C-Of-C Citizen Of The Year Honor Bestowed On David Whichard II

David J. Whichard II, editor and co-publisher of The Daily Reflector, was named "Outstanding Citizen of the Year" Thursday night at the annual meeting of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"We are recognizing tonight a man who has a long history of service to Pitt County," said Wally Howard, who presented the award. Howard highlighted Whichard's fund-raising activities and his civic and professional involvements over the past three decades.

"I am overwhelmed," Whichard told the over 400 persons who attended the meeting. "Certainly, I love Pitt County and could not have done the things mentioned without a deep love for this community."

During the chamber business meeting, Larkin Little, 1982 chairman of the board of the Pitt-Greenville chamber, reviewed the objectives and programs for the coming year. "The continuing promotion of the four-laning of 264 to Greenville is an important objective," he noted, "as well as the promotion of Greenville as a regional shopping/convention center."

The completion of the Fleming House, he added, is one of the chamber's major goals. The house, located at Third and Greene streets, will be the chamber's permanent headquarters when it is completed.

"One of the first things we hope to do this year is sign the contract for the renovation of the house," he said, "and this should be done within the next few days."

"For the chamber to be a leader in the community, we must develop and carry out goals," said Little. "We are, now, the largest business organization east of Raleigh and for us to remain the 'hub' of the east, we must adopt a bold plan of action and carry it out."

Little said the 1982 plan of action dictates a steering committee be formed to develop a comprehensive five-year plan for the area's growth. "This committee will list specific long-range goals and outline the direction the chamber will take in the future," he explained.

"Our program of work this year is far-reaching and to be successful will require a great deal of work from each of us," added the 1982 chairman.

Robert Griffin, chairman of the board in 1981, told members that the chamber "closed our books for the first time with no debt" in 1981. In his annual report, he noted that the chamber began the year with a large operating deficit but completed it "financially sound, with no dues increase and a partial funding of the first employee retirement program."

"Building upon the achievements of 1980, the Ayden Council flourished, and Bethel Council is established and soon a Griffin Council will join us," he said. "We have truly become a chamber with county perspective."

Griffin listed the following as major accomplishments of the chamber in 1981:

- Ayden and Bethel councils formed with over 60 members each.
- Sponsored Farmers Market in downtown area.
- Co-sponsored Service Corps of Retired Executives with Small Business Administration.
- Leased Fleming house (Please turn to Page 6)

More Arrests In Dozier Case

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer

VICENZA, Italy (AP) — Italian officials grilled Brig. Gen. James Dozier's Red Brigades captors today and made 17 more arrests in redoubled efforts to smash Italy's most feared terrorist organization.

Italian newspapers hailed the 90-second police raid that freed the 50-year-old American general Thursday as the greatest victory to date against the ultra-leftist terrorists. It was the first operation since 1975 to free a captive of the Red Brigades, who enjoyed an aura of invincibility.

"The Dozier case marks a turnaround," said the conservative Rome newspaper Il Tempo in a front-page editorial.

Apparently following leads turned up in the investigation of the kidnapping, police today said they arrested 17 suspected members of the Red Brigades and uncovered hideouts filled with arms. Most of those arrested were from Verona, but a few were picked up in Mestre, near Venice.

Dozier was in very good condition and had a comfortable night at a hospital on the NATO base in this north Italian town, said the base spokesman, Staff Sgt. George Pool.

The general had breakfast today with his wife, Judith, and daughter, Cheryl. He embraced them in a tearful reunion Thursday night after his release from 42 days in captivity.

He was to make a statement at a televised news conference this afternoon, but the Army said he would answer no questions.

Dozier was rescued just before noon Thursday by 10 commandos from an elite anti-terrorist squad who broke into the apartment where he was held in Padua, 19 miles south of Vicenza.

One of the raiders swung a rifle and floored a terrorist pointing a pistol at the head of the general, who was bound and gagged, shoeless and dressed in a blue warm-up suit.

No shots were fired, police said.

The commandos arrested three men and two women, and investigators began questioning them for leads to their accomplices. Officials said they expected to find eight terrorists in the apartment. They sealed off the neighborhood, where many students live, for half an hour after the raid but no more arrests were made at that time.

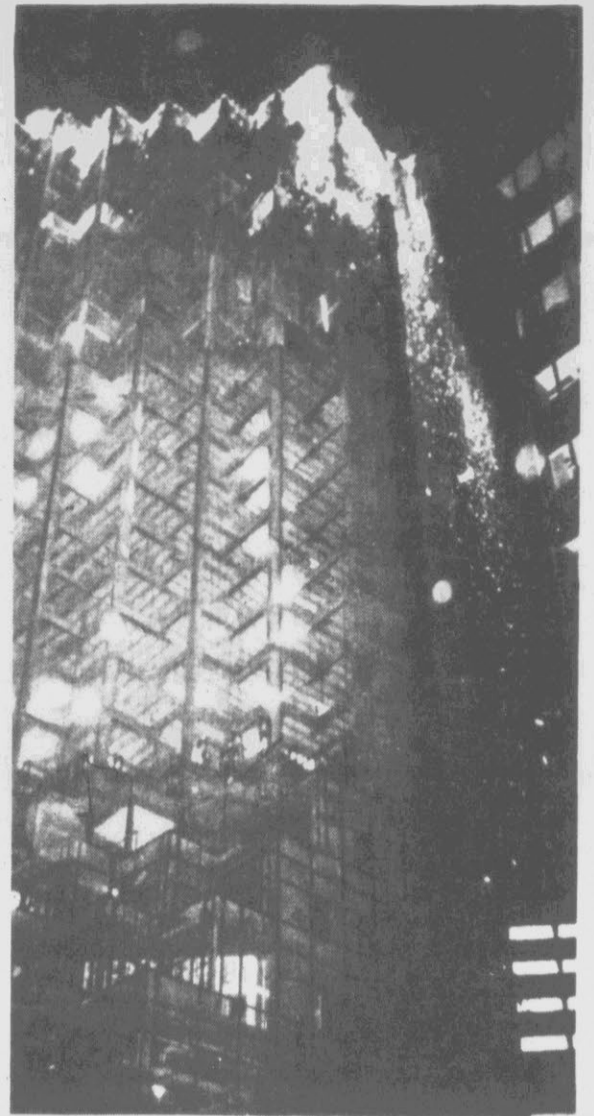

The Italian news agency ANSA reported the raiders seized 15 pistols, five submachine guns, seven hand grenades, six packages of plastic explosive, $16,000 worth of lire, false identity documents and an "archive" of information about people living in Venice.

Police would not say how they knew where Dozier was being held. But a U.S. official said the police captured some members of the Red Brigades "column" that was holding the general, and one of them talked.

The man holding a gun on Dozier when the commando team broke in was identified by police as Giovanni Ciucci, 32, of Pisa, a former railroad worker. Four others arrested in the 90-second blitz were identified as Antonio Savasta, 27, and Emilia Libera, 27, long sought as members of the Rome "column" of the Red Brigades; Cesare Di Lenardo, 22, of Udine; and Emanuela Frascella, 20, a Padua physician's daughter.

By coincidence, 10 hours after they were taken, a court on the Italian island of Sardinia sentenced Savasta and Libera in absentia to more than 30 years in prison for a shoot-out in February 1980 with anti-terrorist police.

Savasta, a 27-year-old former law student, was wanted on a number of other charges, including involvement in the kidnap-murder of former Premier Aldo Moro in 1978.

Flames And Debris

FIRE IN THE SKY — Flaming debris spills down the side of the Trump Tower, a 35-story building under construction on New York's Fifth Avenue at 56th Street. Fire department officials said the fire, deliberately set sometime around 5 a.m., heavily damaged the top floors and blazing debris started smaller fires at lower levels. (AP Laserphoto)

New Cutback For ESC Office

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Effective at 5 p.m. today, the Greenville office of the Employment Security Commission is losing three more of its staff members. This follows the loss of one staff member two months ago — all part of a projected cutback in ESC services due to curtailed funding.

The four staffers laid off to date are all interviewers. "These losses represent people who service the public directly, the people who interview job seekers on a one to one basis," said Jim Hannan, manager of the Greenville ESC office. Hannan also said that, "If the overall cut as proposed does go through, we will be losing three, possibly four more of our staff in March."

Before the first cuts two months ago, the staff at Greenville's ESC numbered 21. Now it's down to 17 and could possibly drop to 13 in March.

"What's so distressing in my viewpoint," Hannan said, "is that this is an agency conceived to serve people who are out of work, to help them find jobs. And right now with more people out of work who need our services, our staff is being reduced."

Asked if staff members could fill the gap by overtime work, Hannan said, "We are not permitted overtime. That has been ruled out."

The staff cuts in Greenville are part of an overall pattern statewide and nationally. The cuts were ordered, Hannan explained, after the U.S. secretary of labor directed the Office of Management and Budget to effect a 4 percent budget cut across the board for ESC, the Migrant Seasonal Farm Work Council and the Wage and Hour Division.

"If ESC had gotten a four percent cut or even slightly more, that would not have been so bad," Hannan remarked. "As it happened, cuts were first considered for the Migrant Council and the Wage and Hour Division, with ESC being considered last. As a result, the ESC cut is highly disproportionate. Already we have a 19 percent cut, and if we do lose four more in March, we will have a 38 percent cut."

Nearly every county in North Carolina has a Migrant Council that works solely with migrant labor for local farmers. "The nearest one here is Bethel, which also serves Martin County," Hannan said. Like the ESC, the Migrant Council has a full complement of services. Migrant Council staffs and Wage and Hour Division staff have not been hit nearly so hard by cutbacks as the ESC, Hannan said. The percentage cuts in those agencies is considerably lower than for ESC.

"The budget cuts," Hannan added, "were made even tougher by the fact they were retroactive to the beginning of last October. Of course we had already spent our budget for the last three months of the year before knowing about the cuts."

The result of the Office of Management and Budget proposal will have far-reaching effects if carried out. It would mean the closing of local offices in 22 North Carolina towns and cities, including the eastern North Carolina offices in Ahoskie, Edenton, Morehead City, Roanoke Rapids, Washington and Wilson.

In addition to these closures, the proposed cutbacks would also mean the closing of smaller branch offices in more than two dozen towns, to include Tarboro, Windsor, Plymouth, Oxford, Bolivia and Louisburg.

Hannan says, "It appears to me there have been designs at both the state and national level to try to reduce the effectiveness of ESC. Lobbyists in Washington have been active on behalf of private employment agencies to put the ESC out of

Natural Gas Mishap Set Off Chain Of Blowtorch Blazes In City

CENTRALIA, Mo. (AP) — A state of emergency was in effect today after 28 homes and businesses burst into flames within seconds when the pressure in a natural gas line was kicked up accidentally, causing water heaters and furnaces to spit fire like

"blowtorches."

Five people were injured Thursday in the fires, which started after a gas line regulator was hit by a backhoe at the power company. Burton Knowles, mayor of the town of 3,500 people ordered a state of emergency and dusk-to-dawn curfew to prevent looting.

"My son just got in the front door and he said, 'Get out of here, Mama, it's ready to blow,'" said Neta Cox, who was cooking lunch.

"Then the furnace blew up and within 10 minutes, it was the hottest flame I ever saw."

Nine houses were destroyed and at least 19 other homes and buildings — including a motel and a funeral home — were damaged in the fires.

Knowles ordered a state of emergency Thursday night and a dusk-to-dawn curfew to prevent looting, but Police Chief Jim Hollis said no trouble was reported. Hollis said he was not sure whether the curfew would be in effect again tonight. "Right now we're going to play it by ear," he said.

Hollis said gas service had been restored to 95 percent of the homes by this morning.

Bill Hollander, a retired engineer, said "gas jets were blowing all over town ... those pilot lights were blowing like blowtorches."

Terry Mansfield, the chief of the volunteer fire department in the central Missouri town, was on his mail route when he saw the smoke billowing over the community.

"I couldn't stand it. ... I had to get back to town. I thought my town was burning down," he said.

"One house blew up, and after that it was just bang, bang, bang" in a chain reaction," Mansfield added. "I don't know how it was, how some houses kept from blowing up."

The accident occurred when Alvin Jacobs, a longtime city employee, was operating a backhoe with a three-man crew near a Missouri Power and Light Co. building that houses one of four pressure regulators for the town's natural gas system, Knowles said.

The backhoe struck a gas line regulator, allowing high-pressure natural gas to shoot through low-pressure lines into homes across town. Although the high pressure may have caused some houses to explode, most caught fire when the flames shot out of water heaters and furnaces, authorities said.

"I don't think anybody knew what was happening for a while," said Barney Wainscott, who had one son lose his home and another lose his insurance office.

"It seemed like everywhere you went there was a fire on either side of you," he said.

"We got that first call, and within minutes, maybe seconds, there were so many calls the phones couldn't handle it."

One of the 125 firefighters called from surrounding towns to fight the blazes said it "was like somebody decided to make a movie about a whole town burning down."

Hollis said one woman suffered a heart attack and two other people, including a firefighter, suffered smoke inhalation. He said he could not give details of the other two injured people except that neither was seriously hurt.

PCBs AND SALT

Several months ago, I heard on the news that some university had run tests and learned that common table salt would break down and neutralize the harmful properties of PCBs. This sounds so far out. But, if true, it would certainly be a lot less expensive than trying to remove all the PCB saturated soil from N.C. highways to a hazardous waste dump. B.M.M.

You're right on at least one point. It would be less expensive.

However, from what HOTLINE has been able to learn, the use of salt is "far out."

Pitt County Health Department Director Robert Ehinger seemed to sum up what others also reported, by saying as far as he knows, there's no cheap way to make PCBs safe.

One Ohio company, Ehinger noted, has a trailer-mounted PCB disposal unit that can be moved from site to site. It had been approved for use in North Carolina. However, that process, like all others, he suggested, is expensive.

Plan Developed To Reduce Programs' Error Rate

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State officials have announced the development of a plan designed to cut error rates in three public assistance programs in North Carolina, including the food stamp program.

Dr. Sarah T. Morrow, secretary of the state Department of Human Resources, announced the plan Thursday after it was developed at an earlier meeting of human resources officials and representatives of the North Carolina County Commissioners Association and the North Carolina Social Services Association.

The plan includes steps to keep social service departments in each of the state's 100 counties up to date on rapidly changing rules that apply to food stamps, Medicaid and Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Earlier this month, North Carolina was assessed $3.5 million in fines for its error rate in food stamp cases. That figure was the highest amount assessed any state in the country.

The state must pay the fine unless state officials submit an acceptable plan to reduce the food stamp error rate by April.

North Carolina's error rate was 15.26 percent compared with the average national rate of 12.6 percent.

State and federal officials have attributed the error rates to county workers who were overworked, inadequately trained and confused by frequently changing rules.

The key elements of the plan include:

— A uniform training package, including video cassette instructions, on changing rules and regulations. The package would be made available to all county social services departments.

— Quarterly submission of regulations changes to counties to give eligibility workers a chance to learn new rules as a package.

Regulatory changes now are passed to counties as soon as they are made, and counties are held accountable for administering the changes as soon as notification is received.

In the past 18 months, more than 600 changes have been passed to counties dealing with the food stamp program.

— A reorganization of personnel working in public assistance at the state and regional levels into specialized categories for food stamps, AFDC and Medicaid. This will provide experts for county workers to call on with questions.

— Completion of the automation of records for all public assistance programs.

Your Friend Needs Help

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: We have had a long friendship with an extremely well-to-do, kind and generous couple for many years. For the last four or five years the man has been stealing various items from our home. (We are not just guessing — we know.)

Since making this appalling discovery, we have been avoiding his company as much as possible. It must be a sickness because he can buy anything he wants.

