Pitt OKs Plan For Cheese Giveaway

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Board of County Commissioners today approved a program for the Department of Social Services under which eligible persons would receive free surplus cheese. Ed Garrison, DDS director, said surplus cheese from the U.S. Department of Agriculture will be distributed free to those eligible, although the county will be required to fund administration of the program. He noted that depending of the number of family members, from five to 20 pounds of cheese would be distributed to each participating family.

Garris, pointing to recent charges by state officials that the error rate for the Food Stamp program in Pitt is 15 percent, said according to his figures, the error rate is from 4 to 9 percent.

Seventy-five percent of the errors in the program state wide, Garrison noted, are due to wrong information being provided by clients.

"There are many things we need from the state, which we haven't gotten," in the way of assistance, Garrison emphasized, pointing out that while the state requires the county to run the food stamp program, it supplies only 2 percent of the administrative costs. The county, he noted, provides 48 percent, while the federal government funds the other 50 percent.

"What we have is a program that is almost impossible to administer," according to the director, who noted that the Food Stamp manual requires social service workers to take the word of a client.

He noted that in Pitt, 10 people process the 4,200 cases receiving food stamps.

Garrison said a reorganization of the department's food stamp unit, an increase in the number of staff, and a policy of "accepting no questionable information from a client ... make them prove the information is correct," will hopefully help reduce the error rate.

In other business this morning, the board agreed to provide workmen's compensation for rescue squad volunteers in the county just as it does for volunteer firemen; extended the N.C. Association for the Emotionally Troubled's lease on land at the county farm for one year; approved road petitions for SR 1442 and SR 1911; and heard reports from various county agencies and departments.

Howell Reports Business As Usual At University

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

"I feel very confident about the future," interim chancellor Dr. John Howell told the East Carolina University Board of Trustees yesterday.

Howell was named acting chancellor last week by University of North Carolina president William Friday. The 10 a.m. session yesterday was his first meeting with the board.

He told board, "The university is in a very harmonious mood," and said the students, faculty and administration will be "going about business as usual," until a new permanent chancellor is selected.

"Issues will arise," Howell pointed out, and "professors will profess things." (Both students and professors "like to argue with the administration," he pointed out.) "But after all of the arguments, in the end, we are in agreement over the basic issues and are going to move ahead with a common purpose.

"My approach," Howell emphasized, "will be to work with the personnel and organizations. I don't intend to be inactive."

The interim chancellor said too, that he "hopes to devote a good deal of time," to "relations of the university to the external community. The university always needs to do that and it's the job of the university administration to do that."

Howell then suggested, and the board approved, separating the school's long range plan now under study and the faculty self-study for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools accreditation. "If we move forward this way, we can finish the self-study, then think later about the plan," Howell said, suggesting that the new chancellor should have some input into the long range plan.

The plan and the Southern Association self-study have been moving together because the two both require faculty self-study documents. However, the plan involves input from the administration and the Board of Trustees not required by the Southern Association.

In addition to approving Howell's suggestion, trustees approved the establishment of an ad hoc committee to study

Polish Primate Claims More Arrests Under Martial Law

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Roman Catholic primate has accused the country's martial law rulers of arresting still more people and increasing the suffering of the Polish people.

Today, both army and Communist Party officials called for a purge of those who had given in to "the enemies of socialism," a codeword for the radical elements within the independent trade union Solidarity. The party said 2,400 people were stripped of membership during the first three weeks of martial law rule.

Archbishop Jozef Glomp issued a call for dialogue between Solidarity and the government.

"Brothers of the broken nation," Glomp cried in Sunday's sermon, "get together, for we have to defend ourselves by ourselves, because no one is going to help us!

"But to do this, we need a climate of cooperation, and for that we need dialogue," Glomp said in his third public attack on the policies of Poland's rulers. He emphasized the church's willingness to act as a moderator in order to achieve peace in Poland's domestic crisis.

But Glomp also said there "are still more and more people being arrested, and so many internees are waiting to be released. The circle of broken people or those being broken is spreading."

Instead of demanding people sign loyalty oaths, the government should be trying to win people to its side, Glomp said.

The Polish army newspaper today demanded that a "strong, united and ideologically hardened party" emerge from martial law.

Tadeusz Nowicki, deputy chairman of the party's watchdog Control Commission, told the Polish news agency PAP that 1,100 people were expelled from the party during the first three weeks of martial law and another 1,300 were striken from party rolls.

Those striken from the rolls can reapply for party membership, but those who are permanently banned from the party.

Western observers believe the purge will be directed against many of the estimated one million party members who joined Solidar-

Back To School After Storms

Pitt school children bundled up and went back to school today despite the early-morning arctic temperatures and patches of ice that lingered on some streets and roads.

Greenville city schools resumed their normal schedule today after snow on Thursday forced them to close their doors Friday. Pitt County schools opened for the first time since last Tuesday, but classes were delayed one hour because of still-slick roads.

Greenville Utilities' water plant reported a low of 15 degrees Fahrenheit yesterday, and a high of 36 degrees F. At 8 a.m. today, the temperatures still hovered at 15 degrees. No precipitation was recorded during the weekend.

Highs today were expected to be in the 30s and low 40s, according to the National Weather Service.

Lows tonight should range from the upper 20s to mid-30s.

The warming trend is expected to continue throughout the week, with mild air and temperature readings reaching the 50s Tuesday and the 60s by the middle of the week. Skies are expected to be clear to partly cloudy.

Most Of Air Crash Dead Found Killed By Impact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Divers have recovered the bodies of more than half the people on the Air Florida jetliner that crashed into the ice-filled Potomac River and autopsies show all but one of them died from the impact of the crash rather than drowning.

Autopsies on the 46 bodies raised speculation that the drowning victim, Arland D. Williams of Atlanta, could be the man who sacrificed himself during rescue efforts by helping five other victims onto a line dropped by a hovering helicopter.

That speculation was shared by some federal and local investigators, said a federal source who asked not to be identified.

Dr. Brian Blackbourne, chief deputy coroner for the District of Columbia, said Williams died from exposure and drowning.

Blackbourne told reporters the possibility that Williams was the unknown hero would be pursued, although there is no definitive evidence he was the one who sank into the frigid waters before the helicopter could return to get him.

His body was among the eight recovered Friday and it was reported at the time that all eight had been strapped in their seats. However, that report could not be confirmed Sunday night after the autopsy reports raised the possibility he could have been the middle-age, balding man described by the crew of the U.S. Park Police rescue helicopter.

Paramedic Gene Windsor, who said he was within 10 or 15 feet of the mystery man, said he had a heavy mustache and silver hair above his ears. Williams had a silver beard and mustache and silver hair over his ears.

Park Police officials say they will make every effort to make a positive identification of the man, but have instructed Windsor and the helicopter pilot not to cooperate directly with the news media in attempting to identify him by viewing file photographs shown them by news organizations.

There was no indication whether the five survivors who were in the water beside the man have been asked for their recollection of him.

High Court Declines To Revive Birmingham System Of Quotas

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today once again steered clear of a legal controversy sparked by a city's use of racial quotas in awarding government contracts.

The justices, by an 8-1 vote, refused to revive a Birmingham, Ala., ordinance that required all construction contractors on city projects to give 10 percent of all subcontracted jobs to minority-owned firms.

The Alabama Supreme Court struck down the 1977 ordinance last Aug. 21, stating that it fostered unlawful racial discrimination against whites.

Only Justice William J. Brennan Jr. voted to review the state court's ruling.

In a key 1980 decision, the nation's highest court ruled in a case called Fullilove vs. Klutznick that Congress acted within its constitutional authority when in 1977 it set aside for minority businesses 10 percent of a $4 billion public works program.

The court rejected arguments that in passing the affirmative action law Congress had fostered impermissible "reverse discrimination."

The 1980 decision left unanswered, however, whether states and local communities also could impose such racial quotas in awarding public contracts.

The court was expected to offer some clarification last year when they studied a hiring and promotional plan aimed at increasing the number of women, blacks and Mexican-Americans working in California prisons. It later backed out of deciding the case on its legal merits.

The justices recently also let stand, without comment, two apparently conflicting lower court decisions.

One barred San Francisco school officials from setting aside at least 25 percent of all new construction contracts for minority-owned businesses. The other allowed Hartford, Conn., to require that 15 percent of all workers hired on city-financed construction projects be minority members or women.

The Birmingham ordinance, according to the city's Supreme Court appeal, was an attempt to end years of "unlawful racial exclusion."

"Out of a long, overt, oppressive and notorious history ... of unlawful racial exclusion and discrimination, the city council ... began ... to rectify one legacy of that history — the continuing absence of minority business participation in valuable monetary contracts let by the city," the appeal said.

The 10 percent set-aside was challenged by the Alabama branch of the Associated General Contractors of America, and a state trial judge ruled that the quota was unlawful.

The state Supreme Court, by a 5-3 vote, upheld the trial judge's ruling — its majority stating that the ordinance violated federal anti-discrimination law and the Constitution's equal-protection guarantee.

"The Birmingham City Council is not a competent body to identify and address past constitutional or statutory violations," the state court said.

"Even if the council were a competent body to identify (such) violations, it has not compiled the necessary record to demonstrate the need for the affirmative action program (and) the remedy imposed is not carefully tailored to rectify the continuing effects of past illegal discrimination," the state court ruled.

Birmingham City Attorney James Baker told the justices that leaving intact the lower court's ruling "would be to substantially eviscerate any state and municipal efforts in Alabama and elsewhere to ameliorate the effects of past racial discrimination."

P&Z Agenda

A nine item agenda is scheduled for consideration by the Greenville Planning & Zoning Commission at Tuesday's 7:30 p.m. meeting at city hall.

Business includes: preliminary plat approval of Lazy "L" Mobile Home Park, located some 750 feet off NC 33, adjacent to Service Road 1447; preliminary plat approval of Clara H. Bland Mobile Home Park, located adjacent to Floral Park Subdivision, Pitt County American Legion property, and Service Road 1523;

Request by the Public Works Department to change the name of 16th Street to Howell Street and scheduling of a public hearing on the matter for Feb. 16; discussion of the new zoning classifications for the city, including the Tar River Neighborhood proposal;

Discussion of the Land Use Intensity System for multi-family development here; discussion of proposed off-street parking and loading requirements; request by the Subdivision Review Committee to have the planning director sign all final subdivision maps in lieu of the city engineer; annual report highlights; and a request by James H. Hudson to rezone .6 acres at the corner of Luci Drive and Eastbrook Drive from Shopping Center to Office and Institutional.

Land Purchased

WINTERVILLE — The town purchased one-half acre of land last week to expand the facilities of the North Winterville Cemetery, said town clerk Elwood Nobles.

The purchase adjoins the part of the cemetery now in use, and is located on county road 1708 south of the Greenville Utilities substation.

Plots must be purchased through the town, said Nobles, before the cemetery is used, and the town will be responsible for the upkeep of the cemetery. "Prices are presently being re-evaluated and will be determined later," he noted. "Interested persons should contact me at the town hall."

A public hearing will be held Feb. 8 at the town hall to discuss amendments to the code of ordinances of the Winterville Fire Department. For further information, contact the town clerk.

Feb. 15 is the deadline for displaying town tags on vehicles, Nobles reminded residents. "The cost is $1 and the deadline is not staggered like the state tags," he added. "All residents are required to display these Winterville town tags on their vehicles by Feb. 15."

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
Agri. Ext. Agent

The safe use of agricultural chemicals is an important part of farming today. People who use agricultural chemicals are classified and licensed in several categories. Legislation has been passed that requires some pesticide license holders to be recertified by June 30, 1986.

In order to become recertified, people who now hold commercial pest applicator, public operator and consultant licenses must obtain 10 hours of credit in five years. People who now have dealer pesticide licenses must obtain five hours of credit in five years. Aerial applicators or crop dusters must obtain four hours of recertification credits every two years.

There are two ways to become recertified. One route is to take a written test, just as a new license would take. The other method is to accumulate the necessary hours by attending approved recertification classes as specified by the particular specialty license.

At this point in time, private applicators do not have to be recertified. The private applicator license enables its holder to apply restricted use pesticides on his or her own farm and purchase these chemicals from licensed dealers. In the future, however, it may be necessary to recertify private applicators as well.

There should be no difficulties in obtaining the necessary recertification credits by simply attending approved meetings. It is important to obtain credits toward recertification in two or more years of the five-year recertification period, not all in one year.

For further information, contact the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth St., 752-2934.

Migrant Abuse Cases Remain State Problem

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Although authorities have prosecuted a number of migrant labor camp bosses on charges of involuntary servitude and other crimes of late, migrant abuse remains a serious problem, an official says.

"There are probably thousands of migrant workers held against their will each year," said Steven Edelstein, an attorney who until recently worked as project director for Farmworkers Legal Services in Newton Grove.

"If migrants try to leave a camp, crew leaders will say, 'If you leave, you're going to be hurt.' Or someone might tell them that another person tried to leave and 'They beat the heck out of him.'"

"If you had this type of crime occurring in a white, middle-class neighborhood, the government would call out the National Guard."

Three men whom authorities believe to be the first migrant labor bosses charged with slavery resulting in death were scheduled to go on trial today in federal court in Raleigh.

Dennis J. Warren, 19, and Richard Wayne Warren, 22, brothers from Orlando, Fla., and John Lester Harris, 39, of Bullock, Ala., have pleaded innocent to the charges. Authorities still are searching for Halsey Norwood, also named in the indictments.

The four men are charged in a six-count indictment focusing on their work as migrant crew bosses at Rainbow Farms in Nash County. The charges date back to Sept. 25, when FBI agents say they "liberated" 13 people held against their will at the farm.

