranging close to 20 percent, for example, few merchants can afford to keep a large stock of goods on hand. Should they attempt to do so, they know, they run the risk of not being around for the economic upturn.

Customers know this too. They know it much better than they did 20 years ago, when the consumer movement was a mere stirring of discontent among supermarket shoppers. Since then, the mechanics and the devices and the schemes of retailers have been exposed to popular view. More significantly, customers have become more professional in shopping.

To say that many households held down this year on pre-Christmas buying in order to have funds available for a splurge during the January sales days is only to state the obvious.

As they very well know, the big sales follow in January as certainly as January follows December. And in this post-Christmas season, the sales conceivably could set some sort of records for discounting.

To the editor:

Collective bargaining — what an ugly term these days. Way back then (the 40's), this country needed a temporary labor reform movement and management needed to hear and act favorably on reasonable labor requests concerning working conditions, wages and benefits. There seemed to be constructive communication between labor representatives and management representatives.

Enter the strongman era of organized labor (crime) personally ushered in by James "Cement Boots" Hoffa and his Teamster cronies. This seems to be approximately the time the efforts and goals of organized labor management and industry management had a severe parting of the ways. It seemed most of the original goals and objectives of labor and management were well on the road toward reconciliation. The only business that remained unsettled was the amount of money top local labor "officials" could embezzle, extort or skim from the rapidly growing pension funds and other monetary pools.

The keystone industries in our country today, such as automotive, steel and transportation, are saddled with huge problems just as our national economy is, not the least of which is the rising cost of labor. Labor demands have become outrageous, while productivity continues to slip. Several of the automakers have negotiated contracts within the last several years, but GM must experience this ordeal again next year. Let's watch as prices climb even higher. Domestic economy cars are not competitive (pricewise) with imported economy cars, even with huge import tariffs. Our steel has become outrageously overpriced in comparison to foreign steel. It seems as though the Postal Workers have just entered into a new labor contract; stamps up to 18 cents, then 20 cents...The regional telephone employees (certain areas within the company) will possibly receive new wage scales within the year — a safe bet that rates will increase. Mr. Graves? Certain groups of employees within the Kinston and Wilmington DuPont plants have been "approached" by unions, but they have been able to stall and hopefully thwart those efforts to organize. It is high time we all took a tough stand against the proliferation of organized labor and their demands just as President Reagan did — right, Mr. Poli?

How A Working Couple Can Retire With $1,308,000.

Introducing The New NCNB IRA.

The new NCNB IRA, the most revolutionary retirement idea in 50 years, starts January 1. In many ways, it's much better than Social Security.

In the first place, under the new tax laws, even if you have a retirement plan where you work, you can now open an NCNB IRA.

Secondly, you can make bigger deposits. For example, a working couple, 35 years old, can deposit up to $2000 each (or a total of up to $4000) a year. At 12% a year, their NCNB IRA's together would be worth over $1.3 million at age 65.

How An NCNB IRA Can Grow:

AGE NOW	SINGLE PERSON AT 65*	WORKING COUPLE AT 65*	*Based on a working couple's $4000 (or single person's $2000) annual deposit made on the first of each year at an annual interest rate of 12%, compounded daily on a 365/360 basis.
30	$1,216,000	$2,432,000
35	654,000	1,308,000
40	348,000	696,000	Working individuals can contribute as much as 100% of their salary, up to a maximum of $2000.
45	181,500	363,000
50	91,000	182,000	Substantial interest penalty required for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.
55	41,500	83,000

And, as you can see by the chart on the left, for single people and couples in their 30's, 40's and 50's, with all kinds of incomes, an NCNB IRA can help make retirement a lot easier.

What's more, you can save on taxes. All your IRA contributions are tax-deductible, and you pay no taxes on the interest that you earn now. Then, when you start withdrawing after you retire, and you have to pay taxes, chances are, you'll be in a much lower tax bracket than you are now.

So, sign up now. The sooner you start, the richer you'll be when you retire. The new IRA, from the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

Fire Three Deputies In Looting Of Mall's Shop

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Officials fired three county deputies and recommended dismissal for a city policeman who allegedly took fire-damaged merchandise from a shopping mall.

The actions resulted from a week-long internal inquiry, Greenville County Sheriff Johnny Mack Brown and Police Chief Harold C. Jennings announced Monday.

The deputies, who worked after hours as security guards at the McAlister Square mall, admitted taking television sets, video games and tapes damaged in a Dec. 12 fire at Foster's Magnavox, but stated they thought they had permission to take the items, Brown and Jennings said.

tapes from an area outside the store where fire-damaged merchandise had been piled.

Brown said that when the deputies were asked about the merchandise they stated "without hesitation" they had taken the goods, but were "under the impression" they had permission to do so.

The sheriff's department's investigation of the matter, Brown said, revealed that at no time did property owners actually give officers permission to remove the damaged items.

But Brown said "rumors" had circulated that policemen had been given permission to take certain damaged items from burned-out areas.

"The rumor was acted upon," Brown said. "No effort was made to contact the true owners of the merchandise. Clearly, their actions were not well thought out, and the result of poor judgment."

He said all of the merchandise had been recovered and was being held pending any action by the solicitor's office.

Trying To Seat Atlanta Jurors

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Questioning of prospective jurors for the murder trial of Wayne B. Williams resumed today with defense lawyers focusing on racial prejudice and the publicity stirred up by a string of 28 killings around Atlanta.

About 64 reporters were in the courtroom again, but unlike Monday's opening of the trial, the spectators' section of 65 seats was less than half full.

Williams, wearing a dark blue vest with no tie, was brought into the fourth-floor courtroom just before 9 a.m.

District Attorney Lewis Slaton and his assistants asked few questions of the prospective jurors in the initial day of jury selection, but defense lawyers Alvin Binder and Mary Welcome interrogated each one carefully, often at length.

Williams, a 23-year-old free-lance photographer, is charged with murdering Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks whose deaths over a 22-month period have been investigated by a special police task force. There have been no arrests in the other 26 slayings.

"Have you had any experience or relationship with a black person that would make it difficult for you to sit in judgment in this case?" Binder and Ms. Welcome asked Monday.

While none admitted to racial biases that would affect judgment, each told of reading newspaper stories or seeing television reports about the series of slayings and Williams' arrest.

"If you were charged with a crime, and a juror in your frame of mind was trying you, would you feel comfortable?" the defense lawyers asked.

Some 700 prospective jurors have been called for the trial, but only 47 were questioned Monday. Of that group, 17 were excused because of medical or family hardships, and two were dismissed because they acknowledged they already had formed opinions about Williams' guilt or innocence.

Of the remaining 28, 11 were qualified for the jury pool and the 17 others faced individual questioning today by defense lawyers and prosecutors. When the pool reaches 48, the court will try to select the 12 jurors and alternates for the trial.

None of the potential jurors seemed eager to serve durdidate; that although Baker's skill has averted chaos at the White House, he managed political losers (Gerald Ford and George Bush) before finding a winner in Reagan.

In the days before Christmas, Reagan kept repeating to his advisers that he not only did not want to raise taxes but was sick and tired of hearing about it. Baker's man Gergen read an ambivalent statement that seemed to backpedal from tax increases.

But given the nature of the Reagan White House, nobody has ruled out a New Year's resurrection of the $45 billion tax package. The great Reagan-Baker political debate is not over.

Newspaper Eyes Cable

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post is planning to deliver a package of local news, information and advertising over leased cable television channels in the Washington metropolitan area, possibly as soon as 1983.

The project, the newspaper's first involving cable television, was announced in today's editions of the Post.

"Virtually all of the programming now being produced for cable systems is national in focus," Post publisher Donald E. Graham said. "We feel that, in addition, the new 100-channel cable systems planned for this area will also want to offer their viewers more news and information about their communities."

The newspaper plans to start discussions immediately with cable systems already operating in the area and with all applicants for cable franchises not yet awarded about leasing two channels on each system, said Thomas H. Ferguson, president of the Post.

Alice Rogoff, assistant to the publisher, said no decisions have been made on the specific format or content of the new venture. "We're looking for a distribution system because we want to develop the product," she said.

Graham, saying that the Post has the largest local news-gathering staff in the area, added, "These cable channels will give us another way to distribute this information to the community."

Ex-Soldier To Appeal Setback Over Claim For Compensation

By DAVID EGNER
Associated Press Writer
PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — An ex-soldier who was denied government compensation for severe mental illness he says was caused by Army LSD experiments plans to appeal the decision.

Calvin Sweet, 43, who sued the government for $3.9 million, said he will appeal Monday's ruling by U.S. District Judge Donald Porter "all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, because I believe I've been judged unfairly."

The initial appeal will go to the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis. The lawsuit is the first of its kind in the country to be ruled on, and attorneys for both sides said the ruling, after appeals are decided, would be "precedent-setting."

Sweet, a divorced father of six who lives here on a $322 monthly Veterans Administration disability check, said he needs money so he can spend two or three years in a top private mental hospital.

"All I want the money for is to try to regain my sanity," Sweet said. "I can't afford hospitalization."

Sweet's lawsuit sought money both to pay for private hospitalization and to compensate him for suffering and lost income he claims resulted from exposure to LSD during Army chemical warfare experiments in 1957.

Porter ruled that Sweet, who was a 19-year-old soldier at the time of his alleged LSD exposure, is not entitled to compensation from the U.S. government for three reasons.

Since Sweet did not file his first claim against the government until 1978, he said, the action came too late to fall within a two-year statute of limitations.

He also ruled that a 1950 U.S. Supreme Court decision, known as the Feres Doctrine, gives the military immunity from lawsuits such as Sweet's. The Feres Doctrine says: "Government is not liable . . . for injuries to servicemen where the injuries arise out of or are in the course of activity incident to service."

Finally, he said, "Sweet failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the failure of the United States to provide follow-up care (to his alleged LSD exposure) caused his present mental condition or aggravated an earlier mental condition."

Sweet's lawsuit was "a very important case," said U.S. Justice Department lawyer Cynthia Larsen of Washington, who defended the government against the suit.

If Porter's ruling is upheld on appeal, it will protect the government from similar lawsuits, Ms. Larsen said. If the decision is reversed, ex-servicemen would be encouraged to sue the government for service-connected injuries.

"There are a lot of other cases — not necessarily involving mental illness — where servicemen are suing the government on account of injuries that had their genesis in military service," Ms. Larsen said. "This case by analogy can have precedent-setting value in those cases, for example cases of radiation injury."

Sweet's attorney, Gregory Eiesland of Rapid City, agreed that once a final decision is reached on the case, it will set a major precedent.

"This is a blow to me," Sweet said after the ruling. "I don't know what I'm going to do with the rest of my life. Being as hurt as I was by them (the Army) why can't they help me a little bit?"

The government acknowledged Sweet took part in Army drug experiments, but said records do not show whether Sweet was given LSD, another drug or no drug at all as part of a control group.

ing the trial, which is expected to last six to eight weeks. One man told Judge Clarence Cooper that when he received the jury summons and learned what the case was about, "I couldn't believe my luck."

That same juror said the "notoriety" of the case "frightens me. In the society that we live in, it seems like any time someone comes to the forefront, they're a target."

Cooper assured the man he has "taken steps to make it highly unlikely that your name or any other name of a juror in this case will be made public."

The courtroom was packed Monday with reporters and spectators, who were required along with the prospective jurors to pass through a metal detector before entering.

Asparagus Meeting

SMITHFIELD — A production meeting for eastern North Carolina asparagus growers will be held here on Jan. 6, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Agriculture Building, corner of North and Eighth streets.

