City School Board Backs Sales Tax Hike

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Board of Education Monday night unanimously approved a "positive" resolution supporting the levying of an additional one-cent sale tax for the state of North Carolina.

A draft of the resolution, after a few minor revisions, will be sent to Gov. Jim Hunt, to local state representatives and senators and to other state officials.

Board Chairman Jon Tingelstad and Superintendent Delma Blinson presented opinions which they said gives credence to the sales tax as the most logical means of creating additional tax revenue.

"The situation of school money is critical statewide," Dr. Blinson noted. "It appears the General Assembly is not in favor of the $600 million dollar bond issue proposed two or three years ago principally because with today's interest it would take over $1 billion dollars to pay back the bond money. It certainly seems a one-cent sales tax increase is the best alternative."

Dr. Tingelstad noted that, under the concept of the penny increase advocated by the State Board of Education, state Treasurer Harlan E. Boyles recently explained that the proposed additional one cent would produce about $250 million annually in increased revenue statewide. The State Board of Education has suggested that 40 percent, or about $100 million, be earmarked for education facilities; another 40 percent for the general revenue needs of local government, and the remaining 20 percent, or $50 million be used for water and sewer facilities.

"If we do not maintain excellence in education," Dr. Tingelstad added, "We are in trouble. I feel we must opt for support of this additional revenue even in these tight times."

Tingelstad referred to general needs for school facilities statewide based on a comprehensive report made a couple of years ago. The study shows that 40 percent of North Carolina's school buildings were constructed prior to the early '40s, 20 percent during the '40s, '50s and '60s, and the other 40 percent during the school building boom of the '60s.

"Many of the older schools are in sad shape and do not meet safety and education standards," Tingelstad said.

Blinson recalled that the survey of local school facility needs made three years ago shows the need totals $22.7 million for Pitt County and $10.2 million for Greenville. These figures, however, approximate the ideal in school facility construction. Blinson concluded his remarks by saying he feels there is a growing trend on the part of the public to favor "a shift of the burden from property to sales tax."

Approval was given to a proposal to install security systems in the city schools. The equipment is to be installed on a lease-purchase rather than an outright purchase agreement. Also, instead of a permanent installation arrangement, the five sets of equipment will be rotated at random from one school to another.

Blinson said, "The only people who will know where the security systems are installed at any given time will be myself, Bob Stewart (director of buildings and maintenance) and Police Chief Glenn Cannon."

The cost of the security equipment is slightly less than $14,000, which includes the cost of training three school employees to operate, install and re-install the equipment.

Two low-bids for paving projects at two schools were approved. Barrus Construction Co. was low bidder at $4,253.76 for paving at Greenville Middle School, and L.A. Reynolds Construction Co. was low bidder for the South Greenville paving project, at $2,790.80.

The Media Selection Policy which board members have been studying recently was approved. The four-paragraph policy statement includes a stipulation that "The board delegates the responsibility for accomplishing the selection of media materials/books and approving the purchase of such to the superintendent," and also that "The superintendent shall also have the responsibility for developing a procedure whereby this policy can be appropriately implemented in the unit as well as in each school."

The previously proposed special after-hours cleaning crew of three men to perform special cleaning duties in the city schools for a period of four months was approved. The project

Potomac River Survivor Tells Desperate Ordeal

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A survivor of the Air Florida plane crash said today he and another man, who was strapped in his seat and eventually drowned, tried to pass a life ring to a woman who was clinging to the tail section of the Boeing 737 with them.

The survivor, Joseph Stiley, 42, of Alexandria, Va., said he believed the other man was Ted Smolen, 48, of Gaithersburg, Md.

The woman was Priscilla Tirado, 22, of College Park, Md., who survived the crash but lost her husband, Jose, and their two-month-old son, Jason.

Stiley, who has two broken legs, spoke from a wheelchair at a news conference in the lobby of the National Hospital for Orthopaedics and Rehabilitation.

"I think that man and I as a coordinated effort were trying to get that thing to that woman there because clearly she was the one in the worst shape, and she was the one who should get out first as far as I was concerned," Stiley said. "She was holding on to me. She wasn't holding on to much of anything else."

Other rescue accounts have spoken of an unidentified man who repeatedly passed a life ring to others and who gave up his own life. Stiley, however, said he did not see such repeated acts of heroism. He said at one point he asked the man to pass him a yellow lifejacket and the man said he could not because he was strapped in.

Stiley said that in addition to Mrs. Tirado, who was to his right on the outside of the fuselage and clinging to him, there were two women clinging to the fuselage on his left. They were stewardess Kelly Duncan, 23, who was released from the hospital Monday, and Patricia Felch of Herndon, Va., his secretary, who is reported in good condition at Washington Hospital Center.

He said the man he believes was Smolen was clinging to the opposite side of the piece of wreckage, directly in front of him. "There was a yellow lifejacket floating beside him," Stiley said. He said that when he asked the man for the lifejacket, "he said 'I'm strapped in and can't move.'"

Stiley said he talked to the man for "a good 20 minutes" and added that he would not disclose the contents of their conversations except to the man's family. "He was amazingly calm and relatively soft-spoken," Stiley said.

He said he saw a picture of Smolen in the Washington Post and was "almost but not totally positive" that he was the man.

Recalling his own ordeal, Stiley said, "I remember having the water revive me in the first microsecond or so. I told myself 'seatbelt first,'" he said.

He said he was at least partly immersed in the water at the time he unbuckled his seatbelt and was "completely submerged in the water before I was able to get out of the airplane."

Syrian Missiles Fired At Israeli Over Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces fired anti-aircraft missiles at four Israeli reconnaissance jets over eastern Lebanon today, witnesses reported, but there were no reports that any of the planes were hit.

Te four jets flew over the Bekaa Valley, in east central Lebanon near the Syrian border where Syria deployed Soviet-made SAM-6 missiles after an Israeli attack during fighting last year between Syrian and Lebanese Christian forces.

Israel confirmed its warplanes made a "routine reconnaissance flight" over Lebanon, but said it had no reports that missiles were fired.

"All the planes returned safely," said a military command spokesman in Tel Aviv, Israel. "According to the reports of the pilots, no missiles were fired," he said.

The confirmation was the first comment from the military command on persistent reports of flights over Lebanese territory since the cease-fire last July which ended cross-border fighting between Israel and Palestinians in southern Lebanon. The Israeli spokesman refused to say where the patrol was conducted.

Lebanese reporter Ramez Ismail reported from Chtaura that he saw two missiles launched at 11:15 a.m. But it was unclear whether they were fired from the Bekaa Valley or from the Syrian border where other mobile SAM-6 batteries have been stationed.

The Voice of Free Lebanon, the Christian radio station, said three missiles were fired. The report said the planes veered to the west and flew over Beirut, drawing a heavy anti-aircraft barrage from Palestinian guerrilla positions. But again no hits were reported.

Western diplomatic sources have said that the Israeli air force has been avoiding the Bekaa Valley since last July while the United States tried to get Syria to withdraw the missiles, but the Israelis have been making almost daily reconnaissance runs over Beirut and southern Lebanon.

Syria has claimed its missiles have downed eight pilotless Israeli drones, but Israel has admitted the loss of only four since last April.

Syria stationed the SAM-6 anti-aircraft missiles on Lebanese territory for the first time last April 28 after Israeli jets shot down two Syrian helicopters. Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin has repeatedly threatened that his air force would knock out the missiles if Syria did not remove them. But he has not carried out his threat because of the U.S. diplomatic effort to get the missiles removed.

Syria insists the missiles are defensive weapons to protect its 22,000 troops in Lebanon.

MERCHANDISE MIXUP

I ordered two pair of shoes from Lane Bryant in Indianapolis, Ind. Nov. 23. When the order was delivered, I paid $64.93 C.O.D., then opened the package to find a ladies suit. I mailed it back the next day, Dec. 4, 1981, with a letter explaining. When I heard nothing, I wrote again Jan 2. Today I got a letter which made no sense concerning my situation. I want a full refund. Mrs. C.T.

Hotline called Lane Bryant and explained the situation to someone in Customer Service. She said your records show that you had, indeed, returned the incorrect merchandise and she is not sure why the matter was not properly corrected. She called you direct herself and then forwarded a refund and an apology.

Awaits Russian Space Station

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Soviet Union could soon establish a manned space station for spying on Earth, says the former life sciences director for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Dr. Charles A. Berry said Monday that he based his prediction on his knowledge of the Soviet space program.

He said the Soviet space station could be in orbit by the end of March.

"The United States has been on the ground a long time," he said. "The Russians have been flying, flying, flying and have had two six-month missions."

Berry, now president of the National Foundation for Prevention of Disease at Houston, Texas, said he has maintained contacts with Soviets who were involved in space programs, including one high-level source now in the United Nations. He worked on a joint program in the 1970s.

"I know the Soviet Union's goal is to establish an orbital space station manned by six to 10 astronauts," he said. "I think it could come in the first quarter of 1982."

Berry, who was in Omaha to address the Wellness Council of the Midlands, said there are significant advantages in a manned space station compared with an unmanned spy satellite.

From a manned space station, the Soviets would have a surveillance capability far superior to unmanned satellites like those operated by the United States.

He said the Soviet Union also could operate an intercontinental weapons system from a manned satellite.

Lease Quota

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday leased the county-held tobacco quota for the 1982 crop year for a total of $28,138.46 and leased the county-owned farmland for $5,815.

The 42,331-pound tobacco quota was offered for lease in eight 5,000-pound lots and one 2,331-pound segment. The successful bidders and the price per pound of their bid included: Bruce Garris, one lot at 67 cents and two at 66 cents; Robert Earl James, three at 67 cents; James T. Lang, one at 65 cents; and James Little, one lot at 67 cents and 2,331 pounds at 66 cents.

The successful bidder for the cropland was Johnny Harris, who bid $25 per acre for 30 acres adjacent to the Pitt-Greenville Airport which is restricted to low-profile crops such as soy beans, cucumbers or watermelons, and $50 per acre for 82.1 acres at the county farm on the County Home Road, five acres behind Greenville Nursing Home and 14.2 acres adjacent to Pitt Community College.

Last year, with bids for the tobacco poundage running from 57.5 to 59 cents per pound, the total quota rented for a total of $24,612.79, while the land brought in $5,191.62.

The board is scheduled to meet with the Greenville City Council to discuss items of mutual interest Jan. 26 at 6:30 p.m. at the Greenville Country Club.

entails a cost of $7,865.60 for the salaries of the three men for the four-month period, and an additional $2,000 for central support services. The $9,865.60 for the project was approved as budget amendment No. 9 to the current expense fund.

•Two other budget amendments were approved — budget amendment No. 4 to the Capital Outlay Fund in the amount of $6,594.62, representing a decrease in the fund; and budget amendment No. 5 to the Federal Grants Fund. This figure represents a shift in accounting procedures, and is neither an increase nor a decrease.

In other actions, school board members:

•Approved a resolution declaring two pickup trucks (1967 and 1968 models) and one sedan (1973 model) as surplus property authorized for disposal by public sale.

•Designated April 15-16 as make-up dates for the two days (Jan. 13 and 15) of school missed due to inclement weather.

•Approved a trip by ninth grade history students for a visit to Charleston, S.C., May 6-8.

•Approved the concept of implementing a computer based pupil accounting system.

Bob Stewart gave the board a report on the fire that occurred at the Maintenance Department Building last Friday. Stewart noted that the property loss was adequately covered by insurance, and that one of the major problems was the loss of records in the food services offices. In a meeting with state officials, guidance is being provided on reporting procedures needed due to record losses.

Another factor mentioned by Stewart was that due to break-ins in the past, the doors and windows were so heavily secured that firemen's entry efforts were severely hampered.

Hospital Patient Still Unidentified

Pitt County Memorial Hospital is continuing to provide treatment to an unidentified man who was struck by a car on Jan. 9 as he walked down the middle of a highway near Conway in Northampton County.

Buck Sitterson, assistant director at Pitt Memorial, said this morning that the condition of the man, referred to as "John Doe," is stable and he will probably be transferred out of the critical care section into post critical care sometime today or Wednesday.

The black man, described as probably being in his 40s, was unconscious when he was brought to Pitt Memorial after being hit on U.S. 158 east of Conway. No charges were filed against the driver of the car involved, according to the Highway Patrol.

Sitterson said today that the hospital has received no word from the Highway Patrol as to the man's identity.

The Highway Patrol office in Roanoke Rapids reported last week that fingerprints and pictures of the man had been taken in an effort to determine his identity. Sgt. James Powell of the Roanoke Rapids office said today that those fingerprints and pictures have been sent to the State Bureau of Investigation in Raleigh and he has received "nothing back as of yet." He added, "It is a matter of waiting until we get those things identified."

part in making it an even better place in which to live and work," he said this morning.

Noting that his sons are "old enough to take care of my business," McLawhorn said, "I feel like I can devote whatever time is necessary" if elected to the post.

"There are a lot of things I'd like to see done," he emphasized, "but it depends on money ... what's available. Things are so uncertain."

An active Democrat, this is McLawhorn's first attempt to be elected to public office.

Three other men have also filed as candidates for the Ayden-Gritton-Swift Creek seat on the board.

CAP Search Scheduled

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina Civil Air Patrol planned to search the state's mountain areas today for a single-engine airplane that failed to show up in Tennessee, an official said.

Lt. Col. Jim Carr said the plane, with as many as four passengers, took off Monday afternoon from Charlie Brown Airport on the outskirts of Atlanta.

He said a brother of the pilot, Worley M. Glover of Morristown, Tenn., notified authorities when the plane failed to arrive as scheduled in Elizabethton, Tenn.

Carr said the CAP hoped that as many as eight planes and 30 searchers would seek the plane in North Carolina beginning shortly after daybreak. CAP units in Georgia, Tennessee and South Carolina will conduct searches in their states, he said.

"We'll begin early this morning with high-altitude, high-speed flights with electronic locating devices," he said. "All planes are equipped with transmitters that are supposed to give off signals if they hit anything."

If the electronic surveillance fails, a visual search will be ordered if the weather is clear enough, Carr said.

"It was pretty drizzly and misty early this morning," he said in a pre-dawn telephone interview. "We hope things will clear well enough to let us do some hard looking if we need to."

Bikel Released From Hospital

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Actor, author and folk-singer Theodore Bikel has been released from Florida Hospital-Orlando, where he was being treated after collapsing over the weekend, officials said.

Florida Hospital-Orlando officials said Bikel, who was undergoing treatment for exhaustion, was released Monday.

Bikel, 57, collapsed at a cast party following a Saturday night performance in Orlando.

