Thatcher Pledges Unity U.S. Is Alone On 'Sanctions'

By The Associated Press

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said in a New Year message today that the West will "stand together" over Poland. West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt condemned the crackdown in Poland but cast doubt on the effectiveness of U.S. sanctions against the Kremlin.

The Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda kept up the attack on President Reagan's sanctions, declaring: "Without any grounds, contrary to facts, the president of the United States ascribes to the Soviet Union responsibility for the introduction of martial law in Poland."

Mrs. Thatcher said in her broadcast message: "We in Europe and the United States are the free democratic world. The whole of the Russian tactic is to try and divide us. They must never succeed."

"Poland wants peace with freedom. It wants the very thing we have which we do not always value enough. We will stand together."

Mrs. Thatcher, who supported the U.S. boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics after Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, went on:

"The whole of the Eastern bloc have had enough of the oppressiveness of communism and now the oppressiveness of military rule. They saw a spark of freedom emerging in Solidarity. But it is crushed out under the communist yoke."

"Communism and freedom cannot exist side by side. We in the West know that, and we in the West will stick together."

Foreign ministers from Britain and the nine other European Common Market countries meet in Brussels Monday, followed a week later by a meeting of the 15 NATO foreign ministers, to consider the Polish crisis and the U.S. call for sanctions against the Soviet Union for its role in Poland.

However, West Germany and other European allies do not accept the U.S. view that the Soviets were responsible for the Dec. 13 declaration of martial law in Poland and subsequent crackdown.

Chancellor Schmidt compared the crisis in Poland to a shadow "which has darkened the sky over Eastern Europe," but he cast doubt on the effectiveness of U.S. sanctions against the Soviet Union.

Schmidt, in a New Year's address recorded Wednesday in Florida where he is vacationing, said Reagan's sanctions were "an expression of deep concern, also of anger," but not likely to be "world-changing."

In Bonn, West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said he told Polish Deputy Prime Minister Mieczyslaw Rakowski that West Germany wanted Poland's military regime to stop the martial law crackdown, free political prisoners and resume negotiations with the Solidarity union and Roman Catholic Church.

Rakowski talked with West German officials for four hours Wednesday in an apparent attempt to convince them that Poland's military repression is not as drastic as Western nations contend.

Genscher did not mention possible sanctions and Rakowski declined to comment. Rakowski, the first high-ranking Pole to travel abroad since the crackdown was announced, left to return to Poland later in the day.

Bonn has the most to lose from joining in U.S. sanctions against Poland or the Soviet Union. West Germany is the major Western trading partner of both Communist nations and holds much of Poland's $27 billion foreign debt. West Germany is also working on an ambitious gas pipeline project with the Soviets.

Reagan on Tuesday banned exports of technology and pipeline parts to the Soviet Union, suspended commercial airline flights, and imposed other sanctions, claiming the Soviets were responsible for Poland's repression.

Reagan also asked for cooperation from America's European allies, but they gave no indication Wednesday that they would go along. Many said such measures do not work and would only hurt the Polish people. West Germany also disagreed with the U.S. position that the Soviets instigated the Polish crackdown.

Genscher said possible European sanctions would be discussed Monday by ministers of the 10-nation Common Market. He said Schmidt would meet with Reagan on Tuesday in Washington.

In the past, Western nations have been divided over using trade sanctions as punishment. Many have complained that such measures hurt their domestic economies and have little effect.

PNEUMATIC HEART-AID — Drawing in the Dec. 31 edition of the New England Journal of Medicine illustrates a pneumatically-powered heart pump. The pump itself appears on the lower right-hand section of the abdomen while the retractor device in the chest area is a retractor used to maintain ready access to the heart during surgery. Pump Rests Weak Heart

BOSTON (AP) — A mechanical pump that gives the weakened heart a week or more of rest might save the lives of half of the people who die on the operating table during coronary bypass surgery, a doctor says.

Its developers say the experimental device has already saved four heart patients who would have died without it.

The pneumatically powered machine, called a ventricular-assist pump, was invented by doctors at Pennsylvania State University Medical School. They described their latest results with it in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The doctors used the machine for several days on patients who had undergone coronary bypass surgery or operations to repair faulty heart valves. After the operations, these patients' hearts failed to beat strongly enough to support their circulation. The pump took over the heart's work long enough for the organ to recover and begin beating strongly again on its own.

Dr. William S. Pierce, the head of the research team, said in an interview that about one or two of every 100 patients who undergo coronary bypass surgery do not survive.

"About half of those patients who die do so because their hearts won't work right after surgery," he said. "That is the group of patients that this device is directed toward."

In the same issue of the medical journal, Dr. Peter L. Frommer of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute said the research provides "the most favorable clinical results of such ventricular-assist pumping to date."

The researchers found that the machine worked best when it was used to assume the work of the left ventricle, the heart's main pumping chamber.

The doctors used the pump on eight patients whose hearts failed to beat strongly enough after they underwent open-heart surgery. Four of the patients died, but four whose left ventricles stopped working recovered and were sent home.

Extra Tax-Cut Money Won't Be Appearing Until Mid-Year

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal income taxes on the average $20,000-a-year American family will drop by about $4 a week starting Friday, but the extra money won't start showing up in paychecks until July.

Until then, a 20-cent-per-week increase in Social Security taxes will make the same family's take-home pay a little smaller.

Higher-earning taxpayers will get a larger cut in income taxes but most also will turn over a bigger share to Social Security.

The across-the-board cut in individual income-tax rates will average about 8.75 percent and is the second stage of the biggest tax reduction in history — approved by Congress last August as part of President Reagan's economic program.

The Social Security tax increase was enacted in 1977.

In addition to lower income-tax rates, the new year brings a new tax deduction to offset part of the "marriage penalty" on working couples; a chance for 40 million workers already covered by pension plans to have a tax-deferred Individual Retirement Account; a liberalized deduction for job-related child-care expenses, and sharp cuts in estate taxes.

Although the reduced income-tax rates take effect Friday, new withholding tables will not be used until July 1, when they will drop by 10 percent. Withholding rates were reduced an average of more than 5 percent last Oct. 1.

While the withholding tables determine the periodic take-home pay of most workers, it is the total withheld over the entire year that counts at tax return time. And the new tables are calculated to make the total tax withheld more-or-less equal the tax owed.

For the wage earner, the effect of delaying the change in withholding is to concentrate the tax break in the last six months of the year.

For the government, it enables the Treasury to retain more cash during the first half of calendar 1982 and thus run a smaller deficit during the latter part of fiscal 1982 than it would if new tables were used for the entire year.

While the tax year runs from January to January, the government's bookkeeping year runs from October to October.

Taxpayers who qualify for the new "marriage penalty" deduction or a tax-deferred IRA may obtain a W-4 form from their employer and have less money withheld to reflect those changes.

The cut in income-tax rates will mean a 1982 tax cut of $185 for a typical single person earning $15,000. A typical one-earner couple with $20,000 income and two children will pay $203 less than in 1981; the $40,000 family of four with one wage earner will get a $560 tax cut.

Starting Friday, the Social Security tax rises to 6.7 percent (up from 6.65 percent) of the first $32,400 of earnings (up from $29,700). The 1981 top tax of $1,975 will rise to $2,171.

A $20,000 earner paid $1,330 in 1981 and will pay $1,340 in 1982.

An employer matches each worker's Social Security tax.

The nation's savings rate is expected to increase as a result of the more-liberal retirement accounts. The IRA account allows a worker to set aside with a financial institution up to $2,000 a year and pay no tax until retirement on the deposits or interest they earn. A person with an unemployed spouse also may deposit $250 in an IRA for the spouse.

Similar changes are taking effect in retirement provisions for self-employed workers.

In the past, tax-deferred IRAs have been available only to workers not covered by a company pension plan, and annual deposits have been limited to $1,500 plus $250 for a non-working spouse.

The "marriage penalty" relief starting Friday could benefit up to 17 million families in which both spouses are employed.

Nab Suspect

A 26-year-old Baltimore man has been arrested by Pitt County deputies and charged on a federal warrant with the Nov. 30 armed robbery of a bank in Grimesland and also with two other robberies at area businesses.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said Juan Hill of 1000 Bonapart Ave. in Baltimore was arrested this week as he visited relatives in the county.

Sheriff Tyson said that, in addition to the charge stemming from the armed robbery at First Citizens Bank & Trust in Grimesland, Hill also was charged with armed thefts that occurred on Oct. 25 at Quick Wilson's Store on the Pactolus Highway and on Nov. 21 at the Kash & Karry No. 6 store, also on Pactolus Highway.

In the bank robbery, according to the sheriff, $6,133 was taken from a teller station but a dye-filled explosive device placed in a money bag by a teller exploded as the robber fled, ripping open the bag and causing him to drop $4,054 in bills. Sheriff Tyson said $2,079 has not been recovered.

Hill was placed in Pitt County Jail under $75,000 bond on the robbery charges, the sheriff said.

Arrest One Suspect In Postal Carrier's Death

By PAUL DAVENPORT
Associated Press Writer

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A 31-year-old woman has been arrested in the killing of a female postal worker who was abducted and stabbed to death but the FBI says it has no leads on the whereabouts of three others sought in the case.

FBI spokesman Art Schultz said FBI agents arrested Janet Antone at a west Phoenix apartment Wednesday evening. Schultz said the woman was arrested without incident on a federal warrant charging her with murder and kidnapping.

Karen Beth Green, 27, of Apache Junction, a part-time letter carrier, was abducted Saturday as she delivered mail along a rural route just north of Mesa, a Phoenix suburb, and next to the Salt River Indian Reservation. Her body was found Monday in a desert dump area on the reservation and about three miles from where her burned car was found Sunday.

The county medical examiner's office said she died of a stab wound to the chest.

Warrants were issued Wednesday for four people in connection with Mrs. Green's killing, U.S. Attorney A. Melvin McDonald said.

The warrants named Ms. Antone, Brenda Gail Antone, 30; Clayborn Dale Osife 41; and Sanford Darrell Chigo, 29, McDonald said.

"We believe that they all live on the reservation," McDonald said, adding that authorities were not certain whether the four are related.

Poland's Martial Law Chief Expected To Air New Style Polish Role

By The Associated Press
Poland's martial law chief, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, is expected to unveil a program in early January that "would amount to a new model for social, political and economic life in Poland," a government official was quoted as saying in an uncensored dispatch from Poland.

But the report, which reached the West Wednesday night, said political observers in Warsaw were skeptical that any political solution put forth by Jaruzelski can win wide public support.

The observers said the martial law regime faced a fundamental dilemma: How to create a climate of national reconciliation at the same time as it maintains sufficient control to prevent unrest.

Meanwhile, the official Soviet media criticized President Reagan again today for imposing trade sanctions to punish Moscow for allegedly masterminding the crackdown in Poland. Pravda said efforts to "blackmail" the Kremlin were doomed to failure. Another Soviet newspaper claimed Western support for Solidarity was linked to a NATO decision to deploy new medium-range U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe.

Reagan said Wednesday night that U.S. actions in response to the military crackdown should not prompt Poles to "start manning the barricades." Reagan, interviewed on NBC, emphasized that in opposing martial law in Poland he does not want to do anything that might cause "the kind of violence" that occurred in Hungary in 1956.

In London, the British Broadcasting Corp. said today its Polish language broadcasts are jammed by Soviet transmitters "somewhere near Moscow." The U.S. State Department said Wednesday the Soviet Union jammed Polish Voice of America broadcasts. State Department spokesman Alan Romberg said this violated international agreements.

The uncensored reports quoted sources in Warsaw as saying Jaruzelski has set up at least three panels headed by top Communist Party leaders to revamp the country's social, economic and political programs.

One of the panels reportedly proposed scrapping the tattered Polish United Workers Party — the Communist Party — and replacing it with a new party incorporating Roman Catholic Church and Solidarity union representatives.

The Communist Party has been reported in disarray since martial law was declared Dec. 13.

But Kazimierz Barcikowski, a Politburo member and party secretary, told the party newspaper Trybuna Ludu that "the place of the party is the same as always: among the people." He said that martial law "does not create any empty political space. No one can fulfill the mission of the party for the party."

The Soviet TV news program Vremya reported

Wednesday night that the Polish party "retains its leading role," and that the "military council is acting through members of the party and servicemen in the army. It is not an establishment standing above the party, but serves to implement the tasks set by the party..."

Another of Jaruzelski's panels, headed by Communist Party hard-liner Stefan Olszowski, reportedly proposed decentralization of the economy within tight political limits, according to sources in Warsaw. Economic reforms are likely to include autonomy for factories and other enterprises, but not the worker self-management proposed by Solidarity, the sources said.

The uncensored dispatch from Poland said the now-banned Solidarity labor movement was circulating a bulletin urging its members to resist what it described as "a Stalinist version of local terror which our generation has not previously experienced."

The bulletin, dated Dec. 28, told members to "work slowly, complain about the mess and the inefficiency of your superiors. Flood the army and commissars with questions and pretend to be a half-wit."

"At least passive resistance against the enemy is still possible," said a leaflet circulated with the name of Rural Solidarity said.

The government, in an apparent attempt to stem the tide of such leaflets, has banned the sale of paper, according to a Solidarity publication. Authorities outlawed private possession of duplicating machines and distribution of anti-government materials shortly after martial law was declared.

Solidarity chief Lech Walesa, reportedly under house arrest since the start of the military crackdown, was said to have agreed to negotiate with the martial law regime. It was not known if the talks had started.

Warsaw Radio said the Polish Cabinet decided Wednesday to postpone local elections scheduled for February — an indication that authorities may intend to maintain martial law at least that long. The elections are to be rescheduled "when there are conditions for voting in an atmosphere of social peace in the spirit of constitutionality," the broadcast said.

The radio also said the curfew in effect since martial law was imposed would be lifted for New Year's Eve "in view of contently improving social discipline." The government allowed a similar breach in the curfew last week so that Poles could attend Christmas midnight Masses.

However, traditional New Year's Eve parties in Warsaw restaurants were banned, according to a dispatch — subject to censorship — filed by AP correspondent Thomas W. Netter.

Normal communications have been cut in Poland, and Western reporters must file most dispatches through government censors. Both official and unofficial reports are difficult to verify.

Netter said Poles showed signs of apathy, indifference and resignation to the military regime and many refer to the days before Dec. 13 as "before the war."

State-run radio reported without elaboration that the nation's minimum wage and government assistance to low income families would be increased starting Jan. 1.

But there were other indications that the new year will mean further belt-tightening and the loss of some privileges won by Solidarity, the only independent labor union in the Soviet bloc.

The official news agency PAP said planned price increases for raw materials would be passed on to consumers, and workers in many enterprises will face six-day work weeks.

The five-day work week was one of the initial gains of the 9.5-million-member Solidarity union, created after a nationwide wave of strikes in August 1980 protesting price hikes and food shortages.

Uncensored reports said red and black posters have appeared throughout the country, urging Poles to support the military regime.

"Help the forces of law and order combat anarchy and lawlessness. Stamp out speculators. The quickest road to normalization is strict martial law..." the signs reportedly read.

The state-run media reported more arrests and prosecutions. Warsaw Radio said the government would conclude "in the near future" its investigations against former top Communist Party leaders, including ex-party first secretary Edward Gierek, one of the former Communist leaders arrested in the martial law roundup.

Paper Reports Spy Exchange

BERLIN (AP) — East and West Germany have secretly traded 10 accused spies, apparently as part of a major agent exchange begun in October, the Berliner Morgenpost reported today.

Three agents convicted by the East Germans were traded on Dec. 15 to West Germany for seven accused East German spies held in the West, the newspaper said.

The three former East German prisoners were serving prison terms ranging from 12 years to life, the newspaper said.

The exchange was thought to be part of a complicated spy swap in which Guenther Guillaume, an East German agent and close aide to former Chancellor Willy Brandt, was released to the East in October.

Coup Topples Ghana Govm't

By SUSAN LINNÉE
Associated Press Writer
ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Jerry J. Rawlings, a 34-year-old former air force lieutenant, staged his second coup in two years in the West African nation of Ghana, toppling the civilian government of President Hilla Limann. Accra Radio reported today.

The radio, monitored in the neighboring Ivory Coast, reported heavy firing early in the morning around Burma Barracks, the central military camp in Accra, the capital of Ghana. There were no immediate reports of casualties and no independent confirmation that Rawlings had taken power.

In the broadcast, Rawlings appealed to Ghanaians not to harm Limann, whom Rawlings asked to remain in his presidential quarters.

"I am prepared at this moment to face a firing squad if what I've tried to do for the second time in my life does not meet with the approval of Ghanaians," Rawlings said.

