Redistricting Effort Sees Final Stages

By MARY ANNE RHYNE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The state House today approved a plan for reapportioning congressional districts after a bitter debate and confusing flurry of amendments.

The new map now goes back to the Senate for concurrence on a minor amendment. Then it faces review by the U.S. Justice Department, which rejected earlier redistricting plans the state submitted.

Approval of the congressional plan is all that stood in the way of adjournment today. The General Assembly approved plans Wednesday for redistricting itself and for possibly delaying the statewide primary election, now set for May 4.

House members voted 80-28 today to adopt a plan that sparked criticism for moving Durham County from the 4th District to the 2nd District, now served by Rep. L.H. Fountain. Supporters of the congressman strongly opposed the change.

Approval of the map came only after Fountain's supporters struggled for an amendment that in effect would have given the state two congressional redistricting plans.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, proposed that the House give federal justice officials 30 days to reconsider redistricting plans enacted by the General Assembly last year. If justice officials had not approved the 1981 plan within that time, the amendment would have put into effect the new reapportionment plan.

The House approved the amendment but later reversed its decision after stern warnings from Rep. J.P. Huskins, D-Iredell, chairman of the panel that drew up the congressional plans. Huskins predicted that legislators were wasting their time because Justice Department officials would not change their minds about the 1981 plan.

"Here we are today headed down the same road," Huskins said. "They're not going to reconsider the old plan and approve it."

The new legislative redistricting plans cross county lines in many places. The Senate plan establishes a majority-black district in the heart of Guilford County while the House map creates majority-black districts in Greensboro, Cumberland County and the northeast.

Kathleen Heenan, a Washington attorney hired by the state to defend its redistricting plans, predicted Wednesday that Justice officials would like the new House reapportionment plan. "I think it's a good plan," she said.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Redistricting Committee, predicted the Senate map would win federal approval despite Ms. Heenan's warnings earlier this week that the plan failed to adequately increase black voting strength in the northeast.

"I am a betting man and I'll bet this bill will pass," Rauch said. "We were told to get predominantly black districts. And we have done it. I think we've done an excellent job."

The Senate agreed Wednesday to move most of Wake County back into a three-member district with Lee and Harnett counties and divided Guilford County into three single-member districts, one of them a majority-black district.

The Senate plan easily won approval in the House.

Meanwhile, the House agreed to redraw its districts after turning back amendments aimed at shaping majority-black districts in Winston-Salem and Raleigh.

Meanwhile, the House agreed to redraw its districts after turning back amendments aimed at shaping majority-black districts in Winston-Salem and Raleigh.

The Senate approved the House plan after legislators from the northeast made one last unsuccessful attempt to change districts in their area.

Both House and Senate plans have a "range of deviation" of less than 10 percent, the limit established by committee leaders. The number refers to the percentage of variation the smallest and largest districts have from the ideal number of people for each legislator.

In other action:

— The General Assembly enacted a bill that will probably mean the statewide primary, set for May 4, will be delayed.

— The House elected Terre Thomas Bullock of Shelby, daughter of Rep. Betty Thomas, D-Cabarrus, to fill a vacant seat on the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

— Another measure was enacted into law giving public school systems a choice whether to charge tuition for students who live outside the district. The measure amends a law passed last year that required school systems to charge the tuition.

The amendment also sets a limit on how much tuition can be charged. The tuition is not to exceed the amount of local money the school system spends per pupil.

Big Deficit Concerning Republicans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican congressional leaders are trying to make sure President Reagan "understands the realities" of the growing Capitol Hill resentment of his deficit-ridden 1983 budget proposal.

But Reagan made it clear he was in no mood to compromise prior to a White House meeting today with Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., House Republican leader Robert H. Michel and Sen. Paul Laxalt, the president's closest friend in the Senate.

The object of their concern: Reagan's $75.6 billion 1983 spending plan and its projected $91.5 billion deficit.

Baker and the Senate's No. 2 Republican, Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, both said Wednesday that they found merit in a Democratic senator's alternative plan that calls for a virtual freeze on Pentagon spending while trimming by half the administration's three-year tax cut.

But Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan dismissed the Democratic plan as "absolutely ridiculous" and the president himself declared he will stick by his plans for big increases in military spending and deep cuts in outlays for social programs.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia criticized Regan's comments today, telling reporters, "I think the rhetoric ought to be cooled."

Stevens said today the administration's reaction was not surprising. "They did exactly what we expected them to do," he said. "They supported the product of their budget process."

But, Steven said, there is a "general feeling here in the Senate we should be concentrating more on achieving a balanced budget."

Mike Johnson, an aide to Illinois' Rep. Michel, said that although the White House arranged today's meeting Michel intended "once more to make sure the president understands the realities down here (in Congress)."

Baker, of Tennessee, and Laxalt, of Nevada, were expected to deliver a similar message.

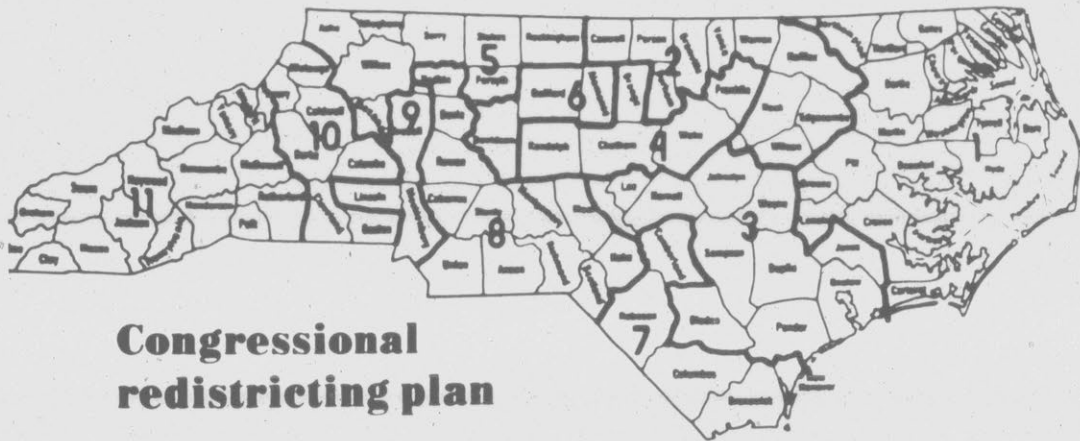

Meanwhile, Byrd sent Reagan a letter asking him to withdraw the administration's proposed budget.

"I am looking for a document we in Congress can work with; one based on realistic assumptions; one which shows a much clearer trend toward a balanced budget," Byrd wrote.

Byrd urged the president to take a "courageous step" like the one President Carter took in 1980 when he withdrew his original budget and submitted a new one.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., also kept up his harsh criticism of the president Wednesday, saying it was Reagan who should "put up or shut up."

"The product of the Reagan economic sales pitch has been a disaster and all the roadshows in the world are not going to change that fact," O'Neill said.

Pitt County's Representation In House Split By New Plan

By MELVIN LANG
Reflector Staff Writer

The General Assembly's latest redistricting effort, for the first time in history, splits Pitt County's representation in the state House of Representatives.

Approval of the controversial plan, which was designed to help blacks win more seats in the Legislature, came Wednesday despite last-ditch efforts by Pitt Reps. Sam Bundy and Ed Warren and other eastern North Carolina legislators.

Bundy, speaking in support of an amendment sponsored by him and several other legislators, told the House during debate on the proposal:

"It reminds me of the man holding a fish in one hand and a knife in the other. As the fish squirmed, the man said, 'stay still; I am just going to gut you.' So it is with the east and the northeast, for we are being gutted."

The House approved the redistricting bill by a vote of 82-31, overriding objections from the eastern legislators and from blacks and others who wanted to extend single-member districts — again designed to assure election of blacks — to Mecklenburg and Forsyth counties.

That bill, which still is subject to approval by the U.S. Department of Justice, splits off Bethel and Carolina townships from the rest of Pitt County and puts it in a new single-seat district that includes portions of Martin, Bertie and Hertford counties.

The remainder of Pitt is in a two-seat district that includes all of Greene County. The rest of Martin is now in a district that slices westward to the Vance-Warren county line.

The amendment co-sponsored by Bundy and Warren would have rejoined Martin County in one district and would have retained Bethel and Carolina townships in the Pitt County district but also would have placed Hookerton and Jason townships in Greene County in a district with Craven, Lenoir and Pamlico counties. That amendment failed 82-32.

Bundy and Warren said today they knew of no other fight against the House plan unless court action is initiated, as has been proposed in several counties, including Pitt and Martin.

Robert J. Martin of Bethel, a Pitt County commissioner, noted that plans already are under way to study the possibility of legal action in an effort to block the

Emergency Funds OK'd By Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation providing emergency funds to help low-income Americans pay their heating bills, to make price-support loans available for farmers and to help the unemployed was awaiting action by President Reagan today.

The Senate, in a voice vote Wednesday, approved a combined bill authorizing additional funds for low-income energy assistance and for price support and other programs in the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corp.

The House, which overwhelmingly passed the proposals as separate bills on Tuesday, accepted the combination measure 264-62 on Wednesday, and the legislation was forwarded to Reagan.

The Senate, meanwhile, responding to an urgent request from the president, unanimously gave final congressional approval to an additional $2.3 billion in jobless pay and services made necessary by the recession.

The 95-0 Senate vote followed by one day a 398-3 House vote and also sent that measure to the White House for Reagan's signature.

The energy assistance legislation adds $123 million to the more than $1.75 billion already allocated to help millions of low-income Americans with their heating bills. There have been indications that 25 states will run out of previously allotted funds by the end of this month.

"There are a lot of cold people out there who are waiting very anxiously," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass.

The combined bill approved Wednesday also gives the Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corp. a $5 billion infusion to head off termination of price support lending and other programs because it has run out of money. Officials said the fund is now effectively empty with some 233,000 farmers waiting to get price support loans.

The administration had opposed the extra money for low-income energy assistance, but congressmen expressed hope that Reagan would drop his opposition in light of the severe needs.

But debate continued on the administration's proposal to cut next year's heating bill subsidies for the poor.

"The bargain struck by the Congress with the American people was that the windfall profits tax would be used to provide assistance to those families and households to help them offset the increase in fuel prices resulting from decontrol," said Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass.

His remarks came during a hearing by the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on fossil and synthetic fuels.

The Reagan administration is proposing that $1.3 billion in federal funds be spent for such assistance in the 1983 fiscal year, compared to this year's $1.75 billion.

Univ. Of S.D.

Meets Brewer

VERMILLION, S.D. — Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, former ECU chancellor, is one of six candidates for the position of president of the University of South Dakota, who is reportedly being interviewed today.

The university is choosing a successor to Charles Lein, who will be leaving the position June 30. Lein's salary is $51,384 annually.

There were some 90 applicants for the position and a Board of Regents search and screening committee reduced the number under consideration to seven. One of those withdrew his name.

Today's interviews with the candidates were being conducted in closed session.

HONEY WITH COMB

I'd like to have some honey with the comb still in it. Where can you find it? M.S.

You might try local supermarkets. Some, from time to time, carry honey with comb.

If that fails, you might try calling a local beekeeper. However, any honey they have now would be from last year's crop. This year's crop won't be available until sometime in April.

One of the following people, who keep bees or have in the past, might be able to refer you to someone that could help: Don Dancy (756-1788), Adolphus Leonard, Falkland, or Kay J. Dunn (756-6752).

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission have been told there may be a ray of hope for future federal funding of the city's proposed new wastewater treatment plant.

The proposed new $11 million facility, to be located north of the Tar River and east of the Eastern Bypass, is now in the final design phase. Work on the project began in July 1973, and has been plagued by delays caused by changing federal regulations and other government red tape.

When final approval of the 201 Wastewater Facilities Plan — the preliminary design work — was given last year, there was no federal money available to continue with the final design phase or construction. So commissioners approved spending $505,000 in local funds to complete the detail design work.

The preliminary design work was accomplished with 75 percent federal grant funds, 12.5 percent from the state and 12.5 percent local money. The same cost sharing had been anticipated for the detail design work and construction.

A spokesman for Olsen Associates Inc., Jim Brown, told commissioners Tuesday that President Ronald Reagan last week signed into law legislation that would provide $45 million or $46 million for water pollution control facilities in North Carolina. However, Brown said, no money has been appropriated as yet.

If the money is appropriated, Brown suggested that Greenville might qualify for additional funding — up to 85 percent of the cost of construction — because of the innovative design of the proposed new plant.

Brown emphasized that, "It's just a fond hope ... a hoped for thing," but said, "We'll try to get classified innovative."

The Olsen firm, with offices in Raleigh and Greenville, handled work on the 201 Facilities Plan and is handling work on the final design.

Orman Whichard, an engineer with the Olsen firm, outlined for commissioners the design of the proposed facility. Saying the proposed design is highly energy efficient — about 18 percent more efficient than other designs — Whichard noted that there are only four or five other wastewater treatment plants in the United States of similar design.

None of them are as large as the 10.5 million gallon per day plant proposed for Greenville.

Commissioners approved the purchase of the Virginia Electric & Power Co. substation facilities here necessary for the commission to receive direct service from Carolina Power & Light Co. as part of the N.C. Power Agency program.

The price of the substation facilities, including land and

Dear Abby

Dad's Words Of Love Are Best

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1982 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I received a telephone call at 2:30 in the morning from the emergency room at one of our hospitals. My 18-year-old daughter had been injured in an auto accident.

I rushed there and found her covered with blood and so drunk (or stoned) they had to tie her down to sew up her face! There was little they could do about her teeth. They were back at the scene of the accident.

Now she is trying to recover. Within 48 hours, her "friends" arrived. Their biggest concern seemed to be what type of drugs she was getting "for free" in the hospital.

As long as my daughter is in the hospital, I can rest at night knowing that she can't drive over an innocent person or kill herself. When she gets out, I will lie awake nights waiting for the phone to ring again. Maybe next time it will be the morgue.

Abby, please write to my daughter and say the words she needs to hear right now but will mean nothing coming from her father. I don't want to lose my little girl.

DAMNED IN DALLAS

DEAR DAMNED: My heart aches for you, but the "words" your daughter needs to hear right now will mean nothing coming from me. She needs to hear her father say, "Honey, I love you. Let's not talk about yesterday. The Lord spared you because he wanted you to live. When you get well, please take a serious look at the precious life you almost threw away. You can depend on me to help you in any way I can."

Father, you alone can't "save" her. She will have to save herself. But letting her know that you love her is a good beginning.

There are some excellent programs in your area for teens with drug problems. If you need further help from me, please write again. I care.

DEAR ABBY: You asked why it is considered bad luck to seat 13 at a table. It's very likely because there were 13 people at the Last Supper, and you know what happened then.

If you use this letter, please don't use my name. I am now retired, but when I was an active bishop living in New York about a dozen years ago, you printed a letter I had written saying that Jesus had turned water into wine, and it took me three months to answer all the complaints I received from people in the Bible Belt who said, "If Jesus turned water into wine, he should not have done so!"

THE RIGHT REVEREND (NAME WITHHELD)

DEAR ABBY: I found this in the "AORN Journal" — a publication put out by the Association of Operating Nurses: "The Chickenization of Women"

"Women are frequently referred to as poultry. We cluck at hen parties. When we aren't henpecking men, we are egging them on. In youth we are chicks. Mothers watch over their broods. Later we are old biddies with an empty-nest syndrome. Is it just a coincidence that so many women's wages are chicken feed?"

ANN D'ARCY, OKLAHOMA NURSE

M.C. Teague Is Guest Speaker

NCFWC Junior Woman's Club of Greenville held its meeting last week at the Woman's Club. The Public Affairs Department sponsored a presentation on "Crime Against Women."

Department Chairman Sandra Garner introduced M.C. Teague, who conducted the workshop, which was also open to the public.

Reports on the upcoming bridge benefit set for Tuesday night, Feb. 23, were given by Cathy Crawford, food chairman, Karen Rogers, tickets, and Mary Vojtecky, favors. The session of play will be from 7:30-10:30 p.m. and will take place at the Women's Club.

Mary Shearin, education department member, reported Lisa Elaine Caraway, a North Pitt High School student, as winner of the Sallie Southall Cotton Scholarship. A college shower will be given for her at the April general meeting.

Through the Home Life Department a film "To Care Enough," on problem pregnancy, has been scheduled for showing at four local churches.

Membership Chairman Shelley Basnight announced an informational coffee for guests and club members. Ms. Shearin reported on the Greenville Area Preservation Association meeting she attended.

A slate of candidates for new officers was presented.

President Kathy Hunnings reminded members of Junior Day in Aurora and the District 15 Arts Festival on Saturday, Feb. 27, in Washington.

Special guests at the meeting were Gayle Sterken and Chris Flower. Lydia Hayes and Ms. Rogers were meeting hostesses.

Ms. Hunnings was nominated District 15 Outstanding Junior Clubwoman of the Year at the annual Junior Day held Saturday at the Aurora Community Center.

