Hear Arguments On Splitting Counties

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Blacks supported a plan to cross county lines in redrawing congressional districts, while others pleaded with legislators not to do so in a public hearing before state House and Senate redistricting committees.

The joint committees listened to more than 100 speakers in a Thursday afternoon hearing lasting several hours.

Minorities argued that single-member districts would give them more voting power while residents of split counties complained that their representation was being diluted.

While 22 percent of North Carolinians are black, only 2 percent of state legislators are black, said Raymond Wheeler of Charlotte. Among the states covered by the Voting Rights Act of 1965, Wheeler said North Carolina ranks next to last in the number of black elected officials.

"Those comparisons are a very accurate benchmark of black participation in government," Wheeler said, adding that he believed the solution is single-member districts.

G.K. Butterfield Jr., president of the North Carolina Association of Black Lawyers, said the percentage of black voters should warrant 26 black House members and 11 black senators. Currently, there is one black senator and three black House members.

"These figures demonstrate that we have a serious problem in North Carolina that needs addressing," Butterfield said. "The problem is that concentrations of black people are submerged into larger white populations thereby diluting the potential strength of the black vote in the given area."

The lawyers' group presented a map it drew to provide one representative in each district.

Ed Gurganus, a former state legislator from Martin County, said he did not understand why the legislators feel compelled to cross county lines in redrawing districts.

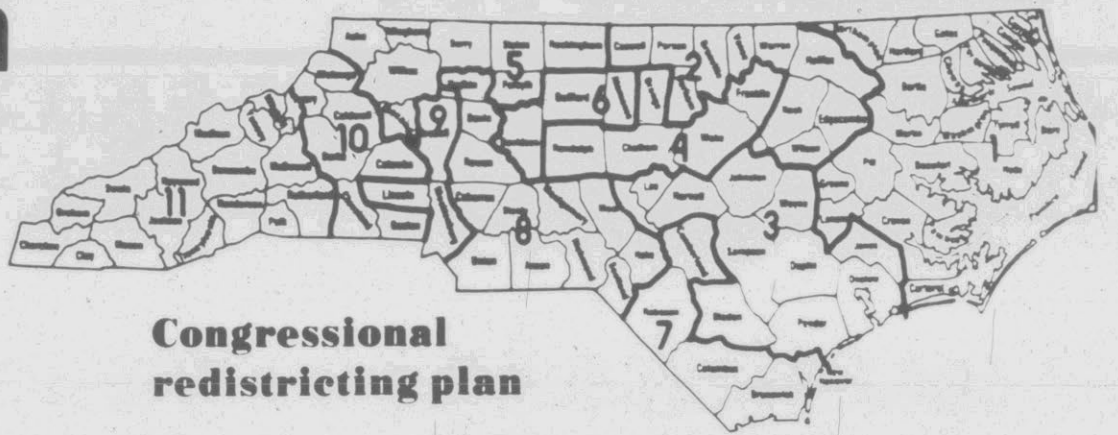

"We have 100 political subdivisions in our state that are the real and main political strength of our state," Gurganus said. "If we split county lines as now proposed, we are going to court."

Gurganus also discussed a state constitutional amendment banning the crossing of county lines to redraw legislative districts that was struck down by the U.S. Justice Department.

"I believe it would be better to go to court on the side of the citizens of North Carolina (by not crossing county lines) than on the side of the Department of Justice (by crossing the lines)," he said.

But Jerris Leonard, a Washington attorney hired as counsel by the legislators, told the crowd that courts in other states have ruled that county lines, city boundaries and even individual apartment buildings must be divided to achieve racial and numerical balance.

Carolyn Coleman, state director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said single-member districts would "remedy much historical racial discrimination that over the years that has retarded the participation of blacks in the legislative system."

See Challenge Troubles On Congress Districting

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — An attorney for the General Assembly warned that a congressional redistricting plan agreed on Thursday by two legislative committees could be in trouble if challenged in court.

Kathleen Heenan, a lawyer with the Jerris Leonard firm retained to defend the redistricting plans, said the plan's 1.7 percent population deviation — that is, the difference between the largest and smallest districts — gave it dubious legitimacy under the Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote doctrine.

"It's dangerous to think with that kind of deviation, once you get through the Justice Department you're safe," she said. "It's vulnerable."

The plan, to be presented to the full legislature next week, shifts Durham County into the 2nd District. But committee members turned back a bid to strengthen Democratic standing in the 6th District.

The plan's population difference is below the 2.7 percent deviation of the plan approved by legislators last year but rejected by the U.S. Justice Department on grounds it weakened black voter strength.

Miss Heenan, however, said no federal court has upheld a state congressional redistricting plan with a range of more than 1 percent under 1980 census figures.

The committees approved the plan without dissent after a public hearing in which several black leaders urged that Durham County be moved out of the 4th District and into the 2nd District, where it had been placed under the 1981 plan.

The hearing came as several hundred people jammed the Legislative Building auditorium, most to oppose dividing counties in state House and Senate redistricting plans.

Before agreeing to the new map, the joint committees voted 11-8 to reject a proposal by Rep. Ralph Edwards, D-Guilford, that would have minimized the changes made in the 6th District.

His proposal would have kept Guilford, Alamance and Rockingham counties together in the 6th, as they have been since 1971, and achieved a better population balance by adding Thomasville township from Davidson County.

The committee plan, however, drops Rockingham from the 6th and adds all of Davidson County.

Greensboro Democrats who backed Edwards proposal said they thought keeping heavily Democratic Rockingham County in the 6th would have improved the chances that a Democrat could unseat Republican U.S. Rep. Gene Johnston, who won the seat from long-time Democratic incumbent Richardson Preyer in 1980.

But that would have required keeping Davidson County in the 5th District, a move some feared could hurt 5th District Democratic U.S. Rep. Steve Neal.

Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, co-chairman of the panel and an author of the new plan, said he believed it would win approval from the U.S. Justice Department. And he said he was not worried by Miss Heenan's warning about court problems.

"I think the plan is relatively close," he said. "We've been advised it will pass the Department of Justice. We don't know what the courts would say."

Labor Dept. Says Jobless Rate Unexpectedly Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's jobless rate unexpectedly dipped from 8.8 percent to 8.5 percent last month, possibly because there were fewer extra employees hired during the recession-plagued holidays to be laid off in January, the Labor Department said today.

The national jobless rate declined three-tenths of a percentage point as the number of people out of work fell by 270,000.

Overall, 9.2 million Americans were out of work in January as the labor force shrank by 300,000.

An analyst with the department's Bureau of Labor

Statistics indicated the reversal of recent sharp rises in unemployment may have resulted from the declining business activity.

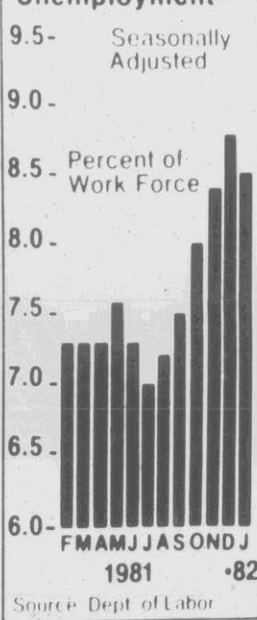

"Many of the industries that typically lay people off were so depressed they had no extra people to lay off," said Deborah Klein.

She noted that traditional rising joblessness following the Christmas holiday shopping season was reversed this year because many retail stores had not brought extra people onto the payroll.

"Because firms didn't hire as many people as they usually do in December, they didn't lay off as many," Ms. Klein said.

In testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, the commissioner of labor statistics, Janet Norwood, noted that layoffs traditionally rise substantially in January, "as employers in the private sector pare down their payrolls after the holiday

Outhouse Missing

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — One of Connecticut's outhouses is missing.

So are two pounds of fish sticks, a judge's robe and five pounds of chicken legs.

The disclosures came Thursday when the state auditor, Henry Becker, made his annual report to the governor on what's no longer nailed down in Connecticut.

Becker said the toll came to $303,308.

The privy was taken from Wadsworth Falls State Park in Middletown.

Connecticut Valley Hospital in Middletown reported the loss of five pounds of chicken legs, two pounds of fish sticks and seven jars of peanut butter.

The state Commission on the Deaf and Hearing Impaired reported that a $59 calculator was "dropped by accident into a wastepaper basket." Apparently no one heard it fall, because it got tossed out with the trash.

Becker said security appeared to be worst at the University of Connecticut's Storrs campus, where, among other items, a computer terminal valued at $18,160 disappeared.

One of the more intriguing reports showed the loss of $8,442 in lawn mowers, baggage carts, sandspreaders and other equipment from the Department of Transportation at Bradley International Airport in Windsor Locks.

The department's explanation: "Building contents blown away." There was no elaboration.

Jackson Says Real Objective Is Stirring Turmoil In Mexico

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., says the Soviet Union and Cuba are backing insurrection in El Salvador with a "real objective" of creating turmoil in Mexico.

Jackson also rejects comparisons between U.S. involvement in El Salvador and Vietnam.

"Vietnam is 9,000 miles away," he said in an interview Thursday. "This could end up on our border. I think they are totally different situations."

But Jackson, one of the Senates leading advocates of a strong military posture, said he opposed using U.S. troops in El Salvador. "I see no justification for American troops being involved," he said.

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said Wednesday the United States will do "whatever is necessary" to control the guerilla revolt in El Salvador. He declined to rule out sending troops, but said it is extremely unlikely.

Jackson said the Soviets and the Cubans have an ulterior motive for their actions in Central America.

"El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala are stepping stones," he said. "Their real objective is Mexico."

"That's the big apple," he said. "Big oil producer. Country with a growing population. Country with enormous problems internally — poverty, misery and disease and the terrible differentiation between rich and poor. These are fertile grounds for destabilization."

When the Reagan administration was attempting to rally international opposition to Cuba's perceived intervention in El Salvador last year, Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo called Cuba the Latin American country "most dear" to Mexico.

Jackson declined to commit himself on Reagan's certification that the Salvadoran government is making sufficient progress in human rights to receive U.S. aid.

"I want to take a look at it before I make that judgment," he said. "I think there is no way that certification, if you want to do it literally, could be made anywhere in Central America outside of Costa Rica, which has a Democratic society."

Is there any business around Greenville that buys aluminum cans? I have some that I would like to get rid of. E.B.

Yes, there is. Aluminum Recycling Co. at 1104 Myrtle Ave. pays 17 cents per pound for aluminum cans.

Reynolds Metals Co., with home offices in Richmond, Va., used to visit Pitt Plaza each week to buy cans, but shopping center spokesmen said the Reynolds truck hasn't appeared recently. A telephone call to Reynolds' recycling division confirmed that fact. Their trucks now stop in Rocky Mount, Wilson and Washington.

Rep. Chisholm Suggests Country At Crossroads

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Staff Writer

"North Carolina is one of my favorite states in the South and I have many friends here," Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., said during her lecture here Thursday night.

Elected to the 91st Congress, Mrs. Chisholm represents New York's 12th Congressional District, which comprises Bedford-Stuyvesant. She is the first black congresswoman in the history of the United States and the first black to seek the nomination of a major political party for the presidency of the country.

A member of the House Education and Labor Committee, she played a major role in the passage of the minimum wage bill in the house. She serves on the Select Education, General Education and Agricultural Labor subcommittees.

She is a recipient of more than 11 honorary degrees. For the past three years she has remained on the Gallup Poll's list of the 10 most admired women in the world.

"This country is at its crossroads right now at this point in time. The changing patterns in an era of risk on the domestic level today stems from the total restructuring of the role of the federal government; vis-a-vis, the individual states. The new federalism concept is a return to state rights doctrine which really results in a very cynical advocacy of federal responsibility," she said.

"History is now being rewritten to justify a political effort to support the efforts of the same state governments which didn't carry out their responsibilities to the poor and the minorities in the first instance.

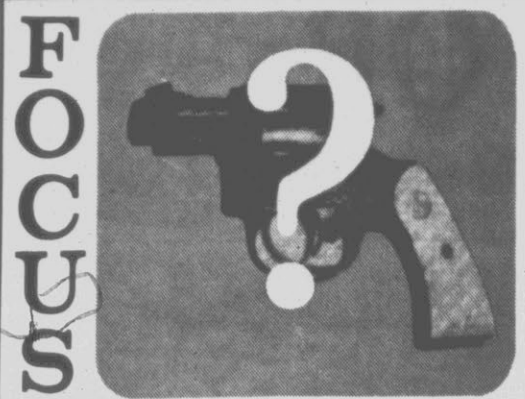

"The dreams of the '60s and '70s are turning into the shrinking realities of the 80s. Patterns are being set ... In this country, we are now engaged in a war of attitudes and policies," she continue.