"I'm not here to impose myself, far from it," Rawlings said. "We ask for nothing more than proper democracy ... after two years of nothing but repression.

"We are asking for nothing more than the right to assert the dignity of humanity," he said. "Fellow citizens, it is up to you to decide."

He called on all soldiers, officers and policemen retired or dismissed Sept. 24, 1979, the date of return to civilian rule, to report to their barracks.

Rawlings also said that other countries should "stay out of our attempt to rid this country of corruption."

It was the fifth military coup in the country since Ghana became the first black African state to win independence 24 years ago.

Rawlings, who led an unsuccessful coup in May 1979, deposed the military government of Lt. Gen. Frederick Akuffo in June of that year, but handed power over to Limann after elections later in the year.

Rawlings was subsequently required to retire from the military.

When Rawlings took power in 1979, his stated goal was to clean up corruption and try to restore the Ghanaian economy. In a newspaper interview in April 1980, Rawlings said he wished Limann's government well but had his doubts.

"I pray to God that if there is a revolt it does not come from the armed forces," he said in the interview. "I think Ghanaians are not going to tolerate more military rule. I believe we are committed to civilian rule."

Since Limann assumed power in September, 1979, the economic situation has gone from bad to worse. The cedi, the Ghanaian currency, is officially pegged at 2.75 to the dollar but easily reaches 35 cedis to the dollar on the flourishing black market.

Ghana, once the world's leading cocoa producer, suffers from a serious balance of payments problem and what cocoa is produced is usually smuggled across the border into the Ivory Coast where it fetches a higher price.

Limann returned to Accra only last week from a visit to Nigeria, where he reportedly requested urgent help from President Shehu Shagari, particularly in supplying Ghana with gasoline. Ghana, a nation of about 11 million, is located just north of the equator on the west African coast and has a primarily agricultural economy.

Made up of the former British colony of the Gold Coast and the former U.N. Trust Territory of British Togoland, Ghana was granted independence in 1957. It was led by Kwame N. Nkrumah until he was ousted in 1966 by a military coup. Nkrumah died in 1972.

Factories See Orders Climb

By ROBERT FURLOW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders for new manufactured goods from U.S. factories edged up 0.2 percent in November, the first gain since July, the Commerce Department reported today.

The report was basically a confirmation of Commerce's advance statistics on orders for durable goods, issued last week.

That report, showing orders for durables up 1.1 percent in November, was welcomed by economists, but their enthusiasm was tinged with skepticism that it was an indication the recession was winding down.

Other government reports seem to indicate that although the recession might be losing steam it is not likely to end before spring.

The new report said November orders for durables — heavy machinery and big long-lasting items such as aircraft, cars and appliances — actually increased a seasonally adjusted 1.7 percent over October rather than the 1.1 percent reported earlier.

However, orders for food, petroleum and other non-durables declined 1.1 percent.

Factories' shipments dropped 1.4 percent for the month, the fifth straight monthly decline as the recession held on in November. That decline kept manufacturers' inventories rising, but only by 0.4 percent.

The inventory-to-sales ratio, which businesses try to keep low, climbed to 1.73, the highest it has been since the 1.76 of June 1980 during another recessionary period.

Analysts agree the nation's economy cannot begin significant recovery until manufacturers begin whittling away inventories that have built up during recent months of slow sales.

Many factories have cut back production and laid off workers in the past month or two in an effort to sell off their stockpiled goods before producing any more.

The new report had a bit of good news concerning one of the worst-hit industries this year. The auto industry, it said, showed a 3.9 percent decline in inventories in November.

Details of the report said that new orders for manufactured goods rose to a seasonally adjusted $159.4 billion in November, with durables orders rising to $79.1 billion and non-durables declining to $80.3 billion.

Factory orders had fallen 5.6 percent in October.

Urges Resolutions To Safeguard Life

Although the latest figures from the National Center for Health Statistics show that the death rates from heart attack, stroke and other forms of cardiovascular disease are continuing to decline, these diseases of the heart and blood vessels continue to be the leading cause of death in Pitt County.

Ms. Sharon Lewis, president of the Pitt County Heart Association, reports that last year deaths from cardiovascular diseases in Pitt County numbered 336.

To continue to lower the toll, she proposes that everyone resolve during 1982 to take these steps: Control high blood pressure, don't smoke cigarettes, cut down on fatty foods, exercise moderately and regularly, keep weight normal, and learn the signs of possible heart attack — prolonged heavy pressure or squeezing pain in the chest, which may spread to the shoulder, arm, neck or jaw; sweating; shortness of breath; nausea or vomiting. Anyone with these symptoms should be taken to a hospital emergency room without delay.

City Counts 3 Mishaps

An estimated $12,150 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 8:48 a.m. collision on Charles Street, 370 feet south of the Red Banks Road intersection involving cars driven by John Harvey Slusser of 118 Osceola Drive and Alton Ray Gray of 700F W. 4th St.

Police, who reported both drivers and a passenger in the Gray car were injured, estimated damage at $6,500 to the Slusser car and $3,000 to the Gray vehicle.

Cars driven by Phillip Allen Whitehurst of Route 13, Greenville, and Betty Rouse Hassell of Route 1, Grimesland, collided about 4:44 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 500 feet east of the Hooker Road intersection, causing an estimated $1,000 damage to the Whitehurst car and $500 damage to the Hassell auto.

Police charged Whitehurst with following to close.

Investigators reported a vehicle driven by William Harvey Martin of Quail Hollow Trailer Park collided with a utility pole guide line about 1:20 p.m. at the intersection of the Stan-tonsbury Road and Moye Boulevard.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,000 to the vehicle and $150 to the guide line.

Mattresses, Box Springs Protected

NEW YORK (UPI) — New fire-resistant mattresses and box springs are protected by a new non-flammable ticking fabric that the manufacturers say will not ignite or smoke significantly when subjected to an open flame.

The products are the joint effort of Sears Contract Sales division, Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. and Burlington Industries with mattress manufacturer Martin Galex.

"The new mattresses won't prevent fires," Galex said a news conference, "but they will reduce the severity of sleeping room fires when they do occur."

Galex says eliminating the mattress and box springs as a fuel source gives people more time to escape, makes it easier to contain the fire in a single room and may even allow firefighters to enter the room and put out the fire.

The new ticking will not melt, char or disintegrate at temperatures up to about 1,200 degrees F.

The Sandel ticking, for which a patent is pending, is made of glass fiber yarn with a special coating to provide flexibility and resilience.

The units are called Guest Guard for the lodging industry and Family Guard for retail store sales to consumers. The consumer products are expected to sell for about the same or slightly more than currently available top quality mattresses and box springs.

Dear Abby Resolutions For New Year: One Day At A Time

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published some New Year's resolutions. I cut that column out and taped it on my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I want you to know that it has helped me to become a better person. I am not saying that I kept every one of these resolutions every day, but I kept most of them, and they have now become habits that have made a remarkable improvement in my personality and character.

I hope you will repeat that column every New Year's Eve. I'm sure it will benefit many others as it has me.

NEVER TOO OLD

DEAR NEVER: By popular demand, my "resolutions" column has become an annual tradition, and here it is:

DEAR READERS: These New Year's resolutions are based on the original credo of Alcoholics Anonymous. I have taken the liberty of using that theme with some variations of my own:

Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

Just for today I will try to be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will try to change those things that I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

Just for today I will try to improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

Just for today I will do a good deed for somebody — without letting him know it. (If he or she finds out I did it, it won't count.)

Just for today I will do something positive to improve my health. If I'm a smoker, I'll make an honest effort to cut down. If I'm overweight, I'll eat nothing I know is fattening. And I will force myself to exercise — even if it's only walking around the block, or using the stairs instead of the elevator.

Just for today I will be totally honest. If someone asks me something I don't know, I will not try to bluff; I'll simply say, "I don't know."

Just for today I'll do something I've been putting off for a long time. I'll finally write that letter, make that phone call, clean that closet, or straighten out those dresser drawers.

Just for today, before I speak I will ask myself, "Is it true? Is it kind?" And if the answer to either of those questions is negative, I won't say it.

Just for today I will make a conscious effort to be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously and not interrupt when someone else is talking. Just for today I'll not try to improve anybody except myself.

Just for today I will have a program. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision.

Just for today I will have a quiet half-hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and will try to get a better perspective on my life.

Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me.

P.S. Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace!

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

I don't know how a car knows when you're ready to sell it... but it knows.

We bought a four-wheel drive about seven years ago and there is nothing you can say to me that will convince me that car didn't understand every word we said.

A lot of marriages between new cars and owners are made in heaven. Maybe that's why we couldn't get parts. The honeymoon lasted exactly three hours. Then the light knob fell off in our hand, the rear window went down automatically and stayed there, and the floor burnt our feet up.

We didn't talk trade-in in front of the car for almost a year. Then one day my husband said, "Maybe we should trade in this clunker while it is still running."

We climbed in the car and the motor refused to turn over.

After we bought the new battery, we figured we might as well use up our investment. So we hung in there until seven months later when my husband said, "As long as we've got the original tires, we might as well turn it in." At that precise moment, the

With four new tires, the car bought itself another year of residency. It was not ready to let us go. The least little thing could set it off. One day I just got out of my side of the car in a parking lot and remarked what a goodlooking compact was parked next to us. Our car would not go into reverse and we had to have it towed to a garage where they duly recorded on our bill, "Stubbornness: $65."

We never knew why the transmission went out suddenly the way it did. We had been very discreet in placing the ad for the car in the paper, being very careful never to mention it within hearing distance. But by the time the first caller inquired as to when they could see the car and we told them they could view it from a rack at Ed's garage, they backed off.

When we decided to trade the car in, we pretended we were going to the grocery store. Then, at the last minute, we turned into the car lot. The salesman said he had never seen a car with the motor off and the emergency brake on roll uphill to smash into a guard rail before.

I cannot believe he was that naive.

If you received a poinsettia plant for Christmas, keep it away from windows, heat outlets and drafts as sudden temperature changes cause wilting.

If you're dieting, set a limit on how much you will eat before going to a party — and stick to the limit.

Start Early For New Year

Christmas is past; the gifts are all opened and many people, no doubt, are wondering how they managed to get all their gift preparations done on time.

Next year, try getting started early, says Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University.

"Get started no later than October," the specialist says. And begin by getting together all family members who will be spending family money.

Hold planning sessions with these family members and encourage everyone to contribute his or her fair share to both the planning and the work of selecting, buying and wrapping gifts.

Starting this far in advance to plan gifts will allow you to better assess the amount of money available for gift-giving and the different kinds of gifts that family members might make for others.

And don't forget to write the plans down. They can't be retained in the family members' memories until December.

During most of the 19th century in the United States, political parties printed their own ballots on paper of different colors and shapes so they could be identified as they dropped into the ballot box, according to the Academic American Encyclopedia.

Apricot Tart For Winter

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

One of the best things that can happen to canned apricots is for them to be put into a tart. Especially if the tart is made by the following recipe. Cooks who have baked this dessert with the recipes I have given using fresh peaches and pears will, I believe, be happy to have this latest variation. Our tasters could not have praised it more highly.

APRICOT TART

- Two 17-ounce cans whole peeled apricots in heavy syrup
- Pastry Shell, recipe follows
- 3 egg yolks (from large eggs)
- 1-3rd cup commercial sour cream
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour

Thoroughly drain the apricots; halve and discard pits; thoroughly dry the apricots between sheets of paper toweling.

Prepare and bake the Pastry Shell.

In a medium bowl beat together the egg yolks, sour cream, sugar and flour until smooth. Arrange the apricot halves, cut side up, in concentric circles (overlapping if necessary) in the still-hot Pastry Shell; pour the sour cream mixture over the apricots. Bake in the preheated 350-degree oven until top is golden and meringue-like — 45 minutes. Place on a wire rack to cool. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges; remove side wall of pan. Delicious served while still warm or at room temperature. Makes 8 servings.

PASTRY SHELL

- 1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1/2 cup (4-ounce stick) butter
- 2 tablespoons commercial sour cream

In a food processor with the metal blade, process the flour and butter until no butter is visible. Add the sour cream and process just until dough forms a ball. Remove and flatten into a disc; place in the center of an ungreased, round, 9- by 1 1/2-inch cake pan with a removable bottom. Press over bottom and sides of pan to cover evenly and completely. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until set-looking but not browned — about 20 minutes. (Pastry may be puffed in places.) Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees.

Power Change Made

Electric lights burn the same today and electric appliances operate the same.

Nevertheless it is an historic time for Greenville Utilities electric customers.

At midnight yesterday Greenville Utilities began receiving power from N.C. Municipal Power Agency No. 3. The electricity is still being generated by Virginia Electric and Power Co. but the power source will gradually be shifted to Carolina Power and Light and eventually to generating facilities partially owned by the Power Agency.

Greenville is among 10 municipalities which began receiving electricity through the Power Agency. There are 12 other member municipalities.

The arrangement is expected to save money for customers of the participating municipalities. Wholesale rates to the municipalities have been set at approximately 3 percent less than the Vepco rates and further downward adjustments are expected as the Agency purchases generating facilities.

Fateful decisions have been made by Greenville in the past. One was the decision to establish a municipal electric system when no private company would come into the area. Another was in the 1950s when the decision was made to purchase power from Vepco rather than to continue expanding local generating facilities. Another was the decision to completely discontinue local generating in favor of purchasing all power from the more efficient Vepco plants.

Now, in a way, we are returning to the power generation business, but it will be far more efficient and hopefully a cost saver for local customers.

We Can Live With This Fee

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has now formally set a mandatory inspection fee of 45 cents per hundred pounds for flue-cured tobacco sold at auction. The new fee will become effective for the 1982 sales season. It marks the first time growers have been required to pay for the inspection service, which previously was provided under federal funding.

Congress cut out the federal inspections in budget-reconciliation moves last fall. The grower-paid service was substituted as one of the means of preserving the federally backed price support system for tobacco.

Typically, a grower with 10 acres of tobacco will now pay about $90 a year for the inspection service. The money will be collected by the warehouse at the time of the sale.

It's a law that growers can live with in exchange for keeping the security of the price support program.

THIS AFTERNOON

Tax Fight Looms

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — North Carolina county commissioners have determined to continue their push for additional local funds — especially the added penny sales tax — rather than abandon the effort in the face of opposition from chief legislators.

Grover Lancaster from Craven County, president of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners, is challenging the notion pronounced by the legislative leadership that if a fifth penny sales tax is to be enacted in this state, the money would be kept by the state government.

Earlier this year, a legislative proposal was making progress in the General Assembly which would give counties the option of collecting another penny, but died when state Sen. Kenneth Royall of Durham, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and of the Advisory Budget Commission, expressed his opposition.

Keep It
Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green made a public stand against letting the added penny go to local governments. The money should be kept by state government, he said. Each penny yields approximately $150 million. The state now collects three pennies, while 99 of the 100 counties collect one penny. County commissioners are not letting the matter drop. Lancaster has written Green a long exploration of the background of state-local sharing of the responsibilities, and a history of the increase of local government spending in recent years as the result of legislative mandates from the state's General Assembly and the U.S. Congress.

As Lancaster puts it, "the lion's share on county tax revenues is spent in support of programs as defined by state legislators and congressmen." The result has been rapidly escalating county spending with increased pressure on the local property tax, which is the foundation of local income. Green, in his remarks, said he believes that counties have not done enough to fully exploit the property tax. Lancaster disagrees.

Property taxes have caused one confrontation after another in almost every county undergoing revaluation recently. It is the most unpopular tax there is, and county commissioners have taken so much heat that "good, civic-minded people are becoming unwilling to run for the office of county commissioner or to run for re-election because of all the hassles involved," Lancaster said.

The property tax sometimes forces people to sell their property to pay the tax bills, is an uneven source of income and doesn't keep pace with inflation, Lancaster said.

Urban
While counties have lately gotten actively involved in providing numerous urban services such as water and sewer, garbage disposal, recreation, and so on, most of the action is still in the traditional areas of human services, education, and law enforcement and criminal justice.

Other Editors Say Odds Stacked

(Greensboro Record)

The odds would seem to be stacked against students at Sunbury Elementary School. The odds, as a matter of fact, would seem to be stacked against all 1,800 students in the Gates County School System, of which Sunbury Elementary School is a part.

Instead, children who attend Sunbury Elementary have scored above national averages on annual tests in reading, math, spelling and language — the key elements of educational instruction.

And the success achieved at the Sunbury Elementary School is spreading throughout a county system whose total enrollment is less than one of Greensboro's larger high schools. The county's 11th graders this year scored above the state average on required competency tests.

