Politics ... In Space?

By KATHY BAKER
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — As earthlings venture into outer space, they'll take along with them an invisible but inescapable cargo — politics, says an assistant professor at the University of Texas.

Nathan Goldman is preparing his students for what he sees as a brave new world outside the earth's atmosphere with an innovative course called "The Politics of Outer Space."

The 31-year-old Goldman first taught the course in the spring of 1981. It attracted about 280 students. He's teaching the course again this year, and enrollment is up to about 360 students ready to study space politics as a legitimate science.

"The whole world is being drawn into an international web of interdependence," Goldman said in an interview, "and it's being re-emphasized by space. There are half a dozen treaties and a lot of agreements that create a body of law for space."

Goldman said his course outline starts with current policy toward space, covers the increasing efforts of countries other than the United States and Soviet Union to get there, and then goes into his projections for the future.

"The first part of the course is really an American government course" that describes the agencies, interest groups and processes of the U.S. space program, Goldman said.

Private industry is wed to the idea of capitalism in outer space, he said, and that creates a need for a coherent national space policy.

"It's not just a domestic issue — for instance, what about damages? — but through space treaties, we also have international obligations," Goldman said. "The nation is responsible for the actions in space of its nationals, and there's absolute liability for space damages. So there needs to be some kind of regulation.

"But who's supposed to regulate? FAA? NASA? The State Department? It's not at all clear who's supposed to do it.

"Space is becoming an important policy area, an integral part of national and international power," he said. "Right now everything's sort of hit and miss. There's no organized space policy, no over-arching goals."

As more humans venture into space, Goldman said, they'll carry with them "the whole worldwide competition, the balance of power, blocs, all of it is going from earth to space as well."

So observance of laws in space will be crucial, Goldman said, and anarchy can't be tolerated. "Space is too crowded for that, ironic as that sounds."

Once Goldman convinces his students that it's only a matter of time before "space politics" becomes a common subject, he moves on to every science fiction buff's favorite subject — the future.

Emphasizing the caveat "if things continue as they are now," Goldman predicted, "the Russians will have a permanent space station by the mid-to-late 80s. And I believe the Russians will be on Mars by the year 2000. Where we will be, there's no way to know, because we don't have a policy."

At a conference called "A Case for Mars" earlier this year, Goldman said, he learned that a manned landing on Mars is not that far-fetched, because of improved technology.

"We were shown some figures that said it would cost less to go to Mars than it cost to go to the Moon. That was shocking."

Goldman said there is yet to be a compelling reason to put people on Mars, though he believes humans will be forced to seek survival in outer space.

"We're running out of food, we're running out of natural resources, we're running out of space — Earth space, that is — everything. But space offers most of those things," he said. "In the long run, it's the best answer for Earth."

"One reason eventually to go to Mars is that, even though it's kinda cold there — like Antarctica — it's the closest thing to a habitable planet we have in this solar system."

"Looking a bit into the future — beyond my time, I'm afraid — Mars could be made livable. Right now it's inhospitable and nobody in their right mind would want to go there."

Ghana Struck By Overthrow

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Armed soldiers roamed the streets of Ghana's capital, Accra, today, looting shops and committing "barbaric acts," Accra Radio said in a report monitored here.

A dusk-to-dawn curfew has been ordered and the country's borders and international airport remain closed.

The radio had earlier reported that the capital and the rest of the country were calm following Thursday's military coup that toppled the government of President Hilla Limann. The radio broadcast did not explain the nature of the "barbaric acts."

Accra Radio quoted the ruling Provisional National Defense Council, headed by ex-air force Lt. Jerry J. Rawlings, as calling on all civilians to hand over arms and on all police and military officers who had not yet done so to report to their barracks.

"There is no need for looting and indiscriminate acts," said a council statement.

There was no clear indication whether there were casualties in Thursday's coup.

DRY ICE FEEDBACK

In response to the Hotline appeal for dry ice, a Hotline reader says that she buys canned dry ice — 12 cans to the case — and keeps it for her own use and for friends. It's great, she says, to take to the grocery store and keep perishables in good condition, no matter what the weather. She orders hers from Boyle-Midway Co., 685 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017; phone, 212-986-1900.

HOME COMPUTER CLUB?

Are there any home computer clubs in this area? R.C.

A home computer club is just forming. Its first meeting was held in mid-December and its next is planned for Jan. 14, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 218 of Ragsdale Hall on the East Carolina University. The meeting is for everyone owning or interested in owning a home computer, a founder of the club, Rick Athey said. For more information, contact Athey at 757-6439 or 756-8793.

JAIL VISITING HOURS

I would like to know why the visiting hours are not posted on the outside of the county jail. I think they should be posted, along with some kind of instructions about pushing the button so someone can let you in. J.C.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said his department has no objection to posting the visiting hours, but he has heard no complaints before. He says they like to keep the jail looking neat and nice, so signs are not posted.

The visiting hours are 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Thursdays and Sundays.

Fleming House Work Approved By Chamber

Directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce have given the go ahead for a $223,000 budget to restore the historic Fleming House in Greenville.

The house will be used as new quarters for the chamber when the relocation is completed.

Tommy Edwards, chairman of the building committee, told the board Thursday that "restoration will include a slate roof, painting of the outside and complete restoration of the inside of the 80-year-old home that was built for N.C. State Senator James L. Fleming."

The Bill Clark Construction Co. was awarded the contract for the restoration at a cost of $196,000. Clark estimated the restoration will take approximately eight months after work is begun. Dudley and Shoe have served as the architects for the restoration project.

Board Chairman Bob Griffin said, "This is a highlight of this year for me and our chamber of commerce. While (the) ... decision has been a long time coming, it has been worth it."

Griffin said, "City officials have been very cooperative and have made every effort possible to work with the chamber in seeing that this project will be a landmark and a new front door for the city and area."

"The interest of the historical societies — Greenville Area Preservation and the Pitt County Historical Association, as well as Greenville Utilities and the N.C. State Department of History and Archives — have been an asset to us in this project."

Griffin also welcomed newly elected board members for 1982 — Dr. Ed Monroe, Arnold Parris, Kay Whitehurst, Dr. Jim Carter, Jack Edwards, Dick Flye, Parker Overton, Howard Wilson, Bill Clark, Larry Mallard, Mayor Percy Cox, County Commissioners Burney Tucker and Charles Gaskins.

Larkin Little, who succeeded Griffin as chairman of the board, proposed a resolution honoring Griffin. The resolution was adopted.

The board also approved Little's proposed program of work budget for $186,701.

Ice, Snow, Rain Storms Greet '82

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

New Year's storms brought skiers some of the best snow in years, but many roads in the Rockies and Midwest were closed by drifts and a parade in Atlanta was canceled after six high school majorettes were taken to a hospital suffering from the cold.

Four people died when a plane crashed in snow and fog in Colorado and accidents on snowy roads in Iowa and Wisconsin claimed four more lives.

Rain in California threatened to dampen the Rose parade for the first time in 27 years and revelers in New York City's Times Square toasted 1982 in a light drizzle.

Winter storm warnings were posted in the Colorado Rockies after 18 inches of snow Thursday triggered 40 avalanches, closing mountain passes and stirring up near-blizzard conditions. Another 16 inches of snow was expected by tonight.

At Bear Valley Ski Resort in California's Sierra Nevada, 4 feet of fresh snow fell this week. "Business is the best it has been in years," said Donna Hinojosa, assistant manager. "Everybody's sold out up to 60 miles away...It's roaring great guns."

An avalanche closed Emerald Bay Road near Lake Tahoe and motorists inched along in heavy traffic on the icy main highways.

Idaho 55 was closed between Nampa and Marsing New Year's Eve as winds whipped new snow and dropped the wind-chill factor to minus 25.

In Philadelphia, the 82nd annual Mummers Parade was postponed today because of inclement weather and was rescheduled for Saturday, officials said.

Six girls from North Clayton High Schools' ROTC program waiting for the start of Atlanta's Peach Bowl Parade were taken to Grady Memorial hospital suffering from hypothermia, or life-threatening loss of body heat. The high in Atlanta was only 36 degrees, and the parade was called off Thursday.

Emory Baldwin, a spokesman for the hospital, said all of the teen-agers were treated in the emergency room and released.

In North Carolina, freezing rain, sleet and snow were blamed in part for a 16-vehicle pileup in Charlotte and an 11-car accident in Gaston County, but no serious injuries were reported in the chain-reaction collisions.

Reagan Warns Way Isn't Easy

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, welcoming the new year with a group of wealthy California businessmen, ambassadors and Cabinet members, told Americans "gripped by recession" that "the road to recovery is never easy."

The president and his wife Nancy celebrated News Year's Eve, as they have for the past 10 years at the 200-acre estate of Walter Annenberg, a publisher and former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain.

In a message taped for broadcast today during the Tournament of Roses Parade, the president said 1982 will be a year of "serious challenges."

"We are gripped by a recession brought on by decadences of government mismanagement, but we are making a new beginning as a nation," he said.

"The road to recovery is never easy. But America is no stranger to challenges. We need only to live up to our convictions to set things right. We need only believe in ourselves, in our country and in tomorrow."

The president planned to spend part of the day the way millions of other Americans will. "He'll watch some football," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

Annenberg and his wife Lenore, who is retiring as the U.S. chief of protocol, invited 86 other people to join them and the first couple in ringing in the new year at their Sunnyland estate.

Jury May Be Seated This Week

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — With 51 Fulton County residents already picked and nine more to go to complete the pool of prospective jurors for Wayne B. Williams' murder trial, a prosecutor says testimony may begin as soon as Tuesday.

Williams is charged with murder in the slayings of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, of the 28 young blacks whose deaths over a 22-month period were investigated by a special police task force.

In four days of jury selection this week, 143 Fulton County residents were quizzed about their knowledge of the killings and their bias either for or against Williams. Fifty-one were chosen.

Once the list of qualified jurors reaches 60, the final selection of 12 jurors and four alternates will begin.

The defense will be permitted to strike 20 names from the list and the prosecution 10, with the first 12 names remaining on the list constituting the jury. The defense and prosecution also are permitted to delete some of the names on the list of possible alternates.

The jurors and alternates will likely be sequestered for the trial, which is expected to last six to 10 weeks.

"There is no doubt in the court's mind we will be able to select a jury much sooner than anyone imagined," Superior Court Judge Clarence Cooper, who is presiding at the trial, said Thursday before adjourning the proceedings for the New Year's holiday weekend.

District Attorney Lewis Slaton, who heads the prosecution team, predicted Thursday that testimony would begin Tuesday or Wednesday.

The ease with which the first 51 people — 30 blacks and 21 whites — were placed on the list of qualified jurors surprised many court officials and observers who had predicted it would take weeks to find an impartial jury in the highly publicized case.

Most of the 143 prospective jurors questioned this week indicated that despite the publicity, they had formed no opinion about Williams' innocence or guilt.

The 23-year-old black photographer first came to police attention in the pre-dawn hours of May 22 when he was spotted driving across a bridge over the Chattoahoochee River just moments after an officer on a police stakeout team heard a loud splash in the river.

Two days later, Cater's body was found in the river downstream from the bridge in the same general area where Payne's body had been found a month earlier.

The special police task force, which investigated the slayings, numbered more than 100 officers and was spending more than $200,000 a month when Williams was arrested June 21. No arrests have been made in the other 26 killings.

During jury selection this week, Williams took an active part in his defense, conferring frequently with his attorneys, making notes on a legal pad and studying a printed list of names, apparently those of the potential jurors.

Angels Say Member's Death Reaffirms Plan

By R. BRIEREY THOMPSON
Associated Press Writer
NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Members of the Guardian Angels anti-crime group say they always knew one of their members would be killed while on patrol, but they never expected the bullet to come from a policeman's gun.

City officials and members of the volunteer civilian patrol group gave sharply differing accounts Thursday on who pulled the trigger in the shooting death of 26-year-old Frank Melvin, who group leaders say was the first Angel to die on one of the group's inner-city, anti-crime forays.

Both sides say it was a policeman who did the firing, but agree on little else.

Ramos, who had his back turned, Williams said. Medina called twice for Melvin to stop, and when he did not, fired the fatal shot, the police director said.

But Curtis Sliwa, founder of the New York City-based group, asserted other Angels at the scene witnessed a white police sergeant shoot Melvin at street level. He said the shooting might have been a "knee jerk" reaction because Melvin — whose brother is a Newark policeman — was black.

"That kind of demagoguery doesn't help the 300,000 people who live in this city," responded Mayor Kenneth Gibson, who is black.

Amid the accusations, conflicting reports, publicity and likelihood that controversy over the shooting will continue, members of the 3-year-old Guardian Angels returned to their patrol, saying they were determined to continue their job.

Sliwa said he would press for an investigation of the Melvin shooting by the state attorney general's office, or, if refused, the Justice Department.

"That presupposes that we can't do it here," said Gibson.

The mayor said the death was tragic and that "to hurl charges at this point is counter-productive."

Asked if the Guardian Angels were a help or a hindrance, Gibson replied: "I would have to reserve judgment ... but people on the street have to learn to respect people in authority."

Sliwa also blasted city police for showing "no remorse over the cold-blooded murder."

"Whenever somebody is killed by a police officer in this department, it bothers me personally and it bothers the department," Williams said.

"It eventually had to happen," Guardian Angel Eric Caple said of the incident. "I'm sorry it had to happen in this way. It shocked all of us. We never expected it to come from a police officer ... of all people."

Melvin was shot late Wednesday by a city policeman while he and nine other Angels were patrolling the crime-ridden Dayton Street housing project.

Police said Melvin was shot from a rooftop by Patrolman Milton Medina, who mistakenly thought Melvin posed a threat to his partner on the street below. Medina has been taken off patrol pending results of an investigation of the shooting.

Newark Police Director Hubert Williams said Medina and Patrolman Angel Ramos were investigating a report of a tavern burglary when the shooting occurred. He said Medina went to the building's roof and found burglary tools.

Medina then saw Melvin running toward

Controllers' Top Leaders Resign

By MERRILL HARTSON
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization faces the new year in disarray, its top officers having resigned and spokesmen for "non-striking controllers" claiming they now speak for the union.

President Robert E. Poli said Thursday he was quitting in an effort to improve the chances for fired controllers to be reinstated to their old jobs.

Already decertified by the government and facing $150 million in fines stemming from its illegal strike against the Federal Aviation Administration, PATCO now is saddled with a leadership vacuum created by the resignations of Poli and executive vice president Robert Meyer.

Poli, who has come under increasing criticism for the Aug. 3 strike that prompted President Reagan to fire some 11,500 traffic controllers, told a news conference he had "become the symbol" of the strike.

Reagan has refused to consider rehiring the controllers for air tower duty but has consented to lifting the 3-year ban against them obtaining any federal government employment.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes was asked in Palm Springs, Calif., whether Poli's withdrawal would have any impact on the administration's stand.

He said that Reagan, who was vacationing on the West Coast, remains "sympathetic to those who are out of work due to the strike situation" but intends to go no further than allowing them to seek other government work.

An hour after Poli announced his resignation, representatives of a group calling itself "Concerned Air Traffic Controllers," asserted that the 3,000 or so unionized controllers who remained on the job are "the only legitimate voice" of the union.