"People of today are too complacent and are abandoning the rights of women and the rights of minorities. Other goals have been abandoned.

"Wake up America and do your homework. When I sat on the floor and heard tax cut, tax cut — that's what everybody wants to hear. I said within nine months the government would ask for that money back and its now moving in that direction," she said.

Another topic she discussed was the defense budget. "A lot of money can be chopped and not harm the defenses of this country, especially when it comes to weapons that

In the small town of Morton Grove, Illinois, the country's strongest handgun ordinance goes into effect this week. The law prohibits both the sale and possession of handguns. The National Rifle Association is continuing to challenge the law in court on 2nd Amendment grounds. The NRA spends about $4 million a year on lobbying and uses its three magazines and a sophisticated computer/mailgram system to mobilize its 2.1 million members against gun control. Although polls show that most Americans favor some form of gun control, the NRA hopes its formidable power will make strong gun control laws, like the one in Morton Grove, the exception rather than the rule.

A Motherly Feeling-- Just Not Sick Enough

By GAIL MICHAELS

There's nothing more frightening than a sick child. Everyone knows that, especially the child. As the temperature rises, something within the average kid clicks, something which alerts him to the fact that as long as the thermometer stays above 98.6, he can get away with mental cruelty of the most flagrant nature. Naturally, if he's violently ill, he doesn't feel much like exercising his power. It's when he has a minor illness or when he's recuperating that he's so lethal. That's why I was so ambivalent about Meg's chickenpox. I was glad for her sake that she had a mild case, but I couldn't help feeling that, for someone who had to stay home from school for a week, she just was not sick enough.

Her projects were what really drove me wild. As a general rule, I do not encourage projects. The fruits of Meg's bright ideas are usually tacky and always involve an incredible mess. But after she had buzzed Zachary's jeep round and round the dining room table for an entire morning, I was desperate enough to go along with her. By nightfall we had 23 pillows scattered throughout the house, all made of construction paper, fiberfill and staples. For the rest of the week I endured the jeep.

Still, my ordeal was mild compared to that of a friend of mine. Her 5-year-old daughter, who usually behaves like Shirley Temple, was admitted to the hospital with a fever of 105, and the doctors weren't able to diagnose the cause. Hooked to an IV, the little girl lay listless in her hospital bed. Her mother was frantic.

By the end of the next day she was still frantic, but not because of the fever. It was down to 102, and the doctors now felt certain that it was caused by a kidney infection.

The little girl was feeling better, so much better that she was behaving like that famous associate of Balaam.

When I visited that evening, she was pushing the call button for the nurse so often that the nurse had stopped coming. "Get the nurse!" she told her mother. "I need to ah-ah-ah-ah."

"I can't understand you, dearest."

"I need to ah-ah-ah-ah."

"If you need to go to the bathroom, you know that I'm supposed to take you. The nurse is busy with her other patients."

Dearest grabbed her mother's arm and gave it a vicious shake. "But I want to ah-ah-ah-ah!"

"Now, sweetheart." The mother's face was frozen into a grim smile, and her teeth were clenched. I wondered how she could exhibit so much self-control after living through two sleepless nights and the most recent tantrum over the insertion of the fever suppository.

The next day she almost lost what little presence of mind she had left. Her daughter, freed at last from the bed and fell off on her back. A student nurse, pale with fear, rushed to her side. Her patient thought that this was hilarious.

My friend had only one comment. "Let me at her!"

The nurse gently restrained her. "Now, now, it's been so sick, you know you don't want to spank her."

She did, she really did, but she could see the nurse's point. "But you know," she confessed as she sank into a chair, "I liked her better when her fever was 105."

Gasoline Prices Continue Slide

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Carolina Motor Clubs says gasoline prices are continuing a nine-month drop in the Carolinas, falling nearly a penny a gallon since mid-December.

According to the Motor Club figures, self-service gas prices are down 6.6 cents a gallon from last spring, while full service prices have dropped 2.4 cents a gallon.

Gas prices peaked in North Carolina and South Carolina last April.

In its first report on gas prices this year, the club said Thursday the average price for a gallon of gas in the Carolinas is $1.36. A total of 185 service stations were surveyed.

Snow Survivors

PERRY, Iowa (AP) — How now cold sows? Jack Pennington's plucky porkers are doing well, but no thanks to three successive weekends of blizzards.

Pennington said that when the first of the storms hit, he discovered that four of his sows had been buried under a snowdrift 6 feet deep. He and son Dennis found one dead and gave up on the other three.

But one day last week, nearly three weeks after the blizzard, they gazed upon the barnyard and saw two of the sows hamming it up.

"Denny and I couldn't believe it," Pennington said. "But we found the hole they came out of. They burrowed through a good 6 feet of snow."

Apparently the sows survived by eating cornstalks and snow, Pennington said.

Dr. Harlyn McGuire, a Perry veterinarian, said he had heard stories — mostly from pioneer days — about hogs surviving several weeks after being buried in snow.

Body heat apparently made a cavern with enough air so they didn't smother, the vet surmised. He also said the hogs were insulated with their body fat and packed snow.

Pitt County health officials are sponsoring a series of programs aimed at improving child dental care during their observance of "Children's Dental Health Month" in February.

Dr. Robert F. Eringer, county health director, said more than 4,000 children in eight Greenville and Pitt County schools are participating in a fluoride mouth-rinse program.

Kathy Pressley Taft, public health hygienist, said all first grade students enrolled in the special preventive dental health program will participate in a coloring contest. McDonald's will treat the winners from each class to lunch, and the grand winner will be awarded a plaque by the East Central Dental Society.

Second grade students will receive a coupon for one order of french fries from McDonald's. Proctor and Gamble will supply Crest kits containing a new toothbrush and toothpaste for each third grader.

Schools will compete for points earned by completing one or more special projects in the school or classroom. A plaque will be presented to the school earning the greatest number of points.

Specialist Tells Of Unaware Child Abuse

By FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

Child abuse isn't just physical brutality or neglect, says child development specialist Nash Love Jr.

Giving caresses and sympathy at the wrong times is also child abuse, an insidious form which can cause the youngster to become an unhappy failure.

Love, a professor in the East Carolina School of Home Economics, believes the misuse of love can be "as harmful as physical brutality," if parents consistently give in to their children's entreaties or demands.

The parent wishes only for his child's happiness, but the child grows into a "demanding tyrant who will bring much unhappiness to himself and others," says Love.

Parents who cannot bear to disappoint their children establish no firm guidelines and overprotect children from the "unpleasant experiences of fear, disappointment and failure," he explained.

Many such 'abused' children become so difficult to deal with that their parents initiate family counseling, as a child psychologist as well as an educator, Dr. Love has seen these children often and worked with their anxious parents.

This form of "child abuse" is discussed in "Child Abuse by the Unaware," an article by Dr. Love and Joseph H. McVoy of Virginia Polytechnic Institute in a recent issue of "Marriage and Family Living."

Striking cases are presented:

Bobby, aged four, carelessly spills a soft drink despite his mother's warnings. "More Coke, Mommie, please more Coke, I'm sorry," he cries, in tears. Touched and anxious to restore the child's happiness, his mother gives Bobby a refill.

Little April demands a pack of gum during a supermarket shopping trip, and Mother, not wanting to refuse outright, uses typical "verbal tricks": "Maybe later." "It's not good for your teeth." "Let Mother finish her shopping and we'll see." April continues to whine loudly for the gum and to stop a screaming fit, Mother buys the gum.

According to Drs. Love and McVoy, these are clear examples of how well-meaning parents can, through "love" allow their children to manipulate them to the detriment of the children's ultimate happiness.

Bobby, through heart-rending tears, and April, through demands, are being "abused" by the wrong response, by the misuse of love.

Bobby's mother should refrain from filling up his cup again, say Love and McVoy, and point out to the child his own carelessness caused him to spill it. Children who lose or break things through carelessness should learn to "pay the consequences" of their acts, if they are to grow up to responsible adolescence and adulthood.

April's mother should have firmly refused to buy the gum when it was first demanded. By letting the child's screaming harass her into giving in, April's mother is teaching her daughter that "when she creates a scene, she gets a reward."

Love and McVoy believe that parents' misunderstanding of exactly what love is results in the misuse and abuse of loving responses.

"Love is neither something you can see or touch nor a particular behavior that you perform. The hugs, kisses, smiles, food and money parents use to communicate loving feelings is not withholding the love itself.

"Rewards given to a child who is being good are good rewards as well as acts of love," they stress. "Praise for a child doing his best at a project or playing a game is a stimulus for his growth as well as an act of love.

"When you give the same attention to your child when he disturbs you or let him have a cookie so he will stop bothering you or give him love and understanding when he is throwing a temper tantrum, be aware that your loving response can be harmful," they caution.

"These acts of love encourage undesirable behavior. Nagging is a trait that loses friends and breaks up marriages. When a child, like April in the supermarket, learns that nagging Mother repeatedly will get her what she wants, the child will retain that behavior and use it throughout her life to get what she wants.

"Seeing an April years later as a woman in family therapy suffering from marriage difficulties and alienated from her children brings home the abusive effects of the misuse of love."

The authors recommend that parents calmly separate themselves from a clinging or angry child.

"Your lack of emotional involvement in his behavior is taught him that he 'owns' the problem and not you. He may choose to have temper tantrums but has no right to impose them on you or on others."

The article emphasizes that when parents use bad judgment in giving loving responses, children will probably not learn the "hardworking cooperative behaviors that lead to social, economic or personal success." They are likely to be crippled by lazy, complaining, manipulative behavior that leads to failure.

Love and McVoy conclude with a warning to parents to "avoid the misuse of love, even when this means withholding loving responses."

"It is your responsibility as a parent to love enough to never give your child a loving response unless he is being good. Are the misuses of love subtle forms of child abuse? Maybe. Apply your love generously but with care, and you may never have to answer that question."

Marriage May Cut Friendship Ties

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were invited to dinner by a childhood friend of mine. We wanted our husbands to meet. The invitation was extended after I had called and invited them to our home for dinner. She insisted that we come to their home first, saying they would come to ours next time.

Abby, the evening was a total disaster! Immediately following dinner, her husband picked up a magazine, read a little, then promptly fell asleep in our faces.

My friend kept making excuses. ("He's tired.") The three of us carried on a conversation as best we could. It was very embarrassing. My friend and I talked about "old times," while my husband just listened. I felt sorry for him.

As soon as it was proper for us to depart, we said our goodbyes, and our hostess woke up her husband to see us to the door. He never apologized for his rude behavior. I felt sorry for my friend, who had gone to a lot of trouble preparing a delicious dinner.

Naturally my husband and I were appalled by this incident. Do you think we did the right thing by staying while the host slept? Or should we have departed as soon as he fell asleep?

Should we invite this couple to our home? My main concern is preserving the friendship that my friend and I have maintained for 27 years.

PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: There is a possibility that your friend's husband has a health problem. Ask her. In any case, do not subject yourselves (or them) to another such evening. If you want to preserve the friendship, do both husbands a favor and meet your friend for lunch.

Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.

HEADACHE FIGHTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans swallow more than 90 million doses of aspirin daily to relieve their headaches, according to Dr. Joseph White, president of the newly formed Aspirin Foundation of America.

Aspirin, a mainstay in the nation's medicine cabinets for the past 82 years, traces its origin to the dawn of civilization. Primitive man chewed the leaves and bark of the willow tree to reduce his fever. The tree contains a substance called salicin, closely related to acetylsalicylic acid or aspirin.

Should Reduce Costs

Pitt County is rightfully looking to measures which will tighten up its food stamp program. The Board of County Commissioners this week approved three new positions within the Department of Social Services for the food stamp program. Social Services Director Ed Garrison said an extra supervisor will tighten up internal performance. Also approved were a fraud investigator and an additional eligibility specialist. Pitt was one of the North Carolina counties listed as having a high rate of errors and Garrison said most of the errors involved recipients supplying incorrect information.

In the meantime Dr. Sarah Morrow, secretary of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, has announced plans to assist county social service agencies to seek state funds for additional food stamp, Medicaid and AFDC eligibility workers. The plan, of which Garrison was a prime author, is to be submitted to federal agencies.

Hopefully the county and the state are moving in the right direction. If the additional positions are used wisely they can far more than pay the costs of the extra staffing. Administration of the programs should be carefully monitored to make certain that this is the case.

