Official Filing Period Begins

By TOM BAINES
Reflector Staff Writer

The filing period for candidates for various county offices and for district attorney from the 3rd Judicial District opens Monday at noon and closes at noon on Feb. 1.

County offices that will be contested in the May 4 primary include sheriff, clerk of Superior Court, and three County Commissioner seats, representing District I (Greenville), District IV (Winterville, Chicod and Grimesland), and District V (Ayden, Swift Creek and Grifton).

Non-partisan elections will be conducted for three County Board of Education seats, representing the Falkland, Fountain, Bell Arthur Townships, the Farmville Township and Ayden Township. Six-year staggered terms are involved.

Nonpartisan elections will also be conducted for three seats on the Greenville City Board of Education, with members seeking four-year staggered terms.

The district attorney post, involving a four-year term, represents the counties of Pitt, Carteret, Craven and Pamlico.

The U.S. congressional seat from the 1st District and members of the state House of Representatives and state Senate will be up for nomination. However, because final districts have not as yet been named due to the reapportionment plans now pending in federal court, the filing dates for these offices have been changed. Filing opens at noon on Feb. 15 and closes at noon on March 1 for those offices.

Voters will also elect four N.C. Supreme Court Justices, seven N.C. Court of Appeals judges, and 24 Superior Court judges in the 1982 balloting.

SIGN OF THE TIMES — Potholes dot the streets of downtown East St. Louis, Ill., and one forthright citizen took matters in hand by placing this sign over one of the offending holes. The city has been plagued by a swiftly diminishing tax base and city officials now say federal budget cuts could be a knockout blow. East St. Louis is the largest city in southern Illinois. Polish Reportedly Talking With Union

By United Press International

Solidarity leaders who escaped arrest and officials of Poland's martial law government have begun quiet negotiations in Warsaw, and union chief Lech Walesa has signaled his willingness to take part in such talks, reports from Poland said Saturday.

There has been no comment by Polish government officials on their contacts with Solidarity. Union officials who were quoted in the reports said Walesa was holding out for release of the arrested members of Solidarity's national executive committee, among other conditions, before agreeing to any meetings.

An additional report received from Warsaw Saturday, based on comments by a high Communist Party official there, said the military regime was aware of Solidarity's continued underground activities, and ready to answer any violence with quick and severe reprisals.

The party source, who insisted upon anonymity, also said the makeup of the Polish government has been changing during the three weeks of military rule. He described it now as a "mixed group," a strange hybrid of generals and Communist Party officials meeting frequently but informally to make all the key decisions of government."

"It's not a military coup," the Communist source reportedly said, attempting to describe the structural changes that have taken place since Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski declared martial law on Dec. 13. "But at the same time the military is not just acting as an instrument of the party. It's somewhere in between."

The same Communist Party official also disclosed the official death count from disorders in Poland under martial law was 10 lives, not eight as previously announced. One of the two additional dead was a policeman killed during an assault on the Wujek mine in Silesia.

The source gave a dramatic account of the tragic ending of the mine strike, telling how miners seized an army tank and set it afire, but were cut down by a panicky policeman who opened fire with a machine gun.

Official reports from Poland disclosed that a court in Katowice handed down the most severe sentences yet against Solidarity strike leaders — prison terms ranging from 3½ to 7 years for five organizers of a protest against the martial law regime that shut down the huge Huta Katowice steel mill.

The Polish currency, the zloty, also was devalued 57 percent against convertible Western currencies, a move apparently aimed at curbing speculation and black market trading inside the country.

The latest accounts reaching the West from Poland said sources knowledgeable about Solidarity leader Walesa reported the 38-year-old union leader has sent out word from the Interior Ministry complex where he is detained in Warsaw that several preconditions must be met before any negotiations can be held.

Walesa reportedly demanded that all members of the union's national executive committee, or presidium, be present for any meeting with government officials. The sources in Warsaw also said Walesa wanted three of his advisers included in the talks.

All members of Solidarity's presidium, a 13-man group, apparently were rounded up by martial law authorities last month.

The reports from Warsaw also said Walesa wanted any talks with the government to take place on "neutral ground." That demand was not explained further, but the union leader evidently meant somewhere other than his present quarters — a closely guarded complex including the army's general staff headquarters and a prison on Rakowiecka Street in Warsaw.

Lower-level contacts between government and Solidarity officials have been going on, union sources said in Warsaw, but they reported little progress.

Economic, Industrial Indicators Point To Growth

Area Leaders Say '82 Will Be Good Year

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Even with inflation, federal budget cuts and the possibility of a few merchants going out of business, 1982 should be a good year in Greenville and Pitt County. That's what a number of community leaders said last week, anyway.

Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce, said "according to all the data we're receiving, it looks like we're going to have a leveling off of the economy during the first six months ... then an upturn in the latter part of 1982.

"Here in Greenville, we'll see new job opportunities through expansion of industry and the continued growth of our medical school. So that's going to be an asset for continued growth."

At the same time, industry is expanding, Walker said. "We're still getting inquiries from other businesses who will look very favorably at Greenville and Pitt County.

"I think another thing is happening,too. Other communities in the county are aggressively seeking a broadening of their tax base and more job opportunities."

Another bright spot for the coming year, Walker said, is the fact there was a "13.07 percent increase in retail sales in Greenville from calander year 1980 to 1981, while for the same period, retail sales in Pitt County rose 11.52 percent." Walker suggested that these figures are an "indication of continued growth."

The surrounding towns, such as Goldsboro, Jacksonville, New Bern, Kinston, and Rocky Mount, according to Walker, reported "a growth of 2.09 percent to 12.37 percent in retail sales. The tide has changed in retail sales. We have continued to grow and I think it will keep on because of the diversification we have.

"You can't compare Greenville and Pitt County to the nation. We're still in a growth period," Walker suggested.

Bruce Beasley Jr., chairman of the Pitt County Development Commission, seemed to mirror Walker's positive outlook for the coming 12 months.

"There are things already in progress" in the industrial development area he said, although he declined to give specifics.

"Pitt County has a very healthy climate. Things have been very quiet for the last six months, although we are getting feelers now. We do definitely look for things to pick up by the end of the second quarter of the year," Beasley noted.

In the field of government, Greenville Mayor Percy Cox said, "I'm looking forward to a good year. We've got a group of good business people on the City Council.

"It's going to be rough making up a budget with the loss of the tax base caused by places going out of business, and the federal budget cuts," he suggested, "but I'm optimistic and looking foward to a great year."

Burney Tucker, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, said, "It looks like we're going to complete our landfill pickup sites (solid waste disposal sites)" during 1982, "and are hoping to begin an advertising campaign" designed to educate county residents on what to place in the solid waste containers.

Tucker said, "Our industry looks good for expansion, and we're almost positive to have more expansion," in 1982.

"I would like to see the (county) school board study the schools ... see how many of the old school buildings we can save," Tucker said, suggesting that money might be saved by rehabilitating old buildings, rather than building new ones.

"As we all know, with federal grants cut off, money is becoming more of a problem. We're going to work closely with each board and department head to get a dollar's worth for each dollar spent. I don't think the people can stand another tax increase. We need to hold taxes as reasonably as we know how. The thing is, do more with less money."

Ghana Military Bans Civil Government

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — Ghana's new rulers, who seized power by force, on Saturday dismissed Parliament, suspended the constitution and banned political parties.

"The time has come for us to restructure this society in a real and meaningful democratic manner," former air force Lt. Jerry G. Rawlings said in a five-minute speech on Accra Radio from the capital. "Let us not allow external or internal enemies to confuse us to fight over which labels we should wear."

He said President Hilla Limann, his ministers and all Parliament deputies were dismissed.

Rawlings lashed out at the "greed and corruption" of politicians and bureacrats, saying they "have turned our hospitals into graveyards and clinics into death transit camps" because of lack of medicine and supplies.

Black market dealings and a flourishing black market at Ghana's ports have created shortages of such basics as alcohol, iodine and gauze.

Earlier radio broadcasts in the West African nation said three members of Limann's People's National Party were arrested for spreading false information. But the radio said their names were being withheld for unspecified "security reasons."

There was no immediate indication of the fate of the president and his civilian government chiefs, who Rawlings on Thursday said were deposed by the "Provisional National Defense Council."

Rawlins, a self-proclaimed apolitical moralist, said in his radio speech Saturday: "We are not aligned and have no intention of joining any power bloc."

Rawlings, who had handed over his coup-won power to Limann two years ago, has accused the president of failing to rout the government of corruption, being repressive and allowing the economy to crash.

Reagan Aide Says Allen Is Out

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan met with the secretaries of state and defense at his temporary desert headquarters Saturday amid growing signals of a shakeup in the White House national security staff.

A top White House official let it be known that Richard V. Allen, the national security adviser, could make it easy on himself if he stepped down from that job.

Allen is on leave while an internal White House probe is under way into his activities.

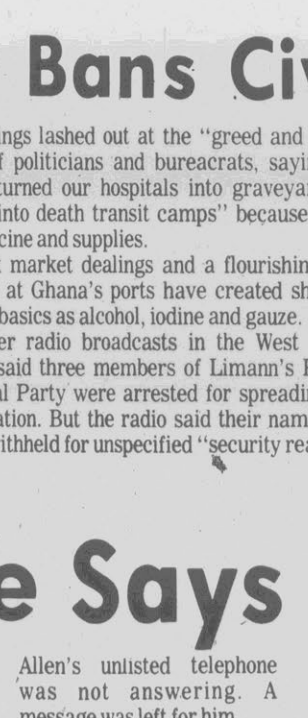
The official, who cannot be identified under the ground rules of the conversation, was asked whether Allen would be given a different job in the administration if he is cleared and steps aside voluntarily.

"I would know of no reason why that wouldn't be correct," the official replied.

He added that he knew of no staff member who suggested flat-out to Allen that he give up his White House job under such an offer, though he could not rule out the possibility that such an offer had been made.

The White House switchboard in Washington said Allen's unlisted telephone was not answering. A message was left for him.

Reagan, concentrating on foreign policy and planning for a meeting next week with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt as he wound up a week-long California vacation, spoke Saturday morning by telephone with Vice President George Bush and presidential counsellor Edwin Meese III after Bush chaired a meeting in Washington of the administration's Special Situation Group.



WILLIAM P. CLARK

The task force met for about 90 minutes, primarily on the Polish situation, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said. Afterwards, Bush talked with Reagan for nine minutes, starting at 9:43 a.m. PST.

The conference with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., at the 200-acre estate where Reagan is staying, has been on the president's schedule for several days. It was the only official meeting on Reagan's agenda since he arrived Wednesday in Palm Springs.

Later, Reagan summoned Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark, who has been vacationing here along with Haig and the president, and deputy White House chief of staff Michael K. Deaver to join the meeting with Haig, which lasted about an hour.

The attendance of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had not been announced beforehand.

The president returns to Washington on Sunday evening after spending the week in Los Angeles and Palm Springs, where he has been the guest of publisher Walter Annenberg.

Rain on Friday forced Reagan to cancel his planned game of golf and other than his meetings, there were few activities on his Saturday schedule aside from lunch with Annenberg. But aides said he would review briefing materials for Tuesday's meeting with Schmidt at a White House luncheon.

The president did play golf Saturday before clouds and rain moved in. Reagan,

NEW SHELL ... This 13-inch mud turtle shows off a shell made from fiberglass. The shell was developed by a veterinarian who then had it polished at an auto shop. The fiberglass shell is dark-colored, while the lighter area just behind the head is all that remains of the turtle's natural shell. (AP Laserphoto)

Turtle Gets Auto-Shine

LUTZ, Fla. (AP) — A 13-inch-long mud turtle, its shell collapsed n eight pieces after being hit twice by cars, was rushed bleeding to an animal hospital to be put out of its misery.

Instead, the veterinarian built a new shell with the help of an auto body shop, and the turtle recovered.

"There was so much damage I didn't know if we could fix it. But I figured we'd try," veterinarian Mary Leisner said. "Basically, he was a very healthy turtle. What looked bad was the shell. The whole top was caved in like a crater. But the body wasn't damaged.

"The turtle was good through all this," she said Friday. "We stabilized him and medically treated him, and he didn't seem to mind. The only thing he didn't like was when we vacuumed him to get the slivers and chips out. He put his feet out and tried to run away."

The unorthodox treatment was attempted after Jean Nygren, a director of Tampa's Animal Protection League, arrived at the Lutz Animal Hospital with the turtle. She had seen another car hit it, and then struck it with her own car.

"It was bleeding so badly and the shell was a mess. I thought it didn't have a chance and wanted to see it put to sleep humanely," she recalled.

"They dropped everything," she said of the clinic staff. "Fix a shell? I never heard of that. This was one lucky turtle."

Ms. Leisner examined the turtle with a household drill and delicate bone instruments, lifting depressed pieces of the rock-hard shell. She found nearly half of it had been destroyed and the smashed parts had shifted, leaving some pieces wedged beneath others.

The veterinarian filed and fit the edges and, with some fiberglass and directions from Jim McComish, an auto body shop operator whose wife Linda works at the animal clinic, built a new shell. A dangling three-inch tail section was reattached with super-strength glue.

Reagan...

Haig, Attorney General William French Smith and Charles Price II, U.S. ambassador to Belgium, made up a foursome.

Speakes, asked if the anticipated shift in the foreign policy operations would be discussed with Haig, Clark and Deaver, said: "I wouldn't anticipate it being a major topic."

He said Haig was called for what has become a regularly scheduled weekly meeting with the president on a variety of foreign policy topics and that the expanded meeting was set up to discuss the Schmidt conference.

White House sources familiar with Reagan's plans to overhaul the National Security Council staff say Clark, 50, is the unanimous choice of the president's top advisers to succeed Allen.

But Allen has said he has not been told he is being ousted and Speakes said Allen has been given no such word.

"The Allen business awaits the outcome of the review" being conducted by Richard Hauser, a deputy White House counsel. That review is to determine if Allen violated the White House code of ethics for receiving money from Japanese journalists.

The Justice Department has cleared Allen of any illegalities.

Reagan is also said by top White House officials to be planning to give his national security assistants more authority than Allen has had, including daily and direct access to the president.

Before the plans for revamping the National Security Council operations became public, Speakes said the meeting with Haig would concentrate on preparations for the Schmidt visit. The West German leader spent the New Year's holiday on Sanibel Island off the Gulf Coast of Florida and is returning to Germany after Tuesday's meeting.

Beaufort Man Dies In Wreck

By The Associated Press

Three people have died in holiday weekend traffic accidents in North Carolina, two in 1982, the state Highway Patrol reported Saturday.

Police said the 1981 traffic death toll ended at 1,472, compared to 1,519 in 1980.

Cornelius Hodges, 21, of Washington, died when an oncoming vehicle crossed the center line of U.S. 17 north of Washington and struck his vehicle head-on.

Scott Allen Lowman, 17, of Connelly Springs, died when the car in which he was a passenger overturned on an icy stretch of N.C. 105, police said. That accident happened before the new year began, but after the weekend traffic count started.

Leroy Dudley, 79, of Beaufort, died when his car collided with a tractor-trailer rig as it backed across the U.S. 70 east of Beaufort into a driveway.

Ohio Man Kills Children, Mate, And Then Himself

ELYRIA, Ohio (AP) — A man shot his two children, wife and mother-in-law to death Saturday in a crowded shopping mall parking lot, then shot and killed himself, police said.

Elyria officers indicated the incident apparently was the result of a domestic argument.

Police said witnesses told them Clifton Snowden, 21, of North Olmstead approached the car containing his family around 2 p.m., argued with his 20-year-old wife, Patricia, and opened fire.

He shot at a woman carrying a child who rushed over, police said. Neither was hurt, and their identities were not released.

Snowden then shot each of his two daughters, who were in the front seat of the car, before turning the .22-caliber, long-barrel pistol on himself. He died at Elyria Memorial Hospital about two hours later from a gunshot wound in his head, hospital spokesman Larry Torok said.

Police said Snowden reloaded the gun once during the episode, and at least eight shots were fired. Officers found a partially empty box of ammunition near his body.

The other victims were identified as Snowden's mother-in-law, Ellen P. Mahon, 49, of North Olmsted, and the couple's children, Shyla Ann, 3, and Amber Lyn, 1. North Olmsted is about midway between Cleveland and Elyria, a city of 55,000 about 35 miles west of Cleveland.

Lorain County Coroner William Kishman said the four occupants of the car were dead at the scene.

"As far as we know, none of the female victims managed to get out of the car," said Elyria Police Lt. L.J. Jezewski. "We don't have really any idea if Snowden came with them, followed them to the mall, whether he had his car there or what, but we will be questioning family and friends."

Snowden's mother, Joyce, indicated she knew a reason for the shooting but declined to discuss it.

Three Children Die In Fire

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — Fire and heavy smoke swept a townhouse Saturday, killing three children, officials said. Their mother jumped to safety from a second-floor window.

Jeanette Edwards, a neighbor, said she saw Elaine French jump and then try unsuccessfully to re-enter the house. Killed were Jason French, 3, Eric French, 2, and Jennifer French, 8 months.

Fire officials said the children's father, Barry French, was not home when the fire began, but collapsed upon returning and learning of the fire. Mrs. French suffered shock and leg injuries.

A fire wall kept the fire from spreading to other townhouses. Fire Capt. J.E. Hundley said the cause of the fire was not known.

Growth Forecast ...

In the field of education, Ashley Futrell, chairman of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees, said, "We're going to do our very best to get the best possible chancellor we can get" to replace Dr. Thomas Brewer, who has resigned. "In my opinion, we'll come up with one that will be satisfactory to the people of eastern North Carolina.

"We've got some problems," he acknowledged, "but give us time and I think we'll get them solved.

"Our emphasis has got to be on putting quality into what we've got right at this time. Our big challenge is to put quality into the whole operation of East Carolina ... to continue the search for quality."

Dr. Ed Monroe, associate dean of ECU's School of Medicine, said as far as the medical program is concerned, "things we expect to happen ... are the continued expansion of the number of students. We're anticipating an entering class of 64 in late August, compared with 52 this past August," as well as "moderate increases in the number of residents in training, and additional faculty and staff. The message ... as far as students, residents, faculty and staff, graduate students in the basic science Ph.D programs ... is continued steady growth."

Monroe emphasized that the "highlights for the year will be moving into the Brody Building (the medical school's new home), which should be completed by early to mid-summer, and going to construction contracts with the radiation therapy center, which the Legislature appropriated $5.3 million for."

The medical center, according to Monroe, which includes Pitt Memorial Hospital, the medical school, and the county health operations, will see "a constant expansion process."

Monroe also pointed to "various projects under way at the hospital to enlarge service areas and educational facilities." He said "renovations in the North bed tower" will follow "as the new West bed tower is occupied, floor by floor." However, Monroe emphasized that "each unit opening in the new West bed tower depends on having nurses available to staff it," and predicted "continued intensive efforts" on the part of the hospital to recruit and retain nurses.

Dr. Bill Fulford, president of Pitt Community College, predicted "probably an eight percent increase in enrollment during the next calandar year. Enrollment continues to grow as the demand for skilled technicians grows. As industry grows, we grow," Fulford emphasized.

With 2,800 students now, Fulford said, "We are very optimistic about the future ahead of us. We have plenty of customers."

Greenville Board of Education chairman Jon Tinglestad said, "I think basically the board and the administration is looking foward to a very exciting and productive year, even though there are funding constraints.

"We're excited about community involvement ... the Adopt-a-School program, and some of the new and innovative ideas that are being put to use in the system.

"I think that we're looking at a great year," Dr. Tinglestad said.

Tinglestad said the city school board would "play by ear" any possible merger of the city and county school systems, saying "that's down the road."

However, he acknowledged that "we're going to have to find the best way to get the most out of the educational dollar. Merger is one option ... perhaps not the only option.

"The whole community has to work together," Tinglestad suggested, "because I really feel education is one of the building blocks of our whole future. If the education system is not strong, Greenville and Pitt County are going to have some problems in the years to come. It's that simple."

Mark Owens, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Education, said, "My feeling is that our education system has progressed over the past several years to the extent that we have one of the best systems I know of," adding that "my board has continued to grow and broaden the basis of our education system ..."

As for a merger, Owens said "merger has not been discussed at all," in recent months. "I feel the (county) Board of Education is always open to hear something ... (to) move in a manner to benefit the students of this county," Owens said.

Sweet Syrup Aids Hangover

PEKING (AP) — A Peking food research laboratory has reported finding a cure for the hangover, the Peking Evening News said Saturday.

The sweet syrup can be taken either before or after drinking, the paper said. It said the syrup will double the drinker's capacity for liquor or relieve a hangover.

This Is A Year When We Must Do It Ourselves

It is 1982.

Where will our area be when the year ends?

More than ever it depends on ourselves. We can be looking back on a year of rubust economy, or it can be a year of gloom when Dec. 31 rolls around.

What happens will depend on our efforts. It will depend on what the citizens of Greenville do to better ourselves. It will depend on what Pitt County residents do to improve our lot, and it will depend on betterment efforts of other counties in the area.

We have much going for us. Our industrial base is solid, the medical complex growth is one of the marvels of the state. Agriculture has come through a good year and the farm program has emerged from Congress intact.

Retail sales have been good and unemployment is no where near as high as in some areas.

Times, however, aren't good enough for us to sit back and assume we will get along all right. We must seek new industry if we are to provide the payrolls we need. Agriculture must be constantly looking to new products and new markets for our goods. And we must support East Carolina University and Pitt Community College if we are to continue to reap the benefits these institutions bring to us.

We have to improve our secondary schools, our roads and we have to provide for adequate water and sewer facilities.

This can be a great year and a great decade ... but no one is going to do it for us. We have to make it happen.

Chancellor Search Process Continues For University

As the year 1982 begins, one of the top priorities for the area is choosing a new chancellor to head East Carolina University.

A committee is at work on that task right now and it is reviewing many nominations for the position. It is anticipated that a choice will be made in the first half of the year and the new chancellor will take office on July 1.

The committee has a difficult job. There are many qualified people nominated; yet the committee must sort through the qualifications to find the person who is uniquely suited to developing East Carolina University and providing area leadership.

A choice will ultimately be made, however, and the university will continue to develop academically and in every way.

Alvin Taylor — Sunday Morning Notes

How 'bout dem Heels? How 'bout that fog? At the Gator Bowl, that is.

Leigh Messner, who is a hostess at the Beef Barn, said six men came in the night of the game. They were giving away tickets to the UNC-Arkansas bowl game. Seems they had planned to fly down from here that day. They said they checked at 2 p.m. and the weather was bad. There were other checks on landing conditions in Florida at 4 and 5 p.m. and the outlook was bleak, so they gave up and decided on dinner at the Beef Barn and watching the game at Mr. Gaddy's.

Probably just as well. The television announcesr said that very few in the stadium could even see the field through the fog and it was difficult for the television cameras. The Goodyear blimp was scratched early.

The New Year is here. It is also a time for change in the various municipal governments following the elections of November.

Greenville's old City Council held its final meeting in December. Then a new City Council was sworn in with a new mayor in Percy Cox and several new faces on the council.

New faces, all right, but the same old problems of city government, many of which have faced councilmen and aldermen for decades, will still be there.

Streets will have to be maintained, and the police department will have to be supported. Fire fighting will have to be provided for, and, of course refuse collection is a must.

Our observer dropped by to note that the more things change the more they stay the same in government. "All this council needs to be the best we've ever had is to discover oil under the Municipal Building parking lot," he chuckled.

Maybe, but we would never get it pumped out without a study by a committee.

There was a time when Greenville Utilities officials looked longingly at the Carolina Power & Light power which ran as close to Greenville as Farmville, Grifton and Grimesland.

Greenville was locked into Virginia Electric & Power Co. and there was a clear differential in rates.

Now, through the magic of Municipal Power Agency No. 3, Greenville Utilities is using some CP&L electricity and the expectation is for lower power bills in the future.

When the subject used to come up in Greenville Utilities meetings, Director Charles Horne joked, "If we could just run a big drop cord to the CP&L system at Farmville." It won't be a drop cord when the changeover is completed early this year, but the power will be wheeled into the Greenville system from CP&L ... better than a drop cord.

Helen Thomas — Hopes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan is starting the new year with a determination to stick to his economic policies and a new severe strain in relations with the Soviets.

Reagan has given himself high marks in his report card for his first year in office. But the real judgment call will come in his mid-term exam.

He said in a recent interview, "I have a very good feeling about the year passed and thus, a hope for the year to come."

Reagan and his economic advisers are hanging their future hopes on a turnaround in the economy by late spring. There has been a tendency since Reagan took office to wait and see and "to give him a chance," an opportunity not always afforded some of his predecessors.

But more skeptical outside economists doubt that he can meet his own self-imposed deadline for a new start on the road to prosperity.

Reagan's optimism is based on a decline in inflation and the fact that a new 10 percent tax cut will go into effect July 1. The results of these two factors, he said, will give industry a boost and provide jobs for the unemployed.

But there are one million more persons out of work since Reagan took office and a wide-spread recession has hit the country. In some areas like Detroit, Reagan concedes that the state of the economy can be called a "depression."

Reagan said that the answer to unemployment "is not a quick fix with some jerry-built programs." Instead, he said, "what is needed is a stimulant to the private sector which provides the bulk of the jobs."

So confident is Reagan that his economic recovery program will work, he also told his interviewers that even if unemployment goes even higher, he has no intention of switching gears and proposing government job training and other programs to ease the plight of the jobless as other presidents have done.

On foreign policy, however, Reagan appears to be ready to be more flexible.

Even though he has ordered some severe economic sanctions against the Soviets, who he blames for the military crackdown in Poland, Reagan has left the door open for a continuing dialogue with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and has said that a summit meeting is likely in 1982.

Reagan came into office as a hard-liner, calling the Soviets cheats and liars under Marxist doctrine. Nevertheless he has taken a cautious position to avoid confrontation and catastrophe. Although he has been prodded by some strong conservative elements among his supporters, he has realized that as president there are limits to what he can do.

For what appears to be the first time in his political career, Reagan has become much more philosophical in terms of the needs for compromise.

So in terms of the new year, Americans can expect Reagan to continue down the present economic road and perhaps to reach a new level of understanding with the Soviets before he completes half of his term.

Bill Noblitt — Helicopters Could Take Up The Slack

RALEIGH — Local and state governments are being urged by leaders of Better Transportation for North Carolina to pursue vigorously the notion of heliports as part of the state's transit system.

Many industries, television stations and some government agencies are now using helicopters in growing numbers. But there are relatively few places to conveniently land.

The aeronautical council of the Department of Transportation is trying to stir up some interest in this subject, and state Rep. Dan Lilley thinks heliports can be a major factor for economic development throughout the state.

As scheduled airlines have reduced service to smaller communities and the cost of building and operating a general aviation airport soars, some transportation specialists think heliports hold a workable solution.

Feeder airlines using standard craft require lots of land and construction. Heliports in smaller cities where industrial and commercial growth is booming, and in more congested downtown areas of the state's urban centers, could offer a convenient and fast way to travel about within the state and to get to the big airports for scheduled flights out of state, say experts.

Officials with the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction say teacher salaries here continue to improve, and offer comparitive figures to demonstrate.

Over the past 10 years, Tar Heel teachers gained 104.4 percent in salary, ranking 13th in the nation in salary hikes. "In fact, North Carolina ranked fifth among the states with a 12.33 percent increase in average salaries of public school teachers, 1970-80 to 1980-81," says a report put out by the information division.

Current average teacher pay is $15,858, ranking North Carolina 27th in the nation. The national average is $17,264.

Charity obvously begins at home for North Carolinians who will give more than $140 million to licensed fundraisers in the coming year. That doesn't include religious organizations, government agencies which raise money from donations, and certain small donations which collect less than $10,000 yearly.

Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, said there were 566 organizations and 30 professional fundraising counselors or solicitors licensed by the agency last year.

Effective the first of this year, a new Charitable Solicitation Law took effect which requires the people seeking gifts to register with the state and carry a cirtificate on their rounds.

"Make sure when somebody knocks on your door for a contribution that you ask for their indentification and authorization to solicit funds for the organization. Both volunteers and paid solicitors are required by the licensing law to have this identification when they contact the public," Dr. Morrow said.

To get that authority, the fundraisers must submit full financial details and undergo investigation by the state. An audited financial statement is required each year.

Further, the charitable organization and professional fundraiser must publish a notice in the largest newspaper in the county where they are raising money which spells out how much was raised the year before, what percent was spent on fundraising expenses and on what services the rest of the money was spent.

Dr. Morrow says she expects the drive for gifts to intensify as the federal government trims the amount it provides for a variety of charitable purposes. This increased activity makes the new solicitaion law even more important, she said.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak — Punitive Action May Lie Ahead

WASHINGTON — Discarding cautious counsel of delay, President Reagan in the next few days will take punitive action against the Soviet Union in the Polish crisis, signalling for the first time his personal control of policy in the grave confrontation between Washington and Moscow.

Reagan's long-awaited personal touch has been manifest in behind-the-scenes disputes over U.S. policy in the wake of the brutal repression of Poland's Solidarity movement. The most important of these was reluctance in the State Department and by U.S. trade representative William Brock to get too far in front of America's European allies. Reagan, to the contrary, believes Western Europe will follow the U.S. lead.

He personally overruled White House aides worried that linking Christmas and the Polish crisis in his Dec. 23 Christmas message would hurt him politically. He flatly refused to make a special Christmas broadcast, a project that deputy White House chief of staff Michael Deaver had long nurtured, without condemning "the outrages in Poland" and Moscow's complicity.

Reagan received a compelling recommendation for anti-Soviet sanctions from his National Security Council (NSC) on the afternoon of Dec. 28, which was sent to the president's California ranch from the White House. Although details were secret, administration officials privately say they comprise "a pretty tough package" to start with, probably including a clampdown on the export of U.S. technology.

The president's letter to Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev, viewed last week by some hard-liners ae a virtual invitation for further American delays, has been answered in a way that gives Reagan new ammunition to go for anti-Soviet sanctions.

Brezhnev told Reagan in his four-page response that what was happening in Poland was no business of the U.S.; that the Soviets were in no way involved themselves; that Reagan's anti-Polieh sanctions announced in the Dec. 23 speech where interference in Poland's affairs; that the U.S. cannot impose its policy on Poland; that if it tries, the U.S. will bear the consequences; that the U.S. and the Soviet Union should discuss the matter in high-level talks.

As an answer to Reagan's insistence that the Soviets "permit the restoration of basic rights in Poland," Brezhnev's response was a further inducement to Reagan to impose nctions.

But Reagan needed no further inducement. White House insiders describe the sident's mood as "extraordinarily firm" and "unusually serious" about the Polish tragedy.

James J. Kilpatrick — Where Is The Line Drawn?

WASHINGTON — The history of government in the Western world, at least since the time of Magna Carta, has been largely a history of a continuing conflict. This is the conflict between the rights of the individual and the powers of the state. A couple of weeks ago a House committee was wrestling with the age-old problem.

This particular struggle has to do with the law that governs disclosure of information on our income tax returns. The individual taxpayer has a right of privacy. The government has the power — indeed, the duty — to punish wrongdoing. Where is a line to be drawn?

Under existing law — the law that was enacted in the post-Watergate period — income tax returns are almost untouchable by anyone outside the Internal Revenue Service. The law was drafted to prevent the abuses committed by the Nixon White House (and before President Nixon by Presidents Kennedy and Johnson). It is a felony for any IRS employee to make an unauthorized disclosure of information derived from our tax returns.

But the key word in the foregoing sentence is "unauthorized." If certain highly restrictive conditions are met, the IRS can be compelled to provide evidence in criminal proceedings. The trouble is, according to Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia, that the conditions are so restrictive, and so cumbersome, that the IRS is effectively forestalled from assisting in the prosecution of mobsters, embezzlers and kingpins of the narcotics trade.

The senator wants to open things a little. A couple of years ago he presided over hearings that produced evidence of an "underground economy" of $124 billion a year. That mind-boggling figure includes traffic in illegal narcotics estimated at $44 to $63 billion a year. He argues forcefully that if the law were amended so that the IRS and the Department of Justice could cooperate more closely, some of the mobsters might be sent to prison. He cites the old cases of Al Capone and Frank Costello by way of example.

Under the restrictive provisions that now apply, such cooperation is effectively foreclosed. In one recent audit of a labor union, IRS agents found evidence of "massive embezzlements." They could not report their evidence to Justice. In another incident, IRS agents found evidence that a policeman had been bribed. This too could not be passed along. In yet another case, IRS agents learned that a chemist was concocting illegal drugs — but because the evidence was turned up in the course of a tax investigation, the evidence could not be forwarded to the Drug Enforcement Administration. Senator Nunn finds all this absurb.

John H. F. Shattuck, by contrast, finds all this OK. Mr. Shattuck is national legislative director of the American Civil Liberties Union. On Dec. 14, in testimony before a House subcommittee, he argued that the information we file with our tax returns "is held in special trust by the IRS." To disseminate this information to other federal agencies, no matter how meritorious the purpose may be, "is a violation of that trust." He makes the further argument that the Fifth Amendment's protection against self-incrimination would be weakened if a taxpayer's return, filed under compulsion, could be used against him in a non-tax prosecution. A good point.

My own instant, knee-jerk reaction would be to join Mr. Shattuck in defending the absolute privacy of our tax returns. The powers of the federal government in this area already are ominously great. In an audit, we may be compelled under threat of prison sentence to disclose some of the most intimate details of our lives — medical bills, alimony payments, contributions to charities and the like. We ought to be assured that except for the purpose of collecting lawful taxes, nothing will be disclosed to anyone.

All the same, my feeling is that the Nunn amendments — already approved in the Senate — are so carefully drawn, and so well surrounded by judicial safeguards, that no harm will result from their adoption by the House. If we mean to make war upon organized crime, we ought not to deny our law enforcement troops the weapons they need.

To the editor:

There have been several reports to the Pitt County Humane Society concerning a man picking up cats to be used for medical experiments.

This young man is about 25 years old, tall, thin, has black or dark hair and a mustache. He is driving a '78 or '79 Ford burgundy-gray pickup truck with a wood sign on the side of the truck which reads, "The Cat Man." "The Cat Man" tells people that he has a license to pick up cats to be used for medical experiments. No one that I have talked with has seen this license. He has been in the Stokes-Pactolus area and the Eastern Pines area that I personally know about.

We are not accusing this person of doing anything illegal. We want the public to be aware that the Humane Society does not approve of any animal's being used for experiments. Please do not give this man any animals. If you have an excess of animals, please give the Humane Society a chance to place them.

Our lawyer, Mr. Delyle M. Evans, has sent a letter to Sheriff Ralph Tyson and to Chief Glenn Cannon making them aware of these facts. Folks, let's don't encourage this kind of thing in Pitt County. If Mr. Evans or I can assist any of you people, please feel free to call us. If you have any information concerning the above, please let us know.

To the editor:

We are writing as concerned parents and citizens of Pitt County. As many parents do, we have relied on and trusted the teachers, principals, school board members, and even our legislators, to determine how our schools are run, what our children are taught and why they read what they do.

It has recently been brought to our attention that this reliance and trust is to be questioned. Any parent who has an interest in what his or her son or daughter might be taught or what books might be recommended for reading should be made aware of our school policies.

We know that anyone living in this world is going to come in contact with profanity, obscene words and vulgarity in various degrees. However, it is our opinion that this is no excuse for this type of literature to be recommended or to even exist in our school system.

We particularly object to the following books and other like them being in our school libraries: 1) Catcher in the Rye, 2) Grapes of Wrath, and 3) Of Mice and Men.

it is conceivable that a young mind might weed out this undesirable language and absorb only the literary value of a book, but it is highly unlikely.

We believe that if you put garbage in, you will get garbage out! If you put decent thought in, you will get decent thought out of a person.

Every parent in Pitt County should become familiar with the list of books that are recommended reading in our school libraries. parents should also work with our county school board and make them aware of their thoughts concerning these books.

We trust and pray that this letter might awaken other parents to the urgent need for their involvement in our school system.

A Baseball Player Named Jim Thorpe

The historical marker they unveiled on North Church Street in Rocky Mount on Oct. 7, 1960, bears this legend: "Jim Thorpe — Indian athlete, star of 1912 Olympics, made his professional baseball debut with Rocky Mount Railroaders, 1909. Ball park was 330 yds. W."

The 24 words, of course, tell only part of the story. For the games the Indian youth played for Rocky Mount and Fayetteville during the summers of 1909 and 1910 aroused a storm of controversy and caused the man, often called the nation's greatest all-round athlete, to surrender the 15 medals he won at Stockholm in the 1912 Olympics.

The Amateur Athletic Union ruled that the $20 a week Thorpe received for playing baseball first with the Rocky Mount Railroaders and later with the Fayetteville Highlanders made him a professional and hence ineligible for Olympic competition.

Thorpe's stellar play for the Railroaders was recalled by the Rocky Mount Telegram in a series of articles written around the time the historical marker was unveiled. In one of them, Sam Mallison, who was sports editor for the Telegram's predecessor, The Daily Record, recalled that Thorpe — who was an excellent pitcher, a fine fielder and a strong hitter — particularly excelled as a base runner.

"Twice I saw him score from first base on singles to the right field that were cleanly handled," Mallison recounted. "And while such a play would ordinarily advance a fast runner to third base, in both instances the big Indian had taken the turn and was going with full speed to home plate when the ball arrived at third. He ran the bases with the speed and ferocity of a whirlwind."

Thorpe's play in the Eastern Carolina League was sandwiched between sessions at Carlisle Indian School where he excelled in all sports, particulary football. Playing under the fabled coach Glenn L. "Pop" Warner, Thorpe led the tiny Indian school in startling upsets of such top teams as Harvard, Army and the Unniversity of Pennsylvania. Walter Camp placed Thorpe, a halfback, on his 1912 and 1913 All-America teams.

Thorpe simply dominated the 1912 Olympics, winning four of five events in the Pentathlon and four of the 10 events in the Decathalon. In presenting the young American his medals, King Gustaf of Sweden told Thorpe, "You, sir, are the greatest athlete in the world." To which Thorpe replied, "Thanks, King."

But the fanfare accorded the athlete's exploits had scarcely died out when newspapers began to publish reports in which some of Thorpe's teammates asserted that he had played baseball for money during those two seasons at Rocky Mount and Fayetteville. Mallison vividly recalled the excitement in the sports world the day the story broke.

"Thw Western Union office was flooded with wires from Northern newspapers, all wanting to know if Thorpe had ever played ball here," Mallison related. He said he wrote a lengthy article giving the details which he sent to a number of metropolitan papers, most of which carried it under Mallison's byline.

Thorpe immediately issued a statement at Carlisle in which he frankly admitted playing in the Eastern North Carolina League in 1909 and 1910.

"I was not very wise in the ways of the world and did not realize that this was wrong and made me a professional in track sports," he stated. "I was simply an Indian boy and did not know what I was doing wrong because I was doing what I knew several college men had done, except that they did not use their own names."

Thorpe's defenders at the time included a Rocky Mount minister, the Rev. Leslie P. Howard, who asserted in an article published by The New York Times that, "It used to be a common occurance for baseball managers to recruit their teams from the Eastern colleges

... For instance, the Kinston, North Carolina, team one season consisted very largely of men from Brown University. I never heard of any of these men being disqualified as amateurs."

But the Amateur Athletic Union declared it " had no choice but to declare him a professional" and to demand that he surrender the medals he had won at Stockholm. This action also aroused a controversy that has never died between the adherents of simompure amateurism and those who contend the young Indian athlete was shabbily treated. They would like to see those 15 medals returned to Thorpe's family and his name restored to the Olympic record book.

They feel Thorpe was a professional in name only when he played baseball for Rocky Mount and Fayetteville, and, as Thorpe put it in 1913, he competed then "not ... for the money there was in it ... but because I like to play ball."

The Challenge Of Challenges

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the toughest jobs around is compiling the year-end reviews that traditionally grace the public prints at this season.

Probably the greatest challenge was faced by the White House aides who prepared a "report card" on President Reagan's first year in office.

Their task was made extra difficult by being so unseasonable. The appraisal they came up with would have been much more appropriate as a Valentine.

Another prime example of the research and mental exertion that go into year-end ratings may be found in Omni magazine's list of "The Worse Scientific Achievements" in 1981. It included:

—A new diet book reputedly devoid of "one single scientific fact."

—A geologist's prediction that Peru would be hit by three large earthquakes.

—The invention of "a portable pop-up nuclear shelter that fits inside a valise."

Putting together lists of this sort is a heavy responsibility, I can tell you. That much I know from my participation in the selection of the year's 10 "most forgettable" news stories. By the time I had finished recalling to mind the long parade of forgettable events that were reported during the year, my memory box was worn clean down to the ganglions.

Adding to the tension was the anticipated sense of failure that comes from submitting nominations don't make the top 10. Or, as the case might be, don't even survive the first cut. When the envelopes were opened, the winners were:

1. Nancy Reagan's chinaware acquisitions.
2. Ronald Reagan's 30-day California vacation.
3. Alexander Haig's "I'm in charge" declaration the day Reagan was shot.
4. David Stockman's "Trojan horse" interview.
5. Bo Derek's acting career.
6. Brooke Shields' acting career.
7. George Steinbrenner's close elevator encounter with a Los Angeles baseball fan.
8. Investment analyst Joseph Granville's stock market predictions.
9. "Spider Dan" Goodwin and other skyscraper climbers.
10. The solution to Rubik's cube.

Frankly, I thought I had one of the most sieve-like minds anywhere. But I was chagrined to discover that most of the events I had blotted from memory were also-rans.

My nominations for "most forgettable" included:

1. Richard Nixon's Middle East tour after the Sadat funeral.
2. Arguments some senators raised against the sale of AWACS to Saudi Arabia shortly before they voted to approve the transaction.
3. The House Democratic alternative to Reagan's economic program.
4. All victory statements issued by the air controllers' union.
5. Everything said and done by the vice president.

Although I'm trying to be philosophical about it, the poor showing of these selections was pretty mortifying. It proves, I suppose, that where oblivion is concerned, quantity counts for more than quality.

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — On the average, only 11 percent of the residents of 27 nations around the world expect 1982 to be a year of economic prosperity while almost five times that proportion, 52 percent, foresee economic troubles.

A brighter outlook is found in the less-developed countries in the survey, but nevertheless, pessimism (44 percent) outweights optimism (22 percent) by a 2-to-1 ratio. An average of 55 percent of the citizens of the industralized nations anticipate economic difficulty in 1982 while 7 percent foresee prosperity an 8-to-1 deficit. (Only one American in 11 expects the new year to bring prosperity — the smallest proportion to hold this view since the recession year of 1974.)

These are among the key findings of a major international survey conducted in 27 nations at year-end by Gallup International Research Institutes. These international studies have been carried out annually for more than two decades.

Employment Outlook Is Poor

The international outlook for employment is equally grim: In the average nation in the survey more than four times as many people predict increased joblessness (60 percent) as think the employment picture will improve (14 percent). Residents of the underdeveloped countries are distinctly more optimistic about employment than those of the industrial natins. Among the latter, only the Japanese have a really sanguine attitude, with merely 2 percent forecasting an increase in unemployment in 1982 while 38 percent foresee less.

Personal Outllook Is Brighter

When personal expectations are examined, without regard to specific economic issues, the outlook for 1982 is considerably rosier. In total, 30 percent of the participants in the global study think 1982 will be better than 1981 while 35 percent think it will be worse. In the industrialized nations pessimism outweighs optimism by a 3-to-2 ratio, but in the Third Worlk optimism prevails by about the same margin.

In the U.S. a better year is foreseen by 41 percent while 44 percent believe 1982 will be worse than 1981. In last year's survey optimists outnumbered pessimists, 49-26 percent.

American men, whites, the college-educated, persons from upper-income families and Republicans are more optimistic in their expectations for 1982.

Following are the questions asked, and summaries of the responses by industrialized vs. developing nations:

"So far as you are concerned, do you think that 1982 will be better or worse than 1981?

Personal Outlook For 1982

	Industrialized nations	Developing nations	Total
Better than 1981	25%	41%	30%
Worse than 1981	37	29	35
Remain the same	31	19	27
Don't Know	7	11	8

"Will it be a year of economic prosperity or economic difficulty, or remain the same"?

Economic Outlook

	Industrialized nations	Developing nations	Total
Economic prosperity	07%	22%	11%
Economic difficulty	55	44	52
Remain the same	32	24	30
Don't Know	06	10	07

"Looking ahead to next year — 1981 — do you think: The number of unemployed (in this country) will increase, decrease, or remain the same?"

Unemployment Outlook

	Industrialized nations	Developing nations	Total
Unemployment will increase	62%	53%	60%
Unemployment will decrease	11	20	14
Remain the same	22	17	20
Don't know	05	10	06

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentaghe points in either direction.

After Eight Years, Maynard Jackson Turns Over The Reins

ATLANTA (AP) — Mayor Maynard Jackson leaves office Monday after an eight-year reign that has seen this Southern capital boom with new skyscrapers, world's largest airport and a giant convention center.

But Jackson's administration will be remembered for other things as well — his battles with the city's white business community, a bitter garbage strike and a crime epidemic which came to a head with the murders of 28 young blacks.

Jackson, the first black mayor of a major Southern city, was barred by law from seeking a third four-year term. He will turn the city over to another black, former United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young, who defeated state Rep. Sidney Marcus in an October runoff election.

It was a political defeat that first led Jackson to City Hall. In 1968, the 30-year-old attorney — young, liberal and black in a state where politics was dominated by those older, conservative and white — challenged then-U.S. Sen. Herman Talmadge and lost by a margin of more than 3-to-1.

But Atlanta was an island in a conservative sea, and Jackson outpolled Talmadge in the capital city by about 6,000 votes.

After the defeat, Jackson set his sights on a more realistic goal. After briefly considering the mayor's race, he decided to run for vice mayor — a position that, unlike the mayor's post, would allow him time to hold office and also start his own law firm.

He won, defeating veteran Alderman Milton Farris, and was sworn in as the city's first black vice mayor in 1970.

Jackson now says he may never have sought the mayor's office had then-Mayor Sam Massell not "miscalculated."

"I think he was so concerned that I was going to run against him (that), instead of trying to involve me in his administration ... every time I turned around he was blocking me."

Jackson did run against Massell in 1973, and defeated the incumbent in a bitter election. On Jan. 7, 1974, he was sworn in before 4,000 people at Atlanta's Civic Center.

