Touch Of Snow For Pitt Closes Schools; Phone Callers Jamming Lines

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A trace of snow — all eastern North Carolina saw of the wild winter storm that dumped nearly one-half foot of snow

A DIFFERENT TASK ... Public Works Department employee Ben Smith, assigned to clean up the Evans Street Mall each day, had a little different task this morning. Rather than sweeping the leaves, paper and other trash as usual, he's shown here trying to remove the ice and snow Mother Nature deposited there Thursday. (Reflector Staff Photo) on the Piedmont and mountains — brushed Pitt County late Thursday, leaving roads slippery and making early travel hazardous for the third morning this week.

Pitt schools closed for the third day today, while Greenville schools shut their doors for the second time.

"The roads were in a condition that it wouldn't even be feasible to think about opening," said Thomas Craft, associate superintendent of the county schools. Officials for both systems said they hoped to resume a normal schedule Monday.

The ice prompted East Carolina University to cancel all 8 and 9 a.m. classes, and according to Bill Shires of the ECU News Bureau, the university advised day students who travel to campus to use their own judgment for 10 a.m. classes. Streets on campus were slick during the morning hours, said the ECU police, but no problems were reported.

Pitt Community College closed today, with no students or staff required to report.

Greenville Utilities' water plant recorded .5 inch of snow Thursday night, preceded by .31 inch of rain during the day. A low temperature of 22 degrees Fahrenheit during the night turned all precipitation into ice, but by mid-morning sunshine and rising temperatures removed much of the ice from streets and roads.

Greenville Utilities reported no weather-related problems. "We had a slight ice buildup about 4 p.m.," said assistant director Malcolm Green, "but when it turned to snow, we weren't as concerned."

Green said utilities' lost one underground transformer at Tar River Estates about 6:30 p.m., causing a four-hour outage in that area, but that the problem was not caused by snow. "It did hamper repair efforts," he noted. "We had a difficulty with a device inside another transformer in the same area that left a few customers without power all night, but we didn't find out about it until this morning and it was fixed soon after."

At 11 a.m. police departments around the county reported roads were still icy in spots but that the most-traveled routes were clear.

Temperatures are expected to drop back into the 20s tonight and moderate into the 40s and 50s Saturday and Sunday.

Carolina Telephone and Telegraph reported an unusually high number of calls jammed lines, making it difficult for callers to get a dial tone.

"We were extremely busy Thursday," said manager Dick Flye. "We operated just about past capacity. Anytime we get a change in the weather like this and people have to stay home, they get on the phone." Flye speculated that many calls were husbands or wives seeking rides home in the snow, and folks that were "just plain curious about the weather."

Rare Impact

East Carolina University called off classes for its first two periods today as a result of the ice and snow covering streets and roads in the Greenville area. It was not alone among state universities.

For the first time since the Civil War period, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill canceled classes today. There has been more snow on other occasions — Chapel Hill received only about four inches of new snow Thursday — but, in the past, classes have been held. No reason was announced for the decision to close today.

University activities also were canceled at UNC-Asheville, where about six inches of snow fell Thursday on top of snow already on the ground. UNC-Charlotte, closed Wednesday and Thursday because of weather conditions, reopened today despite a new three-inch snowfall. Western Carolina, with about seven inches of snow, was open for scheduled class registration today.

North Carolina State in Raleigh had a delayed opening similar to that at ECU.

But Appalachian State took it all in stride despite its lofty status at Boone, where more than a foot of snow fell Thursday. "We're always open," an ASU secretary sighed.

Labor Report

Pitt County's total labor force numbers 45,090, according to a Labor Force Summary for Pitt and Greene Counties issued by the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission.

Of this total, 42,300 are employed, with 2,790 in the unemployment ranks. This equates to a Pitt County unemployment rate of 6.2 percent.

Greene County's total labor force numbers 8,050. Of that number, 7,720 are currently employed, with 330 unemployed, for a 4.1 percent unemployment rate, one of the lowest unemployment rates in North Carolina.

The report, compiled on Jan. 8, covers data for the month of November, 1981.

Inflation Is Braked; Economy Faltering

NEW YORK (AP) — With the nation's economy faltering in a recession, the government reported today that inflation at the wholesale level was held to a 7 percent increase in 1981. But government figures also showed the economy continued to deteriorate in December, with industrial production falling 2.1 percent.

The Labor Department reported that the wholesale inflation rate, measured by the Producer Price Index for finished goods, rose a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent in December, down from a 0.5 percent gain in November.

The increase of 7 percent for all of 1981 was a sharp decline from the 11.8 percent reported in 1980 and was the lowest since the 6.9 percent gain in 1977. Abundant supplies of food, a worldwide oil glut and recession were factors in slowing inflation, according to analysts.

The Federal Reserve Board said production at the nation's factories and mines fell for the fifth straight month in December and had plunged 6.9 percent since its peak in July. The December decline was the biggest one-month drop since industrial production fell 3 percent in May 1980.

Despite progress in dampening inflation, a survey released by a business-sponsored research group today said executive's confidence in the economy is slipping, but President Reagan says he is not to blame for the current national economic distress.

And although Reagan's chief economic spokesman predicted economic recovery this summer, the AFL-CIO again condemned Reagan's policies and recommended its own measure to revitalize U.S. industry and counter what one labor official termed the "Reagan recession."

The Conference Board, the business-funded research group, said its "Measure of Business Confidence," on a scale of 100, fell to 43 in the fourth quarter of 1981 from 57 in the third quarter and 63 a year earlier.

Still, the measure — stemming from a survey of 1,500 executives nationwide — stood well above the record low 29 set in the second quarter of 1980 during the previous recession.

"Yes, we are in a recession," Reagan told 1,600 business and civic leaders here on Thursday. But he denied responsibility, saying, "Our administration is a cleanup crew for those who went on a non-stop binge and left the tab for us to pick up. The recession hurts, it causes pain. But we'll work our way out of it, and faster than expected."

With unemployment at a near-record 8.9 percent and the federal budget deficit soaring, Reagan defended his economic policies of huge tax and spending cuts and promised they eventually would bring relief.

Second Wave Coming

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

The second blast of arctic air in a week charged out of Canada today, promising no relief from severe winter weather that has killed at least 213 people and piled up snow in the South and the Northeast after twin storms.

Winds up to 100 mph in the Rocky Mountain foothills overturned two tractor-trailers Thursday, tore off an apartment building roof and brought unusually warm weather to Colorado, but forecasters said the balmy temperatures would drop sharply with the approach of the frigid air.

"The very strong arctic outbreak means we're going to be in the icebox for a couple of days," said Dean Nesley, a National Weather Service forecaster in Minnesota.

Nebraska was warned of temperatures dropping to 25 below zero tonight, and Illinois' forecasts called for a weekend of severe cold and blizzard or near-blizzard conditions. Washington, D.C., was expected to have highs in the teens by Sunday.

The South was hit with a storm Thursday that followed its twin by only a day. The second storm dumped up to a half-foot of snow on Southern cities that are usually spared the ravages of winter.

Rescheduled

The City Council's regular January meeting, postponed Thursday night due to the weather conditions, has been rescheduled for Jan. 29 at 7 p.m. at city hall. The same agenda will be considered by the council at the meeting, according to City Manager Ed Wyatt, who noted that the 7 p.m. starting time is one hour earlier than usual.

Recorders Intact Aboard Jetliner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The critical voice and instrument recorders on board the Air Florida jet that crashed into the Potomac River are intact, a police spokesman said today. Investigators hope to learn from those recorders whether excessive ice accumulation kept the plane from gaining altitude.

"Instruments have detected that the equipment is intact," District of Columbia Police Inspector James Shugart told reporters at the site early today. By mid-morning, he said, three two-man diving teams were to return to the wreckage under the 14th Street Bridge to remove the recorders.

Speculation over whether the plane had been properly deiced before it crashed Wednesday grew when the pilot of another airliner awaiting takeoff told investigators he had noticed ice on the Air Florida plane as it preparing to take off. Seventy-eight people died in the crash.

And Francis McAdam, chief investigator for the National Transportation Safety Board, said on the NBC-TV "Today" show this morning that ice could have added weight to the plane and affected its performance. Other investigators, however, cautioned against speculating about the possible cause of the crash until information on the plane's voice and instrument recorders becomes known.

Shugart said the divers, working without lights in visibility of only 1½ feet, were "working by hand" and would likely stay in the water, although for only an hour at a time at most, until dark.

The divers deduced Thursday that the plane's fuselage is not intact, Shugart said. Today the divers, working in "a high concentration of debris," hoped to better mark where parts of the plane are, recover the flight instruments and remove some bodies from the icy waters.

A temporary morgue would be set up on the river bank, he said.

Hampered by sub-freezing temperatures and sporadic snowfall, boat crews pulled the bodies of an infant and a woman from the icy river Thursday, bringing to nine the number of bodies recovered.

Seventy-nine people, including five crew members, were aboard the Florida-bound Boeing 737 when it crashed seconds after takeoff from National Airport. Four passengers and a flight attendant were rescued.

Weather-Related N.C. Death Toll Rises To 19

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina began digging out today from a winter storm that pelted the state with ice and snow, though many schools and businesses remained closed and many roads were impassable.

Meanwhile, the state's weather-related death toll rose to 19 since frigid air moved into North Carolina on Saturday.

Police found the body of 55-year-old Melvin Benjamin Harris of Greensboro on a dead-end street about 11:35 p.m. Thursday. Harris is believed to have died from exposure, but an autopsy was ordered.

By late Thursday, precipitation had stopped falling over virtually all areas of the state. Snow ranging from 3 to 6 inches covered existing layers of snow and ice from the mountains to the coastal Piedmont, making total accumulations 6 to 8 inches in most places, the National Weather Service reported.

Grandfather Mountain received 10 inches of snow and Mount Mitchell, the state's highest peak, was plastered with a foot.

Only the coast and Outer Banks received no snow. Those areas absorbed sleet and freezing rain which prompted the state Highway Patrol to post travelers' advisories.

Even as maintenance crews planned a full day's work to clear roadways and restore electric power where needed, thousands of businesses remained closed or opened late and more than 1 million public school children got a holiday.

M.C. Adams, manager of the N.C. Department of Transportation's maintenance and equipment branch, said the clearing of the state's roads would cost about $1 million.

Partly cloudy skies and temperatures in the mid- to upper 30s were forecast, making it likely that some snow and ice would melt. But the highway patrol repeated warnings not to drive unless necessary.

"They were scraping roads until pretty late last night, but they were only able to get major roads and even then the scrapers can only get down to the ice layers," said Raleigh patrol dispatcher Mack Dollar.

Forecasters worried that today's mellowing weather, while helpful to maintenance crews, might pose a problem.

Firemen Called To Two Fires

Greenville firemen responded to two fires early today — one a house at 307 E. 14th St., about 2:23 a.m., and the other at the Greenville City Schools' food service and maintenance building behind Third Street School, about 6:23 a.m.

Fire officers reported medium fire and water damage and heavy smoke damage resulted to the 14th Street residence, occupied by John Manney.

They said the fire, confined to a front room of the dwelling, apparently started in a sofa and spread to a window, the walls and other contents of the room.

The fire at the city schools' facility off Contentnea Street, confined primarily to the office facilities in the building, caused heavy damage to that area and heavy smoke damage throughout the structure.

School officials, who said they had no estimate of the damage, noted that the building, where foodstuffs for the city system's cafeterias are stored and maintenance shops are housed, was fully insured.

School Superintendent Delma Blinson quoted Fire-Rescue Department officials as saying a preliminary investigation indicated the fire may have started from a gas heater in the office area.

MADD & PARKIT!

I recently saw a segment on "60 Minutes" about how drunk drivers victimize us all, killing 71 Americans every day (that's about 26,000 a year!) and injuring many others. I would like to get in touch with any of the organizations mentioned on that program as being organized to strengthen the public's defense against drunk drivers. O.T.

Porter Shaw, director of the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Program of the Pitt County Mental Health Center, provided us addresses of two national organizations that may be among those you mentioned: MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers), P.O. Box HC, Fair Oaks, Calif. 95628, Candi Lightner, president, phone, 916-966-7433. And PARKIT (Prevent Alcohol-Related Killings and Injuries), Penn Union St., Dryden, N.Y. 13053, Martha Ferger, president.

This coming week is Alcohol Awareness Week in Pitt County and throughout the nation and Shaw and his staff will be at Carolina East Mall Tuesday and Wednesday to share information about how the state health and law enforcement agencies are attempting to battle the problem of alcohol abuse, particularly as it relates to those who choose to drive while drinking.

Wedding Ceremony Performed Saturday

Teresa Jo Hedgepeth and James Thomas Cobb Jr. were united in marriage Saturday in People's Baptist Temple. The Rev. J.M. Bragg performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hedgepeth, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Cobb of Rt. 4, Greenville.

The bride chose a formal gown of white organza over white peau de soie. It was designed with an open Queen Anne neckline outlined in scalloped chantilly lace and beaded with pearls. The bodice was overlaid in French chantilly lace with scalloped beaded lace at the waistline. The gown featured full French chantilly lace sleeves with cuffs of the scalloped lace. An organza Dior bow was featured at the center back. The modified A-line skirt was enhanced by a panel of French chantilly lace that extended into an attached cathedral length train. The train was accented with tiers of lace trimmed flounces that continued up the waistline. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion edged in chantilly lace held in place by a capelet overlaid in matching lace and beaded with seed pearls.

The matron of honor was Lisa Hedgepeth, sister of the bride of Greenville. She wore a formal gown of blue chantilly lace over taffeta designed with an open neckline, miniature shoulder straps and an empire bodice. The pleated lace skirt was enhanced with a lace flounce. The sleeveless gown was complemented with a short crystal pleated lace jacket accented with royal blue velvet trim.

The mother of the bride chose a formal gown of sweet pea lustreglo designed with a blouson bodice and miniature rolled shoulder straps. The mother of the bridegroom wore a formal gown of mauve lustreglo designed with a V-neckline, empire bodice and full sleeves.

Bridesmaids included Judy Whitehurst and Becky Futrell, both of Greenville, Teresa Williams of Williamston and Linda Cobb Burkett, sister of the bridegroom of Franklin, Va. The flower girl was Mary Anne Cobb, sister of the bridegroom.

The best man was the bridegroom's father and ushers included Gary Cobb, brother of the bridegroom, Wilbert Futrell, Tom Huston, all of Greenville, and Harold Burkett of Franklin. The ring bearer was Chad Hedgepeth, brother of the bride.

A program of wedding music was presented by Tim Sutton, organist and Gene Lewis, soloist. Songs included "There Is Love" and "The Wedding Song."

A reception was held after the wedding ceremony. Myra Zills poured punch and Carolyn Mallard served cake. Loretta Houston presided at the guest register.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at an after-rehearsal party Friday evening at the Belvoir Community Building.

The bride graduated from Greenville Christian Academy and attends East Carolina University. The bridegroom graduated from North Pitt High School and is employed by Pitt County in data processing.

The couple will live in Greenville.

No wonder Americans have continued to bake Boston Cream Pie since the middle of the past century. It really is one of the best desserts in our cuisine.

Does anyone know why this cake, from its beginning, was called a pie?

BOSTON CREAM PIE
1 cup fork-stirred all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 large eggs, separated
1-3rd cup water
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Cream Filling, recipe follows
Chocolate Glaze, recipe follows

Line the bottom of two 8-inch round layer-cake pans with wax paper; butter paper. On a sheet of wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder and salt. In a large bowl beat together the egg yolks, water, lemon rind and vanilla to mix; gradually beat in the sugar, then the lemon juice, until smooth. With a spoon, gradually fold in the flour mixture just until smooth after each addition. In a medium bowl with a clean beater, beat the egg whites until they hold stiff straight peaks when the beater is slowly withdrawn; fold into the flour mixture. Turn into prepared pans. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 35 to 40 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges and turn out on wire racks; strip off paper; cool completely. Sandwich cake layers together with the Cream Filling. Frost the cake as directed in the Chocolate Glaze recipe. Store in the refrigerator.

CREAM FILLING
1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
1-3rd cup sugar
Salt to taste
1 1/2 cups milk
2 tablespoons butter
2 egg yolks, from large eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
In a 1 1/2-quart saucepan stir together the flour, sugar and salt. Gradually stir in the milk, keeping smooth. Add the butter. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbling. In a small bowl slightly whisk the yolks; vigorously stir in a

Chinese Cooking Demonstrated

Betty Grossnickle demonstrated Chinese cooking by the stir-fry method at the meeting of the Lakewood Pines Garden Club held Monday evening at the Kitchen Cupboard.

Of the two most renowned cuisines, the French and the Chinese, the Chinese predates the French by about 3,000 years. Moreover, the Chinese have perhaps the most healthful diet in the world today, she pointed out.

A few years ago it was found that the Chinese have a low incidence of cardiovascular disease. The seemingly limited combination of no refrigeration, scarcity of fuel for cooking and lack of beef products has over the years resulted in a diet of fish, poultry and fresh vegetables in season, all cooked quickly to preserve fuel. Thus developed the art of cooking meals that were high in vitamins and low in cholesterol content, she said.

Mrs. Grossnickle's menu included chicken, peppers and walnuts with broccoli and grapefruit shebert for dessert.

A business meeting was also held. It was announced the February hostess will be Mrs. W. C. Taylor.

TIRE PROBLEMS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Abnormal tire-wear problems contribute to less service life for a tire, costing the consumer money.

Just what are some of these problems? According to Ironsides, a tire company, they are:

- Outside and inside shoulder wear.
- Edge wear or flat spots.
- Across rib wear and width rib wear.
- Up and down "cupping."
- Side to side "feathering."