Consider some of the odds:
For one thing, almost a fourth of the homes in Gates County have no inside plumbing, a reflection of the financial condition of the county.

Average family income is almost $1,000 below the state average and almost $2,000 below the national average. Fifty-five percent of the parents finished high school and only about 10% finished college.

At the Sunbury school, 65% of the 245 students are eligible for free lunches or reduced price lunches.

What do these students have going for them? They have the cooperation of their parents, and a dedicated school staff.

Any teacher knows that with the full cooperation of parents, miracles can be performed. And parents know that dedicated teachers can make all the difference in the world in a child's learning.

The children also are blessed with relatively small class sizes. Most of the classes at Sunbury Elementary School number about 24. It is axiomatic that the smaller the class, the more individual attention can be given to students. (By comparison, average class size in Greensboro for K-3 is 24.97 students; for grades four through six it is 27.12 students. In Guilford County schools, the average is about 26 for K-3 and 29 for grades four through six.)

Sunbury's story is not shocking. Periodically, one-room schools around the country are heard from, still sending young people to college as successfully as any other schools despite their meager facilities. It all is a question of attitude — the children's, the parents', the teachers'. When we finally see that, we can quit looking for excuses for our educational failures.

SOME PEOPLE ARE JUST BORN WITH PROBLEMS!

By JAMES KILPATRICK

The Party Fun Is Gone

WASHINGTON — Four or five years ago, it was impossible to hold an industrial or trade convention without setting aside an hour to howl about OSHA. In those days, OSHA was a name that almost everyone in industry loved to hate.

Well, the fun is gone. Under Eula Bingham in the Carter administration and Thorne Aucher in the Reagan administration, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has experienced a kind of bureaucratic menopause. It is mellow, not so adversarial, more inclined to advise than to dictate, less inclined to impose civil penalties for Mickey Mouse infractions.

It was not so in the years immediately after OSHA began operations in 1971. In its rush to regulate, the agency adopted hundreds of absurd rules and standards. There was a 17-page regulation on the wood to be used in wooden ladders. Another regulation dealt with the shape of toilet seats. Fire extinguishers had to be red, and they had to be mounted not less than 3 1/2 feet nor more than 5 feet above the floor. One Western university, in a burst of inspiration, wrapped its chromium extinguishers in red tape.

Those were the days in which OSHA defined an exit in whole pages of impenetrable prose. There was the Portable Privy Rule for farmhands. One year we delighted in an OSHA press release aimed at workers in stockyards. "Do not fall into manure pits," the release anyhow — but it created a better image for the agency. Now the less militant trend continues.

Mr. Aucher, who succeeded Dr. Bingham last March, comes to OSHA with a background of 20 years in the construction industry. He started as a 16-year-old carpenter's apprentice and wound up as executive vice president of his family firm. Most of the changes he has instituted thus far are administrative changes, intended to give more authority to area directors. He has instituted no dramatic reforms in health and safety regulations and has none immediately in mind.

JAMES J. KILPATRICK

sagely advised them. Presumably this was because the workers would come up smelling of oil.

Badgering OSHA was a splendid polemic exercise, and this was the fact: Much of the badgering was justified. Inexperienced inspectors had a way of antagonizing plant managers. Fines were levied for the most trivial infractions. In at least one region, as a subsequent investigation proved, inspectors worked on a quota system; they were required to report a certain number of fines and violations to be disciplined.

The Carter administration began a turnaround by revoking 928 rules and regulations in a single stroke. The much-publicized event was largely cosmetic — the regulations were not being enforced predictably has drawn applause from industry and scorn from labor. At the AFL-CIO's occupational safety and health department, Peg Seminario expresses sharp disappointment at the slow pace. She would like to see emergency action taken on such compounds as dimethyl bromide and formaldehyde. Mr. Aucher says the evidence simply isn't at hand to justify emergency procedures; he won't be hurried, and if this means a lousy relationship with certain unions, "it's going to stay lousy." He intends to devote his primary energies toward improving the professionalism of his 1,200 inspectors. Periodically he sends locker-room memos to the field: "Be an enthusiastic booster and promoter of good health and safety practices... Input your knowledge to the employer and employees."

The approach seems to be working. Over the first 10 months of this year, the number of contested cases

West Bank Has Priority

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — A private Christmas message to President Reagan from Prime Minister Menachem Begin shows an Israeli desire to ease the impact of Begin's harsh Dec. 20 attack on the administration, but what Reagan really wants is progress on the West Bank autonomy talks.

Though Begin's gesture was as close to an apology as he could come, it in no way changes the administration's present Mideast planning: to keep pressure on Israel for a workable West Bank autonomy agreement. That has had the highest priority here both before and after the acrimony unleashed on Washington by the Israeli prime minister.

What aroused White House interest about Begin's Christmas message was that he took the initiative himself, with no prodding from aides. He asked U.S. Ambassador Sam Lewis to send the greetings the day after his veiled charge that "anti-semitic propaganda" had been used by the administration in repeated U.S.-Israeli clashes of the past six months. The charge deeply angered Ronald Reagan.

That such a normal gesture as "Merry Christmas" was taken seriously as Begin's first step to narrow the breach between Washington and Jerusalem proves how dangerously wide that breach is. With the new strategic agreement suspended by Reagan, Israel is on notice that the U.S. "is going to measure everything Begin does," in the words of a high administration official. That most importantly includes West Bank autonomy.

High-place word is being dropped here that if the Egyptian-Israeli autonomy talks do not soon start moving ahead, the U.S. might be compelled to seek other avenues for a solution to the future of 1.3 million Palestinian Arabs who live in the West Bank and Gaza. Even if that other avenue did not include Saudi Arabia's temporarily derailed 8-point plan, any sign that the U.S. might be thinking of new ways outside the Camp David accords to speed the autonomy talks would be anathema to Begin.

Reagan is firming up his resolve to move the autonomy talks off dead center. He talked to Saudi oil minister Zaki Yamani on Dec. 18 and learned that Prince Fahd, the real head of the Saudi government, was once again postponing a state visit to Washington. One reason: uncertainty about the durability of the Washington-Riyadh axis in the face of West Bank stalemate and Israeli troublemaking.

Mideast diplomats insist that the autonomy breakthrough must come before Israel pulls out of Sinai by the April 25 deadline. If not, Egypt may be forced to harden its position toward Israel by pressures inside Egypt (the same pressures that led to Anwar Sadat's murder) and throughout the Arab world. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, whose own plan for eventual solution of the West Bank is one of Washington's best-kept secrets, agrees.

So Haig is now sifting the names of several prominent Middle East specialists for a possible "personal emissary" to be sent to Cairo and Jerusalem as his autonomy agent. On the list are Brent Scowcroft, former president Ford's national security aide; Joseph Sisco, under secretary of state for political affairs during the Henry Kissinger regime, and Winston Lord, another former Haig deputy and now president of the Foreign Policy Association.

Haig has been under Arab pressure for months to add an American hotfoot to Israel to shake the autonomy negotiations off dead center. But the Egyptians have quietly counseled against a White House envoy, such as former autonomy envoy Robert Strauss and Sol Linowitz. Egypt worries about political pressures on the White House.

For Egyptian President Mubarak, that makes sense. The White House has always been the most rewarding target of Israeli political pressures. The State Department, on the other hand, is accused of partiality toward the Arab side.

A Haig decision to follow this course would mean that he is close to deciding also on

Strength For Today

THE NATURE OF TRUE REPENTANCE

Some people think that repentance means just a simple "I'm sorry"; then afterwards it is presumed that one may commit other sins again and that every time the words "I'm sorry" are uttered, the slate is wiped clean.

No branch of the Christian church teaches any such doctrine. Repentance is a matter of such overwhelming significance that it constitutes a profound spiritual achievement. To repent means to change one's mind.

It means the sincere determination to be through with that sin and thereafter to regard it with hatred and aversion. As a matter of fact, no one ever repents without the help of God. Repentance is a gift just as salvation is a gift, but the capacity to repent is given to everyone who is willing sincerely to use it.

What the truly repentant sinner really repents of is not just one sin, but the whole mass of iniquity within him which makes him a sinner. — Elisha Douglass

Career-Planning Isn't So Easy

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — Although they are entering the job world this year at the highest salaries ever, many young business school graduates have been woefully misled into believing they can plan their careers.

That opinion comes from an authority on executive success who condemns the now popular notion that anyone, almost regardless of talent, can precisely plan a career. "It's a sham," says Eugene E. Jennings.

Jennings, professor of management at the graduate school of business, Michigan State University, declares that "he who tries to plan his career makes a career of planning" instead of a career of achieving. "At least half the opportunities and half the obstacles encountered cannot be anticipated," he said. There is no way, he insists, that a 25-year-old can successfully implement a plan to run a corporation by age 45, and for evidence he suggests that new graduates check those who run today's businesses. Few, he said, ever expected to be doing so.

Most of today's emphasis on career planning, said Jennings, began with cynical professors and students of the 1960s who refused to believe they were so ordinary as to do it the way others had.

"These professors and students intellectualized the American dream as a kind of planning mode," said Jennings, who is widely considered to be the foremost authority on routes to executive success. "It was as if to say 'I'm not just another person — I'll determine my options.' It was, he said, "a rebelliousness against the status quo."

Somehow, he said, people failed to realize that anyone at the top got there because of a gut-level emotional drive to make something of themselves, "to become important, productive or powerful."

That drive is what's important, said Jennings, who observes executive behavior closely as a confidential adviser to corporate chairmen and presidents, out of which role has come several books, including "The Mobile Manager" and "Routes To The Executive Suite."

And yet, he continues, "we have people working this career planning technique as if it's the basis of success." They're "tinker-ninkers," he said. "They have faith in a technique but no fire in their bellies."

Career planning, says Jennings, doesn't call for pain and sacrifice. When a career plan hits an obstacle, therefore, the plan gets changed. When, asks Jennings, are career planners going to get down to work?

"We've intellectualized the American dream in the form of a pseudo-science called career planning," he continued. But, he said, "success is like inches in football."

A good worker, he says, keeps his head down and scrambles for the next job. He seeks to make a first down, and then he takes it from there, the professor said. When he gets his first job he plans his second job. But, he doesn't try to plan many jobs ahead, and certainly not make firm plans for the top job, said the professor.

Jennings has observed that many people at the top of corporations aspired to something else as late as age 45. Many of them thought they could "make more" of their lives, and even at age 65, having attained the top, some still felt they could have done something more suitable. Which, says Jennings, demonstrates the futility of planning.

Although career planning has become institutionalized, and extolled as the solution to any career problem, it is often taught by instructors who had never dreamed they would be instructors, Jennings observed.

"There are many false voices leading young students down a primrose path," he concluded. They don't understand, he said. "You have to have a fire in your belly."

Ex-Governors Opposing 4-Year Legislative Terms

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Three former North Carolina governors will oppose a proposed constitutional amendment extending state legislators' terms from two to four years, a Raleigh newspaper reported today. The News and Observer reported that Democrats Terry Sanford and Bob Scott and Republican Jim Holshouser would assist the Keep the Two Year Term Committee organized by Thomas O. Gilmore. Incumbent Gov. Jim Hunt declined during a recent news conference to take a position on the issue, while the state's other living former governor, Dan K. Moore, said he would not get involved.

The General Assembly approved the proposed amendment in its regular summer session. Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, was its principal sponsor.

He and other supporters have said longer terms are needed because the burden of campaigning is so heavy on top of legislative work that being a lawmaker is fast becoming a full-time job.

As a result, the General Assembly is losing many people who cannot take the time away from their regular jobs to serve, they say.

But opponents counter that longer terms would make legislators less responsible to their constituents.

Sanford would not comment on his role in the effort to retain two-year terms. But he issued a statement outlining his position.

"We have one of the better state legislatures," the statement said. "They are not professionals but are representative citizens. They keep in touch with their constituencies. I am afraid a four-year term might alter these characteristics."

Scott declined comment, saying, "We have all agreed that any statement would have to come from Tom Gilmore."

"I don't have any comment on that right now," said Gilmore, former deputy secretary of the state Department of Human Resources who resigned Nov. 10 saying he wanted to return to business and work against the four-year term.

"I wouldn't say it's false. I think we ought to just wait until the first of the year. At that time, we will release the names of some very prominent North Carolinians" opposed to the amendment, he said.

Repeated efforts to reach Holshouser were unsuccessful. Gilmore said a statewide steering committee would include a cross section of business and political leaders including Democrats and Republicans.

He said Gary Bartlett of Goldsboro, state president of the Young Democrats, and Bobby Hurst Jr. of Fayetteville, state president of the Young Republicans, would be among the committee's vice chairmen.

Also, the Christian Action League of North Carolina Inc. will work against the four-year term, said the Rev. Coy Privette, the league's executive director.

Privette said a Committee for Accountability in Government would be formed to oppose the proposed amendment "at the grassroots level."

VOTING WITH THEIR FEET — As other members of Polish fishing crews in Vancouver voted on whether to stage a general strike, some fishermen were voting with their feet and defecting to Canada. These seamen were among more than 60 to seek one-year permits to stay in Canada since martial law was declared in their homeland December 11. Meetings were held Wednesday night at which the Polish fishermen voted on the proposed strike. Results of those discussions were expected to be released later. (AP Laserphoto)

A Do-It-Yourself Frustrating Puzzle

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — There's no need to spend money frustrating yourself with store-bought puzzles — you can do it for free with a puzzle made from nails, wire and wood.

Game-maker Rock Hudson, who runs a convenience store in Cleveland County, says his father may have invented the Ring Thing.

Hudson says he can solve the puzzle in 39 moves and in 12 seconds. But as far as he knows, only three people in the state can work it — and he had to show all three how to do it.

"In over 40 years, I have never found one person who can work it" without being told how, said Hudson, 46.

"I don't know where it came from or whether that's the right name for it," he said. "All I know is that my father made one for us when we were young, and it's possible that he invented it."

To make the Ring Thing, you need a small thin board 8 inches to 2 feet long and 3 to 4 inches wide; six rings about 2 inches or larger in diameter, six nails or sections of wire and a coat hanger or long piece of heavy wire.

First, Hudson drives the six nails through the board in a straight line or bores six small holes. He then inserts sections of the thick wire into each hole. One end of the wire is looped around a nail to make certain that it doesn't pull through. The free ends are wrapped around the six rings so they're loosely fastened on top of the board and in a straight line about 3 inches apart.

He then unhooks and straightens the coat hanger and forms a long loop about 2 inches wide and 2 feet long so that it encircles the wires used to hold the rings, making sure the rings can slip through the loop.

an American bottom line for the West Bank: Just how much territory should Israel be allowed for its occupation armies and what autonomy powers should be handed over to the Palestinians? The Reagan administration has never revealed where it stands on these explosive issues, but once it decides, the special emissary would be used as Haig's traveling salesman at the sterile autonomy negotiations.

That rules out any quick, easy resolution of the political crisis between Israel and the U.S. The strategic agreement remains in limbo, soon to be far overshadowed by the battle for the West Bank. Reagan was pleased with Begin's "Merry Christmas," but Christmas is now over.

in human services where county spending has increased by 207.6 percent in just 10 years; up from $2.5 million in 1970 to $161.5 million last year.

Last fiscal year, counties had tax revenues totaling $865 million, and spent nearly $600 million of that in the areas of mental health, welfare, public health, schools and Medicaid. Lancaster said these spending patterns required by state and federal law is taking an ever-increasing portion of the county budget.

The property tax will continue the main source of local income, Lancaster said. The source now provides 78 percent of county income ($677 million) compared to $146 million from the sales tax and $34 million from intangibles taxes.

The additional penny sales tax "would simply relieve the pressure on the property tax but not replace it," Lancaster wrote in his letter to Green.

Manufacturers Thinking Small

NEW YORK (UPI) — American manufacturers are thinking small, now that houses and cars are being reduced in size.

Today's homes contain an average of 900 square feet, down more than half from the typical 2,000-square foot houses built during the 1960s.

has dropped by half. Mr. Auchter reports great enthusiasm in the field. He looks confidently to the day when OSHA's professionals will be welcomed by plant managers who share his zeal for safe and healthy working conditions.

From a columnist's biased viewpoint, it was better in the old days. OSHA always was good for a gag. My inborn skepticism tells me that Mr. Auchter's honeymoon with business can't last — sooner or later he will have to trod on toes or he will fail to do his job — but it's pleasant to see common sense in an agency that was full of malarkey before.

Stunt Man Told Change His Act

NEW YORK (AP) — Daniel Goodwin, a stunt man who calls himself "Spider-Dan" and climbs tall buildings in a costume that looks a lot like that of a comic book hero known as "Spider-Man," has been ordered to change his act.