"Tonight, we are witnessing a 'people's inauguration,'" Jackson declared. "Over the next four years we shall work to create a people's administration, one that will afford even the poorest and most destitute person an alternative to agony."

A new city charter gave Jackson more power than any previous mayor, and he immediately began to assert his authority.

He began his plan to consolidate the Atlanta Police Department, headed by Massell-appointed John Inman, into a new Department of Public Safety including police, fire and civil defense bureaus.

Jackson chose A. Reginald Eaves, an old Morehouse College classmate, to oversee the department. Four years later, Jackson would be forced to fire Eaves for his role in a police cheating scandal in which blacks allegedly received advance copies of promotion tests.

Jackson soon grabbed a firm hold on the reins of city government and began an aggressive affirmative action program designed to bring black businesses into the manstream of the city's economy.

His insistence on "joint ventures" — teaming a black firm with a white firm on city contracts — rankled the city's white business community, which previously had an open door at City Hall.

Jackson insisted that 25 percent of city construction jobs go to minority firms in joint ventures with white firms. Currently, 27.5 percent of city business goes to minority firms, up from 0.3 percent in 1973.

Despite his problems, Jackson easily won a second term, taking 63.2 percent of the vote in the October 1977 election.

In March 1978, after Eaves resigned, Lee P. Brown, head of justice services in Multnomah County, Ore., was named head of the Public Safety Department.

Brown's name became nationally recognized as the tragedy of the slain children developed in 1980 and 1981.

Kremlin Calls U.S. Sanctions 'Flop' And Type Of Blackmail

By MATHIS CHAZANOV

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Kremlin Saturday called President Reagan's sanctions against the Soviet Union and Poland an "obvious flop" and said Washington was now trying to blackmail European nations into taking an anti-Soviet stance by threatening to break off arms talks.

"The U.S. administration has unmasked itself completely," the Communist Party newsaper Pravda said in a dispatch from New York, adding that the sanctions announced last week show that Washington is "opposing the normalization of the situation" in Poland.

"But despite the obvious flop of collective sanctions, an anti-Soviet, anti-Polish psychosis continues to rule in official Washington these days," Pravda said.

Another Pravda report said Washington is "blackmailing" its allies by threatening to break off the Geneva missile talks unless Western European countries support the sanctions.

"Either you support the sanctions or we will go further — and stop the Geneva talks on the limitation of nuclear weapons in Europe," Pravda said, mimicking the alleged U.S. ultimatum.

Pravda also said that American businessmen whose companies were affected by the sanctions were bitter about the move. Scientists whose exchange programs will be cut were also unhappy, it said.

The sanctions halted negotiations on a new grain deal and sales of equipment not yet licensed for export and clamped a halt on cultural and scientific exchanges.

In another report whose significance may lay between the lines, Pravda said from Warsaw that the Polish armed forces support the martial law regime and that enlisted men have requested to extend their terms of service until the crisis is over.

"All soldiers and officers have grasped the imposition of martial law with understanding and great responsibility," a colonel commanding an army unit in the Polish capital was quoted as saying.

"We know that the country was on the brink of an abyss," the colonel said, blaming extremists in the Solidarity trade union for planning to seize power.

Despite the apparent disarray in the Polish ruling party, Sgt. Miroslaw Boralski was quoted as saying he applied for membership in order "to be among those who have always worked and continue to work for the interests of the people.

"I am proud that I have been admitted to the party precisely now," he said.

State Official Predicts Changes In Europe

U.S. Will Pursue Call To Allies

By MATT YANCEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and its European allies will draw "closer together" in the next two weeks on sanctions against Poland's martial law government and the Soviet Union, a top State Department official said Saturday.

Lawrence Eagleburger, assistant secretary of state for European affairs, said the Reagan administration still wants its allies to take "parallel action or complementary moves" to the U.S. trade sanctions against the Soviet Union.

Despite the reluctance of West Germany to condemn the Soviets, Eagleburger said the Bonn government has generally supported the U.S. position.

West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and President Reagan are to meet Tuesday in Washington.

"In the German case, as with the rest of the allies, it's a matter of further consultations with them," Eagleburger told reporters Saturday. "Over the next two weeks, we'll draw closer together."

Reagan last week imposed a ban on exporting high technology items such as electronic and computer gear and oil and gas equipment to the Soviets. He also suspended Soviet aviation and maritime rights in the United States.

Eagleburger, who spent several days meeting with top officials in Europe just before Christmas, said some of America's allies there have a different perspective. But he noted that France and Italy in particular share an equally hard line against the Soviet role in Poland.

He predicted that public opinion in Europe will compel democratic leaders there to take their own steps against the Soviets, whom he said "egged on" the imposition of martial law in Poland three weeks ago.

"European public opinion is very upset," he said. "European labor unions are out in the streets; they're pushing. It's bound to have an effect on any democracy."

Eagleburger said it is too early tell what effect the sanctions are having on the Soviets, but he said, "They will be painful. I think they clearly will have a bite."

"We have other sanctions we can impose, but that's up to the president," he said. Asked if they include a grain embargo, Eagleburger declined to discuss specifics. "They run the entire gamut," he said.

Although Poland now appears to be fairly quiet now, Eagleburger said, the loss of billions of dollars in government-to-goverment economic aid from the United States and other Western nations is putting more economic pressure on Warsaw.

"The economy was bad before the Dec. 13 coup," he said. "It certainly can't be any better now."

But, he said, there are no signs of any significant behind-the-scenes negotiations between leaders of Poland's 10-million-member Solidarity labor movement and the Communist party or military regime.

Eagleburger said "substantial passive resistance" will continue in Poland until Gen. Wojiech Jaruzelski, the Polish premier, ends martial law, frees detainees and resumes negotiations with Solidarity leaders.

Hijack Effort Fatal For Two

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Two members of Nicaragua's air force were shot to death trying to escape after a botched attempt to hijack the junta's jet, the Defense Ministry said Saturday.

The ministry said the two tried Friday night to force the crew of the plane — a Learjet named July 19 — to fly to Miami but that the crew resisted and authorities captured the two.

Refugees Face Wait For Homes

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

TRAISKIRCHEN, Austria (AP) — "Help me get to America," pleaded Tekla Toporoska, a Polish woman crammed with 2,000 other refugees at this graffiti-splashed transit camp outside Vienna.

That was all the elderly Mrs. Toporoska, her spirits broken after months of waiting in this crowded barracks, had to say to a reporter recently visiting.

Her friend Wanda Poleska, saying her Catholic prayers on her metal bunk across the dingy and drafty hall, wanted to know why she and Mrs. Toporoska — both 60 — were apparently not wanted in America.

After four months in Austria, "I still haven't been to the embassy," she said. Even those lucky enough to be asked for an interview with U.S. officials "wait for more than two months."

It seemed to Mrs. Poleska that only young men got the long-awaited papers to go to the United States.

Most of the 33,000 officially registered Polish refugees who entered Austria in 1981 said they wanted to go to America, Canada or Australia.

But all three countries have fixed immigration quotas, and they are at the end of a long line.

Life is not comfortable in the Traiskirchen camp, a collection of battered buildings that once served as an imperial barracks.

As camp director Karl Radek says, life here "can never be a good time" because the refugees may lose motivation to move on.

Mrs. Toporoska and Mrs. Poleska are crowded into a cavernous room with 200 other ill-clad refugees — from many Eastern Europe countries as well as Africa and Asia.

A 4-year-old with a pacifier stuffed in his mouth stared at television crews filming the room.

"I am old, and I cannot be in my country," said Mrs. Poleska. "I left my whole family in Poland, my children, they are married, have children." She began to sob.

Why did they leave?

"Communism is good in pictures," said a 52-year-old man who would give only his last name, Machinowski.

"But what hapens is different. It's not practical. Work, work, and tomorrow will be good," he snorted. "That's gone on for 37 years."

"Communists are not good for people," said Mrs. Poleska. People have no say in communism."

Antonia Biedaha, who fled Wroclaw 15 months ago and has waited to join her son in America, declared she is "anti-communist."

"I am Catholic," she proclaimed. "Real Poles are Catholic." She denounced the Soviets at length.

"The only people who help us are Americans, French, Germans," she shouted, the curlers in her hair shaking as she warmed to her topic.

"This," she tugged at a flower-print dressing gown, "came from Germany. Poles have nothing from Poland. All to Russia..."

Frustrations at camp routine, the cultural differences among the 2,000-plus refugees of more than a dozen nationalities and the incomprehension of the bureauracies they must deal with often erupt in violence.

Policemen oversee the noon meal handouts, for example. Officials report there are sometimes "terrible scenes," but won't elaborate.

Food is handed out in tin pots. Supper comes in brown paper bags. There are no plates. As for the nourishment itself, an Afghan named Whaed said, "If you go to the pig farm, they eat better than this."

Everywhere in the camp there is noise from radios, crying children. Broken windows make for drafty stairways.

Until martial law was imposed in Poland Dec. 13, Austrians were visibly losing patience with their Polish guests, many fleeing in search of a better economic lot.

Desperate to stem new arrivals, the Austrians reinstated visa requirements for Poles.

Vienna's tabloids took to daily chronicles of horror — an Austrian mother keeping her daughter home at night in fear of Poles, a Pole beating a policeman, Poles draining state resources and threatening jobs as Austria grappled with its first signs of recession.

But since the marital crackdown, good will has returned.

"It was a complete change," said a 29-year-old Polish auto mechanic from Kolobrzeg who has received his papers for emigration to Australia.

At Christmas, Austrians responded to a national appeal to help Poland by donating food and gifts worth about $950,000.

"A Viennese woman who unfortunately has no money wishes you a lovely Christmas and a better New Year," said a message pinned to a camp bulletin board. "I hope there is a better future for all Poles."

NEW MAYOR SWORN IN — Houston's first woman mayor, Kathryn J. Whitmore, was administered the oath of office by Judge Patricia R. Lykos of the 108th District Court Saturday morning in the Houston Music Hall. (AP Laserphoto)

Houston's First Woman Mayor Takes City Reins

By WILLIAM J. BAUMER
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Kathryn Jean Whitmire became Houston's first woman mayor Saturday, pledging fiscal responsibility in dealing with the problems of the nation's fifth largest city.

"I want to tell you how proud I am to stand here today as the 48th mayor of my hometown. I am eager to begin our work, and I am determined to do a good job for you," said the 35-year-old certified public accountant and former city controller.

The mayor, who stressed her business background and fiscal conservatism during the campaign, swept into office Nov. 17 when she garnered 62 percent of the vote in a nonpartisan runoff election against Harris County Sheriff Jack Heard.

Mrs. Whitmire was sworn in by Municipal Judge Patricia Lykos and, minutes later, performed her first official act by swearing in the 14-member City Council and city controller.

The mayor's inaugural address, which was interrupted with applause several times by the crowd of 3,500, emphasized the need to improve city services while maintaining the fiscal integrity in the city of 1.6 million.

"First, we have to make Houston a better city... But at the same time, we have to meet the long-term needs of the most dynamic city in the world today." she said.

While pledging to improve basic city services and expand others, the mayor said the city must control its budget and streamline the City Hall bureaucracy.

"Like every other major city, Houston faces the prospect that our financial resources will simply not keep up with the demands for city services. That's why a major effort of this administration will be directed toward streamlining our city government to make sure our tax dollars are spent wisely," she said.

The mayor said she will ask for support from the business community and citizens' groups to help meet the needs the city government cannot provide.

Mrs. Whitmire said her first few decisions, including raising sewer rates and reforming the civil service system, will be "difficult and unpopular." But she added that ignoring them would be "irresponsible."

Several of Houston's former mayors were present for the inguration, but a noticiable absentee was two-term Mayor Jim McConn, whom Mrs. Whitmire beat in a 13-candidate primary Nov. 3. McConn sent a message of regret but no official explanation for his absence.

Mrs. Whitmire went from the inaugural ceremony to her City Hall office, where she presided over her first City Council meeting.

The mayor became the first woman elected to city office in Houston when she won a race for the city controller's job in 1977.

During her tenure, she gained a reputation as a strict guardian of public funds and often held up financing of projects she deemed unworthy.

Her late husband, Jim Whitmire, also was an accountant and ran twice unsuccessfully for city council. He died of complications from diabetes in 1976. The Whitmires had no children.

Rescue Effort Arranged

HONOLULU (AP) — Arrangements have been made to rescue a Candian man and his two daughters from remote Palmyra Island, where they have been marooned since Dec. 10, the Coast Guard reported Saturday.

Marty Vitousek, a pilot at Christmas Island, planned to fly the 500 miles to Palmyra on Tuesday. He will pick up John Harrison, 39, and his daughters, Micki, 20, and Kristen, 13, and return them to Christmas Island, said Coast Guard spokesman Bob Baeten.

From Christmas Island, the Harrisons will be flown to Honolulu Wednesday aboard Air Tungaru, Baeten said.

The arrangements were made by Harrison's family and friends in Canada.

Initially, Honolulu pilot Fred Sorenson planned to fly to Palmyra to make the rescue. But he called it off after tentative financing by the CBS network fell through due to the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.'s refusal to help underwrite the expedition, the Honolulu Advertiser reported.

One of the biggest expenses facing Sorenson was $6,000 for a $5 million liability insurance policy that the owners of Palmyra required of anyone landing there.

The Harrisons were marooned at Palmyra, 1,100 miles south of Honolulu when their boat, the trimaran Sisyphus, lost it mast in a storm and wrecked on a coral reef.

The Coast Guard said its planes were too large to land on the atoll's airstrip and, because the Harrisons were in no immediate danger, Coast Guard rules prohibited hiring a smaller plane.

Harrison earlier declined to be rescued by yachtsman Lawrence Friend of Scottsdale, Ariz., reportedly because Micki was ill and Kristen refused to board another boat.

Guardian Angels Plan Protest March

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The leader of the Guardian Angels asked people Saturday to wear red ribbons to honor a patrol leader of the anti-crime group who was slain by a policeman lastweek.

The Angels also announced plans for a march from Newark to Trenton, beginning Sunday, to press a request for a state investigation into the circumstances of Frank Melvin's death.

Curtis Sliwa, founder of the organization, repeated his request for an independent probe at a news conference Saturday at the site where Melvin, 26, was shot by a policeman Wednesday night. He was the first Guardian Angel to be killed on patrol.

Sliwa said 100 Guardian Angels would gather at the site at noon Sunday and, led by Melvin's wife and two preschool children, begin a 60-mile march to Trenton.

They planned to arrive at the capital Monday morning and ask state Attorney General James Zazzali to investigate the death, because "we don't trust the Essex County prosecutor, Newark officials or police officials," Sliwa said.

"Rather than walking around with signs in a protest, or making snide remarks to cops and officials, we are interested in the pursuit of justice," Sliwa said. "We are donning red ribbons over our hearts, signifying the blood of Frank Melvin."

The ribbons symbolize the Guardian Angels' interest in knowing the circumstances of Melvin's death and their anger "at police officials who have covered up the facts," he said.

The Angels and the police have disagreed over whether the fatal shot came from a rooftop or from street level.

Essex County Medical Examiner Thomas Santoro was quoted by WNBC-TV in New York City as saying that the bullet went straight into Melvin's body and did not come from an angle.

The Angels have asserted Melvin, who is black, was shot by a white officer on the street as Melvin tried to identify himself by opening his coat to show his Guardian Angel T-shirt.

But Police Director Hubert Williams said ballistics tests show that Melvin was shot from a rooftop by Patrolman Milton Medina, who thought Melvin was threatening another officer on the street below.

PATCO Picks New President

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A new president of the decertified air traffic controllers' union has been chosen, but Gary Eads, the only member of the organization's executive board to be jailed, won't say who it is.

The Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram reported on Saturday that Eads would succeed Robert E. Poli as president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization. Poli said he hoped that his resignation Thursday would help get the union's 11,500 rehired.

"The decision has been made, but we can't say anything about it," Eads, of Kansas City, said Friday night. "The decision was quick, harmonious and unanimous."

He said that the announcement of the new president would be made Monday, and declined further comment.

Storms Taking Aim At Aircraft

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — Blizzards and storms in the Colorado Rockies brought down six planes and helicopters in a week, killing at least seven people and pointing up the extreme hazards of flying in the mountains — even for experts.

About half Colorado's plane accidents each year involve out-of-state pilots, and some 90 percent are weather-related, said Gary Koch, chief of the Federal Aviation Administration air accident prevention program for Colorado.

Those statistics were borne out by the six recent aviation accidents: All were blamed on the weather, and three involved pilots who were from out of state and had little or no experience flying in the mountains, officials said.

"The biggest danger to out-of-state pilots is that they may come from a state with hills that run up 1,000 feet and they call those mountains," said Colorado Civil Air Patrol Col. Roger MacDonald. "They get up here where the mountains start a mile above sea level and go higher than 14,000 feet and they get in big trouble."

He said the rash of aircraft troubles in late December was not extraordinary. "When the weather gets this bad, we have lots of accidents. I don't fly in bad weather unless it's to save a life."

Not all six recent aviation accidents resulted in deaths. But the four people rescued after a Christmas Eve crash and several days stranded in blinding snow were described as "extremely lucky" by Civil Air Patrol officials.

On Saturday, rescuers reached the pilot and three passengers of a television news helicopter forced down in a blizzard near the Continental Divide on Friday. The helicopter from KMGH-TV in Denver had been en route to a plane crash that left four dead and two injured.

A series of powerful storms that buried the mountains with neck-deep snow have been blamed for the aviation accidents since Christmas Eve.

Five of the accidents occurred high in the Rockies where visibility was near zero. The sixth occurred in a blizzard on the high plains of southeastern Colorado.

MacDonald said pilots of small, piston-driven aircraft face two primary hazards flying in the mountains in good weather or bad — downdrafts and loss of engine power.

"The prevailing wind is from the west," he said. "It strikes the mountains, curls over the top and comes roaring down the east slope anywhere up to 3,000 feet a minute. There is no piston-driven airplane that can climb that fast."

Another hazard is that piston engines lose up to 50 percent of their power at high altitude and that drastically reduces climbing speed, MacDonald said.

Drug Loss Bothers Rehnquist

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist suffered temporary "disturbances in mental clarity" recently because of a sharp reduction in medication he was taking for chronic back pains, a hospital spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman, Dr. Dennis O'Leary, said Rehnquist recovered quickly from the drug withdrawal symptoms, is "really in a clear mental state now" and could be discharged from George Washington University Hospital on Sunday.

Rehnquist entered the hospital Dec. 27 after his physician had ordered a major reduction in a pain-killing drug. O'Leary, the hospital's dean for clinical affairs, said Rehnquist was admitted primarily for a recurrence of back pains he has suffered the past 10 years.

Last Wednesday, O'Leary said, the justice suffered a withdrawal reaction from the reduction in dosage of the pain-killing drug, which took the form of "disturbances in mental clarity" and a distortion of his perception of reality. O'Leary did not identify the drug or say how long Rehnquist had been taking it.

The spokesman said Rehnquist was put back on the previous dosage of the drug, and the dosage subsequently has been gradually reduced. The justice quickly overcame the withdrawal symptoms and is alert and mentally clear, O'Leary said.

"This just shows that Supreme Court justices are no more immune to the double-edged sword of drugs than anyone else," said O'Leary, who was the hospital's chief spokesman when President Reagan was treated there for gunshot wounds he suffered March 30 in an assassination attempt.

In recent months, lawyers and other regulars at the Supreme Court have commented that Rehnquist often stuttered and slurred his words while questioning attorneys during oral arguments.

O'Leary said slurred speech was a side effect of substantial doses of the drug Rehnquist had been taking. O'Leary said Rehnquist's dosage before the sharp reduction was "high" but not massive.

The spokesman said the drug and dosage prescribed by Rehnquist's personal physician, Dr. Hugo Rizzoli, was "not inappropriate" in treating chronic back pains. Rizzoli's answering service said he probably would not receive a telephone inquiry until Monday. Rizzoli has an unlisted number.

The Washington Post said Rizzoli, chief of neurosurgery at George Washington, referred all calls Friday to O'Leary.

Rehnquist, 57, a conservative justice who was nominated to the Supreme Court by President Nixon in 1971, was admitted to the hospital once before, in 1977, for treatment of a strained back.

Student Protest

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — High school students in the occupied Gaza Strip burned tires and threw stones at Israeli soldiers Saturday, Israel Radio reported.

The student protest in the southern Gaza town of Rafah was quickly dispersed by Israeli troops, the state radio reported. No injuries or arrests were reported.

Poll Shows Reagan Holds On To Popular Appeal

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Events and issues tarnished President Reagan's popularity during his first year in office, but his honeymoon with American public opinion is not necessarily over.

Ten national Associated Press-NBC News polls during 1981 tracked the president's ups and downs, including steady declines over the last four months in the ratings for his performance in office.

Yet the president continues to command higher marks for personal appeal. And most Americans either say he has kept his campaign promises or say they don't blame him for not keeping them.

In the latest AP-NBC News poll, a scientific random telephone sampling of 1,602 adults Dec. 14-15, 49 percent said Reagan has kept the promises he made during the 1980 election campaign.

Among those who said he has not kept his promises, more than half said his most serious failure to do so has been in the area of the economy.

In various speeches and television commercials during the campaign, Reagan said his supply-side program of tax and spending cuts would result in a balanced federal budget by 1983 and possibly 1982.

But in the last month the government has said the budget deficit will grow to more than $100 billion in the next year, and the president himself has said it is doubtful the budget could be balanced by 1984.

Asked at a recent news conference why public opinion should not judge him harshly, Reagan replied, "Well, because in the first place, I said what was our goal, not a promise."

After an explanation about how unforeseen deterioration in the economy has skewed his program, the president concluded, "But this is not a case of a broken promise; this is a case of circumstances beyond our control, whose foundation has been laid over the last several decades."

The latest AP-NBC News poll reports that public opinion largely agrees. Among respondents who said Reagan has broken campaign promises in his first year in office, 51 percent said it hasn't been his fault, while 37 percent said they blame him for not keeping his promises and 12 percent were not sure.

The percentage of poll respondents who said they agree with the statement, "Ronald Reagan has shown he really cares about people like me," dropped from 63 percent in February to 47 percent in October.

But the percentage saying they trust Reagan to do what is right all or most of the time dipped much less, from 68 percent in April to a still-respectable 57 percent in December.

Through Reagan's first year, the polls reported a parallel decline in his ratings for overall performance and for handling the economy.

In April, when he was recovering from an assassination attempt, 66 percent of the AP-NBC News poll respondents said Reagan was doing a good or excellent job as president, and 52 percent said he was doing a good or excellent job handling the economy.

Since then, however, his ratings in both categories have gradually declined, ending the year at 48 percent for his overall performance and 36 percent for his economic approval rating.

Reagan's dip in the job ratings follows a similar decline in former President Jimmy Carter's popularity during his first year in office, but Reagan's ratings remain slightly better than Carter's at the end of 1977.

Throughout 1981, AP-NBC News poll said people who were more pessimistic about the future of the economy and their personal family finances were more likely to give Reagan poorer job ratings.

As with all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations.

Boston School Aid Set

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Edward J. King proposed Saturday allowing Boston to borrow $75 million as a way to end its financial woes, and the proposal to the Legislature puts tough state controls on the city's finances.

The action would permit the city to borrow $75 million to pay court-ordered property tax rebates. But the bill also would require city officials to submit to fiscal monitoring by the state's Emergency Finance Board and return the police and fire departments to personnel levels of July 1, 1981.

Mayor Kevin White and the City Council have sought the bill to pay off the rebates, ordered after a suit against the city.

Ben Kilgore, a spokesman for White, said the mayor was reviewing King's plan and had no immediate comment.

The city originally submitted a bill that would have allowed it to impose a 15 percent off-street parking tax and a $500 tax on condominium conversions.

The Legislature's Boston delegation, at odds with White, amended the bill to include minimum staffing levels for public safety. Similar language included in the fiscal 1982 state budget was recently held unconstitutional by the state Supreme Court.

More than 500 police and firefighters have been laid off in economy moves.

King's package deletes the new taxes. It instead would pay back the bond by deducting the payments from Boston's share of local aid each year.

"We do this only after a lengthy period of time," said King. "If the city had solved its own problems, we certainly wouldn't be here today."

King's plan would also make changes in the form of city government, make public officials personally liable for budget overspending and prevent interdepartmental funds tranfers without council approval.

It would also create a committee to oversee an independent audit of city books each year.

King said the steps were necessary to make sure the bond money is used only for property tax rebates. He admitted that the proposal involves the state in the city's business.

"There is some state input into the way the city is run," he said. "But you have to remember that the state didn't overassess. The city overassessed."

City Councilman Raymond Flynn said he opposed King's plan because it eliminated new taxes he said the city needs.

Three Injured By Police Fire

RENTERIA, Spain (AP) — A policeman fired his submachine gun at attacking demonstrators and three people were wounded, including a 7-year-old boy, officials said Saturday.

They said a member of a Civil Guard patrol returning to headquarters opened fire when a group of people shouted insults and stoned his car Friday night.

The incident occurred shortly after hundreds of people marched through Renteria shouting for amnesty for Basque activists serving prison terms for political terrorism.

New AFDC Rules May Convince Some To Give Up Hunt For Jobs

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — State officials say new rules governing the largest welfare program — Aid to Families with Dependent Children — could discourage poor people from looking for jobs.

Social services officials have said a Feb. 1 cutback will remove the AFDC program's last incentive to work, raising concern that some poor people will have a harder time deciding whether working is more advantageous than going on welfare.

Not only must a person consider the payments that would be lost from working but also the medical benefits. A person receiving AFDC payments is automatically eligible for federal Medicaid payments. A person who gets a job and is eliminated from the welfare program will have a more difficult time getting Medicaid.

In October, the maximum eligibility age for a child was lowered from 21 to 18, the amount of income a person could have and still be eligible was reduced and a step-parents' income began being counted in an applicant's income.

On Feb. 1, the amount a family can deduct each month will be drastically cut.

Currently, working recipients are allowed each month to disregard a third of the family income plus $30 and all work-related expenses. This means a family of three with an income of $383 a month could deduct $156 plus work-related expenses and still be eligible for benefits.

But after Feb. 1, an AFDC family will be able to disregard only $75 a month if the family head works more than 30 hours a week, and $38 if less than 30 hours each week.

Kay Fields, head of assistance payments for the state Division of Social Services, said the "income disregard" was reduced because "AFDC is intended for families with no resources, rather than to be an income supplement program."

Despite concern by officials, Wake County social Services Director James A. Wight said there are safeguards that act as work incentives.

He said income criteria make the payments low, so just about any job pays better than the AFDC benefits for a non-working person.

"Let's face it," he said, "if you're working at minimum wage for even half-time, you're going to be better off financially than you would be on AFDC."

There also are penalties for deliberately staying out of work. For example, if a woman receiving benefits for herself and her children refuses work she can lose her benefits, although she would be allowed to keep the children's benefits.

Figures compiled by state officials show the cuts will save the state about $944,000 a month

Lawmakers Divided On Need For Changes

Coastal Act Will Be Reviewed

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The 12 lawmakers who will review North Carolina's Coastal Area Management Act this month appear to be split, with Senate members leaning toward weakening the law while House members stand by it.

Former Sen. W.W. Staten, R-Lee, who led the Senate fight to pass the act, said the law came about because counties don't plan to protect sensitive coastal areas. Those favoring the measure were concerned the coast would be ruined for future generations, he said.

Those opposed to the law contend that it infringes on the rights of the individual counties and land owners as it ostensibly protects inlets and beachfronts by limiting development.

"None of us are saying we don't want to protect the coast," said Sen. Melvin Daniels, D-Pasquotank, a longtime opponent of the law. "The question is, will it be done by big government or by county commissioners in areas closer to where the problems are."

The study committee, sought by Daniels, received legislative approval after efforts to kill or weaken the law failed in October. Its first meeting is set for Jan. 12, and the panel will eventually make recommendations on the act to the General Assembly.

Although Senate President Pro Tem Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, selected the committee members, both sides of the controversy appear to be represented.

Daniels said the Senate side is "probably anti-CAMA."

Among the Senate members opposing the act are Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who tried to kill the law in October and Lawing, who says he assigned himself to the committee because "I despise someone coming in who's not a property owner telling me how to run my affairs."

House members on the study committee are Al Adams, D-Wake, Howard Coble, R-Guilford, Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, Charles Evans, D-Dare, Harry Payne, D-New Hanover and Tom Rabon, D-Brunswick.

All say they think the bill is necessary, although Raboin thinks it might need changing.

"Basically, I think we need to do a little surgery on CAMA," Rabon said. "I certainly don't want to do anything major but the rights of the property owner seem forgotten."

Earlier this year, at a private meeting of five legislators, Royall reportedly handed out copies of a bill that would kill CAMA. But Joe Grimsley, secretary of natural resources and community development, learned of the measure and brought to public attention coastal property owned by Royall.

Royall owned three oceanfront lots on Emerald Isle.

Grimsley told reporters that Gov. Jim Hunt "has told us to go full scale to stop" Royall's bill.

Two State Judges Will Retire This Year

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — At least two of 12 positions on the North Carolina Court of Appeals will open this year, as judges Robert Martin and Edward B. Clark said Friday they do not intend to seek re-election.

"I don't like to use the word retire, but I won't seek re-election when my term expires Dec. 31," Martin said.

Clark said he didn't plan to seek re-election either, for various reasons, most of them personal.

"I've been on the bench for 25 years, and I don't plan to run again," he said.

Martin, 69, said he has had 16 years in the judiciary and if he won election to another term, he would be forced to retire before it was over because of the Judicial Retirement Act. The act requires judges to retire when they are 72.

Martin said he would continue to be active in the Democratic Party, but has not decided whether to seen another office.

Clark said he may try to get another job after he retires.

Alex Brock, chairman of the state Board of Elections, said Friday that the announcements by the two judges sets up an unusual situation for this year's elections.

"During the history of the Court of Appeals, we have never had two judges to automatically let their terms expire, not to my recollection," he said.

In addition to the two judges who announced they do not plan to seek election, the terms of chief judge Naomi Morris, Judge Harry Martin and Judge Willis Whichard are scheduled to expire and they must seek re-election. In addition, Judge Charles Beckton must run for the remaining portion of an expired term he was appointed to fill.

Brock said he expects all of the other judges to seek re-election.

"Two is a record. I don't believe we want to break the bank," he said.

Filing for the positions opens Monday at noon, and closes Feb. 1. for party nominations. If two people run for the same post, they will pair off in the primary election, tentatively scheduled May 4 but subject to change when the Legislature meets in special session Jan. 25 to discuss redistricting.

Winners of the primary will run in the general election in November, Brock said.

Paul M. Wright, a District Court judge from Goldsboro, has already announced his candidacy for Martin's seat.

"I have considered this for some time and this seems to present a good opportunity," said Wright, adding that he knew of no one else who definitely had decided to seek the judgeship.

Wright, 33, is in his fourth year as a judge in the eighth judicial district, which includes Wayne, Lenoir and Greene Counties. He was appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt in 1978 after serving as assistant district attorney for three years.

Fish Kills Investigated

By The Associated Press

State Agriculture Department officials remain puzzled about the cause of a fish kill in the Pamlico and Pungo rivers, and warn that flounder taken from the affected area should not be eaten until tests are completed.

Leonard F. Blanton, director of the Division of Food and Drug Protection for the department, said there are hundreds of things to check out before the cause of the Dec. 24 fish kill can be determined.

Since the report, dead and dying fish have turned up in nets and on beaches, and officials have been concerned that the fish might pose a danger to humans.

Blanton said tests showing levels of bacteria, pesticides, phosphates or PCBs — a suspected cancer-causing chemical — would be completed by next week, but added, "I'm really not very optimistic about finding anything really meaningful."

Blanton said his primary concern is to prevent the marketing of fish that might be unfit for consumption.

J.C. Morgan Jr., a Bayview resident, told state officials that one fisherman told him he had sold fish retrieved from water along the shore. Flounder usually stay in deep water during the winter, but have been turning up in nets placed in shallow water.

Masceo Daniels of Pamlico Beach said some local people would not eat the fish, but were selling them to dealers.

State officials said they made a spot check of dealers and found no sign of the contaminated fish.

Biologists said the kill involves the Southern flounder, a kind also found in the Neuse River and other coastal waters. State officials refused to estimate the number of fish involved or the geographic locations where dead fish have been reported.

Typhoon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (ap) — A typhoon struck Hormuz Island at the entrance to the oil-rich Persian Gulf, killing three Iranians and injuring four, Iran's official Pars news agency reported Saturday.

It said the typhoon, which hit Thursday, involved several lightning storms and a tidal wave. The storm caused "extensive damage which could not be clearly assessed yet," the reported added.

NCAE To Open Political Drive

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Association of Educators will launch its political action campaign this month by polling Durham County voters aout incumbent politicians, NCAE officials said.

"We want to see if this would be an effective tool," NCAE President John I. Wilson said of the survey. "We have never used our resources like we should."

Wilson said a professional pollster will help assess the strength of Rep. Ike F. Andrews, D-N.C., and Durham County's incumbent state lawmakers. He said Durham County was selected as a pilot area because the county has active NCAE chapters and potentially interesting legislative and congressional races.

The poll will also be used to identify issues of greatest concern to voters, he added.

Hunt's Office Uses Daily News Summary

By FRED McNEESE

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The publication has the most select readership in North Carolina government — Gov. James B. Hunt Jr., cabinet members and key aides.

It's the "News Summary from the Governor's Office," a compilation of articles and editorials from the state's major newspapers.

Gary Pearce, the governor's press secretary whose office is responsible for the summary, said it is designed to keep state officials informed of issues facing state government and how those issues are being presented to the public.

"Not everyone has the time to read even one newspaper thoroughly every day," Pearce said. "I don't think you can function in state government without getting an idea of what the news is and how it is presented. This is what the people start with and this is what the people in state government should start with."

The news summary, distributed five days a week, is put together by employees in the press office who clip material from the newspapers of Raleigh, Greensboro, Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Durham, Asheville, Fayetteville and Wilmington. A clipping service provides material from the state's smaller newspapers for periodic use.

The clippings are photocopied and the copies hand-delivered to various state offices.

"They go through and clip anything that might be of interest to the administration or any particular issue affecting the state," Pearce said. "Right now, we are trying to keep up wih national economic stories."

Present circulation is 49 copies.

Courts Tighten Up On Hunters

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina courts are cracking down on hunters who illegally use spotlights as a hunting aid, state Wildlife Resources officials say.

"Firelighting is on the increase everywhere because the herds are getting larger and its just a temptation to take them the easy way," said John D. Savage, a Gates wildlife enforcement officer.

But legal penalties for firelighting are also being increased in an attempt to protect the animals.

Gene H. Abernethy, enforcement chief with the Wildlife Resources Commission, said firelighting "has been considered a serious offense, it's very unsportsmanlike and it's dangerous."

In Gates, at least two valuable farm animals have been killed and two homes have been hit with high-power gunfire in recent years. In addition, a Northampton County wildlife officer was killed in a shootout last year when he tried to arrest two men for illegal hunting, and another officer in Virginia lost a leg after being shot by a firelighter.

Abernethy said officers have arrested about 500 firelighters in each of the last three years.

Wildlife officers, armed with a law updated in 1980 to crack down on the practice, are seeing stiffer sentences in courts as well.

House, Senate Might Be Split On County Lines

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly is pointing toward a late-January session to draw up new reapportionment plans, but House and Senate leaders say they are heading in different directions on how their maps will be drawn.

Legislative leaders say they are inclined not to appeal a U.S. Justice Department ruling eliminating a state constitutional provision that kept the legislature from splitting up counties in drawing maps for House and Senate districts.

No final decision has been reached on when the session will reconvene, but House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Senate leaders said the last week in January was probable. A legislative committee has recommended Jan. 25 and elections officials say the May 4 primary will have to be delayed because of the uncertainty around congressional and legislative districts.

The Justice Department, acting under the 1965 federal voting rights act, has ruled that plans enacted last year for state Senate and congressional districts are invalid because they dilute black voting strength.

A decision on the House plan is due Jan. 20.

In the Senate, Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said he and other leaders want to accept the Justice decision on the Senate plan and draw a new one.

In addition, Royall said sentiment is widespread in the Senate to come up with a new plan by subdividing counties where needed to achieve balanced district populations. The Democratic majority in the Senate, he said, wants to chop up enough counties and draw single-member districts where needed to win federal acceptance of plan.

But he said the Senate will not abandon its basic system of using large, multi-member districts in favor of a system of 50 single-member districts, as suggested by the Justice Department ruling and sought in lawsuits filed by Republicans and the NAACP Legal and Education Defense Fund.

"I think you can do it in certain areas, so there would not be the dilution, but no sir, I don't think anybody would want it (all single member districts)," Royall said.

In the House, Ramsey said the Democratic majority appears opposed to splitting any counties to form House districts, although it is willing to let the Senate do as it wants with Senate districts.

And if the Justice Department rejects the House plan as it has the others, Ramsey said he wants to appeal the decision in federal court rather than draw up new House districts.

"There are only about three districts out of line, population-wise," Ramsey said. "If they reject our House plan, we should appeal it to the courts."

He said a final decision wouldn't be made until after the ruling.

The House and Senate difference over splitting counties has also led to a reluctance by legislators to appeal the federal decision on the state Constitution.

Ramsey said he wants to defend the state Constitution in federal court, and he has circulated among legislators a copy of their oath of office — which he said calls for them to defend the Constitution.

But Ramsey said he didn't believe an appeal would be brought now because the Senate wants to let the ruling stand and split counties. The House, he said, shouldn't appeal the issue on its own.

"I gather that there's not going to be any further action on that," said James Wallace, deputy state attorney general handling the reapportionment case. "If it doesn't seem like you're going to be very successful, you don't go forward with it."

With legislators greatly concerned about how their own districts will be shaped, the issue of the congressional districts has been pushed aside. Legislators hardly discussed it in recent meetings on redistricting.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, chairman of the House committee on congressional redistricting, said he wanted the state to appeal that decision too, but expected his committee would be instructed by the leadership to come up with a new plan.

The Justice Department objected to keeping Durham County in the 4th District, saying it caused a dilution of black votes in the adjoining 2nd District.

Some Hospitals Face Slump In Room Admissions

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Administrators at many North Carolina hospitals say adverse economic conditions may be causing unusually low patient admissions at a time that is usually their busiest of the year.

At Granville Hospital, controller Jim Barmes said part of the slump may be attributed to a reduction in elective surgery.

"I think health care is sometimes the last thing on the list," he said. "If someone has an ailment, and it's not really getting them down, they're letting it go. People will fix their automobile before they get health care now."

"When the economy gets ready to go into a recession, you often see a lot of people using up their medical benefits," Barmes said. "They enter the hospital to have the operation they've been putting off, because soon they may not have the insurance to cover it."

But he said when the economy is really bad, "they postpone the hospital."

Warren General Hospital recently put its employees on a 36-hour work week due to the low number of patients. Hospital Administrator Lynn Orfgen said the hospital's 54 full-time employees didn't have enough work to do in the 35-bed facility. He said that approximately 20 part-time employees are also affected by the slump.

This fall, Granville's 68-bed facility experienced an 11.7-percent drop in patient census. Barmes said he has not seen such a slump since 1974.

So far, Granville Hospital has not laid off any of its 175 full-time and part-time employees. But all employees except nurses have been cut to a 7½-hour working day.

If patient loads continue to be low, hospital administrators may have to raise rates. But higher rates scare away even more patients.

"It's a rather circular pattern," said George Stockbridge, director of Capital Health Systems Agency, which oversees hospital regulations in an 11-county area near Durham. "Patient census drops are phenomena which show up from time to time. You never really know why, but there are periodic peaks and valleys."

Meanwhile, anticipated reductions in federal support could result in greater problems for hospitals, necessitating the closing of units and wings, cutbacks in employees' schedules, layoffs, higher hospital rates and even fewer patients.

"There's going to be an economic impact on hospitals," said Stockbridge. "It's a serious problem."

Barmes said the problem was worsened by the inherent inability of a hospital to reduce services without reducing its ability to respond to an emergency.

"We always have to be ready to open back up," he said. "You can go for weeks, sitting around filing your fingernails, then suddenly you're backlogged with patients."

Klansmen Plan Protest At Capitol

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ku Klux Klan leaders say about 150 Klansmen will picket the Capitol Sunday to protest the treatment of a Klansman convicted of firebombing a black-owned newspaper.

The Klansmen will protest the continued imprisonment of Lawrence Little, 29, who was convicted of firebombing the Wilmington Journal in 1970, said Donald Frazier, leader of the Franklin County unit of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Little is being held at the state prison unit in Whiteville, where he is serving a life sentence, Frazier said.

Frazier said the Klansmen would picket from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. wearing hoods and robes, but would not burn a cross.

Glenn Miller, leader of the Carolina Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, said Klansmen were calling Little the "Wilmington One." He said the name was a reference to the Wilmington 10, whose sentences in the 1971 firebombing of a Wilmington grocery store were overturned in December 1980.

"We just want the same treatment for Little," he said.

Gov. Jim Hunt, who went on live statewide television in 1978 to reduce the sentences of the nine members of the Wilmington 10 in prison at that time, had no comment on the planned demonstration.

"We've done everything else we can" to get Little released, said Frazier. "They don't even consider releasing him under early parole."

Sgt. R.K. Carroll, supervisor of investigations for the Raleigh Police Department, said Frazier had signed an application for a demonstration at the Capitol.

"We will be patrolling the area," he said. "It will be like any other demonstration — we'll just have a little extra people around."

Carroll said he expected the demonstration to be peaceful, and that there were "no indications of any counter-demonstrations."

Bronze Chariots Latest Discovery In Chinese Digs

ANCIENT TOYS — Centuries ago, children in the ancient world were playing with dolls, rattles and board games. The dolls shown here, part of an exhibit of 50 ancient toys and games from Holy Land excavations, are being displayed at the Rockefeller Museum in Jerusalem. These toys testify to man's enduring yen for playthings. (AP Laserphoto)

EDITOR'S NOTE — In 1974, Chinese archeologists made a discovry that astounded the world — a huge army of pottery soldiers buried some 2,000 years ago to protect the nation's first unifying emperor. The dig continues to uncover surprising artifacts. Latest are bronze chariots, half life-size, rich and beautiful.

By JOHN RODERICK
AP Special Correspondent

SIAN, China (AP) — China has unearthed two bronze chariots, complete with eight horses and two charioteers, close to the tomb of its first emperor, Chin Shih-huang ti.

The discovery has sent a thrill of excitement through this ancient Chinese capital, comparable to that of 1974 when peasants came across the shadowy underground pottery army created to guard the emperor in death as real armies had done in his turbulent lifetime.

Builder of the Great Wall, burner of books, and first unifier of China, Chin died 2,191 years ago.

"It is one of the most exciting discoveries in recent years," says Ma Kesun, deputy director of the Bureau of Cultural Relics here.

Word of the discovery has trickled out in bits and pieces. Ma and Bureau Division Chief Chen Mengdong gave hitherto undisclosed details.

"The horses, chariots and warriors are half life-size," says Ma. "Funerary objects in bronze of this size have never been found before. In addition, they are very beautiful. The horses are running and each charioteer is sitting as he handles the bronze reins of his four-horse team. The ornaments on the horses are of gold and silver."

Chinese archeologists are trying to piece together whether the bronze chariots are part of the life-size pottery army, estimated at 7,500 pieces. They are on the eastern side of the tomb complex, while the bronze chariots are on the west.

"Like the pottery figures, the bronze chariot sets were painted in different colors," says Ma. "The two charioteers are mustached, dressed in short gowns and wear caps. They wear no armor but carry two-edged swords slung on their backs."

Like the pottery figures, the charioteers are identifiably different in dress, hair style and facial expression. Their attitude is one of intent seriousness.

When discovered by archeological workers, the sets — which weigh 1.1 tons each — were lying loosely 23 feet deep in the earth. The pottery figures were 16½ feet down.

Perhaps one of the reasons why the find has been surrounded in secrecy — the area has been sealed off — is that the sets were not intact.

"Though basically perfect, they were in about 1,000 small pieces," says Ma. "They are being assembled by 10 people in special workshoip. Also, there are many problems still to be solved. While we work on them, the digging has stopped. We now are making a survey of the entire area."

Digging also has halted under the huge vaulted museum which houses the pottery army. More than 2.5 million people, many from abroad, have visited the vast complex since it opened in 1979. About 600 of the 1,200 figures so far brought to light stand in erect solemnity, still faithful after two milleniums of vigilance.

The others are being put together in eight workshops while savants ponder the mystery of it all. Their conclusions on the life of military men in the Chin dynasty will be published in 1983.

"We have enough work here to last us a hundred years," says the museum's chief archeologist, Yuan Zonyi, gesturing toward the tomb complex. "In the past year or so alone we have made four major discoveries."

He listed these as the graves of conscripts forced to work on the tomb, a yard where the stones for the tomb were cut, a brick kiln and a massive dike to protect the tomb from underground flood waters.

"It is said that Chin mobilized 200,000 men to construct his tomb, many of them criminals from other Chinese states," says Yuan. "Until now there was no material evidence to back up this assumption. Thus, the conscript graves are of great historical importance."

The graves are a mile west of the burial mound and are 280.5 feet long, and 148.5 feet wide. Arranged in three rows, the skeletal remains of the conscripts crouch in the fetal position, two to three to each of 93 pits. No coffins were wasted on them and they were accompanied by none of the ornaments or funerary objects which accompanied most Chin citizens into the other world.

The age of the graves was established by the presence of Chin dynasty coins as well as tile shards listing the names, addresses and crimes of the dead. They are the first known epitaphs in Chinese history.

Yuan says efforts are being made to establish the causes of death, some of which were through execution.

A Trio Of Strange Albemarle Tales

Town and Plantation Tales of The Albemarle. By Thomas B. Wood. Illustrations by Frances Wood Crawford. Manteo. Times Printing Company, Inc. 1981. Paper, 109 pages, $4.95.

The first thing that needs to be pointed about these three Albemarle tales is that the title in no way provides a clue to the tenor of the stories. A cursory glance at the title, "Town and Plantation Tales of the Albemarle," would imply a collection of pieces, perhaps charming stories, of bygone days laced with nostalgia.

