Amendment, watches with colleagues as the vote goes against ERA, 116-57. (AP Laserphoto)

Georgia Says No In Vote On ERA

By The Associated Press

The proposed Equal Rights Amendment suffered its third major setback in two weeks when the Georgia House of Representatives voted it down 116-57.

The U.S. Supreme Court, meanwhile, was asked by the Justice Department to quickly set aside a premature federal judge's ruling that the ERA died nearly three years ago. The department said, however, that the high court should not rush into constitutional questions raised by the ruling.

The rejection Wednesday by the Georgia House makes it most unlikely that pro-ERA forces can muster a victory there before the June 30 ratification deadline.

"I'm disappointed but I'm not that surprised," said the ERA's standard-bearer in the House, state Rep. Cathey Steinberg, D-Atlanta. "I am somewhat disheartened, but we are used to defeat."

It had been eight years since the ERA was voted on in the House. It was defeated 101-72 in 1974, and since has failed twice in the Senate, in 1975 by 33-22 and in 1980 by 32-23.

The ERA would ban discrimination based on sex. Under a three-year ratification extension granted by Congress, it must be approved by 38 states by June 30 to become part of the Constitution.

But U.S. District Judge Marion Callister ruled Dec. 23 in Boise, Idaho, that Congress illegally extended the original seven-year deadline. He also ruled that decisions by five states to rescind their approval were proper. The five are among the 35 states that have ratified the amendment so far.

The Oklahoma Senate on Tuesday voted against reconsidering the amendment after defeating it last week. The ERA was reintroduced in the Oklahoma House on Wednesday, but the Senate action almost seals its fate.

Reagan Said Decided On Asking Excise Tax Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has decided on a 1983 budget plan that calls for higher excise taxes, the transfer of dozens of social programs to the states and the biggest deficit ever sent to Congress, administration sources report.

After meeting with his top economic advisers Wednesday, the president settled on a budget that would seek approximately $15 billion in new taxes to keep the projected deficit to about $75 billion, according to the sources, who did not want to be identified.

The sources said the new tax package would call for higher excise taxes on tobacco, alcohol and other consumer goods and the narrowing of a number of tax "loopholes."

The sources declined to be more specific about the tax proposals, saying some minor changes were possible over the next few days. They said the president planned to disclose his major budget proposals next Tuesday in his State of the Union message to Congress.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes confirmed that Reagan "made a number of decisions yesterday" on tax plans, but would not elaborate.

Earlier tax proposals under discussion within the administration centered on increased excise taxes on cigarettes, liquor, wine, long-distance telephone calls and "luxury" items, such as jewelry, furs and yachts.

Higher excise taxes on beer, gasoline and airline tickets also had been under review, but there was greater opposition within the administration to increase taxes on these items.

Revenue from the federal excise taxes would be turned over to the states to finance some 40 federal programs in health, education and other social areas that the administration wants to shift to

N.C. House Redistricting Rejected By Justice Dept.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department informed state officials today that it has rejected the redistricting plan for North Carolina's House of Representative seats.

State elections director Alex Brock said he was informed of the decision by telephone this morning.

He said Justice Department officials cited the use of large multimember districts and the possible dilution of minority voting strength.

The Justice Department cited three areas of particular concern: Guilford County, Cumberland County and a northeastern portion of the state including Bertie, Gates and Martin counties.

The Justice Department faced a deadline of midnight last night to approve or reject the state plan, and Justice officials said Wednesday they planned to mail a letter containing the decision before midnight.

The legislative redistricting plan was submitted to federal officials after it was approved by the General Assembly in a special session last fall.

Some legislators had predicted the House plan would be rejected, including Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, co-chairman of the House Redistricting Committee.

The reapportionment plan was reviewed by Justice under provisions of the 1965 federal Voting Rights Act.

Redistricting plans for state Senate seats and the state's 11 congressional districts have already been rejected. The Justice Department cited dilution of black voting strength in rejecting those plans in December.

Legislative leaders are expected to ask Gov. Jim Hunt to call a special legislative session to deal with the redistricting problems. But they have been awaiting word on the House plan before setting a date for the session.

Commission Presented Report On Juvenile Services Restitution

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

A report of progress to date on the Pitt County Juvenile Services Restitution Program was presented Wednesday night to members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission at its January meeting.

The Recreation and Parks Commission and the Juvenile Court Counselors of Pitt County are administrative co-sponsors of the program. The trio giving the report was Charles Vincent of the Recreation and Parks Department, Eve Rogers, chief Juvenile Courts counselor, and Clothilda Rodgers, who is employed as coordinator of the program on a half-time basis.

Vincent explained that the juvenile services restitution program had been two to three years in the making following groundwork by a task force. "The purpose of the program was to find a practical way to handle youth in trouble, in school and in private life and equally important, to provide restitution to victims," Vincent added that the Pitt County Commissioners had endorsed the concept.

To date, Vincent said, in addition to the Recreation and Parks Department, other local public agencies taking part in the program by providing a place for work services for juvenile offenders is the city fire department, the city police department, and the public works department.

Ms. Rodgers expanded on the concept and the current status of the program. "The juvenile service restitution program applies to children between the ages of 6 and 15," she said. "In our counseling work, we have seen in the last two or three years a definite trend developing. More youngsters are being apprehended, especially for offenses against property. Things like breaking and entering, larceny, first degree burglary and vandalism."

"In this program we are trying to effect changes, to set up a workable program that will serve a two-fold purpose, that of making restitution to victims of juvenile crimes. We are also trying to instill in youngsters the idea they will have to assume responsibility for wrongdoing," Ms. Rodgers added.

Currently, the program is funded by $8,000 made available last November by the Community Based Alternative Program. Efforts are being made to seek additional funding so that the program can be continued after the end of June, the date the CBA support terminates.

"In setting up this restitution program," Ms. Rodgers said, "we met with representatives of the Governor's Crime Commission, with legislative people and legal people to be sure the guidelines we have

Church Day Care Case May Reach High Court

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina would open the door to "charlatans" who would operate low-quality child care centers solely for monetary gain if it did not require that the centers be licensed, a University of North Carolina religion professor says.

But the principal of a school challenging the state's licensing authority in court says licensing doesn't reduce the potential for abuse.

If the state is told it cannot require licensing of the schools, "it would open the door to all kinds of abuse," said Winthrop S. Hudson, a professor of religion at the University of North Carolina.

"It would open the door for charlatans to come in and run the day care centers for profit."

John W. Lail, director of the Child Day Care Licensing Commission, agreed.

"It has the potential to bring out from the cracks in the floor people who pretend to be religious," Lail said. "It could be a real problem."

Lail said there would be little to keep someone from getting a charter as a religious organization and then go into the practice of running day care centers for profit without regard for health and safety standards.

But Charles Stanley, principal of one of eight schools sued by the state for allegedly operating without a license, said the centers all adhere to the standards anyway and said parents of the children would step in if health and safety abuses Candidate Files For School Bd.

Pennie Johnston Dunn of Greenville has filed with the Pitt County Board of Elections as a candidate for one of three seats on the city Board of Education in the May 4 elections.

Mrs. Dunn, wife of Tarboro Postmaster Henry G. Dunn, filed Wednesday for the board seat, stating, "I feel that I have a lot to contribute to students, to educators and to the community as a member of the Board of Education."

A Pitt County native, Mrs. Dunn has been employed as bookkeeper-head cashier at Big Star Foods here since 1959.

A 1951 graduate of Belvoir High School, she received certificates of completion from Cornell University for courses in economics in business, customer relations, effective communications and managing and training people.

Whichard Scholarships Established At UNC

MRS. PENNIE DUNN

David Julian Whichard, chairman of the board of The Daily Reflector and one of the state's oldest active newspapermen, has been honored by the establishment of the David Julian Whichard Scholarships in the school of journalism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The scholarship program was made possible by an endowment gift from Whichard's two sons, David J. Whichard II and John S. Whichard, their families, and the newspaper. The sons are co-publishers of The Daily Reflector, which was founded by their grandfather.

"This gift is being made in the 100th year of our newspaper and in honor of our father, who at 87 is one of the oldest active newspapermen in North Carolina," the sons said in establishing the scholarships.

The Daily Reflector, the oldest business in Greenville, will be 100 years old Jan. 26. Founded in 1882 by brothers Julian R. and David

Jordan Whichard, the newspaper began as a weekly called The Eastern Reflector.

The Daily Reflector published its first edition — a four page newspaper — on Dec. 10, 1894.

David Julian Whichard purchased the paper from his father in 1919. Still active in the business, he has served as president of the Association of Afternoon Daily Newspapers in the state, and the Eastern North Carolina Press Association.

Dr. Richard Cole, dean of the school of journalism, said, "These scholarships honor an outstanding North Carolina newspaperman. It is a most appropriate tribute to him, and it is exceedingly generous of his family to endow the scholarships permanently."

The first two scholarships will be given at the journal-

TV TROUBLE

I would like to know if CB radios can interfere with television reception, and if so, what steps can be taken to clear this up? S.E.

"Not normally," according to a television repairman. However, he said if the CB operator is boosting the radio's output above the 5 watts allowed by the Federal Communications Commission, it might cause some interference.

Your solution, he said, is to purchase a filter from a television outlet store to be attached to the television antenna wire to "filter out" the unwanted signal. Or, you could call the FCC for help if the radio operator is not cooperative.

Blood donations for credit — "a life-time supply of blood at no cost to you and your family" — are a thing of the past.

Dick Carney, administrator of the Red Cross Blood Center in Greenville, said blood now is made available to "any and everyone needing it" regardless of the patient's status as a donor. And regardless of that donor status, everyone has to pay the processing fee — the cost for collecting, storing, distributing blood.

The Greenville center, which serves as an operations base for the 28 North Carolina counties in the Red Cross Tidewater Region, imposes a variable fee based on the type of blood or blood product needed.

Typically, a whole unit of blood will cost $38, Carney said.

By comparison, some types of blood products needed by leukemia patients will cost more than $200 per transfusion, he said. The fee covers actual costs of the nonprofit organization, he said.

"There is no burden to replace it," Carney said, noting a change in policy that has developed in the last six years or so.

"There has been in the past an obligation to replace blood. There also was a time that if you gave blood, you received credits for you and your family."

Now, Carney said, blood "is made available to any and everybody with no burden to replace it."

The change away from the donor credit system was based on economic need — the Greenville center alone has a $2.1 million annual budget — and a shift in emphasis from individual need to a "concept of community responsibility," Carney said.

"There has always been some cost involved" for processing blood, Carney said. Today, he explained, "It's the feeling that the people who actually use it will pay for the cost."

"If you give me a unit of blood and it then is given to patient John Doe, then patient John Doe picks up the cost of collection."

Under that policy, Carney acknowledged, there is no incentive for individuals to donate blood except through a sense of public spiritedness.

"If you are a 10-gallon blood donor and you go to a hospital, you are not even asked if you know what the Red Cross is. Neither is the ... patient who has never given blood," Carney said.

Carney said the cost policy varies among the 57 blood centers in the United States. The Greenville center's fees are approximately midway among the 57 centers, he said.

Food Allergies Can Develop In Children, Adults

Although food is a delightful necessity for one's existence, it can often cause illness and discomfort, says Marjorie M. Donnelly, extension food and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University.

Mrs. Donnelly is referring to food allergies, which, she says, can develop in babies, children and adults.

Following are some clues for avoiding allergic reactions.

Cravings: Foods one craves are often foods one is allergic to. Children crave sugar, soda, popcorn, peanut butter, pizza and milk. Women crave chocolate, baked goods, orange juice, yogurt or coffee. Men crave cheese, beer, beef, apples and grape juice. Be suspicious, when an allergy is present, of any food a person loves to eat or any unusual food that is craved.

Dislikes: When an allergy is present, it may also be due to foods a person dislikes. For example, those who refuse chocolate may also be allergic to cocoa and cola

Seasons: With some allergies, the offending food may be eaten without incident in summer and cause illness in winter.

Frequency: Reaction may depend on how often an offending food is eaten or upon contaminants in the food or in the method of preparation.

Mold: Persons sensitive to molds may have symptoms from moldy or yeasty foods, such as beer, mushrooms or bread.

These foods do not necessarily cause allergic reactions, but if a family member has rashes, fatigue or other symptoms of allergy, one of the above foods or conditions in his diet may be the cause.

BONEY MEAT

Here are some meat-buying tips from Rachel Kinlaw, extension food and nutrition specialist at NCSU.

A pound of boneless meat serves four people, a pound of bone-in meat serves two to three and a pound of boney meat serves only one person. When a menu calls for stewing meat, compare the cost of buying a package of cut meat with the cost of buying a roast and doing the cutting yourself.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Hey, I've got a new face for Mt. Rushmore.

It's Frances Gabe, a 67-year-old woman from Oregon who, in 1981, uttered those immortal words, "For God's sake, why should women waste half their lives cleaning the house?"

This living legend has backed up her words with action by creating the first self-cleaning house, a feat that a lot of us talk about, but never really pull off.

Ms. Gabe has applied for 68 patents on devices in her self-cleaning house. Her floors, doors, walls and ceilings are coated with a resin finish and her floors are sloped to all four corners so that all she has to do is spray 'em with soap, water them down and blow them dry.

She has no carpets. Ashes in the fireplace are hosed down a drain.

Pots and pans are self-cleaning.

And instead of wasting time loading a dishwasher and unloading it, she has a dishwasher cupboard.

She also has a laundry cupboard where the clothes are washed and dried right on the hangers.

I don't know about the rest of you, but I'd be willing to conduct a telethon for the cure of Domestic Bondage. Or at least get some research in motion. Ms. Gabe is a beginning, but we've got a long way to go.

We need a communications system between every house in the country; and a grocery store of their choice so that all we have to do is put our order into a computer and a conveyor belt will send the food right into our kitchens.