Punxatawney Phil Performs

Only in Punxatawney are there gentlemen wearing top hats on the morning of February 2 to awaken a sleeping varmint known variously as a woodchuck, a marmot, and on February 2 as a groundhog. It will always be a mystery why otherwise sane and sensible businessmen would leave their places of business and search a lot with groundhog dens to poke a stick inside (for awakening) and fishout the reluctant prognosticator to tell him to open his eyes to see if he's casting a shadow. He always does ... if he lives in Punxatawney. The reason is simple: winter is always six weeks from ending, and if the groundhog can't see his shadow, he's in deep trouble. Next question: how did Punxatawney, Pa. get to be the Groundhog Capital of the world? Answer: with a groundhog wearing the colorful down-home name of Phil, plus a club that meets only once a year with top hats more important than long johns as ceremonial garb, Punxatawney couldn't miss. As for Phil, once he stopped grumbling about the human society he has to deal with, he goes back to sleep. Smartest thing he'll do for six weeks.

Boyles And Bonds

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — Gov. Jim Hunt and State Treasurer Harlan Boyles once more find themselves on opposite sides of a critical philosophical issue in state government. Which is better: to sell bonds for important and expensive building projects, or to pay as you go? Says the Governor: Borrowing is the American way, you get the money and get the job done, then pay it back with inflated dollars tomorrow. Says the Treasurer: Sooner or later it's gonna take a tax hike to pay back borrowed money. Why not hike a little now and get double the mileage from the money instead of paying so much interest?

meet the shortfall. Meanwhile, local governments got members of the House of Representatives to endorse the optional penny boost in sales taxes but that notion got hung up in the Senate when the leaders there determined if anybody was going to get more money from the sales tax it would be the state.

sewer bonds totalling $300 million boosts the total payback to $2.2 billion. That means paying from the state budget about $120 million every year, off the top, just repaying the debt. Such a whopping obligation for 25 years means that future needs would have to be pushed even further down the list. A new penny sales tax, Boyles explains, would produce about $250 million a year. Divide that up so schools get $100 million, local governments get $100 million, and water-sewer (Please Turn To Page 5)

BILL NOBLITT

The divergent views come into clearest focus in the current running debate about water and sewer facilities in communities across the state, school renovation and construction needs, highway fund shortfalls, the prospect that one way or another North Carolina is going to see another penny added to the sales tax before long. Much Work State school officials have been pushing a $600 million school bond proposal for years, but it keeps getting pushed to the back burner. But a $300 million water-sewer bond question will be put to the voters soon because Gov. Hunt pushed that as critical to continued economic growth and development. Likewise for highways, Hunt pushed a gasoline tax through to help

Boyles and other education leaders are still pushing the idea of the added penny being earmarked for specific purposes — school construction among them. In recent talks with local school board chairmen and superintendents at a Winston-Salem meeting, Boyles put dollar marks on his projections in an effort to help settle the question of bonds versus pay as you go. School bonds as proposed in the amount of $600 million would require some $1.5 billion in principal and interest over 25 years. Water and

One Of The Statistics

When I saw Dembow shoveling his snow off his walk I stopped by and said, "Getting some exercise?" "Sort of," he said. "But then again it gives me something to do. I don't know if you've heard it or not but I am now an unemployment statistic." "I'm sorry to hear that," I said. "Why are you edging away from me?" he wanted to know. "Was I edging away from you?" I said in surprise. "Don't worry about it. You're not the first person who's done it. The thing I discovered about being unemployed is that it is not considered so much an economic tragedy, but more a social disease. People are afraid you've got something that they could catch." "I never thought about it. How do they behave?" "Well, as you know the first thing anyone in this country asks you is 'What do you do?' If you say you're unemployed, you can see the person becoming nervous and fidgety. He either tries to get away or starts telling you stories about other people he knew who were unemployed, like we all had the same bad unemployment bit than people know. First of all people tend to think you did something wrong, or you wouldn't have been laid off. It's like being raped. The victim is the one who is under suspicion. You can see it in their eyes. 'Old Dembow, just couldn't cut the mustard.' Then there's a telegraph system in this country and the word gets around faster than you can get a letter across town. You start hearing from every place you had a charge account. Even if you don't owe them any money, they know you're not going to spend any with them any more, so they figure they have nothing to lose by being nasty."

back problem." "What do you say now when people ask you what you do?" "I tell them I do dishes, watch television, make beds, and now I can tell them I shovel snow." "Don't you tell them you're looking for another job?" "Rarely. Most people freeze up when you tell them that because they're afraid you will ask them for one. I guess the toughest thing about being out of a job is talking about it with friends. All they keep doing is squeezing you on the shoulder and saying 'Everything's going to be okay.' "They haven't done me any good, but they sure have made my shoulder sore." "You're lucky you can still shovel snow." "There is a lot more to this unemployment bit than people know. First of all people tend to think you did something wrong, or you wouldn't have been laid off. It's like being raped. The victim is the one who is under suspicion. You can see it in their eyes. 'Old Dembow, just couldn't cut the mustard.' Then there's a telegraph system in this country and the word gets around faster than you can get a letter across town. You start hearing from every place you had a charge account. Even if you don't owe them any money, they know you're not going to spend any with them any more, so they figure they have nothing to lose by being nasty." "How is Your wife taking all this?" "She's been great and so have the kids. But her relatives seem to be enjoying my bad luck. Ever since I married Evie they said she made a mistake, and now they feel their predictions have come true." "But being out of work doesn't make a person a bad husband or a bad wife." "It does to the spouse's relatives. Most of Evie's live in deathly fear the phone's going to ring and she's going to ask them to take us in." "I must say, you're handling yourself very well for a person who is having a difficult time." "I didn't intend to. When I got word I was canned I wanted to kill somebody, but I didn't know who to kill, so I'm just biding my time." "Are you still planning on killing somebody?" "Yup, the next economic expert who says, 'Things have to get worse before they get better.'"

Other Editors Say Less Teachers

(Chapel Hill Newspaper)

The public schools in North Carolina as well as throughout the nation are going to be in for some tough times in the years that lie ahead. The baby boom is over and school enrollment is decreasing. Here in Chapel Hill and Carrboro the chart of student populations showed a drop of 96 students this year from 1980-81. If Chapel Hill and Carrboro's population was decreasing, this might be understandable, but the town continues to grow with the number of school children continuing to decrease. John Wilson, president of the N.C. Association of Educators, says the state "may lose 600 to 700 teachers because of declining enrollment." Local funding might eliminate 200 more jobs. Those numbers add up in a hurry. For example, in 1981-82 N.C. schools received $9 million in Title I money for programs geared to the poor. The projection for 1982-83 is $73 million. Money for educating the state's handicapped could drop from $26 million to $19 million, and allotments for vocational rehabilitation are likely to decrease from $20 million to $16 million. Those figures also add up in a hurry. Pamela Mayer, superintendent of the Chapel Hill-Carrboro City Schools, is well aware of the problems facing the schools through the rest of the eighties. There will be many changes made to handle as economically as possible the cost of educating a child in our public schools. Our individual schools have individual objectives. Where there is a smaller student population, less money should be spent. Where there is sub-standard housing and teaching, corrections must be made. Any kind of education in Chapel Hill and Carrboro must be the very best that society has to offer, and that has been the basic philosophy of the administration, teachers and school board for many years.

Strength For Today

GOD DISPOSES Just before Napoleon started on his disastrous Russian campaign, someone quoted to him the saying, "Man proposes, but God disposes." Drawing himself up in haughty pride, the Emperor replied, "In this case, I dispose." As he entered Russia the snow began to fall—in effect every tiny snowflake was a message from heaven that when men set themselves up in defiance of the Almighty, there is trouble ahead. The man who proudly declared "In this case, I dispose" found that while he could "dispose" to an army of nearly 600,000 men and to most of the states of Europe in 1812, he could not "dispose" to the weather. Although he beat the Russian armies, his retreat from the Russian winter became a rout. Eventually it cost the lives of 250,000 of his soldiers. The Almighty has his snow storms ready for the haughty egotists who think they can dispose as well as propose. The judgment may start to come down from heaven as gently as snowflakes, but eventually it will be crushing. —Elsha Douglass

Artist Amid Typewriters

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent
NEW YORK (AP) — A wise acre at a symposium of media moguls and academicians once asked Red Smith why sportswriters spend so much time and space covering the horse races. The impious charge implied that the playground scribes were more interested in investing their pay envelopes at the parimutual window than in delineating the fine points of the sport of kings. Walter Wellesley "Red" Smith impaled this non-believer in the purity of press box prose with a shaft of characteristic wit and wisdom. "No horse," he allowed from the vantage point of more than a half century behind the typewriter, "has ever called me up at 4:30 in the morning to say he has been misquoted."

English lady who was asked if it were true that she came to America on the maiden voyage of the Titanic. 'Well, part way,' she answered. 'What better introduction could a reader ever get to the niceties of this incomprehensible pastime played in white flannels with pizza paddles in the Mother Country?' Smith was among the first to discover the splendors of Stengelese, "a live language only superficially resembling Sanskrit," but like other scholars confessed his inability "to capture in print the special quality, the pure body and flavor, the rich, crunchy goodness of Mr. Casey Stengel's speech." "The human ear is a wonderful instrument," he conceded, "but not so wonderful as the Stengel larynx. The mother tongue of the Yankees' manager is an oil that rolls over the consciousness but is not retained. The pencil of a stenographer may catch a phrase and hold it, quivering in beauty like a butterfly on the entomologist's pin, but something escapes in the translation from notebook to type." Owlsh behind his rimless spectacles on his perch in the press box at most of the great sports events in the past six decades, Red Smith seldom burdened his audiences with stacks of boring statistics. But the essentials of the unfolding drama never eluded him. His spot account of Bobby Thomson's pennant-winning home run for the Giants against the Dodgers on that unforgettable October afternoon atop Coogan's Bluff in 1951 began, "The art of fiction is dead; reality has strangled invention," but went on to point out that until then Thomson had been the goat of the game for trying to stretch a single into a double and blowing two routine ground balls at third. As Thomson's crowd-mesmerizing clout disappeared in the left field stands, Smith artfully made the concluding point that in children's games, Fate deals out the hands: "Ralph Branca turned and started for the clubhouse. The number on his uniform looked huge. Thirteen." No sports was too esoteric or abstruse for his graceful appraisal, not even "pessallo," Finland's national sport which he discovered during the 1952 Helsinki Olympics. "What the Finns did to the game that Doubleday did not invent shouldn't happen in Brooklyn," Red wrote. "It (pessallo) was invented by Lauri Pinkala, a professor who wears a hearing aid and believes his game was modeled on baseball. Somebody must have described baseball to him when his battery was dead." Fearless in taking on the club owners like George Steinbrenner and the sports commissars like Bowie Kuhn

It is doubted here that any golfer, pugilist, cricketer, wide receiver, Olympic javelin heaver or any other adult at play ever did either. Red Smith was as careful in his use of words as he was creative. Such was his precision that had he turned to painting instead of pen pushing, he could have done the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel without a drop cloth. He died the other day at 76, bringing to a close a career that began in 1927 on the Milwaukee Journal and quickly reached a plateau of brilliance unequalled by any journalist in his lifetime, although it took the custodians of the Pulitzer Prize 49 years to recognize his genius. Not to have Red Smith in the previous two generations is like having lived in 18th century London without dropping in at the Cheshire Cheese for a mulled ale with Dr. Johnson or having boycotted the theater in Restoration times. Alluding to the classics in writing about Red Smith does not even constitute minihyperbole, if there is such a thing, because his style smiled and twinkled with Shakespearean and biblical references. Describing some sports setback that escapes my mind at the moment, Smith invoked both the Bard and America's greatest gelding (never beaten at over a mile and half) to come up with the line "the unkindest cut since Kelso." Here is Red Smith, ringside at Madison Square Garden, delivering a classic requiem for a couple of third-rate heavyweights named Buster Mathis and Tugboat Thomas: "At one sight of Mathis undraped, Thomas genuflected. Buster struck him in the middle of his haircut, and Tugboat was one with Nineveh and Tyre." I recall, almost word for word (I hope), a Red Smith story about cricket that began: "To understand cricket, you have to understand the British. And to understand the British, you have to understand the

