

TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — During the past week, reporters had to wear water wings to avoid drowning in the leaks. For an administration dedicated to stamping out unofficial disclosures — and aren't they all? — this one made President Reagan's budget seem like the worst kept secret in town.

Classic Case Of 'Leaking' Official News

Airline Finding Support

LONDON (AP) — Britons pledged nearly $4 million Saturday to Laker Airways, and its flight crews volunteered to take pay cuts if that would help Sir Freddie Laker, pioneer of cheap trans-Atlantic air fares, fly again.

Laker, who announced Friday his airline was folding under the weight of $359 million in unpaid bills, said: "I am truly and utterly overwhelmed by the public support. Laker Airways is truly the airline of the people."

Airline officials reported switchboards jammed with hundreds of people offering to donate money.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported about $3.7 million had been pledged to various groups set up to aid Laker, including a "Friends of Freddie Fund."

British businessmen who mounted appeals reported pledges totaling $555,000.

Flight attendant Julie Stagg 22, who was among airline employees collecting signatures on a "Save Laker" petition at London's Victoria railway station, said pledges for $1.39 million had been collected.

Capt. Gordon Steer, a DC-10 pilot and spokesman for the Laker Flight Crew Association, said some 300 pilots, co-pilots and flight engineers had voted to take pay cuts rather than see the airline go under. Their salaries had ranged from $22,200 to $59,200 a year.

"If it means working on payments near the breadline, then we will do it," he said. "All these people cannot be wrong. The very least we can do is back Sir Freddie all the way."

Other employees planned a march Monday on Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's official residence, No. 10 Downing Street, to demand the government bail Laker out. A Brighton businessman printed 10,000 bumper stickers saying, "Make Maggie Save Laker."

Colin Rayworth, a London businessman collecting pledges for Laker, said, "Freddie has given so much to the British public, they should now come and support him in his hour of need."

Legal Action Likely

By MELVIN LANG Reflector Staff Writer

Plans were launched Saturday for possible legal action by some eastern North Carolina counties to block legislative proposals that would create new predominantly black, single-seat House districts by splitting several counties, including Pitt and Martin.

John House, chairman of the Martin County Commission, said participants in a meeting at Windsor Saturday decided to "investigate the possibility of taking legal action."

Pitt County Commission Chairman Burney Tucker said he anticipated similar action early this week in view of the scheduled vote

Tuesday by the state House on the proposal approved Friday by the House Redistricting Committee.

Approval of that plan came despite objections at a public hearing last week from delegations representing several eastern counties. A redistricting plan for the state Senate also was approved but with little opposition. A congressional realignment also won committee approval although U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones, a Farmville Democrat, wrote the General Assembly Friday that North Carolina's congressional delegation preferred a congressional reapportionment plan approved last year.

The state house plan divides 26 of the state's 100 counties while attempting to meet a goal of allowing blacks to be elected in Cumberland, Greensboro and eastern North Carolina.

Leaders of the realignment proposal said they are confident the plan will meet demands by the Justice Department under the 1965 Voting Rights Act.

"Our attorneys, who have talked with the Justice Department, have been encouraged about the way we've handled the northeast, Cumberland and Guilford," said Rep. Bob Jones, D-Rutherford, co-chairman of the committee that approved the plan after four stormy days of meetings.

"I'm firmly convinced this plan will be approved by Justice in 30 days," he said.

The House plan would put Greene and all of Pitt County, with the exception of Bethel and Carolina townships, in a two-seat district. Bethel and Carolina townships would go into a one-seat district that in-

If No Longer Pays To Bootleg

Officer Finds Job Easier

By STUART SAVAGE Reflector Staff Writer

Steadily rising prices due to inflation, combined with good law enforcement, have all but put the bootlegger — and for that matter Pitt County's ABC law enforcement agency — out of business.

J.M. "Jim" Ward, for years the county's chief alcoholic beverage control officer and now the only one, says "ABC law enforcement now is not like we used to have it."

He speaks from experience. Ward, who will be 78 in April, was one of two ABC officers hired by the Pitt ABC Board in May 1937 — almost 45 years ago. Reminiscing, he said last week that county ABC stores opened in 1935 and the North Carolina General Assembly, in 1937, passed legislation which said "the counties could hire law enforcement officers." It was then that Ward and John Taylor were employed.

After seven years as a county enforcement officer, Ward — in the mid-1940s — joined the U.S. Treasury Department's Alcohol Tax Unit (later to become the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Unit and more recently the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms). However, after two years, he returned to the Pitt agency where he has remained.

"There was too much red tape in government work," Ward explained. He has seen the agency grow ... and decline.

"We had six officers at one time" in the 1950s, Ward recalled. Some of the men who have helped enforce the law as county officers, he remembers, were H. B. Lilley, Walter Taylor, Jack Russell, Glenn Perkins, James Ross, Dick King and Claude Manning.

"I love the work. And there was plenty to do in those days," Ward said of the years before the mid-1960s, when the enforcers would prow the woods in search of illegal distilleries, look for non-tax-paid or bootleg whiskey, and hunt for persons illegally dispensing tax-paid booze. "The county was full of bootleg liquor" in those years, he said.

"I reckon we did too good a job," Ward said, only half-jokingly, as he explained the declining need for county enforcement officers. "Good law enforcement ... the high cost of material ... and government checks stopped bootleggers."

It's cheaper to buy tax-paid whiskey than it is to make bootleg and, unless you are under-age, it's a lot more legal, Ward suggested. The high cost of sugar, corn meal, yeast and other materials used in the mash from which bootleg is distilled, and the cost of copper from which quality stills are made, now make bootlegging a non-profit venture. (In fact, the use of metals other than copper in stills can turn bootleg whiskey into poison.)

However, Ward suggested that if state and federal taxes on whiskey keep climbing along with prices, and unemployment increases, people with nothing better to do might find bootlegging a profitable venture once more.

"The last still we got was about three years ago," Ward said, "and we haven't major stories Friday, the public debate had been embarked upon."

There was plenty of suspicion that the final flurry of leaks was orchestrated or encouraged by White House aides who preferred to get out the bad news about record deficits over the weekend, when the fewest number of people read papers or watch TV news.

Not so, according to Gergen. He blamed congressional employees for leaking the budget, and said some budget books were mistakenly not stamped with an embargo.

Whatever the case, the budget was old news by Saturday. This is a story about the leaks that resulted in the budget coming out, day after day.

But more about that later.

A budget is like a car that the president gives to Congress.

It is a proposal. The legislators swap radiators, take off the radiators, add chrome, substitute a bigger engine and hand the modified vehicle to the American people.

Every administration — Reagan's included — treats the Coming of the Budget the way General Motors heralds a new car line — keeping the product under wraps until introduction day.

To keep reporters at bay, reporters are given the books three days before the budget is sent to Congress — so they can absorb the complexities. Briefings are scheduled all over town but not a word is supposed to go out until launch time, noon EST Monday.

There have been leaks in the past. Once, the Washington Star had all the details on the street two hours before release time, explaining blithely that it didn't get its copy from the official source and thus was not bound by an embargo.

But a cheat of a few hours was nothing compared to the leaks that burst this year.

The biggest gusher came Friday when Budget Director David Stockman went to the Capitol to brief senior Republicans and a few of their aides and distributed a briefing book laying out the budget in substantial detail.

When administrations wanted to keep things secret in the past, the briefings were verbal or documents were collected

Reagan Budget Proposes Largest Deficits In History

By OWEN ULLMANN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan sent Congress a $757.6 billion budget for 1983 that proposes the largest deficits in history — $273 billion over the next three years — along with a second broad swath of cuts through social programs and a record military buildup.

The election-year budget blueprint, which instantly triggered a furor among Reagan's congressional friends and foes, projects deficits of $98.6 billion in fiscal 1982, $91.5 billion in 1983 and $82.9 billion in 1984 — the year congressional Republicans were hoping would produce the first balanced budget since 1969.

A year after the administration identified deficits as the leading cause of inflation, and vowed a balanced budget by 1984, officials tried Saturday to downplay the significance of the massive red ink.

Budget Director David Stockman acknowledged the deficits were being described "with words behind them like 'staggering, towering, gigantic, huge, etc.' But those terms are accurate only if you ignore the fact that there has been enormous change in the scale of numbers that we're working with over the last four or five years.

"They're not large in the context of a $3.3 trillion economy," Stockman said.

Others were not so sanguine.

Congressional Republicans who fully supported Reagan's budget plan last year appeared in a daze over the weekend and talked about the prospect of thoroughly rewriting the new budget.

Democrats said the record deficits Reagan is predicting now are still unrealistically low. They said the only way out is for Congress to reverse itself on part of the record three-year tax cut it approved in 1981.

"I was just sort of in a state of shock when I listened to the (budget) briefing," said deputy Republican Senate leader Ted Stevens of Alaska.

Sen. Dan Quayle, Republican of Indiana and a strong backer of the president, said, "You'll see people starting to jump off the ship on Monday."

Bob Dole, R-Kan., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said "the Republicans I talk to ... are frightened about the deficits." Another Republican in Congress, who did not want his name used, lamented: "The deficits are enormous. And they're probably too low."

But Republican Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, who sponsored last year's tax cut bill, applauded Reagan for

"not trying to fight the deficit battle by raising taxes, which I'm very encouraged about."

Democratic assistant Senate leader Alan Cranston of California called the budget "unworkable, unwise and unfair."

The White House released the budget Saturday after lifting a Monday embargo. It was "already academic — major elements of the spend-

Budget Specifics

By The Associated Press

The main components of President Reagan's new budget include:

• An 18 percent, or $33.6 billion, increase in spending on the Pentagon and on Energy Department nuclear weapons. The 1983 budget would reach $221.1 billion, up from $187.5 billion this fiscal year. By 1987, spending would jump to $364.2 billion. The 1983 increase would allow for a major shipbuilding program, buildup early deployment of cruise missiles, acquisition of a new B-1B bomber and development of an advanced Stealth bomber, development of a larger, land-based MX missile program and continued deployment of Trident ballistic missile submarines.

• A $12.8 billion reduction in anticipated spending for social benefits, including Medicaid, Medicare, general welfare, food stamps, child nutrition, unemployment insurance, Veterans Administration, student loans, and federal employee retirement plans. The savings would be achieved mainly through reduced benefits and tightened eligibility.

• A $14 billion cut in other domestic programs, including energy research and conservation, the Environmental Protection Agency, school aid, job training, housing assistance, transportation subsidies, child nutrition, heating cost subsidies for poor people and dozens of other areas. In addition, funds for Legal Services Corp. and new maritime construction subsidies would be eliminated, and the Energy and Education departments would be dismantled.

• A $7.2 billion increase in business taxes achieved through "loophole" closings, such as the tightening of a law requiring profitable corporations to pay a minimum tax and the elimination of business energy tax credits.

• A $2.5 billion increase in fees, including those for private use of federal airport, harbor and nuclear waste facilities and federal recreation areas. Passport and visa fees also would be increased. Reagan submitted a similar proposal last year, but Congress rejected it.

• A $20.3 billion plan to increase revenues through property sales and improved tax collections. One longshot proposal — which Congress has rejected twice before — calls for withholding taxes from interest and dividend income. Other proposals call for improved enforcement and collection efforts by the Internal Revenue Service and an $8.4 billion increase in sales of off-shore oil and gas leases.

• An $8.4 billion reduction in new direct loans for the Export-Import Bank, Farmers Home Administration, Rural Electrification Administration, Small Business Administration, public housing, farm price supports, Federal Housing Administration and other programs. However, a $1 billion increase is provided for loans for weapons sales abroad.

• A "new federalism" program that would shift more than 40 federal programs to the states over the next eight years, and allow for the elimination of 75,000 federal jobs. The programs are slated to cost $30.2 billion in 1983. The plan also would have the federal government assume full cost for the Medicaid program in exchange for giving basic welfare and food stamp programs over to the states.

• A plan to revitalize distressed urban areas by establishing "enterprise zones" and offering tax-breaks, sub-minimum wages and a relaxation of regulations for businesses that move into the areas.

Without congressional approval of the savings, the deficit would soar to $147 billion in 1983.

Bootlegging ...

 gotten any bootleg liquor in years ... and don't get any reports of it."

But Ward still enforces the ABC laws, working cooperatively with the state's Alcohol Law Enforcement agents. "We still have the gallon possession law (making it illegal to possess over a gallon of tax-paid whiskey) ... and you can get a special 10-gallon transportation permit," Ward explained.

"But it's hard to prove a sale," he said, of persons selling liquor-by-the-drink in small "joints" and homes. Of people who re-sell ABC whiskey, he said: "They're hard to catch."

No, he repeated, ABC law enforcement is not like it used to be.

"I've helped destroy several hundred stills in 40 years," Ward said. "We used to get two or three a day ... every day in the week, at first. We'd lay in the woods and look."

Several hundred people have been arrested by Ward and other officers, and thousands of gallons of non-taxed whiskey have been confiscated and destroyed, along with tens of thousands of gallons of mash.

Depending on the situation, axes were used to demolish illegal stills or dynamite (more recently military-type plastic explosives and detonator cord) was used to blow them up.

Ward remembers the largest single seizure of non-tax-paid whiskey in the county came in 1961 when 2,605 gallons of the clear, sparkling liquid was found near Bethel and destroyed.

"We worked in Beaufort and Martin counties as much as in Pitt. We assisted each other," Ward said.

"One of the largest stills we ever got was across the river from Grimesland," he said. That was in April 1952. Seven men were arrested, and three cars and some 4,200 pounds of sugar were confiscated.

"Craven County had a lot of big ones," Ward said, and Pitt officers used to help there, too.

Bootleggers, according to Ward, used to set up operations on the Beaufort County side of Tranter's Creek. When officers would find and destroy that operation, the violators would move to the Pitt side. "They'd just go back and forth that way," he said.

cludes portions of Martin, Bertie and Hertford counties. The remainder of Martin would go into a single-member district that slices westward to Vance County.

Several of the districts to be created by the House plan would be unusual. For example, the single-member district in Cumberland County would have 49,673 people but only 3,170 registered voters. It would be surrounded by the rest of Cumberland, where four House members would be elected at large.

Most of the new Cumberland district is made up by the nearly 41,000 people at Fort Bragg Army and Pope Air Force bases, but only 292 of them are registered to vote there. It would also include two mainly black townships. Blacks would make up less than a majority of the district's population but would amount to 84 percent of the registered voters.

House said opponents of the House plan feel they have been subjected to pressure tactics by its approval. "Certainly the people didn't have any input," he said.

"We plan to do everything we can to block this move, which we feel is unfair to everybody," he said. "Very possibly, we will have legal action. That is almost assured."

Rep. Sam Bundy of Farmville, a member of the House committee that opposes the redistricting proposal, said Saturday it's approval by the full Legislature was virtually certain.

"Unless we can use some power that I don't know of right now, it's settled. Any change would have to come in the courts," Bundy said.

U.S. Views Salvador As Soviet-Cuban Challenge

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is vowing to do "whatever is necessary" to stop a leftist victory in El Salvador, even leaving open the possibility of sending U.S. troops. But to many Americans, the more immediate question is: "why should we care?"

High-ranking State Department officials went before Congress last week to make their case, arguing bluntly that U.S. national security interests "are being incontestably challenged in Central America."

Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. on Tuesday depicted the administration's deepening military support for the Salvadoran government as a reaction to "the export of subversion and armed intervention" by Cuba through "its newfound ally, Nicaragua."

Haig also said that communist arms infiltration into El Salvador was again increasing, close to the levels of the guerrillas' January 1981 general offensive. The State Department, however, later refused to document Haig's assertion.

In congressional testimony, Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, also depicted the Salvadoran civil war in dire, geopolitical terms.

"The decisive battle for Central America is under way in El Salvador," Enders declared. "If after Nicaragua, El Salvador is captured by a violent minority, who in Central America would not live in fear? How long would it be before major strategic U.S. interests — the canal, sea lanes, oil supplies — would be at risk?"

"For most of its life as a nation, our country has faced no threat from its neighbors. But unless we act decisively now, the future could well bring more Cubas, totalitarian regimes so linked to the Soviet Union that they become factors in the military balance."

The administration has long claimed that the Salvadoran rebels are supplied and directed by Cuba and the Soviet Union. One year ago, it issued a "white paper" that called the Salvadoran rebels "a textbook case of indirect armed aggression by communist powers."

Although the "white paper" has since come under criticism for containing factual errors — some acknowledged by the State Department — the administration has continued to stand by its conclusions in developing a policy toward the Salvadoran conflict.

However, recently, the administration's strident warnings has prompted concerns among some congressional Democrats that the United States might be edging into a Vietnam-like "quagmire."

The "doves" on El Salvador, led by Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., ridicule Enders' fear about a "violent minority" seizing control of the tiny country and his belief that the Cubans are behind the war.

"Who ... has run El Salvador for the entire century if it hasn't been a violent minority?" Studds asked in an interview. "The Salvadoran junta is a violent minority."

Studds argued that the administration was "incapable of understanding that there is a revolution in El Salvador because there ought to be a revolution in El Salvador."

He cited the country's past 50 years of often brutal military rule during which the vast majority of the population lived in poverty while a handful of wealthy Salvadorans lived in luxury.

Studds and other critics also cite repeated reports of massacres carried out by the Salvadoran military against unarmed civilians. A wide range of human rights organizations, including Amnesty International, have condemned the Salvadoran government for such abuses.

Despite those reports, President Reagan late last month certified that the Salvadoran junta has made a "concerted and significant effort" to protect human rights — a determination required by Congress for the continuation of aid.

The certification was followed by the dispatch of $55 million in new military aid under emergency presidential powers and the announcement that the administration would ask Congress for an additional $100 million in aid.

This past week, Enders conceded that human rights progress has been "slow in coming." And one State Department official, who asked not to be identified, even said he had not seen any improvement in the Salvadoran government's human rights record.

The critics have been even more blunt.

"There's nobody else but the administration who believes that human rights progress has been made," Studds said. "I don't think any remotely objective observer would be prepared to certify what the president has certified to."

Damaged Aircraft Is Replaced

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — U.S. transport planes arrived Saturday with more replacements for the aircraft crippled in a guerrilla attack on the armed forces' main air base.

A military source said three more Huey-1 helicopters were delivered to the Ilopango air base, seven miles outside the capital. Three Hueys had arrived about 24 hours earlier aboard C-130 cargo planes.

The source, declining to be identified because he was providing information not officially reported, refused comment on whether other aircraft, in addition to the six helicopters, were included in the airlift.

Army sources said more than a dozen aircraft, including six Hueys, were destroyed in the guerrillas' Jan. 27 raid on the Ilopango base. Official reports on the extent of the damage were not made public.

There are unconfirmed reports that at least two members of the Salvadoran air force have been detained on the suspicion that they aided the left-wing guerrillas in the attack.

Defense Minister Jose Guillermo Garcia has said there was "participation both inside and outside the air force in this extremist sabotage."

The unconfirmed reports said at least nine members of the air force were suspected of having collaborated with guerrillas in planning the attack. According to the reports, seven of the suspects disappeared and two others are being interrogated by army intelligence officials.

A military source in the provincial capital of Usulután, 50 miles east of San Salvador, said there was scattered fighting around the city Saturday. The source, who asked not to be named, said there were no immediate reports on casualties.

Another source said about 1,000 soldiers were sent to the town of El Espino in Usulután province "to carry out actions of localizations, persecution and annihilation of guerrilla hideouts."

The guerrillas are fighting to topple El Salvador's U.S.-backed civilian military junta. Church and human rights groups say more than 32,000 people have been killed in the fighting and related leftist-rightist violence since the junta took power in October 1979.

Korean Military Crash Kills 53

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A military transport plane smashed into South Korea's highest mountain during war-game exercises, killing all 53 people aboard, the Defense Ministry said Saturday.

The government said it was the worst military crash in South Korea's history and blamed the accident on strong winds.

The U.S.-made C-123 propeller-driven transport crashed into the 6,450-foot Mt. Halla dormant volcano on the southern resort island of Cheju Friday afternoon, the ministry said. It gave no reason for the delayed report.

Rescue teams found pieces of the aircraft on Saturday, scattered 2.3 miles north of the mountain. All passengers and crew were confirmed dead, the ministry said.

The cause of the crash was under investigation, but a ministry spokesman said a sudden strong gale jolted the transport as it approached a landing strip on the island's north coast.

The plane was about to disembark 47 soldiers for practice in repelling a sea-borne attack. The remaining six dead were crew members.

The previous worst crash involving a South Korea military aircraft was in 1967, when a transport plane crashed in a Seoul residential area, killing 63 people. Fifteen of the victims were aboard the plane and the other casualties were people on the ground.

Cheju island, about 220 miles south of Seoul, is a major tourist attraction that is also known for unpredictable weather.

News of the crash came hours after President Chun Doo-hwan dedicated a new 9,000-foot runway at Cheju international airport to help facilitate the landing of larger passenger jets.

Defense Minister Choo Young-bock, a former air force general, issued a statement to express condolences to families of the crash victims, and said the crash was extremely regrettable.

South Korea's worst civilian crash occurred Nov. 19, 1980, when a Korean Airlines jetliner crash-landed at Seoul's Gimpo airport, killing 14 of the 226 people aboard.

Peanut Vote Offers Stability For The Industry

Pitt peanut growers last week joined other peanut producers in overwhelmingly approving the peanut program.

In Pitt County 93 percent of those voting expressed approval for the program. In North Carolina 6,905 producers voted favorably and only 448 against.

It has been clear, however, that the peanut growers were voting reluctantly on the program which has been seriously impaired by Congress.

Norfleet Sugg, executive director of the N. C. Peanut Growers Association, said program changes would mean the loss of some allotments. At the same time rejecting the program would have meant the end of price supports and possibly a great disruption of the peanut industry, Sugg warned.

Locally some observers had been concerned about the vote, since a two-third majority was required to approve the program.

Pitt Extension Agent Sam Uzzell said the results were stronger than expected. "I think this tells the legislators that the program is necessary and wanted," he said.

It appears that while peanut farmers see the peanut program as seriously weakened, they concluded that price supports were needed. In the end it was an all or nothing vote.

The peanut growers have voted in their best interest in approving the program, weakened as it is.

We still have a selling to do to convince the American public that a strong farm sector is in its best interest. A glut of peanuts on the market in any given year might well send prices plummeting. On the other hand a severe shortage due to underproduction the next year would only send prices soaring again. That's a large part of what the farm programs are all about — to bring some stability to the marketing process.

Redistricting Keeps This Election Year In Constant Turmoil

Pitt voters now have a slate of candidates for offices to be filled by election this year.

Included are District Attorney, Sheriff, Clerk of Superior Court, County Commissioners, Pitt and Greenville Boards of Education and N. C. Supreme Court and Court of Appeals seats.

Still not settled, however, is who we will be voting on for the State Legislature and the First Congressional District seat. The filing period is still up in the air for those seats pending settling the state redistricting issue.

It would be rare to find a more unsettled year in politics due to the unresolved redistricting question. Surely that matter can be determined soon so that primaries and election can proceed.

Sunday Morning Notes

Jack Prahl, a representative for Field Newspaper Syndicate, called the other day.

After we concluded our business he asked, "How's the weather up there?"

"Terrible," I growled. "It's cloudy outside and supposed to rain. It's been cold, rainy, sleet-ing with intermittent periods of warm temperatures for weeks now ... and I've had a miserable cold."

Then I asked about conditions where he was.

"I don't want to tell you," he said brightly. "I'm in Clearwater, Fla., the sun just came out and my room is located overlooking the water."

Some days it just don't pay to get up.

Then again there are things which brighten up the days.

Charles Ross, director of instruction for the Greenville schools, and his wife Ellen, a sixth grade teacher at Wahl-Coates, visited the newspaper office to call on the publishers recently.

The reason for the visit? The Rosses had read in the paper about our 100th anniversary, and also the establishment of a journalism scholarship in honor of Chairman of the Board David Julian Whichard at the UNC-Chapel Hill School of Journalism.

That had special meaning to Charles Ross because he was the first recipient of The Daily Reflector scholarship to ECU (then East Carolina College) in 1952.

It also had special meaning to Ellen because she was the fourth recipient of the scholarship in 1956.

The two were also celebrating their 25th wedding anniversary that day. They have two children, Chris, a sophomore at ECU, and Ingrid, a ninth grade student at E.B. Aycock.

Since those struggling days, Charles has gotten his B.S. and M.A. in administration and supervision from ECU and done-post graduate work at Duke and Penn State. Ellen got a B.S. and M.A. from ECU. They have spent their entire careers in local education.

"I'd like to speak on behalf of all the youth of the past for whom you've done so much," Charles Ross said. "We came by to extend a personal thank you. Being in the field of education we know that when a student comes back to tell you what they think it is a wonderful gesture. I think it does that for anyone."

Charles said he remembers receiving some $700 over the four years which covered tuition and partially covered books. If that doesn't seem like much in terms of today's dollars, it likely meant the difference in whether or not he could attend college as a day student. "It was a Godsend," he says today.

Clearly as an investment in the area's future the money could not have been placed any better.

The Daily Reflector Scholarship to ECU is still given annually, alternating between the city and the county school systems.

State Offers Calendar Of Attractions

Bill Noblitt

RALEIGH — Something's happening in North Carolina — almost every day, somewhere.

Proof of that is in the column after column of listings in the latest edition of the calendar of events published by the travel and tourism division of the state Department of Commerce.

The book gets right down to little theater productions in small towns, horse shows, arts and craft exhibits, and a variety of musical and dance events, among many others.

So if 360,000 people from elsewhere in the country get copies when they send in an inquiry when thinking about visiting North Carolina, wouldn't Tar Heels who are looking for a weekend jaunt or a way to chase the winter blahs get even more use from the book?

The 36-page booklet is available from the Travel and Tourism Division, 430 N. Salisbury Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27611.

It lists the date, event, location and contact so you can check to make sure the schedule is accurate before traveling.

So whether it be a balloon rally, oyster festival, grape stomp, collard festival, drag boat race, boxing match, whistlers meet, strange food sampler, or listening to hollers or watching highlanders, the calendar of events can help you plan an outing.

Container shipment continues to dominate the world of international commerce. Wilmington Port reports growth of 10 to 15 percent yearly.

Bonds of more than $32 million will be used to build a 900-foot dock extension, install another container crane, and pave 40 acres for container storage and movement.

Revenues from the expansion are projected at $2.7 million in the first year of operation, and growing thereafter. Bond repayment will come from the income.

State ports director William M.A. Greene calls the expansion "one of the most important events to ever happen at the State Ports Authority."

The directors of the ports were told by analysts that a proposed 100,000 square-foot cold storage facility which would have cost $4.6 million should be postponed because it would not generate enough income to pay for itself right away.

"Just passing through" is the average reason motorists are in North Carolina when stopping at the state's five welcome centers.

Surveys taken from sample visitors showed that visiting friends or relatives is the second most common reason for being here, while looking at scenery and natural attractions is third.

Over half the non-resident callers at travel centers were from Florida, Virginia, South Carolina, New York, New Jersey and Maryland. The travelers were on their way to Myrtle Beach, Charlotte, Asheville, Raleigh, Orlando and Greensboro as top destinations.

More than three million visitors stopped at the Welcome Centers in a year's time. The typical travel party was two adults.

Senators Reaching Breaking Point On Cuba

WASHINGTON — An early warning signal has been flashed to President Reagan that defense-oriented senators, many of them solid Reaganites, will break their self-imposed silence and demand decisive U.S. action against the Soviet arms buildup in Cuba, using a political backdrop that could embarrass the president.

That backdrop is the drama of President John F. Kennedy's spectacular success in backing down the Soviet Union in the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. What gives piquancy to the demand for action is the new disclosure that Cuban airfields now operate as a base for the Soviet TU-95 heavy bomber called the Bear — far superior to the IL-28 that Kennedy insisted be withdrawn.

Despite the rising demand for action by an administration that has been talking tough on Cuba and the Caribbean for a full year, but carrying a small stick, the consensus within Reagan's national security bureaucracy was described to us this way: "We all agree the Soviets are developing a fantastic strategic opportunity." But as for the U.S. counteraction, well, let's see what happens.

That is the cycle of inertia that Senate critics are out to break, and they hope that focusing on the Kennedy performance will help.

Twenty years ago, when the U.S. still held an unequivocal military margin over the Soviets, Kennedy extended the missile crisis beyond mere Soviet agreement to pull out the medium-range missiles surreptitiously unloaded on Cuban wharfs. He insisted, also, on the withdrawal of the Cuban-based IL-28s, a light bomber dwarfed by the long-range TU-95 Bear.

Congressional agitation has been rising for months over U.S. intelligence reports that Soviet weapons have been piling up in Fidel Castro's Cuba. But the test intelligence added a new dimension: Cuban-based TU-95s, the aircraft classified in the SALT II treaty as the primary Soviet heavy bomber, have been engaged in reconnaissance flights against U.S. naval vessels along the Atlantic Coast for the first time. The TU-95 is a different aircraft from the TU-142, a reconnaissance plane that often prowls along the Atlantic seaboard.

The Senate foreign relations subcommittee that oversees Latin America and the Caribbean has asked State Department officials to give it details and documents of the 1962 agreements (that resolved the missile crisis) between John J. McCloy, representing the U.S., and Vasily Kuznetsov.

The subcommittee, headed by Sen. Jesse Helms, means business but the State Department is exhibiting signs of wariness. Senate insiders say the administration does not want to reveal the fine print of the written and oral undertakings by the Soviets in the so-called McCloy-Kuznetsov agreements.

Questions

NEW YORK (AP) — There are economic questions these days that lay unanswered for weeks and months. They are always there and never answered, and so we accept them as furniture and step around them.

How, for example, do we equate the theory of supply side economics — which has as a goal the transfer of power to the private sector — with repeated assurances that big budget deficits can be tolerated?

Unless the past has no lesson to offer, budget deficits have forced up interest rates, fueled inflation, crowded out industry from its share of funds, and in general reduced the private sector's potential growth.

That is a supply-side argument. But now, with deficits destined to reach historic highs, the administration contends there will be enough funds for the private sector to embark on "roaring" recovery.

One rationale is that the deficit is temporary, the consequence of a short-term economic decline destined to be corrected, and a shortfall in revenues resulting from lower taxes. Those lower taxes, it is said, will put spendable funds into the pockets of consumers, who may then go out and buy, or put their savings into banks to fuel expansion.

But after examining the earlier contentions of the administration, it is hard to find a defense having been made that deficits, huge ones, might be tolerable under some economic conditions, such as exist now.

An important question also exists about those savings. The savings rate is inching up to around 6 percent, one reason being the popularity of Individual Retirement Accounts, which permit savers to salt away up to $2,000 a year without any current taxes on the interest earned.

The concept has been widely acclaimed, but can the same be said about the execution. There is no scarcity of ads, for example, urging young people to become millionaires through the simple expedient of saving a couple of thousand dollars a year. The advertisers know that while it is conceivable, it is conceivable only if interest rates remain very high. And very high interest rates, of course, mean high inflation too.

As a result, any $2,000-a-year millionaire will inevitably find in his older years that prices will have risen accordingly, and that in terms of buying power he is right back there among the struggling masses.

That point has been made, but there's another factor that needs to be considered: Why should a young person unable even to save enough money to satisfactorily house his family, freeze funds for 30 years or more?

Wouldn't these funds be better invested in a home, which at least has the potential for keeping pace with inflation? Isn't it as important to exist intelligently as a 35-year-old as it is as a 65-year-old?

Homes, however, are not currently part of the supply-side agenda. In fact, a popular argument exists that money that goes into housing does so at the expense of industry. Industry first, is the rationale, and then industry can provide jobs to pay wages to be used in buying homes.

But that brings up a question that never manages to get answered. With more than 40 million Americans in this decade reaching family-building age — mid 20s to mid 30s — and with housing production in a depression and not likely to rise up from it soon, how are Americans to be housed?

That piece of furniture is a very old antique. It's in the way all the time, but it is seldom given a kick. Sooner or later, it seems, America is going to bust a shin on it.

Ivory Coast Stands As An Exception

James J. Kilpatrick

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast — Over the past 15 or 20 years, most of the news from Africa has confirmed Gibbon's melancholy comment that history is little more than a register of the crimes, follies and misfortunes of mankind. Against this general rule, one conspicuous exception stands out. It is the Ivory Coast.

The story of this sturdy little nation in West Africa is all the more notable these days because of the desperate plight of neighboring Ghana. The one has succeeded, the other has failed. To examine the reasons for the contrast is to discover once more the truth of another maxim of historians — that history is mostly biography.

Ghana won its independence from the British in March 1957. Ivory Coast formally separated from France in August 1960. In Ghana political leadership emerged in the person of Kwame Nkrumah. In Ivory Coast, the dominant figure was a soft-spoken physician, farmer and statesman, Felix Houphouet-Boigny.

The two men scarcely could have been more unlike. In Ghana, Nkrumah embarked upon an overambitious program of industrialization along socialist lines. Not content with 70 percent of the seats in his parliament, Nkrumah swiftly won constitutional changes that would make him the powerful president of a one-party state. With his parliament thus reduced to impotence, Nkrumah throttled the press, imprisoned his enemies and expelled most of the remaining British civil servants. In the midst of festering corruption and a declining economy, Nkrumah was overthrown by a military coup in February 1966.

The authors of that coup demonstrated that boldness is no substitute for competence. A second coup in 1972 swept them from power. New leaders had learned the arts of corruption from old ones. In 1979 a third rebellion arose, this one led by a young flight lieutenant, Jerry Rawlings. With the formation of a supposedly responsible government, he stepped aside. Six weeks ago, bitterly disappointed by Ghana's continued deterioration, Rawlings and his brother officers again seized power. The country totters on the brink of disaster, its cocoa and tomatoes rotting for want of transport and its gold and diamond mines in disarray. Only a black market thrives.

By contrast, Houphouet embarked in the Ivory Coast on a patient program of agricultural improvement. He kept a large French infrastructure in place — a battalion of marines still is garrisoned near the Abidjan airport — and he concentrated on building roads, extending electric power and developing port facilities. Houphouet's powers as president are extensive, but he has used them with moderation. The Ivory Coast is a pre-party state, but political activity is brisk within the party. Various incentives have attracted more than a hundred American companies to make investments here.

This is not to say that everything is blissful in this small oasis of stability. The Ivorian economy still rests largely on coffee and cocoa, and world markets are soft. Houphouet hungers for a new international cocoa agreement that would guarantee a profitable price, but the Reagan administration is unwilling to go along. Public education is steadily expanding, but of 800,000 children who start out in the elementary schools, only 3,000 wind up with baccalaureate degrees. Thanks in part to a solidly convertible currency — and to a budget even more austere than Mr. Reagan's — inflation remains within reasonable bounds, but no one denies the serious poverty that afflicts the nation as a whole.

Like Kenya, Zaire, Zimbabwe and South Africa, the Ivory Coast offers a study in contrasts. The skyline of Abidjan rivals the skyline of San Francisco. The Hotel Ivoire is as modern and sophisticated as the condominiums of Boca Raton. Among the tourist attractions are the lissome French tourists who bask at poolside, bare-breasted to the equatorial sun.

But only a few miles outside the city, despite rural electrification, villagers still live as they might have lived a century ago. Sixty tribal groups speak 62 different dialects. Twenty-one years after independence, the Ivory Coast is one of the emerging nations we read about. It is emerging remarkably well.

Public Forum

To the editor:

At six minutes to midnight on Jan. 21, my husband and I were driving south on Highway 13 near Tetterton's store when the compact car in front of us crossed the center line, careened off the left side through a wide, myddy ditch, and crashed into a large, older-model parked car.

Being the only witnesses, we called Pitt County Deputy Sheriff Jack Moye as soon as possible. He arrived in record time!

