Fair Housing Ordinance Is Supported

By CAROL TYER Reflector Staff Writer

Fair housing for Greenville has come a long way since the Greenville City Council endorsed the fair housing concept in 1973 but it has a long way to go, city leaders agree.

David Goehring, chairman of Greenville's Fair Housing Task Force, and Jesse Harris, director of the city's human relations department, said in interviews that an ordinance to enforce fair housing on the local level is needed. The task force chaired by Goehring probably will be given the responsibility of drafting such an ordinance, they said.

Members of the task force, besides Goehring, are Mary Williams, the Rev. Bill Hadden, Nelson Crisp, Bobby Roberson, the Rev. Arlee Griffin, Wyatt Brown, Freddie Jacobson, Nina Blount and Dr. Jasper Register. There are three vacancies to be filled by the City Council.

This group was appointed in August 1980, when the City Council saw the need to readdress the issue of fostering equal opportunity in the sale and renting of housing and real property in keeping with Title 8 of the Civil Rights Act and agreed with the Department of Housing and Urban Development to begin the New Horizon Fair Housing Assistance Project.

It has met weekly since January of 1981. Members see its function as four-pronged: public education, assistance to minority families, local compliance and special programs.

Complaints concerning fair housing now are handled mainly by the city's human relations department, but needs are too great, Harris said, and help is needed. The task force hopes to be instrumental in establishing a housing counseling service to assist Harris.

Task force members soon will be available for public speaking, as Harris is now. Lending institutions, realtors and others directly involved in helping the public locate housing will be counseled.

They define discrimination as any cause which prohibits a person being considered for rental or purchase of housing, if a person with the same situation has previously been granted it. For instance, if one person in an apartment complex has a pet, then no one else should be kept out because he or she has a pet. If one family in a housing area has children, others should not be steered away because they have children.

Racial discrimination is the most often-thought-of form of discrimination, but there are others, Goehring said. Single parents lately have reported discrimination, to name one group possibly not usually thought of as having a problem.

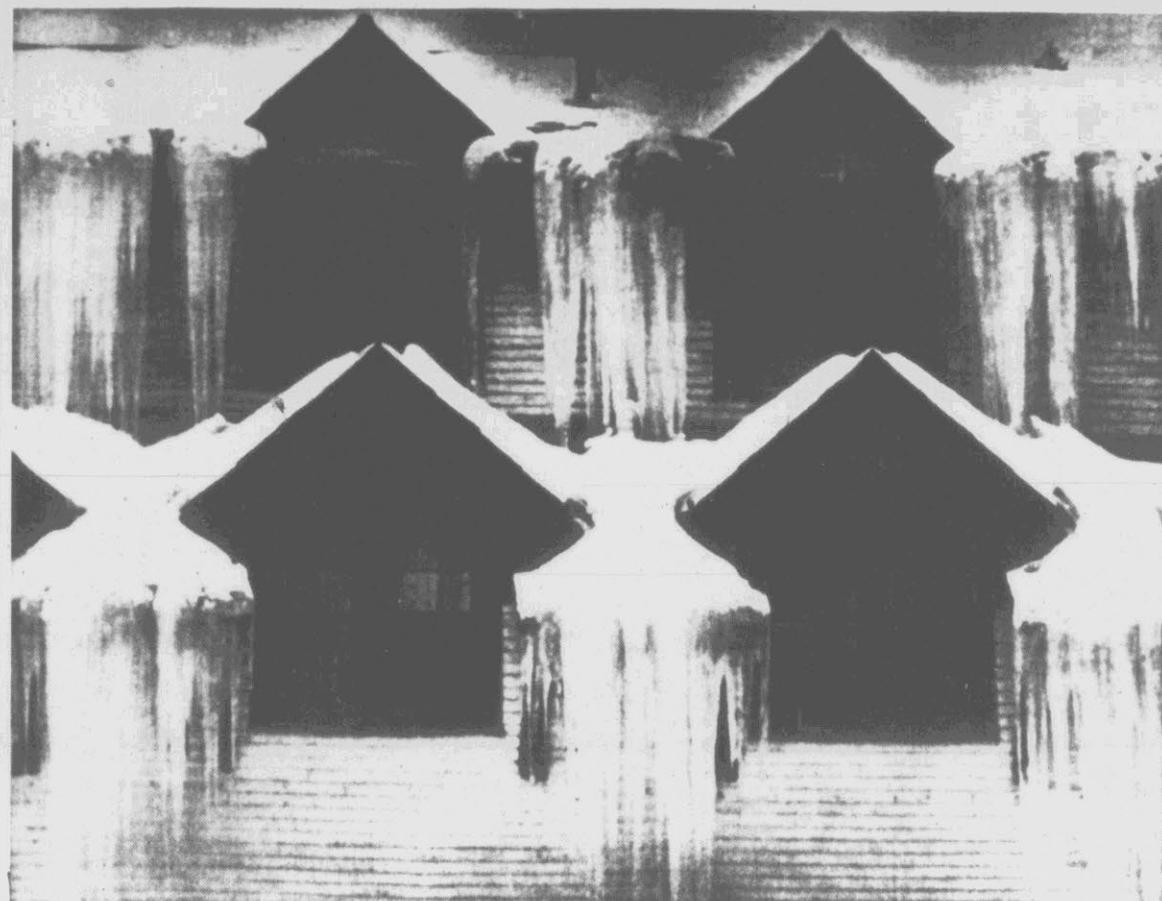

Two practices the Fair Housing Ordinance is expected to address are "blockbusting" and "red lining."

Blockbusting is when a realtor encourages one group of people to move out of a neighborhood, using fear that the group coming in will lower property values. This usually is untruth, Harris said. What they're doing is selling higher valued property to the group moving out, while they're selling the property vacated by the first group to the second group at the same or a higher price. This has happened in Greenville, Harris and Goehring say, as it has in most communities across the nation.

They define red lining as when one lending institution turns down a client for a loan for housing because he belongs to a certain race or other group and then transmits information to other lending institutions that he is not a good credit risk, not making clear the reason for the initial turn-down.

Frigid Winds March Across Much OF U.S.

By DAVID L. LANGFORD The Associated Press

A surge of polar cold nicknamed the Siberian Express blew into the frozen Midwest with paralyzing blizzards Saturday, and the mercury sank to painful lows deep into the Sunbelt.

The frigid winds sent the chill factor to 80 degrees below zero in places and the death toll reached 248 in a wintry assault that began writing weather history last weekend.

"It is one of the most severe outbreaks of cold weather mid-America has seen since the 1800s," said meteorologist Nolan Duke of the National Weather Service in Kansas City.

While temperatures Saturday stopped shy of last weekend's records, such as the all-time low of 26 below in Chicago, readings were close to 30 degrees below zero across parts of Montana, North Dakota and Minnesota, with wind chills below zero as far south as San Antonio, Texas.

More than 320,000 people remained without power in Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina. Freezing rain closed many highways again in north Georgia and snow fell in the Texas Panhandle.

Snow was common from the Great Lakes across the Ohio Valley into the Northeast, where New York City got its third snowfall in four days.

A blizzard with winds of 50 mph also closed highways and caused many traffic accidents across central and

Tobacco Farmers Say Competition Is Strong

It's Costing More To Lease Quotas

By MELVIN LANG Reflector Staff Writer

Uncertainty over the future of the price-support program and a capitalistic urge for expansion have led to sharp increases in rentals being paid in Pitt County for flue-cured tobacco poundage quotas.

Prices in recent weeks have zoomed as competition developed among the larger growers for more tobacco. Rentals of quota — which simply gives the grower the right to sell tobacco — ranged at the start of the winter from 50 cents to 60 cents a pound, possibly higher if land accompanied the quota.

In recent weeks that range has gone almost routinely to more than 60 cents a pound, going in some cases to more than 70 cents a pound for quota and land on which the tobacco will be grown. There have been reports of at least one grower paying more than 80 cents a pound for quota and the entire farm.

The price increase is significant in that an acre of flue-cured tobacco averages about 2,100 pounds. At that level, a grower renting tobacco quota at 70 cents a pound will have paid $1,500 per acre before even the seed bed has been seeded.

Projections prepared by the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service show that a grower with 40 acres of tobacco would lose money on such quota leases. The extension service projects a yield of 2,100 pounds per acre and a gross income of $3,738 per acre based on a market price of $1.78 a pound. Total costs to the grower, including operating expenses, depreciation, overhead, management and labor, would run $2,296.98 an acre — before the cost of quota rentals and interest on any borrowed money is added. The total cost for tobacco involving quota leased at 70 cents a pound would be $3,796.98 per acre — a loss of nearly $59 an acre, with interest still to be added.

That same farmer would realize a profit of $189 an acre — before interest on borrowed money is paid — if the quota rental was only 60 cents a pound.

Part of the higher prices may be attributed to demands by more growers that their quota be planted on the home farm.

Some agricultural groups, including the North Carolina Farm Bureau, have endorsed proposed changes in the tobacco support program that would require quota to be planted on the home farm at least once every three years or the owner would lose control of that quota.

Stacy Evans, Greenville director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service — which oversees the tobacco quota allotment program for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, said last week that growers registering rentals with the ASCS have indicated a change in attitude.

"There might be more of the tobacco planted back on the farm this year," Evans said. "Some of them (quota owners) are requiring that."

Robert Pierce of Farmville, one of the larger growers in Pitt County, said the price has climbed because renters "are bidding it up."

"They're too high for the risk you're taking but, nevertheless, we're the ones who are doing it. Tobacco is scarce ... (and) all of us are bidding it up," Pierce said.

Pierce noted that reports of high rentals for an entire farm but based on quota only "are misleading" in that land then becomes available also for grains or crops other than tobacco, although the rental for the farm is based only on the tobacco quota assigned to that farm.

Pierce said he did not believe, however, that the higher rentals are hurting the smaller farmer. "I've seen some of the larger farmers cutting back, too," said Pierce, who declined to discuss his own crop plans.

"Rental rates have gotten so high and we don't know what's coming up," he said. "If they freeze prices at the 1981 level, we're really hurting."

Woodrow W. Wooten of Falkland, who operates a farm supply store that also provides supplies to farmers on delayed payment schedules, disagreed about Pierce's assessment of the effect on small farmers.

"The young farmer (or the small farmer) is doing like the 90- to 95-year-old people. He's not dying, maybe, but he's getting the door closed on him," Wooten said.

"The change in our farm financing method from sure rent (to cash rentals) and the competition ... have just about put the little farmer out of business."

Wooten, who has banking and land interests as well as the supply store, said some growers in the Falkland area have negotiated rentals for up to 65 cents a pound and perhaps $45 an acre for land on which they can grow the tobacco.

"If a person would come back to simple arithmetic, these prices quoted in the paper — $1.70 a pound or so — make folks forget there

British Report Cure For Colds

LONDON (AP) — A nasal spray has been developed after 36 years of research that will prevent the common cold and may cure it, a London newspaper said Saturday, adding that the researchers were seeking 180 volunteers to try it out.

The Daily Telegraph's health services correspondent David Fletcher said the spray was developed by scientists working for the Medical Research Council. The team is headed by Dr. John Wallace of the Common Cold Unit at Harvard Hospital, Salisbury, Wiltshire.

Fletcher quoted Wallace as saying the volunteers will be lodged in centrally heated apartments with free meals for three months. They will be treated three times a day with the spray and then given a cold virus to see whether it develops.

Wallace said the basis of the spray is interferon, a powerful anti-viral agent he described as highly effective against viruses that cause almost half of common colds. Used with interferon is another potent agent called Enviroxime, which reduces cold symptoms once a cold has been caught, Fletcher's report said.

"We urgently want volunteers to test our belief that we can prevent experimental colds with a simple nasal spray," Fletcher quoted Wallace as saying.

"The next step will be to get out of hospital into the world of work and ask a factory of not less than 100 people to use the nasal spray."

Gaskins Seeks Board Position

Walter E. Gaskins of Route 1, Ayden, a member of the Pitt County Board of Education for the past two years, is seeking election to the Board of County Commissioners.

Gaskins filed Friday for the seat representing Swift Creek, Ayden and Grifton townships — the seat now held by Alton Gardner, who is not seeking re-election.

Four years ago Gaskins was defeated by Gardner in a runoff in Gaskins' first attempt at elective office. However, Gaskins was successful in his bid for election as a member of the county school board two years later.

With four years of his six-year school post remaining, Gaskins would have to resign that position if elected to the Board of County Commissioners.

Gaskins graduated from Grifton High School in 1962. He is presently engaged in farming, and officiates at high school football and basketball games.

Greenville's Lady Cops Are 'Asset To Profession'

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Don't be too surprised if, the next time you see a Greenville policeman, it's not a man at all. It could be one of the four women assigned to the department's uniformed patrol division.

Greenville has had female line officers for the past two years ... riding patrol cars, investigating accidents, investigating complaints, making arrests.

"I'm pleased with their performance. They really are an asset to their profession," Chief Glenn Cannon said.

Do the department's male officers accept their female counterparts as equals?

"I think they have accepted the ones that we have as well as can be expected," Cannon noted. "I don't hear any derogatory comments whatsoever. All I've heard has been favorable."

Greenville's four women line officers, along with 51 men, are assigned to regular shifts that patrol the city around-the-clock. They receive the same training as the men.

Speaking in general terms, Cannon said, "We have not made the progress I would have liked to make during my term as chief." However, 10 years ago, when Cannon took office, none of the policemen had any formal education beyond high school. "Now over half of the department has either four-year or two-year college degrees," he said.

Three of the four women have four-year degrees in corrections from East Carolina University.

Capt. A. G. Whitaker, who recently was placed in charge of the detective division after heading the department's uniformed division for several years, said of the female officers: "I find, as far as the general routine duties are concerned, they are just as capable and just as willing as the men are. We've had no problems with them."

Whitaker acknowledged that "one thing that hangs in the minds" of the male officers is "how will they (women) react or function under stress situations." However, he emphasized "we've had no problems at all with the female officers" and "most comments from their male counterparts have been very positive."

"I think the only potential problem," the captain noted, is "on many occasions, the men may tend to be over-protective" of the women, although "that has not created any problem."

"As far as I'm concerned, I'm very positively impressed" with their performance, Whitaker said. "I know of no occasion at all that it (having female line officers) has presented a problem that has not existed with the male officers."

While some officers agree with Cannon and Whitaker, others don't particularly like having women line officers.

One officer said, "Women have a place in police work, but not as regular patrol officers. I don't care who the female officer is, when assigned to a call, there's always somebody sent along as back-up," suggesting that such action ties up two patrolmen when, if a male was assigned the call, he could handle it by himself.

"It may not be necessary," he continued, but the men "tend to look out for the females."

Another officer, a sergeant who has supervisory duties on a regular shift, said of the women: "They can't handle the calls that are given to them ... we send a backup. If no one is available to back them up, we don't send them."

However, he admitted, "We're more protective of them. They can do the job ... they're good at paper work ... but answering prowler calls, disturbances ... they have a backup all the time."

"Everybody's protective of them. It's just instinct. It doesn't need to be that way."

One patrolman noted that "I've seen some that were really good" and others that were "really bad." The women now working in Greenville are "just like your sister," and "most everybody is real protective of them."

What do the women themselves think of their job?

"Challenging," is the way Sandra L. Cutler, the smallest of the women, described it.

"A call that would be ordinary for a male ... sometimes people look at it differently" when a woman arrives, she said.

"We are tested more. Where they would take the word of a male, they question a female. I think we get questioned more

Mounties Pay Off Killer

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — The Mounties had trouble getting their man, the most brutal mass killer in provincial history. So they paid him $90,000 to lead them to the bodies of 11 youths.

That prompted a nationwide controversy. Calls for a federal investigation confront provincial authorities who approved the payment, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who made it and federal officials who did nothing to stop it.

"To set up a kind of criminal entrepreneurship as a substitute for police investigation is something that cannot be tolerated," says Walter Baker, a Progressive Conservative member of Parliament.

Clifford Robert Olson, a 42-year-old construction worker from the Vancouver suburb of Coquitlam, was sentenced to life in prison last week after pleading guilty to a string of grisly slayings between November 1980 and last July.

Eleven youths, aged 9 to 18, were stabbed, bludgeoned or strangled and dumped in peat bogs and gravel pits in southwestern British Columbia.

No one has said why Olson proposed the deal that gave police the bones or decomposed remains they wanted as solid evidence in the case. But authorities have said Olson first asked to be placed in a mental hospital instead of a prison, and when that was rejected, sought $100,000 for the care of his wife and young son.

The public learned of the payment after Olson abruptly changed his plea to guilty last week.

Olson's lawyer, Robert Shantz, called the payment morally and legally wrong and "politically insane." British Columbia Attorney General Allan Williams — who said the decision to authorize payment was the most difficult of his life — said he initially found the idea "revolting."

But Williams and the RCMP said that because they lacked enough evidence against Olson, there was no other choice.

northern Indiana, Ohio and southern Michigan, where 11 inches of snow fell at Frankfort.

Blowing snow was causing headaches for the Ohio Department of Transportation, trying to keep open the state's 16,000 miles of highways.

"We can plow a highway, and 15 minutes later it'll be the same condition it was," said David V. Finley, a department spokesman.

Blowing snow also shut off many highways in South Dakota where the mercury dropped to 24 below at Rapid City, Murdo, Aberdeen and Milbank.

In South Bend, Ind., snowplows that tried to open the streets were called back by midday and officials said they would not try again until 24 hours after the snow had died down.

Michigan officials declared a state of emergency in Charlevoix and urged everyone to stay off the roads. "The back roads are completely closed," said Earl Muma, the county's emergency services director. "The main trunk lines are completely closed."

"The snow is coming down in buckets," said Robert Sullivan, a dispatcher at the Benzie County sheriff's office.

Wind gusts of 30 mph with the temperature at minus 18 made the wind chill factor 74 below zero in Rockford, Ill. Chicago reported a wind chill of 67 below.

Icy roads caused a pileup of 20 to 30 cars on the Southfield Freeway in suburban Detroit. Police also reported about a dozen smashups on Interstate 94 on Detroit's east side.

In Atlanta, where thousands of cars were abandoned in a storm of freezing rain and snow on Tuesday, the slush partially melted Friday and froze over again during the night, touching off another round of accidents.

"We had more accidents tonight than all day Tuesday," DeKalb County police spokesman Chuck Johnson said.

In Ames, Iowa, firemen working in temperatures of 16 below zero with winds gusting to 30 mph fought 18 hours to control a fire that gutted the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity house at Iowa State University. Six firemen were treated for smoke inhalation and exposure and a sixth suffered broken ribs in a fall on the ice. The ice was so thick the fire equipment froze in place and a huge crane had to be brought in to break it loose.

Midwesterners, remembering last weekend's record cold, began stocking up Friday on groceries, fuel and other supplies.

Lines at three cash registers at one supermarket in Columbus, Ohio, were 50 deep at midnight, according to Jeff Appel, head stocker at the 24-hour store.

"The most treacherous thing about this storm is the wind chill," Duke said. "That has been the real killer."

Duke said the cold is coming from the polar regions of Siberia.

After 16 Years, Virginia Gets Democratic Chief

By GEORGE W. WILBUR
Associated Press Writer

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Charles S. Robb, the first Democrat to be inaugurated as governor of Virginia in 16 years, vowed Saturday to make the state's future "indeed worthy of her past."

He told a chilled inaugural crowd of about 8,000 that he will govern "with reasoned common sense" and "a rational vision for a better future."

Robb, 42, the son-in-law of the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, took the reins of office from Republican Gov. John Dalton.

The ceremony, with all its historic solemnity, drew some laughs.

Virginia Supreme Court Chief Justice Harry L. Carrico directed Robb to "place your right hand on the Bible and raise your right hand." Both laughed at the impossibility of the instruction.

The Bible used by Robb was used by Lyndon Johnson when he was sworn in as vice president and president.

Inaugurated moments earlier were Lt. Gov. Richard J. Davis of Portsmouth and Attorney General Gerald Baliles of Richmond, Robb's Democratic running mates in last year's campaign.

At Robb's side as he took the oath was Virginia's new first lady, Lynda Bird Robb. Her mother, Lady Bird Johnson, and sister, Luci Johnson, along with Robb's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Robb, sat nearby.

Robb lifted Jennifer, 3, the youngest of his three daughters, to the podium as the hour-long inaugural parade began passing in review.

"When a flag goes by, place your right hand over your heart," he instructed her.

The new governor drew laughter from the crowd by recalling that President William Henry Harrison died of pneumonia 30 days after his too-long inaugural speech on a cold day in Washington in 1840.

"So it is not only for your sake, but for mine as well, that I will limit my remarks," he said. Temperatures hovered around freezing during the ceremony.

Robb promised to cooperate with President Reagan and the Congress in efforts to both reduce the flow of federal money to the states and relax the grip of federal control and regulation.

But he was applauded when he said if the federal government seeks to solve its financial problems at the expense of the states while strengthening federal controls, "we reserve the right to differ honestly and vigorously."

is a 3 percent commission at the warehouse. When a person tells you he averages such and such, you have to remove these charges," Wooten said.

As an example, he said, a farmer who paid 70 cents a pound for quota would have to add that to the interest on the quota money ("One man I heard of paid 21 percent interest last year") and to the warehouse commission to compute his actual charge for the right to grow and sell that leaf.

"When they get above common reason, you're just hoping for something that won't happen," Wooten said.

"You can believe this or not. There are many, many people getting themselves in debt, and getting there fast."

"I don't look for any Santa Claus between January and December ... People are paying far more for tobacco than they can afford to pay," Wooten said.

Walter Gaskins of Ayden, a relatively small farmer but one who utilizes modern equipment such as an automatic harvester and bulk barns, said delayed payment of rentals would help smaller growers stay in business.

"If we went back to delayed payment I think it would help a lot by reducing six months of interest," Gaskins said. He added, however, "But you can't blame a man for getting all he can."

The Farmers Home Administration, a major financing source for farmers, attempted to institute a delayed payment policy for quota and land rentals this year in an effort to cut out the heavy interest payments on money advanced for such costs.

"It just didn't work," according to FmHA county supervisor Jimmy Smith, explaining that growers seeking delayed payments found the competition too severe from other farmers with the money to pay for quota or land rentals at the start of the year. Traditionally, such payments have been made when the USDA releases quotas for each farm, usually in early January.

Smith said the FmHA has modified its approach to quota rentals while attempting to hold the line on overall costs.

"We're trying not to pay more than 25 percent of what the gross sale would be," he said. "I know of no case where that has been over 65 cents (per pound)."

Smith said the FmHA is attempting to help its growers "in all cases to negotiate a shared rent (with the owner and renter sharing costs and income). Next priority, if it's cash rent, is to get the landlord to carry it until the fall. If this fails, we advance the money."

"It's a problem," he said. "We've put a lot of thought in it trying to work out a situation we can live with."

The Pitt-Greene Production Credit Association, the other major supplier of funds for farming in the area, has not attempted to control the amount paid for quota rentals.

"The majority of our (customers) ... are landowners or people in a financial standing who can pretty much hoe their own row," said PCA President Arnold B. Parris. "We don't feel we need to try to govern what they pay."

Parris added, however, that "I do think a lot of tobacco has hit the market for the high bidder" this year.

Japanese Tanker Strafed By Planes

TOKYO (AP) — The captain of a Japanese tanker carrying highly flammable methanol from Libya said his ship was strafed by two unidentified planes off the southern Philippines.

The ship's agent said Saturday the attack may have been prompted because of the tanker's khaki color, which he speculated may have prompted the attacking planes to believe it was carrying contraband and trying to elude aerial patrols.

The captain said the planes fired more than 100 bullets at the 5,307-ton tanker Hegg off the island of Mindanao on Friday, wounding his cook and putting seven holes above the ship's water line. The vessel was not disabled and continued its voyage toward South Korea.

Japan's Kyodo News Service said Japanese Defense Agency officials speculated that Philippine air force planes might have mistaken the tanker for a secret supply vessel for anti-government guerrillas because of its khaki color.

Kyodo said the officials reported the crew members said the planes were prop-driven, single-engine models, a description that fits the T-28D used by the Philippine air force.

Officials of the Defense Agency were not available for comment, and the Philippine navy said it would have no comment because it had not received a report of the alleged strafing.

Capt. Hideo Takakuwa, in communication with the ship's agent, Kita-Nihon Oi Kaiun Co., which chartered the tanker, reported that the fighter planes opened fire at the Hegg about 21 miles east of Mindanao island.

The captain was quoted as saying he radioed the Philippine coast guard for help but there was no response.

... in anything we do, people don't trust our judgment as well."

That has its disadvantages, admits Ms. Cutler, although she thinks "people are more polite" to women officers than they are to men, and feels women many times are more effective in handling family disturbances than are the men. "Women relate better," she noted.

"Because of my size, people think I'm a cadet. They'll ask me 'where's a police officer at,' and 'who do I ride with.' But I love it or I wouldn't be here."

As for the men she works with, "They're protective over me," Ms. Cutler said. "I know they are there if I need them. They don't baby me ... don't take calls away from me. But they're there if I need them. They back everybody up."

Officer Cutler, who joined the department one year ago, emphasized, "I'm not trying to do a man's job. I don't feel I need to. You've got to use your brains sometime ... not your muscles ... talk sense into people."

Officer Shirley Person said, "The work ... I enjoy it. Most of the time I'm glad I'm doing what I'm doing. I've been in some shaky situations, but none I didn't feel like I could handle ... none I didn't handle."

An East Carolina University police officer for two years before joining the Greenville force, Ms. Person said most of the men "seem to accept us to a certain extent," but emphasized, "They still look at us females, rather than fellow officers."

Public acceptance? "I've had people who didn't want me to investigate things because I am female ... and some because I'm black. I think most of the negative response comes from black females."

Karla Fuller, a dispatcher for the department from February, 1977 until she took to the street in uniform in November 1979, said "99 percent of the time I enjoy" being a police officer. "I like working with people ... and you get to meet all different types of people in this job."

She feels she has been accepted by her male counterparts. But Ms. Fuller suggests that acceptance of females is an individual thing. Men, she said, do not accept "women in general. It's more individual ..." depending on who the woman is. "They accept each individual person on their own merits ... decide if they are a good officer."

She described the men she works with as "protective," but emphasized that "I'm protective of them in my own way. I don't mind them taking up for me as long as they don't shut me out completely."

Public acceptance is a different matter, she noted. "I've been to calls with male officers" when the person involved would "go up to the male officer and start talking like I'm not even there."

Middle-aged and elderly women, she said, also tend to be protective. "They start telling me to 'lock my doors ... be careful ...' They treat me like a grandmother would."

Wanda Hart became an officer here last month. She'll be assigned to a shift "as soon as my uniforms come in," but will ride with the squad corporal — sort of a training period — for four to six months "before I'm out alone."

Formerly a prison guard at the state correctional center in Wayne County, and a teaching parent assistant — "a parent, teacher, sister, counselor, cook and bottle washer" for five mentally retarded and physically disadvantaged children in a group home setting — at the Caswell Center in Kinston, Ms. Hart became a police officer because "I view this as one way of helping people ... my way of helping people."

And she feels as if she'll be treated as an equal by her co-workers.

"Several male officers encouraged me to apply. They seem to enjoy their work environment," she said. And one of the female officers here "had nothing but praise for her working conditions. They said how much they enjoy the job," Ms. Hart emphasized.

Being a police officer, according to Ms. Hart, is never routine. "And I like being busy ... doing something different every day. I enjoy working with the public."

"I'd like to be a detective or juvenile officer some day."

has the authority to enforce an Affirmative Fair Housing Marketing Plan which would require real estate salespersons to document their efforts to sell housing to both black, white and Asian clients. However, there has to be local monitoring, Goehring said. The task force may assume the monitoring function, with enforcement still carried out by HUD.

A fair housing ordinance, they said, would bring city attorneys and police into play in the enforcement effort. Raleigh, Charlotte and Wilmington are North Carolina cities that now have such ordinances.

One of Greenville major problems, they said, is there is little low-rent housing available. Public housing is about the lowest-priced there is, they said, and it's filled, with little hope, because of budget cuts, of more being built.

Are We Ready If We Must Cope With Disasters?

The Air Florida plane crash in Washington raises questions for every community about its ability to cope with such a crisis.

The plane took off from National Airport, hit the 14th Street bridge and then fell into the ice-covered Potomac below. The scenes that followed were horrendous. There were mauled people on the bridge above the crash, their vehicles torn apart by the impact of the plane's collision. The plane had broken through the ice in the river, but some passengers and crew had escaped from the broken-up aircraft.

There were pathetic scenes of doomed people grabbing at rescue lines from the helicopters which could get to the scene. Some made it to shore safely. Perhaps others could have been pulled out if additional helicopters had reached the scene quickly. On the streets above, emergency equipment was stalled because the thoroughfares were jammed with cars of people leaving work early for home. The weather conditions, coupled with the carnage on the bridge, brought traffic to a standstill.

Almost certainly no such tragedy will be duplicated in Greenville, Pitt or area counties, but the potential for massive rescue operations is always there.

Certainly we are far better off than we were a couple of decades back. Full-time rescue-firemen are located in Greenville. Virtually every other area has trained volunteer rescuers and good equipment. Disaster drills are conducted from time-to-time.

We hope we are prepared, but there is no way we can anticipate exactly the nature of a future disaster. The best we can do as a community is plan ahead for any such event.

Handed a Lemon? Make a Lemonade

"Every cloud has a silver lining" was uttered long ago, but often it proves out.

High interest, for instance. Certainly nothing has been more bothersome for the American economy. It has shut young couples out from buying homes of their own and made most installment loans difficult.

On the other hand, it has dramatically increased the interest paid on savings. Many retired people who saved their money and put it in savings suddenly find their thriftiness rewarded with more return than they could have ever dreamed of.

And are you in sticker shock after looking at new automobile prices?

A check of used cars shows the market booming and older cars worth more than ever before.

It brings to mind another adage: When life hands you a lemon, make a lemonade.

"Every year dawns so hopeful and bright—then goes down the chute by the 6 o'clock news."

Sunday Morning Notes

Think Snow! Area residents did Tuesday night and they got it ... along with a treacherous sheet of ice on all streets roads, highways and sidewalks.

Snow is what area people woke up to on Wednesday morning, and it was quite deceiving. A glance out the window indicated only a light dusting of snow overnight, rather than the anticipated two or three inches. Once in an automobile, however, the situation changed drastically. The snow had turned to light rain which was freezing as quickly as it hit the pavement. The result was a glaze on all driving surfaces. "The conditions Wednesday morning did something that seldom occurs here," our observer commented. "They caused area drivers to slow down."

It was a fact. Cars crept along on local thoroughfares and the slightest driving miscalculation could send a vehicle in a spin. Drivers were more cautious than usual, however, and the area got through the morning in pretty good shape.

Your columnist was one who went in a spin — coming down the hill on Cotanche Street near Reade Circle. The car just would not move on the solid sheet of ice. Two helpful people got behind and pushed to get it moving. Did I then stop to thank them? No, sir. I kept on moving, but thanks are extended now.

The waitress took the diner's breakfast order in a local restaurant.

"I'll have two eggs over medium, hash browns, toast, coffee and water," the customer said.

She began writing, rather bewilderedly.

After some time she read it back. "Let's see," she said. "That's two eggs, hash browns, two warm coffees to go."

"No, no," the customer said. "Two eggs, hash browns, toast, coffee and water."

She laboriously wrote again, then read it back.

"Two eggs, hash browns, toast, coffee, water ..." Then she paused. "Did you say you wanted a pancake?"

"No, no pancake," the customer answered.

Later she returned with the order, smiled prettily and said, "I'm new here."

"You're already improving," the customer reassured her.

Harrison Takes A Different Stance

RALEIGH — While the agency chiefs who depend upon the governmental budgets to carry out their daily assignments are bemoaning the budget cuts coming both from Washington and Raleigh, elected officials are taking a different stance.

Ferd L. Harrison, mayor of tiny Scotland Neck in eastern North Carolina, recently was installed as president of the National League of Cities.

In tune with the general mood of people who want to see less government, not more, Harrison commented to fellow city officials from across the nation that elected officials "should enthusiastically welcome the opportunity to become less dependent on the federal government and pursue a more self-reliant posture."

Speaking at the Detroit meeting of 3,000 delegates, Harrison was face-to-face with big-city mayors who by and large have been predicting disaster as Congress and President Reagan continue to chop away at the various aid programs.

At the same time, however, municipal officials have denounced the numerous federal mandates for programs, the rules and regulations, and the red tape.

"If we really believe what we have so often said, if we really wish to retain our right and have the opportunity to govern without unnecessary intervention, we must assume additional and full responsibility for municipal affairs and stop blaming someone else for all our ills," Harrison said.

In taking the gavel of the national organization — a role which will see Harrison often calling at the White House and in the Congress — the new president stood in front of 3,000 delegates at the Detroit convention. That is more people in one place than live in Scotland Neck (population 2,970) where Harrison is mayor.

Former governors, practically every newspaper in the state and now the Christian Action League all stand together in opposition to a four-year term for members of the North Carolina General Assembly.

So far no organization has come forward favoring the Constitutional amendment which goes before voters on May 4. Those against join other organizations including the Young Democrats and the Citizens Association of North Carolina who previously came down against the change.

Who is for it? The question carried strongly in both houses of the General Assembly where members currently serve two-year terms.

WASHINGTON — Insistently prodded by unanimous advisers to raise taxes, President Reagan concluded a 55 minute meeting with House Republican leaders Monday with a cryptic though undeniably plaintive comment that gave fresh hope to anti-taxers.

The president, who had been listening to the congressmen and saying little, apologized that he had to run off to meet two governors. But first, he had one thing to say:

"I have never understood the difference between crowding out" — that is, limiting private borrowing — "by government spending and crowding out by higher taxes. We were not elected to raise taxes or spend more money."

That was no definitive promise against new taxes in the forthcoming budget (and, in fact, was interpreted by some as merely a polite gesture to Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, who had just pleaded against higher taxes). But it polished the portrait of a president resisting to the end demands of his advisers for consumer taxes that would begin five weeks before the congressional elections.

This poses an agonizing decision for Ronald Reagan. By practice and desire, he prefers to follow the recommendations of aides, particularly when they all agree as they now do on taxes. But that advice goes against all his political intuitions and philosophical leanings.

The united front of his advisers was established the first working week after the Christmas holidays. As recently as mid-December, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan was telling friends that, no matter what they read and heard, rest assured that only Reagan himself inside the administration was a bigger foe of taxes than he.

But on NBC's "Today" program Jan. 6, Regan threw in the towel by announcing probable tax increases in the fiscal 1983 budget. Shortly thereafter, the White House put a formal lid on public speculation about taxes, followed by predictable high-level leaks over last weekend that the die was cast: There would be excise tax hikes proposed on alcoholic beverages, tobacco and gasoline. Only Kemp resisted the inevitable, said the leakers.

In truth, more Republican politicians than Kemp see electoral disaster in raising the cost of drinking beer, smoking cigarettes and driving cars beginning Oct. 1, a month before the November

Leaks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan's crackdown on news leaks in his administration has an all too familiar ring. He has issued a dire warning that any disclosure of classified information or top secrets will be severely dealt with — apparently starting with lie detectors.

The directives to the National Security Council and other government departments, particularly the State and Defense departments, are supposed to shut up the bureaucrats. And Reagan has promised to investigate any breaches of his policy by "legal methods" — a reference undoubtedly to the Watergate scandal when the telephones of some NSC aides were bugged and the discredited "plumbers unit" was set up to find out who was leaking inside information.

Reagan's anathema to leaks — a well-known affliction that hits all presidents sooner or later — has been slow in arriving. For a few months he has complained that there must be "bugs" in chandeliers of the Cabinet Room.

Last week, he ordered his Cabinet to clam up on any discussion of his possible moves toward tax increases and the size of the deficit. These are hardy matters of national security, but they do irritate a president when he sees them in print.

Newsweek reported this week that Reagan was "upset" when the Washington Post reported that he would seek an increase of $15 billion in defense spending and carried side-by-side a report on his new urban enterprise zones, which included proposed cuts in aid to dependent children and other social programs. These are not highly classified matters of war and peace, but they do not present the image an administration likes to project in "hard times."

President Jimmy Carter had conniptions over leaks in his administration and demanded a relentless search for the perpetrators. But the line between the people's right to know and what is a legitimate national security area is open to debate. In the Watergate era, "national security" provided a shield for keeping secret matters that might be embarrassing.

When the strict orders were issued Tuesday, Reagan's new national security adviser, William Clark, had this to say:

"We fully recognize the paradox inherent in our system, in which a free press is encouraged to collect and print whatever it believes to be in the public interest while the government has the responsibility to protect certain categories of sensitive information. The measures to be taken under this directive should not be construed as criticism of the press."

If fully adhered to, Reagan's "shut up" orders would bar any public debate or dialogue on many issues that may have a legitimate place in public debate. The American people learned during the Vietnam War that they were kept in the dark for too long, and compelled to support a conflict they did not understand.

After the Bay of Pigs debacle, President John Kennedy bemoaned the fact that he had asked newspapers to withhold information they had learned about the projected CIA operation. He later believed that if the ill-fated plan had been disclosed, he would have acted differently.

There is much support for the change as legislators complain that it costs more to run for re-election so often, and takes too much time.

Most people recall that the North Carolina General Assembly met three times in 1981: once for regular session; again for a budget-adjusting session; then again for a redistricting effort.

But actually the Legislature met four times — that's what the record shows.

Here is how the summary of the 1981 General Assembly officially compiled by the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina in Chapel describes the situation.

State law says the Legislature may be called into session by the presiding officers if so requested by three-fifths of the members in each house. So on Monday, Oct. 5, at 10 a.m., one of those four sessions opened. The purpose: to adopt a resolution requesting the presiding officers to call a special session. That done, the session adjourned, then an hour later was called back to another session by the presiding officers empowered to do so by the just finished session.

An Agonizing Decision For Reagan

elections. Rep. Trent Lott of Mississippi, the House minority whip, and Rep. Dick Cheney of Wyoming, chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, see a tailor-made Democratic issue in taxing workingmen while cutting capital gains taxes for the rich.

Even Rep. Bob Michel of Illinois, the minority leader who agrees with presidential advisers on the need for higher taxes, expressed qualms about the excise boosts. They would "tax poor people" back home in Peoria, Michel mourned in the White House.

There was no consensus during the Monday meeting about how the president should confront impending budget deficits. Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, delivered a typically blunt conclusion: There is simply no politically-beneficial way out. But Conable stressed that if Reagan offered any tax increase he would be "scarred politically" by the Democratic reaction.

Kemp, chairman of the House Republican Conference, was the last to speak and he did so at greater length (causing some of his colleagues to shift uneasily in their chairs).

Beauty Lies In The Eyes Of The Beholder

WASHINGTON — A long-forgotten Irish novelist, Margaret Wolfe Hungerford, is today remembered for a single line in a long-forgotten work called "Molly Bawn." This was the line: "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder."

The line comes to mind in contemplating the flap that has arisen over the design for the pending Vietnam Veterans Memorial. I happen to think the design is superb; in my own view, it promises to be the most moving war memorial in this country, if not in the world. My brother conservatives of National Review think the design is terrible. Many veterans approve it warmly — the American Legion has pledged $1 million and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have contributed $250,000 toward its construction. Other veterans loathe it. Congressman Henry Hyde is trying to abort the whole project. Gen. William Westmoreland is among its most fervent supporters.

The idea for this memorial began to germinate three years ago in the mind of Jan Scruggs, a fairly obscure fellow in an obscure office of the Department of Labor. He is a soft-spoken guy with steel in his spine. He also has steel in his arms and legs — shrapnel left over from his year with the infantry in Vietnam. He came home from the war not only with the shrapnel but also with a decoration for gallantry. He is a 100-percent American.

In common with many other veterans of Vietnam, Scruggs resented the indifference and hostility exhibited by an ungrateful nation toward the men who had fought there. He began to talk up the idea of a memorial. In April 1979, he formed the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund. A year or so later Congress donated a site on the mall between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument with the understanding that funds to build the memorial would be privately raised.

Last year, in a conscientious effort to avoid precisely the kind of controversy that recently has arisen, the fund sponsored a design competition and asked a blue-ribbon jury to name a winner from the 1,421 designs that were submitted. The jury chose a design by Maya Ying Lin, a brilliant student of architecture at Yale.

Some of the most noisy critics are contending that the design makes a "political statement." The objection is fatuous. The memorial will consist quite simply of two walls of black granite in which the names of the 57,000 dead of Vietnam will be carved. No Corinthian columns. No frou-frou. No Winged Victories. No temples or arches or obelisks.

These were the dead of Vietnam, We honor them. That is the poignant statement this memorial would make. I happen to believe the war was just as Ronald Reagan described it in August 1980: It was indeed a "noble cause." In the end the cause was lost, but that tragic fact cannot obscure the motivation nor denigrate the sacrifice. If this contemplative memorial prompts visitors to reflect upon the price of defending freedom, so be it. Like beauty, meaning will lie in the beholder's eye.

One of the most asinine objections came from the left-wing New Republic, in which a columnist saw the names as if they were victims of "some monstrous traffic accident." An even more depressing objection came from the right-wing columnist Pat Buchanan: One member of the design jury, unidentified, "allegedly had a long association with the American Communist Party." A cheaper shot has seldom been fired.

Probably the sponsors of the Vietnam Memorial should have expected such pettifoggery opposition. Ours is a nation of 225 million critics of art and architecture. After 30 years of proposition and dissension, agreement is yet to be reached on a memorial to Franklin Roosevelt. The best we have done for James Madison is to name a library annex for him. Even so, it is a pity to encounter this divisiveness. The war was divisive enough.

My hope is that the sponsors of this eloquent memorial will not be deterred by the small but passionate opposition to the design. The fund is slowly approaching its $7 million goal. Ground is to be broken in March. A year hence the memorial could be in being. Viewing it, each of us may remember what he wishes to remember — the cause, the heroism, the blunders, or the waste.

PRINCETON, N.J. — Despite mounting concern about the economy and high unemployment, the American public expresses a high degree of satisfaction with most of the important dimensions of their lives.

In fact, a comparison of the results of the latest Gallup survey with one taken in 1974 — another recession period — shows there is greater satisfaction now than in 1974 on most of the items included in both surveys.

In the current survey, 81 percent of parents give their relations with their children one of the top three ratings on a 10-point scale, indicating a high level of satisfaction with this quality of life — the highest-rated category of the 13 included in the study.

Other aspects of their lives given very high ratings by the public are family life (79 percent highly satisfied), relations with other people (79 percent), marriage (78 percent), health (70 percent), housing (69 percent), personal life (68 percent), and their community as a place to live (67 percent).