An order issued Wednesday by U.S. District Court Judge Abraham D. Sofaer bars Goodwin, 25, of Kennebunkport, Maine, from promoting himself as "Spider-Dan" or "Spider-Man" and from wearing his red-and-blue web design costume.

Day-To-Day Search Set

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)

— Authorities will decide on a "day to day basis" whether to continue the search for Air Force 1st Lt. Michael Mattson, whose jet crashed in the Atlantic Dec. 18.

A spokesman for Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, where Mattson is stationed, said he had heard of no decision to cancel the search.

But he added, "You can do all you can for just so long, and if you get no results you have to terminate your search."

A spokesman for the U.S. Coast Guard in Miami said search coordinators met late Wednesday and decided to proceed with the search today.

Eighteen aircraft combed an area 10 to 100 miles offshore between Charleston, S.C. and Brunswick, Ga. on Wednesday.

Mattson's copilot, Lt. Thomas W. Tiller, was rescued last Thursday after spending six days adrift in a life raft without food or water. He was found about 65 miles east of Charleston, S.C., but said he doesn't know if Mattson was able to eject before the jet went down.

The two men were aboard an F4-E Phantom jet on a night training mission when it ran into trouble off the coast near Wilmington.

Air Force officials have declined to discuss the cause of the crash, and Osborn says it will be the subject of a lengthy investigation.

SURROUNDED?

PARIS (AP) — Libyan state radio reports that Chadian rebel forces surrounded a unit of an African peacekeeping force in Chad and told the men to disarm or face attack. The broadcast could not immediately be confirmed.

Libya And Saudis Plan Diplomatic Relations

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya and Saudi Arabia today agreed to resume diplomatic relations severed a year ago. Libya's official JANA news agency said.

In a joint statement issued in Tripoli and Riyadh, the two governments said the decision reflected a desire to avoid "a useless rupture of the Arab unity" and to press for a unified Arab action "against the common enemy," JANA said.

In Kuwait, the official government news agency reported that the Arab summit conference that collapsed in November will reconvene in the Moroccan city of Fez next April.

The developments were the most recent signs of Arab efforts to unify their position following Israel's annexation of the Syrian Golan Heights Dec. 14.

Saudi Arabia severed relations in October 1980 after Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy criticized Saudi Arabia for bringing in four U.S. AWACS surveillance planes following the outbreak of the Iraq-Iran war.

Khadafy said then that the United States was waging a "20th century crusade that brought Islam's holy shrines in Saudi Arabia under American occupation." He called for a "holy war to liberate the house of god in Mecca and the city of Mecca."

King Khaled in turn called Khadafy "the devil incarnate" and accused him of becoming "a spearhead against Islam with Israel."

The Kuwaiti news agency quoted Arab diplomatic sources in the Moroccan capital of Rabat as saying the reconvened Arab summit will be preceded by a conference of Arab foreign ministers.

The Fez summit was suspended five hours after it opened Nov. 25 because of sharp differences over a Saudi Arabian blueprint for a Middle East peace settlement which implicitly recognized Israel. Leftist Arab heads of state boycotted the summit because they objected to the plan.

Among those who stayed away was Syria's President Hafez Assad, Israel's most militant Arab neighbor. Assad, however, was reported to have agreed with Saudi Arabia last week on the need to resume the Fez summit.

Assad toured several Arab nations after Israel annexed the Golan Heights in efforts to consolidate a united response.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too. Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

More Women Sharing Traditional Mummer Parade

STRING BAND LEADER — Dorothy Plies, who will be the first woman to lead a string band in the Philadelphia Mummers Parade on New Year's Day, practices her banjo as she prepares for the march. She will lead the South Jersey String Band in the 82nd annual parade. (AP Laserphoto)

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tradition falls hard for the Mummers, who have been parading longer in America than anyone else, and this year, more women than ever before will be among the prancers, dancers and strutters on New Year's Day.

The greatest attention centers on Dorothy Plies, a 21-year-old banjo player, the first woman captain of a string band.

"It shouldn't create any problem, but there are going to be plenty of guys who are not going to like it," said Bud Geiser, president of the 49-member South Jersey String Band.

He said Ms. Plies was named captain because "our theme is Mickey Finn's Ragtime Review, and Mickey was a famous banjo player in San Francisco back in the Gay '90s. She won't be out in front just looking pretty, she will be playing."

South Jersey is one of 24 string bands participating in what is billed as America's longest parade, a million-dollar extravaganza expected to last nearly 12 hours.

Women first cracked the all-male Mummers ranks about five years ago, breaking in as band musicians, or as part of the production numbers that highlight the musical themes.

"I don't like to talk about it," says Fred Calandra, president of the Philadelphia New Year's Shooters and Mummers Association, the formal organization of the various string bands. "I don't approve of women being in the parade, but I guess it has to be."

Another participant, the Hegeman String Band, considered using real girls for its "Showtime at the Copacabana."

Ken Stein, one Hegeman member, pointed to the slit gown on a sketch of the showgirl costume and made the pitch against using guys for gals.

"You're gonna see their charley-horsed knees, their doggone tattoos," he said.

"If we used real girls, yes, they'd look gorgeous, but no way," said music director John Pignotti Jr. "This band has never paraded with girls, not in 62 years."

While parading took place for more than two centuries, with neighborhoods later putting up some small prizes in the 1890s, Philadelphia's first formal City Council-sanctioned parade was held in 1901 with about 2,500 revelers.

Every year since there have been more satins, more silks, more sequins, more feathers, more bands and more participants.

On Friday, for the 82nd official march, a total of 25,842 people, including about 300 women, will cavort to the parade's theme "Oh Dem Golden Slippers" in competing for $315,100 in prizes, the largest amount ever put up by the city.

It started with $6,500 in 1915.

The official parade was canceled only twice — in 1917 because of an influenza epidemic, and in 1934 because of the Depression. However, the marching went on informally in the blue-collar neighborhoods of South Philadelphia where mummery's roots never died, and the parading never stopped.

There also have been a few postponements because of snow or rain, in order not to ruin the expensive costumes which, by tradition, cannot be used a second time.

It takes an average of $25,000 to outfit a string band, and the top prize, given by judges picked by the city's Recreation Department, is only $7,700.

The rest of the money is raised through raffles, dances, and public appearances.

Unlike other parades, like those celebrating the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City, or the Macy's Thanksgiving extravaganza in New York, there are no commercial sponsors, no commercial floats, no big out-of-town stars or bands. Everything is done in the Philadelphia area, by and for the participants.

Mummery, American-style, is older than the United States. The seeds were sown by Swedish and German settlers who prowled the Philadelphia waterfront in the late 1600s, ringing bells and pounding pots to scare away demons at the start of a new year.

Over the years, the shenanigans accelerated and the revelers donned masks and costumes and began shooting guns as they went house to house seeking a kiss or a glass of good cheer.

"They had the tendency to do these things, and they passed them on to their children," says Calandra. Many oldtime Mummers still like to be referred to as "New Year Shooters."

In 1793, a Quaker lady thought she had the answer to the satire and masquerading in the name of the Greek mythological god of ridicule, Momus.

"They are now practicing the foolish custom of firing out the old year," she wrote in 1793. "May the next be spent to good purpose by those who are spared to see the end of it."

Others claim mummery began with the Roman festival of Saturnalia, when Rome's laborers were freed from work and allowed to cavort in masks in a binge of satire.

The Mardi Gras traces its roots to Philadelphia mummery. The first torch-and-float Mardi Gras parade in Mobile, Ala., in 1827 was organized by Pennsylvania-born Michael Krafft who founded the "Cobellion de Ratkin Society" which later shifted to New Orleans.

Howitzer Technology Sale To Japan Delayed By President

By GENE GRABOWSKI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (P) — The Reagan administration, responding to pressure from Congress, is delaying the sale of technology that would enable Japan to build a self-propelled howitzer now made only in the United States.

Congressmen who forced the delay say they want to preserve America's defense industry and protect the economies of 28 communities where parts for the cannon are made.

But some administration officials consider the last-minute postponement a needless affront to one of America's most important allies. The issue took on special importance this week when Japan announced plans to increase its own defense spending at the request of the U.S. government.

The deal, originally planned two years ago, was scheduled for final approval last week. It is now delayed indefinitely.

Scores of congressmen, headed by Reps. William Goodling, R-Pa., and Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., forestalled the transaction with a concentrated blitz of telephone calls and letters. Both congressmen represent districts where major parts of the long-range cannon are made.

"Selling Japan the means to produce this equipment essentially denies a lucrative market to U.S. business interests that could otherwise manufacture the howitzer domestically for sale to Japan," Goodling wrote in a letter to officials in the State and Defense departments earlier this month.

The Bowen-McLaughlin Co., located in Goodling's district, assembles the howitzer and builds the main carriage for the cannon.

Stratton said the proposed howitzer agreement is an example of how "soft heads" in the State Department try to appease allies at the expense of national defense. His district includes the Watervliet Arsenal, America's sole manufacturer of large cannon barrels.

State Department officials argue that the Japanese deal is a standard "co-production" package, requiring the purchase of 110 American-made gun barrels.

"Japan already produces the F-15 jet and P-3 anti-submarine plane with our help," said Gregg Rubinstein, a State Department official for Japanese affairs. "These are high-cost, inefficient operations that the country undertakes for its own defense needs."

But dozens of congressmen believe the continued sale of technology like the howitzer's sophisticated breech is an immediate threat to the American economy.

Nearly 40 representatives and 60 senators have a stake in protecting plants across the country that make millions of components for the big gun. For example, factories in Bolton, Conn., Magnolia, Ark., and Irvine, Calif., make wheels, sprockets and pins for the tank-sized howitzer.

Many congressmen warn that the real danger of offering vital U.S. technology to allies is that dangerous weapons eventually could be sold to enemies.

Rubinstein said such an occurrence is "far fetched" in the case of the Japanese, who have a long-standing policy against the export of any weapons.

Automatic Pay Boost Is Bypassed On Jan. 1

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since 1978, the dawning of the new year will not mean an automatic pay boost for the approximately 5 million Americans being paid the minimum wage.

Not only that, no efforts are afoot either within the Reagan administration or on Capitol Hill to increase minimum wage rates. Thus, the $3.35-an-hour minimum will be frozen indefinitely.

6 Counties Lose Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government has rejected North Carolina's request that six of its counties be declared disaster areas because of the drought last summer.

But Agriculture Secretary John R. Block announced Wednesday that Polk and Rutherford counties in North Carolina had been declared disaster areas, and are eligible for emergency loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

The counties were among 18 designated in Kansas, North Carolina, Ohio and South Dakota as eligible for the emergency loans.

The designations mean qualified farmers in those counties can apply for loans to cover part of their production losses due to excessive rain, hail, flood, drought and other natural causes.

Crops affected by drought in Polk County included soybeans and hay, and crops in Rutherford most adversely affected included corn, soybeans, grain sorghum, hay and pasture.

The largest damage in Polk County was to the soybean crop, where losses were estimated at $216,000, Bordeaux said. The largest damage in Rutherford County was also to the soybean crop, with $953,000 in losses.

A spokesman for Gov. Jim Hunt said Hunt was notified of the decision Wednesday.

With the economy in a worsening recession, traditional labor allies have expressed concern that any upward pressure on the minimum wage could cost thousands of people their jobs as businesses cut back the number of employees to keep their labor costs stable.

At its centennial convention in New York City last month, the AFL-CIO approved a resolution reiterating its call for the minimum wage to be indexed to the average hourly earnings in the private business sector, giving those drawing the minimum wage some protection against inflation.

Specifically, the federation wants minimum wage increases amounting to 60 percent of the average annual hourly earnings of all workers in private business.

For example, if wages rose in the private sector in 1981 by an average of $1.00 an hour, the minimum wage would have risen from $3.35 to $3.95 an hour.

The AFL-CIO is urging Congress to enact legislation providing for such adjustments in the minimum wage.

There has been no effort to enact legislation raising the minimum wage because much congressional attention has been focused on proposals for a lowered minimum wage for teenagers as a way to attack the problem of soaring youth unemployment.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland, in testimony on Capitol Hill last March 25, maintained that those pushing for a sub-minimum wage "are fostering discrimination on the basis of age, encouraging school drop-outs and creating tensions in the work place."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, sponsor of legislation to lower the minimum wage for youngsters, said he felt such a move would be a constructive step for "unemployed teen-agers in this country who want but can't find jobs."

The minimum wage went from $3.10 an hour to $3.35 last Jan. 1, meaning a worker would receive $134 instead of $124 for a 40-hour week.

The minimum wage typically is paid to such workers as hotel maids and some people involved in retail business.

That increase was the final installment in a series of hikes approved three years ago by Congress and signed by then-President Carter.

Before the congressional legislation in 1977, raising the rate in four steps, the minimum wage was $2.30 an hour.

Papers Record History On Spot

By MIKE GLOVER
Associated Press Writer

FAIRFIELD, Iowa (AP) — History books don't teach that the New York Weekly Sun once turned down the president of the United States when he asked for a free subscription, saying he was making good money and could afford to pay.

Nor do they tell young Americans that when signers of the Declaration of Independence staked their lives and fortunes on a new nation they also were pestered by horseflies from a nearby livery stable.

But these are snippets of history, and Walter Day thinks they should be part of the lessons young people learn in school. "It's a whole different point of view," he said.

While for some the past is dead, for Day history is a living, breathing thing. It exists on the yellowed pages of the 7 million newspapers he's collected. And he plans to make a living at it.

Day has collected about 300,000 newspapers in two tiny rooms in a former college dormitory. There, amid the musty smell of old paper and journalism legends, he conducts his business. The rest of his collection is scattered around the country "mostly in friends' basements," he said.

Along with newspapers, Day has gathered stacks of old yearbooks. Not just any old yearbooks, mind you, but special ones.

From the pages of one, a scowling Richard Nixon stares out next to an essay he wrote called "America's Progress — Its Dependence on the Constitution."

In another, a youthful Elvis Presley wishes a friend well. "That's the most valuable one," Day said. "I heard that it sold once for $8,000."

Others in his collection include Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, James Dean, Johnny Carson, Charlton Heston and Mickey Mantle. They all showed early signs that they were something special, said Day, who plans to sell some of the yearbooks at an auction.

Day peddles the newspapers — his first love — to collectors and newspaper buffs, but his real goal is to make people realize there is a lot more to history than is told in the history books.

The problem, he says, is that history books create myths, remembering things as people want to remember them. He'd like children to get a dose of reality by reading what accounts of the time had to say.

"The textbooks are just a synthesis of all these points of view," he says. "Very few have any new information."

Some of the things people ought to know, he says, are things like the New York Weekly Sun's response to Rutherford B. Hayes' request for a free subscription to the newspaper for the White House.

Hayes, the nation's 19th president, took office in 1877 after a disputed election that was decided by a special commission appointed by Congress. The commission's partisan decision clouded the Republican's term.

In the 1877 issue of the Sun, the editors imperiously responded to Hayes' request by pointing out that the president earned good money.

"This certainly ought to put him above writing begging letters around the country," the newspaper said, commenting "As long as we have a fraudulent president we must expect of him things that no elected president would ever think of."

The same issue reported the "fierce or brutal expression" on the face of a Sioux Indian warrior named Crazy Horse as he surrendered at Fort Laramie.

These little things hold the key to his fascination with the past, Day said. While most people remember the signing of the Declaration of Independence as solemn and dignified, a newspaper account attributed to Thomas Jefferson offered a different perspective.

"Jefferson was laughing and telling the story with great glee," Day said. "It was a very hot day and everyone was running around with their shirts off or open. They signed that document and got out of there."

"Not only that, but there was a livery stable next door and swarms of horseflies were coming in and biting people. Jefferson was convinced that helped launch the country. No one paid much attention to what they were signing."

For Day's business "When History was News," customers request newspapers from the day they were born or a special Opening lead: Two of ♠.

If cards had glass backs, three no trump would be an easy contract. Just bang out the ace and king of diamonds, dropping the queen, and claim at least ten tricks. Even though few of us are blessed with that sort of intuition, an expert card technician should still bring home his no trump game.

South's overall showed the equivalent of a one no trump opening bid. North's raise was rather aggressive, but we might have taken the same action because of the good five-card suit and supporting card in spades.

West led a low spade. East captured the jack with the ace and returned the suit. Declarer won the queen, and it now seems right to go after the diamonds. But careful analysis shows that that would be an error.

For his opening bid, East surely has the ace of clubs. If he has only a five-card spade suit, he quite likely will also have the queen of diamonds.

But if East has six spades, it is possible that West, who would then have only three spades, might have the red lady.