Correct tire pressure will reduce many problems, the company says.

Violence In Guatemala Is Soaring

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Guatemala's civil war is taking nearly twice as many lives since the first of the year, slashing a bloody swath through soldiers, guerrillas, peasants, bystanders and whole families.

About 300 people a month had been dying in the conflict between the right-wing military government and four major organizations of leftist guerrillas. In the first half of January, 260 deaths were reported, including one family of 12 and another of five.

Death comes after a knock on the door and torture, in an ambush, from a hidden bomb, a mine or a machine-gun burst from a speeding car.

The victims include combatants, small children shot point-blank, policemen, teachers, families of intended victims and people who happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time.

The increase seems to be traceable to a combination of military sweeps through guerrilla strongholds in the north and west and elections scheduled March 7.

"The blood always flows in Guatemala before elections," a Mexican priest who works with refugees on the border said recently in an interview.

Guerrillas traditionally try to disrupt the elections. The rightists are fighting back.

Most of the deaths are the work of hit squads on both sides who work almost at will throughout the country.

Some targets are selective. The airport chief of immigration and a national police detective were shot and killed in Guatemala City Thursday, apparently by leftists. Two schoolteachers who had been kidnapped, presumably by rightists, were found shot to death 100 miles north and 125 miles southeast of the capital.

Other killings are harder to understand.

— Last Saturday, 50 bodies were found in two locations. All the victims had been tortured and shot. They were taken from their homes in the San Marcos region, near the Mexican border, by armed men who burned 20 houses. Ten others taken with them are still missing.

— On Tuesday, gunmen broke into the Alvarez Barillas home 55 miles south of Guatemala City and slaughtered 12 members of the family, ranging in age from 6 to 65.

— On Wednesday, gunmen invaded the Lopez Yon home 140 miles north of the capital and killed five members of the family. The youngest was 2 months old.

Dear Abby

Mother Pays Through Nose For Son's 'Perfection'

By Abigail Van Buren
© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I'm a widow with a 36-year-old son, and he's my problem. All his life he's been a perfectionist. Picky, picky, picky!

He buys a house he thinks is perfect, then he tears it up and remodels it. He remodeled the same house twice. Nothing ever suits him. His jeans have to fit perfect. He went to the tailor's twice because he wasn't satisfied the first time.

His nose went twice, too. He had his father's nose. (I fell madly in love with that man. All the girls went crazy for him, even if he did have a big nose.) My son thought he would never get a girl because of his nose, so he had it done over by a plastic surgeon. It didn't suit him, so he went back and had it done again.

He finally got a girl, but she didn't marry him for his nose — she married him for his money, and now they're divorced. (I had to pay for the divorce, too.)

Do you think he will ever support himself?
I love my son, Abby, but I'm sick of hearing, "What's wrong with me, Ma?" Please tell me, who's nuts? Him or me?

HAD IT IN FLORIDA

DEAR HAD IT: Neither one of you is nuts, lady. You're a soft touch for a son who's hard to please and knows how to get what he wants. He may never support himself. And why should he as long as he has you?

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Nameless in Maine" could have been written by me a few years ago. My husband never took an interest in our sons when they were little. Like "Nameless," I knew he loved us and was a good man, but knowing how hard he worked to support us, I counted my blessings and kept quiet.

Your advice to "Nameless" was terrific. I hope she tells her husband that she needs his help in raising their children, and they both should get counseling from professionals.

When our oldest was 15, he rebelled and defied all authority, and because he and his father had no relationship, all the responsibility fell on me. I sought help from school counselors and the Family Service Counseling people, who all said the same thing: "Get your husband involved!" So I finally revealed my true feelings to my husband and told him that deep down I was bitter and resentful because he was always "too busy" to spend time with our sons. Abby, it was the smartest thing I ever did.

My husband said his mother had always handled the children, and he was brought up to believe raising children was the mother's job. He said he thought I wanted it that way because I never complained or asked for his help.

Today our sons are fine Christian young men who have a good relationship with their father. Much bitterness and many problems could have been avoided if I had been honest with my husband from the beginning, instead of trying to do it all myself. Please print this for other parents to see.

NAMELESS IN ALABAMA

DEAR ABBY: Last weekend I went to visit a nephew who lives in another city. While there, I attended church with him. When the collection plate was passed, my nephew took a $10 bill from his wallet, placed it on the collection plate, then took three $1 bills from the plate and placed them in his wallet. I was shocked!

Abby, I had never seen anyone "make change" from a collection plate before. Is this proper?

ASTONISHED

DEAR ASTONISHED: Why not? Far better to put in a $10 bill and take out three dollars than to put in nothing because all he had was a $10 bill, which may have been beyond his budget.

Orders Florida Man Extradited

By The Associated Press
ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Buncombe County Superior Court judge has ordered a Florida man extradited to that state to face murder and kidnapping charges.

Judge Robert M. Burroughs dismissed claims Wednesday by Perry Thomas LaPuma that he was not in Florida Nov. 14 when a 2½-year-old boy was kidnapped and later found dead.

Buncombe County District Attorney Ronald C. Brown said LaPuma offered no evidence to support his claim. Florida authorities sent a governor's warrant to Gov. Jim Hunt Jan. 4 authorizing LaPuma's extradition.

LaPuma is wanted in connection with the death of Thomas Perry III. Perry was abducted from a Key Largo campground where LaPuma had been staying with Perry's parents.

Brown said he is not sure when LaPuma will be returned to Florida.

Did What They Could

Seldom have pictures told such a heartrending and, at the same time, grisly story, as those that came from Washington following the crash of an Air Florida jet as it took off from National Airport Wednesday.

On television and later in editions of newspapers the scene was repeated again and again — badly maimed bodies of victims on the 14 Street bridge, their vehicles torn apart by the impact of the too low plane. It was frustrating to see helicopters dropping rings to still alive victims among the ice flows in the Potomac, only to see victims too weak to hold on and falling back in the water.

There were positive scenes, however. One woman somehow held onto the line dropped to her and rode it to shore. There was the heroic swim in the icy waters by Lennie Skutnik to rescue a woman who was all but gone after a helicopter rescue had failed.

There has seldom been more drama recorded for the world to see than there was in the Potomac Wednesday afternoon.

The investigations will go on for a long time, about whether the rescue mission was organized enough, even about whether National Airport should continue to operate in the shadow of the the Pentagon and the White House.

Be that as it may, a lot of people on the scene appeared to do all they could to assist victims who survived the crash but were rapidly losing the battle for life to the freezing waters.

The Word Will Get Out

The White House leak — it has been around as long as there has been a government and presidents have been trying to stop it since George Washington.

Now Ronald Reagan is trying with a presidential gag order which requires White House clearance even for the Agriculture Department.

The press-government relationship is unique in our country, however. Perhaps it is even essential to the functioning of a democratic government. Thus the leaks will undoubtedly continue. Sources may be more discreet and demand anonymity, but the word will get out when major administrative moves are in the making.

As stockholders in the United States we may all be better off for it.

THIS AFTERNOON

Beating The Rap

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — There seems arising a public clamor demanding that drunk drivers be gotten off the nation's highways. Network television has been devoting considerable attention. California has enacted a law making two days in jail mandatory, and loss of driving privileges a certainty.

South Carolina's Legislature will consider a similar proposal this year.

The North Carolina General Assembly has several times argued whether a two or three day stay in jail would help curb drunk driving, but has yet to bite the bullet and enact such a law.

Meantime, experts give this state credit with having come up with as strong and as workable a drunk driving law as there is in the nation.

A breathalyzer or chemical blood test is required of an individual arrested for drunk driving, on pain of losing one's driving license for refusal. If the alcohol content of the blood exceeds .10 percent, the North Carolina law says you are driving drunk; no arguments over impaired faculties or numbers of drinks.

Still Driving

Yet something is bad wrong in this state, just as elsewhere. Drunks continue to figure in more than half the fatal wrecks, and despite sporadic police and Highway Patrol crackdowns, people still drink and drive; and they still beat the rap.

And there is where the trouble is — they beat the rap. Police officials, officers of the court, and safety experts agree that because legislators, bankers, merchants, respectable people get caught driving drunk, the crime carries with it less of a stigma than do such crimes as murder, manslaughter or armed robbery. Yet more people are killed and injured by drunk drivers than by the other criminals.

Judges have commented time and again that when a person can come up with the money, he will hire the best lawyer, pull out all the stops to delay, twist, and avoid conviction and loss of driving the law which allow judge or prosecutor to restore driving privileges even if the individual is convicted.

All told, the conviction rate for those charged with drunk driving has fallen well below 70 percent statewide. But worse yet, in some counties far fewer than half are convicted. A 1979 survey shows Yancy, Granville and Orange counties fall below 50 percent while Burke, Caldwell, Catawba, Durham, Lincoln, Union, Vance and Watauga fall below a 60 percent conviction rate.

A Good Law

Ben F. Loeb, motor vehicle law specialist at the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill, has come up with the bluntest assessment of the situation yet seen. He has compared drunk driving statistics from the time before the new North Carolina law was enacted in 1973, and in years since then.

There is nothing whatsoever wrong with the Driving Under Intoxication law as now written. It is clear, concise, and as simple to enforce as a speed limit law. The North Carolina General Assembly has done its part," Loeb says.

"Now it is up to the

To the editor:

The Arkansas decision not to introduce the Biblical version of creation into the public schools and your editorial of January 8 supporting that decision are to be commended.

The Constitution is very specific in its call for a separation of church and state. Individuals are guaranteed the freedom to choose the religious beliefs, if any, with which they feel most comfortable. People often lose sight of the fact that this country is made up of diverse religious groups, each of whom have unique beliefs and practices and are entitled to educate their children as they see fit. By the same token, people have the right to be protected from the imposition on themselves and their children of anyone else's beliefs and practices.

Expounding any particular religious point of view has no place in our school system. We wholeheartedly agree with you that "religious instruction is the duty of the church and the parents."

Strength For Today

LADDER TO HEAVEN

We are told in the Book of Genesis how the young Jacob, fleeing from the wrath of his brother Esau, saw in a dream a ladder set up on the earth. "And the top of it reached to heaven." And on the ladder he saw the angels of God "ascending and descending."

When Jacob awoke from his dream he realized that henceforth his life would be supported with God's help and power. This was God's way of telling him that there was a constant communication

Rules Of Entitlement

"Lunchtime, everyone. Class dismissed."

"Elizabeth, what are you doing with that tray?"

"Getting some lunch."

"Your name isn't on the list. You are not entitled to lunch."

"How come my name is not on the list?"

"Your parents did not fill out the correct forms. Under new government guidelines, only those children whose fathers and mothers make less than a certain salary each year are eligible for a free lunch. You can't eat until your parents prove you are entitled to the food."

"Yes, ma'am. What should I do while the other children are eating lunch?"

"You can read something."

"What do you want me to read?"

"You can read the new government regulations concerning free lunches. Then you can explain it to your parents."

"Yes, ma'am. Where should I sit while I'm reading the thing that says I can't have lunch?"

"You can sit with the children eating their lunch, but you're not to touch their food."

"Watching other kids eating makes me hungry. Could I go over to the corner by myself and read this paper?"

"No, that would make you special, and you can not have extra privileges just because you're not eligible for the hot lunch program."

"Teacher, I'm trying to read this thing, but I don't understand one word."

"That's because you're not concentrating Elizabeth."

ART BUCHWALD

You're daydreaming aren't you?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"What were you daydreaming about?"

"Lunch. I was thinking how nice it would be to have one."

"Elizabeth, I know it's difficult for someone in the sixth grade to understand what is going on in the country. But President Reagan doesn't have enough money to give everyone a school lunch. He can only give it to poor children."

"My father says we're poor."

"Yes, but you're not poor enough. You have to be very, very poor to get a free lunch."

"Does the President get a free lunch?"

"He gets an allowance, and his lunch comes out of his allowance."

"I don't get an allowance."

"Perhaps someday when you grow up and become President you will."

"How am I going to grow up and be President if I don't eat lunch?"

"There is no reason to get sassy, Elizabeth. There are people in Washington working day and night trying to cut the fat out of the budget, and one of the areas where they decided there was too much waste was in free school meals. They hope to save $5 0 million in this program alone."

"What are they going to do with the $5 0 million?"

"They're going to give everyone a tax cut so people will have more money to buy lunches."

"Will I get a tax cut so I can buy lunch?"

"Of course not. You have to work to get a tax cut. But your Daddy and Mommy will."

"My Daddy said he doesn't make enough money to get a tax cut."

"He may not get one directly, but the tax cuts other people get, will trickle down to him in time."

"How?"

"It's all in the regulations, if you would just stop wasting your lunch hour, and read them."

"Who wrote this thing?"

"David Stockman. He's the man the President has made responsible for seeing that the wrong children don't

Centenary For Jeeves

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
(AP) — Playing scratch golf up there in the Elysian Fields with Agnes Flack and John Rockett in his checkerboard knickerbockers, P.G. Wodehouse won't mind if I missed his centenary by a few weeks.

He only missed it himself by a few years when he died in 1975 at the age of 93, just a couple of weeks after the queen made up for decades of shameful neglect by finally knighting him. No one on the literary scene was more deserving or overdue, because no one in his three generations — Wodehouse published his first of nearly 100 books in 1902 — had handled the Queen's English with greater grace and wit.

The critic James Agate ranked Wodehouse's place in literature "a little below Shakespeare's and any distance you like above everybody else's." A trifle exaggerated, perhaps, like one of Mr. Mulliner's tales from the bar parlor of the Anglers' Rest or Bertie Wooster confiding to gentlemanly Jeeves that his Aunt Agatha, "the Pont Street human snapping turtle," wore barbed wire next to her skin, but quite in keeping with the master's occasional touch of hyperbole.

Certainly no one on either side of Dickens was better at inventing characters with apt names like Pongo Twistleton, Barmy Fotheringay Phipps, Dr. E. Jimpson Murgatroyd of Harley Street, G. D'Arcy (Stilton) Cheesewright, Gussie Fink-Nottle and, among hundreds of other delightfully zany creations, the "V-recking Crew," a "quartet (sic) of spavined septagenarian golfers whose pride it was that they never let anyone play through."

Not to forget, of course, Lord Emsworth, lord of all he surveyed at Blandings Castle, except his sister Lady Constance Keeble, and Lord Worplesdon, who came at the then 15-year-old Bertie Wooster with a riding crop for swiping one of his best cigars. Bertie's middle name of Wilberforce, by the way, did not honor the great anti-slavery evangelist but came about because on the day before his christening, his father won a packet on a dark horse named Wilberforce in the Grand National.

Such was life in Wodehouse's forever Edwardian dream world where you judged a man by his cook as well as his valet and where, after a "bump supper" at Oxford, a chap might feel alcoholically impelled to "take all his clothes off and ride round the quad on a bicycle, singing comic songs" or "insist he was a mermaid and wanted to dive into the college fountain and play the harp."

I discovered Wodehouse a little late in life, far from any college quadrangle, along one of those unsuspecting intellectual detours, where circumstance and coincidence often lead you to the most satisfying literature. Most of us, I think, perversely resent the books that others, particularly professors, force upon us.

No one told me to be sure to read Pelham Granville Wodehouse. One of his books happened to be the only thing available. I was in Oslo, Norway, a few years back, on my way up to Svalbard, which we used to call Spitzbergen, the most northerly inhabited spot on Earth. There was only one plane out, Wodehouse saved my sanity.

"The Golf Omnibus," by P.G. Wodehouse was the only book in English for under $25 in the big bookstore down the street from my Oslo hotel. Lucky for me in my seven-day sojourn 700 miles above the Arctic Circle, "Plum," as his friends called him, is translated into more languages than the pope gives his Christmas message.

Although I never met him, he became my friend, too. I arrived at Svalbard in late January, when the sun shone for about 40 minutes a day on that treeless frigid wasteland of coal mines and radar antennas, where polar bears are the main topic of conversation and codfish, boiled or baked, a menu fixture at every meal in the coal company messhalls. There was a movie now and then, and twice a week the Norwegian miners were allowed the luxury of a cold beer, but all the rest of the interminable dark week I put from my mind that bleak landscape of snow drifts and starving muskox and was out on the golf course with Agatha Flack, Archibald Mealing, John Rockett and all the others chronicled by the "Oldest Member."

From his favorite chair on the clubhouse porch overlooking the 9th green, the oldest member held his unwilling listeners with the mesmerizing eye of the Ancient Mariner. I was hooked as soon as I made the acquaintance of Agnes Flack and John Rockett. Agnes, two time winner of the Ladies Vase, "had shoulders and forearms which would have excited the envious admiration of one of those muscular women of the music halls who good-naturedly allow six brothers, three sisters and a cousin by marriage to pile themselves on her collarbone while the orchestra plays a long drawn chord." Rockett, twice British Amateur champ and three times second in the Open, called "his five

Health Care Goal: Cut Usage

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — After trying and failing in a variety of sophisticated ways to slow the rise in the nation's huge health bill, a remedy old as man and simple as self-interest is likely to be tried soon.

Control through regulation hasn't lived up to promises, as attested to by a long list of attempts by every administration in the 1970s. In 1968 health care costs were $58 billion; in 1980, about $247 billion.

Properly utilized, the newest (and oldest) remedy seems bound to work. It usually has. "It" refers to economic incentives and penalties.

The irony, of course, is that economic incentives used to be in place, and individuals themselves had to foot their medical bills. Government, corporations, unions and insurers ended that, agreeing that individuals should be insulated from the bills through insurance programs, often paid for by the employer. Productivity increases was the rationale.

Now, after two decades in which various third parties took charge of payments, the entire economy seems threatened by big medical bills, and sentiment is growing for a return to greater personal accountability.