We doubt if his wife knows about this. He obviously needs professional help. What should we do? Talk to him about it? Tell his wife? Or just never see them again? Thank you for any help you can give us.

A BEVERLY HILLS FAMILY

DEAR FAMILY: Tell this man privately exactly what you have told me. Stress the fact that you value his friendship and realize that he is afflicted with "kleptomania" — a consistent neurotic impulse to steal without economic motive. Urge him to seek professional help from a behavior modification therapist. If he becomes indignant and denies his problem, don't invite him to your home again.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 33-year-old man planning to marry a 34-year-old divorcee I'll call Vicki. She is raising two sons, ages 11 and 13, from a previous marriage. Vicki and I agree on almost everything except her attitude on nudity in the presence of her sons. She maintains that hiding her body teaches her sons that the body is something to be ashamed of, thus creating sexual hang-ups. She goes topless into their bedroom to talk to them and casually parades around the house with little (or nothing) on. Although she acts very nonchalant in her disrobed state, the boys appear to be somewhat embarrassed and uncomfortable.

We've discussed the subject, and Vicki insists that nudity is natural, pointing out that people who grow up in cultures where nudity is accepted have healthier attitudes about sex.

Abby, I was raised in a family with brothers and sisters who were taught to be reasonably modest. Nobody ever deliberately walked around naked, and as far as I know, none of us ever developed any hang-ups.

I would appreciate your views on this subject.

OLD-FASHIONED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR OLD-FASHIONED: Vicki is undoubtedly well-intentioned, but we are not living in a culture where nudity is generally accepted. Her attitude might have been constructive when her boys were tiny tots, but they are now adolescents with healthy, normal sexual feelings and the sight of an attractive unclothed female (a mother included) is apt to produce a disturbing level of stimulation. Your observation that the boys appear to be "embarrassed and uncomfortable" would indicate that Mother is either consciously or unconsciously turning them on.

I vote for reasonable modesty.

DEAR ABBY: I am having an argument with a friend. Maybe you can settle it for us. He says venereal disease can be cured no matter how long you've had it.

I say it has to be cured as soon as you get it or it's too late. Who is right?

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Your friend. But the sooner treatment is begun, the better.

Everybody needs friends. For some practical tips on how to be popular, get Abby's Popularity booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed stamped (37 cents) envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

INFANTS' CAVITIES

Teeth are susceptible to decay as soon as they appear in the mouth, usually around six months of age, warns Sarah M. Hinton, extension food and nutrition specialist at North Carolina State University.

Especially susceptible are the four upper incisors which can decay when a baby is continually put down to sleep with a bottle filled with sugary liquid.

Liquids such as milk, formula, fruit juice, soft drinks, sweetened tea, fruit drinks and sugar water contain natural sugars that can decay teeth, Mrs. Hinton says.

She notes that sweetened pacifiers also cause decay and that the only safe liquid to leave in the bottle is water.

IRA Will Be Of More Benefit To Younger People

Everywhere you turn today, someone is offering an Individual Retirement Account. Or someone is trying to decide if investment in one is a good idea.

"The people it will benefit most are those starting fairly young," says Dr. Justine Rozier, family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University. "But, of course that is the stage of greatest financial demand."

Before continuing Dr. Rozier's specific advice on IRAs, here's a review of exactly what such an account can and can't do for you.

An Individual Retirement Account is one into which an individual worker may put up to $2,000 a year. If the account also covers a non-working spouse, he may contribute up to $2,250.

Two features have made this especially attractive to workers since the Jan. 1 changes in the tax laws.

First, the money contributed to an IRA is deductible from income reported on your 1982 federal income tax return and all interest and dividends are tax-deferred until you begin making withdrawals after you are retired and at a lower income level. Remember, that's federal, not state tax.

Second, this type of IRA, once only available to workers with no retirement plan at work, is now available to all workers. So if you earn a wage or salary, you may begin an IRA even though you have another retirement plan at work.

You may start withdrawing money from your IRA at age 59½, and you must start by age 70½.

The types of IRAs vary, but the preceding rules are basic to all. The next question to consider is: are IRAs a good investment?

The tax advantages make IRAs good investments and they have the advantage of being transferrable if you change jobs, but each individual or family must look at their own income and future realistically to assess IRA's value to them, Dr. Rozier warns.

Realize first that an IRA won't put you on easy street, she says. Because behind those million-dollar savings figures you read, is the assumption that high interest rates and inflation will continue.

If so, in 30 years, one million won't be worth nearly what it is today. "If things are that bad," says Dr. Rozier, "it'll take a million just to live."

She also warns young families not to establish IRA's unless they are sure they do not need that extra money to meet daily expenses and have high enough taxable income to benefit from tax breaks.

"The principal, plus interest, is compounded," the specialist adds, "and they'll have no easy access to that money." There is a 10 percent tax penalty in addition to income tax on funds withdrawn early. They may be better off with more flexible short-range investments.

"Be very careful where you put your money in an IRA and be sure the principal is safe. Put it where you can get the most interest, but understand the risks and requirements for getting it back," says the specialist.

"And," she adds, "I'm concerned about people who are older. If you're contemplating retirement soon, it may not be long enough to start an IRA now. Only earned income can go into an IRA account."

Secretary Of Year Chosen

The Greenville Chapter, Professional Secretaries International held its meeting Monday evening, Ms. Betty Thompson was named Secretary of the Year.

Judges for the selection were Dr. Frances Daniels of ECU, Ms. Runelle Forbes, a local secretary and Charles Whitener of Union Carbide.

The seventh annual seminar sponsored by the group will be held Feb. 20 at the Casablanca. The seminar title is "The Ultimate Professional" and is designed especially for secretaries and other office personnel. For further information contact Anne P. Harrington, seminar chairperson, 578-7411.

The chapter meets on the fourth Monday each month. Secretaries interested in joining should contact Helen Rollins, 756-2171.

Ms. Barrett Gives Talk

Beverly Barrett was guest speaker at the Tuesday evening meeting of Eta Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. She is director of the volunteers for hospital services, a program currently being developed through Home Health Care Services.

A history of the hospice program was given as well as information pertaining to the services it provides to cancer patients and their families within the Pitt County area.

The project is dependent on a network of volunteers who receive in-service training, said the speaker.

The group will make a contribution to the Eastern Carolina Sheltered Workshop. The meeting was held at the home of Linda McGehee.

CPI Base Year Is Changing

The Consumer Price Index is going to go down sharply this month. But it is not necessarily an improvement for consumers.

According to Justine Rozier, extension family resource management specialist at North Carolina State University, the federal government is just changing the base year with which it compares prices for a marketbasket of more than 200 goods and services.

"Instead of comparing today's prices to the cost of the same item in 1967, the most recent standard, they will now compare prices with 1977," Dr. Rozier says. She says it is standard procedure for the government to move the base year up as figures get unwieldy.

Instead of approximately 300 on the old scale, meaning prices have tripled since 1967, January's CPI will probably be around 150, meaning prices are up 50 percent from 1977, the specialist says.

Or, instead of saying a dollar is worth about 35 cents compared to 1967, the new CPI will tell us it's worth about 65 cents compared to 1977.

So the lowering of the CPI really means a concession to inflation, not a break from inflation.

Rev. Moore Is Speaker

Mrs. Thurston Wynne and Mrs. James Hecker were hostesses at the January meeting of the Grass Roots Garden Club. The Rev. John Moore was guest speaker.

He showed slides he made on his visit to the Holy Land and told the history of each. Included were the Tomb of David, the Wailing Wall and the House of Book.

The meeting was conducted by President Mildred Hecker.

COOKING IS FUN!

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

About a year ago Mrs. Mary Greene, the chief recipe tester in my kitchen, suggested we work out a really good recipe for a low-sodium yeast bread. Fortunately we were able to do just that and to pass along the recipe in this column.

Recently Mrs. Greene and I decided to work out a formula for a low-sodium cheese yeast bread. If you try the following recipe for these loaves we hope you will be as satisfied with them as we are. They have an open texture and make very crisp toast.

Two notes. If the unsalted Gouda-style cheese is unavailable in your markets, try using any other unsalted semisoft bland cheese that is available. In buttering the loaf pans for use in the recipe, we used unsalted butter not only for its flavor but because it helps the bottom and sides of the loaves brown.

LOW-SODIUM CHEESE BREAD

2 envelopes dry yeast
2 teaspoons sugar
1 cup warm (105 to 115 degrees) water
4 ounces unsalted Gouda-type or similar cheese (1 cup loosely packed)

5 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup ice-cold water

In a pint measure dissolve the yeast and sugar in the warm water. In a food processor bowl (5-cup capacity) with the medium shredding disc, shred the cheese; remove the disc and insert the dough-kneading blade. Add 4 cups of the flour; process for 20 seconds. With the machine running, through the feed tube, pour the yeast mixture, then the ice-cold water, in a steady stream so that the flour mixture absorbs the liquids in 25 to 30 seconds. Uncover and add the remaining cup of flour; process for 45 to 60 seconds to knead dough. Remove dough to a greased bowl; turn to grease top; cover bowl with saran; let rise in a draft-free 80-degree place until doubled — 1 hour.

Turn out on a prepared pastry cloth and cut in half; shape each half into a loaf. Place in greased loaf pans (each 8½ by 4½ by 2½ inches); loosely cover pans with saran; let rise as before until doubled — 1 hour. Brush with milk. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until browned and cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 30 minutes. Turn out on a wire rack; if bottoms of loaves are not brown, return to pans bottom side up and continue baking in the 400-degree oven until browned — 5 minutes. Cool completely, top sides up, on a wire rack. Makes 2 loaves.

One Of Weakest

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — While the office has been strengthened by a constitutional amendment allowing succession, North Carolina's governorship remains one of the weakest in the nation, a report says.

An analysis by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research Inc. says the 1976 amendment backed by Gov. Jim Hunt allowing governors to succeed themselves and the control that the state's governors have over appointments were strong points for the office.

But the article, entitled "How Powerful Is the North Carolina Governor?", found the office is weakened in a number of ways.

According to the survey:

— The North Carolina governor is the only one in the United States without some type of veto power.

— The existence of the Advisory Budget Commission significantly dilutes the budget powers of North Carolina governors.

— North Carolina provides for the separate election of a lieutenant governor, which the study said weakens governors.

In addition, the state has seven other separately elected positions that affect the amount of power the governor wields.

Thad Beyle, a University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill professor of political science who compiled the survey, said results showed that "Southern governors do not generally have as much formal power as do non-Southern governors. Moreover, North Carolina has not kept pace with its neighbors in enhancing the governor's powers."

504 Pints To Bloodmobile

A two-day Bloodmobile visit at East Carolina University this week resulted in the donation of 504 pints of blood, according to Ruth Taylor of the Pitt Red Cross.

Mrs. Taylor said the blood drive, which she termed "a real good two days all the way round," saw collection totals of 220 pints on Wednesday with 25 deferrals and 284 units on Thursday with 31 people deferred for various health reasons.

The Circle K Club at ECU, with Ave Mitta and Tim Merck serving as blood drive coordinators, sponsored the campus visit. Mrs. Taylor said the club members "did an outstanding job" in their first Bloodmobile sponsorship and she said "they will be asked to help us again."

Mrs. Taylor thanked the students who donated blood and she offered her appreciation to the Greenville Service League and the volunteer nurses for their help. She extended "special thanks" to the area bakery facilities for their food donations and to the various sororities on campus for providing sandwiches and other food items.

The next Bloodmobile visit in the area will be on March 9 at D. H. Conley High School.

Some Claimants May Be Eligible

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of the N.C. Employment Security Commission says many unemployment claimants may soon be eligible for extended benefits.

Glenn R. Jernigan says the Extended Benefits Program was initiated on Jan. 16. The program results from a period of sustained high unemployment and, under the law, begins with the third week following the time in which there is a "trigger on" indicator.

Many unemployed individuals who have current claims with benefit years in progress and who have exhausted or will exhaust their regular entitlement to unemployment insurance may be eligible to receive up to 13 additional weeks of benefits at the same monetary rate of regular benefits.

Scouting Honor To Cub Leader

Sara Mosley of Greenville, a volunteer Cub Scout leader for some 18 years in Georgia, Florida and North Carolina, was presented the prestigious Silver Beaver Award by the East Carolina Council Thursday night in Kinston.

The presentation of the highest award a local council can bestow upon a volunteer leader took place at the council's annual recognition banquet, attended by some 250 adult scout leaders.

Mrs. Mosley, wife of district scout executive Bob Mosley, was commended for her volunteer efforts over the years that have included service as den leader, den leader coach, cub training chairman, and director of the cub district activities. She has served on the staff of the council "Pow Wow" for three years.

Mrs. Mosley, who is employed at First Federal Savings & Loan Association, was one of six Scout leaders from the council this year to receive the award, given for long tenure and distinguished service to youth on a council level.

Several Pitt County Scout leaders were elected to council offices. They included: Jack Farrior, vice president; Joe Goodson, international representative; George Attmore, district chairman, and Heber Adams, district commissioner. Farrior is from Farmville, while Goodson, Attmore and Adams reside in Greenville.

George Evans, formerly of Greenville but now a Kinston resident, was elected president of the council.

Project At Zoo

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — An interim report endorsed by the N.C. Zoological Park Council is calling for completion of the zoo's second continent — North America — by the end of the decade at a cost of more than $17 million.

Long-range plans call for seven phases of development arranged in continents. The North America continent will be the second; Africa will be complete in 1984.

The report was compiled by the zoo's joint development committee composed of members from the N.C. Zoological Society board and the zoo council. It sought to determine realistic development goals for the 1980s, as well as a funding strategy and time frame for meeting them.

Natural Resources and Community Development Secretary Joe Grimsley asked for the study by Feb. 26. After the zoo society board reviews it early next month, the committee will put it in final form to be submitted to Grimsley. If he approves it, it will take its place in the departmental funding request of the General Assembly.

Time To Wait And See

President Reagan's first State of the Union message was largely one of setting a general course. The final product will be provided by Congress, requiring months—more likely years—before the final shape appears.

The destination: Reagan's concept of a "new federalism" in which individual states would assume some of the responsibilities held by Washington.

The fine print hasn't been settled. As things now stand a lot of people seem to approve the theory but are scared to death of how it may be implemented. The matter of cost keeps popping up. States (including North Carolina) just can't see enough new revenues to meet all the increases in spending that would be thrust upon them.

But again, the lack of details prohibits arriving at any firm figures to prove points for, or against the "new federalism".

One thing for sure, the process is going to require a lot of legislation and Congressmen will be going over the involved measures line by line to insure their own states (as well as others) don't find themselves on the rack.

What we are seeing is an attempted revolution in the accustomed American system of government. It may not get through Congress. It may be mutilated beyond recognition by Congress; and, it might even be adopted.

The process is not going to be an easy one. We are going to learn a lot with the passage of time.

Good, On Several Counts

The rescue of Brig. Gen. James Dozier, held captive by Italy's notorious Red Brigades, is welcome news on several counts.

We suspect few, deep in their hearts, really believed the American would be seen alive again; the Italian terrorist gang has earned a repute for ruthless killings. We feel good that he is safe, alive and well.

Secondly, the rescue and the capture of five terrorists (in addition to arrests made in earlier roundups) defuses the myth that the Red Brigades are invulnerable. That is a mighty boost to public morale.

Thirdly, it was even a bigger shot in the arm for Italian law enforcement people. It was their coup, and pride in the ranks justifiably must be soaring. That kind of thing is good for any arm of the law.

And finally, if luck holds, the demise of the Red Brigades just might have been accomplished. They have been undone. Their most trusted insiders are in captivity, an uncounted number of followers identified and detained, their myth is shattered. Maybe the Dozier abduction was a blessing in disguise.