All aspects of asparagus production will be discussed, according to Sam Uzzell, Pitt County extension agent. Uzzell encouraged all interested Pitt County farmers to contact him at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 752-2934.

Agribusiness Seminar Set

An agribusiness seminar will be held Jan. 6 beginning at 9 a.m. at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office.

The meeting will cover, according to Pitt extension agent Roger Cobb, crop diversification, political outlook for tobacco, record keeping, income taxes and profit and loss awareness.

"Farmers need to become more aware of marketing strategies that might make the difference between a profitable or a break even year," said Cobb. "With such tight money and high interest farmers need to watch every penny and know where it is going in their farming operation. This seminar should call attention to these practices."

Persons interested in attending, added Cobb, should contact the Pitt extension office at 752-2934, ext. 361 by Monday to register. There is no charge.

Search For A Good Coat In Russia Is 'Revelation'

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — When the winter wind blows cold in Russia, life itself can depend on an overcoat. And few commodities better illustrate the bleak lot of the Soviet consumer than the search for a coat that is both warm and stylish.

"We can buy coats. But they last only a year or two. And besides, I don't have time to spend the afternoon waiting in line to find one," grumbled one Russian woman.
The price of a Soviet overcoat can run more than double the average monthly wage, 172 rubles (about $250), and imported coats cost even more.

The situation, however, has improved since Nikolai Gogol penned the 19th century classic "The Overcoat," a bitter chronicle of Akaky Akakievich, a clerk in czarist Russia who spent all his money on a tailored overcoat. Thieves stole his new coat, and he suffered from exposure and died because he could not afford another.

A visitor to modern Moscow could be excused for thinking he is seeing double or triple while strolling the street. All the people are wrapped in warm coats, but many sport identical models.

"Our styles are way behind the West. Here, they make the same models every year," said one shopper, adding that she preferred imported over Soviet models.

Among the favorite Soviet-made coats for women are green, blue and maroon models of a wool and synthetic mix, adorned with fur collars sewn on by individual owners. Parkas stuffed with down have yet to appear but those made of synthetics are on the increase.

Men who work out of doors favor the "telogreika," or body-warmer, made of quilted fabric, while factory managers and politicians seem to prefer formal wool coats similar to those worn by their counterparts in the West.

The long lines for clothing, and the lack of variety, has not escaped the attention of the Soviet government, which makes and sells virtually all commercially available clothes in the country.

Kremlin leaders promised to boost production of consumer goods in 1981 by 4.2 percent, faster than the 4.1 percent growth they project for heavy industry. Final data for the year have not been published, but preliminary figures suggest neither goal will be met.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, in a major address Nov. 17, promised that over the next five years "The production of fabrics, footwear, and knitwear will grow by a far larger amount than during the previous five-year period."

"The range of goods will increase and their quality will improve," Brezhnev said, repeating a promise first made in October.

Despite Brezhnev's rhetoric, the Supreme Court (the national parliament), subsequently passed a law which called for faster growth of heavy industry in 1982, at 4.8 percent, over consumer industry, at 4.6 percent.

The Soviet leadership has not explained the shift in priorities, although Premier Nikolai Tikhonov hinted this month that the Kremlin was spending money on arms at the expense of the consumer.

"At the present, we are forced to draw off significant (economic) resources to maintain our defense capacity in order to safeguard the security of the Soviet Union as well as that of its friends," Tikhonov said in a speech Dec. 8.

Western diplomats said the shift in targets might pre-empt a repeat of the 1971-75 period when Soviet planners abruptly dropped promises to boost consumer-goods production.

Kremlin planners made no such promises during the 1976-81 period, and growth in heavy industry continued to outstrip that of consumer goods.

Soviet economists publish little data, and what they have released lately gives no indication that investment in consumer industries will rise adequately to produce a wider and more bountiful selection of overcoats or anything else for the Soviet consumer.

Employees of a Moscow overcoat factory, however, say they are striving to improve the quality and variety of their products, even if their overall output increases only slightly this year.

"We are widening the assortment of styles every year, replacing about 40 percent of them," said Alexei Maksimov, director of the Clara Zetkin factory.

"We vary the volume of each model each year. Five years ago, we offered 60 different styles. Now it is up to 80," he said. The most popular models are wool, he said during a tour of the factory. He pointed out the favorite, a dark wool, single-breasted model that looked ideal for funerals.

Every coat sewn in the Clara Zetkin factory, Maksimov boasted, bears the Soviet mark of quality, which he said is coveted by Russian shoppers.

One consumer said that, because of the difficulty in buying clothing, he pays no attention to the mark of quality.

"I never look at the labels. I just buy what is available," said one Russian. "In fact, it is easy to tell which kinds of coats are popular, because those are the ones that are never available."

London Bear Hunt Left Officers Cold

LONDON (AP) — A bear hunt in the unlikely terrain of London's East End has drawn a blank, but police were going out for another look today, wondering if perhaps the whole thing was a hoax.

No bear was reported missing, but accounts by four schoolboys, footprints in the snow and the discovery of two skinned and headless bear carcasses in the same area led to the search.

"We have no evidence that there is a bear here, other than the boys' report, but we are taking it seriously as a bear is a dangerous animal," said Chief Inspector Peter Platten.

The bear hunt began late Sunday after 13-year-old Tommy Murray and three friends said they saw a brown bear, "a giant, great, growling hairy bear," rearing on its hind legs as they walked across the marshes in the 5,000-acre desolate area in the Lea River valley.

Fifty police officers, some armed with pump action shotguns, are taking part in the hunt over Hackney Marshes. Mounted police and dog handlers joined the search, dubbed by the skeptical press: "Operation Goldilocks."

At the end of the hunt Monday, an officer said, "We are very cold and we have seen no bears. I hope we are not being hoaxed."

Animal experts who examined tracks on the marshes said they were made by a bear, which could be 6 feet tall.

Three weeks ago the corpses of two bears were found in a canal at Hackney. It was believed that a traveling circus that could no longer afford to feed the animals had killed them.

Platten, after a briefing from the experts, told reporters, "A brown bear can run faster than most men, swim and climb trees. It will be shot dead if spotted."

Last year, a giant grizzly named Hercules roamed a Scottish island for nearly a month before being stopped with a drugged dart and returned to his owner for use in television commercials and promotions.

Arafat Sees Idle Words

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat says U.S.-Israeli ties are strong and the squabble over Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights is a "falsity," the As Safir newspaper reported today.

The newspaper, which opposes Arab peace with Israel, quoted remarks made by Arafat Monday after the opening session of the PLO's 60-member Central Council in Damascus, the Syrian capital.

Arafat was quoted as saying he did not believe there are differences of opinion between Israel and United States — a reference to President Reagan's suspension of the new U.S.-Israeli strategic agreement after Israel's Dec. 14 annexation of the Golan. Reagan's move provoked bitter denunciations from Israeli leaders.

The Golan is a strategic plateau on Israel's northeast frontier. Israel seized the area from Syria during the 1967 Middle East war.

As Safir said Arafat said the United States "could not deceive the Palestinian revolution, which firmly believes that this deformed entity (Israel) which survives on American help day by day, cannot operate outside the circle of American decision making."

The PLO, a Beirut-based umbrella group of eight guerrilla factions, is fighting for "a Palestinian state on Israeli-occupied land."

Arafat also repeated his belief that Israel would attack southern Lebanon, the PLO's main power base, because the Jewish state recently mobilized three divisions in northern Israel close to the Lebanese border.

A cease-fire has been in effect in Lebanon since July following 10 days of heavy fighting in which Israel bombed PLO headquarters in Beirut and guerrillas shelled northern Israeli settlements.

Technology Aids Finding Flaws

WASHINGTON (AP) — Administrative error or fraud in government programs is the target of an expanded program of computer technology being set up by the President's Council on Integrity and Efficiency, says a computer-information journal.

According to MIS Week, the program is expected to provide a more thorough, cheaper and faster method than now used to detect flaws in the 60 or so federal assistance and benefit programs accounting for about $81 billion in expenditures annually.

One test program in Tennessee this year detected $3.7 million in overpayments in the food stamp program alone, the publication reported. The test was conducted by the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Pravda Exhorting Polish Communists

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The leading Soviet newspaper hinted today that the Polish Communist Party should purge its ranks, another sign the Kremlin wants Poland's leaders to drastically reduce party membership. Pravda, published daily by the Soviet Communist Party, quoted Communists and workers in Poland as welcoming imposition of martial law Dec. 13 and criticizing the failure of the Polish party to deal with the independent Solidarity union, which is now banned.

"The extremist Solidarity leaders have done much damage to their country's economy," Pravda correspondent Oleg Losoto wrote from Warsaw. "Many people have been deceived by their demagogical agitation and have given in to psychological pressure and open terror. The consequences of these activities are ubiquitous," Pravda said.

"Not everything has returned to normal yet, and there are problems in the party itself. It is known that not all of its members and organizations have passed the difficult examination of acute political struggle," Pravda said.

"The restoration and strengthening of the party's combat ranks...are among the tasks that must be accomplished by the Polish United Workers' (Communist) Party," it said. Pravda quoted Z. Rothe, identified as head of the party organization at a Warsaw engineering plant, as saying, "We believe that the measures taken by the government have helped improve the public mood and restore the pace of production."

"Now much depends on our resolute actions. It is known that not all (party members) passed the test..."

Western diplomats said the article suggested that an internal party shake-up was already underway.

"This means that some of the party members just haven't made it," said one diplomat who requested anonymity. "They are obviously thinking of sifting through the party and getting rid of some members. The phrasing means that some changes in the membership are already going on."

Knowledgeable Soviet and East European sources in Moscow have said the Kremlin expects a purge in the Polish Communist Party, cutting in half the membership of 3 million.

"Everybody here knows there was a lot of fat and corruption in the party (before Dec. 13)," a Soviet Communist Party member said.

Since the founding of Solidarity in August 1980 to its suspension this month, Soviet Communist leaders have repeatedly criticized Polish counterparts for failing to stop the union's challenge for power.

Soviet and diplomatic sources have speculated that the Kremlin might not be entirely pleased with the apparent ascendancy of the Polish army over the Communist Party, but accept it as a temporary necessity for restoring order.

Flock Of Newsmen And Spectators For Trial

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Telephone company workers at the Fulton County Courthouse were almost as busy as prosecutors and defense attorneys Monday as jury selection got underway in the murder trial of Wayne B. Williams.

The workers were completing installation of the bank of more than 40 specially ordered telephones to accommodate a flock of news reporters on hand to cover the most sensational trial here in decades.

A total of 64 media representatives, including eight artists, received credentials to cover the Williams trial. And none of the court-issued press passes to the trial went unused on Monday.

The number of reporters seeking access to the fourth floor courtroom was so great that Judge Clarence Cooper agreed to permit installation of a closed circuit television system to relay the proceedings to a nearby pressroom once testimony begins.

Williams is charged with the murders of two young black men whose bodies were found in the Chattahoochee River west of Atlanta in April and May.

Those two victims, however, were among 28 young blacks, most of them children, whose deaths over a two-year period made Atlanta the focus of international attention.

The unrelenting publicity about the case prompted unprecedented security arrangements Monday, including the use of dogs to check for explosives and the use of a metal detector to screen all reporters, spectators and jurors entering the courtroom.

Fulton County Sheriff Leroy Strychcombe said 15 of the 33 deputies he normally allocates to the Superior Court have been assigned to the Williams trial, including 10 stationed to guard the courtroom.

The sheriff said four deputies have been assigned to guard Williams, who will be transported between the jail and courthouse during the six-to-10-week trial in a three-car caravan of deputies.