Bldg. Permit Figures Given

Building permits valued at $2,705,154 were issued here during October, according to a monthly report of building activity released by state Labor Commissioner John Brooks.

He said that for the first 10 months of 1981 building permits valued at $19,450,859 were issued in Greenville.

The October total for Greenville, Brooks said, compared with $1,793,039 reported in September and $1,205,371 in August.

In Pitt County, construction authorized during October amounted to $3,320,504, including $589,450 for 17 single-family units, $300,000 for 10 multi-family units, $1,385,672 for eight non-residential units, and $1,045,382 for 64 additions and alterations.

Brooks said permits issued for new single-family homes dropped 50 percent in the state during October, while at the same time average construction cost of a single-family home jumped 10 percent from 1980.

Total building activity authorized in the first 10 months of 1981, covering the four categories reported monthly by the department for the state's largest cities, fell below the comparable period in 1980 by 2.7 percent, said Brooks.

In October alone, total construction declined 26.2 percent from the previous year, he said. All categories were down and estimated value dropped 30.9 percent to $71,196,746 from $103,077,947.

Building values for October and for the first 10 months of the year in several neighboring cities included: Elizabeth City, $134,850; $3,104,925; Goldsboro, $456,669; $7,625,139; Jacksonville, $636,000; $14,821,461; Kingston, $349,000; $7,935,572.

New Bern, $336,822; $8,304,253; Roanoke Rapids, $3,621,388; $16,045,472; Rocky Mount, $787,079; $16,096,312; Tarboro, $206,300; $3,643,700; and Wilson, $337,290; $10,511,758.

For the third time in 1981, Raleigh led the 44 reporting cities in October in value of construction authorized, with $12,015,247.

Association To Meet Thursday

The Association for Retarded Citizens/Pitt County will hold its monthly meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday at Wahl-Coates School here.

Sandi Hall, newly installed president for 1982, said planning goals, objectives and strategies for 1982 will be discussed.

Other officers are Lana Grooms, vice president; Ann Clark, treasurer, and members of the board: Buck Bunch, Joy Grubbs, Ellen Hill, Cathy Karachun, Bill Martin, Hal Shigley and Bill Twine.

Compulsory Religion Classes Ordered In Singapore Schools

By KENNETH L. WHITING Associated Press Writer SINGAPORE (AP) — The government is ordering schools to replace civics and current affairs lessons with compulsory religion classes to save this prosperous island republic from becoming "a nation of thieves."

Goh Keng Swee, deputy prime minister and education minister, said in a weekend interview that children "will be isolated from religious classes" only if their parents appeal to the Education Ministry.

The "religious knowledge" class for 12- and 13-year-olds will teach Christianity, Islam, Buddhism or Hinduism.

Those without a religion of their own or who do not wish to concentrate on a specific faith will have to do a general study of world religions.

About 76 percent of Singapore's 2.4 million people are ethnic Chinese. There are Indian and Malay minorities.

Under the plan, Bible and Buddhist studies would be taught in English and Chinese. Hindu classes would be in English only and Islamic studies would be offered only in Malay.

"If any parent does not want religious education of any kind, he can appeal to the ministry and the child will be isolated from religious classes. The appeal will be heard ... by me personally," Goh said.

Goh said the idea of using religion lessons to improve public morality originated when he was in charge of Singapore's army.

Wallets and watches disappeared if left unattended in army camps for more than 10 seconds, he said.

"So one day, I told the prime minister that the schools are turning out a nation of thieves and that something must be done about this in our education system. He said that they start learning how to steal while in school," Goh said.

The Rev. Robert Balhetchet, a Roman Catholic priest involved in a limited, secular moral education program in schools, said compulsory religion classes would be self-defeating because religion can only change behavior of those who live according to its doctrines.

Since the ministry insists that compulsory religion lessons are not to convert students, Balhetchet said, "One is then ruling out the very process which would and should bring about the intended and desired change..."

Mission schools are expected to start religious classes in the current term, and public schools must have the compulsory studies phased in no later than 1984; a ministry spokesman said.

Academy Of Science Is Balking Over Secrecy

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — The National Academy of Sciences will no longer distribute U.S. State Department regulations governing the activities of Soviet-bloc scientists visiting American universities, the organization's president says.

Academy President Dr. Frank Press announced the decision Monday in Washington after Stanford University officials said they would ignore the regulations during a spring visit by Soviet robot engineering scientist Dr. Nikolai V. Umnov.

Under the regulations, Stanford would be required to bar Umnov from access to information about walking robot research at Stanford. He would also be forbidden to visit local industries. He would be allowed to discuss only published information.

Stanford officials said last week they could not accept the restrictions, refusing to be responsible for policing Umnov's activities. They said Stanford does not conduct classified research and that its laboratories are open.

Before the State Department can issue a visa to researchers from Communist bloc nations, it must seek a "waiver of inadmissibility" from the attorney general's office, an academy spokesman said.

The waiver can be issued only when the academy has received assurances from the American host of the visitor that restrictions are acceptable, the spokesman said.

Press said the restrictions interfered with the flow of research information unrelated to national security. He said that free discussion of research is "the daily interaction of any laboratory."

Press said he would bring the issue up for a final policy decision at the academy's governing council meeting in late February.

The regulations have resulted in controversy among American academics, who contend the rules abridge academic freedom for developing international research contacts. On the other hand, federal officials claim valuable information leaks from the United States to potential enemies.

The academy spokesman said that other universities have agreed to Umnov's visit, including the University of Wisconsin, Ohio State and Auburn University.

At Wisconsin, Associate Dean Camden A. Coberly of the School of Engineering told a reporter for the San Francisco Chronicle that his institution would not try to control Umnov's visit.

At Auburn, Paul F. Parks, dean of engineering, said Professor William H. Bussell, Umnov's host, felt it would "be appropriate to accept the conditions set by the government."

A Possibility Woman Slain

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro police said Monday they are investigating the possibility that an 81-year-old woman, whose body was found in her burning home Friday, was murdered.

The woman, Theresa Osborne, was initially listed as a fire victim.

Capt. B.L. Thomas said an investigation is under way to determine how the retired school teacher died.

Dr. John Butts, an associate in the state's medical examiner's lab at Chapel Hill who came to Greensboro Monday to assist police, said the victim "did not die as a result of the fire."

Butts refused to release any further findings in the autopsy, but he did say that the case "is not as neat and clean as it looked."

An investigator said the woman may have been beaten and possibly strangled, and then the house set on fire.

Carter And Ford Stumping Again

ATLANTA (AP) — Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford are back on the stump again, but this time in a common cause: ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

The two former presidents, who battled each other for the White House in 1976, said Monday in a statement issued by Carter's office that they have "united in the hope that legislators in unrattified states will ... take positive action on this amendment."

The statement also said that former first ladies Rosalynn Carter and Betty Ford, both supporters of the amendment, would continue to play an active role in working for its ratification.

The statement said Ford hopes citizens will press elected officials to support the amendment, which must be ratified by 38 states by June 30 to become part of the constitution.

Thirty-five states have ratified the amendment, but five states have rescinded approval. The rescissions have been upheld by a federal judge, but his ruling is under appeal.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

The nappy news in sweatering for '82 is that the classics are back — stronger than ever — but with the use of new yarn textures to add an up-to-the-minute excitement.

A perfect example is this cloud-soft pullover featuring two types of cable stitchery with your choice of a snugly high neck or a turned down crew. The yarn is a fluffy blend of wool, mohair and acrylic, available with or without confetti-like flecks of color. The gauge is five stitches per inch and directions are written for small (8-10), medium (12-14) or large (16-18).

To obtain directions for making the cloudspun cabled pullover, send your request for Leaflet No. B-994 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler ("The Daily Reflector"), P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29582.

Or you may order Kit No. KB-994 by sending a check or money order for $33.50 for small, $37 for medium or $40.50 for large to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes instructions and your choice of Bernat Cloudspun or Cloudspun Fleck yarn, with shipping charges included. Please specify your choice of the following colors: camel, natural (winter white), pastel yellow, green, peach or lavender in Cloudspun; or in Cloudspun Fleck colors of ivory, walnut or marsh heather (a heathery shade of the palest mauve). Each of these last three has flecks of gold, copper, slate and brown.

Last week, I shared with you the simplest technique for finishing edges on plastic canvas needlepoint items ... the basic overcasting stitch. As promised, here are directions for more involved edgings.

MOHAIR-BLEND. .sweater is stitchery. The sweater has a designed using two types of cable versatile neckline.

In working either of the edgings, you always bring the needle up through a hole from the underside and then take the needle back to the underside to start the next stitch.

The first of these, I call Terry's Picot edging as it was developed (to the best of my knowledge) by one of my associates, Terry Williams. It's my guess that Terry discovered it by mistake while trying to work the binding stitch, as that is the way through which most new needlecraft ideas are developed.

To work Terry's Stitch, bring the needle up in one of the edge holes; take the yarn to the back and bring the needle up again two holes below (skipping one hole). Next bring the needle up in the skipped hole. Now skip over the next two holes — one of which has a stitch in it and one of which is empty — and bring the needle up in the next hole. Repeat these last two steps all around the edges, taking extra stitches as needed in the corners.

This edging, with a picot effect, is really quite easy and can be readily mastered with just a little practice even by the beginner. The Binding Stitch that follows is a bit more involved and is recommended for the more advanced stitcher. Either can be worked on plastic canvas over a single edge or can be used to join two edges together. When joining, you will be working over two thicknesses held together with holes of adjoining pieces matching and with right sides facing out.

To work the Binding Stitch, bring the needle up in each of the first three holes. Then go back to the first hole and bring the needle up through it again. Next, bring the needle up in the first empty hole below the stitches already taken; then skipping over the last two stitches, bring the needle up in the stitch made just before these last two stitches. Keep repeating the steps given in the last sentence around all edges.

This Binding Stitch gives a raised plaited effect that lends a very professional finishing touch to needlepoint on either traditional or plastic canvas. The "plait" can be made longer by working one or two extra stitches before stepping back, if desired.

I have never been able to adequately describe just how you turn the corners with this stitch, nor have I seen the method described in any book. This is one of the reasons I do not recommend this stitch for beginners, as each person must find his or her own way of turning corners through practice, trial and error. Perhaps one of my readers will have a good description of the technique of turning corners with the binding stitch and will share it with us.

(Because of the large volume of mail she receives, Pat is unable to answer your letters personally. However, she welcomes all questions and hints and will use those of general interest in the column whenever possible.)

AP Food Editor

Because broccoli is in good supply now, and because these days there are food processors in a good many kitchens to do the tedious jobs of slicing and pureeing, I was prompted to prepare the vegetable in an innovative way. My recipe, Broccoli Mimosa, follows.

Although the recipe gives directions for serving the broccoli hot, we've also served it cold. If you want to follow suit, omit the butter from the broccoli puree and chill both the puree and florets. Arrange them as suggested in the recipe and serve as a salad. With it pass a vinaigrette sauce — olive oil, wine vinegar, salt, pepper and Dijon mustard blended together in proportions you prefer.

BROCCOLI MIMOSA

- 1 small bunch broccoli (about 1 pound)
- 2 tablespoons butter
- Salt and pepper to taste
- 1 hard-cooked egg

Remove any leaves from the broccoli. Cut the florets from the broccoli, leaving about 1/2 to 1 inch of the thin stem on each; rinse in cold water.

With a swivel-blade vegetable peeler, pare the outer fibrous covering from the thick broccoli stalks up to the thin top stems; slice thin crosswise in a food processor.

Cook the florets and sliced broccoli together in a small amount of boiling water just until tender-crisp and still a bright green — 3 or 4 minutes; drain. Or, if desired, steam the broccoli florets and sliced broccoli together in a steamer. Remove the florets and keep warm — there will be about 1 1/2 cups.

In a food processor with the metal blade, process the sliced broccoli until pureed — there will be about 1 scant cup. In a small saucepan melt the butter; add the broccoli puree and reheat, adding the salt and pepper; mound on a serving dish and surround with the florets, tucking their stems under the puree. Force the egg through a medium-mesh sieve and sprinkle over the broccoli puree.

Makes 4 servings.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

After years of being married to a man who sits around all day Sunday and watches animal documentaries, I have gotten used to people giving animals human emotions.

I've heard Marlin Perkins tell when an alligator is "bored." William Conrad describe an elephant plowing through an entire village as "playful" and Lorne Greene diagnose a penguin who won't go into the water as "crabby and sluggish."

I don't know how they do it. I'm probably the only person in the world who can't tell when a dog is smiling. I answered the phone once wearing only a hair dryer and I thought I heard a giggle, but I couldn't be sure.

That's why I was interested to read a story about dogs whose masters were into running. You see 'em all over the place ... joggers flapping along, five, ten miles a day and beside them a ball of fur on a leash panting to keep up.

How do they know dogs enjoy running? Isn't it possible some dogs are born who don't like to chase cars, return sticks or bite mailmen? Maybe they just didn't know how to tell you.

Ironically, vets say dogs develop the same problems as runners: sore feet, shin splints, heat prostration, lacerated foot pads, arthritic hip conditions and heart problems. They even suffer from attacks from other dogs. Besides that, dogs don't sweat like people. (Did you ever see a deodorant for dogs?)

I watched a marathon once at San Diego where a runner came in with his dog on the leash. Both had gone over 26 miles of a grueling course. Both had hit the wall. Both had drawn from their reserves for every bit of energy they possessed to keep their bodies moving.

The one in the shorts with two legs got a T-shirt and a can of beer. The one in the fur coat with four legs wandered around confused with a tree wish.

There must be a way for non-running dogs to let you know if they want to run or not. Luckily, we have a dog that communicates. If you say to him, "C'mon, boy, we're going running!" he crawls under the dryer with a Marguerita and looks at you with a disgusted look that says, "I'm not moving until you call a cab."

He could be the smartest dog in the world. Or he could have picked up that trick from me.

There is nothing new about the fascination of travel. A Greek named Herodotus knew its excitement as long as 2300 years ago and wrote down the story of his wanderings for you to read. However, it has only been since World War II that the great sights of our globe have become available to such a large number of people. What brought travel within reach of the workday world? For one thing, the two wars acquainted a vast number of Americans with Europe, Asia, the Pacific and other far away places. For another, flying has accustomed us to a contempt for distance. Important as well was the development of tourist class for ship travel, the inauguration of the short cruises and air tour packages.

Travel is fascinating, but if you have to travel a lot for business, some of the thrill wears off. Then you just want the kind of complete and efficient service that we offer at QUIXOTE TRAVELS INC. Dear Abby

Table Manners Cause Tension

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My parents are loving, kindhearted people in their 60s, but they have the worst table manners I have ever seen.