She received a traveling award and was presented a personal gift. Ms. Shearin was introduced as the incoming junior director for the district for 1982-84.

Special guests for the day were Mrs. Melton Evans, District 15 chairman, and Mrs. Ernest Holt of Greenville, NCFWC second vice president.

Workshops were conducted on breast cancer and child safety in the automobile. Following a buffet luncheon, special recognition was given to the outgoing Junior Director Carlotta Robinson of Williamston. Ms. Basnight, past junior director, presented her a gift from the district junior clubs.

All six junior clubs were represented at the meeting. The Farmville Juniors will be hostesses in 1983.

The meeting was hosted by the Aurora Junior Woman's Club.

American Households Are Rated

Despite some shortcomings, more than four of five American households see their housing units as either good or excellent, a federal government study shows.

Dr. Glenda Herman, extension housing specialist at North Carolina State University, said, "The same number rated their neighborhood as good or excellent, too."

Homeowners more often rated their dwellings as excellent or good than did renters and there were several structural defects commonly reported, Dr. Herman says.

The most commonly reported defect was basement water leakage. This was noted in 26 percent of the owner households and 18 percent of renter households.

Other significant findings included signs of rats or mice in 14 percent of the households; breakdowns in heating equipment at no heating equipment in 19 percent of the south's housing units, compared to one or two percent in the northeast.

And, as might be guessed, those with the highest incomes expressed greatest satisfaction with their dwellings.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

As a native Midwesterner, I am always amused by the ads for winter styles that appear in slick magazines.

I saw one the other day that pictured a young woman with 35 pounds of hair in flight. Her coat flapped open to reveal a matching skirt that reached mid-calf and accentuated her crushed velvet boots. Her cute leather driving gloves dangled from her pockets. She was smiling. The headline over the picture read, "MEET WINTER HEAD-ON! THINK CRUISE!"

There was no doubt in my mind the entire ad agency shot this after a five-martini lunch.

Let's talk winter. To begin with, no one in his right mind smiles in the winter. If God had wanted us to smile when the chill factor reaches 45 below, He would have given us lips long enough to cover our gums.

As for "THINK CRUISE," the only reason the people on the Love Boat are able to sustain themselves during the Alaska trip is because of their overactive sex lives.

The winter styles in the Midwest, to my knowledge, have never been photographed. Hairs that freeze in your nose and drip are not a pretty sight. Imagine, if you will, that the temperature is nine degrees below zero. The car has gone into deep sleep and will not awaken until spring. The milk freezes between the time the milkman takes it from the truck and puts it in your hands. The windows are covered with frost. The dog, who has kidneys the size of lentils, refuses to go out and pretends he is dead. And for the first time in 15 years everyone stays in the kitchen at the end of the meal.

Let's talk winter fashions.

For Bedtime: The layered look. Pajama bottoms from the Goodwill bag, topped by a long-sleeved flannel gown and cardigan sweater without buttons. Purple and gold knee socks with hot-water-bottle soles.

Costume for Taking Garbage to Garbage Cans: White boots with Muppets pictured on side, army fatigue jacket from hall closet, afghan worn casually over head and face and two mismatched socks from washer worn on hands.

For Those Special At-Home Evenings by the Fire: Thermal underwear, topped by jeans, turtle-neck sweater and windbreaker, set off by fleece-lined balls of fur on the feet and a dog on the lap. All of this is topped off by a ski mask and a body sack zipped to the chin.

Now we're talking winter!

Sulfur dioxide, generated mainly from coal-burning power plants, is the chief suspect in the formation of acid rain, a weak form of sulfuric acid that can fall hundreds of miles from its origin.

Sens. George Mitchell of Maine and Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York told a Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee Wednesday that the Reagan administration seems ignorant of the deep resentment felt by Canadians toward U.S. air pollution.

Acid rain has been blamed for damaging lakes and forests in Canada, and Moynihan said the Canadian feeling is that "the United States is pouring poison into their lakes and does not give a damn. ... We have got to pay attention to their concerns."

Acid Rain Issue Irking Canada

WASHINGTON (AP) — By ignoring the phenomenon of acid rain, the United States is "severely straining" its friendly relations with Canada, two Democratic senators say.

Military Opens Doors

For decades, The Daily Reflector has periodically published a column of short items on assignments, promotions and whereabouts of young men and women serving in the armed forces.

Realization of just how many people from eastern Carolina serve in the Coast Guard, Army, Navy, Marines or Air Force continues to make a deep impression on us.

We've wondered at the motivation.

There's an element of tradition, say some, that the Southern states evoke a high degree of patriotism among their people...in explaining why the South seems inordinately represented in uniforms of their country.

Others remind the South's economy has long trailed other parts of the nation and so its young people often turn to the armed services as an economic alternative. That also has a ring of truth.

But even in the good times there appears no shortage of recruits in the Southland, opening the door to speculation many young men and women are taking advantage of an opportunity to further their education.

Service schools are a start...polishing neglected basic education, training in a multitude of skills from cooking to communications to computer know-how. But beyond that, the far-sighted know that the military can be a door to college education. We know of several from our area who followed that path.

It reminds one that while the armed forces are always looked upon as essential in times of turbulence, they also offer an essential role in terms of opening doors to education and careers in the civilian world, too.

Now We Are Communicating

Historians pretty much agree that a "lack of communication" was probably a prime factor of U.S. involvement in World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

The Kaiser didn't know exactly how far he could go without stirring up American wrath, nor did the leadership of Germany and Italy "get the message" until 1942 (Japan simply gambled and lost).

In Korea and Vietnam we responded to invasions of nominally democratic peoples, seeing behind it all the influence of China and the Soviet Union. They just didn't believe we'd do it.

These days there is a chorus of posing "options" and "drawing lines" which sound very warlike, but in essence a case of cautioning anybody with aggressive intent that they are playing with fire. It's pretty obvious Washington is "communicating" with a vengeance...hoping to insure at least an uneasy peace in our time.

THIS AFTERNOON

Point To Courts

By BILL NOBLITT
RALEIGH — The defendant is nicely dressed, well educated, has a good job, and doesn't look like a criminal.

The defense attorney is one of the best to be found, willing to use any legal maneuver or loophole in the law to get the defendant acquitted. Money is no object.

The prosecutor knows full well that this will be a long and costly courtroom battle, taking lots of time and budget which could well be invested in something else more pressing.

The jury — if it ever gets that far — doesn't see a dangerous person before them. Rather, they see a neighbor, the corner merchant or the banker.

So the stage is set for the rendering of justice in the typical drunken driving case in North Carolina.

At stake for the average citizen is whether the state's highways and byways will become increasingly hazardous due to the rising numbers of drunken drivers, no doubt one result of a declining number of convictions.

License
At stake for the defendant is that all-important tool of trade and commerce, the piece of paper on which many livelihoods and social or commercial intercourse depend, a driving license.

As a veteran judge put it: He would rather handle the most difficult murder trial than a drunken driving case because both the defendant and the defense lawyer will do anything to delay and beat the charge. And the jurors will be sitting there saying to themselves: "There, but for the grace of God, stand I."

BILL NOBLITT

At year's end, drunken driving arrests were up to 82,000. Statewide, the conviction rate has fallen below 50 percent. That means pretty good odds of beating that charge which stands in the way of justice. Punishment for crime is supposed to be a deterrent. Take away the penalty and many people don't mind getting caught.

The fault must be placed on the courtrooms, wherever within that complex scenario described earlier in this column that fault lies.

Charges are reduced frequently because district attorneys don't figure they can get jurors to convict and judges allow the reductions because their calendars are full and need attention and the defense attorneys manipulate all angles to get their clients off.

When the Christian Action League called for a statewide commission to recommend a course of action, the finger pointed at the courts.

I would like to briefly express my dissatisfaction with WNCT's decision to transfer Jim Woods from sports to weather.

Jim Woods is an excellent sportscaster, and I fail to see why WNCT should be advertising in newspapers across the state for a sportscaster when they have such a competent one already on staff.

I have expressed my dissatisfaction in writing to Mr. Dick Armfield, general manager of WNCT, and would like to request that all interested readers either telephone Mr. Armfield or write him to express their opinion in the matter.

Other Editors Say Scant Sympathy

(The Durham Sun)

"We are being attacked from all sides," a state legislator moaned recently in an interview as she recounted the troubles facing the General Assembly.

She listed problems with legislative redistricting, the flap over extending lawmakers' terms from two to four years and recent charges that the Legislature has violated the state Constitution at least twice.

But what she forgot to mention — or chose not to mention — is that virtually every problem facing the General Assembly is of its own making. Her one-sided version of the story is like someone stirring up a hornet's nest then complaining about getting stung.

In redistricting, the Legislature brought on its problems by pursuing the selfish interests of individual lawmakers rather than following the law. Even when a lawsuit was filed against the proposed redistricting and the U.S. Justice Department ruled that the state's plan was unacceptable, the Legislature took little meaningful action.

In trying to extend lawmakers' terms, the General Assembly again caused its own problems. Tar Heel voters didn't ask that lawmakers double their terms. In their unquenchable thirst for power, the legislators did it themselves, passing a constitutional amendment to that effect last summer and putting it on the ballot for this spring. Meanwhile, objections to the proposal have mushroomed, including opposition from three of the state's four living former governors.

The constitutional squabble was caused when the General Assembly overstepped its bounds — violating the separation of powers doctrine by putting some of its members on state commissions and by trying to usurp the governor's control over federal block grants and transfers of money within state agency budgets.

No one denies that the General Assembly has troubles, that it is indeed being "attacked from all sides". But finding sympathy for our lawmakers is another matter, since the "attackers" were provoked by the legislators to begin with.

By pursuing selfish, foolish policies, our legislators have made their bed uncomfortable. They can lie in it, until they clean up their act.

NOTHING CHEAP ABOUT US!

Good Intent A Failure

CHICAGO — Let it be assumed that in adopting their new gun control ordinance, the trustees of Morton Grove, Ill., were motivated by the very best intentions. Their purpose was to prevent crime and to reduce the number of tragic accidents and impulsive shootings that involve the use of handguns.

But good intentions can be more than offset by lamentable consequences, and that is the case here. The ordinance is fatuous. It cannot possibly be enforced. Its inevitable effect will be to undermine the respect for law on which the rule of law depends.

Under the ordinance, which became effective last week, "no person shall possess, in the Village of Morton Grove, any handgun, unless the same has been rendered permanently inoperative." The law contains exceptions for peace officers, licensed gun collectors, gun clubs, and members of the armed services while in the performance of their official duties. The law specifically the public safety, the court ruled, a municipality's handguns. If the trustees believed the ordinance "would serve to inch the Morton Grove community one step further to becoming peaceable and safe," that is enough.

As for the U.S. Constitution, said the court, the Second Amendment restrains only acts of Congress; the Ninth Amendment is inapplicable. Whether the ordinance is wise or unwise is not for the court to say. The law is a valid exercise of legislative authority.

Very well. It may not be a court's function to comment on legislative wisdom, but others are not so confined. The first thing to be said of this remarkably impotent ordinance is that it will not be obeyed. And second, if it were obeyed, the effect would be to leave law-abiding citizens defenseless against criminals.

exempts antique firearms and apparently exempts most rifles and shotguns also. Persons who voluntarily deliver their working handguns to the Morton Grove police are not to be compensated for the weapons, but they will be immune from prosecution. Violation of the ordinance becomes a misdemeanor punishable by fines up to $500 or by jail sentences up to six months.

Immediately upon its enactment last year, the ordinance was challenged by four handgun owners who live in the village. They contended that the law violates both the Illinois and the United States constitutions. On Dec. 29, U.S. District Judge Bernard M. Decker dismissed these arguments and upheld the ordinance.

The Illinois Constitution provides that "subject only to the police power, the right of the individual citizen to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed." When it comes to

Bankrupt On Middle East

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak's polite "no" to the Reagan administration's humiliating appeal for "declaration" that would have had Egypt selling out on the Palestinian problem marks a new bottom for U.S. influence in the Middle East.

Mubarak's refusal had been made patently clear to Secretary of State Alexander Haig during his two highly publicized trips to Cairo, so much so that President Reagan did not press him during their arms-length talks here last week. If he had, Reagan would have been asked a question for which there is no answer: What is the administration's Palestinian plan?

Bankruptcy of Reagan's Mideast policy is now indicated by the refusal of both Israel and Egypt to do what the U.S. beseeches. This focuses the general decline in U.S. influence and is close to par for Reagan's track record: threats and bombast but meager action over Cuba's intervention in Central America, fueled by Moscow; tough talk about Poland, but inability to persuade NATO allies to come along on sanctions.

Nowhere is the decline so apparent as in the Middle East. Blocked on the one hand by Israel's refusal to give the Palestinians the "full autonomy" promised by Prime Minister Menachem Begin at Camp David, Haig turned to Mubarak in desperation. What he wanted was Mubarak's signature on a "declaration" dealing in vague terms with the autonomy issue. Haig freely conceded to Mubarak that the "declaration" was incomplete, but surely it could be polished up sometime later.

Likewise with the question of mushrooming Jewish settlements on Palestinian land. Haig suggested postponing it, but Mubarak reminded him that the late President Sadat had been hoodwinked on the settlements issue during the Camp David talks more than three years ago.

Mubarak and his aides left Washington with disturbing impressions about the murky prism through which their hosts view the Palestinian issue: that Arab East Jerusalem is not an important problem; that the centrality of the Palestinian issue was partly created by previous administrations.

Mubarak was studious in drawing a contrast between the warmth of Sadat's relationship with Reagan-Haig and his own relationship — correct but arms-length. His advisers were dismayed during Haig's two visits to Cairo that the secretary failed to understand, as one Mubarak intimate told us, that Sadat was "both leader and president" of Egypt, but President Mubarak has not had time to prove his leadership. Sadat could risk intimacy — until he was assassinated. Mubarak could not.

So he kept his distance here and would not even consider putting his signature on an empty autonomy "declaration." Intimacy with Reagan, coupled with a sellout on the West Bank, could gravely undermine him with Islamic militants and other enemies at home. Mubarak's aides left Washington wondering if Reagan and Haig understood.

But Mubarak left with another impression. Despite his resistance to putting his signature on an autonomy paper, Reagan did not use Mubarak's request for more and faster U.S. military aid as a pressure point. Similarly, the new $1 billion Egyptian-French deal for advanced Mirage aircraft (to be financed by Saudi Arabia) showed that Egypt is not wholly dependent on the U.S. That undercuts U.S. influence, but during his talks in the White House Mubarak felt no displeasure. The private consensus in the Mubarak camp as he left here would not make cozy reading in the president's morning news summary. It is that Reagan's inability or refusal to deliver the "full autonomy" pledged Sadat at Camp David shows a fear of Israel's political power in the U.S. certain to further cancel out American influence far beyond the Arab Middle East.

Yet Reagan made a deep personal impact on Mubarak — an impression of decency and kindness, but not of great strength and consistency, supposedly the hallmarks of Reaganism.

Mubarak went home to develop Mubarakism: closer ties with the Arab and non-aligned worlds; no retreat on a fair deal for the Palestinians; a discreet new distance between Cairo and Washington. He knows what he wants, but the question grows louder: Can Ronald Reagan say the same? Copyright 1982 Field Enterprises, Inc.

Strength For Today

CHRISTIAN LIVING COMES HIGH

Jesus was once asked whether the saved were few or many. He never gave a direct answer to the query. But he did make a vivid, if somewhat indirect, reply: "Strive to enter in by the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in and will not be able."

This response constitutes a reproof to those people who try to make Christianity a sentimental matter. True Christians are not those people who constantly testify to their faith in an ostentatious manner. The first thing in a believer's life is submission to the will of God. That means without hesitation he must accept God's purposes. He must enter into life by the strait gate and pursue the narrow way which leadeth unto life. Love has its origin in submission — not sentimentality.

The word "strive" is derived from the Greek word from which we get the English word "agony." The Christian life has a price tag on it. It comes high. — Elisha Douglass

Economic Conservatism Is In

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — From all the sounds of the oratory and the groans of the penny-pinchers, this is economic conservatism time in America, a time when you hold on to what you have, cut back and take no risks.

The president has made clear that economic conservatism is in. He is cutting, cutting, cutting: The bureaucracy, aid to states, aid to individuals who had taken for granted their dependency on government.

The sound of it echoes through the corporate world. The big automakers seek take-backs from workers. Forget expansion, reduce risk. Win praise for saving paper clips, rather than a raise for winning new business.

Wall Street announces its true-blue conservatism. Buy stocks for dividends rather than for capital gains. Buy the safe ones; they might go nowhere, but you won't risk your money.

Same line at home. Watch each dollar, keep the thermostat under 65, make do with the old car for another year or two, eat pasta rather than steak, and get an IRA to cut income tax payments.

That's the sound of it anyway. But you wonder how much is sound and how is solid when you read that the Chamber of Commerce's "squeeze index" shows federal taxes grew faster than income in December.