Declarer cannot afford to give up the lead twice to East, for then the spade suit will be established and cashable before declarer has his nine tricks. Therefore, declarer must first attack East's sure entry — the ace of clubs.

Correct technique at trick three is to lay down the king of clubs. If East refuses to win, declarer abandons clubs and concedes a trick to the queen of diamonds immediately. He now has nine tricks — two spades, two hearts, four diamonds and a club. Therefore, East must win the ace of clubs and return a spade, eliminating declarer's last stopper.

But now the queen of clubs is an entry to dummy. Declarer crosses to it and leads a low diamond to the nine. If the finesse wins, the contract sails home unless East has four diamonds. If it loses, declarer hopes that West is out of spades. But when declarer crosses to the club queen the jack falls, and now declarer has nine tricks by running clubs even if he makes only two diamonds.

PATCO Dissension Surfaces

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Not only has the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization been dissolved as an official union, its leaders seem to be at odds among themselves over whether they are still on strike.

Although PATCO officials are playing their cards close to the vest, the underlying issue apparently is over the best strategy to win rehiring of some 11,500 air traffic controllers fired by President Reagan after they struck.

PATCO is appealing an Oct. 22 Federal Labor Relations Authority ruling stripping the union of its exclusive recognition status as bargaining agent for government air traffic controllers.

In order to preserve a dissent by commission chairman Ronald Haughton, the union stated in court papers subsequently that it would have ended the strike within five days — in a show of good faith — but contended it was the victim of a lockout by the FAA.

On Wednesday, the day after top union officials reiterated their strike posture in a telephone conference with PATCO leader Robert E. Poli, a regional union vice president seemed poised to voice his dissent.

But David Siegel of Atlanta canceled his news conference at the last minute under circumstances that were shrouded in secrecy. Aides to Siegel had told reporters privately the regional vice president was prepared to assert his belief that the strike has ended.

Officials at PATCO's national headquarters here were taken by surprise when asked about Siegel's plans about two hours before the scheduled session in Atlanta.

Aides to Siegel subsequently told waiting reporters in Atlanta that the PATCO officer had changed his plans. They denied that Siegel was planning to announce his resignation from the union's nine-member executive board.

Cancellation of Siegel's scheduled news conference was an apparent attempt by national union leaders to resolve internally a leadership dispute.

In a statement issued on Siegel's behalf, aide Betty Griffith said a two-hour conference call between Siegel and national PATCO officials in Washington generated "further developments which would preclude him from making the statement he intended to make."

She said in Atlanta that a further statement would be forthcoming from Washington, but repeated efforts to reach PATCO officials late Wednesday proved futile. Patrick Doyle, an official at the national headquarters here, said PATCO leaders in Washington were unaware of Siegel's purported plans. "If it's some kind of a protest, we're in the dark," he said. "We're at an absolute loss as to what he plans to do."

PATCO has petitioned for reorganization under the Federal Bankruptcy Act. Its leaders scoffed earlier this month at Reagan's decision to waive a law barring federal employment for three years of any person who engaged in an illegal strike against the government.

Reagan refused to consider returning the controllers to the flight towers, and union leaders said the president's offer to remove the ban against them taking other government jobs meant nothing at a time of declining federal employment.

Track Stars 'Forgiven'

LONDON (AP) — Two track stars who ignored Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's call to boycott the Moscow Olympics have been named in the annual New Year's Honors list, but such forgiveness didn't extend to civil servants who went on strike this year.

Alan Williams, spokesman on the Civil Service for the opposition Labor Party, accused Mrs. Thatcher of "vindictiveness" for excluding from the annual honors the civil servants who struck.

Because of their longevity in the government's employ, some civil servants normally are on the list of peerages, knighthoods and medals drawn up and bestowed by the prime minister in Queen Elizabeth II's name.

Mrs. Thatcher bestowed honors today on her favorite comedian, two nurses who kept their cool in last summer's rioting and distance runners Sebastian Coe and Steve Ovett, among others.

Coe and Ovett were ignored in two previous lists after defying Mrs. Thatcher's call to join the 1980 Olympic boycott, initiated by the United States to protest Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Apparently forgiven, each got the Member of the Order of the British Empire. Coe won an Olympic gold medal in the 1,500 meters and Ovett took the gold medal in the 800 meters.

Comedian Ken Dodd, 51, was awarded an Officer of the Order of the British Empire. Mrs. Thatcher makes a point of going to his shows, and he campaigned for her Conservative Party in the 1979 election.

Death Claims 'Coma Child'

CLOVER, S.C. (AP) — A 7-year-old child who accidentally took an overdose of medicine trying to cure himself of an embarrassing pants-wetting problem "just wished he could stop," his father says.

Cliff Rich died Wednesday morning in a Gastonia, N.C., hospital, 29 days after he got into a supposedly childproof medicine bottle and took 40 times his prescribed daily dose of a drug called Tofranil. He never regained consciousness.

Gastonia neurosurgeon Dr. Sivalingam Siva said Cliff died of cardiac and kidney failure that was probably brought on by septicemia, an infection in the blood stream.

"He was just a real sensitive little fella, a good, quiet little boy," Cliff's mother, Becky Rich, said.

The boy was to be buried today at Lakeview Memorial Gardens, following 2 p.m. funeral services at First Freewill Baptist Church here.

The boy's father, Clyde Rich, said Cliff had wet his pants during a class at Kinard Elementary School that day and apparently decided that the one pill a day prescribed by a urologist wasn't helping him enough.

"We didn't know it bothered him all that much," Rich said. "He never mentioned it, but it must have."

While his parents were in another room, Cliff climbed up to a high kitchen shelf where the prescription medicine was stored and opened the bottle of Tofranil.

Cliff told his 4-year-old brother, Michael, what he was doing but Michael didn't tell his parents what had happened until the next day, after Cliff had been rushed to Gaston Memorial Hospital, Rich said.

"After the boys had gone to bed and Cliff cried out in his sleep, we thought he was having a nightmare. He was real cold and I couldn't wake him up," the 39-year-old machinist said.

"I carried him to the bathroom to splash some water on his face and he was as white as a sheet, his lips were blue. He just quit breathing and I laid him on the bed and gave him CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) and got him started again."

The next day Michael "told us about Cliff telling him, if one pill a day helped him some, the whole bottle ought to cure him," Rich said.

He said Cliff, who turned 7 while in the hospital, "was a sensitive kid, kind of shy. He didn't make friends real quickly, but the ones he had, he kept for a long time."

FBI Captures Tar Heel Man

RUFFIN, N.C. (AP) — The FBI has apprehended a North Carolina man it said was one of 19 people who escaped from a Virginia jail.

Robert L. Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said James Phelps Gilbert, 21, of Ruffin, was arrested Wednesday on charges of unlawful flight to avoid confinement and prosecution.

Gilbert was charged on Dec. 3 at Alexandria, Va., in connection with his escape with 18 other prisoners on Nov. 29 from Prince William County of Virginia Jail, Manassas, Va.

Gilbert was caught in Ruffin by the FBI, the 17th of the escapees to be caught. Pence said.

Gilbert was serving a 5-year sentence in Virginia on an armed robbery conviction. He is now being held in the Guilford County Jail under $25,000 bond.

Bank Announces Merger Action

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Gateway Bank, which has five offices and assets of nearly $46 million after opening seven years ago, will merge with Northwestern Financial Corp. of North Wilkesboro on Thursday.

Gateway chairman Richard Tuggle and Gateway president Ralph Bowden will turn over the keys of the bank to Northwestern chairman Ben Craig in a ceremony.

Northwestern Bank is the state's fourth largest with assets of $2 billion and 180 offices in 44 counties.

This weekend all Gateway signs will be taken down and replaced with the Northwestern logo.

Bowden said he is not sure what his role will be in the merged operations.

"We are still talking about it," he said, adding all Gateway officers and employees are assured of jobs in the merged set-up.

Tax-Listing

The listing of real and personal property for tax purposes will begin in Pitt County Monday, according to county tax supervisor Jimmie Hardee.

North Carolina law requires that all real and personal property be listed for tax purposes during the month of January, and provides a penalty for late listing.

Hardee said 15 listing places — one in each township — will operate each weekday and a half-day on Saturday during the month for the convenience of property owners.

Hardee urged property owners to list their property early to avoid the usual last-minute rush. He also said persons listing property should bring their Social Security number and vehicle registration cards with them when they list.

About one-third of the county's property owners will list by mail this year, according to Hardee, who said the list-by-mail forms would be mailed today.

The tax supervisor noted that anyone wishing to list by mail in January 1982 should tell the list taker when the property is listed this January.

operate.

"They put her through as many tests as they could and thought she was improving. They sent her home, but she didn't stay very long. She had bad abdominal pains again and they took her to Chapel Hill in an ambulance.

"She was scared from the very beginning. The doctors couldn't identify her problem and she wanted to be back home."

Specialists from the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta and military hospitals in Europe were consulted with little success.

"The tests were very involved," Mrs. Faulk said. "But they never came up with an accurate diagnosis of what and why. There was always a question."

Marks said that when Vilayvanh returned to Chapel Hill, "the doctors were pretty sure it was some sort of a parasite.... They never did see any parasites during surgery. The whole thing is kind of strange."

The Laotian girl arrived in the United States with her family in August 1979 after all her family possessions were sold to get passage out of her country.

The family fled across the Mekong River at night to reach a Thai refugee camp, Nong Khai.

159 Donors

The Red Cross Bloodmobile received donations from 159 people Wednesday in a drive conducted at the Greenville Moose Lodge. Ruth Taylor, Red Cross executive secretary, said 16 other potential donors were deferred.

She said Wachovia Bank and Pitt County Memorial Hospital had the largest number of blood donors.

Assisting in the drive were the Greenville Service League, Greenville Moose Lodge and volunteer nurses. Frank Bradham of the Blood Committee was chairman of the drive.

The next bloodmobile visit will be Jan. 8 at Pitt Community College.

VEPCO Cites Decline In Cost

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — Virginia Electric and Power Co. reported Wednesday a decline in the average cost of electricity during the first nine months of 1981.

VEPCO officials said the utility was the only one among 20 of the nation's largest to have a decline.

VEPCO's average cost of electricity was 5.14 cents per kilowatt-hour during the first three quarters of 1981, 1.5 percent less than its average cost during 1980, utility officials said.

Byles' Free Throws Win For Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
FAIRFAX, Va. — East Carolina University's Pirates might be one of the nation's worst free throw shooting teams — but Tony Byles knows where the basket is, and last night, with no time remaining on the clock, he sneaked to the foul line and cracked through a pair of charity shots giving ECU a 66-64 victory over George Mason University.

The contest was the first ECAC-South game ever for the Pirates, who joined the conference just a few short months ago. With just over seven minutes to go in the game, the Pirates held a 60-52 lead, but got only one more field goal in the closing minutes of the game. They did go to the foul line a total of nine times, for a potential 18 shots, but they made just four — including the fateful two by Byles.

Those two were surrounded by controversy — and as it turned out — confusion.

For one thing, it wasn't Byles who was supposed to shoot, but Charles Green, who had been fouled by Andy Bolden as time ran out.

For another, there was controversy as to whether time had run completely out before Green was fouled. The call came after the horn had sounded, prompting GMU coach Joe Harrington to argue vehemently that the foul came too late. However, the official said that it came at the horn and only his whistle came afterwards.

A look at a television replay some time after the game was inconclusive. The clock, superimposed on the screen, appeared to change to 0:00 just milliseconds before the foul — plainly visible on the screen. However, the noise level in the gym prevented the sound of the horn from being heard on the monitor, and most time clock to change to zero seconds about a half-second before the horn actually sounds, ending the game.

Harrington, questioned later, said he would not want to comment on the call. "Anything I'd say would only be detrimental," he said. "It would sound like I'm crying. It was a hard call to make, and a hard way to lose. Both teams played hard and an overtime would have been nice."

At any rate, when the arguments ended, Byles stepped up to the line, took the ball and knocked in the two shots, breaking a 64-64 tie and giving the Pirates the victory.

And in the confusion, nobody on the GMU bench noticed that it was Byles and not Green doing the shooting. "I just stepped up and the official handed me the ball and said, 'Shoot!', so I did," Byles said later.

"The irony of the game was so real it's hard to describe," a relieved Coach Dave Odom of East Carolina said afterwards, in reference to ECU winning on a pair of free throws after hitting only 16 of 35 charity shots on the evening.

"There were a number of times that we had a very real opportunity to put the game down finally as the horn went off and as he did, Bolden grabbed his arm.

That resulted in the whistle — and the foul shots. East Carolina fell behind early as the offense again had trouble getting started. After leading, 3-2, the Pirates saw the Patriots outscore them, 11-2, over the next few minutes for a 13-5 lead.

This was done without the normal GM starters, save for guard Carlos Yates as Harrington benched his usual starters after a pair of losses.

Following an ECU timeout, however, the Pirates fought back and tie it up, then took a 17-15 lead behind the scoring of Green, who hit five of the 12 points.

Although Mason tied it three more times over the next few minutes, the Pats were unable to take the lead. Harrington was slapped with a technical with 7:36 left in the half, as the Pirates built up an eight-point edge, 32-24, but the "T" seemed to spark the Patriots on, and they rallied behind the scoring of Andre Gaddy to tie it up at the half, 36-36.

Gaddy continued to score early, helping the Patriots to a 47-45 lead with 14:23 left, but then ECU began to pick off the allowed him only two more points the rest of the evening.

Gaddy continued to score early, helping the Patriots to a 47-45 lead with 14:23 left, but then ECU began to pick off the

That also allowed the Pirates to come back on offense, as Michael Gibson and Hargrove both hit to put the Pirates back ahead, 49-47. Byles added a free throw and Green hit a jump before Yates scored for GMU. Al Mack, who played one of his best games since joining the Pirates, added two jumpers, sparking ECU to its eight-point bulge of 60-52 with 7:43 left — before the game almost became a nightmare for the Pirates.

"I thought our defense in the second half did a superb job on Gaddy," Odom said. "And our offense at times picked 'em pretty well. But when we got that eight point lead and lost it, we weren't playing well on offense."

The coach also felt the Pirates, who snapped a three-game losing string and raised their record overall to 3-5, gained in mental toughness in the game. "That was more important than the actual outcome of the game," he said. "My greatest hope is that they'll keep this."

The Pirates shot a blazing 57 percent from the floor as compared to 45 percent for the Patriots. Byles led the ECU scoring with 16 points, while Hargrove and Green each had 11. Gaddy led Mason with 21 points, while Yates had 15 and Bolden had 12.

Green led the game's rebounding with eight, while Gibson pulled off six. Gaddy led Mason with seven, while Terry Henderson had six.

The win left ECU with a 1-0 ECAC-South record, while George Mason slips to 0-2.

East Carolina continues its long road trip on Monday, meetings Baptist College in Charleston, S.C.

Rice Owls (Who?) Upset Greene Cen. Takes 4th Straight Tri-County Title

HONOLULU (AP) — Ricky Pierce, the tournament's most outstanding player, scored 23 points and pulled down seven rebounds as the Rice Owls completed a wave of upsets in the 18th annual Rainbow Classic with a 51-47 victory over previously undefeated and 20th-ranked North Carolina State Wednesday night. The Owls upset host Hawaii, 69-59, in their opener, then knocked off No. 6 San Francisco, 78-66, before besting the Wolfpack at its own game of ball control.

With Pierce scoring 16 points in the first half, the Owls took a 29-22 lead at intermission.

Rice maintained that advantage until late in the second half when Sidney Lowe's bucket and two by Dereck Whittenburg, who led N.C. State with 18 points, knotted the score at 39-all. Pierce then hit two free throws but Whittenburg scored again on a six-footer.

Pierce responded with a beautiful baseline move for a left-handed layup putting the Owls ahead 43-41. Kenny Austin, who had 11 points and seven rebounds, followed with two free throws and the Owls never lost the lead again.

N.C. State's Thurl Bailey hit a layup with 1:55 left, but Renaldo O'Neal followed with three free throws in four attempts and the Wolfpack could get no closer than three points the rest of the game.

"That foul (allowing Rice to break the first tie) was uncalled for," N.C. State Coach Jim Valvano said, adding that "the baseline move by Pierce (when the Owls broke the second tie) was a work of art."

"We got behind early and couldn't play our kind of tempo. We had to play man-to-man and that hurt us, but give Rice credit. They played a great game and deserved to win," the Wolfpack coach said.

WHEAT SWAMP — Pardon Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin if he is partial to the Tri-County Holiday Tournament. After all, Greene Central has won four straight tournament titles.

The latest championship came Wednesday evening when Greene Central, behind Roderick Lane's 19 points and John Ray's 16, rolled past Ayden-Grifton, 64-49, in the tournament finale.

