GET OUT AND PUSH ... These people, at the intersection of Fifth and Evans streets this morning, were typical of many motorists driving on the area's icy streets. Their car just couldn't quite make it up the slight hill after stopping for a traffic light. So they had to get out and push — with the help of the photographer after he took this picture — to get going again. (Reflector Staff Photo)

Snow And Sleet Cause A Rash Of 'Fender-Benders'

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Snow and sleet that fell in the wee hours this morning coated roads and city streets with ice, snarling early morning traffic, closing schools and some plants in Pitt County and making travel hazardous throughout the area.

The precipitation, brought into eastern North Carolina by a winter storm that left the mountains and Piedmont coated with several inches of snow, caught most early-morning travelers by surprise.

Police departments throughout the county noted ice up to one-half inch thick on roads and streets. Although no serious injuries were reported, a rash of fender-benders kept rescue and police personnel busy.

Greenville Police Captain John Briley reported police responded to eight to 10 accidents by 10 a.m. today. "Most of these," he said, "were minor, with no personal injuries."

The North Carolina Highway Patrol reported that the icy

FRIENDS FOR JUVENILES NEEDED

The Third Judicial District Juvenile Court Volunteer Program is in need of persons, especially males, who can share time on a one-to-one basis with juvenile offenders much in need of meaningful mentor relationships.

Juvenile Court Counselor Brenda H. Teel said there has been an increase lately in the number of juvenile offenders, mostly boys, and the court feels that all need these relationships. The program, similar to the Big Brother/Big Sister programs in some areas, is non-funded. "What all volunteers have in common," Ms. Teel said, "is a desire to relate to the needs of youngsters by sharing a little of their free time in a personal one-to-one relationship."

For more information, contact Brenda Teel, 752-1811.

PAPER PICKUP FEEDBACK

Any member of Boy Scout Troop 340, sponsored by St. James United Methodist Church, will be glad to pick up old newspapers, Scoutmaster Wayne Bryant reports in response to a recent Hotline item about who picks up paper for recycling. One may call Bryant after 5 p.m., 752-6826; Reagan Rogers, 758-4024; or Marty Measamer, 756-5830.

William Dorsey, 752-3793, also picks up paper for recycling.

A COLD WALK ... This young woman and her dogs had a cold walk in the snow and ice along Third Street on their way to a convenience store early this morning. The city's Fire-Rescue Department had at least two calls to assist persons who slipped on ice and were injured.

Winter Storm Hits Cities In Northeast

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

A winter storm that left the Deep South frozen in sleet and up to 7 inches of snow pushed into the big cities of the Northeast today as the nationwide death toll from a five-day cold wave climbed to 116.

The record cold that has set 75 low-temperature records since Saturday devastated Florida's billion-dollar citrus crop Tuesday, raising the possibility of higher prices for orange juice, and storm clouds flung sleet, snow and rain from Arizona to Georgia.

Schools closed in Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia today as the storm moved up the Eastern Seaboard with up to 10 inches of snow forecast in the suburbs of New York City.

About 16,000 homes and businesses were without power in Mississippi today with more freezing rain in the offing. In the pre-dawn hours, about 30 truck rigs were stranded on Interstate 55 between Grenada and Winona.

Central Indiana got up to 7 inches of new snow during the night and roads were slippery from a fresh snowfall across Michigan.

Up to 5 inches of snow had accumulated in northern Georgia by today, and some parts of the state had freezing rain.

New snow, in many cases accompanied by sleet, piled up to 7 inches in Arkansas and a foot in Arizona.

Miles of icy highways were closed Tuesday throughout Dixie, and other roads were clogged with stalled and abandoned cars.

Thousands of people stayed home from school and work, water pipes burst and electric service was disrupted as ice caked power lines.

Commercial flights were canceled and public transportation ground to a halt in Mississippi and the Alabama legislature canceled a joint assembly Tuesday night.

"We were scared to be too alarming, but apparently our worst fears were even conservative," said meteorologist Max Blood at the National Weather Service office in Homewood, Ala.

At least 25 states have reported weather-related deaths since Saturday.

There were 18 deaths reported in Illinois; 12 in Pennsylvania; 11 in North Carolina; eight in Texas and New York; seven in Iowa; six in Michigan; five each in Indiana, Wisconsin and Ohio; four each in Minnesota, Alabama and Mississippi; three each in West Virginia and South Carolina; two each in Kentucky, Maryland, and Tennessee, and one each in Nebraska, Connecticut, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Florida and Virginia. Two others were missing and presumed dead in Virginia.

Snowplows in Atlanta were unable to reach some areas blanketed by snow Tuesday night because thousands of cars were still bumper-to-bumper on the city's freeways near midnight. This morning, court officials canceled today's session in the murder trial of Wayne B. Williams, charged with killing two of 28 young blacks who were slain over two years, because of conditions.

Snow began falling on Georgia Tuesday afternoon, and Atlanta was virtually paralyzed by at least 3 inches of snow. City streets were as clogged at midnight as at rush hour.

Louisiana Gov. Dave Treen called up one unit of the National Guard and ordered all state agencies to be prepared for a disaster.

An estimated 14,000 homes in north Louisiana lost electrical power and an unidentified utility company repairmen were electrocuted Tuesday night in Shreveport when he touched a wire severed by a fallen tree limb, officials said.

The biggest hospital in Louisiana, Charity Hospital in New Orleans, sent many patients home, postponed elective surgery and discouraged visitors, in part because water pressure had dropped as homeowners left their faucets on to prevent pipes from freezing.

Most commercial flights in and out of Jackson, Miss., were canceled Tuesday due to ice-coated runways.

Most major highways in Alabama were closed Tuesday. Officials in Tuscaloosa reported four multiple wrecks in one 28-minute period.

Union And GMC Agree Contract Concessions Will Go To Public

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers and General Motors Corp. have agreed to pass along savings from contract concessions directly to buyers, but the government cast a shadow on the concession talks, predicting a massive loss of auto jobs.

The union and the nation's biggest automaker agreed Tuesday that any cost savings that result from union sacrifices to make domestic vehicles more competitive with foreign models would be applied to car and truck prices.

In an appearance on the NBC's "Today" show this morning, UAW president Douglas Fraser said the agreement is unprecedented because historically, "talking about the profits and talking about prices was just not within the purview of collective bargaining. The company would just not talk about it at all."

The union made the same proposal to bargain for Ford Motor Co. late Tuesday afternoon, but Ford officials said they would not respond until today at the earliest. Union talks with both companies were to resume today.

In his TV appearance, Fraser declined to say whether he thought Ford would agree to the savings pass-through. But, he added, "I think they'll be really hard put not to do it" because of competitive price pressures.

Donald Ephlin, UAW vice president and head of the union's Ford department, said prices would drop by "more than $100" a vehicle once the expected worker concessions package is complete.

Robert Dederick, assistant secretary of commerce for economic affairs, said meanwhile the auto and auto-related industries that emerges in the next few years will have 550,000 fewer jobs than in 1978.

About 214,000 autoworkers are now on indefinite layoffs. Asked by reporters what the outlook is for those now on the layoff rolls, Dederick replied: "Half will go into other jobs."

Ford and GM say they need substantial reductions in labor costs to become more competitive with foreign manufacturers. Fraser has said the union would seek its own concessions, especially on job security.

"There will be no concessions to General Motors as such," Fraser said at a news conference at GM headquarters. "Any concessions will go to the consumer, not to the corporation."

The talks, which began Monday, come six months before traditional midsummer negotiations and during the worst industry slump in a half-century.

"We are hopeful and confident that the lower prices will generate a significant amount of additional sales and result in the return to work of many of the 124,000 laid-off GM workers," Fraser said.

GM Chairman Roger B. Smith said the automaker "welcomes the UAW's historic proposal."

Smith said the "heart of the problem" in the industry is "non-competitive labor costs and inflated car and truck prices."

Smith said any cost savings from a new contract would be applied to all GM vehicles sold today or hereafter. The savings per vehicle sold would be returned to consumers, most likely in the form of rebates, after a final agreement between GM and the UAW is reached, he said.

In Washington, Dederick said Tuesday at a hearing of the Senate subcommittee on employment and productivity that since 1978, the auto industry itself probably had lost 100,000 jobs for good. The industry probably will lose another 100,000, he said, and the loss in related industries from 1978 should total about 350,000 jobs.

The industry and its satellites employed 2.8 million people in 1978.

Dederick indicated the administration is holding to its position that the "revitalization of the auto industry depends upon revitalization of the entire economy" and that automakers should expect little special attention.

Fraser called the agreement announced Tuesday a "framework and set of principles" for the current negotiations. He said it calls for any new contract to include greater job security for UAW members, "meaningful protection" from job losses due to the import of parts and components, and "equality of sacrifice" among GM's salaried and hourly employees in any wage and benefit reductions.

Housing Site Is Rejected

The Housing Authority's request to rezone 5.2 acres on the north side of Arlington Boulevard adjacent to the new Boys' Club facility has been withdrawn from the City Council agenda for Thursday night.

Joe Laney, the authority's executive director, said withdrawal of the request follows a visit by officials of the Greensboro area office of the Department of Housing and Urban Development to Greenville on Tuesday. Laney said the officials, after reviewing the neighborhood characteristics, rejected the site as the potential location for 40 units of new low-rent family housing.

He said HUD indicated the site does not meet its guidelines with respect to the number of assisted housing units already in the area, particularly the Lakeview Terrace development across the street. Laney said the authority felt the existing unit aspect would be offset by superior service, shopping, recreation and transportation facilities available to the proposed site.

The authority had hoped to have the site rezoned from the present RA-20 (residential-agricultural) to an R-6 residential designation that permits multi-family housing.

The spokesman said the authority will contact the city Planning Department and Community Development staff in an attempt to find a suitable site for the units but he said he is not sure the authority will be given another chance to re-submit its proposal to HUD.

Utilities Commission Adopts A Reserve Fund

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission last night approved the establishment of a sewer capital reserve fund to help finance a planned new wastewater treatment facility for the city.

The proposed 10.5 million gallons per day wastewater treatment plant is expected to cost in the neighborhood of $11 million, and final design work is already underway for the facility.

When planning for the proposed new facility got under way several years ago, federal and state grants were expected to fund 87½ percent of the cost.

However, state and federal funding for the project is not presently available. In light of the present federal budget cuts, Director of Utilities Charles Horne said last night that "there's not going to be as much (grant) money as we had planned for in the past," and suggested that at best, possibly 50 percent of the project could be financed with grant money.

Money placed in the sewer capital reserve fund can only be used for construction of a wastewater treatment plant. "The fund," Horne emphasized, "simply gives you the vehicle by which you can 'save' money for future long-term capital needs."

The resolution creating the capital reserve fund, with a $7 million ceiling, must also be approved by the Greenville City Council.

Horne told commissioners that preliminary plans for the wastewater plant were delivered on January 4. "Progress on the work seems to be flowing in accordance with the engineer's original time-table," he added.

Bids were awarded to T. A. Loving Co., the low bidder at $49,907, for water line extensions past Wellcome School, and along SR 1415 and SR 1203. A total of 10 bids were received for the work, with the highest being from United Sprinkler at $91,760.

Commissioners also awarded the audit contract for 1981-82 to John C. Proctor & Co. for a price not to exceed $7,000. The 1980-81 audit, also handled by the Proctor firm, was $6,000.

Action was postponed on the consideration of a refund to electric customers for February, and the acquisition of the Vepco Substation here. A special meeting was scheduled for 1 p.m. January 19, to take action on those items.

Vacation Rentals Mean Savings

By MARK D. FRANK
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI)

Three Rochester women think they have an answer for vacationers or business people tired of the sameness of hotel rooms and the high cost of hotel living.

Cici Riley, Annette Waldman and Gloria Gioia — who call themselves experienced travelers — have started a travel service called RAVE, an acronym for Rent a Vacation Every-where.

The firm specializes in putting people into vacation homes, apartments and condominiums in the United States and overseas.

The women can't place clients everywhere just yet. Their business is only several months old. But they can place clients in a "charming" apartment in London's Chelsea area or in locations such as Paris and Mexico, throughout the Caribbean, California, Hawaii, Florida and several other states.

They are currently working on securing properties in New York City.

"It's a two-fold business," said Mrs. Waldman, a former mental health therapist in the Rochester School District who serves as RAVE's vice president. "We have to please the person who owns the property by getting the right type of client and we have to please our clients to make sure they get the right type of property."

RAVE is incorporated as a brokerage firm and travel service so it can rent out of state and abroad. It arranges air travel and briefs clients on where they can find such amenities as shopping and recreational areas, restaurants, beaches and pharmacies in the area in which they are staying.

Many of the rental properties are owned by friends, others by out-of-town families they have contacted throughout the world.

"All of us have traveled widely and we have connections in many places or friends of ours who have relatives in those places," Mrs. Waldman said.

RAVE can make deals for short or long-term stays in either moderately priced or exclusive properties.

The women claim travelers or business people can "save considerably" by renting a property instead of paying for a hotel and going out to restaurants for all meals.

"People have to get used to the idea of staying in an apartment instead of a hotel," Mrs. Waldman acknowledged, "but this gives them the option of dining in or out, plus you have space you don't get in a hotel room."

"We've found in our travels that hotels can be exorbitant if you're staying for an extended period. I rented a house in Florida for a month last year and it worked out beautifully. For an extended stay it paid financially to do it."

"The point is you have it both ways," Mrs. Waldman said. "You can go out as much as you want to. You're saving a tremendous amount, for instance, even if you just eat breakfast and lunch at the spot you're renting."

When she returned from her Florida stay, Mrs. Waldman, Mrs. Riley, a real estate broker who is RAVE president, and Mrs. Gioia, got together and discussed opening a travel business.

"We said renting a vacation spot might be the coming thing and with all the requests we've had it just might be," Mrs. Waldman said. "We did it on guts."

They worked for six months on developing contacts before they opened their business in downtown Rochester late last summer.

They try to get photographs of all the properties so clients know what they'll be getting into and then make the rest of the arrangements. The property owner sets the price and RAVE gets a commission on the rental fee.

There is no fee for the renter, Mrs. Waldman said.

"This gives people a definite option," she said.

"We're very pleased with the way things are going. We didn't think we'd be getting as many requests so I guess a lot of people are considering the option."

Dear Abby

Modest Gifts Could Be Sent

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I married a divorced man who has custody of his two sons. I also have two sons from a former marriage who live with us.

The problem is that my husband's ex-wife has been making a habit of sending lavish Christmas gifts to her sons and totally ignoring my sons. When my boys see the expensive gifts their stepbrothers get, they feel very hurt and left out. This woman was told last year how bad my children felt, but apparently she doesn't care, or she enjoys hurting them.

Abby, am I out of line to demand that either all the children in my household or none receive gifts? Please print your opinion. She reads your column.

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: The woman cannot be faulted for sending her sons lavish Christmas gifts. And to expect her to treat your sons with equal generosity is unreasonable. However, modest Christmas gifts for your children would seem in order.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me if "Disturbed and Guilty," who's secretly in love with her brother-in-law, lives in Philadelphia? I am secretly in love with my sister-in-law. Maybe we can work something out.

STILL SINGLE IN SACRAMENTO

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Waiting Patiently," who couldn't convince her fiancé to have sex with her before their marriage, reminded me of my first husband. He refused to have sex with me until our wedding night. Although I was not a virgin, I always believed that love and total commitment — not the marriage ceremony — should be the prerequisites for sex. But I did what you advised "Waiting Patiently" to do — I thanked my lucky stars that my fiancé respected me enough to wait for our wedding night.

Well, there was no sex on our wedding night either. That's when he broke down and admitted that he was gay. I never suspected it.

I am not saying that all men who want to wait until after marriage for sex are gay. I'm sure most of them are straight, but I think a woman (as well as a man) has the right to know all the facts about her intended's sexual preference.

I am not trying to sell premarital sex, Abby. I feel that sex should not take place until a sincere commitment has been made, and to me, an engagement with intentions to wed is the ultimate commitment. The wedding is the confirmation and celebration of that commitment.

PREFERS A PREVIEW

DEAR PREFERS: Well said. I agree. Sex is not for children or experimenters. It's for mature people who regard it as a commitment.

DEAR ABBY: I am a Hungarian-born woman, 48, and am told that I am very beautiful. However, I have always had a tendency to be slightly plumpish. If I lose weight, my face will sag and become haggard. If I keep my face full and wrinkle-free, then my figure will be too full.

So since I can't have both, which should I choose?

ILLONA FROM BUDAPEST

DEAR ILLONA: Choose your face, and sit down.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If bio-medical technology continues to advance, by the end of this century Americans may have a life expectancy at birth of 85 years, says the American Council of Life Insurance. Life expectancy at birth currently is 74 years.

MINCEMEAT TARTS
A great new use for our favorite easy-to-make pastry shells.

1/2 cup butter, at room temperature
3-ounce package cream cheese, at room temperature
1 cup all-purpose flour
Bottled ready-to-use mincemeat with brandy and rum
Finely crushed shortbread-type cookie crumbs

Cream the butter and cream cheese; work in the flour until blended; cover tightly and chill until firm enough to handle. Using a scant tablespoon for each, shape into balls and press each over bottom and sides

(up to top) of small muffin-pan cups (each 1 3/4 inches across the top and 3/4-inch deep). Add a scant tablespoon of mincemeat to each cup; sprinkle each with 1/2 teaspoon of the crumbs. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until pastry is golden-brown — 30 minutes. Let stand a few minutes then, using a knife tip at the edge, slightly tilt each tart and remove. DECORATING MISTAKES
PORT WASHINGTON, N.Y. (AP) — The three most common mistakes when decorating a living room are: trying to fill up all the spaces; not having a color scheme; and lacking sufficient furniture groupings for conversation.

Designer Eta Wright also says there is good clutter, such as showing off a collection of some kind, and bad clutter.

A GOOD NAME DOESN'T CHANGE
PATCHOGUE, N.Y. (AP) — Barbara and Richard Rossman operate a small store here where mostly coal-burning stoves for home heating are sold.