Somewhat lower ratings are accorded their job (64 percent), standard of living (57 percent), the way they spend their free time (56 percent), housework (54 percent from housewives), and household income (43 percent).

Following are the latest findings in table form:

Not All Groups Equally Satisfied

Not all population groups express a high degree of satisfaction with the dimensions of life covered by the study.

For example, 55 percent of blacks give all 13 aspects a highly-satisfactory rating on average, compared to 69 percent of whites holding these views. While this difference may not seem extreme, on some individual items a far greater disparity is noted. Thus, while 72 percent of whites indicate they are highly satisfied with their housing, only 49 percent of blacks have the same outlook. Similarly, 29 percent of blacks report great satisfaction with their household income while 46 percent of whites feel the same way.

As shown in the table below, groups with higher than average satisfaction include: college-educated persons, and those with family incomes of $15,000 or more per year.

Following are the questions asked:

"Now, here are some questions concerning how satisfied or dissatisfied you are with various things about your life. To indicate this, would you use this card (respondents were handed a card with "EXTREMELY SATISFIED" at 10 "EXTREMELY DISSATISFIED" at zero). If you are extremely satisfied with something, you would call off the highest number, 10. If you are extremely dissatisfied, you would mention the lowest number, zero. If you are neither extremely satisfied or extremely dissatisfied you would mention some number in between zero and 10—the higher the number, the more satisfied; the lower the number, the more dissatisfied. Considering everything, how satisfied or dissatisfied are you with..."

The latest results are based on in-person interviews with 1,483 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically-selected localities across the nation during the period Dec. 11-14.

For results based on a sample of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be three percentage points in either direction.

Unemployment Has Hit All Walks Of Life

NEW YORK (AP) — There are now more than 9.5 million Americans termed unemployed, 5.4 million others working only part-time, and another 1.2 million who are said to be so discouraged they have ceased looking.

The totals are extraordinary. You have to go back to the tailend of the Great Depression of the 1930s to find so many unemployed. It is growing worse: Between July and December the count rose by 2 million.

It is widespread, too, rather than confined, as was claimed earlier, to housing and automotive areas, though it is true the latter have been hit especially hard. The jobless rate for automobile workers rose to 21.7 percent in December, an unmatched 6-point rise in just one month.

The poor job market isn't just a passing problem either. The jobless rate hasn't been below 7 percent since April 1980, and you can barely find an economist willing to say it will fall that low before 1983.

And perhaps most important of all, the depressing situation may not be a result solely of the old economic cycle, in which jobs become available during expansions and then shrink when the economy contracts.

Some of America's great employer industries are now "mature," which generally means they are expanding more slowly or have ceased growing altogether. Among them are steel, textiles and automobiles.

Such industries are labor-intensive; despite a degree of mechanization that would awe industrialists of a century ago, they employ relatively great numbers of workers. But unless there are great changes, their best days, and probably those of their workers, may be in the past.

Robert Dederick, assistant secretary of Commerce, told a Senate group this week that he expects the auto industry to employ 200,000 fewer workers in the mid-1980s than it did in late 1978, when employment reached one million workers. And he estimated that jobs with domestic parts makers and other automotive suppliers could fall by 350,000.

Not all of this will come from automation. Foreign competition, smaller cars and a slower growth for automobiles also will play roles. But automation — robots, for example — will be an important factor.

In fact, it is likely to be a factor in almost every industry that seeks to remain competitive. It is the thrust of the new economy. It is equated with efficiency, reindustrialization, raising productivity. It is inherent in that cliché "let's get the country moving again."

Technology is the lever in the newer growth industries too, especially in computers and industrial electronics. These industries aren't labor-intensive; they're efficiency, in fact, is directly related to their freedom from labor. The skills they employ are unlike old ones; they are white collar, highly refined and attained through formal education.

There are some offsetting factors. Technology, for example, creates new jobs. An expanding economy offers more opportunities. And many jobs will be in the services, some of which may always be labor-intensive.

But when the President speaks of correcting the economy and making it more productive, and academics speak of reindustrializing America, and companies talk about the need for greater efficiency they are all in a way talking about the same thing. They are talking about automation.

In the long-run the net impact of automation may be to upgrade workers into more desirable positions, produce more goods and services and in so doing provide for a materially better life for more and more people.

In the short run it might cause very serious personal and corporate dislocations, as in Detroit, and it could make it a lot harder than is sometimes thought to keep the jobless rate from hitting 10 percent.

As Robert Theobald, the economist, puts it: "We have the paradox of the faster we invest the more people we throw out of work."

In the short run, at least, and short-run problems are as real and personal and painful and as necessary to correct as any other kind.

Hair

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the United States sat in the Oval Office, surrounded by the senior members of the administration's foreign policy team, and looked not the slightest bit sheepish as he explained why reporters had not seen him the day before.

"I just washed my hair. Couldn't do a thing with it," President Reagan said.

Thus did Reagan turn aside the most recent flare-up in the constantly simmering adversary relationship between reporters and the White House staff that focuses more often than not on the news media's access to the president.

The issue, always near the surface, bubbles to the top when the president entertains a foreign leader.

Ever since Anwar Sadat, the late president of Egypt, visited Reagan last August and sat around while the president was asked about the air traffic controllers strike, Reagan's staff has made no effort to hide its sensitivity to the way the president is questioned during "photo opportunities."

After the photo session with the president and Sadat — which provided the only opportunity that day to question the president about the strike — reporters were told that if they could not remain silent during the brief visits to the Oval Office, they should stay out.

Last week, the guest was Helmut Schmidt, chancellor of West Germany. As soon as the inevitable questions began, reporters were ushered out. And there were no photo sessions the next day.

The day after that, the president was primed when reporters and camera crews hustled into his office at the start of a meeting with Paul Nitze, the U.S. arms negotiator.

The news focus of the day was the future of draft registration, not the nuclear arms negotiations with the Soviet Union in Geneva that were the topic of the president's meeting.

As the first question was asked, about the draft, the president issued his explanation for not appearing before cameras the day before — unruly hair — and said, "I couldn't give you a photo opportunity yesterday."

When Sam Donaldson of ABC News tried to get in a second question, the president put on his most exasperated voice at hearing another question, said "Sam!" and instructed the correspondent:

"Go stand in the corner ... if you can find a corner in the Oval Office."

Reagan held six presidential news conferences in 1981. More frequently, he met with small groups of reporters for occasional interviews. But it is in such photo sessions in the Oval Office, or when the president is leaving the White House for a waiting helicopter, that reporters covering him have a chance to question him on up-to-the minute events.

When news conferences are infrequent, the pressure builds. And when several news stories are percolating, the jockeying to get in a quick question in the Oval Office or outside the White House doorway also builds.

And so it was last Friday, when the president strode out to a helicopter that would take him to Camp David. Earlier in the day, the government reported that unemployment had reached 8.9 percent in December.

Dreams May Not Come True

NEW YORK (AP) — Many ads for the new Individual Retirement Accounts, known as IRAs, conjure up an image of a nation of millionaires 35 years from now who reduced their tax burdens substantially on their way to a cosy retirement.

With the pressures of inflation, however, it may take $1 million or more in the year 2017 for a person to live as comfortably in retirement as he did during his working years. And, as with other investments, IRAs have risks, including the chance that the return may not keep pace with inflation.

"The problem is what it is going to be worth in terms of spendable purchasing power when it comes time to retire," says Lloyd Kaye, a vice president at William M. Mercer Inc., a New York employee-benefit consulting firm.

In 35 years, a $1 million nest egg accumulated in an IRA would be worth only about $35,500 in today's dollars if inflation averages 10 percent a year. At an 8 percent annual inflation rate, $1 million in the year 2017 would have the purchasing clout of about $68,000 in today's terms.

If inflation is held to an average below 8 percent it is unlikely interest rates will remain high enough for an IRA account to grow to $1 million in 35 years.

Whatever money is accumulated in an IRA, subject to taxation upon retirement, would then have to last the rest of the person's life, along with any other savings, investment income, pension and Social Security benefits.

For people already well advanced in their careers, a lump sum payment from an IRA at age 65 may only be slightly more than one year's salary at retirement, according to calculations by Mercer.

Since the first of the year, any employed person has been allowed to invest up to $2,000 a year in an IRA, avoiding federal taxes on the investment and its earnings until the money is withdrawn. A penalty would be assessed on funds withdrawn before reaching the age of 59½.

In addition to banks and savings and loan associations, IRA investments may be set up with brokerage houses, insurance companies, stock or bond mutual funds or money-market mutual funds.

Numerous bank advertisements for IRA accounts say a person investing $2,000 on Jan. 1 of each year will have earned $4.1 million at the end of 45 years, $1.2 million in 35 years, $654,000 in 30 years or $181,000 in 20 years. Such claims assume, however, the investment will produce an annual return of 12.94 percent.

"There's absolutely no guarantee of those rates," says Andrew Shewan, a vice president at Mercer.

While analysts say IRAs can provide a significant part of a person's overall retirement benefits, Shewan adds that the payoff will be "something quite different.

Robbing Peter To Pay

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Here's the way it was supposed to work:

The new "all-savers" accounts, with tax-free interest up to $2,000, would attract fresh capital into the mortgage market, thereby stimulating home buying and giving the housing industry a boost.

As we now know, the cash flow has not been as copious as anticipated. For reasons why, I refer you to my investment adviser, Sigmund Waterstock.

I asked Waterstock if he advised acquiring an all-savers certificate from a friendly neighborhood savings and loan association.

"It depends," he replied. "From whence do you plan to get the money with which to purchase the certificate?"

(Investment counsellors, at least the better ones, habitually use words like "whence." That is why when investment advisers speak, everybody listens.)

I told Waterstock I had a "money market" certificate that could be converted to an all-savers certificate as soon as it matured.

"Swapping a money market certificate for an all-savers certificate does nothing to increase the amount of capital available for home loans," Waterstock pointed out. "In effect, you are only taking money out of one pocket and putting it into another pocket. We'll never break out of the housing slump that way."

"Very well," I said, conceding the point. "I'll withdraw enough money from my checking account to cover the all-savers certificate."

Waterstock smote his forehead in consternation.

"You can't do that!" he protested. "Banks use the funds in checking accounts to make loans for car purchases. If those funds shrink, it will make things worse for the auto industry, which already is hard hit by sagging sales."

I said, "How about if I refinanced my house and invested that money in an all-savers certificate?"

Unnamed Hurricane Turned Into A Killer In North Carolina

Although Hurricane Hazel is considered the most damaging hurricane to hit North Carolina in modern times, the terrific storm that devastated the Morehead City, New Bern and adjacent areas on Sept. 6, 1933, was a bigger killer.

That hurricane, which slammed the coastal area before those fierce storms were given names, packed winds of 110 mph and killed at least 20 persons in North Carolina. By contrast, Hurricane Hazel in 1954 left 18 dead in this state, but its winds of up to 125 mph caused infinitely more property damage.

The 1933 hurricane, which old-timers at Morehead described as the worst to hit the area since 1879, may have been more deadly because communications facilities such as radios for giving warning were not as reliable or prevalent and there was no system of public shelters to provide refuge for persons in exposed areas.

Howling winds and smashing waves sank the schooner "Dale of Sea Level" in Rattan Bay, drowning James Hamilton, its owner, and his three sons. Four other men were drowned on a lumber barge in Albemarle Sound near Columbia.

When flood waters swept into their home near Merrimon, Elijah Dixon, his wife, son and two daughters fled the second floor. However the water continued to rise, and finally the house collapsed. The two girls, aged 9 months and 8 years, were drowned. The 3-year old boy held frantically to Dixon's neck as his parents clung to pieces of wreckage. They managed to grasp the top limbs of a pine tree and remained there until they were rescued 24 hours after the storm began.

At Merrimon, Feta Carraway, 17, was crushed to death when the storm demolished the home of her uncle, Henry Carraway. Mrs. Ella Delamar, 51, drowned near the home of her brother, Sam Gaskill, at South River. Another girl was drowned in the wreckage of her home. Pinned down by the wreckage she was unable to escape as the tide rose over her head. Other victims of the storm included four members of a fishing party whose bodies were found on the beach at Portsmouth Island.

At New Bern, the rising waters of the Neuse and Trent rivers sent a six-foot tide swirling through the streets of the business section. Damage was estimated at $2 million. Traffic on highway U.S. 17, a major north-south route, was halted when the flooding Neuse River swept away 165 spans of the mile-long New Bern-Bridgeton bridge. The Norfolk and Southern Railway helped get the highway traffic moving again two days later by loading automobiles on flat cars and hauling them across the river on its bridge.

Meanwhile, state highway workers made ready to rebuild the span by gathering up parts of the bridge that had floated away. Roy J. Hart, in charge of highway work at New Bern, said most of the 165 missing spans had been recovered two days after the storm had subsided. E.B. Jeffress, state highway commission chairman, estimated that the bridge could be reopened to traffic in 35 to 45 days.

The washout of the bridge approach halted traffic on the Beaufort-Atlantic highway at the village of Davis, and travel between Manteo and the southern portion of Nags Head was blocked when flood waters cut a channel 200 yards wide in the causeway.

Hundreds of persons were left homeless when the raging winds and tides destroyed their homes. Only four of 20 houses were left standing at Merrimon, at Salterpath 11 of 35 houses were destroyed, and reports from Cedar Island said only 15 of 80 houses were left standing after the storm. Extensive damage was reported to property at Williston, Davis and Sea Level and other villages along Core Sound.

Other hundreds of persons were left homeless at New Bern, Morehead City and Beaufort. Hardly a home on Morehead City escaped damage. Roofs were blown off many buildings, including the three story Hotel Cherry. Every room was drenched and water stood inches deep in the lobby.

"Luckily, we had only two guests, but all our property is a loss," said R.A. Cherry, proprietor of the hotel.

Winds that reached 110 mph destroyed a number of houses in the Outer Banks villages of Hatteras, Ocracoke and Portsmouth, leaving an estimated 100 persons homeless. Another 69 persons were reported homeless when their houses at South River were destroyed. A Coast Guard boat carried Red Cross food and clothing to Hatteras which had radioed for assistance. Other boats carried relief supplies to Salterpath and Merrimon. But the Coast Guard did not escape unscathed. Its station at Ocracoke was heavily damaged, and the station's life boat was swept 600 yards up on the beach.

The mighty storm was no respecter of religion. It destroyed two churches at Marshallburg, another at Bettie and a fourth at Middleton.

And Morehead City fireman H.L. Fulcher can attest to truth of the old adage that it's an ill wind that bloweth no man good. Fulcher was driving five members of his family to the fire station for refuge when the heavy rain stalled his car. Undaunted, Fulcher pushed the car around, opened the doors to offer more wind resistance.

Classes Highlighted During Alcohol Awareness Week

Pitt's Program Is Focusing On Drunken Drivers

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A focus of Alcohol Awareness Week in Pitt County is this county's and state's drunken driver problem. Porter Shaw, director of the Pitt County Mental Health Center's Alcohol and Drug Abuse program, says

Deborah Doucette Wells, he said, has conducted 10-hour alcohol and drug education classes for about 1000 persons convicted of driving under the influence during the past year. Pitt County had one of the first of these programs in the state and helped devise the curriculum now used statewide. Every county in the state now has these classes administered by mental health professionals.

The Pitt County Mental Health Center also has begun a five-week-long Multiple Offender Group for persons convicted of driving under the influence more than once. These, whose participants are also assigned by the courts, delve more into personal reasons for drinking and how to modify this behavior.

Both programs, Shaw said, are self-supporting in that fees required of the participants completely support the program. Tuition for the 10-hour course is $100; the fee for the Multiple Offender Group, $25. Successful completion of the 10-week class enables one to get a driver's license reinstated within six months; otherwise, the time is often one year.

North Carolina is one of the states that allows limited privilege driver's licenses for persons convicted of DUI, Shaw said — driving to get to work or whatever. Citizens of many states contend that driving is a privilege, not a right, and take away driver's licenses unconditionally when a person is convicted of DUI.

"The National Traffic Safety Council says that over half the drunk drivers caught are problematic drinkers on the threshold of alcoholism," Shaw said. "Somehow, we've got to get across to the person who drinks that he or she must not endanger himself and others by driving. This is difficult, of course, because the nature of drunkenness is impairment of judgment. But if public opinion and consequences are stringent enough, perhaps those who drink at least call a cab or let a friend drive for them."

The law enforcers of this state, he said, do an admirable job of recognizing and catching drunk drivers. Once a patrolman stops a driver he believes to be drinking, it takes over an hour, depending on the distance to the breathalyzer site, to complete the arrest.

A person who the breathalyzer shows has a .1 blood alcohol rate is considered DUI, Shaw said, and is shown by statistics to be seven times more likely to have an accident than a sober driver. A person with an .05 blood alcohol rate is said to be twice as likely; one with a .2, 100 times more likely.

A profile of the drunk driver in Pitt County shows that most of those arrested for DUI are white, single, under 25 and employed. Fifteen to 20 percent are students; 10 percent are women.

Many who're arrested, Shaw said, have their charges reduced. First offenders do not face automatic revocation of licenses. "I think the law enforcers of this state do a very good job," he said, "but sometimes I question how so many drunk drivers get off. It seems that the breakdown in the judicial system, though, of course, all the blame can't be placed there either. There are no simplistic answers. The ultimate blame has to be on the person himself and on those around him who condone his driving while drinking."

The alcohol and drug abuse staff of the Mental Health Center seek to reach people even before they're old enough to be licensed drivers and educate them in personal responsibility about drinking and about driving while drinking. "We're in the process of improving our cooperation with the Pitt County and Greenville City schools concerning alcohol and drug education in the schools," he said. "During these classes, there needs to be more participation on the part of the student, less lecturing, more emphasis on decision-making. People must know they have a choice about whether or how to use alcohol and drugs and the younger they can learn it the better."

"Parents, too," he said, "need to be better educated about alcohol and drugs. Most parents of teen-agers today grew up used to alcohol use, but not to the use of other drugs. They fear drug use by their children, but don't have enough concern about alcohol use. Both are dangerous, they need to learn."

Shaw and his staff provide diagnostic and evaluation services to about 300 different persons at any given time. They cooperate with the Regional Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center here, the Psychiatric Unit of Pitt County Memorial Hospital, the ECU School of Medicine Department of Psychiatry, the private physicians, the Pitt County Health Department, and the Flynn Home, to name the major agencies and groups who also respond to the needs of alcoholics and their families in this community.

Alcoholics Anonymous is the biggest boon in the world to alcoholics and their families and those who work to try to help these people, Shaw said. AA works for each person who uses it at whatever level of involvement he or she allows himself or herself. Its tenets also are adaptable to other human problems — thus, there are now organizations like Overeaters Anonymous, Gamblers Anonymous and many others.

Shaw says the employee assistance program of the center has turned out to be one of the most successful ways the center helps alcoholics. "With this program," he said, "we contract with employers to serve their employees with various mental health problems and crises. It's proved to be a good way to help alcoholics before their problems get too severe. To many people, losing a job is one of the most stressful things that can happen and often an employer can save a good employee's services and help him personally by insisting he go ahead and get help. The city of Greenville recently signed a contract with us and we hope to add more in the months to come."

A drug offender school is being planned for the near future. Its participants are expected to be first offense misdemeanor drug offenders who may be able to have their records expunged upon completion of the course. The center has recently added an extra drug counselor.

Drunk Driving Study Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Final details for the creation of a presidential commission to study the problem of drunken driving are being worked out, according to Transportation Department sources.

The outlines of the commission were discussed by President Reagan earlier this week when he visited the department, Raymond Peck, head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said.

"He gave his unqualified support" to appointing a commission as well as to efforts by the agency to proceed with a campaign to urge motorists to use seat-belts, Peck said.

Italian Police Discover Red Brigades' Hideout

ROME (AP) — The Red Brigades, kidnapers of U.S. Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier, issued a pamphlet and a picture of him Saturday, and hundreds of policemen searched the canals of Venice but found no trace of the 50-year-old officer.

An editor at Rome's Il Giornale d'Italia said a journalist for the newspaper found the pamphlet — the fourth since Dozier's kidnaping Dec. 17 — in a waste basket after an anonymous caller told him where to look.

The editor said the pamphlet set no demands and contained only ideological slogans such as "anti-imperialist civil war" was "the only possible strategy" to overthrow the state.

The pamphlet included a photocopy of a photograph of Dozier, which appeared to be the same as the photo released by the Red Brigades Dec. 27. Copies of the leaflet also were found in Milan and northern Treviso.

Police said they discovered an abandoned hideout in a house outside Rome with two-way radios, wigs, a postman's uniform, chains, guns and a tent that may have been intended as a "people's prison" for a police official shot by Red Brigades on Jan. 6.

They said the gunmen, one of whom was dressed as a postman, probably wanted to kidnap Nicola Simone, the deputy chief of Rome's anti-terrorist squad, but fled when he shot back at them. Simone is in satisfactory condition at a Rome hospital.

Prosecutors said they believe the same faction of the Red Brigades kidnaped Dozier and shot Simone. Police said they are studying documents found in the hideout for possible clues about the Dozier kidnaping.

Meanwhile, policemen including divers searched for Dozier in the canals of Venice, examining gondolas, boats and other vessels but found no trace of the general, police said.

Some of the agents in motorboats continued the hunt in the Venice Lagoon in front of the city and along coasts nearby, police said.

Other police officers set up road blocks on major highways into the northern city. Police did not say what triggered their searches, but they have been following up dozens of tips, most of which turn out to be hoaxes.

Poles Deny Reports Of Plan To End Martial Law

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Martial law will last until "all fatal phenomena" leading to its imposition are eradicated, and any talk of a timetable for military rule to end is false, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said Saturday.

"Martial law will simply have to last as long as all the fatal phenomena which necessitated its proclamation have not disappeared," Urban told the newspaper Zycie Warszawy, which appeared for the first time in five weeks.

"All dates or schedules circulated in the form of gossip as well as the alleged statements on the subject attributed to some officials are untrue," Urban said.

Urban did not say what he meant by "fatal phenomena," but presumably he was restating the official view that Solidarity extremists and various dissident groups were heading for a confrontation with the authorities.

(Warsaw Solidarity leader Zbigniew Bujak, the highest member of the union still at large, was quoted by The New York Times' correspondent in Warsaw as saying the union is continuing its activities underground and is prepared for a long struggle to fight for democracy and overcome military "dictatorship."

(Bujak called for passive resistance, however, saying, "I see that the current situation lends itself very much toward the organization of terrorism, and I fear that very much. Our country has never known terrorism, and it would be better if it didn't come to that.")

Urban's comment on a schedule for an end to military rule appeared to be a reaction to a statement by an official several days ago that the regime would like to end martial law by Feb. 1 if conditions permitted.

Poland declared martial law Dec. 13, a day after the independent union Solidarity called for a nationwide referendum on whether this key Warsaw Pact nation should remain communist.

Urban said that after 16 months of labor unrest spearheaded by Solidarity that worker discipline had improved, primarily due to the absence of strikes, but added, "I would be lying if I said that work is rhythmical everywhere."

Urban also conceded that shortages of raw materials and components were hurting some industries.

The Communist daily Trybuna Ludu stressed the need for increased grain deliveries by farmers in an article that carried an implicit warning of "obligatory delivery" requirements.

"There is the chance of making such an order during martial law, but that would be an extreme," the paper said. "No one wants to reach for it without absolute need."

"So it is in the national interest to do everything to avoid it," the paper said.

"Everything means the decision of individual farmers."

(Poland's foreign debt is estimated at $28.5 billion, most of it owed to the West, and the Soviet Union has been forced to pump more and more aid into Poland to keep it in food and raw materials.)

Many Warsaw buildings have been adorned with red and white Polish flags in preparation for Sunday's celebration of the anniversary of the Soviet and Polish armies liberating the capital from Nazi occupation in 1944.

A parade is planned for Victory Square, the city's main gathering point and site of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and the state-run press has been full of articles commemorating the event and stressing close Polish-Soviet ties.

(Pope John Paul II told diplomats accredited to the Vatican that "the persistence of divisions of spheres of hegemony...shouldn't be justified, particularly if they tend to limit the sovereignty of others.") Vatican analysts said it was clear he was criticizing Soviet support for martial law in his native land.)

The Polish state media said broadcasts of Mass will resume Sunday, and that Polish bishops will meet in Warsaw early next week for the first time since imposition of martial law.

The Polish parliament, or Sejm, is to meet Jan. 25-26 to hear an address by Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, who is the prime minister, defense minister and Communist Party chief.

Polish Pinpoint Atlantic's Disunity

By MAUREEN JOHNSON and CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writers

Life, as the West Europeans see it, is more complicated than a great, stark struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Since President Reagan ordered economic sanctions against the Soviets Dec. 29, blaming them for the military crackdown in Poland, his 14 NATO allies have hung back, offering little concrete support.

At a NATO foreign ministers' meeting last Monday, the West Europeans joined in the rhetoric of condemnation but again hesitated over taking any immediate action themselves against Moscow.

The differing reactions to the Polish crisis provide the latest glimpse of a gap that became dramatically apparent two years ago when the U.S. allies balked at the tough anti-Soviet sanctions imposed by then-President Jimmy Carter because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Political leaders, academic specialists and other commentators believe this gap represents not just transitory disagreements, but fundamentally differing views of the world.

Across the trans-Atlantic divide — which is probably greater now than at any time since the 15-nation Western alliance was founded in 1949 — some Americans see a Western Europe too old, weak or greedy for anything but compromise.

To equally critical eyes in many West European capitals, Washington looks like the sheriff bucking on his gunbelt to drive the villains out of town — a simplistic, aggressive and, in practical terms, futile response to a complex situation.

The old nations of Europe, living next door to the East bloc, just do not see the Soviet Union the same way the Americans do.

"Americans see the hand of Russia in almost every trouble spot," the Times of London commented as U.S. politicians grumbled about the European response to Poland.

Americans want an alliance that confronts Soviet influence wherever it appears, the Times said, while Europe instead looks to the superpowers to limit their rivalry.

Says Denis Healey, former British defense secretary and now deputy leader of the opposition Labor Party:

"The Europeans, with 2,000 years of diplomatic experience gained in their struggles with one another, and two centuries of involvement with the Third World as colonial powers, understand that local and regional factors are often far more important than the East-West conflict."

The difference in point of view extends beyond Afghanistan and Poland.

In the Middle East, the Europeans tilt more toward the Palestine Liberation Organization than Washington does. In Central America, the Europeans question U.S. efforts to help crush the insurgency in El Salvador and to squeeze the revolutionary government in Nicaragua. On defense matters, other NATO governments have resented American pressure to increase military spending, and a peace movement has sprung up to block new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

"It's a situation ripe for increasing mutual irritation," said Professor David P. Calleo, director of European studies at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies in Washington.

"We Americans take the view detente is an indivisible thing — if we can't have detente in the Middle East or somewhere else, then we can't have detente in Europe either," he said in an interview. But the West Europeans, with the Soviet-bloc nations as neighbors, "have the attitude that detente in Europe should be distinct, that Europe should be kind of a safe zone."

Another American student of U.S.-European relations,

Professor Elliot Zupnick of Columbia University, notes that the West Germans have a special concern — ultimate reunification with Communist East Germany, unlikely to happen without Soviet acquiescence.

"A very large part of the West German population feels that the Soviet bloc is something they can live with," said Zupnick, head of Columbia's Institute on Western Europe.

Thus far West Germany's Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has been firm in resisting U.S. pressures for anti-Soviet sanctions over the Polish situation.

Professor Ralf Dahrendorf, German-born director of the London School of Economics and Political Science, says he detects an "inward-looking tendency ... on the American side."

"This makes it less likely that U.S. politicians fully understand the problems of their allies or what happens elsewhere."

"On the other hand, in Europe, certainly for West Germany, Poland is very near and closely related to Germany's picture of its own future."

The philosophical and historical differences in U.S. and West European perspectives are real. But as in many family quarrels, there are other, more commonplace arguments.

Some Europeans argue sanctions do not work anyway. And some question the wisdom of the U.S. tactics — if you order sanctions now, what is left to do if and when Soviet tanks actually roll into Poland?

"To impose sanctions now would weaken the deterrent — the Russians might then intervene on grounds they might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb," says Britain's Healey.

Asked a Belgian official, who declined to be identified: "Why sanctions now? The Soviet Union has been behaving the way it does for more than 30 years."

European commentators are pointing out that U.S.-Soviet agreements at the end of World War II established Moscow's sway over Eastern Europe. In an undisguised jibe at the American president, the respected West German magazine Der Spiegel commented:

"People who assert the Russians have intervened in Poland seem to have bypassed the past 40 years, be it in the saddle, or the TV studio or the poet's corner. Poland ... has been occupied by the Red Army since 1945."

Probably the most down-to-earth argument involves dollars and cents. The easing of East-West tensions in the 1970s has proven lucrative for Western businesses, but much more so for Europeans than Americans.

Statistics from the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development show West European exports to the Soviet Union stood at $10.5 billion in 1980, seven times more than the value of U.S. sales to the Communist giant. The U.S. total was a 58 percent decline from 1979, reflecting Carter's grain embargo.

West Germany alone accounts for more than one-fifth of Western trade with Moscow.

"As far as Germany is concerned, economic relations with the East have become very, very important," said Zupnick.

Perhaps even more significantly than trade, West European banks and governments have a sizable investment in the East, in the form of at least $50 billion in loans and other credits outstanding to the Soviets, Poles and other Eastern governments.

U.S. Rep. Thomas Lantos (D-Calif.) this month told the West Europeans bluntly in Brussels, the Common Market headquarters: "We should take sanctions even if they hurt.... There are no cheap solutions." He was visiting with a 14-member House Foreign Relations Committee delegation.

In Case Of An Auto Accident

Chiropractic for Health

By DR. STEVEN I. COHEN, D.C.

We hope that you and your loved ones will never be victims of an auto collision. But accidents can happen to the best of drivers and you should be prepared, just in case. In case of any accident, stop immediately and as close to the accident location as possible. This is state law. Check immediately for any injured persons. If necessary, call the rescue squad or Ambulance. But never lift or move an injured person yourself.

Notify police or county officers at once. This is a law. The official report can later be most helpful. Remain at the scene until the officer arrives and cooperate by providing the basic facts. Obtain the information on the other driver - name, address, registration number, driver's license, and insurance. Also get the names and addresses of any and all witnesses. It is always best not to comment on the accident to protect your own rights.

Most important of all, know what you need to do to protect your health and the health of your passengers. Remember that when your body is jolted suddenly, misalignment of your spinal vertebrae can and does occur. Upon impact, the supportive muscles and ligaments of the spinal column may be stretched beyond normal capacity, allowing the vertebrae to slip out of normal position. This of course can cause abnormal irritation to the nerves as they leave the spinal cord. When such irritation exists, symptoms such as headaches, backaches, arm and shoulder pain, hip and leg pain, and even blurred vision can occur.

Remember that serious injuries are not always immediately apparent. Hidden nerve injuries may affect you weeks, months, or even years later. Some of the most tragic cases we see are a result of this type of situation, where severe problems developed later.

A chiropractic examination will reveal any hidden injuries by showing the existence and level of spinal misalignment and nerve irritation. Most often, chiropractic treatment can effectively correct these conditions and prevent long term pain and suffering to you and your family.

ECU To Push Local Studies In Gerontology

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University is establishing an interdepartmental standing committee to coordinate teaching, research and service in the field of gerontology — the study of problems of the elderly.

Dr. Robert H. Maier, vice chancellor for academic affairs, said he hoped the 10-member standing, or permanent, committee "will quickly enable ECU to become a leader in gerontology among North Carolina and Southeastern institutions."

Gerontology includes both the scientific study of the process of aging and studies of the problems of aged people. "It is multidisciplinary and that will be our approach," Maier said.

Data reported by an ad hoc study committee which made recommendations to Maier indicated that the population aged 65 and older increased by 74 percent in eastern

North Carolina from 1960 to 1979, and that the elderly black population increased by 42 percent. These figures, the study committee said, "certainly point to an increasingly 'old' North Carolina population."

Projections indicated that the proportion of elderly in the population should reach its peak in about 50 years. "Until that time, there will certainly be a need for personnel with a foundation of gerontological training," the committee report said.

The committee will be headed by Dr. Edgar W. Hooks Jr., veteran ECU educator and administrator, and faculty member in the department of health, physical education, recreation and safety. It will report to the vice chancellor for academic affairs.

Maier said the committee "should begin at once to coordinate gerontology activities at ECU, seek outside funding, plan and implement programs, serve the needs of the elderly population in our region, and encourage research projects among our gerontology faculty."

Hooks said the committee planned to utilize a variety of courses already offered in several academic disciplines and probably recommend new courses to establish a core curriculum for undergraduates seeking degrees with emphasis in gerontology-related fields. An initial recommendation is a new course offering, "Introduction to Gerontology," beginning as an interdisciplinary, team-taught project.

Gerontology research is to be encouraged and expanded. "There is a variety of research going on at East Carolina now, and we hope to stimulate more," Hooks said.

"A big thrust will be in off-campus services," Hooks said, including direct services, service through area providers of care and assistance for the aged, through workshops, short courses and seminars for gerontology professionals and volunteers.

Maier and Hooks said the direction of the committee's efforts, at least initially, was charted by the report and recommendation of the ad hoc study committee headed by Dr. W. Keats Spearrow, special assistant to Maier. "Gerontology programs are sparse on other Universities of North Carolina campuses and the ECU campus is ideally located to work with rural elderly, minority groups and so forth," the committee said.

It added that "no other UNC institution has a gerontology program comparable to the one proposed here." It said that demographic data and other facts indicate that the proposed program will be beneficial for the state as a whole.

The study listed probable results of the ECU program as:

•Providing benefits to the increased demand nationally for persons trained in gerontology.

•Providing research in the areas of both rural aging and black aging — currently neglected in the gerontological literature.

•Being beneficial to North Carolina in the absence of any bachelor's level training available.

•Being beneficial to eastern North Carolina in providing training for professionals both at the administrative and applied care orientations, i.e., administrators of nursing homes and people working with the elderly at both the state and local level, who have little if any formal training at the university level in aging.

In addition to Hooks, members appointed to the university standing committee include Penny Benzinger of the school of allied health and social professions, John Childers of the department of psychology, Eugene Furth of the school of medicine, Jim Mitchell of sociology, Mallie Penry of the school of nursing, Jannis Shea of the school of home economics, Connie Tindel of the school of education, Worth Worthington of the division of continuing education and Lucy Wright, division of student life.

Louise Cox of the Mid-East Commission will serve as a non-university consultant and Maier appointed Sparrow as the academic affairs liaison with the committee.

Dissident Pentecostals Say Carter Offered Help

MOSCOW (UPI) — Seven Pentecostals living in the U.S. embassy said Saturday former President Jimmy Carter has offered to intervene personally in an effort to help them leave the Soviet Union.

Lyuba Vashchenko, one of the seven dissident Christians who have been living in the embassy's basement for 3½ years, said Carter told them in a telephone conversation Friday that "millions of Americans know of your plight."

"We are always glad to hear from people who have heard about us and want to talk to us, but especially from such an important man who must be very busy — that made us very happy," Lyuba said.

Lyuba's sister, Lilia, 30, and mother Avgustina, 52, have been fasting on a diet of fruit juice, tea and water since late December in a bid to pressure Soviet authorities into granting them exit visas.

Embassy officials have urged the two Vaschenko women to end their hunger strike, warning they would be subject to arrest by the Soviets if they have to be hospitalized outside the embassy.

"The doctor told us that if they stay on this diet, he thinks their situation will not turn serious for another week or two," Lyuba said.

Lyuba, 29, said Carter offered to send a letter on their behalf to Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin, appealing for permission to allow the Pentecostals to leave.

The Pentecostals — five Vashchenkos and a woman and child of another family — pushed past Soviet guards outside the U.S. embassy on June 27, 1978, and sought asylum.

They have not been able to leave the embassy because, once on Soviet territory, they would almost certainly be arrested.

The Vashchenkos have 10 more children at home in Chernogorsk, Siberia, and the hunger strikers have said they will call off their fast if the 10 are allowed to emigrate to the United States.

They have also said they would rather die from a hunger strike than surrender to Soviet authorities or continue living in their one room in the embassy basement.

The embassy has said that under no circumstances will any of the family be allowed to die in the compound. But as long as the hunger strikers are not in grave condition, they will not be forced to leave either, a spokesman said.

Divers Retrieve More Bodies From Potomac Jetliner Wreckage

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Feeling their way past jagged debris and treacherous ice, divers pulled 30 bodies from the crumpled wreckage of an Air Florida jetliner Saturday and then turned to trying to find a way to raise the tail section that includes the flight recorders.

But after one try at lifting the tail section, which also included a large portion of the fuselage, the recovery team postponed further efforts. Another attempt was expected — but not certain — on Sunday after the arrival of a more powerful crane.

Throughout the day, the diving teams focused their search on the rear section since that part of the wreckage contained the cockpit voice and flight data recorders critical to the investigation of Wednesday's crash that killed 78 people.

The divers first emptied the rear section of bodies to bring the total number of bodies recovered from the plane since the crash to 47.

Then divers began to attach cables to the section, but quickly ran into trouble. When darkness and 22-mph winds made it impossible to attach the cables properly the effort was abandoned for the night.

Meanwhile, some federal safety officials were concerned that salvage operations might be impossible Sunday because of forecast high temperatures only in the teens. They emphasized, however, that no decision had been made on what to do Sunday.

"We're taking everything on a slow, controlled basis," Coast Guard Cmdr. Mike Taylor, who heads the diving operation, told reporters.

Shugart earlier suggested the salvage effort "may go as long as two to three weeks" because of visibility near zero underwater and danger to divers from sharp, moving pieces of wreckage and ice.

The Boeing 737 jet, bound for Florida, hit a busy commuter bridge spanning the Potomac River after taking off from National Airport. Seventy-eight people were killed, including four motorists caught on the bridge. Only five persons aboard the plane were rescued.

Federal investigators said the recorders, so-called "black boxes" housed in the tail section to provide a history of the final minutes before the plane crashed, are critical in determine why the plane failed to gain proper altitude.

"Getting this section is critical, we've got to know what was going on in the cockpit," said Francis McAdams, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board who is heading the investigation.

Danger from moving pieces of wreckage and ice as well as the poor visibility has slowed the salvage operation. "The diver is essentially moving along the bottom, encountering things, feeling it, and trying to figure out what it is," Navy Lt. Cmdr. Stephen Delaplaine, a project coordinator, told reporters.

News media were kept several hundred feet from the recovery scene and not allowed to talk with the military divers. Most of the bodies recovered so far in the wreckage were found still wearing their seatbelts, although many seats were dislodged from their anchor and some were thrown away from the plane, Taylor said.

As the recovery operation dragged on, a task force of federal investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board continued to gather evidence that might uncover the cause of the Air Florida crash, the first fatal accident involving a major U.S. airline in 26 months.

"We're waiting for them to pull out the tail section," NTSB spokesman Ira Furman said.

Victims Sought Sunshine But Found Death ...

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL and HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Susan Fusco worried about the weather and wondered whether the trip was worth it. It was just another teacher's conference, after all, with a brief vacation in Tampa thrown in for a sweetener.

Susan Fusco was afraid of flying, said her husband, Gene. "We had called Air Florida to see if we could get a refund on the ticket, but they said the fare was not refundable. So rather than lose the money my wife decided to go ahead."

Susan Fusco died while her husband was driving her to the airport. Air Florida Flight 90 was landing at Washington's venerable National, its intermediate stop enroute from White Plains, N.Y. to Tampa and Fort Lauderdale in Florida. The Boeing 737 was a flying link between bitter winter and warm sunshine. Flight 90 was one of the last planes to land at National before the airport was closed temporarily by the weather that so concerned Susan Fusco.

The runways were closed for snow removal and sanding at 1:38 p.m., making it obvious the Air Florida plane could not leave as scheduled at 2:15. At least twice, crews sprayed on a glycol bath to prevent ice from forming on its green, blue and white body.

During the wait, Chalmers McIlwaine Jr., was bored. He called home to Great Falls, Va. twice and told his wife "it's one helluva mess here. Sand trucks are everywhere. They're gonna board us, so once they get the runways cleared, we can go."

"Chalmers, is it safe?" asked Bonnie, his wife.

"I sure hope so, Hon, but they should know what they're doing."

Chalmers McIlwaine died. The 14th Street bridge between Washington and its Virginia suburbs — actually three bridges, one carrying traffic north, the other two south — was acrawl with cars as thousands of federal workers, released early because of the snowstorm, headed for home. Airman Terence Bell was on the Washington-bound span and so were Marcus Stein and Air Force Sgt. Jerome Lancaster.

Bell, Stein and Lancaster lived to tell what happened.

At 2:53 p.m. National Airport reopened and planes flew northward out of the snow, over the Potomac River and the 14th Street bridge three-quarters of a mile off the end of Runway 36. The runway, the longest at National, was sized for the propeller age. It is only 6,870 feet long.

Flight 90 pulled away from its terminal at 3:40 p.m. to take its place on the runway. At 4 p.m. the tower told pilot Larry Wheaton "You're cleared for takeoff." With visibility of only a half mile and a heavy snowfall, the air controllers could not see the end of the runway.

For an airline whose fortune was built by providing low fares for people seeking the sun, Flight 90 might have been more crowded. As it was, there were 70 passengers who paid, three infants and an airline employee who didn't, and five crew members.

Seventy-nine human beings. Only five lived.

Two of them were boss and secretary, Joseph Stiley and Patricia Felch, enroute to Tampa on business. Their seats were in the smoking section, in the rear of the aircraft.

"I figured I had taken one airplane ride too many," said Stiley, a commercial pilot. "We were running out of runway. We did not have the takeoff speed. I know we did not have the speed. I've flown on 737s a lot. I knew we were out of runway and I knew when we reached that point we weren't going to make it. I think the pilot tried to abort and realized he couldn't abort and he probably did the only thing he could which is try to get it off."

Kelly Duncan, a stewardess, also lived.

"The plane started to shake and the next thing I knew I was in the water," she said.

The Potomac, normally a friendly, placid river that adds to the beauty of the nation's capital, was crusted over with ice, its surface matching the gloom of the day.

"I saw him coming in too low," said airman Bell, seeing Flight 90 from his vantage point on the northbound span of the 14th Street Bridge. "The midsection of the plane smacked the bridge. The nose went into the water and sank right away. The tail skidded off the bridge into the river where it floated atop the water for about 20 minutes."

And Marcus Stein: "The plane came over the bridge and sort of slid on top of the cars and took a few over with it. There was a lot of fire."