Spokesman Stephan Leshner said "those who struck were in direct contravention of PATCO's constitution and have effectively resigned."

He said the new group's goals are to conduct union elections, gain access to union funds and be recognized as the official bargaining agent for controllers in future contract negotiations with the FAA.

Union spokeswoman Marcia Feldman said successors for Poli and Meyer will be selected "within a few days" by PATCO's nine-member general executive board.

Dear Abby

Needs To Eliminate 'You Know'

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A woman signed "Smells Bad in Kentucky" was desperate to find what caused her body odor. She insisted she bathed and changed her clothes daily (underwear too), practiced good dental hygiene and used deodorants, etc.

I also had a body odor I couldn't explain. No deodorants or perfume helped. Then I read in a health book, "Think Zinc. Don't Stink!" I asked my doctor, and he said, "Take 30 mg. of zinc daily. It can't hurt and it might help."

Well, I tried it, and now I don't stink anymore. Sign me...
THINK ZINC

DEAR THINK: You were wise to consult a doctor. And if the first doctor doesn't help, don't give up. See another. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to see a doctor about unexplainable body odor was excellent. Our 9-year-old son developed a nauseating body odor that no amount of bathing helped. His room reeked of this stench, although he bathed twice a day and wore freshly laundered clothing. We were living in California at the time and went from doctor to doctor. None could find a thing wrong with the boy. (They advised, "Bathe often.") Our son was the target of teasing and humiliation from his brother and sister as well as his playmates. A month-long vacation with him in the car was more than any of us could stand. We rode with all the windows down.

After three years of living with this problem, we moved to Texas. We took him to another doctor who immediately suspected the cause. A simple urine test proved that our son had a low-grade kidney infection, which he most likely had had for three years. He was placed on antibiotics and within two weeks the offensive body odor disappeared! This was 13 years ago and he's smelled good ever since.

JERRY'S MOM

DEAR ABBY: I need your advice concerning a rather sticky situation. I have been employed here as a secretary for nearly three years and must leave this job because my husband and I are moving out of state.

Since I am working up a resume in order to get another secretarial job in my new location, I asked my current employer for a letter of recommendation to use as a reference.

He said, "Go ahead and write a letter of recommendation and I will sign it."

Abby, I would feel foolish writing a letter of recommendation for myself, but since he asked me to do it, I suppose I must. My problem: Should I write myself a glowing recommendation? (My boss has told me many times that I am an excellent secretary and he is pleased with my work.) Or should I be modest and restrained in order to avoid the appearance of tooting my own horn?

I value your advice.

FEELING FOOLISH

DEAR FEELING: Go ahead and write yourself a glowing recommendation. (You'd be foolish not to.)

DEAR ABBY: I seem powerless to control a distressing speech habit of injecting "you know" in between words, thoughts and sentences. I didn't realize it was so bad until my husband called my attention to it. I notice that a lot of other people have the same bad habit, and I've become very conscious of all the "you knows" lately. It's common among radio and television personalities, people in sports, the educated and uneducated alike.

Why this epidemic, Abby? And what can be done about it? Sign me...

YOU KNOW

DEAR YOU KNOW: It's a sloppy speech habit that was learned and can be "unlearned." Ask your husband (and friends) to call your attention to every "you know" you utter. At first it will be awkward and frustrating. But it will make you aware of this habit every time you open your mouth to speak, and after a while all the useless "you knows" will be eliminated from your speech.

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a five by seven picture. During the second week with a wallet size picture and write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to "The Daily Reflector" one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

MR. AND MRS. WILBUR R. WALLS

Couple Has 60th Anniversary

AYDEN — Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur R. Walls of Ayden celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary at a reception held Sunday afternoon at the Bethany Free Will Baptist Church, Winterville.

The couple reaffirmed their wedding vows with family and friends attending. The Rev. Ron Wacks officiated. Judy Bowen and Louise Wainright played the organ and piano and Ms. Bowen sang "The Bond of Love."

Mrs. Walls was wearing a light blue dress complemented by a corsage of white carnations.

After the service a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. The refreshment table was covered with a white cloth trimmed in lace. Centering the table was an arrangement of white poinsettias and greenery enhanced by a candelabra. Seasonal greenery and berries adorned the corners of the table.

Mrs. Julie Craft served cake and Mrs. Judy Gill poured punch. Both are granddaughters of the couple.

Billie Annette Craft, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walls, received gifts and Mavis Craft presided at the guest register.

Host and hostesses for the reception were the couple's children, Mrs. Craft of Rt. 1, Winterville, Mrs. Ethel Smith of Falls Church, Va., Zeno Walls of St. Cloud, Fla. and Mrs. Joyce Evans of Manassas, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Walls have 13 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild.

They were married Dec. 24, 1921, in Pitt County.

Support Is Shown

The United States has "jawboned" all it could over the situation in Poland.

It is clear that the people of Poland have been repressed by their own military, and there is every reason to believe the Soviet Union brought pressure to bear to see that the military takeover occurred in the Communist bloc nation.

President Reagan said as much last Tuesday. He said the Soviets bear "a heavy and direct responsibility for the repression in Poland."

Then the president took what action he could in retaliation. Included was the suspension of flights to the U.S. by Aeroflot, closing of the Soviet purchasing commission in this country, suspension of licenses for electronic equipment and computers for the Soviet Union, postponing of negotiations for long-term grain sales agreement, suspension of negotiations on a new maritime agreement and licensing of oil and gas equipment sales to the Soviets.

If the actions seem mild it should be recognized that there is little latitude for doing any more. Certainly breaking diplomatic relations or cutting off all trade with Russia is out of the question. It is unthinkable to consider the use of military force to help the Polish people.

Our allies showed little enthusiasm for the moves and consequently the United States is going it alone. It was important, however, that some move be made. We must show the people of Poland that they have support in their fight for freedom.

And A Prosperous New Year

As the New Year arrives, it is a time when we look back over the old year and ponder the mistakes we have made.

We also look forward to the New Year, hoping to profit by the wisdom we have gained from our mistakes.

It is a time when we worry about finances and study the possibilities for acquiring the things we want in the year ahead. We concern ourselves with the poor state of the government and the instability of the world in general.

Maybe we should consider, though, that we are living in the most affluent nation in the best possible times of all history. It is an exciting time to be alive.

We at The Daily Reflector wish for everyone a prosperous New Year.

EQUAL HOW MANY CRISES?

By ART BUCHWALD

Another Of The Jobless

"Who's next? What is your name?"
 "Nineteen eighty one."
 "Reason for leaving job?"
 "I was replaced by a new year."

"And so you're applying for unemployment insurance?"
 "I've tried to find work but no one will have me."
 "Why not?"
 "No one will tell me the real reason. They just say I'm too old and I can't keep up."

"What did you do before you were fired?"
 "I was a crisis manager."
 "Did you produce any great books or any outstanding works of art?"

"No, but I was a good year for wine. Not a great year, but they said I had a nice bouquet."
 "Did you sell a lot of automobiles?"

"Not too many. As a matter of fact, they claim I was one of the worst years for automobiles in history."
 "And how were you about housing?"

"I don't think I'll be remembered for housing. I either started a worldwide recession or inherited one — depending on which politician you talk to."
 "You don't seem very enthusiastic about your accomplishments."

"At the moment, they don't look that good, but everyone kept telling everyone else, things had to get worse before they got better. I think when people have a chance to look back they may not think I was as bad as they thought I was."
 "We'll be the judge of that. Do you have any references?"

"No. I was hoping to get one from President Reagan, but at the last moment he decided I wasn't his year. He keeps telling everyone we have to wait for another year before his plans work."
 "Are there any movies you made that you're proud of?"
 "No. I can't think of any."

"What about hunger?"
 "There was some drought, and the Soviets had another bad wheat crop. But I don't think I should be held responsible for that. They don't seem to know how to grow grain."
 "Reading your resume I still don't understand why you were replaced."
 "The man who gave me my pink slip muttered something about, 'Last one hired — first one fired.'"

"You only worked for twelve months. That entitles you to 13 unemployment checks."
 "I'll take what I can get. Maybe there will be a nostalgia craze and I'll be in demand again. After all, no one dreamed a few years ago the big bands would come back."

"Well, we have no openings for an old year at this time, but if we do, you're going to have to take any job, whether it suits you or not."
 "Oh, don't worry about that. I can do anything. But no one ever gave me a chance."
 "Sign this. And have a Happy New Year."
 "I wish you hadn't said that."

Most of them were bombs."
 "Good grief, you really are a difficult case. What happened during your time that you can brag about?"
 "I guess the best thing that happened was Prince Charles and Lady Diana got married while I was in charge. It was a lovely wedding, and if all goes well, there will be an heir to the throne of Britain."
 "Well, that's something. At least we can say you know about weddings. How were you on crime?"

"Not too good. I think the rates went up. I also had a bad time with terrorism. But I did get the hostages out of Iran, and oil prices dropped. And the Rolling Stones made a very successful comeback."
 "What about war?"
 "I didn't start any. At least not any big ones. Then again I didn't stop any little ones either. War-wise, I maintained the status quo."

Loser Today Is A Winner

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
 AP Special Correspondent
 NEW YORK (AP) — After all the bicentennial bravos and huzzahs, who would have thought that the crabbed signature of King George III would be worth more than John Hancock's defiant scrawl?

Time, that healer, has a way of turning losers into winners and redeeming villains as curio pieces.

George III, to whom the Declaration of Independence was directed as an indictment, can be had on the autograph market for $495 in an "imposing folio document signed Oct. 3, 1782 by our last king" and countersigned by William Pitt, his chancellor of the exchequer, authorizing payment of Hessian troops. John Hancock, who before he went into the insurance field defied the actuarial tables for rebels by writing his name large enough for the king to see, retails on today's autograph market for only $295.

My authority for all this is B. Altman & Company's annual autograph sale, as advertised in a number of Sunday newspapers. But lest you think this venerable Fifth Avenue emporium has suddenly sold out to the Crown, the bottom line shows that George Washington is still worth a king's ransom or, at any rate, seven times the monarch's signature. The signature "G. Washington" on ship's papers dated July 7, 1795, for the Two Sisters out of Alexandria, Va., will set you back $3,750.

Thomas Jefferson manages to keep his high place in history and on the autograph block. His fine-nibbed flourish on an official letter, signed May 5, 1790, when he was secretary of state, can add decorous prestige to your living room or den for $2,500, about what a good stereo would cost but much more to boast about.

And for $1,595 you can get both President James Monroe and futur President Jon Quincy Adams, then secretary of state, signing an order appointing a new naval officer to the Port of Baltimore.

On the literary market, Charles Dickens leads the price list at $1,350, followed closely by Oscar Wilde at $1,295. Joseph Conrad signs in at $395, Rudyard Kipling at $275, while Emerson and Browning, both at $185, are worth a mite more on the dotted line than Longfellow at only $135.

Famous psychologists come ridiculously cheap. You can get a signed postcard from William James, apparently an absent-minded professor type, asking the janitor of Boston Hall if he "left notes of my Lowell lectures behind," for only $35, about half of what you'd pay to chat for an hour with any modern psychologists.

But even at that price, I've decided to be careful when people ask me for my autograph and I'm certainly not going to throw away any Christmas cards. An old Christmas card from John Gielgud, who last year didn't send me one (or any year before that either) is worth $35. The original card probably cost 25 cents. An old card from Eddie Windsor (later King Edward VIII, who abdicated) or his brother Albert, who became George VI, brings $875 on the autograph market. If Prince Charles and Princess Diana send me one this year, seeing as how I attended their wedding, I'm definitely not going to toss it out with the Christmas tree when the holidays are over. The royal family apparently never loses its retail value.

Musicians, for some reason, seem to hold up better on the signature exchange than authors, which is why I wish I had followed my mother's advice and stuck with the piano instead of the typewriter.

Igor Stravinsky, "in an amusing sarcastic letter in French" discussing Oedipus and complaining about conductors' contracts, is listed at $985 on the autograph sales sheet. Jerome Kern will set you back $875, Johann Strauss Jr. $400, Giacomo Puccini $385, Maurice Ravel $375, but you can get piano players Harry and Margaret Truman signing a "Playbill for 'Goodbye My Fancy' starring Miss Truman" for a bargain $85.

When multimillionaire Nelson Rockefeller was governor of New York, admiring citizens used to walk up with blank checks for him to autograph. If he ever fell for the ruse, I wonder what one of them would be worth on the autograph market? Or at a bank?

Strength For Today

A CLEANSSED SOUL IS THE RESULT

Yesterday we spoke of the nature of repentance. What does God do for the repentant sinner when the sinner's repentance is sincere? God puts the repentant sinner's sin behind him. The dereliction is erased from the books.

The second thing repentance accomplishes is cleansing. God washes the repentant sinner thoroughly from his iniquity. As someone has said, it is not like washing the hands but washing clothes; for cleansing is a matter not of cleaning the surface but of removing uncleanness from the fabric of our being. God's forgiveness makes life new for us. Only God can forgive our sins, but only we can repent of them. Repentance is the first step toward a state of heavenly peace of mind.

In all, repentance has accomplished three things for the individual. It has resulted in the blotting out of his transgressions, the cleansing of his life, and the renewing of the spirit within him. — Elisha Douglass

THIS AFTERNOON

No Swelled Heads

By BILL NOBLITT
 RALEIGH — The most frequent criticism offered when Gov. Jim Hunt first proposed a North Carolina School of Science and Math was that those selected would tend to develop into elitists; that removing them from home, neighborhood, public schools would, in effect, give them the big head.

Not so, according to "report card" written by Charles R. Eilber, director of the specialty school at Durham. To the contrary, the youngsters seem to be kept so busy and engaged in so many different activities that time to think of themselves as above the herd doesn't present itself.

Certain required activities are built into the school's program which work to keep the students in touch with the real world.

"Students at the school last year thought of themselves as special only in their good fortune at being selected for admission," Eilber reports in his article printed in the "School Law Bulletin" and in "Popular Government" which is published at the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill.

On The Ground
 "While they were taught to soar mentally, they were also encouraged to keep their feet firmly rooted in reality," Eilber said.

Two particular programs "reminded them that with their gifts came responsibility and allowed them to associate with adults who had accepted responsibility." Most students spent three hours weekly in community service ... working with various age groups in a number of service tasks such as tutoring at elementary schools, working at the Veteran's Hospital, reading to the blind, clerking in the Salvation Army Thrift Store, aiding at libraries and museums.

All students are required to work five hours each week at the school. This helps reduce costs, and keeps the young people in touch with a number of working adults. Jobs were assigned on a rotating basis and included housekeeping, dishwashing or serving in the cafeteria, working on the grounds or in local school offices, and helping maintain and repair equipment or buildings.

These duties, in addition to juggling six or seven courses each day, heavy in math and science, and taking part in the clubs, athletics, seminars, left little time for homesickness or for practicing elitism.

Classes start at 7:45 a.m. and run until 4:40 p.m. Every other Saturday is a work day, and evening lectures and seminars are often held. Computers are available from early morning until late night every day.

"Their most difficult task, almost universally, was managing time. Most were accustomed to earning high marks with little effort, or perhaps with one spurt of energy for an advanced class," Eilber said.