Is the country really conserving? Or is it the economy wasting away?

Rather than conserving, that is, could you argue that the economy is closing down? People are spending less, investors are investing less, business is making fewer products, everyone is making fewer plans.

In the past, challenges were met with answers, but the answers don't appear automatically today. Perhaps, some suggest, the older industries have simply seen their day.

That argument can be carried a long way. While old industries falter, newer ones, mainly electronic and technological, have appeared on the scene, enough of them to prove that American ingenuity is still alive.

But so far, overall, business has shown little willingness or ability to develop expansion plans, tax incentives or not. It waits rather than conserves, and sales and tax revenue are lost each day.

So are the contributions of 16 millions workers who have lost their jobs or had their hours reduced or who have suffered the ignominy of not even being counted because they have given up looking for a job.

Blame the Federal Reserve and high interest rates for discouraging expansion, say Reagan's defenders. Blame big government deficits for the high interest rates, say critics of the president's program.

Blame impatience; the president's program has been under way less than a year, while problems have developed over decades. Blame business for not taking the tax bait. Blame political opponents.

But blame is lame, and mainly a contribution to oratory rather than to the solution. It answers no questions, such as whether the economy is conserving its powers for a big push to come, or just wasting away.

NAACP Emancipation Celebration Is Planned

EDWARD MUSE

REV. ARLEE GRIFFIN JR.

KELLY ALEXANDER

The Pitt County Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will sponsor an Emancipation Proclamation Celebrations program here Saturday and Sunday.

Pitt NAACP President D.D. Garrett said the theme of the program will be "using effective political action to eliminate a dual society."

Kelly Alexander, state NAACP president, will speak at a 7 p.m. banquet at the Holiday Inn on Saturday. Edward B. Muse, national director of life memberships for the NAACP, is scheduled to present life membership awards and certificates at the banquet.

Muse, founder of the Greenwich Village-Chelsea Branch of the NAACP in New York City, has more than 25 years experience in social work and civil rights as both a volunteer and professional.

Before joining the NAACP national staff, Muse was a research assistant at Columbia University's Bureau of Applied Social Research, where he participated in studies on attitudes between racial, religious and ethnic groups, and held an administrative position with the United Hias Service, an international Jewish migration agency.

The Rev. Arlee Griffin Jr., pastor of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church, will be the speaker at a mass meeting scheduled for 7 p.m. Sunday at Phillippi Missionary Baptist Church in Simpson.

Set Seminar At Union Carbide

A seminar on digestive diseases and the industrial worker will be held on Feb. 26 at Union Carbide with Dr. Dennis R. Sinar, associate professor of medicine, gastroenterology and clinical research at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, as the speaker.

The meeting, scheduled for 7:30-9 p.m., is sponsored by the Coastal Plains Occupational Health Nurses Association and Pitt Community College and will provide continuing education credits.

The sponsors urge all nurses, nursing students, instructors and those in supervisory positions to attend.

The Law

The law in North Carolina, they say, is plain and simple. It is easy to enforce, and arrest records show that law enforcement people are doing so. The problem is in the courts.

Several years ago the North Carolina General Assembly was faced with a proposal that any person convicted of drunken driving must serve three days in jail. Such a harsh penalty was turned down.

The question is whether even a mandatory jail term would help since the punishment would hinge on conviction, and the problem is too many people are getting reduced charges or special leniency so that punishment for drunken driving is not certain.

Some law enforcement specialists think the answer might be in the driving license system. Is a license a right, or a privilege? If it is a right, then constitutional problems can arise from efforts to control who does or who doesn't get a license. If it is a privilege, then a law could be written which makes surrender of that license immediate and positive if an individual is arrested for driving drunk — whether convicted or not.

must be to make it more difficult for criminals and lunatics to acquire firearms. But the Morton Grove ordinance cannot possibly serve this purpose. If the statute works, it will prevent only law-abiding citizens from acquiring firearms; it will not affect criminals and lunatics at all.

The more I look at the Morton Grove ordinance, the more I am reminded of Justice Stewart's famous appraisal of a dirty movie. He knew obscenity when he saw it, "and this isn't it." I think I would recognize a useful gun-control law if one ever was drafted, and this isn't it.

Legislature's plan.
 "We are going to do a feasibility study to see what can be done," Martin said. "When we find out what that is, we'll do something."
 George Saleeby of Grifton, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Party, said he also favors court action.
 "I, as an individual, am definitely opposed to taking Carolina and Bethel townships out. They should stay in the county," Saleeby said.
 D.D. Garrett of Greenville, president of the Pitt NAACP chapter, said he had "reservations" about the redistricting plan although he generally supported it.
 However, Garrett characterized the redistricting dispute as one centering on "the race thing and on dollars and cents."

Garrett explained: "Take a community like Bethel. All of us know there is a lot of money in that little community ... whoever has control has the support of a lot of dollars and cents."
 "All of this boils down to a political charade," Garrett said.
 Rep. Warren said he thought legal action by the counties was "a good idea."
 "I feel like that, in any county, you are trying to have unity. When you go across county lines, you have people going in two or more directions," Warren said.
 Warren and Bundy each said they believe the state should have appealed a Justice Department ruling that struck down North Carolina's constitutional barrier against splitting counties for legislative districts.
 In his speech to the House Wednesday, Bundy said the people "down east are mad, angry, frustrated and disillusioned. They cannot understand why the General Assembly did not appeal the decision of one man who declared a part of our constitution invalid ... How can we let one bureaucrat overrule our constitution?"

PITT STUDENTS LEARN ABOUT CAREERS ... Sgt. Glen Swanson of the North Carolina Highway Patrol explains to Beth Glisson, a student at Wellcome Middle School, about careers with the patrol. Wellcome Middle held its annual career day Wednesday in observance of National Vocational Education Week. Over 40 businesses, organizations and

Alex Hill, an employee of the Regional Acceptance Corp. who was robbed while making a night deposit last Friday, said today he did not see the robber until he "came to my (car) door."

 "I pulled up at the bank. The robber came to my door. I did not see him until he came to my door," Hill said.

The Daily Reflector reported Sunday that Hill had told police he saw a man loitering at the NCNB bank at West End Circle before the robbery.

 Department director Boyd Lee explained that already the university has constructed a solar system to heat the small administrative building on the park's premises.

Dr. Wendling pointed out that "this is the first program of this type in this part of the state. I feel if it one that can serve many people in many ways."

Commission members expressed appreciation to Dr. Wendling for the efforts he has made in inaugurating the River Park environmental program.

Commissioners accepted as presented the annual financial statement of the Greenville Little League.

The statement shows that cash receipts for the past year totaled $20,164.32, with total expenditures amounting to $18,049.64, leaving a net profit balance of $2,114.68. This 1981 profit, added to the cash balance at the beginning of the year, give the league a cash balance of $14,418.99.

Another account, one designed to cover special trips out of town and related events, has a cash balance of $3,352.82.

Lee noted "this year is the year for the league to purchase 180 new uniforms, so that will deplete the cash balance a great deal."

Robberies In Early Hours

Greenville police were investigating two armed robberies reported early today.

Chief Glenn Cannon said two men entered the Blount Fertilizer Co. building on 14th Street about 12:30 a.m., beat up the 75-year-old night watchman, took his .38 caliber pistol and holster, his car keys and car, and a television set.

The watchman, Lee Roy Mayo of 307 Mumford Road, was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment and later released, the chief noted.

About 3:30 a.m. police were called to the Fast Fare on Memorial Drive near the Sixth Street intersection by the clerk, who told officers there was an armed robbery in progress in the store's parking lot.

Cannon said a lone gunman allegedly held up a truck driver, although he said the driver's name, or what was reported missing, was not immediately available.

However, Cannon said Department of Corrections' dogs were used to track the robber to the Medical Pavilion parking lot on Fifth Street, where he is believed to have had a car.

During the process, the chief said, the holster taken from Mayo earlier in the evening was located on the Warren's Texaco Service Station lot.

Later, police found Mayo's car, abandoned in the driveway of a vacant house at 400 Arbor St.

New Homes For Embassy Personnel In Tokyo

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. diplomatic staff will close ranks on a hill in central Tokyo this year after bartering away some of the choicest pieces of real estate in Japan's expensive capital.

In a move that began last autumn and will be completed late in 1982, almost all U.S. Embassy personnel will be relocated in 173 new apartment and townhouse units being built in the embassy's residential compound, an 11-acre hilltop a short walk from the embassy and near the nightlife centers of Roppongi and Akasaka.

The compound property — formerly the estate of the Mitsui family, owners of Japan's largest trading company — was acquired by the United States during the post-World War II occupation.

Over the years, most U.S. diplomats assigned here have lived in the compound's three 1950s-vintage, medium-rise apartment blocks and a few small homes, while a handful of top officials occupied more sumptuous quarters scattered around the city.

To help pay for the $70 million project, the United States arranged a special agreement with the construction contractor, Ohbayashi-gumi Ltd.

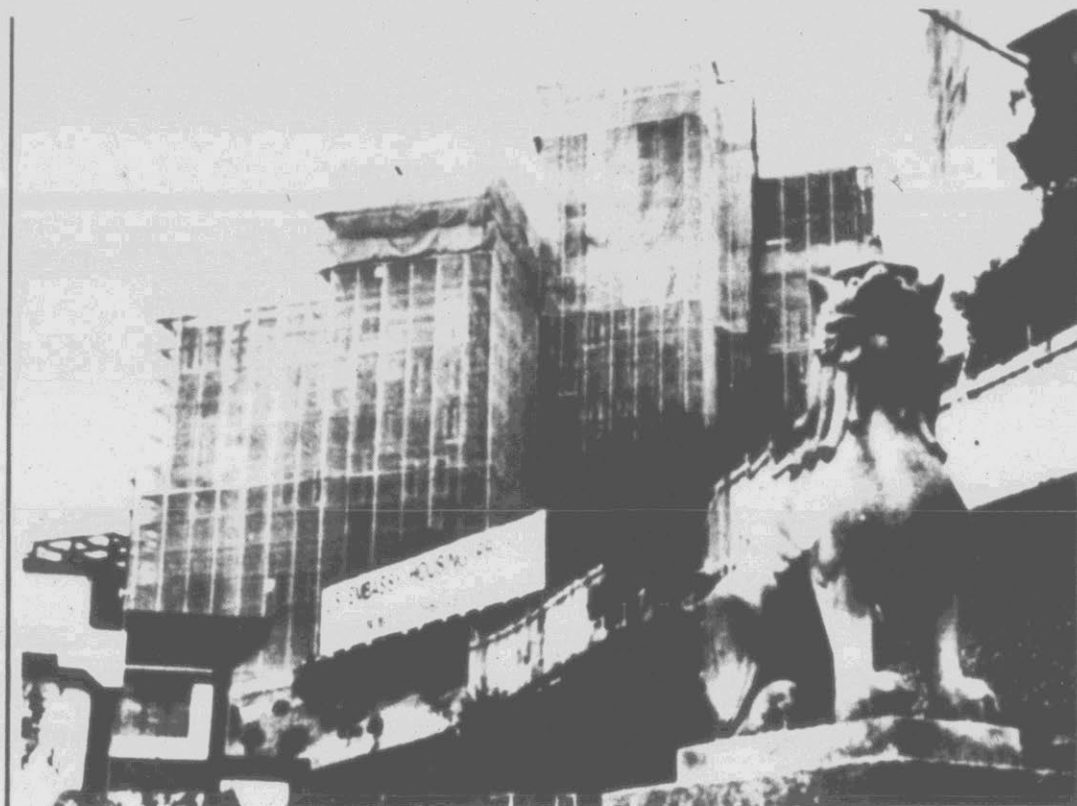

It gave the contractor six of the "off-campus" properties — each worth millions of dollars in Tokyo's skyrocketing real estate market. The contractor, in turn, agreed to pay for moving the 112 diplomats and families then living in the compound to private apartments while the 43 new townhouses and three apartment buildings — with a total of 132 units — are completed.

The only homes to escape the tradeoff are the ambassador's residence, itself a Tokyo landmark, now occupied by Ambassador Mike Mansfield, former U.S. Senate majority leader, and the residence of the deputy chief of mission.

U.S. Officials would not divulge the actual value of the six properties, all of which are in high-class residential neighborhoods. However, Yukio Oishi, an official of Ohbayashi-gumi, said market prices for the 153,218 square feet of land run to $409 a square foot, a total of $62.6 million.

Oishi said all 10 homes on the six properties will be torn down. The company has not decided what to use the properties for, but he said they would be good sites for luxury condominiums, which in central Tokyo may hover in the $444,000 price range.

Several of the doomed houses have been widely

NEW EMBASSY HOUSING — Shown under construction in Tokyo are the 173 new apartment and townhouse units where almost all U.S. Embassy personnel will be relocated at this admired amid Tokyo's chaotic mix of architectural styles, and the tradeoff was not popular with some Americans. "It was a controversial move," said Frank Fulham, counselor for administrative affairs. "We had people who hated to give up the properties, which were so nice."

The economic minister's home, designed by a Frank Lloyd Wright disciple, has an indoor, glass-encased skyview garden and a formal garden outside. Navy Capt. Walter C. Nix, a defense attache who lives in one of the new townhouses, said his former four-bedroom home with garden was "like living in a museum."

The compound itself is a parklike setting of lawns, trees and gardens, but Fulham said the apartment buildings had deteriorated to a point of being "embarrassingly old," and upkeep prohibitive.

The three buildings — named for Commodore Matthew Perry, who opened Japan to the West in 1853; Townsend Harris, the first U.S. Consul to Japan, and pre-World War II Ambassador Joseph Grew — "were pretty grim," said William Maurer, embassy press attache.

The new three- and four-bedroom townhouses, which opened in January, resemble suburban American condos, each with a little patio for barbecues. Steelwork on the new 14-story Perry, Harris and Grew buildings is rising and they are to be ready by year's end.

The changeover is expected to save money in a variety of ways. Nix said all eight people in his office will move to the compound. Thus the Pentagon will pay rent to the State Department rather than to Japanese landlords.

On Honor Lists

BUIES CREEK — Several Pitt and Martin county students were named to the president's list and dean's list at Campbell University for the fall semester.

Durwood Mitchell Leggett of Robersonville made the president's list, which requires a 3.50 grade point average on all work.

Making the dean's list, which requires a 3.25 grade point average, were Owen Charles Elks Jr. of Williamston and David C. Sutton of Greenville.

Computer Gas Service Grows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Computer gasoline tanks are springing up at eight Southern California service stations, giving motorists the chance to charge their purchases directly to their checking accounts with new "debit cards."

"Anyone who doesn't want to carry a lot of cash with them and not come into contact with people" will find the computerized pumps appealing, said Paul Moller.

Western-style housing in Tokyo ranges from $890 a month for a cramped two-bedroom apartment to $4,400 for a three-bedroom apartment.

In similar moves involving U.S. diplomats elsewhere, security against terrorism has been a prime concern. Officials said it is not in Japan, one of the world's safest countries.

However, some say they worry that living in the compound, with its own commissary, beauty parlor, swimming pool, tennis courts and other recreation facilities, may cause the Americans to become isolated from the Japanese surroundings, as are many who live on military bases.

"People will have the opportunity to create a little America, where those who are not outgoing will not socialize with the Japanese," Fulham said.

Dispute Bridge-Incident Claim

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — A diver, a pilot, a naturalist and a water flow expert disagreed with the prosecution over what happened at a Chattahoochee River bridge one night last May, as the defense tried to disprove charges that Wayne B. Williams killed two black youths.

Williams' optometrist also testified Wednesday, disputing a statement from a prosecution witness who placed Williams with a young black shortly before the youth's death.

Williams, 23, a free-lance photographer and aspiring talent scout, is charged with murder in the deaths of Nathaniel Cater, 27, and Jimmy Ray Payne, 21.

Cater and Payne were among 28 young blacks whose deaths in a 22-month period were investigated by a special police task force. No arrests have been made in the 26 other deaths.

Williams first came to police attention when he was spotted by a police stakeout team at the Jackson Parkway bridge over the Chattahoochee River. The team stopped Williams before dawn on May 22 after an officer under the bridge reported hearing a loud splash.

Cater's body was found about a mile downstream from the bridge two days later, and prosecutors contend Williams had just dumped Cater's body when he was spotted by the team.

Payne's body had been found a month earlier in the same area.

Michael Gurley, a member of the Fulton County Fire Department diving team, testified he and another diver searched the waters around the bridge and downstream for 35 to 40 feet on May 23 but did not find Cater's body. He conceded he searched for only 20 to 25 minutes.

An Atlanta police helicopter pilot, Robert Ingram, testified he searched the surface of the river by air from the bridge to 100 yards downstream on May 23 and did not spot a body floating in the water.

Gurley and Ingram said they were not told what to look for when they were ordered by their superiors to search the area. But Gurley said he was told the location where a splash had been heard.

Both prosecution and defense witnesses have testified earlier that a body dumped into a river would sink and remain at the bottom until decomposed enough to float to the surface.