Other family members have hinted to them over the years with no success. Now we either exclude them from dinners or make sure we surround them with people who know what to expect.

My husband and I and our two small children drive 300 miles a couple of times a year to visit them. We were there for Thanksgiving dinner, and my father once again filled his mouth so full of food his cheeks were bulging, then he started to talk. Abby, I couldn't understand a word he was saying, so I asked him to please not talk with food in his mouth. He got so angry he refused to speak to me the rest of the visit. When we left there was a lot of tension. It spoiled the whole trip for me.

I feel so bad. I wasn't mean or disrespectful, Abby, I just told him not to talk with his mouth full. Was I wrong to say anything? Should adult children never correct their parents — no matter what? We try to teach our youngsters proper table manners, and parents like mine really make it tough.

HEAVYHEARTED

DEAR HEAVY: Some parents accept criticism gracefully, and some do not. Unfortunately yours do not, so if you want to keep the peace, grit your teeth and hold your tongue.

DEAR ABBY: I just had to write after reading the letter from "Grampa," who mentioned your suggestion for the perfect gift to give older relatives: "Offer to do something for them that they can't do for themselves. For example: Furniture moved, windows and doors repaired, pictures and mirrors hung, trees and bushes planted, etc."

Last Christmas I took your advice and gave my 70-year-old mother, who has enough money to get herself whatever she might (reasonably) want, a gift of "cleaning up" her cluttered house. Well, it's been 12 months and my gift has yet to be redeemed.

Why? It's hard to catch my mother at home long enough to begin the job. Between her two part-time jobs (she counsels recovering alcoholics), her skiing trips to Aspen, her rafting down the Colorado River and her trips to various other places, we've yet to get together. She has to be there. I'd never tackle 25 years of accumulation myself. So what do I do now?

DARLENE IN L.A.

DEAR DARLENE: Thank God for a healthy, active mother and pray that you've inherited some of her energetic genes.

DEAR ABBY: It's too late for this year, but I hope you will remind your readers to have a heart next year and refrain from sending candy, fruitcake, nuts and home-baked goodies to friends they know are trying to watch their calories.

I was doing just great until all these tempting no-nos arrived, then I blew my diet like you wouldn't believe!

Abby, please print this, and don't suggest we use a little willpower. If we had willpower, we wouldn't be in the shape we're in.

A Good Use Of Schools

The Greenville Community Schools Program last Tuesday night opened a section of Third Street Elementary School to provide a place to sleep for anyone who needed it.

Carolyn Ferebee, director, said the idea was to furnish a warm place for anyone who might not have heat in the home.

Space was provided in the cafeteria area, although there were no plans to provide food for those who might come. Those using the service were also to bring their own blankets and other bedding since the school system does not have such supplies.

School personnel were to be on hand to supervise while the project was underway.

It was emphasized that this is not a winter long arrangement; rather the plan would be implemented only when weather is extremely cold.

Although no one showed up, it seems like a good arrangement and such facilities have been used in past disasters. It is not rare for heating plants or power to fail during bitter cold weather. Then entire families are left with cold homes. For some, a place like the space provided at Third Street School would be the only refuge. It all adds up to good supplemental use of school property.

TOOK THE WORDS RIGHT OUT OF OUR MOUTHS!

The Vatican vs. Schmidt

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Behind the pope's anguished appeal Jan. 10 that "all men of good will" join in preventing his native Poland from being "suffocated" is the Vatican's fear that Soviet-ordered liquidation of Solidarity is succeeding partly because some Western countries — particularly West Germany — remain remarkably passive.

Neither John Paul II nor the ruling Curia of the Catholic Church would ever state such a proposition publicly. But European leaders with access to the Vatican say privately that the highest leadership of the Church is receiving agonized complaints from Polish Catholics against West German "passivity."

Those complaints will now escalate in the wake of West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's extraordinary statement Jan. 12 that his country's "main interest" in the Polish tragedy is to "maintain detente."

Traditionally, Vatican policy in dealing with the acute contradiction of communist rule in the world's most Catholic country has the Soviet-Western Europe gas pipeline, Schmidt insists on viewing Poland mainly through the tunnel vision of divided Germany. Ridiculing the cost to West Germany of the anti-Soviet sanctions he refuses to impose, Schmidt told ABC's David Brinkley Jan. 10 that "of much greater importance is the consideration of the fate of 17 million Germans living within the Soviet area" in East Germany.

That sentiment has meager support in the Vatican and the White House, where there is known to be quiet talk that the Polish crisis may give the West a chance to raise the Yalta issue and the Brezhnev Doctrine. The 15 Yalta agreement gave the Soviet Union special rights in Eastern Europe, but based on free elections that never were held; the Brezhnev Doctrine proclaimed Soviet hegemony over all Eastern Europe. Similarly, Vatican powers feel that the West has not sufficiently exploited Soviet violations of the Helsinki Accords as pressure point against Moscow.

Although President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig have labored hard to form an anti-Soviet consensus with some cutting edge, the prospect of challenging Yalta or the Brezhnev Doctrine is weakened without the support of NATO's most powerful European member: Schmidt's West Germany.

Moreover, Schmidt's appraisal of Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski as a Polish patriot in his Jan. 2 interview with James Reston of The New York Times clashes with the view at the Vatican. The highest Church leaders now fear that "the soul of Poland" is being crushed; that the suppression is getting harsher; that Walesa, in confinement ever since the Dec. 13 Soviet-sponsored crackdown, may already have been subjected to brainwashing, possibly through chemical treatment.

But neither the Curia nor the pope himself can wage the political battle of anti-Soviet pressure that the Vatican quietly discusses in the sanctity of St. Peter's. Only the Western powers can do that. And so long as Helmut Schmidt and West Germany pursue their self-centered goal of detente even at the price of another mortal blow to the Poland ripped apart by Germany and the Soviet Union in 1939, the West is divided and crippled.

We Are Riding Out Recession

Pitt County is weathering the current economic conditions fairly well if we can judge by the employment rate.

The county had a total of 45,090 people in the work force, according to the Employment Security Commission, as of November, 1981. There were 2,790 unemployed for an unemployment rate of 6.2 percent. Greene County had a remarkable record. The labor force was 8,050 with only 330 unemployed for an unemployment rate of 4.1 percent.

We aren't doing too badly in view of the high unemployment in some areas of the nation.

THIS AFTERNOON

Little Federalism

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — One thing which President Ronald Reagan is doing wins plaudits from those who have long insisted that the federal government is usurping the rights and duties of state local governments.

But that very action is having a reaction at the state level. State legislatures are increasing in cost and activity.

There is a steady erosion of the centralized bureaucracy in Washington. Hundreds of categorical grant programs which have kept thousands of agency people busy dreaming up, writing, and reading grant and program proposals for spending millions of dollars are being dumped. Instead, lump sums of money are being passed back to be split up and used as state and local governments see fit.

The power struggle over who controls that money is far from over.

Chief representatives of county and municipal governments have taken the occasion to praise the reversal, and to urge their colleagues to embrace the responsibilities and freedoms which the change means.

While many observers have felt the change will reduce the cost and the amount of interference, they reckon without a clear idea of what is actually happening both in North Carolina and elsewhere across the nation.

Little Congress Unintentionally, perhaps, President Reagan has created a situation which is producing "Little Federalism" in dozens of state-houses.

He may be remembered as the President who brought about state legislatures modeled after the U.S. Congress: strong on longevity and seniority; heavy with staff; meeting practically fulltime to cope with the increased burden and to keep close watch on expanded state activities resulting from the decreased federal role; and, in the process, producing entrenched legislative leaders who are content to remain in the relatively obscure and comfortable legislative posts even while wielding powerful influence and control over state government.

The Reagan impetus has only speeded up, in this state, a trend already well underway toward a General Assembly holding longer sessions each year, led by increasingly powerful politicians; and spending at a pace never before seen.

In less than 10 years the budget of the North Carolina General Assembly has more than tripled; from slightly over $3 million to nearly $12 million per year. As a percentage of the total state budget, the General Assembly share has more than doubled.

More Space Legislators, after first denying their intentions, have now virtually taken over a new downtown office building costing more than $12 million to build and furnish. At first legislative leaders claimed the new building would be a regular state office building housing agencies of government, but providing limited additional space for some legislative functions. The reverse is true.

At least the early idea of a "Hall of Governors" in the main lobby featuring statuary and paintings of state leaders has been shelved, at least for now.

Until occupying the present State Legislative Building in 1963, legislators met in the State Capitol. A secretarial pool, a few clerks, and the 170 members brought the total payroll to fewer than 200.

In the State Legislative Building, each member got an office and each committee chairman got a secretary. Then senior members got secretaries and committee chairmen got staff aides. Then everybody got a secretary but the offices were too small. Then added were bill drafters, lawyers, fiscal analysts, errand runners, janitors, security police....

Today more than 650 employees are on the payroll costing over $13,000 daily when the assembly is not in session. The cost in session is $35,000.

With another building to fill, no doubt the General Assembly of North Carolina will continue to be the fastest growing of all state agencies.

Sacrifice Of Principle

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration struck a blow for freedom on a recent Friday — freedom of religion, freedom of thought and freedom of association — in its summary revocation of a pernicious ruling of the Internal Revenue Service.

Four days later, the president took it all back.

Decision No. 1 evoked loud howls of outrage from leading liberals and blacks — so loud that Mr. Reagan uncharacteristically sacrificed principle to politics. He announced decision No. 2.

The effect of decision No. 1 would have been to restore tax exemption to various private schools and colleges. The effect of decision No. 2 will be to put those institutions back in jeopardy.

By way of background: For many years the Internal Revenue Code has contained a section known as 501 (c) (3). The language would seem to most of us too clear to require judicial interpretation. The section exempts from federal taxation any institution "organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, testing for public safety, literary, or educational purposes."

Notice that the sentence is in the disjunctive. That penultimate "or" is a key word. An organization that qualifies under any one of the six purposes is clearly entitled to take advantage of the exemption — and thousands of churches, community chests, non-profit laboratories, libraries and educational institutions have obtained appropriate certificates.

But 12 years ago the IRS propounded a bizarre and ominous ruling. Henceforth, the word "charitable" was to be controlling. Without a shred of statutory authority, the IRS rewrote the law in the conjunctive: To be exempt, an organization must be both charitable and also religious, or charitable and also educational, or charitable and also literary.

The IRS then went on to define "charitable" in terms of the "public policies" of the United States. The third step was to declare racial discrimination in violation of public policy. As night follows day, the fourth step was to revoke the exemption certificate of any institution that the IRS found guilty of discrimination.

The pending matter of Bob Jones University provides a specific example. The Greenville, S.C. institution, founded in 1927, is a pervasively religious establishment. Nevertheless, the IRS revoked its certificate. The university sued for relief. A trial court found that Bob Jones "is dedicated to the teaching and propagation of its fundamental religious beliefs." Every course is taught according to the Bible. Prayer is a constant practice. Every faculty member must be "born again." Religious disciplinary rules govern "almost every facet of a student's life."

One of the university's religious beliefs is that the Bible forbids interracial marriage. Such a religious belief, ruled the IRS, is contrary to "public policy." Therefore, though the university was plainly both "religious" and "educational," it was not also "charitable." End of tax exemption. The case is now before the Supreme Court.

What puzzles me is how my liberal friends could defend the conduct of the IRS and oppose last week's

Other Editors Say It's About Time

(Mount Airy News)

Governor Jim Hunt in a news conference last week announced a series of actions the state will be taking to insure that a balanced budget is maintained.

The governor's decision to take action was prompted by revised economic forecasts which now predict a much longer and deeper recession.

In a news release from his office, the governor states that the fiscal picture in North Carolina has not reached crisis proportions, but that it would be shortsighted to delay reductions in state spending.

The actions Hunt outlines are as follow: A reduction in the quarterly allotments of operating funds for state agencies to 95 percent of the authorized amount. It will be the responsibility of individual cabinet secretaries and department heads to determine how agency budgets are to be adjusted in response to this reduction;

Fewer exceptions to the freeze on hiring, with vacancies being filled for only the most ESSENTIAL positions; Severe restrictions on travel, especially trips to meetings, conferences and conventions;

In addition, cabinet secretaries and Council of State members will be asked to selectively restrict the granting of merit pay raises, with such raises going only to the most deserving state employees.

Every single one of these items represent areas where spending should have been curtailed, not just to meet the budget, but as plain and simple good management policies and to keep the growth of government from continuing to soar. All expenditures should be "essential" when taxpayers are called upon to pay the bill.

Because none of these actions are earth-shattering, we suspect the people of North Carolina will feel little ill effects from the cuts and the only thing to suffer will be the rate of growth of government figures for the state.

Strength For Today

PRAYING IN THE DAYLIGHT

A mother had great difficulty getting her little boy to say his prayers in the morning. He said them at night without question, but in the morning he demurred.

"Why do you say your prayers so nicely at night," the mother asked, "and then in the morning make such a fuss about it?"

"Oh," replied the boy, "we need God's help when it is dark, but any smart fellow can take care of himself in the daylight."

Children have a way of blurring out important truths which adults try to hide. Many a grown-up prays on exactly the same principle as this youngster did, yet he would never admit it to himself or anyone else. Secretly he feels able to take care of himself under most circumstances. It is only when the sky darkens and the storm begins to lash against the house built upon the sand, that he gets down on his knees and pleads piteously with God. — Elisha Douglass

Already Eye End To Recession

By JOHN CUNNIFF AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Two weeks ago when the National Bureau of Economic Research proclaimed that "the U.S. economy is currently undergoing a recession," most people already were looking for the recovery.

To automakers, homebuilders and the unemployed, to name just a few of the affected parties, the obvious need not be underscored. Instead, in the fine American tradition, it was better to put the bad behind. "We're loaded for bear," said F. James McDonald, General Motors president. According to him, the nation's biggest manufacturer was ready to take full advantage of a rebound in car and truck sales.

Jack Carlson, executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, was almost as enthusiastic. He declared the worst was over for housing. Interest rates will fall through spring, he declared.

There was less enthusiasm among the unemployed, but labor and business economists were widely quoted as looking for an increase in employment, slow though it might be, as the economy recovered in the second half.

Was it whistling in the dark? Hard to say — but there was a quality to the sound that reminded you of the time when you were a kid and you had to walk right through the toughest part of town in order to get home.

GM, for example, might be loaded for bear but it is the Japanese that they and other domestic manufacturers, have to deal with, and everyone in Detroit knows it. Chrysler has distributed a pamphlet that begins with the stark admission that "the Japanese can place a car in the United States for about $1,800 less than a U.S. manufacturer."