The Lady Rams did not fair as well. North Lenoir used a balanced scoring attack in which three players scored in double figures to defeat Greene Central, 60-50, for the girls tournament title.

In the boys' championship game, Greene Central inched out to a 10-8 lead at the end of the first period and extended its advantage to 22-19 as the two teams headed to their locker rooms at halftime.

The Rams then outscored the Chargers 24 to 12 in the third period for 46-31 lead and never looked back. Both teams scored 18 points in the fourth period for the final margin.

"We've been having our troubles in the third quarter, but tonight we made some good shots," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "I felt the key was our defense and our rebounding."

Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey agreed. "I thought their inside people were a little better than ours," he said. "In the second half they took it inside and we couldn't stop them."

The Rams, now 4-6, outbounded the Chargers, 32-25, and hit 16 of 24 from the free throw line compared to the just one of three for the Chargers. That, coupled with a tight zone that the Chargers could not break, sent Ayden-Grifton to its sixth loss in 10 outings.

"We usually play well against a zone, but we didn't shoot very well tonight," Murphrey said.

The Chargers, who remain without leading scorer and rebounder Thomas Anderson, who is still recuperating from a broke arm, were led by Bernard Cannon and Tyrone Gay, both of whom scored 10 points.

Joining Lane and Ray in double figures for Greene Central was Cepado Albritton with 10.

In the girls' game, North Lenoir jumped out to an 18-8 first-period lead and led at the half 29-20. A 14-7 third-quarter advantage in favor the Lady Hawks pushed the lead to 43-27.

The Lady Rams outscored North Lenoir, 23-17, in the final eight minutes, but it was not enough.

Greene Central, now 7-3, was led by Letha Taylor's 17 points and Sharon Suggs' 16. Vernice Chapman paced North Lenoir with 18 points followed by Susan Smith with 14 and Mary Harris with 11.

Greene Central entertains Eastern Carolina Conference foe North Pitt Tuesday while Ayden-Grifton plays host to league opponent Southern Nash.

Aycock Nips Valkyries To Win Conley Event

By RICK SCOPPE

Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley stumbled to one of its worst offensive performances of the year Wednesday evening and it cost the Valkyries their nine-game unbeaten streak, not to mention a tournament title.

Unbeaten Charles B. Aycock used an active 2-3 zone to shut down the D.H. Conley fast break, but it was a 22-foot jumper by Sharon Lancaster at the buzzer that propelled the Lady Falcons to a 35-33 victory in the championship game of the first-ever D.H. Conley Invitational.

C.B. Aycock led by four at halftime (20-16) and extended its lead to eight in the third period before the Valkyries rallied to tie the game late in the first quarter.

A three-point play by DHC's Mechio Kornegay with 2:58 remaining brought the Valkyries within two at 30-28. Following an Aycock turnover, Jackie Daniels then sank a driving jumper from the left to tie the game at 30-30 with 2:08 to go.

Daniels then hit the front end of a one-and-one with 1:33 left to give the Valkyries a 31-30 lead — their only lead of the night. Forward Ann Lancaster maneuvered inside to put the Lady Falcons back on top, 32-31, with 54 seconds left.

Zina Jones then stole the ball from Irish Barnhill and was fouled. After a Conley time out, Jones hit the first free throw for a 33-31 Aycock lead. After another DHC time out, Jones shot an air ball and the Valkyries had the ball with 33 seconds remaining.

Kornegay missed a 15-foot jumper from the left on the ensuing trip down court, but center Karen Barrett grabbed the rebound and swished a 10-foot jumper with 11 seconds left to tie the game at 33-33.

The Lady Falcons worked the ball quickly back up court. With time running out Lancaster put up a jumper from the right that swished through the nets as the buzzer sounded.

The win was C.B. Aycock's 10th straight without a loss and left D.H. Conley with its first defeat in 10 games this season as the Valkyries suffered through a terrible night offensively.

D.H. Conley hit just 23% from the floor (12 of 52). In the first three quarters, the Valkyries were six of 36. In the final eight minutes, the Valkyries were six of 16.

"I really can't tell you what happened," D.H. Conley coach Joy James said. "C.B. Aycock played great defense and we didn't take it to them like we should have."

"I thought we were ready, but in the first half we were flat. Taking nothing away from C.B. Aycock, I think we had a harder game last night than they did."

The Valkyries defeated Goldsboro, 56-45, Tuesday night in the tournament's opening round while Aycock whipped Southern Wayne, 39-24. "We haven't played two tough opponents back-to-back like this all season," James said. "I think that hurt us tonight."

The Lady Falcons, who hit only 30% (15 of 50) of their shots from the floor were led by Jones with 13 points. Five of those points came in the final 6½ minutes of the game and helped her to be named the tournament's most valuable player.

No one else for either team was in double figures. Conley was led by Barrett and Kornegay, both of whom scored eight points, and Darlene Cannon with seven points. Both Barrett and Kornegay were named to the all-tournament team. Others on the five-man squad, voted on by the coaches, were Aycock forwards Ann Lancaster and Jeanette Dunn and Goldsboro guard Donna Atkinson.

Goldsboro rolled past Southern Wayne, 53-15, to capture third place. Goldsboro is now 6-3. Southern Wayne drops to 3-5.

In early part of the championship game both teams appeared tight. Aycock led, 6-0, after three minutes and Conley did not score until Barrett hit a jumper with 4:47 left in the quarter. The period ended with Aycock up, 12-8.

The Lady Falcons extended their lead to six (17-11) on one of two free throws by Ann Lancaster midway through the second period only to see the Valkyries score five straight points to cut the deficit to 17-16 with 2:43 to go before halftime. Aycock led at the half, 20-16.

The third quarter was the worst period of the night — for both teams. Aycock managed just four points. Conley did even worse, scoring just one point — on a free throw by Daniels. Aycock led, 24-17, when the period ended.

Down 26-20 with 6:25 to go, the Valkyries began their rally. A jumper by Irish Barnhill, a follow shot by Kornegay and a free throw by Barrett pulled Conley to within one, 26-25, with 5:52 left.

The Lady Falcons countered with jumpers by Jones and Sharon Lancaster to push their lead to 30-25 with 3:12 left. Conley outscored Aycock 8-3 from there, but it was not quite enough to keep the Valkyries' win streak alive and to stop the Lady Falcons' win string.

Rice Coach Tommy Suits was overjoyed at the end result.

"To beat an ACC school that's ranked and undefeated is something else when you consider we were picked to finish eighth in our league," Suits said.

"Our guys have worked hard and wanted recognition for so long but didn't get it. We did not play well on the California portion of this trip, but after the first night here we looked up and it was just us and three undefeated, Top 20 teams. That got the guys sky high," the Rice coach said.

The only other player in double figures for the Owls was Bobby Tudor with 11 points.

For the Wolfpack, Lowe had 11 points and Bailey 10.

In the battle for third place, Quintin Dailey scored 25 points and John Hegwood added 23 plus 11 rebounds as the San Francisco Dons, ranked No. 6, defeated No. 2-ranked Wichita State, 84-74.

Virginia Nips Dukes In Tourney Finals

By The Associated Press
Coach Terry Holland's Virginia Cavaliers are going to keep playing James Madison until they get it right.

The third-ranked Cavaliers, 10-0, won the title of the Richmond Times-Dispatch Tournament Wednesday night by beating James Madison 57-44.

Until the game, James Madison also had been unbeaten, and Virginia didn't shake the Dukes until the final six minutes when All-American center Ralph Sampson led an 11-1 scoring burst.

The Dukes have only to wait until Saturday for their chance to avenge the loss. The two teams meet in a regular-season contest that day in Charlottesville, Va., the Cavaliers' home.

"Obviously, it was a much closer game than the score would indicate," Holland said. "Madison is an awfully good team, and I just wish we didn't have to play them again Saturday."

The Dukes, now 8-1, have a history of playing Virginia tough. Last season, Virginia escaped from Harrisonburg, Va. — the hometown of both the Dukes and Sampson — with a 53-52 victory.

"We had the Virginia folks on the edges of their seats," Dukes Coach Lou Campanelli said.

Sampson scored 22 points and had 14 rebounds, but he and his teammates were unable to make early victims of James Madison. The Dukes trailed by only three points on three occasions midway through the second half, that last time at 46-43 with six minutes left.

But Sampson hit a slam dunk, then stole the ball and fed Craig Robinson for another stuff that put Virginia up 50-43 with 5:39 to play. Robinson wound up with 12 points and Linton Townes had 14 for the Dukes.

In other games involving ranked teams, No. 6 Hawaii upset second-ranked Wichita State 84-74; No. 5 Arkansas clobbered Kent State 91-49, eighth-ranked DePaul beat Northern Illinois 55-46, 10th-rated Iowa downed Drake 60-49 and No. 17 Georgetown whipped Niagara 77-49.

The Top Ten

In Hawaii, 20th-ranked North Carolina State met Rice for the title of the Rainbow Classic, but the two teams had a tough act to follow.

Hawaii took fifth place with a 62-61 victory over Michigan State. In the seventh-place game, Cal State-Fullerton beat Bradley 64-62.

Scott Hastings' 18 points led five Arkansas players in double figures, and the 8-0 Razorbacks easily outmuscled Kent State. Arkansas led 42-20 at the half and 54-26 midway through the second 20 minutes. Marty Harmon led the Golden Flashes with 12 points.

Terry Cummings scored 17 of his 25 points in the second half to help DePaul defeat Northern Illinois. The 6-9 junior hit seven of eight shots from the floor in the second half to sort-circuit several Northern Illinois comeback attempts. DePaul, 9-1, led 29-24 at the half and by just five points, 51-46, with 1:16 to play. Allen Rayhorn led the Huskies with 15 points.

Michael Payne, a freshman, and Todd Berkenpas led Iowa over Drake. The Hawkeyes, 7-1, outscored Drake 9-2 down the stretch and their biggest lead of the game was the victory margin of 11 points. Payne scored 18 points and had 11 rebounds, and Berkenpas had 12 points. Ricky Watley scored 16 points for the Bulldogs.

The Second Ten

Patrick Ewing scored 20 points and led Georgetown, now 10-2, to its ninth straight victory, beating Niagara in the championship game of the Rochester Classic. Eric "Sleepy" Floyd had 16 points and directed an aggressive Hoyas defense that baffled the Purple Eagles. Mike Phillips topped Niagara with 15 points.

Columbia captured third place in the tournament with a 64-52 victory over Utah.

The Tournaments

Unbeaten Virginia Tech walloped Jacksonville 102-83 behind the 19 points of senior guard Jeff Schneider to win the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, Fla. Virginia Tech, 9-0, also got 16 points from Dale Solomon. Texas Tech won the consolation game, 84-78, over Boston College.

Chuck Aleksinas scored four points in the final 30 seconds to boost Connecticut over South Florida 57-50 in the title game of the Connecticut Mutual Classic at Hartford. Norman Bailey led the 8-1 Huskies with 14 points. South Florida has just two losses, to UConn and top-ranked North Carolina, in nine games. La Salle defeated St. Bonaventure 68-65 in the third-place game.

Kevin Richardson's two free throws with 32 seconds to play lifted William & Mary over Davidson for the championship of the Iron Duke Classic at Durham, N.C. In the consolation game, Duke defeated Auburn 72-71.

Brad Leaf scored 28 points in Evansville's 77-58 drubbing of Murray State in the championship game of the Evansville Holiday tournament. Eastern Illinois won the consolation game, 68-67, over Tennessee Tech.

Roosevelt Chapman scored 24 points, Mike Kaniecki had 22 and Paul Hawkins added 20 as Dayton won its own invitational tournament by beating Florida State 93-79. North Carolina-Charlotte beat Hofstra 70-60 in the third-place contest.

Zack Jones scored 21 points and San Diego State beat Temple 75-64 to win the Cabrillo Classic at San Diego. Baylor edged Florida 72-71 in the third-place game.

Jonathan Brown sank two free throws with 50 seconds left and blocked a shot by Eastern Montana's Ron Osborne in the final seconds to give San Jose State a 54-53 victory in the title game of the KOA Classic at Billings, Mont. In the consolation game, Gonzaga defeated St. Francis, N.Y., 65-51.

New Mexico's Larry Tarrance hit a layup with 30 seconds left to erase a 48-49 Fordham lead, and the Lobos scored a 51-49 victory over the Rams to win the Lobo Invitational in Albuquerque, N.M., for the 11th time. Marshall scored a 65-64 victory over Penn in the consolation game.

Kenneth Lyons, a 6-7 center, scored 26 points and helped North Texas State to a 76-73 victory over Northeast Louisiana in the title game of the Pacemaker Class at Monroe, La. In the third-place game, Alcorn State got by Southeastern Louisiana 54-53.

Unranked Teams

Oiver Robinson led Alabama-Birmingham, 8-3, over Tennessee-Chattanooga, 76-50, with his 22 points. Steve Burt, with 27 points, and Gary Springer, with 21, powered Iona, 8-2, over CNY 101-58.

Kansas State got 17 points from Tyrone Adams to beat Southern Illinois 82-53 and lift its record to 7-2. Howard McNeil hit a baseline jump shot that gave Seton Hall, now 7-1, a 79-77 victory over Florida Southern. Mike Wacker had 21 points and LaSalle Thompson added 14 points and 21 rebounds as Texas routed Xavier, Ohio, 97-71.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — William & Mary head basketball coach Bruce Parkhill credits his team's zone defense with victories over Auburn and Davidson as the Indians came away with the title in the two-day Iron Duke Classic basketball championship.

"Defensive rebounding was the key," Parkhill said after a 44-42 triumph over Davidson in the championship game Wednesday night. The Indians' coach explained that his 2-3 zone allowed his team to get position under the boards, preventing both Davidson and Auburn from getting second shots.

In the game for third place, Duke, now 3-5, got 29 points from Vince Taylor and reserve Dan Meagher scored the last three points of the game to lift the Blue Devils past Auburn, 72-71. The loss drops Auburn to 6-3.

William & Mary controlled the tempo in the early going against Davidson, and only some fine outside shooting by 6-foot-10 center Cliff Tribus kept the Wildcats close.

The Indians, now 6-1, went cold after building a 24-15 lead with 5:14 to go in the first half. Davidson, 4-6, took the lead early in the second half on a three-point play by Jamie Hall, and the two teams went nip-and-tuck until the end.

Reserve forward Keith Richardson's two free throws with 32 seconds left provided the winning margin. The points were the only ones Richardson scored in the game and came on a feed from Bill Barnes on a back-door play.

The play came after the Indians patiently held the ball for almost two minutes waiting for a good shot.

"Because we were patient and Davidson was patient it created a situation where every shot was a critical shot," Parkhill said. "I think we only took one or two bad shots the whole game. I can live with that."

Mike Strayhorn came off the bench to lead the Indians in scoring with 13, while Tribus paced Davidson with 21.

Parkhill, whose team surprised Auburn 58-48 in the first round, admitted afterward that he thought his team would have a tough time with the Tigers.

"I thought if we could get past Auburn, we'd have a good shot at it (the tournament title)," Parkhill said.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski was pleased with the way his team bounced back to beat Auburn after Tuesday's heart-breaking loss to Davidson on a shot by Tribus at the buzzer.

"I'm happy about the effort tonight," Krzyzewski said after the game. "We played very hard and played positively for 40 minutes."

The Blue Devil coach spurned his club's usual man-to-man defense in favor of a zone against Auburn.

"The zone didn't win the game though," Krzyzewski said. "In fact, our man-for-man did some nice things for us at the end."

Bowl Question: Can Clemson Hold To No. 1?

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Who's No. 1? For the moment, the answer to that perennial question is Clemson, the last remaining undefeated major college football team in America.

Fourth-ranked Nebraska will try to change that on Friday night's Orange Bowl, one of five major college football games New Year's Day and Night that could revise the rankings considerably.

The final Associated Press football poll will crown the national champion Sunday night, and a victory over the Cornhuskers would just about seal the verdict for Clemson. But a loss could throw the poll into a scramble, which is what it has been like for much of the 1981 college season.

Clemson is the seventh school to occupy the top rung in 1981, following Michigan, Notre Dame, Texas, Southern California, Penn State and Pittsburgh. All of those schools, except Notre Dame, will be playing bowl games either today or Friday.

Michigan, now 16th in the poll, faces No. 19 UCLA in tonight's Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston. That was one of three games on tap today. In the others, West Virginia played Florida in the Peach Bowl at Atlanta and Mississippi State faced Kansas in the Hall of Fame Bowl at Birmingham, Ala.