The indictment charges the four with conspiring "to injure, oppress, threaten and intimidate citizens of the United States," resulting in the death of one person.

Dennis Warren and Harris

also are charged in three other counts with holding workers in involuntary servitude by preventing them from leaving the camp. All four face involuntary servitude charges in a fourth case.

In addition, the indictment charges Harris and Norwood with kidnapping and transporting a worker, Joseph Simes, from Raleigh to Nash County.

The indictment charges that Robert Anderson was required to dig sweet potatoes on Sept. 13, although he was ill and spitting up blood. The indictment also charges that Dennis Warren ordered Anderson, who had stopped working and was vomiting, to continue working. Anderson then died.

Designer Says Roof Of Metrodome Met Test

By THOMAS C. COTHRAN
Associated Press Writer
MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — When the lid of the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome fell to a deflated position after a heavy snowfall on Nov. 19, it was just doing what it was supposed to do, its designer says.

"It's designed to go from one position to the other," said David Geiger, an architect with Geiger Berger Associates of New York City.

The dome, made of teflon-coated fiberglass fabric panels held together by steel cables, sagged beneath the snow when its snow melting system failed to provide enough heat.

Geiger's company specializes in making inflatable domes that are held up by hot air blown in through huge fans. Only two fans are needed at a time to keep the dome up in normal conditions, but more are needed for ventilation at other times.

He and Don Poss, director of the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission, said architects and others called after the deflation to ask if anyone was killed.

Geiger said he objected to reporters' use of the word "collapse" to describe the accident.

Poss said he believed the arguments over semantics were not relevant. "The blasted thing can deflate, collapse or call it what you want to, and 60,000 people can be sitting there watching and not be harmed," he said. "It's an ultimately safe structure."

He said the cost of repairing the damages will be well over $100,000, but he declined to say how much. A replacement for the torn panel had to be cut and flown from

New York to Minneapolis, and crews worked overtime to install it, Poss said.

Electrical cables for lights under the dome were torn, some seats were damaged and the dome's liner fabric also was damaged, he said.

The roof sags inward in the deflated position, resting on the cables about 25 feet to 100 feet above the stadium seats. From the air, the stadium resembles a giant dog bowl.

The dome's cloth panels are held in place by cables, which are anchored to the top of the stadium by a huge ring.

"If the panels or the ring were in danger, then you would have a collapse,"

Geiger said. "But the panels are designed to tear if the cables or the ring gets overloaded."

On the night of Nov. 19, the snow began to collect on certain parts of the dome, making it sag in the middle, Geiger said. "The snow slid all over the roof and some panels tore."

"The roof was trying to function in an inflated way, but it didn't have the snow melt system," so, when the panel tore, the roof deflated, he added.

"Once it's deflated, it's in a fixed position where its performance is predictable," Geiger said. "It's not supposed to be in those in-between positions," such as sagging under a heavy snow.

"When the word 'collapse' is used, I think it implies in the public mind a disaster," he said.

"This is a new technology and we have a responsibility to educate the public that (under) a deflated roof like this one is not an unsafe place to be."

Boys Club Will Be Closed Down

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — The Boys' Club of Santa Monica has defied the city by refusing to admit girls to its Ocean Park branch, and will close down the facility rather than fight the issue in court, a club attorney says.

The Ocean Park clubhouse and athletic fields are located in the city's Los Amigos Park, and Mayor Ruth Yannatta Goldway said the city cannot allow its property to be used by an organization that discriminates.

The city council, in urging the club to change its policy, said the city would pay for modifications to club facilities if necessary.

But after receiving the offer in a letter from the city attorney's office, the club board of directors voted to stick with tradition and not admit girls. The council is expected to review the matter Tuesday. City Attorney Robert Meyers said the council authorized him to file suit against the Boys' Club over the matter, but that he would not do so before the council discusses the matter further.

Club directors decided last week not to spend club money to defend their decision in court if the city does sue, club attorney David Cathcart said Friday.

However, he said, the directors would sell the Ocean Park facilities to the city or any other organization that wants to run a co-ed program.

"The Club wants to do what it does best, and that is serving boys and their families," Cathcart said, adding that the board was mainly concerned that admitting girls would mean extra expenses.

The Ocean Park branch is the subject of a pending 1978 discrimination suit by Dora Ashford, mother of a girl who was denied membership.

Break-In Investigated

Greenville Police are continuing to investigate a Friday morning break-in at Steinbeck's Men's Shop at Pitt Plaza that resulted in the theft of over $3,000 in clothing from the business.

Police Chief Glenn Cannon said an assortment of men's clothing items, including suits, sport coats, slacks and shirts, was stolen in the incident. Total value of the missing clothing was set at $3,424.95, he said.

According to Cannon, entrance to the business was gained after a display window on the mall side was smashed, apparently with the use of a grocery shopping cart. Cannon said $111.95 in damages to a wallet and clothing items from the broken display glass as well as $186.20 in damages to the facility resulted.

The chief said the break-in was reported by an employee of another Pitt Plaza business. He said the time of the incident was placed at around 6:50 a.m.

Two new members, Keith Knox and Robert George were initiated into the organization, according to Elwood Nobles, club reporter.

Tickets for the Walter Dail appreciation dinner, scheduled for Jan. 30 at 6:30 p.m., were distributed to each member.

Leck Keeter gave a report on the fund raising project for D.H. Conley High School. For more information contact any Ruritan.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Judging from the number of shops in New York City selling nothing but cookies, there's a cookie craze going on in this land. In the 1896 first edition of Fannie Farmer's cookbook there were only about a dozen recipes for them. But gradually their number grew. When, in 1931, Irma Rombauer wrote her first edition of "The Joy of Cooking," she included dozens of cookie recipes.

By now, on my own shelves, there are at least twenty-four cookbooks devoted to nothing but these specialties. And interestingly enough, each book includes recipes for cookies made with coconut.

Fannie Farmer had her rolled Coconut Creams. Mrs. Rombauer her Coconut Drop Cakes. What I have to offer is a brand new recipe for Coconut Squares. Between this bar cookie's layer of a pastry-like base and a coconut meringue you spread raspberry preserves or ginger marmalade. My preference is for the latter, but some of my tasters prefer the preserves. Take your choice. If you bake these squares for Thanksgiving, coconut fanciers are bound to give thanks for them.

COCONUT SQUARES

1 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup butter
3 tablespoons (about) cold water
2 large eggs
1/2 cup sugar
7-ounce package or can flaked coconut
1-3rd cup raspberry preserves or ginger marmalade
In a medium bowl with a pastry blender cut the butter into the flour until the butter is the size of large peas. Sprinkle with a small amount of the water at a time, mixing lightly until all particles are moistened and cling together when pressed into a ball. Press into an ungreased 9 by 9 by 1 1/4-inch pan. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until lightly browned — 20 minutes. Turn oven control to 375 degrees.

Meanwhile beat the eggs until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in the sugar and continue beating until thick and ivory color. Fold in coconut.

Spread preserves over the baked pastry, leaving a 1/4-inch space around the edges. Carefully spread coconut mixture over preserves. Bake in the 375-degree oven until golden — 25 minutes. Cool on a wire rack and cut into squares.

Dear Abby

TV Turns Off Host's Hospitality

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: What can be done about TV-addicted husbands? My sister and her family made a 600-mile trip to be with us for Thanksgiving. Her husband doesn't care much for sports, and I think it was extremely rude of my husband to spend Thursday through Sunday glued to the TV while his brother-in-law looked for something to read. We teach our children to put the wishes of their guests before their own, but what's to be done about a husband who violates that basic rule of good manners? It's embarrassing for me and sets a poor example for our children.

TV reigns as a "god" in many homes. One friend told me, "I knew my husband would spend the whole day in front of the TV, so I served Thanksgiving dinner at halftime!"

Another friend said she invited two lonely strangers for Thanksgiving, and her husband kept the football game on during the meal and peered around the guests so as not to miss a play.

Sure, we tell our husbands how we feel, but they don't believe in compromising.

I know it's nothing to divorce a man over, but it sure does spoil the holidays. Any suggestions?

FED UP WITH FOOTBALL

DEAR FED UP: You have several choices: You can yell, scream, threaten, berate and criticize your TV-addicted husband in an effort to get him to sacrifice watching his beloved game in favor of being a good host. Or you can make a trade-off and agree to do something for him if he does something for you.

You can also refrain from inviting guests for Thanksgiving if you don't want to entertain them alone. Do whatever works best at your house.

DEAR ABBY: I feel wonderful this morning! This is the first Christmas that I actually felt that my gifts were really appreciated.

Do you know what I did? Instead of giving gifts to ungrateful relatives and fair-weather friends, I took the $300

I had set aside for Christmas gifts, went to a discount liquor store and bought 150 bottles of wine. I tied a red ribbon around each bottle, drove down to skid row and passed out my gifts to the bums.

Abby, you wouldn't believe the thanks I got! Every one who got a bottle shook my hand, wished me a merry Christmas, and asked God to bless me! You could tell it was straight from the heart.

Most people would condemn me for this, but, Abby, many organizations hand out food baskets, toys and gifts to the orphans and poor people at Christmastime, but nobody thinks about the homeless, down-and-out drifters on skid row. They are the forgotten men nobody cares about.

Now I know what the joy of giving means.

DON

DEAR DON: Far be it from me to judge anyone for his brand of generosity. But since your motive in giving this year was to be "thanked and blessed," you certainly found a way to get your money's worth.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I received a Christmas card with the following message: "Seasons Greetings from Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Smith and Richard."

Abby, Richard is their 33-year-old, unmarried son who lives at home. He is mentally competent and gainfully employed. My husband says that as an adult, Richard should send his own Christmas card instead of taking a free ride with Mom and Dad.

I say, as long as they all live in the same house, it's perfectly proper. What do you say?

FRIENDS

DEAR FRIENDS: Why analyze or judge? Accept "seasons greetings" from all three, and be glad somebody thought you were worth 20 cents.

Do you have questions about sex, love, drugs and the pain of growing up? Get Abby's new booklet: "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Teen Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

Funds Loss To Be Faced

Like so many government activities the Greenville Area Transit System will suffer from federal cutbacks in funding.

City Manager Ed Wyatt says, however, that federal and state funding will continue at present levels at least until Sept. 30.

GREAT receives assistance through the Urban Mass Transportation Administration and that is one of the areas targeted for cuts by the Reagan administration.

What will happen is anybody's guess, but city officials say state agencies indicate that scaled-down funding could be continued for several years. Grants for capital outlay may be only slightly affected.

A fair sized segment of the city's population depends on public transportation to get to work, shopping areas and elsewhere and there has been concern about the future of bus service here. Wyatt says there are no plans to discontinue bus service.

In any plan of economic and industrial development, public transportation has to be one of the areas of need. It joins availability of major highways, good water and sewer service, reasonable energy costs and general quality of life in providing the impetus for economic growth.

Obviously if federal funds are cut, GREAT will have to provide less service, but that doesn't have to mean the end of the public transportation venture.

Exercise Care In Icy Weather

Last week's ice and snow storms brought untold numbers of vehicular accidents to the area.

In Greenville alone 22 significant traffic accidents were reported in the city for Wednesday, Thursday there were an additional 13 accidents with significant damage.

There were countless traffic accidents on rural roads and highways. There was one tragedy when a car skidded and a woman was killed on the Stantonsburg Road. Beyond that the accidents resulted in large amounts of damage to many vehicles and much inconvenience to the drivers.

Sometimes it is necessary to go in such weather. The prudent thing, however, is to drive with extreme care, or stay off the streets and highways if possible.

THIS AFTERNOON

Tough Job Ahead

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH—Now comes the difficult part for Gov. Jim Hunt: actually accomplishing the state budget cuts which he has already pronounced as critical to keeping North Carolina's budget balanced during predicted "rough sledding" during the next few months.

At first glance it would seem simple for Gov. Hunt to say cut spending 5 percent, and all the bureaucrats to whip out their pencils and do so.

He is, after all, empowered by two key constitutional provisions to: 1. manage the budget, doing what is necessary to, 2. keep it in balance.

But in the real world of government and politics, money is the most serious matter of all, for it is the foundation of all power.

Take away money, and you take away power. You also cause broken promises, hard feelings, and create enemies, and that makes for bad times down the road when the person who took away the money tries to get people to work for him and support him in some future election.

Promises
There are also commitments made which cannot be broken: either because they are important, right, and just, or because certain people involved have enough power to see to it that the money is not lost.

The governor did not suggest, for example, that horse show arenas be cut. Nor did he hint that general assemblymen might hold up on furnishing and occupying that multi-million dollar new building. The $24 million for the Microelectronics Center — Hunt's own pet project — remains intact.

Neither did the governor follow through on the notion that a temporary delay be placed on implementing a new ninth salary step for state employees. Actually by his power as director of the budget, and by his constitutional command to balance the budget at all costs, Gov. Hunt could have done those and many other things.

In reality, though, holding back a promised pay raise created serious problems not only for Hunt, but for legislators, and for members of the Council of State, some of whom are even now mapping future political plans.

BILL NOBLITT

The governor could have ordered the salary change delay. He chose not to do that when overwhelming opposition was apparent.

Beyond these problems, the governor had to recognize that almost two billion dollars of the state budget — the single biggest chunk — goes for public schools. Local schools are virtually untouched by the cutback order.

The entire state budget is about half education. Trying to trim university or community college spending creates similar problems.

So when Gov. Hunt announced a 5 percent cut in state spending, he is hoping for the best. "I am always hopeful," he commented after his public statement on spending. He is hopeful that the recession will end soon; that state income will get back on track; that his action will not generate insurmountable political problems; and that there will be enough "touchable" state spending left to offset the "untouchable."