The form of incentives and penalties isn't fully determined yet, and the White House has yet to announce its initiatives, but co-payment plans and tax benefits or penalties are prominent in discussions.

Co-payments would require the user of services, such as those offered by a hospital, to pay part of the bill rather than relying solely on a health insurance plan. The tax device often mentioned is to limit the amount of personal health costs that can be deducted from tax bills.

"There comes a limit," said J. Alexander McMahon, president of the American Hospital Association, in reference to the health care bill, which rose faster last year than any other major inflation component. "To slow increases," he said, "we must have economic motivation."

Expenditures for health care accounted for 6.7 percent of gross national product in 1968. In 1980 they took 9.4 percent. In 1985, the U.S. Department of Health has projected, they might consume 10 percent.

Considering the need to raise the nation's productivity and ability to compete in world markets, such expenditures reasonably might be deemed a disaster. But where do you begin cutting when the ingredients of the increase include wage-benefit levels, a rising proportion of elderly people, and increasingly more sophisticated medicine?

You begin, health officials such as McMahon are saying, with usage. "It has been demonstrated that where co-payment is involved usage drops," says McMahon. It suggests, he said, that health services are being overused for marginal ailments not requiring professional help.

Many corporations agree. One high-level business group has just finished a study, results of which soon will be announced, that puts at $55 billion the 1980 corporate bill for employee health benefit plans.

Expenditures at Deere & Company indicate the concern. Between 1972 and 1977, it found, annual costs for health care for about 200,000 workers, retirees and dependents jumped 300 percent to $60 million.

By 1980 the annual total was nearly $100 million, compelling the company to institute a program of stressing quality rather than quantity in the delivery of services. At the heart of the dilemma, said an executive, was wasteful utilization of health care services.

With various corporate, union, insurance and medical groups, McMahon and others are pushing coalitions for health care — state and community groups that have a mutual involvement in better health and its costs.

For one thing, McMahon is concerned that at a time of cost-pressures coming from decreased federal involvement and recession — many jobless workers have lost health care insurance — the hospitals may be asked to shoulder more of the responsibilities than they can handle.

"We can no longer afford to divide the health care system into those who cure, those who pay, and those who are cared for," he said in a statement issued today.

What is needed, he said, is greater community involvement, and better incentives for providers, users, insurers and suppliers of health care services to reduce costs.

In the past, he commented, the incentives were to use the services. Now, he suggested, the incentives must be to cut expenses.

New Process Eases Pain

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — John Coates, a 44-year-old paraplegic, said he suffered four years of severe pain before a surgical technique developed at Duke University Medical Center helped him.

"I had tried virtually every kind of narcotic they make to relieve the pain," said the Austin, Texas attorney, who was injured when a rifle accidentally discharged into his back. "I tried nerve blocks and even tried hypnosis. But nothing worked."

Coates is among 75 patients who have been relieved of intractable pain by a technique called a "DREZ coagulation," in which surgeons use tiny electrodes to destroy nerves producing the painful sensations. DREZ stands for dorsal root entry zone, the area of the spine through which nerves relay sensations.

Dr. Blaine S. Nashold, the Duke neurosurgeon who developed the procedure, said Coates' case was typical of the pain suffered by about 10 percent of paraplegics.

"We're talking about patients whose doctors have exhausted all possible ways to deal with the pain," Nashold said. "Many of these patients become addicted to narcotics. I know of two paraplegics who committed suicide because the pain was so unbearable."

A clinical summary of Nashold's patients was only recently published in the Journal of Neurosurgery, but he has shared the technique through lectures and clinical instruction at other major medical centers.

Nashold said the procedure was first used in treating patients who lost the use of their arms following motorcycle accidents, but has produced "very dramatic" results with paraplegics, cancer patients and "shingles" sufferers.

While most of the current attention at Duke is focused on the pain therapy, Nashold said research continues along many other avenues to help paraplegics.

One group is exploring ways to make artificial limbs more responsive.

Nashold said Frank Clippinger, a professor of orthopedics at Duke, has been able to hook up implants similar to heart pacemakers to let patients "sense" their missing limbs and move them more efficiently.

"One of the problems with prosthetic devices is fine tuning them," Nashold said. "If you've got a hook there, you can pick up a lot of things, but you can't tune that pressure to pick up an egg versus a steel ball."

With Clippinger's device, a patient feels a "tingling" sensation increase with the pressure and similar devices in the heel of prosthetic legs help patients walk better.

Nashold said devices already in use let paraplegics empty their bladders and breathe normally — activities previously considered impossible due to paralyzed muscles.

But the future may rest with work on regenerating nerves and regrowing the spinal cord, he said.

"If you pass an electric current across an injured nerve that has been sewn back together, it tends to accelerate the regrowth of the upper end into the cut end," Nashold said. "We know that the nerve grows back in the human body at one inch per month. I you could reduce that time, that would be a big improvement."

Nashold said similar research designed to promote regrowth in the spinal cord had not yet reached the stage where patients could benefit from it.

children Sandwich, Hoylake, St. Andrew, Troon and Prestwick after the courses on which he had won renown."

The British took a lifetime — his — in getting around to recognizing Wodehouse's genius, because of an absurd, vicious charge of his collaborating with the Nazis for making five broadcasts while under house arrest in Berlin in the early days of the war. To let his fans know he was not being mistreated, Wodehouse tried to be funny about internment. London tabloids denounced him as a traitor. BBC banned his plays and the song lyrics he had written for Broadway musicals. Dulwich College, his alma mater, removed his books from the shelves. Although George Orwell and Evelyn Waugh came to his defense, the innuendoes kept him in virtual exile in America most of the rest of his life and still lingered when he made the Queen's honor list. Wodehouse was dead five years when British intelligence released a 1944 report exonerating him.

In his centenary year, the clouds at last were dispelled by "Wodehouse at War," a short book by Tory M.P. Iain Sproat, who obtained the release of pertinent Home Office documents. The British Museum and New York's Morgan Library mounted exhibitions in his honor, and Dulwich College named its library for him.

It is still not too late to sample Wodehouse, but be warned that one dose is considered addictive. Some 80 of his books are still in print, and 30 million are lying around someplace, including the one I am reading now about Stanley Featherstonehaugh Utridge. Rum chap.

criminal Justice system."

There is overwhelming evidence that it is, indeed, the courtrooms of North Carolina in which drunk driving is being downgraded to the point that the odds of beating the charge even if caught by the police must make offenders less than fearful of the consequences.

Court officials contend that they must take pleas on reduced charges in order to keep up with the daily courtroom load; that to go to trial with every drunk driving case would swamp the courts. One has to wonder which is worse: swamping the courts with cases or the highways with drunk drivers?

FROZEN SCENE — A tree is covered with beads of ice as the sun begins to brighten the cold waters of the Tar River this morning. Greenville began clearing the ice and sleet from

Thatcher's Son Found, Rescued

TAMANRASSET, Algeria (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's son, rescued with his co-driver and mechanic six days after their car broke down in the Sahara, says he wasn't in trouble but "would have liked a couple of ham sandwiches now and again."

Unwashed and unshaven but fit, Mark Thatcher told a news conference at Tamanrasset's Tahat Hotel a search plane passed over them on the second day "but unluckily it was heading into the sun and did not see us."

An Algerian Air Force pilot spotted the trio and their Peugeot 504 Thursday near Algeria's southern border with Mali. Algerian border guards rescued them and they were flown 250 miles north to Tamanrasset, where Thatcher's father, Denis Thatcher, was waiting for him.

"All I need is a beer and a sandwich, a bath and a shave," said the 28-year-old racing driver.

Neither his 38-year-old French co-driver, Anny-Charlotte Verney, nor his mechanic, Claude Garnier, suffered any ill effects from their stay in the desert. But the flight made Ms. Verney airsick, and she was treated at the local hospital.

Thatcher and his crew were taking part in the 20-day, 6,200-mile Paris-to-Dakar motor rally when their rear axle broke last Friday. When nothing had been heard from them by Wednesday, hundreds of soldiers, border patrolmen and police began to scour the desolate desert area.

Thatcher said after their breakdown, they pitched their tent beside the car and settled down to wait until they were found.

"We were not lost," he said. "We knew where we were, although we weren't where we were supposed to be."

"But I wasn't frightened at all. I would have liked a couple of ham sandwiches now and again, but we were all right for water... We could have gone for another 12 days. We had enough water, food and no problems at all... I think we did everything from a survival point of view very well."

Thatcher and Ms. Verney were flying back to Europe today with his father, who flew to Algeria Wednesday.

In London, Mrs. Thatcher said she was "very relieved and thankful." She thanked the searchers and the governments of Algeria, France and Mali for their efforts.

More than 800 drivers, riding motorcycles, cars and trucks, began the rally New Year's Day in Paris. It ends Jan. 20 in Dakar, Senegal, and only about 100 are expected to finish.

Two people have been reported killed so far in this year's rally, a Dutch motorcyclist and a journalist for the French news weekly Le Point.

Underlining Food Safety

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Department of Agriculture's second annual food safety poster contest for elementary school children in 1982 focuses on planning and packing safe "brown bag" and box lunches for school.

Entries must be submitted between Jan. 1-March 14.

Because more than 2 million cases of food poisoning occur every year, the agency hopes the contest will teach children and parents how to pack food safely.

Donald L. Houston, administrator for the USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, says entrants are being asked to plan a lunch to be fixed at home and carried to school. They must draw and label the foods chosen and show how they would pack the foods for safety.

Contest kits with full rules and regulations will be sent to every elementary school in the United States around mid-January. There are three categories: grades K-1, 2-4 and 5-6.

The first prize winners in each category and their teachers will receive a $100 U.S. Savings Bond. Second and third prize winners, $50 savings bonds. The USDA's Welfare and Recreation Association is donating the prizes.

City Counted 13 Collisions

Greenville police said today that ice and sleet contributed to 13 traffic accidents Thursday. Official reports indicated that four of the collisions resulted in a total of $4,900 damages.

A car driven by Dezzie Daniels Clark of 117F

Lakeview Terrace collided with a parked vehicle owned by Jesse Ray Gladson of Route 3, Greenville, about 7:48 a.m. at the intersection of Millbrook Street and Sunset Avenue, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the Clark car and $300 damage to the Gladson vehicle.

A 3:53 p.m. collision at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Skinner Street involved cars driven by Danny Ray Wilson of 1814 Norcott Circle and Robert Luther Harrell of 1608 W. Fourth St., investigators reported.

Damage from the collision was set at $800 to the Wilson car and $1,000 to the Harrell auto.

Cars driven by Rosa Holden Blount of 112 W. 12th St. and Pamela Wilborn Brown of Glendale Court Apartments collided about 8:10 a.m. on 14th Street, 100 feet east of the West Rocksprings Road, resulting in $300 damage to the Blount car and $500 damage to the Brown auto.

A 4:45 p.m. mishap on Charles Street, 500 feet south of the 14th Street intersection involved vehicles driven by Clarence Rolan Talbot Jr., of 25 Scott St., and Christopher Columbus Tyson of 1509 W. Fifth St.

Damage was estimated at $200 to the Talbot car and $300 to the Tyson auto.

Hunting Person For Questioning

Greenville Police were looking today for a person sought for questioning in connection with a break-in at Arlington Boulevard Thursday night.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers followed a set of tracks which led to a Norcott Circle home, where they recovered a television set, a pair of snow boots, a tape recorder and several tapes allegedly taken from the storage firm.

Special Meeting

The Greenville Utilities Commission will meet in a special called session Tuesday at 1 p.m. in the board room of the Utilities Building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington streets.

Included on the agenda is the consideration of the purchase of the Vepco Substation here, and the setting of the refund rate for electric customers for February.

Lincoln's Days As A Lawyer Recalled By History Professor

DUBLIN, N.H. (AP) — Abraham Lincoln's wisdom, wit and oratorical skill helped patch a divided nation, and with the celebration of his 173rd birthday Feb. 12, researchers point out that these talents were first honed when the 16th president was a prairie lawyer in Illinois.

In one of his most intriguing cases, Lincoln combined skillful logic with an almanac, entered as evidence, to win acquittal for a man charged with murder, notes Maxwell Bloomfield, professor of American history at Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

"Lincoln was a general practitioner whose bedside manner gave him an edge with the jury," Bloomfield said. "Illinois was a backwoods state then, so a good lawyer had to be a peer rather than a pedagogue."

Lincoln's cogent, yet homespun, courtroom style was clearly evident when, 125 years ago, he defended Duff Armstrong, 24 years old, Bloomfield relates.

Armstrong was accused of murdering a man named Metzker with a slingshot in Cass County, Ill. At the time Lincoln, 47, was juggling careers as a lawyer and politician. He was hired by Hannah Armstrong, the defendant's mother, who had welcomed Lincoln into the Armstrong home many times when the lawyer was a young man.

The only witness for the prosecution was Charles Allen. He testified Armstrong assaulted Metzker at 10 o'clock on the night of Aug. 29, 1857, and because the moon was directly overhead it was as light as day that evening. He added that Armstrong's slingshot struck the deceased several times. With this testimony, the state's attorney rested his case.

Lincoln's defense went to the core of the state's evidence, but first in his typical, offhand manner, he pointed out several small discrepancies in Allen's testimony. Then Lincoln seized upon the most crucial statement Allen made — that the moon was shining that night, making it bright as day. Lincoln ordered Jake Jones, a cousin of Duff Armstrong, to get an almanac — to check the moonset for Aug. 29.

"In the 1857 edition of 'The Old Farmer's Almanac,' next to Aug. 29, it reads 'moon runs low,'" said Judson Hale, the modern-day editor of the almanac, during a recent interview. "That 1857 edition still exists," added Hale, who keeps copies of the historic book tucked away in his Dublin, N.H., office, headquarters for the publisher, Yankee Inc.

Lincoln deduced that if the moon were low, Allen could not have seen what he claimed. It would have been too dark. And, in fact, he argued, there would have been insufficient light for Allen to have seen Armstrong.

Judge Harriott allowed the almanac to be used as evidence. It was examined by the prosecutor and the jury.

During cross-examination the state's attorney, in an attempt to sway the jury, exclaimed, "Mr. Lincoln, you are mistaken. The moon was just coming up instead of going down at the time."

"It serves my purpose just as well," Lincoln replied. "Just coming up or just going down (each would indicate) it was not overhead as Mr. Allen swore it was."

The jury was out less than an hour before it unanimously voted for acquittal. It is generally believed that if Allen had not made the mistake about the moon, Armstrong would have been found guilty.

Barking Cure

LONDON (AP) — A British inventor has figured out how to give loud-mouthed dogs an earful of their own medicine.

Michael Steele of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England, says he has built an electronic gadget to keep the family pooch from waking the neighbors.

Steele says that when the dog barks too loud, his device emits an ultrasonic signal too high-pitched for human ears to detect but well within the range of the dog's hearing — an instantaneous shock — to the central nervous system.

"In a short period of time, the dog learns to refrain from barking."

In an article in this week's edition of the British magazine New Scientist, Steele says the device can be affixed either to the dog's collar or to its bed.

Watch Family Hood Ornament

LONDON (AP) — Members of Britain's royal family apparently have begun a private hood ornament contest, and the latest entrant is a small, silver snail that appeared on the hood of Prince Andrew's car.

The gastropod was spotted by ever-vigilant Fleet Street photographers during the weekend. Andrew, 21, is the younger brother of the heir to the throne, Prince Charles.

The snail apparently was the bachelor prince's answer to statuettes adorning the hoods of other royal autos.

Charles, 33, an avid polo player, has a miniature pony and rider on his Ford Granada, a horse and jockey at full gallop on a Range Rover, and a hunting dog on a third car.

Princess Diana, Charles' 20-year-old wife, has a Kermitt the Frog on her Ford Escort, and Princess Anne, Charles' 31-year-old sister, has a Prussian eagle, emblem of the 14th-20th King's Hussars, of which she is colonel-in-chief.

Asked about Andrew's snail, a Buckingham Palace spokesman professed ignorance. "It is unusual," the spokesman said.

Southern Demos Add To Conservative Vote Clout

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southern Democrats teamed with Republicans on one of every five recorded votes in Congress last year to give conservatives a run of legislative victories unequalled in a quarter century, a new study says.

Congressional Quarterly, a non-partisan research publication that compiled the figures, recorded any vote in which a majority of voting southern Democrats and a majority of voting Republicans opposed the stand taken by a majority of voting northern Democrats.

The conservative coalition succeeded 92 percent of the time in 1981, a success unprecedented in the 25 years the publication has measured the conservatives' muscle.

The coalition's previous high score was 89 percent, recorded in 1957, the first year CQ began studying the conservative coalition's voting patterns.

The Conservative Democratic Forum — a 47-member alliance of southern Democrats also known as "Boll Weevils" — provided the bulk of the Democratic support for the coalition. Nine members of the forum voted with the conservative coalition more than 90 percent of the time, the study showed.

Of the 104 Senate votes in which the conservative coalition appeared, the coalition won 99 times and was beaten five times. Of 75 House votes, the coalition had 66 victories and nine defeats.

"An important factor behind the coalition's 1981 success rate appears to have been the Reagan presidency," CQ editors said in the magazine's Jan. 9 edition.

"To a significant degree, the coalition's extraordinary success ... merely reflects the number of votes held in both chambers on the various components of Reagan's economic program."

Republicans hold the majority in the Senate, and their bloc votes on Reagan's key proposals ensured a victory for the White House with or without the votes of southern Democrats, CQ pointed out.