High Cost
 Now in the middle of its second year, the specialty school has 300 juniors and seniors from 78 of the state's 100 counties. About half are male, and about 24 percent are non-whites.

Cost of tuition, room and board is free to North Carolina residents. First-year costs per student were $12,387, a figure which is high as a result of starting up the program. This year the estimated cost per student is $8,912; and next year that should fall to $7,752 with further decreases anticipated until enrollment reaches from 550 to 650 students in four classes.

Eilber is convinced that such a challenging environment is essential to bringing out the best in bright students, and that the effort will pay dividends across the state as teachers and students develop programs to be implemented in the public schools. Eilber also believes that if North Carolina is to reach its potential for high-technology research and development and industry, improved science and math education is essential.

Other Editors Say Must Be Improved

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

Looking at the situation from a distance, we would suggest that the University system take whatever steps are necessary to see that the school of nursing at N.C. A&T State University receives full accreditation. Newly appointed A&T Chancellor Edward Fort was quoted last week as saying he was disappointed and frustrated that the N.C. Board of Nursing didn't give the school of nursing the green light. His remarks are completely out of order.

Both the Board of Nursing and the UNC Board of Governors have extended the time originally allotted for the A&T nursing school to improve the score of its graduates on the state licensing exam. This was supposed to be the year that the school would close unless a higher percentage of graduates passed the state licensing exam. Only a third of the school's graduates passed the most recent test, and Chancellor Fort is upset that the school doesn't have full accreditation.

It might be suggested that Chancellor Fort take his frustration out on his own school of nursing instead of the N.C. Board of Nursing, which is responsible for the quality of nurses in our public and private hospitals. In its most recent decision the board has requested that at least 70 percent of the A&T nursing graduates pass the four state licensing exams to be offered between now and July 1983.

With the tremendous shortage of nurses throughout the state and nation, the school must not close. Perhaps there should be a better screening program in admitting students. Also it would be a good investment for the state to help provide a little slower training and some kind of tutoring program. The nursing school at A&T could become a great asset for the state, and whatever it takes in manpower, help and financial resources should be provided. Under no conditions should the school continue to exist until it comes up to minimum standards, and it is the administration's obligation to see that those standards are met.

A Two-Edged Sword Applied

By JOHN CUNNIFF
 AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Trade restrictions against the Soviet Union, such as those announced by President Reagan, can hurt them, but they can damage U.S. economic interests too, if only in a small way.

Exports are a top priority for any economy with a balance-of-payments problem or, in fact, for any economy seeking to regain lost strength. And the United States has lost considerable strength this year.

Imports, for example, now account for one-quarter or more of U.S. domestic steel and automobile markets, and the trade deficit for the year may exceed the previous high of $42.36 billion in 1978.

While there are special factors in that deficit, such as the tripling of imported oil prices since 1973, there is a warning too that the United States has been losing its competitive position in world trade.

Things aren't likely to improve very rapidly either, because Western Europe, with which the United States has a trade surplus, has to boost its economic recovery in 1982 by exporting to the United States.

All this, it appears, is helping to develop sentiment for restrictions against imported products, despite the widely accepted notion that in the long run restrictions lead only to further economic deterioration.

Economic sanctions against the Soviet Union, therefore, may hurt that nation, but they can hurt the United States and the value of its dollar too by making it more difficult to reduce the foreign trade deficit.

In all, the new restrictions may amount to less than 10 percent of the more than $3 billion a year of American exports to the Soviets, but every little bit hurts or helps when the problem is as persistent as the deficit. After reaching that record-high in 1978, it fell only to $40.37 billion in 1979 and then to $36.36 billion last year. Through November of this year it had already climbed back to $38.4 billion.

Prospects aren't good either. On Christmas Eve, Chicago's Continental Bank issued an analysis that projected a trade deficit of close to $50 billion for 1982. Until late in the year, it said, no contribution to the U.S. economy can be expected from the foreign trade sector.

To the contrary, a deficit of that size can be measured in such things as worsened unemployment (expected to reach 9 percent at some point in 1982), reduced corporate sales, and lowered government revenues.

Another question arises about the effectiveness of the White House crackdown.

In the past, for example, the Soviet Union managed to obtain grain from other countries after the U.S. embargoed shipments, but U.S. farmers suffered because the resulting surplus drove down prices.

Will the Soviets now be able to obtain plying equipment from other nations? Should they succeed, critics will complain that Caterpillar Tractor Co. needlessly lost $90 million in sales and that employees, already affected by layoffs, lost hundreds of thousands of work hours.

Economic sanctions can be costly, especially when measured in terms of dollars and manhours lost, and when they produce other consequences that run counter to dearly sought domestic goals.

That President Reagan is willing to use them suggests the extent of his concern over the Soviet's role in the military repression of rights in Poland.

Students Learn Health Care

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Thanks to a medical self-care program, students at the University of Southern California have learned how to manage minor illnesses and injuries, as well as when to call on professional help.

Students who are otherwise in good health can now take care of their own minor colds, headaches, cuts and acne, usually without waiting to see a health-center physician.

The self-care program also includes "wellness" care. Nutrition education helps students check up on their eating habits through individual counseling sessions with trained student volunteers.

Profits Exceeded Previous Two Years

Farmers Had Good Year

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Despite a "near-disasterous" spring drought that harried farmers through May, Pitt County agriculture, with the exception of livestock, netted a 1981 profit that surpassed the past two years.

"Farmers started this year with little hope because of the desperately dry weather," said Pitt extension agent Sam Uzzell, "but the rains came in time to benefit all except late-planted soybeans. Corn grew as fast in the last of May and early June as I have ever seen it grow." Uzzell is field crop specialist for the county.

"As far as production, farmers had a wonderful year," he said. "But as far as marketing it was a tough one. Prices of corn and soybeans are a dismay and prices for livestock are very low." Uzzell said he hoped to see improvement in January.

Uzzell said 1981 was a bumper year for peanuts. "Yields were high but a large quantity of peanuts that were imported because of the 1980 crop's failure, caused storage problems and additional marketing problems that still continue," he explained. "Those that did not sign contracts experienced some difficulty."

Uzzell noted the early season drought hurt the area's cucumber crop, but other horticultural products fared well. The Pitt County Farmer's Market, in its third year, "did well" he said. "Our first year at the downtown location was a good one."

Dry weather in the fall of 1980 and the spring of 1981 decreased strawberry production, said the farm agent. "Some growers noted that plants didn't have quite as heavy fruitset this year as they had in the past. This we attributed to the drought."

It was a big year for tobacco producers, with high prices and quality for the county's biggest crop. "Tobacco substantially increased in quality in 1981," said Pitt extension agent Roger Cobb, tobacco and corn specialist for the county, "and prices for the leaf rose accordingly."

Coupled with these increases, reported Cobb, farmers faced similar rises in the price of chemicals and other items vital to production. "This had the effect of minimizing profits," he said. "Most growers' profits stayed about the same as in 1980."

Leaf producers can look forward to high leasing prices in 1982, said Cobb, because of the reduction in effective quotas. "We do not at this point know how much the quotas will be reduced," he said, "and we don't know what other effects there will be."

Cobb attributes the good quality of the 1981 tobacco crop to the use of less nitrogen, rainfall at the right time and better management, and encourages farmers to continue with these practices in the coming year.

He termed the '81 corn crop "excellent." "The yield turned out very well but prices received were $1 less than last year and squeezed profits," said Cobb.

"My advice to farmers for 1982 would be to make sure every penny is well spent — put the money where its needed," he added. "We need a quality crop again this year."

Cobb encouraged growers to become better marketers. "Farmers should start sharpening their marketing skills," he said. "Sell your crops when you can get the best price, not just for what you can get out of them."

Livestock producers experienced a depressed year, with demand and prices for their products down.

"The main hangup of the livestock producers is the low market prices," said Mike Regans, former Pitt livestock agent. "Our hog and cattle producers are receiving prices below operating costs," he explained. "Operating costs continue to rise and prices have not — they've gone down as a matter of fact."

Regans attributed the low market prices to an oversupply of meat, a decrease in the nation's meat consumption and the condition of the economy.

This trend, said Regans, has shut down several small hog operations in Pitt County. "Those with less than 50 sows have been blitzed by the prices," he noted. "A few have gotten out of the business and there is virtually no building going on right now."

"As long as the interest rates stay high, I don't foresee any capital investments, and as long as the economy stays the way it is, I don't see any hopes of the livestock situation getting better."

Dairymen in the county are "barely getting by," said Regans. "I don't see how some have gotten by this long as it is."

The 1981 corn crop, said the former farm agent, was the only plus for the livestock producers. "The good corn crop helped some. It helped those who provide their own feed," he noted.

The forage crop, although better in 1981 than in 1980, suffered because of the dry weather according to Regans. "Producers should consider renovating some pastures next year that weren't as productive," he said.

The Pitt County Livestock Association had what Regans termed "another good year."

"We had another market hog show and some pig pickings to raise money for improvements to our building at the fairground," he noted. "We're looking forward to even better things in 1982."

Clinic Planned

Just in time to honor New Year's resolutions, Greenville's first year-round Smoker Withdrawal Clinic will open Wednesday.

Meetings will be held Wednesday of each week at 7:30 p.m. at the Mormon Church, 307 Martinsborough Road.

The clinic, to be led by Joan Boudreaux of Greenville, is being supported by the Eastern Lung Association, the Pitt County chapter of the American Heart Association and the Pitt County chapter of the American Cancer Society.

There is no charge for instruction and support received in the clinic. The only expense a participant will have is $10 for two manuals.

Mrs. Boudreaux served as this year's Pitt County Smokeout Chairman sponsored by the American Cancer Society. A board member of the Eastern Lung Association, she has experience in leading habit-altering groups, having served several years as a lecturer and supervisor for seven eastern N.C. counties for Weight Watchers International.

Anyone wishing more information may call the Eastern Lung Association office, 752-5093.

Appeals Court Judge Reportedly Will Retire

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State Court of Appeals Judge Robert Martin has decided to retire, reliable sources told The Associated Press Thursday night.

The sources said that Martin, one of seven judges on the Court of Appeals, will not seek re-election to another eight-year term when his term expires in December 1982. Martin could not be reached for comment Thursday night.

Meanwhile, Paul M. Wright, a District Court judge from Goldsboro, announced his candidacy for Martin's Court of Appeals seat.

"I have considered this for some time and this seems to present a good opportunity," said Wright, adding that he knew of no one else who definitely had decided to seek the judgeship.

Alex Brock, chairman of the state Board of Elections, said Martin had not informed him of his decision not to seek re-election.

"If that's the case, he's probably told a few friends but is keeping it pretty close," Brock said. "That's usually the way judges do things. But I wouldn't be surprised but what it's (true). He (Martin) is getting up toward mandatory retirement age."

The mandatory retirement age is 72, although state employees can retire with full benefits at age 65, Brock said.

Brock said it would be "unusual" for a Court of Appeals seat to become open by virtue of a judge's decision not to seek re-election after serving a complete term.

Usually, appeals court judges step down in the midst of a term. The governor then appoints a successor who generally has little trouble winning election in his own right as the incumbent, he said.

Brock said Martin's intentions should become known next week, beginning Jan. 4 when filing for the spring primary begins.

"I've never known a judgeship where someone didn't have an inside track and a definite intention of running," he said. "Someone will be over here at noon on the fourth to file, you can count on that."

Wright, 33, is in his fourth year as a judge in the eighth judicial district, which includes Wayne, Lenoir and Greene Counties. He was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt in 1978 after serving as assistant district attorney for three years.

"As a judge I have no platform other than to strive to be fair and firm," he said. "However, personally I strongly believe that the courts should require criminals to pay the victims of their crimes."

Reports Reflect Increase In Water-Borne Illness

ATLANTA (AP) — Public health officials say there were 50 outbreaks of disease associated with drinking water in the United States in 1980, the largest number of cases since a surveillance program was launched a decade ago.

The increase, however, probably was the result of more complete reporting, rather than a rise in the actual number of cases, the national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

"I think it's just an increase in reporting. As reporting becomes complete, the numbers will go back down," said Dr. Jeff Harris, the CDC epidemic intelligence service officer who monitored the cases.

In 1980, the CDC and the Environmental Protection Agency received a total of 66 reports of acute water-related disease associated with drinking water, surface water and recreational water. But the federal health agency said the total probably is only a fraction of the number of outbreaks that actually occurred.

Causes found in 22 of the 50 outbreaks caused by drinking water included various bacteria, parasites, chemical agents and Hepatitis A, the CDC said. Victims suffered diarrhea, cramps and other upper and lower gastrointestinal symptoms.

For the second year in a row, the EPA and CDC found that outbreaks related to community systems — public water systems serving more than 25 people — slightly outnumbered those related to non-community systems.

Treatment problems were the most common problem in outbreaks related to community water supplies, accounting for 11 of 23, the CDC said. Of the 22 outbreaks related to non-community supplies, 10 were caused by untreated water.

More than 500 people were affected by disease outbreaks resulting from use of recreational water in lakes, pools and whirlpools, the CDC said. Thirteen outbreaks were reported in 1980, the highest number in the three years for which data has been tabulated.

The CDC noted that the EPA recommended standard for recreational water is derived from studies conducted 30 years ago and that water containing fewer fecal organisms than the EPA maximum standard may still cause significant gastrointestinal illness.

"The EPA probably will come out with new standards because they know the old ones are outmoded," Harris said.

Three outbreaks were reported from consumption of untreated surface water not meant for drinking. Two of these, one caused by a parasite and the other by bacteria, involved groups of hikers in back-country areas.

The third, of unknown cause, affected members of a road crew, the CDC said.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE KING WHO DIVIDED THE KINGDOM!

WHEN SOLOMON DIED, HIS SON, REHOBOAM, ASCENDED THE THRONE OF ISRAEL. NOW, DURING SOLOMON'S REIGN, HIS WEALTH AND GLORY HAD BEEN MAINTAINED BY STERN MEASURES—HEAVY TAXES AND HARD LABOR EXACTED FROM ALL TWELVE TRIBES! THE POWERFUL TRIBE OF EPHRAIM WANTED NO MORE OF THIS AND A DELEGATION SOUGHT, FROM THE NEW KING, ASSURANCES THAT IT WOULD CEASE. REHOBOAM ASKED THE OLD AND WISE COUNSELORS WHO HAD GUIDED SOLOMON DURING HIS REIGN, FOR ADVICE—THEY TOLD HIM HE SHOULD APPEASE THE PEOPLE AND DEAL KINDLY WITH THEM

...OBVIOUSLY, THIS DIDN'T FIT REHOBOAM'S IDEA OF WHAT A KING SHOULD BE LIKE, SO HE SOUGHT ADVICE OF THE YOUNG PRINCES WITH WHOM HE HAD GROWN UP! TO A MAN, THEY ALL AGREED THE PEOPLE NEEDED A SEVERE LESSON FOR THEIR IMPUDENCE IN QUESTIONING A KING'S RIGHT TO TAX HIS PEOPLE. SO, THREE DAYS AFTER THE QUESTION HAD BEEN PUT TO HIM, THE KING GAVE THEM HIS ANSWER—HE WOULD TAX THEM GREATER THAN SOLOMON EVER HAD, HE WOULD WORK THEM HARDER THAN SOLOMON EVER WORKED THEM! AND PERHAPS REHOBOAM SHOULD HAVE BEEN FOREWARNED, FOR THE EPHRAIMITES APPEARED BEFORE HIM IN ALL THE ACCOUTREMENTS OF WAR—THE DIE WAS CAST! THE TEN TRIBES OF THE NORTH REBELLED, NAMING JEROBOAM THEIR KING—AND NEVER AGAIN WAS ISRAEL UNITED!