Hopeful
He is also hopeful that leaving empty jobs unfilled, curtailing travel, trimming the purchase of supplies and equipment, and generally encouraging thrift in state government will produce the required savings.

To cut 5 percent from a six billion dollar budget requires a whopping $300 million reduction. When about half the budget can't be cut, the reductions must be spread

Other Editors Say Not Just One

(Goldsboro News-Argus)

In recent days the N.C. Milk Commission confirmed that it was investigating reports that IGA stores were selling milk at below prices set by the commission.

The report triggered suggestions in some quarters that the commission represents the dairy industry at the expense of the consumer, and that it should be abandoned.

Let the marketplace determine the price, insisted The Gastonia Gazette editorially. The Wilson Daily Times also urged doing away with the Milk Commission.

Why stop with the Milk Commission?
It would be interesting to see how many commissions, advisory commissions and other such bodies now exist in this state — and at what cost to the taxpayer.

All of his fine qualities notwithstanding, Governor Jim Hunt has named advisory commissions or their counterparts to be concerned about everything from falling hair to flat feet.

Commissions and advisory commissions have to meet to justify their existence. This means they must have directors or executive secretaries who in turn have to have working secretaries. Members are paid for mileage, for meals, and in some cases per diem allowances.

And in all too many cases their only real reason for existence is to permit a governor to reward those who have supported him and to enhance his political organization.

This is not to criticize our present governor. He didn't invent the system. But no one has exercised it so well.

If we're going to look at eliminating commissions and advisory commissions, let's look at a lot of them. As starters, the governor could review the improvements in state government that can be attributed directly to some of those bodies. Then the decision could be made as to whether the benefits justified the costs.

People sometimes disregard some moral convention on the ground that it is not necessary for their own moral welfare. But it may be indispensable for the integrity of others.

We may well liken the human race to a huge pyramid with a few choice souls at the top. The pyramid broadens as it goes down, and the great mass of humanity is to be found on the lower layers.

Tipper Is Never Sure

Andy Rooney started it on CBS's "60 Minutes" by discussing one of Americans' greatest phobias, "Fear of Tipping." Rooney came out against tipping, but he admitted he didn't have the nerve to lead an anti-tipping movement.

Coleman McCarthy, the columnist for The Washington Post, then wrote that Rooney didn't have to lead the anti-tipping movement in the U.S. because it already had leaders, including McCarthy, who not only "stiffs" waiters and cab drivers, but golf caddies as well.

I am bappy to join in the discussion because in an earlier life I worked as a bellboy. While Rooney and McCarthy can cry about the indignities heaped on the tippers, I can talk about the joys of being a "tippee."

First of all, for every defiant McCarthy willing to ignore the practice of tipping, there are 10 Rooneys quaking in their boots because no matter what they've given as a gratuity, they're never sure if it was enough.

In my day, those of us who always had our hands out, could spot a deadbeat like McCarthy before he even got out of a taxi. He was easy to identify because you could hear the cab driver cursing him as he drove away. Another clue was that a McCarthy-type always tried to carry his own bag into the lobby, and after checking in, attempted to lug it by himself up to the room.

In the well-run bellhop corps to which I belonged each man took his turn checking people in or out. The last man on the list was stuck with emptying the ashtrays in the lobby and attending to the needs of a McCarthy. You did these menial tasks because sooner or later you knew you would get an Andy Rooney.

When an Andy Rooney appeared at our resort hotel, and I was the lucky bellhop, I would rush out and say, "Good day, sir." Intimidated, he would immediately hand me a quarter. I would carry his bags and escort him smartly to the desk. After registering, the desk clerk would ring a chime, give me a key and I would say, "Please follow me, and don't worry, I have change for a 10 dollar bill."

An old bell captain, from whom I had learned the profession, told me, "When checking in a couple, there are two kinds you will be dealing with. The first will be married. Don't waste too much time on them, because the size of the tip has already been established in the husband's mind. But every once in a while you will luck out and get an unmarried couple. At this moment, money is no object for them to get into the room and to get you out. Stall for time, checking the windows, the closets and the water in the bathroom. The longer you remain, the more nervous the man will become and finally in desperation, he'll shove a fistful of money in your hand if you just agree to leave."

"How will I know if the couple is married or not?"
"A married man usually flops on the bed first, and his wife always checks the closets to see if there are enough hangers."

"And an unmarried couple?"
"The unmarried woman usually starts combing her hair in front of the mirror, and the unmarried man always makes sure the bolt on the door is working."

My tutor gave me one other piece of advice, "If the couple is unmarried, wait 20 minutes, and then bring them a bucket of ice. You'll earn the fastest five bucks

Complicated For Europe

By MAUREEN JOHNSON and CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writers

Life, as the West Europeans see it, is more complicated than a great, stark struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Since President Reagan ordered economic sanctions against the Soviets Dec. 29, blaming them for the military crackdown in Poland, his 14 NATO allies have hung back, offering little concrete support.

At a NATO foreign ministers' meeting last Monday, the West Europeans joined in the rhetoric of condemnation but again hesitated over taking any immediate action themselves against Moscow.

The differing reactions to the Polish crisis provide the latest glimpse of a gap that became dramatically apparent two years ago when the U.S. allies balked at the tough anti-Soviet sanctions imposed by then-President Jimmy Carter because of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

Political leaders, academic specialists and other commentators believe this gap represents not just transitory disagreements, but fundamentally differing views of the world.

Across the trans-Atlantic divide — which is probably greater now than at any time since the 15-nation Western alliance was founded in 1949 — some Americans see a Western Europe too old, weak or greedy for anything but compromise.

To equally critical eyes in many West European capitals, Washington looks like the sheriff buckling on his gunbelt to drive the villains out of town — a simplistic, aggressive and, in practical terms, futile response to a complex situation.

The old nations of Europe, living next door to the East bloc, just do not see the Soviet Union the same way the Americans do.

"Americans see the hand of Russia in almost every trouble spot," the Times of London commented as U.S. politicians gumbled about the European response to Poland.

Americans want an alliance that confronts Soviet influence wherever it appears, the Times said, while Europe instead looks to the superpowers to limit their rivalry.

Says Denis Healey, former British defense secretary and now deputy leader of the opposition Labor Party:

"The Europeans, with 2,000 years of diplomatic experience gained in their struggles with one another, and two centuries of involvement with the Third World as colonial powers, understand that local and regional factors are often far more important than the East-West conflict."

The difference in point of view extends beyond Afghanistan and Poland.

In the Middle East, the Europeans tilt more toward the Palestine Liberation Organization than Washington does. In Central America, the Europeans question U.S. efforts to help crush the insurgency in El Salvador and to squeeze the revolutionary government in Nicaragua. On defense matters, other NATO governments have resented American pressure to increase military spending, and a peace movement has sprung up to block new U.S. missiles in Western Europe.

"It's a situation ripe for increasing mutual irritation," said Professor David P. Calleo, director of European studies at Johns Hopkins University's School of Advanced International Studies in Washington.

"We Americans take the view detente is an indivisible thing — if we can't have detente in the Middle East or somewhere else, then we can't have detente in Europe either," he said in an interview. But the West Europeans, with the Soviet-bloc nations as neighbors, "have the attitude that detente in Europe should be distinct, that Europe should be kind of a safe zone."

Another American student of U.S.-European relations, Professor Elliot Zupnick of Columbia University, notes that the West Germans have a special concern — ultimate reunification with Communist East Germany, unlikely to happen without Soviet acquiescence.

"A very large part of the West German population feels that the Soviet bloc is something they can live with," said Zupnick, head of Columbia's Institute on Western Europe.

Thus far West Germany's Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has been firm in resisting U.S. pressures for anti-Soviet sanctions over the Polish situation.

Professor Ralf Dahrendorf, German-born director of the London School of Economics and Political Science, says he detects an "inward-looking tendency ... on the American side."

"This makes it less likely that U.S. politicians fully understand the problems of their allies or what happens elsewhere."

"On the other hand, in Europe, certainly for West Germany, Poland is very near and closely related to Germany's picture of its own future."

The philosophical and historical differences in U.S. and West European perspectives are real. But as in many family quarrels, there are other, more commonplace arguments.

Some Europeans argue sanctions do not work anyway. And some question the wisdom of the U.S. tactics — if you order sanctions now, what is left to do if and when Soviet tanks actually roll into Poland?

"To impose sanctions now would weaken the deterrent — the Russians might then intervene on grounds they might as

Homeowners Insurance Search

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer
Consumers shopping for homeowners' insurance are finding new possibilities for protection.

The new policies are cheaper than conventional ones, but they also are riskier since coverage is much more limited.

Protection under a traditional homeowners policy is based on replacement cost — the amount you would have to pay to rebuild your existing house if it were destroyed.

Most insurance claims involve partial damage rather than total destruction. But unless you insure your house for at least 80 percent of its replacement value, you generally will not be reimbursed for the full amount of any partial damage.

An alternative type of policy, however, ties coverage to market value — the worth of your home if you sold it.

Suppose you bought your house for $40,000. It has a market value of $60,000, but it would cost $90,000 to rebuild. Assume a storm damages your roof and you need repairs costing $3,000.

With a conventional policy, you would not be able to collect the full $3,000 unless you had insured your house for at least $72,000 — 80 percent of the replacement cost. With a market-value policy, however, you could insure your house for $60,000 — the market value only — and still get full coverage for the damaged roof. (Normal deductibles apply with either type of policy; if you have a $250 deductible, for example, you would be reimbursed for the amount of the damage minus $250.)

The Insurance Information Institute, a trade group, said the market-value policy was developed primarily for owners of older homes.

The cost of replacing these homes is frequently much higher than the market value. The houses may, for example, include workmanship and materials which are unavailable today or would be too expensive to duplicate. Older homes also may be located in depressed areas where market values have not kept up with rising costs.

The price of insuring one of these older homes for 80 percent of its replacement value may be more than the owner can afford. In some cases, it may not be possible to buy protection at any price; insurance companies are reluctant to cover homes where there is a substantial difference between market value and replacement cost, because the difference increases the potential for arson.

Market-value policies generally offer less coverage against theft than regular policies. They also stipulate that damaged property must be repaired with commonly used, readily available materials rather than the original products. Plaster walls, for example, could be replaced by less-expensive drywall construction. If your home is destroyed, you would not be able to replace it.

Prices for market-value insurance vary; in many cases, the cost per $1,000 of coverage is higher than with a replacement-cost policy because the risk of damage is higher. As a rule, however, the total premium for a market-value policy will be lower than for a replacement-cost policy.

Anne Collis of the insurance institute said, for example, that insuring a typical frame house for $72,000 with a replacement-cost policy would cost an average of $368 a year. (The exact price depends on the insurer and the area.) A $60,000 market-value policy for the same house would cost $293 a year, Ms. Collis said.

Another alternative to traditional insurance is an optional endorsement for the replacement-cost policy. With an optional endorsement, you can insure your home for as little as 50 percent of its replacement value and still receive a full reimbursement for partial damages, up to the limit of the policy.

Like the market-value policy, the optional endorsement lowers costs. Ms. Collis said. She said reducing the amount of coverage from 80 percent of replacement cost to 50 percent could cut a typical premium by 15 percent.

well be hung for a sheep as a lamb," says Britain's Healey. Asked a Belgian official, who declined to be identified: "Why sanctions now? The Soviet Union has been behaving the way it does for more than 30 years."

European commentators are pointing out that U.S.-Soviet agreements at the end of World War II established Moscow's sway over Eastern Europe. In an undisguised jibe at the American president, the respected West German magazine Der Spiegel commented:

"People who assert the Russians have intervened in Poland seem to have bypassed the past 40 years, be it in the saddle, or the TV studio or the poet's corner. Poland ... has been occupied by the Red Army since 1945."

Probably the most down-to-earth argument involves dollars and cents. The easing of East-West tensions in the 1970s has proven lucrative for Western businesses, but much more so for Europeans than Americans.

Statistics from the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development show West European exports to the Soviet Union stood at $10.5 billion in 1980, seven times more than the value of U.S. sales to the Communist giant. The U.S. total was a 58 percent decline from 1979, reflecting Carter's grain embargo.

West Germany alone accounts for more than one-fifth of Western trade with Moscow.

"As far as Germany is concerned, economic relations with the East have become very, very important," said Zupnick.

Perhaps even more significantly than trade, West European banks and governments have a sizable investment in the East, in the form of at least $50 billion in loans and other credits outstanding to the Soviets, Poles and other Eastern governments.

U.S. Rep. Thomas Lantos (D-Calif.) this month told the West Europeans bluntly in Brussels, the Common Market headquarters: "We should take sanctions even if they hurt.... There are no cheap solutions." He was visiting with a 14-member House Foreign Relations Committee delegation.

Recession, and hotter economic competition between the United States and its partners, may be heating up the political friction as well. Europe to a great extent follows the huge American economic engine, and many West Europeans attribute the current slump to high U.S. interest rates and economic mismanagement in Washington.

But there is some European resentment of U.S. hints that money is the prime factor in their reluctance to declare economic war on the East. They note that trade with the Soviet bloc represents on average only about 4 percent of each West European nation's total.

Johns Hopkins' Calleo, like other commentators, believes the European attitude does transcend such immediate concerns as trade.

"The Europeans feel that the way to stabilize relations, to improve conditions of life and the basic political culture and system in the East is to try to engage not only the East Europeans but the Russians in some process of 'general civilization' — if we could put it in those terms," Calleo said.

around the other half. Some agencies will feel the knife keenly; others not at all.

Previous hiring freezes and other economies have already meant savings of some 2 percent for the budget. That leaves 3 percent to go.

Time will tell whether the state budget will emerge from all this in one piece; along with Gov. Hunt and the other politically ambitious state officials involved.