Rossman, a high-school science teacher, and his wife started their business in their home selling only wood-burning stoves. They chose "The Wood Box" for a company name. The Rossmans moved the business into a separate store here two years ago.

Although 75 percent of their business is selling coal stoves, they kept their original name, The Wood Box.

Low Ratio For Blacks

By The Associated Press
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Of the 15 states with the highest percentage of blacks in their population, North Carolina has the smallest percentage of blacks in its legislature, according to figures from the 1980 census.

Of the 14 other states which are the highest in the country in percentage of black population, all had a higher percentage of black legislators than North Carolina, and 13 elected at least one house of the legislature entirely from single-member districts.

According to the census, 22 percent of all North Carolinians are black. The membership of the General Assembly is 2.3 percent black. That is lower than those states where blacks constitute a much lower percentage of the population than in North Carolina.

North Carolina has five counties of 100 that are predominantly black, mostly in the northeast section.

The entire issue has not yet been discussed in light of the U.S. Justice Department's veto of the state's 1981 Senate, and House redistricting plans. Justice Department officials say the plans dilute the voting strength of minorities in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

BPW Chapter Meets Thursday

This year's first meeting of the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club will be held Thursday at 6:30 p.m. in the Ramada Inn Pageantry Hall for those with dinner reservations. The business meeting will follow at 7:30 p.m.

The program, "A Young Careerist," will be presented jointly by the Young Careerist and Civic Affairs committees. The National Business Women's Week committee will greet guests and members. For further information, call Gladys Stokes, 756-3754, or Doris Marlowe, 756-3868, evenings.

An introductory meeting designed for urban youth interested in 4-H will be held on Jan. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Pitt County Office Building, second floor, 1717 W. Fifth Street.

The program is designed for youths 9-19 and adults who want to discover more about this learning-by-doing program. All residents of the Greenville city area are urged to attend, according to Dale Panero, 4-H extension agent.

For more information, said Panero, call or write the 4-H office at 752-2934, ext. 362, or 1717 W. Fifth St., Greenville.

Development Meeting Set

GRIFTON — A total community development meeting will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria of Grifton School, according to Richard McLawhorn, chairman of the Steering Committee for Concerned Citizens and for a Better Grifton.

"For some time now business leaders and citizens of our area have expressed a desire to collectively work towards making Grifton better," McLawhorn stated. "This meeting will allow the citizens of Grifton to hear speakers Russell Houston, Ervin Gray and others speak on the concerns of the community."

McLawhorn added that those attending will also have the opportunity to discuss their concerns. The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will assist with the planning session, he said.

Persons having questions about the meeting or wishing to make a reservation may call 524-5474, or 524-4521, said McLawhorn.

Four students holding officer positions in the companies are enrolled in the course.

One out-of-area activity during the school year was the attendance in December at a three-day conference in Charlotte by 12 local Achievers.

The Junior Achievers have expressed appreciation for assistance given to their program by Barbara DeVoss of Carolina East Mall; Brad Moore of Moore Mechanical; Dick Flye of Carolina Telephone; Tom Wilbourne of Eaton Corp.; and Goodman Segar & Hogan Inc. of Virginia.

Creative Financing?

Will we see tax decreases or increases?

There are already federal income tax reductions built in for the coming years.

At the same time the federal government is facing monumental deficits and there is still suggestions coming from high officials of selective tax increases.

On the state level, we doubt if anyone would dare try to raise the income tax. Nevertheless gas taxes have been raised and State Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles has suggested that a one cent sales tax increase should be implemented to raise $250 million annually.

At the same time governments are cutting back in employees and services, but the cost of providing services continue to rise.

Almost surely we can expect selective new taxes in the future — those that will put the cost of various services heavily on the users. There will be more direct fees for government services. Bond issues for specific projects will be tied to tax increases, and will face approval by the voters.

It might all add up to a better way of government. If we want road projects we will vote for the funds to pay for them tied to a gas tax increase. If we want inspections programs we will pay the full costs at the time the service is used.

It could be an era of creative financing in government.

Unemployment A Disaster

If inflation rates are coming down, it is not a time to rest easy in our concern about the nation's economy.

Disturbing figures show that the national unemployment rate hit 8.9 percent in December. It was the highest since May, 1975. The Labor Department said nearly 9.5 million workers are out of jobs.

All kinds of people make up the statistics, of course, but it is abundantly clear that many people are included in the figures who stand ready and willing to work at their former jobs.

Inflation was a concern to them, but unemployment is a disaster.

THIS AFTERNOON

The Money Supply

By BILL NOBLITT
(Second of Two Articles)

RALEIGH—When you spend more than you make, the difference is a deficit. The federal government has been running a big deficit for a long time.

There are two ways to make up the difference. You can borrow it. That creates a big demand for money, so the price goes up. Higher interest rates result.

If you are the federal government, you can crank up the printing presses, smear on the green ink and "create" money. That is what has been happening for a long time. The result is more money than there are solid things like goods and services to back it up, and the result is inflation: lots of money bidding for a limited thing.

Much has been said and written of late about the fact that President Reagan will not be able to balance the federal budget by 1984, and that the deficit rather than disappearing continues to grow.

Won't Work
Reagan's critics contend that this proves the inability of Reaganomics to work and means another policy is called for to whip the economy back into shape.

In a review of the economic conditions published in the December issue of "Tar Heel Economist," Michael B. McElroy of the economics and business staff at North Carolina State University takes exception to that notion.

"As people become increasingly aware that the highly optimistic predictions of the more zealous supply-siders are unlikely to materialize, there is some danger that an overreaction might lead to dramatic and ill-considered policy changes, such as credit controls or perhaps even some form of wage-price controls."

McElroy worries.

Such a pessimistic assessment of the consequences of continued deficits is not warranted. It is based on the widely held but erroneous belief that "deficits cause inflation," McElroy worries.

Actually, a balanced fed-

eral budget is "neither necessary to the achievement of a stable price level nor is it sufficient to guarantee it," he concludes. "... However desirable a balanced budget might seem on other grounds, the belief that it will ensure price stability is without foundation."

A balanced budget will reduce borrowing and take some upward pressure off interest rates, and reduce the pressure on the Federal Reserve Board to keep increasing the money supply.

And that is where the primary trouble lies, McElroy says — the money supply.

Elsewhere
Over the years when the federal deficit was either constant, or actually decreased, and the inflation rate continued to increase, the source of inflation must lie elsewhere than the federal budget, McElroy concludes.

The "statistical evidence is now overwhelming that the main cause of excessive demand growth in the United States has been continued rapid increases in the nation's money supply," he says.

It is not necessary for Reagan to cut or eliminate the deficit so to achieve price stability. If he can just keep it from growing while the federal budget is reduced, the fiscal policy will not be inflationary.

Ultimately, McElroy says, "It must be the monetary policy of the Federal Reserve that takes the bulk of the credit or blame in the battle against inflation."

When a rapidly growing money supply is brought to heel, and when investors and producers are finally convinced that inflation is under control and today's dollars can be safely invested without losing their value in several years, the economy will move toward stability.

By ART BUCHWALD

The media keep getting blamed for all sorts of crimes committed against the government, but very little is mentioned about how many times the press is used by the government to do its dirty work.

Take the recent firing of the President's national security stablehand who, when it came to Mr. Reagan's horseback riding, was considered one of his closest advisers.

The stablehand, Horatio Bridle, had irked high members of the White House staff with an interview he had given to Sports Illustrated saying the President kept slipping off his saddle. Since this was privileged information, the White House aides decided Bridle was not a team player and had to go. But no one had the nerve to break the news to the President's stablehand.

So one of the aides called up his good friend Sam Dunreedy of the ANC Evening News and said, "Ask me a question about Horatio Bridle."

Sam said, "What's going on with the President's stablehand?"

"I can't tell you," the aide replied and hung up.

This was enough for Sam. He went on the air that night and said, "White House sources hinted today that there could be a big shakeup in the President's stable. Mr. Reagan is said to have expressed dissatisfaction with the constant bickering going on between his national security stablehand adviser and the grooms at Quantico, where his horse is kept."

The next morning, crews from all the major networks were staked out at Bridle's house. When he left for work, cameras were shoved in his face, and he was asked if he was on his way out?

"No one has spoken to me about it," Bridle said. "The President has told me I could have the stablehand job as long as I wanted it."

That afternoon, Lilly Stall, the CBT White House correspondent was having lunch with a Reagan insider. He said, "Ask me if Charlton Dancer is being considered as a replacement for Horatio Bridle as the President's national security stablehand."

Lilly said, "Is Charlton Dancer being considered to replace Bridle in the White House?"

"There is no truth to the story whatsoever."

Lilly rushed back to her place in front of the White House and reported to the TV audience, "Despite denials from the President, it has now been decided to replace Horatio Bridle with Charlton Dancer, who was stablehand to Mr. Reagan when the President was governor of California."

By this time Bridle was becoming frantic. He went to the White House aides and asked to see the President, so that he could be assured once and for all that his job was not in jeopardy.

The President agreed to see Bridle, and afterwards said, "Horatio is the best stablehand I've ever had."

A White House aide standing next to Jackie Woodley of NBZ whispered to her, "Ask me if this is the last time the President will ever see Bridle again."

"Is this the last time the President will see Bridle?" The White House man said, "No comment."

Jackie went on the air that night and said, "NBZ has learned today that despite the meeting between President Reagan and Horatio Bridle the President will announce the appointment of a new national security stablehand tomorrow. White House aides said the vicious attacks and innuendoes by the media on Bridle now make it impossible for him to do his job."

Mistake By A 'Survivor'

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Elevator talk at the White House on the first working day of the new year was less about the arrival there of William Clark than a curiously related event: the acute embarrassment of communications director David Gergen.

To the surprise of all the president's men (Gergen included), this usually-discreet Washington survivor was on record in the Baltimore Sun sniping at President Reagan's decision against higher taxes. Copies of the article were joyfully passed among Gergen's adversaries on the White House staff, who whispered that he had wounded himself, possibly beyond repair.

This capped off a quick change of atmosphere at the White House, easing fears by "Reaganaut" conservatives that the Reagan revolution was losing its meaning. Gergen's embarrassment was the frosting on two transcendent developments: President Reagan's continuing resistance to higher taxes and Reaganaut reinforcement in the person of Clark as national security adviser.

In contrast, conservatives were in despair as Christmas neared. Chief of staff James Baker, viewed by the right with suspicion as a Ford-Bush Republican, seemed to have taken command unmolested, as seen in two recent appointments: Ken Duberstein (a one-time aide to liberal senator Jacob Javits) as chief lobbyist and Rich Bond (Vice President Bush's political aide) as Republican deputy national chairman.

The thin blue line of Reaganauts, meanwhile, was fading. Richard V. Allen, the doomed national security aide, could claim more valid Reagan credentials than all but a few of his colleagues. The long-planned departure Jan. 21 of political aide Lyn Nofziger would remove the one conservative on the White House staff able to walk into the Oval Office to take his case to the president.

Most depressing to the conservative movement were unpublicized plans to leave in January by White House lobbyist William Gribbin, a right-wing intellectual who labored backstage all year to preserve Reaganism. His departure was interpreted as a sign that crusading for conservative causes was now more promising outside than inside the White House.

The mood changed abruptly with the shift of Clark, Reagan's first executive director as governor, from State Department to White House. He is viewed as an instant counterweight to Baker, turning the top-level staff into at least a Big Four and perhaps a Big Two (with Baker). Insiders expect him to reinforce the fading power of oldtime Reagan aide Edwin Meese rather than supplant it.

Simultaneously, the zest seemed to go out of Baker's efforts to convince Reagan, against his own instincts, that $45 billion in higher taxes is essential. That is why the opposite-editorial-page article in the Jan. 4 Baltimore Sun by Washington freelance writer Steven Beckner raised eyebrows.

In Beckner's piece, the care about public quotations habitually exercised by Baker lieutenant Gergen turned to garrulity. "Gergen expressed doubts about the fiscal and monetary course his boss is committed to," Beckner wrote, adding that Gergen also told him "he didn't feel it would be politically damaging for the president to renege on tax relief...." The last paragraph attributed to Gergen this condescension: "Don't worry. The supply-siders aren't going to get thrown out of the White House."

Even more interesting than these comments was the reaction to them at the White House. One senior aide snapped that Gergen's remarks showed that the survival of David Stockman as budget director had removed any deterrent from administration officials trashing their president. Lesser aides claimed that Gergen had shown that, as they had claimed and he had denied, he had leaked the flood of news accounts of imminent tax increases, whether the president wanted them or not.

A discomfited Gergen told his superiors and colleagues

Strength For Today

NOT FOR A SAVIOR

As Jesus hung on the cross, his enemies passed by and taunted him, saying, "He saved others, himself he cannot save. He is the King of Israel: let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe in him."

It was beyond the comprehension of the traditionalist of the day to realize that evading the cross is the one thing a savior can never do. It was true of Jesus that he saved others but could not save himself; not that he lacked the power to do so, but because if he had done so he would have ceased to be a savior.

Jesus had assumed the sins of the world, and having taken that great burden upon his heart and soul, he had to carry it without thought of self. In a more mundane, but quite valid way, the same thing applies to us all. If we are going to serve, we must give up thoughts of self. If we would serve others we must renounce all thoughts of saving ourselves. — Elisha Douglass

Other Editors Say No Perfection

(Washington Daily News)

We can look at the present trial taking place in Atlanta completely divorced from any racial motives. That of itself should make it easier to find justice; but as we examine this case, just as in so many others, pure justice or absolute perfection is impossible.

There just is no way we can be sure. The 28 young blacks slain in Atlanta have drawn attention worldwide. Newspapers, television stations, magazines, radio stations, and people in everyday conversation have talked of the tragedies which have taken place there.

Then along comes an arrest and a defendant is charged with two of the 28 murders. All over America the stories have been many, and America knows that Wayne Williams is being tried for those two murders.

America knows that if Wayne Williams should be found guilty, his own life is in jeopardy. But America and Americans do not want him to be found guilty through stories in the news media; and already hour by hour and almost minute by minute in Atlanta the charge of bias against Williams can be heard.

In the questioning of prospective jurors, some even admitted that they felt only one side of the case had been presented and that all they know was what they had read and heard. However, let it be said that presenting the side of Wayne Williams has been impossible since his own lawyers have told him not to talk and reporters have been unable to get close to him.

So we have the picture of his lawyers charging news media bias, charging the public has heard or read only one side, and that it is impossible for Williams to get a fair trial.

But he must be tried somewhere in America if there is sufficient evidence to indict him. Whether he be tried in Atlanta or New York or Los Angeles we are not going to find many people who have not heard about the case.

So the real question, as we see it, revolves around the very honesty and integrity of people chosen as jurors — regardless of where they live, their race, their profession of advocacy or their station in life in any respects.

It is possible for human beings to hear or read stories and then mete out what they believe to be pure justice. It is possible to hear one side on television or read it in newspapers and then weigh the one side against the other side as presented in court.

There is no way ever to reach absolute perfection in this trial or in any other case. But this thing of yelling bias so often is vastly overplayed. We believe Williams can get a fair trial in Atlanta. We believe he is getting a fair trial; and we believe the jurors will speak the truth with their verdict as they believe the truth to be.

that he had frantically searched his records for an interview with anybody named Beckner, to no avail. Finally, he learned that he had met Beckner at presidential speechwriter Aram Bakshian's Christmas party and engaged him, he thought, in casual conversation. The usual complaints of being taken out of context, distorted and misquoted followed.

If Dave Stockman survived 18 tape-recorded interviews replete with betrayal of the president's program, Dave Gergen will not be fired for one undocumented indiscretion over holiday cocktails. Nevertheless, one senior White House aide told us: "You can't be too careful about what you say in Washington."

That is quiet advice that the time to end the public tax increase campaign is long past. The 1982 mood at the White House, with power relationships unresolved in the wake of Judge Clark's arrival, is

Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A woman says she saw Wayne B. Williams with one of his alleged murder victims nine days before the young man's body was found, although Williams said last summer he knew none of the city's missing and murdered black youths.

Margaret Carter testified Tuesday that she saw Williams, 23, a black freelance photographer, sitting with Nathaniel Cater at a picnic table in a park across from her apartment May 15. Carter's body was found floating in the Chattahoochee River on May 24, two days after Williams was stopped near the Jackson Parkway bridge in the pre-dawn hours after a police stakeout officer heard a loud splash in the river.

Prosecutors contend Williams killed Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, and dumped their bodies into the Chattahoochee.

The two victims were among 28 young blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period were the subject of an investigation by a special police task force. No arrests have been made in the 26 other slayings.

Williams told reporters at a news conference he called in June that he knew none of the 28 victims.

Mrs. Carter, who said she had known Cater for several years because he dated her niece, also testified that she saw a station wagon parked nearby.

Although she did not identify the color of the station wagon in direct testimony, she said under cross-examination that she initially told investigators it was light blue. Previous witnesses have indicated Williams often drove a white station wagon.

She said she also saw a German shepherd running in the park.

Prosecutors have contended that dog hairs and synthetic fibers found on the victims are identical to fibers found in Williams' home and hair from his German shepherd dog.

After her midafternoon testimony, Judge Clarence Cooper recessed the trial because of a snowstorm that struck the city.

Alvin Binder, one of Williams' lawyers, suggested during his cross-examination of Mrs. Carter that she fine-tuned her story during seven or eight meetings with up to 10 prosecution investigators.

But Mrs. Carter said she told the same story to those officers that she told to defense investigators who subpoenaed her for a pretrial interrogation at the courthouse.

Although she said she did not know Williams, Mrs. Carter said she recognized him on television and recalled that she had seen him "sitting in the park on that bench with Nathaniel Cater."

"Are you sure?" assistant district attorney Jack Mallard asked.