While reporters took half the church-pew type seats in the paneled courtroom Monday, the other 65 seats quickly were taken by spectators, even though the day's proceedings promised only a dull, repetitious questioning of prospective jurors.

Another 25 to 30 spectators were turned away by officers who told them they had to be at the courthouse by 8:30 a.m. each day if they hoped to land courtroom seats, which are being allocated on a first come, first served basis.

Guerrillas Blow Up Key Bridge

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — A key bridge was dynamited, five bombs exploded in the capital and at least three soldiers died in the latest fighting between the government and leftist insurgents, authorities say.

A Defense Ministry spokesman, who asks for anonymity, said Monday that guerrillas blew up the 75-yard-long San Francisco bridge, severing this Massachusetts-sized Central American nation's main north-south highway.

The bridge, blown up Sunday night, was between the provincial capital of Santa Ana, 35 miles northwest of San Salvador, and the northern city of Metapan, a shipping point for trade with Guatemala.

Destruction of the bridge marked the guerrillas' second major act of sabotage this year. In October insurgents blew up the Bridge of Gold on the Lempa River and cut El Salvador's main east-west highway.

At least five bombs exploded around the capital Monday night, but no deaths or injuries were reported. One bomb blew up a telephone switchbox at dusk on a street that had been jammed a few minutes earlier with shoppers, police said.

A military spokesman said at least three soldiers have been killed by guerrillas in an army offensive that began Christmas Day in eastern San Vicente province. He did not comment on possible guerrilla casualties.

A source with ties to the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front said eight soldiers were killed in scattered clashes. The front is an ally of leftist guerrillas fighting to topple the U.S.-backed junta.

Church and human rights groups estimate at least 32,000 people have been killed in El Salvador's political violence since the civilian-military junta came to power after a coup in October 1979.

Assassinated In Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The mayor and local leader of the Christian Democrat Party in Ciudad Vieja, 30 miles west of here, was shot and killed by unidentified gunmen, authorities said.

Police said the assailants burst into the home of Gonzalo Quinonez Paredes on Sunday, forced his family to leave, and then shot and killed him. They said they did not know if the gunmen, who fled in a car, were leftists or rightists.

Last week, according to family members, Quinonez Paredes' 16-year-old son, Herbert, was kidnapped as he was heading home from a basketball game and has not been heard from since.

Seven other people were reported kidnapped last week in Ciudad Vieja. Seven bullet-riddled bodies later were found near Mixco, 12 miles north of the capital, and police were trying to determine if they were the bodies of the people seized.

In other reports, authorities said a bomb exploded Monday next to a police station in the city of Chiquimula, about 105 miles east of Guatemala City. They said the blast killed the resident of a nearby house and injured three members of the national police force.

Authorities reported three other deaths during the day in attacks by unidentified gunmen.

Two of the shootings were in the capital and a third in Coban, about 142 miles north. In that incident, gunmen entered the law office of a man identified as Jose Luis Gonzalez and shot him to death.

Four major left-wing guerrilla groups are fighting to overthrow the staunch, anti-Communist government of Gen. Fernando Romeo Lucas Garcia.

The left and right both maintain death squads that work fairly openly in Guatemala, where political violence is estimated to take 300 or more lives a month, according to church and human rights groups. The groups attribute the majority, but not all, of the slayings to rightists.

Deadline Near For Payments

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — A Western banking spokesman says there has been no word on whether Poland will meet its Jan. 31 deadline to pay $500 million in interest, and Western banks will "just have to sit back and wait."

Guido Condrau, vice director of the Swiss Bank Corp. and coordinator of a task force of Poland's Western creditors, said Monday a new loan-repayment pact before the first of the year was "out of the question."

Poland had agreed to make the payment on interest due on $2.4 billion in loans by the end of the year as the final agreement for signing of a tentative loan repayment schedule worked out with Western banks last June.

Condrau, however, suggested that Western banks would not declare Poland in default immediately and said there had been no communications since martial law was declared Dec. 13.

The banks, some analysts have said, could wait well into 1982 before making a decision on writing off the loans if the debts are not paid.

Poland, whose economy is near bankruptcy, owes about $25 billion to the West, about 60 percent to banks and the rest to governments.

Poland's Handlowy foreign trade bank asked 22 banks for a six-month, $350 million loan on Dec. 15 to help pay the year-end interest charges, but there has been no announcement that the loan would be granted.

Condrau said he was unaware of any bank in favor of extending a new loan. Some analysts have said the Soviet Union might come to Poland's aid.

San Francisco's Bank of America is said to have the largest Polish loan portfolio among the U.S. banks — $125 million to $150 million.

Spurs Possible Import Inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because of a surge in imports of some specialty steel products in the third quarter of this year, the Commerce Department is investigating the possibility of unfair competition from other nations.

"If the department finds that a surge in specialty steel imports appears to be the result of unfair competition, an antidumping or countervailing duty investigation could be initiated and duties levied," said a Commerce report released Monday.

The investigations cover imports of various products from France, West Germany, Belgium, Italy, Brazil and Spain.

LANDSLIDE

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Torrential rains flooded portions of drought-stricken Portugal over the weekend, causing a landslide that killed 15 people in a small northern village.

MUGGING VICTIM — Carol Ligotino, 17-year-old tennis star of the Bronx, New York, gives the thumbs-up sign at Montefiore Hospital in New York. Carol underwent more than 12 hours of surgery to save her leg after a man slashed her with a knife as she returned from Christmas shopping. Colleges Hunt Good Freshmen

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Jim O'Donnell recalls that when he was a high school senior last year, he was besieged by letters and phone calls from colleges just dying to have him in their freshman Class of '65.

"There was a whole lot of mail," says O'Donnell, a native of Pittsburgh who finally decided on Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in upstate New York. "There was at least one thing in the mail each day."

They all wanted him badly, and told him so — the University of Pittsburgh, Bucknell University, Penn State, Clarkson College of Technology.

The scholarship offers in some cases would have ensured that O'Donnell would never have to worry about tuition.

irresistible to bright applicants — and money is increasingly the lure.

"Colleges have frequently measured their own progress up the ladder by the quality of freshmen they attract," says Jack Peltason, president of the American Council on Education, a Washington-based lobby for boost their academic reputations by making themselves colleges and universities.

Colleges thus are going to greater lengths than ever to search out good freshmen, and entice them to select their campuses.

Patricia Normand, of Waco, Texas, a freshman with impressive academic credentials enrolled at Rensselaer, was also heavily recruited. She remembers getting two or three letters a day from schools she hadn't even applied to. One school in Florida even offered her a full, four-year scholarship.

"It was a pretty heavy sell," she says. "I would get phone calls, and the person would ask if I was interested in going to their school."

O'Donnell had figured on going to Massachusetts Institute of Technology, but like Ms. Normand, he found Rensselaer too good to pass up when it offered a $2,500-a-year scholarship plus personal computers to use as they wished.

Some other schools are just as aggressive. Washington University, for instance, lures capable students from the Northeast by chartering jets to take them to and from home at greatly reduced cost.

And many universities attract capable freshmen with generous scholarship programs based on brains, not financial need.

Some schools have devised sophisticated methods to seek out qualified freshmen.

At Carnegie-Mellon University, a 143-page internal document entitled "Marketing Action Plan" outlines a highly detailed strategy for finding and luring qualified freshmen. It identifies the geographic regions where it considers itself well-established, and it lists Houston, St. Louis and Miami as three "growth areas" where the university is working this year to become better known and more attractive.

The University of Pittsburgh gathers information about quality students from the College Board and the National Merit Scholarship Corporation — a step almost all competitive four-year schools do nowadays.

But then Pitt uses that information to communicate on a very individualized basis by direct mail with qualified would-be applicants. So sophisticated is the Pitt mailing effort that the Direct Mail Marketing Association last year gave it its top prize, beating out the likes of Aetna Life & Casualty and Encyclopedia Britannica.

But with the competition for good freshmen heating up, and with college tuition aid from Washington drying up, there is mounting concern that some colleges are turning to improper pressure tactics that victimize some applicants.

Peltason says he knows of few such cases of sharp recruiting tactics, and no figures exist that would show how much they have increased.

But he and others believe such practices are growing more common, and his group has joined with other educational bodies in an effort to self-police college recruitment behavior.

Guidelines adopted by higher education groups in 1979 ban the practice of encouraging students already enrolled at another campus to transfer out, for instance. A few winters ago, for example, the University of Miami advertised itself in student publications at several Boston colleges in the midst of a particularly hard winter.

The guidelines also prohibit colleges from explicitly comparing themselves to other schools — as when the University of Bridgeport compared itself in newspaper ads last winter to Harvard University.

But the major current problem involves pressuring students to accept freshman spots by using non-refundable fees, according to Charles Marshall, executive director of the National Association of College Admissions Counselors which polices the guidelines.

Most commonly, says Marshall, a college will offer a student a place, require a deposit to hold that spot, then demand that the student make a final acceptance of admission shortly thereafter — before the student has had a chance to hear from other schools he or she may have applied to.

Marshall says the guidelines are meant to ensure that students have a right to demand time to hear from all the schools they apply to before reaching a decision — and not stand to spend hundreds of dollars to reserve spots in schools they may not want to attend.

On the immediate horizon, Marshall predicts a sharp increase of another kind of pressure by colleges: the use of financial aid packages combining federal tuition money with scholarship grants.

Marshall says some schools with substantial endowments might be tempted to present capable students with seductive money offers, then pressure them into quick acceptance decisions.

"It puts an awful lot of pressure on the student. With the cutbacks in Washington tuition aid, I anticipate that this area of competitive financial aid abuse will go skyrocketing," says Marshall.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period until Wednesday for most of the Pacific coast and inland to the central Plains. Showers are also expected for the Georgia-northern Florida area. Weather will be cold in northern states and milder in the southern half of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A cold front moving through central North Carolina last night will move off the North Carolina coast this morning. And behind the cold some improvement in the weather is predicted across the state.

High pressure centered over the mid-Mississippi Valley early this morning moved east across the Ohio Valley today and controlled North Carolina's weather. As a result skies will be partly cloudy across most of the state into Wednesday.

Cloudy skies and chilly temperatures were the rule once again Monday. Dense fog covered much of the state during the early morning hours. The fog improved slowly with some fog lingering through the afternoon in the east.

The cloudiness did break some during the afternoon across parts of the western Piedmont and in the extreme northeast. Afternoon highs were mostly in the 40s. Cape Hatteras and Elizabeth City were the warmest in the state with highs of 53 degrees.

During the night some rain developed over central and eastern North Carolina. But by the early morning hours rain was confined to the coastal areas.

Recreational weather outlook: Partly cloudy through Wednesday. Highs will be mostly in the 40s today and Wednesday with lows tonight from the teens in the northern mountains to the mid-30s on the coast.

Along the coast small craft advisories are in effect this morning for north to northeast winds increasing to 15 to 25 knots.

Would Prepare For Nuke Blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should take a leading role in developing an international force to deal with the aftermath of a nuclear explosion, says Sen. William Proxmire.

"It is gruesome to contemplate, but the truth is the international community is not prepared to respond to a nuclear catastrophe," the Wisconsin Democrat said in a news release Monday.

"Given the possibility that a nuclear explosion will occur somewhere, sometime, the industrialized nations should be preparing today for the complicated process of clean-up, medical care and humanitarian assistance," he said.

Accusing the Reagan administration of "half-hearted attempts to limit the spread of nuclear weapons," Proxmire also said the United States should convene an international conference on proliferation.

Asylum Is Denied

SAN YSIDRO, Calif. (AP) — A Polish woman's request for political asylum in the United States has been rejected because her case wasn't considered "compelling," despite her assertion that she had been jailed in Poland, immigration officials say.