Having notified the Bethel Rescue Squad and the Highway Patrol, he assisted and remained until they arrived — a matter of minutes. The injured driver had been unaware of any witnesses or chain of communication. She was thankful.

The Bethel Rescue team went into action immediately. They were poised, courteous and professional as they administered aid to the cooperative patient on that unusually cold night. Soon, they drove gently off to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Trooper Stephen Compton carried out his duties in respect to his training. Even the owner of the heavily damaged parked car just listened to what had happened. He was calm.

The patient remembers vividly that everything went smoothly at the hospital from which she was released two days later.

Such an occasion of level-headed, even-tempered people and immediate professional aid cannot be surpassed! The recovering driver, my husband, and I are still singing God's praises as we recall the lines: "God's in His heaven; all's right with the world."

WASHINGTON — Poignant tributes to Franklin D. Roosevelt haven't necessarily turned on the generation that knows him only through history books and the recollections of their parents.

But, hazy remembrances of FDR's can-do government are enough to make many of us ask, "Where is it now?"

Finding a satisfying job has become a national nightmare for a new generation of American workers. The era of slow growth is leaving a scar on their self-esteem.

In Los Angeles, for example, two women acquaintances are still trying to turn their bachelor's degrees into challenging salaried positions almost nine months after graduation. Boston, one center of the so-called "boom" in data processing, has done little for another friend and her cohorts who've been laid off by a top-flight electronics company.

As the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported last month, unemployment has cut its biggest swath through the ranks of the under-30 crowd. Teenagers and blue-collar workers comprise the majority of the wounded, with the jobless rate in some sectors as high as 20 percent.

But the victims also include white-collar types, particularly women, who find themselves underskilled or overskilled for a changing job market. Sure, sales and clerical jobs are relatively plentiful, even if that includes part-time work. Yet, as labor economist Sam Rosenberg of Roosevelt University in Chicago points out, college degrees are becoming a pre-quite where four years of high school once sufficed.

Slow Growth Is Leaving A Scar

Happier days, by the administration's judgment, are just around the corner. But such predictions are running up against a widely-reported reluctance among U.S. businessmen to gamble with new tax cuts on new investments. If anything, available cash is going toward acquisitions, job creation, it seems, is low on the totem pole.

In the face of what are widely believed to be bleak prospects, President Reagan wants us to ignore the doomsayers. "(The) state of... the economy will be better — much better — if we summon the strength to continue on the course we have charted," was his assessment last week.

And, strangely enough, young Americana, in particular, have been agreeing with the president. A stunning New York Times/CBS News Poll discovered that 72 percent of 18-to-29-year-old Americans believed the Reagan economic program would "eventually help the country's economy." In fact, percent of this age group felt the program had already had positive impact. (Not surprisingly, confidence in the Reagan strategy decreased as respondents got older.)

"You've got to remember that voters in the younger age group are on the up side of life," advised pollster Peter Hart. "They're invariably more optimistic about any aspect of the future — whether it's the state of the nation or the economy. Why? Because whether they're earning $10,000, $12,000 or $15,000, it's still more than they've ever had." The optimism, he adds, is a "verdict on their own lives, not Ronald Reagan."

Indeed, as long as recovery and advancement seem in reach, it may be easier for a single 24-year-old in for a 32-year-old family man to remain politically mum.

However, the economic self-interest that breeds political complacency today could explode if Reagan's program eventually fails. No one knows just how much patience the "Me-generation" can muster.

But Hart and other pollsters agree that unemployment could be a hot issue for baby-boomers by 1984, if not by this November. Leonard Wood of the Gallup Organization calls unemployment a "very salient issue" for young voters.

Unemployment shouldn't just trouble Ronald Reagan, or any of his possible successors in the 1984 presidential race. Younger voters won't necessarily flock to a Democratic Party that rants and raves but offers no innovative alternatives. As wood notes, political nonalignment is likely to continue; independent or non-party slates are likely to benefit from the chaos.

Along with extra efforts to safeguard the fair competition for available employment, job training would be a good start for both parties. While CETA had its faults, the obligation to train the unskilled is a reality that neither government nor the private sector can ignore. Unlike robots, underdeveloped human capital can talk back with a vengeance.

FDR knew this very well. He gave jobs to millions of the unemployed and became a legend as a result. Fifty years from now, will Ronald Reagan enjoy the same legacy in the reminiscences of those who knew him?

George Gallup POLL

PRINCETON, N.J. — As President Reagan embarks on his second year in office, his overall job performance rating and the public's assessment of his handling of four important national problems are at a low point.

Specifically, 49 percent of Americans now approve of Reagan's handling of his presidential duties, 41 percent, the way he is dealing with economic conditions, 37 percent, his handling of inflation, 26 percent, his dealing with unemployment, and 47 percent, our relations with the Soviet Union. At no time since these Gallup measurements were initiated have there been significantly lower approval ratings, and in two instances, Reagan's handling of inflation and unemployment, his current ratings are lower than any recorded to date for him.

On the brighter side, from the president's point of view, twice as many Americans approve (52 percent) as disapprove (25 percent) of his handling of the Polish situation.

The nation's economic news in January was mixed. The good news that the rate of inflation had returned to single digits was offset by a worsening in the unemployment rate. There was also the disquieting prospect of a $100 billion deficit for the 1982 fiscal year.

1 In 8 Expresses Unqualified Approval

One person in eight nationwide (13 percent) expresses unqualified approval of Reagan, giving him a vote of confidence for his overall performance in office and for all five specific issues tested.

Slightly fewer, 10 percent, express unqualified disapproval. Most inclined to do so are blacks, with almost three in 10 (28 percent) giving consistently negative responses.

Following is the question asked to measure public attitudes toward the president's overall performance:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Ronald Reagan is handling his job as president?"

Here is a selected trend:

'Mother Of The Year' Was Determined

When Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, founder of the Crossnore School for Underprivileged Children, died in 1962, writers of her obituary credited her with bringing good roads, modern farming methods, religious tolerance, a hospital and dental clinic and vocational instruction to remote, mountainous Avery County.

Dr. Sloop, a spirited, blue-eyed woman who was named American "Mother of the Year" in 1951, told of some of the trials and tribulations she encountered en route to that honor in a book she co-authored in 1953.

In the book "Miracle in the Hills" she wrote with author LeGette Blythe, she told of coming to Avery County with her husband, Dr. Eustace H. Sloop, in 1911 shortly after her graduation from the Medical College of Pennsylvania and of her struggle to replace the one-room shack that served Crossnore as a school. When she died a half century later, that school had expanded to an institution with some 25 buildings. It had provided an education to thousands of boys and girls from all over the Blue Ridge area.

Early in her fight to improve the lot of the mountain people, to wipe out illiteracy and superstitions and to bring a halt to child marriage among the people, Dr. Sloop decided she had to tackle and curb a leading local industry, the illicit manufacture of liquor, or moonshining as it was called.

"Many people of the county were able to have no more than $50 pass through their hands in a year's time when I went there ...." she said in an interview after her selection as national mother of the year. "There was money only in liquor and it was a temptation. The corn grown in the high altitude seemed good only for making liquor. My husband and I knew there had to be a solution."

Dr. Sloop found the answer when she learned from the State Department of Agriculture that farmers in Maine grew seed potatoes in altitudes above 3,000 feet.

"I had always heard of Maine potatoes, but did not connect the altitude with seed potatoes," she said. "By 1914, they were growing seed potatoes in Avery County, and now Avery County seeds are used throughout the Southland."

But growing seed potatoes was not the only weapon used in curbing the moonshiners. At Dr. Sloop's behest some of the whiskey-makers were tracked down in the hills and their stills destroyed on Crossnore's main street, so that all could see.

One of Dr. Sloop's first projects was to get the one-room school moved to a more suitable location, a task for which oxen were used to do the tugging and pulling. When the oxen balked and refused to move a peg despite the loud cracking of a long bullwhip wielded by Uncle Preston, the old man asked Dr. Sloop to "move up that there hill a little piece."

When she was out of earshot, the drivers gave the oxen the "cussin'" to which they were accustomed and which they understood perfectly. The beasts immediately moved forward together and dragged the shack to its new site.

After her selection as mother of the year, Dr. Sloop gave the credit to that school for the work it had done in educating the mountain children.

"The mountain children are the secret of my success, if mine is success," she said. "They are determined people. They are of the old Revolutionary stock."

Dr. Sloop got an inkling of the extent of the Revolutionary War heritage of the mountaineers after the formation of Avery County's first chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"A lady in Gastonia offered to pay initiation fees of accredited children if enough were found to form a chapter of Children of the American Revolution. She told me that they would squeeze it through if we could get five, although six children is the minimum for starting a chapter." Dr. Sloop recalled. "Before I completed my canvass I found hundreds of children who were qualified. When I wrote the lady in Gastonia, she nearly fainted."

The DAR presented an administration building and a music building to the Crossnore school in 1948.

A Lunch Is A Lunch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One of the most enduring federal tax shelters, seemingly impervious to congressional attack, is the so-called three-martini lunch.

With President Reagan now talking openly about closing certain loopholes, anti-lunch forces may be emboldened to mount a new assault during this session. But Congress, true to tradition, can be expected to retain the expense account lunch in all of its many-splendored variations.

If ever you find yourself wondering how this write-off acquired its protected status, it may be because you only think of lunch as an occasion for the intake of nourishment.

To grasp its real role in our society, you must think of lunch as a venerable institution, almost as politically sacred as apple pie and motherhood, as formidable in its way as the anvil lobby and the military-industrial-footst oole complex.

In that regard, permit me to introduce Louise Bernikow.

I don't know whether Miss Bernikow would take kindly to being identified as "the voice of the expense account lunch." But a reading of her recent book, "Let's Have Lunch," might convince you the title is richly deserved.

As the subtitle, "Games of Sex and Power," suggests, there is, or can be, a great deal more to the noon meal than mere ingestion.

Anyone acquiring this book in the naive expectation of learning something about food is in for a disappointment. The subject is barely mentioned.

What Miss Bernikow is imparting are some of the fine points of lunchmanship.

"They don't teach lunching in business school but they ought to," says the publisher, Harmony Books.

A Strong Dollar Sometimes Hurts

NEW YORK (AP) — Earnings dwindled last year at many American businesses, partially because of the deteriorating economy and in part because of high interest rates.

But some companies that do business abroad also took a beating because of the buoyant U.S. dollar. For example, SmithKline Corp., the pharmaceutical and chemical company, said it was forced to subtract $42 million from its income statement because of unfavorable currency translations.

The dollar's value as compared with foreign currencies was high throughout 1981, especially during the first eight months of the year.

After slipping some for several months, the dollar rebounded at year's end, and in European trading this week the dollar regained its level of last August against the Italian lire and the French franc.

Here are some questions and answers about how a strong U.S. dollar affects American companies that do business abroad.

Q. What is an exchange rate and why does it concern U.S. companies that sell goods abroad?

A. The rate of exchange is the price at which one currency can be bought with another currency or with gold. For instance, on Monday, an American could, for $1, buy 2.3470 West German marks or 1.8720 Swiss francs, and it would have taken $1.8673 to buy one British pound. A U.S.-based company, therefore, selling a television set through a West German subsidiary to someone paying in marks would be concerned about the exchange rate if the profit on the TV eventually had to be converted back into dollars.

Q. Why does a company have to worry about exchange rates? Aren't they the same every day?

A. From the end of World War I until 1971, most major nations relied on a fixed rate of exchange, with each country setting a value for its currency. First the rate was based on the price of gold and later it was set in relation to the U.S. dollar, which was tied to gold.

But in 1971, the United States changed the rules and no longer allowed the dollar to be freely exchanged for gold at a fixed price. And with no single currency unit, exchange rates began to fluctuate, influenced by various political and economic events.

Q. How would an improving dollar against foreign currencies hurt a company's profit?

A. Assume that the West German subsidiary of Company X spent 800 marks to make a TV set and then sold it for 1,000 marks. That would give the company a 200-mark profit, or, translated at Monday's exchange rate of 2.3470 marks for every dollar, an $85.22 gain.

Now suppose that two weeks later, while the company still is holding that profit in marks, the value of the dollar strengthens against the West German currency — to perhaps 2.4 marks. So instead of being worth $85.22, that 200-mark profit from the TV now is worth $83.33. It may not seem like much of a change, but a similar gap translated over a full year for, say, a million TV sets would represent a loss of $1.89 million in profit.

In addition, a strong dollar makes American-made goods more expensive and less competitive with foreign-made goods — decreasing sales.

Q. If exchange rates are so volatile, isn't there a way for companies to compensate for the daily changes before reporting their earnings to stockholders?

A. Until recently, companies with foreign business had little choice but to include the effects of currency translations on their income statements. For example, Ford Motor Co. was forced to subtract $174 million from profit during the second quarter of 1981 because of unfavorable currency translations.

But a rule change approved in early December by the Financial Accounting Standards Board — the accounting profession's rule-making body — now allows companies to ignore losses or gains from currency translations on the income statement and note them, instead, on the shareholders' equity portion of the balance sheet.

For instance, Ingersoll-Rand Co., a manufacturer of compressors, pumps, mining machinery and bearings, said last week the accounting change resulted in a $1.17 per share rule added 23 cents to per-share earnings for the year.

Plan Depicts $273 Billion Deficit By 1984

In a message accompanying his budget, Reagan exhorted Congress to stand by his program of tax cuts for economic recovery. "Our task is to persevere; to stay the course; to shun retreat; to weather the temporary dislocations and pressures

And while the president insisted his program would eventually return the nation to a path of strong growth and low inflation, his short-term outlook was not encouraging for the millions of Americans left unemployed by recession.

Reagan predicted the economy would begin to recover this spring, but said unemployment is expected to average near a post-World War II high of 9 percent for 1982 and remain above 8 percent for much of 1983.

The budget, the first Reagan has shaped from start to finish, sticks to the plan he launched a year ago for a massive rearmament, extensive cuts in domestic programs and personal income tax cuts.

Reagan avoided the further embarrassment of being the first president to project a $100 billion deficit by urging Congress to cut an additional $2.4 billion from domestic programs during the current fiscal year. Otherwise, the 1982 deficit would hit $101 billion.

Defense spending would jump 18 percent in 1983, diverting 29 cents out of every federal dollar to the Pentagon and other defense-related agencies.

Spending on Medicare, food stamps, job training, education and dozens of other domestic programs that were cut this year would be reduced by another $27 billion during the new fiscal year, which starts Oct. 1.

The deficits will increase the government's accumulated debt, now $1 trillion, and mean ever-rising interest payments. For 1983, $99.1 billion, or 13 cents out of every budget dollar, would go simply to pay interest charges.

The deficits could grow even higher should the economy fail to respond to Reagan's anti-recession tax cuts. Critics contend the record deficits will drive up interest rates again and prevent the president's promised recovery from taking place.

It also is uncertain whether the administration can produce all the management savings it is counting heavily on to hold down the deficit.

And, Congress is unlikely to go along fully with a budget that would slash deeper into the same social welfare programs that were cut last year while resisting military reductions or personal tax increases to lower the deficits.

Reagan had promised during his campaign for the presidency to boost defense, cut personal tax rates and social spending and put the budget in balance by 1983, if not earlier. Shortly after taking office, Reagan moved the balanced budget target back to 1984.

He has achieved the first two goals but has abandoned his quest for a balanced budget any time in the near future. By 1987, according to the new budget, the government still would be operating more than $50 billion in the red.

Stockman, pressed by reporters to say when the budget might ever be balanced, replied cautiously: "somewhere in the range beyond 1988."

The largest deficit on record is $66.4 billion, set in 1976, the last year of the Ford administration.

"We did not promise the American people a miracle," Reagan said of his new red-ink forecast. "We did promise them progress, and progress they will get."

Critics contended all along it would be a miracle for Reagan's plan to produce a balanced budget, and now growing ranks of politicians and private economists are questioning what kind of progress the administration is making. They have raised concerns that the economy could wind up in a worsening recession if deficits are not pared back.

Reagan, however, rejected calls in Congress and even in his own Cabinet to shrink the deficits by cutting defense spending and raising excise taxes on gasoline, alcohol, cigarettes and other consumer goods.

The president said he was standing by his program of personal tax cuts designed to lead to permanent economic recovery down the road. He contends his tax cuts will encourage people to save more money, which can be used to finance a healthy business expansion and the federal deficit without forcing up interest rates.

"Our budget deficits will be large ... but our incentive-minded tax policy and our security-based defense programs are right and necessary for long-run peace and prosperity, and must not be tampered with in a vain attempt to cure deficits in the short run."

"These principles we dare not abandon," added the president, who had planned to sign his budget Monday and then fly west to speak with legislators in Minnesota, Iowa and Indiana.

Total spending under Reagan's budget would rise only 4.5 percent from the estimated fiscal 1982 total of $725.3 billion. Spending during 1982 rose an estimated 10.4 percent. Revenues are projected at $666.1 billion in 1983, up from $626.8 billion in 1982.

A select list of domestic programs would not be cut, including the Social Security budget, which would grow from $154.6 billion in 1982 to $173.5. Other programs exempt from cuts include Head Start, Older Americans Act, National Institutes of Health, general revenue sharing, Urban Development Action Grants, minority business assistance, aid to black colleges and block grants for alcohol, drug abuse, mental health and social services.

The Reagan budget predicts unemployment will average 8.9 percent for all of 1982 and decline only modestly to an average rate of 7.9 percent in 1983. Administration officials acknowledge that sometime this year, the jobless rate is likely to approach 10 percent.

Reagan's forecast also predicts a return to robust economic growth during 1983, with inflation at the consumer level ebbing to 7.3 percent in 1982 and 6 percent in 1983. The rate stood at 9 percent in 1981 and 12.4 percent in 1980.

But prospects were not so bright for short-term interest rates, which are expected to decline slowly but still remain above 10 percent on average through 1983.

In his budget message, Reagan blamed the giant deficits on the current recession, unexpectedly high interest rates, a faster than anticipated decline in inflation and the failure of Congress to approve all the budget cuts he sought last year.

Reagan Calls For Record Hike Of $33 Billion For Military

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan asked Congress on Saturday to vote a record $33.1 billion increase in Pentagon spending next year "to restore our margin of safety and counter the Soviet military buildup."

In a year when Reagan faces greater resistance from Congress on the scale and cost of the planned buildup, he applauded the Senate and House for giving him virtually everything he sought for defense in the current budget.

He said "real defense spending will rise rapidly in the next several years, and the defense share of the federal budget will climb steadily."

He and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger blamed previous administrations dating back to 1975, especially that of Jimmy Carter, for what they claimed has been a serious deterioration of American military power while the Soviets have been engaged in what Weinberger called "the largest buildup of military power seen in modern times."

Weinberger's annual report was issued along with the president's budget while the secretary was travelling in the Middle East.

Reagan's request contemplates Defense Department spending of $215.9 billion in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. His budget message forecast that such spending would rise to about $356 billion by 1987.

When nuclear weapons programs conducted by the Energy Department are added, the defense total reaches $221.1 billion for 1983, an 18 percent increase over the current year. That amounts to 29 cents of every federal budget dollar compared with 26 cents in the current fiscal year and 24 cents in 1981.

"If an adequate defense had been provided by the previous administration, military pay would have been higher, readiness improvements we are now undertaking would have begun earlier and investment in weapons and support systems would have been substantially larger," Reagan said in speaking of what he called "past failures."

Harold Brown, who served as defense secretary under then-President Jimmy Carter, said Saturday in responding to Reagan's criticism: "After a year in office, it is appropriate for an administration to take responsibility for its own actions and not blame them on its predecessors."

He contended that "the Carter administration had begun to increase the defense budget in real terms and had programmed additional increases through 1986."

At a Pentagon briefing Saturday, Deputy Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci reinforced the impression that the Reagan administration intends to stand fast against any congressional attempts to make major cuts in its defense budget.

"Although there are those who are talking about cuts in the defense budget, we are not," Carlucci said. "We feel we have put together a minimal budget to meet the threat."

Carlucci acknowledged that Pentagon officials expect to meet "a challenge on the Hill," but he said he is confident that Congress will go along with the administration when it fully understands the budget plan.

Reagan's spending forecast was accompanied by a record-sized projection of $258 billion in budget authority for fiscal 1983, most of which will be spent in later years as ships, aircraft and other weapons come off the production line. This represents a $43.8 billion boost in budget authority, including a $2.3 billion supplemental request for this year, largely because of higher-than-expected inflation.

The president, voicing satisfaction with progress in "rebuilding national defense" in his first year, said, "health is being restored" but that "much remains to be done."

The most urgent need, he said, is to strengthen U.S. nuclear striking power because "the relative imbalance with the Soviet Union will be at its worst in the mid-1980s."

Therefore, he said the 1983 strategic program totalling $23.1 billion calls for starting two additional giant Trident missile-firing submarines, pushing ahead with development of the B-1B bomber and the new land-based MX missile as well as a much improved warhead for the MX.

Reagan also stressed a "key initiative" a vast new Navy shipbuilding program totaling $18.6 billion next year alone and including two nuclear-powered aircraft carriers, along with three nuclear-powered cruisers, two nuclear-powered attack submarines, a pair frigates and other vessels.

News Leaks ...

before the briefer left the room. Kovach, of the Times, said he couldn't recall an earlier administration handing budget documents to Congress prior to the date of official release.

Stockman collected no copies. And, sure enough, not long afterward copies were slipped to reporters — in plenty of time for the television networks to prepare artwork to accompany their detailed stories about the budget.

It also produced those Saturday newspaper stories, rich in budget detail and attributed to "congressional sources."

The ways of leakers were wonderful indeed: — A congressional staff member phones: "We'll leak it to you under the following ground rules: You come over, we'll tell you what's in it, give it to you, but you can't use it until tomorrow morning." Had the reporter violated that rule, he would have been guilty of leaking a leak before its time.

— It is Thursday, four full days before the official release date. Five congressmen call a press conference to announce their opposition to specific parts of the budget. They hand out a package of information, claiming it came from "sources within the administration and based on draft documents." The packet includes some of the secret budget figures.

— A reporter is in an office of one relatively small-spending department trying to line up an interview to discuss the upcoming budget. He is handed a copy with all possible detail. "Do I have to honor an embargo?" he asked. "No," was the reply. "If you wait until the budget comes out it gets lost in all the other stuff."

— The No. 3 man in a department slips a reporter his department's budget at lunch, but tells him to attribute the information to some other source.

Polish Regime Condemns British Trade Sanctions

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WASAW, Poland (AP) — The martial law regime said Saturday food shortages probably will become more severe and it condemned British trade sanctions as "brutal interference" in Poland's internal affairs.

Officials interviewed by the government newspaper Rzeczpospolita said there was enough meat to fill rations through February, but the outlook for March "is not that optimistic."

Witold Pereta, the official in charge of the meat industry, told the paper that Poles would have only 1.3 million tons this year, compared to 1.7 million last year when shortages forced the government to institute rationing and cut monthly allotments. The average meat ration now is 5.5 pounds per person per month.

"Meat purchase is always very low in the third quarter of the year, so it will be impossible to maintain the meat rationing at the present level," Pereta said.

The Peasant Party daily Dziennik Ludowy, in an article headlined "Shortage of Flour," said that purchases of grain were still too low and there would be continued shortages of potatoes.

Food shortages coupled with price increases sparked riots in 1970 and 1976. A meat price hike in 1980 fueled strikes that led to the formation of the independent union Solidarity, suspended when martial law was imposed Dec. 13.

PAP, the official Polish news agency, said Britain's decision to impose sanctions on Poland and the Soviet Union was "a concession to Washington's demands." The agency said U.S. sanctions ordered earlier by President Reagan remain "painful for us."

Britain's sanctions, announced Friday, include travel restrictions on diplomats, businessmen and journalists, a halt in new credits to Poland and a cutback in technical cooperation with the Soviets.

PAP described the British moves as "another attempt at brutal interference in the internal affairs of Poland."

Polish officials also said they would boycott this week's session of the East-West conference on European security in Madrid if it turns into a "tribunal" attacking the martial law regime.

Deputy Foreign Minister Jozef Wiejacz said in a published interview the boycott would develop if the conference has a "character of confrontation and interference in Poland's internal affairs."

In Washington, the head of the U.S. delegation to the conference, Max Kampelman, said Friday "the West intends to use the Madrid meeting as a forum to express our sense of indignation at events in Poland." Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. is to address the conference Tuesday, delivering what American officials describe as a major denunciation of the Polish crackdown.

Polish officials are still fuming over Reagan's cutting of grain shipments vital to the Polish chicken industry as part of the U.S. package of sanctions.

The threat to pull out of the Madrid conference was based on a report by PAP from Brussels citing informed sources who said NATO countries would accuse Poland of violating the Helsinki Final act on human rights.

PAP said the NATO states would make future relations with Poland and the Soviet Union contingent on developments in Poland.

Haig Set For Blast At Poles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. planned to leave Sunday for Madrid in the latest U.S.-led drive to arouse global indignation over Soviet complicity in the repression in Poland.

Haig will deliver what is described as a major denunciation of events in Poland at a meeting of the 35-nation European Security Conference on Tuesday.

It was understood the United States may lead a walkout of its allies from the meeting later in the week to show allied disapproval of the imposition of martial law.

The Soviet Union, Poland and other East European countries also are represented at the conference, as are the NATO countries. While the allies will be represented by their foreign ministers, the Soviet-bloc nations are expected to send officials of lower rank.

"The West intends to use the Madrid meeting as a forum to express our sense of indignation at events in Poland," Max Kampelman, the head of the permanent U.S. delegation to the conference, told reporters Friday.

However, the disclosure by the State Department late Friday that U.S. taxpayers may eventually repay as much $2 billion in Polish government debts to American banks could cause the expression of indignation at Madrid to ring hollow in some quarters.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., plans to introduce legislation Monday declaring Poland in default on its debts to U.S. lenders.

He specifically criticized the decision of the Reagan administration to pay $71 million to U.S. banks to save the Polish government from default. But a Treasury Department official said Friday the $71 million may only be a beginning.

Mare Leland, the assistant secretary for international affairs, said the U.S. government is obligated to pay between $500 million and $700 million in Polish debt in fiscal 1982 alone, and $1.9 billion over the next three years, if Poland fails to pay.

Reagan Marks 71st Birthday

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan celebrated his 71st birthday Saturday, the first chief executive to reach that age in the White House.

The late Dwight D. Eisenhower was 70 when he left office.

There were no official events on the president's schedule, although his $757.6 billion budget proposal for fiscal 1983 was formally unveiled by administration officials. The president spent the day in the residential quarters of the executive mansion and was expected to sign the budget proposal on Monday.

Betsy Koons, a spokeswoman for Nancy Reagan, said the Reagans would mark the occasion Saturday night by hosting a dinner party at the White House for several friends, whom she refused to identify, saying it was a private party. The birthday cake, she said, was a three-layer almond meringue with a hazelnut butter cream mousse filling. A ring of tiny horses made of sugar circled the top of the cake; and a single candle lit the center.

ECU Preschool Offers Center For Learning

'Ideas, Things To Talk About'

FRANCEINE PERRY
ECU News Bureau

Most experts agree that the best learning years are the preschool years, and that success in school depends upon the right kind of stimulation in early childhood.

The 3- and 4-year-old children enrolled in East Carolina University's Preschool are being stimulated — intellectually, socially, emotionally and culturally — and are developing in a warm, caring environment.

ECU's preschool is operated by the department of child development and family relations in the school of home economics and is used as a training facility for psychology and child development, while providing enriching experiences for the children enrolled.

Preschool classes meet Monday through Thursday during the regular academic year while ECU is in session. A summer program is offered some years, based on availability of children and staff.

The preschool policy manual for parents states the case clearly:

"At our school you will see

no lines to stand in, only games to play.

"No patterns to follow, only materials with which to create.

"No complicated, abstract meanings the child cannot comprehend, only ideas and things to talk about, relate to, compare with, match, fit into, reinforce, invent, discover, enjoy."

Three three-hour morning and afternoon classes are currently offered. The program is directed by preschool coordinator Ebbie Hatton; the teachers are child development graduate students Carla Manning, Debi Crockett and Kathy Shepherd. Each teacher is assisted by several student interns, which assures good adult-child ratios in the classes of 12-15 children.

A visitor to the preschool immediately notices how freely the children move about their large classrooms during the "free play" hour that is held each day.

On a given day the Threes are constructing with blocks, rolling play dough "cookies," fitting puzzle pieces together, arranging colored pegs in a pegboard or "pretending" in the dramatic play area set up by the teacher before class.

This time it's an ocean voyage. The "U.S.S. ECU" — a flagship made of cardboard boxes with room for four passengers and a captain — is about to depart. Each "passenger" packs a small suitcase and buys a cardboard ticket from the "travel agent" before boarding.

On other days, dramatic play focuses on a hat store, a doctor's office, a restaurant or a supermarket. The effect is enhanced by grown-up clothes and realistic props.

A group of Fours are making train pictures, assembling and pasting cut-out squares, rectangles and triangles, using bottle caps for wheels.

One boy fits a life-size body puzzle together, while two others crawl around an elaborate wooden railroad.

When the bell rings, it's clean-up time, followed by a story, a snack and a rest period. For music — marching, singing or fingerplays — each classroom has a piano and a record player.

Bad weather does not prevent the preschoolers from active play; the "large muscle" room nearby has ample equipment for tumbling, climbing and stretching.

Mrs. Hatton believes one of the primary values of the ECU preschool is its "open-endedness," the variety it offers.

"Here, a child has a choice of things which interest him," she says. "A child might spend 10 minutes with a puzzle, five minutes in block-building and 20 minutes at the art table.

"We try to set the stage so the child can make discoveries on his own."

The huge variety of enjoyable things to do is carefully planned. Manipulative materials and art projects are weighted in favor of free form materials such as blocks, clay and sand, although important "exact" learning tools — shape-sorting boxes, wooden puzzles, etc. — are included.

"What may appear to be a purely for fun learning center is actually a place to teach basic science and math — more-less and number concepts," Mrs. Hatton explains.

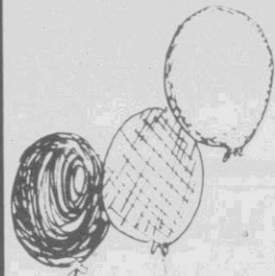

The children don't just hear about things; they do them. They plant seeds and watch them sprout and grow, they care for Patty the pet hamster, they help cook and serve their own snacks in the classroom kitchens and occasionally, they go out on field trips to see adults at work.

Regular responsibilities are a source of pride. A notice posted in the 4-year-olds classroom tells which children are this week's "light person," "door holder," "napkin passer" and "trash person."

Admonishment for misbehavior is firm, but gentle and positive. "Use your walking feet," the teachers say, rather than "Stop running!"

Parents are invited to become involved in the preschool, said Mrs. Hatton.

Showboat Docks In Greenville

The "Orange Blossom" Showboat docked here Friday night at the Greenville Country Club where an evening of entertainment was provided for the annual Charity Ball. The ball was sponsored by the Service League to benefit the Laughinghouse Hospital Fund.

The front lawn and driveway at the club were transformed into a dock front with roped dock pilings lining the driveway and street. Cotton bales, hogsheds, chicken coups and molasses barrels representing merchandise typical of the times were in evidence. Lanterns and torches were interspersed among the pilings and merchandise.

Ball guests were greeted by a doorman dressed as a showboat captain. The outside marquee showed a picture of a can-can girl and announced the special entertainment and music for the evening.

A loading area for passengers in the foyer was enhanced by antique trunks and hat boxes while the adjacent river bank showed cattails, reeds and ferns. Crossing over the boat's gangplank and deck, guests found themselves in front of French doors opening into the main salon of the boat, where they were entertained by the music of the Bert Massengale Orchestra.

The walls in the salon were adorned with gilded mirrors and pastoral scene paintings. The ceiling was complemented by mobiles of oversized playing cards, poker chips and dice, all sparkling with glitter. The bandstand was transformed into the deck of the "Orange Blossom" from the movie "Showboat." Lattice and gingerbread work dominated the boat deck. The stern featured a turning orange and white paddle wheel while a fluttering Confederate flag decorated the bow.

Special selections presented during the evening included "Can't Stop Lovin' Dat Man," sung by Scarlett Smith, "Old Man River" and "Make Believe."

Dancers for the "Showboat Revue" were Daffodil Gavigan, Camellia King, Honeysuckle Layne, Gardenia MacKenzie, Magnolia Moore, Azalea Whichard and Wisteria Wilkerson. The dance was choreographed by SuSu Corbett.

In the gambling hall "Howard Keel" stood at the poker table with his winnings. He was dressed in a blue velvet-trimmed suit completed with silver-tipped cane and satin top hat. A tiffany lamp was hanging low over the female dealer, dressed in black and white, who was waiting to deal 21 on her game table.

Upon entering the showroom, one could almost hear the melodious voice of the showboat's star singer. Her show times were displayed on a gold leaf billboard to her left. Spotlights fell on the singer, who was dressed in a blue-sequined gown with ostrich feathers in her hair.

Table decorations included flower arrangements of white magnolia in glass compotes flanked by glass lamps. Of special interest on the tables for ball guests were hostess cards, in the likeness of a lifering painted white and trimmed with nautical rope. Painted with black lettering on the ring was "Showboat '82" and the name of the table host and hostess. Programs showed a dancing can-can girl on the covered and were placed on the tables for each guest. The buffet table was decorated similar to the individual tables.

The menu board, on an easel placed on the outside of the grill room, showed a dancing can-can girl.

Usherettes for the evening were Marla Howard, Elizabeth Longino and Mary Vick.

Serving on the ball committees with Mrs. Hudson were: decorations, Mrs. Frank Layne; bandstand, Mrs. James Galloway; ceilings, Mrs. Kelly Barnhill and Mrs. G. David Odom; dinner, Mrs. William

McConnell and Mrs. Donald Patrick; driveway, Ms. Jo Betts Barrett; entrance, Mrs. Raymond MacKenzie Jr.; finance, Mrs. Bernard Vick; foyer, Mrs. Wayne Kendrick and Mrs. Jack Whichard; invitations, Mrs. Percy Cox and Mrs. Charles Wilkerson Jr.; lounges, Mrs. L. # Jobless Rate Hits Plateau

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Economists say North Carolina's unemployment rate has leveled off below the peak set during the 1975 recession — but probably won't improve before summer.

In January, 6.8 percent of North Carolina's workforce could not find jobs, according to the Labor Market Information Service in Raleigh. The figure represents the number of unemployed workers who are covered by the state's unemployment insurance system.

The actual unemployment rate probably will be slightly higher when farm laborers and federal employees who are not covered by state unemployment insurance are counted.

The jobless rate had climbed to a high of 8.4 percent during the first week of the month. That compares to a 10.1 percent jobless rate for January 1975.

The 6.8 jobless rate means 155,299 North Carolinians filed claims for unemployment compensation during an average week, said labor analyst David Pearce, who monitors unemployment trends for the state government.

Past trends indicate that the January figures represent the worst of the current recession, he said.

"It's still above the level for January for all years since 1975," he said. "But January is normally the worst month. I would expect February to start leveling off a little."

"But everyone is still projecting that things won't improve much until May, June or July," he said.

The state unemployment rate is expected to remain well above 5 percent at least until April, he said, adding, "It may even last on into the third quarter of this year."

Textile, furniture and construction industries continue to lead the state's unemployment figures, with 24,412 textile workers filing unemployment claims during the week ending Jan. 30, Pearce said. That means 10.1 percent of the state's textile workers were out of work.

Farmers Say Migrant Job Is Necessary

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

SPRING HOPE, N.C. (AP) — Muddy fields stretch as far as the eye can see in eastern North Carolina, awaiting summer and the sweet potato, cucumber and tobacco crops.

Area growers say the fields would be nothing but mud year-round without the help of seasonal and migrant laborers who help plant and harvest crops.