Equally shocking is another admission. "No action by Chrysler or any other U.S. manufacturer can offset the additional permanent tax advantage which results from Japanese government policy," it states.

In other words, the U.S. manufacturers are not able to compete in pricing, and they won't be unless government intervenes. "No U.S. manufacturer," says Chrysler, "will be able to overcome Japan's clear advantage as long as U.S. government policy allows it to persist."

It concedes that $600 is accounted for by poorer productivity, and $550-because of wages, fringes and work rules. But $650 of the difference, Chrysler contends, comes from the tax differential between the United States and Japan. It claims that taxes on the average U.S. vehicle are about $2,500, on a Japanese vehicle about $1,850.

The problems of housing might be as formidable, and Jack Carlson's optimism, though genuine, may also be a rather thin veneer covering a core of hopes and fears. A fear of interest rates, to name one.

"If the Federal Reserve Board maintains its tight credit stance, interest rates could rise again during the second half of 1982, and the housing recovery would be jeopardized," he admits. Endangered, that is, even before it was convincingly under way.

But interest rates are only one problem. Will financing be available at all? Will people be able to afford the prices? Will those prices continue to rise? You could fill an empty cellar hole with the list.

One of the difficulties for housing is unemployment. So sharp was its rise that some published forecasts were wrong a week after they were issued. At least 16.1 million Americans have been hurt directly by job cut-backs: 9.5 million unemployed, 5.4 million working only part-time, and 1.2 million so discouraged they no longer look. Not counting their families, that's 7 percent of the entire population.

Many of them sit and wait for jobs that, for a number of reasons, won't be there when the economy begins expanding again. One reason is that some industries, automobiles perhaps among them, may grow more slowly in the future. And automation most likely will play a role too.

Summing up, there's no shortage problems and threats, but that isn't unusual. What may be of significance is that some of the problems seem not to be drawing the attention needed to begin dealing with them.

There's the problem of economy itself. While the president of GM, the head of the Realtors and millions of unemployed are looking for a recovery later this year little is said about the recovery's strength.

It might not be extensive. Jack Lavery, Merrill Lynch chief economist, suggested it last Friday. "It is our view," he said, "that renewed weakness in the economy is in prospect in the first half of 1983..."

To Increase Protection

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer
PARIS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Evan Griffith Galbraith and his aides are studying special measures to protect U.S. officials in France following the assassination of an assistant military attache on Galbraith's staff, Lt. Col. Charles Robert Ray.

Security was increased for senior members of the Paris embassy staff two months ago after Charge d'Affaires Christian Chapman escaped an assassination attempt. But no special protection was ordered for lower-ranking officials, Galbraith said, because it was believed only the upper echelon were likely targets.

President Francois Mitterand and Premier Pierre Mauroy promised an intensive hunt for the lone gunman who shot and killed the 43-year-old army officer Monday and escaped on foot in morning rush hour traffic. They offered increased protection for the embassy staff, and Galbraith said the security situation was being reassessed.

A woman who saw the shooting in front of Ray's apartment house said the killer was short, with long hair, dressed in casual clothes. Galbraith said he was "probably a professional and undoubtedly an experienced killer."

A foreign news agency in Beirut, Lebanon, said it received a handwritten statement in barely legible Arabic claiming the Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Faction was responsible for the murder. Diplomats in the Lebanese capital said they had never heard of the group.

The statement said the United States was "the head of the Zionist-reactionaryfascist alliance in the region," and that "Reagan and his administration and their agents in the area are out to defeat and slaughter us."

Police said the shooting was similar to the attack last Nov. 18 on Chapman, the acting head of the embassy before Galbraith's arrival. Each American was walking from his apartment house to his car to go to work. Each attack was made with a 7.65mm pistol. And each time the gunman disappeared into the morning stream of workers.

There was one major difference, however. Ray's killer fired at close range, killing him with one shot in the back of the head. Chapman's assailant opened fire from farther away, and the American dived behind his car and was not hurt.

In Washington, President Reagan said Ray "gave his life in the line of duty as surely as if he had fallen in battle."

"Our hearts go out to his family in their bereavement, and the wanton act of his murderers reinforces our determination to stamp out international terrorism and prevent similar tragedies in the future," the president said.

Hours after the shooting, the French took extraordinary precautions at Orly Airport for the departure of U.S. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who flew to New York after attending a meeting of Western finance ministers.

While police sharpshooters crouched on the roof of the terminal, security squads ordered the other 100 passengers off the Pan Am jetliner and searched the plane and the baggage. Nothing suspicious was found.

Renter Loan Is Harder To Get

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer

Many North Carolina loan company officials, who say new federal bankruptcy laws have made their business riskier, are making it tougher for people who don't own a house to get a loan.

Some lenders, including Beneficial Finance Co. and Associates Corp. of North America, said Monday they are refusing loans to renters; others, like Household Finance Corp., said they are tightening standards.

Larry Hartsell, a spokesman for Beneficial in Charlotte, said North Carolina allows high enough interest rates that lenders in North Carolina are still willing to deal with renters — if they put up collateral like an automobile.

aborted decision No. 1. The Constitution forbids Congress to make any law abridging the freedom of religion. The Constitution also forbids Congress to make any law respecting an establishment of religion. Are we to understand that there is some minimum floor of acceptable church doctrine — acceptable to the IRS — to which every church must subscribe or else suffer taxation?

In its decision No. 1, the Reagan administration at first sought to end this dangerous and unconstitutional imposition upon personal freedom. By decision No. 2, Mr. Reagan would restore this abuse of bureaucratic power.

True enough, because Section 501 (c) (3) means life or death to the affected institutions, decision No. 1 would have given new life to some of the South's "segregation academies." So what? In the sum total of religious and educational activity in our nation, such academies are few and insignificant. The principle of freedom is large. By his politically motivated decision No. 2, Mr. Reagan tossed that principle aside.

"The reason for this is the new bankruptcy laws," he said. "Taking an unsecured borrower to bankruptcy court is like waving goodbye to your money."

He said the new bankruptcy laws, which allow higher exemptions on personal property for people found in default on a loan, means many renters will have a tougher time in North Carolina getting consumer loans.

"I'm sorry for them. That's been my bread and butter for the past 15 years. They made up about 50 percent of our clients. When you cut your clientele by 50 percent, that's a big swipe out," Hartsell said. He said 35 percent of the loans the company has on its books is for renters. He said he expects that figure to decline to 25 percent by the end of the year.

Pat Wright, a spokesman for Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. in Winston-Salem, said the number of loans his bank grants to renters has not declined, but he said the revised bankruptcy laws are continuing to create havoc with the banking industry.

"We've had problems with the bankruptcy laws and something has to be done. We're trying to do a better job of screening applicants ... but we're lending money like always to anybody who qualifies," he said.

Byron Harnett, senior vice president in charge of First Union National Bank's consumer banking group, said home ownership is only one factor the bank considers in making loans.

"A lot of people who rent have on deposit good sums of money. We'd be crazy not to loan our customers money," he said.

However, he said home ownership, while not singled out as a major factor for collateral purposes, is considered an important indicator of another factor — general stability.

"It's a factor in granting loans. The way we look at it, we look at the person's stability, and, in general, homeowners are more stable and more tied down than a person who rents," he said.

Homemade Rocket Hit French Reactor Plant

LYON, France (AP) — One of five homemade rockets fired at the construction site of France's first full-scale nuclear breeder reactor plant hit the main building, but caused only a minor hole in a concrete wall, officials said today.

No one claimed responsibility for the late night attack Monday on the controversial Creys-Malville plant, 28 miles east of Lyon.

Police found the rocket-launching tube on the banks of the Rhone River opposite the plant this morning.

The breeder reactor, the first industrial-scale plant developed from a French prototype, is not due to go into service for two years. All the major construction, including a three-layer protection for the reactor itself, has been completed and work is now devoted to the detailed installations.

The reactor has not yet been charged.

This morning, police reported an anonymous bomb warning to a Lyon office building which houses many of the companies involved in building the reactor. No device was found.

The site was the scene of a violent anti-nuclear demonstration by some 30,000 protesters in August 1977. One French demonstrator was killed by the explosion of a police concussion grenade.

The breeder reactor enables a reactor to produce power and convert a uranium outer layer into plutonium faster than it consumes plutonium in its core.

The Creys-Malville plant has been designed to withstand a direct crash by a heavy aircraft. Internally, the reactor housing can withstand a "missile" such as a turbine blade shearing off the electricity generators.

Plant officials said the rocket penetrated through four inches of a 40-inch-thick concrete wall.

France has the world's most ambitious nuclear power program with plans to produce about half its electricity requirements by nuclear plants by 1985, despite some cuts in the program by the new Socialist government.

There were two minor bomb attacks on other nuclear plants in 1975.

Judge Gives Boys Custody Of House

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — A judge, citing the courts' responsibility to children of divorced parents, gave three Interlochen boys custody of their parents' house.

Grand Traverse County Circuit Judge Charles M. Forster granted a divorce to Allan and Cheryl Church on Jan. 5, and ordered that each live with the children on alternate months.

The boys — David, 15, Donald, 13, and Dale, 11 — will remain in the home in their small community just west of Traverse City, while their parents move in and out and pay the bills.

"It's a natural situation," Forster said Monday. "Both parents testified that the other was a good parent. And they said the children loved each other. The only dispute was between the two of them."

"This wouldn't work all the time, but in this case, it's ideal because his parents live virtually next door and her parents are only a mile or two away," Forster said.

"The kids love it," said Church, a 42-year-old electrician, who is spending this month at his parents' home after 17 years of marriage. "They don't have to change schools or change friends, and they can come and visit me after school."

Mrs. Church, a 37-year-old secretary, said the judge's intent was "to award the children custody of the parents, and it's the best thing that could have happened."

"This way, no one loses," said Mrs. Church, who is spending this month with the children.

The three children all say they are happy about the decision.

"When my dad told me about it, I couldn't believe it," Donald said. "I'm glad one of the parents wasn't left out."

Soviet Failed Meet Oil Goal

By MARCSENWASSER
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oil production last year grew by less than 1 percent and fell short of the modest output figure the nation had set for itself in the first year of the current five-year plan.

It was the second straight year the country failed to meet its oil production goal, even though output in 1981, as in past years, set a new record.

State-run Radio Moscow reported today that the 1981 Soviet output was 609 million tons of oil, compared with the 1980 record of 603 million tons but still short of the 1981 goal of 610 million tons. Last year's production averaged 12.18 million barrels a day.

The 1981 target had been dramatically slashed from the original 1980 projection of 620 to 640 million tons, indicating the Soviet Union had entered the 1980s with declining expectations about the future growth of its mammoth oil industry.

The Oil Ministry said 1981 production grew largely because of the development of new oil in western Siberia. The Soviet Union is the world's leading producer of oil, while Saudi Arabia is the leading exporter.

Soviet oil production almost quadrupled between 1950 and 1960, and more than doubled between 1960 and 1970. Growth continued strong throughout most of the 1970s but fell in 1980 to under 3 percent. The 1981 growth rate of 6 million tons was .99 percent.

One view is that the slowdown in growth rates is attributable to the maturing of the Soviet economy. However, Western experts also believe the slowdown reflects Soviet difficulties in extracting oil.

Western analysts have long considered oil production a key to determining Soviet behavior overseas.

Some Western analysts have voiced fears that the Kremlin might be tempted to seize Middle Eastern oil fields if, as the CIA predicted in the late 1970s, Soviet oil production levels off in the first half of this decade and then declines. The Soviets have consistently denied that they have any need for Middle East oil, or any intention of grabbing it.

Western analysts also consider Soviet export of oil to its Eastern European allies a key to the political control it continues to exert there. Radio Moscow's report said the Soviets delivered 80 million tons of oil, or 1.6 million barrels a day, to trade partners in the East-bloc Council for Mutual Economic Assistance last year. That was believed to be unchanged from 1980.

Oil sales to the West are important to the Soviets as an earner of hard currency. The Soviets often use the money they earn from the West through the sale of oil to purchase other Western goods, including grain and technology.

Such purchases have proved especially important to the Soviets in recent years because of serious domestic agricultural difficulties. Grain production has been below target for three consecutive years, leading to record imports.

Churches Challenge Day Care Licensing Law Before Court

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Self-proclaimed fundamentalist Christians and state officials are debating in court the merits of requiring church-run day care centers to be licensed by the state before operating.

Administrators of two religious child-care facilities testified Monday in Wake County Superior Court that compliance with a state law requiring state inspections of their operations would be submitting Christian ministry to state control.

"We felt that to any longer hold a license would be to compromise our position concerning the lordship of Christ and the sovereignty of the Lord," said the Rev. Charles Stanley, principal of Friendship Christian School in Raleigh.

Stanley testified as trial began of eight church-run day care centers sued by the state for operating without a license.

The trial before Judge Henry A. McKinnon Jr. was expected to continue for several days.

Bruce Phipps, administrator of Fayetteville Street Christian School run by Fayetteville Street Baptist Church in Asheville, said he also feared "control of our ministry."

He said the state had never interfered with a program of his school or day-care center. But he added, "I believe the potential is there."

Ann Reed, special deputy attorney general, said the state was seeking a declaratory judgment and permanent injunction upholding North Carolina's licensing law and requiring that the centers obtain a license to operate.

The day care centers named in the 3-year-old case turned in their licenses or failed to renew them in 1978, said the Rev. Dan Carr, head of Organized Christian Schools.

Andrew A. Vanore Jr., senior deputy attorney general, cross-examining the school administrators, challenged their contention that licensing would bring state control and violate their religious beliefs.

"Where in the word of God does it say you shall not obtain a day care license from the state of North Carolina? By what principle?" Vanore asked.

Vow To Fight For Extension

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A spokesman for a civil rights organization says the refusal of Sens. Jesse Helms and John East to back extension of the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965 is smacks of racism.

"The failure of the Republican Party ... and the senators of North Carolina to vote for extension of this act is solely based on racism," said the Rev. Leon White, head of the North Carolina-Virginia Commission for Racial Justice of the United Church of Christ.

Spokesmen for both senators said there would be no immediate response.

White spoke Monday at a news conference called by a coalition of groups including the state NAACP and the North Carolina Association of Educators. In a joint statement, the 26 organizations said the state's two Republican senators "are not representing the vast majority of North Carolinians" by opposing extension of the act.

"There was a time when we thought that our political leaders had risen above past discriminatory patterns, but recent inaction in the United States Senate sends a clear message to those of us who believe that the right to vote is an American principle worthy of a fight," said John I. Wilson, president of the statewide teachers' group.