And Jerome Lancaster: "There was a big bang. The plane's wheel hit a truck before going into the water. I counted about six or seven who were alive, but they were mused up. We threw a rope out to one passenger."

The pilot of the twin-engine aircraft had not had time to retract the wheels, normally the first procedure after becoming airborne. A tire imprint was left on the roof of one of five automobiles struck by the airborne battering ram. Forty feet of the bridge retaining wall disappeared into the water.

The Boeing 737 then slid into the water between the northbound and southbound bridge spans. Flight 90 became a crypt for three score and fourteen humans who had been enroute to the sun.

She escaped from Auschwitz, survived the Holocaust. They were enroute to Fort Lauderdale to spend their first winter in a condominium they had bought for their retirement.

—Jane R. Burka, 37. Her mother was ill in Hallandale, Fla. She expected to be gone a week.

—Marilyn Diane Smith Nichols, 25, pregnant with her first child, but still on the job with Air Florida as a stewardess.

—Eight middle-management executives of Fairchild Industries, who specialized in satellite technology, on a confidential business trip to Tampa. One of them was Robert Essary, 50.

His widow, Jacqueline, said her husband had sensed something the night before. "Bob wanted to discuss death and what I should do if anything ever happened to him. I didn't want to discuss death. But he kept bringing it up as if he knew something was going to happen, something about getting his life in order and making out a will. I encouraged him to forget that."

Dr. Willia D. Liddle Jr., often talked about death with his wife, Betty. She recalled that "he wanted to be cremated and wanted to have a memorial service with just friends and then wanted everybody to come back to the house. We planned this in a rather joking way."

At 4:04 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 13, 1982, Liddle was one of 74 people who died aboard Flight 90 in the first crash of a U.S. commercial airliner in 26 months, the first crash since the air controllers strike and firing, the first crash in the history of Air Florida, and the first crash at National Airport since 1949.

Incredibly, under the circumstances, the death toll on the bridge was only four.

Process Of Reapportionment Creating Turmoil

Legislators Change Districts Under Federal Eye

By LINDA KUNTZ LOGAN
United Press International

Population shifts last decade have Southern lawmakers playing a political map game that could leave some congressmen representing districts that look like birds and lizards and others fighting for their political lives.

States are required to realign their political districts after every census to make sure they meet the U.S. Supreme Court's "one man for one vote" mandate.

It is a delicate, emotional, complex and sometimes grueling process that can make or break careers, change the political balance of power and ultimately determine the way citizens are served by their elected officials.

And in many Southern states, the political remapping must be approved by the Justice Department under the pre-clearance section of the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

The reapportionment process got so heated in Illinois last summer that legislators got into a fistfight over political boundaries.

In the South — so far — it's been more genteel, but reapportionment has created turmoil in several Dixie states.

Tennessee, which gained a congressman in the census count, has nearly completed its remapping. Florida, which gained four seats in Congress, hasn't even started.

The redistricting plans drawn by North and South Carolina legislators were rejected by the Justice Department.

Georgia, Mississippi and Alabama are awaiting rulings on their plans.

North Carolina state Rep. Robert A. Jones, D-Rutherford, said reapportionment "has been on everyone's minds." And

'Captain' Loses In Time Change

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Captain Kangaroo" may have hopped across the television time schedule once too often.

Thanks to the latest shift in the Captain's starting time — to 6:30 a.m. — local CBS affiliates in some of the nation's largest cities are dropping the longest running children's program altogether.

From New Orleans to Tucson and Salt Lake City to Miami, Baltimore and Denver, local CBS affiliates say the CBS network has changed the Captain's starting time once too often.

"This is a slap in the face by CBS to American families," says Peggy Charren, the founder and president of Action for Children's Television (ACT). "The network keeps putting out these great press releases about how they're keeping the Captain on the air. But it's just not true."

The problems faced by "Captain Kangaroo" stem from CBS' desire to bolster the competitive position of its "Morning" news program.

Last September, "Captain Kangaroo" gave up a half-hour of its hour time slot to "Morning," simultaneously changing its name to "Wake Up." Starting Monday, the name changes back to "Captain Kangaroo," but the program will be transmitted to CBS affiliates in the Eastern, Central and Pacific time zones at 6:30 a.m.

"Morning" will then expand for the first time ever to a full two hours, from 7 a.m. to 9 a.m., matching the air times for NBC's "Today" and ABC's "Good Morning America."

According to a spot check by The Associated Press, many of CBS' affiliates across the country intend to accept the new lineup and keep Bob Keeshan, alias the Captain, on the air — even if it does mean starting at 6:30 a.m.

But the survey also supports Mrs. Charren's contentions that while CBS may continue to offer the program, some very large affiliates won't be carrying it.

And in some cases, particularly in the Rocky Mountain time zone where the program arrives from CBS at 5:30 a.m. local time, stations are opting for even earlier starting times.

self-interest, he says, "is a predominant factor in any legislator's thinking process."

Despite his objections that Tennessee's new redistricting plan "arrogantly ignores the convenience of voters," Republican Gov. Lamar Alexander allowed it to become law without his signature.

"The 3rd District, fixed to help Mrs. (Marilyn Lloyd) Bouquard, looks like a giraffe," Alexander said. "The 4th District, composed of what Congressman (Albert Jr.) Gore and Mrs. Bouquard didn't want, looks like a salamander."

Problems in Tennessee, which will have nine congressmen, appear minor compared to other Southern states.

Justice Department rejection of North Carolina's reapportionment of its 11 congressional districts may force a delay in primary elections scheduled for May 4. Tar Heel legislators plan to meet in special session in late January to try to resolve the situation.

After meeting almost 10 months, South Carolina lawmakers failed to agree on a plan for redistricting their six seats. A joint legislative committee finally produced a shaky compromise Dec. 18, but political leaders predicted it won't receive full approval.

Florida's Legislature will convene Monday instead of in April to give lawmakers enough time to fit four new seats into their reapportionment plan. Florida will have 19 congressmen when they're through.

Florida House Speaker Ralph Haben, a Democrat considering a bid for one of the new congressional seats, says the Legislature won't have much flexibility in drawing up the districts to benefit one party.

Florida's biggest population growth was in Republican areas, so GOP candidates may have an edge if district lines are drawn in their favor. But Democrats dominate the Florida Legislature and Democratic Gov. Bob Graham has veto power over any congressional plan.

It's no surprise, then, that political leaders are predicting a battle.

More squabbling and filibustering are expected in South Carolina this year, where a Democratic-controlled Legislature convened Jan. 12 to consider a plan for its Republican-controlled congressional delegation.

Preliminary indications are the so-called "Eagle Plan" approved by a legislative committee in mid-December won't fly. It's called the "Eagle Plan" because the map outline of the 2nd District looks like a giant bird.

The plan would force two incumbents — Reps. Floyd

Spence, a Republican, and Kenneth Holland, a Democrat — to run against each other.

"I think some members of the state Legislature have been misled on what the plan will do," Holland said.

"I'd call it a 'turkey plan,' or a 'buzzard plan,' or a 'chicken plan,'" Holland muttered. "I'll tell you what I plan to do — I plan to carve it up and just roast it."

Alabama's population changed little, so there were few shifts in its remapping plan and political leaders don't anticipate any major changes in the state's congressional delegation of four Democrats and three Republicans — all white.

"Unless they set out to do something drastic, there was not a hell of a lot they could have done," said Louis G. Greene, the director of the Alabama Reference Service.

Georgia's census figures didn't change the state's 10 congressional districts significantly.

Under Georgia's plan, the Atlanta area's 5th District represented by Democrat Wyche Fowler is 57.2 percent black. The other nine congressmen represent white-majority districts.

Mississippi state Rep. Tommy Campbell, D-Yazoo City, chaired a legislative committee that prepared a reapportionment plan that won easy passage during a special session last August.

"The resulting (five) districts are closer to population norms than before, and well within court guidelines," Campbell says. "The effect on elections, as a result of redistricting, should be minimal."

Besides congressional reapportionment, Southern lawmakers must also realign state House and Senate districts to reflect population changes.

In North Carolina, the state Senate reapportionment plan was rejected by the Justice Department and lawmakers went to work on another. A plan for the state House is being reviewed by the Justice Department.

Justice Department officials rejected the remapping plan for the South Carolina House and NAACP leaders took it to court, arguing it should provide more predominantly black districts.

Both houses of the Georgia Legislature were redrawn, with the mostly black districts in the Senate increasing from two to eight. Predominantly black districts in the House, however, would drop from 30 to 28.

Black legislators protested.

"We believe all of this is clear evidence of retrogression in regard to minority voting strength in Georgia," said Legislative Black Caucus chairman Rep. Billy Randall, D-Macon.

In Florida, political leaders are anticipating problems changing the Legislature's old multi-member districts to single-member districts.

Another touchy question facing Florida lawmakers is whether state senators elected to four-year terms in 1980 must run again this year because reapportionment may alter their districts.

Mississippi's lawmakers will consider a plan legislative reapportionment plan, but don't anticipate any serious problems because a joint committee's plan kept existing districts much the same.

A legislator filed suit to block the Tennessee state Senate plan, and that has not been resolved. Tennessee's House plan has not been challenged.

Jones, co-chairman of North Carolina's House redistricting committee, believes self-interests dominate any reapportionment decisions.

"When a legislator walks up to a map, where do you think his eyes are going to rest? On his district. And, when he draws a map, he starts with his own district, then goes to the other 99 counties."

State By State

By United Press International

Here is the status of reapportionment in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee following the 1980 census:

ALABAMA

Alabama has seven congressmen and gained none in the census. The Legislature's reapportionment plan reflects only modest shifts. No major changes in the delegation are expected. The plan is being reviewed by the Justice Department.

FLORIDA

Of the Southern states, Florida gains the most congressional seats — four — for a total of 19. But state lawmakers haven't worked on reapportionment. The legislative session has been moved up from April to Monday, specifically to get a head start on redistricting. The census indicates the Sunshine State's biggest population growth was in Republican strongholds.

GEORGIA

The Peach State has 10 members in its congressional delegation, no change over the 1970 census. Georgia legislators are awaiting Justice Department approval of their plan. Only one district — the Atlanta-area 5th represented by Democrat Wyche Fowler — contains a black majority.

MISSISSIPPI

Mississippi legislators are awaiting Justice Department approval of their plan, which one lawmaker says is closer to population norms than the one approved after the 1970 census. No seats are being added for the state, which has five congressmen. Rep. Tommy Campbell of Yazoo City, the chairman of the reapportionment panel, says redistricting should have little effect on the 1982 elections.

NORTH CAROLINA

The Tar Heel state has 11 congressional districts. It gained none in the census. The Justice Department rejected one reapportionment plan, which could delay primary elections scheduled for May 4. Lawmakers have called a special session for late January to attempt to resolve the situation.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Palmetto State has six congressional districts and gained none in the new census. After a nine-month session last year, lawmakers remained bitterly divided over reapportionment. A joint legislative committee finally approved a compromise plan in December. It would pit incumbent Reps. Ken Holland, a Democrat, and Floyd Spence, a Republican, against each other.

TENNESSEE

The Volunteer State gained one congressional seat in the census for a total of nine. Despite objections the legislature's redistricting plan "arrogantly ignores the convenience of voters," Republican Gov. Lamar Alexander let it become law without his signature.

Inmate Extends Execution Date With Turnaround

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — The execution of James Hutchins will be delayed from 12 to 24 months by Hutchins' decision to continue appealing his conviction for the 1979 slayings of two deputies and a highway patrolman, a state Justice Department official said Saturday.

Hutchins, scheduled to die in the gas chamber Jan. 22, had asked to be executed in documents filed last week with the state Supreme Court, but he retracted that request Friday and said he wants his lawyers to continue efforts to overturn his conviction.

A Superior Court judge in Forsyth County Friday rejected a request for a stay of execution and a hearing on a request for a post-conviction hearing for Hutchins.

Defense lawyers Roger Smith and Wade Smith of Raleigh will take their request for a stay to the state Supreme Court Monday.

The Justice Department official, who asked not to be identified, said he expects the stay to be granted because Hutchins has changed his mind about going to the gas chamber.

"It's automatic," the spokesman said. "It (the execution) just simply will not happen Friday. It's still 12 to 18 to 24 months off, assuming his requests for a new trial continue to be denied."

Hutchins' conviction and death sentence for the May 1979 slayings of two Rutherford County deputies and a highway patrolman was upheld by the state Supreme Court last July.

But his lawyers can continue their appeal through the process of post-conviction hearings in state courts and habeas corpus proceedings in federal courts, delaying the execution indefinitely.

Even if Hutchins had not retracted his earlier request to be sent to the gas chamber, the Justice Department official said the execution probably would have been delayed until the courts could determine if he was mentally competent to make such a decision.

Defense lawyer Roger Smith declined to discuss Hutchins' reasons for changing his mind.

In a handwritten letter dated Jan. 6 and filed last week with the Supreme Court, Hutchins said, "I do wish the death sentences to be carry (sic) out on said date."

His retraction, also handwritten, said, "Since mailing that (earlier) letter, I have since reconsidered and I do desire that all available post-conviction remedies be pursued. It is my desire to obtain a stay of execution."

The Smiths, who were appointed to handle Hutchins' appeal, contend he received ineffective defense counsel during his trial.

Hutchins was charged in the deaths of deputies Owen Messersmith and Roy Huskey, the brother of Rutherford County Sheriff Damon Huskey, and Trooper R.L. Peterson.

Authorities said Hutchins became involved in an argument with his daughter over the spiking of punch for a high school graduation party and the two deputies were sent to the house. They were shot as they arrived.

Hutchins fled and his car was later stopped by Peterson, who was also shot and killed.

'Mad Dog Killer' Says Born Again

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — Self-described "mad dog killer" Marion Albert Pruett — who has admitted to five murders but been convicted of none — says he's found religion in the Jackson City Jail.

Pruett told a Jackson newspaper, the Jackson Daily News, he's become a born-again Christian and it's "nothing to be ashamed of."

The 32-year-old Gastonia, N.C., native has received more than 50 letters urging him to be "born again" since he entered the Jackson jail in October, the newspaper reported Saturday. Pruett has staged a short-lived hunger strike and held several jailhouse news conferences since arriving at the jail.

Pruett, who told reporters drugs turned him into a "mad dog killer," also has received eight Bibles and five New Testaments.

ACLU Hits Falwell

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Virginia chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union plans to take out newspaper advertisements criticizing the Rev. Jerry Falwell, founder of Moral Majority.

The Lynchburg-based Moral Majority has recently attacked the ACLU, and in one mailing said, among other things, that "many ACLU officials have been members of the Communist Party."

Chan Kendrick, director of the Virginia ACLU, said his organization is planning to run advertisements responding to the attack.

"We're going to make the point that in our society, it's OK to disagree with Falwell without being a sinner," Kendrick said.

The Moral Majority also criticized the ACLU's stand against tax breaks for private schools, prayer in public schools, capital punishment and a constitutional amendment to ban abortions.

Kendrick said, "It's an honor" to be singled out by the Moral Majority, which he labeled a "threat to freedom."

The Moral Majority said it is building a legal fund to counter the ACLU.

Citizen Gets His Men

BALLS CREEK, N.C. (AP) — Neither snow nor dead of night can keep Larry Drum from getting his men.

Drum single-handedly chased two men he suspected of breaking into his father's store across two snow-covered counties Thursday night and into the arms of authorities.

Drum said the incident began when he heard a burglary alarm ringing at his father's business — Drum's Television Service — about 7:45 p.m. Thursday. Looking out from his restaurant next door, Drum said he saw two men running from the television sales and repair shop to a pickup truck.

He ran after them, jumped into his Cadillac and chased them over treacherous, snow-covered backroads in Catawba and Lincoln counties into the arms of authorities.

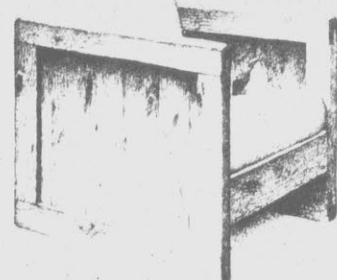

Speeds during the 39-minute chase, which started about 9 miles south of Newton, ranged from a slow-motion 5 miles an hour to a speedy 45 mph.

"I wasn't nervous until I got home, sat down and started thinking over what had happened," Drum said.

State Highway Patrolman David Jarrett said he charged Gaither Parker, 39, of Maiden, with driving under the influence of alcohol and driving with an open bottle of liquor in the truck's cab. Catawba County sheriff's deputies charged Gaither Parker and his brother, Floyd Parker, 46, also of Maiden, with breaking and entering.

INFLATION IS TAKING US ALL FOR A RIDE.

The last decade and a half has shown us some pretty hefty increases in the Consumer Price Index. Transportation, for instance, has risen in cost by 185%. The cost of staying in good health has risen 200%. Home ownership has gone through the roof. Up 250%. And everybody knows that heat rises. But 300%! Yet out of all these examples, there's one necessity that has risen so slowly...it has barely been noticeable.

Through 1981, the cost of home phone service has increased just 33%. And even though federal deregulation and inflation are pushing rates up, home service from Carolina Telephone is and will continue to be your best bargain by far.

We may all be taken for a ride...but when it comes to inflation, Carolina Telephone is trying not to keep up with the times.

Cigarette Sales Show Another Decline In N.C.

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Fewer cigarettes were sold in North Carolina last year on a per-person average, continuing a five-year trend, according to a national tobacco group.

The Tobacco Tax Council Inc., which annually compiles statistics on cigarette sales, said there were 179.3 packs sold per person in the state during the year ending last June 30.

That meant North Carolina had the third highest average consumption of cigarettes in the country, behind 254.4 packs in New Hampshire and 209.7 packs in Kentucky. It was also well above the national average of 139.4 packs per person.

But it was lower than the 187.8 packs per person sold in 1980, and far below the 1976 high of 230 packs.

North Carolina Department of Revenue officials, who collect the state's lowest-in-the-nation tax of 2 cents a pack, said they weren't sure why the decline is continuing. "We don't really know what changed it," said Revenue Secretary Mark Lynch.

Enforcement of a 1979 federal law making it a felony to smuggle cigarettes across state lines to avoid paying taxes in higher-tax states has been credited with reducing cigarette sales here.

But some officials have expressed concern that the Reagan administration's announced plans to disband the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms — which enforces the federal anti-smuggling law — could lead to a resumption in large-scale cigarette smuggling.

John Westra, ATF agent-in-charge in the Charlotte office, said the bureau tentatively is scheduled to be disbanded April 1, and that tobacco cases will be handled by the U.S. Customs Service.

But he said it is uncertain whether Customs will continue to actively pursue cigarette-smuggling investigations, and that ATF is trying to turn over much of its cigarette investigations to those high-tax states that thought they were losing money to smuggling.

An intensive two-year federal investigation in North Carolina — in which as many as 40 ATF agents were working on smuggling cases in the state — ended last year with agents concluding smuggling by organized crime was not the major factor officials in other states had charged.

"We found the big tax loss (in other states) could not be attributed to big-time smuggling of cigarettes," Westra said.

The Tobacco Tax Council, based in Richmond, Va., stated no reason for the per capita decline in its report, "The Tax Burden On Tobacco."

But it said the lowest average price for a pack of cigarettes in the country as of November was 55½ cents in North Carolina. The high was 85.6 cents in Connecticut and the national average was 69.7 cents.

Total cigarette sales, measured by taxes collected, were about the same as the previous year in North Carolina.

The council said 1.053 billion packs were sold in North Carolina during the year, a rise of only 400,000 packs over 1980. The total was lower than any previous year since 1971.

Nationwide, 29.9 billion packs were sold. Total federal taxes paid on cigarettes amounted to $2.48 billion, and total state taxes amounted to $3.96 billion, it said.

North Carolina's net cigarette tax collections were almost unchanged, at $17,997,000 last year, up $7,000, according to the council.

The council said without any taxes, cigarettes would retail for 38 cents a pack.

Larry Rogers, head of the state's license and excise tax division, said cigarette tax collections have increased less than 1 percent since last July.

He said the federal contraband law has been the main deterrent to sales of North Carolina's low-tax cigarettes, apparently ending cigarette smuggling by organized crime. But North Carolina's sales will remain above the national average, he said, because so many tourists passing through the state buy cartons to take home to their high-tax states.

Purchases under 300 cartons for out-of-state use don't violate the law.

"You're going to have some tourist passing through the state, and we think that's really the main reason making that higher (than the national average)," he said.

SUNNY SOUTH? — What looks like a frozen tundra of the Northland is in fact a snow-covered hill in western North Carolina, near Morganton. After two consecutive days of snowfall and a week of sub-freezing temperatures, cross-country skiers such as this Morganton woman found that winter has finally arrived in the South. (AP Laserphoto)

Wintry Blast Hits State

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

North Carolinians, still recovering from the first major snowfall of the winter, braced for another wintry blast Saturday as a cold front arrived with bitter cold temperatures and more snow.

The cold air mass was expected to bring light rain to the Outer Banks, snow mixed with freezing rain for the Piedmont and up to 4 inches of snow in the northern mountains, where travelers advisories were issued Saturday morning after the snow began. Temperatures were expected to range from 10 below zero in the northern mountains to the teens in the east.

North Carolinians were just recovering from cold temperatures that began last weekend and digging out from up to 10 inches of snow in the Rosman area. The mercury climbed high enough Friday to melt some of the snow, with highs ranging from 31 in Boone to 36 in Greensboro.

The state Highway Patrol reported Saturday that most main roads were clear, but a Patrol spokesman said there still were problems with ice, especially in the extreme northeast and the Asheville and Catawba County areas.

"We've still got a lot of ice out there," said George Rimmer in the Patrol's Raleigh communications division. "It's going to take several hours of warm temperatures at least above freezing to melt some of this stuff down it's packed so tight on the road."

State Highway Patrol spokesman Mack Dollar said drivers should continue to use precautions, keeping their speed down and allowing plenty of distance between their vehicles and others. He recommended chains and snow tires for secondary-road driving.

Four people have been killed in North Carolina traffic accidents since the snow began, Rimmer said. The state also has had 80 injuries in 62 highway accidents investigated by the Patrol.

M.C. Adams, maintenance and equipment manager for the state Department of Transportation, said 5,000 Division of Motor Vehicles employees would be manning 2,000 trucks and 600 motor graders Saturday to spread salt and scrape the snow from the roads. But he said salting would become ineffective once temperatures drop below 20 degrees.

The week of wintry weather has claimed 20 lives, most of them victims of exposure. One person — 27-year-old Thomas John Tostola of Belmont — was killed when his sled collided with a car in Gastonia.

In a special statement, the National Weather Service urged North Carolinians to prepare for the frigid conditions.

"There were many problems with the last arctic cold front ... and this one is going to create the same kind of problems," the statement said. "Numerous cars had problems with gas lines freezing but one of the biggest problems was water lines in homes freezing. Make sure your outside water faucets are cut off and double-check that antifreeze in your car."

"It would also be a good idea to have gasoline antifreeze in your car tank."

Weather Delays N.C. Cheese Shipments

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Snow and cold weather have the U.S. Department of Agriculture's distribution of more than 1 million pounds of surplus cheese to North Carolina and South Carolina at a standstill.

The 5-pound hunks of processed American and cheddar cheese are part of a federal government surplus to be dispensed nationwide to the elderly and needy. All 22 truckloads and 777,760 pounds of North Carolina's supply was scheduled to arrive Saturday.

But snow and ice intervened, causing the USDA's delivery schedule to fall apart.

"Uh, I don't think it's very well, realistic for anyone to expect to get the cheese in the next few days," said Nena Bratiamu, assistant director of the USDA's regional nutritional program in Atlanta.

"We had a lot of interest in it Tuesday. But the only thing I have heard about cheese since the snow began has been on the Johnny Carson show. We expect the inquiries to crank right back up, though," she said.

North Carolina officials met the Friday deadline set by the USDA for submitting a distribution plan for the cheese. South Carolina officials had to postpone a Thursday meeting to complete the state's plans for dividing up 408,200 pounds of cheese because of the bad weather.

The USDA had promised to begin delivering the cheese as soon as the state plans for distribution were completed.

The North Carolina plan calls for the cheese to be stored in state warehouses in Salisbury and Butner, then transferred to the individual counties as soon as possible. What happens after that is up in the air. Each county has until next Thursday to submit its local distribution plan to the state.

"At that point we'll be ready to start making some cheese sandwiches," said Jay P. Davis, director of food distribution for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

"I'll be surprised if we get it by Feb. 16," Davis added. "Our plan is probably sitting in a post office box in Atlanta."

Ms. Bratiamu said that's probably true. Of the eight Southeastern states handled from her office, only Kentucky had officially placed its order for 13 truckloads of cheese.

Davis said North Carolina has set a distribution rate under which families of one to three people will get one 5-pound block of cheese, four to six people get two blocks, seven to eight get three blocks and nine or more get four blocks.

Those eligible would be chosen by income and other criteria used to issue food stamps and other forms of federal aid, Davis said.

Editors Protest Postal Hikes

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Editors of several North Carolina religious publications are organizing a coalition to try to eliminate a postage rate hike that boosted their bills by 150 percent and more.

Mailing costs increased last Monday, about a month after Congress voted to accept President Reagan's suggestion that a scheduled phase-out of subsidies for second- and third-class non-profit publications be ended immediately.

Officials had been reducing the subsidy gradually since 1970 and would have ended the subsidy in 1987. The House agreed to continue the phase-out while the Senate balked. The phaseout was ended by a conference committee.

Marse Grant, editor of the Baptist publication called the Biblical Recorder, said he's organizing a coalition of editors to appeal to North Carolina congressmen in hopes of regaining at least part of the subsidy.

He said most of his peers agree the subsidy should end but they were counting on that happening in 1987. Grant suggested the two sides compromise and continue the phase-out through 1985.

"Church publishing as a rule exists on a hand-to-mouth basis," said Chris Walters-Bugbee, editor of the Episcopal church's Communicant. "There's never any surplus. We hope there's some sort of rollback in the spring."

Nationally, there have been estimates that as many as one-seventh of the non-profit organizations entitled to the subsidy may fold without it. But Grant and Walters-Bugbee said they did not expect their publications to go under.

They said they are considering various measures to help their financial status.

"I'm going to recommend to my board that we cut back to three times a week (instead of four)," Grant said. The Recorder's bill to mail 114,000 copies jumped from $2,500 to $6,500 a week.

"This may necessitate a cutback (from 10 editions) to nine times a year," Bugbee said. The cost of mailing a single edition of the Communicant rose from $300 to $800.

Bill Abel, business manager of the North Carolina Catholic, said mailing costs rose from $500 to $1,200. He said the publication is considering selling more advertising space.

"We're going to stay in business," Grant said, noting that Saturday was the Biblical Recorder's 149th birthday. "The Recorder has been through some tough times before — like the Civil War."

Duke Chapel Drive Begins

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Duke University has begun fund-raising efforts to raise $2 million for operations and maintenance of the Duke Chapel, school officials said Saturday.

"The needs of the chapel are a top priority for Duke," said school President Terry Sanford. "Unlike parish congregations, Duke Chapel does not have a constituency of formal church members from which to draw money."

The Rev. Robert T. Young, university minister, said the 50-year-old chapel has "really pressing and on-going needs."

"Essential repairs and restorations are needed," he said. "Preventative and preservative measures must be taken to preserve the artistry and quality of the carvings and of the organs, and there are ongoing maintenance needs."

"This is the first fund-raising effort ever conducted by the university to provide for the ministry and the care and maintenance of the building," Young said.

The chapel development fund is seeking $1 million to support the chapel ministry and its programs; $750,000 for preservation and protection of the facility; and $250,000 for safety improvements and "enhancements."

Dr. William G. Anlyan, Duke's vice president for health affairs, will head the fund drive committee.

Young said there are fewer ministers on the chapel staff than there were 10 years ago, even though the overall ministry is expanding. The ministers' duties include worship services, choral programs, organ concerts, counseling, funeral and memorial services and weddings.

Tar Heels 'Steal' By Blue Devils

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM — Top-ranked North Carolina combined deadly shooting with a bit of thievery Saturday night to break open a tight basketball game and rush to a 73-63 victory over Duke.

The Tar Heels found themselves down by a single point as both teams headed to the locker room. But with the opening inbound play of the second half they turned into a bunch of bandits and converted the thefts into an 18-4 scoring spree.

Michael Jordan scored 19 points, including 5 of 7 shots from the field in the final period. James Worthy hit both shots he took in the period and wound up with 17. Jimmy Black, who had three steals, scored 14 points and was praised by coach Dean Smith.

"I thought the key was the beginning of the second half," Smith said. "Jimmy Black's defense got us going then. He played a great game."

Smith was concerned about his team's first-half defense, which allowed the Blue Devils to get many back-door baskets. But the Tar Heel defense stiffened in the final 20 minutes and he credited Worthy and Sam Perkins with the difference.

"Worthy and Perkins played better in the second half. They were more alert," Smith said.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski felt his team played with great intensity but added that Jordan helped lead the Tar Heels to their 13th victory without a loss.

"We had a period there in the second half where they really shot well — they shot well the entire game," he said. "And Jordan was unbelievable. He was great for the entire game, but for a two-to-three-minute stretch, he pulled it away from them."

With the Tar Heels trailing 32-31 at intermission, Black grabbed the opening inbounds pass of the second period from Duke's Vince Taylor and got off a pass to Jordan, who was fouled. Jordan connected on the free throws to tie the score at 32.

A basket by Black and 3 points by Worthy gave the Tar Heels a 37-34 lead in the first three minutes of the half. But Taylor scored two consecutive baskets and tied the game at 38 with 16:06 remaining.

Black's jumper and a 3-point play by Perkins opened a 5-point North Carolina lead, 43-38. Duke's Mike Tissaw narrowed the gap on a drive to the basket. The teams then traded buckets and Carolina held a 45-42 lead.

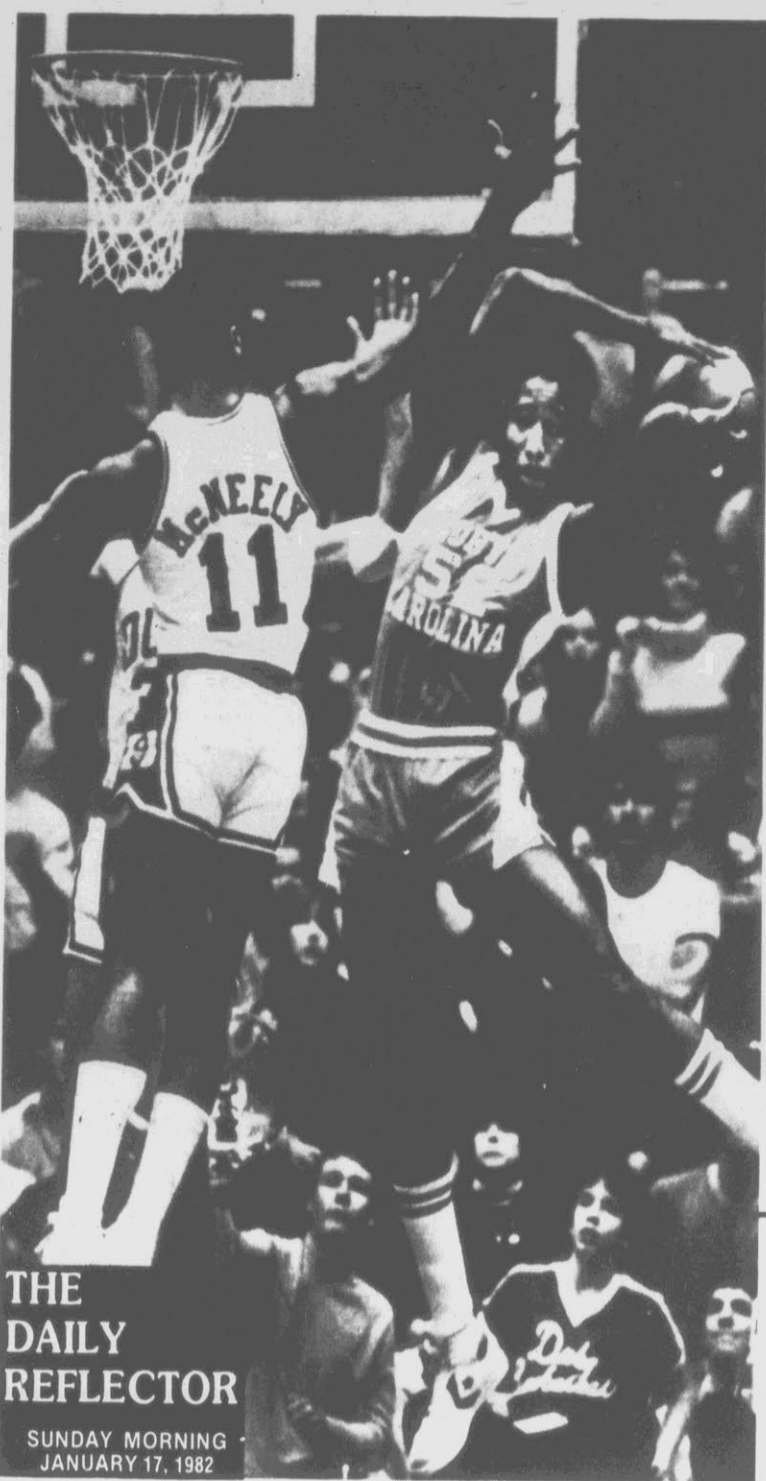

North Carolina then erupted for its game-clinching spurt as Jordan scored 8 points on short jumpers and Matt Doherty added another bucket. When Krzyzewski was whistled for a technical foul during a time out, Black hit one of the two free throws.

'Gods' Aid 'Pack Past Deacons

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State got a little help from above and from guard Derek Whittenburg, whose two free throws with 3 seconds left gave the 12th-ranked Wolfpack a 52-50 victory over Wake Forest Saturday.

N.C. State coach Jim Valvano credited heavenly intervention with helping the Wolfpack as it raised its record to 13-2, 4-1 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Today things went our way and I said last year that we had enough one-pointers that went the other way," Valvano said. "I just feel the basketball gods have been kind to us this year."

Whittenburg has been kind to the Wolfpack too, especially in the final 10 minutes Saturday. He led all scorers with 18 points, 12 in the final 9:23, as the Wolfpack roared from an eight-point deficit.

Valvano said putting Whittenburg on the line in a must situation was part of his strategy. He said he that his club would "live or die going to the line" with the 6-1 junior.

"When that doesn't work, we'll go back to the drawing board," Valvano said. "When he does it right and hits the free throws, we look smart."

Whittenburg, eight of nine from the foul line, had one free throw taken away when he took too much time. He took no such chances in the closing seconds.

"The call took me out of my rhythm," Whittenburg said. "I concentrated on the same things I had been, but I took my four bounces a little earlier."

Wake Forest, which fell to 11-3, 3-1 in the ACC, let a 46-38 lead slip through its hands in the final 10 minutes.

Whittenburg hit two straight 20-footers, Harold Thompson drove the baseline and then Whittenburg took a pass from Thompson to create a tie at 46.

Sidney Lowe put N.C. State on top with two free throws at 5:04 but the Deacons' Guy Morgan quickly retied the score on a 12-footer. N.C. State then worked more than two minutes before Whittenburg slipped and was called for travelling with 2:35 to go.

Center Jim Johnstone hit both ends of a 1-and-1 to give Wake Forest its last lead, 50-48.

Whittenburg was fouled and hit two free throws at 1:26 to set up his winning foul shot.

Lendl Beats McEnroe In Volvo Semifinals

NEW YORK (AP) — Being No.1 in the world is like being the fastest gun in the West. Everybody wants to shoot you down.

"I guess every time you walk out onto the court, your ranking is threatened. That's your responsibility as No.1," John McEnroe said after he was eliminated by Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia in the semifinals of the $400,000 Volvo Masters tennis tournament Saturday.

"Today was definitely not one of my better outings," said McEnroe, the world's top player but seeded second here. "There's nothing I can say good about myself. I wasn't in the points and I wasn't in the match. He was in control of the play today and he deserved to win."

Lendl, top-seeded in this eight-man finale to the 1981 Volvo Grand Prix circuit, had little problems as he methodically and efficiently crushed McEnroe 6-4, 6-2 to advance into Sunday's title game against Vitas Gerulaitis.

Gerulaitis reached the finals by ousting Eliot Teltscher 7-5, 4-6, 6-2. Lendl beat Gerulaitis 4-6, 7-5, 6-2 earlier in the week during the round-robin portion of the event.

"I think he's playing better than last year," Lendl said of Gerulaitis. "We had a close match on Wednesday. I hope the outcome's the same."

Sunday's final, scheduled to begin at 3 p.m., EST, will be telecast nationally on CBS. The winner pockets $100,000, while the runner-up receives $50,000.

The 21-year-old Lendl, ranked third in the world, is going after his seventh consecutive tournament title. He has won 35 straight matches.

Lendl won the coin toss and elected to receive, a decision that proved to be pivotal.

McEnroe immediately double-faulted the first point. And by the time next five points had been played, the reigning Wimbledon and U.S. Open champion had double-faulted twice more and had dropped his serve.

It was the only break of the first set, but it was enough for Lendl, whose serve was threatened only once, that in the sixth game when McEnroe pulled to deuce.

The pattern was utilized again by Lendl in the second set as he broke McEnroe again in the opening game. This time it was Lendl's powerful ground strokes, not McEnroe's mistakes, that broke serve.

Lendl jumped out to a love-40 lead, gave up one point when he returned a serve long, then won the game when McEnroe netted a half-volley.

When Lendl served in the second game, McEnroe won the first point. But riding his booming serve and his nearly flawless ground game, Lendl reeled off the next four points, closing out the game with an ace to take a 2-0 lead.

McEnroe wasn't out of the match by any means at that time. But, when he dropped his next serve, it was virtually over.

The left-hander from New York had to battle from behind in the game, just as he had to do all day long. But again, it was a battle that he was to lose, a portent of things to come.

Three times he fought off break point. Three times he pulled to deuce, the third time with an ace. But Lendl jumped on McEnroe's serve, took the advantage when the McEnroe

Terps Hold Off Tigers

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland blew another big lead, but this time it was Dutch Morley to the rescue.

The senior guard scored six points in the final 2:46 and set up another basket with a steal as the Terps held off a furious second-half Clemson rally and beat the Tigers 62-57 Saturday.

"Morley is a good leader," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster, who has a 3-12 lifetime mark against Maryland. "I think he's the most important player on the team. They'd be in trouble without him."

After Maryland rolled up a 35-22 halftime lead, Coach Lefty Driesell said he reminded the Terps that they led Virginia by 10 at halftime and blew it.

"I told them to play aggressively on defense, get good shots and let's win it by 26," Driesell said. "But the first thing I knew it was tied up."

"I was proud of the way we played in the second half," Foster said, "but it's the fourth time this year we put ourselves in the hole in the first half."

Foster started freshmen Milan Belich and David Shaffer in the second half, replacing Joe Ward and Fred Gilliam, who finished scoreless while playing a combined 20 minutes.

"I'm pleased with the way the young kids played," Foster said. "Maybe we're finding out who wants to play."

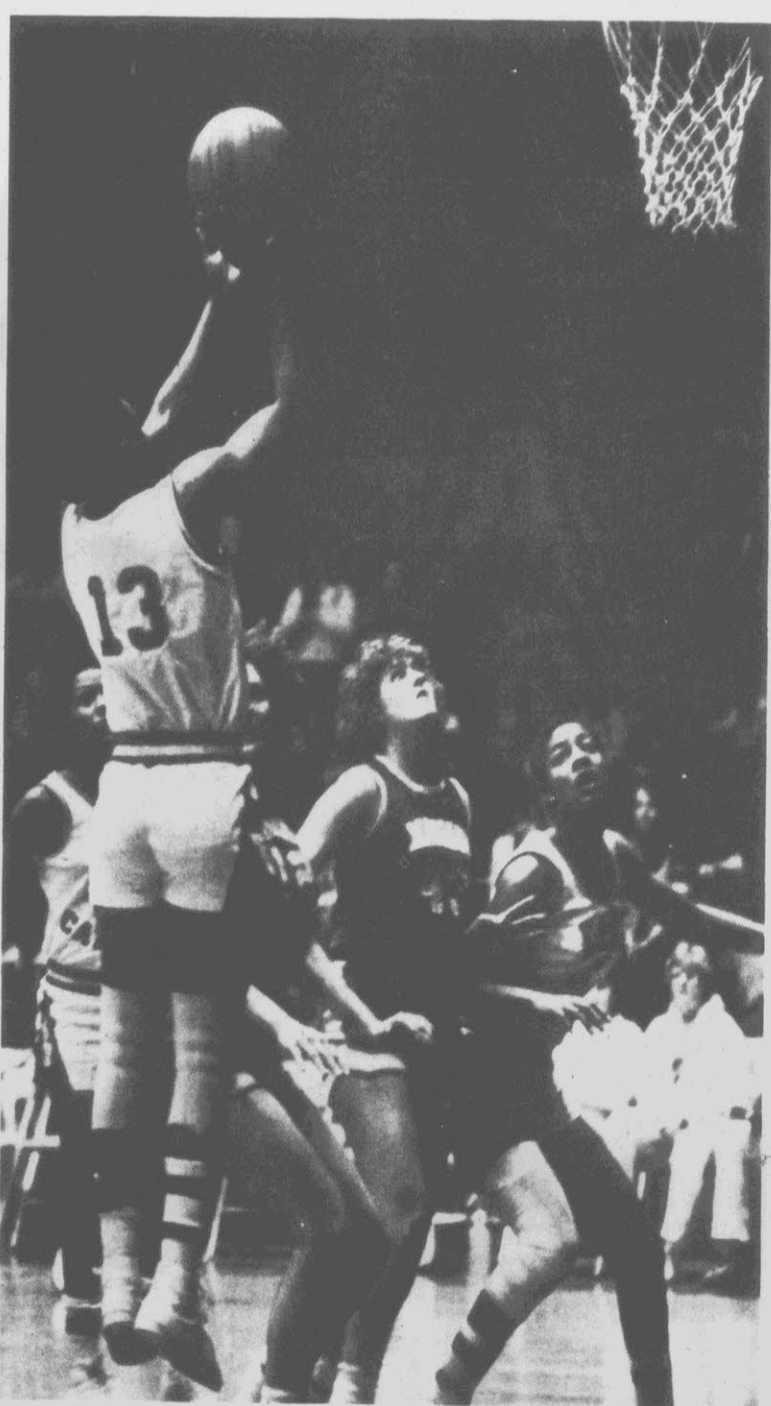

Morley had seven assists, three steals, and added the last of his 12 points with four free throws in the final 29 seconds.