But the migrant labor system in North Carolina and the Southeast repeatedly has been attacked for alleged health and wage violations.

Last month, two migrant crewleaders from Florida and one from Alabama, hired by a North Carolina farmer, were convicted on charges relating to a case that involved the death of a laborer last harvest. A fourth crew boss was arrested last week in Georgia in connection with the case.

Farmers say the case is sure to renew government efforts to monitor labor camps this summer, an action many farmers believe is unwarranted and counter-productive.

The farmer hires the crewleader, is held responsible for camp conditions by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and is responsible for wages paid directly to workers under U.S. Department of Labor regulations.

But Chuck Eppinette, co-director of Farmworker Legal Services in North Carolina says he thinks the law insulates the farmer from a lot of responsibility.

"All the farmer has to do is keep his eyes closed" to avoid seeing abuses, said Eppinette.

Jim Prince, farm labor specialist with the U.S. Department of Labor in Raleigh said the farmers don't see abuses because they are they are too busy. He said farmworkers are present at the busiest time of the year - the harvest.

"Their big interest is the crop, not what's going on in the camp," Prince said to get in the crops with the most efficiency.

"Laws in most states favor the growers instead of the workers because the growers are the voters," Prince said.

Ted Bissett, 45, of Spring Hope, raises sweet potatoes and tobacco that are harvested by migrant and seasonal laborers. He also owns a general store selling everything from blenders to tractor blades.

Bissett says he doesn't know any workers who are paid less than minimum wage and he's never seen a crew leader physically discipline a worker or guard laborers to keep them in camp.

"If we were treating people unfairly, I wouldn't have my business," he said. "They (migrants) wouldn't be driving 1,000 miles (from Florida) to get here. Those fellows wouldn't be jumping on that bus to go to work."

"We're providing them with a house, with wages, a job. You don't see any of them running down the street hungry," he said

North Carolina officials estimate that 137,000 state residents worked as seasonal farmhands and 35,000 migrants passed through the state in 1979. The National Association of Farmworkers Organization ranks North Carolina behind Texas and Florida in total number of farmworkers.

Some workers are foreign refugees, the chronically unemployed or drifters who would have a worse life in the streets than working in farm labor camps, Bissett says. Others, he adds, deliberately have chosen the migrant lifestyle.

"You think of a migrant as a worthless individual, somebody who's been taken advantage of, who's never had an opportunity. But it's probably, been their livelihood for years. Their fathers did it, their grandfathers did it," Bissett said.

He admits that crew leaders sometimes have problems with workers who are lazy untrained or drunken and says absenteeism runs high.

Social programs have taken away some of the willingness to work, Bissett says. "Since they've been cutting those social programs, everybody has been there and ready to go to work," he said.

"It's a hard job and they're not working under ideal conditions. I wasn't happy (when I worked in the field); I was hot," he said.

Bissett said living conditions at the camps can get rough. "When you get 20 to 30 people in a house or two, you can pretty well wear it out in a season."

Dams Serve As Ticking 'Time Bomb'

By DAN LOHWASSER

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Thousands of Americans — many unknowingly — live in the flood zones of nearly 3,000 earthen dams the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said were unsafe and like "a time bomb ticking away."

The Corps' study will go to Congress this spring, but records obtained by UPI and interviews with experts show state and local governments face massive dam safety problems that could cost landowners millions of dollars to correct.

Many owners have already paid for expensive repairs or had their dams breached by the government.

But others have gone to court, challenging the findings of the $83 million Corps' inspection begun four years ago when a dam collapsed at Toccoa, Ga., killing 39 people.

The Corps only inspected dams with a high probability of loss of life if they failed. The survey identified 8,778 dams as probable threats to life, declared 2,917 dams "unsafe" and found 131 dams "in imminent danger of collapse" during a torrential rainfall.

Corrective action was left to the states, but one federal official said many dams were like "time bombs just ticking away."

Most of the 131 dams the Corps declared "emergency situations in imminent danger of collapse" under torrential rains were drained, breached or repaired in some way.

Corps' records also indicate repairs were completed on 133 other dams found to be "unsafe," but that figure may be higher because followup was not extensive.

In Missouri, which had 46 dams in need of emergency repairs, the Corps said 22 had not been corrected by the time its dam safety inspection program expired last November.

"We have had cooperation — some states have cooperated. Some didn't cooperate as well," said Ed Green of the Corps' Washington office.

Engineer Russ Adams of the Missouri dam safety program said corrective action has begun, but not been completed, on all the state's emergency unsafe dams.

Missouri had the most unsafe dams — 455 but Southern states were high on the list.

—Alabama had 93 unsafe dams — three in the emergency category.

—Florida had 11 unsafe dams.

—Georgia had 173 unsafe dams — seven in the emergency category.

—Mississippi had 36 unsafe dams — four in the emergency category.

—North Carolina had 120 unsafe dams — five classified as emergencies.

—South Carolina had 102 unsafe dams — eight in the emergency category.

—Tennessee had 80 unsafe dams — two classified as emergencies.

All Southern states except Alabama have dam safety laws that require owners to pay for engineering studies and corrective action if their dams are found unsafe.

The Corps of Engineers report noted that rapid urban development in dam flood zones has rendered some structures previously considered safe a potential danger.

A UPI survey found no emergency unsafe dams uncorrected in the South with the exception of the Spring Lake Dam near Clinton, Miss., where landowners have hired an engineer to correct the problem.

Work is proceeding on other less dangerous dams to varying degrees.

Georgia hopes to have all its dams in compliance within two years. Tennessee is currently pursuing only six cases. Mississippi officials report no repairs have been made to its eight unsafe dam.

Alabama's program is voluntary and the state sent owners a check list of recommended corrections, but only about half were mailed back.

"Anybody can impose any amount of water they want without having to follow any technical specifications for dam constructions," said Alabama Civil Defense Director Sam Stone.

The dam safety law is being amended in Florida. Georgia's Legislature is considering a bill to repeal its law or lessen the requirements, something Randall Bass of the Georgia dam safety program called "disgusting."

"They (legislators) have very short memories," he said.

Marion Stewart of the Mississippi Department of Natural Resources said the state's law "could stand some updating."

The Corps survey found that 78 percent of the unsafe dams had spillways that couldn't handle a 30-inch rainfall in six hours — a standard many dam owners feel is ridiculous.

Although such heavy rainfall is unusual, it happens.

A 3 1/2 inch rainfall in four hours in August 1969 caused flooding and mudslides in Roseland, Va., that killed 15 4 people.

A senior Corps official said most dams that failed did not come close to meeting the spillway requirement and many could not even handle a rainfall equal to area's heaviest recorded rainfall of the past 50 years.

Other common problems identified by dam inspectors were trees and foliage that weaken a dam, or seepage that causes a dam to become saturated and give way.

Another problem is the lack of emergency planning. The Corps is just now providing inundation maps to local civil preparedness officials, not aware of their own areas that could become death traps in torrential rains.

Roger A. Brown, who headed the inspection program in the Corps' South Atlantic Division, couldn't estimate how many people live below unsafe dams, but said it ranges from one to "thousands" depending on the structure.

Prison Plane Crashes Near N.C.-Virginia Border

FANCY GAP, Va. (AP) — A plane carrying two handcuffed prisoners, a guard and a pilot had not filed a flight plan in Winston-Salem, N.C., and was flying under visual flight rules when it smashed into a fog-shrouded mountain, killing all four aboard, authorities say.

The dense fog had cut visibility to 15 to 20 feet Friday afternoon when the single-engine Piper PA-32R aircraft hit 3,000-foot-high Sugar Loaf Ridge in Carroll County, three miles north of the North Carolina state line.

The flight had originated in Winston-Salem and was bound for Knoxville, Tenn., according to a spokeswoman for the owner of the plane, Air Security Inc. of Titusville, Fla.

The bodies of the four men were buried almost beyond recognition. The two prisoners were wearing handcuffs and were also handcuffed to the plane's flight officer, who was serving as a guard.

Nancy Gerard, a dispatcher for Air Security, identified the occupants of the plane as pilot James D. Bossen, 36, of Indianapolis, Ind.; flight officer Donald Brown, 45, of Titusville; Charles B. Parker, 28, of Panama City, Fla.; and Eric N. Pierce, 20, of Cleveland, Ohio. She said Parker and Pierce were both prisoners, although it could not be immediately determined on what charges they were being held.

Bill McCraw, captain of the Gana Rescue Squad, called it the "most hopeless task we've ever had to go out on." He said visibility was limited to 15 to 20 feet.

Several people near the crash site heard the plane go over shortly after 2 p.m. One resident, Larry Jones, reported seeing the plane fly out of the fog bank, circle and head back in, McCraw said.

"They heard two explosions," he said. "They knew he was going to crash. He was too low."

"From what I can determine, it was under full power when it hit," McCraw said. "It exploded, no question, part of the windshield was 100, 150 feet up the mountain."

A Federal Aviation Administration spokesman in Hickory, N.C., said the plane had not filed a flight plan and was operating under visual flight rules, which allow it to operate almost independently of radio control.

A pilot familiar with the area said planes operating under visual flight rules frequently bypass a particularly rugged portion of the Appalachian Mountains where the crash occurred and follow Interstate 77 north and then turn south toward Bristol, following Interstate 81 between mountain ridges.

McCraw said the wreckage was scattered over a 300-foot area near the top of the mountain. The fuselage was mostly intact, but the wings and tail section had been sheered off by the impact, he said.

McCraw said about a half-acre of wooded land was burned around the crash.

"It cut a swath of 20 feet wide (in the poplar trees)... He hit a solid rock," McCraw said. "One of the bodies was still burning when we got the bodies out," he said.

Sgt. M.A. Spivey of the Virginia State Police said three of the bodies were linked by handcuffs, and other cuffs were aboard the plane.

Ingram Backs Rate Reduction

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co. should appeal a court ruling that bars the company from lowering certain auto insurance rates, state Insurance Commissioner John Ingram says.

Superior Court Judge Thomas H. Lee of Durham last week upheld a North Carolina Reinsurance Facility rule preventing individual companies from offering lower rates to drivers with clean records who are assigned to the facility.

The facility is a pool in which companies share losses on drivers they do not want to insure voluntarily.

Nationwide said it would not appeal Lee's decision on a suit the company filed last month challenging the rule. Nationwide had begun offering 7 percent lower auto rates for new policies effective Jan. 15 and renewals beginning Feb. 15.

The ruling does not affect lower rates Nationwide or other companies have offered drivers whose policies are not assigned to the facility.

"Nationwide Insurance Co. is turning their backs on over 100,000 policyholders who are in the reinsurance facility without points," Ingram said in a news release.

A spokesman for Nationwide, the nation's largest auto insurer, said the company has 48,841 clean risk policies assigned to the facility.

"It is hard for people to understand why somebody in the facility with no points are being treated differently from someone outside the facility with no points," Ingram said in the release.

Bernard H. Parker, vice president and regional manager for the company, said Friday that he thought an appeal would make no difference in the outcome of the case.

Lawyer Says He Was County's 'Biggest Con Man'

ALBEMARLE, N.C. (AP) — Elton Hudson says he fell from a prominent role as lawyer and former Stanly County Republican Party chairman to become "perhaps the biggest con man in Stanly County."

Hudson, 44, was sentenced Friday to 12 to 15 years in prison after pleading guilty Monday to a total of 36 charges of embezzlement, forgery and false pretense.

Hudson was accused of embezzling more than $500,000, forging attorneys' names to prove deeds to property were clear and using the forged documents to obtain loans totaling up to $1 million from Stanly County financial institutions and forging endorsements on two checks totaling almost $100,000.

On July 13 — the day he was indicted — Hudson arrived in El Paso, Texas, with $500 in his pocket, hoping to leave his crimes behind him. He also left his wife, his daughter and his son.

Meanwhile, Stanly County residents who had bought property from Hudson began to learn that they owed thousands of dollars more on their property than they contracted for, didn't have clear title to it or had more than one mortgage.

Hudson had never been to El Paso, but he says he knew he could keep a low profile there and, if necessary, flee to Mexico. He soon spent most of his money and had to sleep at the Salvation Army.

Worse than his fall from wealth and respect was the fear, Hudson says.

"I had nothing to show who I was except my driver's license and Social Security card, and I sure couldn't use that. I wasn't about to tell them who I was. I couldn't tell them I was Elton Hudson."

To let his wife know he was alive, he wrote her, using an Asheville mailing service that forwarded his letters without revealing where they'd been mailed.

By the last week in July, Hudson's cash was nearly gone. He had gone three days without a meal.

On July 29, Hudson was offered a $200-a-week job as night manager at the Charcoaler Drive In Restaurant. Nobody asked to see any identification.

"I told them I was flat broke and I had to have a job," Hudson recalled. "I'd do anything — work any hours. I was hired right there and went to work that afternoon."

His boss, Robert Cox, recalls him as a "real nice fellow ... dependable, jovial, well-mannered."

With a steady income, Hudson rented a room with private bath at the downtown YMCA for $184 a month. He spent much of his spare time walking and reading — and considering his future.

"One alternative was to literally lose myself somewhere... That would require that I cut every possible string or attachment to North Carolina and to Albemarle, including my family and friends, and literally take on another identity.

"I knew that I could not ever do that and have any sort of satisfied life. No matter how insulated I was, there would always be the chance — the risk — that someday, somebody would recognize me or I would get tapped on the shoulder..."

By the first week in October, Hudson had decided to return to Albemarle and turn himself in. He took a month to prepare himself emotionally.

On Nov. 3, Hudson — weighing 212 pounds, about 50 less than when he left Albemarle — boarded a Greyhound bus to begin his five-day journey home. He knew he could step off the bus at any of the 20 stops on the way to Charlotte and go into hiding again.

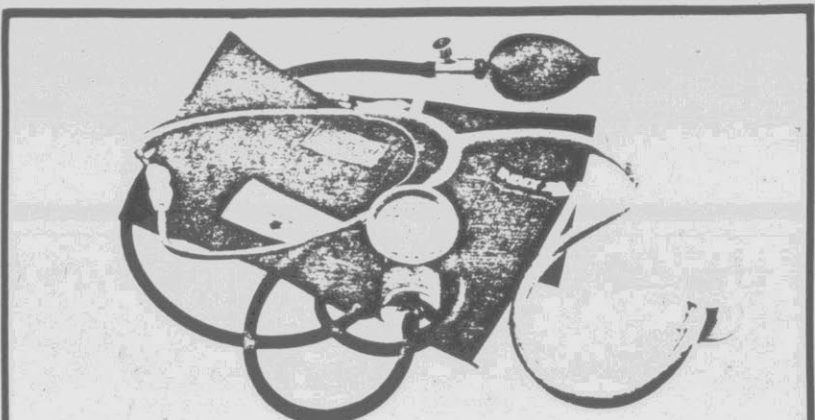

On Nov. 7, in Atlanta, Hudson telephoned his daughter, Margaret, and told her to notify Stanly County Sheriff Ralph McSwain that he would be arriving at the Greyhound station in Charlotte late that afternoon.

Hudson has been in the Stanly County Jail in Albemarle ever since.

Although he would not discuss specifics of the charges against him, he blamed his legal troubles on "stupid investments," poor management and his fear of failure. He insists that it was not greed.

Since the early 1970s, Hudson said, he had borrowed more than $1 million for such investments as restaurants at Yaupon Beach and Southport, ocean-front apartments at Long Beach, a mobile home park in Albemarle and a gift and garden shop in Norwood.

AP Newsfeatures

Q — How does one go about making plain wooden frames for pictures? Is it difficult to get the gilt finish professionals use?

A — Besides the wooden sides for the frame, a variety of which can be obtained at a lumber yard or home-supply center, a miter box and a back saw are necessary. The wooden sides, by the way, generally are mouldings. Practice with scrap wood until you get the hang of cutting corner joints with the help of the miter box and the back saw. You can get a gilded or gold effect with what is called gold bronze, which can be bought ready-mixed or in powdered form. The raw wood must be sanded, coated with diluted shellac and then bronzed. For a more antique appearance, follow with a burnt umber glaze. Gold leafing a picture frame is a more involved process. Your best bet is to buy one of the paperback instruction booklets or books in a store that deals in artists' materials.

Q — I want to paint our garage floor. Following some advice, I did get the oil and grease stains off the concrete, but there still are three large cracks I want to repair. Any advice?

A — Use a ready-mixed concrete and mortar repair that is available in cartridge form and may be applied with a standard caulking gun. Clean away all loose cement particles and debris, using a wire or stiff bristle brush. Remove all loose concrete chunks. Squeeze the repair material into the opening and press firmly into place with a wet pointing trowel or any similar tool. Smooth and don't use for at least eight hours and preferably more. However, if the cracks are in a place where the patches won't be run over with the auto or walked on, the garage can be used almost immediately.

Q — I would appreciate it if you could tell me whether there is any kind of cleaner on the market that could be used to wash or scrub down the aluminum siding on my house. The house is only seven years old and I don't want to paint because then I will have to paint again every few years.

A — When exposed aluminum surfaces need cleaning, anything from plain water to abrasives can be used, with many products in between. The trick is to use the mildest method that will do the job. Abrasives sometimes alter the finish. To minimize a change in the metal, always rub in the direction of the grain. Special care must be exercised in the case of matte-finished aluminum, since it has no grain. Use a bristle brush with all cleaners on patterned surfaces. Try the mildest treatment on a small area. If this does not produce satisfactory results, try the next method, and go as far down the list as required. These methods are given in the order of mildness, with the mildest first.

1. Try rubbing with plain water. Sometimes this is all that is necessary.
2. Mild soap or detergent. Rinse thoroughly.
3. Use a solvent cleaner, such as kerosene or turpentine. Be very careful in handling. Especially good for greasy deposits and heavy accumulations of grime. Rinse thoroughly.
4. Non-etching chemical cleaners can be used if you get the advice of a dealer who knows something about them. There is one type of cleaner for painted surfaces, one for unpainted.
5. Use a soft clean cloth to apply a thin coating of a wax-base cleaner. The label will tell you whether it is wax-based.
6. A clean soft rag or pad can be used to put on what is called an abrasive wax.
7. A cloth dampened with water helps to apply a mild abrasive cleaner. The surface then must be rinsed well and wiped dry.
8. Stainless steel wool pads used with liquid wax usually are effective when other methods have failed. Use a very fine grade of pad. Rinse. There are other heavier-duty cleaning methods, but these usually should be left to professionals.

The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," available by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column, but individual correspondence cannot be undertaken.

Seminar Set On Efficiency

A seminar entitled "Downsized Energy Efficient Homes ... Building Smaller and Smarter" will be held at the Ramada Inn Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. until 1:30 p.m.

The seminar, sponsored by the Office of Energy Conservation, the Greenville Utilities Commission and the Greenville Home Builders Association, will provide participants information on the trend toward downsizing in energy efficient residential homes, including the underlying reasons for downsizing.

Charles Horne, GUC director, will handle the introduction and welcome segment of the program.

Michael Walden, extension economist at North Carolina State University, will present information on the reasons for downsizing. Jim Burbank, general manager of Mason Homes, will tell why its parent company, the John Crosland Co. of Charlotte, created a new division last year to concentrate on building and selling smaller homes.

Chuck Graham, an architect with Mason Homes, will explain how to get the most use out of available space as square footage is reduced. How to overcome special problems associated with smaller, tighter homes, such as moisture control, will be presented by Claude Smith of the North Carolina Department of Insurance. Additionally Bruce Sauter, with Moore and Sauter of Greenville, will give an update on energy efficient measures that affect appraisal practices in new homes.

Following a buffet lunch, area builders will be presented awards for energy efficiency contributions. The award for building excellence will be presented to builders who have constructed three more homes to GUC's E-300 specifications. A community achievement award will be presented in behalf of all Greenville area E-300 builders.

Gopal Ahluwalia, director of statistics and surveys with the National Association of Home Builders, will be introduced by Merle Bowser, president of the Greenville association.

The seminar will be open to builders, realtors, mortgage lenders and appraisers, building trade associates and other interested persons. The registration fee of $10 includes a buffet lunch and program materials.

Individuals may be able to register for information by contacting Robbie Tugwell at 752-7166.

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — The cost of fuel is drawing many Americans closer to their fireplaces.

A record 33 million cords of hard and soft woods is expected to be consumed in 1982, according to Darryl Sherman, president of S & S Vending Machine Co., a marketer of seasonal vending equipment that specializes in selling bundled wood in the colder months and ice in warm days. Sales of wood-burning stoves also are expected to reach an all-time high of 1.6 million, he added.

In 1980, 30 million cords of firewood and 1.3 million wood stoves were sold nationally, he said.

Videocassette players may be something of a novelty at present, but industry forecasts indicate that in the foreseeable future such adjuncts to the television set may be almost as common as the basic set itself.

Now a new development in videotape services has appeared on the scene. Companies are offering to tape weddings and birthday parties as well as individual messages to loved ones for future showing at the appropriate time. One such new-style business is "Memories on Video," which was started recently by a New York woman.

Bobbi Van, a former advertising sales representative, the owner of the fledgling business, said that though unusual, it was not unique.

"There are half a dozen similar businesses in California," she noted. "The idea which led to the business came to me about five years ago when a friend who was only 26 died unexpectedly. I began to wish I had something more than a photograph to remember her."

After taking several courses in video production, she realized that videotapes could be the "living photo" she had imagined.

"I have taped messages to be shown to children, several love letters to spouses, couples about to marry who want to talk about their hopes for the future and elderly people reminiscing about the past," she said. A grandmother enjoyed the experience of recounting her younger days so much that she will soon make a second tape.

A family can have a group portrait made in their own home and then come back later and do another so that they create a library of significant events and moments, added Ms. Van. Some families have brought photos of ancestors to a taping session and one woman adjoined her session to the kitchen where she described how to make pastries according to her own grandmother's special recipe. No matter what the taping session will include, the process begins with an interview, usually at the client's home, where an audio tape is made of a conversation with Ms. Van. This is a sort of dress rehearsal of the actual event and serves to help the client gather his or her thoughts and become comfortable with the technique of talking for posterity.

Within a few days, the client and Ms. Van meet for an hour-long taping session at a production studio (the taping can also be done at home) along with a director and camera operator.

The client receives a videocassette recording compatible with an owned or contemplated video player after Ms. Van edits it. Cost for the service ranges from $750.

"Generally I keep a master tape on file, but if it is preferred, I will give them the master tape. The tapes are never shown to anyone without written permission from the client," said Ms. Van.

While personal tapes are the aspect of her business that she expects will grow most rapidly, Ms. Van says they are far from the only uses for videocassette players.

"I was approached by an attorney who wanted to tape a trial for his records." A number of companies across the country already offer a 'living will' service which involves five minutes of taping time and costs about $350, she added.

Videotape is also used as a tool in psychotherapy, according to Marjorie Dreyfus, a psychotherapist. "It is quite common in teaching settings and it is also used in family therapy to show families interactions they are not aware of," she said.

Individuals who own a videocassette recorder and a home video camera could do their own taping. However, pointed out Ms. Van, "it's an investment of several thousand dollars for the equipment, and they won't get professional quality reproduction."

PLAN YOUR HOME

The Blossomview

Office Looks Out On Covered Deck

By Jerry Bishop

Besides its five bedrooms, multiple activity areas, and emphasis on space, the Blossomview, a split foyer plan, includes a convenient home office that looks out on the covered deck.

Living areas are impressively large, and featured are a kitchen dining room/living room complex, a luxurious master bedroom, and a lower level kitchenette and family room. In fact, with its 21-ft. family room, two bedrooms, full bath, and storage area, the lower level is suitable for use as a separate apartment.

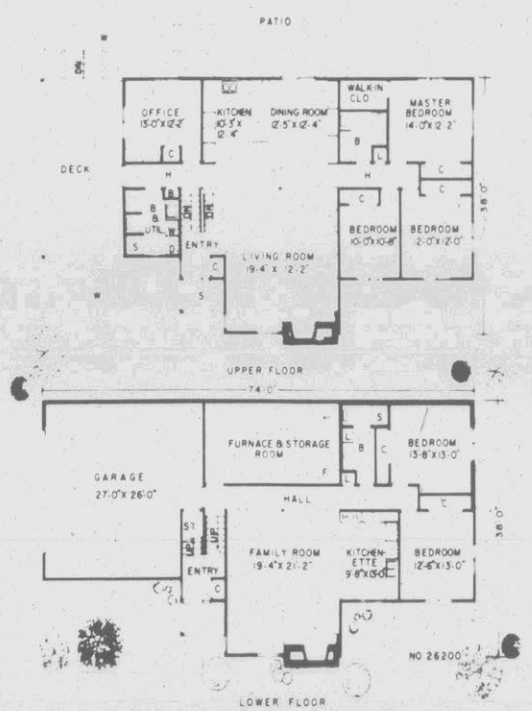

The striking exterior is heavily glassed and enhanced by a massive stone chimney and appealing covered deck. The interior carries this same sense of space, with high cathedral ceilings and fixed windows over living room and foyer.

Up from the foyer, the 19-ft. living room enjoys a woodburning fireplace and is open to the dining room and kitchen. The area joins the patio via sliding glass doors.

To the left, a hallway leads to the office, deck, and combination half bath/utility room. Bedrooms fill the right side of the plan and include a master bedroom with walk-in closet. A full bath and two more bedrooms complete this level.

Downstairs, the double garage opens to the family room area with a second woodburning fireplace. Two sizable bedrooms are convenient to the bath, and a 13-ft. kitchenette is off the family room. A storage room is included.

Whenever I feel nostalgic (remembering how good some things used to be) or grateful (remembering how bad some things used to be), I pick up and glance through a book called "Convenient Houses," written by architect Louis H. Gibson.

It was written in 1889. Lest you be misled by the first paragraph, that was before my time. But some of the references about houses have enough of an air of familiarity to stir up memories of when things were, to say the very least, different from now. And, in a few cases, very much the same.

Right at the start of the book, there is this interesting comment:

"Washing dishes is disagreeable work, but the architect can do his part toward making it easier. If we take a conglomerate mass of china, knives, forks and spoons, pots, pans and kettles and bring them together on one small kitchen table, which has a dishpan on one end and a wooden water bucket at the back, with a scarcity of everything to facilitate the progress of the work, we have a condition quite different from that wherein there is a roomy sink with a table on each side of it and plenty of hot and cold water above. An architect may plan a kitchen so that all of these conveniences are possible. He also may plan it so they are impossible."

And how about this? "At the present time, the natural and affected requirements of housekeeping make the life of many a woman one of the extremest drudgery and hardship. Her condition is almost that of a slave; and this at a time when she is surrounded by many of the elements of a higher civilization."

Vestibules have returned to popularity in this energy-conscious age. Here is what Gibson said about them nearly a century ago: "In the house plans that are given in this book, various arrangements of vestibules are shown. In a few instances, direct entrances into the hall or reception room are indicated, but such an entrance is not as desirable as where there is a vestibule."

On houses in general: "It costs no more to have a house beautiful than to have it ugly. Beauty, like convenience, is largely a matter of thoughtfulness and education. The only excuse for ugliness in house building is ignorance. The student of architecture has had a great deal done for him. And, in considering that which has to do with appearance, he has only to accept the advantages of the best architectural schools and offices. Without these, he cannot hope to succeed."

In Plan No. 1, the first of 50 houses discussed in the book, there are four rooms on the first floor and four on the second.

Q. The trunk of my white oak tree is 11 feet, two inches in circumference four feet above the ground. Could you give me the approximate age of this tree? (G.P., Monroe)

A. It would be difficult to guess the age of the white oak without boring the tree, exacting a core and counting the growth rings. An open grown tree with a large top would have a much larger trunk than the one which had grown in a crowded forest environment. White oaks have been recorded as old as 800 years. Assuming that the oak grew at an average of one fourth inch in diameter per year the tree in question would be over 110 years of age. It could be much older than this or possibly a few years less.

Q. When and how should I go about planting garlic? (T.C., Durham)

A. Treat garlic about the same as onions. Separate the cloves and plant about one-and-one-half to two inches deep in very early spring.

Q. I have a large dogwood which was damaged by a careless motorist. How can I determine the value of the tree? (W.G., Southern Pines)

A. The real dollar value of the dogwood is hard to qualify, especially since we value the tree for the aesthetics. To recover damages by means of an insurance claim, the first step is consultation with the insurance agent to determine if the damage is covered. If covered, an evaluation by consulting arborists, foresters, landscape architects or real estate appraisers is usually required to verify to extent of the loss. Also in most damage situations successful recovery of loss will depend on how well the before and after value of the tree can be substantiated. There is a formula which was developed by the International Society of Arboriculture and is approved by the Council of Landscape Appraisers. The four factors to consider in determining the dollar value of landscape trees are (1) species, (2) size, (3) condition, and (4) location. After using this formula one might estimate the value of a large tree to be worth several thousand dollars. Unfortunately in North Carolina the maximum allowable insurance claim is $200 per damaged plant.

Unit Trains For Mideast

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Almost 1,200 Fort Bragg soldiers are completing training in Middle Eastern weapons and lifestyle before leaving to join a multinational peacekeeping force in the Sinai Desert.

About 800 infantrymen from the 82nd Airborne Division will spend 179 days monitoring the withdrawal of Israeli forces from territory captured from Egypt in the last war between the two nations. The soldiers are expected to leave for the Sinai in mid-March.

They will be the United States' contingent in the Multinational Peacekeeping Force and Observers established under terms of the Egypt-Israel peace treaty and the Camp David accords.

The Americans will patrol the largest sector of the occupied territory — a 130-mile strip extending south from Elath to Sharm el Sheik on the Gulf of Aqaba. Headquarters for the troops will be at Sharm el Sheik.

The mission, which is expected to get underway in mid-April, is unique because most peacekeeping missions have been under the auspices of the United Nations.

Another 356 soldiers from the 1st Corps Support Command of the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg will go to the Sinai Desert to keep soldiers from the 82nd clothed, fed, supplied with equipment and to provide administrative and logistic help.

Maj. James M. Carter Jr., public affairs officer for the support command, said the troops probably will arrive in the Sinai a few weeks before the main force.

The major training right now is designed to get them familiar with the mission and the type of duty they'll perform," said Maj. Jake Dye, public affairs spokesman for the 82nd.

"We don't anticipate involving ourselves in any direct combat," he said. "Our role is strictly to observe, to keep peace. The soldiers are generally proficient in these skills already."

The biggest problem, Dye said, is becoming familiar with Egyptian and Israeli equipment.

"We have to know all the types of vehicles that would be used by either side and vehicles used by other nations taking part," Dye said.

He said the Army has learned many things from Operation Bright Star, a desert training exercise last year in the Mideast. Dye said the Fort Bragg soldiers will be using desert camouflage equipment from Bright Star.

Dye said military leaders will receive some language training but noted it would be difficult to train all the soldiers participating. He said all the soldiers will get a general lesson about the history and lifestyle of the area.

"A lot of that will come in-country, but we will do as much as we can ahead of time," he said.

Other training involves land navigation, driver training, mountain survival and studies about rodents and snakes in the area.

Capt. William Maddox, public affairs officer at Fort Bragg, said the 800 men were ideally suited for the mission.

"The 82nd is the premier U.S. Army unit," he said. Noting that the soldiers are part of a light infantry unit, he said they are well suited to observation duties and they are very mobile.

Hunt Says Will Attempt To Halt Offshore Leases

Gov. James B. Hunt Jr. said Saturday he will file suit if necessary to block the federal government from renewing plans to lease oil exploration rights to six tracts in the Atlantic Ocean near Cape Lookout.

"If we have to go to court to block the lease of these tracts, we will do it," Hunt said. "The state of North Carolina remains opposed to the offering of those six tracts for any oil and gas exploration."

The six tracts were originally offered last year, but later withdrawn after the state filed suit.

In a related development, the Conservation Council of North Carolina blasted Interior Secretary James Watt for reoffering the six tracts for exploration.

"I'm appalled by Watt's disregard for North Carolina's coast and progress," said Bill Holman, a spokesman for the club.

A federal study has indicated a major oil spill from any of the six tracts, located as close as 13 miles from Cape Lookout, would have a 25 percent chance of reaching North Carolina beaches and harming the state's seafood industry.

The Interior Department originally offered the six tracts last July, but the state went to federal court to challenge the proposal.

The tracts were withdrawn after no bids were received for them. Leases were sold for 43 other tracts off the North Carolina coast.

Hunt said he has learned the six sections off Cape Lookout are being reoffered in an auction tentatively scheduled for June.

"The oil industry did not nominate or bid on these tracts, and I know of no reason why they should be offered for lease again," the governor said.

The Interior Department's withdrawal of the six tracts was part of a settlement that also resulted in withdrawal of the state's lawsuit.

ECU Women Face 6th-Ranked NCSU Today

A Staff Report

Last year, East Carolina's Lady Pirates rode a nine-game winning streak into the Top Twenty of women's basketball. That streak was capped with an upset victory over nationally-ranked N.C. State, snapping the Lady Wolfpack's five-year 65-game winning streak.

This afternoon, at 3 p.m., the Lady Pirates have a chance to do the same thing as they host the Lady Wolfpack in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates come into the game riding an eight-game winning streak and a 12-7 overall record. State brings in a 18-2 record and the number six spot in the Associated Press poll. An upset by the Lady Pirates could propel them back into the national spotlight for the second straight year.

The meeting between the two will be the second this season. State captured a 62-56 win in the first game between the two teams in Raleigh.

East Carolina's upset hopes may lie on the health of 6-0 junior center Mary Denkler. The state's leading Division I scorer, with a 19.9 mark, suffered a sprained ankle Wednesday night in the Lady Pirates' 76-63 victory over East Tennessee State. Coach Cathy Andruzzi said that Denkler would be rested on Thursday and Friday and hopefully would be ready for the game today.

"I don't think Mary will be in full gear, but like a number of others, she'll probably play hurt," Andruzzi said. "A lot depends on how she toughs it out. Of course, her availability will affect our strategy."

The Lady Pirates will also have to overcome State's great height advantage. The Wolfpack roster includes two starters over six feet tall, and a total of five over that height.

State comes into the game following a 76-61 victory over Clemson on Wednesday night. They are led in scoring by 5-11 senior forward Ginger Rouse, hitting 14.4 points a game. Angie Armstrong, a 5-5 junior guard is next with a 10.4 average.

Other expected starters include 6-0 sophomore forward Claudia Kreicker, hitting 8.6 points a game; 6-3 junior center Paula Nicholson, 7.9; and 5-8 senior guard Connie Rogers, 8.2.

Nicholson is the leading rebounder with a 5.8 average, while Kreicker is pulling down 4.8 per game.

While Denkler is the overall leader in scoring for the Pirates, it has been the scoring of Sam Jones, over 20 points a game over the eight-game streak, that has really powered the Pirates along. Jones has upped her average to 16.4 per game, while Lillian Barnes is hitting at a 9.2 average.

"We played State in the second game of the season and lost 56-62. I know we've improved a great deal, but so has State," Andruzzi said.

"It's going to be interesting to say the least. I feel it will be a very competitive game in every aspect. The game will be determined by shooting percentage and the foul situation, unless I miss my guess. It's going to be a very tough contest.

"This is a very important game for us — but every game is. They're ranked and if we do well, it could help us get attention for post-season NCAA play," she added. "We're taking the game seriously, but we're approaching it just like any other game."

Andruzzi said she felt that the Lady Pirates had to be "on" offensively, and played outstanding defense if they expect to win.

East Carolina has another tough chore ahead, as its next opponent is number three ranked Old Dominion, that game set in Norfolk, Va., on Thursday.

Inflation Hits Stock Car Racing

By United Press International

When NASCAR Grand National driver Dave Marcis left for Daytona International Speedway, the Avery's Creek, N.C., driver knew he must win at least $15,000 during Speed Weeks to break even.

