

Begin Lengthy Redistricting Hearing

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
C. (AP) — The General Assembly asked to public thinks about its reapportionment plans though legislators aren't sure themselves just are.
n public hearing was scheduled in the lding by an array of committees that have shape new districts for House, Senate and eats.
ch panel has a new redistricting map ore it, each committee has also said it will changes later. And with three distinct esues before the hearing, legislative leaders e, confusing afternoon.
bility we'll be continuing our public hearing said Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, chairman of the House Congressional Redistricting Committee. "And then we'll have another meeting Friday, whenever it ends."

The hearing was set at the insistence of the General Assembly's $100-an-hour Washington attorney, Jerris Leonard, as a way to help support the new district maps once they are approved by the full General Assembly and sent to the U.S. Justice Department.
In long meetings Wednesday, the joint House and Senate panels on congressional redistricting tentatively adopted a new map that would move Durham County — long a sticking point in the remap debate — out of the 4th District and into the 2nd.
It would make the 4th consist of Franklin, Wake, Chatham, Orange and Randolph counties.
The 2nd would lose its notorious "fishhook" shape, and consist of counties along the Virginia border from Caswell to Halifax plus Wilson, Nash, Edgecombe and a piece of Johnston in the East.

Also changed would be the 6th, to include Alamance, Guilford and Davidson.
The shift of Durham County came despite long opposition by powerful legislators closely allied with the 2nd District incumbent and dean of North Carolina's congressional delegation, L.H. Fountain.
But the change was unavoidable, said Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the congressional panel. The U.S. Justice Department, in rejecting the congressional map approved by legislators last year, said keeping Durham out of the 2nd tended to reduce the voting strength of blacks in that region.
"It is becoming increasingly apparent that the Justice Department would not approve a plan that did not address their concerns about the dilution of minority voting strength, particularly in the 2nd District," she said. "We had to come to grips with the 2nd District problem."

Still before legislators, however, is another proposal by Greensboro Democrats to alter the 6th District yet another way — to make it include Rockingham, Alamance and a portion of Davidson. That would be lost to the way the 6th looked after the 1971 redistricting, and the panel planned to debate that proposal after the public hearing.
In the House Legislative Redistricting Committee, legislators also put off a series of decisions until after the hearing.
Before it are proposals to build majority black districts inside Charlotte, Winston-Salem, Durham and Raleigh; a plan by Rep. Joe Hege, R-Davidson, to draw 120 separate single-member districts, and other plans to rearrange majority-black districts in the northeastern corner of the state.
Meanwhile, legislative leaders said they would present the General Assembly — when it meets in special session next week — with a new plan for postponing the statewide primary now set for May 4.
Under the latest plan, the legislature would set six possible dates for the vote — in June, July and August — and allow the state Elections Board to schedule it, depending on when federal authorities approve the latest redistricting plans.

Mubarak Firm On Palestinian Role

By R. GREGORY NOKES
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak is holding firm to Egypt's insistence that Palestinians eventually must have the right to establish their own "national entity."
In a toast at a White House banquet Wednesday night, Mubarak urged President Reagan to start an "American dialogue with the Palestinians" in the search for a lasting peace in the Middle East.
"No party should be excluded from this process," he said in an obvious reference to the Palestinian Liberation Organization. So far, the United States has refused to consider negotiating with the militant PLO.
Mubarak's forceful call for talks with the Palestinians seemed to suggest that no early compromise on the thorny question of Palestinian autonomy is unlikely.
Reagan, who was scheduled to meet with Mubarak for a second round of talks today, said in his toast that, "Our meetings have reassured me that further progress is within our grasp."
The question of Palestinian autonomy and other issues were discussed Wednesday at the start of Mubarak's first official visit to Washington as president.
Although a second meeting was not on the original schedule, plans were switched.
Mubarak did not call specifically for a separate state for the Palestinians and declined to elaborate on exactly what he meant by a

Palestinian "national entity."
Mubarak also disclosed following a meeting with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. at the State Department that 66 Russian technicians he invited to Egypt last week should be gone within year.
"Why are you making a big fuss of that?" he asked reporters who asked why he had invited the technicians. He said they are needed to work on Soviet-supplied equipment and projects. "They will be staying one month, maximum, 12 months, that's all."
Sadat, who was assassinated Oct. 6, ordered 700 Soviet technicians to leave Egypt in September.
Mubarak made clear he wants the same close ties to the United States that existed under Sadat.
Those warm ties have helped generate large amounts of U.S. economic and military aid to Egypt — a total of $1.9 billion in fiscal 1982. The Reagan administration is expected to ask Congress to approve an additional $400 million for military aid in fiscal 1983.
Mubarak is seeking more aid and more flexibility in how the aid can be used. "I'm still fighting for it," he said when asked by reporters if he had been successful.
A senior administration official said Reagan and Mubarak agreed that the 1979 Camp David accords were "the appropriate and only vehicle for addressing the Palestinian problem."
The official, who refused to be identified, also said the

Salvador Asking U.N. To Verify Big Slaughter

VICTIMS — Bodies of five people reportedly slain by leftist guerrillas lie in street in New Trinidad in northern El Salvador, Wednesday. The U.N. human rights commission has been invited to investigate. (AP Laserphoto)

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's army says it is asking the U.N. Human Rights Commission to verify its claim that leftist guerrillas slaughtered more than 150 peasants in an attack on a northeastern village.
"The communist attackers dedicated themselves to killing, to butchery to exterminating the population, and they killed children, women and men — even animals," an army spokesman said Wednesday.
The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the rebels' weekend raid on Nueva Trinidad, in Morazan Province near the Honduran border, left between 150 and 200 dead — more than half the population.
Reporters who visited the village Tuesday reported finding about a dozen corpses lying in the street.
Leftist sources claim the government recently converted Nueva Trinidad into a base for paramilitary groups that cross into neighboring Honduras, round up Salvadoran refugees in camps there and bring them back across the border.
The sources, who have ties to the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, a coalition of guerrilla groups battling the U.S.-backed junta, claim 25 soldiers and members of such paramilitary groups were killed in the attack.
The leftists made no mention of civilian casualties.
The army's claim of a guerrilla massacre followed recent unconfirmed reports that more than 1,000 civilians were massacred by government troops during a recent offensive in Morazan, a guerrilla stronghold.

Large Bars Testimony Slurs By Williams

AP) — The Williams' testimony barred in introducing evidence to show defendant's certain elements of his race was a motive for two slayings.

He said the prosecution could pursue the line of questioning, as long as de-

Pitt Peanut Growers Voted Strongly For 1982 Program

BY MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer
Ninety-three percent of the peanut growers in Pitt County want a peanut program even though the 1982 federal legislation cuts quotas, according to the local results of last week's peanut referendum.
Of the 655 ballots cast in Pitt County, only 47 were against the scaled-down program, said Stacy Evans of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Greenville. In Martin County, an area where peanut production is high, 32 of the 853 votes were negative.
Officials called the results "overwhelming."
"We expected the program to pass in Pitt County but we didn't expect as strong results as this," said Pitt extension agent Sam Uzzell. "I think this tells legislators that the program is necessary and wanted."
Uzzell noted that the program "wasn't that encouraging a thing to vote on. It indicates to me that when faced with the scary situation of producing a crop and making a profit, these farmers want support."
In the 10-county district that includes Pitt and Martin counties, growers cast 2,402 votes in favor of the program and 140 votes against it, said Evans. According to these figures, 94.5 percent of the district supported the legislation.

In North Carolina, the referendum produced 6,905 votes for the new quota program and 448 against it. Peanut growers voted between Jan. 25 and Jan. 29. Results were tabulated Wednesday.
The program calls for price supports on domestic edible peanuts to be no less than 27.5 cents a pound or about $550 per ton, said Evans. Domestic edible peanuts are those sold within the United States as whole peanuts or for use in products like peanut butter or cookies.
Under the program, farmers who attempt to sell such peanuts after the quota has been met are subject to a penalty equaling 140 percent of the support price. Surplus peanuts can be exported or crushed for use as oil or meal and would be covered under a lesser price support.
The new program decreases last year's quota of 1.44 million tons. Prior to the referendum, local farmers expressed fears that the program would be detrimental to them because of the decreased quota.

Heptinstall Sentenced To Life Plus 50 Years

BY STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Jeffrey S. Heptinstall, convicted of first degree murder in the death of a 62-year-old Greene County woman earlier this week, was sentenced to life plus 50 years in prison about 12:30 a.m. today by Judge Preston Cornelius in Pitt County Superior Court.
Heptinstall, 30, who escaped from the prison unit at Maury on the night of July 10, was convicted of breaking into the home of Rachel B. Albritton of the Lizzie community on July 11, beating and stabbing her and stealing her car. Before she died several hours later in Pitt County Memorial Hospital, she told friends and relatives about the assault and described her assailant — a description that fit Heptinstall.

When taken into custody in Craven County several hours after Mrs. Albritton died, Heptinstall was driving her car. His fingerprints and shoe tracks were found in the Albritton home.
The five women and seven men on the jury, after hearing testimony in the case for more than a week, Tuesday found Heptinstall guilty of murder, armed robbery and breaking and entering.
The same jury, after determining Heptinstall's guilt, began hearing testimony Wednesday morning in the sentencing phase of the trial. They were to recommend whether the defendant should receive a life prison sentence or the death penalty.
The jury, after hearing testimony, defense and prosecution arguments and the judge's charge, began its deliberations about 7 p.m. When jurors returned to the courtroom early this morning, after 5½ hours, they told the court they were deadlocked and could not reach a decision.
Judge Cornelius then sentenced Heptinstall to life in prison on the murder charge. The 40-year sentence in the armed robbery case and the 10-year prison term for breaking and entering are to run consecutively and begin at the expiration of the sentence in the murder case.
Martin K. Heptinstall told the court Wednesday that, in his opinion, his son was "absolutely insane" when he attacked Mrs. Albritton.

"In my opinion, he was a walking time bomb for himself and others," Dr. Nicholas Padiaditakis of Raleigh testified. The psychiatrist, who examined Heptinstall several years ago, said he considered the defendant to be "crazy."
Both Padiaditakis and Heptinstall's father recommended that Heptinstall be jailed at Central Prison, where he could receive treatment.
The defendant told the court Wednesday, as he had last week, that he broke into Mrs. Albritton's home and stole her car, but he again denied beating and stabbing her.

Dear Abby

Reader Partial To Full Text

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Recently I had the sad task of correctly identifying a beautiful passage for inclusion in the eulogy for a young neighbor who died suddenly. I was, therefore, pleased but left unsatisfied to see a pale facsimile of it submitted by a Michigan reader and run in your column. Your applied title of "Perspective" was good, but not as apt as the real one, "A Parable of Immortality." Further, the author's name is not Henry Scott Holland, but Henry Van Dyke, a famous American preacher, poet and philosopher — and the full text, while still brief, deserves to be printed. I enclose a copy for your use.

WILLIAM D. SANTORO, M.D.

"I am standing upon the seashore. A ship at my side spreads her white sails to the morning breeze and starts for the blue ocean. She is an object of beauty and strength and I stand and watch until at last she hangs like a speck of white cloud just where the sea and sky come down to mingle with each other. Then someone at my side says, 'There she goes!' 'Gone where? Gone from my sight . . . that is all. She is just as large in mast and hull and spar as she was when she left my side and just as able to bear her load of living freight to the place of destination. Her diminished size is in me, not in her. And just at the moment when someone at my side says, 'There she goes!' there are other eyes watching her coming and other voices ready to take up the glad shout, 'There she comes!'"

DEAR ABBY: Should a mother tell her daughter she is loud, and if so, how?

My daughter is truly a lovely person, and I am so proud of her for many reasons, but when she is in a group of people she tends to get loud and strident; she talks constantly and laughs raucously. These are not easy things to say to one's daughter. However, she's 35 years old, and I'm sure these are qualities that cause men to shy away from her. She is a beautiful girl, kind, happy and intelligent. Can you suggest a way to handle this?

STYMIED MOM

DEAR MOM: Be as gentle and diplomatic as possible. First let your daughter know that you think she is "truly lovely, beautiful, kind and intelligent." Then suggest that at times her enthusiasm causes her to come on a little too strong, so if she could try to tone down a few decibels, she would be even more attractive.

DEAR ABBY: When signing cards, letters, invitations, etc., whose name appears first, my husband's or mine? We have been arguing about this for some time. Also, where can I buy a breast pump?

RUTHIE IN ERIE

DEAR RUTHIE: If you write the card, letter, invitation, etc., your name appears first. If your husband does the writing, his name appears first. You can purchase a breast pump at your local drugstore.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning the letter from "Confused in Indiana": She complained that some people "have so little respect for the dead that they would bury a spouse in the afternoon and dance the same evening."

Abby, there are many reasons why the widowed woman would "celebrate" the death of her husband. One may be that she hated his guts for a long time but couldn't divorce him because of her religion.

Personally, I think the death of a loved one is a time to celebrate, not a time to cry from selfish grief if the person who dies is out of pain and misery at last.

Incidentally, I am 13, and my folks agree with my views. They both want big parties after their funeral services.

KATY

DEAR KATY: Thanks for writing. I wish more young people would express their views.

Duplicate Winners

Mrs. Walter Harbin and Mrs. C.D. Elks were first place winners in the Wednesday morning game played at Planters Bank. Their percentage was .611.

Others placing were Mrs. Blanche Kittrell and Mrs. Bertha Jones, second; Mrs. Beverly Maxon and Mrs. Eloise Gabbert, third; Mrs. John McConney and Mrs. Everett Pittman, fourth.

Winners in the game played during the afternoon game included North-South: Mrs. William Parvin and Mrs. J.M. Horton, first with .658 percent; Mrs. Pat Conner and Mrs. Mavis Smith, second; Mrs. J.S. Rhodes Jr. and Mrs. Roger Critcher Jr., third; Mrs. Beulah Eagles and Mrs. Zeb Cummings, fourth.

East-West winners included: Mrs. Barry Powers and Mrs. George Martin, first with .622 percent; Mrs. W. R. Harris and Dave Proctor, second; Mrs. Effie Williams and Claude Goodman, third; Mrs. Clifton Toler and Mrs. John Tayloe, fourth.

Local players playing in the three-day sectional tournament held at the Ramada Inn included: Mrs. Wiley Corbett and Mrs. Barry Powers, first in un-mixed pairs; Joe Hatch and Jeff Raynes, first in non-masters pairs.

Most points won during the entire tournament by Greenville regular players were Mrs. Wiley Corbett, first, and Mrs. Barry Powers, second.

There were 192 tables in play during the three days.

Program On Energy Given

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women held its meeting last week at the Ramada Inn. Phillip Morin of Greenville Utilities Commission gave a program of "Saving Energy in the Home."

Sandra Sawyer, education chairperson, reported on plans for a seminar on "The New Tax Law and IRA's" to be held at the Ramada Inn Wednesday, Feb. 24. The session will be conducted by Lowrimore, Warwick and Co. It will be open to the public at a charge of $3.00 per person. Refreshments will be served.

The special committee for Bosses' Night announced the event will be held at the Ramada Inn Friday, Feb. 19. Elliott Frank, visiting artist at Pitt Community College, will entertain.

Joyce Buchanan was installed as a new member of the group by Evelyn Stroud.

President Joyce Mills and Ms. Sawyer will represent the group at the regional conference in Bethesda, Md. March 26-28.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Elizabeth Taylor and I have a lot in common. We both agree that old age is inevitable and we welcome it . . . like an old friend.

