Impact Of American Action On Poland Doubtful
Allies Leery Of U.S. Sanctions

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is no sign America's allies will follow President Reagan's lead and impose sanctions against the Soviet Union nor any certainty the U.S. action will prompt Moscow to back down on Poland.

A senior U.S. official who asked not to be identified said Tuesday that the allies have been asked to invoke parallel measures and "at the very least not to take actions to undermine these steps."

"The Achilles heel ... is there is no indication that our allies are supporting the details of the programs spelled out by the White House," said Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash.

And the senior official acknowledged that — even after intense consultations before and after the imposition of martial law in Poland — "it remains to be seen what the attitude of other countries will be."

French officials said today in Paris that France has no plans to impose parallel sanctions against the Soviet Union, but it will not undermine Reagan's moves. Officials close to Premier Pierre Mauroy said his government will make sure, for example, that French companies do not try to exploit bans on Soviet trade by U.S. corporations.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. told an audience in San Francisco that, contrary to press reports, West German Foreign Minister

Hans Dietrich Genscher is "totally supportive" of Reagan's actions and shares "the concerns of Washington."

However, Haig stopped short of saying Genscher is prepared to recommend that West Germany invoke similar sanctions of its own.

Reagan and other U.S. officials have made it clear in public statements and a letter to Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev that the United States holds the Soviet Union responsible for the military crackdown in Poland.

Reagan thus "tightened the screws" on Moscow on Tuesday with seven sanctions designed to crimp future U.S.-Soviet dealings in high technology, grain sales, air travel and ocean shipping.

He said he acted "to speak for those who have been silenced and to help those who have been rendered helpless."

Reagan said he may take harsher unilateral steps later if the Soviet-backed military regime in Poland does not ease its crackdown and negotiate a political solution with the now-suppressed Solidarity labor movement and the Roman Catholic Church in Poland.

"We are prepared to proceed in whatever direction the Soviet Union decides upon — towards greater mutual restraint and cooperation, or further down a harsh and less rewarding path," Reagan said in ordering the sanctions.

"Further steps may be necessary and I am prepared to take them," Reagan said. "American decisions will be determined by Soviet actions."

Reagan moved to end further U.S. cooperation with Moscow in building a 2,400-mile natural gas pipeline from Siberia to Western Europe. He expanded the list of equipment, including pipelayers, for which export licenses are required and then suspended all such future licenses.

Reagan also ordered the closing of the 10-man Soviet Purchasing Commission in New York City, suspended Soviet Airline Aeroflot's two trips a week to the United States and clamped severe new restrictions on U.S. port calls for Soviet vessels.

His other major actions:

—Indefinite postponement of negotiations, due to begin in January, on a new long-term grain agreement. The existing agreement, which permits the sale and shipment of up to 23 million tons of U.S. grain this fiscal year, is not affected. Grain accounts for two-thirds to three-quarters of all Soviet purchases from the United States. Those total purchases were $3.6 billion in 1979; $1.5 billion in 1980 and $1.3 billion in the first eight months of 1981.

—Suspension of new or renewed export licenses for electronics, computers and high technology. The list of such items years ago and will be tightened further now.

—Ordering U.S. officials not to renew eleven U.S.-Soviet exchange agreements in energy, science and technology.

Bid-Rigging Probe To Continue

By ROBERT B. CULLEN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After two years of investigations and trials in 13 states, the Justice Department sees no end in sight to the trail of corruption among some of the nation's highway contractors as it pursues cases in six additional states.

Contractors have been indicted thus far for conspiring to rig bids on paving projects in Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Kansas and Texas. Grand juries are investigating contractors in Louisiana, Kentucky, Arkansas, Florida and Nebraska.

Department officials would not identify the sixth state where grand juries are considering indictments and held out the possibility that contractors under pressure to testify will yield tips that will take the inquiry into still more states.

"I have seen no evidence that highway contractors have cleaned up their act" since the investigation began, said Joseph Widmar, the department official who supervises the 25 to 30 lawyers now working on the project.

So far, the Justice Department has indicted 102 paving corporations and 132 individuals, according to a count compiled Tuesday.

Most of those accused have pleaded guilty rather than face trial. Of those who opted for jury trials, only one corporation and three individuals have been acquitted.

The number of convictions or pleas of nolo contendere (no contest) stands at 71 for corporations and 101 for individuals, with the rest of the cases pending.

The investigation started in 1979 when the department received a complaint from the Federal Aviation Administration about bids that had been received for a paving job at an airport in Richmond, Va. At about the same time, the department heard allegations of bid rigging on Tennessee highway construction projects.

Tennessee set the pattern that has since been discovered in other states. Its highway contracts are let to the lowest bidder, but the Justice Department found

New Economic Forecast Chills Recovery Hopes

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

A new economic forecast suggests the Reagan administration may be disappointed in expecting the economy to snap back from the current recession next spring.

Tuesday's forecast issued by Citibank in New York said signs of an economic recovery may emerge as soon as next summer. But a broad-based revival in the manufacturing sector will not begin until the last quarter, in part because of weakness in the auto and housing industries.

By contrast, the Reagan administration has said it expects economic activity to rebound in the second quarter of next year, with the gross national product — the sum of all goods and services produced — registering a small gain. Citibank predicted the GNP would fall 2.1 percent in that period.

Citibank also said it expects the Federal Reserve Board to keep a tight grip on the supply of money and credit, thus preventing any substantial decline in mortgage interest rates. As a result, housing and auto sales will not recover as quickly as usual following a recession, Citibank said.

That forecast clashes with Tuesday's prediction by Coldwell, Banker & Co., the Los Angeles-based real estate company. Joe F. Hanauer, a Coldwell, Banker vice president, said he expected housing sales in the first six months of 1982 to rise 15 percent over the corresponding period this year.

Hanauer based his prediction in part on an assumption that mortgage rates would fall as low as 14 percent from the current level of about 17 percent or 18 percent.

Tear Gas Fails To Locate Bear

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Authorities dropped tear gas into a tunnel on the North Carolina State University campus today, but failed to remove a black bear believed to be lurking inside.

State wildlife officials were debating whether to enter the 4-foot-diameter culvert to search for the bear. The animal has not been seen inside the culvert, but an NCSU employee reports that he heard growls from within after following tracks into the culvert.

Dick Hamilton, assistant director of the State Wildlife Commission, said after the tear gas was dropped that he was beginning to doubt that the bear was inside.

"It's hard to believe he's in there if he hasn't come out of there by now," Hamilton said. He said officials did not want to risk cornering the bear, but said they wanted to catch the animal before students returned for the spring semester next week.

"We thought this would be a good time to get him," he said. "He won't bother anybody if they don't go in after him." Hamilton said descriptions of the bear by eyewitnesses Saturday night led officials to suspect that it was a young male, probably weighing between 200 and 300 pounds.

"The males are more likely to wander from their homes than the females, especially at this time of year. The females have their young in December and January and are in hibernation," he said.

Hal Atkinson, chief of the State Wildlife Commission's Division of Wildlife Management, said he and a group of game biologists would attempt to subdue the bear with tranquilizing darts if it emerged.

"We won't hurt him," he said. "We have some people coming in from areas of the state where they're more used to dealing with bears than we are. We feel sure there won't be any danger to the bear."

Once the animal is captured, it will be taken to a remote area and released, Atkinson said.

NCSU Department of Public Safety officers and Raleigh police remained throughout the night outside the 200-yard tunnel, through which a creek flows, after placing barricades at both ends.

The bear had last been seen Saturday night and police had not planned to search for the animal.

However, an employee of the NCSU Physical Plant found bear tracks and fresh droppings near the opening of the tunnel late Tuesday afternoon. Public safety Sgt. Terry Abney said the bear had not been seen, but said "growls" had been heard from within the tunnel.

Pitt And Martin Counties Show Increase In Tuberculosis Cases

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The United States' and North Carolina's tuberculosis rates are up this year, and so are those of Pitt and Martin counties, according to health officials here.

Pitt County had 37 TB cases reported to the health department in 1980; 36 in 1979. In 1977 there were 31 cases; in 1978, 29. The report for this year is not complete.

Martin County has had 14 cases reported so far this year. Nine were reported in 1980.

Dr. Robert Ehinger, director of the Pitt County Health Department, and Penny Cowan, TB nurse for Martin County, say they have no explanation for the increases. "I would like to think," Dr. Ehinger said, "that it's better diagnosis and reporting, but I don't know that this is true."

Most of the TB, Dr. Ehinger said, seems to be showing up in middle-aged and older persons. Most are men, Mrs. Cowan said.

"It may be," Dr. Ehinger said, "that the new cases are being seen in persons who had TB as children. Children, we now know, often have the disease run its course without ever appearing sick. At the time these people were children, TB was very common and odds for exposure would have, of course, been greater. But we still can't explain why it's manifesting more now, if it is."

North Carolina is said to rank third among the states in the nation, behind only Alaska and Hawaii, in the number of reported cases of TB. North Carolina reported 1,066 cases statewide last year, 990 in 1979.

Last year, 69 North Carolinians died from TB. By contrast, the number of TB-attributed deaths in 1930 was 2,488. Antibiotics have made the difference, Dr. Ehinger said. There are nine different ones that cure TB in all but the most critically ill. Two of the most commonly used are Rifampin and one abbreviated INH. Supplies of both of these drugs are kept by the health departments and supplied to patients as prescribed by their doctors. Anyone who has TB and wishes to can obtain medicine from the health department in his county.

The state Department of Public Health provides funding for each local department to deal with TB. Pitt County is given $32,000 for salaries and fringe benefits for a TB nurse and a secretary, plus medications and materials for tuberculin skin tests.

"Skin testing," Dr. Ehinger said, "is one of the least expensive, most effective enablers we have to diagnose tuberculosis and cure it early."

He said skin tests are given annually to each child 1 year old or older who comes to the health department for checkups. Persons using the health department for family planning are also encouraged to take them. Anyone who wishes can go to the health department and have one can and, of course, they're given to persons believed exposed to someone who has

TB. Some local industries request skin tests for all their employees, he added, and others may if they wish. Many doctors also give them in their offices during routine physicals.

TB was once a disease treated in isolation in one of the four TB sanitariums in the state. The one at Wilson was the closest and, therefore, the most used for patients from Pitt and Martin counties. Now all but McCain Hospital in Hoke County have been converted to other uses. And most patients today are treated and kept in isolation in local hospitals, then followed at home by private physicians or health department nurses once the disease is under control.

"No one wants to go so far away from home," Mrs. Cowan said, "and it's usually not necessary. Only the person who refuses to follow doctor's orders and take care of himself at all is now sent to McCain."

According to information released by Dr. Martin P. Hines, chief epidemiologist for the state, eastern North Carolinians have more TB than do westerners of the state. "Not always, but very often, TB is a disease of the poor," Dr. Ehinger said, "a disease of overcrowded homes, poor nutrition and lack of routine medical care."

With all the cutbacks in benefits for the poor, Dr. Ehinger said he's afraid the TB rate here will continue to rise. We won't know for a year or so," he said. "And I hope I'm wrong about that."

A Case Of 'Friend-ship At Sea

Sailor Leaves On Rescue Effort

HONOLULU (AP) — A man named Friend in a boat named Friendly is on his way to a remote desert island to rescue a shipwrecked Canadian man and his two daughters.

Lawrence Friend of Scottsdale, Ariz., volunteered for the trip after the U.S. Coast Guard and the Canadian government refused aid to John Harrison and his daughters because they were not in danger.

Friend should reach Palmyra, 1,100 miles north of here, by Sunday, Coast Guard spokesman Bob Baeten said. He was setting out in his 33-foot sloop from Christmas Island, about 500 miles from Palmyra.

"It's up to them to decide whether they want to accept a ride to Honolulu, but I don't think it will be a difficult decision after being stuck there for three weeks," Baeten said.

The mast of the Harrison's ship broke in a typhoon and they reached the island through shark-infested waters after two days, and have been living on leftover provisions, fish, crabs and coconuts, Baeten said.

Baeten said the Coast Guard will continue to monitor the situation, but cannot mount a rescue because it does not "have vessels that can go down there. But it's not a life-or-death situation. They had food, water and some shelter on the island."

There was a similar response from the Canadian Counsel in San Francisco, where a spokesman said "it's not an emergency situation ... we have the luxury of time. No one is going to die within the next few hours or days. All alternatives are being explored."

Harrison, 39, an industrial designer from Vancouver, British Columbia, and daughters, Micki, 20, and Kristen, 13, were traveling to Australia on their 40-foot trimaran Sisyphus when they were caught in the typhoon.

Their distress call was heard by a commercial jet and relayed to the Coast Guard, which dispatched a C-130 search plane from Honolulu to drop fuel and a radio to the Sisyphus.

The island has one resident, Ray Landrum, a caretaker for the owner, Ainsley Fullard-Leo of Hawaii, Baeten said. Landrum has helped the Harrison's maintain short-wave radio contact with relatives, he said.

Crash Survivors Rescued

BUENA VISTA, Colo. (AP) — Rescuers plucked three survivors of a Christmas Eve plane crash from a mountain and battled deep snow early today in a race to get a fourth survivor off before a new storm hit the Colorado Rockies.

A man, a woman and two teen-age boys were found at midday Tuesday just as their emergency tracking beeper on the wrecked plane was about to die out. The woman and the boys were taken away by Army helicopter in a daring nighttime rescue during a break in the weather.