The request from the 20-year-old woman, who was waiting in Mexico to enter the United States, was forwarded to the State Department for a recommendation.

Immigration and Naturalization Service District Director Robert Mitton said Monday the woman's plight was not desperate enough for granting immediate asylum.

"We did not feel she established a compelling, clear-cut case to allow her to enter the country immediately as a refugee pending final determination," he said.

The woman's identity was withheld at her request. She described herself as a student member of the Solidarity independent trade union, and said she had been jailed for 48 hours before leaving Poland because she provided food to striking Solidarity members.

Mitton said the woman left Poland in early December, traveled to Moscow, Paris, Scotland, Ireland and Havana before entering Mexico with a visitor's visa.

Polish officials didn't seize her passport or her airline tickets, so there are reasons to believe she wasn't being persecuted, Mitton said.

The woman appeared at the San Ysidro port of entry, in south San Diego, on Christmas Eve and asked for asylum.

A State Department ruling on her request could take up to 45 days, Mitton said.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly in slow trading today continuing the sluggish trend of the past couple of weeks. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 3.04 Monday, slipped .57 to 869.77 by noontime today. Losers held a 4-3 lead over gainers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. At the opening, the government reported that the composite index of leading indicators dropped 0.3 percent in November, after declines of 1.6 percent in October and 2.1 percent in September. The performance of the index, which is designed to detect the likely future course of the economy, was in line with advance expectations on Wall Street. The NYSE's composite index lost .16 to 70.78. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .79 at 317.74. Volume on the Big Board

Charged With Slaying Father
MAXTON, N.C. (AP) — A 29-year-old Maxton man has been charged with murder in the shotgun slaying of his 72-year-old father, sheriff's deputies said Monday. Robeson County Deputy Tommy Rogers said Robert Dean Locklear was arrested Saturday after an argument over a church radio program apparently led to the shooting. Rogers said Marvin Ernest Locklear was found dead by relatives and had been shot in the upper chest with a 12-gauge shotgun. Rogers said Locklear apparently wanted to turn off a church broadcast and his father refused.

See Rising Acceptance Of Female Firefighters

By The Associated Press
 While female firefighters are gaining acceptance from their male peers, some of the stoutest resistance continues to come from the males firefighters' wives, officials say.

Becky Mann, wife of Raleigh firefighter Charles Mann, still has not accepted the change. "I got no use for them (female firefighters)," said Becky Mann, wife of Raleigh firefighter Charles Mann. "The fact that they're living with women in the station house doesn't bother us. (But) I've heard talk from the men and their wives and the feeling is that if one of the men got trapped in a burning building, they (women) couldn't get him out."

"There are some jobs men can do and some women can do better. They can pass all the laws they want about men and women being equal, but I just don't have any use for it," she said. Ken Farmer, executive director of the State Fire Commission, said that women are expected to perform the same tasks as men. He said they have been accepted by their male colleagues in most cases, but some women say hard feelings remain.

"There are still some men who don't like the idea of women being here," said Connie Austin, one of eight women firefighters for the Raleigh Fire Department. Farmer said he had no exact figures on the number of women firefighters statewide, but said most Perry Morgan of Route 3, Washington, was in the Pitt County jail today under $2,000 bond, charged with unlawful entry into an occupied home and malicious burning of property.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson reported that Morgan was arrested Monday night in connection with a fire that took place at 2:33 p.m. on Sunday at the home of Loraine Riggs of Route 4, Box 660, Greenville. The property is owned by Floyd Harris of 1205 Greenville Boulevard. Morgan allegedly broke a bathroom window to enter the house and set fire to bathroom curtains. Damage to the bathroom is estimated at $400.

major cities now employ female firefighters, including Greensboro, Charlotte and Raleigh. He said women have been particularly effective in volunteer fire departments.

Disagreement On Saudi Role

By DANIEL GREBLER Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Sen. Charles Percy and Israel's deputy foreign minister differed today on the role of Saudi Arabia in arranging an Israeli cease-fire with Palestinian guerrillas in July. Israel Radio reported.

A broadcast reported Percy said the Saudis were a crucial intermediary in bringing about the U.S.-sponsored cease-fire but that deputy Foreign Minister Yehuda Ben-Meir said the Palestinians agreed to the armistice because Israeli attacks had driven them to near collapse.

"Obviously, it's extraordinarily difficult to control a group that has so many factions within it," Percy told Israel Radio. "But to the extent that anyone can exercise influence and control the Saudis have attempted to exert that influence."

Ben-Meir said Percy today visited Israel's northern border with Lebanon, scene of two weeks of attacks and counter-attacks between the Israelis and the Palestinians before the cease-fire.

The Illinois Republican, who chairs the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and frequently criticizes Israel, planned to meet Prime Minister Menachem

Deliberating On Killings

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The defense lawyer for William Bonin, charged with killing 12 young men and boys whose nude bodies were dumped along Southern California freeways, says a quick verdict from the jury could mean bad news for his client.

Superior Court Judge William Keene instructed the jurors for about an hour Monday before they started deliberations at 11 a.m. The panel recessed for the night about 4:30 p.m. and were to resume today.

The 34-year-old, twice-paroled sex offender could be sentenced to die in the gas chamber if the panel convicts him in the Freeway Killings.

If the jurors bring back a quick decision, it means "they believe (television newsman David) Lopez across-the-board," William Charvet said Monday. "But I don't think the jury is going to believe Lopez across-the-board."

Lopez testified during the 10-week trial that Bonin admitted to killing 21 people during an off-the-record interview in the jail.

The reporter initially refused to testify, but changed his mind late in the trial when he said Bonin violated an agreement to not talk to other news organizations.

Since 1972, the bodies of 44 young men and boys were found along Southern California freeways. Investigators zeroed in on 21 of them and finally charged Bonin with 12 of the slayings.

In his final arguments Monday, Deputy District Attorney Sterling Norris repeated his grim depiction of hitchhiking youths strangled in a "van of death" and dumped "like garbage."

"This evidence, this overwhelming evidence against this defendant has earned him convictions in these brutal deaths," he said. "Give him what he has earned. Give him what he deserves."

Charvet never specifically asked jurors to acquit Bonin,

Fog-Bound Heels Hold Off Hogs, 31-27

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Shrouded in obscurity by a dense fog and a potent North Carolina offense in the second half, Arkansas appeared ready to hand the 11th-ranked Tar Heels an easy Gator Bowl victory.

But the Razorbacks, led by eternal optimist Lou Holtz, staged a fourth-quarter comeback and forced the North Carolina defense to come up with the key plays in a 31-27 victory.

"I'm sure a lot of people thought the game was over early in the fourth quarter, but I never felt that way," Holtz said. "We managed to recover an onside kick and then got a lift from a couple of big pass plays."

Junior tailback Kelvin Bryant rushed for 148 yards on 27 carries and one touchdown, while freshman Ethan Horton, switched from quarterback to tailback when Bryant and backup Tyrone Anthony were hurt in mid-season, ran for 144 yards and two scores on 27 carries.

Combined with a 1-yard sneak by quarterback Rod Elkins, North Carolina ran up a 31-10 lead with 7:29 left, enough to have sent some of the Razorback faithful out into a night so thick with fog that the public address announcer suggested that the officials would switch from whistles to foghorns.

But with the aid of penalties and passes by freshman quarterback Brad Taylor, Arkansas marched back down the field and scored with 5:03 remaining on a 1-yard run by Jessie Clark. A two-point conversion pass closed the Razorback deficit to 31-18.

Bruce Lahay's onside kick was recovered by Ed Jackson and the Razorbacks parlayed the strategy into a 7-yard scoring pass from Taylor to Darryl Mason with 2:44 remaining. Suddenly, the rout was a contest at 31-25.

"I was a little nervous," Bryant said, fearing that his game-high performance would come in a losing effort. "I'm just glad the defense came through in the clutch."

North Carolina took the ensuing kickoff at its own 5. After being pinned in by the Razorbacks, punter Jeff Hayes elected to run out of the end zone for the safety instead of yielding ground for a last-gasp Arkansas attack.

After Gary Anderson returned Hayes' free kick 29 yards to the Tar Heel 49, North Carolina's defense did its job. The key play was a sack by seldom-used Ronnie Snipes, a freshman nose guard who had been in on several plays earlier.

"The center tried to pick me up," Snipes said of his pass rush which sent Taylor reeling for a 17-yard loss. "But it was a little too late by the time he got to me."

Neither Holtz, who is now 2-3 against North Carolina, nor Tar Heel Coach Dick Crum, now 5-0 in post-season play, would blame the fog for offensive or defensive problems.

"The fog was on both sides of the field," Holtz said, "though

I think it's easier to run in the fog than pass in it. But we have no excuses."

Elkins basically agreed about the problems with passing in high humidity and low visibility.

"It made the ball a little wet. It was easy to grip but it just flew through the air," Elkins said. "I didn't put too much on my throw at all and it was taking off."

The fog also played havoc with ABC-TV's national telecast. Starting in the second half, viewers saw more field level and end zone shots due to the height of the press box camera angles and the worsening conditions.

North Carolina finished its season at 10-2 and also took its third consecutive bowl victory, a first in Atlantic Coast Conference history. The Tar Heels are also 3-1 in Gator Bowl play. Arkansas closed at 8-4.

distance Wichita State, 8-0, which received two first-place votes and 988 points.

Virginia, fourth last week, garnered 957 points in moving one notch to third. Kentucky, 6-1, received 834 points.

Arkansas, 7-0, received the other first-place vote and 748 points in advancing from sixth to fifth. San Francisco, Missouri, DePaul, Minnesota and Iowa round out the Top Ten.

San Francisco, which won three games last week to improve its record to 10-0, moved up one notch with 725 points. Missouri, 6-6, and moved from ninth to seventh with victories over Youngstown State and Alabama-Birmingham, while DePaul, 6-3, rose from 13th to ninth after its 75-68 nationally televised defeat of Louisville last Saturday.

Minnesota, a 62-52 loser to Kansas State last Monday night, dropped from fifth to ninth, receiving 550 points. Iowa, 6-1, remained 10th after a week off from action, receiving 537 points.

The Second Ten is comprised of Indiana, Alabama, Tulsa, Louisville, Oregon State, UCLA, Georgetown, Houston, Villanova and North Carolina State.

East Carolina Women Start Long Road Trip Against Northwestern

East Carolina's women, after a 17-day layoff, return to action tonight in Miami, Fla., at the Miami Jamboree. East Carolina will face Northwestern in the first game of the week-long round-robin.

The contest is the first of six road games the Lady Pirates play before returning home on January 10 to face Virginia. They play again Thursday in Miami against Georgia State, then take on the hosting Lady Hurricanes on Saturday, and meet Miami of Ohio on Sunday.

On Tuesday, January 5, East Carolina will play at Kentucky, and on January 7, at Louisiana State.

and it didn't bother us. This year, we are very young, and I just don't know what to expect."

While the Pirates have played a tough schedule so far — and have a tough one coming up — Andruzzi says that she is encouraged by the team's hard work. "We're picking up about where we left off," she said. "We didn't get to work on all I wanted us to, due to the illnesses we've had, but the girls are enthusiastic about playing. I think, too, you'll see a lot more variations (in the lineup)."

Northwestern brings in a 5-2 record to the Jamboree. "They lost to Vanderbilt and DePaul. They are bigger than we are, and are led by Amy Pritchard, who's scoring 17 points a game." East Carolina beat Northwestern by one last year, and the Lady Wildcats return most of that team.

"They are very disciplined and patient. They'll play a lot of man-to-man defense, which we haven't seen a lot."