Foster For Two

Jones Sparks ECU With 23 Points

Lady Pirates Rout JMU, 90-60

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Led by Sam Jones' 23 points, East Carolina had five players in double figures as the Lady Pirates rolled to a 90-60 victory over James Madison University in the final game of the ECU-Duke Doubleheader last night in Minges Coliseum.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Lady Pirates, who climbed above the .500 mark at 8-7 for the first time since the opening game. Madison, which topped Duke, 76-75, in the first night's competition, is now 4-8.

Duke rolled over Campbell in the other Saturday night game, 83-64. (See story on Page B-3.)

Jones, who was the Pirate leader for the second straight night, hit on 8 of 15 shots from the floor and added seven of eight free throws. She also pulled seven rebounds and dished out nine assists to pace the win.

Fran Hooks, who has come on to claim the point guard position, turned in her best performance, scoring a career high 15 points on five of seven shots from the floor and a perfect 5-for-5 free throw mark. She came up with six assists for the evening.

"We showed a great deal of control tonight," Coach Cathy Andruzzi said. "This was a great game to watch from our standpoint. James Madison is a good team; they have big kids, and we knew that we couldn't get in foul trouble against them. We had to take them out of their game."

And that's what the Pirates did, rushing up and down the court, making the fast break work when it was available, and playing almost error-free ball.

"Eleven turnovers? That's great. And we only had four of those in the second half. A super, super job," Andruzzi said. Andruzzi pointed out that the Lady Pirates had worked only briefly on an offense to combat Madison's 1-3-1 zone, and it worked to perfection, as ECU hit on 52.2 percent of its shots. "We shot better at the foul line, too," Andruzzi noted of the team's 74.1 percent effort. "We can still improve on that, however." East Carolina trailed only once in the game, at 2-0 as Deana Meadows scored from underneath after two minutes of play. But Mary Denkler scored from inside to tie it up and Lillian Barnes hit a baseline jumper for the lead at the 17:06 mark. Jones and Hooks followed with baskets to run the lead out to 8-2 over the next minute and a half, and after the Duchesses hit once more, Denkler and Hooks both scored to up the lead to 12-4.

Madison got baskets from Betsy Blöse and Beth Hamilton to pull back within five at 17-12, but that was as close as it got the rest of the way.

East Carolina came back with four straight baskets, two by Loraine Foster and one each by Hooks and Darlene Chaney to run the lead to 11 at 23-12.

Only once more at 25-16, did the lead fall below ten, as Hamilton hit two straight.

A three point play by Chaney and a follow-shot by Foster ran it out to 12, and the Lady Pirates led by as much as 17, 40-23, before taking a 40-26 lead into the dressing room.

The Pirates kept it up in the second half. Madison closed within 14 on three occasions early in the period, but the Pirates inched out by 20 at 61-41, and finally led by as many as 34, 90-56, in the late stages of the game.

"Mary got into foul trouble again tonight," Andruzzi pointed out, "but the rest did well in backing her up. They (Madison) were all over her on defense." Andruzzi felt the early minutes of the second half were fateful. "We came out and jumped on them right away and took control of the game. The defense was superb, we broke well on the ball, and had great enthusiasm out there. They are really blending well together now."

Andruzzi heaped praise on Hooks for her effort. "She's worked hard for the starting point guard job, and she's doing a fine job."

"Sam had another excellent game. Nine assists? That's tremendous, especially with BEAR GRASS — Rudy Brown pumped in 18 points to spark Bear Grass to its second victory of the season, a 48-36 win over Creswell Saturday night in a Tobacco Belt Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Bear Grass ripped Creswell, 48-29.

Bear Grass, now 2-8 overall and 2-7 in the conference, led at the end of the first period, 9-8. The second quarter was even worse as Creswell outscored the Bears, 15-10, to take a 23-19 lead into the locker room.

The Bears surged back ahead in the third period, outscoring Creswell, 10-4, for a 29-27 lead. Bear Grass then used a 19-9 advantage in the final eight minutes to seal the win.

Along with Brown in double figures for Bear Grass were Phil Peele with 13 and Ray Biggs with 10. Creswell, now 1-9 overall and 1-8 in the conference, was led by Brant Davenport with 18 points and Herman Cabarrus with 10.

Schlichter Stars In Gold

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Art Schlichter passed for two first-quarter touchdowns and running back David Tolouma scored twice, leading Team National to a 30-21 victory over Team American in the first Olympia Gold Bowl Saturday.

Team American, after trailing 23-7 going into the fourth quarter, narrowed the gap to 23-21 with 7:22 remaining. But Idaho State quarterback Mike Machurek tossed a 19-yard scoring pass to Tolouma with 2:54 to play to seal the victory.

Schlichter left the game midway in the second quarter to meet a prior commitment in Washington, D.C., but the Ohio State star made the most of his brief appearance here. He threw scoring strikes of 6 yards to UCLA tight end Tim Wrightman and 15 yards to Tulane tight end Rod Holman.

Iowa State fullback Dwayne Crutchfield scored all three touchdowns for Team American on runs of 1, 1 and 2 yards.

Schlichter completed his first eight passes, wound up with completions of nine of 12 attempts for 129 yards and was named the game's Most Valuable Offensive Player.

South Defeats North By 27-10

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — John Fourcade of Mississippi scored two touchdowns on 1-yard runs and Alabama's Benny Perrin returned an interception 84 yards for another score as the South downed the North 27-10 in the 33rd Senior Bowl game Saturday.

Fourcade's two scoring plunges gave the South a 14-0 lead early in the second quarter. Perrin's interception return then put the Rebels in control for good, with a 24-7 lead just 5 1/2 minutes into the third quarter.

Perrin's interception was one of three against All-American quarterback Jim McMahon of Brigham Young. The Rebels also intercepted another of Robin Gabriel of New Mexico.

Barry Redden of Richmond also played a major role in the South attack, running for 101 yards on 12 carries.

The South's victory stopped a two-game winning streak by the North in the series and lifted the Rebels' advantage to 16-14-3.

Eddie Garcia of Southern Methodist accounted for the other South scoring on field goals of 38 and 55 yards, the latter breaking the Senior Bowl record of 52 yards set by Russell Erxleben of Texas in 1979.

The North's scoring came on a 21-yard pass from Gabriel to Gerald Lucear of Temple in the final minute of the first half

EC Women Runners Take 3 3rds

BLACKSBURG, Va. — The East Carolina women's track team picked up three third places and one fifth place here Saturday in the Virginia Tech Invitational.

There were no team scores kept in a meet in which ECU had its best performance to date.

ECU's Eve Brennan finished third in the 1,500-meter run with a time of 5:02.1. Carolyn Moore finished third in the 300-meter run with a time of 43.2 and the ECU 4 X 150-meter relay team also picked a third place finish.

Moore combined with Arnetta Kelly, Anne Hartman, Liz Graham to run the relay with a time of 1:20.9.

Hartman also came up with a fifth place finish in the 400-meter run with a clocking of 64.5.

Other ECU results: Kelly ran a 7.33 and Graham a 7.90 in the 60-yard dash and a 45.5 and a 45.8 in the 300-meter run. None of the times were good enough to place. Lisa Whitley ran a 2:31.3 800-meter but did not place either.

Duke Women Whip Campbell

Duke University's Lady Blue Devils handed nationally ranked Campbell its second straight loss last night in the Duke-ECU Doubleheader being played in Minges Coliseum, 83-64.

Campbell, ranked fifth among Division II teams, came into the two-game set Friday night unbeaten in six outings, but is now 6-2. Duke upped its record to 6-7 with the win.

Led by Stacy Hurd's 24 point effort, the Blue Devils were in command much of the way. They trailed only twice in the game, at 1-0 and 3-2. After that, however, Duke took the lead for good on a three-point play by Kim Matthews, 5-3. Claire Rose followed with a 15-footer, and Candy Mikels hit on a follow-shot for a 9-3 advantage.

Duke steadily pulled out into as much as an 11-point spread during the first part of the half, 18-7. Campbell rallied to within four, 19-15, but couldn't come any closer as Duke again pull away to lead by as many as 16 late in the half, 37-21. The Lady Blue Devils held a 39-27 halftime lead, and quickly pushed that out to 18 early in the second half. The lead climbed to as much as 30, at 67-37 with 8:47 left before Madison managed to trim it back to as little as 17 in the closing minutes of play.

Hurd, with 16 of her 24 in the second half, also helped Duke hold 51-40 rebounding edge with seven. Matthews, Mikels and Jennifer Chesnut also had seven each, while Maura Hertzog led the team with nine.

Herzog added 12 points, while Margo Walsh had 11 and Matthews hit 10. Sharon Williams led Campbell with 18, while Cindy Biggerstaff added 14 and Jean Lamson had 11.

Tulsa Surges By Shockers

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — With Greg Stewart and Mike Anderson scoring 26 points apiece, No. 18 Tulsa exploded for 67 second-half points to upset No. 16 Wichita State, 99-88, in Missouri Valley Conference basketball Saturday.

The Shockers, led by Aubrey Sherrod with 27 points and Antoine Carr's 25, had a 38-32 halftime advantage after leading by as much as 15 midway through the half.

But Tulsa's Paul Pressey, who had 20 points, keyed a second-half surge with tenacious defense as the Hurricane tied it at 43-43 with 16:36 left.

Tulsa built that lead to 56-47, with Stewart, a 6-foot-9 center, and Anderson hitting crucial baskets. With 4½ minutes left, Tulsa built its biggest lead at 81-68 and the Hurricane held off a Shocker rally that closed the gap to six, last at 90-84, with 1:36 left.

Tulsa hit a sizzling 74 percent from the field in the second half and finished with 64 percent for the game. The Shockers also had hot shooting, finishing with 52 percent from the field. Tulsa made through 31 of 39 free throws while Wichita State had 16 of 21.

Tulsa took a 6-0 lead before Carr and Sherrod led the Shockers on a 23-2 spree that gave them a 23-8 advantage midway through the first half.

With Stewart canning nine points in a 3½ minute span, the Hurricane pulled back to within seven at 31:24 with 4½ minutes left before intermission and trailed by six at halftime.

Bruce Vanley added 13 points for Tulsa in the nationally televised game played before a record home crowd of 9,119.

Tulsa, defending National Invitation Tournament champion, improved to 12-2 overall and 4-1 in the Valley.

Wichita State got 14 points from Cliff Levingston and 12 from Xavier McDaniel in falling to 12-4, 2-2 in the league.

Arkansas.....73
AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — LaSalle Thompson scored 32 points and blocked six

Arkansas shots as No.19 Texas defeated the ninth-ranked Razorbacks 87-73 Saturday night before the largest crowd ever to see a college basketball game in Austin.

The crowd of 16,401 surpassed the previous high attendance set in 1978 during another Arkansas-Texas match.

Texas led at halftime 39-28 as Thompson pitched in 12 of his points.

The closest Arkansas came in the second half was 71-63, when Scott Hastings took a pass and slammed in a basket with 3:02 left. But less than a minute later, Hastings fouled Thompson and was sent to the bench with his fifth foul after he and Thompson almost squared off near the free throw line.

Thompson taunted Hastings by flashing five fingers at him and an official stepped between them to stop any possible trouble.

Thompson, a 6-foot-10, 250-pound junior, also had 13 rebounds. Virvell Howland gave him scoring raised with 23 points, including 14 in the first half.

Tony Brown scored 24 to lead Arkansas. Darrell Walker, a high-jumping 6-foot-3 guard, moved under the basket and got 18 points, but had only four in the last half. Hastings pitched in 17.

Texas, extending its record to 12-0, is off to the best Longhorn start since the 1935 team went to 14-0.

The victory raised Southwest Conference leaders' league record to 4-0. Arkansas fell to 11-2 and 2-2 in the SWC.

Indiana.....66

Ohio State.....61

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Ted Kitchell scored seven of his game-high 20 points in a 19-8 second half spurt that sent Indiana to a 66-61 victory over Ohio State in Big Ten Conference basketball Saturday.

The Hoosiers, who have defeated the Buckeyes 10 straight times here at Assembly Hall, took the lead for good 33-32 with their first basket of the second half. Randy Wittman, who had 10 of his 17 points in the second half, then scored four points to open a 37-32 advantage.

A Clark Kellogg field goal pulled the Buckeyes to within three points.

Fla. State.....69

Va. Tech.....65

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — A driving layup by David Speights with 46 seconds left broke a final tie and gave Florida State a 69-65 Metro Conference basketball victory over No.20 Virginia Tech Saturday night.

Speights charged on the play, but Reggie Steppe missed the front end of a one-and-one for Tech, and Ronnie Watson wrapped it up for the Seminoles with two free throws with four seconds remaining.

The defeat dropped Tech to 2-1 in the conference and 11-2 overall. Florida State is 2-2 in the conference and 7-8 overall.

Suddenly, Everyone Diehard 49er Supporter

Bay Fans Have Change Of Heart

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Suddenly, everyone in the Bay area is a dedicated, lifelong San Francisco 49ers' fan, smiling at last after years of silent suffering. Last year, of course, everyone was a lifelong Oakland Raiders' fan. Who says fans aren't fickle?

"You couldn't give away 49er stuff before this year, nobody wanted it," said Marty Jacobs, owner of a sports souvenir business. "But the last three weeks it's been crazy. Last year, everything was the Raiders. Now the Raiders are dead. When teams lose here, nobody cares."

"Forty-niner fever" has broken out with a vengeance, spreading from hardcore fans, who call themselves the 49er Faithful, to the fair weather fans who jumped on a winner's bandwagon.

Scalpers are getting $200 for $40 tickets to Super Bowl XVI, in which the 49ers will meet the Cincinnati Bengals on Jan. 24.

As the game approaches, prices are expected to reach $1,000 a seat.

Two restaurants are offering free champagne with meals until the Super Bowl. Bartenders are inventing new concoctions dedicated to the 49ers. A men's clothing shop is chartering a DC-10 to take fans to the game at Pontiac, Mich., the day of the game and return the same night for $495. Other charters range from $449 to $925. Some 12,000 49er fans will leave the warmth of the West Coast for frigid Michigan to cheer their team.

For the Faithful, who endured the cruel mocking of family and friends in recent losing seasons, this year's success has been sweet.

"I've never had one thing in my life — neither my marriage, nor the birth of my children — that has made me reflect so much on my childhood and early adulthood: those endless years of rooting for losers and those especially traumatic defeats to Detroit in 1957 and to Dallas in 1972," wrote fan and San Francisco Chronicle newsman David Kleinberg after the 49ers beat the Cowboys last week 28-27 for the National Conference championship.

"For almost 30 years I've waited for this redemption. Yesterday I got to go all the way."

Win or lose in the Super Bowl, the 49ers will be feted with a cable car parade following a presentation by Mayor Dianne Feinstein at City Hall the day after the game.

Even the city's large gay community has been turned on by the 49ers.

"A lot of gays have been closet football fans," said Bob Shore, owner of the Starlight Room, a bar which bills itself as the gay headquarters for 49er Fever. "They think they're not supposed to talk about sports but that's ridiculous. This proves again we're really no different from anyone else."

Shore said his bar, which has been redecorated with 49er red and gold and 49er balloons, was packed with more than 125 cheering patrons when he showed the 49ers' victory over Dallas on four color television sets.

"This is the first time we've showed football," Shore said. "I was amazed by the response. Next year, we'll be showing football every Sunday."

In addition to relatively inexpensive souvenirs, Jacobs also is selling some real collectors items. A football autographed by all the 49ers goes for $300. Jerseys worn by the players in the Super Bowl will be offered for $500 to $2,000.

"The price of the jerseys depends on the player," said Jacobs, who knows several agents willing to sell the shirts off the players' backs.

#2 Missouri Nips Nebraska, 44-42

LINCOLN, Neb (AP) — Prince Bridges' layup at the buzzer gave No. 2 Missouri a 44-42 victory over Nebraska in a Big Eight Conference basketball game Saturday night.

Nebraska's Jack Moore had tied the game at 42-42 with 14 seconds to play. The basket accounted for the Cornhuskers' first points in eight minutes.

The unbeaten Tigers, now 13-0, called time with 11 seconds remaining. Bridges inbounded the ball near mid-court, took it back under the basket and scored the winning field goal.

The Huskers, 9-5, took a five-point lead midway through the first half and led 24-19 at halftime.

In the second half Nebraska pushed its lead to as many as seven points but fell victim to a late Missouri surge. The Tigers scored seven straight points in one minute to go up 42-40 with 5:42 to play.

Neither team scored again until Moore's bucket in the final 14 seconds. Nebraska shot a disappointing 36 percent from the field in the second half while Missouri shot a season-high 64 percent.

Steve Stipanovich led Missouri with 21 points and Jon Sundvold added nine.

Handy Johnson topped Nebraska with nine points and Ray Collins had eight.

DePaul, 15-1, led 40-24 at the half, and baskets by freshman Dillard and Terry Cummings helped DePaul race to a 20-point lead, and the fourth-ranked Blue Demons thwarted an Old Dominion rally late in the game to post a 70-60 college basketball victory Saturday night.

DePaul, 15-1, led 40-24 at the half, and baskets by freshman Dillard and Terry Cummings helped DePaul race to a 20-point lead, and the fourth-ranked Blue Demons thwarted an Old Dominion rally late in the game to post a 70-60 college basketball victory Saturday night.

Old Dominion got as close as six points, 66-60, on a pair of foul shots by Mann, but Jerry McMillan, a DePaul reserve, hit two free throws with 43 seconds to play that made it 68-60, sealing the Demons' victory.

with 16 points, while Ennis Whatley added 13. Mike Davis 12 and Phillip Lockett 10.

Hord and Turpin added eight points apiece as Kentucky took a commanding 26-13 lead midway through the first half.

Lockett responded with two straight baskets and Phillips jammed home a dunk to pull the Crimson Tide within 26-19 with 8:55 to go.

But the Cats ran off 10 straight points, capped by Chuck Verderber's 8-footer, and led 36-19 with 5:59 left in the half.

Alabama staged a mild rally early in the second half, pulling within 48-40 at 15:55 after consecutive baskets by Phillips, Cliff Windham and Davis.

Hord then scored Kentucky's next four field goals against single baskets by Phillips and Davis to push Kentucky ahead 56-44 with 13:23 to go.

Cavaliers Wallop Tech

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Virginia Coach Terry Holland and Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins agreed the third-ranked Cavaliers' 79-60 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball romp Saturday over the Yellow Jackets was a foregone conclusion after the first few minutes.

"The key to the game was that we were able to control the game early," said Holland, whose Cavaliers upped their overall record to 15-1 and their ACC mark to 4-1 as Ralph Sampson scored 24 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and blocked three shots.

"We had a great team effort today, but we were outmanned. The game was decided early," said Cremins. "Virginia is a great team. They are everything people said they are. They took us out of our game early."

Cremins, whose team fell to 5-8 overall and 1-4 in the ACC, said "I didn't really consider a slowdown today, but I might consider it next time. You need experienced players to play slow, especially in the backcourt, where we are very slow."

Freshman Tim Mullen added 27 points for Virginia, which takes a 27-game homecourt winning streak into a Sunday ACC game against Clemson. The Cavaliers have won 37 of their last 38 games at home.

"I'm in favor of Saturday-Sunday games," Holland said. "The players don't have to miss any school that way. You can take days off during the week if you need to. I proposed playing Saturday-Sunday games a few years ago, but the rest of the league didn't go for it."

Anthony Byrd led Georgia Tech with 14 points while Brook Stepe and Maurice Bradford added 13 and 12, respectively.

Virginia, which blitzed Tech by margins of 37, 41 and 29 points a year ago, wasted little time in jumping on top of the Yellow Jackets, sprinting to an 8-2 lead in the first three minutes of play.

Goals by Sampson and Jeff Jones and followups by Sampson and Mullen quickly spoiled any thoughts the Yellow Jackets might have had of trying to play the game at a slow pace.

Georgia Tech Stats: Mullen 27, Sampson 24, Jones 14, Byrd 13, Bradford 12, Stepe 13, Goza 10, Wilson 8, Lyon 7, Totals 79. Georgia Tech 19, Virginia 13.

JAMES WORTHY

UNC Star Forward Blends Strength & Savvy On Court

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Ed Cartotto, a referee of no small experience, sounded his whistle, then realized he had not seen what he thought he had.

James Worthy, North Carolina's 6-foot-9 forward, squeezed the ball between his meaty hands, waiting for an explanation.

Worthy had come into the key area, taken a pass from Jimmy Black on the wing, faked a pass, then came to rest about eight feet from the basket, when Cartotto's whistle sounded lunch break.

It was traveling. Or it sure looked like it. Actually, it was one of Worthy's favorite moves. And it was completely legal.

Cartotto recognized his error almost immediately, and returned the ball to the Tar Heels out of bounds.

It was early in the season, and the referee probably never had seen anything quite like Worthy.

Freed from two screws and a metal rod that held together a broken ankle last year, Worthy has been on a tear. The junior forward blends strength and savvy, which have helped keep North Carolina No. 1 in college basketball since preseason.

"I saw him do things last year that healthy people can't do," Black said of Worthy. "He was extremely good last year. And this year, he's three times better. I don't know how to describe it."

Worthy is averaging about 16 points and seven rebounds per game, but he probably has the most impact on the competition on defense.

"His defense may be as good as any player we've had here," Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith said. "And we've had some pretty good defensive players like Bobby Jones and Dudley Bradley. His only problem is that he may get into foul trouble occasionally."

Worthy, rather soft-spoken about his own talents, credits longevity for his improvement.

"The only thing that's changed this year is that I have one more year of experience," he said. "I'm older than some of the other guys, and I have to take a leadership role."

Worthy normally avoids the subject of the injury that idled him as a freshman and slowed him as a sophomore. He broke the ankle halfway through his freshman season and was out for the year. Despite being troubled by the injury periodically last season, he missed just one game, the regular season finale against Duke, and that was because of a back injury he suffered the week before.

"He can tell the weather with his ankle," Smith said. "It troubled him, mentally, too, but he's tough."

But for the most part, Worthy has been healthy this season, and he and 6-foot-9 sophomore center Sam Perkins have teamed with small forward Matt Doherty to form a front line of real stature. They have out-rebounded opponents consistently and held opposing teams to just slightly more than 40 percent in field goal accuracy.

"We've had to work a lot to avoid the media hype," Worthy said. "We just have to keep working and keep our heads. We've had a good early season, but now it's the Atlantic Coast Conference games that count."

Offensively, Worthy has proved his versatility at North Carolina.

"He plays power forward or shooting forward," said Smith, who also uses him to handle the ball occasionally in his four-corner offense.

"James has immense talent with the ball," Smith said. "He'll be a great pro when he can play the pro style, the man-to-man defenses and the up-and-down game. His talent'll really show them. In college, you don't play the same game. He's also a great passer."

Smith said some of Worthy's offensive statistics may have suffered because of the style of play at North Carolina. The last season, second-team All-America forward Al Wood averaged 18 points a game, and Worthy will be lucky to equal that.

"Although Al had the green light to shoot whenever he wanted, we don't play a game that's centered on one man offensively," Smith said. "We don't look for one man when we need a basket because I feel like we always need a basket."

"We might have a first option to go to James, but it's not our only option," Smith said.

Worthy's own attitude toward the game is reflected in comments he made recently about playing against Virginia's All-American center Ralph Sampson.

"He's 7-foot-4. Sure, he can cause a lot of problems. He's always there, but I can't change my game because of that."

"If I change, that takes me out of the game."

"Anyway, after the first couple of minutes, the adrenaline starts to flow and I forget who's out there."

West Craven Rallies Past A-G

VANCEBORO — West Craven High School held off Ayden-Grifton to pull out a 60-57 victory over the Chargers last night in a non-conference basketball game.

Ayden-Grifton's girls gained a 59-51 victory in their game against the Lady Eagles.

Ayden-Grifton inched ahead, 12-10, in the first quarter of play in the boys' game, and slipped further out to take a 30-24 lead at the half. West Craven outscored the Chargers, 14-10, in the third period, however, to cut the lead back to 40-38 going into the final period.

With 2½ minutes left to go, Ronnie Belamy put the Eagles into the lead. Linwood Harris later hit to up the lead to three. Tyrone Gay chopped it back to one, but the Chargers were never able to regain the lead as the two swapped baskets the rest of the way.

Harris and Belamy each had 14 points, while Wayne Becton had 12 and Norman Becton added 10. Thomas Anderson led Ayden-Grifton with 18, while Gay hit 17.

The loss dropped the Chargers to 4-9 overall, while West Craven is now 9-0.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton pushed ahead, 11-6, in the first period and never trailed again. They outscored the Lady Eagles, 17-15, in the second quarter for a 28-21 lead at intermission.

Both teams scored 14 in the third period to make it 42-35, and a 17-16 edge for the Lady Chargers sealed up the victory in the final quarter.

Corra Faison dumped in 27 points for A-G, while Angela Grifton added 16 and Linda Brown hit 10. Brown led West Craven with 15, while Hargett hit 12 and Peele had 11.

Ayden-Grifton's girls are now 6-8 on the year.

EC Women 'Dunk' Navy

The East Carolina women's swim team captured nine first places to defeat Navy, 86-62, while the Pirate men were beaten easily by Navy, 79-34, in action Saturday afternoon at the Minges Natatorium.

ECU's women, now 3-1, set a varsity record in the 400-yard medley relay, despite not finishing first. The team of Jennifer Jayes, Hannelore Koehler, Dordi Henriksen and Nan George swam the relay in 4:09.79. The old record was 4:22.11.

George, Koehler and Sally Reinhard all captured two first places in helping ECU hand Navy its third loss without a victory this season.

George won the 50-yard freestyle (24.97) and the 100-yard freestyle (54.71). Koehler won the 50-yard breaststroke (33.30) and the 200-yard breaststroke (2:42.85) and Reinhard captured the 1,000-yard freestyle (no time available) and the 500-yard freestyle (5:14.09).

With her time in the 100-yard freestyle, George qualified for the nationals. ECU's Nancy James, who finished second with a time of 54.73, also qualified for the nationals while also setting a freshman record.

Reinhard, with her time in the 500-free style, also made the nationals.

ECU's men, on the other hand, captured only four firsts, with Gregor Wray and Jokim Svensson both winning two. Wray won the 1,000-yard freestyle (10:01.01) and the 200-yard butterfly (1:56.92) while Svensson captured the 200-yard backstroke (1:58.35) and the 200-yard individual medley (1:58.76).

Also, the Pirate freshman relay team of Svensson, John Rathbun, Doug McMillan and Stanley Williams broke the freshman record in the 400-yard medley relay with a clocking of 3:35.57. The old record was 3:43.30.

Lady Pirates Crush Campbell, 65-49

Pirate Leader

East Carolina's Sam Jones (21) goes up for a jumper against the guard of partially hidden Sharon Williams (10) of Campbell as Lady Camels Rhonda Mueller (33) and Cindy Biggerstaff (31) look on.

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Sam Jones sparked East Carolina's Lady Pirates to a third straight victory Friday night, as ECU handed previously unbeaten and nationally ranked Campbell a stunning 65-46 defeat.

The game was the second of the evening in the Duke-East Carolina Doubleheader. James Madison nipped Duke, 76-75, in the opening game.
Campbell, which had been averaging close to 80 points a game, was stymied by the Pirate defense, thoroughly dominated on the boards, and held to an icy 34.5 shooting percentage.

Jones enjoyed her best night of the season, scoring 22 points on 10 of 20 field goal attempts and two of three charity shots. She also pulled down a game-high 15 rebounds and dished out five assists.

"Fifteen rebounds? From a 5-8 girl?," Coach Cathy Andruzzi exclaimed. "She had a great, great game, you know. She kept us in the game offensively."

Andruzzi said that she was worried coming into the game with the now 6-1 Lady Camels, who were ranked fifth in the nation among Division II schools. "I didn't know how we were going to react to this game. We were coming off two games where we were really high for them (Virginia and North Carolina — both wins). You have to get up for so many, and I was worried about how much we could still get up."

"But we came back really well. We played great defense and that wins games."

But the offense did well, too, she felt, playing one of its better games. "We played very good fundamental offense. We used the clock well."

On defense, the Pirates, who got into foul trouble, went to more zone defense in the second half. "We were mixing it up a lot, switching back and forth on trips down the court. I think that messed up Campbell's game."

Something did, at any rate. The Lady Camels went over six minutes at one point without a basket and close to six without a single point.

During that time period, the Lady Pirates scored ten straight unanswered points and ran out to a 20-point lead, a margin they held the rest of the evening.

The fouls did cause Andruzzi some anxiety. Mary Denkler, who got the Pirates off to a good start with 12 first half points, gathered three fouls in that first period, and picked up her fourth in the first minute of the second. She sat out much of the remaining time in the game.

Loletha Harrison, praised by Andruzzi for her defensive work, ended up with four, and Darlene Chaney and Jones each finished with three.

In fact, at one point, both

Denkler and Jones, who make up the bulk of the Pirate offense, were on the bench at the same time.

"Our young kids did a great job during that time," Andruzzi said. "They held the lead all through that time. You couldn't really tell Mary and Sam weren't out there."

Harrison, who got the job of guarding Campbell's Sharon Williams, who is averaging 20 points a game, held her to only ten. Only one other Lady Camel scored in double figures, as Rhonda Mueller had 12.

East Carolina never trailed in the game, although Campbell tied it up twice, at 2-all and 4-4. Loraine Foster scored off a steal and Denkler hit three straight after that to power the Pirates out to a 12-4 lead. After an exchange of baskets, Denkler hit again to make it 16-6.

Campbell did put a rush on after that, cutting the lead back to as little as two, 22-20 with 7:06 left in the half, but the Lady Pirates pulled away again, led by nine points from Jones to hold as much as an 11-point lead, 31-20. The Pirates led, 34-24, at the half.

Campbell scored the initial basket of the second half, but East Carolina came back with two in a row, both by Fran Hooks to run out to a 12-point lead.

With 16:15 showing, Campbell cut it back to ten, 40-30, but the Lady Pirates then ran off ten consecutive points, four of them by Jones, to power out to a 50-30 lead.

Campbell never recovered from that blow, closing only to 17 after that, and another ECU string of seven straight, four by Lillian Barnes and three by Jones, upped the lead to 24, the largest margin, at 57-33, with 7:17 remaining.

The Pirates coasted in from there.

In addition to Jones' 22, Denker added 18.

The Lady Pirates, led by Jones' 15, dominated the boards, 51-34, although Melvarie Watson pulled off 12 for Campbell.

Saturday night, the Lady Pirates, now 7-7, were to play James Madison in what turns out to be a mythical championship, while Duke faces Campbell. The doubleheader, however, is not a tournament, but merely a swap-off of opponents by ECU and Duke.

Lendl Downs McEnroe...

forehand volley found the net, then broke serve again when McEnroe netted a backhand.

After Lendl held serve to take a 4-0 lead, the match, for all practical purposes, was over.

It is the second straight year that Lendl has reached the finals here, last year losing to Sweden's Bjorn Borg in the title match.
For McEnroe, ranked No. 1 in the world, it was yet another loss to the powerful Czech. The two have split their six career clashes, but Lendl has won the last three, including their quarterfinal meeting in the French Open last year and their Davis Cup battle in New York last July.

And it marked the second straight year that McEnroe has been disappointed in this year-ending tourney in his hometown. Last year, he failed to make it out of the round-robin portion of the championships.

Prior to Saturday's matches, Gerulaitis' coach, Fred Stolle, issued a statement saying the blond right-hander was playing the semifinals "under protest because of the lateness of the hour last night."

Gerulaitis played in the final match Friday night, and did not leave Madison Square Garden until nearly 1 a.m.

Because CBS wanted to televise the McEnroe-Lendl match live, Gerulaitis was scheduled to play the day's first match.

"Vitas has played three night matches this week," Stolle said in a statement. "The last two nights he played the last match. We thought it was unfair for him to come out and play the first match."

Stolle said Gerulaitis considered defaulting his semifinal clash with Tetscher.

"Vitas did not want to play," Stolle said. "I agreed with him on that. Under the circumstances, with this being such a major tournament and the fact that Vitas has had a few run-ins and can't afford the fines, we decided we would let the press know beforehand that this was such, regardless of the outcome of the match."

"We wanted to let it be known beforehand that we do not think this is fair. CBS, I feel, is wrong... It is unfair to my player, to Vitas, to be up and having to play this first match."

After the two traded service breaks in the second and third games of the opening set, Gerulaitis broke Tetscher in the 12th game to take a 1-0 lead.

Tetscher evened the match, breaking the New Yorker in the fifth and seventh games.

But Gerulaitis quickly jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the final set, and although he lost serve in the fifth game, Gerulaitis broke Tetscher again in the eighth game to advance to the final.

BATH — Four players combined to score 47 points to lead Bath to an easy 58-37 victory over Jamesville Friday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

In the girls' game, Jamesville whipped Bath, 31-27.

Kevin Cutler scored 13 points, Randy Bonner and Ron Hopkins 12 each and Robert Waters 10 to lead Bath to its fourth victory in nine games. Bath is also 4-5 in the conference.

Jamesville, now 4-8 overall and 3-6 in the conference, was led by Onwood James with 10 points.

Bath led, 12-8, at the end of the first period and then erupted for a 14-4 advantage in the second period to take a 26-12 lead at the half.

The Pirates then outscored the Bullets, 10-8, and 22-17, in the final two periods to win easily.

Bath, now 5-4 overall and in the league, jumped out to a 7-2 lead at the end of the first period. Jamesville outscored Bath, 9-6, in the second period to cut the deficit to, 13-11, at intermission.

An 8-4 advantage in the third period pushed the Lady Bullets ahead, 19-17, going into the final eight minutes. Jamesville held Bath off down the stretch, outscoring the Lady Pirates, 12-10, to capture the four-point win.

Jamesville, now 9-3 overall and 8-1 in the league, was led by Kellie Hardison with 18 points. Barbara Satchell led Bath with 12 points.

throws with four seconds left on the clock to give the Duchesses a come-from-behind 76-75 victory over Duke University Friday night in the opening game of the Duke-East Carolina doubleheader in Minges Coliseum.

Later, East Carolina drubbed previously unbeaten Campbell University, 65-46.

Madison, which had trailed by as many as 11 points — the halftime margin, 44-33, rallied behind a 16-point second half performance by Meadows to take as much as a nine-point lead of its own before Duke erased that for a late one-point lead.

The win boosted the Duchess record to 4-7 on the year, while Duke drops to 5-7.

The young Madison team, which starts three freshmen, were outbounded by the shorter Blue Devils, 39-30, led by Kim Matthews' 10 and Stacy Hurd's eight. Michele James led Madison with nine, while Meadows had seven.

Madison, however, enjoyed a 59.1 field goal percentage in the second half, as compared to only 30 percent for Duke — and that made the difference.

Madison scored first and held the lead for most of the first half before a balanced scoring attack by Duke pulled the Blue Devils even at 20-20. Two free throws by Margo Walsh gave Duke its first lead, 22-20, and after another tie, Claire Rose hit to put Duke ahead for the rest of the half.

The Lady Devils inched on out, as Candy Mikels, coming off the bench, had eight points in the final two minutes to help push the lead out to 44-33 at intermission.

In the second half, however, Meadows took control of the game and guided Madison back. Duke managed to hold the lead until the 11:36 mark when Betsy Blöse scored two free throws for a 54-52 lead for Madison. Duke tied it at 54-44, but two free throws by Donna Firebaugh, plus a basket by her and another by Meadows ran Madison out to a six-point lead, 60-54.

Meadows later hit two free throws to make it 66-57, the largest Madison lead.

In the final six minutes, however, Duke put on one last rally that nearly pulled it out. The Lady Devils cut it to one three times before finally grabbing the lead with 16 seconds to go on a 12-footer by Rose, 75-74.

But, as Madison attempted to get off the shot with four seconds left in the game, Maura Hertzog fouled Meadows in the act of shooting, and she dropped in both shots, clinching the win for Madison.

Meadows finished the game with 20 points, while Beth Hamilton had 17, Blöse had 16 and Sue Manelski had 13. Duke was led by Matthews with 18, while Jennifer Chesnut had 13, Rose had 10 and Mikels had 10.

Saturday night, the two host teams swapped opponents, with Duke facing Campbell and ECU taking on Madison.

JACKSONVILLE — D.H. Conley, after losing seven straight basketball games, bounced back Friday night to down White Oak, 73-50, in a Coastal Conference basketball game.

Conley's girls also won their first league game, downing White Oak, 48-27.

"This is the first time that we've had everyone healthy," a pleased coach Shelly Marsh said. "I'm hoping that it will turn us around and make the difference from now on."

White Oak inched out into an 11-10 lead in the first period of the game, but Conley came back with a 15-11 margin in the second quarter. That left the Vikings in the lead by 25-22 at halftime.

The third period turned out to be decisive. Conley pumped in 16 points, while allowing White Oak only six. That ran the Viking lead out to 41-28. In the final quarter, both teams poured it on, with Conley outscoring White Oak 32-22. Keith Gatlin led the Conley scoring with 21 points, while Donald Wilson and Sammy Tyson each contributed 14.

Mike Horne, Lester Mattocks and Tom Altizer each had ten to pace White Oak.

Conley is now 1-1 in Coastal Conference action and 6-7 overall, while White Oak falls to 0-2 and 8-5.

Details of the girls game were not made available. Conley is now 1-1 in the league and 11-2 overall. White Oak is 0-2 and 4-7.

Conley returns home on Monday to host North Lenoir in its first home court Coastal Conference game.

Bo Says No To Texas A&M

Staying At Michigan
University of Michigan head football coach Glenn Edward "Bo" Schembechler, 53, smiles at a news conference in Ann Arbor Friday night as he explains why he turned down a lucrative job offer from Texas A&M University. (AP Laserphoto)

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Bo Schembechler has turned down the chance to be a Texas millionaire to maintain his emotional bond with the University of Michigan.

The 52-year-old Schembechler said Friday he had decided to spurn a 10-year, $2.25-million offer to be athletic director at Texas A&M and remain at Michigan, where he has been football coach for 13 years.

With his wife, Millie, fighting back tears in the background, Schembechler told a crowded news conference late Friday it was one of the most difficult decisions of his life.

"Did you ever wonder what it would be like being a millionaire?" Schembechler asked. "There'd have been no more worries for my family, so I studied the offer carefully."

Mrs. Schembechler called it their toughest decision since the Michigan coach decided to have open heart surgery 12 years ago.

"It was very, very difficult because they were very wonderful people in Texas and we got to know them well," Mrs. Schembechler said. "But, all this time, we had all these emotional ties with Michigan."

Schembechler, the dean of Big Ten coaches, has compiled a 123-24-3 record in 13 seasons at Michigan. He was named college Coach of the Year in 1969 and Big Ten Coach of the Year in 1972 and 1980.

"I feel I have 10 more real productive years and I have a lot I want to accomplish," he said.

From Texas, H.R. "Bum" Bright, chairman of the A&M board of regents, said he was disappointed at Schembechler's decision, "but we went as far as we could go, and he said he'd gone as far as he could."

Bright said that Schembechler did not turn A&M down, but instead that A&M turned him down in a process in which the university refused to meet Bo's demands. He declined to elaborate.

Bright also insisted Schembechler was only offered the athletic director's post — vacated in September by the resignation of Marvin Tate — and said he would have no comment on what the developments could affect for current Aggies' Coach Tom Wilson, who has a year remaining on his contract.

Earlier reports had indicated Schembechler had been offered both the athletic directorship and the coaching post.

The Houston Post had reported Wilson would be fired and his contract paid off. Wilson could not be contacted after Schembechler's decision.

Schembechler indicated Michigan Athletic Director

Don Canham offered him a substantial raise, but he didn't elaborate. Schembechler earned $60,030 in 1981 as football coach, but was believed to have made more than $100,000 overall for the year from related interests such as a weekly television show.

Base salaries for football coaches at state-supported schools in Michigan cannot be higher than other university administrators.

"I didn't talk him into staying — Michigan did," Canham insisted. "I've been talking to him, periodically, for two weeks. You can't fight Texas oil money."

Harold T. Shapiro, president of the university, said he was gratified at Schembechler's decision to remain.

"His record here — as the builder of a football program of quality and integrity — has been exemplary," Shapiro said. "The concern he has shown for his players' performance in all aspects of university life has reflected well on his own character and on this university."

Schembechler said he was first approached by an intermediary during the season who asked him if he would be interested in taking an athletic director's job at a major, but unspecified, university. The Michigan coach, at that time, said he was not interested in anything except coaching.

But when the Wolverines traveled to Houston to meet UCLA in the Bluebonnet Bowl on New Year's Eve, Schembechler was approached again and told the job was at A&M.

A&M regents and alumni have been frustrated by a football program that has produced one Cotton Bowl team in the past 40 years and only three Southwest Conference champions, the latest a tri-champion in 1975 that did not go to the Cotton Bowl.

Schembechler's Michigan teams have finished in the Top 10 of The Associated Press final poll every year except 1979 and 1981. The Wolverines were 12th in last season's final poll.

His worst season at Michigan was 8-4 in 1979. Eight of his Michigan teams won 10 or more games in a season and nine were Big Ten champions.

Schembechler has a 2-7 post-season bowl record, with both victories coming in 1981. The first was the Jan. 1 Rose Bowl victory over Washington following the 1980 season, with the other being the Dec. 31 Bluebonnet Bowl beating of UCLA, 33-14.

Pepperdine In Upset Of Dons

By The Associated Press

The Pepperdine Waves pleased their coach by showing patience and poise, kept a lid on high-scoring guard Quintin Dailey and rolled to an upset victory over No. 7 San Francisco.

The Waves, behind Bill Sadler's season-high 26 points, posted a 102-91 victory over the Dons in the West Coast Athletic Conference college basketball opener for both teams. It was the only Friday game involving a Top Ten team.

Winning Coach Jim Harrick said shutting down Dailey, who had scored more than 30 points for USF in his last three games, was his trick.

"We contained him pretty well, at least to the point we wanted to. We know USF can really score, but I really liked our patience and poise to night," he said, after the Waves held Dailey to 18 points.

"USF has been dodging bullets lately and sometimes that catches up with you, but that's the best USF team I've seen in the last three years."

"Bill Sadler and Orlando Phillips had really strong games for us. Their dunks really bring out a lot of enthusiasm in our team. This was Sadler's best game all year. Boot Bond got some really big baskets for us down the stretch when they rallied."

"We didn't rebound at all tonight (USF was out-rebounded 46 to 31) so we didn't get into our running game," said USF Coach Pete

Barry.