Groups in the coalition included the League of Women Voters, the AFL-CIO, the National Organization of Women, the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, Common Cause, the North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers, the North Carolina Black Leadership Caucus, the Political Action Committee of the General Baptist State Convention and other groups.

The House of Representatives has approved a bill extending the act, with only one North Carolina congressman, Rep. Gene Johnston, R-N.C., opposing it.

Senate committee hearings on the bill are scheduled to begin Wednesday.

The groups distributed copies of letters from the two senators, dated last August and September and responding to Wilson regarding the act.

Helms said in his letter that the act "is no longer needed." He said it unfairly singles out certain areas of the country, including North Carolina, for federal supervision of election matters.

East, in his letter, said the act was unconstitutional, discriminates against Southern states and has been "extended to guarantee to minority groups the right to hold office."

Surgery for Gallbladder Trouble?

My mother has had two attacks of gallbladder trouble. She was X-rayed and they were not able to find any stones. I don't understand why they are considering an operation when there are no stones there. — Mr. H.W., Kan.

Dear Mr. W.:

Cholecystitis, or an inflammation or infection of the gallbladder, is most frequently the result of small or large stones that lie in the gallbladder. These stones obstruct the free passage of bile from the gallbladder into the upper part of the intestines where it is used for the digestion of fatty foods.

When the bile is dammed back, the gallbladder becomes distended and the lining becomes thickened, swollen and inflamed.

This very same process can occur in the absence of stones. Bacterial infection and sluggish movement of bile can produce the same symptoms as those caused by stones.

The outstanding symptom of gallbladder disease with or without a stone is sudden, acute pain in the right upper part of the abdomen. One of the characteristics of this pain is that it shoots, or radiates, to the right side of the back underneath the shoulder blade.

When these symptoms are present, X-rays are made of the gallbladder using special dyes. Even in the absence of stones, the gallbladder may fail to show the presence of this dye because of existing inflammation.

Conservative treatment with antibiotics and pain relievers can control the acute episodes of this painful condition. Rigid diets are helpful in avoiding some of the repeated attacks of gallbladder disease.

When medical treatment fails to alleviate the symptoms, surgery, even in the absence of stones in the gallbladder, is often the safest and most rewarding treatment.

I developed phlebitis after I gave birth to a baby. Could this have been avoided? — Mrs. R.P.L., N.J.

Dear Mrs. L.:

Phlebitis following pregnancy is not uncommon, but fewer and fewer cases develop now that pregnancies are followed so carefully from the onset.

The progressive enlargement of the uterus (womb) makes pressure on the veins within the pelvis and interferes with the free flow of blood. When stagnation of blood occurs, there is a tendency to develop both phlebitis (inflammation of the veins) and thrombophlebitis (clotting within the vein).

Mild, regulated exercises during pregnancies and the absence of tobacco may help to reduce the possibility of these conditions.

A post-delivery phlebitis is reduced to a minimum because patients are encouraged to get up and about within hours to stimulate their blood circulation.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of this newspaper.

Two Escapees Back In Jail

HOPEDALE, N.C. (AP) — Two prison escapees and a third man are in custody in Alamance County Jail after a 23-year-old millworker thwarted a holdup at a local store, police said.

Robert Simmons, 25, of Gibsonville; Thomas D. Wells, 24, of Burlington and Trudy E. Arnette, 19, of Burlington were charged with armed robbery and held under $75,000 secured bonds.

David Ward said when he pulled into the Hopedale Market Sunday night, he saw the customers holding their hands up. He also saw the barrel of a .410-gauge shotgun.

"I just didn't know whether to help, run, or what," Ward said. "But I decided I couldn't let them rob my friends in the store. Plus, I wanted to show them that you just don't get away with those things in Hopedale."

Ward said he placed his .25-caliber revolver in his pocket and slipped into the store shortly after an unarmed robber walked out of the market and got into the storeowner's car.

Ward then grabbed the man with the shotgun by the hair and said, "Drop that gun or I'll blow your brains against the wall." The shotgun went to the floor.

A customer picked up the shotgun and held it on the startled robber while Ward rushed outside, where two other men had the storeowner's car warmed, waiting to escape.

Ward approached them with gun in hand. "You believe this thing will shoot through glass?" he yelled. The pair got out of the car and Ward led them back into the store where he held them until deputies arrived.

The North Carolina hen market was steady, supplies adequate, demand moderate. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Monday and Tuesday slaughter 10 cents.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took off in early trading today as investor fears of an imminent surge in interest rates dissipated, but the market began to lose steam by noon.
At 12 p.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 0.95 points to 854.17. Shortly after the market opened, the Dow had gained 3.33 points after advancing 7.52 points Monday, but the index declined steadily afterwards.

Winners were just ahead of losers on the New York Stock Exchange, whose composite index declined 0.12 to 67.72. Earlier, winners had a 3-2 edge over losers.

Big Board volume totalled 19.84 million shares compared with 17.24 million shares at noon during the previous trading session.
The market got off to a bad start Monday because of a government report that the money supply had increased $9.8 billion, refueling concerns that the Federal Reserve Board would tighten credit more and push interest rates up. High rates make investments other than stocks, such as bonds and money market mutual funds more attractive.

But by midday the market had rebounded. Analysts said the big increase in the money supply likely was due to seasonal factors and would disappear in coming weeks.
The openings of Columbia Pictures and Coca-Cola were delayed pending a news announcement. Investment banking sources were quoted today as saying that Coca-Cola is preparing to make an offer for Columbia stock of as much as $75.0 million. Columbia closed at $41.75 Friday when it last traded.

Will Not Use Dismissal Law

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Guilford County District Attorney Michael Schlosser says he has decided not to implement a new law passed by the 1981 General Assembly that allows prosecutors to dismiss certain felony cases.
The law allows prosecutors discretion over cases involving defendants facing sentences up to 10 years if the defendant will agree to good behavior.
Schlosser said the people of Guilford County are not ready for such a liberal law.
"If the bill were blindly followed by a district attorney, it would allow wholesale dismissal of serious criminal offenses," the prosecutor said. "The public takes the position that people who break the law should be held responsible for their conduct."

Under the new statute, first offenders who commit misdemeanors and certain felonies are, upon recommendation of the district attorney, eligible for "deferred prosecution." They must agree to certain restrictions imposed by the district attorney and judge.
After two years of good behavior, the defendant's case is dismissed and no mark appears on his or her record.

Try Murder Case Here

Jeffrey Steven Heptinstall, 30, of Atlantic Beach is on trial in Pitt County Superior Court on first-degree murder charges in connection with the death of Rachael Broadhurst Albriton, 63, in Greene County July 11, 1981.

Heptinstall is also being tried on charges of breaking into Mrs. Albriton's home and stealing her car. He allegedly committed the crimes after escaping from the N.C. Department of Correction facility at Maury, where he was serving a four-year prison term for damage to real property.

Although the defendant has pleaded guilty to a charge of escaping from the prison unit, he has entered a plea of innocence to the murder charge because of insanity.

Court documents indicate that Heptinstall has been hospitalized in mental institutions in North Carolina and Florida, and is considered by the Social Security Administration to be totally disabled as a result of mental illness.

However, he was found competent to stand trial last August after undergoing a court-ordered psychiatric examination.

Jury selection in the trial began Monday afternoon and continued this morning.
The trial was moved from Greene County because of pre-trial publicity.

Javitts Sees Alliance Crisis

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Sen. Jacob K. Javitts says the crackdown in Poland has caused a crisis within the Western alliance that can be overcome only if West Europeans stop their "avoidance" of taking action against the Soviet bloc.

He also said the U.S. must abandon its "truculence," and that the only effective sanctions against the Soviet Union would be a U.S. grain embargo and West European agreement to call past-due loans to the Soviet bloc and to shut off new credit.

Javitts, a State Department adviser, addressed a joint meeting of the Council on Foreign Relations and the Foreign Policy Association on Monday. The 77-year-old former senator from New York was the ranking Republican on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee until he was defeated in a re-election bid in 1980.

Claim Theft Ring Broken

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina and South Carolina officials say the arrests of six people and recovery of nine automobiles have broken a two-state auto theft ring.

High Point police arrested two men Monday. Fayetteville authorities have arrested one person and South Carolina officers arrested three people in connection with the thefts.

Hugh Munn, South Carolina's law enforcement division director, said Monday that the first break in the case came with the arrest of Walter Leman Rowe Jr. of Fayetteville, who was charged with possession of a vehicle stolen in Walterboro.

Later, High Point police arrested Willie Mayfield.
Arrested in South Carolina were William Harris Bryant, 37, a Colleton County resident, his wife, Betty Bryant, and her father, Mike Richards.

A.D. Clayton, an inspector with the North Carolina Division of Motor Vehicles, said James Alexander Thomas, 29, of High Point, was being held in the Guilford County jail on auto theft charges.

But he said the West Europeans are in the case must halt what he said is their "slippage" toward a Finland-like neutrality in the shadow of the Soviet Union.
"Truculence on one side and avoidance on the other is not a solution," he said. "Consultation is a solution."

ECU Seeks To Rally Against Camels

East Carolina University's Pirates, after suffering one of their most humiliating losses since Dave Odom took over the coaching reigns, returns to action Wednesday night in Raleigh against Campbell University.

Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. in Raleigh's Civic Center. Campbell's home away from home.

The Pirates, 6-7, come into the game off a 58-49 loss to UNC-Wilmington last Thursday — a game Odom called the "worst physical effort since I've been here."

The Pirates, who had played an outstanding game in defeating Western Illinois earlier in the week, 85-69, looked nothing like the same team in the Wilmington game. Their shots bounced harmlessly off the rim and their ball-handling left much to be desired. And even the defense, usually the best part of the Pirate game, fell apart.

And the long layoff between games was not pleasing to look forward too, as Odom termed it "torture" to have to wait six days before playing again.

The two teams are meeting for the second time this year. Earlier, in Minges, East Carolina took a 66-61 win over the Camels in the fourth game of the season for the Bucs. Morris Hargrove led the Pirate victory scoring 13 points, while Michael Gibson, Tony Byles and Thom Brown each tossed in 12.

Campbell was led by Ron Curtis, a 6-6 senior forward with 19, and their 7-0 senior center, Tony Britto, who had 16.

Since then, however, Campbell has been slowed somewhat by injuries. Starting guard Kim Griffin has been out with a broken wrist, guard Lee Quinn has been sidelined with back spasms, and forward Bryce Robertson is having ankle problems.

Griffin played briefly in last night's 85-66 victory over Methodist. In that game, Britto paced all scorers with 26 points, while Curtis had 17 and 6-1 sophomore guard Harvey Smith had 12.

Campbell, which also beat Western Illinois, is now 6-8 on the season.

"I look at this as Britto's and Curtis' last chance to beat ECU, and they'll be up for the game. We have to be concerned about them," Odom said.

"But we have to be more concerned about ourselves. We have some problems. Byles non-shooting hand in severely bruised and I'd say right now he's doubtful. Gibson's mother was hospitalized (operation) and he's just gotten back. Our preparation has been slowed somewhat because of this and some other problems.

"It's a very big game for us. We not only have to win, we have to play well. I'm approaching the game with the idea we must play with a faster tempo than we did against Wilmington. Our depth is greater and I think that an up-tempo will help us. I'm sure that they'll come in thinking they can beat us for the first time."

East Carolina's series with Campbell goes back to the first year of Pirate basketball, and the Bucs hold a 15-9 edge in the series. However, the modern-day series between the two schools goes back only to the 1979-80 season, and ECU has won all four games played since then.

Following the contest, the Pirates return to Raleigh again on Saturday night of face nationally ranked N.C. State in Reynolds Coliseum on the State campus.

Panthers, A-G In Key Battle

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

North Pitt is on a roll. Since Dec. 11 the Panthers have lost only once — to 4-A Greenville Rose in the finals of the Pitt County Holiday Tournament — in eight outings.

It is a streak that has North Pitt coach Cobby Deans pleased but cautious as his Panthers prepare to battle Eastern Carolina Conference foe Ayden-Grifton tonight in Bethel.

"I'm really pleased with our progress to date," Deans said. "I'm really looking forward to the here on out to the rest of the season. But, it's going to be difficult to do as well as we have up to this point."

North Pitt, 9-4 overall, goes into tonight's game unbeaten in the conference after five games, including a 68-51 victory Saturday night over Southwest Edgecombe in Pinetops.

The Chargers, 4-10 overall and 1-4 in the ECC, are coming off a 60-57 loss to unbeaten West Craven Saturday night. The Chargers led for much of the game before the Eagles rallied to win their ninth straight.

Deans insists Ayden-Grifton is better than its record indicates, especially now that Thomas Anderson, A-G's leading scorer and rebounder, is nearing his early-season form after being out for over a month with a broken wrist.

"Right now, Ayden is the team to beat," Deans said. "Listen, it's going to be a tough game. It's going to be our biggest ballgame. They're back to being the ballclub they were at the beginning of the season."

Ayden-Grifton will start Calvin Peterson (5-10) at point guard, Tyrone Gay (6-0) at #2 guard, Thomas Anderson (6-1) and Jonathan Woods (6-2) at the forwards and Jesse Anderson (6-0) at center.

Deans will start Greg Hines (6-0) and Mitchell Cox (5-8) at the guards, Toby Crandol (5-8) and Dennis Bradley (6-4) at the forwards and Vince Parker (6-3) at center.

Hines, who is coming off a 21-point performance, is the Panthers' leading scorer averaging just over 13 points a game. Bradley and Parker are averaging around 10 a game.

The Chargers enter tonight's game having lost four straight games and seven of their last nine. The Panthers, meanwhile, have won three straight — all against ECC opponents.

The key to the Panthers' resurgence is two-fold: their offense has begun to mesh and the bench has contributed more than Deans believed possible at this point in the season.

"Offensively, we're doing a better job," Deans said. "We've had good consistency from a nucleus of players. We're using our heads and we're more aware of what's going on out there."

"That was one of our problems at the beginning of the season," Deans added. "Some of our so-called veteran players weren't performing adequately. Deans was forced to go to the bench — a bench that he doubted would be one of the team's strengths early in the season.

"I didn't see us being this deep on the bench at this point in the season," Deans said. "But the kids have really come on."

Among those Deans is particularly pleased with coming off the bench are Ken Whitehurst and Greg Briley. "They could start," Deans said. "Right now, if I had to start one of them tonight I wouldn't be worried about it."

In another ECC game Tuesday night, Farmville Central plays host to Southern Nash.