A four-man rescue team was left behind in the wreckage of the light plane with the remaining survivor. They were joined by three rescuers who came overland with additional supplies and more were on the way with toboggans to carry them off the mountain.

The only other person known to have been in the plane when it crashed into the side of Mount Columbia, 100 miles southwest of Denver, was the pilot, who vanished after leaving to get help shortly after the crash five days ago.

Dear Abby

Silence Is Golden In Case of Missing Silver

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently my wife and I invited a group of friends to our home for a formal dinner. One couple called and asked if they could bring a dear friend from out of town. We said, "Of course."

Our table was set with our finest china, crystal and sterling silver flatware.

After dinner I cleared the table for my wife and carefully checked the silverware and found that two pieces of silver were missing! I checked the trash bag to make sure the missing silver had not been accidentally thrown away. I even checked the dining area, floor, chairs, table, etc. The two pieces were nowhere to be found! They were obviously stolen by one of our guests.

I took my wife aside, told her, and asked her what we should do. She said, "Nothing." Abby, what would you have done or said? Is there a diplomatic way of handling this?
LONG JOHN SILVER

DEAR JOHN: I'd have remained silent. The alternative would be to announce that two pieces of silver were missing — then wait for the "thief" to surrender the stolen goods. Such a scene would have created more humiliation than the silver was worth.

DEAR ABBY: Talk about a mess, this is the worst. Our 19-year-old son has just told his father and me that he wants to get married and the sooner the better!

The girl is his first cousin. She's 18. We knew they had been spending a lot of time together lately, but had no idea it was that serious. Anyway, the kids are "in love," she's expecting, and our problem is that first cousins aren't allowed to marry in Nevada. We were told that first cousins are allowed to marry in California, but if the kids go there to get married, would their marriage be legal in Nevada?
PREMATURE GRANDMA

DEAR GRANDMA: Yes. A marriage performed in a state that permits first cousins to marry is usually considered legal in all states. But you'd be wise to check with a lawyer.

DEAR ABBY: You recently defined a professional as someone who receives remuneration for a job, as opposed to an amateur who does what he does without pay.

I am sure that mine will not be the only letter of protest. As an unpaid volunteer fireman for seven years, I do not consider myself an amateur. I am well-trained and certified by the state of Florida, and I feel qualified to call myself a professional.

Abby, approximately 90 percent of the firefighters in the U.S.A. are volunteers. On behalf of that 90 percent, may I assure you that should anyone need us at 3 a.m. in the freezing rain, we will be there, performing the same dedicated service as our professional brother firefighters who do it for a living.
CHARLES W. NOAH

DEAR MR. NOAH: My definition lighted a few fuses among some dedicated volunteers who resented being called amateurs. Mea culpa. Mea maxima culpa.

Federal Judge Indicted By Jury

MIAMI (AP) — Florida's first black federal judge, charged with conspiring to solicit a bribe from two defendants in return for reducing their sentences, has become only the third federal judge to be indicted this century.

U.S. District Judge Alcee Hastings was indicted late Tuesday along with prominent Washington attorney William A. Borders Jr. The two were charged with conspiring to solicit a $150,000 bribe.

Hastings, 45, was not available for comment. On Oct. 12, Hastings removed himself from all cases pending the outcome of the investigation. He has charged that racism and politics are behind the Justice Department's investigation.

Hastings, one of Florida's leading black political figures, ran unsuccessfully for several public offices, including the U.S. Senate, before President Jimmy Carter appointed him to the bench in 1978.

Borders, also black, is a former president of the predominantly black National Bar Association.

The federal grand jury indictment alleges Borders was the middleman for a bribe paid by an FBI agent posing as a convicted Teamsters union racketeer.

In return for the bribe, Hastings was to reduce prison sentences and return confiscated property to two brothers already convicted of misusing a Teamsters pension fund, the indictment said.

The first count of the four-count indictment accused Borders and Hastings of defrauding the United States "in connection with the performance of lawful governmental functions" and of conspiring to solicit bribes to influence Hastings "in his performance of official acts as a United States district judge."

The second count charges both with obstruction of justice. Counts three and four charge Borders with traveling across state lines to promote bribery.

Each of the counts carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Gerald Gunther, a professor of constitutional law at Stanford University in California, said Hastings may not be able to face trial while a member of the judiciary.

"Historically and legally, it is unclear whether the judge can be criminally prosecuted before he is removed from office, either by voluntary resignation or congressional impeachment," Gunther said.

The last federal judge to be indicted was U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Otto Kerner in 1971, Gunther said. He was charged with income tax evasion and mail fraud during his term as Illinois governor. He relinquished his judgeship after he was convicted and sentenced to three years in prison.

The only other judge to be indicted this century was Martin Manton of the U.S. 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals in New York, Gunther said. Manton was indicted in 1939 after he resigned from office and was convicted.

Reagan Begins Holiday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan, seeking a sunny respite from the Cold War pressures of the Polish crisis, was heading to Palm Springs today for a private New Year holiday among friends.

The president, who spent part of Tuesday attending to national business in his hotel suite in Los Angeles, had few official matters on his agenda as he and his wife, Nancy, set off for a long weekend holiday in the Southern California desert.

However, Reagan did plan to meet with another Palm Springs vacationer — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig, Jr. — late today or early Thursday to discuss the Polish situation.

The Reagans will be guests at the lavish walled estate of former ambassador Walter Annenberg and his wife Leonore, who is soon to step down from her post as Reagan's chief of protocol.

The Annenbergs have been hosts to previous Republican presidents seeking refuge from the Washington grind within the guarded, palm-lined grounds of the Annenberg's rambling spread.

Presidents Ford and Nixon, who appointed Annenberg ambassador to Great Britain, also spent time at the estate during their terms.

Nixon and Ford, both avid golfers, enjoyed playing on the Annenberg course.

Reagan, whose recreational preference is horseback riding, says he plans to play his "annual game of golf" while visiting Annenberg.

The social highlight of the weekend is Thursday night's New Year's Eve party at the Annenberg estate, an annual event that is likely to be an intimate gathering of the desert resort's most prestigious residents.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER HERMAN NOBLES

Anniversary Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Herman Nobles of Greenville celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at a reception Sunday afternoon at the Masonic Temple.

Mrs. Yank Howell and her children were host and hostesses. They have been neighbors and friends of the couple for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Corbett greeted guests and introduced them to Mr. and Mrs. Nobles and others in the receiving line. Mrs. John R. Howell of Oxford presided at the guest register.

Mrs. Nobles was wearing an aqua dress with a matching lace trimmed jacket, complemented by a corsage of yellow roses and a white cymbidium orchid with gold ribbons.

The refreshment table was covered with a white lace trimmed cloth with white overlays. Centering the table was an arrangement of white chrysanthemums accented with green and gold holly. Two three-branch candelabras with gold candles flanked the centerpiece. Mrs. Barbara Heath served cake. Mrs. Fred Edwards, assisted by Miss Suellen Howell and Miss Nancy Gayle Howell, poured punch.

Gifts were received by Mrs. Verna McLawhorn. They were displayed on a table covered with a white lace cloth and edged with a heart. The Masonic Temple was decorated with red and white poinsettias.

Good-byes were said by Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Langley.

Mr. and Mrs. Nobles were married Dec. 27, 1931, in Asheville. A picture of the couple, on their wedding day, was displayed on the register table along with the bride and the bridegroom from their original wedding cake.

NAMES OMITTED

The names of the junior bridesmaids, Carla Nethercutt of Snow Hill, cousin of the bride, Tanya and Julia Thigpen of Westland, Mich., nieces of the bride, were omitted from the wedding write-up of Annie Elizabeth Braxton and Michael Anthony Meadows printed in Monday's issue of "The Daily Reflector."

Winter Pears: A season's Delicacy

Peel and core pears. Arrange in greased baking dish. Combine remaining ingredients and pour over pears. Cover and bake in moderate oven, about 350°F. 20 to 25 minutes, or until tender. Remove spices. serve hot or cold and, if desired, with cream. Makes 4 servings.

Pear Waldorf Salad
3 large fresh ripe pears, diced
1 T. fresh lemon juice
1 cup diced celery
1/2 cup chopped nuts
2 T. mayonnaise
Head lettuce

Combine all ingredients except lettuce and toss lightly. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 6.

Poached Pears
3 large apples
3 large pears
1 T. fresh lemon juice
1 cup fresh orange juice
1 tsp. grated orange rind
1/4 cup sugar
1/8 tsp. salt

Pare, quarter and core apples and pears. Brush fruits with lemon juice. Combine orange juice, rind, sugar and salt in large skillet. Heat to boiling point. Add fruits. Cover and simmer until just tender, about 15 minutes. Serve warm or chilled. Makes 6 servings.

Pear Care
Delicious, refreshing pears are a treat any time — eaten out of hand or in combination with other foods. And, now is an especially good time to try them in traditional as well as new ways because, they are in plentiful supply.

What should you look for when buying pears? And what is the best possible way of preserving them for as long as possible?

First, it is important to remember that pears are picked mature but not ripe. They reach ideal ripeness with a finer flavor and smoother texture when ripened at home at room temperature. A fruit bowl is perfect for this purpose.

If pears are stored in a plastic bag, the bag should have a few holes for adequate circulation. Pears ripen from the inside out and should not be kept until soft on the outside. A well-ripened pear is firm and yields slightly to gentle pressure at the stem end. When ripe, keep pears cold and humid and use as quickly as possible.

If you plan to use the pears for cooking or baking, they should be firm and slightly underripe.

When choosing pears, remember that big, plump ones are preferable. When shopping for pears you may notice minor surface blemishes on the skin. This is perfectly natural and characteristic of certain varieties; it doesn't affect the fruit's delicate taste. In fact, some blemished pears are the most luscious.

Here are a few ideas on interesting uses of pears:

—Halved and cored pears make natural fruit boats; stuff with cottage cheese, dates and nuts, or other mixtures of diced fresh fruits.

—For a gourmet treat, serve fresh pears with a wedge of cheese.

—Make a pear ambrosia with diced pears and orange section. Sprinkle with grated coconut. Serve as a salad or dessert.

Fair Trial Is Basic

The trial of Wayne B. Williams is underway in Atlanta. The arrest of Williams was made on charges of the deaths of two young black men in the Atlanta area. Twenty-six other black youths had been killed over a period of more than a year in a series of events which terrorized the city. The killings attracted national attention and investigation of the deaths was the top priority of Atlanta police for months. When an arrest came it was a neat, mild and articulate young black man who was charged. It was difficult to imagine that he could possibly have committed such acts. And, of course, it is still not known that he did. Williams has been charged, a jury is being carefully selected and the evidence will be heard and a verdict rendered. Feelings have run high in Atlanta and elsewhere over the apparently random killings. Certainly virtually everyone wants to see the guilty person pay for the crime. There is no room for anger in the American justice system, however, when it comes to the trial of one accused of a heinous crime. His innocence is presumed and it is up to the state to prove his guilt. Williams should, and we believe will, be tried in a fair court.

U.S. First 'Test Tube' Baby

America's first "test tube" baby has been born in Norfolk. The process involves the fertilization of an egg removed from the mother with sperm from the father, then returning the egg to the mother's womb for a normal pregnancy period. If the process seems a little scary in an era when even cloning of humans may be possible, it is well to recognize that the procedure offers new hope to some couples who have previously been unable to have children. It is believed there have been about 20 such births in England and Australia and the procedure could become routine. A century back, death of mother or child in birth was not unusual. Now that is rare. The test tube fertilization is but another medical advance in improving the chances of couples who want to have healthy children, but are prevented from doing so for physical reasons.

Some Good News, Too

There has been criticism of the press that it doesn't provide the public with enough good news. I know it's impossible to make up in one day for this failing. But here are some of the good news stories which, for one reason or another, never got into the papers.

London, England — John McEnroe, the great tennis star, was playing on Center Court at Wimbledon and hit a top spin lob to Jimmy Connors. Connors said, "I'm terribly sorry about that call, John, would you care to play it over?"

McEnroe smiled and shook his head, "The linesman called it in. He was obviously in a much better position to see it than we were. Even if he did err, it would be unforgivable taste for me to call it to his attention."

Great Falls, Mont. — Robert McAdoo, a rancher, noticed that his sheep were dying from a mysterious disease. Investigation by health authorities indicated the sheep had been drinking water from a canal polluted by a nearby chemical company. When McAdoo protested to the company, the chairman said he would compensate McAdoo and anyone else who had suffered because his company had thoughtlessly endangered the environment. The chairman also called for stronger government regulations so people would not have to suffer the agony that McAdoo had just gone through.

New York City — Theodore Pinza, multimillionaire developer, announced the purchase of the "Lost Horizon" apartment building on the Upper West Side for $10 million. He said he planned to convert the building into co-operatives selling for a minimum of $500,000 each. A delegation of senior citizens, who were living in the apartment house, told Pinza that if he went ahead with his plans, they would all be thrown into the street with no place to live.

ART BUCHWALD

Pinza said, "I didn't realize human suffering was involved in my project. You people have much more right to that apartment house than I do. I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll still fix it up, but you can all stay there as long as you want to, at the rents you are now paying. If a person can't do some good in the real estate business, he shouldn't be in it."