In the House, in addition to votes on the president's budget and tax cut legislation, the coalition also was victorious on votes reining in the Legal Services Corp., limiting the use of federal funds for abortion, curbing busing in school desegregation cases and disapproving an attempt by the District of Columbia to ease criminal penalties for certain sex-related offenses.

In the Senate, the coalition cut back the food stamp program, preserved tobacco price supports, limited the use of federal funds for abortion and ended a filibuster on a proposal to limit school busing to achieve racial balance.

CQ recorded any vote in which a majority of voting southern Democrats and a majority of voting Republicans opposed the stand taken by a majority of voting northern Democrats.

The study defines southern states as Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. The other 37 states are grouped as the North in the study.

Phil Gramm of Texas, a co-sponsor of Reagan's bipartisan budget legislation, led all House Democrats in supporting the coalition, casting his vote with the Republican-southern Democrat union 99 percent of the time.

Behind Gramm, Democrats voting with the coalition most frequently were Sonny Montgomery, Mississippi, 97 percent; Richard Shelby, Alabama, 93; Dan Daniel, Virginia, 93; Earl Hutto, Florida, 93; Ed Jenkins, Georgia, 91; Billy Tauzin, Louisiana, 91; Marvin Leath, Texas, 91; and Charlie Stenholm, Texas, 91.

Among Senate Democrats, the most loyal coalition supporter was J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, 93 percent.

Two northern Senate Democrats up for re-election in 1982 showed marked increases in their level of coalition support compared to 1980, CQ said. John Melcher of Montana leaped 28 points, from 31 percent to 59 percent, and William Proxmire of Wisconsin went up 20 points, from 40 percent to 60 percent.

HARVEST OF POISONING — An eastern Idaho farmer pitches a strychnine-poisoned jackrabbit into a truck Thursday as a second man stoops to grab one of almost 1,000 of the crop-destroying hares which were killed Wednesday night on a Schools Said Weakened Haitian Invasion Head To Be Jailed By U.S.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's public schools are being weakened by a decline in the percentage of state money put into the system, the president of a statewide teachers group said.

John I. Wilson, president of the North Carolina Association of Educators, said Thursday that figures released by the state this week "show once again that there has been a lowering of the priority accorded the state's public schools."

MIAMI (AP) — A Haitian exile who masterminded a failed attempt to invade his homeland was being brought here today by the Coast Guard to be jailed on charges of violating the federal Neutrality Act, officials said.

Bernard Sansaricq, 37, a gas station owner from Fort Lauderdale, and 25 followers were captured Thursday in the Windward Passage between Haiti and Cuba by the U.S. interdiction force — the Coast Guardsmen stationed in the Atlantic by President Reagan to turn back Haitian refugees.

They were put aboard one of the two cutters used by the force, along with their small arsenal of three rifles, a shotgun, two pistols, 15 pipe bombs and supplies for making bombs, the Coast Guard said.

The seizure took place 650 miles southeast of Miami. Sansaricq's disabled 45-foot sailboat boat, which he had chartered for the mission, was put in tow by the other cutter and both U.S. vessels were due here today, although they may be delayed by rough seas, the Coast Guard said.

"We authorized the Coast Guard to place (Sansaricq) under arrest based on information we have received," Brian McDonald, the first assistant U.S. attorney in Miami, said Thursday.

"We got an initial report that two of the people aboard were Americans," Chief Petty Officer Ray Baker said in Miami. "We're not able to confirm it because we want to wait until they get here and we can check their identification."

It is a violation of the Neutrality Act of 1974 to

The figures show North Carolina ranks 35th in the nation in per pupil expenditures for public schools but ranks near the top in the nation in support for higher education.

Wilson said the NCAE has pointed to a decline in the percentage of the state's general tax fund going into public schools as reflecting a lack of priority accorded the schools by the General Assembly.

"The plain facts are that our political leaders have allowed a deterioration of the funding of our public schools," he said.

REQUEST APPROVED

Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of a request by the Kiwanis Club of Winterville to conduct a merchant solicitation through Feb. 6 to solicit gift certificates and merchandise which will be auctioned at the club's annual farm sale. Proceeds will be used for club projects.

Retiree Group Has Meeting

The Greenville Chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons met Monday at Memorial Baptist Church.

Dr. Edwin Monroe, associate dean of ECU School of Medicine, spoke and reported on the White House Conference on Aging. He represented the eastern counties of North Carolina on the committee on long term health care. One of the major themes of the conference was that the elderly felt that they should be better utilized in their communities and states; also, the elderly wanted assurance of economic protection. Some recommendations were for more help for people wanting to continue living in their homes instead of having to live in nursing homes and for better transportation systems, especially in rural areas.

Seychelles Economy Crippled By Attempted Coup

By JAMES R. PEIPERT
Associated Press Writer
VICTORIA, Seychelles (AP) — The tourist-based economy of these remote Indian Ocean islands suffered a sharp decline because of an attempt by mercenaries to set off a coup against the government last November.

But the economy shows signs of rebounding in the new year, officials say.

The tourist industry, providing about 45 percent of the Seychelles' gross national product, had already been hit over the past three years by the world economic slump and high oil prices, which increased the cost of getting here.

Then on Nov. 25 came the attempt by a band of mercenaries to oust the socialist government of President France Albert Rene. Even after the airport reopened and the curfew was eased, tourism was down to a trickle during most of December.

"Obviously, an action like this does cause us a certain amount of economic disadvantage," Rene said in a recent interview with The Associated Press. "I'm sure that for a few months some tourists may hesitate to come to a place where there has been this sort of destabilization."

But Maxime Ferrari, minister of economic planning and development, said the tourist industry is recovering faster than expected. He described as "overly pessimistic" an original estimate that the islands would lose $20 million in tourist revenue because of the coup bid.

"December was disastrous," remarked the manager of a large beachfront hotel. "But just after Christmas things returned to normal and more so. As long as the mercenaries don't come back, we're in the clear."

These 92 sun-drenched islands about 1,000 miles off East Africa normally have an influx of visitors from wintery Europe over the Christmas and New Year holidays.

Expecting many cancellations this year, hoteliers accepted extra bookings. But the cancellations were fewer than expected, and embarrassed reception clerks at some big hotels had to direct guests to smaller establishments.

The Christmas tourists seemed almost oblivious to the attack by the mercenaries, who were routed at Pointe Larue Airport and fled to South Africa aboard a hijacked jetliner.

Except for a few unpatched bullet holes, the airport seems fully repaired. Few visitors even bother to look at the shot-up Royal Swazi Airways plane, which brought the mercenaries here and is still crippled on the tarmac.

"Shocks of this sort are forgotten relatively quickly as long as the country gets back to normal quickly," remarked Mike Lambert, a refrigeration contractor and leading member of the Chamber of Commerce.

The tourist industry and the Seychelles economy, however, still face some problems.

Rene said in his 1982 budget address Dec. 28 that the number of tourists visiting the Seychelles in 1981 was down 12 percent from 1980, when 58,015 people vacationed on the isles. The president added that this "affected almost every facet of economic activity."

In 1980, the number of visitors dropped 9 percent. That was the first year since independence from Britain in 1976 that the Seychelles had fewer holiday visitors.

The government attributed the decline mainly "to the effect of recession, particularly in Europe which accounts for approximately 64 percent of total arrivals."

The Seychelles have been trying to attract tourists from other parts of the world, particularly Japan, but so far have had little success. They have also tried to diversify the economy so it does not depend so heavily on tourism.

Rene has brought in Spanish and West German specialists to help develop the parastatal fishing industry. The United States is providing $1.5 million over the period 1981-83 to help develop hardy strains of fruits and vegetables that will grow in the islands' rocky, rain-leached soil and reduce the need for imported food.

The U.S. oil firm Amoco has explored for oil and natural gas in Seychelles' waters, and maintains an office here. But the full results are not yet in and no one seems to be expecting an oil boom.

The islands' main exports are copra, frozen fish, guano and cinnamon bark. But as money-makers none approaches tourism, which in 1980 brought in gross receipts of around $65 million, according to the Chamber of Commerce.

Though professing non-aligned socialism, Rene has been careful not to discourage tourism and foreign investment. There are no foreign-exchange controls and dividends and interest income are tax free. One local businessman described the corporate tax rate of 35 percent as "fairly reasonable."

"Tourism is our major industry and it will remain our major industry for quite a long time," Guy Morel, principal secretary in the Finance Ministry, said in an interview.

But he added that the islands' population of 65,000 would not be able to cope with more than 80,000 to 90,000 tourists per year — even when the total number of guest beds reached around 5,000 with completion of some hotel construction now under way.

If the number of tourists tops the target figure, Morel said, then the islands might have such tourist-borne problems as litter and drugs and tacky tent colonies on pristine beaches. He said he wondered whether these new headaches would be worth the extra revenue.

Donating Blood: Safe, Painless, Rewarding

I am 16 years old and a member of a school club. We go to hospitals and play music for the patients. We also go to old-age homes and help serve food and feed people who are too old to help themselves.

We are thinking of offering to give blood to a blood bank. Some of the girls think that this is dangerous. — Miss Y.R.M., Conn.
Dear Miss M.:

It is a delight to hear that a group of young people can be so unselfish and are making such a vital contribution to society. It has always been my personal observation that people who are motivated as you are, somehow never get involved in drugs or violence and aggression.

The art of giving has many compensations. They may not become apparent immediately, but many years from now you will be the recipient of gratification that can be traced to the kindness that now motivates you.

Donating blood is entirely safe, is painlessly done, and can be a most rewarding experience. Your contribution of a lifesaving pint of blood will bring you and your group limitless personal satisfaction.

Do you know that when you give a pint of blood to a blood bank, you do not deplete your own body's resources? It actually stimulates the healthy person to produce more blood and make up for the amount that was lost. Within a very short time, the blood count and blood concentration returns to normal.

Healthy persons can safely give a pint of blood without doing themselves any injustice to health.

I must offer my congratu-tions to all the girls in the club. I have seen such groups in action in hospitals. Long after you make your departure, the room and wards are filled with the afterglow of your kindness and generosity

Is there a difference between an infectious disease and a contagious disease? — Miss T.G., Ind.
Dear Miss G.:

There is a difference. An infectious disease is one that is produced by bacteria, by fungi, by viruses or by some kind of parasite. A contagious disease is one that is acquired by direct contact with an infected person. Some diseases, therefore, are both infectious and contagious.

The rule is that all contagious diseases are infectious, but not all infectious diseases are contagious.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... The greatest need of the elderly, who may have been prematurely retired from their jobs, is to have the feeling that they are still needed, loved, wanted and respected. The wisdom that is acquired during a lifetime does not cease with retirement.

BIG ATTRACTION
PEKING (AP) — China is sprucing up its ancient capital of Xian for a steadily increasing flow of tourists visiting the famed 2,000-year-old pottery army and other attractions, the People's Daily reports.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

MELCHIZEDEK -- MAN OF MYSTERY!

IF EVER THERE WAS A MYSTERY, A PUZZLE IN THE BIBLE, IT WOULD HAVE TO BE THE PRIEST-KING, MELCHIZEDEK, THE KING OF SALEM. IN THE ONE MEETING ABRAHAM HAD WITH MELCHIZEDEK, HE IMMEDIATELY RECOGNIZED HIM AS SUPERIOR TO HIMSELF IN THE EYES OF GOD! MELCHIZEDEK BROUGHT TO ABRAHAM BREAD AND WINE, AND BLESSED HIM. THROUGHOUT THE SCRIPTURES HE IS REFERRED TO AS THE HIGH PRIEST OF GOD, COMING NOT FROM A FATHER OR A MOTHER, HAVING NO END TO HIS LIFE AND NO BEGINNING. STUDENTS AND AUTHORITIES ON THE BIBLE HAVE SPECULATED ENDLESSLY ON THIS PRIEST-KING; SOME HAVE ARGUED THAT HE WAS A SURVIVOR OF THE FLOOD, THE PATRIARCH SHEM, OTHERS THAT HE WAS AN ANGEL OF GOD—ONE JEWISH TRADITION IS THAT HE WAS THE MESSIAH; SOME SAY THAT SALEM, WHERE HE RULED, LATER BECAME JERUSALEM—BUT ONE THING IS CERTAIN, WHOMEVER MELCHIZEDEK WAS, HE CERTAINLY AROUSED THE CURIOSITY OF SCHOLARS DOWN THROUGH THE AGES!

Publications Feel Postal Hike

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — An abrupt financial jolt has hit religious publications, threatening to stifle religious communications in this country.

During end-of-the-year budget juggling this week by Congress, pressured by the White House for more cuts, a postal subsidy for most non-profit publications was wiped out.

"It's really a terrible blow," says James A. Doyle, executive director of the Catholic Press Association and head of a task force of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish publishers seeking to combat the problem.

"It will mute and in some cases silence the voice of the religious press. Certainly that voice will be a lot weaker."

The subsidy previously was being phased out over a 16-year period ending in 1987, giving publications time to adjust rates and operations to the added costs. But the revised congressional action abolished it immediately.

Doyle estimated the postal costs increases, effective Jan. 10, at 50 percent to 200 percent, depending on weight, volume and other factors.

"It's the worst thing that ever happened to the religious press," says the Rev. Everett Parker, communications director of the United Church of Christ. "Many, many religious publications will simply go down the drain, knocked out of existence."

"We don't know what we are going to do," says Robert J. Hastings, editor of the Illinois Baptist, one of 34 state Baptist weekly newspapers. Without added funding, he says the paper will have to reduce its frequency.

In 1971, with the U.S. Post Office shifting to a cost-basis operation, mail rates of non-profit publications were to be gradually raised in yearly steps to the full designated level by 1987.

Congress last year initially passed a budget continuing the gradual process but President Reagan vetoed it, forcing more slashes in a stopgap funding bill.

Abruptly terminated was the shrinking subsidy for non-profit publications, except for a shaved-down, shortened extension for local "in county" mailings — but even those rates are up an estimated 50 percent. For wider circulation publications, the increases are estimated at up to 200 percent.

The extra load fell hard on national religious publications such as the Christian Century, America, Christianity Today, the National Catholic Reporter, the National Methodist Reporter, Our Sunday Visitor, U.S. Catholic, St. Anthony Messenger, the Lutheran, A. D. Presbyterian Survey, the Christian Herald, the Episcopalian, Commonweal and hundreds of regional publications.

Altogether, there are more than 1,000 religious publications in the country. They are a main means of religious information and opinion.

Religious representatives planned vigorous efforts to get the phased subsidy-elimination process restored when Congress reconvenes, but Doyle says "the general feeling is that once it's out, getting it put back in is a very thin possibility."

Origin Of Superstitions Are Traced By Rabbi; Writes Book

WHO'S SUPERSTITIOUS? — Rabbi Rudolph Brasch isn't afraid to open an umbrella indoors, and he crosses his fingers just to demonstrate another superstition. Brasch is an authority on the origin of superstitions.

HONOLULU (AP) — Everyone knows that if your path is crossed by a black cat on Friday the 13th, you're in for a bad time, so you cross your fingers, stroke a rabbit's foot or toss salt over your left shoulder.

But do you know why?

Rabbi Rudolph Brasch does. A world expert on the subject, as well as a teacher of theology, philosophy and history at Australian National University in Canberra, Brasch has spent the last 30 years researching the origins of superstitions.

"If we make people aware of the unknown, then they lose their fear and prejudice. It's a matter of education — that the more educated people get, the less superstitious they get," he said.

Brasch, the author of the million-copy "How Did It Begin?," which traces the origins of customs and superstitions, is spending a semester at the University of Hawaii's religion department teaching Judaism.

"From earliest times, men assumed the existence of powers which could influence their lives for better or worse," he says. "To placate the anger of these forces or to buy their good will became (for some people) almost an obsession, which has been responsible for many habits and customs that are meticulously observed even today."

Brasch cannot prove beyond a doubt that his conclusion about a particular superstition is correct. Liking himself to an archeologist or an-

If Every Church Helped Its Poor

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham says that if every church in America would help 10 poor families, the gaps caused by federal budget cuts could be filled.

He told a news conference at a convention of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship that the cuts will hurt some innocent people and added, "That's where we as the church ought to be there."

Group Meeting

Northeast Conference "A" Division will hold its annual group meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. on Jan. 18 at Lewis Chapel Church in Farmville.

All conference officials, members, conventions and union presidents are requested to be present and on time. This will be the paneling session for the 1982 conference year.

Bishop W.L. Phillips is the presiding bishop.

'God Ruled Out' Of U.S. Schools

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J. (AP) — The Rev. Carl McIntire, fiery church separatist leader, says the Arkansas court decision prohibiting teaching of "creationism" means God is "ruled out" of public education.

"No longer is the school to be free and open in the area of speech and communication of ideas and free study," he says, adding that "anything that might relate to God" is prohibited.

He says the decision shows how far the country has gone in stretching separation of church and state to mean "separation of God from state."

thropologist, he researches until he gets to know various cultures, compares what authorities — sometimes conflicting authorities — have said through the centuries, and then draws his own conclusions.

"There's always a reason for everything," he said, adding that the true reason for a particular superstition is not always the first one he comes across.

And the findings can sometimes be contradictory. Take the much-maligned black cat. Long before it got a bad reputation in Europe, the black cat was considered lucky in the times of the Egyptian pharaohs.

There, all cats, especially those that were totally black, "were looked upon with utmost reverence," Brasch said. "They were even deified."

Cats earned their elite status, he said, by killing off the rats and mice that caused famines by eating grain stored in silos.

It was only later, in Europe during the Middle Ages, that the black cat took on an aura of evil by being associated with witches.

It was a no-win situation for the cats, according to Brasch. Old women were often suspected of being witches, and since old women tended to keep cats as pets, the two became linked in the minds of the superstitious. Added to that was the notion that witches could transform themselves into black cats, and eventually all black cats came to be looked upon as witches.