To be sensitive about a few wrinkles and a couple of laugh lines is nonsense. After all, beauty comes from within. As a matter of fact, I rarely think about age anymore.

Some days I don't think about my age at all. Like today, I didn't give it a thought until I woke up. Lying in bed, it occurred to me that I wasn't growing older, it was just that people are getting ahead faster than they used to.

Take my priest, for example. We used to get them right out of the seminary from high school. But the other day, I saw a BISHOP who smelled like Clearasil.

Remember how the interns used to be the youngest doctors on the hospital staff? A doctor who wears Calvin Klein jeans on rounds and can't be a day over 20 is a local chief of staff!

I don't know how they do it. There was a time when the stewards on planes looked like they had landed their first job. Now the men piloting the planes are looking forward to shaving for the first time.

At first I thought it was my perspective, but, correct me if I'm wrong — didn't tennis champions used to be a lot older than they are now? You never see anyone serving to a silver-haired opponent at Wimbledon anymore.

And isn't it sort of scary to know that today's skyscrapers, shopping centers and condos are being built by kids who will have to return to school after the summer is over?

Luckily, I don't give a thought to age or I'd have been terribly upset when I met a full colonel who was young enough to be my son.

And what has happened to education? My teachers were straight from the Stone Age. My son has a teacher whom I swear has a picture of himself aging in the attic while he looks like a preschooler.

Maybe Liz and I would feel differently if we were older, but to me she's still as beautiful as when she appeared in "National Velvet" last year . . . or was that two years ago? Time flies when you lie to yourself.

'Mating' Of Shuttle, Tanks Is Begun

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Workers at Kennedy Space Center will toil through Friday to link the space shuttle Columbia with its external fuel tank and two booster rockets.

The "mating," scheduled to start later today, is an exacting job, says NASA spokesman Mark Hess, involving the fastening of hundreds of electrical and mechanical connections. Hess said new tools will be used during the fitting to eliminate problems experienced before Columbia's last launch in linking the shuttle with its fuel tank.

By Monday, NASA engineers will test the connections for a tight fit, he said. Without the split-second coordination the connections provide between each of the shuttle's components, the booster rockets could fall off before they are supposed to, Hess said.

Next week, with the craft still on the ground, astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton and their backup crew will "fly" the shuttle in three mock flights, including simulated orbital entry, an abort and return to the launch site, and an atmospheric re-entry and landing, a NASA spokesman said.

On Wednesday, the spacecraft was towed 300 yards from its hangar to the 52-story Vehicle Assembly Building, where it will be fitted to its fuel tank and boosters. So far, NASA officials say preparations are proceeding two days ahead of schedule for Columbia's planned seven-day flight next month.

Through the early morning Wednesday, technicians fastened a steel sling around the 100-ton orbiter. Early today, it was scheduled to be lifted the height of a 19-story building so the fastening of connections can begin.

The hookup of the shuttle system in the cavernous VAB is expected take about four days. After a series of tests, it will be towed about three miles to its launch pad.

Vice President George Bush, who will visit Kennedy Space Center Friday, may announce a definite target date for the mission, NASA officials said. Until now, the mission has been targeted for the week of March 22.

Bush will dedicate Space Lab, an experiment unit to be carried aboard the shuttle sometime next year.

The shuttle's third mission of 116 Earth orbits is designed to test Columbia's thermal capabilities. The spacecraft will travel in a circular 150-mile orbit in different attitudes, subjecting it to extreme hot and cold temperatures and testing its structure, subsystems and payload.

It will carry another set of scientific experiments and the huge mechanical arm, which engineers say is ready for extensive use. The jointed, robot manipulator is to pick up two experiments carried in Columbia's payload bay and place them in space.

The turnaround time in processing Columbia for its third mission was reduced significantly, Hess said. The number of days spent in its hangar were cut from 99 after the second flight to 70 — including an 11-day Christmas break during which no work was done, he said.

A defective fuel cell which cut the planned five-day second mission to two days was removed in December, along with the other two cells. Replacements were installed last month.

Only 469 of the more than 30,000 heat-protection tiles were replaced after the third flight, compared with 1,500 after the second mission, Hess said.

Judgeship Candidate

PAUL WRIGHT

Paul Wright, a District Court judge who is a candidate for the N. C. Court of Appeals, said the function of judges "is not to pass laws; this is the job of the Legislature. Rather, our task is to see that the laws are enforced fairly, the Constitution upheld, and every man be given his day in court."

The Goldsboro judge, who serves Wayne, Lenoir and Greene counties, added, "Personally, however, I believe our courts should, where legally possible, show concern for the rights of victims of crimes, including requiring the criminal to repay the victim of his crime."

Wright suggested that his "experience has enabled me to see all sides of the courtroom and would serve me well, since the function of a Court of Appeals judge is to see that trials are conducted properly."

A former lawyer and prosecuting attorney, Wright is seeking the Court of Appeals seat now held by retiring Judge Robert Martin in the 1982 Democratic primary.

A judge since 1978, Wright was originally appointed by Gov. Jim Hunt. He is a graduate of Wheaton College and Duke Law School and attended Westminster Theological Seminary.

Weather Is Often Health Scapegoat

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (UPI) — A lot of people blame the weather for health problems when they themselves are responsible, according to a Texas A. & M. University meteorologist.

Using the weather as a scapegoat means these people don't have to blame themselves for not taking proper care of themselves, says Dr. Dennis Driscoll, an expert on how the weather affects humans.

Driscoll admits there are well-established links between health and extremely hot or cold conditions "outside the comfort zone" but says there is no hard evidence to back up the belief that changes in the weather bring on such ailments as cardiovascular and respiratory illnesses.

"Where do you draw the line?" Driscoll asks. "If you catch a cold during winter weather, is it really weather or because you didn't dress warm enough, or went to work when everyone was getting a cold?"

Driscoll says the commonly held notion that winter weather causes colds and flu may be explained by the fact that cool conditions compel people to spend more time inside tightly sealed buildings, what he calls "cryptoenvironments," where germs spread easily.

"The classic example of this kind of thinking is what happened with polio," he says. "For many years polio was thought to be caused by summer weather until scientists discovered the organism responsible lived in water and was picked up by people who went swimming outdoors. Very few people go swimming outdoors during winter, so few if any cases were reported during that time. Now, is that weather?"

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 10 Wednesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 10 percent of your hot water.

Museum Is Desirable

A $35 million N. C. Museum of Natural History?

That is what is being proposed in Raleigh for a 40-acre site west of Blue Ridge Road.

Anything that costs that much has to be considered carefully in North Carolina these days. Recession is affecting revenues, the public is adamant about new taxes and there are pressing social needs to be met with ever less assistance from Washington.

Nevertheless the idea of a natural museum is appealing. The state currently operates a Museum of Natural History in a 40,000 square foot annex of the Agriculture Building. The space, however, wasn't designed for a museum and thus is not adequate.

It is not difficult to make a case for the value of such a museum. It preserves some of the heritage of our state and, for visiting school children, it probably has as much educational value as anything we spend our money on.

North Carolina is unique in that it has no great metropolitan centers which can financially support such facilities as a Museum of Natural History, a major art museum or a zoo. If it is not done through state government then the obvious cultural advantages of these facilities and just not going to be available.

Thus we see the proposed N.C. Museum of Natural History as a desirable facility. We would not take the money from essential services, but we believe the capital funds can be found even if it has to be stretched over several biennial budgets.

Opposition To Plan Organized

Pitt and Martin counties joined forces Monday night to form a 19-member committee which was to express area concern in Raleigh today about a proposed Legislative redistricting plan.

The concern for the plan centered around the splitting of Carolina Township and Bethel from Pitt County to join another House of Representatives district. Eastern Martin County would be split to join a House district separate from the rest of Martin County. A meeting was held here after details of the proposed plan were made public. Opposition to the plan, which divides both Pitt and Martin Counties for redistricting purposes, was unanimous.

Our leaders should fight this plan in every way. Getting organized was a good first step. We hope the committee from this area made some headway in Raleigh today.

THIS AFTERNOON

Some Will Suffer

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — A couple of old saws tell us that our forebears knew about as much concerning health as modern, expensive medicine can tell us.

The old folks were fond of saying, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away," and, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Modern day health specialists are returning to the old notions.

When Blue Cross-Blue Shield unveiled its new plan for financing health care insurance for governmental employees and large corporations, the keystone was seen to be not just encouraging people to stay healthy, but building programs and incentives to see that this happens.

One of the foundation ingredients in the new wave of group health plans just coming into action can be seen in the common name applied: Health Maintenance Organization.

The concept is simple — if the participant and the physician both receive immediate and direct benefits in dollars from better diets, more exercise, and early attention to problems before expensive hospitalization, treatment, or surgery is needed, everybody wins.

Technology
Dr. Arden Miller, chairman of the maternal and child health department at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a consultant to the Select Panel on the Promotion of Child Health for the U.S. Senate is among those who think prevention is a key to better health in the future. It is not the world of glamor medicine with its emphasis on expensive high technology, crisis response, and gleaming new buildings which are changing our lives for the better. It's a lower birth rate, decent housing, sanitation of food and water supplies, and better nutrition.

Miller is worried, though,

that when the Congress and the Reagan administration continue their deep budget cutting, it will be the "simple" programs which suffer. The traditional health care industry with lobbyists and much public attention is better equipped to survive. The less glamorous things like feeding pregnant women and screening and correcting potential problems from birth to elementary school might feel the axe.

A scary idea of what lies ahead can be seen in the early stages of power maneuvering over federal block grant dollars. The hundreds of categorical programs which pay for special things like feeding women and children are being dumped and replaced by big chunks of money which local and state governments can spend as they choose.

Already the leaders of the North Carolina General Assembly have taken steps to assure a major hand in the division of block grant funds.

Power
That step almost certainly means that a bigger proportion of the money will remain at the state level rather than being passed through to more local programs. And it also means that with a limited number of dollars, some programs will suffer. Who has the political clout to keep their money flowing? Certainly not little children and poor women.

A look back provides the clues. When federal grants first came on line, the rush was on to build new buildings and buy expensive equipment. Evidence can be seen in every health department, mental health agency, hospi-

Other Editors Say Well-Meant, But--

(Washington Daily News)

The 1981 North Carolina General Assembly passed a law which has wonderful implications on one side but it could prove rather tragic in application.

The law gives state district attorneys the right not to prosecute in certain cases in which the defendant could face no more than a 10-year prison term. This type of discretion is certainly well-meaning, but it places district attorneys in a most difficult if not impossible position.

Under terms of this law many serious crimes could just be dismissed and nothing would ever come up about them provided those so charged would agree to certain stipulations of the district attorney.

Those involved would be first offenders who might face what is called "delayed prosecution". If they behaved for two years and met the criteria set forth by the district attorney, then all would be forgotten. No mark would then appear against his record.

Now suppose that we have two defendants in court and both are charged generally with the same crime. One is "dismissed" under the terms of this law by the district attorney while the other is tried, found guilty, and sentenced to the full 10 years in prison. Will not people rise up in indignation to see such a difference made?

Will not district attorneys be placed constantly on a hot seat from which they cannot escape? It seems to us that they will. And it seems to us that if district attorneys sit down and give full and conscientious thought to this law, they would not want it nor would they want or seek to use it now.

The desired end of every judicial body is justice. And exactly what constitutes pure justice so often is the definition within a person's mind. But make no mistake about one fact. If we allow one fellow to walk out of court free on a robbery charge in which he admits his guilt while another fellow goes to prison for 10 years, then surely and positively we have far more people thinking in terms of justice than of equity.

Again, this is a well-meaning law. If a citizen makes a mistake for the first time, we all are usually willing to offer compassion and sympathy, provided of course that the infraction is not too serious. But usually people want participation through the customary route of a jury and a judge with legal talent representing both sides. They want an open trial in which the evidence comes out. We can understand in part why the law was passed; but we cannot understand how it can be administered in the interest of better justice.

WHY NOT---ISN'T EVERYBODY ELSE?

A Question Of Weight

The American political landscape is littered with the carcasses of candidates and officeholders who underestimated the political skills and appeal of Ronald Reagan.

From California Gov. Pat Brown, who celebrated Reagan's 1966 gubernatorial nomination, to President Jimmy Carter, whose aides openly hoped to run against Reagan in 1980, opposing politicians were convinced that Reagan was too "simple-minded," too casual with facts, to compete successfully in the political arena.

Now the president's performance at a recent press conference — his most disastrous since his inauguration — has triggered a new burst of criticism at Reagan's persistent habit of misstating reality. But neither Reagan's friends nor foes have yet focused on two key questions: Why has Ronald Reagan survived his habitual collision with the facts; and why is this habit more dangerous to him and to his administration now than it has ever been?

The 1980 presidential campaign was filled with examples of Ronald Reagan's unfamiliarity with the underlying truth of his assertions. He said that General Motors had 25,000 employees who spent their time filling out government forms. The correct number was one-fifth the size, and most of them were collecting tax information. He said Vietnam veterans were not covered by the GI Bill; they were. He ascribed a figure to the overhead costs of government social programs that was wildly off-base. He suggested a policy of aiding Afghanistan freedom fighters that directly violated a federal law Mr. Reagan did not know existed.

These fumbles were given prominent play on network news programs, in major newspapers and in weekly news magazines. And they had no impact whatever on Mr. Reagan's electoral success.

Why? Several reasons seem clear. First, Mr. Reagan was asserting facts to support general propositions with which most Americans agreed. If he was wrong about the dollars and manpower needed to comply with government regulations, most people clearly believed that government regulation was too burdensome and too costly. Jimmy Carter had argued the same point during his 1976 campaign. If Mr. Reagan was wrong about benefits available to Vietnam veterans, he was right about the scandalous mistreatment of the Vietnam veteran once he came home. In other words, he may have had the composition of the road wrong, but he was at least going in the right direction.

Second, so thoroughly had Mr. Reagan captured the heart and soul of the Republican Party that none of his rivals — with the quixotic exception of John Anderson — sought to challenge the substance of his arguments.

They were all hoping to inherit the Reagan constituency through tactical political success; and none of them had any interest in alienating that constituency by suggesting that Mr. Reagan did not know what he was talking about.

Finally, Mr. Reagan was running against a president who had failed utterly to establish himself as a figure of weight. The economic chaos, the personal weakness, the escapades of family and staff had combined to paint Mr. Carter as a presidential lightweight. And when a candidate with a reputation for incompetence attacks the seriousness of his opposition, such a charge lacks punch.

Why, then, is Mr. Reagan's carelessness with facts — about the size of the work force, the success of volunteerism, the history of the IRS policy on tax-exemption for segregated schools — so much more of a danger now?

The answer is because he is no longer a candidate, or an after-dinner speaker. He is the president, with literal life-and-death power over ten millions of people. His words count for more because they are issued with the weight of a great power behind them. It may be an attractive attribute of his character that Mr. Reagan does not take himself all that seriously. But that is a luxury the office of the president does not permit. The world hangs on Mr. Reagan's words because we will prosper or suffer, survive or fall, based on his decisions.

Shakedown In Education

By MAXWELL GLEN and CODY SHEARER

WASHINGTON — Not all high school seniors regard their last semester as a carefree picnic. Uncertainty about direction and success in the post-graduate years can spoil everything.