Why Housing Market Died Most people still consider $11,400 a fair pay raise over a five-year period, but it was no match for rising mortgage interest and prices. San Diego homebuyers in 1976 spent 24.2 percent of their income on home mortgages, real estate taxes and hazard insurance. Remember when it used to be 25? As recently as five years ago, bankers were accustomed to saying one-quarter of income was the upper limit in budgeting for housing costs. Most people paid far less than that, generally well under 20 percent. In 1976 homebuyers spent 18.4 percent of income for mortgages, taxes and insurance on conventionally financed homes, according to Advance Mortgage Corp., one of the nation's largest home mortgage bankers. In the latter half of 1981 it put the percentage at 32.1 percent, the result of the average home price having risen to $78,200 from $44,330, the mortgage to 15.14 percent from 8.87, and annual payments to $9,600 from $3,400, while household income rose only to $29,900 from $18,500. The San Francisco-Oakland-San Jose market was only slightly better last year, with 40.7 percent of income going for home payments. If it weren't for unusually big incomes — an average household income of $39,500 — the percentage might have looked even worse. Prices averaged $130,800, compared with $59,200 in 1976. Buyers in 1976 paid $4,600 on mortgages, taxes, insurance. Buyers last year spent $15,500. In Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Columbus, Dallas, Los Angeles, Miami, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, New York, Phoenix, Portland, Ore., St. Louis, Seattle, Tampa and Washington the income percentages were 30 or more. Of all the major markets surveyed, only Chicago, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Houston, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh remained under 30 percent of income for housing, and some of these percentages were depressed because of poor economies. Mylod found Denver and Houston to be exceptions to the general trend. Since 1979, the percent of income needed by Denver homebuyers has steadily fallen, from 25.4 percent, to 24.8 in 1980 to 23.9 in 1981. In the latter half of 1981 the fall continued, reaching only 22.4 percent. It was only slightly higher in Houston, with a percentage of 24.7. The explanation, Mylod believes, lies in the strength of the new-home market in these cities. And it might offer hope for other cities too. The new homes being built, he said, are "tilted heavily toward the low end" of the price scale. The economy house, that is, is on the market. Unlike Denver and Houston, however, most areas cannot support a strong new-home market. "Nationally, the percentage of household income required to meet the average conventional mortgage payment increased by nearly two-thirds between 1976 and 1981," said Mylod. When you consider that a homebuyer in Phoenix, for example, must pay $13,200 a year for housing that cost $3,800 in 1976, or a homebuyer in St. Louis must pay $11,000 for what cost $2,700 in 1976, you can see why the housing markets have died in spite of potentially great demand. Says Mylod: "The only buyers left in the market either have incomes well above the average, can settle for housing size or quality well below the average, or are lucky enough to find a subsidized mortgage at significantly below market rates."

(he once described the weather for a canceled game as "turning Kunish"), Smith even dared the wrath of Sherlock Holmes fans and Baker Street Irregulars around the world with a scathing piece on the sacrosanct sleuth that offered for openers:

"It has been established that Mr. Sherlock Holmes, the detective, was a horse player of degenerate principles who thought nothing of fixing a race and probably had his syringe in the veins of more than one thoroughbred saddled by his mysterious acquaintance, Wilson, the notorious canary trainer."

Nothing quite as irreverent had come along in literature since James Thurber wrote about the lady mystery fan who had "solved" Macbeth and was ready take 'em Hamlet.

The New York Times, which had the uncanny hindsight to hire Red Smith when he was a year beyond the normal retirement age, once spiked, hung up, squelched a Red Smith column urging that the United States boycott the Moscow Olympics because of the Soviet intervention of Afghanistan. That proves once again that even the best of the heavyweights takes one on the chin now and then. Somebody had decided that America's greatest sports writer was engaged in some sort of a crusade, which he always was — a crusade for truth and beauty of thought and language on the sports pages.

The Times, to its eternal credit, made amends by putting Red Smith's obit two columns deep on the front page, where it belonged.

Public Is Offered Records Of Voting

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolinians may be able to get handy records of their state legislators' votes in the future, says The North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research.

Ran Coble, director of the center, said the it has compiled all roll call votes cast on public bills in the Legislature's two October 1981 special sessions. That, he said, was the initial test of what may become a regular service.

"Though the votes of each member of the Legislature are published at the national level and in other states, no group has ever undertaken such a project in North Carolina," Coble said.

The center, an independent, non-profit corporation, will continue publishing votes cast during the special session on redistricting next week and the scheduled June budget session.

Coble said the center will offer subscriptions to the service and will determine whether to continue the listings after the summer session. A price has not been set, but Coble said he wants to keep it under $5 for the experimental sessions.

In the regular session, he plans to publish a listing every two weeks, at a price to be determined later.

The publication covers all 50 senators and 120 House members, and lists how they voted — or whether they were absent — on each recorded vote. The initial report covers about 170 bills considered during the two October meetings.

work gets $50 million, and you not only get started meeting the needs right away but you keep up year after year, and all the money goes for solid work, instead of paying interest on borrowed money.

"If we borrow for clean water, do we also borrow for school facilities? And, if we decide to borrow for both, do we realize that interest costs will make a tax increase inevitable? If a tax increase must come, should we not then be realists at the outset, and plan to apply the proceeds directly to the construction of facilities rather than to payment of interest to lenders?" Boyles wonders.

The Treasurer proposed a committee of 10 from each county to form a "Committee of One Thousand" to keep tabs on the budget process in the General Assembly to boost education and community development.

Sunbird Drops Two Of Routes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The president of Sunbird Airlines says the nation's economic crunch has caused the airlines to lay off 25 employees and to ground two of its unprofitable routes.

Ralph Quinlan said service will be dropped beginning Monday from Jacksonville, Fla., through Savannah, Ga., to Columbia, S.C., and from Norfolk, Va., to Columbia, where Sunbird has lost $2 million since it launched a new hub operation last August.

Quinlan said Sunbird has added one new flight and is switching to larger planes that can carry more profitable passenger loads. He noted that many airlines are in financial trouble because of last summer's air traffic controllers strike, and estimated that Sunbird's business would increase by 25 percent if the economy improves.

He said the 25 employees who were laid off were given written assurances they would be rehired within 90 days if still available. Sunbird employs about 110 people, including 30 pilots.

Sunbird plans to move its headquarters from Little Mountain Airport at Denver, N.C., to Charlotte this spring when facilities become available, Quinlan said. Twenty of the airlines' 90 flights are out of the Charlotte, which is Sunbird's major hub city.

Quinlan said Sunbird's new service from Richmond to Columbia is doing well, with planes running about 75 percent full. He said the rest of Sunbird's daily schedules are healthy, with the exception of a route from Hickory to Atlanta.

Sunbird, which began operations Nov. 15, 1979, has been using eight-passenger planes but is beginning to use $1.5 million projects that carry 15 passengers at greatly reduced per-passenger costs.

He said six of the planes are now in service, but one of Sunbird's older planes will remain in service until April, when other new planes are scheduled to arrive.

The airline also serves Wilmington, Fayetteville, Hickory, Raleigh and Greenville in North Carolina, and Knoxville, Tenn.

Fieldcrest Is Trying Recoup

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Fieldcrest Mills officials say they're trying to reduce costs after the company's earnings tumbled in 1981. But they also say they're ready to take advantage of an expected upturn in the economy later this year.

In letters sent this week to Fieldcrest shareholders, Chairman William C. Battle and President Francis Larkin said incoming orders fell dramatically in November and December as retailers attempted to reduce inventories.

"In response, Fieldcrest curtailed production schedules to control inventories, which resulted in significant unabsorbed fixed costs," they wrote.

The company, which makes bed and bath fashions, rugs and carpeting, said fourth quarter sales were $149 million, down 5 percent for the same period charge of 73 cents a share, or $2.7 million, to fourth quarter earnings.

The total included operating losses of $1.2 million, unrealized foreign exchange translation losses of $512,000 and a nearly $1 million one-time writeoff of all deferred pre-operating expenses and startup costs.

Fieldcrest's share of 1981 losses of Fieldcrest Ireland was $4.2 million, or $1.10 a share.

Net earnings for the fourth quarter dropped to $2.6 million, or 68 cents a share, from $7.3 million or $1.96 a share in 1980.

The company reported net sales for 1981 of $526 million, the same as the year before. But net income was $9.5 million, or $2.49 a share compared with $17.4 million and $4.66 a share the year before.

In its European operations, the company reported that the recession in Europe and inflationary cost increases in Ireland continued to affect the performance of Fieldcrest Ireland Ltd. Operations resulted in a charge of 73 cents a share, or $2.7 million, to fourth quarter earnings.

Corps Proposes Operation Cut

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, in an effort to increase efficiency, conserve water and decrease the cost of operations of the Dismal Swamp Canal, is proposing a reduction in operation of the locks and drawbridges at Deep Creek, Chesapeake, Va., and South Mills, N.C.

The proposal is to operate the drawbridges and locks at 8:30 a.m., noon and 3:30 p.m. seven days a week, and to install marine band VHF radios at each lock to provide communication between vessel operators and government employees to arrange the most expeditious transit through the canal under these limitations.

Interested persons should express their views on the proposed changes and the reasons for their position by writing to the District Engineer, Norfolk District, Corps of Engineers, Fort Norfolk, 803 Front Street, Norfolk, Va., 23501.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

AHITHOPHEL, LONG A MEMBER OF KING DAVID'S PRIVY COUNCIL, A WILY POLITICIAN, WHOSE ADVICE WAS VALUED AS WISDOM FROM A SACRED ORACLE, LEFT DAVID AND JOINED ABSOLOM WHEN THAT YOUNG PRINCE REVOLTED AGAINST HIS FATHER IN AN ATTEMPT TO SEIZE THE THRONE. BUT KING DAVID SENT ANOTHER MAN OF WISDOM, HUSAI, IN A PRETENSE OF JOINING ABSOLOM'S REBEL ARMY, TO COUNTERACT ANY OF AHITHOPHEL'S SAGE COUNSEL. WHEN ABSOLOM DID TAKE HUSAI'S ADVICE OVER HIS OWN, AHITHOPHEL KNEW THAT DAVID WOULD NEVER BE DEFEATED—SO HE LEFT THE ARMY, RETURNING HOME, WHERE HE PUT ALL HIS AFFAIRS IN ORDER—FOR HE KNEW WHAT TO EXPECT ONCE KING DAVID GOT HOLD OF HIM—AND HANGED HIMSELF!

If You Have a Habit Of Following The Crowd, We Suggest, The Best Crowd to Follow is the Crowd Going To Church

Doctrinal Consensus Reached

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Church union and "proof that the Holy Spirit is at work."

The 16,000-word document, developed through years of interconfessional dialogue, offers broad agreement on three of the thorniest issues dividing Christianity — baptism, the eucharist and the ministry.

The consensus reached calls for acceptance of varying approaches to these practices and asks the churches to make official responses to the agreement at the "highest appropriate levels of authority."

It was approved unanimously at a meeting in January of the Faith and Order Commission of the World Council of Churches. Its member denominations as well as others are represented on the commission.

They include Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox, Oriental Orthodox, Lutheran, Reformed, Anglican, United, Baptist, Methodist, Disciples and Adventist traditions. Theologian Paul Crow of Indianapolis, ecumenical officer of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), called the accord "a miracle." He says it may be "the most radical thing ever done" under World Council auspices.

The agreement is the culmination of a quarter century of ecumenical dialogue that has accelerated and greatly broadened in the last 15 years with the entry into it of Roman Catholicism. An earlier version of the document was produced in 1976 and circulated among the churches, with their reactions used in refining the new agreement.

It "overcomes many of the classical differences in dogma," says Lutheran theologian William Lazareth, the commission's director. Roman Catholic theologian Avery Dulles of Washington says "it is amazing how much we can say in common" about the three key topics. He says dialogue has "built up a common ground that we have not had for centuries."

Generally, the document calls for greater flexibility on the various historically dividing issues, such as mutual acceptance of either adult or infant baptism, whether by immersion, sprinkling or pouring. The accord also calls on churches with the "apostolic succession" type of ministry to recognize the "apostolic content" in churches without the succession tradition and Church scholars see a new agreement by representatives of all the world's major Christian traditions on long-disputed doctrinal issues as a watershed in the quest for Christian unity. The agreement, variously called the "convergence document" or "Lima text," was reached at a meeting in Lima, Peru of representatives of Roman Catholicism, Eastern Orthodox and the various branches of Protestantism.

The accord is "an ecumenical achievement of historical significance," says United Methodist theologian John Deschner of Dallas. Roman Catholic theologian Jean Tillard of Canada called it a "framework for

Appeal Not Yet Decided

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The official who tried and failed to defend Arkansas' creation-science law in court says he will await the fate of a similar law in Louisiana before deciding whether to appeal.