The Dons trailed by just four points, 44-40, at the half, and narrowed the deficit to 46-44 early in the second half. Pepperdine, however, then scored eight straight points — six by guard Dane Suttle — to take a 54-44 advantage. The Waves extended their lead to 73-57, but the Dons rallied to within six points, 79-73, with five minutes left before a six-point run sealed the game.

Phillips scored 23 and Suttle had 21, including 16 in the second half. Guard Boot Bond added 17 for the Waves, 8-6. Phillips grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds.

Forward John Hegwood scored 21 points for the Dons, 14-2, while center Wallace Bryant added 16 points.

In the only other contests involving a ranked team, No. 14 Idaho beat Idaho St. 73-62.

Idaho, winning at home for the 27th straight time, led 34-29 at the half and extended that lead to 18 points with seven minutes left before coasting to victory.

Guard Ken Owens scored 21 points and Phil Hobson added 13 for Idaho, which improved its record to 14-0, 3-0 in Big Sky action, took over the lead in the conference and claimed the best record in the nation. Top-ranked North Carolina, at 13-0, plays Saturday night.

Idaho State's Robert Tate scored a game-high 22 points, while forward Jackie Fleury and Mike Denkers added 10 each.

Welsh Names Cavalier Aides

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — George Welsh, Virginia's new head football coach, has named seven of his eight assistants and the man he succeeded, Dick Bestwick, says he is severing his ties with the university.

The 48-year-old Welsh said Friday he will bring with him from Navy six of the assistants who helped him compile a 31-15-1 record with three bowl appearances in the last four seasons. Welsh said he expects to name his eighth assistant within a few days.

Bestwick, fired Nov. 30 after a 1-10 record in 1981 and a 16-49-1 record in his six seasons, said Friday he has turned down a chance to remain at the university as associate athletic director and has accepted a settlement on the last three years of a five-year contract he signed in 1979.

Terms of the settlement were not disclosed, and Bestwick said provisions of the final agreement between him and the university stipulate that neither party may discuss them.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch quoted a knowledgeable source at the university as saying the settlement figure is "somewhere close to $125,000." The Charlottesville Daily Progress said it had learned the figure was $96,000.

Bestwick's contract was reported to have paid him $70,000 a year in salary and benefits.

While Bestwick said he was not sure of his future plans, he quipped that "I've always liked painting houses."

Disclosing he was offered an assistant's job in 1980 by Forrest Gregg, then the new coach of the Cincinnati Bengals, Bestwick said "I'd like to have the opportunity I had two years ago shortly after I signed the contract with Virginia... If I'd taken it, right now I'd be in the Super Bowl."

Bestwick said he would like to remain in football but would consider a position in athletic administration. He said "there was nothing" to a recent report he had discussed the athletic director's post at Central Florida.

Bestwick is recovering from neck and chest injuries and a broken thumb he received in a Dec. 5 auto accident. He also injured his knee last fall in a sideline pileup during the Virginia game at North Carolina State.

Welsh did not make any specific assistant coaching assignments but said that included on his staff would be Ken Mack, a 1979 graduate of North Carolina and Welsh's defensive end coach last season at Navy.

Red Smith, Famed Sportswriter, Is Claimed By Death At Age 76

NEW YORK (AP) — It was the end of a long December day spent covering a National Football League playoff game between the Atlanta Falcons and the Dallas Cowboys, and Red Smith was sharing a ride with an old friend.

"Before leaving me," Furman Bisher, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal, recalled of his longtime colleague from The New York Times, "he put his hand on my shoulder and said, 'You know, the hell of it is, I love it.' That pretty well spoke for the man."

Smith, a newspaperman for 55 years and the first sports writer to win the Pulitzer Prize for commentary, died Friday at a hospital in Stamford, Conn., following a brief illness. He was 76.

"He was one of the greatest idols any young man could have," said Bisher, who had known Smith for 30 years. "He was Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb and Joe DiMaggio for any sports writer coming along."

"One of the greatest things about him was that he was such a gentleman and a gentle man."

"We've lost our leader," said Bud Collins, columnist for the Boston Globe and a television tennis commentator. "It hurts, and it will hurt every time we want to read a reasoned, literate, witty appraisal of a sporting occasion or issue."

Said Dick Young, sports columnist for the New York Daily News: "He was the greatest essayist ever to write sports or anything else in a newspaper."

Just last Monday, the man born Walter Wellesley Smith on Sept. 25, 1905, in Green Bay, Wis., announced in his column in the Times that he was cutting back from four columns a week to three. He gave no reason.

"One of the beauties of this job is that there's always tomorrow. Tomorrow things will be better," he wrote in what was to be his final piece. "Now that the quota is back to three, will things be better day after tomorrow?"

Smith started his career as a general-assignment reporter with the Milwaukee Sentinel, after graduation from Notre Dame in 1927.

In 1928, he moved to the copy desk of the St. Louis Star and shifted to sports when, as he later recalled, "one day they fired the sports department."

He became a bylined columnist for the Philadelphia Record in 1935, moving to the now-defunct New York Herald Tribune in 1945. From 1967-71 he worked for the Publishers Newspaper Syndicate, then joined the Times at the age of 66.

"Within the Times family, we always felt that bringing Red to our staff, even at an age when most men contemplate retirement, allowed us to fulfill a very special trust for sports," said A.M. Rosenthal, the paper's executive editor. "We remember him with affection and pride as a wonderful writer and a wonderful man."

Red Smith

Smith won countless awards for his writing, including the Pulitzer in 1976 for "Sports of the Times."

"Writing is easy," he once said. "I just open a vein and bleed."

He was the first sports writer to take the Pulitzer for commentary. The late Arthur Daley of the Times was the first sports writer to win a Pulitzer, in 1956, although his was for general reporting.

"I've always tried to remember that these were games little boys can play," Smith said in an interview last year on the CBS-TV show, "60 Minutes." Yet he expressed pride in covering athletics.

"Sports is not really a playworld," he said. "I think it's the real world. The people we're writing about in professional sports, they're suffering and living and dying and loving and trying to make their way through life just as the bricklayers and politicians are... The man who reports on these games contributes his small bit to the record of his time."

In a column labeled "An Appreciation" in today's Times, Dave Anderson, himself a Pulitzer winner for sports reporting, wrote:

"Red Smith was, quite simply, the best sports writer. Put the emphasis on writer."

"Of all those who have written sports for a living, nobody else ever had the command of the language, turn of the phrase, the subtlety of the skewer as he did. And perhaps nobody else ever enjoyed it more. All he wanted to be was a 'newspaper-stiff.'"

Jackson Will Announce Soon

By The Associated Press

Reggie Jackson says he will make a decision next Monday or Tuesday on where he will play baseball this year.

The California Angels, Baltimore Orioles, Atlanta Braves and New York Yankees apparently are still in the running, with the Yankees reportedly to get the last chance at negotiating with their slugger of the past five seasons.

Yankee spokesman Irv Kaze said that owner George Steinbrenner's apparent disinterest in retaining Jackson was the result of a scenario devised by Jackson's agent, Gary Walker.

"Walker has told George that a meeting with him will come as soon as Reggie has finished meeting with the other teams and sifting through their presentations," said Kaze.

Steinbrenner and Walker have been in contact every few days, Kaze said, "but there is no specific timetable" on when detailed talks with Jackson might begin.

Jackson and Walker met with Angel owner Gene Autry and club Vice President Buzzie Bavasi for about three hours Friday in Palm Springs, Calif., with Jackson and his agent outlining what they want in a contract.

According to a prepared statement released by the Angels, the club made no counter-proposal, but Bavasi, Jackson and Walker were to speak again by telephone today.

"We know he wants to play in California," said Bavasi, "it's just a question of how much he wants to play here. There's no doubt in my mind he would come here is everything else was equal."

"All things will not be equal," said Jackson, "and if everything was equal, I still don't know which team I want to play for."

Bavasi apparently was referring to Steinbrenner when he said that "unless something changes, it looks like we can afford him."

Atlanta Braves owner Ted Turner and Jackson met Wednesday in a New York restaurant, but it was not known whether the millionaire sportsman had sweetened his previous offer, reportedly a three-year, $2.4-million contract.

Jackson said he does not have an asking price, adding, "I just want to get what's commensurate with the upper crust."

Earlier this week Jackson indicated he might favor playing at Baltimore because the Orioles would use him as an outfielder as well as a designated hitter. He said Baltimore was "high on my list — way high."

Spurs Romp Over Rockets

By The Associated Press
 Almost 146 years ago, Texans had to wait a month to avenge the Alamo massacre in San Antonio with a victory at the Battle of San Jacinto near Houston. The Houston Rockets will only have to wait one day for a chance to get revenge for their massacre at San Antonio.

The San Antonio Spurs walloped the Rockets 128-90 Friday night in what Houston Coach Del Harris called "a bad day at the office."

Tonight, the two National Basketball Association teams will be in Houston for a quick rematch.

The Rockets shot miserably in the first half, hitting just 12 of 46 field goal tries for 26 percent. For the game, the Rockets hit 33 percent from the floor.

San Antonio Coach Stan Albeck said he expects tonight's game to be "entirely different. We'll never see Houston shoot 26 percent again. But we're going to go down there and play them a good game."

"This was one of those games that happens in this league once in a while," said Harris. "You could go crazy trying to analyze what happened. It was just a total breakdown and when you shoot the ball as poorly as we did you don't have a chance against San Antonio."

He said the Rockets would "have to reach down deep and grab all the energy and resources they have" to come back tonight.

NBA scoring leader George Gervin scored 32 points to lead San Antonio, but Albeck was pleased with his entire team's performance.

"Tonight we played the best basketball since I've been coach of the Spurs," said Albeck, who joined the team last season. "We had outstanding performances from so many people. We've made a great adjustment to our new personnel and the pieces are beginning to fit now."

The Spurs, who recently acquired Mike Mitchell and Roger Phegley from Cleveland, led 64-34 at the half en route to their biggest victory margin of the season. Houston hit only four of its 22 field goal tries in the second quarter and San Antonio went on a 26-6 scoring binge in the final 7½ minutes of the period.

Rookie Gene Banks scored 21 points for the Spurs, while Mitchell added 20 and Mark Olberding 18. Houston got 16 points apiece from Moses Malone and Mike Dunleavy, who had four three-point goals in the second half.

Hawks 96, 76ers 90
 John Drew scored 26 points and Rory Sparrow 22 as Atlanta handed Philadelphia its third loss in a row at home for the first time in three years.

The 76ers led by as many as nine in the first half, but the Hawks dominated the last two periods.

Bucks 122, Celtics 118
 Bob Lanier scored 16 of his season-high 26 points in the third quarter as Milwaukee snapped Boston's four-game winning streak.

Led by Lanier, the Bucks extended a 60-52 halftime edge to 93-76 after three quarters.

Larry Bird led all scorers with 29 points for the Celtics.

Lakers 97, Pacers 92
 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 30 points and Magic Johnson added 19 points and 15 rebounds to lead Los Angeles over Indiana.

The Pacers, who lost their fourth straight, led 43-25 in the second period before being outscored 25-2 the rest of the first half.

Kings 114, Nets 104
 Mike Woodson, a former Net, scored a career-high 26 points to help Kansas City beat New Jersey for its fourth straight victory at home.

The Kings broke the game open with a 17-4 spurt in the second quarter and they later led the Nets by as many as 27 points.

Bullets 93, Bulls 90
 Greg Ballard scored 20 points and Jeff Ruland added 17, including two crucial free throws with 1:33 left, to lead Washington to its fourth victory in five games.

Artis Gilmore led Chicago, which has lost its last three, with 20 points.

Nuggets 128, Mavericks 113
 Kiki Vandeweghe scored 24 points and Denver answered a Dallas rally with one of its own in the second half.

The Mavericks scored 12 consecutive points in the third period to cut a 17-point Nugget advantage to 79-74. But Denver outscored Dallas 12-2 at the start of the fourth quarter for a 100-83 edge.

Clippers 117, Cavaliers 108
 Michael Brooks scored 21 points and pulled down a career-high 14 rebounds to lead San Diego, while Cleveland suffered its ninth straight loss.

The Cavaliers, who also have lost 16 of their last 17 games, managed a 100-100 tie, but a field goal by Brooks gave the Clippers a lead they never lost.

Warriors 104, Knicks 102
 Bernard King scored 32 points, including a 20-foot jump shot with one second left to give Golden State its victory over New York.

The Knicks led 101-97 with 2:01 left, but World Free, who had 29 points for the Warriors, hit a pair of free throws to give the Warriors a 102-101 lead. Maurice Lucas, who led the Knicks with 22 points, made one of two free throws to tie the game at 102 with 39 seconds to go.

Sonics 115, Jazz 103
 Gus Williams scored 42 points, including 26 in the second half when Seattle rallied past Utah for its sixth consecutive victory.

Williams scored eight straight points midway through the fourth quarter when the Sonics exploded for 12 points in a row for a 101-89 lead with 5:25 to play.

Adrian Dantley led the Jazz with 30 points.

Wake's Duckett To Get Award

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest flanker Kenny Duckett will be recognized this month for overcoming a physical handicap to play football and for showing courage on and off the field.

Duckett will receive the Nils V. "Swede" Nelson sportsmanship award in Cambridge, Mass., on Jan. 19. Each year the award goes "to the player who by his conduct on and off the gridiron demonstrates a high esteem for the football code and exemplifies sportsmanship to an outstanding degree."

In the past season, Duckett caught 37 passes for 457 yards and seven touchdowns although he missed several games due to injury. Since the tenth grade, Duckett has suffered from diabetes and been active in the Forsyth County Diabetes Association.

Duckett, who is now participating in the Japan Bowl, also will get the Brian Piccolo award from the Greenville Touchdown Club. The award will be presented at the group's annual dinner in Greenville, S.C., on Jan. 29.

The annual Piccolo award goes to a player who overcomes injury or serious handicap to play football in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Kenny is a diabetic requiring two insulin shots daily," said Wake Forest head football coach Al Groh. "As a young player he twice broke his ankle. Yet he has never been anything but totally positive and enthusiastic in his drive to achieve his objectives. His refusal to never feel sorry for himself and his perseverance have made him an inspiration to his coaches and teammates."

Green Sets Cub Standards

CHICAGO (AP) — New Chicago Cubs Manager Lee Elia will hold that position as long as he gets the job done, says General Manager Dallas Green.

"Lee Elia is a friend and he knows my thinking," Green said Friday of the man whose hiring was the first major decision he made in his approach to rebuilding the Cubs, perennially one of baseball's worst teams and last-place finisher in the National League East in 1981.

"Lee Elia knows he'll be the first to be fired if we don't get the job done and I'll be the second to be fired," Green said at the club's mid-winter press

No Jackrabbits for North Carolina — There will be no jackrabbits legally imported into North Carolina. That's the word from the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission in response to recent requests that surplus "crop damaging" jackrabbits from Idaho be shipped here and released.

"Several people who have reabouted or seen TV clips of the roundup of an estimated 15,000 jackrabbits in Idaho have questioned us about getting permits to bring these rabbits to North Carolina and stock them," said Vernon Beville, executive director of the Wildlife Commission, "but we have not issued any permits and have no plans to do so. The importation of jackrabbits will not help bolster our native rabbit populations, and in fact, would probably hurt them and cause other problems as well."

"The jackrabbit is not closely related to our native cottontail rabbit," explained Carl Betsill, small game project leader for North Carolina. "The species have vastly different habitat and climatic requirements. Actually, there is little chance the jackrabbits would survive long enough to reproduce, and even if they did, the jackrabbit is considered a pest to crops rather than a game animal in most of its native range."

"Yet, even though the introduction of jackrabbits would likely fail, the disease-s and parasites they carry could have a serious impact on our native rabbits and other species," added Betsill. "There is a chance of introducing new and more virulent strains of tularemia (rabbit fever), as well as new species of ticks capable of transmitting wildlife disease. Another serious possibility might be the introduction of a species of tapeworm known to be native of Idaho which could adversely affect North Carolina's deer herd."

The reason for the interest in Idaho's jackrabbits stems in part from a statewide decline in cottontails in North Carolina in recent years. Unfortunately, the solution is not as simple as moving Idaho's excess jackrabbit population to North Carolina. Wildlife biologists, like Betsill, says that the best hope lies in finding ways to improve native cottontail populations through better habitat management. The Commission has recently organized a new thrust in the area of habitat management on private lands.

"The Wildlife Commission has an on-going research program that will help identify the problems of low rabbit populations," said Betsill. "We are already able to help most landowners who are willing to implement our management recommendations. We don't know all the answers, but if you can provide the right kind of habitat, native cottontail populations will usually improve to fill it. One thing we do know is that importing non-native species like the jackrabbit which have already proven to be pests in their native states is not the answer."

Blue Goose Stocking Program — has been started by a Hyde County based group, Mattamuskeet Waterfowl Tomorrow. The goal is to establish a resident flock of Blue Geese (the color phase of Snow Goose) around Lake Mattamuskeet.

Resident flocks of Canada Geese have been established with great success in surrounding states. It is hoped that the Mattamuskeet flock of Blue Geese will take hold and reproduce.

Establishing a local flock is an in-depth, time-consuming, and expensive proposition. The goal is to have 100 breeding pairs in the spring of 1984, and to maintain this breeding flock until the offspring are well established in the wild.

At this time, Mattamuskeet Wildlife Tomorrow is conducting a membership drive for its Blue Goose program. Membership blanks are available at H.L. Hodges in Greenville or by writing to Mattamuskeet Blues, Rt. 1, Box 1B, Fairfield, N.C. 27826.

Local Notes — dedicated bass fisherman Bill O'Neal of Greenville braved the winter cold recently and brought home a nice seven-pound largemouth. Bill fishes year round and just can't get it out of his system, no matter how cold the weather.

Deer season ended recently and for the Pitt County area, it was an average year. A few nice trophy-deer were taken but the standard buck went from a cow horn to a small 4-pointer.

Committee To Decide Appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — A special three-man panel will decide if Mario Andretti's appeal of the result of last year's Indianapolis 500 will be heard by the Automobile Competition Committee of the United States.

Bobby Unser beat Andretti across the finish line last May 24 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway by five seconds. But when the official results were posted the next day, Andretti was listed as the winner because Unser illegally passed several cars.

A special three-man U.S. Auto Club panel voted 2-1 in October to restore the victory to Unser. The majority said Unser did violate the rule, but said the one-lap penalty against him was improperly imposed.

It instead fined Unser and the Roger Penske Racing

Team $40,000 from the overall purse of more than $265,000. But Andretti, who drives for the Patrick Racing Team, decided to keep trying to have the official results show him the winner. He had one appeal turned down almost immediately by USAC, then filed for appeal with ACCUS.

On Friday, attorneys representing both Unser and Andretti presented arguments to three panelists representing ACCUS, the American arm of the international racing sanctioning body in Paris.

It will decide at a later date if an appeal by Andretti should be heard by the full ACCUS.

The trio hearing the lawyers Friday included ACCUS President Lee Hall, owner of Road America in Elkhart Lake, Wis.; Wally Parks, president of the National Hot Rod Association, and John Bishop, president of the International Motor Sports Association.

Hall told The Associated Press, "We previously had briefs filed by attorneys for both sides and today (Friday) we completed hearing of oral arguments."

"Now, we're studying the matter and we plan to study it further over the weekend. Hopefully, we'll have a decision in the middle or late part of next week."

Keith Moreland and pitchers Dickie Noles and Dan Larson. The Cubs also added free agents Bill Campbell and Ferguson Jenkins.

"We've got a lot of strong arms and quite a few young pitchers," said Elia. "I don't know exactly what role each will play, but we know Bill Campbell will be coming out of the bullpen and Fergie Jenkins will be a starter."

ECU's Lewis Joins Navy

East Carolina University's football staff suffered its second loss in the last couple of weeks Friday when Terry Lewis, offensive line coach, was named to the staff of the U.S. Naval Academy.

Gary Tranquill, who took over the Navy job after George Welsh left for the University of Virginia, named Lewis along with three other new coaches. He also announced that three present Navy staff members would be retained.

Lewis, who came to East Carolina only last year from Southern University, had previously served on the Navy staff.

A native of Memphis, Tenn., Lewis, 33, graduated from George Washington Carver High School, where he played in the offensive line in football and ran track. He completed his education at Southern University in 1970, where he also was an offensive lineman.

He coached at the U.S. Naval Academy Preparatory School in Bainbridge, Md., from 1971-72, then was offensive line coach at Navy from 1972-74. He then served two years in the same position with Western Michigan University, three years at the University of Illinois and a year at Southern prior to coming to ECU last fall.

Earlier, offensive coordinator Wright Anderson was named as head coach at Elon College.

Fulghum In Legion Hall

SNOW HILL — Snow Hill American Legion baseball coach James Fulghum will be among the inductees at the 14th annual Tar Heel American League Hall of Fame banquet to be held Saturday night in Cherryville.

Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell, former St. Louis Cardinal pitcher turned congressman will be the speaker for the event.

Cherryville's Post 100 won the 1981 state championship and will also be honored at the affair, which will see five inductees enter the Legion Hall of Fame. The hall was started in 1967 to honor coaches, officials and other persons who have contributed much to the baseball program.

Fulghum, the coach of the Snow Hill Post 94 team, will go into the hall along with Aaron Moss of Cherryville Post 100, Willis Smith of Belmont Post 144, Ira Howe of Hamlet Post 49 and the late Bill White of Greensboro Post 53.

Fulghum, who also serves as athletic director and baseball coach at Greene Central High School, coached his 1981 team to the state finals before bowing to Cherryville.

The five bring to a total of 79 inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Scientists Battle Termites To Save Old Cathedral

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

MONREALE, Sicily (AP) — Scientists are battling termites which have eaten away almost the entire ceiling of the magnificent 12th-century Norman cathedral of Monreale.

But their task is complicated because they cannot use insecticides for fear of discoloring frescoes in the church, considered an architectural wonder of the Middle Ages.

And there are signs that termites are also attacking other historical treasures in Sicily, including Palermo's Palatine Chapel, known for its rich Arab-Norman decoration and honeycomb-like wooden ceiling, and the cathedral in Cefalu east of Palermo.

"There's no scientific explanation why the whole roof didn't collapse years ago," said Professor Giovanni Lotta, an insect specialist at the University of Palermo who is directing the restoration work at Monreale.

He said only hollow and rotten wooden beams were supporting tons of brick tiles on the roof when the damage was discovered in 1977.

Lotta said termites fear light and as a result, there was no damage in any exposed wood. "Nobody suspected a termite attack until parts of the roof over the main apse sank about 8 inches, because the insects ate only the interior, just like leaving cans after emptying their content," Lotta said.

Openings were made in various places to bring in light and reduce the humidity to a level that would prevent them from breeding.

"The job would have been relatively easy if we used insecticides — chemical solvents or sprays — but to do so would have discolored the frescoes and damaged other works of art," Lotta said in an interview.

The cathedral's inside and outside walls are limestone and marble. The termites travelled to the wooden ceiling, restored after a fire in 1811, feeding on barley and wheat straws used to mix the plaster to attach the mosaics, Lotta said.

"By conventional wisdom, all the mosaics should have disintegrated into pieces," he said.

The cathedral, located just outside of Palermo, is famous for its vast 12th century mosaics representing the complete cycle of the Old and New Testaments and a gigantic Christ conferring his blessing.

Soon after the damage was discovered, new support beams were inserted and transparent nylon safety nets were hung below the ceiling. But the anti-termite operation and restoration did not begin until late 1979 when Lotta finished the study on the termites.

All the beams and panels over the side naves also have been replaced, and a network of ventilation ducts has been installed.

The work, which took nearly two years, cost more than $550,000. To finish the work in the central nave will require an additional $1.2 million, but the regional parliament has not appropriated the money and the work has stopped.

Lotta was confident the new measures would repulse any further termite attack, but he said a city sewage pipe that skirts the cathedral must be rerouted "to prevent another type of termite from approaching the cathedral."

Here's the Answer

Q — About three years ago I finished our attic with gypsum wallboard. It seemed to be a good job, but recently I noticed that some of the nails are popping out. What can I do about this, short of removing the boards and attaching new ones?

A — No need to remove the boards, but you will have to do some patching. When a popped nail is easy to pull out, do so. When it appears that some damage might be caused to the board by taking out a nail, drive it back in. Whatever kind of nails you used the first time, make sure this time to use those made especially for gypsum board. They have little rings on them that help to prevent popping. When you hammer in the new nails, do so gently, with just enough firmness to produce a recess but without breaking the paper facing. Use joint cement, again made especially for use with gypsum board, to cover the recesses and the nailhead openings. Smooth the patched areas and then decide whether another application is necessary.

Q — We had candles on our dining room table over the holidays. We were very careful with them to be sure there were no accidents, but unknown to us until a few days later, some wax got onto the wood and hardened in place. My husband wanted to scrape it off, but since the table is made of good wood, I asked him to wait until we got some advice on how to remove the wax without damaging the wood. Can this be done?

A — You have to heat the wax slightly so that it melts, but you must be very careful not to apply too much heat. The best way to do this is to place a piece of clean white blotting paper on the wax, one that covers the wax and the area for several inches around it. Heat an iron so that it is only lukewarm and press the blotter lightly. As the heat melts the wax, the blotter will absorb the wax. To avoid any possibility of damage, do this four or five times to get off the wax a little at a time rather than apply too much heat in an effort to get the job done faster.

Q — My two children were playing in the dining room when they spilled some water on the lower part of a wallpapered wall. I did not see it for several hours, by which time the water had soaked in pretty well. I wiped the area carefully with a dry sponge, but the stain is still there after three days. Is there some way to remove it? So far it has not loosened the wallpaper. I have heard that stains can be removed from wallpaper with a pencil eraser, but I have hesitated to try this method for fear of tearing the paper.

A — You were wise not to use the eraser, which works only on some kinds of wallpaper when there is a very light stain, but which, as you say, might tear paper that is wet. I am sorry to tell you there is very little chance of getting out the stain other than to keep on applying a dry sponge every so often. There is some possibility that the stain may have disappeared between the time you wrote and the time you see this, but even that could not occur unless the water was very clean.

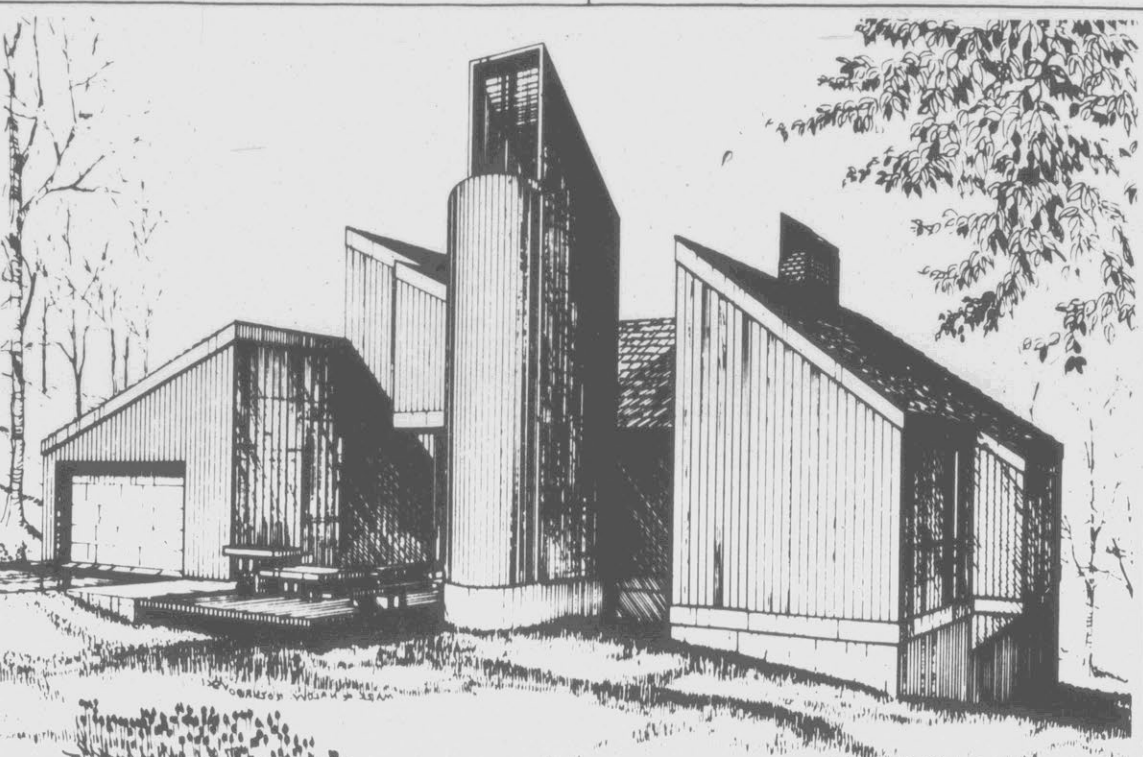

Q — I used denatured alcohol as a thinner for shellac with good results. Can I also use it with varnish?

A — Definitely no. The thinner for most varnishes is turpentine or mineral spirits. Read the label to see what is recommended.

(The techniques of applying varnish, lacquer, shellac, bleach, stain, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.)

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Castlewood

Unique Design Creates Quality Family Living

By Jerry Bishop

Impressive is just the word to describe this home, which has a long list of things in its favor — from its appealing exterior to its feature-packed interior. Carefully study the floor plan and you will see that each square foot makes its contribution to complete livability. This captivating styled home offers more contributions to easier and better living than it seems possible one house could supply. Each area of this design contributes to its overall livability. Note how the active and quiet sections of the home have been well separated. Exact planning has provided maximum livability which is true economy in home building. The entire design adds up to a dream home, not only in economy but also in efficiency and appearance. This multi-level home offers excitement of design and affordable living.

Using the stair tower to connect all levels, the long hallways are no longer necessary, providing more actual living space and there is no longer the need for heating unnecessary space. The upper level hosts the master suite complete with the his and her vanities in the bath. Lots of storage space adds to the privacy and comfort of this exceptional suite. The main level has two decks for easy entertaining, one off the dining room and the other in the front, replacing the old fashioned porch or patio. The well planned kitchen is a delight for the resident chef, keeping everything well organized and convenient. Two bedrooms and a central bath are also on this level as is the spacious living room. The lower level offers a giant family room complete with sliding glass doors opening to the lower deck. This is also where the hobby rooms and the utility rooms are housed. There is a large bedroom and another bath in this area and upon studying the plans carefully one notes that there is an abundance of storage area throughout The Castlewood.

All wood construction provides an easy to care for home and the floor plan offers an easy to live in home. A truly fine home anyone would be proud to own.

Home Center Poses Challenge

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Some women compete successfully in the professional sports world. Others manage a household while also holding down a salaried job. Are there any challenges left?

There is one, says Aysc Kenmore. The challenge of selecting and using home entertainment equipment remains to be tackled, in her opinion.

"For years, women have been virtually shut out of the audio-video electronics marketplace by an avalanche of technical jargon and unhelpful male sales personnel who ignore them or talk down to them," she said.

"However, if a woman can operate a clock radio or a food processor, she can certainly learn how to buy and use any home entertainment equipment on the market." An audio and video workshop for women was recently held in Ms. Ken-more's Liberty Music and Video store in New York. About 70 women (and one man) showed up to ask questions, try out the equipment and read the literature provided. At the conclusion of the event, at least two women who attended pronounced it a success.

"I learned to feel more secure about asking questions," explained Lys Margold, a magazine copywriter. "Up to now, I had not felt confident about making a choice or even shopping for audio components. I've noticed that salesmen don't take a woman seriously as a general rule. The attitude seems to be 'When is your husband coming in?'"

To Cherrie Nanninga, a corporate planner, the chance to see new equipment demonstrated and explained was worthwhile. She said she was able to inform herself about components without being patronized.

"One woman thanked me for holding up a videocassette. She hadn't known what it was and was too embarrassed to ask," said Ms. Kenmore. The idea for the workshop came to her after observing customers at the store. She noticed that even highly competent women seemed afraid to choose audio or video equipment without the help of a trusted male.

If you're not using your exercise equipment, sell it this winter in these columns. Call 752-6166.

AGRICULTURAL EXTENSION SERVICE garden clinic

Q. Will the new St. Augustinegrass "Raleigh" be available this year for homeowners? (E.E., Burgaw)

A. No, not at a price that you can likely afford to pay for it. If you could locate sprigs, you would have to buy them as registered stock. These are sprigs used for increasing the sprig supply, and they are quite expensive because of the terrific demand for this new grass. It will likely be 1983 or 1984 before enough sprigs are available to make the price attractive to homeowners.

Homeowners in eastern North Carolina might keep an eye on this new grass, which was developed by the N.C. Agricultural Research Service. It has survived temperatures down to zero and tolerates the St. Augustine grass decline virus. It is our only warm season grass with shade tolerance. Sod farms from here to Texas are buying as many sprigs as they can get for increase.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

A couple of years ago, an article in this space about underground houses, based on a book with that very title — "Underground Houses" — brought numerous letters from persons who could not see how anyone could live in that fashion.

It was, most of them said, a return to a way of life that resembled cave-dwelling, from which mankind had escaped thousands of years ago. And, they added, it reminded them of another fairly recent era, when the fear of new weapons of destruction caused the construction of countless underground bomb shelters which, fortunately, never had to be used.

While there are many thousands of underground houses in the United States right now, author Mike Edelhart prefers to call them earth shelters, a term he considers more appropriate to houses "in harmony with the earth. In fact, his new book is called "The Handbook of Earth Shelter Design" (Doubleday).

For anyone interested in underground or partially underground housing, his non-technical overview presents designs and photographs of many types of earth-sheltered houses, including hillside, desert and suburban, among others, demonstrating their amazing variety. He also delves into potential problems, such as moisture, zoning laws, financing and people's prejudices.

Stressed constantly is the idea that the goal of earth-sheltering is not to make the land conform to the building, but to design the building to get the most out of the land. Many underground homeowners are quoted as saying that the biggest advantage of their kinds of shelters is the energy that is saved. One, a resident of frosty River Falls, Wis., says he pays one-third of what he would pay for heating in a regular structure.

The temperature variations in an underground house are not as great as those in a surface building because the earth does not react as fast or as severely to temperature changes as the air does. If the temperature on the surface ranges from zero to 95 degrees Fahrenheit, the temperature of the earth 12 feet down will vary from 50 to 65 degrees.

Also, beneath-ground houses avoid the ravages of hurricanes, tornadoes and other storms. Underground architect John Barnard says this type of dwelling does not "whip" during an earthquake. The biggest damage to surface buildings is when the quake twists a building and then whips it back, tearing it apart.

A Review

Aussie Filmmakers Score On 'Gallipoli'

Following "Breaker Morant," Australian filmmakers have scored again with an exceptional movie based on a military subject. Peter Weir's "Gallipoli," now playing at the Buccaneer movies, is one of the finest of all war movies, and one of the best films of recent years from any viewpoint.

A deep sense of patriotism combined with youthful yearning for adventure prompt young men from Australia to enlist for military service. The time is 1915. For most, their decision was not to any significant degree motivated for the love of Mother England. Rather, it was an inner response to an ingrained ethic to do the right thing, to do their bit to help. Doubt and caution expressed to these eager youths by older, perhaps wiser men were of no avail.

Some were so young they had to lie and fabricate documents in order to enlist. All scented glory, and wanted in on it.

"Gallipoli" focuses on half a dozen men from the remote hinterlands of western Australia. Two of these, both outstanding sprinters whose friendship begins at a country track meet, are the central characters. Archy, a rancher's son, is portrayed by Mark Lee, a 22-year old veteran of Australian theater and television making his screen debut. Mel Gibson, a 25-year old American-born Australian who has starred in several acclaimed Australian films, has the role of Frank Dunne, Archy's "city" dude buddy. He enlists in the infantry instead of the light horse brigade when he fails to qualify as a horse rider.

In secondary, but important roles are four railroad workers who quit their road gang to enlist — David Argue as Snowy, Robert Grubb as Billy, Brian Anderson as Angus and Tim McKenzie as Barney.

On a time and geographic scale, "Gallipoli" falls into three major sequences: the early days of 1915 in the vast, thinly populated stretches of Western Australia — an area reminiscent of the American West in earlier days; the summer of 1915 where the men taste the exotic, astonishing life of a totally new lifestyle in Cairo, Egypt while undergoing pre-battle training; and the autumn weeks where they experience the terrible reality of war at Gallipoli in Turkey.

In each sequence, the camera catches the particular ambience of place, just as the dialogue of the film's script reflects the changing circumstances under which these men live their daily lives. The transition from youthful innocence to a brief fling as amazed playboys in Egypt, then to the quiet courage needed to endure the horror of blood and death is convincingly realized through superlative acting and a taut, intelligent script.

Weir is also a master in contrasting the visual impact of a few people in an immense landscape with huge crowds in closely confined settings. The film is further enriched by the inclusion of music appropriate to the time — "It's A Long Way To Tipperary," a couple of Strauss waltzes, "Australia Will Be There" and Paganini's "Centone de Sonata No. 3" are examples.

Just as "Breaker Morant" showed the cruel fate that can befall innocent men through the folly of an unbending stance on the part of a government seeking a convenient way to save face; "Gallipoli" reflects the relentless insanity of war and the tragic waste of life that is doubly poignant when military leaders blindly adhere to pre-conceived strategy — no matter that reality fails to match the paper rules.

There's a historical basis for "Gallipoli." The heavy loss sustained by Australians and New Zealanders troops in the drawn-out, badly bungled battle created an uproar in England that eventually led to the resignation of Churchill from the government.

"Gallipoli" is unabashedly sentimental, old-fashioned in depicting the virtues of patriotism, of high personal standards and the depth of emotional rapport that can exist between friends sharing common bonds of adventure and danger. There's a commendable respect in this film for the material and for the morals that were indeed basic to the fabric of life in the early part of this century. Touches of humor provide a welcome saving grace to the dramatic intensity of the story.

Peter Weir wrote the original story on which David Williamson based the screenplay. Weir also directed. Weir has received international acclaim for films such as "Picnic at Hanging Rock," "The Last Wave," and that oddity among films, "Cars That Eat People." In Gallipoli, he has achieved a triumph in film making that equals, perhaps surpasses all his previous efforts.

If you're one of those who seldom go to the movies because you're tired of tasteless blockbusters of sex and profanity, go to see "Gallipoli." It will restore your faith in humanity and will also assure you that there still are people like Weir who can create film masterpieces that are totally rewarding. ("Gallipoli," incidentally, is one of those rarities for mature audiences — it's rated PG.)

City School Board To Meet Monday

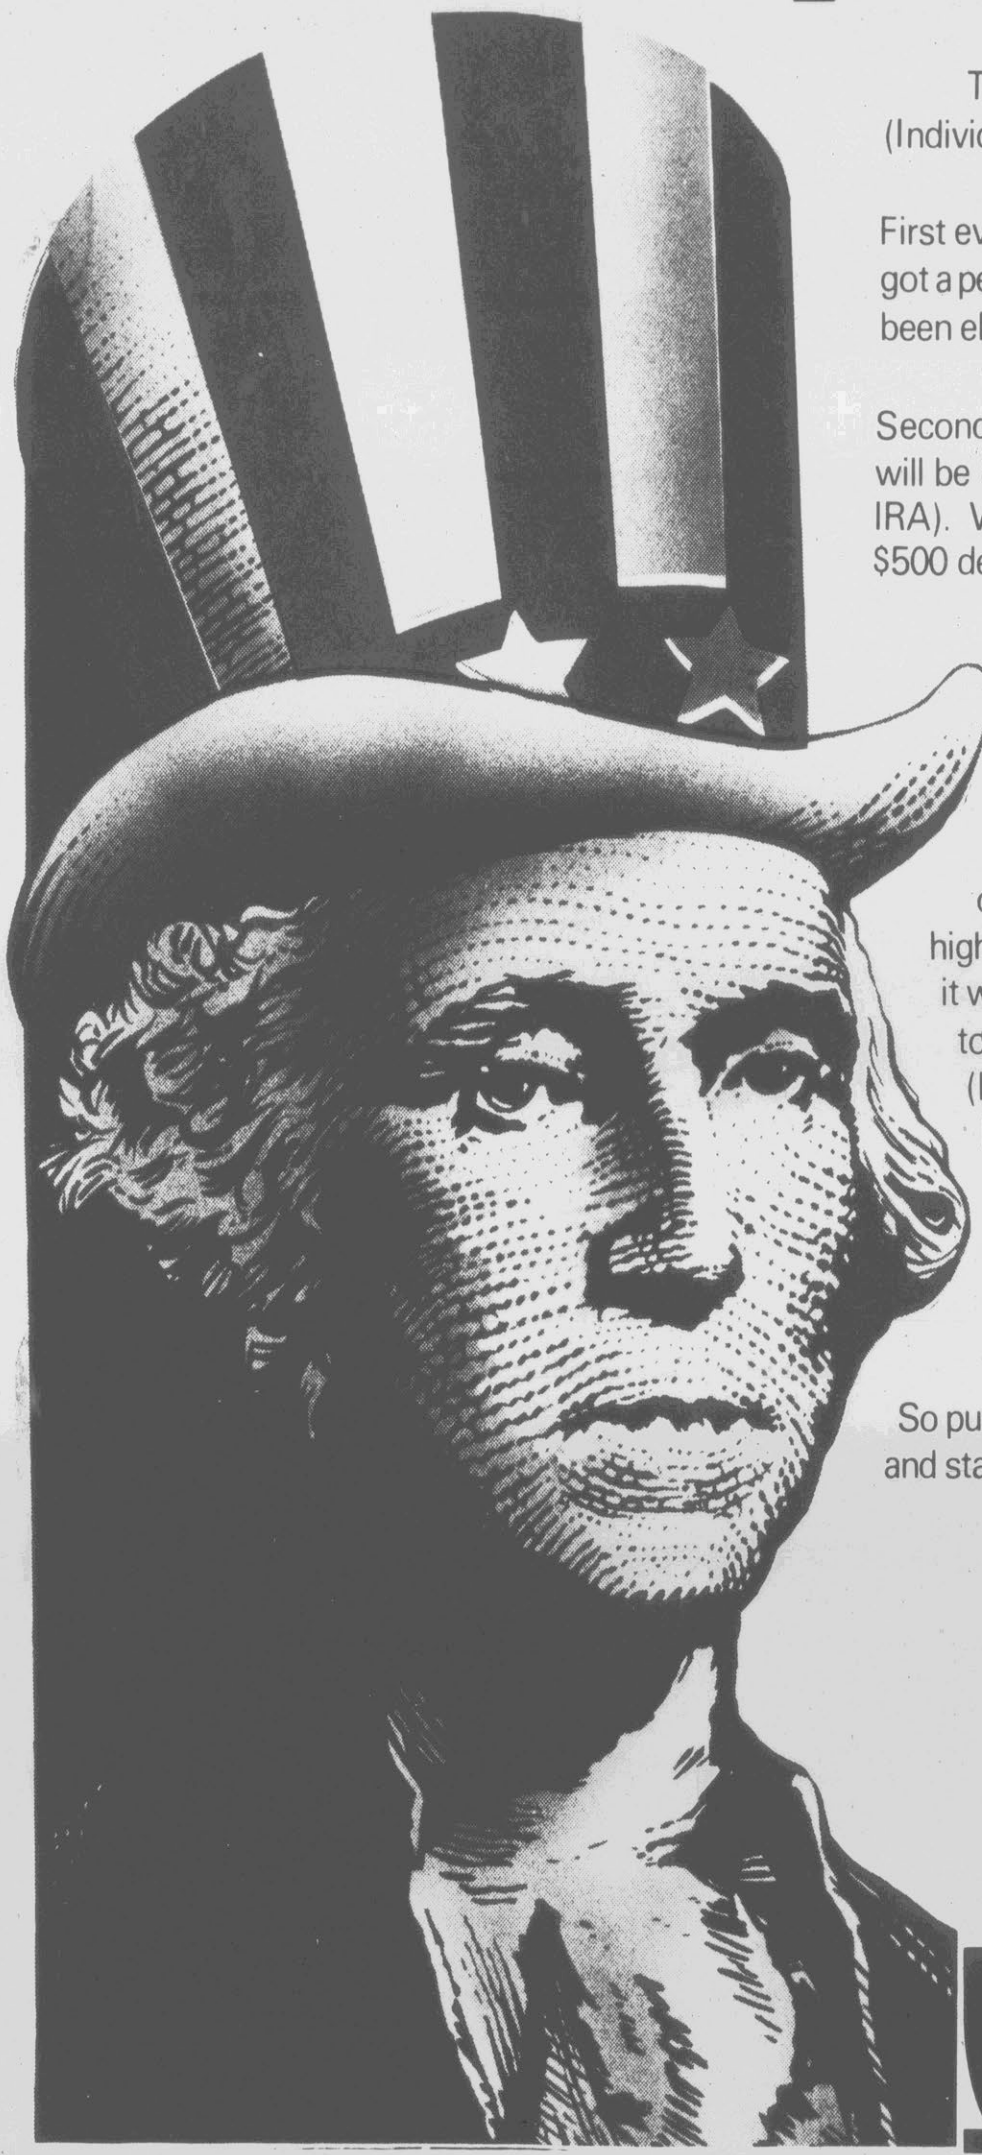

The action meeting of the Board of Education of the Greenville City Schools will be held at 8 p.m. Monday at Rose High.