We need drip-dry children.

We need a wrinkle-eradicator stall where you step into it with your clothes on, push a button and come out wrinklefree.

We need a hand-wash machine... a couple of little hands that gently squeeze sweaters and hose and roll them in a towel for drying.

How about a leftover that self-destructs, with a timer on it you can set for 30 days, 60 days or a lifetime?

I'd like to see a food detector that would beep and light up every time your kids took food in a room where it wasn't supposed to be.

I think we're onto something, folks. Let's all get behind this cause and perpetuate the ideals and principles set down by

Frances Gabe. I tell you I haven't been so excited since I put a sign over my oven: "THANK YOU FOR NOT SMOKING."

Dear Abby

Violence Not Always Mental Illness Sign

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to your reply to "Had It in Altoona," the woman whose husband (Pete) beat her up. I am the director of M.E.N. Inc., a counseling program in Juneau, Alaska, for men who are violent in their intimate relationships. Pete was not only violent, he also lied about his violence and denied responsibility for his behavior. This is characteristic of abusive men; it is difficult for them to admit they are hurting someone they love.

It is tempting to call Pete and other men "sick" and "mentally deranged." This is only one of the myths that surround domestic violence. The fact is, violence has very little correlation to mental illness. Violence is one of the ways (and certainly one of the most negative and dangerous ways) that men have learned to cope with stress.

Abby, you're right. Pete needs help. But he doesn't need help for a mental illness; he needs help in accepting responsibility for his violent behavior, and learning more positive ways of coping with stress.

WALTER MAJOROS

DEAR WALTER: Thank you. But Pete cut his wife's fingertips with scissors, threw her down the stairs and beat her over the head with a telephone, causing a concussion and a gash that required 22 stitches to close! Perhaps "counseling" to teach him more appropriate ways to cope with stress is all Pete needs, but I would also insist on a psychiatric evaluation. If this man is not a dangerous psychopath, he certainly behaves like one.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 5000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

This year, Rose High School will submit the names of fifteen nominees to Governor's School of North Carolina, the oldest statewide summer residential program in the nation for gifted and talented rising junior and senior high school students.

The four who have been selected for academics are Alan Dickens, Will Monroe David Priestley and Lisa Wang. Eleven have been chosen for achievement in the area of performing arts. They are Kelly Butler (dance), Elizabeth Ellen (violin), Josie Keller (art), Niel Kopping (art), Elizabeth Kraczon (art), John Little (art), Chris Love (trombone), Jessica Murphy (art), Danetta Radeka (viola), Lewis Roberson (drums) and Bruce Thompson (trombone).

Application for Governor's School could have been made either in the form of a self-nomination or a principal, teacher, or counselor recommendation. The number of nominees each school is allowed to send is based on the total involved class populations.

Along with their names and transcripts, nominees were required to send a paragraph telling why they wished to attend Governor's School and a list of their awards, honors and activities.

On March 13, those performing arts nominees who are invited will audition before a Statewide Selection Committee. Notification to students who are selected for the school will be made on April 19.

Located on the Salem College campus in Winston-Salem and St. Andrews

Presbyterian College campus in Laurinburg, Governor's School is operated by the State Board of Education through the Director of the Division for Exceptional Children in the State Department of Public Instruction. Since the School receives yearly funding directly from the General Assembly of North Carolina, there are no tuition or room and board fees for the eight hundred students. The faculty and staff are composed of approximately one hundred-and-thirty persons who fill the roles of instructors, counselors, health and recreational advisors.

The six-week program offers a non-credit curriculum which is divided into three areas of work. Area I involves the student's main concentration of study. Each student chooses one subject in Area I for which he attends Governor's School. Academic subjects include English, Spanish, French, Mathematics, natural science, and social science. Subjects for performing arts are dance, art, choral music, and instrumental music. Area II, which gives students the opportunity to move from their major area of study and begin to comprehend the parts as a whole, deals with general conceptual development and philosophy. Area III is the study of the self and society.

Opening day for 1982 Governor's School is June 27. By then, students will have been notified whether to attend Governor's School West or East. About halfway through the session, a Parent's Day will be held, and students will be allowed to return home for the weekend.

Greg Davis has been notified of his nomination in the special Japan-U.S. Senate Scholarship Program administered by the Youth For Understanding Program. He now joins Josie Keller in submitting his application for further consideration in this summer program open to high school juniors. Rose is one of the few schools in N.C. that has two nominees.

"SEEING IS BELIEVING!"

Waiting And Wondering

Government programs to assure farmers a minimum price for their products got a black eye with disclosure that 560 million pounds of cheese had been stored by the government to keep prices up.

An indignant President ordered distribution of 30 million pounds among the poor... which, despite the difficulties it posed, represents a drop in the bucket.

We're waiting for "the other shoe to drop".

What will happen when somebody tells Mr. Reagan about the vast supply of butter being kept in government storage? (Maybe only God and the General Accounting Office know how much is involved.)

On the surface, cost of the stored butter is so high few other countries want to buy it, and production levels insure the golden hoard will not dwindle.

Too, the big cheese give-away encountered so many problems it might discourage a similar effort with butter.

Anyway, we're waiting and wondering.

Hospital Has Growing Pains

Pitt County Memorial Hospital is apparently overflowing with patients.

M.E. Gilstrap, executive director for the hospital, told the trustees Tuesday night that the patient load that day was a record at 450. "We are extremely tight for beds," he reported.

Chief of Staff Dr. William E. McConnell agreed that "it can be difficult on a particular day" to obtain a room.

There are, of course, other rooms available, some 100 of them, in the new bed tower which has been constructed but for which staffing requirements have yet to be met. These will be opened as the staff is acquired.

The patient load growth is an indication that the hospital is fulfilling its dual role as a community hospital serving Pitt County, and as a regional referral hospital in line with its affiliation with the ECU Medical School.

Development Idea ERA On Its Death Bed

By BILL NOBLITT

RALEIGH — The textile industry in North Carolina would like to get in on the major state aid being made available to attract new, high technology development to this state.

The result would be a new industry from within, instead of one sought from some other location.

Charles Dunn, executive vice president of the N.C. Textile Manufacturers Association, detailed the proposal in a recent talk with the Charlotte Textile Club.

The nut of it: A $25 million appropriation from the General Assembly to launch a full-scale research and development effort and to beef up the school of textiles at N.C. State University; an on-going commitment of $5 million or $10 million yearly to underwrite additional research and development activities in textiles; and, an immediate half-million dollar fund to organize a committee and get started on the project.

Textile industry leaders point to the state's commitment to microelectronics as an example of how all steps will be pulled to aid a new industry. Similar attention ought to be paid the state's economic life-blood — textiles — they feel.

lating trucking, utilities and banking — textiles are the economic life-blood of the state and will continue to be, Dunn said. "Put it all together and you realize textiles cannot be replaced and should not be ignored."

What is ahead? "The ideas and processes should be developed and utilized first in North Carolina," Dunn said, then ticked off a long list of possibilities like composites and new materials for use in medicine, airplane and automobile manufacturing, building construction and advances in automation and competition in the world market.

BILL NOBLITT

A committee from the industry, government and the universities should be formed to establish policy on immediate and long-range research and development in the textile industry, Dunn suggested.

"Some suggestions might be new methods of automation, including the use of robots; the telescoping of production processes; energy and environmental conservation; health and safety; and new generations of machinery which could provide benefits," he said. Automation does not necessarily mean lost jobs, Dunn noted, since expanded markets and increased productivity should increase the jobs in this state.

Commitment Gov. Jim Hunt recently urged leaders from other states to get more deeply involved in pushing research and development. He singled out North Carolina's $20 million commitment to agricultural research, $25 million for the Microelectronics Center, the math and science high school, and beginning steps in microbiology as examples.

Dunn responded to that: "It is time for the state of North Carolina to make that same commitment to the textile complex. It is time for the development and implementation of a research and development effort for our industries that is second to none. It is time to take the steps to guarantee that by 1990 our industries are recognized as leading innovators and providers of beneficial products for the world. It is time to act to ATLANTA — A few days ago an opponent of the Equal Rights Amendment, state Rep. Rudolph Johnson of Morrow, proposed to change the Georgia legislature's rules for ratification of a constitutional amendment. His idea was to require a two-thirds vote instead of a simple majority.

Up rose another opponent of the amendment, Rep. Warren Evans of Thomson. No, sir, he said, "We just want to whup it in the good old-fashioned way." Absent some political miracle, that is exactly what the Georgia House will do to the ERA this week.

Georgia's anticipated rejection will follow on the heels of a decisive defeat last week in the Oklahoma State Senate. There the ERA sank by a vote of 27-21. Illinois is now the last state in which proponents have a lively hope of winning ratification, and Illinois alone would not suffice. It takes 38 states to write an amendment into the Constitution, and only 35 have assented so far. Because five of those 35 have rescinded their original ratifications, the issue is even more doubtful.

The bells toll with ironic overtones. Back in 1979, Congress extended the ratification period for the ERA from the original seven years to 10 years and three months. This unprecedented action amounted to changing the rules in the middle of the game. Proponents thought this was just, wise and altogether wonderful. But here in Georgia, proponents were horrified by Mr. Johnson's bid to do the same thing.

Generally speaking, proponents of the ERA are the same people who most warmly defend "judicial activism." They loved the landmark decisions that ended school segregation, reorganized state legislatures, expanded the rights of criminal defendants, and nullified state laws prohibiting abortion. But when U.S. District Judge Marion J. Callister last month held that the five rescinding states had acted validly, proponents found such activism outrageous.

One more observation: When it comes to denouncing bigotry, no newspaper in the land is more eloquent than the Washington Post. It is thus remarkable to read in the Post that "five states have attempted to rescind, but Callister, a Mormon, did not spell out what constitutes a valid rescission." The snide inference we are expected to draw is that the judge based his decision not upon the law of the land but upon the position of his church. This is the religious equivalent of racism, which the Post so roundly and rightly deplores.

In point of fact, Judge Callister did indeed follow the law as he perceives it. His 81-page opinion deals encyclopedically with the law of "standing" and "ripeness" and with the precedents that involve "contemporaneous" agreement among the states. Incidentally, in ruling that three Idaho legislators had standing to challenge the issue in court, Judge Callister relied in part upon a case in which Sen. Edward Kennedy successfully had claimed standing to challenge President Nixon's pocket veto of a bill. Senator Kennedy also has denounced the judge's opinion.

Other Editors Say No Basket Case

N.C. Symphony Board head Nancy Faircloth and her emergency rescue crew found plenty of skeptical onlookers last year when they sped to the scene of what looked like the Symphony's fatal crash.

The patient was down, bleeding and in shock. Demoralized, bankrupt, stripped of its musical leadership, its spring season amputated without anesthetic when money ran out, the Symphony seemed a basket case if not one for the morgue.

When Mrs. Faircloth took drastic emergency measures, many spectators and participants felt "heroic" was not exactly the word for what she was doing: firing the paid chief executive, cutting musician chairs, pruning the office staff, telling scheduled guest artists not to come, stonewalling many musician gripes — and force-feeding the patient with more Patrick Flynn than it really wanted.

But a few short months on this rigorous treatment plus supplemental financial fluids have worked a medical miracle.

The Symphony's fiscal complexion has changed from traumatic red to healthy black. Some handsome grants, better ticket sales, an intense Wake County fundraising effort, improved relations with state volunteer support groups, and a large increase in the Annual Sustaining Fund have all played a part.

Mrs. Faircloth has gotten other trustees more interested in active fundraising.

Now, a new executive director with two-pronged credentials in business and musicology and a fine Arkansas Symphony track record is coming aboard. And Flynn-led concerts are getting good review and good crowds.

No doubt this cure can't have been accomplished without leaving some scar tissue. But the Faircloth Rescue Squad deserves a round of applause for not only saving this precious patient's life but bringing it back to relative health.

Strength For Today

SALT OF THE EARTH "Ye are the salt of the earth," Jesus said to his disciples.

Salt has two major functions. It was — and is — used as a preservative to keep things from spoiling. That, Jesus said in effect, is one of the functions of the Christian believer: to keep life wholesome. When Christians act as they should, they preserve and maintain the best values of the communities in which they live. Somebody or some group always sets moral and ethical standards. This should be the task of Christians if they are really salt of the earth.

The other service salt performs is to bring out latent flavors. This, Jesus was also saying, is another gift that Christians bring to the people around them. Christians can really make life taste different for others. They have a peace and happiness about them which takes the flatness out of life and makes it good to the taste. — Elisha Douglass

'Entrenched' Did Prevail

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — The 11-part telegram from the State Department that rattled across the continent after Christmas to a vacationing president in California helps answer this perplexing question: Why did Ronald Reagan reverse decades of personal conviction and turn down advanced weapons for Taiwan?

The message climaxed months of advice to President Reagan from the national security bureaucracy that selling Taiwan up-to-date warplanes for defensive purposes would risk a rupture of U.S. relations with communist China. The telegram reiterated a warning, by now familiar to Reagan, that such sales might topple Teng Hsiao-ping and substitute an anti-American faction.

It is hard enough for Reagan to dispute experts on tax policy, an area where he has unusual confidence and personal experience. It was nearly impossible for this foreign policy the Washington-Peking connection be severed. By the time the president returned to the White House for a Jan. 7 National Security Council meeting, he had decided he must disappoint his old friends and foremost political cadres.

That decision concluded a virtuoso bureaucratic performance by Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who timed his move through a narrow window, with Congress out of session and no dissent on the NSC staff thanks to the fall of Richard V. Allen. But beyond Haig's skill, Reagan's reversal again shows the tenacity of the permanent government in maintaining policy even against a doctrinaire president bent on change.

As a candidate, Reagan certainly was bent on changing Taiwan policy. He was sympathetic to the island's plight generally and its specific need for an around-the-clock, adverse-weather plane to deter the giant neighbor across the Taiwan Strait. China policy was the one serious disagreement between Reagan and Haig when they met before the election.