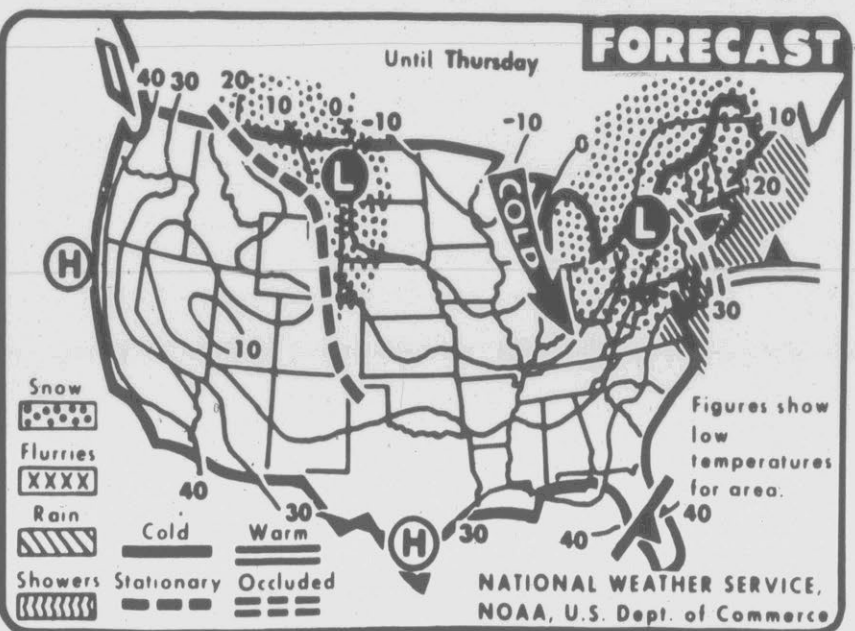

"I am sure," she said.

"Any question in your mind whatsoever about it?"

Mallard asked.

"No," she responded.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow, with rain along the coast, is expected in the forecast period until Thursday morning for the Northeast. Snow is also forecast for the northern Plains. Cold weather faces most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
A winter storm warning remained in effect today for the mountains, foothills, Piedmont and northern coastal plain. Travelers' advisories were in effect for the rest of the state.

Low pressure centered along the Gulf coast extended north into the Great Lakes area this morning. Ahead of the trough of low pressure snow developed across the mountains late Tuesday and spread across the state Tuesday night.

This complex weather system will move east today and tonight. The center of the low pressure will most likely move northeast along the coast of the southeastern states tonight and early Thursday.

This will cause wintery precipitation across North Carolina today into Thursday. In the west the precipitation will be mostly snow but may be mixed with sleet at times. In the east the precipitation will begin as sleet and snow. The sleet and snow will change to freezing rain this morning and to rain during the afternoon.

High temperatures today will be in the 30s across western and central sections and in the 40s elsewhere. Lows tonight and highs Thursday will also be in the 30s and 40s for the most part.

Under cloudy skies last night lows were in the 20s and low 30s. Highs Tuesday afternoon were in the mid-20s to mid-30s.

Recreational weather outlook: Small craft advisories are in effect for the coastal waters and sounds of North Carolina. Northeast winds at 15 to 25 knots will shift to southerly late today or early tonight and to northwest by late tonight.

Reagan Vows To Curb 'Loose-Lipped' Bureaucrats

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Frustrated by news leaks, President Reagan is vowing to use "all legal methods" to ferret out loose-lipped bureaucrats and curb their contact with reporters.

Reagan, who claimed unauthorized disclosures of classified material have become a "problem of major proportions within the U.S. government," issued a statement Tuesday spelling out ground rules for meetings with reporters.

The directives, based on recommendations from the new national security advisor, William P. Clark, apply to the National Security Council staff, employees of the State and Defense departments and the intelligence community. White House officials said.

The president said government employees who plan to discuss classified information with reporters must obtain prior permission. After the interview, they must issue a report "recording the subjects discussed and all information provided to the media representatives."

Reagan's crackdown also calls for reducing the number of officials with access to material involving NSC matters. That number "will be kept to a minimum essential to the orderly conduct of the government's business," he said.

Like many presidents before him, Reagan acknowledged a lack of success in identifying the sources of leaks so far. But he warned:

"Henceforth, in the event of unauthorized disclosure of such information, government employees who have had access to that information will be subject to investigation, to include the use of all legal methods."

Reagan's statement did not specify what punishment would befall an employee who leaked, but an official said those details would be worked out later.

In a related development, the Pentagon confirmed that Deputy Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci has voluntarily taken a lie detector test as part of a Pentagon investigation to determine who leaked a secret report to The Washington Post last week.

Pentagon spokesman Henry E. Catto Jr. said Carlucci and several other members of the Defense Resources Board have taken the test.

The report obtained by the Post stemmed from a board briefing by Pentagon research director Richard D. DeLauer, who estimated that the Joint Chiefs of Staff's estimate for rearming America could cost $750 billion more than previously projected.

Concern over leaks thus has moved beyond the joking stage with Reagan, who once said the chandeliers in the Cabinet Room must have ears.

"It's become less of a lighthearted response and more of a serious concern," a White House official said. "There have been several serious incidents of leaked national security information."

The official, who asked not to be identified by name, cited reports of a Libyan hit squad and the administration's refusal to sell advanced fighter planes to Taiwan as examples of leaks that have particularly concerned the president.

According to another official — who also asked not to be identified — leaks have almost tied Reagan's hands in foreign policy areas "since inaccurate stories in the press have ruled out an option he was considering or jeopardized an ongoing policy."

Reagan also apparently fears leaks may dry up intelligence sources or even endanger the lives of people who supply intelligence information, the official said.

Reminded that former President Nixon created the "White House plumbers" unit to stop leaks in his administration, the official replied: "Every president has been concerned about this problem. Every president has taken remedial steps to deal with it. This president is attempting to do it."

Nixon's use of the "plumbers" was one of the reasons the House Judiciary Committee's recommended his impeachment in 1974.

In a separate written statement, Clark said the administration is "acutely aware that the American people have a right to know, through the free press, what their government is doing."

He added: "The press has been doing its job — collecting information — better than the government has been doing its job — protecting national security information. These limited measures are designed to restore a balance that has been lost."

City Auto Tags

Floyd Little, city tax collector, said there seems to be some confusion as to the city's automobile licensing procedures for 1982.

Little explained that the only local change that has been made for 1982 is that city automobile tags are for sale only at the city hall tax office and not at the N.C. License Agency on Dickinson Avenue.

The spokesman said city tags, which cost $5 per vehicle, must be displayed by midnight on Feb. 15. He said vehicle registration cards are needed in order to purchase city tags.

According to Little, the city is still operating under the old renewal system and has not implemented staggered terms relative to tag expiration. City tags still expire on Dec. 31 and vehicle owners have until Feb. 15 at midnight to renew and display the local tags.

New Tanks For Combat Troops

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army's weapons system director says he has "high confidence" that most problems have been solved with the new M-1 Abrams tanks being issued to combat troops in West Germany today for the first time.

"We are absolutely confident that the tanks we are giving the troops are ready for combat," said Maj. Gen. James P. Maloney.

Maloney said in an interview that the M-1s being turned over to an armored unit in West Germany all have "up-to-date fixes" correcting durability problems in the tank's power train, which includes its turbine engine and transmission. Some design changes have been made to correct deficiencies, he said.

Although Maloney acknowledged some problems with the M-1 remain, he described them as minor.

The 58-ton M-1 is the first entirely new tank fielded by the Army in nearly 20 years. It is also the most expensive tank ever made, costing $2.6 million each.

Gen. John W. Vessey Jr., the Army's vice chief of staff, claimed last November that the M-1 is the "best tank in the world." However, some Army experts have indicated they are uncertain whether the M-1 is superior to the newest Soviet tank, the T-80.

Maloney said the Army has shipped 75 M-1 tanks to West Germany so far and has trained officers, non-commissioned officers and mechanics in preparation for issuing them to troops.

The first unit to be armed with the new M-1 will be a battalion of the 3rd Armored Division.

The M-1 has been a focus of controversy for much of the program's nearly 10-year development history.

The General Accounting Office recommended last month that the Army delay large-scale production, contending the turbine engine and other elements of the power train have failed to measure up to durability standards the Army set when production began in May 1979.

Maloney has challenged the GAO position, contending that an independent technical panel enlisted by the Army reported last August that "durability should meet or exceed" requirements after already-designed corrections are made.

Other major problems which have brought the M-1 into question in Congress have included engine vulnerability to breakdown because of dust and less-than-anticipated service life of its tank tracks.

Maloney said the dust problem, which showed up in extensive testing was solved when Chrysler, the builder of the tank, redesigned the air intake system.

As for the service life of the tank tracks, Maloney said the original objective calling for 2,000 miles of use before replacement appears to have been unrealistic. He said the current tank treads last for 1,050 miles, and efforts are being made to find ways to extend that service life.

The M-1 became officially operational last January when it was assigned to a battalion at Fort Hood, Texas. That unit subjected the tank to additional testing.

"This tank has been more thoroughly tested than any the Army has ever bought," Maloney said.

Current plans call for the Army ultimately to buy 7,058 M-1 tanks.

Larger Burden For Students, Parents

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The director of financial aid at Appalachian State University says college students and their parents will have to bear a greater share of the burden for paying the cost of higher education.

Steve Gabriel said every major federal source of financial aid to college students has been reduced in recent months by the Reagan administration as well as by Congress. He said its likely the funds will undergo further reductions.

"We talk about hard times now, but I really don't think we realize what hard times are yet," Gabriel said.

Appalachian State has been allocated some $171,000 less than last year to give qualified students for the 1981-82 fiscal year. This figure does not include reductions in aid from other federal sources and matching state aid.

"It's going to get progressively worse," said Appalachian State vice chancellor for student affairs David McIntire. "I hate to be the prophet of doom, but the social programs are being sacrificed and that will reshape student access to higher education."

CHEESE LINE — Washington, D.C. residents crowd around a table at a local Baptist church Tuesday to receive shares of surplus cheese being given away by the government. Church volunteers gave away nearly 3,000 pounds of cheese in five-pound blocks. (AP Laserphoto) Washington Post photo by Fred Sweets.

Thousands Line Up For Free Cheese Allotment

WASHINGTON (AP) — One woman complained that it smacked of bread lines in the Depression, and others grumbled about spending two hours standing in the cold to get a free five-pound block of cheese.

But most of the nearly 600 people who got free cheese at the First Rising Mount Zion Baptist Church on Tuesday were simply grateful for the gift of processed American cheese, worth up to $15 at store prices.

"It's better than nothing..." Barry Hawkins said happily. "Whoever is behind it, we really appreciate it."

The Reagan administration decided recently to free 30 million pounds of cheese for distribution to the poor from a surplus of 560 million pounds piled up under a dairy price support program.

By day's end, approximately 3,600 families got a share of the 18,000 pounds of cheese given away at six Baptist churches. Hundreds of others who showed up were too late for Tuesday's allotment, but a total of 100,000 pounds eventually is to be distributed in this predominantly black city.

Claudia Campbell, 34, stamping her boots in the 26-degree cold, complained, "This is the beginning of a depression. This reminds me of the '30s like my mother told me when everybody was standing in bread lines."

The mother of four said, "I don't have nothing personal against Ronald Reagan. He's trying to give us something, but he took so many jobs from poor, black people."

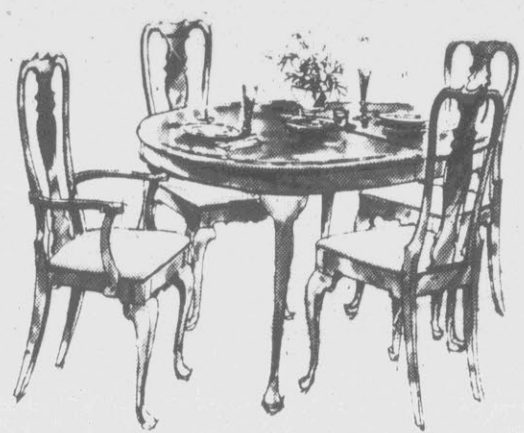

Hawkins, 25, who is unemployed, said he and his mother and two brothers will "try to stretch the cheese until next month. We'll have grilled cheese and macaroni and cheese and eggs and cheese."

"I appreciate the cheese very much. It's good to have when you have a lot of children," said Ada Jolly, 53, who is raising five.

Critics Blast Vietnam Veterans Memorial Design

By MIKE FEINSILBER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Six weeks before the groundbreaking for the nation's memorial to Vietnam veterans, Interior Secretary James Watt is surprising the monument's sponsors by saying work cannot proceed until he approves the design.

Watt's action comes against a clamor of opposition to the design from critics, many of them conservatives, who say the design reflects the war that was fought in this country over the war rather than the bravery of the soldiers in the field.

Watt originally approved the design last June, but he told monument sponsors that modifications had been made and said the final version requires his approval.

At the same time Watt raised his caution flag, 27 Republican congressmen denounced the design in a letter to President Reagan as "a political statement of shame and dishonor" and asked that another design be selected.

And another critic, Texas computer millionaire H. Ross Perot, said he is going to have a survey conducted in the next few weeks by a reputable polling organization at his own expense to see if most Vietnam veterans share his repulsion over the design.

If they do, he says, he is sure the project somehow can be redesigned, although he was not certain how that could be brought about.

Perot called the design a "tombstone" and a "trench" and said delay would be preferable to the erection of a monument abhorred by those it is intended to honor.

"People feel like it's a slap in the face," he said in a telephone interview from Dallas.

The design is avant garde — a far cry from the customary warriors' monument of gleaming marble.

It calls for a monument of polished black granite and descending 10 feet into the ground. Two walls are to meet in a wide V, with the names of 57,692 war dead and 2,500 still listed as missing chiseled into the walls.

Some critics think the "V" stands for the peace sign that used to be flashed by antiwar protestors. The National Review, a conservative magazine, said the design "immortalizes the antiwar signal" and called it an "outrage."

The letter by Republican congressmen, written by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., argues that politically considerations shaped the monument plans.

"We feel this design makes a political statement of shame and dishonor rather than an expression of our national pride at the courage, patriotism and ability of all who served," the letter says.

"A new jury ought to be appointed less intent on perpetuating national humiliation no matter how artistically expressed."

The dispute has plunged into controversy an idea which sailed through Congress, hailed by hawk and dove alike.

It was the brainstorm of a wounded infantryman, Jan Scruggs, who buttonholed congressmen to set aside land between the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial for a Vietnam memorial.

Scruggs formed the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, which has raised half of the needed $7 million from

Failed To Pay Social Security

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The president of S&G Services of Dunn has pleaded guilty to 16 counts of failing to make required deposits of over $130,000 in Social Security taxes and income withheld from employees wages.

U.S. Magistrate F. Stuart Clarke sentenced Robert E. Rupert to three years' probation. In addition, Rupert was ordered to engage in public work one day per week for six months starting in October.

A spokesman for the IRS said its investigation revealed that Rupert unlawfully failed to comply with the provisions of the Internal Revenue code by failing to deposit $131,394.47 in taxes withheld from employees' wages during a portion of 1981.

The maximum sentence for the charges is 16 years imprisonment and/or a fine of $90,000.

the public. Ground is to be broken March 1 and the monument dedicated next Veterans' Day.

A national contest to design the monument was won by Yale architecture student Maya Ying Lin, 22, of Athens, Ohio, daughter of two Chinese scholars at Ohio University.

Until Watt's letter arrived last week, Scruggs thought all required governmental approvals had come through.

Although Watt said the monument plans still needed his approval, his letter expressed no opinion of the design.

Scruggs said the modifications were made to assure the handicapped access and to add an inscription to meet critics' contention that the memorial honored only those who died or were missing, not all who served.

Scruggs said he will meet with Watt "to answer his questions."

He said he is consulting with experts to see if a mailed poll could be accurate. He said veterans who approve of the design might be more inclined than opponents to throw away a poll.

"A poll that is done fairly will show the widespread support there is for the memorial," Scruggs said. "The reason we have been so successful in raising funds is because across the country it has been the Vietnam veteran who has put together the fund-raising drive."

Rep. Lawrence J. DeNardis, R-Conn., is circulating another letter to colleagues in response to Hyde's.

"Congress has no business meddling in subjective judgments about the design of a memorial we are not financing," DeNardis wrote, adding that he senses "an odor of mischief" in the efforts to discredit the jurors who approved the design.

Circulated Costly Coins

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — A suspected car thief who spent $75 in dimes and quarters from the auto's trunk didn't know the coins were worth $532, police say. And he left untouched 200 silver medallions worth $1,800.

Minted before 1964, the all-silver coins are worth at least seven times their face value. Now they may be in the hands of filling station attendants or in the tills of food stores somewhere along U.S. 101 between Salinas and Santa Barbara, where the man was arrested, police said Tuesday.

"Someone out there has a lot of expensive money," said Detective Tom Huff.

The rolls of dimes and quarters in the trunk of the 1980 Pontiac Grand Prix had a face value of $500. The car was stolen Monday after its owner, Harry Ruch, stopped for lunch.

The suspect had spent $75 of the coins, at face value, before the car was recovered in Santa Barbara nearly 12 hours later when the California Highway Patrol stopped the driver for suspicion of drunken driving. Police arrested Jose Ponce, 21, of Mexicali, Mexico.

Scuttling Of Old Subs Concerns Environmentalists

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Environmentalists are upset over a proposal by the Navy to scuttle five decommissioned but still radioactive nuclear submarines off the North Carolina and California coasts. "The vessels they're considering dumping are actually quite radioactive," said Jon Hinck, Washington representative for Greenpeace, an international environmental activist group. The California Coastal Commission, a state agency which regulates its shoreline, is cautiously studying the Navy's proposal. "We obviously are quite concerned," said William Travis, deputy director of the commission. "We don't quite understand what the Navy is doing. We're looking at our legal authority."

One of the five vessels, the Triton, is in "protective storage" at the Naval Shipyard in Norfolk, the Navy said Wednesday.