"The 40 cars in the race (Daytona 500) need to come away from there with a minimum of $15,000 to $20,000 to break even," said the 40-year-old Marcis, who fields his own team. "That is our premiere event and it should be $20,000. It takes that to operate anymore."

Marcis' motel bill for 12 nights will be about $5,460. His team will use seven rooms, each costing $65 a day. His gasoline bill for his truck and trailer, which is overshadowed in the garage area by the $100,000 to $200,000 rigs, will run about $202 roundtrip. Marcis said he must also consider $15 a day for food for each person as well as their salaries, "about $2,500 for that length of time."

"I'm taking seven full-time people and additional people are coming on the 10th, so that's about 15 or 16 people all total," Marcis said.

Some drivers and car owners on the elite circuit began criticizing NASCAR and Grand National track promoters last fall for the purses, saying they had not kept up with inflation and if not increased, several teams would leave the sport. Some said each track should pay $1,000 a mile. Jim Hunter, NASCAR's public relations director, said all track operators were asked to raise their purses.

"The track operators responded and most upped their purses in the neighborhood of 7 to 10 percent," Hunter said.

Seven-time Grand National champion Richard Petty said he realizes NASCAR is working to bring new sponsors to the sport, but, "I feel like the tracks per se are not paying their fair share (from ticket sales)."

"In fact, NASCAR is not demanding them to do it, and until NASCAR says you must pay $800 a mile or $1,000 a mile, they are not going to do it. They'll hustle up the banks and companies to sponsor a race and make up the difference," Petty said.

The purse for this year's Daytona 500 is $942,000, which Hunter said could increase before the Feb. 14 date. The winner will receive a minimum of $96,625. Of the winner's total, $28,825 is paid by the speedway and $55,750 by television.

Twenty years ago the purse for the same race was $106,000 and the winner, the late Glenn "Fireball" Roberts, received slightly more than $21,150, similar to some of the purses still paid today on the shorter tracks.

But, the money is not as lucrative for those finishing out of the top 20. The last place finisher in the Daytona 500 will receive only $1,550, a significant drop from the winner. Likewise, in the two 125-mile qualifying races prior to the main race, the driver finishing last will earn only $400, while the winner will receive $18,000.

Petty, 44, said a few tracks paid purses that allowed car owners to meet expenses when he began his career in 1958.

"But then a dollar was a dollar and now a dollar is worth 25 cents," he said.

"The goals have been set for this year, but next year the purses should be tied into inflation," said Petty. "If inflation is 10 percent, the purses should automatically be raised 10 percent. If it's 5 percent, raise them 5 percent."

Petty said in addition to inflation, purses should be tied to the amount of growth NASCAR and the promoters want for the sport.

"I know that's a tough way to do it, but if everyone wants the sport to grow that's the way it should go," he said.

Petty and his son Kyle, 21, both have lifetime contracts with STP Corp. and will compete in all 30 races this season. Petty said it costs between $50,000 and $60,000 to build a top car and he figures expenses of $25,000 to $30,000 for the car each time it leaves Petty Enterprises Inc. in Level Cross, N.C.

"Just the parts for an engine are $9,000. A complete engine costs $13,000 to $15,000," Petty said.

Marcis said he could remember people buying a complete race car for $3,000, "now you don't even buy a suspension for that."

Petty said his team's expenses are considered on a monthly and yearly basis, but for independents like Marcis it's a race-to-race budget.

Terps Outmuscle Devils, 77-60

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Maryland outmuscled Duke 77-60 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game, with senior Charles Pittman leading the physical Terps.

"Pittman had his best game since he has been here," Maryland Coach Lefty Driesell said of the junior college transfer. "He dominated the game inside."

Pittman sank eight of 12 shots while scoring 22 points, one off his career high, and grabbed 14 rebounds, two shy of his best effort at Maryland.

Pittman and freshman Adrian Branch combined for 26 second-half points, while Herman Veal had 10 rebounds and Dutch Morley contributed 10 assists.

"Veal and Pittman thrive in a physical game," said Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski, "and it was a physical game. The officiating was fine, it was just that type of ballgame."

"They were able to dictate because they were in the lead," Krzyzewski said. "They were able to exploit our weakness, and never let us back into it."

Duke, which had won four of its last five games by margins of six points or less, enjoyed its only lead at 20-18.

"I don't want to get too excited right now," said Driesell, "but hopefully we are coming together as a team."

The triumph by the Terps, who beat the Blue Devils by four points in a previous game, gave Maryland a 13-7 record, including 4-5 in the ACC. Duke is now 8-11, with a 3-6 league mark.

Deacons Roll Past Georgia Tech

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wake Forest beat Georgia Tech at its own game Saturday when the Yellow Jackets were unable to play that game any more.

Coach Carl Tacy's 13th-ranked Demon Deacons got 15 points each from forwards John Toms and Guy Morgan to post as they posted a 53-38 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over a deliberate Georgia Tech.

"It's tough to play a slowdown," Tacy said, after his Deacons had run their record to 15-5, 5-3 in the ACC. "We chose to play their game and beat them at it rather than taking quick shots."

Yellow Jacket coach Bobby Cremins agreed, especially after seeing his own club's inability to maintain its attack.

"We tried to remain patient and run our offense, but at times today, we couldn't because of their aggressive defense," Cremins said. "I felt we were in the game until the six-minute or so mark, but we made costly turnovers which took us out of it."

Tacy said the style, which has become more prevalent this year, is not an easy one to play.

"The style of game being played all over today makes it very difficult and frustrating," Tacy said. "You work them a very long time on the defensive end of the game and if you don't take advantage of it, you're back where you started from."

knew that his club had to play that style to compete with the Demon Deacons.

"To beat Wake Forest, we have to play a perfect game," Cremins said. "We know we can compete with a lot of teams, but only if we play smart and without a lot of turnovers."

Wake Forest held a 23-19 halftime lead. Then Toms, a 6-foot-6 sophomore, scored eight of his 11 second-half points to spark a 19-9 spurt by the Demon Deacon that gave Wake Forest a 42-28 lead with 9:02 remaining.

Georgia Tech, with Brook Steppe leading the way, narrowed Wake Forest's lead to 44-37 with 5:53 remaining, but could not prevent its 13th loss in 19 starts.

Wake Forest recorded its 15th victory in 20 starts and raised its ACC record to 5-3.

Morgan had scored eight points in the first half, including a free throw with 3:43 remaining which gave him his 1,000th career point.

Steppe scored 20 points, 10 in each half and was the only Yellow Jacket to score in double figures. Steppe also had a game-leading eight rebounds as Georgia Tech out rebounded Wake Forest 24-20.

Georgia Tech, which fell to 2-9 in league play, stayed within three points of Wake Forest throughout most of the first half. The Yellow Jackets blew four opportunities to get closer by committing turnovers.

Stadler Up By 2 At Crosby

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A solid two-stroke lead in Saturday's third round of the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am failed to impress Craig Stadler.

"It all comes down to what the other guys do tomorrow," the chunky leader said after he'd come swarming out of the pack with a brilliant no-bogey, 8-under-par 64.

"It all comes down to Sunday play," Stadler said.

And, quite obviously, he'll be keeping an eye on Jack Nicklaus, the man who uncorked a closing 64 last week to come within a single stroke in San Diego.

"Who knows? If I play a pretty good round, I'm in good position," said Nicklaus, whose chance to make a decisive move was foiled by a balky putter. He's now four strokes back.

"If I play a pretty good round of golf, I'm in good position. It doesn't matter what position you're in if you play a poor round of golf."

Stadler, seeking a second early-season victory, took command of this 41st renewal of the Crosby clam bake with the best round of the tournament.

Stadler, a winner in the Tucson Open that kicked off the 1982 American tour, used the best round of the tournament to compile a 54-hole total of 206, 10 shots under par after one round over each of three Monterey Peninsula courses.

This one was at Cypress Point and represented a tournament record for that scenic, 6,506-yard layout.

"It could have been a little better, and it couldn't have been a helluva lot worse," said Stadler, the man called "the walrus" by his fellow tourists.

"The bulk of the round was the fifth, sixth and seventh, where I went birdie, eagle, birdie. Other than that, just a good, solid round. I didn't make a bogey, really didn't have a chance to make a bogey."

Jim Simons, with a 71 at tough Spyglass Hill, held second at 208, followed by former amateur champion Hal Sutton, at 209 after a par-72 at Spyglass Hill.

Jack Nicklaus put himself in position to make a run at it, got to within a single stroke of the top spot with a birdie-birdie start, and then stopped.

"From then on, I just didn't make anything," said Nicklaus, who played with former President Gerald Ford as his amateur partner before an enormous gallery that took advantage of brilliant sunshine and warm temperatures at Pebble Beach.

He finished with a 71 and was tied at 210 — four strokes back — with Bobby Wadkins, who had a 71 at Cypress Point.

"I had quite a few chances and should have made something. But I just didn't make anything," said Nicklaus, a one-stroke runner-up last week in San Diego.

"I'm only four back. And there's only a couple of guys in front of me. If I can play a good round tomorrow, it's as much my tournament as it is anybody's else."

The group at 211 included Joe Inman, Scott Simpson and veteran Dave Stockton. Inman and Simpson each had a 69 at Spyglass Hill and Stockton shot 70 at Pebble Beach.

George Burns, the second-round leader, took a fat 77 at Spyglass and dropped back to 213.

Stadler, currently the year's leading money-winner at $61,596, shrugged off his spectacular effort that saw him play the par-5 holes five under.

"It was just like it's been all year," he said. "On days when I make the putts, I shoot a good round. On days when I don't make the putts, I shoot 72 or 73."

He scored from about eight feet on the second hole, a par-5, needed only a 6-footer on the fifth, another long hole, and ripped a 3-wood shot to 10 feet and made the eagle putt on the next hole.

He also birdied the sixth, was 5-under par for seven holes and then brought it home in a solid 32.

"He's a good, strong player," Nicklaus analyzed. "He's a very streaky golfer and can really run when it when he gets it going. He's usually either way up or way down."

Nicklaus, himself, started way up, but finished on a much lower key.

He chipped in from about 30 feet for a birdie on the opening hole, chipped to 18 inches for birdie on the second, and then saw his putter go sour.

He didn't make anything the rest of the day, two-putting for par 15 times and taking a bogey on the 12th, where he missed the green.

"I was hitting good putts, but nothing went in," he said.

Vikings Down Panthers

BETHEL — Keith Gatlin scored 21 points and Sammy Tyson added 12 to lead D.H. Conley to a 51-40 win over North Pitt Saturday evening in a nonconference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, North Pitt stunned D.H. Conley, 46-37.

In the boys' game, D.H. Conley inched out to a 13-12 lead at the end of the first quarter. The second quarter the Vikings battled nearly even before DHC took a 24-22 lead at the half.

Conley continued to inch its lead up in the third period, which ended with the Vikings up, 36-32. Then, in the final eight minutes, Conley turned it on and outscored the Panthers, 15 to 8, to win by 11.

North Pitt, now 14-6 overall, was led by reserve Charles Harris, who scored 12 points. D.H. Conley is now 12-8 overall.

North Pitt did not shoot a free throw the entire game. D.H. Conley hit 11 of 16 from the foul line.

In the girls' game, D.H. Conley led, 7-3, at the end of the first period. The Panthers, however, edged back to within 17-15 at the half and then took the lead with a 19-11 third quarter advantage.

North Pitt led at the end of the third period, 34-28, and then outscored the Valkyries, 12-9, in the final eight minutes for the win.

D.H. Conley, which has now lost two straight and drops to 16-4 overall, did not have anyone in double figures.

North Pitt, now 10-8 overall, was led by Gladys Roberson and Sherri Bradley, both of whom scored 12 points. Sudi Sharpe added 11 points for North Pitt.

D.H. Conley plays host to West Craven Tuesday night in a key Coastal Conference battle. North Pitt travels to Southwest Edgecombe in an equally important Eastern Carolina Conference game.

W. Virginia Wins 18th Straight

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nationally ranked West Virginia University, despite going scoreless from the floor in the final 3:19, held on for its 18th straight victory Saturday, edging Eastern Eight Conference rival George Washington 74-71.

The 18th-ranked Mountaineers, ahead 66-60, scored their final eight points by converting 8 of 11 from the foul line.

Guard Greg Jones, who scored 12 points for the game, made five of six free throws in the Mountaineers' successful stretch run.

For the game, the Mountaineers shot 28 of 37 from the foul line. George Washington converted 17 of 23 from the line in a game that saw 57 personal fouls and four players foul out.

Tony Warshaw led the Mountaineers with 18 points. Russell Todd had 14.

The Colonials, riding the outside shooting of guards Mike Brey and Dave Hobel, trailed by three, 36-33 at the half.

In the second half, the Colonials went to their inside game and center Mike Brown. Brown scored 24 points, all but two in the second half.

Two foul shots by Brown tied the game for the last time at 60-60 with 6:30 remaining. The Mountaineers, moving to their stall offense, than ran off seven straight points to open the biggest lead of the game for either team, 67-60, with 2:28 to go.

W. Carolina . . . . . 68

ASU . . . . . 63

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Clutch free throw shooting by Greg Dennis and Kevin Young late in the second half shut down an Appalachian State rally and gave Western Carolina a 68-63 Southern Conference basketball victory over the Mountaineers Saturday night.

Dennis, who along with guard Ronnie Carr scored 19 points, hit six straight free throws, while Young hit all four of his attempts to lead Western Carolina from a 51-50 advantage to a nine-point cushion with 53 seconds left.

The Catamounts, third best free throw shooting team in the country, hit 13 consecutive free throws in the final six minutes and connected on 20 of 21 attempts. The near-perfect performance offset a 58 percent spree from the field by Appalachian State.

Kelvin McMillian hit 12 points in the second half to lead the Mountaineers from a 13-point intermission deficit. He finished with 14 points, as did center Charles Payton.

Kentucky . . . . . 77

Tennessee . . . . . 67

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Jim Master and reserve Dickie Beal helped Kentucky hold off a frantic Tennessee rally in the second half and lead the ninth-ranked Wildcats to a 77-67 Southeastern Conference basketball victory Saturday night over the Volunteers.

The Wildcats led by 12 points at the half, 43-31, but the 16th-ranked Volunteers forged a 47-47 tie with 12 minutes to play before Beal and Master went to work.

After a 49-49 tie, Master hit a layup and Beal followed with a fast-break basket that started the Wildcats on a seven-point run that sewed up the victory.

The run started with 11:05 left and ended on a three-point play by Charles Hurt with 9:40 to play and Kentucky leading 56-49.

The Volunteers twice closed to within four points, the second time on a basket by Dale Ellis that made it 58-54 at the 7:40 mark. But Beal scored two

Indiana Stuns Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana guard Jim Thomas hit two pressure free throws with nine seconds left Saturday as the Hoosiers edged sixth-ranked Minnesota 58-55 in a Big Ten basketball game.

The victory ended a two-game losing streak for Indiana, which improved to 12-7 overall and 6-4 in the Big Ten. Minnesota fell to 15-4 and 7-3.

Indiana's 7-foot-2 center Uwe Blab more than nullified the Gophers' 7-3 center Randy Brewer. Blab held Brewer to nine points, while scoring 18 points and grabbing eight rebounds before fouling out with 5:55 left.

Indiana fell behind 37-29 at the half and the Gophers scored the first two points of the second half for a 10-point lead. But Indiana came back with 10 straight points to tie it up.

Minnesota jumped back in the lead 44-39, but Indiana came back to outscore the Gophers 10-1 and take a 49-45 lead. Minnesota got back into it and the lead sea-sawed in the final minutes.

With 1:10 left, Indiana held a 55-51 lead. But Minnesota pulled to within 56-55 with 15 seconds remaining, setting up Thomas' free throws which put the game out of reach.

Thomas finished with 16 points.

easy baskets on length-of-the-court drives to put Kentucky back up by eight, 62-54, with 5:58 left.

Master topped the Wildcats, now 15-5 and 8-4 in the conference, with 15 points, including five from the foul line in the final 1:10. Mel Turpin had 14, and Dirk Minniefield and Derrick Hord each had 13 as Kentucky had six players in double figures. Beal finished with 10, all but four in the second half.

Ellis scored 16 of his total 18 points in the second half for Tennessee, 14-6 and 9-3 in the SEC. Michael Brooks added 14.

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — The one-two punch of Leonard Mitchell and Howard Carter gave Louisiana State its 12th victory of the season as the Tigers whipped Mississippi State 57-43 in college basketball on Saturday.

Mitchell, a 6-foot-7 sophomore, hit six of nine field goals and added five free throws for non-conference college basketball action.

The Seahawks, now 11-10, fell behind early in the battle of eastern North Carolina independents and trailed 35-25 at intermission. Campbell stretched the lead to 50-36 with 12:35 left. At that point, UNCW started its rally.

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Shawn Williams and Randy McMillan scored all the points in a 22-6 outburst late in the second half Saturday night as UNC-Wilmington rallied from a 14-point deficit to take a 69-63 victory over Campbell in Mississippi State's Cal Wells scored 14 points and grabbed 15 rebounds before fouling out with two minutes left in the contest. Jeff Malone, who entered the game as the Bulldogs leading scorer with a 19-point average, scored 12 points before fouling out midway through the second half.

Butch Pierre scored 10 for the Bulldogs, who are now 2-10 in the SEC and 6-14 overall.

LSU held a 26-16 lead at the half and seemed to have the game in hand. When Malone fouled out LSU led 35-26. The Bulldogs closed to within six points when Wells hit a 12-foot shot to make the score 41-35, but the Tigers were able to put the game out of reach with Carter and Mitchell dominating the inside.

LSU's longest lead was 16 points, which the Bulldogs were only able to cut to 14 by the final buzzer.

55-Meter World Mark Broken

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Stanley Floyd broke his own world record in the 55-meter dash Saturday night, sprinting the distance in 6.10 seconds in a preliminary heat at the 42nd annual Knights of Columbus track meet.

Floyd's old mark of 6.15 seconds was set in the same meet last year.

A world best also was set in a new event at the meet as Jim Heiring of Athletic Attic walked one mile in 5 minutes, 47.39 seconds. That broke the old mark of 5:53.2 set by Remia Salomono in Turku, Finland, in 1977.

Floyd, of the University of Houston, won the finals in 6.14 seconds, edging Bill Collins and Steve Riddick, both of the Philadelphia Pioneers Track Club.

The record fell despite a nagging back injury that forced Floyd to withdraw from a meet in Dallas last week.

"I had injured the back before I got to Dallas. I thought the best thing was to pull out and not aggravate it," Floyd said.

He said he trained only two days this week to rest his back.

"I still feel a little pain sitting here," he said after the race Saturday.

No. 1-ranked hurdler Renaldo Nehemiah won the mens' high hurdles in 6.94, five-tenths of a second off the world record.

Peter Lemashon of the University of Texas at El Paso won the 800 meters in 1:51.12, and Delisa Walton of the University of Tennessee took the women's 400 meters in 54.58.

Gators Slip Past Auburn, 69-66

Florida Ends 14-Game Losing Streak

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (P) — Sophomore forward Vernon Delancy scored 17 points and freshman guard Rob Harden pumped in 16 Saturday as Florida snapped a 14-game losing streak with a 69-66 Southeastern Conference basketball triumph over Auburn.

The triumph boosted the victory-starved Gators record to 5-15 overall and 2-10 in the SEC. Auburn, which beat Florida 80-60 on Jan. 9, dropped to 11-9 overall and 5-7 in conference play.

Florida, which hadn't won since Dec. 12 when it beat Florida State in Jacksonville, roared to an early lead and extended it to 33-25 by halftime. Auburn, which was coming off an 83-81 overtime upset of Kentucky, couldn't move any closer than five points in the second half until forward Frank Poindexter hit a jump shot with four seconds left.

Harden, who reclaimed a starting position after four relief appearances, connected for 10 first-half points and Ronnie Williams, the SEC's second-leading scorer, scored 10 of his 14 points before intermission.

Odell Mosteller and Charles Barkley scored 16 points apiece to pace Auburn. Darrell Lockhart added 14 for the Tigers.

Many in the O'Connell Center crowd of 6,553 ran onto the floor after the school record losing streak came to an end.

"Determination was the key to this win. I didn't tell my players to be loose and cool. I just wanted them to concentrate," said Florida Coach Norm Sloan. "I'm going to go home and enjoy this one. I don't know who we play next and I don't care."

Barkley, who hauled down a game-high 17 rebounds, said, "Nobody in the league wanted to be the team they snapped their streak against. We just didn't play well enough to stop it from happening."

Delancy, who suffered a broken hand in the Dec. 12 game against Florida State, agreed with Sloan that determination was the key.

"We wanted to win every one of them," Delancy said of the losing streak. "But we wanted this one a little more."

Cavaliers Crush Virginia Tech

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Ralph Sampson scored 25 points, pulled down 21 rebounds and blocked seven shots Saturday night as the 7-foot-4 All-American led Virginia's third-ranked Cavaliers to a surprisingly easy 80-66 basketball romp over Virginia Tech's Hokies.

Freshman Tim Mullen added 13 points, freshman Jimmy Miller 12 and sophomore Othell Wilson 10 for the Cavaliers, who won their 10th straight game and upped their overall record to 22-1.

Virginia Tech, losing to Virginia for the seventh straight time, fell to 15-5 on the season. Mickey Hardy led the Hokies with 20 points with Dale Solomon contributing 16 and Jeff Schneider 12.

straight points in the final two minutes to make the final score more respectable.

Sampson's 21 rebounds, one shy of his career high, boosted him over 1,000 (1,011) for his career. In three games against Virginia Tech, Sampson has grabbed 61 rebounds and scored 58 points.

Sampson, 10 of 13 from the floor, also moved past Barry Parkhill into the No. 5 spot on the Virginia career scoring list. He now has 1,460 points.

winning streak. Freshman Dwayne Johnson scored 14 and Marc Marotta 12 for Marquette, 15-7.

DePaul trailed by three points at halftime, but grabbed a 49-46 lead, its largest to that point, with 11:51 to play when Dillard sank two 20-footers in succession.

Marotta countered with a driving layup for Marquette, but the Blue Demons began asserting control of both backboards and intercepting passes as Marquette tried to force the ball inside DePaul's zone. The Demons ran off seven consecutive points to lead the regionally-televised contest 56-48 with seven minutes left.

Johnson retaliated with four baskets from the baseline for the Warriors, who trailed 60-56 with 3:50 left. Cummings sank six consecutive free throws and DePaul led 66-56 with 2:52 left.

only undefeated teams in ACC play, but the Terrapins hold a half-game lead on the Wolfpack.

After the Terrapins took a 41-35 halftime lead, the Tar Heels outscored them 15-6 at the beginning of the second half to claim a 50-47 lead with 13:33 remaining.

But North Carolina, missing two starters who were injured in the first half, relinquished the lead. After Maryland took a 57-55 edge at the 9:37 mark, the Terrapins outscored the Tar Heels 13-2 in the next three minutes to gain control.

Junior guard Debbie Lytle led Maryland with 18 points and seven rebounds. Jasmina Perazic had 17 points. Richardson and Myra Waters each had 16 and McAliley added 11.

Sophomore center Tresa Brown led all scorers with 27 points. She also grabbed nine rebounds. Kathy Crawford chipped in 17 points and Henrietta Walls scored 14.

Maryland is now 18-3, 5-0 in the ACC. North Carolina dropped to 13-8 and 5-1.

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Paul Pressey and Greg Stewart combined for 34 points Saturday night to lead No. 11 Tulsa to an 80-75 come-from-behind win over Wichita State in Missouri Valley basketball.

The victory kept Tulsa in first place in the conference race with an 8-2 record. The Golden Hurricane is 16-3 overall.

Wichita State, led by Antoine Carr with a career-high 35 points, dropped to 6-4 in the conference and 16-6 in all games.

Tulsa trailed 67-61 with 6:31 left in the game before Pressey scored six of his 21 points during a 13-2 rampage that gave the Golden Hurricane a 74-69 advantage with 1:49 showing.

Stewart, who finished with 13 points, hit two free throws during the spree.

Three times Wichita State closed the gap to three points down the stretch, twice on layups by Aubrey Sherrod, but each time Tulsa responded by hitting free throws. Pressey dropped in four during the final moments, while Mike Anderson had two.

Foster, Mets Near Signing

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Mets Saturday appeared to be closing in on the acquisition of slugger George Foster from the Cincinnati Reds following contract negotiations in Florida between the Mets and Foster's agent, Tom Reich.

Frank Cashen, the Mets' general manager, said Saturday the two parties reached "a general meeting of the minds." In the discussions which took place in Tampa, Cashen added he was optimistic that the deal to bring the outfielder to New York could be completed.

The Mets and Cincinnati announced Thursday they had reached a trade in principle to send Foster, who is eligible to become a free agent after next season, to New York for three undisciplined players. The trade hinges upon the Mets' ability to sign Foster.

Sources close to the Mets said the three players to be shipped to Cincinnati were catcher Alex Trevino, and pitchers Greg Harris and Jim Kern, whom the Mets obtained in the off-season from the Texas Rangers.

Under league rules, the Mets have 72 hours to complete the deal for 33-year-old Foster, but the time limit for completing deals can be expanded if the parties are close to reaching a settlement.

The Mets said preliminary talks between Cashen and Reich began Thursday evening. Talks continued around the clock Friday and into mid Saturday morning.

"The time was short, the numbers are big and there's nothing in writing," said Cashen in a statement released in New York. "But the prospect of Foster in a Mets' uniform is an exciting concept for the city of New York and I'm optimistic we can put it together."

Cashen said talks would continue early next week. Foster won the National League Most Valuable Player award in 1977 when he hit .320 with 52 home runs and 149 RBI. Last year, he hit .295 in the strike-shortened season with 22 homers and 90 runs batted in. Lifetime, he has a .286 average with 248 homers and 874 RBI.

In the second game, the Spinners downed the Steelwheels, 46-32. The Spinners are now 13-1. The Steelwheels are now 7-5.

Dews said, "and the difference between the two of us is that in the morning I'll wake up and be sober. But you'll wake up and still be the worst umpire in the league."

Gallagher studied kinesiology in the off-season. Dews is a free-lance writer and has written three novels. None has been published.

"My only hope is for my father to buy a publishing company and buy my manuscripts," Dews said. "But I really don't like to talk about writing because baseball is my profession."

Dews spent 14 years as a minor league player and three years as a major league coach. Durham will be his ninth managerial assignment.

"I like a running ball club," said Dews, who surely is aware of Durham's record 293 stolen bases in 1980. "I like to put a team on their own and let them run on their own until they prove they can't. But a lot depends on your ball club as to what kind of manager you are."

"I would like to run, but we're not going to run into suicide," he added.

Dews believes winning is as important as the Class A level as it is in the major leagues.

"I have a two-fold philosophy in managing and winning is number one," Dews said. "I don't think you can develop players without winning. What we really need is a combination of developing winning players."

After three seasons as Atlanta's third-base coach, Dews was dropped from that duty by Joe Torre, who replaced Bobby Cox as the Braves' manager. But Dews also said he didn't feel the move was a demotion.

"I feel like I've been recycled and I'm going through the best manufacturing plant in America," he said. "Hopefully, about five or six years from now, somebody will say, 'Bobby Dews managed in Atlanta, or in Durham, and that's a tough act to follow.'"

Following Tough Acts Not New For New Bulls Manager

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — It's nothing new to Bobby Dews' baseball career to follow tough acts and it seems he'll be doing it once again as the new manager of the Durham Bulls of the Carolina League.

Dews, 43, once had to follow Dal Maxvill and Dick Groat at shortstop in the St. Louis Cardinals organization. He's now taking over a team run by former major leaguer Al Gallagher, a man who helped breathe life into a town which hadn't seen minor league baseball in more than a decade.

"It seems to be my plight in life to have a tough act to follow," Dews said at a news conference announcing his arrival in Durham. "Even today, I have to speak behind Hank Aaron."

Aaron is the director of the Atlanta Braves' farm system. Dews said Gallagher's efforts simply provide him with another challenge. He said it is a challenge he can accept because the two are very much alike, as individuals and as managers.

Remembering his rookie professional season with Daytona Beach of the Florida State League. After an early batting slump, the veterans on the team painted Dews' bat pink and placed it in the bat rack. When Dews found the bat, he charged into the clubhouse and asked who was the culprit of the joke.

"I painted it, why?" said a Pennsylvania teammate who stood 6-foot-5 and weighed close to 250 pounds.

"I just wanted to let you know that the first coat of paint is dry," said Dews.

He also told of a game seven years ago in Greenwood, S.C., when he was ejected following a dispute with an umpire. After drinking most of a six-pack of beer in the clubhouse, Dews said he disagreed with another call by the umpire and charged onto the field. Again, he was ejected.

"Coach Dews, I believe you're intoxicated," Dews recalled the umpire as saying.

"Well, I believe you're the worst umpire in the league."

ECU Women Sink Duke For First Time

Horace Wyatt scored 28 points for the Tigers, 17 in the first half. Vicent Hamilton had 18 and Fred Gilliam had 14.

In the first six minutes of the game, Clemson surged to a 17-6 lead as Wyatt scored five points and Hamilton six. South Carolina came back to run off 16 straight points for a 22-17 lead and went ahead for good

McEnroe, Lendl In Molson Finals

TORONTO (AP) — John McEnroe, the world's No. 1-ranked, tennis player, upended Australian Peter McNamara 6-2, 6-4 Saturday in the semifinal of the $350,000 Molson Tennis Challenge.

McEnroe, 22, will battle Ivan Lendl for the $125,000 first prize Sunday. The Czechoslovakian whipped defending champion Vitas Gerulaitis 6-2, 6-0 in less than an hour in the other semifinal Saturday.

Gerulaitis and McNamara, who started the tournament as the lowest-ranked player in his round-robin group, earned $45,000 for their efforts this week.

The losing finalist will earn $75,000.

McNamara, 26, had upset Americans Jimmy Connors and Eliot Teltscher on the way to the semifinals.

The one player McNamara didn't beat in his group was Lendl, who tore apart Gerulaitis's game with an overpowering serve and steady ground strokes. Gerulaitis, ninth in the world, ruined his chances with five double faults and numerous unforced errors at critical situations.

"When you step on the court you have to expect a very difficult match, but if you get it easier, it's just what comes," said Lendl of his one-sided victory which some of the 12,568 fans found to be boring.

However, Lendl, ranked third internationally, had a word or two for those people.

"They have two options," he said. "They can come and see top players if off that day, it won't be much of a match."

"Sometimes, you can go together with a friend and have an exciting match, but people aren't going to watch just anyone play. So I think it was a stupid comment."

Lendl, who complained of flu-like symptoms during his triumph over Connors in Thursday night, said he was feeling better.

"I'm coughing nicer and nicer," he said, adding his fever had passed.

Lendl said he hopes to return serve better against McEnroe Sunday. The two have split their six Grand Prix tour career matches with Lendl winning their latest confrontation — 6-4, 6-2 at the Masters in mid-January.

It was a heart-breaking loss for McNamara, who showed flashes of brilliance early in the second set after being soundly thumped by McEnroe in the first set. McNamara, ranked 10th internationally, took a 3-1 lead, breaking McEnroe's serve by matching shots with the quick left-hander.

"I was starting to return a little better," McNamara said of his second-set resurgence.

No. 5 Iowa Downs OSU In Overtime

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Freshman Michael Payne scored 25 points, a season high for fifth-ranked Iowa, in leading the Big Ten Conference basketball leaders to a 69-65 overtime verdict over Ohio State Saturday night.

Payne, a 6-foot-11 center, hit eight straight shots at the start of the second half to keep Iowa in contention. Payne's two free throws with 17 seconds left in overtime gave Iowa a 69-63 lead.

The victory was the Hawkeyes' seventh straight for a 9-1 league record and 17-2 overall mark. Iowa now has a two-game lead in the league race over Minnesota.

It marked the sixth time in the last eight games Ohio State has played overtime, setting a Big Ten record. Michigan and Michigan State shared the previous league overtime mark of five, set last winter.

Payne's free throw with 40 seconds left had tied the game 59-59 and forced the extra five minutes.

Clark Kellogg scored 22 points to pace Ohio State, falling to 5-5 in the league and 14-8 overall.

Payne sank 9 of 15 field goal attempts and 7 of 8 free throws. Bob Hansen had scored the Hawkeyes' previous high of 21 this season against Northern Iowa.

Colorado ..... 68

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Guard Tyrone Adams scored 20 points and forward Ed Nealey pulled down a season-high 16 rebounds Saturday night to lead No. 19 Kansas State to a 65-58 Big Eight victory over Colorado.

The Wildcats, 6-2 in league play and 16-4 in all games, saw a 14-point lead cut to four with 5:55 left in the game.

But Nealey's three-point play gave Kansas State a 53-46 lead with 3:58 remaining, and the Wildcats locked up the victory by sinking 10 of 11 free throws the rest of the way.

Kansas State owned a 34-15 rebound advantage over the Buffaloes, who dropped to 1-8 in the Big Eight and 9-12 in all games. The Wildcats rolled up a 35-22 cushion at halftime after scoring eight straight points in the final 2:10.

Guard Tim Jankovich, center Les Craft and Nealey had 10 points each for the Wildcats. Colorado was led by Jacques Tuz and Jay Humphries with 14 each.

Georgia ..... 68

Vanderbilt ..... 57

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dominique Wilkins' 18 points led a list of four Georgia scorers in double figures as the Bulldogs overpowered Vanderbilt 68-57 Saturday in a regionally televised Southeastern Conference basketball game.

Georgia, now 11-8 on the season and 5-7 in the SEC, scored eight unanswered points midway through the second half to erase a three-point Commodore margin and take the lead 52-47.

Vanderbilt enjoyed a 47-44 lead with 10:24 to play after overcoming a 31-27 Georgia halftime lead. But behind the scoring of Wilkins, who hit 14 of his total points in the second half, the Bulldogs surged ahead and never trailed again in the contest.

Forward James Banks tallied 13 points and guard Vern Fleming added 14 points for the Bulldogs. Center Terry Fair chipped in 15 to round out the Georgia scoring.

Vanderbilt was led by forward Jeff Turner's 18 points. Willie "Hutch" Jones added 17 points for the Commodores.

Freshman Phil Cox, Vanderbilt's second-leading scorer averaging 13.6 points per game, was shut out. Cox was 0 for 10 from the field in the contest.

The loss dropped Vanderbilt's record to 11-9 on the year and 4-8 in the conference. Georgia's victory gave the Bulldogs sole possession of seventh place in the conference. The Commodores, who had been tied with Georgia, dropped to eighth place in the standings.

Long Island ..... 95

St. Francis ..... 69

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Fuller and Russell Davis combined for 15 points during a 16-5 burst midway through the second half as Long Island University routed St. Francis, Pa. 95-69 Saturday to clinch a playoff berth in the ECAC Metro South Division basketball tournament.

Lofton's 25 Lifts Bruins Past Rampants, 70-60

By WOODY PEELE - Reflector Sports Editor
STANTONSBURG — Rose High School's hopes of an upper division finish in the Big East Conference faded a bit Friday night as Wilson Beddingfield rolled to a 70-60 win over the Rampants, sending the team's record in the league down to 3-7.

With only four games left to go in the regular season, the odds grow longer against a finish in the upper four and Rose has already been eliminated from a first or second place win.

Rose's girls also went down to defeat to Beddingfield, 69-35, as the league leading Lady Bruins pulled away in the second half to hand Rose its seventh loss in ten league games.

It was a night that never saw Rose in the lead in either the boys or girls game.

Beddingfield scored the first two baskets of the boys' contest and Rose never caught up. Thomas Lofton got things started and Ray Reid scored off a fast break for the 4-0 lead. After Russell Perkins broke the ice for Rose, Reid and Mike Ward both hit for the Bruins to run the lead out to 8-2. A minute and a half later, Baron Burks hit from underneath and the lead was out to seven, 12-5.