After the election, the new China hands who had designed Jimmy Carter's policy stayed on the job. Charles (Chaz) Freeman, head of the State Department's China Desk under President Carter, was charge d'affaires in Peking. His reports went to his old colleagues on the China Desk, including his former deputy, Scott Hallford. Freeman's reporting built the predictable case against advanced arms for Taiwan.

That helped shape reports by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) warning of dire consequences should Taiwan get its arms. For example, a secret intelligence document last Oct. 22 on "the military situation in the Taiwan Strait" warned: "Sale of advanced weapons such as FX fighter or Harpoon missile to Taiwan would be perceived in Beijing (Peking) as part of a U.S. policy that obstructs reunification (with Taiwan). PRC (People's Republic of China) would react strongly — probably by downgrading U.S. relations, cancelling or curtailing cooperative ventures and being more belligerent to Taiwan."

A closely-held CIA report went further: The weapons sale could mean the fall of Deng, which might bring reconciliation with Moscow. Allen, then NSC director, so bitterly disagreed that he privately called the CIA reports "disinformation, or at least misinformation." Haig began to complain that Allen was making trouble about Taiwan.

Reagan himself was making trouble, to judge from his conversations with Republican members of Congress — including Sen. Jesse Helms. When Helms agreed to drop objections to a U.S.-Chinese consular treaty, he got the impression that Reagan would sell the FX aircraft to Taiwan (and so informed Senate colleagues).

But with Allen at political death's door in December, Haig moved quickly. He got agreement from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger that over 40 Soviet divisions pinned down by China on the Sino-Soviet border made the Peking connection vital. CIA Director William Casey also backed Haig. With the NSC's directorship and Far Eastern Desk temporarily unfilled, there was no rebuttal.

That long telegram sent to California noted that Congress was not in session — an implicit suggestion that the time to strike had arrived. The one dissident was presidential counselor Edwin Meese. No more comfortable in foreign policy than his chief, Meese could not begin to refute the combined wisdom of State, Defense and the intelligence community. Neither could Reagan.

William P. Clark, newly brought in to replace Allen, was silent. Thus, at the Jan. 7 NSC meeting, nobody made the opposite case: that China, now as historically, will do what's in its best interests, whatever the kowtowing from Washington; that those troops on the Soviet border are there to protect China, not the U.S.; that Peking's refusal to say one word on Poland proves the absence of a U.S.-Chinese entente.

Politicians at the White House, surprised by the president's decision, were a little disturbed by the fact that the loudest hand-clapping over the announce-

Your Intuition Also A Factor

By JOHN CUNNIFF

AP Business Analyst NEW YORK (AP) — In order to do well in the stock market, said Bernard Baruch, you must be fairly intelligent, you must have all information that is obtainable about a company, and then you must take action.

Milton Fisher, a man known to have ridden 10-cent stocks to a couple of dollars, says there's more to it than that, and Baruch knew it. Intuitively, he says, you must feel a stock is right or wrong.

Don't underestimate intuition, he says. In buying, he observes, it is indeed wise to have the facts. Selling is different. "If you wait for the facts before you sell," he says, "prices will be falling."

Baruch, he reminds you, conceded he often sold "too soon," before a stock had peaked. "I say he was using intuitive awareness and that he had a tremendous advantage because of it," says Fisher.

Fisher, attorney, investment banker, chairman of three public companies, venture capitalist and general problem solver, has written a book, his second. His first was "Ho To Make Big Money In The Over The Counter Market." This one is called simply "Intuition."

Fisher concedes that much of his success in life comes from being hard-nosed, which is to say that he believes in reason and logic and thus, as with most people, he is a heavy user of the left side of his brain.

As he explains it, with some scientific documentation, there are two systems of awareness — conscious and intuitive. During your life your intuitive system amasses a vast mine of nonverbal knowledge, which can be interpreted only by you. Culture conditions you to trust only conscious knowledge, and so deprives you of knowledge you could use to make decisions or solve problems, such as how to do well in stocks.

The brain is specialized. The left specializes in verbalization, logic, talking, reading, analytical thinking, calculations, linguistic concepts. The right excels in perceptual insight, musical ability, holistic understanding, tactile sensation and intuitive understanding.

In this age of reason, Fisher says, people distrust knowing without being aware of how they know. If they cannot account for it, he says, "they reject it, discredit it or ignore it." Even scorn it.

So bad, he says. "The intuitive system is an awareness network that gathers and processes information." Real, valuable information, he says. Information that can be used in very practical ways.

Isn't it odd that a man of Fisher's background should write such a book? Not really, he says. Not when he finds himself using intuition successfully, and observing others also using it to obvious advantage.

Fisher says flatly that every successful businessman he has talked to has indicated he used it. Alfred Sloan, former General Motors chairman and a man some consider a management genius, is reputed to have said that when all the facts, studies and reports were completed, the final decision often might be intuitive.

Fisher cites a letter to him from Henry Ford II, former head of Ford Motor. "Intuitive reactions," Ford said he had found, "are usually valuable even if they prove to be wrong. They give me an instant basis with which to compare alternatives that may later be developed in the more usual ways of corporate practice. And when my intuition's right in the first instance, I am that far ahead at the outset."

In business, Fisher says, he is presented with many business deals to consider. "Almost instantly an intuitive answer comes. If negative, it is like a yellow light flashing "caution, caution, caution," he says.

Because of obligations to others, such as partners, associates, or directors, he then documents the feeling with rational evidence — with the left brain documentation that is demanded in the world of business.

The volume, published by Dutton, was a labor of intellectual curiosity that brought Fisher into contact with scientists, philosophers, scholars and many other successful people. It took years of work.

And while it probably was not meant to be a "how to" guide to the stock market, or to business in general, it certainly offers a more practical approach than some of the intricately contrived, incredibly priced and almost impenetrable newsletters that are now being promoted.

Imagine, trust yourself. Trust your intuition.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Almost all of the country will be hit by snow or rain in the forecast period until Friday morning. Weather will remain cold in the northern half of the country, and mild in the southern tier. (AP Laserphoto)

By The Associated Press
Rain spread rapidly eastward across North Carolina this morning, signaling the beginning of a wet period coming up for the state over the next two days.
Low pressure over Tennessee and Kentucky early this morning moved rapidly across southern Virginia and northern North Carolina today. This area of low pressure will be moving off the coast tonight. As it does, there may be a break in the rain across North Carolina. But another low pressure area will be moving from the high plains into the Mississippi Valley later tonight and Friday. This next low promises to be a major winter storm for the midwest.

Rain will be spreading back across North Carolina tonight and will continue into Friday. There will be a possibility for some heavy rains tonight and Friday. With the ground already saturated, the rain could pose a threat of some rapid rises in creeks and streams over western North Carolina.

Around the state Wednesday, dense fog blanketed North Carolina during the morning hours. The foggy conditions gave way to cloudy skies during the afternoon. Temperatures ranged from the upper 30s on the Outer Banks and north-eastern Piedmont to the middle 60s back in the mountains.

Recreational weather outlook: A rainy two days is in store for North Carolinians through tomorrow. It appears that the rains will be ending Saturday with a turn to colder weather Sunday. Highs today and Friday will generally be in the 40s across the northern sections of the state and in the 50s across the southern sections.

Small craft advisories are in effect along the North Carolina coast and on the sounds.

The Department of Justice has announced that it will ask the Supreme Court to postpone review of Judge Callister's decision until after June 30, when the extended deadline at last expires. Unless at least three more states have ratified in the interim, the whole question will be moot. The ERA will be dead by any definition. The high court's historic tradition is never to plunge needlessly into constitutional thickets. This policy, if you please, is "judicial restraint," the very policy that proponents urged so strenuously upon Judge Callister when the case was pending before him.

Well, as we are so fond of saying when The New York Times is inconsistent, much depends upon whose Ochs is gored. Those of us who now applaud Judge Callister's activism have denounced activism elsewhere in times past. Let it pass. The ERA is not yet dead, but it is dying fast. And that suits some of us just fine.

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Air Force will boost Britain's anti-aircraft defenses with three surface-to-air Bloodhound missile bases along England's east coast, the Defense Department said Wednesday.

An RAF spokesman said the three Bloodhound units, each with 24 of the supersonic missiles, will be pulled back from RAF bases in West Germany in 1963-64. RAF bases in West Germany will still be protected by NATO missile units, including short-range British Rapier surface-to-air missiles, he said.

The aging Bloodhounds, which first went into service in 1964, can hit targets up to 60 miles away. They will form Britain's third line of defense against attacking aircraft, the RAF spokesman said.

The first line comprises long-range fighter jets such as the new Panavia Tornado interceptor and the F4 Phantom. The second is made up of middle-range fighters such as the Lightning, he said.

Food Service Workers Meet

The Pitt County-Greenville City School Food Service Association met recently at the W.H. Robinson School. Cafeteria managers and employees from the county and city schools were present.

A school lunch tray contest was held. Typical school lunch trays were entered and judged on attractiveness, eye appeal, color variety, appropriateness for a school lunch and meeting the federal lunch pattern requirements.

South Greenville's cafeteria took first place. Eastern cafeteria placed second and the third place winner was W.H. Robinson cafeteria. Prizes of floral hanging baskets for use in the cafeteria were awarded to the winners. The agenda consisted of a panel discussion of the school lunch program. The panel members were Pauline Boyd, parent from the Pitt County schools; Cecilia Bocklage, parent from the Greenville city schools, and Janet Farrar, child care consultant with the division of child nutrition, state Department of Public Instruction. The discussion provided an exchange of ideas between parents, state consultants and the school food service employees.

Meanwhile, said Dunn, North Carolina needs to offer the same high technology education, vocational preparation and job-training opportunities in high schools and community colleges for the textile industry as it does for newcomers. Also, he said the state needs to take the initiative in helping to expand exports, eliminate the inventory taxes, aid in pollution control, and assist existing textile industries in the ways in which new industries are helped.

Reagan Decided . . .

state control, sources said. In addition, Reagan will propose the wholesale transfer of the giant welfare and food stamp programs to the states in exchange for a total federal takeover of the burgeoning Medicaid program, which has been growing 15 percent a year in costs for providing health care to the nation's poor, according to the sources.

Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan disclosed Wednesday that one "loophole" the administration would seek to narrow involves tax-exempt industrial development bonds that local governments sell to attract new businesses. Administration officials declined to identify the other tax changes the president approved, although one proposal under active consideration called for limiting deductions that can be claimed on unemployment insurance.

The excise tax proposals are likely to provoke opposition from a number of Reagan's Republican supporters in Congress. Earlier this week, House GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York complained that higher excise taxes will hurt the "little guy" and risk political defeat for Republicans.

Reagan is reluctantly supporting higher taxes as the only way to keep future deficits from soaring well beyond $100 billion a year, aides said.

A $75 billion deficit for fiscal 1983, which begins Oct. 1, would be the largest ever projected by a president in his budget message to Congress.

The deficit for the 1982 is expected to be the largest in history — about $100 billion, but Reagan had projected a deficit of only $45 billion for the year in his initial proposal to Congress.

The largest deficit now on the books is $66.4 billion, set in 1976.

Sources also reported that an economic forecast accompanying the new budget plan predicts the economy will achieve virtually no growth on average during 1982, then grow by 5 percent a year during 1983 and 1984.

Inflation is expected to recede to 8 percent in 1982, to 6 percent in 1983 and 5 percent in 1984. But unemployment is expected to average nearly 9 percent throughout 1982 — the highest level since World War II. The current jobless rate is 8.9 percent.

Among the new proposals in the budget is a plan to create up to 25 "urban enterprise zones" in depressed inner cities. The government will try to attract business in these areas through a combination of tax breaks and an easing of regulatory requirements.

The urban revitalization program would cost the Treasury an estimated $25 million to $325 million in lost tax revenue.

Last month, the president decided to ask Congress for another record increase in defense spending along with about $31 billion in cuts in non-military domestic programs for 1983, according to administration sources.

The sources said the new tax package would raise significantly more revenue in 1984 than in 1983, but they said the tax increases being sought are relatively minor when compared with the $280 billion in individual and business tax cuts that take effect between 1981 and 1984.

After winning the largest tax cut in history from Congress last year, Reagan was cool to the idea of proposing higher taxes, but he capitulated only after his advisers warned of growing

Guerrilla Chief Killed In Clash

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — Government security forces killed the commander of one of the four guerrilla groups fighting the military government in a shootout at his hideout on the west side of Guatemala City, authorities said.

Other guerrillas were believed to have escaped during the clash Wednesday, but arms and a large quantity of anti-government propaganda were found inside the house, the authorities said.

The action that killed Edgard Francisco Palma Lau, also known as "Commandant Pascual" of the Organization of People in Arms, was the second raid by government forces on a guerrilla hideout in two days.

At least two guerrillas were killed Tuesday when security forces clashed with members of the Guerrilla Army of the Poor at a house on the south side of the city. An array of arms and explosives, medicines, food rations and anti-government pamphlets were found at the scene, authorities said.

A series of bombs planted by leftist guerrillas Tuesday left large sections of the city without electricity, and the National Electrification Institute said Wednesday the damage to three towers, high-tension power lines and one power plant would take at least a day to repair.

A bomb also damaged a Finance Ministry building in the north side of the capital, wounding a guard.

The power outage forced factories and industrial plants to cut production and spurred huge traffic jams because traffic lights were not working.

Violence between the left and right has increased with about 350 people killed so far this month. In the last four years, an average of 300 people a month have been killed in the political violence.

New Overseas Studies Slated

ECU News Bureau

A new overseas program, involving six and a half weeks of study and travel in Morocco, will be offered by East Carolina University May 11-June 26.