After Cater's body was found, Gurley said he told prosecutors that based on his experience in searching for drowning victims, it was "out of the bounds of likelihood" that Cater's body could have floated more than a mile downstream from the bridge in just two days.

Earlier, National Weather Service hydrologist David Dingle testified that studies he conducted on the river's flow found it was "extremely unlikely" that a body dumped on the west side of the river would end up on the east side.

Robert Campbell, the police recruit who reported hearing the splash May 22, said it was near the west bank of the river. Cater's body was found near the east bank.

To provide another explanation for the splash, the defense called naturalist Gerald Hightower of the Chattahoochee River National Recreation Area. Hightower said beavers as large as 50 to 60 pounds are "quite abundant" along the river's banks and use their tails when frightened to make loud splashing noises.

Williams' optometrist, Charles S. Chisolm, testified that Williams was legally blind without his glasses and did not go anywhere without them. He also said Williams had never worn contact lenses.

An earlier prosecution witness, Ruth Warren, had testified she saw 14-year-old Lubie Geter talking with Williams on Jan. 2, the day the child's mother testified he disappeared. But Mrs. Warren said the man talking with Geter was not wearing glasses.

Geter is one of 10 young blacks whose deaths prosecutors say make up a pattern of killings. Williams is not charged with the 10 deaths, but prosecutors say the slayings of Cater and Payne fit the pattern.

The judge allowed prosecutors to introduce evidence in the 10 other cases despite defense objections.

Cigarette Price Going Up Again

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The price of cigarettes bought from vending machines is expected to go up 5 cents a pack as the tobacco industry increased prices of major brands for the third time in 10 months.

Higher production costs are to blame for the price hike, says David Fishel, a spokesman for industry leader R.J. Reynolds Co.

Cigarette manufacturers are increasing costs to distributors by $1 per 1,000 cigarettes, meaning those bought by the carton will cost an extra 2 cents a pack, or 20 cents a carton.

Vending machines don't take pennies and distributors are reluctant to absorb cost increases, so the cost at the machines is likely to rise 5 cents. Retail prices vary due to individual state taxes.

Philip Morris Inc., the industry's No. 2 company, told its buyers last week they would pay $21.20 per 1,000 regular-sized cigarettes and $21.70 for longer brands. Major brands of the Richmond, Va.-based company include Marlboro and Merit.

Other major companies, including Reynolds, P. Lorillard, American Tobacco Co. and Brown and Williamson, raised their prices within 48 hours of the announcement by Philip Morris.

"They usually go within a week of each other," said Jerry Pappas of Tobacco USA Inc., a Greensboro distributor. "This time, four of them went the second day."

Fishel, at the Reynolds offices in Winston-Salem, said increased production costs are the culprit.

"We are just costing ourselves money if we don't (follow Philip Morris' price increase)," he said. "As soon as the first company goes up, wholesale and retail prices go up across the board. The way they buy is dictated by demand, not price, so we don't sell that many more if we stay lower."

Monte Recouley, president of Greensboro Vending Machine Co., said demand for machine-bought cigarettes typically drops after increases because more smokers buy cigarettes by the carton.

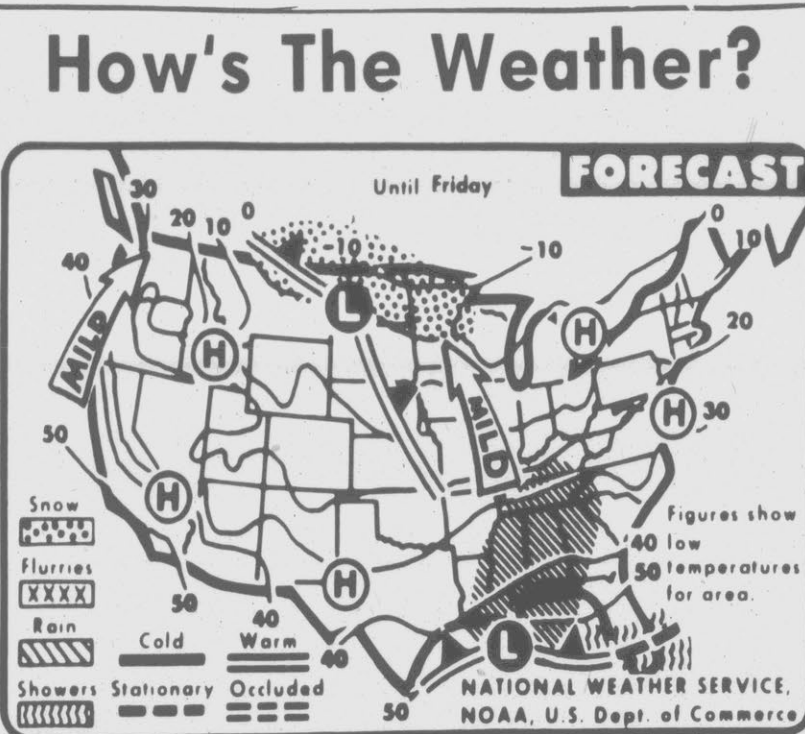

He said he used to tape notices to his machines explaining increases. He doesn't bother any more.

"People have sort of gotten numb to it. They expect it to go up," he said.

Seized Man For Shoplifting

Ernest Lee Sutton, 22, of 319 Oakgrove Ave. was arrested on charges of shoplifting and obstructing an officer following a 5:25 p.m. incident at the Foodland Shop-Eze store at West End Circle.

Chief Glenn Cannon said Sutton was arrested after an off-duty police sergeant, in uniform, saw a man conceal a carton of cigarettes. When the officer attempted to arrest Sutton, the chief said, Sutton resisted and a scuffle developed.

WEATHER FORECAST — Rain is expected in the forecast period until Friday morning, from the central Gulf to the Ohio Valley. Showers are forecast for Florida. Snow is expected for the northern Plains and milder weather for the Pacific coast and central states. (AP Laserphoto Map)

By The Associated Press

A broad area of high pressure extended from the central plains into the middle atlantic states this morning. The high pressure built south into the Carolinas today.

Skies became cloudy across the state last night. Overnight lows were mostly in the 30s.

The cloudiness decreased slowly today. Afternoon temperatures were in the 40s over most of the state. The range will be from the 30s in the northern mountains to near 50 on the south coast.

Another fast moving area of low pressure may bring precipitation to North Carolina Friday and Friday night. The low pressure will move from the southern rockies to the lower Mississippi Valley by early Friday and across the Gulf Coast states Friday and Friday night.

As a result, cloudiness will thicken across the state again tonight. There is a chance of snow in the mountains and a chance of rain or snow across the western Piedmont Friday.

Low temperatures tonight will range from the mid-20s to the mid-30s. Highs Friday will be in the 40s with 30s across the mountains.

The extended forecast calls for a chance of snow continuing in the mountains Friday night and a chance of rain east of the mountains. Improving weather is expected Saturday.

Coastal winds will be northeast at 10 to 20 knots through Friday.

Faircloth Says He Will Reply To Phone Charge

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — State commerce Secretary D.M. "Lauch" Faircloth said he would appear on a Raleigh television station tonight to respond to the station's reports about his use of state telephones and the amount of time he spends in his office.

WRAL-TV reported Wednesday that checks of telephone records show that Faircloth may be spending a lot of time out of his office.

WRAL-TV said Faircloth's credit card was used to make calls from Clinton on at least 140 days in a 23-month period from January 1980 through November 1981.

Records show those calls included 334 made from Clinton on work days between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m., the station said. At least 119 of those calls reportedly came from Faircloth's businesses in Clinton.

State personnel policies entitle Faircloth to 15 vacation days and 10 sick days a year.

Businesses owned by Faircloth in Clinton include Faircloth Construction Co., Faircloth Farms, Coharie Mill and Supply Co. and Triangle Automobiles.

On Tuesday, WRAL reported that someone in the offices of the secretary of the Department of Commerce made 173 calls to businesses owned by Faircloth in Clinton and charged them to the state.

Former Air Controllers Continue To Air Defiance

By ELISSA McCRARY
Associated Press Writer

When Don Conner walked off his job as an air traffic controller in Charlotte last August, he walked away from a $32,000 salary and the only work he was trained to do.

After seven months of picking up temporary jobs to help support his family, he has taken legal action to get his job back — along with the more than 100 striking controllers in North Carolina. Ex-controllers in this state and throughout the nation have banded together to file an appeal with the federal Merit System Protection Board.

"What it's come down to is this — I want my job back," said Conner, 37, the president of the now-defunct Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization in Charlotte. "It's the only career I want. It's what I'm trained to do and I should be in the tower."

The controllers' appeal is scheduled to be heard in Atlanta on Feb. 25.

President Reagan fired about 12,000 striking controllers nationwide in August after they refused to go back to work unless their demands for better benefits and improved working conditions were met.

At first, Reagan said the ex-controllers wouldn't be allowed to apply for federal jobs for three years. But in December, Reagan lifted the ban, saying former controllers could work in federal positions except in the flight towers.

Reagan's action drew immediate fire from the ex-controllers, who called his offer "deceitful."

"It's ridiculous. There are no federal jobs and there haven't been since Jimmy Carter put a freeze on federal hiring three years ago," Conner said. "Not only that, but we understand Reagan turned around and wrote a letter to the post office saying not to hire controllers."

Life for the fired controllers hasn't been easy. Some like Conner have had to work as handy men and at other odd jobs. Some have been forced to move in with relatives. Some have been unable to find work of any kind.

Alden Hare, 39, of Charlotte, decided to go back to school when he hadn't found a job by December.

"There wasn't any work to be had, so I went back to the books," said Hare, who had been a controller for 13 years. He is taking business courses at a community college.

One controller, who asked that his name not be used, lost his house when he could no longer make the mortgage payments. He has moved his family out of state to live with relatives.

Conner currently works as a printer at about half his controller salary. His wages, along with the money his wife's part-time office work brings in, supports his two children.

"The way I figure it, I've already been punished enough," Conner said. "I've lost $15,000 already and I was out of work for six months. I've paid my dues."

The airlines also have paid for the firing of the controllers, Conner said. He said several major airlines including Eastern and Continental reported depressed fourth-quarter earnings. He said Eastern in a statement to stockholders blamed the strike for loss of revenue.

Meanwhile, the controllers say they are confident they will win their appeal. Several attorneys have been hired to represent the strikers who are asking reinstatement and back pay.

"We're in the driver's seat now," Hare said. "The lawyers have told us the government made significant mistakes when they fired us and they say we have an excellent chance of winning our case."

The big question for the controllers is whether they would return to work if their appeal is upheld.

"I'd be back in a minute, it's that simple," Conner said. Several controllers including one from Greensboro said, "Absolutely not. Not after the way we've been treated."

Most echoed Hare, who said he would have to think about it.

"I found out life exists outside the control tower and I may like it too much to ever go back in there."

City Counts 3 Accidents

An estimated $5,950 property damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers reported heaviest damage resulted from an 11:26 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 200 feet east of the River Bluff Drive intersection, involving cars driven by Wendell Lane Gundlach of Greensboro and George Lee Shaver Jr. of Plymouth.

Damage from the mishap was set at $850 to the Gundlach car and $2,000 to the Shaver vehicle.

Cars driven by Mattie Allen Thaggard of Route 1, Ayden, and Martha Wallace Sullivan of 1507 N. Pitt St. collided about 3:30 p.m. at the intersection of Greenville Boulevard and Hooker Road, causing an estimated $1,500 damage to the Thaggard vehicle and $1,000 damage to the Sullivan car.

Officers charged Ms. Sullivan with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety.

A 6:26 p.m. collision at the intersection of 10th Street and College Hill Drive involved vehicles operated by Laurie Elizabeth Paul of 716 Clement Dorm and Laura Ann Gentile of 619 Tyler Dorm.

Damages were set at $100 to the Paul car and $500 to the Gentile car.

A Hotline For Pesticide Questioners

By SUSAN STOLER
Associated Press Writer
SAN BENITO, Texas (AP)
— From his storefront office, Tony Mollhagen counsels anxious pregnant women, backyard gardeners and worried farmers.

They telephone from across the country with problems or questions about pesticides — whether the chemicals will affect their unborn babies, next spring's harvest or the three tomato plants in coffee cans on the back porch.

Mollhagen mans hotline phones for the National Pesticide Information Clearinghouse, a project now in its fifth year of dispensing advice to the general public, government agencies, physicians and industry.

"The bizarre part of this is that people will call up and tell you the most intimate parts of their lives," said Mollhagen, who has a doctorate in biology. "Every call I treat as seriously as I can."

Last year, the project handled 3,000 inquiries compared to 125 calls during 1978, its first year.

The hotline began as an attempt by the Environmental Protection Agency to document pesticide accidents. Incoming toll-free lines first handled only calls from Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, New Mexico and Oklahoma — which form the EPA's Region 6. It was expanded after calls started coming in from around the country.

The telephone service, which Mollhagen staffs Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. CST, shares quarters with a pesticide assessment laboratory operated by the Texas Tech University School of Medicine. It can be reached within Texas by calling 1-800-292-7664 and from the rest of the country by dialing 1-800-531-7790.

Budget cutbacks reduced the staff last year from 11 employees to seven. Its budget for the current fiscal year is $300,000.

The laboratory is 700 miles from the school's home campus in Lubbock, in the heart of one of the nation's most intensive agricultural areas.

An estimated 1,500 pesticides are used within the four-county region bordering Mexico known as the Lower Rio Grande Valley, where a semi-tropical climate permits year-round growing.

"By talking to people all over the country, we are a pretty good monitor of what's happening," said Mollhagen.

His files resemble a list of plagues and hazards — California medflies, gypsy moths, Oklahoma grasshoppers and DDT levels at abandoned waste sites.

Calls poured in from California last year when the state began spraying malathion over populated areas to eradicate the devastating Mediterranean fruit fly.

"They would call literally in hysterics. Pregnant women saying, 'My baby may be malformed. Is there a part of the country I can move to?'" Mollhagen said.

"We would tell them that we can't guarantee that your child will be free from defects, but that experience indicates malathion isn't likely to do damage," said Vaughn Cox, the lab's director. "It's been used extensively in the Southeast for mosquito control for 30 years with no known long-term effects."

"I suppose one-third to one-half of our cases I can't answer off the top of my head," Mollhagen said. Those inquiries are forwarded to physicians or other agencies.

Cox said pesticide companies, especially manufacturers of home-use products, use data generated by the hotline to improve the safety of spray cans and dispensers.

Johnson Wax, makers of the insect killer Raid, has requested information on accidents involving its product, Cox said.

Backyard gardeners frequently call, with questions like, "I just sprayed something on my tomatoes and then I read the label that says don't use it on tomatoes. Can I still eat them?"

"Some people may develop hypersensitivity to chemicals," Mollhagen said. Acute overexposure to even household products, like aerosol bombs, can have serious effects.

"I had a call from a lady whose husband used six of those foggers in a 1,000 square-foot house, where he should have used one or two," Cox said. "She started getting a burning sensation on her skin. We told her to see her physician."

The public has always been exposed to pesticides but is more aware today of the potential hazards, Mollhagen and Cox agreed.

"There's a lot of hysteria that goes along with these chemicals, on both sides," Mollhagen said.

Farmers fear that useful products will be banned while activist environmental groups want restrictions on pesticide use.

The pesticide lab must work with growers, state agriculture departments, chemical companies and environmental groups. Sometimes heat comes from all sides.

In a locally controversial project, the lab sampled water and soil for traces of DDT, a once widely used pesticide banned in 1972 after tests showed adverse effects on wildlife. The fat soluble chemical breaks down slowly into DDE, a suspected cancer-causing agent.

"We found the same DDT levels have been in the drinking water as showed up during testing in the 1960s," Mollhagen said. "Certainly they're not of the levels that are going to kill anyone. But the jury is still out on whether the long-term effects are harmful."

Free Lunch Rules Eyed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in the face of possible court action, says it will issue regulations this month governing free summer lunches for a million low-income children, a public interest group says.

We have received assurances from the Justice Department that the Agriculture Department will issue the regulations by Feb. 19, Jack Stoller of the Food Research and Action Center said Wednesday.

On Tuesday, the National Anti-Hunger Coalition and needy families from New York, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Virginia asked the U.S. District Court in Washington to order the administration to issue the regulations, originally mandated to be published by Jan. 1.

At issue is the operation of a $60 million program providing free lunches during non-school months to poor children, primarily in the nation's inner cities.

The administration proposed eliminating the program entirely last year, but Congress agreed only to cut its budget in half.

THE GREENVILLE Police Department Crime Prevention Section will work with any interested group in establishing a Community Watch Team in its neighborhood. Call Sgt. D. A. Jackson at 752-3342 for details.

Monarch Rally Downs Pirates, 80-73

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Old Dominion got strong play from its inside duo of Ronnie McAdoo and Mark West and continued its whammy over East Carolina last night, taking an 80-73 come-from-behind ECAC-South win.