Not so. The three tales — "Richard Benbury," "Bennett Creci" and "Thomas Paxton" are among the most unusual tales of love-violence relationships imaginable. An unearthly quality of dark predestination runs through each story. In each, the male protagonist is a man who when young had the world at his feet, only to have some terrible trick of fate ruin any chance for happiness. In all three, the beautiful, beloved maidens of these men meet woeful ends.

The similarity of the basic plots of the three tales do not seriously diminish the individual interest of each.

• A monstrous beast, seemingly part bear-part wolf is the killer of two people in "Richard Benbury." The two deaths are widely separated in time. The first victim is a dark haired maiden, Anne Blount, who rides her horse to Benbury Plantation to inform her young suitor, Richard Benbury, of her displeasure with him. He, hurt deeply, watches her ride off just moments before the monster attacks, killing the horse in a savage beast-to-beast battle before turning on the girl. Still smarting from the girl's anger at his attempts to kiss her, Richard Benbury muses brokenheartedly, in an account of the attack he set forth in a journal at a later date, whether "I wished this terror to be wrought . . ." The people of the community never believed the story of the beast. Richard ends his journal on a note of suffering . . . "from that fateful day to the present, I have been cursed by all as the sole perpetrator of this outrage. I wish for death as an only sure deliverance from their scorn."

Several generations pass, and the youngest child of new owners, who has grown up fearful of ghostly tales connected with the restored plantation home, is left alone by his parents one day. Restless, he goes to watch a road gang of prisoners. The youth and one of the chained men, a muscled man of aristocratic bearing, form a wordless rapport. The youth returns to the house, a shot is heard, and the prisoner enters the house — he has escaped. But his freedom is short-lived. The strange half-breed animal who long years earlier slew Anne Blount, bounds into the house behind the prisoner, and horribly mutilates him, before brushing past the terror-stricken youth.

• Anna Johnston, in the tale of "Bennett Creci" is the only victim in these tales to die of natural causes. Bennett Creci is the son of a widow. Mrs. Creci, after her husband's death, bitterly withdrew from society and had thwarted her son's chance for happiness and normality by keeping him possessively bound to her. One summer at Nags Head, however, Bennett managed to evade her constant scrutiny long enough to fall in love. Anna, the daughter of a rich summer resident family, was totally unlike the shy Bennett. Vivacious, talkative, outgoing, she was the most sought after, the most popular of all the young summer women. Against her family's wishes, the determined girl married Bennett. A year later she died. Bennett, grief-stricken, would not accept the reality of her death. He placed the body of his dead wife in a small boat and rowed out to sea. All were convinced he'd perished along with the dead wife. Some time later, Bennett returned, wild-eyed, obviously mentally deranged. Townspeople had to tear him away from the decomposed corpse in his canoe. Bennett was taken to his boyhood home by his mother, who once more became sole possessor of her son.

• The third tale, "Thomas Paxton" is the most powerful and complex of the three. The victim, Elizabeth Brownrigg, is brutally murdered by Thomas Paxton, the young man who adored and worshipped her above all else. The murder takes place when a supernatural force for a few seconds turned his love into insane, utter revulsion of the young woman. The stormy heritage of past hatreds between the two families forms an intriguing backdrop to the shocking event.

The strength of Wood's material fortunately overrides a style that is often awkward. His stilted writing is well suited for the 1809 journal entry attributed to the protagonist in "Richard Benbury." But Wood has failed to put aside the artificiality of the journal for the rest of the book. Thus, we have numerous passages such as "When I reached the landing in anticipation of my procession to the fourth floor, I again felt that I could advance no further. Each slight movement was halted in turn by a sickening thrill that encompassed and innervated me with ungodly preoccupations." This kind of overwriting is, nonetheless, worth enduring for the fascination of the tales themselves.

It is disappointing that no details are provided about the author. Since the book is primarily regional in interest, readers will likely want to know something about the author of these strange tales.

Two Shows Open Jan. 22

NORFOLK, Va. — Two major events have been scheduled by The Chrysler Museum in Norfolk during January in conjunction with the celebration of Norfolk's 300th anniversary.

Both open Jan. 22 and will run through April 4.

• The first is "A Tricentennial Celebration: Norfolk, 1682-1982," a survey of 300 years of the history of Norfolk, Portsmouth, Virginia Beach and Chesapeake as reflected in paintings, furniture, silver, costumes and photographs.

Highlights will include the impact of a marine environment upon the geographic and military develop emnt of the area; the effect of the street car on the development of suburbia; and a close examination of Tidewater architecture.

• The second museum event is entitled "Norfolk 300 Years Later: One Day." This photographic exhibition of over 40 prints, both color and black and white, illustrate one 24-hour period in the life of the city of Norfolk. People, historic structures, the night life, cultural aspects, transportation, industry and the waterside are some of the views captured by a team of photographers who fanned out across Norfolk seeking to capture on film the urban perspective in Tidewater as it exists today.

Varied TV Entertainment Offered For Early 1982

The year 1982 gets under way with an entertaining variety of drama, adventure, music and explorations in programs for adults and for children in offerings to be aired during the coming week by the UNC Center of Television (PBS), Chapel Hill and by the Nickelodeon Network.

Programs of special interest scheduled for the week are:

UNC Center

•Sunday, 9 p.m. — Haley Mills is the star of the Masterpiece Theater season's premiere presentation, a seven-part dramatization of "The Flame Tree of Thika." Based upon Elspeth Huxley's memoir, "The Flame Tree of Thika" follows the experiences of an English family that leaves home during the Edwardian era to pioneer in the untouched beauty of Kenya. Filmed on location, the dramatization was produced by John Hawkesworth.

•Monday, 9 p.m. — Dorothy Parker's classic short story, "Big Blonde," is about a fun loving woman who after a whirlwind courtship and marriage found out she preferred being a wife to having a good time. When the marriage didn't keep its initial excitement — the husband still wanted to go out on the town all the time — he left. At loose ends, the "Big Blonde" drifts from one affair to another, dazed by alcohol. Sally Kellerman stars in the title role.

•Tuesday, 9 p.m. — The Mehinaku Indians of Brazil wear so few clothes that their word for naked means "without a belt." They live on fish and flour pounded from tubers, and craft magical flutes that only men may see. In the Odyssey production, "We Are Mehinaku," Kuyaparei, a fisherman, tells the filmmaker to "Tell the Americans about us. Tell them we are not wild Indians who club people. Tell them we are beautiful." The Nehinaku number only 80, and live at the headwaters of the Xingu River in central Brazil, within the boundaries of a national park created in 1946 to protect indigenous Indians from ranchers and roadbuilders.

"WE ARE MEHINAKU" ... an Odyssey production, tells the story of the small tribe of Indians living at the headwaters of the Xingu River in central Brazil. The documentary airs on UNC TV at 9 p.m. Tuesday and stars members of the tribe such as the man shown here with a carved bird and a bull-roarer.

•Wednesday, 8 p.m. — "Gold," a world view of the precious metal, is the first of 13 National Geographic Specials to be presented between Jan. 6 and April 7 on UNC Center for Television. The National Geographic Specials were acquired especially for North Carolina audiences by the center, and combines specials from the past three seasons with four new programs. Other programs scheduled in the series include "Sharks" on Jan. 13; "Egypt: Quest for Eternity" on Feb. 3; and "The Thames," on April 7.

•Friday, 10 p.m. — Music is the art to be featured on a Friday series, beginning with "Austin City Limits" with Emmylou Harris on the initial program. Other performers to be heard on successive Fridays are Kris Kristofferson on Jan. 15, followed during January and February by Jerry Reed, Chet Atkins, Johnny Lee, Willie Nelson, Merle Haggard, the Bellamy Brothers and Larry Gatlin and the Gatlin Brothers.

Also in January, beginning on Jan. 25 at 10 p.m., viewers will hear Leonard Bernstein lead the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra in an 11-week series of Monday concerts in all nine of Beethoven's symphonies plus other works.

Nickelodeon

Three new programs begin in January on the Young People's series on the Nickelodeon network.

•A 52-segment of 30 minutes each of Anna Sewell's classic children's novel, "Adventures of Black Beauty," begins New Year's Day. The show will be seen daily Monday through Friday at 4:30 p.m., and again each night at 7:30 p.m. Showings will also be held at 3 p.m. on Saturdays and at 2 p.m. on Sundays. Co-produced by London Weekend Television and Talbot Television and distributed by Fremantle Corporation, the series is set in Victorian England, and shot on location in Hertfordshire, England.

THE "BIG BLONDE" ... is based on Dorothy Parker's short story of the same name, and stars Sally Kellerman, shown here with John Lithgor, who portrays one of the important men in her life. "Big Blonde" airs at 9 p.m. Monday over UNC-TV, Channel 25, Greenville.

•"You Can't Do That On Television" is a live-format comedy show for preteens and teens, starring 12 young people who poke fun at issues that are most important to them. Underlying its tongue-in-cheek styles is a message: kids learn best what they can laugh at. The show airs Wednesdays at 2:30 and at 6:30 p.m., on Saturdays at 6:30 p.m., and on Sundays at 1 p.m.

•The third of the new young people's trio is "Spread Your Wings." This series celebrates the creative potential of young people all over the world. Each show focuses on one young person from one country who has given themselves over to the study of an art, a craft, or a trade. India, Greece, Thailand, France and Peru are some of the countries visited. "Spread Your Wings" airs Tuesdays and Thursdays at 3:30 and 6:30 p.m., on Saturdays at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m., and on Sundays at 1:30 and 6:30 p.m.

World Premiere Set For New Opera

CHARLOTTE — Plans are shaping up for the February world premiere in Charlotte of "Abelard and Heloise," a new opera by North Carolina's Pulitzer Prize winning composer, Robert Ward. Librettist is Jan Hartman, an Emmy Award lyricist.

The opera, in English, is based on the well-known 12th century story of France's most famous lovers. Abelard was a young, handsome poet, philospher and priest, hired by Fulbert to instruct his niece, Heloise. It was inevitable that the dashing young priest and the intelligent, beautiful girl would fall in love. Their story is a tragic one, including an illegitimate child, a secret marriage, Abelard's mutilation and a charge of heresy. It is also a heart-warming tale of unrequitted love, and the love of the two for God throughout their trials and tribulations.

The work was first approached as an opera for television broadcast over CBS, but the developing story became too complex to fit television needs, so the TV project was shelved.

Two performances are scheduled for the world premiere production — at 8 p.m. Feb. 19 and at 2:30 p.m. Feb. 21, both in Charlotte's Oven Auditorium.

Richard Marshall, general director of the Charlotte Opera, will conduct the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra and the 22-voice Charlotte Opera Chorus in the performances of "Abelard and Heloise."

Tenor Jerold Norman will sing the lead male role of Abelard, and soprano Nancy Shade will sing the role of Heloise. Norman has sung with the Metropolitan Opera, with American opera companies in Houston, Tulsa, Miami and Portland, and appeared in the world peremiere of "Houdini" with the Netherlands Opera. Ms Shade recently made a nationwide tour with the Boston Pops Orchestra in the PBS tribute to composer Richard Rodgers.

Other principal guest artists will be baritone Chester Ludgin, bass Malcolm Smith, and Vern Sutton, William Beck and Phyllis Tektonidis. Rhoda Levine will direct the production, Lowell Detweiler is set and costume designer, and Thomas J. Munn is the light designer.

Tickets for "Abelard and Heloise" are available either by mini-season tickets or singly. The mini-season, which includes "Abelard and Heloise" as well as a production of "Die Fledermaus," are priced in range from $12.60 to $36 for the Friday series, and from $11.70 to $32.40 for the Sunday series. Two sections of the Friday series and one of the Sunday series are already sold out.

Single tickets, if available, for "Abelard and Heloise" will go on sale Feb. 1. Tickets range in price from $7 to $20 for Friday, and from $6.50 to $18 for Sunday.

People interested in attending the world premiere on either night are advised to reserve tickets early. Tickets may be purchased by phone, by mail or in person from: The Charlotte Opera, 306 Spirit Square, 110 E. Seventh St., Charlotte, N.C., 28202. Phone number for tickets is 704-332-7177.

Prior to and in conjunction with raising funds for the February premiere, The Charlotte Opera Association is sponsoring a Medieval Gala to be held Jan. 30.

The gala is a black tie affair. However, many of those attending are expected to arrive in full medieval costume. A tankard of drink and a menu of fish, fowl and game will be featured.

Tickets for the benefit gala are $75 per person, ~~$150~~ per couple, with $50 per person tax deductible as a charity contribution. Tickets for the Medieval Gala may be reserved by calling Mrs. A. Zachary Smith at 704-366-9838.

HANSEL AND GRETEL — the famed children's opera by Engelbert Humperdinck, is the opera being broadcast at 2 p.m. Saturday over WITN Radio, Washington, 930 on the radio dial. The opera, being broadcast live from the Metropolitan in New York, has Judith Blegen as Gretel, Tatiana Troyanos as Hansel, Lili Chookasian as the Witch, Jean Kraft as the mother, and Michael Devlin as the father. Richard Woitach conducts the orchestra. Texaco sponsors the weekly 2 p.m. radio broadcasts. (Photo courtesy Metropolitan Opera House)

THE PAUL TAYLOR DANCERS — will give a single performance at Ovens Auditorium in Charlotte on Jan. 18. The company will perform "Le Sacre du Printemps (The Rehearsal)," the version of Stravinsky's score for two-pianos made for Nijinsky's use in rehearsing the original choreography. Tickets for the performance are priced at $15, $12 and $9. The company will also teach two Master Classes on Jan. 17. Fee is $5 per class. For performance tickets and for registration, call 704-374-1619. The Paul Taylor Dance Company is being featured on two new "Dance in America" programs over PBS in 1982 — one on Jan. 11, another on April 12.

First Lady Of Jazz

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Many consider Marian McPartland the first lady of Jazz.

Jazz critic Whitney Balliett calls her melodic piano style "an emotional, romantic and inventive one. Her sheer inventiveness is frightening."

But Miss McPartland eschews the title. In a modest, ladylike way, she is still striving, not yet comfortable with sitting back on the piano bench and accepting accolades.

This summer, performing at the Cafe Carlyle, she devoted an evening to music composed by the late Bill Evans.

Earlier that day, she said, "I don't know why I really gave myself this whole thing to do tonight. I can't just say, I'll learn a couple of his pieces. I have to learn a lot of them and make a big to-do about it.

"It's like setting goals for yourself, I guess. You work at something new and different and it sort of reflects in all the other things you do."

But playing jazz piano, even stretching herself by learning unfamiliar pieces for a Bill Evans evening or a Mary Lou Williams recording, isn't nearly all she does. This gregarious, vivacious, warm, charming lady finds lots more that she wants to do and should do.

She's writing a book about women jazz instrumentalists and putting out a volume of her recorded arrangements She records for Halcyon, her own record company, and for Concord Records, based in California. She plays in elementary school classrooms, especially enjoying the give-and-take with 9-and 10-year-olds. She plays Grieg's "A Minor Concerto," Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and a medley from "West Side Story" with symphony orchestras.

She is on the board of the American Guild of Authors and Composers, "which sort of watchdogs the collection of royalties." She conducts interviews with jazz pianists for National Public Radio, 26 of them in the last two years, 13 more coming up.

During the last radio series, she taped an interview with Oscar Peterson in Chicago, where he was playing. She was there for a few days, rehearsing and appearing with the Chicago Civic Symphony and also interviewing vibraphone player Marjorie Hyams for the jazz women book.

She says, "I think it's called spreading yourself too thin.

"I have a friend who says I lead a fragmented life. I think I like to be into a lot of things rather than just one. I just am that way. I try to get away from it, but no good."

The printing of the first English-language Bible was completed in 1535. In 1536, William Tyndale, the English translator of the Bible, was strangled and burned at the stake as a heretic by order of Emperor Charles V of the Holy Roman Empire.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.
And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.
Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Willie Nelms

Three volumes on the new book shelves at Sheppard Memorial Library offer a variety of reading pleasures for sports fans.

"Mr. October" by Maury Allen traces the career of baseball star Reggie Jackson. From his days as a college standout at Arizona State to his tempestuous seasons with the New York Yankees, Jackson has attracted attention. Allen's book explores Jackson's personality and describes his conflicts with managers, owners and fans.

Known for his batting prowess during the World Series (which earned him the nickname "Mr. October"), Jackson is shown to be a sensitive man who is essentially a loner. The book displays Jackson's attitude toward many of his teammates and competitors.

Known as a man who spares few words, Jackson has gained both the respect and contempt of many people. For all his baseball fans, "Mr. October" offers an excellent opportunity to learn about one of the game's most colorful figures.

With football games capturing the attention of the American sports public, Ken Rappaport's "Tar Heel: North Carolina Football" will provide entertaining reading. This work recalls many of the exciting moments and players in UNC—Chapel Hill history. Interviews are provided with various stars, coaches and sideline observers. In addition, many photographs are provided.

Feature stories on Charlie Justice, Carl Snavely and Bill Dooley are also offered.

A useful appendix, with statistics, is included covering the period from 1888 to 1975. This book will interest all Carolina football fans.

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — More than 4,000 new hotel rooms were built in Mexico in 1981 at a cost of more than $646 million in private and public funds, the National Fund for the Promotion of Tourism (FONATUR) has announced.

The nation's biggest hotel chain, the Nacional Hotelera company, now operates 30 establishments throughout Mexico, half of them owned by the Mexican government and the rest by private concerns, FONATUR said.

ECU Hits Road Again Against Baptist College

Buccaneers Said Pushover No More

A Staff Report

East Carolina's Pirates take to the road again on Monday night, winding up their current road trip at Charleston, S.C., where they'll meet Baptist College in a 7:30 p.m. game.

And unlike years past when the Buccaneers were riding a 50-some game losing streak, Baptist is a pushover no longer.

"They carried a five-game winning streak into this year, and won their first two games of the season," Coach Dave Odom of East Carolina pointed out. "So it goes without saying that they are a much improved team."

Baptist may be improved, but to a large extend, East Carolina is in the dark about them. "We've got a couple of reports, and we had a film sent in for us to look at," Odom noted. "But when we put the film on (the projector) it was blank."

No help there.

"We do know that they are a well-balanced team, and Eddie Tally (6-7 forward) is their leading scorer. They have quick guards and they press a lot. They are basically a man-to-man team (on defense), but they do go into a zone when they are ahead to protect their lead. They're street shooters, which makes them hard to defend."

Odom said the biggest thing he's worried about is for the Pirates to get off to a good start and take control of the game early — something the Pirates have had difficulty doing so far this year. Against Duke, it took them almost half of the first half to get unwound, and against George Mason, it took several minutes for the Pirates to get going and saw them fall back by eight points.

In the Duke game, they were unable to overcome the lead they allowed, cutting it back to two before finally bowing, 70-57. Against Mason, in the first ECAC-South game for the Pirates, ECU was able to overcome the deficit, eventually taking a 66-64 win.

That victory was the first on the road for the Pirates after five straight losses. They are 3-5 overall.

"We have to take control early. The longer you let a team like Baptist hang on, the harder it gets to shake them," Odom said.

The Pirate mentor was uncertain of Baptist's record, and information from the school's athletic office was unavailable due to the holiday schedule. "I think they've lost three times," Odom said. "They played Davidson a real close game, and lost by three to UNC-Wilmington. Then, UT-Chattanooga beat them in the finals of the Choo-Choo Classic (at Chattanooga).

"They've been off since December 19, waiting for us, so I know that they'll be prepared," the coach added.

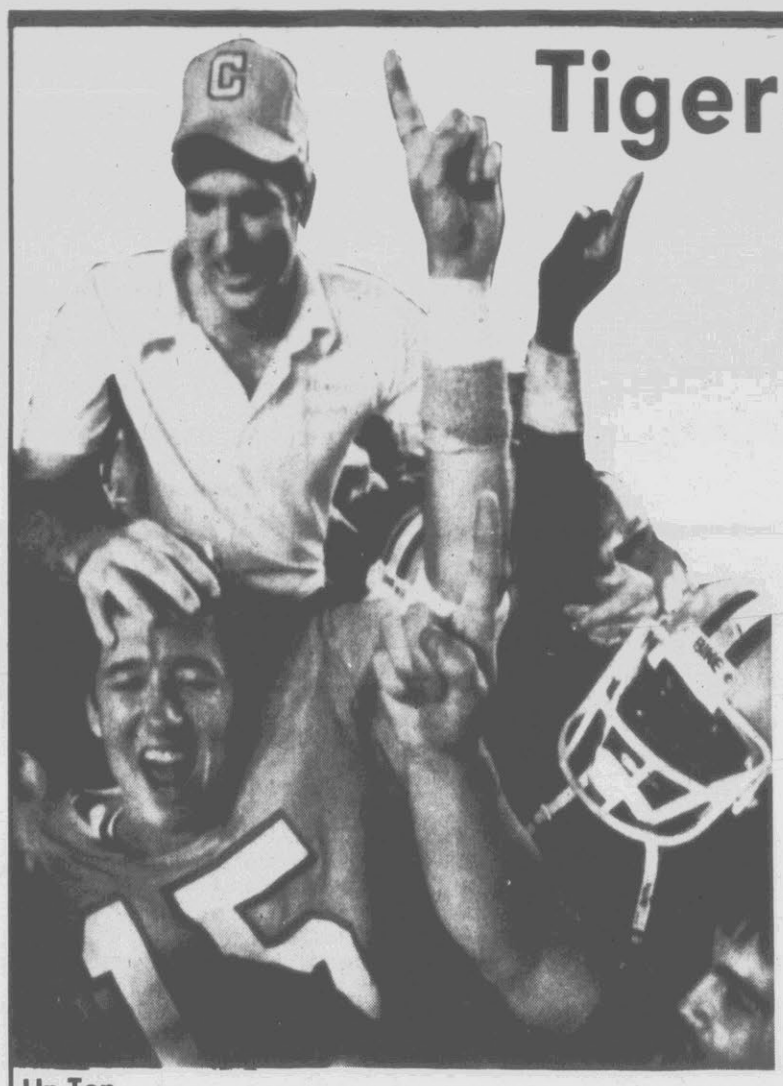
Odom is hopeful that the confidence the Pirates gained in their win over Mason will carry over as the season goes along. "As I said before, the win was not nearly as important as the chance in mental attitude we had in the game," Odom said. "I'll be looking for that in practice before we leave."

The game is the final one of a five-game string of contests on the road, and the seventh away from home in the first nine for the Pirates.

They return home briefly on Wednesday, hosting strong William & Mary, recent winners in the Iron Duke Classic. Then, it's back on the road once more as the Pirates travel to Harrisonburg, Va., to meet James Madison. Both games are ECAC-South contests.

When the Pirates return after that, they'll have completed two-thirds of their road schedule, ten of 15 games.

Tigers Capture National Title



Up Top

Clemson coach Danny Ford is lifted by his players after Clemson defeated Nebraska, 22-15, Friday night in the Orange Bowl. On Saturday, that win helped the Tigers be voted #1 in nation in both wire services. (AP Laserphoto)

From Wire Services

The Clemson Tigers, unranked before the season but unbeaten at the end, are college football's national champions for the first time in the university's 86 years on the gidiron.

It became obvious Friday night that Clemson would succeed Georgia as national champion when the top-ranked Tigers completed a 12-0 campaign, the best in their history, with a 22-15 victory over Nebraska in the Orange Bowl, while runner-up Georgia was losing to Pittsburgh 24-20 in the Sugar Bowl.

And it became official Saturday when 47 of 49 voters in The Associated Press' nationwide poll of sports writers and sportscasters made the Tigers runaway winners in the balloting to decide the national champion for 1981, with 977 of a possible 980 points.

Clemson far outdistanced Texas, Penn State and Pitt, who waged a close battle for the second, third and fourth spots. The rest of the Top Ten consists of Southern Methodist, Georgia, Alabama, Miami (Fla.), North Carolina and Washington.

Clemson was also named number one in the UPI poll, voted on by the coaches. In winning their first national championship and the first by an Atlantic Coast Conference team since Maryland in 1953, the Tigers received all but two first-place votes cast by the 37 coaches who participated in the final ratings. Clemson, 12-0, received 547 points to easily outdistance Pittsburgh, which received 472 points.

"That's great," Clemson Coach Danny Ford said when informed of the balloting. "I'm tickled to death for the players, the assistant coaches and the university. It really hasn't sunk in yet, but it will. It's like Satchel Paige said ... I keep looking back afraid that someone will catch us. But I guess they can't now, can they?"

The Tigers opened the season by defeating Wofford 45-10 — a late schedule change when Villanova dropped football — and Tulane 13-5. But they didn't crack the Top Twenty until a 13-3 triumph over Georgia on Sept. 19, which earned them a No.19 ranking.

They climbed to 14th following an open date Sept. 26 and vaulted to ninth with a 21-3 victory over Kentucky on Oct. 3. Victories over Virginia 27-0, Duke 38-10 and North Carolina State 17-7 produced jumps to sixth place, fourth and third.

The Tigers then moved into second place, a position they occupied for four weeks by defeating Wake Forest 82-24, North Carolina 10-8, Maryland 21-7 and South Carolina 29-13. One week later, No.1 Pitt lost to Penn State, leaving Clemson with the No.1 ranking as the nation's only unbeaten major-college team.

"It wasn't an impossible dream, but it was a hard dream," Ford said. "Basically, the thing it says is that throughout the whole season we had a better record than anybody else in the country and we had an opportunity to play a game for national attention and we were better than the team we played at that particular time.

"When we scheduled our games and agreed what time to play — well, we were good enough to play and win, and that's all we had to do. It doesn't matter whether you're the best team or have the

Chargers Edge Miami; Dallas Rolls

Field Goal Gives San Diego OT Win

MIAMI (AP) — Rolf Benirschke was so intent on giving his teammates a hard-fought victory Saturday night in the American Football Conference playoff that he nearly blewit and gave it to Miami instead. But, ultimately, the San Diego Chargers' placekicker came through.

After missing a chip shot 27-yard field goal attempt early in overtime, he connected on a 29-yarder with 13:52 gone in the extra period to boost the Chargers to a 41-38 victory in a game which set scoring records.

He was asked whether, as he trotted onto the field to get the game-winner, his earlier miss was on his mind.

"No," Benirschke replied. "I just wanted to kick it so badly for the other players. The offense was moving the ball with some tremendous individual efforts, really unbelieveable. So you block what went before out of your mind.

"Everybody misses some, and I was just fortunate to get another chance," he added.

Benirschke's decisive field goal came not only after he had missed one in overtime, but after Miami's Uwe von Schamann had missed one as well.

"You get that close after such a great effort and you wonder if that's the way it should be," von Schamann philosophized after the Dolphins had nearly pulled out the victory after having trailed by 24 points.

San Diego Coach Don Coryell, who had predicted beforehand that the game would be a tough one, said afterward: "We're glad — very glad — to get out alive." And he said he was confident Benirschke would eventually do the job.

"There was no way in the world he was going to miss two," the coach said.

Bob Kuechenberg, Miami's starting left guard and the Dolphins' only link on offense with their Super Bowl teams of the early 1970s, said dejectedly: "This team has come farther than any team

Cowboy Pressure

Cowboys' 'D' Gives Williams A Lesson

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The National Football League's leading pass defense gave Tampa Bay's young quarterback Doug Williams a playoff lesson Saturday.

The playoff-hardened Dallas Cowboys took Williams to the woodshed with four interceptions, four sacks and forced him into two intentional groundings, rolling into the National Conference title game with a 38-0 rout of the Buccaneers.

Dallas' front four of Ed Jones, Randy White, John Dutton and Harvey Martin panicked Williams into throwing three interceptions that led to Cowboy touchdowns.

It was the most times Williams had been sacked this year.

"This was our best team effort all year," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "We had a great pass rush. We put great pressure on Williams. It's the best effort we've had.

"I was concerned coming into this game because we hadn't played with any intensity in three weeks but we had it today."

Tampa Bay Coach John McKay said "We got mauled. To say we did not play well would be the understatement of the year."

Cutting the interview short, McKay said "I want to get the hell out of here."

Williams said of the Cowboys front four: "They are good, quick agile and tall. They played well ... what it boils down to is that Doug Williams had a bad day ... I had a lot of fun back there trying to dodge the rush."

Williams added, "They said they were going to put pressure on me and they did what they said."

Dallas running back Tony Dorsett said the Cowboys wouldn't mind playing San Francisco in the NFC title game.

"They jumped on us (earlier in the year) and we owe them one," Dorsett said.

The Cowboys went into Saturday's game with 37 interceptions, most in the NFL.

Cornerback Dennis Thurman intercepted Williams twice in the first quarter to put the Bucs in a deep hole.

"The rush forced Williams out of the pocket," said Thurman. "We knew Williams was frustrated ... he just didn't have time to throw ... he was running for his life ... he may take a lot of criticism and flack in Tampa Bay but the guys on this team respect him ... Williams is going to be a good NFL quarterback."

The second of Thurman's interceptions led to a 9-yard White-to-Tony Hill touchdown pass in the second quarter.

Three of Williams' interceptions were converted into Dallas touchdowns. He also was guilty of grounding the ball twice, and he was sacked four times.

Dallas led 10-0 at halftime after Rafael Septien's 32-yard field goal, and the Cowboys struck for three touchdowns in the third period.

A 25-yard White-to-Tony Dorsett screen pass helped set up Ron Springs' 1-yard scoring run on the opening drive of the second half.

Rookie free safety Mike Downs intercepted a Williams aerial on the Bucs 33, and Dallas took advantage of the turnover with Dorsett's 5-yard touchdown gallop.

Williams was victimized yet again when tackle John Dutton tipped a pass into the arms of defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones at the Tampa Bay 25. Backup tailback James Jones scored from 5 yards.

Tampa Bay got to the Dallas 5-yard line in the fourth period on a 75-yard Williams to Jimmie Giles pass but couldn't score.

The Bucs, champions of the NFC Central, ended their third foray into the

Hurricanes Slip By ECU Women, 60-56

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Forward Joyce Taylor scored 12 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half as Miami's Lady Hurricanes went on a 20 to 8 scoring binge en route to a 60-56 victory over East Carolina Saturday night in the Miami New Year's Classic.

Taylor, who finished with 27 points and 13 rebounds, scored Miami's first eight points of the second half and helped the Hurricans build a 51-37 lead with a 15-footer at the 9:45 mark of the second half.

A furious rally by the Lady Pirates sparked by Mary Denkler trimmed the Miami lead to 56-52 with 3:09 remaining. Denkler had eight of her 19 points during the surge.

Two Miami turnovers gave ECU the opportunity to tie the game in the last minute, but the Lady Pirates missed three field goal attempts as they dropped to 3-5. Miami is now 7-4.

In the first half, Denkler and forward Sam Jones led a balanced Lady Pirate attack to earn a 31-30 halftime edge. Miami maintained a two- to four-point edge for much of the first half before Lillion Barnes and Loraine Foster hit jumpers in the final minute to give the Lady Pirates one-point lead at the half.

"We're very disappointed," ECU coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "We had chances to win it late in the game, but we couldn't get anything to fall. The thing that hurt us most was not taking charge at the beginning of the second half. That cost us the game.

"We showed a lot of character," she added. "We could have quit in the second half, but we came back strong."

ECU plays Miami of Ohio today at 2:30 before heading to Kentucky for a Tuesday meeting with the nationally-ranked Lady Wildcats.

Wolfpack Romps By Outgunned Clemson

By TOM FOREMAN JR.
AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH — Derek Whittenburg, who would rather win games than look neat, scored 18 points Saturday night as 20th-ranked North Carolina State romped to a 75-59 victory over Clemson in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball action.

Whittenburg, who plays with his shirt-tail out, said he was told at the season's start to keep his shirt tucked into his pants by coach Jim Valvano, but the 6-foot-1 junior guard refused, saying it affected his game.

"It may look bummy and it may not be neat, but we're trying to win ballgames," Whittenburg said.

N.C. State shot 54 percent and Whittenburg contributed 7 of 12 from the floor, mostly on long-range jump shots.

"We're probably one of the deepest shooting teams I know. They let us have our shots. We just moved around and we took them," Whittenburg said.

Valvano said he wasn't certain that the victory was his team's best effort, but he added that it was good enough considering the Wolfpack's recent trip to the Rainbow Classic in Hawaii.

"Until you've taken a trip like that, you don't realize how fatiguing it can be. But they gave a great effort," Valvano said.

Clemson coach Bill Foster said his team is "still searching for its own identity."

"We can do better than we did tonight. One game like tonight isn't going to make or break you," he said.

Foster said the Wolfpack will win with shooting performances such as the one Saturday night, and added that the partisan crowd will also help.

"It was the best crowd in terms of enthusiasm I have seen since I've been coming here," Foster said.

Cards Bury Blue Devils, 99-61

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jerry Eaves and Poncho Wright ignited a 27-2 spurt in the first half that carried No.14 Louisville to a 99-61 rout of Duke in college basketball Saturday.

Eavs and Wright hit eight points apiece during the scoring spree that saw Louisville's lead balloon from 27-23 to 57-27 at halftime.

The Cardinals, 7-2, then scored the first 10 points of the second half.

Louisville's biggest lead was 49 points when Milt Wagner hit a 21-foot jumper for an 87-38 lead with 5:20 left in the game.

Eaves led six Louisville players in double figures with 17 points. Derek Smith added 14, Wright 13, Rodney McCray and Manuel Forrest 12 each and Wagner 11 for Louisville.

Duke, 3-6, was led by guard Tom Emma with 16 points. Dan Meagher followed with 12 and Vince Taylor and Gary Wendt scored 10 points each for the Blue Devils.

Duke had a stretch of 13 minutes, including the final eight minutes of th first half that it went without a field goal. It finished the game with 24 of 71 for 33.8 percent.

While Duke was having its problems finding the basket, the Cardinals hit a blazing 24 of 36 in the first half for 66.7 percent.

Louisville cooled to a 43.9 the final 20 minutes, finishing the game with 42 of 77 for 54.5 percent.

Rodney McCray grabbed 10 rebounds as Louisville had a whopping 56-39 advantage on the boards. Meagher was the game's leading rebounder with 14.

Louisville was particularly effective on Duke's Taylor, who hit only four of 17 field goal attempts. Taylor entered the game as the team's leading scorer with a 19 point average.

"Our guys showed a lot of character, but they were frustrated with Louisville's inside defense," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski. "Our scoreless time span was mainly due to poor shot selection and Louisville's pressure defense."

The Blue Devils turned the ball over 17 times, while Louisville made 14.

Vols Blow Away 'Bama

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Unheralded Tennessee, playing without two key starters who were sacked because of grade trouble, blew out 14th-ranked and previously unbeaten Alabama 88-67 Saturday night in a Southeastern Conference game.

Forward Dale Ellis scored 27 points for Tennessee. Guard Michael Brooks added 11 and Tyrone Beaman and Steve Ray each scored 10.

The score was tied five times in the first half, with Tennessee taking the lead and Alabama fighting back to tie. The Vols led at halftime, 35-32, and outscored the Crimson Tide 16-6 in the first six minutes of the second half to open up a 51-38 lead. Alabama was plagued with cold shooting in the second half.

Forward Eddie Phillips scored 24 points to lead the Tide. Guard Ennis Whatley added 15. The Tide's heralded freshman, Bobby Lee Hurt, who averages 15 points a game, was held to six.

Tennessee improved its record to 7-3 overall, and 2-0 in the SEC. Alabama dropped to 9-1 and 1-1 in the conference.

Alabama shot 29 of 66 from the field for a dismal 43.9 percent average and 56 percent from the free throw line. Tennessee shot a sizzling 68.6 percent from the field and 72 percent from the free throw line.

Alabama led by as many as five points in the first half, but Tennessee battled back to lead by as many as 23 points with 2:44 remaining in the game.

Coach Don DeVoe used most of the players on the bench.

Cavs Whip Dukes; Hoyas Win Again

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Sophomore Othell Wilson and junior All-American Ralph Sampson led the way as Virginia's unbeaten third-ranked Cavaliers slowly pulled away in the second half Saturday night for a 73-65 basketball victory over James Madison's Dukes.

It was the 11th triumph for the Cavaliers and their second in four nights over James Madison, now 8-2. Virginia had beaten James Madison 57-44 Wednesday night in the finals of the Richmond Times-Dispatch Invitational tournament.

Wilson finished with 17 points and Sampson with 15, all but two in the second half. Sampson also pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds, grabbing all but two in the last 20 minutes. Sampson, who also blocked three shots, took only five shots and made them all.

The Cavaliers also got 12 points each from junior Craig Robinson and senioir Jeff Jones.

Virginia scored the game's first six points, but James Madison went on a 13-2 run to take a 13-8 lead with 10:27 left in the half on a steal and three-point play by Derek Steele.

The Dukes led by six points on three occasions in the first half before Virginia tied it at 24 on Sampson's only shot in the first half, a dunk with 3:07 left.

There were two more ties before Virginia went ahead 32-28 at intermission on baskets by Jones and Ricky Stokes.

The Cavaliers opened the second half with a 12-6 run that included a three-point play by Stokes that made it 44-34 with 14:53 to play. The lead reached 12 points twice, the last time with 11:13 remaining. JMU cut the gap to seven on a three-point play by Darrell Jackson, 62-55, with 5:40 left but never got closer than that.

Dan Ruland led the Dukes, whose only two defeats have been to Virgnia, with 18 points and 12 rebounds. Charles Fisher added 12 points and Linton Townes added 11.

It was Virginia's 21st straight against state competition and the Cavaliers' 24th victory in a row at home as they shot 60 percent for the game and hit 12 of 18 in the second half.

ATLANTA (AP) — Forward Tom Johns scored nine straight points and center Jim Johnstone added 16 points as Wake Forest cruised past Georgia Tech 74-56 in Atlantic Coast Conference college basketball action Saturday night.

The Demon Deacons spotted the Yellow Jackets a 2-0 lead a minute into the game, then scored 13 straight as they raced to a 42-20 halftime lead. They stretched their lead by as many as 26 points in the second half before settling for the 18-point victory margin.

The victory brought Wake Forest to 8-2 overall and 1-0 in the ACC. Tech fell to 4-5 overall, 1-1 in the league.

Forward Anthony Byrd led Tech's scoring with a game-high 19 points, and guard Brian Howard added 10. The Yellow Jackets were playing with ACC leading scorer Brook Steppe, who sat out with an injured ankle.

The Deacons outrebounded Tech 27-23 and shot 65 percent from the field. Tech managed 47 percent from the field.

Georgetown.....75
Robert Morris.....58

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Freshman Pat Ewing and senior Eric Floyd combined for 17 of Georgetown's 21 points in the first 10 minutes of the second half, enabling the 17th-ranked Hoyas to pull away from Robert Morris College and post a 75-58 basketball victory Saturday.

Georgetown, 11-2, after winning its 10th in a row, led the unheralded Colonials only 44-38 before running off the 12-point string to go ahead 56-38.

The Hoyas began looking for Ewing, a 7-foot center, after intermission and he scored 11 of his 16 points, three baskets on assists from Floyd.

Floyd, a guard, finished with 22 points, while Anthony Jones had 12 and Bill Martin had 10.

Robert Morris, 4-5, trailed only 31-28 at halftime as guard Chip Harris sank seven of nine field goal attempts, most from 20 feet or more. Harris finished with 21 points and Paul Hensler added 11.

Florida.....60

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Freshman Derrick Taylor connected on two free throws with 20 seconds to play Saturday night to let Louisiana St. slip by Florida 61-60 in the Southeastern Conference basketball opener for the defending champion Tigers.

Mike Moses gave Florida its only lead of the second half at 60-59 when he hit a driving jump shot but crashed into Taylor, who converted both ends of a one-and-one free throw.

12 Games Into His College Career Hoya Freshman Already Respected, Feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — Twelve games into his college career, Georgetown University freshman Patrick Ewing has become one the most respected and feared basketball players in the nation.

A Darth Vader in satin shorts, the 7-foot Ewing has quickly become an intimidating force — scoring, rebounding, blocking shots and displaying an all-too-eager willingness to mix it up with opposing players.

"I don't think of myself as a physical player. They (opposing centers) try to muscle me and I just protect myself the best way I can," Ewing said during an interview Friday.

Ewing, who stretches 230 pounds of muscle across his , has "protected" himself in games against Cibona of Yugoslavia, George Washington University and Columbia. In each case at least one player on the other side required some form of first aid.

Columbia's 6-foot-6 center, Tom Brecht, felt Ewing's wrath last week during Georgetown's opening-round triumph in the Rochester Classic in upstate New York.

"He's so much more talented than I am, that I had to do something to try and take his mind off the game," said Brecht of a shoving match the Columbia center admitted initiating.

The pushing and shoving aside, not too much upset Ewing in Rochester as he was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player.

In the final, against Niagara, Ewing scored 20 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked six shots.

"I've never, ever seen anything like it. His agility was amazing. I couldn't do anything but just watch," noted Niagara's 6-foot-9 inch center, Mike Howse.

In his 12 games with the Hoyas, Ewing has averaged a shade under 14 points and nearly eight rebounds a game, while shooting 70 percent from the field. He has also blocked 43 shots.

"My game can still improve, both defensively and offensively," Ewing says.

The 17th ranked Hoyas, 10-2, carried a nine-game winning streak into Saturday's game against Robert Morris.

The team, which features three freshmen among its six leading scorers, may just be coming into its own midway through the season.

"I think they (his teammates) always knew what I could do but we are just now starting to play together and relax," Ewing said.

Born in Jamaica in the 19 years ago, Ewing came to America in 1975 when his family resettled in Cambridge, Mass.

While he didn't start to play basketball until he was in the seventh grade, Ewing quickly developed into one of the best high school players in the nation.

By his senior year, Ewing had led his school, Cambridge Rindge and Latin, to two state championships and had been the subject of a bitter college recruiting war. The winner was Georgetown and its coach, John Thompson.

Although he admits to an occasional bout of homesickness, Ewing says he is sure he made the right choice.

"I have never regretted coming to Washington," he said.

Although he has returned home only once since school started, for the Columbus Holiday weekend, Ewing stays in close contact with his family via telephone.

His favorite times are spent bouncing a basketball, "I am more relaxed on the court than any place," and listening to music in his dormitory room.

Shielded from reporters by Thompson, who strictly forbids media contacts with freshmen until Jan.1, Ewing is reserved in his first press interview.

"I don't like a lot of the things that reporters say about me," Ewing says. "They write things without really knowing me. They just write to have something to say."

While he has met a number of people on campus and made many friends, Ewing remains basically a loner.

"I have a lot of friends at school but there is no one I could call a best friend," he said.

Plagued by deficiencies in both reading and writing in high school, Ewing is managing to keep up with his studies at Georgetown, a Jesuit university more widely respected for its academics than its basketball prowess.

"The teachers are hard but fair," Ewing said of his instructors.

While education is important, "I chose Georgetown because of the opportunity it will give me to get an education and play basketball," Ewing admits the right offer could end his college career prematurely.

N.C. Has 3 On 'Parade' Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Three players from North Carolina, led by kicking specialist Lee Gliarmis, have been named to the 1981 Parade High School All-American football team.

Gliarmis, a 5-10, 180-pound senior from Fike Senior High School in Wilson, was named the top kicker in the country by the magazine's national board of college coaches, scouts and recruiters. He hit on 18 of 20 extra points and scored on seven of 12 field goal attempts, including five of 40 yards or more.

Linemen Dennis Barron of Beddingfield High in Wilson and Bill Viggers of East Burke High in Icard were also chosen among the top prep players in the nation.

The 19th annual team selected by the publication is comprised of 64 seniors from 25 states and the District of Columbia.

Walters Believes Aces Can Return To Prominence

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Dick Walters knows that many basketball fans will think he's slightly off keel, maybe even suffering from delusions of grandeur.

But he is convinced that he can return the University of Evansville to the national prominence they enjoyed during the 1960s and 1970s when they won five national champsionships.

To do so, however, he must overcome a number of obstacles. First of all, Evansville is now playing in Division I, along with all the big boys: the Indianas, the Kentuckys, the North Carolinas.

Secondly, he must realize that he is still playing with a team preparing to graduate its first class since an airplane crash claimed the lives of 14 players, coach Bobby Watson and several team supporters on a dreary December night in 1977.

Finally, to play with the big boys, you first must recruit with them. And in Indiana, where there are three other big boys already, that can be especially difficult.

After a successful career at the junior college level, the opportunity to coach at a school like Evansville came at just the right time for the 34-year-old Walters.

"It wasn't just the tragedy," he said. "It wasn't just the move from Division II to Division I. It's a great challenge. We can be national contenders again.

"Look, I know we have a long way to go ... But we've knocked on the door for two years," he said.

In Walters' three years at Evansville, his record has consistently improved. In 1979, with a patchwork team, the Aces posted a 13-16 mark. That was followed by a 18-10 slate and a 19-9 record last year.

This year, Evansville may knock down the 20-win door for the first time since 1972 during the heyday of former coach Arad McCutchan, who won 514 games over 31 years.

With a two-game sweep of its own holiday tournament last week, the Aces improved their record to 9-1, the only loss to upstate rival Indiana State.

The Aces have been winning impressively with an average margin of nearly 20 points. They are among the nation's leaders in field goal percentage, 54.9 percent, and defense against the field goal, a miserly 38 percent.

Local enthusiasts are starting to grumble about not being ranked in the polls.

Still, there are questions. Evansville's schedule has not exactly been loaded with household names. The Aces defeated such teams as Baltimore, Southern Illinois and Valparaiso. They belong to the Midwest City Conference.

Western Kentucky, which is expected to make a strong run for the Ohio Valley Conference title, was a tougher foe, but fell 73-70.

Down the road, the Aces face some stiffer competition with away games at Kansas and DePaul.

Walters downplays the top 20 stuff, but it is obvious he would like a little bit of that national attention, too.

"The people that are talking Top 20 are Evansville people," he said. "It's hard for me to know anyway because I've never coached a Top 20 team."

Privately, though, Walters contends there isn't much keeping the Aces from the elite of college basketball.

"The only thing lacking in our players is strength and maybe a little quickness. I have to recruit kids who want to get in on the ground floor of building something great. That's our selling point until we get there. When we get there, we won't have to sell."

Tide, Tigers Have 4 In Senior Bowl

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Alabama and Auburn have placed four players each — the most of any team — on the South squad for the 33rd annual Senior Bowl All-Star Football Game on Jan. 16.

Tennessee, Texas A&M and Miami each have two players on the roster, with other schools contributing one representative, bowl officials announced Saturday.