Squeezed between unemployment and high college costs, students are probably more anxious than normal.

At a recent gathering here of high school students from Louisiana, a spectacled senior approached us for advice.

Within a few weeks, he'd be enrolling in college. Under new rules for Social Security recipients, passed by Congress, he had to begin college early or lose educational benefits.

Our acquaintance turned out to be one of at least 150,000 American high school seniors who, the Social Security Administration says, must enroll in college by May 1 to sustain their government benefits. Approximately 700,000 children of disabled, deceased or retired parents received an average of $3,000 in student assistance last year. By spring of 1985, under current law, these benefits will have dried up for those still in the program.

Though the New Orleans native relished beating the congressional cutoff date, he had little understanding of why he was going to college. He'd considered journalism, but was open to other fields of study.

Panic over student assistance and high tuition has buried more important questions about the purpose and value of an undergraduate education. While families are scurrying to find the ways and means to a college degree, even college professors are unsure it's worth the hassle.

Only recently has the academic community decided to make a serious evaluation of the undergraduate degree. Last month, the Association of American Colleges established a 17-member commission of college professors and administrators to study criticisms that baccalaureate programs had forsaken breadth for specialization.

According to commission member Elizabeth Coleman, dean of New York's New School for Social Research, "More and more, economic and career concerns are at odds with the critical intellectual values of undergraduate education.... You no longer have to be on the outskirts of education to raise pointed questions."

In forthcoming commission meetings, however, Coleman admits that one important question may never come up: Must America's high schools be radically restructured to assure that entering freshmen know why they've matriculated to college?

Of course, many American teenagers, including those who have gone through the trauma of a parent's death or disability, are ready for a college education at 18.

Yet, all too frequently, today's high school graduate becomes an undergraduate thanks simply to age. As a result, the first two years, if not the entire college experience, end up as a mishmash of kegs, standardized course selection and faculty acquiescence.

Mark H. Curtis, the association's president who convened the baccalaureate degree study, admits that "early college" programs such as Simon's Rock, in Massachusetts, can in some cases better prepare American students for a specialized university experience. At Simon's Rock — part of New York's Bard College — students can enroll for two or four years, beginning in what would be their junior year of high school. The overlapping arrangement helps to transform directionless teenagers into degree-holders armed for the real world.

It's no secret that in four years, public high schools can't adequately prepare everyone for what lies ahead. Nor can competency requirements do the trick when they don't reflect the highest scholastic standards.

Since colleges can't afford to reduce an already declining applicant pool, PTA's and principals may have an obligation to discourage the almost automatic "trickle-up" to college.

Strength For Today

LOVE IN THE WORLD

If you have love in your life, you have everything.

This statement may seem both trite and exaggerated, but there is a great deal of truth in it. Newspapers and the media bring us every day all the things which are anti-love — wars, assassinations, political turmoil, divorce. But love has by no means such a good press. We read little about the thousands of men and women who love each other so deeply that they in effect live for each other. Some friendships have this quality about them, also the love which parents have for children in well-integrated families.

These people know by experience that when they have love they have everything. The person who derides this statement simply does not know what he is talking about because he has never experienced love in this fashion. Love is the only way one can understand God. As Jesus said, "Love is of God, and everyone who loveth is born of God and knoweth

$247 Billion For Health Care

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (P) — In 1980,

Americans spent $247.2 billion on health care, an amount that accounted for 9.4 percent of the nation's entire output of goods and services.

What a business! Housing and automobiles might get mired in cyclical recessions every few years and stay there for many months at a time, but health care never does. Never. Americans can't get enough of it.

Each year families pay more for medicines and treatments and hospital stays. Not once in the past 15 years has the yearly increase been less than 10.4 percent. The share of personal health care expenditures for the average family in 1980 was $2,850. It might reach $8,000 by 1990.

After that it's anybody's guess, because inflation is just one of any factors involved in the rising costs.

Medical progress, for example, has made health care more effective, but also more costly. Aging population adds another cost factor. So does the prevalence of long-term illnesses, such as heart disease, as opposed to short-term, acute infectious diseases, some of which have been controlled. Some authorities add other factors, such as abuse and poor administration of health facilities and health insurance programs.

So relentless are the factors that it seems any lowering of health care costs depends, of all things, on spending more money. That is the conclusion reached by officials of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, which today offered up to $16.2 million to help cut health care costs.

David Rogers, president of the foundation, second in size only to the Ford Foundation, said it may be increasingly difficult to respond to medical needs, especially those of the poor and elderly. Americans, suggested an aide, might be reaching a limit on the amount of money they are able to devote to health care. What kind of a life is it, another suggested, if you can afford a hospital but not a house?

Rogers' notion, therefore, is to concentrate on innovative approaches to health care financing and changing the organization and procedures of community health care services. He emphasizes "community."

Under his plan, leaders of medical, insurance, business, labor and other groups would join together to investigate solutions.

In the first stage of the foundation's program, grants of up to $100,000 each will be made over 18 months to as many as 12 communities to help them develop projects for lowering costs.

In the second stage, up to 10 communities might receive grants of up to $1.5 million each to implement proposed multi-year projects. The grants, he said, will be made to single nonprofit entities that can show they are able to mobilize other groups as co-sponsors.

Two more qualifications: The cooperative undertakings must be in communities with populations 250,000 or more, and co-sponsors must provide matching funds equal to at least 50 percent of the grants.

Rogers said that while the foundation had been developing its plan for two years, it now finds the timing especially appropriate because of the shift in responsibility to local government and the private sector.

Various groups long have sought answers to the problems but often in isolation from other elements of the health care system. For the most part they failed, Rogers thinks one reason they failed is that the links in health care are inextricably connected rather than isolated.

He suggested some possibilities that could be considered for grants. One of them: A new method of reimbursing hospital and doctors, "possibly on the basis of a fixed annual amount per person treated," with an emphasis on ambulatory care "that could minimize the need for costly inpatient hospital treatment."

Some others: Restructuring insurance benefits to make users and providers more sensitive to costs; multi-institution efforts involving closing, converting and merging services or facilities, such as hospitals and nursing homes; combining high technology and high cost services, such as open-heart surgery, burn units and labs, on a regional basis.

West Planning Sharp Criticism Of Polish Regime

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent

LONDON (AP) — The United States and its European allies plan a series of broadsides against the martial law regime in Poland when the European Security Conference reopens in Madrid next week. But the Soviet Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today that the Kremlin will "resolutely oppose" Western plans to discuss the Polish situation at the Madrid Conference. Calling such talk a "provocative scheme," the Pravda commentary said the Polish question has "nothing whatsoever in common with the contents of the work, the nature and the objectives of the Madrid meeting." Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and more than 10 West European foreign ministers are expected to attack the Polish government and the Soviet Union when the 35-nation East-West conference meets Tuesday.

The 16 nations of the European Common Market and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization decided in January to send their foreign ministers to Madrid to zero in on the Polish crisis.

Stormy retorts and procedural snarls are expected from Soviet Bloc representatives.

Western diplomats say their ministers will focus on violation of human rights by the Polish regime and alleged Soviet interference in Polish affairs.

The allied ministers also are expected to try to align Western views on how best to react to the Polish crisis.

Although most of the European allies have condemned the Dec. 13 imposition of martial law, they have not joined the United States in economic sanctions against Poland and the Soviet Union.

Both West Germany and France have come down hard against economic sanctions, with French Premier Pierre Mauroy saying any idea of an economic blockade would be an "act of war."

France, West Germany and Italy have made it clear they will go ahead with a project to bring Siberian natural gas to Western Europe, something the United States opposes because it fears it will make Western Europe too dependent on Soviet energy supplies.

West must take "serious actions commensurate with our concern" about Poland.

West Germany's attitude on sanctions will be discussed when Haig meets with West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher on Monday.

Among the foreign ministers due in Madrid is Greece's Ioannis Haralambopoulos, but he may be less eager than his colleagues to join in a strong condemnation.

One of his deputies endorsed such a resolution at a Common Market meeting in January, and Premier Andreas Papandreu fired him and disavowed the condemnation. Greece recently agreed to let Soviet merchant ships refurbish in Greek ports despite U.S. objections.

The European Security Conference is shorthand for the Second Review Session of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. The Madrid meeting began Nov. 11, 1980, to discuss violations of the Helsinki "Final Act," a lengthy document signed in 1975 by leaders of the 35 nations, including Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Ford. They pledged to respect national sovereignties and a list of human rights.

New Chorus On Campus

ECU News Bureau

East Carolina University has a new chorus — composed of 60 students who sing for enjoyment and creative expression.

The group, called the ECU Residence Hall Chorus, is made up entirely of students residing in the dormitories. Their conductor is Dr. Charles Schwartz, the new dean of ECU's School of Music.

A noted conductor and choral director, Dr. Schwartz became dean of the ECU music school last summer. He was previously dean of the Lawrence University Conservatory, Appleton, Wis. He has also been director of choral activities at the University of Minnesota and cofounder-coordinator of the widely acclaimed High School Musicians Project in Minnesota.

Any interested student may join the chorus, which was first formed last semester. Rehearsals are held each Monday from 7-8 p.m. in the Biology Auditorium.

Officers of the Residence Hall Chorus are Daphne Dunston of Washington, D.C., president; Jayne Nichols of Annandale, Va., vice president and Ted Pehovic of Jacksonville, secretary-treasurer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Overriding his fiscal advisers, President Reagan is proposing in his new budget that much of the U.S. planetary exploration program be kept alive.

Just three months ago, the Office of Management and Budget recommended killing most deep space exploration projects in its drive to cut federal spending.

The effort met strong opposition from scientific organizations and congressmen on key space committees who took their case to the White House.

As a result, Reagan has put funds for several deep space projects in his fiscal 1983 budget. Included is $92.6 million to continue development of the Jupiter-orbiting Galileo satellite; $21 million to move ahead with several European nations on a joint sun-probe mission; and money to maintain the deep space tracking network and to allow the Voyager 2 spacecraft to travel on to Uranus and Neptune.

If OMB had succeeded in dropping the planetary programs, it would have meant the loss of about 1,200 jobs at NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., which manages the agency's deep space efforts.

The president is to submit his full 1983 budget to Congress on Monday. The Associated Press on Wednesday obtained an advance copy of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration section.

Reagan proposes total NASA spending of $6.6 billion. Factoring in inflation, that's about equal to 1982's $5.98 billion.

A major share of the 1983 budget, $1.7 billion, is for the manned space shuttle, which is to complete its test program with flights in March and July and to start cargo-carrying operational missions in November. A second shuttle, the Challenger, is to join the Columbia at Cape Canaveral, Fla., in June.

Another $1.7 billion is earmarked for space flight operations, mainly for the shuttle.

Reagan is a strong supporter of the reusable spaceship, primarily because of its potential military applications.

NASA didn't get all it wanted in deep space. It lost a Venus orbiter and a probe to Halley's comet. Other projects were scaled down or stretched out. But, considering the bleak outlook a couple months ago, it came out pretty well.

The proposed budget also includes $137.5 million, $61.7 million and $34.5 million, respectively, for continued development of three major orbiting satellites: a space telescope, an advanced Landsat Earth Resources payload and a gamma ray observatory; $100 million for construction of facilities; and $1.17 billion for research and program management.

Aeronautical research dipped slightly, from $233 million in 1982, to $232 million. Heaviest cuts were in technology for transport aircraft and advanced propulsion.

The budget projects total NASA employment of 21,219 by the Sept. 30, 1983, the end of fiscal 1983. This would be a drop of more than 400 from the projected 1982 figure of 21,652.

Testing Drug For Sickle Cell

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Physicians at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill are experimenting with a drug that may be the most effective treatment yet for sickle cell disease.

The scientists are joining with researchers in California, New York and Mobile, Ala., to evaluate cetiedil, a compound first synthesized in France 20 years ago.

"This is something we're very excited about," said Dr. Eugene P. Orringer, associate professor of medicine and principal investigator for the project.

"We're testing the ability of cetiedil to shorten the acute painful crises of sickle cell disease and to reduce their severity. If we're able to show that it relieves crises once they have begun, then we will test its ability to prevent them," he added.

Sickle cell disease is a hereditary illness suffered most commonly by blacks.

Cetiedil was developed originally as a muscle relaxant to improve circulation to the legs of patients with hardening of the arteries. Orringer said. Because of its success and its additional properties as a local anesthetic, French physicians speculated that it also might help to curb the intense pain sickle cell victims experience.

"Although no controlled studies were carried out, initial reports that came primarily from west Africa claimed that the drug was extremely effective," Orringer noted.

By May, Orringer, Dr. Leo R. Berkowitz, a fellow in hematology and Sam Sparrow, coordinator of the UNC Sickle Cell Program, hope to recruit 25 patients who are 19 years of age or older. Whenever possible, the physicians will interview each individual before a crisis begins so that they can explain the study clearly.

Cannon Mills Purchased At Price Of $413 Million

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — David H. Murdock, described by some as a self-made millionaire who usually gets what he wants, has bought Cannon Mills at a purchase price of $413 million.

The sale was made official Wednesday when Murdock acquired 72 percent of Cannon's outstanding stock, although he could obtain more before his offer of $44 a share expires at midnight Friday.

In a prepared statement, Murdock announced that 6,754,858 shares, of total outstanding stock in Cannon had been tendered by 5 p.m. Wednesday. Murdock is the chairman and sole stockholder of Pacific Holding Co., which now owns Cannon Mills. All shares tendered have been accepted for payment "as soon as possible."

Murdock had previously owned 5.1 percent of the stock and added the other 72 percent this week. Among the shares purchased was a block of 27 percent that had been held in trust.

The sale came almost a month after his Jan. 4 bid to buy the company at $40 a share. He raised his offer to $44 a share in the interim.

He bought Cannon with a minimum of cash up front — $40 million. He actually borrowed the remaining $373 million against Cannon's assets.

"He used Cannon to buy Cannon," said textile analyst Kay Norwood of Interstate Securities in Charlotte. She said such actions are called a

"leveraged buy-out."

In his prepared statement, Murdock said, "I am confident that Cannon will continue to grow and prosper. I intend to take those actions necessary to provide a successful future relationship between the company and its employees, customers and community. Everything possible will be done to build upon the outstanding reputation of the company and its people."

Murdock, 58, has been described by the New York Times and Fortune magazine as a shrewd, self-made millionaire who gets what he wants. Fortune, in a 1979 profile entitled "The Man Who Collects Companies," said Murdock owned $100 million in real estate, $50 million in Union Oil, and $34 million in Iowa Beef Processors, the nation's largest beef processor.

Immediate speculation was that Murdock's takeover was a "hostile" one, partly because Cannon's board opted against advising shareholders to accept Murdock's offer. The offer was deemed a fair one, however, by Cannon's investment counselors, and the board took a neutral position.

The sale is a most important one to the 36,000 people in the town of Kannapolis, N.C., most of whose livelihoods are connected directly with the mill. Cannon Mills nearly owns the unincorporated town and has operated it in a paternalistic fashion that includes cut-rate housing and subsidized police and fire protection.

William C. Cannon Sr., the company's major individual stockholder and grandson of founder James W. Cannon, was said to be unavailable for comment Wednesday night.

Last Friday, Cannon told a group of people gathered for a weekly luncheon in Cabarrus County that he had just attended his "funeral." After a meeting with bankers last week, Cannon said he "held out to the very last, but it is gone..."