Fiber Evidence Due In Atlanta's Trial

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — The jury in the murder trial of Wayne B. Williams probably will get its first look this week at the microscopic fiber evidence prosecutors contend links Williams to the two young blacks he is accused of killing.

Williams, a 23-year-old black free-lance photographer and talent promoter, is charged with the murders of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21. His trial entered its fourth week today.

Cater and Payne were among 28 young black Atlantans who disappeared during a 22-month period and later were found slain. A special police task created to investigate the killings has made no arrests in the 26 other slayings.

State crime lab analyst Larry Peterson testified in pretrial hearings that he found "no significant microscopic difference" between fibers found on Cater's body and fibers taken from Williams' northwest Atlanta home during a search by authorities.

Although there has been no testimony in open court about evidence on Payne's body, prosecutors contended at a September hearing that fibers taken from Payne's body were similar to those found on Cater.

While Peterson is expected to be the prosecution's key witness in describing the fiber evidence, Williams' attorneys have hired their own expert to examine that evidence.

Charles V. Morton, a scientist who heads the criminalistics laboratory at the Institute of Forensic Science in Oakland, Calif., visited Atlanta in November to study the fiber evidence. He is expected to testify once the defense begins presenting its case.

The prosecution thus far has focused primarily on the predawn May 22 incident when Williams first came to the attention of authorities. He was stopped near the Jackson Parkway bridge after a police stakeout officer under the bridge heard a loud splash in the Chattahoochee River.

Prosecutors contend Williams dropped the bodies of Cater and Payne off that bridge. Cater's body was found floating in the river about a mile downstream from the bridge less than two days after Williams was stopped. Payne's body had been found in the same area of the river a month earlier.

The first testimony providing a direct link between Williams and one of the victims came last week from Margaret Carter, a prosecution witness who said she saw Cater and Williams together in a park nine days before Cater's body was pulled from the river.

Her testimony contradicted statements Williams made to the media at a news conference he called in June. The young black man denied then that he knew any of the 28 victims on the task force list.

The defense received another setback last week when prosecution witnesses testified that Cater was seen alive as late as the afternoon of May 21, just hours before prosecutors contend Cater's body was dumped in the river.

Defense lawyers told the jury in opening arguments that the decomposed state of Cater's body indicated it had been in the river much longer than the two days between when Williams was stopped near the bridge and the discovery of the body.

Williams' explanation for being in the area of the bridge May 22 also was challenged last week when prosecutors called a series of witnesses in an effort to prove that authorities could not confirm even the smallest detail of his alibi. Williams claimed he was looking for the address of a woman to audition for his talent promotion business but authorities said they could not find the woman's address.

ONE THING'S FOR SURE. WITH AN IRA FROM BB&T, YOU'LL AGE WELL.

Your age is going to increase with time, of course. There's no getting around that. But, with an IRA, so is your fortune.

You could retire a millionaire.

If you start your IRA (Individual Retirement Account) when you're in your early thirties and interest rates stay about the same as they are now, a $2,000-a-year investment will make you a millionaire by the time you retire! And even if you can't start that early, you can still build a whopping retirement fund.

You'll pay lower income taxes.

As long as you're a wage earner, whether or not you have a retirement plan where you work, you're eligible for BB&T's IRA. And you can open your account right now.

You're allowed to sock away up to $2,000 each year ($2,250 if you're married and only one of you is a wage earner, $4,000 if both of you are). And whatever your annual investment is, you can deduct every penny of it from that year's gross income. Which means real tax savings.

Your interest is tax-deferred.

The interest you earn, which is tied to money market rates, is compounded daily at BB&T, not monthly or annually as may be the case at some banks and savings and loans. This can add up to a difference of thousands and thousands of dollars by the time you reach retirement age.

And all your interest is tax-deferred. You pay no tax on it until you begin withdrawing funds at retirement, when you'll almost certainly be in a lower tax bracket and, therefore, required to pay less.

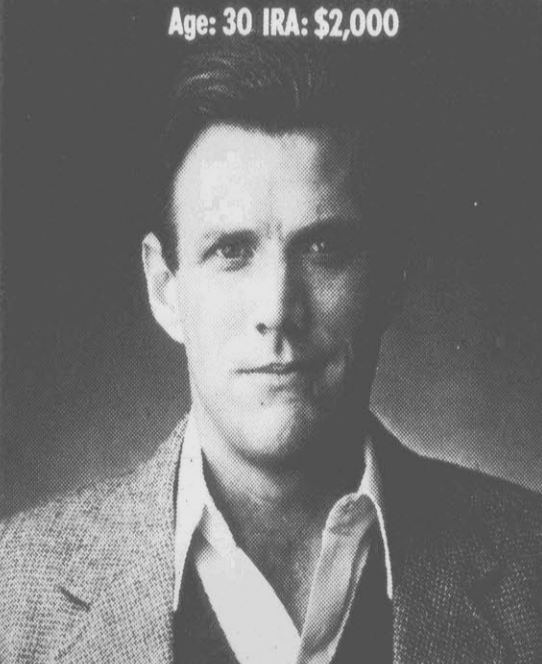

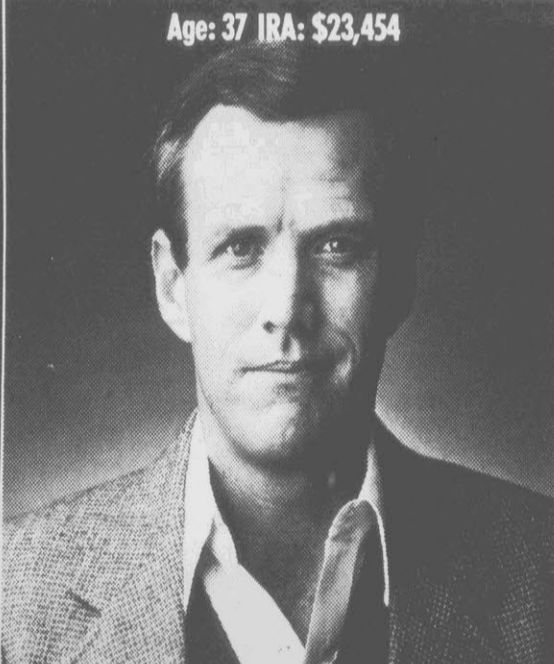

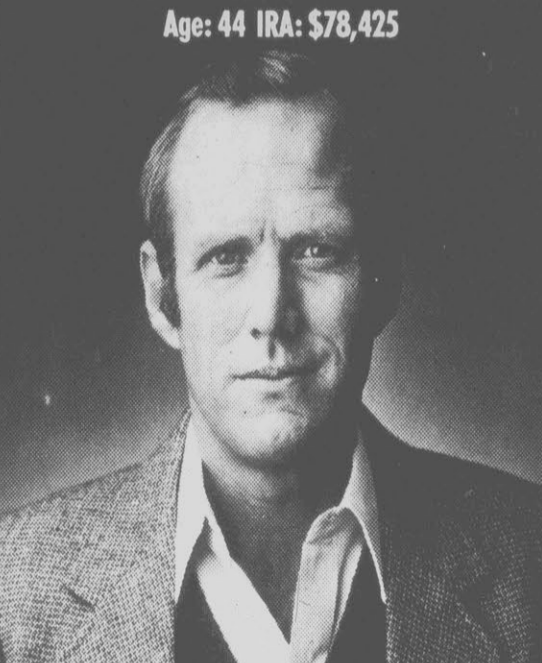

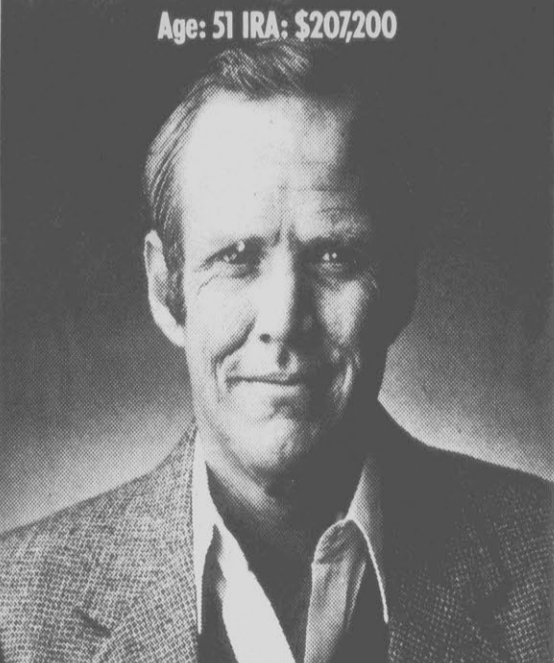

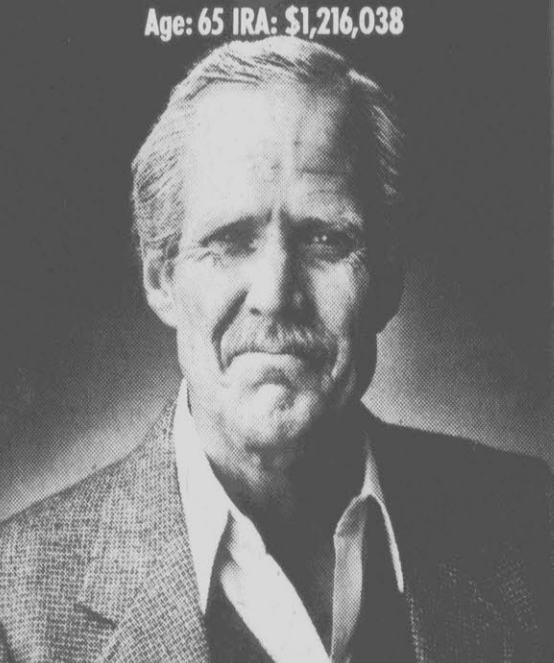

Your money piles up until you're 59½.

If you withdraw any money from your IRA before you reach the age of 59½, Federal regulations require you to pay a 10% IRS penalty on that money and perhaps a substantial interest penalty as well.

But once you hit 59½, nothing can stop you. You may take your money in a lump sum, receive it in monthly, quarterly or annual installments, or even wait until you're 70½ — but no later — to begin withdrawing funds.

Call or visit any BB&T office today and ask us about this extraordinary opportunity to save for your future. Then open your IRA and get started along the road to prosperity.

When you're ready to retire, you won't look old. You'll look like a million bucks.

WOULD-BE INVADERS — Twenty-four would-be Haitian liberators raise their handcuffed hands as they are brought into the Miami Beach Coast Guard station Sunday after they were rescued by the Coast Guard from their sinking boat off the coast of Haiti. The group reportedly was en route to attempt to invade Haiti and topple the Duvalier regime there. (AP Laserphoto)

Would-Be Invaders Of Haiti Held By U.S. As Witnesses

By JEFF MEYER
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — Two dozen would-be invaders of Haiti were being held as material witnesses today as their leader, Bernard Sansaricq, faced charges of violating U.S. neutrality laws for plotting the foiled invasion.

Sansaricq, who was greeted by more than 150 flag-waving Haitians Sunday when he and his men were returned to Miami by the Coast Guard, was to appear before a federal magistrate today.

"The 24 others will be held on a material witness warrant; they'll be interviewed tomorrow along with Sansaricq and information will be forwarded to the U.S. Attorney's Office," Jim Freeman, assistant special agent in charge of the Miami FBI office, said Sunday.

Six firearms and nearly 20 pipe bombs were confiscated from the would-be invaders' ship, the Caicos Cloud, when it was rescued Wednesday 50 miles off the north coast of Haiti, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Dan Waldschmidt.

A crowd of Haitians waited outside a Coast Guard building while the men were questioned, then cheered as they were transferred by bus to the Federal Correctional Institution near Florida City.

Chief Warrant Officer Robert Lafean said the vessel had three holes in its hull and its engine had failed when the Coast Guard arrived in response to a distress signal. It was towed through 10- to 15-foot waves for several hours before it sank.

Even after Sansaricq's group was picked up by the Coast Guard there were reports of fighting in Haiti, but none were confirmed.

Sansaricq had mustered 36 supporters last week in Britain's Turks and Caicos islands, at the end of the Bahama chain, in an attempt to overthrow Haitian President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier.

He stayed on the islands while two planes, each reportedly bearing four of his supporters, landed on Tortuga Island.

The Haitian military reported it routed the tiny invasion force on Tortuga. It also reported that those who were captured were questioned and at least three men later died of their wounds. The Haitian government never explained how or when the men were wounded.

Sansaricq, a Fort Lauderdale gas station owner, had openly spoken of his invasion plans for several months, according to leaders of south Florida's Haitian exile community, which is estimated at 5,000.

A Haitian native, Sansaricq was involved in two 1960 plots against Duvalier's father, the late President Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, who established a dictatorship in 1957.

'Chinook' Wind Hits Colorado

By NANCY TRAVER
Associated Press Writer
BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Thousands of residents spent the night in cold, dark homes as electrical crews labored to repair power poles snapped by 137 mph chinook winds that ripped away roofs, knocked out windows and yanked fences out of the ground. A dozen families left homeless spent the night Sunday in Boulder hotels. Thousands of others whose homes were damaged by the winds stayed with relatives and friends. Several homes in south

Boulder were torn in half by high winds, while scores of others in the foothills surrounding the college community lost roofs, walls, windows and doors. Don Morgan of Boulder said the wind stripped the roof from his home and dumped debris on top of his sleeping 14-year-old daughter.

"She was screaming and I had to run in and pull the ceiling off of her," said Morgan. "My son was sleeping on his stomach and said he thought the covers got awfully heavy all of a sudden."