Chuck Noll and his coaching staff from the Pittsburgh Steelers will handle the South players, including 13 from the Southeastern Conference, seven from the Southwest Conference and eight from independent schools.

Mike Kelley of Georgia Tech and John Fourcade of Mississippi are quarterbacks for the South team, and the running backs include the nation's third-leading rusher, Barry Redden of Richmond.

The other runners are Sammy Winder of Southern Mississippi, Dennis Gentry of Baylor, George Peoples of Auburn and Floyd Allen of Virginia Military Institute.

Wide receivers are Orlando McDaniel of Louisiana State, Cedric Jones of Duke and Mike Whitewell of Texas A&M. Whitewell set a Southwest Conference record with a 27.1 yards-per-catch average in 1981, and he's also the Aggies all-time career leader in reception yardage with 1,372 yards.

Robert Hubble of Rice and Jerry Bell of Arizona State are the tight ends.

Top-ranked Clemson's lone representative is 6-foot-5 center Tony Berryhill, who will share playing time with 250-pound Lee North of Tennessee.

Offensive linemen are South Carolina's Chuck Slaughter, Auburn's Keith Uecker, Vanderbilt's Ken Hammond and Miami's Frank Frazier.

Alabama's four players head the defensive corps, with Warren Lyles at middle guard, Jim Bob Harris and Benny Perrin at defensive back and Thomas Boyd at linebacker. Boyd was not allowed to play in the Cotton Bowl for disciplinary reasons.

Other than Lyles, the defensive linemen are Keith Baldwin of Texas A&M, Bob Nelson of Miami, Edmund Nelson of Auburn and Booker Reese of Bethune-Cookman.

Boyd's teammates at linebacker are Danny Skutack of Auburn, Brian Ingram of Tennessee and Jeff Roberts of Tulane.

Harris and Perrin will be joined in the secondary by Florida State's James Harris and Miami's Fred Marion.

The South's punter will be Texas Tech's Maury Buford, whose 44.8 yard average was the nation's fifth best this season. Kicking for the South will be Southern Methodist's Eddie Garcia, the nation's 11th leading scorer with 91 points on 18 of 22 field goals and 37 extra points.

Bailey Slaton, general manager of the Senior Bowl, said the North team should be announced next week.

Texas, a 14-12 winner over Alabama in the Cotton Bowl, jumped from sixth to second with 862 points, while the Crimson Tide slipped from third to seventh. Penn State, which trounced Southern California 26-10 in the Fiesta Bowl, climbed from seventh to third with 845 points, while dropping the Trojans from eighth to 14th.

Pitt, which had been No.1 before Clemson but lost its regular-season finale to Penn State and skidded to 10th place, vaulted to fourth with 834 points for its Sugar Bowl triumph over Georgia.

The final regular-season Top Ten consisted of Clemson, Georgia, Alabama, Nebraska, SMU, Texas, Penn State, Southern Cal, Miami and Pitt.

Making up the postbowl Second Ten are Nebraska, Michigan, Brigham Young, Southern Cal, Ohio State, Arizona State, West Virginia, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma. Michigan was the preseason choice to win the national championship.

The Second Ten in the final regular-season poll consisted of North Carolina, Washington, Iowa, BYU, Ohio State, Michigan, Arizona State, Southern Mississippi, UCLA annd Washington State.

However, Southern Mississippi lost to Missouri 19-17 in the Tangerine Bowl, UCLA was drubbed by Michigan 33-14 in the Bluebonnet Bowl and Washington State bowed to BYU 38-36 in the Holiday Bowl. Meanwhile, West Virginia cracked the rankings for the first time all year by trimming Florida 26-6 in the Peach Bowl, Missouri returned via its Tangerine Bowl triumph and Oklahoma also reappeared thanks to a 40-14 licking of Houston in the Sun Bowl.

Clemson was the seventh team to be rated No.1 during the 1981 season. The most No.1 teams in any one previous year was five.

USC Coach Insists She Has NOT (!) Resigned

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Pam Parsons, who the University of South Carolina says has resigned her job as women's basketball coach, insisted Saturday she has not quit and intends to lead her team to a national championship.

The school announced Friday Parsons had resigned for health reasons, but she has denied the report and says she has no idea why the university would make such a statement.

South Carolina President James Holderman confirmed the resignation late Friday after Parsons called the Associated Press to deny the report.

"I have not resigned," she said in a prepared statement Saturday. "I am very proud of my team and I fully intend to coach them to USC's first national championship."

Parsons said she would have no further comment until noon Monday, when she said she would make another statement. She refused to say if she had had any contact with university officials Saturday.

The Lady Gamecocks, ranked second nationally, won their eighth straight game Saturday in Philadelphia, beating St. Joseph's College 50-48. Newly appointed acting coach Terry Kelly directed the team's victory.

The next two golfers in the field were six strokes behind Clampett at 277, Greg Powers and Rod Curl.

Leader among the half-dozen LPGA stars playing in the only tournament that features women competing against men for equal prize money was Roookie of the Year Patty Sheehan, who had an even-par 72 at Pebble Beach. She was back in the field at 283, which was five strokes better than U.S. Women's Amateur champion Juli Inkster of Los Altos, Calif.

Men's amateur champion Nathaniel Crosby of Hillsborough, Calif., was further back at an even 300. The low-70 pros and ties made the cut to play in Sunday's final round at Pebble Beach.

Haas finished 15th on the 1981 TPA money-winning list, one spot behind Clampett. "I don't think I have it wrapped up," said the 28-year-old from Charlotte, N.C. "Anything can happen at Pebble Beach.

South Carolina Names New AD

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) Robert Marcum, University of Kansas atletic director for the past three years, was named Saturday to the same post at the University of South Carolina.

"The first task he has been assigned is to find us a new head football coach shortly," said South Carolina President James B. Holderman at a news conference called to announce the appointment.

Marcum, 45, replaces Jim Carlen, who was fired last month as football coach and athletic director.

Holderman said Marcum's appointment makes good on a commitment by South Carolina trustees 1½ years ago to eventually split the two jobs, for which Carlen was paid $67,000.

Holderman said Marcum had signed a three-year contract at $59,000 per year.

The new athletic director is a native of Huntington, W.Va., and was graduated from Marshall University in 1959.

At Sun City Challenge

Miller, Ballesteros Tied

SUN CITY, Bophuthatswana (AP) — Johnny Miller, whose brilliant, 6-under-par 66 has elevated him into a tie for the lead going into Sunday's final round of the world's richest golf tournament, would like to see the chase get even tighter.

"It's exciting," the usually low-key Miller said Saturday after his 54-hole total of 206 had lifted him into a tie with Seve Ballesteros of Spain, who had led alone through the first two rounds of the Sun City $1 million Golf Challenge.

"I'd really like to see it come down to the last two holes with all three of us, me and Seve and Jack (Nicklaus) tied for the lead," miller said. Then he noticed Ballesteros standing in a crowd of reporters.

"Wouldn't you like that, Seve?" he asked. "Wouldn't that be fun?"

"I think I'd rather be leading," answered the young Spaniard, who rallied with a 32 on the back nine to salvage a 69 and a tie for the top spot at 10 under par for three trips over the course Gary Player created in the crater of an old, extinct volcano.

Nicklaus managed a 69 in the muggy heat and was three strokes back at 209 heading into the last 18 holes of the chase for a $500,000 first prize.

"I played pretty well today," said Nicklaus, holder of a record 17 major professional titles. "I've played pretty well for three days, and I'm three strokes back of two good players. That's tough. I've got to continue to play well and make some putts, make a couple of those 20-25 footers. That's the only way I'll be able to catch them."

Lee Trevino and Player appeared out of the run for the biggest prize golf has ever offered.

Trevino three-putted the first three holes, "the first time I've done that in my pro career," he said, and finished with a 74 that left him at 218. "I just put myself behind the eight ball immediately," he said. "From then on it was a fight."

Player, the only other man in the elite, invitational field assembled at this spectacular resort rising from the African veld some 100 miles from Johannesburg, was another stroke back at 219 after matching par 72.

Trevino and Player, however, take considerable consolation from the fact that the last man in the field of five is assured of a $100,000 check, matching the biggest presented to a winner on the American tour.

Ballesteros, at 24 the youngest of the five great players assembled for golf's first foray into seven-figure country, had a three-stroke lead when the day's play started before a gallery of some 8,000.

It quickly evaporated, however, when he bogeyed three in a row beginning on the third hole, missing the green on each hole.

Miller, who played without a bogey, caught, then passed him at one point but they were tied again when Ballesteros chipped to within a foot and birdied the ninth.

Miller, playing some 15 minutes in front of Ballesteros, scored from 10 feet on the 10th, stroked short irons inside of five feet on the 13th and 14th annd dropped an eight-footer on the 17th.

Ballesteros, whose massive length enabled him to use the driver only once, chipped in from 20 yards on the 10th, then closed with a birdie-birdie flourish, hitting a short iron to four feet on the 17th and scoring from 15 feet on the 18th.

WORD GAME

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Kathy Switzer, the 12-year-old daughter of Coach Barry Switzer, was explaining the intricate game of football to a girl friend at an Oklahoma game this fall.

When a substitute carried the ball for the Sooners, Kathy said he played in the secondary. But when the regular running back, Buster Rhymes, ran with the ball for a good gain, Kathy confided in her friend that he played in the "firstdary."

Abdul-Jabbar To Return

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who has missed Los Angeles' past six games because of a strained tendon in his right ankle, will return to action Sunday night when the Lakers entertain the Seattle SuperSonics, a club spokesman said Saturday.

Bruce Jolesch, public relations director for the Lakers, said Abdul-Jabbar will definitely play, but that Coach Pat Riley will wait until pre-game warmups to decide if the six-time National Basketball Association Most Valuable Player will start or come off the bench.

New York, 49ers Only Two Steps From Super Bowl

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The New York Giants and San Francisco 49ers, two steps from the Super Bowl, meet Sunday on the tricky footing of Candlestick Park's soggy turf.

"It's a great equalizer," 49ers Coach Bill Walsh says of the field, probably the worst in the National Football League.

But, Walsh added, he rates the teams as equals anyway, even though his 49ers had the NFL's best regular season record, 13-3, and the Giants edged into the playoffs as a 9-7 wild card entry.

"Both have devastating defenses, and that's all there is to it. They can take offenses apart. The key to the game will be which team can function best offensively and take advantages of the breaks which come up," Walsh said.

The winner, sure to come out of Sunday's game with muddy uniforms, will advance to the National Conference championship game and play the winner of Saturday's Tampa Bay-Dallas NFC semifinal.

San Francisco and New York ranked second and third, respectively, among NFC defensive units this season, behind the Philadelphia Eagles, 27-21 losers to the Giants last Sunday. The 49ers own a big statistical edge on offense, having the conference's top-ranked passer, Joe Montana.

Giants Coach Ray Perkins is glad his team will go into Candlestick knowing what to expect when they maneuver on the wet field. They faced the 49ers on a rainy day in late November, losing 17-10.

"We're just happy for the opportunity to play the 49ers again. We know the field will be soft and that it could be muddy if it rains more before the game. It's just something we'll have to adjust to when the time comes," Perkins said.

The Giants, 6-7 after the loss to the 49ers, bring a four-game winning streak into Candlestick this time. In running back Rob Carpenter they have, in Walsh's opinion, "the hottest item in the league."

Carpenter rushed for 161 yards in the playoff victory last weekend and has five 100-yard performances since the Giants acquired him from Houston in October. In the Nov. 29 game at Candlestick, he settled for 40 yards.

Two turnovers, including a fumble by Carpenter, proved fatal to the Giants on Nov. 29.

"We didn't exactly blow them out," says 49ers defensive lineman Archie Reese. "I'm sure they felt that with a few breaks here and there, they could have beat us, and maybe they could have.

"I look for this to be a real knock-down, drag-out game."

It will be the first post-season game for the 49ers, who were 6-10 last season and 2-14 two seasons ago, since 1972.

That 1972 game, played at Candlestick, ranks as one of the saddest chapters in the 49ers' history. They took a 28-13 lead into the last period but the Dallas Cowboys, scoring a touchdown in the final minute after recovering an onside kickoff, won 30-28.

San Francisco's current team is a young one which figures to be of playoff caliber for several years to come, and the Giants' prospects for the future also appear bright. Cornerback Ronnie Lott, one of three rookies starting in the 49ers' defensive secondary, and sensational linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the Giants are the best of the young players.

The 49ers' Montana, who completed 64 percent of his passes and threw for 19 touchdowns this season, is in just his third NFL season and his first as a full-time starter. But he has a decided edge in experience over Scott Brunner, the second-year pro who has been the Giants' starting quarterback since Phil Simms went down with a shoulder injury seven weeks ago.

Brunner had a 42 percent completion mark and only five touchdown passes this season, but he threw three touchdown passes in the Giants' playoff opener.

"We've got so much confidence now, we feel we can beat anybody," Brunner said.

State Women Win

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ginger Rouse pumpd in 24 points to lead 7th-ranked North Carolina State to a 103-59 women's college basketball victory over Appalachian State Saturday.

The 9-1 Wolfpack took advantage of its defense to force 30 Lady Apps turnovers and hit 45 of 86 field goal attempts, 52.3 percent. The Wolfpack made only 9 turnovers.

A Snowy Message

Bengals Built Through Draft

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals, like the Dallas Cowboys and the Pittsburgh Steelers, were built on draft choices — most of them the result of trades of popular players.

All of the team's 22 starters, who face the Buffalo Bills in an American Conference playoff game Sunday, were acquired as draft choices.

Some of the trades to get draft choices were unpopular with fans, sending away Bill Bergey, Coy Bacon, Lemar Parrish, Sherman White and Stan Walters.

As a result of the draft choices acquired by the Bengals in the trades, Cincinnati now has Eddie Edwards, Ross Browner and Wilson Whitley on the defensive line; linebackers Gary Burley and Bo Harris; defensive back Ray Griffin; offensive linemen Glenn Bujnoch and Dave Lapham; running back Charles Alexander and tight end Don Bass, the leading pass receiver this year.

The Bengals traded Bacon and Parrish to the Washington Redskins for a first-round draft choice in 1979 — Alexander.

"The only reason we aren't considered traders — perhaps we're considered traitors — is because we traded players like Parrish and Bergey and didn't get a player right away," said Mike Brown, assistant general manager.

"As a rule, we haven't traded for players. I'm not going to argue that it's the best philosophy, necessarily. If the right situation developed, we would try to trade for a player. There was a player in our divison (Central) that we tried to get this year, but he went to another team because the team that had him didn't want to trade within the division. It was Rob Carpenter," traded by the Houston Oilers to the New York Giants, said Brown.

"For the most part, though, we prefer to raise our own. We feel there's a big advantage if a player is yours from the beginning. The feeling is that there's a deep loyalty when a player is with one team," said Brown.

"If a player isn't happy here, you can't handle him. There have been times when we have opted to trade a player in that situation," Brown said.

"We were criticized highly for trading Bergey but now we have Browner, Whitley and Ray Griffin to show for it," Brown said.

Edwards was drafted before Whitley in 1977, when Cincinnati had two first-round picks. The selection was secured in the 1976 trade for Sherman White.

Giants Face 49ers, Bills Meet Bengals Today In Playoffs

By The Associated Press

Cinderella stepped into the glass slipper with no trouble at all a year ago when the Oakland Raiders became the first wild card team in National Football League history to win the Super Bowl.

Now the New York Giants and Buffalo Bills are trying to make that small-sized miracle happen again.

The Giants and Bills, this year's wild-card qualifiers, advanced through the first round of playoffs last Sunday and that earned them tickets for this weekend's divisional games.

Their tasks remain tougher than other playoff teams simply because they are wild cards. First, since they had to play last weekend, they did not enjoy the week's rest following the regular season that the other six clubs in the playoffs had. And, by winning, they qualified to play the teams with the best records in their conferences — San Francisco in the National Conference and Cincinnati in the American Conference — this week and those games, like any others the wild cards play in the postseason, will be on the road.

But those were the same obstacles facing the Raiders a year ago and the Giants and Bills are quite aware of how much Oakland made of its opportunity.

New York, 9-7 during the regular season, goes to San Francisco to face the 13-3 49ers in the NFC semifinal, while Buffalo, 10-6, takes on the 12-4 Cincinnati Bengals in the AFC. Both games will be played on Sunday.

In the other half of the divisional playoffs, Dallas swamped Tampa Bay, 38-0, Saturday afternoon to earn the right to advance to the NFC championship game while San Diego nipped Miami, 41-38, in overtime to advance to the AF title game.

The four weekend winners advance to the Conference championship games on Jan. 10 and the survivors of those contests will play in Super Bowl XVI at Pontiac, Mich., on Jan. 24.

The Giants and Bills had similiar types of victories in their playoff openers. Both built big early leads and held off frantic comebacks. The Giants eliminated defending NFC champion Philadelphia 27-21 after rushing to a 20-0 first period lead. Buffalo downed the New York Jets 31-27, holding off a rally that nearly erased an early 24-0 lead.

Both wild cards come into Sunday's games with sizzling offensive weapons.

Running back Rob Carpenter of the Giants rushed 33 times for 161 yards against the Eagles, carrying the ball on 16 of his team's 20 offensive plays in the second half. Acquired from Houston early in the season, Carpenter gained 822 yards and provided the Giants with a running game which the team has lacked in recent years.

For the Bills, flanker Frank Lewis was the main weapon against the Jets, grabbing seven passes for 158 yards. Lewis set club records with 70 catches for 1,144 yards during the regular season.

It stands to reason then, that the 49ers will be trying to stop Carpenter and the Bengals must contain Lewis.

"If they're going to watch for me all the time, they're going to get buried," said Carpenter. "If they start to overplay the run, that's OK with me."

Buffalo will be playing Cincinnati for the second time this season. The Bills blew a 21-10 fourth quarter lead and bowed in overtime 27-24 last September. Many of the players said the Jets' furious comeback last week reminded them of that early encounter with the Bengals.

Dallas 'D' Carries Day

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys' playoff-hardened defense had one thing in mind Saturday for Tampa Bay quarterback Doug Williams.

"We knew he was tired and we just wanted to put the pressure on and confuse him," said cornerback Dennis Thurman, who picked off tw Williams passes in the Cowboys' 38-0 shutout of the Buccaneers in a National Football League divisional playoff game.

Dallas defenders carried the day, sacking Williams four times and intercepting four passes to set up three Cowboy touchdowns.

"He (Williams) didn't have time to throw. He was running for his life," Thurman said. "He got a little upset but I imagine most quarterbacks in that situation would."

Veteran linebacker D.D. Lewis said the Dallas defense had two weeks to think about its game plan for Williams.

"We've been sitting around on pins and needles and we just couldn't wait to get out and hit," said Lewis, who will retire after this season.

Safety Charlie Waters, also planning retirement at season's end, said, "We matured as a defensive team at the right point. Nothing worked for Tampa Bay.

"Our defense is at a point where we communicate really well and communicate really fast. I'm glad I wasn't the quarterback for Tampa Bay."

In addition to Thurman's pair of interceptions, safety Michael Downs and defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones each pulled down an errant Williams pass, Jones getting his after line mate John Dutton batted the ball into the air.

"We never dreamed it would be this easy," said Jones. "But I'd like to thank John Dutton for helping me get my first interception in eight years."

Dallas coach Tom Landry joined in the praise for the defensive squad, but wanted to make sure the offense got some kudos, too.

"We had great field position all day and we didn't turn over the ball once. It as a real team effort. I thought every phase of the game was good and we showed a lot of intensity," said Landry.

Cowboys Blast Bucs . . .

National Football League playoffs with a 9-8 ledger.

It was Dallas' 18th victory in a record 30 playoff games.

For the heavily-favored Cowboys, who went into the game 7½-point favorites, next week will mark their 10th appearance in an NFC championship game. They have been in five Super Bowls.

The Cowboys earned their 18th consecutive victory in Texas Stadium, where they are now 3-0 against Tampa Bay in the only times they have played the 6-year-old Buccaneers.

The Cowboys received a gift touchdown in the waning moments of the game when Cedrick Brown interfered with Butch Johnson in the Tampa Bay end zone. Third string fullback Timmy Newsome went the final yard for the touchdown, and the Cowboys equalled their greatest margin of victory in the playoffs. Dallas beat Cleveland by 38 points, 52-14, in 1967.

Williams completed only 10 of 29 passes for 187 yards, while his Dallas counterpart, White, connected on 15 of 26 for 143 and was sacked only once. Dorsett, the second-leading rusher in the NFL, was used sparingly, yet gained 86 yards on 16 carries.

Dallas now has shut out three teams in its 30 NFL playoff games. The last was a 28-0 victory over Los Angeles in 1979, and the first was a 5-0 victory over Detroit in 1970.

Thurman intercepted Williams twice in the first period, but Dallas scored just one touchdown.

The Dallas cornerback returned his first interception 31 yards to the Tampa Bay 30, but the Buccaneers forced the Cowboys to punt.

On Tampa Bay's next possession, Thurman returned an interception 19 yards to the Bucs 47.

It took Dallas 11 plays for the second-quarter score. Fullback Ron Springs ran 2 yards on fourth-and-1 from the Bucs 28. White hit Drew Pearson with an 8-yard completion on third-and-5 from the Tampa Bay 21 before the payoff pass of 9 yards to Hill three plays later.

Tampa Bay's biggest first half threat was spoiled when Williams was called for a 28-yard intentional grounding penalty, throwing the ball away while in Too Tall Jones' grasp. Suddenly the Bucs, who had moved to the Dallas 21, faced third-and-33. After an incompletion, Tampa Bay had to punt.

A 22-yard shanked punt by Larry Swider set up a Dallas field goal.

White hit Drew Pearson for an apparent 10 yard touchdown pass but it was called back because tight end Jay Saldi was in motion. Dallas settled for Septien's 32-yard field goal.

Future Of Stock Car Racing Never Looked Better

By MIKE HARRIS
AP Motorsports Writer

Darrell Waltrip, who rose to the top in stock car racing in 1981, capsulized both his season and the entire year in motorsports when he said: "We had some down times, we had some ups, and the future never looked better."

Waltrip shared the motorsports headlines with fellow NASCAR Grand National drivers Bobby Allison and Richard Petty, Indy car veterans Rick Mears, Bobby Unser and Mario Andretti, Formula One stars Nelson Piquet and Carlos Reutemann, and sports car veteran Brian Redman.

They all shared the attention with confusion and controversy. The Indianapolis 500 produced a disputed winner and the Grand National circuit featured new downsized cars.

But it was the 34-year-old Waltrip, a "good ol' boy" from Franklin, Tenn., who wound up with most of the laurels.

After spending more than $300,000 of his own money at the end of 1980 to buy out the last two years of a contract with his former team, Waltrip moved snugly into the driver's seat provided by legendary racer and car-builder Junior Johnson. With crew chief Tim Brewer providing mechanical expertise and cheerleading, the team exploded from a slow start, erased a 341-point Allison lead in the national championship standings and clinched the title in the last race of the season, winning over Allison by 53 points.

Along the way, Waltrip drove his Buick Regal to 11 pole positions, victories in 12 of 31 races — the most since Petty captured 13 in 1975 — finished in the top three an astounding 21 times and earned himself and his Mountain Dew-sponsored team an all-time, single-season auto racing record of $693,342.

"It was like putting together hotcakes and syrup," the homespun Waltrip quipped when presented with the Olsonite Driver of the Year award in December. "Junior is a racing genious, a friend and almost like another father. And, when I drive for him, I'm a better driver. We struggled early on, but Junior kept telling me, 'Don't worry, before the end of the year, we're gonna win 12 or 13 races.' When Junior says it, you gotta believe it. I did."

For Allison, who won $644,311, 1981 was both frustrating and fulfilling.

"Believe it or not," Allison says, "it was the best year I've ever had. I'd love to win the championship, because I've never done it. But you've got to consider the season a success when you win four races, go down to the last race of the year with a shot at the Winston Cup championship and win all that money.

"The only thing that really went wrong is that Darrell beat us on the track with a hot streak that's hard to believe."

Petty, at age 44 in the twilight of a brilliant career, won two races in 1981, including his seventh Daytona 500.

Meanwhile, NASCAR opened a Pandora's box when it legislated a smaller wheelbase for its racing sedans prior to the season. That changed the silhouette of the cars and caused aerodynamics problems early in the year, with the cars so unstable that even the best of the stockers turned cautious and a bit fearful on the high-banked superspeedway ovals.

However, changes in wing and spoiler rules and some seat-of-the-pants resourcefulness by Grand National mechanics reduced the problems to a minimum by the middle of the season.

Mears had a year almost as remarkable as Waltrip. He came back from an uncharacteristically poor 1980 season and a nearly disastrous Indy 500 in 1981 to win six races and his second Indy car national championship in three years.

The 29-year-old Bakersfield, Calif., driver actually led at Indy before making a pit stop that very nearly cost him his life when a fuel spill started a pit fire — one of several frightening pit blazes during the Indy car season.

Mears dived from the car, his driving uniform on fire. Only quick action by his father, who had been watching the race from the pits and doused his son with an extinguisher, limited Mears' injuries to severe facial burns.

A short stay in the hospital and some plastic surgery on the tip of his nose kept him out of action for a few weeks, but Mears won both ends of a twin 125-mile race show in Atlanta upon his return a month later. And he was nearly unbeatable the rest of the season.

That same Indy race turned the season into a real crucible of frustration for Unser and Andretti.

Unser won his third Indy 500, with Andretti charging from a last-place start to second. The next morning, however, race officials penalized Unser a lap for illegal passing coming out of the pits during a caution period. That put him in second place and, suddenly, the stunned Andretti was the winner.

Unser, Mears' teammate, and team owner Roger Penske had one appeal turned down by the sanctioning U.S. Auto Club. But a special three-man USAC appeal board later overturned that decision, fining Unser $40,000 but finding that the previous penalty was improperly administered and returning the victory.

That decision is under appeal to the Automobile Competition Committee of the United States, the American arm of the Paris-based world sanctioning body of auto racing, Federation Internationale du Automobile.

In the globe-trotting world of Formula One, Piquet, a young Brazilian driving for the Brabham team, clinched his first world championship in the season finale at Las Vegas on a new racing course built atop a casino parking lot and a sandy field. He nipped Reutemann, an Argentinian driving for Williams.

And Redman, an Englishman now living in the United States, made it all the way back from a serious racing accident several years ago, winning the Camel GT sports car series in a car that wasn't expected to be truly race-worthy until 1982.

He won a race in one of the Porsche 935 Turbos that have dominated the GT series in recent years, then switched to a British-built, Chevrolet-powered Lola T-600 prototype. Redman, a noted endurance racer, drove the wide-lowslung car to five victories and the championship, outdoing the more powerful Porsches on reliability.

Chargers Win...

I've seen here. It's a rotten shame that it ends like this."

And Dolphins Coach Don Shula added: "This is going to be a tough one to live with."

The triumph by the Chargers wiped out what might have been a most heroic comeback by quarterback Don Strock and the Dolphins, who rallied from a 24-0 deficit to take a 38-31 lead early in the fourth quarter.

Fouts set two playoff records, throwing the ball 53 times and completing 33 for 433 yards. The old record for most passes thrown was 49, set by Billy Kilmer of Washington, while Kilmer and Joe Kapp of Minnesota shared the record for most completions with 26.

Strock completed 28 of 42 passes for 397 yards despite missing all of the first quarter and the first two minutes of the second.

The Chargers, champions of the AFC West, will play in their second consecutive conference championship on Jan. 10. Their opponent will be the winner of Sunday's AFC playoff between the Buffalo Bills and Cincinnati Bengals.

The Chargers tied it 38-38 with 58 seconds remaining in the fourth quarter on Dan Fouts' third touchdown pass of the game, his second to rookie running back James Brooks.

Following that 9-yard scoring pass, the Dolphins drove to the San Diego 25-yard line. But, on the final play of regulation time, Uwe von Schamann's 43-yard field goal attempt was short, barely deflected by Chargers tight end Kellen Winslow.

The game went into overtime, the Chargers winning the coin toss, taking the kickoff and marching from their 13-yard line to the Miami 8. The big play came on a third-and-20 at the Chargers' 45. Fouts completed a pass to Winslow, who dragged a Miami tackler 5 yards to gain 21 and a first down. But four plays later, with 11:09 gone in overtime, Benirschke, who had hit all nine of his field-goal tries from inside the 30 this season, hooked a routine 27-yarder to the left.

The Dolphins charged back late in the overtime, reaching the San Diego 17-yard line. But, with 11:27 gone, von Schamann's 34-yard field goal attempt was blocked, this time by Leroy Jones.

After von Schamann's overtime miss, Fouts began the Chargers' winning drive from their own 16 with a couple of short passes, a 7-yarder to Brooks and an 8-yarder to Wes Chandler.

After an incompletion, Fouts and Chandler hooked up on a 20-yard pass play to the Miami 49. On the next play, Fouts found Charlie Joiner on a play that carried 39 yards to the Miami 10. And, on first down, Benirschke ended this wildest, highest-scoring of playoff games.

The 79 points by the two teams surpassed the all-time playoff record of 73 first established by Washington and Chicago in the Bears' 73-0 National Football League championship victory in 1940, and equaled in 1957 when Detroit beat Cleveland 59-14.

The Dolphins appeared to be out of it after the Chargers rolled up their 24-point lead in the first quarter.

But Strock, replacing young and ineffective David Woodley at quarterback for Miami, rallied them within a touchdown at halftime, then drove the Dolphins to a 38-31 lead early in the fourth quarter.

Strock threw three touchdown passes, two to reserve tight end Joe Rose and a 50-yard bomb to Bruce Hardy.

The Miami comeback began with a 35-yard field goal by von Schamann, then Strock found Rose on a 1-yard scoring toss.

The most electrifying play of the game came on the final play of the first half and had the Orange Bowl crowd of 73,735 rocking. Strock, with six seconds left and the ball on the San Diego 40, tossed 15 yards to Duriel Harris, who then wheeled and lateraled the ball to Tony Nathan. The Miami running back sprinted the remaining 25 yards untouched to cut San Diego's lead to 24-17.

Strock then came out throwing in the third quarter, hitting Harris for 30 and 19 yards before passing 15 to Rose for the touchdown that tied it, 24-24.

Then it was Fouts' turn. Following a Miami punt, the San Diego quarterback flipped a 12-yarder toWinslow to put the ball in Miami territory and, five plays later, found his tight end again with a 25-yard scoring pass, beating a Dolphin blitz that left Winslow wide open in the middle of the end zone.

San Diego's lead held up for less than three minutes.

Strock marched the Dolphins from their own 17 to midfield, the big play a 23-yard pass to Jimmy Cefalo.

Then came the biggest — the bomb to Hardy, who caught the ball at the Chargers' 25, a step behind Woodrow Lowe and raced to the end zone, diving over as the San Diego linebacker caught and tackled him.

The Dolphins took their first and only lead of the game seven seconds into the fourth quarter when Nathan swept 12 yards into the end zone two plays after free safety Lyle Blackwood had intercepted Fouts. Blackwood returned the ball nine yards to the San Diego 36, then lateraled the ball to cornerback Gerald Small, who ran it 21 yards more to the 15.

With time winding down in the fourth quarter, the Dolphins appeared poised to wrap up a victory as they steadily pushed deeper into San Diego territory.

But, with 4:39 remaining in regulation, rookie fullback Andra Franklin fumbled at the San Diego 18 and strong safety Pete Shaw recovered.

Fouts started throwing immediately, hitting Joiner for 14 yards, Chandler for six, then Joiner for five and 15 to put the ball on the Miami 40. Four plays later, Fouts and Chandler teamed for a 19-yard pass play to the Miami 9, then Brooks the tying TD pass. Fouts completed seven of eight passes for 75 of the 82 yards the Chargers covered in the drive.

The Chargers came within four points of Oakland's record of 28 scored in the first quarter of a playoff, and they appeared poised to blow the Dolphins out of the Orange Bowl.

Their scoring started routinely enough with Benirschke kicking a 32-yard field goal 5:11 into the game, four plays after Fouts and Chandler had teamed on a 47-yard bomb to the Miami 23.

The Dolphins went nowhere with their first possession, then Chandler made it 10-0 with a 56-yard punt return for a TD with 7:36 gone in the quarter.

Chandler, the short man in front of Brooks, took the kick at his 44-yard line, cut to his right, got a solid block from Keith Ferguson and raced down the right sideline for the Chargers' first touchdown with a punt return since Mike Fuller did it in New Orleans with an 88-yard sprint in 1977.

The 24 points in one period matched the most ever given up by the Dolphins, the feat first achieved by Kansas City in 1968.

Woodley, an eighth-round draft choice by the Dolphins in 1980, completed just two of five passes for 20 yards and was sacked three times for 29 yards in losses before Strock replaced him 2:55 into the second quarter.

Wildcats Slip By Georgia, 68-66

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — With 2 seconds remaining, Kentucky's Melvin Turpin tipped in a Jim Master jump shot to give the fourth-ranked Wildcats a 68-66 college basketball victory over the Georgia Bulldogs Saturday night.

After Turin had tied the game at 39-39 with a short jumper at the end of the first half, Georgia fought to a 46-39 lead with a series of steals and slam-dunks by Dominque Wilkins and a technical foul against Kentucky Coach Joe Hall.

But Kentucky, using a zone defense, fought back and took a 55-54 lead with 8:30 remaining in the game when Dirk Minniefield stole the ball from the Bulldogs and drove in for a basket.

Georgia tied it at 62 and again at 66 on Wilkins' baskets before Turpin — filling in for All-American Sam Bowie — tipped in the game winner. The Wildcats stole a last-second Bulldog pass.

Wilkins led the Bulldogs with 28 points, and Turpin led the fourth-ranked Wildcats with 20. Georgia falls to 6-3; Kentucky is 8-1.

Penn State..... 60

ROSEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Junior forward Bernard Randolph scored 17 first half points and reserve Teddy Grubbs poured in 14 second half points Satrday to lead eighth-ranked DePaul to an 86-60 college basketball victory over Penn State.

The Blue Demons, 10-1, built up a 44-25 halftime lead as they hit 20 out of 35 shots from the floor for 57 percent field goal shooting.

Terry Cummings, DePaul's leading scorer who had played only eight minutes of the first half because of foul trouble, led a second half surge as he helped the Blue Demons pull out to a 60-32 advantage in a 7:20 flurry.

Cummings, winding up with 14 points, 10 below his average, then left the game as Grubbs, another junior forward, took command of the Blue Demon offense. The DePaul fast break helped the Blue Demons build a 80-50 advantage with five minutes remaining.

Grubbs, whose previous season high had been 10 points, had been averaging just 5.5 points a game as he had played only sparingly.

The Nittany Lions, 7-5, could hit only two of 15 shots from the floor in the first nine minutes of the game.

Penn State's Mike Lang was high man for the visitors with 14 points, while Mike Edelman and Dick Mumma had nine points apiece.

The Friday Front/ A Roundup of Friday Night's Results

Win Completes Tigers' March To No. 1 Spot

MIAMI (AP) — And so, after four zany months of what may have been college football's most cockeyed season, the race for the national championship finally seems to be in focus.

Top-ranked Clemson, the seventh team to make it to the top in 1981, put some sanity back into the overall picture Friday night with a convincing 22-15 Orange Bowl triumph over self-destructive Nebraska.

The much-maligned Tigers from the basketball-crazy Atlantic Coast Conference don't have to take a back seat to anyone any longer. The national champion for 1981 won't be announced until The Associated Press poll is released at 6:30 p.m. EST Saturday, but Clemson would appear to have clear sailing.

The Tigers did what no other major team in the nation could do. They whipped every one of their 12 opponents, completing the best campaign in the school's 86 years of football. And when runnerup Georgia and third-ranked Alabama — and, of course, No. 4 Nebraska — lost their bowl games, the final chapter appeared to have been written in Clemson's remarkable rags-to-riches story.

"Are we No. 1? Are we the best team in the country?" Coach Danny Ford shouted outside his team's uproarious locker room.

No one was about to give him an argument so the 33-year-old Ford, one of the youngest head coaches in the country, kept going.

"We're the only team in the country to beat the No.2 team (Georgia), the No.8 team (North Carolina) and the No.4 team (Nebraska). There ain't no one else in America that did that this year. It was a great season for us, one that we might not ever experience any time soon."

North Carolina was ranked eighth when Clemson nipped the Tar Heels 10-8 in November and Georgia was fourth when it lost to the Tigers 13-3 back in September. That was the game that vaulted Clemson into the Top Twenty for the first time in 1981 and the Tigers never lost their momentum in their Cinderella climb to the top.

They took care of Nebraska the way they handled almost all of their other opponents — a stubborn defense that bent but rarely broke, plus an opportunistic offense and a strong kicking game.

Donald Igwebuike kicked a 41-yard field goal and Cliff Austin swept around right end for a 2-yard touchdown — both after Nebraska coughed up the football inside its own 30-yard line — as Clemson built a 12-7 halftime lead.

Igwebuike, a Nigerian transfer student who also played on Clemson's nationally ranked soccer team, added field goals from 37 and 36 yards, while Homer Jordan flipped a 13-yard scoring pass to Perry Tuttle that put the game out of reach in the third period.

Nebraska's explosive rushing attack, ranked No.2 in the country at 330.5 yards a game, was held to 193. And the Cornhuskers' deadly 1-2 tailback punch of Roger Craig and Mike Rozier was fairly well contained — Craig had 87 yards on 10 carries, Rozier 75 on 15 — even though Rozier lofted a 25-yard option pass to Anthony Steels for Nebraska's first touchdown and Craig rambled 26 yards for the other.

"With the exception of a couple of missed tackles, I thought we played a very inspired football game," Ford said. "The defense really did a job, we got a plus out of our kicking game and (Billy) Davis' punt return (a 47-yard gallop that set up Igwebuike's final field goal) took some pressure off when we were able to get some points out of it."

In fact, Clemson outgained the Huskers 289-256 in total offense and the Tigers, all year long one of the nation's most opportunistic teams, took advantage of both Nebraska turnovers.

Clemson wanted some respect and the Tigers got it.

"They certainly have a great football team," said Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne. "They certainly deserve to be No.1."

The Tigers even did a little crowing at the expense of their detractors.

"Once Nebraska or somebody like that beats you, they say, 'Welcome to the Big Eight,'" said Tuttle, the top receiver in Clemson's history, who caught five more for 56 yards. "I think the scoreboard told the story tonight, and it's a good feeling. They call the ACC a basketball conference, but this proves we can play on the same level as any conference in the country."

"I went face-to-face with some of them," said linebacker Jeff Davis, who had seven solo tackles, assisted on another, recovered a fumble and deflected a pass, "and it was like they were saying, 'You're from the ACC; you're not supposed to play like this.'"

With more than 20,000 of its frenzied orange-clad fans among the crowd of 72,748, Clemson finally notched the victory that seems certain to earn them the national respect for which they have long yearned, plus recognition as a major power.

The loss was a bitter pill for Nebraska to swallow, especially with Georgia and Alabama losing. The Cornhuskers, who had national championsip dreams of their own, got the help they needed, but they couldn't help themselves.

"This is probably the most disappointing loss I've ever had," Osborne said. "We had a chance to take it all. We had it in our hands and we let it slip away."

Good Ole Boys Go Hee Haw

Clemson fans really enjoyed Friday night at the Orange Bowl as their Tigers defeated Nebraska, 22-15, to complete an unbeaten season. The win also almost assuredly means the Tigers will be named the #1 team in the nation in the final wire service polls. (AP Laserphoto)

Clemson Claims MacArthur Bowl

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Top-ranked Clemson University, which closed out an undefeated season by downing fourth-ranked Nebraska 22-15 in the Orange Bowl, was named Saturday as the National Football Foundation's choice for the MacArthur Bowl.

The award — which goes each year to the team judged No.1 by the foundation' awards committee — will be presented formally at the Foundation's Hall of Fame at Kings Island, Ohio, during ceremonies for new inductees on July 24.

Vincent dePaul Draddy, chairman of the foundation's board, said Clemson was a unanimous choice.

"Clemson's 12-0 record is the best in college football for 1981 and the Tigers scored an impressive victory over a strong, high-ranking University of Nebraska team in the Orange Bowl," Draddy said in a prepared release.

"Penn State and Pittsburgh also posted very imposing New Year's Day victories over Southern California and the University of Georgia in the Fiesta Bowl and the Sugar Bowl and are to be congratulated for an excellent season.

"Texas is also to be commended for its come-from-behind win over Alabama in the Cotton Bowl."

James L. McDowell, executive director of the foundation, said the awards committee's policy is that no team on NCAA probation can receive the MacArthur Bowl.

He said strong teams such as Southern Methodist, Miami and Arizona State were disqualified from consideration because of the policy.

'Perfect' Defense Sends Clemson Past Nebraska

MIAMI (UPI) — Defense has been winning for unbeaten Clemson all season and it came through more time Friday night in a 22-15 Orange Bowl victory over Nebraska that gave the Tigers a solid claim to the national championship.

"I thought we played perfect defense. We made only one mistake — on that touchdown pass in the first half," said Tiger Coach Danny Ford.

In 12 triumphs, the Tigers allowed more than two touchdowns only once and that was in an 82-24 rout of Wake Forest. Ford said that was part of his game plan, adding "two touchdowns was all we wanted to give up and that's the way it turned out."

Ford wasn't alone in singing praises of the Clemson defense, and Nebraska coach Tom Osborne joined the chorus.

"I thought they were great defensively — the best defense we played against all year," Osborne said.

Even the Clemson offense was properly grateful, especially senior wide receiver Perry Tuttle, who caught a 13-yard pass from quarterback Homer Jordan for Clemson's first touchdown.

"The defense played one heckuva a game. They gave us field position all night. The defense did it for us," he said.

The Tiger squad also said they believed they'll get some of the respect they deserved all season long, after finishing undefeated by beating a No. 4 team from the Big Eight Conference.

"People didn't give us any respect and that hurt," said All America linebacker Jeff Davis, who had seven unassisted tackles and recovered a fumble.

Davis said that also applied to the Cornhuskers, but added that Clemson took control of the game too soon for any wise remarks from across the line of scrimmage.

"They didn't get a chance because we went out and jumped on them early," Davis said. "I thought they'd be more physical. But they really never died — they never gave up."

The Tigers also felt they gave the Atlantic Coast Conference some football credibility, and as they noisily filed into their locker room they thrust their fingers into the air, chanting, "ACC, ACC."

"If anybody wants to know about the ACC, they only need to look back at our record," Ford said. "After this year, I don't think they well refer to us as a basketball conference."

The 33-year-old coach also said there should be no more doubt about who's the best team in the country now.

"Are we No. 1? Are we the best team in the country?" shouted the exhuberant Ford. "We're the only team in the nation to beat the No. 2 team (Georgia), the No. 8 team (North Carolina, actually ranked No. 9), and the No. 4 team (Nebraska).

"I don't care what anybody says in the East, Midwest or West. Nobody in the country has done what we've 5e."

Osborne agreed that Clemson deserved the top ranking, but said it was a bitter defeat for his Huskers. If Nebraska had won they would have been able to claim the title themselves as No. 2 Georgia and No. 3 Alabama lost Friday.

BIRD-WATCHING PEAKS AT COAST — Is your blood stirred by the sight of vast flocks of waterfowl, terns and gulls wheeling in the sun? Are you interested in hawk migrations? If so, consider heading to the coast. The winter months are peak times for bird-watching in North Carolina and several federal wildlife refuges are excellent spots to pursue this hobby.

The Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge, which lies within the Cape Hatteras National Seashore, is considered one of the best spots on the east coast. Since Cape Hatteras is about 100 miles east of most of the Atlantic coastline, many birds use the refuge as a resting spot along their migration routes.

Thirteen miles of ocean beach, dunes, ponds and marsh are included in the 6,000-acre refuge, where 265 species of birds have been recorded. (A total of 365 species have been observed within the whole Cape Hatteras National Seashore.) In the winter, about 1,000 snow geese, 7,000 Canadian geese and 40,000 ducks roost in the refuge.

A four-mile nature trail that winds through the refuge offers ample opportunity for observation and photography. For more information, contact the Pea Island National Wildlife Refuge, P.O. Box 150, Rodanthe, N.C. 27698.

One of the best places to see waterfolw is the Lake Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County — at 51,000 acres the largest federal refuge in the state and also the largest natural lake in the state. Over 1,000,000 ducks, 25,000 whistling swans and 20,000 Canadian and glue geese winter on the refuge.

There is one shore nature trail, but most bird-watchers walk the dikes surrounding the lake. More information is available from the Lake Mattamuskeer National Refuge, Route 1, Box N-2, Swanquarter, N.C. 27885.

Piedmont bird-watchers don't need to drive to the coast to observe waterfowl — the Pee Dee National Wildlife Refuge in Anson County is a popular wintering spot for ducks and geese. The best bird-watching begins in later November and runs through March.

There are two excellent photography blinds on the refuge and an network of nature trails. The roads that cut through and border the refuge also offer good bird-watching. For more information contact the Pee Dee National Wildlife Refuge, P.O. Box 780, Wadesboro, N.C. 28170.

BASS FISHING INSTITUTE SLATED — If largemouth bass consistently make a fool out of you, an option is now available. A Bass Fishing Institute will be conducted at N.C. State on March 27-28. The course — sponsored by Indiana State — will offer information on bass fishing techniques, management of largemouth bass and other related subjects.

The registration fee is $40 for adults. Registered adults may bring one youth (age 10 to 15) free of charge. Husbands and wives may register for $60 and bring two youths for free. Additional youths may register for $20.

For more information contact N.C. State, Alice Strickland, Division of Continuing Education, P.O. Box 5125, Raleigh, N.C. 27650.

FISHING REPORT — Surf fishing for bluefish has been productive on the outerbanks for those hardy cold-weather fisherman. The blues are running in the 15-18 lb. class. Striped bass are being picked up around the railroad bridge at Washington jigging Hopkins off the bottom. Patience is the key to success this time of year.

LOCAL NOTES — Dwayne Fisher of Greenville on his second deer hunt of the season bagged buck number two. Earlier this season, Fisher shot a fine 10-point whitetail, his first deer ever.

Sugar Sweet For Pitt, Sour For 'Dawgs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tight end John Brown said he didn't get nervous about catching the winning touchdown pass for Pittsburgh in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's night, but the impromptu victory celebration in the end zone almost did him in.