Other Editors Say Needed Now

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)
There are cheaper and sometimes better ways to handle local problems than with federal funding. Last week it was announced that the N.C. Employment Security Commission might be forced to close its offices in 48 cities and towns because of federal budget cuts approved by Congress last month. With the unemployment rate soaring throughout the country, this is the last place that Congress should cut funds. If anything there should be more accessibility available to the unemployed.

Should the 48 offices be closed, many of the unemployed will have to travel miles and wait hours to get a hearing on their problems. This will cost time and expensive gasoline, and it will keep those involved from knocking on doors and looking for jobs.

Even if the offices are closed, the ESC should put some people on the road. Let them work out of the local post office or school one day a week. One person can go to an area and see 50 persons in a day much quicker than 50 persons can drive up to 50 miles to get a hearing. The government owes the unemployed that much consideration.

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. understands the problem, and he is making an effort to keep open some of the 48 offices reported to be closing. Hunt has met with ESC officials, and they are already in the process of trying to find free office space in local schools, chambers of commerce, state offices and community colleges. That would appear to be a very wise approach.

The ESC might even figure out some way to eliminate the tremendous amount of paperwork that now exists within the organization. A computer network might solve some of the problems. Such a computer might be placed in an office where the work could be handled by someone already doing another job. Closing up to 48 offices across the state discourages hundreds of the unemployed who really want to work. Making it tougher to discover existing job opportunities does not solve the problem.

Strength For Today

ONLY IN PART
There is a notable tendency in American life today to assume that scientific investigation and research will provide us with most of the right answers to our problems in personal and social life. One almost gets the impression from popular writers in newspapers and magazines that we are in a position to discover ultimate truth.

But this, of course, is folly. The absolutely correct answer never comes up. St. Paul reminded us centuries ago that we know only in

Local Calls Are Cheaper

No one knows what is going to happen when the AT&T breaks up, according to the recent settlement they made with the government.

"Ma Bell" will be permitted to keep its long-distance service, its laboratories, and go into all sorts of new electronic communications. But it has agreed to sell off the local telephone companies it owned, which service communities.

According to the people who should know, this could increase the cost of local telephone calls tremendously because AT&T subsidized this service, while it profited from long-distance.

This means a whole new advertising campaign for local telephone companies, to encourage people to use the phone.

The TV commercials might go something like this: Camera showing taxi driver. Voiceover.

"Do you realize that you can now call your local delicatessen after 11 o'clock at night for only $3.95?"

Taxi driver: "You got to be kidding. Only $3.95?"

"That's right. For $3.95 you can call anywhere in the city after 11 o'clock, and all day who would love to hear from you."

Shot of conference room in office. Stocky banker-type man walks in and says to people sitting around the table:

"Where's Slocum?"

"He went over to see Ronstetter on K Street about the merger deal."

"K Street, that's three blocks away."

Slocum walks in and everyone looks at him sternly.

Banker-type says, "Slocum, haven't you heard of a local telephone call? For just $6.95 you could have spoken to Ronstetter on the phone."

"Gosh, sir, I never thought of it."

Banker smiles, "That's why you're not going anywhere in the firm. A local telephone call is the only way to do business. Isn't that right, gang?"

Everyone at the table all together, "RIGHT CHIEF."

Shot of grandmotherly type talking into the phone. Grandfatherly type comes into room. "Who are you talking to, mother?"

"Hilda, next door. She seemed so happy to hear my voice."

Voiceover: "You don't need a good reason to call someone locally any more. Just pick up the phone and surprise them. You'd be amazed at how little it costs compared to hiring a Cadillac limousine. Make someone in your neighborhood happy today by saying, 'Hello.'"

Sunday."

Shot of woman in supermarket. "When was the last time you spoke to your child when she was sleeping over at a friend's house?"

"I never call her because it's too expensive."

"What would you say if I told you that if you dial direct you could talk to her for three minutes for $2.75 after midnight?"

"I'd say you were pulling my leg."

"I'm not pulling your leg. The B&S Telephone Co. will now let you call anyone within a 10-mile radius after midnight for $2.75 for three minutes, and only $1.20 for every added minute. Surely there is someone in your town

The Routine Spells Grief

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Using a refined tough-cop nice-cop routine, Prime Minister Menachem Begin is softening up the Reagan administration in hopes of throttling U.S. pressures against Israel in his climactic battle for a continuing free hand on the Palestinian West Bank.

A secret Tel Aviv cable to Secretary of State Alexander Haig from U.S. Ambassador Sam Lewis exemplified tough-cop Begin. Lewis warned an alarmed Haig that the low estate of U.S.-Israeli relations had brought Begin to such a high pitch of nervous agitation that a major Israeli invasion of southern Lebanon to liquidate 5,000 Palestine liberation forces was highly possible. Forces to do it, he said, were in readiness within three miles of the border.

After receiving a private letter from President Reagan warning against military action against Lebanon, Begin put on his nice-cop hat. On Jan. 19 he sent the president a soothing letter: barring "clear provocation," Begin wrote, there would be no invasion.

That sequence of events sets the pattern for Begin's tough-cop nice-cop routine. Lead with a right to Uncle Sam's chin, then graciously retreat to show that American interests are not beyond Begin's consideration. The threat-retreat pattern is pointed in an ominous direction: condition Reagan, whose policy on the West Bank remains a complete mystery, to keep it that way so Israel's implacable takeover can continue.

A counterpart to Begin's now-reduced threat of a Lebanon invasion is his threat to annex the West Bank — if the American president gets out of line. The antecedent was Begin's annexation of the Golan Heights. That was condemned by the U.S. But last week the U.S. vetoed the UN Security Council resolution putting international teeth in the condemnation.

Key players in Begin's West Bank strategy are Israeli citizens in Yamit and other Jewish settlements in the final portion of the Egyptian Sinai scheduled for Israeli evacuation by April 25. That is when the Sinai returns to Egyptian control.

Many of these early settlers were encouraged by their government to make new homes in the Sinai wastes. Naturally, they resist eviction. To get them out by April 25 will require the full weight of the Begin government and nearly a half-billion dollars in government subsidies. The exodus could spill blood. A Begin spokesman says it will produce "the greatest trauma in our existence."

But this withdrawal drama, indescribably tragic for the Israelis who were urged to go there by their government, becomes a trump card for Begin in the battle for the West Bank. Officials here are bracing themselves for the predictable Begin onslaught in the wake of the world television drama of the evacuation: we do this for Camp David and the Americans, but Jewish settlers never again will be forcibly pried away from their settlements.

On the West Bank, Jewish settlers are dug in even more tenaciously than in the Sinai. The Reagan administration's reversal of former U.S. policy that labeled West Bank settlements "illegal" shows why Begin is not pessimistic about winning the battle for the West Bank. Since Reagan took office, Israel's settlement policy has led to the seizure of more Palestinian lands and a significant increase in Israel's west Bank investment.

Unlike their predecessors, neither Reagan nor Haig has made a public issue of this creeping annexation of Arab territory, a change from past performance interpreted as assent by the Israelis.

Other Washington signals taken as encouraging by Begin are more shrouded. High State Department officials talk privately about the virtual impossibility of pinning Israel down to an agreement with Egypt on the "full" west Bank autonomy promised in the Camp David accords. They say there are so many loopholes in the 1978 agreement that it is a "sieve" unable to sustain the presumed commitments of Camp David. Such private laments quickly reach Begin's ear.

They work to Begin's advantage. His negotiators with Egypt are making full use of these loopholes. Moreover, quiet U.S. pressures on President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt to sign almost any piece of paper titled "Israeli-Egyptian agreement on autonomy" encourages Begin to resist real concessions, even if Mubarak refuses to play such foolish games.

But the prime minister's best weapon is White House anxieties about tough-cop Begin, and its sigh of relief when nice-cop Begin takes over, while the West Bank is inexorably sucked into Begin's Eretz (greater) Israel.

Possibly Dangerous Exception

By JOHN CUNIFF

AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan said he will stick to his goal of diminishing Washington's role in a host of local and private sector activities, but he made one huge and possibly dangerous exception.

That exception was the budget deficit, the financing of which intrudes deep into what the private sector considers its territory, sopping up a limited supply of capital that otherwise might help finance industry.

Since industrial expansion has been a high priority of the Reagan administration, a contradiction seems to exist. Can industry expand, that is, if Washington won't give it the room in financial markets?

The argument has been well aired even before the president indicated he had abandoned major remedies or quickly closing the budget gap, which he now places at nearly $100 billion in this fiscal year.

Henry Kaufman has been especially outspoken about that gap. A credit authority and partner in the Salomon Brothers investment firm, Kaufman early this month said: "A confrontation between the credit needs of the U.S. Treasury and those of business is shaping up for 1982." Interest rates will rise again, he said. The rebound will be "substantial."

Paul Volcker, the Federal Reserve Board chairman, never has ceased to be concerned, seeming to feel he has but two choices for handling the credit demands of the federal government: Keep a firm hold on the money supply and watch interest rates rise; or let the printing presses run, making credit available for all, and watch inflation resume its rise.

Either way, the economy gets damaged, so again and again Volcker has sought to get the budget gap reduced. Just hours before the State of the Union Message he suggested that heavy Treasury borrowing could work against the very objectives of the Reagan administration.

Donald Regan, the Treasury secretary, apparently isn't as concerned. The marketplace, he is quoted as saying, has had several weeks to digest the news about the federal deficits, indicating that existing prices for borrowing already reflect the news. Time will tell.

Whatever might be done to return responsibilities to states and reduce the size of federal government, that deficit remains a tremendous factor in the marketplace — a wide wedge driven into the private sector from whence the administration expects the economic recovery to come.

As Kaufman assesses the financial markets, about $50 billion in new money will be available for all forms of credit in 1982. That is, $50 billion more than was available in 1981 from all private savings.

But, he figures, the net increase in privately held federal debt will reach a new high of $135 billion — $22 billion more than in 1981. And that would mean "nearly half the expected increase" in credit funds.

These forecasts do not make Kaufman correct. He has erred before. But the broad respect he commands in financial marketplaces — no literate person in The Street, meaning Wall Street and its counterparts around America, is unaware of his forecasts — indicates the concern investors have about budget deficits. Deficits damage business, investors say.

They damage business because they must be financed, and to be financed the government must enter the marketplace and compete for money.

It is unfair competition, businessmen say, because in theory there is no limit to what government might pay, but there is to what a business can afford to pay and remain in business. That has already been shown.

Business might applaud the president's resolve in some aspects of his program, and do so sincerely. Whether it follows up with action is a different matter, because business action usually involves borrowing.

Capital spending by industry has been disappointing, despite financial incentives, and one of the reasons given is that borrowing costs are too high. Why invest, business asks, if you can't obtain a fair return?

That isn't the scenario for reindustrialization, for more productivity and greater competitiveness. And many in industry and finance place the blame on that wedge into the private sector — the budget deficit.

Opines Cure Only Worse

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Hunt has criticized the Reagan administration for its newly announced tactics to curb leaks of government information to news organizations.

"Leaks are frustrating, and sometimes damaging," Hunt said Thursday during a speech at the 57th Annual Newspaper Institute. "I have thought about them a lot. And you know what I've decided to do about them."

"Nothing at all. Because, very simply, the cure for leaks is worse than the disease."

He said people have a right to know what's going on inside their government and that government has no right trying to stop them.

"Government should have to worry about newspapers. Government and government officials should be uncomfortable."

"You're right to print and say whatever you want within the limits of the libel law, is a built-in insurance policy against the abuse of power in this country."

Hunt presented awards to newspapers throughout the state for outstanding achievements in 1981 at the event, sponsored by the North Carolina Press Association, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Duke University.

Life As It's Lived

Adventures At A Table, Or, The Final Gambits

By GAIL MICHAELS
Zachary has a strong belief in cleaning his plate at each meal. He doesn't always eat what's on it. But he makes sure that whatever food he leaves doesn't remain in his sight.

He used to accomplish this simply by sweeping the contents of his high chair tray onto the floor. Thank goodness I've broken him of that habit. Now he places his left-over food, bean by bean, noodle by noodle, on the kitchen counter. Sometimes he pours the milk into the sink. At other times he pours it into the pots and pans. If I'm lucky, he chooses the ones on the stove. If I'm not, I may find the remains two weeks later in a Corning Ware casserole.

Meg, on the other hand, finds the very idea of a clean plate impossible to swallow. I really don't think her attitude has very much to do with the food. She just doesn't like anyone giving her directions, and she feels that her delaying tactics at meals give her some measure of control over us beasts who are constantly extolling the virtues of vegetables.

Finally, either Phillip or I become so exasperated that we command her, as I did the other night when she was the only one left at the table, to finish her meal. "Eat that spinach!" I insisted.

She poked it with her fork as if he weren't sure whether or not it had been pronounced dead. "I'd really rather not."

"You'd always rather not. You have to eat greens in order to stay healthy."

She grabbed at her mid-region. "But my stomach hurts."

"Get down then."

"Before dessert?"

I had the singular advantage of having whipped up some chocolate pudding that afternoon. "If you can't eat your vegetables, then you certainly can't eat sweets."

"But my stomach doesn't hurt for pudding. It just hurts for spinach."

I handled the situation with my usual aplomb. "Eat that spinach right now or you may never eat again."

She looked at her plate and jagged. "How many bites do I have to eat before I can have dessert?"

"Meg, this is not a bargaining table. Eat it all."

"But you gave me too much. You gave me as much as two meals or even three."

"I did not. Besides, it will make you strong."

She banged her fist on the table. "I'm not Popeye!"

"Don't you talk to me like that, young lady!"

"Please, Mommy, please ... just two bites."

I was wearing down and I knew it. "All!"

"I'll eat three bites, OK? Three bites."

"Four."

She gulped them down before I had a chance to reconsider, then handed me her plate. "You know, I did this for you."

I stared at her. "You what?"

"Yes," she said, smoothing her napkin. "I knew you were ready to wash my plate, and I didn't want to keep you waiting any longer than I had to."

"You have got to be kidding."

She trained those serious gray eyes on me. "No, Mommy, I'm not. Now, please, may I have some pudding? And I want a lot, 'cause suddenly I'm very hungry."

Council Holds Call Meeting

A special call meeting of the City Council was scheduled for 5:30 p.m. today at city hall to discuss the resignation of City Manager Ed Wyatt, who announced Thursday that he will take a similar post in Fairfax, Va., effective Feb. 28.

Mayor Percy Cox said the council would discuss the appointment of an interim city manager to serve until a new administrative head is located and hired.

Cox indicated Thursday that the council would go into executive session this afternoon to talk about the city manager situation.

Following the afternoon session, the rescheduled January meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the third floor council chambers. The regular meeting, originally planned for Jan. 14, was postponed on that date due to weather conditions.

Retires From Fire-Rescue

William L. (Billy) Woolfolk has retired from the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department with almost 20 years of service, the city reported.

Woolfolk began his career with the city in May of 1962 as a clerk-dispatcher and progressed to fire-rescue administrative officer, the position he held until his retirement.

He is a trained firefighter and certified emergency medical technician, and was a member of the Greenville competition rescue team which received state and international honors over the years.

Woolfolk attended Greenville High School, East Carolina University, and the N.C. Rescue College.

Advise Keeping Mileage Record

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians who perform volunteer work are being urged to make records of the mileage they compile in their work to get twice the state tax deduction they received last year.

Charles V. Petty, executive director of the Governor's Office of Citizen Affairs, said the new deduction is 18 cents per mile and can be filed on 1983 state income tax returns.

Petty said the increase is due to a bill sponsored by Gov. Jim Hunt in the General Assembly which sets the deduction for miles driven by volunteers to be 90 percent of that allowed for business deductions. The current business deduction is 20 cents per mile.