Lynchburg, Va. — The Reverend Jerry Falwell asked his television listeners last Sunday to refrain from sending him money to continue his work for the Moral Ma-

Washington, D.C. — Chief Justice Warren Burger gave a New Year's party in his chambers for the television reporters and camera men who have been covering him during the past year. In a champagne toast he told them, "No public official has a right to privacy, and without television cameras, justice cannot be served."

Tokyo, Japan — Tojo Okura, president of the Seppuku Automobile Company, announced today that he would cut back on production and exports to the United States until Chrysler got back on its feet. At a press conference, he told reporters, "A healthy American automobile industry is essential to good relations between our two countries. Japan's prosperity should not depend on outselling the products of our friends. I'm sure if we were in trouble Lee Iacocca would do the same for us."

Bowling Green, Ky. — Doctors at the Bowling Green Medical Research School have discovered that the human body needs twice as many desserts as was originally believed. They recommended that every person eat at least one banana split, piece of pie, chocolate cake, fruit tart, Twinkies, éclair, Oreo cookie (or their equivalents), with every meal, and at least one portion of each before going to bed at

Goons From Polish Jails

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — The ruthless "Corps of Internal Security" forces being used by communist strongman Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski to club Solidarity and its millions of backers into submission was toughened with hardened criminals released from jail before the declaration of martial law.

This criminal element is accused by underground resisters, still battling the communist/military takeover, of performing acts of incredible brutality while regular army troops — regarded as undependable — watch from the sidelines. In one case, miners gravely wounded in clashes with Internal Security Corps — known as "ZOMO" — were taken to hospitals in Katowice, the heart of the coal mining region. "ZOMO" irregulars invaded the hospital wards and dragged the wounded miners from their beds and out of the hospital, beating them with long clubs. It is this brutality that convinces Western observers that the new regime will never be able to make a political compromise with remnants of Solidarity.

No Help From China
The Chinese communist government shrugged off urgent U.S. pleas for help in the Polish crisis, casting some doubt on the value of the Washington-Peking connection that has become an integral part of U.S. foreign policy under President Reagan as under President Carter.

Two separate pleas by the Reagan administration, through the U.S. Embassy in Peking and to the Chinese Embassy in Washington, were made for support on the Polish crisis. At the least, Secretary of State Alexander Haig wanted a denunciation of Soviet-backed oppression in Poland and perhaps a Chinese troop demonstration along the border of Soviet-allied Vietnam.

The Chinese response: We'll see. Nothing has happened. Old Chinese hands could have predicted as much. The Chinese communist regime seldom if ever takes a public position on an issue that it does not perceive directly affecting its national interests. Haig's Veto

At Secretary of State Alexander Haig's insistence, the White House will terminate the embarrassing profusion of top administration officials dominating the Sunday network interview shows all on the same subject at practically the same time.

Haig was hurrying back to Washington from Europe for the Polish crisis when White House aides telephoned to ask him to go on David Brinkley's ABC Sunday show Dec. 20. He immediately said yes. It was not until Sunday morning that Haig learned Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and presidential counselor Edwin Meese III had also signed up — without coordination by the White House — for interviews on CBS's "Face the Nation" and NBC's "Meet the Press." Haig almost pulled out of the Brinkley show, feeling that three top Reagan officials all talking about the same subjects — the Polish and Israeli crises — at the same time were two too many. It won't happen again.

Easing Out Allen
Even Richard V. Allen's staunchest conservative backers in the Reagan administration, including those who paid $30 to attend his recent testimonial luncheon, have privately changed their tune and are saying his days as the president's national security assistant soon will be over.

Their scenario: Now that the Justice Department has cleared Allen, he will return to the job at the White House — but not for long. His resignation will come relatively early in the new year.

These conservatives are now agreed on Deputy Secretary of State William Clark as Allen's successor. Unlike Allen, Clark, a longtime Reagan intimate, would insist on direct access to the president rather than being funneled through presidential counselor Ed Meese.

Ripe For Murder

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Situations can create conditions ripe for murder. If enough people could become aware of those situations, and of attitudes and responses which can defuse a murder ripe to erupt, crime prevention would be on the track to helping reduce one of the worst crime situations which exists.

M.C. Teague is the chief of the violent crimes section of the crime prevention program in the North Carolina Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

He is leading an attempt to analyze the state's murder rate and find some possible relations between a recent 21 percent decline and positive public and agency responses which could cause that decline to continue. Professional law officers have contended that murder can't be prevented. It happens in private involving ordinary people who most often know one another. Added cops, crime watch patrols, stiffer punishment, sophisticated equipment, changes in court procedures are all helpless.

But can a well planned public education program lead people to recognize the tensions which build to murder, and how to relieve them?

Education
Perhaps the schools, the churches, the news media, local police and crime prevention groups can come up with a program which, for want of a better definition, would be "conflict resolution" to help stop murder, Teague thinks.

It is not the bad guy that jumps from behind a dark bush who is killing Tar Heels that are murdered. Statistics demonstrate that in better than two-thirds of the cases, the victim and the killer know each other. They are often related.

BILL NOBLITT

An intensive public awareness program in rape prevention has already demonstrated some measure of effectiveness. Through community classes, discussion groups, on television, and in newspaper and magazine articles, women have been told over and over how to avoid the settings and conditions which can make them most vulnerable, and how to react if confronted.

Crime prevention, till now, has been mostly confined to property crimes: how to secure the home or business, labeling possessions, how to react when confronting a burglar or robber; how to organize communities to combat break-ins...

Teague thinks there can be a positive result from teaching individuals how to avoid an argument in the first place; how to get out of one so the other fellow saves face; how to defuse the tenseness at a party confrontation which threatens to lead to murder; how to recognize the conditions which can lead to murder and learn to walk or run away from the tragic consequences. In short, find a relief valve for the killing tensions building.

Police
Special training and re-programming in the police stations will also be required. Too often, if police are contacted by a person warning that a killing situation seems to be developing the response is likely to be instructions to call back if the killing happens.

The public and the police need to learn how to defuse the situation before the tragedy. More police and equipment, and better law will not cut acquaintance murders, Teague believes. Only the people likely to be involved can do that.

Education, police training, and "people talking about it" might hold the key to further reduction of the murder rate, Teague said.

Murders involving husbands and wives, or former spouses, make up the single biggest block of murders. There must be something in common in those cases, says Teague, who is struggling to find the thread so that the public can readily see what conditions are leading to murder, and so that communities can provide the outlet — whether a counseling service or a police response — which can prevent the inevitable death.

Other Editors Say Don't Politicize

(The Wilson Times)
It will be months before the more than 600 recommendations of the third decennial White House Conference on Aging have been reviewed. It may be years before the value of any of them is demonstrated. This was true of previous conferences.

The first was held in January 1961 just before President Dwight Eisenhower turned over the White House to John Kennedy. The second in 1971 was held in the middle of Richard Nixon's first term.

Both of the first two conferences were relatively non-controversial and produced ideas later adopted. Unfortunately, that cannot be said of this third conference. It was full of controversy and may have produced nothing but confrontation, both immediate and with respect to the adoption of any of its recommendations.

There is no question that the Republican National Committee, Secretary of Health and Human Services Richard Schweiker and certain of President Reagan's political advisers made a clumsy attempt to stack the conference and key committees with delegates who would endorse conservative positions on old age benefits and programs.

The question is whether this effort was made to offset real political bias among the 1,800 delegates already selected by state governors and the previous 96th Congress. Or was it done to oppose "liberal control", perceived in a paranoid reaction to congressional refusal to accept White House demands to cut old age Social Security benefit eligibility after the nationwide outpouring of opposition?

The "problems of the elderly" are economic and personal. It is stupid to politicize them. Most of the elderly who are able to be concerned about more than simply staying alive another day have been conned so often by their employers, their union officials and by politicians of every viewpoint that they are too distrusting or too smart to be misled again.

An End To Housing Recession?

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — You may find this difficult to accept, accustomed as you are to hearing bad economic news, but be assured it comes from a knowledgeable source: the housing recession appears to have ended.

If that estimate is correct, it means the end to more than three years of almost unparalleled disaster, during which home sales plunged more than 50 percent and the American dream became a nightmare.

Jack Carlson sees brighter days ahead, even while citing data that show existing home sales continued to fall in November — to only 1.9 million houses, compared with nearly 3.9 million in 1978.

Carlson may not be an unbiased observer, since he is executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, which understandably wants to promote commission-producing sales. But he is an economist too, and so has a duty to his profession, in which he holds a doctorate.

This is his reasoning: Home prices are really less than some published figures, and interest rates are often a good deal below those popularly cited. Moreover, they are falling, and household incomes are rising.

That combination of factors, he suggests, can mean modest increases in home sales during the spring, and sharper increases through summer.

"After the longest and deepest housing depression since World War II," his office announced this week, "brighter days are ahead for the home sales market." That statement is probably the nicest thing a housing man has said about housing since the problems began in 1979.

It has broader significance too. Housing went under because of high interest rates and inflation, and eventually it brought with it many of those industries that depend on it, such as furniture and appliances. If sales do indeed pick up, then possibly the process can be reversed, with the action spreading to sellers of refrigerators and the like.

Strength For Today

ALIFE'S WORK

A well-known psychologist was recently quoted as saying, "Do what you enjoy". The psychologist insisted that we only do well the things we like to do, and that our liking for any particular type of activity is a clear indication that here is the kind of work in which we should be engaged.

This is, of course, a splendid principle; but the trouble is that most of us cannot afford to follow it one hundred percent of the time. There are some things which we might want to do but which are impossible for us physically or mentally. There are other things which are financially out of our reach. And finally, duty to others may prevent us from doing exactly what we want to do.

Therefore, as a practical matter, it often is more important for us to learn to like what we have to do than yearn for unfettered choice among the options of life. The psychologist's advice is fine as an ideal, but we have to live in a real world which often makes it impossible for us to achieve it. — Elisha Douglass

A Solution: Try Mother

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — This New Year's Eve there will be a solution for anyone too drunk to drive home: call your mothers.

Mothers Against Drunk Driving, an organization dedicated to keeping drunk drivers off the roads, is paying the salaries of cab drivers so that six taxis will be available from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. to transport over-enthusiastic revelers on a first-call, first-served basis.

To get a free cab, a party-goer dials a number, asks for a "MADD Cab," and gives his name, location and destination.

People won't be judged worthy of the rides by how drunk they are, said police Sgt. Carl Yates. "No questions will be asked."

And from midnight New Year's Eve to 5 a.m. New Year's Day, the Transit Authority of River City — Louisville is nicknamed the "River City" — will furnish free bus rides on all runs.

"We get no enjoyment out of making drunk driving arrests," Yates said. On the past six New Year's holidays, there have been 384 traffic accidents and 152 drunk driving arrests in the city, he said.

"We wanted to do something about it and came up with these alternatives. We feel this is a positive approach to the problem," he said.

Those who ignore the department's alternatives and insist upon climbing behind the wheel will find that police are out in force — they're putting out extra patrols to arrest drunk drivers.

talks, by the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) has been accelerated by removing him from the official bureaucratic planning loop.

Bob Grey, former aide to liberal Democratic senator Allen Cranston and lieutenant to ACDA Director Eugene Rostow, asked the State Department to take Rowny off the regular distribution list. Told to put it in writing, Grey did so on Dec. 3. As a result, Rowny gets to SALT planning meetings only when he hears about it through the grapevine. In fact, he has been attending recent sessions.

Rowny was the Pentagon's representative at the SALT II negotiations, then took early Army retirement to protest the treaty negotiated during the Carter administration. In the Reagan administration, he is encountering business as usual at ACDA.

Pennsylvania May Abandon Liquor Business

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Christmas without rum-spiked eggnog? New Year's Eve without champagne?

It almost happened this year in Pennsylvania, where clerks at 730 state-owned liquor stores postponed a Christmas week strike three hours before the walkout was to begin.

The 3,500 clerks are trying to protect their jobs against another threat: the possibility that Pennsylvania, the nation's largest liquor purchaser and the state's only retail liquor vendor, may abandon the retail liquor business.

"Government should not do those things which can be better, and more properly, done by the private sector. I am convinced that the state-run liquor system is one of those things," Gov. Dick Thornburgh said last March.

He proposed transferring state stores to private hands and setting up a dozen state-run warehouses to supply them.

No other state with a liquor monopoly has ever dismantled it. And Thornburgh's proposal, followed by actual legislation, is the first time anyone has taken a concrete swing at Pennsylvania's extensive bureaucracy.

Created 48 years ago when Prohibition was lifted, the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board in fiscal 1981 bought more than $397 million worth of liquor and wines. Gross sales totaled nearly $720 million for the same period.

"We don't know what the U.S.S.R. is doing," said Beverly Eager, a spokeswoman for the PLCB. "But to our knowledge, we are the largest purchaser of liquor and wines."

The PLCB has become a way of life in Pennsylvania.

Some consumers make routine runs to New Jersey or Maryland for wine and liquor. Others browse from a typed list of products as they wait on line for service at drab state stores with wares locked behind the counter. Fewer than one third of the stores are self-service.

These inconveniences were not lost on Thornburgh when he made his initial pitch last January. He called the system inefficient, corrupt and unresponsive. He promised that in private hands, customers would enjoy lower prices, better selection, longer hours and more convenient locations.