Rose, however, helped by a slam dunk and a free throw by Tim Harris cut it back to four and trailed at the horn, 14-10.

Rose had two chances in the second period to take the lead, but each time failed to do the job. A three-point play by Harris closed the gap to three, 16-13, and then Freddy Cherry hit a jumper to trim it to one with 5:35 left.

After that, Perkins missed on a driving layup, and Lofton hit for the Bruins to open it to three again.

Then, after Cherry hit again to pull it back within one, Barry Smith missed a jumper and both Burks and Reid hit to run the lead back to five, 22-17.

Rose never got closer than three again after that, and trailed 28-25 at the end of the half.

Beddingfield scored the first six points of the third period, on baskets by Ward and Lofton and two free throws by Lofton, making it 34-25. After Rose hit once more, another Lofton basket followed by two by Kenneth Battle ran the lead to 13, 40-27.

Rose fought back, however, led by five points by Harris, and cut the lead to eight, 46-38, at the end of the quarter.

Eight was as close as the Rampants could come, however, as the Bruins used their rebounding strength to prevent them hitting second shots. Beddingfield also canned 14 of 20 free throws during the period as they steadily increased their lead, leading by as many as 15, 61-46, with 3:59 left to play.

Overall, the difference was shooting and rebounding. Beddingfield connected on 26 of 48 (54.2%) while Rose made just 24 of 60 (40%). The Bruins also dominated the boards, 42-29, although they committed four more turnovers.

Rose was hurt by the absence of guard Donnell Lee, out with a thigh injury, and the fact that William Battle, its leading scorer, had only two points until after the game was no longer in doubt. He finished with just nine.

"We were a little out of control tonight," Coach Jim Brewington said. "There were a couple of good reasons for that that I'm not going to go into.

"We played well in spurts, but we made some turnovers that hurt us. Beddingfield's got a good club, too. Burks is one of the better players in the conference.

"It was a tough game for us," he continued. "We really thought that we could win it. If we had played like we did (Thursday) night, it would have been no contest. But they have a great home court advantage. It's tough for us to win over here."

Lofton finished the night as the leader for the Bruins with 25 points while Burks added 21. Rose was led by Cherry with 17 while Harris threw in 15 points.

Beddingfield is now 11-7 overall and 4-6 in the league. Rose falls to 9-9 overall.

Rose's girls, although they never led, stuck closer than expected to the Lady Bruins for a half. Beddingfield scored the first four points — as in the boys' game — before Rose hit as Alma Atkinson connected. Gloria Burks, who had 19 first half points, had scored the first two for Beddingfield.

Jackie Johnson added two baskets to help run the lead to 10-5 after Rose had cut it to 6-5. After another Rose basket, three more baskets by Burks ran it out to 16-7 before Rose got two more from Doris Richardson to trim it back to 16-11 at the horn.

In the second period, Rose could manage only two points, hitting a couple of free throws, while Burks kept it up, tossing in nine of 11 Beddingfield points in the period as the Lady Bruins took a 27-13 lead by intermission.

From there on out, it was a pullaway. Rose managed to stay close for a while, cutting it back to eight, but the Bruins ended up with a 43-27 lead at the end of the frame. In the final period, they continued to pull away, gaining the eventual 34-point victory.

Burks led the Bruin scoring with 29 points, while Johnson added 18 and Stephanie Woods had 11. Rose was led by Atkinson with 12.

"I thought about holding the ball against them," Rose coach Dennis Gibson said. "But then I thought that it wasn't good for the girls. They don't learn anything doing that.

"We gave 'em better than I expected. The first half was so-so and in the second we turned the ball over too many times. Beddingfield has three real good players, especially

Burks. They have good transition and they play good defense. We just never got our set plays going. They jump a lot bigger than they are, too. They're awfully strong in the front court, where we're strong in the backcourt. They just had better shot selection, getting the higher percentage shots." Rose's girls drop to 6-10 overall, while Beddingfield is now 14-4 overall and 9-1 in the league.

The Rampants travel to Kinston on Tuesday.

Redskins Down Jackets To End Losing Streak

ROANOKE RAPIDS — Getting 27 points from Ronnie Broadie, Roanoke snapped a two-game losing streak with a 57-54 victory over Roanoke Rapids Friday evening in a Northeastern Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Roanoke whipped Roanoke Rapids, 50-24.

Roanoke, now 16-2 overall and 13-2 in the conference, jumped out to a 14-8 lead in the first period only to have the Yellow Jackets close to within two (30-28) at the half.

The Redskins outscored Roanoke Rapids, 12-6, in the third period to build their lead to eight (42-34) going into the final eight minutes. The Yellow Jackets outscored Roanoke by five (20-15) in the final period, but it was not enough.

Roanoke, which has already clinched the conference regular season title, got 10 points from both Michael Wilson and Angelo Spruill.

Roanoke Rapids, now 7-7 in the conference and 8-11 overall, was led by Keith Sledge with 20 points. Jeff Maness added 12 and Matt Lewis 10 for the Yellow Jackets.

In the girls' game, Roanoke Rapids stunned the Lady Redskins in the first period and led, 10-6, after the first eight minutes. But a 10-3 second quarter advantage by Roanoke gave it a 16-13 halftime lead.

The advantage quickly grew as the Lady Redskins outscored Roanoke Rapids, 17-3 and 17-8 in the final two periods to win easily.

Dietzel Out As LSU AD

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — "I have felt for a long time that this day was coming," Paul Dietzel said with tears in his eyes after being removed as Louisiana State University's athletic director.

Dietzel, under fire because of mounting deficits in the athletic department and criticism from unhappy football fans, was reassigned Friday by the LSU Board of Supervisors.

After the board's four-hour meeting behind closed doors, Dietzel refused to answer questions, but read a brief statement.

"There have been basic philosophical differences between the chancellor and me, and, after all, he is the chancellor," Dietzel said. "For the best of LSU, this is the best thing to do. I will always serve to the best of my ability because I love LSU."

The board agreed without opposition to reassign Dietzel to a position as assistant to the LSU president "for the development of projects and programs."

Dietzel will keep his present salary of $86,000 a year. The reassignment is good through the end of his current contract, which runs out July 31, 1983.

It was Chancellor James Wharton's report on problems in the athletic department that focused the meeting on the question of Dietzel's job and sent the matter into secret session.

Wharton had been called to the meeting to report on sagging finances in the department, which ran up a $390,000 deficit last year — its first in modern times — with prospects of a $12.2 million deficit over the next seven years.

"In my opinion, we finally have agreed that a financial problem exists and we have the direction to solve that problem," Wharton told the board.

Allison Set For Daytona

DAYTONA, Fla. — Bobby Allison was the first driver to enter the 1982 Daytona 500 and what he did after entering may only be the first step toward erasing a disappointing 1981 season.

After hand delivering his entry form, Allison went out and ran nearly 195 miles per hour — faster than he ran last year in capturing the 1981 Daytona pole.

His actual speed was 194.8 mph. In winning the pole last February Allison ran 194.624.

Allowing for the normal increase in speed when he returns for pole position qualifying on Feb. 7, Allison could be going for Buddy Baker's track record 196.049 mph.

The 24th annual Daytona 500, the first race in the 1982 Winston Cup Series, will be run Sunday, Feb. 14 at the Daytona International Speedway. The start is set for 12:15 p.m. (EST).

The Daytona 500 is the richest and most prestigious event on the Winston Cup schedule and features prize money of $914,990 — more than $140,000 over last year's record purse.

The posted winner's share is $96,625, not including lap money. The record payoff came in 1980 when Baker won 102,175. "I'm ready to go," Allison said. "What happened last season is one of the most frustrating things that has ever happened to me and I'd like to begin a new season as soon as possible."

"That," he added, "is why I got my entries in so quickly. Allison has finished second at Daytona the last two years and is fourth on NASCAR's all-time win list for Winston Cup races. His only victory at Daytona came in 1978, a victory that ended a winless string of 67 straight races for the Hueytown, Ala., native.

Richard Petty, seven-time winner at Daytona, is the defending champion.

Waltrip Favorite At Daytona

Speed Week Set To Begin

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — Speed week for the 24th annual Daytona 500 gets under way Sunday with Darrell Waltrip as the favorite to capture the coveted pole position even though he has never won the stock car classic.

Waltrip, who turned 35 Friday, is the favorite because he captured the No. 1 starting position in 11 of the 31 races last year en route to his first Grand National Championship. He also took the checkered flag 12 times and was in the top 10 no less than 25 times.

Waltrip, however, has never won the two big races at the Daytona International Speedway — the Daytona 500 and the Firecracker 400. He hopes his luck will change in 1982.

"Winning the pole for the Daytona 500 would start the year off right," said Waltrip. "It's the first pole of the year and the most prestige."

Qualifying for the two front-row positions for the Feb. 14 race will be held Sunday over the 2.5-mile trioval track.

The Bush Classic, a 50-mile dash where the winner takes home $50,000, will also be held Sunday along with the 20th annual ARCA 200 late-model stock car race.

The 13 drivers who won the pole positions on the 1981 NASCAR circuit are entered in the fourth annual 50-mile dash. In a blind draw determined by each driver throwing darts at balloons, Terry Labonte grabbed the pole. Ricky Rudd chose the No. 2 position, followed by Neil Bonnett and Bill Elliott.

Waltrip, who won the race in 1981, will start in the middle of the pack for Sunday dash for cash. However, he's looking ahead to the big race next Sunday.

"I've won everything here but the two big ones," he said. "I said at the end of last year that I wanted to do two things — win the Daytona 500 and win more races this year than the year before."

One of automobile racing's greats, A.J.

Foyt, will make his return to racing this week at the Daytona speedway.

Foyt, four-time Indy 500 winner who was seriously injured last July when his car slammed into a retaining wall at the Michigan International Speedway, has regained nearly full use of his arms and plans to run in the Daytona 500.

"My doctors and my lawyers and everybody else tried to talk me out of driving again," said the 47-year-old Foyt. "Everybody says I've got to be a fool not to want to get out. But this has been my life. I still enjoy it."

"I don't have to do it. I want to do it. I'm not going to back down now just because I've had a slight injury."

Bobby Allison, one of the seven different drivers to win the Daytona 500, came close to the checkered flag in 1980 and 1981. He hopes the third time will be the charm.

"I've never put much stock in old cliches, but I sure wouldn't mind if that one turned out to be right," he said. "We have worked hard to get ready for Daytona and have been real pleased."

"If we win, and I think we have as good a chance as anyone, it will be because we prepared, not because of some expression."

Speed week is a busy time of the year at Daytona. Besides the Daytona 500 qualifying and the two races Sunday, races will be held Thursday and through the big race Sunday.

- The schedule includes:
- Thursday: Twin 125-mile qualifying races to set the 40-car field for the Daytona 500.
  - Friday: Inaugural 75-mile consolation race for all Winston Cup cars and drivers that fail to qualify for the Daytona 500. The fourth annual Florida 200 for NASCAR's International Sedan cars.
  - Saturday: The 18th annual Sportsman 300 for NASCAR's older-model cars.
  - Sunday: The 24th annual Daytona 500.

DHC Boys Win, Girls Defeated

WHEAT SWAMP — DHC Conley's boys held onto at least a share of first place in the Coastal Conference with a 58-44 romp over North Lenoir Friday night.

But North Lenoir's girls, with a 54-47 victory, knocked the Valkyries out of a share of first, and took over that spot all alone.

North Lenoir's boys, who fall to 3-5 in the league and 8-12 overall, inched out into a 13-12 lead after one period. But Conley fought back and took the lead in the second period, gaining a 29-26 halftime advantage.

The third period saw the Vikings outscore the Hawks, 10-6, for a 39-32 lead. They finished off North Lenoir, 19-12, to win going away.

Sammy Tyson and Keith Galin each had 14 points to lead Conley, while Donald Wilson had 12 and Leon Cox, 10. North Lenoir was led by James Fisher with 14, while Maurice Thorbes had 12.

Conley is now 6-2 in the conference and 11-8 overall. North Lenoir's girls jumped out early, rolling out to a 16-9 lead after one period. Conley rallied, however, 17-14, and cut the lead back to 30-26 at intermission.

It was the third period, however, that did in the Valkyries, as they were outth-15-4. That pushed the North Lenoir lead out to 45-30. Conley rallied once more, 17-9, but fell short.

Veronica Chapman led North Lenoir with 17 points, while Mary Hess had 15 and Susan Smith added 15. Conley was paced by Karen Barrett with 19.

The Conley girls fall to 6-2 in the league and 16-3 overall. North Lenoir is now 7-1 in Coastal play and 17-3 overall.

Lane Sparks Rams Past Aycock

SNOW HILL — Roderick Lane paced Greene Central to a 67-45 victory over Charles B. Aycock Friday night, and allowed the Rams to pull dead even with North Pitt in the Eastern Carolina Conference race.

Both teams have 9-1 lead records now — with two games left to play.

Aycock's girls, in second place in the league, rolled to a 47-31 win over the Lady Rams in their game.

Lane, who scored 17 points, pulled down 15 rebounds and handed out 12 assists, didn't take up tickets, but he did about everything else. The Rams, behind his play, jumped out to a 17-6 lead in the first quarter and were never headed.

In the second period, Aycock was allowed a 16-14 rally, but the Rams were still solidly in command, 31-22, at the half. The Rams pushed that lead out to 44-34, in the third period.

Greene Central is now 12-8 overall, while Aycock drops to 0-10 in the league and 4-15 overall.

In the girls' game, the Lady Rams, who have lost leading scorer Leatha Taylor to the battle of the books, had little left in them to challenge the Falconettes.

Aycock ran out to an 11-4 lead in the first period and repeated that performance in the second frame. That left Aycock up, 22-8, at intermission.

In the third period, the Lady Rams did manage a small rally, cutting the lead back to 35-24. But a 12-7 margin by the Falconettes in the last quarter settled it.

The Lady Rams fall to 12-8, 5-5 with the loss, while Aycock is now 16-3, 8-2 in all games and conference outings.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Second-ranked North Carolina and North Carolina State took easy victories in the North-South college basketball doubleheader Friday night with the No. 2-ranked Tar Heels rolling over Furman 96-69 and the Wolfpack defeating The Citadel 54-44.

Center Sam Perkins poured in 22 points and freshman Michael Jordan added 21 to spark the Tar Heel victory, while Sidney Lowe had 16 for the Wolfpack and Scott Parzych chipped in 14.

N.C. State was to have met Furman at 7 p.m. EST Saturday to be followed by a North Carolina-The Citadel matchup at 9.

Tar Heel coach Dean Smith praised his team's performance.

"We're very happy to have bounced back from a tough loss at Virginia," Smith said. "Our defensive intensity was good early and our offensive patience was good, too."

"We're much more talented than Furman," Smith said. "It seems like this was our first easy victory in a very long time."

Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano said The Citadel was tougher than he anticipated.

"If we'd ever gotten behind, we would have had to chase them and we're not that kind of team," Valvano said. "They run their offense from side to side, take intelligent shots and hit the boards. They just gave us a lot of trouble."

The Tar Heels, 17-2, leaped out to an early lead and led by as much as 40-22 with four minutes left in the first half. Junior guard Jim Braddock hit five straight shots from outside and only the hot-shooting hand of guard Mel Daniel kept the Paladins going. North Carolina ended the first half with a 40-30 lead.

North Carolina continued to add to its lead after intermission and led by as much as 94-65 with 1:02 left. Perkins scored 14 of his points in the second half.

Braddock finished with a career-high 16 points while James Worthy added 12.

Daniel was the game's leading scorer with 24 points for the 7-11 Paladins. Center George Singleton contributed 15 and William Hanks 11.

In the opener, Lowe hit 8 of 10 free throws in the second half as N.C. State stretched its lead to 45-36 with 5:35 remaining. The Citadel, which never led, had kept the margin within five until then.

N.C. State used a 2-3 zone in the second half to force The Citadel to take most of its shots from the outside. The Bulldogs hit 20 of 44 field goal attempts, 37 percent, compared to the Wolfpack's 20 of 30, 66.7 percent.

Thuri Bailey was the only other player in double figures for the 16-5 Wolfpack as he added 11 points. Senior center Chuck Nevitt, suffering from a cold, did not play.

National Wildlife Week — Robert Redford, world-renowned actor and environmentalist, has been named honorary chairman of National Wildlife Week. To be observed this year from March 14 through 20.

For the seventh time in 12 years, Redford will head the annual observance of the week, first proclaimed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938 to rally public support for the nation's wildlife population, and sponsored every year since then by the National Wildlife Federation. "We Care About Eagles" is the theme for this year's week, now in its 43rd year.

NWF's president, C. Clifton Young, a Reno, Nev., attorney, said Redford is, once again, "ideally suited" to serve as Wildlife Week chairman. "The way he lives demonstrates a deep commitment to the conservation of our natural resources," said Young. "In fact, if people would pay as much attention to his environmental ethics as they do to his films, we'd have an entire country of conservationists. The aim of National Wildlife Week is public education. Robert Redford is eminently qualified to help us inform the public about the plight of the American bald eagle, which is both our national bird and an endangered species."

Redford heartily endorsed the "We Care About Eagles" theme. "Eagles are magnificent birds," said the 44-year-old actor and film producer. "The only problem is — there just aren't enough of them around any more." The American bald eagle, once plentiful across North America, is now an endangered species in all but five of the lower 48 states, Redford noted.

"If we don't work to save him, our children, who deserve to see these splendid birds in flight, may see bald eagles only in sculpture, on our money and on pages of history books," said Redford. "But it doesn't have to be that way. We can meet our human needs — for water, energy, land and other resources — without destroying whole species of animals."

As chairman of National Wildlife Week, Redford will narrate public service announcements for radio and television. The TV "spots," which feature an American bald eagle filmed in its natural habitat, explain how the eagle, our national symbol for the last 200 years, is struggling to survive despite the destruction of much of his habitat.

"Habitat destruction is probably the greatest single threat to the world wildlife populations," said Redford. "Take away the places where an animal raises his young and gets food, water and cover, and that animal cannot survive. The sad thing is that habitat destruction is very often unnecessary. There are ways to manage our natural resources without sacrificing our wildlife heritage."

"Ironically, the eagle has no natural enemies," said Redford. "Only man stands as a threat to the eagle's existence, and only man can insure his survival. Let's all make sure that we keep our national symbol a living symbol."

Fishing Celebrities — The winner of the 1981 Arthur Smith King Mackerel Tournament (the world's largest mackerel tournament) was in Greenville last week visiting the Sea Ox Boat plant, Dale McDowell of Bolivia, N.C., his father, Ben, and fishing buddy Dwight Knox, were the guests of Graham Flanagan and Don Fidler of Sea Ox.

In talking with Dale about the events leading up to his winning catch, I could tell this was a guy who knew how to fish. His technique (slow-trotting live menhaden), the time spent regging the baits and insuring that fresh bait was readily available were just a few of his secrets.

Dale's fishing knowledge with the help of his father and Ben were enough to produce the winning King. The fish weighed 42.06 pounds and was large enough to win the first place prize of $10,000 and a new boat.

Local Notes — for the cold weather fisherman in Pitt County, it's almost time for the annual run of raccoon perch, herring and shad. Action should pick up the middle of this month and continue through March. It's time to sharpen those hooks!

A-G Downs Jaguars In Overtime

FARMVILLE — Jonathan Woods bucket with just over a minute remaining in overtime sent Ayden-Grifton to a 43-40 victory over Farmville Central Friday night in an Eastern Carolina Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Cora Faison hit a jumper with four seconds left in the second overtime to give Ayden-Grifton a 56-55 victory over Farmville Central.

He missed the front end of the one-and-one, however, sending the game into overtime.

After misses by both teams early in the overtime, Woods muscled inside for a bucket and was fouled. Woods missed the free throw, but the Chargers still led 42-40, with 1:11 left.

Farmville worked the ball around, but missed a shot with less than five seconds left and then fouled Thomas Anderson. Anderson hit the second of two foul shot opportunities for the final tally.

Anderson led the Chargers in scoring with 14 points. Andrew Edwards paced Farmville Central with 11 points and 14 rebounds.

The win leaves Ayden-Grifton at 3-8 in the ECC and 6-14 overall. The Jaguars fall to 2-7 and 7-12.

Farmville 9 11 14 6 0-40

Ayden-Grifton led at the end of the first period, 10-9, and then stretched its lead to 16-11 midway through the second quarter before Edwards hit a bucket and two free throws and Gary Hobgood hit a jumper to give the Jaguars a 17-16 lead.

Ayden-Grifton went back on top moments later, however, with a bucket by Tyrone Gay and a free throw by Jesse Anderson and led at the half, 23-20.

The Chargers upped their margin to five early in the third quarter but the Jaguars cut the deficit to two late in the period and then went up by two, 34-32, at the end of the quarter on a 25-foot jumper at the buzzer by Tony Hargrove.

A bucket by Gay and Benard Cannon sparked the Chargers back on top, 38-34, with 3:14 left in regulation. Then, following a bucket by Thomas Anderson that put the Chargers up, 40-36, Hargrove hit a jumper and Carraway stole the ball and converted it into a basket to tie the game and send it into OT. In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton led by four late in the fourth period, but Rose Lang hit a jumper with a minute and a half left and Kim Smith then copped a jumper from the foul line with five seconds left to tie the game at 43-43 and send it into overtime.

Ayden-Grifton went up by four with 30 seconds left in the first overtime only to see the Lady Jaguars rally and tie it up. Stephanie Newton hit a jumper with 21 seconds left to pull Farmville within two. Then, after A-G's Lisa Ward missed the front end of a one-and-one, Cynthia Williams connected to tie the game with five seconds left.

In the second overtime, Linda Brown hit a free throw to put the Lady Chargers up, 54-53, with 32 seconds left. But Lang countered with a jumper and Farmville led, 55-54, with 21 seconds to go.

Ayden-Grifton then called time out and worked the ball to Faison, who hit a jumper with four seconds left to give A-G the win.

Ayden-Grifton, now 5-6 in the ECC and 8-12 overall, was led by Faison and Brown, both of whom scored 22 points.

Farmville, now 1-8 and 3-14, was led by Rose Lang, who scored a game-high 27 points. Hart added 11 for Farmville.

Farmville was to have traveled to Charles B. Aycock Saturday night. The Jaguars play host to Aycock Tuesday. Ayden-Grifton is at Roanoke Wednesday night.

Hudson Leads Knights By Mt. Calvary

Greenville Christian, led by Troy Hudson's 18 points, romped to an 82-35 victory over Mt. Calvary Academy Friday night, to win its 12th game in 13 outings this season.

Greenville's girls also came away with a win, capturing a 28-17 decision.

The Knights, off to a big start, came out of the first period with a safe 28-3 lead. They were never behind in the game and allowed a slight rally, 12-9, in the second frame, taking a comfortable 37-15 lead into the dressing rooms.

In the third period, the Knights again roared away, 30-7, to build the lead out to 67-22. They finished off Mt. Calvary, 15-13, in the final quarter.

In addition to Hudson's 18 points, David Hollingsworth added 13, Chris Harris had 12 and Jerry Butts, 10. Benny Oakes had 14 and Mike Lindsay, 10, for Mt. Calvary.

Greenville's girls and Mt. Calvary both scored four first period points, but the Lady Knights outscored their guests, 9-2, in the second quarter to take a 13-6 lead at intermission. Greenville again outthit Mt. Calvary, 9-6, in the third, running it out to 22-12. GCA held a 6-5 advantage in the final quarter.

Kathy Vernerson led the scoring with 23 points and was the game's only double figure scorer.

Following a Saturday game at Wilmington, GCA is to travel to Wilson on Tuesday.

EBA Boys, Girls Win

Tyrone Smith scored 15 points and Lane Odum added 10 to lead E.B. Aycock to an easy 72-43 win over Beddingfield Friday in basketball.

E.B. Aycock is now 5-5. In the girls' game, E.B. Aycock edged Beddingfield, 26-25. Vicky Parrott led Aycock, now 3-7, with eight points. Cheryl Clark and Lisa Trevathan both had six.

Sonia Anderson paced Beddingfield with eight points.

Patriots Hire Former Pirate

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — Continuing his rebuilding of the New England Patriots coaching staff, head coach Ron Meyer has hired a champion weightlifter as the club's first full-time strength and conditioning coach, it was announced Friday.

LeBaron Caruthers is the seventh coach named by Meyer, who succeeded the fired Ron Erhardt last month, and sixth who worked last season with Meyer at Southern Methodist University. Meyer expects to make three more appointments.

A Nashville, Tenn., native, Caruthers was the Texas State Superheavyweight Division Powerlifting Champion in 1980 and 1981. He played offensive tackle at East Carolina in 1972 and 1973, transferring to North Carolina State as a shotputter, discus thrower and weightlifting.

After graduating from N.C. State, was assistant track coach at Auburn from 1978 to 1980 before joining the SMU staff as strength coach for all sports.

Pam Pack Downs Tigers, 59-39

WILLIAMSTON — Washington rolled to a 59-39 victory over Washington Friday night in a Northeastern Conference basketball game. Earlier, in the girls' game, Williamston defeated Washington, 40-30.

UDC's Jones, Britt Best Tandem In Basketball?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The University of the District of Columbia is a small, inner-city school, nearly ignored by the local and national basketball media more interested in uptown neighbor Georgetown or the surrounding Atlantic Coast Conference.

Those who chose to look, however, will discover a tandem at UDC that is among the best in the sport — Earl Jones and Michael Britt.

UDC was formed four years ago from the merger of three public colleges in the nation's capital.

The school's basketball team, which until this season had no gym to call its own, is currently the highest scoring in the nation, averaging nearly 90 points a game and is led by the 7-foot Jones and Britt, a 6-foot-7 forward who reminds many observers of the National Basketball Association star George Gervin.

This year, in leading the Firebirds to a spot in the national NCAA Division II rankings, Jones is scoring 25.8 points a game, second best in the nation. Britt is ninth among Division II scorers, averaging 22.9 points a game.

In rebounding, Britt is fifth in the nation with 12.4 a game, while Jones is 11th, averaging 11.1 a game.

"I don't believe there are two players with more talent in the country who are better at playing together than Earl and Michael," boasts UDC Coach Wil Jones.

Earl Jones, a sophomore, was Eastern College Athletic Conference Rookie of the Year last year, averaging 20 points and 13 rebounds a game as a freshman. An exceptional defensive player, Jones set a school record by blocking 146 shots in 25 games.

Some complain that Jones' record was accomplished against inferior, Division II teams. But at last summer's National Sports Festival, playing against the top collegians in the nation, Jones scored a tournament-high 73 points and was named his team's Most Valuable Player.

This season, major-college power Wichita State, Jones scored 30 points. The next night, in a one-point loss to Pepperdine, Jones scored 38 points and grabbed six rebounds.

"Earl has the credentials. Anybody who thinks Earl can't play with the big boys just doesn't know what he's talking about," concludes Britt.

Britt, who holds UDC's single-game scoring record with 52 points against Southeastern as a freshman, averaged 21 points a game last year as a sophomore. This year, drawing the opposition's top defenders, he is hitting 55 percent of his shots from the field.

"Most teams are double-teaming Earl, trying to keep him away from the basket. As a result, I have been trying to move closer to the basket for offensive rebounds and higher percentage shots," Britt said.

How Wil Jones convinced two of the most talented players in the nation to enroll at a school that not only had no basketball tradition but no gym is a story unto itself.

Earl Jones, who played high school ball first in West Virginia and later here, was coveted by every college in the nation. A player thought to possess the talent to jump straight from high school to the pros, Jones was a Parade Magazine High School All-American for three straight years, an honor shared with only one other — Lew Alcindor, now known as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

UCLA, Maryland and Nevada-Las Vegas were the schools mentioned most often as Jones completed his senior year in high school.

Wil Jones was an assistant coach at Maryland under Lefty Driesell in the mid-1970s, and helped land such top prospects as Albert King, Buck Williams and Ernest Graham. In 1979, in his first year as a head coach at UDC, Wil Jones renewed his relationship with Earl Jones.

"When I spoke to Earl I learned that he was turned off by basketball. Earl's basically shy and he was under extreme pressure," Wil Jones said. "Even though that some day he would make a lot of money playing basketball held no interest. He wanted out."

"There had been just too much talk about my grades and where I was going to go," Jones remembers. "It was a terrible time."

UDC offered a chance to play basketball and out of the limelight.

"I have never regretted the decision to come here," Earl Jones said. "If I had gone to a big school I would have had to play up to somebody's else's potential. Here, at a small school, I can play to my potential."

For every college recruiter who knew of Earl Jones, there were 10 who never heard of Britt.

Although he graduated from Suffolk, Va., High School, Britt's education came in the streets and the playground. "School was not my top priority when I was a kid," Britt said. Cutting classes frequently, he was eligible to play at Suffolk for just one year.

Wil Jones had gone to Suffolk to scout another player when he saw Britt in a schoolyard pickup game.

"The kid was great. I couldn't believe anybody with that much talent was just playing in a pickup game," said the coach, who talked to Britt for a few minutes and returned to Washington.

"When I got home I called a scout from the area and asked him about this kid I saw in the schoolyard, a guy named Michael Smith. My friend said he knew the kid I was talking about but he thought I had the name wrong. He said his name was Britt, not Smith."

Britt was not interested in college and had given a phony name.

"When I realized that the kid had lied to me I jumped in my car and drove right back down to Virginia. I found him on a street corner and made him take me to meet his parents," Wil Jones said.

The coach told Britt's parents that if he could have their son for six months he would get him off the streets. Three years later, Britt is a B-plus student and on target to graduate with his class.

Inflation...

Marcis earned $162,213 last year and received about $70,000 in sponsor money. But, the Wausau, Wis., native said he spent $240,000. In 1979, he was nearly wiped out when his truck and trailer burst into flames and $80,000 worth of equipment went up in smoke.

Marcis said he cuts cost by reducing his number of full-time employees, not buying an extra set of tires when he needs them or purchasing new parts and renting smaller work spaces.

This year appears to be better for Marcis. He has a $150,000 sponsorship from businessman J.D. Stacy and three other sponsors. He won a pole position in 1981, making him eligible for a 50-mile sprint race for last year's pole position winners. The $190,000 purse gives $50,000 to the winner and guarantees $10,000 for those finishing seventh through 13th.

Marcis' performance last year also qualifies him for two of NASCAR's plans that guarantee him an income in addition to the race's purse. But, Marcis is not happy with the plans.

"What's wrong with putting the money in the purse?" he asked. "Forget the plans and put it in the purse. That is what encourages competition and brings new people into the sport. A lot of it is under the table and the others have no opportunity to get it."

One of the plans Marcis cited is the Winner's Circle plan. It's open only to seven car owners who won the previous season. But if more than seven win in a single season, only the first seven make the plan. Petty is on the plan.

In addition to the plans, there are other benefits for the Grand National driving champion and the rookie-of-the-year. Ron Bouchard, who won the rookie title in 1981, will receive $1,000 for each race he competes in. Driving champion Darrell Waltrip, who won $693,342 last year, also receives more than $1,000 in appearance money at each race.

A driver also earns additional money for being the top qualifier or leading the most laps during a race.

Competitors aren't the only ones crying inflation; promoters also have been hard hit.

"Obviously there are a lot of speedways operating because their owners are enthusiasts, not because it's a good financial investment," Hank Schoolfield, a spokesman for the short North Wilkesboro (N.C.) Speedway, said. "But, somewhere along the line there becomes a fine line between enthusiasm and cost and speedway operators must make a decision."

"The gap between a track's income and its cost to stage a race is smaller at a small track than at a larger track, such as Dover (Del.) and Rockingham (N.C.)," he said.

A speedway has a lot of costs the public and competitors don't always consider, Schoolfield said, citing security personnel, $100,000 repaving costs and improvement of facilities.

Bullets Fall To Lakers

JAMESVILLE — Mat-tamuskeet routed Jamesville, 67-44, Friday evening in a Tobacco Belt Conference basketball game.

Earlier, in the girls' game, Jamesville nipped Mat-tamuskeet, 25-20.

Ford Says Layoffs May Follow Talks Collapse

By ANN JOB WOOLLEY
Associated Press Writer

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s chief negotiator warned Saturday that layoffs could be ahead if contract concession talks with the United Auto Workers collapse as they did at General Motors Corp.

"I can't tell you that if we fail to reach an agreement, there won't be 10,000 or 12,000 people put on layoff in one form or another," Peter Pestillo said at a news conference. "Ultimately we run the business to make a living at it and that's one of the most cold-blooded facts of life."

Asked whether there would be immediate layoffs if bargaining fails, Pestillo suggested that Ford might rely more heavily on outside parts suppliers instead of manufacturing its own components.

"We will be measuring product versus other opportunity all through our system," said Pestillo, "and the fact that we don't do anything (fail to reach agreement) will probably force us to make some decisions in ways we currently wouldn't favor."

Relying on outside suppliers, known as out-sourcing, is one of the central issues in the negotiations. The union wants limits on out-sourcing to protect the jobs of the UAW's rank and file.

Pestillo said the company has not threatened the union with plant closings and layoffs if negotiations fail. "We don't behave like that," he said.

UAW Vice President Donald Ephlin and Pestillo agreed they remained optimistic about reaching agreement, but said work would continue through into next week. No deadline has been set.

Subcommittees are to meet through the weekend.

"This stage of negotiations is always the most depressing part of it because your subcommittees are dry and you're not making substantial movements but you're doing a lot of essential and very important work," Ephlin said.

The UAW has 106,200 members working in Ford plants, and there are more than 55,000 Ford workers on indefinite layoff because of factory closings and reduced production. Pestillo said earlier in the week that 1981 losses will top $1 billion.

Talks between the UAW and the nation's two largest automakers on possible labor cost-saving concessions by the union began Jan. 11, but negotiations failed at GM when bargainers were unable to come up with an agreement by a Jan. 28 deadline imposed by the union.

Seven days later, GM announced it would close permanently its automotive trim plant in Euclid, Ohio, within a year. It is the company's first major plant closing of the current auto slump, which has lasted almost three years.

Talks at Ford resumed Monday, Ephlin said Saturday the talks were progressing in subcommittees and that the union might be ready to respond to Ford's proposal this week.

He reiterated that the current 17-page company proposal "is inadequate."

take chances in buying and selling businesses.

In 1960, he sold out to Jim Gardner. At that time the world headquarters of the Hardee Food Chains was established in Rocky Mount. The present Hardee's chain has 1,395 stores in the Southeast alone.

After the sale of Hardee's franchise, Wilber originated other food establishments, including The Little Castle on 10th Street and two Space Houses, one where the Sub Station is now located on Memorial Drive, the other one in Kinston.

money. But there have been the bad moments also. For example, "Hardee said, "in 1975 I over-expanded in the sea food business and went bankrupt."

Then, with $300 dollars in the bank, he opened his first Beef and Shakes. Like the earlier endeavors, he expanded the Beef and Shakes to other towns. "I netted a nice sum that first year, then converted the Washington business into Biscuit Town."

Even though he had regained a good degree of success, he sold out again, to Bubba Rawl and Darryl Davis.

Looking Back

Looking back over his career in food business, Wilber commented, "I believe that in starting the Hardee chain, I was given the incentive to advance."

Some people have encouraged him to retire. "But I just can't retire," he insists. "Being in business is a lot of fun. I guess I'd just fade away if I did retire."

Wilber Hardee is quick to admit that he's been in and out of business more than the average person. "Someone has to make it happen or the world would stop," he reasons. "But," he adds, "If I had known when I sold Hardee's franchise what I know today, I could have asked for one-tenth of one percent of gross and lived in luxury the rest of my life."

Over the years, Hardee has donated generously to the Pirates Club and to East Carolina University. "It is one of the greatest universities in the South," he declares.

Desire For Adventure

According to Wilber's daughter, Janey Smith, who with her husband has operated The Three Steers Restaurant for 10 years, her father has always exhibited a desire for adventure.