Directed by Dr. Robert Cramer, 10 students will be enrolled in the initial program. Students from all fields of study are eligible, and will attend classes taught in English at the American Language Center in Rabat, the capital of Morocco. Participants will live in the homes of families in the Rabat area.

Academic credit earned through the program can be applied directly to each student's transcript. Non-credit courses include conversational French and introductory class in Arabic.

Further details about the program are available from Cramer, department of geography and planning, ECU, Greenville.

were to come about.

He also said that the mere licensing of a school does not prevent "charlatans" from operating. He cited the Jim Jones case as an example, saying that Jones, who led his group to mass suicide at Guayana, was licensed by the state of California.

But Stanley's main argument focuses on religious freedom and the separation of church and state.

"You can't just give the state a blank check that they can fill out any time they desire," Stanley said.

One thing both sides agree on is that the controversy probably will have to be settled by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The issue first came to light in 1978, when 11 fundamentalist Christian day care centers decided to run their centers without a state license.

State law requires licensing by the Division of Child Day Care Licensing of the Department of Administration. The law sets standards for fire, health, size, nutrition, outdoor play and the number of beds, state officials say.

The state filed a civil suit against the 11 schools, contending that the licensing provisions did not constitute an infringement of religious freedom.

A hearing on that suit was held in Raleigh earlier this week. Attorneys for both sides are to file legal briefs with state Judge Henry A. McKinnon of Lumberton by March 8. Final arguments in the case are set for March 22.

Under the plan approved Wednesday, the administration hopes to keep the deficit under $55 billion for 1984 — the year by which Reagan had earlier promised to produce a balanced budget.

Another Multi-Billion Divorce Case Is Undertaken

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) —

Celebrity divorce specialist Marvin Mitchelson has settled one multi-billion dollar case, but he promptly filed another against a Saudi Arabian sheik whose wife is asking for a record $3 billion. Mitchelson announced an out-of-court settlement of Soraya Khashoggi's $2.5 billion claim against her husband, Adnan Khashoggi, but retained his status as a participant in the world's richest marital battle with an even larger suit on behalf of Sheika Dena Al-Fassi. Mrs. Al-Fassi claims 27-year-old Sheik Mohammed Al-Fassi imprisoned and threatened her. Her Superior Court lawsuit seeks dissolution of his other two marriages and half the community property, which Mitchelson estimated at more than $6 billion.

"He is still married to all three women. This is contrary to California law," Mitchelson said Wednesday. "We feel Sheika Dena is the only rightful wife. She was the first wife. They were married when she was 15."

Mrs. Al-Fassi, now 23, was born in Belgium, Mitchelson said as she sat silently next to him in his offices. She married Al-Fassi in 1975. They have four children, two of them adopted, who currently live with their father at the Diplomat Hotel in Hollywood, Fla.

Mrs. Al-Fassi's suit said she has "been held a captive in a locked room by my husband's squad of bodyguards, acting on his orders, and prevented from using a telephone."

"I have recently been threatened by my husband with physical injury unless I signed his proposed property settlement agreement," the suit said. "I am afraid that, unless restrained, my husband will order his henchmen to abduct and falsely imprison (me)."

Al-Fassi captured national attention by painting wildly colored sexual details on statues in front of his mansion, which was gutted in a New Year's Day 1980 fire that investigators labeled arson. Mitchelson said the couple never lived in the mansion.

The suit listed other homes in Switzerland, London, Germany, France, Spain, Japan and at the Royal Palace in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.

Mitchelson said the couple's lavish lifestyle had included a $250,000 birthday party for one of their sons, private airplanes and 15 residences in Florida as well as many others around the world.

Mrs. Al-Fassi's suit alleged that her husband has concealed ownership of some California property because of other pending lawsuits, including one by one of his other wives.

Mitchelson said Mrs.

Khashoggi's suit against her Saudi husband had been "settled amicably." California courts refused to hear it, saying it should be tried in England, where she spent most of her time.

Mitchelson said he could not reveal how much she was awarded. But when asked by a reporter if the amount was adequate, he replied, "I'm smiling, aren't I?"

Khashoggi's lawyer, Joseph Ball, said only the settlement was "nothing like what she was asking for." Mrs. Khashoggi had demanded half her husband's fortune, estimated at $5 billion.

Mrs. Khashoggi took the veil of the Moslem faith when she married Khashoggi as a teen-ager. She filed suit two years ago, claiming her husband obtained a proxy divorce without her knowledge, cut her off without sufficient funds and barred her from seeing their five children.

Mitchelson said all that has been resolved, and Mrs. Khashoggi now sees the children regularly.

Explanation For 'Taping'

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon made what became known as the Watergate tapes in an effort to influence the judgment of history, John Ehrlichman says.

In other words, says Nixon's former domestic affairs adviser, Nixon didn't want history to bestow Henry Kissinger with honors Nixon felt he should get himself.

Nixon's chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, told Ehrlichman "that the reason that the taping system went in is that Nixon wanted to be able to prove to history that the great initiatives in foreign policy were his concepts, not Henry's, and that he was afraid Henry would run away with history, the judgment of history."

Ehrlichman's comments came in a segment taped last week for showing tonight on ABC's "20-20" television program.

Ehrlichman himself spent 18 months in prison for his part in the Watergate cover-up. On the television program he repeats allegations from his book, "Witness to Power," that Chief Justice Warren Burger, Attorney General John Mitchell and Nixon discussed issues that were before the high court. Mitchell denies such conversations took place, and Burger has refused to discuss the matter.

"Well, I didn't make it up," Ehrlichman said. "I came back from that breakfast meeting and I sat down and made notes of what was discussed." He said the date was Dec. 18, 1970.

"I thought it was extraordinary that the chief justice would sit there and let Richard Nixon lobby him," Ehrlichman said. He said there were other similar discussions involving school desegregation, the death penalty and criminal issues.

Appreciation

An appreciation service will be held Sunday at 3 p.m. at Wells Chapel Church in honor of district missionary Velma Moore.

Elder James Lloyd of Robersonville will be the guest speaker. The church is located at Fifth and Hudson streets, Greenville. The public is invited, according to the pastor.

Count At Least 40 Arkansas Tremors

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The mild earthquakes that have been rattling teapots and rousing livestock for more than a week are part of a swarm that could be ending, officials say.

About 40 tremors have rumbled over Arkansas since Jan. 12. On Wednesday evening, a quake measuring 4.5 on the Richter scale shook the central and north-central parts of the state. No damage or injuries were reported.

"I can't say absolutely that there's no danger, but there's nothing to indicate that we may have a damaging earthquake," said Arch Johnston, director of the Tennessee Earthquake Information Center in Memphis.

"Usually these swarms last about a week," he said, but added that aftershocks and tremors still "could last for some time."

Johnston and the U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., measured Wednesday's tremor at 4.5 on the Richter scale, clipping the 1969 quake of 4.2 that the state Office Emergency Preparedness lists as the recent record. Both readings are considered mild.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion. An earthquake of 3.5 can cause slight local damage and 4, moderate damage. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

The center of Wednesday's quake was about 25 miles north of Little Rock in the town of Naylor, the same area where the others have occurred, Johnston said. He said stress along an ancient fault line in the Ouachita Mountains was responsible.

The dishes in Carolyn Reeves' china cabinet rattled for about 10 seconds at her home in Marshall.

South, declarer at four hearts, found a deft avoidance play to bring home his four heart contract. Study only the North and South cards, then decide whether you would have done the same.

We are not sure that we would have opened the North hand. Queens and jacks are slightly overvalued by the point count, and the queen-jack doubleton combination could have been worthwhile. Not that it made any difference to the final contract. Note that South jumped to four hearts at his second turn—he was afraid that a bid of three hearts might sound like he was only competing for the part score.

West led the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen. The thoughtless play is to cover with the king.

for watch what happens. East ruffs and shifts to a spade. Whether or not declarer finesse, he must eventually lose a trick to each black king for down one.

Fortunately, declarer made allowance for the possibility that West might have preempted on a seven-card suit. He countered neatly by playing a low diamond from dummy at trick two! Now the defense was helpless.

The best West can do is shift to a club. However, declarer takes the club finesse, and the king of clubs will be the last trick for the defense. If West continues with a diamond, South over-ruffs, draws trumps and takes a club finesse. East wins and shifts to a spade, but declarer rises with the ace and discards his queen of spades on a high club.)

It might seem that East can defeat the contract by ruffing the second diamond and shifting to a spade. But declarer can rise with the ace of spades, draw trumps, cross to the ace of clubs and discard a black loser on the king of diamonds to make his contract.

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — At age 11, Lisa Thompson knows about mass marketing and sales promotion. A champion cookie seller last year, Lisa is one of 2.5 million Girl Scouts preparing to go forth once again with the boxes of cookies that have become a national tradition and a big business.

The sixth grader is holder of the prestigious "Super Seller Patch," which she received for selling 671 boxes of cookies — the most sold last year in the Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council which includes 25,000 scouts in the Boston metropolitan area. This year she is shooting for the 1,000-box mark.

"I guess it's kind of hard for people to say no," she said, explaining her success. It didn't hurt that her father, who works for the food services department at Boston College, persuaded the food services manager to take 200 boxes last year and sell them to students. This year, he is taking 400.

Girl Scouts sold 120 million boxes of Thin Mints, Tagalongs, Trefoils and other varieties last year at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2.00 a box.

"It's a very impressive figure," says Frances Hesselbein, the national director of the Girl Scouts. "The figures are important, but for most girls it's their first experience in the business world. It's training for the future."

Ely List, a spokeswoman for the Girl Scouts, says the origins of the cookie sale are "shrouded in the mists of time." While many lay claim to the first cookie sale, credit goes to the Philadelphia Council for being the first to buy cookies from a commercial bakery in 1934.

That first effort sold 114,000 boxes. Since then, says Mrs. Hesselbein, there has been a steady growth in sales, even in years of recession and inflation.

The National Council now licenses six separate companies to bake official Girl Scout cookies. The largest, Little Brownie Bakers, located at 3 Cookie Lane in Louisville, Ky., says about 40 percent of its business comes from the scouts.

"We felt it would be a good business to enter and it's been very good for our company," says William Bayers, a vice president for sales.

Bayers spends part of each year on the road, pitching his company's cookies to 50 or 60 councils. Competition among the franchised cookie makers is hot and salesmen try to win customers by offering low prices, quality cookies and promotional material that will help the scouts sell their cookies.

"They are just like any business people," Bayers says of the council leaders. "They require that you live up to your commitments."

He said Girl Scout cookies have a pronounced, if short-lived impact on the regular cookie market.

"Most of these cookies are sold in a relatively short period of time, and during that period ... you can see store sales of cookies drop," said Bayers.

One of Bayers' customers is the Boston-area Patriots Trail Council, the sixth largest in the nation. The council hopes to sell one million boxes this year.

There is no one date set for national cookie sales. Each local council picks its own date, but most choose to hawk their wares in late winter or early spring.

Colette Phillips, a spokeswoman for Patriots Trail, says the bakery gets 70 cents for every $2 box of cookies sold. The rest of the proceeds go to individual troops, property improvements and community service efforts.

The council's scouts will compete for special patches and T-shirts, commemorating the number of boxes of cookies sold. The young saleswomen also earn credits toward summer camp.

"Competition is healthy, but it doesn't exist in a cutthroat way," said Ms. Phillips.

Through the years, the Girl Scouts have improved on their door-to-door method of sales. Last year, United Airlines purchased $50,000 worth of cookies to distribute among passengers. Mrs. Hesselbein says Delta and Pan Am will join United this year in distributing two million packets of cookies to celebrate the 70th anniversary of the Girl Scouts.

While the profits from the cookies provide for scouting's financial well-being, Mrs. Hesselbein said the yearly sales serve as an important object lesson for the girls.

"They learn how you talk to a prospective customer, how you make change and how you prepare the cookies after you sell them," she said. "It's a really marvelous preparation for the world of work."

Arrest 36 On Drug Charges

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Thirty-six people have been arrested in Onslow County on various drug charges, including possession and distribution of marijuana, cocaine, hashish and drug paraphernalia, authorities said.

Billy Woodruff said the predawn raids on Tuesday and Wednesday were carried out by six teams of deputies.

He said a woman who secretly joined the sheriff's department in October worked undercover and was responsible for most of the arrests.

Immigrant Doors Shut

CUBANS DEMONSTRATE — A Miami police officer stands in front of a group of Cuban demonstrators who turned out to protest the deportation of a 20-year-old Cuban stowaway. (AP Laserphoto)

By DAN SEWELL
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The door flung open by the United States when Fidel Castro took power in Cuba 23 years ago has slammed shut.

With more than 800,000 Cuban exiles now in this country, the federal government has served notice that Cubans who wish to leave the communist island 150 miles from here must wait their turn under rigid quotas.

Andres Rodriguez Hernandez, a 20-year-old stowaway, scrambled off a Panamanian freighter last Wednesday prepared to begin a new life.

Two days later, he was placed on a charter flight back to Havana — the first Cuban sent back to that island nation since 1959.

As many as 5,000 members of Miami's Cuban exile community took to the streets Saturday in a protest finally quelled by police who used tear gas and jailed 34 Cuban-Americans on charges ranging from inciting a riot to assaulting an officer.

Tensions and frustration remain high following the disturbance. Some officials say there is a realization that the Rodriguez deportation was only the most clear-cut of recent indications that U.S. policy for Cuban immigration has changed.

"Cubans have grown accustomed to seeing Miami and the rest of the United States as the lifeboat they have traditionally climbed aboard. The deportation of Rodriguez Hernandez is symbolic of the end of an era," explained Roberto Fabricio, a Miami Herald columnist.

Although the great majority of this country's Cuban exiles arrived legally aboard the "Freedom Flights" of the late 1960s, officials estimate that as many as 10,000 Cubans came here the same way as young Rodriguez — without documentation — and were welcomed with full refugee status and federal assistance.