Items up for action on the agenda include a media selection policy, security systems, radio contracts, paying bids, surplus property, budget amendments, the audit report, a sales tax resolution and personnel action.

QUICK-ACTION Classified Ads are the answer to passing on your extras to someone who wants to buy.

Beginning January 1, 1982, Uncle Sam now gives you a $2000 reason to open an IRA at First Federal. And everyone is eligible.

There are two big changes in the IRA (Individual Retirement Account) at First Federal.

First everyone is eligible. Even if you've already got a pension or retirement fund and you've never been eligible for an IRA before. Now you are.

Second, the maximum contribution to your IRA will be $2000 instead of $1500 ($2250 spousal IRA). We don't have to tell you what an extra $500 deduction can mean at tax time.

With an IRA at First Federal, you can write off the full amount of your contribution (up to $2000).

You won't have to pay a penny in taxes on the amount of your contribution or the high rate of interest it earns, until you withdraw it when you retire. (You must be at least 59½ to withdraw from your IRA to avoid stiff IRS (Internal Revenue Service) penalties).

But what's important is that when you retire, your income and tax bracket will most likely be lower than it is now. And that adds up to less taxes now, and less taxes later.

So put yourself first. Open an IRA at First Federal and start paying less taxes.

Your IRA funds are, of course, available to you at any time. However, there is a stiff IRS tax penalty if you withdraw from this account before age 59½. You must receive at least $2000 a year in compensation to be eligible for an IRA.

Community College President Is Female

WILLIAMSTON — "The time was right. The situation was right. I had the educational background and right kinds of work experiences to emerge as a potential presidential candidate of a community college," said Dr. C. Neill McLeod, president of Martin Community College.

"I think you also have to have a network of people to support you. I was fortunate to have such. It is an honor and privilege to be the only woman community college president in North Carolina. I have met a lot of fine people and I am happy that I have broadened my circle of colleagues and associates. I have been appreciative of the help they have given me.

When asked if being a female president had caused any problems, Dr. McLeod said, "No, I don't think it has been a problem. I appreciate the fine support and good working relationships with my male counterparts. In fact, I was very flattered to serve on the Community College Presidents Executive Committee this year, particularly, because they realized they would have to clean up their language if I were going to be in attendance at their meetings," she said.

"When I came here, I wanted the institution to become an integral part of the community and be responsive to meeting the education needs of the community we serve. Of course, because of the unique nature of all community colleges, we need to make ourselves attractive to the college bound, to have good technical programs and to make sure we had the appropriate (for this area) vocational programs.

During the past two years, three vocation programs have been added and the focus of one has been changed. Machinist, air conditioning/heating/refrigeration mechanics and industrial electronics were added. Architectural drafting was changed to mechanical drafting. "All are needed in the job market in this particular area," she said.

"Because of the mixture of our institution, we do enroll students needing building-block skills before they are able to handle technical skills. Therefore, these are the main things we have done in the past two and a half years in the program areas," Dr. McLeod said.

"A great deal of my time in this period has been spent in trying to improve administrative processes in developing strong relationships with the various community, state and national groups which any institution needs for its survival.

"A continuing education upgrading program for people already employed was started last fall for Weyerhaeuser. The community college has also provided trained labor pools in order that new industry did have potential employees available to hire when they started up," she continued.

"We (my staff and I) are proud of the continuing high quality service that we provide in adult basic education and adult high school education programs. We are expanding the programs to reach more people," she said. "The institution (when I walked in) did need to develop a long-range plan and with the help of federal dollars, this plan is almost completed. All aspects of the institution were involved and upon completion, the community will see that institutional effort will be directed toward its stated purposes and goals. Taxpayers need to feel that their tax dollars are being spent wisely and if they can see the institution is trying to focus effort on its stated purposes they can feel more comfortable and we can be more accountable for the expenditure of those tax dollars.

"I knew we needed a good developmental studies program that would be a significant education service for students who needed developmental studies. We have been studying policies and procedures that needed changes in order that it become a useful program. So one thing I did was go after federal funds to hire the personnel needed in the developmental studies area. Today, I am proud to say we have a reading instructor, English instructor, math instructor and counselor," continued Dr. McLeod.

"Many students enrolling do not know what job opportunities are available and aren't aware of their own appetites. I set about trying to find federal dollars to develop a career center which could be used by our students as well as the community at large that might be potential students. We were funded and this particular center is functioning at this time. I am looking forward to seeing all the exciting things materializing through this center.

"In addition to this long-range plan, we have conducted job content evaluation studies for all positions in the institution. We have developed a wage and salary program and a job assessment program. A long-range renovation plan has been developed and adopted by the board. We have been funded to develop a management information system in order that we will have data to make better decisions. At the present time we are in the process of deciding what kind of computer to purchase and we are developing a strategy in order that this computer can be used to support a computer education program in our business area," she remarked.

"When I came along, girls were encouraged to be teachers, nurses or secretaries. I really wasn't interested in any of those things. I did get a degree in sociology and thought I might do something in group work or community organization. After college I went to New York City to see the city and was a girl-friday for a year. After the year, I was bored with the job and decided to put my degree to work and went to work with the Girl Scouts of Greater New York as a field adviser in Brooklyn. At that time, the organization had one of the finest continuing education programs for its professional workers and they trained me to be a community organization specialist. That's how I became involved in learning and teaching," she recalled.

Dr. McLeod ended up back in Raleigh, after a few years in New York as the secretary to an industrial relations manager in an industry where she became exposed to aspects of personnel administration. "An opening became available for me to work with the Pines of Carolina Girl Scout Council in Raleigh and Wake County, which I did for three years. I then became director of personnel and relations for that council for three years plus serving as acting executive director for a year," she said.

"With those experiences I saw I needed further education and went back to get my master's. While there I became very aware of the potential of the community college system in North Carolina and saw there might be a career opportunity for me. I applied for and was granted a community college administration intern fellowship. Then I began learning about the community college system," she continued.

She did an internship at Southeastern Community College, Whiteville. "While doing my dissertation, I took a temporary job as director of student activities at Rockingham Community College, Wentworth. After receiving my degree, I was offered a position as dean of adult continuing education at Piedmont Technical Institute, Roxboro, and then after several years in that position was promoted to vice president for instruction and student development. From there, I came to Martin County," she said.

Her resignation from her present position was announced last week. "The board and I have a different philosophy in the way in which the institution should be run," she added.

The date of her resignation is not settled at this time.

"If you have a different philosophy — then you need to go to a situation where your philosophy is compatible. So whether it be in community college education, higher education or business or industry — it's a big world out there. There's a lot of options," said Dr. McLeod.

Neither Dr. McLeod nor the board's members have pinpointed the cause of their philosophical differences.

ARCHITECT'S RENDERING... of future facility improvements of the front entrance at Martin Community College is viewed by the College President, Dr. C. Neill McLeod.

A PLANNING CONFERENCE... concerning expanding services to residents of Martin Community College's tri-service area, Martin, Washington and Bertie Counties, is held by Dr. C.

Neill McLeod and Dr. Geoff E. Balkam, dean of continuing education. Mrs. Faye Lilley, secretary to Dr. McLeod, takes notes.

Psychologist Treats Wives Of Vietnam Veterans

By NANCY TRAVER
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — The wives of Vietnam veterans have never watched a buddy die, carried an M-16 rifle or survived in a jungle half a world away. But for many women, the war has come home with husbands unable to put Vietnam behind them.

"There are plenty of programs for vets, but their wives are secondary. Many times, I find women suffering even more than their husbands, because they have nowhere to go for help," said psychologist Candis Williams, who, as the wife of a Vietnam veteran, has pioneered a counseling program for other wives.

Nearly 1 million American soldiers served in combat in Vietnam, and half still suffer from the stress they experienced during the war, according to the federal government.

The men who went to war can use programs set up by the Veterans Administration or the privately sponsored Disabled American Veterans.

Ms. Williams' 2-year-old sessions, where groups of six to 12 women could discuss their problems, were among the first in the nation for veterans' wives. She was the first psychologist to publish a guide for other professionals who wanted to begin work in the field, according to DAV outreach program director Bob Lenham.

Her pioneering efforts laid the groundwork for the creation of other programs in DAV centers across the nation, Lenham said.

Her husband, Tom, became active in an early Vietnam veterans' program that was started in Denver by the DAV in 1979. In the beginning, she kept her distance.

"I backed away from getting involved at first, because I didn't want to set up a ladies' auxiliary, and I didn't want to do something aimed only at helping the men get better," said Ms. Williams. "I changed my mind when I saw there were a lot of people who were really hurting, and it seemed they had nowhere to go for help."

Before she could help the women, she had to learn about what was bothering their husbands, Ms. Williams said. She was able to find the answers to most of her questions by turning to her own husband, who served in Vietnam for two years.

Williams said he "buried" most of his memories after his return home from the war. It wasn't until 1979, when he saw the movie "The Deer Hunter," which told the story of the war's effects on a group of men from a small Pennsylvania town. It was then that Williams began to relive his war experiences.

"The war invaded the fabric of veterans' lives — their sleep, employment and all their relationships," causing loneliness, depression and a refusal to accept responsibility, he said.

"Women in some of my counseling sessions say they feel they are expected to give and give and give," said Ms. Williams.

A veteran's wife must learn she need not be "wife, mother, nurse, lover and breadwinner," she said. "To be healthy, women have to get into learning what they want and what they need to be happy."

For some women, that may require leaving their husbands.

One woman who has faced that decision is Diana, a veteran's wife who asked that her real name not be used.

"At first, I felt inadequate and worthless, and I thought I was to blame for all my husband's problems," said Diana.

Her husband displayed the typical symptoms of combat-related stress. He rarely mentioned Vietnam, but she was unable to forget he was a soldier, she said.

"He wouldn't sit in a restaurant unless he had his back against the wall so he could keep an eye on everyone in the room," she said. "He used to hit the floor whenever he heard a loud noise and anyone who surprised him from behind took the risk of getting hit."

Her husband kept a box full of ribbons and medals from his two years in Vietnam, but he refused to talk about the war, Diana said.

"The only thing he ever mentioned was that his whole company was killed two days after he came home," she said. "I know he has some survivor guilt over that."

Diana said her husband drifted from job to job, declared bankruptcy in one state, and moved the family a dozen times in five years.

Diana held three jobs while continuing to do all the housework and cooking. The burden drove her to a suicide attempt, she said.

Her husband visited a counselor when she threatened to divorce him and it was then they realized he was suffering from combat-related stress.

"He tried to explain to me that after being in a life-or-death situation in combat, nothing else seemed important anymore, like paying bills or going to work," she said.

But Diana realized she could no longer cope with her husband's problems, and told him to take their children and live with his parents while she sorted out her life.

After a three-month separation, Diana plans to visit

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Today's kids have three things that distinguish them from the children of a generation ago: They have names of other people stamped all over their clothes; are never more than two inches away from a pocket computer, and carry their own door key.

By the time a child in the United States reaches the age of five, he will have owned 3,056 door keys and broken into his own home on the average of three times a week.

Having an incentive to walk through the front door of a house like a person is no incentive at all for keeping track of the key.

The problem has reached epidemic proportions. Every afternoon in businesses and industries all over the country, the phone rings for every working mother on the premises. The dialog is universal.

"Mom, I forgot my door key."

"Where did you leave it?" (She doesn't really want to know. She's stalling for time.)

"Where's your sister?" ("She's waiting for the phone to call you when I hang up.")

"Where are you calling from?" ("The neighbors who think you're neglecting your children.")

"Why don't you go home with Harold?" (He's calling his mother on a pay phone outside school.)

"Can't you use your credit card to jam the lock?" ("I can't get a credit card until I get out of the third grade and get a job.")

There is a bright spot in all this. Latch-key children have become the most agile, self-reliant, enterprising, problem-solving generation to ever train a hamster to thread his body through the bathroom drain and unlock the patio doors.

They can crack a dead bolt, maneuver around a $3,000 no-fail alarm system, silence a vicious dog, come in through heating ducts, fan vents and stationary windows. A youngster the other day thought he had a real breakthrough in getting into his own home when he came down a 12 x 18-inch chimney. The fire department rescued him when he got wedged in just inches from the bottom where he dangled for 20 minutes.

There is no doubt in my mind that he will lose his key, come down the chimney again and succeed.

There's a future for these keyless children and their ingenuity. I don't even want to think what it is.

for your family, get your affairs in order. I came across this gem in The Survivors, a splendid magazine for widowed people. I obtained permission from the author, Judge Sam Harrod III of Eureka, Ill., to reprint it:

IF YOU DON'T HAVE A WILL, YOUR STATE HAS ONE FOR YOU.

The Statutory "Will" of John Doe
1. John Doe, make this my "will," by failing to have a will of my own choice prepared by my attorney.

1. I give one-half of all my property, both personal and real estate, to my CHILDREN, and the remaining one-half to my WIFE.

2. I appoint my WIFE as Guardian of my children, if she survives me; but as a safeguard, I require that:
a. my WIFE make written account every year to Probate Court, explaining how and why she spent money necessary for proper care of our children;

b. my WIFE file a performance BOND, with sureties, to be approved by Probate Court, to guarantee she will properly handle our children's money;

c. when our children become adults, my WIFE must file a complete, itemized, written account of everything she has done with our children's money;

d. when our son and daughter become age 18, they can do whatever they please with their share of my estate;

e. no one, including my WIFE, shall have the right to question how our children spend their shares.

3. If my WIFE does not survive me, or dies while any of our children are minors, I do not nominate a Guardian of our children, but hope relatives and friends may mutually agree on the one, and if they cannot agree, the Probate Court can appoint any Guardian it likes, including a stranger.

4. I do not appoint an Executor of my estate, and hope the Probate Court appoints someone I would approve.

5. If my WIFE remarries, the next husband:
a. shall receive one-third of all my WIFE'S property;

b. need not spend any of his share on our children, even if they need support; and

c. can give his share to anyone he chooses, without giving a penny to our children.

6. I do not care to learn whether there are ways to lower my death taxes, and know as such as possible will go to the government, instead of my WIFE and our CHILDREN.

In witness whereof, I have completely failed to make a different will of my own choice with the advice of my attorney, because I really did not care to go to all that bother, and I adopt this, by default, as my "will." — (no signature required) John Doe

Cowboy Fills Evenings With Embroidery Work

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
FAIRVIEW, Okla. (AP) — Shorty Rose is all cowboy, from the battered belt hat that shades the frizzled, bronzed face to the well-worn, pointy-toed boots that shuffle through the dust of this northwestern Oklahoma town.

But in the evening he doesn't go honky-tonking or swap lies with other men who once bounced aboard the wild stock in the rodeos. Instead, he returns to his trailer home to catch up on his prize-winning crocheting or embroidery.

"I can't keep up with it," he drawls. "I sell everything I make. I even have it sold before I make it. I've got three tablecloths yet to make, including this one here that's 60 by 108 inches."

James H. Rose, 66, — "Everybody just knows me as 'Shorty'" — is a former rodeo bull rider, coal miner, farmer, railroad and dairy worker who is now employed at the Fairview Sales Barn, where weekly cattle auctions are held. He says he doesn't see anything unusual about his hobby.

"I know a lot of people call it 'woman's work,' but I can do it better than most women," he says.

And he has the prizes to back up the boast, including the first-place blue ribbon from this year's Major County Fair for his hand-embroidered tablecloth.

"I've won the blue ribbon the past five years," he says with a chuckle. "This one ole gal came up to me and said, 'I'll be glad when you quit competing so I can get a chance to win.' But I'm going to keep right on as long as I can."

"And I don't ever use a thimble, either," he says. "They just get in the way. But a needle sure does make the end of my finger full of holes."

Rose's winning ways aren't confined to the county fair, either. "I won first in Oklahoma City at the State Fair for my embroidery work and first place in Seattle, Wash., for my crocheting."

"I've got a pair of pillow cases that I made that are in Ireland now. I won first on them at the fair and gave them to a lady and she took them to Ireland. She's a school teacher over there."

He says he got started on his handiwork "back in the '50s" while working as a drawbridge operator for the Northern Pacific Railroad in Washington. "I just started piddling around, crocheting, embroidering. It was just something to keep me busy," he said.

Rose says it will take him about three weeks — "working part time, in the evenings and on the weekends" — to embroider the big tablecloth he's working on. When it's finished, he says he'll sell it "for about $50," or just $20 more than the materials cost.

"I don't charge much for my work, just enough to buy something else," he says.

Pennsylvania Teachers Minimize Class Control

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Sunday, January 17, 1982—C-5 year," said Mrs. Rosenberg. "The kids knew I meant business. I still got tense, but I didn't flip out."

By TIM PETTIT
 Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — After being screamed at, shoved and ignored by her students during 17 years of teaching, Sara Achenbach at last has found peace in her classroom.

Has she gotten tough with the students? No. The statewide teachers' union likes to say she accomplished it by doing the LEAST she can. LEAST is a program in classroom discipline.

"The program teaches teachers how to do as little as possible to maintain control, because anytime you create a disruption in responding to misbehavior, you lose teaching time," said Roger Erskine, LEAST program director for the Pennsylvania State Education Association.

In her Reading high school English classes today, Ms. Achenbach said, "I'm having fewer confrontations that turn into yelling bouts."

"The discipline forms I send to the office now mainly are for class cuts," she said. "Before, they were for threatening the teacher, arguing with other students, talking when told to do work."

The acronym LEAST stands for five steps the teachers are told to use in dealing with classroom discipline problems.

L stands for "leave the misbehavior alone," E for "end the disruption indirectly," A for "attend more fully to the reasons behind the disruption," S for "spell out directions to the student," and T for "track student's misbehaviors and progress."

"The ideas aren't new, but the program gives you a system to deal with a problem. You don't make snap decisions," said Jack Gibble, a 6th-grade teacher in the Penn Manor District, Lancaster County.

Gibble became one of the 100 classroom teachers who train their colleagues in LEAST when fellow teacher Beth Rosenberg "was at the end of her rope over discipline. She felt discipline problems weren't allowing her to teach."

After her in-service day of LEAST training, "Compared to previous years, I didn't have to raise my voice as much last

Rank-And-File Totals Range To $21,960 For 1981 Sessions

Legislative Pay And Allowances Go Up

By GENE WANG

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Most members of the General Assembly received more than $16,000 in salary and allowances last year, primarily for a six-month regular legislative session and two special sessions.

Legislative records show the amounts received by rank-and-file legislators who held office the entire year ranged from $16,713 to $21,960.

Pay for the Legislature's leadership ranged from $19,892 for Rep. Harold J. Brubaker, R-Randolph, the House minority leader, to $35,696 for House Speaker Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison.

The pay figures include salaries after deductions for federal and state taxes and other items; monthly expense allowances for lawmakers; living expenses paid to them for the sessions; and the mileage they were paid for official trips.

Payments to Pitt County legislators ranged from $17,442 for Rep. Ed Warren to $18,959 to Sen. Vernon White. Rep. Sam Bundy received a total of $18,913.

Although the combined pay and allowances appear generous, legislators said much of what they received went for apartment or hotel rents and meals.

"If you come up here and don't really splurge, you might break even," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, who received a total of $20,753. "It costs me money out of my pocket every year."

"Your hotel room costs so darn much, and when you figure eating — and I don't mean lavishly — you might break even," he said.

Although the totals appear large, Rep. Douglas Clark, D-Duplin, pointed out this year's pay will drop substantially because the Legislature is expected to meet only for a brief special redistricting session next month and a month-long budget session in June.

"Nobody serves for the money, I don't think," said Clark, who received $18,551. "I would think most people serve just to be present at the creation."

The average legislator received an annual salary of $6,903 plus an expense allowance of $2,054 for postage, telephone and related costs. Leaders were paid slightly higher salaries and allowances.

During sessions, all legislators received $50 a day for living expenses, for seven days a week, even though the Legislature meets five days weekly. They also were paid mileage for one round trip a week from their homes to Raleigh. Between sessions, they are paid the daily allowance and mileage for attending meetings of study commissions and other official groups.

The amounts paid to lawmakers varied because of differences in the number of out-of-session meetings various members attended; absences during the session that caused some lawmakers to lose their per diems; the mileage payments; and differences in deductions.

For example, Rep. Jeff Enloe, D-Macon, was paid $5,037 in mileage for commuting from his home in Franklin, while Rep. Ruth Cook, D-Wake, received only $71.36 for trips from her Raleigh home.

Sen. Joseph Johnson, D-Wake, received the same $6,903 salary as other rank-and-file legislators, but he had $5,457 in federal taxes withheld from his checks to reduce his income taxes. Johnson also did not file for mileage, so he netted only $10,698 in pay and allowances.

Hardison, the Senate Appropriations chairman and a member of the Advisory Budget Commission, was paid $10,870 in per diem because budget matters and other duties required him to spend more time in Raleigh than most legislators.

Although Ramsey's $35,696 in pay and allowances topped all legislators, his basic salary of $13,585 is almost twice as much as the pay of a rank-and-file member.

Ramsey also receives a larger office allowance, $4,058, and was paid $14,674 in daily living allowances last year. Because he lives in western North Carolina, the $6,807 in mileage he received was higher than for most legislators.

In the Senate, President Pro Tem W. Craig Lawing, D-Mecklenburg, and Minority Leader Donald Kincaid, R-Lenoir, were both paid salaries of $8,623 a year and office allowances of 2,747.

Lawing received $11,034 in per diem payments and $3,376.25 for mileage for a total of $23,955, while Kincaid was paid $9,350 for living expenses and $3,000 for mileage.

Two House leaders, Speaker Pro Tem Allen Barbee, D-Nash, and Minority Leader Brubaker received smaller salaries and office allowances because they were elected to the posts after the session began. Each got $8,570 in pay and $2,726 for expenses.

Barbee was also paid $10,550 in daily allowances and $866 in mileage for a net of 21,244. Brubaker was paid $9,538 in per diem allowances and $1,365.28 for travel.

Tehran Keeps Up Pace Despite Refugee Influx

By The Associated Press
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) —

Pete's Upholstery
758-5488

Food is rationed, a black market is flourishing and security is stringent in Tehran, the Iranian capital of six million inhabitants, the number swollen by refugees from the fighting zone in the war with Iraq.

The spacious U.S. Embassy grounds, once clipped to perfection, are overgrown with weeds and untended. From the distance, passersby can look over the walls and spot an occasional armed guard strolling on one of the walkways leading to the front of the chancellery.

For 44 days, the embassy building was the prison for the American hostages until they were freed a year ago. Today, the United States is still depicted by the clergy-led government and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as "the Great Satan."

Posters on buildings throughout the city, and near entrances of major hotels accuse the United States and "Zionism" for every ill that has befallen Iran.

"We have crushed the Great Satan and united we can push out the Iraqis who were inspired by the Americans to attack us," one poster proclaims.

Today's Tehran is crowded, with an influx of refugees from the 16-months war with Iraq in the south. Outwardly, life doesn't seem to have changed greatly since Khomeini's revolution took over in 1979, according to recent visitors to the capital.

They say garbage details are doing a better job now and water from the nearby Alburz Mountains still runs through the jubes (open trenches) on Vali-e-Asr (formerly Pahlavi and Mossadegh) to feed the giant elm trees on the longest avenue in the capital.

If one didn't read the government-controlled daily press, watch television or listen to the radio, the Iraqi war would hardly be noticeable. Tehran is ablaze with lights at night, in contrast to the blackouts a year ago, after the Iraqis invaded southern Iran.

Shoppers go about their daily business during the day dodging the choking traffic for which the city is renowned. Sidewalks have become open air bazaars selling everything from fresh fruit to inexpensive clothing from Asia. American goods, once prominently displayed in the capital's chic boutiques, are no longer found.

Shoppers have a limited selection, due to tight government import controls and the lack of money to pay for them. The country is faced with a monthly $1.5 billion bill for food imports, which is placing strains on decreasing hard-currency reserves.

"I haven't seen a chicken in two months, and I can't afford to pay the prices on the black market," a father of two told a businessman who visited Tehran a month ago.

The black market is flourishing and shoppers willing to pay the price can find almost anything. An egg that sells officially for about 13 cents brings triple the price on the black market.

Many restaurants have closed, while others buy their supplies from the black market in order to stay in business.

The urban guerrilla group, Mujahedeen Khalq, which played a key role in helping Khomeini gain power, has gone underground after spectacular successes in assassinating a number of government leaders.

Security in Tehran is tight, residents report. Visitors to government offices are searched thoroughly. Even revolutionary guards are frisked each time they re-enter the premises.

Jails are bursting with prisoners awaiting trial and execution, travelers say. One Tehrani who recently visited a relative at Evin prison said he was told about 10,000 prisoners were held within its walls. Islamic revolutionary courts in Evin mete out justice quickly by carrying out executions within 24 hours of sentencing, giving relatives little chance of seeing the condemned before they die, Iranian sources say.

Khomeini has called on the 36 million Iranians to report "counter-revolutionaries" to the authorities. Teachers have asked their students to report conversations with their parents and who visits their homes. Mothers have turned in their sons to local Islamic revolutionary committees for expressing opposition to the government or for belonging to urban guerrilla groups, according to the state-run news media.

The war with Iraq has put a strain on the country's social fabric. Many parents, from working families particularly, have heeded Khomeini's call to send their sons into battle to become martyrs for Islam. Diplomats put Iran's war dead at 60,000 so far.

The role of women is gradually being downgraded, and entertainment is hard to find in the capital. Some Tehranis still manage to organize small, discreet parties with trusted friends where homemade vodka and wine are served, foreign businessmen say.

Unemployment is high. Official figures are unavailable, but former government advisers estimate that more than half the country's 11-million labor force is jobless, with unemployment growing worse each day as factories close and industrial projects remain idle.

Mrs. Sullivan, librarian at Sadie Sauter Elementary School, has frequently appeared as storyteller on a variety of local programs.

LaNeave, ECU's Presbyterian campus minister, specializes in telling "Jack Tales."

The three speakers will meet informally with persons attending the program during a social hour.

Previous programs in this year's series have included lecture-discussions on intellectual freedom, library outreach and reading research. The final programs will be "Librarians Organize: Library Associations and Their Work," Feb. 22, and "Preserving Our Heritage: Oral History Projects," March 25.

BOOK NEWS

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By JULIE HICKS

In recent years, high interest rates and building costs have forced many Americans to give up the idea to build their dream house. Michael C. Murphy, however, has written a book called "How You Can Buy A Home While You Can Still Afford To."

Invaluable tips and techniques are disclosed; when and how to buy; computing the tax advantages with special charts; using leverage; getting the best mortgage or locating financing when mortgages are scarce; and when to consider building your own home or buying a condominium or co-op.

The author is an attorney, a professor of law and former realtor. These qualifications give him the expertise to show you how to buy the home you want, but thought you couldn't afford.

In addition to a house, a car is another large expense. More and more people are turning to the foreign car market. Those who do might find the "Import Car Buying Guide," published by "Consumer Guide," useful.

Concise test reports show features "for" and "against" each model. Included are road test results, specifications, and ratings. Exclusive prices show you what the dealer pays for the vehicle and available options.

This complete guide to the newest, most significant, most popular imports could help you pick the car that fits your needs and your budget.

Still another expense which hits the American consumer hard is the cost of health care. "Consumer Guide" has just published "Home Medical Treatment," a detailed guide to hundreds of common over-the-counter remedies.

For each, it lists ingredients, side effects, and possible drug interactions. It tells you what you need to know to use these drugs safely. Moreover, each drug included has been evaluated for economy and effectiveness.

If you are bothered by a headache, a cold, acne or any one of the many other common ailments, then "Home Medical Treatment" could help you treat your health problems with non-prescription drugs.

Children's Films

A special film program for elementary school children is planned for Friday in the Children's Room at Sheppard Memorial Library. (This is a student holiday for Greenville City Schools).

Films on loan from the State Library will be shown continuously from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Children may come at any time during these hours. Film schedules are:

- 10:30 a.m. — "Ben and Me" is an animated film based on Robert Lawson's book about Ben Franklin and his little helper, a church mouse named Amos.
- 11:00 a.m. — "Beauty and the Beast" is the adaptation of the famous story of the handsome prince, changed into an ugly beast by an evil witch, and the young girl whose love for him breaks the spell.
- 11:15 — "Free to Be You and Me" is a simple message told in song and story — "Be Yourself!" Originally presented by ABC-TV, the film received the 1974 Emmy Award as the "Best Children's Special of the Year."
- 12 — "Mole in the Zoo" is the hilarious tale of a mole who goes to the aid of an ailing lion by pulling his throbbing tooth.
- 12:15 — "Squirrel on My Shoulder" is about an orphaned squirrel adopted by the Pauling household, then returned to the wild. They give up hope of seeing him, but one day he returns for a visit.
- 12:45 — "Rookie of the Year" shows the adventures of a sports loving 11-year-old girl who triggers controversy among players, parents and game officials when she wins a spot on an all-boy basketball team. The film is based on a book by Isabella Taves.

Acquires A de Chirico

NORFOLK, Va. — "Homesickness of an Engineer," a painting by Giorgio de Chirico, an artist lauded by noted critic Guillaume Apollinaire years ago as "the most astonishing painter of the younger generation," has been acquired by the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk.

An artist of Italian ancestry born in Greece, de Chirico received his formal training in Munich. Later, he moved to Paris and became involved with important artists and writers of the early 20th century.

"Homesickness of an Engineer," completed in 1916, is an anonymous gift to the Chrysler Museum. The painting is currently on display in the museum's early 20th century gallery, and is flanked by orks of Picasso, Matisse and Fernand Leger.

Arts Council Bazaar Set

Decisions For Liberty Cart

KENANSVILLE — A decision to extend the season by one week for the Duplin County outdoor drama, "The Liberty Cart," was made at a recent meeting of the Duplin Outdoor Drama Society.

Jim Johnson, general manager of the production, announced that a grant of $11,680 from the N.C. Theater Arts Division has been received. The grant will be used to extend the season as well as for the addition of an alternate production of "Godspell" to be given Wednesday nights during the summer production season.

ECU Poetry Forum To Meet Thursday

The ECU Poetry Forum will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 21 in Room 248, Mendenhall Student Center.

Anyone interested in poetry is invited, and there is no admission charge involved for the twice-monthly meeting.

The secret of the magic sign.

In 1946, when we first opened Overton's, the grocery business operated like a lot of others. Come Monday morning, we'd open for the week's business. And every day, right on through Saturday evening each week, we'd work along helping customers, weighing produce and cutting meat.

But since that time, supermarket hours have become more complex. Big chains started extending their hours. Some went to 24 hour days. And then they decided to open Sunday, too. But, it seemed to us that the longer these markets stayed open, the less important being cheerful and helpful became.

Employees were forced to work all night. Keep odd hours. They frowned. They snarled. And who can blame them? Not very many people are cheerful at 4 A.M. on Sunday morning.

That's why we still open at 8 A.M. and close at 7 P.M. every day, Monday through Saturday. (Friday's till 8.) We expect our employees to be cheerful and helpful every hour that we're open. So, we don't ask them to work long days and odd hours.

And guess what? It pays off. Because Overton's real secret is good service.

Now some people might not agree that being closed on Sundays means good service. But we know our employees enjoy Sunday off. And we believe that being good to our employees means better service to you. So every Saturday evening at Overton's we hang out the magic sign.

Come see us.

'Wise Blood' To Open New Cinema Season

THREE OF THE CAST ... in John Huston's highly praised but little known film, "Wise Blood," being shown at 2 p.m. Sunday in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center.

This is the first of six films being shown in the new "Cinema Society of Greenville" season. Tickets for the six films are priced at $10 and can be purchased prior to 2 p.m.

A 1979 film directed by John Huston is the first of six films being shown in the new season of The Cinema Society of Greenville.

"Wise Blood," based on a story by Flannery O'Connor, will be screened at 2 p.m. Jan. 24 in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center on the East Carolina University campus.

Season tickets for the six films, priced at $10, are still available and can be purchased at the door prior to the 2 p.m. hour. Free coffee and refreshments will be served beginning at 1:30 p.m. in the fellowship hall near the theater. Admission is by season ticket only. No tickets to individual films will be sold.

(Except for this opening film, the other five in the series will be screened at 7 p.m. with refreshments to be served from 6:30 to 7 p.m.)

Ms. O'Connor's story is about a young Southerner who goes to the big city to wallow in sin but is obsessed with his religious background. Though it was shot on a low budget in a Georgia location and did not receive wide distribution, "Wise Blood" was hailed by critics and its small initial audience as one of the best films of the year.

Critic Bernard Drew called it "an American masterpiece, one of the most important American films to be released in years."

Cast members in the movie are Brad Dourif, Ned Beatty, Harry Dean Stanton and Amy Wright.

Other films and the dates they will be shown (always on Sunday) are: "Nada," a French film, Feb. 27; "Jane is Jane Forver," a German film, March 21; "Metropolis," a noted early, 1927, German film, April 4; "Bahia," a Brazilian film, April 18; and "The River," a French/Indian film, May 2.

All the films originally made in foreign languages have either dubbed sound or sub-titles.

ECU Combined Auditions Set

ECU News Bureau
The East Carolina Playhouse and Summer Theater are teaming up to hold combined auditions for actors, singers, dancers and technicians for five large-scale musical productions.

The combined auditions will be held from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. on three dates, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Jan. 21, 22 and 23 in Room 206 of the Theater Arts Center on the ECU campus.

According to Producer/Director Edgar R. Loessin, "This may be the largest audition ever held in Eastern North Carolina. As many as 35 performers are needed for each of the five musicals."

The first of the five, "Show Boat," is generally considered to be the best all-around musical of modern times. It will be presented on six dates in early April by the ECU Playhouse as part of the university's 75th anniversary and will be the gala opening of the newly renovated multi-million dollar McGinnis Theater.

There are many roles for black and white actors, singers and dancers. Loessin says "we want the opening of the new theater to be a community event and everyone is encouraged to audition."

"Show Boat" has some of the most beautiful songs ever written for the stage — "Ol' Man River," "Make Believe," "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man," "Why Do I Love You" and others. Rehearsals will begin Feb. 1.

Performers and technicians will also be auditioned for four mayor musicals to be presented by the East Carolina Summer Theater, the widely proclaimed professional company in residence on the ECU campus during June and July.

Musicals scheduled for production are "Grease," "Shenandoah," "Cabaret," and "She Loves Me." The Summer Theater is totally professional in the sense that everyone is on salary. Performers will be hired by the show or for the entire season. Rehearsals are set to begin June 20.

Saturday, Jan. 23, from 11 a.m. until 3 p.m. has been set aside to audition young performers from the ages of 8 to 16. All children must be able to sing.

For all the auditions, singers should bring music and be prepared to sing a song of their choice that shows off the voice to its best advantage. No "a capella" singing will be permitted and an accompanist will be furnished.

Dancers should bring rehearsal clothes and shoes. They will be given steps and combinations by the choreographer. No routines are needed.

Technicians should bring a resume with letters of reference for an interview. There are a limited number of apprentice positions available.

For further information write or call the ECU Playhouse/Summer Theater, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27834, telephone 757-6390.

THE MANHATTAN WOODWIND QUINLET will perform at Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center, ECU at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 19. Tickets are priced at $5 and are available at the Central Ticket Office. Tickets will also be sold at the door prior to the performance hour.

The Manhattan Quintet To Perform On Tuesday

The Manhattan Woodwind Quintet will perform in Hendrix Theater, Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University campus, at 8 p.m. on Tuesday.

Tickets are priced at $5 and may be purchased at the Central Ticket Office at Mendenhall or at the door prior to performance. Reservations can be made and additional information on other programs can be had by calling 757-6611, extension 266.

The program to be performed includes Anton Reicha's "Quintet in C Major;" Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin;" J.S. Bach's "Fugue in G Minor;" Irving Fine's "Partita for Wind Quintet;" and Ferenc Farkas' "Hungarian Dances."

The Manhattan Woodwind Quintet was formed in 1976 by graduates of the Juilliard and Manhattan Schools of Music. The group has been praised for its ability to combine musical integrity with a special audience rapport.

The Manhattan Woodwind Quintet is composed of Susan Deaver, flutist; Jessica Murrow, oboist; Timothy Ward, bassoonist; Dennis Lawless, horn; and for the 1981-82 season, guest artist David Stanton, clarinetist.

In 1978 the quintet won the Artists International Competition and followed that award with a recital in Carnegie Hall and a European tour. Currently, the quintet is in residence at Long Island University.

Big WOOW Classics

Baroque Basics is the name of the theme given to a sampling of baroque music chosen by hostess Karen Hause for the WOOW Classics program Sunday night. Mrs. Hause's weekly two hours of recorded classics are aired over Radio Station WOOW, 930 on the radio dial, from 10 p.m. to midnight each Sunday.

The program will open with Handel's "Concerto Grosso No. 11," to be followed by Mozart's "Fourth Horn Concerto" and a lyrical Buxtehude composition, the "Trio Sonata No. 2 in D Major."

Other compositions to be aired by Mrs. Hause are Telemann's "G Major Flute Concerto," the J.S. Bach "Suite No. 1 in C Major;" and Samuel Endler's "Trumpet Concerto."

The final selection is a universal baroque favorite, Haydn's "Symphony No. 94," known to most listeners as "The Surprise Symphony."

---Recital Today---

RECITAL ... Soprano Nancy Gustafson, pictured above, is guest artist in a joint recital with East Carolina University pianist and faculty member Ellen R. Nagode. The recital is at 8:15 p.m. Sunday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. The recital is open to the public and there is no admission charged.

Moore, Pittman Recital Scheduled January 24

A faculty recital by Charles W. Moore, tenor, and Everett Pittman, piano, will be given at 8:15 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 24 in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

They will be assisted by Amy M. Moore and Carol D. Moore, violinists.

Three selections are listed for the recital program. The first will be "Singet dem Herren ein neues Lied" from Heinrich Schütz's "Symphoniae sacrae II." Schütz was a 17th century German composer.

The second selection will be Robert Schumann's "Dichterliebe, Opus 48" the song cycle set to the words by the German poet Heinrich Heine.

The third selection is a 20th century work, "Seven Sonnets of Michelangelo" by the British composer Benjamin Britten.

Moore, chairman of the Vocal Music Department and director of the University Chorale, received the D.M.A. degree from Indian University. He has also attended London University for additional study. Moore has published articles and a book on "Ivor Gurney, Poet and Songwriter." Additionally, he has had 10 years experience in summer stock.

Pittman received his Ph.D. from Florida State University and the M.M. degree from the University of Texas. He has toured the Southeast both as a solo and ensemble pianist. Prior to coming to ECU, Pittman was a faculty member at Birmingham-Southern College, at the University of Texas, and Florida State University. He is also a former dean of the ECU School of Music.

TV Actor Shackelford New Series Begins Monday On Center Comments On Ecology

Ted Shackelford, one of the stars of the television series "Knots Landing," is an admitted workaholic who likes to get away from it all occasionally by walking with his dogs in California's Bronson Canyon.

Tulsa, with stopovers in Long Island and Guam, Ted comments, "I still consider myself a Tulsan because that's where I grew up, but I grew up professionally in Denver."

"It's great exercise for the dogs and I can really unwind," he says, adding, "I'm also concerned, deeply concerned, with ecology and wildlife, wolves in particular."

A native of Oklahoma City who grew up mainly in

An English-theater graduate from the University of Denver, it was in that city that he had his first acting experiences in community and dinner theater shows such as "Night of The Iguana," "Detective Story," "Bus Stop," "Sunday in New York" and "Play It Again Sam."

He recalls being totally miscast in Tennessee Williams' play, "Night of The Iguana." "There I was, 22 years old, playing the part of Shannon, the defrocked, driven priest. So I grew a beard. In those days I had all kinds of misdirected energy."

In 1975 it was on to New York, where he signed with the management firm of Le Mond/Zetter. "Thing were really slow at the beginning, since I was starting all over again," he recalls. He finally landed a stand-by part in the Broadway show, "Murder Among Friends." At the same time Ted started a year-long run in another form of entertainment — television, in the part of Raymond Gordon in the soap opera "Another World."