He said the increase in mileage deduction will allow many volunteers, such as firemen, rescue squads and meals on wheels personnel, to continue to provide their services.

RIF Program

The Iota Kappa Omega Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority will sponsor a "Reading Is Fundamental" distribution Saturday from 10 a.m. until noon at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church. Any student attending the distribution will be allowed to choose two free paperback books to keep as his own.

The RIF Program will be held in conjunction with the special interest segment of Cornerstone's Tutorial Program. Any student, however, may attend the book distribution.

Closing Cape Lookout Station

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Federal budget cuts are forcing the U.S. Coast Guard to close one more of its stations along the North Carolina coast, officials report.

The Cape Lookout station joins the Swansboro station as a victim of budget cuts which are causing the Coast Guard to reconsider its responsibilities.

Cmdr. William Theroux, who confirmed the closing, said 19 guardsmen at Cape Lookout and 16 at Swansboro will be transferred.

Theroux said he did not know when the stations would be officially closed.

Shot of attractive mother in kitchen baking pies. Phone rings and mother answers. Operator's voice can be heard, "we have a collect call from the Giant Food Market for anyone on Connie Marks."

Mother says, "I'll take it. Connie, is there anything wrong?"

"Mom, they're out of heavy sweet cream. Do you want me to buy light cream instead?"

"I'll make do. But it was very smart of you to call collect. By the way, don't forget the cottage cheese."

"Sure, mom. It's on my list."

Voiceover, "When you have a problem and you don't have the money to make a local call, B&S has the answer. Call collect, or charge it to your home or business number. Local calls are cheaper than you think."

Association of County Commissioners and Craven County commissioner, recently met with President Reagan for private talks at the White House concerning the president's plans for turning power back to state and local governments from Washington. Ron Aycock, executive director of the state association, also participated in the meeting.

President Reagan and top White House officials briefed the group on progress of the New Federalism effort, including consolidation of 57 categorical grants into block grants, and work on regulatory reform and federalism.

"Americans ... have begun to recognize that the steady flow of tax dollars and power to Washington has resulted in a government which — at least at the federal level — just doesn't seem to work anymore. We have seen the federal government take too much taxes from the people, too much authority from the states, and too much liberty from the Constitution," President Reagan told the group.

Identify Crime Scene Fingerprints As Heptinstall

Reagan Schedules Trip To Europe In Mid-Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will make his first trip to Europe in June for meetings with European leaders and an audience with Pope John Paul II, the White House announced today.

The trip will be Reagan's fourth visit to foreign nations since he became president a year ago. All of his earlier trips have been to Canada and Mexico.

His last foreign visit was the economic summit in Cancun, Mexico, in October. That meeting was attended by representatives of 22 nations.

The White House said the president will attend the Economic Summit in Versailles, France, June 4-6, at the invitation of French President Francois Mitterrand. That meeting will be attended by the heads of state from Canada, Italy, the Federal Republic of Germany, Japan and the United Kingdom, the White House said. Also attending will be the president of the Commission on the European Community.

The president then will visit Rome on June 7 for an audience with the pope and will conclude his trip by attending a NATO summit. White House spokesman Larry Speakes said the date and location of the NATO summit have not been set yet but indicated it could be June 9-10 in Brussels.

Speakes said the president would be expected to discuss "wide ranging issues that affect the alliance" during his NATO summit. Among issues likely to arise, he said, were the situation in Poland, economic issues and Spain's decision to rejoin NATO, an agreement now in the process of being ratified by NATO countries.

He said the idea for the NATO summit arose from recent ministerial meetings.

State Bureau of Investigation experts Thursday said this morning identified fingerprints found in the Greene County home of Rachel Albritton as belonging to 30-year-old Jeffrey S. Heptinstall, who is on trial in Pitt County Superior Court for her murder.

Mrs. Albritton was stabbed and beaten to death July 11, 1981, after Heptinstall, serving a four-year prison term for damage to personal property, escaped from the state prison unit at Maury.

He has entered a plea of innocence by reason of insanity to the murder charge.

Witnesses Thursday and this morning said latent finger and palm prints found on the neck of a broken bottle found on the back porch of the Albritton home, on a pocketbook belonging to Mrs. Albritton, and on a door between the dining room and den of her residence were made by Heptinstall.

SBI experts also told the court that shoe tracks found on the kitchen floor of the Albritton home "could have been made" by tennis shoes Heptinstall was wearing when he was taken into custody near New Bern, several hours after Mrs. Albritton's death. Earlier this week, officers told the jury of seven men and five women that Heptinstall was driving Mrs. Albritton's car when he was arrested in Craven County.

Other witnesses Thursday said blood stains on the shirt the defendant was wearing the day after his escape did not match Heptinstall's blood type, but were "consistent" with Mrs. Albritton's blood type.

Earlier this week, friends and relatives testified Mrs. Albritton described how she was beaten and stabbed, and described her attacker, before she died. Her description of her assailant matches Heptinstall.

Defense witnesses, testifying out of sequence Thursday because of prior commitments, told the jury that Heptinstall has been hospitalized at least four times in the past for mental treatment because of bizarre and sometimes violent behavior. They said Heptinstall had numerous clashes with members of his family, claimed to have visions of God and refused to work.

A former Dorothea Dix Hospital psychiatrist, Dr. Roland Fullilove, said that in 1976 he diagnosed Heptinstall as a "schizophrenic, catatonic type with paranoid overtones."

Fullilove, who defined his diagnosis as a personality disorder in which a person does not talk much to others and is easily hurt and angered, said he had no opinion whether or not the defendant's condition would ever improve.

However, under cross examination by District Attorney Donald Jacobs, the physician said people with paranoid schizophrenia are able to function in society.

Fullilove said the defendant became hostile with hospital workers and family members because of the way he was being treated, but said he approved Heptinstall's release because he thought Heptinstall's feelings should be respected.

Judge Preston Cornelius suggested Thursday that the trial of the case might continue over the weekend.

Police Arrest Youth In Consul's Assassination

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police raided a home in a middle-class suburb and arrested a teen-ager on a murder charge after Turkey's consul general was assassinated in a burst of gunfire only a week after he had turned down an offer of official protection.

Armenian terrorists claimed responsibility for the killing Thursday of Consul General Kemal Arikan, the third Turkish consular official in Los Angeles killed in nine years. Deputy Police Chief James Hardin said officers were "looking for at least one other suspect."

Hanpig "Harry" Sassounian, 19, of Pasadena, was booked late Thursday for investigation of murder in Arikan's killing, said police Sgt Dudley Varney. Arikan was shot as he waited at a stoplight on a busy city street while he was driving to work.

Three juveniles were held for questioning for several hours but were released, Varney said.

Los Angeles Police Chief Daryl Gates said the ambush killing came a week after the 54-year-old diplomat was warned that his life was in danger but turned down an offer of police protection.

"We have no idea why he chose to do what he decided to do, but he did refuse our offers," Gates said.

Minutes after Arikan was shot, anonymous calls claiming responsibility were received by various news organizations, including the Washington bureau of The Associated Press.

Fish Story Has A Ring To It

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — This fish story has quite a ring to it.

Joseph M. Cross Jr. of Newport News lost his $400 University of Virginia class ring while sailing in Hampton Roads a year and a half ago.

"A storm came up," Cross recounted Wednesday. "The boom swung over and I reached up to stop it. My ring went flying off. I could see the little bubbles come up as it sank in the middle of the channel."

Cross, a 1969 architecture graduate, said the ring fell into about 30 feet of water and about 142 miles from here. He thought it was lost forever.

Now here comes the catch. Cross has his ring back. He said it apparently was swallowed by a fish that ended up at a fish market here.

About two weeks ago, Coleman Maddox was talking to a friend behind a restaurant next to the market. Seeing a reflection, Maddox picked up the ring, recognized its value and starting looking for the owner.

Using the inscription inside, Maddox asked at the architecture school and eventually came up with Cross' name. He called Cross and quizzed him about the ring's description and inscription.

"At first, I thought he was pulling my leg," Cross said.

Both men theorize the ring was swallowed by a fish as it sank and that the fish was caught and sold to the Charlottesville market. The ring must have been tossed out with the fish guts and left in the alley when the trash was collected.

Richard Odum, a University of Virginia marine biologist, said the fish story makes sense.

"It's a 95 percent chance that it was a blue fish," Odum said. "They are very aggressive feeders and will gulp down anything that sparkles. It's not unusual for people to find rings and other shiny objects in fish."

March Start Is Now Intended

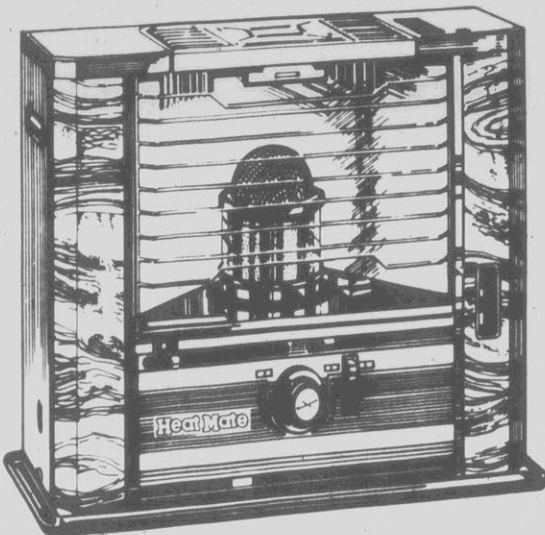

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Baptist State Convention hopes to begin construction of a new $2 million headquarters in Cary in March and to move into the facility in November.

The convention's General Board, meeting in Asheboro, agreed Tuesday to sell the Baptist building in downtown Raleigh for $1.7 million to the Instrument Society of America. The board also agreed to build the new headquarters on four acres near a shopping mall that were donated to the convention by George H. "Buck" Jordan Jr. of Cary.

That property needs to be rezoned from residential to office institutional.

Davidson and Jones Construction Co. of Raleigh, which submitted the low bid, was awarded the building contract Tuesday. Money for the building will come from the sale of the current headquarters and from up to $750,000 of convention funds.

Panel Adopts District Maps That Split Counties

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — New House and Senate district maps that split counties will go before a public hearing next week, and state lawyers say they have decided to ask the U.S. Justice Department to reconsider North Carolina's plan for congressional redistricting.

The legislative districts, approved by separate panels Thursday, cross county lines for the first time — splitting 22 counties to shape House districts and nine counties to form Senate districts.

Meanwhile, legislative leaders made plans to hold a special session on redistricting Feb. 9, and to propose a postponement of the statewide primary from May 4 to June 1.

The legislative plans won approval in all-day meetings of a special House subcommittee and the Senate Legislative Redistricting Committee. The House plan goes before the full redistricting panel on Tuesday, and both the House and Senate maps will be the subjects of a public hearing in the Legislative Building next Thursday.

The plans emerged as legislators began their third attempt to find a reapportionment solution that can withstand legal challenges from the U.S. Justice Department and in federal court. Acting under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, federal officials earlier rejected congressional and legislative maps on grounds they diluted black voting strength.

State Deputy Attorney General Jim Wallace said the state Justice Department had decided to resubmit the plan for congressional districts to the U.S. Justice Department. He said the decision was made because legislators had made no move to revise the congressional map and attorneys believed the plan could be defended in court.

"We'll be trying to put the old evidence in a different light," he said.

The legislative districts create more single-member districts than the legislature had approved in earlier maps, but they keep large, multiple-member districts in many areas, including most of the major cities.

The House panel agreed to draw a new single-member district inside Greensboro that would be made up of at least 65 percent blacks. The panel approved the plan without that district but instructed staff attorneys to draw up such a district, built around the heavily black Gilmer township inside Greensboro.

The Greensboro district would be surrounded by a larger, majority white district with six representatives elected at large. The House plan has two other two majority black districts, both in the northeastern corner of the state.

House committee leaders said they would consider adding a similar district in Cumberland County, if one could be drawn up next week.

The Senate plan, approved by the Senate Legislative Redistricting Committee, splits up several old districts and creates 17 single-member districts — including all the districts east of Raleigh and Fayetteville.

The Senate map has one majority black district, in the northeastern corner of the state.

But the committee chairman, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said the panel would meet again next week and consider whether to draw majority black districts inside Greensboro, Charlotte and Cumberland County.

"Maybe they should be. The staff is working on that right now," he said. "We're going to hear what people say at the hearing, and if we can or should, we will."

Guilford, which includes Greensboro, and Cumberland, which includes Fayetteville, have been singled out by the U.S. Justice Department as cases where black voter strength has been weakened by the use of large, multi-member districts.

"I can tell you Guilford could be a problem under this plan," Jerris Leonard, a Washington attorney hired to help the state handle redistricting, warned the Senate panel.

File Complaint On Registration

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Election officials in Edgecombe County have denied allegations in a lawsuit that county voter registration policies discriminate against blacks.

In a complaint filed earlier this week with the civil rights division of the U.S. Justice Department, several Rocky Mount groups say county elections board personnel are "engaging in devious methods of hindering minorities from exercising their rights to vote."

The complaint also accused the board of "dramatizing all efforts to register voters so as to set off an alarm in the white community, hence diluting the minority voting strength."

Edgecombe Elections Board Chairman George Goodwyn said he has not been contacted by Bullock or any other members of the group.

"I'm very sorry there is anyone in Edgecombe County who feels like there has been any type of abuse or discrimination because such does not exist," he said.

"We do not and will not discriminate against any one person or race in registering voters."

Marvin Bullock said in the complaint that he had been selected by a coalition of several motorcycle and social clubs to lead the effort to correct voter registration abuses.

Bullock said complaints against officials include:

— That some registrars and judges lacked the proper registration forms and said they had been told not register voters in their homes. By law, they have authority to register voters in their homes, said Robert Spearman, chairman of the North Carolina Board of Elections.

— That too much publicity has been placed on Edgecombe's efforts at voter registration. The county board has held several Saturday registration days, which the group said is aimed at warning whites to register to vote.

— That out of 20 registrars, only one is black.

County officials said they were unable to confirm the number of black registrars. Several registrars denied that discrimination had taken place.

Reading Clinic Begins Tuesday

The East Carolina University afternoon reading clinic for children will begin Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the Speight building, room 129, with sessions scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday from 3:30-4:30 p.m.

Applications for children currently in grades 2-10 are being accepted for the clinic.

The ECU Reading Clinic is designed for children who have reading problems or who need enrichment in reading. Students are given individualized instruction based on a battery of tests administered at the beginning of the clinic. The teachers are education majors working toward reading certification. Dr. Dorothy Muller and Dr. Roger Eldridge will direct the spring clinic.

There is no tuition for the clinic. Enrollment is limited to 40 children with additional applications kept on file for future programs.

For more information about the reading clinic, contact the department of elementary education, ECU, or call 757-6833, 757-6191 or 757-6188.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

METHUSALEH IS THE OLDEST RECORDED PERSON IN THE BIBLE (969 YRS.), AT THE AGE OF ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY SEVEN HE HAD A SON, LAMECH. WHEN LAMECH WAS ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY TWO, HIS SON, NOAH, WAS BORN—AT THIS TIME, METHUSALEH WAS THREE HUNDRED AND SIXTY NINE YEARS OLD....

...THE BIBLE STATES THAT NOAH WAS SIX HUNDRED YEARS OLD WHEN THE FLOOD CAME UPON THE EARTH. THIS LEADS TO THE ASSUMPTION THAT METHUSALEH'S LIFE WAS ENDED BY THE FLOOD AND, HAD THE FLOOD NOT OCCURED, HE MIGHT HAVE LIVED TO AN EVEN GREATER AGE—NOT THAT HIS RECORD SEEMS TO BE IN ANY DANGER OF EVER BEING BEATEN!