The Friday the 13th superstition stems, Brasch said, from Judeo-Christian lore. He notes that Friday was the day Adam and Eve ate the forbidden fruit and were expelled from the Garden of Eden, the day Cain killed Abel, and the day Christ was crucified.

Before the crucifixion, there were 13 people at the Last Supper, but according to Brasch, fear of the number 13 dates back to Norse mythology when Loki, the spirit of evil, forced his way into a banquet attended by a dozen other gods.

As for crossing fingers, Brasch said people do just that — make the sign of the cross, or in this case St. Andrew's cross. Even before the time of Christ, the cross was known for its magical powers that were used to ward off evil spirits.

The throwing of salt, he said, can be traced back to earliest civilization when the substance, noted for its preservative properties, became a symbol of immortality, and thus sacred. To accidentally

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices opened higher today following release of government reports on industrial output and producer prices that were in line with expectations.

The government said producer prices rose a seasonally adjusted 0.3 percent in December, or at a 3.6 percent annual rate. It said industrial production declined a seasonally adjusted 2.1 percent in December.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 3.61 points to 845.89 after gaining 3.33 points on Thursday.

Winners were ahead of losers by 3 to 2 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Standard Oil of California followed down 1/4 point to 37 1/2 following speculation that the company could be a takeover target. Trading in the company's stock was brisk in European markets.

On Thursday, the Dow finished at 842.28.

Winners had a narrow lead over losers on the NYSE, whose composite index rose 0.34 to 66.97.

Big Board turnover totalled 42.94 million shares against 49.13 million during the previous session.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.21 points to 292.61.

Demo Convention May Be The Largest Ever

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Democrats gather to choose their 1984 presidential nominee, the convention appears certain to be the largest ever and to include a new category of "super delegates."

A party commission headed by Gov. James B. Hunt of North Carolina voted 47-6 Thursday night to endorse giving elected officials a unique status as uncommitted delegates at the 1984 Democratic National Convention.

Under a formula worked out in protracted negotiations between representatives of former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, considered the two early contenders for the 1984 presidential nomination, as many as 549 elected and party officials would be added to the delegate roster with uncommitted status.

The plan would permit the Democratic caucuses of the House and Senate to select up to two-thirds of their respective membership as convention delegates. Once an elected official agreed to accept appointment as a delegate, no one could be named as a replacement if the person later decided not to attend the convention.

In the case of regular delegates, they are replaced by alternates if they fail to attend.

With the additional uncommitted delegates, the next Democratic convention would have a total of nearly 3,900, compared to 3,331 at the 1980 convention.

The major question worked out in the negotiations between the Mondale and Kennedy factions was how many of the elected officials should be uncommitted. The Kennedy people wanted as few as possible. The Mondale forces wanted the uncommitteds to be about 30 percent of the total.

The figure finally agreed upon would be 14.2 percent.

No Accidents In

Martin County

Laments Delay

WILLIAMSTON — Police and Highway Patrol officials in Martin County reported all quiet on the streets and highways of the county this morning. At mid-morning, there were no accidents reported either in Williamston or on the county's highways.

Road conditions were hazardous throughout the county, with ice and snow on all roads, including city streets.

Schools in the county were closed. Most public offices and businesses were open, but with workers instructed to report in late, in most instances at 10 a.m.

MEXICO CITY (AP)

— Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, here for a three-day visit, says the delay in launching global talks on the needs of developing nations is cruelly on the part of "those who have more time to talk than others have to live." Trudeau expressed disappointment at a Foreign Ministry dinner here Thursday over the outcome of last August's North-South summit of rich and poor nations. Trudeau was co-chairman of that summit with Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Seahawks Top Bumbling Pirates, 58-49

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Murphy's Law states that whatever can go wrong, will. Last night, East Carolina University's Pirates gave an outstanding example of Murphy's Law, proving it to a tee. The Pirates did little right in bowing to the UNC-Wilmington Seahawks, 58-49, in Minges Coliseum.

Nothing the Pirates did seemed to work. Their shots bounced harmlessly off the front, back and sides of the rim — assuming they hit the rim at all. Their passes went astray, usually into the hands of a Seahawk. Their defense, the proudest part of their game, crumbled steadily away as the frustrations of the offense piled up.

And by the time it was all over, the Pirates had made the Seahawks, who didn't really play all that well themselves, look like world-beaters.

"This was the worst physical performance we've had since I've been here," a downcast Dave Odom said afterwards. "It wasn't that there wasn't effort. They tried. But it was just a comedy of errors."

The Pirates, who scored the first four points of the slow starting game, shot only 21.4 percent in the first half, scoring just 15 points. They came back with a 42.9 effort in the second half, but still ended up with a percentage to match the outside temperature, 32.1.

Wilmington, which got off to a terrible start too, made hay once the Pirates started to fall apart on defense, and ended up doubling the ECU percentage, hitting 62.5 percent.

Oddly enough, there were a few areas where the Pirates did do better than the Seahawks. They outrebounded their shorter foe, 34-26, although most of that came in the first half, when ECU held an 21-10 advantage on the boards. Wilmington held a 16-13 second half advantage, led by Leon Nickelson's eight. ECU was led by Charles Green's seven.

The Pirates also inched out the Seahawks at the foul line, hitting 65 percent as compared to 64.3 — not really that much of an advantage. Overall, however, the Seahawks hit on 18 of 28 as compared to ECU's 13 of 20.

And in turnovers, the Pirates had three less, 25 for UNCW and 22 for the Pirates.

"Everything that could possibly go wrong did," Odom said. "Once it started getting bad, it got worse. I can't think of a single player who was close to his ability. We were inept as a team. We were almost disorganized. We showed no semblance of a game plan, and we had a very good one. (Wednesday) we had a good practice as we've had. It was almost frightening how well we played. We passed the ball well, shot well, knew our assignments, everything."

Odom said he knew after 7:22 of the first half that the Pirates were in deep, deep trouble.

At that point, he noted, the score was only 4-0 in favor of the Pirates. "When you are playing a team that was playing at that point as poorly as Wilmington did, and you're only up 4-0, you're in serious trouble. You know that you're in for a long, long evening," Odom said.

"I've got to give Wilmington credit. I don't think they played all that well, but they played better than us. It was a gutsy performance."

East Carolina's defense shown in the early minutes of the game, as the Seahawks didn't score for well over five minutes of play.

But at the same time, the Pirates were unable to find the mark. Morris Hargrove hit on two of four free throw tries over the first four and a half minutes. ECU's first field goal came with 15:38 showing on a goal-tending call against the Seahawks.

And it wasn't that the Pirates weren't getting good shots — they were. They just wouldn't fall through.

And, Wilmington did pull off some good defensive plays, as the Seahawks were credited with six blocked shots during the evening. A number of others were slightly deflected.

At any rate, the Pirates saw the 'Hawks tie it up at 4-4, before pulling back out to as much as 8-5 lead with 9:51 left when Bill McNair hit a 15-footer.

But ex-Washington High School star Shawn Williams hit a shot jumper and Edward Timmons added a 15-foot jumper for an 11-10 lead for the Seahawks with 6:39 left.

Dennis Tobin scored on the second of two free throws and Frankie Dickens dropped in a layup for a 14-10 lead, and late in the half, a layup by Carlos Kelly ran the UNCW lead out to six, 20-14 before a Mike Fox free throw cut it to 20-15 at halftime.

The second half saw the nightmare continue for the Pirates as the Seahawks steadily pulled away. After trailing by nine, the Pirates trimmed it back to six at 28-22 on a free throw by Bruce Peartree with 13:29 left.

But Wilmington then ran off

12 straight points to put the game away. Tobin started it off with a jumper and Leon Nickelson added a jumper and a follow-shot. Kelly and Dickens both scored on layups and Williams closed out the string with a 10-footer for a 40-22 lead with 9:41 to go.

Led by Hargrove, the Pirates managed to cut the lead back to ten over the next few minutes, and eventually trimmed it to nine, but that was as close as they could come.

"Our penalty should be to have to watch the game films tonight," Odom said later. "Our defense was good at the start, but the offense was so bad that it eventually hurt the defense, too."

"The answer? I don't know. We just played poorly. It's a cross we're going to have to bear."

And there was another thing that hurt too. The Pirates, now 6-7, have nearly a week off before they play again next Wednesday against Campbell in Raleigh.

"That's going to be pure torture," Odom said of the long wait before the Pirates have a chance to redeem themselves.

Hargrove, who finished with 13 points, was the only Pirate to make it to double figures. Wilmington was led by Nickelson's 14, while Kelly had 12 and Dickens, 10.

Williams, the leading scorer for the Seahawks, scored just seven points.

Wilmington is now 8-6 on the year, and has won five of its last six games.

Southern Methodist's Ron Meyer Said Taking On Patriots Job

DALLAS (AP) — Ron Meyer, an ambitious coach who said he would leave Southern Methodist University only for a chance to direct a National Football League team, is going to the New England Patriots, according to a source close to the school's athletic department.

Meyer, 41, scheduled a meeting today to tell his players he will replace fired Patriots Coach Ron Erhardt, the source said.

"Yes, I have been offered the job with the New England Patriots," Meyer told The Dallas Morning News Thursday. "The decision is up to me. I'll make a decision within 24 hours."

SMU Athletic Director Bob Hitch, who said he had not spoken with Meyer, said, "any news regarding this situation will be coming from New England."

Meyer met with Patriots officials in New York Thursday, the source said.

"As of now, we do not have a press conference scheduled," said Tom Hoffman, director of media relations for the Patriots. "We can neither confirm or deny anything to do with the coaching situation ...until we have the new coach signed and at that time we will make the formal announcement."

"We have said all along that we would like to name a new coach, hopefully prior to the Super Bowl."

The Patriots previously were turned down by Southern California Coach John Robinson and Penn State Coach Joe Paterno as replacements for Erhardt, who this season led the team to its worst record ever, 2-14.

Members of the SMU coaching staff told the Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel Star that Meyer met in New York with Patriots President Billy Sullivan, his son Chuck, the Pats' executive vice president; and General Manager Bucko Kilroy. Meyer was supposed to return to Texas immediately after the interview but made such an impression in the session that he was given the job, the newspaper said.

Ross Named Terp Coach

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Bobby Ross had a latent longing to return to college coaching, and a desire to be his own boss.

So, when he learned that the University of Maryland was looking for a new head football coach, the assistant coach of the Kansas City Chiefs moved swiftly.

"I was at an airport, picking up my son, when I apparently read about Jerry Claiborne leaving," Ross said Thursday. "Dick (Athletic Director Dick Dull) doesn't know this, but I called from the airport."

Ross was interviewed by Dull on Dec. 30, and Thursday he was officially introduced as the replacement for Claiborne, who resigned to become head coach at his alma mater, the University of Kentucky.

"I wanted the job very badly," said Ross, an assistant coach at Maryland in 1972, Claiborne's first with the Terps.

"I was happy at Kansas City," said Ross, who spent four seasons with the National Football League club. "But any person in football wants to be a head coach and Maryland is one of the top jobs in the country, professional or college."

"One of the things I enjoy about college coaching," said Ross, who was head coach at the Citadel for five seasons "is the total relationship you have with the players, and the contributions you may be able to make with that youngster. You don't really have a lot of that in the pro ranks."

The Terps posted a 4-6-1 record in 1981, their only losing season under Claiborne, after having played in seven postseason bowl games in the previous eight years.

Ross said whereas Maryland's football program was at a low ebb when Claiborne arrived in 1972, "it is not down now. It's up, and we want to keep it that way."

Asked where he'd like the program to be in three to five years, Ross said: "No. 1 in the country. Maryland has that potential. Clemson is No. 1 this year, so there's no reason Maryland can't be."

Clemson, a Maryland rival in the Atlantic Coast Conference, went unbeaten during the past season and won the mythical national championship.

Clemson and North Carolina, another ACC team ranked in the Top Ten, are on the 1982 schedule which opens with a game against perennial power Penn State.

When Dull began searching for a coach, he said he wanted a man who would enhance Maryland's image as an educational institution, make football a positive and meaningful experience for the players, win games and fill the stands by providing excitement and entertainment.

"I personally interviewed 24 coaches and reviewed another 50 applications," Dull said. "Bobby Ross best satisfied these criteria."

Minnesota Tops Iowa In Big Ten Battle

By The Associated Press

A change in strategy might lead the way to the change in the rankings that the Minnesota Gophers feel is warranted.

Minnesota, 10-2, and rated 11th, beat No. 5 Iowa 61-56 Thursday night in a battle of Big Ten powers. The Hawkeyes, also 10-2, led by two points at halftime, but Minnesota went to a man-to-man defense rather than a zone and that turned the game around.

Now, Gophers Coach Jim Dutcher wants to see the rankings turned around.

"It was a game we wanted and a game we needed," said Dutcher. "They are ranked fifth and that's where we feel we should be ranked."

"I was really pleased with way we played the man-to-man. I thought we played a great defensive second half. I thought our man-to-man really shut them off."

Randy Breuer, the Gophers' 7-foot-3 center who led the way with 22 points, agreed with his coach after Minnesota's first home victory over Iowa in four years.

"The zone wasn't doing it for us," said Breuer. "We had to go to the man-to-man and it picked up the tempo and they couldn't keep up."

"I felt the momentum shift when we went to the man-to-man," added Minnesota's Trent Tucker. "I said to myself we're going to roll now."

Both teams now stand 2-1 in the Big Ten.

"They played a very strong defense in the second half, especially in the man-to-man," said Hawkeyes Coach Lute Olson. "We weren't surprised they came out in it but we couldn't handle it."

"Our shot selection wasn't the greatest and Randy was intimidating inside," added Iowa's Kevin Boyle, who had 10 points, four fewer than teammate Kenny Arnold.

In the decisive second half, Iowa shot only 37 percent, while Minnesota hit on 58 percent of its shots.

In other contests involving ranked teams, it was No. 3 Virginia over Wagner 99-67, No. 16 Wichita State beating Creighton 69-56, and 18th-ranked Tulsa topping Drake 71-54.

Top Ten

A 21-2 burst in the first half propelled Virginia past outmanned Wagner. Craig Robinson, playing without one of his contact lenses, had a career-high 24 points for the Cavaliers and All-American center Ralph Sampson chipped in with 12.

"Robinson was excellent tonight, especially on his second and third efforts around the basket," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "He's had stretches of shooting like that from the outside, but that's not where he is most important to us. He does his work for us inside."

Second Ten

Wichita State, playing its first game since being placed on a three-year NCAA probation, was tied 30-30 with Creighton at the half. But guards Tony Martin and Aubrey Sherrod paced the Shockers in a 16-5 burst in the first six minutes of the second half.

Cliff Livingston led the Shockers with 17 points.

Freshman Steve Harris came off the bench to hit six of eight field goal tries and a pair of free throws, his 14 points keying the Tulsa triumph, its 25th straight at home.

Elsewhere, defending NCAA champion Indiana snapped a four-game losing streak with an 81-51 romp over Michigan, the eighth loss in a row for the Wolverines. Indiana, which never trailed and held a 17-point halftime edge, was led by Ted Kitchel's 18 points.

"We did some things better and individually we played better," said Hoosier Coach Bobby Knight. "We saw some improvement but marked improvements is too strong a word."

Purdue scored its final 10 points from the free throw line in holding off Michigan State 53-47 as Keith Edmonson scored 21 points.

"We won on defense," said Purdue Coach Gene Keady. "We made our free throws, got a good start in the first half."

In other games, it was Duquesne 72, Pittsburgh 62; Fordham 48, St. Peter's 39; Bradley 68, New Mexico State 62; Florida State 75, St. Louis 74; Illinois State 81, Indiana State 63; Northwestern 61, Wisconsin 55; Ohio State 51, Illinois 50 in overtime; Washington State 57, California 55 in overtime; Nevada-Lasalso grabbed 15 rebounds. "It seems like I can get into the flow of the game by watching it first. And then when I come in, I'm much better prepared."

"Detroit had (6-7) Terry Tyler guarding me in the fourth quarter. Once I got position on him I figured I could score."

"We've been running a unique offense — we call it a delayed break," Washington Coach Gene Shue said. "And the players seem to be working the system and it's going well. Ruland did a fantastic job down low every time he got the ball."

The 240-pound Ruland has made Detroit Coach Scotty Robertson a believer.

"Ruland has been a factor in every game with the Bullets," Robertson said. "We made it a point to discuss him in our pregame talks. But discussing it and knowing it, then going out and doing it doesn't always work."

"That's why our No. 1 priority is to get a big man in the draft. We tried every combination we had and we couldn't stop him."

Detroit took a 34-25 lead in the first quarter as John Long hit 12 of his 32 points. But the Bullets took a 64-55 halftime lead when Greg Ballard poured in 12 of his 24 points in the second period.

Detroit closed to within three points, 94-91, with 8:40 remaining in the game. Ruland then took over, scoring three quick baskets and a free throw to help Washington to its fourth road victory in five starts.

For Washington, Kevin Grevey scored 22 points and Spencer Haywood 17, while Detroit's Kelly Tripucka led all scorers with 33 points and Isiah Thomas chipped in with 18.

Suns 90, Knicks 89

Walter Davis was fouled by Campy Russell at midcourt after a loose-ball scramble and he hit two free throws with four seconds remaining to give Phoenix its victory over New York.

The Knicks had scored eight consecutive points midway through the fourth period to take an 82-77 lead, but the Suns battled back to go ahead 88-87 on Truck Robinson's three-point play. Michael Ray Richardson gave New York a short-lived 89-88 lead with two free throws with 35 seconds left.

Robinson scored 27 points to lead all scorers.