North Carolina officials, however, said this week they were unaware of the Navy's plans to study a site off the Outer Banks as a graveyard for obsolete nuclear vessels.

The Navy has ordered an environmental impact study on the disposal of the five subs, which officials said could be followed eventually by the scuttling of up to 100 nuclear ships as they wear out.

Sites to be studied for sea disposal are deep troughs 200 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras off the North Carolina Outer Banks and 160 miles northwest of San Francisco on the Pacific coast, the Navy said.

Four of the five decommissioned nuclear subs are in mothballs on the West Coast.

The Triton, once the world's largest submarine at 447 feet in length, is docked at the Naval Inactive Ship Maintenance Facility at the Naval Shipyard here. It was deactivated in 1968 after only nine years at sea — the first U.S. sub to be powered by two nuclear reactors.

The subs are stripped of nuclear fuel when deactivated, but their reactors remain somewhat radioactive, according to Navy Ensign Jim Kout, a Pentagon public affairs spokesman.

They would release that radioactivity as they decayed on the ocean bottom, the Navy has said.

Kout had no exact figures on the level of radioactivity of the ships, but said the Navy had determined it is within the limits for sea disposal of radioactive materials set by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Kout said the Navy has ordered a full environmental impact study before any ship is scuttled, and that although the site off North Carolina is one of two being studied, it is not necessarily the spot that will be chosen.

The Navy, he said, also will consider land-disposal options.

North Carolina's chief of Radioactive Protective Services, Dayne H. Brown, when told of the possibility that nuclear vessels would be scuttled off the Outer Banks, said he was "not alarmed."

"But it's the kind of thing I'd like to know more about," Brown said.

He said he would "reserve my final comment until I see exactly what they are finally going to submerge."

If the ships are sunk 200 miles off the North Carolina coast, Brown said, they probably wouldn't cause any direct problems to coastal inhabitants. But, he added, even though no direct impact on the coast is likely, North Carolina could be affected by the disposal.

"A lot of activities are conducted out of North Carolina that could be affected," Brown said. "People might be taking fish on top of them."

Brown said he would wait until the Navy releases information before advising the governor or legislature about the dangers of the scuttling plan.

Environmentalists are concerned about the effects of sinking radioactive material in the sea.

Hinck called the Navy's preliminary observations "voodoo, oceanography," saying it is impossible to determine the effects of nuclear dumping in the ocean.

West Coast studies have found traces of radioactivity in fish that have been feeding near old nuclear-waste ocean dump sites, said Bob Alvarez, director of the nuclear weapons and environmental project for the Environmental Policy Institute in Washington, D.C.

More Victims In El Salvador

SAN SALVADOR (AP) — Judicial authorities say 26 more unidentified people have been found shot to death on the outskirts of San Salvador, apparent victims of the continuing political violence in this Central American nation.

The bullet-riddled bodies were found at dawn Tuesday.

An army spokesman said sporadic fighting developed in Usulután province southeast of the capital as government troops carried out a large-scale "search-and-destroy" operation following guerrilla attacks last Thursday that killed at least 30 civilians and government troops.

The spokesman said there were no reports of casualties in the latest fighting. But residents of the area claimed guerrillas set up roadblocks and were demanding "war taxes" from motorists along the highway connecting Usulután with San Salvador.

In northwestern Santa Ana province, guerrilla bombs derailed the engine and three cars of government freight train, while other guerrillas in the province set fire to a truckload of sugar cane from a government plantation, army sources said. No casualties were reported in either attack.

The guerrillas' Radio Venceremos claimed seven members of the government's security forces were killed in fighting between the leftist rebels and the forces of the U.S.-backed junta. Church and human rights groups estimate 32,000 people have been killed in political violence since the junta came to power in October 1979.

Three Wrecks Are Reported

More than $4,000 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville Police yesterday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from a 9:30 a.m. mishap on the J. D. Dawson Co. parking lot on Tenth Street, involving two driverless cars.

Police said a parked car owned by Betty Baker Wooten of Fountain, rolled from a parking place and struck a parked car owned by Stephen David Smith of 107 Cherry Ct., causing an estimated $1,000 damage to each of the two cars.

Cars driven by Joan Arnette Anderson of Bell Arthur, and Melinda Waters of Route 3, Plymouth, collided about 11:47 a.m. at the intersection of Fourth and Pitt Streets, causing $250 damage to the Anderson car and $900 damage to the Waters auto.

Frances Davenport White of Washington, was charged with failing to stop for a stop light following investigation of a 5:25 p.m. collision at the intersection of Greene Street and Airport Road.

Investigators reported the White car collided with an auto driven by Raymond Elijah Downing of New Bern, causing $750 damage to the Downing car and $175 damage to the White vehicle.

Denial Of Tax Exemption May Pose New Dispute

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's call for legislation to deny tax-exempt status to private schools that discriminate racially may embroil the administration in a constitutional argument even as it tries to solve a sensitive political problem.

A case pending before the Supreme Court raises the question of whether denial of tax-exempt status to schools that claim their racial policies are founded on religious beliefs violates the First Amendment.

Reagan said Tuesday he is "unalterably opposed to racial discrimination" but also opposes government agencies taking action reserved to Congress.

And he said that was just what the Internal Revenue Service was doing when it denied tax-exempt status to Bob Jones University in South Carolina and the Goldsboro, N.C., Christian Schools because they discriminated on the basis of race.

The schools say their racial policies are based religious beliefs and have argued before the Supreme Court that being denied tax-exempt status abridges their constitutional right to the free exercise of religion. The Goldsboro schools do not accept black students and Bob Jones University has a rule against inter-racial dating among its students.

The Supreme Court agreed last October to consider those arguments and has been expected to rule on the issue by July.

So by saying he would submit legislation to "prohibit tax exemptions for organizations that discriminate on the basis of race" and specifically mentioning the two church schools involved in the court test, the president appears to be moving the White House into the legal controversy.

Among those opposing the government position in that court case: the 2.8-million-member Mormon Church, the National Jewish Commission on Law and Public Affairs and the National Committee for Amish Religious Freedom.

An administrative decision announced Friday to reverse an 11-year-old policy and allow tax-exemptions regardless of a school's racial policies ignored the civil rights establishment within the government, according to sources familiar with how the decision was reached.

It also prompted strong protests from some of the president's own aides and was followed by Tuesday's announcement that the administration would seek legislation to make the IRS do exactly what the president said Friday it should not do on its own.

The president's decision to seek the legislation upset the Rev. Don Tice, principal of the Goldsboro Christian Schools.

"I do think it's terrible that someone in as high a position as the president of the United States could make a decision and after two days of pressure completely reverse himself," Tice said.

"This is more than a question of race. It's a question of religious liberty," he said. "The inflammatory issue of race is being used to cover up the real issue. The IRS knows it can get away with it because people feel so strongly about race."

David R. Gergen, the White House director of communications, said Reagan was disturbed by suggestions that Friday's decision was being interpreted as racist.

He indicated the decision was initiated outside the White House and that only after the IRS made the decision was the White House contacted for the president's concurrence.

But that view was contradicted by one administration source who said it was his understanding that "it was a White House call implemented by the agencies."

He said top officials at the IRS, who had opposed the initial decision announced Friday, had been overruled.

"If the IRS was against it, the pressure had to come from some place," he said. "My understanding is it came from the White House."

He also pointed out that Congress had been pressing the IRS for several years to curb its zeal in denying tax exemptions and expressed skepticism that the legislation Reagan called for would be passed.

But he said strong support from the president might make a difference.

This source, who asked that he not be further identified, said Friday's decision to, in effect, extend tax-exempt status to schools that discriminate had been very closely held at the top of the civil rights section of the Justice Department. He said civil rights lawyers who could have warned the White House about the political problems it would encounter with the decision were ignored.

But on Tuesday, three blacks in the administration, including Samuel R. Pierce, the secretary of Housing and Urban Development, brought that message to Reagan in two separate meetings.

One White House official said privately that "the blacks in the administration came forward and said there's an awful lot of stirring out there in the black community and the president said 'this is not the signal we want to send.'"

Another administration official, also asking that he not be identified by name, said when asked whether pressure from civil rights groups led to the president's decision on submitting legislation: "There's a lot of merit to that."

Guilford's Social Services Inundated

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Guilford County commissioners might have to come to the rescue of the county's social services department, which has been inundated with requests for help, officials said.

"To date, we've taken 2,273 applications in the County Financial Assistance in five months," said Social Services Department Executive Director Frank Wilson, adding that the figures did not include December or January. "That's about 450 per month."

Wilson said that because his department's funds are rapidly being depleted and requests are increasing, the department may request additional funds from the county.

A decision about the request will not be made until the department knows how federal budget cuts have affected Guilford County. But Forrest Campbell, chairman of the Guilford County Commissioners, said the money will come from the county contingency fund, which was budgeted to take care of emergencies.

The only way the department will be able to help people through the winter and handle requests for additional funding will be with a "crisis intervention fund" developed from money received from a federal government energy program, Wilson said.

If the department's application for the money is approved, most of the $30,000 available in the fund will be used for emergency heat, fuel and space heaters.

"They're always here," Wilson said of the crowd at his office. "You can't blame them. We try to help them but it's so frightening. Some have children and any day someone might freeze to death. We can't allow that."

Soviet Experts Pessimistic

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet defense specialists believe the Kremlin will have to expand its SS-20 missile force and set it for an almost instant attack-on-warning response if the United States deploys medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, says an American arms control advocate.

Randall Forsberg, who met with several Soviet arms control specialists last month in the Soviet Union, is director of the Institute for Defense and Disarmament Studies in Boston, a private organization not connected with the government.

Miss Forsberg said the Soviets she talked with view the nuclear arms control process with deep pessimism bordering on "quiet despair."

She spoke with reporters Tuesday at a meeting arranged by the American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker political action group. The meeting coincided with the resumption in Geneva of U.S.-Soviet talks aimed at reducing or eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe.

Miss Forsberg said the Soviet experts professed to believe that prospects for an arms control agreement with the United States are "very bleak."

These Soviet defense specialists view the ground-hugging cruise missiles and the Pershing II, with its short delivery time, as so threatening that their deployment would cause the Soviets to set their SS-20 medium-range missile force for a hair-trigger response to an attack, she said.

Further, she said, the Soviets view the eventual deployment of the new U.S. nuclear-armed missiles as almost inevitable unless it can be stopped by the peace movement in Western European nations.

Miss Forsberg was in the Soviet Union from Dec. 6 through Dec. 18 and said she spoke to about 40 people at five Soviet research institutes.

She said the Soviets specialists told her they believe it doesn't matter what the Soviet Union does or what concessions it makes because the Reagan administration is determined to pursue a large-scale military buildup.

Nonetheless, she said she was told the Soviet Union plans to abide for the present by most of the terms of the unratified SALT II treaty in the hope of bringing pressure to bear against the United States.

The Soviet specialists see the Reagan administration as rejecting nuclear arms control and the idea of parity, seeking nuclear superiority instead, she said.

She said that since the December 1979 NATO decision on deploying the cruise and Pershing II missiles to counter the Soviet SS-20 missiles the Soviets have delayed phasing out older weapon systems "to retain some bargaining chips."

The bottom-line Soviet position, she said, appears to be that at least some SS-20s must be preserved to counter the 263 British and French delivery systems which are not included in the Geneva talks.

And, she said, the Soviets fear that if the Geneva negotiations succeed in eliminating medium-range missiles from Europe, the United States will merely pull back to sea-based systems that could still hit targets inside the Soviet Union.

Box Turtle

Has Friends

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Bending to the request of a fourth-grade class, state Sen. John Kasich has introduced a bill seeking to make the box turtle the state reptile.

Calling the box turtle "mild-mannered, courteous and well-liked," the students in Betsy Martin's class at Chapelfield Elementary School in Gahanna convinced Kasich to support their request.

"In the fable 'The Tortoise and the Hare,' the tortoise won the race because of his slow, constant pace. Our lives are like they are today because of the slow, constant work the early Ohioans put into the making of this state," the students said in a letter to the Republican lawmaker.

"Little Turtle was an Indian chief who lived in Ohio much of his life. He was mild-mannered, courteous and well-liked, as is the box turtle," they said.

Kasich's bill, offered Monday, isn't the only one dealing with animals currently before the General Assembly.

House members last year approved and sent to the Senate a measure making the white-tailed deer the official state animal. Pending in the lower chamber is a measure that would have given the same status to the cottontail rabbit.

Snow And Sleet...

road conditions in Pitt had contributed to from 25 to 30 minor traffic mishaps by 10 a.m.

Patrol Sgt. R. B. Miller said from Troop A headquarters here that most of the mishaps involved "people in ditches" and minor bump-ins, with "no injuries" reported. "It's the same way all over eastern North Carolina," Miller said. "Williamston (Highway Patrol) radio has been constantly assigning troopers to wrecks."

Greenville Fire-Rescue Department spokesmen said they had responded to four rescue calls by mid-morning — twice to traffic mishaps with minor injuries and twice where people slipped on the ice and fell.

At 11 a.m., no fires had been reported.

Both county and city schools closed today. "It was just too risky to put those buses on the road this morning," said Thomas Craft, associate superintendent of Pitt County schools. "All students and staff, with the exception of the 12-month personnel, stayed home today."

Craft said he hoped schools would open as usual Thursday. "We can't tell, but if it's as slippery as today was, we'll either open late or close."

Greenville city school officials said they hoped to open Wednesday also, but would not if icy conditions prevailed.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital's emergency department reported a flurry of activity between 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. after what had been "a normal morning," according to an emergency room spokesman. "We had five rescue squads come in between 10-11 this morning," said the spokesman. "Most of the injuries were from auto accidents, but none were very serious."

The snow didn't maroon many travelers in Greenville, according to the Holiday Inn and Ramada motels, who reported no onslaught of stranded motorists checking in this morning. Few were refraining from checking out because of the weather, either, said the motels.

Greenville Utilities reported no electrical difficulties during the day and no demands beyond what assistant director Malcolm Green called "normal for a winter day."

The ice, however, hindered efforts to repair a gas leak in a line on Memorial Boulevard, said Bill Weston, head of the gas department.

"We restored service," he said, "but the ground is frozen and the leak is in a place where we have to dig by hand. That makes it very tough for those men to dig with shovels."

Lows are expected to dip below freezing again tonight, making driving difficult again early Thursday.

"We would urge people not to drive if they don't have to," Greenville Police Capt. John Briley said. "If you have to get on the road, though, drive slowly and don't follow too close to the car in front of you."

"Leave early, take it easy and pick routes without inclines," he added. "It's the inclines that have been messing drivers up today."

Suggest Purge In Polish Party

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet press today indicated a purge of the Polish Communist Party is under way with the Kremlin's blessing.

The article in the government-controlled trade union newspaper Trud quoted a Communist Party official in Warsaw as saying that individuals whose ideas were not always consistent with those of the Polish party should be dismissed.

"It is now important to get rid of people who change their views depending on the situation," Z. Tokarsky, first secretary of the Warsaw Communist Party District Committee, was quoted as saying.

"We do not need such people," he was quoted. "No matter that our ranks will become smaller. The main thing is to preserve healthy forces in the party and step up ideological work. We must go into the masses."

Inclusion of Tokarsky's remarks in the Soviet newspaper was regarded as a sign that the Kremlin is behind the Polish party's efforts to purge members who took a liberal attitude toward the now-suspended independent trade union Solidarity. The Soviet press rarely quotes, at length, views that are at odds with the Soviet position.

CAR AND TRAIN COLLIDE — Four persons were reported injured Tuesday afternoon when the car they were in collided with a northbound Seaboard Coast Line train near Winterville. The driver of the car was identified by Highway Patrol Trooper R. G. Pierce as Walter Grant Boswell. The car was headed west on rural paved road 1708 when it collided with the side of the train, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the engine and $4,000 damage to the car. Boswell was charged with exceeding a safe speed. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

NCNB SCHOLARSHIPS — Officials of North Carolina National Bank make presentation of a $2,000 check as the initial contribution to establish an annual NCNB Scholarship at East Carolina University. Five separate scholarships are to be awarded each year from the total NCNB contributions made annually. One will be a full tuition and fees academic merit scholarship for an incoming freshman. Four others, for one-half tuition and fees, will be awarded to juniors and seniors in the ECU School of Business. Receiving the initial contribution at left is former Vice Chancellor-Institutional

The meeting of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission, scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight, has been canceled due to the inclement weather.

The monthly meeting has been rescheduled for Jan. 20.

Arrest Man On Robbery Count

Greenville police arrested Bobby Ray Williams, 25, of 1700 Evans St. about 2:30 a.m. today on armed robbery charges — 30 minutes after a man allegedly held a knife to the throat of Allen Daie Briggs of Hampton, Va., and took $20 from him.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers saw Briggs and Williams scuffling on the ground, in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets, and thought they were playing in the snow. They then saw Briggs run. When Briggs saw the police car, he reported that he had just been robbed.

Williams, who ran toward Evans Street Mall, was located at the Past Fare on Cotanche Street and taken into custody. The $20 was recovered.

Certificate To Realtors Board

The Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, meeting Tuesday, received the "Order of the Long Leaf Pine" certificate from two representatives of the Governor's Office of Citizen Affairs.

The award was presented for the board's participation in the national "Make America Better" and "Private Property Week" competition. The local board has won national and state awards for its efforts in the competition for several years in a row.

Jane Miller and Pat Brock made the presentation to David G. Nichols Jr., past president of the board; Anne Duffus, "Private Property Week" chairman, and Thelma Whitehurst, "Make America Better" chairman.

A letter was read from Gov. Jim Hunt thanking the board members for their continuing volunteer efforts to the local community.

The board won the Governor's Volunteer Service Award last year.

READY TO BEGIN — Yellow cleanser and purple tracks of dye mark the head of Joy Wayte, indicating where incisions for her brain surgery will be made. (AP Laserphoto)

DURING THE OPERATION — Several hours after the start of Joy Wayte's surgery her brain is exposed. She is still awake so she can help the surgeon identify the area controlling her muscle movements. (AP Laserphoto)

Gamble By Joy Wayte

SEATTLE (AP) — It will be months before doctors know for sure whether the 8½ hours of brain surgery Joy Wayte endured successfully removed her epilepsy.