By March, when legislation was introduced, Thornburgh said his letters were running 30-1 in favor of reform. And he poked fun at the PLCB's attempts at self-improvement, saying a wine training course had taught employees to tell the difference between white wine and red.

However, the going has been a lot rougher than Thornburgh, with his Republican majorities in both legislative chambers, may have anticipated.

Lawmakers countered his consumer arguments with logic of their own. Did the state want a liquor store on every corner? Operated by organized crime? Selling indiscriminately to teen-agers?

Some claimed the state would suffer from lost revenues and others said 3,500 people thrown out of work by the closing would create an uproar.

The argument cut across party lines and made for strange bedfellows. The GOP leadership arranged to remove one Republican from a committee because he opposed the Thornburgh plan. (It was later reported out of the committee by one vote). Another Republican, Sen. George Gekas, called the bill "a distiller's delight."

Democrats were no more unified about the proposed reform.

"It will allow people to buy what they want, where they want, when they want," said Sen. James Kelley, a longtime critic of the PLCB.

But a fellow Democrat, Sen. Robert Mellow, took another tack. "The most important issue is the moral issue and how far we're going with the liberalization of liquor and whiskey," he said.

Lobbyists were also in a frenzy. Attacks were mounted by the state tavern association and beer distributors, who now monopolize retail beer sales in the state. A meeting called to enlist support for the reform among hotels, restaurants and grocery chains was canceled when it drew too much press attention.

The bill suffered a setback in October, when the Senate tabled it, although Thornburgh still expects it to pass.

The clerks have been working since June without a contract. They now average $7.23 an hour or about $271 for a 37½-hour week. And while they are asking for an 8 percent pay increase, the main stumbling block has been the issue of job security should the state sell its liquor stores.

Thornburgh has been firm on this point, calling the job security demand "totally at odds with our goal."

The union, for its part, has accused Thornburgh of injecting politics into the negotiations and deliberately provoking a strike to discredit the system.

Mishaps Hobby To Stay Free While Appealing Federal Conviction

Reported

An estimated $3,900 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 1:10 p.m. mishap on 10th Street, 45 feet west of the Fifth Street intersection, involving cars driven by Jeffrey Sidney Shuman of Route 2, Chocowinity, and Terry Carraway Grimsley of Route 1, Winterville.

Damage from the mishap was estimated at $800 to the Shuman car and $700 to the Grimsley auto.

A car driven by Alonza Bizzell of Ayden and a truck operated by Wayne Sanford Smyth of Greeley, Colo., collided about 7:50 a.m. on Memorial Drive, 200 feet south of the South Village Drive intersection, causing $900 damage to the Bizzell car and $400 damage to the truck.

Police, who reported Bizzell was injured, charged Smyth with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

A 6:15 p.m. mishap at the intersection of Memorial Drive and Chestnut Street involved cars driven by Herlena Applewhite Hagans of 605 Contentnea St., and Steton Worsley Taylor of 77 Barnes St.

Officers set damage at $600 to the Hagans car and $500 to the Taylor vehicle.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH Associated Press Writer RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former state labor leader Wilbur Hobby, sentenced Tuesday to 18 months in prison, will remain free on bond while appealing his federal conviction for fraud and conspiracy.

Hobby's attorneys filed notice of appeal after U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt imposed the active prison sentence. Also sentenced to 18 months in prison was Mort Levi, a business associate convicted with Hobby on charges of misapplying money from federal job-training contracts. Britt said Hobby would not be required to report to federal prison at Lexington, Ky., while the appeal is underway. Defense attorney David Rudolph said Hobby's appeal would claim there was insufficient evidence to convict, and he predicted it would take six months to a year to be heard.

Hobby, looking much slimmer than in his days as president of the state AFL-CIO, showed no emotion as Britt read the sentence. Later, Hobby said he was unsurprised by the active prison term.

"I didn't know what to expect," he said. "This was my first experience."

"It's a hell of a lot better than going to prison for 11 years," he added, referring to the maximum possible sentence that could have been imposed.

Hobby was also fined $40,000, but Britt said he would consider reducing the fine if attorneys for Hobby filed documents showing he was unable to pay it. Rudolph said the papers were not filed earlier because federal prosecutors still had some of Hobby's financial records.

"Ain't no way I can pay $40,000," Hobby told reporters.

Britt also placed Hobby and Levi on probation for five years after their release, with the condition that they do community service work eight hours a week.

They were convicted Dec. 19 on charges stemming from the federal job-training contracts awarded by the state to Hobby's printing company, Precision Graphics Inc. Levi was also found guilty of urging students to falsify applications.

Hobby was president of the state AFL-CIO from 1969 until his re-election defeat in September. He has been active in state politics and unsuccessfully ran for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1972.

Levi declined comment after the sentencing. His attorney, Joseph Cheshire, said a decision would be made by today on whether Levi would appeal his conviction or begin serving the sentence. "Money is a concern, because Mort is broke," Cheshire said.

Britt said he intended each man serve six to 12 months of their sentence.

Hobby, his 9-year-old granddaughter Monica Hobby clutching him, told reporters he was convicted in a "political trial." He blamed media publicity, including news stories and television commercials by political opponents, for creating a "climate" that led to his conviction.

"If I had read everything that was said about me, I wouldn't associate with me either," he said.

Before the sentencing, Hobby told Britt he had done nothing wrong. He said his company had fulfilled its job-training contract.

"We committed no conspiracy. We committed no fraud," he said.

"I don't know anything I've done that I wouldn't do over again, except maybe a little tighter bookkeeping," he said.

Britt, however, said Hobby and Levi had done a "dis-service" to those who depend on job-training programs, and that actions such as theirs had placed the programs in jeopardy.

Donald Beskind, another attorney for Hobby, said Hobby had lost 60 pounds during his legal proceedings.

Search For Jet Pilot Continues

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The search was to continue today for an Air Force jet fighter pilot missing since his plane went down in the Atlantic 12 days ago.

"If he's got water, there's no reason why he can't still be alive," said Capt. Pat Osborn, public affairs officer at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, where 1st Lt. Michael Mattson is stationed.

"If we didn't think there was a chance of rescuing him, we wouldn't be out there looking."

Mattson's copilot, Lt. Thomas W. Tiller, was released Monday afternoon from the base hospital and went on leave, Osborn said.

Tiller was rescued Thursday after spending six days adrift in a life raft without food or water after the Dec. 18 crash. He was found about 65 miles east of Charleston, S.C., but said he doesn't know if Mattson was able to eject before the jet went down.

Meanwhile, a Durham television station reported late Tuesday that searchers had calculated tides in the area where the search had been concentrated and had concluded that Mattson should have drifted ashore in Brunswick County Tuesday at about 5 p.m.

Station WTVD-TV quoted sources whom it did not identify as saying a "massive search" was underway along the Brunswick County coast.

However, The Associated Press was unable to confirm the report. A spokesman for Seymour Johnson Air Force Base would neither confirm nor deny it. Spokesmen for the U.S. Coast Guard near Wilmington, Wrightsville Beach and Atlantic Beach and the Brunswick County Sheriff's Department denied knowledge of a search anywhere in North Carolina.

Petty Officer Mike Kelley with the Coast Guard in Miami, which is coordinating the search, said the search was taking place between Charleston, S.C., and Savannah, Ga. He said the drift in that area was eastward.

Charles June, 15-year veteran of self-defense instruction in eastern North Carolina, will teach the course.

Registration is open to those 12 years old and above, according to Barry Gaskins, public information director of Pitt County Community Schools. Gaskins said interested persons may call his office, 752-6106, or the Farmville Recreation Department, 753-4741 to pre-register.

Man Arrested

Greenville Police arrested Danny Quentine Carr, 26 of 403A Dudley St. early today on charges of attempted first degree burglary.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Carr was taken into custody about 3:15 a.m. at the intersection of Dudley and Van Dyke streets after he allegedly tried to enter an occupied home a short time earlier.

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the closing days of the First Session of the 97th Congress.

HOUSE
 Farm bill — By a vote of 205 for and 203 against, the House approved a new farm program expected to cost $11 billion over its four-year life.

Among its most disputed divisions, the bill (S 884) provides sugar price supports disliked by consumers and food companies; continues peanut production controls but on stricter basis than in the past; contains raises in price supports for grain and other basic crops that were called too modest by farm organizations; trims federal price supports for dairy farmers, and extends the food stamp program for one year.

 Supporter Paul Findley, R-Ill., said the bill "will have farmers producing for the market rather than the government (and) will help bring federal spending and inflation under control."
 Opponent Peter Peyster, D-N.Y., said "every major consumer group, the major farm groups, are all opposing this bill, and for good reason."

 Members voting "yea" favored the farm bill.
 Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G.

Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, James Broyhill, R-10, and William Hendon, R-11, voted "yea."
 Oil takeovers — The House passed, 223 for and 107 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 5274) to prohibit until June, 1982 any of the nine largest oil companies from acquiring any of the top 40 oil companies. Retroactive to Dec. 1, the bill's chief aim was to thwart the attempt by Mobile Corp. to gain control of Marathon Oil Co.

 Supporter Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said that smaller companies such as Getty, Citgo, Pennzoil and Kerr McGee "could be gone in the bat of an eyelash and the industry changed forever into a conglomeration of supergiants."

 Opponent Phil Gramm, D-Tex., said "we are talking about a last-minute bill that infringes on the basic rights of Americans to buy and sell property."
 Members voting "yea" wanted a temporary moratorium on the giants of the oil industry buying other oil companies.

HIGH COUNTRY SNOWFALL — A resident of Montezuma, a hamlet southwest of Georgetown, Colorado, clears away some snow to get to a stack of firewood after a heavy mountain snowfall over the weekend. The Colorado mountains remained under a travelers advisory as snow continued to fall, adding to the more than two feet that has fallen in many locations. (AP Laserphoto)

SENATE
 Members' taxes — The Senate adopted, 56 for and 36 against, an amendment whose chief effect was to give married congressmen the same tax break on Washington housing expenses that single members receive. Under the amendment, members can claim a business deduction on Washington housing even if their families live with them. This eliminated an IRS rule based on the assumption that a second home used to domicile a family was not a legitimate away-from-home expense. All eligible taxpayers will benefit from the amendment, which was attached to HR 5159.
 Sponsor Robert Dole, R-Kans., said "we simply clarified the law across the board. It applies to everyone, not just members of Congress."
 Opponent Carl Levin, D-Mich., said "this does yield and confer a financial benefit for most of us, those of us that are married."
 Senators voting "yea" favored changing the tax laws to benefit married congressmen and certain other taxpayers.
 Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."
 Libya — By a vote of 57 for and 34 against, the Senate killed a non-binding resolution aimed at Libya. The sense-of-the-Senate resolution that was tabled by this vote advocated cutting off U.S. purchases of Libyan oil. The Administration opposed the resolution.
 Sen. Russell Long, D-La., who favored killing the resolution, said senators "should not go charging off ourselves with our own separate foreign policy unless the president sees fit to ask us for his support in this matter."
 Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., disagreed on grounds that "it is fundamentally wrong for American public of private interests to be financing terrorism conducted by the Libyan government or anyone else."
 Senators voting "nay" wanted the Senate to advocate an embargo on Libyan oil.
 East and Helms voted "yea."

FOCUS

Long Louisiana Legacy

For Senator Russell Long of Louisiana, politics is "all in the family." On this date in 1948, he became the first person to win a Senate seat that both his father and mother had held. From 1930-32, his father, Huey "Kingfish" Long was both governor and Senator simultaneously and wanted to be "dictator of this country." As governor, the "Kingfish" abolished poll taxes and increased the state's 30 miles of paved roads to 2,500. Praised as a populist and denounced as a demagogue, he was assassinated before his "share-the-wealth" program became a reality. His two brothers became congressmen and the dynasty continues to this day. In Senate seniority Russell Long ranks second.

DO YOU KNOW — What famous novel by Robert Penn Warren is based on the life of Huey Long?

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY, DEC. 31, 1981

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening when you need to rely more upon your intuitive perceptions than on your mature judgment. Conditions in the evening are fine to bring in the New Year.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study new interests more carefully and get better results with them. Purchase new apparel to improve your appearance.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Handle pressing financial affairs early in the day for best results. Bring in the New Year with a real flourish.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You have made promises to others and should carry through with them or you could lose their goodwill. Use common sense.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) The New Year will bring in excellent conditions so plan for expansion. Be sure to use care in travel. Express happiness.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Count the cost well where recreation is concerned. Be thoughtful of loved one and see the New Year in together. Be wise.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A good day to find out what family members expect of you to keep harmony at home. Engage in the New Year's celebration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You could receive a communication that is hard to understand, so study it well before you do anything about it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make plans for the New Year's celebration and spend time with those you like the most. A time to express your talent.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make resolutions in which you and family members will benefit. You can add to present prestige now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A personal matter may not be as bad as you think, so analyze it objectively. Contact friends and wish them a Happy New Year.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Concentrate on getting ahead in your line of endeavor. Make detailed plans for the evening's celebration with loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Think out carefully what you desire to accomplish in the New Year. A good time to express your finest talents.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be very blunt and should be taught to use tact and diplomacy with others and avoid arguments. Give as fine an education as you can. Sports could be the forte here, or any profession requiring physical stamina.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Computers In Fabric Design

PARIS (AP) — Microcomputers are being used to help discover new and practical designs in color for fabrics, reports a computer information journal.