Georgia State, 3-4, has played some tough opponents, the coach said. "They have a new coach with a powerful lineup that's bigger than us too."

Miami of Florida is 3-1 and has beaten Florida and lost to Florida State. "They were the state tournament winner last year. They're very, very fast, one of the fastest teams that we'll see." They are led by Sylvia Wilson, averaging 24 points a game and 12 rebounds.

Miami of Ohio is 4-1 and lost only to Detroit by one in overtime. "They have a strong point guard who controls the action in Mariann Myers who is averaging 14 points a game.

They have a very experienced squad."

Andruzzi said that she is glad to have a day off between the first and second games. "That will give us a chance to regroup depending on how the game comes out. And the chance to get prepared for the next regardless."

Following the six-day affair, the Lady Pirates fly on to Kentucky, currently 5-2, and then to Louisiana State, "either 4-3 or 5-3," according to Andruzzi.

The Lady Pirates will find themselves further handicapped should they have an injury or get into foul trouble. The team has been reduced to only nine players.

Andruzzi said that Darlene Hedges, 6-0 center, has left the team due to illness. "She is physically unable to play at this time," Andruzzi said, "due to anemia. We don't expect her back for the rest of the season. And I'm unsure about her status for next year."

"With only nine players, it's hurt us in practice. We haven't been able to go full court. But we'll survive. We've always been a surviving team. If we get into foul trouble, we'll just have to adjust."

Carolina Holds To Top Spot; Wichita State Moves Into 2nd

By The Associated Press
North Carolina was accustomed to the top spot in the Associated Press' college basketball poll, but Wichita State was new to the feeling of being No. 2. Both teams, however, felt that scary feeling of a near upset.

The latest balloting of a national panel of sportswriters and broadcasters released Monday had the Tar Heels on top for the fifth straight week following their 82-69 win over previously unbeaten and then No. 2 Kentucky in a nationally-televised game last Saturday.

Kentucky dropped to fourth and the Shockers of Wichita State moved up one notch to assume the second spot in the rankings.

Both North Carolina and Wichita State received scares in tournament action Monday night, as the Tar Heels escaped with a 56-50 overtime victory over Penn State in the first round of the Cable Car Classic and Wichita State just got by Fullerton State, 60-57, in first-round play in the Rainbow Classic.

The Tar Heels, 7-0, received 50 of 53 first-place votes and 1,055 points to easily outdistance Wichita State, 8-0, which received two first-place votes and 988 points.

East Carolina's Pirates, still looking for a victory on the road, hike the highways again Wednesday night, hoping to end 1981 on a happy note.

The 24 Pirates will visit Fairfax, Va., where they'll meet the Patriots of George Mason University in the first ECAC-South game for the East Carolina.

George Mason brings a 3-4 mark into the game, having already played one league game, that against unbeaten James Madison, where they lost, 67-60.

"George Mason is probably the least known school in the ECAC-South," ECU's Coach Dave Odom said, "but it's as talented a team as there is in the league right now."

Odom feels that despite the record of the Patriots, they have lost to good people — like nationally ranked Virginia, along with unbeaten James Madison.

"My main concern is not so much George Mason, but with that in mind we have to get ourselves ready to play. That's where my main emphasis is," he said as practice resumed following the holiday break.

"Any time you go home, you eat a lot of food and get a little out of shape. We have to get back in shape, both mentally and physically."

"From a psychological standpoint, maybe we had to learn to lose before we can learn to win," Odom continued, talking of the Pirates' woes on the road. "I think we have learned some things that will help us down the road. It's disconcerting to have so many games on the road (eight of the first 11) when you need experience, and gaining experience winning is more value than the other way around."

Odom doesn't see the game as being a critical one. "Heck, no! It's important because it's the first conference game, and we want to do well in that. And we don't want a long losing tailspin. I think we've reached about as much as we can take."

Odom said the told the players following their 70-57 loss to Duke University last week that the team still had lost out on only one goal — that of winning an invitational tournament. "The rest are still very much in front of us and a possibility."

Odom also feels that the offense needs to put things together: "to loosen up."

"Right now, we're playing tighter than we should be. Even though we're hitting a good percentage (50.0), we still seem to be struggling more than I like for the good shots."

Leading the Patriots are two veteran players, sophomore guard Andy Bolen (6-1), whose 17.3 average is second best in the ECAC-South, and 6-10 senior center Andre Gaddy, who is hitting 16.6 per game, third best in the league. He's also pulling down 7.6 rebounds a contest, third in the league.

Freshman guard Carlos Yates, 6-5, is the only other player in double figures with a 12.1 average. Other starters are expected to be Ricky Dillard, a 6-4 sophomore (3.9) and Mike Shannon, a 6-7 junior (3.3) at the forwards.

"Gaddy could be as good as any pivot man in the conference," Odom said. "Yates is one of the mst outstanding freshmen around, and Bolen is one of the better guards in our league."

"I'm concerned about stopping them, but I think our defense is pretty good. Nobody has been running roughshod over us. I was a little disappointed in our zone defense against Duke, but I think they respected our defense, or they wouldn't have held the ball against us."

Charles Green has moved into the scoring lead for the Pirates, hitting 11.9, while Tony Byles is right behind at 11.4, and Morris Hargrove is hitting 11.1. Mark McLaurin, just off the injured list, has a 8.7 average now.

Hargrove is the leading rebounder with a 6.4 mark.

Following the meeting with the Patriots, the Pirates stay on the road for one more game, traveling to Charleston, S.C., on Monday to meet Baptist College. They then return home on Wednesday, January 6, hosting William & Mary in another ECAC-South contest.

Tar Heels Nip Penn State In OT, 56-50

By The Associated Press
It was simply a case of one team having all the troops. That team was the Minnesota Gophers, who marched all over Army 79-37 in the opening round of Pillsbury Classic Monday night. The ninth-ranked Gophers' victory was the most impressive on a busy night of college basketball festivals, classics and holiday tournaments.

"Going in, we felt we may have the best 10 players on the floor, not one or two best," said Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher. "It is hard to fool guys when you are so much bigger and faster."

Army Coach Pete Gaudet wasn't that impressed with the Gophers — for the first 10 minutes at least.

"We did what we wanted to do. If we had continued to play our game, we could have made it respectable," he said, referring to the small 21-15 lead host Minnesota held at that point. Then the Gopher reserves went on a 14-2 tear and Minnesota was ready for the finals, against Arizona.

"It was without question our best defensive game," added

Dutcher.

Gary Holmes paced 6-1 Minnesota with 17 points. Arizona moved into the championship game with a 64-59 decision over Montana State. Gregg Cook and Jeff Collins combined for 34 points and led a 14-2 spurt in a four-minute span of the second half to put the Wildcats on top.

In other tournament action involving ranked teams, No. 1 North Carolina edged Penn State 56-50 in overtime in the first round of the Cable Car Classic in Santa Clara, Calif.; No. 2 Wichita State nipped

Fullerton State 70-67 and No. 20 North Carolina State beat Michigan State 67-46 in the opening round of the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii; No. 7 Missouri took Southern California 65-58 to win the Winston Tire Classic; 12th-ranked Alabama routed Delaware 84-62 in the Best Holiday Classic in Portland, Me.; No. 19 Villanova edged No. 11 Indiana in the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York; No. 15 Oregon State fell to unbeaten Idaho 71-49 in the semifinals of the Far West Classic in Portland, Ore., and 18th-rated Houston edged Purdue 59-58 in the opening round of the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans.

North Carolina, fresh off a decisive victory over then-No. 2 Kentucky clear across the country in New Jersey, slumbered through much of its game with Penn State in Santa Clara, Calif. But Sam Perkins hit two free throws with two seconds left in overtime for the triumph.

The Tar Heels, 7-0, who were led by Perkins' 23 points, meet Santa Clara, which beat Texas Christian 78-63.

"They needed a game like this just to shake them up," said Coach Dean Smith.

"We knew it would be a tough game, and I don't think we were looking past them," Tar Heel forward James Worthy added. "They played real physical and it was the first physical game for us."

Tony Martin hit four free throws in the final 24 seconds to preserve Wichita State's eighth straight triumph. Antoine Carr led the Shockers with 20 points and Martin had eight rebounds for Winston Tire winner Missouri. Guard Jon Sundvold, the tournament's most valuable player, added 14 points and six rebounds for the 8-0 Tigers.

Forward Ricky Frazier, who was ejected from the game with five seconds remaining in the first half for throwing a punch at one of the Trojans, added 12 points for Missouri.

Alabama stormed to a 48-22 halftime lead and coasted, with Bobby Lee Hurt pouring in 24 points, including several crowd-pleasing dunks. The Crimson Tide takes on host Maine, an 80-64 winner over New Hampshire in the Best Holiday finals.

Villanova, which trailed Indiana by 12 points in the second half, spurred to victory as freshman Ed Pinckney — who grew up in New York — hit for 22 points. A game-tying basket in the final six seconds by the Hoosiers' Steve Bouchie was disallowed because teammate Randy Wittman had stepped on the end line just before passing to Bouchie.

The Wildcats take on Big East rival St. John's, N.Y., in the Holiday Festival final tonight. St. John's edged Kansas 76-75 on Kevin Williams' three-point play with 26 seconds remaining in the opener.

Surprising Idaho's romp over Oregon State began early as the Vandals burst to a 10-1 lead. Ken Owens had 22 points to lead Idaho into the Far West finals against Oregon, which edged Portland 69-68.

"The Vandals whipped us at five positions all night long," said OSU Coach Ralph Miller. "We just got beat tonight royally by a team that's so much better than us, it's terrible."

No. 18 Houston, with Rob Williams scoring 19 points — including two crucial free throws with just over a minute to play — squeaked by Purdue. The Boilermakers had two chances to win in the final minute but Kevin Stallings twice missed jump shots.

The Cougars take on Louisiana State for the Sugar Bowl title. LSU knocked off Wake Forest 70-64 as Howard Carter put in 20 points.

In a non-tournament game, No. 8 DePaul beat Illinois State 74-58. Terry Cummings had 24 points and Skip Dillard added 18 as DePaul upped its lifetime mark against Illinois State to 10-1.

Toledo and Illinois advanced to the finals of the Blade City Glass Classic. The host Rockets bombed Yale 90-68 and Illinois beat Bowling Green 56-51.

Rhode Island defeated Arkansas-Little Rock 83-68 and will face run-and-gun Lamar, which scooped past Western Illinois 83-57, in the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City.

Inconsistency Hampers Panther Cagers In Early Part Of Year

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — It was an all too typical North Pitt performance. In the first half, the Panthers built a 28-18 halftime lead over Greenville Rose. The second half, however, saw North Pitt score just 17 points and lose, 48-45.

"We blew 'em out like we owned them in the first half and we weren't used to that," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said. "In the second half we didn't do a lot of things right. Our offense was disorganized like it was early in the season."

North Pitt went into the title game of the Pitt County Holiday Tournament having apparently conquered the inconsistency that had plagued them early in the season. The Panthers had won four straight — the last defeat a 57-48 loss at Rose on Dec. 8.

"I really thought we were coming around there for three or four games," Deans added. "We were still inconsistent, but our inconsistent periods were short in duration."

That North Pitt's patterned offense was still having its problems concerned Deans. Still, it seemed to be coming along. That is, until the second half against Rose.

What happened? "We just weren't used to having that kind of lead," Deans said. "It's hard to play from 16 points below or from 16 points above. I'd rather play from above, but we aren't used to that."

"I've been encouraged at times and discouraged at times (this season)," Deans added. "Right now, though, we just haven't jelled as a team, especially on offense."