It seems to have worked. And Joy, 19, a University of Washington student, says almost anything is better than the unpredictable, paralyzing seizures that gripped her body, sometimes three times daily, since she was 8.

Once, last September, while eating with friends, she suddenly became silent. Her eyes widened.

She jerked her head from side to side, no longer hearing the din of clattering dishes or seeing her pals.

"Eh? Eh? EWif?" she blurted.

Friends touched her, one held her hand, another put an arm over her shoulders.

The tension left her body, her eyes relaxed from their wide stare and panic left her face.

She'd had another seizure. For years she went to psychiatrists, hypnotists, biofeedback instructors, took medication, all in vain.

The abnormal electrical currents sputtered through her brain, sending garbled messages that spelled momentary unconsciousness or convulsion.

Last spring, Dr. Robert Wilkus, her doctor at the regional Epilepsy Center at Seattle's Harborview Medical Center, said he'd try one more medication to stop the seizures.

If that didn't work, he'd recommend brain surgery. The new medication didn't work.

The surgery countdown began.

Tests revealed some good news — the epileptic focus was on the right side of her brain and speech was on the left, so her speech would not be affected by surgery.

She went into surgery the morning of Oct. 1. Her head had been shaved — and she was awake.

Dr. George A. Ojemann, University of Washington neurosurgeon, needed her help to identify the part of her brain controlling her muscles.

She felt no pain because the skull and brain have no pain nerves. An anesthetic was injected into her skin to stop the pain there.

"Joy, you're going to hear a sound like this," said Kim Burchiel, chief resident in neurosurgery and another member of the surgery team.

"Don't be scared, OK?" "Unnh hummah," she said.

He held the half-inch drill bit next to Joy's skull, above her right ear, pressing down so hard that his forearms shook from the pressure.

Joy's head was pushed inches into a blue doughnut cushion.

Burchiel lifted out a circle of skull. Joy moaned. Her legs shook so badly that a nearby metal stand holding intravenous solutions rattled.

Burchiel peeled back the membranes covering the gray folds of her brain, plaited with red and purple blood vessels.

Electrodes rested on Joy's brain, giving doctors the rare chance to observe brain waves coming directly from the brain, bypassing the distorting layers of skull and skin.

Wilkus and Ojemann found clearly marked sharp waves — the mark of epilepsy — and Ojemann stimulated her brain with pulses of electricity to map the area controlling her muscles.

"What do you feel, Joy?" he asked.

"My lip just tingled!" she replied in surprise.

He continued mapping. Joy had the eerie feeling that someone was manipulating her like a marionette, pulling her lips with strings from a control box in her brain.

The area governing these muscles was well away from the location of her epilepsy, which meant Ojemann could remove the epileptic tissue without much fear of causing damage.

For 1½ hours of surgery, Joy literally donated her brain to science.

She agreed to help in two studies, one looking at how facial expressions are identified, the other seeking information on how muscle movements are controlled.

Finally, Ojemann put on a headlamp, invited Joy to drift off to sleep with the help of a narcotic, and began the slow, careful surgery to remove a piece of brain about the size of a small plum.

He checked a monitor for the sharp brain waves that spelled epilepsy. The doctors conferred and agreed to remove another small amount of tissue.

Suddenly, there was a problem.

Joy couldn't squeeze her left fingers. She was awakened. She couldn't squeeze her left hand or wiggle her toes.

Ojemann's face mask puffed out with exhalations of frustration.

"She wasn't like that before. We hardly did anything to her in the meantime," he told the chief resident next to him.

Ojemann left surgery and told Joy's parents, Michael and Carole Wayte of Mercer Island. "We had a little problem and had to close up early."

"What happened I don't know. Everything had been going well until then. So I quit. It seemed the smartest thing to do."

"We removed the bulk, but not all, of the epileptic brain."

Joy was discharged from the hospital on Dec. 3, but it will be months before Joy knows if her epilepsy is cured.

Some patients have no seizures after the operation but they come back in a few months. Others have seizures at first but not later.

Joy has had no seizures. "I'm really happy about that," she said.

She's optimistic that she has been cured.

She lost most peripheral vision in her left eye, but it is returning. She has almost perfect vision in the right eye.

BEING MONITORED — Joy Wayte underwent 8½ hours of brain surgery to remove her epilepsy. In this photo, taken in August of 1981, Joy's hair has become a hopeless tangle of electrodes and glue after being monitored continuously on the EEG at Harborview Hospital in Seattle. (AP Laserphoto)

Hole Is Shot In Rear Door

Greenville Police, responding to a report of a shooting at 1407 North Washington St., about 12:51 p.m. yesterday found a hole in the rear door of the dwelling.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Booker Darden told investigators that he had fired a shotgun through the door when someone attempted to break into his house.

A search of the area failed to turn up any sign of anyone being injured by the blast, the chief noted.

Court Candidate Is Visitor Here

Marvin Schiller, a candidate for the North Carolina Court of Appeals seat now held by Judge Ed Clark, was a guest at the Pitt County Bar Association meeting here Tuesday night.

MARVIN SCHILLER

Schiller, earlier in the day, visited the East Carolina University campus and other places in the city, seeking support for his candidacy.

Schiller received a Ph.D. degree in philosophy from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in 1970, where he was a Woodrow Wilson and National Defense Education Act Fellow, then earned his law degree from Duke University in 1975.

Clark is not seeking reelection.

Before joining the N.C. attorney general's staff in 1978 as an assistant attorney general, Schiller taught philosophy at UNC-Chapel Hill, Southern Methodist University and the University of Toronto.

He left the attorney general's office last year to enter the private practice of law as a partner in the Raleigh firm of McDaniel, Heidgerm & Schiller, and is an adjunct member of the philosophy faculty at N.C. State University, where the focus of his teaching is ethics, political theory and legal philosophy.

While an assistant attorney general assigned to the education section representing the state's universities, Schiller served as appellate counsel in over 30 civil and criminal cases before state and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court.

He was counsel for the state of North Carolina in the recent Freeman case in which the state Supreme Court reversed the lina's anti-pronography statutes, and has been the prevailing attorney in at least his last 10 appeal cases, including the Mayberry case, in which the plaintiff was seeking reinstatement and damages from ECU.

Schiller has served as a consultant to the Ethics Committee of the N.C. State Bar for the past three years, was draftsman of the bar's new ethics procedures which became effective in 1979 and authored a paper on the legal ethics of trial lawyers which was presented in 1978 at a meeting of the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers.

Schiller is married and has two children.

'John Doe' In Hospital Care

Pitt County Memorial Hospital is providing critical care treatment to an unconscious "John Doe" who was injured when he was hit by a car Saturday night in Northampton County.

Hospital Administrator Jack Richardson said the hospital is cooperating with the N.C. Highway Patrol in trying to learn the identity of the man, described as black and probably in his 40s.

According to Trooper R.E. Worley, who investigated the accident, the man was walking in the middle of the eastbound lane of U.S. 158 about 3.4 miles east of Conway when he was struck by a car driven by John Perry Harris of Murfreesboro. No charges were filed against the driver.

A spokesman for the Roanoke Rapids Highway Patrol office said fingerprints and pictures have been taken in an effort to determine the identity of the man who apparently was "a transient."

Report Rash Of Auto Mishaps

WILLIAMSTON — icy roads creating hazardous driving conditions resulted in a rash of automobile accidents in Williamston and throughout Martin County this morning. In Williamston alone, police responded to 15 vehicular accidents between 6 and 10 a.m.

No serious injuries were reported.

Police in Robersonville, the county's second largest town, reported five accidents, with no injuries sustained by people involved.

County roads, according to a spokesman for the Highway Patrol office, were slick and hazardous. Several wrecks were being investigated by the patrol, which also said numerous vehicles slipped into ditches or stalled along roadsides.

Public schools were closed today but most industries in Martin County continued operations.

ECU Out To Win 5th Straight At Home

A Staff Report

East Carolina's Pirates return to the hardwood Thursday night, hosting the University of North Carolina-Wilmington in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges Coliseum.

East Carolina, 6-6 overall, hasn't lost on the Minges floor this season, having rung up four straight victories. Ironically, the last home court loss came at the hands of the Seahawks, 57-55, last season.

Coach Dave Odom has announced that Charles Watkins, who has been on personal leave of absence from the team, will return to the Pirate squad for the Wilmington contest.

Odom emphasized that Watkins' absence over the past week, did not stem from basketball, but was for other personal reasons. "We're glad to have him back, but he hasn't practiced in over a week, so he's out of shape. I don't know whether he'll play or not (against Wilmington)."

Watkins had been the leading returning scorer on the Pirate team from last year, but had performed far below that level in games to date this season.

Wilmington comes into the game with a 7-6 record following

Lady Pirates Stun UNC, 71-66

CHAPEL HILL — East Carolina's Sam Jones pumped in 19 points and Loletha Harrison held North Carolina's Kathy Crawford scoreless for the first time in her college career last night as the Lady Pirates pulled off their second straight upset of an Atlantic Coast Conference team, dumping the Tar Heels, 71-66.

Crawford, a 5-11 junior forward, played only 15 frustrating minutes in the game, and failed to score from the floor. It was the first time she had ever been scoreless during his three-year career at North Carolina.

North Carolina's Tresa Brown tried to take up the slack, firing in 30 points on 14 of 20 field goal attempts and two of two from the line, but it wasn't enough to overcome the pesky Pirates, now 6-7 on the season.

North Carolina drops to 7-6 on the year.

Early in the second half, East Carolina, down 37-36 at intermission, ran off a string to take command. The Lady Pirates scored the first six points on a pair of jumpers by Jones sandwiched around a basket by Mary Denkler. The Lady Pirates never lost the lead again after that.

Jones, who scored 14 of her 19 points in the second half, paced the way, while point guard Lorraine Foster and Lillian Barnes helped pushed the lead out to as much as a six-point lead, but couldn't break away from North Carolina.

With 2:54 left, and time running out on the 30-second clock, Fran Hooks hit a jumper from the key for a 64-58 lead. From that point, the Tar Heels had to resort to the foul, and in the final minutes, East Carolina connected on five of six free throw tries to put the game away.

In the first half, Brown scored 18 of the first 20 Tar Heel points as the Heels moved out to as much as four points, 32-28, in the late stages of the period. Brown hit a pair of free throws to make that margin.

A Hooks jumper with seven seconds left in the half pulled the Pirates within one, 37-36, and set the stage for the second half takeover by East Carolina. East Carolina's game plan, with Denkler getting double-teamed, was to get the ball to the off-side for the short jumper, and it worked quite well, according to Coach Cathy Andruzzi as Jones, Barnes, Hooks and Foster got 10-foot jumpers near the basket.

In the meantime, East Carolina's defense made it tough on the Heels to score inside. After shooting 56.7 percent in the first half, the Tar Heels shot 40 percent in the second. Double-figure scorers Crawford, Henrietta Walls and Meredith White contributed a total of eight points in the game.

Turnovers also were a key factor in the game. The Pirates forced 23 by the Tar Heels, while committing only 15 of their own.

Despite a wide Tar Heel rebounding edge, 48-31, Harrison ended the game as the overall leader with 11. Carolina was paced by Ranti Killian with 10 and Brown with nine.

In addition to Jones' 19, Denkler finished with 13, while Barnes had 12. No one besides Brown scored in double figures for the Lady Heels.

"Our kids played an excellent, excellent basketball game," Andruzzi said. "The difference in the game was that our kids played solid, fundamental basketball."

"Usually, when you are out-rebounded like we were and outscored from the floor, you lose, but the key was that our kids have matured and took the ball from them. We had only 15 turnovers to their 23 and we

Kinston Defeats Rose, 73-60

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Herbie Suggs poured in 23 points and led unbeaten Kinston to victory over Rose High School last night, 73-60 in a game closer than the final score indicated.

Earlier in the evening, Rose High School's girls evened their Big East record at 2-2 with a 46-43 win over the Valkyries.

Rose went into the fourth period behind by only four points, and was just six behind with 2:45 left to play.

But the Rampants got overanxious to catch up, put up bad shots, and lost control of the backboards and Kinston took advantage of that to pull away for the relatively easy final.

Shooting was a key factor in the game. Kinston, which took most of its shots from the lane or the area just adjacent to it, banged in 29 of 52 shots, an outstanding 55.8 percent. Rose, however, earned just 25 of 69, a cool 36.2.

It was a difference the Rampants could not overcome, despite holding a 40-36 rebounding edge, and having one less turnover than did the Vikings.

"I still say," Coach Jim Brewington said afterwards, "that if we could start getting some help from our people up front, it would make a big difference in our game. Our little kids played their hearts out, but we're just not getting it from the people we should be getting it from."

That was borne out in the scoring. Of the 60 points, 42 came from people who are guards or swing men.

"I think we did give 'em a run for it," Brewington continued.

Kinston's ability to move through the lane to get the easy basket bothered Brewington, however. "Playing man-(to-man defense), our big men are not compensating. We're not playing good team defense right now. I think we did a great job on the boards, considering the height difference."

Rose also was beaten on a number of occasions on the transition basket, but Brewington said he didn't feel that this phase hurt as much as he thought it would.

"Kinston has a good club, and Suggs is a fine player. He's one of the better guards around."

Rose got off to a slow start, as Kinston scored the first six points. But after twice matching points with the Vikes, Rose poured in six in a row and took a 10-8 lead. Russell Perkins hit on four of the first five Rose baskets, as Donnell Lee hit the tying shot. Perkins then scored again for a 10-8 lead, but Kinston tied it up again.

Lee, the smallest man on the court, then scored on an alley-oop, giving Rose one last lead at 12-10 with 2:32 left in the first period, but Kinston came back with eight straight points, six of them by Roy Sutton, to move out to an 18-12 lead at the horn.

The Vikings scored the first two baskets of the second period to run the lead out to ten, 22-12, but Rose scrambled back and closed to within four, 28-24 with 2:36 left in the half. Kinston again pulled out to an eight-point spread behind Suggs, 38-30, but Rose scored at the horn to cut it to 38-32 at intermission.

Midway through the third period, Kinston got three straight, including a slam dunk by Suggs on the fast break, to up the lead to 12, 50-38. That came on a tap-in by Sutton with 3:45 showing.

Rose rallied, however, scoring eight in a row to pull back within four, 50-46, and trailed, 52-48 at the end of the frame.

But the Rampants got no closer. Suggs and Derrick Johnson each scored four points as the Vikes ran the lead back to 12, 62-50 with 3:35 left. Another Rose run cut the back to 62-56 as Barry Smith hit two long bombs, but that was as close as they came.

Hurrying after that, Rose committed several turnovers, and missed on five of its last six shots as the Vikings made good on their final four field goal attempts, and also added three of four free throw attempts.

In addition to Suggs' 23, Dalton Frizzell, Sutton and Johnson each added 14.

Rose was led by Perkins with 14, while Smith and Freddie Cherry each had 10.

The loss dropped Rose to 5-6 on the year and 0-4 in Big East play. Kinston is now 13-0 overall and 4-0 in the league.

Sampson Held To Six Points In 45-40 Victory

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va (AP) — Jeff Jones scored five points in overtime and helped Virginia rebound from a 12-point deficit to beat Maryland 45-40 Tuesday night in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

The third-ranked Cavaliers trailed by 10 at halftime as Maryland used its slowdown offense through nearly the entire game. After freshman Adrian Branch scored the first two points of the second half, the Terps led 26-14.

Over the next 15 minutes, the Cavaliers outscored Maryland 19-6 and grabbed their first lead of the game, 33-32, with 3:01 to play. Jones had six points in that run.

The Cavaliers led 34-32 after All-American Ralph Sampson hit one of two free throws with 2:14 remaining, but Maryland's Herman Veal tied it at 34 with two free throws with 1:31 left.

Sampson, who was held to just six points by Maryland's collapsing zone defense, missed two free throws with four seconds left in regulation that could have given the Cavaliers the victory five minutes sooner.

However, Jones hit a 10-foot jumper with only four seconds gone in overtime, stole a pass from Maryland's Reggie Jackson and hit a driving layup with 1:30 left as Virginia led 38-34.

The Terps, who now have four of their last five, outscored Virginia 11-2 in the final 8:18 of the first half behind freshman Branch and with the help of a four-corner stall.

The Cavaliers, rebounding from a 65-60 loss to top-ranked North Carolina last Saturday, came out in the second half much more aggressively on defense, forcing Maryland into several turnovers that helped overcome the Terps' advantage.

Maryland, now 8-5 and 1-4 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, drew within three points, 43-40, with 13 seconds left in the overtime on a pair of jump shots by sharpshooter Pete

Holbert, but two free throws by Tim Mullen, Virginia's freshman forward, sealed the victory with 11 seconds left.

The Cavaliers are now 13-1 and 2-1 in the ACC.

Jones finished the game with 12 points and was the only Virginia player in double figures. Branch topped Maryland with 15.

Heels Put No. 1 Ranking On Line Against NCSU

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—The basketball rivalry between North Carolina and North Carolina State, always an intense struggle no matter how good or bad the teams are, takes on added significance tonight when the squads tangle in Raleigh.

The Wolfpack, picked to finish in the lower reaches of the Atlantic Coast Conference, has bolted to a 12-1 record overall and 12th place in the latest Associated Press ranking of college basketball teams. N.C. State is also atop the conference with a perfect 3-0 record.

North Carolina has dispatched all 11 of its challengers this season and is one-half game behind the Wolfpack in the chase for conference regular season honors. And, despite the rivalry, N.C. State coach Jim Valvano says he's facing what he believes is the best team in the country.

"Carolina is legitimately the No. 1 team," Valvano said, "not because they're unbeaten, but because of the schedule they've played."