D.H. Conley, Greenville Rose, Greene Central, Williamston and Bear Grass are off tonight. The Vikings defeated North Lenoir, 58-44, last night, the Rams ripped Southwest Edgecombe, 65-62, and the Bears lost to Matamoras, 57-44.

Rose does not play again until Friday night when the Rampants go to Elizabeth City to face Northeastern and Williamston entertains Roanoke Rapids.

In other games tonight, undefeated Roanoke travels to Bertie, and Belhaven is at Jamesville. Greenville Christian was to have played at Falls Road tonight, but that game has been rescheduled and will be played February 4.

In wrestling action tonight, Onoke goes to Washington. On Wednesday, unbeaten and eighth-ranked D.H. Conley travels to Havelock.

In action Friday in the ECC, Ayden-Grifton is at Southwest Edgecombe, North Pitt goes to Charles B. Aycock and Farmville Central journeys to Greene Central.

Also Friday, D.H. Conley is at West Craven, Roanoke is on the road at Tarboro, Bear Grass is at Aurora and Jamesville is at Chocowinity.

In wrestling on Friday night, Northeastern is at Greenville Rose, D.H. Conley plays host to West Craven, Williamston is at Roanoke Rapids, Farmville Central journeys to Plymouth to meet the 11th-ranked Vikings and Tarboro is at Roanoke.

Rose Game Postponed

Greenville Rose's Big East Conference basketball game against Wilson Hunt set for Wednesday night at home has been rescheduled for Feb. 3 because of exams.

Rose had previously announced that its game Friday at Wilson Fike which was called off because of the weather had been moved to Jan. 27.

Also tentatively rescheduled is Rose's wrestling match with Wilson Hunt from Tuesday to Saturday.

The Rampants, who are 5-6 overall and 0-4 in the league, return to action Friday when they travel to Northeastern.

Conley Takes Second In Row As Hawks Fall

HOLLYWOOD — Sophomore guard Donald Wilson scored 16 points to help lift D.H. Conley to a 58-45 victory over North Lenoir Monday night in a Coastal Conference basketball game.

The victory was the Vikings' second straight after enduring a seven-game losing streak. Conley is now 7-7 overall and 2-1 in the league. North Lenoir drops to 6-8 overall and 1-1 in the conference.

Earlier, in the girls' game, D.H. Conley placed four players in double figures to whip North Lenoir, 58-44.

In the boys' contest, Conley led, 12-6, at the end of the first period and extended its lead to 24-14 at intermission. The Vikings lead then mounted to 34-20 at the end of the third quarter and from there they coasted in with the win.

Joining Wilson in double figures for DHC were Keith Gatlin with 12 points and Otis Payton with 10. North Lenoir was led by Orlando Moore with 15 points and Maurice Thorbes with 11.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley rolled to a 23-7 lead at the end of the first period and never looked back. The Valkyries led at the half, 27-19, and at the end of the third period, 47-31, before winning by 14.

Conley, now 12-2 overall and 2-1 in the league, was led by Helena Barnhill with 16 points. Mechio Korngay, Karen Barrett and Irish Barnhill all had 12 points for DHC.

North Lenoir, now 11-3 overall and 1-1 in the league, was led by Susan Smith with 15 points and Veronica Chapman with 12.

The North Carolina Tar Heels and Missouri's Tigers continued to dominate The Associated Press college basketball poll as Minnesota, Texas and Idaho made the big moves this week.

North Carolina got 60 first-place votes, one short of being unanimous, in the balloting by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters, finishing with 1,219 points. Missouri again got the other first-place ballot and received 1,126 points.

Virginia and DePaul remained in third and fourth place, respectively, while Minnesota, Texas and Idaho made huge jumps in the rankings announced today.

Countdown Begins For Super Bowl XVI

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Cincinnati Coach Forrest Gregg, bristling at an unscheduled early invasion by Super Bowl media, canceled an impromptu press conference shortly after the Bengals showed up at their headquarters.

San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh had dressed up as a hotel doorman Sunday night, offering to help arriving 49ers

Keith Lee Quietly Compiling Great Stats For Memphis State

By The Associated Press

While freshman centers Stuart Gray of UCLA and Patrick Ewing of Georgetown have been more highly touted this season, 6-foot-10 Keith Lee has quietly compiled some brilliant stats for Memphis State.

Lee has led the Tigers to an 11-2 overall record and 3-0 mark in the Metro Conference with a 17.5 scoring average and 11.2 rebounds per game.

The lanky center from West Memphis, Ark., was impressive again Monday night, scoring 19 points with 11 rebounds to lead Memphis State to a 78-73 road victory over Virginia Tech, which was ranked 20th in last week's Associated Press national poll.

In the only game involving a ranked team, No. 7 Texas remained one of the nation's four unbeaten teams with a 105-89 victory over Texas Christian.

"I don't think there's any doubt that Keith Lee is one of the best freshmen in college basketball this year," said Virginia Tech Coach Charlie Moir. "We've got out backs to the wall now with two straight home losses."

"This was a big win for us," said Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk. Virginia Tech has an excellent team with super quickness. We are a young team, starting one freshman, three sophomores and a senior. I think that playing nine games at home helped us gain confidence for this road game."

Memphis State shot 72.7 percent in the first half to build a 42-27 halftime lead. Virginia players with their baggage, but Monday, Gregg put an unscheduled meeting with the media off-limits for his team.

Shortly after the Bengals arrived at their hotel headquarters, Gregg admitted that the extra attention that surrounds Super Bowl teams wasn't one of his favorite things.

"I love ice cream," he said. "But if I had ice cream every day, I probably wouldn't like it any more."

Then he looked at a crowd of about 100 newsmen and said, "I'm about full of ice cream."

Super Bowl week news conferences usually begin on Tuesday, but when the San Francisco team arrived Sunday night, the schedule was pushed ahead. The 49ers made a number of players and Coach Walsh available after their workout Monday. The Bengals were asked to do the same and the word from Cincinnati was that they would. But when the team arrived, Gregg told his public relations director that the players would not be on hand for the press.

"When I talked to league people, when they set the schedule for us, they told us there would be specific times for interviews," Gregg said. "We have work to do as a football team and the players have no obligations other than the times originally specified."

More than a dozen 49er players showed up at their interview session. When that was concluded, NFL officials, unaware that Gregg had put the Bengals off-limits, led a busload of writers to the Cincinnati club headquarters. It became apparent there was a problem when the writers were kept on the bus for about 15 minutes while the league people tried unsuccessfully to change Gregg's mind.

"They asked for a few players," the coach said. "I told them it would be me because they (the players) have obligations and I have obligations."

It was suggested that Gregg seemed annoyed at the whole affair.

"There was no press conference scheduled by the league for today," he said, adding caustically, "My dinner's getting cold."

With that, Gregg left and the smooth Super Bowl schedule had suffered its most serious disruption since Minnesota Coach Bud Grant complained about sparrows in the Vikings' training facilities before the 1974 game in Houston. That outburst eventually cost Grant a $5,000 fine. It seemed unlikely that Gregg's display of stubbornness would result in any official reprimand. But it was in stark contrast to the relaxed atmosphere surrounding the 49ers.

Walsh had arrived ahead of his team, and when the players got to the hotel Sunday night, the coach was waiting outside, dressed in doorman's uniform, grabbing for baggage. Most of the players grabbed back and only a few recognized the man who calls the shots for this team.

"About 40 percent of them recognized me," laughed Walsh, who has been known to dress up in costumes before. Once, he showed up at a team meeting wearing a general's uniform and another time he came in a cab driver's garb.

One player who didn't see through the doorman's disguise was wide receiver Dwight Clark, hero of the NFC championship-game victory over Dallas.

"I didn't notice it," he said. "I thought it was just another busboy. He was trying to grab the bags and everybody was pushing him off. We were trying to get inside fast. It was cold outside. If I'd known it was him I would have given him a bag."

Tackle Keith Fahnhorst said the incident was typical of Walsh.

"He comes up with that all the time," he said. "If he had grabbed my luggage, I'd have tipped him a few extra quarters."

Thompson's 3-Pointer Lets Greene Take Win

SNOW HILL — James Thompson poured in 21 points, including a three-point play with 11 seconds left, to lift Greene Central to a 65-62 win over Southwest Edgecombe Monday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, unbeaten Southwest Edgecombe easily defeated Greene Central, 74-43.

With the Rams up 62-60, Thompson canned a bucket and was fouled with 11 seconds left. He made the free throw to complete the three-point play and give the Rams a 65-60 lead and seal the win.

Greene Central, now 7-7 overall and 4-1 in the conference, jumped out to a 19-14 lead in the first period and maintained that advantage the second period to go into the locker room with a 38-34 advantage.

The Cougars, now 3-14 overall and 3-3 in the ECC, closed the gap to 52-50 at the end of the third period and led briefly in the fourth period before the Rams managed to regain the lead and hold on for the win.

Joining Thompson in double figures for Greene Central were Cepado Albritton with 14 points and Roderick Lane and John Ray with 12 each.

Southwest was led by Lamonte Johnson with 21 points, Jesse Forbes with 16 and Herman Vines with 13.

In the girls' game, Southwest Edgecombe surged ahead, 16-7, at the end of the first eight minutes and stretched its lead to 34-19 at the half. A 27-8 third period advantage pushed the Lady Cougars' lead to 61-27.

From there, Southwest coasted to its 16th win without a defeat this year. The Lady Cougars, the defending 3-A state champions, are 6-0 in the ECC.

Southwest was led by Bridgett Jenkins with 20 points and Melody Jenkins with 18. Greene Central was paced by Leatha Taylor's game-high 23 points. No one else had more than nine points for the Lady Rams.

Greene Central plays host to Farmville Central Friday.

Lakers Glide Past Bears

SWAN QUARTER — Maurice Collins scored 24 points to pace Mattamuskeet High School to a 57-44 victory over Bear Grass last night. Bear Grass' girls pulled out a 37-35 overtime win over the Lady Lakers in their game, led by Angie Mizelle's 27 points.

In the boys' game, Mattamuskeet managed a 17-14 lead in the first period, but was unable to shake the Bears in the second period. By the end of the half, the Lakers were ahead by only four, 25-21.

The third period, however, did in the Bears, as they were outlited, 17-10. That pushed the Laker lead out to 42-31. Mattamuskeet outscored Bear Grass, 15-13, in the final quarter to wrap it up.

In addition to Collins, Ika Biggs added 15 and William Slade hit 14. Bear Grass was led by Ray Biggs with 12, while Phil Peele and Rudy Brown each had 11.

In the girls' contest, it was tight all the way. Mattamuskeet eased ahead, 10-8, after one period, but the Bears held on and trailed by just one, 18-17, at intermission. In the third period, the Lady Bears moved ahead, taking a 23-21 lead by the end of the frame.

The Bears were able to hold onto the lead most of the way, but Mattamuskeet tied it up near the end, forcing the overtime. It was tied at 33-33 at the end of regulation play.

The Lady Lakers scored first in the extra period, but didn't hit again. Mizelle then canned two baskets for the Lady Bears to allow them to pull out the victory.

Doris Harris led Mattamuskeet with 19 points, while Joann Whitaker added ten. The Bears travel to Aurora on Friday.

Life Changed For Chance

WOOSTER, Ohio (AP) — The days of fast balls, 20-game victory totals and Bo Belinsky are only memories for Dean Chance.

Wilmer Chance's boy is back on his farm in northeastern Ohio. And when he isn't working the 285 acres just west of here, Chance frequents the nation's midways as a carnival game owner.

Evidence of his semi-gypsy lifestyle — he's on the road eight months a year — is nearby. Behind the Chance home sits a semitrailer loaded with oversized stuffed animals.

"The worse thing that can happen in this business is to have a game filled with stuffed animals at 10 at night," he said. "The greatest advertisement is when people are walking up and down the midway holding your toys."

This is the latest venture for the 40-year-old Chance. It seems like only yesterday when he was teaming with Belinsky to produce a feared pitching combination for the Los Angeles Angels.

Chance was a 20-game winner, an All-Star pitcher, a Cy Young Award recipient with the Angels. But his off-the-field exploits with the carefree Belinsky created headlines just as well.

Chance still insists Belinsky got a bad rap from sports writers, especially "the short, fat, dummy ones who probably wanted to be athletes themselves but got kicked off the team."

When Chance quit baseball, he took a fling as a boxing promoter.

"I owned half of (Earnie) Shavers, and I still get to the big fights when I can," he said.

The 6-foot-3 Chance can rank his top sports experiences.

"The greatest thrill really was when I was 16 and we (Northwestern) won the state basketball championship," he said. "The second was the 20th game I won my first year in the majors. The third was when I started in the All-Star game in Shea Stadium and struck out Roberto Clemente with a hanging curve ball that should have been a home run."

Cheerleader Is Improving

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Syracuse Coach Jim Boheim. Michelle Munn is recovering from the fall that fractured her skull and horrified a national television audience, and her partners on the Syracuse University cheerleading squad say it will be difficult to go on without her.

University officials are investigating the complex pyramid — known as a "Swedish roll" — that hospitalized the 21-year-old cheerleader captain. Television officials say the aftermath of her fall was broadcast because of a freak coincidence during Sunday's broadcast of the Syracuse-Georgetown basketball game.

The 5-foot-1, 98-pound Munn was briefly unconscious after the fall during a timeout 4½ minutes into the game. Then she went into convulsions and began to moan with pain.

"She was calling to God and praying," said paramedic Lewis Surrey.

Taken by ambulance to Crouse-Ingvar Memorial Hospital, she spent Monday in the intensive care unit. But Joseph Julian, Syracuse's vice president of public affairs, said Munn's parents, Lavere and Janice Munn, felt good enough about her progress to return home to Sayre, Pa.

The university has suspended further use of the pyramid pending an inquiry into its safety, Julian said. The routine includes forward somersaults by two male cheerleaders through openings in a human wall formed by their teammates.

Cheerleader Linda Davis, who was on the ground in the Swedish roll, said it was the first time the maneuver had been attempted off mat.

"That's how we prepare physically, but we can't prepare psychologically," she said. "It's going to be hard for the rest of the year."

The sight and sound of Munn's injury silenced the announced crowd of 25,623 and virtually took the fight out of the Big East Conference rivals.

"For the first time in my life, I wanted to stop playing," said

Trinity In Easy Win

John Moran scored 19 points as Trinity Christian put four players in double figures en route to an easy 73-31 victory over Havelock Monday in basketball action.

Joining Moran in double figures for Trinity, now 5-1, were Darryle Wells with 17 points, David Casper with 13 and Greg Jones with 10. Ray Leake led Havelock with 11 points.