The victory boosted the Monarchs into second place in the league standings with a 3-2 record, while the Pirates fall into fifth with a 2-3 mark. Old Dominion is 12-9 overall while ECU slips to 8-11.

West finished the game with 19 points and pulled away 12 rebounds, while McAdoo added 16 points and 11 rebounds. Fifteen of West's points came in the second half when the Monarchs were surging from as far as nine points behind to pull out the game.

"I'm very disappointed in the loss," ECU coach Dave Odom, who has yet to beat Old Dominion in three tries, said. "I felt we could win if we played well. We played hard, but I don't think we played well. We did play good in spurts, and I'm sure that Old Dominion feels that they can play better than they did too."

The foul line proved the big difference in the game. Both teams pushed through 29 field goals (ODU shot 46.8 percent and ECU 50.9 percent), but it was at the line that the Monarchs built their winning margin.

There, ODU canned 22 of 30 shots as 28 fouls were called on the Pirates. Three ECU players, Charles Green, Mark McLaurin and Bruce Peartree, fouled out of the contest. In contrast, ECU shot only 22 times, hitting 15, as 18 fouls were called against ODU.

Old Dominion also held a rebounding edge, 33-32, on the Pirates, thanks to the play of West and McAdoo, the ECAC-South's two leading rebounders. Morris Hargrove led East Carolina with nine.

"I think we lost to a fine basketball team," Odom continued, "but that doesn't help you feel better about it."

"As to why we lost, it was almost a replica of the Richmond game. We had the lead and a working margin. But when you get six or seven or so points ahead, the defense must take over and stop the other team. At that point in the game, there were five straight baskets by Old Dominion, all inside shots. It's not entirely the fault of the post-men. They were supposed to get help from the guards, since we're so overmatched inside by them. But at times — and at these times — we didn't get that help."

Overall, Odom felt the Pirates played good defense, but the stretch of baskets by ODU hurt, and it eventually told on the offense, the coach added.

"The crowning blow was their free throw shooting," Odom said. "We knew West was hitting 20 percent better from the floor than from the line. So what does he do, but hit five in a row there in the second half. They hit the clutch fouls and kept us as bay."

"I hope the day will come when we don't have to put on a tuxedo to play inside," Odom said in reference to the fouls.

East Carolina got off to a very poor start, scoring only three baskets in the first ten minutes — one of those on a goal-tending call. Meanwhile, ODU was pushing through seven shots and two free throws for a 16-6 lead, and as much as a 12-point spread during the streak.

"I was disappointed in the start," Odom said. "We looked unsure of ourselves early. I don't know why, but I have to be happy with the comeback we made."

That comeback, led by freshman Peartree, guided the Pirates back into the lead and a 31-29 halftime margin.

Peartree hit ten points in the half, all coming after the ten-minute mark, as the Pirates slowly chopped away at the Monarch lead, finally tying it up at 21-21 as Peartree hit off a fast break. Hargrove then hit a ten-footer to put ECU into the lead for the first time, 23-21. ODU tied it up three times after that before McLaurin hit a 25-footer with one second left to give ECU the two-point halftime margin.

Early in the second half, the Pirates built up as much as a nine point lead over the Monarchs — all in vain. That lead came after Peartree hit a 15-footer with 16:29 left for a 40-31 margin.

But Old Dominion grabbed the tempo back and struggled back to tie it at 43-43 as McAdoo hit one from five feet away. East Carolina three times went back out, only to see ODU tie it up again.

Then, with 10:43 left, McAdoo made a three-point play for a 50-49 lead and hit again to extend the margin to three, 52-49.

East Carolina fought back on baskets by Hargrove and McLaurin to regain the lead, and a Hargrove free throw made it 54-52 with 8:01 showing.

But it was the last Pirate lead.

HOLLYWOOD — The D.H. Conley wrestling sectional, featuring eight unbeaten wrestlers and three defending state champions among its top seeds, gets under way Friday with the opening two rounds.

The sectional, one of eight going on in the state this weekend, gets started at 2 p.m. Friday with the opening round matches. The quarterfinals are slated for 7 p.m.

The tournament continues Saturday afternoon with the semifinals set for noon and the consolation matches for 2 p.m. The championships in the 13 weight classes will be held beginning at 6 p.m.

The tournament consists of 27 schools from the surrounding area, including host D.H. Conley and area schools Greenville Rose, Williamston, Farmville Central and Roanoke.

The geographical area the 27 teams come from runs from Elizabeth City to Jacksonville and Wilson to Cape Hatteras.

All but one of the 13 weight classes consist of 16 wrestlers, who are seeded according to their records. The 198-pound weight class has 15 wrestlers, one less than the maximum number.

Milt Sherman, tournament director and coach of the D.H. Conley wrestling team, expects the winner of the tournament to come from one of five teams: Conley, Wilson Beddingfield, New Bern, Plymouth or Washington.

Going into the tournament, the Vikings are ranked seventh in the state — the highest ranking of any of the teams in the tournament. Beddingfield is ranked 14th, Washington is ranked 17th, New Bern 19th and Plymouth 20th.

"If I had to pick a favorite I'd probably go with Beddingfield," Sherman said. "But any one of the five teams could win it."

The top four wrestlers in each weight class from the sectional will advance to the regionals next Saturday in Goldsboro. The top four wrestlers there will then move on to the state meet set for Feb. 26-27 in Winston-Salem.

ECU Signs Prep Stars

While East Carolina head football coach Ed Emory wasn't making any official announcements yesterday, he and his staff did score at least one recruiting coup on the first day of national letter signing, grabbing off one of the state's premier high school running backs.

Reportedly, the Pirates signed 15 high school players on the first day, but the top name surfacing is that of Dwight Richardson, a 6-0, 180-pound running back from once-beaten state 4-A runner-up Terry Sanford.

Others known to have signed with East Carolina include his backfield teammate Patrick Bowens, a 6-0, 185-pound fullback; linebacker Gerald Reynolds of Tarboro, 6-0, 205; and Tim Dumas, a 6-6, 245-pound lineman from Eastern Guilford.

Richardson, who rushed for over 2,000 yards during the year, reportedly had narrowed his choices to ECU and Clemson.

Plymouth all go into the tournament with two number one seeds.

Conley's #1 seeds are Reginald Moore (17-0) at 108 pounds, and Paul Menichelli (17-0) at heavyweight.

The Bruins' top two seeds are defending state champion Carl Williams (21-0-1) at 115 pounds and Vento Collins (18-0) at 129 pounds.

Plymouth's two #1 seeds are Mike Chesson (16-2) at 141 pounds and Themas Biggs (20-0) at 188 pounds. Biggs is a defending state champion.

Farmville Central and Williamston both have one #1 seed. Charles Sutton (14-1) at 198 pounds is the Jaguars #1 seed and Brian Purvis (20-0) at 158 pounds is the Tigers lone #1 seed.

Other #1 seeds are: 101 — Roland Winters (Washington), 22-1; 122 — Roy Heverely (West Carteret), 16-0; 135 — Carl Huddle (New Bern), 21-0-148 — Calvin Pulley (Rocky Mount), 11-1; 170 — Russell Sherrod (Tarboro), 12-1.

Both Heverely and Huddle are defending state champions. Along with its two #1 seeds, D.H. Conley has three #2 seeds: Lorenzo Strong (15-3) at 141, William Bridgett (15-2-1) at 158 and Mike Long (17-2-1) at 188 pounds.

The Vikings also have one #3 seed: William Green (19-1) at 115 pounds. Rose and Roanoke also have one #3 seed each. For the Rampants, James Richardson (13-2) is seeded third at 170 pounds. For the Tigers, Lee Briley (12-3) is seeded third at 158 pounds.

Seeded fourth among the area teams are DHC's Willie Greene (15-2-1) at 170 pounds and Williamston's John Corey (8-1-1) at 129 pounds.

Other area seeds:

101 — 10. Paul Michaelson

Valvano: No Apology For Strategy

By The Associated Press
Down by one point late in the second half and in possession of the ball, N.C. State coach Jim Valvano knew what he wanted to do. And after the game, he wasn't apologizing for his strategy that failed to pay off.

"Anybody who second-guesses my decision doesn't doesn't know the game of basketball," Valvano said after top-ranked Virginia squeaked past his Wolfpack 39-36 in an Atlantic Coast Conference game Wednesday night. "In my mind it was a clear-cut decision."

The fateful decision was to put the ball in the deepfreeze with 4:28 left and hold for the last shot. The strategy worked — almost.

N.C. State players exchanged passes as Virginia refused to come out of a zone defense, and Dereck Whittenburg got off a 25-foot jumper with five seconds left. But the ball hit the rim and was snatched away by omnipresent Ralph Sampson. He was promptly fouled and hit both ends of a one-and-one, sealing the Cavalier victory.

In the only other ACC game Wednesday, Wake Forest defeated Clemson 94-76 in the run-and-gun-type game that has grown scarce this season. In non-conference action, Stetson surprised Duke 88-81. Tonight, second-ranked North Carolina hosts Maryland.

Playing deliberately, N.C. State took a 24-23 halftime lead but fell behind by 31-26 when Virginia, led by Jeff Jones and Craig Robinson, hit eight straight points early in the second period. The Wolfpack fought back to within a point, 32-31, on a jumper by Thurl Bailey and four points by Sidney Lowe.

Notwithstanding N.C. State's late stalling tactics, tough defense was also responsible for the game's low score. The Wolfpack smothered Sampson, the 7-foot-4 All-American, with double-and occasionally triple-coverage while managing to battle Virginia's perimeter shooting.

Sampson had only 11 points and an equal number of rebounds as he hardly touched the ball in the second half. N.C. State was led by Bailey and Whittenburg, who hit 12 points apiece. Bailey led the Wolfpack with nine rebounds.

"State made us play the tempo they wanted," said Virginia coach Terry Holland. "We don't like to play that way."

Othell Wilson, who defended Whittenburg as he launched his final shot, said he expected Whittenburg would be the player to whom N.C. State would turn.

"I was determined not to let him penetrate with the ball," Wilson said. "If he was gonna win it, it would be with a 22-footer with me in his face."

With the victory, Virginia tightened its hold on first place in the ACC. The Cavaliers are 23-1 and 8-1 in the conference. N.C. State fell to 17-6 and 5-5.

There was no stalling in Greensboro Coliseum, where Wake Forest and Clemson ran from start to finish.

"Both clubs like the up tempo," said Deacon coach Carl Tacy. "It was a welcome relief from what we've gone through lately ... and for the fans, too."

Wake Forest outscored Clemson 12-2 midway through the first half, opening a 21-12 lead that was never seriously challenged. The Deacons led 39-30 at halftime and stayed comfortably ahead throughout the second half.

Guy Morgan, who said he played one of the best games of his career, led Wake Forest with 25 points and eight rebounds. He received plenty of support from John Toms with 19, Mike Helms with 17 and Danny Young with 16.

Clemson's big gun was Vincent Hamilton, who hit a game-high 28 points and grabbed eight rebounds. Fred Gilliam had 12 points while David Shaffer and Chris Dodds had 11 each.

Wake Forest, third in the ACC standings, is 16-5 and 6-3 in the conference, while Clemson fell to 11-9 and 3-7.

It took 35 minutes to play the last 3:04 at Deland, Fla. Duke committed 14 personal fouls in a desperate comeback bid and also was whistled for a technical. But those final moments weren't much different from the rest of the game, which featured 50 personals and six technicals — whistled by a trio of ACC referees.

ECU Hosting Prep Swimming

The 27th annual Atlantic Seaboard Interscholastic Swimming and Diving Championships will be held Friday and Saturday at East Carolina's Minges Natatorium.

Friday activities will begin at 6:30 p.m. with the preliminaries of the one-meter diving.

Trials in the swimming events start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday, with the finals starting at 5:30 p.m. Championships will be decided in 10 swimming and one diving event for both boys and girls — a total of 22 events.

Petty School of Hightstown, N.J., is the defending boys' and girls' champion, and will return to defend the title. Their biggest challenger for the boys' championship is Calvert Hall of Towson, Md., which won titles, Nova High School of Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., is the top contender to Petty for the girls.

Around 50 teams are expected to compete in the event, with a total of about 500 swimmers and divers.

Petty's girls have won two straight titles, and the boys have won twice before, although not in succession.

Teams will be participating from nearly every state on the East Coast, from New Jersey to Florida, and as far west as West Virginia.

Roanoke Tops Chargers

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School rolled to a 70-51 victory over Ayden-Grifton High School last night as the Redskins closed out the 1981-82 regular season.

Earlier, the Squaws of Roanoke downed Ayden-Grifton's Lady Chargers, 55-39.

Roanoke, which has ranked as the number one 3-A team in the state until three losses in the last five games knocked them from their perch, jumped out to an early lead. By the end of the first period, Roanoke held an 18-12 lead. The Redskins continued to lead in the second period, 17-11, building a 35-23 lead.

Things got no better for Ayden-Grifton in the third frame as the Redskins held an 18-11 margin. That made it 53-34 going into the final period. In that, Roanoke played A-G even, both scoring 17-17.

Ronnie Broadie led Roanoke with 21 points, while Angelo Spruill added 15 and Michael Wilson hit ten. Ayden-Grifton was paced by Tyrone Gay with 13.

In the girls' game, Ayden-Grifton slipped into a 10-9 lead after one period and held on, 11-10, to take a 21-19 lead into intermission. Roanoke rallied in the third frame, however, 14-12, and tied it up, 33-33, as the final period opened.

In that, the Chargers ran out of gas as Roanoke pumped in a 22-6 margin to win going away.

Sylvia Parker hit 20 points to lead Roanoke, while Evelyn Martin and Anna Moore each added ten. Ayden-Grifton was led by Cora Faison's 18, while Linda Brown hit 12.

The win left the Roanoke boys at 17-3 on the year, while the girls are 16-4. Ayden-Grifton falls to 6-15 (boys) and 8-13 (girls). The Chargers close out the regular season on Friday, hosting North Pitt.

His 671 runs batted in are tops in the majors for the last six seasons and he has pounded 198 homers over that period, second only to Mike Schmidt's 221. Foster batted .295 with 22 homers and 90 RBIs in 108 games last season.

Despite that production, the Reds felt they could not satisfy Foster's projected demands after his 1982 contract expired and asked Reich to supply a list of teams he would accept in a trade. "At first, we gave them two teams and the Mets were one of them," Reich said. "That list was later expanded."

The Mets, who have never had a slugger of Foster's dimensions in their lineup, pursued the trade vigorously. A year ago, they went after Winfield with the same kind of determination and lost out to the Yankees. This time, they brought the prize home.

Did Foster think that having baseball's two highest-priced players both playing left field in New York would create a rivalry between himself and Winfield?

"There was no rivalry between us when he was in the National League," he said. "Why should there be one with him in the American League?"

But he was excited about the prospect of joining the Mets. "I'm looking forward to coming to New York," he said. "The Mets have a solid nucleus of talent and I'm hoping to bring with me the winning attitude we developed in Cincinnati."

Then, Foster remembered the planes from nearby LaGuardia Airport that frequently fly over Shea Stadium.

"I'd like to warn the airports and the planes that when I'm at bat they better not fly too low," he said.

Mean Joe Has Called It Quits

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After 13 years of waging war in the pits, defensive tackle Joe Greene of the Pittsburgh Steelers is looking forward to a peaceful life of retirement.

"My plans are to live, to enjoy the easy life. I'm a non-combatant now," Greene said Wednesday at a luncheon called to say he was quitting.

"I came here as a boy. I leave here as a man. I tend to think of this time as a graduation," he added.

Greene, 35, was the first draft choice that Coach Chuck Noll made in building a football dynasty that produced four Super Bowl titles in six years.

Greene, the pillar of the "Steel Curtain" front four, has played in 10 Pro Bowls since coming here in 1969 out of North Texas State, and Noll believes he was the best defensive lineman ever.

"He set the standard for us. Physically, he had quickness, speed, agility, strength, the ability to find the ball. But he also set the standard for attitude. There will never be another Joe Greene. Joe will always be something special," Noll said.

Greene's eyes glistened under the glare of television lights as he made the announcement, but he remained unemotional and brushed off eulogies just as he cast aside blockers in his prime.

"I wanted this to be a happy occasion," he said. And when asked how he would like to be remembered, "Mean Joe" laughed.

left to tie it up again, and Mark Davis hit from 15 out to put ODU back up. East Carolina tied it once more on a basket by Peartree, but another three-pointer by West ran it to 59-56 and the Pirates never caught up again.

Over the remaining six and a half minutes, ODU hit 16 of 20 free throws to pad the lead out to as much as nine points, as the Pirates were unable to regain control of the game again.

In addition to West and McAdoo, ODU had three other players finish in double figures, led by Billy Mann's 17, 11 of them at the line, while Charlie Smith and Davis each had ten.

East Carolina was led by Peartree with 23, while Hargrove added 18.

"Anybody can see Peartree's talents," Odom said. "He just needs to develop a little better judgement, particularly on defense. But that comes with time. He's as fine a freshman as there is in the league."