According to MIS Week, the system — intended to provide a personalized method for design by weavers — is already on-line in Paris.

"The biggest single advantage of computer-assisted design is that it provides an enormous gain in time for creating new woven fabrics by diminishing the number of samples required," the journal said.

Main functions of the system include:

—An ability to determine if any one design can be woven according to its specifications and to indicate how that design can be woven.

—The capacity to permit a designer to visualize the finished product on a screen with "zoom" capability for enlarging or diminishing the pattern.

SERVED AS PAGE

RALEIGH — Elizabeth Michelle Kittrell of Greenville served as a page in the offices of Gov. Jim Hunt during the week of Dec. 21-23, 1981.

Kittrell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Kittrell of Route 3, Box 216-A. She is a sophomore at D.H. Conley High School.

Five Years After Supreme Court Relaxed Rules. . .

Lawyers Debate Right To Advertise

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

When the United States Supreme Court ruled in 1976 that attorneys could advertise their services, the decision sparked debate within the legal profession.

Lawyers who favored the decision said it would enable them to reach people who may not know where to turn for help with legal problems. Lawyers opposed to the ruling said advertising would be unethical and would destroy the dignity of the profession.

Five years after the decision was handed down, attorneys in North Carolina are still arguing over its merits. Some, like Charlotte lawyer Ronald Williams, say they see nothing wrong with lawyers listing their services and fees in ads.

"I think the only thing wrong is that advertising has been outlawed," said Williams, who advertises every day in Charlotte newspapers. "There is no doubt that the ads reach a segment of people who would otherwise go without legal services."

In his advertisements Williams lists an uncontested divorce for $120, a business incorporation for $275, and a simple will for $45. He plans a series of advertising spots plugging his services on a local television station next month.

Advertising by attorneys in North Carolina is regulated by the N.C. State Bar in Raleigh. The bar set up a list of guidelines when the Supreme Court made its ruling.

According to bar secretary-treasurer Bobby James, lawyers are allowed to advertise specific services for specific fees in newspapers and on television and radio.

They cannot say they specialize in any area. An attorney is not allowed to appear or speak in a television or radio ad, according to James.

He said few lawyers took advantage of advertising until this year. "The first year probably no more than 10 lawyers over the state advertised. The next year it was maybe 20. We're getting more of them every year, it seems."

James said most attorneys who choose to advertise do so in the yellow pages of the telephone directory.

"Advertising is expensive, and I suspect for most lawyers it's just not worthwhile," he said. "Besides, not a lot of them like it, they just don't believe in it, like doctors. They think it lowers the dignity of their profession."

Attorney Tim Cosgrove of Hendersonville agrees with James.

"Advertising denigrates the profession. It's selling services for a particular price."

"An attorney may wind up with more business at lower prices, giving the people poorer service for their money," he said.

"Most lawyers who advertise that I know of need the business, period," said a Raleigh attorney who asked not to be identified.

Cosgrove said there are "too many variables" for an attorney to set a specific fee for a service. For example, he said an attorney advertising an uncontested divorce for $120 may find after talking with the client that another type of service is needed that may cost more.

"It's just too complicated. In a lot of cases, the attorney is going to lose money or risk losing a client by advertising his price. Either way he loses, and in the long run the profession is going to lose," Cosgrove said.

James said the bar has received no complaints stemming from lawyers' advertisements. But he added, "Putting a price on legal services isn't easy. It could be with more advertising there will be more dissatisfied customers. I can only hope it never comes to that."

NRC Chief Cites Delay Effort By Utilities

By G.G. LaBELLE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) —

The government's chief nuclear power official says some utilities are delaying crucial planning on what type power plants to build because of uncertainty over future electrical demand.

"The difficulty is that in some cases utilities are not planning at all," Nunzio J.

Palladino, chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said in an interview Tuesday.

Palladino also said some utilities are failing to train operators for atomic plants already under construction, and he pictured some segments of the nuclear power industry as resistant to the standardization he believes could be a solution to the industry's troubles.

He said the utilities have to "get out of this concept that every plant has to be tailor-made" in which the escalations in costs and construction times have made investors nervous about putting money into nuclear plants.

"We've got to get it down to more like where when you buy a Chevy, you're getting a Chevy and you don't get it in pieces and have to assemble it," he said.

The NRC chairman, who has surprised the nuclear industry with his outspoken criticism, said he has been "dismayed" that some utilities have not lived up to high standards.

But, recalling his own experiences in helping develop atomic submarines and power plants, he said, "I know these plants can be built properly and operated safely."

Palladino said that while the nuclear industry has problems, the chief alternative to uranium — coal — is having trouble meeting more stringent pollution standards.

A former dean of Pennsylvania State University's engineering college, he cited that state as one in which utilities are not planning to build either coal-fired or nuclear power plants.

Palladino said he could not speak authoritatively on the country as a whole but added that he suspected the situation was similar, with utilities uncertain over demand.

"Meanwhile, a number of older plants are going to have to be replaced," he said, raising the possibility of a problem developing "within five years ... probably somewhere between five and 10."

"All the utilities are going through an adjustment period on their growth rate," he said. "When they get caught up and they still have a problem managing even a modest growth rate, that's when they have to face decisions on what kind of plants to build."

Palladino also noted that 16 of 18 people failed an operating license test at the San Onofre power plant being built near San Clemente, Calif.

"A number of utilities that are getting into the business for the first time are delaying the recruitment and training of their operating staff," he said. "That's why they're running into problems. ... They've got to give attention to starting soon."

Police Report Two Break-Ins

Greenville police were investigating two pre-dawn break-ins today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said thieves broke a front window at Todd's Stereo Center on Trade Street and took two radios.

He said thieves broke open a rear window at Jones Paint & Wallcovering at 107 Arlington Blvd., then forced open a drink machine. An estimated $10 in change, a box of peanuts, and a box of crackers were reported missing.

Cannon noted that the peanuts and crackers were recovered in a wooded area behind the firm.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in another indecisive session on Wall Street. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 47 to 868.72 in the first half hour. But losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. Analysts noted that hopes for a yearend rally had been fading over the past couple of days, with trading volume remaining light and stock prices simply drifting. On Tuesday the government reported that the decline of the index of leading economic indicators slowed to 0.3 percent in November. But brokers said that still left investors in doubt about how soon the economy might begin a recovery from the recession. The highlight of today's early activity was a 3,335,800-share block trade in Duke Power at 20 1/2, up 1/8 from Tuesday's close. That marked the second biggest transaction, in number of shares, in NYSE history. The record block was 5,245,000 shares of American Motors on March 14, 1972. On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average lost 2.09 to 868.25, bringing its loss since the start of the week to 5.13 points. Declines held a 9.5 edge on advances at the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 35.30 million shares, against 28.32 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index dropped 37 to 70.57.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 2.04 at 316.49.

Wachovia Donates Building

VANCEBORO — Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. has given it's Vanceboro office building to the town of Vanceboro.

The bank's new office, currently under construction, will be available for occupancy in mid-summer, 1982. Until that time, Wachovia will lease the old building from the town.

Mayor Jimmie Morris, who received the gift from the bank Monday, said the building may be used for a library after it is vacated by Wachovia.

Thomas A. Bennett of Greenville, regional vice president of Wachovia's eastern region, said "Wachovia has been part of the Vanceboro community since its merger with Guaranty Bank in 1960, and we are happy to return something tangible to this community which has been good to Wachovia."

The Vanceboro building is about 20 years old.

Several years ago, Wachovia gave its main office at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets in Greenville to that city, then erected a new structure at the intersection of Fourth and Washington streets.

The old bank facility now serves as offices for the Greenville Utilities Commission.

that highway contractors regularly gathered in the state capital the night before the bids were due and divided up the business, arranging who would submit the "low" bid.

"It had been going on for a long time," said Widmar. Contractors have been compelled to testify in several ways. Some are given immunity and required to talk about conspiracies they have engaged in. Others volunteer to cooperate, hoping for lighter sentences and a reduction in the time they and their companies are ineligible to bid for federally financed highway work.

Thus far, investigations in one state typically have yielded allegations that have led the department into others. Widmar said that in only two states had preliminary checks of bidding patterns failed to indicate that contractors were rigging bids.

A Retirement Plan That Won't Cost Your Company A Cent.

Introducing NCNB's IRA Service For Businesses.

Starting January 1, you can offer your employees a retirement "bonus." As you can see, it can add up to the kind of figures that can keep workers working hard at absolutely no cost to your company.

The new Individual Retirement Account law says that even people with a retirement plan at work can invest in an IRA. There have been other changes, too. For example, a working couple can invest up to $2000 each a year. If they both start at 35, their IRAs combined would be worth over $1.3 million by the time they retire at 65*.

Of course, even with a payoff like that, it's hard to find the money to invest. And that's especially true for your younger employees.

That's why NCNB has put together a program to inform and educate your employees on the values of opening an NCNB IRA. In addition to the posters and literature you see here, we can set up presentations and counseling — even automatic payroll deductions.

All in all, it's like adding an employee benefit without adding a penny to your overhead. For information on this program and our SEP and the new Keogh Plan, call or stop in now at the bank that wants to be the best in the neighborhood.

Why Should You Start An IRA Today?

Tax Benefits
You can get an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) for your employees. It's a great benefit that costs you nothing.

Retirement Security
Your employees can have a secure future. They can start saving today for their retirement.

*Based on single person's $2000 (or a working couple's $4000) annual deposit made on the first of each year, at an annual interest rate of 12%, compounded daily on 365/360 basis. Working individuals can contribute 100% of their annual salary up to $2000. Substantial interest penalty required for early withdrawal. All depositors insured to $100,000 by FDIC.

#1 Tar Heels Blast Santa Clara, 76-57

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — Forward James Worthy and guard Mike Jordan led the top-ranked North Carolina Tar Heels to a 76-57 triumph over Santa Clara in the Cable Car Classic basketball tournament Tuesday night.

Penn State claimed third place in the tournament with a 54-49 victory over Texas Christian in the consolation game.

North Carolina, 8-0, played without 6-9 starting center Sam Perkins, who was on the bench with a sprained ankle.

But Worthy scored well at close range for the Tar Heels, finishing with 19 points.

Jordan escaped Santa Clara's pressure man-to-man defense for several backdoor layups, and led all scorers with 21 points and all rebounders with 10.

Santa Clara did not enjoy a good shooting night, going 34.3 percent from the floor.

"Santa Clara is a good team. We caught them on a bad night," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "We missed Perkins. But it worked out well. Sometimes, when one player is out, the others play that much harder to make up for it."

Penn State Guard Mike Edelman scored 16 points to lead Penn State to its victory in the see-saw consolation game Monday.

Bailey, Whittenburg Lead NCSU To 60-48 Win

Wolfpack Stuns No. 2 Shockers

HONOLULU (AP) — Forward Thurl Bailey scored 23 points guard Derek Whittenburg added 22 as 20th-ranked North Carolina State upset No. 2 Wichita State 60-48 in a semifinal game at the 18th annual Rainbow Classic basketball tournament Tuesday night.

In a game that saw the lead change hands 10 times in the first half, Whittenburg sank eight consecutive free throws in the final 4:37 to pull NC State into a 32-25 halftime lead.

The Wolfpack built the lead to 10 points twice and 12 points three times in the second half as the Wichita State shooting went stone cold. NC State employed a tight 2-3 zone the whole game to effectively shut down the Shockers big front wall of Antoine Carr, Jay Jackson and Cliff Levingston.

The Shockers hit a miserable 33 percent of their field goal attempts while the Wolfpack made 48 percent.

"There is no question that our guards (Whittenburg and Sydney Lowe) did it for us again tonight," NC State Coach Jim Valvano said. "We wanted them to control the tempo and when we got the lead, they were to spread the court out. They did it well."

"When we started to play good defense in the second half, we couldn't get any offense going," said Wichita Coach Gene Smithson. "We just couldn't stick it in the hole, especially from the outside when NC State packed the zone."

Bailey, who led the Wolfpack with seven rebounds against the taller Shockers, who enjoyed a 37-25 margin in that department, also drew praise from Valvano.

"Bailey was a big key for us. He's quiet and effective and we need that because we are not a physical team," the NC State coach said.

Levingston, with 11 points, and Carr with 10, led the WSU attack, which had been averaging 90 points a game.

N.C. State, 9-0, meets Rice, which upset No. 8 San Francisco in the second game, for the Classic title Wednesday night. Wichita State, 8-1, will play the San Francisco for third place.

Derek Perry's driving layup with 2:46 remaining in overtime propelled the Michigan State Spartans to a 51-50 victory over Cal State-Fullerton in a semifinal consolation game earlier in the day.

Valkyries Win Ninth, In Finals Vs. C.B. Aycock

A Staff Report

HOLLYWOOD — Before the D.H. Conley Invitational began Coach Joy James said she hoped her Valkyries would have a chance to meet Charles B. Aycock in the finals. She got her wish.

The Valkyries, led by Mechio Kornegay's 20 points and a 22-point second quarter, defeated Goldsboro, 56-45, Monday night to send Conley into tonight's championship game against Aycock.

The Lady Falcons defeated Southern Wayne, 39-24, earlier in the evening Monday to advance to the finals. Both Aycock and Conley are 9-0 going into tonight's 8:30 contest.