Trinity led, 14-2, at the end of the first period and at the half, 31-7. A 21-10 third period pushed Trinity's lead to 52-17 before the home team coasted home with the victory.

Trinity plays host to Rocky Mount Friday.

Jaegar Easy Tennis Winner

SEATTLE (AP) — Andrea Jaeger's debut in Seattle's Avon tennis tournament was less than surprising when the 16-year-old ranked fourth in the world in women's tennis easily defeated Jo Durie of Great Britain.

Jaeger, of Lincolnshire, Ill., took the opening-round match in straight sets of 6-4 and 6-1 Monday night. She is second seeded behind Martina Navratilova in the $150,000 week-long tournament.

Navratilova joins the competition tonight against Kathy Horvath, 16, of Largo, Fla.

In other Monday night matches, Sharon Walsh upset Leslie Allen in little more than an hour in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3.

Yvonne Vermaak of South Africa beat Great Britain's Anne Hobbs, 6-7, 6-1, 6-4; Wendy White edged Bonnie Gadusek, 6-2, 6-7, 7-5; Lea Antonopolis beat 15-year-old Jane Thomas of Pasco, Wash., 3-6, 6-1, 6-4; Betsy Nagelsen took Claudia Kohde of West Germany, 6-3, 3-6, 7-6, and Kate Latham beat Australia's Dianne Fromholtz, 6-2, 6-3.

West Germany's Sylvia Hanika and Virginia Ruzici of Romania rolled to a 6-4, 6-4 doubles victory over Kim Sands and Beth Norton.

Another doubles match, pairing Gadusek and Horvath against White and Peanut Louie, was postponed.

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — Jim Carmody, the new head football coach at the University of Southern Mississippi, probably will be forced to replace most of the school's assistant coaches.

Former Coach Bobby Collins, who has resigned to accept the head coaching job at Southern Methodist University, says he plans to take as many of his staff members as possible.

"I definitely have an obligation to my staff (at USM)," Collins said.

Carmody would like to see Collins' staff stay and said he may come to Mississippi as soon as today to talk with USM's assistants.

"It will take me some time to wind things up here," Carmody said in a telephone interview from his Buffalo, N. Y. home.

"I would like to keep all of them," Carmody said.

"I'd like for all of them to stay, but I realize much of their loyalty is to Bobby and that's the way it should be."

Meanwhile Collins will meet with the leftovers from the SMU staff of Ron Meyer, who left that post for the head job with the New England Patriots of the National Football League. He is under no obligation to retain any of them, but Collins said keeping a few assistants will provide continuity in recruiting.

Collins, contacted by telephone in Dallas, said he and Carmody had "coached together for six years at the University of North Carolina. He's an outstanding person and a tremendous football coach and he certainly has all my best wishes, and I know he'll do a tremendous job."

Carmody was contacted almost immediately after it was learned that Collins had accepted the SMU post.

Carmody, 47, defensive line coach for the NFL's Buffalo Bills last season, served as defensive coordinator for Southern Mississippi for the three previous seasons. He also coached at the University of Mississippi and Mississippi State.

Carmody, who has 20 years in the collegiate coaching ranks, left USM last February to join the Bills.

"We feel extremely fortunate that coach Carmody accepted the job," said Roland Dale, USM athletic director. "He made an impressive contribution to our program during his three years as an assistant coach."

The athletic director said Carmody was "thoroughly familiar with our operations and with the majority of our players. We look forward to continued progress with him as head coach."

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Bob Hines and Branton Dennis have both seen "Black Sunday" and "Two-Minute Warning" two movies about super disaster at the Super Bowl.

One is about a terrorist in a blimp, the other about a sniper at pro football's championship game.

"Hopefully, they won't show them on television Saturday night," says Hines, head man of a force of private guards who will work Super Bowl XVI at the Pontiac Silverdome on Sunday.

"They bring those movies up all the time," says Dennis, a Pontiac police captain who is coordinating game security. "I just don't see it happening because things at the dome are going to be so tight."

Even if the Silverdome's inflated, Teflon-coated roof collapses — as it has twice since the stadium opened in 1975 — "the cables holding it up are such that you can continue your football game," Dennis said.

"I'm not saying you couldn't fly an airplane (over) there, but it's highly unlikely," he said, adding that the Federal Aviation Administration will restrict air traffic over the stadium on Sunday.

In addition to the private guards and local police, state troopers and Oakland County Sheriff's deputies will be on hand at the Silverdome.

The National Football League has its own security force. FBI agents will be on hand, the Secret Service will protect Vice President Bush, and U.S. postal inspectors will be looking for counterfeit or stolen tickets. More than 1,000 security personnel will be involved.

Gregg Worried Bengals Might Have Too Much Of A Good Thing

TROY, Mich. (AP) — It is what the Cincinnati Bengals have worked to achieve — national recognition in the Super Bowl — but Coach Forrest Gregg is worried that it might be too much of a good thing.

Gregg interrupted his schedule twice within an hour of arriving Monday evening at the Bengals' suburban Detroit to accommodate dozens of reporters and photographers with impromptu news conferences.

Although the Bengals are basking in the national spotlight after years of obscurity, Gregg told the flock of reporters that he considers the media one of the main stumbling blocks in preparing for Super Bowl XVI against the San Francisco 49ers.

"I love ice cream. But if I had to eat it every day, I wouldn't like it any more," he said, comparing news coverage to one of his favorite foods. "I'm about full of ice cream," he said.

Gregg played in three Super Bowls — two with the Green Bay Packers and one with the Dallas Cowboys. He said he'd learned that the demands for interviews were the most disturbing aspect for a player to handle.

"You have so much practice time, and time for meetings. After that, you try to grab some time to relax, some time for your own," Gregg said. "You were really never allowed to do that."

The Bengals didn't appear to be on edge as they flew from Cincinnati Monday afternoon, then took a bus ride from the airport to their hotel.

During the flight, linebacker Reggie Williams walked down the aisle carrying copies of a new Bengals' song that he and two teammates recorded.

Led by punter and songwriter Pat McInally, several of the players held a sing-along of 1960s hits on the bus ride to the hotel north of Detroit.

"They looked like the same guys I've been with all year long," Gregg said.

The big difference was in the number of cameras and pens ready to record their arrival, he said. "It really hasn't been that way for us until now,"

Gregg said of the coverage. "I imagine the rest of the week is going to be different for us. We'll try to maintain our schedule as best we can."

There was some good news for the Bengals Monday, even before they left Cincinnati. Kick returner David Verser, the only seriously injured Bengal player, worked out at Spinney Field for a little more than an hour with just a brace on his injured right thumb.

Verser damaged ligaments on the right thumb in Cincinnati's 27-7 victory over San Diego in the American Conference championship game and had it put in a cast. But Gregg said the teams' leading kickoff returner should be ready to play in the Super Bowl Jan. 24.

"He caught the ball very well today, so I don't see any problem," Gregg said.

Rudd To Join Childress Team

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — Driver Ricky Rudd will join forces with Richard Childress for the upcoming NASCAR Grand National stock car racing season, with Piedmont Airlines sponsoring the team for the entire 30-race schedule.

Rudd, who in 1981 filled the DiGard Team seat vacated a year ago by Darrell Waltrip, found himself looking for a new ride when the team hired veteran Bobby Allison for 1982.

Childress, himself a NASCAR competitor for 11 years, retired from driving last August, becoming team manager for Dale Earnhardt. But, when Earnhardt decided to go with another team, taking his sponsor with him, that left Childress on the outside looking in for 1982.

"I wanted Ricky as my driver because I feel he is a driver you can build a team around," Childress said. "He has the right attitude and he has shown the ability to run up front. I think he could have won two or three races last year if Darrell (Waltrip) hadn't had such a sensational year."

"By the second half of the season, I feel we will be in a position to win a race or two, with a little luck. It always takes a new team a little time."

Childress is just 36 years old, but he says his retirement was the right decision.

The 80,000-seat stadium was checked for bombs and potential fire hazards twice this week by Burns guards and will be "swept" many more times by various authorities before the game.

Bush will view the game from the glass-enclosed private box of Detroit Lions' owner William Clay Ford.

Hines, 43, is a Cincinnati native who is hoping the Bengals prevail but does not anticipate seeing it happen.

"I don't ever watch the games," he said. "I watch my guards."

"When this thing is over, if it's the success we anticipate, we're going to have a big party for all our people," he added.

Capt. Dennis would not say how many of Pontiac's 250 police officers would be assigned to the Silverdome on Sunday.

"We want the public to think there's a cop behind every citizen," he said.

Super Bowl players in the past have been threatened and given extra protection but nothing similar has happened this year "and I hope it stays that way," Dennis said.

STEP ONE

A newspaper log should burn about as long as a wood log. Roll your newspaper log as tight as possible. The tighter it is rolled the better it will burn.

STEP TWO

After you have squeezed it tightly, bind it with a coat hanger or metal wire. Soaking the rolled newspaper in water and letting it dry completely will "season" the newspaper and make it burn more efficiently.

STEP THREE

Finally, stack about six dried newspaper logs in a crisscross to provide more ventilation to the fire and light it. Enjoy.

Cold Wave Recedes, But More Of Same Forecast

By ANDY O'CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

A parting burst of freezing rain left cars and trucks skidding off Southern highways today as the worst cold wave of the century receded, while a West Coast storm that threatened more mudslides covered the Sierra Nevada with a layer of snow.

Highways were covered with ice from Virginia to Alabama, forcing many schools to remain shut, although after a week of sub-zero cold temperatures were easing across the Eastern United States.

The 11-day cold wave, which has left 283 dead nationwide, was moving off the East Coast, but the National Weather Service said Monday the Midwest and Northeast can expect more of the same.

The service's 30-day forecast calls for below-normal temperatures for the eastern two-thirds of the nation.

"In upper East Tennessee, nothing is moving," Mike Caudill of the Tennessee Emergency Management Agency said after five fuel tankers overturned on icy roads, eight tractor-trailer rigs crashed in one massive pileup and a Knoxville thoroughfare was strewn with cars from a dozen-vehicle accident. "Anything that's moving is going into a ditch," he said.

About 50 people moved out of their houses in Pacifica, Calif., Sunday night and eight families vacated their homes in Lagunitas because of predictions of rain. Three children in Pacifica died when a section of a hillside collapsed during heavy rains Jan. 3-5. They were among at least 31 people who died in mudslides and heavy rain in northern California.

Earlier in the weekend, about 50 residents of Ben Lomond were evacuated not far from an area where mudslides in the remote Love Creek inundated eight houses. Authorities believe at least 13 people died there.

It only drizzled Sunday night, but more rain pelted Northern California on Monday, mostly in San Francisco and eastward, and not in the heavily damaged areas south of the city.

Snow began falling Monday in the Sierra Nevada, and the National Weather Service forecast heavy snow for today and Wednesday. The storm that caused the mudslides around San Francisco dumped several feet of snow in the mountains.

The numbing cold weather that has held much of the nation in its grip for more than a week prompted Gov. Bob Graham to declare an emergency in the citrus industry in central and south Florida.

He issued an executive order Monday that would get citrus to processing plants more quickly. The order allows higher weight allowances for trucks hauling citrus. Graham said it is "imperative" that the fruit be processed as quickly as possible, because fruit that has been frozen rots quickly.

In Maine, National Guard helicopters battled 80 mph winds to lift nine people from Baxter State Park after the park was closed Monday because of the cold, and another man was rescued by sled. Another 13 people in two groups were left behind in the park, but officials said they were in no immediate danger, despite sub-zero temperatures, because they had found shelter in cabins.

Four of those rescued were hospitalized suffering frostbite. The polar air mass that first pushed into the country on Jan. 9 dealt cities such as Chicago, Milwaukee and Akron, Ohio, their coldest temperatures since the weather service began keeping track.

The cold wave set record lows for the date Monday from Pennsylvania through New England, where Chester, Mass., posted a minus 34.

Here is a list of weather-related deaths since Jan. 9:
Alabama 21, Arkansas 3, Connecticut 1, Georgia 11, Florida 1, Kentucky 2, Illinois 32, Indiana 11, Iowa 10, Louisiana 5, Maryland 5, Massachusetts 1, Michigan 9, Minnesota 5, Mississippi 6, Missouri 2, Nebraska 1, New York 16, New Jersey 6, North Carolina 20, North Dakota 1, Ohio 8, Oklahoma 1, Pennsylvania 24, Rhode Island 7, South Carolina 7, South Dakota 3, Texas 12, Tennessee 17, Virginia 13, West Virginia 11, Wisconsin 10, and Wyoming 1.

Climate Change Said In Works

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Those who suffered through the recent cold snap that gripped much of the nation can be thankful it came while the Earth is in a relative warming trend, climatologists say.

"The theory is that increasing atmospheric carbon dioxide is leading to a warming of the planet," said Dr. Peter Robinson of the National Climate Program in Rockville, Md. "It's difficult to say that on a day like this. There are quite a few jokes going around this office about the warming associated with the weather we're having."

Changes in the high-altitude jet stream, an air current that influences much of U.S. weather, led to last week's chilling conditions, Robinson said Monday in a telephone interview.

"It is pushing air developed over the Canadian arctic down into the United States, something that it does occasionally in any winter," he said. "But this winter it is doing it with much more vigor than it normally does, so we have the cold air sweeping down and it hasn't had the chance to warm up at all."

John McClain, chief meteorologist at the National Weather Service office in Raleigh, said below-normal temperatures were expected across the nation through March.

Robinson, on a leave of absence as coordinator of the state Climate Program at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said studies have shown the level of carbon dioxide is increasing due to industrial and automobile emissions.

Carbon dioxide magnifies the solar heat reaching the Earth and prevents some of that heat from radiating back into space. Robinson said this "greenhouse effect" would increase the average temperature of the Earth by a few tenths of a degree each century.

"It may, for example, influence the length of the growing season, but it's not the sort of change that you or I could detect as we walk around," he said.

On a geological time scale, Robinson said, the Earth is presently in a relatively cold period. But, he added, "At the moment it is not as cold as it has been, and it seems likely that we have been getting warmer for a few thousand years."

Much of the warming trend in the last century is probably due to carbon dioxide generated by man, Robinson said, and that makes it even more difficult to predict how weather patterns might evolve.

"This is the first time that mankind has done anything that might affect the system," he said. "There is really no way we can look back at what happened in the past to tell what will happen in the future."

A recent article in Science revealed that sea level is rising at a relatively rapid rate, Robinson said, adding that it is no cause for alarm.