President Lauds Dozier Courage In Captivity

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today praised Brig. Gen. James L. Dozier's bravery during 42 days of terrorist captivity and told the 50-year-old general: "Welcome home, soldier."

Reagan, addressing the general and hundreds of other guests at today's annual National Prayer Breakfast, said:

"Gen. Dozier, I know you don't like being praised for what you only consider doing your duty. Forgive me, I'm going to pull rank on you."

Reagan told the audience that it has been said a hero is no braver than anyone else, but is just "brave five minutes longer."

"General, you were brave 42 days longer," the president told him, adding:

"We want to give thanks to God for answering our prayers; we want to salute the Italian authorities for their brilliant rescue, and, Jim, we just want to thank both you and Judith (Dozier's wife) for your gallantry."

"Welcome home, soldier."

Dozier, Reagan's guest at the breakfast at a Washington hotel, then rode to the White House in a motorcade and posed for pictures in the Oval Office.

One week ago, Dozier was freed from his Red Brigades captors by Italian police commandos.

Before beginning a leave of absence, Dozier also will brief Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and hold a press conference at the Pentagon.

That will be his last official duty for a while.

"He'd like to be sort of left to his own devices to rest and catch up and relax a bit," said Pentagon spokesman Henry Catto.

Dozier, who was held captive for 42 days, was welcomed home Wednesday at Andrews Air Force Base by Vice President George Bush.

"I don't think there are any ribbons for valor in the face of kidnapping, but if there were one, someone would be pinning it on him today," said Bush.

Dozier told his well-wishers that he wanted to thank everyone for their prayers and "those of us who were the object of your prayers could feel what was coming across."

In a tribute to Italian law enforcement agencies, he said their "careful planning and impeccable execution and professionalism made it possible for me to be standing here today."

"It's doggone good to be home," he said.

The general said he experienced "excruciating boredom" during his captivity and was forced to wear earphones and listen to hard rock music.

Band Workshop To Get Underway Here Friday

The 1982 N.C. Band Association Workshop (Eastern Division) will feature guest clinicians as well as members of the ECU School of Music faculty.

The annual workshop, to be held Friday and Saturday in A.J. Fletcher Music Center on the East Carolina University campus, offers clinics for band directors and for 200 high school musicians selected by audition.

One of this year's featured clinicians will be Kenneth Bloomquist, chairman of the department of music at Michigan State University. Bloomquist, who holds degrees from the University of Illinois, was with the U.S. Army Band, 1953-55. He has taught in Illinois, in Kansas — where he was director of bands at the University of Kansas — and since 1970 has been on the music faculty at

One Man Survives A Liferaft Ordeal

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — A 27-year-old member of Canada's 1980 Olympic team was recovering in a hospital here after being rescued from a tiny rubber life raft off Puerto Rico. His companion, however, died during their ordeal at sea.

Dr. Pickens Gantt, doctor aboard the cruise ship the Starward, which made the rescue Wednesday, said survivor Phil Hepburn, an Olympic canoeist of Toronto was "quite dehydrated." He said Hepburn did not know that his friend, Alvin Brien, 25, of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, had died.

Brien and Hepburn left San Juan on Jan. 14 in a 36-foot sailing yawl en route to Miami via the Bahamas.

Capt. Jan Fjeld Hansen, the second in command aboard the Starward, said the yawl apparently caught fire and the men abandoned ship in a raft.

He said that when the Starward approached the life raft, Heyburn called out: "Hurry up, hurry up, my friend is dying."

Vivian Wharton, one of the passengers aboard the ship, said Brien's head was in the water.

The captain of the Starward and three crew members jumped into the ocean about 20 miles north of Puerto Rico to make the rescue. "We couldn't lower the boat," he said. "The sea was too rough."

He said Hepburn "told us they were eating seagulls and fish. They also had problems with the raft."

In Halifax, friends and associates of Brien, a member of the national canoe team, remembered him as a strong athlete who was soft-spoken and determined.

"He was a real gentleman, that's the way he was," said Frank Garner, his team coach. "He had the respect of all the other athletes on the team. I never heard anyone say anything against Alvin."

Pet Lioness Causes Stir

CLEVELAND (AP) — Donald DeMeo's pet lioness really has no idea what a stir she's causing — not with the city health department, but with a finance company DeMeo owes money to.

The finance company judged that DeMeo, his wife, Debra, and their three children really didn't have anything of value with which to repay an overdue $1,800 loan.

So it sued to have a levy placed against the DeMeos' 140-pound African lioness, Sheba, with an estimated value of $2,000.

When the DeMeos heard that, they did the only thing they felt they could. They filed for personal bankruptcy.

Sheba and the DeMeos still could part company through the bankruptcy proceedings, but she remains in their custody for now.

"At this point, it's over. We're stayed from doing anything until we meet them in bankruptcy court," said Stanley Green, a lawyer for Avco Financial Services, which took action against the DeMeos.

Sheba is so tame that she's a regular playmate for DeMeo's three sons. Her temper tantrums are short and rare, DeMeo said.

"She's our pet. They can't take her," Mrs. DeMeo said. "I don't know my legal rights or nothing like that, but how can they come and take our pet?"

Michigan, becoming chairman in 1978.

Bloomquist belongs to numerous music organizations, and has been published widely in various music journals from 1963 to date.

Other guest clinicians scheduled to be at the workshop include Al Ascersin, (U.S. Navy, retired) of the U.S. Naval Academy; Earl Taylor, Onslow County schools and chairman of the Eastern Division of the N.C. High School Band Directors; Dottie Knight, Greenville City Schools; and Andrew Preston, Atlantic Christian College.

ECU School of Music faculty members conducting clinics will be John Pederson, David Lewis, James Searl, David Hawkins and Herbert L. Carter, coordinator of the workshop.

In addition to the workshops, two evening concerts are scheduled, both open to the public. The Friday concert will be at 8:15 p.m. and the Saturday concert will be at 7:30 p.m., both to be held in ECU's Memorial Gym on 10th Street.

To Elaborate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David A. Stockman is outlining the Reagan administration's "new federalism" package for a Senate committee whose chairman has already described the plan as "bold" and "innovative."

Sen. William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., said Wednesday the American people want to learn how the plan will promote equity and fairness in announcing that he had summoned Stockman to elaborate on the president's proposals at a Senate Committee of Governmental Affairs hearing today.

It was to be the first congressional airing of Reagan's program to return responsibility for more than 40 federal programs to state and local governments.

"In its broad outlines, the president's proposal is bold, innovative, and very exciting," Roth said. "There will, however, be considerable debate over the specifics of the plan — especially the question of which programs should be administered by which levels of government."

He added: "The American people will also want to learn how the president's proposal will work to ensure equity and fairness."

The cornerstone of the proposal is a $19 billion swap in which the federal government would take over the state share of Medicaid payments for the poor, while the states would assume control of the food stamp program and Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

The federal government also would turn over to the states and cities programs dealing with transportation, community development, education and social services.

The first exchanges would take place in 1984.

For the first three years, the states and communities would be guaranteed their share of a $30 billion federal trust fund to support the programs. Money for the trust fund would come from federal excise taxes and a share of the windfall oil tax.

Reagan told governors and state legislators last week he was willing to compromise on many aspects of his plan.

The president sees the federalism issue as "a two-way street" rather than a "take it or leave it" stance, said White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes.

Although Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., has expressed confidence the overall plan can be enacted this year, Democratic House leaders have made it clear they are in no mood to pass it quickly or easily.

Insurance Program Studied

The Bethel Town Board has taken under consideration a proposal that would establish a hospitalization insurance program for town employees.

The League of Municipalities has offered a bid and local insurance agent David Hill also has submitted a proposal. The Town Board will decide on the program at its next meeting.

Bethel employees now are covered by workman's compensation, which is required by law, but have no hospitalization.

In other business before the board, John Roberson of the Mid-East Commission proposed a plan of issuing identification cards to local contractors.

Alexander J. Lewis was appointed to the Planning and Zoning Board.

Louisa Cox presented the results of the senior citizen survey to the board. She said there was a possibility of getting grants, and that she was available to help the town apply for one. The town board named her in charge of procuring grants.

Douglas Warren met with the board to discuss the recreational needs of Bethel. He proposed using a building on Main Street for recreation.

The next meeting will be on Feb. 16 at 7:30 p.m.

Chosen As ECU Ambassador

Nelson Jarvis of Ayden, a senior industrial technology major at East Carolina University and a member of the Ambassadors student service organization, has been recognized as ECU's "Ambassador of the Month."

Jarvis is past president of the ECU Student Residence Association, a member of Epsilon Pi Tau honor society and chairman of the Ambassadors Program Committee.

In connection with his Ambassador duties, Jarvis is coordinating the Ambassador's "All-Nighter" set for Feb. 26. The event, to be held in Memorial Gymnasium, will include fun and entertainment for all interested persons in the campus and local communities. Activities will begin late Friday evening and continue until daybreak.

Jarvis is also a bluegrass musician and a professional square dance caller in the Pitt County area.

His parents are Harry and Emma Lee Jarvis of Ayden.

PROGRAM PLANNED

An old-fashioned talent and black history program will be rendered at Sweet Hope Free Will Baptist Church beginning at 7:30 p.m. Saturday. The church's pastor, Rev. W.J. Best, invites the public.

IN CONCERT

Bernice Ebron will be in concert at St. Peter Missionary Baptist Church on Saturday at 7 P.M. The concert is sponsored by the St. Peter Home Mission and will be open to the public.

GOSPEL RALLY

BETHEL — The Three Gospel Rally will be held at Mayo Chapel Baptist Church Saturday at 7 p.m.

The speakers will be Rev. W. J. Best and Elder Ray Joyner of Greenville and Rev. Hines. Music will be rendered by Brothers in Christ of Tarboro, and the Community Male Chorus of Bethel.

Nicaraguan Denies Charges His Country Serves As Arms Funnel

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto claims the Reagan administration knows Nicaragua is not funneling arms to Salvadoran guerrillas, but continues to make the accusation to justify American involvement in the conflict.

D'Escoto said in an interview Wednesday his country's proposal for joint Honduran-Nicaraguan patrols of their border could stop any weapons going from Nicaragua through Honduras to El Salvador. But he said the United States had not cooperated when asked to help convince Honduras to agree to the plan.

"Obviously the United States is not concerned about stopping any arms from going from Nicaragua to El Salvador because they know there are none going," D'Escoto told The Associated Press.

"They're concerned about how to justify their increased military intervention and political intervention in El Salvador and one of the means that they have found easiest is to allege that Nicaragua is sending arms to El Salvador. They have never been able to prove it and they are reluctant to cooperate with any action that would prevent that from happening," he said.

In Washington, spokesman Joe Reap of the State Department said there would be "no immediate comment" on D'Escoto's statements.

The Reagan administration announced Tuesday it was sending an additional $55 million in military aid to El Salvador, on top of $26 million approved by Congress one month ago.

D'Escoto said he had urged Haig and Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, to press Honduras to agree to joint border patrols, but was unsuccessful.

D'Escoto, a Maryknoll priest who lived in the United States from 1950 to 1963 and 1970 to 1979, said he had told Secretary of State Alexander Haig that "irresponsible declarations" about Nicaragua from the State Department, and particularly by Haig "were perhaps the fundamental reason for the deterioration in the relationship between our two nations."

Haig told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday that all countries in the Caribbean area face a "growing threat from Cuba and its newfound ally, Nicaragua."

D'Escoto said that while improving relations with the United States was one of Nicaragua's "fundamental priorities," his country "will not buckle down or bend down with American threats or American interventions."

He compared the Reagan administration attitude to that of a colonial power that has lost colonies and feels it may lose more.

D'Escoto arrived Tuesday for a three-day visit sponsored by the Institute for Food and Development Policy, a San Francisco-based organization which advises Nicaragua on agrarian reform. He said he does not plan to meet any U.S. government officials.

He said the patrols would deter any illegal traffic, including weapons, cattle rustling and recent incursions by former Nicaraguan national guardsmen who oppose the leftist Sandinista government. Nearly 200 Nicaraguans have been killed by raiders loyal to the late dictator Anastasio Somoza, overthrown in the Sandinista-led revolution in 1979, he said.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES

The Nazarene Church choir will rehearse Saturday at 4 p.m. Bible school is scheduled for Sunday at 9:30 a.m., followed by morning workshop at 11 a.m. with the Rev. E. B. Williams and the Rev. Alexander delivering the message.

The Mount Zion male chorus of Williamston will present a 3 p.m. musical concert at the church.

Rebuff Change In Assignment

WILLIAMSTON — A decision has been reached by the Martin County Board of Education to continue the current assignment of teacher Edith Leathers at Rodgers School.

At the January meeting, Mrs. Leathers, through an attorney, requested that the board return her to the schedule she taught during the 1980-81 school year. The board, in an executive session, voted to deny the request for a change back to the old schedule for the teacher.

Mrs. Leathers' schedule, along with those of several other teachers, were changed effective for this school year.

It was noted that legal action is a possibility following the board's decision.

The CPA firm of Pittard and Perry was awarded the audit contract of school funds for the fiscal year 1981-82. The firm's low bid was $5,200. The only other bid was a $5,500 proposal by Edwards and Lilley CPA firm of Williamston.

Service Schedule

The Allen Chapel Free Will Baptist Church has announced its schedule this weekend:

The Senior Choir will practice at 7:30 tonight; Friday there will be a board meeting at 7:30 p.m.; Saturday there will be a quarterly conference at 7:30 p.m. with services led by Bishop Phillips; Sunday worship will begin at 11 a.m. with the Rev. J.L. Tyson presiding; Sunday at 3 p.m. there will be a service led by the Rev. H.L. Hill. Dinner will be served at 2 p.m.

Lt. Gov. Green Leads Group On Quick Tour Of 3 Schools

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
North Carolina Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green and Dr. Jerome Melton, deputy superintendent of the State Department of Public Instruction, had a whirlwind tour of three Greenville schools Wednesday, ending with lunch at Aycock Junior High before returning to Williamston.

The two began their Greenville school tour at Elmhurst Elementary, then went to the Greenville Middle School and ended their tour at Aycock.

Green, remarking on the attractiveness of the library at Middle School, asked Principal John Carstarphen, "Where did the money come from to build this fine school?" Carstarphen explained that the school had been constructed from funds derived from the last state school bond issue.

Green, commenting briefly on chances for passage of a proposed one-cent increase in North Carolina sales tax, said, "I think there is a good possibility the Senate will pass the bill, the one the House has already approved.

It is a referendum type bill, one where voters in each county will have an opportunity to vote on.

"I've sent letters to each county board of commissioners, stating that I'm in favor of the sales tax increase, and that I am ready to lend my influence to its passage," Green said.

Green added he does not feel there is much chance to seriously consider other tax sources at this time, for example, excise tax on certain items. "Such taxes would not create revenue in a sufficient amount to do what we need to do," Green commented.

Dr. Melton, making reference to facility needs for schools throughout the state, said "renovation of older structures is certainly a major direction in the state now. We are upgrading many older buildings, making them more functional, more energy efficient.

"However, some old buildings cannot be suitably renovated. The expense cannot be justified," Dr. Melton pointed out.

"Parents naturally are concerned that their children have better facilities, and most of course prefer the idea of new buildings. All of us want to see lots of new schools built," Dr. Melton added. "But for now the emphasis is on renovating, bringing up to higher standards many older facilities.

"For some people," he concluded, "there are also emotional factors involved in saving and using the old schools."