But the Refugee Act of 1980 — aimed at putting this country "in control of its own borders" — stated that merely fleeing a communist country isn't sufficient grounds for political asylum — the refugee has to prove a "well-founded fear of political persecution." Quotas were established for all regions, including 3,000 in fiscal 1982 from Latin America.

Later that year, Castro made a shambles of the new law by opening the port of Mariel to Cuban-Americans who wished to pick up their relatives. The Cuban government sent nearly 125,000 people — thousands directly from Cuban prisons — to the United States during the "Freedom Flotilla," then refused to take any of them back.

But last year brought strict enforcement of the refugee law, and only about 100 Cubans came to this country as legal immigrants in 1981, with several hundred other Cubans who were political prisoners admitted in a special category.

"In the past years we went out of our way to admit Cuban refugees. But the law has made a very dramatic change," Phil Chicola, of the State Department's Bureau for Refugee Affairs, said in an interview last month.

"We are not going to allow any large numbers of Cubans to come in as refugees any time in the near future. If they wish, they can apply to come in as immigrants," he said.

Last year, U.S. authorities for the first time deported Cubans who came here illegally from a third country. They were sent back to the third country, such as Spain.

Last month, 20-year-old Clara Nunez stepped ashore at Port Canaveral, Fla., after stowing away on a Greek freighter in South America. The Immigration and Naturalization Service denied her request for asylum and ordered her back to Argentina — although the deportation has been blocked by a federal judge's temporary order.

But the Rodriguez deportation brought the new Cuban policy into focus. The Reagan administration, under growing criticism from blacks and liberal leaders for holding all arriving Haitian refugees in refugee camps while seeking court approval to deport them, now faces anger from the Cuban community, too.

"There's no questions left — this case definitely was saying that 'We're going to be tough with Cubans, just like we're tough with Haitians,'" said Monsignor Bryan Walsh of the Catholic Archdiocese of Miami.

Walsh and other observers say that U.S. officials may have misinterpreted negative reaction to the Mariel refugees from Cuban-Americans to think they would also accept the restricted immigration.

"With the fact that every Cuban here has relatives in Cuba that they're concerned about, I think there is genuine anger," said Miami attorney Alfredo Duran, a leader in Cuban-American community.

Duran, Walsh and others expressed outrage at the speedy disposal of the Rodriguez case, saying the youth should have received a full hearing before deportation to a country where, Duran said, "thousands of people have been put in jail for the mere fact that they tried to escape."

State Department officials declined comment on the exile community reaction to the Rodriguez case, but INS spokeswoman Beverly McFarland in Miami observed: "It had not been clear in the Cuban community that the Refugee Act of 1980 ended blanket asylum."

"Because of the Cuban boatlift, the attention that would have been paid to the law was focused on the boatlift. This case has highlighted the law."

Beginning January 1, 1982, Uncle Sam now gives you a $2000 reason to open an IRA at First Federal. And everyone is eligible.

There are two big changes in the IRA (Individual Retirement Account) at First Federal.

First everyone is eligible. Even if you've already got a pension or retirement fund and you've never been eligible for an IRA before. Now you are.

Second, the maximum contribution to your IRA will be $2000 instead of $1500 ($2250 spousal IRA). We don't have to tell you what an extra $500 deduction can mean at tax time.

With an IRA at First Federal, you can write off the full amount of your contribution (up to $2000).

You won't have to pay a penny in taxes on the amount of your contribution or the high rate of interest it earns, until you withdraw it when you retire. (You must be at least 59½ to withdraw from your IRA to avoid stiff IRS (Internal Revenue Service) penalties).

But what's important is that when you retire, your income and tax bracket will most likely be lower than it is now.

And that adds up to less taxes now, and less taxes later.

So put yourself first. Open an IRA at First Federal and start paying less taxes.

Put yourself first at First Federal

Your IRA funds are, of course, available to you at any time. However, there is a stiff IRS tax penalty if you withdraw from this account before age 59. You must receive at least $2000 a year in compensation to be eligible for an IRA.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, leveling off after a two-session decline. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 9.23 points Tuesday and Wednesday, recovered .29 to 846.18 in the first half hour today.

But losers held a slight lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Recent increases in open-market money rates have prompted speculation that some banks might soon raise their prime lending rates — their basic posted rates on blue-chip loans.

Analysts particularly noted increases Wednesday in many banks' broker loan rates, which often presage moves in the prime.

By mid-morning today, however, no changes in the prime rate from the prevailing 15 1/2 percent level had been announced.

Sony led the active list in early trading, up 1/8 at 16. A 158,000-share block traded at that price.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 1.52 to 845.89.

Declines held a 5-3 edge on advances at the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 48.86 million shares, against 45.07 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index fell .39 to 66.80.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off 4.75 at 289.60.

Report Cracks In Gym's Floor

By JERRY RAYNOR, Reflector Staff Writer

In addition to the extensive report on the Pitt County juvenile restitution program given to members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday night, a number of other subjects were discussed.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, reported that tiles on the floor of the gymnasium at Elm Street Park Recreation Center had begun to crack recently, "possibly because of the extended cold weather plus the age of the floor, which was tiled back in the '50s," Lee commented. Purchase of new tiles amounted to $1,100, with installation work carried out by members of the department's maintenance crew.

Lee's monthly report for December shows that total attendance at programs and events in the various recreation sites in Greenville were at a substantially high level for a winter month.

Attendance at all centers for the calendar year 1981 amounted to 297,894. This figure includes a school use figure of 16,723 by students in Greenville City Schools using the facilities for activities not part of the recreation and parks programs. The 1981 figure is only slightly more than the total attendance figure for calendar year 1980.

In other matters, commission members received a copy of the department's Fees and Charge Policy. This policy paper, drafted by staff members of the department and previously approved by the Recreation and Parks Commission, has also received final approval by the City Council.

Commission Chairman Lib Proctor appointed members to committees to work with department members on four committees. The committees are ones on a donations brochure, on fees and charges, economic impact of the department on the local economy, and economic equivalency of the department's programs.

Commission members were also given a goals questionnaire and asked to fill it out and return it to Lee.

established meet all legal requirements. We have to be certain we are on solid legal grounds about things such as not interfering with school programs, taking into account the individual child's age, skills, any handicaps he may have."

Ms. Rodgers remarked that court judges support the program and are sentencing juveniles in ways that make it possible for juvenile offenders to enter the program.

"Juveniles who are convicted can volunteer to enter the program," Ms. Rodgers said. "Both the child and the parent sign consent forms agreeing to terms of hours and place of work. Compensation for work is based on the rate of $2.60 per hour."

Money earned by offenders on the volunteer work program is not paid to the offender. Instead, it is credited to the clerk of court who, in turn, pays the designated victim on a monthly basis the amount earned by the offender.

"Hopefully, offenders working in this program will also benefit from learning lessons about constructive work, from being in contact with people on a job, and from realizing he is responsible for his actions," Ms. Rodgers said.

"In this program," Ms. Rodgers added, "compensation to the victim is an essential factor. Many of the victims really suffer badly from any loss of personal property. Often they cannot afford money for such things as replacing broken windows or mail boxes. We had one case recently where the court determined the offender must pay in excess of $1,600."

At this time, only the money earned by offenders through work credits is paid to victims. There are no public funds involved in payment of compensation.

Ms. Rodgers, a native of Martin County, has been employed as coordinator only since the first of the year. She is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in corrections.

"This program can benefit everybody, the victim, the offender and the crowded court systems," Ms. Rodgers remarked. "It changes the emphasis from correction alone to correction and compensation to victims. Hopefully, the restitution program will result in deterring offenders from becoming repeaters, and help reduce the fear and hostility on the part of victims and the public in general."

As of Dec. 1, 1981, there were 14 offenders under court orders to pay compensation to victims in amounts ranging from $2 to $925. Most of the offenders are in the 13-, 14- and 15-year old age bracket.

Ms. Rodgers noted that one of the aspects she will work on in the program is that of securing volunteers to give time as supervisors for the juveniles in work programs. People who volunteer will be provided training and guidelines for supervisory roles, she said.

Another aspect she hopes to develop is getting private businesses and agencies involved in providing work sites for offenders. Because of legal factors such as child-labor laws, tax payments and other considerations, involvement on the part of non-government agencies would need to be on a contribution basis rather than as a regular work program. Ms. Rodgers indicated contribution arrangements are possible without violating legal mandates.

Runoff Election Faces New Bern

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A run-off is expected in New Bern after a mayoral election this week produced no candidate with a majority.

Paul M. Cox, 67, who had previously served five terms as alderman, received 749 votes with Donald W. McDowell, 31, receiving 466. Ethridge H. Ricks, 70, garnered 388 votes.

A total of 1,603 residents voted Tuesday, 23 percent of those eligible.

Elections board supervisor Kathleen Orringer said 803 votes were required for a clear majority win. McDowell, by finishing second, could ask for a run-off election.

"Is the grass green? Sure, I'm going to ask for a run-off," McDowell said. "I've come this far. I wouldn't feel satisfied with myself if I didn't go on."

Testimony Due To Begin Today

Testimony in the trial of Jeffrey Steven Heptinstall, charged with first degree murder in the death of a Greene County woman last year, was expected to get under way in Pitt County Superior Court today.

The selection of a jury, seven men and five women, was completed Wednesday and an alternate juror was chosen today. Judge Preston Cornelious was still hearing motions in the case late this morning.

Heptinstall, 30, is charged with killing Rachel B. Albritton, 63, on July 11, 1981, at her home, shortly after he escaped from the N.C. Department of Correction facility at Maury. He had been serving a four-year prison term for damage to real property.

He has entered a plea of innocence to the murder charge because of insanity.

The trial was moved from Greene County to Pitt County because of pre-trial publicity.

Camels Nip Pirates At Wire, 62-60

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
RALEIGH — Campbell's Harvey Smith scored only two points in last night's game against East Carolina's Civic Center — but they were the most important points of the game.

Smith's baseline jumper with ten seconds left allowed Campbell to grab a 61-60 lead, and after the Pirates missed with one second left, a Ron Curtis free throw sealed the 62-60 upset by the Camels.

It marked the first time in five games since the series between the two schools was renewed three years ago that the Camels have beaten the Pirates.

The game also marked the first time that East Carolina's coach, Dave Odom, has been slapped with a technical foul — and he got two of them in a trade against official Tommy Tunstall during the contest. An additional technical foul was levied against ECU's Al Mack for "hanging on the rim after a dunk."

Odom's fury at the officiating had not abated after the contest ended, but he refused to comment on it.

"I would like to congratulate Campbell. They played a better game than we did. They were better prepared. But I'm proud of the way our players came back. They fought hard."

"I guess it just wasn't meant to be. That's all I've got to say," he added, turning to return to the Pirate dressing room.

Later, specifically asked about the officiating, Odom just shook his head.

Duke Nips State; Clemson Tops Tech; Cavs And Terps Both Win

By The Associated Press
N.C. State has enjoyed a successful basketball season although many of its wins were so close they could easily have been losses. Wednesday, it went down to the wire again — and Duke decided it was time the Wolfpack lost.

The Blue Devils picked up their first conference victory by holding on to defeat N.C. State, 49-48, behind Mike Tissaw's clutch free throw shooting and a never-say-die attitude which helped Duke overcome an 11-point first-half deficit.

In other Atlantic Coast Conference action Wednesday, Clemson ended a three-game losing streak by upending Georgia Tech, 55-49, Virginia routed non-conference opponent George Washington, 80-54, and Maryland whipped non-conference foe Canisius, 91-73.

Duke, which shot terribly in the early stages, nevertheless stayed close by holding its own on the boards and outlasting the lethargic Wolfpack. The Blue Devils went ahead by a point at halftime and exchanged the lead with N.C. State several times in the second period.

With 33 seconds left and Duke ahead by one, the Wolfpack fouled Tissaw, who was shooting only 54 percent from the free throw line for the season. Coach Jim Valvano ordered his team to call time out three times while Tissaw was waiting to shoot, but the senior pivotman was not rattled, sinking both ends of a one-and-one.

Thurl Bailey hit two free throws to bring N.C. State back within one. The Wolfpack appeared to have a chance when Vince Taylor missed a free throw with five seconds left. But Sidney Lowe failed to get a shot off before the buzzer sounded.

"Duke did a great job; they deserved to win," said Valvano. "I'm disappointed, but not discouraged. We're 4-2 in the conference (13-3 overall). We're still in good shape."

Blue Devil coach Mike Krzyzewski said the game showed his team, which bettered its record to 5-9 and 1-4 in the conference, has made improvements.

Vince Taylor led Duke with 19 points, equalling his ACC-leading average, while Chip Engelland added 14. Thurl Bailey, with 14, was the only double-figure scorer for 15th-ranked N.C. State.

Fred Gilliam had 12 points for Clemson and converted a clutch three-point play with 56 seconds left. The Tigers upped their record to 9-5 overall and 2-4 in the ACC, while Georgia Tech fell to 5-9 overall and 1-5 in the conference. Brooke Stegge was the game's high scorer with 17.

Virginia got 18 points apiece from Ralph Sampson and Othell Wilson, leading the third-ranked Cavaliers to their 17th victory against only one defeat. Virginia is now in sole possession of second place in the ACC with a 4-1 mark.

Charles Pittman scored a career-high 23 points and grabbed eight rebounds to lead Maryland past Canisius. Freshman Adrian Branch added 15 points and seven rebounds while Pete Holbert chipped in with 13 and Steve Rivers 12. The Terrapins improved their record to 10-5. They are 2-4 in the ACC.

Elsewhere, Denkler stands fourth in free throw percentage at 79.0, and is third in rebounding with an 8.3 average. Jones is 10th in rebounding at 6.3, and tied for first with State's Angie Armstrong in both assists (5.7) and steals (2.5). Loletha Harrison stands 11th in rebounding, also at 6.3.