Blazers 111, Rockets 100

Mychal Thompson, Jim Paxson and Kelvin Ransey each scored 22 points to lead Portland over Houston.

An 8-2 spurt by the Rockets had cut a 10-point Trail Blazers' lead to 104-100 with 3:36 left, but they scored the final seven points to the game to clinch the victory.

Moses Malone had 29 points and 20 rebounds for Houston.

Nets 130, Bulls 104

Darwin Cook scored 29 points and Mike O'Koren added 23 as New Jersey easily beat Chicago.

Buck Williams scored 11 points as the Nets took a 20-12 lead in the first quarter and coasted from there. They led by as many as 32 points, at 95-63, in the third quarter.

Reggie Theus scored 26 point for the Bulls, who hit only four of their first 19 shots in the first half.

Vegas 68, Colorado State 54; and San Diego State 78, New Washington 75, Stanford 70, Mexico 62.

Robinson Keys Virginia Victory

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va (AP) — Craig Robinson had not been considered Virginia's game-breaker. That role had been reserved for 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson.

Thursday night, however, Robinson scored a career-high 24 points, and he got hot in a short stretch in the first half, during which third-ranked Virginia was able to shake an undermanned team from Wagner and notch a 99-67 victory over the Seahawks.

Robinson played without one of his contact lenses, which was damaged Thursday morning. He made the best one-eyed shooter at Virginia.

"Robinson was excellent tonight, especially on his second and third efforts around the basket," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "He's had stretches of shooting like that from the outside, but that's not where he is most important to us. He does his work for us inside."

Besides his points, Robinson had six rebounds in only 18 minutes of play, as Holland used the entire bench during the rout.

"We tried to collapse on Sampson to some extent, but we don't have anyone who can handle him," said Wagner Coach P.J. Carlesimo. "In fact, Robinson is bigger than our people. He had a fine game tonight, and he's playing much better than when we saw him at our place last year."

Virginia defeated Wagner 76-69 last February at Madison Square Garden, but that Wagner team has lost four starters from last season.

"Virginia is a great team and better than last year in some ways," Carlesimo said. "They are quicker and they can force the temp with their defense."

Holland said he was disappointed that it took nearly 10 minutes for his Cavaliers to begin the dismantling process. Wagner led 20-17 with 12 minutes gone.

"I was disappointed with our defense early because we weren't pushing them out when they slowed it down and ran their set offense," Holland said, adding that guards Ricky Stokes and Othell Wilson "really picked us up defensively."

Robinson, whose previous career high was 16 points, had 14 of his points in the first half. He scored eight in a row, including a pair of three-point plays, to start Virginia on a 21-2 outburst that used up 4:43 of the first half and gave the Cavaliers a 38-22 lead with 3:07 to go in the half.

The Cavaliers, 14-1, built the lead to as many as 35 points on a basket by Dan Merrifield that capped a seven-point run and gave Virginia an 89-54 lead with 6:15 remaining.

Every man on the Virginia roster saw playing time, and all but Doug Newburg scored points. Newburg missed a jumper at the buzzer that would have put Virginia over the 100-point mark for the third time this season, but Cavalier fans, some of whom stayed home because of the heavy snowfall here, still enjoyed one of Virginia's most lopsided wins of the season.

Ralph Sampson and Tim Mullen each had 12 points for the Cavaliers, and Jim Miller added 11.

Bob Mahala topped Wagner, 3-9, with 19 points, and Mike Nelson had 16. The only other Seahawk in double figures was Craig McCollum, who had 12, all in the second half.

The Way It Was

John McEnroe, left, keeps Jimmy Connors scrambling as Connors goes down, 6-2, 7-5, Thursday night in the second round of the Volvo Masters Tennis championships in New York. (AP Laserphoto)

McEnroe Changes Style; Snaps Connors' String

NEW YORK (AP) — John McEnroe doesn't lose three consecutive matches to many players, and Jimmy Connors, whose two-match winning streak against the 22-year-old New Yorker has been snapped, is well aware of that.

"He may have to do it again," Connors said after McEnroe beat him Thursday night to earn a berth Saturday in the semifinals of $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis tournament.

"I'm not dead yet, I've just been shot," said Connors.

McEnroe changed his serve-and-volley style to defeat Connors 6-2, 7-5, in the round-robin event at Madison Square Garden.

The victory gave McEnroe, seeded second in the eight-man tournament, a 2-0 record and the semifinal berth. Also moving into the semifinals was top-seeded Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, who posted his second straight victory by downing Guillermo Vilas of Argentina 6-4, 6-1.

The other two semifinalists, to be determined today, will be either Connors or Eliot Teltscher and the winner of the Vilas-Vilas Gerulaitis match.

"I think I played pretty smart tonight, except for the first couple of games and the stretch where I had him 4-1 and let him back in," McEnroe said of his easy victory over Connors. "It was good to go out there and dominate."

McEnroe began today's play by taking on Teltscher, followed by Lendl vs. Jose Luis Clerc of Argentina. Tonight, Connors will play Roscoe Tanner and Vilas meets Gerulaitis.

Under the format in this year-ending tourney, the top two players in each of the two four-man groups advance to the semifinals. McEnroe won the red group. If Connors wins tonight, he will finish second and advance to the semifinals, where he will face Lendl.

If Connors loses and Teltscher beats McEnroe, Teltscher will be Lendl's opponent Saturday. If both Connors and Teltscher lose, Connors will finish second because he beat Teltscher Wednesday.

Lendl is the winner of the second group, while the Vilas-Gerulaitis winner will finish second and assure himself of a semifinal spot against McEnroe.

In other matches Thursday, Gerulaitis handed Clerc his second straight loss, 7-6, 6-1, and Teltscher stopped Tanner 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

McEnroe, the reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion, admitted afterward that his two recent losses to Connors were on his mind.

"I tried to play every point, but the last couple of times we've played I've been careless and rushed it," the world's top-ranked player said. "In the other matches, I came in quickly and he passed me, and then he got pumped up."

"I stayed back tonight and waited."

Despite being from New York, McEnroe played in front of a hostile crowd — something to which he had grown accustomed.

"I hope the crowds respect me for my tennis," he said, resigned to his fate here.

Disdaining his normal serve-and-volley game, partially because of the slow court and because of a pulled muscle in his left leg that hampers his quick movement at the net, McEnroe displayed an assortment of top-spins, slices, speed changes and chips that kept Connors running all over the court.

"I started off well, but didn't stay in it like I should have," Connors said. "He hit the ball quite well tonight, actually. I didn't play that badly."

Lendl was down 2-4 in the opening set when he reeled off five straight games to win the first set and take a 1-0 lead in the second. The Czech didn't lose a point on his serve in the final set, breaking Vilas in the fourth and sixth games.

"He is a player who can play all ways," Vilas said of his opponent. "He has strong net play, which lately has been causing me problems."

Lendl now has won 33 consecutive matches and his last six tournaments — a streak he said "certainly gives you more confidence."

The finals will be held at 3 p.m., EST, Sunday, with the winner collecting $100,000, while the runner-up gets $50,000. Both the singles semifinals and finals are to be televised nationally by CBS.

The doubles semifinals are scheduled Saturday night, with the finals following the singles on Sunday.

Walsh: Both To Be Back

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals will make their first Super Bowl appearance Jan. 24, but San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh figures it won't be their last.

Walsh, who said earlier this season that the Bengals would be playing in Super Bowl XVI, said the game at the Pontiac, Mich., Silverdome could be just the start for the National Football League's two most surprising teams of 1981.

"This isn't the only time you'll see Cincinnati or San Francisco in the Super Bowl," Walsh said in a telephone interview Thursday. "I've got the strong feeling that the Cincinnati Bengals, as well as San Francisco, have teams at this point that will be teams to be reckoned with. There is absolutely no fluke to this. These are the best teams."

Only the most extreme optimist could have envisioned a Cincinnati vs. San Francisco Super Bowl at the start of the season. Both teams were coming off 6-10 seasons that marked their third consecutive losing years.

"I thought we could make the playoffs, but I never dreamed we would go this far," said Bengal cornerback Louis Breeden.

"If I had known then (at the start of the season) that we could go all the way, I wouldn't have worried so much," said Bengal Coach Forrest Gregg. "I felt that if we kept improving and if we could stay healthy, that we would have a chance."

Both clubs took advantage of their chances, with the Bengals compiling a 12-4 regular-season mark and the 49ers a 13-3 record.

Walsh, who was an assistant coach in Cincinnati for eight years, said he was less surprised by the Bengals' ascendancy to prominence than by the rise of the 49ers. Even before the Bengals met the 49ers Dec. 6 at Riverfront Stadium, Walsh had installed Cincinnati as his favorite to win the American Football Conference championship.

"We felt all along that the Bengals were the strongest club in the AFC and playing that way. It wasn't like they were potentially the strongest," Walsh said. "They were simply outplaying everyone."

"We've done a very similar thing in our conference. I think this is one year where everyone would have to concede that the two best teams in the National Football League are playing each other (in the Super Bowl). There hasn't been anybody who's backed into the game somehow."

This Super Bowl won't have the attraction of traditional winners such as the Dallas Cowboys or Pittsburgh Steelers. But Walsh doesn't think that the game will be a "hard sell."

"They're going to have to finally accept the fact that these are the teams of prominence and some of the others are going on reputation," Walsh said.

"We beat Dallas twice this year and Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh twice. What more can you ask? Whether you like it or not, we're here to stay, both clubs."

Duke Gets Prep Star

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University has received a commitment from 6-8 high school forward Jay Bilas to play basketball for the Blue Devils, officials announced Thursday.

The Rolling Hills, Calif., native is averaging 23.7 points and 13.5 rebounds for Rolling Hills High School.

"Jay is a quality young man both on and off the basketball court," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski. "He combines great academics with great athletics. He has the potential to be a great player in the Atlantic Coast Conference."

Bilas said he chose Duke because it is a "great academic school" whose basketball program is "on the upswing."

Duke, 4-8 and 0-3 in the ACC, has previously received commitments from 6-9 Bill Jackman of Grant, Neb., and 6-6 Weldon Williams of Chicago.

Japanese Rookie Holds Hope Lead, But Tom Kite Threatens

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — An obscure Japanese rookie had the lead but golf's biggest money-winner last year, Tom Kite, was in a threatening position after two rounds of the five-day Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

And Kite, who last season had one of the most consistent records in the game, had but one thought in mind — winning more often.

"I want to improve this season," Kite said. "But even if I don't, if I play just like I did last year, I ought to just fall into more victories than I had."

"That's my goal, one of my goals, this year. Win and win often."

Kite, who topped the 1981 money-winning list and took the Vardon Trophy for the low stroke average on the tour, was in the top 10 finishers in 21 of 25 starts and finished the season with a string of 18 consecutive events in which he placed eighth or better.

But he won only one individual title.

He's in position again.

A 6-under-par 66 Thursday at tough Eldorado gave Kite a 134 total, 10 under par, and lifted him to within two strokes of the surprise leader, long-hitting Jet Ozaki.

Ozaki, younger brother of former Japanese star Jumbo Ozaki, used his vast distance off the tee to birdie all of the par-5 holes on the way to a 68 at Bermuda Dunes. That gave him sole control of the 36-hole lead at 132.

Journeyman Rex Caldwell, who shared the first-round lead with Ozaki, shot a 69, also at Bermuda Dunes, and was one stroke back at 133.

Tied with Kite at 134 were former PGA champ Lanny Wadkins, Skeeter Heath and Cal Peete. Peete had a 65 at La Quinta, Wadkins 69 at Eldorado and Heath 67 at Indian Wells.

The format for this, the only 90-hole event on the tour, calls for the 128 pros to play one round on each of four desert courses, each day with a different, three-man amateur team. After four rounds the amateurs drop out and the field is cut to the low 70 scorers for the pro-only windup Sunday at Indian Wells.

Most of the celebrity amateurs, including former President Gerald Ford and the host comedian, along with the top-name pros played Wednesday at Eldorado. But Lee Trevino was among the missing. He suffered the recurrence of chronic back trouble after an opening round of 69 and told officials he would not be able to compete.

Masters champ Tom Watson had a 72 and was at 141. Defending titleholder Bruce Lietzke shot 68-141. U.S. Open champ David Graham was 71-138. And Arnold Palmer, the current national seniors champion and a five-time winner here, had a 72-147 while playing with President Ford. All were at Eldorado.

PGA king Larry Nelson was 69-144 at Bermuda Dunes.

Ozaki, 28, who gained his playing rights as a member of the American tour after completing the qualifying school last year, is one of the longer hitters on the circuit. He said he averages about 280 yards off the tee and hits his 5-iron 180-190 yards.

He admitted, through an interpreter, to feeling the pressure of the lead in the early part of the round, then settled down and used his distance to advantage. He reached three of the four par-5 holes in two, two-putted for birdie on all of them, and chipped to 10-feet for birdie on the other long hole.

Oops!
Japan's Jet Ozaki is disturbed by the path of his par putt on the third hole of the Bermuda Dunes golf course during Thursday's second round of the Bob Hope Desert Classic. Although Ozaki had to take a bogey on the par four hole, he finished the round with a 68 and holds aht lead at 12 under par. (AP Laserphoto)

Papa Bear To Be More Active

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Bears owner George Halas acknowledges that he has decided to strip General Manager Jim Finks of power and that he plans to take a more-active role in running the team.

Halas' remarks came after a meeting Thursday with Finks in which the two discussed the future of the National Football League club.

Following the meeting, the Bears' office issued a three-paragraph statement that said Halas and Finks had agreed on a "course of action to improve the fortunes of the club."

The statement said the two "had a mutual meeting of minds to determine the future of the Chicago Bears," adding that "the course of action to improve the fortunes of the club was mutually resolved and agreed upon."

But Finks, who reportedly has been at odds with Halas since the Bears owner fired former head coach Neill Armstrong, emerged from the meeting and said he had "no idea" what Halas planned for him in the future.

Later, Halas was asked to explain the news release and said Finks' authority as general manager would be decreased and that, in effect, he personally was taking on greater responsibility for the club.

"It means some of Finks' authority was taken away," Halas said. "Jim will negotiate player contracts, but they will be submitted to me. He will have input in the draft, but I will hire the coaches."

Halas also made it clear that he intends to have the final word on all decisions affecting the Bears.

"Nothing will be done without my authority," Halas said.

In the statement, Finks said: "My goal has not changed. I want to see the Chicago Bears world's champions."

"I signed a contract in 1974 in which I agreed to perform all executive and administrative duties which the club's president or board of directors may assign to me," Finks said, "and I intend to honor my contract. I so informed Mr. Halas of this today."

Halas also acknowledged that he had spoken with former Bear assistant George Allen about the possibility of Allen coaching the Bears but said former Bear tight end Mike Ditka remains the top candidate for the job.

Allen, 59, also confirmed that he had spoken with Halas but said no future appointments had been arranged.

The team has been without a head coach since Halas fired Armstrong late last month.

Schembechler Considers Post As AD, Coach With Texas A & M

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M officials say a decision is imminent by Michigan football Coach Bo Schembechler on whether he will accept a 10-year, $2.25-million offer to become the new A&M athletic director.

The Bryan-College Station Eagle Thursday quoted A&M Board of Regents Chairman H.R. "Bum" Bright as saying that Schembechler had been offered the job to replace Marvin Tate, who resigned in September.

"That's the job that's offered right now and he is considering it," said Bright. "I can only say that Texas A&M would be pleased and honored to have a man the caliber of Bo Schembechler come to A&M."

Schembechler could not be reached for comment Thursday night and reportedly was huddled with Michigan Athletic Director Don Canham and university President Harold T. Shapiro.

Canham told the Dallas Times Herald there would be a statement by Schembechler today.

"But we are going to do what we can to keep him," he said in a separate interview with the Detroit News.

The Houston Post, in a copyright story, reported an "unimpeachable source" said Schembechler also has been offered the head coach's position. And Dave Diles, a sportscaster for WXYZ-TV in Detroit, reported sources at Michigan said Schembechler was considering an offer to become both head coach and athletic director.

The Post said current Head Coach Tom Wilson, whose contract was extended last month for another season, will be fired and his contract paid off. Wilson was on a recruiting trip and could not be reached for comment.

But interim A&M Athletic Director Wally Groff denied Schembechler had been offered the coaching job.

"We've already got a coach, and he's contracted for one more year," Groff said. "The only opening we have right now is for the A-D position."

The Post said sources told the newspaper Schembechler tentatively agreed to a contract after the Bluebonnet Bowl, but has delayed making a final decision at least twice.

The newspaper said Bright got help in his negotiations from Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant, Georgia Coach Vince Dooley and former Oklahoma Coach Bud Wilkinson.

A&M regents and alumni have been frustrated by a football program that has produced one Cotton Bowl team in the past 40 years and only three Southwest Conference champions, the latest a tri-champion in 1975 that did not go to the Cotton Bowl.

Schembechler, 52, the dean of Big 10 coaches, has compiled a 123-24-3 record in 13 seasons at Michigan. He was named college Coach of the Year in 1969 and Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1972 and 1980.

His worst season at Michigan was 8-4 in 1979. Eight of his Michigan teams won 10 or more games in a season and nine were Big 10 champions.

Schembechler's Michigan teams have finished in the Top Ten of The Associated Press final poll every year except 1979 and 1981. The Wolverines were 12th in last season's last poll.

Schembechler has a 2-7 post-season bowl record, with both victories ironically coming in 1981. The first was the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl victory over Washington following the 1980 season, with the other being the Dec. 31 Bluebonnet Bowl beating of UCLA, 33-14.

He began his head coaching career at Miami of Ohio in 1963, where he compiled a 40-17-3 record and won two co-championships in the Mid-America Conference.