North Pitt, now 6-4 overall and 2-0 in the Eastern Carolina Conference, does not return to action until Jan. 5 when the Panthers travel to Snow Hill to face league foe Greene Central.

During the week break, the Panthers will continue trying to work out the wrinkles in their offense as they prepare for a 12-game stretch that includes 11 conference games.

When asked about the cause of the Panthers' offensive difficulties, Deans pointed to two major reasons: injuries and more emphasis on rebounding and defense.

Already this season forward Dennis Bradley and guards Greg Hines and Mitchell Cox have missed a number of games because of a variety of injuries and illnesses. All three are starters.

"We haven't had a chance to play five or six players consistently," Deans said. "It's improved our depth, but it's also a big reason we've been inconsistent on offense."

North Pitt's defense has been anything but inconsistent. "Defense has been one of our bright spots. I'm real pleased with that," Deans said. "We've emphasized it more."

"We've used a lot of different defenses — zone, man-to-man, combination zone and man-to-man and match-up zone — and they've really responded well," he added. "I can think of three games real quick that our defense has won for us."

Those three games were a 38-36 win over Williamston the second game of the season, a 40-36 victory over D.H. Conley on Dec. 18 and a 49-44 overtime win against Farmville Central last week.

The Panthers opened the season with a 48-38 loss to still-unbeaten Roanoke — the same Redskin team that defeated North Pitt in the district championship game a year ago.

North Pitt won its next two, defeating Williamston and Rose (53-41) before dropping a 48-46 decision to Roanoke. A 57-48 loss to Rose followed. From there, however, the Panthers defeated ECC foes Charles B. Aycock (57-30) and Southern Nash (59-53) before downing D.H. Conley and Farmville.

"We could very easily have lost only one game," Deans said. "We've had a very competitive schedule. We like playing Rose, and Roanoke is right down the road and we'll continue to play them — even if they do beat us."

The Panthers entered the 1981-82 season with four players who started at some point last season. Those back this season who are starting are Bradley, a 6-4 junior, Cox, a 5-8 guard, Hines, a 6-0 junior, and Vince Parker, a 6-3 senior forward.

Richard Heller, a 6-4 senior center, fills out the starting lineup. Bradley and Parker lead the Panthers in scoring. Both are averaging around 12 points a game.

Because of the Panthers' injuries and inconsistency, however, Deans said he really has eight players he considers as starters. Joining the five listed starters are 6-0 senior forward Toby Crandol, who started some a year ago, 5-8 junior guard Greg Briley and 6-1 junior center Ken Whitehurst.

"Our depth is probably better than we've had in the past," Deans said. "I think that is really going to help us the rest of the season."

"Part of the reason (for our depth) is that we've been so inconsistent. The kids got their chance because some of the other people we not performing like I thought they should."

And, as always, Deans lists more players on his team than perhaps any other coach in the area. In all, there are 16 players on this year's club.

Others on the team are center Jesse Sheppard, a 6-0 senior, forwards Shelton Hooker, a 6-0 junior, David Brown, a 5-10 junior, and Jesse Harris, a 6-0 junior, and guards Jay Hines, a 5-8 junior, David Davenport, a 5-10 junior, Mike Battle, a 6-0 junior, and Mitchell Whitfield, a 5-11 junior.

It is this group of 16 players that has been picked by many as the team to beat in the ECC. "I think we definitely should be a challenger for it, but I think people are overlooking a lot of good basketball teams," Deans said. "Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central may be a determining factor as well as Greene Central and Southwest (Edgecombe)."

"I think we're more evenly-matched this year (with the loss of Conley and North Lenoir to the Coastal Conference)," he added, "and I think there'll be a closely-knotted group at the top."

Greene Central Teams Gain Tourney Finals

WHEAT SWAMP — Roderick Lane scored 21 points and Greene Central held off a second-half rally by North Lenoir to come away with a 48-36 win Monday night in the first round of the Tri-County Holiday Tournament.

The Rams, now 3-6, will play Ayden-Grifton for the tournament championship Wednesday night at 8:30. The Chargers defeated South Lenoir, 59-55, in the other first-round game Monday.

In the girls' bracket, Greene Central got 19 points from Letha Taylor to whip South Lenoir, 52-30, in an opening-round game. The Lady Rams, now 7-2, will face North Lenoir Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the title game. North Lenoir defeated Ayden-Grifton, 48-36, Monday in the other opening-round game.

"I felt like we played good overall, but in the second and third quarter we shot terrible," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "We've had trouble this year in the third quarter. We can't seem to maintain our concentration on offense."

Greene Central jumped out to a 13-5 lead in the opening quarter only to see North Lenoir close to six (21-15) at halftime. The Hawks, now 4-10 this year, continued their rally into the third quarter, outscoring the Rams, 9-6, to cut the deficit to 27-24.

That was as close as North Lenoir could get, however, as the Rams outscored the Hawks, 21-12, in the final eight minutes to seal the victory.

Danny Wooten led North Lenoir with 14 points. He and Lane were the only scorers in double figures for the night.

In the girls' game, Greene Central rushed out to a 15-7 first-quarter lead, increased it to 25-16 at the half and never looked back.

The Lady Rams outscored South Lenoir 12-8 and 15-6 in the final two periods to coast home with the 22-point win.

Jami Hill led South Lenoir with 10 points. Hill and Taylor, who had nine field goals and one free throw in four attempts for her game-high 19 points, were the only two players in double figures.

Ayden-Grifton Rally Downs South Lenoir

WHEAT SWAMP — Ayden-Grifton's Chargers rallied in the final period to outpace South Lenoir to the wire and take a 59-55 victory in the first round of the Tri-County Holiday Tournament being played at North Lenoir High School.

Ayden-Grifton's girls, winners in just one game so far this year, fell to North Lenoir, 48-36.

Tonight, Ayden-Grifton (1-8) meets South Lenoir, a 52-30 loser to Greene Central in the girls' consolation game, while North Lenoir boys, who fell to Greene Central, 48-36, takes on South Lenoir in the consolation.

The championship games sent Greene Central girls against North Lenoir while Ayden-Grifton's boys (4-5) take on Greene Central on Thursday.

The Chargers jumped out to a 20-12 lead in the first period of the boys' game, as if to take an easy victory over their 2-A foe. But South Lenoir rallied in the second frame for a 21-9 margin, rushing out to a 33-29 halftime lead.

Ayden-Grifton clipped a point off that in the third period, 9-8, but still trailed, 41-38, as the last quarter opened. In that, Ayden-Grifton roared away, 21-14, to claim the win.

Bernard Cannon led the Ayden-Grifton scoring with 20 points, while Tyrone Gay added 14. D. Ingram led North Lenoir with 15 points, while Wood had 14 and Whitfield had 10.

"We didn't play well the whole game," A-G coach Bob Murphrey said. "It was very sloppy. Fortunately, South Lenoir didn't play well either. It was a typical holiday tournament game."

In the girls' game, North Lenoir roared out to a 14-2 lead and was never in trouble again. Despite an A-G rally, 14-8, in the second quarter, the Lady Hawks led, 22-16, at the half.

North Lenoir extended its lead to 34-25, in the third period, and closed out the Lady Chargers, 14-11, in the final frame.

Mary Harris and Susan Smith each had 16 points to lead the North Lenoir scoring. Linda Brown had 12 and Angela Griffin had 11 for Ayden-Grifton.

First U.S. Test-Tube Baby OK

By R.D. GERSH
Associated Press Writer
NORFOLK, Va. (AP) —
The birth of the first test-tube baby in America, conceived in a laboratory dish, was a "day of hope" for treatment of infertility, says the physician who conducted the procedure.

Elizabeth Jordan Carr, who is 1 day old today, is "perfectly normal," said Dr.

Fred Wirth, the pediatrician attending the delivery by Caesarean section at 7:46 a.m. Monday at Norfolk General Hospital.

Judith Carr, a school teacher from Westminster, Mass., had had three abnormal pregnancies, forcing the removal of her Fallopian tubes that are necessary for normal fertilization.

"This condition made it completely impossible for Mrs. Carr to become pregnant except by the process of in vitro fertilization," said Dr. Howard Jones, who runs the in vitro clinic here with his wife, Dr. Georgeanna Jones. In vitro — "in glass" — means isolated from the living organism.

"What a wonderful Christmas present for them," said Jacqueline Bachman, who moved into the Carr's former home three weeks ago when they moved to another neighborhood. Mrs. Carr, 28, is a school teacher and her husband, Roger, 30, is a mechanical engineer.

Since Drs. Patrick Steptoe and Robert Edwards pioneered the process in England with the birth of Louise Brown in July 1978, about 20 test-tube babies have been born in England and Australia, including one to an American couple in England earlier this year.

"I think the significance of this day lies in the fact that we have demonstrated that the technique of in vitro fertilization ... is applicable in the hands of others. I think this is a day of hope," Jones said.

Five women treated at the Norfolk clinic are pregnant, and there are thousands on the waiting list.

Jones said there is a pool of about 2½ million involuntarily infertile people who could be helped by in vitro fertilization.

The process involves removing a mature egg from the mother's ovary, fertilizing it with the father's sperm in a small glass dish in the laboratory and transferring it to the mother's uterus about 36 hours later. If the embryo successfully implants itself, the pregnancy proceeds normally.

Dr. Mason Andrews, who performed the Caesarean section on Mrs. Carr, said that had nothing to do with the method of fertilization.

"We anticipated a normal newborn, and that's exactly what we got," Wirth said.

Jones said the work done to improve in vitro fertilization, used on women whose Fallopian tubes are missing or irreparably blocked, could lead to better treatment of other types of infertility.

"One comes in very intimate contact with the details of biology of early reproduction and is impressed by the possibility of using the spinoff ... for research activities," he said.

"I think we might learn why it takes millions of sperm to fertilize one egg ... why human reproduction is so inefficient."

Since the Norfolk doctors began using fertility drugs and improved their method of determining when an egg is ripe, their rate of pregnancy has increased from about 11 percent earlier this year to 17 percent since September, Jones said.

"We hope, with proper investigation and proper research, this will improve," Jones said, "but I think ... we all need to realize that we are approaching a point where we are not too far from the natural pregnancy rate" of 25 to 30 percent.

The process has been criticized by those who fear fertilized eggs may be destroyed and who doubt the process has undergone enough experimentation.

Charles Dean, president of the local chapter of an anti-abortion group, said each of these babies is turned "into a human guinea pig for experimentation."

The doctors have said fertilized eggs are not destroyed. The clinic is run by guidelines set up by an ethics committee at Norfolk General Hospital.

Unusual Terms For Freedom

DANVILLE, Ind. (AP) — A convicted murderer who could face 30 years in prison holds "the key to his cell door" if he fulfills only a few requirements, including making a speech about why killing is wrong, a county judge says.

In an unusual sentencing, Hendricks Circuit Judge Jeffrey Boles ruled Dennis Strange can be eligible for parole in five to 10 years if he meets several requirements. Otherwise, he must pay $5,000 fine and serve 30 years in prison without parole, Boles said.

Indiana law allows a judge to sentence an inmate to serve without parole.

Strange, sentenced Monday, was convicted Nov. 11 of fatally shooting his wife, Bobetta, on Aug. 26 at their home in Avon west of Indianapolis. The slaying followed an argument in which Strange accused her of flirting with another man, police said.

Besides the speech, which must be delivered at a hearing in five months as the first step to early release, Strange must develop a marketable skill, take classes and earn a degree at the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City, and turn over all of his property, Boles said.

He said the property would be sold at public auction and the money would go to support Strange's four children, now living with relatives.