Steve Clark, the state attorney general, announced his decision Thursday, saying an appeal right now would be futile, but the Louisiana law, which is worded differently, may end up being a guide to a renewed effort here.

"There will be a better day and a better time on this issue," Clark said at a news conference. The Arkansas law, passed by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Frank White, was struck down Jan. 5 by U.S. District Judge William Overton, who said it violated constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state.

It would have required public schools, beginning in the fall, to teach the creation theory of the origin of the universe if evolution was taught. "We stood more to lose through appealing than we did by backing off and allowing Louisiana to have its day," said the Rev. Roy McLaughlin, leader of the Moral Majority in Arkansas. But former state Sen. Jim Holsted, D-North Little Rock, the bill's sponsor, said he wanted the state to appeal and said it could have won. Holsted claimed Clark didn't favor the bill to start with.

Clark said the Louisiana law, itself the subject of two lawsuits, would be easier to defend because portions objectionable to the court here had been eliminated.

Statistics on the money supply. Gainers held a 2-1 lead over losers in the mid-day tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stood at 847.03, unchanged from Thursday's close. Analysts were estimating that the money supply figures would show a decline of as much as $3 billion, or perhaps even more, which might ease pressure on the Fed to tighten credit. In this morning's economic news, the government reported a surprise decline in the unemployment rate from 8.8 to 8.5 percent. But Labor Department officials cautioned that the statistics didn't appear to reflect any substantial improvement in the jobless picture. Airline stocks were strong, responding to word that Britain's Laker Airways was in bankruptcy proceedings as well as signs of further weakness in oil prices. Delta rose 1 1/2 to 26 1/2; Trans World 1 1/2 to 18 1/4; American Airlines 3/4 to 11 1/4; and Pan Am 1/4 to 3, all in active trading. The NYSE's composite index rose .13 to 67.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .06 at 284.94. Volume on the Big Board totalled 21.82 million shares at noontime, against 20.68 million at the same point Thursday.

Rep. Chisholm...

(Continued from Page 1) become obsolete before they come off the drawing board. Still a lot of money can be saved," Rep. Chisholm said. She gave personal views on the Haitian refugees being held in Florida. She compared them with the treatment of Ethiopians who fled to this country. "Seemingly the parallel between the two is they are black," she said. Mrs. Chisholm reiterated that she was not planning to run for another term: "I'm always in the public eye - I have no private life."

In speaking to the black youth of today, she said, "I speak to you not as a politician, but as a young grandmother. I do this in the form of a letter. You are wondering about your future ... no body is going to do anything for you just because you are black. Make the most of every educational opportunity you can. "I love this country, but I will not sit back and not speak out about the grievances and injustices of this country ... In the next few years, I warn you of the Golden Rule, 'He who has the gold, rules.'" she concluded.

Found Guns Lips Are Sealed About Expulsion

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 28-year-old woman who found two M-16 fully automatic rifles on a Fort Bragg football field says military police were stunned when she walked into their office to return the guns. Karen Chism, an unemployed former Army sergeant, said she found the weapons in the middle of Hedrick Stadium after a group of soldiers left the area for Recondo School Tuesday morning. "I couldn't believe it, they were so visible," she said. Chism and two friends went to the stadium to jog, but were forced to wait while a group of soldiers packed up and left. On the field, she saw the two rifles and duffel bags. After the trucks left, a van pulled up and she asked the driver whether he was guarding the weapons left behind. Ms. Chism said. The man said no, but that the soldiers probably would return for them later. "I told him that wouldn't do," she said. She took the weapons into the 108th MP Company and gave them to two MPs, and their "jaws dropped open," she said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department and the FBI are refusing to say if espionage prompted the expulsion this week of Maj. Gen. Vasily I. Chitov, the highest ranking military officer at the Soviet Embassy. The Washington Post and NBC-TV have quoted sources as saying Chitov had sensitive, incriminating documents in his possession when he was apprehended by five U.S. agents last weekend after a high-speed car chase through Washington. The FBI refused Thursday to discuss Chitov's departure or the events preceding it. State Department spokeswoman Sandra McCarty said she was expelled "for activities inconsistent with his diplomatic status." She did not elaborate. Ms. McCarty said she did not want to speculate whether Chitov's expulsion might cause the Soviet Union to expel an American diplomat in retaliation. Chitov, listed as senior military attache, and his wife, Liliya, left the United States for Moscow Wednesday after he was declared persona non grata, Ms. McCarty said. The Washington Post said in today's editions that sources said Chitov was a member of GRU, the Soviet intelligence agency. The newspaper quoted sources as saying that Pentagon officials were upset because they did not know the FBI had the general under surveillance until after his apprehension. Because he is a military officer, his presence in the United States and his expulsion were subject to Pentagon approval, according to The Post.

She took the weapons into the 108th MP Company and gave them to two MPs, and their "jaws dropped open," she said.

A Fort Bragg spokesman confirmed Wednesday that the unattended weapons were handed over to MPs Tuesday morning and that the incident is under investigation. Capt. Bill Maddox said it is normal procedure that weapons are under guard at all times or in someone's possession. In 1978, an entire battalion of 82nd Airborne Division troops, more than 600 soldiers, were restricted to quarters for nine days until one missing M-16 was located.

Germ Tests Disclosed

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. occupation force in Japan after World War II ordered a government agency and university researchers to conduct bacteriological experiments on convicts, a major newspaper reported today.

The Public Health and Welfare Bureau of the U.S. General Occupation Headquarters requested the Japanese Health and Welfare Ministry and Tokyo National University in November 1946 to inject Japanese medical students with typhus bacteria for medical tests. Mainichi Shimbun reported in a front-page article. Quoting an unnamed former top official in the Health and Welfare Ministry, the Mainichi report said: Officials of the ministry and of the university protested the request from Brig. Gen. C.F. Sams, saying the injections violated basic human rights and could be fatal. The general then ordered the researchers to use criminals awaiting capital punishment. The Japanese, after consulting with the Ministry of Law, agreed if the prisoners "chose to do so under their own free will."

Experiments were conducted on 12 convicts in the spring and fall of 1947, the report said. It did not give their names or condition. Typhus was a serious problem during America's 1945-52 occupation of Japan. In 1946 alone, 32,366 people were infected with the disease and 3,351 of them died, according to government statistics. The disease later was almost eradicated after antibiotics came into wide use.

Whitebird, who was notified Jan. 27 that he was being suspended without pay for an unexcused absence, drove to a bar to confront the police chief, he said. He then made the arrest when the chief got in his car. The charge against the chief was dismissed by the Eveleth Police Commission for "lack of substantiation." Whitebird was notified Wednesday that he is being suspended without pay until Feb. 19 when a hearing will be held on his dismissal.

Robbers Hold Up Coin Truck

An investigation was under way by the Pitt County Sheriff's Department into an armed robbery around 8:30 a.m. today involving a truck transporting coins on N.C. 33 just south of the Pitt-Edgecombe County line. Sheriff Ralph Tyson said the driver of a Consolidated Coin Caterers truck told deputies that two black males operating a yellow vehicle pulled up beside him near Penny Hill, brandished a shotgun and made him stop his truck. The driver, according to the sheriff, reported that the two men robbed the truck of approximately $2,000 in coins. The truck driver, who was traveling alone, was not injured, Tyson said.

Consolidated Coin Caterers is based in Edgecombe County, he said. The Edgecombe County Sheriff's Department was assisting in the investigation.

East Carolina Crushes Baptist, 88-62

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Coach Dave Odum said in his pre-game comments that he hoped his East Carolina Pirates would play like they can rather than at the level of their sometime lesser competition, and last night, the Pirates responded.

Against Baptist College of Charleston, a team the Pirates beat 70-56 earlier this year, East Carolina ran up its highest offensive total of the year, rolling to an 88-62 victory.

The margin of victory was also the largest of the season for East Carolina.

"I'm very pleased with the game. Perhaps elated is a better word. It was a total performance," Odum said afterwards. "This is certainly what we wanted — a win in which we played hard and yet won convincingly. This is the first game this year where we've been able to relax a little. I remember last year when we had to go to overtime to beat them, and they're a much better basketball team this year. I certainly didn't expect a 26-point win."

Odum said he felt that this was the second time the Pirates have caught Baptist on a night when the Buccaneers didn't play at their best. "But you've got to give our players some credit for this, too. They created turnovers and confusion for Baptist. It's nice to have a game like this to build confidence on. We played from wire to wire with confidence. We played smart and we rebounded well after the first couple of minutes."

Those rebounds — East Carolina led on the boards, 43-28, helped the Pirates get fast break after fast break — and that in turn led to one of the best shooting percentages of the year, 60.3 as the Pirates tossed in 35 of 58 shots from the floor.

Morris Hargrove led the ECU rebounding with nine, while Charles Green and Al Mack each contributed seven.

The fast breaks and heady play under the basket also led to 22 assists, one of the best nights of the year for ECU. Mack led here with six while Hargrove and Charles Watkins each added four.

"A game like this should help us with the tough schedule we have ahead," Odum said. "It gives you a chance to catch your breath, to build some momentum and confidence."

Odum added that he was particularly pleased with the play of some of the younger players — everyone got into the action, as Hargrove, with 27 minutes, played the most of any of the regulars.

And perhaps most of all, Odum was glad to see the return of Tony Byles, who had missed the last four games with a broken wrist. Byles, in 13 minutes of play scored nine points.

There was little doubt as to the outcome from the very first. Although Baptist's Reggie Walker scored the first basket for a 2-0 lead, East Carolina came back and after taking a 5-4 lead, powered in 15 straight points to run out to a 20-4 lead with 11:27 left in the first half. Watkins led the spurt with five points, while Hargrove and Green each added four. Bruce Peartree added the other bucket.

After that, the closest Baptist came was 12 as the Buccaneers ran off eight straight points in the late stages to cut the lead back to 32-20 after the Pirates had reached as much as a 21-point lead, 31-10.

But the Pirates again pulled away, taking a 41-22 lead at the half.

In the second half, East Carolina upped the lead to 24, 48-24, before Baptist rallied to cut it back to 18 on two occasions. Aside from that, the lead never fell below 20, and the Pirates continued to pull away, building as much as a 31-point spread, 72-41 with 8:32 left. At that point, East Carolina had hit on 11 of 15 shots from the floor for the half.

And, at that point, Odum went to his bench, playing everyone, but it changed little as the Pirates continued to hold the lead easily the rest of the way. Green led the Pirate scoring with 19 points, while Hargrove added 14. Peartree had 11 and Watkins, 10.

Only one Buccaneer scored in double figures as Howard Richardson came off the bench to score 12. The win boosted the ECU record to 8-10 on the season, while Baptist falls to 10-10.

The Pirates return to action on Wednesday, hosting Old Dominion in an important ECAC-South game.

Hands Up!

All hands are up as East Carolina's Bruce Peartree (44) and Charles Watkins (11) battle a hidden Baptist player for a rebound as Baptist's Marcus Beasley (10) watches. East Carolina rolled to an 88-62 win over the Buccaneers last night in Minges. (Reflector Photo by Chap Gurley)

Greene Central Slips By Firebirds; Stays In Race

SNOW HILL — Roderick Lane scored 28 points and grabbed 18 rebounds to lead Greene Central past Southern Nash 68-64, Thursday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

The victory leaves the Rams at 8-1 in the league, one-half game behind North Pitt. Greene Central is 11-8 overall. Southern Nash saw its hopes of winning the conference title ended as the Firebirds drop to 6-3 in the ECC and 11-8 overall.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Greene Central rolled to an easy 66-34 victory over Southern Nash.

Greene Central trailed at the end of the first period, 13-12, and saw the Firebirds stretch their lead to 33-31 at the half. Greene Central worked its way into a 50-50 tie at the end of the third period.

In the final quarter the teams traded buckets until the Rams went out to a six-point lead with 3 1/2 minutes left. From there, Greene Central protected its lead and went on to win by four.

The Rams won despite having forward John Ray shackled with foul trouble throughout the game and despite being without starting point guard Bonerey Johnson, who was out sick.

Lewis Joyner started in Johnson's place, but it was Darius Warren who came on to fill the hole left by Johnson's absence. Warren came off the bench to score 12 points on three field goals and six of eight from the line.

Cepado Albritton also scored 12 points for the Rams. Lane, along with his 10 field goals and five of eight from the foul line and 18 rebounds, also handed out five assists.

"Our bench won it," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said. "Roderick had a super game, but it was our bench that won it for us tonight."