N.Y. Children Are Taught To Protect Themselves

SAFETY FAST — Barar Sommer, 7, launches a kick against a bag held by instructor Flora Colao in a novel program that teaches children to protect themselves. (AP Laserphoto)

By BETSY KENEDY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — In a large, bright room in Greenwich Village, boys and girls romp through what appears to be a typical gym class — tumbling, lifting weights, attacking a punching bag and sparring with their teacher.

But these New York City children, aged 5 to 13, are doing more than exercise; they are participating in a novel, perhaps unique, program that teaches them "creative strategies" to protect themselves from harm.

For some, the class comes too late to be preventive.

Five of the 10 attending a recent class have either been the victims or close friends of victims of a sexual assault.

All are the children either of parents driven to find rehabilitative help after their child was physically abused or of parents who realize the value of self-defense guidance before it's too late.

The answer for them has been Children's Creative Safety Program, one of several programs offered by the Safety and Fitness Exchange (SAFE), a shoestring operation started two years ago by three women trained in martial arts, education and psychology. Two are survivors of sexual assault.

"I had an incident when I was a kid," says Tamar Hosansky, 26, after directing the class at A Safe Space, the group's educational center. "That's why I'm most interested in working with kids." She holds a black belt in karate.

The program's concept, according to the co-founders, is to teach not only physical means of self-defense, but also to discuss assault in a non-alarmist way, teaching children assertiveness, what to watch out for and how to handle it.

"Most parents don't want to talk about this with their child because they don't want them not to trust and they really don't want to tell them what can happen" for fear they will become paranoid, according to Pam McDonnell, a SAFE co-founder.

"But while you're waiting to get ready to tell them, the attacker has no compunctions," she said. Also, children on their own develop fears from the media and their friends that are worse than reality.

The group attempts to dispel such common misconceptions as danger in the form of a stranger with candy, since statistics show most children are assaulted, harassed or molested by someone they know.

A SAFE booklet on teaching personal safety to children includes tips: children have the right to privacy; bad things can happen to good people; children have the right to say no, question authority, not answer questions, scream, yell, make a scene, bite, hit and run away.

Each week, the children come to A Safe Space for an hour of exercise and discussion led by Ms. Hosansky and Flora Colao, a rape counselor who used to head the Rape Crisis Center at St. Vincent's Hospital.

There is tumbling and boxing — with shouting at the top-of-the-lungs encouraged — geared to sharpen response instincts.

And there is the "what if" game, in which answers to such scenarios as "what if the doorman wants you to do something you're uncomfortable with," are worked out by the children and Ms. Colao.

"Once we teach children the facts about dangerous situations, we must teach them that in order to prevent danger, they must trust themselves and their instincts," the SAFE booklet says.

Katherine Brady, author of "Fathers Days," a true story about incest, who travels, lectures and works with various social agencies dealing with adult rape and incest victims, says SAFE is "the only place I know of in the country that focuses on children."

She is also the mother of Andrea, 9, and Stephanie, 11, who go to the Saturday classes that cost $5 a week, but which are free to young victims of assault.

In addition to the Safe Space classes, SAFE also conducts seminars and workshops at private schools, businesses and community organizations. It has just received grants to work with the Girls Clubs of New York and the Girl Scouts.

SAFE's affiliation with the New York Task Force on Rape has also given it the beginning of a relationship with the Board of Education.

One public school on Manhattan's Upper West

Side has commissioned the group for a 10-week after school program in self-defense "because seven of their students had been assaulted," Ms. Hosansky said.

"We hope in the future that our programs become more preventive," she added.

So does a quiet woman watching her 9-year-old daughter and 7-year-old son in the class.

The daughter was raped two months ago and the son developed "a guilt trip" because he was not there to stop it, said the woman who herself was raped at the age of 12.

"I think it's helping the kids learn ways to avoid it," as well as allowing her pale, shy, diminutive daughter to vent the resulting "anger at the world" which caused her to be in weekly fights at school, she said.

"Had she known to stand there and scream, possibly he (the rapist) would have been scared off and this wouldn't have happened."

Life As It's Lived

Altruism Loses Out To Case Of Four-Wallitis

Children and teachers dread the end of the holiday. The average mother, on the other hand, rejoices. Sometime between four and seven days before school reopens, she begins her countdown with more enthusiasm and with at least as much accuracy as a NASA engineer.

By the day before the big event, she is not only counting the minutes and seconds; she is counting and recounting her aspirin supply to make sure it will last until 8:30 the next morning.

At 9 on the last day of the Christmas holidays, I raised a glass of wine to myself and drank to my endurance. A bit prematurely, I realize, but what could possibly, at that late date, have stood between me and freedom? Meg was over the stomach virus with which she suffered the entire week before Christmas. Zachary and I were almost over our viruses. Phillip, the only healthy person in the bunch, was putting Meg to bed in preparation for the busy week ahead.

Or so I thought. As I drained my glass with relish, I heard Phillip say, "You're going to need a bottle of that."

Then he marched Meg in front of me. "Show Mommy your stomach."

"Yes, Mommy, see all these little mosquito bites."

She was covered with chickenpox. I guess I shouldn't have been bitter. After all, we were spared throughout two family weddings and Christmas. But I was bitter. The mere sight of her precipitated an attack of cabin fever.

The four walls began closing in on me. I considered doing myself in with the macramé plant hanger. I tried to keep Zachary away from her in the vain hope that he might escape the dread disease. He responded by letting himself into her bathroom and by sucking the excess toothpaste off her freshly used toothbrush.

Phillip had to work late all that week. I called the doctor about Meg's itching, but she's allergic to the only medicine he wanted to prescribe. Worse than that, Meg didn't feel bad enough. Children who are sick should be confined to bed. She had more energy than Sammy Davis Jr. I had about as much as a 17-year-old bassett hound.

We ran out of food, too. We had dry Cheerios and Coke for breakfast Wednesday morning, and Phillip couldn't come home early even for one day so that I could go to the grocery store.

"Then you'll have to go on your way home from work," I said glumly, knowing full well that letting Phillip go in a supermarket was as ill-advised as letting a fox loose in a chicken coop.

"Why can't you go?" he asked. "Meg's feeling all right."

"That's true, but I'm trying to keep the contagion in the family. Just pick up some bread, milk and eggs, and stop by a restaurant for a take-out meal."

All day I secretly longed to sample the forbidden goodies he invariably brought home from any trip to the supermarket. I rushed for the grocery bag as soon as he walked in the door. In it was bread, milk, eggs and $8 worth of frozen dinners. "I wanted to make sure I didn't get anything to aggravate your virus," he explained.

No one ate that night except Phillip and the cats.

"Do you want me to pick up anything at the store today?" he asked the next morning.

"Are you kidding?" And risk starvation as well as nervous hysteria? "No thanks, I'm going myself."

"But what about Meg? She's still contagious."

That was true, but altruism can only be carried so far.

Anti-Semitism Acts Growing

NEW YORK (AP) — Anti-Semitic incidents in the United States more than doubled last year, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith reports, although several states toughened laws against religious or racial vandalism.

The report listed 974 cases of anti-Jewish vandalism in 31 states and the District of Columbia in 1981, compared with 377 such episodes in 1980. In addition, bodily assaults and mail or telephone threats against Jews more than tripled to 350 cases, up from 112.

New laws imposing stiffer penalties on religious or racial vandals were enacted in 1981 by eight states, including the three states with the most such "bias crimes" — New York, California and New Jersey.

Some Phobics Can Be Taught To Cope With Fears

By EILEEN PUTMAN
Associated Press Writer
WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Doug felt so trapped when he got into an elevator that he began ripping at his clothes. Judy's hands shook when she served food. Marleen could not drive across a bridge or shop in a crowded store.

They are phobics — people whose lives are hampered by terrifying fears generated in their own minds.

Now Doug, Judy and Marleen are learning to change by doing the very things they fear most. It begins at a phobia clinic like the one at the White Plains Hospital Medical Center.

"I had to deliver some papers at school. I got up there and handed them to the woman and I got red. My tongue was tied. I got these weird physical feelings," Marleen said at a recent session where participants spoke to a reporter with the understanding that their real names not be used.

Her fellow phobics nodded as the woman continued: "You never know when it's going to happen."

Marleen has a form of agoraphobia, commonly called "housewife's disease," but authorities say it affects men and women alike. It encompasses many fears — traveling away from home, being in crowded places, being alone in an elevator, riding a train or subway.

It can prevent phobics from living normal lives.

Doug lives in the suburbs but works in New York City. His fear of being closed in healthy emotion — fear — and let it run their lives. Ordinary events such as entering a new store for the first time set off alarm bells of panic, sweating, rapid breathing, a feeling of impending death or collapse and dizziness, all for reasons

An aide stood outside the elevator as Doug went in alone. The doors closed and a maintenance man stopped the elevator between floors.

"I pressed the 'on' button to make it work again. It didn't work. I don't remember what happened next," Doug told the group, twisting the end of his shirt in his hands.

What happened is that Doug felt himself trapped and began removing his clothes. He was barechested when the aide and maintenance man freed him from the elevator.

Psychiatrists say that Doug is getting better by doing the thing that scares him, at first with the aide and then alone. The clinic teaches phobics that they can control their panic if they just let it happen and monitor the fear as it rises and falls.

"You go through a couple of terrible experiences and it goes away," Dr. Frederic J. Neuman, leader of the group, told Doug. "You say to yourself, 'If I didn't go crazy then, I won't.'"

Phobics are not crazy, psychiatrists say. They are afraid of fear, afraid of losing control, afraid of embarrassing themselves. They have taken a natural, the phobic cannot understand.

"If you imagine the most terrible thing in the world happening, a phobic person feels that in an ordinary, everyday circumstance," said Jo Ann Antonelli, an aide and former phobic who for 12 years was afraid to leave her house.

Dr. Manuel D. Zane, who founded the clinic 10 years ago, said that phobias develop because of stress, usually in the early 20s as young adults confront for the first time emotional upheavals like death, sickness, graduation, childbirth, marriage or divorce.

"They get into life a little bit and start getting some of the real pressures and that's when it starts to happen, when the stresses begin," Zane said.

The feelings are increased by the fact that the phobic feels alone with the fear, he said.

"No one talks about it. You grow up in a society where you don't ordinarily disclose what we're feeling," Zane said. "You finally feel you can't stand it and it just bursts out in a panic."

Phobics sometimes mistake the reaction for high blood pressure, heart disease or some physical illness.

"All I knew was there was something wrong with my body and I didn't know what it was," said Bill, another phobic. "All I knew was that I reacted under certain conditions and the reaction couldn't be controlled."

In the eight-week clinics, phobics pay $480 to learn how to control the reaction and to recognize that their fears are not coming from reality but from their imaginations.

A six-month follow-up on one group showed 76 percent felt they had been helped by the clinics and progressed even further afterwards. The figures were similar on a four-year follow-up.

Most of those in Dr. Neuman's group showed progress by their third week.

Judy, whose hands shake when she serves guests, still has not stopped the fear or the shaking. Ruth, married and in her early 20s, said she had terrible dreams about being crushed in an elevator that shrinks like a tight box around her.

Marleen was so stunned when she drove by herself across a bridge that she pulled her car off the road and sat for an hour.

Like many phobics in the clinic, she keeps a diary, writing down her fears and her reactions. And like many, Marleen is finding this year, for instance, she had a different approach to the holidays.

"I have a terrible fear with the holidays coming of Christmas shopping in crowded stores," she said. "I usually have it done before Thanksgiving because I can't take crowded stores."

But this year, Marleen waited until the Christmas rush to do all her shopping. She smiled as she told the group her reason.

"I want to be like a normal person," she said.

Mousie's Origin A Mystery To Many

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer
MOUSIE, Ky. (AP) — Polly Hicks is the "big cheese" in this southeastern Kentucky coal-mining community.

Well, she's actually the postmaster. However, since Mousie is unincorporated and has no governing body, she's as qualified as anybody to speak for the 300 Mousians (Mousiers?) who make their homes here.

So, Mrs. Hicks, how did Mousie get its name?

"It was named for the first postmaster," she said, fixing a dubious eye on her bearded inquisitor. "From what I've heard, she ran a store and was instrumental in getting a post office located here. And, when they asked her for the name, she told them 'Mousie.'"

Mrs. Hicks said she didn't know the year but thought it was shortly after the Civil War.

However, one gets a very different story just down the road, at the Mousie Market, which is across from Mousie Tire Sales and next door to the Mousie Baptist Church.

"Oh, it was named for Mousie Martin," said Junior Combs, a lifelong resident. "She died not too long ago and she's buried not far from here."

Isn't Mousie sort of a funny name for a community?

"No, I don't see anything funny about it," Combs said, leaning on the counter. "It does cause some problems, though, when we call in orders for the store. People are always saying, 'Are you sure you mean Mousie?'"

Mrs. Hicks said the name brings a lot of requests from postmark collectors.

"I've gotten letters from all over the country," she said. "I probably get a hundred postmark requests a year."

This is all well and good, but we still don't know, officially, where Mousie got its name. Surely, the U.S. Postal Service will have the answer.

Joyce Booker, a "news information specialist" at the postal service's Washington, D.C., headquarters, fielded the inquiry.

"Well," she confessed, "I'm not sure I'm going to be much help."

Ms. Booker said her research into Mousie's mysterious name failed to provide a satisfactory answer.

"According to 'Scratch Ankle, USA, American Place Names & Derivations,' written by Myron J. Quimby in 1969, the first postmaster, circa 1900, was Clay Martin. He had two daughters, Kitty and Mousie, and named the office for his younger daughter," she said.

But, she said, in "American Place Names," written by George Stewart in 1970, the name is attributed to Mousie Martin. "She was a lady who owned several hundred acres of mountains surrounding the community and who worked very hard and pulled several strings to get the post office established and named after her."

Ms. Booker said she also checked the records at the Postal Service library and found that the Mousie Post Office was established in 1911 and that the first postmaster was Ollie M. Gibson.

So, what's the final answer?

"I'm afraid we have a mystery," Ms. Booker said with a sigh. "You'll just have to take your pick."

Israel Wants Guarantee On Two Strategic Islands

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel has told the United States it wants a guarantee that two strategically located islands at mouth of the Gulf of Aqaba will not be turned over to Saudi Arabia once Egypt gets them back from Israel, an Israeli official said today.

The high-ranking official also said Israel wants units of the U.S.-sponsored multinational peacekeeping force stationed on the islands of Tiran and Sanafir, which Israel seized from Egypt along with the Sinai Peninsula in the 1967 Arab-Israeli War.

The islands are within sight of a base for the peacekeepers being built at the southern tip of the Sinai, but there is no plan for a base on the islands.

The Saudis assert a historical claim to the islands although Egypt has held them since the 1950s.

The Israeli official, who requested anonymity, told American reporters that the Saudis reasserted their claim several weeks ago, saying the want the islands back.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon said the issue during a meeting Thursday with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., the Israeli official said. Haig's response was not immediately known.

The official said Israel is worried that a hostile nation such as Saudi Arabia could use the islands to blockade the Israeli port of Eilat and cut the key shipping lane through the Gulf of Aqaba to the Red Sea.

Israel is scheduled to return the islands to Egypt on April 25 as part of its final withdrawal from the occupied Sinai.

Meanwhile, Haig has prodded Israel and Egypt into a new effort to reach agreement before the end of April on autonomy for the Palestinians in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Today, Haig met with opposition Labor Party leaders — Chairman Shimon Peres, former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and former Foreign Minister Abba Eban — to seek their views on the shape autonomy should take.

All agreed that "a supreme effort" should be made to reach agreement before April, Peres said afterward.

He said that if no progress was made, "the coalition of forces in the Middle East will not be conducive to pushing the peace process forward."

Eban said Haig was at pains to dispel Israeli fears that the Reagan administration is backing away from the commitments undertaken by President Jimmy Carter to concentrate on the autonomy negotiations.

After two days of meetings with Egyptian and Israeli officials in Cairo and Jerusalem, Haig said it was too soon to predict whether "important differences" can be resolved before Israel returns the eastern half of the Sinai Desert to Egypt on April 25.

"Give me a few weeks and I will answer that question," he told reporters.

Both the Egyptian and Israeli government concluded earlier that after 18 months of deadlock, they could not agree on a plan for Palestinian home rule in the Israeli-occupied territories before Israel withdrew from the remainder of the Egyptian territory it captured in the 1967 war.

But Israeli and Egyptian officials said they were impressed by the active personal role Haig is taking in the negotiations.

His drive to obtain an agreement in the next three months reflects concern that once Egypt regains the Sinai, it won't have any incentive to negotiate seriously on Palestinian autonomy.

The next formal negotiations are scheduled to start Jan. 24 in Egypt, and next month, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak is to visit both Washington and Israel, affording more opportunities for progress in high-level talks.

Israeli officials said they expected negotiations on autonomy to be intense in the coming weeks.

Israel agrees with Haig that an agreement should be reached before April, one official said, because there is public anxiety in Israel that "the peace might not last" in its present form after Egypt has recovered all of Sinai.

Haig also met with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Mayor Elias Freij of Bethlehem, one of the leading Palestinian officials in the occupied West Bank.

A senior U.S. official who requested anonymity said Haig met with the mayor to learn how moderate Palestinians regard the autonomy negotiations.

"It was an important meeting," the official said.

He declined to reveal what Freij told Haig. But the mayor, although not a member of the Palestine Liberation Organization, has maintained that the PLO is the legitimate spokesman for the Palestinians and has advocated a separate Palestinian state, which Israel opposes.

However, he has also argued in favor of coexistence with Israel.