N.C. State is the fourth nationally-ranked team the Tar Heels have faced in the 1981-82 campaign. They knocked off Tulsa in the third game of the season in December, then whipped Kentucky in the Jersey Meadowlands the day after Christmas. North Carolina made it three-in-a-row with last weekend's defeat of Virginia.

Both the Wildcats and the Cavaliers were second-ranked in the country when the Tar Heels captured their victories.

North Carolina coach Dean Smith has reason to be concerned about the Wolfpack, especially since he managed a pair of narrow victories last season over basically the same team.

"We struggled to beat State twice in the regular season last season," Smith said. "Now they are a vastly improved team."

Sophomore center Sam Perkins will lead the Tar Heels into battle, averaging 16.4 points per game. Junior forward James Worthy is right on Perkins' heels with a 15.7 average. But the biggest factor in the North Carolina season may be its bench strength.

Uncertain how his team would perform if a starter was removed from the lineup, Smith got clutch free throw shooting from junior reserve Jim Braddock in North Carolina's 65-60 victory over the Cavaliers.

"Against Virginia, they got a key question answered — their bench play," Valvano said. "Braddock came in and did a marvelous job."

Jaguars Edge Chargers, 55-54

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer
LITTLEFIELD — It was an evening filled with opportunities — most of which were missed by one team searching for its initial Eastern Carolina Conference win and by another team out to end a three-game losing streak.

In the end, it was a free throw by Stuart Gordon with five seconds left that lifted Farmville to a 55-54 win Tuesday evening in an exciting, if not well played, Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton rolled past Farmville Central, 53-37.

"I've never seen anything like it," Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said. Added Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey: "I can't say that I have (seen anything like it before)."

What left both coaches searching for comparisons with past performances was the final 47 seconds of a game that, at times, neither team seemed to want to win.

With both Melvin Sutton and Andrew Edwards on the bench with five fouls for Farmville, Ayden-Grifton scored five straight points to cut the Jaguar lead to 50-46 with 3:20 left.

The Jaguars then managed to run over a minute off the clock before Gordon hit a jumper to give Farmville a 52-46 lead with two minutes left. On their ensuing trip down court, the Chargers had two one-and-one chances, but made only one free throw.

Gordon then hit both ends of a one-and-one to give the Jaguars a 54-47 lead with 47 seconds left. Farmville scored just one more point before the game ended. The Chargers, meanwhile, continued to close the gap.

Two free throws by Calvin Peterson made it 54-49 with 36 seconds left. A-G's Thomas Anderson, back in the Charger lineup for the first time since breaking his arm on Dec. 15, leaped to intercept a pass at midcourt. As he was falling out of bounds, Anderson threw the ball back in to teammate Tyrone Gay.

Gay raced in for a layup and was fouled. He missed the free throw, but the Chargers were now within three (54-51) with 30 seconds left. Farmville's Bobby Carraway was fouled moments later, but missed the free throw. On the rebound, Anderson was fouled.

Anderson hit the first but missed the second free throw as the Charger inched within two, 54-52, with 27 seconds left. On the rebound, Farmville's Tony Hargrove was fouled.

Hargrove missed the free throw and as A-G center Jonathon Woods went after the rebound he was fouled. Woods' free throw rolled off the rim and Gordon managed to grab the rebound and was fouled with 12 seconds left.

Gordon connected on the first free throw. However, his foot was on the line and the free throw was disallowed.

Following an Ayden-Grifton time out, the Chargers were called for five seconds. The Jaguars, however, returned the favor by being called for a five-second turnover of their own.

The Chargers managed to get the ball to Bernard Cannon on the ensuing inbounds play, but Cannon was forced to the sideline by Bobby Carraway and stepped out of bounds.

Farmville got the ball in bounds and Gordon was fouled. Gordon swished the first free throw to give the Jaguars a 55-52 lead with five seconds left. He missed the second, but the victory was Farmville's. Anderson's layup at the horn only provided the final margin.

"It was a night of missed opportunities," said Murphrey, whose Chargers have now lost three straight and are now 4-8 overall and 1-3 in the ECC. "I am frustrated. I really am. We only made 16 of 30 free throws, and in a one-point game that's only one thing we didn't do right."

"I just thought we played poorly. I don't know anything we did well," he added. "I really don't. We didn't shoot well. Out ballhandling was ragged and our defense...I was really disappointed in our defense. We seemed to let them have any shot they wanted."

Ayden-Grifton hit only 36% (16 of 50) from the floor. Farmville, on the other hand, hit 43.7% (43.7%). The Jaguars had 21 turnovers to the Chargers' 17, but did out-rebound A-G, 31-25.

Farmville was led in scoring by Terrance Pettaway with 15 points and Gary Hobgood with 12. Pettaway also pulled down eight rebounds. Ayden-Grifton was led by Gay with 13 points and Anderson with 11. Woods led A-G in rebounding with eight. Gay had six rebounds.

The victory left Farmville at 6-8 overall and 1-3 in the league and left Terrell pleased with the effort. "I thought our subs did a terrific job," Terrell said. "They played a very courageous, a very gutsy game."

"What really won it for us was when we were able to execute our offense and take a minute of so off the clock there at the end. What happened the next 30 seconds was nearly out of control and it was a matter of who hits the free throws."

"I said before the game we had to play good defense and beat their press if we were gonna win and I guess we did those two things."

From the start, it was a game neither team was able to control. The lead changed hands four times in the first four minutes, the last time when Edwards muscled inside for a bucket and then followed that with a layup to give the Jaguars a 10-7 lead.

Ahead 12-9 at the end of the quarter, the Jaguars managed to maintain their lead for the first six minutes of the period. But, with two minutes left, the Chargers, who had trouble scoring much of the first half against the Jaguars' 3-2 zone, pumped in five straight points — four by Jesse Anderson — to go up, 23-20, with 1:10 left.

It was a lead short-lived, however. Pettaway hit a 15-foot jumper and Tony Barnes added two free throws with 10 seconds left to give the Jaguars a 24-23 lead at the half.

The third period began with the Chargers missing their first five shots and the Jaguars making only one of their first seven. However, up 30-29 Farmville put together its best scoring streak of the night.

The Jaguars scored on their next four possession — two buckets coming on 16-foot jumpers by Pettaway — to pull ahead, 38-31. Farmville led at the end of the period, 42-36.

Ayden-Grifton closed to within three early in the final period on a free throw by Peterson, but the Jaguars scored six straight points to push their lead back to seven, 48-41, before seeing Sutton and Edwards foul out and then survive the last hectic minutes to hold on for the win.

"This is gonna help us so much," Terrell said. "It's a very big win."

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton scored the first 10 points of the game and Farmville Central never got closer than six points the rest of the way as the Lady Chargers won their fifth straight game.

Ayden-Grifton is now 5-8 overall and 3-2 in the ECC. Farmville drops to 2-10 overall and 0-4 in the conference.

"We're improving but we didn't play very well tonight," Ayden-Grifton coach Kathy Frazier said. "I think jumping out to the lead early made a difference, but we don't know how to play with a lead."

The Lady Chargers used a layup and two free throws by Danita McCotter to jump out to a 10-0 lead in the first seven minutes of the game. Farmville did not score until Rhoda Harris worked inside for a bucket with 43 seconds left in the opening quarter.

The Lady Jaguars cut the lead to six twice in the first minute of the second period, but Ayden-Grifton scored seven straight points to go up, 21-6. It was 24-11 at the half.

The second half saw the Lady Chargers continue to stretch their lead to as many as 20 before settling for a 16-point victory.

Ayden-Grifton was led in scoring by center Cora Faison with 19 points. Faison was the only Lady Charger in double figures. Forward Rose Lang, despite being sick, led Farmville with 12 points.

"We just didn't play well," Farmville Central coach Hilda Worthington said. "We're young and Rose was sick and when they got out to that lead early it just killed us."

Farmville Central travels to Pikeville to face ECC foe C. B. Aycock Friday while Ayden-Grifton goes to Vanceboro to battle West Craven in a nonconference game.

Columbia Rolls By Bear Grass, 63-36

BEAR GRASS — Bear Grass High School's stall offense worked — for one quarter — and after that Columbia's Wildcats rolled to a 63-36 win over the Bears in a Tobacco Belt Conference basketball game last night.

Bear Grass girls picked up a 54-35 victory in their outing during the evening.

The Bears, trying to slow the action down more to their liking, stalled it to a 2-2 deadlock after one period. But in the second, Columbia pulled away, 12-4, and held a 14-6 halftime lead.

After that, it was all Columbia. The 'Cats ran their lead out to 35-17 in the third period and outscored the Bears down the stretch, 28-19.

Stanley Spencer led the Columbia scoring with 15 points, while Quinton Liverman and Zeon Bowser each had 12 and Brian Rouson had 10. The Bears were led by Ray Biggs and Marvin Brown, each with 11.

The loss dropped the Bears to 1-7 in the league and 1-8 overall. Columbia is now 6-2 and 9-4.

The Bear Grass girls doubled the score on hapless Columbia in the first period, 18-9. They came back with another big period, 13-6, in the second frame for a 31-15 halftime lead. The Bears ran that out to 45-25 in the third quarter, and allowed the Lady Cats to outscore them, 10-9, in the last period.

Angie Mizelle led the Lady Bears with 29 points, while Mary Rawls added 13. Lizzie Liverman led Columbia with 13.

The Lady Bears are now 4-4 in conference play and 5-4 overall. The Lady Cats are 0-8 in league play and 1-10 overall. Bear Grass plays host to Creswell on Friday.

DEPAUW-WABASH TIE

GREENCASTLE, Ind. (AP) — When DePauw University topped Wabash, 21-14, this fall it left the ancient series tied exactly.

The teams have played 88 games and each has won 40. There have been eight ties. The trophy fought over each fall is the Monon Bell, a 350-pound souvenir from the old Monon Railroad, now the L & N.

Rose Falls...

what looked to be an easy victory into a come-from-behind win in their contest.

After a tight first half, Rose had pulled out to a ten-point lead midway the third period, but blew the whole lead and had to rally from a point down to pull it out.

"I think we just got a little careless," Coach Dennis Gibson said. "We took it for granted."

Both teams had leads in the first period as Kinston scored the first four, but Rose came back to take 6-4 and then 10-8 leads. It was tied at the end of the quarter, 10-10.

Rose jumped out to a four-point edge, 14-10, on a basket and two free throws by Frances Barnhill, but Kinston fought back to tie it up at 20-20 and then took a 21-20 lead before Rose regained it on a basket by Belinda Haselrig. It was tied once more before Barnhill returned the lead to Rose and Alma Atkinson hit at the horn for a 27-23 lead at the half.

Atkinson hit four of the first eight in the second half as Rose ran its lead out to 35-25 with 5:01 left. But in the final 3:30, Kinston outhit Rose, 7-2, and cut the lead back to 37-32.

The Valkyries kept it up in the third period, finally pulling ahead with 4:00 left at 40-39 on a fast break basket by Val Fields.

But Doris Richardson hit from underneath to give Rose the lead again, and Linda Winstead hit off a fast break to up the lead to four. Haselrig hit a free throw to run the lead to five, and Rose hung on after that to pull out the win.

"Maybe we worked some of the rust from the holiday off tonight," Gibson commented.

"We got more out of Haselrig than we have in a long time. She scored some points (nine) and did a good job on the boards. Doris also did a good job rebounding.

"We didn't come out as cold as we have been, and that helped us mentally. We're still a poor free throw shooting team, however.

"We kind of sat back on our heels after we got that lead, and Kinston's defense responded and got them back in the game. Then, we realized that we had to go back to playing like we did to get the lead, and that kept us in front."

Barnhill led the Rampette scoring with 14 points while Richardson added 10. Terri Sutton led Kinston with 14, while Fields had 12.

The Rose girls are now 4-5 overall and 2-2 in the league. Kinston falls to 5-5, and 2-2.

Rose travels to Wilson Fike on Friday for its next action.

Tiger Girls Win; Boys Drop Tenth

WILLIAMSTON — 14-10 advantage in the second period, cutting the lead to 20-16 by halftime.

In the third period, however, Tarboro again regained control, 8-5, and the Valkyries held a 28-21 lead going into the final quarter. In that, however, Lynn Mills led Williamston, hitting five of six free throws as the Lady Tigers outthit Tarboro, 17-6, to charge ahead and claim the victory.

Gail Smith led the Williamston scoring with 10 points, while Julia Hinton had 14 for Tarboro.

The two boys' teams each scored ten first period points, but that was as long as the Tigers could keep up. Tarboro outscored the Tigers, 18-10, in the second quarter to take a 28-20 halftime advantage.

Williamston managed to hang close in the third quarter, cutting the lead back to 37-33. But the Vikings outscored the Tigers, 18-14, in the final quarter to wrap up the win.

Greg Steele and Gerald Reynolds each scored 13 points to lead Tarboro. Vincent Washington had 14 for Williamston.

Williamston's girls are now 7-2 in Northeastern play and 7-3 overall. The boys are 0-9, 0-10. Tarboro's boys are 4-4 in the league and 7-6 overall. The girls are 5-3 in the conference and 7-5 overall.

Williamston plays host to North Pitt in a non-conference game tonight.

Seahawks Upset ASU

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Sophomore Carlos Kelly's six points helped ignite an 11-1 second half scoring spree and led North Carolina-Wilmington to a 62-52 upset of Appalachian State in a non-conference college basketball game Tuesday night.

The Mountaineers, playing their fifth game in a week, had taken a 33-32 lead on a basket by senior center Charles Payton. But the Seahawks went on their tear and took a 43-34 midway through the period. UNCW later took a 54-42 lead as its bench contributed 15 points in the second half.

UNCW ripped the Mountaineer defense for a 68 percent shooting performance from the floor in the second half. The Seahawks finished at 59 percent. Appalachian State shot slightly better than 40 percent.

Kelly scored 13 points, followed by Frankie Dickens with 12 and Shawn Williams with 11 points. The Seahawks are now 7-6.

Payton had a game-high 20 points, while Bill Neely added 11 points and 11 rebounds. Appalachian State fell to 4-7.

had 11 steals. We had full control of the game."

Andruzzi said that the Pirate defense keyed the win, making outstanding plays to keep Carolina from making a comeback after ECU had taken the lead. "Harrison did an outstanding job on Crawford in the first half, and after they took her out, we put her on Brown in the second half, and she did a good job there too," Andruzzi also noted that Jones had eight rebounds and five steals in leading the Pirates. "Hooks played an excellent defensive game, too," she added.

"This was the type of game where we had to be on the ball head-wise because they were making so many changes in the lineup. We had to make a lot of adjustments, and Rosie (Thompson — now assisting in coaching) did a great job of getting us on the right people."

The Lady Pirates return to action on Friday, hosting nationally ranked Division II Campbell in the 8 p.m. game of the Duke-East Carolina doubleheader in Minges Coliseum. Duke takes on James Madison at 6 p.m., and the two host teams switch opponents for Saturday night's action.

a 62-52 victory over Appalachian State last night. The Seahawks have won four of their last five games.

Probable starter include Frankie Dickens, 6-1 sophomore guard (8.8 points per game); Dennis Robin, 6-3 senior guard (5.0 ppg); Leon Nickelson, 6-9 senior center (4.6 ppg, 3.3 rebounds); Shawn Williams, 6-4 junior forward (18.0 ppg, 6.1 rebounds); and Carlos Kelly, 6-5 sophomore forward (6.9 ppg, 4.6 rebounds).

Williams, who scored 10 points in the ASU game, is a former Washington High School star. He is hitting 57.4 percent of his field goal attempts and 82.2 percent at the line, and set a school record against Grambling with 38 points.

"UNC-Wilmington is always one of the best-coached teams we play," Odum said. "This is a typical Wilmington team, playing several defenses very well. They are strong at guard and forward. This will likely be an emotional game and the atmosphere should be conducive to a very exciting game."

"Williams is one of the better players we will face. I know we will have to control him to control Wilmington. He's always been a thorn in the side for ECU."

HAIRY MOVIE STAR — Benji, the mutt who has starred in his own comic strip, television specials and films such as "Benji", "For the Love of Benji", and "Oh, Heavenly Dog", has plans for a Saturday morning television show and even a Broadway musical. (AP Laserphoto)

CBS Runaway Nielsen Winner

NEW YORK (AP) — With the Super Bowl still ahead on Jan. 24, CBS continues to dominate prime time with a combination of championship sports and the two top-rated continuing series on TV — "60 Minutes" and "Dallas."

CBS was a runaway winner in the week ending Jan. 10, thanks in large measure to a huge audience for the prime-time portion of the National Football Conference championship game between San Francisco and Dallas. The rating for the segment of the game broadcast after 7 p.m. was 47.2, the highest mark for any show this season.

The rating for the post-game show, No. 2 for the week, was 41, with "60 Minutes" — on right after the football — third, and "Dallas" fourth.

CBS now has won the networks' three-way competition each of the last seven weeks. On all but four occasions this season, either "60 Minutes" or "Dallas" has been the No. 1 program, and on two of those, football on CBS won the race.

CBS can count on an even bigger audience for the Super Bowl between San Francisco and Cincinnati, most of which will be broadcast in prime time.

Honors For Two At Competition

RALEIGH — Cellist Selma Gokcen of the ECU School of Music faculty and soprano Christine Schadeberg of Dallas, Texas, are winners of top honors in the 1982 Kathleen and Joseph M. Bryan Young Artists Competition held in Raleigh.

Presented annually by the North Carolina Symphony, the competition offers young musicians from all over the United States the opportunity to win cash prizes and a solo appearance with the Symphony during the subsequent season. This year 85 contestants entered the two competition categories, voice and string.

Ms. Gokcen, 29, top winner for the $1,000 first place award in strings, is an assistant professor of applied cello at East Carolina University. She has been on the ECU faculty since 1979. She also won the $200 North Carolina award given to the best entrant from North Carolina.

Ms. Gokcen received the bachelor and master of music degrees from the Juillard Music School. She has performed with the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra, the Aspen Philharmonic Orchestra, the Houston Symphony, the Civic Orchestra of Chicago, and L'Orchestra de al Suisse Romande.