As another condition of parole, Boles said Strange must support his children, ranging in age from 2 to 11, until they become of legal age or finish their schooling, including college. He must turn half his earnings from a prison shop to that cause, the judge ruled.

Strange also must pay all court costs, remain a model prisoner and line up a job before parole.

The judge said Monday's sentencing would benefit both victims and convicts. If other judges followed suit, it could help alleviate crowding at the state prison, he added.

"This is a chance for a man to earn his way back," Boles said. "If he chooses not to, he can serve 30 years and scream at society."

"He's got the key to his cell door if he pays for his children's education, gets his education and ... pays back taxpayers" for the cost of the trial, the judge added.

Concerned Over Increasing TB

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State health officials say they're worried and puzzled by a resurgence of tuberculosis — especially when federal funding for state TB programs is being reduced.

"We're quite worried about TB," said Dr. Martin P. Hines, the state's chief epidemiologist.

He and other health officials said they were concerned that the public may be growing complacent about the dangers of TB.

National cases of TB increased in 1980 for the first time since 1953, said James A. Jones, director of the state Division of Health Services. North Carolina ranks behind Alaska and Hawaii in number of cases recorded for 1980.

That year, the state recorded 1,066 cases, up from 990 in 1979. But the figures are still a far cry from those of the early 1900s, when TB was the leading cause of death in North Carolina and the nation.

In 1980, 69 North Carolinians died from all forms of tuberculosis. In 1930, near the dawn of the era of modern TB drugs, the death toll was 2,488.

But now that there are nine antibiotics that can cure TB in all but the most critically ill patients, experts feel that even a few additional cases are too many.

North Carolina's current budget for TB surveillance is $2.1 million, excluding an additional $5.3 million to operate McCain Hospital, a Hoke County sanatorium which survived a movement in the General Assembly last spring to phase it out.

McCain is the state's only remaining TB hospital. Former sanatoriums in Black Mountain, Wilson and Chapel Hill have been converted to other uses.

Congress is considering a $9 million grant to be shared among the states for TB research and treatment.

If the grant is approved, Jones said North Carolina should use its portion to follow up on a statistical study done by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The study concluded that residents in the eastern part of the state were more likely to catch TB than those in the western half, which Hines and Jones said they found baffling.

"The question is: What is happening?" Hines said.

Opine Fire Due To Leak

MIAMI (AP) — Officials suspect that a fire which temporarily crippled the world's largest luxury liner may have been caused by a small leak in a hydraulic line that spewed fluid on a hot steam line.

Deputy Miami Fire Chief Dan Fabyan said the "probable" cause of the Sunday fire aboard S.S. Norway was identified Monday, but he said officials will not be certain of the cause until the Coast Guard completes its official investigation.

Cruise line officials said the liner will not be able to leave the port of Miami until at least Jan. 9.

Arthur Kane, a spokesman for Norwegian Caribbean Lines, said all passengers on this week's cruise to the Virgin Islands and the Bahamas, canceled hours before it was scheduled to leave Sunday, will receive air fare home, a 50 percent discount on a future cruise, and a full refund of their tickets, which cost between $900 and $3,500.

He said the company also canceled a second week-long cruise scheduled next Sunday, for which 1,800 passengers had been booked.

Sunday's fire was confined to the engine room, but Kane said inspectors aren't sure if the ship is seaworthy and also want to pinpoint the cause before the ship heads out on another cruise.

It was the latest in a series of mishaps to hit the world's largest cruise ship. The 1,035-foot liner, christened the S.S. France in 1960, was refurbished and renamed two years ago.

In August 1980, an electrical breakdown left the ship adrift in the Caribbean for 28 hours. In May 1981, the ship again was adrift, this time for 24 hours, after a mechanical breakdown knocked out boilers, lights, air conditioning and plumbing.

The Last Great Deal Of 1981.

Right now's your last chance to get two full years of tax savings, plus a gift that's great to get.

And give. So, this is not only the last Great Deal of 1981, but may be the best ever.

Last Chance To Get Two Years' Tax-Free Savings.

Next year, you'll be able to buy a new One-Year Tax Saver Certificate, but this month is the last time that you can buy a Tax Saver Certificate you can renew.

If you invest in an NCNB Tax Saver Certificate before January 1, your interest will be tax-free on your 1982 Federal Return.

Then, if you haven't earned more than $2000 interest (or $1000 on individual returns), you can renew your Tax Saver and also save on taxes in 1983.

Which means that you'll be able to get a tax break for two full years. And that's not all.

A Great Calculator To Get. Or To Give.

Right now, when you invest $2500 or more, you also get this Unisonic LC 270 Pocket Calculator, complete with an automatic shut-off, memory, liquid crystal display, and its own handy carrying case.

It's a great gift to get for yourself. Or a great gift to give someone else.

The Tax Saver May Be Your Best Investment.

When you compare tax-free interest rates with regular investments, you can see that the NCNB Tax Saver Certificate may well be the best investment you can make.

For example, 8% on a Tax Saver can equal up to 16% on taxable investments, depending on your tax bracket.

So come by the NCNB office in your neighborhood for all the details. But do it soon. Thursday's your last chance to get in on this great deal. NCNB

Hurry! Like 1981, This Offer Expires December 31.

NCNB Tax Saver Certificates pay 70% of the average annual investment yield of the most recently auctioned 52-Week T-Bill. Substantial Interest Penalty is required for Early Withdrawal. Each depositor insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

'Incident At Crestridge' Has Ingredients Of Future Series

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — CBS' movie "Incident At Crestridge" tonight is the perfect prototype for a future series. It takes a star from the CBS stable, puts her in an unconventional situation and then makes it all fluffy and entertaining, although not so good that it will hold up to too much scrutiny.

But it doesn't have to. If it happens, it'll only be a network series. Eileen Brennan is the star and, looking at the silly turn her "Private Benjamin" is taking, she's ready for a new weekly vehicle. The unusual situation is that Ms. Brennan moves to Crestridge, Wyo., and becomes sheriff of the town that is so corrupt it gives clean air a bad name. Ms. Brennan is very sympathetic in the unbelievable role of the do-gooder who sweeps up some of this ratty town's dirt, but not enough to impede future story lines. Today's series have become too California- and New York-oriented, anyway. What network TV needs is a modern drama in Wyoming, even if this movie was filmed in Utah and any series is bound to be shot in Hollywood.

Sara Davis and her husband, Robert (Sandy McPeak), arrive in Crestridge, where he's becoming the hospital administrator, just in time to be run off the road by bad guys who have torched one of the town's three massage parlors. Sara calls the police and fire department, and the fiber of Crestridge is readily apparent when the old sheriff strolls out of his car and tosses a beer can on the ground. So much for law and order.

The next situation that arouses Sara's sense of justice occurs in the diner. Two redneck miners rough up an elderly couple because they wouldn't give up their seats. This is some tough town, and it turns out that the look-the-other-way mayor, sheriff and mob guy, who owns one of the rival massage parlors, are all in cahoots together. Sara has had enough. She decides to run for sheriff. Residency requirements and such basic lawman details as familiarity with guns apparently don't matter. Sara says she's a good administrator, and she deserves to wear a white hat, tilted radically to the left. She even suggests that maybe they give massages in the massage parlor.

The town's major newspaper, also on the take, endorses the current do-nothing sheriff. Fortunately, this is a two-newspaper town, and the small, struggling newspaper prints the truth. Sara wins and has to deal with several ruffraff deputies. One wears his uniform shirts open to the navel. Another gets teen-agers drunk and seduces them.

Sara weeds out the trash and orders massage parlors off-limits to her deputies. She then gets more money from the comptroller by pointing out that his personal expenses are larger than her department's budget. She wins the respect of her deputies and even learns how to shoot a gun in one easy lesson.

She then talks to the state task force about corruption, and that finally arouses the mayor, a good ol' boy played by another CBS star, Pernell Roberts of "Trapper John, M.D." Physical threats don't work, but the mayor's henchmen get to the good newspaper — Is nothing sacred? — which was about to print an expose, by squeezing his advertisers.

It all leads to a recall vote, which the mayor rigs, but not before Sara gets her indictments against those responsible for the massage parlor fire. "I just may be back," Sara tells her reporters.

Sure, in a series about a woman sheriff. Check local listings for particulars. The network will be CBS.

Actors Still Play Santa

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Christmas was long over but actors Charlton Heston and David Doyle were still playing Santa Claus for a boy who recently returned from the Soviet Union after treatment for progressive blindness. Heston, honorary chairman of Retinitis Pigmentosa International, on Monday gave 12-year-old Todd Cantrell an electronic night vision aid valued at $2,800.

Todd, of Dalton, Ga., had tested the device the night before. "I never thought I would get to see a star until last night," he said at the presentation luncheon. Doyle, of the television series "Charlie's Angels," gave Todd $200 sunglasses that filter out strong light thought to aggravate a disease called retinitis pigmentosa, in which the eye's light-sensitive cells gradually deteriorate. Todd, who has suffered from the disease since he was 6 months old, returned from Moscow a week before Christmas after undergoing a series of injections which Soviet doctors say may help save some of his sight.

Play On Kaufman Opens In Off-Broadway Theater

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Kaufman at Large," which opened Monday night at the off-Broadway Phoenix Theater, sounds like a fine theatrical idea, but the dramatic interest it creates turns out to be weak.

The story is set on Aug. 21, 1936, and is a day in the life of George S. Kaufman, the witty, successful playwright.

Though Kaufman spends it alone, it's a day full of drama in his life, starting with his picture on page one of the New York Daily Mirror illustrating a story about Mary Astor's divorce. Kaufman was named in court papers as having had an affair with Miss Astor.

He anxiously telephones his daughter at summer camp, worries about his wife's reaction, exhibits no emotion toward Miss Astor except exasperation that she kept a diary, makes an appointment for the next morning to finish "Stage Door" with Edna Ferber and finishes, by phone, "You Can't Take It With You" with Moss Hart.

John Lithgow, who also wrote the play, is an able and likeable actor, spinning Kaufman's fantasies of Freud and Einstein in Hollywood — the Basil Rathbones give parties in which you come as your favorite neurosis and your favorite number. Much of what Kaufman has to say, making up doggerel about "the Mary Astor disaster" and talking on the phone, is amusing and Lithgow speaks in what one assumes is a correct Kaufman accent, more oddly pronounced at some time than others.

But it just isn't very interesting. Maybe it's because it's almost all done by voice. It would surely be more fun to read or, better yet, to hear as a radio play. If people read such things, or if radio presented such things any more. When people go to

Lucie Arnaz In CBS-TV Movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lucie Arnaz, daughter of Desi and Lucy, will star in "Washington Mistress" Jan. 12, a two-hour CBS-TV movie in which she plays an ambitious U.S. Senator's aide.

Richard Jordan will play a married lawyer, the father of two children, with whom the young beauty falls in love and has an affair.

Also starring in the drama, shot on locations in Washington, D.C., are Tony Bill, Tarah Nutter and Pat Hingle.

Large" provides. Kaufman's New York townhouse bedroom-workroom was designed by Marjorie Bradley Kellogg. The Phoenix Theater by arrangement with George W. George and Preen Productions produced. Lithgow adapted the play from Kaufman's writings and directed with Steven Robman. In opening remarks, in his own accent, Lithgow introduces the audience to Kaufman and his record in Broadway comedy: in the 1920s, '30s and '40s, Kaufman wrote or cowrote 25 hit shows. "Kaufman at Large" is scheduled to run through Jan. 17.