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd To Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

Graham Voted Most Influential

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham still stands at the top of the heap as the "most influential" individual in the field of religion as assessed by religious magazine editors.

The ecumenical weekly took the current and previous surveys among 26 nationally circulated Protestant and Roman Catholic magazines, summarizing their observations about the 12 persons deemed "most influential" religiously on Americans.

Just as in a similar survey four years ago, Graham was ranked No. 1 and church historian Martin E. Marty, No. 2. Next came two newcomers, Moral Majority's Jerry Falwell, third, and Pope John Paul II, fourth.

Graham, 63, the "premier evangelist of his generation, seems to have gained prestige and moved toward the middle as a new breed of electronic evangelists with right-wing connections have come on the scene," says the Christian Century.

The list included four Roman Catholics, two Baptists, two Methodists and one each Lutheran, Reformed, Presbyterian and Brethren in Christ.

"In recent years, Graham has become more openly ecumenical and has begun to speak out for such causes as nuclear disarmament," says the summary of findings. A panelist commented: "Having learned from experience, he has developed statesmanlike qualities."

Besides the top four, others in order of ranking were:

The Rev. William Sloane Coffin of New York's Riverside Church; the Rev. Oral Roberts, television evangelist; the Rev. Robert Shuler, "possibility thinker" of California's Crystal Cathedral.

Catholic Archbishop John R. Roach, president of U.S. bishops; the Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University; the Rev. Ronald Sider, evangelical social-activist; the Rev. Hans Kung, Swiss-born Catholic scholar, and United Methodist Bishop James Armstrong, new president of the National Council of Churches.

Marty, 53, a Lutheran, ranked second, is a church historian at the University of Chicago, magazine columnist, author of many books and much-quoted commentator on the religious scene. A panelist characterized him as "religion's Walter Cronkite, perceptive and usually quite objective."

Falwell, 48, ranked third, a Baptist pastor, television evangelist and founder of the political pressure group, Moral Majority, was viewed generally as influencing other groups more than his own constituency.

A "political force to be reckoned with," panelists commented. "Falwell and Moral Majority seem to dictate the grounds on which the arguments over religion and politics will take place."

Pope John Paul, 61, ranked fourth, "is widely regarded as having greater impact on U.S. religion than Pope Paul VI because of his travels and force of personality," the report said.

A panelist said, "Not all agree with him, but he sets standards against which other religions are judged."

Coffin, 57, ranked fifth, a Presbyterian, former Yale University chaplain and now a Manhattan pastor, is an outspoken advocate of nuclear disarmament, admired for preaching skill.

Roberts, 63, ranked sixth, a United Methodist television evangelist, founder of Oral Roberts University in Tulsa and lately of a "City of Faith" medical center using both both medical skills and prayer.

Shuler, 55, ranked seventh, is the televised pastor of the dazzling Crystal Cathedral in Orange Grove, Calif., advocate of "possibility thinking" and populizer of church-growth theories.

Roach, 60, ranked eighth, heads U. S. Catholic bishops and has played a leading role in shaping their growing opposition to the arms race and advocacy for the poor.

Hesburgh, 64, ranked ninth, recently was persuaded to delay retiring and stay on another five years at Notre Dame. Formerly head of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, he has influenced education and religion.

Sider, 42, ranked 10th, a Brethren in Christ theologian and leader of the social-activist wing of evangelicals, calling for simpler life styles among Christians and resistance to materialism.

Kung, 53, ranked 11th, a Catholic scholar who left West Germany's Tubingen University last year after the Vatican ruled him off the theological faculty, now teaches at the University of Chicago.

Of his current big-selling books, "On Being a Christian" and "Does God Exist?," a panelist observed, "It can't be sheer promotional wizardry that turns lengthy theological tomes into best sellers."

Armstrong, 57, outspoken social activist from the Midwest, recently was elected to a three-year term as president of the interdenominational National Council.

7:30 P.M.—MEETING

Brother Donald Cook is a native of Durham, N.C. and has been saved and baptized in the Holy Spirit since the age of 17. He has been a pastor in Kannapolis, N.C. and minister in various churches on occasion. God has given Brother Cook a unique ministry of spiritual gifts including prophecy, healing and the word of knowledge. He has seen God heal people of every kind of affliction and disease. His joy in the Lord is contagious. Brother Cook has also ministered in several F.G.B.M.F.I. meetings. Miracles happen when someone cares. We are sure that you will not want to miss this special meeting.

The precious sweet spirit of Jesus lives in this man — just as He can and will live in any and all of us who will let Him into our lives. Come join us and let's all lift Jesus higher than others may be drawn to Him. (John 12:32)

Would Toughen Day Care Laws

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Most of the 30 speakers during the first hearing by the General Assembly's Day Care Study Commission called on the state to pass tougher laws on day care quality.

Much of the debate centered on how many staff members a center should be required to have. Present standards call for one staffer for every nine children 2 years of age or younger, but some day-care operators say they can't afford more people.

Tosh Ragsdale, director of a Durham day-care center, said present one staffer isn't enough to meet the needs of eight children.

"Very young children are very vulnerable," she said. "They cannot speak to say their diapers need changing, that they are hungry or even that they are bored."

'Last Supper' Details Found

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Details uncovered in restoration work on Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper" show the apostles were eating oranges and drinking from gold-rimmed tumblers in a tapestried room.

The previously aged-dimmed fresco had seemed to show dark doors in the room, but they turned out to be tapestries. The restoration also brings out slices of oranges on the plates and gold rims on the glasses.

Criticize U.S. Refugee Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous religious leaders have criticized the U.S. administration's policy of deporting Salvadoran refugees and turning back boats carrying Haitian refugees to this country.

In a joint letter to President Reagan, officials of national Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish organizations said deporting Salvadorans and interdicting the boats from Haiti violate principles for which America stands.

FLU WARNING

ATLANTA (AP) — There's a significant chance there will be a major outbreak of influenza in the United States during the next two months, according to a national Centers for Disease Control official.

Link Willaims And 12 Slain

By DAVID PACE
 Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A witness who admitted smoking marijuana before testifying and another who claimed to have seen a youth three months after his death are among eight people prosecutors have called in an effort to link Wayne B. Williams to 12 slain young blacks.

Three of those witnesses testified Thursday in Williams' murder trial, saying they saw the 23-year-old black free-lance photographer with murder victims Larry Rogers, 20, or Terry Pue, 15.

But defense lawyers were able to challenge much of their testimony by questioning the reliability of one witness and showing that the other two were confused about dates.

Williams is charged with murder in the deaths of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21, two of 28 blacks whose deaths during a 22-month period have been investigated by a police task force.

Judge Clarence Cooper has allowed prosecutors to present evidence of 10 other slayings in which Williams faces no charges, including the deaths of Rogers and Pue.

But Cooper said evidence of the other killings can be used only to show that the crimes formed a pattern that includes the slayings of Cater and Payne.

Prosecutors have introduced evidence this week in nine of the 10 other killings. Seven witnesses, including the three who testified Thursday, say they saw Williams with one of four victims. Earlier, a witness placed Williams with Cater a week before he vanished.

Tilbert "Cool Breeze" Baynham testified Thursday he saw Williams with Rogers three times on a Friday or Saturday before Rogers disappeared the following Monday.

He brought laughter from the packed courtroom when he confused names and told Assistant District Attorney Jack Mallard that the man he saw with Rogers was "Larry Williams."

lawyer Alvin Binder had "looked real hard" at the car in which Williams and Rogers were riding but could not tell if it was a Camaro or a Firebird, or if it was green or black.

He then conceded to Binder that he smoked marijuana before coming to court and said he has used the drug for the past 23 years. He also acknowledged he had served three different prison sentences for convictions on drug charges, gambling and driving without a license.

Nellie Trammell, a neighbor of Rogers, testified she saw Rogers slumped in the front seat of a car driven by Williams on March 30, 1981, the day Rogers last was seen alive. His body was found April 9 in an abandoned apartment in northwest Atlanta.

Mrs. Trammell said she remembered Williams because she had seen him 10 days earlier at the Techwood Homes housing project, where residents were launching a patrol to protect their children during the height of the killings.

Under questioning by defense lawyer Jim Kitchens, however, Mrs. Trammell insisted she had picked Williams' picture from a group of photos shown her by authorities in April.

Earlier testimony indicated Williams came to police attention May 22, when he was stopped near a Chattahoochee River bridge after an officer heard a loud splash in the river. Two days later, Cater's body was found in the river downstream from the bridge.

Another witness Thursday, Charmine Kendrick, testified she saw Williams with Pue at the restaurant where she worked about a week before she heard Pue had been found dead.

But Ms. Kendrick later agreed three times with Binder the last time she had seen Pue alive was in April 1981. Pue was found dead Jan. 23, 1981, in suburban Rockdale County.

Ms. Kendrick never mentioned the month she saw Pue with Williams during her initial testimony, but Mallard planted the seed for Binder's questions when he told her after she first took the stand to think back to April or May of 1981.

Seventh Victim Of Explosion
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A 10-year-old girl injured in an explosion at an elementary school has died despite the refusal of her family to remove her from life support systems.

Angela Martin on Thursday became the seventh person to die from the water heater explosion nine days earlier at Star Elementary School. Just an hour before her death, her father, James Lewis, said he would not give doctors permission to disconnect the life support machines. Clutching a Bible, he said, "I do not feel I have the right to deny Angela life."

Five other children and a teacher were killed in the blast. Thirty-four people were injured and a policeman suffered a heart attack after giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to victims.

Town To Honor Walter Dail
WINTERVILLE — The town will honor retired Mayor Walter A. Dail on Saturday with a 6:30 p.m. dinner at A.G. Cox School, according to Sparky McCaskill of the Winterville Kiwanis Club.

The Town Board recently passed a resolution declaring the entire day "Walter Dail Appreciation Day," and McCaskill said this was an effort by the citizens of Winterville and the surrounding community to recognize the 32 years of service Dail gave the town.

According to McCaskill, over 200 persons are expected to attend the dinner.

EMERGENCY SESSION UNITED NATIONS (AP) — An emergency session of the U.N. General Assembly was scheduled today to debate the Arab demand for sanctions against Israel that the United States vetoed January 20.

MEETING CANCELED
 The regular monthly meeting of the Pitt County Sediment Control Commission, scheduled for Monday, will not be held. The next regular meeting will be in March.

Tulsa Winning, But Hurricanes Are Not Blowing Folks Away

By The Associated Press
It's called the "Hurricane," but that doesn't necessarily mean the University of Tulsa's basketball team blows the opposition away.

"People expect us to beat people to death," says Tulsa Coach Nolan Richardson. "We don't have a team like that. When you juggle the lineup as much as we do, you can't expect us to get any kind of big lead. We just want to win the game."

Thursday night's performance was typical of the 16th-ranked Tulsa team. Richardson used a lot of substitutions, as he usually does, and his players struggled and then spurred to a 68-61 Missouri Valley Conference victory over West Texas State.

The triumph was the 27th straight at home for the Hurricane, which hasn't lost there since Richardson brought most of his players along with him Western Texas' junior college champions two years ago.

"Our margin of victory was satisfactory to us," said Richardson. "We've got some senior kids who are pressing. They're just not playing well right now. But I really praised the kids afterward because there's a lot of pressure on them from me, from the fans and from the polls."

Greg Stewart, one of the players Richardson brought from Western Texas who helped Tulsa win the National Invitation Tournament last year, combined with Bruce Vanley for 30 points to help the cause Thursday night. Trailing by as many as nine points through most of the game, the Hurricane took the lead for good at 61-59 when freshman Steve Harris hit two free throws with 2:41 left.

Vanley, a 6-foot-10 sophomore, hit six of eight field goal attempts to finish with 16 points, while Stewart came off the bench to add 14. West Texas State got 12 points from Eddie Harris and 10 apiece from Goliath Yeggins and Charles Bell.

In other action involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 6 Iowa edged Michigan State 57-56, No. 9 San Francisco crushed San Diego 72-53, No. 10 Minnesota beat Northwestern 61-53 and No. 19 Fresno State defeated San Jose State 63-45.

The Top Twenty
Kenny Arnold and Steve Carfino scored 12 points each to lead Iowa over Michigan State. The triumph, before a sellout crowd of 10,004 in Wallace Bryant and Quintin Dailey combined for 43 points, leading San Francisco to a convincing West Coast Athletic Conference victory over San Diego.

Bryant scored 23 points and Dailey added 20 for the Dons, who raised their WCAC record to 4-1 and their overall mark to 18-2. Forward Gerald Jones paced San Diego with 12 points and a game-high nine rebounds.

Trent Tucker scored 18 points and Minnesota took control in the second half to defeat Northwestern. The score was tied three times early in the second half before Gary Holmes put the Gophers ahead to stay at 37-35.

"I know everyone thinks of Randy Breuer when they think about us," said Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher. "But for us to play well, Trent has to play well. He's the key."

Added Dutcher: "The big difference was we rebounded the defensive boards well in the second half."

Rod Higgins scored 14 points to lead Fresno State over San Jose State in Pacific Coast Athletic Association play. The victory was Fresno State's 11th in a row, its 16th in PCAA play and the 17th straight at home.

The leading scorer for San Jose was Chris McNealy, who had 12 points with a game-high 11 rebounds.

Unranked Teams
James Griffin scored 22 points and Illinois outscored Purdue 14-5 in the closing minutes to take a 63-48 victory over the Boilermakers.

Dan Pelekoudas hit a 20-foot jump shot as time expired to give Michigan a 62-60 overtime victory over Ohio State.

Marc Upshaw's four free throws in the final 22 seconds gave Rhode Island a 59-54 victory over George Washington.

James Copeland's 20-foot jumper with 4:40 to go put Southern Illinois ahead to stay and helped the Salukis to a 72-60 victory over Indiana State.

Cliff Livingston scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead Wichita State to a 75-49 win over Drake. Chuck Aleksinas scored 16 points to lead Connecticut to a 72-57 victory over Manhattan, and senior forward Joe Dawson became Southern Mississippi's third-leading career scorer when he collected 27 points in a 101-79 victory over Pan American.

Also, Steve Bouchie scored 18 points and Ted Kitchel added 16, leading Indiana to a 62-56 triumph over Wisconsin. Tony Wilson hit a 15-footer with one second remaining to lift Western Kentucky to a 48-46 win over Austin Peay and Donald Reese had a game-high 25 points to lead Bradley to a 72-58 victory over Illinois State.

Meanwhile, Virginia Military remained the last Division I team still winless. The Keydets slumped to 0-16 after a 92-68 loss to East Tennessee State.

East Carolina Returns To ECAC Action; Hosts Richmond Spiders

East Carolina's Pirates, fresh off a 71-68 upset of strong UNC Charlotte, take on tough ECAC-South foe Richmond Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in Minges Coliseum.

The Spiders bring in an 11-6 record overall and a 1-2 ECAC-South record. They have lost their last two outings in the league, but Coach Dave Odom warns that that is no indication of their ability.

The Spiders, who fell last week to William & Mary (70-47) and Navy (65-55), own the only ECAC victory of the season over league-leading James Madison — an indication of their ability.

The Spiders have also upset Wake Forest, in the opening game of the season, and downed Oregon on that team's home court — no mean feat.

"If ever a team has turned it around," Odom said, "it's Richmond. Their record speaks for itself."

Saturday night will be observed as Youth Night by the university. All youths 12 and under will be admitted free, and the first 500 will receive free color pictures of the ECU team.

In addition, Zack Valentine of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Tony Collins of the New England Patriots, both former ECU football standouts, will be on hand in the lobby prior to the game for autographs. They also have a limited number of team pictures of the Steelers and Patriots, which they will give away and/or sign.

Other halftime activities are also planned.