Bill Permits Immediate Tax Withholding Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taxpayers would begin noticing this year's tax cut in their paychecks immediately — instead of having to wait until summer — under legislation introduced by the top-ranking members of the congressional Joint Economic Committee.

Democratic Rep. Henry P. Reuss of Wisconsin, the chairman, and Republican Sen. Roger Jepsen of Iowa, the vice chairman, seldom agree on economic matters. But they told a news conference Wednesday that expediting a change in withholding rates would combat the current recession.

Unless the law is revised, the average 10 percent cut in individual taxes that went into effect on Jan. 1 will not be evident until withholding rates are reduced July 1.

"Now that we are in a recession, with unemployment escalating rapidly, it is essential that some action be taken," Reuss said. "Increasing withholding allowances now will give the economy a stimulus now, when it needs it."

Other members of Congress have offered similar legislation. But Rep. Barber Conable of New York, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, said Wednesday he is opposed. Such tinkering with last year's tax cut might encourage opponents of the reduction to press for their own changes, Conable said.

Interviewed on the CBS "Capitol Cloakroom" program, Conable also said a new tax measure proposed by President Reagan is certain to be rejected by Congress. That plan would require corporations and banks to withhold for taxes 5 percent of dividends and interest.

"That's not going anywhere and he (Reagan) knows that and he shouldn't have made that recommendation," Conable said.

A resolution that would put Congress on record against withholding on dividends and interest was introduced in the House by Rep. Kent Hance of Texas, a leader of conservative Democrats siding with the president during last year's House battles over tax and spending cuts.

Hance said withholding would nullify some of the savings incentives that were part of the tax cut.

The administration proposed withholding on interest and dividends in an effort to catch some tax cheaters. The Treasury Department estimates that as much as 16 percent of such income that would be taxed is never reported.

However, imposing withholding on interest would be a tax increase, because each dollar taken by the government is a dollar that would not benefit from compounding interest.

Withholding would bring the government an extra $2 billion in 1983 and $1.3 billion in 1984, the Treasury Department estimates.

Piedmont Cites Profits Growth Benefits In His Solution

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Piedmont Aviation's earnings for 1981 grew more than 100 percent in 1981 at a time when other airlines have reported sharp losses.

According to the airline, earnings for 1981 grew to $32.5 million, an increase of 102.9 percent over the $16.1 million net income reported for 1980.

Earnings per share rose to $4.12, a 51.5 percent increase. Piedmont reported operating profits for 1981 totaling $57.1 million, also up more than 100 percent. Operating profits are profits before certain deductions such as securities and investments.

In announcing the results, T.W. Morton, senior vice president, said Piedmont's profitability was gratifying in the face of numerous adverse industry trends last year, including high interest rates and limited air traffic control capacity.

Neighbors No Longer Have to Call the Police to Complain About Don McIntyre's Band

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Neighbors no longer have to call the police to complain about Don McIntyre's band.

These days, McIntyre's band is practicing at the police station. And even the police aren't complaining.

"You can't ask for better security," said the 27-year-old McIntyre, whose six-piece band features a combination of jazz, funk, soul and rock. "We are thankful. The Lord works in mysterious ways."

All the band has to do in return for the practice space in the basement of the 4th District Substation is donate its talents for a children's show the police are sponsoring next month.

Police Capt. Gerald Beavers is delighted that the neighbors no longer have to complain about the band, which used to practice in a cramped, second-floor apartment.

"One, a nuisance has been removed from the neighborhood; two, it's made for good relations; three, they have a place to practice; and four, we have something for the kids to do in the neighborhood," Beavers said.

Officer Paul Robertson and his partner answered the last call on McIntyre's band about three weeks ago. The apartment's first-floor neighbor said the music was so loud it shook her windows and walls.

"When we got there, it was loud," Robertson said. "But they sounded pretty good."

With his captain's approval, Robertson offered a new recording studio.

Find Prison Substandard

ATLANTA (AP) — A court-appointed prison-expert says conditions are seriously substandard at the U.S. Penitentiary where immigration officials are holding about 1,400 Cuban refugees.

Ted Gordon of Washington, D.C., who inspected the prison, said in a sealed report that the prison's heating, lighting, ventilation, water and food systems are badly in need of improvement. The Atlanta Journal reported Wednesday.

The newspaper said the report was ordered sealed by a federal judge but attorneys for the government and the Cubans responded to the report's findings last week.

Government officials said the problems mentioned in the report are being improved, the Journal said.

The report was the result of a suit filed three years ago by American prisoners and joined later by the Cubans. The suit claimed living conditions at the penitentiary are "cruel and unusual punishment."

Most of the Cuban refugees now at the penitentiary have been held there almost since they first arrived in the United States in 1980. About 200 others, however, were transferred to the prison last month from a refugee processing center at Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Gordon's findings "clearly support (the Cubans') contentions," the newspaper said, quoting a letter to U.S. District Judge Ernest Tidwell from Deborah Ebel, attorney for the Cubans.

Local Students Earned Degree

GREENSBORO — Two Pitt County students were among 391 persons who completed their degree requirements during the fall semester at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Susanne A. Baker, a communication and theater major with a concentration in communication studies, received her B.A. degree. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Baker of 213 Lewis St., Greenville.

Patience E. Bosley, a biology major, received a B.A. degree summa cum laude. She is the daughter of David E. Bosley of Grifton.

Healthy Hair

NEW YORK (AP) — Hair is simply an outgrowth of the skin and scalp, so the most important consideration for healthy hair is to eat right, says Patrik Moreton, a hair stylist.

When hair is healthy, the outer layer of the strand, or cuticle, is smooth. A damaged cuticle will be rough or broken.

Rule Gunshot Self-Inflicted

NORLINA, N.C. (AP) — Police have ruled that a 42-year-old Norlina man accidentally shot himself to death this week.

Ralph Whitmore, 42, who lived with his mother, Helen Whitmore, was found Tuesday sitting in a kitchen chair at his residence with a single gunshot wound in the abdomen, apparently inflicted by a .357 Magnum pistol loaded with .38-caliber bullets, patrolman C.H. Barker said.

Barker said the wound appeared to have been self-inflicted and evidence indicated the shooting was an accident.

Another Storm Said Moving In To Add To Misery

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Wide areas of the Midwest were immobilized by up to 2 feet of snow that killed motorists and crushed roofs in the second heavy snowfall this week, and more misery was in store as a third storm began moving in from the Rocky Mountains. In Georgia, meanwhile, record floods sent homeowners fleeing, and the Northeast was pelted with freezing rain. The Midwest's second storm, which turned into sleet today over the eastern Ohio Valley, caused fewer problems than earlier storms that have pestered the area this winter. "I think everybody learned their lesson," said Monroe County, Mich., sheriff's dispatcher Betty Miller. "Most people took cover this time."

Experts were called to the Eastern Missouri Correctional Center in Pacific, where the roof of the new $25 million facility began to sag under nearly 2 feet of snow.

In Indiana, 15 members of the Ball State University men's baseball team and six members of the track team escaped injury when a fieldhouse roof caved in. The Howard County Civil Defense maintenance garage in Kokomo collapsed and snow flattened the roof of a commons area at Eastbrook High School near Marion.

In Georgia, forecasters said Sweetwater Creek would crest at 12 or 13 feet above flood stage today at Austell near Atlanta, forcing residents to flee 100 houses and trailers. The creek's greatest flood on record was on Nov. 29, 1949, when it crested at 7.4 feet above flood stage.

Throughout northern Georgia, roads were under water as driving rains forced homeowners to flee and school officials to cancel classes.

Residents of Atlanta suburbs were scooping mud out of their expensive homes today in the wake of the flooding which dropped up to 7.2 inches of rain on Dahlonega.

In the Cobb County subdivision of Fox Hills, where 15 homes were flooded, Dan and Linda Cooper awoke Wednesday morning to what seemed "like an earthquake." "The walls started cracking," Cooper said. "I could feel the floor collapsing beneath us. The water just broke the foundation. It scared the hell out of me."

Flooding eased Wednesday near Oil City, Pa., but authorities continued to attempt to dynamite an ice jam the mouth of Oil Creek.

Rain continued this morning over much of the Northeast with locally heavy rains over southern New England. Travelers advisories were in effect for Vermont and eastern New York state where the mixture of rain, freezing rain and sleet have made travel hazardous.

The new storm moving out of the Rockies dropped temperatures this morning to 31 below zero in Hibbing, Minn., and put the wind-chill factor in the high country of Colorado to near 70 degrees below zero.

Western Oklahoma was expecting up to three inches of snow from the new storm today. The second storm dropped 18 inches of snow on Wayonka, the largest snowfall in the state since 1971. Several motorists stranded near Wayonka were treated for exposure; others slept at a Santa Fe Railroad dormitory.

One of the cities hardest hit by the second storm was St. Louis, where the south suburbs recorded up to 23 inches of snow in the two storms. National Guardsmen remained on the job today for a third straight day trying to clear secondary streets.

In Illinois, where the second storm brought up to a foot of new snow, many schools were closed and officials said trucks were having trouble on inclines covered with 6 to 8 inches of ice.

In Michigan, the second storm added 8 inches of snow to the 10 inches that fell Sunday. Many banks, businesses, schools and federal and county government offices dismissed employees early Wednesday. The Detroit Pistons canceled their professional basketball game in Pontiac, but 17,000 turned out to see Frank Sinatra in Detroit.

In Ohio, where up to 10 inches of new snow fell, the National Guard was called out after seven northwestern counties were declared a disaster area.

North Carolina Growers OK New Federal Peanut Program

RALEIGH, N.C. — The federal government's scaled-down peanut program, which drew criticism from many North Carolina growers, has easily won approval in a statewide referendum.

The mail referendum produced 6,905 votes in favor of the new quota program and 448 against it, said Phillip Farland, assistant chief to the production division of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Raleigh.

Peanut growers voted between Jan. 25 and Jan. 29. Results were tabulated Wednesday.

Several top officials — including Gov. Jim Hunt — felt compelled to urge the farmers to accept the program, which normally receives nearly 100 percent approval.

Their appeals came after a number of growers publicly blasted the program as unfairly harsh on small farmers.

Before the referendum was taken, Norfleet Sugg, executive director of the North Carolina Peanut Growers Association, said some allotments would be lost because of the program's reductions. North Carolina has about 13,500 farms producing peanuts.

But Sugg warned that rejecting the program would mean cancellation of price supports, which could greatly disrupt the industry.

Wednesday, a spokesman for Hunt said the farmers' vote had pleased the governor.

"He put out a statement a few weeks ago calling on the farmers to approve the program, so I know he's gratified by the results," said Hunt press secretary Gary Pearce.

Pearce said he was not surprised by the lopsided vote margin. "People knew about the political situation and they expected the cuts," he said. "I think the vote shows a tremendous degree of support for this and other commodity programs in the state."

If farmers in other peanut producing states vote similarly to North Carolina, the national peanut production quota will be set at 1.2 million tons for 1982. The national voting results were not available Wednesday.

The program calls for price supports on domestic edible peanuts to be no less than 27.5 cents a pound or about $550 per ton, Farland said. Domestic edible peanuts are those sold within the United States as whole peanuts or for use in products like peanut butter or cookies.

Under the program, farmers who attempt to sell such peanuts after the quota has been met are subject to a penalty equal to 140 percent of the support price.

However, surplus peanuts can be exported or crushed for use as oil or meal and then would be covered under a lesser price support.

The new program decreases the quota of last year which was 1.44 million tons. Several North Carolina farmers feared that the program would be detrimental to them because of the decreased quota.

January Auto Sales Dropped

DETROIT (AP) — The Big Three U.S. automakers sold 356,640 cars in January, a drop of 17 percent from the 446,640 cars sold in the same month a year ago, according to company reports today.

Because of an additional selling day this January, the percentage comparison is based on the rate of sales per day, not on the absolute difference between the two figures.

General Motors Corp. suffered the biggest drop, 21.1 percent, with sales of 222,544 cars against 283,219 cars sold in the 1980 month.

Chrysler Corp. sales fell 15 percent and Ford Motor Co. sales dropped 5.7 percent in January compared to the same month a year ago.

Chrysler said it sold 45,290 cars for the month against 55,452 cars in January 1981, while Ford sales of 88,806 cars were down from 97,969 in the same month a year ago.

In the last 11 days of January, GM sales fell 31.6 percent to 79,016 cars from 128,398 cars sold in the Jan. 21-31 period of 1981. Again, the percentage comparison is based on the daily selling rate.

Chrysler's decline for the month included a 23.6 percent plunge in sales during the late January period. The No. 3 automaker sold 15,719 cars in the period against 22,875 in the same period last year.

Ford sales in the late January selling period were down 0.2 percent, to 38,376 cars from last year's 42,731 cars.

Jones Paces 8th Straight For Women

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina's Lady

Pirates, again paced by the play of wing Sam Jones, rolled to their eighth straight victory last night, downing East Tennessee State, 76-63. Jones dumped in 21 points to pace the Pirate scoring, as East Carolina boosted its record to 12-7 on the season.

However, center Mary Denkler suffered an ankle injury midway through the second half, and Coach Cathy Andruzzi was somewhat worried about her availability for Sunday's matchup with nationally ranked N.C. State.

"She won't practice for a couple of days to see how it comes along," Andruzzi said. Denkler, however, said she thought she would be ready to go on Sunday.

The Lady Pirates led throughout the contest, taking the lead on a Lillian Barnes jumper from the foul line after just ten seconds of play. Denkler added one from almost the same spot 30 seconds later for a 4-0 lead and East Tennessee never caught up.

However, the Buccaneers, now 18-6, did manage to keep the pressure on the Pirates. Several times, East Carolina would move out to as much as a ten point lead, only to have East Tennessee rally to within around four.

"I can't say enough for our kids," Andruzzi said afterwards. "They played a heck of a game under the conditions we had to work under. With Mary on the bench hurt and Lillian in foul trouble, we had to go with a very inexperienced team out there, and they did the job against a very powerful East Tennessee team. It was a great team effort."

Barnes drew the task of guarding East Tennessee's Marsha Cowart, who scored a then-school record 35 points against ECU last year, and who came into the game with a 24.4 average, eighth in the country among Division I schools. In the first half, Barnes and Jones, who took over Cowart when Barnes went to the bench, held the scoring ace scoreless. In the second half, Cowart, working very hard to get open, finally managed nine points and fouled Barnes out after only 20 minutes of play.

At the same time, Cowart got into foul trouble in the first half, playing only eight minutes before picking up her third and going to the bench. "We stopped their key people," Andruzzi said. "Cowart got only nine, and their second scorer (Lori) Hines got only six. The others came through for them, but you've got to stop the power. I think we took them completely out of their game."

The Lady Pirates forced East Tennessee into 27 turnovers, while committing 10 less. "Seventeen turnovers isn't bad against their pressure defense. I guess the low spot had to be our foul shooting (50 percent). That could have hurt us.

"But we kept the lead in crucial moments," Andruzzi continued. "We didn't play to lose, we played to win and didn't stop doing the things we needed to do, even without Mary and Lillian in there. And I'm surprised that we controlled the boards like we did (38-30); they're so much taller than we are."

Freshman Darlene Chaney, playing only 26 minutes, ripped off a game-high ten rebounds, while scoring 11 points, including several crucial rebounds she turned into baskets. "Both Darlene and Loraine (Foster), our freshmen, got some crucial offensive plays for us," the coach said. "(Fran) Hooks did a great job in running our offense and stopping Hines. We made them work for their shots, and that's real important."