Morgan said he searched most of the day Sunday, but was unable to find the roof of the house. "We'll try and get some kind of covering on it and move back in Monday," he said.

Three mobile homes were demolished, and all of the 80 homes in a north Boulder trailer park received major structural damage, sheriff's deputies said.

Dave Peterson of Hyperion Aviation at Boulder Municipal Airport said the winds caused about $4 million in damage, destroying 20 small planes and ripping doors off hangars. "Planes were pulled out of their tie-downs, took off and landed by themselves," said Peterson. "Several planes flew over me and it was lucky no one got killed."

At nearby Longmont Airport, four airplanes were destroyed, officials said.

The winds, which raised temperatures 20 degrees in half an hour, were caused when air from a high-pressure system spilled down the Front Range of the Rocky Mountains to fill a low-pressure trench over the Great Plains.

Streets were littered with foot-thick power poles that snapped like twigs in the gale.

Damage was so widespread that state disaster service officials declined to estimate the value of private property destroyed.

Boulder City Manager Robert Westdyke said he would ask the state for disaster aid to pay the salaries of police and firemen who worked 12-hour shifts after the winds hit.

Sue O'Brian, spokeswoman for Gov. Richard Lamm, said only $40,000 remained in the state's emergency fund.

"The thing that's miraculous is that nobody was seriously injured in those winds — they could have been killers," said police Lt. Dennis Harper.

"The winds are stronger than any we've heard of around here in the past 10 years," said forecaster Jim Schultz of the National Weather Service in Denver.

Winds reached a peak of 137 mph at 2:25 a.m. Sunday, and there were 20 gusts in excess of 120 mph in the early morning hours, said Coreen Redenz at the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration research center in Boulder.

Sixteen people who received minor injuries were treated at hospitals and sent home.

Bertha Bell, 77, suffered a broken hip when a gust of wind knocked her down as she stood in the doorway of her mobile home, officials said. She was in stable condition at Boulder Community Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Jan Joost.

Public Service Co. crews worked through the night to restore power at the homes of 5,000 customers in the south Boulder suburb of Table Mesa, said company spokeswoman Marily McAdams.

The company had 55 men working throughout the day

Sunday, including crews from Boulder and Brighton and private contractors hired to help with the huge task of repairing damaged equipment, she said. Thirty power poles were torn down by the winds, Ms. McAdams said

Major structural damage also was reported to buildings in Longmont, Loveland and Golden, officials said.

UNLUCKY LITTLE LION — Sabine, a mountain lion in Bridgeport (Conn.) Beardsley Park Zoo, greets a photographer while enduring her latest inconvenience — a water bucket which forms a collar for her. Day-Care Case Has Reached The Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Ten church-sponsored day care center representatives were called to Wake County Superior Court today to answer accusations that their centers are operating without a license from the state.

In a lawsuit, the state accuses the representatives of defying court orders not to operate without state approval.

John Lail, director of the state Department of Human Resources' Division of Child Day-Care Licensing, said the state law "requires fire and sanitation standards, square footage, nutrition, outdoor play and the number of beds in each center."

The laws affect any facility where more than five children are kept longer than four hours on a continuing basis, he said.

Fundamentalists have gone to court to fight that law at least five times in the past three years. Each time, the courts approved a preliminary injunction saying that all day-care centers must have a license to operate.

"Christian parents should have the right to have Christian people train their children," said the Rev. Gene Woodall, pastor of Bethany Baptist Church in Concord and principal of the church-operated Bethany Christian School, in a recent interview.

Ann Reed, special deputy attorney general, earlier said the law has nothing to do with what churches teach the children in the centers.

"The law and the state were only concerned with minimum requirements for health, fire and safety standards," she said. "They (church leaders) just don't want to be required to have a piece of paper from the state saying they have met these standards."

BOMBED OFFICES

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A bomb exploded outside the main offices of Lufthansa German Airlines here early Sunday, causing damage but no injuries, police said.

Uncle Sam's made a big change in First Federal's tax-deferring IRA: Starting January 1, 1982, everyone is eligible!

Even if you are already involved in a pension or retirement plan, beginning Jan. 1, you qualify for an IRA at First Federal.

And that means you can contribute up to $2000 ($2250 spousal IRA) to your IRA, and write it off your income taxes.

You don't have to pay one cent of taxes on either your funds deposited in an IRA, or on the high rate of interest it earns either, until you withdraw it.

And since your income (and your tax bracket) will probably be lower after you retire, the net amount you pay the government will almost certainly be lower. In other words, an IRA helps you keep more of the money you earn.

So, put yourself first. Open up an IRA at First Federal, and pay the government less and yourself more.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was lower today but it began paring morning losses after bond prices climbed amid more recession news.

Retail, drug and chemical stocks were among those falling while electronic and entertainment issues were mostly higher.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 5.90 early in the session, was off only 2.57 at 8:45.03 after two hours of trading.

Still, losers held a 2-1 edge over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index was off 0.23 to 67.18.

Big Board volume was 17.42 million shares at noon EDT compared with 20.50 million at that hour Friday.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 2.69 to 293.92.

Stock prices opened lower over fears of higher interest rates following a report late Friday of a surge in the nation's money supply. It's believed the rapid growth of money might force the Federal Reserve to tighten its credit reins further in its battle against inflation, putting upward pressure on rates.

But by mid-morning bond prices rose following news that factory use fell to 72.9 percent in December compared with 74.8 percent in November — the lowest rate since 1975 and more evidence that businesses are cutting production while trying to trim inventories during the recession.

Credit analysts say the recession should ease corporate credit demands, taking some of the pressure off higher rates.

That's bullish for bonds and when their prices rise, bond yields fall, making stock yields more competitive.

Among the NYSE's most-active stocks, MCA rose 2 to 40 1/2, Warner Communications gained 1 1/4 to 57 1/2 and Standard of Ohio slipped 1 1/4 to 36 1/2. A 284,500-share block of Sohio traded at 36.

Major Mobley Still Missing

AUGUSTA, GA. — A spokesman at the Public Affairs Office at Fort Gordon, Ga. this morning said there have been no new developments in the search for Major Ronald Mobley, a native of Williamston missing since Saturday, Jan. 9 following a boating mishap at Clark Hill Lake north of Augusta. The mishap claimed the lives of his two young sons, for whom funeral services were held in Williamston on Saturday.

The Fort Gordon spokesman said that military and wildlife resources personnel stationed at the lake were continuing efforts to locate Major Mobley as part of their regular daily work.

He said any active Democrats may run for delegate or alternate. Saleeby described the term "active Democrat" as "a person who has been registered to vote as a Democrat for at least 90 days."

The state Democratic Executive Committee will choose six delegates and four alternates to attend the conference along with Gov. Jim Hunt and members of the Democratic National Committee from North Carolina.

The two wildlife input meetings previously scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 14 in Snow Hill and Greenville and postponed due to inclement weather have been rescheduled for Friday, Jan. 22.

Woodrow Price, commissioner for the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, District 2, said the primary purpose of the two local meetings is to get input from sportsmen on area wildlife resources.

and review the Planning Commission report and make recommendations to the board.

The trustees also agreed that since the Planning Commission report would contain "innumerable recommendations and alternatives for consideration," that the report be received "for informational purposes only, and that such receipt not be deemed as an endorsement of any recommendation, suggestion, or alternative..."

In other business, the board elected trustees Clifton H. "Mo" Moore and Dr. Roy Flood as members of the university's Endowment Board, and named the building at 1001 East Fifth St. "The Howard House," in recognition of the family which made the acquisition of the property possible.

Trustee James Dixon reported that the board's buildings and grounds committee interviewed seven architectural firms and selected Little and Associates of Charlotte, to do the advanced planning for a new general classroom building.

During an executive session at the end of the regular meeting, the board heard a report from the chancellor selection committee on the progress being made to find a replacement for Thomas Brewer who is now on leave until his resignation takes effect June 30.

It was reported that there are some 148 applicants for the ECU post.

The board also approved granting Tom Willis, former director of the Regional Development Institute a leave of absence without pay for an indefinite period of time, from July 21, 1981.

Willis, director of ECU's RDI for 17 years, resigned July 21 because of what he called "persistent harassment" from then-ECU vice-chancellor of institutional advancement and planning Donald L. Lemish.

Lemish has since resigned his post. It was thought the board granted Willis the indefinite leave in hopes he could gain some fringe benefits for his long service.

Williamston Editor Dies

WILLIAMSTON — A memorial service for Mr. Francis Manning, long time editor and publisher of The Enterprise newspaper of Williamston, will be held at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 19 in the First Christian Church in Williamston, with Rev. Jim Bussell, pastor, officiating.

Mr. Manning is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Samples Manning of the home; two daughters, Mrs. Emmett Judson Pope Jr. of Mt. Olive and Mrs. Miles Johnson Boyer of Charlotte; four grandchildren; and a sister, Mrs. Joel Muse of Williamston.

A native of Williamston, Mr. Manning was the son of the late William and Sarah Roberson Manning, founders of The Enterprise. He graduated from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill in 1926 and returned to Williamston to work on the newspaper with his family.

He was editor of The Enterprise, a twice-weekly paper published Tuesdays and Thursdays, for more than 50 years. He was also a long-time editor of The Robersonville Herald Tribune, a weekly paper published in Robersonville.

Mr. Manning for years wrote a column for The Enterprise, detailing folksy accounts of his fishing experiences and contacts with friends and fellow citizens. He was also an avid historian who wrote numerous articles on local history and authored three books on Martin County history.

Time Not Ripe

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Saudi Arabia's oil minister says there may not be a substantial increase in the price of crude oil until the 1990s, the Middle East Economy Survey reports.

Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani said in an interview with the oil weekly that there can be no "real" price increase until demand picks up and coal ceases to be competitive, possibly not until the next decade.

Missouri Blasts Louisville, 69-55

By The Associated Press

The last time Missouri played Louisville in basketball, the Tigers were embarrassed. They wanted to make sure that wouldn't happen again.

"I felt everyone would play a little above themselves because of last year's game," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart after Sunday's 69-55 triumph over the Cardinals. "I thought that we attacked them this time, rather than playing it cautious, and we played defense, too."

The second-ranked Tigers, who were humiliated 71-49 last year in their first meeting ever with Louisville, overcame a slow start by outscoring the Cardinals 22-4 over the last nine minutes of the first half. That gave them a 38-24 halftime lead, the same 14-point margin as the final score.

"They played 40 minutes and we played 32 or 33," said Denny Crum, coach of the 17th-ranked Cardinals. "I knew they'd be very good. They didn't do much I didn't expect. When you play on the road, you have to play 40 minutes."

Ricky Frazier led Missouri with 22 points, while Michael Walker had 14 and sparked the Tigers' big spurge in the closing minutes of the first half. Their efforts helped the Big Eight Tigers improve their record to 14-0, the school's best start in 60 years.

Lancaster Gordon scored 14 points for the Cardinals, who lost their fourth game in 15 this year.

The victory was Missouri's second over the weekend. The Tigers edged Nebraska 44-42 Saturday night. Louisville was also in action Saturday night, beating Cincinnati 74-58.

In other games Sunday, third-ranked Virginia whipped Clemson 89-68 and No. 8 Georgetown was upset by Syracuse 75-70.

In Saturday's other action, No. 1 North Carolina defeated Duke 73-63; Virginia walloped Georgia Tech 79-60; No. 4 DePaul whipped Old Dominion 70-60; No. 5 Iowa trounced Wisconsin 78-62; No. 6 Kentucky routed No. 13 Alabama 86-69; No. 7 San Francisco hammered Loyola (Calif.) 108-74; No. 9 Arkansas was upset by No. 19 Texas 87-73; SMU shocked 10th-ranked Houston 67-66; 11th-ranked Minnesota defeated Michigan 67-58; No. 12 North Carolina State nipped Wake Forest 52-50; No. 14 Idaho defeated Weber State 59-44; No. 15 Oregon State crushed Oregon 76-61; No. 18 Tulsa beat No. 16 Wichita State 99-88 and Florida State edged No. 20 Virginia Tech 69-65.

Prince Bridges' layup at the buzzer gave Missouri a victory over Nebraska Saturday night. A basket by Nebraska's Jack Moore had tied the game at 42 with 14 seconds to play, the first Cornhuskers' points in eight minutes.

The Top Ten

Jimmy Black scored 14 points and his ball-hawking defense opened the door for an 18-4 spurt in the second half as North Carolina beat Duke. With the help of their senior guard, the 13-0 Tar Heels overcame a one-point halftime deficit to take a 56-42 lead midway through the second half and coasted the rest of the way.

Ralph Sampson scored 24 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead Virginia over Georgia Tech Saturday night. On Sunday, Sampson again was the Cavaliers' big man with 22 points and 14 rebounds as Virginia defeated Clemson.

"Virginia is a better team than last year," said Clemson Coach Bill Foster. "They are much stronger defensively and Sampson does more things. They press more and give you more defensive looks, and they are much quicker. I think you get quicker somehow when you win."

Terry Cummings had 18 points and Skip Dillard 16 to help DePaul beat Old Dominion. Old Dominion Coach Paul Webb noted that DePaul was able to dictate the tempo in most of the first half, when the Blue Demons led 40-24. "but in the second half I feel we took the game to them. We became more aggressive."

Dawkins Breaks Leg

Sampson, Cavs Crunch Clemson

CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va. (AP) — Ralph Sampson scored 22 points, pulled down 14 rebounds and blocked three shots and third-ranked Virginia put three other players in double figures as the Cavaliers waltzed past Clemson's Tigers 89-68 Sunday in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game.