"But this is a loss that we must recover from, and I believe we will," Odom added.

The Pirates get back into action on Saturday, traveling to seek revenge for an earlier 58-49 loss at the hands of UNC-Wilmington.

Parsons Not Sure Of His Advantage

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Polesitter Benny Parsons figures having the fastest car in Sunday's Daytona 500 is an advantage, but he isn't even sure he'll be a factor in stock car racing's richest and most prestigious event.

"But I'll find out tomorrow," the 40-year-old former Daytona 500 champion said Wednesday in discussing his role in today's two 125-mile qualifying races. "If I can't run with them (the top cars), they'll blow me off the track," he said.

The problem Parsons faces is that his sleek Pontiac LeMans may not handle as well in close traffic as the boxy models now being run by all but a few teams on the NASCAR Grand National circuit. A smaller spoiler for the rear deck — an aerodynamic device using airflow to create stability — has been legislated for that model.

"I can't run by myself tomorrow," said Parsons before a practice session over the 2.5-mile, high-banked Daytona International Speedway oval.

On such tracks, drafting (following closely) is essential to victory. The fastest cars riding bumper-to-bumper, single file will turn laps in excess of 190 mph. But those drafts generally involve only the fastest and most stable cars.

Does Parsons believe the spoiler rule is unfair?

"I guess I could be tempted to say that Sunday if I lost, but we'll just have to see what the car does."

What the car has done on its own is qualify at a record 196.317 mph to win the inside first-row position in the 42-car field for Sunday's $927,000 race. Harry Gant took the outside front position at 195.609 mph.

Both Parsons and Gant were sitting on the pole in their respective $75,000 qualifiers today, those two races determining positions three through 30 for the 500. Parsons and Gant were assured of retaining their starting spots, regardless of finish.

"I'm going to go out there and see how the car is running and then decide what I want to do," said Gant of his qualifier. "We might have some things to work out."

Gant, 41, is the bridesmaid of the circuit. He finished second seven times last season and has been the runner-up 10 times in the last two years.

Twice he dominated races in what defending Grand National champion Darrell Waltrip called "an animal car," only to succumb to mechanical difficulties.

Gant says he will try to change that this season. "We're going to think a little bit more about strategy," said Gant in assessing his chances in Sunday's race.

Gant traditionally is more of a hard-charger than Parsons. Gant rides lead drafts with Waltrip, Bobby Allison, Neil "Everything is circumstance in the Daytona 500," said Petty, the defending champion here and a seven-time driving champion whose 195 career victories are the most in the sport. "I've won with some fast cars and I've won with some slow cars. If the circumstances are right and you're there at the end, you can win."

Petty sat outside Parsons in the front row of their 32-car qualifier. Cale Yarborough and Allison occupied second-row positions in that race.

Those competitors who do not place among the top 30 still have a chance to make the starting lineup for Sunday on the basis of their qualifying speeds during four days of time trials leading up to the qualifiers.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The lineups for the two 125-mile qualifying races Thursday at Daytona International Speedway to determine positions three through 30 for Sunday's Daytona 500. The first car in each race already has clinched a front row starting position Sunday on the basis of first-day qualifying times.

LSU Tops #10 Alabama, 73-68

By The Associated Press

Although LSU is tied for the Southeastern Conference lead, the Tigers are not the basketball powerhouse they have been in recent years. Maybe that's why Coach Dale Brown was so ecstatic about the Tigers' 73-68 victory over 10th-ranked Alabama Wednesday night.

"This may be the proudest I've ever been in my 10 years at LSU," Brown exulted after his hobbled Bengals used a second-half delay game to upset the Crimson Tide and retain a share of the SEC lead with Tennessee. "It may be the most gallant performance of any team I've coached."

With Leonard Mitchell scoring 18 points, LSU raced to a 40-20 lead with 4:15 left in the first half. But an ankle injury one minute later put Mitchell out of the game after he hit on nine of 13 shots and grabbed eight rebounds.

In the second half, LSU went to a delay offense, going without a field goal in the final 4:09. But the Tigers hit 10 of 14 free throws, four by Howard Carter, who scored a game-high 20 points.

Alabama was the only member of The Associated Press Top Twenty to lose, but two others had close calls. Top-rated Virginia needed two free throws by Ralph Sampson with three seconds left to ensure a 39-36 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over North Carolina State, while third-ranked DePaul nipped Evansville 59-58.

In the Second Ten, 12th-ranked Kentucky turned back Mississippi 56-49 and No. 16 Wake Forest flattened Clemson 94-76, but Oklahoma knocked off No. 15 Kansas State 68-58.

Top Ten

LSU's victory was its 23rd straight at home and knocked Alabama out of a three-way tie atop the SEC. LSU and Tennessee are 10-3, Alabama is 9-4. Ennis Whitley led the losers, 17-4 overall, with 18 points.

Brown said LSU's triumph ranked with the Tigers' 1978 victory over eventual national champion Kentucky, which was accomplished in overtime with five reserves on the floor.

"We beat them (Alabama) in the spread and we are in first place in the SEC because of our defense," he said. "We beat the leading rebounding team with five guards in the second half. I've never been prouder. I could hug every one of them, which I did."

"You go ahead and make 'em or you miss 'em," Sampson said after his two clutch free throws gave Virginia some breathing room and also put him in double figures with 11 points. N.C. State surrounded him with two and sometimes three defenders throughout the contest.

"They put quite a few people around Ralph tonight and they were big people," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "N.C. State is the biggest team we've faced. I just hope we don't face anyone bigger."

Coach Jim Valvano of the losers refused to call it a moral victory.

"You play No. 1 and come that close, it really means nothing," he said. "A play here or a play there and it's our game."

Virginia took the lead for good 37-36 when Craig Robinson was credited with a basket on a goal-tending call. The Cavaliers raised their record to 23-1 and 8-1 in the ACC, while the Wolfpack is 17-6 and 5-5.

Bernard Randolph scored 18 points, including the last basket of the game with almost six minutes remaining, to lift DePaul over upset-minded Evansville, 17-4. The Blue Demons, 21-1, took their first lead, 34-32, when Skip Dillard hit a spinning jumper at the halftime buzzer.

"I think there had to be an easier way," sighed 67-year-old Coach Ray Meyer. "I think the players are deciding they want to age me."

Second Ten

Derrick Hord and Melvin Turpin combined for 29 points, including all but five of Kentucky's points in the second half, as the Wildcats held off Ole Miss and became the first school to win 1,300 games.

Hord and Turpin were held to two points apiece in the first half but finished with 15 and 14 points, respectively, negating a 30-point effort by Mississippi's Carlos Clark, who scored all but five of his team's points in the first half and 12 of its 26 after the intermission.

David Little and Chuck Barnett, the leading scorers in the Big Eight, scored 20 points apiece as Oklahoma defeated 15th-ranked Kansas State. Little and Barnett combined for 12 straight first-half points to help Oklahoma break open a close game.

Guy Morgan scored 25 points, 18 in the second half, as Wake Forest rolled over Clemson. Morgan hit seven of 12 shots from the field, 11 of 15 from the free throw line and grabbed eight rebounds. "If I knew what it was, I'd buy a box or I'd package it," said Morgan, who has repeatedly haunted Clemson over the past two seasons.

Bethel Races Set Saturday

BETHEL — Three road races — including a 10-miler — will be held Saturday morning in Bethel sponsored by the Coastal Carolina Running Club.

The 10-mile race will begin at 9:30 a.m. A 3.3-mile cross-country race will also start at 9:30 followed by a one-mile fun run to begin at 10 a.m.

The 10-mile race will start 10 miles north of Bethel on Hwy. 11. The race will finish about ½-mile north of Hwy. 13/64, which is also the start and finish of the fun run.

Information on the cross-country route will be provided at registration.

Registration will be held on race day at Bethel Elementary School from 8 to 9 a.m. Registration fees will be $3 for the 10-mile and the cross-country races and $1 for the fun run.

Restroom and shower facilities will be available at Bethel Elementary. Splits will be given at the one, three, seven and nine mile marks. Water will be available at the start and finish and at the three and seven mile marks.

Trophies will be awarded to the first and second place male and female finishers in the 10-miler and the cross-country run. In addition, trophies will be awarded to the first place male and female finishers in the 10-miler in seven age groups: 19 and under, 20-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49 and 50 and over.

Thousands Of Federal Workers Get Day Off

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of federal workers soon will be getting an extra day off every other week, but they're not happy about it — they're getting docked a day's pay as well.

The mandatory one-day furlough every two weeks is being ordered at "a selected group of agencies" that don't have enough money to meet payroll needs because of budget cuts ordered at President Reagan's request last December.

It was not clear how widespread the furlough plan will be among the government's more than 2.1 million workers around the country. A number of agencies are still considering whether to implement it.

About 30,000 employees of the Federal Aviation Administration — most of the agency's workers except those involving air traffic control — were told Wednesday they would have to take 12 days off without pay during the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 30.

Officials said another 6,000 workers at the Census Bureau and about 3,000 at the Office of Personnel Management have been told they will have to take 10 furlough days sometime before October. The likely plan is to work one less day every other week, officials said.

"We don't like it. But we'll accept it if that's what it takes to get the president's programs going," said Merle Zongker, an FAA inspector in Wichita, Kan. He said he stands to lose $1,800 to $1,900 of his annual pay under the plan.

Unions representing federal workers accepted the plan with resignation. "If it's going to be a choice between RIFs (reductions in force) and furloughs, of course we're going to support the furloughs — it's the lesser of two evils," said Sandra Arnold of the National Federation of Federal Employees.

Federal employees say the mandatory days off will effectively wipe out a 4.6 percent pay increase federal workers received late last year.

Edwin Dale, a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said the furloughs will not be government-wide, but that the aim is "a squeeze on a selected group of agencies" that were particularly hard hit last December when Congress, in a compromise with Reagan, cut the budget by an additional 4 percent. For some agencies that cut was in addition to an earlier cut of 12 percent.

Dale said he didn't know how many people would be affected.

Many agencies were still assessing whether to use the mandatory work-day reduction and corresponding pay cut.

officials said. Some of the largest departments — Defense, Transportation, Labor, Treasury, and State — said they did not contemplate any mandatory department-wide furloughs. The U.S. Postal Service also said it is not contemplating mandatory days off.

Last December, the Office of Personnel Management issued a directive to all agencies and departments, telling them to seek out workers who would volunteer to take unpaid leave. But the directive said if that didn't lower costs enough then mandatory furloughs should be ordered to minimize the number of persons who would be dismissed through a reduction in force.

Since President Reagan took office more than 7,000 federal workers have been laid off, according to the personnel office.

Shuttle Schedule Reshuffled By Hitches, But Ahead Of Program

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The space shuttle will be rolled over to Launch Pad 39A ahead of schedule despite mechanical problems that cropped up in its steering mechanism and rocket booster, NASA says.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Mark Hess said the repairs on the Columbia would be conducted while astronauts Jack Lousma and Gordon Fullerton make flight tests today and Friday.

Technicians need to repair a hydraulic leak in one of the twin rocket boosters and also replace the 53-inch long mechanical arm that steers the nozzle of the booster rocket in flight.

Hess said the problems would not delay next week's rollout of Columbia to the launch site, three miles away from where it is currently poised, nose-up, in the huge Vehicle Assembly Building.

He said tests have gone so well the spaceship will be rolled out a day early, beginning at 5 a.m. Feb. 16.

The shuttle, the world's first reusable spacecraft, is scheduled to be launched on its third mission on March 22.

The difficulties involving the rocket boosters will mean that astronauts will carry out three simulated missions 24 hours earlier than planned, he said.

The leak of hydraulic fluids was described as "pretty big," but workers said the repair work involved was minor.

The more serious difficulty was a "lockup" of the actuator, a 53-inch-long mechanical arm that steers the nozzle of the booster rocket in flight. The replacement effort "is substantial," taking several work shifts to complete, Hess said.

Officials decided to conduct the simulations side-by-side with the repair work in an effort to save time, he said. Then, after the missions are completed, the repair and replacement work can be fully tested without interfering with anything else, he added.

"The end result is that nothing changes. There will be no delay of the overall time schedule," said Hess. "We may even pick up some time."

Three astronaut crews will fly the Columbia on the mock missions. These involve a liftoff, return-to-launch site abort and a descent from orbit to a landing.

Besides Lousma and Fullerton, their prime backup crew, Ken Mattingly and Henry Hartsfield; a second backup pair, Vance Brand and Bob Overmeyer, will participate in the tests.

They will operate a number of systems used in flight. Special computer programs aboard Columbia and at the launch control center will mimic actual missions.

The problems with the rocket boosters cropped up during the extensive Shuttle Interface Test which began Saturday in the VAB. The test involves the checkout of all individual systems on the orbiter, its silo-like fuel tank and the rockets, plus all electrical and mechanical connections among the different components.

Viet Aircraft Forced Down

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Thai fighter-bomber intercepted a Vietnamese military transport in Thai airspace today and forced it down in a rice field, Thai military officers said.

Initial reports said one of the 13 Vietnamese military personnel on board was killed and two others injured when the twin-engine turboprop AN-26 transport landed about 18 miles from the Cambodian border.

A Thai officer said the Soviet-built plane was detected on radar as it crossed from Cambodia into Thailand's eastern Chantaburi Province, and was pursued by a one of Thailand's U.S.-built F5E fighter-bombers.

The officer speculated that the Vietnamese craft might have developed engine trouble and strayed off course, but no other details were immediately known.

The two injured Vietnamese were taken to a military field hospital, while the others were being questioned at the nearby military camp of Wattana Nakorn, 75 miles from Bangkok.

Vietnamese forces are currently engaged in a sweep along the Thai border in Cambodia, battling guerrillas of the ousted Khmer Rouge regime.

Western diplomats here said Wednesday it was the most determined attack mounted by Vietnamese troops in Cambodia since their December 1978 invasion, and had thrown the Khmer Rouge resistance off balance.

They said the current dry season operation, which is now in its fourth month, has seen increased use of airpower — both with fixed-wing aircraft and helicopter gunships.

Fighting has advanced up to the Thai border, with some shells landing on Thai territory. Thai forces have fired warning shells into Cambodia in response.

Diplomats described the situation as "dangerous," with increased possibilities for cross-border incidents.

Arrest Man On Varied Counts

Greenville police arrested William Edgar Mizell, 33, of Route 5, Greenville, on charges of possession of cocaine, possession of marijuana, assault on an officer and delay and resisting an officer following a 2:30 a.m. incident in a parking lot at the intersection of Fourth and Cotanche streets.

Chief Glenn Cannon said officers saw a small grass fire at the rear of the parking lot and, on investigating, found Mizell, who said he set the blaze in an effort to find his car keys, which he had lost.

Further investigation revealed a small amount of cocaine and marijuana in Mizell's possession.

A scuffle developed when officers attempted to arrest Mizell, which resulted in Mizell and one of the policemen being injured.

Cannon noted that a second man, Thomas Whitley Thomas, 23, of 407 Meade St., was arrested for delaying and obstructing an officer, after he allegedly tried to keep Mizell from being taken into custody.

Hayden Begins His Campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former anti-war activist Tom Hayden launched his campaign for a seat in the Legislature by declaring it is time for "a new generation of leadership" in California.

At a lavish fund-raising dinner at the Century Plaza hotel Wednesday, Hayden attacked President Reagan's "new federalism" as a doctrine "which contains a very dangerous sanction of selfishness that will be a disaster for our people."

Hayden said the state capitol in Sacramento "will become a major battleground of the '80s' over resistance to Reaganomics."

"I hope to be part of a statewide progressive coalition that brings a new generation of leadership to Sacramento and forges a clear alternative to the Republicans and the right wing," Hayden said.

Hayden, a Democrat, was a member of the Chicago Seven and is the husband of actress Jane Fonda.

Unable Awaken Him, Use Gun

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A co-defendant charged with accessory after the fact to murder testified Wednesday that William Marlowe shot a former roommate after attempts to awaken him with firecrackers failed.

Ricky Marion testified that Marlowe shot Dennis Wyatt after he returned home and found Wyatt asleep, after Wyatt had been expelled from the house.

Marion was charged with being an accessory after the fact, along with his wife, Marlowe is charged with second-degree murder.

Bennett Is Unit Prexy

THOMAS BENNETT

Thomas A. Bennett has been named chairman of the Pitt County unit of the American Cancer Society's 1982 educational and fund-raising Cancer Crusade. April is Cancer Crusade month, and April 4 has been designated as Cancer Crusade Sunday.