While he was in New York, he recalls getting fed up with the situation of slow work and went to work as night manager of the Carlyle Hotel in New York City. "That work was a great education," he says. "I wore a tux and met some fascinating people. Finally a producer I had worked with before called and since then I've never had another job aside from acting."

A mutual decision between Ted and his management was made — for Ted to go to California in an effort to break into nighttime TV and motion pictures.

The result of the move west was work in "The Defection of Simous Koudirka," "Big Hawaii," "Wonder Woman (in one episode he appeared with Joan Van Ark, who plays Shackelford's wife in "Knots Landing,") "The Rockford Files," "Soap," a TV pilot with Paul Sand, "What Are Friends For" and a movie of the week with Raymond Burr, "The Jordan Chance."

Referring to the success of the "Knots Landing" show, Shackelford likes to make one point clear. "I'm delighted the show is a hit and we're getting a lot of attention," he notes. "However, I don't want to be Gary Ewing for the rest of my acting life."

The actor cemented his mark with a critically acclaimed performance in "Bottom of the Bottle," last season's concluding episode of "Knots Landing." But he received a far greater reaction from fans in Texas when he was there to appear on the show "Dallas." Hundreds, sometimes even thousands of people, showed up for location shooting.

The scene may be changing for Shackelford in the future. He was anything but a nice guy in the CBS-TV movie, "Terror Among Us," which aired this past fall. "I played a psychotic killer with an underwear fetish. It most definitely was not the type of role I'm used to playing and it was a real challenge."

THE TWO PRINCIPALS . . . in the 11-part series, "Brideshead Revisited" are Jeremy Irons and Anthony Andrews, who portray Charles Ryder and Lord Sebastian Flyte. The cast also includes Diana Quick, Sir Lawrence Olivier, Claire Bloom, Sir John Gielgud and John Le Mesurier.

'Jackpot' At The Museum

"Jackpot" is the name of January's "Best Lunch Theater Ever" play to be presented beginning at noon Wednesday, Jan. 20 at the Greenville Museum of Art.

Rosand To Perform

CHARLOTTE — Violinist Aaron Rosand will perform the Saint-Saens "Violin Concerto No. 3 in B Minor" with the Charlotte Symphony Orchestra at 8:15 p.m. Friday in Ovens Auditorium.

The one-act play, co-written by Christine Rusch and Sheila Turnage, is being directed by Catherine Rhea Darby. Two local actresses, Rosalie Hutchins and Hazel Stapleton, are portraying the roles of the two women in the play's cast.

The public is invited to attend this performance, which is to be held on the first floor of the museum. Those who wish may bring bag lunches to eat during the performance, and drinks will be provided without charge.

Beethoven Series To Air

CHAPEL HILL — The initial program of a series of weekly broadcasts of the music of Beethoven will air at 10 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 25 over the UNC Center for Public Television, Channel 25, Greenville.

The 11-week series of about one hour's duration will feature all nine of Beethoven's symphonies as well as other compositions by the German composer. Leonard Bernstein conducts the Vienna Philharmonic and the Concertgebouw Orchestra of Amsterdam in this series. Maximilian Schnell will provide narration.

CHAPEL HILL — "Brideshead Revisited," an 11-part series filmed by BBC, is making its American premiere on "Great Performances" Monday at 9 p.m. on the UNC Center for Public Television, Channel 25, Greenville.

Villella To Speak

BROOKLYN, N.Y. — Edward Villella will be the keynote speaker at the two-day seminar, "How to be a Dance Company and Live Through the 80's" being held Jan. 29 and 30.

A noted dancer, Villella was a principal with the New York City Ballet from 1957 to 1980.

People wanting details on the seminar can call 212-377-4720.

calls "the best piece of fictional television ever made."

Jeremy Irons and Anthony Andrews have the roles of the two principal characters, Charles Ryder and Lord Sebastian Flyte. Irons recently starred opposite Meryl Streep in the movie, "The French Lieutenant's Woman." Andrews is familiar to American TV audiences for his starring role in "Danger UXB."

"Brideshead Revisited" tells the story of Charles Ryder, a painter who falls under the spell of a wealthy, aristocratic English family — the Marchmains. The story begins in 1944 when Ryder, a Captain in the British Army who is disillusioned with military life, arrives at his regiment's new headquarters, Brideshead, the scene of the golden days of his youth.

His return to what in 1944 was a bleak military encampment takes him back to his years at Oxford — to the time of his friendship with the dazzling Lord Sebastian Flyte and his introduction to Sebastian's privileged and glamorous world.

"Brideshead Revisited," a co-production of British and American public television stations, was filmed on location in Oxford, London and elsewhere in England as well as in Venice, Malta, and Gozo.

Also featured in the large cast of "Brideshead Revisited" are Diana Quick in the role of Lady Julia Flyte, Sebastian's sister; Laurence Olivier and Claire Bloom as Lord and Lady Marchmain, Sebastian's estranged parents; Sir John Gielgud as Charles Ryder's reclusive father; Stephane Audran as Cara, Lord Marchmain's mistress; John Le Mesurier as Father Mowbray; Mona Washbourne as Nanny Hawkins; and Phoebe Nicholls as Cordelia Flyte.

ACTOR TED SHACKELFORD ... admits to being a workaholic, but is able to get away from work pressure in long walks with his dogs in California's Bronson Canyon. He is deeply concerned about the fate of wildlife, especially wolves.

ATTENTION GETTER — Singer Ozzy Osbourne wanted to get the CBS Records marketing meeting participants to take note of his debut solo album, so he went to the meeting with two birds. One he released as he entered the meeting room and the other, he bit the head off. The former lead singer with the Black Sabbath band has sold over a million copies of his first album as a solo. Hijinks Noted In Return Of 60's Style Rock 'n Roll Beat

By MARK SCHWED
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—The gymnasium at St. Cecilia's Academy is packed with 200 screaming teenage girls. The lights blaze. Four guys jump onto the stage and launch into the rock 'n roll classic "Twist and Shout."

After the concert, a group of girls storm the stage, waving their saddle shoes in the hopes of getting an autograph.

The "dread beat" of the White Animals had invaded the sanctuary of the parochial school in Nashville.

"You girls acted like animals," one nun said after the concert. "You're lucky I like the Beatles."

The scene at an Auburn University fraternity party was even wilder. While lead singer Kevin Gray kicked into the old rock standard "For Your Love," frat members began tearing apart a bamboo fence and bashing the pieces on the floor to the beat of the music. Bodies moved in unison to the "dread beat."

One student started up a gas-powered lawn mower and began "mowing" through the one-inch-deep puddle of beer on the basement floor. Nobody missed a beat.

Move to Dallas for the debutante ball of Mimi Martin, 22, at the Brook Hollow Golf Club. After crab soufflé, lamb, crepes and champagne, Mal Fitch and his 12-piece band got the feet moving to some Glenn Miller tunes, but Miss Martin's special treat was the band she had flown in from Nashville.

The band was the White Animals. The music was rock 'n roll.

The White Animals are a phenomenon in Music City U.S.A. They believe the oldtime rock 'n roll of the '60s is the rock of the '80s. Apparently, so do a lot of their fans.

"The tunes that we do are classics and the tunes that we write are neoclassics because they're trying to recreate the feeling that you got from listening to the classics," explains guitarist Willie Collins, who gave up a GM factory job for the music business.

"The stuff that we write is definitely a throwback in the simplicity, in the feeling, in the arrangements."

The White Animals are "white kids playing the blues," says group founder Gray, 30, a med school graduate who cut short his residency at Vanderbilt Medical School to sing rock 'n roll.

The "dread beat" that sets dancers' feet in motion is oldtime, wild, animalistic, black rock 'n roll.

"The president of an Alabama white citizens council talked about the dread beat in the '60s. He said it would reduce the white man and his children to the level of the Negro," Gray says.

"People actually thought that there was something built into the rock 'n roll beat that left you open to Commie propaganda," Collins says. "It was the beat itself that people were afraid of."

But the beat is back—in rock, new wave, reggae, and punk music—after a hiatus in the '70s.

"Rock started taking itself too seriously for a while," Gray says. "It's like you were supposed to sit down and really absorb the meaning. Who's fooling who? That's not what rock 'n roll is all about."

"We're a party band. Just go to church if you want to sit down and shake hands."

Steve Boyd, 20, is the youngest member of the group, rounded out by drummer Ray Crabtree. While Gray and Collins bopped to the Coasters and the Platters, Boyd was nurtured on the music of the '70s.

"I had a crash course in '60s music when I joined the band," he says. "It hit me. Wow! These songs are better than what I've been hearing. I thought Foreigner and Journey were good, but these songs are magical."

The White Animals represent a trip to the past, flavored with the music of today.

SMALL MILITARY UNIT . . . headquarters, American and Vietnamese, were scattered in cities and in the countryside of South Vietnam. Those in battle areas were most often tents or crude affairs in muddy or dusty areas — depending on whether it was the rainy season or not. Others, like this one in more protected areas, were neat showplaces with clipped shrubs and flowering vines.

THE SAIGON PORT . . . Dock facilities on the Saigon River at Saigon, until completion of the huge American port complex at Cam Ranh Bay, were among the busiest in Southeast Asia. In this photograph, bags of rice to help feed the capital city's burgeoning wartime population were being unloaded from ships tied up at docks.

Asian New Year Triggers Memories For VN Veterans

In Vietnam it's called the Tet Festival. In other Asian countries it goes by different names. Whatever the name, the Lunar (or Chinese) New Year is the most festive time in the Asian calendar — the equivalent of Christmas. July the Fourth and New Year all rolled into one. The date of the Asian New Year, like Easter, is variable, based on changes of the moon.

This year, the New Year Festival falls on Monday, January 25.

For millions of Americans who served in Vietnam during the years of the "American presence," the mention of the Tet Festival triggers memories, pleasant and unpleasant. Weariness, blood and pain, anger and frustration that were connected with the conflict remain etched in the memory of many who served there. But there are brighter recollections too.

In the decade — roughly 1963 to 1973 — in which the number of American military and civilians in Vietnam numbered in the hundreds of thousands at any given time, South Vietnam was above all a country charged with the excitement of things happening at a bewildering, exhilarating pace.

In contrast to the daily flurry, to the sometimes circus-like ambience of life, there was the unchangeable cycle of seasons, wet and dry, and the breathtaking beauty of this semi-tropical land of jungle, villages, rice fields, cities, rivers and mountains.

Most Americans also brought home a memory of friendly people, often childishly eager to become friends with the physically larger Americans, black and white, who came half way around the world to help defend their homeland.

As with any store of personal remembrances, it's eventually the less significant things that stand out most vividly in memory as time passes. . . a sudden tropical rainstorm pounding on a leaf-thatched roof, an old lady with betel stained mouth carrying buckets of water suspended on the end of a bamboo pole, the strange drum-like song of a monk bird, the exquisite dark beauty of a Saigon bar girl, the rich fragrance of fruits and vegetables in a crowded marketplace, the pastoral scene of children leading water buffalo to a watering place, or the fantastic roar of battalions of two-wheeled vehicles in the cities.

The selection of scenes and people shown on this page may perhaps serve as a reminder to those who served there of the many faces of Vietnam when the little kingdom was the dramatic focal point of world attention.

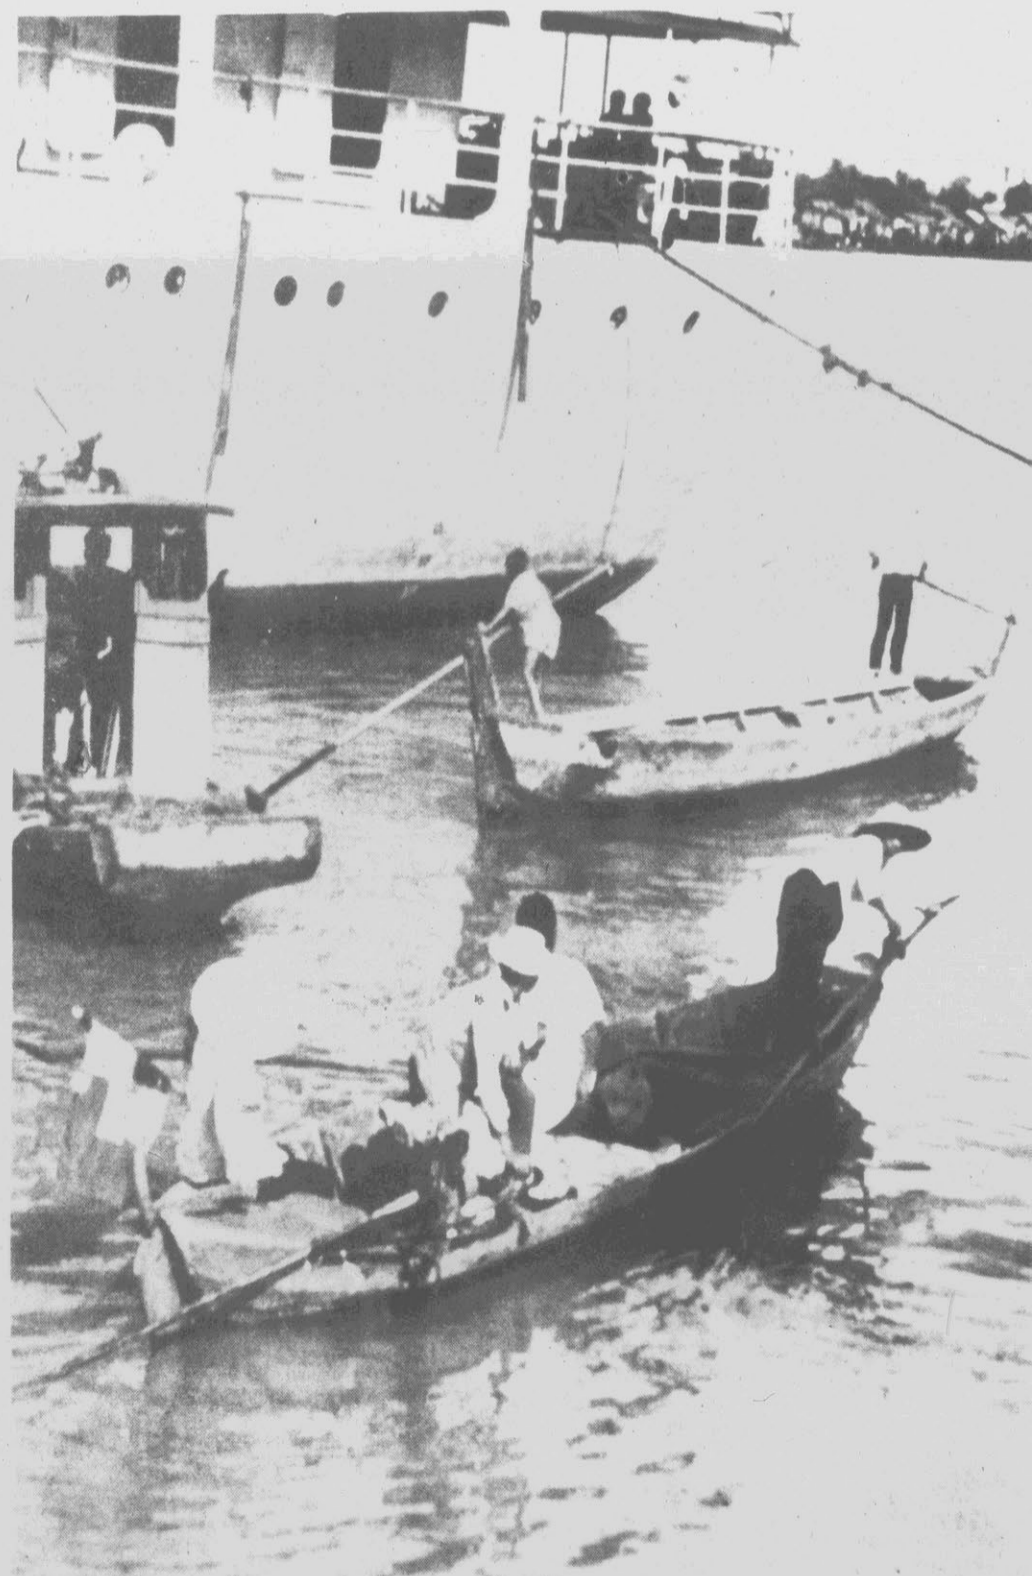

FAMILIAR SCENE . . . In all of South Vietnam, as in many Southeast Asian countries, the market place with its baskets of fresh produce are popular community centers. Here, Vietnamese women in traditional short blouses, black pajama-like trousers and conical straw hats do their daily shopping.

STATUS SYMBOL . . . In the era of the American presence in Vietnam, the possession of a motor scooter was a status symbol several notches above ownership of a motorized or manually operated bicycle. Thai Van Moi, a South Vietnamese Navy man, was photographed in the summer of 1965 pampering his Japanese made motor scooter.

WATER TAXI . . . Slender, shallow wood boats, manned by men, women, or children and guided by long poles, were dependable and inexpensive means for people to get across the myriad network of rivers and canals lacing South Vietnam. These fragile looking craft were also used to carry astonishingly bulky loads of cargo.

Hastings Joining Autofinders List

Harry Hastings, president of Hastings Ford Inc. here, said that he has become the local National Autofinders franchise holder for Pitt County.

The new Autofinders marketing concept, he said, enables the local dealership to sell used cars on a "consignment basis" for private individuals in much the same way a real estate agency handles property sales for homeowners.

Hastings said that through the use of National Autofinders, an individual can have his car advertised and sold by salespeople on a new car lot where it has more exposure than in the individual's driveway.

He said that under the Autofinder concept, the owner brings his vehicle to the dealer for inspection and it is checked for repairs needed to put it into selling condition. The owner and dealer then agree on the price the owner is willing to take for his car. Hastings said that if the dealer sells the car for more than that price, he keeps the difference as his commission.

The spokesman said a variation of the owner-dealer agreement exists whereby the dealer agrees to accept a percentage of the selling price. After the two parties have agreed upon a price, the dealer lists the car and advertises it for one month.

Tom Little, regional sales manager for National Autofinders Southeast Ltd., said the firm now has more than 200 franchises nationwide with 37 operating in North Carolina and South Carolina.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

Phillip has never been able to understand the existential despair every time I visit my laundry room. Mount Everest looks no more forbidding than a jungle gym when compared to the twin peaks of dirty laundry and ironing on either side of me. I always feel as if I've been commanded to spin straw into gold. But no little man with magical powers ever shows up to help me, even though at those moments when I face my washing machine my first-born definitely becomes negotiable. No regulation-sized non-wizard ever shows up to help, either, for that matter. I passed a major milestone when I finally convinced Phillip to deposit his dirty clothes at some central point other than under the sofa, behind the bed, beside the dresser, or in front of the bathtub. I never have been able to make any further strides, not even on the issue of helping Meg to deposit her dirty clothes at some central point. Considering his role as supervisor of Meg's bedtime activities, this one added responsibility seems only appropriate. But Phillip balks at it. Meg's dirty underwear continues to appear three months later in the toy box. Her dirty socks have been known to vegetate for years in dark corners of the closet and the doll house. Phillip complains that even when he and Meg do remember to visit the dirty clothes hamper, I'm not satisfied. How could I be when every stitch of clothing which touches that child's skin gets thrown there? If she wears a sweatshirt one morning in lieu of a bathrobe, that sweatshirt hits the dirty clothes. I have never been able to understand why a man who will wear the same jogging suit until it reaches the early stages of petrification finds himself unable to judge whether or not a piece of child's clothing is soiled, but it is apparently beyond him.

I've tried to explain the process to him. "Use logic. If the jeans didn't see the outdoors or spaghetti during the day, it's fairly certain that they can be worn at least one more time."

"But how am I supposed to know whether or not she went out that day?"

"Well, I know its an infinite amount of trouble, but you could try asking. Then there are the dresses. I expect a day's wear for every five minutes I slave over a hot iron. So is it any surprise that I got mildly upset when I saw that red dress lying in a crumpled heap on Meg's floor?"

"You threw it at me."

Evidently, this reaction was enough to impress upon them the seriousness of my complaints for, the next night before Meg's bath, he led her into the kitchen.

"Is this sweater dirty enough to go into the wash?" he inquired. The sweater had a large Coke stain on the left half.

"Very funny."

"How about the pants?"

"Except for that layer of mud on each knee, they're fine."

"Lift your sweater, Meg. Now, how about this undershirt?"

With all I have to contend with around here, it's a wonder I retain the little sanity I have.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

 DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I am simply lost about what to do after partner responds to my takeout double. What constitutes a good hand and what does not? When do I pass, raise or bid a new suit? When do I jump? Please throw a life preserver to someone who is drowning in a sea of advice, much of which I am sure is wrong. —K. Allen, Portsmouth, N.H.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)
 A.—As a rule of thumb, the takeout doubler, who has already advertised his general values, should underbid on subsequent rounds; and the responder, who has promised little, should adopt an aggressive attitude. Unfortunately, in actual play the opposite seems true. The doubler keeps rebidding his minimum values and cannot extract a sound from partner, who rarely works up any enthusiasm.

The rules for rebidding after a takeout double parallel those for an opening bid. The doubler's hand falls into three categories:
 1) Minimum: 13-15 points;
 2) Intermediate: 16-18 points;
 3) Strong: 19 points and up.

With a minimum hand, you have no problem—pass. Remember that, even with four cards in partner's suit, you don't have to raise to show your support. When you doubled for takeout you promised length in the unbid suits, and there is no need to iterate that statement.

With the intermediate hand, you can either make a simple raise of partner's suit or introduce a new suit of your own. Bear in mind that partner might have bid on a near bust, so don't get too high.

With a strong hand, you can make a jump raise of partner's suit if you need some help from him to make enough tricks for game. If the fact that he has four cards in the bid suit is sufficient for game, then bid it yourself—don't invite partner to bid again when he might not have the values for that action. You can also make a jump bid in a new suit; after a takeout double, that action is highly invitational but not forcing.

What if your hand is so good that you can virtually guarantee game, but are not yet sure whether the suit partner bid is the right denomination or whether you might have a better spot?

Make a cue-bid of the enemy suit. That is absolutely forcing, and partner's rebid should clear up the uncertainty. But bear in mind that, if partner rebids his suit, he is not showing five cards in that suit. He might have no other bid available, and is simply signaling off in what he thinks is your agreed trump suit.

To illustrate a typical error made by the doubler, consider this hand:
 ♠AKQx ♥Kxxx ♦AJx ♣xx

Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club and you double, quite properly. Partner responds one spade. Now you glance at your excellent support and good hand and jump to three spades—right? Wrong. You have a good hand in the intermediate category, and it is worth just a single raise!

The Ultimate Illusion Is Still Magic

A word that conjures up visions of objects floating in mid-air or being sawed in half; people and animals disappearing before your very eyes; and yes, even rabbits being pulled out of a hat.

On Sunday, Jan. 17 (9-11 p.m.), NBC will present "Magic with the Stars," a special featuring eight of the world's foremost magicians performing their most mystifying illusions, aided by a bevy of Hollywood stars. Orson Welles, Jaclyn Smith, Robert Guillaume and Loni Anderson will host the extravaganza.

Among the highlights are "The Table of Death," in which Welles convinces Erik Estrada to lie down, chained to a table, while a board studded with metal spikes comes crashing down on him; Welles performs the "Cabinet of Lights," in which a girl is placed inside a cabinet that has dozens of fluorescent light bulbs sticking out of the back wall. As the cabinet is compressed, the light bulbs start coming out of the girl's body; Tony Curtis, who starred in the film "Houdini," makes Morgan Fairchild appear out of a trunk said to have been owned by Houdini; and magician David Copperfield, Cindy Williams and Linda Evans recreate a magical version of the terrifying shower scene in "Psycho," with humorous results.

The other performing magicians include Harry Anderson, Carlton & Company, Norm Nielsen, Richiardi, Shimada and the Great Tomsoni.

Some rare film clips of magicians and their work will also be seen. One of the clips shows master escape artist Harry Houdini on stage escaping from 'fool-proof' shackles secured by French gendarmes. Another clip shows German illusionist Kalarag performing the Indian Rope Trick, a trick that has not been attempted in several years because no two modern magicians can agree on how it was done.

Copperfield, who has had several TV magic specials of his own, has been performing since age 7, when he did ventriloquism at a school talent show.

"My entire act was out of the back pages of Boy's Life," he said. "It was really horrible. But when I walked off the stage, everyone applauded me. Perhaps, that was the turning point in my life."

A Round Of Punishment

Joseph Wambaugh's best-selling novel "The Onion Field," inspired by a cop-killing in California, will make its television debut on The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Jan. 17 (9-11:30 p.m.).

The time is 1963. Gregory Powell (James Woods), a sharp but unstable small-time hood, plans a holdup spree and inveigles Jimmy Smith (Franklyn Seales), a young ex-con recently released and brought into Powell's "family," to go along.

They are intercepted in Los Angeles by two patrolmen, Karl Hettinger (John Savage), an ex-agricultural student with a young wife and child, and Ian Campbell (Ted Danson), once a medical student from a well-to-do family.

The criminals, however, succeed in taking the officers prisoner and force them to drive to a farm area in Bakersfield, where Powell convinces the officers that they'll be freed. Instead, gripped with fear that if he is captured and convicted of the kidnapping he will face a death penalty, Powell murders Campbell in cold blood with a shot through the head. While four more shots are pumped into the policeman's body, Hettinger escapes.

Eventually, Powell is picked up and brought to trial, cooperating with the law sufficiently to finger Smith.

The killers are sentenced to death, but are spared execution as the Supreme Court debates the constitutionality of the death penalty. In prison, Powell becomes a self-taught lawyer in order to prepare a defense for his parole.

On the other hand, Hettinger,

JAMES WOODS STARS IN THE "ABC Sunday Night Movie," "The Onion Field," airing Jan. 17 (9-11:30 p.m.). Based on Joseph Wambaugh's best-seller, the film traces a kidnapping-murder case that created the longest running trial in California's history.

plagued with guilt that he was at least partially to blame for the death of Campbell, goes to pieces. He is dropped from the force and becomes a gardener near the onion field where Campbell met his death.

The irony is that Hettinger can hardly live with himself while the killers' sentences are commuted. "The Onion Field," which was produced and written by Joseph Wambaugh, based on his book of the same title, is a thinking person's cops and robbers film.

AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

You Can Help Your Cleaner!
 Today's clothes, for the most part, are well made, and most cleaners are skilled professionals. However, to insure the longest life and best appearance from your garments, the consumer must share some of the responsibility.
A CLEANER WORLD realizes that you know many of the things we can do, but there are some things that we can't do. We can't remove all stains in all cases. Stains that remain in a fabric for too long tend to become hard set, and cannot be removed satisfactorily or with safety to the fabric.
 The consumer should take stained garments to be cleaned as soon after soiling as possible. Fresh stains are always more easily removed.
 We can't guess that there are latent stains in a fabric. Spills from light-colored, sweetened beverages are often unnoticed when dry. Unless these are removed before cleaning they can cause permanent brown stains.
 The consumer can call our attention to these stains. A note attached to the stained garment, as soon as possible after the spill occurs, can be very helpful.
 We can't guess about special instructions on hangtags and care labels that have been thrown away. The consumer can save pertinent hangtags and labels, and pass any special care instructions on to us. Help us to help you look your best!

MERLIN OLSEN, STAR OF NBC-TV'S "Father Murphy" (Tuesdays, 8-9 p.m.), is shown with his wife, Susan. "Being the wife of a television star is a very difficult job," says Olsen. "I wouldn't want to change roles with her."

Michele Will Tell

Q: Could you please give me the address of the show "Real People"? MRS. BRADLEY KOENING, WILSON, N.C.

A: You can address your inquiries to "Real People," NBC-TV, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Q: I am a very big John Wayne fan. I wonder if you can tell me when and if there will be a movie on the life story of John Wayne? FRANK SIGMON, CONOVER, N.C.

A: Plans are now in motion to film the life story of the Duke. It was inevitable that the life of an actor of his magnitude would be made into a 'bio-pic'.

Q: Are Tony Geary, of "General Hospital," and Elizabeth Taylor having an affair? BONNIE KING, FLAT ROCK, N.C.

A: Really! That's news to everyone. Tony and Liz are definitely not a twosome.

Q: Could you give me some information on Robert Foxworth, the co-star of the new series "Falcon Crest"? Also, did he ever play in the movie "The Pirate"? EDDY STARNES, HICKORY, N.C.

A: Robert Foxworth, who stars as Chase Gioberti on the new CBS-TV series "Falcon Crest," is a distinguished stage actor. He made his Broadway debut in "Henry V," and won a Theatre World Award for "The Crucible." His first television role was in "Sadbird," a "CBS Playhouse" presentation, and he starred in "The Storefront Lawyers," also on CBS-TV. You must be thinking of Franco Nero — he starred in "The Pirate." Foxworth's television films include "The Questor Tapes," "Mrs. Sundance," "The Devil's Daughter," "The Memory of Eva Ryker," and "Peter and Paul."

Q: Could you please tell me if Ron Howard played the little boy on "Andy Griffith"? BETSEY HOWELL, LITTLETON, N.C.

A: He sure did! Ron was known to all of us as Opie, Andy's son on "The Andy Griffith Show," from 1960-1968. Ron's interests have broadened from acting to producing, writing and directing. He left his role of Richie Cunningham on "Happy Days," signing a long-term agreement with NBC-TV in order to develop series and movies through his Major H Production Company.

Q: Please tell me where I can write to the man who plays Bill Maxwell on "The Greatest American Hero." A FAN IN NORTH CAROLINA

A: Agent Bill Maxwell on "The Greatest American Hero," is played by veteran actor Robert Culp. You can write to him in c/o the show, ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y., 10020.

Actor On Ice

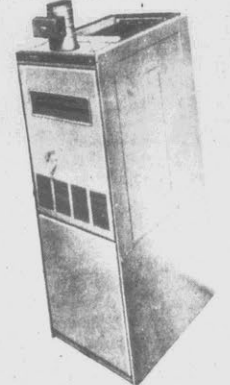

Actor Michael Tylo (who plays the mysterious character Quint McCord on the popular serial "Guiding Light") may not be the first person who comes to mind when the word "hockey" is mentioned, but he will be participating in a special charity event, "The Masters of Hockey," on March 7, at Madison Square Garden, to benefit the Phil Esposito Foundation. Tylo, who was a goalie in college, met Esposito on a talk show, and was invited to join such hockey greats as Bobby Hull, Bobby Orr, and Esposito himself for the event.

Announcer Is First

When "Search for Tomorrow" unveiled its eye-catching new opening credit sequence, they introduced a new and unusual announcer. The voice of New York City radio personality Allison Steele will be heard on the long-running serial. Miss Steele, known to local listeners as the sultry voiced "Nightbird," is the first woman to announce regularly for a network serial — but she's used to breaking ground — she was New York's first woman disc jockey as well.

Back By Demand
Stephen Yates, the popular young actor who plays the role of Ben McFarren on the Emmy Award-winning serial "Guiding Light," has returned to his role as the young artist temporarily, after having been absent for several months. The reason? "The audience wanted him back," says series producer Leslie Kwartin. "When Ben left the story, there were a lot of loose ends that were not reconciled. Now we'll have a chance to correct that."

The Suspect Is Surprised

A happily married, apparently law-abiding citizen finds his tranquil life shattered when he becomes the prime suspect in a police hunt for a sex murderer, in "Prime Suspect," airing as The CBS Wednesday Night Movies, Jan. 20 (9-11 p.m.).

In the story, Amy McCleary (Teri Garr), a no-nonsense television reporter, comes into direct contact with the suspect in a slew of sex murders of young blonde girls. Mike Farrell portrays the suspect, Frank Staplin, and Veronica Cartwright portrays his wife, Janice.

Staplin's life and reputation are effectively damaged following his purchase of some cookies from young Sharon Harris (Elizabeth Hoy), who later is found murdered.

At first, saying that he recognizes the girl from television news reports, Staplin offers his assistance to the police. His efforts backfire, however, and shock sets in when he finds himself the subject of mass media coverage as the prime suspect.

Notoriety caused by Amy's relentless coverage, coupled with heavy police pressure, endangers Staplin's relationship with family, co-workers and neighbors, as well as his own self-esteem. As time goes by, he is neither cleared nor arrested.

Miss Garr said that she patterned her role after a Los Angeles female reporter. "She was really great to me," Miss Garr said. "I asked her all kinds of questions and watched her work. She let me hang around as much as I wanted to."

The questions led the reporter to confide that she once had an experience similar to Amy's — one that left her vulnerable to a mistake. "The reporter raced to a murder scene and arrived before the police," said Miss Garr. "She interviewed a woman who was standing on the front lawn, then when the police came, the reporter left with her story. She later found out the woman on the front lawn had committed the murder."

Secure As An Actor

Carl Franklin, who turned to acting while a student at the University of California at Berkeley, and now co-stars as Detective Jerry Cross in NBC-TV's "McClain's Law," (Fridays, 9-10 p.m.) is aware of the public's perception of actors — that they are chronically vain, shallow — and very insecure.

Franklin won't disagree on at least one of those harsh assessments.

"Acting has helped me find security. But actors nowadays don't have the corner on that. There's a little 'actor' in all of us. People enjoy watching for this reason. We're all acting but actors are more honest about it," said Franklin.

His foray into drama started when he switched his major from history to theater arts for purely artistic reasons — "The girls were prettier!"

"I enjoyed acting," said Franklin. "I didn't enjoy the academic side as much. I just wanted the experience. I suppose I wanted lightning to strike and suddenly I would become a star."

Except for his mother, his relatives were skeptical.

"They would say, 'Why are you wasting all this good education?' But my mother was proud of me — mothers usually are." He left California for New York, where he performed in

Then came an exasperating period in early 1973 and a common syndrome which has been known to make actors climb the walls — lack of work. After a year of inactivity, he appeared in "St. Joan" in Los Angeles and soon got guest parts in several TV series.

"I've been discovered about four times now," he said, laughing.

Joseph Papp's Shakespeare Festival and decided to embrace acting professionally. After a season at the Arena Stage in Washington, D.C., he came back to New York to appear in "Duplex" at the Lincoln Center. Later, he returned to his native Bay Area (he was born in Richmond, Calif.) for the title role in "Norman, Is That You?"

Although basically a classically trained stage actor, Franklin headed for Los Angeles, where he appeared in such films as "Five on the Black Hand Side," "Superdad" and "The Laughing Policeman."

Coming On Cold

Rick Moranis and Dave Thomas, of NBC-TV's "SCTV Comedy Network" repertory company, definitely belong in a category that has become almost extinct in today's television circles — that of performers who dare to "wing it" before the cameras.

Moranis and Thomas, as Bob and Doug Mackenzie, host "The Grate White North," a show frequently found among the fictional SCTV television station that is the setting for the humor on the late-night satirical comedy series (12:30-2 a.m.), following Friday editions of "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson."

Astonishingly, Moranis and Thomas go into their "Great White North" segments absolutely "cold" (i.e. with no scripted material whatsoever). Well schooled in the art of improvisational comedy, having graduated — as all their cast mates — from the Second City improvisational theater. Moranis and Thomas obviously have no qualms about regularly putting that training to the acid test.

Their show-within-the-show evolved as a response to what a few people apparently criticized as the totally "non-Canadian" character of "SCTV" when, as a half-hour program, it was telecast on a Canadian network and syndicated in the United States.

Just As Sweet

Sometimes teams win despite the fact that they've played a sloppy, less than professional game. It doesn't really matter to Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, who says: "We don't care how the grapes were crushed as long as the wine turns out fine."

Detroit Has New Life

Now into its ninth consecutive year of NBA coverage, CBS Sports presents the Los Angeles Lakers versus the Detroit Pistons on "NBA on CBS," airing Friday, Jan. 22 (11:30 p.m.). Bill Russell and Dick Stockton will provide the commentary from The Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

The newest and most promising addition to the Pistons is 6 foot 1 inch guard Isiah Thomas from Indiana. Thomas left college ball last year after his sophomore season and was quickly picked up by the Pistons in the NBA draft. The only player chosen ahead of Thomas was DePaul forward Mark Aguirre, who went to the Dallas Mavericks.

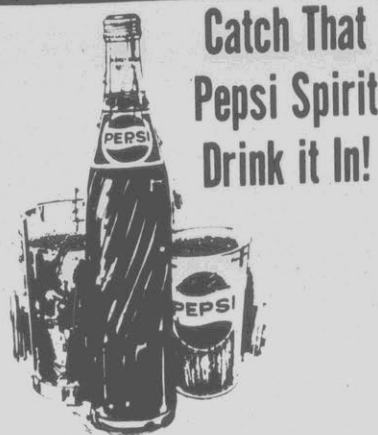

Thomas admits that the transition from collegiate basketball to the pros is dramatic, but he is expected to be a superior offensive player once he masters the intricacies of coach Scotty Robertson's system. Thomas made an auspicious splash in the big leagues with his first regular-season game, netting 31 points and 11 assists in a win over the Milwaukee Bucks. In his next game, he banged out 28 points to beat the Chicago Bulls by a comfortable margin.

Thomas has arrived in more than one. Although admittedly too small to be a defensive tough at this point, he makes up for it with his speed, passing quickness and ability to penetrate inside. In years to come, if the Pistons develop into a playoff contender, it is likely that Thomas will be spearheading the offense.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — Overseas lines were burning during VICTORIA PRINCIPAL'S recent visit to Japan. In just nine days she ran up a $2,500 phone bill in long distance calls to ANDY GIBB.

LANA TURNER will collect $500,000 for her first TV appearance in an upcoming episode of "Falcon Crest." Producers are prepared to offer her a 13-episode deal — if they like what they see.

"Search For Tomorrow," TV's longest-running daytime show, which began airing on CBS-TV in 1951, will move to NBC in March. There will be no cast changes and until the move "Search" will continue on CBS.

KENNY and MARIANNE ROGERS proudly brought their first-born, CHRISTOPHER CODY, home from Cedars-Sinai Hospital. CODY developed some problems during his birth — and was not released at the time his mother was. Now, however, everything is fine in the ROGERS household — and proud papa KENNY is including a new song, "I Want A Son," in the new album he is recording.

SUSAN HOWARD who is on the way to being established as a nationally famous best-selling author in the current episodes of "Dallas," is writing a book of poetry in real life.

The holidays, always a special time of the year, was very special for FARRAH FAWCETT, who finally received her engagement ring from RYAN O'NEAL — and "Dynasty" star, LINDA EVANS, who received a $300,000 twin-engine plane as a pre-nuptial gift from her handsome restaurateur, GEORGE SANTO PIETRO. It was also the time that CHARLENE TILTON, "Dallas" Lucy, and singer JOHNNY LEE set their wedding for Feb. 14.

Age-old problem affects elderly.

FOR MARY ROSE OAKAR, Congresswoman (D-Ohio)

What is the biggest problem facing the elderly today? —D.G., Eau Claire, Wisc.

● Clearly, the greatest burden on our elderly population is inadequate income. Older Americans are among the poorest people in our country. The average older woman lives on $2900 per year, while the average older male lives on $4100 per year. If an adequate income were provided for our older Americans they could purchase needed services such as health care, housing and food. Dependency on Federal programs would be substantially decreased. We must begin to realize that the contributions made by our older Americans have provided the broad base for important programs such as Social Security.

FOR COLLEEN CAMP, star of They All Laughed

Is it true that you had the nerve to compare yourself to Sarah Bernhardt? —B.G., Alger, Ohio

● Yes, in my private life. She once said that the men she was involved with were responsible for her bad notices because she was so busy thinking about them she didn't concentrate on her work. Same thing with me. When I fall in love, my work suffers. When I was trying for They All Laughed, I avoided all men.

FOR PAUL WESTPHAL, basketball star

Would fans and players benefit from a shorter N.B.A. season? —P.R., Redondo Beach, Calif.

● There is no realistic way to cut the season. The fans seem to enjoy the length of the season and the players and management are locked into an 82-game schedule. But the playoffs are too spread out. A lot of time could be saved by playing every other day during the playoffs instead of one or two times a week.

FOR JOYCE REBETA-BURDITT, author of Triples

What do you remember most about your contacts with celebrities during your tenure as a TV network executive? —N.J., Lansing, Mich.

● With a few exceptions, I found them very professional. Fame is ephemeral and you're only as good as your last success. Most people in TV work very hard at what they do. If they don't, you won't see them for very long.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

Hey Jude — get ready for the second wave. Zak Starr and Julian Lennon, sons of former Beatles Ringo Starr and the late John Lennon, are forming a group. But Heather McCartney, 18, daughter of ex-Beatle Paul McCartney and his second wife, Linda, plans to be a chip off her mother's block, not her father's. Into photography, not music, she won a top prize in a photographic printing contest. . . . Not wanting to bother someone else with something she can do herself, actress Julie Harris sometimes irons her own costumes. . . . Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn recently saw The First, Broadway's musical tribute to Jackie Robinson, and spoke of the 25th anniversary of Robinson's entrance as the first black into the major leagues ("We honored him, a rare thing for us to do"). Kuhn also likes to recall how easily he could step into the star infielder's shoes: "Quick-footed Jackie, so devastating on the field, and I, not so devastating, took the same size. I could not believe that this swift man and I both were 13-D." At the same performance, Larry Doby, "the Second" (he followed Jackie into the majors), found parts of the show unreal: "I can't remember anyone ever singing and dancing on the field or in the locker rooms," he said. . . .

The Reagans don't seem to have any problem obtaining expensive china, but paintings are another story. Clement E. Conger, curator at the White House, says that while the quality of the White House art collection is fine, the quantity is lacking — over 120 paintings are on loan from 18 major museums and art galleries. And just in case you don't feel as though you've handed enough over to Uncle Sam, Mr. Conger is looking for gifts of fine paintings, especially of the American West (and folks — those donations to the First Family are, of course, tax-deductible). . . . Victor Borge and Jan Peerce met at a party. "I'm glad to see you," said tenor Peerce. Replied comic Borge, "I'm glad to see." . . . When John F. Lehman Jr., 65th Secretary of the Navy, got back from Cambridge University in England, in 1967, his father lamented that he had "returned every other inch a gentleman." . . . Rona Jaffe's new novel, Mazes and Monsters, will be a CBS major movie next fall. The cast will be talented unknowns.

PRO Senator Jeremiah A. Denton (R.-Alabama), member, Judiciary Committee

Society measures the gravity of a crime by the severity of the punishment. Life is our most precious possession, and it is appropriate that the ultimate penalty be imposed for cold-blooded murder. Capital punishment should not be imposed without due consideration of all the facts in a particular case, but it should be available as an option to the courts. As a deterrent it should hang over the head of anyone contemplating the taking of innocent life.