'A Twin Burst Of Darkness'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The year's highlight in religion was a twin burst of darkness.

That, in essence, is the conclusion of those who cover news of religion for the country's newspapers, newsmagazines and wire services.

Although religion exalts human life as having divine worth, they cited attacks on the lives of two prominent personages as 1981's "most significant" news in the field of religion.

The attempted assassinations both of Pope John Paul II and President Reagan, together with the ensuing wave of religious reaction, were combined in the top category.

The negative element thus was seen as overshadowing the positive in religion, the prime features of it running counter to its key perspective on the value of human life.

Assessment of the year's occurrences in religion was made in a poll of members of the Religion Newswriters Association, made up of 140 members on newspapers and other secular print media.

Willmar Thorkelson, Minneapolis Star religion editor who conducted the poll, said 46 of a list of 50 developments in religion got some votes, indicating diverse opinions on the relative importance of some events.

But the attempted killing of the world's pre-eminent spiritual leader and of the nation's most powerful political leader was chosen overwhelmingly as the main development.

"The big one was a bad one," Thorkelson said.

It was a "year of extremes" for religion, writes the Rev. Edgar R. Trexler, editor of the Lutheran magazine and not among the secular media specialists. He says some occurrences blasted religious ideals, but some others bolstered them.

There also were nebulous religious situations, raising questionmarks.

This was the case for the second most significant development, as picked by the secular reporters of religion — the investigation into financial affairs of Chicago's Roman Catholic archbishop, Cardinal John Cody.

Other main religion events of 1981, in order of ranking, were:

- Growing religious opposition to the nuclear arms race, manifested both among Roman Catholic and Protestant leaders.
- Rising Moslem fundamentalism typified by the assassination of Egypt's President Anwar Sadat in the midst of sectarian strife there and continuing executions of Bha'is and others in Iran.
- Arkansas' new law requiring teaching of "creation science" in public schools if evolution is taught, and a court trial challenging the law. It is like one in Louisiana and laws proposed in many states.
- Continuing debate over the "religious right," a movement of conservative Protestants and Catholics which has become politically active, favoring prayers in public schools, and an end to abortion, among other things.
- Opposition by some religious leaders and groups to the Reagan administration's budget cuts for social programs, with some churches and synagogues seeking ways to fill the gap.
- Religious opposition to U.S. military involvement in Central America, notably the military personnel and arms supplied El Salvador's ruling junta.
- The decision by Roman Catholic bishops to support the proposed Hatch amendment allowing Congress and the states to regulate abortion. That approach was opposed by some anti-abortion groups who favor instead a human life bill specifying that life begins at conception.

—The battle over interpretations of the Bible among Southern Baptists, with a biblical literalist, the Rev. Baily Smith, re-elected to a second term over an unusually strong show of opposition.

—The mediating role in the Polish crisis of Poland's Roman Catholic Church, led by its new archbishop, Josef Glemp, and by Pope John Paul II.

—Formation of a Coalition for Better Television and its threat to boycott corporations sponsoring objectionable TV programs.

—Reopening of churches and a seminary in communist China and numerous visits there by U.S. church delegations, along with controversial attempts to smuggle Bibles there.

—Scientific investigations of the Shroud of Turin and claims by some investigators that it documents Jesus' resurrection.

—An overwhelming vote by delegations of three Lutheran denominations in favor of merger, undercutting previous opposition by some officials.

Jointly Oppose Refugee Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish leaders have criticized the U.S. administration's policy of deporting Salvadorans and intercepting and turning back boats carrying Haitian refugees to this country.

Forcing the Haitians back to Haiti will subject them to "almost certain harassment and recrimination if not imprisonment," says the Rev. Robert C. Campbell, American Baptist executive.

In a joint letter to President Reagan, officials of the major national organizations of Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews, jointly protested deporting of Salvadorans and interdicting of the boats from Haiti as violating long-time principles of America.

Establish TV Judaism Library

NEW YORK (AP) — A $25 million "television library of Judaism" is being established by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, termed the first of its kind.

Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Reform Jewish body, set distribution in early January of the first package of programs.

He says the project "will create a television library of Jewish culture, history and religious practice capable of conveying the message of Judaism to a worldwide audience as well as to synagogues, classrooms, camps and Jewish homes."

Appoint Black As Missionary

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod for the first time has named a black missionary to serve overseas.

The Rev. James Tyler and his wife, Billie, were assigned to work at Obot Idim, Nigeria. Says he:

"For as long as we've been in the ministry, we have desired to go to Africa ... although the door has not been opened before. And I'm just happy to be going in the Lord's own time."

No Freedom In China Observed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A one-time Jesuit missionary to China estimates that less than 10 percent of Chinese Catholics participate in the country's present "patriotic church," which broke ties with the papacy after the communist regime came to power in 1949.

"There is no religious freedom, no true religious practice," the Rev. John W. Clifford, who spent three years in communist Chinese jails, writes in the monthly Homiletic and Pastoral Review.

"The loyal clergy are in prison or under tight surveillance, or dead from maltreatment," says Clifford, now in Taiwan doing research on religion in mainland China.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting will be held at Cherry Lane FWB Church Jan. 2 and 3.

The Rev. Matthew Best will be in charge of the Jan. 2 service at 7:30 p.m. The Rev. C.R. Parker will lead the morning service Jan. 3. A dinner will be served at 2 p.m. and Bishop W.L. Phillips an members of St. Paul FWB Church will end the 3 p.m. service.

Brother Chris Jordan is the Director of the Unity of Faith Ministry in Rocky Mount, N.C. This ministry is a faith ministry practicing Ephesians 4:13-16—a United Body reaching out to those in need. The ministry has a special appeal to Youth. Outreach areas: Police Assistance, Christian Youth Club, Public School Assistance, Radio Ministry, Personal Ministry, etc.

Brother Jordan is a graduate of West Point, a former officer in the U.S. Army, and an ordained Minister of the Independent Assemblies of God.

He has been delivered from alcohol and drug addiction. He was saved in 1975, baptized in the Holy Spirit in February, 1976 and began a teaching and preaching ministry the same year. Brother Jordan is married and has three beautiful daughters.

James Bynum is the music coordinator for the ministry and is also a solo Gospel Singer. He attended Rocky Mount High School and the North Carolina School of the Arts before being called out to sing for Jesus. He is a truly anointed brother who sings in spirit and in truth. James will bless us with special singing. Come and let these two brothers minister to your needs.

Disarmament Idea Exchange

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 15-member delegation from religious and other groups working for nuclear disarmament in the United States has met with leaders of the disarmament movement in England and Western Europe to exchange ideas for furthering the effort. The U.S. delegation was organized by the American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker group.

MOSCOW (AP) — Just as the government tries to put a cork on alcohol consumption comes word that Muscovites are relying less on black Russians and more on samogon. That's what moonshine is called behind the Iron Curtain.

White lightning has been around the Soviet Union for a long time, but now that legal brews are going up in price, moonshine is getting more popular, the local folks say.

Statistics are always hard to come by here, but Moscow residents say there's lots more profit.

A gallon of 45-proof vodka purchased from the state costs about $71.50. But a moonshiner can make his own 60-proof stuff for about $10 a gallon, minus the cost of the still.

"Aside from the price, the best thing about samogon is it doesn't give you a hangover," one Muscovite says.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A retired Marine has opened his house to Polish sailors at the state port, treating them to home cooked meals and chauffering them to area stores.

He says none of them have talked about defecting — but he wouldn't be surprised if they did.

"They're very close-mouthed when they come here," said Sigmund Falicki, 62. "They don't talk to me about defecting, I wouldn't know what to do — I'd be scared half to death. But I wouldn't be surprised if it happened."

Falicki, who was born in the United States of a Polish father and American mother, has been helping the seamen for the past three years.

He said the sailors are all worried about the Dec. 13 imposition of martial law in their homeland.

"As soon as I brought them in here, they jumped on the television," said Falicki. "They're worried about getting back home. They're worried they may not see their families again."

Falicki, who speaks Polish, said he last entertained sailors from the ship Poptawski, which was in Wilmington Dec. 14-16.

Although he said many sailors would be "well satisfied" with their lives in Poland if they could just get more to eat, he said most consider Solidarity leader Lech Walesa a hero.

"They think he's the best thing that ever happened to Poland," he said. "The best thing since the Pope.... They say he's very commonsensical; he knows how to get along with people, how to negotiate. They're worried because they haven't heard too much about him."

The next Polish ship, the General Wladyslaw Sikorski, is due in Wilmington on Monday.

"I'll go down there and see what I can do for them," Falicki said. "If anyone wants to go somewhere, to buy supplies or clothes, I'll take them around — if they're allowed off the ship. The captain might not let them have liberty."

Falicki also has helped Polish sailors who are accused of minor infractions and who become sick while in port. He said he helps sailors because he remembers what it's like to be stuck aboard a ship in a strange harbor with no friends.

"When I was aboard ship, we hadn't been paid in God knows how long," he said. "We pulled into Miami in July 1941 and the mayor told people to go down and show us around. Lord have Mercy! Those cars were just lined up."

"Now it's my turn," he said.

Falicki said some people criticize him, saying,

"You take them Communists out?" But he said, "I don't know if they were communists when they took me out in Miami."

He said he also doesn't mind when people make fun of him for greeting Polish sailors with the traditional kiss on both cheeks. "The longshoremen just look at me and laugh," he said. "They say, 'Look at him, he's kissing a sailor.' I get more kisses off the men than the women. But it's just their way of greeting — send them off with a blessing."

Many of the people Falicki has sent off write back to him — and invite him to their homes in Poland. "I've got about 100" invitations, he said.

Falicki said he has been planning a trip to Poland for several years, since his sister visited and had a chance to cook potato pancakes for Pope John Paul II, then a cardinal. In addition to his friends, his father's sister also lives in Poland, he said.

But the current crisis has delayed his plans, he said. "I better not go now," he said. "It's too damn cold. And you have to wait in line for food."

Falicki said he "hopes and prays" that the current crisis will end peacefully. "But if anything breaks out, I'll be the first to go," he said.

By The Associated Press
The senior Solidarity leader still free in Poland has issued a New Year's message urging Polish soldiers to defy the martial law regime, according to uncensored reports from Poland.

"I hope you all remember that first you are human beings and Poles and only second the executors of orders," Zbigniew Bujak, the chief of Solidarity's Warsaw chapter, was quoted as saying in a message that reached the West Thursday night.

The handwritten note urged soldiers and officers of the Polish army and police to "listen to the voice of their conscience before that of their orders."

The message was described as a holiday greetings to Solidarity members and sympathizers and "to all our friends in Poland and abroad."

Other independent reports from Warsaw Thursday said martial law authorities were supplying soldiers with chocolates, sausages and vodka while giving them frequent propaganda lectures because the soldiers were not completely trusted.

The reports said one soldier in Warsaw claimed military patrols carry unloaded guns and "the only aim is to scare people."

Uncensored dispatches also said Solidarity members and sympathizers who work in government posts are subjected to harassment and blackmail, told they must quit the union or lose their jobs. Some reportedly have lost privileges and promotions, the reports said.

None of the reports could be independently confirmed. Poland has imposed strict censorship and Western news agencies are severely restricted. Most independent reports are assembled from travelers, exiles, diplomats, and other sources.

Bujak, 27, was the leader of the largest local in the now-banned 9.5 million-member independent labor movement. He apparently evaded arrest when the government declared martial law Dec. 13 and remains in hiding. Most of Bujak's colleagues in the 107-member union leadership were seized.

A former paratrooper, Bujak has been described as a charismatic leader mentioned as a possible successor to Lech Walesa as head of Solidarity. Walesa is reportedly under house arrest in Warsaw.

"I wish the time will come," said Bujak's message to soldiers, "when you will not be used against your own society, when instead of being tools in the hands of the criminal authorities waging a war against the nation, you will become its real defenders."

Writing to families of those detained in the crackdown, he was quoted as saying he believes "that out of your suffering will come a Poland without prisons and internment camps, a Poland without police roundups and without constant fear."

The message also said the independent union was still able to function because of defiant members, and predicted "the final victory will be on the side of Solidarity, on the side of the nation."

CBS News reported Thursday night that the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw believes Premier Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski will not lift martial law until after the government imposes stiff price hikes on consumer goods, food and fuel.

It was government price increases in 1980 that led to widespread strikes, the formation of Solidarity and what has become known as the reform movement. Solidarity is the first union in the Soviet bloc free of government control.

Uncensored reports from Poland quoted a high-ranking Roman Catholic source as saying there were 50 internment centers nationwide, detainees have almost no contact with the outside.

Rescue Party Suspends Search For Missing Pilot

SALIDA, Colo. (AP) — The organized search for a missing pilot was suspended after rescuers reported no trace of the man one week after he left the wreckage of his light plane in search of help in the storm-battered Colorado Rockies.

The pilot, Gary Meeks, 42, of Dallas, Texas, was dressed in cowboy boots.

jeans and a leather jacket when he walked away from the Christmas Eve crash which injured four other persons. He hasn't been seen since, and officials held out little hope of his survival.

The other four occupants of the plane, huddling in the snowbound fuselage to keep warm, were rescued after spending five days without food on the frigid mountain a few hundred yards from the Continental Divide.

An Army helicopter returned to the snow-swept northern flank of Mount Columbia on Thursday to shut off the single-engine Piper Cherokee's emergency radio signal. Two skiers from Rocky Mountain Search and Rescue left the chopper and descended the mountain, looking for the missing pilot.

Chaffee County Sheriff's dispatcher Jeff Blondeau said the two men searched the crash area and the possible exit routes Meeks might have taken to get down the mountain. "They found no sign of the man at all," Blondeau said.

Thursday's search was hampered by another foot of new snow which fell overnight in the area. Ken Zafren of Boulder, one of the searchers, told sheriff's officers that the snow was so deep in the area that a person trying to maneuver in those conditions would need snowshoes, which Meeks apparently didn't have.

Following Thursday's unsuccessful search efforts, Louis Dahn of the rescue group called off the organized search until some leads surface as to Meeks' whereabouts. Dahn planned to have a helicopter check the area again on Friday or Saturday, but no other procedures were scheduled.

Meanwhile, one of the survivors of the crash called Meeks "the hero" of the miraculous story of survival.

Swan To Lead Workshop

The fourth in a series of "Parents Are Teachers" workshops will be held Tuesday from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. at the Pitt County Mental Health Center.

Featured will be Dr. Timothy Swann, coordinator of children's services at the center. His subject will be "Managing Your Child's Behavior."

These workshops are held for parents and professionals working with young children. The program includes registration and refreshments, discussion, and activities for parents to learn different games and educational activities to do with their children.

Collision

Cars driven by Dwayne Eric Tomlinson of 205-B Eastbrook Drive and Jasper Cannon of Route 2, Box 341-A, Ayden, collided on Greenville Boulevard near Hooker Road at 7:35 p.m. Thursday, causing an estimated $700 in damages, say Greenville police.