On Friday, Texas, ranked No. 6, goes against No. 3 Alabama in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas. The Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., an addition to the New Year's Day program, has No. 7 Penn State against No. 8 Southern California. Pitt, now 10th, faces defending national champion Georgia, ranked No. 2, in the Sugar Bowl New Year's night at New Orleans. That game will take place at the same time as the Clemson-Nebraska Orange Bowl showdown and much of the final poll standings depend on those two contests.

The Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., oldest of all the postseason contests, sends No. 13 Iowa against No. 12 Washington.

The postseason tempo began picking up steam in Wednesday night's Liberty Bowl when No. 15 Ohio State edged Navy 31-28.

Clemson carries a streak of 11 victories into the Orange Bowl against 9-2 Nebraska and Coach Danny Ford knows one more win would virtually seal the title.

Georgia, 10-1 this season after going undefeated en route to the national championship a year ago, is rooting openly for Nebraska against Clemson. The Bulldogs, who clinched the national title by winning in the Sugar Bowl against Notre Dame a year ago, are back in New Orleans, this time against Pitt. But the scoreboard and news of the Clemson-Nebraska Orange Bowl game will be as important to Georgia as the Panthers.

Alabama, in the No. 3 slot, figures it could move to the top, given the right combination of circumstance. First, the Crimson Tide would have to defeat No. 6 Texas in the Cotton Bowl and then hope both Georgia and Clemson lose.

"We would have to be very lucky, even if we won the game," said Coach Bear Bryant. "It could happen."

For years, New Year's day and night has belonged to the four major bowls — Rose, Sugar, Cotton and Orange. This year, though, the Fiesta has squeezed into the picture with an intriguing matchup between Penn State and Southern California.

Both schools have been No. 1 this season and both have standout running backs — Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen of USC, the first runner in college football to gain 2,000 yards in a single season, and Curt Warner of Penn State, who overcame a string of troubling injuries to gain 1,044 yards.

Warner was only the fourth runner in Penn State history to crack the 1,000-yard barrier, joining Lenny Moore, Lydell Mitchell and John Cappelletti. He enjoyed a big game in the Fiesta Bowl a year ago, rushing for 155 yards in a 31-19 victory over Ohio State. Included in his total was a 64-yard touchdown run on the first play from scrimmage.

The Fiesta kickoff is set for 1:30 p.m. EST and opens a marathon football programming day for NBC. After Penn State and USC, the network will show the Washington-Iowa Rose Bowl at 5 p.m. EST and then the Orange Bowl between Clemson and Nebraska at 8 p.m.

CBS will challenge for the afternoon football audience with the Cotton Bowl between Alabama and Texas beginning at 2 p.m. EST and ABC offers the Sugar Bowl between Pitt and Georgia. It will take some fancy dial twisting to catch all the contests.

ACC Proving It's Grid Loop Too

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — With only Clemson left to carry the flag, the Atlantic Coast Conference is on the verge of proving to the rest of the country that its vision isn't limited only to basketball.

Eleventh-ranked North Carolina proved the ACC to be a viable football power Monday night when it held off Arkansas for a 31-27 victory. The top-ranked Tigers will vie for the national championship Friday night in the Orange Bowl against Nebraska.

Pride in the fact that an ACC team had whipped a so-called football conference was quite evident on the floor of the fog-shrouded Gator Bowl in Jacksonville Monday night as the Tar Heels ran triumphantly off the field yelling, "A-C-C! A-C-C!"

The obvious showcase for the ACC gridiron wares appears to be the Gator Bowl, although several other conference members have appeared in the Orange, Sugar and Cotton bowls. Since 1971, the conference has been represented five times in Jacksonville with the hope of completing their seasons with some post-season glory.

North Carolina led that march, but its offense wound up doing stationary double-time in a 7-3 loss to Georgia. Clemson had back-to-back visits starting in 1977. After an embarrassing 34-3 loss to Pittsburgh, the Tigers downed Ohio State 17-15 in a duel which saw Woody Hayes slug Clemson linebacker Charlie Bauman and lose his job the next day because of it. The Tar Heels returned in 1979 as decided underdogs to Michigan, ignored the forecasters and upset the Wolverines, 17-15.

It is quite apparent that the ACC is happy with its relationship with the Gator Bowl. But officials of the game say they would like to keep that relationship platonic.

George Olsen, executive vice president of the Gator Bowl, says the idea of a marriage between the ACC and the game has been mentioned, but a long time ago.

"We discussed it six to seven years ago informally," he says. "We just said that we would discuss it with the athletic directors and see what their thoughts were."

Those thoughts were to keep the options on both sides open, meaning the conference is free to choose its bowl and the Gator Bowl is open for any team the selection committee feels is fit.

"You're able to move in a lot more directions if you're not connected to a particular team or a particular league," says Olsen. "In our situation, if they get a New Year's Day bid, they're going to take it."

In this case, North Carolina's options reportedly were open, with a bid to the Fiesta Bowl rumored to be available. But the Tar Heels chose Florida over Arizona, and Olsen and the rest of the Gator Bowl folks are happy they did.

"Everybody was pleased with it from the selection committee right on through," he adds. "People in Jacksonville enjoyed having them here."

Tiger Defense Set For Orange

MIAMI (AP) — If Clemson's defense could limit Herschel Walker to 111 yards, it should be able to bottle up Nebraska's two tailbacks long enough Friday night for the top-ranked Tigers to beat No. 4 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, says cornerback Hollis Hall.

After all, Hall noted, Clemson fielded Walker, No. 2 Georgia's All-American sophomore, to just 3.96 yards per carry and forced the Bulldogs to fumble five times in a 13-3 victory over the defending national champions.

It was Walker's worst game this season, and Hall said he hoped the Tigers, 11-0, could handle Roger Craig and Mike Rozier as well.

"We've played against a tailback of that caliber before. Herschel Walker is one of the best in the nation," said Hall, a 5-foot-10, 174-pound senior from Seneca, S.C.

But facing two great backs might be another story. Although the Tigers were No. 7 in the nation against the run this season, yielding an average of 88.7 yards, Craig and Rozier anchored the second-best rushing attack in college football. They paired up for more than 2,000 yards as Nebraska, 9-2, averaged 330.5 yards a game on the ground.

Buckeyes Hold Off Navy, 31-28

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Jimmy Gayle, Ohio State's No. 2 tailback, has a bone to pick with the oddsmakers for the Liberty Bowl.

The Big Ten football co-champions, favored by 14 points, narrowly staved off a Navy rally to win the postseason classic 31-28 Wednesday night.

"Actually," said Gayle, "we were the underdogs because of everything that was written about the game. That helped Navy."

Gayle's touchdown runs of one and two yards earned him the honor as Ohio State's top offensive player in the game.

His last score put the Buckeyes ahead to stay 24-20 late in the third quarter.

The Buckeyes, 9-3, shattered a four-game bowl losing streak without much help from their principal weapon, Art Schlichter.

Starting his 48th straight college game, the Buckeyes' senior quarterback managed only 11 completions in 26 tries for 159 yards, although he did throw touchdown passes of 50 and 9 yards to Gary Williams and Cedric Anderson, respectively.

Schlichter was in tears afterward, saying: "I was a little off tonight. I have played good and we lost. I was poor and now we win."

In fact, Navy sophomore quarterback Marco Pagnanelli outdueled his more heralded opponent. Pagnanelli, despite suffering a head injury, hit 14 of 27 passes for 201 yards and two touchdowns, each for one yard to tight end Greg Pajohn.

The last came with eight seconds left. The same combination clicked for two extra points, but the rally died when Ohio State recovered the following on-side kickoff.

George Welsh, Navy's winningest coach ever who is heading for the University of Virginia next week, said: "I'm a little disappointed we couldn't do it. I wanted the upset. I don't think there's such a thing as a moral victory."

When Adrian Dantley picked up Larry Bird, Boston Coach Bill Fitch picked up an edge.

"They put Dantley on Bird at the first and once we saw him on Bird, we ran a lot of low-post stuff," said Fitch. "Dantley's not a tall player and that gave us an advantage."

The result was that Bird got Dantley in foul trouble early, and that helped turn Wednesday night's National Basketball Association game around as the Boston Celtics defeated the Utah Jazz 121-110.

"They took A.D. out with fouls, really, with Bird on him," said Utah Coach Frank Layden. "He picked up three quick fouls. The Celtics have credibility and we don't and that's why they can manhandle us."

Saddled with fouls, Utah's high-powered scorer missed most of the second quarter and only contributed four points before the half as the Celtics ran up a 66-51 lead at intermission. The Celtics scored 14 straight points at one stage.

"I don't know if it was the fresh unit we had in or the fresh players," said Fitch. "We just ran the ball well at the time and hit the shots."

In other NBA action, it was Philadelphia 102, Seattle 99; Phoenix 113, Portland 112; New Jersey 130, Detroit 119; San Diego 94, Atlanta 91; Milwaukee 107, Washington 103; New York 110, Cleveland 108 in overtime; Kansas City 120, Denver 116, and San Antonio 109, Houston 104.

The Celtics outscored the Jazz 35-24 in the second quarter to take their 15-point lead at halftime. Although Dantley wound up with 23 points, the Jazz could get no closer than 11 in the second half.

Nate Archibald finished with 22 for the Celtics.

"We played a very good team, a team that played very well," said Layden. "The Celtics run well, post up well. It's a credit to their great coach."

76ers 102, SuperSonics 99

Andrew Toney's 18-foot jumper with 20 seconds left broke a 99-99 tie and helped Philadelphia beat Seattle. The victory kept Philadelphia a half-game in front of Boston in the Eastern Division race and snapped Seattle's nine-game home winning streak. Philadelphia has won four straight against Seattle.

Toney scored 28 points for Philadelphia, while Seattle's Gus Williams led all scorers with 31 points.

Suns 113, Trail Blazers 112

Len "Truck" Robinson scored a game-high 30 points to lead Phoenix over Portland. The Trail Blazers had a chance to either tie or win the game with three seconds left but forward Calvin Natt missed two free throws.

Center Mychal Thompson, who had 11 clutch fourth-period points, said the Trail Blazers' final play "was supposed to go to me."

"If it broke down, which it did, we were supposed to freelaunch and go from there," added Thompson. "(Alvan) Adams overplayed on defense and did a great job."

Kings 120, Nuggets 116

Larry Drew scored a career-high 27 points and handed out 10 assists to power Kansas City over Denver. Drew, substituting for the Kings' injured play-making guard Phil Ford, scored 19 points in the first half. Neither team led by more than five points until Kansas City scored eight straight points early in the fourth quarter to build a 106-96 advantage.

Denver forward Alex English led all scorers with 30 points.

Spurs 109, Rockets 104

George Gervin scored 42 points and San Antonio outscored Houston 10-4 in the final four minutes to defeat the Rockets. It was the second straight night Gervin hit more than 40 points and sent the "Iceman" over 18,000 points for his nine-year professional career.

The Rockets trailed by 10 points twice early in the fourth quarter, but Moses Malone struck for 12 of his 24 points in the period and Houston pulled ahead 100-99 with 3:51 left. At that point, Dave Corzine hit a 15-foot jumper to put San Antonio ahead for good.

Clippers 94, Hawks 91

Michael Brooks scored 21 points as San Diego broke a nine-game losing streak by beating Atlanta. Brooks' field goal with 3:12 left put the Clippers ahead for good at 86-85, and he added a critical free throw at the one-minute mark.

Joe Bryant added 18 points for the Clippers as they won only their second road game of the year. Atlanta was led by Eddie Johnson's 30 points.

Bucks 107, Bullets 103

Brian Winters came off the bench to score 15 of his 29 points in the final quarter to help Milwaukee beat Washington. Winters scored 16 straight points late in the third quarter and early in the fourth. After a basket by Scott May and a layup by the Bullets' Spencer Haywood, a Winters jump shot on a fastbreak gave the Bucks the lead for good at 100-98 with 3:02 left.

Sidney Moncrief had 21 points for Milwaukee and Bob Lanier 15. Johnson led Washington with 21 and Haywood had 20.

Knicks 110, Cavaliers 108

Maurice Lucas scored 20 points, including the clinching basket in overtime, to give New York a close victory over Cleveland.

With time running out in overtime and New York up by a basket, Michael Ray Richardson stole the ball from Cleveland's Don Ford and dribbled the length of the court. Richardson passed to Lucas, who scored with four seconds left.

Cleveland's Kenny Carr finished with a season-high 32 points.

Clippers 94, Hawks 91

Michael Brooks scored 21 points as San Diego broke a nine-game losing streak by beating Atlanta. Brooks' field goal with 3:12 left put the Clippers ahead for good at 86-85, and he added a critical free throw at the one-minute mark.

Joe Bryant added 18 points for the Clippers as they won only their second road game of the year. Atlanta was led by Eddie Johnson's 30 points.

Bucks 107, Bullets 103

Brian Winters came off the bench to score 15 of his 29 points in the final quarter to help Milwaukee beat Washington. Winters scored 16 straight points late in the third quarter and early in the fourth. After a basket by Scott May and a layup by the Bullets' Spencer Haywood, a Winters jump shot on a fastbreak gave the Bucks the lead for good at 100-98 with 3:02 left.

Sidney Moncrief had 21 points for Milwaukee and Bob Lanier 15. Johnson led Washington with 21 and Haywood had 20.

Cleveland's Kenny Carr finished with a season-high 32 points.

Impact Of Russian Boy's Custody Decision Unclear

By KEITHE LEIGHTY
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — The parents of a Soviet boy who refused to leave the United States with them have won a custody suit here, but the youth's fate is far from being decided because of appeals and another, possibly more important, lawsuit.

Walter Polovchak became a permanent U.S. resident after a juvenile court granted custody to the state of Illinois. But the Illinois Court of Appeals ruled Wednesday the state had no custody rights.

The parents' lawyers interpreted the ruling as saying that Polovchak, 14, must be reunited with his parents, who will decide where he lives. Lawyers for the boy say the appeals court merely struck down custody rights for the state without extending the rights to anyone else.

Henry Holzer, one of Walter Polovchak's lawyers, said the decision was therefore meaningless and it would be appealed to the Illinois Supreme Court.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which represents Michael and Anna Polovchak, hailed the appeals decision and said the parents will come back to the United States to get their son and will then leave the country again.

Walter Polovchak now lives in Chicago with foster parents. He was vacationing in Jamaica when the ruling was issued.

There is another court case that may decide the matter. ACLU lawyer Harvey Grossman conceded that a pending suit in U.S. District court in Chicago over the residency declaration may be the last word on the issue. There has been no indication when the court will rule.

Walter Polovchak sparked an international controversy in July 1980 when, at the age of 12, he ran away from his parents as they prepared to return to the Soviet Union after a six-month stay in the U.S.

A younger child went back to the Ukraine with the parents. An older sister also stayed behind. Her refusal to return to the Soviet Union was not an issue, however, because she is an adult.

U.S. immigration officials granted the boy asylum and permanent residency, and the juvenile court gave the state custody. The ACLU went to court against both actions.

In the 2-1 ruling Wednesday, the appeals court said juvenile courts have no jurisdiction in asylum cases, and Judge Helen McGillicuddy, who wrote the decision, questioned the juvenile court's political motives.

Had the parents relocated elsewhere in the United States and decided not to go back to the Soviet Union, she wrote, "we have serious doubt as to whether the state would have intervened."

The state had argued at the time that Polovchak was a minor in need of supervision because he had run away.

The ACLU said it was trying to contact Polovchak's parents by telephone to notify them of the decision.

Holzer maintains the family's decision to leave the country without the son amounts to abandonment. He said an adoption petition filed by Polovchak's aunt, Anastasia Junko of Santa Barbara, Calif., claims the parents are unfit.

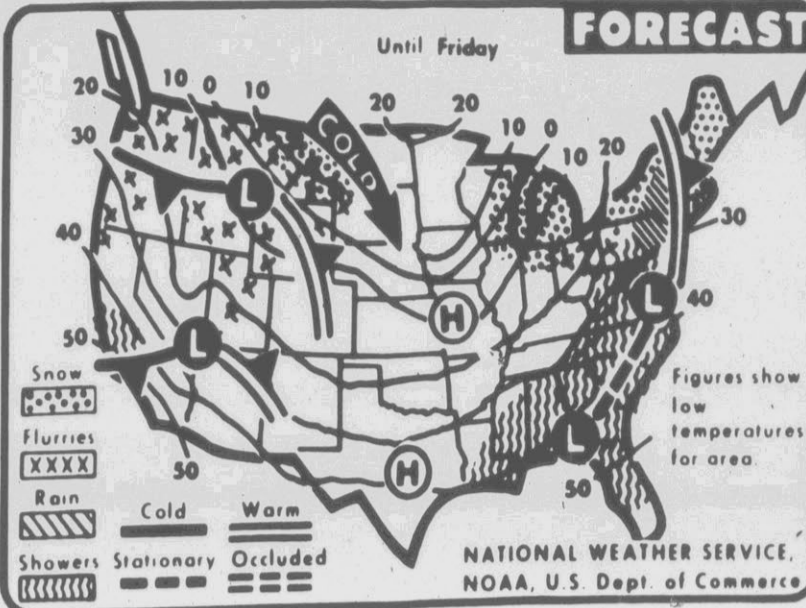

Ted Giorgetti, acting director of the Chicago office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, said the impact of the court ruling has not been assessed by the INS and he declined comment.