Mob Figures Fingered In Cable TV Message

By PETER MATTIA
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.

(AP) — It came rolling across the television screens, a message containing an implicit threat and the names of two reputed mob figures.

"Nicky and Phil, you're next," said the scrawled note that went round and round the screen with other cable TV messages, popping up periodically for 12 hours early Sunday.

The authorities said they do not know if the message was a hoax or a real threat against local reputed mobsters Nicodemus Scarfo and Philip Leonetti.

Scarfo is "Little Nicky" and Leonetti is "Crazy Phil." Both were associates of Frank "Chickie" Narducci, the reputed Philadelphia mobster who was gunned down gangland style near his home.

The television message came three days after Narducci was slain in the latest mob killing in Philadelphia, "but there is nothing we can see at this time that's a real threat to Nicky or Phil," Atlantic County Prosecutor Joseph Fusco said Thursday.

Channel 2, which delivers the weather, time, advertisements and other typical cable data, was closed for the night with an automatic camera showing the same messages over and over when the message appeared.

Authorities said someone apparently broke into the studios of the Atlantic Coast TV Cable Co. in Convention Hall and taped the note to a drum that rotates in front of the camera. Fusco said detectives are investigating because "we are very sensitive to threats on anyone's life. It's a serious thing."

But he said "it doesn't seem at this point that a suspect will be identified."

Louis MacDonald, president of Lomac Communications Inc., which operates the channel for Atlantic Coast, said he rushed to the empty studio shortly after receiving inquiries from viewers, but the message had been removed.

Scarfo, 52, was identified publicly last summer by the FBI as the new chief of the Philadelphia-based organized crime family of Angelo Bruno, who was slain in 1980. The slaying of Philip "Chicken Man" Testa, another reputed family member, came next.

Leonetti, 28, is Scarfo's nephew and a close associate, authorities say. Both live on North Georgia Avenue in this East Coast gambling city.

In June, Scarfo was sentenced to two years in federal prison and fined $5,000 on charges of possession by a felon of a firearm used in an illegal interstate transfer. He is appealing.

In October 1980, Scarfo, Leonetti and a third man were found innocent of the gangland-style slaying of Margate cement contractor Vincent Falcone, who was shot in the head and chest and stuffed in the trunk of his car Dec. 16, 1979.

Scarfo served six months in prison for manslaughter in the stabbing death of a Philadelphia man in 1963 and 2½ years in jail for refusing to testify about organized crime before the New Jersey Commission of Investigation in 1971.

Mining Experts Fail Prove Body Is In Abandoned Shaft

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Authorities may be unable to press charges against four men suspected of kidnapping an Asheville man and hurling him into an abandoned Ashe County mine shaft, a prosecutor says.

Buncombe County District Attorney Ronald C. Brown said mining experts' failure to confirm that the body of Lonnie Gamboa was in the mine left him with "monumental problems" as he tries to build a case.

"I'm not sure I've got a kidnapping," Brown said. "Until they find a body, I can't prove anything."

Asheville police detectives said they believe Gamboa, 29, was abducted from an Asheville nightclub on Dec. 23 after a disagreement with his captors involving a drug transaction.

Ashe County Sheriff Richard Waddell has said that James Edward Vines, one of four men charged with kidnapping in the case, told him he saw several men throw Gamboa into the gaping shaft of the Ore Knob Copper Mine in Laurel Springs on Christmas Eve.

Beside Vines, the suspects include Paul Wilson Bare, 42, of Laurel Springs, who is free on $100,000 bond; Gary Hansford Miller, 34, of Asheville, and Allen Ray Hattaway of Charlotte. Miller and Hattaway were still at large Thursday night. All four are charged with kidnapping.

Vines is in Ashe County Jail under protective custody.

A search of the 440-foot shaft ended abruptly Wednesday when technicians from the federal Mine Safety and Health Administration withdrew their sophisticated video camera probe.

The move angered Asheville and Ashe County authorities, who said they were almost certain the body — and possibly another — was in the mine.

"We're bitterly disappointed about the cooperation we got from the federal people," said Asheville police detective Ross Robinson. He said the federal technicians "were more concerned about losing their equipment than finding anybody."

Robinson said one mine official told him the camera had filmed only 10 percent of the funnel-shaped shaft before the search was halted. The federal officials called off the search at the 220-foot level when technicians spotted potential snags that might block the camera.

"We finally got to a point where it was very promising," Robinson said. "But they pulled it up just like that."

He and Waddell said they believed the camera had filmed images of human bodies.

"We saw two images that were quite interesting to us," Robinson said. "We definitely think we saw something that was human." The camera revealed images that looked like a human leg, boot, face and torso, police said.

Beaver said he and other detectives would examine the videotape footage today to determine the next step in the investigation.

Authorities so far have ruled out sending searchers into the hole, saying the walls are unstable and the air poisonous.

"I'm going to have monumental problems in trying to prosecute" without more physical evidence, Brown said, adding that Vines' account probably wouldn't be enough to convict the suspects.

SOUTHERN EXPOSURE — A heavily bundled pedestrian walks past a window display in downtown Atlanta Thursday extolling the virtues of summer clothing for a cruise. Hollywood Keeping Art Of Swordplay In Vogue

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Swordsmanship, like the button hook and buggy whip, has virtually disappeared from modern life.

For centuries, royalty, titled gentry, soldiers and not a few rogues settled their differences by wielding broadswords, sabers, epees or foils in fancy, often delicately choreographed dances of death.

Even as late as the 18th century dandies and other dudes were crying "En garde, poltroon!" before attempting to run one another through with their quivering, steely blades.

Then, alas, pistols came into play and duels among genteel folk became less a test of skill and courage than a matter of blind luck. Ask Alexander Hamilton.

But the movies, bless 'em, kept alive the traditions of clanging blades in hundreds of costume epics beginning in silent days when Douglas Fairbanks wielded the fastest blade in the castle.

Swordsmanship was a patented element of swashbucklers, be they pirates, musketeers, the king's guards or daring highwaymen of noble birth.

Errol Flynn, Tyrone Power, Basil Rathbone and later Burt Lancaster, Kirk Douglas, Stewart Granger and Tony Curtis became swordsmen, with varying degrees of skill, to star in costume pictures.

Flynn and Power became the best of the leading men but Rathbone was far and away the most proficient swordsman on the screen, inevitably playing rascals, scoundrels and bounders who, predictably, found himself run through at the end of every climatic duel.

From the 1920s through the 1940s academies of swordsmanship flourished in and around Hollywood as actors strove to master the art for screen roles.

Today, unhappily, the ancient and honorable art of dueling has fallen into total disuse. Because honor is as foreign a term to most Americans as a switchblade or Saturday night special is common, dueling is dead.

But one believer continues to burn with a gleam as bright as his burnished blades. He is actor-swordsmen George Marshall Ruge, 29.

It was Ruge, a handsome, black-haired San Franciscan, who doubled for George Hamilton in the fencing scenes of "Zorro, The Gay Blade." It was Ruge, too, who dispensed derring-do with his swords in "History of The World Part I."

Most recently, Ruge and Peter O'Toole faced off with flashing blades in a scene in "My Favorite Year," which still is in production.

Ruge realizes he is something of an anachronism in Hollywood these days. He could starve to death if he depended solely on his talent with an epee.

In this "Star Wars" era Ruge might be compared to a blacksmith at Cape Canaveral awaiting the creation of the first horse-drawn space vehicle.

But Ruge is nothing if not persistent. He continues to practice his swordsmanship regularly with his coach Victor Paul, who was stunt coordinator for Power, Rathbone and Flynn in the days when a dozen period films were made every year.

"I guess I was born 30 years too late," Ruge lamented. "Now with science fiction it's all laser beams and automatic weapons. They just don't make swashbucklers and pirate pictures anymore."

"When I was a kid, my father took me to see 'The Mark of Zorro' with Tyrone Power. For two years after that I was Zorro. I ran around the house with a dish towel for a cape and my pajama legs stuffed into socks to look like tights.

"I had a broomstick sword and I'd jump from rooftop to rooftop on my block. The row houses in San Francisco are so close that I only had to jump two feet.

Sci-Fi Tale Is Good TV Fare

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Just when it looks as if Project Peacock is doomed, NBC comes up with something like "The Electric Grandmother," and the noble venture survives.

Emmy-winner Maureen Stapleton plays the lead in the hour-long adaptation of Ray Bradbury's short story "I Sing the Body Electric," about a widower who hires a mechanical grandmother to care for his three children.

Bradbury, the sci-fi master, wrote the screenplay with Jeffrey Kindley, and it's an enchanting, well-cast production.

"The Electric Grandmother," to be broadcast Sunday night, 7-8 EST, is the premiere presentation in NBC's new weekly "Peacock Showcase," a vehicle for programs for young viewers from the network's year-old Project Peacock series.

Actually, the fun begins the night before — Saturday, 8-9:30 — with Meryl Streep in a special Project Peacock musical production, "Alice at the Palace." It's a music hall version of Lewis Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland," with Miss Streep — in baggy pink overalls and a white blouse — as Alice.

The special was adapted from Elizabeth Swados' New York Shakespeare Festival production "Alice in Concert."

It's an appealing show, on the artsy side, and Miss

Streep — an Emmy- and Oscar-winner — carries the evening. For those who still aren't convinced of her versatility, "Alice at the Palace" is the clincher.

NBC rounds out prime-time Saturday with the fourth program in its irregular "Live from Studio 8H" series — Zubin Mehta and the New York Philharmonic and Metropolitan Opera star Placido Domingo in a 90-minute tribute, "Caruso Remembered."

Project Peacock, though acclaimed for programs such as "Donahue and Kids," an Emmy-winner last season starring talk show host Phil Donahue, has not done particularly well in the ratings. One problem was the lack of a regular slot in the NBC lineup — something that came only with the unexpected postponement of a planned series, "The Powers of Matthew Star."

"The Electric Grandmother" is a nice way to start the "Peacock Showcase" series. The cast includes Edward Herrmann as the father, Tara Kennedy, Robert Macnaughton and Charlie Fields as his kids, and Paul Benedict — the nutty Harry Bentley from CBS' "The Jeffersons" — as Guido Fantoccini.

After his wife dies, the father decides he needs someone to help raise the children, and Aunt Clara (Madeleine Thornton-Sherwood) won't do. He and the three kids visit Fantoccini Ltd., "Makers of Robots from Time Immemorial, Especially Grandmothers," and, though skeptical, list the qualities they desire in an electric grandmother.

She arrives by helicopter a few days later, encased in something that looks like an Egyptian sarcophagus. Dad and the kids lift off the lid, peel away the mask, and Grandma sits up.

"Timothy, you're in your pajamas. It's 20 degrees out here. You'll catch your death. My word, you're all in your pajamas."

"I suppose you haven't had breakfast yet...."

Grandma proves she can do almost anything — shoot milk, hot chocolate and orange juice from her index finger, wash and dry the clothes on a kite string — but she can't get Agatha to like her. Part of the problem may be that no one can remember Agatha's name: Mr. Fantoccini uses Abigail and Amanda to address the youngster, and Grandma calls her Agamemnon.

Agatha's problem is that she expects Grandma to up and leave, like her own mother did. The climax comes when Grandma must return to Fantoccini Ltd. after her 30-day trial. "I failed to make all of you happy," she says, "and it's satisfaction guaranteed."

"It's you," Timothy shouts at his sister. "Send her back! Send her to the scrap heap!"

But a story like this one can't end on a sour note — and, fear not, it doesn't.

Throwback To New Deal

By JEFF MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO, charging that the Reagan administration is failing to pull the economy out of a recession, is proposing a step reminiscent of the New Deal of the 1930s.

"The AFL-CIO proposes creation of a tripartite National Reindustrial Board, including representatives of labor, business and government, which would develop a balanced program to ensure revitalization of the nation's sick industries and decaying communities, while at the same time encouraging the development of new industries with promise for the future," Thomas R. Donahue, secretary-treasurer of the labor federation, said Thursday.

In a speech to a convention of the Consumer Federation of America, Donahue said the board would direct a financing agency, patterned after the New Deal's Reconstruction Finance Corporation, that would make loans to finance reindustrialization ventures.

"Instead of using industrial development bonds to support more McDonald's and K Mart's — now the biggest recipients of industrial development bonds financing — the RFC would be concerned with the industrial base of the country," he said.

He said the board would take into account more than short-term profits for companies in deciding where to make loans, "but rather would be attuned to job creation and to the long-term development and welfare of the nation."

He said the difference between the U.S. economy and the ones in countries with faster growth is that they have "a coordinated industrial policy that systematically includes the views of labor, industry and the public."

He restated the AFL-CIO opposition to President Reagan's economic policies.

"We reject the administration's attempt to cast government as the whipping boy. The solution to America's problems is not to hamstring the federal government by cutting its programs and its sources of income and weakening or undermining its laws and the regulations and standards used to protect health, safety, civil rights and the environment."

As an example of the effects of Reagan's policies, Donahue cited the thousands of poor people who this week lined up for hours in freezing temperatures in Washington to try to get government surplus cheese being given away.

Describing "the Reagan recession," Donahue said more than 2 million people have been added to the unemployment rolls since July, inflation remains high, the auto and housing industries are depressed and business bankruptcies are up.

"Those are the normal, natural, predictable effects of Reaganomics, which takes its cue from 18th and 19th century theoretical models that have nothing to do with today's economic structures," Donahue said.

"Transferring large amounts of money to the rich has never guaranteed either investment or production and it is not going to do it now. Trickle-down economics does not produce a balanced economy," he said.

Donahue pictured Reagan's policy as, "Workers, along with the poor, the unemployed and helpless, are to be abandoned to the economic jungle, as they were a hundred years ago."

Rapist Facing 21 Life Terms

By BILL CRIDER
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The man called the Ski Mask Rapist, who says his three-year terror spree included 81 crimes in 12 states, is now in permanent residence at Angola Prison — facing 21 life sentences plus 2,681 years in jail.

During each of six court appearances since early December, Jon Barry Simonis said he was sorry about everything, but couldn't help himself.

"I am guilty of these crimes. I knew extremely well what I was doing beforehand, while I was doing it, and I know now," Simonis told District Judge Charles Becnel during a Dec. 10 hearing in Donaldsonville.

Simonis, who turns 31 Friday, said he would wear a ski mask during break-ins and often rape woman residents who happened to be home.

He received his 21 life sentences on rape convictions, the extra years for other crimes like armed robbery, burglary and auto theft.

Simonis began his prison terms Sunday.

A six-footer with broad shoulders, moustache, wavy brown hair and hooded blue eyes, Simonis was arrested Nov. 27 in Lake Charles, his home town.

Says Economic Threat Ignored

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western nations have focused on the military threat posed by the Soviet Union without paying enough attention to the possibly more important Soviet economic threat, a Reagan administration official says.

"Over the past 10 years, the Free World has concentrated its attention on the Soviet military threat while remaining largely oblivious to the Soviet Economic threat," Lawrence J. Brady, assistant commerce secretary for trade development, said in a speech to the National Association of Manufacturers.

Officers had been told that a car like Simonis' was seen near the scene of one of the 'ski mask rapist' attacks. Simonis was placed under surveillance and was taken into custody as he left a store near his home.

It was then that he told investigators about 81 armed robberies or burglaries in cities in 12 states — many of them involving rape or other sexual crimes.

Other men had been convicted in two of the crimes described by Simonis.

In Texas, one man was quickly freed but there was some confusion, because the rape victim insisted she was not convinced Simonis was the man who attacked her.

"Everything Simonis knew could have come from news papers, anybody who attended the trial or anyone who investigated the case," she said.

However, Clarence Vor Williams, serving 50 years on the rape conviction, was released on Dec. 5 at a special court session in Orange, Texas, on a motion filed by both the defense and prosecution.

"Simonis knew too many details not to have committed the rape," said Orange County District Attorney Jim Jenkins.

Queries about Simonis have been received from law enforcement officials in California, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Michigan, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Wisconsin, State Police in Louisiana say.

Authorities in Forsyth County, where Simonis allegedly raped one of his North Carolina victims, have said they would not prosecute Simonis.

The string of prison terms imposed by Louisiana courts was the full extent of what the law could do to Simonis in that state. Only first-degree murder carries the death penalty.

"He would be a candidate for frying, I guarantee it, but unfortunately under our law, which was changed by the U.S. Supreme Court, the death penalty no longer applies on these crimes," Jefferson Davis Parish District Attorney Gregg Arnette, said after Simonis' 21st life sentence was announced.

Beginning January 1, 1982, Uncle Sam now gives you a $2000 reason to open an IRA at First Federal. And everyone is eligible.

There are two big changes in the IRA (Individual Retirement Account) at First Federal.

First everyone is eligible. Even if you've already got a pension or retirement fund and you've never been eligible for an IRA before. Now you are.

Second, the maximum contribution to your IRA will be $2000 instead of $1500 ($2250 spousal IRA). We don't have to tell you what an extra $500 deduction can mean at tax time.

With an IRA at First Federal, you can write off the full amount of your contribution (up to $2000).

You won't have to pay a penny in taxes on the amount of your contribution or the high rate of interest it earns, until you withdraw it when you retire. (You must be at least 59½ to withdraw from your IRA to avoid stiff IRS (Internal Revenue Service) penalties).

But what's important is that when you retire, your income and tax bracket will most likely be lower than it is now. And that adds up to less taxes now, and less taxes later.

So put yourself first. Open an IRA at First Federal and start paying less taxes.

Put yourself first at First Federal

Your IRA funds are, of course, available to you at any time. However, there is a stiff IRS tax penalty if you withdraw from this account before age 59. You must receive at least $2000 a year in compensation to be eligible for an IRA.