East Carolina, as a team is fourth in scoring (68.7), third in field goal percentage (42.6), sixth in free throw percentage (63.1), sixth in rebounding (39.0), and third in defense (64.1).

The Lady Pirates return to action on Sunday, traveling to Atlanta to face Georgia Tech.

hitting four of five free throws over the next minute, scoring a basket on a tap following the lone line miss. Two more free throws by Britto and an off-balance jumper by Kevin Spain upped the lead to 37-26 at intermission.

The Pirates again were slow getting going in the second half, as Kim Griffin led Campbell out to a 47-30 lead in the first four minutes of play.

Then came the blow-up. On an out-of-bounds play, Tunstall awarded the ball to Campbell, sending Odom leaping off the bench. The other official, Bill Cheek, signaled East Carolina's ball at the same time. Both officials appeared to be continuing that each was right, while Odom looked on.

But finally he could take no more, calling a time out to face the official, and drawing his first technical — his first ever since coming to ECU 2 1/2 years ago. Since he already had one, he continued to berate Tunstall, getting the second tech.

Curtis, however, missed on three of the four shots, managing to up the lead to 48-30.

Mack then hit a three-point play 20 seconds later, igniting the ECU rally that almost pulled it out. But not before Green and Hargrove both exited during the next 40 seconds with their fifth fouls.

With Peartree and Mack leading the way, the Pirates dumped in 25 points over the next eight minutes while holding Campbell to only six.

That allowed them to take a 55-54 lead on a jumper by Charles Watkins with 6:11 showing. Thom Brown later missed a free throw chance to up the lead to three, and a three-point play by Curtis pushed Campbell back on top, 57-55.

Watkins tied it and then Mark McLaurin hit the first of two free throws with 1:41 left to move ECU back up, 58-57.

But with 1:19 left, Curtis scored on a baseline jumper to return the lead to Campbell. Brown followed that with a jumper with 47 seconds remaining to give ECU the lead once more, but Smith's shot from the baseline with ten seconds left sealed it for Campbell, 61-60.

McNair missed on an off-balance shot from the side of the lane, and Curtis was fouled on the rebound, making the first with one second left, then seemingly missing the second on purpose to keep the Pirates from making an out-of-bounds play to get the ball in.

Curtis finished the game with 21 points, while Britton added 15 and Newton had 12.

East Carolina was led by Green, Mack and Peartree, each with 12, while Fox had 10.

The loss dropped East Carolina to 6-8 on the year, while Campbell is now 8-7.

East Carolina returns to Raleigh on Saturday to face nationally ranked N.C. State in Reynolds Coliseum.

Denkler Still State Leader

Despite hitting below her average in three games last week, East Carolina's Mary Denkler continues to lead the North Carolina Division I women's basketball teams in scoring.

Denkler's average dropped to 20.3 for the season, in games through January 18, according to figures released by N.C. State University. She still leads second place Muriel Higginbotham of Appalachian State by nearly four points.

Meanwhile, three fine games by teammate Sam Jones has boosted her to third in the state in scoring. Jones now posts a 15.7 average, a point ahead of State's Ginger Rouse.

Elsewhere, Denkler stands fourth in free throw percentage at 79.0, and is third in rebounding with an 8.3 average. Jones is 10th in rebounding at 6.3, and tied for first with State's Angie Armstrong in both assists (5.7) and steals (2.5). Loletha Harrison stands 11th in rebounding, also at 6.3.

Draft Shored Up Secondary Of 49ers

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Losing football teams use the college draft to patch their holes. Usually, you grab a tackle here and a running back there. Maybe a linebacker or two, and perhaps an occasional guard. It is a crazy quilt pattern, something like a plumber madly trying to plug a hundred leaks at once. But the San Francisco 49ers, 6-10 last year, took a different approach in the 1981 draft. On the first round, they picked cornerback Ronnie Lott from Southern California. In the second round they drafted cornerback Eric Wright of Missouri. In the third round they went for safety Carlton Williamson of Pittsburgh and in the fifth they picked cornerback Lynn Thomas, also from Pitt. They probably would have chosen another defensive back on the fourth round but they had dealt that pick away. Coach Bill Walsh obviously was sending a message to his returning secondary.

"We had to have improvement back there," he said. "We were fortunate. It was a banner (draft) year for defensive backs. We were fortunate the ones we wanted were available. We knew all about them." They knew enough to thrust the first three into the starting lineup along with safety Dwight Hicks. It was not what you would call an instant success. "Are you kidding?" said Lott. "We looked like clowns out there for awhile. We were running into each other. I remember in a game against Seattle, Williamson and I knocked each other down. I'm not exaggerating. The quarterback went 40 yards on that play." It was a matter of getting comfortable with themselves and with each other. It took time but when they meshed, San Francisco's young defenders played a major role in the team's march into Sunday's Super Bowl against Cincinnati.

The 49ers turned in 10 more interceptions this season than they had in 1980 and allowed 13 fewer touchdowns through the air this season. The 6-10 Bengals approached the 1981 draft in much the same fashion as the 49ers, drafting directly to fill their most pressing need. Cincinnati selected wide receiver David Verser of Kansas No.1 and wide receiver Cris Collinsworth of Florida No.2. That left little doubt what Coach Forrest Gregg had in mind. Verser averaged almost 24 yards on 29 kickoff returns, fourth best in the AFC, and Collinsworth blossomed into a Pro Bowl pass catcher, grabbing 67 for 1,009 yards. So, when the Bengals have the ball and the 49ers are on defense Sunday, there will be several rookies from both sides chasing Ken Anderson's passes.

"Don't say rookies," Williamson said, correcting a newsman. "Say first-year players. That sounds better." Williamson said the prospect of three new men starting in the San Francisco secondary together scared him a little bit at first. "I had some anxiety, but I was also excited. The only difficulty was for the three of us to get confidence in ourselves to do well and succeed." Much of that confidence came in the season's fifth game against Washington. Lott jarred the ball loose from Terry Metcalf — "I hit it with my head," he said — and Hicks grabbed it and went 80 yards for a touchdown, one of two he scored that day. The young men had come of age. Collinsworth has noticed, as you would expect a receiver might. "At first look, it looks easy to beat them," he said. "They play bump and run and it looks like you can get behind them. But they're really clever. They help each other out. You think you're one-on-one with somebody, but you're not. They disguise their coverages very well." Lott admires Collinsworth's insight. "We're physical and aggressive," he said. "That's our philosophy. If you're passive, it takes away from your game. If you're aggressive, you can make up for your mistakes by doing things at full speed. A defensive back's responsibility is not only to cover passes but to create turnovers." Walsh saw no reason to hold back the three rookies. "There was no question they would be starters," he said. "They were going to be our defensive backfield. Why put them in one year at a time? Let them develop together. In three years they'll be better. In three years they'll be the best. They may be that now." Did Walsh's draft strategy work? "We're in the Super Bowl, aren't we?" said Wright.

And this leak has been plugged.

Walsh Wants His 49ers Ready, But Not Taking It Too Seriously

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — With all the talk about how the loose teams do well and the tight teams poorly, San Francisco Coach Bill Walsh has another explanation for why some teams come up flat in the Super Bowl. "By and large, when teams have appeared flat, they were basically outplayed and often by a superior team," Walsh said Wednesday during the 49ers' preparation for Sunday's National Football League championship game against the Cincinnati Bengals. In some games, said Walsh, "there's been a lot of disappointment on one side as the game developed. People found out that one team was superior to the other, and it was just a matter of fact." He cited as an example

Super Bowl XII, when Dallas easily beat Denver 27-10. "I think basically Dallas had a superior team ... and it demonstrated itself dramatically in the game," he said. Still, Walsh is aware of what happened a year ago, when the fancy-free Oakland Raiders creamed the studious Philadelphia Eagles, and he doesn't want his young players to take Super Bowl XVI too seriously. "It really isn't that much of a spectacle," he said. "It's simply a football game we're playing for the championship, but we've had big games before. I don't think it's that traumatic for the players," he added. "Whether they've been here five times or this is their first Super Bowl, I just don't think there's a dramatic difference." Wide receiver Dwight Clark, one of the players drawing the most attention this week, said, "I think it's good that he (Walsh) is trying to convey that point to us, that it's just another game." Walsh admits he's not a Marine drill instructor. He has imposed a 1 a.m. curfew on the team, but hasn't had any major violations and doesn't expect any. His main concern, he said, is for the players to get to bed early enough to counteract the three-hour time difference between here and the West Coast. Offensive guard Randy Cross described Walsh's curfew as something less than rigid. "His curfew, when we're on the road like this in a long week-situation, isn't to be in bed, lights out with your warm milk by your bed at curfew time. It's to be in the hotel," said Cross. "So there's guys playing cards and dominos and hanging around each other's rooms, maybe having a couple of beers after curfew. There's a bed check, but basically if you're in another room there's no big stink made of it." "I'm sure the guys would like to have no curfew for a few nights," said Cross, "but heck, it's Pontiac, Michigan. It's not New Orleans or Miami. There's not too many tours of the city to be done at 2 o'clock in the morning, unless you get a snow plow."

ECU-UNCC Time Move

East Carolina's game with UNC-Charlotte, to be played on Wednesday, January 27, has had a switch in game time — for the second time. The contest is to be telecast back to the Charlotte area, and the contest will air at 9 p.m. Tipoff is expected to be around 9:05 now. The game, originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m., was moved up to 8 p.m. because of a special CBS News program which Charlotte's WBTV is not being allowed to clear for the basketball game.

Rookie Year Great One For Chris Collinsworth

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Wide receiver Cris Collinsworth could hardly be faulted for wishing that his rookie season might never end. The slender receiver from Florida turned out to be the Cincinnati Bengals' prize catch in the 1981 college draft. He became a starting player, media celebrity and All-Pro in less than six months. "I'm almost going to dread seeing this year come to an end," Collinsworth told reporters covering Super Bowl XVI, where Cincinnati meets the San Francisco 49ers Sunday for the National Football League championship. When Collinsworth, a second-round pick, and No. 1-draft choice David Verser arrived in training camp last summer, the Bengals hoped that one of them would supply immediate help for the passing attack. Collinsworth won a starting job almost immediately, and was quarterback Ken Anderson's leading receiver through the first part of the regular season. Although Verser had more trouble adjusting to the Bengals' offensive system, he blossomed into the club's leading kickoff returner. And rookie Bobby Kemp stepped in at safety when injuries attacked the Bengals' defensive secondary. Collinsworth has gotten the most publicity of the three. His folksy manner and self-effacing jokes have made him a favorite interview subject for the hundreds of reporters covering the event at the Pontiac Silverdome. Backup quarterback Turk Schonert says Collinsworth's success has taken the defensive pressure off the other Bengals' receivers and helped to open up the offense. "He's one of those guys who can go deep or short, run good patterns, and catch the ball in the crowd. He's not afraid to go across the middle. He can jump for the ball. He can do anything you want him to," Schonert said. The 6-foot-4 rookie caught 67 passes for a team-leading 1,009 yards and eight touchdowns. "I would just like to be known as a definite deep threat," Collinsworth said. "The wide receivers on your club have to be known as big-play threats. If they get the chance to catch the ball and run with it, they can break the game open." Verser, a breakout threat at Kansas, came off the bench to catch just six passes for 161 yards, but he averaged 26.8

yards per catch. While Verser learned the passing system, the Bengals put his speed to use returning kickoffs. Verser's 29 returns for 687 yards easily led the club. "At first, I didn't feel comfortable with myself," Verser said of his slow start. "Now I am comfortable." Kemp, from Cal-Fullerton, made a reputation as one of the hardest hitters in the defensive secondary.

Connecticut In Upset Of Hoyas, 63-52

By The Associated Press
You wouldn't expect a college basketball team to go 10 minutes at the end of a game without hitting a field goal and stay in contention.
But the Connecticut Huskies did Wednesday night, thanks to their free-throw shooting.

As a result, the Huskies pulled off a 63-52 upset over 13th-ranked Georgetown. "It was a good win for us because Georgetown has been getting all the respect," said Connecticut Coach Dom Perno. "When people talk about teams in the Big East (Conference) they always talk about other teams." The Huskies, now 3-2 in conference play like Georgetown and 11-3 overall, ignored the screaming partisan crowd in the Hoyas' tiny McDonough Arena. They fashioned their upset by sinking 16 of 19 foul shots, including eight in a row by Norman Bailey, down the stretch. The Hoyas, 14-4, lost their second straight game after a 13-game winning streak. "They didn't do anything we didn't expect them to do," said Georgetown Coach John Thompson. "They just made their free throws and their shots and we didn't." The Huskies were repeatedly able to frustrate the efforts of Georgetown to work the ball inside to prize freshman Pat Ewing. Meanwhile, Cory

Thompson led the Huskies with 16 points while Bailey had 14. Duke tripped No. 14 North Carolina State 49-48 in another upset Wednesday night. In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 2 Missouri turned back Kansas 41-35. No. 3 Virginia defeated George Washington 80-54. No. 9 Kentucky whipped Florida 91-76. No. 16 Alabama stopped Georgia 81-66, 18th-ranked Kansas State downed Oklahoma 47-42 and 20th-ranked Tennessee turned back Mississippi State 54-44.

The Top Ten
Ricky Frazier sank six free throws in the final minute as Missouri survived an upset bid by archrival Kansas. The Jayhawks had a 20-19 halftime lead and quickly jumped ahead by five points after intermission as the Tigers had trouble with Kansas' alternating zone and man-to-man defenses.

"Our defense was th difference," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "We just got such a very good effort from a lot of people. We played excellent defense in the last part of the first half and the beginning of the second." Jim Master's 22 points paced Kentucky to an easy victory over victory-starved Florida. The Wildcats used the foul line for the victory, hitting on 35 of 43 attempts to overcome a young Florida team that lost a school record 10th straight game and fell to 4-11 for the season.