Freshman Tim Mullen added 15 points, freshman Jimmy Miller 14 and senior Jeff Jones 12 for the Cavaliers, who shot a torrid 64.9 percent from the floor as they upped their overall record to 16-1 and 4-1 in the ACC. The Cavaliers were 17 of 23 for 73.9 percent in the second half.

Fred Gilliam came off the bench to lead Clemson with 12 points. Clarke Bynum, Mike Eppley and Vincent Hamilton had 10 points each for the Tigers, now 8-5 overall and 1-4 in the conference.

Leading by just five points at intermission, Virginia ran off nine unanswered points in just over two minutes to open the second half.

A three-point play by Sampson — seven of nine from the floor and eight of 13 at the foul line — a transition basket by Othell Wilson, a jumper from the corner by Mullen and a baseline jumper by Craig Robinson gave the Cavaliers a 14-point cushion, 50-36.

Clemson pulled to within seven at 53-46 on a jumper by Eppley with 15:20 left to play before an eight-point run by Virginia put the game out of reach. A score inside and four free throws by Sampson and a jumper by Ricky Stokes boosted the Cavaliers to a 61-46 advantage with 12:30 left in the game.

The Tigers, who have lost four of their last five starts, never got any closer than 11 points the rest of the way.

Led by Jones, who scored nine points in the first five minutes, Virginia bolted to a quick 10-2 lead less than five minutes into the game. The Cavaliers padded their margin to 11 points at 29-18 on a three-point play by Miller with 8:36 left in the half.

But Clemson, demonstrating a keener eye at the foul line in the first 20 minutes, closed the gap with Hamilton's 15-footer at the five-second mark leaving the Tigers down by just 41-36 at intermission.

There were 29 personal fouls called in the first half, 55 for the game, with Clenson connecting on 10 of 12 at the line and Virginia 13 of 20 in the first 20 minutes.

But in the second half, Clemson went to the line only four times and made two, while Virginia connected on 14 of 21. For the game, Clemson was called for 33 fouls, sending the Cavaliers to the line 41 times.

Czech Rallies To Win Masters Title

Lendl Captures 7th Tournament

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hey Vitas, New York loves you, Vitas. Hey, Vitas, put him on a subway."

The crowd was pulling for the hometown guy, Vitas Gerulaitis, but in the end, winner Ivan Lendl walked away with a piece of their hearts in addition to $100,000 and his first Volvo Masters tennis championship.

"Even though when I'm playing Vitas, John (McEnroe) and Jimmy (Connors) and you are cheering against me, I still don't think you know how much I like you and New York City," the Czechoslovakian said in accepting his check and trophy Sunday.

That brought a round of applause from the 17,652 folks at Madison Square Garden, who watched the exciting four-hour match, which Lendl won 6-7, 2-6, 7-6, 6-2, 6-4 for his 35th straight match victory and seventh straight tournament win. Lendl lost in the finals here last year to Sweden's Bjorn Borg.

Lendl, the No. 1 seed in the $400,000 event, recovered from two sets down and match point to defeat Gerulaitis, who defeated Eliot Teltscher in the semifinals and made the Masters field only because Borg decided not to compete.

Lendl, who routed John McEnroe in the semifinals, faced match point in the third-set tiebreaker when Gerulaitis was up 6-5. But Lendl, who had rallied from being down 0-2 in the set, won the next three points to take the set and began his surge to the title.

"I didn't want to be two breaks down. I just wanted to come back because if I didn't, he would serve it out somehow. I told myself I have to keep fighting, fighting, fighting and it paid off," said Lendl, who lost to Gerulaitis in a best-of-five match last September at the U.S. Open.

In that event the New Yorker won the first two sets, lost the next two, then captured the fifth.

But Lendl, whose mother wept as he accepted his prize Sunday, said he wasn't thinking about the fifth set at Flushing Meadow.

"No, I was thinking of Vitas looking to be a little tired at the net and he was moving slower for the passing shots, and I thought 'This is my chance.'" Gerulaitis, who took home $50,000, repeatedly sliced to Lendl's backhand, which worked beautifully until Lendl started to run around his backhand. The Czech star drilled powerful forehand winners from all over the court, passing Gerulaitis every time he tried to approach the net.

"He has a lousy backhand compared to his forehand and that's really the way to play the guy," Gerulaitis said. "He can pass you eventually, but he's looking for the opening on the forehand and if you start rallying corner to corner, he's going to run you ragged like he was doing to McEnroe."

Lendl took a 3-0 lead in the third-set tiebreaker before Gerulaitis won four of five points to even it at 4-4. They held serve until the set-winning point, which Lendl won with a forehand cross-court volley.

After winning the third set, Lendl broke Gerulaitis' serve to take a 1-0 lead in the fourth set.

Gerulaitis battled through six deuces before breaking back in the fourth game, putting the fourth set back on serve. But with blistering forehand winners, Lendl broke back to pull to deuce, then (Please turn to page 10)

35-Foot Putt Gives Fiori Victory Shot Gives Texan Win In Sudden-Death Playoff

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ed Fiori had to make a quick phone call home to Sugarland, Texas, after his dramatic victory in the Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic.

He had to check on wife Debbie.

"She might have had the baby on that last putt," Fiori said, only half-joking.

The Fioris' first child, due any time, had not arrived.

But that last putt, a 35-footer for a birdie on the second sudden-death playoff hole Sunday, sent the chunky Fiori happily trotting around the green, his putter raised aloft in salute of a third consecutive birdie.

And a moment later, when Tom Kite missed from less than six feet, Fiori was a winner for the third time in five years on the pro golf tour.

"The good Lord smiled on me this afternoon," Fiori said.

But, while there were smiles and sunshine for Fiori, it was merely another in a long series of bitter disappointments for Kite, the frustrated man who wins so much money, plays so well and wins so few tournaments.

"Oh, Lordy, but I played good," he sighed. "Seven under par for 20 holes and no bogeys."

But it wasn't good enough for Kite, the man who led the tour in money-winnings and stroke average in 1981, a performance that was blighted only by the scarcity of his victories. Although he finished 21 of 26 tournaments in the top 10, he won but one individual title.

He'd vowed to change that unhappy statistic this season. But, in his first start of the year, it was business as usual — a big check, a good performance, a high finish. No victory.

"Needless to say, I'm a little disappointed," he said.

It had to hurt.

Fiori, carrying 180 pounds on a 5-foot-7 frame and dubbed "The Grip" by his fellow pros because of his extremely unorthodox placement of the hands on the club, started the warm, sunny final round with a 1-shot lead. He played the front nine in 4-under-par 32.

But Kite kept pace. He reeled off a string of four consecutive birdies and also turned in 32. Then he caught Fiori with a birdie on the 12th and took the lead alone on the 17th when a 10-footer hit the back of the cup.

On the par-5 18th, however, Fiori was able to reach the green in two and Kite, after a short drive, had to lay up. Fiori made a two-putt birdie-4 and Kite a routine par, finishing off a 6-under-par 66. Fiori had a 67. That tied them at 335, 25 strokes under par for the only 90-hole, five-day tournament on the tour.

Both hit 8-irons close for birdies on the first playoff hole at Indian Wells, the par-3 15th. On the 16th, a par-4, Fiori put his approach some 35 feet from the flag and Kite spun his in less than six feet from the cup. It appeared that Fiori had to make the long one just to keep the playoff going.

"I thought the tournament was over," Fiori said. "And, frankly, I thought he'd won it." Kite didn't.

"I was expecting the worst," he said.

From his viewpoint, that's what happened.

Fiori dropped the long birdie putt and Kite now had to make his to stay alive.

"It was a straight putt," he said. "I played it straight. I stroked it well. The ball just dived right."

And it missed, making Fiori a turn-around winner of the $50,000 first place check.

Kite got some consolation from a $29,700 second prize which boosted him into 15th place on the all-time money-winning list, one position ahead of his former University of Texas teammate Ben Crenshaw.

Rex Caldwell salvaged third with a great birdie from deep trouble on the 17th. He finished with a 68 and a 337 total, two shots back. Scott Hoch, with an eagle on the last hole, had a 65 and was alone at 338, followed by Curtis Strange, 65-339.

Thomas Keys Pistons By Bucks; Dawkins Injured

By The Associated Press

Isiah Thomas was 2-for-22 from three-point range, but when he let the ball go he wasn't worried about his percentage because he didn't know he was firing from that far away.

Despite his .083 three-point average, Thomas earned two of the long-distance shots and grabbed a key rebound in the final 4:42 Sunday night as the Detroit Pistons beat the Milwaukee Bucks 108-103 in a National Basketball Association game.

"I'm not going to lie to you and say I tried to shoot three-pointers," said Thomas, who was selected to start for the Eastern Conference in the NBA All-Star Game Jan. 31. "I think the clock was running down, so I was just looking for a shot."

"I didn't look at the three-point line at all, either time. Then I turned around and saw the ref signal three points. I was surprised."

Pistons Coach Scotty Robertson said Thomas has the option to try three-point shots.

"Basically, we take what they give us," Robertson said. "If they crowd him, he tries to take it by them. If he's open, he can take the three-point shot. We were holding the ball out around the three-point line, anyway."

Robertson said Thomas' shooting percentage is misleading "because he's taken a lot of bad shots late in games out of frustration. The three-pointer is not a high-percentage shot in the first place. But it's the guy who can hit them at the right time who's the clutch player."

Thomas' first three-pointer gave the Pistons a 90-88 lead with 4:42 remaining. After Brian Winters made two baskets for the Bucks, Thomas connected again for a 93-92 edge and Detroit never trailed again.

A third three-pointer, by Ron Lee after a rebound and feed by Thomas, made it 103-96 with 53 seconds left.

Marques Johnson led all scorers with 27 for Milwaukee, while Kelly Tripucka led the Pistons with 17. Thomas had 15.

Nets 105, 76ers 97

Ray Williams scored 29 points to lead New Jersey to its second victory in eight days over Philadelphia, which lost its third straight.

Darryl Dawkins, the 76ers' starting center, suffered a broken shinbone and will be on the injured list for up to eight weeks.

Bullets 96, Hawks 78

Don Collins scored 29 points and joined with Rick Mahorn in scoring six points during a 14-0 Washington spurt that broke open a close game with Atlanta.

With the Hawks trailing 76-74 with 9:21 to play, the Bullets held the Atlanta scoreless for 5½ minutes to take a 90-74 lead with 3:45 remaining.

Lakers 109, Kings 97

Magic Johnson scored 29 points and Jamaal Wilkes 22 to lead Los Angeles to its third straight victory.

Kansas City led 78-77 early in the fourth quarter before Eddie Jordan scored nine points for the Lakers during a 13-4 spurt that gave them a 90-82 cushion with seven minutes remaining.

Larry Drew scored 15 of his 21 points for the Kings in the second period when they took a 58-54 halftime lead.

Pacers 116, Bulls 103

Indiana broke a five-game losing streak as seven Pacers scored in double figures, led by Johnny Davis with 20 points and George McGinnis with a season-high 17.

Rookie Orlando Woolridge scored 19 points to lead Chicago, which lost its fourth straight game. The former Notre Dame star was 8 for 8 from the field.

Sonics 122, Warriors 97

Wally Walker and Gus Williams led an 18-4 third-quarter blitz by Seattle that carried the Sonics to their seventh straight triumph.

Walker scored 10 points and Williams contributed six assists in the flurry that extended a 74-69 lead to 92-73.

All-Star forward Lonnie Shelton scored 22 points to lead the Sonics. World Free scored 33 points for Golden State.

Nuggets 138, Clippers 131

Denver, led by Alex English's 35 points, won despite an 81-point first half by San Diego.

The Nuggets stayed close in the first two periods, scoring 76 points while the Clippers' total was the biggest in a half at an NBA game this season.

Record Long Jump Surprises Lewis

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—Carl Lewis set a world indoor record in the long jump when he leapt 28 feet, 1 inch and breaking his own world indoor mark, set last year, of 27-10¼ inches.

Lewis' latest record was on his third jump at the U.S. Olympic Invitational track and field meet at the Meadowlands Arena. The University of Houston junior fouled on his first two jumps.

Ashford Runs To World Mark

CHICAGO (AP)—Evelyn Ashford was clocked in a world-record 5.64 in the 50-yard dash and hurdler Renaldo Nehemiah beat Greg Foster in the 50-yard high hurdles in the inaugural Chicago Goodwill Indoor Games.

Ashford ran her world-record time in a preliminary and then barely defeated Olympic teammate Chandira Cheeseborough. Her preliminary time erased the record of 5.80 set in 1978 by Great Britain's Andrea Lynch. Nehemiah nipped Foster with times of 6.04 and 6.06.

marathoner in history and the first American record holder for the indoor 5,000-meter run, recovered from a first-lap fall and raced to victory over indoor record holder Suleiman Nyambui in 13:23.08 seconds.

After eclipsing Ripley's pole-vault record, Olson walked straight to a public telephone and placed a call to his parents in Texas.

ECU Mile Relay Team Sets Mark

GAINESVILLE, Fla.—The East Carolina University mile relay team set an indoor record and two more Pirates qualified for the IC4A Indoor Championships at the Florida Invitational here Saturday night.

The ECU mile relay team raced to a 3:15.5 time to set a school record on a 200-meter track. The old record was 3:15.7 set last season at a meet at Ohio State.

Florida won the event with a time of 3:14.8.

Running the relay for ECU were Carlton Frazier (49.1), Terry Ford (49.3), Keith Clarke (48.6) and Tim Cephus

ECU Invited to Wanamaker

NEW YORK—The East Carolina mile relay team has been invited to the prestigious Wanamaker Games set for Feb. 12 in New York City. ECU officials announced today.

ECU originally was to have to run in the West Virginia Invitational on Feb. 13. However, with the announcement that the mile relay team has been invited to the Wanamaker Games ECU will not participate in the invitational.