With 35 seconds left on the clock and 10th-ranked Pittsburgh trailing second-ranked Georgia 20-17, quarterback Dan Marino hit Brown with a 33-yard scoring pass.

The pass gave Pittsburgh a 24-20 victory and dashed Georgia's hopes that it could repeat last year's national title. Top-ranked Clemson downed fourth-ranked Nebraska 22-15 in the Orange Bowl in another New Year's night game.

Following the winning touchdown in the Sugar Bowl, Brown's teammates mobbed him, burying him beneath their bodies in the end zone.

Brown said that while the ball was in the air, he heard nothing and saw nothing but the football.

"The feeling — when you realize what you did — comes as soon as you touch the ball," he said.

Then he looked up and saw his teammates coming to celebrate with him.

"I wanted to run," he said. "I panicked under that pile — claustrophobia."

It was Brown's second touchdown reception of the final quarter. He gave Pittsburgh a brief 17-13 lead four minutes into the final period.

Other Pittsburgh scores came on a 41-yard field goal by Raymond Everett in the second quarter and a 30-yard pass from Marino to wide receiver Julius Dawkins in the third quarter.

Georgia got two touchdowns from stellar sophomore running back Herschel Walker — an 8-yard scoring burst in the second quarter and a 10-yard dash in the third quarter.

Georgia quarterback Buck Belue hit wide receiver Clarence Kay with a 6-yard scoring pass in the fourth quarter, six minutes after Brown's first touchdown.

Marino was named the game's Most Valuable Player after hitting 26 of 41 attempts for 261 yards.

Pittsburgh's ground attack was led by tailback Bryan Thomas, who got 129 yards on 26 carries.

The Panther defense held Georgia's Walker — who ran for 1,891 yards this year — to 84 yards on 25 attempts.

"That was our goal," said Pittsburgh senior linebacker Sal Sunseri. "Everybody was talking about Herschel Walker getting 140 yards and all that. We got tired of hearing that.

"No back this year got 100 yards against us."

But Thomas said the pregame talk about Walker — and about how Pittsburgh would have to pass to move the football — didn't bother him a bit.

"We had them off-balance most of the game, and we took advantage of it," he said.

He said the winning pass to Brown was really designed to go to him or fullback Wayne DiBartola. But they had to stay in to block when Georgia blitzed the linebackers.

Marino spotted Brown 1-on-1 against Georgia strong safety Steve Kelley and hit him for the winning touchdown. It came on fourth-and-five, and Pittsburgh without another timeout.

Colorado U. Halfback Dies

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — Colorado University running back Derek Singleton, a sophomore who first became ill with meningitis before the Iowa State game in Ames, Oct. 24, died early Friday at the UCLA Medical Center in Los Angeles. He was 19.

CU's football Coach Chuck Fairbanks said Friday Singleton's death represented a loss to the entire university and community.

Funeral arrangements were pending.

"Everyone at the University of Colorado and the Boulder community share in his family's sorrow," said Fairbanks. "Derek was a truly outstanding young man in every respect. His infectious smile and positive attitude on life and athletics was an inspiration to all of us.

"We will all miss him very much."

Singleton was rushed to an Ames hospital the morning of the CU-Iowa game after being stricken in his room. His illness was diagnosed as meningicoccal meningitis, a highly contagious brain infection.

He was released from the Ames hospital after 12 days of treatment, apparently fully recovered, but was hospitalized again in Los Angeles while he was home for Thanksgiving vacation.

Washington Blanks Iowa In Rose

Texas Downs Alabama; Penn St. Stuns Trojans

By The Associated Press

Texas kept its whammy on Alabama, Penn State shocked Southern California and Washington made Iowa's first bowl appearance in 23 years a dismal one during the afternoon appetizer of a New Year's Day college football feast.

The Longhorns, ranked sixth, scored a pair of touchdowns in the fourth period to come back from a 10-0 deficit and beat Alabama's third-ranked Crimson Tide 14-12 in the Cotton Bowl; No.12 Washington dominated the 13th-ranked Hawkeyes 28-0 in the Rose Bowl, and Penn Stte's No.7 Nittany Lions slowed down Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen and rolled to a 26-10 Fiesta Bowl triumph over the No.8 Trojans.

Tailback Terry Orr raced 6 yards with just 2:05 remaining to seal the Texas victory, giving the Longhorns a 7-0-1 all-time record against the Crimson Tide. That loss also deprived Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant of his 316th coaching victory and ended Alabama's string of consecutive bowl triumphs, which tied an NCAA record last year when it reached six.

Texas, which finished at 10-1-1, trailed 10-0 after Alabama quarterback Walter Lewis hit Jesse Bendross with a 6-yard scoring pass and Peter Kim kicked a 24-yard field goal.

That's the way it remained until Texas quarterback Robert Brewer, starting for only the fourth time this season, ignited the Longhorn rally with a 30-yard touchdown run on a quarterback draw play with 10:22 showing on the scoreboard.

The defense forced Alabama, 9-2-1, to punt and Brewer then directed an 80-yard scoring drive, capped by Orr's charge into the end zone.

Texas Coach Fred Akers then gambled in the final minute of play when he ordered punter John Goodson to take a safety rather than punt out of the end zone and give Alabama an opportunity to block the kick. Alabama got the ball on its own 41 with 43 seconds to play, but Lewis was trapped twice trying to pass and time ran out.

"This is the greatest victory of my coaching career," Akers said. "You will not find a classier man and program than Bear Bryant and Alabama."

Speaking of Brewer, the coach said, "I think he showed what a great competitor and operator he is."

Bryant, disappointed but always diplomatic, said simply: "They whipped us bad in the fourth quarter. I don't think there is a Texas whammy on Alabama ... their players and coaches beat us, not a whammy."

Penn State got the upper hand on Southern Cal early and never let up as Curt Warner outshone the more publicized Allen by rambling for 140 yards and two touchdowns. The junior tailback, who missed part of the season with a leg injury, carried 26 times and scored on runs of 17 and 21 yards. His first score came just 15 seconds into the game following the recovery of a fumble at Southern Cal's 17-yard line, one of two damaging fumbles by Allen.

Warner's second touchdown run gave the Nittany Lions a 24-7 advantage early in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, Penn State's determined defense held Allen, who had gained an NCAA record 2,342 yards rushing during the regular season, to just 80 yards on 34 carries. It was the first time all season Allen failed to gain more than 100 yards.

Penn State, 10-2 for the season, also converted the two fumbles by the senior tailback into 10 points.

"I got fired up to play against a good player," said Warner. "But I really didn't set out to show up Marcus Allen at all. It just worked out that way."

"I don't like to make excuses," Allen said, "but I don't think we came out prepared to play. I really wasn't worried about how much yardage I got ... Those things just happen."

The other Penn State scoring came on a 52-yard pass play from Todd Blackledge to split end Gregg Garrity, a 21-yard field goal by Brian Franco and a safety in the third period when Dave Paffenroth blocked a USC punt attempt and the ball rolled out of the Trojan end zone.

Southern Cal, 9-3, scored on a 20-yard interception return by linebacker Chip Banks, tying the game briefly at 7-7, and a 32-yard field goal by Frank Jordan.

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno not surprisingly said, "I thought the winner of this game should be No.1."

Freshman tailback Jacque Robinson and a feisty defense provided the spark for the Huskies at Pasadena, Calif.

Robinson, a 204-pound speedster, ran 1 yard for Washington's first touchdown and 34 for another as the underdog Huskies gave the Pacific-10 a victory over the Big 10 in the 68th Rose Bowl.

The shutout was the first for Washington, 10-2, this season and made it 11 victories in the last 13 Rose Bowl games for host conference.

Washington gained revenge for its 23-6 loss to Michigan a year ago and Iowa, 8-4 this season, is now 2-1 in the Rose Bowl.

Washington built a 13-0 halftime lead and the Hawkeyes were unable to mount a rally as Iowa quarterback Gordie Bohannon was guilty of four turnovers — two fumbles and two interceptions. A pass interference call in the end zone also helped set up Vince Coby's 1-yard touchdown dive in the second quarter.

The only other score came on a 3-yard run by reserve quarterback Tim Cowan following a Bohannon fumble at the Iowa 18.

In games Thursday, Mississippi State beat Kansas 10-0 in the Hall of Fame Bowl at Birmingham, Ala.; West Virginia upset Florida 26-6 in the Peach Bowl at Atlanta, and Michigan walloped UCLA 33-14 in the Bluebonnet Bowl meeting of Pac-10 and Big 10 teams at Houston.

'Pack Downs Clemson...

Chuck Nevitt backed Whittenburg's scoring effort with 15 points and Sidney Lowe contributed 14 as N.C. State got off to its best start since 1979.

The Wolfpack, unfazed by Clemson's 2-1-2 zone defense, took a 9-point lead in the first half. Then, relying on its quickness, extended its lead to as much as 15 before establishing the final victory margin.

N.C. State attempted 26 free throws in the closing five minutes as Clemson was forced to foul in an attempt to catch up. But Lowe hit 11 of 13 attempts to foil the plan. In all, State hit 27 of 36 free throws with 31 of those attempts in the second half.

Clemson had one chance to get back into the game when N.C. State coach Jim Valvano instructed his Wolfpack to use a spread offense. Horace Wyatt converted a Wolfpack turnover into a basket to bring Clemson to within 55-47 with 4:54 remaining. Mike Eppley missed the front end of a bonus opportunity to end Tiger hopes for a rally.

A free throw by Nevitt and two more by Lowe extended the lead to 58-49 with 3:49 left. Four more free throws by Lowe, Scott Parzych and Terry Gannon stretched the Wolfpack lead to 13 and ensured their 10th win in 11 starts.

Parzych contributed 11 as State rose to 2-0 in league play. Clemson, 7-2 after its first league game, was led by Vincent Hamilton's 14 points and Wyatt's 13.

The teams traded the first three baskets before Nevitt's free throw and slam dunk opened the way for an 11-6 Wolfpack lead. Later in the period, N.C. State led by a 33-22 margin after three straight baskets by Gannon. The Tigers' Bill Ross' follow shot with 55 seconds left cut the halftime margin to 37-28.

Davidson 63
Furman 45

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Junior forward Cliff Tribus registered career-highs of 24 points and 13 rebounds to lead Davidson to a 63-45 Southern Conerence basketball victory over Furman Saturday night.

Tribus connected on 8 of 13 from the floor and 8 of 9 free throws in his 40-minute performance. Center Jamie Hall was the only other Wildcat in double figures as he added 12 points and 10 rebounds.

Davidson, now 5-6, 3-1 in conference play, rushed to a 19-4 lead in the first 12 minutes and led 28-17 at halftime. Furman, playing its first game since Dec. 15, never got closer as it hit only 18 of 64 field goal attempts for 28 percent.

Davidson hit 22 of 54 field goal attempts, 40.7 percent, but was red hot at the free throw line where the Wildcats converted 86.4 percent, hitting 19 of 22.

Fouts: Chargers Never Doubted

MIAMI (AP) — San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts said the Chargers never doubted that they would come out on top in Saturday's American Conference playoff game against Miami, which produced a number of anxious moments for both teams.

"We had to have a super effort from everybody involved and we got it," said Fouts, whose devastating passing produced a game-tying touchdown in the final minute of the fourth quarter and led to Rolf Benirschke's 29-yard field goal that gave the Chargers a 41-38 triumph 13:52 into overtime.

"I don't think anybody on our offense ever doubts that we can get the job done. We feel that any time we have enough time, we can score and that we will score," added Fouts.

Fouts threw 53 passes and completed 33 of them for 433 yards, all National Football League playoff records. Kellen Winslow, the Chargers' tight end, caught 13 of the passes, another playoff record, for 166 yards.

Fouts hit seven of eight passes for 75 of the 82 yards as the Chargers gained a 38-38 tie with 58 seconds left in regulation. And his 39-yard pass play to Charlie Joiner set up Benirschke's game-winner.

"Charlie made an excellent read of the defense and made the catch," said Fouts, explaining that Miami had been playing a three-deep zone but went to a two-deep on that play.

Benirschke missed a 27-yard attempt early in overtime after the Chargers drove to the Dolphins' 8-yard line. Fouts said he tried to comfort the kicker by assuring him that he'd get a chance to redeem himself.

"You play this game until it's over. I just told him he was going to get one more chance," said Fouts. "He's too good to get down on himself."

Fouts, whose 8-yard scoring pass to James Brooks climaxed a 24-point outburst that threatened to bury the Dolphins in the first quarter, said he wasn't surprised by the Chargers' quick start, nor by Miami's comeback, engineered by the Dolphins' reserve quarterback, Don Strock.

"That happens a lot in this league and in games like this. But really, all we want to do is try to stay close," said Fouts. "If we can blow somebody out, fine. But we know if the game is close near the end that our offense has a good chance of coming through.

"Strock came on for them and it was bad news for us. He was awesome," Fouts continued.

"I've always resented the fact that everybody else has a chance to win the title on the playing field and we're the victim of opinion. I think we should have a playoff."

—Penn State coach Joe Paterno

Paterno Lobbies For Playoff

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, after seeing his seventh-ranked Nittany Lions beat No.8 Southern Cal 26-10 in Friday's Fiesta Bowl here, says a series mini playoffs should decide the national collegiate football champion and not a voting system.

"I've always resented the fact that everybody else has a chance to win the title on the playing field and we're the victim of opinion," Paterno said Saturday. "I think we should have a playoff.

"After all the bowl games are over, someone ought to pick four teams — by a point system or coaches getting together or whatever. You take those four teams and play on consecutive Saturdays. That way, you finish the day before the Super Bowl," added Paterno. "You may not wind up with the best football team all the time, but you'd be a lot closer than the way we are now."

USC Coach John Robinson said he has "some mixed feelings" about Paterno's proposed playoff plan.

"I'd love to be in it. I'd hate to be voted out of it," he said. "The problem with that four-team format is there will always be 10 schools who say 'We were robbed.'

"Who do you leave out?," added Robinson. "If we were the Pacific-10 Conference champions, I'd hate to have somebody say, 'You guys aren't in it.'

"Also, we tend to look at them as playoffs, but their context can change quickly," Robinson said. "You beat one team and then have to get on a plane the next day and start all that bowl preparation all over again. Put three of those games in a row and it just gets too much."

After Friday's game, Paterno said he felt his team deserved to be voted No. 1 because "we feel we can probably beat any team in the country right now."

According to Paterno, "the rankings are a pecking order. Before the season, the best team may be rated 15th and have to peck their way up. The 25th team may eventually end up No.1 since the cream rises to the top sooner or later."

But Paterno also said that college football is quickly approaching parity due to scholarship limitations and thinks "it's great that every game is now in doubt before you play."

However, he loathes some NCAA rules — especially ones to insure a quarterback's safety.

"As long as we have the pass protection rules we have now where it's almost impossible to get to the passer, we'll continue to see a lot of upsets," said Paterno. "Have your linemen hold all day on the line of scrimmage, complete three passes, bring in someone who kicks a 50-yard field goal and you're all set."

Penn State's victory over the Trojans was constructed around a 145-yard rushing day by tailback Curt Warner, who scored two touchhdowns.

The Nittany Lions also limited Heisman Trophy winner Marcus Allen to 85 yards and capitalized on two fumbles by the USC tailback to score 10 of their points.

Confusion, 'Heidi' Among Bowl Visions On The Tube

By LARRY SIDDONS
AP Sports Writer

For NBC, it was a long day capped by the No. 1 team winning amid some confusion.

For ABC, it was a down-to-the-wire thriller that even it acknowledged wouldn't mean a thing unless another team on another network was upset.

For CBS, it was visions of Heidi.

For fans, New Year's Day was a bigger than ever feast of college football on television.

The day started while many TV watchers undoubtedly were nursing memories of the night before. And NBC, with the Fiesta Bowl, the first of its three games, brought the headache of Southern California's Marcus Allen to the nation as he fumbled on the first play from scrimmage against Penn State.

Like the Penn State linebackers, NBC cameras keyed on Allen, the Heisman Trophy winning tailback. He wound up with just 85 yards rushing but the constant attention paid him by the cameras and announcers Charlie Jones and Len Dawson vividly told why Southern Cal was getting beaten.

"The key to stopping Marcus Allen is defensive penetration and taking away his ability to cut back," Dawson said at one point, and there was an isolated replay of thre Nittany Lions doing just that, throwing Allen for a loss.

Almost 10 hours later, football's longest day ended in southern Florida. A Clemson defensive back swatted a Nebraska pass to the ground in the Orange Bowl and the Tigers had their first unbeaten season and an apparent national title wrapped up.

Again, it was NBC covering the game, with John Brodie and Don Criqui in the announcing booth and Bob Trumpy involved in an innovation that proved enlightening to viewers.

Trumpy was stationed in the coaching boxes of the two teams, high above the field, where assistants plot strategy and tell the benches what should and should not work. He was able to pass along information on several key plays before they happened, and in the second quarter it became clear that Clemson was taking the edge when the Tigers proceded to do exactly what Trumpy reported they would do seconds earlier.

Trumpy's presence in the coaches booth was most appreciated on an end zone play in the first half. Clemson's Harry Tuttle dove for a pass from Homer Jordan, but a Nebraska defender came up with the ball and the officials ruled it an interception. Replays from three angles were inconclusive on whether Tuttle had possession for a touchdown, and Brodie admitted that "I couldn't tell if I looked at the replays from now until next month."

But Trumpy reported that Tuttle had told his coaches he never had the football in his grasp. End of second guessing and a big plus for NBC. The network must get a minus, however, for its handling of the game's final seconds. Clemson had the ball with a fourth down and less than 20 seconds remaining, and on the sideline, Coach Danny Ford was huddling with Jordan. "I think they've finally convinced Jordan to just fall down with the football," Brodie said. And when Jordan then scrambled around before being tackled with six seconds remaining, Brodie and Criqui said that was the final play, since Nebraska had no timeouts left.

But under college rules, the clock stops on change of possession, so the Cornhuskers had a chance at the desperation pass. Many viewers may have tuned out before the ball was thrown and conceivably could have missed the unbeaten season slip from Clemson's hands.

Clemson's victory made seculation about who will be No.1 in the final poll out of the question, but it was a question raised often on ABC.

There, announcers Keith Jackson and Frank Broyles were doing the Sugar Bowl head to head with the Orange. The Sugar Bowl featured the nation's No. 2 team Georgia, against 10th-ranked Pittsburgh.

If Clemson had lost, Georgia would have had a shot at a second straight national crown. But that was a big if and Jackson made no bones about it.

"If Clemson wins, it's obvious," Jackson said, "The Tigers should be ranked No.1 — 12-0. That's it." ABC frequently gave the score off the Orange Bowl game, while NBC mentioned the Sugar Bowl score just once in the first half and again after Pitt had scored in the final seconds to defeat the Bulldogs.

ABC's strong points were Jackson's announcing and its experience from telecasting NCAA games each Saturday during the regular season. Broyles, for instance, noted that Pitt's secondary did well on coverage of pass patterns Penn State used to upset the Panthers in the regular season finale. But Broyles' insight often lapped into cliches, especially the phrase, "He put alot of air under that ball," when a player threw a long pass.

Pitt's victory over Georgia was the second of the day to be decided in the closing moments. In the Cotton Bowl, Texas rallied to beat Alabama 14-12 — and helped produce TV's most embarrassing moment.

CBS announcers Lindsay Nelson and Roger Staubach kept their words to a well-chosen few as the Longhorns rallied, and producer Bob Rowe wove shots of the field, the bench and the crowd into a colorful picture when Texas took the lead 14-10. After the Longhorns inntercepted a pass on their 1-yard line, Staubach questioned their strategy in taking a deliberate safety rather than risking a blocked punt.

"A safety means Alabama can win with a field goal," Staubach said. Alabama had the same thought when it took the free kick and started to drive toward field goal position.

That's when the Heidi suddenly loomed over CBS.

A telephone company patch was pulled, and portions of the south and southeast — including state of Alabama — missed the final 20 seconds of the game as the clock ran out on the Crimson Tide. It was reminiscent of a game between the New York Jets and Oakland in 1969 when NBC cut away to "Heidi" and viewers missed an incredible Raiders' comeback in the closing minutes.

CBS said the phone company erronerously pulled the plug. The phone company said it was unable to give CBS more time on the circuit and had insufficient notice when the network asked for an extenion.

NBC also cut away with about 30 seconds left in the Fiesta Bowl to show long pre-game Rose Bowl festivities. An NBC spokeswoman said it was done because the game wasn't close, but the decision raised the ire of Pennsylvania viewers.

Clemson Fans Celebrate Victory

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Hundreds of Clemson University football fans poured into the streets of this small college town for a wild celebration early Saturday after their Tigers capped a perfect season with an Orange Bowl victory which seemed likely to give them a national championship.

Ten people, including two students, were arrested on disorderly conduct charges shortly after Clemson capped a 12-0 season with a 22-15 victory over Nebraska, authorities said, but nobody was hurt.

"They were blocking the street, stopping traffic, standing in the roadway, drinking and hollering and just being happy," said Sgt. Jerry Crenshaw of the Clemson Police Department.

Crenshaw said between 250 and 300 people jammed the downtown area after the game.

Many were from neighboring towns in the rolling hills of the South Carolina Piedmont. Most Clemson students were either at home for the holiday break or still in Miami.

"Quite a number of fans or young people had got a little bit overenthused," said Crenshaw. Many had been drinking, he said.

The boisterous fans were slapping passing cars and "beating on them with their open fists," the sergeant said.

One car was badly dented when an overzealous fan jumped on the hood.

Crenshaw said city police made seven arrests and Pickens County sheriff's deputies, who were called in to assist the police, arrested three others.

Crenshaw said things may liven up again this week, when students return to register for classes.

"By night I think everyone will have burned off their excess energy," he added. "I think it will be much quieter tonight."

Elsewhere, things seemed to be booming in downtown souvenir shops.

At Mr. Knickerbockers, manager Randy Riggins said fans were snapping up everything colored orange.

"The national championship T-shirts have been the hottest items," Riggins said. "And we were ready for that when we opened this morning. We had those iron-ons in here two days before the game because we had a lot of confidence that we would win."

Riggins said the 50 iron-ons he had in stock were gone in two hours and by mid-afternoon, a new supply hadn't arrived.

Cheree Gillespie, a cashier at the Clemson newsstand, said the victory had special significance for her.

"Now when I go up to Yankeeland and tell them where I'm from," she said, "they won't say Clemson? Didn't they used to have a football team?"

'81 A Very Good Year Tar Heels

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

The Univesity of North Carolina took a batch of sports honors in 1981, including a football victory in the Gator Bowl and national championships in lacrosse and women's soccer.

North Carolina State distance runner Julie Shea won the Atlantic Coast Conference athlete of the year award for the second time in a row, outpacing Virginia basketball star Ralph Sampson in the vote.

And Bobby Allison watched his brother suffer serious injury in the World 600 NASCAR race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, then went on to win the race himself.

At year's end, the 11th-ranked Tar Heels defeated the Arkansas Razorbacks for a 31-27 victory in the Gator Bowl, successfully capping 10-2 season which saw Clemson University with its 11-0 record win the ACC championship. Tar Heel tailback Kelvin Bryant rushed for 148 yards at the Gater Bowl to end the season with 1,168 yards rushing, despite an injury that benched him for four games.

The Tar Heel lacrosse team traveled to Princeton, N.J., and defeated Johns Hopkins, 14-13 for the NCAA championship and an undefeated season in 12 games.

The women's soccer team, in the first AIAW championship in that event, took a 1-0 decision over Central Florida as Diane Beaty scored the game's lone goal.

Shea won the McKevlin Award for the second consecutive year in the spring, making her only the third ACC athlete ever to win the honor back to back. Also during the year, she received the Broderick Cup, symbolic of excellence in women's athletics nationwide. She is up for that award again in 1982.

Bobby Allison watched as his brother's race car went into a spin on the fourth turn at the Charlotte Motor Speedway midway through the Memorial Day classic. Donnie was transported to a local hospital, where he spent several weeks in rehabilitation. Bobby Allison went on take the checkered flag.

The big NASCAR winner was Darrell Waltrip, who invaded the state and took victories at the Holly Farms 400, American 500 and National 500. Waltrip walked away with the NASCAR point title.

Native son Richard Petty, proving he's nowhere near the end of the road, held off a handful of challengers at the end of the Champion 400 to take the 195th victory of his career.

North Carolina's basketball team was declared all but out of post-season competition after a disastrous western road trip at the start of the 1980-81 season. But the Tar Heels found strength in the shooting touch of Al Wood and the quick development of freshman center Sam Perkins.

The Tar Heels downed Maryland for the ACC tournament title, whipped Pittsburgh, Utah and Kansas State in the West Regionaland toppled Virginia in the semifinal round of the national championship. The team fell to Indiana University in the finals to finish second in the NCAA.

At the end of 1981, with the start of a new season, the Tar Heels were nationally ranked No. 1 and were undefeated as they entered 1982.

Duke University also earned post-season play in the National Invitation Tournament. But after defeating North Carolina A&T and Alabama at home, the Blue Devils went to West Lafayette, Ind., and fell to Purdue.

North Carolinians flocked to the fairways in the spring to watch Larry Nelson outduel Mark Hayes in a sudden-death playoff for the top spot in the Greater Greensboro Open. Several weeks earlier, Donna Caponi visited Raleigh and took first-place money in the American Defender-WRAL Golf Classic.

Caponi will not return to defend that title in 1982, nor will anyone be around to challenge her. The tournament was canceled for next spring because sponsors could not be found.

The LPGA will return to High Point next summer for the Henredon Classic, where Sandra Haynie will defend the title she captured in September. Haynie won the title by holding off a host of challengers, including native daughter Marlene Flovd.

California Congressman Claims Reagan Is Using Discrimination

By DREW VON BERGEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Reagan administration opposes all anti-discrimination laws and finds continued discrimination useful to remaining in office, a House committee chairman said Saturday.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Labor subcommittee on employment opportunities and a former head of the Congressional Black Caucus, predicted an increase in the backlog of government action on discrimination complaints.

"It's moving back to zero, re-inventing the wheel in terms of the civil rights movement," said Hawkins in an interview published in the January issue of Equal Opportunity Forum magazine.

"It isn't that these people are just against affirmative action," Hawkins said of the administration. "They oppose all anti-discrimination laws."

"They don't believe in the theory that those who discriminate should be punished," he added. "In fact, it is useful to them to continue discrimination.

"This is how they intend to stay in office — by playing groups against one another, dividing them politically and exploiting them economically."

Hawkins said budget cuts will reduce the staff of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Labor Department's Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs.

"I think that they will result in a tremendous addition to the current backlog of discrimination cases — particularly in view of the fact that, along with budget cuts, there's been a change in policy from class action affirmative action suits to case-by-case enforcement," he said.

Hawkins also cited statements of Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the Civil Rights Division.

Reynolds has publicly challenged the constitutionality of federal affirmative action laws and the use of goals and timetables for correcting past discrimination.

"Administration officials are saying they intend to go back to the period before 1972 and depend solely on voluntary action," Hawkins said. "Unfortunately, voluntary compliance failed. That's why affirmative action was initiated in the first place."

Hawkins said he believes the administration intends to have all equal employment agencies abolished before Reagan's term of office ends and then have enforcement on strictly a legalistic, case-by-case basis.

"We don't intend to sit by and take it without showing that support exists," he said. "I believe that Mr. Reagan is an individual who can be influenced."

"I cannot believe that Mr. Reagan has evil motives," Hawkins added.

Unions Lost More Than Half Of 1981 Elections

By DREW VON BERGEN

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Organized labor lost 54.3 percent of government-supervised elections during the past fiscal year in its effort to unionize workers in plants, factories and other work sites, but reversed a nine-year slide in percentage of victories.

According to the annual report of the National Labor Relations Board, unions won only 45.7 percent of the 8,198 elections conducted by the independent government agency that oversees federal labor laws.

More than 458,000 workers participated in the elections.

The board said that while it was the sixth consecutive year that unions had failed to win 50 percent of the contests, it was the first time in nine years that the union percentage of victories increased.

In fiscal year 1979, unions won only 45 percent of the elections.

The latest statistics do not include the devastating defeat suffered by the 1.3 million-member United Steelworkers union in December in its effort to organize workers at 14 plants of the giant du Pont Chemical Co.

In the NLRB-supervised elections, the Steelworkers were shut out, losing at each of the plants scattered across seven states, despite a seven-year organizing campaign. The Steelworkers-du Pont elections will be included in next year's statistics.

The annual report also showed a record 57,381 cases were filed with the board during the year, an increase of 4.5 percent over the previous year.

They included 44,063 charges alleging employers or unions, or both, committed unfair labor practices that are prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act. In addition, there were 12,701 petitions to conduct secret-ballot elections for selection or rejection of labor organizations as collective bargaining representatives.

A record $32.4 million in reimbursements to employees illegally discharged or otherwise discriminated against were obtained by the board from employers and unions, the report added. It included lost earnings, fees, dues, and fines.

The board's actions also resulted in 10,033 offers of job reinstatements, with 8,952 workers accepting the offers.

The board said that on Sept. 30, the end of the fiscal year, it had a record 2,693 unfair labor practice cases awaiting hearing by administrative law judges.

'Plain English' Tax Forms Tested

By DONALD H. MAY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an experiment in using plain English, the IRS this year is asking 30,000 Georgia taxpayers to fill out federal tax returns that start with a simple "Step 1: Name and Address."

If the experiment works, such simplified forms could go to taxpayers all over the country by 1984.

Congress decided several years ago that the forms and instructions of the Internal Revenue Service — such as those recently sent or now in the mails to taxpayers — were slipping beyond the grasp of the average mortal.

IRS hired language experts to design an easy-to-follow version of what is now the short form — 1040A. The result, called 1040S, has been sent to a random sample of Georgia taxpayers.

The most notable features are the color and layout.

The print is bigger. Instead of drab type on an off-pink blackground, which becomes a blur late at night, there is big, red type in the margins, guiding the taxpayer from Step 1 through Step 9. Nine is "Sign your return."

In between, the old and new forms are not too different. The new one avoids words such as "exemptions." It says instead: "Always take one personal deduction for yourself .... Write '1' for this deduction here."

It contains plus marks where you should add, minus signs where you should subtract. Nowhere does it use the phrase "adjusted gross income."

Half those in the Georgia sample will receive experimental forms that do not even ask them to decide whether they are single, married filing jointly, married filing separately or the head of a household. They will get a form tailored for them, based on what they were last year.

The other half will receive combination forms asking them check the right box for their status.

If this has changed they don't have to use the form sent them. In fact, the IRS says no one in the Georgia sample is required to use the experimental forms but can send in a regular form instead.

Philadelphia Finally Sees Parade

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There were dancing dominoes, strutting Rubik's Cubes and singing champagne glasses — it wasn't just another Saturday on Broad Street.

The 82nd annual Mummers Parade, one of the most ornate ever, weaved its magic under a cloudless sky with the temperatures hovering around the freezing mark.

Rain and high winds on New Year's Day forced a one-day postponement of the parade. Officials said the windy wet weather could have damaged the nearly $1 million worth of costumes. Mummer tradition holds that costumes worn in each New Year's parade must be new.

As usual at this Philadelphia rite, the crowd seemed to react most heartily to the string bands — the high-stepping, swaying musicians in sequins and feathers of all colors.

"The string bands are the best. I know," said 12-year-old Matthew Bleistein, a self-described veteran of "three or four" mummers parades.

Leading the South Jersey Band, the first to march to the judges' reviewing stand near City Hall, was 21-year-old Dorothy Pleis, the first woman to captain a string band.

While some of the estimated 20,000 mummers in Saturday's parade growled that Ms. Pleis' presence as a band captain was breaking tradition, the Williamstown, N.J., resident said: "I like to think I am adding to tradition."

Before the string bands began to compete for the $132,600 in prize money in their division alone, five Comic Division entries tested their creativity before a crowd estimated by parade officials at between 100,000 and 400,000.

The comic entries included six men in boxes painted the white, blue, red, orange, yellow and green of the popular Rubik's Cube game.

Five of the cubes were unsolved, while one — with each side of his box the same color — strutted more confidently than the others.

The Comic Division, known for its often crude humor, also included a male, red-dressed, Nancy Reagan impersonator carrying two bulky shopping bags and a large snail designed to represent the speed of the U.S. Postal Service.

"New Year's wouldn't be the same without the Mummers Parade," said Mike Lukas, a Drexel University student and a member of the Liberty Clowns New Year's Association, last year's Comic Division winner.

This year, Lukas, dressed as a "space clown," said his group stood "a pretty good" chance of repeating its victory.

Bani-Sadr Says Iran Headed Toward Bankruptcy

By SCHEHEREZADE FARAMARZI
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Ousted Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Saturday that Iran is heading towards virtual bankruptcy and the nation's clerical leaders fear an end to the war with Iraq because "they would have to deal with economic issues."

In a telephone interview with The Associated Press in Beirut from his headquarters in Paris, the former president blamed Iran's economic plight on the 15-month-old war and the lingering effects of a boycott imposed after the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in november 1979.

"When the economy goes beyond a certain point, it frightens everyone into wondering if they would be engulfed by hunger or famine, and there is war. This will overpower them (people)," said Bani-Sadr, a French-educated economist who served for 18 months as Iran's first elected president until Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini fired him June 22.

Bani-Sadr said unemployment in the nation of 36 million had reached 4 million and hard currency reserves had fallen to $600 million compared to $14 billion in 1980.

Asked about unconfirmed reports that Iran has been forced to sell its gold reserves in order to continue the war effort, Bani-Sadr said Iran "tried to sell its gold, but I don't know if it has already done so or how much."

The war has crippled Iran's oil industry — its major source of pre-war revenues — and Bani-Sadr estimated oil production was down to 500,000 barrels daily. However, Oil Ministry sources in Tehran estimated Iran was pumping 1.2 million barrels a day.

Bani-Sadr, who acted as Iran's commander-in-chief of the armed forces before his impeachment and flight into exile, said "militarily, this war should have ended to our advantage at the beginning of last fall. Politically, it should have never started."

Bani-Sadr said Iranian leaders had passed up opportunities to end the war through negotiations and "those who are governing in Iran are not sure when to finish the war. I don't think they would agree to end the war because if that happened they would have to deal with economic issues."

The former president said the U.S. boycott imposed on Khomeini's regime during the 444-day hostage crisis also had an adverse effect on the economy. "The effects of the hostage taking were the economic siege and thus the economic situation which Iran has now," he said.

After the last of the U.S. hostages were released on Jan. 20, 1981 the U.S. government lifted the boycott and by last July had returned about $8 billion in frozen Iranian assets, according to Iranian government estimates.

Bani-Sadr's ouster triggered violent confrontations between his secular-minded supporters and the militant followers of Khomeini, whose government has executed more than 1,650 opponents by official count since last June.

"The increasing executions meant that differences had reached their maximum and there was no other way to rule," Bani-Sadr said. "When one relies on such great and unbelievable slaughters, it means that differences are such that they cannot be solved politically."

Bani-Sadr, who fled to Paris on July 29, has formed a "Council of Resistance" with the underground Mujahedeen Khalq guerrilla organization headed by Massoud Rajavi and the Kurdish Democratic Party. The Mujahedeen Khalq is the main underground opposition group in Iran, which has been waging a war of terror against top government officials.

The ex-president predicted that if Khomeini was assassinated, "there will be a chance of bloody confrontations" in Iran. If the ailing 82-year-old revolutionary patriarch dies of natural causes, he said, "the groups which receive their authority from him will become weak and again there is a possibility that the people would make a move and take the affairs of the nation into their own hands."

British Planned Persian Invasion

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Government papers from 1951 released for the first time Saturday brush away the secrecy of a British government that plotted to invade an oil-rich Persian island and discussed a curb on non-white immigration.

Minutes of cabinet meetings and other documents prepared during the Labor and Conservative governments of 1951 were released under a British law that allows for declassification of secret government papers after 30 years.

The plan to invade Persia is disclosed in declassified minutes of cabinet meetings in the Labor Party government of Clement Attlee, who was prime minister from 1945 until the Conservative Party was returned to power under Winston Churchill on Oct. 26, 1951.

Codenamed "Operation Buccaneer," the plan called for seizing the oil refining area of Abadan Island in Persia, now Iran, after then Prime Minister Mohammed Mossadegh threatened depossession of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Corp. The company, in which Britain held a major stock interest, was nationalized by the Persian oil industry in May 1951.

The documents show a series of cabinet meetings were held to explore military action. The foreign secretary, Herbert Morrison, who expressed concern over possible Soviet aggression in Persia, said in a memo that a major military operation was "feasible" and suggested using three British battalions in such an event.

Preparations were made to evacuate British staff from the oil fields, and Attlee's cabinet authorized sending troops into Tripoli, Libya, for quick deployment into Persia.

But, according to Foreign Office telegrams, the United States did not agree with Britain's assessment of the situation and refused to back the venture.

Eventually the cabinet agreed that military action was "undesirable," and Mossadegh was overthrown in a right-wing coup on Aug. 19. Diplomatic relations were restored and the oil company was compensated for the nationalization.

Other documents reveal concern in the Attlee government over the influx British subjects of West Indian and West African extraction.

In 1951, there were 30,000 such immigrants in Britain, an increase of 5,000 over 1945. Some had come as stowaways and others as "one-way seafarers," and the government was worried over their effect on the British economy.

Egypt Taps Veteran Official As Minister

By STEVEN K. HINDY
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Fuad Mohieddin, a veteran politician who holds both legal and medical degrees, was named Egypt's prime minister Saturday and said he would concentrate on finding "a solution to urgent economic problems as soon as possible."

Mohieddin asked by President Hosni Mubarak to form a cabinet by Monday, told reporters he would concentrate on the problems of excessive imports of luxury goods, as well as public sector industries, subsidies of basic commodities that drain about 30 percent of the national budget and housing.

The official Middle East News Agency quoted Mohieddin as saying he was asked to serve as prime minister because Mubarak wanted to give up the job and devote all his time to the presidency. Observers said the cabinet shift was expected.

The 55-year-old Mohieddin, Mubarak's first major appointee, said he would make "limited" changes in the 32-man cabinet appointed in May 1980 by the late President Anwar Sadat. Since then Mohieddin has served as one of six deputy prime ministers and as minister of information.

When he formed the new cabinet, Sadat relieved Prime Minister Mustafa Khalil and assumed the title himself. Mubarak, Sadat's vice president, also kept both titles until Saturday. He has yet to appoint a vice president.

Well-informed Egyptian sources said they expected Mohieddin to make changes in the economics and planning ministries in line with Mubarak's reassessment of Sadat's "open door" economic liberalization policies.

Mohieddin told reporters the new government would also deal with internal problems and continuing the U.S.-sponsored Camp David peace process after Israel withdraws from the last third of the Sinai Peninsula next April. But informed sources said Egypt's foreign policies would remain the same.

Chief among Egypt's internal problems is the growing Moslem fundamentalist movement. The interior minister announced last month that 2,500 religious extremists had been arrested since the Oct. 6 assassination of Sadat, allegedly by religious fanatics.

Mohieddin said he and Mubarak were choosing the new cabinet. "We began contacts with them and if they agree, their names will be announced on Monday," the Middle East News Agency quoted Mohieddin as saying.

"I will help the president as a prime minister, according to his instructions needed in the general plan which required a limited change to cope with the present times," the agency quoted him as telling reporters after meeting Mubarak at Uruba palace in Heliopolis, a Cairo suburb.

Ambassadors Called Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. ambassadors to Israel and Egypt are being called home for consultations on the U.S.-sponsored Palestinian autonomy talks, a State Department spokesman said Saturday.

But well-informed diplomatic sources said the main reason Washington summoned ambassadors Alfred Atherton from Cairo and Samuel Lewis from Tel Aviv was for consultation over the forthcoming U.N. Security Council debate on Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights.

The UN group condemned the Israeli move last month and decided in a resolution to reconvene Tuesday to consider sanctions against Israel if it does not rescind its decision by then. The United States voted for the resolution.

Joseph Reap, an assistant State Department spokesman, said the two ambassadors are being recalled for discussions on the Middle East peace process and the autonomy negotiations.

The two U.S. diplomats have represented the United States in formal negotiations with Israel and Egypt over the status of the West Bank of the Jordan River and other territiories occupied by Israel since the end of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Atherton officially informed Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in a meeting Saturday that he and Lewis are returning to Washington for discussions.

Egypt's official Middle East News Agency quoted Atherton as saying he wanted to see if Mubarak had any "any ideas or views" to communicate to Washington.

Asked if he and Mubarak discussed Israel's annexation of the Golan Heights, Atherton said: "No, we met to discuss the consultations that Ambassador Samuel Lewis and I plan to conduct in Washington."

Atherton repeated the U.S. commitment to the Mideast peace process and vowed that his government would continue its diplomatic efforts until a comprehensive peace is achieved in the area.

He is scheduled to leave Sunday morning for Washington. He said he would remain in Washington for several days.

Khadafy Issues 'Love' Plea

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy told Christian and Moslem heads of state Saturday to "love your enemies" and turn the other cheek, the official JANA news agency reported.

Quoting extensively from the New Testament, Khadafy, a Moslem, said in his New Year's message:

"As we celebrate the end of 1,981 years from the birth of the Messiah, Jesus son of Mary, and...the start of 1982, we must not get drunk, but...ought to read the book of God, to know His words transmitted by his prophets."

The JANA dispatch said Khadafy described the words from the New Testatment as "the best words that I can give you...for the New Year."

Among the passages he quoted were "Love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, and pray for those who persecute and calumniate you" (Matt. 6-44) and "If someone strikes you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also" (Matt. 6-39).

Wall Street Ends Year On Low Note

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market produced a long list of losers in 1981, ranging from savings and loan and energy issues to silver-mining stocks and several individual companies that fell on hard times.

But there were big winners as well, most notably among companies that became takeover targets in another year of merger mania.

"It wasn't a very good way to start a new decade," said Argus Research Corp. in its summary of 1981.

Even the "traditional" yearend rally, when it finally arrived in the last two sessions Wednesday and Thursday, was unimpressive. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, with a 1.62 gain to 875.00 in the past week, finished the year with a loss of 88.99 points, or 9.2 percent.

Other readings for the week showed the New York Stock Exchange composite index unchanged at 71.11, and the American Stock Exchange market value index down 0.61 at 320.63.

Big Board volume, which had already established a record for the fourth consecutive year, averaged 36.84 million shares a day in the final week, against 39.11 million the week before.

In a computer tally of 1981's biggest percentage changes in the waning hours of the year, several savings and loans — with their much-publicized problems with high interest rates — placed prominently among the losers.

Fidelity Financial, Financial Federation, Biscayne Federal Savings & Loan and Financial Corp. of Santa Barbara all showed declines of more than 50 percent.

The same was true for such prominent silver issues as Hecla Mining and Callahan Mining, as the price of silver tumbled to a 2½-year low in late December.

Just two years before, Hecla had been the No. 1 performer of the year among NYSE issues, climbing from 3½ to 30, adjusted for a subsequent split. In the past week, the stock was back down to just above 10.

Among individual companies plagued by steep losses, AM International fell from 16⅞ early in the year to below 5, and International Harvester tumbled from a high of 26⅛ to the neighborhood of 7½.

Energy stocks, which produced some of the best gains of 1981, meanwhile did a dramatic turnabout. The list of the sharpest declines at the American Stock Exchange was dotted with such names as Great Basins Petroleum, Ranger Oil of Canada, Damson Oil, Juniper Petroleum, Sundance Oil, and Tubos of Mexico.

Declines of 30 to 40 percent were common among the big-name international oils listed on the Big Board.

There were some dramatic exceptions in the energy group, however — companies that became takeover targets. Santa Fe International rose 19¾ to 50¾, and Clark Oil 9⅛ to 36¾. Conoco, involved in the year's most celebrated merger battle, soared from 47½ to 96 before settling back to 64¾ as DuPont Co. completed its acquisition of the company.

Takeovers also touched off gains in such other natural-resource stocks as Kennecott, up 34⅞ at 61¾; Texasgulf, up 26¼ at 55¾, and St. Joe Minerals, up 9⅝ at 43⅛.

Among securities firms, which ranked as another prime catch during the year, Dean Witter Reynolds more than doubled in price pending completion of its takeover by Sears Roebuck and Shearson Loeb Rhoades gained almost as much before it was absorbed into American Express.

No computer program was at hand to print out 1982's biggest winners and losers in advance. But it seemed a safe bet that the new year would produce its share of turnarounds and other surprises.

One investor who seemed to be counting on that was Severyn Ashkenazy of Los Angeles. On New Year's Eve, Ashkenazy reported that he had bought "for investment" 420,000 shares of Financial Federation, the savings and loan concern, whose stock fell from 35¼ to the mid-teens in 1981.

Ghana Uprising Spurs Price Hike And Trading For Cocoa Futures

By PAULINE JELNEK
AP Business Writer

Cocoa futures prices rose Thursday in response to reports that Ghana's government had been overthrown in a military coup. Traders reportedly rushed to buy cocoa on the thinking that exports from the West African nation could be disrupted.

In a holiday-shortened session on the Coffee, Sugar and Cocoa Exchange in New York, cocoa settled $40 to $52 higher with the contract for delivery in March at $2,054 a metric ton.

"Traders were worried that the Gahanian people might not honor contracts they have made to deliver cocoa," said Phil Spinelli, an analyst in New York with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

Market rumors had it that the country has contracted to deliver anywhere from 20,000 to 30,000 tons of cocoa, some of it to the United Kingdom, in the near future.

Some traders said the development might actually be negative for prices.

Ghana, once was the world's leading cocoa producer, suffers from a serious balance-of-payments problem because of declining cocoa prices and smuggling of cocoa. Some traders said that a new government might solve transportation and other problems the country has been having and so improve the movement of cocoa to ports and then to export destinations.

Despite that interpretation, Spinelli said, many speculators and other

Human Rights Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Poland's dramatic loss of freedom was a black mark in a year in which almost 325 million people worldwide saw their human rights decline or vanish, Freedom House reported Saturday in assessing 1981.

"Few countries advanced and losses greatly outnumbered the gains," Freedom House said in a 44-page assessment of global human rights appearing Jan. 2 in its bimonthly magazine, "Freedom at Issue."

As a corollary to the loss of human rights, freedom of the press suffered erosion in at least 13 nations in 1981, and at least 22 journalists were murdered, the survey reported.