In addition to the recent award in Raleigh, she has been the winner of several other awards nationally.

Ms. Schadeberg, 34, is a graduate of Southern Methodist University. She was a regional finalist in the Metropolitan Opera Auditions and took second place in the San Francisco Opera Auditions, among other honors.

Other winners were: Cellist Alvin McCall, 27, from East Setauket, N. Y., second place in strings; and soprano Annie Marie Mackey, 34, of High Point, second place winner in the voice category.

Grammy Award Nominees Announced

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Rhythm and blues-rooted artists Quincy Jones and Lionel Richie came up with eight and six nominations respectively in the 24th Annual Grammy Awards.

The late John Lennon was nominated for five.

Jones' nominations Tuesday included seven for his work as artist, producer, engineer and arranger on "The Dude," an album-of-the-year contender. Jones' eighth nomination was as producer of the year, an award honoring all his production credits.

Five of Richie's six nominations were for composing, producing and performing — with Diana Ross — the theme to the Brooke Shields movie "Endless Love." The recording was nominated as both record and song of the year.

Richie also was nominated as producer of the year and through his group, the Commodores, could share in another gramophone-shaped trophy for best rhythm and blues performance by a group on "Lady (You Bring Me Up)."

The last time Lennon was awarded a Grammy was 1970. He was nominated for the "Double Fantasy" album he and his wife Yoko Ono released shortly before his murder in December 1980. He was nominated as producer and artist in both the album of the year category and the record of the year category for the single "Just Like Starting Over."

A fifth nomination came in the best male pop vocal performance category.

Ms. Ono was nominated four times, for both producer and artist in the album of the year category, for producer in the record of the year category, and for best female rock vocal performance on her own single "Walking on Thin Ice."

The National Association of Recording Arts and Sciences awards ceremony will be nationally telecast on CBS Feb. 24.

Violinist Itzhak Perlman earned six nominations and Pinchas Zukerman followed with five in classical categories. The two shared several nominations for their work on one album, "Isaac Stern 60th Anniversary Celebration."

Kim Carnes earned an album of the year nomination for "Mistaken Identity" as well as record of the year and best female pop vocal performance nominations for the No. 1 hit "Bette Davis Eyes," which also earned a song of the year nomination for songwriters Donna Weiss and Jackie De Shannon.

Christopher Cross, who swept last year's major Grammy categories with his rookie album, is in contention this year as singer and co-writer of "Arthur's Theme (Best That You Can Do)," which pulled nominations in the record of the year, song of the year and best male pop vocal performance categories.

Yet another film theme, "9 to 5," garnered song of the year, best country song and best female country performance nominations for Dolly Parton.

"Just the Two of Us," sung and co-written by Bill Withers on Grover Washington Jr.'s "Winelight" LP, was nominated as both record and song of the year.

Al Jarreau's "Breakin' Away" and Steely Dan's "Gaucho" rounded out the album of the year nominations.

Best new artist nominees ran the gamut from Britain's picturesque rock whoopers Adam and the Ants to Quincy Jones protege James Ingram, who also earned pop and rhythm and blues performance nominations for his vocals on "The Dude." Other new artist nominees were the Go-Go's, Sheena Easton and Luther Vandross.

Blackwell's Low-Rated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Barbara Mandrell dresses like "Yukon Sally playing the Alamo," says fashion designer Mr. Blackwell, who put the country singer on the top of his 22nd annual Worst Dressed List.

Actress Elizabeth Taylor, a regular on the list, "should give up looking for a designer and find an architect," Blackwell said Tuesday.

Country singer and actress Dolly Parton was described as "an atomic jelly-bean explosion." Singer Sheena Easton was called a "London roadrunner dressed for the fog."

And "Dallas" actress Charlene Tilton "looks like Mount St. Helens erupting."

A few did meet his fashion standards. Blackwell called Princess Diana of Britain a "fabulous fashion independent," and also praised Princess Yasmin Kahn, skater Dorothy Hamill, singer Lena Horne and actresses Catherine De- neuve, Zsa Zsa Gabor and Gloria Swanson.

Others on his worst dressed list this year were actresses Bernadette Peters — "a kinked and curled kiewpie doll on a hayride," Jane Seymour — "fashions by medflies;" country singer Loretta Lynn — "up the music charts, down the fashion charts," and actress Lynn Redgrave.

Six Months Of Learning Job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A cheery Grant Tinker says he's spent most of his time "just learning" during the six months since being named NBC's chairman, but he promises the network soon will be easing out of its third-place rating.

"We're a happy band of people trying to set things right," Tinker said at a news conference Tuesday.

Regarding NBC's last-place Nielsen ratings position behind CBS and ABC, Tinker said, "We're trying to turn it around... We will not forever be in third place."

Tinker, formerly president of MTM Enterprises, which produced "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "Lou Grant" and "Hill Street Blues," said he thought the key to managing NBC was to hire creative people and give them freedom.

"I think all networks tend to over-supervise," he said. "I think they should select creative people and let them do the job."

SYMPHONY POST — Thomas H. McGuire, Jr., was named Tuesday as the new executive director of the North Carolina Symphony. McGuire will leave his job as executive director of the Arkansas Symphony to take the North Carolina post in early March. (AP Laserphoto)

Faculty Show Reception Set

An opening reception for the annual East Carolina University School of Art Faculty Show will be held Thursday from 7:30 to 10 p.m. The reception is open to the public and is being held in the Gray Art Gallery, Jenkins Fine arts Center, Fifth Street.

Music for the opening will be provided by ECU School of Music faculty and students, and refreshments will be served.

Coppola Movie Again Delayed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The national release of "One From the Heart," Francis Coppola's impressionistic movie musical long beset by budget problems and delays, has been postponed again, said the film's distributor, Paramount Pictures.

"We have informed exhibitors that we are temporarily postponing... the Feb. 10 release date because we do not have a final release print," Gordon Weaver, Paramount senior vice president worldwide marketing, said Tuesday by telephone from his New York office.

An official at Coppola's Zoetrope Studios confirmed the delay, saying it was because Coppola did not want to show the film to exhibitors before the public sees it.

The faculty show will continue until Feb. 14. Gallery hours for viewing the exhibition are 10-5 Mondays through Fridays, and 1-4 on Sundays.

Legends say that when the god Nor first reached the land that would later bear his name, he encountered a great blizzard. He had to put on skis just to enter Norway. For 4500 years warriors, hunters and travellers have used skis in Scandinavia. Children skied to school, doctors skied to patients, and without skis, winter mail delivery would have been impossible. Early skis were up to 12 feet long, had only thongs for bindings and were used with just one pole. Only in the last 100 years has this Scandinavian necessity blossomed into a recreational passion around the world. In a recent survey Americans were most likely to have taken up cross-country skiing than any other sport.

Dutch Now Beyond Old Windmills

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer
PETTEN, Netherlands
(AP) — Kees Looijesteijn runs a Dutch windmill. Instead of a means of milling flour or hoisting water over dikes, he thinks of it in terms of kilowatt hours.

Looijesteijn is project operator for what the Dutch say is the world's most sophisticated wind turbine. Designed to help test the role of the winds in Holland's energy future, the turbine is packed with measuring devices, from its six acceleration meters in the carbon-fiber blades to the laser beam checking movement of the base.

The camouflage-green windmill, which began whirling June 29, 1981, rises from the sand dunes on the North Sea in classic Dutch countryside, 40 miles north of msterdam. The old windmills nestled behind nearby dikes are idle now, no longer used to drain the below-sea-level grazing land.

With an 82.5-foot blade diameter, the turbine is among the smallest of the "big windmills," Looijesteijn said. With this machine, the Dutch hope to analyze the vibration, stress variations on the blade and shaft and other problems that have plagued large turbines elsewhere in the world.

Despite a tradition dating back to the 13th century, the Dutch have been cautious in approaching wind power as a modern source of energy, said Hans Veldhuis, spokesman for the Netherlands Energy Research Center, which is coordinating the project.

He said engineers had found that the technology of smaller wind turbines could not simply be scaled up without encountering new problems: window-rattling vibration, slower response time to wind changes and differing stress on the blades at the high and low points of the blade arc.

"Most countries have built these windmills quickly without installing so many measuring instruments to understand the problems," he said. "Abroad, people wondered why the land of windmills had no big machines. Now they are coming to us with their problems."

The 300-kilowatt turbine is meant to be a measuring and testing device rather than a prototype, and at 8.5 million guilders ($3.8 million) the project cost 20 times the amount of a comparable commercial windmill.

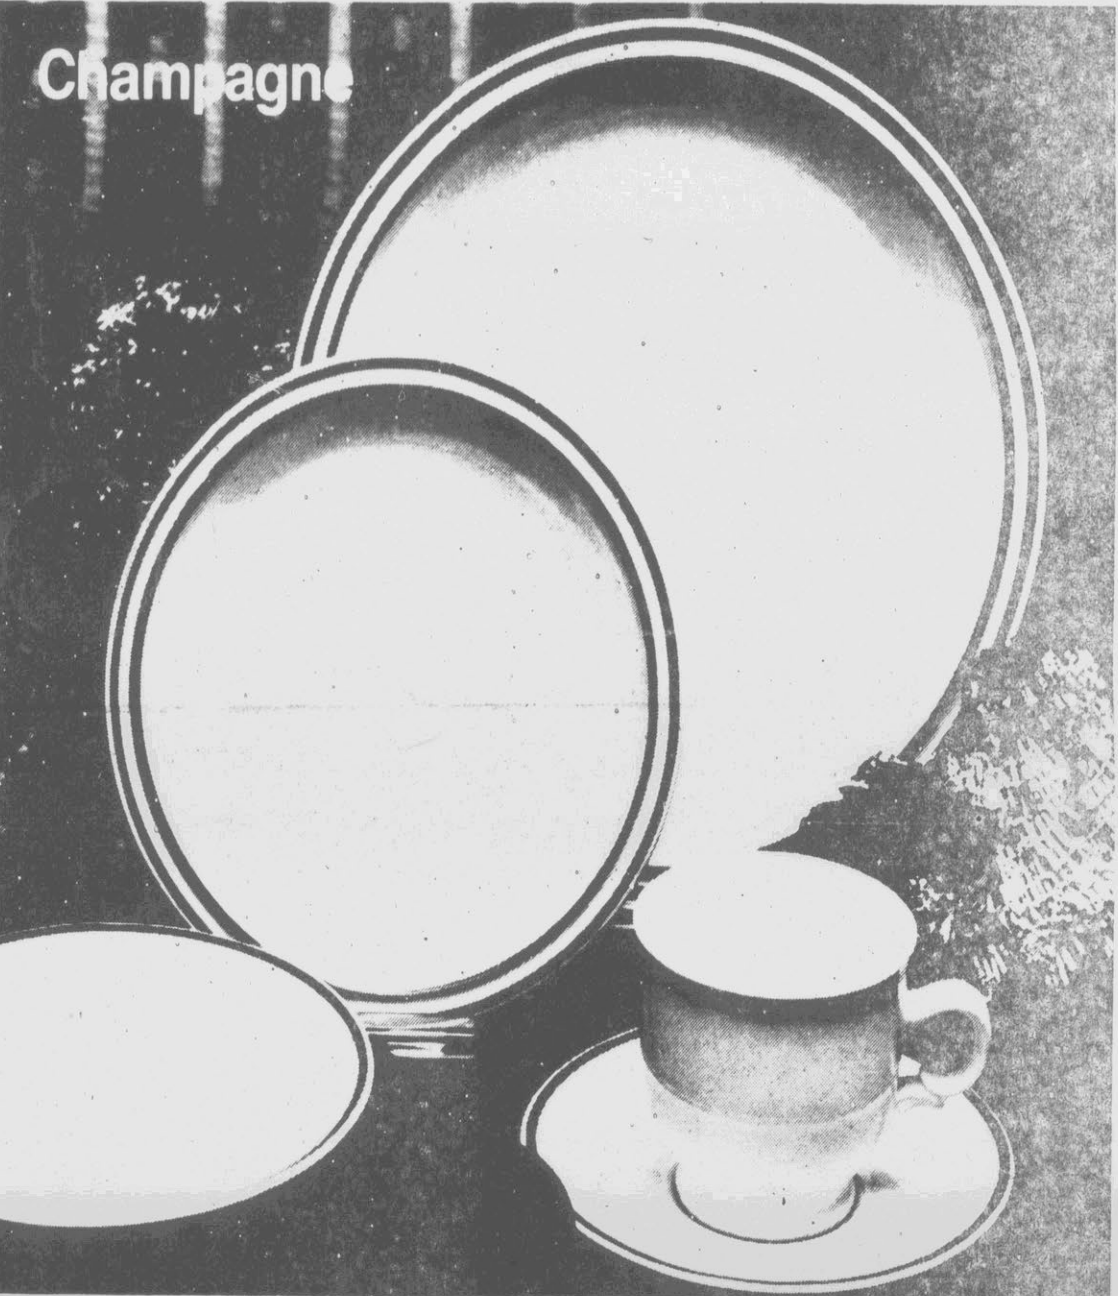

Looijesteijn, called "the miller" by the dozen-member staff, works from a separate control building near the turbine, assisted by a 6-foot-tall bank of computers that both run the mill and measure its performance. Technicians monitor the turbine from video-display terminals, recording stress, blade vibration and distortion and other factors in every weather condition.

Among the innovations are the direct current (DC) generator built into the axis shaft 76 fet above the ground, rather than the usual alternating current (AC) generator. The more flexible DC generator is connected to a separate AC converter in the base, producing household-variety electric current compatible with the national electric grid.

The two carbon fiber blades are stronger yet lighter than metal alloy blades, Looijesteijn said. The blades may be replaced in a couple of years with revolutionary "tip-vane blades" being developed by the Dutch Applied Scientific Research Center in Delft. Tests have indicated the short wings at the end of the blades can more than double the energy production.

But even in blustery Holland, the wind is suitable for power generation only about one third of the time — otherwise it's too weak or too strong.

One concept for storing energy produced by the fickle wind has attracted much attention. Water engineer Lukas Willem Lieveense has proposed building a 100-foot-high dike in the IJsselmeer lake and using wind power to fill up the reservoir. Then the water could be drained through turbines to produce power when needed regardless of wind conditions.

Chinese Eye U.S. Talent In Tourism

By PRUDENCE HELLER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They are five Chinese men in search of a more prosperous future for their country. So, not so long ago, they packed their bags, said goodbye to wives, children and friends, and set out for the United States.

Zhao Tinghai, Gu Shubao, Li Han-Ben, Chen Xuhua and Li Zhengxiao, all officials of the China International Travel Service (CITS) of the People's Republic of China, are studying for master's degrees in tourism and travel administration at the New School for Social Research in New York City.

For China is looking for big things from its tourism industry — 1 million foreign visitors a year by 1985, according to Zhao. That would be about twice the number reported by the New York Times as having visited in 1980.

But China is short of hotels, buses and — Chinese officials feel — know-how, including the kind of know-how that will lure Westerners with their hard currencies.

The American Express Co., which hopes to steer more and more Americans to China in years to come, decided to help the Chinese do something about it — hence the studies of Chen, Li, Zhao, Gu and Li, who range in age from 29 to 46.

"We are students, we're not a government delegation," they stressed recently in an interview at the New School.

They are certainly not living like a government delegation — or like tourists — but like students. They have a two-bedroom apartment in a six-story, not very new apartment house in the Flushing section of New York's borough of Queens. It's a section that has attracted many new immigrants — Chinese, Pakistanis, Vietnamese, Koreans — but it also retains much of its former atmosphere of a conservative, family-type community, with trees, private homes and numerous historic landmarks.

The five do most of their shopping at the nearby supermarket, although Flushing also has a number of Chinese groceries. They generally cook at home, but when they get homesick for Chinese ambience, they go to Chinatown. They've also come to terms with American food, especially bagels, rolls and hamburgers. And Chen confesses to a weakness for chocolate-covered doughnuts for breakfast.

They commute to school on one of New York's older subway lines — it's an "el" most of the way.

As for their studies:

Although they have had business experience with CITS, the quintet, Zhao explains, were liberal-arts majors in their universities in China. So subjects like marketing, statistics, accounting and "regulatory environments" are a whole new world. For instance, Zhao explains, he hadn't had math since high school, 20 years ago, so statistics is a particular challenge.

Another hurdle is the differences in background between the U.S. and China — with the American system dominated by private business and the Chinese system dominated by the government. And there's the bigness of businesses in the United States. Zhao says that when teachers use large companies as examples of points they're trying to make, it just doesn't register with the Chinese; they would understand better if the teacher used a Chinese restaurant as an example.

All five are fluent in everyday English, but specialized marketing terminology can be a problem.

The Chinese tourism officials say they are working very hard — and haven't had much time to be tourists themselves. But they have done some sightseeing, including a boat trip around Manhattan and the World Trade Center.

They have visited Washington and Philadelphia. And they spent a while at the Economics Institute of the University of Colorado, in Boulder, brushing up on their English and other skills before they arrived in New York.

Army Staff College Is Century Old

By MARK PETERSON
Associated Press Writer
LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) — It was created in 1881 to drill some sense into a bunch of foxhole flunkies. A hundred years later, the Army's Command and General Staff College is a fortress of military scholarship.

"I guess you could say the first students to come here were remedial," says Col. William Stofft, director of the college's Combat Studies Institute. "They were here for basic reading and writing."

In at least one class in the 1880s, a quarter of the students flunked.

"Instead of sending their best officer material, regimental commanders sent their worst people," said Roger Spillar, Fort Leavenworth Command historian.

But a century later: "The college is at the heart and soul of the Army," Stofft boasted. "It's a marvelous place with an incredibly dedicated student body."

It's been that way for a while now.

Gens. Maxwell Taylor, Dwight Eisenhower, George Marshall, Omar Bradley and many other noted generals studied at the CGSC, the oldest school for tactical instruction for military officers.