Southern Nash was led by Frankie Toney with 19 points. Ricky Battle added 14 points, Terry Battle 13 and Jeff Lucas 10.

In the girls' game, Greene Central inched out to a 12-10 lead at the end of the first period and then outscored the Lady Firebirds, 20-6, in the second quarter to take a 32-16 halftime lead.

Greene Central outscored Southern Nash, 12-6 and 22-12, in the final two periods for the 32-point win.

The Lady Rams, now 12-7 overall and 5-4 in the ECC, were led by Leatha Taylor and Sylvia Swinson, both of whom scored 16 points. Sharon Suggs added 14 points for Greene Central.

Southern Nash, now 2-14 and 0-9, was led by Melissa Morgan with 22 points.

Greene Central plays host to Charles B. Aycock Friday.

ECU Tabs Coordinator; Will Switch To The 'I'

Larry Beckish, who guided Wichita State to ninth in total offense in the NCAA last season, will reshape East Carolina's offense as the Pirates' new offensive coordinator, it was announced this morning.

"It's really a pleasure to come to East Carolina," the 39-year-old Beckish said. "It's a pleasure to work with Coach (Ed) Emory again. We worked together for five years at Clemson (1972-76). The possibilities for an outstanding program here are unlimited. With the time and effort and a continuation of the great recruiting effort that Coach Emory has begun already, we can go to the top. I'm looking forward to providing East Carolina with no only an exciting offensive concept, but also a very productive one."

A productive offense is what Beckish created as Wichita State. The Shockers ran and passed for 424 yards a game last season and their junior quarterback Prince McJunkins finishing 12th in individual total offense. Beckish's imaginative offense led the Missouri Valley Conference in both rushing and passing. It was the first time in 20 years that one team had led in both categories.

Under Beckish, the Pirates will operate from the I formation and a variation of the shotgun formation that he helped develop at Wichita. The Pirates will scrap the wishbone formation first put in in 1974.

"We have contemplated the change since the end of the season," said Emory. "We're turning to the offensive philosophy that Larry has developed. We've come up with a package to best utilize our personnel. It'll be exciting for the players; we'll be able to move the football a great deal. Our fan are excited with the run and pass concept and that's what we'll have in the 80's. We have the opportunity to open up offensively with the outstanding skill personnel we have here. I believe that our offense will be very, very productive."

Before beginning his three-year stint at Wichita, Beckish served as an assistant at Clemson twice, Miami of Florida and the University of Tampa.

A graduate of Wichita State with a bachelor's degree in education, Beckish was captain of the 1963 Shocker football team which claimed a Missouri Valley Conference title with a 7-2 record. He was a two-way starter at defensive and offensive end. While at Clemson, he got to know Emory well and considers the ECU head coach "one of the top recruiters in the country."

Beckish plans to arrive for work in Greenville during the coming week.

He and his wife Alice have two sons, Michael, 17, and Christopher, 12.

"We had a nationwide search and took the time to find a man who best fits the needs of East Carolina University. We looked at approximately 50 people and I interviewed 11," Emory said. "I have known Larry since 1972 when I had the opportunity to coach with him. He's one of the premier offensive minds in the nation. We're fortunate to have him; we're excited about 1982 and our new offensive concept."

"Larry is a proven winner at all levels of competition. His production in all areas of coaching is outstanding. His Wichita State unit last season was one of the finest in the nation."

Beckish replaces Wright Anderson on the ECU staff. Anderson resigned earlier this year to take the head coaching job at Elon College.

East Carolina is scheduled to begin putting the new offense in during spring drills, which start in March.

Hot-Handed Rose Slips Past Warriors

By RICK SCOPPE
Reflector Sports Writer

Greenville Rose has been hampered much of the year by an anemic front line, but Thursday night the Rampants received a much-needed transfusion from its backcourt. Rose guards Russell Perkins and Barry Smith combined for 35 points and the Rampants shot nearly 58% from the floor to upset Wilson Hunt, 68-65, in a Big East Conference game. Earlier, in the girls' game, Frances Barnhill hit a jumper with one second left to lift Greenville Rose to a 52-51 win over Wilson Hunt.

"This was a good win for us," Greenville Rose coach Jim Brewington said. "We played real well. Anytime we shoot as well as we did tonight we're gonna have a chance to win."

Rose, now 9-8 overall and 3-6 in the league, canned 30 of 52 shots, including six of nine in the final quarter when the Rampants came from behind after trailing by as many as nine in the second half.

Perkins hit on eight of nine shots from the floor and five of five from the line to lead Rose with 21 points. Smith, who hit seven of 10 from the floor, added 14 points and Freddie Cherry 11.

"Anytime they're hot I let 'em shoot," Brewington said of his Perkins and Smith. "If they'll just take 'em (shots) when they're relaxed we'll be all right."

Hunt, now 10-7 overall and 5-4 in the conference, hit nearly 67% of its shots (29 of 44), but also turned the ball over 16 times. The Rampants had 12 turnovers.

The Warriors were led by Larry Carter, who scored 22 points (11 of 14 from the floor) and pulled down seven rebounds. Bobby Hines and Eric Ingram each scored 10 points for Hunt.

Hines led all rebounders with eight as the Warriors outrebounded Rose, 21-18. The Rampants were led in rebounding by William Battle with five. Perkins and Cherry had four each.

"We played about as well as we can tonight," Brewington said. "I thought our defense helped us win."

The key to the Rampants' defensive effort, Brewington said, was assigning Cherry to guard Carter. When Cherry picked up the Hunt forward midway through the third quarter Carter already had 20 points and had hit 10 of 11 shots from the floor.

With Cherry guarding him, however, Carter was one of three and scored just two points during the final 11 minutes. "He (Carter) is a good ball player," Brewington said afterwards. "But Freddie had a real good defensive game against him."

It was Cherry's defensive effort and the shooting of Perkins and Smith that enabled the Rampants to rally from nine points back in the third quarter and then take the lead midway through the final quarter.

The Rampants led, 12-8, with two minutes to go in the opening period on a follow shot by Derwin Little before Hunt closed to 14-13 at the end of the period.

The two teams traded baskets over the first three minutes of the second quarter before a dunk by Carter and two buckets by Charles Phillips gave the Hunt a 26-22 lead.

The Warriors, despite hitting just over 71% from the field, led by only two (32-30) at the half, but threatened to blow the game open in the early moments of the third period.

With the score tied at 34-34, Hunt scored eight straight points to go up, 42-34, with 4:18 left. The bulge went to nine (47-38) on Jerry Strayhorn's three-point play with 2:27 to go.

The lead quickly evaporated, however, as Rose used two buckets by Smith to spark a eight-point run of its own and pull within one (49-48) at the end of the third quarter.

Rose tied the game three times in the first three minutes of the final period before finally taking the lead for good at

The Rampants then went to their stall with about two minutes left and did not commit a turnover as Perkins and Smith weaved in, out and around the Hunt defenders.

A jumper and two free throws by Perkins sandwiched around a pair of free throws by Tim Harris pushed Rose's lead to 65-57 with 1:06 left. Hunt, down, 68-61, scored two buckets in the last 19 seconds for the final tally.

The girls game was close from beginning to end. Neither team led by more than six points and there were 11 ties—all but one coming in the second half after the two clubs were tied 22-22 at halftime.

The Rampettes led at the end of the third quarter, 38-37, and extended their lead to 46-42 midway through the fourth quarter before Rhonda Bynum scored seven straight points to give Hunt a 49-48 lead with 1:53 left.

Doris Richardson's short jumper in the lane put Rose back on top, 50-49, with 1:33 left, but Ann Ellen's jumper from the left baseline gave the Lady Warriors the lead again, 51-50, with 1:03 to go.

Linda Winstead, who had 22 points Wednesday night against Rocky Mount but scored just two last night, missed a 13-foot jumper from the right baseline and then fouled Ellen.

The Hunt guard missed the front end of a one-and-one with 33 seconds left, but Rose was called for three seconds on its ensuing trip down court and a Hunt win seemed imminent.

However, Rose point guard Alma Atkinson stole a pass along the left sideline and the Rampettes called time out with four seconds left. Rose coach Dennis Gibson told his girls to get the ball to guard Frances Barnhill and his team did as instructed.

Barnhill got the inbounds pass along the foul line, turned and fired up a jumper that rolled nearly all the way around the rim before falling through as the buzzer sounded to give Rose the win.

"It was just what we wanted," Gibson said. "We wanted Frances to get the ball. I think she played an outstanding game tonight."

Barnhill scored 22 points to help give Gibson his first victory over a Wilson school in his three years at Rose. Richardson added 12 points and Atkinson 10 for Rose.

Bynum led Hunt with 18 points. Angela Anthony added 14 for the Lady Warriors, who are now 4-13 overall and 1-8 in the league. Rose is now 6-9 overall and 3-6 in the conference.

"It was a real close game, a very close game," Gibson said. "We weren't as sharp as we were Tuesday night, but we won."

Rose jumped out to a 10-2 lead in the first four minutes of the game before Hunt, behind seven straight points by Anthony, managed to cut the deficit to 12-9 at the end of the first period.

Barnhill scored the Rampettes' first eight points of the second quarter and Atkinson added a jumper as Rose extended its lead to 22-16 with 5:25 left in the period.

Rose did not score again, however, as Hunt used a jumper and two free throws by Candy Wellington to tie it at the half, 22-22.

The game was tied seven times in the third period before Rose took a one-point lead at the end of the quarter when Barnhill hit a jumper and Ellen connected on only one of two free throws.

Rose travels to Wilson to face Beddingfield tonight.

Tight Security For Olympics

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Los Angeles is planning its biggest ever security operation to protect athletes and officials at the Olympic Games in 1984.

Nobody is talking about the details. But Peter Ueberroth, president of the organizing committee, tried to reassure the Olympic and international sports federation leaders who have been meeting and inspecting the competition sites this week.

"Our No. 1 priority has always been the athletes," Ueberroth said at a news conference. "But an equal priority is that we will see to it that the Games are safe for athletes and officials."

The executive board of the International Olympic Committee (IOC) put plenty of questions to Ueberroth and his team, who reported on progress in planning for the Games.

It is only 10 years since the Munich Olympics were marred by the massacre of Israeli competitors by Palestinian guerrillas. The Olympic world is nervous about the Games in Los Angeles, which is said to have more foreign exiles than any other city in the world.

Ueberroth claimed security measures will become a lasting feature of Los Angeles.

"The Olympic Games will serve to make this city a safer place, not only for the period of the Games but for years to come," he said.

"The city police department is an exceptional police department. The city sheriff's department is an exceptional sheriff's department."

But Los Angeles may not have heard the last of the argument over having the athletes housed in two villages, some national teams in the University of Southern California and some in UCLA.

"The subject is not dead," Ueberroth said. Thomas Keller, Swiss president of the General Assembly of Sports Federations, agreed.

Sports in the summer Games are controlled by 21 international federations. Some of them do not like the prospect of competitors in the same sport being divided, some close to their competition sites and others an hour's bus journey away.

But Ueberroth refused a request from the federations of fencing, volleyball and yachting to provide another village at Long Beach, where those sports are taking place.

"We have planned for two main villages, and that is that," he said.

Lopes Okays Trade Talks

LOS ANGELES (A) — Second baseman Davey Lopes has denied giving the Los Angeles Dodgers verbal permission to trade him to any of the other 11 National League teams as well as the Oakland A's of the American League, it was reported today in the Los Angeles Times.

The South Bay Daily Breeze had reported in its Thursday editions that Lopes had given the Dodgers such permission.

Lopes, in Hawaii where he and other Dodgers are in a television sports competition, was quoted by the Times as saying: "I don't want to discuss it. I have no comment. But it's not true."

"I can neither confirm nor deny the report," Tony Attanasio, Lopes' agent, said Wednesday when contacted by the Daily Breeze.

The Daily Breeze quoted an unnamed source in the Dodgers' front office as saying, "It is true, and something could happen very quickly."

Lopes, 35, has been the Dodgers' regular second baseman for the past nine seasons. The Dodgers have made no secret that they intend to give Steve Sax a shot at the job during the coming season.

Los Angeles first baseman Steve Garvey was quoted as saying last week that Lopes would be traded before the 1982 season began.

"If there is a deal, I hope it will be made before spring training," the Daily Breeze quoted Lopes as saying.

Dodgers' General Manager Al Campanis has talked with representatives of the New York Mets, the Chicago Cubs and the A's about Lopes, the Daily Breeze reported, adding that Montreal and Pittsburgh have also shown interest in the veteran second baseman.