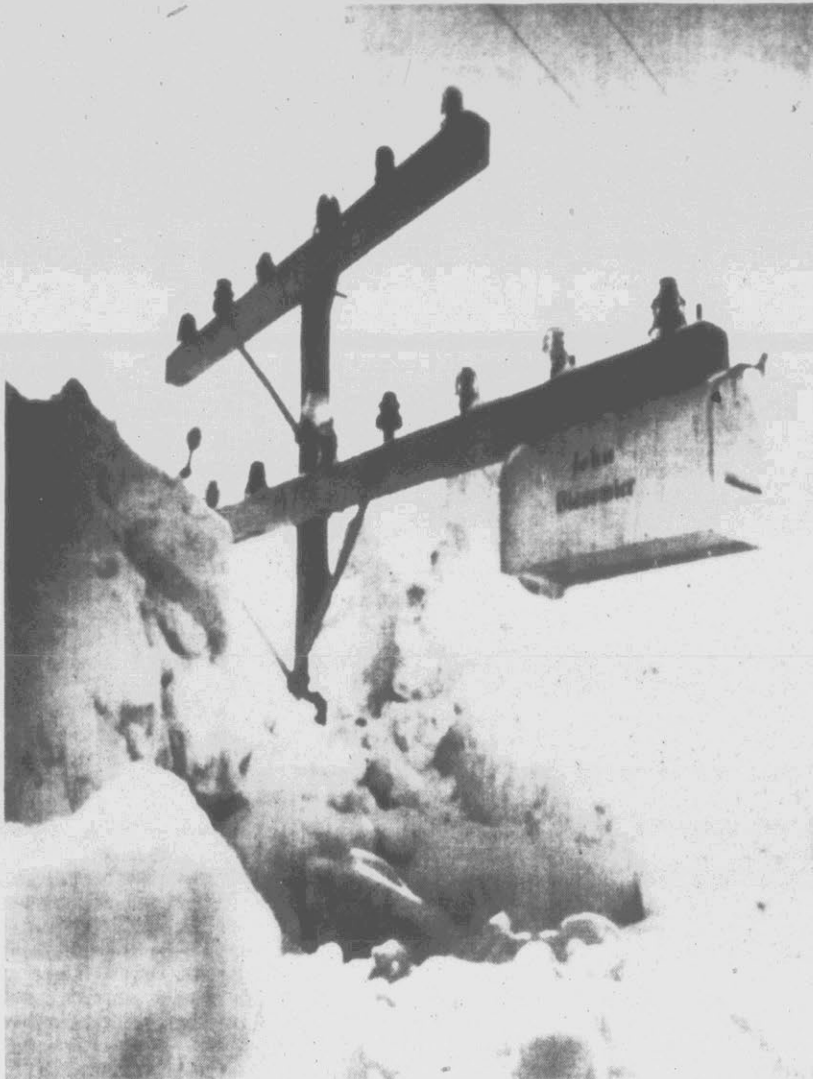

A native of Beaufort County, Bennett received a degree in business administration from East Carolina University and later graduated in the executive program at UNC-Chapel Hill. He joined Wachovia Bank & Trust Co. in Greenville as a trainee in 1962. In 1963 he was transferred to Morehead City as loan manager, and was promoted to office head there in 1965.

Bennett was elected assistant vice president of Wachovia in 1967 and vice president in 1968. In 1979 he was promoted to senior vice president and moved to Greenville. Since 1980, Bennett has been regional vice president and head of the Eastern Region of Wachovia.

He has participated in many community activities, including membership in the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, in Greenville Industries Inc., and the executive committee of East Carolina University Foundation. He is also on the board of trustees of the Taylor Foundation, Norfolk, Va., East Carolina University and a past trustee of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Bennett is married to the former Carolyn Williams of Scottsburg, Ind., and the couple has two children, Tommy and Carol Ann.

Inlet Dredging Could Be Hit In Budget Cut

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Proposed federal budget cuts could scuttle the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' plans to remove hazardous shoals from the Oregon Inlet, a corps spokesman says.

James Boyle, public information officer for the corps' Wilmington district, said President Reagan's fiscal 1983 budget proposals included almost $6 million for maintenance dredging of waterways at Morehead City, Wilmington and Ocracoke Inlet — but none for Oregon Inlet, which has been plagued by severe shoaling this winter. Boyle said a dredge has been working in the area for about nine months to keep the channel open. He said similar maintenance work has been required for the last few years. All such efforts would end if funding is not approved, he said.

The corps received about $1.5 million in the fiscal 1982 budget for maintenance dredging in Oregon Inlet, a major ocean passage through the Outer Banks.

The channel, used heavily by fishing trawlers in northeastern North Carolina, was closed to shipping for several weeks last month because of a buildup of sand.

The channel is supposed to be 14 feet deep and 400 feet wide, but shoaling reduced the depth of about 8½ feet. Recent dredging has increased the channel depth to about 10 feet and additional work is scheduled.

Boyle said shoaling occurs in the coastal inlets when sediment water loaded with inland silt and drops the material when it reaches the ocean.

equipment, totals $2,664,757. The substation is expected to pay for itself through non-payment of Vepco transmission charges. GUC Director Charles Horne told the board.

Horne said Vepco would charge from $50,000 per month to approximately $2 million per year in transmission charges if it maintained ownership of the substation.

The money for the purchase came from a $4.7 million refund from Vepco received late last year following the settlement of a rate case. The remainder of the Vepco refund is being passed on to GUC customers in the form of a credit on their electric bills.

Commissioners also approved the tracking of a natural gas rate increased received from N.C. Natural Gas Co., effective March 1.

The increase amounts to 2.8 cents per 100 cubic feet for firm gas customers or a jump in the present rate of 55.2 cents per 100 cubic feet to 58 cents per 100 cubic feet.

Solar Fraction

Greenville's solar fraction calculated by the department of physics of East Carolina University was 31 Wednesday, which means that a solar water heater could have provided 31 percent of your hot water.

New Deadline For Family Histories

Miss Elizabeth Copeland, coordinator of "The Chronicles of Pitt County" history project, has announced that a new deadline of March 1 has been set for submission of family histories for inclusion in the forthcoming book on Pitt County history.

People with family histories to submit can mail them to: Chronicles of Pitt County, Box 795, Greenville, N.C., 27834, or take them directly to Miss Copeland's office in Room C101, Pitt County Office Building (the old hospital) on Fifth Street Extension. Office hours are 10:30 to 2:30 Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

REQUESTS APPROVED — Police Chief Glenn Cannon announced the approval of two requests for solicitation permits in Greenville.

Cannon said the requests were submitted by: the Pitt County-Shaw University Alumni Association to conduct door-to-door and merchant solicitations Feb. 8-27 to raise funds for Shaw University programs and by the Parents-Teachers Organization of G. R. Whitfield School to conduct merchant and telephone solicitations Feb. 10-25 to solicit door prizes and donations for a covered-dish banquet at the school on Feb. 25.

Only Solution: Bring In Hawks

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The Charlotte Humane Society says bringing in hawks is the only solution left in the city's quest to get rid of a horde of blackbirds in Myers Park.

An extended noise-making campaign, using electronic distress signals and exploding noisemakers, apparently helped reduce the bird population last fall. But the same method produced no results this year. "I don't think it helped one bit," said Assistant County Manager William Bates. An estimated 5,000 birds has invaded the park, causing a health hazard and sparking a dispute between the city and Mecklenburg County over whose responsibility it is to get rid of the birds.

Lowe's Pricing Policy

Many items in this tabloid carry a reference retail price. This reference is intended to provide a guide to the range of retail selling prices in our selling area and may be useful in identifying different units of the same manufacturer. An item's reference price is either the manufacturer's suggested retail price or our determination of its full retail price based on prices at which it or similar merchandise is offered by principal retailers (department stores, specialty shops and other non-discount sellers) in our selling area. While we believe our reference prices do not appreciably exceed the highest retail prices at which sales are made in our selling area we cannot assure you that our reference prices, as described above, represent the prices in every community on any given day. Some items in this advertisement are listed at regular selling price. The merchandise is offered at this price except during a special sale. The purpose of showing a reference price (or a regular price) is to assist you, our customer, in making a knowledgeable and better informed buying decision. We suggest that you also do comparative shopping and compare our prices.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy: If we sell out of an advertised item, we'll issue you a raincheck. When we restock you'll be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price (except for products marked "Limited Quantities"). Our smaller stores may not stock all advertised items. Breeding Andean Condors To Save Their Cousins

CONDOR COMEBACK? — A rare California condor eyes the world from a perch in 1967. A team of scientists are breeding Andean

condors in captivity in an experiment to save California condors from extinction. (AP Laserphoto)

By MARTIN ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer
PIURA, Peru (AP) — team of Peruvian and U.S. scientists are breeding Andean condors in captivity in an experiment designed to save California condors from extinction.

The scientists have placed young Andean condors hatched at the Bronx Zoo in New York and at a Maryland wildlife research center in their natural habitat in the Peruvian wilds.

The researchers say they are developing a practical, efficient way to save the fast-disappearing California species, now believed to number between 20 to 30 birds, from going the way of the Carolina parakeet and the passenger pigeon.

Mike Wallace, 31, a bearded wildlife researcher from Westbrook, Maine, who coordinates the project, said in an interview that because the California condor is so rare, it is necessary to test techniques for the capture, breeding and eventual release into the wild of their more numerous South American cousin.

"Captive breeding is being recommended as one of the fastest ways of rebuilding the population of the California condor," Wallace said. "By removing the eggs from a breeding pair in captivity, it may be possible to obtain six times as many eggs as that produced in nature, much as taking the egg away from a chicken causes it to lay another."

"We've found the technique works with Andean condors," he added. "If our present success continues and the techniques we're developing here are used, it seems very probable that any (California) condors produced in captivity could also be released into the wild and live as if they were born there."

It's not a technique that has won universal approval from environmentalists. One U.S. conservation group, Friends of the Earth, says human meddling will hasten the bird's demise. Other opponents say more emphasis should be placed on habitat protection rather than human contact with the bird.

Wallace said that although the researchers' immediate concern is to save the imperiled California species, the project's long-term effect would be to further the state of the art of preserving endangered species generally. Successful trapping — using rocket-propelled nets — and radio telemetry — fitting the birds with solar-powered radio transmitters — techniques developed during the course of the project are two research spinoffs with possibly wider application, he said.

Wallace, a doctoral student at the University of Wisconsin, directs the effort from a base camp nestled in the foothills of the Illescas mountain range, which juts into the ocean southwest of Piura. The U.S. government-financed project is sponsored jointly by the university, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Peruvian Ministry of Agriculture.

The California condor, like its larger Andean cousin, belongs to the New World vulture family, a group of carrion eaters. The largest North American land bird, the condor has a wing span of 10 feet. They lay eggs only once every other year, and the survival rate for chicks is said to be only 50 percent.

Although fossil evidence suggests the California condor once ranged over an immense area extending as far east as Florida, the current population is confined to a relatively small area north of Los Angeles.

The number of condors has declined markedly in recent years, as civilization encroaches on the bird's last natural outpost, bringing in its wake shrinking food supplies, pesticides and an ever-smaller area to reproduce.

The dire condition in which the species is found has not guaranteed unanimous support for the project, even among environmentalists.

Dr. Stanley Temple, 35, an assistant professor of wildlife ecology at the University of Wisconsin and a noted expert on endangered birds, said: "Everyone seems to be interested in saving the condors, but few seem to agree on how to do it."

Temple, who serves as an adviser to the project, recently visited the research site and said he was pleased with the results so far.

"What we're fighting is a fundamental belief that man should just let nature take its course," he said. "We as human beings can do something other than muck things up in nature, we are capable of restorative arts as well."

Temple said that by developing a workable model of captive breeding and release into the wild, the project scientists are demonstrating that with specific knowledge about a species it may be difficult but not impossible to save it.

"For many Californians, the California condor is a symbol of the California wilderness," Temple said. "And anything you do to a condor — touching it, trapping it, marking it, breeding it in captivity — essentially diminishes the mystique about the animal."

Display Interest In Day Care

BETHEL — Citizens of this Pitt County community feel they need a day-care center, according to results of a survey recently conducted by the Bethel Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Eighty-five of the 125 persons who responded to the survey feel there is a need for a day-care center. Of these, 59 have no children and 26 are families willing to pay for day-care immediately (this figure represents 35 children). Eight families said they would like to have day-care but cannot afford it, and 17 said they saw no need in Bethel for the service. Of the remainder, five were satisfied and 10 had no comment.

Danny Norris, chairman of the community development committee of the Bethel Council, said persons interested in forming a day-care facility should contact him or a member of the board of directors.

WARHEAD TESTED
LONDON (AP) — Britain's $1.86-billion Chevaline nuclear warhead, designed for use on the Royal Navy's Polaris missile, has successfully completed tests and will be put into service later this year, the Defense Ministry says.

Scout Turns In Loaded Wallet

GILBERT, Ariz. (AP) — Nine-year-old Jeff Udall found a wallet with three $100 bills in it and turned it over to Gilbert police.

"I'm a Cub Scout, and I think that was the honest thing to do," he said.

Udall was on his way to school Tuesday with two friends when he found the wallet, looked inside and saw a $100 bill, police said.

Detective Russ Kimball said the wallet, which belonged to David L. Duffy, 26, of Phoenix, actually contained three of the big bills.

"I'm ecstatic," Duffy said. "I just couldn't believe it had been found. I didn't think there were any honest people left in the world."

Duffy, an excavation contractor, said he intends to give Jeff a reward. He said he lost the wallet Monday evening while visiting his girlfriend in Gilbert.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, FEB. 12, 1982

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Your judgment is not good today where expansion or taking chances are concerned. Being alert to what is happening makes it easier for you to go along with surprises.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you try to force your ideas on others today, you are bound to have trouble, so be more diplomatic. Follow your hunches.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Not a good day to handle private affairs. Wait for a better time. Strive for increased harmony with associates. Be happy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy improving business methods so that you can get ahead faster. Concentrate more on the practical aspects.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You can now expect pleasure coming your way, so be on the alert for the enjoyment you have missed in the past.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Going off on a fun spree could be disappointing and expensive, so be more devoted to the tasks at hand for best results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) An associate can give you a fine idea that will open new vistas of advancement for you, so be sure to go along with it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You understand much better now what should be done regarding financial affairs. Try not to argue with an associate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Handle only important affairs early in the day and then be off to recreations that will lighten your spirit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan how to have more abundance in the future and cut down on recreational expenses. Show that you have wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Talking over mutual projects with associates can bring greater success in the future. Engage in favorite hobby with congenials.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Discussing finances with experts helps you to run your own affairs more intelligently. Be careful in travel today.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study a monetary matter carefully before taking any action. Sidestep one who is thinking only of your assets. Be logical.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she must be taught to handle difficult problems intelligently, and then the life becomes a successful one. A fine college education is needed here. Show the importance of religion and ethics early in life.

Opening lead: King of ♣ Theoretically, every finesse has a 50 percent chance of success. In practice, your odds can range anywhere from 0-100 percent.

Because of the vulnerability, South knew that his partner would have a reasonable hand for his overall. So, with a full opening bid of his own and what seemed to be enough hearts to stop the enemy suit, South gambled on game.

West led the king of hearts and East signalled with the seven. A low heart to the ace and a heart back gave the defenders the first four tricks. Since West did not want to give the declarer any help, he exited with his singleton club, and declarer had to make the rest of the tricks.

Once East produced the ace of hearts, declarer knew that West had to have both missing kings for his opening bid. Thus, the spade finesse was destined to succeed, but the diamond finesse would lose. Since the odds of a 3-3 spade break were not good, declarer realized that he might have to work to find a ninth trick.

The Daily Reflector, Greenville, N.C.—Thursday, February 11, 1982—21

Declarer won the king of clubs in dummy, and came to his hand with a club to take a spade finesse. He reentered his hand with a club and then, before repeating the spade finesse, he wisely decided to cash his last club.

West found the pressure intolerable. The first two discards were easy to find — he sluffed two low diamonds.
The third presented a problem. Since he could not afford to part with a spade, he bravely bared his king of diamonds.

Declarer repeated the spade finesse and cashed the ace in case the king would drop. It did not, but declarer was not worried. He knew that West's last two cards were the king of spades and the king of diamonds. So South led a diamond to the ace, felling West's king, and the queen of diamonds became the fulfilling trick.

Three-D Film On TV Created A Monster Demand For 'Glasses'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The nation's first television station to offer a 3-D movie did it by reviving a slimy green monster, and thousands of people immediately ran for those funny-looking cardboard glasses from the 1950s.

"That was the most unbelievable thing I've ever seen," said party store manager Raymond Foss. "We just sold 500 (pairs of glasses) in less than 15 minutes. I don't know why people are going so crazy."

"If you could open up people's minds, you would probably find some pretty strange things."

Foss' was one of 127 New Orleans-area Time-Saver convenience stores that sold a two-pack package of 3-D movie glasses for 99 cents as part of WGNO's promotion for "Revenge of the Creature," a forgettable 1955 horror flick.

By showtime Tuesday night, 340,000 pairs of the glasses had been sold and the chain's marketing director, Frank Artz Jr., said Time-Saver probably could have sold 200,000 to 300,000 more had the manufacturer been able to keep up with his orders.