East Carolina can, with a victory over the Spiders, move its record to 3-1 against ECAC-South opponents. "This is a unique opportunity for us," Odom said. "Not since the days of the Southern Conference have the Pirates had something to take about when it comes to conference," he continued.

"Right now, only one other team, James Madison, can say it has but one loss. Since this is a conference game, it should be significant enough to draw a good crowd."

Richmond will bring in the league's leading scorer in John Schweitz, a 6-6 senior forward who is hitting 16.9 points a game. Only one other Spider is scoring in double figures. 6-9 sophomore forward Bill Flye, scoring 11.9 points a game. He's also averaging 5.6 rebounds a game.

Joining them in the expected starting lineup will be 6-1 freshman guard Kelvin Johnson, scoring 7.8 a game; 6-4 junior guard Tom Bethea, 9.8; and 6-10 junior center Jeff Pehl, with an 8.2 scoring and 5.9 rebounding average.

The Spiders, under new coach Dick Tarrant, who recently was upgraded from interim to full-time coach, will be attempting to even the series between the two schools. The series now stands a 19-18 with an ECU edge.

The two split last year, which marked the first time in two years they had met. Richmond took an 80-63 win in Greenville, then fell, 67-65, in Richmond as a late and furious Spider rally fell short.

The Pirates will probably start Charles Green and Morris Hargrove at the forwards, with Al Mack at center. Charles Watkins and Bruce Peartree are likely to get the call at guards.

Hargrove, scoring 17 points and pulling down 15 rebounds, led the Pirates in their win over Charlotte Wednesday night, while both Green and Mack scored in double figures. Mack, with 45 points in the last three games, has the hottest hand of recent.

Watkins, who had missed five games while on leave with personal problems, had one of his best games of the season against Charlotte, scoring seven points, grabbing off six rebounds and dishing off four assists. Peartree, the lone freshman starter, scored ten against the 49ers, giving him 30 over the past three games.

East Carolina will have two more home games prior to going on the road again.

Chargers Snap Losing String

PIKEVILLE — Ayden-Grifton's Chargers snapped a seven-game losing streak last night, downing Charles B. Aycock, 55-48, in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Aycock's girls came away with a 57-30 win over the Lady Chargers in the opening contest.

Ayden-Grifton's boys, who climb to 2-6 in the league and 5-12 overall, jumped off to a good lead in the first period and refused to allow Aycock to make a comeback. By the end of the first period, the Chargers had pushed out to a 16-6 lead. Aycock tried to rally in the second quarter, holding a 15-12 advantage, but Ayden-Grifton held on to take a 28-21 lead into intermission.

The Chargers held to that lead throughout the third period with an 11-10 margin, and carried a 39-31 lead into the final quarter. In that, Aycock managed to clip one point off the lead, 17-16.

Thomas Anderson led the Chargers with 24 points, while Jonathan Woods added 10. Aycock was led by Keith Smith with 12, while Anthony Green and Bobby Artis each had 10.

The Aycock girls jumped out to a big first period lead and were never headed. By the first horn, the Lady Falcons held a 20-6 lead. They extended that to 35-11 by halftime, and to 47-22 at the end of the third period. Aycock outscored the Lady Chargers, 10-8, in the final quarter to wrap it up.

Zena Jones led Aycock with 13 points, while Sherri Williams added 12. Linda Brown paced A-G with 16.

The Lady Chargers fall to 3-5 in ECC play and 6-11 overall. Ayden-Grifton travels to Southern Nash tonight.

Knicks Win Eases Them Out Of Cellar

By The Associated Press
A player named Russell helped a coach named Red reach a milestone, but it wasn't quite the same as the glory days of Bill Russell, Red Auerbach and the Boston Celtics.

The Russell-Auerbach tandem helped the Celtics win nine NBA championships in 10 years from 1956-57 to 1965-66. Red Holzman and Campy Russell, on the other hand, are struggling to keep the New York Knicks out of the Atlantic Division cellar.

And the Knicks' 102-98 victory over the Washington Bullets Thursday night — Holzman's 600th triumph as the New York coach — enabled them to snap a last-place tie and pull one-half game ahead of the New Jersey Nets.

The Celtics are still winning, too. They trounced the Cleveland Cavaliers 116-104. The Knicks' victory was the 683rd overall for Holzman — Auerbach leads the pack at 938 — but it didn't come easy. New York trailed 38-45 early in the third quarter but reserve Larry Demic, averaging 1.6 points per game, scored nine points to help give the Knicks their first lead of the game 69-68 with 2:03 remaining in the period.

The score was tied 71-71 entering the final period but the Knicks hit 12 of 17 shots to break a three-game losing streak. Russell led the way with 24 points, 10 in the final period. The loss ended Washington's seven-game winning streak.

As usual, Holzman was his normal low-key self.

"I completely forgot about it," he said of victory No. 600 on the Knicks' bench. "I got so caught up in the heat of the game that I didn't even think about 600."

Russell said he was "open from the beginning. The Bullets were collapsing inside, so when I got the ball outside I was wide open. You have to take those open shots."

Celtics 116, Cavaliers 104
Larry Bird scored 33 points, including 22 in the second half to turn back a Cleveland threat. The Cavaliers outscored Boston 8-1 at the start of the third quarter to pull to within 64-61 but Bird's 15-footer sparked a 12-2 Boston surge and the Celtics stretched their lead to 95-77 entering the final period.

"The last three or four times we played them, they hung pretty tough," said Bird. "We wanted to make sure we beat them this time."

Rockets 109, 76ers 101
Moses Malone scored 31 points and grabbed 20 rebounds and Calvin Murphy became the NBA's 21st all-time scorer as Houston posted its fifth victory in the last six games. Malone dominated play throughout the game, scoring 13 points and grabbing 12 rebounds in the first half. Murphy hit a 16-foot jump shot with 6:40 gone in the second quarter to give him Murphy 16,961 career points, and put him ahead of former Boston star Bob Cousy, who finished his career with 16,960.

Lakers 97, Suns 87
Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 31 points and Norm Nixon, a questionable starter because of injuries, added 22. The Lakers led 62-59 after three periods but outscored the Suns 21-8 in the first seven minutes of the final quarter.

Nixon suffered bruises to his elbows and a hip during Tuesday night's 96-94 loss to Milwaukee. His status for Thursday night's game was uncertain, but he started and played most of the way.

Spurs 126, Kings 115
George Gervin scored 37 points in only 29 minutes of action and Mike Bratz came off the bench to add a season-high 19. Four other Spurs were in double figures as San Antonio defeated the Kings for the third straight time and handed the Kings their 20th defeat in 23 road games. Bratz scored 12 points as the Spurs outscored the Kings 37-21 in the second quarter to take a 61-44 halftime lead. Gervin, the NBA's leading scorer, hit 12 of 20 floor shots and 13 of 14 free throws.

Bucks 119, Jazz 101
Sidney Moncrief and Scott May combined for 49 points. May scored a season-high 27 points and Moncrief added 22. Bob Lanier had 20 points and keyed the Bucks' surge in the second quarter that pushed them ahead. Adrian Dantley, the NBA's No. 2 scorer with a 30.9 average, led Utah with 32 points.

The Bucks, who played without injured guard Brian Winters and swingman Junior Bridgeman, lost forward Marques Johnson in the middle of the second quarter. He collided with Dantley and suffered a badly sprained left ankle.

Warriors 111, Bulls 110
Bernard King tossed in a 15-foot, off-balance jump shot with 16 seconds left. That gave King a game-high 32 points and Golden State a four-point lead, nullifying a three-point basket by Chicago's Ricky Sobers with 11 seconds left.

Trail Blazers 96, Clippers 93
Calvin Natt scored 11 of his game-high 25 points in the fourth quarter to help Portland come from behind. The Blazers blew an early 13-point lead as the Clippers, fired by Tom Chambers and Phil Smith, staged a third-period rally. San Diego led 89-87 with three minutes left but the Blazers scored eight straight points — two by Jim Paxson, two by Kelvin Ransey and four by Mychal Thompson.

Johnny Miller Takes Advantage Of Course, Ties Zoeller For Lead

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Johnny Miller knew what he had to do. "You know you better take advantage of this North course," Miller said, "because the South is very tough, maybe three, maybe four shots tougher."

So Miller toured the 6,667-yard North course in a solid, no-bogey, 7-under-par 65 Thursday and tied Fuzzy Zoeller for the first round lead Thursday in the $300,000 Wickes-Andy Williams-San Diego Open golf tournament.

Zoeller also played the North, the shorter and easier of the two layout used for the first two rounds.

Mark Lye, however, had a 66 at the tougher, 7,002-yard South course. "As far as I'm concerned, Mark is the leader," Miller said.

As an illustration of the relative difficulty of the two courses, the North yielded 12 scores of 68 or better, the South only three. The players switch courses for today's second round, with the last 36 holes to be played on the South.

Gil Morgan was one shot off the pace after a 66 at the North. Tom Watson, seeking to regain his position as golf's leading performer, topped the group at 67. Also at that figure were Mike Donald, Calvin Peete, Morris Hataalsky and Bruce Fleisher. Fleisher played the tough South course, the others the North.

Jack Nicklaus opened his 21st season on the tour with a 69, including a double bogey-6, on the South.

"My goals are the same as always," he said. "That's the majors (the Masters, U.S. and British Opens, the PGA). But I'd also like to get off to a faster start this year, get something in the victory column before the Masters."

Tom Kite, the 1981 leading money-winner, matched par 72 and PGA champ Larry Nelson shot 70, both on the South. At the North, British Open king Bill Rogers and defending champion Bruce Lietzke each had a 71 and U.S. Open champ David Graham had 72.

Miller, who has scored some of his greatest successes early in the season, said he was "quite down" after playing poorly in Tucson and Phoenix, his first two starts this year.

"I was having a terrific letdown," he said, as the result of his 9-hole sudden death playoff in a $1 million tournament in southern Africa in the first week of the year.

"That was such a good win for me, I just had a terrific letdown."

Hooper Upsets Roscoe Tanner

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Chip Hooper, a 23-year-old collegian who suffers from a rare eye condition, taught defending champion Roscoe Tanner a thing or two about suffering through two tight losses in the U.S. Pro Indoor Tennis Championship.

Hooper beat Tanner, 6-4, 7-6, Thursday to reach the quarterfinal round of the $300,000 tournament.

Top-seeded John McEnroe, second-seeded Jimmy Connors and unseeded Andres Gomez of Ecuador also advanced to the quarterfinal.

Hooper, who said he had a cold, put on a display of service power in his upset of the fourth-seeded Tanner.

"I was on cloud nine out there," the 1981 national Collegiate Indoor champion from the University of Arkansas said. "My cold didn't bother me. I was so hyped up my legs were vibrating."

The 25th-ranked Hooper, unseeded in the tournament, has a rare condition called pterygium, for which he has undergone two operations in the past year.

"My eyes get tired easily," he said. "The lights make me dizzy. I can't watch too many matches or I get sleepy."

The match with Tanner concluded on a controversial tiebreaker that ended in Hooper in front 7-5.

At 5-5 in the tiebreaker, Hooper served an ace to put him at 6-5 match point.

A linesman called the serve out, but umpire Ron Eick ruled the shot good. Tanner complained that the shot was out, and that Eick had gone back on a promise not to overrule a linesman except on a flagrant miscall.

Tanner lost the argument, and when action started again, he hit a low backhand volley out of the court to lose the match. The victory was Hooper's first ever over a highly ranked player.

McEnroe earned the quarterfinals with a 5-7, 6-1, 6-4 comeback to defeat Rolf Gehring.

The left-handed McEnroe appeared headed for defeat when he lost the first three games of the third set to Gehring, who had beaten Bjorn Borg at Brussels.

But McEnroe then struck back and took the offensive away from the West German player, winning five straight games in very close action to take the match.

In Thursday's final singles match, Connors, four-time winner of this tournament, also gained the quarterfinal round with an easy 6-2, 6-0 victory over Jeff Borowiak.

The victory earned Connors a quarterfinal berth tonight against Gomez, who earlier showed his greater service power and stronger groundstrokes in defeating Peter Rennert, 6-2, 6-4.

The winner of the tournament, which concludes Sunday, will receive $60,000.

In the quarterfinals, Hooper will face John Sadri, Connors will face Gomez, McEnroe will play Sandy Mayer, and Vitas Gerulaitis will take on Kevin Curren.

"Now, it's important to get it back in gear, get rolling again."

"Let's face it. This is my time of the year. If I don't play well at the start of the season out here in the West, I'm in trouble. I play my best out here. That's all there is to it. So I really want to win one before we get out of Los Angeles (the last of the seven-tournament western swing)."

But he must contend with the free-spirit Zoeller, who has played his last four competitive rounds in 24 under par after starting with a 76 in the first round at Phoenix last week.

And he started poorly here, too.

Zoeller, who scored his first career victory here in 1979, opened his round with bogeys on his first two holes Thursday. But he got a shot back on the fourth, began a burst of seven birdies in an 8-hole stretch beginning on the seventh and played the back nine in a tournament record 30.

"Just one of those things that happen," he shrugged. "This is a crazy game."

Newcomers To See Action

HONOLULU (AP) — A number of newcomers to the Pro Bowl will see action in Sunday's National Football League all-star match, including six rookies.

On the 40-man NFC squad are first-year cornerbacks Ronnie Lott of San Francisco and Everson Walls of Dallas, New Orleans' running back George Rogers, and New York Giants' linebacker Lawrence Taylor.

Running back Joe Delaney of Kansas City and Cincinnati wide receiver Chris Collinsworth are the two rookies on the AFC squad.

"These players have been selected by a vote of their peers and by the league's coaches, and that's a very critical eye," said American Conference Coach Don Shula. "I think the players who are here appreciate that."

"It used to be, before the coaches and players did the voting, that you could make it on reputation. But now a player makes it on the kind of year he had. That's why we have a number of rookies here."

In addition to the rookies, there will be 25 others players making their Pro Bowl debuts in the nationally televised game at Aloha Stadium.

Among the first-time players in the all-star game are five representatives from the Super Bowl Champion 49ers, headed by NFC starting quarterback Joe Montana.

The AFC first-time list includes Cincinnati running back Pete Johnson and Bengal offensive tackle Anthony Munoz; 11-year NFL veteran wide receiver Frank Lewis of Buffalo; tight end Ozzie Newsome of Cleveland; and Denver wide receiver Steve Watson.

The veteran Pro Bowl players for the AFC include Pittsburgh linebacker Jack Lambert, appearing for the seventh time, and linebackers Ted Hendricks of Oakland and Robert Brazile, each making their sixth appearance.

For the NFC, Los Angeles' center Rich Saul has played in five previous Pro Bowls. Minnesota linebacker Matt Blair, Atlanta center Jeff Van Note, and Dallas defensive tackle Randy White are all fifth-time selections for the game.

Bengals' quarterback Ken Anderson, who has played in two previous Pro Bowls, will start for the AFC, with Houston's Earl Campbell and the Chiefs' Delaney the running backs.

For the NFC, which is coached by Tampa Bay's John McKay, Dallas' Tony Dorsett and Detroit's Billy Sims will open at the running back spots.

The NFC holds a 7-4 advantage over the AFC in the 11 years the game has been played in its present format, and has won the last four meetings.

St. Peter's In Pair Of Wins

HAVELOCK — St. Peter's won two of three basketball games last night against Annunciation of Havelock.

In the boys' grades 5-6 game, St. Peter's took a 31-19 victory. Bill Taft led St. Peter's with 16 points.

In the girls' game, Annunciation won, 21-17. Kim Bridges led St. Peter's with 16 points.

St. Peter's came up with a 44-40 victory in the boys' grades 7-8 game. Jim Carter paced the winners with 14 points.