When he was a young boy, he ran away from home several times, one time hopping a freight train to Florida.

"I was a little inclined to music in my youth," Wilber says. "At one time I was in a member of a hillbilly band called the Tobacco Ramblers. We used to play for square dances and performed on radio station WEED in Rocky Mount Every day we drove from Greenville and many times we rushed through the door just seconds before air time."

Pitt Native

Wilber, born in Pitt County, is the son of Maggie Mills Hardee and Henry Bryant Hardee. He learned hard work at an early age. As a teen-ager, with the help of a brother, he operated a service station and a store. This left little time for formal education.

In 1945 Wilber married Kathryn Roebuck, who died in 1980. He is the father of four daughters — Janey Smith, Ann Riggs, Mary Kathryn Hodges and Doris Ray Hardee, and seven grandchildren.

Today, Wilber Hardee owns Hot Dog City in Greenville. Keeping in stride with past habits, he noted, "I'd make a change in a minute."

Meantime, the lilted commercial that goes "best eating in town up and down... and all around..." echoes from the original (now gone) location on 14th Street in Greenville to all corners of the nation.

grill." Hardee, founder of the Hardee Fast Food Chain, remembers. "It was called the 'Do Drop In.'"

This early venture was the only time that Wilber sold alcoholic beverages. "And because I sold beer," he said, "many times I had to reverse the invitation to drop in."

From that early beginning, the attraction Hardee has always had for food led to the burgeoning Hardee chain, with its expanded menus to fit mealtimes as well as snacks, helping to change the lifestyle and eating habits of virtually millions of people.

The spectacular growth of the Hardee restaurants, from a few scattered drive-ins in the years after World War II, has mushroomed into a nationwide billion dollar business of today.

Two years before his initial Winterville venture in 1947, Wilber had been discharged from the Navy. He served in

About a year after opening the Winterville cafe, he opened another restaurant at Port Terminal, one that carried a complete menu. That second restaurant, he claims, was the initiation of the food business that has spanned more than three decades, leading him in and out of trials and errors in restaurant pursuits.

Good Promoter

"I was a good promoter," Wilber admits, "but it seems as if I was always setting businesses up for other people."

Possessor of a flair for architectural designing, Wilber built the Silo Restaurant. The building, projecting the pattern of a farmer's silo, was erected two doors down from Carolina Dairy on Memorial Drive.

Then, in 1954, he purchased the home next door that belonged to Dr. Cornelius F. Keuzenkamp, a chiropractor. Hardee converted the Silo noticed that their burgers were grilled and I was convinced that charcoal ones would be better.

Original Hardee

With this thought in mind, the original Wilber Hardee Restaurant was established in the 1960s on 14th Street. It was from here that the world's first Hardee's charcoal-coated hamburgers were served.

The undertaking had a snowball effect. Wilber found himself in possession of a booming establishment that he hadn't quite anticipated so soon. He pointed out for example, that he "saw the need of menu expansion and opened the East's first apple turnover factory in Ayden, employing 30 people." He not only supplied his own needs but shipped to other customers.

Partnership

The next step was opening

Greenville every day. That is until the frozen method took over."

Hardee has seen many changes in the food business in the last few years. "In the early days we hired about 25 employees for the restaurants and paid 75 cents per hour," he explained. "We only hired boys. Reaction to the women's lib had nothing to do with that hiring policy. It just seemed the proper thing to do at the time."

Hamburgers were 15 cents and cheeseburgers were 20 cents. French fries and drinks each cost a dime. "If the economy gets worse," Wilber commented, "we just might have to go back to the original prices."

Fishing And New Ideas

Wilber Hardee's principal hobbies are deep sea fishing and the adventure of putting new ideas into practice. Exhibiting ingenuity and drive, Wilber has been willing to

Two Fine Eastern Carolina Structures To Be Rehabilitated

RALEIGH — Two historic buildings in northeast North Carolina are in new ownership and will be rehabilitated in the 1980s.

The Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, Inc., has sold the Edenton Peanut Mill, Chowan County's tallest building, and the Speight House in Bertie County, home of artist Francis Speight.

The Edenton Peanut Mill is listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The property was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Jesse L. Harrell and Mr. and Mrs. Alton G. Elmore to the Historic Preservation Fund.

A feasibility study showed that the Mill could be rehabilitated for a variety of uses, including luxury apartments. The tax incentives for rehabilitating historic properties make the building's rehabilitation profitable.

The new owners of the five-story Peanut Mill are Todd and Patricia Dickinson of Durham. The Dickinsons are familiar with old buildings such as the Peanut Mill. Both Todd and Patricia do consulting work in historic preservation and restoration construction. The Dickinsons recently won an award from the Historic Preservation Society of Durham for adapting an early Art Moderne service station in Durham into law offices.

The Dickinsons' immediate plans for the building include its stabilization while further study is made on how the building is to be used.

"We are most grateful to the Harrells and the Elmores for their generous contribution to the Fund," said J. Myrick Howard, Executive Director of the Fund. "Their donation of the building has made it possible to develop a plan which assures that this important structure is enjoyed by future generations."

The Edenton Peanut Mill was built around 1909 when Edenton was the second largest peanut market in the nation. Locally owned and the first of its kind in Edenton, the mill produced 1400 to 1900 one hundred pound bags of peanuts daily. The operation was originally powered by a steam engine fueled by peanut hulls.

Speight House

The Speight House is the family home of the well-known North Carolina artist, Francis Speight, who has used his homeplace as the subject of many beautiful paintings. Speight now lives in Greenville.

The Speight House consists of two structures built in the early nineteenth century and sited at right angles to each other in a picturesque grove of large old oak trees. The property is located in central Bertie County near Hope Plantation.

The earlier house was built sometime around 1810 but was much altered in 1907. The later house, built circa 1828, is remarkably intact with beautiful Federal-style detailing.

A handsome schoolhouse and a small smokehouse remain in the yard. The property has been nominated to the National Register of Historic Places.

The new owners of the Speight House, Peter and Ruth Larson, purchased the property from Historic Hope Foundation, Inc., and the Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, Inc. Currently living in Washington, D.C., the young couple is familiar with North Carolina since Ruth is a native Tar Heel. They plan to live in the Speight House upon completion of the rehabilitation and to continue their work in furniture restoration.

Historic Hope Foundation, Inc., was established in 1966 for the purpose of acquiring and restoring Hope Plantation, an outstanding Federal period residence. Hope Plantation now contains a fine collection of period furnishings based on its builder's estate inventory.

The Historic Preservation Fund of North Carolina, Inc., is the first statewide revolving fund for historic preservation in the United States. Created by the Historic Preservation Society of North Carolina, Inc., the fund has purchased and resold some thirty historic buildings around North Carolina. These buildings are to be rehabilitated by private owners under protective covenants.

People who are interested in more information on the role of historic preservation in North Carolina can write to: A. Melanie Murphy or J. Myrick Howard, P.O. Box 27632, Raleigh, N.C. 27611—telephone number 8322-3652.

THE EDENTON PEANUT MILL... a five-story brick structure built about 1909, has been purchased by a Durham couple who will rehabilitate the structure, which has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places. The building was earlier donated to the N.C. Historic Preservation Fund.

THE RURAL BERTIE COUNTY HOME... of Francis Speight, North Carolina's dean of artists now living in Greenville, has been purchased by a young couple from Washington, D.C., who will restore the house under restrictive covenants. The couple plan to live here when renovation is completed.

Engagements Announced

Figures Show Families Are Still Moving

If it seems as if your family and friends are always moving, some federal government figures on the subject might be of interest to you.

According to Dr. Glenda Herman, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University, about 20 percent of the nation's 77.1 million households moved in 1978, the last year from which figures have been released.

Dr. Herman adds that these figures, although three years old, still reflect current trends in moving. Despite problems with the economy and high interest rates, people are still moving she says. The difference is that they are not always so certain now what type of housing will be available when they go to a new city.

"The West, with 26 percent, had the greatest proportion of households that moved in 1978," Dr. Herman said. Other proportions were 21 percent in the South; 19 percent in the North Central states and 15 percent in the Northeast.

The survey showed movers were going into newer and more expensive housing. The median value of homes occupied by movers was $49,000, compared to $41,500 for all owners, Dr. Herman noted.

The median gross rent, including utilities, was higher for those who moved during that year, but only by $15.

Median family income of owners who had recently moved was $18,700 compared with $16,800 for all owner households.

For black movers, median family income of owners was $14,200 and the median income for renters was $7,100. For movers of Spanish-origin, median family income was $16,000 and the median for renters was $7,700.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was reassigned to the night shift some months ago. I work days. When he comes home at 2 a.m., he's wide-awake and ready for romance. I am already three hours into a deep sleep.

He can't understand why I don't wake up, ready, willing and able. Our weekend love life is fine, but the weeknights are killing me!

So how can I keep him happy and get enough rest at the same time? No jokes. This is serious.

Who Issues First Invite?

DEAR ABBY: My daughter is about to become engaged to a young man from a socially prominent family. We have never met his parents. His mother told my daughter that she is waiting for me to issue an invitation to her and her family for dinner "or something" so we can meet! Apparently she is under the impression that the parents of the bride should invite the parents of the groom over first.

I am amazed that a woman who travels in such a ritzy social circle doesn't realize that the parents of the groom are supposed to invite the parents of the bride first.

Couple Marries On Saturday

The wedding ceremony of Marjorie Lee Snell and Edward Michael Connolly was solemnized Saturday afternoon at 3:30 in Emmanuel Baptist Church. The Rev. L. Lee Whitlock performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of organ music was rendered by the Rev. Chris Jenkins and Joanie Stauffer was vocalist.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wallace Snell Jr. of Greenville, the bride was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Connolly of Greenville and his father was best man.

Bridal attendants included Sharon Connolly, maid of honor, and Michele Connolly, sisters of the bridegroom, Beth Winstead and Emerette Stevenson, all of Greenville, Darla Stephenson of Washington, Suzanne Hill of Newport, Irene Stevenson of Richmond, Va. and Keila Teague and Jackie Duong, both of Raleigh, were bridesmaids.

Ushers included Kevin Connolly of Seattle, Wash., brother of the bridegroom, Robert Wilkerson and Mike Belton, both of Greenville, Greg Sasser of Greensboro, Jack Herlocker and Brad McGee, both of Groton, Conn. and Mike Spear of Albemarle. The bride chose a formal gown of white satin, re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls over peau de soie. Her gown was designed with a fitted bodice with a natural waistline and long fitted sleeves overlaid with full bishop sleeves of chiffon ending with calla point satin cuffs accented with appliques of re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls closing with bridal buttons. Matching lace adorned with pearls trimmed the neckline, bodice and circled the waistline. The satin A-line skirt featured designs of re-embroidered alencon lace accented with pearls and flowed into a chapel train bordered with re-embroidered alencon lace. She wore a fingertip veil of illusion held in place by a Camelot cap, overlaid with re-embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls. The illusion was trimmed with matching alencon lace. She carried a cascade featuring stephanotis, white roses, ivy and variegated foliage with baby's breath.

The attendants were each dressed in a formal gown of periwinkle silesta designed with an open neckline and miniature rolled shoulder straps. The gown was enhanced with a blouson bodice, three-quarter length sleeves and a fitted waist from which fell a gathered peplum. A flared skirt complemented the gown. A reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall after the ceremony. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Walton B. Walters, aunt and uncle of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Mizelle. Catherine White presided at the guest register. After the wedding cake was cut by the bridal couple, it was served by Mrs. George Huddleston and Lisa Willis. Punch was poured by Hope MacMillan and Sarah Walker. A wedding breakfast was given by Mrs. Hope Anderson, Mrs. Susan Haines, Mr. and Mrs. James Graham and Judge and Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts at the home of Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. Haines.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the bridegroom's parents, relatives and friends.

A bridesmaids luncheon was given Friday by Mrs. A.M. Mumford at her home. She was assisted by Mrs. Sherman Parks and Mrs. H. Alex White.

Prior to the wedding the bride was entertained with a tea and a floating recipe shower. The couple will be living in Groton, Conn. after a wedding trip to the Bahamas.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of J.H. Rose High School. She graduated from Meredith College and he graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy. He is now an ensign in the U.S. Navy and is stationed in Groton, Conn.

On The Young Side

By Lisa Wang

Among the many high school art contests, the National Scholastic Art Awards program has attained a distinctive position in the encouragement of student achievement in creative art. In its 55th year, this publically sponsored competition, conducted by Scholastic, Inc., is divided into regional and national levels and is open to students in grades seven-12. All art entries must fit into one of the 14 classifications, ranging from acrylics and water colors to printmaking, sculpture and jewelry. In addition, there is a black-and-white and color photography division.

In regional exhibitions, where they are given a chance at local exposure, winners are awarded gold achievement keys and certificates of merit. From key-winning entries are chosen "blue ribbon" finalist selections, which are forwarded to Scholastic headquarters in New York to be judged for national honors.

This year, the eastern North Carolina Regional Competition, co-sponsored by WITN-TV and Johnson Lawn and Garden Supply, was conducted at Atlantic Christian College, Wilson. Several Rose artists emerged with winning entries. Karen Lang (senior) received a gold key for her entry of a torn paper collage, while Neil Kopping (junior) won for his woodcut entry. Robert Flanagan (senior) had two winning entries — an ink drawing and acrylic painting — as did Karen Forehand (junior), who submitted a white charcoal drawing and a pencil drawing.

Receiving honorable mentions for their work were Curt Carman, David Diener (two), Robert Flanagan, Neil Kopping and John Little (two). An awards ceremony to formally present awards and certificates will be conducted at Atlantic Christian College.

Winning pieces are being exhibited in a Gold Key-Finalist Show at Case Art Gallery, Atlantic Christian, until Feb. 14. Dates for the Honorable Mention Show are Feb. 16-28.

Gold Key Winners will now go on to represent Rose High in New York City competition, where they are eligible to receive gold medals, cash awards, scholarships and the honor of display at the National High School Art Exhibition. This is the fourth year that Rose has sent winners to New York.

The Scholastic Art Awards program is especially designed for students studying art in secondary schools. Judges, who are recommended by the Advisory Committee of the Educators, are themselves artists and educators who have an understanding of art education on the secondary level.

FHA (Future Homemakers of America) and HERO (Home Economics Related Occupations) will be celebrating National Vocational Education Week today through Saturday. The state theme for this year is "Youth Energy-Power for the 80's." Headed by Kelly Fleming, Renetta Smith, Elaine Tschetter and Marion Wilkes, the home economics department has several activities planned: red and white Day — The 155 FHA and HERO members will wear club colors along with paper turtles, which symbol-

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

Every year, a child who is siesl; and tired of a mother shoving this column into her face and shouting, "Read this! It's you!" will write and ask why I always take the parents' point of view and never the child's.

This year's writer is from Long Beach, Cal., and she says, "For so long you have written about children that do things that make their parents miserable, how about a few measly words to make parents feel like maybe they have done something right?" Signed: "T.H."

You're right, T.H. It must seem like there's no pleasing us. It's time for my yearly child-appreciation tribute.

Parents have done something right when they ask a child to bring them a glass of water from the kitchen and the child knows where the kitchen is.

They've done it when they get a birthday present on their birthday that their child has bought with his own money.

They've pulled it off when their child volunteers that she dropped the camera she borrowed and when the parents ask, "Have you any idea how much a camera like this cost and who is going to pay for it?" does... and will.

They've raised a winner when they point out to a son that his pants are ripped, his shirt is not ironed, the sole is coming off his shoe and his sweater is inside out, and he looks rotten... and he agrees with them.

It's a good day for any parent when their child speaks to them in public.

when they put gas in the car after they've used it, ask if you're watching a TV show before they flip the dial, do dishes when it isn't their night, and thank you for anything.

It's a good time for parents when their children tell them the truth when you're gonna kill 'em for it... answer their parents without saying, "What do you want?"... shut the door in the winter because it makes their dad smile, or respect their mother's cold as they do their own.

Good kids are like sunsets. We take 'em for granted. Every morning they rise. Every evening they disappear. Most parents in a single lifetime will never imagine how hard they try to please us and how miserable they feel when they think they have failed.

Take a good look at your kids. I mean really look at them. You've done a lot better than you think you did. Now, tell them.

Goken, Tardif In ECU Recital Monday

Selma Goken, cellist, and Paul Tardif, pianist, both members of the faculty of the East Carolina University School of Music, will perform in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall. There is no admission charge and seating will be on a first-come, first-seated basis.

For their recital, the two will perform a program consisting of compositions by five composers from the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries.

The first selection will be "Seven Variations on a Theme" of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," by Beethoven. This will be followed by the J.S. Bach "Suite for Violoncello solo in G major;" Schumann's "Fantasiestucke, Opus 73"; the Shostakovich "Sonata in D minor, Opus 40"; and Chopin's "Polonaise Brillante, Opus 3," arranged by Feuermann.

Ms. Goken, from Michigan, studied cello with Pierre Fourme of the Geneva Conservatory of Music in Switzerland, where she graduated with the first prize. Later she studied with Leonard Rose at The Juilliard School, where she was the recipient of the prestigious Walter Naumburg Scholarship. In January of this year, Ms. Goken was named first prize winner in the instrumental category of the N.C. Symphony Bryan Auditions in Raleigh, which will provide her, in addition to the prize money, with opportunities to perform with the North Carolina Symphony.

Tardif received his formal piano training with Cecile Genhart at the Eastman School of Music where he received the performer's certificate and a first prize in the International Piano Guild Competition. He has also toured as a guest pianist on a tour of Poland for the U.S. State Department, and studied in Munich, West Germany, as the recipient of a Fulbright. He holds the coveted artist's diploma from the Salzburg, Austria Mozarteum, and received his doctorate in music from Peabody Conservatory, studying with pianist Leon Fleisher.

Merce Cunningham Named Dance Award Recipient

DURHAM — Merce Cunningham has been selected to receive the 1982 Samuel H. Scripps-American Dance Festival Award. Announcement of the decision was made by Charles L. Reinhart, director of the American Dance Festival headquartered in Durham.

The $25,000 annual award was created to honor and to call public attention to modern dance choreographers who have made a significant, life-time contribution to dance.

Mr. Cunningham's revolutionary dances have inspired audiences to see and hear in completely new ways," Reinhart said about the selection of Cunningham for this year's award. "He has had a seminal influence on our new generation of choreographers, and his extraordinary work has played a critical role in assuring modern dances' pre-eminence in 20th century art."

The Scripps-ADF Award, established last year, with Martha Graham as its first recipient, represents the largest annual award presently offered in the performing arts.

Selections for the award are made by a panel of dance experts which this year consisted of Stuart Hodes, Anna Kisselgoff, Martha Meyers, Charles Reinhart and Samuel H. Scripps.

Cunningham will receive the award at a special presentation on June 16 at Duke University in Durham, the day before his dance company's residency opens at the 1982 American Dance Festival.

Seymour-Johnson AFB Subject Of TV Show

RALEIGH — Seymour-Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro is home to North Carolina's only squadron of B-52 bombers. On Friday, at 7:30 p.m. on the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television (Channel 25, Greenville), "Stalene" talks to the men who keep these planes in the air, and profiles one pilot who flew combat missions in Vietnam.

After years of congressional debate, the B-52 bomber is about to be replaced by the B-1. Military specialists have argued that the B-52 has become obsolete: too slow, too big a target for sophisticated defense systems.

Yet until the B-1 can be built and deployed, U.S. strategic forces depend on the B-52.

Lew Getlin goes to Seymour-Johnson Air Force Base to look at the history of its bomber squadron, and talks with Maj. Jim Phillips, a B-52 bomber pilot for the last 13 years.

In another story on Friday's program, "Stalene" goes to Winston-Salem to learn how one school system has significantly reduced its high school dropout rate over the past few years.

ALICE

ON TIC TAC DOUGH — Alice Freeman of Wilson is scheduled to appear as a contestant on the national TV game show, Tic Tac Dough, Monday at 7:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington. Mrs. Freeman, who lives in Kenly, is public information officer for the city of Wilson. She has served as a Freedom Force Ambassador in England and West Germany and is a member of the Wilson Arts Council. She is the mother of two children, a son and a daughter. She and her husband, Charles, were in California in January for taping of the show hosted by Wink Martindale.

Hospitality House

WASHINGTON — Irene Burke Harrell of Wilson, co-author of 37 publications, is the lead-off guest on Kay Currie's "Hospitality House," airing from noon to 12:30 p.m. Sunday over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington.

Mrs. Harrell's latest effort is a biography, "The General's Lady," written in cooperation with the subject, Mrs. Charlene Curry, wife of Maj. Gen. Jerry Curry. The book is published by Tyndale House in Illinois. Mrs. Harrell's husband, George Allen Harrell, will be on hand to talk about some of the people his wife writes about.

The second guest, from Greenville, is Air Force Col. (retired) Dick Blake, who will give a few remarks on his service years and will also discuss some of the major activities scheduled for the upcoming 75th anniversary of East Carolina University.

Today's kitchen guest is Virginia Creedle, agriculture extension agent of Beaufort County. She will demonstrate preparing an entire dinner in a pressure cooker. Also, Ms. Currie will provide details on a free cookbook to be given to the first 600 people who request it.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Lanford Wilson comedy "Fifth of July" reached its 500th performance on Broadway Jan. 19, at the New Apollo Theater, now starring Joseph Bottoms and Laraine Newman.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bank of America has become the current largest corporate benefactor of the School of American Ballet — the school affiliated with the New York City Ballet — with a donation of $49,250.

Young People's Concert Friday

The 14th annual Young People's Concert will be presented to students in the Greenville City Schools by the East Carolina Symphony Orchestra in Minges Coliseum at 1 p.m. Friday.

Robert Hause will conduct the orchestra. This annual series of concerts, begun in 1968, is especially designed for children in grades three through six. A popular feature of the concert is the "sing-along" part of the program, with students invited to sing with the orchestra in a number of patriotic, folk, or popular songs.

This year, in addition to the national anthem, Irving Berlin's patriotic song, "God Bless America," first performed publicly by Kate Smith on Armistice Day, 1938, will be one of the "sing-along" choices.

Two soloists will be on the program: Kevin Bagby, clarinetist, and Catherine Styron, pianist, both music majors at ECU. Bagby, a senior, and Ms. Styron, a junior, were selected as soloists by the music faculty in the annual concert competition.

Bagby will be soloist in the "Clarinet Concerto" by Mozart, and Ms. Styron will be piano soloist in the "Piano Concerto" by Schumann.

Other selections to be performed on the program include the "Danse Infernale" from Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite," the "Finale" from Dvorak's "New World Symphony," and a selection of Irving Berlin songs in a "Symphonic Portrait."

Charles Ross, director of elementary education in the city schools, and conductor

Hause both remarked they are pleased that this program has continued successfully for the past 14 years, affording enrichment for Greenville young people.

Big WOOW Classics

Hostess Karen Hause's WOOW Classic program from 10 until midnight Sunday night over WOOW Radio is a big collection of little pieces which she calls "A Little of This, a Little of That, From Early to Late."

Many public favorites are included in this group of small scale, colorful compositions on the light to welterweight scale in music.

The program opens with the Waverly Consort playing a selection of 17th century madrigals and airs, both vocal and instrumental. Next on the program is Pachelbel's "Suite in G Major for String Orchestra," to be followed by Telemann's "Concerto for Recorder, Horn and Continuo."

Jean-Pierre Rampal is soloist for the Bach piece on the program, his "Suite in d minor." Rossini is represented by the "Overture to 'Barber of Seville,'" and this will be followed by the lively "Lieutenant Kije Suite" by Prokofiev.

The final two compositions to be aired on Sunday night's WOOW Classics will be a duo of American audience favorites, Aaron Copland's "Appalachian Spring" and the British composer Ralph Vaughn-Williams' "Fantasia on Greensleeves."

Anniversary Brochures Ready

By CHANCY KAPP
N.C. Department of Cultural Resources
RALEIGH — Almost 400 years ago, English settlers first came ashore on the North American Continent on the beaches of Roanoke Island. But they were far from the first people to appreciate the rich land of what is now North Carolina. Coastal Indians had developed a thriving culture. Their language, customs and heritage are topics for the first major products of the publications program of America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee (AFHAC). The committee, appointed by Governor Jim Hunt to plan the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the Roanoke voyages of 1584-87, is now distributing eight illustrated folders about Indian life in the 16th century.

Each folder covers a specific topic, including foods, agriculture, words and place names, dress, architecture, canoes, religion and fishing and hunting. Each includes a poster based on the well-known painting of John White, governor of the "Lost Colony" of 1587 and a highly respected artist. David Stick of Dare County, author of several books and member of AFHAC, researched and wrote the texts for the folders. He worked largely from such sources as Thomas Harriot's "Briefe and True Report of the New Found Land, of Virginia" and accounts by John White, Ralph Lane and other colonists. "The publications subcommittee of AFHAC designed these folders with students in mind, but we hope they will help interest all North Carolinians in what happened on North Carolina's shores 400 years ago," according to Stick.

"It's fitting that this first series be about the Indians, our first North Carolinians. There are some tremendously exciting archaeological digs going on at Indian sites in the northeast."

Rich Hendel of the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill designed the folders, which were printed by Winston Printers. Members of AFHAC are distributing them free to schools, libraries and other institutions and to the general public.

Other projects of the publications subcommittee, which is chaired by William Powell of Chapel Hill, include a new volume of the paintings of John White, a concise popular history of the Roanoke voyages and pamphlets about the Elizabethan Age in England and America.

"The publications program is comprehensive and exciting," according to John Nevill, executive secretary of AFHAC. "It's an important beginning to the extensive celebration committee members are planning. We want three full years of activity, from the summer of 1984 through 1987, and we want every citizen of North Carolina to be involved."

The first official project will be a visit on April 27, 1984 by an American delegation to Plymouth, England, from which Philip Amadas' Roanoke expedition set sail 400 years earlier. An English delegation is due in Manteo on July 13, 1984, the quadricentennial of the landing of that expedition.

The date is also scheduled for the commissioning of a sailing ship built in the style of the 16th century, a project already underway under the supervision of the American Quadricentennial Corporation, a private, non-profit group affiliated with AFHAC.

For details about publications and other activities of AFHAC, contact John Neville, Executive Secretary, America's Four Hundredth Anniversary Committee, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611, telephone (919) 733-4788.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedgewood Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors and dentists' offices and an athletic center. As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard. Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms. And, that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too. Take the floorplans, they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself. # Book News

By JUNE PARKER

Among new science books at Sheppard Memorial Library, several deserve special attention.

Little scientific background is necessary to understand Robert Jaslow's new book, "The Enchanted Loom," a well-crafted account of the evolution of mammalian brain and intelligence. This third volume in his trilogy, "Red Giants and White Dwarfs" and "Until the Sun Dies," traces the growth of intelligence and brain size through millions of years to the present day.

Jaslow sees the brain as complex circuitry that operates with amazing flexibility and accepts the old split-brain theory by which the superior reasoning ability is pitted against the old mammal or reptile that lurks within. He leans toward a purposive view of evolution, an onward and upward progression propelled by slow, inexorable Darwinian selection. The book ends with a thought-provoking but optimistic discussion of the symbiotic relationship between humans and a product of their intelligence—the computer.

Robert Jaslow's ability to convey to the reader the importance and excitement of what he is saying is well-demonstrated in this latest book.

Martin Gardner takes a skeptical look at extraordinary scientific claims in his book, "Science Good, Bad and Bogus." In the collection of articles and book reviews of the past 30 years, science writer Gardner examines the variety of pseudoscientific conjunctures which dominate the modern media. He discusses the evidence provided by research in such areas as healing, precognition, and psychic surgery.

He emphasizes the need for better controls in parapsychological research and the even greater need for better public understanding of the difference between good and bad science.

David Attenborough's "Life on Earth: A Natural History," which is based on the British BBC television import, traces life on earth from its precellular beginnings to the emergence of homo sapiens. Using both fossil and living evidence, Attenborough tells the story of the earliest ancestors of each form of life. He is a story writer who manages to make his story both lively and detailed. The reader is immediately involved in the author's enthusiastic presentation of the variety and history of life on this planet.

Pitt To Receive 82-83 Arts Funds

RALEIGH—As much as $13,244 may become available to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council in fiscal year 1982-83 through the Grassroots Arts Program, according to Jack LeSueur, liaison for the N.C. Arts Council to Pitt and other N.C. counties.

The money will be available to assist incorporated tax-exempt organizations in carrying out arts programs which are due to take place between July 1, 1982 and June 30, 1983. Requests will require a matching amount of cash, although the match does not necessarily have to be used for the same project.

Grassroots applications from the county's arts organizations should be directed to the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, P.O. Box 8191, Greenville, 27834, attention: Elizabeth Stewart (telephone 757-1785) and to the Grassroots Arts Program, N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C., 27611.

In past years, LeSueur noted, all Pitt County applications have been sent only to Raleigh, but this year the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council will coordinate all requests.

The Grassroots Arts Program provides per capita funds to be spent for the arts at the local level. The county allocations are calculated at a rate of 14.62 cents per person, based on the amount the state Arts Council expects to receive from the state legislature. The program was established in 1977.

Makuck's Prose Is Poetry

A Review

Breaking And Entering. By Peter Makuck. Urbana, Ill. University of Illinois Press, Urbana, Chicago, London. 172 pages. Hardback, $11.95. Paper, $ . . .

If the purpose of poetry is to reveal that a book has more pages than has been written, then this prose is poetry. It is not prosaic.

To use an analogy in reviewing, assume the book is resting upon the earth's surface as if it were a newly constructed apartment building. The front cover is the eastern basement and the back cover (facing up) is the flat roof of this construction which is ten stories high.

The name of this ten-story structure is "Breaking and Entering," and each story has its own name, resident characters, and reader-guests. The ground floor or first story, "Assumption," and the tenth story, "Private Flights," represent the portals at which most reader-guests respectively enter and exit "Breaking and Entering," but the author/architect has created a structure which permits a poetic thief to invade the privacy and comfort of each reader-guest's rooms of thought—regardless of which story they temporarily dwell within.

The residents include a range of characters: big city blue collar workers, red-necks, country clods, rural sages, urban sophisticates, intellectuals, pseudo-sophisticates striving to move to non-existent pent-houses, and more than a few northerners moved south. In addition to the ubiquitous thief, the spectres of death, sex, hate-in-the-name-of-god, and an occasional snake seem to find their way into many of the stories.

Each of the ten stories has its uniqueness, and an initial reading of the first few give the impression that none have endings. It is as if the stairway leading from one story to the next suddenly stops . . . leaving the reader suspended . . . in space.

It is as if the stairs were one of those disappearing attic-suspended stairways and the reader-guest, snapped up in it, is not certain whether she/he has been transported to the ceiling of the lower level or the floor of the higher. (No doubt, this is where the asymptotic thief enters and exits each story).

There are other observations, of course. Each story has its own level of drama, and each reader—especially those who reside in the same region as author Makuck—will recognize places from which some of his stories are created. Those who elect to enter the first levels of a ten-story journey will know they follow the trail of a not-so-petty thief. For this poetic crook never goes straight to the point, but steals about at all levels. Breaks, enters, invades the privacy of each reader's room of thought, seems to take nothing, and get leaves . . . more room . . . for thought. Makes you wonder whether "Breaking and Entering" is prosaically wise or . . . maybe . . . other-wise.

Writers Club Meets Tuesday

The first meeting of the Writers Club for the month of February will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Hannon, 201 Courtney Place, Lake Ellsworth Subdivision. Anyone interested in any form of creative writing is invited to attend. There are no fees involved except for an occasional small contribution from those attending—i.e., to cover annual membership dues as a member of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Attended Poetry Meet

GRIFTON—Jane Lambert and Maxine Harker attended the North Carolina Haiku Society's Haiku Holiday held Jan. 30 in Chapel Hill.

The two are part of the 60-member organization which meets annually at Bolin-Brook Farm. Members specialize in the universally known Japanese short-poetry form known as Haiku, three-line, unrhymed verses arranged in a five-syllable, seven-syllable, five-syllable pattern free of didactic comment.

Jane Lambert has been a winner in several national Haiku contests recently. Among these have been second place in the Zen category of The Western World Haiku Society; first place in the "Dragonfly Quarterly" contest for January; and third place in a capping line contest held in January.

She was also the winner-take all in a "One-Page-Haiku" contest, won a Reader's Choice award in the Brussels Sprout magazine, and an honorable mention award in the 1981 North Carolina Poetry Society contest, haiku category. She has been published in the magazines Dragonfly, Wind Chimes and Brussels Sprout.

Ms. Lambert and Ms. Harker are members of the North Carolina Poetry Society and are students of the creative writing class at Pitt Community College.

GOREN BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF
1981 by Chicago Tribune

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—In a rubber bridge game the other night, the following sequence cropped up:

NORTH SOUTH

I had an absolute maximum for my two spade raise, so I went on to game. The opponents doubled and set us two tricks vulnerable. It turned out that partner had a weak opening bid with a six-card spade suit. He claimed that his bid of three spades was preemptive. I maintained that, according to your writings, it showed extra values and invited a game. Please back me up!—R. Steinfeld, Philadelphia, Pa.

(This question has been awarded the weekly prize.)

A.—You are both right. In the old days of contract, a raise by opener of his own suit was invitational, asking partner to go on to game if he held a maximum raise. Therefore, I do not blame you for bidding four spades, since you had no specific agreement with your partner to the contrary.

In recent years, however, there have been tremendous strides in bidding. Bidding theory has developed faster than any other facet of the game. Experts found that they really didn't need a raise to three spades in the sequence you give as an invitational bid—there were other ways to inquire about partner's strength. These methods include an inquiry about partner's holding in a specific suit rather than general strength.

Instead of rebidding his suit, if opener is interested in game, he makes a "trial bid" in a new suit. That asks responder to evaluate his holding in that suit for game purposes. A high honor or a singleton are of great value to opener, and if responder has such a holding he jumps to game. Three or four low cards in the suit are the worst possible holding that responder could have, so he signs off by returning to three of the agreed suit.

What if opener has a balanced hand and simply wants responder to evaluate his overall values for game? Opener can simply make a trial bid of two no trump. With a maximum, responder is free to bid game either in the agreed trump suit or in no trump.

With the increased use of "trial bids," the raise of opener's suit was no longer needed as an invitational bid and was freed for other purposes. In tournament bridge especially, most players use that bid as preemptive—an attempt to shut the opponents out of the auction rather than to get to game yourself. Partner must pass—he has no other option.

As an example of a preemptive raise in the sequence you give, consider this hand:

♠AJxxx ♥x ♦Q10x ♣Axx

Chances of your side making game are little to nothing. Your hand is riddled with losers and, barring a miracle, partner can't cover enough of them. In addition, his raise has weakened your defensive prospects. If you pass two spades, the odds are that the opponents will balance—from your hand, they might even make four hearts. So you raise to three spades to make it more difficult for them to enter the auction—since their strength rates to be evenly divided, you should keep them out.

Sweet Adelines Attended Event

Four members of the prospective Eastern Carolina Chapter of Sweet Adelines Inc. attended Region 14's annual membership meeting in Williamsburg, Va., last weekend.

The four attending were Mary Koonce, president; Janet Rodgers, vice president; Violet Blackwelder, secretary, and Helen Turner, membership chairman.

New officers were elected to the regional board of directors for the fiscal year which begins May 1.

Blue Ridge Region 14 is composed of several chapters and nine prospective chapters in North Carolina and chapters in Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina and Georgia and one chapter in Tennessee.

Ann Gooch, of the group's international board in Tulsa, Okla., led seminars on Friday and Saturday. On Saturday the Kooky Quartet Contest was followed by a performance given by Public Times Chapter, the host chapter for the meeting.