Southern Wayne (3-4) will face Goldsboro (5-3) in the consolation game tonight at 7 o'clock.

D.H. Conley started slowly against the Lady Cougars, whose only other two losses this season have been to C.B. Aycock, as the Valkyries led by only one, 8-7, at the end of the first period.

The second period was another story. The Valkyries erupted for 22 points to the Lady Cougars' eight and went into halftime ahead, 30-15. "We started playing," James said when asked what happened in the second quarter. "Our fast break got going."

The game, however, was not over. Goldsboro scored the first seven points of the third period and eventually closed to within four. The Lady Cougars could get no closer.

The Valkyries led, 38-28, at the end of the period and then played Goldsboro even in the final eight minutes to come away with a nine-point victory a trip into the championship game.

Joining Kornegay in double figures for the Valkyries was Karen Barret with 12 and Irish Barnhill with 10. Darlene Cannon had nine points for DHC.

Goldsboro was led by guard Donna Atkinson with 20 points. No one else had more than seven points for the Lady Cougars.

Davidson Nips Duke; Indians Scalp Auburn

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — William & Mary and Davidson were expected to meet in tonight's Iron Duke Classic, but most basketball observers didn't think it would be in the championship game.

William & Mary, now 5-1, hit 21 free throws in the final 12:10 of the game to score a 58-48 win over Auburn, which came into the four-team tournament with the best overall record.

In the first game Tuesday night, Davidson's Cliff Tribus hit a 20-footer at the buzzer as the Wildcats came from 11 points down in the second half to upset tournament host Duke 75-73.

Duke, 2-5, and Auburn, 6-2, meet in the consolation game at 7 p.m., and Davidson, 4-5, and William & Mary play for the title at 9 p.m.

The loss by the Blue Devils was their second to a Southern Conference team this year, and it left head coach Mike Krzyzewski still looking for a winning combination.

"People have just not come forward to accept their roles on this team," a disappointed Krzyzewski said after the game. "We keep trying different combinations...We are yet to have five guys become a unit."

Davidson literally stole the game away from Duke. The Blue Devils had things their way throughout the first half and seemingly were in control early in the second half when Vince Taylor's tap-in put Duke up, 52-41, with 15:42 to play.

But Davidson reeled off four straight baskets on several steals by guard John Carroll and three shots by Kenny Wilson. The Blue Devils kept the lead, however, until a dunk shot by Tribus put the Wildcats on top, 59-58, with 7:46 left.

'Cats Whip ECU Women

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Northwestern used its inside muscle to outscore East Carolina 14 to 2 in the final five minutes of the first half and went on to defeat the Lady Pirates, 78-70, Tuesday night in the opening round of the University of Miami Christmas Classic.

ECU, now 2-4, will play Georgia State Thursday night. Northwestern, which defeated West Virginia, 79-57, Monday, is now 8-1.

With ECU up 24-22 with five minutes left in the opening half, forwards Patience Vanderbush and Anusha Browne fueled a Wildcat rally which gave Northwestern a 36-26 halftime advantage.

Vanderbush, a 5-11 senior, and Brown, a 6-1 freshman, both scored four points during the surge, from which ECU never recovered.

"We lost the game in the last five minutes of the first half and in the first 10 of the second half when we didn't take command," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said.

An Amy Prichard field goal with 4:52 left in the game gave Northwestern a 69-52 lead — the Wildcat's biggest of the game.

Mary Denkler, who scored 23 of her game-high 29 points in the second half, scored 14 points in the final six minutes as ECU rallied to the final margin of eight — the closest the Lady Pirates got in the second half.

It was a matter of size. Northwestern used 6-4 centers Tracy Diemer and Karen Stack inside to create offensive opportunities and the Wildcats shot a sizzling 63% from the floor.

Northwestern's size forced the smaller Lady Pirates to shoot from the perimeter, where they hit a poor 32.5%. ECU took 29 more shots than Northwestern, but made six less than the Wildcats.

ECU evened the rebounding war with the Wildcats at 42 as 5-6 guard Lillian Barnes led all rebounders with 11. The Lady Pirates forced 36 Northwestern turnovers but could not capitalize often enough. ECU had 22 turnovers on the night.

In the early going, Sam Jones led ECU to a 10-4 lead with two jumpers from the corner. But, the Wildcats roared back on the inside play of Stack and guard Rosalie Domicink to tie the game at 12-12.

The lead then seasawed back and forth until the decisive surge by the Wildcats late in the first half.

"I really can't get made about the way we played," Andruzzi said. "We've really been put through it the past day or two. First of all the airlines lost our baggage and we didn't get it until this afternoon."

"Then, Mary Denkler was out of it in the first half. She's got a touch of the flu and a couple of the other girls don't feel well either," she added.

UCLA QB Carries Load

HOUSTON (AP) — Critics of UCLA quarterback Tom Ramsey may have trouble getting messages to the junior whose winter addresses keep changing.

"I'll just keep going to the Bluebonnet Bowl or the Rose Bowl or whatever," Ramsey said. "When you play quarterback, you are subject to a lot of criticism but you are subject to the good stuff too so you take it all in stride."

Ramsey, who carried the brunt of criticism for the bad times in UCLA's 7-3-1 season, figures post-season appearances mean he must be doing something right.

Despite a season when he threw 15 interceptions and 14 touchdown passes, Ramsey goes into Thursday night's battle against Michigan in the Bluebonnet Bowl with his confidence intact.

"I just try to maintain a high level of confidence," Ramsey said. "It's (interceptions) just something to write about. I don't like talking about the interceptions as much as the touchdown passes."

There is plenty of evidence to give Ramsey confidence. Ramsey is the No. 11-ranked passer in the nation, completing 59.5 percent of his passes. He hit 122 passes in the regular season, the second best effort ever by a Bruin quarterback.

But the subject of those interceptions keeps arising. "He had a tendency to throw more interceptions than in the past, and I think that would be pointed to for a few games we were not fortunate enough to win," Coach Terry Donahue said. "Tom is aware of the fact that he needs to cut down on his interception rate."

Ramsey led the Bruins to a 6-0 start last season before a slump cost him his job in the final game.

"When you go 6-0, you can't do anything wrong, all the things people were writing about us was unbelievable," Ramsey said. "Then you lose a game and the roof falls in."

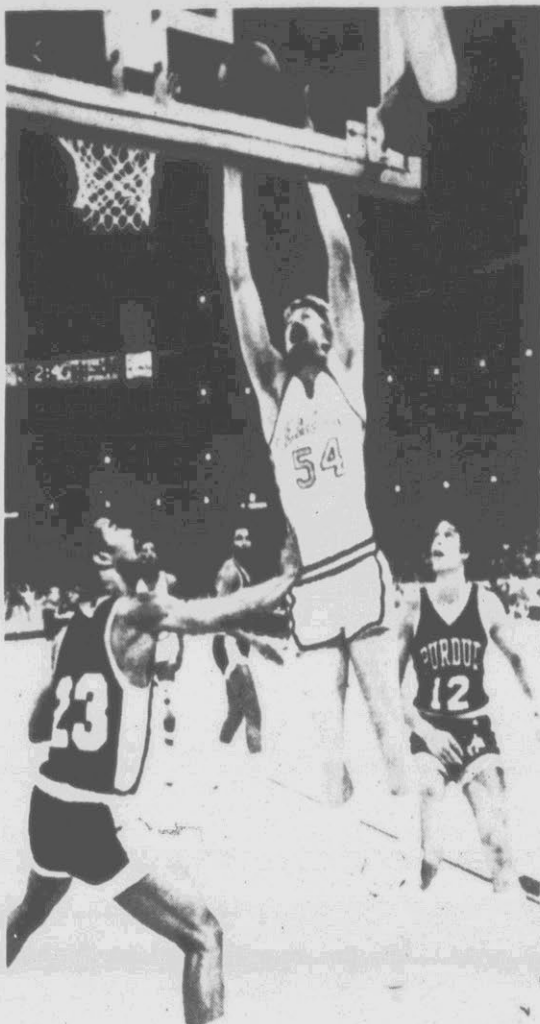

Ramsey got his job back this season and helped lead a late-season surge.

"I'll admit to a few bad throws on my part but I didn't have the best of luck either when passes are ricocheting and bouncing through the air," Ramsey said. "I could name five off the bat that went off of people but they all add up to that 15 total."

Ramsey says he'll have to pass effectively for the Bruins to beat Michigan.

"Against Michigan, we'll have to be unpredictable," Ramsey said.

"When you get into a phase where they know what you're doing, you're in trouble. You have to be able to run and throw effectively."

Welsh Guides Navy Final Time Tonight

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Buckeyes trimmed George Welsh, the coach with the most victories in Navy football history, will guide the midshipmen for the final time in the Liberty Bowl Wednesday night.

And Eddie Meyers, Navy's record-setting tailback, says that may be the psychological edge the midshipmen, 7-3-1, need to upset Ohio State, 8-3-0.

"At first, it was very depressing when we learned coach was leaving for Virginia. It was a shock. But then we realized we still have a job to do. The mood now is intense. It could give us the edge we need," said Meyers, the nation's fifth-leading rusher this fall with 1,318 yards.

Welsh, 55-45-1 in his nine Navy seasons, assumes the job of rebuilding Virginia football in 1982.

Coach Earle Bruce isn't sure how Welsh's lame-duck status will affect his players. But Bruce recalled a premature announcement of his Iowa State appointment. It almost cost his Tampa team a Tangerine Bowl victory over Kent State in 1972.

"I've never announced another job before a bowl. I've been in a situation where someone else announced it. It was announced at halftime by the press to my players. They got them coming off the field," he said. "The score was 21-0 Tampa at halftime. The final was 21-18 Tampa."

Odds makers have established the Big Ten Conference co-champions as 14-point favorites to end a four-game bowl losing streak in their 10th straight post-season appearance.

"We're such a young team that shouldn't bother us," Bruce said.

Art Schlichter, Ohio State's senior quarterback making his 48th straight start, predicts the Buckeyes must have a balanced attack.

Schlichter has accounted for 804 yards and four touchdowns passing in Ohio state's losses in the Gator, Rose and Fiesta bowls in the last three seasons.

Ohio State and Navy played one common opponent in 1981.

USTA Ranks Evert Lloyd No. 1

NEW YORK (AP) — For the sixth time in her tennis career, Chris Evert Lloyd has been named the No. 1-ranked woman player in the United States by the United States Tennis Association.

Lloyd, who was ranked second the last two years behind Tracy Austin (1980) and Martina Navratilova (1979), regained the No. 1 spot she had held for five consecutive years, from 1974 to 1978.

Austin, the 1981 U.S. Open winner, finished second while Navratilova remains third for 1981. Rounding out the Top Ten for the year are Andrea Jaeger, Pam Shriver, Barbara Potter, Bettina Bunge, Kathy Jordan, Mary Lou Piatek and Pam Casale.

Rice Surprises No. 8 San Francisco

By The Associated Press

When the nation's second and eighth ranked college basketball teams are upset on the same night it's big news. When it happens in a doubleheader in the same building it's downright shocking.

But a championship showdown tonight between 20th-ranked North Carolina State and unranked Rice is the surprising result of the former's 60-48 beating of No. 2 Wichita State and the latter's 78-66 victory over No. 8 San Francisco in the Rainbow Classic.

And in the true spirit of David and Goliath, it was N.C. State's little men who prevailed and the Shockers' big men who fell before a stunned crowd at the Blaisdel Center Arena in Honolulu.

"There is no question that our guards (Derek Whittenburg and Sydney Lowe) did it for us again tonight," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said of his team's victory over Wichita State. "We wanted them to control the tempo and when we got the lead, they were to spread the court out. They did it well."

"When we started to play good defense in the second half, but we couldn't get any offense going," said Wichita State Coach Gene Smithson. "We just couldn't stick it in the hole, especially from the outside when N.C. State packed the zone."

Forward Thurl Bailey with 23 points, Whittenburg with 22 and Lowe, who quarterbacked the offense, were the keys to the victory by the Wolfpack, 90.

N.C. State employed a tight 2-3 zone the whole game to effectively shut down the Shockers' big front wall of Antoine Carr, Jay Jackson and Cliff Levingston. Levingston had 11 points and Caylor 10.

"That was probably the biggest game in our school's history. I don't think we've ever won a game like this," said Rice Coach Tommy Suits, whose Owls improved to 7-4.

"It's a difficult game for the San Francisco Dons to accept, but it simply wasn't meant to be," said Coach Pete Barry, whose club fell to 10-1.

Rice was led by Renaldo O'Neal with 24 points while Ricky Pierce added 15. San Francisco waded a sensational 39-point performance by Quintin Dailey.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 1 North Carolina ripped Santa Clara 76-57 in the Cable Car Classic final; No. 3 Virginia routed Richmond 74-43 in the Times-Dispatch Invitational at Richmond; No. 4 Kentucky took Notre Dame in overtime 34-28; No. 9 Minnesota crushed Arizona 91-62 in the final of the

Valenzuela Is Married

MERIDA, Mexico (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the rookie pitching sensation of the Los Angeles Dodgers, was married Tuesday night to Linda Burgos, a 21-year-old elementary school teacher.

The religious ceremony in this city's modernistic church of the Immaculate Mary lasted about one hour. The church seats about 700 but only 100 were permitted inside for the wedding.