"Earlier gains, which allowed Poland to be the only Communist country rated 'partly free' for most of the year were harshly curtailed in December and are in danger of being crushed," the survey said.

Freedom House said the addition of Poland's 36 million people raised to 2.04 billion the total of non-free world residents, or nearly 45 percent of the global population.

Leaving Poland out, the survey continued, nearly 36 percent of the world's population are listed as free citizens in 54 nations and 27 related territories. Residents of 49 countries and 23 territories, or 20 percent of the world population, are classified as partly free.

Besides Poland, South Africa, Iran and Guatemala were judged to have lost their partial freedom in 1981. They have a combined population of 75 million.

Seven countries with a population totaling nearly 83 million suffered a deterioration in human freedom, the survey said. They were Chad, Djibouti, Egypt, Nicaragua, Libya, Sudan, and Zimbabwe.

Some gains in freedom were noted in Taiwan, Honduras, Ivory Coast, Tunisia and Mauritanius.

Freedom House describes itself as "a national organization dedicated to strengthening free institutions." Its focus is predominantly on violations of freedom in communist-ruled countries.

In an analysis of press freedom, Leonard R. Sussman, executive director of Freedom House, reported:

"The press was no freer and journalists no safer than the countries in which they worked. News media were free in 24 percent of the countries, partly free in 20 percent and not free in 56 percent."

Sussman said that besides the 22 slain journalists, 14 others were assaulted, tortured or kidnapped by guerrillas or government forces.

Newspapers were bombed and reporters harassed in Argentina, Brazil, Guatemala, India and Iran, he reported, and foreign correspondents were expelled from China, Egypt, El Salvador, Haiti, Iran, South Africa and Uganda, and deprived of accreditation in Algeria.

SPRING FORMAL. . .on Adak was one of the social activities attended by Rod Poole and Cathy Wilson before she left for a new assignment.

Nurse Has Long Distance Romance

Text By Rosalie Trotman

A long distance engagement and wedding plans — 5,000 miles worth — fill part of the time of Lt. Cathy Wilson, a Navy nurse. Her engagement to Rod Poole, formerly of Raleigh, was announced while she was at home here for the holidays.

A graduate of the East Carolina School of Nursing, Lt. Wilson worked at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in the Critical Care Unit for two years and then joined the U.S. Navy.

"It was sort of a dream I had that came true. I wanted to see some different places including California and I knew I couldn't afford it by myself. After joining as a commissioned officer, I attended a six-week course and moved to Oakland, California, where I lived for three years.

"I then moved to Adak, Alaska, by choice. It's considered an overseas assignment for nurses, which I needed. It was for a year and it sounded like an interesting place," she said.

Adak is a small island close to the end of the Aleutian Islands of Alaska, "half way between Seattle and Tokyo."

While on Adak Lt. Wilson worked in the naval hospital teaching prepared childbirth classes and CPR. "I enjoyed tundra stomping (hiking) several times. There's a lot to do there," she added. She was on a bowling team, joined Toastmasters International, became interested in photography and "did a lot of needlework."

"The best thing was meeting Rod Poole, who is a high school guidance counselor there. We were introduced the day after my arrival at dinner by my chief nurse, Cmdr. Pat McDonald, also from North Carolina," she said.

Poole has live on Adak seven years and works for the Adak Region School District. He graduated from North Carolina State University.

"Rod and I became good friends and remained good friends the first six months I was there and then last January, it was like someone flipped a light switch — our friendship developed into love. I left Adak in May and we had decided to use the seperation to be absolutely sure.

"Rod came home in June and we had one day together before I moved to Great Lakes, Illinois. He came through O'Hare Airport the following week en route to Alaska. We had a brief two and one-half hours together at the airport between planes. That's where he proposed and I quickly accepted," she continued.

Her engagement ring was selected "through telephone calls, many letters and pictures." She received it in early November.

She is hoping to get a military flight to Adak in March. "If not we will not see each other until two weeks before our July 10 wedding," she said.

Poole keeps busy backpacking on Adak and completing work on a project about the World War II battle on Attu Island in the Aleutians.

In Great Lakes, Lt. Wilson is an instructor at the Naval Hospital Corps School where she trains Navy corpsmen. It's a 10-week course and each class has approximately 60 students. "I've enjoyed my time in the Navy — it's a good job. If the opportunity was there I would remain on active duty after I am married. However, the Navy cannot send me back to Alaska until the fall of '83 so I'm leaving active duty in June, but staying in the reserves," she said.

"Rod and I share several coincidences — our birthdays are a day apart, his mother was an Army nurse and I'm a Navy nurse, our fathers enjoy woodworking, his sister and I have mutual friends, we both enjoy singing, we became engaged on Father's Day and will be getting married on my father's birthday.

"I'm not counting, but it will be 188 days until July 10," said Lt. Wilson.

TUNDRA STOMPING. . .(hiking) was enjoyed by Lt. Cathy Wilson and Rod Poole during her assignment on Adak. Tundra is shown in the background.

Male Oriented Scents Are Booming Business

By JOAN MOWER
United Press International

Surprise! Today's he-man may be using a deep-cleaner and lotion on his face and dabbing some of that new, hint-of-herb cologne on his neck.

While Mr. Man is deciding what fragrance to wear to the disco and his girlfriend is pondering over the products, scientists around the world are working in laboratories to determine the link, if any, between smell and sex in humans.

The cosmetics industry wants to cash in on ties between smell and sex.

The men's fragrance industry is experiencing a boom, with sales expected to total about $850 million in the United States this year.

Companies well-known for manufacturing women's products — Calvin Klein, Yves Saint Laurent, Adolfo, Pierre Cardin — are branching out, coming up with a wide array of men's toiletries.

For example, Chanel, the company whose No. 5 perfume is the ultimate in chic for many high-class women, now offers eau de toilette, after-shave and moisture balm — for men.

Chanel's product is called Antaeus Pour Homme after the Greek god Poseidon's son, Antaeus. Antaeus possessed extraordinary strength but only when his feet were firmly planted on the ground.

The big question scientists are trying to answer is if there is indeed a physiological effect between sexual attractiveness and smell in humans.

Some men say their own personal experiences are enough to convince them there is a clear relationship. One young man swears he has better luck meeting women in bars when he wears his Aramis.

"It definitely does make a difference," said Steve Sedlis, a 26-year-old dispatcher with the Cambridge, Mass., fire department. Sedlis, who has more cologne "than I know what to do with," said fragrance is part of his "overall image." He feels sure that women are drawn to "subtle and appealing" smells.

The problem 25-year-old Steven Sklover has is deciding which fragrance works most effectively with the opposite sex. "They all disagree — some like the sweet stuff, some like musk...."

Sklover, an energy analyst with the Massachusetts government, has solved the problem by switching between six different colognes.

For years, scientists have known about the connection between smell and behavior in the insect world and animal kingdom.

John Labows, an analytic chemist at the University of Pennsylvania's Monell Chemical Senses Center, said studies have shown sexual attractants called pheromones can draw insects for miles around.

The phermones also have been shown to influence the sexual behavior of mice and pigs. What about humans?

The scientific community has focused its attention on two possible human pheromones — androstenone and copulins.

Androstenone, a hormone found in perspiration from the armpit and genitals, is found more prevalent in men than in women. Copulins are estrogen-dependent fatty acids found in vaginal secretions of some women.

Taking the hint from insects, animals and several speculative studies, the perfume industry decided to put alpha androstenol — a synthetic version of androstenone — in some men's perfumes.

Alpha androstenol smells in concentrated form like sandalwood — and that smell is alleged to attract women.

But industry spokesmen are quick to point out that while a certain scent may attract a woman, that is all it will do.

"We haven't created an aphrodisiac," said Rod Heckman, director of marketing for Jovan, a company that sells a cologne, Andron, that contains the high-priced chemical.

Several studies, most of which have been done in England, claim to have shown that women were strongly drawn to men or objects sprayed with alpha androstenol.

When the Royal Shakespeare Company sprayed some theater seats with alpha androstenol, they found women followed their noses to those seats.

Other tests have shown women were drawn to waiting room chairs doused with the stuff. Both men and women stayed longer in telephone booths laden with alpha androstenol air.

But Labows said he is skeptical about the experiments using alpha androstenol.

"Those studies don't indicate any profound effect," he said. "I'm certainly skeptical of the powers being attributed to it. It's a quantum leap beyond what anyone suggests."

Regardless of the scientific research, perfume manufacturers are pleased with the chemical that costs $44,000-a-pound. Jovan's Heckman said the price is definitely worth it in terms of sales in the booming men's cosmetics industry.

While the jury is still out on the role smell plays in sex, other studies have revealed interesting facts about smell. For instance, babies can pick out their own mother's breast by the age of six weeks. Spouses can find their mates undershirts by their smell.

Besides selling perfumes with supposed sex appeal, the industry has also discovered a gold mine in other male cosmetics. Many companies have added scented moisturizers, deep skin cleansers and masques to their lines of after shave lotions and colognes.

"Remember — a great fragrance should be part of a man's everyday plan; not just a Saturday night extra," admonishes one advertisement.

Annette Green, executive director of the Fragrance Foundation in New York, said the men's market is expected to expand by 12 to 15 percent this year.

The men's market is growing faster than the women's market at this point," she said. But women's perfumes still make up more of the business with projected sales of $1.8 billion for 1981, compared to $850 million.

Of the 500 fragrances available in the United States, about one-third are for men. The favorites have woodsy, tobaccoey and musky tones.

Although alcohol-based after-shave lotions such as English Leather and Old Spice have been popular for years, Ms. Green traced the fragrance boom back to the late 1960s during the "hippy revolution" when young men and women started sharing their musk oil.

In general, colognes have a longer lasting oil base while after-shave evaporates more quickly.

Since the late 1960s, the men's movement has encouraged the male sex to "be more open and express themselves," she said. Part of the personal expression involved the use of fragrances.

"It seems men are getting more tuned to fragrances," she said. "They used to be embarrassed ... but now fragrances are no longer a joke."

The growing openness of homosexuals has also helped sales, according to Rick Austin, a salesman of men's toiletries in a Boston department store. In general, gay men tend to be "much more aware of grooming," he said.

But it's not just gay men who are jumping on the skin care-fragrance bandwagon. It's all men, Austin contends.

"Men are beginning to take care of themselves," he said.

Although men seem to be getting less self-conscious about the use of fragrance, Ms. Green said women still buy most products.

The Christmas season is the time of big sales, with women purchasing all kinds of bottles and jars to fill stockings and put under the tree.

Pam Price, a Boston free-lance photographer, said she frequently buys her husband Pierre Cardin cologne. "He wears it for special occasions," she said.

A visit to a local department store counter showed an equal number of men and women browsing and buying.

"I'm getting Aramis," said one shopper, Miguel Lasalvia of Venezuela.

But while today's man is just beginning to understand the link between sex and scent, his love of good-smelling potions dates back to ancient Egypt when the pharaohs were buried with their vials of scent.

And history also tells us that Napoleon never went into battle nor near his Josephine without the smelly stuff.

A VARIETY. . .of fragrances are examined by Larry Johnson, an employee of the Jordan Marsh Co., Boston, Mass.

Dear Abby

Prayer Power Stronger Than Pill Power

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I started taking diet pills two years ago. They killed my hunger and made me feel great. Too great — that was the trouble. By nighttime I was overstimulated and couldn't sleep, so I started taking sleeping pills. Then more diet pills the next day. I soon found myself so hooked I couldn't stop. (As a registered nurse, I should have known better.)

Finally my nerves were shot from all the highs and lows, and I knew something had to be done. Even though I'm not a religious person, I did something I hadn't done in years. I prayed. And by God (literally) I somehow found the strength to take all those pills and flush them down the toilet!

I'd be lying if I said the next few weeks were easy. I've never had two more difficult weeks in all my life. More than once I was tempted to get more pills, but I prayed for the strength to keep me from it, and miraculously the strength came to me!

It's been five months since I've taken a pill, and I feel like a new person. I'm "high" on being free from artificial stimulation, which always ends in depression.

I know all of this is too long for your column, Abby, but I hope you'll find space to print part of it. I'm sure there are others out there who are hooked as much as I was, and if I could kick the habit with prayer, so can they. Sign me...

FREE IN TUCSON

DEAR FREE: Your inspiring message is well worth the space in this column. Thanks for confirming that the power of prayer can move mountains.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Your flippant answer to "For Natural Family Planning" reflects the pill-pushing, mechanical-solution mentality of Planned Parenthood. It also puts down women by implying that the majority of us are not intelligent enough to read clear signals from our own bodies.

Certainly some abstinence and self-control are necessary for natural family planning to succeed, but implying that this is such a great hardship reduces humans to little more than animals in heat. Besides, Abby, a little "Abstinence makes the heart grow fonder."

ALSO FOR NATURAL FAMILY PLANNING

DEAR ALSO: The Planned Parenthood people wrote me to ask that I recommend natural family planning as a safe, effective alternative to other methods of birth control.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Your evaluation of teachers who get crushes on their students ("They are immature — the same as students who get crushes on their teachers.") was not shallow despite the few objections you received!

It is dangerous and unethical for teachers to become romantically involved with their students, who are usually naive children in a very confused period of their lives. The fact that occasionally these involvements produce long-lived relationships does not excuse the lack of ethics inherent in such conduct. Don't back down, Abby. You were right the first time.

TOM SMITH (MY REAL NAME)

DEAR TOM: Thanks. I needed that.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter Lisa was married four months ago to a man I'll call Gary. It was a very stormy and upsetting courtship, to say the least. Gary has a violent temper and caused us a lot of grief. He'd phone the house at all hours demanding to talk to Lisa, and once when she refused to talk to him, he came to the house and broke down our front door! He treated Lisa badly and talked to Joe (my husband) and me like we were dogs — something we were certainly not accustomed to.

Joe is a very stubborn and unforgiving man, and he refused to attend Lisa and Gary's wedding. I went and did what I could to be supportive.

Lisa is welcome in our home, but Gary is not. Abby, I'm not crazy about Gary either, but I love Lisa more than I hate Gary, so I put up with him. I've tried every way I know to get Joe to forgive and forget, but he won't budge. Any suggestions?

The Republican National Convention of 1888 required eight ballots before it selected Benjamin Harrison, a Senate leader from Indiana, as its presidential candidate. In the ensuing election, Harrison polled 90,000 fewer popular votes than Democrat Grover Cleveland, yet he won with a majority of the electoral votes.

Double Raisins For Cake

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

A funny thing happened on a recent visit to Nantucket, Mass. I found some cookbooks from New York — the state I have called home for many years — that I didn't know existed. These were compiled and published by the Rochester Folk Art Guild of Middlesex, N.Y., between 1975 and 1978 and titled "One Pot Dishes," "More Simple Dishes," "Home Baked Breads" and "Holiday Baking."

All are spiral bound, with soft but durable-looking covers, printed clearly on a fine grade of paper and illustrated in black and white. In keeping with the Guild's policy, none of the art work is signed. The recipes come from the Guild's kitchens.

When we got in touch with the Guild we found that it had been started by Louise March — a woman of great taste — in 1957 in Rochester. In 1967 the members bought East Hill Farm in Middlesex and the Guild still operates there. Their workshops are devoted to pottery, weaving, glassblowing, iron forging, graphic arts, woodworking and clothing design. Non-resident members come to work on weekends and at other times. The farm provides essential food staples and a flock of sheep supplies wool for the weavers' looms.

Here then is a recipe for kugelhof from "Home Baked Breads." I chose it to pass along because readers have told me of their interest in this sweet yeast bread. The Guild uses unbleached hard wheat bread flour when one of their recipes calls for "white flour," but in testing this recipe I used regular all-purpose flour with excellent results. I enjoyed the flavor and texture of the kugelhof, but next time I make it I shall add twice as many raisins because the amount given is sparing. The kirsch liqueur called for is expensive if imported, but for this coffeecake the thriftier domestic kirsch should be satisfactory.

ALSATIAN KUGELHOF

- 1¼ cups milk
- ½ teaspoon grated lemon rind (optional)
- 1 cake yeast or 1 envelope dry yeast
- 1 large egg
- 1-3rd cup sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup kirsch liqueur
- 3 to 4 cups white flour
- ¼ cup golden raisins
- ¾ cup soft unsalted butter
- ¼ cup slivered almonds
- Confectioners' sugar

Scald the milk, add the lemon rind and cool to lukewarm. Proof the yeast in ¼ cup of the cooled milk.

Cream the egg, sugar and salt. Gradually stir in the kirsch, cooled milk mixture and proofed yeast. Stir in ½ cup white flour and the golden raisins. Mix well and add additional white flour to form a stiff dough. Knead the dough until smooth and elastic, adding more white flour if necessary. The dough should be soft but not sticky. Cut the butter into thin pieces and with the heel of your hand gradually work it into the dough. Add enough additional flour to keep the dough from being sticky. Knead 10 minutes.

Place the dough in a greased bowl, cover and allow to rise until double in bulk. Punch down, turn and let rise a second time. Turn the dough out onto a floured surface.

Heavily grease a 9-inch bundt pan (or other round pan) and sprinkle the bottom with slivered almonds. Form the dough into a long roll and place in the pan, pinching the ends together. Allow the dough to rise until double in bulk. Place in a 350-degree oven and bake for 45 to 50 minutes. Cool 5 to 10 minutes and gently turn the cake onto a cooling rack. While still warm, dust with confectioners' sugar.

If the sides of the cake do not brown well, remove it from the pan and place upside down onto a baking sheet. Return the cake to the oven for 5 minutes. Do this with caution. If the top is not firm and brown, the cake can collapse.

(From "Home Baked Breads," a cookbook available for $4.25 from the Rochester Folk Art Guild, R.D.1 Box 10, Middlesex, N.Y. 14507.)

Salt-Free Wine Being Made

NEW YORK (UPI) — Winemaker John Coleman of Paw Paw, Mich., makes salt-free cooking wines and he's having a hard time keeping them in stock.

They're made from garlic and onions instead of grapes.

In an article in a recent issue of The Wine Spectator, Coleman says he may have to discontinue his grape wines.

"I can't do both," he told free lance writer Ruth Ellen Church. "Garlic and onion take separate pumps and separate presses. I'll sell what I have and just concentrate on these two. I need two wineries."

Housewares Indicate Changes In Lifestyles

By JEANNE LESEM
and
CATHY LEWANDOWSKI
United Press International

If you want to know how American lifestyles are changing, the 75th semi-annual housewares exposition in Chicago offered plenty of clues in the form of new products:

—A talking scale, one of many new electronic devices for the home.

— A cart-mounted snow shovel, a combined space heater-fan and an oscillating quartz heater — all energy conservers.

—Electric air cleaners galore — a reflection of concern over pollution, health and the environment.

—Chili-making sets — part of the western lifestyles trend.

—Portable smoke alarms — for safety and security away from home.

—Electric kitchen appliances designed to save time and effort for home cooks at the end of their work days away from home;

The speaking scale is Medelco's talkWeight. It announces a user's weight while displaying it digitally. For people who prefer the bad news in silence, Moulinex, General Electric, Counselor and Krups were among those who showed soundless electronic digital scales.

The EZ Shovel is the brainchild of engineer Dean E. Bates. He said he developed it because he has back trouble and lives in the snow belt. He mounted a standard shovel on a small, two-wheeled cart.

"There's no lifting involved," Bates said by telephone from Binghamton, N.Y. You push down with your arm to lift and dump the snow aside. The cart follows as you scrape along.

The shovel will be sold through retail stores and by direct mail from the factory in Port Crane, N.Y.

Patton's modern-looking space heater-fans are among many new energy-saving devices. They can be used for heat in winter and cooling in summer. They stand on the floor or a table or can be hung from a wall.

The oscillating quartz heater is from National Presto Industries.

When a mass market manufacturer like General Housewares introduces two chili cook-and-serve sets, you know an appetite for western fare is spreading fast. Alper Woodenware, of Plymouth, Mass., also showed a chili set.

Alper's blue and white graniteware consists of four bowls, four plates, four spoons, a ladle and a 5-quart stockpot.

General Housewares' sets are graniteware and iron. The first consists of four plates, four chili bowls, a covered seven-quart pot, a 10-inch open skillet, a square baking pan, a chili recipe and cooking hints and one package each of corn bread and chili mix. The Wagnerware brand cast iron set features a dutch oven, a covered skillet and the official International Chili Society cookbook, which is also sold separately in bookstores.

Among manufacturers introducing portable smoke alarms were Fyrnetics, First Alert and Advanced Products, of Redmond, Wash. The latter combines an 85 decibel alarm with a light to guide the user through smoke-filled areas.

"This is a very interesting category since the tragic fires in 1980 in hotels and nursing homes where smoke detectors were not in use," said Robert A. Bell, of Fyrnetics, Inc.

His, company's smoke alarm runs on a 9-volt battery that lasts about one year, said Bell, who has been in two hotel fires himself.

Other new energy-saving appliances included:

— Kero-Sun's Monitor 20 brand automated, vented kerosene heater that the manufacturer says is smokeless and odorless and fuel-efficient.

—A portable kerosene heater, Basic Accessories' Super 700, with a one-burner cooking surface.

—An electrically heated towel rack that can be permanently wall-mounted like those in many European hotels. Dimplex Inc., of Stamford, Conn., also makes floor standing models.

— DeLonghi-America's oil-filled electric radiator. Its oil never needs replacing, says the New York City manufacturer-importer.

—A compact humidifier, West Bend's Towne House 1500, converts to a small table when not in use. The 24-inch-high unit has a top surface of 13½ by 14 inches.

—Easy Fill Products' flexible hoses fit standard household taps and eliminate the need for buckets or pitchers for filling humidifiers. The Toronto, Ont. manufacturer makes 15 and 25 foot lengths and a 15 foot extension hose with connector.

New electronics items include:

—Clairol's SST Electronic hairdryer that dials infinite settings up to 1,200 watts.

—Oster's Blend 'n' Juice appliance for vegetables and non-citrus fruits comes with both a citrus juicer accessory and a blender accessory with infinite speeds.

—Toastmaster's and Farberware's tabletop convection ovens. The Toastmaster also bakes conventionally, broils, slow cooks and dehyrates. The Farberware dehydrates, slow cooks, convection bakes and convection broils — in addition to defrosting and proofing bread dough. Both are programmable.

—West Bend's Kitchen Controller combines the functions of a three channel timer, a metric converter, a liquid and dry measure converter, a calculator, a clock and an appliance timer. A smaller device, West Bend's Triple Timer, has three separate channels for timing from one second to 10 hours.

—Radio Shack's Safe House is a battery-operated door and window alarm.

Architects and designers say homes and room sizes are shrinking — but you'd never know it from the new countertop kitchen appliances and utensils. Among them:

—The Dazey Stripper, an electrical device that peels potatoes, citrus fruit, apples, squash, cucumbers and other firm-fleshed produce, one piece at a time. It also makes onion rings and shoestring potatoes and juliennes vegetables.

—A fruit and vegetable strainer accessory for Hobart's KitchenAid food preparer units uses the same housing as the manufacturer's FG-A food grinder attachment. Its spaghetti-noodlemaker accessory combines the FG-A grinder with five plates to extrude pasta dough.

—Oster's puree-ricer is also sold as an accessory for the company's meat grinder.

—West Bend has added a broil function to its convection skillet and also makes a skillet broiler the same size and shape.

—Hamilton Beach's electric knife line now includes a unit with blades that swivel a full 90 degrees for horizontal as well as vertical slicing.

—Maxim's electric, 2-egg omelet pan with non-stick SilverStone cooking surface can also be used to cook other foods needing a 325 degree F temperature.

—EZ POR's Brown 'N Roast bags are pre-vented, self-basting, disposable and have grease absorbent linings.

—Both Dazey Products Co. and Robert Krups, North America, showed vacuum sealers for preparing boil-in-bag foods as commercial plants do. The manufacturers say vacuum packing prolongs storage and reduces cooking time.

—General Electric, Salton, T-Fal and West Bend introduced electric appliances that duplicate some food processor functions. West Bend's Food Preparation System is a mixer, dough kneader, meat grinder, slicer-shredder and blender. The T-Fal Cuttery is a slicer-shredder-cutter. The Salton Food Machine grinds, slices, shreds and grates. The GE Meal Fixer slices, shreds, chops and grates.

—Sunbeam's newest food processor has a continuous feed-through chute and a three-piece food pusher for processing a single, small item at a time. The feed-through chute will also be sold as an accessory to fit all the company's processors and its food preparation center.

— Fiskars, the Hopkins, Minn., company that made its reputation on ultra-modern scissors with orange plastic handles, introduced its first cutlery line — nine dishwasher proof, stainless steel kitchen knives and a pocket-size sharpener.

Health and beauty aids:

—Northern Electric's Feminine Comfort Pad is a diaper-shaped heating pad for women who suffer menstrual discomfort.

—Calor of France's Body Boutique Personal Waxing System removes unwanted hair from legs, arms and face. The thermostatically controlled heating system has two size applicators, two disposable filters and a cake of reusable wax.

The gimmicks each show spawns include good values and good-grief-who-needs-it items. Take your pick:

—The Quic-key Tab-Top Can Opener, a plastic device to pull off or push in tabs without cuts and broken fingernails — a Basix product from Ensar Corp., Wheeling, Ill.

—The Basix Grip 'n' Flip, a spatula that can also be used like tongs to grip and turn slippery foods such as breakfast sausages.

—From Ronco, of Elk Grove Village, Ill., an instant glass froster for cocktail glasses, beer mugs, dessert dishes, etc.

—The Chip Clip, a snack package resealer, looks like an elongated hair clip, works like a spring-operated clothespin and retails for about $1.79.

—Blue Magic Bubble Stop is designed to neutralize excessive gases in waterbeds. If bubbles remain after 72 hours, says the Stockton, Calif. manufacturer, burp the mattress.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Last week, I began shivering uncontrollably. My mouth became dry. I could not concentrate. My nerves were like a cavity exposed to an ice cube.

Then I realized why. I had gone through an entire day without seeing Brooke Shields. The withdrawal symptoms were predictable.

It brought back memories of an overdose of Farrah Fawcett in 1978, and of 1979, when I picked up a magazine that did not have John Travolta on it and I couldn't stop crying.

Every year, the media blitz in on someone and we are saturated with all there is to know about them. In some instances, the depth of the person deserves no longer than 15 minutes, yet week in and week out they create a supply of facts for which there is no demand.

For eight months once I followed closely the dating habits of Princess Caroline of Monaco. I knew what time Caroline got up in the morning, who she was with, what they did and what they were charged with. I should have known so much about my own daughter.

At one time, I kept pace with every move of Jacqueline Onassis. She didn't floss without my knowing about it. Then it was Marie Osmond who dominated my life and last year, the face that made pork a four-letter word: Miss Piggy.

For awhile, I didn't think I could survive Miss Piggy. She had her own TV show, wrote books, guested on talk shows, appeared on the cover of Time and every other major publication while her likeness was reproduced on glasses, pillows, sheets, cocktail napkins, toothbrushes, stationery, posters, T-shirts, ashtrays, banks, bookends, beach towels and bumper stickers. I was a full-grown woman who couldn't face the morning news without coffee from a mug with a pig in a blonde wig, for God's sake.

I know more about Brooke than any person has a right to know. People have entered a marriage knowing a lot less. I thought a long time before we planned a trip to South America for a vacation. What if they had never heard of Brooke Shields? How could I handle 10 no-dimple-no-Calvin-Klein days?

Over Rio, my palms began to sweat and itch. I needed a drink of water. I felt lightheaded. Then I saw a man next to me thumbing through a Portuguese newspaper. I saw a small face surrounded by fat hair and said out loud, "Thanks. I needed that."

I could make it through the night now.

Many College Students Must Work Their Way Through

By KAY WALLACE
United Press International

Christine Reagle drives an ice cream truck in Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Chris Lyden doubles as a hospital aide and part-time track coach in St. Paul, Minn.

Suzanne Furuya juggles her life as a sales clerk and bookkeeper in San Francisco.

In College Station, Texas, Sheri Gibbons worries that she won't be through working at the jewelry store in time to get to her second job as a waitress.

And Jeff Kolodin dons a clown suit and heads out to the nearest street corner in Jacksonville, Fla. to sell balloons.

Misses Reagle, Furuya and Gibbons; Lyden and Kolodon are college students who have to work to get through school.

If the typical college student is pictured as relatively carefree, worried only about passing grades and social status — as yet, unaware of the "real world" — there are thousands of working students across the country who would laugh at that description.

"That image of a carefree college student is wrong. I haven't met one student like that here," Donald Casella, director of San Francisco State University's Career Center said.

Loans, grants and scholarships are not nearly sufficient for most students. Unless Mom and Dad can foot the bill entirely, most students will wind up working at some point.

And the lifestyle of working and studying is an trial of endurance.

Lyden, 22, has two more years before he has his B.A. in education from the University of Minnesota. He isn't encouraged by what he's up against.

"It's getting harder, mainly because tuition keeps going up each quarter. You have to work harder just to stay even. I'm making it only because I live at home and I can borrow from my folks if I have to," he said.

"It's a race, and I often think if I really looked ahead to all I had to do in a week I just wouldn't start the week. But so far I'm keeping at it. There are times I think twice about it all, especially when I wonder whether there will be a job in education when I get through."

Miss Reagle is a sophomore journalism student at Northeastern University in Boston. Loans pay her tuition and she drove an ice cream truck last summer to earn her living expenses. This year she begins a cooperative work-study program as an intern at a Boston newspaper. She'll alternate earning money and using it to pay expenses while she's in school.

Miss Furuya attends 16 hours of classes at San Francisco State University and works 27 hours a week at her two jobs.

"A lot of the times I just don't have the 'umph'. It's really hard. It's a matter of juggling all three things at once and budgeting your time so you get everything done in time," she said.

She says even with two jobs she has to make cutbacks. She buys ground beef and chicken. Entertainment is Wednesday night with friends at McDonald's and a monthly movie or dinner with her boyfriend.

Even though her clothes are wearing out, she has to resist the urge to buy.

"I think about that a lot," she said. "I look at the other girls' clothes and wish I could dress as nice."

Miss Furuya says the roughest pressure is meeting class deadlines.

"I fly by it. I do my assignments, like a machine. One thing that keeps me going is that I know it's only for a semester. After that I'll be free for awhile — until next semester," she said.

Greg Decker, a senior in communications and public relations at the University of Missouri at Kansas City, works 25 hours a week in the university's sports information department. Decker did have a basketball scholarship, but because he had no professional aspirations, he decided to get job experience while working for his funds.

"I took this job because I played last year for UMKC as a forward on the basketball team. I just thought this job would be a better opportunity. I wasn't going to go professional or anything like that," Decker said.

Free time is not a commodity.

"Is that a joke?" Decker asks. "I definitely would like to have more time to do things. It doesn't affect your grades so much. You just don't have as much time as you need and resort to short cuts. Like books — you might not get to read them all. You just skim through them and just get the highlights."

Grades are a concern, but Dr. Wayne Breazeale, assistant director of financial aid at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville says working students tend to stay ahead.

"There have been several studies done on the working student, and almost without exception, the studies have always reached the same conclusion — that the student who works part time makes a better grade average than the control groups who do not hold a part time job," Breazeale said.

"I think that speaks a truth abouat human nature. I think we have two speeds. Full speed ahead and dead in the water. The work-study student can tailor his work schedule around his or her classes so we don't really cut them off from study time," Breazeale said.

"My grade point average is better now than it was before I started the business," says Jeff Kolodin, the balloon clown. "I think it's due to the discipline that's needed to do school and the business at once."

Kolodin is a marketing management major at Jacksonville University. Following three hours of classes each morning, he spends his afternoons in business meetings, making deliveries, or thinking up new ways to improve his business.

"The only time my afternoon stops is between three and four o'clock when I watch 'General Hospital'," he said. "At night, I make sure I watch the weather forecast to see if there might be any strong winds.

"That's the only thing we're afraid of in the business — wind and rain," Kolodin said.

For Sheri Gibbons, a recent health science graduate of Texas A&M University, getting a college degree and making ends meet was an uphill struggle.

"I don't ever remember having any free time. You always had to study," she said. "There were several times when I felt like I should just stop and sit out a semester and work until I made the money."

Miss Gibbons worked as a waitress, grocery cashier, and jewelry store clerk while attending college.

A basic grant, some short term loans and her work pay were her sources for tuition, rent, books, groceries, utilities and expenses. She had no car.

"It took me five years plus one summer for my internship. Sometimes I didn't study hard enough and I repeated courses," Miss Gibbons said." I didn't study both because I was too tired and sometimes I just didn't care. If you look at my transcript, I did well in the courses I enjoyed, but the courses I hated I didn't study for."

Even though her grades weren't as good as she would have liked, Miss Gibbons said what she learned was more important.

"I learned more than half the kids here did. Books couldn't teach me what I learned," she said. "I learned how to budget money. How to stretch the dollar. To save electricity. Don't run the air conditioner just because your hot. You've got to sweat and be uncomfortable."

"I don't think I could learned that from books," she said.

Her priorities were rent first, English second.

"My God, you even had to worry about getting sick. Because you couldn't afford to miss work. Thank God I never did get deathly ill," Miss Gibbons said.

The decision to go to college at all was hers.

"I put the idea in my head. It was something I wanted to accomplish because I could say I did it. My parents never said, 'Sheri, we want you to go to college,'" she said.

"I feel like people go to school because it's the thing to do," she said. "But after my first year, it was an obsession. 'I can do this, I've got a goal and I've got to accomplish this.'"

And the degree is her proof.

"Maybe that's what makes it worth it. I accomplished my goal and no matter what the grades were, that degree is hanging on my wall."

Despite her frugal style of living, Miss Gibbons did affiliate with a sorority. It was the one luxury she didn't mind working more to have.

"Some of the girls understood my situation and some didn't. Those who did work and knew the meaning of a dollar knew what I was going through.

"Some girls, and one in particular, didn't even know the meaning of a dollar. She drove her daddy's Mercedes. She didn't know what it meant to have to work, or to skip Saturday football games because she had to work," Miss Gibbons said. "That irritated the hell out of me."

Going out for ice cream was a luxury, and sometimes, so was food.

"I remember the times I had to skip meals. Clothes? I didn't get clothes unless I went home for Christmas and got some. Not even socks. God knows, I hated it when I didn't have socks!

"I had a pair of overalls I wore just about everyday. I think kids in one of my classes didn't know I even owned other clothes."

Getting assignments finished, getting to work on time and worrying about getting a ride to work were the greatest pressures.

"Stress and pressure are two things I will never forget. That's why I'm as happy as I am now, not going to school and having to work. I don't think any kid should have to go through that.

"I got depressed. I would cry and carry on," she said. "But when it started getting that bad, I would just stop and forget it, because it isn't worth it. School just isn't worth it. I know it isn't.

"I don't know how I passed. How I made my grades. I don't remember studying that hard. I was more concerned with how am I going to pay this month's rent rather than how am I going to pass that English test."

But Miss Gibbons has mixed feelings now that she's got her degree.

"I don't know if I'll ever use it. I got it, and I'm glad. I don't know if the degree itself was worth it or what I learned in the process of getting it was worth it," she said.

"In a lot of ways I feel better off than a lot of people. I had more than they did. I had knowledge of something extra. I paid for that degree, so I earned it.

"Daddy didn't pay for it. Daddy didn't earn it."

Fashion In Textures

EYE-CATCHER — The newest look in fashionable evening and holiday attire offers an imaginative combination of textural contrasts, such as this lightweight bronze leather skirt and hand-loomed knitted metallic sweater with an unusual weave of Chantilly lace flounced sleeves. A stylistic flower at the neck heightens the importance of these contrasting textures by incorporating the metallic lace, knitted weave and bronze leather in one elegant ornament. (Outfit by Jayna.)

Clean Freezer In Winter

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Winter is a good time to clean your food freezer because the food can be stored outdoors while you do the work, says a University of Nebraska extension service specialist.

Kathleen Parrott says her advice applies to both manual defrost and frost-free units. The manual type needs cleaning when the frost is one-fourth inch thick. Frost-free models should be cleaned periodically to prevent odor problems, Ms. Parrott says.

For either unit, she says: Unpack the freezer, turn it off and leave the door open about 15 minutes. Wash the insides with ¼ cup of baking soda mixed with 1 quart of water. Scrub stubborn stains with straight baking soda. Rinse and dry. Let the freezer get cold again before reloading, and set a freshly opened box of baking soda in it to help prevent odors.

A Camera Can Win Friends

By SANDY COLTON
AP Newsfeatures

I'm an instant picture freak.

I have been ever since Eddie Adams, a longtime friend and professional photographer, came back from the Amazon years ago with tales of how he won over a wild Indian tribe with his pictures-in-a-minute.

He'd take pictures with his Polaroid camera and give them to the Indians, who watch would in amazement as the images appeared. Pretty soon he had the whole village clammering for shots. In between, he'd take pictures for himself with his 35mm cameras.

I've heard similar tales of winning instant friends with instant pictures from other photographers and tourists visiting China, Russia and the South Pacific. I've used the camera as an icebreaker myself with some of our own Western Indians, who are notoriously camera-shy.

A few weeks ago I was shooting instant photos at a party at the Bleecker Fish and Game Club. Bleecker is an isolated part of the Adirondack mountains in New York, where I'm trying to build a log home.

The people of the area are, for the most part, hard-working farmers, lumberjacks and outdoorsmen — and the spirit of the pioneer of yesterday abounds.

The etched faces of the old-timers clearly outline the tough lives they've led scratching their living from the land. They mistrust strangers and yet, once they get to know you, you couldn't ask for better friends.

Using an instant camera is like being able to play the piano, but easier. You can be the hit of the party.

Both Kodak and Polaroid sell instant cameras. Kodak carries the Colorburst line with prices ranging from around $34 to $96. Polaroid has a series of cameras ranging in price from around $40 to over $200.

Film is expensive, in some cases almost a dollar per picture.

Painter Of The Mighty River

By JOHN DeMERS

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Burny Myrick, who spent more than two decades painting portraits in relative anonymity, has suddenly found a much wider audience for his paintings of the Mississippi River.

It is a painting subject of which he never tires.

At unexpected bends along the mighty waterway, the world is reduced to essentials — river and sky.

"To walk on the levee is to open up the space, to feel I'm part of more than just my little environment," said Myrick. "When I stand in front of one of my paintings, I get the same feeling of space. Can't you see why I love it?"

"In a very real sense I paint not only the river that was but the river that always will be."

A greeting card company is publishing his paintings of the Mississippi. Oxmoor House has brought out the series in gift book form.

"The Timeless River," published by the book division of Southern Living magazine, is a large volume, rich in color reproductions of Myrick's paintings and studies. They depict life on the Mississippi from 1850 to 1900. Excerpts from the works of Mark Twain, the river's earthy poet laureate, anchor the art in time and place while celebrating its sense of the eternal.

Myrick's book evolved from a chance encounter at Oxmoor House in Birmingham, Ala.

"Someone suggested I go to the Southern Living offices to see if they wanted to buy any of my drawings to go in their building," he said. "After they saw my drawings and transparencies, they decided to do a book."

Before the publication of "The Timeless River," Myrick, now 62, was best known as a portrait artist. For more than 20 years he labored at commissions from attorneys, executives and scholars. Any visit to his French Quarter studio turned up two or three works in progress.

Now, however, he concentrates on his long-term project depicting commerce along the Mississippi. He began the series a decade ago and has completed four large paintings and dozens of smaller works.

"I view the project as a series of 16 or 18 pictures pertaining to river commerce between 1850 and 1900," he said. For his series, Myrick has done extensive research along the river as far north as Cincinnati.

"I just take a camera to the archives and make slides of old photographs," said Myrick, who has taken more than 15,000 reference slides in the past 10 years. "I project the pictures up on the wall and take from them what I need for my composition."

Myrick, who was born in Mississippi, would like to create works that appeal to both North and South, but he discovered — especially when dealing with the Civil War — that it was a near impossible endeavor.

"I plan to do a painting of river life during the war," he said. "So I called historian T. Harry Williams and asked him for something both sides would appreciate. He said forget it. You have to take sides.

"But I'm sure I'll come up with something. Blockade running, for instance, would be a colorful subject."

Although the most striking first impression of the river paintings is the wealth of minute detail, the works' most memorable qualities are their rich-hued skies — a throwback to Myrick's World War II experience.

"I studied meteorology while training as a navigator in the Army Air Corps," he said. "It was during this time that I learned about clouds. You know, what causes this or that, and what combinations occur in nature. You can tell I'm not just making it up."

Myrick's dedication to painting is matched only by his affection for his favorite subject.

"I used to leave my gallery to fly, to see the land so wide open," he said. "Now that I can walk along the levee, I no longer get the urge to fly.

"From the levee, space is everything under the special Southern skies, with colors and cloud formations you'll find nowhere else. Painting these scenes is more than illustration. There's emotion in these shapes and colors."

OAXACA, Mexico (UPI) — The southern state of Oaxaca will celebrate its 450th anniversary next April and local hotels urge visitors to make arrangements now for special packages being offered, the Tourism Ministry has announced.

Among attractions in and near Oaxaca city are the ruins of Mitla and Monte Alban, the State Museum featuring pre-Colombian gold treasures and the Tamayo Museum containing ancient artifacts donated by Mexican painter Rufino Tamayo.

Brazil's 1980 agricultural output grew by about 6.8 percent as a result of incentives to agricultural production and good weather, according to the Inter-American Development Bank. But despite a recovery in agricultural production, imports of food by Brazil increased because of greater demand.

Ritualistic Indian 'Vision Quest' Can Help Some People

By TODD R. EASTHAM

NOVATO, Calif. (UPI) — The ritualistic "vision quest" of the American Indian is being used to help young people and adults cope with the pressures of too-rapid or too-radical changes in lifestyle.

The core of the experience is a three-day, solo encounter with oneself and the wilderness. Solitude, silence, abstinence and nature are the teachers.

VISION QUEST . . . The ritualistic "vision quest" of the American Indian is being used to help young people and adults cope with the pressures of too-rapid or too-radical changes in lifestyles. The core of the experience is a three-day, solo encounter with oneself and the wilderness as here in a mountainous area near Novato, California. (UPI Photo)

A kind of death and rebirth occurs on the third night when the solitary seeker arranges a circle of stones — a symbolic tomb and womb to be entered at sunset — from which he emerges renewed at dawn and prepares to take whatever insight he has gained back into the world.

"Some people go out and gain insight into themselves," says Steven Foster, director and co-founder of Rites of Passage, the group that conducts the vision quest. "Others gain a kind of mystical illumination. They see."

Rites of Passage started as a federally-funded adolescent drug abuse and family service agency. It now works with people of all ages as well as problem kids.

The vision quest experience — including food, transportation and advance training — costs $300 for adults and $150 for students. The wild, desolate mountain and desert lands of California and Nevada are its usual setting.

"When we take people away from their televisions and telephones they confront these monsters," says Foster, 43. "They learn that their boredom is a very fertile place where creativity lies, and loneliness is the teacher of loving."

Every year, some 250 people enroll in vision quest "courses." About half of them are young people, many of whom Foster characterizes as "at-risk youth."

Adolescents with criminal records, drug or alcohol problems, from broken or loveless homes are referred by teachers, parents or law enforcement officers.

"Sometimes we see transformations in kids in trouble," says Foster. "All they need sometimes is one trip to get them on the right path."

Other times, the first experience leaves them more unhappy than ever. "They say, 'No. I don't want to come back to this,'" Foster says. "Sometimes they get in even worse trouble."

In such cases, the group employs other non-traditional therapy and counseling drawn from native American traditions. The "Sweat Lodge" and "Medicine Circle," a night-long marathon of singing, chanting and talk, are two of these.

Carl Couch, superintendent of the San Rafael school district, said the district's schools have cooperated with the group by permitting its representatives to make presentations to both students and parents.

"There are some kids that are uniquely ready for that kind of experience and they profit from it," he said.

"We've had wards of the court and other kids in the community go on these ... wilderness things," said Dave Rogers, director of juvenile field services for the Marin County Probation Department. "Overall the experiences of the youngsters we have sent has been positive."

The success of this project is mirrored in other groups in Boulder, Colo., New York state, Washington state and Los Angeles that now offer similarly-inspired wilderness encounters.

Ottawa became the capital of Canada in 1858. Ottawa was selected by Queen Victoria because its location away from the United States border made it safe from enemy attack.

Senior New York Lady Is London Celebrity

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Not all youthful dreams come true in the way it's happening in London these days for an aging New Yorker named Helene Hanff. All because of her love affair with a bookshop.

"It's the miracle of my life," she said in her London hotel.

"At an age when all the returns are in and all the chances gone, it is just unbelievable."

Suddenly in her late 60s or 70s — her age "is nobody's business" — this tiny, vivacious woman is a celebrity 3,000 miles from home.

There's a new play in the West End about her long-distance 20-year love affair, and Helene Hanff took a first-night bow after watching herself on stage. She's already a nationwide favorite as the voice of New York through her monthly "letters" for BBC radio. They've even put up a plaque at the site she made famous.

"I don't believe things like that happen," she said, waving and shrugging at the same time. "Just because a working stiff like me wrote a book."

But that book intoxicated the English. It was "84 Charing Cross Road," a minor masterpiece of irresistible appeal. It and the play trace the peculiar affection between Miss Hanff in New York and the secondhand bookshop whose London address forms the title.

All her life Helene Hanff has been a writer — books about New York, about herself, articles in New Yorker magazine, television scripts and children's history books. But it was "84" that transformed everything and is still making her dreams come true.

"I used to have two dreams," she said, putting down her cigarette holder. "To be a famous playwright like Eugene O'Neill and to see the England of my beloved books.

"And now there I am on stage, even though somebody else wrote the adaptation. And here I am in England for the sixth time."

The extraordinary twists fate has dealt her began in all innocence. She wrote a letter in 1949 ordering a book from the London bookshop called Marks and Co.

The reply began: "Dear Madam." The culture clash was instant.

On one side, the anonymous, polite, traditional English. On the other, a bubbling American who even now is an archetypal New Yorker — fluent of speech, mixing sophistication with childlike enthusiasm, bouncing as if the sofa cushions were trampolines.

She fired off uninhibited letters ordering — among her irreverent, stream-of-consciouness chat — serious English books from Pepys to the sermons of John Donne.

"I require a book of love poems with spring coming on," she wrote. "No Keats or Shelley. Send me poets who can make love without slobbering."