Life As It's Lived

By GAIL MICHAELS

A lot of people around my neck of the woods carry their preoccupation with hair to ridiculous lengths. Little girls must have long hair, little boys must have short hair, and parents who allow their children to differ from this norm are suspect, to say the least.

I was at a disadvantage from the moment I moved to this community because, at the time, Meg had a precious pixie haircut which just covered the top half of her ears. "What a darling little boy!" people would comment.

People make mistakes. I was not hostile. But I did gently correct them. "Girl," I would say.

The nicer would apologize or laugh about how hard it is to tell a child's sex at that age. The others would look at me as if I were chanting Hari Krishna.

This didn't bother me particularly, but Meg, having always had a preference for long hair, told me with her usual flair for overstatement that if she were mistaken for a boy just one more time, she would have to cover her head with a paper bag and go off to live as a hermit in a cave. I have since learned to endure her straggly mop, in the middle stages of growing out, with uncharacteristic stoicism.

Although I was deprived of the delight I took in Meg's thick golden cap of hair, I could still, until recently, enjoy Zachary's baby curls. I adore baby curls and I thought they looked especially cunning on my own fat cherub. But public opinion was again against me. Zachary was barely a year old when a strange woman sitting next to me in the doctor's office asked, "When are you going to cut his curls?"

I smiled. "Not until I absolutely have to." She patted the stubble on her own toddler's head. "I don't like curls on little boys."

Phillip's opinion was against me, too. He wasn't too fond of getting compliments on his adorable baby daughter. By this time I didn't even bother to set anybody straight, and that galled him, too. "Don't you think it's time we had his hair cut?" he ventured last week. "It's getting stringy."

I glared at him. "It is not. It's wispy."

"It's stringy, Gail, face it. Let me take him to my barber, and I'll get it trimmed."

The thought of my innocent babe in the harsh atmosphere of a barber shop filled me with dread. But I was afraid Phillip might take him on the sly, so I broke down and took Zachary to my hairdresser instead. At least she didn't have an electric shaver.

traumatize one so young. "Maybe if he sat in your lap. Now how much to you want cut?"

I reluctantly fingered the end of a curl. "About that much. I don't want him scalped."

"It's hardly worth cutting a fourth of an inch. Let me cut an inch. I assure you that he'll have plenty of hair left."

I was dubious. With some effort I held poor Zachary still while the plastic cape covered him.

ering us both. My hairdresser was callous enough to laugh. "Gail, if you don't stop that you'll rust my scissors."

"When the ordeal was over, I called Phillip. 'I hope you're happy. He doesn't even look like a baby any more.'"

"Did he behave?" "Yes."

"Did you?" "Do you really expect me to answer a patronizing question like that?" I sniffed, hoping that the effect was one of haughty grandeur.

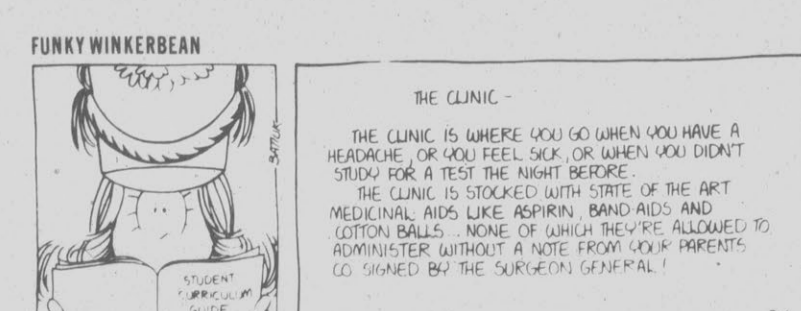

"Don't bother. I know the answer already."

Church Honors Teacher

Miss Sandra Carol Moore of Greenville, a teacher at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, was honored Saturday night at Wells Chapel Church of God in Christ for outstanding service to church and community.

Sponsors of the program were the Young Adult Choir of Wells Chapel and the music department of the Church of God in Christ of Greater North Carolina.

Miss Moore has taught in the local school system for a number of years and has served in various capacities with the music department of the Church of God in Christ.

A number of local and area choirs and singing groups paid musical tributes to Miss Moore during the program.

She is a graduate of N.C. Central University and has completed additional studies at East Carolina University. Miss Moore holds memberships in various professional organizations and is active in local civic and church affairs.

Center Holds Graduation

Graduation exercises were held Wednesday for 24 clients of the Greenville Pre-Release and Aftercare Center. The graduation was held at and sponsored by the Bachelor Benedict Club, with John Bizzell coordinating the event.

Graduates, members of their families, community volunteers and the PRAC staff attended. Guest speaker was the Rev. Howard W. Parker of Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

PRAC provides training for inmates housed for this program in the correctional unit in Martin County, near Williamston. They commute by bus to Greenville five days weekly.

The PRAC program focuses on needs of the individual in daily life, including adult basic education, family planning, job interviewing, and other areas. Completing the program does not guarantee parole, but it does provide inmates with useful information for the time when they will be paroled.

Black Tuesday Sweeps Away Savings

The personal dramas of average citizens, "jazz babies" and legendary Wall Street wizards are chronicled, as events lead to the calamitous crash of a skyrocketing, manipulated stock market, in "The Day the Bubble Burst." The film, adapted from the best seller by Gordon Thomas and Max Morgan-Witts, will be broadcast as the NBC Sunday Night at the Movies, Feb. 7 (8-11 p.m.).

In the story, astrologer Evangeline Adams (Audra Lindley) tells the world the market is going up, and Wall St. plunger and General Motors founder William Crapo Durant (David Ogden Stiers) persuades President Herbert Hoover (Franklin Cover) that credit controls on the buying of stock will depress the market. Consequently, people from all walks of life assemble their life savings to buy stock on a 90 percent margin.

Yet Jesse Livermore (Richard Crenna) — "king of the bears" — is convinced the market is overpriced and tries to push it down for his own profit. An amoral womanizer, Livermore devotes himself to flappers and finance, while his wife, Dorothy (Caroline McWilliams), drinks away her frustrations. His machinations contribute importantly to the crash on Black Tuesday, Oct. 29, 1929, and while fortunes and life savings are swept away, Livermore makes $30 million by selling short.

Also affected are Ivy Leaguer Gregory Winslow (Robert Hays), who marries flapper par excellence Frances Pierce (Laurette Spang) in one of the most lavish ceremonies in years. Products of the Jazz Age, they expect to lead carefree, hedonistic lives forever.

Richard Whitney (Robert Vaughn), acting president of the New York Stock Exchange, speculates and overextends himself until it is necessary for him to get a loan. On the day of the crash, he is powerless and surrounded by utter chaos.

Vaughn described his character as "having life credits that might be listed as Groton, Harvard and Sing Sing." The actor noted his preference for films based on true stories, but added, "As for economics, my mind doesn't absorb numbers at all. I leave the family finances to my wife."

Bubble Burst," airing Sunday, Feb. 7 (8-11 p.m.), on NBC-TV.

New scenes of bullet-fast danger and leaps of astonishing adventure never seen before highlight the television premiere of "Superman," which will air in two parts on The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Feb. 7, and The ABC Monday Night Movie, Feb. 8 (8-10 p.m. both nights).

Christopher Reeve, who was hurled into international stardom by the same explosion that made shrapnel of the planet Krypton, is starred as the Man of Steel. Also starring in the film that critic Rex Reed called "an exciting, rollicking, cinematic blockbuster to bring out the child in every age group" are Marlon Brando, Gene Hackman, Margot Kidder and Valerie Perrine.

LOVE DOESN'T HAVE WINGS, but it does lift Lois Lane and Superman aloft when Margot Kidder and Christopher Reeve star in "Superman," airing in two parts, Sunday, Feb. 7 and Monday, Feb. 8 (8-10 p.m., both nights), on ABC-TV.

The story begins just before the planet Krypton falls tragically into its own sun, and the wise Jor-El (Brando) launches his infant son on a journey to the planet Earth (the American Midwest, as it turns out). The infant, adopted by the grassroots American Kent family, grows up to be the All-American Boy times infinity: doing everything right, for the right reasons, and doing everything considerably better than any normal boy should.

In young manhood, Clark Kent — for such is his adopted name — leaves home for a strange psychic journey of the mind, traveling from the Arctic North through the universe on a 12-year trip under Jor-El's spiritual guidance. Now prepared to meet his destiny — and get a job — the young man winds up as a goodhearted if tiresomely mild-mannered reporter on the Daily Planet newspaper in Metropolis. Reporting the news is not all-consuming and when troubles befall the citizens of Metropolis, Kent sheds his conservative business suit to reappear in the flashing blue cape of Superman.

AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOM

Necktie Cleaning

When was the last time you had one of your neckties cleaned? Can you even remember? A CLEANER WORLD GARMENT CARE CENTER suggests that you have all of your neckties dry cleaned occasionally. Dirt can break down the fibers in a tie and cause the fabric to weaken.

Many of today's ties are made of silk. Dry cleaning is recommended for these fine neckties because many contain water-soluble dyes. Hence, if a silk necktie is cleaned in water, the dye will bleed.

Drycleaned silk neckties will retain their original color. The salt in perspiration and in many foods and beverages can weaken silk. Frequent professional cleaning will insure that salts will not remain in your ties, and will not be able to weaken the fabric.

A CLEANER WORLD GARMENT CARE CENTER suggests you bring all of your neckties in to them to keep them looking their best.

Michele Will Tell

Q: Could you please tell me why Laura Spencer (Genie Francis) is going off "General Hospital"? SHANNON VESTAL, LEXINGTON, N.C.

A: Despite all efforts by network officials and fans to keep Genie Francis from quitting "General Hospital," she decided to leave her sexy Laura Spencer role. "I'm sorry that I've missed out on a regular childhood," she explains. "It is time for me to pay attention to Genie Francis the person instead of Genie Francis the actress."

Q: Can you tell me if Jamie Lyn Bauer of "The Young And The Restless" is any relation to Mike Bauer on "Guiding Light"? L. JOHNSON, GOLDSBORO, N.C.

A: Actor Don Stewart, Mike Bauer on "Guiding Light," and Jamie Lyn Bauer on "The Young And The Restless," are 'not' related.

Q: Why is CBS letting "Search For Tomorrow" go off their station? M.S., FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

A: CBS decided to drop "Search For Tomorrow," because they weren't holding up in the ratings race. In its place, "Capitol," a new half-hour series centering on two ambitious Washington, D.C., families, will premiere on Monday, March 29 at 2:30 p.m. John Conboy, the executive producer of the popular CBS daytime series "The Young And The Restless," will produce "Capitol" for John Conboy Productions.

Q: Could you please give me some information on Andrew Stevens of "Code Red"? Also where can I write to him? C.B., HICKORY, N.C.

A: Andrew was born in Memphis, Tennessee, to famous actress Stella "Flamingo Road" Stevens. As a matter of fact, her co-star, Morgan Fairchild, can now be seen with Andrew in the feature film "The Seduction." During his teenage years, Andrew was a drummer with a rock 'n' roll band. In addition to his current role of Ted Rorchech in "Code Red," he has continued and expanded his music career, to that of singer-songwriter. He recorded two original compositions for the Warner Bros.-Curb label in 1979, and has written and recorded a song for "Code Red" entitled "750 cc."

Q: Could you please tell me a few of the married couples in which both the male and female are very popular TV or musical stars? KELLY GRANGER, HENDERSON, N.C.

A: We've got numerous divorced, separated and live-in couples — married are harder to find. Here's a few: Captain and Tennille, Gil "Buck Rogers" Gerard and Connie "Greatest American Hero" Selleca, Sammy and Altovise Davis, Steve and Eydie Gorme, and Gary Collins and Mary Ann Mobley.

Entertains In Style

Kim Fields, of "The Facts of Life," is entertaining in her family's newly converted garage. Kim paid $10,000 to panel the walls, install hardwood floors and build a disc jockey booth so she and her friends can roller skate in style.

Home Is His Castle

When viewers of "As the World Turns" watch characters Tom Hughes and Margo Montgomery (played by Justin Deas and Margaret Colin) entering the castle stronghold of drug kingpin "Mr. Big" early in February, they won't really be in the French countryside. The castle sequences were taped recently in and around Gillette Castle, in Haddam, Conn. - a fully detailed castle, full of hidden rooms and deviously placed staircases, built by early 20th-century actor-writer-director William Gillette, known for his portrayal of Sherlock Holmes on the stage. What more appropriate place could there be to solve a mystery?

Winning Combination

What do you get when you mix English, French, Irish, Scotch and Welsh together? The answer is an extraordinary blonde, beautiful, green-eyed woman named Elizabeth Montgomery.

"I'm a strange mixture," says Elizabeth, who is the daughter of actor Robert Montgomery and stage actress Elizabeth Allen.

This "strange mixture" has produced a winning combination of challenges and successes for the talented actress. She has appeared in more than 250 television shows and feature films and has received numerous Emmy nominations for her performances.

For instance, there were her moving performances in the much acclaimed "A Case of Rape," the title role in "The Legend of Lizzie Borden," and her portrayal of a pioneer woman in "The Awakening Land."

Now Elizabeth can be seen in another challenging role — one that demanded great emotional and physical strength. She stars as Catherine McSweeney in "Act of Violence," airing as the CBS Late Movie, Friday, Feb. 12 (11:30 p.m.). She plays a victim of a brutal mugging whose beliefs suddenly become challenged by the devastating experience.

The drama is based on a teleplay by Robert Collins. "Robert is an excellent writer, and I think he's done a fine job with this script," she said. "He's written about an intelligent woman who has certain views that she has grown up with. The 180-degree turn that she takes because of her experience is really interesting."

Besides the emotional challenges of the role, there were also some very physical ones.

The scene in which Elizabeth gets mugged took a lot of stamina, and the concern for authenticity made it particularly rough.

When the mugging scene was completed, there was a moment of stunned silence. Then a thunderous round of applause from the cast and crew was bestowed upon Elizabeth Montgomery, an accolade for a rare combination of brains, talent and beauty.

Cornbread's Mixing It Up

Cedric Maxwell used to be called "Cornbread" when he played his collegiate basketball at the University of North Carolina - Charlotte. Maxwell may have outgrown his nickname after being drafted by the Boston Celtics in 1977, 12th pick in the first round, but it is unlikely that this forward will ever outgrow the intensity of play that earned him the Most Valuable Player title in last year's playoff finals. Although he missed several games last month due to a bruised right knee, Maxwell will be in the lineup when the Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers clash on Sunday, Feb. 7, noon-2:30 p.m. Rick Stockton and Bill Russell will provide the commentary for the game, which will be broadcast on the NBA on CBS. Maxwell began to develop his prowess inside when he was at UNCC and his accuracy has continued in the NBA. Maxwell led the league in field-goal percentage in two of the last three seasons, and he finished third last year, 588 percent, primarily due to the emergence of center Robert Parish. At 7 feet, Parish, who was acquired from the Golden State Warriors last season, has become the focal point of the Celtics' inside thrust. Maxwell has adapted well. With Parish tying up the opponents' big men, Maxwell has been taking the longer shot. Before suffering his bruised knee against the New Jersey Nets, Maxwell scored in double digits in 6 straight games. His shooting percentage going into February was 55.4.

Pike's Peek

HOLLYWOOD — A two-hour special dramatizing the courtship of England's PRINCE CHARLES and LADY DIANA will be filmed for airing by ABC-TV next fall. Titled "Charles and Diana: A Royal Love Story," the film will be released theatrically overseas. Production is scheduled to start June 1 in London.

MERRIE LYNN ROSS, star on "General Hospital," is going crazy trying to find the name of an admirer who left a classic '56 Cadillac in her driveway on Christmas with a note saying "Because I Love You, Guess Who."

After an absence of twenty years everyone is talking about LORETTA YOUNG'S return to television. The still beautiful LORETTA is set to star in two movies — each based on a "woman of the world" — one will deal with the first woman president of the U.S. and the other will be a true-life story about Mother Angelica, a pioneer in satellite broadcasting.

"NIGHT OF 100 STARS" (actually there will be 150 stars performing for the Actors Fund of America Feb. 14 at Radio City Music Hall in N.Y.) will be telecast March 8 on ABC. Stars participating will receive the royal treatment, each will be given two round-trip air tickets, plus limousines, and luxurious accommodations at the Helmsley Palace — flowers in their suites and all the room service they want.

An afternoon visit to EDD JACOB'S Fur Couture in Beverly Hills proved to be very interesting — BARBRA STREISAND was there buying not just one but several mink scarves in various shades. Also, TINA TURNER was buying a full length chinchilla coat for about 25 thousand — and then came KENNY ROGERS — EDD'S best customer — who has bought all of wife MARRIANNE'S full length fur coats there — to buy her a Russian Sable full length cape.

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

Wants to be a funny girl.

FOR CHARLENE TILTON, star of Dallas

If you could have any celebrity as your friend, who would it be and why? —S.F., Durham, N.C.

● Barbra Streisand. To me, she's the epitome of professionalism and talent. I'd love to sit down and talk with her for hours about her career. One of my goals is to follow in her footsteps and excel in every phase of the entertainment world — films, theater, music. She's changed with the times, having one hit after another, alone and with such people as Neil Diamond, Barry Gibb and Donna Summer. I'd like to do the same thing with Elton John, Olivia Newton-John and John Travolta. Listening to her advice would be wonderful, not only because I respect her, but because I like her too.

FOR ROBERT W. GARDNER, professor of animal science, Brigham Young University
How does your Rent-a-Cow program work? —D.G., Beachwood, N.J.

● Cows in the B.Y.U. dairy herd are rented to students each year. Students pay a cow rental of 14 percent on all gross milk receipts, but an incentive program lowers that figure if cows conceive within 90 days of calving.

FOR ALEXANDER H. COHEN, producer of ABC TV's upcoming Night of 100 Stars

What sets stars apart from starlets or featured players? Are stars born or created? —H.M., Albany, N.Y.

● A star works harder than all the rest at his or her craft and has that extra spark of stage or screen presence, heavily sprinkled with personality. Stars may turn into superstars with hard work and the good fortune to win the right role at the right time.

FOR MARSHA HARTSTEIN, fashion consultant
Does the term "petite" refer to height or width, and why do such women find it so difficult to find clothes? —D.L., Bremerton, Wash.

● The fashion industry generally refers to "petite" as those women who are 5 feet 3 inches and under. Whether the petite woman is a size 3 or 14, she has a problem of proportional fit, beyond the simple taking up of a hem or shortening of a sleeve.

FROM THE "ASK" EDITOR

Gloria Monty, producer of General Hospital, recently shared her formula for a successful soap: "The success of any show — whether it takes place in 1900 or 2000 — lies in interesting and credible story lines. Whether characters wear space suits or hoop skirts, walk on their own feet or float through the air, an audience responds to human problems."

When Christopher Norris, Nurse "Ripples" on Trapper John, M.D., peeks in the mirror, she does not see the pretty image TV viewers see. "My nose is too tiny, ears too small, cheekbones too high," she grumbles. "Each time I look at myself, I find something else wrong — waist too low, shoulders too broad, legs too long. I wish I could redo the whole lot." ... Sally Field, star of Absence of Malice, was plucked from an array of 55 top actresses as the National Association of Theater Owners's Female Star of the Year. ... Actor Klaus Kinski, father of Nastassia Kinski (star of Tess), celebrated his role in Billy Wilder's new film, Buddy, by applying for U.S. citizenship. ... Patti D'Arbanville, co-star of Modern Problems, is another former model who decided she preferred the screen (she used to be with the Wilhelmina agency and was featured in Francesco Scavullo's book, Scavullo on Beauty). ... Word is that the outrageous John Belushi-Dan Aykroyd movie, Neighbors, will evolve into a TV spin-off. ... Quipped 5-foot Sally chosen tops in her field.

Norris

7-inch TV host Dick Cavett, who emceed at a recent New York Press Club function, "It's very flattering how high they left the microphone." ... Barry Gibb of the Bee Gees seems to be very excited about playing the role of Lord Byron in a multimillion-dollar movie version of the poet's strange life and loves. "I've been waiting a long time for the right kind of part, something I really believed in," says Barry. "That's why I chose Byron — a man who overcame personal problems and forged boldly ahead." ... Broadway actor Armand Assante, maintains women are much more frightened of playing love scenes than men are. ... Richard Benjamin explains why we haven't seen his mug on the wide screen of late — his interests are broadening. "I'm the latest in the list of actors who want to give directing a whirl," he confides.

All taxes have bad effects. But the least bad tax has all taxpayers, except for the poor, pay the same low tax rate. Therefore, I favor a flat tax of 19 percent on all income above a standard deduction. The flat tax will raise enough revenue to replace all income taxes. High tax rates from a progressive tax are destructive for two reasons. They stimulate costly tax-avoidance schemes and they discourage the productive efforts of businesses and workers.

No. A flat-rate tax would be a bonanza for the rich. Most people rightly believe that the financially comfortable can afford a larger tax bite than can the poor, but they deplore the use of loopholes to avoid taxes. By closing loopholes and imposing a mildly progressive tax ranging from 10 to 35 percent, we can increase fairness, reduce distortions and still maintain existing revenue. We can repeal foolish tax provisions without sacrificing fairness.

Heartsounds! New Hope For Coronary Victims

Dramatic new developments in drug therapy, surgery and diagnosis have led to a sharp decline in heart-disease deaths—and doctors say the prognosis for the future is even brighter.

By Gloria Hochman

Frank was in his doctor's office for his once-a-year physical check-up when the chest pain came. He had experienced chest discomfort before, but this time it was different. "It was a crushing, pushing feeling that almost paralyzed me," Frank says. "And it spread like a forest fire to my neck, my shoulder, my arm. I lost my breath." Frank was having a heart attack, his first one.

Fortunately, the large university hospital across the street had a fully-staffed cardiac catheterization laboratory. Within several hours, Frank had undergone a cardiac catheterization (a test which revealed that he had a large blood clot in a coronary artery) and was treated with streptokinase, a drug that was able to break up the clot and prevent heart damage.

●Melissa has suffered with angina (chest pain) for years. It is not the typical angina, however, that comes as a result of effort or exertion. Melissa's pain occurs when she is resting; in fact, it often awakens her at 2 A.M. It seems to be unrelated to stress and generally occurs in cycles.

For the past several months, Melissa has been participating in an experimental program through which she receives nifedipine, which belongs to a new classification of drugs known as calcium-channel blockers. Melissa is now experiencing astonishing relief from her nocturnal angina attacks.

●Michael has suffered from palpitations of his heart for 15 years. In the past, his heart would race so fast for so long that Michael felt as though it would pop through his chest. Other times he was certain it would stop beating. "How long can a heart do that without wearing out?" he asked. Today, because of a space-age technique administered to him in the electrophysiology laboratory of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, Michael's erratic heartbeats are controlled.

Cardiovascular disease, which includes clogged coronary arteries, hypertension, abnormal heart rhythm, stroke, damaged heart valves and congenital heart defects, is the country's number one killer, ranking far ahead of cancer. It is responsible for nearly one million deaths per year; heart attacks alone claim the lives of 550,000 Americans annually.

Coronary artery disease — the buildup of fatty and fibrous material in the inner linings of arteries that carry blood to the heart — is the leading cause of heart attacks. The blockages in arteries may become so thick that they partially or totally cut off blood flow and prevent oxygen from reaching the heart muscle. Without oxygen, the heart muscle becomes damaged or dies.

But dramatic breakthroughs, such as those that helped Frank, Melissa and Michael, are contributing to a sharp decrease in heart-disease deaths. In fact, during the past 10 years, the death rate from heart attacks has dropped a comforting 25 percent. Experts in the field are convinced that new developments will reduce the death rate even further and offer hope to those who suffer from heart problems.

Heart Attack

It is during the first year following an acute heart attack that the possibility of dying is the greatest — a 15 percent chance. During the next five years, the risk of mortality drops to 5 percent a year. Now there are three drugs that seem able to significantly increase the odds of survival after the first heart attack.

Based on a meticulously conducted Norwegian study, timolol was found to sharply reduce the death risk for patients who took it after suffering a heart attack. Because timolol interferes with the transmission of nervous impulses that trigger elevated blood pressure and a speed-up in the pulse rate, it can reduce a dangerous workload on the heart. The study included 1,884 patients, took three years and showed a 40-percent death-rate reduction during that time. The drug, which is marketed as Blocadren, was recently approved by the Food and Drug Administration (F.D.A.).

Another drug, metoprolol, tested in Sweden but not yet marketed here (except for treatment of high blood pressure), also seems to substantially decrease mortality within 90 days of receiving treatment, a period of time during which heart-attack victims are especially vulnerable.

And a study of the drug propranolol (marketed as Inderal), which included 3,837 men and women between 30 and 60 who had had heart attacks, showed that the patients who received propranolol had a 26 percent lower mortality rate than a control group that did not, the greatest difference coming in the first year after the heart attack. It isn't known whether the drug would be effective if begun months or years after a person has had a heart attack.

Streptokinase, the drug which broke up Frank's blood clot, is an exciting, still experimental substance that seems able to halt a heart attack in progress. The problem is that it must be administered quickly, within a few hours after the attack begins.

"The timing is critical," says Dr. William Likoff, president and chief executive officer of Philadelphia's Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital. "Unfortunately most heart-attack victims do not recognize their symptoms, get to a hospital that has the appropriate facilities and get treated in time. So its use for this purpose is still limited." And once the clot has been dissolved with streptokinase, there may still be a narrowed coronary artery that will require further treatment.

Angina

Angina is the gripping chest pain experienced by hundreds of thousands of Americans with coronary artery disease. During the past 10 years, the condition has been treated successfully with coronary bypass surgery and with medication known as beta-blockers (propranolol is a beta-blocker). Now, some physicians are saying that the calcium-channel blockers, also known as calcium-antagonists, will become the therapy of choice for patients with certain types of angina.

A complete collection of the 100 most significant stamps ever issued—each portrayed in remarkable micro-detail by The Franklin Mint.

And you can acquire these sterling silver miniature stamps—at just $4.75 each by entering your subscription now.

Your eye is first attracted by the brilliance of silver. But as you look closer, the lines of an intricate design begin to take shape. Then, you place the sterling silver miniature under a magnifying glass—and there, in astonishing detail, is one of the world's greatest stamps!

This is the pleasure that awaits you with each new issue of The 100 Greatest Stamps of the World—as you discover the intriguing world of the minted miniature. A world that combines the beauty of solid sterling silver with the fascination of painstaking detail in the tiniest area.

This exciting new collection, to be produced by The Franklin Mint, will consist of 100 meticulously crafted miniatures—each one portraying one of the greatest stamps in the history of the world.

A panel of distinguished authorities on world philatelic issues has selected, out of the many thousands of stamps issued throughout the world, the 100 greatest of all. And these are the stamps that will be authentically re-created for this exceptional collection.

Among them are: the British Guiana One-Cent Magenta, which brought the record price of $850,000 at an auction in 1980—the Penny Black of Great Britain, the first adhesive postage stamp in the world—the U.S. 24¢ air-mail invert, one of the rarest of all American stamps—the Japan 500 mon Dragon, which until 1973 was thought to be a forgery but is now a prized rarity. And such famous issues as the Double Geneva, Moldavian Bull, Trinacria of Naples—100 great stamps in all, from every part of the world.

Superbly crafted works in miniature

Each sterling silver miniature will recapture the stamp it portrays with absolute authenticity. You'll actually be able to see every detail of the American biplane which is shown on the 24¢ Air-mail Invert. Every feature of Queen Victoria's portrait on the Penny Black. The intricate background pattern that distinguishes the One-Cent Franklin "Z"

Grill. The winged headdress on the "Hermes Head" stamp of Greece.

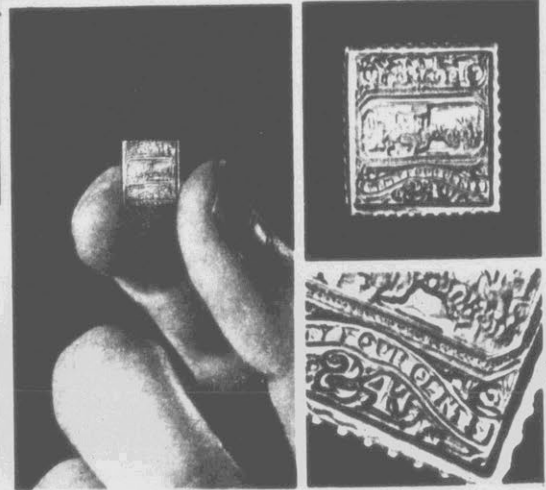

So that you will be able to study and enjoy each miniature in close-up detail, a special magnifying glass and collector's tongs will be provided. And you will receive a custom-designed presentation case to house and protect the complete collection of silver miniatures.

A limited edition at a guaranteed price

You will receive your silver miniatures at the convenient rate of two per month, and the issue price of just $4.75 will be guaranteed to you for each miniature in the collection—regardless of inflationary pressures.

Your advance application is valid only until February 28th, and the edition will be permanently limited to the number of subscriptions entered by the end of 1982. After that time, it will never be offered again.

No payment is required at this time. But be sure to mail the application at right to The Franklin Mint, Franklin Center, PA 19091, by February 28, 1982.

receiving, is a calcium-channel blocker. Other channel blockers are verapamil, perhexaline, diltiazem and idoflazine. They have been marketed in other countries, but as of this writing, only nifedipine has been approved for oral use by the F.D.A. (approval for the others is expected very soon).

Experts believe that the calcium-channel blockers may be most effective for persons like Melissa who suffer from the form of angina known as variant or Prinzmetal's angina. In this condition, it is spasms of the coronary arteries rather than blockages that cause the chest discomfort.

"For many complex reasons, the substance calcium is involved in the ability of the coronary artery to constrict and shut down the flow of blood to the heart muscle, very much as if someone turned a spigot handle and reduced the flow of water," says Dr. Likoff. "The calcium antagonists interfere with the constriction of the blood vessel by blocking out calcium," he explains.

Angina patients who cannot be treated successfully with drugs often have bypass operations to relieve their pain and, in some cases, to prolong their lives. The operation is the fastest growing in medical history with approximately 125,000 men and women undergoing the surgery every year. The operation involves bypassing the blocked portions of any or all of the three major coronary arteries — and sometimes their smaller branches — with saphenous veins, the same veins that are stripped from a patient's leg to correct varicocity. It is a process of re-routing that permits the blood supply to flow freely once more to the heart muscle.

Approximately 10 percent of patients who are candidates for bypass surgery are now able to avoid it by having a much simpler, less costly procedure that is easier to recover from than bypass surgery. It is called percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty or simply P.T.C.A.

P.T.C.A follows the same principle as catheterization. A catheter is snaked through an arm or leg artery into the affected coronary artery. When the tip of the catheter reaches the spot where the artery is blocked, a tiny balloon is inflated with a hydraulically powered inflation device and compresses the blockage so that it becomes smaller.

Patients who may be considered for P.T.C.A. are those who have had symptoms of angina for less than a year and have not responded to medical treatment.

Rhythm Disturbances

Diseased coronary arteries that prevent the flow of blood to the heart muscle have been described as plumbing problems. Disturbances in the heart's rhythm — beats that are too fast, too slow or irregular — are called electrical problems.

"Arrhythmias [irregular or erratic heart rhythms] indicate that there is something wrong with the wiring of the heart," says Dr. Joel Morganroth, chief of cardiac research and education at the cardiovascular division of Lankenau Hospital in Philadelphia. "It is like a toaster that has a bad wire and sparks. When the heart 'sparks,' you get a rhythm disturbance — a skip, an irregular beat, a palpitation."

HEARTSOUNDS

"Most people experience some rhythm disturbance at some time," says Dr. Harold L. Rutenberg, former chairman of the department of cardiology at Pennsylvania Hospital. "You will have a flutter or feel your heart skip a beat or just be aware of your heartbeat," he says. "It often happens when a person is under stress, has had a lot of caffeine or alcohol or maybe a big meal. That is not abnormal. But the diagnosis of arrhythmias should be considered when a person's heart beats very quickly (140 to 150 beats a minute) for no apparent reason."

"We are concerned about the heart's electrical problems," says Dr.

Morganroth, "because these can lead to sudden death." Sudden cardiac death due to electrical disturbances, says Dr. Morganroth, affects one person a minute in the United States. It accounts for more deaths than acute heart attack.

Sometimes, the reason can be underlying heart disease which must be treated to correct the arrhythmias. Other times, rhythm abnormalities will respond to simple techniques (such as taking a deep breath) or medications (such as quinidine) which have been used for a long time. But today, there are new ways of bringing relief to people with stubborn arrhythmias.

The heart's activity, which cannot always be picked up through a physical examination or through a standard electrocardiogram, may now be recorded if the patient wears a Holter monitor (a small device about the size of a portable radio) for 24 hours while he engages in normal activity. Skipped beats, rapid beats or irregular beats can be traced through that period and correlated to the patient's activity or state of mind. A study of the printout yielded by the monitor can help determine whether the arrhythmias are benign or serious.

For example, Michael, the patient described earlier, was studied and treated at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. He lay on a table while a catheter, with several electrodes on the end, was snaked through an artery in his leg up into parts of his heart. His heart's electrical activity was recorded; then his abnormal rhythm was stimulated so the area of the heart causing the problem could be pinpointed. While still on the table, Michael was given a series of drugs to see which one could best control his palpitations. The second drug tried was effective.

When drugs do not help, different kinds of pacemakers can be looked at as an alternative. When nothing else seems to work, the area of the heart that generates the faulty rhythm can often be treated with surgery.

Philadelphia's Lankenau Medical Research Center, Harvard University's School of Public Health and the University of Indiana's School of Medicine are all investigating the use of new drugs to treat arrhythmias.

There are various projects under way around the country that offer hope for victims of cardiovascular disease. Doctors are involved in new drug studies, developing more sophisticated diagnostic tools and looking at the relationship of nutrition to cardiovascular ailments and heredity's role in heart disease. Most of these practitioners are convinced that we are on the brink of a new era in the treatment of heart ailments.

"Within the last year, there have been new, exciting breakthroughs all at the same time," says Dr. Morganroth. "In the next decade — certainly by 1995 — it is probable that there will be a large decrease in death from heart disease, the nation's number one health problem."

THE SEXES

By Norman Lobsenz

Loving a Successful Spouse

From all appearances, it isn't easy being married to someone who is wealthy, successful or famous. People who concentrate on achievement in the outside world can be difficult to live with, say psychologists who have studied the phenomenon.

What kind of partner do you need to be in order to build a good marriage with a success-oriented spouse? The key qualities, experts feel, are:

Confidence in your own worth — A husband or wife intent on career goals isn't likely to have much time or energy for his or her spouse. Therefore the spouse needs a good self-image to avoid feeling neglected or unimportant.

A flexible approach to life — High achievers tend to move from job to job, trading security for future advancement. The partner must be secure enough to live with uncertainty.

Self-reliance — If you're married to a successful partner, you will probably be alone more than most spouses are. It helps to develop your own interests, as well as the ability to cope with problems on your own.

A calm temperament — Successful people often must be tactful at work but feel they can blow off the pent-up steam at home. Partners need to be able to accept this without feeling personally attacked.

Competence and efficiency — High achievers are well organized and expect their spouses to be equally capable of running their share of household affairs.

When Children Say "No!"

Every parent is familiar with the "terrible two's" and the "stubborn four's" — the times when children seem to resist doing whatever they are told to do. A new study reports that virtually all normal preschoolers exhibit this negative behavior, with little difference between boys and girls. It begins, typically, at around 18 months to 2 years of age, peaks at 4, and declines by age 6 and is characterized by opposition to even the most reasonable requests from adults.

But though resistance is frustrating, parents and teachers need to remember that "it is a crucial aspect of early childhood development," according to psychologists Karen Haswell and Charles Wenar and family-life expert Ellen Hock of Ohio State and Louisville Universities. The child is beginning to understand that he or she is "a separate person with a separate will."