Police set damage to the Cannon vehicle at $200 and damage to the Tomlinson vehicle at $500. No charges were made.

Mishap Reported

A one-car accident Thursday night on Memorial Drive caused an estimated $800 in damage to a vehicle driven by Carol Gwendolyn Whitehurst of 1800-B Conley St.

According to Greenville police, Ms. Whitehurst was headed south on Memorial Drive when another vehicle reportedly merged into her lane, forcing her over the curb. No charges were made.

Lennon Named To Committee

Donald R. Lennon of Greenville has been named by Gov. Jim Hunt to the North Carolina Historical Records Advisory Committee.

The committee, chaired by Dr. William S. Price Jr., director of the N.C. Division of Archives and History, has been restructured to meet the needs of a $17,500 grant awarded to the state by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. The funding is to be used to conduct a statewide assessment of record holdings and needs in North Carolina. The committee will oversee that survey.

Lennon is curator of the manuscripts collection in Joyner Library at East Carolina University. His term will end Sept. 30, 1982.

Denkler, Jones Lead Lady Bucs To 81-57 Win Over Georgia State

MIAMI, Fla. — East Carolina University, led by the scoring of Mary Denkler and Sam Jones, bounced back from an opening game defeat in the Miami Jamboree to nail Georgia State, 81-57, last night.

The game was the second played by the Pirates in the six-day affair. They lost earlier to Northwestern, 78-70. The victory raised the Lady Pirate record to 3-4, and was their first road win in five starts.

Denkler paced the Pirate attack with 22 points, while Jones was right behind with 21. Denkler also snatched away 15 rebounds to lead all players, while Jones grabbed off 10.

Hitting 16 of her points in the first half, Denkler led the Lady Pirates out to a 34-29 halftime lead. She scored East Carolina's final 12 points in the half to break open a tight game in the final minute of the period.

In the second half, Georgia State's Sherry Stinchcomb scored twice to give the Lady Panthers a short-lived 37-36 lead. Then, East Carolina outscored the Panthers, 19-2, over a five-minute stretch, to build up a 55-39 lead.

Darlene Chaney and Jones led the spurt, each scoring six points.

Jones netted 15 of her 21 in the second half as she led the Pirates in their pullaway from the Panthers from there on.

Georgia State, the defending Region III championship team, won its first two games of the classic over host Miami and West Virginia before falling to the Lady Pirates. The Panthers are now 5-6 on the year.

"By far, it's the best game we've played this season," a delighted coach Cathy Andruzzi said afterwards. "It's an indication of what I feel we can do. The girls gave it all they had and we were pleased that all nine people on our team contributed to the win. Because of foul troubles, we had to play everyone in critical situations and everyone responded. The subs came in and did the thing that they can do well. They didn't try to do things that they don't do well."

Andruzzi pointed out that usually when a team goes up by 20 with ten minutes or so left, they lose intensity and allow the opponent to close the gap. "But we kept our hustle and intensity going," she said.

"One of our big concerns was keeping them off the boards," Andruzzi continued. "They were much bigger than us inside. But we outrebounded them (54-35). Mary and Sam did superb jobs."

"We played our game and forced them out of their game. I'm glad to see Sam have a good game. It was the best of the season. She really smoked, but everyone else on the team played very well, too."

The rebounding margin reflected the first time that the Panthers had been outrebounded during the entire season.

Andruzzi drew two technical fouls during the contest, both coming together with 1:29 left in the first period. The Panthers made both free throws to close within 32-29, but they failed to score on the following

Conley Matmen Win Tourney

PLYMOUTH — D.H. Conley's wrestlers won five individual championships and won the Plymouth Holiday Invitational Wrestling Tournament yesterday.

The Vikings went into the final match of the day, the heavyweight class, tied with host Plymouth for first place, and won the tournament when Paul Menichelli took the title on a pin. That gave Conley a team total of 174½ points as compared to Plymouth's 166½.

Cape Hatteras finished third with 81 points, while Northern Nash was fourth with 70. Williamston, hampered by having several wrestlers ill, finished fifth with 59 points.

Both Plymouth and Conley sent ten wrestlers to the finals, as Plymouth won six titles and Conley, five. Conley also had five seconds, while Plymouth had four. The difference, however, came as Conley's other two wrestlers each finished third, while Plymouth failed to take a third or fourth.

Williamston ended up with one first, one second, two thirds and four fourths.

The Tigers' Brian Purvis, who won the 157-pound class was named as the tournament's most outstanding wrestler.

Conley's Reginald Moore, at 107, and Menichelli are still unbeaten. Moore is 10-0, while Menichelli is 9-0.

Conley returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to West Craven for its first Coastal Conference match, while Williamston travels to Roanoke for a Northeastern Conference match.

Schembechler's Tighter Leash Pays Off With 33-14 Victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Michigan defensive tackle Winfred Carraway figures it's time for the Wolverines to celebrate.

With Michigan's Butch Woolfolk commanding the ground game and Steve Smith and Anthony Carter bombing from the air, the 16th-ranked Wolverines stunned the 19th-ranked Bruins 33-14 in the 23rd annual Bluebonnet Bowl Thursday night.

"We don't have a curfew tonight because we won the game, but UCLA partied all week and it definitely showed tonight," Carraway said. "We out-quoted UCLA because it really was hot and their big guys started tiring out."

Michigan's spit-and-polish coach, Bo Schembechler, kept his players under strict curfew during the days leading up to the game, while UCLA's Terry Donahue held a lighter leash on his team.

But Woolfolk's 186 yards rushing and Smith's 50-yard touchdown bomb to Carter likely did more to give Michigan its second bowl victory of 1981.

Michigan, which narrowly missed a return trip to the Rose Bowl, where it defeated Washington 23-6 last Jan. 1, took a 10-0 halftime lead on a 24-yard field goal by Ali Haji-Sheikh and Smith's touchdown bomb to Carter.

The Bruins' offense received a tongue-lashing from Donahue in the first half and cut the deficit to 10-7 in the third quarter on a 17-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Tom Ramsey to Jojo Townsell.

"He told us to get our acts together," UCLA tight end Tim Wrightman said. "We just weren't playing well and sometimes you need that to get going."

After Townsell's catch, Michigan came back with a 47-yard field goal by Haji-Sheikh and a 1-yard run by Woolfolk, who earned Most Valuable Player honors for his 186 yards rushing on 27 carries.

Wrightman caught a 9-yard touchdown pass from Ramsey for the Bruins' final points before Smith ran 9 yards for a touchdown and reserve running back B.J. Dickey tackled on the final score with eight seconds to play.

"Woolfolk did it all. He is the greatest rusher in Michigan history," Schembechler said.

Miami, Chargers Arrive By Two Different Routes

MIAMI (AP) — New Year's Day is just another day on the calendar for the San Diego Chargers and Miami Dolphins, another day of practice in preparation for Saturday's National Football League playoff game.

The Chargers are working out at the University of Miami, the Dolphins at their Biscayne College training camp before they meet to decide which division champion will make it to the American Conference championship, the penultimate step to the Super Bowl.

The Dolphins, champions of the AFC East, and the Chargers, the best in the West, got to the tops of their respective divisions by very different routes.

Miami relied on a conservative, ball-control offense and one of the conference's better defenses, particularly during the final four weekends of the regular season, when they allowed an average of less than 10 points a game, two of those games against playoff teams (Philadelphia and Buffalo).

The Chargers, on the other hand, managed to survive their own defense, statistically one of the worst in the conference, because it had the NFL's most potent offense. Dan Fouts once again shattered his own NFL passing yardage record and the team, with three 1,000-yard receivers and a 1,000-yard rusher, broke the league's total yardage mark.

The teams are not much different than they were when last they met, on Nov. 20, 1980. Dan Fouts passed for three touchdowns in that game and David Woodley, then a rookie, passed for one Miami TD as the teams fought to a 24-24 tie after four quarters. But in the overtime, a Woodley pass was intercepted by linebacker Woodrow Lowe and returned 28 yards to the Dolphins' 12-yard line, setting up Rolf Benirschke's game-winning 28-yard field goal 7:14 into overtime.

Chuck Muncie, obtained from New Orleans by San Diego four games into the 1980 season, finished 1981 with 1,144 of the Chargers' 2,005 rushing yards. And he rushed for 19 touchdowns to tie an NFL record shared by Jim Taylor and Earl Campbell.

The Dolphins gained more on the ground — 2,173 yards — but did it with balance. Tony Nathan leading the team with 782 yards and five TDs and second-round draft pick Andra Franklin adding 711 yards and seven TDs. Franklin's performance was particularly gratifying to the Dolphins since he was primarily a blocking back at Nebraska and had been expected to open the holes for David Overstreet, Miami's No. 1 pick. But Overstreet wound up signing with the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

The early-season loss of wide receiver John Jefferson, traded to Green Bay after he sought to renegotiate his con-

Seve Leads Golf Event

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — There were baboons barking in the nearby hills and reports of mambas and cobras on the course. The gallery wandered into the fairways and at least once came onto the greens, one lady marking them up with high leads.

But Lee Trevino said he saw no livestock and wasn't concerned at all about the crowd's minor transgressions during the first round of the world's richest golf tournament.

"Like I've said before, they're paying $20 to be here and I'm playing for all this money," Trevino said. "So long as they don't grab my club on my backswing, I don't care what they do."

All this money, as Trevino called it, consists of a total purse of $1 million to be spread among only five players, with $500,000 going to the winner of the Sun City Golf Challenge.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain took the first-round lead with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole Thursday, finishing off a 3-under-par 69 and breaking a four-way tie for the top spot.

Luck's With W. Virginia, 26-6 Mississippi State Is Too Much For Kansas Club

ATLANTA (AP) — West Virginia quarterback Oliver Luck, who earned academic All-American honors two years in a row, justified his selection in the Peach Bowl by using his brains as well as his arm in confusing Florida.

Luck, who has earned a 3.96 academic point average in his four years at West Virginia, passed for one touchdown while guiding a surprisingly strong ground attack Thursday as the Mountaineers dominated the Gators 26-6 in the nationally televised contest at soggy Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium.

"Coming off a three- to four-week break since the end of the regular season the passing game needs a lot of timing," said Luck. "So we did a lot of things differently today. Getting an early lead also helped."

The Mountaineers, who finished the year at 9-3, came out throwing from the start as Luck mixed up the running game and hit on six straight passes for 42 yards, including a 7-yarder to tailback Mickey Walczak in the end zone.

Freshman walk-on Paul Woodside added a record Peach Bowl four field goals of 35, 42, 49 and 24 yards and Walczak closed out the scoring with a 1-yard TD run as the Mountaineers ran up 301 yards, 194 on the ground and 107 passing.

West Virginia had been averaging 220 yards passing and 137 on the ground, but Luck only threw 23 times, hitting 14 for 107 yards.

"I felt Florida was very confused during our first series, overplaying our passing game," said Luck in explaining why the Mountaineers went to the run successfully.

"We weren't prepared at all for the running of West Virginia," agreed David Galloway, Florida's All-Southeastern Conference defensive tackle.

"What that comes from is poor preparation," said Florida Coach Charley Pell, whose Gators fell to 7-5 for the year. "Ole Coach Charley didn't have them ready to play."

West Virginia workhorse Dane Conwell gained 97 yards on 26 attempts; Curlin Beck added 37 on 8 attempts; and Walczak, who was named the game's outstanding offensive player, added 35 on eight tries in addition to a bowl record eight receptions for 75 yards.

On the other side of the field, the Mountaineers dominated Florida's offense, which had averaged 327 yards during the regular season, holding the Gators to a bowl record low 105 yards, including minus 30 rushing in 31 attempts.

The defense, which had five sacks for 51 yards, was keyed by second-team strong safety

Don Stemple, who came up with three tackles for losses and was named the game's outstanding defensive player.

Florida's quarterback Wayne Peace completed only six of 13 passes for 47 yards and was intercepted twice before being relieved by Bob Hewko late in the game.

Hewko averted a shutout when he hit Chris Faulkner with a 22-yard scoring pass with 3:03 left to play.

"We did a lot of different things today that we had never done before," said Stemple. "We put in a nickel defense (five defensive backs) three weeks ago and Florida didn't adjust apparently, picking up everyone but me."

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — A fumble recovery on the opening kickoff, seven quarterback sacks for minus 56 yards and a punting average of 49 yards.

It was all too much for Kansas to overcome, and that tells the story of Mississippi State's Hall of Fame football victory.

The Bulldogs blanked Kansas 10-0 in the fifth annual game Thursday and, as it turned out, they might as well have called it off after the first 12 seconds.

That's when Mississippi State quarterback John Bond, voted the Most Valuable Player, scored around right end from the 17 on the first play from scrimmage.

State's Rob Fesmire had recovered the ball after Gary Lambert stripped it from Kansas' Darren Greene on the opening kickoff.

"That was the turning point," said Coach Don Fambrough of Kansas. "We were stunned and intimidated by Mississippi State then. It took us a half to get over that mistake. You can't give a team like Mississippi State seven points or you're in trouble."

State added three points in the second period on a 22-yard field goal by Dana Moore to wrap up the scoring.

State missed other opportunities when Moore misfired on two 39-yard field goal attempts and when another drive died at the 14.

"We didn't ring the bell quite enough," State Coach Emory Bellard said, "but we did move the ball down the field a good bit."

The Bulldog defense, meanwhile, refused to yield much on the ground or in the air. Kansas got only 35 yards on 40 runs. Its quarterbacks, Steve Smith and Mike Frederick, were sacked time after time. In one series, tackle Earnie Barnes had three sacks for 24 yards.

Whenever Kansas appeared to have State backed up, Moore's punting solved that.

He had one for 74 yards, another for 62, placed two others on the seven and averaged 49 yards on nine punts.

The Kansas kicker, Bruce Scribner, was no slouch. He also kicked nine times for a 45-yard average.

Until the final seconds, Kansas could get only to the state 38.

And on that late drive, the Jayhawks drove to the 3, but a pass by Frederick on the final play fell short.

"Kansas' top quarterback, Frank Seurer, missed the game due to a dislocated shoulder and, Fambrough said, "To beat Mississippi State, we needed all our weapons and we didn't have them. Nobody saddles up and runs on Mississippi State."

Both teams, State from the Southeastern Conference and Kansas from the Big Eight, ended their seasons with 8-4 records. State is now 4-2 in bowl games and Kansas is 1-5.

Buffalo Knows How Cincy Feels

CINCINNATI (AP) — The 1981 Cincinnati Bengals remind Buffalo quarterback Joe Ferguson of the 1980 Bills, a rags-to-riches team that rebounded from a losing season to become an American Football Conference divisional champion.

"I think the Bengals are a much-improved football team — not that their personnel is any better now than it was — but they've got that winning feeling now, they know they can beat anybody they play," Ferguson said.

"That's the biggest change: they're playing with a better attitude, and the fact that they know they can win now. That's something we went through last year. We finally realized that we can win, and I think it's the same situation we were in last year, in Cincinnati."

"We came from a situation where we were not winning many football games to a situation where we started winning games. It's kind of like a snowball going downhill; once you get a feeling, it gets bigger and bigger and bigger."