Among other teams that will have runners in the invitation-only track meet is track powers Morgan State, Villanova, Howard and Tennessee.

(47.6). The blistering anchor leg by Cephus, who was sick going into the relay, brought the Pirates from fifth place to second.

Lendl Wins Masters...

pounced on a serve to take advantage and had a 3-2 lead when Gerulaitis' backhand volley sailed long.

After holding his own serve at love, Lendl broke Gerulaitis again, then held again at love to pull even at two sets each.

The first two games of the final set went at love, and Gerulaitis lost only one point in winning the third game. But Gerulaitis, who was quick as the garden's resident cat — which walked across the court in the second set — fought to break point on Lendl's serve in the fourth game.

Lendl pulled back to deuce with a crossed-court backhand, then fired an ace and service winner to pull even at 2-2. He broke serve in the fifth game, with Gerulaitis double faulting at game point, then held serve the rest of the way.

"Maybe if I would've come in all match long and was a little hesitant, but he still played a good point. He whacked three forehands side to side and he also started off the tiebreaker great."

For the second straight year, the doubles title went to McEnroe and Peter Fleming, who defeated Kevin Curren of South Africa and Steve Denton 6-3, 6-3. The winners split $40,000, while the losers shared $20,000.

th-seeded Barbara Potter overpowered No.4 Bettina Bunge to win the $150,000 Avon Tennis Championship of Cincinnati, 6-4, 7-6.

Potter, 20, who won $30,000, combined high-powered serves and unerring volleys at the net to keep Bunge off balance throughout the two-set match.

Potter beat Billie Jean King in the semifinals.

Sue Barker and Ann Kiyomura defeated Pam Shriver and Anne Smith 6-2, 7-6 to take the doubles championship.

In Cardiff, Wales, Britain gained its first success in Kings Cup tennis when Buster Motttram and John Feaver won their singles matches to defeat West Germany and give their country a 2-0 lead.

Feaver beat Peter Elter 6-4, 7-5, while Mottra defeated Portugal 3-0, with Sean Sorensen downing Louis Filipe 6-3, 6-1 and Irish-American Matt Doyle defeating Miguel Soares 6-1, 6-3.

In Scottsdale, Ariz., the Republicans won 32 games to 27 for the Democrats to take the Senators Cup tournament. But in the singles final, Sen. Bennett Johnson, D-La., defeated Sen. John H. Heinz, R-Pa., 6-3 and in doubles play Johnson teamed with Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., to defeat Sens. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and Lowell Weicker Jr., R-Conn., 6-4.

and we've only done that once before."

Also for ECU, Clarke and Ford both qualified for the IC4A championships in the 400-meter run. Clarke ran a 49.17 for a second place finish and Ford a 49.36 for a fourth place finish.

Clarke and Ford bring to six the number of ECU runners who have qualified for the IC4A. Already having qualified are Cephus, Clint Harris, Ray Dickerson and Jeff Golden. The mile relay team has also qualified for the IC4A.

"We did quite well considering the competition," Carson said. "We were up against some tough teams."

In other ECU results: Harris finished fifth in the 55-meter run with a time of 6.44 after having run a 6.2 in the trials; Golden ran a 6.3 in the 55-meters but did not qualify for the finals; Lawrence Ervin and Shaun Laney both ran a 1:05.6 in the 500 meters but did not place.

ECU was to have traveled to Philadelphia for the Philadelphia Track Classic this weekend, but Carson has changed his plans and will now take the Pirates to a meet at VMI.

VMI has one of the stronger mile relay teams in the nation, having already run a 3:12.8 earlier this year.

Cold Greets 49ers, Cincinnati

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers, anxious to get started on the biggest week of their football lives, were in town early as the Super Bowl XVI countdown began in sub-zero temperatures.

The National Football Conference champion 49ers arrived Sunday night, nearly 24 hours ahead of the Cincinnati Bengals. The winners of the American Conference were due to arrive tonight.

The media blitz for the two teams begins in full force Tuesday with photo day in the Silverdome, where both clubs will practice for the Sunday showdown.

This will be the first Super Bowl not anchored to a warm-weather site, and early arrivals Sunday had an instant reminder of that when they were greeted by temperatures that hovered around minus-8 degrees with a wind chill of about minus-45.

The Bengals, of course, will feel right at home in that climate. They battled even more brutal cold and wind — the wind-chill factor was minus-59 — when they eliminated San Diego in the AFC title game eight days ago. The 49ers joined them in the Super Bowl by staging a brilliant 89-yard march in the final minutes of the NFC championship game for the winning touchdown to eliminate Dallas.

The weather won't be a factor for either the Super Bowl practices or the game, though, because the Fibreglas-covered Silverdome is climate-controlled. It's always 72 degrees and dry inside.

Besides being the first Super Bowl to be played in the north, the Cincinnati-San Francisco match marks the first time that two teams came from losing records one year to challenge for the NFL championship the very next season. Both the Bengals and 49ers posted 6-10 records in 1980 but staged remarkable turnarounds this season, finishing with the best records in their respective conferences.

San Francisco's 13-3 regular-season record included a 21-3 decision over the Bengals, who finished the year at 12-4. That would seem to be a good omen for the 49ers, who also had regular-season victories over both the New York Giants and Dallas, the two teams they beat in playoff games en route to their Super Bowl date with the Bengals.

In their victory over the Bengals, the 49ers got a pair of touchdown passes from Joe Montana, hero of the late drive that beat the Cowboys in the NFC title game. Montana won the NFC passing title. He had 311 completions on 488 attempts for 3,565 yards and 19 touchdowns.

Cincinnati counters with Ken Anderson, the NFL's Most Valuable Player, who led the league in passing by hitting 300 of 479 for 3,754 yards and 29 TDs.

Michigan, excited about hosting the big game, has an exciting week planned for visitors. There are concerts by Frank Sinatra, Diana Ross and Rod Stewart scheduled, a couple of National Hockey League games, tennis featuring John McEnroe and Guillermo Vilas, and some important boxing and college basketball. And there are the usual parties, a routine part of the Super Bowl scene.

No wonder the 49ers came in early.

Supersonics, Celtics Place 2 On 'Star' Club

NEW YORK (AP) — The Boston Celtics, with Larry Bird and Tiny Archibald, and the Seattle SuperSonics, with Lonnie Shelton and Gus Williams, are the only teams with two players on the starting teams for the 1982 National Basketball Association All-Star Game.

The starting team for the Eastern Conference in the Jan. 31 game at East Rutherford, N.J., will be Julius Erving of the Philadelphia 76ers and Bird at forward, center Artis Gilmore of the Chicago Bulls and Archibald and Isiah Thomas of the Detroit Pistons at guard.

The West starters will be Adrian Dantley of the Utah Jazz and Shelton at forward, center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers, and Williams and George Gervin of the San Antonio Spurs at guard.

Erving was the leading vote-getter for the second consecutive year in fan balloting, which is used to select the starting fives. The remaining seven players on each of the 12-man teams will be chosen by the coaches in each conference and announced later this week.

Erving, the top vote-collector for the third time overall, received a record 432,230 votes. His total broke the mark of 427,540 received by Gervin in 1979.

The East will be coached by Bill Fitch of Boston and the West by Pat Riley of Los Angeles. Their teams have the best records in the Eastern and Western Conferences, respectively.

Erving, winner of the league's Most Valuable Player Award last season and fifth in the NBA in scoring with a 25.2 average this year, will be starting his sixth consecutive All-Star game, the longest streak for any player. Erving has not missed an All-Star Game in his 11 pro seasons — six in the NBA and five in the American Basketball Association.

Bird, voted to the starting team for the first time in his three pro seasons although he did start last year's game because of an injury to Atlanta's Dan Roundfield, was the second-leading vote-getter with 380,485. He is averaging 22.5 points and 11.1 rebounds per game.

The 7-foot-2 Gilmore, who received 270,313 votes, will be making his second straight All-Star start.

Thomas, the only rookie on either starting team, led all guards with 367,969 votes, a record for a first-year player. Archibald, making his sixth All-Star appearance, was the MVP of last year's game.

Dantley, last season's scoring champion and second this year with a 29.9 average, topped the West forwards with 237,272 votes. Shelton, who missed most of last season with a broken wrist, was a close second with 234,330 votes.

Abdul-Jabbar, making his fourth consecutive start and 12th All-Star appearance — one short of the record — received 283,821 votes. He is among the league leaders with averages of 24.7 points, 9.9 rebounds, 2.83 blocked shots and a .561 field goal percentage.

Gervin, the NBA scoring leader three times and No. 1 in the league this season with a 33.4 average, was the top vote-getter from the West with 343,977. Williams, who sat out last season because of a contract dispute, collected 245,373 votes. He is averaging 23.2 points, 7.1 assists and 2.58 steals per game.

Knight: Officiating Bad

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (A) — The Big Ten Conference hasn't had consistent officiating all season, says Indiana Coach Bobby Knight, who was slapped with a technical foul after he ran screaming onto the court when guard Jim Thomas was knocked down by an Ohio State player.

Thomas, who had just scored on a fast-break dunk, lay on the floor for several seconds, and Knight charged off the bench "to see how Jimmy was, and I never saw a foul indicated (against Ohio State's Troy Taylor)."

The Hoosiers, who won Saturday's game 66-61, had a big enough cushion at the time so that the two Buckeye free throws on Knight's technical didn't matter. But Knight later took a swipe at the officials.

"The officiating has to be consistent and this league hasn't had it any time this year," he told reporters after the game. "We had the same crew at Michigan State and anytime there was a hand, it was a foul."

"This game was officiated by the same three guys and it was officiated totally opposite," said Knight. "I'll look at the film and if I don't find 30 times where we were touched or hacked, I'll buy you a steak dinner."

Taylor, a freshman guard for the Buckeyes, conceded he had fouled Thomas. "I hit his wrist, but he fell on his own. Then he (Knight) cussed me out. I don't know what he said, but I told him I was sorry I fouled him (Thomas), and then he started screaming and calling me everything in the book."

"But I think that's the type of person Bobby Knight is — very impolite, win or lose. He's just a very rude man. I'll never forget him for that," Taylor said. Officials whistled a two-shot flagrant foul on Taylor and then called the technical on Knight.

Ted Kitchel led Indiana with 20 points and Thomas added 17. The Hoosiers climbed to 8-5 overall and 2-2 in the conference. Ohio State fell from sole possession of first place with its first loss in four league games. Overall, the Buckeyes are 12-4.

California Awaits Jackson's Decision

By The Associated Press
Reggie Jackson may be counting the crowds as well as home runs next season if he signs a contract with the California Angels.

The Los Angeles Herald Examiner said in today's editions that Jackson's agent, Gary Walker, made a contract offer that would make a large part of the slugger's salary dependent on attendance at Angel games.

"Reggie has a lot of pride and you might say we took advantage of that by proposing to pay him based on attendance," said Buzzie Bavasi, the Angels' executive vice president. "Reggie's charisma is bankable and I think he'll be willing to gamble on it."

Bavasi told the newspaper he would respond to the offer by today. "I've got to believe they're serious about making a deal with us," said Bavasi. "If not, they are wasting a lot of their own time and ours."

The Baltimore Orioles,

Atlanta Braves and New York Yankees also are reportedly in the running to sign Jackson, 35, who has played with the Yankees the past five seasons.

The New York Times said Saturday that Walker has planned for some time to listen to offers from other teams and then give the Yankees and owner George Steinbrenner a final chance to negotiate.

Braves owner Ted Turner sounded very determined to sign Jackson when interviewed over the weekend.

"I'm going to try like hell to sign him," Turner said. "I haven't made my last offer yet."

Turner, who compared his negotiations with Jackson to college recruiting, added, "Just think how much fun it would be to have Reggie in Atlanta. All roads would lead to Atlanta. We'd have the most awesome home-run-hitting team in baseball."

Jackson said last week he would make a signing decision by today or Tuesday.

French Director Hailed In U.S.

LOOK AT ME, MUMMY — Robert Burton, who plays Beau Baker in NBC-TV's continuing daytime drama, "Texas", is shown before and after his dramatic transformation by make-up artist and special effects whiz Kevin Haney.

Burton was transformed into a withered mummy for an episode with a supernatural plot twist. For the final stage of mummification, Haney created a dummy to be used in sequences for several weeks. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARLA DONATO
CHICAGO (UPI) — Francois Truffaut is a man obsessed with echoes. And if the reception he received in Chicago is any indication, the echoes are coming back in the form of warm applause.

The French film director and his work were the feature attraction at the recent 17th annual Chicago film festival. A retrospect of his films, including an all-night marathon, drew hefty crowds. A small, neatly dressed, soft-spoken man, he displayed in interviews a wit that is one of the qualities that managed to bring him from obscurity to the limelight... winning him honors from Cannes to Hollywood.

Critics gave four stars to one of his most recent works, "The Last Metro," a ghostly cabaret movie that chronicles a group of Jewish performers in wartime Germany who continue their art underground in the theater's basement.

Truffaut said he considers the Holocaust the most important event of the 20th century. The film was a bit of a departure from his political themes and personality, even though he labels Francois Mitterrand's newly elected French socialist government as the "government we've been waiting for in France." He said politics are blown out of proportion and for that reason he leaves them out of his films.

"A government should be humble, modest and efficient," he said, "like a cleaning woman."

Given those qualifications, Truffaut could have made a success of a career in politics or cleaning. He himself does not wander far from his family and his work. While filming "Fahrenheit 451" in England he reported to friends he saw literally nothing of London except the inside of his hotel room and the set.

He is most comfortable in France, which he boasts has more movie theaters than any other country in the world, and the best system for making movies, which he explained is no system.