Patrick Murphy, the Cook County public guardian, said the length of the separation made a reunion unlikely. "Once a kid is away from his parents for over a year and the kid doesn't want to go back, the court can't force him," Murphy said.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Showers are expected in the forecast period, Thursday until Friday morning, for the eastern Gulf and Atlantic coast states. Snow flurries are expected for the Northwest. Very cold weather is forecast for the north-central states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Cloudy wet weather are forecast for the rest of 1981, the National Weather Service reported today.

A developing low pressure center over southern Louisiana is spreading rain and as the storm system moves slowly northeast the rain should continue across North Carolina into early New Year's Day.

Some problems are likely to occur over the western part of the state as precipitation begins this morning. Cold northeasterly winds will cause precipitation to start as sleet and freezing rain in the western Piedmont, foothills, and mountains.

The storm system will move across the Carolinas tonight. Rain may be heavy at times over central and eastern North Carolina. The precipitation should taper off as the storm moves off shore early Friday. But a stationary front may linger just to our south keeping mostly cloudy skies in our area until Saturday.

Overnight, precipitation moved rapidly from the southern gulf states through Georgia and South Carolina to the southern sections of North Carolina. Temperatures have ranged from the middle 20s over the northern interior to the upper 30s in southern coastal sections.

Recreational weather outlook: In general, weather will be unfavorable for outdoor activities during the next 24 hours. Along the coast and over the sounds, small craft advisories remain in effect for strong northeast winds this morning becoming southeast later today.

About 160 newspeople were hired to run CNN2, the vast majority of them writers, editors and producers, Schonfeld said. He said the same newsgathering operation would serve both networks, but that CNN and CNN2 would be distinct in format and appearance.

CAMA Study Set To Begin

RALEIGH — The Legislative Research Commission study committee will hold an organizational meeting Jan. 12 for its review of rules governing the Coastal Area Management Act.

Members of the committee, headed by Sen. Melvin R. Daniels Jr. of Pasquotank County and Rep. Charles Douglas Evans of Dare County, will determine what issues, problems or concerns will be studied. The organizational meeting will be held at 10:30 a.m. in the Legislative Building.

Public input to the meeting may be made by contacting the co-chairmen at the following addresses: Daniels, 604 E. Main St., Elizabeth City, N.C. 27909; Evans, P.O. Box 189, Manteo, N.C. 27954.

24-Hour News Plan Starting

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Cable News Network, the pioneer in 24-hour TV news, gets another jump on the competition tonight with CNN2, the first round-the-clock news headline service for cable systems.

The development — a quarter hour this side of 1982 — comes with Ted Turner's CNN approaching the financial break-even point after 18 months in business. Reese Schonfeld, CNN's president, said the second network will lose about $1 million a month at the start.

CNN2 is patterned loosely after all-news radio, with continuously updated half-hour news segments through much of the day. The so-called news "wheel" will be expanded to an hour in length at 7 p.m. EST, with similar 60-minute cycles at 8 and 9, Schonfeld said.

"It's our headline service, highly visual, with stories updated constantly," Schonfeld said by phone Wednesday from CNN's Atlanta headquarters. "It really meets the weaknesses some people found in CNN, when they often felt they had to wait too long for a specific story."

"Right now," he said, "I'm watching a half-hour of Polish television — translated — on CNN. CNN2 would never do that."

The similarly conceived Satellite NewsChannel, a joint venture of ABC News and Westinghouse Broadcasting, is scheduled for debut in the spring. The Jan. 1 sign-on gives CNN2 a big head start.

Cable News Network, introduced June 1, 1980, now serves more than 10 million homes, and CNN2 will reach about 800,000 at the start. Schonfeld said CNN, supported by advertising revenue and a subscriber fee paid by cable systems, lost $150,000 in November. The network anticipated losses of about $2 million a month at the start, though the monthly deficit reportedly was much greater than that.

"This school is our home, we think it's worth defending."

Christie's 'Murder Is Easy' Goes Modern

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Agatha Christie might have been shocked — more likely amused — by what Lesley-Anne Down wears in "Murder is Easy." Or by what the characters say to one another:

"Dreadful thing, these drugs," the constable tells Luke Williams after Miss Waynflete's maid is found dead in her room, "though I guess it's just routine for you sir, you being an American."

"Love your squad car," Williams responds as the policeman pedals off.

The dialogue and Miss Down's costumes — split-skirt, low-cut and backless — notwithstanding, it's Agatha Christie in temper and style — civilized and slow-moving, with everyone but Williams and the constable a prime suspect at one time or another.

Bill Bixby is Luke Williams, Miss Down plays Bridget Conway, and Olivia deHavilland, Helen Hayes and Timothy West co-star in two-hour, made-for-TV movie to be broadcast at 9 EST Saturday.

Bixby is known primarily as a television actor — "The Incredible Hulk," "My Favorite Martian" — while Miss Down's experience is largely on the stage and in theatrical motion pictures, including "A Little Night Music" and "The Great Train Robbery."

The late Mrs. Christie has been a notable presence on American TV in the last year or so. The Mobil Corp. brought two Christie thrillers 'cross the Atlantic for syndication last season, "Why Didn't They Ask Evans?" and "The Seven Dials Mystery."

Both, though as true to author as possible, were almost excruciatingly long — "Why Didn't They Ask Evans?" ran three hours — and were a mite hard to follow. "Murder is Easy" suffers from the first complaint, but the dialogue in the American-made production is a good deal less arcane.

Sample: "You're going to regret this, you stupid idiot," the fired chauffeur shouts across the yard at Lord Easterfield.

Williams, a college professor from MIT who's just written a book called "Probability and Chance," runs into Lavinia Fullerton, played by Miss Hayes, on a train passing through the English countryside.

THEY'LL CELEBRATE — NBC "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson will celebrate arrival of 1982 with four former Playboy centerfolds on New Year's Eve, Thursday. The women, from left, are Michele Drake,

Nikki Thomas, Heidi Sorenson (top right) and Sondra Theodore. The former playmates will perform a song and dance routine on the program. (AP Laserphoto)

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, JAN. 1, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Start the New Year right by eliminating confused conditions or muddled thinking which has been part of your life in the past. Engage in activities today that you especially enjoy.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Attend to important personal chores early in the day. Make plans to cut down on expenses at home and in the outside world.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You have good creative thoughts now and you should use them to advantage without delay. Show that you have poise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study a new project you have in mind and make sure you understand it well. Strive for harmony with family members.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Make sure you check for possible mistakes where finances are concerned. Visit friends during spare time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Handle personal affairs which require your attention on the first day of the New Year since they are important to your future welfare.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A personal aim is closer to achieving than you realize, so apply a little more effort now. Take time to engage in favorite hobby.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Calculate how far you have advanced in a project you have started and employ the best way to complete it. Express happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) A goal which has been difficult to gain in the past can be easily attained now. Take no chances with your health.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Good day to contact close ties and gain the support you need. Be sensible in handling responsibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you want to engage in a new form of self-expression be sure you get as much data on the subject as possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show more consideration for the one you love now and add to your happiness. Take needed health treatments.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Discuss mutual projects with friends and improve the relationships with them. Sidestep one who likes to argue.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be successful in any endeavor, provided you give the right kind of education. The field of medicine would be an excellent choice. Be sure to give praise when deserved and raise the incentive. Teach good manners.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Answer to yesterday's puzzle:

CRYPTOQUIP 12-31

ZX YMZ VHYF JMGP DCKK TKMGXP
 VHKKXF ZHPD GXTXP TDNHGPJCG
 K M M P

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — QUERULOUS JUVENILE DELINQUENT JUST NEEDS GOOD GOING-OVER.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: H equals I

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

The Man in The Middle

Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru, the compromise choice for U.N. Secretary-General, takes office tomorrow. Many analysts believe that, like his four predecessors, he will be a "man in the middle," between East-West conflicts, during his five-year term. Such conflicts actually forced the first Secretary-General Trygve Lie of Norway out of office. He was labelled pro-Soviet because he defended the right of U.S. communists to work in the U.N. and anti-Arab for his support of Israel. Finally, during U.N. involvement in Korea, he resigned in a flurry of criticism that he was anti-Soviet. Perez has described the job he faces as a delicate balance of being both "bold and cautious."

DO YOU KNOW — Which Secretary General, other than Perez, was from a "Third World" country?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — All the King's Men by Robert Penn Warren is based on the life of Huey Long. 12-31-81 VEC, Inc. 1981

Post Office Sets Holiday

The Greenville Post Office will close to observe the New Year's Day holidays on Jan. 1, according to H. Lloyd Mills, Greenville postmaster. The following services will be provided:

- No deliveries will be made by rural and city carriers.
- No window service will be provided.
- Mail will be delivered to post office boxes.
- Special delivery mail will be delivered within the city.
- A special 3 p.m. holiday collection will be made from all collection boxes that have specified time indicated on the side of the box. This collection will be dispatched at 5:30 p.m. The self-service postal unit located in the lobby of the main post office will supply customers with most postal supplies and permit them to mail parcels.

JOB CANDIDATES

BOSTON (AP) — A person whose age-salary ratio is better than average for his job is an above-average job candidate, says an executive recruiter.

According to Steven M. Garfinkle of Richards Consultants Ltd., an executive-recruiting firm, other factors that make a person a good job candidate include:

- Schools attended and degrees earned, plus any special training or ability.

Japan Zeroes Technology In On Computer Chips

By C.W. MIRANKER
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Japanese zeroed in on cameras, televisions, cars and steel and ran away from nearly everyone. Now the battleground is a tiny computer chip called a 64K RAM, and so far they are winning again.

That does not necessarily mean doomsday for American semiconductor companies. But it is a major strategic victory for the Japanese, one they could parlay into domination in computer memory devices, then perhaps other aspects of the industry and even the world computer market, some industry officials fear.

"If you're strong in advanced technology, then you can do the other things simply," says Daniel Klesken of Dataquest, a market research company in Cupertino, on the edge of California's Silicon Valley. "If you're in tip-top shape for the Boston Marathon... then everything else is duck soup."

A 64K RAM stores data — four times as much as the most powerful "dynamic random access memory" previously available, the 16K RAM. Linked with equally tiny logic chips, memory circuits are the brains of hundreds of electronic products, from computers to video games.

The new chip now commands only 5 percent of the total memory market, but new generations of computers are being designed around its huge capacity memory, Klesken says. In four years, he says, that percentage will quadruple, making the 64K RAM the most lucrative semiconductor component ever — the first to reach $1 billion in sales and maybe as much as $2 billion.

Only four companies — Fujitsu, Hitachi, Motorola and Texas Instruments — are shipping the chips in volume. The Japanese have cornered 70 percent of the early 64K RAM market, and as the market matures, they are likely to control 60 percent to 80 percent, Klesken predicts.

"Americans pioneered all this stuff; all the ideas and technology come from America, mostly right here in Silicon Valley," he says. "It's kind of unfortunate to see that lead slip away."

Not everyone, however, foresees U.S. defeat in the strong challenge the Japanese have mounted.

"There is no reason to believe that their head start gives them a permanent advantage," a recent Electronics magazine editorial asserts.

Warren Davis of the Semiconductor Industry Association says: "The 64K RAM... is just getting off the ground. It's like spring training saying who's going to win the World Series. We're in spring training for the 64K RAM."

American companies that are getting ready for 64K RAM production include Intel, National, Mostek, AMD, Immos and Fairchild. One reason for the late entries, industry officials say, may be design efforts to give RAMs higher speed and "redundancy," extra bits on a chip that can be programmed to replace defective cells.

Intel, which introduced the first generations of random access memory chips and sampled some 64K RAMs only to withdraw them, is "confident of doing quite well" with its revamped and soon-to-be-marketed version, says Intel executive Jim Jarrett.

"The real marketing period for the device will be 1982 to 1987," he says. And as more companies begin marketing 64K RAMs, the Japanese share will drop, he predicts. "We don't think that ultimately anyone will have more than a 20 percent share in the 64K RAM market."

More important, "the 64K RAM is not a lever that is going to bring any special position to the Japanese in other aspects of the semiconductor market," Jarrett insists. "Their presence is not going to decimate the industry. They're not going to be able to control the industry as they have in color televisions."

The reason — "the competitive posture of the American industry," he says.

The U.S. steel industry, for example, Jarrett says, is characterized by "an outmoded capital base and... manufacturers that haven't been pushed very hard from the very beginning in terms of competition within the industry." The American electronics business, on the other hand, has always been very competitive, international, dynamic and growth-oriented, he argues.

High-technology companies also have plowed "a large percentage of their revenue dollar back into research and new product development," says Richard Anderson, general manager of Hewlett Packard's computer systems division. "That probably wasn't true in other areas (industries) where we lost market position to the Japanese," he says.

But Intersil executive Jack Gifford says the semiconductor market could, nonetheless, fall prey to the Japanese.

"Whether it's automobiles, steel or memory, here's the way they operate: their government will subsidize one industry until they become dominant — until other companies can't stand to break even or lose money any longer — they run everybody else out... then they own the market," he says.

Coupled with this market-intensive approach is manufacturing intensity. Making a 64K RAM — essentially 64,000 identical little cells, each storing one binary bit of information, a one or a zero — is "rather low-technology... a batch-fabrication process," Gifford says.

The Japanese are "excellent" at that process: adapting and refining RAMs, making them more producible, faster, smaller, higher-yielding, says Tom Humphrey of American Microsystems. Production is also subject to the same kinds of refinements.

Development costs of Japanese components, because they are made by companies that also manufacture computers, can be spread over other parts of the business. And once on the market, they can afford to be loss leaders for some time without shareholders clamoring for profit.

The result is memories "so inexpensive that it's hardly profitable for an American company to build them," Humphrey says. "It's certainly true of the 16K; it's not necessarily true yet of the 64K."

As government-subsidized Japanese products soak up more and more profit, American companies may not see enough return on investment to build the next-generation product, Gifford fears.

"I'm not trying to be that dramatic, but it's a legitimate scenario," he says. "It doesn't have to do with technology leadership, it has to do with economics."

Taxing Japanese components imported into the United States would offset to some degree government subsidies and cooperative research among Japanese companies, industry officials say.

Another fighting strategy is to make a "niche in a narrower segment of this huge market," says Anderson. "Maybe the key, if you're a Silicon Valley-type company, would come in being able to identify a particular segment of the market, say memory, gate-arrays, microprocessors, statics, and really do such an extremely good job... that you'd be second to nobody."

But while dynamic RAMs are the single largest component in the memory market, there are many other memory devices and not all may be susceptible to Japan's "refinement" tactics, industry people say.

With service-oriented and customized chips, it might be difficult for "a Japanese company to compete on equal terms for the domestic United States market," Humphrey says.

In microprocessors, American companies are definite leaders in design and programming, officials agree. Instead of having one cell that is repeated 64,000 times, a microprocessor could have 30,000 transistors, all different. So Japan's "opportunity for refinement as a major competitive edge is much less in that area," Humphrey says.

American companies aiming at preeminence in microprocessors also hope to recapture some of the market for the memory built into them, Gifford says.

Whichever approach is taken, industry officials say, U.S. chip makers will not allow the early Japanese lead go unchallenged.

"American companies are fighters in the marketplace," Davis says.

Protection Class Set

AYDEN — An eight-week self-protection course will be offered at the community building beginning Jan. 6 at 7 p.m.

The course will stress a practical approach to self-defense and personal protection and include basic kick, strike and block Karate techniques. Physical conditioning involving balance, flexibility and endurance will also be developed.

Charles June, a second-degree black belt Karate competitor, will be the instructor. June has taught self-defense in eastern North Carolina for the past 15 years.

The first session will include registration and a demonstration of the goals and objectives of the course.

Interested persons, according to community schools information director Barry Gaskins, may pre-register at the Pitt County Community Schools office, 752-6106, ext. 249, or the Ayden Recreation Department, 746-4152. The course is open to those 12 years old or above.