"It gave me time to think good things," said Tisaw. "I just trained my mind to do it. It felt good shooting free throws in the first half and I felt I could do it."

Alabama got 17 points and 10 rebounds from Eddie Phillips and used a man-to-man defense to seize control of the game and defeat Georgia. Five Alabama players scored in double figures as the Tide outmuscled the Bulldogs behind the play of Phillips.

Tim Jankovich hit a technical free throw with 1:08 left to help Kansas State beat Oklahoma. With Kansas State leading 42-40 with 1:56 left, the Sooners went to a delay of offense, but were called for a technical foul for not taking initiative on offense.

Jankovich hit the foul shot, which turned out to be the winning point for Kansas State.

Dale Ellis scored nine straight points in the second half to pace Tennessee over Mississippi State. Ellis was his team's high scorer with 25 points as the Volunteers remained the Southeastern leader.

The Second Ten
Mike Tisaw hit two free throws with 33 seconds remaining to lift Duke over North Carolina State. Tisaw, whose first-half rebounding enabled Duke to rally from an 11-point deficit, scored his only second-half points to give the Blue Devils a 49-46 lead and their eventual winning points.

The Wolfpack tried to unnerve Tisaw by calling two timeouts before he shot his first free throw and another timeout before he let the second one go.

"Our second half we made no mistakes and that's a first for us," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart. "We held KU to 15 points in the second half, and we're happy with that. In the first half, there was a lot of pushing and shoving, and we didn't shoot well."

Othell Wilson and Ralph Sampson both scored 18 points to pace Virginia's romp over George Washington. Wilson scored 12 of his 18 points in the first half as the Cavaliers, 17-1, took a 39-27 lead at intermission.

The Cavaliers broke open the game early in the second half, going repeatedly to the 7-foot-4 Sampson for uncontested shots underneath the basket.

Hawks Deal Woods To Clippers In NBA Trade

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks announced Wednesday the National Basketball Association trade that has traded its No. 1 draft choice, Al Wood, and veteran guard Charlie Criss to the San Diego Clippers in exchange for guard Freeman Williams.

Williams, a 25-year-old product of Portland State, was leading the Clippers in scoring with a 16.5 points per game average entering this week.

His career average is 16.3, and last year he averaged 19.3. Williams, 6-foot-4, was drafted in the first round by the Boston Celtics in 1978, the eighth pick in the draft. The Celtics later gave him draft rights to San Diego in a 1978 trade.

"Freeman adds a number of dimensions to our team," Hawks Coach Kevin Loughery said Wednesday. "He's one of the NBA's top outside shooters.

He's a 'point-a-minute' man (and) he can handle the ball well enough to play lead guard or can team with our other guards at the shooting spot to increase our scoring as a team."

Williams also was eighth in the NBA this week in three-point field goal percentage at 32.4.

Wood, 6-6, and a forward on the University of North Carolina team which finished second to Indiana last season, was a first round choice in the 1981 draft, the fourth player picked. He injured his shoulder and played in only 19 games, averaging 4.8 points per game.

Criss, 5-foot-8, joined the Hawks as a free agent in July 1977 and played regularly that year and the following three seasons. This year, he played in 27 games, averaging 8.7 points a game.

Destiny Brings Mike Ditka Back

CHICAGO (AP) — Destiny, Mike Ditka said, brought him back to Chicago. But how long he stays on as the Bears' new head coach likely will depend on how well he succeeds in transplanting the Dallas Cowboys' offense to the colder climes of the North.

"I'm not going to do everything (Dallas) Coach (Tom) Landry did," Ditka said at a Wednesday news conference announcing that he had been hired as Neil Armstrong's successor. "I can't be all things to all people."

But Ditka acknowledged that his nine years as an assistant coach on Landry's staff taught him "what an organization has to sacrifice" to be successful. And he added that he would begin familiarizing the Bears' personnel with the system next month and expect the players to report to training camp "with a pretty good understanding of what we expect from them."

"I'm a believer in the multiple offense. It keeps the defense off balance," said Ditka.

Farmville And Chicod Split

FARMVILLE — Chicod and Farmville split a pair of middle school basketball games yesterday.

Farmville won the boys' game, 55-23. Robert Evans led Farmville with 13 points, while Shane Adams led Chicod with eight.

Chicod took the girls' game by a 24-14 margin.

Tom Brokaw Provides A Look At 'The Busiest Beat In America'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — There is a measure of immediacy — often urgency — to "The Narcs" on NBC, an unconventional look at a half-dozen undercover cops fighting a lonely war against the drug trade in south Florida.

The tense action in the hour-long documentary, to be broadcast Friday night, 10-11 EST, comes largely from videotape footage of covert activities of the Dade County Narcotics Squad.

"Narcotics officers on the busiest beat in America," Tom Brokaw, the correspondent, says over tape showing the cops about to make a bust, "exciting ... frustrating ... dangerous ... sometimes boring ... but there is never a shortage of work."

It's the first program in a planned "American Profile" series on NBC, with Brokaw — who is between jobs right now — as correspondent.

The NBC News production differs significantly from CBS' recently introduced "Mike Wallace Profiles" series, which focuses on celebrities and other important people no longer living. Both programs will be broadcast irregularly — Wallace has done two so far, and Brokaw's second, on a high school principal, has not been scheduled.

Brokaw left NBC's "Today" in December, after 5½ years, and will join Roger Mudd in April as co-anchor of the network's "Nightly News."

"The Narcs" is an entertaining hour of television — occasionally dramatic — and Brokaw is appropriately awed as the enormity of the drug smuggling problem becomes apparent.

He recites the statistics — 13,000 tons of marijuana, 44 tons of cocaine, consumed in this country last year, most of it smuggled through south Florida, with only 300 federal, state and local cops battling the traffic full time.

"They face overwhelming odds," the correspondent says, "and they wonder, 'Does anyone care?'"

The policemen do, it's clear. In one raid, they Westmoreland to keep the reported enemy troop level under 300,000, Wallace says, even though the total may have been much higher.

"Westmoreland says he doesn't recall these orders," Wallace says, but Col. George Hamscher, who represented the commander at a meeting in Washington in 1967, remembers, "We can't live with a figure higher than so-and-so is the message ... we got."

Enemy troop strength was set, during that meeting of military and civilian officials, at 294,000, Wallace says.

confiscate $282,000 in cash, but no dope. "It's a disappointment," says Sgt. Jim Rider, the cop in charge of the narcotics squad, "but it happens...."

Brokaw wonders whether the cops ever ask themselves, "Wait a minute, what am I doing on this side of the money?"

"No, not really," Rider replies. "I want to take these people down to jail and have them doors hit behind 'em. I'll just take my salary every week, and be satisfied."

The officers are remarkably uncomplaining, even though it often seems the system — including the courts — works against them.

Only Rider agreed to be shown with his family. Life away from work can be tough, he concedes, and tells this story about his eldest daughter:

"She paid the penalty for being my daughter. They beat her up on the school bus ... called her 'the narc's daughter.'"

NBC is first off the mark, Sunday night, 10-11 EST, with a program commemorating the 100 anniversary of the birth of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. John Hart is the correspondent for "Nothing to Fear — The Legacy of FDR," a documentary notable primarily for its extensive use of historic film.

ABC has scheduled a more ambitious, three-hour retrospective called "FDR" for the evening of Jan. 29. Roosevelt was born Jan. 30, 1882.

The NBC special includes interviews with FDR's son, James, as well as historians and former government officials, but the most poignant is with an Alabama sharecropper's daughter who recalls life during the Depression.

"I might cry," she says. "They done more for me than anyone. And it all come from Rehabilitation. ... that was Roosevelt's doin'."

On Jan. 5, a federal court judge in Little Rock, Ark., declared unconstitutional a legislative act requiring schools in the state teaching evolution to give balanced treatment to creationism. Public TV will broadcast a half-hour independently produced documentary, "Creation Science on Trial," tonight at 10:30 EST.

It's not exactly an "instant special" in the network sense, but the Kingfisher Films production is, nonetheless, a comprehensive look at the complex issue. The film, narrated by Jim Lehrer, includes interviews with key figures on both sides of the issue.

Intelligence In Vietnam Distorted, Says CBS

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Estimates of enemy troop strength in Vietnam through the Tet offensive of 1968 were manipulated by military and civilian analysts, leaving Americans "misinformed about the nature and size" of the opposition, CBS News says in a special report to be broadcast Saturday night.

The 90-minute program documents, with testimony of several former military and civilian officials, what CBS calls "a conscious effort, indeed a conspiracy, at the highest levels of American military intelligence, to suppress and alter critical intelligence on the enemy...."

"The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception," to be shown 9:30-11 p.m. EST, includes a lengthy interview with Gen. William Westmoreland, the commander of U.S. forces in Vietnam at the time, along with several other key military and CIA officials.

Sam Adams, a one-time CIA analyst who was a primary source for the documentary, tells correspondent Mike Wallace that President Lyndon Johnson apparently was unaware of the huge buildup from the north that preceded Tet, or lunar new year.

"Shouldn't someone ... have told the president that not only were the V.C. planning a massive attack," Wallace asks Westmoreland, "but that they were flooding the south with North Viet-names regulars?"

"Well, sure. That ... was known. That was known," the retired general replies. "The president knew?"

Wallace asks, "I have no idea whether the president knew or not," he says.

In fact, Wallace says, the deception began as early as 1966. Despite mounting optimism for an American victory in Vietnam, CIA analysts — notably Adams — had begun to doubt estimates on enemy troop strength coming from military headquarters in Saigon, Wallace says.

Westmoreland, in April 1967, was summoned to Washington, where he told Johnson that the size of the Viet Cong army had leveled off at 285,000 men, the correspondent reports. The general apparently was not aware, Wallace says, that his own analysts had discovered evidence confirming CIA estimates of a much larger enemy force.

Westmoreland learned of their doubts on his return to Vietnam, Wallace says. "I had the definite impression that he felt that if he sent those figures back to Washington at that time, it would create political bombshell," Gen. Joseph M. Christian, Westmoreland's intelligence chief, tells CBS.

Westmoreland said he did not consider the new information reliable, and Wallace asks, "Why would it have been a 'political bombshell?'"

"Because," Westmoreland says, "the people in Washington were not sophisticated enough to understand and evaluate this thing, and neither was the media."

Military intelligence officers subsequently were under orders from

"We make it happen."

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartment in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floors: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Poland's Intellectuals Under Constant Attack

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer
WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's intellectuals, the firebrands of the Solidarity reform movement, are under constant official attack for their actions during the 16 months of crisis that preceded the martial law crackdown.

"Quite a number of people from the creative milieu were dominated by some incomprehensible masochism," Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw Rakowski said, scolding intellectuals at a recent meeting.

"Total criticism of almost everything that arose in people's Poland has become like a new religion," said Rakowski, an ex-newspaper editor and intellectual himself who has become a critic of his colleagues.

Rakowski blamed intellectuals for remaining "silent when they should have shouted" and "permitting the dismantling of the Polish state."

His speech was the first in what has become a series of government attacks on the thinkers who inspired the now-suspended Solidarity labor movement.

Some observers believe the official criticism of intellectuals for pushing Solidarity toward a clash with authorities, or failing to head off such a confrontation, is an attempt to block a reunion of labor and intellectuals after martial law is lifted.

The state media reserved particular wrath for Jacek Kuron, Karol Modzelewski and Adam Michnik, intellectuals who belonged to the dissident Committee for Social Self-Defense, or KOR, and served as key advisers to Solidarity leaders.

But in some cases intellectuals are taking advantage of the new situation to attack each other, suggesting that behind the charges of ignoring reality there may be more than a touch of personal back-biting.

Polish film director Czeslaw Petelski, in a recent interview with the official PAP news agency, criticized his colleagues for not sensing "where the (Solidarity) leaders' addiction to politics would lead them."

"It is especially unpleasant for us that an artist of the calibre of Andrzej Wajda turned out to be the most zealous advocate of extremist tendencies," Petelski said, attacking his rival, Wajda, the director best-known outside Poland.

In addition to the intellectuals, students and their professors also have come under attack from the martial law regime.

The government disbanded the independent students' association, while it has only suspended Solidarity. And authorities have staggered the dates for reopening university classes, apparently to avoid organized student protests against the crackdown.

Returning students are finding new rules including a ban on loitering on campus longer than necessary to attend classes or use the library.

Professors are being told to renounce their Solidarity memberships or face loss of their jobs. Sources say most are deserting the union.

"It was disgusting to see all those highly educated people line up to renounce their union membership," said a professor who chose not to be identified.

dismissal over submission.

"Those very people had wildly applauded (Solidarity chief) Lech Walesa and pledged never to allow anyone to separate them from the working class again," said the professor, who asked not to be identified.

New Drug Lag Said Decreasing

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing Food and Drug Administration approval of more than twice as many new drugs last year as in 1980, the Reagan administration says it is making significant progress on one of its major regulatory goals.

The FDA long has been criticized for its drug approval process because drugs frequently are available in other nations long before they can be used legally in the United States. But that "drug lag" is being shortened, the administration says, noting that 27 new drugs gained FDA approval in 1981, compared to only 12 the year before.

"There is clearly a downward trend in the amount of time it takes to approve new drugs," FDA spokesman Wayne Pines said Wednesday. Shortening the approval time has been a major goal of FDA Commissioner Arthur Hull Hayes Jr.

Administration spokesmen did acknowledge, however, that the progress can be attributed in large part to steps taken before President Reagan took office. Many of the drugs which were granted clearance already had been on FDA's agenda, they said.

"A lot of the changes that were developed during the late 1970s and before have come to fruition. The tighter management that has been exercised over the process and the new emphasis on attitude Hayes has brought has borne fruit," Pines said.