The hero-like status of the 49-year-old prolific director of over 20 films stems from his reputation as the most prominent of the French "New Wave" cinema. Basically, that's the school of directors that came out of the 1950s working without substantial budgets or crews, but with complete control over the work, leading to highly stylized forms and personal statements.

Truffaut's form is noted for many things, some borrowed in spirit from his personal hero, the late U.S. director Alfred Hitchcock. Truffaut said he admires Hitchcock for the "religious" attitude he brings to his work, and the work's strong emotional quality, so strong it brings echoes back from the audience.

That communication, said Truffaut, is what the cinema is all about, and Hitchcock was a master at it.

Although their methods vary, Truffaut shares Hitchcock's obsession for film, and often chooses it as a theme. Hitchcock tends to look at life's more grotesque side, while Truffaut shows it through a child's eyes.

His first film blockbuster, the "400 Blows", was an instant success and forced the film world to reaccept him after ousting him during his notorious career as a caustic film critic. The story is an autobiographical work about his "delinquent" run-away childhood, filmed from the child's point of view. Truffaut explains all his films have elements of autobiography, echoes of himself, and children.

"Children are great collaborators," Truffaut said, "They are frank and disinterested in how they look... Even if they are not an essential part of the plot they should be included in the film... People remain children all their lives."

At least the men in Truffaut's films remain children, including his autobiographical self that he traces through film from an unhappy childhood, though detention centers and a dishonorable discharge from the army for desertion.

The women in Truffaut's films are the pivotal characters, the movers. Surprisingly this has drawn criticism from the feminist community that notes Truffaut does not create an adult man character, unless he plays the part. In one such instance Truffaut confided he took the male lead because it was more important than the director's role and he didn't want to get jealous of the actor.

"But men are little boys," Truffaut said. "Women are more aware of the social life. They tend to be stronger, and women know what they want. Men are more indecisive."

The male character in his latest film, "The Woman Next Door" is such a character. The film, which opened in Chicago to approving nods from local critics, is a typical French obsessive, destructive love story. It chronicles the meeting of former lovers who have both married, are living marginally happy lives and happen to end up next door to each other. The affair is rekindled and becomes torrid and destructive.

Although the performances are outstanding, the film is a bit disappointing because it lacks the imagination in plot and filming that marked some of Truffaut's earlier works. Compared to "The Last Metro," the film is safe. "The Last Metro" looks at a group of people within a larger society, "The Woman Next Door" zeros in on two people in a very closed relationship.

Tonight's TV Film Carries On The Whodunnit Tradition

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Two stars of "Middleton, U.S.A.," the sexy late-night soap opera, are murdered. Detective Flynn wants to shut down the show, and Daniel, one of the writers, wonders, "Why bother writing scenes when the actors don't live long enough to play them?"

But Girard, the network president, keeps the serial on the air until another star, April, is slashed to death as she's about to hop into bed with a corpse.

It's called "Fantasies," a made-for-TV movie on ABC, 9-11 p.m. EST Monday, and you're not going to know who the killer is until the end.

Suzanne Pleshette plays Carla Sherman, creator and head writer of "Middleton, U.S.A.," and Barry Newman is Detective Errol Flynn.

The movie features stars of four ABC soaps — Peter Bergman from "All My Children," Stuart Damon and Robin Mattson from "General Hospital," John Gabriel from "Ryan's Hope" and Robert S. Woods from "One Life to Live." How's that for novelty?

Nobody is really that upset when Mallory (Gabriel) is beaten to death with a baseball bat. He was "arrogant, vain, filled with malice... ecumenical in his nastiness," Carla tells Flynn. But Larry (Bergman) — he hadn't been around long enough to make any enemies.

April dies after Carla decides to create a new personality for her character, and it becomes clear that someone connected with the show is involved. Everyone but Carla and her daughter Sandy (Lenora May) seem to be suspects.

Carla, by the way, is pretty busy, so she tries to spend her spare time with Sandy. Their conversation often goes like this:

Carla — "Is Arthur special?"

Sandy — "Kind of, but I get the impression he's more afraid of sex than I am...."

Carla — "...When you do decide to get curious, fumbling can be fun, too."

Everyone's depressed with the show off the air — there are no more killings — and at long last, Girard (Robert Vaughn) decides to crank things up again. "America wants to show back on the air again," he proclaims.

The network boss orders guards for the actors, but Carla declines the offer for herself — unaware of the creep humming "Pop Goes the Weasel" who's been following her all along. That night — or sometime soon — she's attacked in her bed, but the would-be strangler is frightened off by a ringing doorbell. Carla, disheveled but remarkably composed, answers the door. It's a delivery boy with the latest script.

"Hope I didn't interrupt anything," he says.

"You'll never know," Carla quips, then calls Flynn, who's getting mighty close to the case by now, as you might expect.

"We try so hard to make it real," Carla tells the cop in a

By The Associated Press
Three traffic deaths were reported in North Carolina over the weekend, one coming as a result of last week's snowstorm, the state Highway Patrol reported.

The latest death occurred Sunday. Jesse Salter, 33, of New Haven, Conn., was killed at about 11:30 a.m. when the car in which he was a passenger ran off the road and struck a ditch.

The accident occurred on a rural road 20 miles east of Elizabethtown in Bladen County.

A 24-year-old Wilson County man died Friday when his car slid on the ice and overturned, throwing him from the vehicle. A spokesman for the patrol said William Randall Bass of Lucama died about 8 p.m. on a rural paved road south of Wilson.

Dean T. Walter, 20, stationed at the Cherry Point Marine Air Station, died around 11:25 p.m. Friday when he was struck by a vehicle while running along a rural road in Carteret County, the patrol reported.

The weekend fatalities bring the yearly death toll to 27, compared to 53 at the same time last year.

Webster was educated in New Hampshire and taught school in the state. Eventually he became a lawyer, New Hampshire congressman, Massachusetts senator and secretary of state to three presidents.

The building described as Webster's birthplace probably was a kitchen, rebuilt in 1913 and based on a romanticized-but-inaccurate drawing published in 1851, said Garvin, curator of the New Hampshire Historical Society.

He says the reconstruction was done by the Webster Birthplace Association, which was not aware of a drawing published in 1852, the year Webster died. That drawing, according to Garvin, was made under Webster's supervision and shows the house to be different from the one that now stands in Franklin.

The book in which the drawing appears also said that as of publication in 1852, the birthplace no longer stood.

Q.1—As South, vulnerable. A.—Now that partner has cooperated in your slam effort, it is obvious that slam depends on his diamond holding. A jump to five spades will show your concern about the unbid suit, and partner's next action should depend solely on what he holds in diamonds. If he has second-round control, he will bid six spades and you will, of course, pass. But if he cue-bids six diamonds, showing the ace, you should leap to a grand slam.

Q.2—East West, vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠Q852 ♣KQ6 ♦K8 ♠AQ104 The bidding has proceeded: East South West North 1 ♠ Dble Pass 1 ♠ Pass ? What action do you take? A.—Since you have a somewhat better than minimum takeout double, your hand is worth a move toward game. But that does not mean you have to take drastic action. A raise to two spades expresses your values quite adequately.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable with 60 on score, you hold: ♠AK76 ♣AKQ952 ♦J7 ♠K The bidding has proceeded: South West North East 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass ? What action do you take? A.—So far, you have shown nothing of value, yet your vulnerable partner has persisted in trying to get to game. He is, in effect, contracting for eight tricks on his own, and you have an excellent hand for your bidding to this point, including a key card in the enemy suit. To bid less than three no trump would be an insult to partner.

Q.4—As South vulnerable, you hold: ♠874 ♣K ♦9652 ♣Q9763 The bidding has proceeded: East South West North Pass Pass Pass 1 ♠ 1 ♠ Pass Pass Dble Pass 2 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass ? What action do you take? A.—You have the values for just one forward-going bid. Should you respond one spade, you won't be sure what to do next no matter what partner rebids. As against that, if you raise to two hearts now, you can cooperate enthusiastically with any game-going effort partner may launch. And if he passes two hearts, you are almost surely in your best contract.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold: ♠854 ♣AK9 ♦A109 ♠J762 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?

The Man Who Wasn't President

When the first candidates for the American Hall of Fame were chosen in 1901, George Washington received the most votes — 97. But second place was a tie, at 96 votes each, between Abraham Lincoln and Daniel Webster. Daniel Webster — whose birth bicentennial is today — was such a dominant and imposing figure on the American political scene that he was compared to natural phenomena like Niagara Falls. A spell-binding orator, successful lawyer, Congressman, Senator, and three-time Secretary of State, his concept of the "Union" rallied the North in the Civil War, years after his death. But his "great body of implacable foes" denied him the prize he wanted most — the U.S. Presidency.

DO YOU KNOW — For what Presidents was Daniel Webster Secretary of State?

Determining Treatment for Tumor

How do doctors decide if a tumor is to be treated by surgery or by X-ray? We recently went through such a situation. Fortunately the result was good. — Mr. G.N.T., Nev.
 Dear Mr. T.:

Malignant, or cancerous, tumors are studied in a most expansive and elaborate manner. When a tumor is removed entirely or when a biopsy specimen is removed, the tissue is sent to the pathological laboratory. Here, in a complicated way the tumor is embedded in a paraffin-like substance. Then it is sliced in the finest possible sections and stained with a variety of special dyes. Pathologists, or specialists in this field, are able to determine the nature of the tumor and the degree of its malignancy. Of course, they can also determine if the tumor is benign (not cancerous).

With all the colds that are going around, is there any danger in drinking wine from the same cup as we do in church? — Mrs. S.M., N.Y.
 Dear Mrs. M.:

I recall there once was a study made at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta. Dr. E.P. Danczewicz said, "There was little risk to worshippers using a common chalice, or drinking cup." By wiping the cup between sips, the danger is minimal.

Crime Victims To Be Subject

"Aid to Victims of Violent and Non-Violent Crime" will be discussed by Alma Nesbitt, victims assistance coordinator of the Governor's Crime Commission Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville.

The meeting will be presented by the Criminal Justice Committee of the League of Women Voters. Committee Chairperson Kay Sutton urges the public to attend for discussion of issues like:

- What provisions are made for victims of violent crimes?
- How could victims be provided restitution and/or compensation?
- What obligations should the state and local governments assume?

Sutton points out that violent crime is the No. 1 concern of many citizens today and there is great emphasis now on the criminal, the courts and the prisons. The neglected area, she explained, is the victims of crime.

Almost every month there are new extensions of the field of chemotherapy. New drugs are constantly being devised to bombard cancers that previously had not responded to older drugs.

Search For 4 Escapees Is Extended Into N.C.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The search has turned to North Carolina for four inmates who sawed through a cell window and escaped from the Perry Correctional Institution here during the weekend, authorities said.

Meanwhile, security at the institution was tightened in the wake of the Saturday night escape, the first since the prison opened in October.

Department of Corrections spokesman Sam McCuen said the four were in the same cell block and "somehow got hold of a sawing blade of some kind" to saw through cyclone fences.

"It was a very well planned escape," he said.

A sophisticated electronic beam device — put in two months ago as a backup because a similar system has malfunctioned since its installation — failed to sound any alert, McCuen said.

He said the escapees went out a second-story cell window in the medium-security section of the prison, crossed the prison yard, got through the two electronic beam systems and slashed through two cyclone fences with the wire cutters and fled into the neighboring woods.

Perry officials were informed of the escape at 3 a.m. Sunday by a North Carolina law enforcement agency, McCuen said, refusing to give further details.

Later, a dummy of rolled-up clothes was found in one of the escapees' bunks and prison clothes were found scattered in the woods outside the prison.

McCuen said the escapees were believed to be traveling in a white pickup truck that was reported missing by a Pelzer farmer several miles from the prison.

He blamed the failure of the electronic beam and a shortage of guards at the overcrowded facility for the failure to immediately discover the escape. However, McCuen said that a guard checked the fence when a "shaker" device indicated a vibration but no evidence of the escape was found.

At the time of the breakout, there was one guard in charge of the 141 prisoners in the dormitory that had housed the four escapees. A guard station closest to the escape route was unmanned, he said.

Two of the missing men were identified as Santos Montanez, 26, and Juan R. Gonzales, 25. Both were serving life sentences from Spartanburg County.

They were sentenced last November for murder, assault and battery with intent to kill, and armed robbery in the shooting death of Copenhens businessman R.C. Roberts and the shooting of an employee in Roberts' store.

Search For 4 Escapees Is Extended Into N.C.

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — The search has turned to North Carolina for four inmates who sawed through a cell window and escaped from the Perry Correctional Institution here during the weekend, authorities said.

Meanwhile, security at the institution was tightened in the wake of the Saturday night escape, the first since the prison opened in October.

Department of Corrections spokesman Sam McCuen said the four were in the same cell block and "somehow got hold of a sawing blade of some kind" to saw through cyclone fences.

"It was a very well planned escape," he said.

A sophisticated electronic beam device — put in two months ago as a backup because a similar system has malfunctioned since its installation — failed to sound any alert, McCuen said.

He said the escapees went out a second-story cell window in the medium-security section of the prison, crossed the prison yard, got through the two electronic beam systems and slashed through two cyclone fences with the wire cutters and fled into the neighboring woods.

Perry officials were informed of the escape at 3 a.m. Sunday by a North Carolina law enforcement agency, McCuen said, refusing to give further details.

McCuen said the escapees were believed to be traveling in a white pickup truck that was reported missing by a Pelzer farmer several miles from the prison.

He blamed the failure of the electronic beam and a shortage of guards at the overcrowded facility for the failure to immediately discover the escape. However, McCuen said that a guard checked the fence when a "shaker" device indicated a vibration but no evidence of the escape was found.