"Our team will be ready to play, and we have a feeling we can beat anybody we play, also."

The Bills drafted running back Joe Cribbs from Auburn after going 7-9 in 1979. Cribbs rushed for 1,185 yards as a rookie in 1980 and led Buffalo to an 11-5 record and the AFC Eastern Division championship.

The Bengals, 6-10 last year, saw some of the team's recent draft choices mature this year, and also saw 11-year veteran quarterback Ken Anderson have the best season of his National Football League career.

Ferguson also had a big year, setting Buffalo records for attempts, completions and yards gained passing, and he anticipated Sunday's playoff game here with the Bengals confidently.

"My attitude after we've been in the playoffs three times now since I've been here ... I know it's a do-or-die situation, and I know I'm going to be able to go out and do my job the best I can," Ferguson said.

"Naturally, I want to win. And I know you don't get a second chance, so I'm going to be ready to play mentally and physically. My attitude is that I'm going to play the best ballgame I'm able to play, and hopefully everybody else on the team is going to be in the same situation."

Battle For Number One Winds Up By Tonight

By The Associated Press

Before the college football season started, few people believed in Clemson. Now, the season is almost over, the Tigers are ranked No.1, and their still are skeptics.

Unranked in the preseason Top Twenty poll, Coach Danny Ford's players proved that they were no paper tigers with a nonpareil 11-0 season.

However, even though they've leapfrogged into the top spot, they're still trying to prove themselves. They play fourth-ranked Nebraska tonight in the Orange Bowl in Miami, and the Tigers are four-point underdogs.

"Nebraska's got the reputation," says Ford in trying to explain his team's underdog position. "They've got great athletes — things we want and would like to accomplish. But win, lose or draw, we're very, very proud of what we've done."

A victory for Clemson over Nebraska, 9-2, would mean the first national football championship in the school's history — a fact that has certainly not escaped Ford.

"I don't think we've ever been in a football game this big," he said. "I haven't been in coaching long enough to campaign for the national championship. We're not trying to convince people we're the best team in the country. The only thing is, we've played 11 times and whipped 11 folks."

A Clemson loss would throw this year's national championship up for grabs. Waiting to grab it are second-ranked Georgia and third-ranked Alabama, among others.

Georgia, last year's champions, hosts No.10 Pitt in the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, while Alabama takes on No.8 Texas in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas today. Two other bowl games were on tap New Year's Day — the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Cal., where No.12 Washington will face No.13 Iowa, and the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz., where No.7 Penn State meets No.8 Southern Cal.

Three bowls were played Thursday. Mississippi State defeated Kansas 10-0 in the Hall of Fame Bowl at Birmingham, Ala.; West Virginia upset Florida 26-6 in the Peach Bowl in Atlanta, and 16th-ranked Michigan trimmed

No.19 UCLA 33-14 in the Bluebonnet Bowl in Houston.

Georgia's only loss in an 11-game season was a 13-3 defeat by Clemson early in the year, while Pitt's only defeat came at the hands of arch-rival Penn State in the last game of the regular season. The Panthers were ranked No.1 at the time, but plunged to 10th after the lopsided 48-14 defeat.

"It's not just an ordinary football game for us," said Georgia Coach Vince Dooley. "The assumption we have to make is that we're playing for the national championship. We can't be concerned about what's happening in Miami."

Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill calls Georgia "the quickest defensive team I've seen since I've been coaching."

Texas is one of the few teams in the college football world that Alabama never has beaten. The Longhorns are 6-0-1 in the series between two of the sport's superpowers.

An Alabama triumph would be the 316th in the brilliant career of Coach Bear Bryant and would give Alabama, 9-1-1, an unprecedented seven consecutive bowl victories in seven years. Texas, ranked sixth in the nation, also is 9-1-1 this season.

For a change, neither Ohio State nor Michigan will be in the Rose Bowl. This year's contest marks the first one since 1967 that neither of those perennial powers will represent the Big Ten.

It's the third visit in five years for Washington, 9-2, but only the first time for Iowa, 8-3, since 1959.

"The offensive team that can generate a little advantage will be the difference," said Washington Coach Don James, who looks forward to a general defensive battle. "Everyone will get some opportunities. You might get two or three, and the team that takes advantage of those will be the winner."

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said he did not anticipate an all-out offensive war, but added he expected the sellout crowd of 104,000 at Pasadena to be treated to an exciting game.

"I do think there probably will be more points scored by both teams than what the season statistics would indicate," Fry said. "I don't think it's going to be a dull game by any means."

Although the No.1 ranking will not hinge on the Fiesta Bowl, the Penn State-Southern Cal battle is clearly one of the most attractive matchups of all the bowl games. Both are perennial national powers coming off good seasons, and Southern Cal features Marcus Allen, the Heisman Trophy winner and the first college player to gain 2,000 yards in a single season.

It is the first time Penn State and Southern Cal have met since the 1923 Rose Bowl game, which the Trojans won 14-3.

Giants, 49ers Both Confident

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers had the best regular-season record in the National Football League. The New York Giants were just 9-7. But both teams are supremely confident as they head for Sunday's playoff game.

"I think we were surprised early in the year by our success, but I don't think there's any surprise left," said quarterback Joe Montana, a main figure in San Francisco's 13-3 record. "Everyone's playing well and the confidence is there. I think that's the key."

Scott Brunner, who has led the Giants to five victories in six games after moving in as the starting quarterback, says his team has "so much confidence now that we feel we can beat anybody."

Although many feel the game may be decided by two of the roughest defenses in football, Montana and Brunner figure to play key roles in the National Conference battle at soggy Candlestick Park.

Montana, who directed a rather conservative attack in a 17-10 victory over the Giants Nov. 29, says the 49ers will open up more this time.

"I think we wanted to play just soundly enough to come out with the victory," he said of the win that sewed up the NFC's Western Division title for the 49ers.

Montana passed for more than 20 yards just twice in that game and did not throw a touchdown pass. Still, he completed 27 of 39 passes for 214 yards, and scored a touchdown on a 20-yard quarterback draw.

This time, said the NFC's leading passer, "We can't be too conservative. We've got to take chances down the field, and I think we'll do it."

Brunner completed just 13 of 34 passes in the game, but it was just his second start after replacing injured Phil Simms. That was the Giants' last loss with him at the controls, and last Sunday the 6-foot-5 second-year pro fired three touchdown passes in a wild-card playoff victory over the Philadelphia Eagles.

In addition to Brunner's development, much of the Giants' late-season success has been due to the running of Rob Carpenter, who came from Houston in an October trade. His 161 yards rushing against the Eagles was the most by a Giants runner in 30 years.

On Sunday, said Brunner, "Rob Carpenter will be a good part of our offense, and we'll mix things up with our passing game."

The one thing neither team wants is to fall behind early. "They played us tough last time, and hopefully we won't make the mistakes that Philadelphia made and give them an early lead," said Montana.

"The first thing we have to do this time around is be ready," said New York Coach Ray Perkins. "We have to work on not tipping them off on plays, so they can't make the big break on us early."

Familiar Matchup In Contest

DALLAS (AP) — When the Dallas Cowboys host Tampa Bay in Saturday's National Football League divisional playoff game, Buccaneers quarterback Doug Williams will be trying to beat Cowboys cornerback Everson Walls. It won't be the first time, and it won't be easy.

Walls played his college football at Grambling and, when he was a freshman, the big man on campus was senior quarterback Doug Williams.

The two remember each other from long, intense practice sessions — Williams doing his best to beat the freshman defender, and Walls grimly determined to hold his ground.

"Walls and the three other young guys back there were real aggressive," Williams recalled. "They challenged you. I guess the hardest times I had my senior year were during practice."

Walls has similar memories of the big, rifle-armed quarterback who tested him during drills, calling those sessions "the biggest learning experience" of his college days.

"You got so many balls coming at you," he said. "Grambling had so many ways of beating a defensive back or setting him up. I learned all the setups. We learned all the plays, all the tricks.

"Doug was trying to prove something, too," Walls continued. "He didn't want his reputation ruined out there on the practice field against a bunch of freshmen. He didn't want us picking off his passes. It made him mad. He challenged us and we challenged him."

Williams was named to The Associated Press All-America football team after his senior season, finished fourth in the Heisman Trophy balloting and was Tampa Bay's first-round draft choice.

Walls' only collegiate honor was statistical — he led the nation in interceptions his senior year. He was not drafted by any team and he joined the Cowboys as a free agent.

To the surprise of almost everyone, he made the team, then became a starter, then wound up leading the NFL with 11 regular-season interceptions, breaking the team record.

"I thought Walls would play pro ball," Williams said, "but I am surprised he led the league in interceptions. I guess a lot of people are. It looks like Dallas got the steal of the century."

But Walls does not expect he will be able to draw on his collegiate experience for an edge against Williams in Saturday's rematch.

"You've got to remember that I played free safety when I was a freshman at Grambling. Now I'm covering from cornerback," he said. "And we've both changed a lot."

The winner of the 1 p.m. EST game will advance to the National Football Conference championship game the following week, the last stop before Super Bowl XVI.

CBS Takes Top Spot in Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS' "60 Minutes" was back on top in the week ending Dec. 27 as the No. 1 program in prime time, grabbing the spot from another CBS show, "Dallas," which was preempted Christmas night, figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. showed.

The programming maneuver that cost the network "Dallas" for a week didn't seem to hurt, though, as CBS listed eight of the week's 10 highest-rated shows and won the three-way competition for the fifth straight week. It was CBS' eighth finish at the top in the 12 weeks of the new TV year.

"60 Minutes" now has been No. 1 four times in the last five weeks, while "Dallas" — last season's top-rated program — has finished first six times.

The rating for "60 Minutes" was 29.9. Nielsen says that means of the nation's homes with television, 29.9 percent saw at least part of the program.

CBS' average rating, meanwhile, was 16.7 to 15.9 for ABC and 12.8 for NBC. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the period, 16.7 percent of the country's TV-equipped homes were watching CBS.

The rating for NBC was the lowest for any network this season, and it came despite a good showing by "Little House on the Prairie," which finished fifth.

The only other Top 10 show not on CBS was ABC's "Monday Night Football" finale between Oakland and San Diego, which finished 10th.

The highest-rated of the season's new programs was ABC's "Fall Guy," in 19th place, which CBS scored with "Bill," a "GE Theater" special, which finished in a tie for sixth.

NBC had four of the week's five lowest-rated programs, beginning with a movie, "The Man in the Santa Claus Suit," No. 65. "NBC Magazine" was 66th, followed by "Best of the West" on ABC, and two NBC shows — "High Hopes: The Capra Years," and "Project Peacock" repeat, "Donahue & Kids."

Here are the week's 10 highest-rated programs:

"60 Minutes," with a rating of 29.9 representing 24.5 million homes, "Alice," 24.5 or 20.1 million, "The Jeffersons," 24 or 19.7 million, and "Archie Bunker's Place," 22.7 or 18.6 million, all CBS; "Little House on the Prairie," 22.4 or 18.3 million, NBC; Movie: "Bill," and "M-A-S-H," both 21.5 or 17.6 million, both CBS; "One Day at a Time," 21.3 or 17.4 million, and "Trapper John, M.D.," 21.2 or 17.3 million, both CBS, and "NFL Monday Night Football," Oakland vs. San Diego, 21 or 17.2 million.

The remainder of the Top 20:

"House Calls," CBS; "Fantasy Island," ABC; Movie: "Shampoo," ABC, and "Private Benjamin," CBS, tie, and "Love Boat," "John Denver and the Muppets Christmas Special," "Hart to Hart," "Three's Company," "Fall Guy" and "Too Close for Comfort," all ABC.

Psychic Joins Rescue Try

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A sighting of a "life-raft-sized object" led the Coast Guard to continue searching Thursday for the pilot of a Phantom F4-E jet that crashed into the Atlantic Dec. 18, coast guard officials said.

Meanwhile, the family of Air Force Lt. Michael Mattson, 24, said it has hired a psychic to aid in the search.

Durham television station WTVD said it flew professional psychic Robert Petro, 42, of Thurman, N.Y., in the station helicopter over ocean areas between Savannah, Ga., and Hilton Head Island, S.C., on Thursday.

Petro said he felt "very close" to Mattson, "like he was right near me."

"I told them the pilot was alive. I feel the pilot is still in the ocean, approximately 20-30 miles off the coast, down around the Hilton Head area," Petro said in a telephone interview. "I gave them (Air Force) the information and they're going to be sending out tomorrow morning a search party. I feel each day he may be drifting more south."

"From the aerial view, I see an island with very expensive homes, in the $150,000 to $200,000 range, on it," Petro said. "To the right going north, I see a rock formation, a coastline."

Kathleen DeLaski of WTVD, calling from Savannah, said Petro felt that an area near Hilton Head matched the "visions" he had in New York of the aircraft's crash site.

Osborn refused to say whether the Air Force had checked that area.

"They'll check to see if that is in the area of the search pattern," he said. "We'll accept information from any private citizen, and we'll pass it on to the appropriate officials."

A high-resolution photograph of a "life-raft-sized" object was taken Wednesday, said Petty Officer Luis Dias of the 7th Coast Guard in Miami, which is coordinating the search.

Searchers concentrated Thursday on a 4,000-square-mile area centered 65 miles southeast of Charleston, S.C. Participating in the search were three helicopters, a turbojet and a cutter. By 2:30 p.m., only the turbojet was still searching, he said. Dias said the searchers began on the perimeter of the area and closed in on an increasingly smaller area.

Capt. Pat Osborne, an Air Force spokesman, said bad weather was hampering the search and that skies were overcast as low as 500 feet and seas were between 6 and 9 feet in the search area.

The plane was on a routine training mission from Seymour Johnson when difficulties forced Mattson and his copilot, Lt. Thomas W. Tiller, 26, to bail out into the Atlantic off the coast of Wilmington.

Tiller was rescued Christmas Eve after spending six days adrift in a life raft without food or water. He was found about 65 miles east of Charleston, S.C.

Authorities say they will decide on a "day to day basis" whether to continue the search for Mattson.

Air Force officials have declined to discuss the cause of the crash, and Osborn says it will be the subject of a lengthy investigation.

Celebrations Welcome New Year in Greenville

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Celebrations to say goodbye to 1981 and to welcome in 1982 in Greenville were held in a number of restaurants, clubs and other gathering places during New Year's Eve.

In a survey made Thursday afternoon, several establishments could not be contacted. Those contacted reported a variety of plans made for last night's greeting of 1982. Several noted their New Year entertainments were basically the same for any Thursday night, with the addition of party favors. Places contacted were:

•Casablanca — All 800 available seats for the club's New Year package were sold in advance. The $60 per couple package included two bands to provide music from nine to one — The Swing Kings, a Greenville band, and the Tommy Campbell Band from Washington. Party favors, champagne at midnight, and an offering of four entrees were also included in the New Year package.

•The Attic Night Club downtown Greenville featured a performance by the band No Vacancy. Billed as the South's No. 6 rock nightclub, the Attic also treated patrons to favors in a cover charge of $3.50 per person or $6 per couple.

•At The Paddock Club, Greenville's gay club, the manager noted that patrons were strongly encouraged to celebrate safely for the holiday by drinking lots of coffee. The club's traditional entertainment fare of disco music was offered, along with party favors and a hot breakfast served at 1 a.m.