British "reserve" never had a chance.

Marks and Co. employees astonished by her letters suddenly found food parcels arriving, and nylons, and things still-rationed Englishmen almost had forgotten. Slowly "Dear Madam" changed to "Dear Miss Hanff" and then, against company policy, to "Dear Helene." Return gifts and urgent invitations flowed the other way.

"I wrote to one man, Frank Doel," Helene recalls now. "But he showed the letters around, and the girl who wrapped the books stuck in a note, so I wrote to her, and she showed it to someone else. Pretty soon I was writing to everybody."

In 20 years none of them met face to face, yet Helene still cherishes friendships the letters began. When death and the bookshop's closure ended the affair, Miss Hanff collected the letters as a kind of memorial.

"What happened when it came out I'll never recover from," Miss Hanff said.

The book brought her to London at last. The BBC made "84" into a television play, and that brought her back again. That led to her radio "letters from New York" which prompt huge responses and have made her more famous here than at home. Now comes the play and the plaque.

Turns To Coffee

By TODD CARREL
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japan, the land that perfected the tea ceremony, today carries out many of its social and business rituals over cups of coffee at one of the thousands of coffee shops, found on almost every city corner.

This island nation has become a bastion of coffee drinkers — last year it imported 192,000 tons of raw coffee beans — and the "kisaten" or coffeehouse caters to their every mood and need.

There are 140,000 of them in this country of 117 million people — one shop for every 836 people. About 18,000 of them are in Tokyo alone, said Hisao Fujiu, editor of the monthly magazine Coffee Shop Management.

Why so many?

"You know the 'rabbit hutch' term that refers to Japanese homes that are so small there's no possibility for socialization," said Fujiu. "Well, since Japanese don't bring people to their homes to entertain, they take them out."

For those without the money or taste for expensive bars and restaurants, the kisaten is the ideal meeting place.

Fujiu, who is an authority on these establishments — "I visit a maximum of 16 kisatens a day" — said one reason people frequented them was that they provided a modicum of social democracy in a highly stratified society.

Kisatens are intimate places, a refuge from the winter cold and a cool retreat from the summer heat. They are places where anyone can sit and sip coffee for about 250 yen ($1.10) a cup, a stiff price paid as much for the atmosphere as the coffee. Refills are almost never free, and depending on the frills, the price of a cup can soar to 500 yen ($2.20) or more.

Their interiors range from artificial brick, to wood, to hi-tech concrete. Most take a stab at intimacy, with low chairs around tiny tables, or high-backed chairs tucked in dark corners. Some have installed video games to serve as tables. For solo patrons, there is usually a stack of comic books.

Coffee connoisseurs can often choose from a long list of beans such as Kilimanjaro, Blue Mountain and Colombian.

Major Problems Lie Ahead For Panama's Canal

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — When Panama takes over the Panama Canal in 17 years it likely will find the 50-mile waterway unable to meet traffic demands. The canal can't be expanded and a shortage of water could diminish operation of its locks.

Some equipment will be nearly a century old, and the canal's virtual monopoly on fast, cheap transit of ships between the Atlantic and the Pacific, already slipping, faces further challenges.

Fernando Manfredo Jr., a Panamanian who now is deputy administrator of the canal, said in an interview that the costs of meeting needs past the year 2000 would be so high that the treaties giving the canal to Panama would have to be replaced by a new agreement.

Up to 40 ships a day now can make the transit, and since the S.S. Ancon made the first trip in 1914 more than 500,000 ships have carried 3 billion tons of freight from ocean to ocean. Tonnage now is four times what it was it was in 1950 and should top 185,000 tons for 1981, a record.

The canal chops 8,000 miles from the New York to Los Angeles route around the tip of South America. From New York to Japan it is 3,000 miles shorter than the next best route, through Egypt's Suez Canal.

But Panama is building an oil pipeline from the Atlantic to the Pacific that Manfredo said will take all of the Alaska North Slope oil trade and cost the canal some $40 million a year, 11 percent of the canal revenues.

"Partly because of that we are planning a rate increase, probably in October, 1982, which is about when the pipeline should be ready," he said.

The amount of the increase hasn't been decided, he added, but will have to meet operational costs and still keep the canal competitive.

Ships now pay $1.67 per Panama Canal Ton, the equivalent of 100 cubic feet of marketable below-deck space. The average fee is about $16,000 for the 10-hour trip.

Oil shipped in supertankers now has to be transfered to smaller ships for the trip through the canal, a slow and costly process.

Large ships are causing other headaches. A ton of coal in the largest ships can be sent from New York to Japan around Africa's Cape of Good Hope as cheaply as through the canal in smaller ships even though the African route is 5,600 miles longer.

Larger ships take more time to pass through the canal and often have daylight restrictions. Only one at a time can pass through the Gaillard Cut, the eight-mile-long, 500-foot-wide narrowest point of the canal.

New lights are being installed on the locks to extend transit hours for the larger ships, dredges are moving a million cubic yards of dirt to straighten out a bottleneck curve and new locomotives and tugs are on order to help speed transits. Plans are being made to widen the Gaillard Cut.

But all of this, the Panama Canal Commission estimates, will handle the projected traffic demands only through the year 2000, or 2005 at the latest, increasing maximum capacity to 48 ships a day.

"The widening of the Gaillard Cut is the last major project we can do to increase the volume of the canal," Manfredo said.

After that, it would take a third set of locks to expand more.

This would increase capacity by 11,000 ships a year and handle projected demands demands through 2050, according to Manfredo.

However, the treaties giving the canal to Panama specify that Panama receive it free of debt, and the locks would cost more than could be recovered by Dec. 31, 1999, when Panama gets it, he said.

"The canal was built out of American military considerations and to save money for the American merchant marine," Manfredo said, "but all countries use it.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Well, folks, the holidays are over. Tomorrow things start getting back to usual. All of us, children and adults alike, are either gearing down or gearing up for a normal work schedule, all of us, that is, except the dolls.

Now I must admit that a few of this year's models do have to work for a living. They're either walking on tiptoes, crawling to the head of the stairs before a miraculous stop, clapping their hands and singing "Melancholy Baby" in time, or performing some other earthshaking feat.

But most dolls nowadyays are just the opposite. They don't work for the children; they require the children and their parents to work for them. One of them gets severe diaper rash which resembles empitigo and calls for immediate attention. One of them performs all the other bodily functions of a baby, and as Meg is wont to say, yukko to that.

The one Meg wanted from Santa this year (and was talked out of) has hair which grows so fast she needs haircuts once every two hours. Unfortunately, she also has a tendancy to go bald and require a hair transplant under the supervision of an adult, who in this case was grossly unsypathetic to plastic people's cosmetic difficulties.

At least, Barbie,, the darling of the pampered set, has no such problems. In fact, the only cosmetic difficulty I've noticed is a tendency for her suntan to flake. That isn't to say I'm not as prejudiced against her as I am against the rest of the lot. I have strong objections to her figure. The only other shape I'v seen like it was recently featured on an evening news spot about the missile buildup in central Europe.

But when someone gave Meg a Barbie for her birthday, I decided that the only humanitarian thing to do was to accept her as part of the family with the minimum amount of complaining.

Two days passed before I found how little regard Barbie had for my compassion.

"Barbie is lonely," Meg told me. "She needs company while I'm at school."

"She has Zachary," I said.

"Zachary, yukko!" The last time Zachary got hold of her he bit her bikini in two. What she needs is a real boyfriend. She needs Ken."

"Every woman needs Ken, but that doesn't mean she gets him. Tell Barbie she'll just have to wait her turn."

Meg looked doleful. "Well, at least let's get her some clothes. It's cold in this house, and since Zachary got hold of her, all she has to wear is her sunglasses."

I was beginning to perceive that a parent could easily go into debt catering to Barbie's needs. So when Meg received some money for Christmas, I jumped at her suggestion that she spend it on Barbie. Here, at last, was an opportunity to teach her a lesson in Barbie economics.

But I was more flabbergasted than she at the range and price of Barbie accessories. Not only did Barbie have a wardrobe to rival that of Raquel Welch; she had a dream house, a car, a camper and a swimming pool.

Meg sucked in her breath at the splendor of Barbie's lifestyle.

"Oooo, Mommy, don't you wish you were Barbie?!"

I have to confess, the thought had crossed my mind.

Resignations, Tragic Deaths, And Hopeful Plans For The Future

A Wrap-Up Of Top 1981 Local Events

Never has the familiar sentiment, "I can't believe another year has passed," seemed more compelling than in 1981.

While youngsters dreaded the long wait from January until another Christmas, adults struggled to keep the days from passing too fast and wondered how birthdays could seem so close together.

But father time has again leafed through his 12-page calendar and made the events and happenings of each day only memories; some pleasing and satisfying to recall, others bitter and in many cases tragic.

News events, as sure as taxes, unfolded each day and filled the pages of The Daily Reflector in another fast-paced year.

CHANCELLOR RESIGNS

When reports surfaced in August that Dr. Thomas Brewer, chancellor at East Carolina University, was interested in the presidency of West Virginia University, ECU Board of Trustees chairman Ashley Futrell expressed public disappointment that Brewer had not notified the board of his interest in another job.

While Brewer, who came here in 1978, issued a public statement saying he remained dedicated to ECU, the West Virginia report was followed by a series of events that culminated in the chancellor submitting his resignation.

In early September, Brewer acknowledged that he had received an invitation from WVU to visit the university but he called the implication that he was actively seeking the vacant presidential post "absurd."

Pressure on Brewer mounted as other trustees expressed dissatisfaction over published reports that Brewer had applied for the position without telling the board. Futrell said no formal action would be taken until he could talk with William Friday, president of the consolidated University of North Carolina system.

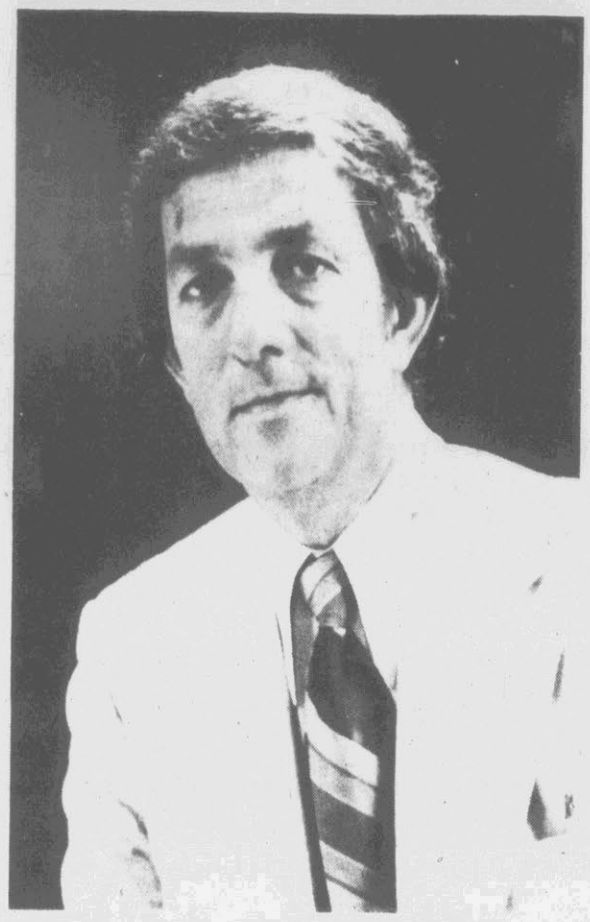
Brewer's situation remained unsettled after the Futrell-Friday meeting but the following week he resigned, ending a three-year administration marked by unrest among faculty leaders and conflicts resulting from his interest in other jobs. Although he interviewed at WVU, he failed to land the post.

Brewer remained as administrative head at ECU until his resignation could be placed before the UNC Board of Governors. Friday accepted the resignation and said he would meet with the board of trustees here to help organize a search committee for a new chancellor.

The naming of an executive secretary to coordinate the search committee squelched speculation that a wave of support for Brewer might lead to reconsideration of his resignation. On Oct. 12, Futrell named a 15-member committee to begin the chancellor search and on Nov. 12, Futrell indicated an interim chancellor might be appointed by the first of the year.

OTHER RESIGNATIONS

Turbulence at ECU also led to the July resignation of Thomas Willis as director of the Regional Development Institute. Willis, who headed the RDI for 17 years, gave up his job because of what he called "persistent harrassment" and interference by Don Lemish, vice chancellor of institutional advancement and planning. Tim Brinn, senior staff member at RDI since 1970, was named to succeed Willis as institute director.



DR. THOMAS B. BREWER

In October, Lemish resigned, citing anonymous telephone threats and the uncertainty of work under a new chancellor. Douglas Moore was named to serve as acting vice chancellor, effective Jan. 5.

Walter M. Bortz, director of admissions at the university, also resigned his post, effective Jan. 31.

DEATHS

Tragedies occurred frequently during the year as the number of highway deaths in Greenville and Pitt County rose sharply over 1980 figures and deaths as a result of fire also increased over the previous year.

Eleven traffic-related deaths occurred within the city limits, including multiple fatalities on June 24 when a Pitt Community College nursing instructor and two 10-year-old passengers in her car, one of them her daughter, died as a result of a collision at the Red Banks Road-Charles Boulevard intersection. Mrs. Arlene Rhodes Collins died at Pitt Memorial Hospital; the two young girls in her car died at the scene.

Less than a week later, 17-year-old John D. Bright of Ayden was killed when he was struck by a vehicle as he pushed a stalled car only a short distance from where the Collins accident had occurred. The driver of the other vehicle was charged with driving under the influence and death by vehicle.

Traffic fatalities on Pitt roads totaled 22 during the year, up from 15 in 1980. Two Greenville residents, Alfred Chandler Meeks and Emily Ward Cornwell, died in a June 22 wreck in the Eastern Pines section that began the tragic series of late June accidents in the area. A June 20 wreck in Columbus County took the life of 27-year-old Rebecca Ledford of Greenville.

Area deaths due to fires rose from one in 1980 to six during the year and all five of the county blazes involved mobile homes. Three children died in an early morning blaze in April that destroyed a mobile dwelling near Bethel. One fire-related death occurred in Greenville in October.

Other deaths that occurred in the area included: H. B. Sugg, who served for 41 years as principal of the Farmville school named in his honor; Dr. Roman Laubert, associate professor of physics at ECU; Dr. Edward Carter, who was associated with the school of education at ECU for 21 years as chairman and professor;

Samuel A. Whitehurst, former Pitt County sheriff; W.W. (Bill) Speight, attorney for Pitt County for over 30 years and president of Greenville Industries Inc.; Johnnie Harrell, retired chief of the campus police at ECU; Col. A E Dubber, retired executive director of the Greenville Redevelopment Commission and Housing Authority; and N.O. Van Nortwick Jr., president of Northside Lumber Co. and former city alderman.

David LaFone, manager of JJ's Music Hall here, was shot to death in New Orleans as he and a companion sat in a vehicle in the city's French Quarter. Two New Orleans residents were held in connection with the murder-robbery.

OTHER FIRES

Several facilities in the area suffered major damages or were destroyed by fire, among them: Privateer boat manufacturing facility near Washington, co-owned by Warren Wilkerson of Greenville; a storage facility at Home Builders Supply on Dickinson Avenue; Kash & Karry in Ayden ($175,000 in damages); S. Price Furniture Gallery on Dickinson Avenue; Carolina Ortho-Prosthetics on Elizabeth Street; Highway 43 Body Shop north of Greenville, where four cars were destroyed or heavily damaged; and Beddingfield Pharmacy, where medium damage occurred.

MIXED BEVERAGES

Few stories in Greenville were discussed as heatedly as the controversial liquor-by-the-drink issue. Spirited campaigns by opponents and proponents of the mixed beverage proposition came to a head in February when local voters decided the issue. With 45 percent of the voter registration taking part in the referendum, the issue passed by an overwhelming 4,148 to 2,599 margin.

As the year ended, it was difficult to gauge just what impact mixed beverage sales had on the area in the 10 months following the referendum. It was pointed out that the sale of liquor for mixed drinks accounted for about 8 percent of the total Pitt ABC system business.

FIRST DOCTORS

In May, 28 students received their degrees as the first graduates of the ECU School of Medicine. The graduating class, representing the first medical school enrollment here in 1977, received the first doctorates ever granted by the university in any discipline.

Later in the month, the medical school was awarded full four-year accreditation from the Liaison Committee on Medical Accreditation. The national accrediting agency also granted the school permission to increase its freshman enrollment to 52 students this past fall.

It was announced in August that the medical unit will receive $5.3 million to fund a radiation therapy center as part of a $39.2 million capital project fund budgeted for the next two years by the General Assembly for the UNC system.

Progress continued on the Brody Medical Science Building which will house the school of medicine. Work on the 451,000 square foot multi-story facility, located near the hospital, began in 1979. Occupancy is expected in mid-summer.

US 264 IMPROVEMENTS

While the status of proposed improvements to U.S. 264 between Wilson and Greenville appeared to change on a regular basis due to critical funding deficiencies, the year ended on a positive note for longtime supporters of the highway issue.

On Dec. 18, the State Board of Transportation approved a revised 1982-91 highway improvement program that includes four-laning between the two key cities. While the new plans called for a limited access corridor, interchanges were eliminated from the original drawings and replaced by grade crossings.

CITY ELECTIONS

The Nov. 3 municipal elections resulted in the return of former Mayor Percy Cox to a familiar seat and the seating of three new City Council members.

Cox defeated incumbent Don McGlohon, who sought a second term. Incumbents Judy Greene, William Hadden and Louis Clark were successful in re-election bids while Dick McKee failed to win a second term. New members elected were Janice Buck (who led the ticket), Stuart Shinn and George Pugh. Joe Taft Jr. and Clarence Gray did not seek re-election.

MAYOR PERCY COX

Ed Carter, who trailed the sixth-place candidate by only 20 votes, requested the Pitt County Board of Elections to call for a recount but his petition was denied following a local hearing. A subsequent appeal of the county decision to the State Board of Elections was also denied and Carter did not pursue his appeal further.

FUNDING PHASE-OUT

In March, county commissioners were told that a legislative research committee would recommend a phased reduction in state appropriations for the county's model health department program. An appropriation of $481,000 reflecting a reduction of $144,000 from current funding levels, was recommended for the department for 1981-82. Only $50,000 was recommended for fiscal 1982-83. Under the proposal, all state-funded positions at the department were turned over to the county on July 1.

CENTER PROPOSED

Eighteen local physicians proposed in April the creation of a new out-patient medical center for one-day surgical procedures that would allow patients to check in, have an operation and return home the same day. Surgical Properties Ltd. was formed to establish and operate Eastern Carolina Surgical Center. The move spurred interest in the possibility of establishing a private hospital.

DISMISSED

Alton Warren was dismissed in April from his job as the city's chief building official. Warren, who had been suspended in March, had charged that he was suspended after he claimed his supervisor was forcing him to violate state building codes in occupying the city's Community Building.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT

The Greenville Board of Education voted in May not to retain Glenn Cox as superintendent. Cox had been associated with the city schools system for 14 years and left his post on June 30 with 28 years of credit toward retirement. The school board named Dr. Delma C. Blinson, principal at Garner High School, to succeed Cox.

POWER AGENCY

In late July, the board of directors of N.C. Municipal Power Agency No. 3, representing 36 eastern cities, accepted engineering and feasibility proposals that would give the agency part ownership (16-18 percent) in nine power generating units owned by Carolina Power & Light. The proposal indicated savings to the 36 member cities would total some $2.4 billion in electric costs by the year 2003, with projected savings to Greenville Utilities customers by 2003 estimated at over $517 million.

GUCO adopted a resolution approving the power agency's agreement with CP&L which will make the agency the city's prime source of wholesale electric energy. The City Council then adopted an ordinance authorizing the city to participate in the purchase-ownership plan.

On Wednesday, Dec. 30, Greenville and 10 of the other 32 municipalities participating in the agreement began receiving electric power deliveries from the agency. The switch culminated over 16 years of efforts by the state's municipally owned electric utilities to establish their own self-directed power supply agency.

The Utilities Commission also voted to move ahead with local funding on the final design phase for a proposed new wastewater treatment facility.

RETIREMENTS NEW POSTS

A number of local citizens retired from key posts during the year, among them: Reese Hart as executive director of Pitt Development Commission; Elizabeth Copeland after 26 years as director of Greenville and county library services; Paul Nethercutt after 35 years in fire-rescue service; and Howard Dawkins after 13 years as executive director of Eastern Carolina Vocational Center.

Several important posts were filled by area residents, including: Bob Griffin, chairman of Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce; Janice Falkner as the first woman in the history of the state to be selected executive director of the N.C. Democratic Party; Anne McGaughey of Farmville as the first woman to serve on the Pitt County Board of Education;

Fred Webb as chairman of city board of North Carolina National Bank; Dr. Ed Monroe, named to National Advisory Environmental Health Science Council; Willie Nelms, as director of Sheppard Memorial Library; Robert Dunn as executive director of Pitt Development Commission; Thomas Shea, re-elected chairman of GUCO; Ray Boleman named city executive for Planters National Bank; David J. Whichard II named again by the General Assembly to the UNC Board of Governors;

Jon Tinglestad elected chairman of city school board; Larry Mallard as new NCNB city executive; Sen. Vernon White named to a six-year term on N.C. Board of Agriculture; Clifton Everett Sr. to a third term as chairman of Pitt Community College board of trustees; Therese G. Lawler as acting dean of ECU School of Nursing; Burney Tucker as chairman of Board of County Commissioners; and Daneel L. le Roux as executive director of the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center.

CIVIC CENTER

County Commissioners voted in September to hire a firm to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of constructing a civic center in the county. Project funding was provided by the Coastal Plains Regional Commission, with the study expected to take some 19 weeks to complete.

BOARD ABOLISHED

City officials met with Redevelopment Commission representatives in October to discuss dissolution of the agency in view of the near-completion status of its urban renewal activities. The City Council then set Jan. 11 as the date of abolishment.

INSTITUTE CREATED

ECU announced the establishment in October of the Rural Education Institute, which will focus resources and research on identifying and solving problems facing schools in rural areas of the state and region. The REI is the first of its kind in the state.

FUNDING NEEDED

Construction of a $5.1 million recreational and housing facility for the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center remained on schedule, it was announced. However, a fund-raising drive to secure local money to match federal and state grants was still in progress as the year ended.

NEW BED TOWER

The new bed tower at Pitt Memorial was dedicated in ceremonies on Nov. 23. The addition provides 138 new beds, for a total capacity of 556 when fully staffed.

Pitt Memorial took on an increasing regional role during the year as roughly 50 percent of the 18,367 admissions involved patients from outside the county. The hospital, one of the area's major industries, employed nearly 2,000 in 1981 and had an annual payroll of $26 million.

SPORTS

Tootie Robbins, senior offensive tackle on East Carolina's football team, made the Associated Press' second team All-America squad.

Ayden-Grifton High School reached the eastern finals of the state 3-A football playoffs before losing to eventual state champion Burlington Williams.

Rose High Schol posted a 22-2 mark to win the regular season Big-East baseball title but lost in the first playoff round to Wilmington Hoggard.

BUSINESS DESTROYED ... Pitt firemen battled a December blaze that leveled an automobile body repair facility on Highway 43. Exploding chemicals sent flames high above the trees.

The Pitt County area was saddened when Reginald Fields, 18, senior member of the Farmville Central High School basketball team, collapsed and died during a pickup game on Dec. 21 at a recreation center in Farmville. An autopsy listed the cause of death as a viral infection of the heart.

Ronald Vincent assumed duties as head football coach at Rose High School after Dave Bumgarner experienced heart problems and gave up the post.

ECU applied for and was approved for membership in the newly aligned seven-team Eastern College Athletic Conference, competing in basketball and baseball.

For the first time, ECU's Lady Pirates were ranked in the AP's top 20 basketball poll and eventually reached 17th in the nation, the highest ranking ever for an ECU team competing on the Division I level.

SUMMER STORM

A vicious, all night storm lashed the area in August, pouring nearly four and a half inches of rain that resulted in flooding in several areas. The storm destroyed five Greenville Utilities transformers and GUCO crews were hampered in their repair efforts by high water, lightning, poor visibility and continued heavy rains.

Home Injuries Climbing

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Are you meeting some or all of your heating needs with a wood stove, fireplace insert or wood and coal burner this year?

If so, you've joined millions of Ameicans who have installed such dollars-saving devices over the past few years. The savings are there. But there are some drawbacks, as well, notably in the area of home safety.

Injuries from home heat-related accidents rose substantially by 1980, according to one authority. And consumer education about safety ought to be the wood-stove industry's greatest concern this year, in the opinion of Jack Chase, a designer of floor and wall shields for wood stoves and a spokesman for Hearth Shield Co. of Lebanon, N. J.

According to Chase, home heat-related injuries rose to nearly 5,000 in 1980, compared with 600 such injuries in 1974. He said that during 1980 statistics indicated 9,000 homes fires had been traced to wood or coal stoves and more than 100 had died from such fire accidents.

Accidents are likely to occur in three basic categories, some authorities say. They include: roof and chimney fires from creosote build-up or construction flaws; fires that occur in the immediate vicinity of the stove or burner, and burns from carelessness when opening a stove.

All fires produce creosote — a gummy resin that results from incomplete combustion. You can minimize the creosote problem by getting smoke up the chimney fast. "Don't run any more stove pipe that you need and burn your stove hot for half an hour a day," advises Chase.

Other factors contributing to creosote build-up, according to the U.S. Cooperative Extension Service, include placement of the chimney flue on an exterior wall or outdoors where it will be subject to constant cold, using unseasoned softwood, and burning wet wood in a smoldering fire.

Some creosote will form, no matter what you do. But a hot fire made with well-seasoned dry hardwood will keep the problem under control. Clean your chimney at least once a year with a chimney brush or have it done by professionals and have the chimney checked by an expert from time to time, advises Northeast Regional Agricultural Engineering Services in its publication, "Burning Wood." The booklet is available from Cooperative Extension Service offices in most states for $1.25.

Proper installation of the stove is a basic first step. The place to start is with the local building department which can advise on installation requirements.

"Have the stove installed by a professional, inspected by the building department, and notify your insurance company you have put in a wood stove," advises Bob Durkin, a suburban New York wood-stove dealer.

Professional installation will add from $75 to $125 to a stove's cost, said Durkin, but for most families it will be a worthwhile expenditure.

Fire and building codes call for placing the stove or furnace at least 36 inches from a combustible wall and the stove pipe at least 18 inches from an unprotected ceiling or wall. Asbestos and metal shields for floor and wall used in conjunction with air space may reduce these clearances to some extent.

The Cooperative Extension Service says maintaining the proper distance from combustible surfaces and protecting those surfaces from continually reheating and drying is important. A new wall will burn at between 500 and 700 degrees F. A wall that is heated and dried out many times over a long period may ignite at between 200 and 250 degrees.

A simple test, according to Durkin, is to put your hand against the wall surface behind the woodstove. "If it's hot to the touch, it's too hot," he said.

Once your chimney is checked out, your stove is properly installed and you have a regular maintenance program, there's one more potential hazard to consider. That's simple carelessness.

"You become confident that you know your stove and then you open it up to feed it and it bites you. It happens to me, too," said Chase.

To minimize the danger, wear gloves that protect the back of the hands and arms, and exercise caution when opening the stove or furnace.

Artist Uses Primitive Firing For Her Pottery

RIVERSIDE, Ariz. (AP) — A few miles west of here, artist Susan Wooten has her "workshop" — a secluded, sandy bank of the Gila River.

The river water, a few mesquite branches and a supply of dry cow dung from the open range are all Ms. Wooten needs to fire the pottery and other clay objects she creates at her Kearny home.

The 34-year-old artist practices primitive firing, a technique used thousands of years ago by Indian craftsmen of the Southwest. Rather than heating her clay creations in a conventional kiln, she fires them in a dung-covered depression in the earth.

The technique was developed in the Southwest at least 2,000 years ago by the Hohokan and Mogollon cultures. Many native craftsmen still use the ancient method, but few non-Indian artists in Arizona use it.

Prehistoric craftsmen burned wood and outcrops of coal to fire their pottery, until the Spanish introduction of cattle and sheep in the late 16th century provided a continuous supply of dung.

Ms. Wooten digs a shallow pit about 3 feet in diameter, lets a mesquite fire burn in it until she has a glowing bed of coals, and places her pottery on it. She then piles dung directly over the pottery, enclosing the pit.

"I just pile it on and light it, and it takes care of itself," she said.

Another advantage of the unusual fuel is the color — usually violet — that it sometimes gives to the ceramic surfaces.

"I can't get those colors with wood or grass, but I can get them with dung," depending on what minerals the cattle have digested, she said.

Color is what the primitive firing is all about. By positioning the dung to allow more oxygen to reach the pottery, Ms. Wooten brings out orange and peach colors. And by sprinkling commercially prepared steer manure over the burning dung, she creates blue-black colors.

The type of clay used also helps determine color. Although clay can be purchased in stores, Ms. Wooten prefers to find most of hers.

Ms. Wooten works with two varieties she has found — a blue clay from the San Pedro River bank near Dudleyville, and a reddish-brown clay she digs near here.

Primitive firing has fascinated her since childhood, when her father, an Arizona cotton farmer, used to bring home primitive pot shards unearthed as he plowed his fields, but it was much later — after she stopped teaching to strike out on her own as an artist — that she learned the ancient craft.

Ms. Wooten builds her pieces by hand, rather than throwing them on a potter's wheel. Her work has included wall plates, bowls, jars, wind chimes and murals.

COAL BURNING STOVES

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Anthracite coal is used in coal-burning stoves for home heating.

A typical home here when heated by a coal burning stove requires 2 tons of anthracite for an entire heating season.

When a door begins to stick, it rarely gets immediate attention. That's because the home owner knows that removing it and planing one of the edges is a nuisance.

Planing a door is an especially nasty chore if it is the top or bottom that requires planing, since then you are going against the grain and risking the possibility of splintering the wood. It's a remedy that should only be a last resort. Once some wood has been taken off in the area where the door sticks, a change in the weather may dry out the wood and leave an unwelcome gap.

Balky doors would be given much quicker attention if it were generally known that the most likely cause is one or more of the hinges. Sometimes nothing more than tightening one of the hinge screws will correct the trouble.

To find a screw that is even the least bit loose, move the door back and forth several times, carefully observing whether there is any movement. Be sure to check every screw on every hinge.

If you find a screw that is loose, tighten it and then go through the door-movement routine once again. If the same screw is still loose, take it out.

While replacing it with a longer or larger-diameter screw will sometimes work, it is better to fill the hole with wood putty or plastic wood, steel wool or broken pieces of toothpick. Reset the screw at once if you use steel wool or toothpick bits. If you use a wood filler, wait until it hardens.

While this will correct the condition most of the time, occasionally you will have to reset one or more of the hinges. A hinge must be reset more deeply if the door is sticking on the side where the lock is. If the binding is on the hinge side, then the hinge is already set too deeply into the recess or mortise in the wood. In that event, shim the hinge; that is, place a layer of cardboard under the leaf and set the screw right through the hinge and the cardboard. One way to determine exactly where the repair is necessary is to place a wedge or something similar under the door to get it into the proper position. Examine each hinge carefully, and common sense will tell you where the slack must be taken up.

In an extreme case, the door is warped so badly that none of these measures will work. The door can be straightened out only by removing it and placing it on sawhorses. With the bowed side up, place weights on the door. Leave it that way for as long as necessary to get out the warp, but you will have to inspect it every 12 hours.

Be certain you remove the weights as soon as the door appears straight. Leave them there too long and you may have a warp the opposite way.

When you have a situation where planing the door edges is necessary, do it very carefully. Splintering occurs when you go against the grain, so follow the general principle of planing by cutting on the forward stroke and lifting the plane as you draw it backwards. Plane from the edges toward the center. Be sure the door is well anchored as you do the planing.

Sometimes a door will move easily without binding, yet not stay closed. This means the latch is not setting properly, if at all, in the strike plate. Resetting the strike plate then will be necessary. When a repair of this kind cannot be made immediately, tie a small towel or handkerchief or any piece of cloth around one knob and then around the other. When you shut the door, the cloth will keep it in place.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Here's the Answer

Q. — Our house has louvers at both ends of the attic. Tey keep the air circulating in the hot weather and prevent a heat buildup. The attic is not finished and is used only for storage. There is insulation in the attic floor so that heat doesn't escape from the regular living quarters. What I want to know is whether we can keep the louvers closed during the winter. It seems to me they let in a lot of cold air. Am I right?

A. — No. The air that the opened louvers lets in is necessary to prevent condensation forming under the roof. Louvers should be kept open during all seasons of the year.

Q. — Is it true some woods can be glued more easily than others? This question came up recently during a discussion about gluing maple. One person said maple is not easy to attach with adhesive.

A. — Yes, some woods can be glued more easily than others. As for maple, it depends on the kind of maple. What is known as soft maple can be glued fairly well. Hard maple is more difficult to hold together with an adhesive, but even that can be handled successfully if sufficient care is taken.

Q. — I know that most authorities suggest painting ceilings with a roller, but I have painted them all my life with brushes and I still like to do it that way. However, I still haven't been able to conquer the problem of paint dripping down the brush handle. Is there any way to avoid that?

A. — Some paint dealers carry gadgets that can be attached to your wrist to catch drippings or you can make one of your own. Better yet, minimize the drippings by the way you handle the brush. Dip the bristles into the paint just about an inch. The brush won't handle as much paint at one time, but there will be less dripping. Also, wipe the bristles on the rim of the container more often than you have been doing. Still further, don't thin the paint too much.

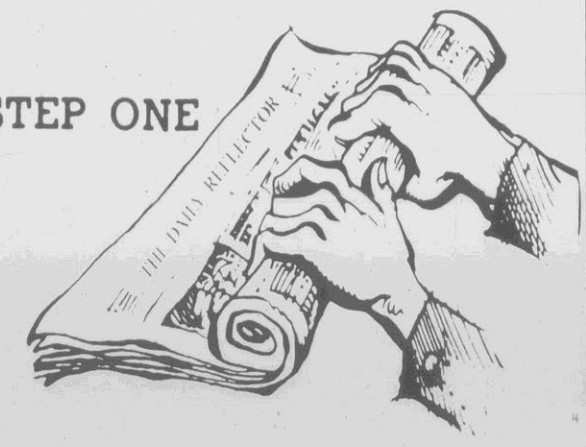
STEP ONE

A newspaper log should burn about as long as a wood log. Roll your newspaper log as tight as possible. The tighter it is rolled the better it will burn.



STEP TWO

After you have squeezed it tightly, bind it with a coat hangar or metal wire. Soaking the rolled newspaper in water and letting it dry completely will "season" the newspaper and make it burn more efficiently.

STEP THREE

Finally, stack about six dried newspaper logs in a crisscross to provide more ventilation to the fire and light it. Enjoy.

ASK OMAR

Q.—In a rubber game a few nights ago, we were not vulnerable and the opponents were. I picked up: ♠Qx ♡Axx ◇AQxxx ♣Kxx My right-hand opponent opened the bidding with one spade and I overcalled two diamonds on my 15 points. I played it right there. Unfortunately, I was doubled and I ended up with just three tricks. To make matters worse, the opponents completed the rubber on the next deal and they had won a rubber almost big enough to pay for their winter vacation.

Where did I go wrong? With probably the best hand at the table, I ended up losing a small fortune. Your help would be appreciated.—R. Wilson, Staten Island, N.Y.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You are in very good company. In the recent World Team Championship in Port Chester, N.Y., many competitors overcalled at the two-level on a holding somewhat similar to the one you had, by and large with a similar result—although at one or two tables they escaped when the opponents bid on rather than doubled.

Your error is a common one, and I don't know how to dissuade you from doing it. We have railed against that kind of action in our columns more often than I care to remember, but it does not seem to have had much impact.

When it comes to making an overcall, points matter hardly at all. The key factors in deciding whether or not to make an overcall are the quality of your suit and the trick-taking ability of your hand. Also, you should exercise great care in overcalling at the two-level in a minor suit—opponents are much freer to double two of a minor than two of a major because, in the event that the contract is made, the opponents have not doubled you into game.

The old rule of two and three is still an excellent guide to whether or not you should overcall. In other words, when you are vulnerable you should be able to come within two tricks of what you bid in your own hand; not vulnerable, within three tricks.

To make the point rather clearer, suppose that with the same conditions as above you held:

♠Kx ♡xxx ◇KQJ9xx ♣xx

You have only 9 points this time, but with a spade opened at your right you can reasonably expect to make six tricks on this hand, so you can overcall at the two-level. In addition, the quality of your trump suit makes it unlikely that the opponents will double you at a low level—their trumps won't be strong enough for that action.

There are times when, at the one-level, you might want to overcall on a four-card suit to suggest a lead. Suppose that the auction has started:

West North East
1 ♠ Pass 1 ◇

As South, what would you do with the following hands:

1) ♠Axxxx ♡xxx ◇Qxx ♣Ax
2) ♠KQJx ♡xxx ◇xxx ♣Axx

Both hands have 10 points in high cards, and hand 1) has a distributional point as well. Yet I would overcall one spade with hand 2), but not with hand 1). I am more likely to get into trouble with the first hand, and it is more essential to get a spade lead with the second hand.

President's Taste Helps Fund-Raiser

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. presidents sometimes perform good works they aren't even aware of. Thus, President Reagan's sweet tooth is now without his knowledge contributing to sweet charity.

The idea of exploiting Reagan's fondness for jelly beans for a worthy cause is the brainchild of John Rusnak, inventor of "jelly buttons," which are plastic replicas of the president's favorite brand.

His firm, John Rusnak Enterprises, has embarked on a joint venture with the Muscular Dystrophy Association to market jelly buttons as a fund-raising promotion.

About 1,200 jar-shaped display boards, each containing 125 jelly buttons, have been placed near the check-out counters in 530 convenience food stores in the Maryland-Virginia-District of Columbia area.

In addition, a hair-styling chain is selling fund-raising jelly buttons for $1 each at 25 locations.

The boards are imprinted with the message that a dime of every dollar taken in is donated to the campaign to aid victims of muscular dystrophy.

If the regional tryout is successful, the promotion will be expanded nationwide, Rusnak said.

Although Reagan is not directly involved, there is no doubt his association with jelly beans is the unseen force behind the fund drive.

Responding to questions, Rusnak said it was "sort of a foregone conclusion" that most jelly button buyers would make a subliminal connection between the president and the product.

"We are counting on a transference of symbolism," he confided.

RED CARPET LEASE

Vehicle Leasing Plan

This lease plan is designed to fit the needs of individuals who have never considered leasing before. With the cost of new car ownership steadily increasing, why not avoid the problems of depreciation. Leasing is one alternative. With an investment less than a down payment on a new car and approved credit, you can lease a new Lincoln or Mercury from 12 to 48 months with lease payments less than a regular car payment. At the end of the lease period, you may return the car and lease a new one for the same low investment. For further details, give us a call today!

Fear-Inspired Need For Self-Defense

Women Turn To Guns

By TOM HUMPHREY

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — The stainless steel Ruger .357 magnum quivered only slightly when Betty Moss thumbed back the hammer and centered the sights on the silouette of a man's body.

The blast lifted her arm. A neat hole appeared in the center of the target's chest.

Nineteen rounds later, holding a heavily-peppered target, the real estate agent who had never fired a gun before in her life was smiling broadly.

"I feel wonderful," she said. "I feel a lot better. I was afraid to shoot a gun.

Ms. Moss, worried about her safety during a job that requires driving "all over the city at all different hours," was one of 3,000 women who signed up to take a one-night handgun safety course offered by the local sheriff's department. It cost her $10.

In another part of a town, retired FBI agent Henderson "Hank" Hillen charges up to 1,500 per person to teach business executives, doctors, housewives and others how to avoid and fend off criminals.

"It's definitely a growth industry," said Hillen, who started his school just six months earlier. "Business has been great. Better than I ever imagined."

Ten years ago, Hillen said, there would have been virtually no market for the comprehensive and high-priced defense training that he offers through Hank Hillen Executive Protection, Inc.

But today, things are different.

"Criminals are much more violent today," he said. "There are a growing number who will absolutely kill you for nothing. They have no remorse. They look at yoand smile when they beat you."

The fear inspired by crime has led to boom in demand for security. And one can buy security, it would seem, in different forms.

Some forms are fairly simple, such as burglar alarms, guard dogs, fences and locks.

Some are exotic. CCS Communications Inc. of New York sells a bullet-proof "Trionic Briefcase" that, among other things, can detect explosives, analyze a person's voice for truth and flash a high-powered beam of light to blind and stuan attacker.

Hillen's "seminars" range from a $235 one-day course on guarding against rape and assault to the full-blown, four-day, $1,500 version with nine instructors on everhing from defensive driving to criminal psychology.

But, guns, especially handguns, are far and away the people's choice for a sense of security. A University of Michigan study indicates about two million handgu are added to the American market each year.

Hillen, citing a poll that says 53 percent of Americans are afraid to walk outside their homes at night, said he can forsee the day when crime forces the nation into becoming an "armed camp."

That idea, he said, "is repugnant to me, though I guess I am contributing to it.

"But, what else is there? Criminals are like predators. They seize upon those who are not prepared."

When Davidson County Sheriff Fate Thomas launched the Sheriff's Firearm Safety Course for Women in Nashville this fall, he expected that maybe 1,000 would sign up.

Instead, the department was flooded with applications from nearly 3,000 worriewomen — twice as many as can be handled by the volunteer workers in the schedul four months. Representatives of law enforcement agencies in other cities show at classes to learn techniques for similar programs.

"Understanding the safe and defensive use of firearms is the first step in reducing the number of women living in fear," said Thomas. "If a woman lives in fear, she is a prisoner of herself and an easy target.

"Proper understanding in the safe use of handguns may reduce the incidence of assault and rapes in this community."

Judy Williams, June Barnett and Linda Stilz arrived for the sheriff's course togther.

"Why did I take this course? All you have to do is look at the newspapers and you'll see the answer," said Mrs. Barnett.

"I can tell you the one that got me. It was the one where those three ladies were bean with the baseball bat and all they did was open the door to their house," said Mrs. Williams.

She referred to a local crime in which two middle-aged sisters and their elderlmother were beaten senseless — arms broken, skulls fractured, ribs cracked — by man who broke into their home, a man who remains at large.

"I've been terrified by guns. Afraid to touch them," she said. But, with her husband's blessing, she decided to overcome that fear to better cope with the greater fear of crime.

The $10 charged by the sheriff's department goes to cover the cost of ammunition, targets and the guns, which the volunteer instructors say will be worn out when the courses end.

"They're falling all over themselves to get into this course," said Marty Szeigis, director of the sheriff's program.

Hillen's view of security goes far beyond guns, though his full-length seminar includes several hours of training with all manner of weapons, ranging from the semi-automatic form of the Israeli-made Uzi submachine gun to shotgun and pistols.

"We don't recommend that people buy or carry a gun," said Hillen. "We do recommend that they consider it. If they feel more secure and if they are trained well enough in safety and handling of a firearm, then it can be a good thing.

"Someone who is poorly trained, or not trained at all, may be in more danger with a gun than without it."

Hillen has a Model 19 Smith and Wesson .357 pistol with customized grips and a gunsmith-adjusted light trigger pull as a favorite handgun. But for defense purposes, he prefers a 12-gauge pump shotgun stuffed with magnum loads of No. 4 shot, a size normally used for hunting geese and wild turkeys.

"Some people tell you they want double-ought buckshot," he said. "But that's .32 caliber. If you have to fire inside a house, the buckshot or a pistol slug will go right through a wall and maybe there are children sleeping in another room. The No. 4 shot will stop in the wall and it's plenty effective at close range."

Hillen has up to nine instructors at his seminars and shows a wide array of films, including interviews conducted in prison with convicts who offer tips on how to deal with their counterparts.

Beyond guns, the Hillen seminars include courses entitled "Defense Against Hostage Takers, Role of Hostage if Taken, Hostage Negotiations; Defense Against Bombings and Bomb Threats; Introduction to Defensive Tactics and Disarming Techniques; Defense Against Armed Robbery and Home Intrusion, and Introduction to, and Defense Against, Terrorism."

Currently, Hillen said, American criminals are concentrating on burglary and armed robbery. Kidnapping, he predicts, will be the "crime of the future" as the public, businesses and law enforcement officials become more adept at coping with other crimes.

The emphasis, he said, is on avoiding crime. For example, he said, "The way things are today, you take your life in your hands anytime you go into a convenience store after dark."

But there are tips as well on coping with an actual confrontation with criminals.

John Kandal: Running His Own Life

The lives of a retarded youngster and his mother undergo a positive transformation when he becomes involved in the Special Olympics, in "The Kid From Nowhere," airing on NBC's Monday Night at the Movies, Jan. 4 (9-11 p.m.).

The kid from nowhere is John Kandal (played by Ricky Wittman, a 12-year-old victim of Downs Syndrome), whose future seems anything but bright. His mother, Sam (Susan Saint James), feels that her primary responsibility is to prevent him from getting hurt.

Because she shields him from both physical and emotional pain, she unwittingly shields him from pleasure also. In her own mind, of course, her actions are correct.

Sam's former husband, Larry (played by Fred Dryer of the Los Angeles Rams), has left her alone with John and does not contribute financial support.

Sam refuses to allow anyone else into her life and, thus, into John's as well. She feels, as do her friends who are in similar situations, that: "Women like us can't expect to have normal relationships."

Hiding behind the physical and mental limitations of her son, Sam undergoes growing despair until Bud Herren (Beau Bridges), the coach at John's school, persuades her to let the boy train for the Special Olympics. Against Sam's initial reluctance, Bud helps John to learn to run and, for the first time in his young life, to experience success and motivation.

Eventually Bud manages to break through the wall that Sam has built around herself. Unselfish and unflinchingly confident in John, the coach is able to bring Sam face to face with her own worst fears: independence for herself and her son.

The Special Olympics provides the backdrop for John's first physical and mental triumph and Sam's emotional breakthrough.

"The Kid From Nowhere" was filmed in part during actual Special Olympics games last June at the University of California at Los Angeles.

The film also stars Loretta Swit, Janet MacLachlan, Rene Auberjonois and former Olympic star Rafer Johnson. Bridges directed from a script by Judy Farrell.

The Special Olympics program was organized by Eunice Kennedy Shriver in 1968.