Experiments show several ways parents can minimize negative behavior:

1. Give youngsters advance warning when you are going to ask them to stop doing something or to start doing something else.
2. Wait a little while before repeating the request or order.
3. When possible, give a youngster a choice. For instance, "You can take your bath now or in 10 minutes, which do you choose?"
4. If a power struggle develops, call a "time out" by leaving the youngster alone for a few minutes.

Mothers and Daughters

When a daughter becomes a mother, she and her own mother tend to see each other in a new light. They also become more involved in each other's lives, according to sociologist Lucy Fischer of the University of Minnesota's Family Study Center. The change in the relationship, she says, is a result of both women seeing themselves and each other in new roles.

Young mothers begin to see their own mothers as "role models." As one young mother puts it: "Now that I have children, I realize what she has been through. . . . I understand more why she did certain things." Married daughters with children tend to visit more frequently and talk more often on the telephone with their mothers than do married daughters without children. And married daughters give more help to their mothers than they get from them.

Despite all this, Fischer found, "daughters do not necessarily like their sense of similarity with their mothers. . . . Almost all the daughters, single and married, described it in neutral or negative terms."

Now! You Can Start Your Own "Million Dollar" Zoysia Lawn!

UP TO 900

Lakeland's Famous 30-Below-Zero Zoysia Takes Wear, Tear, Cookouts, Children's Games... After 30 Below Zero Winters, It Bounces Back Green, Thick, And Beautiful! Closest Thing To An Indestructible Lawn You Have Ever Seen!

Zoysia Lawn Wasn't Mowed Or Watered For A Month! Not A Weed In Sight!

If your family is like mine, you're squeezing every dollar to make sure you have enough to go around. And it looks like things are going to stay that way.

One way to cut expenses is to cut the costs, and work, of lawn care. For example, a woman wrote about her zoysia lawn that she had mowed it only twice ALL SUMMER. She hadn't spent a cent on weed-killers. Not one cent for fertilizers. Yet her lawn was as green and weed-free as a pile carpet.

ZOYSIA LAWNS STAY GREEN THROUGH HEAT AND DROUGHTS

Let the scorching sun burn lawns around you into hay—your zoysia stays fresh and green, an emerald isle of beauty. I have yet to water my own zoysia lawn. One day I saw that my sprinkler had gotten cobwebs! In Iowa, a zoysia lawn was declared the area's "Top Lawn—nearly perfect." Yet this lawn had been watered only once that entire summer!

CUT YOUR WATER BILLS. SAVE THE WORK OF LAWN SPRINKLING. START A FAMOUS ZOYSIA GRASS LAWN NOW.

Weed-killing chemicals are NOT NEEDED for a weed-free Zoysia Lawn

How is it possible that Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia stays weed-free without using expensive, risky chemicals? It grows so thick that crabgrass (weed) seeds don't get enough light to germinate!

Has Cut Mowing To Once A Month

Zoysia grows sideways, not just up like ordinary grass. It forms a thick, interwoven carpet of turf that keeps its well-groomed look weeks longer. It cuts your mowing by half, 2/3 or more!

No-Reseeding—Not Ever!—With Lakeland's Famous Zoysia

Plug in Lakeland Zoysia and never buy grass seed again. Zoysia lawns don't grow old; they just grow better. They sparkle under 100° heat... stay green through droughts. They resist diseases and insects which ruin ordinary grasses. After sharp frosts, they only give up their green color, then green up better than ever each following Spring. Famous Zoysia gives you the closest thing to an indestructible lawn you have ever seen.

Ends Washouts on Steep Slopes Perfect Where Other Grasses Do Poorly Deep-rooted zoysia holds soil in place, stops it from washing away from slopes. It's your perfect answer for worn out or weedy areas, too.

In a typical newspaper article I read (quote):

NO NEED TO DIG UP YOUR LAWN PLUG IN Z 52 ZOYSIA

"upgrading your current lawn" requires the right selection of grass seed plus "regular applications of fertilizer (and lime where needed)." This article also said you need, "weed, insect and disease control." Sound familiar? Of course!

Why not forget all that work and expense, and plug in Famous Meyer Z-52 Zoysia? To upgrade your lawn with zoysia, don't dig it up. Just set plugs into holes in the soil a foot apart or less. Let those plugs spread toward each other to form a carpet of solid turf. Growth is so vigorous it chokes out old growth you want to get rid of. WEEDS INCLUDED.

From Coast to Coast People Write to Mike Senkiw

From Hudson, N.Y., E. LaRoche writes how he planted plugs "in the worst possible place—clay with weeds and gravel... It formed a 4" thick carpet of grass. Not children, dogs, cats, rabbits, extremely hot sun or drought could kill it."

From Sacramento, Calif., J.M. writes how he bought our Zoysia "for a weed infested spot—it took care of the problem."

From Indiana, M.A. Low, Sr. writes how he visited a physician friend in Albert Lea, Minn. where he saw a "whole back yard was entirely in zoysia and it was beautiful... a deep green."

The success of many thousands of delighted Famous Zoysia owners awaits you. Prove it to yourself today.

"Same Day Fresh"

The day we cut your plugs is the day they are on their way to you. Because freshness counts, Lakeland has 2 shipping points, one in the Midwest and one in the East. Your plugs go out from the nearest point "Same Day Fresh" and ready to grow. shipping charge collection the most economical way. On credit card orders, the shipping cost will be prepaid by us and billed to your account.

Poor Soil? No Problem!

Our Famous Zoysia plugs are so vigorous we guarantee them to grow whatever your soil—from heavy clays to sandy sub-soils. You cannot lose.

IT'S SO EASY AND INEXPENSIVE TO START A MAGNIFICENT ZOYSIA LAWN

Start your own magnificent, perennial zoysia lawn with as few as 100 plugs. Just let your plugs establish solid turf. Then take up transplants and plug in other places to your heart's desire. Plugged areas grow right back into solid turf. Your supply of plugs is endless.

Prices and Bargains

If you plant more grass that sits there and struggles—or dies on you—you may not miss your work and money. It's the time you cannot recover! So please don't confuse Lakeland's 30-Below-Zero Zoysia with any ordinary turf offered as a "bargain." If our plugs cost a little more in the beginning, they remain, in the long run, the only true bargain for your lawn.

Order guaranteed Famous

zoysia plugs now, for delivery from our nearest shipping point. Your order will be sent at the earliest proper time to plant in your area.

Lakeland's Total Guarantee

- Drought Won't Kill It

Even though we don't know your soil, we guarantee EVERY plug of Famous Z-52 Zoysia to live and grow in it. No ifs. No buts. Should any plugs fail to grow, just let us know within 60 days. We replace them FREE. That guarantee clearly means that Famous Zoysia has to do everything we say—and more! Otherwise there's no way we could give you such unique protection.

BEHAVIOR

Ways That You Can Overcome Insecurity

By Mary Long

Marilyn Monroe saw herself as clumsy, uncultured and unloved. Ann Landers tenses when she arrives at airports, afraid no one will be there to meet her. The great terror in Warren Beatty's life? Being considered dumb.

Poor Marilyn, Ann and Warren: rich, famous, talented — and insecure. It just doesn't make sense, you say. But that's often the thing about insecurity: It never makes sense for the other guy, who seems to have everything. You are the one who's different, who has a reason to feel insecure.

But insecurity is something everyone experiences to some degree. To feel insecure, at least in some way, is to be human.

The word "insecurity" describes a broad spectrum of personality traits. At the far end are phobias: debilitating fears of crowds, high places and the like. Far more common are personal and social insecurities, those quirky little internal demons that send a person into spasms, or at least twitches, of self-doubt: feelings that whatever you are isn't good enough or that whatever you have — a talent, a good job, someone to love — is going to get away from you.

Most authorities agree that the root of insecurity is generally a person's past. "All major insecurities and anxieties go back to childhood or adolescence," says Dr. LeRoy P. Leavitt, a psychiatrist and president of the Chicago Board of Health. These include early upsetting experiences, as well as names and labels thoughtlessly assigned to us as children ("Susan was always the shy one," or "You'll never learn to take care of yourself").

In many cases, as grown men and women, we continue to condemn ourselves with these judgments and defeat ourselves by avoiding what we believe will be embarrassing or painful experiences. Hence, the belief that "I'm not the type to go to college," may grow from childhood remarks like "You're just like me; I was never any good with schoolwork."

You can't avoid all insecurity, but there are a number of things you can do to rid yourself of useless uncertainty. First of all, stop making your weakness the focus of your whole self-image. "We often rely on that one aspect — the 'I'm lazy' or whatever — and define ourselves by it," explains Dr. Leavitt. "The important question is: Does the sum total come out all right?"

Second, give yourself permission to make mistakes. Remind yourself that mistakes are opportunities to learn, grow and change, and not proof of personality flaws.

Also, learn to be suspicious of your insecurity; it usually isn't based on reality. Dr. Roland Parker, a clinical psychologist at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Northport, Long Island, believes you should learn to recognize the particular situations that provoke your emotional discomfort. Most people are insecure only in specific circumstances: at a party, when they are in love, when they're around someone who has more schooling than they have, and so on. If certain kinds of people or situations make you anxious, you might try to associate these experiences with your past. Perhaps a certain teacher or supervisor reminds you of an earlier teacher or a parent. Ask yourself why, and tell yourself that you can live in the present instead of repeating the past.

Even if you can't be an Einstein, a Rockefeller or a Chris Evert Lloyd, can you nonetheless manage to get some real security? The experts say yes. "Once people develop a fair idea of themselves, they accept themselves and hope others do, too," Dr. Leavitt says. "They can go out and do the best they can and try to be productive. In a crucial way, they've grown up and don't worry too terribly much what others think of them. That's maturity." FW

QUIPS & QUOTES

IT TAKES THE CAKE

I've thought, with far more dread than hope,
Of what we call a cake of soap.
Imagine if, like other cake,
A cake of soap by some mistake
Were kept not on the bathroom shelf
But in the cakebox by itself.
Although the thought is hardly thrilling,

I see a cake of soap with filling,
With frosting, too, and served in slices.
Oh, such a cake not very nice is.
When I have eaten cake, I'd rather Have crumbs upon my plate than lather.

—Richard Armour

PASSING REMARK

At dinner, we talk of world affairs
We don't just shoot the breeze;
Why, just the other night my wife
Said, "Pass the SALT II, please."

—Dick Emmons

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Don't cry over spilt milk
Was an early retort;
But when it was uttered,
Milk was five cents a quart!

—Kay Owens

HOLES IN HIS LOGIC

A baker tried to save money by enlarging the holes in his doughnuts.
He had to give it up, however,
because the bigger he made the holes, the more dough it took to go around them.

- ¼ cup low-fat sour cream
- 2½ tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1½ teaspoons ground cumin
- ¾ teaspoon paprika
- ¾ teaspoon salt

1. In large nonstick skillet, over medium heat, sauté onions and garlic in oil until transparent.

3. Remove from heat and blend in remaining ingredients until thoroughly combined. Serve chilled with fresh vegetables. Makes 2 cups

The Computer Capers: How High-Tech Thieves Cash In

Gone are the days when the big bank heists were pulled off with pistols and get-away cars. Today's crooks are far more calculating. It's as if Bonnie and Clyde had graduate degrees in computer science.

By Firth Calhoun

This guy's not a bank robber," an associate of Stanley Mark Rifkin insisted soon after the gifted computer expert was arrested in 1978. "He's a problem solver. I have a feeling Stanley viewed this whole thing as an incredible problem."

Whether or not the genial, 32-year-old Rifkin, who loved computer chess, conceived of robbing Security Pacific Bank of $10 million primarily in terms of solving a challenging problem is open to interpretation. But there is no question that his victim, an enormous Los Angeles bank, viewed Rifkin's success at the endeavor as every bit an incredible problem. What made Security Pacific, and countless other banks, especially uneasy was the identity of Rifkin's chief accomplice: the bank's computer.

Rifkin, a computer consultant to Security Pacific, had one day bluffed his way into the bank's supposedly secure wire-transfer room. There he offhandedly requested and obtained the ultrasecret codes for authorizing transfers of money to other banks (codes which are changed daily) and sauntered out.

Later in the day he phoned the transfer room, posing as an officer of the bank's international division. Nonchalantly rattling off the codes—a form of verbal vault key—Rifkin had no difficulty getting $10 million transferred to a prearranged account at a New York bank.

Then, in a laundering operation involving an accomplice, some $8 million of the money was spent to buy

Programmed for failure: Stanley Rifkin was caught in a $10 million computer bank robbery.

Russian diamonds wholesale from a legitimate dealer in Geneva. It was only when Rifkin tried to peddle a few of the gems to a business associate, who tipped-off the F.B.I., that the heist went awry.

Security Pacific has convincingly beefed up its security since then. And along with recovering $2 million of the loot, the bank came into possession of the diamonds, whose market value was $13 million.

Few victims of so-called computer crimes are so fortunate. The losses each year, experts say, run to hundreds of millions, perhaps billions, of dollars. Regrettably, less vague estimates are as hard to come by as computer crimes are to detect. "Most of the cases that have come to light by far have been by accident," admits Phillip Wynn, Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney. One computer-crime consultant guesses—probably with plenty of exaggeration—that 99 out of 100 computer crooks get away with it.

When they do get caught, they tend to be charged with more concrete offenses than the all-embracing "computer crime." When the F.B.I. compiles its national crime statistics, for instance, it categorizes crimes involving computers according to their more traditional type—embezzlement, say, or fraud.

One key reason why it's hard to keep accurate tabs on computer crime is that computer-sting victims, typically banks and big corporations, are loath to publicize the fact by reporting it to the police. Not only do they wish to avoid advertising their vulnerability, but they also dread the embarrassment that would result.

"Computer crimes make the front page," explains

Donn B. Parker, a consultant at the California think tank SRI International. Regarded by many as the nation's foremost computer-crime expert, Parker flagged many of the present trends in his 1976 book, Crime by Computer. In confidential studies of some 900 computer crimes committed since 1958, he has found that not more than one in six victims alerts the authorities—despite losses averaging more than $400,000 apiece.

As extraordinary as that figure is, it hardly suggests the upper limit for computer crimes. A trio accused of duping Wells Fargo Bank's computer into helping them stage the greatest bank robbery in history went on trial recently in a Los Angeles Federal court. The reported haul: $21.3 million.

words, signatures, finger lengths, retina patterns, thumbprints, palm prints, voice prints, even lip prints — are all used to verify the identity of legitimate computer users. Moreover, computers are being programmed to be more vigilant; many now generate telltale "audit trails" of who has been using them, when and for what purpose.

These and other measures appear to have made a difference. "Computer operating systems are more secure than they were in the past," concludes Parker. The F.B.I.'s confidential monitoring of computer-related crimes, in fact, shows that their growth has not kept pace with the growth of computer use. "It's such a disproportionate rise that it's surprising," confides Paul Nolan, one of more than 500 F.B.I. agents specially trained to uncover computer crimes.

Yet he and other law-enforcement officials still argue strenuously that specific computer-crime laws are needed. Nolan explains, "It's very difficult to apply statutes written 30 years ago to these crimes." Rifkin, for instance, almost got away with a $10-million bank robbery. Yet because of the unusual nature of his crime, he had to be charged with the lesser, incidental crime of transporting stolen property across state lines.

Largely inspired by the Wells Fargo robbery, California has adopted a computer-crime law, as have 14 other states. Congress, however, has been conspicuously slow to read the print-out on the computer-room wall. Congressman Bill Nelson (D-Fla.), who drafted that state's pioneering computer-crime bill, recently introduced a modified version of a computer-crime bill proposed by former Connecticut Senator Abraham Ribicoff six years ago. But even at this late date, Nelson's "Federal Computer Systems Protection Act" is viewed by its sponsors as primarily a "vehicle for exploring the problem."

Providing for a $50,000 fine and up to five years in jail, the bill would make it a Federal offense to steal information from a Federal Government computer — one past victim has been the F.B.I. computer — from companies engaged in interstate commerce and from financial institutions backed by Federal guarantees (which includes virtually all banks).

Passage is problematic. Not only computer makers but also computer users, such as banks, that ostensibly would benefit from the bill have been unenthusiastic in their support. "The less said about this the better" is their attitude," according to a Nelson aide. "They don't want to scare their customers."

The implication for the 1980's, Parker and other experts argue, is fewer crimes but much larger losses. Others, like the F.B.I.'s Nolan, foresee increases across the whole spectrum of computer crime. And still others say the problem has always been overblown and that, thanks to safeguards, it ought to be downgraded to mere nuisance status. That may be a bit premature. Recent computer-assisted securities and commodities frauds in Florida and Colorado resulted in combined losses of $103 million. The money has not been recovered, says Parker. And whose money is it anyway? "Like any kind of crime," he notes, "society ends up paying for it."

Understanding Baby's Cries

By Jody Gaylin

One of the most trying experiences for new parents is listening to their small baby cry. Should they pick him up immediately and run the risk of "spoiling" him, or is it better to let him cry it out? And what do his cries really mean? Is he hungry, wet, sleepy or just in need of a little cuddling?

A baby's cry evokes not only a psychological reaction but also a physiological one — and, interestingly, non-parents can be affected, too. When Ann M. Frodi, professor of developmental psychology at the University of Rochester, showed videotapes of crying babies to people of both sexes and all ages (some had children, some didn't) she found that everyone had identical physical responses, including increased heart rate and blood pressure. Her subjects also said that the crying made them feel irritated and anxious.

"We are biologically equipped to respond to a baby's cries in a helping fashion," says Dr. Frodi. "A baby wouldn't survive if his cries didn't trigger such a response."

Experts today believe that it is important to react quickly to an infant's cries. For one thing, the response crying elicits — or fails to elicit — helps determine how the infant views himself and the world around him, laying the groundwork for later feelings of control, self-confidence and trust in other people. A baby whose cries are answered learns about causality and predictability. He learns to pay attention to his environment.

But if you ignore his cries, you frustrate and upset him, making him feel powerless and confused because his major means of communicating goes unanswered. "Even if a baby doesn't have a direct reason for crying, giving comfort in times of distress is important in building a child's sense that his needs will be met," says Susan Crockenberg, associate professor of human development at the University of California, Davis.

Crockenberg found that mothers who believe that a baby can be spoiled by too much attention took longer to respond to their infants. And their babies ended up crying more than others whose mothers responded promptly.

Camérique

Of course, it is not just a parent's beliefs about spoiling that influence responsiveness; the situation does, too. No matter how good one's intentions, a parent who must contend with the demands of several other children may simply be unable to come running the second the youngest howls. In addition, some babies just cry more from the start — and it's no reflection on the parents.

A good general rule is to "respond quickly and appropriately during your child's early months," Crockenberg says. Parents should use their own judgment. If you know from experience that your child always fusses a little when you put him down for his nap, no matter what you do to try to soothe him, the appropriate strategy may be to let him cry a bit and then drop off.

A common mistake is for new parents to interpret all crying as a demand for food. They end up overfeeding the child, making him uncomfortable and more irritable as they substitute food for "psychological sustenance," says Justin D. Call, M.D., professor of pediatrics at the University of California, Irvine.

As time goes on, many parents learn to distinguish one cry from another. They can separate a hunger cry that can be relieved by feeding from one that abates when the child is picked up, soothed or played with.

There is no question that through trial and error, experimentation and daily experience, parents learn to read the signals their child gives them. The best overall advice may come from Dr. Call, who suggests that "parents should do what they can to relieve an infant's crying. They may discover that nothing relieves it, but that too is important to learn."

Answering your child's cries not only teaches him about the world but also teaches you about him.

PUCKER POWER

Vaughn Bryant promises that he does his research only in the library and with his wife, but the head of anthropology at Texas A&M has become an expert on the history of kissing. In time for Valentine's Day, he offered to share some of his lip tips:

He says that the Romans, not mah-jongg players, were the world's biggest social kissers, literally bussing anyone who waited on them in a store. And did you know that the great plague of the Middle Ages temporarily put a damper on kissing in England, bringing the curtsy, bow and tip of the hat into vogue. There are still primitive cultures that forbid kissing because they believe the soul enters and leaves through one's mouth. Some kissing superstitions: If you kiss your elbow, your sex will change. If a man who's standing kisses a woman who's sitting, they'll soon quarrel. If a bride doesn't cry after being kissed at the altar, the couple will have bad luck.

The future of kissing is safe for at least a few more centuries, assures Bryant. His biggest concern: How will we kiss through space suits?

UNCLE SAM WANTS YOU — MAYBE

To avoid attracting the "Private Benjamins," who enlist expecting waterfront condos and the like, the military has been gearing its ads to entice recruits who will best fit into its life style.

To help find the right types, Edgar Leonard, professor of marketing at Emory University, studied some 700 Army recruits, tracing them from basic training through their first six months on the job. Among those who made it through successfully, he found some common characteristics — interests in adventure, leadership, travel, community involvement, camaraderie and ego enhancement. The unsuccessful recruits displayed two common tendencies — political extremism and deep religious beliefs.

"The primary job benefit sought by those recruits who ended up making it was the chance to be independent," says Leonard. "And this ties in nicely with the Army's jingle, 'Be all that you can be.'"

NO EGGS-AGGERATION

Why did the chicken cross the road? To get to the 28-hour day on the other side.

Aware that the "biological

clock" of a chicken operates on a daily cycle of 28 hours, scientists at Cornell began experimenting with "stretching" the day and manipulating light in the coops. The result: eggs that are 10 percent bigger and shells 10 to 12 percent stronger.

Instead of receiving the usual 16 continuous hours of light, these chickens got two hours of light at the start of the day, then six hours of darkness, two more hours of light and 18 straight dark hours.

Scientists aren't exactly sure how the new system increases egg size but suspect that the shells come out tougher because the egg stays in the chicken's oviduct for about half an hour longer than normal.

RATING THE FANS

If you want the truth, go to the experts. That's just what Bob McMahon, a sports-crazed stockbroker in Media, Pa., did recently. He polled pro athletes on which city has the best — and worst — fans. (The following results will be included in his upcoming book, The Sports Fan.)

Football players chose Denver as having the most enthusiastic fans; Philadelphia the most unfriendly; Pittsburgh the most knowledgeable. Their favorite city to play in is mild San Diego. Basketball players overwhelmingly named Portland's fans as most enthusiastic; San Antonio's most unfriendly, and New York's most knowledgeable. Los Angeles is their favorite stopping point. Among hockey players, Philadelphia fans were named most enthusiastic, while New York Ranger-rooters were tabbed the unfriendliest. Les habitantes of Montreal are most knowledgeable, and L.A. is the pucksters' choice of overnight locale, too.

McMahon also polled baseball players, but we'll save those results until spring. Really now, who worries about baseball in February except George Steinbrenner?

ASPIRIN FOR CATARACTS?

Taking four aspirin tablets a day may slow down or even halt cataracts from forming, delaying surgery or possibly eliminating it, say Yale researchers who are planning a study of their theory. The aspirin won't reverse already-developed cataracts but, as reported in Medical World News, studies show that aspirin and some other anti-inflammatory drugs inhibit an enzyme that contributes to their formation. Moreover, Dr. Edward Cotlier, professor of ophthalmology at Yale, found that arthritis patients taking large doses of aspirin over long periods of time have fewer cataracts than those not taking aspirin, and he has been prescribing two tablets twice a day for many of his cataract victims.

LIFE'S WINDING ROAD. CAN YOU PREDICT WHERE YOU'RE GOING?

You can be sure of one thing in life—your road will take some twists and turns. Often when you least expect them.

As an "average American," it's likely you will work for a number of different employers, live in several homes, and raise about two children. And if you're over 25 now, you may expect to live to at least age 75, according to Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's 1980 Statistical Bureau life tables.

We can't predict exactly what will happen to you. But it would be a mistake not to look at what's likely to happen and plan accordingly. It's this kind of planning (that doesn't necessarily cost a lot) that can make for a happier, safer trip for you and those you love as you travel life's road.

Follow along now and see what we mean.

WILL YOU STAY IN THE SAME JOB FOREVER?

Maybe you seek job security. Or perhaps you thrive on change—changing careers as well as employers. Whether you're a "switcher" or a "sticker," group life insurance is an important employee benefit. But consider:

- If you change jobs, you may not have group coverage or you may have a group plan not as good as your previous one.
  - If you stay in the same job, your group coverage may not keep up with your growing family and financial responsibilities.
- And in either case, you may not be able to continue your group coverage when you retire. That's why it's a good idea to have a life insurance program of your own.

Metropolitan Life's Whole Life Plus Policy is an excellent foundation for meeting your life insurance needs. Introduced just last year, Whole Life Plus offers one of the best values around for whole life coverage.

Why? With Whole Life Plus, Metropolitan can offer you up to one-third more whole life coverage than we offered before for the same premium payment.

And this year, Whole Life Plus is an even better value.

Metropolitan's 1982 dividend scale provides larger illustrative dividends to both our new and existing Whole Life Plus policyholders—ranging to over 20% higher than our 1981 scale.

Whole Life Plus. It means permanent coverage, cash value buildup, and premiums that don't increase. It's the insurance that's all your own. And you'll need it if you plan to take on more responsibility down the road... such as getting married.

WERE YOU EXPECTING THIS MUCH RESPONSIBILITY?

A new addition—or two—to your family? Joy and dreams for the future, of course. But also, the responsibility of having others depend on you.

If you insure just the primary wage earner, your family may not be fully protected. Here's why: When a husband dies, his wife receives the proceeds on his policy, but she may not have enough coverage on herself. She may find paying for insurance difficult or it may even be unavailable because of her health. Result: the children are now unprotected.

To prevent that, Metropolitan is introducing the Surviving Spouse Rider. It's an innovative and economical way to help make sure your children are protected during your child-rearing years.

Here's how it works: Suppose a man, aged 30, has a $50,000 Whole Life Plus Policy. He adds this rider on his 28-year old wife. The first year premium for the rider is only $27, which will increase slightly each year to reflect her age.

If he dies before his wife reaches age 65, his wife will receive the full $50,000 on his policy, plus a $50,000 term policy on herself—and she'll never have to pay a cent for it. Her term coverage will continue until she reaches age 65.

But shouldn't she also be insured now? Metropolitan has another rider that can provide term coverage on your spouse.* And our Children Rider* provides term coverage on all your children—present and future—for just one premium. Best of all, this rider guarantees your children can convert this coverage to their own permanent plans.

YOU'RE DOING WELL, BUT IS INFLATION DOING EVEN BETTER?

You're going smoothly along life's road, but look out ahead—there's inflation—making the size of your bills bigger every year.

Those bigger bills are a warning that your insurance may not be keeping pace to protect your family against the rising cost of living. But there is an easy way you can help maintain the value of your Metropolitan policy to meet your growing need for coverage.

With Metropolitan's Cost of Living Rider,* your policy's coverage can increase automatically—up to 300%! For example, the coverage under a $50,000 policy can reach $150,000. You will receive term insurance each year up to age 65 to increase your policy's coverage by a percentage equal to the full rise in the Consumer Price Index.*

In addition to your life insurance, you can do something about inflation by adjusting some of your other essential coverages....

WOULD YOU BE OUT ON A LIMB IF THE ROOF FELL IN?

With the cost of repairing or replacing a home rising sharply, you could be risking unexpected losses if your home isn't fully insured.

Metropolitan Property and Liability's homeowners policy is so flexible, you can cover the major risks, yet hold the line on the cost of your coverage.

• If you select our home replacement option, Metropolitan will guarantee to pay whatever it costs to rebuild your home—even if it is more than your policy's stated coverage amount.

You may also want to cover your furniture, clothing and other contents for what it costs to replace them—not the reduced value they may have today. Metropolitan's replacement cost coverage on your personal property can help you do just that.

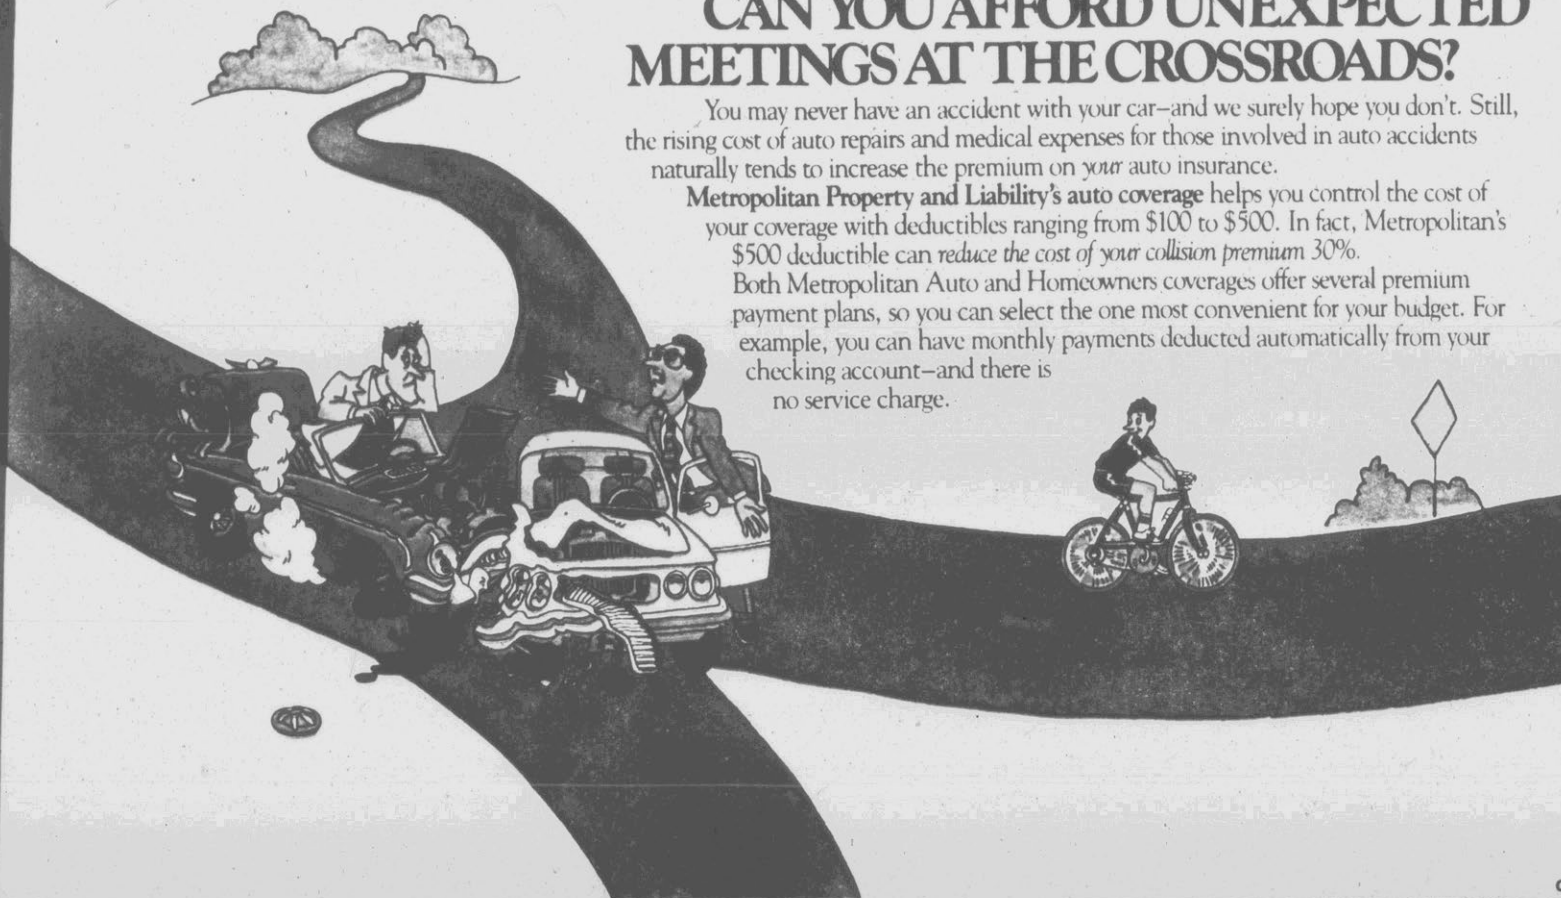

At the same time, Metropolitan is now offering a 1% deductible that enables you to reduce your basic premium by 25%! You take care of damage up to 1% of your home's value, and your Metropolitan coverage applies to amounts above that.

CAN YOU AFFORD UNEXPECTED MEETINGS AT THE CROSSROADS?

You may never have an accident with your car—and we surely hope you don't. Still, the rising cost of auto repairs and medical expenses for those involved in auto accidents naturally tends to increase the premium on your auto insurance.

Metropolitan Property and Liability's auto coverage helps you control the cost of your coverage with deductibles ranging from $100 to $500. In fact, Metropolitan's $500 deductible can reduce the cost of your collision premium 30%.

Both Metropolitan Auto and Homeowners coverages offer several premium payment plans, so you can select the one most convenient for your budget. For example, you can have monthly payments deducted automatically from your checking account—and there is no service charge.

- Eye-Spy! In your mind's eye, surround a penny with other pennies so that each touches two neighbors and the center coin. How many pennies will be present in the rosette formed?

CARDMAGIC YOU CAN DO

Shuffle a deck. Deal out three seven-card stacks, face up. Turn your back. Ask someone to pick a card at random and to indicate the stack. Place that stack between the other two stacks, and dealing from top down, left to right, deal three new stacks. Again, ask which stack the card is in. Place that stack between the other two, and deal again, etc. Ah so. When you deal a third time and ascertain which stack, it will always be the fourth card down in that stack!

FACE FACTS! Let's face it, two of the circus gnomes above look enough alike to be twins. Which two are they?

KNIGHT COURT! Add the following colors neatly to the amusing scene above: 1-Red. 2-Lt. blue. 3-Yellow. 4-Lt. brown. 5-Flesh. 6-Lt. green. 7-Dk. brown. 8-Dk. green. 9-Dk. blue.

Our Story: VAL AND GAWAIN HAVE FORCED BELISARIUS FROM THE SECRECY OF THE DESERT. WITH HIS THIRSTY LEGIONS, THE GENERAL MARCHES FOR THE NEAREST CITY: DAMASCUS.

THE TROOPS REVIVE THEMSELVES WITHOUT CEREMONY. THEN BELISARIUS SENDS THEM BACK TO THEIR FRONTIER OUTPOSTS. FOR DAMASCUS IS A CITY WITHOUT SECRETS OR HONEST MEN. THE BARBARIAN TRIBES WILL SOON LEARN THAT THE EMPIRE'S BORDERS ARE UNDEFENDED.

HIS HOPES DASHED, HIS PLANS IN RUINS, BELISARIUS MAKES FOR CONSTANTINOPLE, UNAWARE THAT TWO KNIGHTS WATCH HIS EVERY MOVE. HE SUSPECTS NOTHING WHEN A ROCKSLIDE CUTS HIM OFF FROM HIS ENTOURAGE, BLAMES BAD LUCK THAT A BRIDGE HAS BEEN WASHED AWAY, DIVERTING HIS PATH.

BUT WHEN THE NEW TRACK ENDS IN A SHEER DROP HE DRAWS A CONCLUSION, AND HIS SWORD: COINCIDENCES DO NOT COME IN THREES. HE TURNS AT THE STRANGER'S APPROACH. "DO WE TALK FIRST OR FIGHT FIRST?" PRINCE VALIANT ASKS. BELISARIUS LUNGES...

... LOGIC OVERCOME BY SHAME AT HIS OWN STUPIDITY. YET HE IS A SKILLED WARRIOR...

THEY PARRY AND SLICE, DUCK AND TUMBLE, WRESTLE AND DISENGAGE, DETERMINATION STRENGTHENED BY FATIGUE.

FAR AWAY IN THE MISTY ISLES, ALETA YEARNS FOR PRINCE VALIANT'S RETURN. SHE WILL SOON BE A MOTHER AGAIN. SHE WANTS HER HUSBAND THERE.