During the first ten minutes of the game, the Lady Pirates slowly inched away from the Buccaneers, easing out to a ten point lead at 21-11 with 10:02 left in the half. That came on a Foster jumper. East Tennessee, however, pushed through six quick points, four by Margaret Ann Stroup, to cut the lead to 21-17, before the Lady Pirates began to inch away again.

Twice more, late in the half, the Lady Pirates again led by ten, the last time at 41-31, before taking a 41-33 halftime lead.

East Carolina continued to threaten to break the game open during the second half, but each time ETSU would put on a rally, cutting it back from as much as nine down to four on several occasions, the last at 58-54 with 8:04 left as Sherri Tynes hit from the baseline.

But East Carolina got an inside basket from Loletha

Harrison, a jumper by Jones and a free throw from Hooks to turn the lead back out to nine, 63-54.

East Tennessee cut it back to six, 64-58, but the Pirates pulled away after that. They still held only an eight point lead, 69-61, with 1:58 left, but the Lady Pirates scored seven of the final nine points in the game to make it as much as a 14-point lead before the final horn.

In addition to the 21 of Jones and 11 of Chaney, Denkler and Foster each added 13 for the Pirates. East Tennessee was led by Tynes with 16, while Leigh Jaffke had 14 and Jackie Phillips hit 13.

The Lady Pirates return to action on Sunday at 3 p.m. in Mingos Coliseum, hosting N.C. State's Lady Wolfpack.

Rebound Try

East Tennessee's Regina Blair (22) leaps for a rebound during action last night against East Carolina's Lady Pirates. ECU's Mary Denkler (35) and Lillian Barnes (25) join in the action as ETSU's Jackie Phillips (42) watches. East Carolina downed ETSU, 76-63, for its eighth straight win. Mason's Yates Tops Loop Play

George Mason's Carlos Yates, a freshman guard, has been named the ECAC-South Player of the Week.

It was earlier announced that East Carolina's Bruce Peartree was named as the Rookie of the Week.

Yates scored a career high 28 points and pulled ten rebounds against Old Dominion. Currently the third leading scorer in the conference, Yates scored 22 against James Madison, and over the last eight games is scoring at a 22.0 clip.

Peartree, a freshman guard, scored ten points in a victory over UNC Charlotte, and 20 in a loss to Richmond. He was 13 of 22 (59 percent) from the floor during the week.

James Madison's Linton Townes, a senior forward, was named to the ECAC Honor Roll for his play during the week. Townes scored 35 points, grabbed 19 rebounds and had six assists in two Madison victories.

Old Dominion's Mark West continues as the league's leading scorer, having moved out of a tie with Richmond's John Schweitzer for that honor. West currently holds down a 17.2 mark, while Schweitzer is at 16.9. Yates is third at 16.7, followed by Townes at 16.2 and Andy Bolden of George Mason at 15.1.

East Carolina's Charles Green is 13th at 11.1, while Morris Hargrove is 15th at 10.8.

West is also the rebounding leader, pulling down 10.2 per game. Teammate Ronnie McAduo is second at 8.2, followed by Andre Gaddy of George Mason at 7.5.

Hargrove stands ninth in rebounding at 5.6, while Greene and Michael Gibson are tied for 15th at 4.1.

Tony Byles stands third in field goal percentage at 59.0, while Greene is 13th at 50.3. Al Mack is 15th at 50.0. Green in ninth in steals with 20, while Byles is seventh in assists with 38.

Denkler, Jones Among Leaders

East Carolina's Mary Denkler and Sam Jones continue to show up among the leaders in the Division I women's basketball teams in North Carolina, each leading the state in one category.

Denkler, who has led the state in scoring all year, continues in that lead, despite having dropped her average to 19.9. Jones currently stands third in scoring with a 16.4 average. Between them is Appalachian State's Muriel Higginbotham at 16.9.

Denkler and Jones both are among the leaders in free throw percentage. Denkler stands fourth at 80.0, while Jones is ninth at 74.6. Appalachian's Betsy McLelland leads the state at 83.7.

Denker and Jones also are among the rebounding leaders. Denkler is second at 8.3, while Jones is ninth at 6.6. Loletha Harrison also shows up in the rebounding, tied for tenth at 6.5

per game. Higginbotham leads the state with an 11.9 average. Jones paces the state in assists with 5.9 per game. Lillian Barnes is sixth at 3.0 and Fran Hooks stands tied for tenth with 2.6 per game.

Jones is second in steals with 2.4 per game, while Barnes is seventh at 1.7 and Loraine Foster is eighth at 1.6. N.C. State's Angie Armstrong leads this category with a 2.7 average.

Armstrong also leads the state in field goal accuracy with a 59.8 percentage. No Lady Pirate appears among the top eight.

East Carolina is third in field goal percentage as a team, hitting 43.4, and is fourth in free throw percentage at 65.9. The Lady Pirates are fifth in rebounding with 39.8 per game.

East Carolina is third in scoring offense, at 70.7, and is second in defense, allowing 61.4.

Cavs Pound Heels; Tigers Stun Pack

By The Associated Press
Third-ranked Virginia had hungered for this rematch ever since it blew a nine-point lead in a 65-60 loss to second-ranked North Carolina earlier this season. And the Cavaliers made the most of it.

They pounded the Tar Heels 74-58 in a nearly flawless college basketball performance that left the North Carolina players and coach Dean Smith shaking their heads.

"If they play as well as that, with the crowd behind them, and as physical as it was and those referees, they'll beat anybody," said Smith, who made no secret of his displeasure with the officiating.

"It was just a physical game." But to James Worthy, the calls made little difference.

"They just played a super game," said the Tar Heel forward. "They've just improved since the last time we played them."

In other Atlantic Coast Conference action Wednesday, improving Clemson defeated struggling N.C. State 65-54. Duke held off Georgia Tech 47-46, and Maryland surprised 13th-ranked Wake Forest 61-56.

All-American center Ralph Sampson, who was practically the whole show for Virginia during the first game against North Carolina, had plenty of support this time. His 18 points and 12 rebounds were supplemented by 20 points and five assists from Othell Wilson and 14 points from Craig Robinson.

The Cavaliers were in command from the outset. They took a 12-point lead early and extended it to as much as 17 before North Carolina got back to within seven. But Virginia promptly spurred again and led by 15 at halftime.

The Tar Heels made another run at the Cavaliers in the second half, again getting to within seven. But then Robinson, who had hit only four points, hit a layup and a minute later hit three straight baskets as Virginia moved comfortably ahead; this time for good.

"Craig Robinson had just a fantastic second half, and I really thought he was the key to stopping Carolina's run," Cavalier Coach Terry Holland said. "We played a good 40 minutes of basketball ... but North Carolina was certainly in the ball game most of the way."

Virginia is atop the ACC with a 7-1 league record and a 21-1 overall mark, though Holland said the win "didn't settle the ACC race by any stretch of the imagination."

North Carolina, which was led by Michael Jordan with 17 points and Sam Perkins with 16, fell to 7-2 in the conference and 16-2 overall.

When North Carolina State whipped Clemson 75-59 earlier this season, the Wolfpack shot well while the Tigers didn't. The situation was reversed Wednesday, as Clemson hit 51.1 percent of its shots while N.C. State made 38.9 percent.

"We just caught Clemson when they're getting hot, when they're on an up-swing," said Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano, who substituted freely in an effort to find someone who could break the scoring drought.

"But nothing seemed to work," he said, as his team suffered its second straight loss and fell to 5-4 in the conference and 15-5 overall. Dereck Whittenburg hit 16 points for the Wolfpack while Thurl Bailey added 15.

Meanwhile, Fred Gilliam, who was nearly silent during the first encounter, hit nine of 13 shots and led all scorers with 21 points. He ignited a Tiger burst midway through the first half, hitting three straight 20-footers, as Clemson broke open a close game.

In the second half, another Tiger rally was led by freshman David Shaffer, who had 14

Georgia Tech beat us twice." The game was close throughout. Maryland led by only 47-46 with 1:34 left, but extended the margin with free throws, upping its league record to 3-5 (12-7 overall). The Terps were led by Adrian Branch's 20 points, while Dutch Morley added 13 and Charles Pittman 12.

Wake Forest, 4-3 and 14-5, was paced by Danny Young with 16 and Jim Johnstone with 12.

Georgia Tech had a second straight ACC victory within its grasp, but it slipped away when with one second left Maurice Bradford missed two free throws.

"I was trying to think, 'Concentrate. Concentrate,'" said Bradford, who saw both shots hit the back of the rim and bounce away.

Duke, now 3-5 in the ACC and 8-10 overall, blew an eight-point lead in the final three minutes. The Yellow Jackets took a 46-44 lead with 21 seconds to go but Vince Taylor, the game's high scorer with 24 points, hit a 12-foot jumper to put the Blue Devils back on top

North Pitt Rolls By Williamston

WILLIAMSTON — Forward Dennis Bradley poured in 25 points and grabbed 14 rebounds to lead North Pitt to a 44-37 victory over Williamston Thursday night in a nonconference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, North Pitt rallied from a four-point halftime deficit to slip past Williamston, 31-25.

The Panthers, now 14-5 overall, jumped out to an 11-5 lead in the first period only to see the Tigers outscore them, 13-7, in the second quarter and tie the game at 18-18 at intermission.

North Pitt managed to go up by one (31-30) at the end of the third quarter and then rolled to a 13-7 advantage in the final eight minutes to capture the victory.

Woody Sadler led

Williamston in scoring with 10 points.

"They played well," North Pitt coach Cobby Deans said of the Tigers, who are now 2-13. "They are a much improved team over the one we played earlier this season."

As for Bradley, who hit nine field goals and seven of 14 from the foul line for his game-high 25 points, Deans said: "He came out fired up and we found four players to go with him and that's who we played. We just really played a lot of people last night."

In particular, Deans cited reserve point guard Greg Briley and reserve center Ken Whitehurst as coming off the bench to spark North Pitt to its second win of the season over Williamston. The Panthers defeated the Tigers, 38-36, in their opening game of season.

Guard Greg Hines, the Panthers' leading scorer, was held scoreless by the Tigers while two other starters — Vince Parker and Toby Crandol — were held to six and four points respectively.

The Panthers also hit just eight of 21 free throws. Williamston did little better, hitting just three of nine from the line.

overall, rallied in the third quarter, however. Sharpe, who did not play in the first half, started the second half and hit five field goals to help the Pant-HERS outscore Williamston, 13-6, and take a 21-18 lead going into the final eight minutes.

The Pant-HERS coasted home with the win by outscoring the Lady Tigers, 10-7, in the fourth period.

North Pitt was led in scoring by Sharpe with 12 points. The 6-0 center also pulled down a game-high 15 rebounds. Williamston was led by Theresa Duffy with 12 points.

North Pitt plays host to D.H. Conley Saturday night in its final home game of the 1981-82 season.

Kings' Coach Suspended Over His Order To Fight

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Kings Coach Don Perry says he won't appeal his 15-day National Hockey League suspension, because he wants to get it over with and forget about it.

"I talked it over with (owner) Jerry Buss and (General Manager) George Maguire. I've been in hockey a long time. I've never seen an appeal get anywhere. Let's get it over with and get down to business," he told the Associated Press Wednesday.

"I feel I'm very fortunate that I have an assistant coach in Brad Selwood who feels the same way I do and is very capable," he said. Perry said Selwood would take over full coaching duties while he's gone.

NHL President John Ziegler announced from New York on Wednesday that Perry had been suspended for ordering Paul Mulvey to leave the bench during an altercation in a game Jan. 24 against Vancouver.

The Kings also were fined $5,000 by the league.

Under Ziegler's order, Perry can neither attend team practices nor exercise any other duty for the Kings or their minor league affiliates during the period of his suspension.

Perry said he thought the penalty was too severe. In fact, he said he didn't think he should have been penalized at all, "but I knew I was going to get some kind of suspension."

"I wasn't sure, though," he said. "But I didn't think it would be nearly as severe as I got. I thought I might get a fine. (Philadelphia coach) Pat Quinn, last year, cleared the whole bench, they went, and he got (suspended for) three games."

"I asked the guy to go out there, he doesn't even go. It doesn't make too much sense."

Asked whether he felt he did anything wrong, Perry said "No, I really don't. I have regrets that the whole thing happened, but I really don't think I did anything wrong."

The Kings issued the following statement from Buss:

"We received notice today of the adjudication of this incident by President John Ziegler. As a member of the National Hockey League, we abide by this decision. It would appear to be a very severe penalty. Nevertheless, we choose to close this incident by waiving our right of appeal."

Maguire called the suspension "unduly severe."

Perry has admitted that he told Mulvey to leave the bench, but he said he told him to help his teammates who were involved in the altercation. Mulvey refused to go. The left wing was later placed on waivers, which he cleared, and was demoted to the Kings' American Hockey League farm team in New Haven, Conn.

To The Editor:
The letter from John Osborne (January 27) in which he advocates ECU competing in Division I-AA needs analyzing both to correct some erroneous information contained therein as well as to give an opposing viewpoint.

The letter seems to reflect an attitude shared by many so-called Pirate fans, to abandon completely the "dreams" of ECU instead of working harder to attain them. Obviously, things are not all rosy in the Pirate camp now and there is still a lot of work to be done and money to be spent before ECU can legitimately claim "big-time" status. However, reaching the top is not supposed to be easy.

The letter also contains at least three major errors. One, ECU can attract more than one Division I-A team to Ficklen Stadium each year; West Virginia and Florida State are already scheduled for 1987. Two, Division I-AA playoffs are not televised nationally. Only the championship game is national, the rest are televised to small regional audiences. I wonder how many fans remember who won the 1981 championship? Three, no-name teams which are easily defeated by the Pirates do not draw well in Greenville. This fact was proven time and time again during the Pat Dye era, so the assumption that a return to that type scheduling would solve the current financial problems is incorrect.

I believe the only "realistic" answer to the dilemma is for all true fans to give Coach Emory the time and financial commitment required to make the Pirates competitive with the Florida States, Missouris and West Virginias on future schedules. A top flight team playing top flight competition would bring the fans to Ficklen. If not, then, and only then, ECU should drop to Division I-AA.

If, say ten years ago, schools such as Florida State, Virginia Tech, Southern Mississippi and Miami, Fla., (schools with programs at that time like ECU's now) had adopted Mr. Osborne's philosophy, where would they be now? Obviously not playing in Peach Bowls, Orange Bowls, Independence Bowls, etc. More importantly, who would give a hoot?

Auburn Trims Kentucky In Overtime

By The Associated Press
The way the Kentucky Wildcats were playing, the Auburn Tigers didn't need any breaks.
But they got one — and it eventually resulted in an 83-81 overtime victory for Auburn over the nation's ninth-ranked college basketball team Wednesday night.
"There's no way to take a basket away from us," said Kentucky Coach Joe B. Hall after a field goal by Derrick Ford in overtime was disallowed because the clock had failed to start when Kentucky threw the ball into play. Officials ruled that all play between the inbound pass and the time when the horn blew was negated.
Hall was, of course, dissatisfied with the explanation. "The clock wasn't running, but there was no justification for taking away the bucket," said Hall. "I've seen games go for two minutes without the clock running and they didn't go back and take away points."