Bowie Returns To Practice

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie, relegated to a spectator's role because of a leg fracture, was to join his teammates in practice today for the first time this season, said Kentucky basketball Coach Joe B. Hall.

Bowie's progress will be checked in the coming week, but no decision about his playing this year has been made, Hall said at a news conference Thursday.

The 7-foot-1 junior is "probably about 15 percent back" from the injury, which was detected in late summer, Hall said.

"If he had to go 100 miles, he's probably gone 15 or 20 miles, if you're talking about where he would be with his (shooting) touch and fitting into the offense," Hall said.

"He may be even worse than that. He may be a minus-10 or 15 because he's probably not in the shape he would have been in Oct. 15, the first day he would have reported for practice."

Bowie's activity was limited to swimming and some weight-lifting before he was given permission after Christmas to begin a full-conditioning program.

Hall said he would not use Bowie in a game until Bowie decided whether to turn professional next year or to return for a fifth year of eligibility.

"I don't think he really knows right now" whether he wants to play this season, Hall said. "I think what will have more effect is after he gets in practice and sees what effect he could have and what contribution he can make to the team."

"If he feels like he can make a strong contribution, then I think he'll want to play," Hall said. "If he feels like he's out of shape and so far behind, I don't think he'll want that type of negative exposure."

Clinic Set Saturday

The annual East Carolina baseball clinic, which will feature special sessions for coaches and players, will get started Saturday morning and continued throughout the day.

Activities begin at 9:25 with opening remarks. A session on pitching will follow. Sessions on baserunning and hitting will also be held in the morning before lunch.

In the afternoon, a coaches' corner will be held along with a session on preventing injuries, catching and bunting and infield play. Jerry Narron of the Seattle Mariners will head the catching session.

The clinic scheduled to end at 3:45. Cost of the clinic is $4 per person or $50 per team, regardless of the number of players.

All those attending the clinic will receive tickets for the ECU-Richmond basketball game set for Saturday night at 7:30 in Minges Coliseum.

Duran Challenges Benitez For Title

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (A) — Wilfred Benitez has seen film of Roberto Duran's last two fights, but he knows he will see a different Duran Saturday night when he defends the World Boxing Council super welterweight championship.

"He will be better than in his last two fights (10-round decisions over Nino Gonzales and Luigi Munchillo) because he knows what kind of a boxer I will be," Benitez, a 23-year-old Puerto Rican who has won world titles in three weight classes, is confident he will beat Duran and move on to challenge for an unprecedented fourth championship.

"This is going to be my last fight in the weight," said Benitez, who said he has trained well to get down to the 154-pound limit, but that it is difficult for him to fight at that weight.

He hopes to ride the victory into a challenge for the undisputed middleweight title (160-pound limit) currently held by Marvin Hagler.

Duran, at age 30, will be trying to win his third title and force a third fight with undisputed welterweight champion

Sugar Ray Leonard.

Duran bristles when questioned about another Leonard fight.

"Right now, my mind is on Benitez, not on Leonard," he said Thursday. Then, through an interpreter, he snapped "Everybody is concerned about the situation of me fighting Leonard. Nobody asks why Leonard is not giving me a rematch.

"If I win, Leonard will have to come and ask me for a fight."

But Duran said he would fight Leonard at the 147-pound welterweight limit. There is no doubt it is the only class in which Leonard would consider a third fight, something he doesn't feel he will have to worry about after Saturday.

Duran said he was retiring after quitting in the eighth round, blinding stomach cramps, to lose the WBC welterweight title to Leonard Nov. 25, 1980. And, he says he will retire for good if he fails against Benitez, which will be the third fight of his comeback.

"I see Benitez stopping Duran," said Leonard, who will be at ringside at Caesars Palace as a commentator for Home Box Office, which will televise the fight live beginning at about 7 p.m., PST. "I see Duran running of emotion, being frustrated again."

Leonard maintains Duran quit in New Orleans because he was frustrated at being beat, not because of stomach cramps.

Benitez also feels he is capable of stopping Duran. An excellent boxer, Benitez has scored 26 knockouts in compiling a 42-1-1 record, and his punching power seems to be increasing as he grows toward what he feels is his natural weight class — middleweight.

"The stone hands will be me," said Benitez, referring to the nickname Duran earned when he dominated the lightweight division (135 pounds) for most of the 1970s. His record is 74-2-0, with 55 knockouts, but he has had much more difficulty dropping opponents since moving out of the lightweight class.

Besides giving away youth and three inches in reach to the 5-foot-10 Benitez, the 5-7½ Duran will be facing a fighter who feels he has become more dedicated.

"I'm better now because I have more discipline," said Benitez who has depended for much of his career on his ability to make up for laxity in training.

But, he said, he has trained hard for what he calls his most important fight and that he now understands the necessity of hard training if he is going to realize his full potential as a fighter.

There also will be another title fight on the card at the Caesars Palace Sports Pavilion.

Lynn "Bullet" Ball of Dallas, ranked No. 9 contender by the WBC, will defend the North American Boxing Federation heavyweight title against Michael "Dynamite" Dokes of Akron, Ohio, ranked second by the WBC behind Gerry Cooney.

The 29-year-old Ball has an 18-4-0 record, with 13 knockouts. Dokes, 23, is 23-0-1, with 12 knockouts.

Seek Expanding Control Over Cable Service

By NORMAN BLACK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP)

The National League of Cities is gearing up for a new congressional lobbying campaign for legislation that would strengthen municipal control over cable TV operators.

The league's proposals—including a mandatory requirement that a minimum number of channels be made available for lease—are sure to prompt a major battle with the industry.

Among other goals, the league is preparing to ask Congress to allow cities to continue regulation of basic service rates; to remove all limits on the franchise fees that cities can collect from cable operators; and to allow cities to build and operate their own cable systems if they wish.

The league's plans were outlined during an interview this week with Charles Royer, the mayor of Seattle, Wash., and chairman of the league's task force on telecommunications and cable television.

Royer stressed that municipal officials were willing to negotiate with the National Cable Television Association, the industry's largest trade group, in hopes of reaching a compromise that would avoid the type of controversy that erupted last summer.

At the urging of the association, the Senate Commerce Committee last summer approved a series of proposals that would have restricted municipal regulation of cable. The league mounted a vigorous lobbying campaign and eventually was successful in blocking approval by the full Senate.

The proposals would have barred local governments from regulating basic service rates in most instances, and set in law the authority of the Federal Communications Commission to continue limiting the size of franchise fees.

The association argued such provisions were necessary to prevent cities from treating cable companies simply as a new source of revenue and to protect their First Amendment rights to program their channels as they chose.

Royer, rejecting those arguments, said cable operators enjoyed a monopoly that made regulatory control necessary to protect the public interest.

RIVER DISASTER
MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The worst river disaster in American history will be replayed on nearby Mud Island, beginning in July.

The tragedy, which occurred north of Memphis, was the sinking April 27, 1865, of the Mississippi River steamer Sultana, which claimed 1,400 lives.

The theater on Mud Island is part of a $63-million, 50-acre education and entertainment center that will open this summer.

GORKY SHOW

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Some 100 paintings and works on paper by Arshile Gorky are being shown at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art through Feb. 28.

Among the works on view are Gorky's early portraits, compositional studies and such seminal paintings as "The Artist and His Mother," and "Garden in Sochi."

Weekend's 2-Part Nightmare

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It's December 1987. Soviet troops land in Alaska intent on blackmailing the United States into ending its grain embargo. Neither side will budge, and American and Soviet leaders square off in a game of nuclear chicken that isn't a game at all.

NBC's "World War III" Sunday and Monday nights is about the possibility of the final war. It wonders what might happen if both sides alternately raise the military ante and neither appears willing to fold?

It's a make-believe movie with horrifying seeds of reality, particularly the realization that a nuclear capability serves as a deterrent only when each side considers being deterred the paramount priority.

With this premise, "World War III" couldn't miss being suspenseful, but it should have been better. It never is totally involving beyond curiosity over the final outcome, which NBC has asked reviewers not to disclose.

(It's an unusual request, but it's not the practice here to spoil the suspense anyway.)

The show is also overloaded with character cliches. Every Russian talks in stilted language, spiced with "comrades," and looks like a subject from a 1950s American propaganda film. The presidential advisers also are a series of cardboard stereotypes: the Jewish liberal, the publicity relations-minded WASP, the bombs-away military men and the serious woman.

In the opening scene, President Thomas McKenna, played by Rock Hudson, is awakened by a nightmare and then seen in the universal morning posture of stumbling to the bathroom, serving to illustrate both the president's powerful burdens and his humanity.

On the domestic front, McKenna, who inherited the office when the president died, must deal with slippage in the polls and whether to declare his candidacy for a full term. Farmers are clamoring for an end to his grain embargo, initiated as leverage against the Soviet presence in Afghanistan, Poland and Yugoslavia.

Meanwhile, his Soviet counterpart, Secretary Gorny (Brian Keith), is grappling with food riots caused by grain shortages. He, too, is seen as a sensitive soul via a breakfast scene, in which he tells his son (Meno Peluce) that communists don't chew Wheaties with open mouths.

And like McKenna, Gorny is a pacifist with healthy fears about military machismo.

Quite rightly, it turns out, because the top Soviet general has ordered a small force into Alaska, without Gorny's knowledge. The purpose of the mission is to hold America's oil pipeline hostage until the grain embargo is lifted. "The KGB is convinced America will not engage in a pre-emptive strike so we can escalate without danger," the general tells Gorny after the fact.

The burden of fighting the Soviets falls to Col. Jake Caffey, a career officer not wearing general stripes because he won't play toy soldier. David Soul is forceful as the anti-authority authority figure. For all the usual reasons, Cathy Lee Crosby plays an intelligence officer, who happens to be in Alaska, and Caffey's former lover.

Caffey's troops are National Guardsmen, many of whom seem more anxious to risk their lives than the typical twice-a-month soldier. The battles are fairly authentic, heavy on blood and agony. But the old-Western syndromes of more black hats dying than arrived on the scene, with none of the soldiers ever needing shaves, defy credibility.

The snow-swept scenes look semi-Alaskan, but the white stuff is the department-store, all-weather variety — the price for filming in Los Angeles.

The movie could overcome these cosmetic flaws, but not its paperback-novel dialogue and lack of any all-encompassing tension, except for the final scene each night. The secret negotiations between McKenna and Gorny should have been electrifying, but weren't.

And McKenna's post-summit request to an aide seemed to parody the tension that never was: "You got a cigarette?" "I don't smoke." "Neither do I."

Danny DeVito Is Wed Thursday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In a marriage made in TV heaven, Danny DeVito, the dyspeptic dispatcher on "Taxi" has wed his longtime girlfriend, Rhea Perlman, who also plays his girlfriend on the show, a family spokesman says.

They were married Thursday during a rehearsal lunch break in private ceremony at the couple's Hollywood Hills home by Ralph Pyle, a non-denominational minister, said Stan Rosenfield. The guests were the parents of the bride and groom and several close relatives.

DeVito's nephew, Peter Lucia, was the best man and the maid of honor was the bride's sister, Heidi Perlman. The couple returned to work following the ceremony.

It was the first marriage for both actors, who met 12 years ago in New York when DeVito appeared in an Off-Off Broadway play, Rosenfield said. The couple will honeymoon in about a month following completion of this year's episodes.

DeVito, 36, stars in "Taxi" as Louie De Palma, and Miss Perlman plays Zena Sherman.

Electronics, Chemicals, Plastics In N.C. Future

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Electronics, chemicals and plastics will replace North Carolina's traditional industries as areas of future economic growth, predicts a Pennsylvania economic firm.

The forecast is part of a quarterly prediction for Southeastern states prepared by Chase Econometrics of Pittsburgh, a subsidiary of The Chase Manhattan Bank.
The company prepares forecasts primarily for state officials and businesses.

Charles Renfro, director of regional forecasting for Econometrics, said that although North Carolina leads the nation in production of furniture, textiles and tobacco, the state must look elsewhere for long-term economic growth.

The report said that between 1970 and 1980, the furniture industry grew 1.7 percent, textiles dropped by 1.6 percent and tobacco products dropped by 1.1 percent.

In comparison, the machinery industry grew 6.5 percent, plastics increased 6 percent and electrical machinery grew 3.2 percent.

The stagnant growth in manufacturing affects about a third of the state's workers.
Of that group, most are employed in textiles. They have felt the loss of more than 30,000 textile mills during the past decade, the report said.

Renfro said the tobacco industry has not expanded because of quotas limiting production. He said the outlook is a little brighter for textiles and furniture.

"Textile companies are going through a shaking out," Renfro said in a telephone interview. "We are down to a core of companies) that is much more competitive than ever before."

Renfro said the South,
particularly North Carolina, is beginning to train skilled workers in a way that will attract rapidly expanding high-technology industries.

Gov. Jim Hunt has said it is one of his priorities to attract such industry, especially in the field of microelectronics.
"North Carolina has the characteristic of being one of the few Southern states with a strong private and public university sector," Renfro said. "That will be a key factor."

The report said the fastest growing nonmanufacturing sector in North Carolina, in addition to services, has been government. In 1972, the state employed 43 workers per thousand residents compared with 5.1 per thousand nationally.

By 1980, the state had surpassed the national average per thousand with 62 employees compared to 5.9 for the nation.

RALEIGH: the nation.
The report said the immediate economic outlook is not too good.

"This (1982) should represent the last of a series of four years during which the state's growth has declined;
in the past, this has been almost entirely due to the direct and indirect effects of the large but stagnant manufacturing sector," the report said.

Renfro said the period of slow growth was tied to the national economy. He said he expected the state to begin to come out of the recession during the second quarter of 1982, when he said industry "will be poised for a rather strong takeoff."

An economic turnaround by 1983 will support increases in textiles, machinery and chemicals, the report said. Housing starts will begin to respond to lower interest rates, stimulating North Carolina's furniture industry.

In other areas, the report
said:

microelectronics work.
UNEMPLOYMENT
North Carolina had the lowest unemployment rate during the first quarter of 1979 with 4.3 percent. But the unemployment rate is predicted to rise to 8.13 percent in the fourth quarter of 1983, giving North Carolina the second highest unemployment rate in the region.

Renfro did not explain why the unemployment rate is expected to climb relative to neighboring states.

FARMERS
The report also predicts that farm income will grow 3.8 percent in 1981-82 and 10.77 percent in 1982-83, which will be exceeded by growers in Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

The report, completed this month, looks at the economy in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Renfro said the company uses information like wage and unemployment rates, housing starts and banking information in econometric models to make the predictions.

How's The Weather?

WEATHER FORECAST — Snow is expected in the forecast period, Friday until Saturday in the morning, from the upper Mississippi to the Great Lakes. Rain is forecast along the Appalachians. Mild weather is due on the eastern seaboard and cold will continue in the north-central states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press
Another pleasant day was forecast for North Carolina today, with unseasonably warm temperatures and mostly sunny skies, but rain was expected to return Saturday, the National Weather Service said.

A weak cold front passed through North Carolina late Thursday and Thursday night. Early this morning, the front was moving east
through the coastal waters.

A weak high pressure system centered over southern Illinois drifted east to a position along the Maryland shores by this evening. Another developing storm over the southwestern states will now press east and effect the weather over North Carolina on Saturday and Sunday.

A brisk south and southwest wind with ample sunshine Thursday helped push temperatures into the 50s over a good portion of the state. This was the first time in about 3 weeks that near normal temperatures had been observed.

Maximums ranged from a mild 61 at Jacksonville to a 49 at Greensboro. Mountain sections had a wide range in the 30s, 40s and even 50s.
Precipitation was restricted to the mountains and even there only widely scattered amounts under two tenths of an inch were recorded.