The bride, who is from Merida, wore a white embroidered gown of French organdy with a hat trailing a three-yard-long veil.

A Dodger's spokesman said the gown, purchased in Los Angeles, cost Valenzuela $4,000.

Valenzuela, also 21, wore a black tuxedo with a spray of orange blossoms on the left lapel. He told reporters it was the "happiest day of my life."

Va Routs Richmond, 74-43

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — All-American Ralph Sampson's slam dunk opened the scoring with just 12 seconds gone and sent Virginia's unbeaten third-ranked Cavaliers off to a 74-43 rout of Richmond's Spiders in the semifinals Tuesday night of the Richmond Times-Dispatch Invitational tournament.

The Cavaliers, who have won their first nine starts, will play for the title Wednesday night against James Madison's Dukes, unbeaten in eight starts, following a consolation game between Richmond and Virginia Commonwealth's Rams.

Senior Linton Townes got scoring help down the stretch as the Dukes overcame a horrendous first half for a 54-46 victory over VCU.

With the 7-foot-4 Sampson scoring six points in the first three minutes, Virginia raced to an 18-2 lead to put the Spiders, 7-3, out of contention after only five minutes.

The closest Richmond got after that was 12 points as Virginia upped its margin to 25, 43-18, at intermission and stretched its lead to as many as 35 points in the second half.

Sampson, who spent much of the second half on the bench after playing 17 of the first 20 minutes, finished with 12 points, a game-high 13 rebounds and three blocked shots.

Sharing Virginia scoring honors with Sampson was Craig Robinson, followed by Othell Wilson with 11 points.

Freshman Jimmy Miller scored eight points and pulled down 10 rebounds.

In the first game, the Dukes trailed by as many as 12 points in the first half and would have been farther behind except for Townes, who hit six of nine shots to account for all but six of their 20 points before intermission.

That enabled VCU, now 4-4, to carry a seven-point lead into the second half, but the Rams — who had lost to JMU 47-45 here just 10 days ago — failed to score in the first 6:49 after intermission and went the first eight minutes without a field goal.

With 56 seconds remaining, the Rams cut JMU's lead to 45-44, but a layup by Ruland on a feed by Townes and three free throws by David Dupont, Steele and Charles Fisher made it 52-44 with 23 seconds left.

The Rams were guilty of 18 turnovers, many in the final minutes.

Ford: Tigers Doing Well

MIAMI (AP) — The No. 1-ranked Clemson Tigers are doing "very well" in practice sessions leading up to Friday night's Orange Bowl showdown with Nebraska, Coach Danny Ford says.

However, Ford said starting cornerback Anthony Rose may have broken a finger in practice Tuesday.

"A ball hit the end of the finger — it's nothing severe at all," said Ford. "It will probably be perfectly OK — he should be able to play."

Rose, a 5-foot-9, 175-pound senior from Sumter, S.C., started every one of the undefeated Tigers' 11 games this year, intercepting two passes, sacking the opposing quarterback once and making 24 tackles.

Gervin's 46 Derails San Diego, 119-107

By The Associated Press

When the San Antonio Spurs' George Gervin takes over, about all the opposition can do is watch.

"George is so outstanding it's difficult to stop him," says Spurs Coach Stan Albeck. "We take him for granted here, and that's a shame."

Gervin scored 46 points and helped San Antonio derail San Diego, 119-107, in the National Basketball Association Tuesday night. Gervin's 16 points in the third quarter short-circuited a San Diego rally that actually put the Clippers up by one point on two occasions.

"When George is going like he was tonight, there is not much you can do," said San Diego's Michael Brooks, who scored 19 points.

San Diego pulled within five, 110-105, with two minutes left, but San Antonio scored nine of the game's final 11 points.

"We had our chances in the fourth quarter, but we failed to execute," Clippers Coach Paul Silas said. "George Gervin was devastating. We didn't have enough manpower to go against the Spurs tonight."

Mike Mitchell had 16 points for San Antonio. Freeman Williams matched Brooks' scoring output with 19 for the Clippers.

Marbles Is No Longer A Kid's Game

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
PARKERSBURG, W.Va.
(AP) — John Masters thinks the days when Tom Sawyer and millions of real American children carried a prized marble or two in their pockets are over.

A trim, elderly man with silvering hair and a trim goatee, Masters is manager of one of the nation's last marble factories. Ask him about marbles and he'll happily talk away the afternoon, telling you about making cat eyes, all reds and aqua jewels.

"Marbles mean a lot to me," he says. "They're as random as snowflakes." At the Vitro Agate plant near the Ohio River, Masters and a small group of workers turn out millions of marbles that are shipped to toy stores and children around the world.

But the game that once was played by George Washington and Abraham Lincoln and generations of American children since has been all but forgotten in recent years, Masters says.

"Marbles are mainly an outdoor game. You find a flat spot in the dirt or grass and make your circle," he says. The marbles are put in the center and the players try to knock them out with their shooters.

"The art of shooting marbles is virtually lost," he says.

Once there were dozens of factories in the United States turning out marbles, Masters says. Now there are just four factories left that make nothing but marbles, all of them in West Virginia, he says.

"Mothers seem to object now to children getting down on their hands and knees in the dirt to shoot marbles," Masters says with a sigh.

In the factory beyond Masters' office, workers stir vats of white hot, molten glass in furnaces. The marble machines turn flaming drops of liquid glass into a revolving pair of steel cylinders.

The cylinders look like giant, interlocking corkscrews. The drops of glass are caught in the teeth of the revolving cylinders, to be sent rushing along the turning vanes.

As workmen watch, the shapeless droplets are shaped and smoothed into perfect globes that come rolling off the machines and clunking into bins filled with thousands of gleaming marbles.

But marbles don't have much attraction to children surrounded by electronic games, television, train sets, stereos and a hundred other toys and amusements.

"I wish more kids played marbles..." Masters says. "They don't play like they used to. There are just so many things available to kids today."

Even the cheapness and simplicity of marbles seem to work against them, Masters says. "There aren't many toys you can buy for under a dollar. But most stores don't even sell them anymore. The markup is too low."

Although Vitro Agate makes about 400 million marbles a year, the small factory is capable of producing many more, Masters says.

"Each of these machines put out about 300,000 marbles a day," says Masters, proudly patting one of the chugging engines. "We never turn them off."

Stray marbles are scattered around the plant and Masters and his staff say there is a special art to walking around a marble factory.

"You learn instinctively to feel with your feet before you bring your weight down," Masters says.

"Unfortunately, mothers and fathers have a very sharp aversion to walking on a rug in bare feet and coming across a marble," he adds.

"I never have less than 30 million marbles in stock," says Masters as he gestures at rows and rows of stacked boxes in his warehouse. "I got 12 million ready to go out here. Interested?"

New Skin, Brand New Life For Explosion Victim

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — In one horrifying moment in the fall, Mark Walsh lost 40 pounds of flesh. An explosion flashed through an aerosol can factory and burned the skin off 80 percent of his body.

Twenty-four people were hurt, and four of them eventually died. But Walsh was lucky. He was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital, where he became one of a small group of burn victims to be treated with artificial skin, an experimental man-made substitute that permanently covered his wounds, reduced his suffering and perhaps saved his life.

After two months in the hospital, Walsh went home for Christmas. His skin was red. His walk was slow and shuffling. But he said he felt "great" and told his father he wanted a 2-inch-thick steak for dinner.

heard him talk until Thanksgiving."

After four days, Walsh was transferred to Massachusetts General. By then, his biggest danger was infection. Skin is the barrier that ordinarily protects the body from bacteria. Walsh's skin was gone, and his dead flesh was an ideal breeding place for germs.

Unlike the practice of a few years ago, doctors now try to cover the burned flesh with grafted skin as quickly as possible.

The day he arrived at Massachusetts General, doctors took him into surgery. It would be the first of six operations over four days that lasted a total of 24 hours. The doctors' goal was to cut away the dead skin and fat and cover his wounds with new skin.

First the doctors gathered as much of Walsh's remaining skin as he could spare and began covering his burns, including his face and hands. But they quickly ran out and turned to artificial skin. In all, they used about eight square feet of artificial skin to cover the young man's neck, chest, abdomen and arms.

This skin was invented by Burke and Dr. I.V. Yannas of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. In the past year or so, it has been used on 30 patients at Massachusetts General and the affiliated Shriners Burns Institute.

Like real skin, it has two layers, the top silicone and the bottom made of proteins taken from shark cartilage. And like ordinary skin grafts, it is never removed. Instead, the patient's own body eventually replaces it, just as natural skin is continuously renewed.

"In the old days before the skin was available — which was about a year ago — we would have borrowed skin from somebody else," Burke said. "But that has difficulties of immunologic rejection, and the artificial skin is not rejected."

To fight infection, nurses administered antibiotics intravenously and washed him with a solution of silver nitrate. For six weeks, everyone who entered his room wore disposable masks, caps and gowns.

A respirator worked for his burned lungs, while a tube kept his breathing passage open. New blood and nourishment flowed into his blood vessels.

Each day, therapists exercised his joints. Nurses changed his dressings. Machines monitored his breathing and other vital signs.

Over his bed hung a picture of Walsh in a hockey uniform so that doctors and nurses would know what he looked like.

"After all," said Burke, "when you have somebody all bandaged up and you can't see anything but his eyes and the tip of his nose, it's hard to figure out who you're dealing with."

Walsh was oblivious to all this. Although he would respond to simple commands, he essentially was unconscious.

On the day after Thanksgiving, he woke up. He could not remember anything that had happened since the explosion.

"I think I sort of missed all the pains," Walsh said. "I guess the grafts are painful, but I don't remember them. I felt the same way when I woke up as I do now."

Walsh will need about a year of physical therapy to regain full use of his stiffened joints. But his doctor says he will be able to go back to work long before then. And despite his burns, his appearance will be normal.

"He'll always have scars," Burke said. "They won't be dramatic, and I think he will be able to function in society without everybody knowing that he's scarred, because his face and hands will be very presentable."

Walsh's dramatic recovery is the reward of a steady series of advances pioneered over the past decade by doctors at Massachusetts General and elsewhere.

"All of us expected him to get well, and we're not surprised that he did this well," said Dr. John Burke, chief of trauma services and co-inventor of artificial skin.

That does not minimize the accomplishment. Burns often are described as the worst possible injuries. Victims are susceptible to infection and breathing and circulatory problems. Nationally, about 130,000 people are hospitalized with burns each year, and 10,000 of them die.

On the morning of Oct. 22, Walsh, 25, an electrician from Norwood, happened to be working there at the aerosol can factory in Holbrook, a suburb of Boston.

The fire burned 80 percent of his skin, including his face, and he breathed flame that scorched his throat and lungs.

First he was taken to Brockton Hospital and was moved the same day to Carney Hospital. Walsh's father, Donald, got to Brockton in time to look into the ambulance.

"I said, 'How are you doing?'" the elder Walsh recalled. "And Mark said, 'OK. My hands are bad.' That was the last time we

Wanted-Ad Marriage Is Working For A Couple

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Their romance started in the classified ads. Their marriage made Page 1. And as they celebrate the first anniversary of their want-ad wedding, Al and Suzanne Maas say they're planning a birth announcement.

It was out of desperation that Maas, a successful but lonely hotel corporation president, placed an ad in the San Jose Mercury and San Jose News in search of a perfect wife. He got 150 replies and picked Suzanne.

Both are very happy he did.

"I feel like Princess Diana without all the publicity," Mrs. Maas said in a telephone interview from the couple's San Jose home. "She's watched all the time. But we can just go around and be ourselves. It's wonderful."

Although she was single and wanted to be married, Mrs. Maas wasn't looking for a husband when the want ad caught her eye. She was looking for her lost Gordon setters, Reno and Bogie. Maas' ad was in the column next to the one listing lost puppies.

Maas and his future bride were tired of the dating game. Maas, now 58, had tried computer dating and photo dating, and he had been married twice before. His wife, now 29, had just about given up on trying to meet men.

"I was a nurse in the intensive-care nursery," she said, "and most of the patients I met were, well, they were babies."

Maas had a different problem: "You meet women, but a lot of them are married, and not available."

The ad promised extensive travel, visits to the symphony and ballet and evenings filled with good food and wine. She called Maas and made a date, and on Dec. 28, 1980, they were wed.

"We took the Concorde to London in June and spent a month in Europe," Mrs. Maas said. "We've been to Mexico. We've been to the Dutch Antilles. We just got back from that."

She's so pleased with the way things have turned out that she has recommended the personal column to friends. She said it now appears that one friend is going to marry someone she met through an ad.

"I have no regrets," Mrs. Maas said. "Al doesn't have any bad points. None. He's a very good husband ... couldn't have asked for anything better." The only sad part of the story is that Mrs.

Maas never got her dogs back.

"I'm quite sure this is going to be the best uninterrupted series of years in my life," Maas said. "They've started off that way ... as a matter of fact, I can't remember one argument we've had. We have too many positive things to do. There's no time to (argue)."

The Picture Needs A Suitable Frame

CHICAGO (AP) — Although most people know what kind of art they like, they sometimes have difficulty choosing the right frame for a particular picture, says an expert in the field.

"A frame should be in proportion to the size and characteristics of the art — not overpowering it, yet strong enough to contain it," says Dave Klitzky, president of a chain of do-it-yourself framing stores.