•A recorded message at Greenville's Opry House noted that a $7 per person cover charge included entertainment by the Bill Alley Band.

•At the Moose Lodge, the New Year's party from 9 to 1 spotlighted music by a country-western band, The Country Creed from Williamston. Party favors were distributed, and a hot breakfast served at 1 a.m.

•Ramada Inn was another establishment offering an inclusive package of dining and entertainment. The package, at $65 per couple, included a full meal, music by the Cornelius Brothers and Sister Rose, a champagne toast for midnight, and a hot breakfast. The New Year package was a sell-out event.

•Louie's Lounge for New Year's had on hand its regular Saturday night entertainer, Farmville disc jockey Steve Hardy spinning Beach Music. Louie's also had party favors for New Year celebrants.

•Rafter's, a Greenville Rock and Roll Club, entertained patrons with a selection of recorded music and gave out party favors.

•Downtown's Chapter X had music provided by The American Dream, with John Moore as MC for its New Year party. For $15 a couple, or $7 for girls and $9 for guys, Chapter X also furnished free party favors and beverages.

•Peaches, a club located in the Greenville Square Shopping Mall, featured for its entertainment an appearance by Gerry B and the Turntables. Also included in the club's New Year party plans were party favors, champagne toast at midnight and hot and cold hors d'ouvres.

Student Honored

Kelly Smith has been elected student of the month by the Warsaw Kenansville Rotary Club. Kelly is ranked second scholastically out of 148 students in her senior class at James Kenan High School.

Kelly is the daughter of Al and Jean Smith of Warsaw and the granddaughter of Mr. W.H. Smith of Greenville. She plans to attend Peace College and UNC-CH to major in physical therapy.

How Tar Heel Representatives And Senators Voted

Roll Call Report Service
WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the final days of the First Session of the 97th Congress.

House
DEFENSE — By a vote of 334 for and 84 against, the House approved a bill appropriating $199.7 billion for defense spending in FY 1982. Among major outlays, the bill provides $61.8 billion for procurement, $61.9 billion for operations and maintenance, $38.1 billion for military retirees. It includes money for Administration priorities such as the B-1 bomber, MX missile, Stealth bomber, and a beefed-up navy.

The bill, the most expensive single appropriations bill ever enacted, fell less than $1 billion short of President Reagan's budget request. Its price tag is $28 billion higher than the 1981 defense bill. The bill (HR 4995) later was cleared by the Senate and sent to the President.

Supporter Joseph Adabbo, D-N.Y., called the bill "the best possible solution that reasonable men have been able to make under extremely trying circumstances." Opponents Bruce Vento, D-Mich., said that while national security is highly expensive, "the interest on national security also requires a strong economy which cannot be achieved with waste in defense spending."

Members voting "yea" supported the defense bill spending.

Reps. Walter Jones, D-1, L.H. Fountain, D-2, Charles Whitley, D-3, Ike Andrews, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Eugene Johnston, R-6, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Martin, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10, voted "yea."

Rep. Walter Hendon, R-11, did not vote.

Black Lung
The House passed, 363 for and 47 against, a bill to revolve solvency to the trust fund that pays benefits to coal miners stricken with black lung disease. The bill (HR 5159) doubles the excise tax on extracted coal — the fund's chief source of revenue. Also, it tightens criteria for disability claims, and it gives the trust fund responsibility for some 10,200 unresolved claims that had been made against coal and insurance companies. Also part of the bill were miscellaneous changes in the tax code, including provisions allowing members of Congress increased tax deductions for Washington living expenses. After House passage the bill went to the president.

Supporter Harold Rogers, R-Ky., said "a $9 billion deficit (in the trust fund) has been projected for 1995, but as a result of this bill we should be able to entirely eliminate this deficit."

Opponent John Erlenborn, R-Ill., said the higher coal tax will be passed through to consumers of electricity and that "coal companies and insurance companies will have more money in their pockets."

Members voting "yea" supported the bill-out of the black lung disability fund as well as expanded tax deductions for congressmen's Washington living expenses.

Jones, Fountain, Whitley, Andrews, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Martin and Hendon voted "yea."

Johnston and Broyhill voted "nay."

Senate
BLACK LUNG — By a vote of 63 for and 30 against, the Senate passed the bill (HR 5159) to bail out the insolvent black lung trust fund and make miscellaneous changes in the tax code (see House vote above).

Supporter Robert Dole, R-Kans., acknowledged that the black lung disability program is riddled with abuse, but he said that after enactment of this bill "the program will become a likable bit less wasteful, the cost will be borne by producers and consumers of coal, and the trust fund should be solvent."

Opponent Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said eligibility standards are so loose that even though those who strip mine coal can qualify for black lung benefits. "From what I can tell, it resembles a retirement program, and think it would be even far better called a retirement program for Eastern coal miners," he said.

Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, voted "yea."

EXPORTS — The Senate approved, 67 for and 27 against, legislation funding the Commerce Department's Export Coal Administration through FY 1983 and increasing criminal penalties for exporters who sell sensitive goods and services to the Soviet Union and other foreign foes. Controversy centered on the bill's omission of language giving Congress authority to veto Administration embargoes of farm exports. Anti-embargo language had been approved by the Senate, but it was dropped in the House-Senate conference on the legislation. The bill (HR 3567) later was approved by the House and sent to the president.

Supporter John Heinz, R-Pa., said the stiff criminal penalties set by the bill should be "sufficient to deter anyone from exporting goods or technology or services that would be a hazard to our national interest."

Opponent Allen Dixon, D-Ill., said he would vote against the bill because the anti-embargo language had been deleted in conference. He said that "farmers should not be singled out as targets for export controls except under exceptional circumstances."

Senators voting "yea" favored the bill. East and Helms voted "nay."

Twice As Many Traffic Lights

FARMINGTON, Maine (AP) — Local officials are bemoaning a move that strikes at the heart of small-town America.

The state is planning to double the number of traffic signals in this town overnight.

Instead of one light, Farmington will have two.

"I hate to see it come," said Town Manager Alan Gove. "I think one's plenty."

There has been a light at Broadway and Main since at least the 1940s. But now, U.S. 2 and other highways in this Franklin County town of 10,000 people are bearing ever-increasing loads of traffic from tourists heading to the Sugarloaf and Saddleback mountains and other vacation getaway spots.

"The traffic engineers have determined that it's needed," Gove said of the light destined for Bridge and River streets in West Farmington. It is expected to cost the state $13,000. It's part of a construction project and Gove also laments the torn-up roads and detours that will bring.

"I can only recommend patience," he said.

Life As It's Lived

Old Clutter Provides A Feeling Of Stability

By GAIL MICHAELS
New Year's Day is traditionally the day for throwing out the old and bringing in the new. I suppose that in some ways this concept is appealing. I, for instance, would like to trade in my trousseau for a few less aged garments.

But all in all, I have to be practical. If I were to throw out the old at our house, not only wouldn't I have any clothes, but I wouldn't have any furniture or any food in my refrigerator either.

And even if I could afford to bring in the new, I'm not sure I'd be comfortable about it. There's something very soothing about knowing that my sofa is as form-fitting as Underalls and in all the same places and that the giblet gravy from Thanksgiving dinner is still there if I want a good case of food poisoning.

The truth of the matter is that I'm a collector at heart. Nothing I collect could be classified as antique or otherwise valuable; after all, I wouldn't want to be pretentious. I tend more toward old paperbacks, old checkstubs, and old dust. I like clutter. It gives me a sense of stability, of continuity. And clutter is not possible if one is always throwing out the old.

Besides, getting rid of the old seems to bring about bad luck, not good luck, around our house. During one of my rare cleaning binges, I threw away the comics which Phillip had been hording since his youth. Two weeks later I read that comics were selling for $135 apiece.

Then there was the time I gave away my maternity clothes. That was right before I got pregnant.

So I'm very careful about what I let get away from me. And if I'm careful, Phillip is obsessive. The top drawer of his chest are full of pennies and cash register receipts. He vindicates himself by pointing to the increasing value of pennies. I can't wait to see what cash register receipts are bringing at the bank next year.

The last time the top of his desk was visible was the last

Opposition To Computer Mail

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department is seeking an injunction to prevent the U.S. Postal Service from starting a new computerized mail service on Monday.

The department filed a suit in U.S. District Court Wednesday asking for a temporary restraining order and a permanent order requiring a hearing by the Postal Rate Commission.

The Justice Department said in its brief that the Postal Service was threatening to use tax subsidies to pre-empt a new communications method that might be better served by private business.

The new service, known as "ECOM" for electronic computer originated mail, would allow mass mailers to hook their computers up to new Postal Service computers in 25 cities around the country for transmitting address lists and texts.

time we moved. The last time he threw anything away was in 1962. That was his report card.

Perhaps Phillip's strong sense of continuity explains his reluctance to take down the Christmas decorations. Our tree usually comes down by Feb. 1 or whenever I get around to it. The boxes of decorations then remain in the middle of the dining room floor for another month or until I get around to putting them in the attic. The wreath has been known to hang around until the summer solstice. It's too heavy for me lift alone.

In fact, the only person I've known with a stronger sense of continuity than Phillip's is our friend, Bob, who once lit up an Easter feast with his jack-o-lantern lamp.

With that in mind, perhaps there's something to bringing in the new year after all.

U.S. Products Grow Costlier

WASHINGTON (AP) — American products are becoming more costly compared to goods from other nations because of rising wages and the strength of the U.S. dollar on international markets, according to U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics figures.

This rising cost apparently has contributed to recent slow U.S. exports, which are expected to be some $40 billion less than imports this year.

The bureau's figures, made available Wednesday, compare amounts paid to production workers in 13 countries, including some of the chief competitors of the United States.

In mid-1981, the bureau said U.S. labor costs of $10.97 per hour trailed only Belgium at $11.29 and Sweden at $11.90.

MX Missiles To Be Deployed In Minuteman Silos

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force says it will put the first batch of 40 MX missiles in fortified Minuteman silos on a single Air Force base rather than scatter them among Titan silos.

Announcing the decision Thursday at the Pentagon, the officials said one reason for the change is that it would be easier to protect the MX with an anti-ballistic missile system in Minuteman silos because they are closer together than the 52 Titan silos originally contemplated.

The officials, who declined to permit use of their names, told reporters they will decide next spring on which of six possible Air Force bases will be used for the first 40 MX missiles.

The program, outlined last October by President Reagan calls for a total deployment of 100 missiles, with the initial ones ready for operation in 1986.

The six bases with Minuteman silos under consideration for the revised basing scheme: Malmstrom in Montana, Ellsworth in South Dakota, Whiteman in Missouri, Minot and Grand Forks in North Dakota and Francis E. Warren in Wyoming.

The Titan silos cited earlier as likely homes for new MX weapons were in Arizona and Arkansas.

Although one of the officials said "there is no way you can make any missile deployment ... without running into some opposition," the initial reaction to Thursday's announcement was favorable.

South Dakota Gov. Bill Janklow said, "If it will contribute to the national defense, South Dakota always said yes. We don't want to be the only one that does things, but we'll do our share."

He suggested placing MX missiles in South Dakota would not increase the state's vulnerability as a target since they would be housed in some of the 150 Minuteman silos already dotting the western part of the state.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., whose Tucson district includes 18 Titan missile silos, greeted the decision with relief.

"I think it's good that Tucson finally won't be one of the top targets aimed at by Soviet missile technicians," he said.

Bob Maynes, a spokesman for Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., expressed a similar sentiment.

"Once the MXs are based someplace else and once the Titans are removed, then we'll relax," he said.

Use of existing silos has been described as an interim plan pending a decision by July 1983 on a permanent basing method that will minimize the MX system's vulnerability to Soviet surprise attack.

Air Force officials said they expect the additional 60 missiles will be deployed either 3,000 to 4,000 feet underground, aboard long-endurance aircraft or in silos protected by anti-missile defenses.

In explaining why the Air Force had decided to place at least the first 40 MX missiles in Minuteman silos, the Pentagon listed three reasons:

—"Their spacing is more compatible with ballistic missile defense deployment."

Such a defense system would have to be developed. A treaty with the Soviet Union limits each side to two defense sites, one outside the national capital. A U.S. system operated briefly in North Dakota in 1975 before being dismantled.

—"They maximize operational effectiveness for MX." In other words, Minuteman bases generally are closer to targets in the Soviet Union than Titan bases in Arkansas and Arizona.

—"Use of Minuteman silos would "minimize command, control and communications problems." Experts said, among other things, that Minuteman launch control complexes can be tied into airborne command posts while Titan bases cannot.

Despondent Dad Says He'll 'Work Things Out'

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — A man who touched off a frantic search when he wrote anonymously to a newspaper threatening to commit suicide because he couldn't support his family has come forward to say he will try to "work things out."

"All I really want is a job — I don't want no welfare," Lester Williams told the newspaper that first published his note of despair. His letter saying he would commit suicide a minute before the New Year was published in Wednesday morning's Des Moines Register.

Editor Michael Gartner published a reply in the Wednesday afternoon Tribune, the Register's sister newspaper, asking him not to kill himself because his two young daughters needed his support.

Local investigators, armed with computer lists of names from social service agencies, said they were "within an hour" of locating the man when a psychologist called to say Williams had come forward.

Williams, of the Des Moines suburb of Urbandale, heard Gartner's reply read Wednesday night on a radio talk show and contacted a legal aid counselor Thursday morning, said Polk County Attorney Dan Johnston. The counselor took him to a psychologist who called Johnston.

"For the last two years, the only kind of work I've been able to find is spot labor — unloading trucks, fixing roofs, shoveling snow, you name it," Williams told the Des Moines Register in a copyright interview published in today's issues.

"I want a job so bad I can taste it. That's all I want. I haven't worked one day this month," Williams said.

Johnston, who verified Williams as the letter writer through handwriting analysis, said he was not planning to take legal action against the 36-year-old Navy veteran.

The Younkers department store chain offered the man a job and clothing and toys for his children. And Bill Tate of Eagle Grove offered $50 even though Tate will lose his own job when the plant where he works shuts down in June.

"I'm going to look into the job offer at Younkers as quick as I can Monday," Williams said.

He said he sold his rings and watches and his wife's watches for his family to survive. "We used that money for things you can't get with food stamps — soap, clothes, gasoline for my clunker so I could buy gas to go look for a job."

"Sure I thought about stealing or robbing, but it just went against my grain. You know, I almost stole a toy — just some kind of a toy — at the Sears store before Christmas, but I just couldn't do it."

In his letter to the Register on Wednesday, Williams wrote: "After giving it serious thought I have decided on Dec. 31 at 11:59 p.m. I will end my life."

"On Jan. 1, 1982, my wife and two girls will become eligible for ADC," the letter said. ADC is now known as AFDC — Aid to Families with Dependent Children. "I will no longer be living in the home. Forgive me, Polk County, for the expense of my burial. May God forgive me."

Williams' family is not eligible for ADC since he is able-bodied and lives at home. The 1981 Iowa Legislature changed the program requirements and removed two-parent families from ADC eligibility.

He also despaired over economic conditions and said President Reagan was making it "impossible" for him to live.

"It's the political system that is sick, not this individual," Johnston said.