Artz said 40,000 more glasses were being shipped today and he hoped another 100,000 will be here by Saturday night when the creature gets its revenge again in a repeat performance.

"One man was screaming at me into the phone about how he had spent $20 in gas driving all over town" looking for glasses, said WGNO switchboard operator Damaris Alvarado.

"I've never seen my store so crowded. I got 700 (pair) at 12:30 p.m. (Tuesday) and they were gone before 1 p.m.," said a manager in Metairie.

The distribution of the three-dimension film to TV stations was brought up last year by MCA-TV, the television arm of Universal Studios. It said that for $1,500 plus licensing fees, stations could get "Revenge of the Creature," and it encouraged stations to rouse viewers by creating a lot of hoopla over the selling of the glasses.

WGNO was the first broadcast station to televise a 3-D movie. The same movie had been shown on cable television stations elsewhere.

In order to show 3-D films on television, the original is transferred to masters that resemble videotapes, according to MCA. The glasses, which have one red lens and one blue, deliver the 3-D effect, while viewers who don't wear the glasses just see a fuzzy image.

WGNO officials said they received complaints from viewers using the glasses who got a fuzzy picture, but program manager Paul Krimsier said they apparently did not follow directions to adjust the blue and red tints on their color televisions in order to home in on the monster.

A clear picture was not available on black-and-white sets, with or without the glasses.

One woman called a newspaper to complain "the glasses just aren't working. I've talked to my friends and they all say they're not working either."

Farrah Says Dates Upset Lee

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Farrah Fawcett says her dates with Ryan O'Neal upset her husband, Lee Majors, very much, but Majors wanted to salvage the marriage and proposed a second wedding ceremony on the couple's anniversary.

The actress, who rocketed to fame on ABC's "Charlie's Angels" TV series, balked at some of the questions put to her Wednesday during a property-settlement hearing in her divorce case.

"You are not to argue with the lawyer," Superior Court Judge Harry Shafer told Miss Fawcett as she was being questioned by Majors' lawyer. Real trials, the judge said, are "not like what you've seen on TV."

Miss Fawcett, wearing a bright red sweater and an ankle-length plaid skirt with boots, frequently ran her hands through her tousled blond hair as she testified about her separation from Majors, now starring in the TV series "The Fall Guy," and their failure to reconcile.

O'Neal has been linked romantically with Miss Fawcett since her marriage to Majors hit the rocks in mid-1979.

"In November or December of 1979, when Lee returned from Toronto, he was very upset that you were seeing Ryan O'Neal, is that right?" Majors' lawyer, Harry Fain, asked Miss Fawcett in cross-examination.

"Yes," Miss Fawcett replied.

"At that time, didn't he tell you he hoped you and he would still get back together and redo your marriage vows on July 28, 1980, your anniversary?" asked the lawyer. "Yes," Miss Fawcett said.

The confrontation, the actress said, came several months after the couple decided to announce their separation in July 1979, just before their sixth wedding anniversary.

"I was going on a trip to publicize the film, 'Sunburn,' and I knew the questions would come up: 'How's the marriage, are you going to have a baby?'" she recalled. "I wanted the announcement made so I could say, 'No comment.'"

The property-settlement issue is the final hurdle in the estranged couple's divorce case.

We put our foot down about apartments being within walking distance.

Wedge Arms apartments are within walking distance of three shopping centers, a nursery school, a junior high school, doctors' and dentists' offices and an athletic center.

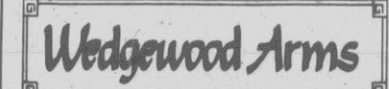

As if that wasn't enough, three major traffic arteries, 264 Bypass, Arlington Blvd., and Charles St. are close enough to be seen and not heard.

Fact is, no apartments in town can legitimately claim to be more convenient to more things than Wedgewood Arms.

And that's not all. Because Wedgewood Arms is not only convenient, it's different in other ways, too.

Take the floorplans: they're different from anything you've ever seen. And when you add in high energy efficiency, tennis courts, swimming pool, and the neighborhood "feeling" that these apartments will give you — well, you'll just have to see for yourself.

Henry Fonda Again In Running For Oscar Award

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A year after he limped to the stage to a thunderous ovation and won an honorary Academy Award for his "enduring accomplishments," Henry Fonda is in the running for an Oscar again — this time in a movie about growing old.

before last year's honorary award, stars in "On Golden Pond," the story of an enduring marriage and a retired professor's anger at his old age.

That film and "Reds," Warren Beatty's epic about socialist journalist John Reed, are considered the top contenders for the 1981 Academy Awards nominations, which were to be announced today. "Ragtime," "Arthur," "Atlantic City," and "Chariots of Fire" were other top prospective nominees.

The nominations for the 54th annual awards by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were scheduled to be announced at its Beverly Hills headquarters by president Fay Kanin and actor Lloyd Bridges. Fonda, who was nominated for an Oscar for the 1940 film "The Grapes of Wrath," is recovering at home from a two-month hospital stay during which doctors examined him and altered his heart medication.

The awards will be presented at the Los Angeles Music Center on March 29 with Johnny Carson as master of ceremonies. The nominations were made by the academy's 3,800 voters, who all vote for best picture. Otherwise, members of each field nominate their own — writers vote for writing achievements, actors for acting, etc.

Four honorary awards were announced Tuesday night by the academy Board of Governors. Actress Barbara Stanwyck, who has never won an Oscar for an individual performance, will receive one for her distinguished career.

Danny Kaye receives the Jean Hersholt humanitarian award, while the Irving Thalberg award for consistent quality of producing goes to Albert R. "Cubby" Broccoli, producer of James Bond films.

The Gordon Sawyer award for technological contributions will be presented for the first time to veteran cinematographer Joseph Walker.

The nomination announcements were on schedule despite a mail foul-up that forced postponement of voting deadlines.

Five days after the accounting firm of Price-Waterhouse mailed the ballots, it discovered that the postal service had lost a bundle. The voting deadline was pushed from Jan. 29 to Feb. 1.

The deadline for writers also was extended — to Feb. 4 — because of a printing error that classified "Wollen" as an original screenplay. It was an adaptation.

LAMOUR, THEN AND NOW — Actress Dorothy Lamour displays Hawaiian lei, left, in the 1940s when, sporting a flower in her hair and clad in a sarong she played the girl in a number of Bob Hope-Bing Crosby "Road To..." films. At right, she Hoboken: Movie-Making City?

By PETER J. SAMPSON
HOBOKEN, N.J. (UPI) — Will Hoboken become as synonymous with movie making as Hollywood?

Maybe. Four years ago, New Jersey set out to woo film making back to the state of its birth — Thomas Edison started the industry with a film studio in West Orange in 1893 and D.W. Griffith later shot his first film in Fort Lee, where silent epics and serials such as "Perils of Pauline" were made.

The state's effort has paid off. The New Jersey Motion Picture and Television Commission spent $900,000 to lure over $30 million in business that its executive director, Joseph Friedman, says is "direct production expenses" for 365 projects filmed in New Jersey.

Last year alone, 135 different projects including motion pictures, television shows, documentaries, industrial films, experimental shorts and commercials accounted for an annual record of $12 million.

This year's filming of "Annie," the movie version of the successful Broadway musical, is "the biggest thing" ever shot in the state, Friedman says, with actor-director Woody Allen back for the "fourth time."

Now even the commission's grandiose plan for a huge "Universal City" for the production of movies seems less farfetched. A more modest $8 million film and video production center is planned.

"You've got to crawl before you can walk," Friedman says.

Efforts to develop a film center proved fruitless until Jerome Kretschmer entered the picture last spring. Construction on Kretschmer's project is scheduled to begin within eight months.

The studios are to be housed in the refurbished Erie Lackawanna Railroad Terminal here. They could open by early 1984.

Kretschmer's production studio, Hoboken Stages, "will bring even more filmmaking here," Friedman says. He says there is a need for both sound studios and post-production houses in the New York Metropolitan area as a result of increased filming in the Northeast and the rapid growth of cable TV.

The plan calls for construction of six sound studios equipped for filmmaking on the second floor of the terminal's old ferry building, and a center for post-production work in an adjacent YMCA building.

"It's a marvelous structure," Kretschmer says of the terminal.

N.C. Choice For Exhibit Design Hit

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's tourism director says he awarded the contract for the state's 1982 World's Fair exhibit to an out-of-state firm because bids he received from in-state designers were too high.

But several design groups were upset by the move and claim state officials didn't try hard enough to find a North Carolina designer for the exhibit, which will be displayed at the fair in Knoxville, Tenn.

Charles Heatherly, director of travel and tourism, said Greyhound Exhibit Group of Atlanta offered the lowest bid — $99,450 — and was awarded the contract. He said that was the only bid the state could afford.

Design Dimensions Inc. of Raleigh had the second lowest bid of $280,000 and a Dallas firm submitted the third lowest bid of $375,000, he said.

Heatherly said the committee has a total budget of $414,000, which must cover $75,000 for fair space, the costs of literature, staff and other operational expenses.

"I would have much preferred to deal with a local firm. It is a North Carolina exhibit, after all," Heatherly said. "And it would have been more convenient than working with an Atlanta firm, but budgetary constraints just wouldn't allow it."

Tourism division officials say the job was advertised in several design publications and major North Carolina newspapers, but at least four in-state firms say they did not receive adequate information about the selection process.

"I think there are state firms that could have handled the job," said Glenn Godfrey of Glenn Godfrey Communications in Raleigh. "I don't think they really checked to see what the capability of individual state firms is. They certainly didn't check into mine."

Three designers said they learned only by accident about design presentations that bidders made in October.

Heatherly said nine firms made presentations then, three of them from North Carolina. But because of complaints that some firms were not informed, Heatherly said the World's Fair Committee scrapped the October presentations and set new dates of Dec. 7 and 8.

"We felt if there was a possibility that someone had inadvertently been omitted before that, for the value of the state, we should be sure we had all the best stuff," he said.

Heatherly said that two of the three North Carolina firms that presented designs in October did not return for the December presentation.

Flack Seen By Shockley

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — "Dysgenics" — the theory that blacks and some other races are not developing as quickly as whites — is sure to become an issue with William Shockley's entry into the Republican primary for the U.S. Senate, the candidate says.

The 72-year-old Shockley, who won the Nobel Prize in physics for his work on transistors, is professor emeritus at Stanford University.

"My participation will contribute, in particular to the enlightenment of the other candidates and of the public on the threat of dysgenics and the degree of suppression of objective inquiry and discussion on this and related matters," he said Tuesday.

Shockley says he is not a racist, but a "raceologist." Among other Republican contenders for the seat being vacated by Sen. S.I. Hayakawa are San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, former Loyola University Law School Dean Ted Bruinsma, state Sen. John Schmitz, Maureen Reagan and Reps. Barry Goldwater Jr., Paul McCloskey and Robert Dorman.

Self-Confessed Killer Leading Lawmen To Bodies

BROOKSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A drifter police say has confessed to murdering 10 or 11 people in five states has led deputies to the bodies of three people authorities say he admits to killing.

On Wednesday, Hernando

County Sheriff Melvin Kelly said Robert Dale Henderson led deputies to the bodies of three persons, at a wooded site 65 miles north of St. Petersburg.

Henderson, 36, a Wyoming prison parolee, was being transferred from Punta Gorda, Fla., to Palatka, Fla., where he has been charged with killing a 79-year-old retired physician from Pittsburgh.

Earlier in the week, Charlotte County Sheriff Glenn Sapp said authorities might need to drive Henderson through areas he had traveled in Florida before he calmly surrendered in Punta Gorda last weekend. Henderson had confessed to killing three hitchhikers, a saleswoman and the retired doctor, but authorities said he was unsure of some of the locations.

Kelly said the three victims, an unidentified female and two males, had been dead about one week. Hernando deputies reported that the bodies had not been buried, but had been placed near one another, Kelly said.

Early today, Assistant State Attorney Jimmy Brown said Henderson was giving authorities a statement concerning the murders.

Henderson was being transported to Palatka for a court appearance in the slaying of Dr. Murray Ferderber. The doctor's wife found him Jan. 25 in their mobile home near Satsuma, Fla. He had been shot in the back of the head.

Ferderber headed the physical medicine department at Presbyterian University Hospital in Pittsburgh for 34 years. He left his mark in Pennsylvania by designing rehabilitative programs at several state hospitals. He and his wife retired to Florida in 1976.

The charge for Ferderber's murder, made during a court appearance in Punta Gorda Wednesday, brought to four the number of homicide charges against Henderson. Capt. Clifford Miller, Putnam County chief of detectives, said Henderson also is wanted for questioning in another Putnam County homicide investigation.

Miller was referring to the death of Dorothy Wilkinson, 50, a Palatka store clerk who was found lying in a pool of blood in the store where she worked. Her body was found the same day Ferderber's body was discovered.

Miller said Henderson told Charlotte County authorities that he "shot the woman either in the side or the head and that he shot the man in the back of the head."

No bullet was ever found in the Wilkinson case, authorities said.

Miller added that police showed Henderson a road map and he "pointed to a road east of the St. Johns River from Palatka."

That area corresponds to where the two bodies were found.

Miller said the police findings in the case will be turned over to the state attorney's office. Henderson already has been charged with the Ohio murders of his wife's parents and her 11-year-old brother. He is fighting extradition.

When Henderson was arrested Saturday, police said, the gun he was carrying was the same .22-caliber pistol stolen from the home of Henderson's in-laws in Cherry Fork, Ohio.

Marie and Ivan Barnett and their 11-year-old son were found shot to death on Jan. 21 in their home. The gun found on Henderson will be tested to see if it matches the bullet used in the Palatka killing, authorities said.

In interviews with police Saturday and Sunday, Henderson described shooting to death his three Ohio in-laws, a woman in South Carolina, a woman in Mississippi, a man in Louisiana, and five people in Florida, including Ferderber and the store clerk, police said.

Despite discovery of the three bodies Wednesday, authorities still have no report of missing persons they say corresponds to the victims. Cincinnati police want to question Henderson in the murder of a woman there, and he may also be questioned about the possible disappearance of a Pensacola man whose clothing and recent Navy discharge papers were found in a truck abandoned by Henderson in DeSoto County. Those two deaths were not among those Henderson told police of before he was advised to stop talking, authorities said.

Await Exercise On Deployment

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Fort Bragg soldiers will journey next month to the Mojave Desert for a Rapid Deployment Force exercise designed to familiarize American fighters with conditions in the Middle East.

About 25,000 Army, Navy, Air Force soldiers and Marines, including a contingent from the 82nd Airborne Division, will take part in the month-long exercise.

The exercise will begin March 15 at Fort Irwin, Calif., and at the Marine Training Center at Twenty-Nine Palms.

Known as Gallant Eagle '82, the $45 million exercise will be in territory which has climate and terrain similar to the oil-rich areas which American leaders have labeled vital to United States interests.

A major event of the exercise will be a mass airborne operation of the 82nd Airborne Division involving an estimated 60 C-141 transport aircraft flying soldiers from Pope Air Force Base in Fayetteville to the exercise area.

"The purpose of the exercise is to provide a simulated combat environment to exercise, train and evaluate the Rapid Deployment Joint Task Force," said Maj. Douglas Kennett, a Defense Department spokesman.

The major objectives are to drill the force in command control and communications, joint suppression of enemy air defenses, electronic warfare deception operations, tactical intelligence collection, tactical deployment of forces to the exercise area and strategic deployment by sea of selected participants, he said.

A Department of the Army spokesman said chemical training and decontamination procedures will be part of the exercise, and there will be live-fire maneuvers.

Fort Bragg officials declined to say how many soldiers from post will take part, but the Army spokesman said the number of transport aircraft to be used indicate a complete brigade of 82nd Airborne troops could be deployed.

PARALYZED AGAIN
LONDON (AP) — Britain's state-run rail network was paralyzed for the 10th time in four weeks today by a one-day strike of 25,000 engineers over a pay and productivity dispute.

Bradshaw In Another Job

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Tom Bradshaw, former secretary of the state Department of Transportation, has taken office as chairman of the Environmental Management Commission.

Gov. Jim Hunt said during a swearing-in ceremony Wednesday that Bradshaw, also a former mayor of Raleigh, was "one of North Carolina's most vigorous and effective leaders. His outstanding accomplishments ... speak for themselves."

Hunt stressed that the "wise management of natural resources does not conflict" with the state's policy of balanced economic growth.

"As we look to the future and visualize continuing economic growth, we can see the possibility of our larger cities facing water shortages because of limited water capacity in river basins. And hazardous wastes pose a threat to our water and air quality."

Terming the task of protecting the state's water and air resources an "awesome responsibility," Hunt said the EMC "must be sensitive to the needs of those affected."

Holding Suspect In Rape Charge

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 22-year-old man has been charged with rape after a 61-year-old Burlington woman told police she had been raped, police said.

Victor S. Jones of Burlington was taken into custody a half-mile from the victim's home.

He was charged with first-degree rape and first-degree burglary. Police said he is unemployed and has been living in abandoned houses.