RAFER JOHNSON (l) stars as an official who passes on congratulatory greetings to a youngster (Ricky Wittman) who has just competed in the Special Olympics games, in "The Kid From Nowhere," airing Monday, Jan. 4 (9-11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

Bring On The Clones

Laurence Olivier stars as a Nazi head hunter who becomes involved in a modern-day plot to create another Hitler, in "The Boys from Brazil," a suspense thriller to be rebroadcast on NBC's Sunday Night at the Movies, Jan. 3 (9-11 p.m).

Gregory Peck stars as Dr. Josef Mengele, a Third Reich scientist who has successfully managed to remain in South America after escaping from World War II Germany. Mengele is continuing an experimental project to re-establish the Nazi empire through a genetic process enabling him to create clones with the same characteristics of Hitler.

Mengele has been working out of a jungle laboratory in Argentina for years. He is on the verge of organizing the final phase of his plan when Barry Kohler (Steven Guttenberg), an exuberant young Nazi hunter, stumbles upon one of his top-secret meetings.

The young man, well aware of the reputation of Ezra Lieberman (Olivier), an aging and veteran hunter, contacts him in Europe with what he feels is valuable information.

While Lieberman is not initially impressed with a supporting packet of photographs Kohler sends from South America, he becomes convinced of the importance of the discovery when a phone call from Kohler is interrupted and he later learns that the young man has disappeared.

Working with only the slightest of clues, Lieberman painstakingly sets out to uncover the details of the young man's disappearance. At the same time, Mengele plunges along with his plan, despite concern from associates like Eduard Seibert (James Mason) that Lieberman will uncover facts that will compromise the entire operation. Even so, Mengele refuses to be stopped.

The story weaves in and out of a series of well-timed and well-executed murders until, finally, Mengele and Lieberman meet face-to-face.

Also starring are Lilli Palmer as Ester Lieberman, Uta Hagen as Frieda Maloney, Anne Meara as Mrs. Curry and Jeremy Black as her son, Jack.

"The Boys from Brazil," which was originally released theatrically in 1978, was based on the popular book of the same title by Ira Levin. The film's screenplay was written by Heywood Gould.

Talented Mac

Mac Davis has written a screenplay called "Feeling Free," which he'll star in after "Sting II." He also penned the music for the movie.

Michele Will Tell

Q: I would like some information on Timothy Hutton. SUZANNE JOHNSON, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Twenty-one-year-old Timothy Hutton was born in Malibu, California. The son of the late actor Jim Hutton, his stunning performance in "Ordinary People" earned him an Oscar. It was while he was on a dinner-theatre tour with his father that Timothy decided to become an actor. "When the tour began, I didn't know if I wanted an acting career," Tim says. "But it was the experience with my dad that convinced me I wanted to be an actor, just like him." Timothy is single and lives in Los Angeles. Write to him in c/o ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10019. He recently gave an extraordinary performance in the ABC tele-movie "A Long Way Home."

Q: Could you please give me some information about actress Valerie Bertinelli of "One Day At A Time"? Also, where can I write to her? DELL CONNOR, FAIRMONT, N.C.

A: Valerie Bertinelli has come a long way from kid sister Barbara Cooper on "One Day At A Time." Now twenty-one years old, married to rock star Eddie Van Halen — she's grown up before our eyes. Born in Wilmington, Delaware on April 23, Val has one older brother and two younger brothers. In addition to her hit series, the actress has started her own production company, and is searching for properties to fit her current interests. How does she spend her off-work hours? Playing football, skiing, swimming, tennis, racquetball and listening to classical music are some of the activities she enjoys.

Q: Could you please tell me if Barbara Eden of "Harper Valley" and Stella Stevens of "Flamingo Road" are sisters? They look alike. LORENZO BAKER, ROWLAND, N.C.

A: We agree with you — both ladies are similar in looks and very attractive. Nonetheless, they are 'not' related.

Q: Please give me some information on Daisy Duke of "The Dukes of Hazzard." JERRY GAINS, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: Sexy Daisy Duke is portrayed by actress Catherine Bach. Catherine was born in Warren, Ohio, on March 1, of German-Mexican parentage. She and her brother, Phillip, grew up in Faith, South Dakota, and later in Southern California. An accomplished ballet and jazz dancer, Catherine often guest stars in television specials along with her duties as Daisy on "The Dukes of Hazzard." Catherine was married — she's now doing a solo. She enjoys traveling, horseback riding and entertaining at her home in the San Fernando Valley. Fans can write to her in c/o "The Dukes of Hazzard," CBS-TV, 51 W. 52 Street, New York, N.Y., 10019.

Kids For Reynolds

Still A Mystery

The American edition of "In Search of My Father" will be released to book stores Jan. 8. Written by Ronald Howard (the late Leslie Howard's son), it details the mysterious, still unsolved, plane crash during World War II that took the life of Leslie, also unraveling the secret missions he was on for Britain, because of which, the Nazis were suspected of engineering the crash.

Loving The Recognition

Kim Fields, who plays the perky Tootie on NBC's "The Facts of Life". (Wednesdays, 9-9:30 p.m.) readily admits she enjoys all the attention she's getting from her new fans. "I just love it," Miss Fields said.

After being signed to the show two years ago after dozens of others had been auditioned for the part of Tootie, Miss Fields started getting recognition instantly.

Of all the fans she's earned, Miss Fields remembers two of them as being special. "One boy, a teenager from Los Angeles, got my phone number and called me a lot. We found that we both had the same kind of problems, like school work and peer pressure. A girl told me that one of our shows helped her solve a problem with her family that had been bothering her."

Miss Fields said one fan encounter left her a little shaken. "I was out with some friends shopping once and this guy started following us. He was staring at me. I thought he wanted an autograph. Anyway, my girlfriends and I lost him in a big department store."

Star-struck herself, she understands how fans must feel about their idols. "I can see where they are coming from. Sometimes I like to go to special places — like studios — and see who I can spot."

Miss Fields has been acting since she was 2, when her mother's drama coach placed her in a children's mini-ensemble that performed in New York City. She will be 13 this spring.

Last October, Miss Fields was named Best Young Comedienne in the Youth in Film/Youth in TV Awards. "I find many things very funny," she said. "Comedy comes easy for me, but not drama. It's important to get yourself into a serious frame of mind to do drama."

Miss Fields already has an impressive list of credits, including the feature films "The Taking of Pelham 1-2-3" and "Come Back Charleston Blue." On television she appeared in "Roots" as Alex Haley's daughter, Lydia.

Coburn Hosts 'Darkroom'

Jame Coburn is delighted with his new role as host of the suspense series "Darkroom," which is seen Fridays, (9-10 p.m.) on ABC.

Actually, considering what Coburn has been through in the past 18 month, the actor is happy, period.

"A year ago I couldn't even walk," he revealed. "It was like my body was frozen. I found out I was suffering from rheumatoid arthritis. The pain was terrible. Although I had suffered for some time with it, the disease really hit me while I was living in London."

Coburn had just about given up on being cured when he returned to his home in California.

"I was looking through a magazine and came across an article on a nutritionist, who was working on a cure for my illness," continues Coburn. "His offices were, ironically, just a short distance from my home."

As a result of the doctor's tests, Coburn discovered he was allergic to 45 out of 167 foods. He stopped eating those foods and, in a short time, began to recover his mobility.

"I'm 85 percent cured," Coburn said, "and most of the time free from pain.

JAMES COBURN, now almost fully recovered from his bout with rheumatoid arthritis, is back before the cameras as the host of "Darkroom," airing Fridays (9-10 p.m.), on ABC-TV.

"I'm going to an acupuncturist, which I find most helpful."

Since his victory over pain, Coburn has been very active in films, with "Looker" being his latest theatrical movie and "Jacqueline Susann's Valley of the Dolls 1981" for TV.

"In 'Darkroom' I play the host who introduces each episode of the series," he said. "I'm on screen about 90 seconds before each segment in a photographic darkroom where I use a photograph or some other photo lab prop as the catalyst for the story."

Coburn feels it is time for the suspense genre to return to TV, to revive the twists and chills of "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" and Rod Serling's "Twilight Zone."

"I feel we have excellent scripts, each tailored to a bizarre or unexpected ending," he revealed. "Our stories range from 19th century France and a man trying to escape the guillotine to the present where an ex-GI is made to relive his experiences in Vietnam by his son's toy soldiers."

Meeting Just Right

While returning from the lush Canary Islands, where they and other cast members were taping special on-location sequences, "Guiding Light" stars Elvera Roussel and Christopher Bernau accepted an invitation from series costume designer Robert Anton to stop for an extravagant dinner at the opulent Ritz Hotel in Madrid. During dinner they were spotted by a family of American tourists, who stopped to ask for autographs. "It was so perfect," says Miss Roussel. "That's exactly the sort of place fans of the show would expect to find Alan and Hope. If they had seen us back in Manhattan in a deli wearing our jeans, they would have been disappointed."

Man And Wife

When popular characters Eric and Hayley finally became man and wife on "As the World Turns" there was a real minister performing the ceremony. Actors Peter Reckell and Dana Delany, who play the young couple, exchanged their vows before Chaplin Griffen, who was played by real-life minister Norman Walter. He, incidentally, is married to actress Rita Walter, who plays Carol Andropolous.

One Good Leg

Wes Unseld, long-time star with the Bullets announced his retirement and later explained why. "I'm retiring basically because of the way my legs are acting, especially the good one."

Soap Fan

Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons likes chocolate chip ice cream, loves The Colonel's Original Recipe and is a soap opera fan. "'Ryan's Hope,' 'All My Children,' 'One Life To Live' — I like all of them," says Thomas. "Oh, and don't forget 'General Hospital' of course."

Rookie Named

Patty Sheehan, a 25-year-old former ski champion, is the LPGA's 1981 Rookie-of-the-Year. "I had three goals this year — to win a tournament, to win $100,000 and to be named Rookie-of-the-Year — and I got them all," stated Patty. "At this point it's a little hard to believe."

Bills Make The Playoffs

On Sunday, Jan. 3 (1-4 p.m.) CBS Sports will provide live coverage of the NFL playoff game between the Buffalo Bills and the Cincinnati Bengals. The game will be played at Riverfront Stadium, located on the banks of the Ohio River in Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Bills reached the playoffs via a wild card berth. After trailing Miami for the greater part of the season, Buffalo went into their final game of the year against the Dolphins, trailing Don Shula's squad by only a half-a-game. Miami's defensive pressure put a damper on any hopes of a Divisional title for the Buffalo team. Their 10-6 record, however, insured a playoff appearance.

This is the seventh 10-win season for Bills' skipper Chuck Knox in his 9 years of coaching in Buffalo. The 1981 Bills are also Knox's seventh playoff entry in nine years. Against divisional rivals, the Bills posted a 6-2 mark. They have had problems on the road, however, winning only 4 of their eight road outings.

Much of their success this year is due to the performance of quarterback Joe Ferguson. Joe has taken to rewriting the Buffalo record book. His 498 passing attempts is a new Bills' record, while his 252 completions surpasses the present record by one. Ferguson also set a new passing yardage record for the Bills by connecting with Buffalo receivers for 3,652 yards. He misses setting a new touchdown record by just one, passing for 24 scoring completions.

HOLLYWOOD — The romance is long over, but BURT REYNOLDS and DINAH SHORE remain good friends — when BURT recently asked her to topline a musical at his Dinner Theatre in Florida — DINAH answered, "How could I possibly refuse?"

"Man From Uncle" fans will be happy to know that ROBERT VAUGHN and DAVID McCALLUM will reunite in "The Man From Uncle — The Feature Film," in their original roles.

WAYNE ROGERS and Universal TV have resolved their differences ending the contract dispute that shut down production on "House Calls" — the show has resumed production.

BARRY GIBB, the eldest brother of the Bee Gees, will make his dramatic debut in the movie production, "Byron." BARRY will play the title role of Lord Byron, the romantic English poet. Filming is set to begin next summer in Italy and Greece.

LANA TURNER will return to television in a guest-starring role especially created for her on an episode of "Falcon Crest." She will be cast as the mother of ROBERT FOXWORTH. MISS TURNER'S last television role was eleven years ago in "The Survivors."

You Can Have Your Home Redecorated By A Famous Interior Decorator Without Paying A Penny For His Professional Advice!

Don Sewell: Nationally-known designer Don Sewell is a creative interior decorator and frequent TV talk show guest. His tips on interior decorating have appeared in many major publications across the country.

Creative Interior Designs:

The services of an interior decorator like Sewell are expensive, but through Lowe's it costs you nothing. Don Sewell has taken Lowe's quality brand-name home products—wallcovering, carpets, vinyl flooring, paint, kitchen cabinetry and countertops—and coordinated them into beautifully different interior designs.

Here's How It Works:

To make it easy for you to picture your redecorated room, all the coordinates of each design are mounted on a panel like the one pictured above. Use a different design in each room or use one design throughout your entire home. You can combine your creativity with Don Sewell's.

After You Decide:

Tell Lowe's decor specialist which patterns and colors you like. Lowe's stocks many of the items in the panel designs. Those items which we do not stock can be obtained quickly at no extra cost to you. Then, take them home and redecorate!

Home Fashion Tip By Sewell:

A new design idea for wallcoverings: Select a paper that is a stripe design. Choose one of the colors in the paper, match it to paint, and paint the entire room. Next, cut the stripes into strips to go around the room at the baseboard, and as a border at the ceiling line. Now, for a special effect, put the patterned strips around the door and window frame.

Lowe's Pricing Policy:

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. The reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference retail price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference retails do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area, we cannot assure you that our reference retail prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at "regular" selling prices. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference retail price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices. (Prices in this tabloid do not include delivery charges. Ask us about delivery rates.)

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock, you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. But every item shown here can be ordered for you.

Why you need this Extra Protection Hospital Plan

It's a well-known fact that the cost of hospital care continues to climb at an alarming rate. That's why most of us carry some form of health insurance—whether it be a group policy, major medical coverage or even Medicare—to share in the cost of a hospital stay.

But have you stopped to consider that as hospital charges go up, so does your share of the bill?

Most health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill—and in years past, that may have been enough. But today, with the average cost of a trip to the hospital reaching over $1,700.00*, your share could be difficult to handle.

If you were just returning home from the hospital, would you be able to write a check for your share of the bill? If not, would you have to take money out of your savings? Or worse yet, would you have to look for help?

These questions point out just how important it is to have this Extra Protection Hospital Plan. The cash benefits you collect could mean the difference between getting through a financial crisis and having to look to your savings or elsewhere for help.

That's why we say:

We're here when you need us.

*American Hospital Association

I want to share with you this touching letter that I received recently from one of our policyowners.

Herbert H. Davis M.D.
Chairman, Board of Directors

Dear Dr. Davis,

I wish to express my thoughts and feelings concerning Physicians Mutual Insurance Company. I bless the day I received a form, asking if I would take out this protection for only $1.00 for the first month's protection.

I'm truly grateful I did because the unfortunate happened to me in January, a few months after I took out the insurance. In January, I was diagnosed as to having a form of cancer. I was in the hospital for 25 days. Well, I'm out of the hospital now and I'm doing well.

What I really want to tell you is how Physicians Mutual took care of my claim. I received the best possible service a person could ask for. Your company should be congratulated because they stood behind everything said. Your company gave me their level best, and they proved to be truly and totally worthy of their trust.

Your service is fast, courteous and helpful in all ways possible. My claim was processed and I received my money, and believe me, it was a blessing. So once again, thanks to your company for sending me the protection form. Because then I didn't really think I would ever need insurance, but I'm glad I took it out and have it today.

Thank you,
T.A. Borski

P.S. Your company was there when I needed them. I wouldn't hesitate to recommend your insurance to all people.

Here's how your Extra Protection Hospital Plan helps you beat the rising cost of hospital care!

Pays you $50.00 a day $1,500.00 a month!

You'll collect these cash benefits whenever you are hospitalized for covered sickness or accident. In fact, you'll collect when your doctor places you in the hospital for any reason—even a simple check-up.

Pays you $75.00 a day, $2,250.00 a month for Cancer, Heart Attack

Your daily benefits are increased 50% if you or any covered member of your family is hospitalized for cancer (including leukemia and Hodgkin's disease) or heart attack (acute myocardial infarction).

Pays you double benefits $200.00 a day, $6,000.00 a month for you and your spouse

Under the Husband-Wife or All-Family Plans, you'll collect double your regular benefits during the time you and your spouse are both in the hospital—due to the same or different accidents.

Pays cash benefits in addition to any other insurance

You'll collect benefits over and above any other insurance—including group policies, major medical coverage, workmen's compensation—even Medicare.

That's what makes your Extra Protection Hospital Plan so important—because many health policies pay only 80% of your hospital bill. This is the ideal way to get the cash you need to help cover the remaining costs—without having to dig into your savings or look for help.

Pays benefits directly to you

Your benefit check will go directly to you unless you tell us otherwise. The money is yours to spend as you wish—to help pay the hospital bill, the doctor's bill, or even household expenses.

Furthermore, your benefits are not subject to state or Federal income tax.

You get lifetime coverage and benefits

There is no limit to the number of days you can collect benefits. That means you'll be protected even if you're hospitalized for the rest of your life!

Pays maternity benefits, too

Now there's no waiting period for maternity benefits. You're covered for normal childbirth when pregnancy occurs anytime after your policy is issued. And there's no added cost for this coverage!

We can't cancel your protection or raise your rates individually

No matter how old you become or how many claims you have, we GUARANTEE never to cancel or refuse to renew you Extra Protection Hospital Plan. Only you can cancel your coverage.

What's more, you can never be singled out for a rate increase. In fact, the only way we can raise your rates is if we do so for all policies like yours in the entire state. Your rate will not change when you move from one age group to another . . . even if your health changes.

Pays from the very first day in any hospital

You'll collect cash benefits the FIRST DAY and EVERY day you're hospitalized for a covered sickness or accident.

You're covered in any hospital in the world, and now that includes federal and VA hospitals as well. However, nursing homes and convalescent, extended-care or self-care units of hospitals do not qualify.

Pre-existing conditions are not covered for the first year

Old health problems (those that became evident or were treated before the effective date of your policy) are not covered for the first year of your policy. But once that year is up, these pre-existing conditions are covered!

If you are 65 or over you will be covered for cancer, heart attack, stroke, hernia, disease or disorder of the prostate, tuberculosis, cataracts, emphysema, cirrhosis or diabetes if your hospital confinement commences more than six months after the effective date of your policy.

Reduced benefits for mental illness

Half benefits are paid for up to 30 days' confinement due to mental illness.

Pays full benefits for all ages

Now you can protect your entire family with $50 a day benefits for all, regardless of age.

Even though hospitals charge the same rates for all ages, you'll find that many similar plans have reduced benefits for younger or older age groups. But your Extra Protection Hospital Plan has no reductions for children or people over 65.

You can't be turned down!

We guarantee to issue your Extra Protection Hospital Plan (P370 380 Series) regardless of age, health or family size. As soon as we receive your completed application, we will issue your policy and put it in force.

Your coverage begins immediately—even before your policy arrives in the mail.

Of course, we can issue only one policy to you on a guaranteed issue basis.

If you're already a Physicians Mutual policyowner and would like information about additional coverage available, please write for details.

Enroll today! No salesman will call

Simply fill out the brief application and mail it back to Physicians Mutual along with $1.00 for your first month's coverage. There is no medical exam required, no health questions to answer.

It's important to note that you'll be dealing directly with the Company—by mail or by phone—from the time you enroll right up to the time you need us for claim service.

There are no salesmen, no "middlemen" involved. That means fast, direct service.

Three Important Guarantees

1. We guarantee to issue this insurance regardless of your age, health or family size.

We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Smarter to select smaller school.

FOR DR. ABRAHAM S. FISCHLER, president, Nova University, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

What are the advantages of attending a small college, as opposed to going to a large one? — A.K., Sarasota, Fla.

● At a small college, classes tend to be less crowded, teachers are inclined to be more dedicated to teaching and more time is available for individual instruction. At a big college, most professors are under pressure to publish and do research. As a result, teaching and students often become secondary responsibilities. In a small school, there is also a greater opportunity for experimentation, for trying unique approaches to learning. Although there is a great diversity of classes and subjects in large institutions, curriculum tends to be overstructured.

FOR ED GARVEY, executive director, National Football League Players Association

What do the referees do if they hear one player threaten another with bodily harm? — E.C.B., Muskegon, Mich.

● They evaluate the incident and decide if it was merely part of the heat of battle or a deliberate threat. Officiating decisions need to be made quickly and with good judgment. Also, officials could do a better job if they were full-time employees of the N.F.L., rather than part-timers.

FOR RANDALL BROOKS, 13-year-old actress and honorary national chairman of Youth for Reagan

When you were on the road raising funds for Reagan, did you miss your mother? — D.W., Bangor, Maine

● Of course. It was nice fund-raising with Caesar Romero in Chicago, but it was also freezing. Everyone kept rushing me inside and wrapping me in blankets whenever there was a break. I missed Mom and our warm home most when I performed in icy weather.

FOR FAITH STEWART-GORDON, co-author of The Russian Tea Room Cookbook

What did your research reveal about the food your restaurant serves? — J.J., Albany, N.Y.

● For one thing, Zakuska (hors d'oeuvres), the Russian version of smorgasbord, originated because of the vast distances people traveled between towns and country estates in Russia. Whenever travelers arrived at strangers' homes, they were served an array of dishes.

A face fit for a queen?

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

We've been informed of V.I.P.s' fashion and figure faults and their horrendous hairdos; now comes word on face flaws. Skin-care expert-cosmetologist Livia Sylva has compiled her "10 worst-made-up" list. Among them are: Queen Elizabeth ("too patsy, too dull. Her face is lifeless, dried out"); Jackie Onassis ("lips too thin; thick brows give a hard look. She should use subtle shading to disguise her square chin"); Barbra Streisand ("I know it's her trademark, but if I were she, I'd have a nose job"); Nancy Reagan ("much too pale; needs brighter cosmetics"); Bette Davis ("one can't live on past fame, so stop saying, 'This is the way I am.' She's a mess, needs everything from a facial, to a lift, to a new coif and different makeup"); Ingrid Bergman ("she should accentuate her gorgeous eyes more and use lots of moisturizer to eliminate the taut look"); Phyllis Diller ("why oh why did she ruin her face with a lift? She no longer looks like Phyllis. Phyllis, get your old mug back"). Advises Livia: "It's not what you're born with, it's what you do with it."

Jackie Onassis

Monique Van Vooren, who chucked performing for writing (her new, sizzling novel, Night Sanctuary, is just out), marveled, "I'm now treated as one treats an older person — with respect. It's as though my friends — and foes — can see for the first time that I have a brain. Since the book, I'm asked about important topics like world problems." . . . Nathaniel Crosby, Bing's son, was well-mannered to all who crossed his path after winning the U.S. Amateur Golf Championship. How would Bing have summed up his big day? With a warning, Nat thinks, "Don't let it go to your head, kid." A bystander remarked, "John McEnroe's father might consider bestowing the same advice."

Bette Davis

Katharine Hepburn, now on Broadway in West Side Waltz, recently unloaded stacks of firewood from her car at her home. A fan, seeing his idol with her arms full, decided here was his chance to meet her and also do a good deed. He rushed to help and was politely turned down. "Anyone who is fool enough to drive 200 miles to get firewood," said the actress, with a straight face, "had better unload it herself."

Katharine Hepburn

PRO AND CON

Should the Legal Drinking Age In Every State Be A Minimum of 20 Years?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

PRO Allen B. Rice II, executive director, Michigan Council on Alcohol Problems

Yes, and 21 would be even better. Lowering the age in Michigan to 18 caused more teen-age drunk-driving accidents and increased alcohol problems in the schools. That's why we led the drive to return to age 21. The higher age requirement doesn't solve all the teen-age drinking problems. But it has saved lives by reducing drunk-driving accidents, and the number of alcohol problems in the schools has dropped. Discouraging drinking among teen-agers can also help prevent alcohol problems later.

CON Morris E. Chafetz, M.D., president, Health Education Foundation

Absolutely not. The U.S. suffers major alcohol problems mainly because we invest alcohol with a sexy, sophisticated, adult, magical aura. Societies that put alcohol use into its appropriate, healthy perspective, to take or leave in the process of eating and socializing, don't have problems. As 18-year-olds have full adult rights, raising the drinking age would give alcohol undeserved prominence. We would actually be pushing young people toward the problem we want them to avoid.

COVER STORY

Power to The Elderly

Millions of elderly Americans live lonely lives on the edge of poverty. Here, the leader of the Gray Panthers tells how she and other older citizens are fighting for their rights — and ours.

A pride of Panthers: Kuhn, 76, on the attack.

By Maggie Kuhn

"Today is my 60th birthday and, as some say, the beginning of the golden years. Somehow this morning over my coffee, the birthday greetings from my children didn't seem to be shining through any golden aura.

When my husband retired, he decided on a new life style, which he accomplished quickly with a no-fault divorce and remarriage to a younger co-worker at his new place of employment.

With my children, I survived the anguish and emerged scarred but perhaps stronger. I also emerged, however, to find that my ex-husband's medical insurance and pension fund, which I had been covered by for so many years, were going to be denied to me and handed to his newest spouse. After a lifetime of service as a housewife and mother, I was not allowed to retire in dignity. Though I've recently begun a career, it allows me no time to build up a pension or substantial Social Security benefits."

This letter was sent to us at the Gray Panthers last April by Dolores Stegg, who formerly lived the comfortable life of a military wife. She now faces the strong possibility of living out the remainder of her years in poverty.

She is not alone. The incidence of poverty among the elderly is greater than among any other age group. At present in the United States, there are almost 4 million people aged 65 or over living on an income below the poverty line. Moreover, we have just begun to tackle the problems of age discrimination in the job market.

Maggie Kuhn is the founder and leader of the Gray Panthers. She is also the author of two books, including Maggie Kuhn on Aging (Westminster Press).

The problems of old age are largely the problems of older women because women have a longer life expectancy than men. Older women are the fastest growing sector of poor people in the United States. The unmarried among them — widowed, divorced or single — account for 72 percent of all elderly poor.

Social Security is the principal source of income for older women, but instead of providing a supplement, it often becomes their sole means of support. For the most part, a woman's Social Security benefits are based on her husband's benefits. If she outlives him, her benefits are reduced for the remainder of her life. If a woman goes back to work after child-bearing, she must average in zeros for all the years she was a homemaker, making it nearly impossible for her to qualify for maximum benefits. And if a woman is divorced, as in the case of Dolores, she receives only a small percentage of her husband's benefits.

Moreover, any hope that women like Dolores may have had for public aid has been dashed by the Reagan Administration's budget-cutting. There has been a lowering of income levels necessary to qualify for social programs like food stamps and Medicaid. Because of the modest income from her new job, Dolores is ineligible for benefits. That is, unless she gives up her job and is willing to accept the stigma of welfare.

Also, a special CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) program for displaced housewives, which would have provided Dolores with an opportunity for improving her skills — so she would be qualified for a higher paying position — has been eliminated. Furthermore, despite Reagan's withdrawal of his proposals to cut Social Security, many predict he will introduce proposals for cuts again next year. If passed, they would have their most damaging effect on elderly women living alone.

What is particularly distressing about the current Administration's cutbacks is that they come at a time when great strides have been made toward improving the quality of life for all older persons. During the past two decades we have expanded the minimum protection provided by Social Security, instituting such programs as Medicare, Medicaid, Supplemental Security Income, as well as social and nutritional services under the Older Americans Act. At the same time, gerontologists (social scientists who study aging and the aged), largely through governmental grants, have probed the special needs of this segment of the population and are investigating better systems for meeting these needs.

Still, we have a long way to go. The special problems of the elderly remain unsolved. Currently, 25 million Americans — 11 percent of the population — are 65 or over, and by the year 2000, the number probably will have doubled to 50 million (18 percent of the population). If we are to be prepared for the enormous shift in demographics, we must expand our efforts to accommodate it, not cut back.

Above all, we must continue the fight against "ageism" in our society. For no matter what services and benefits we offer our elders — or other deprived groups in society — these benefits serve only to dull the pain of being left out of the mainstream. To be truly liberated, the elderly must be allowed respect and status and the right to contribute to and be involved in society.

Power to the Elderly

Cynthia Johnson / Gamma-Liaison

Local Panther groups sponsor activities to help alleviate loneliness.

I believe that if the present policies and practices continue, there is a danger of establishing a permanent underclass of older Americans — roleless, powerless, living at the edge of poverty. There is the further danger that continued segregation will increase hostility and alienation between the old and the young, who desperately need each other.

How do we change our present situation and counter this gloomy forecast? We can take the first step forward by being responsible critics of the present situation, by supporting and building alternatives and creating support groups to initiate social change. It may require a crisis to shake up our thinking and turn us around. As a matter of fact, crises are the mother's milk of social change. They cause a great deal of pain but appear to be the only time public opinion is sufficiently shaken to make a major change possible.

The Gray Panthers is an intergenerational people's movement. We have chosen to involve all age groups — young, middle-aged and old — in our membership so that we don't succumb to a special-interest mentality. As "elders of the tribe," old people should be seeking and safeguarding the survival of the tribe — the larger public interest.

On a national level, one of the Gray Panthers's priorities is to eliminate poverty among the aged. Despite its shortcomings, Social Security remains the country's best antipoverty program. Gray Panthers played a major role in fighting the cutbacks proposed by the Administration earlier this year. We will continue to fight any proposed cuts, while at the same time proposing changes that would make the system more equitable for women.

In addition, we are fighting to make safe, decent housing, a health system that fosters prevention of sickness and accessible public transportation national priorities. The Gray Panthers want to see the workplace opened for older women, and we believe that earnings limitations for Social Security recipients must be removed.

As a first step toward desegregation on the basis of age, a number of local Panther groups are designing courses on aging and teaching them at area schools. The Gray Panther Media Watch is attempting to break down age stereotypes in print, film and TV. Panthers persuaded the National Association of Broadcasters to amend the Television Code of Ethics to include age along with race and sex as areas in which the media need to be more sensitive.

The Gray Panthers are also currently involved in a number of local projects in communities across the country. Through house-matching programs, Gray Panthers networks are arranging shared housing for old and young to lessen the cost of housing and help alleviate loneliness. We are working with corporations to institute work alternatives such as part-time, flex-time and gradual retirement so that work will become a viable option for older people. We are going into nursing homes to initiate visitor programs for more resident interaction and organize residential councils so the individuals living there will have more say in the running of their facilities.

In the meantime, we continue to rally, picket, petition, testify before Congress — whatever it takes — to educate local, state and national representatives about our positions.

Ultimately, we all have a social responsibility to be advocates. If we can't change things for ourselves, perhaps we can for our children and our children's children. FW

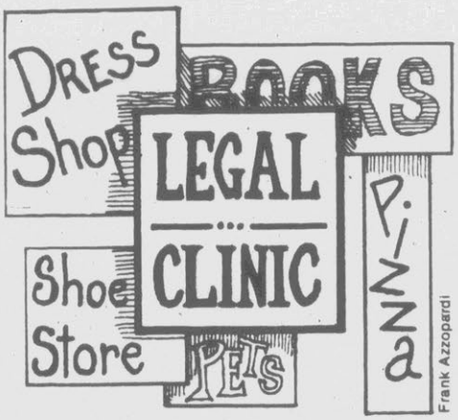
Judging Legal Clinics

By Andrea Pawlyna

If your legal problem is fairly simple — you want a will written or you and your husband are filing for an uncontested divorce — a legal clinic may be a good option for you.

Often located in shopping centers, these store-front sources of legal advice specialize in handling routine matters of law. Because they operate on a high-volume, high-efficiency basis, clinics generally charge their clients lower fees than traditional law firms.



Frank Azzopardi

Since the landmark Supreme Court ruling in 1977 allowing lawyers to advertise, the number of legal clinics has mushroomed from a mere handful to over 600 firms nationwide, according to a new study by the American Bar Association (A.B.A.).

Types of clinics can range from solo practitioners in single offices to large multistate chains. Many clinics build case volume through advertising, and all commonly set fixed prices for such standard legal work as bankruptcies, simple wills, real estate closings, adoptions and uncontested divorces.

"What we offer is the general practice of law covering the majority of consumer problems," says 32-year-old Linda Cawley, co-founder of Cawley & Schmidt legal clinics, a Baltimore-based chain which has nine local offices in Maryland and New York.

Cawley & Schmidt charges $50 for a simple will, $150 for an uncontested divorce and $250 for a real estate settlement. An initial consultation is free. "We lose a third of our clients by being able to dispose of the problem right away," adds Rich Schmidt, 32. "But the free visit generates good will, so we've continued doing it."

By streamlining their operations, clinics are able to keep fees low. In many offices, standardized legal forms and computers speed case work along.

While clinics once tried to gear themselves to the wage earner not far above the poverty level, lately their focus has changed. "At first, they were serving the person who couldn't quite qualify for Legal Aid. But they found out that business wasn't all that profitable. Now the trend is toward a more middle-class clientele," says Bill Bolger, a spokesman for the Washington-based National Resource Center for Consumers of Legal Service.

As part of their upscale image, some firms are shedding the word "clinic" from their names. The term apparently had caused a certain degree of confusion, leading some people to mistakenly assume that clinics were either free or offered only the most limited type of legal service.

In still another wrinkle, Hyatt Legal Services, a 45-clinic chain based in Kansas City, Mo., has joined with H & R Block (the income tax preparers) to establish what may become the first truly national chain of legal clinics.

How good are legal clinics? Though they were at first criticized by local Bar associations, which warned that they would lower the quality of service, that does not appear to have happened. A study by the University of Miami School of Law indicates just the opposite — clinic clients reported more satisfaction with their attorneys than did clients of traditional firms.

Experts usually recommend clinics for simple legal cases, but they caution that even the best may be ill-equipped to handle matters involving large property claims, sizable estates or divorces.

Before choosing a legal clinic, it's wise for consumers to comparison shop for the best deal since even clinic prices tend to vary widely. The A.B.A., for example, found that fees for uncontested divorces range from $50 to $550, while a simple will can cost anywhere from $20 to $100.

"Listen to the advertising," advises Bolger. "Visit the clinic and ask about the fee, and also find out about the experience of the lawyer who will be handling your case." FW

Last 90% Silver—U.S. Silver Dollar

THE PEACE DOLLAR

Available Only Until Midnight, Tonight

January 1982, Philadelphia. IMM announced today that it is releasing for sale a small cache of less than 10,000 U.S. Peace silver dollars recently obtained from a choice collection. Silver dollars today happen to be the most collected type of coin in the world. However, due to the unstable price of silver bullion on world markets, one government after another has discontinued their minting. The U.S. was no exception and in 1935 issued its very last. The historic Peace Dollar—struck in .900 fine silver and measuring a large 38.1mm—was issued for just fifteen years. It is therefore one of the shortest coin runs in U.S. history. Moreover, it is the last true silver dollar struck for circulation in the U.S.

International Monetary Mint is releasing for sale these Brilliant Uncirculated Peace silver dollars at the Special Investor Opportunity Price of just $55 each. You may never have a better opportunity to own rare U.S. Peace dollars. Investors who respond from this publication by midnight, tonight, may purchase from 1 to 10 individual coins at this price. Because of the limited number available, orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis with a strict limit of 10 coins per customer. This announcement will only be repeated in the unlikely event that coins from this cache are still available beyond the deadline published here.

The 90% silver Peace dollar design is considered to be the most beautiful to ever appear on a U.S. coin. Designed by Anthony De Francisci, who featured the word Peace on the base of a rocky crag upon which the proud eagle is perched. The design was dedicated to a world hope to be at peace as a result of the war to end all wars. All 1923 Peace dollars from this collection grade Brilliant Uncirculated (MS-60 or better) and are accompanied by a certificate of authenticity to that effect. Coins classified "Brilliant Uncirculated" have never been placed in general circulation and are still in mint state condition. To qualify for this offering call Lee Collins toll free at 1-800-345-8502 (in Pennsylvania call our Special Operator at 1-800-662-5180), Dept. USD-2016. Orders will be accepted on major credit cards only. An additional $2.75 is requested to cover insurance, postage, and special handling. If not satisfied, you may return your United States Peace Silver Dollar(s) in their original condition within 30 days for a full refund.

SYNOMETRICS...an Olympic Champion's Discovery!

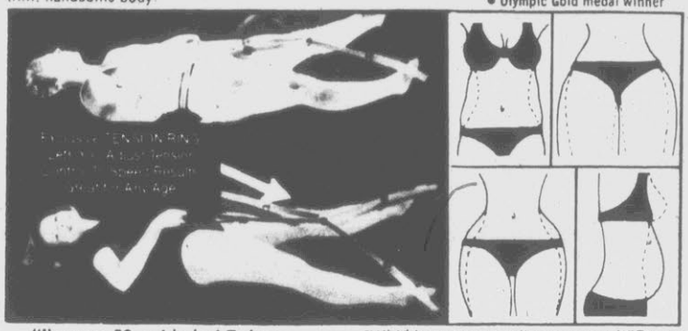
In 7 short minutes a day with the "miracle" of SYNOMETRICS... the fantastic new discovery for speed shaping away ugly, embarrassing fat and flab...to reveal a brand new rock-hard, lean, trim, handsome body!

Introducing IKE BERGER
Olympic Champion and truly one of the world's great athletes
- Olympic Gold medal winner



"I'm over 50, yet in just 7 days SPEED SHAPER™ 'burned' off the fat and flab I've lived with for thirty years."
"I thought my fat and flab was with me for life ... SYNOMETRICS "burned" it off in only 7 days."
HY HARRIS,
New York, N.Y.

IKE BERGER explains SYNOMETRICS

You already know about the Isotonic and Isometric principle of body dynamics. Millions of people use one or the other in their daily exercises. One day I accidentally discovered that if I used BOTH methods together in one single exercise, I automatically speeded up the results tremendously and I reduced my daily exercise hour down to only 7 short minutes.

THE SCIENCE OF SYNOMETRICS

I later learned the scientific reason for this amazing result. It's called SYNERGISM—meaning that when you combine two methods the result is greater than the both of them separately. I now called my new discovery SYNOMETRICS and developed a special exercise unit I call the SPEED SHAPER. And that's just what it is—a speed method to give you results in minutes, NOT hours! Now...build yourself a "fantastic looking body" with the incredible SYNOMETRICS—the invention that works on the exciting new scientific concept of ISOTONIC + ISOMETRIC

THE SEXES

By Norman Lobsenz

Sex and the Single Person

There are more than 53 million single adults in the U.S., and the most widely accepted stereotypes of their life styles characterize them either as "lonely" or as "swingers." This seemed unfair to Professor Leonard Cargan, a sociologist at Ohio's Wright State University. So he decided to compare the behavior and feelings of single men and women with those in a first marriage, a remarriage and with divorced persons.

Cargan's study, reported in the Journal of Family Relations, indicates that for the most part the stereotypes "may have a grain of truth," but applying them to all single persons "is more misleading than revealing." Are singles "swingers"? According to the survey, they have less-active sex lives than either married or divorced persons. And they have fewer sexual partners than the divorced. (At the same time, more of the divorced were "very dissatisfied" with their sex lives.)

How Couples Handle Conflict

Conflict is inevitable in any intimate relationship. But how couples deal with it can either promote understanding and solutions or lead to destructive hostility. Three social psychologists, writing in the Journal of Family Issues, studied nearly 250 couples to see how their different ways of handling conflict affected their marriages.

They found four main types of "conflict resolution":

- Nearly a third of the couples were "nonintimate/aggressive." Not only did conflict increase during an argument, but when the issue was settled one way or another, the couple did not feel close.
- Another third were "intimate/nonaggressive." Their attempts to resolve conflicts took place without attack or blame and increased intimacy.
- One-fifth of the couples handled conflict in a "nonintimate/nonaggressive" way; conflict was mild and intimacy low.
- The last category was "intimate/aggressive," in which angry conflict did not threaten the couple's feelings of closeness.

Conclude the researchers: "Contrary to popular notions, openness in dealing with conflict is not always associated with a high degree of marital satisfaction." Conversely, aggressive arguing does not necessarily make partners less satisfied. Openness appears to require a previous degree of trust, and hostile conflict has no lasting bad effect if couples can expect that intimacy will be restored when the argument is over. FW

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

KID-VID WOMEN: DISTORTED PICTURE

In many ways, the 1970's were the decade of women, but in at least one area females made little progress.

Very few women characters pop up in children's TV or books, and the ones that do are usually portrayed in negative, stereotypical roles, reports Emory University's Richard Levinson. Levinson studied Saturday morning TV from 1969 to 1973 and from 1974 to 1978 and found that the percentage of adult female characters stayed almost the same — about 25 percent. (In the award-winning kids books Levinson looked at, 34 percent of the characters in 1978 were women, up from 18 percent in 1969. But males still comprised 82 percent of the main characters.)

The Jetsons: Among the sexist cartoons.

"The women on children's TV are usually weak, passive, inactive," says Levinson. "There's an occasional Wonder Woman, but most are just along for the ride." Moreover, in 1978, male characters were seen in 95 different occupational roles on kid-vid, females in just 19.

The significance, according to Levinson? "For preschoolers, TV is the early window on the world. It reinforces ideas about what kids can grow up to be."

ENCYCLOPEDIC KNOWLEDGE

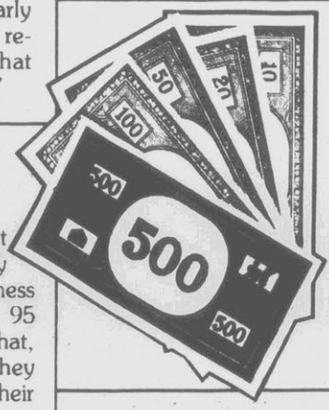
Next time you complain about having to plow through the encyclopedia, think of the poor guy who annually has to approve each of the 27,000 pages, 21,680 illustrations and 30.9 million words in the Encyclopedia Americana.

Henry VIII: Quiet in 1981.

Not every item changes each year, of course. Some things, like the thousands of animals and plants listed, are reviewed only every five, explains Bernard Cayne, editorial director of Grolier, Inc., which publishes the Americana. "Also, dead people are safe," he notes. "It's obvious King Henry VIII is not going to do much this year."

However, Americana's 60 department editors scan their files each year and suggest that subjects be expanded (information added on writer John Updike as he becomes more established); updated (new developments in treatment of Hodgkin's disease); or introduced (350 subjects added last year, from Bjorn Borg to Ayatollah Khomeini, stage magic to mantra, malpractice to nonspecific urethritis).

To make room, subjects are dropped (19th century Egyptologist Samuel Birch), and the population cutoff for cities is raised. "For American cities, 100,000 may be a suitable cutoff," jokes Cayne. "But with India, what can you list about some of those towns except 'crossroads, marketplace and has a temple?'"



EASY MONEY

According to Jeffrey Feinman's new book, The Money Lists, Parker Brothers prints about the same amount of money each year for its Monopoly sets as the U.S. Treasury prints up for us. And, need we add, inflation never hits the Monopoly board. Buying a house on Park Place still costs only $550, land included.

THE CREATIVE JOURNEY

Perhaps the finest moment in Bill Moyers's on-again-off-again relationship with public broadcasting begins this Friday when his final work for them, Creativity With Bill Moyers, premiers over PBS. It promises to be fascinating.

Paraphrasing Justice Potter Stewart's famous description of pornography, Moyers says of creativity, "I can't define it, but I know it when I see it." Funded by a grant from Chevron, the 17-part series explores 17 diverse examples of creativity. Visits with famed creators John Huston, Maya Angelou and Norman Lear (below), a look at Fred Smith, the founder of Federal Express, and innovations in the disposal of our garbage are highlights.

In his research on creativity, Moyers (now back with CBS News) told us he found common threads among creative people. The ability to see patterns and connect divergent ideas, challenge assumptions, take risks, look at life with childlike wonder and seize upon lucky breaks all appear to be basic to the creative process. But someone must touch you early on and let you know you are special.

"When faced with an obstacle," sums up Moyers, "creative people first curse, and then they try to change it. Most people just curse."

NOT-SO-GRIM REAPER

Despite the fact that 1,000 small-scale family farms go out of business each week in the U.S., 95 percent of farmers say that, given the choice, they would continue in their chosen field. This from a recent Cotton, Inc. survey of 560 cotton and noncotton farmers. Only 60 percent of the general public could make the same claim. The survey also found a higher-than-average level of religion down on the farm: 67 percent of farmers say they've had a "born-again" experience.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: "SIR GAWAIN'S RULE OF THUMB," VAL CONTINUES, "WAS THAT A JEALOUS HUSBAND COULD OUTFIGHT THE HUNS. HE FLED WITH TANCRED TO OUR CAMP. I MADE GREAT SHOW OF BATTLING THE BRUTE UNTIL THEY WERE OUT OF SIGHT!

"THEN THE 'HUSBAND' AND HIS DAUGHTER AND I HAD A MERRY SUPPER, RELIVING OUR TRICK.

"AFTERWARDS I BLOODIED MYSELF A BIT AND CRAWLED BACK TO GAWAIN. 'THE SCORE IS SETTLED,' I GROANED, 'YET THE MAID LOVES YOU STILL.'

"SIR GAWAIN WAS FILLED WITH REMORSE. 'HOW DO I SET THINGS RIGHT?' HE ASKED TANCRED. THE SUPERSTITIOUS FELLOW HAD IDEAS APLENTY, AND GAWAIN DID EVERYTHING HE WAS TOLD. IT WAS TOUCHING. I COULD HARDLY KEEP FROM LAUGHING."

NOR CAN VAL'S FAMILY. THEY DO NOT NOTICE A KNIGHTLY PRESENCE LURKING IN THE SHADOWS. "HOW VERY, VERY DROLL," SAYS SIR GAWAIN, STEPPING FORTH AT LAST. "IF THE FUN COMES AT MY EXPENSE, LET REFRESHMENT COME AT YOURS."

GAWAIN DEMONSTRATES THAT HE, TOO, CAN TELL A STORY. "NOT THAT ONE!" VAL PLEADS FROM TIME TO TIME, BUT THE CHILDREN SHOUT HIM DOWN. LATER GAWAIN TAKES VAL ASIDE. "ARTHUR SENT ME. RUMORS HAVE REACHED CAMELOT. SOMETHING STINKS HERE, OLD FRIEND."

"I KNOW," SAYS VAL. "BUT I CANNOT TRACE THE SMELL."