Colored Balls Help At Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jerry Pate used a golf ball colored a bright orange to score a hole-in-one on probably the most famous par-3 in America.

His brother-in-law, Bruce Lietzke, used one of a lime-green shade to compose a 6-under-par 66 and noted, "it's a good day for the colored balls."

Forrest Fezler used the old, standard white to tie Lietzke for the first round lead Thursday in the 41st Bing Crosby National Pro-Am, a storied old event that seemed to revolve around the new, colored golf balls that are appearing on the tour.

"In five years, it might be hard to find a white golf ball," said Jack Nicklaus, who put himself in good position, only three strokes off the lead, with a 69.

Nicklaus, the most successful performer the game has ever known, said he hasn't yet used a colored ball, but wouldn't hesitate to do so.

"I'm just waiting for the right color," Nicklaus said. "I'm red-green color-blind. There are a lot of people with that condition. The orange ball has so much red in it, it's hard for me to see against the green grass. "But the white ball is hard to see, too. I haven't seen a ball in the air in years. I'd like for them to come out with a bright yellow, something kind of the color of traffic signs, the color of the stripes on the highway. They make them that color because they're easy to see."

Mark Lye and George Burns were a single stroke off the lead at 67. Burns, who won this event in 1980, didn't make a bogey and didn't have a "5" on his card in his effort at Pebble Beach. Lye played at Spyglass Hill.

It was two strokes back to Nicklaus, Tom Watson, Ben Crenshaw, Chip Beck and Scott Simpson tied at 69. Nicklaus, Watson and Crenshaw played at Cypress Point, Beck and Simpson at Pebble Beach. Nicklaus' amateur partner, former President Gerald Ford, helped the team two strokes while Crenshaw played with the tournament host, national amateur champion Nathaniel Crosby.

Johnny Miller, who edged Nicklaus by a stroke at San Diego last week, shot a 71 at Cypress Point and Tom Kite, last year's leading money-winner, had a 73 at the same course.

The format calls for the 168 pros, each with an amateur partner, to play one round on each of the three Monterey Peninsula courses before the field is cut for the final round at Pebble Beach Sunday.

Lietzke and Pate are the most prominent players among the handful using the colored balls, which made their appearance on the tour last fall.

"The golf ball isn't white. It's just painted white. If you can paint it white, why can't you paint it some other color?" asked Pate. "Orange is easier to see, easier for the gallery to pick up in the air. I bet in a few years you'll see every player in a threesome using a different color."

West Virginia Wins 17th In Row

By The Associated Press
 Quentin Freeman usually starts games on the bench and only averages 6.9 points for the West Virginia basketball team. But Thursday night, he showed why he's as valuable as anyone on the club.

West Virginia's vital sixth man came off the bench to spark rallies in both halves and scored 19 points to lead the red-hot Mountaineers to a 59-53 victory over Rutgers. Freeman also had four rebounds and four steals in his fine all-around performance.

"Some of the things he did out there he did on instinct and not on any design of the coaching staff," said West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett after watching his 18th-ranked team win its 17th straight game. "He understands the game as well as anybody we have."

The Scarlet Knights had closed to within 45-40 of the Mountaineers in the second half when Freeman hit a quick six points to give West Virginia its biggest lead of the game at 51-42 with 4:33 to go. Rutgers closed the gap to 55-51 with three minutes left on a three-point play by Roy Hinson, who led all scorers with 21 points.

The victory improved the Mountaineers' record to 18-1, the best since the Jerry West days of the late 1950s.

Although Rutgers Coach Tom Young blamed his team's loss on the Scarlet Knights' 19 turnovers, Catlett felt rebounding was the difference. The Mountaineers finished with a 28-26 margin over Rutgers.

"When you outrebound Rutgers, you've done a great job on the boards," Catlett said.

Greg Jones added 15 points for the Mountaineers, who played before an appreciative crowd of 14,331, the third-largest ever at their Coliseum.

In other games involving the nation's ranked teams, No. 5 Iowa walloped Indiana 62-40. No. 6 Minnesota stopped Purdue 73-50, and Long Beach State upset No. 19 Fresno State 45-42 in overtime.

The Top Twenty
 Kenny Arnold scored 15 points to lead Iowa over Indiana, Iowa, beating the Hoosiers for the third straight time, remained alone atop the Big Ten with an 8-1 record and improved its season mark to 16-2. Indiana's defending NCAA champions, who shot only 31 per cent from the field, fell to 5-4 in the league and 11-7 overall.

The 40 points were a season low for Indiana, which had been the Big Ten's highest-scoring team in conference play. The last time Iowa held Indiana to 40 points was in 1945 when the Hawkeyes won 45-40.

"I feel very good about the way we played," said Iowa Coach Lute Olson. "Offensively, a couple of times we got a little out of hand, but overall we showed good judgment. We shot the ball well. We're capable of shooting from the outside."

Minnesota swing man Trent Tucker scored 21 points to lead the Gophers past Purdue. Tucker combined with guard Darryl Mitchell to pace Minnesota into a 27-13 lead at the half and the pair continued their all-around play in the second half, finishing with nine steals between them.

Mitchell managed just eight points but fellow guard Tommy Davis had 11 as did 7-foot-3 center Randy Breuer. The Gophers held the Big Ten's leading scorer, Purdue guard Keith Edmonson, to 16 points.

"They (Purdue) dropped on Breuer and that gave Tucker and Mitchell the perimeter shot," Minnesota Coach Jim Dutcher said. "We're taking care of ourselves now."

Purdue Coach Gene Keady was upset that his team put the ball-up too quickly.

"The main thing was not to shoot the ball quick. Evidently my teaching wasn't good enough," Keady said. "You don't shoot the ball quick against anybody on the road."

Craig Hodges scored six of his 12 points in overtime to lead Long Beach State over Fresno State. The 49ers, 6-13, brought a five-game losing streak into the game at the Long Beach Arena. In their most recent outing, they had been routed 97-61 by Nevada-Las Vegas.

"We needed a win like that against a top-ranked team like that," said Long Beach Coach

Tex Winter. "I felt we have been snake-bitten all year long. With a little more consistency, we could be 5-2 now instead of 2-5 (in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association)."

Unranked Teams
 Elsewhere, Troy Taylor's two free throws with 1:13 left helped Ohio State beat Michigan State 50-49 in overtime. Mickey Hardy scored 22 points to lead Virginia Tech over VMI 101-76. Terry Youngbauer, Devi Parks and Donnie Earl combined for 45 points to lead Drake past Indiana State 65-48 and Bruce Atkins had 24 points to spark Duquesne over George Washington 76-63.

Also, Thad Garner's 15 points led Michigan over Northwest

Orlando Phillips scored a game-high 25 points to help Pepperdine defeat Portland 76-58. Clyde Vaughn had 24 to lead Pitt to a 66-63 victory over Rhode Island. Creighton used a career-high 21 points from Richard Bates to snap a seven-game losing streak with a 68-66 win over West Texas State. Washington center Kenny Lyles scored 18 points to lead the Huskies past Arizona State 59-55 and Kevin Bowland hit a 20-foot jumper with 2:30 remaining to give San Jose State a 58-57 victory over UC-Irvine.

Bertie Hands 'Skins 2nd Loss

ROBERSONVILLE — Bertie High School handed Northeastern Conference champion Roanoke its second straight defeat of the week last night, capturing a 59-52 victory. Roanoke, which had come into the week ranked Number One among 3-A schools on the Associated Press poll, clinched the league title on Tuesday despite falling to Washington when Williamston upset Plymouth, the last team left with a chance to catch the Redskins.

Roanoke's girls pulled dead even with Tarboro in the first place with a 50-34 win. Both Tarboro and Roanoke are 11-3 on the season.

Bertie, which raised its record to 7-6 in the conference and 10-9 overall, saw Roanoke run out to a 16-9 lead in the first period. The Redskins, however, couldn't hold on, and Bertie came back with a 21-13 advantage in the second frame to take a 30-29 halftime lead.

Both teams scored 13 points in the third period, leaving the Falcons up, 43-42. Then in the final quarter, Bertie outscored the Redskins, 16-10, to wrap up the win.

Both teams were perfect in the game from the free throw line. Bertie hitting 19 of 19 and Roanoke, 10 of 10.

Dwayne Williams and David Tyler each had 16 points to lead Bertie. Angelo Spruill had 17 to pace Roanoke, which falls to

Nightmare Continues; Gators Lose 14th In Row

MIAMI (AP) — Florida Coach Norm Sloan admits that even his wildest dreams couldn't have produced the nightmare that the 1981-82 college basketball season has become for the Gators.

Sloan's talented young players — three sophomores and seven freshmen — dropped their 14th straight game Wednesday night, but the nation's fourth winningest active coach remains undeterred in his belief that the team, winless since Dec. 12, is moving in the right direction.

The losing streak has weighed heavily on Sloan, who returned to Florida last season after 14 campaigns at North Carolina State produced a 266-127 record and one national championship.

He posted a 12-16 mark at Florida, where he was 85-63 from 1960-66, and looked forward to brighter days after a successful recruiting campaign last spring.

But early December, injuries to 6-foot-9 freshman center Randall Leath and 6-6 sophomore forward Vernon Delancy staggered the team and although they've since returned, the Gators haven't fully recovered.

Sloan said the shock of the prolonged losing streak overwhelmed him initially and that his inability to cope during the early stages probably is the chief reason the streak is still alive.

He said the frustration mounted to the point that for the first time in his 30-year career, he even wondered if some of the things he was doing as coach were right for his team.

"I don't like to admit it, but the biggest problem was I didn't handle the losing streak well enough for the team," Sloan said from his office in Gainesville. "I became frustrated. I became agitated and this rubbed off on the team."

"Here I was the one guy who should be steady and consistent and helping and I'm more frustrated than they (players) are. So when I figured that out, then I got back to coaching," he added.

Sloan said he became emotionally involved in "pulling" for his team, which has dropped nine games during the streak by 6 points or less, instead of coaching.

"What I became was a fan. I'm out there pulling for them, saying, 'come on,' instead of doing what I'm hired to do — coach," he said.

The coach said no other situation, not even his first season at North Carolina State when the Wolfpack was 7-19 and he endured a seven-game losing streak, is comparable. And not having a previous experience to draw on didn't help, Sloan said.

"I'll tell you in all honesty, it's just blew me out of the water. It's an experience I sure didn't enjoy having. I'm through it now. I'm over it. I've dealt with it and I've got my act straightened out, so I'm all right," adds Sloan.

"But I wasn't there for awhile and it was strictly an emotional, psychological, ego embarrassment. It was just a disoriented, frustrated human being walking around."

The losing streak has been even more baffling to Sloan because he felt he had some of the best talent in the Southeastern Conference, if not the nation, after landing several blue-chippers, including prep All-American Eugene McDowell, last spring.

The injuries to Leath, who had surprised Sloan with his early development, and Delancy, one of two Gators selected to the SEC's All-Freshman team last season, certainly hurt.

But the team continued to play well and seven of the 14 losses have been by 3 points or less. Only Kentucky, Alabama, Auburn and Florida State, the team the 4-15 Gators last beat Dec. 12, have beaten Florida by 11 points or more.

Sloan said that despite the streak, he has been encouraged by the "excellent progress" of the team — particularly 6-8 sophomore forward Ronnie Williams, freshman guard Tony Rogers, Leath and McDowell.

"We think we have excellent talent here. I still believe that. I've never lost that faith at all. Yet we weren't winning. So it confuses you," said Sloan.

"I don't think they've (players) lost any confidence. I think they did lose some enthusiasm and got a little shaky but again that's my fault," the coach added. "I should have been doing a better job of keeping their spirits up."

Sloan said his approach to the remainder of the season will be to try and keep his players pulling for one another in hopes of turning things around before the SEC postseason tournament.

"We're so very close to every team in the league that I really believe that when we turn this corner the momentum can be such for us that we're capable of winning the tournament," said Sloan.

Utah State Division I-A

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — The classification of Utah State as Division I in football competition for 1982 raises the number of schools in that category to 93.

After Thursday's ruling by the NCAA classification committee 89 schools remained classified Division I-AA and five schools were still under review by the committee.

On Tuesday, the NCAA announced a new list of Division I-A and Division I-AA schools in accordance with a special football restructuring session in December.

To qualify for play among Division I-A, or major football, members, a school must meet three criteria:

— Sponsor at least eight varsity sports, including football.

— Play at least 60 percent of its games against Division I-A schools.