PRO AND CON

Should All States Have a Death Penalty for Murder?

Send questions of national significance, on a postcard, to "Pro & Con," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $10 for those published.

CON Michael Jendrzeczyk, coordinator, Anti-Capital Punishment Program, Fellowship of Reconciliation

The death penalty is an ineffective and inappropriate response to the serious problem of crime. There is no conclusive evidence that executions deter crime. States that have abolished capital punishment tend to have the lowest homicide rates. In those states with the death penalty, it is often applied unfairly and arbitrarily. Killing human beings for their crimes is an immoral, barbaric practice that should be abandoned in favor of more effective nonviolent sanctions.

Chasing the Blues On Hill Street

Thanks to a record 21 Emmy nominations and a new time slot, Hill Street Blues is in the pink. And its most fetching feature, Veronica Hamel, couldn't feel rosier.

By Mark Goodman

Life is hard at the Hill Street station house. Captain Furillo has to run the most savage metropolitan police precinct imaginable while fielding his ex-wife's alimony demands and carrying on a secret relationship with a stunning lady lawyer. A black cop must go into the ghetto streets with a somewhat red-necked white partner. The stolid desk sergeant proves to be a little shaky on the personal side — he recently romanced both a teen-ager and a police widow, who also had eyes for the precinct's maximum-force SWAT lieutenant.

And if all that doesn't keep things at a steady boil, there's a ratty, half-mad little undercover cop who strikes more terror along Hill Street than the most desperate gang of muggers.

These elements of naked realism, shadowy surrealism and harsh black comedy have conspired with a few other matters to make life hard for NBC's Hill Street Blues in TV's deadly serious ratings game.

What other matters? For openers, says Veronica Hamel, the dark and beckoning beauty who stars as attorney Joyce Davenport, "We started last year in the coffin slot on Saturday night, and wound up running in five different slots over four different nights. Even I had a hard time finding it. So NBC almost sabotaged the show before we got off the ground. Then we had to weather two strikes on top of it all. I had the cast over to my house during one of the strikes to keep the camaraderie going — to keep the family together."

The series wound up last season 88th in the Nielsen ratings out of the 120 top programs. But then things began to change. Hill Street started this season with a record 21 Emmy nominations and eight awards under its gun belt, as well as a legitimate late-evening Thursday time slot to attract viewers. Within weeks after its fall premier, the show gained TV's most coveted watermark — a 30 audience share — and even broke into the top 10 listings in some metropolitan areas.

Says Hamel: "The ratings never bothered me — I just assumed they'd pick up. After all, we're attracting people who don't normally watch TV. But now I feel the show will go — it's my love."

Everyone involved speaks of Hill Street Blues as a labor of love — or at least an intensely serious craft. Says Steve Bochco, who with partner Michael Kozoll writes and produces the show, "Everybody, especially Fred Silverman [recently deposed president of NBC], knew it had potential to be a special show. In fact, it was really Silverman who wanted it; Michael and I didn't want to do another cop show. So we exacted a promise from NBC for an inordinate amount of freedom from interference.

"It was a smooth lift-off," Bochco muses, "but we had problems really getting off the ground. First we had to find an audience, and we did a lot of experimenting the first season to find our limitations, the balance of comedy and drama. NBC fouled up right from the start. They promoted the show as a comedy, and the media hooked into that. We and NBC then had to spend too much time just explaining what we were."

What was it? To begin with, Hill Street was strong stuff that audiences found hard to take. After all, most evening viewers had just watched the very grim realities portrayed on the 6 o'clock news. Hill Street entertains, all right, but its stark realism also rubs raw spots. Often, Hill Street is just too close for comfort, which is surely one reason why it wound up last season so low in the ratings, while a harmless new family sitcom titled Too Close for Comfort glided into the top 10.

Mark Goodman is a former television writer for Time and New Times magazines.

Daniel J. Travanti and friend weren't singing the blues when he carried off the 1981 Emmy for best actor.

Of course, it must be remembered that *M*A*S*H* began 10 years ago with some of the same problems (it is both a comedy and drama; it, too, can rub raw spots), and its groundwork was laid by a hit movie. Hill Street is surmounting its difficulties in much the same way: superior writing coupled with thoroughgoing character interaction and development. With 15 basic characters, that is no small task.

Fortunately, Hill Street has a dandy cast. There is veteran Michael Conrad as the silver-tongued sergeant with an eye for the ladies; there are now two all-pro picks from the celebrity-athlete ranks: Mike Warren, former basketball captain of the national-champion U.C.L.A. Bruins, as the beleaguered black cop, and Street's newest patrolman, ex-Cornell and Minnesota Viking football-star Ed Marinaro. And for sheer black-comedy beguilement, no other show has anything to quite match Bruce Weitz's demonic interpretation of a Serpico-style undercover cop.

There is no question, though, that the show's most fetching feature is Veronica Hamel and the fitful romance her lady lawyer carries on with Captain Frank Furillo (Daniel J. Travanti). Hamel, a former model (both her agent and publicist claim not to know her age), fell into her role as Joyce Davenport by near-hysterical accident.

"I was on the road in a theater production of The Rainmaker," she recalls over a brief commissary lunch

In 1981, her career peaking, Hamel (center) starred in Valley of the Dolls.

You don't know me, I realize, but . . .

I want you to have this before it's too late.

Hello . . . My name is Bud Weckesser.

A number of years ago I was a teacher in Kent, Ohio. I had no savings and a beat-up old station wagon that still wasn't paid for.

One night my wife and I were playing cards with some friends. Mary mentioned casually that—on our budget—she was sure she knew 101 ways to fix a hamburger. That hurt. So I challenged her. "If you'll type up the recipes," I said, "I'll take out a small ad in the National Enquirer and we'll see if anyone will pay $3.98 for your collection of recipes."

I rented a P.O. Box in Kent and placed a small ad. It was surprisingly cheap.

Several weeks later I stopped by the post office. I walked over to my box. When I looked through the little glass window on the door, I almost dropped my key. The box was stuffed—jammed—full of letters. All of them contained checks for $3.98—and they'd come from all parts of the U.S. and Canada.

The next few days were hectic, to say the least. My wife typed the recipes. I had them duplicated, stapled them together and our crude little book was born. But every day orders continued to pour in. And every day we'd bank the money and send out our stapled recipe booklet.

I decided to try another ad. This time I placed a classified ad for some of my beer and wine making recipes in Popular Mechanics. Again, the orders poured in. Over $1,000.00 in just several weeks. And, as our business grew, I corresponded with other people . . .

- A husband-wife team from Santa Barbara put together a booklet about how to "win at card games." It pulled $14,870.00 in just 5 months . . . all cash orders . . . all from a small ad . . . all by mail.

- An Oregon man informed me he had made over $14,000.00 selling his small booklet about getting rid of moles and gophers in your yard. Again . . . all by mail.

- A Maryland man wrote an 8 1/2" x 11" booklet of business advice. So far it's brought him over $140,000.00 . . . all by mail.

Test ads are surprisingly inexpensive (as low as $19.00 for a national ad) and the profit potential is staggering! An Ohio man I spoke with put a large display ad in a national Sunday supplement. A few days later the orders started pouring in—mail sacks full of cash! Within the next two months he received over $220,000.00 in CASH orders for his $3.00 booklet.

Perhaps you're saying to yourself, "Yes, but this only works for a few lucky people." If that's your thought—and I don't blame you for being skeptical—please try this simple little test. It won't cost you a cent.

1. Go in the library and get some year-old issues of magazines with classified ads—like Popular Mechanics and Sports Afield, etc.

2. Select current issues of the same magazines.

3. Compare the classified ads. Look at the current issue then at the back issue. Note how many of the same classified ads are still running, ONE YEAR LATER. People don't continue running ads for over a year unless they're making money at it.

Let me give you some more amazing facts about this unique little business.

- ★ You can start at home . . . in your spare time . . . quietly . . . it won't interfere with your present job.

- ★ You can take out a test ad for as little as $13.50 in a variety of well-known national magazines.

- ★ You don't even have to write a booklet yourself. I'll show you how to obtain "how-to" booklets at wholesale prices—or below. They're already written, already printed and ready to sell. Even better, you don't have to buy them until you've tested your ad and have the cash orders in hand. In short, you don't tie up any money in stock or supplies of books.

- ★ You can set your own hours. All you need is a post office nearby.

- ★ You can deduct up to 33% of the expenses on your home if you set up your office at home.

- ★ You can travel whenever you wish—or just loaf much of the time. All you need to do is pick up your mail twice a week—or have someone do it for you. You'll open orders, remove the checks (95% of them don't bounce, believe it or not) and bank your receipts.

- ★ In the afternoon or evening, you can type the labels for the small envelopes you'll use to ship your booklets. Drop them off at the post office and you're done. No bosses, no layoffs, no strikes, no rat race.

I've put all of my instructions—every secret—in a simple Starter Guide. And if you're wondering why I'd share my business with you—especially if it's so profitable—here's why.

The range of topics and ads is almost infinite. I won't be competing with you nor you with me. I've got a whole drawer full of ideas I haven't even tried yet. There's plenty of room for everyone.

I'll show you—

- How and where to get national ads for only $13.50 . . . ads you can run month after month.

- How to obtain FREE ADS—YOU PAY ONLY IF THE AD IS SUCCESSFUL.

- How to start with no money in books or supplies.
- Where to obtain hundreds of pre-printed booklets—at super low wholesale prices.

- How to word your ad—I'll include various sample ads.

- How to set up your office in a spare room or basement.

- I'll also include a giant list of "how-to" topics.
- Plus . . . all the sample ads, forms, lists, addresses, and details you'll need to get started within only 10 days.

I'd like to send you my complete starter guide for a FULL YEAR WITHOUT OBLIGATION.

Read it. Try a test ad yourself. If you're not delighted just return the materials. We'll refund your purchase price IN FULL. And we'll send the refund within 3 working days. No delays. Our bank reference is listed on this page.

between shootings, "and I got fired. I called my ex-husband [Michael Irving] and told him I was flying back to Los Angeles. I was literally having a breakdown, and it was a humbling experience. I was numb on the plane — the stewardesses didn't know what to do with me. I thought, 'I'm going to pack it in.' I got off the plane and started to gush all over Michael. I said, 'Maybe I should have taken Charlie's Angels instead.' [She was up for a role as one of the original Angels.] He said, 'Naw, maybe they would have fired you too.'

"That picked me up. Two days later I was the last gal to read for Hill Street. All I really wanted to do was hide, but I loved the character and the writing. Nothing else offered to me measured up, so I decided to do it."

Up to that point, Hamel's career, which had taken her from the fairly blue streets of North Philadelphia to the fashion houses of New York, had consisted largely of Off Off Broadway roles, dinner theaters and television guest appearances. Now everyone wants Veronica Hamel, and because of time constraints, the best she has been able to do to accommodate is a role in the recent CBS miniseries Valley of the Dolls.

It is not news that instant celebrity can be disconcerting. "A director once told me I was afraid of success," she says. "I think I was just afraid of celebrity. I like watching other people; I don't like them watching me."

However, Hamel is a lively, gregarious sort who, as Travanti, 41, puts it, "giggles like a horse." She and Travanti and the rest of the nicely knit cast and crew seem to enjoy one another immensely on the set, and their camaraderie tends to dispel rumors of conflict off-camera.

Says Travanti: "Between Veronica and me, the working chemistry is — and this is tough to say — perfect. And there are no real ego problems on this set. We're not Pollyannas around here, but our egos are all wrapped up in the show. In fact, there's a feeling among the cast that we have to work together to continue to be this good. We tend to be hypercritical of ourselves." But, he adds proudly, "we're so good that, even if we slip a little, we're still far better than anything else on TV."

Travanti can be forgiven a bit of badge-thumping; it has indeed been a long climb up Hill Street for what has become the best repertory company on television this side of *M*A*S*H*. That doesn't mean that the sailing ahead is clear (although it can't hurt that Grant Tinker, the former president of Mary Tyler Moore, Inc., who was deeply involved in the original production of Hill Street, has now succeeded Fred Silverman as president of NBC). But at least Hill Street no longer runs the danger of being canned, and its successes could do something for the future of prime-time TV.

As Hamel puts it: "We may start a TV renaissance in the 80's. Hill may be a role model for intelligent, ambitious shows. Maybe now creative people who had thrown up their hands and said, 'It can't be done on TV,' will realize it can be and come back."

Sheepskin Shock:

Why College Costs So Much and How to Fight Back

Skyrocketing fees and cutbacks in student aid have made a college education tough to afford. But the resourceful student can still find financial relief.

By Michael D'Antonio

There was a time not so long ago when one of the biggest worries a college student had was balancing his studies with a social life of football games and beer blasts. Today a greater worry is not how to stay in college but how to afford to go in the first place. Last September, students returning to colleges and universities across the country were met by record-breaking prices. Inflation and interest rates have caused tuition to skyrocket at many schools.

And recent cuts in Federal loan and grant programs promise to further tighten the squeeze on students, parents and institutions.

The numbers are staggering. Overall, college costs rose by more than 13 percent last year alone. Prices have doubled since the 1972-73 school year, even though the increase in the cost of education has lagged slightly behind the rate of inflation. At some private schools, tuition is now over $7,000. This of course, doesn't cover a student's living expenses, which can run as high as $4,000 per year. Even at less-expensive state universities tuitions have skyrocketed, with some now as high as $4,000 per year for nonresidents.

The high prices are concentrated for the most part at prestigious private schools in the Northeast, where heating costs and expensive faculties began pushing up prices in the 1970's. But while insulation and tightfisted management allowed many colleges to survive the 70's, the outlook for the 80's is discouraging. A recent study by the Government's National Center for Education Statistics indicated that although enrollment at colleges is up overall (in part because of the last group of baby-boom children of the 1950's), 42 percent of the schools studied reported that enrollment is down. Some of these institutions blamed cuts in state aid that translated into tuition rates too high for some students. And now because of fewer scholarships and loans, many children from middle-income families are finding themselves too rich to qualify for grants yet too poor to pay the bills themselves.

The Reagan Administration and Congress cut Pell Grants and Direct Loans for needy students by $200 million for fiscal year 1981, reducing the maximum possible award by more than $100 per year and knocking 150,000 students out of the programs. In fiscal 1982, which began Oct. 1, 1981, the programs were cut by $1 billion, removing hundreds of thousands more from eligibility. And restrictions in the Guaranteed Student Loan program, popular with middle-income families, will cut an estimated one million current borrowers out of the program by this fall, according to the American Council on Education.

"If Federal aid is cut much more, a substantial number of New York colleges, as many as 18, would go under," says Joseph Palamoutain, president of Skidmore College, a small, private college in New York State. "And that's not just crying wolf." More than 27 percent of Skidmore students need some financial aid to go to school. The percentages are higher at many institutions.

Kenneth Shaw, chancellor of the Southern Illinois University system, believes higher education should be funded by "a constructive partnership of students, parents, educational institutions, private enterprise, states and the Federal Government. "But there is growing evidence," he says, referring to Federal cutbacks, "that a major partner in the alliance is about to reduce that commitment."

Shaw supports efforts to limit Federal spending, but he believes education is suffering deeper cuts than the rest of the Government. As he sees it, more moderate cuts, phased in over a longer time frame, would give the other members of the funding alliance time to figure out how to take up the slack.

The gloom forecasted by the college presidents is not shared by the Reagan Administration. Terrel H. Bell, Secretary of Education, says he hasn't talked to one college administrator who blames decreasing enrollments on cuts in Federal programs. "We all ought to be careful that we don't see more gloom than there is, and that we don't pass that on to students," he told a recent convention of college administrators in Washington.

Bell told the educators that although the budget cuts may be bitter medicine, they will cure the economy of inflation and thereby stop the rise in college prices. And rather than hope for fewer cuts, Bell said they should prepare for hikes in the processing fees and the interest charged for student loans.

Continued price hikes and cutbacks in programs will mean some students just can't afford to go. "For many families with an average income of around $20,000, close to the national median, a public institution costing an average of $3,000 to $4,000 is almost out of reach already," says E.K. Fretwell, chancellor of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Still, with all the bad news, there are ways to finance a college education. Students from lower-income families can apply for outright grants through the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant Program. The awards range from $400 to $1,670. Some low-interest student loans are still available directly from the Government (for instance, the Guaranteed Student Loan Program) or through banks. The 9-percent interest rate on these loans is subsidized by the Government, which pays lenders the balance of the market rate. Students can also apply for thousands of private scholarships at colleges.

Skidmore's Palamoutain points out, "the least-expensive way to go to school may be to live at home and attend a public college. Many students are going to two-year junior colleges first and then moving up. You can save a lot of money by avoiding room-and-board charges."

Nearly 20 percent of those who graduated high school in the 1970's went on to earn college degrees. So even though the short-term future looks bleak for some students and colleges, Palamoutain and his colleagues are confident the systems will recover from financial setbacks. Concludes the veteran administrator: "Resourceful students and resourceful institutions are going to survive."

Observations

Brrrrrr. Is January weather giving you fits? Well, consider the cold shoulder received by Danish sea captain Vitus Bering, the first European to explore Alaska. He ran into sub-zero temperatures, howling winds and towering seas, and was shipwrecked in the Alaskan sea that bears his name. Later, hardy "sourdoughs" from the far south endured similar hardships panning Alaska's icy streams for gold. Now Alaska's fearsome weather is challenging a new breed of treasure hunter, looking for oil and natural gas.

Northern Light. At least 19 billion barrels of oil and 101 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, says the U.S. Geological Survey, could lie beneath the 49th state's land and offshore waters, potentially very helpful in avoiding future U.S. energy crises. Trouble is, nobody can be sure what's there until the more promising areas are drilled, and under the Carter Administration, large portions of the state were placed off limits to drillers. That's beginning to ease now in favor of a more balanced policy that permits drilling in some areas, with tough safeguards to protect the environment.

Cold comfort. Oil explorers find Alaska formidable enough without political hassles. They face temperatures so cold that metal turns brittle and tires blow off Jeeps. In the Bering and Beaufort Seas, ice can suddenly buckle and rear up into 70-foot ridges that can wreck drilling rigs. But oil-industry scientists have found a way to fend off the ice—by putting rigs on massive artificial islands of sand and gravel that blunt the Arctic battering rams.

Bergy bits & growlers. New brands of dog food? No, it's slang for small icebergs.

"Calved" in the spring from Greenland glaciers, along with giants as massive as 10 Queen Elizabeth II's, icebergs might menace drilling rigs in another cold clime—the Atlantic Ocean off the Newfoundland coast. We're working on ways to tame icebergs. One possibility: Use floating rigs that can be towed out of the berg's path. Another: "Lasso" bergs with 4,000-foot plastic ropes attached to tugboats. Getting energy from remote, hostile places is a big complex job, full of uncertainties. But the challenge is worth the risk—for it could mean bringing you more energy.

It's a fact: The U.S. Geological Survey estimates that 44 percent of America's undiscovered offshore oil and 39 percent of its undiscovered offshore natural gas may lie under Alaskan waters.

Elaine Zayak: New Sweetheart on Skates

By Barry Wilner

Being touted as the successor to Peggy Fleming and Dorothy Hamill as America's next ice princess isn't enough for 16-year-old skater Elaine Zayak. No, she wants to revolutionize her sport, too.

Zayak, the reigning U.S. women's figure-skating champ, has brought an athletic side to women's skating that ton, himself a former gold-medal skater. "And she's an extraordinary competitor. A lot of skaters can do beautiful things in practice but nothing in competition. Elaine will leave the sport better for having been in it."

It's hard to believe that Zayak started skating not for the fun of it, nor because she dreamed of becoming the next Sonja Henie (her idol). Rather she was advised to take up the sport as therapy after losing several toes in an accident at home when she was 3.

These days the 5-foot 5-inch blonde practices five hours a day, seven days a week. Admittedly, it can become a grind. "Sometimes I want to skip a day of practice," she says.

"Especially in the summer, when it's hot out and I'd like to be outside."

Oh yes, and what about school? A junior at Paramus High, Zayak takes two hours of classes at the school per day, is tutored three hours a week in her major subjects and receives a gym credit for her skating.

She also swims and keeps her 120-pound form trim by running, working on a trampoline and with weights.

Elaine's regimen has put a tremendous financial strain on her parents and older sister (her father is part-owner of a tavern). It's estimated it costs her folks $25,000 to $30,000 a year to keep Elaine at the top, including travel expenses, coaches' fees, tutoring and such basics as $200 beaded costumes and $500 skates that are replaced every six months.

Zayak is immensely confident in her abilities. In fact her biggest fear is that she may be burned out by the time the 1984 Olympics get underway in Yugoslavia. "It might be the best thing if I don't win the Worlds this year," she says. "If I win it all now, I might be dead by the Olympics."

Little chance of that. When she finishes yet another stunning freestyle program and the crowd rises as one to shower her with applause, roses and love, it has to pump her up.

"When I'm out there, I don't think about what I'm doing or how lonely it is," she observes. "I just do it."

Like nobody has ever done before.

Zayak's athletic prowess has turned skating topsy-turvy.

the balletic Fleming or pert Hamill never did. For instance, Zayak will begin her program by bursting onto the ice in a series of triple jumps — and do as many as seven in her five-minute freestyle routines, the most by any skater, male or female, in competition today. (Most girls, if they can even do a triple, won't try more than three.)

"When Peggy Fleming was skating, it was different: Nobody even tried triples," says Elaine, a native of Paramus, N.J. "The style then was pretty and everything, but I've tried to add excitement to it."

Like any amateur athlete, the 1984 Olympics are Zayak's ultimate goal ("That's what I'm skating for," she beams purposefully). But you'll get a chance to see her strut her stuff long before then. She'll defend her national title in Indianapolis Jan. 26-30 (to be aired on ABC the following weekend). Then it's off to Copenhagen six weeks later for the World Championships, a competition she placed second in last year.

"Elaine has that special magnetism," notes commentator Dick But-

Barry Wilner frequently reports on the sports scene for FAMILY WEEKLY.

PEOPLE

Is Daily Life The Stuff That Dreams Are Made On?

Dreams are events which reflect day-to-day changes in the life of an individual.

By John E. Gibson

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women remember their dreams better than men do.
2. Dreams mirror the thoughts, reactions and innermost feelings resulting from your day-to-day actions.
3. If you remember your dreams, you probably can't remember the things that happened to you during early childhood.
4. Though most of our dreams come from our subconscious, some may be what are termed telepathic dreams, originating in the mind of someone else.
5. A child's dream world is a never-never land of fantasy and fairy tales.
6. Dreams may reflect a subconscious awareness of a specific disease or ailment in its initial stages — long before it can be detected by a physical examination.

ANSWERS

1. True. In a University of Wisconsin study, scientists measured frequency and clarity of dream recall in male and female students. Results: Women averaged significantly higher scores than men. The investigators speculated that "The greater mean dream recall for females... is possibly related to the often reported... vivid imagery ability of females."
2. True. In-depth studies of the dreams of college students, conducted by a team of investigators at the University of Cincinnati Medical School and the Veterans Administration Psychiatric Service, have shown that "Dreams are events which reflect day-to-day changes in the life of an individual." The content of dreams was found to be either overtly or covertly related to the waking life of the dreamer.
3. False. In a George Washington University study, Early Memories and Dream Recall, it was found that some people are able to recall very early events in their lives while others cannot, and that remembering dreams tends to go hand in hand with recalling early childhood memories. The investigators further suggested that "both recall for early memories and recall for dreams may reflect openness to one's own experience."

4. True. In studies conducted in the dream laboratory of Maimonides Medical Center, experimentally-induced telepathic dreams have been produced by "senders" transmitting thoughts and images to sleepers in separate rooms, causing them to experience dreams of a corresponding nature. Other studies match these findings, which suggests that some of your dreams may not originate in you at all but in the mind of someone you may not even know.

5. False. In a study of thousands of elementary and junior-high school children, a team of behavior scientists at Hungary's Pedagogical College found that only 9 percent of children's dreams were characterized as fairy tales, while 22 percent were related to concrete things and specific people. Additionally, fear and anxiety in various forms made up 41 percent of their dreams; school, 11 percent, and the rest were made up of hopes and wishes.

6. True. In a study exploring the relationship between dreams and disease, Dr. Russell A. Lockhart, research psychologist at the University of California Medical School, concluded that: "A dream may speak organically both before and after the emergence of a bodily disturbance. That is, dreams may not only anticipate the development of (a physical ailment) but may also reflect bodily disturbance in process." It is further concluded from the results of the investigation — in which numerous case histories are cited — that organs and bodily processes may stimulate psychic images (in dreams) which reflect a physical disturbance and its location. FW

If you'd like to start a collection of fine miniatures, these sculptured porcelain bouquets are a perfect place to begin. Their intricate detail is fascinating, the floral theme has universal appeal, the designs are captivating and the quality of the sculpture is impeccable. The established collector will also find it hard to resist the intrinsic appeal of these dainty miniatures. In fact, arranged on an end table or grouped on the deluxe étagère that is included as part of the collection, The Flowers of the Year Porcelain Miniatures Collection will enchant all who see it.

Because each bouquet in the collection is so different from the others, your friends may think you acquired them one at a time over a period of many years. But you can obtain this collection far more easily and conveniently. It will be sent to you at the rate of one bouquet each month. However, the bouquets are available only as a collection and only from Franklin Porcelain, with a limit of one collection per order.

Affordably priced . . . just $22.50 each

The price for each bouquet is a modest $22.50 to be billed on a monthly basis. This favorable price is guaranteed for the entire collection. To add to your enjoyment, a booklet describing the flower portrayed will accompany each bouquet. A Certificate of Authenticity will also be provided with each collection attesting to its original design and handcraftsmanship.

Since it will take time to craft these porcelain miniatures, the subscription application at right should be signed and mailed to Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, Pennsylvania 19091, by January 31, 1982.

ACTUAL SIZE

Arranged on the deluxe hexagonal étagère that is provided as part of the collection, the miniature flower bouquets make an elegant and captivating display.

12 Musts for Your Medicine Chest

By Lesly Berger

Your medicine chest, unless it is properly and safely equipped, might be doing your family more harm than good. "The medicine chest is probably the worst thing that ever happened to home safety," says Dr. Paul Wise, director of emergency and primary care services at The Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, Mass., "because all the potentially dangerous items are in one place."

According to Dr. Wise, for most children the medicine chest is a forbidden area, and thus it's often the first place they go to when they are left alone. In addition, many children tend to see medicine as candy and want to eat it.

"No medicines should be in a cabinet that's not locked," Dr. Wise emphasizes. Furthermore, he recommends that even in a locked cabinet, all medications be stored in containers with child-proof safety caps.

Regardless of whether you have young children in your home, there are other precautions that should be taken to ensure safety with your medicine chest. First of all, says Dr. Richard Penna, director of professional affairs at the American Pharmaceutical Association in Washington, D.C., if your medicine chest is located in the bathroom, drugs should not be kept in it at all. "Usually the bathroom will have very high humidity and the highest temperature in the house. Humidity and high temperature are not good for drugs. They cause tablets to tend to stick together or crumble. And many medicines decompose under high temperature." He suggests you keep drugs in a cool, dark place.

Also, as medicines age, the chemicals they consist of may change. Meredith Clarke, a representative of the National Safety Council, advises you to get rid of any medications that are out of date (check expiration dates on labels). Though your bathroom medicine chest should not be used to store medication, there are some items it should not be without. "The most important thing in any medicine chest should be a list of telephone numbers to call in an emergency," Dr. Wise says. He recommends you include the numbers of your physician, the closest poison-control center, your police and fire departments and an ambulance company.

"It's a good idea to keep a first-aid manual in your medicine cabinet," says Dr. Penna. "And since accidents don't announce themselves in advance, the members of your household should be familiar with the procedures in the manual beforehand."

Here are some additional medical items no home should be without. Remember to keep the medications someplace other than the bathroom. (If you'd like to store all items together, consider relocating your medicine chest.)

1. General first-aid substances, such as adhesive bandages and cotton gauze. Also, disinfectants and antiseptics such as iodine or antibiotic ointments like bacitracin. For cuts and scrapes.
2. Aspirin or acetaminophen. For fever, aches and pains.
3. Ipecac syrup, 1-ounce bottle. Induces vomiting after poison is swallowed. "But don't administer it without first checking with your physician," Dr. Wise warns.
4. Calamine lotion. All-around skin treatment. For poison ivy or oak, insect bites, sunburn. (Hydrocortisone cream is also useful for skin ailments.)
5. Antacid preparation. For upset stomach.
6. Mild anti-diarrheal preparation such as Kaopectate.
7. Ice bag or ice pack. Reduces swelling from athletic injuries, sprains, bruises, contusions, tooth extractions.
8. Hot-water bottle or heating pad. Soothes aches and pains.
9. Elastic bandage. For sprains.
10. Thermometer. Rectal for infants, oral for rest of household.

Original U.S. Morgan Silver Dollars

Available Only Until Midnight, Tonight

Philadelphia, January 1982. IMM announced today the release for sale of a small cache of less than 10,000 original U.S. Government Morgan Silver Dollars. Esteemed by collectors worldwide, Morgan Silver Dollars are among the last 900 fine silver dollars to have been struck for circulation by the U.S. Government and have become extremely scarce in recent years.

authorized by an Act of the United States Congress in 1878 and was struck for circulation from 1878-1904. Due to a bullion shortage, coinage was suspended until 1921, when Morgans were once again minted for a single year. During World War I it is estimated that over 270 million silver dollars were melted down for bullion and as a result, all surviving Morgan Dollars are in short supply. The specimens in this offering are all in very fine condition and to protect your investment each coin will be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity to that effect.

To qualify for this offering, call Lee Collins toll free 1-800-345-8502 (in Pennsylvania call our Special Operator at 1-800-662-5180), Dept. MDO-12. Orders will be accepted on major credit cards only. An additional $2.75 is requested to cover insurance, postage and special handling per order. If not completely satisfied, you may return your U.S. Morgan Silver Dollars in their original condition within 30 days for a full refund.

THE FAMILY

How Your Anger Affects Your Child

By Gary Stern

In every family there are occasions when anger erupts between parents in the presence of young children. Sigmund Freud contended that a child's superego was not developed enough for him to feel anger's damaging effects. But now some psychologists are offering a different viewpoint.

Andre Derdeyn, a psychiatrist and director of the University of Virginia's division of child and family psychiatry, has conducted studies recently that reveal that a child sometimes senses a parent's anger, blames himself for the parent's problem and, as a result, feels depressed.

It is inevitable that parents express anger at each other, but Dr. Derdeyn warns against "inappropriate and inexplicable" anger.

"There can be open conflict," he says. "A family, after all, should be a safe place for free emotional exchange, but when it turns explosive, that's when you need to protect your child."

David Boedy, associate clinical professor of the University of Vermont's Family Outreach Center, agrees that young children can be affected by explosive parental anger — and that's true even for babies. "A baby is very tuned into a mother's feelings," says Boedy, pointing out that a baby can discern tension in the mother's body while being held or breast-fed. Studies show that a parent's shrill, angry tone of voice will alter a baby's cooing.

For a slightly older child, a parent's anger can be threatening or confusing because the child can't integrate this overwhelming feeling. If parents begin threatening each other or talking of divorce, it preys on the child's most catastrophic fear: abandonment.

And parents who argue behind closed doors are not fooling a youngster, who senses the hostile underpinnings and strained tones.

How can parents communicate their anger toward each other without frightening or confusing their child? Dr. Boedy believes that, for starters, parents should accept their anger toward each other. "Parents have a right to be angry, and the anger does not have to take place in the bedroom behind closed doors," Boedy says. Arguing in front of the youngster can actually help him see that Mommy and Daddy can live happily with each other even when not in accord on every issue. Suppressing anger or trying to hide it will only make matters worse in the long run.

However, if parents are going to argue in the presence of children, it must be constructive anger: anger that is worked through and does not turn threatening or violent. "Anger must be resolved," Boedy points out, "so that children can see it has a beginning and an end."

Here are a few more ground rules he offers for parents:

1. Learn to argue constructively. An argument should never result in a winner and loser but rather two winners. Ideally, you should reach an understanding of what you both want and a compromise that will allow both of you to have your needs met.

2. Never threaten each other.

3. Either parent should have the right to stop the argument if it becomes too heated.

4. Let children know that they are not responsible for the anger. For instance, "It's O.K., Bobby, it's not your fault. Mommy and Daddy are having an argument about the car."

5. Help your child with his survival skills. For example, "When Mommy and Daddy fight, you can go to your room and listen to music if you want to."

WHAT IN THE WORLD

By Eliot Kaplan

GOBBLEDYGOOK

There are a lot of perfectly good words in the English language that, for many reasons (society's mores, our egos), we frown upon using. Instead we camouflage them by inventing a new language. Thus an ass becomes a "donkey," you're not fired, you're "let go," garbage collectors become "sanitation men" and a politician doesn't lie, he "misspeaks himself." From Hugh Rawson's clever A Dictionary of Euphemisms & Other Doubletalk, here are a few examples, many from that bastion of jabberwocky — the military: air support (bombing) authentic reproduction (a fake all the same) combat emplacement evacuator (Army shovel) encore (TV talk for a repeat) memorial park (cemetery) nondiscernible microbioculator (C.I.A. dart gun) open marriage (open adultery) preemptive strike (sneak attack)

previously owned (used) retrograde maneuver or strategic movement to the rear (military retreat) sight deprived (blind) wonderful personality (at best, homely)

NEW HEIGHTS

In about one of every 5,000 children, the body produces no growth hormone, and he or she will grow no taller than 4½ feet. These children can be treated successfully with injections of the hormone, but the hormone can be obtained only from the pituitary gland of a cadaver. "It takes about 80 pituitary glands to treat one child for one year, and treatment often lasts up to 10 years," points out Dr. Virginia Weldon, professor of pediatrics at Washington

Tracy Garner

University in St. Louis.

But now rapid advances in genetic engineering offer the hope that the hormone might be readily available soon for these children and for others whose pituitaries produce an abnormal version of the growth hormone.

The synthetic hormone, produced using recombinant DNA, is currently being tested on kids at 10 locations around the U.S., including Washington U. Certain types of dwarfism will not be helped by the hormone, and no child can grow after his bones are fully fused, which usually occurs during puberty.

"There are certain ethical considerations involved here, too," notes Weldon. "Do we prescribe the hormone for normal-sized children whose parents want basketball players? It's obvious that for many reasons we must proceed very carefully."

ZAPPING CHAPPED LIPS

The best way to prevent winter's chapped lips may simply be to drink more water. Chapped lips are primarily caused by internal dehydration, explains Dr. Bernard Kirshbaum, clinical professor of dermatology at The Medical College of Pennsylvania. We don't feel as thirsty in cold weather as in hot and so don't drink enough. And when we lick our lips, the cold air evaporates the moisture, causing further irritation.

Consuming just any liquids won't do. Coffee, tea and colas contain diuretics, says Kirshbaum, and drinking them draws off more fluid than you take in. He advises water or juices — 4 to 8 glasses a day.

MUZZLING HOWARD

Some 36 regularly scheduled TV shows, from Laverne & Shirley to Masterpiece Theater, are closed captioned for the deaf. This means that subtitles corresponding to the audio portion appear on TV sets equipped with special decoders (43,000 are currently in use).

Peter Bono

Now the nonprofit National Captioning Institute in Falls Church, Va., is thinking of, er, tapping a new market — bars. N.C.I. thinks patrons accustomed to the perpetual saloon din might like knowing what's being said on the screen.

And a recent letter to N.C.I. suggests the possibility of another vast new audience. A hearing-impaired woman in North Carolina wrote that her husband, who can hear, prefers captions on Monday Night Football to the regular sound. "He says it's nice to turn down the volume so he doesn't have to listen to Howard Cosell," she explained.

WHAT'S-HER-NAME IS GORGEOUS

The more attractive you are, the harder you may be to remember. As reported recently in New Scientist, three California researchers showed high-school yearbook photos to a group of volunteers, asking them to rate the subjects on a five-point scale of "usualness." Then another group ranked the people pictured on how good looking they were. Finally, the researchers tested how memorable the faces were by flashing slides of each.

It turns out those people judged to be most typical looking were also the ones judged most attractive. They were also the individuals least likely to be recalled. The attractive faces tended to look alike, precisely because they lacked distinguishing features.

Words and Pictures

Words and pictures don't begin to show the beauty, brilliance, and fire of these magnificent rings. We want you to wear them and judge them on their own merits—not on what we tell you. See if your friends and family can tell them from an expensive "natural" diamond worth 100 times as much. In all probability you can fool them if you want to. Not many people can tell these brilliant counterfeits from the expensive real ones. Yet now you can own these beautiful rings at amazingly low prices.

Low Price Doesn't

Mean Low Quality. These counterfeit diamonds are not cheap fakes. They are carefully cut and polished by skilled craftsmen in the same manner as natural diamonds, with 58 facets. They are hand set in heavy 14Kt-GE (Gold Electroplate), by master craftsmen. They shine like a $1,000 diamond—but cost you less than $30.00.

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

CARAT (CT)—a measure of weight for a diamond—however, Gemfires and Diamonites are given approximate carat values based on size (not weight). A 1-carat Gemfire or Diamonite is approximately the same size as a 1-carat diamond.

GOLD ELECTROPLATE (GE)—this mounting uses karat gold (either white or yellow) that is electrically bonded to the mounting after it is formed and designated "gold electroplate."

White Mounting—Wh. Mtg. Yellow Mounting—Yel Mtg.
14Kt-Gold Electroplate—14Kt-GE

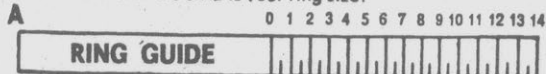

How to Find Your Ring Size

1. Cut a strip of paper 3-inches long and 1/4 inch wide.

2. Wrap the strip around the finger that is to wear the ring. Then place a dot on the strip where it meets the end.

3. Place the dot on the strip of paper at "A" on the ring guide. The number at the end of the strip is your ring size.

Exciting Gift for Someone Special

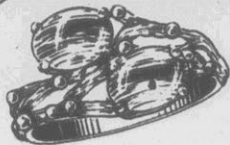

These exquisite rings make a much appreciated gift for a special someone in your life. They will last a lifetime. Give for birthdays, anniversaries or just as a wonderful surprise. Even if you choose to tell, your loved one will be proud that you were clever enough to find such an expensive-looking ring at these remarkably low prices. The difference between it and a natural diamond could make a down payment on a new car or home, even a wonderful vacation for just you two!

Even Millionaires

Wear Counterfeit Diamonds. Today many wealthy people, TV and movie stars feel unsafe making public appearances wearing expensive jewelry. Oftentimes they keep their diamonds in a safe deposit box and wear counterfeits. Now you too can wear these master-crafted counterfeit diamonds and impress your friends!

With Our Guarantee You Take No Risks.

If at the end of 30 days you are not completely satisfied, return by INSURED MAIL for purchase price refund. At any time, or for any reason, and in any condition you may return your jewelry by INSURED MAIL for FREE replacement.

Prince Valiant
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

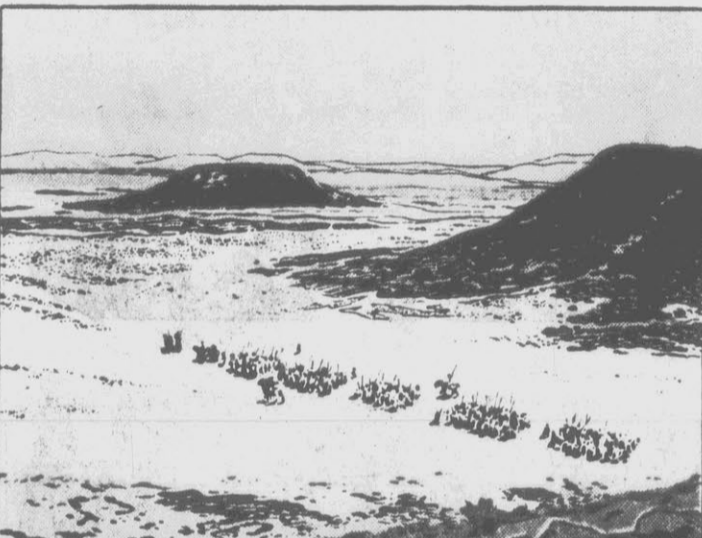

Our Story: PRINCE VALIANT AND SIR GAWAIN PICK THEIR WAY DOWN TO THE IMPERIAL OUTPOST AT THEBES, BUT NO SENTRY STOPS THEM. FOR A MOMENT NEITHER MAN SPEAKS. "MAGNIFICENT," SAYS VAL AT LAST. "A LEGION OF SCARECROWS KEEPS THE NUBIANS AT BAY WHILE AN ENTIRE ARMY DISAPPEARS. I SEE THE HAND OF BELISARIUS."

A RUSTLE OF MOTION DISTURBS THE SILENCE AS AN OLD MAN CREEPS FROM HIS TENT AND SCURRIES AWAY. IT WAS HE WHO KEPT THE FIRES LIT.

VAL AND GAWAIN CONTINUE THEIR JOURNEY, CROSSING THE RED SEA TO ARABIA. EVERYWHERE ALONG THE EMPIRE'S FRONTIER THE STORY IS THE SAME: BELISARIUS HAS WITHDRAWN HIS ARMIES AND IN THEIR PLACE LEFT TROOPS OF CLAY. EVEN THESE CAN BE DEADLY WHEN A SIMOON BLOWS.

MARCHING HIS SWELLING FORCE ACROSS THE BARREN DESERT, JUSTINIAN'S GREAT GENERAL HAS AVOIDED DETECTION AND RAISED NO ALARMS. NOW HE TURNS NORTH, TOWARD THE BLACK DESERT, ON HIS WAY TO THE OUTPOSTS AT THE PERSIAN FRONTIER.

AT THE LAST OF THE ABANDONED OUTPOSTS, VAL FINDS A LOAF OF BREAD. THE CORE IS STILL SOFT. THEY ARE TWO DAYS BEHIND.

"WE CAN BEAT THEM TO JAWA," VAL TELLS GAWAIN. JAWA: LOST CITY OF THE BLACK DESERT, THE ONLY PLACE WITH WATER ENOUGH -- MAYBE -- TO SLAKE AN ARMY'S THIRST. THEY RACE FOR IT, STOPPING ONLY TO HAGGLE WITH NOMADS FOR FRESH CAMELS. THEIR BLOOD BOILS BY DAY; BY NIGHT A PIERCING CHILL ASSAULTS THEIR BONES.