The average length of time for approving new molecular entities, such as the 27 drugs cleared for use last year, was 31.2 months, compared to 37.5 months in 1979 and 34.5 months in 1980.

The approval time average for all new drugs, whether they were new dosages of something already on the market, combinations of already approved drugs or other forms was 33.6 months in 1979, 21.3 months in 1980 and 23.3 months in 1981.

The approval time for drugs of new therapeutic significance — dealing with the treatment and cure of diseases — has dropped to 10 months.

Two of the drugs approved last year were of a new class of heart drugs known as calcium blockers. They were verapamil, sold under the trade name Isoptin by Knoll and Calan by Searle, and nifedipine, sold as Procardia by Pfizer.

Scholarship To Honor Student

Gary Pierce, a Pitt Community College heating, refrigeration and air-conditioning honor student from Kill Devil Hill, is the first recipient of an annual scholarship established for that department by the Tar Heel Chapter of the Refrigeration Service Engineering Society of Greenville.

The award will be made yearly to one full-time student enrolled in the heating, refrigeration and air-conditioning program. Selection will be based on excellence, said officers of the sponsoring society, and financial need. A committee composed of members of the society and PCC officials chose the 1982 recipient.

Arrest Youth In Store Break-In

Greenville police arrested Gene Vincent Oxley, 17, of South Bend, Ind., on breaking, entering and larceny charges shortly after a 1:17 a.m. break-in at Coffman's Men's Wear at 315 Evans Street Mall today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said entrance to the building was gained by breaking the glass from a front door. He said merchandise valued at $1,303 was taken.

According to the chief, investigating officers took Oxley into custody behind the Fast Fare on Cotanche Street, a block from the site of the break-in. The merchandise, which had been hidden behind V. A. Merritt & Sons at 207 S. Evans St., was recovered, he added.

Oxley was jailed under $5,000 bond.

Cars Collided, Driver Charged

Dorothy Wilson Sutton of 2105 Village Drive was charged with failing to stop for a red light following investigation of an 11:37 a.m. collision at the intersection of Fifth Street and Memorial Drive Wednesday.

Police said the Sutton car collided with an auto driven by Joanne Williams of 101B Ridge Place, causing an estimated $600 damage to each of the two cars.

Another Firm Has Break-In

Greenville police were continuing their investigation today of a break-in at a Sutton's Service Center building at the intersection of Center and Broad streets, which was reported Wednesday.

Chief Glenn Cannon said the thieves, who stole seven recapped truck tires valued at $120 each, gained entrance by cutting a lock from a gate, then opening the door to the building. The intruders closed the door and the gate before leaving, he added.

FOCUS

Shady Dealings

What happens when you build a beautiful, solar-powered home, and then a high rise goes up next door that puts your solar collector permanently in the shade? You can get the courts to stop it or sue for damages, right? Wrong. Most cities, counties and states give no protection at all to the "right to light." Courts have also been unsympathetic in such cases. But the question may be coming up more frequently in the future. By 1985, it is estimated that one-fourth of all new housing starts in the U.S. will use some form of solar energy. And most Americans polled by Gallup in 1980 thought solar energy should be required in every new home.

Seek Limit Testimony On Fibers In Atlanta

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) - Wayne Williams' lawyers have asked a judge to limit testimony on some of the fibers the prosecution says link Williams to the slayings of two young men and an FBI expert said fibers are not positive evidence.

reports on lab tests on the fibers. Williams, a 23-year-old aspiring talent scout, is charged with the murders of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 young blacks who disappeared during a 22-month period and later were found slain. A special police task force created to investigate the killings has made no arrests in the 26 other deaths.

Prosecutors have made no effort during two days of testimony about fibers to link Williams with either of the two victims. But pretrial testimony indicated that tiny fibers and dog hairs found on the bodies of Cater and Payne were not microscopically different from fibers and dog hairs taken from Williams' home and car.

Binder argued the defense would be harmed if prosecution experts were allowed to testify about "scientific evidence that they diabolically didn't put in writing to keep it from our experts."

Binder filed the motion as Deadman prepared to take the stand for the first time in the trial, which is in its fourth week. Cooper allowed Deadman to testify before he ruled on the motion, but Deadman didn't discuss any of his findings from tests on the fiber evidence.

Instead, Deadman told the jury in detail how fibers are analyzed in the laboratory and how comparisons of fibers can be used to show that two people, or a person and an object, could have come in contact.

Under questioning by Binder, Deadman acknowledged that matching fibers cannot be used to "tell with absolute certainty" that a fiber came from a particular source. He said fiber evidence can be used only as circumstantial evidence and cannot be used to prove "positive identification." Comparisons are significant only if the fiber type involved is unusual, he said.

Deadman told Binder he agreed with the FBI Handbook of Forensic Science, which states: "A fiber match is not positive evidence but circumstantial and must be supported by other evidence."

Deadman said the presence of only one fiber on a corpse that could be matched with a fiber from another person would be sufficient to show that the two could have come in contact "if I could be sure there had been no contamination."

When Binder asked how he could be sure no contamination of fibers had taken place on a body found in the Chattahoochee River, Deadman conceded that there was no way to be certain.

The bodies of Cater and Payne were found a month apart floating in the same area of the Chattahoochee, about a mile downstream from the bridge where Williams first came to the attention of authorities in the predawn hours of May 22.

Prosecutors contend he dumped the bodies of the two young blacks off the bridge. Cater's body was found two days after Williams was stopped near the bridge when a police stakeout officer heard a loud splash in the river.

Recital Tonight

Katherine Smith of Chesapeake, Va., a senior in the school of music, ECU, will present her senior clarinet recital at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. She will be accompanied by Cynthia Creel, piano, and assisted by Amanda Kartchner, viola. For her program she has chosen Saint-Saens' "Sonata for clarinet and piano, Opus 167," Willson Osborne's "Rhapsody for Clarinet," and Mozart's "Trio No. 7 in E flat."

No admission is charged for the public recital.

Coast Guard To Close 15 Search, Rescue Stations

By JANE ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard will cope with budget restraints by closing 15 search and rescue stations in 11 states and cutting operations at 16 others. The Associated Press has learned.

The service also plans to decommission 10 Coast Guard cutters, move the Coast Guard band from New London, Conn., to Washington, reduce the staff at the Coast Guard Academy in New London, and close 28 boating safety detachments across the country, Coast Guard documents reveal.

Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., chairman of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee on the Coast Guard and Navigation, said the budget cuts will cause a significant decline in the Coast Guard's ability to carry out rescue missions.

"It will cost the public in many ways, but most tragically, it is sure to result in the loss of lives which otherwise would have been saved as a result of Coast Guard search and rescue efforts," Studds said.

According to the Department of Transportation, which oversees the Coast Guard, there now are 375 search and rescue stations and shore units, 26 air stations and 75 cutters.

Department records say Coast Guard search and rescue personnel saved 6,868 people in 1980 and assisted 194,424.

Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn., said in December that Coast Guard rescuers saved the lives of two youngsters whose boat had capsized shortly after a search and rescue station was opened at Grand Marais, Minn., four years ago.

"Who will die? Whose lives will be threatened when that station is closed?" Oberstar asked.

The station he referred to is among those to be closed.

Although the Coast Guard has not decided which two district offices will close, a Coast Guard list indicates the most probable targets are those in Long Beach, Calif., and St. Louis.

Air stations will be shut down in Savannah, Ga., Borinquen, Puerto Rico and Los Angeles and 30 recruiting detachments and 30 smaller recruiting offices will be closed.

The Coast Guard base in San Juan, Puerto Rico will be closed, 18 aid-to-navigation teams will be disbanded and marine inspection offices will be eliminated in Rotterdam, the Netherlands; Kobe, Japan; Singapore, Malaysia; and Guam.

The Coast Guard requested $1.403 billion for fiscal 1982, but wound up with only $1.357 billion in operating expenses for the year. That left $46 million for the service to trim from what it hoped to spend on operations.

Coast Guard documents show that the search and rescue stations to be closed are in Eastport, Maine; Dahlgren, Va.; Parramore Beach Station, Wachapreague, Va.; Ashtabula, Ohio; Klamath, Calif.; Manistee, Mich.; Harbor Beach, Mich.; St. Clair Flats Station, Harsens Island, Mich.; Plum Island Station, Washington Island, Wash.; Bellingham, Wash.; North Superior Station, Grand Marais, Minn.; Kauai Station, Nawiliwili, Kauai, Hawaii; Swansboro, N.C.; Two Rivers, Wis.; Calumet Harbor Station, Chicago, Ill.; and Bellingham, Wash.

The cutters to be decommissioned and the ports where they are based are: the Evergreen, New London, Conn.; Campbell, Port Angeles, Wash.; Fir, Seattle, Wash.; Walnut, San Pedro, Calif.; Hollyhock, Miami, Fla.; Bibb, New Bedford, Mass.; Norfolk, Va.; Clover, Eureka, Calif.; Coos Bay, Ore.; and Cheboygan, Mich.

The search and rescue stations where budgets will be reduced are: Holland, Mich.; Portage station, Hancock, Mich.; Sault St. Marie, Mich.; Marquette, Mich.; Belle Isle station, Detroit, Mich.; Lake Tahoe Station, Tahoe City, Calif.; the search and rescue support teams in San Pedro, Corona Del Mar and Marine Del Ray, Calif.; Burlington, Vt.; Toledo, Ohio; Marblehead, Ohio; Bayfield, Wis.; Siuslaw River station, Florence, Ore.; Quillayute River, La Push, Wash.; Grays Harbor station, Tokeland, Wash.

Vessel traffic systems are to be closed in New York City, New Orleans, La., Berwick Bay, La., and San Francisco, Calif.

Try Again

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterand has given the National Assembly a revised bill on his nationalization policy that is expected to cost about $1.3 billion over the original $5.7 billion estimate.

The Constitution Council on Saturday ruled unconstitutional the original measure to nationalize 39 banks, five industrial groups and two investment companies because it said not enough compensation was provided stockholders.

The new bill, submitted Wednesday and scheduled for debate next Tuesday, was expected to pass again because Mitterand's Socialist Party holds a comfortable majority in the French Parliament.

Blind Writer Savoring South

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — What began as a Mississippi River ride through the books of Mark Twain has become a dream-come-true for Argentine author Jorge Luis Borges, who says he "always wanted to know the Deep South personally."

Borges is getting his wish. On Wednesday, accompanied by scholars, diplomats and a young assistant, the blind writer spent an evening on a well-worn bench at the French Quarter jazz club, Preservation Hall. "I was delighted," he said. "This is the fountainhead of jazz, and I love jazz."

The era and the area has fascinated him since youth, the 82-year-old writer said, noting that "Huckleberry Finn was the first novel I ever read through."

Borges, considered South America's senior man of letters, is here for 10 days to lecture and be honored by two universities.

He is author of "Other Inquisitions," "The Aleph and Other Stories," "Dreamtigers" and "The Book of Imaginary Beings."

A hereditary disease blinded him at age 56 but, he said, "my dreams keep on being a vision. I keep on seeing ... I live in the center of a luminous mist."

Heating Oil Is Still Plentiful

WASHINGTON (AP) — Heating oil supplies remain plentiful despite increased usage during the severe cold spell plaguing much of the nation, says the National Oil Jobbers Council.

The council, the main group representing heating oil dealers, said Wednesday that no supply problems are expected even if the cold spell continues. Refineries are operating below capacity and could increase their output of heating oil should it become necessary, it said.

"The supply situation has been so good for the past several months that it's had a substantial moderating effect on prices for consumers," said Mark Decker.

Stray Moose

BIG LAKE, Alaska (AP) — Maybe someone played a trick on the moose and sent him on a Snipes hunt.

Clinton and Patricia Snipes were eating breakfast Monday, minding their own business, when a moose wandered up on the front porch, "looked in the window at us" and then poked a hoof through it.

"I took a dive over the couch," Mrs. Snipes said.

She said the critter, which had been foraging in a neighbor's yard before inviting itself to her breakfast table, withdrew and went back to browsing for the food loose mooses usually munch.

U.S., Japan Draft Plans

TOKYO (AP) — American and Japanese officials today began drafting contingency plans for joint action in the event of a military emergency in the Far East outside Japan, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said.

The talks, being held at Japan's Foreign Ministry, are expected to focus on logistics and communications cooperation and providing U.S. Forces in Japan with access to ports, airfields and Japan Self-Defense Force bases if events in the Far East threaten Japan's security.

Participating in the talks are U.S. Marine Corps Maj. Gen. Marc Moore, Chief of Staff of the U.S. Forces in Japan, and top Japanese officials from the Foreign Ministry and the Defense Agency, the spokesman said.

In Nov. 1978, the two sides set down guidelines calling for defense cooperation in protecting Japan from attack and preparing for emergency situations in Japan and the Far East.

Study of the third aspect — emergency situations outside Japan — has gotten off to a slow start amid protests from Japan's political left that such cooperation would violate the nation's constitutional ban on collective military activities outside the country.

A meeting of the Japan-U.S. Security Consultative Committee earlier this month gave the go-ahead for joint planning.

Hunting An Ape For 'Co-Star

ASHLAND, Ore. (AP) — No one's asking for Bo Derek's co-star yet, but there's plenty of monkey business going on here as a theater company searches for an ape to star in the play "Inherit The Wind."

The Oregon Shakespearean Festival is seeking a monkey, such as the one that played opposite Miss Derek in the film "Tarzan," or, for that matter, any chimp off the old block.

The play is an account of the famous Scopes Trial, which featured a 1925 courtroom clash between religion and evolution.

The festival received 1,000 applications for the 50 human acting jobs, but so far, no hairy applicants with long arms.

The troupe has, in the meantime, resorted to a public plea, giving these as the qualification:

"The monkey should be well-trained, take direction well, should not be given to temper tantrums or excessive salary demands."