"In many cases a picture's tonality will suggest the best frame," says Klitzky, who heads the Great Frame Up. "If you're working with warm tones, try a warm wood frame; cool tones would suggest a darker wood frame or metal frame."

Klitzky suggests that the visual weight of a picture can sometimes be a guide to how wide the frame should be. If the picture has strong lines and dark colors, the frame should be wider than if the picture has fine lines and light colors.

A picture with three-dimensional qualities can be enhanced by using a frame that slants into the picture, adding to the feeling of depth, he says. An action-oriented subject usually needs a larger frame to contain its motion.

"A two-dimensional graphic poster seems to frame better in a flat-faced molding," he adds.

A couple of don'ts, according to Klitzky: don't trim the picture to fit an existing frame's size; remember, the frame is subordinate to the picture and should follow its dimensions. Avoid choosing the frame to match furniture or wall coverings in the room. "You will lose the picture in a sea of harmony," he warns.

Pawnbroker A Barometer Of Economy

By STEVE LE VINE
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, W. Va.
(AP) — The mercury is at both ends of Edwin Masinter's economic barometer these days — leaving a huge gap in between.

"There are more haves and have-nots now. I see less middle-ground people," says Masinter, who has a ground-level vantage point from his Charleston pawnbrokerage, B&B Loans.

The cherubic, effusive Masinter, 64, says business is brisk at his shop in the downtown area of West Virginia's capital. But he says it's also much different from earlier years at B&B, which he's owned since 1946.

"You didn't see people just selling their high school rings before. There are more transactions and more money involved in each one."

"But we also see a greater separation of haves and have-nots. We see people who write a check for $5,000 for a diamond ring and we also see people selling a gold ring for $5 or $10," Masinter says.

The native West Virginian, whose father and uncle also were pawnbrokers, opens a drawer filled with gold rings and bracelets. "They come in by the hundreds," he says. "I don't know if it's because of the hard times or that people are just used to selling gold jewelry since the price went up."

But on a trip down to B&B's cellar, which stores rows of hunting rifles, guitars and stereo equipment, Masinter concludes that "we're getting more of everything."

He points to racks containing perhaps 200 rifles, which he says West Virginians are pawning today more than ever. "That's West Virginia in action. They value those more than the title to their car. They leave them here when they don't need them, then take them out. But hunting season just ended. There'll be more."

Along with difficulties on the lower-scale, Masinter thinks economic troubles are hitting a limited number of middle- and high-income people.

"A woman came in three or four months ago to borrow $700. She was from a good area. She had three kids and needed the money for college tuition. Now that's unusual," he says.

But Masinter says he's had to go looking for what he calls "quality" jewelry for his more wealthy clientele who want $7,000 watches and $5,000 rings. He says most of those items come from the few upper-income people in financial difficulty.

"People want something unique. Those that have, have more than ever before, and those who are poorer are poorer than ever before. We have sort of a Jekyll and Hyde store."

"Our business is more built on the haves. We're not benefiting from the lower-scale people," he says.

And though Masinter points to lots of signs he says could portend economic malaise, he's not sure he can decipher the writing on the wall.

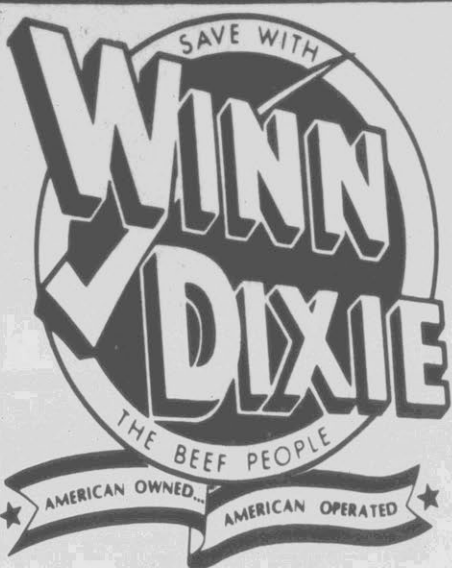

He answers a telephone call. "Pens? I don't want any pens. Can't do anything with them. No, that's it. Goodbye," he tells the caller.

"That's another thing. I'm getting more and more calls about pens. That one was from San Diego, California," he says. "They order pens with their company name on them, then the business goes bad and they can't pay for the order. They just go down the list trying to sell them. I have a bunch for 17 cents."

More Working Women

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of working women will increase from today's 43 million to 84 million by 1990, predicts an article in Working Woman magazine.

Promising fields for them to enter, it suggests, include chemistry, accounting, engineering, computers and the stock market. The magazine calls computers "the career choice for the 1980s."

Life After Fame For A Best-Seller

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — A woman, trailing ruby hair, burst into the darkened cocktail lounge of the Rainbow Room on the 65th floor of the RCA building. She was somewhat out of breath and all aglow.

The room brightened in the wake of Colleen McCullough, the Australian writer whose best-selling novel, "The Thorn Birds," sold more than 8 million copies and made her a millionaire four years ago.

She wore a long-sleeved gown with chunky gold sculptured jewelry. And hugging her ample body was a cloak of white fur — a lot of fur.

But was she the same writer who sat in her publisher's office four years ago in a simple gray sweater and sensible shoes, stunned by her own success? Was she the same person who rode the bus all the way from Connecticut just to keep all those interview appointments? And was she the same woman who gave up a career as a neurophysicist to become a nurse by day and a writer by night?

She was.

Colleen McCullough can still puncture the gray of a foggy, foggy day with her string-of-pearls smile and deep belly laugh. And she still has enough humility to say that her latest novel, "An Indecent Obsession," might not be the monster seller "The Thorn Birds" was.

"I'm still earning about $200,000 a year from 'Thorn Birds,' but I don't think 'Indecent Exposure' will earn that much," she said, sipping a rather tart bourbon sour.

"Once is enough to earn seven figures," she said, laughing a fat lady's laugh.

She fills up her corner of the room, delighting in herself and her surroundings. And if success has spoiled this Australian writer, it doesn't show.

"The fur coat doesn't exactly look like I don't spend it," she said. "I'm 45 now and I thought it about time I started looking, well, smart middle age."

Life after fame and fortune means Miss McCullough can take stretch limousines to her publisher's office instead of the gas-gasping bus, and can buy an El Greco original, if one were for sale.

But mostly, success has propelled Colleen McCullough to a tiny island off the east coast of Australia, where her name and bank account aren't too important.

"It's very easy once you become famous of falling into the trap of taking yourself too seriously and forgetting that the most important thing that made you famous is your work," she said.

"I live in a place where it's so isolated that my fame hasn't penetrated," she said. "I'm not constantly in people's thoughts as a celebrity."

"I think my writing is better," she said. "I seem to be getting sparer and need less words than I needed. I didn't have the anguish I had before in breaking off and going to work. It was easier to write this book."

When she wrote "The Thorn Birds," Miss McCullough worked as a neurophysicist at Yale University's School of Internal Medicine in New Haven by day and wrote at night. When the book was finished, she decided to switch fields and enter nursing school in London — something she was professionally overqualified to do.

"The Thorn Birds" was a romantic saga of three generations of the Cleary family. "An Indecent Obsession" is the story of six male patients and their nurse, Honour Langtry in a World War II military hospital.

"Indecent Obsession" is a raw book," she said. "It is a book that lives inside people's minds — much more claustrophobic in feel. The thing that pleases me most about this book is that I shook 'The Thorn Birds' completely."

Still, it's difficult to follow a blockbuster. "I think critics will take me seriously now, because they will have to understand that I wasn't snagged in the 'Thorn Birds' trap."

Opening lead: Two of ♠.

In our Sunday column a few weeks ago, we discussed whether an opening lead can carry suit preference connotations. At that time we said that we could envision some circumstances where an opening lead had to be a suit preference signal. Life imitates art, as Oscar Wilde said. At the recent Fall North American Championships in San Francisco, this hand cropped up in Life Master Men's Pairs.

Since South had little to spare for his free bid at the two-level, he stoutly resisted all his partner's efforts to get to slam. Not that slam was a bad venture. With normal breaks, declarer would either have to establish a long spade or drop a doubleton queen of hearts. There were other possibilities as well.

But events proved that even five diamonds was too high. Sitting East and West were Don Krauss of Los Angeles and Bob Hamman of Dallas, who first represented the United States in international competition at the 1964 World Bridge Olympiad in New York. Hamman had been listening to the auction and selected the two of spades as his opening lead. Krauss ruffed.

It was obvious from the bidding that Hamman had to hold more than four spades—South would surely have raised spades with four to the ace. Therefore, the two was not the fourth-highest card in the suit. Since West had a choice of cards to lead, it was clear that the lead was a suit preference signal, showing an entry in the lower ranking side suit.

Trusting his partner implicitly, East underled his ace of clubs. West won the king and gave his partner another spade ruff to defeat a seemingly impregnable contract.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced card game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. NEW YEAR FEATURE — for young and old is an adaptation of one of the most enduring fairy tales by the Brothers Grimm, "The Dancing Princesses." At 2 p.m. on Friday, the UNC Center for Public Television (Channel 25 Greenville) will broadcast a dance version of the tale which will feature principal dancers from London's Royal Ballet.

CBS Expands 'Morning' In New Network Fight

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bob Keeshan, CBS' "Captain Kangaroo," says he'd prefer it if his television show ran a little later than 6:30 a.m. EST, but at least the only on-going network program for children is staying on the air.

"I think I got a heckuva deal for kids, for a long time to come," Keeshan said.

CBS announced plans Tuesday to expand the network's weekday "Morning" news program from 90 minutes to two hours beginning Jan. 18. The longer program, 7-9 a.m. EST, will consume the 7:30 a.m. slot held since late September by "Wake Up With The Captain," successor to Keeshan's long-running "Captain Kangaroo."

Keeshan had expressed concern for the future of his show, but he said CBS executives had been "very cooperative, at least saying they support the program and providing us with more to work with."

"They were under tremendous pressure from affiliates, and I realize we might have come away with nothing," he said.

For "Morning," the new two-hour slot means head-to-head competition for the first time with "Today" on NBC and ABC's "Good Morning America."

"Morning" was expanded to 90 minutes from an hour in September, but the show, historically No. 3 behind "Today" and "Good Morning America," has lost viewers since then.

CBS said earlier this month that Bill Kurtis, anchorman at CBS' owned station in Chicago, WBBM, will succeed Charles Kuralt as weekday "Morning" anchor in March. Kuralt will continue as anchor for the network's "Sunday Morning" news show.

Keeshan said "Captain Kangaroo" will return at the new hour, "with all of its warmth and good qualities that everyone loved," and with pre-school youngsters again the primary target audience. "Wake Up" was aimed largely at school-age children.

'Summer Solstice' Offers Special Entertainment

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The title for ABC's "Summer Solstice" is "An Exploration of the Seasons of Marriage," and that means joy and pain and, ultimately, the kind of warmth that only a lasting relationship can bring. And it's all packed into an extraordinary hour of television.

"We're freaks, Maggie," Josh Turner tells his wife of 50 years as they trudge along the beach at Cape Cod. "I'm old, still married to the same girl. Who does that today?"

"Well, we're still together," he adds after a moment's reflection. "That's what matters."

It's an expression of love, and a private boast as well, and that's one thing that's nice about "Summer Solstice." The show never drifts into sentimentality, and in the end we're left with the same headstrong, often endearingly independent people introduced on the very beach a half-century before.

But maybe the best thing about "Summer Solstice" is the cast — Henry Fonda and Myrna Loy as Joshua and Margaret Turner today, Stephen Collins and Lindsay Crouse as the couple yesterday.

All four are superb — you'd expect nothing less from the first two — and Collins is uncanny in his portrayal of Josh Turner as a young man. He might as well be young Hank Fonda.

And there's more: "Summer Solstice" was produced by WCVB, the ABC affiliate in Boston. It's the first time a network has acquired and broadcast a locally produced entertainment program.

Ralph Rosenblum, whose credits as an editor include "The Pawnbroker" and six of Woody Allen's movies, directed the film from a script — submitted in competition staged by the Boston station — by Bill Phillips.

Though both Fonda and Miss Loy have been big names in Hollywood for decades they had never worked together before "Summer Solstice." They'd known each other, of course.

"I was scared," Miss Loy says, "and I guess he was scared, too — about finally working together, because you never know what's going to happen."

"The chemistry is a mysterious thing," she says. "It works with some people, it doesn't with others, and without the people always being conscious of it. That first day, I just had all my fingers crossed. But, of course, it was absolutely no problem at all."

Fonda has just completed work on his recently released motion picture with Katharine Hepburn, "On Golden Pond," when he was approached by WCVB, and he agreed to make the TV film though, he said at the time, "I wasn't looking for work, that's for sure."

It was Fonda who approached Miss Loy, who is perhaps best known for the six films in "The Thin Man" series she made with William Powell in the mid-1930s. "Summer Solstice" begins with young Turner stumbling across the dunes and spotting a young woman sunbathing — naked — on the beach below. He approaches her flimsy canopy, singing loudly, and she struggles quickly into her clothes, burying the cigar she has been smoking in the sand.

"My first cigar," she admits later.

"My first sunbather," he replies.

They are married sometime later, on the beach, after she demands that the pastor drop the part of the ceremony that includes her promise to obey.