Meanwhile, Auburn stole everything from the listless Wildcats but their sneakers. Auburn "ran a heck of a trap and we just turned the ball over too much," said Hall. "This really damages our Southeastern Conference title chances."
Kentucky had 19 turnovers in the game, 12 after halftime, and Auburn also came up with nine steals.
"Just say we played good," said Auburn Coach Sonny Smith. "The most important thing for us was the change to the half-court trap. We made the steals. Another key was our free-throw shooting." Auburn made 31 of 38 shots from the foul line.

Charles Barkley, Odell Mosteller and Byron Henson scored four points each in overtime to lead Auburn's upset. Trailing 54-43 with 8:54 left in regulation, the Tigers used a trapping zone defense to force Kentucky into errors that enabled Auburn to get back into contention.
Barkley had 22 points, Mosteller 20 and Darrell Lockhart 16 for Auburn, while Jim Master, who scored two uncontested layups for Kentucky at the end, led all scorers with 29 points while Ford had 25. Before Wednesday night's victory, Auburn had lost 13 straight games to Kentucky.
Maryland shocked No. 13 Wake Forest 61-56 and Mississippi whipped No. 16 Tennessee 55-53 in overtime in other upsets Wednesday night. Elsewhere, No. 1 Missouri stopped Colorado 80-54, No. 3 Virginia beat No. 2 North Carolina 74-58, No. 4 DePaul edged St. Joseph's (Pa.) 46-44 in overtime, No. 8 Alabama took a 66-63 decision over Mississippi State, No. 12 Texas beat Southern Methodist 69-56, and No. 19 Kansas State trimmed Nebraska 75-64. Memphis State, tied for No. 19, was forced to postpone its game with St. Louis University because of snow.

Top Ten
Steve Stipanovich, Jon Sundvold and Ricky Frazier combined for 37 points, leading Missouri over Colorado. Stipanovich scored 14 points, Sundvold added 12 and Frazier had 11 as Missouri gained its 19th straight victory this season and its 29th consecutive at home. Both streaks are Missouri records.
Othell Wilson and Ralph Sampson led Virginia to a 17-point lead early in the second half and the Cavaliers held off two North Carolina rallies to beat the Tar Heels.

Wilson scored 20 points and Sampson added 18 as the Cavaliers took over the Atlantic Coast Conference lead and avenged their only defeat in 22 games overall. It was only the second loss in 18 starts for North Carolina, which had beaten Virginia 65-60 less than a month ago at Chapel Hill.
"We knew ourselves we could beat them and we just wanted to prove it to everyone else," said Wilson. "We had them beaten down there (at North Carolina) and came unglued. We knew if we did things right, we could beat them."
Terry Cummings scored a game-high 17 points, including a tip-in at the end of the overtime period, to help DePaul beat St. Joseph's. With the score tied at 44 and only seconds remaining in the overtime, Kenny Patterson put up a 20-footer. The ball kicked off the rim to teammate Jerry McMillan, whose 15-footer from the left side missed the iron, but Cummings came up with the air ball and banked in the layup at the buzzer.
Alabama, playing without flu-stricken senior forward Eddie Phillips, survived a scare from Mississippi State and used a four-corner offense to beat the Bulldogs. The Crimson Tide got balanced scoring from its starters, led by Phillip Lockett with 17.

Second Ten
Sophomore guard Denard Holmes moved into injured forward Mike Wacker's spot and scored 22 points as Texas defeated SMU. The victory improved Texas' record to 15-3 and halted a three-game losing streak that began when Wacker, a 6-foot-9 sophomore and the team's second-leading scorer and rebounder, went out for the season with a knee injury.

Freshman Adrian Branch scored seven of Maryland's final nine points in the last 45 seconds as the Terps upset Wake Forest. Branch made one of two foul shots with 45 seconds remaining to give the Terps a 53-50 lead and then rammed home a dunk shot on a pass from Herman Veal with 31 seconds left to make it 55-50. He added two more free throws in a one-and-one situation before Danny Young hit a field goal for the Demon Deacons. Fouled again, Branch made two free throws with 3 seconds left and finished with 20 points.
Mississippi's Carlos Clark hit two baskets in overtime, including one at the final buzzer. Coach Don DeVoe said his players got themselves into a jam by lagging behind the Rebels early in overtime.
"You can't win a game against a good defensive team when you spot them a basket at the first of the overtime like we did tonight," DeVoe said.
Randy Reed scored 25 points to lead Kansas State over Nebraska.

VMI Cage Coach Told He Won't Be Rehired

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP) — In the middle of a season in which Virginia Military Institute's basketball team has won only one of 18 games, Coach Charlie Schmaus has been told his contract will not be renewed.
VMI Superintendent Gen. Sam Walker informed Schmaus Wednesday that he would be dismissed when his contract expires March 31. Schmaus has elected to continue coaching and recruiting until that date. VMI has eight regular-season games remaining, the next tonight at Virginia Tech.
The Keydets broke a 23-game losing streak by beating Appalachian State 67-62 in overtime in Lexington last Saturday.
Shortly before that game, Schmaus had received formal notice his job was in jeopardy. A state law required VMI to notify Schmaus by Jan. 31 of the possibility his contract would not be renewed.

"We never intended to do this in the middle of the season," said VMI Athletic Director Tom Joynes. "We'd have preferred to wait till the end of the season and just make an announcement the contract would not be renewed."
"Of course, we were hoping that word of the first advisory we had to give Charlie wouldn't have gotten out. There had just been so much uncertainty and newspaper speculation that Gen. Walker thought it was best to give Charlie the final word now and clear everything up."
VMI announced its intention to begin a search for a new coach immediately and to name one as soon as possible.
"I'm not certain how exactly how we'll do that," said

Joynes. "For one thing, we won't be talking to any other college head coaches until the end of the regular season. That's just something that we, and I think most people, would regard as an unethical practice."
Keydet assistant coaches Jim Miller and Mark Sandy received notices identical to Schmaus', but both will be permitted to reapply for their present positions once a new coach is located.
Before Schmaus' program went sour over the last two seasons, he had the highest career winning percentage of any VMI coach. His current lifetime mark is 75-82, still the best of any coach whose tenure in Lexington was longer than three years.
Schmaus' first team in 1976-77 was his best. It compiled a 20-6 record, reached the NCAA East Regional semifinals against Kentucky and finished 20th in the final Associated Press national poll.
Since then, the Keydets' record has declined every year. Last year, the team finished 4-23.

Parsons To See Her Attorney

COLUMBIA (AP) — Former University of South Carolina women's basketball coach Pam Parsons plans to consult her attorney after she's seen a Sports Illustrated article about her dismissal.
The magazine's latest issue includes an article which says Ms. Parsons was fired after she was accused of conducting a lesbian affair with a player.
Similar allegations were published last month in The Greenville News.
"I have not yet seen the Sports Illustrated article described in press accounts today," Ms. Parsons said Wednesday in a statement read to news organizations over the telephone by a friend. "I look forward to reading the article."
"I will then consult my attorney as to possible legal action," she added. "I will have no further comment until I have received legal advice."
The friend also said Ms. Parsons wanted it known that she would "one day release the correct story."

The magazine article also included charges that Ms. Parsons helped players with term papers, violated an assortment of recruiting rules and evaluated prospective players with sex in mind.
The piece quoted senior USC Vice President Chris Vlahopoulos as saying the lesbianism accusation led to Ms. Parsons' dismissal. Vlahopoulos has denied that he made the statement.

JFK Also Taped Conversations In White House

By JOE QUINLAN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — President John F. Kennedy secretly recorded conversations and telephone calls with world leaders, congressmen and his aides while he was in the White House, the director of the Kennedy library said today.

"I have no reason to think they knew they were being taped," Dan Fenn Jr., the library director, said of the people recorded in 100 to 140 hours of taped meetings and conversations. The tapes are being examined in Boston at the library in preparation for their release to the public, possibly this summer.

Fenn said 250 telephone conversations and 325 meetings in the Oval Office or Cabinet Room in the White House were recorded from mid-1962 to Nov. 7, 1963, 15 days before Kennedy was assassinated.

Among those recorded in telephone calls were Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, evangelist Billy Graham and Adlai Stevenson, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations under Kennedy. The list also includes members of Congress, according to an index of the tapes that Fenn had.

The subjects of the conversations included Vietnam, the Cuban missile crisis, the integration of the University of Mississippi and civil rights in general.

"I haven't the vaguest idea why Kennedy used the tapes or saved them," Fenn said. "I hope we'll be able to open some of them early this summer."

"When they're available, they'll be available to anyone, junior high school students, Arthur Schlesinger or anyone."

Any potentially classified material will be referred to the originating agency, which will decide whether to keep it classified or allow the museum to release it, Fenn said.

"There was no attempt to hide the existence of this material," Fenn said early today in an interview at his Lexington, Mass., home. "We said those tapes did exist."

"I think one reason for all the excitement is that some people expect great big secrets to be exposed. But my experience with the world of research materials is that they are going to give nuances, dimensions and interesting insights into the workings of a political process, but nothing really surprising or revolutionary."

Fenn said the tapes "were not a very high-priority project," in part because of the knowledge that some of the material still would have to be kept secret for national security reasons.

Fenn said he hasn't had time to listen to most of the tapes.

"I have heard bits and drabs but I have other things to do besides this," he said. "Research staff who copied the tapes onto better tapes have also heard them."

Evelyn Lincoln, Kennedy's secretary, was quoted by The Washington Post today as saying Kennedy threw a switch to signal her to start taping. She would activate either a recorder attached to his telephone or microphones in the Oval Office or the Cabinet Room if he were in either of those places.

The Post said the most frequent names listed among participants were Attorney General Robert Kennedy, the president's brother, Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Defense Secretary Robert McNamara.

Material from the tapes was not available.

Existence of some Kennedy tapes — but not their extent — had been known ever since a statement by Fenn in 1973. The Kennedy family turned over the tapes in 1976.

A secret taping system installed by President Richard Nixon led to his resignation in 1974 during the Watergate scandal, when it was revealed that the recorded conversations varied from his statements on the affair. Nixon's system, unlike Kennedy's, was voice-activated, and contained about 4,000 hours of conversation.

President Lyndon Johnson's library in Austin, Texas contains many tapes given by a former secretary under a restriction that they be kept secret for 50 years, the Post said.

American Heritage Magazine reported last month that President Franklin D. Roosevelt secretly recorded seven or eight conversations and 14 news conferences in the Oval Office in 1940.

Optimism Over Recession's End

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) —

The recession plaguing the United States should end by the second quarter of 1982 if the government does its part, says the senior vice president of First Union National Bank.

G.B. Carrier, a senior vice president in charge of funds management, said most economic indicators point toward some type of recovery, but it won't be immediate.

"I believe that if the Federal Reserve will hold firm on their monetary policy, and if the administration and Congress can somehow reduce our budget deficit over the next couple of years, we have a shot at a period of solid, non-inflationary growth and prosperity," Carrier said.

He said more bad news came toward the end of 1981 when unemployment began rising, reaching 8.9 percent in December. He said most economists are now predicting the figure will reach 10 percent soon.

"The good news for 1981 was inflation," Carrier said. "The Consumer Price Index for the year rose 8.9 percent. The CPI rose 12.4 percent in 1980 and 13.3 percent in 1979, so this represents the second year in a row there was a drop in the inflation rate as measured by the Consumer Price Index."

Carrier said the Producer Price Index also dropped from 13 percent to 9.2 percent, "so the good news coming out of 1981 for us is that we did see an improvement in inflation by almost any type of measurement."

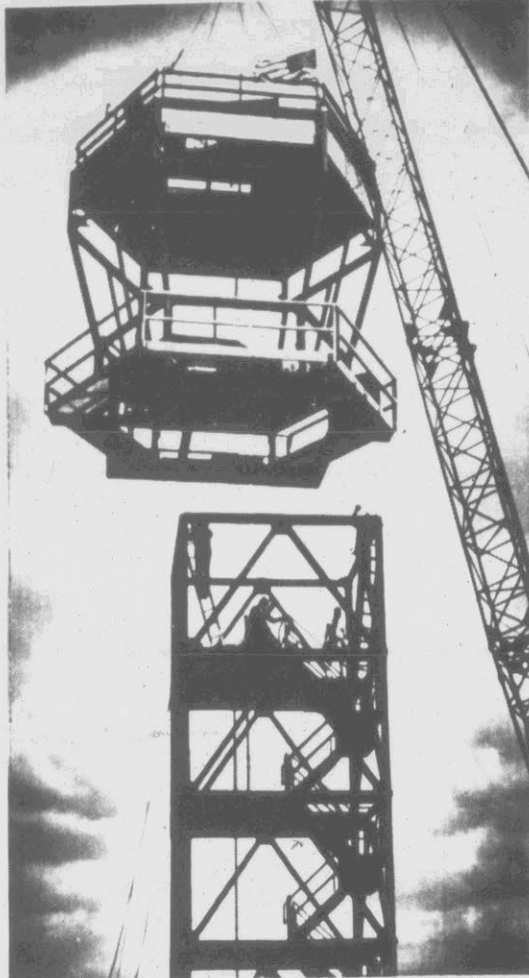

He said the consumer's real spendable earnings — a measure of his earning adjusted for the effects of inflation, taxes and Social Security — declined during 1981. The average worker lost about 3 percent in real purchasing power during the year.

Even with fewer people working, the effects of inflation have not been enough to keep personal income growing rapidly. But, while personal income continued to grow through the end of the year, each month the rate of growth was lower than it was the previous month after midyear.

Adjusted for the effects of inflation, personal income probably dropped slightly during the final months of the year, Carrier said.

Youngsters To Be Performing

A group of sixth grade band students will represent the Greenville City Schools at the Eastern Division of the N.C. Bandmasters workshop on Friday.

The group, conducted by Dottie Jo Knight, director of elementary bands in Greenville, will perform three selections. After the concert, the students will assist Mrs. Knight in presenting a workshop on "Problems and Techniques of Heterogeneous Instruction in a Beginning Band Class."

The young people last November played before the N.C. Bandmasters Association at its state convention in Winston-Salem, the youngest band ever to perform for the convention.

Political Action Committee Is Formed By State's Employees

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Some state employees are turning to the ballot box in their quest for better pay, benefits and working conditions.

They have formed the State Employees Political Action Committee, which will give financial and political support to candidates sympathetic with their positions.

The committee already has signed 50 members and has pledged of $5,000, said chairman Donald E. Hughes, an auditor with the Revenue Department in Raleigh.

Hughes said the committee will use the money to support candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, the Council of State and the General Assembly. He said the committee would not take part in national or local campaigns.

"We will be helping elect people who will be responsible to all programs that would benefit state employees," Hughes said.

Vice chairman William R. Windley, director of the state Division of Youth Services, said: "State employees should be involved in the total political process in an organized way. That goes far beyond voting to support candidates financially, as well as in time, effort and energy."

Melinda Coffin, an agent with the State Bureau of Investigation who serves as committee treasurer, said state employees and teachers who want to join must contribute a minimum of $20. She said non-state employees can become honorary members with a $5 contribution.

The two groups that represent state employees, the North Carolina State Employees Association and the North Carolina State Government Employees Association, have decided against forming political action committees.

Hughes said planning for a separate political action committee began after the state employees association rejected the idea at its September convention.

Emmett Burden, executive director of the state employees association, welcomed the separate political action committee.

"It will enhance all the efforts that are being put forward for state employees," he said.