"This would be a logical consequence of warming by carbon dioxide," he said. "But that certainly doesn't mean that in our lifetimes Raleigh (an inland North Carolina city) is going to be a nice coastal location."

Currently, climatologists are able to predict weather patterns several months in advance with some accuracy, Robinson said. But while great progress has been made in the last 20 years, he said climate changes were still largely a mystery.

"In the last 20 years we've found out that we don't know more than we thought we didn't know," he said.

Files Again To Counter Claims

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Cleveland County Sheriff Dale Costner withdrew his candidacy for sheriff Monday and filed again to satisfy complaints from election officials about his initial filing.

Costner first filed Jan. 12 at the Cleveland County law enforcement center, but the elections board questioned that because two employees of the board were present without getting permission from the board.

The dispute was referred to state elections director Alex Brock, who said policies are set by the local boards.

The auction had the virtue of directness. North knew that, at worst, the contract would hinge on a finesse, and he had faith in his partner's dummy play.

West led a low trump and dummy's eight won. Declarer decided that his best chance was to ruff out the king of hearts—a simple matter if trumps were 2-2. So, at trick two he cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart in hand. He crossed to the king of clubs, and was disappointed when East sluffed a spade.

Now declarer made a vital move. He cashed the ace of diamonds. Next, he led another heart and took care to ruff with the ace. That precaution was rewarded when West sluffed a spade on this trick.

There was one more string to declarer's bow. He led the jack of diamonds for a ruffing finesse. West tried to look like a player who did not have the queen of diamonds as he followed low, but declarer simply discarded a heart from dummy.

The rest was easy. Declarer ruffed a diamond in dummy, drew the last trump and then scored the last three tricks with high spades. To appreciate the skill with which he handled the dummy, you try and make the contract if the ace of diamonds is not cashed early so that the ruffing finesse can be taken at the crucial moment!

Columbia Pictures Purchase Rumored

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Coca-Cola Co., the world's largest seller of soft drinks, is expected to make a $750 million offer to purchase Columbia Pictures Industries, according to newspaper reports.

Quoting industry sources close to the negotiations, today's editions of The Los Angeles Times and The New York Times said that a proposed deal was presented to Columbia over the weekend. The newspapers said Columbia's board of directors was reported to have received the proposal favorably.

According to the Los Angeles Times, the deal reportedly involves about $265 million in cash and the balance in Coca-Cola stock.

Columbia asked for a halt in trading of its stock before the opening of the New York Stock Exchange on Monday, but gave no reason for the request. Officials of the two companies would not confirm the purchase deal.

Carlton Curtis, media relations manager at Coca-Cola, could not be reached for comment by The Associated Press despite repeated telephone calls to his home.

Negotiations for the purchase have been conducted over the last two weeks, and Coca-Cola is expected to offer between $73 and $75 for each of Columbia's eight million outstanding shares, the newspapers said.

Any merger agreement would need the approval of the boards of both companies.

Columbia shareholder Sumner Redstone, whose family operates a New England movie theater chain, told the Los Angeles Times he had heard reports of the Coca-Cola offer, although he would not confirm it. He said his company owns 8.3 percent of Columbia's stock.

Sources told the newspapers that Coca-Cola wants to make the purchase because of the studio's expertise in producing movies and television programs, and because it has a well-established distribution network for its productions.

A Coca-Cola participant in the negotiations was quoted as saying that Coca-Cola is "essentially a leisure-time company, and they wanted to participate actively in some of these growing areas (of entertainment)."

The purchase, which the newspapers said may be announced Tuesday, would make Columbia the fourth major studio to change ownership in less than a year.

20th Century Fox Film Corp. was bought by oil baron Marvin Davis for $722 million; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Film Co. absorbed United Artists Corp. in a $350 million deal and Avco Embassy Pictures was bought up for $25 million cash by entertainment producers Jerry Perenchio and Norman Lear.

Columbia had revenues of $687 million last year. It also bought out the 25 percent stake in Columbia held by financier Kirk Kerkorian, who is now the controlling shareholder in the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Film Co.

Coca-Cola dominates the world's soft-drink market and had net sales in 1980 of almost $6 billion. It also has branched into plastics, food and wine. The purchase of Columbia would mark its entry into the entertainment field.

Among Columbia's recent movies were "Kramer Vs. Kramer," "Stir Crazy," "Stripes," and "Absence of Malice."

Eerie Tale For TV Is Tied To Fantasy Game

By KENNETH R. CLARK
UPI TV Reporter

NEW YORK (UPI) — A few years ago, novelist Rona Jaffe read about a 16-year-old computer genius who vanished from the Michigan State University campus where he had been a fanatic player of the fantasy game "Dungeons and Dragons."

At that moment, her best-seller, "Mazes and Monsters," was born, and next fall, CBS will bring it to television.

It's an eerie tale — evocative of Rod Serling's old "Twilight Zone," but like the best of the strange, it is anchored firmly in truth.

The truth, in this case, is a disturbing one — the proposition that the line between fantasy and reality is indistinguishable for many of today's young. For them, the "game" becomes the reality and reality fades into an irritating dream. In Miss Jaffe's view, economics and the savaging of traditional family structures are responsible.

"This is the first generation where people will not be able to live as well as their parents," she said. "They grow up in a house with two cars and lots of rooms and they get married and they don't know if they'll ever have a house. They don't even know if they'll ever be able to afford a kid."

Players of "Dungeons and Dragons" don't have to worry about such things — at least while the game is in progress. In their fantasy roles — the fighter, the wizard, the holy man, the elf — they plunge into a dark, Tolkienesque world of adventure, danger and pursuit of treasure to be wrested by force or guile from the forces of evil as a roll of the dice and a "controller" may dictate.

The real "Dungeons and Dragons" player who inspired Miss Jaffe's book was said to have worked out his fantasies in a labyrinth of steam tunnels beneath the college campus. No one ever will know for sure. A detective hired by his family finally found him wandering in a daze. He killed himself without ever telling anyone what really happened to him.

Miss Jaffe's four protagonists use caverns near their fictional college for their game and carry it to a chilling conclusion.

"I had to play in order to get into the spirit of it," said Miss Jaffe of her research for the book. "I'd never even heard of it when I read the newspaper account."

"I changed certain things. In 'Dungeons and Dragons,' you have to be the character you roll with the dice. When I played, I rolled to be an elf and I didn't like that. I wanted to be a fighter. I'm an elf in real life — who wants to be an elf in a game?"

"I thought it would be much more interesting if they could pick their own characters. Then they could go into their own psyches and bring out a lot of things they couldn't work out in real life."

In the past two decades, youngsters have worked things out — none too successfully — through an unprecedented flocking to religious cults, drug use and fantasy.

"I think they're looking for family stability, which has been kind of knocked apart in the last 20 years," said Miss Jaffe. "The '60s were a time when the kids all got up — there were more of them because of the baby boom — and decided they wanted to change things."

"In the '70s, when people got disillusioned and realized they couldn't change things, they started to investigate their own heads. That was what we called the 'me' generation."

"Many of the women I went to college with and many who write to me when they've seen me on TV or read my books now have been through the exact same experience — their husbands walked out. He said, 'There must be more, I'm getting to be middle-aged, I'm 40 years old, I want a young one, goodbye.'"

The children, she said, have been the victims.

"The kids have grown up without a kind of family stability that maybe never existed, but which we seem to think existed," she said. "In the '50s, in truth, people had rotten family relationships, but they stayed together because you just didn't get divorced."

Hence, a predilection for escape through fantasy — sometimes so complete there is no returning as happens to one tragic character in her book.

"The games — any of the fantasy role-playing games, and 'Dungeons and Dragons' in particular — present a stalwart band of friends. It's a fellowship of people who have a good mission. They're going to conquer evil and they're also going to make good. They're going to get fortune. They're going to protect the weak ones."

"That's what the family used to represent. You stuck together in adversity. You protected the weak ones. You had a common goal which was to achieve material things."

Miss Jaffe won't do the screenplay for the TV version of her book, but she does have some ideas about casting.

Judge Files

For Re-Election

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Court of Appeals Judge Harry C. Martin filed as a candidate for re-election to an eight-year term Monday.

Martin, a Democrat, has no opposition so far. The filing period runs through the end of the month.

Martin's seat is one of seven seats on the 12-member court. Three other incumbents have said they are not seeking re-election, including Chief Judge Naomi Morris.

"I'd like to see very talented but not famous people playing the parts," she said. "I think these kids really represent everybody's kids. The only one they're talking about who would be a star would be Kate."

The heroine's role, which cries for a Karen Allen or a Donna Pescow or an Elizabeth McGovern, is one the average actress cheerfully might kill to win.

"I want people to cry at the end," said Miss Jaffe. "Just to think these people found relationships are very important. I think what is going to happen in the next 10 years is that we're going to go back to family units. I think we really are going to go back, by the end of the '80s, to seeing marriage again."

Yesterday's Cryptiquip — TALL FORWARD FLICKS BASKETBALL UPWARD TO BUILD TOP SCORE.
Today's Cryptiquip clue: E equals M

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

New Pistol Can Be Small Machine Gun

MIAMI (AP) — It's new, made of light-weight plastic and legal.

But Dade County law enforcement authorities say they believe a locally produced pistol that converts into a machine gun in seconds is becoming the latest weapon in the criminal community's firearms race.

Known as the KG-9, the semi-automatic pistol is manufactured by Interdynamic of America, a Miami business operated by a local gun dealer. The Miami Herald reported Sunday.

"When we got the first one, we had no idea what it was," said Peter Mastin, special agent for the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. "Finally, we traced it back here."

Carlos M. Garcia, head of Interdynamic, declined a reporter's request to interview him about the KG-9, the newspaper said.

The pistol began appearing in Miami-area gun shops last year, and soon afterward, illegally modified versions of the gun began turning up as well — in undercover machine gun buys.

The 32-shot KG-9 fires an entire clip of ammunition within three seconds.

"It's like holding a garden hose," said Mastin. "And with the silencer on it sounds no louder than a noisy typewriter."

FOCUS

The Reluctant Warrior

"It is well that war is so terrible — we would grow too fond of it." So said Gen. Robert E. Lee, saddened by the Civil War that left 16,000 soldiers buried beneath the lawn of his Arlington mansion. Although a soldier's soldier, Lee was gentle and never drank, smoked or swore. Though he was a brilliant tactician, he is best remembered for his grace in defeat. Lee entered the war with reluctance — turning down the Union command — and ended it with efforts at reconciliation. In later years, this former head of West Point said his only regret was his military education. Both North and South admire the great man, born 175 years ago today — a gentle man in war and peace.

DO YOU KNOW — What was Robert E. Lee's native state?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Daniel Webster served as Secretary of State for Presidents W.H. Harrison, Tyler and Fillmore.

Team May Have Blindly Followed Leader In Crash

INDIAN SPRINGS, Nev. (AP) — Strict training to keep their eyes only on the plane next to them may have led three pilots of an elite Air Force stunt squad to blindly follow the lead of a fourth and slam into the desert after a 400 mph dive.

"Normally, he (the leader) is the only one looking where he's going," said Air Force Sgt. Jack Conner. The Thunderbirds' command Air Force Maj. Norman L. Lowry III, died along with the three other pilots in Monday's accident during practice.

The Thunderbirds pilots, who sometimes fly as little as three feet apart in their T-38 Talons, are trained to "fly off the commander-leader," watching only the plane next to them and not the ground or instruments because of the tight formation, Conner said.

"We don't know whether it was a mid-air collision or a case of follow the leader into the ground," he said.

"At the speed they were going when they came out of the loop, I just thought, 'That's the end of that for them fellows,'" said W.G. Wood of Indian Springs, who witnessed the crash as he drove along U.S. 95. "It happened so fast I couldn't tell you if one hit sooner. It looked like all of them hit at the same time."

The loss of the four officers was the most devastating accident in the history of the precision flying team and left its future in doubt.

A resident across the highway from the auxiliary base where the flight team practiced said he heard the whine of the red, white and blue jets as they climbed to a high arch, then the scream of the engines as they plunged downward to complete the maneuver.

"Then boom-boom-boom, boom-boom-boom as they hit the ground one after another," said Loren Conaway.

George LaPointe, a construction worker, watched the jets disappear behind tree tops.

"They didn't come back up," he said. "They were going full tilt, really screaming, and at the time I thought they were too low."

Air Force officials said a panel would be formed to investigate the crash — an inquiry expected to take up to three weeks.

The crash came as the four planes were completing what was known as a "line-abreast loop" — climbing side-by-side for several thousand feet in a slow, backward loop, then hurtling down at more than 400 mph, leveling off at about 100 feet.

Besides Lowry, 37, of Radford, Va., killed were Capt. Willie Mays, 32, of Ripley, Tenn.; Capt. Joseph Peterson, 32, of Tuskegee, Ala.; Capt. Mark E. Melancon, 31, of Dallas.

Lowry became commander of the Thunderbirds in October after Col. David L. Smith died when his jet crashed on takeoff following a performance in Cleveland.

Another Thunderbird officer died in a crash last year before 80,000 spectators at an Ogden, Utah, air show.

"It's too early to speculate as to what will happen" with the Thunderbirds, said Air Force spokesman Col. Mike Wallace. "Obviously, the loss of four pilots and four aircraft is a severe blow. But we have snapped back before and could conceivably snap back again."

Two of the pilots killed Monday had talked of the perils they faced when companions were killed last year.

"Accidents in flying are something you learn to live with," Peterson once said in an interview. He added that pilots learn to accept "but for the grace of God, it could be anyone of us anytime, anywhere."

Mays once said that after an accident, morale drops, but "we realize that we have a mission."

The planes crashed at Indian Springs, an auxiliary field 40 miles northwest of their home field, Nellis Air Force Base. The team flew to Indian Springs almost daily to practice formation flying in preparation for an 81-show exhibition season scheduled to begin March 13 at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base in Tucson, Ariz.

In 30 years the group has flown 2,455 air shows before 153 million people, Conner said.

The Indian Springs airstrip was the site of another air disaster last Sept. 21. Seven men were killed when a C-130 carrying Army troops crashed while practicing a night landing.

Escapee Turns Himself In

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — A prisoner who escaped Dec. 29 from the Durham County Judicial Building has surrendered to city detectives.

Sterling Maye and another Durham County Jail inmate, Hamam Hampton, escaped while they were being escorted by jailers from one courtroom to another.

Maye turned himself in Sunday afternoon to police detective A.E. Harris Jr., and was placed in the Durham County Jail without bond on charges of escape, three additional counts of robbery and failure to appear.

Maye originally was charged in connection with the Dec. 22 armed robbery of a dozen people attending a prayer meeting at a Durham church.