Nearly every general in the Army today is a graduate of the CGSC, housed in a large, drab brick building overlooking the bluffs of the Missouri River, a peaceful setting where the science of war is learned.

Lt. Gen. William Richardson, former commandant of the CGSC, says the school strives to provide students with two essential ingredients for a successful military career: competence and confidence.

Richardson, recently reassigned to Washington as the Army's Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Planning, said the curriculum focused primarily on battle tactics and planning, and communicative arts. In simpler terms, that's reading, writing and fighting.

"That constitutes the heart of what the Army believes is important: to make the student think, plan and decide how to fight and win," Richardson said.

A sample of core curriculum classes at Leavenworth: Soviet Army tactics, principles of war, defensive tactics and nuclear and chemical operations.

About 10 percent of the 1,000 officers who spend 10 months at the college go on to another two semesters of Army-paid study at a state university and earn a master's degree in traditional disciplines such as history, economics and journalism.

Civilian universities taking part in a cooperative degree program with the CGSC include the University of Kansas, Kansas State University and the University of Missouri-Kansas City.

Most officers picked to attend the CGSC are Army majors, but there is a smattering of representatives from other branches of the service. Also among the class are about 100 high-ranking officers from armies of allied nations. And 12,000 soldiers worldwide are working toward diplomas through a three-year correspondence program.

The enrollment list is growing steadily.

By 1985, another 2,000 mid-career officers will go yearly to the college's Combined Arms and Services Staff School, said Lt. Col. Ron Hibbard, executive officer of the CGSC. Most of them will be captains being groomed for field officer duties, Hibbard said.

Biggest Year Of Land-Leasing

WASHINGTON (AP) — More land was leased by the government for offshore oil and gas exploration in 1981 than in any previous year, says Interior Secretary James Watt.

"For the first time in the 27-year history of the program, over 2 million offshore acres were leased to energy companies for exploration and development," Watt said Monday.

Try Revenge Rather Than Just 'Even'

By SCOTT KRAFT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — If you've ever been wronged by a greedy landlord, a haughty headwaiter, a disreputable seller or a lying dry cleaner, the feeling is familiar — helplessness, frustration and anger create a nauseous mix.

You complain, and if you're lucky, you get an apology and a sum of money that doesn't begin to cover your loss or the time spent fighting.

If you're Christopher Gilson, you go for revenge. "If the 1970s was the Me Decade, then the 1980s is the Mean Decade," says Gilson, a 34-year-old management consultant in New York.

"People are more concerned with their own physical and economic well-being, and it becomes incumbent on you to enforce your right to value for your dollar."

"In a sense, much of society has thrown away the Golden Rule. Self-interest is not just accepted, but often its downright upright."

Gilson, along with Baltimore lawyers Linda Cawley and Rick Schmidt, have put their philosophy of revenge in a book called "Consumer Revenge," which outlines ways to exact a pound of flesh from those who make your life miserable.

The banker who won't cash your check at the cross-town branch, the paperboy who throws the morning news into the gutter, the friend who borrows money from you and never pays it back, and the host of other nasty or negligent people who "drive lingering bats into your belly."

The authors' assumption is that people who seek simple redress find their problem "shunted through a bureaucratic labyrinth of buck-passing, broken promises and generally debilitating indifference."

Guerrilla tactics, with J.R. Ewing-style finesse, are the answer, they say. They offer sample letters — with the all-important carbon copy to the company president or federal agency — that pack a punch and put the quarry on the defensive. "This is to advise you that unless I hear from you within 10 working days, I will commence action against you in district court for violation of the Fair Credit Billing Act, to wit: ..."

"Etcetera."

The key is to look for your adversary's weak spot and strike, Gilson says. "Even the most hardened adversary can see the point of diminishing returns if you present him with a situation where what you are asking is a lesser evil than the really mammoth problem you could conjure up for him," he says.

To get back at the paperboy with a bad throwing arm, the authors suggest sending your next payment in a water-filled plastic bag.

To get back at the bank that isn't treating you properly, take the advice of one irate merchant who rented a safe-deposit box and stuffed it with a frozen mackerel. Once the decomposing fish was found and the box opened with a blowtorch, the merchant received better service, the authors say.

To get back at the friend who puts you at the bottom of his list of creditors, the authors suggest you ask to borrow his food processor for the weekend and then refuse to return it until he pays his debt.

To get back at the restaurant that overbooks reservations and makes you wait for your reserved table, the authors suggest you adopt your own overbooking policy. Make a dozen reservations by telephone for, say, 8 p.m. one day — and don't show up.

"Most people don't retaliate, and they probably end up blowing an artery for all their gracious behavior from a life of quiet frustration," Gilson says.

But what if everyone adopted a fangs-out approach to life?

"If more people were serious about this, we'd see an increase in the quality of service," Gilson says. "We'd see people operating with more consideration for other people's feelings if they knew they couldn't get away with abusing them."

WASHINGTON (AP) — In response to requests from several camera crew members, CBS News plans to purchase bulletproof vests for personnel involved in covering the president.

The camera crew members had pointed out that Secret Service agents and others close to the president sometimes wear the vests.

Bill Headline, assistant news director, said Monday that the issue arose in early December — before reports surfaced that Libyan strongman Moammar Khadafy had dispatched "hit squads" to the United States.

"Frankly, I think the whole thing has gone away," Headline said of the alleged assassination teams. Nevertheless, he said the vests, which cost $115 each, will be purchased.

Tree Burls Become Art

WOOD ARTIST — Rob Roy Kelly, associate professor of design at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, searches for tree burls that he can transform into art objects.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Talk about a bump on a log and you'll have Rob Roy Kelly's attention. He hunts them in the woods of Minnesota, in Pittsburgh parks, in his neighbor's back yard.

The associate professor of design at Carnegie-Mellon University hunts bumps, technically called burls, "because they're beautiful, they're interesting, they're good therapy to work on while I'm watching football."

A kind of knot or bump found on tree trunks, limbs and even roots, "burls," Kelly explains, "are caused by a virus that will eventually kill the tree. They're contagious, too. If you find one, you'll find another within 150 feet."

"Usually," Kelly says, "I take the tree down, remove the bark and let the burl cure for six months to a year. My best tools are an oyster knife and a nut pick."

After removing the bark and curing the burl, Kelly cleans it, sands it by hand, rubs it with a soft cloth similar to one used by a jeweler, and finishes the job by applying a mineral oil with wax suspended in it.

In his garage in the Squirrel Hill section of Pittsburgh, Kelly shows off a Minnesota spruce with burls bulging out all over the trunk.

"I went looking for burls up near Grand Marais, Minn.," he said, "I couldn't understand why I couldn't find any. Then I drove down a street in town and people were using them for mailboxes or they planted them in the front yard and grew petunias around them, or hung bird houses on them, put a plastic windmill on top. They had cut down all the trees with burls in the neighborhood."

To Kelly, the misshapen lumps with their convoluted patterns have become objects of art. The artist in him has taken to shaping the ends of the burls but not really interfering with the design that nature itself has stamped on the burl.

He doesn't sell them — just keeps them around his apartment, and even has names for his favorites. There's "Big Otis," a cranium-shaped one dubbed "Socrates," a black walnut named "Ringo" and a hunchbacked "Quasimodo."

Kelly's biggest bag so far is a 300-pound-plus rock maple burl that's as large as a small coffee table.

"It was 25 feet off the ground," says Kelly. When he brought it down, he couldn't even move it. "It took six teen-agers and me to load it onto a pickup truck," he says.

Kelly's apartment is lined with burls from different parts of the country — a pepper tree from Kansas, a willow from West Virginia, a maple from Michigan, a sassafras from Minnesota.

Kelly admits burl-collecting is rather a strange hobby that has occupied his spare time for the past five years. When he gets involved, he gets involved.

"A while back I started collecting large letter wood type used for Wild West posters," Kelly said, "and ended up with two and a half tons of type."

He spent 13 years at that avocation and wrote the definitive work on the subject, "American Wood Type: 1828-1900: Notes on the Evolution of Decorated and Large Types." Kelly is currently cataloging the Morgan Collection of wood and other type paraphernalia for the Smithsonian Institution.

Kelly's forays into the woods are not completely out of his bailiwick. At Carnegie-Mellon, he also works as staff designer for the internationally recognized Hunt Institute for Botanical Documentation.

Through the institute, he's discovered that "little is known about these burls. They have certain growth structures which are repeated in different kinds of trees. Maybe each virus has a particular growth pattern," he suggests.

In the past, Kelly observes, "craftsmen have used burls for bowls, lamps, pipes, even for furniture decoration."

But he's happy using them just for themselves — as pieces of nature that he polishes, carves into art and enjoys.

Research Expanded On 'Phantom Pain'

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A recent Army study which found that 10 percent of amputees responding to a survey — instead of an anticipated 5 percent — have bouts of an acute hurt known as phantom pain has led the Army to expand its research.

"We've opened up a real Pandora's box," said Dr. Richard A. Sherman, clinical and research psychophysicist at Dwight Eisenhower Army Medical Center in Augusta.

enough to keep them out of work at least one week a year.

The medical center heard from 60 percent of 1,300 people surveyed who had amputations related to military service.

Unexpected results from the small survey have encouraged Sherman to expand the program to see if the results are the same with a larger population.

Eisenhower researchers found that 90 percent of those amputees responding to the survey said that phantom pain — pain in a missing limb — was significant

Might Sell To USAF

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Air Force may buy 60 of the 150 F-5G fighter jets that the Northrop Corp. had hoped to sell to Taiwan, industry sources say.

The Reagan administration, which Monday announced its decision not to proceed with the $2 billion sale of the advanced aircraft to Nationalist China, has been considering a plan to use the jets since Thanksgiving, said the sources, who asked not to be identified.

The sources denied that the plan "was cooked up suddenly" to compensate Northrop for Reagan's decision not to sell the planes to Taiwan.

How the Air Force will juggle its fiscal 1983 budget to include the purchase of F-5G spare parts remains unresolved, the sources said. The plane, a more sophisticated version of the Northrop F-5E that the United States sells to foreign nations, is to be flight-tested next summer. The Air Force could start taking delivery of them in two or three years, the sources said.

President Reagan, saying they were not needed for the island's self-defense, denied Taiwan's request to buy 150 F-5Gs after China vehemently opposed the sale. Taiwan now uses F-5Es.

If purchased by the Air Force, the F-5Gs — which have a maneuverability similar to that of the Soviet MIG-23s — would be used in combat training exercises to simulate Soviet aggression.

Sees Stronger Ties To Israel

NEW YORK (AP) — An Egyptian physician, Mohammed Hani El Kadi, who heads an Egyptian group dedicated to fostering closer ties with Israel, predicts growing normal relations between the two countries after Israel returns the Sinai to Egypt next April.

Discounting speculation that such relations would break down once Egypt has the land back, he told the American Jewish Congress.

"Such talk is totally unrealistic. Those who believe it do not know or understand what is going on. Israel and Egypt have a mutual need to get along with each other."

Probation On Sterilization

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP) — A judge has granted probation to a woman who consented to be sterilized after she confessed to abusing her child.

Solano Superior Court Judge William Jensen on Tuesday sentenced Melinda Middleton, 20, to five years probation. The woman had pleaded guilty in January to charges of felony child neglect in the death of her 5-month-old daughter, Misty, who died of neck injuries.

Brazil Now Builds Own Weaponry

By PETER EISNER
Associated Press Writer
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — The Brazilian government has developed its own military industrial complex, a multibillion dollar enterprise that supplies the nation's armed forces while selling everything from bullets to airplanes on the international market, particularly the Third World.

The military-backed government here remains secretive about details of its armaments industry, but reports indicate there are at least 50 major firms — many of them state-controlled — involved in the production of military equipment. The firms have been receiving a steady stream of foreign government arms buyers as Brazil seeks to stimulate a weapons exporting program that already has reached $1.5 billion a year, according to U.S. military estimates.

"These are arms directed primarily for a Third World market and they are quite well suited to those needs," said one U.S. military specialist, who asked not to be identified. While the diverse inventory of Brazilian equipment includes tanks, hand weapons, missiles and small training planes, U.S. officials say American military contractors have yet to feel the competition from Brazilian producers.

The South American country — reputedly now the world's fifth or sixth largest arms supplier — has made major sales, however, and its weapons have been introduced in combat conditions.

Iraq has been using the Cascavel light tank — manufactured by the army's Engesa manufacturing company — in its protracted war with Iran. The Cascavel, a six-wheel armored vehicle equipped with a 90mm cannon and two .50mm machine guns, also has been used by Libya.

Meanwhile, recent delegations from China, neighboring Guyana and a number of Latin American and African countries have visited the government's Embraer airplane company and Engesa, both in the southeastern industrial state of Sao Paulo.

The development of the nation's arms industry began picking up momentum in the mid-1960s as Brazil began encouraging foreign investment here. By demanding the transfer of technology in its contracts with international firms, the military-backed government created an increasingly self-sufficient domestic industry.

Adapting old designs and foreign technology, Brazil first was able to supply most of the needs of its 200,000-member armed services, the largest in Latin America. Fifteen years later, Brazil had already sold training planes to Belgium and light weapons to many countries, while there were prospects of producing a sophisticated cannon system for major world buyers.

The cannon is called the Oerlikon, a 20mm Swiss-designed device that fires 2,100 rounds a minute, adaptable for tank, anti-aircraft and naval use.

Other major Brazilian arms projects include:

—A joint venture with Italy that should lead to production here of the so-called AMX subsonic fighter, a ground attack plane that would be intended specifically for Third World defense requirements.

—Development of the 'Piranha' missile, based on the U.S. Sidewinder class of missiles.

—A 7.62-caliber sub-machine gun called the Uirapuru. Produced by the army, the Uirapuru is described as an easy-to-use weapon that specialists say could rival U.S. Soviet and Israeli automatic weapons sales on the international arms market.

Brazilian researchers also are working on new types of armor plating and amphibious tanks. The nation also has a specialized shipbuilding industry and diplomatic and military sources have said there are eventual plans to build a conventionally powered attack submarine.

Diplomats Reminded Of Hazards

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A year after the end of the Iranian hostage crisis, life for many American diplomats is full of chilling reminders of just how hazardous their profession has become.

In some sensitive posts, U.S. envoys travel even short distances by armored cars, protected by body guards carrying machine guns. Many of the embassies where these diplomats work are surrounded by high walls, making them look more like fortresses than diplomatic missions.

Receptionists sit behind bomb-proof glass, admitting visitors only after elaborate security checks by Marine guards. Video monitors help spot would-be troublemakers.

At 24 embassies and consulates, plans are under way for the construction of bullet-proof "safehouses" for protection against mobs. The hope is that these hideaways will provide refuge for U.S. employees for several hours, giving local security forces time to restore order.

Actually, enhanced security at overseas missions began well before the 44-day Iran crisis, which ended last Jan. 20. According to a new State Department report, American diplomats have been the targets of more than 330 terrorist incidents since 1968. During the post-war era, 45 U.S. personnel have died as the result of terrorists.

But Americans aren't the only targets. The report says that since 1968, there have been almost 1,500 incidents involving Latin American and Western European diplomats. The list of groups which have claimed responsibility for terrorist acts numbers 102.

For the U.S. government, the events in Tehran accelerated what has become an almost obsessive attention to security at overseas posts. Life as a diplomat is almost like being a "front-line trooper," says Richard Queen, a veteran of the Iran crisis who now serves as a consular officer in London.

U.S. ambassadors are urged to hold regular drills for implementing internal defense plans. All personnel are advised, in the event they are taken hostage, to find a "surrogate parent" to care for their children.

If an emergency evacuation is required, they are asked to have a suitable home available for any pets left behind. They are to instruct their spouses on how to maintain cars, washing machines and other equipment.

Before leaving for their posts, a two-day course on "Coping with Violence Abroad" is offered all personnel. It includes instruction on hostage survival, bomb recognition and residential security. The course was initiated five years ago but was expanded after the Iran crisis.

Shortly after taking office, President Reagan added a new dimension to U.S. anti-terrorist policy when he said he would not tolerate another Tehran-type incident.

"We're just going to move in there, guns blazing," he said.

And in congressional testimony, Richard Kennedy, under secretary of state for management, said, "We have publicly put terrorists on notice that they can expect no concessions from us. We will not bargain for the release of hostages...We will use all appropriate resources at our disposal, be they diplomatic, political, economic or military, to respond to such acts of international intimidation or extortion."

During the Iranian crisis, an unprecedented number of foreign service applicants dropped out during training, fearing the same fate that befell the hostages.

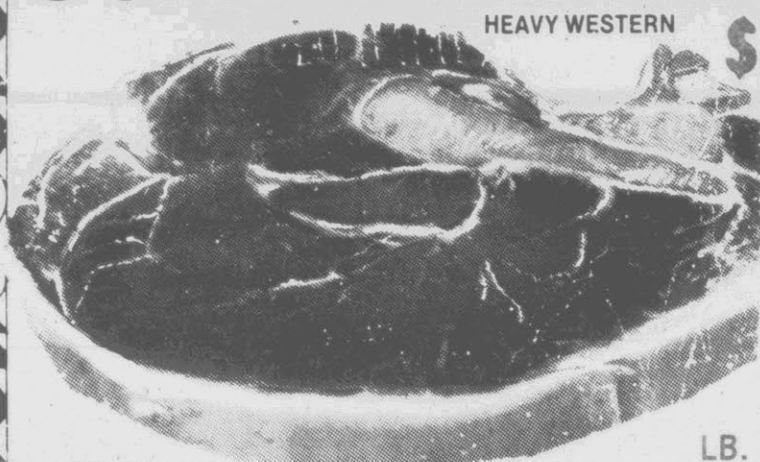

But as the memory of Tehran fades, the drop-out rate has diminished in the past year and many foreign service newcomers even seem anxious for assignment to dangerous posts.

In one recent class of 40 trainees, five said they were willing to go to El Salvador, where one inducement is a 40 per cent hazardous duty pay bonus.