"I think you have to face the reality that in the kind of economic situation we're in now that sane people can be driven to do things that may seem, under the circumstances, unbalanced, and this man is just one of thousands out there," Johnston said.

"I do know that we can't solve his problem by individual acts of private charity," he added.

HEXAGON HONEYCOMB CORPORATION

December 15, 1981

OPEN LETTER OF APPRECIATION

On July 7, 1981 we broke ground in Farmville for a new manufacturing facility to produce kraft paper structural honeycomb.

On December 7, 1981, we began initial production. From ground-breaking to production in five months is a remarkable accomplishment and even more so when we consider the complexity and nature of our financing arrangements, special construction requirements, and amount of equipment installed.

We wish to publicly thank various Pitt County entities and individuals who assisted us in our move into Farmville. Without their assistance and cooperation our move into Pitt County, North Carolina would have been much more difficult, taken much longer, and may not have materialized at all.

We wish to Thank:

The FARMVILLE ECONOMIC COUNCIL and Mrs. Anne McGaughey, Director, for introducing us to the community and assisting with initial planning for our relocation to this area.

The PITT COUNTY INDUSTRIAL FACILITIES AND POLLUTION CONTROL FINANCING AUTHORITY and Mr. D. Norman Worthington, Chairman, for offering and providing financing through the sale of an Industrial Revenue Bond.

The BRANCH BANKING AND TRUST COMPANY and Messrs. Danny Daniels of Wilson and Frank Gill of Farmville for providing financing of this facility through the purchase of the Revenue Bond.

The PITT COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS and Mr. Bruce Strickland, Chairman, for approval of the entire project.

The firm of SPEIGHT, WATSON, AND BREWER, and attorney William H. Watson for handling the Bond preparation and placement transaction.

Mr. Linwood Mercer, past mayor of Farmville for his early assistance in bringing our operations to Farmville.

Mr. R. E. Davenport of Farmville, for providing us with a choice industrial site which was critical in our decision to locate in Farmville.

And a very special Thanks to:

FARRIOR AND SONS, INC, of Farmville and Messrs. Jack Farring, Bill Farring, and Dan Griffis for constructing our building. This is the most reliable and conscientious commercial builder with whom we've ever had the pleasure of working. Our building was delivered on schedule, for the price contracted, and of a quality better than expected.

And to all the other local officials, individuals, and subcontractors who cooperated so willingly to keep this project going forward as scheduled.

We are very happy to be a new corporate neighbor in the Farmville, Pitt County community and will strive to benefit the community in equal measure to the benefits we hope to derive from being here.

Sincerely,

TRAINING CANINE CORPS — Photos show dogs going through training as part of an intensive 10-week course at the Department of Defense Dog Center located at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas. Uncle Sam Still Looking For Some Dogs To Train

By MACK SISK
Associated Press Writer
SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — All four branches of the military service reached their manpower recruiting goals during the last fiscal year, but Uncle Sam is still looking for a few good dogs.

Air Force recruiters recently visited Boston and Riverside, Calif., and will be in Atlanta next month looking for German shepherds and other dogs with similar physical and psychological characteristics.

Not just any old hound dog will do. Animals recruited by the Department of Defense Dog Center are an elite corps in the tradition of Nemo, a German shepherd credited with saving his master's life during an attack on Tan Son Nhut Air Base in Vietnam 15 years ago.

Nemo was a graduate of the DOD Dog Center at Lackland Air Force Base, and his picture now hangs there. The center recruits and trains dogs for the Air Force, Navy, Marines and Army, the Secret Service, FBI, Federal Aviation Administration, Drug Enforcement Administration and other government agencies.

"We're not just looking for killers. You see all kinds of dispositions," said Staff Sgt. Roger Martin, a trainer at the center which has 45 military and 11 civilian staff members. "We want a dog that will be aggressive when you want it to be aggressive, but at the same time can be petted by a child at the commissary."

So far, the center has trained more than 2,000 canine patrols to guard U.S. military installations throughout the world. It also trains dogs to sniff out narcotics and explosives.

And that has been part of the problem.

Military officials say the canine shortage is caused by a strong demand for dogs who can do both — pull guard duty as well as find drugs. A high wash-out rate has also aggravated the shortage.

Richard Grossenbacher, program manager, said the center received 799 new dogs last year, and only 332 of them, or about 43 percent, made the grade. Temperament disqualified 171 of the animals and 296 were rejected for medical reasons, he said.

Military recruiters appeal to people's patriotism to donate dogs, but they also are willing to pay up to $250 for the animals. The dogs are flown to San Antonio at government expense, and then, if rejected after testing, returned to their owners. Should the owners not want the dogs back, the Air Force will put them up for adoption.

The basic requirements for canine recruits are that they be 1 to 3 years old, weigh at least 60 pounds and be 23 inches high at the shoulders, and have "the general characteristics" of a German shepherd, Grossenbacher said.

Dogs accepted into the program get top-notch physical care. They are fed a strict diet to control their weights, X-rayed, examined, bathed, operated on and have their teeth regularly cleaned in a modern animal hospital at the center.

The trainers will bend the German shepherd look requirement somewhat if the animal exhibits good aggressive qualities. "They've seen some of the strangest German shepherds you've ever seen," Grossenbacher said.

The recruiters stress that the name given the dog by its master will be retained, so that a donor will know if his canine goes on to become a hero.

To gain greater flexibility, the military has reduced the training period from 10 to six weeks and modified some training procedures.

In the past, new recruits and new dogs were taught together, Grossenbacher said, but beginning next year, new dogs will be put with trained handlers, and trained dogs will be put with green handlers. The result will be that dogs and handlers will not be career teams as in the past, but can change partners.

A dog psychologist at the center has also drawn up a "tighter profile" for canine recruits to reduce the number of washouts.

"He feels he can predict with at least 90 percent accuracy the dogs that can make it," Grossenbacher said.

The main reasons for rejection are that some dogs are gun shy, not aggressive enough, or have a hereditary arthritic condition of the hip common among large dogs.

Of those accepted into the program, only one in 10 will go on to become "detector" dogs for sniffing out drugs and explosives, Grossenbacher said.

Dogs trained for sniffing explosives are used for no other purpose because of the difficulty of that duty, Brown said. "With explosive devices, there is no margin for error."

TACKLING ARTHRITIS

ATLANTA (AP) — Mean Joe Greene, the Pittsburgh Steeler defensive lineman, is leading a new nationwide campaign against arthritis which includes a television public-service announcement that parallels his popular soft-drink commercial.

At the end of the message instead of tossing his football jersey, Greene gives a helping hand to a young boy with juvenile arthritis.

The announcement is part of an educational program launched by the Arthritis Foundation on the theme, "It's Time We Took Arthritis Seriously."

"We want people to understand that arthritis is like me — it's mean and should be taken seriously," says Greene, who is the Arthritis Foundation's new national chairman.

When Milk Causes Discomfort

I have noticed for a long time that I would get strange symptoms when I drank milk. I have been experimenting on my own and I am sure that there is some relationship between my discomfort and milk. Just to be sure that I wasn't "losing my mind" about this, I made my wife a member of the "observation team" and she too thinks that milk and some dairy products make me sick. Is there any way of tracking this down once and for all? — Mr. G.W., Ga.

Dear Mr. W.:

You have made an excellent observation which sometimes is missed during routine medical examinations. I am speculating that you suffer from a condition that is technically known as lactose intolerance.

Lactose is one of the sugars that is normally found in milk. During the digestive process, this sugar is reduced to other sugars which are then absorbed and used by the body.

Some people do not have the enzyme lactase that reduces milk sugar, or lactose, into its simpler forms. The result is that the lactose found in milk and milk products can produce symptoms of indigestion and other intestinal complaints. Many people like yourself have learned by trial and error that their intolerance to milk is responsible for the distressing symptoms that occasionally occur.

Some people who have related the ingestion of milk to their intestinal symptoms, simply avoid milk and milk products and are thus freed from their uncomfortable symptoms. Also, there are a number of highly sophisticated tests that can positively diagnose lactose intolerance.

If people persist in their desire for milk and milk products, there are now a number of synthetic lactase enzymes available. When used under a doctor's direction, they can be taken with milk to aid in breaking down milk sugar to a form that can be absorbed without causing the distress you now experience.

My 10-year-old daughter keeps getting bladder infections. I remember that I, too, suffered from this when I was a child. Could it be a hereditary condition? — Mrs. S.R.H., Calif.

Dear Mrs. H.:

I doubt that there is any hereditary tendency towards cystitis or infections of the urinary bladder. In the absence of any physical defect, the cause is likely to be found in poor genital hygiene.

Bacteria from the vaginal and rectal area are readily introduced into the urinary bladder when there is improper cleansing. As your child grows older and becomes more fastidious in her cleansing after bowel movements and urination, the frequency and severity of these bladder infections undoubtedly will be reduced.

I do think, however, that you must be sure that there is no other underlying reason for the problem.

I Never Promised You ...

Eighty years ago today, the "point-a-minute" Michigan eleven trounced Stanford 49-0 in the very first Rose Bowl game. In those days, football was a very different sport. Touchdowns and fieldgoals counted 5 points and a game lasted 70 minutes. Players wore no numbers, but some running backs had leather straps — like valise handles — sewn to their uniforms, so teammates could drag them from tacklers. "Mass momentum assaults" with linked blockers resulted in such carnage that many campuses banned the sport. The second Rose Bowl was not played until 1916 — 14 years later. By then new safety rules and the forward pass had turned football into the modern game that millions will watch today as Iowa plays Washington.

DO YOU KNOW — When was the last time that Iowa played in the Rose Bowl?
THURSDAY'S ANSWER — U Thant of Burma was the only other Secretary-General from the "Third World."

OUTDOOR SERVICE — Using the hood of a jeep as an altar and wearing a vestment made from an Army parachute, the Rev. Nicholas J. Kusevich is ready for the mud and the rain he might encounter while holding services in the field at Fort Hood, Tex., where he is chaplain. Kusevich, 40, is one of only 10 Eastern Orthodox chaplains in the Army.

Chaplain Is Unorthodox

FORT HOOD, Tex. (AP) — Not only does Army chaplain and captain the Rev. Nicholas J. Kusevich conduct Sunday services in unusual settings, but his garb is also out of the ordinary.

Using the hood of a jeep as an altar, he holds services in the field wearing an olive-drab vestment his mother made from an Army parachute, protected from mud and rain that would ruin a cloth garment.

Though his clothing may be unorthodox, the chaplain of the 17th Engineer Battalion, 2nd Armored Division, in Fort Hood, is really about as "orthodox" as they come. He is one of only 10 Eastern Orthodox chaplains in the Army.

Kusevich was graduated from St. Vladimir's Seminary in Crestwood, N.Y., in 1969 and was ordained in July of that year.

"I tried to enlist in the Army then," he recalls. "It was during Vietnam and I thought if I went I could have a greater understanding for the members of the congregation who would also go. I felt they would be able to relate to me better."

But Kusevich had a hard time persuading his bishop, who had to release him in order for him to join. In the meantime, he was given a church in Akron, Ohio. He continued applying for active duty and after five years was granted permission to become a chaplain. He joined the Army in January 1974.

Kusevich spent his first year in the service at Fort Campbell, Ky., then went overseas for a one-year tour in Korea. He returned to the United States for a 2½-year tour at Fort Bragg, N.C., and it was there he decided he wanted to try the civilian world again.

"I'm a working priest," he says. "I felt like I was being bogged down with Army paperwork, so I asked to be released from active duty. It took six months for the bishop to get me released."

"I was made deacon of a church in Bridgeport, Conn. The building was falling apart, and it seemed like I spent most of my time fixing it up, rather than being with my congregation. Six months later I began wondering if the Army would take me back. It wasn't easy, but I got back in," he adds.

Kusevich attended the Chaplain School at Fort Monmouth, N.J., went on tactical exercises in Germany and then was assigned to Fort Hood.

"The Army has been very good to me and I have great respect for it," he says. "I'm glad to be back."

"I wear a lot of hats at my job here," he says. "I'm responsible for the spiritual needs of 700 soldiers of all religious backgrounds. Regardless of their faith, I still try to relate to them as a chaplain."

Lemon And Bitters Said Hiccup Cure

BOSTON (AP) — As unpleasant as it sounds, a doctor contends that a lemon wedge soaked in bitters is a potent cure for the hiccup — at least if the attack is caused by overdrinking.

Dr. Jay Howard Herman of Baltimore says he has looked into the matter scientifically and found that his prescription works most of the time.

Herman, who shares his discovery with a bartender, reveals it in a letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

His advice: Saturate a bar-size wedge of lemon with Angostura bitters. An optional sprinkling of sugar may make it more palatable. Then eat it quickly, all but the rind.

Herman said he tested the method on 16 people, and the response rate was 88 percent. "Response was defined as at least a two-hour cessation of hiccups within one minute of treatment," he wrote.

Shutting Down Crime Program

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the main elements of the Nixon administration's anti-crime program, the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, will be shut down as of April 15, says the Justice Department.

"The Reagan administration feels that new approaches to bolstering the criminal justice system have to be tried," Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults said Wednesday.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — WE NOW FIND MOST HALL CLOSETS FILLED WITH SECRET CHRISTMAS LOOT.
Today's Cryptoquip clue: Z equals D

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

in dummy! The defenders were helpless as the cards lay. Declarer led the queen of hearts from dummy, discarding a diamond. East could ruff the next heart with his master trump, but whether or not he did so, declarer's last diamond loser would go on the trick. The ace of trumps was the only loser.

Note that there is no way that six diamonds can be made. No matter how declarer wriggles, he must lose a trump trick and the ace of spades.

Also note that, should a defender ruff the third heart with the ace of trumps, declarer cannot be counted out. He can still hope to drop a singleton or doubleton queen of diamonds to make his slam.

The bidding:
South West North East
2 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
2 ♦ Pass 4 NT Pass
5 ♣ Pass 6 ♦ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

Start off the New Year by learning that a 4-4 trump fit usually plays better than a 5-3, because you can ruff in either hand without losing control of the trump suit. But when there is no ruffing to be done, the 5-3 fit can be easier to handle, especially if you can discard losers in your 4-4 fit on another side suit. This hand from a recent national championship is interesting.

North-South were playing weak two-bids with two clubs as their only force. They never found their 4-4 diamond fit, which was probably just as well. The auction after the opening bid was natural.

West's lead of a low club got the defense off to a good start—it removed the only sure entry to dummy's hearts. Declarer won in dummy perforce and led a trump to the ten, which won. After unblocking the ace and king of hearts, declarer continued with the king of spades. East made a fine defensive play by holding up the ace of spades, thus preventing the jack of spades from becoming an entry to dummy.

It seemed that declarer now must lose a trump and a diamond, but there was a pretty counter—declarer led the king of clubs and ruffed it

Decided Charge 'Inappropriate'

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—Gov. Robert Ray wasn't convinced that a murder charge against an Iowa man was appropriate, so he decided against extraditing the man to Puerto Rico to face trial, says John McCarroll, Ray's press secretary.

Ron Calder, 42, of Des Moines had been sought by Puerto Rican authorities after a pregnant woman was allegedly run over and killed by Calder's car. Calder says the death was accidental.

Lawyer William Kutmus said the incident has caused such a racially tinged furor in Puerto Rico that his client could not possibly get a fair trial.