J. Arch Laney, executive director of the state government employees association, also said he doesn't know much about the newly formed political action committee.

"I've said before that I don't see the point in each association having its own PAC," Laney said. "By the same token, if there's a PAC formed completely and totally separate from both associations, I can see some potential conflicts down the road in that there would be kind of third party organization that may or may not agree with rank and file members of the organizations."

Hughes said the political action committee would not lobby and would not issue a "report card" on legislators' voting records as other groups have done. He also said it would not target individual officeholders for defeat.

1983 Spending Boost For Arms Reported Planned

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Although President Reagan is holding his request for next year's defense spending at $1 billion more than he predicted last September, he is seeking an extra $13.6 billion in new budget authority for the Pentagon, administration sources say.

Administration sources said the main effort in shaping the new defense budget, which Reagan will send to Congress next Monday, has focused on keeping 1983 spending increases in check because it is spending that directly affects the size of the anticipated federal budget deficit. And the size of the deficit has become one of the administration's major economic problems.

"The administration tried to calibrate the budget's effect on the economy so we focused on spending," said a senior administration official who asked to remain anonymous.

He did not say anything about another factor: the likelihood that the administration is eager to keep the new spending figure close to earlier projections — modest when compared to the jump in budget authority — because the spending figure is the one that draws the most public attention.

Most people outside of government are unaware of budget authority, which permits the Pentagon to make contract commitments which are "spent out" in future years as new ships, planes and other equipment are produced.

Officials said that although the $215.9 billion defense spending request is $1 billion more than the spending total Reagan forecast last September for fiscal 1983, which starts Oct. 1, it really is just a technical increase. They said it represents a shifting of some functions from the Education and Energy Departments to the Defense Department.

The $215.9 billion would be an increase of $34.1 billion over this year's anticipated spending level, as stated by Reagan in September. The new total of $257.7

billion in budget authority would be $43.6 billion above the expected 1982 level, officials said.

In addition to taking into account inflation factors revised since September, officials said the added budget authority primarily reflects administration decisions to buy an extra, $3.5 billion aircraft carrier, to push ahead with an expanded long-term buildup in U.S. strategic airlift, and a higher rate of the number of aircraft purchases.

The new budget will reflect a continued administration drive toward its stated goal to regain naval superiority by increasing the present fleet of about 450 ships to 600 by the end of the decade.

Sources said the amount of money earmarked for naval shipbuilding will total more than twice this year's $8.8 billion.

After the Reagan administration came into office it obtained from Congress the biggest peacetime infusion of defense funds on record. Stating an urgent priority to "rearm America," Reagan got virtually everything he asked for in defense while getting Congress to cut taxes and slash domestic programs.

This being an election year, there are strong indications the administration will have a much more difficult time pushing its fatter defense budget through Congress without major surgery.

Pointing out that possibility, Rep. Patricia Schroeder complained Wednesday that compared with Russian weapons, U.S. weapons are like American cars before the Japanese captured much of their market — more costly and less competent.

And President Reagan's expected budget request for $257.7 billion in new defense spending authority puts those weapons before more basic needs of the Pentagon such as readiness, the Colorado Democrat said.

She was interviewed after a second day of closed-door testimony before the House Armed Services Committee, on which she serves, from Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

"It's like our weapons are kind of where the auto industry was in the 1970s when Japan overtook us," she said. "We're gold-plating, we don't have it under control and I'm very disappointed that we don't see a much firmer stance."

Redistricting Concern Aired

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners devoted most of their February board meeting to expressions of concern over proposed redistricting for the N.C. House of Representatives.

The four members present expressed disdain for the plan proposed by a House subcommittee. They cited particularly their strong objections on the split of Martin County under the proposed redistricting mapping.

Board chairman John House said he would "rather see Martin County aligned as a whole with Wake County or some other far away location rather than split internally."

The board is mobilizing efforts to contest the proposed redistricting plan, calling on leaders of both major political parties to speak out against the plan, also asking them to contact leaders in other areas, seeking unification in a major opposition to the plan.

It was noted that no opposition has been expressed for the Senate redistricting plan, which puts Martin County in a one-senator district with Pitt County.

Action was taken by the board at its February meeting to approve the paving of Scenic Drive in the Quail Haven subdivision off U.S. south of Williamston. This will be achieved by participation of landowners in the area and state funds allocated for secondary roads.

IN 28th YEAR — Fred Rogers begins his 28th year of working with families as he hosts 15 new Mister Rogers' Neighborhood programs and three new Mister Rogers Talks With Parents specials on discipline, pets and creativity during the 1982 season. The new programs will air on PBS beginning in March. Special guest during the new Discipline programs is Olympic Gold Medal skating star, Peggy Fleming. She talks with Rogers about her long years of disciplined training, her love of the sport, and about her four-year-old son.

New 'Star Wars' Sequel Is Begun

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The second sequel to the biggest box-office success in motion picture history, "Star Wars," has begun production at EMI Elstree Studios on the outskirts of London. "Revenge of the Jedi," with executive producer George Lucas at the helm, has taken over all nine sound stages at the studio where "Star Wars" and "The Empire Strikes Back" were filmed. Principal cast members Mark Hamill (Luke Skywalker), Harrison Ford (Hans Solo), Carrie Fisher (Princess Leia) have returned along with robots C-3PO and R2-D2, Chewbacca and the dreaded Darth Vader. "Revenge of the Jedi" will be released by 20th Century-Fox in May, 1983.

Movies Not 'Replaced'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forecasts that movie-going would be replaced by pay television, videocassettes, and home TV recorders have not been borne out in a recent survey conducted for the Newspaper Advertising Bureau.

The study of the movie-going habits of 1,500 persons in the United States and Canada shows, according to Charles Kinsolving, vice president for marketing and new technology for the Bureau, that people who have access to these newfangled methods of home entertainment have not cut down on their movie-going.

In fact, he said, he said it shows that persons with one or more home entertainment devices had a frequency of moviegoing either equal to or slightly higher than the average of the whole sample. Other findings in the study: Movie audiences are getting older — in 1973, 72 percent of adult moviegoers were between 18 and 29 years old while today only 57 percent are under 30, and the percentage of frequent moviegoers over 50 has tripled; 54 percent of moviegoers said newspaper ads are their prime source of movie information, against 42 percent who said their prime source was television.

Gene Hackman To Direct Film

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gene Hackman bought screen rights to "Open and Shut," the best-selling true story by San Diego attorney Milton Silverman, and will make his directorial debut with the film version. The story deals with a woman accused of hiring someone to kill her husband while acting under hypnosis.

'Hunchback Of Notre Dame' Will Be On The Small Screen Tonight

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Passion, injustice, good and evil — ingredients soap operas create through every contrivance imaginable — are the essential elements of "The Hunchback Of Notre Dame," a television adaptation on CBS' "Hallmark Hall of Fame" tonight.

This classic book, set in 15th century Paris and written by Victor Hugo, has been produced for the movie theaters three times. Lon Chaney, Charles Laughton and Anthony Quinn each played Quasimodo, whose grossly deformed body belies the gentleness and compassion inside.

Anthony Hopkins, Emmy-award winner for his portrayal of Hitler in "The Bunker," is the latest Quasimodo. Abandoned as a baby at the gates of Notre Dame Cathedral, Quasimodo was taken in as a self-serving public gesture of charity by Dom Claude Frolo, the movie's villain. Quasimodo grows up to become the church's bell-ringer.

Hopkins needed five hours of make-up work before each day's shooting to achieve the necessary disfigurement. But if you can get past the ugliness — and this tale is certainly not for everyone — then the beauty of the beast shines through in his sensitivity and kindness.

Quasimodo falls in love with the gypsy Esmeralda (Lesley-Anne Down), and three scenes express beautifully his painful plight, illustrating that his deformities have wounded him but have not arrested his emotions.

—After Quasimodo is flogged in public, Esmeralda pities him and, alone among the hostile crowd, answers his pleas for water. He's then seen gaily ringing the bells and rollicking: "She gave me water. She gave me water."

—After saving Esmeralda from being raped by Dom Claude, Quasimodo tries to cheer her up with a lesson on the bells of Notre Dame. "These are my ladies. I'm good to them and they're good to you."

—His love for her, of course, cannot be fully returned, and this recognition comes across sadly when he commiserates with a statue: "Why was I not made of stone, like you?"

Norman Rosemont, master of the TV remake with his "All Quiet on the Western Front," "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Les Miserables," considers his "Hunchback of Notre Dame" closest to Hugo's original 1831 epic.

For example, when Laughton's film was shot in the late 1930s, the times would not permit a priest being the villain, so another character was created.

Go Away, Winter!
In Japan this week people are celebrating Setsubun, the bean-throwing festival, which marks the end of winter according to the lunar calendar. In ancient legend, brave warriors drove away wicked demons by hurling dried beans at them. Today Japanese boys still throw baked soybeans at adults masked as "red devils" — to drive away the lingering demons of winter. For those of us who aren't on the lunar calendar, winter may linger longer. If weather predictions are right we'll have to throw a lot of beans to get rid of this nasty weather. Forecasts say that February could be worse than the record-breaking month of January in much of the United States.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the cheese-like food made from soybeans?
WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — Former Presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter attended Anwar Sadat's funeral.

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day when you should avoid getting into arguments, otherwise you could lose out where it counts the most. Make plans to build a more secure future for yourself.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study creative ideas you have and build a sound foundation for the future. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Plan to have more of the good things in life by using your talents to best advantage. Sidesstep a troublemaker.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Study your surroundings and then quietly go about making needed changes. A new venture can be most successful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Come to a better understanding with associates. An invitation could lead to an interesting experience.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 22) Engage in the more practical aspects of your living instead of spending so much time on fun and frolic. Be sensible.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A fine day to engage in some new activity that will be inspiring to you. Stop worrying about matters unrelated to you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Listen carefully to what an expert has to suggest and you find the right solution to a pending problem. Be more cheerful.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Try to understand what associates and good friends expect of you and endeavor to please them. Take it easy tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Make sure you carry through with civic duties you have assumed and get the right results. Avoid arguments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are highly inspired and can accomplish a great deal today. Be alert to opportunities at hand. Be logical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle obligations before engaging in amusements. Become more skilled in your line of endeavor. Be courteous to others.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Come to an agreement with associates on a joint project you have in mind. Avoid temptation to argue with co-worker.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have a practical nature but will also appreciate the importance of idealism. Make sure you provide the kind of education that will encourage your progeny to tackle large projects and bring to a workable level.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Opening lead: Five of ♠.

West did not relish leading from his side suit holdings, so he chose his lone trump as the opening lead. When dummy appeared, declarer realized that West was a favorite to have both red aces for his takedown double, and that he was in danger of losing two heart tricks, a diamond and a club. But South found a pretty solution to his problem.

Declarer won the king of spades, crossed to the ace of spades and took the club finesse. West saw no advantage in holding up, so he won the king and got off play with a club. Declarer won the jack in dummy, returned to his hand with a trump, drawing East's last trump, and now led a low diamond.

If West rose with the ace of diamonds, declarer would later be able to get a heart discard on the king of diamonds and thus hold his heart losers to one. So West correctly played low and dummy's king of diamonds won. But declarer had prepared a neat riddle. He cashed the ace and nine of clubs, sluffing a diamond from dummy, and now gave West his diamond trick.

West did not appreciate having the lead. If he led another diamond, declarer Pay attention to the auction. The information to be gleaned from it could be all you need to make your contract.

After North's redouble, South correctly passed to see whether his partner might want to punish the opponents. When North revealed a spade fit, South showed he was better than minimum by raising to three spades, and North elected to go on to

Home Fire Safety Booklet Pays Off

PUEBLO, Colo. (UPI) — A $1.50 government booklet could be the most important "insurance premium" of your life.

"Home Fire Safety" tells how to prevent a type of disaster that generally happens when everyone is asleep. Many home fire deaths are caused, not by the blaze itself, but by smoke and gas.

More than 6,000 deaths and nearly 30,000 injuries result each year from home fires. The ignition sources include gasoline, flammable fabrics in clothing, cigarettes and space heaters.

Among the preventive measures listed in the booklet are:

- Store gasoline outside the house and well away from ignition sources.
- Store gas only in containers designed specifically for that purpose.
- Never use gas to clean clothes, machine parts or anything else.
- Light outdoor grills with charcoal starter and never throw starter fluid or any other flammable liquid on smoldering or burning fires.
- Follow manufacturers' instructions for flame-resistant clothing to preserve their protective quality.
- Teach everyone in your household to "drop and roll" on the floor or ground if their clothing should catch fire.
- Don't wear loose clothing when you're cooking.
- Keep upholstered furniture and furnishings away from heat sources.
- If you smoke, don't put

Service Appeal Heard By Williamston Board

WILLIAMSTON — A request for extension of water and sewer service to a business a short distance south of the town limits on U.S. 17

Green of Greenville, was awarded the Army Certificate of Achievement while serving as an assistant logistics noncommissioned officer assigned to the 41st Infantry, 2nd Armored Division, Fort Hood, Texas.

Michael C. Eatmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald G. Eatmon of Williamston, returned from a deployment to the Mediterranean Sea as a member of Air Anti-Submarine Squadron 30, Naval Air Station, Cecil Field, Fla. A 1978 graduate of Williamston High School, Eatmon joined the Navy in 1978.

Airman Mary E. Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis N. Campbell of Greenville, completed basic training at Lackland AFB, Texas and is undergoing on-the-job training in the structural-pavements field at Vandenberg AFB, Calif. Campbell is a 1981 graduate of Rose High School.

Pvt. Perry Dixon, son of Ruby Dixon of Route 3, Ayden, arrived for duty at Augsburg, West Germany. Dixon, a cannon crewman with the 1st Battalion, 34th Field Artillery, was previously assigned at Fort Sill, Okla. He is a 1980 graduate of Ayden-Grifton High School.

Pvt. Jacqueline Albritton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Albritton of Route 1, Bethel, completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C. She is a 1981 graduate of Roanoke High School in Robersonville.

was the principal agenda item of the Williamston Town Board at its February meeting.

The request was presented by Glenn Jordan for Ross Motel. Jordan cited increasing needs for these services by the motel and other businesses in the area.

Mayor Robert Cowan pointed out that the area had been included in a 1977 annexation survey, but that Williamston has had trouble getting annexation approval from the Justice Department. Cowan said the problems in annexation arise from provisions of the Voting Rights Act, which is in effect in Martin County.

Town Administrator John Boykin also noted at Monday's meeting that the 1977 study showed that annexation of the town limits to State Road 1001 would have then cost the town $282,482, but that the cost could have been recovered in a span of just under eight years on the basis of increased revenue.

Jordan was informed that efforts will be continued to seek annexation approval for the 1977 plan.

An update on efforts to secure funding for a new elevated storage tank was given to the board. To date, grants of $63,200, $33,800 and $28,872 have been diverted from other sources to apply to the $672,500 cost of the proposed tank, and action has been taken to file for a $168,000 grant from Clean Water Bond monies. If that grant petition is approved, the town will still need $378,500 in funds to complete the total $672,500 cost.

Boykins said that with the change of the Community Development Program to the state, some additional funds might be obtainable from this source, and that this possibility is being pursued. A motion to repair the 16-year old town clocks — there are four faces in the tower — was tabled until a later date. The estimate given for repair is $2,400 for one face or $5,827 for repairing all four. Boykin expressed the opinion that an expenditure of that magnitude was not justified.