— Have averaged more than 17,000 paid attendance at home games for the past four years, or play in a stadium that contains at least 30,000 seats and have averaged 17,000 paid home attendance for at least one of the past four years.

A school still may be classified Division I-A despite failing to meet those criteria if it is in a conference in which at least six teams play football and more than half are Division I-A schools.

If a school meets only the first two criteria, it may still be a Division I-A team if it has averaged 20,000 paid attendance in all games for a four-year period, with at least four home games a year.

The classification of Utah State leaves the Pacific Coast Athletic Association with three schools in Division I-A, three in Division I-AA and one unclassified.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Pessimists make good bridge players. They worry about what might go wrong and often find solutions for the problems they might encounter.

West took advantage of the vulnerability to make a shapely double. But that did not prevent North-South from bidding smoothly to their best contract. Notice that North responded correctly, as though there had been no intervention.

West took two club tricks and then shifted to the queen of hearts. Declarer won the ace in dummy, and the contract looked like a shoo-in. But two high spades in hand revealed the 4-1 break. It looked as if all declarer had to do was cash his high diamonds and ruff a diamond in dummy to assure the contract. He could then draw trumps and claim the rest of the tricks.

That would be well and good if the diamonds split 3-2, but the double made it quite likely that that would not be the case. Declarer cashed the king of diamonds, and West's jack confirmed his fears. Now if declarer continued with his second high diamond, West would ruff and force declarer with a heart, and declarer would lose control of the hand.

Declarer's solution was most elegant. He continued with the ten of diamonds! It would not help West to ruff, so he discarded a club. East won the queen and made the best return of a heart. But declarer ruffed and simply continued to lead high diamonds. West could ruff whenever he pleased, but declarer would overruff with dummy's queen, return to his hand with a trump, drawing West's last trump in the process, and the rest of the tricks were his. The defenders could score only two clubs and a diamond.

For Late-Night Viewers

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — David Letterman follows Johnny Carson in NBC's programming and pecking order. But the newest offering for insomniacs and other night people is really more a direct descendant of Steve Allen's "Tonight" show.

The spontaneity and surprise of "Late Night With David Letterman" is a welcome liberation from conventional talk shows. "Saturday Night Live" was successful because it dared to be inventive, and it looks like Letterman will be consistently fresh, late-night air because he'll risk failing to raise the art of comedy.

Wednesday night's broadcast was the strongest of the first three shows, highlighted by a wacky look at "Alan Alda: A Man and His Chinese Food." A picture of Alda, flanked by the owners of a New York Chinese restaurant, was the inspiration for this profile via interviews with the proprietors who know him best.

After learning that Alda likes string beans and cold noodles with sesame, Let-

Wizard, screenwriter Steve Tesich of "Four Friends" (rather than the movie's stars) and home run king Hank Aaron.

At 34, Letterman has a contemporary curiosity that blends well with his mid-American (Indiana) boyishness. Part of the show's unpredictability is his left-field questioning: Why didn't Aaron ever lose his cap, like Willie Mays and Roberto Clemente?

Following the chat with Aaron, a camera followed Aaron off the set, where he was jostled by admirers and then met by sportscaster Al Albert, who asked if the interview was tough. How did it compare to Carson?

"I don't know," Aaron said. "I've never been interviewed by Johnny Carson."

As the successor to Tom Snyder in the 12:30 a.m. EST Monday-Thursday slot, Letterman doesn't look like he's ever going to interview Charles Manson. His thing is the daftness of the world, according to David Letterman.

And at 12:30 in the morning things are looking funnier than at 10 a.m., when Letterman's first NBC talk show failed and was quickly yanked. "This is going to be a big three or four days for NBC," Letterman said opening night.

Manilow Told Cancel Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Barry Manilow, bedridden in his Paris hotel with bronchial pneumonia, has been ordered by doctors to cancel a nine-concert European tour, a spokeswoman said.

Publicist Heidi Ellen Robinson said Thursday the Grammy Award-winning singer became ill in Paris earlier this week after completing a month-long United Kingdom tour. She added Manilow has given about 70 concerts, most of them in North America, since he began touring in August.

"He's absolutely worn down because he has been on tour so long," Miss Robinson said. "I know he's lost a lot of weight."

Manilow, 35, was to have started his European tour with a Feb. 6 concert in Hamburg, West Germany, before continuing on to the Netherlands, Sweden and Denmark. However, Miss Robinson said he was ordered to remain in bed for at least a week and would probably return to his Los Angeles home when he is able to travel.

How's The Weather? More Sub-Zero Cold And Snow

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Saturday morning for Atlantic coast states. Snow is forecast from the Great Lakes to northern New England. Sunny, but cold weather is predicted for most of the country. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

The sunny, unseasonably warm weather of Thursday gave way to cloudy skies and cooler temperatures today along with the possibility of some light rain or drizzle.

The precipitation is caused by an area of low pressure that developed across the mountains today. This will help in keeping abundant moisture over the region. Precipitation was expected to be on the light side and will become better organized late today and into tonight.

A cold front will trail southward across the North Carolina mountains later tonight and move east across the state on Saturday.

High pressure will then build east behind this cold front to begin ushering in some colder air across the mountains by Saturday morning. The colder air will spread east by Saturday night and cover the state by Sunday morning.

Recreational weather outlook: Some scattered light rain or drizzle will develop tonight and continue into tonight then begin tapering off from the west on Saturday. Colder and windy conditions will return to the mountains by Saturday morning and the precipitation in the northern mountains will likely become mixed with and change to some light snow before diminishing to snow flurries in the northern mountains on Saturday.

Elsewhere, a gradual improving trend will take place later Saturday. High temperatures today will be mostly in the 40s except some 50s along the coast. Not much change will take place in temperatures tonight except for turning windy and colder across the mountains by Saturday morning.

High temperatures on Saturday will range from the 30s in the mountains to near 60 over the southeast. It will be colder statewide by Sunday morning with temperatures down in the teens and 20s with continued cold temperatures during Sunday.

By The Associated Press

A new cold front brought the Rockies weather fit nly for skiing and put the Midwest on warning for another onslaught of subzero cold and snow.

The storm dumped new snow over the northern Rockies today and the band was heading toward the upper Plains to the northern Great Lakes.

Moisture rising off the Great Salt Lake wafted and froze into snow that sprinkled the northwestern corner of Utah, the National Weather Service said. Up to 15 inches of new snow fell on the Altı ski resort east of Salt Lake City.

Winds whipping to 80 mph as recorded by the University of Utah sent the wind-chill factor to 50 below in Bountiful in northern Utah.

It was 36 below zero in Butte, Mont. this morning.

Every major weather recording station in Montana had double-digit readings of below zero by Thursday night. The readings did not include wind-chill, which is factored by combining temperatures and wind velocity.

The weather service said the upper Plains could expect the freeze to last at least through the end of the week.

Renewed storms have left two feet of fresh snow over parts of Missouri and residents were told to brace for more. The heaviest snowfall was in a band from Kansas City to an area between Hannibal and St. Louis.

"My phone has been ringing off the hook from angry people," said John Kock, a St. Louis city alderman. "I know the street department guys are working their tails off. But a lot of people are pretty angry."

The St. Louis schools have been closed all week.

Temperatures fell to new lows in Colorado, Minnesota and Wyoming.

The cold reached to Arizona, where 18 inches of snow fell Thursday on the town of Gascon.

There were floods in New Hampshire and Georgia and a big ice storm in Massachusetts.

In Georgia, officials ran out of signs to warn motorists of flooded roads. Weather service forecaster Bruce Candra predicted a "record flood" for Sweetwater Creek, in Douglas County near Atlanta. The creek was expected to crest at 22 or 23 feet, 12 to 13 feet above flood stage.

In New York's Dutchess County, two people were rescued by rowboat as an icejam sent waters swirling 4 feet deep out of Wappingers Creek. The threat of flooding prompted Port Jervis, N.Y., Mayor Arthur Gray to order the evacuation of 400 to 500 residents in a low-lying section of the city along the Delaware River.

For the Northeast, the floods were brought on in part by unseasonably high temperatures that melted the icepack.

It was nearly 60 degrees in parts of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut on Thursday, but the thermometer had dipped back to near freezing today.

Two people remained hospitalized today after a hospital-bus overturned on icy U.S. 40 and rolled down an embankment and landed next to a creek near Grantsville, Md., state police said. Dan McCarthy, a state police spokesman, said all eight passengers and the driver were injured and were taken to a hospital.

The melting snowpack made a mess of some New Hampshire highways.

"Slush is packed right up to the bottom of the bridges," said David Peney, the civil defense director for Gorham, N.H. "It is probably 10 feet deep and more than 50 feet wide and 1,000 feet long" on a section of the Peabody River, he said.

Slushy ice pushed the Peabody's waters over the banks and 27 Gorham families were evacuated as water backed up into the town.

Robert Cote, 57, and his wife, Jeannette, 53, were riding along in their pickup when the water hoisted their truck and carried it 50 feet down Main Street. Gorham police Officer John Scarinza said it bobbed until it "got hung up on some trees," he said. They Cotes were rescued and were not hurt.

Fewer Dying On N.C. Highways

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The State Highway Patrol has announced that for the first time in 20 years, fewer than 70 people died in traffic accidents in North Carolina in a single month.

Based on figures released by the patrol, 63 people died in accidents on the state's streets and highways during January, the lowest number recorded for a month since February 1962. The record low month was January 1955 when 58 people lost their lives in traffic accidents.

Patrol Commander Col. John Jenkins said current economic situations could be responsible for the drop, but added that the decline could be due to increased driver awareness.

Cannon Sale Is Worrying Kannapolis

KANNAPOLIS, N.C. (AP) — Last Friday, William C. Cannon arrived near the end of a meeting of Cabarrus County Democrats and said he had an announcement to make.

Cannon is a director of Cannon Mills, the grandson of James Cannon, the founder of the company, and the son of "Mr. Charlie" Cannon, its late revered chairman.

That morning, he told the astounded Democrats, he had walked into a Concord bank and turned over his 94,754 shares of Cannon stock to West Coast financier David Murdock, who has offered to buy Cannon Mills for $413 million.

"It's gone," a shaken-looking Cannon said, and sat down.

The sale of Cannon Mills, founded in 1907 by James Cannon and run for 50 years by his son, Charles Cannon, has brought nervousness and anxiety to Kannapolis. Cannon Mills has since its early days been a corporation that took a parental interest in its workers.

Kannapolis residents live in Cannon-owned homes, shop in Cannon-owned stores and look to the company for guidance and support.

Even though they knew about the monthlong negotiations between Cannon stockholders and Los Angeles developer David Murdock, most said they didn't believe Cannon would let the mill go.

"It's just a crying shame," said Addie Arnette, a Cannon worker for 60 years before becoming disabled. "He (Murdock) won't care about us or the town. It seems like to me, he just collects businesses."

All along Main Street of the unincorporated town of 36,000 people, sentiment was the same among businessmen and shoppers. Cannon employs 12,000 people.

Late Wednesday, Murdock announced that 72 percent of Cannon's stockholders had offered him their shares. His tender offer of $44 per share expires at midnight EST Friday.

Under terms of his Jan. 4 bid, Murdock's acceptance means that shareholders who have already offered him their stock cannot withdraw. Murdock said he will pay a total of $413 million to buy all of Cannon's 9.38 million shares.

A Cannon official who had publicly taken no stand on the sale, had little comment Thursday.

"It's still up in the air and we haven't had time to figure the whole thing out right now," said Cannon spokesman Ed Rankin.

At the Kannapolis Daily-Independent, whose office sits in the shadow of Cannon Mills, editorials on the sale have been cautiously optimistic.

Pet Monkey Attacks Thieves

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Lewis Bennett wasn't going to argue with the two robbers who had made their way into his home. But Pete, Bennett's 16-pound female pet monkey, wasn't nearly so agreeable.

Before Bennett could get his money out, the 20-year-old South American capuchin monkey jumped on one of the would-be thieves and sunk her teeth into his neck.

The two men fled before Bennett could warn them. Pete has not received her tetanus shot. Police alerted hospitals to watch for someone seeking treatment for neck wounds.

Bennett, 75, was alone in his home Friday when two men came to his door, saying they had car trouble and asking to use his telephone. Once inside, the men demanded Bennett's money. As he reached into his wallet, Pete, named before Bennett knew her sex, sprung into action.

"She'll bite anybody except me — even my wife," Bennett said. "She can jump 12 to 15 feet and doesn't attack anything but the throat. I'm just happy she was out or it might have been a different story. She changed their minds."