Birthdays in Nepal

Today is the birthday of the King of Kings, the Five Times Godly, the Valorous Warrior, the Divine Emperor and the Reincarnation of Vishnu — King Birenda of Nepal. His mountain kingdom is a land of almost spiritual beauty. It is the birthplace of Buddha and, according to legend, its Himalayas — with 23 peaks towering over 25,000 feet — are the home of the Hindu Trinity. But Nepal's earthly problems include a 19 percent literacy rate, a $108 annual per capita income, and an economy based on animal hides and drug trafficking. King Birenda rules absolutely and all political parties are banned. But even his absolute powers may not be enough to turn the world's last Hindu monarchy into a modern state.

DO YOU KNOW — Who are the three major Hindu divinities?

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It is possible to wind up whatever tasks you have left undone and clear the slate for future challenges. A good time to take inventory of yourself. Make plans for the future.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Be sure to get an early start on regular routines so you'll have more time for important matters later on. Try to please loved one.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Discuss with associates what is expected of you. Try to understand the viewpoints of opponents. Be wary of outsiders.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You'll have to be well organized to compete the new tasks that are facing you. Take needed health treatments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Find the right way to have more harmony at home and take the initial steps in such direction. Relax tonight.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day to enjoy yourself with congenial persons. Try and rectify any mistakes made with the one you love.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Make sure you keep appointments today. Show kindness and consideration to one of your closest friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't neglect to pay bills that are due now. Contact a financial expert and discuss future plans. Show others you that have wisdom.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Health improvement measures should be taken early and then engage in personal matters that need your attention.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Study personal matters well and know how to handle them to your satisfaction. Be more cheerful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Get busy taking care of routine tasks so you can engage in personal desires later. Seek the advice of a loyal friend.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle business matters early in the day. Make sure to pay your bills on time and keep a good credit rating.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A new attitude toward your routine tasks can give you more satisfaction. New alliances could mean greater success.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she could easily have fixed ideas, so be sure to give the right training early in life, otherwise there could be trouble instead of success. The fields of accounting and finance are fine since there is a practical person in this chart.

When Is Recovery Complete?

My husband had been suffering from anginal pains in the chest for a number of years. At first, he resisted the operation that was suggested. Finally he had bypass surgery. Fortunately the pain in his chest disappeared and he seems to be well on the way to recovery.

It is now six months since the operation. He is able to exercise and do everything in moderation. But he still behaves as if he is scared. Our two adolescent boys upset him if they do the slightest thing he resents. He wasn't at all like this before the operation. What can I do to get him back to normal again? — Mrs. R.V., Calif.

Dear Mrs. V.:

It is not uncommon for someone who has had a heart attack or has recovered from heart surgery to live in terror. Many patients remain emotional invalids for months and even years after having recovered from the physical effects of heart attack or surgery.

Let us consider what recovery from an illness or surgery really is. Is recovery complete when the electrocardiogram is again normal? No, definitely no. Is recovery complete when the patient leaves the hospital and returns home? No. Is the recovery complete when the patient resumes a moderate amount of exercise and activity — or even returns to the office? Again, no. None of these indicates complete recovery from the illness and the real return to good health.

There is one, and only one, yardstick by which we can measure recovery. And that is when the patient can once again live and function as a productive human being in his home, in his job, in his community. Then, and only then, can recovery be considered complete. In addition, there must be emotional serenity and freedom from fear that a similar illness must inevitably occur.

In essence, this is the basis for the psychosomatic understanding of all illnesses. The mind and the body are a single, unified part of the total person.

Your husband's body has recovered from his heart surgery, but his mind is still suffering from the impact of that experience. Not until his mind and body recover will he again be secure and happy about his returned health.

You, your children and your husband's physician must coordinate your efforts to give your husband the kind of assurance and sympathetic understanding that he so obviously needs. It must be done without overindulgence and pity. You can see that this is a fine and delicate line of behavior, but the rewarding results will become evident if you properly plan to support him during his postoperative period. And from his point of view he is still in a vulnerable postoperative period, despite the fact that six months has elapsed.

With adequate support and direction, he will be encouraged to return to full physical and emotional activity and once more attain full dignity as a total human being.

Farm Dwellers Still Declining

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The population of American farm residents "continues to dwindle at about 3 percent a year, and there is no indication it is going to stop dwindling," according to Diane DeAre, a demographer with the population division of the U.S. Bureau of the Census.

Ms. DeAre told the American Council of Life Insurance there is "good reason" for the decline — farm families "simply can't make it financially any more."

Preliminary census figures show the farm population down to 6.1 million, about 2.7 percent of the U.S. population. Ms. DeAre notes that in 1920, 30 percent of the U.S. population lived on farms and this dropped to 15 percent by 1950.

"And it continues to drop as the older people die and the younger ones are not willing or able to continue," she said, noting that the median income for farm families in 1980 was $15,755 compared to the non-farm family median income of $21,151.

When you have to develop tricks, it is tempting to go after your longer suit first. But what you really should be looking for is the suit that you can develop for the number of tricks you need for your contract!

North showed his good hand by first bidding his suit and then jump raising his partner's first-bid suit. With so much of his values in the unbid suit, South wisely elected to sign off in three no trump.

West led his fourth best heart and declarer captured East's jack with the queen. Declarer could count six tricks in the major suits, so he needed only three from the minors to fulfill his contract. Dummy's good five-card diamond suit proved to be more than declarer could resist. A diamond to the jack lost to the ace, and a heart came back. The ten of hearts lost to the king, and West forced out declarer's remaining stopper. When the ten of diamonds did not come down, declarer could muster no more than eight tricks. The defenders scored three heart tricks and their two minor suit aces.

Declarer allowed dummy's diamond length to divert him from his main purpose — making nine tricks. With six tricks in the bag after the heart lead, he needed only three more for his game, and there was a sure-fire method of establishing them: going after clubs first. There was no way the suit could fail to produce three tricks.

Had declarer tackled clubs, virtue would have been doubly rewarded. After winning the ace of clubs, West could not continue the attack on hearts without giving declarer a third trick in the suit. No matter what he returned, declarer would have time to drive out the ace of diamonds and make two overtricks.

How do you choose the best opening lead? Charles Goren has the answer. For a copy of "Winning Opening Leads," send $1.85 to "Goren-Leads," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 259, Norwood, N.J. 07048. Make checks payable to Newspaperbooks.

N.C. Energy Corporation Still Seeks Alternatives

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RESEARCH TRIANGLE
PARK, N.C. (AP) — Jon Veigel is in many ways like a master chef who creates gourmet dishes to please discriminating palates.

Veigel, as executive director of the North Carolina Alternative Energy Corporation, helps assemble menus of energy choices from which individuals, government agencies or manufacturers may benefit.

The corporation, established by the state Utilities Commission in 1980, is a tax-exempt, not-for-profit corporation in the private sector. But it gets most of its $2.5-million annual budget from the state's utilities, which contribute a percentage of the money their customers pay for power.

The contribution amounts to about 40 to 50 cents a year, estimates Veigel, who arrived to direct the corporation in May. Before Veigel and his six-member staff were named, a 13-member board of directors kept the corporation going. Seven of the corporation's board members are appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt while the other six are utility representatives.

Veigel predicts that the corporation, which he says may be the only one of its kind in the nation, is in the forefront of an energy revolution. He says Americans are "moving towards a growing dependence on renewable-based resources and on energy efficiency."

"We've come to grow increasingly dependent on central station kind of power (like nuclear plants)," he said. "In contrast, what we're able to do now is offer people an opportunity to become more responsible for their own energy futures" by using things like solar power or wood burners.

And that range of energy choices, Veigel says, gives the nation "an opportunity to have an economic renaissance."

To help North Carolina take advantage of that rebirth, Veigel says his corporation is working to gather information on energy alternatives and establish their credibility.

Veigel has had experience working with alternative energy sources. He ran a division for the Solar Energy Research Institute, a federally sponsored research laboratory, in Colorado, and worked for the California Energy Commission and the Office of Technology Assessment, a research arm of Congress.

He says one purpose of the North Carolina corporation is to get information to individuals, businesses and government agencies to help them determine their energy needs, their energy choices and select energy sources after developing certain criteria.

"I think what's going to come out is we will choose that form of energy that meets our needs and simultaneously is economically most energy efficient. It may or may not be the lowest cost in the strict sense of the word," he said.

Some of the criteria Veigel considers in looking at energy alternatives are cost, environmental impact, control over the power source and reliability of the energy.

"The one thing that the electric utilities, all the utilities... have done for us is to condition us to believe that if we needed the power it was guaranteed to be there. They are finding that their ability to guarantee that supply isn't with their control anymore," he said.

Veigel says the corporation already has a program underway that could save $9 million a year by making North Carolina public school buildings more energy efficient. He says he hopes to extend the project to prisons, institutions and office buildings.

For state manufacturers, the corporation is promoting cogeneration as one way to make plants more energy efficient. Cogeneration is the simultaneous production of electrical energy and heat for steam. A conference with leading manufacturers is scheduled for next month to discuss the subject.

"What we're really doing is we're shaping the way society is looking at energy," he said, acknowledging that, "what we're talking about costs money. But doing anything else over time costs more money."

CROSSES AND CUTS — Placed by Washington's Community for Creative Non-Violence, crosses sit in Lafayette Park across from the White House Monday evening, each representing a homeless person who has died of exposure. In protesting budget cuts the organization has also hosted a Thanksgiving dinner for area homeless people and erected a token tent city named "Reaganville". (AP Laserphoto)

PENNIES FROM HEAVEN — Oregon State Police Sgt. Bob Mayfield counts 23,450 pennies found Monday in a metal box on the center line of a rural road near Central Point in southern Oregon. Coin collector Jose Zamora said the box of pennies, a Christmas present from his children, fell out of the back of his pickup earlier in the day. (AP Laserphoto)

Continue Hunt For Lost Pilot

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Air Force remains optimistic that a pilot missing since his jet went down over the Atlantic 10 days ago can be found alive, a spokesman said early today.

"If he's got water, there's no reason why he can't still be alive," said Capt. Pat Osborn, public affairs officer at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, where 1st Lt. Michael A. Mattson is stationed.

"If we didn't think there was a chance of rescuing him, we wouldn't be out there looking."

Searchers used nine airplanes, two helicopters and a Coast Guard cutter in a fruitless search for Mattson on Monday off the coast near Charleston, S.C. They stopped searching at dusk Monday night and were scheduled to resume this morning, Osborn said.

The search for Mattson had been suspended Sunday because of rainy weather, poor visibility and high seas.

The search was concentrated in the area 65 miles southeast of Charleston where Lt. Thomas W. Tiller was rescued Thursday after spending six days adrift in a life raft without food or water.

"The rescue of Lt. Tiller certainly gives us hope," Osborn said. "We're certainly going to make every effort we can."

The two were aboard an F-4E Phantom jet when it ran into trouble off the coast near Wilmington, N.C., on Dec. 18.

Involved in the search were four C-130 military cargo planes, five RF-4 reconnaissance jets, two H-53 helicopters and the Coast Guard cutter Cape Knox. Osborn said the search was being coordinated by the 7th Coast Guard Headquarters in Miami.

Tiller said he knew Mattson had ejected from the plane but did not see him after that.

"I didn't see the jet and I didn't see him, but I'm still hoping and praying that they find him alive," he said.

Air Force officials declined to discuss the cause of the crash, and Osborn said it would be the object of a long investigation.

The crewmen were on a night training mission when the plane crashed.

Identifies One Of Fire Dead

SPARTA, N.C. (AP) — The State Medical Examiner has identified one of two Alleghany County men who died Sunday in a mobile home fire.

A sheriff's department spokesman said Mainard Moxley, 56, of Ennice, was the owner of the trailer that was destroyed early Sunday morning.

The examiner's office in Chapel Hill has not identified the second victim.