The recreational weather outlook for North Carolina will be pleasant today with sunshine during the morning and clouds moving in by the afternoon. High temperatures today will peak into the low 50s over southeastern counties ranging to around 40

over the higher mountains.
By tonight clouds will thicken and minimum levels will only dip into the 30s for the most part. Rain will be returning to North Carolina by Saturday beginning over the west and spreading to the coast by late in the day.

The rain could start as freezing rain or sleet over the mountains. Windy conditions over the western counties will also be evident.
Temperatures by Saturday will be warmer and in the low 60s over the southeast ranging to the 40s over the mountains.

Damage from the mishap was set at $1,500 to the Vaden car and $700 to the Harrell vehicle.

Marty Ray Warren, 17, of Farmville was charged with driving without a license and driving after drinking following investigation of a 10:45 p.m. collision on Second Street, 125 feet east of the Summit Street intersection.

Officers said the car driven by Warren collided with a parked car owned by Clara Seago of 111 S. Summit St., resulting in an estimated $300 damage to the Seago car and $1,000 damage to the Warren vehicle.

Accepts Role If Work Is Funded

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) —
Gov. Jim Hunt says he favors turning federal programs over to state and local governments as long as Washington doesn't "keep the money and give us the program."

Responding to questions at his weekly news conference Thursday, Hunt said the "new federalism" sought by President Reagan was a proposal previously adopted by the National Governors Association.

"I welcome the idea for state and local governments to administer an awful lot of programs that the federal government has administered in the past," Hunt said. "It's a concept that has merit. I'd like to hear a lot more about it."

Hunt said it is important that programs transferred to the states be done in a fair way.

"They should not use this as a means of dumping the federal deficit on state and local taxpayers," he said.

He said programs that have already been put in place can't be dismantled, but that a lot of them had some fat that could be cut.

"The solution is not to just get rid of everything," Hunt said.

Reagan proposed Tuesday that the federal government take over administration and funding of Medicaid while transferring over 40 federal programs including Food Stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children to state and local officials.

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Two of ♠

In the bridge players Garden of Eden, all brilliant plays succeed. But life is not nearly so kind.

North-South reached three no trump in quick time. While North might not have the strength in high cards for his jump to game, his long suit rated to produce five or six tricks, so his bid was clearly warranted.

West led his fourth best spade. East won the ace and continued the suit. Declarer ducked the second round of spades and won the third round with the king. The fate of the contract now seemed to hinge on a 3-2 club break, but when declarer led the jack of clubs and ran it, he suddenly found that he had another option. Sitting East was a young Ft. Lee, N.J. expert, Michael Kamil, and he smoothly played the ten under the jack!

Most declarers would now assume that West had started with four clubs to the queen and continue by leading a club to the nine for the "marked" finesse. East would win the queen and all those lovely clubs in dummy would wither on the vine because declarer would have no way to get to them. But declarer blithely continued with a club to the king, and the contract rolled home with two overtricks since declarer could safely take the heart finesse at the end.

There are two possible explanations for the way declarer played the clubs. Either he did not realize that he had a second club finesse available, or he was astute enough to realize that East might be false-carding with the ten of clubs.

We will never know for sure, but we shall charitably assume that the latter was the case.

FOCUS

An Uncommon Man

Although the friend of the "little guy," Franklin Roosevelt was himself hardly a common man. Born a millionaire, he was educated at Harvard and Columbia. Like his wealth, his "perfectly grand political personality" was a family heritage. Not only was Theodore Roosevelt his fifth cousin, but he was related by blood or marriage to ten other Presidents: Washington, the Adamses, Madison, Van Buren, the Harrisons, Taylor, Grant and Taft. But on his birth centennial tomorrow, FDR's true worth can be measured by his own standards. "The test of our progress is not whether we add more to the abundance of those who have much; it is whether we provide enough for those who have too little. ..."

DO YOU KNOW — For how many terms was FDR elected President?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Brezhnev is Chairman of the Communist Party and President of the U.S.S.R.

routines. Don't neglect an important payment.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make plans that could produce greater income in the future. Don't waste money on persons who are ungrateful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make it a point to keep in touch with persons you really enjoy. A personal goal can be easily attained now.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A time to contact loyal friends and get their backing for something that is important to you. Relax at home tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Forget dull routines now and make new contacts with those who can liven up your life. Strive for happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Take care of your personal obligations early in the day for best results. Show more interest in a civil matter.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will get along well with just about everybody because of the real charm in this nature, so be sure to direct the education along lines that will require being with the public a good part of the time.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

County Board Meets Monday

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda is a brief meeting with Dr. John Howell, acting chancellor of East Carolina University; a report by the board's emergency medical services committee on a proposed grant for hospital and rescue squad radios; a report on the old Greenville landfill and on the county-owned Tucker Building; consideration of agreements for clean-up of solid waste container sites; and the consideration of a proposal by the Pitt County Education Work Council.

We're Out To Convince You That Escort Is The Best Small Car Sold In America

Lease A 1982 Ford Escort For As Little As $138.24 Per Month

"No Other Small Car Can Match Our Escort Fordcare Offer!"

And With Your New Escort You Get:

- COST-FREE MAINTENANCE
 For the life of your warranty Ford will provide free scheduled maintenance. That means you won't have to pay for things like oil changes, fan belts, filters — even wiper blades. You won't have to pay a cent — parts or labor. It's an offer without equal on any small car in the country.
- WORKMANSHIP COVERAGE
 Now! Two years or 24,000 miles — whichever comes first. Protection virtually any problem that that might come up. The only things not covered are fluids, tires, abuse and accidents. Legally, we have to call it a limited warranty. But compare it to any other small car warranty.
- 5% CASH BONUS FROM FORD
 Take delivery of a new '82 Escort by March 13 and you'll get a bonus of 5% off the base vehicle sticker price directly from Ford. That's a 5% savings that you can keep or apply to your down payment. Limit one per customer.

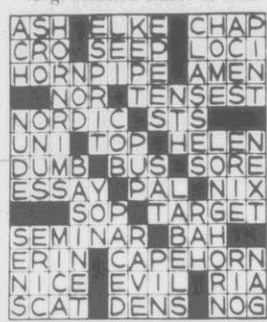

If You Have A Trade, We Will Pay Cash For Your Car
The Ford Lease Program Is Available On All Ford Cars And Trucks

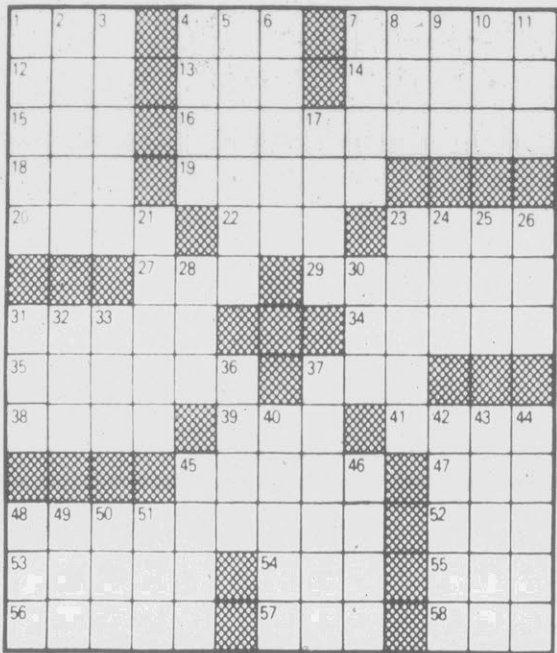

EXCEPTIONAL GAS MILEAGE.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP 1-29

AUPSTOQUA LONWML MIQNITPUL ASY-YSFMPQ FPMUL QB YBMJ FJSWUL

Yesterday's Cryptquip — BRILLIANT STARS MAKE BASKET OF GEMS OF THE NIGHT SKIES.

Today's Cryptquip clue: F equals C

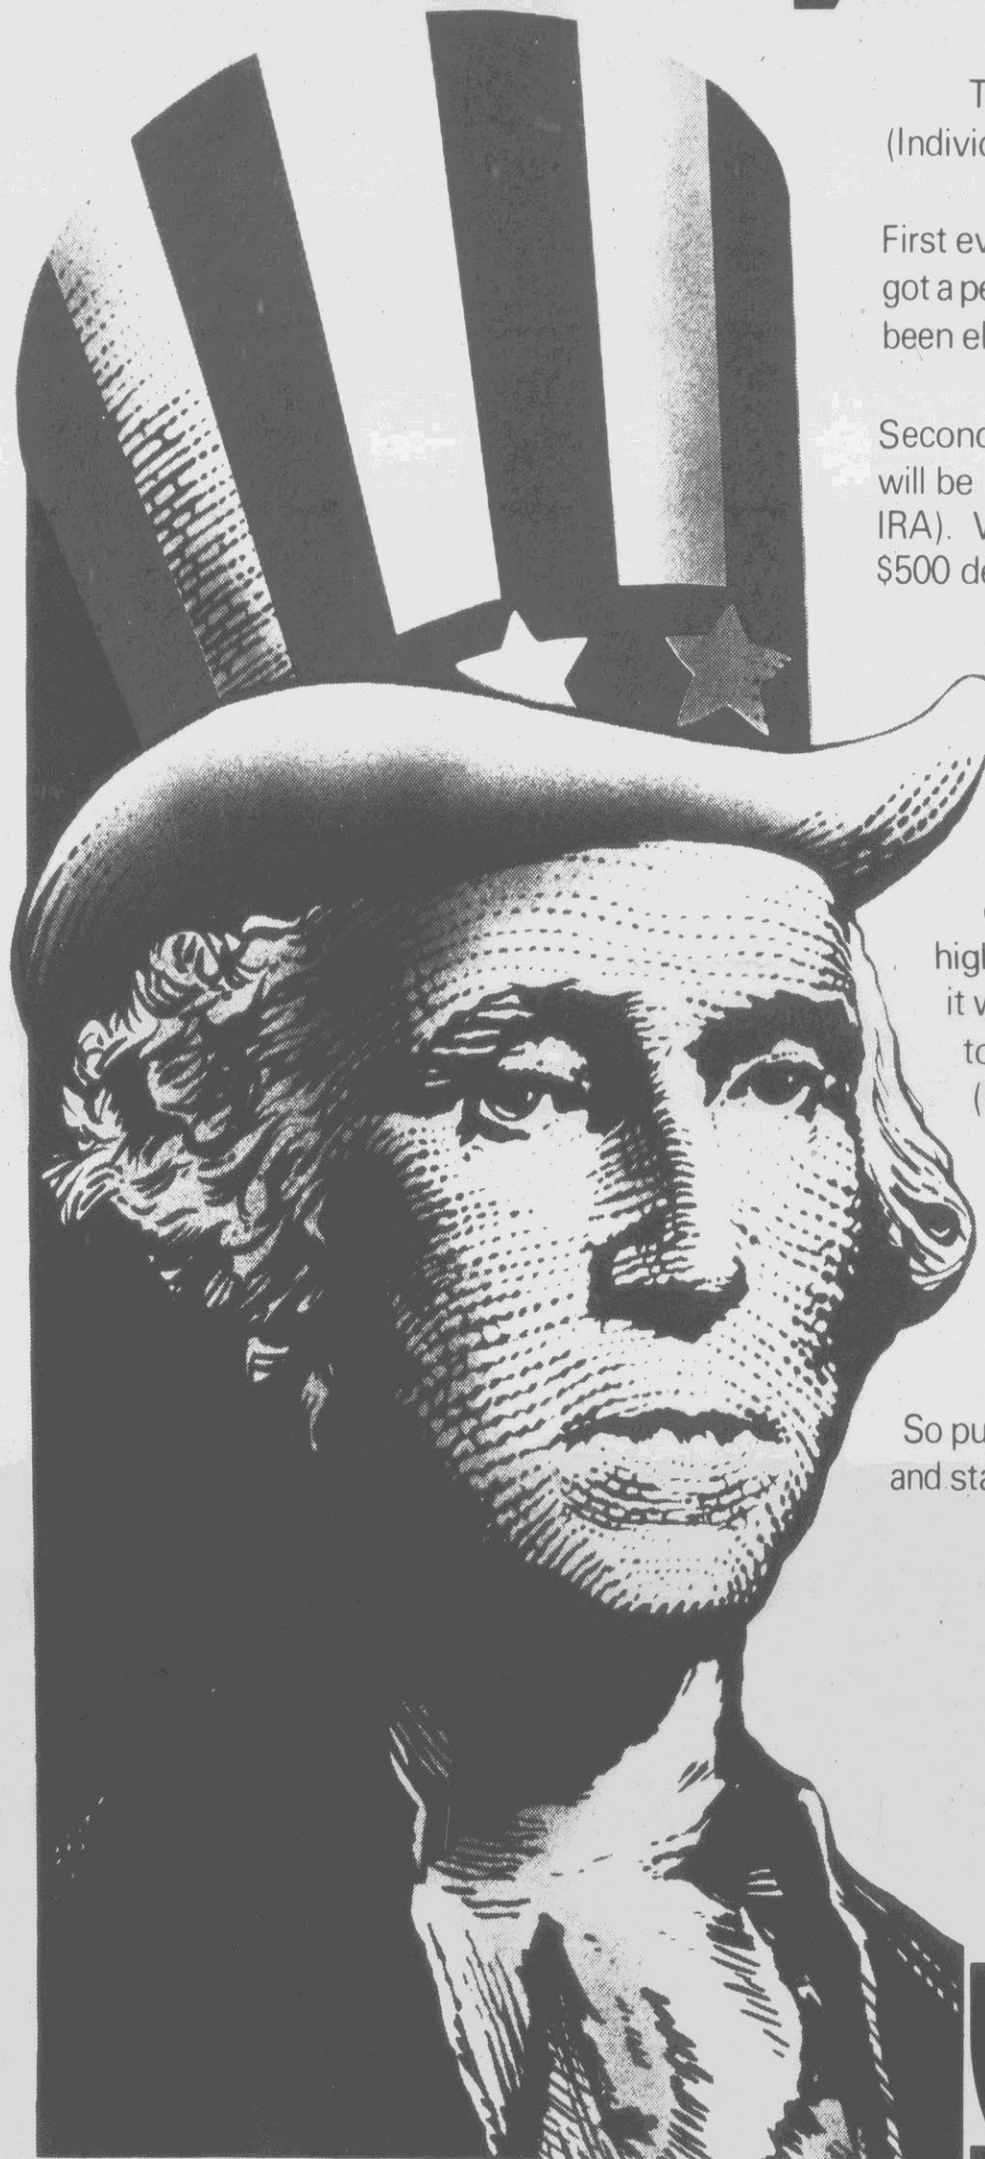

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Beginning January 1, 1982, Uncle Sam now gives you a $2000 reason to open an IRA at First Federal. And everyone is eligible.

There are two big changes in the IRA (Individual Retirement Account) at First Federal.

First everyone is eligible. Even if you've already got a pension or retirement fund and you've never been eligible for an IRA before. Now you are.

Second, the maximum contribution to your IRA will be $2000 instead of $1500 ($2250 spousal IRA). We don't have to tell you what an extra $500 deduction can mean at tax time.

With an IRA at First Federal, you can write off the full amount of your contribution (up to $2000).

You won't have to pay a penny in taxes on the amount of your contribution or the high rate of interest it earns, until you withdraw it when you retire. (You must be at least 59½ to withdraw from your IRA to avoid stiff IRS (Internal Revenue Service) penalties).

But what's important is that when you retire, your income and tax bracket will most likely be lower than it is now.

And that adds up to less taxes now, and less taxes later.

So put yourself first. Open an IRA at First Federal and start paying less taxes.

Your IRA funds are, of course, available to you at any time. However, there is a stiff IRS tax penalty if you withdraw from this account before age 59. You must receive at least $2000 a year in compensation to be eligible for an IRA.
